INNERMOST CIRCLE OF PRISON INFERNO SEEN BY OSBORNE

New York Reformer, Who Voluntarily Became a Convict, Describes His Week's Experience in Penitentiary.

SYSTEM IS BRANDED CRUEL AND INEFFECTIVE

Convicts Are Deprived of Normal Use of Senses—Some of the Cruelties of the Pen Described by Osborne.

Auburn, N. Y., October 5.—Thomas Watt Osborne, chairman of the New York state commission on prison reform, after spending a week in Auburn prison as an inmate for the purpose of studying the prison system, ended his self-imposed term this afternoon.

Mr. Osborne was pale and tired, and showed the marks of his ordeal, but he was enthusiastic over the success of his experiment, which included a test of every experience possible for an inmate to undergo aside from electrocution. He even committed misdeeds yesterday of sufficient means to cause his incarceration in the "dungeon" cells, and he lay on his bank in the prison jail from 3 o'clock yesterday until 6 o'clock this morning, his ration consisting of three gills of water and three slices of bread. He declared that this part of his experience took him into the "innermost circle of inferno."

He is positive that the fruits of his week's stay in prison will be valuable to the commission.

Unintelligent and Cruel.

"I am more than ever confirmed in my previous opinion," he said, "that the prison system is singularly unintelligent, ineffective and cruel. In many respects the material welfare of the convicts is well looked after.

"While it is not advisable for me to attempt to formulate any detailed criticism of the prison system at this time, because I am tired and bewildered, there are one or two things that it may be well to mention while they are fresh in mind.

"First, the prison system is a form of slavery. The great truths enunciated by Lincoln and others against slavery are equally applicable to prison slavery. It takes from the convict his own initiative and freedom of action, and he becomes an irresponsible automaton unable to guide his own destiny when he returns to the outside world.

Normal Use of Senses Lost.

"As one instance of the unintelligence of the system, there is the attempt to drive prisoners from the normal uses of their senses of sight and speech. After seven days of solitude and incommunicado, I am utterly unable to tell you about the appearance of the men of my company and how to describe the hair cuts of about twenty men who marched and sat in front of me. Whenever my left hand neighbor, a fine-looking, agreeable young fellow, wished to share his portion of sugar for porridge he would simply pass it over to me and utter "sugar" in the softest undertone. To learn to speak without moving the lips and to catch sounds of words so uttered is one of the first things a new convict tries to acquire.

"Another unintelligent aspect is the way the system inevitably tends toward making punishment for small offenses the same as for great offenses. There is no difference between the offense of a man who speaks in the shop and a man who tries to kill his keeper with a crowbar. Both are treated to the dungeon. I obtained from my night in the dungeon cell a glimpse into the lower circles of inferno.

Waste of Human Life.

"There is a frightful waste of human life and ingenuity; there is such awful waste in the utilization of the principle of reformation. Realizing the considerable number of denegates and other undesirable citizens included in the ranks of the prisoners I was amazed at the amount of splendid courage, fine feeling and neighborliness I encountered by the inmates toward each other. What a cruelty it is to forbid a man to write more than one letter in six months. Think of it. He has been, perhaps, carried away from wife and children. His friends are full of sympathy. He is plunged into this strange and lonesome prison world and there is a refinement of cruelty, he is denied the privilege of writing. What is gained by such restrictions?

"I hope to translate these experiences into something of great value to convicts, to myself and to the people of this state."

GERMANS CELEBRATE NAPOLEON'S DOWNFALL

St. Louis, October 5.—Festival services in dozens of German churches throughout the city this afternoon ended the week of celebration of the German day of liberation and of the downfall of Napoleon.

The festivities were incident to the assemblage in St. Louis of thousands of German-Americans from all parts of the country to attend the national convention of the German-American Alliance, which holds its first session tomorrow morning.

Delegates and visitors to the national convention continued to arrive on all trains today and while it was predicted that by the end of the week the number of strangers in the city would approximate 100,000.

The German celebration will give place Tuesday to the annual fall festivities of St. Louis, which will culminate in a parade and ball at night. Wednesday night German-Americans will hold a mass meeting at the coliseum, where tableaux will be presented to celebrate again the victory of the allied European armies over Napoleon at the battle of Leipsic.

A chorus of 1,000 voices will sing. Thursday night 15,000 members of the alliance will march in a torchlight procession and Saturday the festivities will close with the unveiling of a monument to Frederick Ludwig Jahn in Forest Park. The ceremonies in the park will be preceded by a parade of Turner societies.

SPARTA CITIZENS INSIST HENSLEE WAS PREJUDICED

"You Said Frank Was Guilty," They Tell Juror in Letter Sent to Him, and Furnish Copies to the Press.

"WE PRACTICALLY TRIED HIM BEFORE THE TRIAL"

Say They Will Not Allow Henslee to Call Them Liars to Protect Himself From Criticism "He Deserved."

Declaring that they had "practically tried" Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan before the case was called, the three men who made affidavits against A. H. Henslee, a Frank juror, charging him with bias, yesterday mailed a sensational letter to the Atlanta newspapers, presenting their side of the case. The writers of the letter are John M. Holmes, of Holmes & Walker, an insurance and buggy firm, S. M. Johnson, cashier of the concern, and Shi Gray, all of Sparta, Ga., who declares he was in the Holmes & Walker office when Henslee made his alleged statements, say in their communication that they cannot believe that Henslee's reply to their formal affidavits has been correctly quoted.

The writers also say that they believe it impossible that Henslee could have forgotten the discussion of the Frank case in the office of the concern and recalled the "intense feeling manifested" by Henslee against Frank at the time.

The letter then says:

"You must recall in Mr. Holmes' office, on the day stated, and in the presence of the undersigned, we all discussed the Frank case quite critically tried him, as it were, and that, in the discussion, you not only said that Frank was as guilty as — but you had much to say about Frank's being a moral degenerate—your exact language we cannot use—and further stated that you were drawn as a juror. We gave no disposition to injure you or to make public your statement as two of the writers, Gray and Holmes, have known you and your family for many years and we do not know how the attorneys were acquainted with the fact of this conversation but your remark was common talk in the town where there are a number of people who could have given the information to the attorneys.

"We declined to make a voluntary affidavit in the matter and said nothing until forced to by the court, but do assure you that the reluctance to testify in no way changes the fact and you shall not be permitted to make statements in the public press denouncing us as liars in order to protect yourself from the criticism you have justly deserved.

"We await your answer.

(Signed) "J. M. HOLMES.
"S. M. JOHNSON.
"SHI GRAY.

HOW BRITONS REGARD NEW TARIFF MEASURE

London, October 5.—The Daily Mail in an editorial this morning thinks that both the American people who anticipate a reduction in the cost of living from the new tariff act, and British manufacturers who imagine that it will open fresh and profitable markets for their goods, are alike destined to be disappointed because the duties still will be generally high enough to preserve the bulk of the home market to American manufacturers.

"The passage of the bill, however," adds the paper, "has rescued the tariff issue from the grip of party privilege, and proves that at times the people really do rule."

The Unionist morning papers commenting on the signing of the tariff bill are in full agreement with the liberal organs in ascribing the success of the bill's passage to the skill of President Wilson.

The Post expresses apprehension that President Wilson's success may be dangerous for the democratic party, since it may lead him to drive the democratic legislators too hard and provoke a temper that would destroy the good understanding between himself and them.

The Daily Telegraph says: "President Wilson has played a winning game with a force and brilliancy which has and in Presidey Wilson America has produced the most courageous Lincoln as the most constructive statesman in the world today."

Prison Reform Chief Jails Self for Week

Thomas Mott Osborne, chairman of the New York state prison reform commission, had himself regularly committed to the Auburn (N. Y.) state prison in order to learn from actual contact what jail life is like. Leaving his palatial home, Mr. Osborne, who is wealthy, entered into the routine of prison life, sleeping in a cell, working with the other prisoners and obeying the prison rules to the letter. His example may be followed by other prison reformers in other parts of the country. His experiment was watched with keen interest by those connected with prison commissions.

ROTARY CAMPAIGN WILL BEGIN TODAY

Club Members Will Raise $1,200 for the Associated Charities on Monday and Tuesday Canvass.

Bright and early this morning thirty members of the Rotary club will be on the job to get $1,200 for the Associated Charities—and get it quick.

That figure represents the remainder necessary to make the $3,000 which the club pledged itself to raise as an emergency fund to pay the Associated Charities out of debt and place it on a sound financial working basis. The thirty members of the club have volunteered to get this money by soliciting subscriptions, and they have limited the time in which to raise these subscriptions to Monday and Tuesday.

Every one of these thirty men are business men whose various callings require their attention, wherefore it is at a sacrifice that no one can help but admire that they have agreed to use two days of their time and energy to raise the money for this cause.

It became known several weeks ago that the Associated Charities is heavily in debt and that unless relief comes to the extent of $3,000 it will be impossible for this great philanthropic institution to continue its work. The object of the Rotary club's campaign is to raise this $3,000. With the sum already raised by the club, $1,200 more is needed.

If you feel disposed to help a good thing along save these men the time and trouble of calling upon you by telephoning your subscription to Ivan E. Allen, at Ivy 800, or W. R. Seabrook, at Ivy 1136.

MRS. SINCLAIR'S LOVER IN ROLE OF STOWAWAY

Southampton, October 5.—Harry Kemp, an American who writes poetry and who once eloped with the wife of Upton Sinclair, will be arraigned before a magistrate tomorrow morning on the charge of stowing away on the steamship Oceanic. The Oceanic arrived here yesterday and Kemp spent the night in jail.

The post shipped on the Oceanic as a stowaway prior to the steamer's departure for America. He was without money but, as he remarked today, he had an irresistible desire to visit England. He had tried in vain for an opportunity to work his way on a cattle ship and so walked aboard the Oceanic. He sent a note to the captain confessing that he was without funds and was put to work as an assistant steward.

CHAMP CLARK SPEAKS FOR DISARMAMENT

Louisville, Ky., October 5.—Speaker Champ Clark, of the national house of representatives, declared for international disarmament as the surest means of guaranteeing world peace, in an address delivered at the closing exercises here today of the Perry centennial celebration. He praised the valor of American soldiers in the war of 1812, and declared the crowning glory of their heroism was the 100 years of peace which have followed between Great Britain and the United States.

The speaker incidentally referred to the Mexican situation and said that both President Wilson and former President Taft deserved praise for the spirit of forbearance displayed in dealing with the delicate questions presented by the revolutionary troubles of the southern republic.

Tech Beats Citadel And Greenblatt Wins Bride by the Victory

Miss Beulah Hirsch Pays Her Wager on Sunday Afternoon and Happy Couple Go East on Honeymoon.

Winning a bride on a wager is a new way of getting one, but it is a good way, according to M. ("Mike") Greenblatt, who won the hand of Miss Beulah Hirsch as a result of the terrific trouncing administered to the Citadel eleven Saturday afternoon by the Tech huskies.

Miss Hirsch, or rather Mrs. Greenblatt, who is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Hirsch, 228 Capitol avenue, agreed to marry Greenblatt if Tech won Saturday's game. Accordingly when Greenblatt claimed the stakes on Sunday, Miss Hirsch readily assented to an immediate marriage and they repaired to the home of her uncle, Isadore Hirsch, on Gresnerry avenue, where the ceremony was performed by Rabbi Loeb Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

It all came about in the following manner:

The bride of a day has been attending school at the Lucy Cobb institute, in Athens, for the past two years, and is something of a football enthusiast. She came to Atlanta Saturday to attend the game between Citadel and Tech and from her point of view, the chances appeared to favor the Citadel team.

Greenblatt, who, incidentally, is a musician of much local renown, and a familiar figure at all college "hops" and entertainments, also attended the game and gained his trust in the Tech squad. Meeting at the game, the wager was made.

There is no need to print again the story of the struggle. That Tech won by an overwhelming score is a matter of football history. Hence the wedding bells.

Mr. and Mrs. Greenblatt left Sunday at 5 o'clock for an extended honeymoon in the east, following which they will be at home to their many friends in Atlanta.

NEW YORK ASKS DELAY IN HARRY THAW CASE

Concord, N. H., October 5.—The New York state authorities have asked Governor Felker to postpone for a time his decision in the matter of the extradition of Harry K. Thaw from New Hampshire. The governor tonight said he probably would grant the request. He asked that it be submitted in writing.

As the governor understands the situation, this move of the New York authorities is taken in view of the investigation to be made by Attorney General Carmody into the Thaw case.

Governor Felker said he had received from William Travers Jerome a certified copy of the indictment against Thaw by the Dutchess county grand jury and subsequently withdrawn, also an affidavit by District Attorney Congers, Dutchess county, that no indictment against Thaw now exists in that county.

Harry Thaw spent the day quietly at his hotel, where he was visited by his sister, Mrs. Geoffrey G. Whitney. After her departure Thaw issued a statement of 1,000 words, in which he reviewed again rumors as to new legal proceedings in New York.

"As I am sane," said the statement, "is it not a fact that every person concerned in any effort to take me back to Matteawan is guilty of criminal conspiracy, to imprison a sane man in a hospital for the insane?"

The Longworths at Colon.

Colon, October 5.—(Special.)—Congressman Nicholas Longworth and Mrs. Longworth, who was Alice Roosevelt, arrived here this morning on the steamship Carrillo. They will inspect the canal, and will be among the spectators at the blowing up of Gamboa dike. They hope to make the passage of the canal on the first vessel that sails through.

COMPARES POLICE TO WALLS OF CITY

Dr. John E. White Preaches Sermon at Second Baptist Church to Members of Atlanta's "Finest."

"The policeman of today has the same relative value to a city as the walls had in ancient times," said Dr. John E. White last night in his sermon to the members of the Atlanta police force in the Second Baptist church. The address itself was rather a laudation of the police force for its work, rather than a sermon to the members of "Atlanta's Finest."

Dr. White took occasion to denounce in no uncertain terms those who, he said, "would like to see the downfall of politicians, and particularly from a moral standpoint."

"You can always judge a man's citizenship by his attitude toward the police force," said the pastor, "and when I see a man attacking the preservers of law and order and trying to get them into disrepute before the people, I know what sort of a citizen he is."

Why He Preached Sermon.

Dr. White declared that he had been brought to preach a special sermon for policemen for two causes, first, his admiration for the chief, James L. Beavers, and his respect for the individual members he knew. The second reason, he said, was a public one and grew from the duty of a church to uphold law and order and endeavor to aid the preservers of it.

"There were several hundred members of the force present, from officers down to members of the rank and file. Before the sermon had started the crowd was so great that over a hundred chairs had to be brought from the Sunday school room and placed in the aisles.

The text was taken from that part of the thirty-second chapter of Isaiah, beginning, "I have set a watch upon the walls, O Jerusalem, which shall never sleep day nor night."

"The upon tower of ancient days was the one whose walls were broken down," said the pastor in the course of his address. "The 'open town' of today is the one whose policemen are broken down."

He then compared the modern day man who would break down the police force to the one who in ancient times would break down the walls and allow the marauders to enter to devastate the city.

The dignity, devotion, temptations, reward and religion of policemen made the part of the sermon that was addressed directly to his hearers in uniform.

Don't Become Cynical.

Dr. White dwelt on the danger of policemen becoming cynical from having to associate with criminals, to see always the dark side of life and begged that they would always appeal to their better angel to save them from this contamination.

"No one really applies to policemen," he said, "but to others. Newspaper men say the same thing. Newspaper reporters believe all men are liars, at least one told me that the other day."

The closing remarks were references to acts for which the members of Atlanta's force have been recently criticised and only referred once to the closing of the tenderloin district by Chief Beavers. He praised the men on the force for their work and stated that he hoped they would impress their children not to fear the policeman on the corner, but to pray for him.

WOMAN KILLS MOTHER WITH BABE IN ARMS

Lexington, Ky., October 5.—While standing beside her husband with her 7-months-old baby in her arms, Mrs. James Smith, 25, was shot and killed by Mrs. Silas Gibson in a dance hall at High Bridge, near here today. Jealousy is believed to have been the cause of the killing.

ARRESTED FOR 1 MURDER, HENRY SPENCER CONFESSES 14 MURDERS STAIN HANDS

AGED GEORGIAN HANGS HIMSELF IN HOTEL ROOM

Col. James E. Tate, Nephew of Late Gov. Wm. Schley, Was Made Despondent by Financial Reverses.

PARCEL POST INJURED EXPRESS INVESTMENTS

Col. Tate Was a Noted Raconteur and Traveler, and Had Been Entertained by the Nobility of England.

New York, October 5.—(Special.)—An aged man, said to be Colonel James E. Tate, a native of Georgia, was found dead today, hanging in his room in the New Grand hotel. It is said he committed suicide.

Looped about his neck was a thin packing cord, the end of which was tied to a window hook. The feet of the dead man touched the floor, and the body was in a semi-sitting position. An ambulance surgeon said death must have come to the man slowly.

Colonel Tate registered five months ago at the New Grand hotel, Broadway and Thirty-first street.

Max Mack, a chambermaid, opened the door this afternoon with a pass key when she got no response to her knocks. She found the room dark, and turned on the electric lights. Then she ran screaming to Manager Ploger.

How He Hanged Himself.

The manager found that Colonel Tate had made a noose in the twine, fastened it about his neck and to the hook near the top of the sash and hanged himself by simply sagging his knees. If he had straightened up he could have stood on the floor.

Ploger notified Lieutenant Hart, at the West Thirteenth street station, and called Dr. Morgan from the New York hospital, who said Colonel Tate had been dead about 12 hours. Coroner Winterbottom also was notified, according to Ploger.

Colonel Tate, who was about sixty years old, with gray hair and short gray mustache, had registered five months ago from Baltimore. He seemed to have plenty of money and was always cheerful. He was last seen going upstairs about 10 o'clock on Saturday night. Among his effects was found a bank book showing deposits of $7,000 in the Farmers' Loan and Trust company here. He had also transacted business through the banking house of Henry Clews, of New York. A valise, diamond pin and gold watch lay on his dresser.

Colonel Tate a Georgian.

A dispatch from Baltimore tonight said:

"Colonel James E. Tate was a traveller and raconteur and nephew of the late Governor William Schley, of Georgia. The late Admiral Schley was his cousin.

"He made his stake years ago in oil and business, but for many years spent a great deal of his time in travel. When in this country he took an active interest in the stock market, investing a large part of his fortune, probably $200,000, in American Express stock.

"The agitation for a parcels post caused him a great deal of uneasiness and the passage of the law establishing it led to the firm conviction in his mind that his stock had become valueless. He became despondent, and the news of his suicide, though a shock, did not come as a surprise to his friends here.

"Colonel Tate was a descendant of the Baron Tate family of New England, and the Shirley family of Georgia. At the coronation of King George the Colonel was received at court and entertained extensively by the nobility."

FRENCH AVIATOR FAILS TO "LOOP THE LOOP"

Paris, October 5.—The French aviator Pegoud tried today to "loop the loop" in a two-seated aeroplane with a sandbag weighing about 150 pounds to represent a passenger, but failed. He rose about 3,000 feet and dropped lower and then on his previous return to the able flights before he turned over. The spectators became alarmed when they saw the tips of the wings waving like those of a bird after it had been struck but he managed to right the machine and landed safely.

Pegoud in explaining his experience said the machine for the moment was uncontrollable, either owing to the extra weight or because it was badly balanced. He did not know. He declared he would try again tomorrow and find out.

ADOPTED GIRL LOSES ZEIGLER'S MILLIONS

New York, October 5.—A decision in the contest of the will of the late William Zeigler, the baking powder manufacturer who left a fortune of $15,000,000 was made public today by Surrogate Fowler, ruling against the claim of Florence Brandt Zeigler, whose adoption in 1906 as a child of Zeigler was denied by the surrogate's court six years later. Surrogate Fowler today denied the young woman's application to have the abrogation decree set aside.

Zeigler left his fortune to William Zeigler, Jr., brother of the girl who is contesting the will. The two children were adopted. Their father, George Washington Brandt, now of Chicago, later divorced his wife and subsequently the late Mr. Zeigler and his wife relinquished their claim on Florence Brandt Zeigler, who went into the custody of her own father.

His Latest Victim Was Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexroat, the Tango Dancing Teacher of Chicago, Whom He Murdered and Robbed Several Days Ago.

NEARLY ALL THE VICTIMS OF THE MULTI-MURDERER WERE WOMEN AND GIRLS

In Every Case Spencer Says That Robbery Was Motive of the Crime—He Told His Gruesome Story to the Police With Calmness—Spencer's Confession Clears Up Several Murders That Have Puzzled Police — Spencer Seems to Be Normal.

Chicago, October 5.—Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexroat, tango dancing teacher, who was shot to death at Wheaton, Ills., a week ago, was the victim of a modern bluebeard, who according to his own confession, had killed thirteen others in as many years.

Henry Spencer, arrested in a room near the south side levee district, tonight confessed that he not only killed Mrs. Rexroat but that he had slain fourteen persons.

He was positively identified as the mysterious Mr. Spencer with whom Mrs. Rexroat left Chicago on the night Mrs. Rexroat's bloodstained rattan suit case was found in his room, as also was the revolver with which he said he had killed her.

Undoubtedly Wholesale Murderer.

The police, while in doubt as to the full truth of Spencer's story, are confident they have found a wholesale murderer and that he will be proven to have killed at least several of those whose deaths he described in a long confession tonight.

Spencer's confession was so startling that it probably would have received no credence had not the bloody autopsy and the revolver confirmed at least part of his statement.

All his murders except two, he declared, had been for the purpose of robbery. The two policemen, Pennell and Devine, who were shot to death twelve years ago, he said he and a companion killed to escape being arrested.

"I intended to kill Mrs. A. J. Scofield, proprietor of the rooming house where I have been living," he said, "if I hadn't been arrested at just this time, I would have killed her."

Robbery His Motive.

The police explained that Spencer was permitted to tell his story without interruption or suggestions. Spencer admitted that robbery was his only purpose in killing Mrs. Rexroat.

He told the police he had killed fourteen persons in all, ten since his release from the Illinois state penitentiary in September 1912, and four previous to that date. Except in the slaying of policemen Pennell and Devine, who, Spencer said, were shot by himself and a companion named Murphy, in escaping after the burglary, the killings were all for purposes of robbery.

Following is the list of Killings, Spencer related to Chief of Detectives Halpin:

One man and a woman, about 14 years ago.

Policemen Pennell and Devine, 12 years ago.

Robbery His Motive.

First wife, killed near West Point, N. Y.

Two girls at Paw Paw Lake, Michigan, last August.

One girl at Lake Delevan, Wis., last summer.

One woman at Belle Island, Mich., last summer.

One man shot in Chicago this fall.

One old man shot in a Southside flat two months ago.

One woman shot and burned on the Northwest side of Chicago late last summer.

One woman killed near the Cook County hospital a few days ago.

Named Only One Victim.

The police cannot account for all the victims Spencer claims to have slain. The only victim Spencer was able to name was Jeannie Thompson, who probably is the woman he said he killed before he started on his alleged career of murder.

Tuman C. Mann, son of a wealthy family here, and Thompson were tried six years ago for the murder of the Thompson woman and was acquitted after a long and sensational trial. The evidence against young Mann was circumstantial. Spencer gave a clear account of the way he claimed to have tied up the Thompson woman at the time of the killing and his confession conformed to the evidence at Mann's trial.

The police are in doubt as to the possibility of Spencer's confession in connection with any of the other murders he claims to have committed. He said he had nothing to do with the killing while in the home of Mrs. Jimmie Kraft, in a hotel here two years ago.

Spencer told his story very calmly to Captain Halpin and a room full of detectives and newspaper men. He said he never drank or smoked, but that he chewed tobacco and smoked opium. He had not, however, the appearance of a drug victim, having a healthy complexion and clear eyes.

His Gruesome Story.

"I've been a thief all or my life," he declared. "I killed all of those women to get their money. I found it was the easiest way to live. It cost me $400 or $500 a week to enjoy myself the way I wanted to in these cabarets and divekins and the easiest and quickest way to get the money was to get some girl off by herself and kill her.

"Mrs. Rexroat was easy. She thought she was working me the same way she worked the farmer. She thought I was a farmer like her husband and could work me the same way she worked him, so. At first I was going to take her to Michigan and kill her there, but finally I decided it would be more trouble to take her a little way out on the car line and get it over in a harmless-like way. She thought we were going to be married. She came along just as I told her.

"When we got out at the station it was nearly 9 o'clock. We turned around and walked down the track until we got where it was dark. I took her by the right arm, pulled out my gun and shot her through the head. Then I laid her on the railroad track so she would be 'tore up.' I took what few dollars she had and her diamond ring. I opened her trunk and pilfered her stuff out of it and brought it back to Chicago with me. I took the next train back about ten minutes after I shot her.

Gave Ring to Common Girl.

"I didn't want the ring. I never go to pawnshops, that's the way people get caught. I gave the ring to a girl, just a common girl, I met on the street. She went to New York Tuesday or Wednesday."

Spencer said he had married four women, killing the first one near West Point, N. Y. He didn't know actually how many years ago. One wife is living in Detroit, he said, and another in Chicago.

Spencer gave details of his alleged murders at the Wisconsin and Michigan resorts, where he said he had spent most of the summer as a hotel thief, committing an occasional murder.

"I killed the two girls at Paw Paw Lake for their money and wages," he said. "One of them one time let me see that she had some money with her and so I shot her on the bank her body in the lake. The other girl I killed the same way, but she didn't have much money. The girl at Delavan Lake, I shot with the same gun as the third which I killed Mrs. Rexroat.

"When I got back to Chicago I met a man one night who looked as if he had money. I shot him in an alley on the south side levee. He didn't have much money, but enough for me to go to a hotel for a few days and there I met another man, an old fellow, who said he was a broker. We got friendly and he let on to have a fine business and a lot of money. He looked like money. I was disappointed in that fellow.

Rolled Body Into Swamp Place.

"I got him to take a walk with me late one afternoon in Jackson Park and I shot him there and went through him. He told me he had a lot more than I found. I rolled him into a swampy place where they were dumping the paper had a lot of stuff that called it a case of suicide."

Another case the police called the suicide was that of a woman I killed on the northwest side. I killed her with a hammer, tore up her clothes and set fire to them. The last woman I killed was a few days ago, two blocks west of the country hospital. I put her to death with a hammer. She had two rings and $200. This murder was done with the hammer the police found wrapped in a towel by the railroad tracks. They thought the hammer had something to do with Mrs. Rexroat murder."

Spencer said he killed three women, including Mrs. Rexroat, with the revolver the police found in his hiding place. He said he bought it a month ago, after his other weapon failed to work. He claimed he also held up many of the restaurants which recently have been robbed by highway men.

Spent $700 in Two Nights.

"Why, I spent $700 in two nights in 'Charley West's' last week," he said. "It costs a lot of money to hold up your end in these cabarets. I average two jobs a week all the time I'm out of jail."

Spencer said none of the jewelry he had taken from his victims ever would be recovered. "I sold it to a 'fence' or 'stoolpigeon' shop," he said. "When I sell any of it to some private person, maybe on the street, I use fictitious names. A lot of it I gave to girls."

The police doubt that Spencer committed the large number of murders and hold-ups to which he has confessed, but are convinced he is guilty of many of them, and probably the most dangerous homicidal maniac ever captured here. The man's jail record extends from his boyhood. He accounted for his immunity from trial for murder by saying that he would get somebody else to do some minor crime and then confess to a short sentence, and while he was in jail the murder mystery would be shelved and forgotten.

The police tonight believed several murders he declared he had committed probably were committed by Spencer as he admitted in his confession. Fearing Spencer's boasts, the murder of the two policemen, the murder of an old man in Jackson Park, the killing of a woman near the county hospital and the attempted killing of a family of four on the west side, all had been catalogued as mysteries.

One of His Failures.

The attempt to kill the family Spencer characterizes as one of his failures. An old man and his wife were found by firemen tied in their home in their apartment four months ago while two children were stunned and injured in an adjoining room. The flat was on fire, and the occupants were taken out with difficulty. The man, 65 years old, had been shot twice. All recovered.

Spencer said he shot the old man when he was carrying robbing the place and had set fire to the place to cover his crime. The police had the former up the crime. The police had the former on their list of unexplained crimes. Spencer's account explained crimes. Spencer's account explained them. Captain Halpin said he was the man who did the shooting.

The entire list of crimes confessed by Spencer will be investigated by the police, Captain Halpin said tonight. He is the man's account is correct.

His confession to murder of Mrs. Rexroat and nine other crimes, which he boasts were committed while he was on parole from the state penitentiary for highway robbery, he was paroled to Major M. A. Measlein, of the Volunteers of America, and a month after he was set at liberty he visited Captain Halpin and asked for a job. Captain Halpin obtained employment for Spencer two weeks. As soon as Captain Halpin obtained employment for him he left Chicago and disappeared. Tonight Captain Halpin said he was practically certain for whom he worked.

Doesn't Know Own Name.

The police say that even if it is ever learned—for he says he doesn't know it himself—asked by police with [illegible] of W. H. Holmes, of "Holmes Castle" notoriety, who confessed to twelve murders and was suspected of a total of scores and scores, Spencer replied: "Search me, sir. I've been known by so many names and generally was considered guilty of so many murders were committed in the "castle" in Chicago I committed in the "castle" in Chicago I was a pretty clever forger, incendiary and swindler. Hoch married women and killed them for the insurance, but Spencer murder was the common place accompaniment of robbery.

"Is your name really Spencer?" a reporter asked.

"Oh, no, not any more than any other name. Nobody knew my correct name, except Harry, and he's dead now. That's all I remember," was he replied. "The first I remember was being with a carnival company at Feehanville," he went on. "That is my first recollection. They may have a record of my real name. I ran away from the show. I said that never found me. I think that time on I lived with thieves and bad women. I never knew a girl that was a good woman in my life.

"I only got my first prison term shortly after running away from school. A man sold me a suit of clothes for a nickel—that's how it started. I knew the suit had been stolen, but it didn't impress me as anything serious. The very next day I walked right into the shop from which it had been stolen and I was surprised when they arrested me. I was sentenced for four years and wanted me to plead guilty and take a sentence of thirty days, but my lawyer said no. He said fight it out, and so, I pleaded not guilty.

Killed the Good in Him.

"What you suppose I got. I got ten years and if there ever was any good in me that killed it. Ten years for a suit of clothes!

"I served the full term. I had about two years' good time coming to me, but I attacked a guard and beat him. They starved me; they put me in solitary confinement, too.

"I think it was the solitary that really drove me. When I got out I wanted blood; anybody's blood. I wanted to kill people and see it run. I got about me $10 when they turned me loose, and right off that I started in to kill. Since I have been killing people more or less ever since. I used to like it, but now I robbed anybody it was a sort of necessity. I'd clench them by the throat, shutting up the victim's mouth forever."

At Joliet the murderer was known as Snyder, as Burke and by another name, he said. "I took the name Spencer when I got out last time—not another ten years' sentence, but I got convicted for grand larceny," explained the prisoner.

Spencer furnished the police description in details, but in general appearance he looked much like the composite sketch pictures given out to assist in trailing him. He is not burly, like the usual weatherbeaten type, for his is back short or thick. He wore a plain business suit of dark cloth.

"If I had seen him behind a cashier's cage in a bank, or selling silk over a counter, I wouldn't have thought him unfitted for the part," said a detective tonight, "that's where you would expect to see a man of his appearance. He doesn't look like a brute."

His Dress Alone Abnormal.

The abnormality of the prisoner was apparent in only one detail, if at all. That was in his dress. It was the showy speech of one whose mental processes are not definite. His memory seemed nebulous, not only as evidenced by his failure, but by his inability to collect details of his crimes. His whole manner of telling his story with its vagueness of details indicated, as he admitted, that he was addicted to opium.

Story of the Rexroat Murder.

Mrs. Rexroat was murdered on the night of September 3, being struck and shot. Her body was then placed on the tracks of the Chicago & North Eastern railroad. She was lured to the lonely spot in Dupage county, Illinois, ing that she would meet a class of would teach the tango. The crime was discovered by Robert Bennett, a lineman, whose train ran over the body.

The police began a searching quiz in numerous arrests, but apparently left the person responsible for the crime at large. Spencer was arrested tonight.

Everett Rexroat, son of a wealthy Macomb, Ill., farmer, and husband of the murdered woman, was placed under surveillance by the police almost the first day of the inquest when he established an alibi. The search then centered on a mysterious Mr. Spencer with whom Mrs. Rexroat was said to have left the city and who was thought to have been infatuated with her. Numerous Spencers were all released, the latest being Edward Spencer, who had been held as a suspect until tonight, when he was allowed to go, after confronting the confessed murderer.

It was only four days ago that the local detective bureau became active in the case, Captain Halpin being especially eager to work on the mystery, but reports of the murders and generally was considered guilty of many more. Spencer said the murders were committed in the "castle" in Chicago [illegible] a job with Captain Halpin's department for Spencer only weeks. As soon as Halpin knew that a man named Spencer was being held for the Rexroat murder he was practically certain for whom he worked.

DEATH BLOW GIVEN MEXIC REBELLION

That Is Boast Made by Huerta Government — Sweeping Federal Successes Reported in Northern Mexico.

Mexico City, October 5.—Government officials regard the federal successes during the past week as the death blow to the organized revolution in the north. The defeat of the rebels at Santa Rosalia is reported to be confirmed.

Advices from General Samuel E. Mercado, military governor of the state of Chihuahua, to the department of interior, describes the result as a rout of the rebels. The town were captured, according to the governor, who added, "the victory is of great importance because the trains by which the enemy expected to retreat to the south have been captured as well as large quantities of war material."

Several thousand men were said to be engaged at Santa Rosalia and fighting had been in progress since Thursday.

This victory, together with the occupation by General Maas of Cabinas, on the march to Piedras Negras, has greatly encouraged war department officials.

To Relieve Torreon.

General Trucy Aubert, with 1,000 men, marching to the relief of Torreon, has reached Bermejillo, about 100 miles south of Torreon, but is making slow headway owing to the necessity of repairing the railroad.

Conditions at Torreon have greatly improved and it is reported the rebels virtually have abandoned that district.

General Felipe Alvarez is said to be preparing an expedition to march on Durango, which for months, has been in the undisputed possession of the rebels.

Tristian, in the state of Puebla, still is besieged by Indians but foreigners and non-combatants have made their way to leave the town, reaching Puebla City safely under federal escort.

Raiding, Pillaging, Burning.

Raiding, pillaging and burning of ranch houses continue in various parts of Puebla and Morelos. The efforts of the federal troops to suppress the outlaws are pushing the work of organization for the elections on October 26. The bill for the postponement of the elections, however, is due to come before the chamber of deputies this week.

The constitutionality of the unconstitutionality of the measure is said to have created a division of the committee to which it was referred recently upon its introduction in the chamber, political circles the defeat of the measure is regarded as likely.

REBELS ARE HURRYING TO ATTACK FEDERALS

Eagle Pass, Texas, October 5.—Both Monclova and Cuatro Cienegas, captured by the federal army under General Maas on his northward march, have been re-taken by the constitutionalists, according to rebel reports which reached the headquarters of the constitutionalists at Piedras Negras, Mexico, today. All available troops are being hurried to the north, according to the courier, to attack the main federal force, now at Peyotes, from the rear, while those concentrated about Monclova engage attempt to turn the government troops back from the front. It is generally understood that the federals will not open hostilities at Monclova pending the arrival of artillery which, because of the destruction of the railroad, it is necessary to haul overland from the south.

Reports of the refugees who crossed into Eagle Pass with the northward advance of the federals, returned to Mexico today when it was learned that the attack on Monclova had been delayed. Others have been sent into the Texas citizen fields.

Determined measures by the sanitary authorities to prevent the threatened dangerous spread of smallpox among the Rebel Mexicans, many of whom had contracted the disease before crossing the border, are said to have been sent back to Piedras Negras yesterday.

GEN. PORFIRIO DIAZ MAY RETURN HOME

Biarritz, October 5.—General Porfirio Diaz, ex-President of Mexico, is still at Biarritz. It is said he will probably return to Mexico towards the end of the month. Recently he was summoned by the Mexican war department for services in the army.

Concerning Friedmann Vaccine.

At the recent meeting of the Rhode Island Medical Society, Dr. Barker, of the Rhode Island State Sanatorium for Tuberculosis, presented a report on his results with the Friedmann vaccine. It merely adds to the mass of information that goes to make up the literature concerning Friedmann's attempt at experimenting the consumptive, all of which shows the Friedmann treatment of tuberculosis to be a failure. Nevertheless,

SUNDAY SCHOOLS HOLD "RALLY DAY"

Over Ten Thousand People Gather in Twenty Atlanta Churches to Celebrate the Occasion.

Ten thousand and thirty-two people gathered in 20 of Atlanta's Sunday schools yesterday for the "Rally Day" services in various parts of the city, making one of the biggest days in attendance that has been experienced in many months. If the total roll were called of all the Sunday schools, it is estimated that the attendance for the day would run as high as 25,000 or 26,000.

The twenty schools included in the weekly report showed an enormous gain over last year, the 10,032 total attendance being an average of 501 per school, as opposed to a total of 7,117 in the same schools last year, which was an average of only 355. The average gain per school, therefore, was 146 scholars. Considering the fact that many schools usually fall off on the first Sunday last year, this is taken as a splendid gain.

Central Presbyterian Leads.

The Central Presbyterian led in the day's attendance, having 1,182 present. Last year, when "Rally Day" was also held the first Sunday in October, they had 1,110 present. The Park Street Methodist came second, the North Avenue Presbyterian, third, and the Grace Methodist, fourth. The First Baptist, which postponed its "Rally Day" until next Sunday, on account of Dr. Brickell's absence from the city, lost the lead which this school has held so consistently for several months, being relegated to fifth place. It's boosters declare, however, that they'll "come back next Sunday with a surprise."

Special programs were held in many of the Sunday schools. A number of speeches on "Christ in the Sunday School Work" were made in the Central Presbyterian. Governor John M. Slaton spoke at the Second Baptist, his address being reported elsewhere. Special programs also drew big crowds to the Park Street Methodist, the North Avenue Presbyterian and several others.

A feature of the day was the teachers' mass meeting held in the First Baptist church in the afternoon, at which plans were made for "Election Day," which will be held in the Sunday schools the first Sunday in November.

A striking feature of the day's report is the fact that three of the schools more than doubled their last year's figures—the First Methodist, the Grant Park Baptist, and the Universalist.

STORM IN SOUTHWEST MOVING TO THE EAST

Washington, October 5.—A storm now covering the southwest will move northeastward, causing inclement weather in the great central valleys Monday and Tuesday and in the eastern states by Wednesday, the weather bureau's weekly forecast announced today. Warm of the Rocky mountains generally fair weather will prevail until the latter part of the week, when there will be rains in the north Pacific states.

Temperatures below the seasonal average during the week over the Mississippi valley and districts west thereof are indicated, with frosts over the plateau and Rocky Mountain regions, the middle and northern plains states and the upper Mississippi valley during the first half of the week.

East of the Mississippi valley temperatures will be near normal during the first half of the week and below during the second half, with frosts in the region of the great lakes, the Ohio valley and the north Atlantic states.

The disturbance in the west will be preceded and attended by well-distributed precipitation east of the Rocky mountains.

There are no indications at this time of a disturbance in the West Indies.

CHARGED AS SWINDLER BY MOTHER OF BRIDE

Brunswick, Ga., October 5.—(Special.) Allen McIntyre, a young white man arrested two weeks ago on a charge of kidnaping on a warrant sworn out by J. L. Hill, father of 15-year-old Mary Hill, with whom McIntyre eloped, is again confronting a charge in the Glynn county jail, this time on a charge of cheating and swindling. An hour after McIntyre eloped with his young bride he was arrested and released on bail. Later, however, the father of the bride withdrew the warrant, preferring to deal with kidnapping and he was released.

McIntyre was boarding at the Hill home before the wedding. It now seems that he never settled up for his back board. Thursday he left the city, but another warrant was sworn out against him, this time by the mother of the bride. He was arrested in Jesup yesterday and brought to the city and failing to furnish the necessary bond, was lodged in jail.

NO TRACE YET FOUND OF W. H. ALEXANDER

The squads of railroad and headquarters detectives who have been searching for W. H. Alexander, the chief clerk of the Atlanta Southern railway offices, who mysteriously disappeared last Thursday night, have so far been unable to find any trace of him.

Foul play is the theory. His movements cannot be traced any further than Edgewood avenue and Moore street, where he was seen at midnight Thursday to jump from an inman park car and make his way toward home on Moore street. He had about $200 with him at the time.

City Planning Exhibition.

New York, October 5.—Mayors, city governments and commercial organizations all over the country have been invited to send plans and drawings to a city planning exhibition to be held next the last week of November and the first week of December, it was announced today on behalf of the city's board of estimate.

Unique Christian Convention To Bring Dollars to Atlanta; No Free Entertainment Asked

By J. Walter LeCraw.

"Hurrah for Atlanta.—were the shouts heard on all sides in the body in the whole convention seemed delighted at the prospects of coming to Georgia in 1914," said H. M. Patterson yesterday upon his return from the Christian convention at Toronto, Canada, where he and others went to work in Atlanta were chosen for the next meeting place.

Mr. Patterson, together with Dr. L. O. Bricker, pastor of the First Christian church of this city, went to the convention with the avowed determination of bringing the next gathering to Atlanta, the boom for the "Gate City of the South," having been started two years ago at the convention in Pittsburg. The news of their success was flashed to Atlanta last Saturday, and caused wide comment and no small degree of anticipation, not only on the part of the Christians of this section, but on the part of hundreds of merchants, hotel owners and the many other business organizations which will reap a golden profit from the enormous gathering.

Contrary to an impression which has gone out, the people of Atlanta will not be asked to open their homes or their entertainment, nor to give one cent for the board and lodging of delegates.

Every Delegate Pays His Way.

It is a time-honored custom with this religious body not to ask a city to provide free entertainment—every man or woman, layman or minister, will pay his own way, or have it paid by the people back home.

With 10,000 people assembled at the convention, more than 5,000 will be in very minimum expected, the resources of Atlanta will be severely taxed to utmost to accommodate the enormous gathering. The presbyterian assemblies of last May—which probably formed the largest religious gathering in the history of Atlanta—only brought about 5,000 visitors to the city, and in the five years has the Christian convention fallen below 10,000 in attendance, and at Pittsburg, in 1911, which was the centennial convention, the attendance soared to 20,000.

For the accommodation of the 10,000 or more visitors who will come to Atlanta in October, 1914, plans will therefore be laid at once, and months of preparation will be necessary for the event. It will be accomplished in the unique way of making a direct invitation to the delegates to open their homes for the entertainment of the visitors—not on the gratis plan, but —with an actual lodging price set for every delegate thus "taken in."

Asking to Name Price.

Letters will be sent out to practically everybody in Atlanta, asking them to notify the central headquarters how many visitors they can take, and asking them to name a price for entertaining them during the ten days that the convention will last. Thus will a stream of dollars be brought into Atlanta, benefitting the whole city and stimulating trade to a great extent.

In a second way will Atlanta be benefitted, by drawing the eye of every section of the United States during the month of the convention, for there are a million and a half members of the religious body in this country called the "Disciples of Christ."

The third direct benefit to the city and state—and this, to the minds of many will be the greatest benefit of all —will be the stimulation of the cause of Christian unity that will naturally follows in every section in which this convention is held. The fundamental task which the "Disciples of Christ" have set for themselves, is Christian unity." This is the main plea which they make in all lands, and the conditions of the mission field. The only requirement they make of a convert is that he shall answer "Yes," to the question, "Do you believe with all your heart that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God, and are you willing to accept Him?" All creeds and other details of his creed are left to his own choice."

Toronto Stirred by Plea.

This is the plea that has stirred Toronto within the past week, and the following, taken from the Toronto Mail and Empire, under the heading, "UNITY IS THE GOAL OF THE DISCIPLES," shows the tremendous effect that the convention has had upon the Canadian metropolis:

"The real truth of Christian unity—the task which the Disciples of Christ have set before themselves as that of their especial mission—was the subject that occupied the convention at the evening meeting in Massey hall yesterday, and the plea which was heard by the large audience which overflowed the great hall.

"What is to bear the reverberation of this same plea when the members of the Christian churches gather in their strong next fall, and it is confidently predicted that it will be an epoch-making event in the religious history of Georgia and the south.

Larger Faith Is Stirring Hearts of Men Says Line

Addressing his congregation yesterday, Rev. Fred A. Line, of the Inman Park church, delivered a stirring message on "The Larger Faith," taking his text from the second chapter of Genesis, verse seven, "Man became a living soul."

In part Dr. Line said:

"A larger and better faith is stirring the hearts of men. The power of this faith is manifest in the world's growing life. We perhaps have noted the transition in thought from a study of doctrine to the age of practical application. The question asked today is not 'What does he believe?' but 'How does his faith express itself?' We undoubtedly remember when the child was compelled to learn the catechism, the satisfying of this requirement being of supreme importance. Today parents are more anxious by far that their children shall learn to be truthful and honest and pure and generous and Christ-like in life.

"There is a great underlying purpose in life. The power revealing itself in the singing of the bird, in the search for the saint, and in the plight of the sinner, is the great forward movements of the race. It looks to the infinite fulfillments of love, the perfection of life universally experienced. The attendance sooner or later God knows no favorites. It recognizes every soul as of equal worth and makes use of every life. In the singing bird, the blossoming flower, the laughing child, we hear the whisperings of divine love, and the voice of the spirit. This purpose of God involves climbing. Progress is its sign of approval.

"The soul is eternal. Its influence is paramount. The most wayward wretch has a place to fill in life. The lights of love burn, however dimly, in his soul. We are told that in a Maine prison there was incarcerated a hardened criminal who resisted all kindly ministrations and created continual discord. One day a little girl came into the prison and seeing this criminal, yielded to the impulse of innocency and placing her hand upon his arm uttered words which God Almighty cannot improve, 'I love you.' The window of the convict's soul was opened and Frances Willard became a leader and a saviour of his fellows. The larger faith has the power to touch and awaken every soul, and the supreme significance of every life to the final consummation of God's great plan.

"Realization comes through service. Sometimes we set the clergy apart in a class by themselves as ministers of God, forgetting that every man is a minister of God, that all service is sacred. In the language of another, every man who goes forth to work is consecrated. The man who sows and reaps the wheat is ministering to the needs of mankind. The man who shears the sheep; the man who twists the yarn into cloth; the man who weaves that yarn into cloth; the man who sits cross-legged all day long and stitches that cloth into clothes—all are ministers of God to men. The law of faith involves labor or love.

"Religion is life, and whoever is serving is following the Master in the living of the beautiful life in a higher plan, whatever label he may wear, under whatever name he may be known. We would express the hope expressed by Whittier, that the time may soon come when, with all our varied creeds and denominational rituals, we may subscribe to Abou Ben Adhem's dedication, 'May mine own be one who loves his fellowmen.'"

BAD FIRE AT FORSYTH.

Several Hundred Bales of Cotton Are Destroyed.

Forsyth, Ga., October 5.—(Special.) Fire which originated in the warehouse of Alexander & Hanks on the main city square this morning at an early hour threatened for a considerable time to spread into one of the worst conflagrations in the history of Forsyth. The alarm was given at about 3 o'clock. The fire had been burning at that time in the warehouse for some time, and shortly after the alarm was given the roof of the building fell in. The local fire company did admirable work, and succeeded in keeping the flames in check, though at one time it was feared that the entire south side of the square would go. The warehouse and the adjoining storehouse of A. M. Cox were completely destroyed by the fire.

Several hundred bales of cotton were either totally or partially burned, though it seems this morning that the damage to the cotton will not be great as anticipated. All day a force has been at work hauling out the cotton and extinguishing the fire which is still smouldering in the bales, and it is freely estimated that between fifty and seventy-five per cent of the cotton can be rejuvinated and put on the market. The stock of A. M. Cox was completely destroyed.

The loss will run well into the thousands. Both building destroyed were of brick construction with metal roofs. The buildings are a mass of ruins. The loss to the property owner is partially covered by insurance, and it is stated on the streets that most of the cotton was covered by insurance. The buildings were owned by Hon. George W. Newton, the ordinary of Monroe county.

INJURED BY ENGINE, HAS FOOT AMPUTATED

Brunswick, Ga., October 5.—(Special.) Freddie Boynton, a young man employed by the A. B. & A. railroad as switchman, had his right foot amputated at the city hospital yesterday, as the result of an accident Friday, when he was run over and badly crushed by a shifting engine on the road. Boynton was running ahead of the engine when he slipped and fell on the track, the engine passing over his leg before the brakes could be applied.

WOMAN'S PLACE IN HOME SAYS REV. L. B. BRIDGES

Greatest Strength in Motherhood Bond, Not in Walking Street in Men's Clothes.

In a ringing message to a congregation that taxed the seating capacity of the big church, Rev. L. B. Bridges, the noted evangelist who is conducting revival services at the St. Paul Methodist church, declared yesterday morning that woman's place is, above all things, in the home.

"Woman's greatest strength," he declared, "is not in dressing up in men's clothes and walking the streets, but in the home," he declared.

"I'd rather remember my mother," he went on, "as my mother and not as the agitator of the age."

Touching on the sacredness of home life, Rev. Mr. Bridges declared that it should be preserved above all things. Many children are being reared to lives of sin, he declared, because they live in "hotels and boarding houses where there's no blessing at the table."

Rev. Mr. Bridges' sermon made a profound impression on his congregation. He delivered a new sermon during the afternoon to an enormous throng, and at the night service his sermon of the day was delivered last night.

The revival at the St. Paul church is increasing in interest each day. Throughout the week there will be services daily at 11 a. m. and at 7:30 p. m. Announcement will be made later of a number of special services that are certain to prove of great interest.

Rev. Mr. Bridges has gained the reputation of being one of the most eloquent and convincing evangelists that has ever preached in Atlanta. Although not yet thirty years old, he is known as one of the south's leading ministers. The public generally is invited to hear him at the corner of Grant and Sydney streets.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS OVERFLOWS INTO STREET

Sunday was a great day at Central Baptist church. At the 10 o'clock hour the Sunday school packed its quarters and ran over into the street, being the largest in several months. In fact, it was the largest school with one single exception ever in the history of the church. There were over five hundred present, and 473 reported at class.

At the 11 o'clock hour Dr. Ridley spoke on "How God Can Pardon a Sinner," and more than twenty made public profession of faith in Christ. Dr. Ridley spoke at the opening of the Railroad Y. M. C. A. at 3:30 and several men made professions.

"The Friends and Enemies of the Christian Home" was the subject for the evening hour, being second in a series of popular sermon-lectures the pastor is giving to his congregation on Sunday evenings. So far the capacity of his auditorium has been taxed, and many have made professions.

OPPOSES GAMBLING IN COTTON FUTURES

Roscoe Luke Announces Platform on Which He Will Run for Congress.

Thomasville, Ga., October 5.—(Special.)—Hon. Roscoe Luke, who has just resigned as mayor and solicitor of the city court of Thomasville for the purpose of making the race for congress, has gone actively to work. He has opened headquarters here and proposes to cover the entire district not only in brief, but in energetic order.

In announcing his platform which he has made public, Mr. Luke puts right at the forefront of it, his opposition to gambling in cotton futures. The following announcement of his belief in the extension of markets for cotton and its by-products with the statement that under no circumstances should the prices of crops be controlled by the gambler who never saw a cotton field.

Mr. Luke says he favors "liberal (but sensible) appropriations" for rivers and harbors and for the extension of the navy. He is emphatically opposed to any increase in the federal pension rolls and says he will fight the pension "graft" to the last ditch.

"Another thing which Mr. Luke states he is going to do if he has the opportunity, and that is to get increased salaries for the rural free delivery carriers.

Currency legislation that will benefit the small towns, is another slogan, and he claims he made no claims on stirred they can be made, no claims on the necessaries of life, the return of the necessaries of life, the return of the war tax on cotton, restricted immigration, increased powers for the interstate commerce commission, curbing of criminal trusts, the repeal of the law for removing cases from state to United States courts, prohibition of intermarriage of the races, and concludes by stating that he is opposed to the use of money to control influence and that ring politics is no part of his creed.

Comet Being Watched.

Geneva, N. Y., October 5.—The Westphal's Bernice comet is now under observation by Dr. William R. Brooks, professor of astronomy of Hobart college, with the large telescope at Smith observatory. Tonight the comet was in the upper part of the head of Aquarius and moving slowly northwest. It is a round telescopic object visible in small instruments and is growing brighter, according to Dr. Brooks. The comet was last seen in 1852, giving it a period of revolution around the sun of 61 years.

Sheldon and Drukenmiller Concert Is Greatly Enjoyed

Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., organist, and Solon Drukenmiller, tenor soloist, gave a most enjoyable free concert at the auditorium Sunday afternoon under the auspices of the Atlanta Musical Festival association.

The organ program was unusual by reason of the large number of popular classics which it contained. Among these were "The Bridal Chorus," from Lohengrin; "Barcarolle," from Tales of Hoffman; Chopin's "Funeral March" and Dvorak's "Humoresque." The rendition of these selections by Mr. Sheldon was greatly enjoyed. It was, however, his improvisation which formed the fourth number on the program that won him the greatest applause. The Sunday afternoon organ recital audiences are beginning to look forward with a great deal of pleasure to these improvisations of Mr. Sheldon's. His number of the Sunday before also won him unstinted praise.

Mr. Drukenmiller sang "Waiting for You" and "Oh for a Breath o' the Moorland," for his first number and was encored. For an encore he sang "The Rosary," which popular favorite highly pleased his hearers. Again he was encored when he sang "Ah! So Pure," the last number of the program, and the audience refused to leave until he had again come on the stage and sung.

The audiences have been noticeably larger for the last several Sundays.

POPCORN AS FOOD TO CUT LIVING COST

Washington, October 5.—Popcorn for breakfast is Uncle Sam's latest advice to assist those who desire some relief from the high cost of living. Department of agriculture corn investigation specialists declare popcorn is supreior when properly prepared to many breakfast foods now on the market. Any $20 worth of popped corn in the form of five-cent packages for the market represents an outlay of only about $1 or $1.50 for the raw material, those experts say. This amount of corn can be grown in a garden 20 feet by 40 feet.

In a farmer's bulletin just issued, the experts tell how to grow popcorn and how to make it into toothsome breakfast dishes.

PRAYERS ARE DESIRED BY THE SUFFRAGETTES

Militants Raid Westminster Abbey Because No Petitions Are Offered for Women.

London, October 5.—Because the clergy do not include women in their prayers, a party of suffragettes today interrupted the morning services at Westminster abbey by chanting in a prayer for the women now in prison.

The party rose as the litany was being recited and ignored a request to desist from singing. At the conclusion the women left the church quietly. Addressing a crowd outside, one of them said: "This is nothing to what will happen unless women are included in the clergy's prayers."

Certain Exquisite Linen Pieces Have Their Prices Greatly Reduced

There come times in this store's year when certain merchandise, be it ever so exquisite, must suffer great price-reductions. It is an arbitrary rule that is apt to be enforced at any time.

When that time does arrive it means a fine opportunity for the buying public. It has arrived in the department of fancy linen pieces

The reason for these reductions is that many of the pieces are soiled on the outer fold, so we will not keep them at regular prices. But they are linens destined to many, many successful trips to the laundry.

The reductions are huge compensation for this one extra trip that will restore their freshness.

A timely opportunity if ever one were for housekeepers turning indoors again, fixing up the house, planning the social activities that necessitate just such linens.

There are Madeira, drawn-work and Cluny Cloths and hand-hemstitched and embroidered Linen Bedspreads.

The needlework is exquisite, true, dainty, flawless, in rich, fine patterns, and done on linen of a quality worthy of all the care and patience that the work shows.

Lovers of fine linens will be delighted when they see what these prices stand for.

NOT ONE MAN, BUT---ATLANTA.

Since the last municipal election columns of newspaper space have been devoted to weird guesswork as to the complexion of the next council upon the basis of a line-up "for Woodward" or "against Woodward."

Combinations innumerable and puzzles galore have been offered bearing upon probable alignments "for" and "against" the mayor.

Not one word as to "for Atlanta" or "against Atlanta." Not the hazard of a guess as to constructive work to which the new council would apply its energies for the upbuilding of the city. Not a suggestion of statesmanship. Everything pitched to the tune of petty, personal, peanut politics.

Admittedly, the city faces a crisis in its history.

Physically, it is undergoing a second rehabilitation, almost as important as that which followed the wake of Sherman.

From the civic and political standpoint, it is debating changes in government and demanding widespread improvements in public policy.

From this fluid state of public thought and determination, problems literally teem.

If ever there was a time when personpolitics, factionalism and juggling should be pushed to the background and the community welfare made paramount, that time is the present.

Council and future councils, the mayor and future mayors are going to find their abilities severely taxed in dealing with numberless public questions.

They will have no time, if they are true to oath, for partisan scheming.

And Atlanta is in no mood to tolerate such philandering.

Let it be ATLANTA, first, last, all the time!

We believe the mayor and the new council possess sufficient patriotism to see the situation in this broad light.

THE GERM IN THE MILK.

Any mother in Atlanta who doubts the connection between impure milk and ailing or dying children can be shown proof by attending the meeting tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock at the Auditorium-Armory. The meeting will be held under the joint auspices of the state department of agriculture and the milk committee of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. The Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs is in co-operation. Almost the full expert staff of the department, including Commissioner J. D. Price, State Chemist Stallings, State Veterinarian Bahnsen and Dr. Kenneth N. Atkins, state bacteriologist, will be present and make addresses. The lectures will be pitched upon a practical plane, as showing the deadliness of impure milk and the ease with which milk can be kept clean and harmless. Stereoptican slides will illustrate the lectures.

Both the commissioner of agriculture and the chamber of commerce wish emphatically to disclaim any intention to injure the dairy interests of Georgia. Those who through ignorance or inadvertence fail to comply with the regulation will be given a thorough chance to redeem themselves. But both the commissioner and the members of the milk committee believe that the lives and health of the babies and children of Atlanta take right of way over every consideration. They are determined that no step shall be left untaken to the end that only milk that is free from possibility of death and disability shall be sold in Atlanta and Georgia.

As a legitimate part of its work the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs is engaging earnestly in the present campaign. Through Mrs. Harvie Jordan it is putting all its influence behind the local and state efforts looking toward pure milk. It is expected that at the forthcoming annual meeting at Cuthbert, the federation will go officially on record as indorsing the movement.

The lectures tomorrow evening have as their theme a subject vital to the welfare of the community. The parents of Atlanta, following the recent interest in thoroughly familiarising themselves with each detail.

JONES' SOUND VIEWS.

Amusing where it is not tiresome has been the epidemic of irresponsible rumors following the recent adoption by the people of Atlanta of the principles of the initiative, the referendum and the recall. First, the gossips had it down pat that Mayor Woodward was to be recalled; then it was all figured to a nicety in circus poster headlines that the victim was to be Chief Beavers, and so on down the line.

The truth is that not since the adoption of this principle has there been any serious hazard of the recall of a single official of the city. The whole thing is a teacup-tempest.

Far more sound are the views of Jerome Jones, editor of The Journal of Labor. In the current issue he indorses heartily these three principles, and then says—

> Do not think for one minute that the people—organized labor—who have fought for this great principle for a generation will stand by and see it used as a weapon for the execution of private or political malice.

He is right. That triple-headed principle is in the new charter, or in any fundamental law, simply as a check or as a balance. It may be years before it is invoked in Atlanta. It may never be invoked. But it is ever there, available for purposes of discussion and good government, not to express private feud or to undermine upright officials. If in the future any politician or set of politicians conceive the fallacy that they are bigger than Atlanta, or that they own Atlanta, the people now have a device effective in bringing them summarily back to the right perspective. The people of Atlanta realize that these three principles are a double-edged weapon and there is no danger that they will permit them to be distorted into the task of working for destruction rather than for construction.

It is peculiarly appropriate that Mr. Jones should have celebrated the fifteenth birthday of The Journal of Labor with the expression of views in such entire conformity with the career of that periodical. In congratulating Mr. Jones and his paper, it gives The Constitution pleasure to testify that the man and his policies have been potent forces for conservatism and advancement in Atlanta. He has a valuable gift of seeing clearly the ultimate value of issues as affecting his people and the city and the interests generally of labor. His diplomacy is of that tactful kind and his logic so convincing that he has come to be known more as the apostle of peace than as one who carries a club. In a sense, he and his paper offer models of the most achieving methods of union labor. The Constitution wishes for Mr. Jones many profitable anniversaries and a steady increase of the influence he wields so well for constructive ends.

RACIAL INDIGESTION.

Senator Ransdell, of Louisiana, and several prominent business men of New Orleans have launched a campaign to deflect foreign immigration to the southern states. This is not the first attempt of a similar nature. Several have proved successful. Others have developed into dismal fiascos, not only for the immigrants but for the south as well.

Wherever such a plan has run aground it has been due to bad judgment in selecting the sort of immigration needed in this territory. That is what our friends of Louisiana should remember and guard against which they should guard. We want and welcome in the south those peoples of Europe who can assimilate our customs, sympathize with and abide by our institutions and become imbedded into our citizenry. We do not want the kind that will show dangerous or sinister tendencies to form racial lines, or who as soon as they reach this country become intoxicated with the new liberty to which they are unaccustomed and run amuck, intellectually and morally.

The Constitution, while receptive to the right sort of foreign immigration, has held that, all things being equal, the south was in a position to profit by domestic immigration. Yearly it is computed that 75,000 robust American farmers hike over the line into Canada, lured by new and cheap lands. They can secure here virtually the same advantages, with the superior advantage of living under an established order, among their own people, with plenty of educational, religious and social facilities.

We hope to see the newly organized Georgia Chamber of Commerce, the Southern Commercial Congress and the Southern Settlement and Development organization work energetically along these lines. Numbers, with regard to immigration, is desirable. But we do not want numbers at the expense of what might be called economic or social indigestion.

Knowing what one little vacation did to Mr. Edison his fellow-toilers of the shop will probably stay on the job.

In time of a meat famine take stock in the vegetable trust.

When Japan invited China to a picture show of ten battleships the film fell from her eyes and she came across.

If this topsy-turvy aviation is persisted in the man higher up will soon win his monument.

It bids fair to be a steady, sane prosperity, without spectacular flashlight effects.

To put it in a nutshell, Argentina shipping beef to us is tough on the country.

For Prosperity in Georgia.

(From The Montgomery Monitor.)

The biggest sad best thing the new Georgia chamber of commerce could do would be to show our people that the very highest attainments in agriculture can only be reached by combining stock-raising with farming. Only by raising and feeding live stock can our soil be permanently enriched. We can continue to buy commercial fertilisers and remain in about the same condition, except that we will slip a cog about every other year.

A Story of the Moment

By WALT MASON,
The Famous Prose Poet

FAKE FREEDOM.

"They call this a free country," said the retired merchant, gloomily, "but it isn't anything of the kind. The sun sets, and his last beam falls on a man who owns by virtuality for a straw hat. It is the only kind of a lid that feels comfortable on my dome of thought. I'd like to wear a straw hat all the year round, and if the constitution of the United States amounted to three whoops I could do so.

"But the palladium of our liberties doesn't pallade worth a cent, and I can wear a straw hat only a few months in the year. If I appear on the streets in early spring with my favorite hat the slecks encompass me around about, and shock me ha hat jown over my ears, and I have to pry it off with a screw-driver. If I loom up in the fall with a straw hat the same slecks come after me, whooping in demoniac glee, and rend the hat limb from limb.

"In Yorktown and Valley Forge, and of the other battles of which you have heard. They simply won't stand for a man wearing a straw hat, yet I have no doubt those same slecks regard this as a land of freedom."

"I can sympathize with you from start to finish," complained the hotelkeeper. "I've long been convinced that the people on her mountain height is selling gold bricks instead of tearing the azure robe of purity to shreds. Of course, a man has to choose his audience when voicing such sentiments, or some patriot is likely to rise and hurl one on his head.

"If we don't have freedom in small things, then we don't have freedom at all. Now, you consider old Thanksgiving. Or course, he has his faults, but take him by and large and to and fro, and you find him a good citizen. He puts his time and on the Fourth of July he covers the front of his house with star-spangled banners.

"The other day he came in here fairly beaming, and told me he had bought a phonograph, and his nights were filled with joy, etc. I never saw the old man so enthusiastic than he was. He said he had one record particular that filled his bosom with delight, and he played it over and over and never got tired of it. He talked for an hour about his phonograph, and when he departed I heaved him many fond returns of the day.

"The next morning he came in again, the picture of gloom. He had his head wrapped up in a bunch of poultices and he seemed to be suffering mentally and physically. After he had wept for a while he explained. On the preceding evening he was playing his favorite record on the phonograph when a shower of bricks and bottles and such bric-a-brac came through the window. Two or three hit him on the head, but most of them struck the phonograph and reduced it to a wreck. Quackenbush argued that those bricks and things didn't come of their own volition. He felt morally certain that they were thrown by human beings, probably his neighbors. He complained to the police and wanted some bottles and such bric-a-brac came through the window. Two or three hit him on the head, but most of them struck the phonograph and reduced it to a wreck. Quackenbush argued that those bricks and things didn't come of their own volition. He felt morally certain that they were thrown by human beings, probably his neighbors. He complained to the police and wanted some action, but the police wouldn't do a thing. The chief just grinned at him and told him that if he played the phonograph an hour after hour he got just what was coming to him.

"Yat Quackenbush's grandfather distinguished himself at Sag Harbor in order that posterity might enjoy the priceless heritage of liberty; and here we see Quackenbush going around with his head in a sling, mourning a fifty-dollar phonograph, and he calls in vain for justice.

"I am as fond of a red necktie as you are of a straw hat, yet there is so much dogdone tyranny in this country that I daren't wear a red necktie in the public streets. I'm fond of a trotting horse, and used to keep one, but every time I'd let him trot some big made-in-Germany policeman would come up and order me to. I like a good dog, but when I have one a policeman comes every other day and says I haven't paid my dog tax, and orders me to once more. There's no such a thing as liberty in this country, no matter what the candidates say."

VALUES.

By George Matthew Adams

All values are not measured by the pound or the yard stick, or by price in money. Human values, for instance, are measured solely by worth in service. John Lee Mahin, the resourceful Chicago advertising man, was once showing a big eastern advertiser through his organization, and before he was half through, his visitor paused in express surprise at such a large number of young men at the head of his most important departments. "Why, that is quite remarkable," replied Mr. Mahin. "I do not hire my young men by weight."

The value of an efficient brain cannot be adequately computed. Sometimes a single brain guides and directs thousands of other brains.

Also, how thoroughly human values are appreciated when genuine character is appreciated. Mere brain ability may not be able to cope with such a situation. England has produced greater intellects than those that made of Cromwell and Gladstone held, but few nations have produced men of greater value in character totals than these two examples.

The value bid away in big characters laps over into posterity.

But an able brain or a clean character cannot travel far or very permanently without an intimate knowledge of all the shades of value back of definite ideals. Ideals edge out the brain and make its cells keen and active and careful. Soon a man learns the ideals that back a man, you know the man—for his character is the sum of his ideals.

A Friend of Peace.

(From London Opinion.)

The peace advocate was talking. He said:

"I wish we'd all take as sensible and prudent a view of war as the Nice advocat took of dueling.

"An advocat and lieutenant quarreled one evening at the Cafe de la Regence in Nice, and the lieutenant sent his seconds to the advocat the next morning. The advocat shook his head and said: 'A duel? No, no. It wouldn't be fair. The risks would be unequal. For, you see, I have children, a single man, whereas I have three children.'

"The advocat's refusal was conveyed to the lieutenant, who was a bloodthirsty wretch, straightway got married. In three years he became the father of three children, and then he called upon the advocat.

"'Ha,' he said fiercely, 'you'll have to fight me now; I have three children.'

"But the advocat smiled with a peaceful and joyous smile, 'I have now got five.'"

Naming Country Roads.

In France a new system of road designation for the convenience of tourists has been adopted. Every road in the country will be given a name and a number and these designations will be painted upon direction posts at the road crossings and the 100-meter posts along the roads. The roads in each case will be numbered. The direction post will state the class of highway and the number of the road. The tourist starting on a journey will need only a strip of figures, and he will be able to find his way anywhere.—Chicago News.

The World's Mysteries

WAS HARRY OF MONMOUTH A COVETOUS SON?

In spite of the many shortcomings that have been ascribed to King Henry IV. of Lancaster, to his credit must be placed that of a most forgiving disposition. The king was subject to severe fits and they were of frequent occurrence during the last years of his life. They were so severe that an attempt was made to force him to resign the crown, or at least to give up the regency to the Prince of Wales.

It seems clear, from the English Rolls of Parliament, that the king resented this interference, and the prince, shrinking from an open conflict with his father, retired for a time from public life. But there was evidence of a break between father and son, and Henry, having paid off the prince's arrears of salary as a councilor, he discharged him from further attendance, and Thomas, the king's second son, who had adhered to his father's side, was made Duke of Clarence.

Later there was a reconciliation between father and son when the Prince of Wales was accused of squandering sums of money intended for the Calais garrison. He sought out his father and the charges were disproved. It would appear that King Henry had many reasons to accuse his eldest son of a lack of parental respect, but he seemed always willing to forgive and forget.

There are many instances to prove that the prince was generous, but the most marked of these is the story as told by Monstrelet in his "Chroniques," of the attempt of the prince to steal his father's crown.

Upon one occasion, when the king was visited by a severe fit, the Prince of Wales entered his apartment, and, seeing the father lying senseless, he concluded he was also lifeless. Thereupon he bore away the golden crown, which he found by the bedside, without alarming the attendants or making an effort to relieve the king's condition. Then, recovering himself soon after, missed his crown and anxiously inquired for it. The prince hastened to restore the diadem, which he said he had only removed as considering his father no longer capable of wearing it. It is related that he excused himself so well that the king not only forgave him, but blessed him.

But it does not seem possible how any apology can be offered for so indelicate an action. If the son really thought the parent dead, it would seem but natural for him to, give some expression of sorrow over the corpse of a father rather than to deck himself with the golden circlet of majesty. Many historians discredit this story and some of them fail even to note it. The story of the life of the Prince of Wales is full of escapades that are more or less unbecoming to the oldest son of a reigning sovereign. Upon one occasion, with one of his profligate associates, he was carried before Sir William Gascoigne, an eminent judge of that period, and because his dissolute companion was deemed to punishment, the prince struck the judge.

Sir William, duly sensible of the dignity of his station, and the necessity of punishing every breach of respect to the laws of the land, and to the magistrate who administered those laws, immediately ordered the prince into custody.

Young Henry gave proof of the magnanimity of his character by humbly submitting himself to the laws of the country and the orders of her insulted magistrate. He showed that if he could err in the moment of thoughtless indignation, he knew his duty in the interval of recovered reason, and would fulfill it. The king was delighted to hear of the transaction; for he considered himself "happy in having a judge who so boldly and uprightly administered justice; and still more happy in a son, wise and generous enough to submit patiently to deserved chastisement."

Upon the death of Henry, the king is said to have made a confidant son that was is full of wise and pious council. Henry was mortally stricken with one of his attacks while praying before St. Edward's shrine in Westminster Abbey. The exact nature of his disease has been much discussed. The chroniclers speak of leprosy, but he had fits which were plainly not of an epileptic nature. Henry died in 1413 and in 1833 his tomb was opened in a lay unfavorable discussion regarding his disease, and it was shown that the face reflected the exaggerated stories of the chroniclers as to the ravages which leprosy had made upon him.

PACKERS TURN TO GEORGIA IN BEEF FAMINE CRISIS

---W. H. White, Jr.

"The capitalists and the farmers of Georgia ought to have sat down with me at the recent deliberations of the American Meat Packers' association in Chicago. They would have had something to think about as to the nearness of a meat famine in this country, the keen anxiety of the packing interests and the hopefulness with which they are turning for relief to the south and particularly to Georgia. The threatened beef shortage, unless it is averted, will strike almost every dinner table and every pocketbook in the nation. From this situation of almost dramatic intensity it is possible that Georgia is destined to gather dividends second only to the profits from her annual cotton crop."

These were statements were made yesterday to The Constitution by W. H. White, Jr., president of the White Provision company, of Atlanta, following his return from Chicago, where he has been in attendance at the annual convention of the American Meat Packers' association. White, with his model packing house on the Howell Mill road, is the pioneer modern packer in the central south. The products of his company, made largely from southern raised animals, have an eager market throughout this section. He has made a close study of every feature of the packing business and the cattle industry and the needs of both. He is naturally due to be a conservative, and his views are regarded as the ultimate expression of a genuine revival. He talked yesterday regarding the result of his observations in Chicago and the door of opportunity he saw there opened to this state.

Conditions Desperate.

"From the address of President Bischoff on down," said Mr. White, "the keynote of the convention was pitched to the imminent beef famine in this country and means to avert it. President Bischoff showed what The Constitution has repeatedly contended, that is, that with the disappearance of the huge ranches of the west, no section of the nation has a monopoly of producing cattle. We can depend upon cattle grown generally upon the farmers of the country. He emphasized the handicap enjoyed by the southern states by the respect, and said that henceforth the packing industry would look largely to the territory south of Mason and Dixon's line.

"You can gain an idea of the gravity of the crisis when I say that the packers agreed at this convention to raise by subscription a fund of $500,000, to be expended exclusively in a campaign of education to encourage cattle-raising. These men are desperate. Their dividends and their plants are menaced. It is almost impossible for them to run on full time, not because there is a slump in demand, but because there is a slump in supply. To have heard them talking, you would have recognized in their seriousness the importance of the situation. The sessions had all the atmosphere of a council of war.

Georgia's Chance.

"As I have been contending for several years, Georgia is ideally situated to step into the breach at this moment. We have the space. The huge ranges of the west are no more. It is the small plot that will count hereafter. Of these, Georgia has an abundance, in all parts of the state. We have the climate and the soil to forage crops, and to a great extent the west and the east lacks both. We have in cotton seed meals and hulls a fattening element of every farm door that cannot be matched by other portions of America. In the matter of sheepraising we have, as The Constitution has so often insisted, a splendid opportunity in the mountainous regions of the state, ideally adapted to this purpose.

"But we are not as yet situated to rise to the occasion. We must raise more beef cattle and fewer scrubs. We must breed our native cows to thoroughbred beef bulls. That process will, in a short time, bring up the quality of cattle until it ranks with any that goes to the abbatoirs of this country. We must stop slaughtering young calves.

An Invasion Threatened.

"Just as sure as we do not take advantage of our assets, we may expect that westerners will come in, gobble up our idle lands at dirt prices, and skim the cream from the situation. If we do take advantage of our assets, there is no reason why we should not double our population into an income-getter second only to cotton. And, as a matter of fact, cattle and sheep and hog raising will benefit cotton, by enriching the soil, and reducing the temptation to overplant.

"The danger from the cattle industry of the Argentine has been overestimated. There is an impression here and there that Argentine beef is superior to American beef. On the other hand, it is far below it in quality. They have there only open-range cattle, without the feed to round them off and give them the necessary fine grain and toothsomeness. We needn't fear trouble from that source for some time.

The New Era.

"If the Chicago conference meant anything, it meant a new era in the meat industry, an era of intensive cultivation upon small areas, and that means a revolution in the business.

"From this new era and the consequent revolution Georgia is better fitted than any other American commonwealth to reap the reward. It depends upon the vision and the initiative of our capitalists and farmers. For if dozens of other states may be, it depends from this opportunity rent assured effort from the outside will not be so shortsighted."

THE POLICEMAN.

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

A policeman is a large, peaceful man with tired feet, who spends his life hunting trouble. Policemen draw from $45 to $70 a month, but can ride free on the street cars. A good policeman cannot save much money, especially if the campaign expenses of the mayor are heavy. A good police chief can save enough out in the back yard and kills it carefully with a club before going to work can often retire in a few years with several hundred thousand dollars.

Policemen were invented to guard society against evil. A policeman's duty is to suppress riots, disorders, crime and joy riding. He is also supposed to give chase to the fleeing thief up one alley and run him gasping to earth. In order to fit him for this pursuit the all wise government of our cities have dressed him in a nineteen pound coat with four acres of tail to it, and large, thick brogans. To watch a policeman chase a fleet young pickpocket is like watching an automobile truck trying to run down an aeroplane and cornar it in an alley.

Policemen are admitted free to the theaters and ball games, and always get a front seat at all prominent catastrophes. In return for this, however, they have to mix with society composed almost tentirely of undesirables. Many a young man, who has watched a policeman loafing gradily past a hundred fruit stands has envied him his carefree existence. But that very night the McGuire street gang may lay for this same policeman and by the time he has called the patrol he will look like the wreck of the Hesperus.

Policemen lead uncertain lives, and are not a good insurance risk. Because of this the same all-wise governments have equipped them with large clubs and magazine revolvers. It is much easier to club a man first and argue with him later, and so the police have become one of our great city perils. They do things better over in England. There the policeman goes about armed only with a soft answer and a note book.

"Invented to guard society against itself."

One can kick a London policeman in the shins without having his head beaten off down to his ears, and all that he can do is go to the works for a month for resisting an officer.

If American cities took more pains to preserve the sanctity of the policeman's person they would not have to make him such a calamity to the widow and orphans of the casual wrong doer.

The Great American Hen.

(From The Elberton Star.)

It is said that if the commissioners carry out their threat to seize all cold-storage eggs, the fresh eggs will go to a dollar a dozen. Question: With eggs at a dollar a dozen, what will a hen be worth?

RELIEF TO TRAFFIC CALLS FOR ACTION

Improvement of Spring Street Will Be of Great Aid in Putting End to the Present Congestion.

The congested condition of Peachtree street, from the business center of the city nearly out to the city limits, is forcing itself upon the attention of both citizens and officials, and it is now apparent to all cognizant with the situation that something must be done, and done very soon, to afford relief to traffic.

In seeking for a street close to and parallel with Peachtree, citizens and officials decided that Spring street is the thoroughfare to be improved and utilized.

The regrading, paving and extension of Spring street from Marietta to Brookwood will cost $313,173, according to an estimate furnished by Chief of Construction R. M. Clayton.

Canvas Property Taxes.

Realizing the necessity of making a start by the first of January, 1914, those who are interested in the improvement are making a canvass among property holders and the present time there has been no objection. To the contrary, Ac. G. Hemphill, owner of a large tract running back to Peachtree Road, has given the city a right-of-way through his property in order that Spring street might be extended straight into Peachtree Road, thus opening an almost straight boulevard from Brookwood to the center of the city.

Greater impetus will be given the improvement in January when the new council is organized.

The proposed extension from Marietta to Brookwood will be a starter. Business men are figuring on extending Spring street from Marietta to Forsyth by means of a viaduct at the intersection of Rhodes street. This gigantic improvement has already been discussed before the city council. It will cost in the neighborhood of $250,000, part of the cost of which will be borne by the city, the Georgia Railway and Electric company and the various railroads over whose rights-of-way the viaduct will span. This extension is calculated to greatly relieve the congestion of traffic in Marietta and Forsyth streets, and will open an avenue of communication which will be worth many thousands more than the cost.

Advantages of Extension.

Chief of Construction Clayton suggests that the city make a driveway into Carnegie way by taking off the street corner, and Spring street could then serve two purposes.

Below are three of the most forceful arguments in favor of extending Spring street from Marietta to Brookwood:

The distance from Brookwood to the center of the city will be lessened half a mile.

Traffic from Peachtree street will be relieved.

Fifteen minutes will be saved in travel from Brookwood to the center of the city.

There are other advantages to be gained by the extension. There are no street car tracks on spring street, and there are not likely to be any. It can be made a smooth, straight boulevard. Fourteenth street will once be the terminus of Spring street, and nothing can be more practical than extending it and thus extending it until it enters Peachtree road.

The grade north of Fourteenth street is almost level, and when regraded it will be about a 2 per cent grade.

While there has been little change in the status of the Spring street project since the time the committee of citizens last went before the street committee, still the workers behind the improvement are not complaining and are confident that the city will start the work early next year.

IDEAL DAY IS GIVEN LOCAL CHURCH-GOERS

Indian summer days continued Sunday and proved that the weatherman hit the mark when he said a early. He said that "Sunday ought to be bright and clear."

The day proved an ideal one for churchgoing and for strolling in the parks in the afternoon, and as a result a great crowd of people took advantage of the balmy air and were seen on the streets and in the parks and also at the organ recital.

Neither autumn nor winter is the best description of the day. It was summer weather tempered by fall that makes a July day oppressive, but with the clear and bright sunlight that was also wiser without the sting of frost in the air to nip the fingers and ears.

IMPORTANT RATE CASES WILL SOON BE DECIDED

U. S. Supreme Court Will Shortly Pass on Atlanta-Nashville Dispute.

Washington, October 5.—Rate decisions of high importance are expected from the supreme court on its first decision day, October 20, as the court itself has given no indications of its intentions.

Justice Hughes is expected to clear up the so-called state rate cases by announcing the court's decision in the Kentucky rate case, involving rates on distillery supplies from Ohio river cities to distillery centers in Kentucky. It also involves the validity of the McChord act, enabling the state railroad commission to fix reasonable rates on interstate business. The decision is intended that proper appeal from the commission's decisions is not allowed in the law.

He also may announce the court's decision in the Indiana rate case, involving the validity of class rates on freight between Indianapolis and points in Indiana along the Wabash railroad.

Atlanta-Nashville Case.

The court is expected to decide the Louisville and Nashville re-shipping privilege case. This has occasioned a bitter contest between Nashville, on the one hand, and Atlanta and other southeastern cities on the other, because Nashville shippers were allowed to unload grain from the northwest, keeping it in Nashville six months and reship on a through rate, while such a privilege was not accorded shippers in Atlanta cities. The railroad defended the practice on the ground that it was necessary to meet competition on the Cumberland river.

The court also is expected to announce early in the term its decision in the long-pending "intersmediate rate case." This involves the long and short-haul issue. On the ground that water competition required it, the railroads have given certain Pacific coast cities lower rates from eastern cities than has been given to inter-mountain cities, notably the Spokane and Reno. In passing on the case, the interstate commerce commission fixed rates over an entire zone as distinguished from fixing them from point to point. The validity of such a method of rate-making is challenged.

The Georgia Headlights Case.

The court has had under consideration during the summer and soon may decide a number of cases involving the validity of state laws. The Atlantic Coast Line railroad wants the Georgia law requiring headlights on certain power declared unconstitutional. National bank stockholders are seeking to annul the New York law which allows New York city officials to tax shares of national bank stock without making the indebtedness of the stock owners.

Commercial rating houses are attacking the validity of the Kentucky act, using "an occupation" tax on individuals and reports on companies the standing of business firms.

The New York harbor cases of lighterage case, the California old land case and the "book publishers' trust" cases, are others which may be decided on the first decision day.

LIVE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Southern Railway Inaugurates Bulletin Service for Farmers.

As a part of its work for the upbuilding of the live stock industry in the southeast, the live stock department of the Southern railway periodically issues a bulletin telling of stock for sale or exchange and stock desired to be purchased. The bulletin is compiled from information received by stock owners, and copies are mailed to over 15,000 farmers and dealers.

Through this bulletin a large number of sales have been made and the scheme has been enabled to get stock of just the type they desired. Instead of sending good mares to the slaughter house after serving their allotted time with one colt, many owners have, through this bulletin, been enabled to effect an exchange which has added years of usefulness to the life of a good animal.

The entire expense of issuing the bulletin is borne by the Southern railway company. F. L. Word, live stock agent, Atlanta, Ga., will be glad to send copies to any farmer or to include in the bulletin information in regard to stock for sale or exchange.

CITY OF BRUNSWICK LEVIES ON STEAMERS

Brunswick, Ga., October 5.—(Special.) Whether or not steamboat companies are liable for a municipal tax in the port which they hail from is the important question that the city of Georgia will have to decide shortly as the result of legal steps taken in Brunswick yesterday, when the city levied upon three passenger steamers, owned by the St. Simon Transit company and the Brunswick & Darien steamboat company, and prepared a legal advertisement calling for the sale of the three steamers by the marshal in November. Before the notice was published, however, the proceedings were stopped by attorneys representing the steamer lines.

APPEAL BY BUDDHISTS TO WOODROW WILSON

Tokio, October 6.—Buddhists in a mass meeting today in the Hongawaji temple adopted a resolution will send a message to rPesident Woodrow Wilson, bearer of an Japanese envoy, Warden Ino. The message, which was forwarded, says:

"For the sake of universal peace and the progress of humanity, which are the ideals of Buddhism, we in paying homage to the president earnestly desire the development of a friendship between Japan and the United States based on liberty and justice with the exclusion of religious and racial prejudices."

Three thousand Buddhists were present. M. Otabi, leader of the progressive party, declared only by war could Japan settle the fundamental solution of the California land question. He urged determination on the part of the nation to back up the authorities.

J. Stoddard Johnston Dead.

St. Louis, Mo., October 5.—J. Stoddard Johnston, 89 years old, former associate editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, died late tonight at the home of his son, Harvie E. Johnston, in Clayton, Mo. Death was due to hardening of the arteries. Mr. Johnston was the democratic nominee for governor of Kentucky in 1875 but was defeated. He was adjutant general of Kentucky from 1871 to 1872 and secretary of state from 1875 to 1879. For many years he was democratic state chairman of Kentucky.

Governor Tells Children Sunday School Lessons Have Aided Him in Work

Before nearly 750 members of the Second Baptist church Sunday school Governor John M. Slaton yesterday reviewed in a brief address his experiences during twenty-seven years of Sunday school work.

In the course he said in part:

"I am exceedingly glad to be with this Sunday school today at its rally. I have always been a consistent Sunday school attendant. I started in the active work of teaching Sunday enter when I was 19 years of age, and I have kept it up all these years.

"I find that the lessons and the scriptures that I learned in the earlier days of the Sunday school have always remained in my mind, and have aided me when in reflection I have sat down to study out problems that came to me for solution.

"These little children here cannot appreciate until after life just what this Sunday school and its teachers mean to them. These exercises we have of today here mean more to the participants than to we older folk, but, nevertheless, they carry a great lesson to us. The training of the infant mind along churchly lines is one of the God-given privileges in this day and age.

Prior to the governor's address three classes in the Sunday school were advanced to higher grades. Appropriate songs and recitations marked this section of the program.

Dinner Dance Friday Night Will Open the Driving Club

On this occasion all the new additions to the clubhouse will be thrown open for the first time, and the entertainment will be made in all respects a brilliant one.

Mrs. Howell's Tea.

Mrs. G. A. Howell gave a beautiful tea Saturday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. D. McCarley on West End, the occasion assembling the Pioneer Women's club of Fulton. As a compliment to Mrs. George Sharpe, celebrating her 75th birthday, and over a hundred ladies or more called and extended her congratulations.

Mrs. Joseph Morgan, president of the pioneers, received with Mrs. Howell as guest of honor, and behind them where they stood in the drawing room were massed a lovely array of flowers and many other gifts which had been showered upon the guest of honor, than whom no Atlanta woman has more numerous and more admiree friends.

Throughout the house there was artistic arrangement of flowers, the color rose and purple shades and in ferns, the dahlias were banked on the mantels and filled jardinieres everywhere. In the dining room, the table centerpiece was a tall basket of yellow and white golden flowers, and its effect of color was an effective combination of yellow and white. Delicious refreshments were served, and the birthday cake, which was another gift to Mrs. Sharpe, occupied a place of honor.

Mrs. Howell was a charming hostess, gowned in black chantilly lace, the corsage of which was finished with chenille in jet. Mrs. Sharpe wore a black and white charmeuse with point lace berthe, and she held an old-fashioned bouquet of pink and white rosebuds in a gold and silver holder. Mrs. Morgan wore black lace and net combined with black satin.

Mrs. McCarley was gowned in pink embroidered voile and lace. Mrs. Whorter Milner wore blue embroidered marquisette. Mrs. W. E. Spratt wore a black net gown.

Those assisting in entertaining were: Mrs. Arthur Howell, Mrs. George Adair, Mrs. Pearl Rosebery and Mrs. Robert Grogg.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. M. Harris, of the Baptist church, and was witnessed by only the relatives and a few close friends of the contracting parties.

ENTOMBED FOR 8 DAYS, TOSHESKY FEELS GOOD

Centralia, Pa., October 5.—Thomas Toshesky, the miner who was liberated after being entombed for eight days, was at the Continental mine, after being released from his prison, this morning. As he entered the mine a church was crowded to its capacity and those who could not gain entrance to the building stood with bowed heads in the rain and offered up thanks for the miner's safe deliverance from behind the wall of coal.

When Toshesky, who was accompanied by his wife, entered the little church the throng was so great and all were so eager to shake hands and offer congratulation that it was necessary for the police to clear a space for them to enter the edifice. After the services the rescued man held an informal reception.

Toshesky slept most all of yesterday afternoon and retired again early last night, police at all times guarding his house to prevent the crowds from disturbing his rest. When he awoke today he informed friends he was feeling fine and declared he would be ready to resume work at the mines. The Red Mine officials, however, say they will not permit him to go to work for several days.

FOUR MILITARY CAMPS FOR COLLEGE STUDENTS

Washington, October 5.—Encouraged by the success of the two student military camps held this summer at Gettysburg, Pa., and Monterey, Cal., the war department has decided to have four camps next summer. Cities have not been selected, but they will be located in centers easily accessible to college and university students.

One camp will be in Northern New York, probably on Lake Champlain; another in one of the northern central states; the third in the Virginia mountains or perhaps farther south, and the fourth on the central Pacific coast, probably Monterey.

The Gettysburg and Monterey camps last summer were attended by about 2,500 students, representing some ninety colleges and universities. Captain R. O. Van Horn, of the army general staff, in immediate charge of the students' camp, estimates that from 2,000 to 2,500 students will attend each camp. These camps is inestimable," said Captain Van Horn tonight. "They increase by just as many young men as they attend the prisent inadequate personnel of the army. They are practically trained military reserve of the United States. Of from this class of educated young men in a time of national emergency a large percentage of the volunteer officers probably will be drawn."

The camps will be open to all men of 18 years or older who are attending a college or university or who are members of a high school graduating class.

Memorial to Roddenbery.

Thomasville, Ga., October 5.—(Special.)—The members of the local Women's Christian Temperance union at a memorial service held a few days ago to the late Congressman S. A. Roddenbery decided to erect a monument in his memory. This monument it was decided, would be in the shape of a drinking fountain, to be placed on one of the principal streets of the city. Committees were appointed to arrange for the necessary funds, etc., and to arrange for the erection of this memorial.

WEATHER IS DOMINANT IN THE COTTON MARKET

More Rain in Texas Will Have Bullish Effect—Estimates on Size of the Yield.

New Orleans, La., October 5.—Because of the crop situation in Texas, the cotton market probably will be much of a weather fair this week. The Texas crop has suffered severe damage from the excessive rains, and more rain in that section would have a very bullish effect on prices. Clear weather, unless it became too cold, probably would induce a reaction downward. As the rains have been more closely than any other state in the cotton region this week.

With the last report on condition of the season out of the way and the growing season practically at an end, the attention will be given more and more on the size of the yield this season. From now on crop estimates will come thick and fast, and they will have much to do with the course of prices. It will be now stands the trade is decidedly inclined to reduce estimates.

The bulls have succeeded in getting the trade to accept ginning figures of 12,500,000 bales as its total yield this season, but the size of the crop year and more favorable weather conditions could easily result in liberal figures of at least a million bales larger. The bulls point to the unusual this year the total yield depends upon the rain in Texas, which in the course why traders are so anxious about weather conditions in the west. A spot demand will come in for more serious consideration this week than has been yet been. There are signs that American spinners have been operating for the present month on rather a large scale of late, while the foreign spinners have clung to their policy of holding off. The bulls claim that the British and continental spinners are practically bare of supplies of raw material, and that it would not take much to create a buying movement among them. Any signs of such an occurrence would be largely discounted upon by the long side as the best sort of an excuse to put prices to higher levels.

The markets this week will be wholly free from the skein of legislation, which will probably result in freer trading.

FAREWELL SERVICES GIVEN FOR REV. LONG

Cartersville, Ga., October 5.—(Special.)—A special farewell service was held this evening at the Third Baptist church, in honor of Rev. J. M. Long, who has resigned the pastorate in order to accept a call to the Baptist church at Athens.

Mr. Long has served his church for eight years, and has during that time been very effective. He has made for himself many friends, not only among the people of all denominations in the city, but in the county, and he will be deeply regretted by them.

A successor to Mr. Long has not yet been secured.

CENTENNIAL OBSERVED AT ANTIOCH CHURCH

Athens, Ga., October 5.—(Special.)—Today at Antioch church, Stephens, Oglethorpe county, occurred the centennial celebration of the institution. Two thousand and more people were in attendance. The sermon was preached by Dr. R. D. Gray, of Atlanta, the afternoon by Rev. W. H. Bell, who has been 19 years in the pastor three, and the exercises presided over by Rev. D. D. Mell, who is pastor and son of a pastor of the church, moderator of the association and president of the state convention to which it belongs, and the late Dr. P. H. Mell, chancellor of the university for many years, pastor over fifty-six years of this old church —and of the Baird's church for more than forty years, and the only living son, John D. Mell, who was beginning the practice of law, was called not to the pastorate, but actually to the ministry by this church of his father's. He accepted the call as providential and was ordained and called to the pastorate of the churches his father served.

SPECIAL CARS BRING AGNES SCOTT GIRLS TO HEAR DR. OGDEN

"Every one of us casts his shadow upon the lives around him—the shadow of h's personal influence. What is your shadow today?"

Several hundred young men and women students of Atlanta, including 120 Agnes Scott girls, had this question put squarely up to them Sunday night by Dr. Dunbar Ogden, at a special "student service" held in the Central Presbyterian church. "Shadows—a Sermon on Personal Influence," was Dr. Ogden's subject, and his sermon was a personal appeal to the young men and women to so build their lives that their shadows shall be for Good.

"Now is the critical time in all your careers when your characters are being formed—when the question is being decided as to what kind of a shadow your life shall cast," said Dr. Ogden. "There are two kinds of shadows cast by human lives—some like the shadows of great rocks of the desert, under which weary souls may find rest and inspiration, and some like the dark, death-dealing shadow of rocks that fill the vegetation and saplings that try to grow under them. Which kind of a shadow is yours?"

The 120 Agnes Scott girls who heard the sermon came from Decatur in two special cars which also took them home afterwards. There were many Tech boys in the audience, as well as a large number of young men students from the medical colleges of the city.

EATONTON WOMAN GORED TO DEATH BY ANGRY COW

Miss Sallie Arnold Is Almost Torn to Bits and Her Brother Is Injured.

Eatonton, Ga., October 5.—(Special.) Miss Sallie Arnold was gored to death here Saturday by a cow.

A dairyman, who lives near, had turned his cows loose to grass. Miss Arnold had left her home to visit a neighbor who lives very near. In passing the cows one of them who had a young calf attacked Miss Arnold. She called some little boys to her assistance, but they could do nothing with the infuriated animal. In a short while the angry cow had torn her almost to pieces.

Her brother, John Arnold, who came to her rescue, was also hurt. Miss Arnold died before medical aid could be summoned. She was one of the most estimable women of the county and her death is deeply regretted.

The majors ended their seasons yesterday. The Athletics and Giants tune up today for the world's series, which start Tuesday.

Eve of World's Series Games

WHIFFS

Details for Fans.

CALLER KING will be at his old stand on the Viaduct Place, with the latest, most complete board. Elliott Dent, the Crackers' twirler, will be in the Kimball house, and Hugh Cardoza, with his electrascope, will be at the Grand. Through these three details the fans of Atlanta will get all the latest and best news of the world's series, direct from the scene of the battle, by direct leased wires.

Interest Intense.

INTEREST locally in the approaching world's series is more intense than in any of the previous series. Local fandom is talking nothing else. The general sentiment of all the fans we have seen is that the Giants are going to win. Of course there are many who pick the Athletics, but the Giants ride as the supreme favorites in the series locally, a different ruling over the advance previous to the 1912 series with the Red Sox.

Another Hunch.

THE GIANTS have another hunch in their favor. With the exception of the world's series of 1906, when the White Sox upset the dope from the Windy Ciuh, where the majority have placed their bets and confidence, that team has usually come through with the victory. This spells a lot for the Giants this year and in many other ways they are due this time.

The Proper Step.

THE SUPREME power of baseball, the National Commission, has set its foot down on the players, writers and well they should, but they have set it down in the proper way and any fair minded person must see the logic of their argument. The commission says that it has no objection to the players writing provided they write themselves or dictate the matter to some person, but that they are against the peddling of names to be used by various syndicates when in reality a player never sees the story until it appears in type the next day.

Is Democratic.

THIS STEP is in keeping with this democratic government of ours. To stop the players who write, provided of course, they actually write or superintend the writing of the games, would be an injustice and the public would be an injustice and the public would be an injustice of the players as American citizens. To stop players who by selling their names, permit the public to be buncoed by stuff that they can neither write nor understand, when written, is an outrage—the commission is to be complimented on sorting out the deadwood.

Abolish Series.

THE TALK of abolishing the world's series and instead creating an extra league series with all sixteen teams participating, has dropped out again. Whether this move will ever be further than mere talk is a question, but suffice it to say that it is worth at least a trial, then if it does not pan out as expected, there will be no trouble in reverting to the old order of things once more.

Emulating Ty.

MAISEL, Frank Chance's young speed merchant, is emulating Ty Cobb on the bases. The other day, Maisel was on first and Cobb on third. Maisel never slowed up at second but headed full speed for third. Cobb, at first, was so taken by surprise by the audacity of the move that he threw wide to the hot corner and Maisel scored from first on a bunt.

Showed Wisdom.

"THE LURE of the footlights and the easy money to be gained thereby by baseball stars, did not tempt Walter Johnson, the big twirler of the Washington Americans. A booking agency offered Johnson $1,500 a week for ten weeks, but the big twirler turned it down flat. He decided the money would have to speak out in the proposition was turned down without an argument, much to the great surprise of the booking agency. Johnson did not follow in the steps of other disgruntled pitchers. He might have picked up this easy change, but he realized the strain it would have on his arm. The actual being with the jumps from town to town and lobbying after a show made up is his fortune. He very sensibly argued that if he remained at the pitcher's business as a twirler, his name as a baseball pitcher would be imparted to vaudeville managers and he was not certain that he would be a headliner long.

Brickley's Nemesis.

EDDIE MAHAN may prove Brickley's nemesis in the Harvard-Dartmouth game on the Polo Grounds. Just like he did when Brickley was playing with the Crimson, Mahan is now in the prep class at Cambridge. Mahan has been with the Harvard team all season and will undoubtedly start against Dartmouth. Who can stop Harvard with two such backs? Brickley can never be expected to play better last year and should improve with the years experience, but Mahan is going to surpass even his improved efforts and the opposition can truly chant—"It Can't Be Did."

M's In Line Ups.

THE LETTER "M" is going to be most prominent in the approaching world's series. Starting from left to any other letter in the alphabet by reason of the number of men in the two line-ups whose surnames start with that letter. There is Murray and Mack to start with; then Mathewson, Marquard, Merkle, Murray, Myers and McLean of the Giants. Eddie and Danny Murphy of the Athletics. Surely this letter basks in the limelight as much as the Marconi-Messenger, Motion-Picture, McBride, McGilvray, Mayer combination for the Barons in the Southern league last year.

"Big Three" Hitting.

These figures include Monday's games.

Final Details of Series Will Be Completed Today

Commission Meets in Gotham—Reserved Seats Distributed—Athletics Intact—Snodgrass Out of Giants' Line-Up—Player-Writers' Stand Interesting. Church Baseball Service Held—Buying Tickets in Philadelphia.

New York, October 6.—Final stages of preparation for the series between the New York Nationals and the Philadelphia Americans to decide the baseball championship of the world are at hand with the assembling here of the National commission to put the last touches on the arrangements for the big contests. Garry Herrmann, chairman of the commission, and Thomas J. Lynch, president of the National league, already are on the ground and Ban B. Johnson, president of the American league, the third member of the governing baseball body, is expected early tomorrow.

The commission is to meet tomorrow morning, give its instructions to the umpires and hear any points of importance that may remain regarding the playing of the series.

All then will be in readiness for the calling of play at the Polo Grounds, at 2 o'clock (Central time) next Tuesday afternoon, for the opening game of the four or more games which will tell whether the world laurels of 1912 are to rest with the men under the tutelage of John J. McGraw, or the band of Adkins guided by Cornelius McGillicuddy.

Reserved Seats Distributed.

Distribution of the 6,600 odd reserved seat tickets for the series at the New York grounds was under way today, and the printed cards of admission will all be in the hands of those to whom they have been assigned by tomorrow. The greater part of these tickets have gone to baseball men throughout the country and to New York club patrons of long standing. Some 10,000 seats in the lower stand and bleachers will be available to the public at the grounds for each game of the series.

The seat question, a source of much trouble in former years, has given the magnates no little concern this year, but the arrangements are believed by them to be such as to eliminate chances of speculation so far as that is possible and give the real supporters of the game an opportunity to see the series with a minimum of personal inconvenience and without an excuse to raise the charge of favoritism.

An official pointed out today that during last year's series with the Red Sox patrons arriving at the grounds here at any time after 12:30 o'clock had no more difficulty in gaining admission and getting to their seats than at a mid-season Saturday's game. Essentially the same condition prevailed this year.

So far as the condition of the teams that will battle is concerned there seems no doubt that all the regulars of the Athletics will be ready to take the field and play the game without physical handicap.

Snodgrass Out.

Not so much can be said for the Giants. While it appeared to be settled tonight that Harry Lumley, the hustling second baseman of the New York Nationals, would be in shape to take his position at the beginning of play on Tuesday, the impression gained in the McGraw would be without the services of Fred Snodgrass, the centerfielder, when the series opened.

Doyle, with the exception of the stiffness in his throwing arm, appears to have recovered from the effects of his recent automobile spill. Snodgrass' charley horse, however, still is bothering him so much that it is out of the question to expect him to play to his usual form.

It looks probable, therefore, that the Giants will line up on Tuesday with Merkle, Doyle, Fletcher and Herzog filling the infield positions, with Murray, Shafer and Murray in the outfield.

Some close watchers of the team's play are inclined to think that the team as thus formed will be not a bit weaker than with a lineup that included Snodgrass and left out Murray. He was one of the stars of last season's series with the Red Sox, batting and fielding hard and timely and his "peppery" personality added much enthusiasm to the life and spirit of the team.

Snodgrass has been an unfortunate in the world series run of players. His batting was light both in the 1911 and 1912 post season contests, and his disastrous muff of a fly ball in Boston last fall is still remembered.

McGraw, however, never treasured that error up against "Snod" he is the record as saying, and there is no doubt but he would be glad to welcome the aggressiveness and spirit and all-around ability both on offense and defense so greatly that Snodgrass will be worked in the series if there is a possible chance of using him.

Final Giants' Workout.

The Giants will have a final workout tomorrow at the Polo grounds in an exhibition game with Philadelphia Nationals.

The regulars will be given a chance to limber up and most of them probably will play. Shafer and Murray in the outfield and Marquard are likely to be the pitchers picked for an inning or two, as between them apparently lies the choice of a battery to answer the twenty cornet Mack may select to open the series. Field games in which players of both teams will participate will undoubtedly be a further feature of the closing up.

Unless the player author question is broached, there seems little probability that anything will be done during the sessions of the National Commission meeting today.

At one time it appeared probable that there might be a lively tilt over the announced determination of participants in the series to write articles for the press while the series is on against the expressed opinion of the commission.

Chairman Herrmann, however, has said within a day or two that the commission expected to take a reasonable view of the matter and intimated it would not trouble player-authors who did not deliberately defy it.

What seems like a significant remark was dropped by Herrmann today when he was asked if there were any new developments in the situation as regards the writing players.

"I hardly believe that question will come up until after the series," he replied.

Mr. Herrmann did not go into the subject further, but the belief tonight is that there will be no such step taken. The matter as seemed probable a few days ago. What difference the early arrival of Ban Johnson may have on the situation cannot, of course, be anticipated. President Johnson for a long time has been a determined opponent of the player-author who lets some one else do his writing for him.

Church Baseball Service.

A unique preliminary to the series was a "baseball service" held at Grace Methodist Episcopal church uptown tonight. Many baseball men were present and letters were read among others from John J. McGraw and Connie Mack. The latter, telling "why baseball is worthy of support, praised the game for its honesty and other characteristics.

"Baseball is a manly sport," wrote Manager Mack, "it brings to the surface the natural skill and prowess of an individual to a greater extent than any other game and when conducted under organized lines, it is absolutely above reproach.

"Baseball never can lose its popularity, never die, as long as the game can public retains its confidence in the men who conduct it. Organization and the lines which have brought it to such a high standard, is absolutely necessary to maintain its integrity and popularity. May it ever remain a national sport safeguarded by men of high principles."

John J. McGraw, manager of the Giants, in his letter said:

"Baseball develops the mind, establishes discipline and gives to those who take part in it sound bodies, clear heads and a better sense of fair play. Almost all of my life I have been a participant and a student of the American national sport, and I know that everything in connection with it tends to the betterment of those who participate in it."

Big Sale in Philly.

Philadelphia, October 6.—Men, women and boys are lined up here tonight in front of the department store where the advance sales of tickets for the world's series games to be played here will open at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning. First in the line, which before midnight extended for more than a city block, are two messenger boys, who took their positions at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Each had an empty soap box to sit on and a package of lunch. They declare they do not expect to be relieved, and that they will purchase the coveted pasteboards.

Shortly after the boys started the line a negro arrived with a big rocking chair, in which he proceeded to make himself comfortable. The first negro to take his place with the would-be ticket purchasers arrived about 6 o'clock and took his place in the line, and is accompanied by her husband.

No one will be permitted to purchase more than two tickets at the box office window. Those who have want to buy the tickets for themselves, some for speculators and others have lined up in the expectation of selling their tickets to late comers before the sale opens.

The American league champions will have their final practice here tomorrow and will meet the Giants tomorrow for New York, to be prepared for the opening game on the Polo grounds there Tuesday. The regulars on Connie Mack's team, comprise a full quota of substitutes, with a regular pitcher, in the practice game at Shibe park tomorrow.

It is believed that Bender will be chosen to face Mathewson in the opening game, while Schang is expected to be at the receiving end of a battery. Lapp, however, may be the battery mate McGraw should decide to send Marquard to the mound.

Bush and Shawkey are other pitchers on the Athletics' regular lineup and in fine condition. Barry, the star infielder, who broke his hand in the game with the Washington Americans, will be out of the series. Lavan, however, can easily fill the position of himself at second, short or third, and the veteran, Barry, Davis, Oldring, Strunk into the breach in case of injury to McInnis.

INTRODUCING PLAYERS FOR WORLD'S SERIES

EDITOR'S NOTE—Under this head The Constitution will give daily a brief sketch of the lives and players of the rival teams in the approaching world's series.

17. ARTHUR FLETCHER.

Arthur Fletcher, who was the substitute infielder of the Giants in 1910, received his chance as a regular in the 1911 season when Bridwell was traded to Boston for Herzog. The latter was placed at third base and Fletcher was placed regularly at short field, where he made good with a vengeance. Fletcher was born at Edwardsville, Ill., 24 years ago, and was purchased from the Dallas club, of the Texas league, by the New York club in the spring of 1908. Fletcher is a tall, rangy fellow, fast on his feet, and is one of the surest shortstops in the National league. He stands 6 feet 19 inches, is a right-hander and batted around the .300 mark.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Tigers 9, White Sox 8.

Detroit, Mich., October 5.—Chicago's weak fielding today enabled Detroit to win the last game of the season by 9 to 8. The contest was a slugging duel and several infielders showed bravery that skill in handling hot drives which smoked across the diamond. Each team used two pitchers. None was effective.

Chicago's skill in batting was lost when Scott and he lasted only two innings. Lathrop, a recruit, finished the White Sox's burden and he was assaulted in nearly every inning. Detroit blanked Chicago in only the fifth and was replaced in the eighth by Willett.

In the first game Blanding kept St. Louis' hits well scattered until the ninth when Mr. Dugas then went hitless until the twelfth. In that inning he singled, a three-bagged and a hit batsman brought in five runs. Tomorrow Cleveland Americans and Pittsburg Nationals open a seven-game series here.

ELECTROSCOPE WILL SHOW WORLD SERIES

Perhaps every other person you meet these days talks about the coming baseball battle. And it is a fact that every line of news concerning the condition of the players of McGraw and Mack is read with the keenest sort of interest, and for the next few days the sport page will be the most popular, and stories of the world's series will be found in prominent display on the first pages of leading newspapers.

The electrascore which will be used at the Grand in detailing the battles, is the invention of a fan who has successfully operated for several seasons. The invention records every play. The machine in the Grand will have direct connection with the ball fields in New York and in Philadelphia.

The play will start daily commencing Tuesday at 1 p. m. The doors will be open half an hour earlier. Coupon seats will be sold on the orchestra floor at half a dollar each, but there will be good balcony seats at a quarter.

Major League Seasons Came to Close Sunday; Some Failures and Surprises

New York, October 5.—Major league baseball for 1913 came to a close today, so far as the regular schedules are concerned, with the playing of the season's final games in the west. The pennant races in both leagues were settled nearly two weeks ago this week and sees the start—and possibly the finish —of the world's championship series between the respective flag-winners—the New Yorks of the National and the Philadelphias of the American league.

Preparation for the "big series" practically has monopolized baseball attention for ten days but several interesting contests have been going on among clubs in each organization. In the National league Philadelphia's title to second place was not seriously threatened by Boston's efforts at one time, but the Phillies, despite a bad week at the end, won enough games to hold themselves safe. The team made a good fight throughout the season and just missed staying power enough to nose out the Giants.

Chicago finished in third place with a good margin over Pittsburg in fourth position. The Cubs under Evers made a better showing than many critics expected, and their aggressive player-manager has good material for a start for better things next season.

Pirates Disappointment.

The Pirates were a disappointment. Generally picked to be among the dangerous contenders for the pennant, they got off to a bad start and were at no time a potent factor in the race. Fred Clarke is not likely to rest satisfied with the team as it is and some changes may be expected when next season begins.

Brooklyn, under George Stallings, finished fifth, heading the second division. To take a tail-end club and bring it up to this notch in one year was no small achievement, and the Braves give promise of making further progress in 1914. Brooklyn finished sixth, a notch above last year. The superbas failed to come through as early season promise of landing high in the race. Cincinnati, with Tinker at the helm, had to be satisfied with seventh position.

The Reds' start was a poor one, and, though they played far better than they at first were able to move up to a position of real respectability in the standing. St. Louis was the nearly 100 points, never got going well at all, and piled up a total of 100 defeats for the season progressed.

The Athletics have got an earlier lead in the American league race than the Giants in some seasons when they were pennant-winners, and the finish was easy for them. The Clevelands, runners-up for the greater part of the year, were beaten out even for second place, losing their grip in the season's final games in the west. THORPE IS SHOWING EARMARKS OF PLAYER

New York, October 5.—Jim Thorpe, the Sac and Fox Indian, of Olympic fame, who for several years has been spent the summer learning professional baseball under the tutelage of John J. McGraw, is beginning to show signs of developing into a big league player. Although he has done little toward aiding the Giants in winning the National league pennant of 1912 and 1913, he will be ready to break into fast company before the middle of the 1914 season if he continues to improve next spring at the pace he has been maintaining the past few months.

Thorpe proved absolutely green, so far as big league baseball was concerned, when he joined the Giants' training camp at Marlin Springs, Texas, early in the spring. Aside from his natural athletic prowess and the ability to drive out tremendous hits when he could hit the ball, he was the veriest kind of a "rookie." He threw like a baby, however, as he was willing and eager to learn, and he has been one of the busiest workers during all the practice sessions of the Giants. He has developed into a fair fielder and field and throws in excellent style. His one weakness is batting. He has yet to get the ball when at bat. Thorpe as yet has not overcome the fault of swinging at everything.

One of the veterans of the team, in discussing Thorpe, said recently: "The Indian is a wonderful natural athlete; a fine, companionable team mate, and has the making of a great ball player. He has learned a lot during the season on the bench, and has shown more improvement than any of the green recruits. Just as soon as he learns to make the pitcher put the ball in the groove before hitting at it he will be ready for the big game. It wouldn't surprise me if he got into the regular lineup before midseason next year. When McGraw thinks he is ready the Indian will get his chance, and it's a hundred to one that he proves a sensation. Mac isn't noted for holding back youngsters who haven't got something."

CHICK EVANS BESTS ENGLISH GOLF CRACKS

Two and Three Strokes Better Than Ray and Vardon--Evans' Partner Loses Match.

Chicago, October 5.—Charles Evans, Jr., formerly western open and amateur champion and medalist in the last two national amateur golf tournaments, today outplayed Edward Ray and Harry Vardon, formerly English open champions, by two and three strokes respectively in a 36-hole, four-ball match at the Riverside Country club; but, owing to the fact that Warren K. Wood, western amateur champion, was off his game, the Britons won the contest, 3 up.

Evans took 148 strokes for the two rounds of the 6,200-yard course, while Ray played 145 and Vardon 146. Wood was stale with his wooden shots and uncertain with his putter, taking 157 strokes for the best ball score of Ray said Vardon was 138, only five strokes better than Evans. Wood's best ball on only two holes and this threw the strain of the contest on Evans' shoulders.

A drizzling rain fell during the first part of the play, but a large gallery followed the players. After a few holes had been played Wood was not up to his usual game, the contest, so far as the spectators were concerned, became largely a competition among Ray, Vardon and Evans for low medal score.

The young Chicagoan more than held his own against the seasoned professionals, although he made only one long putt during the long journey. His approaches were usually excellent and sometimes excelled those of the Britons, and the few times he got into ruts, his recoveries were as spectacular as were Ray's Loose shots from trouble.

Evans and Wood were apparently nervous at the start, and were three down after the fifth hole. The match vacillated the rest of the way, the amateurs squaring the contest on the tenth and going four down at the end of the twenty-first hole. Twenty-one holes were halved.

Ray expressed great admiration for the playing of the amateurs, saying they displayed almost the accuracy of a tempered professional. Vardon was in his humor, complaining that the gallery had cheered and saying that he had nothing to say about the golf of American amateurs.

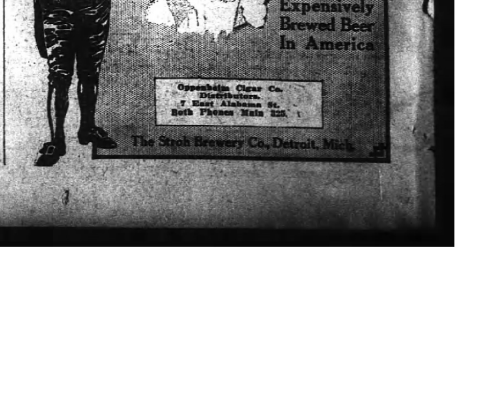
PROVIDENCE TO TRAIN IN BRUNSWICK IN 1914

Brunswick, Ga., October 5.—(Special.) It was decided that the Providence club of the International league will have its spring training quarters in Brunswick next season. Correspondence is now being exchanged between local people and President Navin, of the Detroit American league club, who owns the Providence club, and he has announced that a representative will be sent to Brunswick shortly to look over the grounds. Brunswick citizens ask the club the use of the local ball park and the necessary concessions asked for by the Providence club.



Box Office Receipts Soar Since First World's Series

New York, October 5.—Box office receipts, barometer of interest in the world's series, dollars and cents considered, dizzy heights since the Providence and the Metropolitan club battled for the first world's championship in 1884, staged in New York, the premier drawing card of baseball more than passing interest, was lightly attended and reaped so scant a harvest of receipts that the clubs never even published the figures. Some idea of what they may have been is gleaned from the contest the next year between the Chicago club, of the National league, and St. Louis, of the American association. Seven games were played in four cities, Chicago, St. Louis, Pittsburg and Cincinnati. The first was hot, Chicago won three, St. Louis three and one game was tied. Such a situation in this year's fight for the pennant would result in tremendous box office receipts. Yet only seven games in 1885 yielded but $2,000.

Those were the days when a seat in the bleachers cost 25 and 50 cents provided the best seats in the grandstand. Even this modest admission seems to have kept many enthusiasts away from the games. Not only this, widespread antipathy against baseball in the contests. From their humble origin admission prices have grown to the dignity of $25 for a box seating four down at the edge of diamond in 1913. And before the year leaves it's all that will admit one to the contest. This buys a seat in the bleachers' stand.

Worry Over Seats.

Back in the infancy of the world's series the man who attended a game left his office at the usual hour for the ball game, and scattered among the crowds on the runways to the field and picked out the most advantageous seat he could find. Generally there was plenty of picking. Nowadays he must needs go begging to worry the moment that the day for the series is announced. He knows that he must be there with the spot on the morning of the game—else someone less fearful will reach it out. The line forms the night before and surges into the ticket booths at the time set for the game. If he is late the game is not for him or her.

But the evolution from the days of empty seats to the roaring thousands and the thundering grandstand, packed to capacity, has been gradual. In 1887 when St. Louis and Detroit fought fourteen games over the principal part of the United States—playing in nearly a dozen cities—the box office receipts climbed up to $42,000. Three years later dollars at the turnstiles entered him money. The next year the ten games played between New York and St. Louis brought $24,362 to the box office. Then in 1894, first year of Temple Cup series, the average had climbed to $4,500 a game. Only four games were played that year, two at Baltimore and two at Brooklyn, and the total receipts for the series were $18,000. In 1895 a game record was played, and the receipts rose to $27,000.

No Game for Four Years.

There was no battle for the world's championship pennant between 1898 and 1902. In 1903 the National league and American league pennant winners began the world's series games as they have now played. One hundred thousand persons—colossal figures ten years ago—saw the eight games and paid more than $50,000 for the privilege. There was no game in 1904. In 1905, 91,723 persons saw the games; the price of tickets went up, and $81,000 was taken in. The Polo Grounds came in 1908, when Chicago and Detroit battled for the flag. Over thirty-three thousand persons saw the five games. However, they paid $94,876.

In 1909, 145,295 persons paid $188,-303 to see the games; in 1910, 133,740 persons paid $173,980; in 1911 the contest between the New York Giants and Philadelphia was seen by 179,851 spectators, who left $242,814 at the gate. But the banner year was 1912. More than a quarter of a million persons saw the New York Nationals and the Boston American league club battle for eight games and nearly half a million dollars—$490,445—was taken in at the box office.

Price Money.

With the increase in the cost of baseball came a corresponding increase in the price money of the players. In the first game of the world's series, as now played, in 1903 each of the losing players got $1,182 each and the winners $1,-316.26. Each of the losers' cash, of course, was a high-water mark in players' prize money. The players on the Boston and New York teams divided between them $147,572, 6 per cent to the boss looking. Thus the Boston players averaged $5,269 each for playing the eight games. New York players got $4,-

Details of financial matters in the baseball world since 1903 are given in the following table:

English Women Golfers Invade United States for Open Golf Championship

New York, October 5.—(Special.)—England's invasion of the American sports field will end next week with the playing of the United States Golf association's women's championship at Wilmington, Del. The ladies have said to be represented by three of England's best golfers in the Misses Muriel Dodd, Mabel Harrison and Gladys Ravenscroft. Miss Dodd holds the British title; Miss Ravenscroft was the 1912 champion, and Miss Harrison has been for three years the Irish title holder. All three are golfers of exceptional ability, and are sure to prove dangerous contenders for the United States championship. Should one of the trio win the title tournament it could hardly be termed a novelty in American golf, for Miss Dorothy Campbell, another of the honors in this event in 1909 and 1910. The present American champion, Miss Margaret Campbell, will have achieved similar honors little short of a miracle should she succeed in successfully hold her title against the triple attack of the English challengers.

Why These State Lines?

(From The New York Sun.)

We still go through the formality of having each governor of one state to give up a criminal to the governor of another state, for instance, of Massachusetts, to the governor of Connecticut, on the latter's requisition for the arrest and surrender of a criminal because he has fled from the state. Every great nation has drawn very nigh to every little one in the prompt execution of its law. But the small areas of this great nation, called by the same name, are not as much as far apart as the ends were in the days.

Why should not a way be found to obliterate these petty state frontiers in common witness wanted in the courts and fleeing criminals? In Europe and Pacific oceans do not more divide great nationalities than do the imaginary lines through the fields.

The vexed social problem of this republic will never return to the disserved local sympathies that it grew up from the colonial period.

It is time for a national practice as to marriage and divorce. There is no reason why a marriage legal on one side in Connecticut and Pennsylvania. There are no longer "natural" boundaries. Those tremendous forces, the press, commerce, transportation, have annihilated the vest, tend to a centralization in government that is absolutely called for and retarded.

The people will not much longer submit to state-to-state entanglements that are not to their benefit, but close doors who need technical and costly defining.

Voluntary Convicts.

(From The Indianapolis News.)

Addressing the convicts in the New York state prison at Auburn, the other day, Thomas Mott Osborne, the new official in charge on reform commission said: "I expect that a good many convicts will work hard, and am coming to like like one of you, to be honest." Indeed, he said, he expected to be one of you." Mr. Osborne was to begin the proposed reforms at once, and to make the experience he thus acquires readily available in the management of the state prison.

The best to read book in the Indiana reformatory for several years was and numbers it is so today, was Charles Reade's "It Is Never Too Late to Mend," and it is told so well of the cruelties practiced in English prisons that it helped greatly to bring about the reform of many abuses. In our reformatory for a number of years the prison library was read by the prisoners until the pages were worn out and the book scarcely legible. The prisoners recognized that it was knowledge it was trying to share, and if the officers of the prison read the book they learned about it and were benefited by it.

It is said that the prison chaplain voluntarily left the harness at Auburn and that he was closed on the reverend gentleman and the convicts, who were all looking at one another with a humorous expression, and said each was after his own affairs. Francis Eden, chaplain, came out of the door of the building of confinement with a power he had not before possessed, and his sympathy gained for him the confidence of the prisoners in a way he would never otherwise have obtained it. In this book all the vices and wrongs of the old prison system are vividly presented, and it is not unlikely that Mr. Osborne may, out of personal experience, be able to better the prison practices of today.

Costs of Schoolhouses in Boston

(From The Engineering Record.)

Total costs of forty-seven school buildings in Boston given in the last annual report of the schoolhouse department.

The total costs range from $23,000 to $329,000, the number of pupils provided varying from 160 to 1,832. The costs per pupil are fairly uniform, averaging between 22 and 23 cents, two running as low as 17 cents and one as high as 28 cents. The costs per pupil in the high school are considerably greater, averaging $141 to $208, exclusive of several high school buildings of normal schools, for which the cost per pupil was as high as $340.

The buildings proper cost from 76 to 86 per cent of the total cost, the heating from 6 to 15 (most of them being from 8 to 11 per cent), the plumbing 4 or 5, the electric service from 2 to 3, as low as 2 or as high as 9, and the electrical equipment slightly less.

The Italian supreme court has refused to allow Signorina Teresa Arioto to practice law in that country on the grounds that a woman can not do anything in the life without consent of her husband, and if she were allowed to practice law her husband might withdraw his consent.

There are 247 newspapers published in South Africa, in which $7,586,000 is invested. They give employment to four thousand Europeans and 600 colored people.

C. C. Thomas, Jr., Ft. N.—I have written you once or twice a year for the past two or three years in regard to some questions you have asked as ways found your information very valuable, particularly so as to the mixing and application of home mixed fertilizer for different crops. You will notice from your letter head that I am a farmer, but a retail grocer. Still I have a little farm of 15 acres out the edge of town.

Last fall I gave a good deal of attention. This land is all chocolate ridge land with stiff red clay subsoil, just rolling enough to drain it well, with little rock or stone to get in the way. Turn the rye under and plant corn. Sow and plant in corn again. I use from 400 to 600 pounds of fertilizer per acre, and make from 35 to 45 bushels corn per acre. My rye will grow tall, but hide a rabbit. From now until turning time next May I will keep cattle on this. It is a fine calf pasture and I don't think they can hurt the land badly. Then if I don't keep a crop I will sow on it peas, and never will be so rank at turning time that it will fail to get a good hold in the earth and in good shape for planting.

I have about decided to plant my corn next year and think I will turn under my rye and sow on peas, or in rye clover and timothy. About the same quantity of fertilizer per acre as this year. My piece will

CURRENCY REFORM GOES TO THE FRONT

With Tariff Out of the Way, Democratic Leaders Will Center Efforts on Money Legislation.

Washington, October 5.—Political Washington, relieved of the long drawn out consideration of the tariff, will focus its attention this week on the second of the democratic reform measures—banking and currency legislation.

Though the administration currency bill easily passed the house, its path way in the senate is decidedly full of obstacles. At present the senate banking committee has not yet begun consideration of the measure, although at least ten days more to hear prominent bankers and finance experts. Predictions at the capitol are general that for a month thereafter the senate committee will be at work on the measure, considering numerous amendments.

Divided on Banking Reform.

While there was unanimity of principle on tariff revision, widely divergent views are held by democratic senators on banking reform. A strong desire for a single bank with branches, under government control, instead of a regional reserve system of banks has made its appearance in the informal discussion. Other changes of a far-reaching character are being suggested and it is regarded generally as doubtful if a bill satisfactory to the senate banking committee can reach the floor of the senate before the middle of November.

At the white house there is a confidence that the bill will be passed this session or be placed on the statute books, at an early date, before the first of the year. The president wants thorough consideration of the currency bill and any improvement that the senate can make upon the measure, as passed by the house, will be welcomed. His disposition, however, is to oppose strongly any undue delay for the believes prompt revision of the banking and currency system is necessary to meet the commercial expansion which he expects will follow the operation of the new tariff.

To Decrease Cost of Living.

President Wilson believes a general decrease in the cost of living that will be felt by the rank and file of the country is not dependent alone on tariff revision but upon prompt reform of the nation's monetary system as well as careful amendment of the anti-trust laws.

The president's view of the effect of the tariff is in accordance with expressions from Representative Underwood and other democratic leaders that while reductions in some cases will be immediate, the general benefits will not be apparent at once. Even though the tariff laws might bring many imports into this country at low rates or free of duty, the evils of price fixing, under-selling and other discriminations in restraint of trade might, in the president's opinion, defeat the fruits of tariff reform. Another essential to free competition, in the president's view, is freedom of credit. With the concentration of credit in what the president in his Chicago speech last January described as "an inner circle" even the benefits of trust regulation and tariff reduction can be withheld from the consumer by the stifling of enterprise.

No Advance Effect.

None of the administration leaders entertain the slightest idea that the tariff will have any adverse effect. On the other hand in pushing forward the currency program they have pointed out that an elastic financial system is necessary now that the country is to meet a natural enlargement of business operations, particularly in the exchanges of products at low duties.

At noon on the December session opens, the administration will begin to center its attention on anti-trust program. There is no intention at the white house to draft the administration measure. What is expected to happen is that the members of the house judiciary committee and the senate committee on interstate commerce will confer early with President Wilson and discuss the subject informally. The president hopes that before the anti-trust bills are framed in the two houses, there will be a common agreement on it in the committees.

REPUBLICANS PLAN TO REORGANIZE PARTY

Meeting of National Committee Called—Rules to Be Revised by National Convention.

Washington, October 5.—The republican national committee will meet in Washington on Tuesday, December 16, to confer on party matters and to take any action which may be deemed advisable. A formal call for the meeting will be issued tomorrow. The meeting was decided upon at a conference of Chairman Charles D. Hilles and Secretary James B. Reynolds.

The notice will say: "At the meeting of the executive committee of the republican national committee held in Washington on this date the chairman was requested to call a meeting of the national committee within sixty days after the adjournment of the present session of congress.

"Pursuant to that action, the republican national committee is hereby called to meet in Washington on Tuesday, December 16, at 11 o'clock a. m., to confer on party matters and to take any action which may be deemed advisable."

Rules May Be Revised.

The decision to call the national committee meeting was reached from repeated requests of republican leaders that an opportunity be given to revise the rules of the republican party. The political change demanding a new basis of representation from southern states at national conventions and in the method of electing delegates from states which have primary laws covering that subject.

The New York state republican convention, held recently, adopted strong resolutions favoring the holding of a republican national convention at an early date to accomplish the restoration of party rules.

Senators Jones and Cummins, representing the so-called conciliation committee selected by republican and progressives at Chicago last spring, have been in communication with Chairman Hilles recently, and have renewed the request of the party factions that the national committee take up the convention question at once.

It is expected that the national committee, when it meets in December, will not agree to calling a national convention without protests from some of its members, who claim that the committee itself has ample authority to make the necessary changes in rules and regulations.

Insist on National Convention.

An increased number of republican leaders, however, which includes many in the west, are insisted particularly with party management in the recent past, heavy that whatever changes are made should be authorized by a national convention thoroughly representative and in the sense of all states.

If the national committee decides to call the proposed convention it is expected that it will set a date early in the spring, so that party machinery may be ready for the campaign preliminary to the congressional election next fall. It is expected the convention, if called, would be held in Chicago.

The demand for reduced representation from the southern states was fought out in the national convention last year, but the southern delegations were allowed only a small change. Owing to the small number of republican votes cast in the states south of the Ohio river republican organizations elsewhere have made a constant demand that the basis of representation be changed so that the southern states will not have influence in the national conventions run on the basis of the number of republican votes cast within their borders.

E. S. SKINNER NABBED ON LARCENY CHARGE

Rome, Ga., October 5.—(Special.)—Lindale was startled yesterday when it was learned that E. S. Skinner, who has had charge of the supply room of the Massachusetts mills, He is charged with larceny and a search of his home on Park avenue revealed hundreds of dollars' worth of supplies, believed to be the property of the mills. Skinner admitted his guilt, and said that the goods had been going on for a long time. He gave bond for his appearance in Floyd superior court and states that he will plead guilty when his case is called.

REV. WALKER WELCOMED BY BAPTISTS OF ROME

Rome, Ga., October 5.—(Special.)—Interesting pastoral services took night marked the coming of the Rev. W. H. Walker, of Charlotte, N. C., as the pastorate of the First Baptist church. A union meeting of the several churches was held at which welcome addresses were made by Judge Hilliyer, for the First Baptist church, and by D. McCartney, for the city of Rome, by Dr. G. G. Sydnor for the churches, by Dr. W. C. Dilliard for the Sunday schools and by Prof. L. D. Hogan for Shorter college. The response was delivered by Mr. Walker, who succeeds the late Rev. Dr. R. B. Headden as pastor of the church.

PASTOR DRAWS LESSON FROM BASEBALL FIELD

Muggsy McGraw's Lecture Used as Text for Sermon by Dr. Lincoln McConnell.

On first thought, from religion to baseball would appear a far cry, but the manner in which Dr. Lincoln McConnell wielded the two subjects, in his sermon delivered at the Baptist Tabernacle last night, proved very interesting and instructive indeed.

Dr. McConnell's address was entitled "Winning the Pennant," and was of especial interest to young men, in that the preacher made an eloquent plea for young men to avoid cowardice and laziness, which he characterized as the greatest obstacles to success in life.

McGraw's Talk a Text.

Dr. McConnell's sermon was delivered in part, as follows:

"I had the pleasure some months ago of hearing McGraw, manager of the New York baseball team, deliver an address in Pittsburg. The thing which sticks out most prominently in my memory of the address was McGraw's saying in this: The great baseball general said that the reason so many young players fail in the big leagues is, not because they have not the speed, ability to hit, and head work, but because they lack heart.

"Young men, that is the very point I want to make. The reason so many men, in all walks of life, fail to make good is not because they lack the physical and mental attributes that go to make success, but because they lack the heart, or rather the ambition.

Three Ingredients Needed.

"Desire, purpose and preparation are the three ingredients of ambition. You must make up your mind that you are going to do one thing, and that you are going to do this one thing better than anyone else does it. Then go to it, and don't let anything in the world swerve you from your path, if it is the right aim. Many men fail because they sit around saying that Jones is succeeding, and I have as much talent as Jones, yet I don't get along. The reason they don't get along is that they do not put as much time wondering about Jones.

"It is the same with religion. My young friends, I wish that tonight you would definitely make up your minds to adopt a Christian life. It is the one and only sure way to success. Come to it, and then go to it. Next Sunday night I am going to preach on "Hitting 500," and I want you all to be here. I am not a baseball player, but I know how to hit on a par with Ty Cobb, in my field, and I want you to know, too."

Grand Theater Will Soon Close Its Doors; Future Speculative

After several weeks of operation the Grand ended its season Saturday night, on Saturday night, and until Jake Wells from his New York offices advises, the house will remain dark, except that during this time detailed exhibitions of the world series baseball games will be reproduced by the electroscope.

It appears that the Forsyth will continue to be the home of vaudeville. The successful history of the theatre has attracted much attention, and a season ago, because the Forsyth was not large enough to accomodate the demand for seats, arrangements were made for the Forsyth to be popular. A
