As the hour passed noon, the Solicitor began to show signs of fatigue. His spirit was as indomitable and fiery as ever, but his features grew a bit haggard, and the weeks of tireless work on the case began to display themselves more plainly on his face.

At 1:30 he asked if there might not be a recess, as he was about exhausted. There was a side bar conference between the attorneys for both sides, and Judge Roan announced that adjournment would be taken until Monday.

It was thought likely that Dorsey would finish about noon. The judge's charge probably will occupy an hour or more, and then the case will go into the hands of the twelve jurors.

AUTOIST IS RUN OVER BY HIS OWN MACHINE

JOLIET, ILL., Aug. 23.—Because he cranked his automobile while it was in gear, Harry Lewis, a Joliet banker, was run over and badly injured. Lewis was in a hurry to take some friends to the Union station and neglected to inspect his gears, the machine would not spark the first few whirls of the crank, so he opened the throttle wider, one of the friends put on the exhilarator to help matters, and now Lewis has been two weeks in the hospital.

Policewoman Uses Her Stare as Club

Declares She Has No Trouble With Mashers After One Stern Glare.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Squelch the masher with a look. You don't need a whistle like the Boston women; hatpins do not make good weapons, and a club should be used only in a tight squeeze.

This is the opinion of two of Chicago's policewomen, both long in the business of protecting women.

"I haven't had any trouble with men on the beach this year, even those who didn't know I was a policewoman," said Officer Mary Boyd, who is in charge of the Thirty-ninth street bathing beach. "All you have to do when a man speaks to you insultingly is to look at him. He turns and runs."

Woman Toper Has Thirst Amputated

Obstruction in Her Throat Was Believed Cause of Her Longing For Alchohol.

LIMA, OHIO, Aug. 23.—Mary Calahan, 22, submitted to a surgical operation in the Chief of Police's office today, and it is hoped Mary's thirst was cut out, literally and figuratively.

Several years ago she was shot in the jaw. A splintered bone lodged against her palate, creating a continuous desire for drink. She insists the desire was for strictly alcoholic drink and that she had tried grape juice in vain. Since that time Mary and her tickling bone have given the police a ticklish time.

Chief Ernest May consulted with City Physician Steer. Between them they decided on the operation.

Offers to Serve Out Hawthorne's Term

Pastor-Classmate of Author-Convict Says it Would be 'Utmost Pleasure.'

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—The Rev. William Davis, of Everett, a member of the class of 1867 of Harvard and an evangelistic clergyman, has written his classmates, Julian Hawthorne and William James Morton, in the Federal Prison at Atlanta, offering to serve the remainder of their sentences, and states to do so would give him "the utmost pleasure."

EX-BANDIT GETS RELIGION; COLE YOUNGER CONVERTED

LEES SUMMIT, MO., Aug. 23.—Cole Younger, once a bandit, became a member of the Christian Church at a revival meeting to-night.

Dorsey's Closing Address a Scorching Attack on Frank

Hurls Charges of Perversion and Murder in Face of Defendant While Wife Bows Head and Weeps.

Probably a more stirring, denunciatory, and at the same time incisive and analytical argument, has never been heard in a Georgia court than Solicitor Dorsey's closing address in the case against Leo M. Frank. Here it is as the Solicitor delivered it:

Dorsey moved over to the railing of the jury box as he opened his speech.

"Your honor and gentlemen of the jury," he said, "I was speaking to you yesterday of the character of this defendant. This defendant has not a good character. The conduct of the counsel in this case in failing to cross-examine, in refusing to cross-examine these twenty young ladies, refutes effectively and absolutely the claim of the defendant that he has a good character.

Says Defense Had Right to Refute Charge.

"As I said, if this man had a good character, no power on earth could have kept him and his counsel from asking those young girls where they got their information and why they dsai what they did. Now that's a common sense proposition.

"You know as twelve men seeking to get at the truth that they did not ask those hair-brained fanatics as Mr. Arnold calls them, questions about Frank's character because they were afraid, and those witnesses, as good as any the defense put up, were unimpeached and are unimpeachable. And you tell me that because the good people come here from Washington street and testify to his good character is that he has one!

"It very often happens that a man's wife is the last person to know his wrongdoing. Sometimes the man uses charitable and religious organizations to cover up and hide his evil self. Very often his guilty conscience turns him that way. Many a man is a wolf in sheep's clothing.

"Many a man is a white sepulcher on the outside and absolutely rotten within. But suppose he has a good character. David had a good character until he put Uriah in the forefront of battle that he might be killed that he could get his wife. Judas Iscariot had a good character among those Twelve Men until he accepted those 30 pieces of silver.

"I have shown you that under the law they had a right to bring out all those things. You saw they dared not do it. Let's see what the law says. I'll read here from the Eighty-third Georgia Report:

"'Whenever any persons have evidence in their possession and they fail to produce it, the strongest presumption arises that it would be hurtful if they did, and their failure to produce evidence is a circumstance against them.'

You don't need any lawbook to tell you that. It's plain common sense.

Recalls Case of Oscar Wilde.

"Benedict Arnold was brave. He enjoyed the confidence of all the people and those in charge of the Revolutionary War until he betrayed his country. Since that day his name has been a synonym for infamy. Oscar Wilde, an Irish knight, a brilliant author, whose works will go down through time, gave us 'De Profundis,' which he wrote while in jail—a remarkable work—yet when the Marquis of Queensberry discovered that there was something wrong between Wilde and his son, Wilde had the effrontery and the boldness to sue him for damages. A suit in retaliation resulted in the conviction of Wilde for criminal practices. Yet, wherever the English language is spoken the effrontery of the testimony on cross-examination of this man—an effrontery typical of this sort (turning to Frank)—will always be a matter for deep study for lawyers and for people interested in that sort of degeneracy.

"He had a wife and two children. His shame probably never would have been brought to light but for the fact that he had the effrontery and the boldness to start a suit. It ended in his being sent to prison.

"And the prosecution of Oscar!

"He was a man who led the esthetic movement. He was a scholar and a literary man. His cross-examination was a thing to be read with pride by every lawyer. The whole world took notice of his prosecution, and yet when Oscar Wilde was an old man, gray-haired and tottering to the grave, he confessed to his guilt. Prominent? Why, he was one of the most prominent men in the world! Why, he came to America and founded the esthetic movement here. He raised the sunflower from a weed to the dignity of a flower. He was handsome—one of the handsomest men to be found. He had moral courage, yet he was a pervert, proved and confessed.

"There was a handsome man in San Francisco, a member of this defendant's sect—Abe Ruef, a man who possessed all of the faculties of highest intelligence, yet he corrupted even Smith, and his corruption of the poor girls with whom he came in contact brought him to the penitentiary. I have already referred to Durant. His character did not prevent the jury from convicting him. This defendant's character, like Durant's, is not worth a cent when the case is proved.

"And crime is alike with the rich and poor, ignorant and learned. Take an ignorant man like Jim Conley. He is the man who commits the petty crimes, but take a man with high intellect, like this defendant—this intellect, when put to the right use, leads to glorious accomplishments; but if these faculties be put to the wrong use, it brings ruin to the man in the commission of the most diabolical crimes. Look at McCue, the Mayor of Charlottesville, Va. He was a man of broad intellect and high education, but, despite his intellect, despite his splendid character, he tired of his wife and shot her, and the jury, composed of Virginia gentlemen, broad-minded and fair, despite McCue's good character, found him guilty and sent him to a felon's grave.

"Take the case of Richeson, the preacher of Boston. Here was a man of highest intellect and with a brilliant future. He was engaged to one of the wealthiest and most beautiful girls of Boston, but entanglements with a poor little girl caused him to fear for his good name and he so far forgot his good character as to put this poor little girl to death. Even after his conviction in the last days of his hope he committed an act upon himself which he thought would draw the pity of the Governor and save his life. But a Massachusetts jury and a Massachusetts Governor were courageous enough to let that man's life go. They had the courage which will make every right-thinking man right by the laws of God and man and of his country.

"Take Beattie—Henry Clay Beattie, of Richmond. He was of splendid family, of wealth and proved a good character, though he did not possess it. He took the mother of his 12-month-old baby out in an automobile and shot her. He was cool, calm and deliberate. He laughed and he joked, but he joked too much, and although the detectives were maligned and abused and a large slush fund was used, a courageous, honest Virginia jury upheld justice and sent that man to death. And he never confessed, but he left a note saying he was guilty.

Likens Frank To Dr .Crippen.

"Crippen, of England, a man of high standing and recognized ability, killed his wife because of infatuation for another woman. He hid her where he thought she would not be found, as this man (pointing to Frank) thought the body of that little girl would not be found. But murder will out, and be it said to the glory of old England this man paid the penalty of death.

"Gentlemen, you have an opportunity that comes to few men. Measure up to it. Will you do it? If not, let your conscience say why not.

"But you say you've got an alibi. Let's examine that proposition. Here's an authority: 'An alibi as a defense involves the impossibility of the prisoner's presence at the scene of the offense at the time of its commitment, and the range of evidence must be such as reasonably to exclude the possibility.'

"The burden of carrying this alibi rests on the shoulders of this defendant. They must show to you that it was impossible for this man to have been at the scene of the crime—an alibi, while the best kind of evidence if properly sustained, otherwise is absolutely worthless. I am going to show you that this man's alibi is worse than useless. It is no defense at all.

"I want to give you the definition of an old darky of an alibi. It illustrates my point. Rastus asked old Sam, 'What is this hyar alibi I hear so much about?' Old Sam says, 'An alibi is provin' that you was at the prayer meeting where you wasn't, to prove you wasn't at the crap game where you was.'

"Let's see the time table of the defense. I want to turn it around for half a minute. Then I want to turn it to the wall and let it stay forever.

"'One p. m.—Frank leaves the factory at Forsyth and Hunter streets.

"'1:05—Frank arrives at Bellwood.

"'1:10—Frank leaves Bellwood.

"'1:12—Frank arrives at Alabama and Whitehall streets.'

"How could she be so positive that it was him, if she really saw anyone there? For, mark you, she had never seen him but once. She comes into your presence and tells you the unreasonable and absurd story of seeing him, which is in direct contradiction to Frank's story.

"On this time proposition, I want to read you this. It made a wonderful impression on me when I read it. It's from the speech of a wonderful man. It's from a man in whose presence even lawyers of the type of Ar-

Continued on Page 4, Column 1.

You Can't Be Well When Constipated

"Keep Your Bowels Open"—Doctors Estimate 75 Per Cent of Sickness Due to Torpid Liver.

Some undigested food is left in the stomach daily, which the liver should clear away. A heavy or unusual diet, or a change in water, may cause the liver to leave a few particles to press and clog, and the next day more are left over. So this waste accumulates, clogging stomach and intestines, and causing constipation.

That is not all. If the waste is not eliminated it ferments and generates uric acid, a poison which gets into the blood and through the system.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT immediately flushes the stomach and intestinal tract and washes away every particle of waste and fermentation; it purifies the blood by dissolving what uric acid has accumulated and passing it off in the urine.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is much better than calomel; no danger of salivation, no need of an after-cleansing dose of oil. It acts quickly and mildly; never forces, gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. Take it before breakfast and in an hour you'll feel splendid. Don't take an inferior substitute; some closely imitate the name, but none produces the same result. All druggists should have the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT, 25c. If yours can not supply you, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

P-R-I-N-T-O-R-I-A-L-S
No. 224
The advance agent of Prosperity is in our midst!

Already FALL BUSINESS is "looking up"—already there is a subtle feeling of "GOOD TIMES" in the air. Have YOU prepared to take advantage of the increased opportunities for bigger and better times? Have you given your FALL PRINTING the attention it deserves? Phone for our representative to call. No time like the present to plan your PRINTING.

BYRD
Printing Co.
46-48-50 W. Alabama, Atlanta.
Phones M. 1560-2608-2614.

HUGH DORSEY WINS HIS SPURS IN PHAGAN CASE

FOURTH WEEK OF FRANK TRIAL FINDS INTEREST OF PUBLIC STILL WHITE HOT

Popular Opinion Swayed, First When State Springs Climax With Conley's Story, Again When Defense Put the Accused Man on the Stand.

BY AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The fourth week of the Frank trial came to an end shortly after noon Saturday, with Solicitor Dorsey still far from the finish of his concluding argument in behalf of the State.

Judge Roan announced at 1:45 that he would adjourn the case over until Monday, as he has been doing heretofore, and the Solicitor will conclude his argument then.

The Solicitor had been speaking more than six hours when adjournment came, but apparently was physically able to go on if necessary.

His address, when it is finished Monday, will have been broken into three sections—one Friday afternoon, another Saturday morning, and a third Monday morning.

The Solicitor's address has been so far a wonderful piece of work.

On all sides he has been praised ungrudgingly for the fine effort he has made in behalf of the prosecution.

Atlanta will breathe a long, deep and soulful sigh of relief, however, when the last word is spoken by way of argument and the case is given into the hands of the jury for a verdict.

Leading Topic for Months.

Never before in the history of Fulton County has a criminal proceeding so challenged the unabated and undivided attention of the people.

For four months the Frank case—or the Phagan case, as it more generally is called—has been the leading topic of discussion among all classes of Georgians, rural and urban, rich and poor, high and low, informed and uninformed.

Every figure to the tragedy has been picturesque in the extreme.

Mary Phagan, a sweet young working girl, cruelly murdered; Leo Frank, a young business man of theretofore unblemished character and standing, indicted for the murder; Jim Conley, a negro, a confessed accessory after the fact of the murder, with a long criminal career attaching to him, the principal witness against Frank; Lucile Frank, the loving and devoted wife of the defendant, always at his side, with his mother, cheering and sustaining him; Reuben Arnold and Luther Rosser, two of the leading and most noted lawyers in the South, defending the accused; Frank Hooper and Hugh Dorsey, the former an attorney of established reputation, the latter a brilliant young lawyer lately named prosecuting attorney of the Atlanta Circuit; a presiding judge who has tried many of the most famous cases in the State—these make up the dramatis personae of the Frank case.

Case Fought Stubbornly.

Never before in Fulton County, if, indeed, within the State, has a case been so stubbornly and so bitterly fought as the Frank case.

It required more than three weeks to get the evidence all in. Every inch of ground was contested vigorously and to a finish.

It is estimated that the defense interposed more than 100 objections of one sort and another, as the case progressed, thus fortifying itself as abundantly as possible for an appeal, in the event of conviction.

The only party to the crime, as witness or otherwise, who has not been attacked vehemently one way or the other is the little dead girl, Mary Phagan!

All sides have agreed that, whatever else might or might not be true, the murdered child was blameless—a pathetic and unoffending victim of a brutal homicide.

Frank, the defendant, has been painted by the defense as a bright young business man, perfect in deportment at all times, a loving husband and a dutiful son, irreproachable in character, incapable of criminal deeds and thoughts, persecuted and assailed maliciously by hostile officials seeking reward both by way of fame and material gain!

By the State Frank has been painted as black as the darkest depths of Hades itself, an unfaithful husband, a vicious son, a lustful monster, particularly after young girls; a pervert, a leader of two lives, a designing and crafty monster—an inhuman murderer!

Conley Blamed and Praised.

Conley has been held up both as a witness worthy of all belief and as a witness worthy of no belief whatever—as a negro reluctant to tell the truth originally because of his disinclination to involve Frank, his erstwhile kind and profitable master, but rushing candidly and sincerely to recite the truth eventually, nevertheless, and, on the other hand, as a negro lying from start to finish for no other purpose than to save his own neck from the noose by slipping it over the head of the oppressed Frank.

Lucile Frank, the wife, has been cited both as the faithful and loving wife there at the husband's side in the courtroom and as the shrinking, suspicious wife, early indisposed even to visit Frank in his cell at the jail.

Rosser and Arnold have painted Hooper and Dorsey as direct agents of a wicked and malicious "frame-up against the life, liberty and most sacred honor of Leo Frank, deliberately and designedly seeking to hang the defendant to gratify a misguided enthusiasm and official zeal, if nothing worse; and Dorsey and Hooper have been unsparing in their criticisms of Rosser and Arnold, the paid attorneys of the defense.

An imposing array of witnesses have declared Frank's character both good and bad, while two other arrays of witnesses have sought both to uphold and to break down his alibis.

Medical experts, of repute and fame, have been set up one by one, only to be designated "fakes" and "quacks" by the other side, and vice versa.

Second Charge in Case.

Besides the original charge of murder there was injected into the case, in its early stages, an unspeakable charge of degeneracy.

First this charge went in with the defense's knowledge and consent, and then the defense moved to rule it out. It wasn't ruled out, and the defense then seized upon it and undertook to make a boomerang upon the State.

The State thereupon sought to enlarge upon it, and the State was stopped from doing that.

Three or four days was used up in attempting to show whether boiled cabbage could reach such and such a state of digestion in such and such a time, and after a long wrangle as to that, the defense and the State found that they were not particularly disagreed about the matter, anyway, as it fit both theories like a glove to show that Mary Phagan died within an hour after eating the cabbage.

The defense has contended that Jim Conley and not Leo Frank murdered Mary Phagan, and the State has contended quite as earnestly that Frank did it, and Conley was connected with it only after the exact fashion he swore to.

Looking backward over the trial from the present day point of view, one may see much that appears grimly humorous in the proceedings—and yet there has been nothing bordering ever so slightly upon the humorous, really. On the contrary, the trial has been tragedy piled uncompromisingly upon tragedy, from beginning to end!

Public Swayed Both Ways.

Into all the other complex, puzzling, elusive and sinister details of the mysterious Frank case, a large measure of prejudice was injected as it swept along.

The public has been swung first this way and then that, rushed to one conclusion, only to be rushed as madly, after a bit, to another, until, up one side and down the other, the public breathed, as aforesaid, a large and deep sigh of relief when at last the jury got the matter into its keeping, to unravel it as best it might and to speak the truth of it as nearly and as exactly as human ingenuity and the forms of law can approximate the same.

The State has fought doggedly to one theory: That Leo Frank, shortly after noon on Saturday, April 26, lured little Mary Phagan, for unspeakably immoral purpose, to the rear of the second floor of the National Pencil Factory in Forsyth street, after having paid her her weekly pittance, and there, when she refused to yield to his lustful purpose, he killed her, first by knocking her down and subsequently strangling her.

That after this horribly tragic culmination of a perhaps non-murderous original intent, Frank sought the help of a negro, Conley, with whom he had had previous very questionable relations, to hide the body, and that Conley, already deep in the mire with Frank, consented, and as a matter of fact, did hide the body of the dead girl in the basement of the factory, where subsequently he expected to burn it.

Charges Notes Were Framed.

That after this, Frank and his accomplice returned to the second floor, whereon Frank's office is located, and prepared some illiterate notes, which were placed beside the dead body for the purpose of diverting suspicion both from Frank and the negro.

That the defendant then gave the negro some money for his work, and promised him more eventually.

That Frank's actions following the murder were suspicious enough to permit his retention at police headquarters.

That his general character is bad enough to warrant the presumption that he had lustful intentions toward Mary Phagan, as evidenced by his relations with other women and girls.

That his professed alibis are inconsequential and misleading, and not sustained by facts.

Finally, that Conley's seemingly contradictory attitude is accounted for in two directions, first by his desire to save both himself and Frank, and second by his desire to protect himself against a great measure of responsibility for the tragedy than rightfully belonged to him, when it became evident to him that Frank was preparing to let him suffer just so much measure of responsibility, even to the murder itself, as might be fixed if he did speak.

What Defense Has Claimed.

The defense has fought doggedly to this one theory: That Leo Frank scarcely knew Mary Phagan at all, and that the only time he saw her on Saturday, April 26, was when she came to his office to get her pay; that he never lured her to the rear of the second floor, or anywhere else, for any purpose whatever, and that he never saw her alive after the brief moment she stood in his office on Saturday.

That after she left his presence, happy and unharmed, she passed on downstairs, and encountered Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, whom Frank did not even know was in the building, and who was not supposed to be in the building at that time.

That Conley, then only partially recovered from a drunken debauch of the morning, saw her little mesh bag in her hand, and, being "broke" and wanting more whisky ,he seized the girl, snatched her mesh bag, after knocking her down, threw her into the cellar below through the nearby open elevator shaft, whence later he dragged her to the trash pile in the rear of the building, tied the strangling rope about her neck, either to complete his dastardly work or to create a false suspicion as to the direct cause of her death.

That he then pulled the staple from the back door of the basement and thus made his escape finally from the building.

That all of Conley's story as to how he helped dispose of the body is a fabrication and a monstrous lie, framed for the purpose of shielding himself and placing the blame upon Frank.

That his story was dragged from him, bit by bit, beginning with the falsehood that he could not write, and that it was revised four times, always under oath, before its amazing and incompatible contradictions could be fixed up to stick with any degree of plausibility, and that he was helped in every one of these revisions by all too willing police officers, detectives and court officials bent upon finding in Frank a victim for Mary Phagan's murder.

Claim Negro Wrote Notes.

That the negro himself, of his own motion, wrote the notes he later confessed to having written, hoping thereby to divert suspicion from himself.

That Conley only began his series of contradictory "confessions" after he found that Frank was under suspicion, and thereby realized his (Conley's) opportunity to fasten more firmly upon Frank that suspicion, to Conley's own great benefit.

That Frank's general character is good, in contradistinction to Conley's admitted bad character.

That Frank has set up two unassailable alibis, and could not, therefore, have committed the crime charged.

That his nervousness the day following the murder was occasioned by the manner in which the fact of the murder was communicated to him, and not because of guilt.

That the long and delicate clerical work he did on the afternoon following the murder is proof that he could not then have been agitated by guilt or by any other sinister knowledge.

That Frank, as a matter of fact, knows nothing whatever of the cause of Mary Phagan's death, and is utterly and entirely guiltless of any participation therein.

Two intensely dramatic events marked the progress of the trial—and about them the entire case has revolved constantly.

Conley's remarkable story, containing the unspeakable charge of perversion, wealthy in detail and full of thrill, was the State's big point.

Frank's wonderfully clear, dispassionate and well-sustained statement from the witness stand was the defendant's big point.

These two contrary things have been pitted the one against the other, and upon which the jury finally would accept as the truth the case always has seemed to turn for final adjustment.

Attack Centers on Negro.

Every effort of the defense has been to break down Conley—including two days' unmerciful grilling by Mr. Rosser—and every effort of the State has been toward upholding him.

Every effort of the defense, therefore, has been also directed toward holding up Frank's statement, just as every effort of the State has been directed toward breaking it down.

It ever was Frank vs. Conley—the life of the one or the other as the law's satisfaction for the murder of Mary Phagan!

Regardless of all things else, the public is unstinting in its praise and approval of the brilliant young Solicitor General of the Atlanta Circuit, Hugh Dorsey, for the superb manner in which he has handled the State's side of the case.

It all along has been freely admitted that those two veterans of criminal practice, Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, would take ample care of the defendant.

Two more experienced, able and aggressive attorneys it would be impossible to secure in any cause.

When it was first learned that Rosser and Arnold were to defend Frank, the public realized that the defendant had determined to take no chances. He selected from among the cream of the Georgia bar.

That the State's interests, quite as sacred as the defendant's, would be looked after so jealously, so adroitly, and so shrewdly in the hands of the youthful Dorsey, however—that was a matter not so immediately settled!

Dorsey an Unknown Quantity.

Dorsey was known as a "bright young chap," not widely experienced, willing and aggressive enough, but—

He had been but lately named Solicitor General, and he hadn't been tried out exhaustively.

Maybe he could measure up to the standard of Rosser and Arnold, but it was a long way to measure up, nevertheless!

It soon became evident that Dorsey was not to be safely underrated. He could not be sneered down, laughed down, ridiculed down, or smashed down.

He took a lot of lofty gibing, and was called "bud" and "son" right along—but every time they pushed him down, he arose again, and generally stronger than ever!

Time and again he outgeneraled his more experienced opponents.

He forced them to make Frank's character an issue, despite themselves.

He got in vital and far-reaching evidence, over protest long and loud.

Whenever the Solicitor was called upon for an authority, he was right there with the goods. They never once caught him napping. He had prepared himself for the Frank case, in every phase of it.

The case had not progressed very far before the defense discovered unmistakably that it had in Dorsey a foreman worthy of its most trustworthy and best-tempered steel!

And the young Solicitor climaxed his long sustained effort with a masterful speech, that will long be remembered in Fulton County!

In places he literally tore to pieces the efforts of the defense. He overlooked no detail—at times he was crushing in his reply to the arguments of Rosser and Arnold, and never was he commonplace!

Fixed His Fame by Work.

Whatever the verdict, when Hugh Dorsey sat down, the Solicitor General had fixed his fame and reputation as an able and altogether capable prosecuting attorney—and never again will that reputation be challenged lightly, perhaps!

Much credit for hard work and intelligent effort will be accorded Frank Hooper, too, for the part he played in the Frank trial. He was at all times the repressed and painstaking first liteutenant of the Solicitor, and his work, while not so spectacular, formed a very vital part of the whole case made out and argued by the State. He was for fourteen years the Solicitor General of one of the most important South Georgia circuits, and his advice and suggestions to Dorsey were invaluable.

A noteworthy fact in connection with the Frank trial is that it generally is accepted as having been as fair and square as human forethought and effort could make it.

It may be true that a good deal of the irrelevant and not particularly pertinent crept into it, but one side has been to blame for that quite as much as the other side.

Ruling Cut Both Ways.

The judge's rulings have cut impartially both ways—sometimes favorable to the State, but quite as frequently in favor of the defense.

Even the one big charge of degeneracy, which many people hold had no proper place in the present trial, went in without protest from the defense, and cross-examination upon it even was indulged in.

Unlimited time was given both the State and the defense to make out their cases; expense was not considered. The trial has lasted longer than any other in the criminal history of Georgia. Nothing was done or left undone that could give either side the right to complain of unfairness after the conclusion of the hearing.

It is difficult to conceive how human minds and human efforts could provide more for fair play than was provided in the Frank case.

MRS. LEO M. FRANK plainly showing the strain as Solicitor Dorsey arraigned her husband. Below is Mrs. Rea Frank, the defendant's mother, who also betrayed her agitation.

English Housewives Plan Bacon Boycott

Hope to Force Down Price by Abstaining From Buying for Fortnight.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The "English breakfast" is threatened with dire disaster. London housewives are preparing to boycott the toothsome "rasher" because of the continued high prices ruling for bacon.

They plan to refuse to buy bacon for a fortnight, beginning to-day. Enormous quantities are likley to remain in the hands of the wholesalers and prices are expected to come down with a rush.

Optimists predict a drop in price of at least 6 cents a pound.

Cost of Living Up in Britain 14 Per Cent

Prices of Foodstuffs Except Tea and Sugar Have Risen at Remarkable Rate.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Striking figures showing the increased cost of living are contained in a voluminous report issued by the British Board of Trade, according to which present prices are the highest in twenty-five years.

Retail prices of food have risen 14 per cent since 1900, while wages have increased only 3 per cent.

Prices of almost all foodstuffs, except tea and sugar, have risen, the greatest increases being in bacon, 32 per cent, and potatoes, 46 per cent.

People have been able to meet the advances only by reducing consumption.

CASTLE TO BE HOME OF TRAMPS OF GERMANY

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—Here is perhaps a bit of news which will be of interest to some of America's "Wandering Willies." A ruined castle at Merlenhausen, Saxony, is about to be restored by the local authorities, who will use it as a free rest house and night shelter for tramps from all parts of Germany.

Mail-Wooed Bride On Journey to Coast

Millionaire Ranchman Is Given Fine Recommendation by Pastors of His Neighbor.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Theresa Patterson, a handsome widow, aged 30, of Allentown, Pa., is nearing Los Molinas to-day, a journey of 3,000 miles across the continent, to become the bride of Charles H. Smart, a wealthy rancher, after a romantic courtship by mail.

Clergymen in Los Molinas and Allentown gave each a clean bill, the former stating that while Smart is not a millionaire, he is worth nearly that sum and would make a home happy for any woman of his choice.

The marriage is to take place immediately upon Mrs. Patterson's arrival.

5-Cent Fraud in Ice; 5 Days on Rockpile

Portland Dealer Is Sentenced for Cheating Customer in 25-Cent Transaction.

PORTLAND, OREG., Aug. 23.—Five days at the rockpile for a 5-cent fraud in the sale of a piece of ice was the sentence imposed by Municipal Judge Stevenson upon Thomas Barnes, proprietor of the National Ice and Coal Company.

Barnes delivered a 40-pound piece of ice worth 20 cents, saying it weighed 50 pounds and charging 25 cents.

RUSS SERFS JOLLY, BUT LAZY, SAYS VASSAR GIRL

Special Cable to The American.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 23.—Miss Texter, a graduate of Vassar College, who has been making a tour of Saratoff and Simbirsk, typical agricultural provinces of Russia, to study the land question, has been telling the Russian newspapers the peasants impress her most by their good temper and dislike for work.

For summer complaints

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is best. It will keep your stomach and bowels in fine condition to do all the work called for, thus avoiding or relieving cramps, dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, malaria and stomach troubles.

The genuine Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY, by druggists, grocers and dealers. Should our friends for any reason be unable to secure it in their locality, we will have it shipped to them from their nearest dealer, express prepaid (cash to accompany order) at the following prices:—

4 Large Bottles, $4.30.
6 Large Bottles, $5.90.
12 Large Bottles, $11.00.

ABSOLUTELY PURE & UNADULTERATED TRADE MARK

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey should be in every home and we make the above announcement so that you may become familiar with a source of supply.

Remit by express order, postoffice order, or certified check to

The Duffy Malt Whiskey Company,
98 White St., Rochester, N. Y.

I Cannot Possibly

Impress upon your minds (through the newspapers) the importance of calling to see me when your teeth need attention. Give me a trial and learn for yourself how fair and honest I treat you—how my methods are ABSOLUTELY PAINLESS, and my prices MUCH LOWER than any other Dentist in Atlanta. I can assure you that it will be a pleasure to you to recommend me to your friends after you have once tried me. I employ no students. Each doctor has had from 5 to 18 years' experience and is thoroughly versed in my painless methods.

MY WORK IS GUARANTEED FOR 15 YEARS

They Must Fit
$5
A Set

Terms: WELL, DON'T WORRY. THESE ARE ARRANGED TO SUIT.

Best Service for Least Money

They Never Slip or Drop.

SETS OF TEETH ..... $5.00 UP
GOLD FILLINGS ..... 75c UP
SILVER FILLINGS ..... 50c UP
BRIDGEWORK $3, $4, $5
GOLD CROWNS ..... a TOOTH

DR. WHITLAW, Painless Dentist

Largest and Most Thoroughly Equipped Sanitary Office in the South. Phone M. 1298.

73½ WHITEHALL ST.

SOLICITOR'S CLOSING ARGUMENT A MASTERPIECE

DENOUNCES DEFENDANT AS MORAL PERVERT AND LAUGHS ALIBI TO SCORN

Prisoner Likened to Oscar Wilde, Pastor Richeson and Beattie---Charged With Committing Murder to Hide Evidence of His Crime Against Girl.

Continued From Page 2.

nold and Rosser would take off their hats.

"I refer to Daniel Webster and his argument in the Knott case. 'Time is identical, days, hours, are not visible to any of senses except to the schooled. He who speaks of days, hours and minutes talks at random.' It is better than I could express it. What about this time? In this table here, minutes are moved up and down, contorted and twisted to protect this man. They say he arrived at the factory at 8:25. Frank himself in his first statement said he arrived at 8:30, and poor Jim Conley, lousy, filthy and dirty, said he arrived at 8:30, carrying a raincoat, and they tried to make it appear he didn't have one. If the truth is ever known, he tried to borrow that raincoat of Ursenbach's to create the same impression.

"Mattie Smith at 9:20 (quoting from the table), and Frank and Mattie Smith both say 9:30. He called Schiff at 10 o'clock (reading again), and yet this man with all his mathematical precision and accuracy at figures, said he was at Montag's at 10 o'clock. They say he arrived back at 11 o'clock, but in his first statement he said it was 11:05. At 12:12 they say Mary Phagan arrived at the factory.

"Oh my, they have to do it. Like the rabbit in Uncle Remus, they're 'just 'bleeged to do it.' Move the minutes up or back, for God's sake, or we are lost!

"But to crown it all! In the table which is now turned to the wall you have Lemmie Quinn arriving not on the minute, but, to suit your purpose, at from 12:20 to 12:22. What evidence conflicts with the statements of Miss Freeman and the other young woman, who put him there before 12 o'clock."

Arnold—Your honor, I must interrupt. No such evidence was ever brought out. Those young women testified that they left the factory at 11:45 and that they saw Lemmie Quinn at the Busy Bee Cafe considerably after. Mr. Dorsey says they saw him at the factory before 12 o'clock.

Dorsey—No, your honor, I didn't say any such thing. They didn't see him there, and I don't think anyone else did.

The crowd laughed.

Arnold—Your honor, have we got to take this whole crowd into this case?

Judge Roan—Gentlemen, there must be order or I will clear the courtroom.

Dorsey—Find the records. They will show I am right. I have got Lemmie Quinn's affidavit. I am just arguing this case on the evidence.

"Jim Conley is a liar, is he? He said Quinn was there and that he was there before Mary Phagan came. Frank had a mighty hard time remembering whether Quinn was there. When Quinn saw him at the police station and said he had been there, Frank said he would have to see his lawyers before deciding whether or not to make it public.

"Is Jim Conley telling the truth or telling a lie? You can't go hot and cold on him. Why was it Frank wanted to consult his lawyers?"

Arnold—I will find the record.

Dorsey—Yes, you can find it. You can find where Quinn swore half a dozen ways. He was the most anxious witness I ever saw on a stand, except for old man Holloway. He would tell that he was there if Frank said tell it. He would keep quiet if Frank said no.

"Oh, gentlemen, let me read you what a great lawyer said on this sort of evidence. I read the words of Judge Lochrane:

"'I do not take the mere words of witnesses. I take their acts.'

"And while I am on this subject I want to read you another opinion:

"'Evidence given by a witness has inherent strength which a jury can not disregard. But a statement has none.'"

Arnold: "Now, your honor, I have found the records and it bears out just what I said."

Arnold read from the testimony of Miss Corinthia Hall that she and Mrs. Freeman went to the pencil factory at 11:35 and left there at 11:45.

Arnold: "Mr. Dorsey asked her the question, 'You saw Lemmie Quinn at 5 minutes to 12 o'clock?' Answer: 'I don't remember what time it was. He told us he had been up to the factory and saw Frank. He said he was going to the matinee.'

"Lemmie Quinn swore several times he was at the factory at 12:20," Arnold continued, "and here it is that he said that he was in a pool parlor at 12:30, just after leaving the factory."

Judge Roan: "Mr. Dorsey, have you anything in contradiction to that?"

Dorsey: "Yes, I have plenty; that doesn't scare anybody."

Arnold: "I just want to call attention to the glaring errors. The little ones I don't care anything about. I won't interrupt him except on glaring misstatements. Life is too short."

Dorsey: "Yes, you will. You will interrupt me every time I am incorrect. You are too shrewd, too zealous to let anything go by. Don't tell this jury you are going to let me say things that are incorrect.

"Here is your table turned to the wall, having the time of Lemmie Quinn's arrival at 12:20. I have an affidavit here of this pet foreman of the metal department. He said he got there at from 12 to 12:20. Those girls went out of the factory at 11:45 o'clock. They walked up a block and down a block to the Busy Bee Cafe. There they saw Quinn.

"In the name of goodness, if Frank, according to his own statement, could leave the factory at 1:10 o'clock and get home at 1:20, couldn't these girls walk up a block and down a block and see Quinn in fifteen minutes?

"I know it hurts, but this table here which puts Lemmie Quinn at the factory from 12:20 to 12:22 is a fraud on its face. There is no greater farce in this case than their straining at this particular point, with the exception of Billy Owens' pantomime. And, oh, what a farce that was!

"Gentlemen of the jury, you need not try to consider their attempts to be accurate about the time Quinn says he was there, for Lemmie says himself he could not be positive. He says he thinks he got there some time between 12:20 and 12:30.

Mentions Girl Who Would Die for Frank.

"Ah, gentlemen of the jury, whenever a man gets to swearing too definite and too specifically about time, then the words of our friend Webster, which I quoted to you, are right—'He is not to be relied upon.'

"And can you truly consider the words of a man whom your reason tells you is straining to set the exact time?

"But let's pass on from this. I will not take the time to read you everything that Lemmie says he did. Let's pass on to the perjury charge which Arnold has so flippantly made. You saw these witnesses upon the stand. You heard their words. You noticed their manner, their attitude and their interest.

"Why, one of these ladies from the factory wanted to die for this man Frank."

A titter of laughter ran around the room, and deputies were forced to rap for order.

"When did you ever know of an employee being so enamoured of her employer that she was willing to die for him, if their friendship was purely platonic? I know enough about human nature—I know enough of the passions which surge in the breast of mortal man—to know that this poor woman's anxiety to put her neck into the noose to save him were born of something besides platonic love.

"When you see a woman so passionately devoted to her employer—so anxious to die for him—you may know and you can gamble on it that there is something stronger there than platonic love. It must be a passion born of something beyond the relation which should exist between a married man—an employer—and his woman employee.

"Ah, gentlemen of the jury, we could have got witness after witness who would have gone upon the stand and sworn things about this man. There were people who would have perjured themselves. There were witnesses who came upon the stand for the deefndant who on the face of their testimony perjured themselves.

"Take this little Bauer boy. Remember his testimony before he took that automobile ride with Montag to the office of Arnold & Arnold. Before dinner he could remember each detail, but after dinner, after he had taken that ride with old Sig Montag, he had a lapse of memory. Old man Sig must have told this little boy about the Hard Shell preacher down in South Georgia who had his congregation pray for rain. They prayed and prayed, and after a while, like old Sam Jones would have said, the Lord sent a trash mover, a gully washer.

Boy Must Have Overdone It."

"It rained and it rained until they had more water than they knew what to do with. Then the old hardshell preacher said: 'Brethren, it looks like we have a leetle overdone it.' So Montag must have whispered into Bauer's ear, 'You have a leetle overdone it.'

"And, after dinner, this little boy didn't know anything. But was that all? Why, gentlemen of the jury, before dinner that boy even remembered where his watch lay.

"Do you believe that? Talk about perjury! Willful foolishness, because an honest jury knows that it was not true. They brought in that machinist Lee. He was willing to swear to anything and there was not a man in the sound of his voice that didn't know he was telling an untruth. He wrote and signed a statement about Duffy's injuries. I brought it here and it was written in typewriting and didn't even have his name on it.

"They thought we could not find Duffy and thought you didn't have sense enough to know the first thing you do in a case like that is to wrap something around it to stop the loss of blood.

"I have never seen a case yet where women were so suborned as in this. Take this woman Fleming, his stenographer. They put her up and she swore Frank had a general good character. She only swore to what he had done in her presence when they cross-examined her. We don't contend Frank tried to seduce every girl in the factorwy. But he did pick them out. He picked out Mary Phagan and was called.

"Gentlemen, he got the wrong girl and he was called. And this stenographer said she only knew what he did to her. She testified that Frank's business Saturday morning was to make out the financial sheet. Mr. Arnold said immediately he didn't have time and she jumped at it like a duck at a June bug. Mr. Arnold was so nervous he would not let me finish the cross-examination, and interpolated that remark to guide her.

"It was unfair and not according to law and practice. But he got away with it. And then she turned right around and in the next breath said that she had never said Frank was working on the financial sheet Saturday morning.

"Oh, gentlemen, can you let a poor little girl go to her death and set her murderer free on such evidence as this? If you do, it is time to stop going through the process of summoning a jury.

"Perjury! When did old man Starnes and Pat Campbell stoop to that. And suspicions! Why didn't we get old man Lee and Gantt instead of Frank? Why didn't we get Conley? We tried it, but there was absolutely no case against either. But there is a perfect case against this man. But, oh, you cried 'Perjury.' But it is not worth fifteen cents until you put your fingers on something specific.

"And here, gentlemen, right before your very eyes, in black and white, the testimony ofthis woman, Fleming, shows that they perjured her.

"Do you tell me when that factory closes on Saturday afternoons that this man with the handsome wife that he possesses, this college graduate, who likes to read and play cards, who likes to see baseball games, would spend his time there, using the data that Schiff prepared on Saturday afternoons when he could do it Saturday morning? No, sir. Miss Fleming was right. She didn't stay there to work often on Saturday afternoons."

The jury was allowed to retire for a few minutes. When they returned, Dorsey resumed his argument.

"Now, gentlemen, I submit that this man made that lnance sheet Saturday morning. I am not going to fatigue you with my reasons. It is unnecessary. If he did make that sheet on Saturday afternoon, he did it thinking of an alibi. But don't tell me that because he might have done this on Saturday afternoon with a penmanship that showed no nervousness proves an alibi.

"If he could go home into the bosom of his family after such an atrocious crime, he could have made that sheet. But he wouldn't have done it if Schiff had not gotten up the data. He had done it fifty-two times a year for five or six years. If he would do additional work on that Saturday afternoon, it could only have been with a sinister purpose.

Witness Afraid Even to Identify Handwriting.

"In speaking of perjury, his mother said anybody ought to identify his handwriting.'

Dorsey held up the photograph of the sample of handwriting Frank wrote for the police.

"Yet the man they put up to identify his handwriting was so afraid he might do Frank an injury that he wouldn't venture a guess. Grant that he did go home to his wife and those old people—his parents-in-law—and maintain a stoical countenance. Grant that he did make that sheet, which he could make up with his eyes shut. Grant that he did unlock the safe, a thing that he had done every day for years.

"But when he went to run the elevator; when he went to nail up that back door; he wavered; he paled when he talked to the police, and trembled on Darley's knee as he rode to the police station.

"He could sit in the hall and read a joke about a baseball umpire, but the frivolity annoyed the visitors at his home. It was the same kind of frivolity Henry Clay Beattie displayed when he stood beside the automobile that was stained with the blood of his wife. His joke was uttered only in annoyance; it jarred.

"But whether or not he made up that financial sheet, while waiting for old Jim to come and burn the body, one thing I grant he did. Don't forget the envelope; don't forget the way the letter was quoted, that letter he wrote to his uncle in Brooklyn, that letter that begins: 'I trust that this finds you and dear Tants well.' His had no wealthy relations in Brooklyn! That old millionaire uncle was mighty near there when Frank told old Jim Conley: 'Why should I hand? I have wealthy relatives in Brooklyn!'

Dorsey finished reading the letter and then said:

"Here is a sentence pregnant with significance. It bears the earmarks of a guilty conscience. He wasn't trembling when he wrote. He is capable and smart, but here is a sentence that is a revelation. Here is a document I concede was written after Little Mary Phagan, who died for virtue's sake, was lying mutilated in that dark cold basement."

At this juncture Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan, began to cry.

Dorsey read from the letter:

"'It is too short a time since you left for anything startling to have developed down here.'

"'Startling' and 'too short a time.' Those are the words that incriminate. That little sentence itself shows that the crime was committed in an incredibly short time.

"Tell me, honest men, courageous men of Georgia, that this phrase penned to his uncle that afternoon did not come from a stricken conscience. 'Too short a time since you left for anything to develop down here.'

"What do you think of that, honest men? Then notice what he writes about the thin, gray line of veterans facing the chilly weather, as if that old millionaire uncle of his traveling around Germany for his health, as if he cared for these old heroes in gray! Ample and reliable authority says that over-expression is an indication of guilt. Tell me that this old man, who was just preparing to sail for Europe, cared for these old heroes in gray—this wealthy old man who wanted to see the financial sheet. 'Too short a time'—yes, he said it was too short a time for anything to develop down here. But, gentlemen of the jury, there was something startling to develop, and it happened within the space of 30 minutes. There is nothing new in the factory to report, but there was something new in the cellar. There was something to report, and the time wasn't too short for it to happen.

"You tell me that letter was written in the morning? Do you believe it? Why, they haven't even tried to say that. I tell you that that letter shows on its face that something startling had happened, and I tell you that that rich uncle did not care the snap of his finger about the thin, gray line of veterans.

"Ah, yes, he had wealthy relatives in Brooklyn. That's what old Jim Conley said he told him. And his people lived in Brooklyn, and old Jim never would have known that if Frank had not told him. And they had at least $20,000 in cool cash in the bank; and he had a brother-in-law employing two or three people, at least, and we don't know how many more. And if his rich uncle was not in Brooklyn, he was near there.

"All right, let's go a step farther. On April 28 he wired Adolph Montag at the Imperial Hotel in New York: 'You may have read in Atlanta papers of factory girl found dead Sunday morning in cellar of pencil factory.'

"Yes, gentlemen of the jury, in the cellar of the pencil factory. There's where he placed her, and that is where he expected her to be found. And the thought of it welled up in his mind that Monday morning, April 28, before he had been arrested, and he wired Montag forestalling what he knew would certainly and surely happen unless the Atlanta detectives were corrupt and would suppress it.

Compliments Detectives.

"But, be it said to your credit, Starnes; to your credit, Campbell, and you, too, Rosser and Black, that you had the manhood and the courage to do your duty and roll the charge up to this man, protected as he was by wealth and influence.

"And notice what else he said in this telegram. Notice the credit he gives to the police: 'The police will eventually solve it.' And be it said to thec redit of the Atlanta police department, they did solve it. 'Assure my uncle I am all right in case he asks. Our company has case well in hand.' Maybe he did think when he got that fellow Scott that his company had it well in hand.

"I tell you there is an honest man—this fellow Scott. If there was a slush fund in this case—and witnesses have said there was no such fund—this man Scott could have gotten it. Not at first, maybe, but he could have gotten it later on. But Scott knew his duty, and he has done it. No wonder Frank could telegraph that his company had the case well in hand, for Scott's first words could not have suited him better had he wished for them. They were, 'The Pinkerton's always work arm and arm with the police.' This suited Frank well. It was just what he wanted. He wanted to know what the police thought he wanted to know what they were going to do, and this worked well, until the chain began to tighten.

"And Haas—and he is nobody's fool—when he sa wthe trend of the case, he opened the negotiations; he gave Scott the opportunity by saying, 'Now let us have what you get first.'

"But let us pass on from that. You ell me that letter and that telegram are not significant? That the work pn this financial sheet is no significant? That Schiff's testimony as to the work on that financial sheet is not significant?

"Frank himself was not satisfied. He is as smart as his lawyers, too. "He realized that he would have to go out and beyond the evid nce, because he knew it was all bunk; and he tried to show you that he did write the financial sheet. Frank did write that letter Saturday afternoon, and he did write that telegram Monday; but he did not do any work on the financial sheet after Saturday at noon. I ask you twelve men if those documents and letters don't bear the impress of murder?

"And they still cry perjury. I just thought of another case, when that man could not identify Frank's handwriting that his own mother said was his. That was perjury, and there was perjury in the testimony of Bower and Lee. Mrs. Carson said she had worked there three years, and Arnold asked her a question that he would not ask a younger woman. He asked her about seeing blood around the toilet and in the dressing rooms. She said she saw it there very often. Then she talked about Conley being on the fourth floor that Monday. I pinned her down to say that Frank was there at the same time. It was then that Frank leaned over and said, 'Be a good boy, Jim,' and Jim, remembering his wealthy relatives in Brooklyn, and his promises of money, said 'Yes, sir, boss; I will.'

"Surely the officers could not suborn Conley at that time. And she says she never saw the blood by the water cooler; she said she didn't look at it because she didn't like to look at things like that. But another lady on the stand says she did go back and look at it; that she was with her.

"But back again to Conley. If he had committed that crime and had not had Leo M. Frank and his promises back of him, would he have gone back to that factory every day and remained there until Thursday? They said they were going to put up all the girls on the fourth floor. But they didn't do it until we called their four-flush and put up witnesses who corroborated their witness, Miss Jackson, about the misconduct of this man.

"Miss Small, also on the fourth floor, corroborated Conley. She said she saw him on the fourth floor Monday. Now, why did Frank go to the fourth floor so often Monday and Tuesday? Because he knew Conley was up there, and he wanted to be sure the negro was not talking. Conley told Miss Carson that Frank was as innocent as an angel in heaven. We said he was purely doing what he had promised to do—protect his employer. Mr. Rosser characterized the statement as a dirty suggestion. It was, and I accept it, but it is true; and you men would not sit here and see that negro hang for a crime Leo M. Frank committed.

"When Conley went up to the second floor in response to Frank's signal, Frank said, 'Did you see anything?' and he said, 'I saw two girls come up, but there ain't but one of them come down.' And then Frank knew that he would have to take this negro into his confidence.

Shaking his finger at Frank, Dorsey continued:

"And you told old Jim Conley to protect you! And he tried to do it. It is infamous to try to have Jim Conley hanged for a crime that Leo Frank did. Gentlemen, I haven't got to the State's case yet; I am just cutting away some of the underbrush this defense has planted in this forest of oaks. They have played the detectives. The only thing to the discredit of the police department is that it allowed itself to be intimidated by the influence of this man and his friends and his big lawyers.

Didn't Have Courage To Put Frank in Cell.

"When they took him down there guilty of this red-handed murder they didn't put him in a cell like they did Newt Lee and Jim Conley. It took time for them to get their courage up to the point of locking him up as he should have been. Old John Black—Mr. Rosser likes to brag about what he did to him but he didn't make so much off of him after all. Black's methods are somewhat like Mr. Rosser's. If Black had had Frank in the position that Mr. Rosser had Jim Conley, this whole trial might have been obviated with a confession."

Dorsey turned and pointed at Frank.

"You didn't get counsal a moment too soon. You called for Darley and you called for Harris; you called for Rosser and Arnold, and it took them all to bolster up your nerve. Gentlemen of the jury, you know I am telling you the truth. The only thing against the police is that this man, who had just snuffed out the life of this little girl, was given too much consideration. His able counsel and the glamour of wealth that surrounded him, overawed the police. I had nothing to do with it, but I honor them for the way they went after Minola McKnight. I don't know whether they want me to apologize for them or not; but do you think that in protecting the people from such crimes as this the detectives are acting like they are at a tea party?

"Should they have the manners of a dancing master? If you do, you don't know anything about it. Once get an old 'possum dog on the trail, and you can't call him off. So it is with Starnes and Black; they knew Albert McKnight wouldn't have told those young men at the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company that story about his wife unless it were true. They went after Minola. They stuck to the trail. They smoked her out. Minola's friends got a writ of habeas corpus. Do you think if Mr. Haas had come to me with a writ of habeas corpus to release Frank I would have done it? I would have said it was none of my business.

"The next time the police have to use strong methods in an effort to protect the people by going after a red-handed murderer, I won't usurp their authority or the authority of the judges. I haven't anything to do with the police department, or the functions of the judges. I am responsible only for the office of Solicitor General for the term to which I was elected. I honor Mr. Charley Hill; I am as proud that I have succeeded him as I am that I was given this place by a vote of the people. He was honorable and strong; but I tell you gentlemen, no man is my pattern; I follow the dictates of my own conscience."

Tears Come to Dorsey's Eyes.

Mr. Dorsey raised his voice and tears came into his eyes.

"If there is one thing I am proud of during my term of office, it is that I joined hand and glove with the police; and when your influence (turning to the defense) tried to get Jim Conley indicted by the grand jury, I stood out against it. If that is treason, make the most of it. If you don't want me to do it, get somebody else.

"Mr. Hill was a noble man. He had the courage of a Caesar and the eloquence of a Demosthenes. I have wished a hundred times that he was here making the speech to you that I am making.

"He would have stripped the hides off of you (pointing to the defense). Such talk as that doesn't terrify me. It doesn't disturb the serenity of the conscience in everything I have done in the prosecution of this man. Let's get back to the talk on perjury.

"Don't get up here and call everybody a liar without giving the specific instances. Take the evidence of Mrs. Small. She said she saw Frank and Miss Rebecca Carson walking along and that she stopped Frank and had him O. K. a ticket. She said it was Miss Rebecca Carson she was with. She says that Mrs. Carson was not there at all. Mrs. Carson said she was there. Mrs. Small said she saw Conley standing up there by the elevator and that Frank must have seen him—that Frank passed within 4 feet of him. She says that Jim was doing nothing; that he was standing by the elevator with his hand on a truck.

"Mrs. Small also tells us that the elevator shook the entire building. She said he couldn't helped but hear it if the machinery was not running. She said: 'You might not hear it if the machinery was in full operation, if you were not paying attention to it, but if you listened you could hear it.'

"Now here is another thing. Mrs. Carson had already sworn positively that she never went back into the metal room to see that blood. Mrs. Small said that on Wednesday a crowd of them from the fourth floor went down out of pure curiosity to see those spots, and when I asked her who went with her, lo and behold the first person she mentioned was Mrs. Carson. She said she was sure she was there; she knew she was there. And when I asked why they went there, and why Mrs. Carson went there particularly, she said 'Curiosity sent us.'

Somebody Has Lied, Dorsey Asserts.

"Now, gentlemen of the jury, somebody, and I put it up to you, has lied. If this case is founded on perjury, it has been boiled until the pot is black.

"The truth is, there has not been a single instance where evidence was needed that someone has not come in to bolster it up.

"Now, let's pass on a little bit. I want to discuss briefly the writing of these letters found beside the body of the girl. If these letters were not the order of an overruling Providence, I would agree that they were the silliest things I ever heard of. But, gentlemen of the jury, these notes bear an intrinsic knowledge of this crime.

"This man Frank, by the language of these notes, in attempting to fix the guilt upon another, has indelibly fixed it upon himself."

The Solicitor repeated this statement.

"The pad, the paper the notes were written upon; the fact that there was a note fixed the guilt upon him. Tell me that a negro who, after having killed a white girl, ravished and outraged her, would have taken the time to have written these notes? And even if he did write them, would he have written them upon a scratch pad which is found only in an office?

"You tell me that a man like Jim Conley would have ravished this girl with the knowledge that Frank was in the house? You tell me that this Jim Conley, even though he has been as drunk as a sot could be, would have taken the time to write these notes?

"I tell you, gentlemen of the jury, it can not be true.

"You say that the fact those notes were written was foolish. It was foolish, but it was a mistake. Murder is a mistake. What man ever committed murder who did not make a mistake? And what man making the greatest mistake in the world would not make a lesser mistake in trying to cover up? Those notes were the lesser mistake.

"Scott said that when Leo M. Frank talked to him about the girl coming to the factory and asking him about the metal that he said, 'I don't know.' And now he says that he told her, 'No.' Arnold recognized the damage in the statement 'I don't know' getting in.

"Language of Notes Clears Conley."

"Leo Frank said in his statement again and again 'chatting and 'chat.' Conley said that when Frank told him he wanted to watch for him that Frank said he wanted to have a 'chat.' Jim Conley said here time and again, 'I have done it,' but in the notes found near the body he said, 'did it.' Do you tell me that negro would have written the word 'did' unless it was dictated to him?

"Do you tell me that negro won't have taken the time to carry that girl away back there and hide her body if he had knocked her down the hole, and then stopped to write those notes?

"No," shouted Dorsey, turning to Frank, "that child was murdered on the second floor and you wanted to get her into the cellar, just like you found her in the cellar, as you said in that telegram to Montag.

"Conley said once in his statement that when he met a man on the street that he knew, the man looked at him he though he though 'I done it.' Conley used that expression at least twenty times. He said 'I done it' when he closed the door, and in several other places I can't find just now. He didn't use the word 'did' one time.

"In the first note, the expression 'I went to make water and that long tall black negro pushed me down the hole.' You knew that toilet was back there on the second floor (addressing Frank), and you knew that was where that little girl met her death. And you knew that metal room was right back there, too.

"You tell me that negro would have written those words. Where was it she was going to make water on the first floor? Yet you tell me there is nothing in circumstantial evidence when these things creep in.

"When you wrote this note (turning to Frank), you said yourself that you had the original of the note before you, and you said yourself that you knew Conley could write because he had written you time and time again, trying to borrow money, and yet you sat there with the original of that note before you and Conley's own handwriting, the handwriting you had seen often enough to be familiar with it, and you didn't tell those officers that Conley wrote the notes.

"I don't want you to convict this man unless you believe him guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, but I don't want you to let your verdict be governed by the opinion of a crank, but the facts.

"Arnold and Rosser would say frequently, 'Are you going to convict this man on that, on this?'—selecting some little isolated point.

Chain Strong Enough To Hang Anybody.

"'Well, I don't want you to, but on all the facts—the chain that is unbroken and not by isolated instances, and I say that when you take them all together you have a cable that ought to hang anybody.

"I don't ask that he be convicted on this isolated instance or that, but all bound together make a cable that is as strong as is possible for the ingenuity of man to make.

"I don't know whether the statement of Frank's will rank along with that statement of the celebrated pervert Oscar Wilde, or not. He is brilliant. If you take his statement and just follow it you never would convict him. You never would convict anyone that way. But listen to this: 'I sat in my office counting over the money that had been left over.'" Dorsey read from Frank's statement.

"He wasn't talking about the petty cash," Dorsey continued. "He was talking about the money that had been left over from the payroll of $1,100. We don't know to this day how much that was. We don't know how big a roll it could have made, though Jim Conley said he saw a roll of $200.

"And he was trying to get old Jim to go down into the basement and burn the body of that little girl. Just as sure as the smoke curled from that stack toward the heavens, old Jim would have been there without a shadow of a defense. Frank would have been there with the detectives. Jim would have hanged for a crime that this man committed in his lust.

"But old Jim was too wise. He wrote the notes, but, drunk or sober, he wouldn't be entrapped like that. I do not doubt that when Frank handed him that roll of money it was like the kiss of Judas Iscariot when he kissed the Saviour, and then betrayed Him for 30 pieces of silver.

"I am going to show you that this man had long planned not murder, but to get this little girl to yield to his lust. Let me do it now.

"Back yonder in March this little Turner boy saw him making advances to Mary Phagan. Did that innocent little boy from the country lie? This little girl that came here from the Home of the Good Shepherd, she heard Frank speak to Mary Phagan and put his hands on her. She may have lost her virtue, but she is nothing but a child. Did she lie, this little girl?

Quotes From Same Poem as Rosser.

"Then there is Gantt. He quit the factory rather than make good a dollar that was charged he was short. Did he lie about Frank's inquiring of the little girl? Yesterday Mr. Rosser quoted from a poem of Bobbie Burns, the line was, 'Tis human to step aside.' I want to quote a line from that same poem, 'There is no telling what a man will do when he has the lassie.'

"When convenience is snug, I tell you gentlemen, there is no telling what a pervert will do when goaded by his passion. You tell me this brilliant young man, who looked over that payroll 52 times a year, saw the name of Mary Phagan every time, then when she was dead had to get his books to find out her name? He coveted that little girl way back in March. I have no doubt those little girls swore the truth when they said they saw him making advances. I would not be surprised if he did not hang around and try to get her to yield. I would not be surprised if he didn't get Gantt out of the way because he was an obstacle to his scheme.

"He knew the day before she was probably coming. He went and told old Jim Conley, who had watched for you so many Saturday afternoons while you and Schiff were making up that finance sheet. When Helen Ferguson came and asked for Mary Phagan's money, I wouldn't be surprised if he did not refuse to give it to her because he had already told old Jim to come and watch.

"Frank's plans were fixed. Ah, gentlemen, then Saturday comes, and it is a reasonable tale that old Jim tells. He says, 'I done it just like this.' He doesn't say, 'I did.' He says he 'done it' just as the brilliant factory superintendent told him to. This thing passion works in a terrible way. Good people don't know how the mind of a libertine works. They don't know of the planning, plotting and waiting. Way back in March Frank had his eyes upon her. He was infatuated with her and did not have the will power to resist.

"You can twist and wabble all you want (Dorsey turned to Frank and shook his finger at him), but you told Detective Scott that you did not know her. Notwithstanding what you have said here, notwithstanding what your witnesses have said, you knew her.

"And tell me, gentlemen of the jury, has this little Ferguson girl lied? Has she been suborned by Starnes? Has she come here and deliberately perjured herself? I tell you that is a charge that can not stand. His refusal to give Helen Ferguson Mary Phagan's envelope is an indication that he was plotting. And old Jim Conley's tale will stand, for Frank himself corroborates Conley in many things.

Dorsey Attacks Frank's Statement

"'1 p. m.—Frank leaves the factory.' It looks mighty nice on the chart. Turn that chart to the wall, Mr. Sheriff. Let it stay turned to the wall. That statement is refuted by the defendant himself when he didn't realize the importance of this time proposition.

"Frank's statement at police headquarters, taken by G. C. Febuary on Monday, April 28, says. 'I didn't lock the door that morning. The mail was coming up. I locked it when I started home to lunch at 1:10 o'clock.'

"Up goes your alibi, punctured by your own statement when you didn't realize its importance. Yet these honorable gentlemen, for the purpose of impressing your minds, print in big letters on this chart he left the factory at 1 o'clock. If he swore when he was on the stand the other day that he left the factory at 1 o'clock it was because he saw the importance of this time point, and had to leave there ten minutes earlier than he said he had at the police station before he had had time to confer with his lawyer, Mr. Luther Z. Rosser."

AN ANNOUNCEMENT OF VITAL IMPORTANCE TO PIANO BUYERS

THE WESTER MUSIC CO., 64 Peachtree Street, Desire to Announce the Opening of Their "Once-a-Year" Clearance at 8:30 Monday, August 25.

PIANOS OF HIGH GRADE AND ACKNOWLEDGED REPUTATION

Our Entire Stock Sacrificed—Everything Goes—Nothing Reserved—Every Person Interested in the Purchase of an Instrument Should Read Carefully, As It Concerns Them Most.

PROMPT ACTION WILL BRING REWARD

This Is Our Annual Clearance Sale of Fine Pianos—Your Opportunity to Save From $100 to $250 in Your Piano Purchase. Terms Are Made as Pleasing as the Prices. Opening Evenings.

In announcing this gigantic clearance sale of fine pianos, uprights, grands, player pianos and organs, we wish to take the piano buying public into our confidence, making a plain statement of facts, telling our good reason for sacrificing our entire stock. All thoughtful people realize the fact that in conducting a business the magnitude of ours, that a great number of discontinued styles, sample pianos, rental pianos, etc., will accumulate during the year, besides countless numbers of good used pianos taken in exchange for grands and players. They are in first-class condition, and must be disposed of to make room for large shipments of fall goods already beginning to arrive. In order to open the fall season with an entire new stock, we have decided to inclose in this sale every instrument in our building, grands, uprights and players, including such well-known makes as A. B. Chase, Chickering & Sons, Knabe Brothers, Ivers & Pond, Kurtzmann, Kranich & Bach, Bush & Gerts, Hoffman and others. In players, A. B. Chase Artistano (grands and uprights), Emerson Angelus, Kurtzmann Angelus, The Angelus, The Auto de Luxe, The Autopiano, Koehler and Newton.

Such an array of high-grade instruments, numbering between 350 and 400, has never been offered before to the good people of Georgia. Remember, nothing is reserved, and in order to move this stock in a limited space of time we have reduced the price in many cases from one-third to one-half the original prices. All these points taken into consideration makes it possible for any family to have an instrument in their home, as our low prices and easy terms place them within reach of all. Your credit is good at The Wester Music Company. If you do not care to pay cash we can arrange terms to suit your convenience.

One Price; Plain Figures.

Every piano will bear two tags, one will be our regular one price tag, the other the clearance sale tag. Thus you may see at a glance just what can be saved on your purchase. Look for the blue tag.

Here are three sample pianos. Large size mahogany cases, fully guaranteed. Instruments must be seen to be appreciated. Regular price $275, your choice $127.

Three standard grade upright cabinet grands, mahogany, oak or walnut; fully guaranteed. Regular price $300, your choice of three different styles and makes $187.

Five standard makes. Five large size uprights, mahogany or oak cases, new styles, guaranteed for ten years, regular price $350, your choice $226; $10 cash and $6 per month.

Five large size cabinet grand upright sample pianos, mahogany or dark oak cases, fully guaranteed, regular price $375. These are going at $246; $10 cash and $7 per month. They are new.

Six large size uprights; your choice oak or mahogany case; guaranteed for ten years; three different styles and makes; regular price $375. They are standard makes. Your choice for $268. Easy terms.

Five large size cabinet grand mahogany cases; three different styles and makes; guaranteed for ten years; regular price $400; your choice $276; $15 cash and $7 per month. They are new.

Ten large size uprights, mahogany cases, different styles and makes, guaranteed for ten years; regular price $450, sale price $292. Easy payments can be arranged.

Four large size, mahogany cases, best makes; fully guaranteed; regular price $500; slightly shop-worn, but absolutely perfect. They will be taken quickly at $293.

Six large size upright cabinet grands, high grade mahogany and walnut cases, regular price $550, your choice $308, $312, $318. Fully guaranteed.

Three high grade grand pianos, mahogany cases, regular price $700, $750 and $800; your choice for $468, $612 and $642. Guaranteed for ten years. They are new. One Steinway slightly used, good as new. Beautiful mahogany case, regular price $1,150. Must be seen to be appreciated. Will be offered at our regular discount. If you intend a grand piano, don't miss this opportunity.

Nine player pianos, mahogany cases, some of them slightly shopworn, but in first-class condition. Some are new. They are guaranteed for five years. The best makes are included. Regular prices, $550, $600, $650, $700, $750 and $800. All 88-note and new styles. Your choice, $418, $368, $396, $436, $487, $512. You must see the pianos to appreciate the values.

One large size mahogany case player piano, one of the best makes, regular price $850, slightly used. A big bargain for $296.

Fifty slightly used upright pianos. Oak, walnut, mahogany and ebony cases. Included in this lot will be found Vose & Sons, Hallet & Davis, Kranich & Bach, Painter & Ewing, Packard Conway, Bush & Gerts; Knabe Bros.; Sterling, Whitney, Cooper, Hoffman and others. Many of them are as good as new. They are all in splendid condition. Former prices ranging from $350 to $550. Your choice for the last from $75 to $268. They are guaranteed and you can make no mistake in selecting any one of them. Any second-hand piano that we sell will be taken back within one year and apply the price as part payment for a new piano.

Second-hand Organs.

Twenty-seven organs, including Carpenter, Estey, Wilcox & White, Packard, Chicago Cottage, Kimball, Mason & Hamlin and others. Former prices from $65 to $125. Your choice for $12, $17, $21, $26, 28, $31, $37, $42. All in good order and guaranteed.

Every instrument can be found on our floors and our personal guarantee goes with each instrument. Remember that we can arrange easy terms if you don't care to pay cash. Out of town orders given special attention.

Any purchaser living nearer Macon than Atlanta will find the same bargains at our store, No. 157 Cotton avenue, Macon, Ga.

Store will be open evenings.

THE WESTER MUSIC COMPANY,
64 Peachtree Street, Atlanta, Ga.
157 Cotton Avenue, Macon, Ga.

THAW BASES HOPES OF ULTIMATE FREEDOM ON ENDLESS LEGAL TANGLE

POEM THAW WROTE IN MATTEAWAN

MATTEAWAN, N. Y., Aug. 23.—The following verses were written by Harry Kendall Thaw in his room at Matteawn and found in the waste-paper basket beside his reading table last December:

"There are lights aflame on Broadway,
There are hopes and lives undone;
There are debts of sin no man can pay,
And Broadway hates the sun.

"There are vain regrets on Broadway,
There are secret sighs and tears;
For one must smile as well as pray,
And the weakling meets with jeers."

Fugitive From Matteawan, Backed by Family's Millions, Will Utilize Every Technicality to Prevent Deportation From Dominion of Canada.

SHERBROOKE, QUEBEC, Aug. 23. With Harry Thaw's case now in the courts of Canada, the prediction made that it would be months—years, perhaps eternity—before the slayer of Stanford White is again in the jurisdiction of New York State is strengthened.

His family, wealthy and powerful, has rushed to his defense. He has unlimited resources to fight the legal battle against his deportation from Canadian soil. When the first writ of habeas corpus was granted, it assured him the right to appeal his cause to the highest Canadian court.

It is believed that this litigation can be made to last over years. It will be impossible to deny him bail in the Dominion, for he is a lunatic only in New York State. His status now is that he is simply considered an undesirable by Canadian immigration authorities, who, it is thought, may override the courts and deport him.

Should the courts of Canada finally rule against him, his case might be taken up from Washington. Even then if he were finally deported, should he be sent to any other State than New York, he could fight extradition there, and there are many eminent lawyers who believe that it is absolutely impossible to bring him back into New York then.

Probably Considered These Facts.

All these things probably had been considered when Thaw made his daring escape from Matteawan Asylum, when he dashed across the Connecticut border, then through the State into New Hampshire and from New Hampshire into the Dominion of Canada.

Thaw knows well the law's delay. He remembers his long period in the Tombs before he was first brought to trial for the slaying of White. He remembers the long fight for life and liberty then. He remembers the enforced wait after the first mistrial. He remembers the weary days of his second hearing.

He remembers the slow progress of his cause during his legal efforts to get his release from Matteawan Knowing these things and recognizing that there was hardly a bare possibility that bail would be denied him, he turned toward Canada rather than seek safety at sea, as his pursuers thought he surely would do.

It was probably due to this realization that he accepted his arrest at Coaticook, Quebec, coolly and that he awaits the issue of his habeas corpus proceedings just as coolly now.

Secures Talented Lawyers.

He is represented in his application for habeas corpus proceedings by W. L. Shurtleff and Colonel H. R. Fraser, one of the most talented lawyers of Eastern Canada. He is thoroughly buoyed up in the belief that the Canadian Government will never order his deportation or extradition.

"I have studied every legal phase of my case and have arrived at the belief that I am safe here," said Thaw. "My plans did not alone include my physical escape. I looked into the legal feature to establish my status in any other State than New York and any other country than the United States. I am not a dangerous man. I do not seek vengeance. My wife, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, need not fear me. Nor need anyone else fear me.

"All I want is peaceful and legal liberty. I feel that I am perfectly safe. I have studied law ever since I was admitted to Matteawan, and I believe that I am qualified to speak in this matter.

"Statements to the effect that I only sought liberty to kill are senseless They are so ridiculous that I won't talk of them. I have the kindest feelings toward the people of Canada, and will retain such feelings, no matter what action the Dominion Government takes, but I hope that they do not deport me. Detention in an insane asylum is a living death. It is enough to make a maniac out of a perfectly sane man."

Refuses to Betray Friends.

Asked for a detailed story of his flight, he refused.

"Yes, I was the man they spotted in Lenox, Mass., said he. "But from that point on I must say nothing. I won't betray my friends."

Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, sister of Thaw, arrived soon after his arrest and immediately sought her brother. Thaw sent word to Roger O'Mara, the Pittsburg (Pa.) private detective, who has been his counsellor since youth, to rush here on the first train.

He said that he wanted to get the fight over with. His first trepidation came with the news that District Attorney Conger, of Dutchess County, New York, and Dr. Kieb, of the Matteawan Institution, would come to cooperate with the United States authorities in an effort to have Thaw deported bask to New York, or extradited.

Plans for the court battle in Thaw's behalf were carefully made by Mr. Shurtleff and Colonel Fraser and hopes to have his release ordered by Judge Globensky and plans to leave immediately for Quebec if he gets out. He intends to sail for France if he gets his freedom, so that he will be sure to be safe. Ultimately he hopes to have his legal freedom established so that he can return to Pittsburg.

Contend Thaw Is Tourist.

Among the grounds upon which the Thaw lawyers put into their plea for their client's liberty is that he is only a tourist passing through Canada, and they point to the case of Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, as a precedent.

They contend that Johnson was under conviction of an infraction of the United States law, whereas Thaw has not broken any law. They contended that Johnson was a fugitive from justice, whereas Thaw is a fugitive from an institution for the insane.

They pointed to Thaw's behavior to uphold the contention that no matter what his condition in the past, he is now sane and rational. The facts that Thaw has not broken any Canadian laws and that no indictment exists against him across the border were emphasized. Thaw offered many suggestions to his lawyers and in a way seemed to be their pilot. He looked very solemn and impressive as he gave his opinions of his own case.

"My idea is that speed is the requisite thing," Thaw told them.

News Unnerves Prisoner.

The Canadian Government and the United States Government were both represented by able counsel who resisted Thaw's efforts to gain his liberty on a writ of habeas corpus. They contended that the law governing Thaw's case is very plain and they pointed to precedents.

In fact, it was reported that Acting Superintendent of Immigration Blair in Ottawa had been counseled by the Ministry of Justice that Thaw should be deported at once. When Thaw heard this report he trembled and became pale. He was unnerved by the news and showed it.

The presence in Sherbrooke of the most spectacular and sensational prisoner in the world made a gala occasion. Not one of the Provincial fairs which are being held throughout Eastern Canada at this time could vie with Thaw as an attraction. Great crowds came into Sherbrooke from the surrounding country.

Families gathered about the jail, hoping to get a glimpse of the well-known prisoner if he was taken to the courthouse. Some came a distance of 100 miles to see Thaw. The street on which the jail is located was jammed.

Glad to Please Curious.

This curiosity tickled Thaw immensely. He said he did not want to disappoint anyone who really wanted to see what he looked like.

Mr. Shurtleff was resentful against Justice of the Peace Dupuis, of Coaticook, who held Thaw on the charge of being a fugitive and sent him here for further examination.

"We contend that Justice of the Peace Dupuis acted illegally," declared Shurtleff. "He exceeded his authority. He had no right to hold Thaw."

Colonel Fraser assured Thaw that conspiracy is not an extraditable offense and that he need not feel any great alarm over the fact that a warrant charging Thaw with conspiring to gain his liberty is on its way here from Dutchess County. He did not give such optimistic assurances about deportation, however.

Thaw lost no time in arranging to secure cash. He telegraphed to a banker relative in Pittsburg (where the bulk of the Thaw fortune is invested) to send him money to fight his case.

Thaw faced the habeas corpus hearing coolly and confidently. Before going to court, he ate a hearty breakfast and dressed with minute care, evidently realizing that he would be gazed on by thousands on the short ride from the jail to the courthouse.

Smuggling Claim Advanced.

He had prepared a number of notes to guide his lawyers in their conduct of his case, and was evidently disappointed when they did not seem to give these notes great consideration.

An investigation of the manner in which Thaw came into possession of a railroad ticket for Detroit, Mich., is being made. The Dominion authorities are not satisfied that Thaw bought the ticket himself.

It was learned from an authoritative source that immigration officers who are here plan to arrest Thaw on the ground that he smuggled his way into Canada if he gets his freedom on a habeas corpus writ.

The village of St. Hermenigilde, where Thaw and his companions came into Canada from the United States, is not a port of entry.

Evelyn Thaw, Fearing Death, Breaking Down Under Strain

'How Can He Say He Loves Me When He'd Let Me Starve?'

LATEST photograp of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw posed especially for The Sunday American at her hotel in New York where, it is said, she is near a breakdown rfom fear that her husband will regain his liberty and attempt to do her violence, and a photograph of Harry Kendall Thaw, taken in his cell at Matteawan from which he escaped to aCnada, where he is using every legal means to prevent his deportation to the United States

Copyright by INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

PHOTO BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

'He's a Paranoiac,' She Screams—Describes Her Sacrifice.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is breaking down under the fear that Harry K. Thaw may evade the law and succeed in reaching her. There were visible evidences of the strain under which she has been laboring since he escaped from Matteawan last Sunday when a Sunday American reporter saw her last night in the Hotel Brevoort.

Thaw's declaration from the jail in Sherbrooke that her return to the stage had prompted him to make a dash for liberty and that he loved her more than anything else in life were called to her attention.

"Good God!" she exclaimed "How could that man say he loves me when he would have let me starve in the streets?"

"Do you love him?" she was asked.

"Love him! I love him as much as he loves me," was her derisive reply. "He wanted to keep me down after I had testified and sold my soul for him and I had done everything that a human being could do for a man; and now he makes this maudlin statement about love.

Never Knew Love's Meaning.

"He is a paranoiac, and he doesn't know what love is. He has never known the meaning of it as long as I have known him. As for taking care of me as any man who loved a woman would do, both he and his mother them me out, after I had saved him from the electric chair.

"Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw entered into an agreement with me at the time of the trial to provide me with $12,000 a year on condition that I would consent to an annulment of our marriage. I did consent, and the papers were drawn. Then his mother repudiated it. That was in June, 1912, and I have received no money from them since that time.

"Before that date I had received $70 a week and my rent. I had to dispose of pictures and scrape and save to live, and I finally came to the conclusion that I had something within myself, that I could prove I possessed the gift of making my own living, which is a gift after all.

Breaks Into Tears.

"I thank God that I have that gift or his mother would be jeering at me in the gutter," and Mrs. Thaw broke into tears.

"He wants to spoil my life and my work," she continued, turning to John Reilly, her counsel, who was in the room. "I told you that if I made a success he would want to injure me, and here he has stated that my success was the thing that impelled him to break for his liberty. He wants to injure me and he will bend everything to that end.

"I told you also," she added to her lawyer, "that he would not be free long before he would betray himself through his excessive egotism.

"But there is worse coming if he retains his liberty. Things will begin to happen when he gets his drink. He is going to do something desperate, I know, just as surely as I could foresee the things I have referred to. Wait until he gets drink in him—it is horrible to contemplate!" And Mrs. Thaw again broke down and sobbed.

"Desperate and Dangerous."

"Don't you think that you may be exaggerating because of your overwrought state of mind?" was asked.

"I wish it were so," she replied. "But anyone who thinks Harry Thaw will not be a desperate man when he gets the opportunity to satisfy his appetite for drink, knows nothing of him. I know him. Dr. Flint knows him. Judge Jerome knows him. He will be a desperate and dangerous man.

"This great State ought to be ashamed of itself to allow a paranoiac to make and unmake its institutions. Thaw was permitted liberties that no man in his position had ever before enjoyed. Thaw has not done it, it has been the Thaw money.

"Do you know that when I used to see him in the Tombs he used to be drunk on Scotch whisky? Let the Tombs officials deny it if they dare. I know it and they know it. Harry Thaw told me he could get all the liquor he wanted there."

Mr. Reilly warned his client that she was overtaxing her strength, but she persisted in unloading her mind.

Old Graveyard Must Give Way to Railroad

Milwaukee Line Is Compelled to Move Old Burial Ground Near For Alcohol.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Aug. 23.—Among various other activities the Milwaukee Railroad people have found themselves engaged in rebuilding their line across Iowa is that of moving a cemetery.

In securing a right-of-way near the Des Moines River it purchased an old burial ground, one long since abandoned. Among the bodies the railroad men have removed is one that had been buried seventy-five years. The remarkable state of preservation of clothing and lack of decay of the bones after such a long period has been a source of surprise to the men exhuming the bodies.

U. S. Officer Invents Airship Destroyer

Balloon Equipped With Explosives and Wire Feelers Will Protect War Craft.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Joseph Steinmetz, a retired lieutenant of artillery in the United States army, has just perfected an invention that is likely to interfere greatly with the effectiveness of the aeroplan in naval warfare. Steinmetz is now negotiating with the War Department for the use of his invention. It consists of a captive hydrogen ballon suspended over either an arsenal or battleship. It carries a large quantity of explosives, which would be touched off by any aircraft coming in contact with wires extended from it. The airship would at once be blown up.

Couple Will Re-wed To Gain $1,000,000

Ceremony by Mormon Judge Is Called Unsatisfactory by Administrators of Estate.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—In order to comply with the wishes of the administrators of the $1,000,000 estate of her father, the late Thomas R. Lamb, of Edinburgh, Scotland, Mrs. Anna B Lamb-Wilson must be married to her husband again.

The husband is E. Douglas Wilson, of this city. He pursued Miss Lamb more the Pennsylvania Rubber Company, of an 10,000 miles across the United States and over the Pacific Ocean before he married her in Honoluiu last April. The ceremony was performed by Judge Hernandez, whom Wilson says is a Mormon. This marriage, though legal, did not meet with the approval of the administrators.

Edwin Booth Saves Lillian Russell

Rescuer Is Only Nine and His Playmate at Maine Resort Was Drowning.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug. 23.—Edwin Booth saved Lillian Russell from drowning at South Harpswell when she fell from the wharf. Both are summer visitors.

Edwin is 9 years old, and the son of Charles E. Booth, of Yonkers, N. Y., while Lillian is 13, and the daughter of Charles A. Russell, of Boston. Edwin, her playmate, was fully clad, but he dove into the ocean like a veteran, drawing the girl to safety.

Thieves Warn, Then Rob Rail Station

Telephone Central Office They Had Looted Pay Phone, Then Steal Instrument.

NYACK, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Before carrying away the telephone from the Stony Point station of the West Shore Railroad last night, thieves telephoned to the central office to say that they had robbed the office and telephone coin box. The operator thought some practical joker was at work and paid no attention to the man who called.

This morning it was found that the money drawer at the station had been robbed of 75 cents in cash, and from the telephone box had been taken about $3 in coins. The thieves also took the telephone.

WOMAN POLITICIAN IS MAD.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Countess Elizabeth Emilie Von Wedel, a Frenchwoman and a former "political agent," who was quite a celebrity, has been placed in a German asylum for the insane.

SCHOLAR BARES HOSEA FAMILY'S SKELETON NOW

University of Chicago Professor Declares Prophet Took Wife as Horrible Example.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Hosea's family skeleton has come to light, if not to life. The domestic scandal of ancient Israel's prophet has been removed from its closet, scoured with higher criticism and rattled in the face of Biblical scholars, who were perfectly willing to let it rest. Professor J. M. Powis Smith, of the University of Chicago, exhibits it in an article on "The Marriage of Hosea," in the current number of The Biblical World.

Hosea's wife, Gomer Bath Dibiaim, is the villainess of the story reconstructed by Professor Smith from the account of her marriage to the prophet, and in the first three chapters of the book of Hosea. Professor Smith asserts that Gomer, contrary to the usual interpretation of the Scriptural account, was a person of evil reputation before the wedding ceremony was performed.

Prophet Knew His Faults.

Professor Smith adds to his version the fact that Hosea knew of Gomer's faults and took her "with his eyes open." In short, the prophet married Gomer with the curious purpose of making the match a horrible example to the rest of the Israelites, he asserts.

The marriage was to impress Israel with the fact of its own disloyalty to God.

According to the professor's view, the belief that "Hosea, as a young man, fell in love with Gomer and married her, supposing her to be all his youthful imagination fancied her to be," that she later left his home to live with another man, that he bought her back and then become a prophet, will not hold water. The scholar declares that this version is founded on an imperfect notion of the physiology of prophets.

Professor Smith asserts that the wife's name, which means "Gomer, daughter of Fig Cakes," signifies that she was held in low esteem. He retranslates several words in the Biblical account and gives the following as the proper version:

"Hosea, a prophet already burdened with the sense of his people's sin, felt himself called upon by Yahweh to marry a lewd woman, to the end that through such a marriage he might open the eyes of Israel to the enormity of its offense in being disloyal to Yahweh, its rightful lord. In pursuance of this conviction, Hosea bought Gomer, a woman living in public shame with her paramour.

Placed Her Under Restraint.

"But he at once placed her under restraint, denying her association with himself as well as with others, and seeking by such discipline to fit her for her position as his wife. This phase of the experience was interpreted for Israel as meaning that she as Yahweh's bride must be disciplined by exile before she could expect to enjoy any further favor from Yahweh.

"After this period of restraint for Gomer she was taken by Hosea into his home and became the mother of three children. Each of these in succession was given a prophetic name, and, like Isaiah's children, became a walking sermon to Israel just as the institution of marriage itself had been."

Hard Fall Re-sets Dislocated Spine

WIMINGTON, DEL., Aug. 23.—An expenditure of $16,000 and treatment for years in sanitariums in Germany and Paris failed to accomplish what a fall downstairs did. Mrs. William Helm, of Ellendale, Del., was cured of a dislocated spine in this unusual manner. The fall forced her spine into place. To-day she says she is well.

Her head is bandaged, but she was able to preside over a recent meeting of the Ellendale Ladies' Social, of which she is president.

SENT FREE TO MEN

A Most Pleasing Remedy Given to Quickly Restore Lost Vitality.

A Free Trial Treatment Sent by Mail To All Who Write.

Free trial treatments of Enervita, a most pleasing remedy, are being mailed to all men who write to Dr. John S. Howell. So many who had battled for years against the mental and physical suffering of man weakness have written thanking him for the great benefit received, therefore, Dr. Howell has decided to send free trial treatments to all men who write. It is a home treatment, and all who suffer with any form of weakness, resulting from youthful folly, premature loss of strength and memory, weak back, lack of vitality and confidence can now receive this strength giving treatment at home.

The treatment has a peculiar grateful effect of warmth and seems to act direct to the desired location, promoting strength and development just where it is needed. It is given to relieve the ills and troubles that come from years of misuse of the natural functions, and has met with remarkable success, even in cases approaching advanced age. A request to John S. Howell, M. D., Suite 1221, Auditorium Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, stating that you desire one of his free trial packages, will be complied with promptly.

He is desirous of reaching that great class of men who are unable to leave home to be treated, and the free sample will enable them to see how easy it is to successfully treat man weakness when the proper remedies are employed. Dr. Howell makes no restrictions. Any man who writes will be sent a free sample and literature, carefully sealed in a plain package, so that you need have no fear of embarrassment or publicity. Readers are requested to write without delay.

Small Expenses Small Profit

This Advertisement Is Worth 50c

AT THE

Royal Shoe Shop

86 N. BROAD, NEAR LUCKIE ST.

This week, in order to introduce our new lines of Goodyear Welt and English Welt Dress Shoes for Men and Women, we will sell for

$2.50

If offered at our store, together with this advertisement
ONE PAIR TO A CUSTOMER
Our extra quality shoes as described above

ALL LEATHERS—Gun Metal, Kid, Russia and Patent Colt. ALL SIZES, All New Goods.

Made by one of the Greatest and Best Manufacturers in this Country.

We Make a Specialty of Comfortable Work Shoes for Mechanics and Workingmen

Certainly! We Sell EDUCATOR SHOES for the Whole Family

No reasonable offer refused on the remainder of our Low Shoes in stock. Come while the coming is good.

SAVE HALF A DOLLAR

The ROYAL SHOE SHOP

IRISH RAISE HUGE FUND TO ASSURE HOME RULE

American Hibernians Respond Liberally to Appeal Made After Great Demonstration in Chicago Against England's Domination.

Another Feature of Meeting Was Adoption of a Resolution Condemning Great Britain's Policy Toward U. S. in Canal Dispute.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Following the gigantic demonstration for Irish home rule at the thirty-eighth annual picnic of the United Irish Societies of Chicago, held in Brands Park, sons of Erin here are confident that in a few weeks American Hibernians will have raised a fund that will insure the home rule for which they have fought so long and which they have almost brought about.

Fifteen thousand persons visited the park during the day and they responded liberally to the call for funds with which to carry on their campaign. Three thousand dollars was raised at that time and the fund has grown steadily since.

A feature of the occasion was the reading by James T. Clark, president of the United Irish Societies, of a telegram from William Randolph Hearst, in which he warmly favored home rule. The president was quick to reply, expressing the thanks of the societies for the co-operation they have received in their work from Mr. Hearst's papers.

British Canal Stand Scored.

Another important feature of the day was the resolution prepared in advance and passed by a unanimous vote, opposing the British contention over the Panama Canal tolls.

The resolutions strongly uphold the views of the United States that this country, having built the canal and paid for it without aid, should have the right of passing her own ships through it without paying tolls, and that this action of the United States is entirely within its rights as a nation and is not subject to the criticism of any other nation.

The work of John Redmond, parliamentary leader, in forcing the home rule bill to the verge of final passage also was commended highly.

One of the most impressive features of the occasion was the exhibition of a full-size model of the statue of Colonel F. Finerty, the famous soldier-journalist and a son of whom Erin is very proud.

Colonel Finerty wrote the story of the Custer campaign against old Sitting Bull, and the massacre in which Custer's whole command was wiped out. In his later years Colonel Finerty was editor of the Irish-American, and devoted all his energies to the home rule campaign, now so nearly won.

Work of Irish Sculptor.

The splendid statue of the old fighter is the work of Professor Charles J. Mulligan, of the Art Institute, a pupil of MacMonnies and Saint-Gaudens.

Among the speakers who addressed the enthusiastic throng were United States Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon, former Attorney General Maurice T. Maloney, P. H. O'Donnell, Joseph E. Ryan, John T. Sutton, of Lincoln, Neb., and Harry W. Smith, of Springfield, Ill.

In part, Mr. Maloney said: "We of the Celtic race have always struggled for a place in the sun, and have made a good deal of history, but we have been accused in the past of not being quite what we ought to be in the old country, and did not act to our own interest. English misgovernment and oppression were solely to blame for this.

"Now I can see a new Ireland rising above the horizon, a nation once again. The Irish people had advanced with giant strides, now that the long tribulation of our night is passing away."

Senator Twists Lion's Tail.

United States Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon said:

"My people came to this country to avoid persecution in the mother country, persecution by the English Government. Ireland had no measure of freedom in those times."

Speaking on the Panama Canal, he said: "We have a perfect right to arrange to suit ourselves charges on a canal that was made in America, solely by American money. If England will not send her exhibits to the San Francisco Exposition on this account, I would say let her keep them at home.

"If we were not careful to withstand these encroachments of the British Government, we might in the end find ourselves in the same case as Ireland finds herself to-day. I foresee home rule for that country, within the next two or three years without question of doubt."

Tight Skirts Make Idle Factory Girls

Mill Men Assert Present Styles Curtail Demand for Goods and Cause Lack of Work.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., Aug. 23. That the factories manufacturing cloth are suffering from the present styles in women's wearing apparel, owing to the smaller sale of cloth, and that many operatives are being thrown out of work in consequence, is the opinion of many leading New Bedford manufacturers.

In the past three years the circumference of women's skirts has been cut down on the average about two yards. The smaller sales of cloth have necessitated a curtailment in the payroll and hundreds of idle operatives are waiting until the styles change before they will be put to work again.

Irish Societies Leader Thanks Mr. Hearst for Support of Home Rule

CORDIAL telegrams of congratulation and thanks were exchanged between William Randolph Hearst and James T. Clark, president of the United Irish Societies of Chicago on the occasion of their annual picnic recently. Mr. Hearst expressed his belief in the justness and the ultimate success of the cause of home rule, while the head of the Irish societies in his reply earnestly thanked the publisher for his co-operation in their work in behalf of their fatherland. Mr. Clark's message follows:

CHICAGO, Aug. 20, 1913.

Hon. William Randolph Hearst,
San Francisco.

The sentiment of the United Irish Societies toward your papers has always been one of appreciation. Often in the past we have admired your unselfish advocacy of the cause of liberty and the 15,000 Irish-Americans at the ceremony of unveiling of the John F. Finerty monument were thrilled by your message in favor of home rule for Ireland. This monument is symbolic of the revitalized Irish nation that has been the inspiration of Parnell, Redmond and other patriots, and we believe it would strengthen the home rule cause immeasurably if you would publish in your Sunday papers, in the near future, a comprehensive account of our recent demonstration here, and emphasize its significance to Irish liberty.

JAS. T. CLARK, President,
United Irish Societies.

Mr. Hearst's Home Rule Message

San Francisco, Aug. 15.

As an American believing ardently in liberty and opportunity in equal rights and equal justice, I believe sincerely in home rule for Ireland.

If I were an Englishman I would believe with even greater earnestness in home rule not only for Ireland, but for every individual integral part of the British Empire.

I would believe in genuine home rule and in general home rule. I would believe in home rule which would insure complete independence in local government for every state and in a general government which would afford every state equal rights, equal liberties and proportionate representation.

Such just and genuine home rule is the best and perhaps the only remedy for the threatened decadence and possible dissolution of the British Empire. The preservation and perpetuation of the British Empire in its full prestige and power are only to be found in a voluntary federation of independent states, not held together loosely by compulsion but molded into an imperial entity by the natural and nationalizing forces of mutual confidence, mutual affection and mutual interest.

If I were an Irishman I would take pride in this fight for home rule, first because of the benefit I was helping to confer upon my country and my own countrymen, and, secondly, because of the benefit which will inevitably ensue to all other sections of the British Empire and to other nations throughout the world.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

'Perfect Baby' Fed on Soup and Vegetables

Hundred Per Cent Child Also Gets Abundance of Water and Fresh Air.

PASSAIC, N. J., Aug. 23.—"Good, substantial food, well cooked, is what I feed him," said Mrs. Thomas Watterston, of No. 110 Central avenue, when asked how she reared her son, Leslie, just declared the only 100 per cent perfect baby in the "better babies" contest in Passaic. Three hundred infants contested. He is 27 months old.

"He gets soups, fruit, vegetables, puddings, cereals," continued the mother. "I give him very little meat, few eggs, but plenty of water inside and out."

Baby Leslie goes to bed about 8 p. m. and arises about 7:30, awakening of his own accord and bounding out into the fields before breakfast. He has a two-hour nap every afternoon, and always sleeps with the windows in his room wide open.

Women Voters Save Mayor From Recall

Committee From Their Organization Canvasses Every Ward to Prevent His Defeat.

JANESVILLE, WIS., Aug. 23.—Mayor James A. Fathers was the victor by a narrow margin to-day in Wisconsin's first recall election of importance under the commission form of government. He was elected by 98 votes, with a total of more than 3,00 votes cast, more than were ever before voted in a Janesville municipal election.

Mayor Fathers received 1,570 votes and his opponent, John C. Nichols, 1,472. Fathers carried three wards, the First, Second and Third, those chiefly occupied by the church and aristocratic elements, while Nichols carried the Fourth and Fifth Wards, the homes of the poorer people.

The election follows the trouble over saloons six months ago, when the Fathers administration started a campaign to clean up the town. Every ward in the city was canvassed by women's committees in the interest of Fathers.

Standardize Book to Simplify Grammar

Educators Work to Have Study of English Language Made More Uniform.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Aug. 23.—Standardization of grammatical nomenclature, which will do away with the confusion in the study of English, as well as other languages, in American schools, has been effected by a committee of fifteen, of which Professor Hills, of Colorado College, was a member.

The committee made a report to the National Educational Association in convention at Salt Lake City and its adoption without amendment virtually inspires the following of the committee's recommendations in all schools and colleges:

According to Professor Hills it was found that in the sentence "John is good," the word "good" was called by nine different names in 20 grammars; the word "John" in "This is John," was called by fifteen terms, and in "We made John president," the word "president" was given eighteen different names in the 47 books examined.

Philippine Hero Can't Re-enlist in Army

Battle-Scarred Pensioner Rejected by Recruiting Office on Account of Wounds.

SPOKANE, Aug. 23.—One of the seven heroes of the United States army who survived the bloody massacre of Balingiga, P. I., when he saw more than 100 of his comrades and officers go to their death at the hands of a savage Philippine tribe, and himself, was mutilated in many places on his body and given up for dead, John M. Newhouse, applied for re-enlistment in the United States army.

Newhouse is 37 years old and came from Helena. He is now drawing $30 a month for the injuries he received in the massacre. Newhouse told of his experience while pleading with local army recruiting officers to take him into the army again.

Officials were compelled to reject the applicant on account of a stiff right arm caused by one of the cuts from a bolo.

Lightning Bug Used To Illuminate House

West Virginian Discovers New Light Medium Which He Declares Surpasses Electricity.

MORGANTOWN, W. VA., Aug. 23. Thornton Flowers, of Mora, claims that by treating the common firefly or lightning bug with a secret chemical process he has produced a light surpassing the tungsten incandescent. He has his home illuminated with the new light.

Several weeks ago, Flowers says, he captured an immense lightning bug. It gave out a brilliant light, and this gave him an idea that the light from fireflies would illuminate a room if they were made to glow incessantly. He hit upon a mixture of chemicals, which, he says, not only will retain the glow after the insect's life is extinct, but will increase it.

He captured the insects by hundreds, treated them with chemicals and placed them in globes throughout his home.

Blind Girl Student Marvelous Gardener

Produces Daisies Three Times Size of Ordinary Flowers and Vegetables Just as Big.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Twenty-seven deaf and dumb girls and boys, ranging from 10 to 17, are being taught to speak, read, write stories, sew, make biscuits, solve arithmetic problems, spell and garden at the Sixteenth Street school here, where an exhibition of their work was held recently.

Miss Elizabeth Kenealy, 15, is creating a sensation at the school because of her wonderful success in raising flowers and vegetables.

In a middy blouse and dark skirt, Miss Elizabeth works in her gardens, one at home and the other at school, producing daisies three times the size of the ordinary flowers, and beets [illegible] average vegetable loss like radishes in size.

SMITH URGES ZONE CURE FOR BOLL WEEVIL

Senator From South Carolina Declares South's Loss in 17 Years Is $1,000,000,000.

Continued from Page 1.

an isolated spot in Texas until it has now reached the State of Alabama, and I have been appalled by the damage wrought by its ravages. During all these years I have been hoping for the discovery by which the pest could be exterminated, or even checked, but in both I have been disappointed.

Likes Zone Remedy Plan.

Some time ago the suggestion was made to establish across the entire cotton belt, east of the areas infested by the weevil a zone of 100 miles, in which no cotton should be planted. It was argued that this would check the eastward advance of the weevil, as it subsists only on the cotton plant, and it was also argued by entomologists and other experts on plant and insect life that my moving this zone westward from year to year all the weevils in the Cotton States would be starved out and entirely exterminated until the Mexican border was reached.

The idea appealed to me very strongly, and I have given the subject a great deal of study ever since. I believe this plan is entirely feasible, and while at first thought the cost may seem prohibitive, yet when the estimated cost is compared with the estimated saving the zone plan must be looked upon as a very sound business proposition.

The Government entomologists, farm demonstration agents and others admit that if this zone plan is put into operation it will undoubtedly check and finally exterminate the boll weevil, as it will have nothing to feed upon, and they admit at the same time that no other plan that has been tried so far has been at all effective.

I have had an estimate made of the cost of the proposed zone and I think it is a very liberal one. It follows:

"The cessation of cotton growing over an area of 46,245 square miles, in which the crop is valued at $98,990,047 per annum, is at first glance such an appalling suggestion that few have even thought to look deeper.

Sees Need of Substitute.

"We must add also to this the loss in ginning business, which is computed at $2,915,518 per annum and the loss in seed products totaling $5,633,562. This means that there must be compensation for a loss in earning value of $107,539,127 per annum.

"In the first place, any scheme which would call for the cessation of cotton growing must provide the means and knowledge for growing something else in the place of cotton.

"A large crop of trained agriculturists instructing in the cultivation of new and profitable crops and in the principles of rotation, maintenance of soil fertility, etc., would help the people to double and treble the output of their land within very few years. It would also be necessary to supply seed for planting the 2,573,672 acres of cotton land in other crops. Thus the greater part of the prospective loss can be met at a reasonable expense.

"The loss of the ginners and part of the loss of the oil men will have to be assumed by the Government. This loss would not exceed $9,000,000.

"It would be necessary for the western portion of the quarantine area to remain out of cotton for possibly three years.

"East of the proposed quarantine line there lies an area of 112,027 square miles of territory in which cotton can be produced. The average yield per acre (1908-1811) for this territory has been 3,051,103 bales (500 pounds), of which 32,892 bales (500 pounds was sea island cotton. The value of the latter was $4,214,235.

Places Faith in Expert.

"The value of the remaining or upland cotton, valued at 11.9 cents per pound, was $174,345,554. The value of the equivalent amount of seed produced would be $33,943,322. Thus the annual value of the producers of the crop to be protected is $217,514,211.

"History of the boll weevil has shown that if this area is not protected its production will be lowered year by year until possibly 50 per cent of the crop is taken, and sometimes as high as 75 per cent."

The zone plan is the only suggestion that has yet been offered that holds out any promise of relief. The cost of the zone plan is undoubtedly great, but when the estimated cost is compared with the estimated saving, the protection of sections not yet reached and the ultimate eradication of the boll weevil throughout the entire cotton belt, the cost does not seem to be prohibitive. In fact, the cost of the zone system will be mild compared with the loss that will be entailed if the boll weevil is not exterminated.

Sea Island Crop Imperiled.

It is practically certain that if the boll weevil spreads to the South Atlantic States the sea island cotton industry will be wiped out entirely. This is by reason of the semi-tropical nature of the islands, the luxuriant foliage which affords a safe harbor and breeding ground for the insects during winter and summer, and the fact that there is neither extreme heat nor extreme cold, both of which are destructive to insect life. It is my deliberate judgment that if the boll weevil reaches the sea islands, there will be no more sea island cotton.

I have spoken of the aggregate loss to the country, but the feature that appeals to me most strongly is the loss to the individual. The country may eventually recover from the damage done to the cotton crop, but the individual cotton farmer whose income is cut in half or destroyed, and whose property is made to depreciate in value, may never recover. The loss to him will be irreparable.

My object in writing this is in order that the people may know just how seriously the cotton crop is being menaced, and that they may discuss and understand the only plan that has been offered, which promises to accomplish the result needed. If any other plan is suggested that promises to accomplish the result at a less cost or in a quicker manner, I will give it my heartiest indorsement.

I will be glad to have the farmers and others of the South consider this problem carefully and write me what they think of it.

WOMAN IS KEY IN STRUGGLE TO UNSEAT SULZER

New York Governor's Foes Call Wife's Illness a Sham and Confession a Ruse.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Apparently deadlocked until the High Court of Impeachment meets September 18 to try the charges of high crimes and misdemeanors against Governor William Sulzer, both the accused Executive and Lieutenant Governor Martin Glynn are busy, the one strengthening his defense, the other preparing to invigorate his attack. In the meantime, the official business of the Empire State is at a standstill.

The government of New York presents a paradox unique to republican government. The State has two Governors, and it has none. Two men maintain they have the right to transact the State's business. No business is being transacted.

And in this struggle for power, the battle seemingly centers about a woman, a woman who has no voice in the government, who is not even allowed to vote under the statutes of the State.

Wife's Illness Questioned.

In addition to the law point raised by the defenders of Sulzer that he can not be impeached or tried for things he did before he took the oath of office, the defense lays greatest stock on the declaration by Sulzer's wife that she, not the Governor, used checks he had received as campaign contributions to speculate on the stock market.

On the other hand, it is learned that the Frawley Committee, which brought to light the charges on which the Governor was impeached, will make her confession the subject of a rigid examination to shatter, if possible, the defense, which will be based largely on her statement.

In the meantime, Mrs. Sulzer, it is reported, is dangerously ill, her nerves broken, it is said, under the strain which she has experienced since the charges were brought against her husband.

Sulzer's enemies even question this illness. They question it so seriously that it, too, is to be investigated. The first step in this investigation,

Both Accused of "Shamming."

The committee believes that "talking too much" consisted of telling stories of Mrs. Sulzer's true condition which were not to the liking of the Governor. An inkling of this purpose was contained in an interview with Assembly Majority Leader Aaron J. Levy, who declared:

"Not only is Mrs. Sulzer's confession a sham, but the pretended illness of Mrs. Sulzer is a sham, of which William Sulzer is the chief perpetrator."

However, should Sulzer be removed from office by Tammany votes, with all the judges of the Court of Appeals voting in his favor, he would count it a vindicaton and proof of his assertion that he is being persecuted because he would not turn over the State to Tammany Hall.

'Wild Man's' Haircut Fills Bushel Basket

Tramp That Frightened Woman and Children Gets Cleaning When Arrested.

MILLVILLE, N. J., Aug. 23.—A "wild man" was reported to the police as roaming the woods west of Millville and frightening women and children. Marshal Biggs hastened to the locality and discovered an uncouth man with shaggy beard which reached to his waist and long hair which hung matted over his shoulders.

When taken to the City Hall the man said he was Waldron Furry, of Low Banks, Canada, and that he was simply tramping.

Marshal Biggs acted as barber for the stranger and his hirsute adornment filled a bushel basket.

Pastor Adopts Wife He Had Divorced

Girl Becomes His Ward as Soon as Decree Was Granted by Court.

WOODWARD, OKLA., Aug. 23.—A divorce on unusual grounds has been granted here to B. F. Willett, who is an ordained Baptist minister, and who has served several terms as prosecuting attorney for the county.

Willett gives up his wife that she may become again, in effect his adopted daughter. Years ago he adopted a little girl who took the name of Clara Willett. He put her in school at Enid, determined to give her the best education obtainable.

Six years ago, when Clara reached the age of 16, Judge Willett made his adopted daughter his bride.

In his petition for divorce the lawyer and former preacher set forth that the Willetts had told him she never could love him as a wife should, but that she could be devoted to him as a daughter.

Girl Wins First Wireless License

She Installs Her Own Apparatus

Miss Alice McConaughy, of Cincinnati, at the key of her wireless instrument.

This girl operates under a license granted under the new wireless laws.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 23.—Miss Alice McConaughy, 13-year-old schoolgirl, is the first person to obtain an operator's license under the new laws regulating wireless telegraphy on the Great Lakes, even if she did get it on something of a fluke.

The license was issued before the inspector discovered that he had failed to notice the age of the applicant, whose father is a national bank examiner of Ohio.

"I did give them the right age," declared Alice. "I sent for the blanks and filled them out myself."

Her work on the demonstration set was satisfactory. The youthful operator installed her own apparatus at home, doing all the wiring and even erecting the 50-foot aerial.

Chester Boynton Sue By Wife for Libel

Echo of Famous Litigation Against Rev. William B. Ayres in New Case.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Helen Theresa Willet Boynton, of Wollaston, Mass., wife of Chester A. Boynton, who some time ago created a sensational church scandal by suing the Rev. William B. Ayres, pastor of the Park and Down Congregational Church, Wollaston, for $10,000 for alienation of Mrs. Boynton's affections, has filed a libel for divorce from her husband on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

Boynton claimed in his suit that the minister had broken up his home after joining the Boynton household as a boarder. Mr. Ayres and Mrs. Boynton in the former's case of defense denied all of the husband's allegations and declared that the whole trouble in the Boynton household sprang out of Boynton's attentions to a choir girl at the Park and Down Church, at which Boynton and his wife were both prominent members.

Boynton lost his suit and was expelled from the Wollaston church. Boynton is now living at Los Angeles.

Has $18 Salary Cut To $10 to Spite Wife

Judge, However, Orders Bookkeeper to Pay Alimony Just the Same.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—G. Lester Pinkham, a bookkeeper of Flushing, sued by his wife for alimony, testified that he was receiving only $10 a week.

His employer, A. M. Ryon, called as a witness, corroborated him.

"Is he worth more money?" asked the Magistrate.

"He certainly is," replied Mr. Ryon; "formerly I paid him $18 a week, but he asked to have his salary reduced to $10."

The Magistrate promptly ordered Pinkham to pay his wife $5 a week and furnish a bond of $520 to guarantee payment.

College Girl Walker Goes 25 Miles a Day

Little Pedestrian Reaches Pittsburg on Jaunt From New York to San Francisco.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 23.—With a jaunty rose-colored hat, Miss Gladys Mason, a petite New Yorker, who is "footing it" from Broadway to the Golden Gate, is on her way West.

The little pedestrian left New York on June 29 and has averaged 25 miles a days. Her high mark for a day is 41 miles, made east or Harrisburg.

Miss Mason is 22, a graduate of Emerson College, Boston. She expects to reach San Francisco Thanksgiving Day.

COUNTY TO GIVE COOK BOOKS TO NEWLYWEDS

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Leaden biscuits and leather-crusted pies and all the other dinner delicacies of Mrs. Newlywed soon may cease to cause physical pain and matrimonial estrangement. Their existence is threatened.

Authorities of Cook County are considering the advisability of giving away official Cook County cook books with all marriage licenses. Robert M. Sweitzer, County Clerk, will present the plan to the County Board.

SAYS WIFE AND MAGICIAN WERE IN DEATH PLOT

Husband Declares That Their Conspiracy Kept Him in Bed Three Years.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Alleging that his wife was madly infatuated with a man of strange, weird, magnetic powers, and that they conspired to incapacitate him by administering mysterious potions, Theodore Speaber, a former undertaker of Chicago, filed suit for divorce from Anna Speaber in the Circuit Court at Laporte, Ind.

Through the machinations of his wife and a man who represented himself as being a magnetic healer, assuming the name of Louis Odillo, Speaber avers that they tried to convince him that he had become a victim of tuberculosis. Odillo then injected a chemical in his ear, he alleges, which brought on an illness that confined him to a hospital bed for three years. This, he charges, was done with the deliberate intention of causing a fatal sickness to set in and get him out of the way.

His wife then sold out his undertaking business and their household effects, he charges, for less than one-third of the real value. She then refused to see him after he had been released from the hospital.

Friends of Speaber say that he was at one time an inmate of the Elgin State Insane Asylum. But he was released later as cured.

2 GALS $5.00 EXPRESS PREPAID

Alsobrook's OLD FORT 100 PROOF STRAIGHT KENTUCKY WHISKEY

BEST BY TEST TRY IT YOURSELF

If not satisfied, ship it back to us and get your money. Our straight 100 Proof Kentucky Whiskey is 100 by Proof—100% pure, 100% straight, and will give you 100% satisfaction. No chance of doctoring, extending or tampering with Old Fort 100 Proof Kentucky Whiskey, as it is guaranteed under the U. S. Pure Food Law. It is good as a beverage—as a medicine—as an all round Family Whiskey. (Other concerns ask $6 to $8 for same kind of whiskey.)

WHOLESALE PRICE
EXPRESS PREPAID—TWO GALLONS, $5; ONE GALLON, $3

Or we will ship, express paid, at same price, 100 Proof straight White Cob Corn Whiskey, guaranteed the finest White Corn Whiskey ever made. Remember this is 100 by Proof—no tampering or extending. Try either brand or send an assorted order; two gallons for $5, Express paid. If not satisfied your money returned.

A. L. ALSOBROOK CO.
CHATTANOOGA, TENN.
Return this ads. with order for above and bottle of 100 Proof Apple Brandy sent Free.

OTTLEY & KNOWLES

General Insurance

1508 Fourth National Bank Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

SEMI-ANNUAL STATEMENT
For the six months ending June 30, 1913, of the condition of the

Svea Fire and Life Insurance Company (Limited)

OF GOTHENBURG, SWEDEN,

Organized under the laws of the Kingdom of Sweden, made to the Governor of the State of Georgia, in pursuance of the laws of said State. Principal office in United States, 100 William street, New York, N. Y.

I. CAPITAL STOCK.

Whole amount of capital $200,000.00
Amount paid up in cash 200,000.00

II. ASSETS.

Total assets of the company, actual cash market value $1,422,807.30

III. LIABILITIES.

Total liabilities $1,422,807.30

IV. INCOME DURING THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THE YEAR 1913.

Total income actually received during the first six months in cash ..... $ 417,212.42

V. EXPENDITURES DURING THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THE YEAR 1913.

Total expenditures during the first six months of the year in cash ..... $ 379,770.04
Greatest amount insured in any one risk ..... $ 37,500.00
Total amount of insurance outstanding 121,363,329.00

A copy of the act of incorporation, duly certified, is of file in the office of the Insurance Commissioner.

STATE OF NEW YORK—County of New York.

Personally appeared before the undersigned M. L. Duncan, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the United States manager of the Svea Fire and Life Insurance Company, Ltd., and that the foregoing statement is correct and true.

M. L. DUNCAN, United States Manager.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 15th day of August, 1913.

EDWIN F. COREY,
Commissioner for the State of Georgia.

Name of State Agent—DAN B. HARRIS, Atlanta.
Name of Agents at Atlanta—OTTLEY & KNOWLES.

MRS. GODBEE CALM; CALLS SELF A TOOL OF JUSTICE

Divorced Wife of Millen Judge, Who Killed Him and Young Bride, Shows No Remorse. Planned Shooting With Care.

Trouble Alleged to Have Started Twenty Years Ago Over Prisoner's Property—Jurist Is Said to Have Slain Brother-in-Law.

MILLEN, Aug. 23.—Convinced that she has been an instrument of justice, satisfied that the work she had planned for days has been well performed, Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee, in her cell in the Jenkins County jail, to-day calmly and confidently awaits the hour when she will face a court to answer to the law for the slaying of her former husband, Judge Walter M. Godbee, and the bride who had taken the slayer's place in his affections.

Mrs. Godbee saw life pass from the body of the man with whom she had lived for years, and there was no remorse shown on her face. While imprisoned for his slaying she was told that she must also answer to the charge of having murdered his wife. She did not blanch.

She had determined on the death of both. She had planned her deed carefully. She believed that she was justified in resorting to arms to avenge her real or fancied wrongs, and persons who know her best declare she is ready to meet the consequences.

No effort to obtain bail has been made by her. She has waived the right of preliminary trial. She is content to remain in jail until her time of trial comes.

Started Twenty Years Ago.

The attitude of this woman, who has passed her fiftieth year, is one of the most remarkable features of this remarkable tragedy.

Twenty years ago, when Judge Godbee and his second wife found they were mismated, the foundation for the double slaying was laid. The climax came Monday morning in the Millen postoffice, when Judge Godbee was almost instantly killed and his young wife fatally wounded by pistol shots fired by the woman from whom he had been separated by the courts.

Both Judge Godbee and the woman held as his slayer are of prominent Jenkins County families. Godbee had been prominent in politics. He had been married three times.

His first wife died many years ago, but, at his request, he is buried at her side in the cemetery at Waynesboro. Soon after her death he married Miss Edna Perkins, daughter of the late Mills Perkins, and heiress to considerable property.

They lived in apparent happiness until the early nineties, when the first signs of trouble came. At this time Judge Godbee acquired rights to certain properties which belonged to his wife before their marriage. It is charged that the judge afterward sold this property and reinvested the proceeds for his own personal benefit.

Shot Brother, Is Rumor.

Then there is an old story that years ago in Burke County Judge Godbee became involved in a difficulty with a brother of the woman he afterward married, and killed him. He pleaded self-defense and was acquitted.

There is no record, though, that this trouble had any bearing on the marital differences of the couple.

Friction between the couple reached a critical stage ten years ago, when Mrs. Godbee filed suit for divorce in Jenkins County, charging cruelty on the part of her husband.

She declared that the judge had humiliated her before her children, had driven her from his room and had nailed the entrance between the two chambers in which they lived.

Even after this suit was filed there was a reconciliation, but the trouble cropped out again about five years ago, when Mrs. Godbee again entered suit. She was granted absolute divorce, but the judge was successful in resisting her plea for alimony. Mrs. Godbee was also given the custody of her minor child, Miss Sarah Godbee, with whom she lived at the time of the tragedy.

Divorce Didn't End Trouble.

The divorce decree did not end the troubles of the pair, however. Mrs. Godbee always contended that the money on which Judge Godbee was living luxuriously after the decree rightfully belong to her.

It is certain that she was in straitened circumstances at the time of the killing, and it is believed that the sight of another woman enjoying the fortune she believed hers, while she virtually was living in poverty, had no little to do with her determination to take justice into her own hands.

For after the divorce Judge Godbee married again. His third wife was Miss Florence Boyer, 25 years old, of Youngstown, Ohio. After their meeting at the sea shore Judge Godbee continued his courtship at her home, and little more than four months ago he brought her to Millen as his bride.

A crisis was reached. Soon after the judge's return, it is declared, he received demands from his former wife that he contribute to the support of her and her daughter. In these demands she cited the fact that she was entitled to at least part of the income he derived from property which had originally been hers.

Judge Feared for Life.

Intimate friends of the judge say that from that time on he feared, not only for his own life, but for that of his bride.

So alarmed did he become that on receiving a threatening letter Sunday he refused to take his bride to church, although he was a steward of the First Methodist congregation, and requested the pastor, the Rev. E. E. Rose, to come to the Hotel Estelle, where he had apartments, to conduct private prayers.

It is evident that on that same day Mrs. Godbee No. 2 decided on the deed she committed Monday. She got into communication with Marshal P. T. Foote and requested him to call on her at her daughter's home.

There, the marshal says, Mrs. Godbee showed him a .32-caliber pistol.

"Will this kill as quickly as a .38?" was the surprising question he was asked.

"It will if it hits the right spot," he replied. She seemed satisfied with the answer and the interview closed.

This same pistol was in Mrs. Godbee's handbag Monday morning when she went to the Millen postoffice. She knew that each day the judge visited there early in the forenoon to inquire for mail. She was seated writing as he entered the building, accompanied by his young wife. The slaying followed.

Mrs. Godbee died Tuesday night in the apartments in which she and her husband had lived during the two months of their married life. Mrs. G. W. Boyer, mother of the slain bride, was en route from Williamsport to Millen when her daughter died.

Bulk of Estate to Daughter.

The will of Judge Godbee has been found in the possession of W. B. Wallace, a merchant, and one of the dead man's closest friends. The value of the estate is between $45,000 and $50,000. He bequeathes the bulk of his property and securities to his daughter by his first wife, formerly Miss Maggie Godbee, now married and living in Augusta.

Small portions of the estate are left to Frank Mills and King Godbee, sons of the divorced wife, and Miss Sarah Godbee, also an issue of the second marriage. The divorced wife is not provided for in the instrument. Frank Mills Godbee has been appointed temporary administrator of the estate of Judge Godbee, and A. S. Anderson, temporary administrator of the estate of Mrs. Florence Boyer Godbee.

The third Mrs. Godbee has been buried beside her husband and his first wife in Waynesboro. The condition of Mrs. Boyer, the slain bride's mother, is said to be somewhat improved following her collapse upon first seeing the dead body of her young daughter. Her two sons have come from Pennsylvania and will remain with her until she returns to her home at Williamsport.

Neither of the boys expresses any animosity toward the slayer of their sister and her husband, but both join their mother in hoping that exact justice will be done. Archibald and LeRoy Boyer, the brothers, have not yet decided whether they will attend the trial of the second Mrs. Godbee.

Vincent Astor Reported Captured

Name Is Linked With Miss Sands

Match Long Predicted by Gossips

Miss Elizabeth Sands and Vincent Astor.

Fiancee-To-Be Measures Up to Rigid Requirements of Young Multi-Millionaire's Mother.

NEWPORT, Aug. 23.—Decidedly the most interesting aftermath of the recent Newport yacht races is the persistent report that Miss Elizabeth Sands, beautiful daughter of Mrs. Frederick Sands, of this city, occupies the place of honor in the affections of Vincent Astor, head of that family and heir to its huge estates.

This report, which has been current in social circles here and in New York, took the form of a practical certainty, according to society's self-constituted soothsayers, when it was noted that in the party taken to the races by young Astor was only one of three girls to whom he paid marked attention last year. That one, of course, was Miss Sands.

It has long been known and greatly gossiped about at afternoon teas and other social functions that young Astor has felt a strong liking for the young beauty ever since they were school children.

Society wiseacres, who have long ago hung up in their mental art galleries a picture of young Astor and Miss Sands as a happy married couple, were not at all discouraged when the young man's affections at times seemed to wander from his childhood's choice.

"Just wait until Vincent's mother gets back to America and resumes her place at the 'helm,'" said these social clairvoyants, "and you'll notice a sudden slump in the fortunes of Elizabeth Sands' attractive rivals."

The prediction was based upon a firm belief that the aristocratic former Ava Willing would see to it that her son, who is now the head of the family and chancellor of its inexhaustible exchequer, should marry someone who measured up in every way to her rigid requirements as to ancestry, connections and social standing.

$175,000 TO BE GIVEN IN PRIZES FOR LIVE STOCK

Harness Race Purses at Panama-Pacific Exposition Will Total $225,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—The greatest live stock show in the history of the world is assured at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in 1915. Following the appropriation by the exposition management of $175,000 for awards for prize-winning live stock, and the news that $225,000 is offered in purses for harness races, each new announcement by Chief of the Department of Live Stock D. O. Lively discloses increasing interest in the forthcoming live stock exhibition.

The live stock department has at its disposal 50 acres of ground which will be devoted to the erection of live stock buildings, a hall for live stock congresses and agricultural meetings, a race track, and an open field upon which will be held drills, international cavalry horse contests, polo contests and exhibitions of the prize live stock of the world.

The live stock buildings will be constructed more from an exhibition standpoint than in keeping with any farm utility plan; the vast rows of barns which have characterized the live stock departments of other expositions will be avoided. Every separate section will be shown under a single roof.

In addition to the $175,000 set aside by the exposition management to be used in cash premiums, more than $45,000 has been offered by organizations representing various phases of the live stock industry. Of the prizes offered by the exposition, $50,000 will be given to horses, $50,000 to cattle, $25,000 to sheep and goats, $25,000 to swine, $12,000 to poultry, pigeons and pet stock, $7,500 to carloads of cattle, sheep and swine, $5,000 for prize-winning dogs and cats.

The department is making arrangements for holding the biggest poultry show on record, and birds from all over the world will compete for international prizes. The pigeons will take their place in the exposition not only as applied to the fancy, but as a utility, and some of the birds will be used as carriers, taking part in races across the continent from San Francisco.

Under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, the exposition will give two harness race meets, one in the spring and one in the fall of 1915, at which there will be offered $225,000 in stakes and purses. With one or two exceptions, the special stakes included in the grand aggregate of $225,000 will be the greatest that ever have been offered.

America's Oldest Church Discovered

Ruins of Centuries-Old House of Worship Off Yucatan Visited by Explorers.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 23.—The ruins of the oldest Christian church in America have been discovered on the Island of Cozumel off Yucatan by Professor Morley and Jesse Nusbaum, of the Sarvard-San Diego expedition.

Cozumel has not been visited by white men for almost a century, and Morley and Nusbaum had thrilling adventures, but deny that its people are cannibals. The scientists were equipped with a moving picture outfit, but in leaving the island for the mainland their canoe was upset and much of the photograph material was spoiled.

While Cozumel is only 30 by 7 miles in extent, it was found extraordinarily rich in monumental and architectural remains. It was here that Cortez had a fierce battle with the natives and erected what is declared to have been the first Christian church in America.

Repeats His Wedding Date as Punishment

Husband Who Told Court He Wished to Forget Marriage Has New Litany.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 23.—"June 14 1887," Philip Leborski will have to repeat ten times a day for the next 60 days in order to keep out of the house of correction, by sentence pronounced upon him by District Court Judge Elsner.

Leborski, who is a wealthy real estate owner, was arrested when a patrolman found him shaking his fist and swearing at his wife, while she was perched on the gable of their residence.

In the trial Leborski told the Court he was trying to forget he was married and that he had succeeded in forgetting the date of the ceremony. The Court informed him that no man had a right to forget such a date and then ordered his case continued 60 days and told Leborski to recite the date of the wedding ten times daily or he would have to go to jail. Leborski started his recitations before he was out of the courtroom and his wife was doing the counting.

Crusade Started on Big Sunday Dinners

Domestic Science Teachers of Kansas Schools Are Enlisted in The Campaign.

TOPEKA, KANS., Aug. 23.—The custom and the physical requirements that a man must rest at least one day in seven have brought about a campaign in Kansas against the big Sunday dinners that have so long been the delight of the average man. The domestic science teachers of the schools have enlisted the aid of domestic science students throughout the State and the big Sunday dinner is going the way of the hard biscuit and the underdone meat in the Kansas homes.

The campaign was started a year ago at the University of Kansas, but it now has the support of every high school and college with domestic science courses.

Maryland Jews to Raise Shaft to Friend

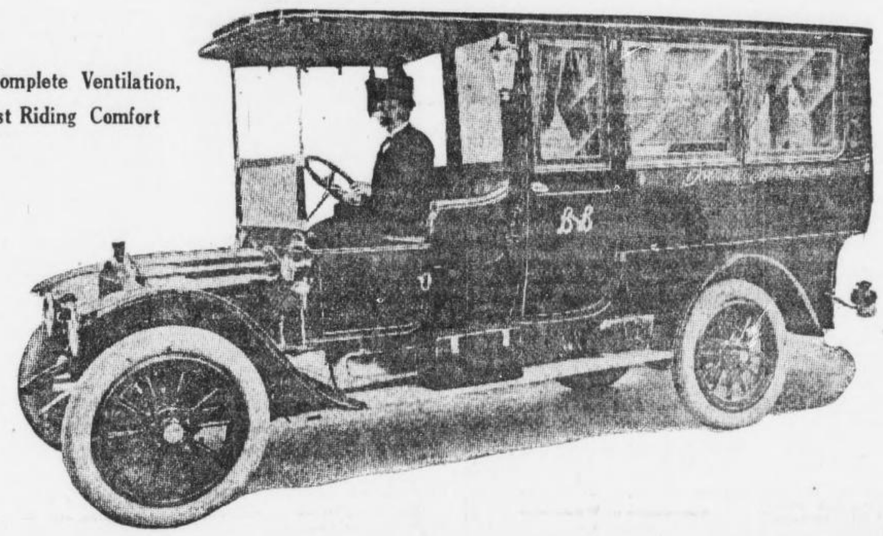
Thomas Kennedy, Who Passed Law Giving Them Right to Hold Office, To Be Honored.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., Aug. 23.—Mendes Cohen, of Baltimore, a grand-nephew of one of the first Jews elected to office in the State of Maryland, will act as treasurer of the fund to be raised to build a monument to Thomas Kennedy, author of the law passed in 1826 that gave Jews the right to hold office.

Kennedy was famous in several other respects than as champion of the cause of political equality, for which he fought as a member of the Legislature eight years. He wrote many ballads that aroused the martial ardor of his fellow citizens in the days preceding the War of 1812.

Barclay & Brandon
S-E-R-V-I-C-E

Most Complete Ventilation, Fullest Riding Comfort



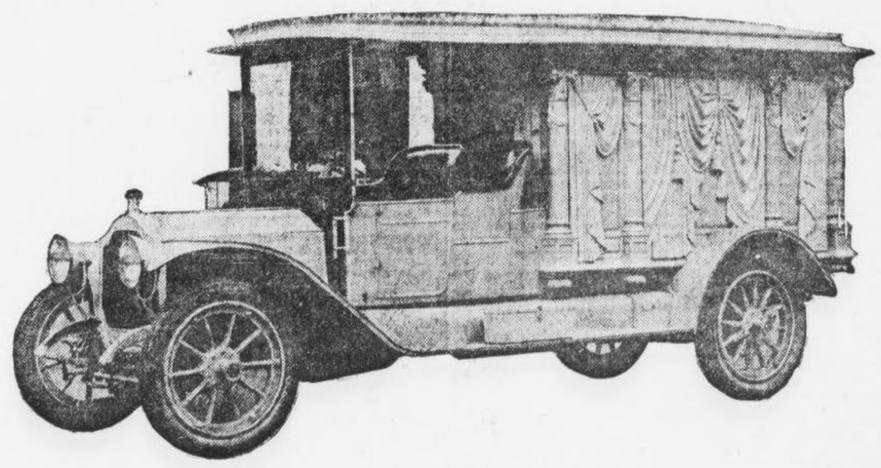
Equipment — Electric Fan, Running Hot and Cold Water, Ice Water, Steam Heat

This Picture Shows the Very Finest and Best Equipped Ambulance in the Entire South

The Barclay & Brandon PRIVATE AMBULANCE is positively the very last word in up-to-date Ambulances.

Nothing could be more complete—not a single thing can be suggested that might tend to give further and more complete comfort to the patient, that is not already a part of its wonderful equipment.

This most complete Ambulance is at your immediate service at all times, whether you live in Atlanta or suburbs. For white people only.



BARCLAY & BRANDON Service as Funeral Directors is Widely Known for Its Dignity and Exclusiveness

One very important point is that Barclay & Brandon alone can furnish you with a COMPLETE AUTOMOBILE FUNERAL, as they have just purchased a $7,000 Packard Hearse, the only Auto Hearse in the State. Choice of either auto or horse-drawn hearse.

In time of bereavement it is assuring at least to know that there is some one to whom you can intrust all the details of a funeral service, secure in the knowledge that every requisite will be carefully attended to.

This you may expect AT ALL TIMES from

BARCLAY & BRANDON

246 Ivy Street, Corner of Baker Phones { Bell, Ivy 788, Ivy 168. Atlanta, 788

Athens — Latest News of North Georgia — Rome

ATHENS JUMPS TO TOP NOTCH IN BUILDINGS

Figures for Year To Be $1,250,000—Nine-Story Structure Is Ready.

ATHENS, Aug. 23.—The classic city of Athens, once considered an educational community only, is fast assuming an aspect that will be as commercial as academic, with tall business buildings fast going up. A few years ago the tallest building here was about four stories, and at present there is a handsome seven-story structure completed and a $400,000, nine-story structure which will be ready for occupancy about October 1.

Building permits for the year will probably total $1,250,000, which is as good a record in proportion to population as Atlanta's banner year, and perhaps a little better. The million and a quarter will be the highest that Athens has yet attained.

Commerce Chamber Active.

The Chamber of Commerce is concentrating its efforts along constructive lines, and as evidence of what the city is doing points to new industries that have located here in recent months.

Among the new plants is that of the Athens Pottery Company, which, after an investigation of raw material supply in various parts of the country, located in Athens because of the high quality and large quantity of clays in this section. This plant came from East Liverpool, Ohio, which is one of the old pottery centers of the country. There are within nineteen miles of Athens white silica clay deposits that are well suited for the manufacture of high-class clay products, and efforts are being made to have manufacturers locate plants to utilize this valuable raw material.

The Allen-Moss Tannery Company also was secured by the Chamber of Commerce. This plant is costing $50,000, and will manufacture sole leather and by-products of soap and glue.

The Georgia Plow and Implement Company, which has been in operation about seven months, has a new plant and equipment costing about $10,000, including cupola, woodworking and ironworking shops and foundry and machine rooms.

Extensive Building Operations.

Prominent among buildings in course of erection is the Holman Building, 65 by 200 feet, and nine stories in height. This structure is of reinforced concrete, with an exterior of dark red tapestry brick. Stores will be located on the first floor and offices above, with a ballroom on the top floor. The cost will be $400,000. C. M. Strahan, of Athens, is the architect, and the H. J. Cair Construction Company, of Atlanta, the builders. This building is very near completion, and will be ready for occupancy about the middle of September or first of October.

This is the second office building to be erected in Athens. The other is the Southern Mutual Insurance Company's building, seven stories in height. Office space in both of the buildings is fully taken.

Athens is also to have a new Y. M. C. A. building to cost, complete, about $140,000. It will be of fireproof construction. The architects are Shattuck & Hussey, of Chicago. The Y. W. C. A. also has a new building, costing $35,000.

Demand for Office Space.

James Smith is erecting a new structure three stories in height, 125 by 225 feet. This will be of fireproof construction, the exterior of white brick and ornamental terra cotta trimmings.

There will be five storerooms on the ground floor, and these storerooms have already been leased for long terms, notwithstanding the fact that the building will not be completed until near the middle of September. J. W. Barnett, of Athens, is the architect, and the L. C. Smith Construction Company, of Athens, is the builder.

The Athens firm of H. T. Huggins & Son is building a four-story store building. This building is being finished in light colored brick and is quite an addition to the business district.

Atlantan Is Architect.

The new county courthouse, designed by A. Ten Eyck Brown, of Atlanta, will cost $153,000. This building is to be of reinforced concrete, with exterior of red brick and stone trimmings. It will be four stories high, and one of its interesting features is that the county jail will be located on the top floor. This will replace the structure at Prince avenue and Hill street, known to thousands of university men over the State.

The Athens Ice Company, a new industry for Athens, has just completed its plant at a cost of $30,000.

Several new churches are included in the building activities, among them being a Catholic church costing $20,000, a Baptist tabernacle costing $10,000 and a Presbyterian church costing over $25,000.

Costly New Residences.

Quite a number of new residences are being built, prominent among them being one for W. T. Bryan of fireproof construction, costing over $30,000, and a number of small residences being erected by John E. Talmadge to cost $75,000.

Athens streets are exceptionally well paved, and in the last ten years the city has spent $300,000 in this work, and not long ago voted $75,000 additional for further street improvement. The expenditure of this amount is now under way, and it is conceded that when the work is completed Athens will be one of the best paved cities in the South.

The city has also voted $100,000 for new schools, $25,000 being for a new building and $27,000 for asite for a modern high school, the remainder to be used for improvements and additions to established schools. With this expenditure Athens can boast of one of the most up-to-date city school systems in the State.

The Athens Gas Light and Fuel Company has recently expended about $100,000 in laying new gas mains throughout the city.

Miss Ruby Gillen Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Gillen, of Athens, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. S. D. Fambrough, at Bishop. Miss Gillen is a 1913 graduate of the State Normal School at Athens.

Auto Traded for Horse Wouldn't Go

Doctor Calls on Other Man to Swap Back, and He Says Was Cheated Again.

ROME, GA., Aug. 23.—Dr. W. A. Wright's fondness for automobiles was the cause of trouble with A. W. Williman, of Cave Spring, which resulted in the arrest of the latter on a warrant charging him with cheating and swindling.

Dr. Wright has discovered that an automobile, which looks as good as new standing still, easily could be not worth anything running. It is alleged that William traded an automobile to the doctor which, after the deal, refused to move.

A horse and buggy was given in exchange. When the physician called upon Filliman to trade back, he was quite willing, but had sold the horse. He, however, agreed to give him another. This horse was defective, Dr. Wright alleges. The case will be aired in the September term of the City Court.

TICK ERADICATION WORK IS PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Petty thievery has annoyed housekeepers here during the last week, for all articles of food possess an irresistible attraction to the depredators.

Pantries have been raided of flour, meal, potatoes, etc., while fresh meats, vegetables, butter and eggs have been taken from refrigerators. Many have been forced to worry through breakfast without bread. The citizens are becoming desperate.

TIFT COUNTY VETERANS TO HOLD ENCAMPMENT

TIFTON, Aug. 23.—The annual encampment of the Tift County Camp, U. C. V., will be held at Murrow Springs, four miles west of Tifton, on Little River, September 3.

Arrangements will also be made for holding a big barbecue on September 4, in which the Charlotte Carson Chapter, U. D. C., of Tifton, and the Sons of Veterans will assist the veterans.

ASKS $5,000 DAMAGES FOR INJURIES IN MILL

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—Because of alleged injuries Charles Wiggins claims to have sustained while employed by the Swift Manufacturing Company of Columbus on July 7, he has brought suit against the mills for $5,000. He claims that he has been unable to earn a livelihood since he received his injuries.

LUMBER-LADEN SHIP SAILS.

PENSACOLA, Aug. 23.—The steamship Etolia has sailed for Buenos Ayres, loaded with 2,640,000 feet of pitch pine lumber. It also took on 847 tons of bunker coal in this port.

Begin Married Life With 24 Chlidren

Moultrie Bride and Bridegroom Had Even Dozen Each.

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—It is a very rare thing for newlyweds to begin keeping house with 24 children to make things lively from the first day of married bliss, yet this was the experience of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Truit, who were recently made man and wife by Justice J. J. Serrell in the Lee district of this County.

The bride was Mrs. M. J. Flowers, a widow with twelve children, and Mr. Truit, whose first wife has been dead for some time leaving him with an even dozen motherless children. Both of the participants in the recent wedding were bereaved about the same time and, living in the same community, they naturally turned ot one another for comfort, and finally agreed that the best thing to do was to marry.

FOOD THIEVES HARASS RESIDENTS OF DALTON

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The report made by E. M. Nighbert, inspector in charge of the tick eradication work, shows rapid progress the last month. Twelve dipping vats are in operation. There are now 372 herds, containing 2,347 cattle, free of ticks. The herds under local quarantine number 175 and contain 1,224 cattle.

The county has appropriated money to assist in the work, and it is believed the quarantine will be raised from this county by next year at the latest.

ALBANY GETS ANOTHER LARGE OIL COMPANY

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—Present indications are that another large oil company will make Albany a distributing center in the near future. N. H. Cook, of Atlanta, district superintendent of the Texas Oil Company, one of the largest of the independent companies, has looked over the situation here with a view of locating a distributing plant for the company.

BAPTIST ASSOCIATION TO MEET IN COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—The Columbus Baptist Association will meet in its annual session on Wednesday after the third Sunday in September in Manchester. Dr. B. W. Bussey, the moderator, will preach the doctrinal sermon. There are more than 30 churches in the association.

FIRST BALE BRINGS 14 1-4 CTS.

ELBERTON Aug. 23.—G. P. Hall sold the first bale of cotton here. It was bought by T. O. Tabor & Son for 14 1-4 cents per pound, and it weighed 466 pounds. It was classed as strict middling.

ATHENS MAYOR URGED TO RUN FOR 3D TERM

H. J. Rowe Petitioned by Hundreds of Citizens to Enter Race Again.

ATHENS, Aug. 23.—Despite the fact that he has already served two terms as mayor of Athens, H. J. Rowe, who is now at the head of the city government, is being urged strongly by his hundreds of friends here to enter the race again this fall. A petition is being circulated freely by his friends and many are signing it, but as yet the Mayor has kept quiet as to his decision, and it will probably be several days before he gives out a statement as to whether he will stand for re-election again.

A bill providing a commission form of government for Athens passed by the general assembly is to be voted on by the people this fall and what bearing this will have on the mayor's race is still problematical.

Bumper Cotton Crop In Albany District

Several Hundred Bales Have Already Been Received in Market.

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—That about 50 per cent of the cotton in the Albany territory is from ten to fifteen days earlier than last year is the estimate of well-informed cotton men in Albany. The fact that Albany has received several hundred bales already, not counting that moved direct to the compress, is considered evidence that its estimate is approximately correct.

Last year, in addition to making a poor cotton crop, the farmers had no forage and have had to buy high-priced feed for eight months. While the acreage in feed crops this year is not much greater than it was last, the farmers have paid more attention to its cultivation, therefore making a better cop. With a bumper cotton crop and plenty of feed for their stock, the farmers expect a season of prosperity.

COUPLE REWEDS AFTER HAVING BEEN DIVORCED

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—After living together for twenty years and having several children born to them, Mrs. Lizzie Cooper sued Thomas Cooper for divorce, which was granted. Then he sued her for the amount of earnings, claimed as $1,800 in value, during this twenty years, she having possession of it all, and the husband not a penny.

The Supreme Court this week granted him a half interest. The wife claimed she had paid out $1,000 in fines for selling whisky, etc., but admitted she had also sold liquor. The two have become reconciled and have again married.

TWO CRAZY MEN ENGAGE IN FIGHT IN HALL JAIL

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Two crazy men, allowed the freedom of the hallway in the Hall County jail here, became engaged in a fight, and J. C. Johnson was choked and walloped severely. W. C. Stephens, whose form of mental derangement is on the order of melancholia.

Screams for help and the sound of blows were heard and a large number in the neighborhood of the prison were attracted. Johnson was beat up and bruised considerably by Stephens.

COTTON RECEIPTS SHOW DECLINE AT COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—Taking the position that Columbus has suffered the past few years because her cotton receipts have fallen off materially, the Columbus Board of Trade has inaugurated a campaign for the purpose of bringing more cotton to this city. Last year an effort was made to stem the tide of cotton going elsewhere by placing buyers on the streets, and while it had some effect, it did not counteract all the damage that has been done. An effort will be put forth to make the cotton market one of the most attractive in the State.

NEGRO SLAYER IS GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE AT ALBANY

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—In Superior Court of Baker County, which convened at Newton this week, several cases were tried. Simon Johnson, a negro, who killed his stepson on the Grant place in July, was found guilty and given a life sentence. Will Bodiford, a negro, was found guilty of attacking a negro girl and sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary. Jake Rhoades was found guilty of violating the prohibition law and given a six months' sentence or a fine of $200.

CITY RESERVOIR TURNED INTO A SWIMMING POOL

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—Those of Cordele who like an occasional dip into the water to alleviate the suffering of the summer heat probably will have their desires satisfied during this season of next year.

It is proposed to convert the reservoir at the old waterworks station into a swimming pool when the new plant is constructed.

COLQUITT LIKELY TO VOTE $400,000 BONDS FOR ROADS

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—A bond issue of $400,000 soon will be submitted to the voters of Colquitt County. The money is for public roads. Prominent politicians are firm in the belief that the issue will carry.

MASONS FROM 3 COUNTIES TO MEET AT ETON

Members of Order in Whitfield, Murray and Catoosa to Hold Convention Thursday.

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Masons of three counties—Whitfield, Murray and Catoosa—will gather at Eton, in Murray County, next Thursday for the annual meeting of the Tri-County Masonic Convention, Dr. S. A. Brown, worshipful master of the organization, having issued the formal call.

The day will be devoted to speaking and other matters of interest, to be featured at noon by a big picnic dinner. It is expected that several of the Grand Lodge officers will be in attendance, and plans are being made to entertain hundreds of visiting Masons.

The elective officers of the convention are as follows: Dr. S. A. Brown, Eton, worshipful master; H. B. Farrar, Dalton, senior warden; F. J. Vining, Dawnville, junior warden; W. M. Sapp, Dalton, secretary and treasurer. Invitations have been extended to neighboring Masonic lodges to meet here Monday, when the grand master of the State Grand Lodge, Robert L. Colding, of Savannah, will be the guest of Dalton Masons. Plans are being made to entertain a large number of visitors at the afternoon and evening receptions for the distinguished visitor.

Columbus Fights For Better Service

Board of Trade Wants Central of Georgia to Put on More Passenger Trains.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—The Columbus Board of Trade has inaugurated a campaign to secure better passengere service over the Central of Georgia to points east and west from Columbus, it being claimed that the service that is now being given by the road is not satisfactory.

The Board of Trade is anxious to have the Central put on an additional train or two, or to have trains that come to the city reach Columbus in time to allow the people coming to the city an opportunity to do their shopping and return home if they wish in the afternoon of the same day. The trade organization has the backing of practically every business man in the city.

SEABOARD CONDUCTOR GIVEN $10,000 DAMAGES

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—After a strongly contested trial, both sides being represented by able counsel, a verdict was returned yesterday afternoon in Crisp Superior Court for $10,000 in favor of W. B. McMichael, of Jackson, against the Seaboard Railroad Company. McMichael had been in the employ of the road as a freight conductor and in an accident near Birmingham on the Atlanta and Birmingham division he lost a leg. He entered suit for $25,000 and the case was brought to this court for trial under the Federal employees' liability act.

NEW SCHOLARSHIP AT WOODBERRY SCHOOL

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Rosa Woodberry, of Atlanta, has notified the Thomasville Study Class that she has given a scholarship in her school in Atlanta to the class to be awarded by them to any deserving girl that they may select.

This action on the part of Miss Woodberry is appreciated by the members of the class, as it will afford advantages to some deserving girl here who is not able otherwise to have them. It is not known yet who has been selected for the place, but the class has the matter under advisement.

CAMILLA TO VOTE ON SCHOOL TAX SEPT. 30

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—September 30 has been set by the City Council of Camilla as the date for holding an election to ratify the schol tax bill for that town recently passed by the Legislature.

The election will be held under the same rules as elections for members of the General Assembly and the same qualifications will be required in registering. It is probable the opening of the school of Camilla will be deferred somewhat on account of this election.

RULES FOR PRIZES AT FAIR DECIDED UPON

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—The Directors of the Thomas County Fair to be held here this fall have received from the committee in charge the rules and regulations for measuring all crops to be exhibited for premiums and they will be followed closely.

J. Willis Moore has been named general director and will measure all acres and crops free of charge. It is said all indications point to the best exhibit at this fair that has been known since it was organized.

THOMAS COUNTY FARMER EXHIBITS PRIZE CORN EAR

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—J. P. Cary, residing near Coolidge, had on exhibition here this week some corn grown by himself which is an example of what Thomas County can do in that line. One ear of this corn weighed two pounds and nine ounces and when shelled the grains filled a quart measure. The ear was twelve inches long.

Mr. Cary has a half acre of this corn which he will exhibit at the fair here this fall. He thinks his chances for first premium are fine.

Cupid Hits Old Mark; Children Wed, Too

One Pair Experienced in Matrimony, While Other Had to Run Away.

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The northern part of the county was this week the scene of two weddings of interest, owing to the wide difference in age of the couples, together with their popularity.

At Cohutta the Rev. W. C. Haddock and Mrs. Mary Ann Hartley were married. The wedding proved "Uncle Billy" Haddock's fourth venture, while his bride, Mrs. Hartley, was marrying for the third time. The Rev. J. C. Parrott performed the ceremony.

On the same date Miss Nola Starks, of Concord, became the wife of William Crain, of Beaverdale, the ceremony being performed by 'Squire J. D. Brackett. Mrs. Crain is 14 and her husband is just two years her senior.

While the wedding of Miss Starks and Mr. Crain was a runaway match, witnessed by only a few intimate friends and coming as a distinct surprise, there were fully 100 friends assembled to witness the Hartley-Haddock nuptials.

Thomas Farmers Can Own Products

Vegetables Put Up at Home Find Ready Sale in Thomasville Market.

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—Thomas County canned vegetables are on sale here at many of the grocery stores and are proving very popular.

There were more vegetables canned in this county this year than was ever known before, and it has been found to be quite a profitable business, the stores in Thomasville taking them readily and paying the highest market price for them.

Tomatoes especially have been canned in large quantities, and they are unusualy fine, better than the best quality bought heretofore by the merchants from wholesale houses in the North.

The advantage of the home product is that the tomatoes are gathered fresh from the vines and canned before they have had time to get old or damaged.

One farmer, who recently sold about 2,000 cans, said that he had received many compliments in regard to their quality by those who had used them.

GRIFFIN AFTER MEETING OF HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Through its secretary, W. B. Royster, the new Griffin Board of Trade has extended an urgent invitation for the State Horticultural Society to appoint this city as its place of meeting in 1914. The invitation is heartily indorsed by the Georgia Experiment Station. This is the first invitation sent out by the newly organized Board of Trade.

Another move by the board is to make Griffin the city beautiful. To this end a committee has been appointed to employ a civil engineer to look over the situation and make suggestions for improvements.

DALTON PRESIDING ELDER BEGINS FINAL ROUND

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Presiding Elder W. T. Irvine, of the Dalton District, to-day began his final round, and will visit the thirty-seven churches in the district before the annual meeting of the North Georgia Methodist Conference.

For society news of the South see page 10 of this section and the Society Section.

SUNBURNT SKINS NEED

CUTICURA SOAP

And Cuticura Ointment. For heat rashes, itchings, sunburn, wind irritations, redness and roughness of the face and hands, Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, has no rivals worth mentioning. No others do so much for the complexion, hair and hands.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address post-card "Cuticura," Dept. 13G, Boston.

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

PLANS NATIONAL MERCHANTS AND FARMERS' UNION

Louis S. Daniel, of Rome, Boosts Organization Similar to American Federation of Labor.

ROME, Aug. 23.—The organization of a National Farmers and Merchants' Co-operative Association for the mutual benefit is the plan conceived by Louis Spencer Daniel, the well-known booster and director of the local association and former director of the Rome Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

Daniel states that he is sure of the success of the national organization. He has already received hundreds of letters from all parts of the country.

The National Farmers and Merchants' Association would have an organization similar to that of the American Federation of Labor and Farmers' Union that would be absolutely free from politics.

WOMAN'S MISSION UNION CONVENES IN GAINESVILLE

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union, auxiliary to the Chattahoochee Baptist Association, was in session at the First Baptist Church here several days the past week, bringing a number of prominent women church workers to this city. It is said that the work of this union has become one of the most important in the denomination.

HALL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION TO MEET

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—One hundred delegates representing 65 Sunday schools of Hall County will come together in an interdenominational association, the first annual session to convene in this city next Tuesday morning for a two days' session. Hammond Johnson is county president, Henry H. Estes county secretary, and J. T. Telford, treasurer.

FLAG AND BIBLE ARE PRESENTED TO SCHOOL

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The Patriotic Order Sons of America of Dalton yesterday afternoon gave to the Dug Gap School a handsome American flag and a Bible.

Appropriate exercises marked the flag raising, Senator M. C. Tarver and the Hon. T. R. Ridley being among the speakers.

REVIVAL AT ELBERTON.

ELBERTON, Aug. 23.—The Rev. R. C. Cleckler, pastor, is conducting a series of meetings at the First Methodist Church. P. M. Boyd, of Nashville, is in charge of the singing.

$151,000 SUIT FILED TO TEST OLD STATE LAW

Former Dublin Merchant Defendant in Case Brought by Arthur H. Codington, of Macon.

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—An unusual suit to test the validity of an old statute which has been codified in the Georgia laws since 1837 and which is said to be the first suit of its kind ever filed in the State, has been filed here against G. A. Baynard, a former merchant of Dublin, by Arthur H. Codington, of Macon, for the sum of $151,000.

The law upon which the suit is based says that no business partnership may insert in their firm name the name of any individual not actually a co-partner nor continue in such firm the name of a retired partner, under the penalty of $100 a day for each day the name is so used. In his suit Codington alleges that Baynard indorsed certain notes with an old firm name of G. A. Baynard & Son and secured credit in this manner after the original partner had retired from business.

The case has excited a good deal of interest here, and much discussion as to whether the old statute can be enforced and Baynard be made liable for the full amount of $151,000 or that the statute can not be enforced now. It is said that Codington has filed the suit more to test the validity of the law than for any other purpose, and does not think that he has been damaged to the extent of the sum named.

CONFEREDATE MEMORIAL STANDS ON FEDERAL LAND

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—The only monument to a Confederate soldier which has been erected upon Federal grounds, except in national military parks, is that to be unveiled here August 27. It stands on the postoffice building square. This memorial also bears the distinction of being the first monument to a Confederate soldier erected by Children of the Confederacy. It is the monument to Colonel C. C. Sanders. Miss Katherine Dozier will present the monument to the chapter. There will be interesting exercises and addresses.

FRONT END OF MULE WAS "LOADED;" TALLEY IS KICKED

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Not dreaming that the front end of a Georgia mule could be "loaded," Sam Talley, of Harmony, came near being seriously injured when his mule jumped at him and struck him down with his fore feet. Mr. Talley rolled out of reach of the mule after suffering a number of severe bruises.

ALL DENTAL WORK GUARANTEED AT

DR. E. G. GRIFFIN'S

GATE CITY DENTAL ROOMS

24 1-2 Whitehall St. Phone M. 1708 — Over Brown & Allen's Hours: 8-6; Sundays 9-1

$5.

Made Same Day

OUR PRICES:

Bridge Work.... $4
Gold Crown..... $4
Gold Filling $1
Amalgam Filling ..50c Up
Teeth Cleaned . $1 Up

Our guarantee means something. It is backed by our absolute responsibility and by 23 years of successful practice.

PAY ME FOR CURES ONLY

If you have been taking treatment for weeks and months and paying out your hard earned money without being cured, don't you think it is high time to accept DR. HUGHES' GRAND OFFER? You will certainly not be out a lot more money if not cured. Consultation and Examination are Free for the next thirty days.

If I decide that your condition will not yield readily to my treatment, I will be honest with you and tell you so, and not accept your money under a promise of a cure.

My treatment will positively cure or I will make you no charge for the following diseases:

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND URINARY TROUBLE, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, RUPTURE, ULCERS AND SKIN DISEASES CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

Eczema, Rheumatism, Catarrhal Affections, Piles and Fistula and all Nervous, Chronic and Private Diseases of Men and Women.

Newly contracted and chronic Cases of Burning, Itching and Inflammation stopped in 24 hours. I am against high and extortionate fees charged by some physicians and specialists. My fees are reasonable and no more than you are willing to pay for a cure. All medicines, the utensil and best of drugs, are supplied from my own private laboratory. OUT-OF-TOWN MEN VISITING THE CITY, consult me at once upon arrival, and maybe you can be cured before returning home. Many cases can be cured in one or two visits.

CALL OR WRITE—No detention from business. Treatment and advice confidential. Hours 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. Sundays, 9 to 1. If you can't call, write and give me full description of your case in your own words. A complete consultation costs you nothing, and if I can help you I will.

DR. HUGHES, Opposite Third National Bank, 16 1-2 North Broad Street, Atlanta, Ga.

LATEST NEWS OF MIDDLE GEORGIA

3 CANDIDATES SEEKING TO BE MACON MAYOR

Miller, Dasher and Smith Promise Live Campaign in Central City. Outcome Very Uncertain.

MACON, Aug. 23.—Wallace Miller, Arthur L. Dasher or Bridges Smith will be the next Mayor of Macon. The entry of Mr. Miller a week ago assured a spirited three-cornered contest, the outcome of which it will be hard for anyone to forecast.

Mr. Dasher announced his candidacy eight months ago, running on an independent platform. Mr. Smith is the candidate of the administration faction. Mr. Miller heads a young men's ticket. The campaign has just opened, but it will become exceedingly active and interesting with the announcement this week of the Aldermanic tickets.

Mr. Dasher proposes to make a vigorous speaking campaign. Mr. Smith, on the other hand, will not make a speech or write a card, according to his present intention. He will simply depend upon his record and his friends for election. Mr. Miller will likely make a number of addresses setting forth his views on municipal questions.

Mr. Dasher has already begun his speaking schedule, having addressed various meetings of the laboring men.

Mr. Dasher is one of Macon's best-known lawyers. His practice is large and lucrative. Until elected Alderman two years ago, he had never held, or asked for, political office. In Council he took such a prominent stand on leading issues that he leaped into the limelight, and before he had served a year he was freely asked to run for Mayor. He announced last December. Eight years ago Mr. Dasher was president of the Chamber of Commerce, and that organization, under his administration, made a splendid record. Previously he had been chairman of the board of directors, and was for a number of years one of the recognized leaders of the trade body. He is a married man, with a large family. His eldest son, Arthur L., Jr., is associated with him in the practice of law.

Bridges Smith is perhaps as widely known as any Macon citizen. Since 1888, with the exception of two years, 1908 and 1909, he has been connected with the city government. In 1888 he was elected City Clerk, under Mayor Daisy Price. He served in that capacity until 1899, when Mayor Price died in office, shortly after being re-elected. Mr. Smith was then chosen as his successor, and he stayed in office until 1908, when he voluntarily retired. His friend and Alderman, John T. Moore, then ran against Judge A. L. Miller, and the latter was elected. At the ensuing election, Mr. Moore was again a candidate, and this time he beat Judge Miller. Mr. Moore held office two years, and was opposed at the expiration of his first term by Alderman N. I. Brunner, whom he defeated. A charter provision, which restricts a Mayor to two terms, debars him from running again.

Mr. Smith is avowedly the candidate for the administration, and in his announcement he declared his intention of continuing the policies of the Moore administration.

Before entering politics, Mr. Smith was a newspaper reporter, and during his quarter of a century in public life, he has maintained a newspaper association. He writes special articles and local news for the Macon Telegraph. He has never been defeated for office. Mr. Smith is 66 years of age, though very active in both mind and body.

Mr. Miller, if elected Mayor, will be the youngest executive this city has ever had. He is only 28 years old. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia. He began the practice of law here, but later became manager of a provision house. Two years ago he resumed law, announced his candidacy for the Legislature, and was elected, although it took a recount of the ballots to establish his victory.

It was Mr. Miller's father, Judge A. L. Miller, who served as Mayor of Macon four years ago, defeating John T. Moore, who in turn defeated him. However, Wallace Miller is not running on his father's strength, as the elder Miller is opposed to his son's present political venture. He will get his father's support, however.

Mr. Miller's candidacy was first suggested two weeks ago, but in a very few days the boom became so substantial that Mr. Miller could not resist.

Waycross Council Asked to Explain

Claimed Number of Transactions Were in Violation of City Charter.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Ie became known to-day that some time during September City Council would be requested for information of a number of transactions which have taken place within the past eighteen months, many of the alleged to have been in direct violation of the city charter. It is further alleged that a city employee while drawing his full time salary from the city looked after other work for which he was amply paid.

No names have been disclosed as yet, and it is not known who will be mentioned when the request reaches Council. Some members of Council are inclined to demand an explanation of the published reports, but have not done so.

DENIES DISCRIMINATION CLAIMED BY SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—J. C. Whitney, president of the Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company, is in Savannah for a conference with the directors of the Board of Trade, to go over the allegations of discrimination against Savannah in favor of Jacksonville. Whitney asserted that there was no discrimination against Savannah. Except in a very few instances, he said, the freight rates to Jacksonville from Baltimore and other points in the North are higher than they are to Savannah.

Dublin to Hold Big Agricultural Fair

Entire Twelfth Congressional District Will be Asked to Participate.

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—Plans are well under way for holding a large fair in Dublin this year, to be known as the Twelfth District Agricultural Fair, in which exhibits will be open to all of the counties in the Twelfth Congressional District, of which there are thirteen. The dates have been set at October 14 to 17, inclusive, the week previous to the State fair.

At a meeting held here this week organization of the corporation to handle the show was effected and the officers elected, as follows: President, W. B. Rice; vice presidents, Izzie Bashinski and M. S. Jones; secretary and treasurer, N. G. Bartlett.

The board of directors is as follows: W. B. Rice, M. S. Jones, N. G. Bartlett, Izzie Bashinski, T. W. Hooks, Frank Lawson, F. N. Watkins, H. E. Ray and H. G. Stevens.

Governor John M. Slaton will be invited to make an address during the fair, along with State School Superintendent M. L. Brittain and other prominent men of the State. A delegation of Dublin citizens will go to Atlanta Tuesday for the purpose of extending an invitation to Governor Slaton personally to come down and make an address during the fair.

Runs Small Farm In Heart of Griffin

Young Man Makes Large Yield of Irish Potatoes and Corn.

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—James C. Nutt, one of Griffin's best-known young men, is running a small farm in the heart of the city, and is making good at it. On a plot of land adjoining the cemetery, Nutt planted four acres of Irish cobbler potatoes. So many Irish potatoes in one field had never been seen in this section before.

For some time now the crop has been in process of harvesting. Up to date only a portion of the crop has been disposed of, but 400 bushels of the potatoes have been sold at a price ranging from 80 cents to $1 per bushel.

To increase the returns from the land, Nutt has planted rows of corn between the rows of potatoes, and the corn is now over shoulder high. The corn gives promise of making not less than 25 bushels to the acre, and if season is propitious, a good deal more.

JUDGE DANIEL TOO ILL TO PRESIDE OVER COURTS

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Judge R. T Daniel, of the Flint River Circuit, who was so ill last week that he had to adjourn the August term of Spalding Superior Court, and who has not been able to attend the Butts County Court this week, continues quite ill at his residence here on Poplar street. He will not be able to preside over the Monroe Superior Court, which is to convene at Forsyth Monday.

Judge H. A. Matthews, of Macon, presided over the Butts court for Judge Daniel, and it is likely that he again will preside for ihm next week.

RURAL MAIL CARRIERS TO MEET AT MILLEDGEVILLE

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—The rural mail carriers for the Tenth Congressional District will meet here on Monday, September 1.

A barbecue dinner will be served to the visiting carriers, and plans are being perfected to make their visit an enjoyable one. The following program has been arranged: Prayer by the Rev. Harold Major. Address of welcome by Mayor M. S. Bell and Postmaster R. B. Moore. The response will be made by G. D. Braddock, the president of the association.

BIG BUILDING BOOM CONTINUES IN DUBLIN

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—There are in Dublin at this time in course of erection one six-story building, five three-story buildings, five large warehouses and one large livery stable, which will be the largest in any city in this section of the State. The building boom has held up unusually well in the city this year despite the dull times that have been experienced in some other cities. These buildings are in addition to a large number of residences erected this year, also.

DUBLIN'S NEW THEATER TO OPEN SEPTEMBER 1

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—Dublin's new theater, "The Bertha," which has been in course of erection for the past few months, will open for the season in the second week in September next, the first play being "The Rose Maid."

Other plays booked for the coming season include the "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "Polly of the Circus," "The Blue Bird," "Everywoman," Fields' Minstrelts, "The Leopard Spots" and a large number of other famous plays.

DUBLIN PUTS TIGHT LID UPON IMMORAL SHOWS

DUBLIN, Aug. 23. This city has put the lid on tight on shows, both motion picture and regular theaters, and has just created and elected a board of censors, whose duty it shall be to supervise the theaters of the city and rule out all immoral plays and pictures. The members of the board were elected by the City Council Tuesday night last.

SAVANNAH SHRINERS PLAN BIG RECEPTION

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Completing preparations for the reception of William W. Erwin, of Wheeling, W. Va., Imperial Potentate of the Shriners of North America, other members of the Imperial Divan of the Shriners and visitors from various temples, who will come to Savannah next month, the entire seventh floor of the Hotel Savannah has been reserved for them.

The Shriners of the Imperial Divan came in response to an invitation from Potentate Robert L. Travis, of Allee Temple, of this city, to attend a ceremonial session of that temple on September 12.

$8,000 IN CASH PRIZES IN LIST OF STATE FAIR

More Than Five Thousand Displays To Be Made at Macon. Nine County Exhibits.

MACON, Aug. 23.—Officials of the Georgia State Fair Association are enthusiastic over the prospects for this year's show. Already more exhibitors have applied than ever before, and the indications are that in all of the departments there will be a total of more than 5,000 different displays. The prizes this year aggregate more than $8,000 in cash, in addition to the special premiums given by individuals and corporations.

Nine counties have contracted to make county agricultural exhibits, and probably three more will enter the competition. Cobb County, represented by Gid Morris, has taken the first prize of $1,200 for three successive years, but this year Houston County proposes to contest for this award. W. C. Lewis, of Houston, is arranging that county's exhibit.

Racing will be a special feature this year, and purses awarded will amount to several thousand dollars. This will be the first State fair racing since 1908. A motordrome also is being erected for motorcycle racing.

Secretary Harry Robert is booking individual attractions for the midway instead of engaging a carnival company. More than 50 shows have already been secured, and more will be provided.

Judges Are Named.

Announcement has been made of the judges for the various departments, as follows:

Farm Implements—W. W. Elfe, Morris Putzel and W. G. Lewis.

Poultry and Pet Stock—Loring Brown.

Textile—John A. Porter.

Horticulture and Floriculture—Dan C. Horgan.

Flour, Tea and Coffee—Mrs. John C. Dietz, Miss Henrietta Glover and Mrs. Sol Hoge.

Carriages, Buggies and Wagons—W. A. Goodyear and W. P. Welsiger.

Musical Instruments—Mrs. I. H. Adams.

Canning Clubs—A. W. Smith, Mrs. W. D. Lamar and J. Walter Collins.

Fine Arts—T. O. Chestney and Rufus W. Evans.

Dairy and Beef Cattle—Sam N. Warren.

Swine and Sheep—Professor H. B. Carpenter.

Dairy—Sam N. Warren.

Apiary—W. V. McCook and C. E Glisson.

Horses, Mules, Ponies and Colts—Professor Milton P. Jarnigan.

Machinery—W. W. Elfe, Morris Putzel and W. C. Lewis.

Textile Machinery—John A. Porter.

Cakes, Pies, Breads, etc.—Mrs. John C. Dietz, Miss Henrietta Glover and Mrs. Sol Hoge.

Needle and Fancy Work—Mrs. J. Ross Bowdre, Mrs. J. C. Morton and Mrs. W. E. Cookerly.

Fight Over Waycross Fire Department On

Council Likely to Pass Bills to Enlarge Brigade Over Chairman's Protest.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Unless Chairman H. Hengeveld, of the Police and Fire Committee, changes his opinion, a resolution providing to enlarge the Waycross fire department will be passed over his head. Two resolutions on the subject have been introduced in City Council, one by Alderman Beaton and the other by Alderman Morton.

Chairman Hengeveld claimed the city's financial condition would not permit any further expense for the fire department. Alderman Morton replied that when there was talk of making former Fire Chief Thomas Ballentyne, of Savannah, chief of the Waycross department, Chairman Hengeveld was willing to pay more money to get Ballentyne, and it seems the city is as well off now as when Mr. Hengeveld wanted to make the change.

The resolution for the employment of more men has enough votes to pass, according to Mr. Morton, but he will make no effort to get it through Council until Mr. Hengeveld makes a report.

Edwards Approves Military Highway

Savannah to Tybee Road Would Cost About $300,000—Congressman Sees Benefit.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—That the construction of a military highway from Savannah to Tybee, as advocated by Congressman Charles G. Edwards, would be of great benefit to the entire State, is the belief of J. N. King, well-known cotton factor of Rome.

At interior points the project is not looked upon as one that will be of benefit to Savannah alone, but is considered a movement on the part of the Government that would result in good to the State at large.

The proposed highway will cost approximately $300,000, but it is believed that it would be money well expended since all sections would be benefited.

WARE COUNTY TAX RATE REDUCED 10 PER CENT

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Because of the big increase in the taxable property in Ware over last year's returns, the county tax rate was to-day reduced from 80 cents a hundred to 70 cents a hundred, with prospects bright for the same decrease another year. Approximately $50,000 will be spent by the county on road work this year, according to the budget announcement.

MERCHANTS OF AUGUSTA PLAN BIG TRADE BODY

Chamber of Commerce and Merchants and Manufacturers' Ass'n to Quit Field.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 23.—The Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Augusta has accepted the proposition of A. W. McKeand, of Atlanta, to take charge of a new commercial organization. To do this Mr. McKeand states that $60,000, or $20,000 a year for three years, must be secured.

The object of the new movement is to replace the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, which, with practically the same object in view, have been working at cross purposes for some years. It is stated that the Chamber of Commerce is making arrangements to wind up its business. This would leave the new organization planned in full command of the field.

At a meeting of citizens Mr. McKeand told them his proposition and some details of the work. It was agreed that his method was good. The new organization, which the officers and directors of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association agreed to, will be a consolidation of the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

Five Departments.

The new organization will have five departments.

First, the wholesale trade department, which will direct the trades trips; the salesman's school; reports of trade openings; rebates on fares, and will foster a spirit of friendly rivalry between the merchants.

Second, the retail trades department, which shall handle all things pertaining to the retail trade. Especially will the credit bureau, now such a valuable asset of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, come under this department.

Third, the publicity department, from which will come all such literature as that pertaining to the city, its advantages, etc., and through the department conventions will be secured, special feature weeks arranged, etc.

Fourth, the industrial promotion department, which will handle all business pertaining to industrial work.

Fifth, the transportation department, under which will come the freight bureau, the most valuable asset of the Chamber of Commerce.

To begin this organization will entail much preliminary work, including a campaign of local men, directed by Mr. McKeand.

Augustans of all classes, whether in sympathy with the Chamber of Commerce or the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, have taken kindly to the new organization plan, and it bids fair to begin a new and entirely prosperous era for the city, whose natural advantages are such that with proper handling little is needed to make her the truly progressive city she deserves to be.

Waycross to Vote on Government Change

Hard Fight To Be Made by Both Sides—Election October 4.

WAYCROSS, GA., Aug. 23.—Voters of Waycross on October 4 will decide whether to change the form of city government to a combination city manager-commission form or retain the aldermanic form with a board of aldermen of twelve members instead of six.

A special election will be held then and the registration books are now open. It is known a strong fight will be made by both sides, and at this time it is hard to predict which will win. The city manager form of government has much support, but it is doubtful if those in favor of the change will work as hard to get the new charter approved as the opponents will work to defeat the measure which the Legislature passed this year.

If the city manager plan is approved Waycross will be the first Georgia city to adopt it.

Gov. Slaton Vetoes Chatham Land Grant

Says Resolutions Had Not Been Properly Passed by the Legislature.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Savannahans were surprised to read that Governor Slaton had vetoed a resolution providing for land grants to the trustees of the Chatham Academy.

Governor Slaton explained he vetoed the resolution because it had not been properly passed. It relates to disposition of ungranted lands in the county. Acts passed in 1788 and 1856 vested in the Chatham Academy and the Union Society considerable ungranted lands in Chatham. The purpose of the resolution is to authorize these institutions to claim the lands under the old acts.

G. M. C. OPENS SEPTEMBER 1.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—The Georgia Military College will open for the fall session on September 2. President Horton is expecting the largest attendance in the history of the institution. The Hon. Roy Stubbs, of Eatonton, will make the opening address.

FIRST BALE AT MILLEDGEVILLE.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—The first bale of cotton was marketed here yesterday by Mike Jackson, a negro, living in Wilkinson County. The cotton was sold to Mr. John Barrett, and brought 15 cents a pound.

HON. RALPH O. COCHRAN DELIVERS OPENING SPEECH AT CLAYTON, GA.

Candidate for United States Senate in Strong Address Outlines His Views On State and National Issues.

I am glad to be in Clayton and have an opportunity of addressing the people of Rabun County. You have heard the expression, "From Rabun Gap to Tybee Light," and it is fitting that in my campaign for the United States Senate I should deliver the keynote address in this county—the address that in a substantial measure carries my position on the questions that the people of Georgia will be interested in in casting their votes in the election next summer for a United States Senator—and this for the reason that I will show considerable activity in this campaign which will extend from the mountains to the sea.

It is further true that you people of Rabun live in a county that was established in 1819, almost a hundred years ago, and it bears the name of one of the Chief Executives of this State. This county has furnished many men in the public arena during its history who have been worthy sons and distinguished servants of the people.

I am here to-day in advocacy of my candidacy for the United States Senate. At the suggestion of some zealous friends, I entered this race some time ago. It is an undertaking worthy of any man's highest ambition, and I entered the field conscious of the great responsibilities that will rest upon me if elected, and also conscious of the difficulties that confront me in achieving this ambition.

I want to tell you here to-day that I am going to Washington. I expect to win this race, and I have every confidence in ultimate success. It is a big undertaking, but I believe that the sentiment of the people of Georgia to-day is in favor of electing a business man, a man in the best vigor of his life, and one who will endeavor to represent all people alike and all interests alike within the borders of the State.

It is true that probably in point of years, as I am only 39 years of age, I am the youngest man who has ever offered in the State of Georgia for this high position. During the progress of the campaign I will be confronted with the charge that I am too youthful, and further that I have not had sufficient experience. I want to say in advance in answer to any such criticism that may be raised, that many of the best political servants that this country has ever had have been men who have achieved success and attained high political positions early in life. With a long stretch of years before them they well used them, and therefore their services were of inestimable worth. As a matter of fact, it is common knowledge that any man is in his prime from thirty-five to fifty years of age. In fact, the Constitution of the United States requires that one must be only 30 years old to be eligible for the United States Senate.

I am frank to tell you that at no period in life do I anticipate ability for greater labor or clearer thought. It is true that I am inexperienced on many matters pertaining to state affairs, but I do insist that I am capable of learning and that I can count upon a reasonable number of years in which to be of service to my State and country if honored with this high position.

In advocacy of my candidacy, I place before the people of Georgia the proposition of electing a business man. I can properly be classed as one of the young business men of this State. It occurs to me that in these times of industrial growth and progress that the best thing that the people of any State can do is to elect a larger percentage of the men of the business circles of their State. If there is any question that requires business ability and skill to properly settle, I should say that those which pertain to the nature of the laws under which we shall live are pre-eminently the ones where business experience, understanding of the people's wants and the ultimate effect are the ones that literally demand the business man to pass upon. A slogan of the day in which we live is more business and less theory.

Prejudice and Demagogy to Play No Part in Campaign.

I want to tell you here and now that as far as I am concerned you will never see any trace of demagogy in anything that I may say or do. I shall deal frankly with the people of Georgia, and my campaign will be devoid of tricks and makeshifts. My candidacy will be put up to the people of Georgia strictly on its merits, without frills or deception. I am nothing more than a plain business man. I have no pre-eminent ability on any lines, but I assure you in advance that if I am elected I shall ever endeavor to follow the paths of right and do my duty. This campaign as far as I am concerned will never be marred with the demagogism that arouses the prejudices of the rich against the poor, the class against the class, the man against the man, or the young man against the old man. I shall take the position in the beginning and shall maintain it throughout the campaign that if I am elected I want to be elected by all classes of our citizens, and if elected I pledge you most sincerely and earnestly that I will represent all the people of Georgia and all the lawful interests within her borders.

Under my political canopy, so to speak, all classes of our citizens can rally. No prejudice has ever taken root in my bosom against the Jew in favor of the Gentile, against the Catholic in favor of the Protestant, against the Third party man in favor of the Democrat or against any man or class of men within our State who may belong to different parties, political faith, social circle or other relation contrary to that I occupy. I am frank to say that any man who harbors hatred for any class of our citizens is unworthy of the high position to which I now aspire. In truth, the bigot, the maligner of character, the small man, should have no place in shaping the policies and destiny of this country. The same sun shines on all of us alike, we are the children of the same Creator, and in its last analysis there is no great difference in us anyway.

I have always endeavored to be fair to all the interests of capital; I have always endeavored to be fair to the cause of labor; I shall endeavor to be fair in all of my relations with my fellow man, whether that relation be in private business matters or in public position, and if I go down in defeat contending for the wisdom of such a position I shall do so gladly and you shall have my appreciation. It is well that I state on this occasion that I have never been aligned with any of the political factions of Georgia. During the past few decades when partisan heat reached high water mark, I have always stood, since the early years of my manhood, as a free man and have acted on every election day in the way that I thought my vote would count for most looking to the best interests of the people of this State. We have been confronted at a number of elections with partisan politics and partisan issues. I thank God that we are now living in a more desirable day.

I am in favor of no class legislation. All legislation should be founded on the idea of the greatest good for the greatest number, irrespective of nationalities, wealth, education or anything else. However, if there is to be any class legislation, it should be in favor of the biggest class, and I should say that this class is composed of those of moderate means. If I ever cast a vote, if elected to the United States Senate, for any class whatsoever, it will be for the class here designated.

In my campaign for the Senate throughout the entire time I shall remain absolutely a free man. I shall not tie myself up with promises and political alignments. If elected I want to be a free man to represent the entire people of Georgia.

To men of experience and men of business affairs it is an accepted truth that no man need be a Crossus or an intellectual giant to represent well his people in legislative halls. What counts most is industry, integrity and sound common sense. If these elements are united in a candidate, he deserves well at the hands of his people. The making of laws and the administration of government is largely a business matter where good judgment and good conscientious service avail much.

Permit me to say also that God has endowed me with a degree of manhood and independence, so much so that I can tell you in all frankness and truth that if you do not see fit to elect me that it will be perfectly all right and I assure you that you will be left behind over which I will brood through the coming years. In this independence and manhood that I declare to you, there is no place for mudslinging and assassination of character. I will not indulge in any of this nor will I permit any of my friends to do so if within my power to prevent. The campaign does not involve personal issues. The issues are more substantial and more worthy of the intelligence of the people of Georgia.

I stand for good government in all of its forms, and I shall ever be the enemy of bad principles and practices that are opposed to its preservation and promotion. I shall ever stand for the principles of government that represent the best interests of the farmer as well as the merchant, and in general, the best interests of every man of every class of citizens within the confines of this great State. I was born and reared on a farm in Campbell County, and I feel that my years of association with the people of the rural districts, their needs and their interests, have made me to know once for all the important recognition that should be accorded to them. Then with the business experience that I have had elsewhere, as an education in after years, I feel that I can represent the entire people of this State with fellowship of feeling and wisdom and justice to all.

Economy in National Expenditures Insisted Upon.

At this time I want to put the people of Georgia on notice that, if elected as one of the United States Senators from Georgia, I will become in a measure a watchdog of your treasury. I have long been convinced that the practices that we are following of continuously raising taxes on property, businesses, corporations, and otherwise, should be stopped. There is hardly a session of the Georgia Legislature or a session of the United States Congress that some new form of taxing the people or else increasing the old forms is not projected. I ask you, in the name of reason, when and where will these agitations and practices stop? There is an eternal cry of more money, that our institutions are being throttled and that the State and nation are lagging in progress on account of insufficient funds. You know as well as I do that if the State of Georgia had five times as much revenue for the Legislature to spend that every dollar of it would be spent and they would still be in need of more money.

As a matter of fact, unless the increase of the burdens of taxation is not halted, taxes will become very oppressive to the people of this country. Take your State tax, your county tax, your city tax, your professional tax, your corporation tax, your inheritance tax, your income tax, your occupation tax, your road tax, your local school tax, your poll tax, and possibly others, and I tell you when any man gets through at the end of the year with paying these various appropriations he has done a fairly good year's work to have made profit enough out of his business to meet them. The philosophy of all taxation, according to my thinking, is that instead of the everlasting increase in the forms of taxing the people and also the amounts, that the revenue of the State should only increase with the enhancement of property, more money coming into the State, and more citizens as our common population. With an increase of revenue along these lines, with a corresponding limitation of appropriations, our State and country will always be in a solvent condition and our people will be prosperous and happy.

I have all along been of the opinion that our people should not look too much for support to the Government under which they live. The greatest men that this State or country have ever produced have been men who have worked their way through difficulties and hardships. The best principle of government that can be advocated is that of throwing every citizen that is able-bodied upon his own resources. Therefore, the sentiment that is rapidly taking root in the States of this country that we should look more to the bounties of the Government is a cancer in the body politic and will ultimately prove fatal if it is not checkmated. History records the fact that the decline of the Roman Empire set in with the free corn that was distributed to the population. It has been estimated that at one time more than 300,000 people were fed at public expense. The manhood of this country has always been honest and hardy, and we have builded a republic that is the light of the world, and if it continues in its leadership the same manhood and independence that led us into freedom must care for the affairs of state through the coming years.

Opposes Unnecessary Legislation.

In our zeal for this cause or that cause that may be advocated, we should always be conservative in our thoughts, speech and actions. There is no business, much less a government, that can go forward in splendor and success where fits and spasms characterize those who are interested. Sanity should characterize every man's discussion of public questions, and I tell you that when your vote is cast on the side of conservatism you will seldom err from what is best for your family, yourself and your country.

It is true that State laws and National laws, in fact laws of all kinds, should be somewhat in the vanguard of actual practice and in a measure become high ideals for the manhood and womanhood of this State and country, as well as for the rising generation. However, we all know that laws that are not supported with public sentiment are of no avail and become nullities on our statute books.

I am further of the opinion that we are passing too many laws in our State and Nation. It seems that we have arrived at the point where we are law-ridden; almost unnumbered laws that everybody is presumed to know, but on the other hand there is no one who does know. There is much legislation that is transgressing the inalienable rights of property and person and much of that that is suggested tends too much this way. I took occasion not long ago to count the sections of laws that compose the Code of Georgia. It is astounding but true that there are approximately 8,000 sections of laws under which we are living this day. It has almost gotten to the point where a man's mind must be an encyclopedia to carry the innumerable laws governing cities, counties, State and Nation. It reminds one of the old adage that that people is best governed which is least governed.

Favors Federal Aid for Good Roads.

I want to say on this occasion that, if elected to the United States Senate, I shall stand at all times for the cause of good roads. If we ever expect to have great systems of roads traversing this entire country the National Government will have to take hold of the proposition. It strikes me that money appropriated for this purpose is just as much within the Constitution of this country as the right to appropriate funds to deepen the waterways and improve harbors. By navigation the products of the country are distributed and it is a method of travel. The public roads of the country are the avenues of distribution whereby the products of the country reach the centers and are ultimately distributed throughout the country and the world. Furthermore, public roads are used by everybody, and the benefits derived from appropriations for this cause are participated in by all the people of the country. What cause more equitable or more worthy could be mentioned for the appropriation of public funds? The additional circumstance associated with improved public roads is the enhancement of property. Down in my country it is generally estimated that property on a macadamized road is never worth less than double as much as property on a road that has not been so improved. Also think of the convenience, pleasure and general benefits that are derived by reason of the construction of such thoroughfares. Think of the benefits to your county or any county that might be mentioned that would be derived from the construction of such highways. In consideration of these substantial reasons, I shall ever be a friend to the cause of good roads.

High Cost of Living Caused by Not Producing Enough.

Any people or any legislative body has lost sight of the greatest cause when they do not cultivate and improve the great agricultural interests of their county and State. You may talk of laws that curb vice, you may ponder over measures that involve appropriations, you may consider well laws that look to the raising of revenue, but back and more fundamental and of far greater importance is the great proposition of production. What we need most is more corn, more cotton, more of all the farm products, more manufacturing, more businesses that produce, businesses that feed and clothe the world. That is to-day, in my opinion, the prime reason for the high cost of living. We are just not producing enough.

The people of Georgia will never reach that point of prosperity that is most desired until they have learned to produce enough to get the other man's money and then have enough to live on so as to save them from the condition of having to buy the other fellow's products. I trust that I will live to see that day when by education and disposition the people of Georgia will learn and desire to produce more than they consume in the way of farm products, that splendid day when cotton, the staple product, will be the surplus crop, that new era when every town and hamlet can boast of numerous manufacturing enterprises, when Georgia-made goods are sold around the world. Let us make the people of other States become the buyers of our products, and we the recipients of the splendid income.

If elected to the United States Senate I shall always do the best that in me lies to get increased appropriations for the educational interests of the various States of this Union where agricultural training is taught. The National Government, in wisdom, through the Agricultural Department has started up a system of education and scientific experiment along agricultural lines which will prove, I have no doubt, to be of the greatest service to the material interests of this country of any department known to the National Government. It will be my purpose to work for and to vote for all measures and appropriations which look to the improvement and enlargement of this great cause in the dispensation of National funds.

As I am elected to the United States Senate I want to pledge you here and now my unswerving support of all measures that look to the general betterment of humanity. We are living in times when the humanity of man is manifested in its most splendid form. Laws that are humanitarian in their nature, just in their spirit, broad in their conception of human rights will always find a friend in me. The old idea has long since passed away that every man should live for himself. Thank God that we live in a better and brighter day when the living and the hopes of humanity are upon a more just basis and there is the recognition of the higher laws of nature and the beneficent conceptions of the Creator of us all.

As an incentive to high purpose and lofty achievement, we should bear in mind that the names and memories of those only are revered and live in history who lived and worked to do something for others. Selfishness, living for self, has never made any man great in the estimation of his fellowman. The world has gotten rid of most of the tyranny that has characterized it in the past, but the tyranny of selfishness and the tyranny of wrong should continue and will continue as long as civilization endures. Ambition to do something for others as well as self should characterize the life of every man.

Favors Exploiting the Great Resources of Georgia.

There is another matter that I wish to speak of to which I will give as much ability and time as possible if elected. I refer to the advertising of the resources of Georgia and the entire Southland. This advertising by one in this exalted position by speech and otherwise can be made of inestimable worth to this State and section. Georgia and the entire South needs more capital and more people. Any man who is in favor of any law or laws that tend to antagonize capital and mistreat the institutions in which it is invested is an enemy of his State. In addition, what county in Georgia would not be better off if it had twice as many people in it as it has to-day? A multiplication of population means better roads, better schools, better churches, better mail facilities, better communities in general. These ends are worthy of note and should always receive the attention of the representatives of this State in these high positions.

If elected to the United States Senate, it will be my purpose to perform well what might be termed the small duties incident to this high office. Those who might desire positions either for themselves or their boys, who might at any time wish information concerning any matters in the city of Washington pertaining to the Government, or local matters, those who desire appropriations for this purpose or that purpose in their respective cities and districts, in general those who want ready service of their representatives in getting something or doing something where their United States Senator can be of service to them, I will be the man to call upon. I pledge you in advance that no considerable amount of my time will be taken up in the study of foreign questions or the preparation of what might be termed big speeches, but, on the other hand, I will try to inject as much business in the situation as possible and serve in a business way the people of Georgia, not only concerning such matters as I hear mentioned, but in promoting and voting for legislation which will promote the general interests of the State as well as the country at large.

I am deeply interested in the cause of education in all of its forms. Our public schools are the greatest institution that has become a part of the government of this State. Public schools touch every man's interest, and in them is involved the element of an elementary education which means better citizenship and more happiness on the part of our entire population. Almost as essential are the institutions of higher learning of this State. Also our colleges of technical training which prepare the young man and young woman to make a living have probably become the most popular institutions in the way of higher training. The old idea has long since passed away to educate the smart boys in classical training either for the ministry, medicine or the law. This conception of higher learning is in a measure passing away, and technical training is largely the slogan of the times in which we live.

I do not know how you people in Rabun County feel about it, but I imagine that you have about the same feeling and sentiment that we people of Fulton have, as well as the people of all the other counties of this State—that is the constantly recurring panics that disturb and distress the business interests of our country. Why these panics occur no man can assign with accuracy the immediate causes of these recurring panics. However, I am inclined to believe that the most prominent cause is the drastic reform legislation that sets up about every eight or ten years. I am in favor of a certain amount of reform. We all know that in the great economy of nature change must take place either for good or ill. The country that does not improve its condition must of necessity retrograde. On the other hand, I am opposed, and I shall always vote accordingly, to reforms and reform measures which come in bunches and have the inevitable effect of upsetting the entire business of this State and country. As far as I am concerned, I want a little rest so that I may have an opportunity of accumulating some of the world's goods while in the vigor of manhood, and not look too much to the eradication of all evil and the improvement of our institutions and country on the Utopian idea for our children and our children's children. As I see it, the present prosperity we now enjoy is the result of reform.

We often lose sight of the untold good that has been accomplished by the people of our day and our fathers before us. In fact, we live in the best times and we constitute the greatest people that this world has ever seen. Six thousand years of recorded history does not find a parallel. There is not so much ill in man and the human race as we are often led to believe. I have often said that the sorriest man in any community is a pretty good fellow after all. That man in this day of enlightenment and the society in which we live. He works hard and usually by the sweat of his brow he provides for wife and children. He is interested in educational advantages of his family, he looks forward with a feverish mind to the ultimate condition when no longer he will be the mainstay of these loved ones. We are rich in charity, we are humane in the treatment of those who are unfortunate, our ideals are high, and we are recipients by reason of our intelligence and industry of most of the good that the world affords.

Another point that I wish to bring out: Too much experiment is always dangerous. The people of any State or country that is experimenting with this law, this institution, and this new idea are apt to fall into the ways that will lead them into departures from the fundamentals of their institutions which probably will prove dangerous and fatal. It is always better to let other people, other States and other men, whether in business or affairs of state, experiment and ascertain the truth, and when the wisdom of its adoption becomes clear and of no loss to that people who follow in the light of this experience. Of course some experiment along sane and conservative lines is good for all people, and if such is not indulged in, they are liable to become laggards and drones. However, the people of Georgia should never become distinguished as a people of experiment, and the State should never be known as an incubator of new ideas.

If I am elected to the United States Senate, I shall always stand for clean government, wise laws and pure administration. We live in a country where in theory every man's chance is alike. God has made us unequal in body and mind, but under the Constitution and laws of the United States, as drawn by those immortal men, the fathers of this country, whose names shall live as long as recorded history is preserved, imbedded in that great instrument and laws, the general principle of equal rights to all and an equal chance in the struggles of this life. No man should ask for more than justice and an equal chance. No man should be willing to surrender to any other man his equal chance and justice in the race of life. I shall always be opposed to plunder in any form and shall ever stand for the best laws to perpetuate and preserve the Government as founded by the fathers of this country.

However, it is true that it does seem like something is wrong at times with our institutions when one man in the short space of a lifetime can accumulate a billion of dollars. We have in these United States one-sixteenth of the population of the world and we possess one-fourth of its entire wealth. Such a splendid commentary upon the people who in only a century or two past found the vast expanse of our country a wilderness and here the institutions and wealth to which we are heirs.

Amid the masterful strides made by this country within the past fifty years, on account of a serious handicap, the South is just now coming into her own. Georgia and the entire Southern States are rich in natural resources—we have the climate, we have the soil, we have the minerals, we have the water power, and, thank God, we have the brain and the industry that will yet make of our Southland the fairest spot beneath the sun.

There is no use for history except the lessons that it teaches. We are living in the light of many experiences of the past, and as the light of these experiences falls upon our pathway our days will be splendid and our accomplishments beyond the dreams of men.

I love Georgia and her people. Born within her borders, educated within her institutions, associated with Georgia people, I bear to her the wormth of sympathy and childish affection that I trust will continue unabated during the time that I shall live. The mountains lifting their lofty peaks amid the skies, the old red hills of Georgia, dear to the heart of all, the table lands, rich and fertile, and extended in area, her rippling streams in music wind their way to the mighty sea, seven out of the nine climates with which the Nation is characterized, I am devoted to this people and this mighty State.

With renewed purpose, and a common ambition, let us press forward in the mighty causes of civilization and the accomplishment of higher ideals.

(Adv.)

SOCIETY NEWS of the SOUTH

Waycross

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Mrs. V. L. Stanton and Miss Mary Stanton have returned from a visit to Atlanta and points in North Georgia.

Miss Clifton Wing, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. B. Thorpe, has returned to her home in Macon.

Mr. and Mrs. Dessau Bunn, en route to their home at Fairfax from St. Simons Island, where they spent the summer, were guests of relatives in Waycross this week.

Miss Jessie Lou Stanley visited relatives in Brunswick this week.

Miss Lelia Paschall, who has been visiting in Atlanta, will spend some time in Rome before returning home.

Mrs. R. E. Brown and children have returned from a visit to relatives in Scranton, Pa.

Mrs. J. P. Dukes and children visited in Savannah this week.

Misses Viola and Ruby Clemens are visiting relatives in Savannah.

Following a short visit in New York City, Mr. L. Volney Williams will join Mrs. Williams and children in Michigan for an extended visit. Mr. Williams sailed for New York from Savannah Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gaston Lewis, of New York, are in the city for a visit of several months.

Mrs. E. J. Seay and Miss Elwood Seay have returned from a visit to Columbia, S. C.

Mrs. J. P. Moody, of Florida, is the guest of Mrs. W. T. Seaman.

Mrs. A. J. Miller left Thursday for Wilmington, N. C., where she will visit relatives.

Mrs. M. Z. Hinnant and children have returned to Wilmington, N. C., after a visit to friends and relatives in Waycross.

Mrs. C. R. Powrie and little daughter, Jean, of New York, arrived Wednesday to join Mr. Powrie and will make Waycross their home.

Members of the Friday Club were entertained yesterday by Misses Lucile and Susie Sutton.

Miss Aline Jeffers is expected home shortly from a visit to her sister, Mrs. John D. Tucker, in Birmingham, Ala.

Crawfordville

CRAWFORDVILLE, GA., Aug. 23.—Miss Virginia Butler, of Madison, is the guest of Miss Frances Burgess. Several delightful entertainments have been given in her honor among them receptions by Misses Melton and Asbury.

Miss Mattie Jordan, of Atlanta, spent a few days here the past week the guest of Miss Blanche Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Golucke, Mr. A. G. and Mrs. R. W. Golucke and daughters, Anna Catherine and Mary Gordon, are spending the week at Hot Springs, N. C.

Miss Lillian Asbury leaves this week for Elberton to visit Miss Allen, who was one of Miss Asbury's attentive guests last week.

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Owens and daughter, Aileene, of DeLand, Fla., are spending some time here with friends.

Colonel and Mrs. J. Frank and daughters, Cornelia and Nell, of Dothan, Ala., spent several days here as the guests of Mr. W. P. Reid.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Leary and Guy, Jr., have returned to Augusta after spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Gee. Miss Martha Griffith returned home with them.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Anthony and Mr. L. P. McCord, of East Palm Beach Fla., are here visiting.

Miss Mary Fannie Harris, of Augusta, is the guest of Miss Emma Chapman.

Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Gunn have returned from Augusta and Atlanta, where they spent several days last week.

Colonel and Mrs. J. A. Beasley are visiting in Atlanta.

Mesdames J. V. Andrews, J. H. Callahan and W. C. Andrews, all of this city, are spending some time at Borden Wheeler, Ala.

Miss Minnie Oliva Park will entertain a house party this week. Those invited are Misses Mary Holden, of Athens; Anita Sanford of Augusta, and Kathleen Kendrick, of Sharon.

Milledgeville

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Joseph Cleveland Cooper entertained on Thursday evening in honor of her sister, Miss Carrie Talbot. Hearts-dice was played, after which a delightful salad course was served. Those present were the Misses Susan Myrick, Jesse Allen, Maggie Bivins, Floride Allen, Isabella Allen, Pauline Nisbit, Helen Maxwell, Hattie Pottle, Mary Amos and Francis Conn, Edwin Allen, James Sibley, Erwin Sibley, John Sibley, Malcolm Flemister, Charles Conn, Henry McAuliffe, Charles Brown, Arthur Carr, Stewart Wootten and James Clarl, of Atlanta.

Miss Marguerite Joseph entertained on Monday at a suit-case shower for Miss Katherine Scott, who leaves soon for an extended trip through the North. Each lady brought some gift for the honoree.

Mrs. Frank Bone entertained at her home on Greene street Wednesday afternoon in honor of Miss Francis Stevens, of Macon, when "42" was played, after which a salad course was served. Those present were Mrs. W. T. Garrard, Mrs. Y. A. Little, Mrs. Cleve Cooper, Mrs. Lodrick Jones, Mrs. Culver Kidd, Mrs. John Barrett, Mrs. I. C. Case, Mrs. E. A. Tignor, Mrs. E. E. Bass, Miss Carrie Talbot, Miss Beuna Barrett and Miss Annie McKinley.

Another social event of the week was a party given by Miss Katie Cline on Tuesday afternoon, her guests being Mrs. L. M. Jones, Jr., Mrs. Harry Bone, Mrs. Frank Bone, Mrs. Logan Griswold, Mrs. Bee Bethune, Mrs. George Brantley, Miss Francis Conn, Miss Frances Stevens, Miss Pauline McKinley, Miss Annie McKinley and Miss Hattie Pottle.

Covington

COVINGTON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Clarence Terrell entertained at the Lyric Theater on Thursday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Alve Cooper, of Savannah, who is the guest of Mrs. J. O. Cooper. Mrs. Terrell's guests included Mrs. Alva Cooper, Mrs. J. O. Cooper, the Misses Eloise Cooper, Ida and Annie Higgins, Eleanor Butler, Frances Henderson, Hyda Heard and Bonner Sims, Mrs. H. D. Terrell and Mrs. J. Bain Terrell.

Miss Louise Whitehead entertained on Tuesday evening at her home on Monticello street with a progressive conversation party in honor of her house guest, Miss Ella Mae Ellis, of Macon. The guests included the Misses Natalie Turner, Annie Pauline Anderson, Larirelle Meadors, Dorothy Lee, Ruth Weldon, of Talladega, Alabama; Frances Dearing and Marion Sherman, James Lester, Jim Wells, Rufus Franklin, Charles Ellis, Guy Robinson, Candler Harwell, Ivey Smith, Lamar Smith, Reginald Robinson, Perrino Dearing, Fred Bush and Guy Rogers.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Fowler, Miss Louise Fowler, Mrs. J. W. Stephenson, Miss Eva Stephenson, Mrs. Lillian Stephenson Weaver, Roy Stephenson, of Tampa, Fla., and Hugh Wright were among those from Covington who attended the Duffy-Stephenson wedding, which was a pretty event of Thursday, taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Parker Ernest Duffy at Morrow.

Mrs. Thomas Berry entertained a number of relatives last week at a family reunion, the guests including Mr. and Mrs. John P. Blanton, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Harris, of Alabama; Mrs. J. W. Loyd, of Dawson, Ala.; Mrs. R. L. Tye, of Mansfield; Mrs. H. B. Thacker, of Oxford, and Mrs. A. J. Blanton.

Moultrie

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—Miss Lucile Autrey entertained the members of the Entre Nous Club on Saturday morning. Assisting Miss Autrey were her sisters, Mrs. Roy Autrey and Mrs. Clyde Taylor.

Complimentary to her sister, Miss Mary Walker, of Atlanta, Mrs. T. W. Maddox entertained at a "42" party on Tuesday morning.

Mrs. A. W. Chase entertained a number of her friends on Thursday afternoon at a domino party.

Sylvania

SYLVANIA Aug. 23.—Miss Nelle Davis entertained at cards on Tuesday morning for the Misses Willie Christie and Lucile Evans, of Savannah. First prize, a box of stationery, was won by Miss Ruby Mauldin. Those present were the Misses Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, of Atlanta; Bertha Pearson, Maud Hilton, Jusnita Williamson, Ruby Mauldin, Kate Patrick, Lucy Morel, Sadie Lovett and Esther, Ruth and Kathleen Mimms.

Mrs. John C. Hollingsworth entertained the Ladies' Culture Club on Tuesday afternoon. The program consisted of a study of "Famous Georgians."

A party enjoying an outing at Brannen's Bridge on Wednesday included Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Powell, Mesdames A. T. Perkins, Lecie Davis and J. W. Overstreet; the Misses Mattie Zoe Mallory, Willie Christie, Lucile Evans, Nelle Davis and Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, Julian Cooper, Willie Robbins, Spencer Powell, Bates Lovett and Edward Overstreet.

Mrs. R. F. Jarrell, Jr., entertained the Civic Club on Wednesday afternoon. An interesting program was rendered, followed by delicious refreshments.

Mrs. J. C. Hollingsworth entertained at cards on Tuesday evening for Miss Mattie Mallory and Paul Mallory, of Clyo. Those present were the Misses Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, of Atlanta; Miss Mattie Zoe Mallory, of Clyo; Miss Ruby Mauldin, Miss Nelle Davis, Paul Mallory, of Clyo; Abe Greenberg, Spencer Powell, Edward Overstreet and Bates Lovett.

Tallahassee

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 23.—Mrs. H. T. Felkel entertained informally at her home on College avenue Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. W. E. Shackelford, of Jacksonville, was a recent visitor to the Capital City.

Governor Park Trammell left Thursday for a ten days' vacation at Waynesville, N. C., where he joined Mrs. Trammell.

Mrs. S. D. Chittenden at her beautiful home on Park avenue on Wednesday morning entertained at auction bridge in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Wight, of Cairo, Ga., who is visiting her for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Winthrop returned Thursday from Atlantic Beach, having made the return trip from Tallahassee in their automobile.

The regular Thursday night's dance was enjoyed by the society folk at the Elks' Club.

Pensacola

PENSACOLA, Aug. 23.—Pensacola society was much interested in the marriage on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock of Mrs. Mary Dallas Strong, formerly a social favorite in Pensacola, to William F. Quicksall, which took place in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Strong recently visited Mrs. Albert Hyer at her beautiful Bayshore residence, Virginia Lodge, and while here was entertained by Mrs. E. J. Wilson and many other of her old friends.

Mrs. W. H. Northup, who has been spending the past month in the North Carolina mountains, in the beautiful Sapphire Country of Saluda and Waynesville, returned home on Tuesday. Mrs. Northup stopped a few days in Atlanta, where she met Mrs. Pat McHugh, formerly Mrs. Pebley, of Pensacola, at the Hotel Majestic.

Miss Madge Cushman, of Knoxville, Tenn., accompanied by her nephew, Robert Daniels, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Daniels, arrived Saturday on a two weeks' visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton H. Cushman.

The North Carolina mountains are a favorite summer resort for Pensacolans, and at Waynesville this summer there is quite a colony. Mrs. C. W. D'Alemberte, who is now in Rome, Ga., and Mrs. W. H. Northup spent some time at Waynesville, and Mrs. Smithwick, two children, William and Mary, and Mrs. Smithwick's sister, Miss Verren, are now there. Mrs. Alice Aylward, who formerly made her home here and who was recently the guest of Mrs. J. J. Hooton, is also at Waynesville.

Miss Margaret Flood

Of Savannah, one of the popular members of the school set. Miss Flood is also taking an active part in the girl scout movement, being captain of a patrol.

Griffin

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Carlton Jones entertained her bridge club Tuesday afternoon at an al fresco party. On Wednesday afternoon she was hostess at a domino party.

Miss Mamie Slade and Miss Carrie Slade were hostesses Wednesday evening at a lawn party in honor of their guests, Miss Irene Dempsey, of Cedartown, and Miss Inez Hyman, of Cordele.

Miss Mary Bass was hostess at an automobile party to Barnesville in honor of Misses Mamie and Carrie Slade, Irene Dempsey and Inez Hyman.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Baxter were hosts at a lawn party Friday evening in compliment to their guest, Miss Jessie Robertson, of Forsyth.

On Wednesday morning Miss Olive Boyd was hostess at a rook party in honor of her guest, Miss Mary Watkins, of Atlanta.

Mrs. James Nutt entertained Monday afternoon at a bridge party in honor of Miss Katherine Wooten, of Washington.

Mrs. John Henry Newman entertained fifty ladies Friday afternoon at a theater party especially in compliment to her sisters, Mrs. H. L. Wheat, of Macon, and Mrs. Idus C. Doe, of LaGrange.

Mrs. James Kimbrough entertained Wednesday evening at a dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burr, of Atlanta. Invited to meet Mr. and Mrs. Burr were Mr. and Mrs. John B. Mills and Mrs. James Mills.

Mrs. Charles Murray and Mrs. Frank Ingram were hostesses Wednesday morning at a sewing party in compliment to Mrs. James Porter and her daughter, Mrs. Everts. Miss Della Porter and Miss Laura Porter, of Houston, Texas.

Little Miss Ethelyn Ison entertained twenty of her little friends Friday morning in honor of the fifth birthday.

Master Ernest Carlisle was host Wednesday afternoon in celebration of the fourth anniversary of his birth.

Little Miss Lily Rivers Griffin entertained a party of her young friends celebrating the fourth anniversary of her birth.

Cordele

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—A congenial party of young people enjoyed a picnic and fish fry Monday afternoon on the Flint River, the affair being in honor of the Misses Ruth and Clara Mae Jefferson, of Columbus.

Mrs. I. J. Lamb and daughter, Miss Mae Lamb, entertained Tuesday afternoon in honor of Miss Grace Dill, of Ocilla, the guest of Mrs. P. C. Dill and Misses Jefferson.

Mrs. C. E. Todd was the hostess Monday afternoon to the Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church.

Durham

DURHAM, Aug. 23.—Misses Margaret and Bessie Erwin, with W. A. Erwin, "cotton king" of North Carolina, gave an elaborate dance at the Durham Country Club in honor of guests who were attending a house-party at "Hillcrest," the Erwin home. It was the most brilliant social affair of the season and was attended by young folks prominent in society through the State.

The guests of honor were Miss Agnes Tinsley Harrison, Atlanta; Miss Sadie William, Augusta; Miss Katherine Overman, Washington, D. C.; Hamilton Jones, Charlotte; Hugh Thompson, Raleigh, and Terry Lyon, Fayetteville.

West Point

WEST POINT, Aug. 23.—Miss Mary Booker entertained at rook Thursday evening in honor of Mrs. John T. Ivey and Miss Eloise Sikes, of Luverne, Ala. After the game sandwiches and tea were served.

Dublin

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—Miss Ruth Toole, of Macon, was the guest of honor at an auction bridge party which Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Toole gave Tuesday evening. Playing were the Misses Ruth Toole, Mabel Harvard, Dorothy Hooks, Mamie Ramsay, Frances Webb and T. W. Hooks, O. G. Sparks, J. B. Hicks and W. R. Brigham.

A much-enjoyed affair of the week was the auction bridge luncheon which Miss Dorothy Hooks gave on Wednesday for Miss Ruth Toole. Miss Hooks' guests included Mrs. E. S. Street, Mrs. J. M. Finn, Mrs. T. R. Ramsay, Mrs. H. P. Shewmake, Mrs. A. J. Toole and Miss Frances Webb.

Of much interest socially will be the wedding of Miss Mary Lee Randall, of Grovania, and Richard P. Hicks, of Wrightsville, next Tuesday evening at the home of the bride's parents in Grovania. A party of friends from Dublin and Wrightsville will go over for this event. A reception will follow the ceremony.

The visitors in the city were honorees at a dance on Wednesday evening at East Lake. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Graham, Miss Lucy Gibson, of Macon; Miss Pearl Dowling, of Lake City, Fla.; Miss McLendon, Miss Otelia Gibson, of Macon; Miss Algie Prince, Miss Leonora Starr, Robert Hightower, Ramsay Fuller, S. Dixon, Paul Williamson, Dewitt Varnadoe, Cliff Holcomb, Clay O'Neal, Alex Blackshear, Claude Brantley, Alex Burch, Patrick Roach and William Brunson.

Senoia

SENOIA, Aug. 23.—Miss Lena Hand entertained a large party of Shorter and Wesleyan girls at a party at her home Monday evening.

The Methodist Missionary Society was royally entertained Monday afternoon by Mrs. H. B. Sasser.

The caming party given at Starr's Mill by Misses Lois and Annie Lou Hardy the past week was one of the most enjoyable events of the year. Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hardy chaperoned the party. The out-of-town guests included Misses Helen Carpenter, Newnan; Elizabeth Baker, Macon; Minnie McMichael, Buena Vista; Sallie Thompson, Hawkinsville; Mary and Lena Render Greenville; Messrs. Tom Tolleson, Fayetteville; Kendal Fielder, Cedartown; Albert Jelks, Hawkinsville; Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Freeman and Mr. and Mrs. J. D Hunter.

Miami

MIAMI, Aug. 23.—Miss Josephine Bravo, one of the first children born in Miami, was united in marriage on Monday night to Dallas D. Hoffman, of this city. The ceremony took place at the bride's home in the presence of a number of friends and relatives and was followed by an informal reception.

One of the pretty dinner-dances of the summer was that given Tuesday night at the beach by Clement and Bazil Brossier, in honor of the Misses Frances and Jane Tatum, two of the charming buds of the city, who leave soon for an exclusive girls' school in the North. The guests were the Misses Frances and Jane Tatum, Jewel Green and Ruth Rose, and Victor Moffat, Merle McLeannon and B. B. Tatum. The affair was held at the Casino at the beach.

Complimentary to the Misses Maude and Alice Reilly, of New Haven, Conn., who are visiting their brother, John B. Reilly, a luncheon was given at the Dade Club by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Coleman Romfh. Roses were used for the decorations. Covers were laid for the Misses Reilly, Miss Flavia DeCamp, R. B. Black, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Reilly, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McDonald and Mr. and Mrs. Romfh.

A Concan Club has been organized by a group of the young women of the city. Miss Cornelia Leffler was hostess at the last meeting of the club. Those present were the Misses Myrtle Rose, Hilda Baile, Christine Worley, Ruth Rose, Helen Skelly and Mildred Taylor.

Mrs. Everett George Sewell is spending the latter part of the summer at Asheville, N. C., where many other Miami people are stopping.

Jackson

JACKSON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. L. M. Crawford complimented her guest, Mrs. James Crawford Nutt, of Griffin, with a "42" party on Thursday morning.

The young men of the city gave a moonlight picnic at Indian Springs on Tuesday in honor of Miss Sarah Wylie, of Cartersville, the guest of Miss Mary Land.

In compliment to her niece, Miss Julia Collier, of St. Louis, Mrs. Levi entertained four tables of bridge on Wednesday evening.

Tampa

TAMPA, Aug. 23.—Dr. William Monroe Rowlett and Miss Gregory Walker, daughter of Mrs. Julian Walker, of New York City, will be married at the cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York on September 10. Dr. Rowlett's brother, Cafus Rowlett, and the bride-elect's brother, Hewitt Walker, will be best men and will be the only attendants. Dr. Rowlett and his bride will take a trip to Canadian resorts before returning to this city about October 1 to make their home. Dr. Rowlett is one of the young physicians of the city and is very popular. Miss Walker is related to many families here, and she and her mother spent last winter here, taking a house on the Boulevard. This summer they have been spending in the Berkshires. She is an accomplished pianist.

Two well-known young couples of Winter Haven, one of the fine resorts and orange grove towns of Interior Florida, are to be married at the same time on September 14. They are Norman Wyckoff and Miss Larra McCrary and Leslie Winston Anderson and Miss Kathleen Winston Perder. The double ceremony will take place at the First Christian Church of Winter Haven, and the young couples will go for a wedding trip together.

Mrs. A. B. Gerner, of this city, is chaperoning a house party at Wall Springs. The party is made up of Tampa and Dade City people, and they are enjoying the bathing at this resort. Among the Dade City members of the party are the Misses Lulu and Ethel Cochrane. A number from Dade City motored over to the camp at various times during the last week or so to spend a few days.

Buchanan

BUCHANAN, Aug. 23.—The recital and reading given at the Methodist Church Tuesday evening by Miss Shirley Sutherlin, of Cave Springs, was enjoyed by all present. Miss Sutherlin has accepted a position with the Southern Female College at LaGrange next year.

Tifton

TIFTON, Aug. 23.—Miss Aline Shipp entertained in honor of her guests, Misses Julia Williams and Florence Parks, with a Japanese party Monday night. Those present were the Misses Julia Williams, Florence Parks, Annie Howard, Marie Garbutt and Vernice Kennedy, James Pate, Roy Thrasher, Robert Hall, Louie Monk, Watson Holmes, Joe Gammon and Mark and Conrad Shipp.

Miss Josie Golden entertained Friday afternoon at four tables of salmagundi in honor of her guest, Miss Kate Harrell, of Doerun.

Miss Annie Howard entertained Tuesday night in honor of Miss Aline Shipp's house guests.

St. Augustine

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 23.—A pretty event of the week was the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Josephine Masters and Marcus Pappy at the Cathedral Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. Father James O'Brien officiating. Both are among the best known young people of the city and are members of old Florida families.

Captain and Mrs. Henry Marcotte left yesterday for Williamsport, Pa., where they will spend several weeks.

Miss Nell Edmonds and her mother have gone to Miami, where they will reside in the future. They were social favorites here.

Miss Ruth Green, a popular member of the younger society set, has returned from an extended visit with friends in Tallahassee.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald White have returned from a several months' honeymoon trip spent in England, Mr. White's old home. Mr. White is a well-known banker. Mrs. White was formerly Miss Elizabeth Frazer, of this city. Their wedding was a social event of the early summer.

Mrs. G. H. Bruer has returned from Syracuse, N. Y., where she visited her daughter, Mrs. Ernest Johnson.

Gainesville

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Elizabeth Kimbrough will entertain at a house party next week, her guests to include Miss Jamie Hall, of Grantville; Miss Cora Candler, of Dallas, Texas; Miss Marie Dinkins, of Atlanta; Miss Emily Dorsey, of Opelika, Ala., and Miss Laura Mae Kennimerg, of Cleveland. Among the social attention planned for her guests are a masquerade party at the home of Miss Kimbrough and a reception, with Miss Mary Florence McKinney as hostess.

A social affair of the week was the bridge luncheon Wednesday morning which Mrs. Pillow gave for her daughter, Mrs. French, of New Orleans. About twenty guests were present.

A compliment to Mrs. J. B. Fitzgerald, who leaves this week for her future home in Augusta, was a porch party given Tuesday morning by Mrs. M. C. Brown and her mother, Mrs. Flanders.

Mrs. J. E. Jackson was hostess at a sewing party at her home on Academy street in honor of her sister, Mrs. H. W. Campbell, of Atlanta.

Miss Jone and Louise Jackson entertained eight couples at a dinner party Friday evening in honor of Miss Marjorie Wilkes, who was a guest of Mrs. J. H. Banks.

Acworth

ACWORTH, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Daniell Humphries Collins entertained on Thursday afternoon in compliment to Mrs. Norman Smith Kitchen, of Birmingham, Ala.

Mrs. Zollie L. McLain, Mrs. W. Arthur Nichols and Mrs. Charles Gribble were hostesses on Friday afternoon at a reception at the home of Mrs. Gribble, in honor of Mrs. D'Armand Breard, of Monroe, La.; Miss Avis Elgin, of Anderson, S. C., and Mrs. Norman Smith Kitchen, of Birmingham, Ala.

Washington

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—In honor of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Newsom, whose wedding Monday afternoon in Atlanta was a social event of cordial interest to a large circle of friends and relatives in Wilkes County, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Armstrong entertained a number of friends Thursday with a barbecue at their country home five miles north of Washington.

Tuesday's meeting of the Bimonthly Bridge Club, composed of the young married set of Washington, was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Clement E. Sutton. It was decided to call in further meetings until October on account of the number of members who are spending September out of town.

Lanark

LANARK, Aug. 23.—The residents at the Byrd cottage and a few invited guests enjoyed an excursion to Dog Island on Thursday evening. A delicious lunch was served on the island and a dip in the surf was enjoyed.

On Wednesday night at the hotel Willie Byrd was host at a crab supper.

Making up a pleasant house party at Lanark for a week or ten days are Mrs. B. H. Hardaway, Miss Slade, Miss Gerge, Charles Porter and B. H. Hardaway, Jr., all of Columbus, Ga. The house party is given by Mrs. Hardaway in honor of her son, B. H. Hardaway, Jr. The party is occupying the cottage of Mrs. Hardaway.

The party of Tallahassee campers at St. Theresa, composed of John McDougall, Abe McDougall, Guy Haynes and Phil Caldwell, on Saturday evening sailed over to Lanark, enjoyed the Saturday night dance at the hotel and remained over Sunday, taking the members of the Columbus house party for a sail. John and Abe McDougall returned to their camp at St. Theresa and Guy Haynes and Phil Caldwell to Tallahassee.

A party of campers at Lanark occupying the Phillips-Culley cottage is made up of Walter Culley, Humphrey Gwynn, Horace VanBrunt and Harbert Keith, of Tallahassee.

Gainesville

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Mamie McGrew has returned from a four-weeks outing, during which she visited friends in Jacksonville, Augusta, Ga., and Hendersonville, N. C.

Mrs. J. I. Blake and children are now in Atlanta on a visit to relatives.

Miss Birdie Wood, of Fernandina; Miss Gussie Steindorff, of Greenville, Ala., and Miss Nellie Dekle, of Tampa, are guests of Mrs. Robert E. Lee on West Arlington street.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Harris, of Haverhill, Miss., announce the engagement of their daughter, Marion Carr, to Lee Graham, of Gainesville, Fla. This announcement is of great interest to the social circle of this city. Mr. Graham is cashier of the First National Bank of Gainesville, a member of the City Council and a most popular citizen. It is said the wedding will be some time in October.

Cartersville

CARTERSVILLE, Aug. 23.—On Tuesday evening a dance was given at the Opera House by the young men of Cartersville to the visiting girls. The out-of-town guests were Misses Marion Perdue, Ruth Blackman and Ruth Barry, of Atlanta; Kathrine and May Stiles, of Brunswick; Addie McCollister and Ida Moody, of Piedmont, Ala., and Mrs. Keith Carson, of Tifton. The chaperons wer Mr. and Mrs. E. Strickland, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hammond and Mr. and Mrs. Madison Milam.

Mrs. Walter Holcombe, of Nashville, entertained at an afternoon tea at "Roselawn," the home of her mother, Mrs. Sam P. Jones, on Saturday. The guests were Mrs. John G. Simpson and Miss Hattie Jones, Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. Bert Sims, Murfreesboro, Tenn., and Mrs. Conyers Fite, Washington, D. C.

Nashville

NASHVILLE, Aug. 23.—A lawn social was given on the courthouse square by the ladies of the Civic League yesterday evening from 6 to 9 o'clock. The proceeds will go for the benefit of the public library.

Ocilla

OCILLA, Aug. 23.—At the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. J. W. Layfield, Miss Meta Clair Sibley and Edwin E. Howell were married on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, and left immediately for Atlanta and other points in North Georgia to return in ten days, when they will make this city their home. The Rev. Mr. Ansley, Baptist minister at this place, officiated.

Claims To Be Heir To Cooper Estate

Henry D. Ritch Says He Was Adopted Son of Savannah Man. Files Suit.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—A suit in which Henry David Ritch seeks to establish himself as an heir-at-law of the late Clem T. Cooper so that he may inherit one-third of the $43,000 Cooper estate, has been filed in the Superior Court of Chatham County.

The obstacle in the way of Ritch's claim is Mrs. Lillian Hamilton, formerly Mrs. Lillian Cooper, wife of the man who died intestate, leaving this desirable property. Ritch says he was legally adopted by Cooper and is entitled to inherit one-third of the estate, as well as to share in the net proceeds from the estate since the death of Cooper on January 14, 1903.

The petitioner is 19 years old. He began the proceedings through J. J. Rahn, Jr., a friend. He shows that when a child 6 years old he was adopted by Cooper, and that he took the name of his foster parent. At that time Cooper was a widower. Ritch continued to live at the Cooper home until six months after the death of Cooper.

FORGOT TO CLOSE WINDOW; GAS FAILED TO KILL MAN

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Because he forgot to close a window in the back of his store when he attempted to kill himself by inhaling illuminating gas, Laurence Louis, a confectioner, will probably recover.

Louis had removed the burners from a gas stove, and placing a rubber tube in his mouth, turned on the gas. Despondency because of business affairs is said to have been the cause of the act.

BIG DISAPPEARING GUN ARRIVES IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Occupying four freight cars, the carriage for the 10-inch disappearing gun in the dummy fortifications in the park extension has arrived from Bethlehem, Pa.

The total weight of the carriage is 225,000 pounds. It will support a gun weighing 30 tons and measuring 35 feet in length. The gun will be mounted inside the fortifications which will be used by the Savannah Volunteer Guards in practice work.

The "Ice Kist"

APPROVED BY
Good Housekeeping Institute

No Crank
No Dasher
No Handle
No Cogs
No Wheels
No Wood
No Hoops
No
Hard Work

$1.95 POSTPAID 15 DAYS' TRIAL 2-QUART SIZE $1.95

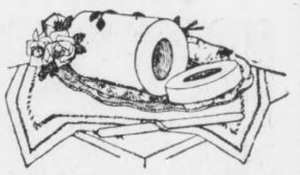
PACK IT THAT'S ALL — For the ICE-KIST all you have to do is to pour in the cream, sherbet or whatever refreshment it may be, and pack in the ice as in the ordinary freezer. Then the work is ended. There is no working a dasher, no turning a handle or crank, no straining your arms and back, no opening the freezer to "see" if it is freezing, no extra packing in of ice. All you do after packing is to open the freezer and serve the refreshment. It saves work, time, trouble and—you.

Perfect Freezing

The Ice-Kist has no dasher or crank because it has two freezing surfaces. The old-fashioned freezer had only one freezing surface—that is why a crank and dasher were necessary. The Ice-Kist has a metal freezing tube that extends directly through the cream to the bottom. This gives the two freezing surfaces. The cold penetrates from the center and from the outside, too. The cream is frozen with a smoothness that will delight you.



The Ice-Kist makes a beautiful and perfect-frozen mold.

Special 15-Day Offer

We want you to know the joy of having an Ice-Kist Crankless Freezer in your home. We will send it post-paid upon the return of the coupon together with $1.95—our introductory price. If, after trying the ICE-KIST for 15 days, you are not delighted with it, return it and we will return the $1.95. Don't let the coupon get lost. Send it NOW.

Western Merchandise & Supply Co.,
326 W. Madison St., Chicago., Ill.

Enclosed is money order for $1.95. Please send the ICE-KIST CRANKLESS FREEZER for 15 days' trial.

Name.....

Address.....

.....Ex.

FRANKLIN WILL FOUND INTACT AND RESTORED

Document Contains Severe Arraignment of Custom of Wearing Jewelry in This Country.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—All controversies regarding the disposition of the estate of Benjamin Franklin have been settled by the restoration of his will by the manuscript repair department of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

The document, recently resurrected from a vault under the City Hall for the purpose of verifying an office copy, was found to have deteriorated so much during more than a century of obscurity that it was practically indecipherable. Through the renovating process to which it was subjected it has regained much of its original freshness and legibility, making it possible for every detail to be understood.

In a finely-worded passage he makes disposition of his best cane as follows: "My fine crabtree walking stick with a gold head curiously wrought in the form of the cap of liberty I give to my friend and the friend of mankind, General Washington. If it were a scepter, he has merited it and would become it. It was a present to me from that excellent woman, Mme. de Forback, the Dowager Duchess of Deux Ponts."

A small painting of the King of France, presented to him by that monarch, which was mounted in a frame containing 408 diamonds, he bequeathed to his daughter, with the following curious proviso: "The King of France's picture, set with 408 diamonds to my daughter, Sarah Bache, on the condition that she is not to form any of the diamonds into ornaments either for herself of daughters, and, therefore, countenance the expensive, vain and useless fashion of wearing jewels in this country."

TOLD HE'D DIE WHEN 29, BUT LIVING AT 101

Centenarian Walks to Church on Last Birthday and Gives Sunday School Advice.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Aug. 23.—William T. Osborne, of this city, was 101 years old to-day and he didn't mind it a bit.

Answer to "Old Subscriber," "Vox Populi," "Constant Reader" and "Friend of the Paper:" NO, HE NEVER SMOKED OR DRANK.

In the spring of 1841—when he was 29—four physicians visited him at different times to give him some concrete idea of how much longer he was going to adorn the earth. All said he was firmly in the grip of consumption. Three said he'd be lucky to last more than a few days. The fourth said Osborne didn't have a chance of picking anything off the next Christmas tree.

The four doctors are dead.

Five generations gathered at his home to-day. Naturally, he was delighted. Being a regular communicant of Trinity Methodist Church, he went there this morning. He wanted to walk, but the temperature made that seem unwise. Before the service he addressed a class in the Sunday school and told the scholars to be clean in their habits, stick on the sprinkling cart and keep up a strong activity in labor. He thinks that if he hadn't worked so hard he would not have taken part in to-day's party.

The old man didn't dance any jigs to indicate that he was as lively as he used to be, but he gave plenty of evidence that he was around the place. A natural decline in the power of his eyes recently forced him to give up reading, but he still writes, can hear well, enjoys walking and has a good memory.

He was born nine miles from Newburgh. He has been a farmer, tanner and storekeeper. His wife Sarah died eleven years ago at the age of 91.

WAR IN MEXICO BLOCKS WEDDING OF PAIR 5 TIMES

Young Engineer Kept From Love by Succession of Revolutions in Republic.

DENVER, Aug. 23.—What chance has a little fellow like the god of love in a mix-up with a big bully like the person who holds down the job of god of war?

The young man is Arthur N. Zwetow, a mining engineer employed in Mexico. He and the young woman, Miss Mildred Lewin, have tried to get married five times, to use their own expression, and each time that god of war person has "butted in" and dealt Cupid a knock-out blow.

Young Zwetow is in Concepcion del Oro, a mining camp near the border of the State of Coahulla. Six months ago he wrote his betrothed that he had obtained a leave of absence and the wedding bells would ring any time she said. The young woman got her trousseau ready and set the wedding day. But the bridegroom did not come. A letter from him said the Federals had started a war, the railroad had quit running, bullets were flying and he had to stay.

So it has been for five successive attempts.

Girl Chases 8 Cows With Auto; Gets $4

New Jersey Chauffeurette Uses Machine to Hustle Bovine Trespassers to Pound.

PETERSON, N. J., Aug. 23.—Four dollars of the money Joseph Smith paid for the wanderings of his cows yesterday went into the purse of Miss Minnie DeGray

Eight Smith cows entered her garden and were eating her corn. She chased them in her auto out of the field, across a lot, into the road and a half-mile to the poundmaster's yard. Smith paid $8 for their release. Miss DeGray received half of it.

OREGON 8-HOUR BILL HITS EVERY WORKING CLASS

Professors, Trades, Occupations and Even Day Labor Limited to 48 Hours Weekly Work.

SALEM, OREG., Aug. 23.—If the universal eight-hour bill, filed under the initiative to be voted on at the next general election, should become a law it would revolutionize the industries of the State.

The measure is drafted to apply to every industry, every business or vocation or profession in the State. No one is to be permitted, under its provisions, to work for more than eight hours out of nine consecutive hours a day, or more than forty-eight hours a week.

By this law neither manual labor, trades, nor the professions shall be exempted, but every form of labor, skilled or unskilled, as well as every trade and profession, and persons working therein or thereat, shall be included, in, by and under this law, and the same shall be included, in, by and under this law, within the State or Oregon.

The measure provides that the Labor Commissioner must see to the enforcement of its provisions, and if he does not do this immediately it becomes mandatory upon the Governor to remove the Labor Commissioner from office.

AGED FATHER THRASHES SON WHO THINKS HIM EASY PREY

EAST LIVERPOOL, OHIO, Aug. 23. When Francis Beaver, 30 years old, charged his father, Henry Beaver, aged 65, with having spoken in an uncomplimentary tone of the former's wife, the father resented the imputation and soundly thrashed his son.

The son, thinking he could easily worst his aged father, began the fight with a hard blow on the elder man's nose. Thoroughly aroused, Beaver, Sr., then started in and soon the son was lying on the ground with a fractured ankle and a fractured right leg.

ANNIVERSARY CLUB MEETS WITH THE SOUTHERN STATES LIFE

Leading Life Insurance Agents Hold Convention Here—Every Man Produced Over $100,000 Worth of Paid For Business in Twelve Months — Interesting Sessions Held.

There was a feast of reason, a sparkle of wit and a flow of soul at the brilliant banquet given at the Hotel Ansley last night when the Sixth Annual Convention of the Anniversary Club of the Southern States Life Insurance Company brought that gathering to a close.

Over one hundred guests were present.

This convention is celebrated by those members of the agency force of The Southern States Life Insurance Company who produced over $100,000 worth of paid for insurance during the year which ends June 30.

This convention had been in session two days, business sessions being held in the morning, the afternoon and evening being given over to entertainment.

Opening Session.

The first session of the Convention was held in the assembly room

J. C. WALDEN, SR., President.

of the Hotel Ansley on Friday morning. The largest attendance in the history of the club was present.

President Wilmer L. Moore, of The Southern States Life Insurance Company, greeted the club membership in a warm address of welcome, in which he congratulated them upon the splendid work just closed, and the beginning of the new year of the Anniversary Club, the first month of which saw the agents break all producing records.

J. R. WILLIAMS, Vice President.

Officers are not elected by the Anniversary Club, but office is won by the amount of insurance written. The agent writing the most business is President, the second man is Vice President, the leaders in each State are State Vice Presidents.

J. C. Walden, Sr., of Alabama, won the coveted honor of President. J. R. Williams, of South Carolina, was installed as Vice President.

Officers Installed.

The State Vice Presidents installed were T. Peters, Jr., of Georgia; B. B. Murray, of Florida; H. Clay Smith, of Alabama, and G. J. McDowell, of South Carolina.

In addition to these there were present other members of this Club who qualified for 1912-13: H. N. McAfee, of Georgia, a member for the sixth time; H. Willis Hogg, of Georgia, a member for the third time; J. T. Weems, of Georgia, the oldest member of the agency force of the company in point of service, for the sixth time; Fred Hines, of South Carolina, for the fifth time, and L. E. Black, Jr., C. S. Gurr and J. R. Munroe, for the first time.

Joe W. Vinson, whose absence from the meeting, owing to ill health, was greatly regretted by all present, completes his fifth year of membership.

He also signalized his intention of making his election for next year sure by not only leading the agency force in the month of July but by beating his own and all other previous records of written business in any one month, and thereby establishing a high mark for agents to aim at.

Brief addresses were delivered to the club by the President and Vice President of the Club.

Unanimously Re-elected.

Robert F. Moore, Agency Secretary, was unanimously re-elected Secretary of the Anniversary Club, which position he has held with credit since the beginning of the organization.

Following the roll call of the Anniversary Club badges and certificates were distributed, after which the first "Keystone Degree" was conferred.

"New Policy" was the subject of an interesting paper by Supervisor of Agents, W. S. McLeod, which was followed by discussion and questions.

Agency Secretary Robert F. Moore followed with an interesting paper on "Items of Expense Charged to First Year's Business—Economy, What it Means to the Agent and the Policy-holder." His paper was followed by discussion and questions.

ROBERT F. MOORE, Secretary.

The photograph of the Anniversary Club, which appears on this page, was taken, after which the Club was entertained at luncheon at the Capital City Club by President Moore. Friday afternoon the Club attended the baseball game and Friday evening occupied boxes at the Forsyth theater.

Concluding Session.

The concluding session of this interesting convention was held on Saturday morning at which time a symposium of talks entitled "Confidential Chats With Medical Department," was participated in by E. M. Veatch, Dr. Gaines, W. S. Kendrick and Samuel Barnett, Actuary. This was followed by discussion and questions.

"The Company's Method of Payment of Death Claims—What It Should Mean to the Supervisor, the Agent, the Company and the Beneficiary," was delivered by Supervisor Frank E. Brodnax. This was followed by a discussion on the analysis of this subject under the following heads: (1) Bankers Agents Contracts, (2) Local Advertisement; (3) Draft on Local Bank, and (4) Follow Up of Prospects from Payment.

J. E. McLauchlin, Director of the Metropolitan Agency, followed with an interesting talk on "Systematic Following Up of Prospects."

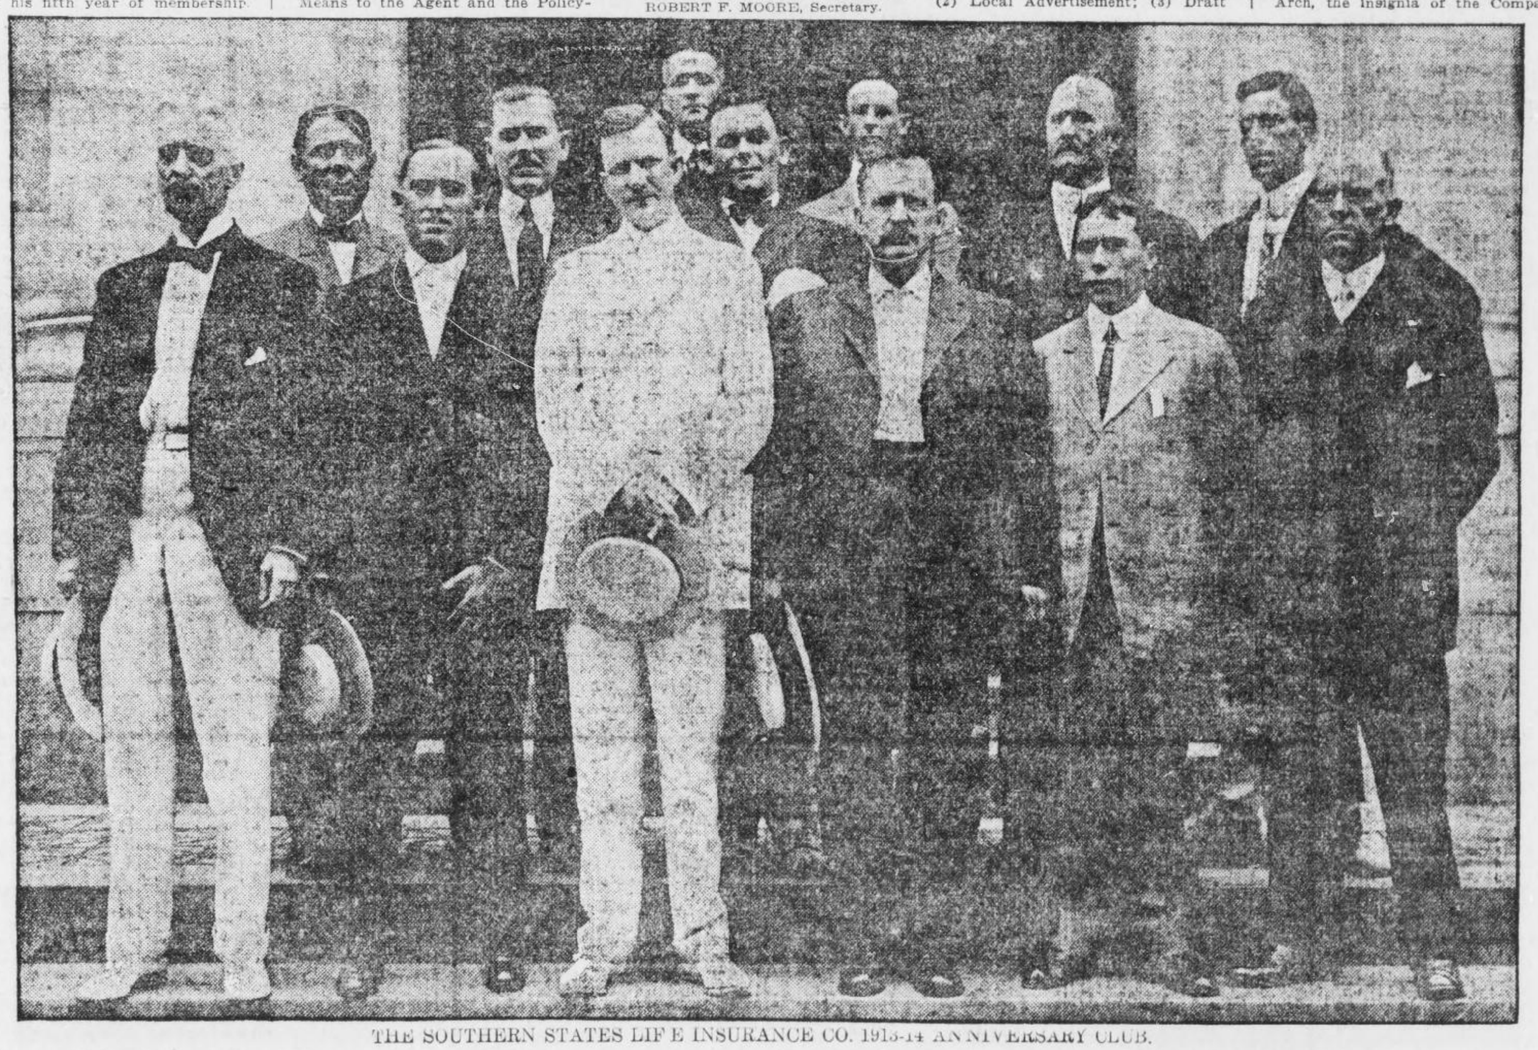
A symposium of actual experiences by all agents came next and the formal addresses of the Convention were concluded with a most interesting address by Hon. Hervey W. Laird, former Assistant Insurance Commissioner of Alabama, and now Assistant to President Wilmer L. Moore.

Entertained at Luncheon.

The Club was entertained at luncheon at the Hotel Ansley and again attended the baseball game in the afternoon.

The Banquet at the Hotel Ansley last night was probably the most brilliant gathering held in the history of the Club and the Hotel.

Over one hundred guests were entertained. The colors of the Southern States Life Insurance Company—Red, Blue and White, and the Keystone Arch, the insignia of the Company,



THE SOUTHERN STATES LIFE INSURANCE CO. 1913-14 ANNIVERSARY CLUB.

Hotel Ansley Scene of Wonderful Banquet to Club Last Night—Toasts Were Made by Speaker Burwell, Hon. C. B. Brown, of Alabama, Hon. W. S. Witham and Clark Howell.

were carried out in the flowers, ices and place cards.

President Wilmer L. Moore presided as toastmaster, and introduced the speakers.

J. C. Walden, Sr., President of the Club, was the first and his response to the toast, "The Anniversary Club—the Top Rung," was warmly received.

He was followed by J. R. Williams, Vice President, whose subject, "The Southern States Life—Confidence Begets Loyalty," was handled in a splendid manner.

G. J. McDowell, a member of the Anniversary Club, and a familiar speaker at these banquets, responded to the toast, "The Keystone Degree—An Incentive to Work."

Burwell Responds.

Speaker W. H. Burwell, of the General Assembly of Georgia, delivered a splendid toast in response to President Moore's cordial introduction, on

G. J. McDOWELL, South Carolina V. P.

"Success Is Measured by Ambition."

He was followed by Hon. Clark Howell, who responded to the toast, "Civic Duties—Every Man Has His Part."

Hon. Cyrus B. Brown, Assistant Commissioner of Insurance for the State of Alabama, represented that commonwealth and responded to the toast, "Alabama—Her Part in the Nation's Progress."

H. CLAY SMITH, Alabama Vice Pres.

Hon. W. S. Witham concluded the evening's gayety with a wonderful potpourri when he was presented to his hearers, with the following title for his toast, "A Toast, Like a Text, Is Given to Talk From."

T. PETERS, JR., Georgia Vice President

MENU

GEORGIA CANTALOUPE

CELERY QUEEN OLIVES ALMONDS

CONSOMME FLORENTINE
CHEESE STRAWS

POMPANO A LA CARONDELET POTATOES ANNA

CALVE'S SWEETBREAD ST. CLAIR
MOYENS PEAS

CHICKEN FILLET, LUCULLUS
PEELED ASPARAGUS HOLLANDAISE

LETTUCE, RUSRIAN DRESSING
BEATEN BISCUIT

MOUSSE A LA PARISIENNE
PETITS FOUR

CHEESE AND BENT'S CRACKER

DEMI TASSE

APOLLINARIS
CIGARS

Banquet Menu.

B. B. MURRAY, Florida Vice President.

EUROPE TROTS, BUT CAN'T KEEP STEP TO MUSIC

Syncopated Tunes and Dances Beyond Ken of Old World, Says American Composer.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Armand Vecsey, composer and director of music at the Ritz-Carlton, has returned fresh from a European trip with lots of new music and some comments upon the musical situation abroad which may act as balm to the souls of American composers, and a joy for those who are not musicians, but like to hear the scream of the American Eagle.

Mr. Vecsey has not lived on this side of the Atlantic long enough to have taken out final naturalization papers, but there is nobody on this side of Weehawken who is more intensely and enthusiastically American in a musical way. He says American music and American motifs have spread over all Europe, but the music the natives over there don't know how to play.

Opera in Europe, as Mr. Vecsey has viewed it this summer, is poor as compared with what is given at the Metropolitan Opera House, and there isn't anything now between London and Vienna that has to do with music or the stage which local talent can't beat hands down.

"I have been in Paris, London, Berlin, Munich, and Vienna," said Mr. Vecsey, "and everywhere I have found American music the most popular. Then the turkey trot one finds all over the Continent. Yet nowhere did I hear the music played correctly, although they try hard, and when it came to fitting German or French words to a typical trotting tune, the effect was ludicrous.

Recognize the "Truthahn Tanz?"

"Think of what the result was in Berlin, when they turned 'When the Midnight Choo-Choo Leaves for Alabam' into German! In Germany they call the trot 'Truthahn Tanz,' and in France it is the 'Pas du Dindon.' Who would recognize the original under such appellations?

"Then the French can not dance the trot, nor can the Germans. Somehow they can't just find out the character of it. Of course their bands and orchestras can not get the time right in the first place. Why, at the Folies Bergere in Paris, I saw two of the best French dancers giving what was supposed to be a most perfect rendition of the trot, and I assure you it was ridiculous. It was a very poor imitation of the real thing.

"Yet, I was astonished to find that all the new French music and most of the new German operettas are either in the American style, as nearly as their composers could approach it, or have American motifs. The tango seems to be breaking up the trot over there, partly, I suppose, because their dancers can come nearer to dancing it than the purely American steps. In Paris I saw a couple trying the Texas Tommy, and it was a sight to cause a horse to double up.

"Why can't they play a turkey trot? For the same reason that nobody except a Hungarian can play Hungarian music. Almost every musical country has something that is peculiarly its own—a style of music that when played correctly is infectious.

American Style Has Call.

"Hungary has its csardas, Austria its waltz, and America its syncopated time. When each is played properly, it is bound to move an assemblage of people, and just now the American style has the call everywhere.

"At the Palais de Danse, in Berlin, I first heard a turkey trot played by a German orchestra. It was very bad. I want to tell you that in Europe this summer there is no music, no opera, no Philharmonic concert, and no play that can compare with what has been heard here in New York this year."

"In Paris," went on Mr. Vecsey, with a trace of feeling, "when they see an American trunk, they lie in wait to rob the owner, and go crazy over the thought of loot. It is the same in Berlin.

"I must tell you that not anywhere are women so generally chic in their costumes nowadays as right here in New York.

"True, I did see many smartly gowned women, but investigation showed that most of them were Americans."

Rector Denounces Paid Choir Singers

Clergyman Declares There Is No Worship in Their Strange and Unutterable Music.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., Aug. 23.—The Rev. E. J. Craft, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, caused a sensation while addressing a meeting of the parishioners of Calvary parish by telling them what he would do if he were entering upon a new pastorate.

For one thing, he said, he did not believe in paid singers for church choirs "The service of the church was designed for the people as a whole and not alone for the choir," he said. "These modern choirs take the worship away from the people of the congregation and do all the worshiping themselves. They sing in wild and strange ways and in unutterable tongues the praises of God."

Veering of River Threatens Farms

Every Laborer Available Is Rushed to Head Off Flow of Missouri.

FREEMONT, NEBR., Aug. 23.—Every laborer available is being sent by the Burlington Railroad to Folsom to fight the Missouri River, which is again eating into the valuable farm lands of that section and threatening to cut its way to the railroad tracks. Many carloads of stone have been dumped into the river.

The river suddenly began veering from its channel a few days ago. Inside of two days it had swamped 20 acres of land. Fear is now felt that the river will cut its way back to the extensive pot in within the last year at a cost of more than $500,000.

Tame Trout Craves Petting; Fed by Hand

Feels Insulted if Food Is Not Served in Manner to Which He Is Accustomed.

ESTES PARK, COLO., Aug. 23.—Sunbeam, the pet speckled trout in the fish hatchery at Estes Park, has just recovered from an indisposition caused by stomach trouble or rheumatism, and is again able to take its place as the only pet trout in captivity.

The fish, now a 3-year-old and about eleven inches long, is as good an example of gentle and loving trouthood as it is possible to find. Fed from the hand from the time it was hatched, it feels insulted now unless its food is given to it in that way.

It is very fond of being stroked and petted, and will swim around and rub itself against a person's hand whenever a chance is given it.

Stranger Is Son, Gone for 20 Years

Father Turns Wanderer Away, but Mother Calls Him Back, and Reunion Follows.

GLASGOW, KY., Aug. 23.—Virgil Huffman had been away from home twenty years, seeking his fortune in Alaska, and the father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. James Huffman, were sitting in a room of their home near here discussing him and wondering if he would ever come back.

There was a knock at the door and Mr. Huffman opened it to see a dusty traveler, who said he was tired and was seeking lodging for the night. Mr. Huffman thought he could do nothing for him, but Mrs. Huffman "reckoned" they could manage somehow.

Then they led him into the hall, under the swinging lamp, and as the light fell on his face the aged couple recognized him as their son.

African Chieftain Is Harvard Student

Begins Stupendous Task of Reducing His Own Language to Written Form.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., Aug. 23.—A full-blooded African chieftain has just passed his entrance examinations at Harvard with flying colors and will enter the university next September as a member of the class of 1917. He is P. Gbe Wolo, and his people, 300,000 strong, are the Krus of Liberia, on the west coast of Africa.

They have no written language, so that the only way he can communicate with his family is through traders on the coast, who send the message by word of mouth along the trail. He has begun the stupendous task of reducing his language to writing.

Goes to Cemetery Instead of Ball Park

Fan Mistakes Funeral Hack for Omnibus on Its Way to Diamond.

MONTGOMERY, MO., Aug. 23.—A baseball rooter came here from a distance to attend the St. Charles-Montgomery game, and by mistake he got into a hack at the depot filled with pallbearers going to a funeral.

As he had crepe on his hat, the ballbearers thought he had come as a mourner and he was taken to the cemetery instead of the ball park.

Finding himself in a funeral procession, he woke up and escaped. He got to the ball grounds just in time to see the home team win.

'Star Baths' Latest Complexion Remedy

Young Women Campers Take Nightly 'Plunge' In Milky Way Beams on Tower.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Star baths are the fad at the summer camp of the Young Women's Christian Association in Blauvelt, N. Y. Miss Marion Hopkins, the camp leader, is given credit for the innovation. The baths are taken on top of a high tower in the center of the camp. It will accommodate a dozen bathers.

There is a long waiting list of young women campers who are anxious to enjoy the reported benefits of immersion in starlight. Chief among these is said to be the "star-shine complexion."

Husband in Prison; Wife Willed $20,000

Richmond Woman Given Share of Estate After Helpmate Is Sentenced for Embezzlement.

RICHMOND, VA., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Maud Kent Rowley, whose husband, William J. Rowley, formerly connected with a hotel here, was recently sentenced to serve two years in State prison for embezzling $8,000 from the Jefferson Hotel in this city while auditor there, inherits $20,000 from the estate of her aunt, Mrs. Junius A. Morris, of Richmond, who died August 3 at Atlantic City.

The value of the estate is placed at $495,000.

Woman Works as Circus Roustabout

Breaks Down While Handling Heavy Tent Pole and Her Secret Is Revealed.

LA CROSSE, WIS., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Ada Broughton, unable to support her two children and invalid husband on wages paid a woman, donned a man's attire and labored beside farm hands in Dakota wheat fields. She broke down under the strain and came to La Crosse to seek lighter employment, becoming a circus roustabout. Lifting heavy poles and canvas resulted in her complete breakdown. Then she told her story to the police and collapsed. She was taken unconscious to a hospital. Relatives are on the way from her home at Rice Lake.

HEARST'S SUNDAY
American Advertising Contest
$10.00 Given Away!!

Last Sunday only the trade-marks or distinguishing characteristics of the advertisers below were given. $10.00 in cash was offered to the person sending in to The American, in the fewest possible words, a description of the advertisers whose "slogan" appeared below. Thousands of these replies were received and the prize goes to Mrs. O. D. Gorman, Jr., 79 W. 15th St., her answers appearing below:

WALL-PAPER

Thirty years in the wall-paper business have made us proficient. Ask our customers. Before you buy, try us. :: ::

"Better Be Safe than Sorry"

71 South Pryor Street

BURNETT WALL PAPER CO. BURNETT

"Go Where the Crowds Go"

AND

You will be delighted with the cool, comfortable Montgomery Theater. Absolutely the latest pictures.

Anna Von Hoffman is now singing

AT

The Montgomery

The easy way to buy clothes

Your Credit is Good at

DOLLAR A WEEK DAY
14 W. MITCHELL ST.

"Truly Duffy's"

The home of low prices, on the corner of Mitchell and Forsyth Sts. Attend our immense Clearing-Out Sale now going on. :: ::

DUFFY'S

"The Velvet Kind"

The kind of Ice Cream you really like. It's pure, clean and wholesome. Try it once. ∴ ∴ ∴

PHONE IVY 6849

VELVET ICE CREAM CO.

26 E. North Avenue

27 years in the same stand.

Shoes for the Entire Family

See our Fall and Winter stock of Men's and Ladies' models. Just from the Eastern style centers.

MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED

R. C. BLACK

35 Whitehall Street

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

ATLANTA HAS SUPPORT FOR HOME-GOODS EXPOSITION

Spirit Which Makes City Famous Prevails, and Enough Exhibitors Sign Agreements to Take Space to Assure Success of Project.

Decision Necessary Tuesday So That Plans for New Commerce Building Might Be Changed. Manufacturers Are Responding.

It was a close shave, everyone admits, but as usual the Atlania spirit prevailed, and the "Made in Atlanta" exhibit is assured.

Tuesday's luncheon at the Ansley was the "clincher." Several years of agitation, a year of actual work, brought to a climax by a vigorous campaign of three months, developed the exhibit project to a point where about 36 manufacturers had signed their names to agreements binding them to take floor space for a period of three years.

Thus matters stood Tuesday. Meanwhile the contractors were at work in the new Chamber building remodeling it. The plans called for offices. If a change were to be made, a decision was necessary at once.

The case was put squarely up to the Atlanta manufacturers Tuesday, and on Tuesday's luncheon was staked the entire plan. The result of the appeal was success.

To Have Four Floors.

Four floors will be devoted to the exhibit. One floor will be given over to the cotton industry—textiles, oils and by-products. Furniture made in Atlanta will take another entire floor. Building materials probably will take a floor, kindred lines of manufacture will be grouped together as far as is consistent with economical disposal of space.

Who will be in charge of the exhibit in the new building at Pryor street and Auburn avenue has not been determined. Neither has it been decided when the exhibits will be installed. All this remains to be done.

This much is certain—there will be telephone service on each floor, an expert in charge and an intelligent effort to make the exhibit pay in dollars and cents for every participant.

Had the project fallen through, it would have been lamentable, for Nashville, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Hartford, Conn., St. Louis and other cities have such exhibits; others are planning them, and Atlanta would, for the first time, be forced to admit itself less progressive than its rivals.

Those Already Pledged.

The following firms had signed for space up to Saturday, the nature of the business being suggested where the name is not self-explanatory:

Southern Engraving Company.
Frederick Disinfectant Company.
J. K. Orr Shoe Company.
E. VanWinkle Company (motor trucks).
Atlanta Gas Light Company.
Southern Upholstering Company.
Atlanta Stove Works.
Southern Spring Bed Company.
Burnett, Bell & Klapper (furniture).
Gholstin - Cunningham Company (bed springs);
All-Star Manufacturing Company (neckties).
Byrd Printing Company.
Norris, Inc. (candies).
Willingham-Tift Lumber Company.
Tripod Paint Company.
J. P. Stevens Engraving Company.
Atlanta Paper Company.
Atlanta Blank Book Manufacturing Company.
White Provision Company.
Dowman-Dozier (metal workers).
Foote & Davies (office furnishings).
Golden Eagle Buggy Company.
Metzger Mattress Company.
Whittier Mills (textiles).
Marcus Loeb & Co. (overalls).
Nunnally & McCrae (overalls).
Phoenix Planing Mills.
Parian Paint Company.
Atlanta Show Case Company.
Greer Manufacturing Company (jewelry).
F. J. Cooledge (building materials).
M. D. & H. L. Smith (awnings).
Reed Oil Company.
Atlanta Metal Bed Company.
Atlanta Auto Top and Trimming Company.
Moncrief Furnace Company.
Coca-Cola Company.
Walter Ballard Optical Company.
Hagan & Dodd Co. (soft drinks).
Atlanta Art Glass Company.
A. E. Hill Manufacturing Company (razor blade strops).

In addition to the above, the Southern Cotton Seed Crushers' Association, the cotton oil mills, the textile and other cotton interests have an entire floor, where they will exhibit the cotton plant and all of its various uses.

ENGLISH MAKERS INVENT CAP WHICH KEEPS SHAPE

A problem that has engaged English cap manufacturers for some time has been how to produce a cloth cap that will keep its shape after it has been in use for some time. An enterprising firm of manufacturers now claims that they have solved the problem and that the shape of their caps is not affected by rain. The idea introduced consists of placing a flat plate of straw plait in the cap between the lining and the cloth crown.

This makes the top of the cap sit flat, and as the straw is not affected by wet it is said the cap can be worn for a much longer period than the ordinary kind.

Sweet Potato Crop Yields Big Returns

Would Bring Much More if Southern Farmers Did Not Glut Market at Harvest.

Each year the sweet potato is becoming of greater importance as a money crop in the South. The value of this crop in the United States in 1900 was $34,429,000, 90 per cent of which was produced in the Southern States. The total area devoted to sweet potatoes in the United States increased from 537,000 acres in 1899 to 641,000 in 1909, and the yield increased from 42,500,000 to 52,200,000 bushels. The total value of the crop increased at a much more rapid rate than either the acreage or the yield, showing an increase of 78.3 per cent in ten years.

With better methods of storing and marketing the potatoes, it is said, their value could be doubled without increasing the acreage or production. This is especially true in the South, where the potatoes are either rushed on the market at digging time, when the price is low, or stored in outdoor pits or banks, where a large portion decays.

Very few of the sweet potatoes stored in pits or banks ever reach the market, for from 25 to 50 per cent spoil, and those that remain are not of good quality. Even if the pit or bank method of storage would keep the potatoes, it is not economical.

Too much labor and expense are required to make these banks every year and to get the potatoes out when wanted for market. Sweet potatoes can be marketed more economically and to much better advantage from storage houses.

Green Shirts Shown For Winter Wear

Long-Pointed Collars in White and Self-Striped Effects Continue in Vogue.

New features are noted among collars and shirts shown by leading manufacturers for fall and winter. Imported dress shirts, in soft laundered effects with musnroom tucks and semi-French cuffs are selling readily. Shirts with a short stiff bosom in various color combinations are also featured.

White self-striped effects in French pique with stiff and unstarched bosoms are also meeting a good demand. A soft bosom with cross-striped plaits, in various color combinations, is a new fall feature that has been well received.

Woven madras in colored effects will be strong.

The demand for silk shirts is increasing and they are becoming more of a staple than formerly. Green will be a popular shirt color for the new season.

The long pointed collars in white and self-striped effects are continuing into the next season.

A departure in them is the wider two-inch band instead of the narrow one now worn. These new collars have a three and a half inch point.

The wider band is claimed to give them more the appearance of a standing collar, besides causing them to sit better and afford greater comfort.

Stocks of Iron Not Above 100,000 Tons

Accumulation in Yards Reduced Rapidly in Southern Territory. Curtailment Continues.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 23.—Small sales of pig iron continue in the Southern territory, with a satisfactory aggregate.

The price of pig iron holds around $11 per ton, No. 2 Foundry. There have been a number of sales made for delivery during the last part of the year and some inquiries are in hand for iron to be delivered the first quarter in 1914.

There still is curtailment of the make. It is believed Alabama will produce during August almost as much iron as in July. Furnace companies are expressing the belief that before the end of the year a buying movement is likely to call for an immense tonnage. The furnace and warrant yards inventory will show now over 100,000 tons on hand. A few months ago there were 150,000 tons on the yards.

Basic iron demand is more satisfactory. Charcoal iron price is above $23, with the make as low as it ever was in the South.

Steel operations are steady, the several plants in Alabama working on practically full time. Fabricated steel is going out in all directions. Cotton tie manufacturers have had a prosperous season.

Fertilizer Concern Has Splendid Year

American Agricultural Chemical Earns Close to 7 Per Cent on Its Common Stock.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—American Agricultural Chemical for its year to June 30 is understood to have earned something better than 6 per cent on the $18,330,000 common. In fact, it is barely possible that the final figures will come nearer 7 per cent on this issue.

Unless conditions in the fertilizer trade become very much worse than for the last two years, the company can continue to earn and pay the present 4 per cent dividend. This dividend rate is, by the way, a testimonial to the wisdom of directors in making the initial distribution on the common stock rather modest. If a 5 per cent or 6 per cent rate had been adopted two years ago, the future outlook would not be nearly so happy as it is to-day.

A very strong feature of American Agricultural operations is the high percentage of branded or trade-marked goods which it sells. It is safe to state that 90 per cent of the company's tonnage consists of trade-mark goods, which farmers buy on the reputation of a particular brand for the specific purpose desired.

SAMPLES COST DRY GOODS MEN MANY DOLLARS

Dealers Feel Something Should Be Done to Stop Incessant Drain on Their Profits.

There is strong feeling in dry goods circles that something should be done to curb the increasing demands of buyers for samples. In most quarters there is a strong opinion expressed that the giving of samples is a necessary evil up to a certain point, but there is also a strong opinion that this point has long since been passed.

Few manufacturers and wholesalers take the trouble to find out just what samples cost them. In only a few cases are definite records kept and the cost of the samples figured.

A New York silk firm gets out about 250 styles a season and the buyers got fair-sized samples of each style they bought. This is really necessary, but it is trade custom, the house follows the general path.

A big woolen firm in New York which does business with the cutting-up trades and larger retailers is one of the best informed on the subject of sample expense.

"On our books," the head of the firm said, "there are about 2,500 accounts. Of these about 1,800 are manufacturers of clothing. To each manufacturer we give five or ten sample books. The cloth in each book is valued at about 20 cents, and the expense of getting them up brings the cost to about 50 cents. This means that each manufacturing account costs us about $3.75 a season for samples. With two seasons a year and 1,800 manufacturers' accounts it is easy to see what samples mean to us without trying to figure the cost of samples for the retail accounts."

In another quarter of the woolen goods trade it was said that the samples given out mounted up to a tidy sum in the course of a year, but that the expense had not been so great of late because several houses had agreed to make clothiers pay for most of the samples they got.

"One of the worst features of the sample business in this industry" this agent said, "is the way some members of the clothing trade use them. Many of them have no scruples at all about taking our samples to a competitor and asking him at how much less than our price he can get the goods made up by his mill. This is a little off the subject, perhaps, but it illustrates one of the worst phases of the woolen industry."

Among the cotton goods houses the evil is seen in its worst form so far as quantity is concerned, but the cheaper qualities of these goods tends to lessen the aggregate loss as compared with wool and silk goods. Lace and embroidery firms also pay tribute to the sample god at the rate of several hundreds to several thousands of dollars a year.

Last, but not least, comes the big department store. Inquiry at several of them in New York brought out the assertion that samples cost them from $30,000 to $60,000 a year. Only 15 to 20 per cent of the people who take these samples from the stores really buy anything afterward, and the resultant loss necessarily is heavy.

N. O. T. & M. Receiver May Ask Big Loan

Frisco Subsidiary Almost Certain to Default on Interest Due September 1.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—As soon as New Orleans, Texas and Mexico receivers know whether Frisco receivers will or will not pay the $700,000 interest due September 1, they will make application for permission to issue approximately $1,000,000 receivers' certificates. In the meantime the Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust Company is making temporary loans to the receivers comprising $100,000 for debt falling due August 1, and about $200,000 additional to middle of September.

The engineers employed to examine the properties which make up the Frisco's South Texas lines have not yet made their report, but the most favorable statement would show that at least 18 months of steady work and adequate funds would be necessary to put New Orleans, Texas and Mexico in a position to earn interest on its bonds. Others believe at least three years would be consumed in putting the line on its feet, and between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 expenditures would be needed.

Under these circumstances assumption is made in certain quarters that Frisco will default its guarantee of the interest due September 1. In fact, it is said that any other course would be improper.

KNITTING YARNS SLOWER BECAUSE STRIKE IS ON

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Buying of knitting yarns has slowed up, due to the knit goods strike in New York and Brooklyn, but prices show no change. Just how the strike will affect the market is a matter of conjecture, although most dealers admit that prices will drop if it is continued.

Spinners were unwilling to raise quotations on worsted yarns materially, as it would result in advancing the prices for worsted goods and so kill the prospective demand for them.

Cotton yarns were quiet, the small demand for them being attributed to the spinners' high prices. Weaving yarns were selling at lower figures than for several weeks, but only small orders were placed. Buyers, influenced by favorable cotton crop reports, were holding out for still lower prices.

There were no changes in Southern frame-spun knitting yarns, but there was less activity noted in the coarser counts of single combed yarns.

SUMMER TRADE DEVELOPED BY BRAINY EFFORT

August Dullness of Years Ago Is Overcome by Teaching Public What to Buy Then.

"Summer isn't the terror to us that it used to be," remarked a white-haired, veteran of the department stores of Atlanta—a man who is an interesting talker and a consistent advertiser, but who keeps his own name and his own personality persistently in the background.

"There was a time," he went on in reminiscence, "when we might almost as well have closed up the store during July and August. That was years ago.

"In the summer all the well-to-do customers went out of Atlanta, and did not return until fall. Fall was a mad scramble for customers and stores alike.

"The less wealthy, who stayed in town, did little shopping. Everyone thought it was too hot. No one ever paid any attention to buying in midsummer. The stores were unattractive. Usually the proprietor was vacationing—if that's a good word—himself.

"I do not know who had the inspiration first in Atlanta. But a change came about. The wisest merchant, whoever he was, decided there were people in town with money to spend, even in the summer time.

"He schemed out the way to get it, which is followed almost universally by Atlanta stores nowadays.

"To make the story short, he offered bargains so attractive that shoppers simply had to come to town for the August sales. The custom has grown until to-day the things which have no season of necessity have been exploited so skillfully that the public believes summer is the season for them.

"That may sound obscure, but I do not intend it to be.

"Take furniture, for instance. There is no more reason why one should buy furniture in January than in August. Nor is there any reason why one should buy furniture in August in preference to January.

"But the summer furniture sale has become so much a fixture in the leading stores that people wait for it. It is good business for all concerned. The merchant is striving toward the ideal condition, which would be sales and collections of an unvarying amount every month in the year—unattainable, but none the less an ideal state of affairs.

"The customer, likewise, is winning. She effects economies by mid-summer buying of furniture and blankets, and distributes her expenditures more evenly over the year."

Textile Furs Being Featured for Fall

Wide Variety of Pile Fabrics Shown in Cloaks for the 1913-14 Season.

Many new effects in pile fabrics are being featured for the fall and winter seasons. Matelasse plushes in brocaded effects and high colors, to be used for cloakings and millinery, as well as other brocaded effects, are prominent features in present trading.

There is also a tendency to moires, in Scotch plaids and checks, for dresses, cloaks and trimmings. A wide variety of Oriental and Bulgarian effects in plushes and velvets are also shown for vestings, collars and cuffs.

A new item is the jasper effect, which has a rich woolen appearance and is featured for cloakings.

The fabric is of an indefinite striped appearance, and is shown in black and white and blue and brown mixtures.

Imitation Persian lamb is also popular among the more expensive fabrics, being made to retail at about $7.50 for 50-inch widths.

FRENCH CALICOMAKERS MAKE 20-YEAR COMPACT

Several years ago an attempt was made to organize the French calico printing trade, a cartel being formed which included the principal producers, and an effort was made to fix standard prices. The results were not altogether satisfactory, and the agreement was allowed to expire. The matter was taken up again recently, and it is now reported that a new cartel, comprising seven of the leading French firms whose works are situated in Rouen, Epinal, Bolbec and Valenciennes, has been formed.

A central sales bureau, which will transact the entire selling business of the concerns interested, has been established under the style of the Comptoir de Vente des Tissus Francais Imprimees.

According to the Daily Consular and Trade Report, the agreement is for twenty years.

SMALL TOWN SECURES NATIONAL BANK CHARTER

STOCKTON, CAL., Aug. 23.—Announcement is made that application the first big rubber factory to be established at Riverbank has been granted.

This is the first time in California that a town of 600 inhabitants has secured a charter for a national bank. The bank is capitalized at $25,000.

TURNING TO FRENCH MODELS.

Fall models for men's lounge suits show complete ignoring of English fashions and tend toward the French for the first time in many years. Cheviots yield to unfinished worsteds, and the colorful textures to the plainer. The popularity of dark greens and browns in "off" shades is evidenced by the earlier selections of tailors, while inconspicuous plaids and gun club checks are also well in demand.

Southern Hosiery Buyers in Market

Winter Goods Reported Scarce and Stringency May Become Acute by Fall.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Southern hosiery buyers are visiting the local market. Although mill agents report cheap goods sold up, some provision is evidently being made for the newcomers. The Southern jobbers have waited this year until the indications of the cotton crop were fairly certain before operating. They are not taking 84-needle bundle goods, as they predict lower prices on those lines. There are said to be fewer orders for extracts booked this year than formerly.

This is not affecting the valume of sales, as extracts are made up only to order, and customary buyers of those lines are simply seeking a different finish. Winter goods are already reported scarce, and, as the duplicating period has not yet begun, the stringency will probably be acute before the end of the fall.

Cotton Goods Buying Seems to Lack Snap

Limited Number of Desirable Spring Dress Fabrics Taken by Purchasers in East.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—While certain cotton good sellers are satisfied with conditions, nearly everywhere is the complaint that the market is without any snap save for a limited number of desirable spring dress fabrics.

A number of buyers are reported to have gone home without purchasing, while others took only sample pieces. Such wide lines were shown that, in some cases, buyers got the impression that there was plenty of goods back of them. This was not the case, but the buyers were frightened off.

Staples are not in demand as they should be at this time, and specialties are holding the lead. Fancies in ratines, crepes and voiles have shown little tendency to lose their popularity.

According to The Textile Manufacturers' Journal, several larger selling agencies have opened their spring lines of dress ginghams, zephyrs, seersuckers, madras, krinkles, cheviots and shirtings.

MEN WANT AMERICAN STYLES IN THEIR CLOTHES

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—During the past few weeks several English clothing manufacturers have had representatives in the local market with their garment samples. While some interest was displayed, it was mostly for obtaining information.

The sales made were principally on overcoats, and were intended only to add a few imported garments to the lines regularly offered. The English salesmen learned that the majority of retailers in the larger cities of the United States prefer American styles.

A local manufacturer said that foreign competitors will have to realize this still more and make their clothing which they intend selling here more on American lines, or else there will be little business developed in this country.

He also said that foreign ready-to-wear garments would not have to be seriously reckoned with by local merchants for some time to come.

LONDON STYLES FAVOR LOOSE ENDS FOR TIES

According to a London report there will be increased activity in the neckwear trade there this fall. The marked style tendency now is not toward color, but toward shape. The loose ended knot is favored, but many four-in-hands are also shown. Various shades of blue and gray constitute the color trend at present.

In London men are wearing either a jacket suit or a frock coat with a small black bow tie. The start with black will probably extend to other colors as the season continues.

It is thought, however, that this vogue will not be generally adopted, as it is entirely out of keeping with the fall ideas advanced by English haberdashers.

Once-overs and Ascots are being revived in a small way.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The United States ranks fourth as purchaser of English goods, with $146,000,000 last year.

The Bethlehem Steel Corporation is seeking bids in England and Ireland to build nine iron ore carriers of 15,000 tons dead-weight capacity.

The Canadian Government, in contract with the United Fruit Company of Nova Scotia, has established a new steamship line between Canada and England, in order to secure more satisfactory access to the English market.

The Chicago and Northwestern, with proceeds of $4,000,000 equipment trust certificates recently sold, will pay for switching engines, 2,000 gondola cars and 2,005 box cars.

WHITCOMB CO. IMPORT MUCH CORNED BEEF

Soaring Prices of Meats Bringing South American Product to the United States

Meat is going up, and up, with no end in sight.

This has led to a curious state of affairs. Corned beef, peculiarly a product of the United States, now is being imported from South America in great quantities, and Libby, McNeill & Libby, the Chicago packers, advise their representatives in Atlanta, H. H. Whitcomb & Burke Company, that nothing but the South American product now is to be had.

The quality is declared to be excellent. The steers of the Argentine prairies are fully equal in quality to those of our own Western ranges, and the only difference the consumer can detect is that instead of saying "U. S. Inspected and Passed," the labels bear the stamps, "Inspected under the Food and Drug Act of June 30, 1906"—in other words, the customs service now does the inspecting instead of the Bureau of Animal Industry.

Never before, so far as anyone remembers, has it been profitable to import tinned meats. This could take place only under exceptional conditions such as the present, when corned beef in 14-pound containers is quoted to retailers at $37 per dozen or thereabouts, while two years ago it was quoted at about $21.

Libby, McNeill & Libby were among the first to foresee the inevitable shortage of American meats and to establish a packing house on the other side of the equator. They now are reaping the benefit.

While it is believed that corned beef never before has been imported direct from South America, last year the same packers, after shipping large quantities of the product to Europe, reimported it at a profit because of a sudden bulge in prices in the United States.

Vienna sausage and potted ham, the Whitcomb company advises, have advanced 5 per cent in the past ten days, and pork sausage, pure, has advanced 28 per cent in three weeks.

Temporarily, the live stock market is depressed by the heavy shipments from the West, East and South, due to the great damage to the corn crop in the West and to the hay crop in the East. The shipments from the South were attracted by the high prices buyers paid when they made a "raid" on Southern cattle a month or so ago, which attracted the attention of the United States Government.

The Government warned the farmers of Georgia and Florida to keep their cattle, not deplete their herds, and to fatten them for market at home instead of selling them lean for fattening in the West and North.

NEW KIND OF PIPE LINE.

One of the most remarkable mechanical devices ever used in connection with the manufacture of paper is being installed at Orange, Texas. This is a "blower," more than a mile long, through which the waste yellow pine timber from a local lumber mill will be sent to a paper mill. The slabs as they come from the mill will be ground into small particles and forced by means of compressed air through the long pipe to the paper manufacturing plant. This paper mill is said to be the only plant in the world that makes paper from yellow pine pulp. It has a daily output of thirty-three tons of wrapping paper.

DEMAND FOR RAMIES TO IMPROVE IN THE SPRING

The fall linen season is shaping up well. The demand for ratines has hurt ramie linens, but it is pointed out that the former soil more easily and do not hold their shape as well as ramie suitings, and that a better demand for ramies is looked for next spring. Light blues, pinks and browns will lead the color demand for ramie goods.

ENGLISH TRADE GROWS.

The July statement of English Board of Trade shows increases of $17,436,500 in imports and $25,880,000 in exports. Imports of foodstuffs increased $8,875,000, and raw material about $5,600,000.

RUBBER FACTORY FOR BRAZIL.

Within a year the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company will have in operation in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, first big rubber factory to be established on the South American continent, to cost $1,300,000.

Women's Footwear Seen in Many Colors

Leather and Cloth Combinations Shown—Men's Shoes Made Along English Lasts.

Imported models on which fall and winter styles for women's evening slippers are based are leather and cloth color combinations, among which red, green, gray, white and champagne are to be featured in strap and colonial effects.

There is a tendency to drop cut steel buckles, and those of jet will be much used. Another popular buckle will be of oxidized silver, in colonial design, with a satin filler to match the panel.

Panel effects are featured in the smartest slippers. A model well thought of is of patent leather, has a modified duck bill, too, and a jet buckle filled with satin matching the narrow panel extending from the buckle to the side seam. The heel is full Louis-Cuban. Featured suede slippers are of taupe, also with color combinations.

Women's street shoes shown have the long French vamp and square throat combined with cloth top color combinations. They are made with a plain toe, are fitted with the full Louis-Cuban heel and are of the button variety.

Men's shoes for fall and winter are made along the straight, laced, English last, and the color tendency is toward dark tan and gunmetal. Low, flat heels are shown almost exclusively. The blucher style is taboo.

Arizona Grows Fine Egyptian Cotton

Salt River Valley Experiments Reach Stage Where Gin and Oil Mill Are Needed.

Excellent results are being obtained in the growing of long staple Egyptian cotton in the Salt River Valley of Arizona. Under the direction of Mr. E. W. Hudson, of the Department of Agriculture, the industry has come to include over 4,000 acres in planted cotton, yielding in most cases a net profit of $100 an acre.

While the severe drouth throughout the entire West has made inroads on every other crop, the Arizona cotton has prospered to such a degree that a ginning plant and an oil mill to make use of the cotton seed are to be established by the time the crop is ready.

The subcommittee of the American commission which has been making a study of cotton growing and cotton marketing in Egypt shows that not only can American methods applied to the raising of Egyptian cotton reduce the cost approximately 50 per cent, but that our progressive farmers, although handicapeed by the quality of our soil as compared with that of the Nile Delta, can bring our long staple cotton yield per acre up to that of Egypt's.

Long staple cotton brings from 21 to 25 cents a pound on the spot.

Already the irrigation system employed in the Delta lands has been employed in Arizona. The rest must be worked up by American intelligence and American industry, for Egypt with her antiquated methods of cultivation offers little further guidance.

FIRST BALE BRINGS 12 CTS. PER POUND IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Before the entrance to the Cotton Exchange the first bale of upland cotton grown in Chatham County was auctioned. The bale brought 12 cents a pound, 3 cents better than current values. The first bale was grown by W. M. Kennedy and ginned by Floyd & So. The staple graded good middling.

FANCY SHOE BUCKLES.

The wearing of elaborate slipper buckles was particularly noticeable during the Grand Semaine racing week, as the prevailing style of short skirts allows the entire shoe to be seen. The custom is now quite the craze, and many society people are adopting special buckle designs to be worn with various costumes. They are appearing daily with a different buckle to harmonize with each different gown.

MEN'S COLLARS ARE INVENTION OF A HOUSEWIFE

Ingenious Woman Contrived Familiar Article to Lessen Amount of Washing in Home.

The detachable collar now worn by men the world round was the invention of a thrifty housewife 83 years ago. It sprang from sheer necessity, and yet it was so simple an article of wearing apparel that its first maker never looked upon her production as an invention, and it is doubtful if the other early manufacturers thought of patenting the idea.

During the succeeding years, in which the manufacture of collars and their allied products has become a great industry in and around Troy, N. Y., the incident of the invention of the collar had almost been lost until recently brought to light by the unearthing of a family tradition.

It is now certain that Mrs. Hannah Lord Montague was the maker of the first detachable linen collar. Mr. Montague was engaged in the manufacture of fine shoes for women. He was a large man, very particular in matters of dress, and in those days before the invention of the sewing machine and before great public laundries were established, the making, washing and ironing of the shirts formed quite an item in the work of the household.

Mrs. Montague was resourceful, and in endeavoring to lighten her household duties she hit upon the idea of a detached collar, which could be fastened to a neckband of her husband's shirt and washed and ironed separately. Before this time, when the collar was soiled, the whole shirt had to be washed, but by this device two or three collars might be used to one shirt. Acting upon the idea which had come to her, Mrs. Montague went to the patch bag, selected a strip of white linen, which she cut and shaped to fit the neckband of her husband's shirt, sewed it, turned it inside out, and attached a narrow string of braid at either end to tie about the neck. This was the original string collar.

Thus through the resourcefulness of a woman the modern detachable collar was evolved.

A FREE TRIP

To Atlanta is available to the merchant who buys an adequate bill from the members of the Merchants' Association.

Write to

H. T. Moore
SECRETARY.
Rhodes Building,
Atlanta.

Write for our latest Catalogue. The leading merchants are adding the 5c and 10c departments. Why not one for your town?
McCLURE 10c CO., 47-49 S. Broad St.
Give Your "DIMES" a Chance

The Hirshberg Company
STATIONERY DRUGGISTS' SUNDRIES NOVELTIES BLANK BOOKS
Glendale Line
13-15-17 NELSON STREET
ATLANTA

DIXIE PICKLE AND PRESERVING CO.
Manufacturers of
Pure Apple and Distilled Vinegar, Catsup, Pickles, Mustard, Pepper Sauce, Sauer Kraut, Jelly, Etc.
CANNED GOODS
364 to 378 Marietta Street, Atlanta, Ga.

HATS
Caps, Gloves, Umbrellas
QUALITY and VALUES
BROWN, PERRYMAN & GREENE CO.
ATLANTA

VOLLMER MANUFACTURING COMPANY
Moore Building
ATLANTA, GEORGIA
MAKERS OF FINE JEWELRY
Special Designs in Platinum
Engravers Diamond Setters Watchmakers
Specialists in Jewelry Repairing

U. S. CERTAIN CAMINETTI WILL SHARE DIGGS' FATE

Government Bends Every Effort to Speed Trial of Federal Immigration Commissioner's Son on the Charge of "White Slavery."

Former California State Architect, Facing Four to Twenty Years in Prison, Plans Appeal—Companion to Follow Suit if Convicted.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—Supremely confident after the conviction of Maury I. Diggs, former State architect, the United States authorities, prosecuting the famous "white slave" cases, which at one time threatened to disrupt President Wilson's Cabinet, are using every energy to speed the trial and obtain a similar verdict against Drew Caminetti, who was Diggs' companion in the sensational flight to Reno with Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris.

Diggs will be sentenced September 2. Under the verdict of the jury, the Judge can fix the penalty at from four to twenty years, and owing to the fact that virtually the same evidence that was introduced against Diggs will be introduced against Caminetti, leads the Government to believe that conviction is certain.

Diggs' attorneys have already announced they will carry the case to the highest court in the land. Should Caminetti be convicted, he, too, doubtless would appeal.

Diggs Gives $20,000 Bail.

Bail in the sum of $20,000 was readily furnished by Diggs' relatives when the amount was fixed by the court and was accepted by the United States Commissioner.

The case was one of the most spectacular ever tried in California. Diggs is a former State architect. Caminetti is a son of the United States Commissioner of Immigration. Both men are married and have families. Both are of high social standing in Sacramento.

Both men are considerably older that the girls with whom they eloped. The undisputed evidence in the case was that the intimate relations between Diggs and Miss Warrington and Caminetti and Miss Norris had become notorious in Sacramento. Families of both the young men were preparing to start criminal action against them to break these relations.

Then they and the girls disappeared. They were traced to Reno, where the two couples were living as men and wives in a rented bungalow. The men were charged with violations of the Mann anti-white slave act.

Blames Girls for Elopement.

Both Miss Warrington and Miss Norris charged that the men had threatened, cajoled and coerced them into making the trip to Reno. They declared that they had promised to obtain divorces from their wives in order to wed them.

Diggs, in his defense, pleaded that the girls were the persons responsible for the flight, that they had induced them to fly to Reno.

It was this attitude of hiding behind a woman's skirt that caused the most severe condemnation of Diggs. Great stress was laid on it by Theodore Roche, attorney for the Government, in his final appeal to the jury for conviction.

"This defendant," said Roche, "did not deny on the stand the truth of the essential facts we have shown. And then he comes before you and asks acquittal.

"Hides Behind Wife's Skirts."

"The defendant in a criminal case usually bases defense on the presumption of innocence, but this defendant relies on his own depravity. He comes into court covered with his own shame and hides behind the skirts of his wife and child.

"When these girls went to Reno their departure meant social ostracizement. Marsha Warrington went because she believed and trusted this man. She didn't desire money, dresses or presents. Her parents gave her these. But this man had promised her marriage, as Caminetti had promised Lola Norris.

"Those promises were never intended to be kept. What was intended was to abandon the girls in Reno. They never could have returned to Sacramento—and you know what that meant. But the alluring promise of marriage had been held out to them."

Scores Conduct in Home.

Attorney Roche was particularly severe with Diggs for the misconduct in his own home to which he testified yesterday. He had not been content, said Roche, with making an assignation house out of his office, but he was similarly to degrade the privacy of a home he shared with a virtuous and loving wife.

In seeking to establish that the trip was not premeditated and that the two girls had not been induced to take it by threats of scandal on one hand and promises of marriage on the other, Diggs willingly testified to his own misconduct and the embarrassments, domestic and business, into which it had led him.

His counsel in summing up the evidence did not palliate these acts.

"Paint this defendant as you will—a monster if you please," argued Robert Devlin, his senior counsel, "but tell me what motive he would have had in going out of the State for the purpose of accomplishing those things already accomplished.

"Counsel may characterize him as they please, and I may not differ with them. They say his act was shameless, and I may feel the same way about it, but it isn't white slavery."

This was the whole argumentative substance of the defense. There remained the rhetorical and the emotional appeals and, of course, they were not neglected. The girls were blamed for tempting the men. They were called willing accomplices in what evil had been done, and the wisdom of trusting a woman scorned when she bears witness against the lover who has discharged her was called into question.

Southern Drawl an Opera Asset

Alabama Singer Lauds Accent

Sees Fame for Dixie Song Birds

Miss Neida Humphrey.

Miss Neida Humphrey, of Huntsville, Blames Laziness for Dearth of Divas.

HUNTSVILLE, ALA., Aug. 23.—The soft, musical voice of Southern women, which poets have raved about, others have envied and the comic papers have made subject of satire, has a value in dollars, and it has an even greater value in the world of art.

So thinks Miss Neida Humphrey, of Huntsville, who has just returned home after a three-year course of voice culture under Caruso in New York.

Miss Humphrey, realizing the supreme demand for American prima donnas on the operatic stage, not only in this country, but in every capital in Europe, thinks there is a world of opportunity for the young women of her own section in this field.

"The Southern woman's voice," says Miss Humphrey, "possesses more natural musical qualities than the voices of any other women in the world. With proper cultivation that quality should make them the greatest opera stars. The world has long known of this quality, but the Southern women of talent have just refused to grasp their opportunities.

Blames Indolence in Part.

"And I guess the laziness so generally attributed to our people may have a great deal to do with it. Singing, I mean serious singing, is the hardest sort of work.

"There is hardly a girl of social position in the Southland who has not a smattering of musical education. The trouble is it's only a smattering. When they reached the point where singing meant real work they retired gracefully to other fields.

"But I believe that the time is not far off when the Southern girl of talent will realize the life she is overlooking and then I am certain that there will be girls of Dixie whose names will be just as famous as those of Farrar, Suzanne Adams and Louise Homer, all American born.

Miss Humphrey is very young and she is very, very pretty, but that is not all. She has a voice of remarkable power and dramatic quality, but withal she holds in it that soft sweetness that declares her home as plainly as it would be declared were she to walk on the stage waving the Stars and Bars.

Has Charmed the President.

She has already done things in music and she intends to do more. In New York she has sung before the most critical audiences in concert and has won their high approbation. It was she who charmed President Wilson and a distinguished gathering in New York recently at a concert.

In Chattanooga last May, during the reunion of the Confederate Veterans, she sang before the old soldiers and was given an ovation.

Miss Humphrey intends to return to New York in the fall to complete her studies. She has already been assured of an operatic engagement and Huntsville believes that it will soon boast an operatic celebrity.

Dweller in Desert Sees First Pine Tree

Full Grown Woman Is Mystified by Foliage—Also Takes Mountain Snow Bath.

CHICO, CAL., Aug. 23.—Miss Ilene Locey, of Visalia, cousin of Frank M. Moore, of this city, a grown woman, saw her first pine tree when she went with the Moores for an auto trip to the mountains.

She has resided long in the desert southland, and was not only pleased but mystified at the foliage and the fact that she could reach the snow-bound regions of the Sierra Nevadas inside of an hour's time.

The party left here especially to give Miss Locey an idea of the diversified climate of the Sacramento Valley and a snow bath in the higher altitude.

Tents Only Shelter For Toledo Families

City Is Growing So Rapidly That Builders Can Not Construct Houses Demanded.

TOLEDO, Aug. 23.—Because the city has not enough houses to rent and builders are not able to construct houses as rapidly as they are desired tents are being used as homes in Toledo.

Two tent colonies have been established in the city. In both districts occupants of the tents are owners of lots on which the temporary homes have been erected. The lots have been purchased as home sites and tents are serving as temporary homes.

The tent homes consist of living rooms, dining rooms and kitchens. Each has a flower and vegetable garden and one is equipped with a chicken park, a stable and outbuildings. Living rooms are convertible into bedrooms, and hammocks, stretched in the open, are used day and night.

SOUTH IS PAYING HEAVY TOLL FOR CANAL BENEFITS

Colonel Gailliard, of South Carolina, Breaks Down Under Tremendous Task.

More than any other section of the country, the South is expected to realize in prosperity and development by the opening of the Panama Canal. But the South is to pay its toll and pay for it dearly.

Just when the canal was an assured fact, Senator John T. Morgan, of Alabama, father of the Isthmian Waterway idea, died as a result of his years of ceaseless labor impressing the necessity of rthe canal on Congress.

Nok Lieutenant Colonel David Du Bois Gailliard, of South Carolina, the army engineer who dug the Culebra Cut, has had to abandon the scene of his triumph and return to the United States to give his nervous system shattered by his work, a rest which it has needed for months.

And that is not all. From the zone the advices come that Colonel William L. Sibert, of Alabama, the army engineer in charge of the work on the great Gatun Dam, is on the point of a breakdown and it is extremely doubtful if he will be strong enough to stay in the zone to see his work completed.

Careers of Two Similar.

The careers of Colonel Sibert and Colonel Gailliard have been remarkably similar. Gailliard was born in South Carolina; Sibert, in Alabama. They entered West Point the same year and both graduated in 1884 among the first five men in their class.

After their graduation, both were sent to Willets Point and in 1908, when the canal work was put in the hands of the army engineers, Colonel Goethals immediately picked the two Southerners as his chief aides. Sibert was put in charge of the work on the Atlantic side, which included the building of the Gatun Dam, while Gailliard was in charge of the work in the interior of the zone.

That Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard had suffered a nervous breakdown was known only to a few of his intimate friends in the army. A few weeks ago when his condition became serious the matter was brought to the attention of General Bixby, the chief engineer in Washington, and by General Bixby called to the attention of Secretary of War Garrison, who immediately granted the stricken engineer a long leave of absence.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles F. Mason, Medical Corps, U. S. A., the director of the Ancon Hospital, in the Canal Zone; Mrs. Gaillard and Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard's young son came with him and went with him to Baltimore, where he will enter the John Hopkins Hospital. There he will be under the care of some of the most eminent specialists in nervous disorders in this country.

Leave Did Not Aid Him.

Colonel Gaillard was in New York less than two months ago after a six weeks' leave of absence that he had taken in the hope that the rest would benefit his health to the extent that he would be able to remain in the Canal Zone. He sailed from New York on June 27 last, again to take charge of the work in the Central Division.

Those who talked with him at that time remember that he expressed a desire to get away from the Isthmus as soon as his work was finished, but, he added, with a touch of sadness in his soft Southern voice, "When I do leave it will be with deep and sincere regret."

Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard is the first of the famous army engineers employed in the construction o. the Panama Canal to be stricken as a result of his work. A few weeks ago Colonel William M. Black, Corps of Engineers, the chief of that branch of the service in this part of the United States, the officer who was head of the engineering board which solved the problem of raising the old battleship Maine, was in Panama and was Gaillard's guest.

Close Friends for Years.

The two officers have been intimate friends for years. During his stay at Empire, the headquarters of Colonel Gaillard, Colonel Black noted and realized that the builder of Culebra Cut needed a long and complete rest.

"Gaillard," said Colonel Black last night, "is one of the most wonderful organizers the army has developed. His work in the Canal Zone has been little short of marvelous. He laid out his plans in such a way that he got the maximum out of everything, especially in the handling of the railroad part of the work. He was also able within a few months after he took charge at Empire to double the work accomplished in a specified time. Some of the things that he did experienced railroad men had said were practically impossible."

Woman Given Job Of Cleaning Up State

Success in Making Tacoma a Spotless Town Causes Promotion in Service.

TACOMA, Aug. 23.—Because of her successful efforts to transform Tacoma into a "Spotless Town," Miss Arizona B. Wimple, food and market inspector, is to be rewarded with a bigger job—the cleaning up of the State of Washington.

This was the advice received here today from the Governor's office in Olympia, where it is said Miss Wimple is to be appointed State bakery and sanitary inspector.

Her methods in cleaning up Tacoma were simple and direct and included publicity as an aid in bringing about the desired reforms.

Frequent inspections of bakeries and other food dispensing establishments were made and the score announced in the newspapers.

Miss Wimple, who is young and pretty, will receive $4,000 a year from the State.

She is a graduate of the University of Michigan.

CANDLES BURNING AT WAKE SET HOUSE AFIRE

CALGARY, ALBERTA, Aug. 23.—A fire which started from candles set about a coffin at a wake, at the house of J. Selar, here burned the hair and eyebrows off the body of an aged woman. Portions of the face were charred. Firemen extinguished the blaze.

WATCHING MAN WHO STOLE AND HID A FORTUNE

Detectives Shadowing Mail Thief Believed to Have Cached $40,000 After Robbery.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 23.—Charles Savage, a negro mail robber, released from the penitentiary in Leavenworth, is being shadowed by three detectives. He will be kept under watch constantly because somewhere is hidden $40,000 of the $50,000 in currency he stole five years ago from a registered mail pouch, and nobody except Savage knows where it is.

When Savage was released he was met at the door by his mother and a young woman to whom he was engaged before he was sent to prison. They came at once to Kansas City to see an uncle, who is dying.

"They needn't watch me," he said. "If they think I'm going to dig up $40,000 they're mistaken. I wish I knew where there was $40,000 buried."

"Isn't it queer that $2,000 in $20 gold certificates of the same series as stolen from the mail sack were found blowing around in the wind near your mother's home in South Leavenworth this spring?" Savage was asked.

"Yes, that's queer. I don't understand," he answered. "I read about that, and I figured it out that some person who lived in South Leavenworth had stolen that mail sack and hidden the money there, and the rain had washed away the dirt where it was buried, and the wind got at it and blew it away."

Employees' Pension Measure Approved

Pennsylvania Cities Are Permitted to Establish Fund for Faithful Municipal Workers.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—Under the provisions of an act passed by the Legislature, which Governor Tener has approved, this city is given authority to establish a municipal pension fund for employees. The act applies to all city employees who have given twenty years of service to the city.

The act provides that in the event of the creating of the fund every employee will be compelled to pay into the fund 1 per cent of his yearly salary.

The pension to be allowed the beneficiary will be equal to one-half of the average yearly salary received by him during the last two years before his retirement.

College Professor Seeks Laborer's Pay

Unable to Make Both Ends Meet, Teacher Resigns Chair in University.

BERKELEY, CAL., Aug. 23.—Unable to make both ends meet on a salary of $900 paid him by the University of California, Paul Boehncke, an instructor in the German department, has withdrawn from the faculty and is seeking a position in which he can support himself and family of two children.

During the last few summers Boehncke has managed to augment his meager salary by working as a plasterer at from $5 to $7 a day, or nearly twice the amount he was paid by the university.

Apache War in '80's Is Cause of Divorce

Husband Deserted Thirty Years Ago by Wife Who Didn't Like Wild West.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Geronimo and his wild hordes of Apaches, who terrorized New Mexico in the eighties, were the direct cause of a divorce suit which Allen L. Eaton begun yesterday in the Superior Court against Zuma E. Eaton.

The Eatons were married in Silver City, N. Mex., in 1886, when the Apache uprising was on. Mrs. Eaton, who hailed from Pittsburg, did not enjoy the wild Western life her married life entailed, and she deserted her husband.

Common Laborer Strikes Big Gold Vein

Ore Will Run $60,000 to Ton and Mine Is Largest in Southern Oregon.

MEDFORD, OREG., Aug. 23.—What is reported as the biggest gold strike made in Southern Oregon has been been reported by Elmer Higginbotham on the mine owned by him and M. G. Womack on Kane's Creek. The ore will run $60,000 to the ton, according to assays of samples made here.

Higginbotham had been a common laborer for many years until Womack offered to "grub-stake" him on a prospecting trip up Kane's Creek.

BERI BERI CAUSED BY RICE DIET, SAYS EXPERT

Special Cable to The American.

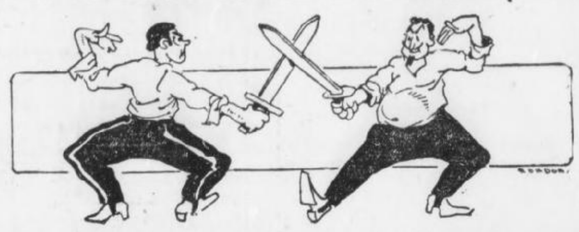
BERLIN, Aug. 23.—The Berlin Medical Association reports that the well-known investigator of beri beri, Dr. Max Moszkowski, finds, after a remarkable experiment, that the disease is caused by the use of rice.

Dr. Moszkowski for 138 days subsisted almost entirely upon rice. All the symptoms of beri beri manifested themselves.

At the close of the experiment an injection of serum containing an extract of rice resulted in a complete recovery.

Hunnicutt Won in First Round

Beat Bravo With Wooden Sword



How Atlanta's Broadsword Champion Worsted French Fencing Master.

Time was when the prize fight was not au fait, when in the best families, and even in the second best, and maybe in the third, they frowned down upon the pugilistic art as brutal and degenerate. Then it was that the youn bloods turned to cockfighting and fencing for the gladiatorial features of their lives, and were satisfied.

And that time was not so very long ago. Calvin W. Hunnicutt, who is Atlanta's oldest citizen, revived them in memory yesterday, when he fell to the young bloods turned to cockfighting between Charley White and Frank Whitney, with the remark that things were not like this of yore.

Of course, he had a dueling story of his own to tell, and he told it—of how he fought an arrogant French fencing master in a combat with wooden swords, and how all Atlanta looked on and cheered him as its champion.

It occurred before the war, when all good things, it seems, occurred. It occurred just at the beginning of the war, and had its effect in keeping Mr. Hunnicutt out of that conflict.

"There had been talk of war, war, war pretty generally," he said. The trouble clouds were thick and black, and we organized here in Atlanta a cavalry troop that we called the Fulton Dragoons. Captain Wilson was our officer, I was first lieutenant, and C. B. Whaley, my best friend, was first sergeant.

"All went well at first, and things were pleasant. But after a while politics began to leak in, as inevitably it will with all volunteer military bodies. Everybody knows everybody else so well, you see that very naturally jealousy comes in. Anyhow, when the time came for the election of a captain for a new term, Whaley and I, backing Wilson, lost out, because the other man promised horses to all members of the troop. Then dissatisfaction grew and the organization loosened.

"The new captain and his great ally, Second Lieutenant Williams, were full of ideas as to how to run a military organization, and began to put these ideas into play. That made more dissatisfaction for no volunteer soldier likes to be driven by men who were their friends and associates.

"One of their ideas was the importation of a fencing teacher to instruct the men in broadsword use. Now Whaley and I had practiced considerably with the broadsword, and were rather expert in its use, but we said nothing of it to the captain and his friends.

"Well, the fencing master came, a Frenchman from Mobile. He was a flourishing, affected sort of fellow, and considerable of a boaster. Not long after he was here, he broke off teaching and began to talk about his own great skill and to show it off.

"One day he challenged all of us.

" 'Nobody here can touch me with his sword,' he announced. 'I don't fear to let any of you try.' And he flourished his sword.

"Whaley and I decided to take him on, and I went to him. He laughed at me. But I insisted, and the date was set for our combat. That there should be no bloodshed—because we were going to do some furious fencing, it seemed—I put a negro of mine to work making two wooden swords, or sticks. These were to be our weapons.

"Somehow the tidings that there was to be a fight got abroad. Atlanta was not as large as it is now, but it was a right smart town even then, and when the day for the fight came, everybody turned out.

"We had planned to have the duel in a theater, owned in the days of old Atlanta by a man named Williams. The place was packed, and I began to be a little nervous over the public nature of the affair.

"We squared off, and the crowd settled back in the seats for a long and interesting fight. But it wasn't for long. The Frenchman came at me with a flourish, and I had a flourish to match his. Thence I made a thrust at him, the thrust that we know technically as the point tierce. It went through his guard, and to his body. If we had been fighting with real swords, my opponent would have been run through.

"All Atlanta laughed. The Frenchman had pretty generally advertised his ability to fight, and everybody was there. However, there were one or two persons who didn't like the way the fight came out, particularly the new captain of the dragoons and his ally. After the fight they began working to get me to resign. The duel, they claimed everywhere, might have an effect in breaking up discipline. And so, with their dissatisfaction showing plain, I resigned.

"The Frenchman we didn't see after the half minute duel. If the dragoons learned broadsword fencing, they learned it from somebody else.

"It's a pity the art of fencing does not survive in the popular fancy. It is clean, beneficial and interesting. But this prize fighting——"

LOOKS FOR BODY OF FATHER LOST IN ICE 43 YEARS

Miss Edith Randall, of Boston, Expects to Find Corpse on Glacier at Foot Mt. Blanc.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Miss Edith Randall, of this city, has gone to Chamonix, Switzerland, one one of the strangest errands known. She hopes to find in the glacier there the body of her father, who lost his life climbing on Mont Blanc forty-three years ago. Ten others were lost with him in a snowstorm near the summit. All told, two Americans, one Scotchman and eight guides and porters died.

Five of the bodies were recovered. It is expected by guides that the six others will be delivered up by the glacier this year.

Scientists are interested as it may supply evidence to prove their theories on the speed of the annual march of glaciers toward the valleys.

Miss Randall's father, John Randolph, a Boston banker, was fifty-four when he lost his life in 1870.

Last year Miss Randall came to Chamonix, as the ice axe and several small articles relonging to Mr. Randall had been found by guides at the foot of the Glacier des Bossons.

Many Americans and English Alpinists, as well as guides, joined in the search for the body, but without result. All hope for better luck this summer.

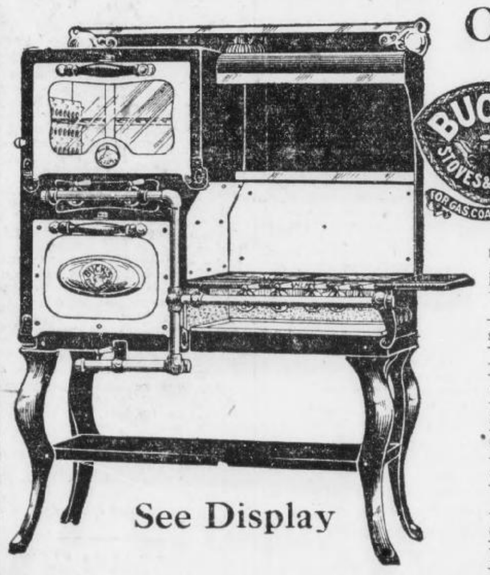
"Back on the Job"

again and very quickly, too, if you will only let Hostetter's Stomach Bitters help the digestion to become normal, keep the liver active and the bowels free from constipation. These are absolutely necessary in order to maintain health. Try it to-day but be sure it's

HOSTETTER'S Stomach Bitters

25% DISCOUNT

On All BUCK'S Gas Stoves and Ranges



See Display

Buck's—the most conveniently arranged, the most sanitary, and certainly the most economical gas user made—comes in for a tremendous discount this week.

They are here—anything from the small stove to the most elaborate range—and all are carrying the same big discount. Discard your old, worn, smoking, fuel-consuming cooking machine to-morrow, and let us replace it with one of these modern stoves or ranges.

The savings of your fuel bill will soon pay for any BUCK'S you may select.

Connections Free--$1 a Week Buys Your Choice

That's fair enough, isn't it? We will actually put it in your kitchen—ready to turn on the gas—and you can pay the bill at one dollar per week. Come in to-morrow and take your choice. See our big Mitchell street window display.

Rhodes-Wood FURNITURE COMPANY

COMPLETE HOUSEFURNISHERS

103-5-7-9-11 Whitehall Street, Corner Mitchell

NOTICE

If you have any difficulty in buying Hearst's Sunday American anywhere in the South notify Circulation Manager, Hearst's Sunday American, Atlanta, Ga.

HEARST'S
SUNDAY AMERICAN

BIRMINGHAM EDITION

VOL. I. NO. 21. Copyright, 1913, by The Georgian Company. ★★★ ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY, AUGUST 24, 1913. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

BOLL WEEVIL COSTS SOUTH BILLION; ZONE CURE URGED

Senator Smith of South Carolina Secures Government Expert's Figures on Total Estimated Ravages During Last 17 Years.

Shows How $107,539,127 Yearly Cost of Proposed Remedy Could Be Counteracted by Diversified Crops and United States Aid.

(The zone strip to which Senator Smith refers as a remedy for the boll weevil, as proposed, would begin in Tennessee and run down through Alabama and part of Florida.)

By ELLISON D. SMITH.
(United States Senator From South Carolina.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—A few weeks ago I asked some of the officials in the Department of Agriculture to give me an estimate of the losses the farmers of the South have suffered as the result of the boll weevil. The figures furnished me are startling. From the report I make the following extract:

"The only adequate way of arriving at the losses due to the boll weevil is by studying the average production per acre by States, comparing years of non-infestation with years of infestation. It is quite noticeable that every State by the third year of infestation has shown a decided reduction in average yield per acre.

"This average production is used in connection with the acreage planted to obtain an estimate in money value of the loss from the boll weevil to the producers. This is only the primary loss and is turned over and over again as it reacts upon ginners, oil mill men, merchants, bankers, property values, manufacturers of the textile and the final consumers.

"The total loss to producers obtained by this method from 1895 through 1912 is $841,521,135, or an average during the 18 years of $46,751,174 per annum, with the loss now reaching over $100,000,000 per annum.

These Only Obvious Losses.

"Only the more obvious losses from the ravages of this pest can even be estimated. These are the losses in productivity suffered by the producers and the losses in business of the first processes in manufacture.

"Figures are presented to show the losses to the planter, the ginner and the oil mills as follows, for the period from 1895 to 1912:

Loss to the planters	$841,521,135
Loss to the ginners	17,446,295
Loss to the oil mills	72,270,421
Total	$931,237,852

"To these must be added losses in business suffered by cotton buyers and brokers, merchants, bankers and cotton mills, the loss in property values the ultimate effects upon the consumer."

In other words, officials of the Department of Agriculture estimate that the loss to the South from the boll weevil between 1895 and 1912 has been considerably more than $1,000,000,000. This is staggering.

The Government has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars to stamp out the boll weevil, but without avail. The Government experts, entomologists, farm demonstration agents and others have done splendid work in teaching the farmers better methods of cultivation, rotation of crops, etc., but so far as checkmating the boll weevil is concerned they themselves admit that their work has been a failure.

Moves Eastward Steadily.

The weevil continues its march eastward at a steady pace each year, and in no section where it has made its appearance has any method been discovered of minimizing the damage done by it.

Unless something is done it will not be very long until the entire cotton area of the South is infested.

Of course, some cotton can be grown in the area infested by the boll weevil, but the yield per acre and per farm is greatly reduced, while the cost of production is greatly increased. I am told by a member of Congress who owns a large plantation in an infested section that it costs just about twice as much to produce a bale of cotton now as it cost before the boll weevil came. Many others have given me testimony to the same effect.

When one undertakes to estimate the loss to the South during recent years because of this little insect, and then tries to estimate the probable loss in the future, the result must be appalling.

I have been deeply interested in the boll weevil for a number of years. I have watched its spread from the time it made its first appearance in

Continued on Page 6, Column 4.

Commission Fight in Birmingham Is Hot

Wood and Ward File Petitions. Former Keeps Up Denunciation of Latter.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 23.—Clement Wood, former Recorder of Birmingham and a Socialist, to-day filed his petition in the Probate Court as candidate for President of the City Commission of Birmingham.

George Ward, former Mayor, filed his petition last Monday. Vassar Allen is expected to have his in by Monday, the last day in which the petition can be filed.

The commission race is becoming exceedingly hot, as Wood and Allen are firing hot shot into Ward.

8 Near Death From Poisoned Ice Cream

EUFAULA, Aug. 23.—Eight persons are critically ill at Abbeville as the result of eating poisoned ice cream. All the doctors in the town are working with them to prevent fatal consequences, following a social affair in connection with the Henry County Teachers' Institute at Abbeville. It is thought that the metal of the freezer affected the cream.

Those ill are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, Miss Ann Crawford, daughter of Probate Judge Henry Crawford; the Misses Norton, of Clopton, and Miss Thomas.

Birmingham Scents Postoffice Shake-Up

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 23.—Report that a sudden change had been made in postmastership at Bessemer and that Captain H. W. Crook would succeed J. H. McEniry, following a visit of postoffice inspectors to the district, has caused talk in the Federal office force and apprehension is now felt that the postmasters in Birmingham, Ensley and several other places in and around Birmingham will be removed, though their terms do not expire for two or three years yet.

No criminal charges have been made against anyone.

95 Dynamite Caps Explode in His Hand

HUNTSVILLE, Aug. 23.—As Tom Morris, an employee of the Madison County road building squad near Gladstone, was carrying 15 dynamite caps in his hands they exploded and six fingers and both thumbs were blown off, the little finger on each hand being all that was left.

Several of the caps were shot into Morris' breast and these may cause death. The injured man was brought to Huntsville and placed in the hospital.

L. & N. Rate Plea Under Advisement

HUNTSVILLE, Aug. 23.—Judge Shelby, of the United States Circuit Court, and Judge Grubb, of the United States District Court, have taken under advisement the application of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company for a writ of supersedeas to hold up the order of the Alabama Railroad Commission for a reduction of passenger fares while an appeal to the Supreme Court is pending.

Judge Grubb has returned to Birmingham. The railroad company claims that it is losing $400 a day while observing the cheap fare order.

PASTOR IS FINED BY CHURCHMAN IN BIRMINGHAM

Dr. A. J. Dickinson, Found Guilty of Violating Traffic Ordinance, Is Assessed One Dollar.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 23.—Dr. A. J. Dickinson, pastor First Baptist Church, was fined $1 in the Recorder's Court this afternoon, charged with violating traffic ordinance in cutting corners in crossing the street.

A. M. Douglass, member of Dr. Dickinson's church, presided in court. Dr. Dickinson served notice of appeal and made $5 bond. Dr. Dickinson pleaded his own case. Demurrers he presented were overruled.

The courtroom was crowded with church members. Dr. Dickinson made an argument and M. M. Ullman represented the city, charging Dr. Dickinson with seeking notoriety.

After he had been tried a call was issued by Dr. Dickinson for a mass meeting Monday night in the City Hall to memorialize the City Commission to abolish the ordinance.

Dr. Dickinson has declared his intention of carrying the matter to the Supreme Court.

Democratic Leader To Run for Senate

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 23.—Semi-authoritative announcement was made today that Jesse Stallings, formerly a well known Democratic leader in Alabama, will be a candidate for United States Senator in the election next year.

Congressman Henry D. Clayton and Congresman Richmond Pearson Hobson already have announced. John B. Knox, of Anniston, and Captain Frank White, of Birmingham, also may be in the race.

It is now believed that Congressman Underwood will not run.

MESSENGER BOYS IN MOBILE GO ON STRIKE

MOBILE, Aug. 23.—Almost the entire force of Western Union messenger boys went on strike here to-day against the order of Manager W. Bentley, who refused to give them carfare to territory remote from the downtown district.

LEO M. FRANK as he appeared in court yesterday. The defendant was calm under the terrific denunciation of the prosecutor and watched Mr. Dorsey intently through the many hours that the Solicitor consumed in declaring the defendant one of the greatest of criminals. He seemed scarcely more moved than the spectators.

DORSEY DEMANDS DEATH PENALTY FOR FRANK IN THRILLING CLOSING PLEA

Solicitor's Scathing Address Halted by Adjournment---Had Spoken for More Than Six Hours---Cheered by Big Crowd Outside the Courthouse.

PRISONER CALM, WIFE SOBS AS STATE CHARGES MURDER

Slain Girl's Mother Breaks Down, but Defendant Faces Spectators With Hint of Smile---Case May Go to the Jury by Monday Noon.

Insisting upon the application of the Mosaic law of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey demanded the life of Leo M. Frank yesterday in expiation of the murder of Mary Phagan on April 26.

Nothing less than the death penalty would satisfy justice, declared the Solicitor in one of the most bitter and impassioned addresses a Georgia courtroom audience ever has heard.

It was the closing argument of the State before the fate of Frank is placed in the hands of the twelve jurors. It was interrupted by adjournment at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The Solicitor had been speaking since 9 o'clock in the forenoon and was exhausted by his efforts. His address had begun at 3:30 the afternoon before and had consumed a total of six and a half hours.

Crowd Greets Him With Cheers.

When, weak with fatigue, he asked for a recess and court adjourned until Monday morning at 9 o'clock, a great crowd awaited him outside to cheer him and rend the air with their yells because of the magnificent fight he has put up to send Frank to the gallows for the murder of the little factory girl.

The demonstration was spontaneous and was of greater magnitude than that of the night before. He had aroused to the highest pitch the admiration of the populace for the earnest and determined battle he was conducting for the conviction of the man he deemed guilty of the murder.

Men in front of the courthouse cheered with all their might as Dorsey came in sight from out the courtroom doors. Men from across the street took up the cheer and the little Solicitor was given the demonstration of a governor or some other popular hero as he quickly tucked his books and records under his arms and escaped through the crowd into his law offices in the Kiser building.

Hurls Charge Directly at Frank.

If his tongue was tipped with venom and bitterness, it can hardly be said that the Solicitor was not sincere and in earnest. Every word and every pharse that he uttered during his long speech—the longest of the trial—carried with it the conviction that the speaker was in deadly earnest.

Much of the time he was talking directly at the prisoner and was accusing him of murder and other crimes unmentionable. He looked Frank right in the eye. He leveled his finger at the defendant sitting calmly between his mother and his beautiful wife. He called him a "red-handed murderer" and a pervert. Frank did not flinch.

During a brief intermission, Frank even walked in front of the spectators with the suggestion of a smile on his face. If there was any fear of the verdict in his heart, it was kept buried there, far out of sight of human eyes.

Likens Frank to Oscar Wilde.

Dorsey compared the defendant with that prince of perverts, Oscor Wilde, and there was never a flicker of Frank's eye nor a change in his quiet, speculative expression. Dorsey told of other men who had possessed good reputations and yet had been guilty of the most heinous offenses—Theodore Durant, of San Francisco; Pastor Richeson, of Boston; Mayor McCue, of Charlottsville, Va.; Henry C. Beattie, of Richmond; Dr. Crippen, and others. In the same connection he mentioned the name of Judas Iscariot and Benedict Arnold, both of whom, he said, were supposed to be of good character until they had become traitors and betrayers.

"Character isn't worth a cent when you've got the evidence before you," shouted the Solicitor after he had compared Frank with some of the most infamous persons he could call to mind.

Prisoner Encourages His Wife.

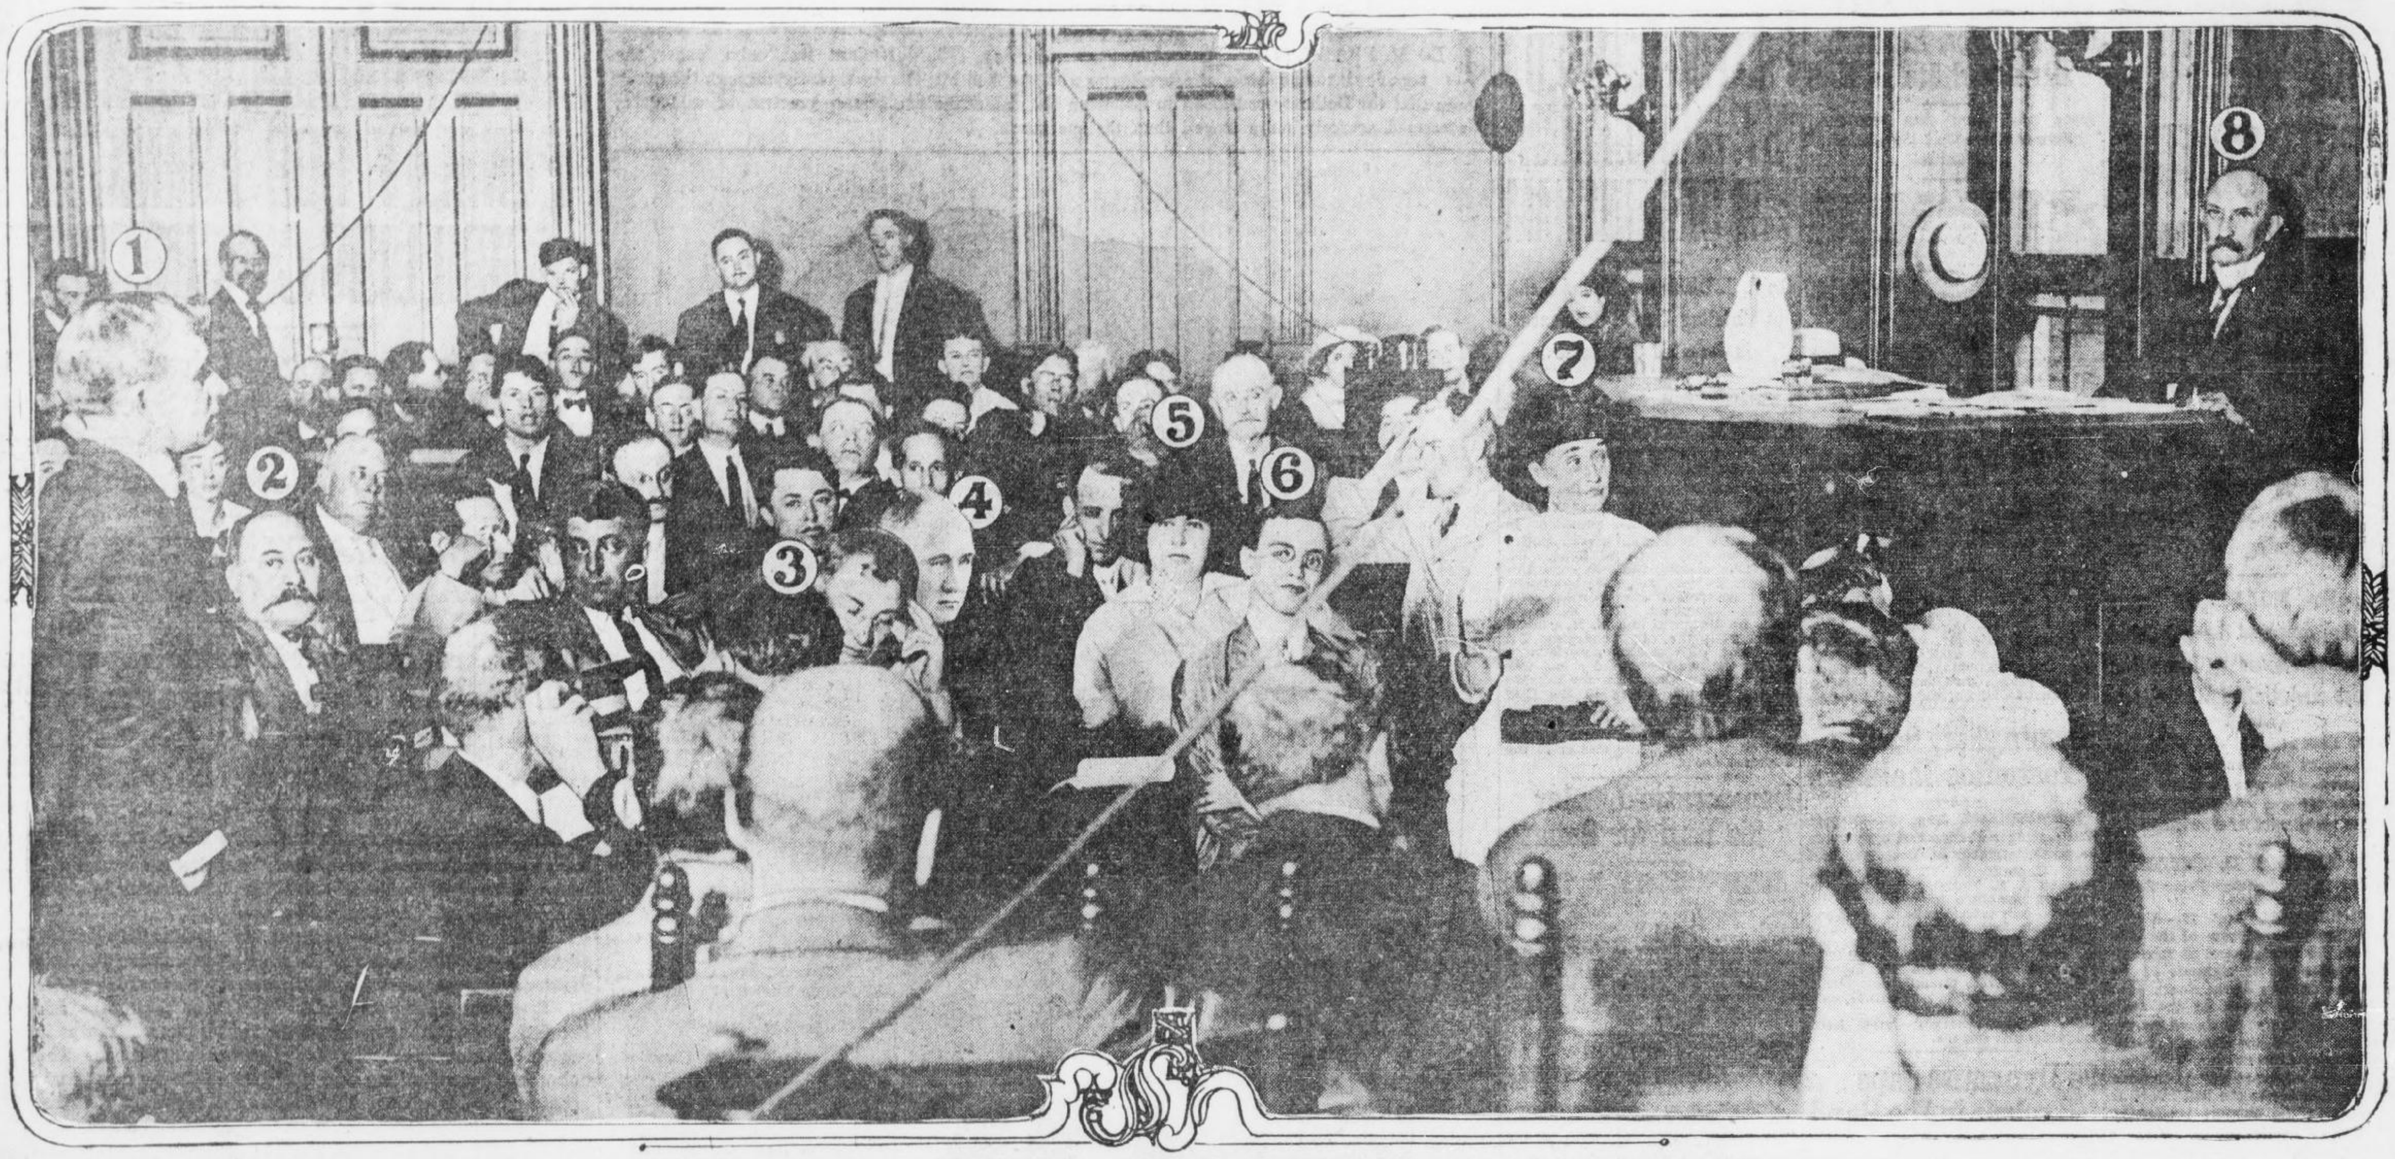
His denunciation at times was so unsparing and his words so like a physical blow that it seemed that the prisoner must quail before him. But Frank maintained his composure. In fact, during a lull in the storm of invective he occasionally would lean toward his wife or his mother and whisper a few words, accompanying them with a smile. For all that his manner betokened, he might be talking of some amusing incident that had just occured to him.

If the Solicitor's words failed to affect Frank, he was probably the only person in the courtroom who did not feel the intensity and the grim determination behind each sentence and each accusation that came from the lips of the State's representative.

So overcome at Dorsey's blunt and grewsome description of the torturous manner in which the pretty little factory girl had

DEATH PENALTY DEMANDED FOR LEO M. FRANK

A TENSE moment in the courtroom yesterday when Solicitor Dorsey was denouncing Frank in his dramatic plea to the jury. Numbered in the picture are (1) Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey, (2) Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford, (3) Attorney Reuben Arnold of counsel for the defense, (4) Luther Z. Rosser, who has had charge of the battle for Frank's life; (5) Mrs. Leo M. Frank, wife of the defendant; (6) Leo M. Frank, whose rate will soon rest with the jury; (7) Mrs. Rea Frank, his mother, and (8) Judge L. S. Roan.



DORSEY CHEERED AFTER GREAT CLOSING SPEECH

been attacked and strangled to death was Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan, that she collapsed utterly and wept. Frank's young wife was affected by the scene and she laid her head upon the shoulder of her accused husband and cried for several minutes.

The very manner in which Frank had borne himself during the long trial was used by the Solicitor against him. Such remarkable nerve and effrontery he declared he never had witnessed before in a court of justice. Dorsey thought it merely was one of the outcropping characteristics of the defendant's perverted moral and intellectual nature. He compared him to the brilliant Wilde, whose effrontery and insouciance in the midst of charges of unspeakable conduct was a mater of world-wide knowledge.

When he was interrupted by adjournment, the Solicitor was far from the end of his argument. He had taken longer than he expected. He had paused longer on certain aspects of the cast than he had inteded. It seemed probable that he would require most of Monday forenoon to conclude his address.

Scoffs at Frank's Alibi.

Attacking the main points of Frank's defense, he came out boldly with the declaration that Frank's alibi was no alibi at all. He said that the whole of Frank's alibi practically hinged on the testimony of Miss Helen Curran, of No. 160 Ashby street, who had testified that she saw the young factory superintendent waiting for his car at Whitehall and Alabama streets Saturday afternoon at 1:10 o'clock.

At this point Dorsey dramatically brought forth the statement of Frank, which he had made on the first day that he was detained at police headquarters.

"Listen to this," he said shaking the paper before the eyes of the jurymen. Then he quoted from Frank's statement which read:

"I didn't lock the door that morning. The mail was coming up. I locked it when I left for lunch at 1:10."

Makes Charge of Perjury.

"There goes your alibi," said the Solicitor. "It was punctured by your own statement made before you realized the importance of the time element."

Dorsey characterized as perjuries the statement of the Curran girl, that of Miss Fleming, a former stenographer; that of E. F. Holloway, day watchman, and that of Charley Lee.

He threw the suspicion of wrongdoing upon the character of the young woman, Miss Sarah Barnes, who dramatically had expressed her conviction of Frank's innocence on the stand and had declared her willingness to die in his place. The Solicitor overlooked nothing tending to point the hand of guilt toward Leo Frank.

Dorsey mentioned time and again the fact that the defense had failed to cross-examine the State's character witnesses. He said that he had dared them to do it, and that they had been afraid of the disclosures that would ensue.

Asserts Shirt Was "Plant."

He charged that the bloody shirt at Newt Lee's house, the pay envelope, the rope and the club on the first floor of the factroy were plants.

He said that Frank's statement in a letter to his unable, written the afternoon of the crime, that "nothing startling had happened," while intended to be self-serving, was in reality self-accusing.

Referring to the notes found by the girl's body, he called attention to the use of the word "did." He said that Conley always said "done," and that if "did" was used in the notes they must have been dictated by someone else.

He added that the reference in the notes to the toilet on the second floor was a strong indication that the murder had been committed there.

The Solicitor charged that Frank had been endeavoring to force his attentions upon the Phagan girl for weeks and that his advances culminated in the brutal attack of Memorial Day.

Gives His Theory of Crime.

Resisted again, Frank, in brutish fury, struck donw the girl, accomplished his purpose, and then, realizing als position, sought to escape having identified with the attack by winding a rope about the girl's neck and strangling her to death, according to the graphic words of the prosecuter.

As the hour passed noon, the Solicitor began to show signs of fatigue. His spirit was as indomitable and fiery as ever, but his features grew a bit haggard, and the weeks of tireless work on the case began to display themselves more plainly on his face.

At 1:30 he asked if there might not be a recess, as he was about exhausted. There was a side bar conference between the attorneys for both sides, and Judge Roan announced that adjournment would be taken until Monday.

It was thought likely that Dorsey would finish about noon. The judge's charge probably will occupy an hour or more, and then the case will go into the hands of the twelve jurors.

AUTOIST IS RUN OVER BY HIS OWN MACHINE

JOLIET, ILL., Aug. 23.—Because he cranked his automobile while it was in gear, Harry Lewis, a Joliet banker, was run over and badly injured. Lewis was in a hurry to take some friends to the Union station and neglected to inspect his gears, the machine would not spark the first few whirls of the crank, so he opened the throttle wider, one of the friends put on the exhilarator to help matters, and now Lewis has been two weeks in the hospital.

Policewoman Uses Her Stare as Club

Declares She Has No Trouble With Mashers After One Stern Glare.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Squelch the masher with a look. You don't need a whistle like the Boston women; hatpins do not make good weapons, and a club should be used only in a tight squeeze.

This is the opinion of two of Chicago's policewomen, both long in the business of protecting women.

"I haven't had any trouble with men on the beach this year, even those who didn't know I was a policewoman," said Officer Mary Boyd, who is in charge of the Thirty-ninth street bathing beach. "All you have to do when a man speaks to you insultingly is to look at him. He turns and runs."

Woman Toper Has Thirst Amputated

Obstruction in Her Throat Was Believed Cause of Her Longing For Alchohol.

LIMA, OHIO, Aug. 23.—Mary Calahan, 22, submitted to a surgical operation in the Chief of Police's office today, and it is hoped Mary's thirst was cut out, literally and figuratively.

Several years ago she was shot in the jaw. A splintered bone lodged against her palate, creating a continuous desire for drink. She insists the desire was for strictly alcoholic drink and that she had tried grape juice in vain. Since that time Mary and her tickling bone have given the police a ticklish time.

Chief Ernest May consulted with City Physician Steer. Between them they decided on the operation.

Offers to Serve Out Hawthorne's Term

Pastor-Classmate of Author-Convict Says It Would be 'Utmost Pleasure.'

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—The Rev. William Davis, of Everett, a member of the class of 1867 of Harvard and an evangelistic clergyman, has written his classmates, Julian Hawthorne and William James Morton, in the Federal Prison at Atlanta, offering to serve the remainder of their sentences, and states to do so would give him "the utmost pleasure."

EX-BANDIT GETS RELIGION; COLE YOUNGER CONVERTED

LEES SUMMIT, MO., Aug. 23.—Cole Younger, once a bandit, became a member of the Christian Church at a revival meeting to-night.

Dorsey's Closing Address a Scorching Attack on Frank

Hurls Charges of Perversion and Murder in Face of Defendant While Wife Bows Head and Weeps.

Probably a more stirring, denunciatory, and at the same time incisive and analytical argument, has never been heard in a Georgia court than Solicitor Dorsey's closing address in the case against Leo M. Frank. Here it is as the Solicitor delivered it:

Dorsey moved over to the railing of the jury box as he opened his speech.

"Your honor and gentlemen of the jury," he said, "I was speaking to you yesterday of the character of this defendant. This defendant has not a good character. The conduct of the counsel in this case in failing to cross-examine, in refusing to cross examine these twenty young ladies, refutes effectively and absolutely the claim of the defendant that he has a good character.

Says Defense Had Right to Refute Charge.

"As I said, if this man had a good character, no power on earth could have kept him and his counsel from asking those young girls where they got their information and why they dsai what they did. Now that's a common sense proposition.

"You know as twelve men seeking to get at the truth that they did not ask those hair-brained fanatics, as Mr. Arnold calls them, questions about Frank's character because they were afraid, and those witnesses, as good as any the defense put up, were unimpeached and are unimpeachable. And you tell me that because the good people come here from Washington street and testify to his good character is that he has one!

"It very often happens that a man's wife is the last person to know his wrongdoing. Sometimes the man uses charitable and religious organizations to cover up and hide his evil self. Very often his guilty conscience turns him that way. Many a man is a wolf in sheep's clothing.

"Many a man is a white sepulcher on the outside and absolutely rotten within. But suppose he has a good character. David had a good character until he put Uriah in the forefront of battle that he might be killed that he could get his wife. Judas Iscariot had a good character among those Twelve Men until he accepted those 30 pieces of silver.

"I have shown you that under the law they had a right to bring out all those things. You saw they dared not do it. Let's see what the law says. I'll read here from the Eighty-third Georgia Report:

"'Whenever any persons have evidence in their possession and they fail to produce it, the strongest presumption arises that it would be hurtful if they did, and their failure to produce evidence is a circumstance against them.'

"You don't need any lawbook to tell you that. It's plain common sense.

Recalls Case of Oscar Wilde.

"Benedict Arnold was brave. He enjoyed the confidence of all the people and those in charge of the Revolutionary War until he betrayed his country. Since that day his name has been a synonym for infamy. Oscar Wilde, an Irish knight, a brilliant author, whose works will go down through time, gave us 'De Profundis,' which he wrote while in jail—a remarkable work—yet when the Marquis of Queensberry discovered that there was something wrong between Wilde and his son, Wilde had the effrontery and the boldness to sue him for damages. A suit in retaliation resulted in the conviction of Wilde for criminal practices. Yet, wherever the English language is spoken the effrontery of the testimony on cross-examination of this man—an effrontery typical of this sort (turning to Frank)—will always be a matter for deep study for lawyers and for people interested in that sort of degeneracy.

"He had a wife and two children. His shame probably never would have been brought to light but for the fact that he had the effrontery and the boldness to start a suit. It ended in his being sent to prison.

"And the prosecution of Oscar!

"He was a man who led the esthetic movement. He was a scholar and a literary man. His cross-examination was a thing to be read with pride by every lawyer. The whole world took notice of his prosecution, and yet when Oscar Wilde was an old man, gray-haired and tottering to the grave, he confessed to his guilt. Prominent? Why, he was one of the most prominent men in the world! Why, he came to America and founded the esthetic movement here. He raised the sunflower from a weed to the dignity of a flower. He was handsome—one of the handsomest men to be found. He had moral courage, yet he was a pervert, proved and confessed.

"There was a handsome man in San Francisco, a member of this defendant's sect—Abe Ruef, a man who possessed all of the faculties of highest intelligence, yet he corrupted even Smith, and his corruption of the poor girls with whom he came in contact brought him to the penitentiary. I have already referred to Durant. His character did not prevent the jury from convicting him. This defendant's character, like Durant's, is not worth a cent when the case is proved.

"And crime is alike with the rich and poor, ignorant and learned. Take an ignorant man like Jim Conley. He is the man who commits the petty crimes, but take a man with high intellect, like this defendant—this intellect, when put to the right use, leads to glorious accomplishments; but if these faculties be put to the wrong use, it brings ruin to the man in the commission of the most diabolical crimes. Look at McCue, the Mayor of Charlottesville, Va. He was a man of broad intellect and high education, but, despite his intellect, despite his splendid character, he tired of his wife and shot her, and the jury, composed of Virginia gentlemen, broad-minded and fair, despite McCue's good character, found him guilty and sent him to a felon's grave.

"Take the case of Richeson, the preacher of Boston. Here was a man of highest intellect and with a brilliant future. He was engaged to one of the wealthiest and most beautiful girls of Boston, but entanglements with a poor little girl caused him to fear for his good name and he so far forgot his good character as to put this poor little girl to death. Even after his conviction in the last days of his hope he committed an act upon himself which he thought would draw the pity of the Governor and save his life. But a Massachusetts jury and a Massachusetts Governor were courageous enough to let that man's life go. They had the courage which will make every right-thinking man right by the laws of God and man and of his country.

"Take Beattie—Henry Clay Beattie, of Richmond. He was of splendid family, of wealth and proved a good character, though he did not possess it. He took the mother of his 12-month-old baby out in an automobile and shot her. He was cool, calm and deliberate. He laughed and he joked, but he joked too much, and although the detectives were maligned and abused and a large slush fund was used, a courageous, honest Virginia jury upheld justice and sent that man to death. And he never confessed, but he left a note saying he was guilty.

Likens Frank To Dr .Crippen.

"Crippen, of England, a man of high standing and recognized ability, killed his wife because of infatuation for another woman. He hid her where he thought she would not be found, as this man (pointing to Frank) thought the body of that little girl would not be found. But murder will out, and be it said to the glory of old England this man paid the penalty of death.

"Gentlemen, you have an opportunity that comes to few men. Measure up to it. Will you do it? If not, let your conscience say why not.

"But you say you've got an alibi. Let's examine that proposition. Here's an authority: 'An alibi as a defense involves the impossibility of the prisoner's presence at the scene of the offense at the time of its commitment, and the range of evidence must be such as reasonably to exclude the possibility.'

"The burden of carrying this alibi rests on the shoulders of this defendant. They must show to you that it was impossible for this man to have been at the scene of the crime—an alibi, while the best kind of evidence if properly sustained, otherwise is absolutely worthless. I am going to show you that this man's alibi is worse than useless. It is no defense at all.

"I want to give you the definition of an old darky of an alibi. It illustrates my point. Rastus asked old Sam, 'What is this hyar alibi I hear so much about?' Old Sam says, 'An alibi is provin' that you was at the prayer meeting where you wasn't, to prove you wasn't at the crap game where you was.'

"Let's see the time table of the defense. I want to turn it around for half a minute. Then I want to turn it to the wall and let it stay forever.

"'One p. m.—Frank leaves the factory at 1 o'clock. If he swore when he was on the stand the other day that he left the factory at 1 o'clock it was because he saw the importance of this time point and had to leave there ten minutes earlier than he said he had at the police station before he had had time to confer with his lawyer, Mr. Luther Z. Rosser.

"I quote: 'I left at 1:10.' Right here let me interpolate. This man never made an omission from the beginning to the end of this case. Where he knew a person was aware that he was in the factory at a certain time he admitted it. He proved, or at least attempted to prove, an alibi by the little Curran girl. They had her get up on the stand and say that she saw Frank at 1:10. Yet here is his statement made to the police April 28 in the presence of his attorney, Mr. Luther Z. Rosser, in which he said that he did not leave the factory until 1:10.

"The saddest thing in this case—I don't know who caused it, I don't know who introduced it, and I hope I will go to my grave without ever learning who brought this little Curran girl into this case—the saddest thing in this case is bringing in this little girl who is connected with Montag's and placing her upon the stand here to protect this red-handed murderer.

"Jurors are sworn, and his honor has the right under the law to charge you to consider the truthfulness or the reasonableness of that which any witness swears to. And, gentlemen of the jury, anyone who looked upon that little girl noticed her bearing upon the stand, the slightly unusual manner and her connection with Montags—consider the fact that this little girl, like the little Bauer boy, had been riding in Montag's automobile—and if you can not tell just why and how she was brought here, then I am unable to understand your mental operations.

"If Frank locked that door at 1:10, how could she have seen him at Alabama and Whitehall street at 1:10? How could she be so positive that it was him, if she really saw anyone there? For, mark you, she had never seen him but once. She comes into your presence and tells you the unreasonable and absurd story of seeing him, which is in direct contradiction to Frank's story.

"On this time proposition, I want to read you this. It made a wonderful impression on me when I read it. It's from the speech of a wonderful man. It's from a man in whose presence even lawyers of the type of Ar-

Continued on Page 4, Column 1.

You Can't Be Well When Constipated

"Keep Your Bowels Open"—Doctors Estimate 75 Per Cent of Sickness Due to Torpid Liver.

Some undigested food is left in the stomach daily, which the liver should clear away. A heavy or unusual diet, or a change in water, may cause the liver to leave a few particles to press and clog, and the next day more are left over. So this waste accumulates, clogging stomach and intestines, and causing constipation.

That is not all. If the waste is not eliminated it ferments and generates uric acid, a poison which gets into the blood and through the system.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT immediately flushes the stomach and intestinal tract and washes away every particle of waste and fermentation; it purifies the blood by dissolving what uric acid has accumulated and passing it off in the urine.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is much better than calomel; no danger of salivation, no need of an after-cleansing dose of oil. It acts quickly and mildly; never forces, gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. Take it before breakfast and in an hour you'll feel splendid.

Don't take an inferior substitute; some closely imitate the name, but none produces the same result. All druggists should have the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT, 25c. If yours can not supply you, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

P-R-I-N-T-O-R-I-A-L-S
No. 224

The advance agent of Prosperity is in our midst!

Already FALL BUSINESS is "looking up"—already there is a subtle feeling of "GOOD TIMES" in the air. Have YOU prepared to take advantage of the increased opportunities for bigger and better times? Have you given your FALL PRINTING the attention it deserves? Phone for our representative to call. No time like the present to plan your PRINTING.

BYRD
Printing Co.
46-48-50 W. Alabama, Atlanta.

Phones M. 1560-2608-2614.

HUGH DORSEY WINS HIS SPURS IN PHAGAN CASE

FOURTH WEEK OF FRANK TRIAL FINDS INTEREST OF PUBLIC STILL WHITE HOT

Popular Opinion Swayed, First When State Springs Climax With Conley's Story, Again When Defense Put the Accused Man on the Stand.

BY AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The fourth week of the Frank trial came to an end shortly after noon Saturday, with Solicitor Dorsey still far from the finish of his concluding argument in behalf of the State.

Judge Roan announced at 1:45 that he would adjourn the case over until Monday, as he has been doing heretofore, and the Solicitor will conclude his argument then.

The Solicitor had been speaking more than six hours when adjournment came, but apparently was physically able to go on if necessary.

His address, when it is finished Monday, will have been broken into three sections—one Friday afternoon, another Saturday morning, and a third Monday morning.

The Solicitor's address has been so far a wonderful piece of work.

On all sides he has been praised ungrudgingly for the fine effort he has made in behalf of the prosecution.

Atlanta will breathe a long, deep and soulful sigh of relief, however, when the last word is spoken by way of argument and the case is given into the hands of the jury for a verdict.

Leading Topic for Months.

Never before in the history of Fulton County has a criminal proceeding so challenged the unabated and undivided attention of the people.

For four months the Frank case—or the Phagan case, as it more generally is called—has been the leading topic of discussion among all classes of Georgians, rural and urban, rich and poor, high and low, informed and uninformed.

Every figure to the tragedy has been picturesque in the extreme.

Mary Phagan, a sweet young working girl, cruelly murdered; Leo Frank, a young business man of theretofore unblemished character and standing, indicted for the murder; Jim Conley, a negro, a confessed accessory after the fact of the murder, with a long criminal career attaching to him, the principal witness against Frank; Lucile Frank, the loving and devoted wife of the defendant, always at his side, with his mother, cheering and sustaining him; Reuben Arnold and Luther Rosser, two of the leading and most noted lawyers in the South, defending the accused; Frank Hooper and Hugh Dorsey, the former an attorney of established reputation, the latter a brilliant young lawyer lately named prosecuting attorney of the Atlanta Circuit; a presiding judge who has tried many of the most famous cases in the State—these make up the dramatis personae of the Frank case.

Case Fought Stubbornly.

Never before in Fulton County, if, indeed, within the State, has a case been so stubbornly and so bitterly fought as the Frank case.

It required more than three weeks to get the evidence all in. Every inch of ground was contested vigorously and to a finish.

It is estimated that the defense interposed more than 100 objections of one soft and another, as the case progressed, thus fortifying itself as abundantly as possible for an appeal, in the event of conviction.

The only party to the crime, as witness or otherwise, who has not been attacked vehemently one way or the other is the little dead girl, Mary Phagan!

All sides have agreed that, whatever else might or might not be true, the murdered child was blameless—a pathetic and unoffending victim of a brutal homicide.

Frank, the defendant, has been painted by the defense as a bright young business man, perfect in deportment at all times, a loving husband and a dutiful son, irreproachable in character, incapable of criminal deeds and thoughts, persecuted and assailed maliciously by hostile officials seeking reward both by way of fame and material gain!

By the State Frank has been painted as black as the darkest depths of Hades itself, an unfaithful husband, a vicious son, a lustful monster, particularly after young girls; a pervert, a leader of two lives, a designing and crafty monster—an inhuman murderer!

Conley Blamed and Praised.

Conley has been held up both as a witness worthy of all belief and as a witness worthy of no belief whatever—as a negro reluctant to tell the truth originally because of his disinclination to involve Frank, his erstwhile kind and profitable master, but rushing candidly and sincerely to recite the truth eventually, nevertheless, and, on the other hand, as a negro lying from start to finish for no other purpose than to save his own neck from the noose by slipping it over the head of the oppressed Frank.

Lucile Frank, the wife, has been cited both as the faithful and loving wife there at the husband's side in the courtroom and as the shrinking, suspicious wife, early indisposed even to visit Frank in his cell at the jail.

Rosser and Arnold have painted Hooper and Dorsey as direct agents of a wicked and malicious "frame-up against the life, liberty and most sacred honor of Leo Frank, deliberately and designedly seeking to hang the defendant to gratify a misguided enthusiasm and official zeal, if nothing worse; and Dorsey and Hooper have been unsparing in their criticisms of Rosser and Arnold, the paid attorneys of the defense.

An imposing array of witnesses have declared Frank's character both good and bad, while two other arrays of witnesses have sought both to uphold and to break down his alibis.

Medical experts, of repute and fame, have been set up one by one, only to be designated "fakes" and "quacks" by the other side, and vice versa.

Second Charge in Case.

Besides the original charge of murder there was injected into the case, in its early stages, an unspeakable charge of degeneracy.

First this charge went in with the defense's knowledge and consent, and then the defense moved to rule it out. It wasn't ruled out, and the defense then seized upon it and undertook to make a boomerang upon the State.

The State thereupon sought to enlarge upon it, and the State was stopped from doing that.

Three or four days was used up in attempting to show whether boiled cabbage could reach such and such a state of digestion in such and such a time, and after a long wrangle as to that, the defense and the State found that they were not particularly disagreed about the matter, anyway, as it fit both theories like a glove to show that Mary Phagan died within an hour after eating the cabbage.

The defense has contended that Jim Conley and not Leo Frank murdered Mary Phagan, and the State has contended quite as earnestly that Frank did it, and Conley was connected with it only after the exact fashion he swore to.

Looking backward over the trial from the present day point of view, one may see much that appears grimly humorous in the proceedings—and yet there has been nothing bordering ever so slightly upon the humorous, really. On the contrary, the trial has been tragedy piled uncompromisingly upon tragedy, from beginning to end!

Public Swayed Both Ways.

Into all the other complex, puzzling, elusive and sinister details of the mysterious Frank case, a large measure of prejudice was injected as it swept along.

The public has been swung first this way and then that, rushed to one conclusion, only to be rushed as madly, after a bit, to another, until, up one side and down the other, the public breathed, as aforesaid, a large and deep sigh of relief when at last the jury got the matter into its keeping, to unravel it as best it might and to speak the truth of it as nearly and as exactly as human ingenuity and the forms of law can approximate the same.

The State has fought doggedly to one theory: That Leo Frank, shortly after noon on Saturday, April 26, lured little Mary Phagan, for unspeakably immoral purpose, to the rear of the second floor of the National Pencil Factory in Forsyth street, after having paid her her weekly pittance, and there, when she refused to yield to his lustful purpose, he killed her, first by knocking her down and subsequently strangling her.

That after this horribly tragic culmination of a perhaps non-murderous original intent, Frank sought the help of a negro, Conley, with whom he had had previous very questionable relations, to hide the body, and that Conley, already deep in the mire with Frank, consented, and as a matter of fact, did hide the body of the dead girl in the basement of the factory, where subsequently he expected to burn it.

Charges Notes Were Framed.

That after this, Frank and his accomplice returned to the second floor, whereon Frank's office is located, and prepared some illiterate notes, which were placed beside the dead body for the purpose of diverting suspicion both from Frank and the negro.

That the defendant then gave the negro some money for his work, and promised him more eventually.

That Frank's actions following the murder were suspicious enough to prompt his retention at police headquarters.

That his general character is bad enough to warrant the presumption that he had lustful intentions toward Mary Phagan, as evidenced by his relations with other women and girls.

That his professed alibis are inconsequential and misleading, and not sustained by facts.

Finally, that Conley's seemingly contradictory attitude is accounted for in two directions, first by his desire to save both himself and Frank, and second by his desire to protect himself against a great measure of responsibility for the tragedy than rightfully belonged to him, when it became evident to him that Frank was preparing to let him suffer just so much measure of responsibility, even to the murder itself, as might be fixed if he did speak.

What Defense Has Claimed.

The defense has fought doggedly to this one theory: That Leo Frank scarcely knew Mary Phagan at all, and that the only time he saw her on Saturday, April 26, was when she came to his office to get her pay; that he never lured her to the rear of the second floor, or anywhere else, for any purpose whatever, and that he never saw her alive after the brief moment she stood in his office on Saturday.

That after she left his presence, happy and unharmed, she passed on downstairs, and encountered Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, whom Frank did not even know was in the building, and who was not supposed to be in the building at that time.

That Conley, then only partially recovered from a drunken debauch of the morning, saw her little mesh bag in her hand, and, being "broke" and wanting more whisky, he seized the girl, snatched her mesh bag, after knocking her down, threw her into the cellar below through the nearby open elevator shaft, whence later he dragged her to the trash pile in the rear of the building, tied the strangling rope about her neck, either to complete his dastardly work or to create a false suspicion as to the direct cause of her death.

That he then pulled the staple from the back door of the basement and thus made his escape finally from the building.

That all of Conley's story as to how he helped dispose of the body is a fabrication and a monstrous lie, framed for the purpose of shielding himself and placing the blame upon Frank.

That his story was dragged from him, bit by bit, beginning with the falsehood that he could not write, and that it was revised four times, always under oath, before its amazing and incompatible contradictions could be fixed up to stick with any degree of plausibility, and that he was helped in every one of these revisions by all too willing police officers, detectives and court officials bent upon finding in Frank a victim for Mary Phagan's murder.

Claim Negro Wrote Notes.

That the negro himself, of his own motion, wrote the notes he later confessed to having written, hoping thereby to divert suspicion from himself.

That Conley only began his series of contradictory "confessions" after he found that Frank was under suspicion, and thereby realized his (Conley's) opportunity to fasten more firmly upon Frank that suspicion, to Conley's own great benefit.

That Frank's general character is good, in contradistinction to Conley's admitted bad character.

That Frank has set up two unassailable alibis, and could not, therefore, have committed the crime charged.

That his nervousness the day following the murder was occasioned by the manner in which the fact of the murder was communicated to him, and not because of guilt.

That the long and delicate clerical work he did on the afternoon following the murder is proof that he could not then have been agitated by guilt or by any other sinister knowledge.

That Frank, as a matter of fact, knows nothing whatever of the cause of Mary Phagan's death, and is utterly and entirely guiltless of any participation therein.

Two intensely dramatic events marked the progress of the trial—and about them the entire case has revolved constantly.

Conley's remarkable story, containing the unspeakable charge of perversion, wealthy in detail and full of thrill, was the State's big point.

Frank's wonderfully clear, dispassionate and well-sustained statement from the witness stand was the defendant's big point.

These two contrary things have been pitted the one against the other, and upon which the jury finally would accept as the truth the case always has seemed to turn for final adjustment.

Attack Centers on Negro.

Every effort of the defense has been to break down Conley—including two days' unmerciful grilling by Mr. Rosser—and every effort of the State has been toward upholding him.

Every effort of the defense, therefore, has been also directed toward holding up Frank's statement, just as every effort of the State has been directed toward breaking it down.

It ever was Frank vs. Conley—the life of the one or the other as the law's satisfaction for the murder of Mary Phagan!

Regardless of all things else, the public is unstinting in its praise and approval of the brilliant young Solicitor General of the Atlanta Circuit, Hugh Dorsey, for the superb manner in which he has handled the State's side of the case.

It all along has been freely admitted that those two veterans of criminal practice, Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, would take ample care of the defendant.

Two more experienced, able and aggressive attorneys it would be impossible to secure in any cause.

When it was first learned that Rosser and Arnold were to defend Frank, the public realized that the defendant had determined to take no chances. He selected from among the cream of the Georgia bar.

That the State's interests, quite as sacred as the defendant's, would be looked after so jealously, so adroitly, and so shrewdly in the hands of the youthful Dorsey, however—that was a matter not so immediately settled!

Dorsey an Unknown Quantity.

Dorsey was known as a "bright young chap," not widely experienced, willing and aggressive enough, but—

He had been but lately named Solicitor General, and he hadn't been tried out exhaustively.

Maybe he could measure up to the standard of Rosser and Arnold, but it was a long way to measure up, nevertheless!

It soon became evident that Dorsey was not to be safely underrated. He could not be sneered down, laughed down, ridiculed down, or smashed down.

He took a lot of lofty gibing, and was called "bud" and "son" right along—but every time they pushed him down, he arose again, and generally stronger than ever!

Time and again he outgeneraled his more experienced opponents.

He forced them to make Frank's character an issue, despite themselves.

He got in vital and far-reaching evidence, over protest long and loud.

Whenever the Solicitor was called upon for an authority, he was right there with the goods. They never once caught him napping. He had prepared himself for the Frank case, in every phase of it.

The case had not progressed very far before the defense discovered unmistakably that it had in Dorsey a foreman worthy of its most trustworthy and best-tempered steel!

And the young Solicitor climaxed his long sustained effort with a masterful speech, that will long be remembered in Fulton County!

In places he literally tore to pieces the efforts of the defense. He overlooked no detail—at times he was crushing in his reply to the arguments of Rosser and Arnold, and never was he commonplace!

Fixed His Fame by Work.

Whatever the verdict, when Hugh Dorsey sat down, the Solicitor General had fixed his fame and reputation as an able and altogether capable prosecuting attorney—and never again will that reputation be challenged lightly, perhaps!

Much credit for hard work and intelligent effort will be accorded Frank Hooper, too, for the part he played in the Frank trial. He was at all times the repressed and painstaking first liteutenant of the Solicitor, and his work, while not so spectacular, formed a very vital part of the whole case made out and argued by the State. He was for fourteen years the Solicitor General of one of the most important South Georgia circuits, and his advice and suggestions to Dorsey were invaluable.

A noteworthy fact in connection with the Frank trial is that it generally is accepted as having been as fair and square as human forethought and effort could make it.

It may be true that a good deal of the irrelevant and not particularly pertinent crept into it, but one side has been to blame for that quite as much as the other side.

Ruling Cut Both Ways.

The judge's rulings have cut impartially both ways—sometimes favorable to the State, but quite as frequently in favor of the defense.

Even the one big charge of degeneracy, which many people hold had no proper place in the present trial, went in without protest from the defense, and cross-examination upon it even was indulged in.

Unlimited time was given both the State and the defense to make out their cases; expense was not considered. The trial has lasted longer than any other in the criminal history of Georgia. Nothing was done or left undone that could give either side the right to complain of unfairness after the conclusion of the hearing.

It is difficult to conceive how human minds and hman efforts could provide more for fair play than was provided in the Frank case.

MRS. LEO M. FRANK plainly showing the strain as Solicitor Dorsey arraigned her husband. Below is Mrs. Rea Frank, the defendant's mother, who also betrayed her agitation.

English Housewives Plan Bacon Boycott

Hope to Force Down Price by Abstaining From Buying for Fortnight.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The "English breakfast" is threatened with dire disaster. London housewives are preparing to boycott the toothsome "rasher" because of the continued high prices ruling for bacon.

They plan to refuse to buy bacon for a fortnight, beginning to-day. Enormous quantities are likley to remain in the hands of the wholesalers and prices are expected to come down with a rush.

Optimists predict a drop in price of at least 6 cents a pound.

Cost of Living Up in Britain 14 Per Cent

Prices of Foodstuffs Except Tea and Sugar Have Risen at Remarkable Rate.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Striking figures showing the increased cost of living are contained in a voluminous report issued by the British Board of Trade, according to which present prices are the highest in twenty-five years.

Retail prices of food have risen 14 per cent since 1900, while wages have increased only 3 per cent.

Prices of almost all foodstuffs, except tea and sugar, have risen, the greatest increases being in bacon, 32 per cent, and potatoes, 46 per cent.

People have been able to meet the advances only by reducing consumption.

CASTLE TO BE HOME OF TRAMPS OF GERMANY

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—Here is perhaps a bit of news which will be of interest to some of America's "Wandering Willies." A ruined castle at Merlenhausen, Saxony, is about to be restored by the local authorities, who will use it as a free rest house and night shelter for tramps from all parts of Germany.

Mail-Wooed Bride On Journey to Coast

Millionaire Ranchman Is Given Fine Recommendation by Pastors of His Neighbor.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Theresa Patterson, a handsome widow, aged 30, of Allentown, Pa., is nearing Los Molinas to-day, a journey of 3,000 miles across the continent, to become the bride of Charles H. Smart, a wealthy rancher, after a romantic courtship by mail.

Clergymen in Los Molinas and Allentown gave each a clean bill, the former stating that while Smart is not a millionaire, he is worth nearly that sum and would make a home happy for any woman of his choice.

The marriage is to take place immediately upon Mrs. Patterson's arrival.

5-Cent Fraud in Ice; 5 Days on Rockpile

Portland Dealer Is Sentenced for Cheating Customer in 25-Cent Transaction.

PORTLAND, OREG., Aug. 23.—Five days at the rockpile for a 5-cent fraud in the sale of a piece of ice was the sentence imposed by Municipal Judge Stevenson upon Thomas Barnes, proprietor of the National Ice and Coal Company.

Barnes delivered a 40-pound piece of ice worth 20 cents, saying it weighed 50 pounds and charging 25 cents.

RUSS SERFS JOLLY, BUT LAZY, SAYS VASSAR GIRL

Special Cable to The American.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 23.—Miss Texter, a graduate of Vassar College, who has been making a tour of Saratoff and Simbirsk, typical agricultural provinces of Russia, to study the land question, has been telling the Russian newspapers the peasants impress her most by their good temper and dislike for work.

For summer complaints

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is best. It will keep your stomach and bowels in fine condition to do all the work called for, thus avoiding or relieving cramps, dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, malaria and stomach troubles.

The genuine Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY, by druggists, grocers and dealers. Should our friends for any reason be unable to secure it in their locality, we will have it shipped to them from their nearest dealer, express prepaid (cash to accompany order) at the following prices:—

4 Large Bottles, $4.30.
6 Large Bottles, $5.90.
12 Large Bottles, $11.00.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey should be in every home and we make the above announcement so that you may become familiar with a source of supply.

Remit by express order, postoffice order, or certified check to

The Duffy Malt Whiskey Company,
98 White St., Rochester, N. Y.

ABSOLUTELY PURE & UNADULTERATED TRADE MARK

I Cannot Possibly

Impress upon your minds (through the newspapers) the importance of calling to see me when your teeth need attention. Give me a trial and learn for yourself how fair and honest I treat you—how my methods are ABSOLUTELY PAINLESS, and my prices MUCH LOWER than any other Dentist in Atlanta. I can assure you that it will be a pleasure to you to recommend me to your friends after you have once tried me. I employ no students. Each doctor has had from 5 to 18 years' experience and is thoroughly versed in my painless methods.

MY WORK IS GUARANTEED FOR 15 YEARS

They Must Fit $5 A Set

Terms: WELL, DON'T WORRY. THESE ARE ARRANGED TO SUIT.

Best Service for Least Money

They Never Slip or Drop.

SETS OF TEETH	$5.00 UP
GOLD FILLINGS	75c UP
SILVER FILLINGS	50c UP
BRIDGEWORK	$3, $4, $5
GOLD CROWNS	a TOOTH

DR. WHITLAW, Painless Dentist

Largest and Most Thoroughly Equipped Sanitary Office in the South. Phone M. 1298.

73½ WHITEHALL ST.

SOLICITOR'S CLOSING ARGUMENT A MASTERPIECE

DENOUNCES DEFENDANT AS MORAL PERVERT AND LAUGHS ALIBI TO SCORN

Prisoner Likened to Oscar Wilde, Pastor Richeson and Beattie---Charged With Committing Murder to Hide Evidence of His Crime Against Girl.

Continued From Page 2.

nold and Rosser would take off their hats.

"I refer to Daniel Webster and his argument in the Knott case. Time is identical, days, hours, are not visible to any of senses except to the schooled. He who speaks of days, hours and minutes talks at random.' It is better than I could express it. What about this time? In this table here, minutes are moved up and down, contorted and twisted to protect this man. They say he arrived at the factory at 8:25. Frank himself in his first statement said he arrived at 8:30, and poor Jim Conley, lousy, filthy and dirty, said he arrived at 8:40, carrying a raincoat, and they tried to make it appear he didn't have one. If the truth is ever known, he tried to borrow that raincoat of Ursenbach's to create the same impression.

"Mattie Smith at 9:20 (quoting from the table), and Frank and Mattie Smith both say 9:30. He called Schiff at 10 o'clock (reading again), and yet this man with all his mathematical precision and accuracy at figures, said he was at Montag's at 10 o'clock. They say he arrived back at 11 o'clock, but in his first statement he said it was 11:05. At 12:12 they say Mary Phagan arrived at the factory.

"Oh my, they have to do it. Like the rabbit in Uncle Remus, they're 'just 'bleeged to do it.' Move the minutes up or back, for God's sake, or we are lost!

"But to crown it all! In the table which is now turned to the wall you have Lemmie Quinn arriving not on the minute, but, to suit your purpose, at from 12:20 to 12:22. That evidence conflicts with the statements of Miss Freeman and the other young woman, who put him there before 12 o'clock."

Arnold—Your honor, I must interrupt. No such evidence was ever brought out. Those young women testified that they left the factory at 11:45 and that they saw Lemmie Quinn at the Busy Bee Cafe considerably after. Mr. Dorsey says they saw him at the factory before 12 o'clock.

orsey—No, your honor, I didn't say any such thing. They didn't see him there, and I don't think anyone else did.

The crowd laughed.

Arnold—Your honor, have we got to take this whole crowd into this case?

Judge Roan—Gentlemen, there must be order or I will clear the courtroom.

Dorsey—Find the records. They will show I am right. I have got Lemmie Quinn's affidavit. I am just arguing this case on the evidence.

"Jim Conley is a liar, is he? He said Quinn was there and that he was there before Mary Phagan came. Frank had a mighty hard time remembering whether Quinn was there. When Quinn saw him at the police station and said he had been there, Frank said he would have to see his lawyers before deciding whether or not to make it public.

"Is Jim Conley telling the truth or telling a lie? You can't go hot and cold on him. Why was it Frank wanted to consult his lawyers?"

Arnold—I will find the record.

Dorsey—Yes, you can find it. You can find where Quinn swore half a dozen ways. He was the most anxious witness I ever saw on a stand, except for old man Holloway. He would tell that he was there if Frank said tell it. He would keep quiet if Frank said no.

"Oh, gentlemen, let me read you what a great lawyer said on this sort of evidence. I read the words of Judge Lochrane:

"'I do not take the mere words of witnesses. I take their acts.'

"And while I am on this subject I want to read you another opinion:

"'Evidence given by a witness has inherent strength which a jury can not disregard. But a statement has none.'"

Arnold: "Now, your honor, I have found the records and it bears out just what I said."

Arnold read from the testimony of Miss Corinthia Hall that she and Mrs. Freeman went to the pencil factory at 11:35 and left there at 11:45.

Arnold: "Mr. Dorsey asked her the question, 'You saw Lemmie Quinn at 5 minutes to 12 o'clock?' Answer: 'I don't remember what time it was. He told us he had been up to the factory and saw Frank. He said he was going to the matinee.'

"Lemmie Quinn swore several times he was at the factory at 12:20." Arnold continued, "and here it is that he said that he was in a pool parlor at 12:30, just after leaving the factory."

Judge Roan: "Mr. Dorsey, have you anything in contradiction to that?"

Dorsey: "Yes, I have plenty; that doesn't scare anybody."

Arnold: "I just want to call attention to the glaring errors. The little ones I don't care anything about. I won't interrupt him except on glaring misstatements. Life is too short."

Dorsey: "Yes, you will. You will interrupt me every time I am incorrect. You are too shrewd, too anxious to let anything go by. Don't tell this jury you are going to let me say things that are incorrect.

"Here is your table turned to the wall, having the time of Lemmie Quinn's arrival at 12:20. I have an affidavit here of this pet foreman of the metal department. He said he got there at from 12 to 12:20. Those girls went out of the factory at 11:45 o'clock. They walked up a block and down a block to the Busy Bee Cafe. There they saw Quinn.

"In the name of goodness, if Frank, according to his own statement, could leave the factory at 11:10 o'clock and get home at 1:20, couldn't these girls walk up a block and down a block and see Quinn in fifteen minutes?

"I know it hurts, but this table here which puts Lemmie Quinn at the factory from 12:20 to 12:22 is a fraud on its face. There is no greater farce in this case than their straining at this particular point, with the exception of Billy Owens' pantomime. And, oh, what a farce that was!

"Gentlemen of the jury, you need not try to consider their attempts to be accurate about the time Quinn says he was there, for Lemmie says himself he could not be positive. He says he thinks he got there some time between 12:20 and 12:30.

Mentions Girl Who Would Die for Frank.

"Ah, gentlemen of the jury, whenever a man gets to swearing too definite and too specifically about time, then the words of our friend Webster, which I quoted to you, are right—'He is not to be relied upon.'

"And can you truly consider the words of a man whom your reason tells you is straining to set the exact time?

"But let's pass on from this. I will not take the time to read you everything that Lemmie says he did. Let's pass on to the perjury charge which Arnold has so flippantly made. You saw these witnesses upon the stand. You heard their words. You noticed their manner, their attitude and their interest.

"Why, one of these ladies from the factory wanted to die for this man Frank."

A titter of laughter ran around the room, and deputies were forced to rap for order.

"When did you ever know of an employee being so enamoured of her employer that she was willing to die for him, if their friendship was purely platonic? I know enough about human nature—I know enough of the passions which surge in the breast of mortal man—to know that this poor woman's anxiety to put her neck into the noose to save him were born of something besides platonic love.

"When you see a woman so passionately devoted to her employer—so anxious to die for him—you may know and you can gamble on it that there is something stronger there than platonic love. It must be a passion born of something beyond the relation which should exist between a married man—an employer—and his woman employee.

"Ah, gentlemen of the jury, we could have got witness after witness who would have gone upon the stand and sworn things about this man. There were people who would have perjured themselves. There were witnesses who came upon the stand for the deefndant who on the face of their testimony perjured themselves.

"Take this little Bauer boy. Remember his testimony before he took that automobile ride with Montag to the office of Arnold & Arnold. Before dinner he could remember each detail, but after dinner, after he had taken that ride with old Sig Montag, he had a lapse of memory. Old man Sig must have told this little boy about the Hard Shell preacher down in South Georgia who h... his congregation pray for rain. They prayed and prayed, and after a while, like old Sam Jones would have said, the Lord sent a trash mover, a gully washer.

Boy Must Have Overdone It."

"It rained and it rained until they had more water than they knew what to do with. Then the old hardshell preacher said: 'Brethren, it looks like we have a leetle overdone it.' So Montag must have whispered into Bauer's ear, 'You have a leetle overdone it.'

"And, after dinner, this little boy didn't know anything. But was that all? Why, gentlemen of the jury, before dinner that boy even remembered where his watch lay.

"Do you believe that? Talk about perjury! Willful foolishness, because an honest jury knows that it was not true. They brought in that machinist Lee. He was willing to swear to anything and there was not a man in the sound of his voice that didn't know he was telling an untruth. He wrote and signed a statement about Duffy's injuries. I brought it here and it was written in typewriting and didn't even have his name on it.

"They thought we could not find Duffy and thought you didn't have sense enough to know the first thing you do in a case like that is to wrap something around it to stop the loss of blood.

"I have never seen a case yet where women were so suborned as in this. Take this woman Fleming, his stenographer. They put her up and she swore Frank had a general good character. She only swore to what he had done in her presence when they cross-examined her. We don't contend Frank tried to seduce every girl in the factorwy. But he did pick them out. He picked out Mary Phagan and was called.

"Gentlemen, he got the wrong girl and he was called. And this stenographer said she only knew what he did to her. She testified that Frank's business Saturday morning was to make out the financial sheet. Mr. Arnold said immediately he didn't have time and she jumped at it like a duck at a June bug. Mr. Arnold was so nervous he would not let me finish the cross-examination, and interpolated that remark to guide her.

"It was unfair and not according to law and practice. But he got away with it. And then she turned right around and in the next breath said that she had never said Frank was working on the financial sheet Saturday morning.

"Oh, gentlemen, can you let a poor little girl go to her death and set her murderer free on such evidence as this? If you do, it is time to stop going through the process of summoning a jury.

"Perjury! When did old man Starnes and Pat Campbell stoop to that. And suspicions! Why didn't we get old man Lee and Gantt instead of Frank? Why didn't we get Conley? We tried it, but there was absolutely no case against either. But there is a perfect case against this man. But, oh, you cried 'Perjury.' But it is not worth fifteen cents until you put your fingers on something specific.

"And here, gentlemen, right before your very eyes, in black and white, the testimony ofthis woman, Fleming, shows that they perjured her.

"Do you tell me when that factory closes on Saturday afternoons that this man with the handsome wife that he possesses, this college graduate, who likes to read and play cards, who likes to see baseball games, would spend his time there, using the data that Schiff prepared on Saturday afternoons when he could do it Saturday morning? No, sir. Miss Fleming was right. She didn't stay there to work often on Saturday afternoons."

The jury was allowed to retire for a few minutes. When they returned, Dorsey resumed his argument.

"Now, gentlemen, I submit that this man made that lnance sheet Saturday morning. I am not going to fatigue you with my reasons. It is unnecessary. If he did make that sheet on Saturday afternoon, he did it thinking of an alibi. But don't tell me that because he might have done this on Saturday afternoon with a penmanship that showed no nervousness proves an alibi.

"If he could go home into the bosom of his family after such an atrocious crime, he could have made that sheet. But he wouldn't have done it if Schiff had not gotten up the data. He had done it fifty-two times a year for five or six years. If he would do additional work on that Saturday afternoon, it could only have been with a sinister purpose.

Witness Afraid Even to Identify Handwriting.

"In speaking of perjury, his mother said anybody ought to identify his handwriting."

Dorsey held up the photograph of the sample of handwriting Frank wrote for the police.

"Yet the man they put up to identify his handwriting was so afraid he might do Frank an injury that he wouldn't venture a guess. Grant that he did go home to his wife and those old people—his parents-in-law—and maintain a stoical countenance. Grant that he did make that sheet, which he could make up with his eyes shut. Grant that he did unlock the safe, a thing that he had done every day for years.

"But when he went to run the elevator; when he went to nail up that back door; he wavered; he paled when he talked to the police, and trembled on Darley's knee as he rode to the police station.

"He could sit in the hall and read a joke about a baseball umpire, but the frivolity annoyed the visitors at his home. It was the same kind of frivolity Henry Clay Beattie displayed when he stood beside the automobile that was stained with the blood of his wife. His joke was uttered only in annoyance; it jarred.

"But whether or not he made up that financial sheet, while waiting for old Jim to come and burn the body, one thing I grant he did. Don't forget the envelope; don't forget the way the letter was quoted, that letter he wrote to his uncle in Brooklyn, that letter that begins: 'I trust that this finds you and dear Tante well.' He had no wealthy relations in Brooklyn! That old millionaire uncle was mighty near there when Frank told old Jim Conley: 'Why should I hand? I have wealthy relatives in Brooklyn!'

Dorsey finished reading the letter and then said:

"Here is a sentence pregnant with significance. It bears the earmarks of a guilty conscience. 'He wasn't trembling when he wrote. He is capable and smart, but here is a sentence that is a revelation. Here is a document I concede was written after little Mary Phagan, who died for virtue's sake, was lying mutilated in that dark cold basement."

At this juncture Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan, began to cry.

Dorsey read from the letter:

"'It is too short a time since you left for anything startling to have developed down here.'

"'Startling' and 'too short a time.' Those are the words that incriminate. That little sentence itself shows that the crime was committed in an incredibly short time.

"Tell me, honest men, courageous men of Georgia, that this phrase penned to his uncle that afternoon did not come from a stricken conscience. 'Too short a time since you left for anything to develop down here.'

"What do you think of that, honest men? Then notice what he writes about the thin, gray line of veterans facing the chilly weather, as if that old millionaire uncle of his traveling around Germany for his health, as if he cared for these old heroes in gray! Ample and reliable authority says that over-expression is an indication of guilt. Tell me that this old man, who was just preparing to sail for Europe, cared for these old heroes in gray—this wealthy old man who wanted to see the financial sheet. 'Too short a time'—yes, he said it was too short a time for anything to develop down here. But, gentlemen of the jury, there was something startling to develop, and it happened within the space of 30 minutes. There is nothing new in the factory to report, but there was something new in the cellar. There was something to report, and the time wasn't too short for it to happen.

"You tell me that letter was written in the morning? Do you believe it? Why, they haven't even tried to say that. I tell you that that letter shows on its face that something startling had happened, and I tell you that that rich uncle did not care the snap of his finger about the thin, gray line of veterans.

"Ah, yes, he had wealthy relatives in Brooklyn. That's what old Jim Conley said he told him. And his people lived in Brooklyn, and old Jim never would have known that if Frank had not told him. And they had at least $20,000 in cool cash in the bank; and he had a brother-in-law employing two or three people, at least, and we don't know how many more. And if his rich uncle was not in Brooklyn, he was near there.

"All right, let's go a step farther. On April 28 he wired Adolph Montag at the Imperial Hotel in New York: 'You may have read in Atlanta papers of factory girl found dead Sunday morning in cellar of pencil factory.'

"Yes, gentlemen of the jury, in the cellar of the pencil factory. There's where he placed her, and that is where he expected her to be found. And the thought of it welled up in his mind that Monday morning, April 28, before he had been arrested, and he wired Montag forestalling what he knew would certainly and surely happen unless the Atlanta detectives were corrupt and would suppress it.

Compliments Detectives.

"But, be it said to your credit, Starnes; to your credit, Campbell, and you, too, Rosser and Black, that you had the manhood and the courage to do your duty and roll the charge up to this man, protected as he was by wealth and influence.

"And notice what else he said in this telegram. Notice the credit he gives to the police: 'The police will eventually solve it.' And be it said to their credit of the Atlanta police department, they did solve it. 'Assure my uncle I am all right in case he asks. Our company has case well in hand.' Maybe he did think when he got that fellow Scott that his company had it well in hand.

"I tell you there is an honest man—this fellow Scott. If there was a slush fund in this case—and witnesses have said there was no such fund—this man Scott could have gotten it. Not at first, maybe, but he could have gotten it later on. But Scott knew his duty, and he has done it. No wonder Frank could telegraph that his company had the case well in hand, for Scott's first words could not have suited him better had he wished for them. They were, 'The Pinkerton's always work arm and arm with the police.' This suited Frank well. It was just what he wanted. He wanted to know what the police thought he wanted to know what they were going to do, and this worked well, until the chain began to tighten.

"And Haas—and he is nobody's fool—when he sa wthe trend of the case, he opened the negotiations; he gave Scott the opportunity by saying, 'Now let us have what you get first.'

"But let us pass on from that. You ell me that letter and that telegram are not significant? That the work pp this financial sheet is no significant? That Schiff's testimony as to the work on that financial sheet is not significant?

"Frank himself was not satisfied. He is as smart as his lawyers, too.

"He realized that he would have to go out and beyond the evidence, because he knew it was all bunk; and he tried to show you that he did write the financial sheet. Frank did write that letter Saturday afternoon, and he did write that telegram Monday; but he did not do any work on the financial sheet after Saturday at noon. I ask you twelve men if those documents and letters don't bear the impress of murder?

"And they still cry perjury. I just thought of another case, when that man could not identify Frank's handwriting that his own mother said was his. That was perjury, and there was perjury in the testimony of Bower and Lee. Mrs. Carson said she had worked there three years, and Arnold asked her a question that he would not ask a younger woman. He asked her about seeing blood around the toilet and in the dressing rooms. She said she saw it there very often. Then she talked about Conley being on the fourth floor that Monday. I pinned her down to say that Frank was there at the same time. It was then that Frank leaned over and said, 'Be a good boy, Jim,' and Jim, remembering his wealthy relatives in Brooklyn, and his promises of money, said, 'Yes, sir, boss; I will.'

"Surely the officers could not suborn Conley at that time. And she says she never saw the blood by the water cooler; she said she didn't look at it because she didn't like to look at things like that. But another lady on the stand says she did go back and look at it; that she was with her.

"But back again to Conley. If he had committed that crime and had not had Leo M. Frank and his promises back of him, would he have gone back to that factory every day and remained there until Thursday? They said they were going to put up all the girls on the fourth floor. But they didn't do it until we called their four-flush and put up witnesses who corroborated their witness, Miss Jackson, about the misconduct of this man.

"Miss Small, also on the fourth floor, corroborated Conley. She said she saw him on the fourth floor Monday. Now, why did Frank go to the fourth floor so often Monday and Tuesday? Because he knew Conley was up there, and he wanted to be sure the negro was not talking. Conley told Miss Carson that Frank was as innocent as an angel in heaven. We said he was merely doing what he had promised to do—protect his employer. Mr. Rosser characterized the statement as a dirty suggestion. It was, and I accept it but it is true, and you men would not sit here and see that man hang for a crime Leo M. Frank committed.

"When Conley went up to the second floor in response to Frank's signal, Frank said, 'Did you see anything?' and he said, 'I saw two girls come up, but there ain't but one of them come down.' And then Frank knew that he would have to take this negro into his confidence.

Shaking his finger at Frank, Dorsey continued:

"And you told old Jim Conley to protect you! And he tried to do it. It is infamous to try to have Jim Conley hanged for a crime that Leo Frank did. Gentlemen, I haven't got to the State's case yet; I am just cutting away some of the underbrush this defense has planted in this forest of oaks. They have played the detectives. The only thing to the discredit of the police department is that it allowed itself to be intimidated by the influence of this man and his friends and his big lawyers.

Didn't Have Courage To Put Frank in Cell.

"When they took him down there guilty of this red-handed murder they didn't put him in a cell like they did Newt Lee and Jim Conley. It took time for them to get their courage up to the point of locking him up as he should have been. Old John Black—Mr. Rosser likes to brag about what he did to him—but he didn't make so much off of him after all. Black's methods are somewhat like Mr. Rosser's. If Black had had Frank in the position that Mr. Rosser had Jim Conley, this whole trial might have been obviated with a confession."

Dorsey turned and pointed at Frank.

"You didn't get counsel a moment too soon. You called for Darley and you called for Harris; you called for Rosser and Arnold, and it took them all to bolster up your nerve. Gentlemen of the jury, you know I am telling you the truth. The only thing against the police is that this man, who had just snuffed out the life of this little girl, was given too much consideration. His able counsel and the glamour of wealth that surrounded him, overawed the police. I had nothing to do with it, but I honor them for the way they went after Minola McKnight.

"I don't know whether they want me to apologize for them or not; but do you think that in protecting the people from such crimes as this the detectives are acting like they are at a tea party?

"Should they have the manners of a dancing master? If you do, you don't know anything about it. Once get an old 'possum dog on the trail, and you can't call him off. So it is with Starnes and Black; they knew Albert McKnight wouldn't have told those young men at the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company that story about his wife unless it were true. They went after Minola. They stuck to the trail. They smoked her out. Minola's friends got a writ of habeas corpus. Do you think if Mr. Haas had come to me with a writ of habeas corpus to release Frank I would have done it? I would have said it was none of my business.

"The next time the police have to use strong methods in an effort to protect the people by going after a red-handed murderer, I won't usurp their authority or the authority of the judges. I haven't anything to do with the police department, or the functions of the judges. I am responsible only for the office of Solicitor General for the term to which I was elected. I honor Mr. Charley Hill; I am as proud that I have succeeded him as I am that I was given this place by a vote of the people. He was honorable and strong; but I tell you gentlemen, no man is my pattern; I follow the dictates of my own conscience."

Tears Come to Dorsey's Eyes.

Mr. Dorsey raised his voice and tears came into his eyes.

"If there is one thing I am proud of during my term of office, it is that I joined hand and glove with the police; and when your influence (turning to the defense) tried to get Jim Conley indicted by the grand jury, I stood out against it. If that is treason, make the most of it. If you don't want me to do it, get somebody else.

"Mr. Hill was a noble man. He had the courage of a Caesar and the eloquence of a Demosthenes. I have wished a hundred times that he was here making the speech to you that I am making.

"He would have stripped the hides off of you (pointing to the defense). Such talk as that doesn't terrify me. It doesn't disturb the serenity of the conscience in everything I have done in the prosecution of this man. Let's get back to the talk on perjury.

"Don't get up here and call everybody a liar without giving the specific instances. Take the evidence of Mrs. Small. She said she saw Frank and Miss Rebecca Carson walking along and that she stopped Frank and had him O. K. a ticket. She said it was Miss Rebecca Carson she was with. She says that Mrs. Carson was not there at all. Mrs. Carson said she was there. Mrs. Small said she saw Conley standing up there by the elevator and that Frank must have seen him—that Frank passed within 4 feet of him. She says that Jim was doing nothing; that he was standing by the elevator with his hand on a truck.

"Mrs. Small also tells us that the elevator shook the entire building. She said he couldn't helped but hear it if the machinery was not running. She said: 'You might not hear it if the machinery was in full operation, if you were not paying attention to it, but if you listened you could hear it.'

"Now here is another thing. Mrs. Carson had already sworn positively that she never went back into the metal room to see that blood. Mrs. Small said that on Wednesday a crowd of them from the fourth floor went down out of pure curiosity to see those spots, and when I asked her who went with her, to and behold the first person she mentioned was Mrs. Carson. She said she was sure she was there; she knew she was there. And when I asked why they went there, and why Mrs. Carson went there particularly, she said 'Curiosity sent us.'

Somebody Has Lied, Dorsey Asserts.

"Now, gentlemen of the jury, somebody, and I put it up to you, has lied. If this case is founded on perjury, it has been boiled until the pot is black.

"The truth is, there has not been a single instance where evidence was needed that someone has not come in to bolster it up.

"Now, let's pass on a little bit. I want to discuss briefly the writing of these letters found beside the body of the girl. If these letters were not the order of an overruling Providence, I would agree that they were the silliest things I ever heard of. But, gentlemen of the jury, these notes bear an intrinsic knowledge of this crime.

"This man Frank, by the language of these notes, in attempting to fix the guilt upon another, has indelibly fixed it upon himself."

The Solicitor repeated this statement.

"The pad, the paper the notes were written upon; the fact that there was a note fixed the guilt upon him. Tell me that a negro who, after having killed a white girl, ravished and outraged her, would have taken the time to have written these notes? And even if he did write them, would he have written them upon a scratch pad which is found only in an office?

"You tell me that a man like Jim Conley would have ravished this girl with the knowledge that Frank was in the house? You tell me that this Jim Conley, even though he has been as drunk as a sot could be, would have taken the time to write these notes?

"I tell you, gentlemen of the jury, it can not be true.

"You say that the fact those notes were written was foolish. It was foolish, but it was a mistake. Murder is a mistake. What man ever committed murder who did not make a mistake? And what man making the greatest mistake in the world would not make a lesser mistake in trying to cover up? Those notes were the lesser mistake.

"Scott said that when Leo M. Frank talked to him about the girl coming to the factory and asking him about the metal that he said, 'I don't know.' And now he says that he told her, 'No.' Arnold recognized the damage in the statement 'I don't know' getting in.

"Language of Notes Clears Conley."

"Leo Frank said in his statement again and again 'chatting' and 'chat.' Conley said that when Frank told him he wanted to watch for him that Frank said he wanted to have a 'chat.' Jim Conley said here time and again, 'I have done it,' but in the notes found near the body he said, 'did it.' Do you tell me that negro would have written the word 'did' unless it was dictated to him?

"Do you tell me that negro would have taken the time to carry that girl away back there and hide her body if he had knocked her down the hole, and then stopped to write those notes?

"No," shouted Dorsey, turning to Frank, "that child was murdered on the second floor and you wanted to get her into the cellar, just like you found her in the cellar, as you said in that telegram to Montag.

"Conley said once in his statement that when he met a man on the street that he knew, the man looked at him he though he though 'I done it.' Conley used that expression at least twenty times. He said 'I done it' when he closed the door, and in several other places I can't find just now. He didn't use the word 'did' one time.

"In the first note, the expression 'I went to make water and that long tall black negro pushed me down the hole.' You knew that toilet was back there on the second floor (addressing Frank), and you knew that was where that little girl met her death. And you knew that metal room was right back there, too.

"You tell me that negro would have written those words. Where was it she was going to make water on the first floor? Yet you tell me there is nothing in circumstantial evidence when these things creep in,

"When you wrote this note (turning to Frank), you said yourself that you had the original of the note before you, and you said yourself that you knew Conley could write because he had written you time and time again, trying to borrow money, and yet you sat there with the original of that note before you and Conley's own handwriting, the handwriting you had seen often enough to be familiar with it, and you didn't tell those officers that Conley wrote the notes.

"'I don't want you to convict this man unless you believe him guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, but I don't want you to let your verdict be governed by the opinion of a crank, but by the facts.

"Arnold and Rosser would say frequently, 'Are you going to convict this man on that, on this?'—selecting some little isolated point.

Chain Strong Enough To Hang Anybody.

"'Well, I don't want you to, but on all the facts—the chain that is unbroken and not by isolated instances, and I say that when you take them all together you have a cable that ought to hang anybody.

"I don't ask that he be convicted on this isolated instance or that, but all bound together make a cable that is as strong as is possible for the ingenuity of man to make.

"I don't know whether the statement of Frank's will rank along with that statement of the celebrated pervert Oscar Wilde, or not. He is brilliant. If you take his statement and just follow it you never would convict him. You never would convict anyone that way. But listen to this: 'I sat in my office counting over the money that had been left over.'" Dorsey read from Frank's statement.

"He wasn't talking about the petty cash," Dorsey continued. "He was talking about the money that had been left over from the payroll of $1,100. We don't know to this day how much that was. We don't know how big a roll it could have made, though Jim Conley said he saw a roll of $200.

"And he was trying to get old Jim to go down into the basement and burn the body of that little girl. Just as sure as the smoke curled from that stack toward the heavens, old Jim would have been there without a shadow of a defense. Frank would have been there with the detectives. Jim would have hanged for a crime that this man committed in his lust.

"But old Jim was too wise. He wrote the notes, but, drunk or sober, he wouldn't be entrapped like that. I do not doubt that when Frank handed him that roll of money it was like the kiss of Judas Iscariot when he kissed the Saviour, and then betrayed Him for 30 pieces of silver.

"I am going to show you that this man had long planned not murder, but to get this little girl to yield to his lust. Let me do it now.

"Back yonder in March this little Turner boy saw him making advances to Mary Phagan. Did that innocent little boy from the country lie? This little girl that came here from the Home of the Good Shepherd, she heard Frank speak to Mary Phagan and put his hands on her. She may have lost her virtue, but she is nothing but a child. Did she lie, this little girl?

Quotes From Same Poem as Rosser.

"Then there is Gantt. He quit the factory rather than make good a dollar that was charged he was short. Did he lie about Frank's inquiring of the little girl? Yesterday Mr. Rosser quoted from a poem of Bobbie Burns the line was, 'Tis human to step aside.' I want to quote a line from that same poem, 'There is no telling what a man will do when he has the lassie.'

"When convenience is snug, I tell you gentlemen, there is no telling what a pervert will do when goaded by his passion. You tell me this brilliant young man, who looked over that payroll 52 times a year, saw the name of Mary Phagan every time, then when she was dead had to get his books to find out her name? He coveted that little girl way back in March. I have no doubt those little girls swore the truth when they said they saw him making advances. I would not be surprised if he did not hang around and try to get her to yield. I would not be surprised if he didn't get Gantt out of the way because he was an obstacle to his scheme.

"He knew the day before she was probably coming. He went and told old Jim Conley, who had watched for you so many Saturday afternoons while you and Schiff were making up that finance sheet. When Helen Ferguson came and asked for Mary Phagan's money, I wouldn't be surprised if he did not refuse to give it to her because he had already told old Jim to come and watch.

"Frank's plans were fixed. Ah, gentlemen, then Saturday comes, and it is a reasonable tale that old Jim tells. He says, 'I done it just like this.' He doesn't say, 'I did.' He says he 'done it' just as the brilliant factory superintendent told him to. This thing passion works in a terrible way. Good people don't know how the mind of a libertine works. They don't know of the planning, plotting and waiting. Way back in March Frank had his eyes upon her. He was infatuated with her and did not have the will power to resist.

"You can twist and wabble all you want (Dorsey turned to Frank and shook his finger at him), but you told Detective Scott that you did not know her. Notwithstanding what you have said here, notwithstanding what your witnesses have said, you knew her.

"And tell me, gentlemen of the jury, has this little Ferguson girl lied? Has she been suborned by Starnes? Has she come here and deliberately perjured herself? I tell you that is a charge that can not stand. His refusal to give Helen Ferguson Mary Phagan's envelope is an indication that he was plotting. And old Jim Conley's tale will stand, for Frank himself corroborates Conley in many things.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT OF VITAL IMPORTANCE TO PIANO BUYERS

THE WESTER MUSIC CO., 64 Peachtree Street, Desire to Announce the Opening of Their "Once-a-Year" Clearance at 8:30 Monday, August 25.

PIANOS OF HIGH GRADE AND ACKNOWLEDGED REPUTATION

Our Entire Stock Sacrificed—Everything Goes—Nothing Reserved—Every Person Interested in the Purchase of an Instrument Should Read Carefully, As It Concerns Them Most.

PROMPT ACTION WILL BRING REWARD

This Is Our Annual Clearance Sale of Fine Pianos—Your Opportunity to Save From $100 to $250 in Your Piano Purchase. Terms Are Made as Pleasing as the Prices. Opening Evenings.

In announcing this gigantic clearance sale of fine pianos, uprights, grands, player pianos and organs, we wish to take the piano buying public into our confidence, making a plain statement of facts, telling our good reason for sacrificing our entire stock. All thoughtful people realize the fact that in conducting a business the magnitude of ours, that a great number of discontinued styles, sample pianos, rental pianos, etc., will accumulate during the year, besides countless numbers of good used pianos taken in exchange for grands and players. They are in first-class condition, and must be disposed of to make room for large shipments of fall goods already beginning to arrive. In order to open the fall season with an entire new stock, we have decided to include in this sale every instrument in our building, grands, uprights and players, including such well-known makes as A. B. Chase, Chickering & Sons, Knabe Brothers, Ivers & Pond, Kurtzmann, Kranich & Bach, Bush & Gerts, Hoffman and others, in players, A. B. Chase Artistano (grands and uprights), Emerson Angelus, Kurtzmann Angelus, The Angelus, The Auto de Luxe, The Autopiano, Koehler and Newton.

Such an array of high-grade instruments, numbering between 350 and 400, has never been offered before to the good people of Georgia. Remember, nothing is reserved, and in order to move this stock in a limited space of time we have reduced the price in many cases from one-third to one-half the original price. All these points taken into consideration makes it possible for any family to have an instrument in their home, as our low prices and easy terms place them within reach of all. Your credit is good at The Wester Music Company. If you do not care to pay cash we can arrange terms to suit your convenience.

One Price; Plain Figures.

Every piano will bear two tags, one will be our regular one price tag, the other the clearance sale tag. Thus you may see at a glance just what can be saved on your purchase. Look for the blue tag.

Here are three sample pianos. Large size mahogany cases, fully guaranteed. Instruments must be seen to be appreciated. Regular price $275, your choice $127.

Three standard grade upright cabinet grands, mahogany, oak or walnut; fully guaranteed. Regular price $300, your choice of three different styles and makes $187.

Five standard makes. Five large size uprights, mahogany or oak cases, new styles, guaranteed for ten years, regular price $350, your choice $236; $10 cash and $6 per month.

Five large size cabinet grand upright sample pianos, mahogany or dark oak cases, fully guaranteed, regular price $375. These are going at $246; $10 cash and $7 per month. They are new.

Six large size uprights; your choice oak or mahogany case; guaranteed for ten years; three different styles and makes; regular price $375. They are standard makes. Your choice for $266. Easy terms.

Five large size cabinet grand mahogany cases; three different styles and makes; guaranteed for ten years; regular price $400, your choice $276; $13 cash and $7 per month. They are new.

Ten large size uprights, mahogany cases, different styles and makes, guaranteed for ten years; regular price $450, sale price $292. Easy payments can be arranged.

Four large size, mahogany cases, best makes; fully guaranteed; regular price $500; slightly shop-worn, but absolutely perfect. They will be taken quickly at $295.

Six large size upright cabinet grands, high grade mahogany and walnut cases, regular price $550 your choice $308, $312, $318. Fully guaranteed.

Three high grade grand pianos, mahogany cases, regular price $700, $750 and $800; your choice for $468, $512 and $642. Guaranteed for ten years. They are new. One Steinway slightly used, good as new. Beautiful mahogany case, regular price $1,150. Must be seen to be appreciated. Will be offered at our regular discount. If you need a grand piano, don't miss this opportunity.

Nine player pianos, mahogany cases, some of them slightly shopworn, but in first-class condition. Some are new. They are guaranteed for five years. The best makes are included. Regular prices $550, $600, $650, $700, $750 and $800. All 88-note and new styles. Your choice, $418, $368, $396, $436, $487, $512. You must see the pianos to appreciate the values.

One large size mahogany case player piano, one of the best makes, regular price $850, slightly used. A big bargain for $256.

Fifty slightly used upright pianos. Oak, walnut, mahogany and ebony cases. Included in this lot will be found Vose & Sons, Hallet & Davis, Kranich & Bach, Painter & Ewing, Packard Conway, Bush & Gerts; Knabe Bros.; Sterling, Whitney, Cooper, Hoffman and others. Many of them are as good as new. They are all in splendid condition. Former prices ranging from $350 to $550. Your choice while they last from $75 to $268. They are guaranteed and you can make no mistake in selecting any one of them. Any second-hand piano that we sell will be taken back within one year and apply the price as part payment for a new piano.

Second-hand Organs.

Twenty-seven organs, including Carpenter, Estey, Wilcox & White, Packard, Chicago Cottage, Kimball, Mason & Hamlin and others. Former prices from $65 to $125. Your choice for $12, $17, $21, $26, $28, $34, $37, $42. All in good order and guaranteed.

Every instrument can be found on our floors and our personal guarantee goes with each instrument. Remember that we can arrange easy payments, if you don't care to pay cash. Out of town orders given special attention.

Any purchaser living nearer Macon than Atlanta will find the same bargains at our store, No. 157 Cotton avenue, Macon, Ga.

Store will be open evenings.

THE WESTER MUSIC COMPANY,
64 Peachtree Street, Atlanta, Ga.
157 Cotton Avenue, Macon, Ga.

THAW BASES HOPES OF ULTIMATE FREEDOM ON ENDLESS LEGAL TANGLE

POEM THAW WROTE IN MATTEAWAN

MATTEAWAN, N. Y., Aug. 23.—The following verses were written by Harry Kendall Thaw in his room at Matteawn and found in the waste-paper basket beside his reading table last December:

"There are lights aflame on Broadway,
There are hopes and lives undone;
There are debts of sin no man can pay,
And Broadway hates the sun.

"There are vain regrets on Broadway,
There are secret sighs and tears;
For one must smile as well as pray,
And the weakling meets with jeers."

Fugitive From Matteawan, Backed by Family's Millions, Will Utilize Every Technicality to Prevent Deportation From Dominion of Canada.

SHERBROOKE, QUEBEC, Aug. 23. With Harry Thaw's case now in the courts of Canada, the prediction made that it would be months—years, perhaps eternity—before the slayer of Stanford White is again in the jurisdiction of New York State is strengthened.

His family, wealthy and powerful, has rushed to his defense. He has unlimited resources to fight the legal battle against his deportation from Canadian soil. When the first writ of habeas corpus was granted, it assured him the right to appeal his cause to the highest Canadian court.

It is believed that this litigation can be made to last over years. It will be impossible to deny him bail in the Dominion, for he is a lunatic only in New York State. His status now is that he is simply considered an undesirable by Canadian immigration authorities, who, it is thought, may override the courts and deport him.

Should the courts of Canada finally rule against him, his case might be taken up from Washington. Even then if he were finally deported, should he be sent to any other State than New York, he could fight extradition there, and there are many eminent lawyers who believe that it is absolutely impossible to bring him back into New York then.

Probably Considered These Facts.

All these things probably had been considered when Thaw made his daring escape from Matteawan Asylum, when he dashed across the Connecticut border, then through the State into New Hampshire and from New Hampshire into the Dominion of Canada.

Thaw knows well the law's delay. He remembers his long period in the Tombs before he was first brought to trial for the slaying of White. He remembers the long fight for life and liberty then. He remembers the enforced wait after the first mistrial. He remembers the weary days of his second hearing.

He remembers the slow progress of his cause during his legal efforts to get his release from Matteawan Knowing these things and recognizing that there was hardly a bare possibility that bail would be denied him, he turned toward Canada rather than seek safety at sea, as his pursuers thought he surely would do.

It was probably due to this realization that he accepted his arrest at Coaticook, Quebec, coolly and that he awaits the issue of his habeas corpus proceedings just as coolly now.

Secures Talented Lawyers.

He is represented in his application for habeas corpus proceedings by W. L. Shurtleff and Colonel H. R. Fraser, one of the most talented lawyers of Eastern Canada. He is thoroughly buoyed up in the belief that the Canadian Government will never order his deportation or extradition.

"I have studied every legal phase of my case and have arrived at the belief that I am safe here," said Thaw. "My plans did not alone include my physical escape. I looked into the legal feature to establish my status in any other State than New York and any other country than the United States. I am not a dangerous man. I do not seek vengeance. My wife, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, need not fear me. Nor need anyone else fear me.

"All I want is peaceful and legal liberty. I feel that I am perfectly safe. I have studied law ever since I was admitted to Matteawan, and I believe that I am qualified to speak in this matter.

"Statements to the effect that I only sought liberty to kill are senseless. They are so ridiculous that I won't talk of them. I have the kindest feelings toward the people of Canada, and will retain such feelings, no matter what action the Dominion Government takes, but I hope that they do not deport me. Detention in an insane asylum is a living death. It is enough to make a maniac out of a perfectly sane man."

Refuses to Betray Friends.

Asked for a detailed story of his flight, he refused.

"Yes, I was the man they spotted in Lenox, Mass., said he. "But from that point on I must say nothing. I won't betray my friends."

Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, sister of Thaw, arrived soon after his arrest and immediately sought her brother. Thaw sent word to Roger O'Mara, the Pittsburg (Pa.) private detective, who has been his counsellor since youth, to rush here on the first train.

He said that he wanted to get the fight over with. His first trepidation came with the news that District Attorney Conger, of Dutchess County, New York, and Dr. Kieb, of the Matteawan Institution, would come to cooperate with the United States authorities in an effort to have Thaw deported bask to New York, or extradited.

Plans for the court battle in Thaw's behalf were carefully made by Mr. Shurtleff and Colonel Fraser and hopes to have his release ordered by Judge Globensky and plans to leave immediately for Quebec if he gets out. He intends to sail for France if he gets his freedom, so that he will be sure to be safe. Ultimately he hopes to have his legal freedom established so that he can return to Pittsburg.

Contend Thaw Is Tourist.

Among the grounds upon which the Thaw lawyers put into their plea for their client's liberty is that he is only a tourist passing through Canada, and they point to the case of Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, as a precedent.

They contend that Johnson was under conviction of an infraction of the United States law, whereas Thaw has not broken any law. They contended that Johnson was a fugitive from justice, whereas Thaw is a fugitive from an institution for the insane.

They pointed to Thaw's behavior to uphold the contention that no matter what his condition in the past, he is now sane and rational. The facts that Thaw has not broken any Canadian laws and that no indictment exists against him across the border were emphasized. Thaw offered many suggestions to his lawyers and in a way seemed to be their pilot. He looked very solemn and impressive as he gave his opinions of his own case.

"My idea is that speed is the requisite thing," Thaw told them.

News Unnerves Prisoner.

The Canadian Government and the United States Government were both represented by able counsel who resisted Thaw's efforts to gain his liberty on a writ of habeas corpus. They contended that the law governing Thaw's case is very plain and they pointed to precedents.

In fact, it was reported that Acting Superintendent of Immigration Blair in Ottawa had been counseled by the Ministry of Justice that Thaw should be deported at once. When Thaw heard this report he trembled and became pale. He was unnerved by the news and showed it.

The presence in Sherbrooke of the most spectacular and sensational prisoner in the world made a gala occasion. Not one of the Provincial fairs which are being held throughout Eastern Canada at this time could vie with Thaw as an attraction. Great crowds came into Sherbrooke from the surrounding country.

Families gathered about the jail, hoping to get a glimpse of the well-known prisoner if he was taken to the courthouse. Some came a distance of 100 miles to see Thaw. The street on which the jail is located was jammed.

Glad to Please Curious.

This curiosity tickled Thaw immensely. He said he did not want to disappoint anyone who really wanted to see what he looked like.

Mr. Shurtleff was resentful against Justice of the Peace Dupuis, of Coaticook, who held Thaw on the charge of being a fugitive and sent him here for further examination.

"We contend that Justice of the Peace Dupuis acted illegally," declared Shurtleff. "He exceeded his authority. He had no right to hold Thaw."

Colonel Fraser assured Thaw that conspiracy is not an extraditable offense and that he need not feel any great alarm over the fact that a warrant charging Thaw with conspiring to gain his liberty is on its way here from Dutchess County. He did not give such optimistic assurances about deportation, however.

Thaw lost no time in arranging to secure cash. He telegraphed to a banker relative in Pittsburg (where the bulk of the Thaw fortune is invested) to send him money to fight his case.

Thaw faced the habeas corpus hearing coolly and confidently. Before going to court, he ate a hearty breakfast and dressed with minute care, evidently realizing that he would be gazed on by thousands on the short ride from the jail to the courthouse.

Smuggling Claim Advanced.

He had prepared a number of notes to guide his lawyers in their conduct of his case, and was evidently disappointed when they did not seem to give these notes great consideration.

An investigation of the manner in which Thaw came into possession of a railroad ticket for Detroit, Mich., is being made. The Dominion authorities are not satisfied that Thaw bought the ticket himself.

It was learned from an authoritative source that immigration officers who are here plan to arrest Thaw on the ground that he smuggled his way into Canada if he gets his freedom on a habeas corpus writ.

The village of St. Hermenigilde, where Thaw and his companions came into Canada from the United States, is not a port of entry.

Evelyn Thaw, Fearing Death, Breaking Down Under Strain

'How Can He Say He Loves Me When He'd Let Me Starve?'

LATEST photograp of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw posed especially for The Sunday American at her hotel in New York where, it is said, she is near a breakdown rfom fear that her husband will regain his liberty and attempt to do her violence, and a photograph of Harry Kendall Thaw, taken in his cell at Matteawan from which he escaped to aCnada, where he is using every legal means to prevent his deportation to the United States

COPYRIGHT BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

PHOTO BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

'He's a Paranoiac,' She Screams—Describes Her Sacrifice.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is breaking down under the fear that Harry K. Thaw may evade the law and succeed in reaching her. There were visible evidences of the strain under which she has been laboring since he escaped from Matteawan last Sunday when a Sunday American reporter saw her last night in the Hotel Brevoort.

Thaw's declaration from the jail in Sherbrooke that her return to the stage had prompted him to make a dash for liberty and that he loved her more than anything else in life were called to her attention.

"Good God!" she exclaimed "How could that man say he loves me when he would have let me starve in the streets?"

"Do you love him?" she was asked.

"Love him! I love him as much as he loves me," was her derisive reply. "He wanted to keep me down after I had testified and sold my soul for him and I had done everything that a human being could do for a man; and now he makes this maudlin statement about love.

Never Knew Love's Meaning.

"He is a paranoiac, and he doesn't know what love is. He has never known the meaning of it as long as I have known him. As for taking care of me as any man who loved a woman would do, both he and his mother them me out, after I had saved him from the electric chair.

"Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw entered into an agreement with me at the time of the trial to provide me with $12,000 a year on condition that I would consent to an annulment of our marriage. I did consent, and the papers were drawn. Then his mother repudiated it. That was in June, 1912, and I have received no money from them since that time.

"Before that date I had received $70 a week and my rent. I had to dispose of pictures and scrape and save to live, and I finally came to the conclusion that I had something within myself, that I could prove I possessed the gift of making my own living, which is a gift after all.

Breaks Into Tears.

"I thank God that I have that gift or his mother would be jeering at me in the gutter," and Mrs. Thaw broke into tears.

"He wants to spoil my life and my work," she continued, turning to John Reilly, her counsel, who was in the room. "I told you that if I made a success he would want to injure me, and here he has stated that my success was the thing that impelled him to break for his liberty. He wants to injure me and he will bend everything to that end.

"I told you also," she added to her lawyer, "that he would not be free long before he would betray himself through his excessive egotism.

"But there is worse coming if he retains his liberty. Things will begin to happen when he gets his drink. He is going to do something desperate, I know, just as surely as I could foresee the things I have referred to. Wait until he gets drink in him—it is horrible to contemplate!" And Mrs. Thaw again broke down and sobbed.

"Desperate and Dangerous."

"Don't you think that you may be exaggerating because of your overwrought state of mind?" was asked.

"I wish it were so," she replied. "But anyone who thinks Harry Thaw will not be a desperate man when he gets the opportunity to satisfy his appetite for drink, knows nothing of him. I know him. Dr. Flint knows him. Judge Jerome knows him. He will be a desperate and dangerous man.

"This great State ought to be ashamed of itself to allow a paranoiac to make and unmake its institutions. Thaw was permitted liberties that no man in his position had ever before enjoyed. Thaw has not done it, it has been the Thaw money.

"Do you know that when I used to see him in the Tombs he used to be drunk on Scotch whisky? Let the Tombs officials deny it if they dare. I know it and they know it. Harry Thaw told me he could get all the liquor he wanted there."

Mr. Reilly warned his client that she was overtaxing her strength, but she persisted in unloading her mind.

Old Graveyard Must Give Way to Railroad

Milwaukee Line Is Compelled to Move Old Burial Ground Near For Alcohol.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Aug. 23.—Among various other activities the Milwaukee Railroad people have found themselves engaged in rebuilding their line across Iowa is that of moving a cemetery.

In securing a right-of-way near the Des Moines River it purchased an old burial ground, one long since abandoned. Among the bodies the railroad men have removed is one that had been buried seventy-five years. The remarkable state of preservation of clothing and lack of decay of the bones after such a long period has been a source of surprise to the men exhuming the bodies.

U. S. Officer Invents Airship Destroyer

Balloon Equipped With Explosives and Wire Feelers Will Protect War Craft.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Joseph Steinmetz, a retired lieutenant of artillery in the United States army, has just perfected an invention that is likely to interfere greatly with the effectiveness of the aeroplan in naval warfare. Steinmetz is now negotiating with the War Department for the use of his invention. It consists of a captive hydrogen ballon suspended over either an arsenal or battleship. It carries a large quantity of explosives, which would be touched off by any aircraft coming in contact with wires extended from it. The airship would at once be blown up.

Couple Will Re-wed To Gain $1,000,000

Ceremony by Mormon Judge Is Called Unsatisfactory by Administrators of Estate.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—In order to comply with the wishes of the administrators of the $1,000,000 estate of her father, the late Thomas R. Lamb, of Edinburgh, Scotland, Mrs. Anna B. Lamb-Wilson must be married to her husband again.

The husband is E. Douglas Wilson, of this city. He pursued Miss Lamb more the Pennsylvania Rubber Company, of an 10,000 miles across the United States and over the Pacific Ocean before he married her in Honolulu last April. The ceremony was performed by Judge Hernandez, whom Wilson says is a Mormon. This marriage, though legal, did not meet with the approval of the administrators.

Edwin Booth Saves Lillian Russell

Rescuer Is Only Nine and His Playmate at Maine Resort Was Drowning.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug. 23.—Edwin Booth saved Lillian Russell from drowning at South Harpswell when she fell from the wharf. Both are summer visitors.

Edwin is 9 years old, and the son of Charles E. Booth, of Yonkers, N. Y., while Lillian is 13, and the daughter of Charles A. Russell, of Boston. Edwin, her playmate, was fully clad, but he dove into the ocean like a veteran, drawing the girl to safety.

Thieves Warn, Then Rob Rail Station

Telephone Central Office They Had Looted Pay Phone, Then Steal Instrument.

NYACK, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Before carrying away the telephone from the Stony Point station of the West Shore Railroad last night, thieves telephoned to the central office to say that they had robbed the office and telephone coin box. The operator thought some practical joker was at work and paid no attention to the man who called.

This morning it was found that the money drawer at the station had been robbed of 75 cents in cash, and from the telephone box had been taken about $3 in coins. The thieves also took the telephone.

WOMAN POLITICIAN IS MAD.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Countess Elizabeth Emilie Von Wedel, a Frenchwoman and a former "political agent," who was quite a celebrity, has been placed in a German asylum for the insane.

SENT FREE TO MEN

A Most Pleasing Remedy Given to Quickly Restore Lost Vitality.

A Free Trial Treatment Sent by Mail To All Who Write.

Free trial treatments of Enervita, a most pleasing remedy, are being mailed to all men who write to Dr. John S. Howell. So many who had battled for years against the mental and physical suffering of man weakness have written thanking him for the great benefit received, therefore, Dr. Howell has decided to send free trial treatments to all men who write. It is a home treatment, and all who suffer with any form of weakness, resulting from youthful folly, premature loss of strength and memory, weak back, lack of vitality and confidence can now receive this strength-giving treatment at home.

The treatment has a peculiar grateful effect of warmth and seems to act direct to the desired location, promoting strength and development just where it is needed. It is given to relieve the ills and troubles that come from years of misuse of the natural functions, and has met with remarkable success, even in cases approaching advanced age. A request to John S. Howell, M. D., Suite 1221, Auditorium Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, stating that you desire one of his free trial packages, will be complied with promptly.

He is desirous of reaching that great class of men who are unable to leave home to be treated, and the free sample will enable them to see how easy it is to successfully treat man weakness when the proper remedies are employed. Dr. Howell makes no restrictions. Any man who writes will be sent a free sample and literature, carefully sealed in a plain package, so that you need have no fear of embarrassement or publicity. Readers are requested to write without delay.

SCHOLAR BARES HOSEA FAMILY'S SKELETON NOW

University of Chicago Professor Declares Prophet Took Wife as Horrible Example.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Hosea's family skeleton has come to light, if not to life. The domestic scandal of ancient Israel's prophet has been removed from its closet, scoured with higher criticism and rattled in the face of Biblical scholars, who were perfectly willing to let it rest. Professor J. M. Powis Smith, of the University of Chicago, exhibits it in an article on "The Marriage of Hosea," in the current number of The Biblical World.

Hosea's wife, Gomer Bath Diblaim, is the villainess of the story reconstructed by Professor Smith from the account of her marriage to the prophet, and in the first three chapters of the book of Hosea, Professor Smith asserts that Gomer, contrary to the usual interpretation of the Scriptural account, was a person of evil reputation before the wedding ceremony was performed.

Prophet Knew His Faults.

Professor Smith adds to his version the fact that Hosea knew of Gomer's faults and took her "with his eyes open." In short, the prophet married Gomer with the curious purpose of making the match a horrible example to the rest of the Israelites, he asserts.

The marriage was to impress Israel with the fact of its own disloyalty to God.

According to the professor's view, the belief that "Hosea, as a young man, fell in love with Gomer and married her, supposing her to be all his youthful imagination fancied her to be," that she later left his home to live with another man, that he bought her back and then become a prophet, will not hold water. The scholar declares that this version is founded on an imperfect notion of the physiology of prophets.

Professor Smith asserts that the wife's name, which means "Gomer, daughter of Fig Cakes," signifies that she was held in low esteem. He retranslates several words in the Biblical account and gives the following as the proper version:

"Hosea, a prophet already burdened with the sense of his people's sin, felt himself called upon by Yahweh to marry a lewd woman, to the end that through such a marriage he might open the eyes of Israel to the enormity of its offense in being disloyal to Yahweh, its rightful lord. In pursuance of this conviction, Hosea bought Gomer, a woman living in public shame with her paramour.

Placed Her Under Restraint.

"But he at once placed her under restraint, denying her association with himself as well as with others, and seeking by such discipline to fit her for her position as his wife. This phase of the experience was interpreted for Israel as meaning that she as Yahweh's bride must be disciplined by exile before she could expect to enjoy any further favor from Yahweh.

"After this period of restraint for Gomer she was taken by Hosea into his home and became the mother of three children. Each of these in succession was given a prophetic name, and, like Isaiah's children, became a walking sermon to Israel just as the institution of marriage itself had been."

Hard Fall Re-sets Dislocated Spine

WIMINGTON, DEL., Aug. 23.—An expenditure of $16,000 and treatment for years in sanitariums in Germany and Paris failed to accomplish what a fall downstairs did. Mrs. William Heim, of Ellendale, Del., was cured of a dislocated spine in this unusual manner. The fall forced her spine into place. To-day she says she is well.

Her head is bandaged, but she was able to preside over a recent meeting of the Ellendale Ladies' Social, of which she is president.

Small Expenses Small Profit

This Advertisement Is Worth 50c

AT THE

Royal Shoe Shop

86 N. BROAD, NEAR LUCKIE ST.

This week, in order to introduce our new lines of Goodyear Welt and English Welt Dress Shoes for Men and Women, we will sell for

$2.50

If offered at our store, together with this advertisement ONE PAIR TO A CUSTOMER Our extra quality shoes as described above

ALL LEATHERS—Gun Metal, Kid, Russia and Patent Colt. ALL SIZES, All New Goods.

Made by one of the Greatest and Best Manufacturers in this Country.

We Make a Specialty of Comfortable Work Shoes for Mechanics and Workingmen

Certainly! We Sell EDUCATOR SHOES for the Whole Family

No reasonable offer refused on the remainder of our Low Shoes in stock. Come while the coming is good.

SAVE HALF A DOLLAR

The ROYAL SHOE SHOP

IRISH RAISE HUGE FUND TO ASSURE HOME RULE

American Hibernians Respond Liberally to Appeal Made After Great Demonstration in Chicago Against England's Domination.

Another Feature of Meeting Was Adoption of a Resolution Condemning Great Britain's Policy Toward U. S. in Canal Dispute.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Following the gigantic demonstration for Irish home rule at the thirty-eighth annual picnic of the United Irish Societies of Chicago, held in Brands Park, sons of Erin here are confident that in a few weeks American Hibernians will have raised a fund that will insure the home rule for which they have fought so long and which they have almost brought about.

Fifteen thousand persons visited the park during the day and they responded liberally to the call for funds with which to carry on their campaign. Three thousand dollars was raised at that time and the fund has grown steadily since.

A feature of the occasion was the reading by James T. Clark, president of the United Irish Societies, of a telegram from William Randolph Hearst, in which he warmly favored home rule. The president was quick to reply, expressing the thanks of the societies for the co-operation they have received in their work from Mr. Hearst's papers.

British Canal Stand Scored.

Another important feature of the day was the resolution prepared in advance and passed by a unanimous vote, opposing the British contention over the Panama Canal tolls.

The resolutions strongly uphold the views of the United States that this country, having built the canal and paid for it without aid, should have the right of passing her own ships through it without paying tolls, and that this action of the United States is entirely within its rights as a nation and is not subject to the criticism of any other nation.

The work of John Redmond, parliamentary leader, in forcing the home rule bill to the verge of final passage also was commended highly.

One of the most impressive features of the occasion was the exhibition of a full-size model of the statue of Colonel F. Finerty, the famous soldier-journalist and a son of whom Erin is very proud.

Colonel Finerty wrote the story of the Custer campaign against old Sitting Bull, and the massacre in which Custer's whole command was wiped out. In his later years Colonel Finerty was editor of the Irish-American, and devoted all his energies to the home rule campaign, now so nearly won.

Work of Irish Sculptor.

The splendid statue of the old fighter is the work of Professor Charles J. Mulligan, of the Art Institute, a pupil of MacMonnies and Saint-Gaudens.

Among the speakers who addressed the enthusiastic throng were United States Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon, former Attorney General Maurice T. Maloney, P. H. O'Donnell, Joseph E. Ryan, John T. Sutton, of Lincoln, Neb., and Harry W. Smith, of Springfield, Ill.

In part, Mr. Maloney said: "We of the Celtic race have always struggled for a place in the sun, and have made a good deal of history, but we have been accused in the past of not being quite what we ought to be in the old country, and did not act to our own interest. English misgovernment and oppression were solely to blame for this.

"Now I can see a new Ireland rising above the horizon, a nation once again. The Irish people had advanced with giant strides, now that the long tribulation of our night is passing away."

Senator Twists Lion's Tail.

United States Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon said:

"My people came to this country to avoid persecution in the mother country, persecution by the English Government. Ireland had no measure of freedom in those times."

Speaking on the Panama Canal, he said: "We have a perfect right to arrange to suit ourselves charges on a canal that was made in America, solely by American money. If England will not send her exhibits to the San Francisco Exposition on this account, I would say let her keep them at home.

"If we were not careful to withstand these encroachments of the British Government, we might in the end find ourselves in the same case as Ireland finds herself to-day. I foresee home rule for that country, within the next two or three years without question of doubt."

Tight Skirts Make Idle Factory Girls

Mill Men Assert Present Styles Curtail Demand for Goods and Cause Lack of Work.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., Aug. 23. That the factories manufacturing cloth are suffering from the present styles in women's wearing apparel, owing to the smaller sale of cloth, and that many operatives are being thrown out of work in consequence, is the opinion of many leading New Bedford manufacturers.

In the past three years the circumference of women's skirts has been cut down on the average about two yards. The smaller sales of cloth have necessitated a curtailment in the payroll and hundreds of idle operatives are waiting until the styles change before they will be put to work again.

Irish Societies Leader Thanks Mr. Hearst for Support of Home Rule

CORDIAL telegrams of congratulation and thanks were exchanged between William Randolph Hearst and James T. Clark, president of the United Irish Societies of Chicago on the occasion of their annual picnic recently. Mr. Hearst expressed his belief in the justness and the ultimate success of the cause of home rule, while the head of the Irish societies in his reply earnestly thanked the publisher for his co-operation in their work in behalf of their fatherland. Mr. Clark's message follows:

CHICAGO, Aug. 20, 1913.

Hon. William Randolph Hearst,
San Francisco.

The sentiment of the United Irish Societies toward your papers has always been one of appreciation. Often in the past we have admired your unselfish advocacy of the cause of liberty and the 15,000 Irish-Americans at the ceremony of unveiling of the John F. Finerty monument were thrilled by your message in favor of home rule for Ireland. This monument is symbolic of the revitalized Irish nation that has been the inspiration of Parnell, Redmond and other patriots, and we believe it would strengthen the home rule cause immeasurably if you would publish in your Sunday papers, in the near future, a comprehensive account of our recent demonstration here, and emphasize its significance to Irish liberty.

JAS. T. CLARK, President,
United Irish Societies.

Mr. Hearst's Home Rule Message

San Francisco, Aug. 15.

As an American believing ardently in liberty and opportunity in equal rights and equal justice, I believe sincerely in home rule for Ireland.

If I were an Englishman I would believe with even greater earnestness in home rule not only for Ireland, but for every individual integral part of the British Empire.

I would believe in genuine home rule and in general home rule. I would believe in home rule which would insure complete independence in local government for every state and in a general government which would afford every state equal rights, equal liberties and proportionate representation.

Such just and genuine home rule is the best and perhaps the only remedy for the threatened decadence and possible dissolution of the British Empire. The preservation and perpetuation of the British Empire in its full prestige and power are only to be found in a voluntary federation of independent states, not held together loosely by compulsion but molded into an imperial entity by the natural and nationalizing forces of mutual confidence, mutual affection and mutual interest.

If I were an Irishman I would take pride in this fight for home rule, first because of the benefit I was helping to confer upon my country and my own countrymen, and, secondly, because of the benefit which will inevitably ensue to all other sections of the British Empire and to other nations throughout the world.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

'Perfect Baby' Fed on Soup and Vegetables

Hundred Per Cent Child Also Gets Abundance of Water and Fresh Air.

PASSAIC, N. J., Aug. 23.—"Good, substantial food, well cooked, is what I feed him," said Mrs. Thomas Watterston, of No. 110 Central avenue, when asked how she reared her son, Leslie, just declared the only 100 per cent perfect baby in the "better babies" contest in Passaic. Three hundred infants contested. He is 27 months old.

"He gets soups, fruit, vegetables, puddings, cereals," continued the mother. "I give him very little meat, few eggs, but plenty of water, inside and out."

Baby Leslie goes to bed about 8 p. m. and arises about 7:30, awakening of his own accord and bounding out into the fields before breakfast. He has a two-hour nap every afternoon, and always sleeps with the windows in his room wide open.

Women Voters Save Mayor From Recall

Committee From Their Organization Canvasses Every Ward to Prevent His Defeat.

JANESVILLE, WIS., Aug. 23.—Mayor James A. Fathers was the victor by a narrow margin to-day in Wisconsin's first recall election of importance under the commission form of government. He was elected by 98 votes, with a total of more than 3,00 votes cast, more than were ever before voted in a Janesville municipal election.

Mayor Fathers received 1,570 votes and his opponent, John C. Nichols, 1,472. Fathers carried three wards, the First, Second and Third, those chiefly occupied by the church and aristocratic elements, while Nichols carried the Fourth and Fifth Wards, the homes of the poorer people.

The election follows the trouble over saloons six months ago, when the Fathers administration started a campaign to clean up the town. Every ward in the city was canvassed by women's committees in the interest of Fathers.

Standardize Book to Simplify Grammar

Educators Work to Have Study of English Language Made More Uniform.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Aug. 23.—Standardization of grammatical nomenclature, which will do away with the confusion in the study of English, as well as other languages, in American schools, has been effected by a committee of fifteen, of which Professor Hills, of Colorado College, was a member.

The committee made a report to the National Educational Association in convention at Salt Lake City and its adoption without amendment virtually insures the following of the committee's recommendations in all schools and colleges.

According to Professor Hills it was found that in the sentence "John is good," the word "good" was called by nine different names in 26 grammars, the word "John" in "This is John," was called by nineteen terms, and in "We made John president," the word "president" was given eighteen different names in the text books examined.

Philippine Hero Can't Re-enlist in Army

Battle-Scarred Pensioner Rejected by Recruiting Office on Account of Wounds.

SPOKANE, Aug. 23.—One of the seven heroes of the United States army who survived the bloody massacre of Balinigiga, P. I., when he saw more than 100 of his comrades and officers go to their death at the hands of a savage Philippine tribe, and himself, was mutilated in many places on his body and given up for dead, John M. Newhouse, applied for reenlistment in the United States army.

Newhouse is 37 years old and came from Helena. He is now drawing $30 a month for the injuries he received in the massacre. Newhouse told of his experience while pleading with local army recruiting officers to take him into the army again.

Officials were compelled to reject the applicant on account of a stiff right arm caused by one of the cuts from a bolo.

Lightning Bug Used To Illuminate House

West Virginian Discovers New Light Medium Which He Declares Surpasses Electricity.

MORGANTOWN, W. VA., Aug. 23. Thornton Flowers, of Mora, claims that by treating the common firefly or lightning bug with a secret chemical process he has produced a light surpassing the tungsten incandescent. He has his home illuminated with the new light.

Several weeks ago, Flowers says, he captured an immense lightning bug. It gave out a brilliant light, and this gave him an idea that the light from fireflies would illuminate a room if they were made to glow incessantly. He hit upon a mixture of chemicals, which, he says, not only will retain the glow after the insect's life is extinct, but will increase it.

He captured the insects by hundreds, treated them with chemicals and placed them in globes throughout his home.

Blind Girl Student Marvelous Gardener

Produces Daisies Three Times Size of Ordinary Flowers and Vegetables Just as Big.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Twenty-seven deaf and dumb girls and boys, ranging from 10 to 17, are being taught to speak, read, write stories, sew, make biscuits, solve arithmetic problems, spell and garden at the Sixteenth Street school here, where an exhibition of their work was held recently.

Miss Elizabeth Kenealy, 15, is creating a sensation at the school because of her wonderful success in raising flowers and vegetables.

In a middy blouse and dark skirt, Miss Elizabeth works in her gardens, one at home and the other at school, producing daisies three times the size of the ordinary flowers, and beets that make the average vegetable look like radishes in size.

SMITH URGES ZONE CURE FOR BOLL WEEVIL

Senator From South Carolina Declares South's Loss in 17 Years Is $1,000,000,000.

Continued from Page 1.

an isolated spot in Texas until it has now reached the State of Alabama, and I have been appalled by the damage wrought by its ravages. During all these years I have been hoping for the discovery by which the pest could be exterminated, or even checked, but in both I have been disappointed.

Likes Zone Remedy Plan.

Some time ago the suggestion was made to establish across the entire cotton belt, east of the areas infested by the weevil a zone of 100 miles, in which no cotton should be planted. It was argued that this would check the eastward advance of the weevil, as it subsists only on the cotton plant, and it was also argued by entomologists and other experts on plant and insect life that my moving this zone westward from year to year all the weevils in the Cotton States would be starved out and entirely exterminated until the Mexican border was reached.

The idea appealed to me very strongly, and I have given the subject a great deal of study ever since. I believe this plan is entirely feasible, and while at first thought the cost may seem prohibitive, yet when the estimated cost is compared with the estimated saving the zone plan must be looked upon as a very sound business proposition.

The Government entomologists, farm demonstration agents and others admit that if this zone plan is put into operation it will undoubtedly check and finally exterminate the boll weevil, as it will have nothing to feed upon, and they admit at the same time that no other plan that has been tried so far has been at all effective.

I have had an estimate made of the cost of the proposed zone and I think it is a very liberal one. It follows:

"The cessation of cotton growing over an area of 46,245 square miles, in which the crop is valued at $98,990,047 per annum, is at first glance such an appalling suggestion that few have even thought to look deeper.

Sees Need of Substitute.

"We must add also to this the loss in ginning business, which is computed at $2,915,518 per annum and the loss in seed products totaling $5,633,562. This means that there must be compensation for a loss in earning value of $107,539,127 per annum.

"In the first place, any scheme which would call for the cessation of cotton growing must provide the means and knowledge for growing something else in the place of cotton.

"A large crop of trained agriculturists instructing in the cultivation of new and profitable crops and in the principles of rotation, maintenance of soil fertility, etc., would help the people to double and treble the output of their land within very few years. It would also be necessary to supply seed for planting the 2,573,672 acres of cotton land in other crops. Thus the greater part of the prospective loss can be met at a reasonable expense.

"The loss of the ginners and part of the loss of the oil men will have to be assumed by the Government. This loss would not exceed $9,000,000.

"It would be necessary for the western portion of the quarantine area to remain out of cotton for possibly three years.

"East of the proposed quarantine line there lies an area of 112,027 square miles of territory in which cotton can be produced. The average yield per acre (1908-1811) for this territory has been 3,051,103 bales (500 pounds), of which 32,892 bales (500 pounds was sea island cotton. The value of the latter was $4,224,235.

Places Faith in Expert.

"The value of the remaining or upland cotton, valued at 11.9 cents per pound, was $174,345,554. The value of the equivalent amount of seed produced would be $33,943,532. Thus the annual value of the producers of the crop to be protected is $217,514,211.

"History of the boll weevil has shown that if this area is not protected its production will be lowered year by year until possibly 50 per cent of the crop is taken, and sometimes as high as 75 per cent."

The zone plan is the only suggestion that has yet been offered that holds out any promise of relief. The cost of the zone plan is undoubtedly great, but when the estimated cost is compared with the estimated saving, the protection of sections not yet reached and the ultimate eradication of the boll weevil throughout the entire cotton belt, the cost does not seem to be prohibitive. In fact, the cost of the zone system will be mild compared with the loss that will be entailed if the boll weevil is not exterminated.

Sea Island Crop Imperiled.

It is practically certain that if the boll weevil spreads to the South Atlantic States the sea island cotton industry will be wiped out entirely. This is by reason of the semi-tropical nature of the islands, the luxuriant foliage which affords a safe harbor and breeding ground for the insects during winter and summer, and the fact that there is neither extreme heat nor extreme cold, both of which are destructive to insect life. It is my deliberate judgment that if the boll weevil reaches the sea islands, there will be no more sea island cotton.

I have spoken of the aggregate loss to the country, but the feature that appeals to me most strongly is the loss to the individual. The country may eventually recover from the damage done to the cotton crop, but the individual cotton farmer whose income is cut in half or destroyed, and whose property is made to depreciate in value, may never recover. The loss to him will be irreparable.

My object in writing this is in order that the people may know just how seriously the cotton crop is being menaced, and that they may discuss and understand the only plan that has been offered, which promises to accomplish the result needed. If any other plan is suggested that promises to accomplish the result at a less cost or in a quicker manner, I will give it my heartiest indorsement.

I will be glad to have the farmers and others of the South consider this problem carefully and write me what they think of it.

WOMAN IS KEY IN STRUGGLE TO UNSEAT SULZER

New York Governor's Foes Call Wife's Illness a Sham and Confession a Ruse.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Apparently deadlocked until the High Court of Impeachment meets September 18 to try the charges of high crimes and misdemeanors against Governor William Sulzer, both the accused Executive and Lieutenant Govefnor Martin Glynn are busy, the one strengthening his defense, the other preparing to invigorate his attack. In the meantime, the official business of the Empire State is at a standstill.

The government of New York presents a paradox unique to republican government. The State has two Governors, and it has none. Two men maintain they have the right to transact the State's business. No business is being transacted.

And in this struggle for power, the battle seemingly centers about a woman, a woman who has no voice in the government, who is not even allowed to vote under the statutes of the State.

Wife's Illness Questioned.

In addition to the law point raised by the defenders of Sulzer that he can not be impeached or tried for things he did before he took the oath of office, the defense lays greatest stock on the declaration by Sulzer's wife that she, not the Governor, used checks he had received as campaign contributions to speculate on the stock market.

On the other hand, it is learned that the Frawley Committee, which brought to light the charges on which the Governor was impeached, will make her confession the subject of a rigid examination to shatter, if possible, the defense, which will be based largely on her statement.

In the meantime, Mrs. Sulzer, it is reported, is dangerously ill, her nerves broken, it is said, under the strain which she has experienced since the charges were brought against her husband.

Sulzer's enemies even question this illness. They question it so seriously that it, too, is to be investigated. The first step in this investigation,

Both Accused of "Shamming."

The committee believes that "talking too much" consisted of telling stories of Mrs. Sulzer's true condition which were not to the liking of the Governor. An inkling of this purpose was contained in an interview with Assembly Majority Leader Aaron J. Levy, who declared:

"Not only is Mrs. Sulzer's confession a sham, but the pretended illness of Mrs. Sulzer is a sham, of which William Sulzer is the chief perpetrator."

However, should Sulzer be removed from office by Tammany votes, with all the judges of the Court of Appeals voting in his favor, he would count it a vindicaton and proof of his assertion that he is being persecuted because he would not turn over the State to Tammany Hall.

'Wild Man's' Haircut Fills Bushel Basket

Tramp That Frightened Woman and Children Gets Cleaning When Arrested.

MILLVILLE, N. J., Aug. 23.—A "wild man" was reported to the police as roaming the woods west of Millville and frightening women and children. Marshal Biggs hastened to the locality and discovered an uncouth man with shaggy beard which reached to his waist and long hair which hung matted over his shoulders.

When taken to the City Hall the man said he was Waldron Furry of Low Banks, Canada, and that he was simply tramping.

Marshal Biggs acted as barber for the stranger and his hirsute adornment filled a bushel basket.

Pastor Adopts Wife He Had Divorced

Girl Becomes His Ward as Soon as Decree Was Granted by Court.

WOODWARD, OKLA., Aug. 23.—A divorce on unusual grounds has been granted here to B. F. Willett, who is an ordained Baptist minister, and who has served several terms as prosecuting attorney for the county.

Willett gives up his wife that she may become again, in effect, his adopted daughter. Years ago he adopted a little girl who took the name of Clara Willett. She put her in school at Enid, determined to give her the best education obtainable.

Six years ago, when Clara reached the age of 16, Judge Willett made his adopted daughter his bride.

In his petition for divorce the lawyer and former preacher set forth that Mrs. Willett had told him she never could love him as a wife should, but that she could be devoted to him as a daughter.

Girl Wins First Wireless License

She Installs Her Own Apparatus

Miss Alice McConaughy, of Cincinnati, at the key of her wireless instrument.

This girl operates under a license granted under the new wireless laws.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 23.—Miss Alice McConaughy, 13-year-old schoolgirl, is the first person to obtain an operator's license under the new laws regulating wireless telegraphy on the Great Lakes, even if she did get it on something of a fluke.

The license was issued before the inspector discovered that he had failed to notice the age of the applicant, whose father is a national bank examiner of Ohio.

"I did give them the right age," declared Alice. "I sent for the blanks and filled them out myself."

Her work on the demonstration set was satisfactory. The youthful operator installed her own apparatus at home, doing all the wiring and even erecting the 50-foot aerial.

Chester Boynton Sue By Wife for Libel

Echo of Famous Litigation Against Rev. William B. Ayres in New Case.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Helen Theresa Willet Boynton, of Wollaston, Mass., wife of Chester A. Boynton, who some time ago created a sensational church scandal by suing the Rev. William B. Ayres, pastor of the Park and Down Congregational Church, Wollaston, for $10,000 for alienation of Mrs. Boynton's affections, has filed a libel for divorce from her husband on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

Boynton claimed in his suit that the minister had broken up his home after joining the Boynton household as a boarder. Mr. Ayres and Mrs. Boynton in the former's case of defense denied all of the husband's allegations and declared that the whole trouble in the Boynton household sprang out of Boynton's attentions to a choir girl at the Park and Down Church, at which Boynton and his wife were both prominent members.

Boynton lost his suit and was expelled from the Wollaston church. Boynton is now living at Los Angeles.

Has $18 Salary Cut To $10 to Spite Wife

Judge, However, Orders Bookkeeper to Pay Alimony Just the Same.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—G. Lester Pinkham, a bookkeeper of Flushing, sued by his wife for alimony, testified that he was receiving only $10 a week.

His employer, A. M. Ryon, called as a witness, corroborated him.

"Is he worth more money?" asked the Magistrate.

"He certainly is," replied Mr. Ryon; "formerly I paid him $18 a week, but he asked to have his salary reduced to $10."

The Magistrate promptly ordered Pinkham to pay his wife $5 a week and furnish a bond of $520 to guarantee payment.

College Girl Walker Goes 25 Miles a Day

Little Pedestrian Reaches Pittsburg on Jaunt From New York to San Francisco.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 23.—With a jaunty rose-colored hat, Miss Gladys Mason, a petite New Yorker, who is "footing it" from Broadway to the Golden Gate, is on her way West.

The little pedestrian left New York on June 29 and has averaged 25 miles a days. Her high mark for a day is 41 miles, made east or Harrisburg.

Miss Mason is 22, a graduate of Emerson College, Boston. She expects to reach San Francisco Thanksgiving Day.

SAYS WIFE AND MAGICIAN WERE IN DEATH PLOT

Husband Declares That Their Conspiracy Kept Him in Bed Three Years.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Alleging that his wife was madly infatuated with a man of strange, weird, magnetic powers, and that they conspired to incapacitate him by administering mysterious potions, Theodore Speaber, a former undertaker of Chicago, filed suit for divorce from Anna Speaber in the Circuit Court at Laporte, Ind.

Through the machinations of his wife and a man who represented himself as being a magnetic healer, assuming the name of Louis Odillo, Speaber avers that they tried to convince him that he had become a victim of tuberculosis. Odillo then injected a chemical in his ear, he alleges, which brought on an illness that confined him to a hospital bed for three years. This, he charges, was done with the deliberate intention of causing a fatal sickness to set in and get him out of the way.

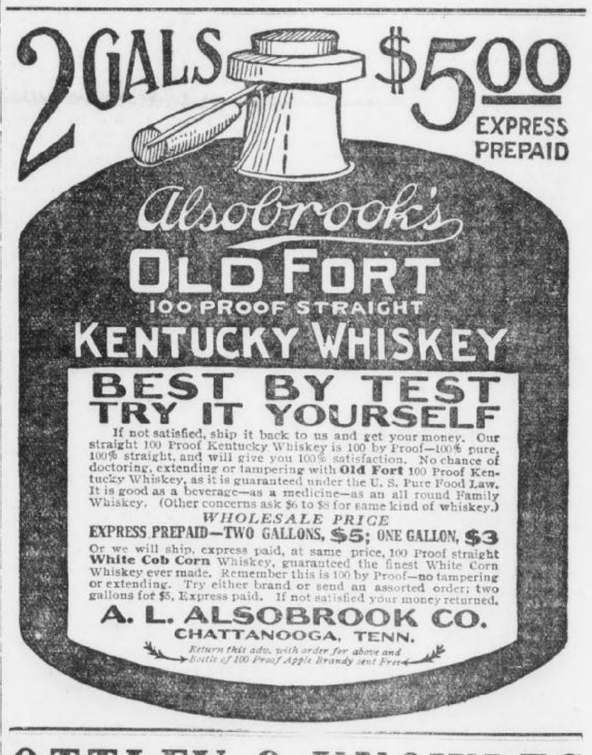
His wife then sold out his undertaking business and their household effects, he charges, for less than one-third of the real value. She then refused to see him after he had been released from the hospital.

Friends of Speaber say that he was at one time an inmate of the Elgin State Insane Asylum. But he was released later as cured.

COUNTY TO GIVE COOK BOOKS TO NEWLYWEDS

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Leaden biscuits and leather-crusted pies and all the other dinner delicacies of Mrs. Newlywed soon may cease to cause physical pain and matrimonial estrangement. Their existence is threatened.

Authorities of Cook County are considering the advisability of giving away official Cook County cook books with all marriage licenses. Robert M. Sweitzer, County Clerk, will present the plan to the County Board.



OTTLEY & KNOWLES

General Insurance

1508 Fourth National Bank Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

SEMI-ANNUAL STATEMENT

For the six months ending June 30, 1913, of the condition of the

Svea Fire and Life Insurance Company (Limited)

OF GOTHENBURG, SWEDEN,

Organized under the laws of the Kingdom of Sweden, made to the Governor of the State of Georgia, in pursuance of the laws of said State. Principal office in United States, 100 William street, New York, N. Y.

I. CAPITAL STOCK.

Whole amount of capital $200,000.00
Amount paid up in cash 200,000.00

II. ASSETS.

Total assets of the company, actual cash market value $1,422,807.30

III. LIABILITIES.

Total liabilities $1,422,807.30

IV. INCOME DURING THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THE YEAR 1913.

Total income actually received during the first six months in cash ..... $ 417,212.42

V. EXPENDITURES DURING THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THE YEAR 1913.

Total expenditures during the first six months of the year in cash ..... $ 379,770.04
Greatest amount insured in any one risk ..... $ 37,500.00
Total amount of insurance outstanding 121,363,329.00

A copy of the act of incorporation, duly certified, is of file in the office of the Insurance Commissioner.

STATE OF NEW YORK—County of New York.

Personally appeared before the undersigned M. L. Duncan, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the United States manager of the Svea Fire and Life Insurance Company, Ltd., and that the foregoing statement is correct and true.

M. L. DUNCAN, United States Manager.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 15th day of August, 1913.

EDWIN F. COREY,
Commissioner for the State of Georgia.

Name of State Agent—DAN B. HARRIS, Atlanta.
Name of Agents at Atlanta—OTTLEY & KNOWLES.

MRS. GODBEE CALM; CALLS SELF A TOOL OF JUSTICE

Divorced Wife of Millen Judge, Who Killed Him and Young Bride, Shows No Remorse. Planned Shooting With Care.

Trouble Alleged to Have Started Twenty Years Ago Over Prisoner's Property—Jurist Is Said to Have Slain Brother-in-Law.

MILLEN, Aug. 23.—Convinced that she has been an instrument of justice, satisfied that the work she had planned for days has been well performed, Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee, in her cell in the Jenkins County jail, to-day calmly and confidently awaits the hour when she will face a court to answer to the law for the slaying of her former husband, Judge Walter M. Godbee, and the bride who had taken the slayer's place in his affections.

Mrs. Godbee saw life pass from the body of the man with whom she had lived for years, and there was no remorse shown on her face. While imprisoned for his slaying she was told that she must also answer to the charge of having murdered his wife. She did not blanch.

She had determined on the death of both. She had planned her deed carefully. She believed that she was justified in resorting to arms to avenge her real or fancied wrongs, and persons who know her best declare she is ready to meet the consequences.

No effort to obtain bail has been made by her. She has waived the right of preliminary trial. She is content to remain in jail until her time of trial comes.

Started Twenty Years Ago.

The attitude of this woman, who has passed her fiftieth year, is one of the most remarkable features of this remarkable tragedy.

Twenty years ago, when Judge Godbee and his second wife found they were mismated, the foundation for the double slaying was laid. The climax came Monday morning in the Millen postoffice, when Judge Godbee was almost instantly killed and his young wife fatally wounded by pistol shots fired by the woman from whom he had been separated by the courts.

Both Judge Godbee and the woman held as his slayer are of prominent Jenkins County families. Godbee had been prominent in politics. He had been married three times.

His first wife died many years ago, but, at his request, he is buried at her side in the cemetery at Waynesboro. Soon after her death he married Miss Edna Perkins, daughter of the late Mills Perkins, and heiress to considerable property.

They lived in apparent happiness until the early nineties, when the first signs of trouble came. At this time Judge Godbee acquired rights to certain properties which belonged to his wife before their marriage. It is charged that the judge afterward sold this property and reinvested the proceeds for his own personal benefit.

Shot Brother, Is Rumor.

Then there is an old story that years ago in Burke County Judge Godbee became involved in a difficulty with a brother of the woman he afterward married, and killed him. He pleaded self-defense and was acquitted.

There is no record, though, that this trouble had any bearing on the marital differences of the couple.

Friction between the couple reached a critical stage ten years ago, when Mrs. Godbee filed suit for divorce in Jenkins County, charging cruelty on the part of her husband.

She declared that the judge had humiliated her before her children, had driven her from his room and had nailed the entrance between the two chambers in which they lived.

Even after this suit was filed there was a reconciliation, but the trouble cropped out again about five years ago, when Mrs. Godbee again entered suit. She was granted absolute divorce, but the judge was successful in resisting her plea for allmony. Mrs. Godbee was also given the custody of her minor child, Miss Sarah Godbee, with whom she lived at the time of the tragedy.

Divorce Didn't End Trouble.

The divorce decree did not end the troubles of the pair, however. Mrs. Godbee always contended that the money on which Judge Godbee was living luxuriously after the decree rightfully belong to her.

It is certain that she was in straitened circumstances at the time of the killing, and it is believed that the sight of another woman enjoying the fortune she believed hers, while she virtually was living in poverty, had no little to do with her determination to take justice into her own hands.

For after the divorce Judge Godbee married again. His third wife was Miss Florence Boyer, 25 years old, of Youngstown, Ohio. After their meeting at the sea shore Judge Godbee continued his courtship at her home, and little more than four months ago he brought her to Millen as his bride.

A crisis was reached. Soon after the judge's return, it is declared, he received demands from his former wife that he contribute to the support of her and her daughter. In these demands she cited the fact that she was entitled to at least part of the income he derived from property which had originally been hers.

Judge Feared for Life.

Intimate friends of the judge say that from that time on he feared, not only for his own life, but for that of his bride.

So alarmed did he become that on receiving a threatening letter Sunday he refused to take his bride to church, although he was a steward of the First Methodist congregation, and requested the pastor, the Rev. E. E. Rose, to come to the Hotel Estelle, where he had apartments, to conduct private prayers.

It is evident that on that same day Mrs. Godbee No. 2 decided on the deed she committed Monday. She got into communication with Marshal P. T. Foote and requested him to call on her at her daughter's home.

There, the marshal says, Mrs. Godbee showed him a .32-caliber pistol.

"Will this kill as quickly as a .38?" was the surprising question he was asked.

"It will if it hits the right spot," he replied. She seemed satisfied with the answer and the interview closed.

This same pistol was in Mrs. Godbee's handbag Monday morning when she went to the Millen postoffice. She knew that each day the judge visited there early in the forenoon to inquire for mail. She was seated writing as he entered the building, accompanied by his young wife. The slyaing followed.

Mrs. Godbee died Tuesday night in the apartments in which she and her husband had lived during the two months of their married life. Mrs. G. W. Boyer, mother of the slain bride, was en route from Williamsport to Millen when her daughter died.

Bulk of Estate to Daughter.

The will of Judge Godbee has been found in the possession of W. B. Wallace, a merchant, and one of the dead man's closest friends. The value of the estate is between $45,000 and $50,000. He bequeathes the bulk of his property and securities to his daughter by his first wife, formerly Miss Maggie Godbee, now married and living in Augusta.

Small portions of the estate are left to Frank Mills and King Godbee, sons of the divorced wife, and Miss Sarah Godbee, also an issue of the second marriage. The divorced wife is not provided for in the instrument. Frank Mills Godbee has been appointed temporary administrator of the estate of Judge Godbee, and A. S. Anderson, temporary administrator of the estate of Mrs. Florence Boyer Godbee.

The third Mrs. Godbee has been buried beside her husband and his first wife in Waynesboro. The condition of Mrs. Boyer, the slain bride's mother is said to be somewhat improved following her collapse upon first seeing the dead body of her young daughter. Her two sons have come from Pennsylvania and will remain with her until she returns to her home at Williamsport.

Neither of the boys expresses any animosity toward the slayer of their sister and her husband, but both join their mother in hoping that exact justice will be done. Archibald and LeRoy Boyer the brothers, have not yet decided whether they will attend the trial of the second Mrs. Godbee.

Vincent Astor Reported Captured

Name Is Linked With Miss Sands

Match Long Predicted by Gossips

Miss Elizabeth Sands and Vincent Astor.

Fiancee-To-Be Measures Up to Rigid Requirements of Young Multi-Millionaire's Mother.

NEWPORT, Aug. 23.—Decidedly the most interesting aftermath of the recent Newport yacht races is the persistent report that Miss Elizabeth Sands, beautiful daughter of Mrs. Frederick Sands, of this city, occupies the place of honor in the affections of Vincent Astor, head of that family and heir to its huge estates.

This report, which has been current in social circles here and in New York, took the form of a practical certainty, according to society's self-constituted soothsayers, when it was noted that in the party taken to the races by young Astor was only one of three girls to whom he paid marked attention last year. That one, of course, was Miss Sands.

It has long been known and greatly gossiped about at afternoon teas and other social functions that young Astor has felt a strong liking for the young beauty ever since they were school children.

Society wiseacres, who have long ago hung up in their mental art galleries a picture of young Astor and Miss Sands as a happy married couple, were not at all discouraged when the young man's affections at times seemed to wander from his childhood's choice.

"Just wait until Vincent's mother gets back to America and resumes her place at the 'helm,'" said these social clairvoyants, "and you'll notice a sudden slump in the fortunes of Elizabeth Sands' attractive rivals."

The prediction was based upon a firm belief that the aristocratic former Ava Willing would see to it that her son, who is now the head of the family and chancellor of its inexhaustible exchequer, should marry someone who measured up in every way to her rigid requirements as to ancestry, connections and social standing.

$175,000 TO BE GIVEN IN PRIZES FOR LIVE STOCK

Harness Race Purses at Panama-Pacific Exposition Will Total $225,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—The greatest live stock show in the history of the world is assured at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in 1915. Following the appropriation by the exposition management of $175,000 for awards for prize-winning live stock, and the news that $225,000 is offered in purses for harness races, each new announcement by Chief of the Department of Live Stock D. O. Lively discloses increasing interest in the forthcoming live stock exhibition.

The live stock department has at its disposal 50 acres of ground which will be devoted to the erection of live stock buildings, a hall for live stock congresses and agricultural meetings, a race track, and an open field upon which will be held drills, international cavalry horse contests, polo contests and exhibitions of the prize live stock of the world.

The live stock buildings will be constructed more from an exhibition standpoint than in keeping with any farm utility plan; the vast rows of barns which have characterized the live stock departments of other expositions will be avoided. Every separate section will be shown under a single roof.

In addition to the $175,000 set aside by the exposition management to be used in cash premiums, more than $45,000 has been offered by organizations representing various phases of the live stock industry. Of the prizes offered by the exposition, $50,000 will be given to horses, $30,000 to cattle, $25,000 to sheep and goats, $25,000 to swine, $12,000 to poultry, pigeons and pet stock, $7,500 to carloads of cattle, sheep and swine, $5,000 for prize-winning dogs and cats.

The department is making arrangements for holding the biggest poultry show on record, and birds from all over the world will compete for international prizes. The pigeons will take their place in the exposition not only as applied to the fancy, but as a utility, and some of the birds will be used as carriers, taking part in races across the continent from San Francisco.

Under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, the exposition will give two harness race meets, one in the spring and one in the fall of 1915, at which there will be offered $225,000 in stakes and purses. With one or two exceptions, the special stakes included in the grand aggregate of $225,000 will be the greatest that ever have been offered.

America's Oldest Church Discovered

Ruins of Centuries-Old House of Worship Off Yucatan Visited by Explorers.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 23.—The ruins of the oldest Christian church in America have been discovered on the Island of Cozumel off Yucatan by Professor Morley and Jesse Nusbaum, of the Sarvard-San Diego expedition.

Cozumel has not been visited by white men for almost a century, and Morley and Nusbaum had thrilling adventures, but deny that its people are cannibals. The scientists were equipped with a moving picture outfit, but in leaving the island for the mainland their canoe was upset and much of the photograph material was spoiled.

While Cozumel is only 30 by 7 miles in extent, it was found extraordinarily rich in monumental and architectural remains. It was here that Cortez had a fierce battle with the natives and erected what is declared to have been the first Christian church in America.

Repeats His Wedding Date as Punishment

Husband Who Told Court He Wished to Forget Marriage Has New Litany.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 23.—"June 14 1887." Philip Leborski will have to repeat ten times a day for the next 60 days in order to keep out of the house of correction, by sentence pronounced upon him by District Court Judge Elsner.

Leborski, who is a wealthy real estate owner, was arrested when a patrolman found him shaking his fist and swearing at his wife, while she was perched on the gable of their residence.

In the trial Leborski told the Court he was trying to forget he was married and that he had succeeded in forgetting the date of the ceremony. The Court informed him that no man had a right to forget such a date and then ordered his case continued 60 days and told Leborski to recite the date of the wedding ten times daily or he would have to go to jail. Leborski started his recitations before he was out of the courtroom and his wife was doing the counting.

Crusade Started on Big Sunday Dinners

Domestic Science Teachers of Kansas Schools Are Enlisted in The Campaign.

TOPEKA, KANS., Aug. 23.—The custom and the physical requirements that a man must rest at least one day in seven have brought about a campaign in Kansas against the big Sunday dinners that have so long been the delight of the average man. The domestic science teachers of the schools have enlisted the aid of domestic science students throughout the State and the big Sunday dinner is going the way of the hard biscuit and the underdone meat in the Kansas homes.

The campaign was started a year ago at the University of Kansas, but it now has the support of every high school and college with domestic science courses.

Maryland Jews to Raise Shaft to Friend

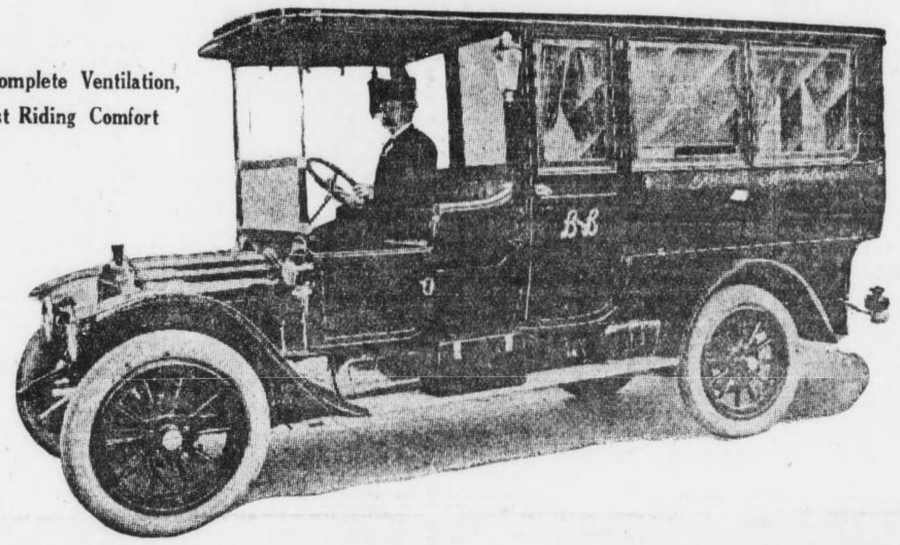
Thomas Kennedy, Who Passed Law Giving Them Right to Hold Office, To Be Honored.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., Aug. 23.—Mendes Cohen, of Baltimore, a grand-nephew of one of the first Jews elected to office in the State of Maryland, will act as treasurer of the fund to be raised to build a monument to Thomas Kennedy, author of the law passed in 1826 that gave Jews the right to hold office.

Kennedy was famous in several other respects than as champion of the cause of political equality, for which he fought as a member of the Legislature eight years. He wrote many ballads that aroused the martial ardor of his fellow citizens in the days preceding the War of 1812.

Barclay & Brandon S-E-R-V-I-C-E

Most Complete Ventilation, Fullest Riding Comfort



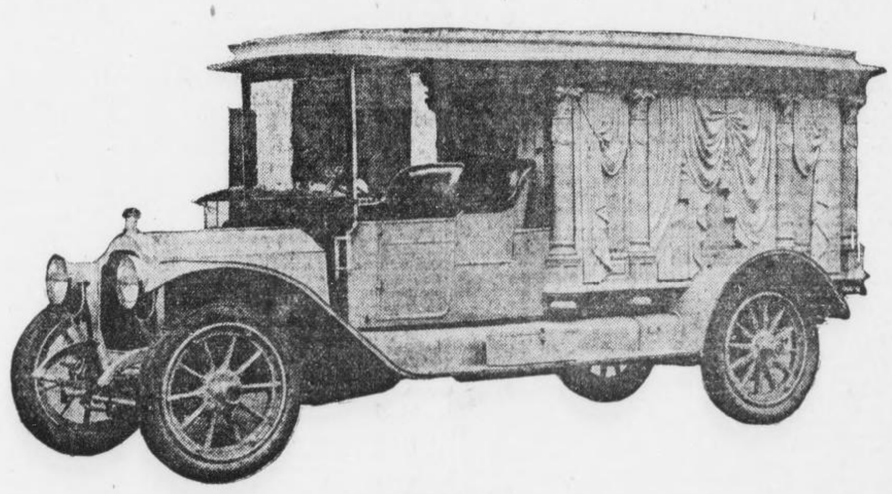
Equipment — Electric Fan, Running Hot and Cold Water, Ice Water, Steam Heat

This Picture Shows the Very Finest and Best Equipped Ambulance in the Entire South

The Barclay & Brandon PRIVATE AMBULANCE is positively the very last word in up-to-date Ambulances.

Nothing could be more complete—not a single thing can be suggested that might tend to give further and more complete comfort to the patient, that is not already a part of its wonderful equipment.

This most complete Ambulance is at your immediate service at all times, whether you live in Atlanta or suburbs. For white people only.



BARCLAY & BRANDON Service as Funeral Directors is Widely Known for Its Dignity and Exclusiveness

One very important point is that Barclay & Brandon alone can furnish you with a COMPLETE AUTOMOBILE FUNERAL, as they have just purchased a $7,000 Packard Hearse, the only Auto Hearse in the State. Choice of either auto or horse-drawn hearse.

In time of bereavement it is assuring at least to know that there is some one to whom you can intrust all the details of a funeral service, secure in the knowledge that every requisite will be carefully attended to.

This you may expect AT ALL TIMES from

BARCLAY & BRANDON

246 Ivy Street, Corner of Baker Phones { Bell, Ivy 788, Ivy 168. Atlanta, 788

Columbus · Latest Southwest Georgia News · Albany

TWO BROTHERS GIVE 116 YEARS TO MINISTRY

The Revs. E. H. and John B. McGehee Oldest Active Workers in South Ga. Conference.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—Perhaps there are no more interesting characters in Georgia than the Rev. E. H. McGehee, of Columbus, and his brother, Dr. John B. McGehee, of Oglethorpe, whose combined services in the ministry are 116 years. Both were born in Perry, Houston County, and were admitted to the ministry when young men.

Sunday night at East Highlands Methodist Church in Columbus, the Rev. E. H. McGehee, who is pastor of the church, will give some reminiscences of 55 years as an itinerant minister. He was admitted to the South Georgia Conference 55 years ago next November, in Columbus. Since that time he has served two years as a missionary to the negroes, ten years on circuits, fifteen years as a presiding elder and twenty-eight years on stations. Of the class of 29 ministers admitted to the conference with him, he is the only living, active minister. In the past 60 years he has not been confined to his room for a period as long as four days at a time from sickness.

The record of his brother, Dr. John B. McGehee, who is now 80 years of age, is still more remarkable. He has been a minister for 61 years, during which time he has served thirty-nine years as presiding elder, two or three years as president of Andrew College and the remainder of the time on circuits and stations. During his long and successful career he has represented the South Georgia Conference at nine sessions of the General Conference, which meets every four years.

Dr. McGehee is said to be the oldest presiding elder in the Southern Methodist Church from a standpoint of service, while he and his brother are the oldest effective ministers in the South Georgia Conference, and they are strong refutation of the idea that a man when he reaches an advanced age is no longer capable of rendering service to the church.

The Rev. E. H. McGehee, of Columbus, is exceedingly active for a man of 74 years of age, and on his seventy-fourth birthday, which occurred recently, he preached three sermons and made a Sunday school address in addition to making a number of pastoral calls.

It is probable that there is not a charge within the bounds of the South Georgia Conference that one of these old and highly esteemed ministers has not served in some capacity since their admission to the ministry.

During their ministry they have served a number of the leading churches in South Georgia, and both have been regarded as among the ablest preachers in the conference throughout their long careers.

Begin Married Life With 24 Chlidren

Moultrie Bride and Bridegroom Had Even Dozen Each.

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—It is a very rare thing for newlyweds to begin keeping house with 24 children to make things lively from the first day of married bliss, yet this was the experience of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Truit, who were recently made man and wife by Justice J. J. Serrell in the Lee district of this County.

The bride was Mrs. M. J. Flowers, a widow with twelve children, and Mr. Truit, whose first wife has been dead for some time leaving him with an even dozen motherless children. Both of the participants in the recent wedding were bereaved about the same time and, living in the same community, they naturally turned ot one another for comfort, and finally agreed that the best thing to do was to marry.

SEABOARD CONDUCTOR GIVEN $10,000 DAMAGES

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—After a strongly contested trial, both sides being represented by able counsel, a verdict was returned yesterday afternoon in Crisp Superior Court for $10,000 in favor of W. B. McMichael, of Jackson, against the Seaboard Railroad Company. McMichael had been in the employ of the road as a freight conductor and in an accident near Birmingham on the Atlanta and Birmingham division he lost a leg. He entered suit for $25,000 and the case was brought to this court for trial under the Federal employees' liability act.

NEW SCHOLARSHIP AT WOODBERRY SCHOOL

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Rosa Woodberry, of Atlanta, has notified the Thomasville Study Class that she has given a scholarship in her school in Atlanta to the class to be awarded by them to any deserving girl that they may select.

This action on the part of Miss Woodberry is appreciated by the members of the class, as it will afford advantages to some deserving girl here who is not able otherwise to have them. It is not known yet who has been selected for the place, but the class has the matter under advisement.

ALBANY GETS ANOTHER LARGE OIL COMPANY

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—Present indications are that another large oil company will make Albany a distributing center in the near future. N. H. Cook, of Atlanta, district superintendent of the Texas Oil Company, one of the largest of the independent companies, has looked over the situation here with a view of locating a distributing plant for the

Miss Lillian Roberts

Popular Valdosta society girl, whose engagement to George L. Patterson, a prominent attorney, has been announced. The wedding is to take place on October 8.

Thomas Farmers Can Own Products

Vegetables Put Up at Home Find Ready Sale In Thomasville Market.

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—Thomas County canned vegetables are on sale here at many of the grocery stores and are proving very popular.

There were more vegetables canned in this county this year than was ever known before, and it has been found to be quite a profitable business, the stores in Thomasville taking them readily and paying the highest market price for them.

Tomatoes especially have been canned in large quantities, and they are unusualy fine, better than the best quality bought heretofore by the merchants from wholesale houses in the North.

The advantage of the home product is that the tomatoes are gathered fresh from the vines and canned before they have had time to get old or damaged.

One farmer, who recently sold about 2,000 cans, said that he had received many compliments in regard to their quality by those who had used them.

CAMILLA TO VOTE ON SCHOOL TAX SEPT. 30

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—September 30 has been set by the City Council of Camilla as the date for holding an election to ratify the schol tax bill for that town recently passed by the Legislature.

The election will be held under the same rules as elections for members of the General Assembly and the same qualifications will be required in registering. It is probable the opening of the school of Camilla will be deferred somewhat on account of this election.

RULES FOR PRIZES AT FAIR DECIDED UPON

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—The Directors of the Thomas County Fair to be held here this fall have received from the committee in charge the rules and regulations for measuring all crops to be exhibited for premiums and they will be followed closely.

J. Willis Moore has been named general director and will measure all acres and crops free of charge. It is said all indications point to the finest exhibit at this fair that has been known since it was organized.

THOMAS COUNTY FARMER EXHIBITS PRIZE CORN EAR

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—J. P. Cary, residing near Coolidge, had on exhibition here this week some corn grown by himself which is an example of what Thomas County can do in that line. One ear of this corn weighed two pounds and nine ounces and when shelled the grains filled a quart measure. The ear was twelve inches long.

Mr. Cary has a half acre of this corn which he will exhibit at the fair here this fall. He thinks his chances for first premium are fine.

Bumper Cotton Crop In Albany District

Several Hundred Bales Have Already Been Received in Market.

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—That about 50 per cent of the cotton in the Albany territory is from ten to fifteen days earlier than last year is the estimate of well-informed cotton men in Albany. The fact that Albany has received several hundred bales already, not counting that moved direct to the compress, is considered evidence that its estimate is approximately correct.

Last year, in addition to making a poor cotton crop, the farmers had no forage and have had to buy high-priced feed for eight months. While the acreage in feed crops this year is not much greater than it was last, the farmers have paid more attention to its cultivation, therefore making a better cop. With a bumper cotton crop and plenty of feed for their stock, the farmers expect a season of prosperity.

COTTON RECEIPTS SHOW DECLINE AT COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—Taking the position that Columbus has suffered the past few years because her cotton receipts have fallen off materially, the Columbus Board of Trade has inaugurated a campaign for the purpose of bringing more cotton to this city. Last year an effort was made to stem the tide of cotton going elsewhere by placing buyers on the streets, and while it had some effect, it did not counteract all the damage that has been done. An effort will be put forth to make the cotton market one of the most attractive in the State.

NEGRO SLAYER IS GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE AT ALBANY

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—In Superior Court of Baker County, which convened at Newton this week, several cases were tried. Simon Johnson, a negro, who killed his stepson on the Grant place in July, was found guilty and given a life sentence. Will Bodford, a negro, was found guilty of attacking a negro girl and sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary. Jake Rhoades was found guilty of violating the prohibition law and given a six months' sentence or a fine of $200.

BAPTIST ASSOCIATION TO MEET IN COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—The Columbus Baptist Association will meet in its annual session on Wednesday after the third Sunday in September in Manchester. Dr. B. W. Bussey, the moderator, will preach the doctrinal sermon. There are more than 30 churches in the association.

ASKS $5,000 DAMAGES FOR INJURIES IN MILL

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—Because of alleged injuries Charles Wiggins claims to have sustained while employed by the Swift Manufacturing Company of Columbus, on July 7, he has brought suit against the mills for $5,000. He claims that he has been unable to earn a livelihood since he received his injuries.

NEGRO SLAYER DIES OF WOUND IN MACON JAIL

Rushed From Albany for Safekeeping by Officers Who Captured Him.

MACON, Aug. 23.—Dock Mathis, the negro who shot and killed B. L. Jossey, near Leesburg several days ago, died Friday night in the Bibb County jail at Macon, where he was brought for safe keeping.

During the shooting Jossey is said to have shot the negro in the side. The wound was not serious, but the negro hid in the woods for several days and then laid in a shanty in the western part of Albany for a number of hours without receiving medical attention, blood poisoning set in and he died.

Officer R. M. Denson, of the Albany police force, through whose efforts he and Sheriff Barbre were enabled to capture Mathis, has received the reward of $100 that was offered by Sheriff Moreland, of Lee County, for the capture of the negro.

Officer Denson has not heard from G. A. Wallace and W. B. Bothwell, who each offered a reward of $100, but both are satisfied with the arrest of the negro and will pay the reward at the proper time.

The negro was located in the western part of Albany by Officer Denson, and with the aid of Sheriff Barbre he was captured and spirited through the country to Macon, where he was left for safe keeping.

Columbus Fights For Better Service

Board of Trade Wants Central of Georgia to Put on More Passenger Trains.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—The Columbus Board of Trade has inaugurated a campaign to secure better passengere service over the Central of Georgia to points east and west from Columbus, it being claimed that the service that is now being given by the road is not satisfactory.

The Board of Trade is anxious to have the Central put on an additional train or two, or to have trains that come to the city reach Columbus in time to allow the people coming to the city an opportunity to do their shopping and return home if they wish in the afternoon of the same day. The trade organization has the backing of practically every business man in the city.

Runs Small Farm In Heart of Griffin

Young Man Makes Large Yield of Irish Potatoes and Corn.

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—James C. Nutt, one of Griffin's best-known young men, is running a small farm in the heart of the city, and is making good at it. On a plot of land adjoining the cemetery, Nutt planted four acres of Irish cobbler potatoes. So many Irish potatoes in one field had never been seen in this section before.

For some time now the crop has been in process of harvesting. Up to date only a portion of the crop has been disposed of, but 400 bushels of the potatoes have been sold at a price ranging from 80 cents to $1 per bushel.

To increase the returns from the land, Nutt has planted rows of corn between the rows of potatoes, and the corn is now over shoulder high. The corn gives promise of making not less than 25 bushels to the acre, and if season is propitious, a good deal more.

JUDGE DANIEL TOO ILL TO PRESIDE OVER COURTS

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Judge R. T. Daniel, of the Flint River Circuit, who was so ill last week that he had to adjourn the August term of Spalding Superior Court, and who has not been able to attend the Butts County Court this week, continues quite ill at his residence here on Poplar street. He will not be able to preside over the Monroe Superior Court, which is to convene at Forsyth Monday.

Judge H. A. Matthews, of Macon, presided over the Butts court for Judge Daniel, and it is likely that he again will preside for ihm next week.

WOMAN'S MISSION UNION CONVENES IN GAINESVILLE

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union, auxiliary to the Chattahoochee Baptist Association, was in session at the First Baptist Church here several days the past week, bringing a number of prominent women church workers to this city. It is said that the work of this union has become one of the most important in the denomination.

HALL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION TO MEET

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—One hundred delegates representing 65 Sunday schools of Hall County will come together in an interdenominational association, the first annual session to convene in this city next Tuesday morning for a two days' session. Hammond Johnson is county president, Henry H. Estes county secretary, and J. T. Telford, treasurer.

REVIVAL AT ELBERTON.

ELBERTON, Aug. 23.—The Rev. R. C. Cleckler, pastor, is conducting a series of meetings at the First Methodist Church. P. M. Boyd, of Nashville, is in charge of the singing.

Lineman Fights With Rattlesnake

Hemmed by Reptiles Under House in Thomasville—Desperate Battle.

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—Employee Rogers, of the Southern Bell Telephone Company, in this city, had an experience with snakes a day or two ago which was something of a thriller and which he is not likely to forget soon.

Rogers was sent out to C. B. Parsons' winter home near the country club to do some work on a broken telephone wire where he was trapped under the house by two rattlesnakes. There was nothing within reach that could be used for killing a snake so he had only to wait and see what would happen. After about a quarter of an hour one snake crawled away and Rogers slipped down and, grabbing a stick, attacked the one remaining. He managed to kill it, but only after a desperate fight, the snake coiling up and fighting for all it was worth. It was over five feet long and a bad looking enemy. The other could not be found.

Columbus Treasury Is Short of Funds

Assessor Issues Order That City Taxes Must Be Paid Promptly.

COLUMBUS, GA., Aug. 23.—As an evidence of the depleted condition of the city treasury of Columbus, it has been announced by the City Tax Assessor that all city taxes due September 1 and not paid promptly, steps will be taken at once to collect same, and to this end will issue executions against the property in order to collect.

While the date upon which the taxes are due is still several days off, there is already much dissatisfaction over the announced intention of the City Tax Collector. Heretofore when it was not convenient for property owners to pay their taxes when due, they were given more time and given the privilege of paying interest at the rate of 7 per cent. It is known that much dissatisfaction is going to be felt.

Cupid Hits Old Mark; Children Wed, Too

One Pair Experienced in Matrimony, While Other Had to Run Away.

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The northern part of the county was this week the scene of two weddings of interest, owing to the wide difference in age of the couples, together with their popularity.

At Cohutta the Rev. W. C. Haddock and Mrs. Mary Ann Hartley were married. The wedding proved "Uncle Billy" Haddock's fourth venture, while his bride, Mrs. Hartley, was marrying for the third time. The Rev. J. C. Parrott performed the ceremony.

On the same date Miss Nola Starks, of Concord, became the wife of William Crain, of Beaverdale, the ceremony being performed by 'Squire J. D. Brackett. Mrs. Crain is 14 and her husband is just two years her senior.

While the wedding of Miss Starks and Mr. Crain was a runaway match, witnessed by only a few intimate friends and coming as a distinct surprise, there were fully 100 friends assembled to witness the Hartley-Haddock nuptials.

Auto Traded for Horse Wouldn't Go

Doctor Calls on Other Man to Swap Back, and He Says Was Cheated Again.

ROME, GA., Aug. 23.—Dr. W. A. Wright's fondness for automobiles was the cause of trouble with A. W. Williman, of Cave Spring, which resulted in the arrest of the latter on a warrant charging him with cheating and swindling.

Dr. Wright has discovered that an automobile, which looks as good as new standing still, easily could be not worth anything running. It is alleged that William traded an automobile to the doctor which, after the deal, refused to move.

A horse and buggy was given in exchange. When the physician called upon Filliman to trade back, he was quite willing, but had sold the horse. He, however, agreed to give him another. This horse was defective, Dr. Wright alleges. The case will be aired in the September term of the City Court.

COLQUITT LIKELY TO VOTE $400,000 BONDS FOR ROADS

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—A bond issue of $400,000 soon will be submitted to the voters of Colquitt County. The money is for public roads. Prominent politicians are firm in the belief that the issue will carry.

CITY RESERVOIR TURNED INTO A SWIMMING POOL

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—Those of Cordele who like an occasional dip into the water to alleviate the suffering of the summer heat probably will have their desires satisfied during this season of next year.

It is proposed to convert the reservoir at the old waterworks station into a swimming pool when the new plant is constructed.

FLAG AND BIBLE ARE PRESENTED TO SCHOOL

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The Patriotic Order Sons of America of Dalton yesterday afternoon gave to the Dug Gap School a handsome American flag and a Bible.

Appropriate exercises marked the flag raising, Senator M. C. Tarver and the Hon. T. R. Ridley being among the speakers.

COTTON BUYERS REFUSE TO PAY TAX IN CORDELE

Local Men Claim Transients Are Given Advantage—Big Yield Increase in Crisp.

CORDELE, GA., Aug. 23.—Becoming dissatisfied over the tax of $1 per day recently assessed by the City Council on transient buyers, local cotton men have refused to pay the tax of $25 assessed them.

It is claimed that the tax on transients is so low that it practically gives them free rein to come into the city and buy up all the cotton. The local buyers state that they will not be satisfied until the tax on transients is made the same as was assessed them. Some of them paid the license and then recalled it. Cases were made against them by the police, and the matter will have to be settled by Mayor Harder.

The movement of cotton in the Cordele market is getting well under way, over 500 bales having been ginned and warehoused. Within the past several days the receipts have been increased rapidly, the farmers making a strenuous rush to get the crop gathered and on the market to take advantage of the very fair prices that now prevail. Not a bale has been held for better prices, and most of the staple is classing as good middling, with the prospects of the grades nolding up well through all of teh season.

Five thousand bales above the receipts of last year are expected in the local market, due altogether to the increased yield in Crisp County over last season.

TIFT COUNTY VETERANS TO HOLD ENCAMPMENT

TIFTON, Aug. 23.—The annual encampment of the Tift County Camp, U. C. V., will be held at Murrow Springs, four miles west of Tifton, on Little River, September 3.

Arrangements will also be made for holding a big barbecue on September 4, in which the Charlotte Carson Chapter, U. D. C., of Tifton, and the Sons of Veterans will assist the veterans.

Columbus Girl and Escort Near Death

Cling to Overturned Boat Until Rescued by Fishermen at Lanark, Fla.

LANARK, FLA., Aug. 23.—William Byrd, of Tallahassee, and Miss Leonora Goldin, of Columbus, Ga., narrowly escaped drowning when Byrd's swift little cat-rig sailboat was overturned by a stiff wind in the bay off the beach here.

They were rescued by fishermen after clinging to the overturned boat for more than an hour. They were almost exhausted when assistance reached them.

BRUNSWICK TO HAVE ONLY ONE ELECTION THIS YEAR

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 23.—Brunswick will have only one election this year, which will take place in November, when four members of City Council will be elected. From present indications it will be one of the quietest ever held in this city—in fact, it is doubtful if there will even be any opposition for the four Aldermanic places.

For society news of the South see page 10 of this section and the Society Section.

SUNBURNT SKINS NEED

CUTICURA SOAP

And Cuticura Ointment. For heat rashes, itchings, sunburn, wind irritations, redness and roughness of the face and hands, Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, has no rivals worth mentioning. No others do so much for the complexion, hair and hands.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address post-card "Cuticura," Dept. 13G, Boston.

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Shaves Himself 50 Years With Cleaver

Moultrie Pioneer Takes Pride In Neat Job He Does With Old Blade Whetted on Boot.

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—Hezekiah Adams, of this county, has shaved himself twice a week for 50 years, but never owned a shaving mug, a razor, a strop or a hone.

It is Mr. Adams' boast that he keeps his instrument used in lieu of a razor, an old cleaver—twice the size of a common razor—in the finest trim with the least trouble of any man in the country.

He wears old-style boots, and still has one pair which he purchased 26 years ago. Wishing to shave, Mr. Adams first puts on these boots. He then smacks the razor substitute back and forth along the leather leg of the left one for a minute or two. His next operation is to moisten his face with rain water—no perfumed soap for him—and then he just shaves.

Church to Reopen Big Night School

Columbus Baptists Make Decided Success—Enrollment More Than 100.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—The night school, which was conducted so successfully last year under the auspices of Rose Hill Baptist Church, will begin its second scholastic year Tuesday night, September 9.

In addition to the useful branches taught by the school last year, a department of theology has been added, of which Rev. J. C. Wilkinson, pastor of the church, will be the teacher. The school is absolutely free, and among the things taught is bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting, domestic science and a number of other useful occupations. More than one hundred were enrolled last term, and it looks as if the enrollment will be still larger next year.

STREET PAVING MATERIAL HAS ARRIVED IN ALBANY

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—Material for paving North and Pine streets from Washington to Front has been contracted for and work on the North street paving will begin as soon as the materials arrive. The Pine street paving will not be started until after the cotton season is over, as two large warehouses are located on the street. The brick will come from Chattanooga, while the slag and cement will move from Alabama points.

GENERAL MELDRIM MAY HEAD BAR ASSOCIATION

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—That General Peter W. Meldrim, of Savannah, will be elected the next president of the American Bar Association at its meeting on September 1 at Montreal, Canada, is thought by many to be very probable. For a number of years General Meldrim has been regularly attending the annual meetings of this association, and he has been regarded for some time as one of its most prominent members.

NEW SYSTEM OF ACCOUNTING TO BE GIVEN TRIAL

City Government of Savannah Will Adopt Method Recommended by Auditors.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—It is not likely that the new system of accounting, recommended by the auditors who recently checked up the city's books, will be put into effect before the first of the year. Likewise none of the changes recommended along with the new system will be made before the first of the year. Preliminary reports on the proposed new system, together with the several recommendations for changes in the methods of conducting the municipal government, are now in the hands of Mayor Richard J. Davant.

The most important change recommended, perhaps, is that a department of finance and accounts be established, with a Comptroller in charge. It is not the intention to have the office of City Treasurer abolished, but to let him perform merely the functions of a cashier. His office will be in addition to that of Comptroller, to which official he will be responsible. Neither is it intended to abolish the offiice of City Marshal, but to have an additional officer, that of City Collector, created. The Marshal will be the man in authority, and he will report directly to the finance committee of Council.

The auditors recommend the creation of a purchasing agent, who would be at the head of the department of purchases and supplies. This official would probably be directly under the Mayor and the finance committee.

In the matter of the exhausted cemetery funds, the auditors submit a complete report. They show that a fund was created for the purpose of perpetuating the care of lots in the cemeteries. Funds to the amount of approximately $12,000 should be on hand at this time, besides the interest that would have accrued during the years the fund has been in existence. This trust fund, it is claimed, was protected by ordinance, but the auditors show that the securities—stocks, bonds and cash—were diverted to the general treasury and spent.

It is understood that former Mayor George W. Tiedeman is to make a statement in a few days explaining what he knows about the cemetery trust fund matter. Mr. Tiedeman has called on Mayor Davant for certain information.

The investigation covered only the tenure of office of Mayor Tiedeman and his administration.

MELL BAPTISTS TO MEET.

TIFTON, Aug. 23.—The Union meeting of the Mell Baptist Association will be held with the Brookfield Church, Tift County, August 30-31. An interesting program has been arranged, the subject being: "Office and Work of the Holy Spirit."

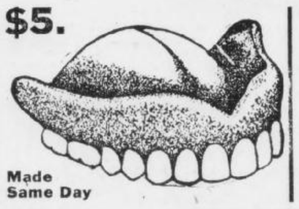
ALL DENTAL WORK GUARANTEED AT

DR. E. G. GRIFFIN'S

GATE CITY DENTAL ROOMS

24 1-2 Whitehall St. Phone M. 1708 — Over Brown & Allen's Hours: 8-6; Sundays 9-1

$5.



Made Same Day

OUR PRICES:
Bridge Work.... $4
Gold Crown..... $4
Gold Filling $1
Amalgam Filling .. 50c Up
Teeth Cleaned . $1 Up

Our guarantee means something. It is backed by our absolute responsibility and by 23 years of successful practice.

PAY ME FOR CURES ONLY

If you have been taking treatment for weeks and months and paying out your hard earned money without being cured, don't you think it is high time to accept DR. HUGHES' GRAND OFFER? You will certainly not be out any more money if not cured. Consultation and Examination are Free for the next thirty days.

If I decide that your condition will not yield readily to my treatment, I will be honest with you and tell you so, and not accept your money under a promise of a cure.

My treatment will positively cure or I will make you no charge for the following diseases:

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND URINARY TROUBLE, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, RUPTURE, ULCERS AND SKIN DISEASES CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

Eczema, Rheumatism, Catarrhal Affections, Piles and Fistula and all Nervous, Chronic and Private Diseases of Men and Women.

Newly contracted and chronic Cases of Burning, Itching and Inflammation stopped in 24 hours. I am against high and extortionate fees charged by some physicians and specialists. My fees are reasonable and no more than you are willing to pay for a cure. All medicines, the purest and best of drugs, are supplied from my own private laboratory. OUT-OF-TOWN MEN VISITING THE CITY, consult me at once upon arrival, and maybe you can be cured before returning home. Many cases can be cured in one or two visits.

CALL OR WRITE—No detention from business. Treatment and advice confidential. Hours 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. Sundays, 9 to 1. If you can't call, write and give me full description of your case in your own words. A complete consultation costs you nothing, and if I can help you I will.

DR. HUGHES, Opposite Third National Bank, 16 1-2 North Broad Street, Atlanta, Ga

Latest News of South Georgia

MURPHY HOLDS POSTOFFICE JOB TO END OF TERM

Scramble for Waycross Postmastership Temporarily Suspended. Dozen Candidates.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—An effort to discredit the Waycross postmaster, Charles E. Murphy, met with complete failure, it developed to-day, and instead of any grounds being made for a request for his resignation the investigation made locally has shown that he is stronger than before and not apt to be removed by the present administration until his term expires, which will be some time in 1916.

Despite this there are not less than a dozen active candidates for the position, some of them being among this section's best known men. The candidates known include former Mayor J. A. Jones, Dr. W. H. Buchanan, who is a relative of Congressman Charles G. Edwards, of the First District; Harvey C. Bunn, cashier of the Citizens Bank; County Commissioner G. P. Folks, Assistant Postmaster A. H. Morgan, J. D. Crawford, Transfer Clerk E. D. Carswell and J. E. T. Bowden. The latter denies that he is seeking the place, but it is generally known that he is in the race. He was Congressman Randall Walker's Ware County campaign manager, and also had charge of Woodrow Wilson's South Georgia headquarters at Waycross.

Information from Washington states that no charges have been made against the incumbent, Postmaster Murphy, but on the other hand it is known that his record is unusually good. He has the backing of a number of staunch Democrats, too, which will undoubtedly aid him in holding to the position until his term expires.

Congressman Walker to-day advised parties here that he is not considering anyone for the Waycross office at this time, which puts an end to the various rumors to the effect that the present postmaster had been asked to resign and that the Eleventh's Congressman had decided on his successor.

Waycross Council Asked to Explain

Claimed Number of Transactions Were in Violation of City Charter.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—It became known to-day that some time during September City Council would be requested for information of a number of transactions which have taken place within the past eighteen months, many of the alleged to have been in direct violation of the city charter. It is further alleged that a city employee while drawing his full time salary from the city looked after other work for which he was amply paid.

No namese have been disclosed as yet, and it is not known who will be mentioned when the request reaches Council. Some members of Council are inclined to demand an explanation of the published reports, but have not done so.

Pugilist Trains In Savannah Jail

Jeff Gaffney Keeps in Condition, Despite His Confinement in Prison.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Even though confined in jail, with the odds against him, Jeff Gaffney, the stocky little pugilist, who is held for trial in the Federal Court for violating the "white slave" law, has not forsaken his training.

Jeff's favorite pastime and mode of exercising is skipping the rope. The jail provides cold spray showers, which Jeff enjoys when he has limbered up his muscles.

Jeff is a lightweight. There are other prisoners who are in the heavyweight class. Jeff enjoys wrestling on the floor with these, with a few blankets for a mat, and sometimes one of the prisoners will muster sufficient courage to spar a few rounds with him without gloves.

Sale of Drainage Bonds Authorized

Finance Committee of Savannah City Council Is Given Power to Act.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Authority for the printing and sale of the $600,000 of drainage bonds has been vested in the Finance Committee by City Council.

This does not mean that the bonds will be placed on the market right away, however. First it will be necessary to advertise for the printing of the bonds, and then, after the contract has been awarded, it will be several weeks before they can be delivered to the committee.

It is the desire of the Drainage Commisison to start the work as soon after October 1 as possible. Council has been requested to prepare to sell the bonds as soon after November 1 as possible.

WARE COUNTY TAX RATE REDUCED 10 PER CENT

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Because of the big increase in the taxable property in Ware over last year's returns, the county tax rate was to-day reduced from 80 cents a hundred to 70 cents a hundred, with prospects bright for the same decrease another year. Approximately $50,000 will be spent by the county on road work this year, according to the budget an-

SCHOOLHOUSES UNFIT FOR GOATS SAY TEACHERS

Ware and Clinch County Institute Starts Campaign for County-Wide Taxation.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Stating that a great many of the buildings now in use as school houses in Ware and Clinch Counties would not make good goat houses, the joint institute of teachers of the counties named have just passed resolutions asking for the aid of the citizens in a campaign for better schools.

County-wide taxation for school purposes in place of the district taxation now in vogue is also urged, in view of the slight prospect of additional aid from the State for school purposes.

Condemnation of the recent State Legislature in providing prompt payment for all legislators, convict guards, and janitors of the public buildings, while not providing for the full payment of accounts due school teachers is also contained in the joint institute resolutions.

Ware County's report showed a big increase in school attendance, which is due to the steady campaign that has been and is still being waged for better rural schools. New buildings have replaced old ones in many of the school districts and there is a marked improvement in the work in Clinch. Within a few years it is claimed that every school district will be provided with the proper buildings, in view of the sentiment created in favor of general improvements for rural schools.

Fight Over Waycross Fire Department On

Council Likely to Pass Bills to Enlarge Brigade Over Chairman's Protest.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Unless Chairman H. Hengeveld, of the Police and Fire Committee, changes his opinion, a resolution providing to enlarge the Waycross fire department will be passed over his head. Two resolutions on the subject have been introduced in City Council, one by Alderman Beaton and the other by Alderman Morton.

Chairman Hengeveld claimed the city's financial condition would not permit any further expense for the fire department. Alderman Morton replied that when there was talk of making former Fire Chief Thomas Ballentyne, of Savannah, chief of the Waycross department, Chairman Hengeveld was willing to pay more money to get Ballentyne, and it seems the city is as well off now as when Mr. Hengeveld wanted to make the change.

The resolution for the employment of more men has enough votes to pass, according to Mr. Morton, but he will make no effort to get it through Council until Mr. Hengeveld makes a report.

Edwards Approves Military Highway

Savannah to Tybee Road Would Cost About $300,000—Congressman Sees Benefit.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—That the construction of a military highway from Savannah to Tybee, as advocated by Congressman Charles G. Edwards, would be of great benefit to the entire State, is the belief of J. N. King, well-known cotton factor of Rome.

At interior points the project is not looked upon as one that will be of benefit to Savannah alone, but is considered a movement on the part of the Government that would result in good to the State at large.

The proposed highway will cost approximately $300,000, but it is believed that it would be money well expended since all sections would be benefited.

LARGEST HOO HOO KITTEN IS TAKEN IN AT WAYCROSS

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—At an all-night concatenation of the Order of Hoo Hoo, Waycross came in for the unique honor of offering for initiation the largest kitten who ever applied to the order for membership. He was W. T. Brinson, whose weight is around 600. He was one of 35 kittens who emerged from the night's "horrors" a full-fledged cat. Mr. Brinson is the biggest Elk in the world, the biggest Knight of Pythias, and now ranks as the bigest Hoo Hoo.

EXTENSIVE IMPROVEMENTS ON BRUNSWICK HARBOR

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 23.—The extensive improvements and additional facilities for handling cargoes at both the Southern and Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic terminals, just completed, means a material increase in export business through the port of Brunswick. Colonel Dan C. Kingman, United Statse army engineer of this district, has recommended extensive improvements in Brunswick harbor. From the estimates the additional depth sought can be obtained at a reasonable cost as compared to the cost at other South Atlantic ports.

FIVE SCHOONER LOADS OF CROSSTIES AT BRUNSWICK

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 23.—The Joyce-Watkins Company, which entrede the local field in May, now has over 325,000 crossties on the local docks, which will be shipped in five schooners during the next two weeks. This will be one of the largest shipments to leave this port in some time.

Waycross to Vote on Government Change

Hard Fight To Be Made by Both Sides—Election October 4.

WAYCROSS, GA., Aug. 23.—Voters of Waycross on October 4 will decide whether to change the form of city government to a combination city manager-commission form or retain the aldermanic form with a board of aldermen of twelve members instead of six.

A special election will be held then and the registration books are now open. It is known a strong fight will be made by both sides, and at this time it is hard to predict which will win. The city manager form of government has much support, but it is doubtful if those in favor of the change will work as hard to get the new charter approved as the opponents will work to defeat the measure which the Legislature passed this year.

If the city manager plan is approved Waycross will be the first Georgia city to adopt it.

Gov. Slaton Vetoes Chatham Land Grant

Says Resolutions Had Not Been Properly Passed by the Legislature.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Savannahans were surprised to read that Governor Slaton had vetoed a resolution providing for land grants to the trustees of the Chatham Academy.

Governor Slaton explained he vetoed the resolution because it had not been properly passed. It relates to disposition of ungranted lands in the county. Acts passed in 1788 and 1856 vested in the Chatham Academy and the Union Society considerable ungranted lands in Chatham. The purpose of the resolution is to authorize these institutions to claim the lands under the old acts.

Famous Vessel in Brunswick Port

Old City of Washington Is Now Used as Barge—Rescued Marines From Maine.

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 23.—There is now in Brunswick harbor one of the most famous boats traveling on the Atlantic coast. The vessel is the old Ward liner, City of Washington, which was within 30 yards of the Maine when she was blown up in Havana harbor over fifteen years ago and whose captain was instrumental in saving scroes of lives after the explosion.

The liner has been converted into a barge and is now used for carrying lumber and coal from Atlantic coast ports to New York. All the machinery has been taken out of the boat and she is now towed by tug from port to port.

Ice Supply Gives Out at Brunswick

Machinery Breaks and Famine Is Feared—Waycross Relieves the Situation.

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 23.—Brunswick suffered a temporary ice famine yesterday morning due to the machinery at the local plant breaking down, and as a result the places of business that get their ice every day were compelled to wait some time before it could be furnished.

When it was discovered ice could not be had for four or five hours and that the people would suffer, a hurry call was sent to Waycross and a large supply was brought here on the next train.

After being closed down nearly ten hours the machinery was fixed and the first ice famine Brunswick ever had ended.

New Road Planned For Chatham County

Would Tap Trunk Lines of Three Big Railroads—To Be Built Within Year.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Tapping the trunk lines of three big railroads and running diagonally across a part of Chatham County to Effingham County, a fifteen-mile railroad is to be built within a year.

Eastern capitalists, it is said, are backing the enterprise. The complete right of way was all bought or options taken several months ago, and it is understood that the construction of the new line will begin in the near future.

SAVANNAH SHRINERS PLAN BIG RECEPTION

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Completing preparations for the reception of William W. Erwin, of Wheeling, W. Va., Imperial Potentate of the Shriners of North America, other members of the Imperial Divan of the Shriners and visitors from various temples, who will come to Savannah next month, the entire seventh floor of the Hotel Savannah has been reserved for them.

The Shriners of the Imperial Divan came in response to an invitation from Potentate Robert L. Travis, of Allee Temple, of this city, to attend a ceremonial session of that temple on September 12.

OVER 50 DIVORCE SUITS SET FOR HEARING IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Fifty-five divorce suits have been assigned for trial in the Superior Court before Judge Walter G. Charlton during the week which begins October 27. There are about an equal number of first and second verdict cases in the batch, which are divided among three days.

AUDITORIUM FOR SAVANNAH NOW ASSURED

Election for Bond Issue Will Win Out by Big Majority—Artillery May Co-operate.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—With a registration of 1,651 and with at least 75 per cent of those registered understood to favor the auditorium project, the success of the proposed bond issue to secure this important public utility is pretty well assured. It will require two-thirds of the registered voters to pass the bond issue.

The auditorium proposition is not being made an issue by either political faction, and for this reason it can be safely said that the majority of those who registered are in favor of an auditorium. Their interest in registering was not due to political pressure, but by a desire to see a needed improvement provided for.

The Chamber of Commerce and the retail merchants are responsible for a good portion of the registration. They carried on an active campaign for registration, and everybody, perhaps without exception, who registered as a result of their efforts will vote for the bonds.

If the issue is approved by the voters at the election on September 15, the city will have $200,000 with which to build an auditorium. The Chatham Artillery, which organization has made arrangements for the construction of any armory, is awaiting the outcome of the bond election before proceeding with its plans. If the issue is authorized, the city will in all probability make the artillery company a proposition regarding a joint auditorium-armory.

Of course, it will not be binding upon the Chatham Artillery to accept this proposition, and the impression is that it will not listen to the city unless the proposition is especially attractive. Most of the Artillery prefer having their armory unincumbered, and do not wish to subordinate their interests by allowing the city to join with them in the erection of an auditorium-armory.

But the city will not be dependent upon the Artillery. There will be enough money at the disposal of the city to purchase a lot and build an auditorium. According to an estimate already prepared, it would cost the city about $190,000 to go in with the artillery company.

The building committee of the Artillery has had several conferences recently with Captain Richard A. Davant, commandant of the organization and Mayor of Savannah, on the proposition. The committee is going ahead and getting everything in readiness for the construction of the armory, so that in the event the city's proposition does not suit them they can go ahead with the work. A contract has already been let for an armory to cost something over 70,000. The contractor is now waiting for instructions to start the work.

Beaton to Run for Mayor of Waycross

Announcement of Several Candidates Expected To Be Made in Few Days.

WAYCROSS, GA., Aug. 23.—While there have been no positive announcements so far for Mayor of Waycross, it has become generally known that within a short time, probably about September 1, Alderman Scott T. Beaton, of the Fourth Ward, will announce.

His announcement will be followed by several others. J. E. T. Bowden, former Mayor John M. Cox former City Clerk J. W. Strickland and ex-Alderman James Sinclair are all probable candidates.

The only aldermanic candidate to date is Dr. J. H. Lattimer, of the Second Ward, who is expected to announce in opposition to H. Hengeveld, the present Alderman of the Second Ward.

THEFT OF MONEY PACKET ADMITTED BY EXPRESSMAN

WAYCROSS, GA., Aug. 23.—It was stated to-day that no action would be taken in the case of B. E. Lakin, former night money clerk for the Southern Express Company at Waycross, until the Grand Jury meets in December. Lakin was brought to Waycross from Savannah yesterday and has made no further statement concerning the robbery than the one in which he admitted taking a money package.

The package taken was signed for by another employee of the Waycross office and contained $430.50.

RECORDER'S COURT TO OPEN IN WAYCROSS ON MONDAY

WAYCROSS, GA., Aug. 23.—The first session of Recorder's Court ever held in Waycross will be called to order Monday by the newly-elected Recorder, Charles L. Redding, former City Attorney.

The position was created by an act of the Legislature this year, and pays $50 a month. The duties of the Recorder in the past have been filled by the Mayor.

Jerome Crawley, a brother of Representative J. L. Crawley, succeeds Colonel Redding as City Attorney.

DENIES DISCRIMINATION CLAIMED BY SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—J. C. Whitney, president of the Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company, is in Savannah for a conference with the directors of the Board of Trade, to go over the allegations of discrimination against Savannah in favor of Jacksonville. Whitney asserted that there was no discrimination against Savannah. Except in a very few instances, he said, the freight rates to Jacksonville from Baltimore and other points in the North are higher than they are to Savannah.

HON. RALPH O. COCHRAN DELIVERS ∴ ∵ OPENING SPEECH AT CLAYTON, GA.

Candidate for United States Senate in Strong Address Outlines His Views On State and National Issues.

I am glad to be in Clayton and have an opportunity of addressing the people of Rabun County. You have heard the expression, "From Rabun Gap to Tybee Light," and it is fitting that in my campaign for the United States Senate I should deliver the keynote address in this county—the address that in a substantial measure carries my position on the questions that the people of Georgia will be interested in in casting their votes in the election next summer for a United States Senator—and this for the reason that I will show considerable activity in this campaign which will extend from the mountains to the sea.

It is further true that you people of Rabun live in a county that was established in 1819, almost a hundred years ago, and it bears the name of one of the Chief Executives of this State. This county has furnished many men in the public arena during its history who have been worthy sons and distinguished servants of the people.

I am here to-day in advocacy of my candidacy for the United States Senate. At the suggestion of some zealous friends, I entered this race some time ago. It is an undertaking worthy of any man's highest ambition, and I entered the field conscious of the great responsibilities that will rest upon me if elected, and also conscious of the difficulties that confront me in achieving this ambition.

I want to tell you here to-day that I am going to Washington. I expect to win this race, and I have every confidence in ultimate success. It is a big undertaking, but I believe that the sentiment of the people of Georgia to-day is in favor of electing a business man, a man in the best vigor of his life, and one who will endeavor to represent all people alike and all interests alike within the borders of the State.

It is true that probably in point of years, as I am only 39 years of age, I am the youngest man who has ever offered in the State of Georgia for this high position. During the progress of the campaign I will be confronted with the charge that I am too youthful, and further that I have not had sufficient experience. I want to say in advance in answer to any such criticism that may be raised, that many of the best political servants that this country has ever had have been men who have achieved success and attained high political positions early in life. With a long stretch of years before them they well used them, and therefore their services were of inestimable worth. As a matter of fact, it is common knowledge that any man is in his prime from thirty-five to fifty years of age. In fact, the Constitution of the United States requires that one must be only 30 years old to be eligible for the United States Senate.

I am frank to tell you that at no period in life do I anticipate ability for greater labor or clearer thought. It is true that I am inexperienced on many matters pertaining to state affairs, but I do insist that I am capable of learning and that I can count upon a reasonable number of years in which to be of service to my State and country if honored with this high position.

In advocacy of my candidacy, I place before the people of Georgia the proposition of electing a business man. I can properly be classed as one of the young business men of this State. It occurs to me that in these times of industrial growth and progress that the best thing that the people of any State can do is to elect a larger percentage of the men of the business circles of their State. If there is any question that requires business ability and skill to properly settle, I should say that those which pertain to the nature of the laws under which we shall live are pre-eminently the ones where business experience, understanding of the people's wants and the ultimate effect are the ones that literally demand the business man to pass upon. A slogan of the day in which we live is more business and less theory.

Prejudice and Demagogy to Play No Part in Campaign.

I want to tell you here and now that as far as I am concerned you will never see any trace of demagogy in anything that I may say or do. I shall deal frankly with the people of Georgia, and my campaign will be devoid of tricks and shrewdness. My candidacy will be put up to the people of Georgia strictly on its merits, without frills or deception. I am nothing more than a plain business man. I have no pre-eminent ability on any lines, but I assure you in advance that if I am elected I shall ever endeavor to follow the paths of right and do my duty. This campaign as far as I am concerned will never be marred with the demagogism that arouses the prejudices of the rich against the poor, the city man against the country man, or the young man against the old man. I shall take the position in the beginning and shall maintain it throughout the campaign that if I am elected I want to be elected by all classes of our citizens, and if elected I pledge you most sincerely and earnestly that I will represent all the people of Georgia and all the lawful interests within her borders.

Under my political canopy, so to speak, all classes of our citizens can rally. No prejudice has ever taken root in my bosom against the Jew in favor of the Gentile, against the Catholic in favor of the Protestant, against the Third party man in favor of the Democrat or against any man or class of men within our State who may belong to different parties, political faith, social circle or other relation contrary to that I occupy. I am frank to say that any man who harbors hatred for any class of our citizens is unworthy of the high position to which I now aspire. In truth, the bigot, the maligner of character, the small man, should have no place in shaping the policies and destiny of this country. The same sun shines on all of us alike, we are the children of the same Creator, and in its last analysis there is no great difference in us anyway.

I have always endeavored to be fair to all the interests of capital; I have always endeavored to be fair to the cause of labor; I shall endeavor to be fair in all of my relations with my fellow man, whether that relation be in private business matters or in public position, and if I go down in defeat contending for the wisdom of such a position I shall do so gladly and you shall have my approbation. It is well that I state on this occasion that I have never been aligned with any of the political factions of Georgia. During the past few decades when partisan heat reached high water mark I have always stood, since the early years of my manhood, as a free man and have acted on every election day in the way that I thought my vote would count for most looking to the best interests of the people of this State. We have been confronted at a number of elections with partisan politics and partisan issues. I thank God that we are now living in a more desirable day.

I am in favor of no class legislation. All legislation should be founded on the idea of the greatest good for the greatest number, irrespective of nationalities, wealth, education or anything else. However, if there is to be any class legislation, it should be in favor of the biggest class, and I should say that this class is composed of those of moderate means. If I ever cast a vote, if elected to the United States Senate, for any class whatsoever, it will be for the class here designated.

In my campaign for the Senate throughout the entire time I shall remain absolutely a free man. I shall not tie myself up with promises and political alignments. If elected I want to be a free man to represent the entire people of Georgia.

To men of experience and men of business affairs it is an accepted truth that no man need be a Croesus or an intellectual giant to represent well his people in legislative halls. What counts most is industry, integrity and sound common sense. If these elements are united in a candidate, he deserves well at the hands of his people. The making of laws and the administration of government is largely a business matter where good judgment and good conscientious service avail much.

Permit me to say also that God has endowed me with a degree of manhood and independence, so much so that I can tell you in all frankness and truth that if you do not see fit to elect me that it will be perfectly right and I assure you that no scars will be left behind over which I will brood through the coming years. In this independence and manhood that I declare to you, there is no place for mudslinging and assassination of character. I will not indulge in any of this nor will I permit any of my friends to do so if within my power to prevent. The campaign does not involve personal issues. The issues are more substantial and more worthy of the intelligence of the people of Georgia.

I stand for good government in all of its forms, and I shall ever be the enemy of those principles and practices that are opposed to its preservation and promotion. I shall ever stand for the principles of government that represent the best interests of the farmer as well as the merchant, and in general, the best interests of every man of every class of citizens within the confines of this great State. I was born and reared on a farm in Campbell County, and I feel that my years of association with the people of the rural districts, their needs and their interests, have made me to know once for all the important recognition that should be accorded to them. Then with the business experience that I have had elsewhere, as an education in after years, I feel that I can represent the entire people of this State with fellowship of feeling and wisdom and justice to all.

Economy in National Expenditures Insisted Upon.

At this time I want to put the people of Georgia on notice that, if elected as one of the United States Senators from Georgia, I will become in a measure a watchdog of your treasury. I have long been convinced that the practices that we are following of constantly raising taxes on property, businesses, corporations, and otherwise, should be stopped. There is hardly a session of the Georgia Legislature or a session of the United States Congress that some new form of taxing the people or else increasing the old forms is not projected. I ask you, in the name of reason, when and where will these agitations and practices stop? There is an eternal cry of more money, that our institutions are being throttled and that the State and nation are lagging in progress on account of insufficient funds. You know as well as I do that if the State of Georgia had five times as much revenue for the Legislature to spend that every dollar of it would be spent and they would still be in need of more money.

As a matter of fact, unless the increase of the burdens of taxation is not halted, taxes will become very oppressive to the people of this country. Take your State tax, your county tax, your city tax, your professional tax, your corporation tax, your inheritance tax, your income tax, your occupation tax, your road tax, your local school tax, your poll tax, and possibly others, and I tell you when any man gets through at the end of the year with paying these various amounts he has done a fairly good year's work to have made profit enough out of his business to meet them. The philosophy of all taxation, according to my thinking, is that instead of the everlasting increase in the forms of taxing the people and also the amounts, that the revenue of the State should only increase with the enhancement of property, more money coming into the State, and more citizens as our common population. With an increase of revenue along these lines, with a corresponding limitation of appropriations, our State and country will always be in a solvent condition and our people will be prosperous and happy.

I have all along been of the opinion that our people should not look too much for support to the Government under which they live. The greatest men that this State or country have ever produced have been men who have worked their way through difficulties and hardships. The best principle of government that can be advocated is that of throwing every citizen that is able-bodied upon his own resources. Therefore, the sentiment that is rapidly taking root in the States of this country that we should look more to the bounties of the Government is a cancer in the body politic and will ultimately prove fatal if it is not checkmated. History records the fact that the decline of the Roman Empire set in with the free corn that was distributed to the population. It has been estimated that at one time more than 300,000 people were fed at public expense. The manhood of this country has always been honest and hardy, and we have builded a republic that is the light of the world, and if it continues in its leadership the same manhood and independence that led us into freedom must care for the affairs of state through the coming years.

Opposes Unnecessary Legislation.

In our zeal for this cause or that cause that may be advocated, we should always be conservative in our thoughts, speech and actions. There is no business, much less a government, that can go forward in splendor and success where fits and spasms characterize those who are interested. Sanity should characterize every man's discussion of public questions, and I tell you that when your vote is cast on the side of conservatism you will seldom err from what is best for your family, yourself and your country.

It is true that State laws and National laws, in fact laws of all kinds, should be somewhat in the vanguard of actual practice and in a measure become high ideals for the manhood and womanhood of this State and country, as well as for the rising generation. However, we all know that laws that are not supported with public sentiment are of no avail and become nullities on our statute books.

I am further of the opinion that we are passing too many laws in our State and Nation. It seems that we have arrived at the point where we are law-ridden; almost unnumbered laws that everybody is presumed to know, but on the other hand there is no one who does know. There is much legislation that is transgressing the inalienable rights of property and person and much of that that is suggested tends too much this way. I took occasion not long ago to count the sections of laws that compose the Code of Georgia. It is astounding but true that there are approximately 8,000 sections of laws under which we are living this day. It has almost gotten to the point where a man's mind must be an encyclopedia to carry the innumerable laws governing cities, counties, State and Nation. It reminds one of the old adage that that people is best governed which is least governed.

Favors Federal Aid for Good Roads.

I want to say on this occasion that, if elected to the United States Senate, I shall stand at all times for the cause of good roads. If we ever expect to have great systems of roads traversing this entire country the National Government will have to take hold of the proposition. It strikes me that money appropriated for this purpose is just as much within the Constitution of this country as the right to appropriate funds to deepen the waterways and improve harbors. By navigation the products of the country are distributed and it is a method of travel. The public roads of the country are the avenues of distribution whereby the products of the country reach the centers and are ultimately distributed throughout the country and the world. Furthermore, public roads are used by everybody, and the benefits derived from appropriations for this cause are participated in by all the people of the country. What cause more equitable or more worthy could be mentioned for the appropriation of public funds? The additional circumstance associated with improved public roads is the enhancement of property. Down in my country it is generally estimated that property on a macadamized road is never worth less than double as much as property on a road that has not been so improved. Also think of the convenience, pleasure and general benefits that are derived by reason of the construction of such thoroughfares. Think of the benefits to your county or any county that might be mentioned that would be derived from the construction of such highways. In consideration of these substantial reasons, I shall ever be a friend to the cause of good roads.

High Cost of Living Caused by Not Producing Enough.

Any people or any legislative body has lost sight of the greatest cause when they do not cultivate and improve the great agricultural interests of their county and State. You may talk of laws that curb vice, you may ponder over measures that involve appropriations, you may consider well laws that look to the raising of revenue, but back and more fundamental and of far greater importance is the great proposition of production. What we need most is more corn, more cotton, more of all the farm products, more manufacturing, more businesses that produce, businesses that feed and clothe the world. That is to-day, in my opinion, the prime reason for the high cost of living. We are just not producing enough.

The people of Georgia will never reach that point of prosperity that is most desired until they have learned to produce enough to get the other man's money and then have enough to live on so as to save them from the condition of having to buy the other fellow's products. I trust that I will live to see that day when by education and disposition the people of Georgia will learn and desire to produce more than they consume in the way of farm products, that splendid day when cotton, the staple product, will be the surplus crop, that new era when every town and hamlet can boast of numerous manufacturing enterprises, when Georgia-made goods are sold around the world. Let us make the people of other States become the buyers of our products, and we the recipients of the splendid income.

If elected to the United States Senate I shall always do the best that in me lies to get increased appropriations for the educational interests of the various States of this Union where agricultural training is taught. The National Government, in wisdom, through the Agricultural Department, has started up a system of education and experiment along agricultural lines which will prove, I have no doubt, to be of the greatest service to the material interests of this country of any department known to the National Government. It will be my purpose to work for and to vote for all measures and appropriations which look to the improvement and enlargement of this great cause in the dispensation of National funds.

If I am elected to the United States Senate I want to pledge you here and now my unswerving support of all measures that look to the general betterment of humanity. We must live in lines with the humanity of man manifested in its most splendid form. Laws that are humanitarian in their nature, just in their spirit, broad in their conception of human rights will always find a friend in me. The old idea has long since passed away that every man should live for himself. Thank God that we live in a better and brighter day when the living and the hopes of humanity are upon a more just basis and there is recognition of the higher laws of nature and the beneficent conceptions of the Creator of us all.

As an incentive to high purpose and lofty achievement, we should bear in mind that the names and memories of those only are revered and live in history who lived and worked to do something for others. Selfishness, living for self, has never made any man great in the estimation of his fellowman. The world has gotten rid of most of the tyranny that has characterized it in the past, but the tyranny of brain and the tyranny of worth should continue and will continue as long as civilization endures. Ambition to do something for others as well as self should characterize the life of every man.

Favors Exploiting the Great Resources of Georgia.

There is another matter that I wish to speak of to which I will give as much of my ability and time as possible if elected. I refer to the advertising of the resources of Georgia and the entire Southland. This advertising by one in this exalted position by speech and otherwise can be made of inestimable worth to this State and section. Georgia and the entire South needs more capital and more people. Any man who is in favor of any law or laws that tend to antagonize capital and the institutions in which it is invested is an enemy of his State. In addition, what county in Georgia would not be better off if it had twice as many people in it as it has to-day? A multiplication of population means better roads, better schools, better churches, better mail facilities and better communities in general. These ends are worthy of note and should always receive the attention of the representatives of this State in these high positions.

If elected to the United States Senate, it will be my purpose to perform well what might be termed the small duties incident to this high office. Those who might desire positions either for themselves or their boys, who might care to have information concerning any matters in the city of Washington pertaining to the Government, or local matters, those who desire appropriations for this purpose or that purpose in their respective cities and districts, in general those who want ready service of their representative in getting something or doing something where their United States Senator can be of service to them, I will be the man to call upon. I pledge you in advance that no considerable amount of my time will be taken up in the study of foreign questions or the preparation of what might be termed big speeches, but, on the other hand, I will try to inject as much business in the situation as possible and serve in a business way the people of Georgia, not only consulting such matters as I hear mentioned, but in promoting and voting for legislation which will promote the general interests of the State, as well as the country at large.

I am deeply interested in the cause of education in all of its forms. Our public schools are the greatest institution that has become a part of the government of this State. Public schools touch every man's interest, and in them is involved the element of an elementary education which means better citizenship and more happiness on the part of our entire population. Almost as essential are the institutions of higher learning of this State. Also our colleges of technical training which prepare the young man and young woman to make a living have probably become the most popular institutions in the way of higher training that we have in the State. The old idea was to educate the smart boys in classical training either for the ministry, medicine or the law. This conception of higher learning is in a measure passing away, and technical training is largely the slogan of the times in which we live.

I do not know how you people in Rabun County feel about it, but I imagine that you have about the same feeling and sentiment that we people of Fulton have, as well as the people of all the other counties of this State—that is the constantly recurring panics that disturb and distress the business interests of this country. I do not know whether or not any man can assign with accuracy the immediate causes of these recurring panics. However I am inclined to believe that the most prominent cause is the drastic reform legislation that sets up about every eight or ten years. I am in favor of a certain amount of reform. We all know that in the great economy of nature change must take place either for good or ill. The country that does not improve its condition must of necessity retrograde. On the other hand, I am opposed, and I shall always vote accordingly, to reforms and reform measures which come in bunches and have the inevitable effect of unsetting the entire business of this State and country. As far as I am concerned I want a little rest so that I may have an opportunity of accumulating some of the world's goods while in the vigor of manhood, and not look too much to the eradication of evil and the improvement of our institutions and country on the Utopian idea for our children and our children's children. As I see it, the prescription we now need most is the rest cure.

We often lose sight of the untold good that has been accomplished by the people of our day and our fathers before us. In fact, we live in the best times and we constitute the greatest people that this world has ever seen. Six thousand years of recorded history does not find a parallel. There is not so much ill in man and the human race as we are often led to believe. I have often said that the sorriest man in any community is a pretty good fellow after all. Think of man in this day of enlightenment and the society in which we live. He works hard and usually by the sweat of his brow he provides for wife and children. He is interested in educational advantages of his family, he looks forward with a feverish mind to the ultimate condition when no longer he will be the mainstay of these loved ones. We are rich in charity, we are humane in the treatment of those who are unfortunate, our ideals are high, and we are recipients by reason of our intelligence and industry of most of the good that the world affords.

Another point that I wish to bring out: Too much experiment is always dangerous. The people of any State or country that is experimenting with this law, this institution, and this new idea are apt to fall into the ways that will lead them into departures from the fundamentals of their institutions which probably will prove dangerous and fatal. It is always better to let other people, other States and other men, whether in business or affairs of state, experiment and ascertain the truth, and then the wisdom of its adoption becomes clear and of no loss to that people who follow in the light of this experience. Of course some experiment along sane and conservative lines is good for all people, and if such is not indulged in, they are liable to become laggards and drones. However, the people of Georgia should never become distinguished as a people of experiment, and the State should never be known as an incubator of new ideas.

If I am elected to the United States Senate, I shall always stand for clean government, wise laws and pure administration. We live in a country where in theory every man's chance is alike. God has made us unequal in body and mind, but under the Constitution and laws of the United States, as drawn by those immortal men, the fathers of this country, whose names shall live as long as recorded history is preserved, imbedded in that great instrument and laws, the general principle of equal rights to all and an equal chance in the struggles of this life. No man should ask for more than justice and an equal chance. No man should be willing to surrender to any other man his equal chance and justice in the race of life. I shall always be opposed to plunder in any form and shall ever stand for the best laws to perpetuate and preserve the Government as founded by the fathers of this country.

However, it is true that it does seem like something is wrong at times with our institutions when one man in the short space of a lifetime can accumulate a billion of dollars. We have in these United States one-sixteenth of the population of the world and we possess one-fourth of its entire wealth. Such a splendid commentary upon the people who in only a century or two past found the vast expanse of our country a wilderness and here the institutions and wealth to which we are heirs.

Amid the masterful strides made by this country within the past fifty years, on account of a serious handicap, the South is just now coming into her own. Georgia and the entire Southern States are rich in natural resources—we have the climate, we have the soil, we have the minerals, we have the water power, and, thank God, we have the brain and the industry that will yet make of our Southland the fairest spot beneath the sun.

There is no use for history except the lessons that it teaches. We are living in the light of many experiences of the past, and as the light of these experiences falls upon our pathway our days will be splendid and our accomplishments beyond the dreams of men.

I love Georgia and her people. Born within her borders, educated within her institutions, associated with Georgia people, I bear to her the warmth of sympathy and childish affection that I trust will continue unabated during the time that I shall live. The mountains lifting their lofty peaks amid the skies, the old red hills of Georgia, dear to the heart of all, the tableлands, rich and fertile, and extended in area, her rippling streams in music wind their way to the mighty sea, seven out of the nine climates with which the Nation is characterized, I am devoted to this people and this mighty State.

With renewed purpose, and a common ambition, let us press forward in the mighty causes of civilization and the accomplishment of higher ideals.

(Adv.)

SOCIETY NEWS of the SOUTH

Waycross

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Mrs. V. L. Stanton and Miss Mary Stanton have returned from a visit to Atlanta and points in North Georgia.

Miss Clifton Wing, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. B. Thorpe, has returned to her home in Macon.

Mr. and Mrs. Deasau Bunn, en route to their home at Fairfax from St. Simons Island, where they spent the summer, were guests of relatives in Waycross this week.

Miss Jessie Lou Stanley visited relatives in Brunswick this week.

Miss Leila Paschall, who has been visiting in Atlanta, will spend some time in Rome before returning home.

Mrs. R. E. Brown and children have returned from a visit to relatives in Scranton, Pa.

Mrs. J. F. Dukes and children visited in Savannah this week.

Misses Viola and Ruby Clemens are visiting relatives in Savannah.

Following a short visit in New York City, Mr. L. Volney Williams will join Mrs. Williams and children in Michigan for an extended visit. Mr. Williams sailed for New York from Savannah Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gaston Lewis, of New York, are in the city for a visit of several months.

Mrs. E. J. Seay and Miss Elwood Seay have returned from a visit to Columbia, S. C.

Mrs. J. P. Moody, of Florida, is the guest of Mrs. W. T. Seaman.

Mrs. A. J. Miller left Thursday for Wilmington, N. C., where she will visit relatives.

Mrs. M. Z. Hinnant and children have returned to Wilmington, N. C., after a visit to friends and relatives in Waycross.

Mrs. C. R. Powrie and little daughter, Jean, of New York, arrived Wednesday to join Mr. Powrie and will make Waycross their home.

Members of the Friday Club were entertained yesterday by Misses Lucile and Susie Sutton.

Miss Aline Jeffers is expected home shortly from a visit to her sister, Mrs. John D. Tucker, in Birmingham, Ala.

Crawfordville

CRAWFORDVILLE, GA., Aug. 23. Miss Virginia Butler, of Madison, is the guest of Miss Frances Burgess. Several delightful entertainments have been given in her honor among them receptions by Misses Melton and Asbury.

Miss Mattie Jordan, of Atlanta, spent a few days here the past week the guest of Miss Blanche Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Golucke, Mr. A. G. and Mrs. R. W. Golucke and daughters, Anna Catherine and Mary Gordon, are spending the week at Hot Springs, N. C.

Miss Lillian Asbury leaves this week for Elberton to visit Miss Allen, who was one of Miss Asbury's attractive guests last week.

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Owens and daughter, Alleene, of DeLand, Fla., are spending some time here with friends.

Colonel and Mrs. J. Frank and daughters, Cornella and Nell, of Dothan, Ala., spent several days here as the guests of Mr. W. P. Reid.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Leary and Guy, Jr., have returned to Augusta after spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Gee. Miss Martha Griffith returned home with them.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Anthony and Mr. L. P. McCord, of East Palm Beach Fla., are here visiting.

Miss Mary Fannie Harris, of Augusta, is the guest of Miss Emma Chapman.

Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Gunn have returned from Augusta and Atlanta, where they spent several days last week.

Colonel and Mrs. J. A. Beasley are visiting in Atlanta.

Mesdames J. V. Andrews, J. H. Callahan and W. C. Andrews, all of this city, are spending some time at Borden Wheeler, Ala.

Miss Minnie Olive Park will entertain a house party this week. Those invited are Misses Mary Holden, of Athens; Anita Sanford of Augusta, and Kathleen Kendrick, of Sharon.

Milledgeville

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Joseph Cleveland Cooper entertained on Thursday evening in honor of her sister, Miss Carrie Talbot. Hearts-dice was played, after which a delightful salad course was served. Those present were the Misses Susan Myrick, Jesse Allen, Maggie Bivins, Floride Allen, Isabella Allen, Pauline Nisbit, Helen Maxwell, Hattie Pottle, Mary Amos and Francis Conn, Edwin Allen, James Sibley, Erwin Sibley, John Sibley, Malcolm Flemister, Charles Conn, Henry McAuliffe, Charles Brown, Arthur Carr, Stewart Wootten and James Clark, of Atlanta.

Miss Marguerite Joseph entertained on Monday at a suit-case shower for Miss Katherine Scott, who leaves soon for an extended trip through the North. Each lady brought some gift for the honoree.

Mrs. Frank Bone entertained at her home on Greene street Wednesday afternoon in honor of Miss Francis Stevens, of Macon, when "42" was played, after which a salad course was served. Those present were Mrs. W. T. Garrard, Mrs. Y. A. Little, Mrs. Cleve Cooper, Mrs. Lodrick Jones, Mrs. Culver Kidd, Mrs. John Barrett, Mrs. I. C. Case, Mrs. E. A. Tignor, Mrs. E. E. Bass, Miss Carrie Talbot, Miss Beuna Barrett and Miss Annie McKinley.

Another social event of the week was a party given by Miss Katie Cline on Tuesday afternoon, her guests being Mrs. L. M. Jones, Jr., Mrs. Harry Bone, Mrs. Frank Bone, Mrs. Logan Griswold, Mrs. Bee Bethune, Mrs. George Brantley, Miss Francis Conn, Miss Frances Stevens, Miss Pauline McKinley, Miss Annie McKinley and Miss Hattie Pottle.

Covington

COVINGTON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Clarence Terrell entertained at the Lyric Theater on Thursday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Alve Cooper, of Savannah, who is the guest of Mrs. J. O. Cooper. Mrs. Terrell's guests included Mrs. Alva Cooper, Mrs. J. O. Cooper, the Misses Eloise Cooper, Ida and Annie Higgins, Eleanor Butler, Frances Henderson, Hyda Heard and Bonner Sims, Mrs. H. D. Terrell and Mrs. J. Bain Terrell.

Miss Louise Whitehead entertained on Tuesday evening at her home on Monticello street with a progressive conversation party in honor of her house guest, Miss Ella Mae Ellis, of Macon. The guests included the Misses Natalie Turner, Annie Pauline Anderson, Lartrelle Meadors, Dorothy Lee, Ruth Weldon, of Talladega, Alabama; Frances Dearing and Marion Sherman, James Lester, Jim Wells, Rufus Franklin, Charles Ellis, Guy Robinson, Candler Harwell, Ivey Smith, Lamar Smith, Reginald Robinson, Perrino Dearing, Fred Bush and Guy Rogers.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Fowler, Miss Louise Fowler, Mrs. J. W. Stephenson, Miss Eva Stephenson, Mrs. Lillian Stephenson Weaver, Roy Stephenson, of Tampa, Fla., and Hugh Wright were among those from Covington who attended the Duffy-Stephenson wedding, which was a pretty event of Thursday, taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Parker Ernest Duffy at Morrow.

Mrs. Thomas Berry entertained a number of relatives last week at a family reunion, the guests including Mr. and Mrs. John P. Blanton, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Harris, of Alabama; Mrs. J. W. Loyd, of Dawson, Ala.; Mrs. R. L. Tee, of Mansfield; Mrs. H. B. Thacker, of Oxford, and Mrs. A. J. Blanton.

Moultrie

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—Miss Lucile Autrey entertained the members of the Entre Nous Club on Saturday morning. Assisting Miss Autrey were her sisters, Mrs. Roy Autrey and Mrs. Clyde Taylor.

Complimentary to her sister, Miss Mary Walker, of Atlanta, Mrs. T. W. Maddox entertained at a "42" party on Tuesday morning.

Mrs. A. W. Chase entertained a number of her friends on Thursday afternoon at a domino party.

Sylvania

SYLVANIA Aug. 23.—Miss Nelle Davis entertained at cards on Tuesday morning for the Misses Willie Christie and Lucile Evans, of Savannah. First prize, a box of stationery, was won by Miss Ruby Mauldin. Those present were the Misses Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, of Atlanta; Bertha Pearson, Maud Hilton, Juanita Williamson, Ruby Mauldin, Kate Patrick, Lucy Morel, Sadie Lovett and Esther, Ruth and Kathleen Mimms.

Mrs. John C. Hollingsworth entertained the Ladies' Culture Club on Tuesday afternoon. The program consisted of a study of "Famous Georgians."

A party enjoying an outing at Brannen's Bridge on Wednesday included Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Powell, Mesdames A. T. Perkins, Lecie Davis and J. W. Overstreet, the Misses Mattie Zoe Mallory, Willie Christie, Lucile Evans, Nelle Davis and Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, Julian Cooper, Willie Robbins, Spencer Powell, Bates Lovett and Edward Overstreet.

Mrs. R. F. Jarrell, Jr., entertained the Civic Club on Wednesday afternoon. An interesting program was rendered, followed by delicious refreshments.

Mrs. J. C. Hollingsworth entertained at cards on Tuesday evening for Miss Mattie Mallory and Paul Mallory, of Clyo. Those present were the Misses Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, of Atlanta; Miss Mattie Zoe Mallory, of Clyo; Miss Ruby Mauldin, Miss Nelle Davis, Paul Mallory, of Clyo; Abe Greenberg, Spencer Powell, Edward Overstreet and Bates Lovett.

Miss Margaret Flood

of Savannah, one of the popular members of the school set. Miss Flood is also taking an active part in the girl scout movement, being captain of a patrol.

Tallahassee

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 23.—Mrs. H. T. Felkel entertained informally at her home on College avenue Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. W. E. Shackelford, of Jacksonville, was a recent visitor to the Capital City.

Governor Park Trammell left Thursday for a ten days' vacation at Waynesville, N. C., where he joined Mrs. Trammell.

Mrs. S. D. Chittenden at her beautiful home on Park avenue on Wednesday morning entertained at auction bridge in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Wight, of Cairo, Ga., who is visiting her for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Winthrop returned Thursday from Atlantic Beach, having made the return trip from Tallahassee in their automobile.

The regular Thursday night's dance was enjoyed by the society folk at the Elks' Club.

Pensacola

PENSACOLA, Aug. 23.—Pensacola society was much interested in the marriage on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock of Mrs. Mary Dallas Strong, formerly a social favorite in Pensacola, to William F. Quicksall, which took place in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Strong recently visited Mrs. Albert Hyer at her beautiful Bayshore residence, Virginia Lodge, and while here was entertained by Mrs. E. J. Wilson and many other of her old friends.

Mrs. W. H. Northup, who has been spending the past month in the North Carolina mountains, in the beautiful Sapphire Country of Saluda and Waynesville, returned home on Tuesday. Mrs. Northup stopped a few days in Atlanta, where she met Mrs. Pat McHugh, formerly Mrs. Pebley, of Pensacola, at the Hotel Majestic.

Miss Madge Cushman, of Knoxville, Tenn., accompanied by her nephew, Robert Daniels, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Daniels, arrived Saturday on a two weeks' visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton H. Cushman.

The North Carolina mountains are a favorite summer resort for Pensacolans, and at Waynesville this summer there is quite a colony. Mrs. C. W. D'Alemberte, who is now in Rome, Ga., and Mrs. W. H. Northup spent some time at Waynesville, and Mrs. Smithwick, two children, William and Mary, and Mrs. Smithwick's sister, Miss Verren, are now there. Mrs. Alice Aylward, who formerly made her home here and who was recently the guest of Mrs. J. J. Hooton, is also at Waynesville.

Griffin

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Carlton Jones entertained her bridge club Tuesday afternoon at an al fresco party. On Wednesday afternoon she was hostess at a domino party.

Miss Mamie Slade and Miss Carrie Slade were hostesses Wednesday evening at a lawn party in honor of their guests, Miss Irene Dempsey, of Cedartown, and Miss Inez Hyman, of Cordele.

Miss Mary Bass was hostess at an automobile party to Barnesville in honor of Misses Mamie and Carrie Slade, Irene Dempsey and Inez Hyman.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Baxter were hosts at a lawn party Friday evening in compliment to their guest, Miss Jessie Robertson, of Forsyth.

On Wednesday morning Miss Olive Boyd was hostess at a rook party in honor of her guest, Miss Mary Watkins, of Atlanta.

Mrs. James Nutt entertained Monday afternoon at a bridge party in honor of Miss Katherine Wooten, of Washington.

Mrs. John Henry Newman entertained fifty ladies Friday afternoon at a theater party especially in compliment to her sisters, Mrs. H. L. Wheat, of Macon, and Mrs. Idus C. Doe, of LaGrange.

Mrs. James Kimbrough entertained Wednesday evening at a dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burr, of Atlanta. Invited to meet Mr. and Mrs. Burr were Mr. and Mrs. John B. Mills and Mrs. James Mills.

Mrs. Charles Murray and Mrs. Frank Ingram were hostesses Wednesday morning at a sewing party in compliment to Mrs. James Porter and her daughter, Mrs. Everts, Miss Della Porter and Miss Laura Porter, of Houston, Texas.

Little Miss Ethelyn Ison entertained twenty of her little friends Friday morning in honor of the fifth birthday.

Master Ernest Carlisle was host Wednesday afternoon in celebration of the fourth anniversary of his birth.

Little Miss Lily Rivers Griffin entertained a party of her young friends celebrating the fourth anniversary of her birth.

Cordele

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—A congenial party of young people enjoyed a picnic and fish fry Monday afternoon on the Flint River, the affair being in honor of the Misses Ruth and Clara Mae Jefferson, of Columbus.

Mrs. I. J. Lamb and daughter, Miss Mae Lamb, entertained Tuesday afternoon in honor of Miss Grace Dill, of Ocilla, the guest of Mrs. P. C. Dill and Misses Jefferson.

Mrs C. E. Todd was the hostess Monday afternoon to the Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church.

Durham

DURHAM, Aug. 23.—Misses Margaret and Bessie Erwin, with W. A. Erwin, "cotton king" of North Carolina, gave an elaborate dance at the Durham Country Club in honor of guests who were attending a house-party at "Hillcrest," the Erwin home. It was the most brilliant social affair of the season and was attended by young folks prominent in society through the State.

The guests of honor were Miss Agnes Tinsley Harrison, Atlanta; Miss Sadie William, Augusta; Miss Katherine Overman, Washington, D. C.; Hamilton Jones, Charlotte; Hugh Thompson, Raleigh, and Terry Lyon, Fayetteville.

West Point

WEST POINT, Aug. 23.—Miss Mary Booker entertained at rook Thursday evening in honor of Mrs. John T. Ivey and Miss Eloise Sikes, of Luverne, Ala. After the game sandwiches and tea were served.

Dublin

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—Miss Ruth Toole, of Macon, was the guest of honor at an auction bridge party which Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Toole gave Tuesday evening. Playing were the Misses Ruth Toole, Mabel Harvard, Dorothy Hooks, Mamie Ramsay, Frances Webb and T. W. Hooks, O. G. Sparks, J. B. Hicks and W. R. Brigham.

A much-enjoyed affair of the week was the auction bridge luncheon which Miss Dorothy Hooks gave on Wednesday for Miss Ruth Toole. Miss Hooks' guests included Mrs. E. S. Street, Mrs. J. M. Finn, Mrs. T. R. Ramsay, Mrs. H. P. Shewmake, Mrs. A. J. Toole and Miss Frances Webb.

Of much interest socially will be the wedding of Miss Mary Lee Randall, of Grovania, and Richard P. Hicks, of Wrightsville, next Tuesday evening at the home of the bride's parents in Grovania. A party of friends from Dublin and Wrightsville will go over for this event. A reception will follow the ceremony.

The visitors in the city were honorees at a dance on Wednesday evening at East Lake. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Graham, Miss Lucy Gibson, of Macon; Miss Pearl Dowling, of Lake City, Fla.; Miss McLendon, Miss Otelia Gibson, of Macon; Miss Algie Prince, Miss Leonora Starr, Robert Hightower, Ramsay Fuller, S. Dixon, Paul Williamson, Dewitt Varnadoe, Cliff Holcomb, Clay O'Neal, Alex Blackshear, Claude Brantley, Alex Burch, Patrick Roach and William Brunson.

Senoia

SENOIA, Aug. 23.—Miss Lena Hand entertained a large party of Shorter and Wesleyan girls at a party at her home Monday evening.

The Methodist Missionary Society was royally entertained Monday afternoon by Mrs. H. B. Sasser.

The caming party given at Starr's Mill by Misses Lois and Annie Lou Hardy the past week was one of the most enjoyable events of the year. Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hardy chaperoned the party. The out-of-town guests included Misses Helen Carpenter, Newnan; Elizabeth Baker, Macon; Minnie McMichael, Buena Vista; Sallie Thompson, Hawkinsville; Mary and Lena Render Greenville; Messrs. Tom Tolleson, Fayetteville; Kendal Fielder, Cedartown; Albert Jelks, Hawkinsville; Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Freeman and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hunter.

Miami

MIAMI, Aug. 23.—Miss Josephine Bravo, one of the first children born in Miami, was united in marriage on Monday night to Dallas D. Hoffman, of this city. The ceremony took place at the bride's home in the presence of a number of friends and relatives and was followed by an informal reception.

One of the pretty dinner-dances of the summer was that given Tuesday night at the beach by Clement and Bazil Brossier, in honor of the Misses Frances and Jane Tatum, two of the charming buds of the city, who leave soon for an exclusive girls' school in the North. The guests were the Misses Frances and Jane Tatum, Jewel Green and Ruth Rose, and Victor Moffat, Merle McLeannon and B. B. Tatum. The affair was held at the Casino at the beach.

Complimentary to the Misses Maude and Alice Reilly, of New Haven, Conn., who are visiting their brother, John B. Reilly, a luncheon was given at the Dade Club by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Coleman Romfh. Roses were used for the decorations. Covers were laid for the Misses Reilly, Miss Flavia DeCamp, R. B. Black, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Reilly, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McDonald and Mr. and Mrs. Romfh.

A Cooncan Club has been organized by a group of the young women of the city. Miss Cornelia Leffler was hostess at the last meeting of the club. Those present were the Misses Myrtle Rose, Hilda Baile, Christine Worley, Ruth Rose, Helen Skelly and Mildred Taylor.

Mrs. Everett George, Sewell is spending the latter part of the summer at Asheville, N. C., where many other Miami people are stopping.

Jackson

JACKSON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. L. M. Crawford complimented her guest, Mrs. James Crawford Nutt, of Griffin, with a "42" party on Thursday morning.

The young men of the city gave a moonlight picnic at Indian Springs on Tuesday in honor of Miss Sarah Wylie, of Cartersville, the guest of Miss Mary Land.

In compliment to her niece, Miss Julia Collier, of St. Louis, Mrs. Levi entertained four tables of bridge on Wednesday evening.

Tampa

TAMPA, Aug. 23.—Dr. William Monroe Rowlett and Miss Gregory Walker, daughter of Mrs. Julian Walker, of New York City, will be married at the cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York on September 10. Dr. Rowlett's brother, Calus Rowlett, and the bride-elect's brother, Hewitt Walker, will be best men and will be the only attendants. Dr. Rowlett and his bride will take a trip to Canadian resorts before returning to this city about October 1 to make their home. Dr. Rowlett is one of the young physicians of the city and is very popular. Miss Walker is related to many families here, and she and her mother spent last winter here, taking a house on the Boulevard. This summer they have been spending in the Berkshires. She is an accomplished pianist.

Two well-known young couples of Winter Haven, one of the fine resorts and orange grove towns of interior Florida, are to be married at the same time on September 14. They are Norman Wyckoff and Miss Laura McCrary and Leslie Winston Anderson and Miss Kathleen Winston Perder. The double ceremony will take place at the First Christian Church of Winter Haven, and the young couples will go for a wedding trip together.

Mrs. A. B. Gerner, of this city, is chaperoning a house party at Wall Springs. The party is made up of Tampa and Dade City people, and they are enjoying the bathing at this resort. Among the Dade City members of the party are the Misses Lulu and Ethel Cochrane. A number from Dade City motored over to the camp at various times during the last week or so to spend a few days.

Buchanan

BUCHANAN, Aug. 23.—The recital and reading given at the Methodist Church Tuesday evening by Miss Shirley Sutherlin, of Cave Springs, was enjoyed by all present. Miss Sutherlin has accepted a position with the Southern Female College at LaGrange next year.

Tifton

TIFTON, Aug. 23.—Miss Aline Shipp entertained in honor of her guests, Misses Julia Williams and Florence Parks, with a Japanese party Monday night. Those present were the Misses Julia Williams, Florence Parks, Annie Howard, Marie Garbutt and Vernice Kennedy, James Pate, Roy Thrasher, Robert Hall, Louie Monk, Watson Holmes, Joe Gammon and Mark and Conrad Shipp.

Miss Josie Golden entertained Friday afternoon at four tables of salmagundi in honor of her guest, Miss Katie Harrell, of Doerun.

Miss Annie Howard entertained Tuesday night in honor or Miss Aline Shipp's house guests.

St. Augustine

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 23.—A pretty event of the week was the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Josephine Masters and Marcus Pappy at the Cathedral Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. Father James O'Brien officiating. Both are among the best known young people of the city and are members of old Florida families.

Captain and Mrs. Henry Marcotte left yesterday for Williamsport, Pa., where they will spend several weeks.

Miss Nell Edmonds and her mother have gone to Miami, where they will reside in the future. They were social favorites here.

Miss Ruth Green, a popular member of the younger society set, has returned from an extended visit with friends in Tallahassee.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald White have returned from a several months' honeymoon trip spent in England, Mr. White's old home. Mr. White is a well-known banker. Mrs. White was formerly Miss Elizabeth Frazer, of this city. Their wedding was a social event of the early summer.

Mrs. G. H. Bruer has returned from Syracuse, N. Y., where she visited her daughter, Mrs. Ernest Johnson.

Gainesville

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Elizabeth Kimbrough will entertain at a house party next week, her guests to include Miss Jamie Hall, of Grantville; Miss Cora Candler, of Dallas, Texas; Miss Marie Dinkins, of Atlanta; Miss Emily Dorsey, of Opelika, Ala., and Miss Laura Mae Kennimerg, of Cleveland. Among the social attention planned for her guests are a masquerade party at the home of Miss Kimbrough and a reception, with Miss Mary Florence McKinney as hostess.

A social affair of the week was the bridge luncheon Wednesday morning which Mrs. Pillow gave for her daughter, Mrs. French, of New Orleans. About twenty guests were present.

A compliment to Mrs. J. B. Fitzgerald, who leaves this week for her future home in Augusta, was a porch party given Tuesday morning by Mrs. M. C. Brown and her mother, Mrs. Flanders.

Mrs. J. E. Jackson was hostess at a sewing party at her home on Academy street in honor of her sister, Mrs. H. W. Campbell, of Atlanta.

Miss Ione and Louise Jackson entertained eight couples at a dinner party Friday evening in honor of Miss Marjorie Wilkes, who was a guest of Mrs. J. H. Banks.

Acworth

ACWORTH, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Daniell Humphries Collins entertained on Thursday afternoon in compliment to Mrs. Norman Smith Kitchen, of Birmingham, Ala.

Mrs. Zollie L. McLain, Mrs. W. Arthur Nichols and Mrs. Charles Gribble were hostesses on Friday afternoon at a reception at the home of Mrs. Gribble, in honor of Mrs. D'Armand Breard, of Monroe, La.; Miss Avis Elgin, of Anderson, S. C., and Mrs. Norman Smith Kitchen, of Birmingham, Ala.

Washington

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—In honor of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Newsom, whose wedding Monday afternoon in Atlanta was a social event of cordial interest to a large circle of friends and relatives in Wilkes County, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Armstrong entertained a number of friends Thursday with a barbecue at their country home five miles north of Washington.

Tuesday's meeting of the Bimonthly Bridge Club, composed of the young married set of Washington, was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Clement E. Sutton. It was decided to call in further meetings until October on account of the number of members who are spending September out of town.

Lanark

LANARK, Aug. 23.—The residents at the Byrd cottage and a few invited guests enjoyed an excursion to Dog Island on Thursday evening. A delicious lunch was served on the island and a dip in the surf was enjoyed.

On Wednesday night at the hotel Willie Byrd was host at a crab supper.

Making up a pleasant house party at Lanark for a week or ten days are Mrs. B. H. Hardaway, Miss Slade, Miss Gerge, Charles Porter and B. H. Hardaway, Jr., all of Columbus, Ga. The house party is given by Mrs. Hardaway in honor of her son, B. H. Hardaway, Jr. The party is occupying the cottage of Mrs. Hardaway.

The party of Tallahassee campers at St. Theresa, composed of John McDougall, Abe McDougall, Guy Haynes and Phil Caldwell, on Saturday evening sailed over to Lanark, enjoyed the Saturday night dance at the hotel and remained over Sunday, taking the members of the Columbus house party for a sail. John and Abe McDougall returned to their camp at St. Theresa and Guy Haynes and Phil Caldwell to Tallahassee.

A party of campers at Lanark occupying the Phillips-Culley cottage is made up of Walter Culley, Humphrey Gwynn, Horace VanBrunt and Harbert Keith, of Tallahassee.

Gainesville

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Mamie McGrew has returned from a four-weeks outing, during which she visited friends in Jacksonville, Augusta, Ga., and Hendersonville, N. C.

Mrs. J. I. Blake and children are now in Atlanta on a visit to relatives.

Miss Birdie Wood, of Fernandina; Miss Gussie Steindorff, of Greenville, Ala., and Miss Nellie Dekle, of Tampa, are guests of Mrs. Robert E. Lee on West Arlington street.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Harris, of Haverhill, Miss., announce the engagement of their daughter, Marion Carr, to Lee Graham, of Gainesville, Fla. This announcement is of great interest to the social circle of this city. Mr. Graham is cashier of the First National Bank of Gainesville, a member of the City Council and a most popular citizen. It is said the wedding will be some time in October.

Cartersville

CARTERSVILLE, Aug. 23.—On Tuesday evening a dance was given at the Opera House by the young men of Cartersville to the visiting girls. The out-of-town guests were Misses Marion Perdue, Ruth Blackman and Ruth Barry, of Atlanta; Kathrine and May Stiles, of Brunswick; Addie McCollister and Ida Moody, of Piedmont, Ala., and Mrs. Keith Carson, of Tifton. The chaperons wer Mr. and Mrs. E. Strickland, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hammond and Mr. and Mrs. Madison Milam.

Mrs. Walter Holcombe, of Nashville, entertained at an afternoon tea at "Roselawn," the home of her mother, Mrs. Sam P. Jones, on Saturday. The guests were Mrs. John G. Simpson and Miss Hattie Jones, Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. Bert Sims, Murfreesboro, Tenn., and Mrs. Conyers Fite, Washington, D. C.

Nashville

NASHVILLE, Aug. 23.—A lawn social was given on the courthouse square by the ladies of the Civic League yesterday evening from 6 to 9 o'clock. The proceeds will go for the benefit of the public library.

Ocilla

OCILLA, Aug. 23.—At the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. J. W. Layfield, Miss Meta Clair Sibley and Edwin E. Howell were married on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, and left immediately for Atlanta and other points in North Georgia to return in ten days, when they will make this city their home. The Rev. Mr. Ansley, Baptist minister at this place, officiated.

Claims To Be Heir To Cooper Estate

Henry D. Ritch Says He Was Adopted Son of Savannah Man. Files Suit.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—A suit in which Henry David Ritch seeks to establish himself as an heir-at-law of the late Clem T. Cooper so that he may inherit one-third of the $43,000 Cooper estate, has been filed in the Superior Court of Chatham County.

The obstacle in the way of Ritch's claim is Mrs. Lillian Hamilton, formerly Mrs. Lillian Cooper, wife of the man who died intestate, leaving this desirable property. Ritch says he was legally adopted by Cooper and is entitled to inherit one-third of the estate, as well as to share in the net proceeds from the estate since the death of Cooper on January 14, 1903.

The petitioner is 19 years old. He began the proceedings through J. J. Rahn, Jr., a friend. He shows that when a child 6 years old he was adopted by Cooper, and that he took the name of his foster parent. At that time Cooper was a widower. Ritch continued to live at the Cooper home until six months after the death of Cooper.

FORGOT TO CLOSE WINDOW; GAS FAILED TO KILL MAN.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Because he forgot to close a window in the back of his store when he attempted to kill himself by inhaling illuminating gas, Laurence Louis, a confectioner, will probably recover.

Louis had removed the burners from a gas stove, and placing a rubber tube in his mouth, turned on the gas. Despondency because of business affairs is said to have been the cause of the act.

BIG DISAPPEARING GUN ARRIVES IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Occupying four freight cars, the carriage for the 10-inch disappearing gun in the dummy fortifications in the park extension has arrived from Bethlehem, Pa.

The total weight of the carriage is 225,000 pounds. It will support a gun weighing 30 tons and measuring 35 feet in length. The gun will be mounted inside the fortifications which will be used by the Savannah Volunteer Guards in practice work.

The "Ice Kist"

APPROVED BY
Good Housekeeping Institute

No Crank
No Dasher
No Handle
No Cogs
No Wheels
No Wood
No Hoops
No
Hard Work

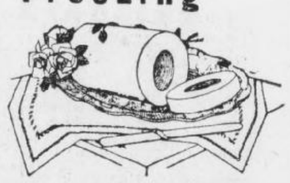
$1.95 POSTPAID 15 DAYS' TRIAL 2-QUART SIZE $1.95

PACK IT THAT'S ALL

For the ICE-KIST all you have to do is to pour in the cream, sherbet or whatever refreshment it may be, and pack in the ice as in the ordinary freezer. Then the work is ended. There is no working a dasher, no turning a handle or crank, no straining your arms and back, no opening the freezer to "see" if it is freezing, no extra packing in of ice. All you do after packing is to open the freezer and serve the refreshment. It saves work, time, trouble and—you.

Perfect Freezing

The Ice-Kist has no dasher or crank because it has two freezing surfaces. The old-fashioned freezer had only one freezing surface—that is why a crank and dasher were necessary. The Ice-Kist has a metal freezing tube that extends directly through the cream to the bottom. This gives the two freezing surfaces. The cold penetrates from the center and from the outside, too. The cream is frozen with a smoothness that will delight you.



The Ice-Kist makes a beautiful and perfect-frozen mold.

Special 15-Day Offer

We want you to know the joy of having an Ice-Kist Crankless Freezer in your home. We will send it post-paid upon the return of the coupon together with $1.95—our introductory price. If, after trying the ICE-KIST for 15 days, you are not delighted with it, return it and we will return the $1.95. Don't let the coupon get lost. Send it NOW.

Western Merchandise & Supply Co.,
326 W. Madison St., Chicago., Ill.

Enclosed is money order for $1.95. Please send the ICE-KIST CRANKLESS FREEZER for 15 days' trial.

Name.....

Address.....

.....Ex.

FRANKLIN WILL FOUND INTACT AND RESTORED

Document Contains Severe Arraignment of Custom of Wearing Jewelry in This Country.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—All controversies regarding the disposition of the estate of Benjamin Franklin have been settled by the restoration of his will by the manuscript repair department of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

The document, recently resurrected from a vault under the City Hall for the purpose of verifying an office copy, was found to have deteriorated so much during more than a century of obscurity that it was practically indecipherable. Through the renovating process to which it was subjected it has regained much of its original freshness and legibility, making it possible for every detail to be understood.

In a finely-worded passage he makes disposition of his best cane as follows: "My fine crabtree walking stick with a gold head curiously wrought in the form of the cap of liberty I give to my friend and the friend of mankind, General Washington. If it were a scepter, he has merited it and would become it. It was a present to me from that excellent woman, Mme. de Forback, the Dowager Duchess of Deux Ponts."

A small painting of the King of France, presented to him by that monarch, which was mounted in a frame containing 408 diamonds, he bequeathed to his daughter, with the following curious proviso: "The King of France's picture, set with 408 diamonds, to my daughter, Sarah Bache, on the condition that she is not to form any of the diamonds into ornaments either for herself of daughters, and, therefore, countenance the expensive, vain and useless fashion of wearing jewels in this country."

TOLD HE'D DIE WHEN 29, BUT LIVING AT 101

Centenarian Walks to Church on Last Birthday and Gives Sunday School Advice.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Aug. 23.—William T. Osborne, of this city, was 101 years old to-day and he didn't mind it a bit.

Answer to "Old Subscriber," "Vox Populi," "Constant Reader" and "Friend of the Paper:" NO, HE NEVER SMOKED OR DRANK.

In the spring of 1841—when he was 29—four physicians visited him at different times to give him some concrete idea of how much longer he was going to adorn the earth. All said he was firmly in the grip of consumption. Three said he'd be lucky to last more than a few days. The fourth said Osborne didn't have a chance of picking anything off the next Christmas tree.

The four doctors are dead.

Five generations gathered at his home to-day. Naturally, he was delighted. Being a regular communicant of Trinity Methodist Church, he went there this morning. He wanted to walk, but the temperature made that seem unwise. Before the service he adaressed a class in the Sunday school and told the scholars to be clean in their habits, stick on the sprinkling cart and keep up a strong activity in labor. He thinks that if he hadn't worked so hard he would not have taken part in to-day's party.

The old man didn't dance any jigs to indicate that he was as lively as he used to be, but he gave plenty of evidence that he was around the place. A natural decline in the power of his eyes recently forced him to give up reading but he still writes, can hear well, enjoys walking and has a good memory.

He was born nine miles from Newburgh. He has been a farmer, tanner and storekeeper. His wife Sarah died eleven years ago at the age of 91.

WAR IN MEXICO BLOCKS WEDDING OF PAIR 5 TIMES

Young Engineer Kept From Love by Succession of Revolutions in Republic.

DENVER, Aug. 23.—What chance has a little fellow like the god of love in a mix-up with a big bully like the person who holds down the job of god of war?

The young man is Arthur N. Zwetow, a mining engineer employed in Mexico. He and the young woman, Miss Mildred Lowin, have tried to get married five times, to use their own expression, and each time that god of war person has "butted in" and dealt Cupid a knock-out blow.

Young Zwetow is in Concepcion del Oro, a mining camp near the border of the State of Coahuila. Six months ago he wrote his betrothed that he had obtained a leave of absence and the wedding bells would ring any time she said. The young woman got her trousseau ready and set the wedding day. But the bridegroom did not come. A letter from him said the Federals had started a war, the railroad had quit running, bullets were flying and he had to stay.

So it has been for five successive attempts.

Girl Chases 8 Cows With Auto; Gets $4

New Jersey Chauffeurette Uses Machine to Hustle Bovine Trespassers to Pound.

PETERSON, N. J., Aug. 23.—Four dollars of the money Joseph Smith paid for the wanderings of his cows yesterday went into the purse of Miss Minnie DeGray.

Eight Smith cows entered her garden and were eating her corn. She chased them in her auto out of the field, across a lot, into the road and a half-mile to the poundmaster's yard. Smith paid $8 for their release. Miss DeGray received half of it.

OREGON 8-HOUR BILL HITS EVERY WORKING CLASS

Professors, Trades, Occupations and Even Day Labor Limited to 48 Hours Weekly Work.

SALEM, OREG., Aug. 23.—If the universal eight-hour bill, filed under the initiative to be voted on at the next general election, should become a law it would revolutionize the industries of the State.

The measure is drafted to apply to every industry, every business or vocation or profession in the State. No one is to be permitted, under its provisions, to work for more than eight hours out of nine consecutive hours a day, or more than forty-eight hours a week.

By this law neither manual labor, trades, nor the professions shall be exempted, but every form of labor, skilled or unskilled, as well as every trade and profession, and persons working therein or thereat, shall be included, in, by and under this law, and the same shall be included, in, by and under this law, within the State or Oregon.

The measure provides that the Labor Commissioner must see to the enforcement of its provisions, and if he does not do this immediately it becomes mandatory upon the Governor to remove the Labor Commissioner from office.

AGED FATHER THRASHES SON WHO THINKS HIM EASY PREY

EAST LIVERPOOL, OHIO, Aug. 23. When Francis Beaver, 30 years old, charged his father, Henry Beaver, aged 65, with having spoken in an uncomplimentary tone of the former's wife, the father resented the imputation and soundly thrashed his son.

The son, thinking he could easily worst his aged father, began the fight with a hard blow on the elder man's nose. Thoroughly aroused, Beaver, Sr., then started in and soon the son was lying on the ground with a fractured ankle and a fractured right leg.

ANNIVERSARY CLUB MEETS WITH THE SOUTHERN STATES LIFE

Leading Life Insurance Agents Hold Convention Here—Every Man Produced Over $100,000 Worth of Paid For Business in Twelve Months — Interesting Sessions Held.

There was a feast of reason, a sparkle of wit and a flow of soul at the brilliant banquet given at the Hotel Ansley last night when the Sixth Annual Convention of the Anniversary Club of the Southern States Life Insurance Company brought that gathering to a close.

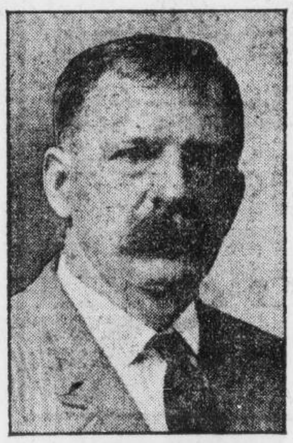
Over one hundred guests were present.

This convention is celebrated by those members of the agency force of The Southern States Life Insurance Company who produced over $100,000 worth of paid for insurance during the year which ends June 30.

This convention had been in session two days, business sessions being held in the morning, the afternoon and evening being given over to entertainment.

Opening Session.

The first session of the Convention was held in the assembly room



J. C. WALDEN, SR., President.

of the Hotel Ansley on Friday morning. The largest attendance in the history of the club was present.

President Wilmer L. Moore, of The Southern States Life Insurance Company, greeted the club membership in a warm address of welcome, in which he congratulated them upon the splendid work just closed, and the beginning of the new year of the Anniversary Club, the first month of which saw the agents break all producing records.

J. R. WILLIAMS, Vice President.

Officers are not elected by the Anniversary Club, but office is won by the amount of insurance written. The agent writing the most business is President, the second man is Vice President, the leaders in each State are State Vice Presidents.

J. C. Walden, Sr., of Alabama, won the coveted honor of President. J. R. Williams, of South Carolina, was installed as Vice President.

Officers Installed.

The State Vice Presidents installed were T. Peters, Jr., of Georgia; B. B. Murray, of Florida; H. Clay Smith, of Alabama, and G. J. McDowell, of South Carolina.

In addition to these there were present other members of this Club who qualified for 1912-13: H. N. McAfee, of Georgia, a member for the sixth time; H. Willis Hogg, of Georgia, a member for the third time; J. T. Weems, of Georgia, the oldest member of the agency force of the company in point of service, for the sixth time; Fred Hines, of South Carolina, for the fifth time, and L. E. Black, Jr., C. S. Gurr and J. R. Munroe, for the first time.

Joe W. Vinson, whose absence from the meeting, owing to ill health, was greatly regretted by all present, completes his fifth year of membership.

He also signalized his intention of making his election for next year sure by not only leading the agency force in the month of July but by beating his own and all other previous records of written business in any one month, and thereby establishing a high mark for agents to aim at.

Brief addresses were delivered to the club by the President and Vice President of the Club.

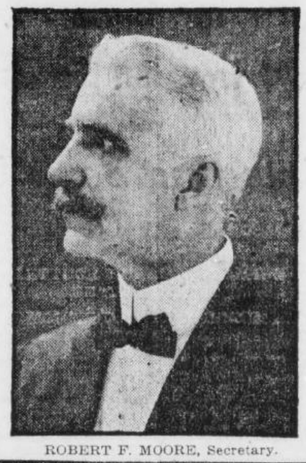
Unanimously Re-elected.

Robert F. Moore, Agency Secretary, was unanimously re-elected Secretary of the Anniversary Club, which position he has held with credit since the beginning of the organization.

Following the roll call of the Anniversary Club badges and certificates were distributed, after which the first "Keystone Degree" was conferred.

"New Policy" was the subject of an interesting paper by Supervisor of Agents, W. S. McLeod, which was followed by discussion and questions.

Agency Secretary Robert F. Moore followed with an interesting paper on "Items of Expense Charged to First Year's Business—Economy, What it Means to the Agent and the Policy-holder." His paper was followed by discussion and questions.



ROBERT F. MOORE, Secretary.

The photograph of the Anniversary Club, which appears on this page, was taken, after which the Club was entertained at luncheon at the Capital City Club by President Moore, Friday afternoon the Club attended the baseball game and Friday evening occupied boxes at the Forsyth theater.

Concluding Session.

The concluding session of this interesting convention was held on Saturday morning, at which time a symposium of talks entitled "Confidential Chats With Medical Department," was participated in by E. M. Veatch, Dr. Gaines, Dr. W. S. Kendrick and Samuel Barnett, Actuary. This was followed by discussion and questions.

"The Company's Method of Payment of Death Claims—What It Should Mean to the Supervisor, the Agent, the Company and the Beneficiary," was delivered by Supervisor Frank E. Brodnax. This was followed by a discussion on the analysis of this subject under the following heads: (1) Bankers Agents Contracts. (2) Local Advertisement; (3) Draft on Local Bank, and (4) Follow Up of Prospects from Payment.

J. E. McLauchlin, Director of the Metropolitan Agency, followed with an interesting talk on "Systematic Following Up of Prospects."

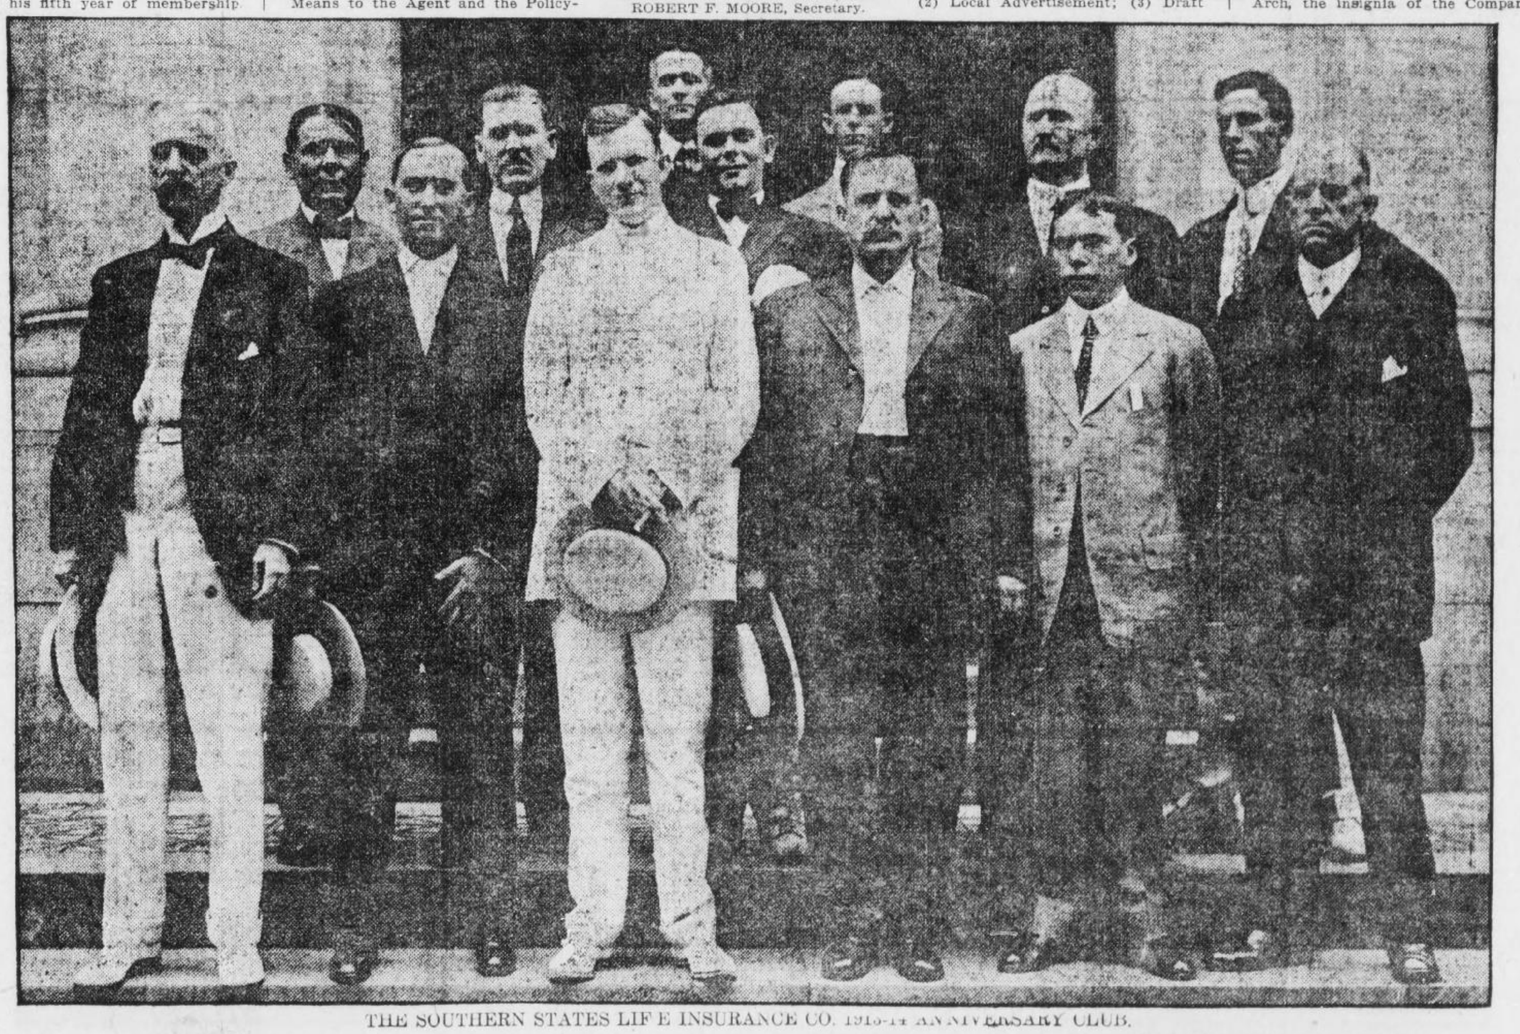
A symposium of actual experiences by all agents came next and the formal addresses of the Convention were concluded with a most interesting address by Hon. Hervey W. Laird, former Assistant Insurance Commissioner of Alabama, and now Assistant to President Wilmer L. Moore.

Entertained at Luncheon.

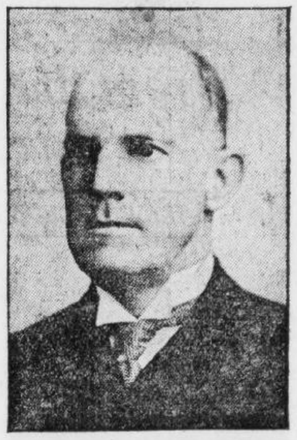
The Club was entertained at luncheon at the Hotel Ansley and again attended the baseball game in the afternoon.

The Banquet at the Hotel Ansley last night was probably the most brilliant gathering held in the history of the Club and the Hotel.

Over one hundred guests were entertained. The colors of the Southern States Life Insurance Company—Red, Blue and White, and the Keystone Arch, the insignia of the Company,



THE SOUTHERN STATES LIFE INSURANCE CO. 1913-14 ANNIVERSARY CLUB.



T. PETERS, JR., Georgia Vice President

MENU

GEORGIA CANTALOUPE

CELERY QUEEN OLIVES ALMONDS

CONSOMME FLORENTINE
CHEESE STRAWS

POMPANO A LA CARONDELET POTATOES ANNA

CALVE'S SWEETBREAD ST. CLAIR
MOYENS PEAS

CHICKEN FILLET, LUCULLUS
PEELED ASPARAGUS HOLLANDAISE

LETTUCE, RUSRIAN DRESSING
BEATEN BISCUIT

MOUSSE A LA PARISIENNE
PETITS FOUR

CHEESE AND BENT'S CRACKER

DEMI TASSE

APOLLINARIS
CIGARS

Banquet Menu.

B. B. MURRAY, Florida Vice President.

Hotel Ansley Scene of Wonderful Banquet to Club Last Night—Toasts Were Made by Speaker Burwell, Hon. C. B. Brown, of Alabama, Hon. W. S. Witham and Clark Howell.

were carried out in the flowers, ices and place cards.

President Wilmer L. Moore presided as toastmaster, and introduced the speakers.

J. C. Walden, Sr., President of the Club, was the first and his response to the toast, "The Anniversary Club—the Top Rung," was warmly received.

He was followed by J. R. Williams, Vice President, whose subject, "The Southern States Life—Confidence Begets Loyalty," was handled in a splendid manner.

G. J. McDowell, a member of the Anniversary Club, and a familiar speaker at these banquets, responded to the toast, "The Keystone Degree—An Incentive to Work."

Burwell Responds.

Speaker W. H. Burwell, of the General Assembly of Georgia, delivered a splendid toast in response to President Moore's cordial introduction, on

G. J. McDOWELL, South Carolina V. P.

"Success Is Measured by Ambition."

He was followed by Hon. Clark Howell, who responded to the toast, "Civic Duties—Every Man Has His Part."

Hon. Cyrus B. Brown, Assistant Commissioner of Insurance for the State of Alabama, represented that commonwealth and responded to the toast, "Alabama—Her Part in the Nation's Progress."

H. CLAY SMITH, Alabama Vice Pres.

Hon. W. S. Witham concluded the evening's gayety with a wonderful potpourri when he was presented to his hearers, with the following title for his toast, "A Toast, Like a Text, Is Given to Talk From."

EUROPE TROTS, BUT CAN'T KEEP STEP TO MUSIC

Syncopated Tunes and Dances Beyond Ken of Old World, Says American Composer.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Armand Vecsey, composer and director of music at the Ritz-Carlton, has returned fresh from a European trip with lots of new music and some comments upon the musical situation abroad which may act as balm to the souls of American composers, and a joy for those who are not musicians, but like to hear the scream of the American Eagle.

Mr. Vecsey has not lived on this side of the Atlantic long enough to have taken out final naturalization papers, but there is nobody on this side of Weehawken who is more intensely and enthusiastically American in a musical way. He says American music and American motifs have spread over all Europe, but the music the natives over there don't know how to play.

Opera in Europe, as Mr. Vecsey has viewed it this summer, is poor as compared with what is given at the Metropolitan Opera House, and there isn't anything now between London and Vienna that has to do with music or the stage which local talent can't beat hands down.

"I have been in Paris, London, Berlin, Munich, and Vienna," said Mr. Vecsey, "and everywhere I have found American music the most popular. Then the turkey trot one finds all over the Continent. Yet nowhere did I hear the music played correctly, although they try hard, and when it came to fitting German or French words to a typical trotting tune, the effect was ludicrous.

Recognize the "Truthahn Tanz?"

"Think of what the result was in Berlin, when they turned 'When the Midnight Choo-Choo Leaves for Alabam' into German! In Germany they call the trot 'Truthahn Tanz,' and in France it is the 'Pas du Dindon.' Who would recognize the original under such appellations?

"Then the French can not dance the trot, nor can the Germans. Somehow they can't just find out the character of it. Of course their bands and orchestras can not get the time right in the first place. Why, at the Folies Bergere in Paris, I saw two of the best French dancers giving what was supposed to be a most perfect rendition of the trot, and I assure you it was ridiculous. It was a very poor imitation of the real thing.

"Yet, I was astonished to find that all the new French music and most of the new German operettas are either in the American style, as nearly as their composers could approach it, or have American motifs. The tango seems to be breaking up the trot over there, partly, I suppose, because their dancers can come nearer to dancing it than the purely American steps. In Paris I saw a couple trying the Texas Tommy, and it was a sight to cause a horse to double up.

"Why can't they play a turkey trot? For the same reason that nobody except a Hungarian can play Hungarian music. Almost every musical country has something that is peculiarly its own—a style of music that when played correctly is infectious.

American Style Has Call.

"Hungary has its csardas, Austria its waltz, and America its syncopated time. When each is played properly, it is bound to move an assemblage of people, and just now the American style has the call everywhere.

"At the Palais de Danse, in Berlin, I first heard a turkey trot played by a German orchestra. It was very bad. I want to tell you that in Europe this summer there is no music, no opera, no Philharmonic concert, and no play that can compare with what has been heard here in New York this year."

"In Paris," went on Mr. Vecsey, with a trace of feeling, "when they see an American trunk, they lie in wait to rob the owner, and go crazy over the thought of loot. It is the same in Berlin.

"I must tell you that not anywhere are women so generally chic in their costumes nowadays as right here in New York.

"True, I did see many smartly gowned women, but investigation showed that most of them were Americans."

Rector Denounces Paid Choir Singers

Clergyman Declares There Is No Worship in Their Strange and Unutterable Music.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., Aug. 23.—The Rev. E. J. Craft, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, caused a sensation while addressing a meeting of the parishioners of Calvary parish by telling them what he would do if he were entering upon a new pastorate.

For one thing, he said, he did not believe in paid singers for church choirs. "The service of the church was designed for the people as a whole and not alone for the choir," he said. "These modern choirs take the worship away from the people of the congregation and do all the worshiping themselves. They sing in wild and strange ways and in unutterable tongues the praises of God."

Veering of River Threatens Farms

Every Laborer Available Is Rushed to Head Off Flow of Missouri.

FREEMONT, NEBR., Aug. 23.—Every laborer available is being sent by the Burlington Railroad to Folsom to fight the Missouri River, which is again eating into the valuable farm lands of that section and threatening to cut its way to the railroad tracks. Many carloads of stone have been dumped into the river.

The river suddenly began veering from its channel a few days ago. Inside of two days it had swamped 20 acres of land. Fear is now felt that the river will eat its way back to the extensive put in within the last year at a cost of more than $500,000.

Tame Trout Craves Petting; Fed by Hand

Feels Insulted if Food Is Not Served in Manner to Which He Is Accustomed.

ESTES PARK, COLO., Aug. 23.—Sunbeam, the pet speckled trout in the fish hatchery at Estes Park, has just recovered from an indisposition caused by stomach trouble or rheumatism, and is again able to take its place as the only pet trout in captivity.

The fish, now a 3-year-old and about eleven inches long, is as good an example of gentle and loving trouthood as it is possible to find. Fed from the hand from the time it was hatched, it feels insulted now unless its food is given to it in that way.

It is very fond of being stroked and petted, and will swim around and rub itself against a person's hand whenever a chance is given it.

Stranger Is Son, Gone for 20 Years

Father Turns Wanderer Away, but Mother Calls Him Back, and Reunion Follows.

GLASGOW, KY., Aug. 23.—Virgil Huffman had been away from home twenty years, seeking his fortune in Alaska, and the father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. James Huffman, were sitting in a room of their home near here discussing him and wondering if he would ever come back.

There was a knock at the door and Mr. Huffman opened it to see a dusty traveler, who said he was tired and was seeking lodging for the night. Mr. Huffman thought he could do nothing for him, but Mrs. Huffman "reckoned" they could manage somehow.

Then they led him into the hall, under the swinging lamp, and as the light fell on his face the aged couple recognized him as their son.

African Chieftain Is Harvard Student

Begins Stupendous Task of Reducing His Own Language to Written Form.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., Aug. 23.—A full-blooded African chieftain has just passed his entrance examinations at Harvard with flying colors and will enter the university next September as a member of the class of 1917. He is P. Gbe Wolo, and his people, 300,000 strong, are the Krus of Liberia, on the west coast of Africa.

They have no written language, so that the only way he can communicate with his family is through traders on the coast, who send the message by word of mouth along the trail. He has begun the stupendous task of reducing his language to writing.

Goes to Cemetery Instead of Ball Park

Fan Mistakes Funeral Hack for Omnibus on Its Way to Diamond.

MONTGOMERY, MO., Aug. 23.—A baseball rooter came here from a distance to attend the St. Charles-Montgomery game, and by mistake he got into a hack at the depot filled with pallbearers going to a funeral.

As he had crepe on his hat, the ballbearers thought he had come as a mourner and he was taken to the cemetery instead of the ball park.

Finding himself in a funeral procession, he woke up and escaped. He got to the ball grounds just in time to see the home team win.

'Star Baths' Latest Complexion Remedy

Young Women Campers Take Nightly 'Plunge' In Milky Way Beams on Tower.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Star baths are the fad at the summer camp of the Young Women's Christian Association in Blauvelt, N. Y. Miss Marion Hopkins, the camp leader, is given credit for the innovation. The baths are taken on top of a high tower in the center of the camp. It will accommodate a dozen bathers.

There is a long waiting list of young women campers who are anxious to enjoy the reported benefits of immersion in starlight. Chief among these is said to be the "star-shine complexion."

Husband in Prison; Wife Willed $20,000

Richmond Woman Given Share of Estate After Helpmate Is Sentenced for Embezzlement.

RICHMOND, VA., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Maud Kent Rowley, whose husband, William J. Rowley, formerly connected with a hotel here, was recently sentenced to serve two years in State prison for embezzling $8,000 from the Jefferson Hotel in this city while auditor there, inherits $20,000 from the estate of her aunt, Mrs. Junius A. Morris, of Richmond, who died August 3 at Atlantic City.

The value of the estate is placed at $496,000.

Woman Works as Circus Roustabout

Breaks Down While Handling Heavy Tent Pole and Her Secret Is Revealed.

LA CROSSE, WIS., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Ada Broughton, unable to support her two children and invalid husband on wages paid a woman, donned a man's attire and labored beside farm hands in Dakota wheat fields. She broke down under the strain and came to La Crosse to seek lighter employment, becoming a circus roustabout. Lifting heavy poles and canvas resulted in her complete breakdown. Then she told her story to the police and collapsed. She was taken unconscious to a hospital. Relatives are on the way from her home at Rice Lake.

HEARST'S SUNDAY
American Advertising Contest
$10.00 Given Away!!

Last Sunday only the trade-marks or distinguishing characteristics of the advertisers below were given. $10.00 in cash was offered to the person sending in to The American, in the fewest possible words, a description of the advertisers whose "slogan" appeared below. Thousands of these replies were received and the prize goes to Mrs. O. D. Gorman, Jr., 79 W. 15th St., her answers appearing below:

WALL-PAPER

Thirty years in the wall-paper business have made us proficient. Ask our customers. Before you buy, try us. :: ::

"Better Be Safe than Sorry"

71 South Pryor Street

BURNETT WALL PAPER CO. BURNETT

"Go Where the Crowds Go"

AND

You will be delighted with the cool, comfortable Montgomery Theater. Absolutely the latest pictures.

Anna Von Hoffman is now singing

AT

The Montgomery

The easy way to buy clothes

Your Credit is Good at

DOLLAR A WEEK DAY
14 W. MITCHELL ST.

"Truly Duffy's"

The home of low prices, on the corner of Mitchell and Forsyth Sts. Attend our immense Clearing-Out Sale now going on. :: ::

DUFFY'S

"The Velvet Kind"

The kind of Ice Cream you really like. It's pure, clean and wholesome. Try it once. ∴ ∴ ∴

PHONE IVY 6849

VELVET ICE CREAM CO.

26 E. North Avenue

27 years in the same stand.

Shoes for the Entire Family

See our Fall and Winter stock of Men's and Ladies' models. Just from the Eastern style centers.

MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED

R. C. BLACK

35 Whitehall Street

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

ATLANTA HAS SUPPORT FOR HOME-GOODS EXPOSITION

Spirit Which Makes City Famous Prevails, and Enough Exhibitors Sign Agreements to Take Space to Assure Success of Project.

Decision Necessary Tuesday So That Plans for New Commerce Building Might Be Changed. Manufacturers Are Responding.

It was a close shave, everyone admits, but as usual the Atlanta spirit prevailed, and the "Made in Atlanta" exhibit is assured.

Tuesday's luncheon at the Ansley was the "clincher." Several years of agitation, a year of actual work, brought to a climax by a vigorous campaign of three months, developed the exhibit project to a point where about 36 manufacturers had signed their names to agreements binding them to take floor space for a period of three years.

Thus matters stood Tuesday. Meanwhile the contractors were at work in the new Chamber building remodeling it. The plans called for offices. If a change were to be made, a decision was necessary at once.

The case was put squarely up to the Atlanta manufacturers Tuesday, and on Tuesday's luncheon was staked the entire plan. The result of the appeal was success.

To Have Four Floors.

Four floors will be devoted to the exhibit. One floor will be given over to the cotton industry—textiles, oils and by-products. Furniture made in Atlanta will take another entire floor. Building materials probably will take a floor, kindred lines of manufacture will be grouped together as far as is consistent with economical disposal of space.

Who will be in charge of the exhibit in the new building at Pryor street and Auburn avenue has not been determined. Neither has it been decided when the exhibits will be installed. All this remains to be done.

This much is certain—there will be telephone service on each floor, an expert in charge and an intelligent effort to make the exhibit pay in dollars and cents for every participant.

Had the project fallen through, it would have been lamentable, for Nashville, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Hartford, Conn., St. Louis and other cities have such exhibits; others are planning them, and Atlanta would, for the first time, be forced to admit itself less progressive than its rivals.

Those Already Pledged.

The following firms had signed for space up to Saturday, the nature of the business being suggested where the name is not self-explanatory:

Southern Engraving Company.
Frederick Disinfectant Company.
J. K. Orr Shoe Company.
E. VanWinkle Company (motor trucks).
Atlanta Gas Light Company.
Southern Upholstering Company.
Atlanta Stove Works.
Southern Spring Bed Company.
Burnett, Bell & Klapper (furniture).
Gholstin - Cunningham Company (bed springs).
All-Star Manufacturing Company (necktles).
Byrd Printing Company.
Norris, Inc. (candies).
Willingham-Tift Lumber Company.
Tripod Paint Company.
J. P. Stevens Engraving Company.
Atlanta Paper Company.
Atlanta Blank Book Manufacturing Company.
White Provision Company.
Dowman-Dozier (metal workers).
Foote & Davies (office furnishings).
Golden Eagle Buggy Company.
Metzger Mattress Company.
Whittier Mills (textiles).
Marcus Loeb & Co. (overalls).
Nunnally & McCrae (coveralls).
Phoenix Planing Mills.
Parian Paint Company.
Atlanta Show Case Company.
Greer Manufacturing Company (jewelry).
F. J. Cooledge (building materials).
M. D. & H. L. Smith (awnings).
Reed Oil Company.
Atlanta Metal Bed Company.
Atlanta Auto Top and Trimming Company.
Moncrief Furnace Company.
Coca-Cola Company.
Walter Ballard Optical Company.
Hagan & Dodd Co. (soft drinks).
Atlanta Art Glass Company.
A. E. Hill Manufacturing Company (razor blade strops).

In addition to the above, the Southern Cotton Seed Crushers' Association, the cotton oil mills, the textile and other cotton interests have an entire floor, where they will exhibit the cotton plant and all of its various uses.

ENGLISH MAKERS INVENT CAP WHICH KEEPS SHAPE

A problem that has engaged English cap manufacturers for some time has been how to produce a cloth cap that will keep its shape after it has been in use for some time. An enterprising firm of manufacturers now claims that they have solved the problem and that the shape of their caps is not affected by rain. The idea introduced consists of placing a flat plate of straw plait in the cap between the lining and the cloth crown.

This makes the top of the cap sit flat, and as the straw is not affected by wet it is said the cap can be worn for a much longer period than the ordinary kind.

Sweet Potato Crop Yields Big Returns

Would Bring Much More if Southern Farmers Did Not Glut Market at Harvest.

Each year the sweet potato is becoming of greater importance as a money crop in the South. The value of this crop in the United States in 1900 was $34,429,000, 90 per cent of which was produced in the Southern States. The total area devoted to sweet potatoes in the United States increased from 537,000 acres in 1899 to 641,000 in 1909, and the yield increased from 42,500,000 to 52,200,000 bushels. The total value of the crop increased at a much more rapid rate than either the acreage or the yield, showing an increase of 78.3 per cent in ten years.

With better methods of storing and marketing the potatoes, it is said, their value could be doubled without increasing the acreage or production. This is especially true in the South, where the potatoes are either rushed on the market at digging time, when the price is low, or stored in outdoor pits or banks, where a large portion decays.

Very few of the sweet potatoes stored in pits or banks ever reach the market, for from 25 to 50 per cent spoil, and those that remain are not of good quality. Even if the pit or bank method of storage would keep the potatoes, it is not economical.

Too much labor and expense are required to make these banks every year and to get the potatoes out when wanted for market. Sweet potatoes can be marketed more economically and to much better advantage from storage houses.

Green Shirts Shown For Winter Wear

Long-Pointed Collars in White and Self-Striped Effects Continue in Vogue.

New features are noted among collars and shirts shown by leading manufacturers for fall and winter. Imported dress shirts, in soft laundered effects with musnroom tucks and semi-French cuffs are selling readily. Shirts with a short stiff bosom in various color combinations are also featured.

White self-striped effects in French pique with stiff and unstarched bosoms are also meeting a good demand. A soft bosom with cross-striped plaits, in various color combinations, is a new fall feature that has been well received.

Woven madras in colored effects will be strong.

The demand for silk shirts is increasing and they are becoming more of a staple than formerly. Green will be a popular shirt color for the new season.

The long pointed collars in white and self-striped effects are continuing into the next season.

A departure in them is the wider two-inch band instead of the narrow one now worn. These new collars have a three and a half inch point.

The wider band is claimed to give them more the appearance of a standing collar, besides causing them to sit better and afford greater comfort.

Stocks of Iron Not Above 100,000 Tons

Accumulation in Yards Reduced Rapidly in Southern Territory. Curtailment Continues.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 23.—Small sales of pig iron continue in the Southern territory, with a satisfactory aggregate.

The price of pig iron holds around $11 per ton, No. 2 Foundry. There have been a number of sales made for delivery during the last part of the year and some inquiries are in hand for iron to be delivered the first quarter in 1914.

There still is curtailment of the make. It is believed Alabama will produce during August almost as much iron as in July. Furnace companies are expressing the belief that before the end of the year a buying movement is likely to call for an immense tonnage. The furnace and warrant yards inventory will show now over 100,000 tons on hand. A few months ago there were 150,000 tons on the yards.

Basic iron demand is more satisfactory. Charcoal iron price is above $23, with the make as low as it ever was in the South.

Steel operations are steady, the several plants in Alabama working on practically full time. Fabricated steel is going out in all directions. Cotton tie manufacturers have had a prosperous season.

Fertilizer Concern Has Splendid Year

American Agricultural Chemical Earns Close to 7 Per Cent on Its Common Stock.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—American Agricultural Chemical for its year to June 30 is understood to have earned something better than 6 per cent on the $18,330,000 common. In fact, it is barely possible that the final figures will come nearer 7 per cent on this issue.

Unless conditions in the fertilizer trade become very much worse than for the last two years, the company can continue to earn and pay the present 4 per cent dividend. This dividend rate is, by the way, a testimonial to the wisdom of directors in making the initial distribution on the common stock rather modest. If a 5 per cent or 6 per cent rate had been adopted two years ago, the future outlook would not be nearly so happy as it is to-day.

A very strong feature of American Agricultural operations is the high percentage of branded or trade-marked goods which it sells. It is safe to state that 90 per cent of the company's tonnage consists of trade-mark goods, which farmers buy on the reputation of a particular brand for the specific purpose desired.

SAMPLES COST DRY GOODS MEN MANY DOLLARS

Dealers Feel Something Should Be Done to Stop Incessant Drain on Their Profits.

There is strong feeling in dry goods circles that something should be done to curb the increasing demands of buyers for samples. In most quarters there is a strong opinion expressed that the giving of samples is a necessary evil up to a certain point, but there is also a strong opinion that this point has long since been passed.

Few manufacturers and wholesalers take the trouble to find out just what samples cost them. In only a few cases are definite records kept and the cost of the samples figured.

A New York silk firm gets out about 250 styles a season and the buyers got fair-sized samples of each style they bought. This is really necessary, but it is trade custom, the house follows the general path.

A big woolen firm in New York which does business with the cutting-up trades and larger retailers is one of the best informed on the subject of sample expense.

"On our books," the head of the firm said, "there are about 2,500 accounts. Of these about 1,800 are manufacturers of clothing. To each manufacturer we give five or ten sample books. The cloth in each book is valued at about 20 cents, and the expense of getting them up brings the cost to about 50 cents. This means that each manufacturing account costs us about $3.75 a season for samples. With two seasons a year and 1,800 manufacturers' accounts it is easy to see what samples mean to us without trying to figure the cost of samples for the retail accounts."

In another quarter of the woolen goods trade it was said that the samples given out mounted up to a tidy sum in the course of a year, but that the expense had not been so great of late because several houses had agreed to make clothiers pay for most of the samples they got.

"One of the worst features of the sample business in this industry," this agent said, "is the way some members of the clothing trade use them. Many of them have no scruples at all about taking our samples to a competitor and asking him at how much less than our price he can get the goods made up by his mill. This is a little off the subject, perhaps, but it illustrates one of the worst phases of the woolen industry."

Among the cotton goods houses the evil is seen in its worst form so far as quantity is concerned, but the cheaper qualities of these goods tends to lessen the aggregate loss as compared with wool and silk goods. Lace and embroidery firms also pay tribute to the sample god at the rate of several hundreds to several thousands of dollars a year.

Last, but not least, comes the big department store. Inquiry at several of them in New York brought out the assertion that samples cost them from $30,000 to $60,000 a year. Only 15 to 20 per cent of the people who take these samples from the stores really buy anything afterward, and the resultant loss necessarily is heavy.

N. O. T. & M. Receiver May Ask Big Loan

Frisco Subsidiary Almost Certain to Default on Interest Due September 1.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—As soon as New Orleans, Texas and Mexico receivers know whether Frisco receivers will or will not pay the $700,000 interest due September 1, they will make application for permission to issue approximately $1,000,000 receivers' certificates. In the meantime the Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust Company is making temporary loans to the receivers comprising $100,000 for debt failing due August 1, and about $200,000 additional to middle of September.

The engineers employed to examine the properties which make up the Frisco's South Texas lines have not yet made their report, but the most favorable statement would show that at least 18 months of steady work and adequate funds would be necessary to put New Orleans, Texas and Mexico in a position to earn interest on its bonds. Others believe at least three years would be consumed in putting the line on its feet, and between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 expenditures would be needed.

Under these circumstances assumption is made in certain quarters that Frisco will default its guarantee of the interest due September 1. In fact, it is said that any other course would be improper.

KNITTING YARNS SLOWER BECAUSE STRIKE IS ON

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Buying of knitting yarns has slowed up, due to the knit goods strike in New York and Brooklyn, but prices show no change. Just how the strike will affect the market is a matter of conjecture, although most dealers admit that prices will drop if it is continued.

Spinners were unwilling to raise quotations on worsted yarns materially, as it would result in advancing the prices for worsted goods and so kill the prospective demand for them.

Cotton yarns were quiet, the small demand for them being attributed to the spinners' high prices. Weaving yarns were selling at lower figures than for several weeks, but only small orders were placed. Buyers, influenced by favorable cotton crop reports, were holding out for still lower prices.

There were no changes in Southern frame-spun knitting yarns, but there was less activity noted in the coarser counts of single combed yarns.

SUMMER TRADE DEVELOPED BY BRAINY EFFORT

August Dullness of Years Ago Is Overcome by Teaching Public What to Buy Then.

"Summer isn't the terror to us that it used to be," remarked a white-haired veteran of the department stores of Atlanta—a man who is an interesting talker and a consistent advertiser, but who keeps his own name and his own personality persistently in the background.

"There was a time," he went on in reminiscence, "when we might almost as well have closed up the store during July and August. That was years ago.

"In the summer all the well-to-do customers went out of Atlanta, and did not return until fall. Fall was a mad scramble for customers and stores alike.

"The less wealthy, who stayed in town, did little shopping. Everyone thought it was too hot. No one ever paid any attention to buying in midsummer. The stores were unattractive. Usually the proprietor was vacationing—if that's a good word—himself.

"I do not know who had the inspiration first in Atlanta. But a change came about. The wisest merchant, whoever he was, decided there were people in town with money to spend, even in the summer time.

"He schemed out the way to get it, which is followed almost universally by Atlanta stores nowadays.

"To make the story short, he offered bargains so attractive that shoppers simply had to come to town for the August sales. The custom has grown until to-day the things which have no season of necessity have been exploited so skillfully that the public believes summer is the season for them.

"That may sound obscure, but I do not intend it to be.

"Take furniture, for instance. There is no more reason why one should buy furniture in January than in August. Nor is there any reason why one should buy furniture in August in preference to January.

"But the summer furniture sale has become so much a fixture in the leading stores that people wait for it. It is good business for all concerned. The merchant is striving toward the ideal condition, which would be sales and collections of an unvarying amount every month in the year—unattainable, but none the less an ideal state of affairs.

"The customer, likewise, is winning. She effects economies by midsummer buying of furniture and blankets, and distributes her expenditures more evenly over the year."

Textile Furs Being Featured for Fall

Wide Variety of Pile Fabrics Shown in Cloaks for the 1913-14 Season.

Many new effects in pile fabrics are being featured for the fall and winter seasons. Matelasse plushes in brocaded effects and high colors, to be used for cloakings and millinery, as well as other brocaded effects, are prominent features in present trading.

There is also a tendency to moires, in Scotch plaids and checks, for dresses, cloaks and trimmings. A wide variety of Oriental and Bulgarian effects in plushes and velvets are also shown for vestings, collars and cuffs.

A new item is the jasper effect, which has a rich woolen appearance and is featured for cloakings.

The fabric is of an indefinite striped appearance, and is shown in black and white and blue and brown mixtures.

Imitation Persian lamb is also popular among the more expensive fabrics, being made to retail at about $7.50 for 50-inch widths.

FRENCH CALICOMAKERS MAKE 20-YEAR COMPACT

Several years ago an attempt was made to organize the French calico printing trade, a cartel being formed which included the principal producers, and an effort was made to fix standard prices. The results were not altogether satisfactory, and the agreement was allowed to expire. The matter was taken up again recently, and it is now reported that a new cartel, comprising seven of the leading French firms whose works are situated in Rouen, Epinal, Bolbec and Valenciennes, has been formed.

A central sales bureau, which will transact the entire selling business of the concerns interested, has been established under the style of the Comptoir de Vente des Tissus Francais Imprimees.

According to the Daily Consular and Trade Report, the agreement is for twenty years.

SMALL TOWN SECURES NATIONAL BANK CHARTER

STOCKTON, CAL., Aug. 23.—Announcement is made that application the first big rubber factory to be at Riverbank has been granted.

This is the first time in California that a town of 600 inhabitants has secured a charter for a national bank. The bank is capitalized at $35,000.

TURNING TO FRENCH MODELS.

Fall models for men's lounge suits show complete ignoring of English fashions and tend toward the French for the first time in many years. Cheviots yield to unfinished worsteds, and the colorful textures to the plainer. The popularity of dark greens and browns in "off" shades is evidenced by the earlier selections of tailors, while inconspicuous plaids and gun club checks are also well in demand.

Southern Hosiery Buyers in Market

Winter Goods Reported Scarce and Stringency May Become Acute by Fall.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Southern hosiery buyers are visiting the local market. Although mill agents report cheap goods sold up, some provision is evidently being made for the newcomers. The Southern jobbers have waited this year until the indications of the cotton crop were fairly certain before operating. They are not taking 84-needle-bundle goods, as they predict lower prices on those lines. There are said to be fewer orders for extracts booked this year than formerly.

This is not affecting the volume of sales, as extracts are made up only to order, and customary buyers of those lines are simply seeking a different finish. Winter goods are already reported scarce, and, as the duplicating period has not yet begun, the stringency will probably be acute before the end of the fall.

Cotton Goods Buying Seems to Lack Snap

Limited Number of Desirable Spring Dress Fabrics Taken by Purchasers in East.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—While certain cotton good sellers are satisfied with conditions, nearly everywhere is the complaint that the market is without any snap save for a limited number of desirable spring dress fabrics.

A number of buyers are reported to have gone home without purchasing, while others took only sample pieces. Such wide lines were shown that, in some cases, buyers got the impression that there was plenty of goods back of them. This was not the case, but the buyers were frightened off.

Staples are not in demand as they should be at this time, and specialties are holding the lead. Fancies in ratines, crepes and voiles have shown little tendency to lose their popularity.

According to The Textile Manufacturers' Journal, several larger selling agencies have opened their spring lines of dress ginghams, zephyrs, seersuckers, madras, krinkles, cheviots and shirtings.

MEN WANT AMERICAN STYLES IN THEIR CLOTHES

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—During the past few weeks several English clothing manufacturers have had representatives in the local market with their garment samples. While some interest was displayed, it was mostly for obtaining information.

The sales made were principally on overcoats, and were intended only to add a few imported garments to the lines regularly offered. The English salesmen learned that the majority of retailers in the larger cities of the United States prefer American styles.

A local manufacturer said that foreign competitors will have to realize this still more and make their clothing which they intend selling here more on American lines, or else there will be little business developed in this country.

He also said that foreign ready-to-wear garments would not have to be seriously reckoned with by local merchants for some time to come.

LONDON STYLES FAVOR LOOSE ENDS FOR TIES

According to a London report there will be increased activity in the neckwear trad there this fall. The marked style tenuency now is not toward color, but toward shape. The loose ended knot is favored, but many four-in-hands are also shown. Various shades of blue and gray constitute the color trend at present.

In London men are wearing either a jacket suit or a frock coat with a small black bow tie. The start with black will probably extend to other colors as the season continues.

It is thought, however, that this vogue will not be generally adopted, as it is entirely out of keeping with the fall ideas advanced by English haberdashers.

Once-overs and Ascots are being revived in a small way.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The United States ranks fourth as purchaser of English goods, with $146,000,000 last year.

The Bethlehem Steel Corporation is seeking bids in England and Ireland to build nine iron ore carriers of 15,000 tons dead-weight capacity.

The Canadian Government, in contract with the United Fruit Company of Nova Scotia, has established a new steamship line between Canada and England, in order to secure more satisfactory access to the English market.

The Chicago and Northwestern, with proceeds of $4,000,000 equipment trust certificates recently sold, will pay for switching engines, 2,000 gondola cars and 2,005 box cars.

WHITCOMB CO. IMPORT MUCH CORNED BEEF

Soaring Prices of Meats Bringing South American Product to the United States

Meat is going up, and up, with no end in sight.

This has led to a curious state of affairs. Corned beef, peculiarly a product of the United States, now is being imported from South America in great quantities, and Libby, McNeill & Libby, the Chicago packers, advise their representatives in Atlanta, H. H. Whitcomb & Burke Company, that nothing but the South American product now is to be had.

The quality is declared to be excellent. The steers of the Argentine prairies are fully equal in quality to those of our own Western ranges, and the only difference the consumer can detect is that instead of saying "U. S. Inspected and Passed," the labels bear the stamps, "Inspected under the Food and Drug Act of June 30, 1906"—in other words, the customs service now does the inspecting instead of the Bureau of Animal Industry.

Never before, so far as anyone remembers, has it been profitable to import tinned meats. This could take place only under exceptional conditions such as the present, when corned beef in 14-pound containers is quoted to retailers at $37 per dozen or thereabouts, while two years ago it was quoted at about $21.

Libby, McNeill & Libby were among the first to foresee the inevitable shortage of American meats and to establish a packing house on the other side of the equator. They now are reaping the benefit.

While it is believed that corned beef never before has been imported direct from South America, last year the same packers, after shipping large quantities of the product to Europe, reimported it at a profit because of a sudden bulge in prices in the United States.

Vienna sausage and potted ham, the Whitcomb company advises, have advanced 5 per cent in the past ten days, and pork sausage, pure, has advanced 28 per cent in three weeks.

Temporarily, the live stock market is depressed by the heavy shipments from the West, East and South, due to the great damage to the corn crop in the West and to the hay crop in the East. The shipments from the South were attracted by the high prices buyers paid when they made a "raid" on Southern cattle a month or so ago, which attracted the attention of the United States Government.

The Government warned the farmers of Georgia and Florida to keep their cattle, not deplete their herds, and to fatten them for market at home instead of selling them lean for fattening in the West and North.

NEW KIND OF PIPE LINE.

One of the most remarkable mechanical devices ever used in connection with the manufacture of paper is being installed at Orange, Texas. This is a "blower," more than a mile long, through which the waste yellow pine timber from a local lumber mill will be sent to a paper mill. The slabs as they come from the mill will be ground into small particles and forced by means of compressed air through the long pipe to the paper manufacturing plant. This paper mill is said to be the only plant in the world that makes paper from yellow pine pulp. It has a daily output of thirty-three tons of wrapping paper.

DEMAND FOR RAMIES TO IMPROVE IN THE SPRING

The fall linen season is shaping up well. The demand for ratines has hurt ramie linens, but it is pointed out that the former soil more easily and do not hold their shape as well as ramie suitings, and that a better demand for ramies is looked for next spring. Light blues, pinks and browns will lead the color demand for ramie goods.

ENGLISH TRADE GROWS.

The July statement of English Board of Trade shows increases of $17,436,500 in imports and $25,880,000 in exports. Imports of foodstuffs increased $8,875,000, and raw material about $5,000,000.

RUBBER FACTORY FOR BRAZIL.

Within a year the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company will have in operation in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, first big rubber factory to be established on the South American continent, to cost $1,300,000.

Women's Footwear Seen in Many Colors

Leather and Cloth Combinations Shown—Men's Shoes Made Along English Lasts.

Imported models on which fall and winter styles for women's evening slippers are based are leather and cloth color combinations, among which red, green, gray, white and champagne are to be featured in strap and colonial effects.

There is a tendency to drop cut steel buckles, and those of jet will be much used. Another popular buckle will be of oxidized silver, in colonial design, with a satin filler to match the panel.

Panel effects are featured in the smartest slippers. A model well thought of is of patent leather, has a modified duck bill, too, and a jet buckle filled with satin matching the narrow panel extending from the buckle to the side seam. The heel is full Louis-Cuban. Featured suede slippers are of taupe, also with color combinations.

Women's street shoes shown have the long French vamp and square throat combined with cloth top color combinations. They are made with a plain toe, are fitted with the full Louis-Cuban heel and are of the button variety.

Men's shoes for fall and winter are made along the straight, laced, English last, and the color tendency is toward dark tan and gunmetal. Low, flat heels are shown almost exclusively. The blucher style is taboo.

Arizona Grows Fine Egyptian Cotton

Salt River Valley Experiments Reach Stage Where Gin and Oil Mill Are Needed.

Excellent results are being obtained in the growing of long staple Egyptian cotton in the Salt River Valley of Arizona. Under the direction of Mr. E. W. Hudson, of the Department of Agriculture, the industry has come to include over 4,000 acres in planted cotton, yielding in most cases a net profit of $100 an acre.

While the severe drouth throughout the entire West has made inroads on every other crop, the Arizona cotton has prospered to such a degree that a ginning plant and an oil mill to make use of the cotton seed are to be established by the time the crop is ready.

The subcommittee of the American commission which has been making a study of cotton growing and cotton marketing in Egypt shows that not only can American methods applied to the raising of Egyptian cotton reduce the cost approximately 50 per cent, but that our progressive farmers, although handicapped by the quality of our soil as compared with that of the Nile Delta, can bring our long staple cotton yield per acre up to that of Egypt's.

Long staple cotton brings from 21 to 25 cents a pound on the spot.

Already the irrigation system employed in the Delta lands has been employed in Arizona. The rest must be worked up by American intelligence and American industry, for Egypt with her antiquated methods of cultivation offers little further guidance.

FIRST BALE BRINGS 12 CTS. PER POUND IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Before the entrance to the Cotton Exchange the first bale of upland cotton grown in Chatham County was auctioned. The bale brought 12 cents a pound, 2 cents better than current values. The first bale was grown by W. M. Kennedy and ginned by Floyd & So. The staple graded good middling.

FANCY SHOE BUCKLES.

The wearing of elaborate slipper buckles was particularly noticeable during the Grand Semaine racing week, as the prevailing style of short skirts allows the entire shoe to be seen. The custom is now quite the craze, and many society people are adopting special buckle designs to be worn with various costumes. They are appearing daily with a different buckle to harmonize with each different gown.

MEN'S COLLARS ARE INVENTION OF A HOUSEWIFE

Ingenious Woman Contrived Familiar Article to Lessen Amount of Washing in Home.

The detachable collar now worn by men the world round was the invention of a thrifty housewife 53 years ago. It sprang from sheer necessity, and yet it was so simple an article of wearing apparel that its first maker never looked upon her production as an invention, and it is doubtful if the other early manufacturers thought of patenting the idea.

During the succeeding years, in which the manufacture of collars and their allied products has become a great industry in and around Troy, N. Y., the incident of the invention of the collar had almost been lost until recently brought to light by the unearthing of a family tradition.

It is now certain that Mrs. Hannah Lord Montague was the maker of the first detachable linen collar. Mr. Montague was engaged in the manufacture of fine shoes for women. He was a large man, very particular in matters of dress, and in those days before the invention of the sewing machine and before great public laundries were established, the making, washing and ironing of the shirts formed quite an item in the work of the household.

Mrs. Montague was resourceful, and in endeavoring to lighten her household duties she hit upon the idea of a detached collar, which could be fastened to a neckband of her husband's shirt and washed and ironed separately. Before this time, when the collar was soiled, the whole shirt had to be washed, but by this device two or three collars might be used to one shirt. Acting upon the idea which had come to her, Mrs. Montague went to the patch bag, selected a strip of white linen, which she cut and shaped to fit the neckband of her husband's shirt, sewed it, turned it inside out, and attached a narrow string of braid at either end to tie about the neck. This was the original string collar.

Thus through the resourcefulness of a woman the modern detachable collar was evolved.

A FREE TRIP

To Atlanta is available to the merchant who buys an adequate bill from the members of the Merchants' Association.

Write to

H. T. Moore
SECRETARY.
Rhodes Building, Atlanta.

Write for our latest Catalogue. The leading merchants are adding the 5c and 10c departments. Why not one for your town?
McCLURE 10c CO., 47-49 S. Broad St.
Give Your "DIMES" a Chance

The Hirshberg Company
STATIONERY DRUGGISTS' SUNDRIES NOVELTIES BLANK BOOKS
Glendale Line
43-45-47 NELSON STREET ATLANTA

DIXIE PICKLE AND PRESERVING CO.
Manufacturers of
Pure Apple and Distilled Vinegar, Catsup, Pickles, Mustard, Pepper Sauce, Sauer Kraut, Jelly, Etc.
CANNED GOODS
364 to 378 Marietta Street, Atlanta, Ga.

HATS
Caps, Gloves, Umbrellas
QUALITY and VALUES
BROWN, PERRYMAN & GREENE CO.
ATLANTA

VOLLMER MANUFACTURING COMPANY
Moore Building
ATLANTA, GEORGIA
MAKERS OF FINE JEWELRY
Special Designs in Platinum
Engravers Diamond Setters Watchmakers
Specialists in Jewelry Repairing

U. S. CERTAIN CAMINETTI WILL SHARE DIGGS' FATE

Government Bends Every Effort to Speed Trial of Federal Immigration Commissioner's Son on the Charge of "White Slavery."

Former California State Architect, Facing Four to Twenty Years in Prison, Plans Appeal—Companion to Follow Suit if Convicted.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—Supremely confident after the conviction of Maury I. Diggs, former State architect, the United States authorities, prosecuting the famous "white slave" cases, which at one time threatened to disrupt President Wilson's Cabinet, are using every energy to speed the trial and obtain a similar verdict against Drew Caminetti, who was Diggs' companion in the sensational flight to Reno with Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris.

Diggs will be sentenced September 2. Under the verdict of the jury, the Judge can fix the penalty at from four to twenty years, and owing to the fact that virtually the same evidence that was introduced against Diggs will be introduced against Caminetti, leads the Government to believe that conviction is certain.

Diggs' attorneys have already announced they will carry the case to the highest court in the land. Should Caminetti be convicted, he, too, doubtless would appeal.

Diggs Gives $20,000 Bail.

Bail in the sum of $20,000 was readily furnished by Diggs' relatives when the amount was fixed by the court and was accepted by the United States Commissioner.

The case was one of the most spectacular ever tried in California. Diggs is a former State architect. Caminetti is a son of the United States Commissioner of Immigration. Both men are married and have families. Both are of high social standing in Sacramento.

Both men are considerably older that the girls with whom they eloped. The undisputed evidence in the case was that the intimate relations between Diggs and Miss Warrington and Caminetti and Miss Norris had become notorious in Sacramento. Families of both the young men were preparing to start criminal action against them to break these relations.

Then they and the girls disappeared. They were traced to Reno, where the two couples were living as men and wives in a rented bungalow. The men were charged with violations of the Mann anti-white slave act.

Blames Girls for Elopement.

Both Miss Warrington and Miss Norris charged that the men had threatened, cajoled and coerced them into making the trip to Reno. They declared that they had promised to obtain divorces from their wives in order to wed them.

Diggs, in his defense, pleaded that the girls were the persons responsible for the flight, that they had induced them to fly to Reno.

It was this attitude of hiding behind a woman's skirt that caused the most severe condemnation of Diggs. Great stress was laid on it by Theodore Roche, attorney for the Government, in his final appeal to the jury for conviction.

"This defendant," said Roche, "did not deny on the stand the truth of the essential facts we have shown. And then he comes before you and asks acquittal.

"Hides Behind Wife's Skirts."

"The defendant in a criminal case usually bases defense on the presumption of innocence, but this defendant relies on his own depravity. He comes into court covered with his own shame and hides behind the skirts of his wife and child.

"When these girls went to Reno their departure meant social ostracizement. Marsha Warrington went because she believed and trusted this man. She didn't desire money, dresses or presents. Her parents gave her these. But this man had promised her marriage, as Caminetti had promised Lola Norris.

"Those promises were never intended to be kept. What was intended was to abandon the girls in Reno. They never could have returned to Sacramento—and you know what that meant. But the alluring promise of marriage had been held out to them."

Scores Conduct in Home.

Attorney Roche was particularly severe with Diggs for the misconduct in his own home to which he testified yesterday. He had not been content, said Roche, with making an assignation house out of his office, but he was similarly to degrade the privacy of a home he shared with a virtuous and loving wife.

In seeking to establish that the trip was not premeditated and that the two girls had not been induced to take it by threats of scandal on one hand and promises of marriage on the other, Diggs willingly testified to his own misconduct and the embarrassments, domestic and business, into which it had led him.

His counsel in summing up the evidence did not palliate these acts.

"Paint this defendant as you will—a monster if you please," argued Robert Devlin, his senior counsel, "but tell me what motive he would have had in going out of the State for the purpose of accomplishing those things already accomplished.

"Counsel may characterize him as they please, and I may not differ with them. They say his act was shameless, and I may feel the same way about it, but it isn't white slavery."

This was the whole argumentative substance of the defense. There remained the rhetorical and the emotional appeals and, of course, they were not neglected. The girls were blamed for tempting the men. They were called willing accomplices in what evil had been done, and the wisdom of trusting a woman scorned when she bears witness against the lover who has discharged her was called into question.

Southern Drawl an Opera Asset

Alabama Singer Lauds Accent

Sees Fame for Dixie Song Birds

Miss Neida Humphrey.

Miss Neida Humphrey, of Huntsville, Blames Laziness for Dearth of Divas.

HUNTSVILLE, ALA., Aug. 23.—The soft, musical voice of Southern women, which poets have raved about, others have envied and the comic papers have made subject of satire, has a value in dollars, and it has an even greater value in the world of art.

So thinks Miss Neida Humphrey, of Huntsville, who has just returned home after a three-year course of voice culture under Caruso in New York.

Miss Humphrey, realizing the supreme demand for American prima donnas on the operatic stage, not only in this country, but in every capital in Europe, thinks there is a world of opportunity for the young women of her own section in this field.

"The Southern woman's voice," says Miss Humphrey, "possesses more natural musical qualities than the voices of any other women in the world. With proper cultivation that quality should make them the greatest opera stars. The world has long known of this quality, but the Southern women of talent have just refused to grasp their opportunities.

Blames Indolence in Part.

"And I guess the laziness so generally attributed to our people may have a great deal to do with it. Singing, I mean serious singing, is the hardest sort of work.

"There is hardly a girl of social position in the Southland who has not a smattering of musical education. The trouble is it's only a smattering. When they reached the point where singing meant real work they retired gracefully to other fields.

"But I believe that the time is not far off when the Southern girl of talent will realize the life she is overlooking and then I am certain that there will be girls of Dixie whose names will be just as famous as those of Farrar, Suzanne Adams and Louise Homer, all American born.

Miss Humphrey is very young and she is very, very pretty, but that is not all. She has a voice of remarkable power and dramatic quality, but withal she holds in it that soft sweetness that declares her home as plainly as it would be declared were she to walk on the stage waving the Stars and Bars.

Has Charmed the President.

She has already done things in music and she intends to do more. In New York she has sung before the most critical audiences in concert and has won their high approbation. It was she who charmed President Wilson and a distinguished gathering in New York recently at a concert.

In Chattanooga last May, during the reunion of the Confederate Veterans, she sang before the old soldiers and was given an ovation.

Miss Humphrey intends to return to New York in the fall to complete her studies. She has already been assured of an operatic engagement and Huntsville believes that it will soon boast an operatic celebrity.

Dweller in Desert Sees First Pine Tree

Full Grown Woman Is Mystified by Foliage—Also Takes Mountain Snow Bath.

CHICO, CAL., Aug. 23.—Miss Ilene Locey, of Visalia, cousin of Frank M. Moore, of this city, a grown woman, saw her first pine tree when she went with the Moores for an auto trip to the mountains.

She has resided long in the desert southland, and was not only pleased but mystified at the foliage and the fact that she could reach the snow-bound regions of the Sierra Nevadas inside of an hour's time.

The party left here especially to give Miss Locey an idea of the diversified climate of the Sacramento Valley and a snow bath in the higher altitude.

Tents Only Shelter For Toledo Families

City Is Growing So Rapidly That Builders Can Not Construct Houses Demanded.

TOLEDO, Aug. 23.—Because the city has not enough houses to rent and builders are not able to construct houses as rapidly as they are desired tents are being used as homes in Toledo.

Two tent colonies have been established in the city. In both districts occupants of the tents are owners of lots on which the temporary homes have been erected. The lots have been purchased as home sites and tents are serving as temporary homes.

The tent homes consist of living rooms, dining rooms and kitchens. Each has a flower and vegetable garden and one is equipped with a chicken park, a stable and outbuildings. Living rooms are convertible into bedrooms, and hammocks, stretched in the open, are used day and night.

SOUTH IS PAYING HEAVY TOLL FOR CANAL BENEFITS

Colonel Gailliard, of South Carolina, Breaks Down Under Tremendous Task.

More than any other section of the country, the South is expected to realize in prosperity and development by the opening of the Panama Canal. But the South is to pay its toll and pay for it dearly.

Just when the canal was an assured fact, Senator John T. Morgan, of Alabama, father of the Isthmian Waterway idea, died as a result of his years of ceaseless labor impressing the necessity of rthe canal on Congress.

Nok Lieutenant Colonel David Du Bois Gailliard, of South Carolina, the army engineer who dug the Culebra Cut, has had to abandon the scene of his triumph and return to the United States to give his nervous system, shattered by his work, a rest which it has needed for months.

And that is not all. From the zone the advices come that Colonel William L. Sibert, of Alabama, the army engineer in charge of the work on the great Gatun Dam, is on the point of a breakdown and it is extremely doubtful if he will be strong enough to stay in the zone to see his work completed.

Careers of Two Similar.

The careers of Colonel Sibert and Colonel Gailliard have been remarkably similar. Gailliard was born in South Carolina; Sibert, in Alabama. They entered West Point the same year and both graduated in 1884 among the first five men in their class.

After their graduation, both were sent to Willets Point and in 1908, when the canal work was put in the hands of the army engineers, Colonel Goethals immediately picked the two Southerners as his chief aides. Sibert was put in charge of the work on the Atlantic side, which included the building of the Gatun Dam, while Gailliard was in charge of the work in the interior of the zone.

That Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard had suffered a nervous breakdown was known only to a few of his intimate friends in the army. A few weeks ago when his condition became serious the matter was brought to the attention of General Bixby, the chief engineer in Washington, and by General Bixby called to the attention of Secretary of War Garrison, who immediately granted the stricken engineer a long leave of absence.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles F. Mason, Medical Corps, U. S. A., the director of the Ancon Hospital, in the Canal Zone; Mrs. Gaillard and Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard's young son came with him and went with him to Baltimore, where he will enter the John Hopkins Hospital. There he will be under the care of some of the most eminent specialists in nervous disorders in this country.

Leave Did Not Aid Him.

Colonel Gaillard was in New York less than two months ago after a six weeks' leave of absence that he had taken in the hope that the rest would benefit his health to the extent that he would be able to remain in the Canal Zone. He sailed from New York on June 27 last, again to take charge of the work in the Central Division.

Those who talked with him at that time remember that he expressed a desire to get away from the Isthmus as soon as his work was finished, but, he added, with a touch of sadness in his soft Southern voice, "When I do leave it will be with deep and sincere regret."

Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard is the first of the famous army engineers employed in the construction of the Panama Canal to be stricken as a result of his work. A few weeks ago Colonel William M. Black, Corps of Engineers, the chief of that branch of the service in this part of the United States, the officer who was head of the engineering board which solved the problem of raising the old battleship Maine, was in Panama and was Gaillard's guest.

Close Friends for Years.

The two officers have been intimate friends for years. During his stay at Empire, the headquarters of Colonel Gaillard, Colonel Black noted and realized that the builder of Culebra Cut needed a long and complete rest.

"Gaillard," said Colonel Black last night, "is one of the most wonderful organizers the army has developed. His work in the Canal Zone has been little short of marvelous. He laid out his plans in such a way that he got the maximum out of everything, especially in the handling of the railroad part of the work. He was also able within a few months after he took charge at Empire to double the work accomplished in a specified time. Some of the things that he did experienced railroad men had said were practically impossible."

Woman Given Job Of Cleaning Up State

Success in Making Tacoma a Spotless Town Causes Promotion in Service.

TACOMA, Aug. 23.—Because of her successful efforts to transform Tacoma into a "Spotless Town," Miss Arizona B. Wimple, food and market inspector, is to be rewarded with a bigger job—the cleaning up of the State of Washington.

This was the advice received here today from the Governor's office in Olympia, where it is said Miss Wimple is to be appointed State bakery and sanitary inspector.

Her methods in cleaning up Tacoma were simple and direct and included publicity as an aid in bringing about the desired reforms.

Frequent inspections of bakeries and other food dispensing establishments were made and the score announced in the newspapers.

Miss Wimple, who is young and pretty, will receive $4,000 a year from the State.

She is a graduate of the University of Michigan.

CANDLES BURNING AT WAKE SET HOUSE AFIRE

CALGARY, ALBERTA, Aug. 23.—A fire which started from candles set about a coffin at a wake, at the house of J. Selar, here burned the hair and eyebrows off the body of an aged woman. Portions of the face were charred. Firemen extinguished the blaze.

WATCHING MAN WHO STOLE AND HID A FORTUNE

Detectives Shadowing Mail Thief Believed to Have Cached $40,000 After Robbery.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 23.—Charles Savage, a negro mail robber, released from the penitentiary in Leavenworth, is being shadowed by three detectives. He will be kept under watch constantly because somewhere is hidden $40,000 of the $50,000 in currency he stole five years ago from a registered mail pouch, and nobody except Savage knows where it is.

When Savage was released he was met at the door by his mother and a young woman to whom he was engaged before he was sent to prison. They came at once to Kansas City to see an uncle, who is dying.

"They needn't watch me," he said. "If they think I'm going to dig up $40,000 they're mistaken. I wish I knew where there was $40,000 buried."

"Isn't it queer that $2,000 in $20 gold certificates of the same series as stolen from the mail sack were found blowing around in the wind near your mother's home in South Leavenworth this spring?" Savage was asked.

"Yes, that's queer. I don't understand," he answered. "I read about that, and I figured it out that some person who lived in South Leavenworth had stolen that mail sack and hidden the money there, and the rain had washed away the dirt where it was buried, and the wind got at it and blew it away."

Employees' Pension Measure Approved

Pennsylvania Cities Are Permitted to Establish Fund for Faithful Municipal Workers.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—Under the provisions of an act passed by the Legislature, which Governor Tener has approved, this city is given authority to establish a municipal pension fund for employees. The act applies to all city employees who have given twenty years of service to the city.

The act provides that in the event of the creating of the fund every employee will be compelled to pay into the fund 1 per cent of his yearly salary.

The pension to be allowed the beneficiary will be equal to one-half of the average yearly salary received by him during the last two years before his retirement.

College Professor Seeks Laborer's Pay

Unable to Make Both Ends Meet, Teacher Resigns Chair in University.

BERKELEY, CAL., Aug. 23.—Unable to make both ends meet on a salary of $900 paid him by the University of California, Paul Boehncke, an instructor in the German department, has withdrawn from the faculty and is seeking a position in which he can support himself and family of two children.

During the last few summers Boehncke has managed to augment his meager salary by working as a plasterer at from $5 to $7 a day, or nearly twice the amount he was paid by the university.

Apache War in '80's Is Cause of Divorce

Husband Deserted Thirty Years Ago by Wife Who Didn't Like Wild West.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Geronimo and his wild hordes of Apaches, who terrorized New Mexico in the eighties, were the direct cause of a divorce suit which Allen L. Eaton begun yesterday in the Superior Court against Zuma E. Eaton.

The Eatons were married in Silver City, N. Mex., in 1886, when the Apache uprising was on. Mrs. Eaton, who hailed from Pittsburg, did not enjoy the wild Western life her married life entailed, and she deserted her husband.

Common Laborer Strikes Big Gold Vein

Ore Will Run $60,000 to Ton and Mine Is Largest in Southern Oregon.

MEDFORD, OREG., Aug. 23.—What is reported as the biggest gold strike made in Southern Oregon has been reported by Elmer Higginbotham on the mine owned by him and M. G. Womack on Kane's Creek. The ore will run $60,000 to the ton, according to assays of samples made here.

Higginbotham had been a common laborer for many years until Womack offered to "grub-stake" him on a prospecting trip up Kane's Creek.

BERI BERI CAUSED BY RICE DIET, SAYS EXPERT

Special Cable to The American.

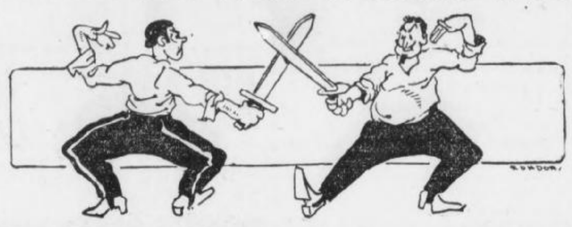
BERLIN, Aug. 23.—The Berlin Medical Association reports that the well-known investigator of beri beri, Dr. Max Moszkowski, finds, after a remarkable experiment, that the disease is caused by the use of rice.

Dr. Moszkowski for 138 days subsisted almost entirely upon rice. All the symptoms of beri beri manifested themselves.

At the close of the experiment an injection of serum containing an extract of rice resulted in a complete recovery.

Hunnicutt Won in First Round

Beat Bravo With Wooden Sword



How Atlanta's Broadsword Champion Worsted French Fencing Master.

Time was when the prize fight was not au fait, when in the best families, and even in the second best, and maybe in the third, they frowned down upon the pugilistic art as brutal and degenerate. Then it was that the youn bloods turned to cockfighting and fencing for the gladiatorial features of their lives, and were satisfied.

And that time was not so very long ago. Calvin W. Hunnicutt, who is Atlanta's oldest citizen, revived them in memory yesterday, when he fell to the young bloods turned to cockfight-between Charley White and Frank Whitney, with the remark that things were not like this of yore.

Of course, he had a dueling story of his own to tell, and he told it—of how he fought an arrogant French fencing master in a combat with wooden swords, and how all Atlanta looked on and cheered him as its champion.

It occurred before the war, when all good things, it seems, occurred. It occurred just at the beginning of the war, and had its effect in keeping Mr. Hunnicutt out of that conflict.

"There had been talk of war, war, war pretty generally," he said. The trouble clouds were thick and black, and we organized here in Atlanta a cavalry troop that we called the Fulton Dragoons. Captain Wilson was our officer, I was first lieutenant, and C. B. Whaley, my best friend, was first sergeant.

"All went well at first, and things were pleasant. But after a while politics began to leak in, as inevitably it will with all volunteer military bodies. Everybody knows everybody else so well, you see that very naturally jealousy comes in. Anyhow, when the time came for the election of a captain for a new term, Whaley and I, backing Wilson, lost out, because the other man promised horses to all members of the troop. Then dissatisfaction grew and the organization loosened.

"The new captain and his great ally, Second Lieutenant Williams, were full of ideas as to how to run a military organization, and began to put these ideas into play. That made more dissatisfaction for no volunteer soldier likes to be driven by men who were their friends and associates.

"One of their ideas was the importation of a fencing teacher to instruct the men in broadsword use. Now Whaley and I had practiced considerably with the broadsword, and were rather expert in its use, but we said nothing of it to the captain and his friends.

"Well, the fencing master came, a Frenchman from Mobile. He was a flourishing, affected sort of fellow, and considerable of a boaster. Not long after he was here, he broke off teaching and began to talk about his own great skill and to show it off.

"One day he challenged all of us.

" 'Nobody here can touch me with his sword,' he announced. 'I don't fear to let any of you try.' And he flourished his sword.

"Whaley and I decided to take him on, and I went to him. He laughed at me. But I insisted, and the date was set for our combat. That there should be no bloodshed—because we were going to do some furious fencing, it seemed—I put a negro of mine to work making two wooden swords, or sticks. These were to be our weapons.

"Somehow the tidings that there was to be a fight got abroad. Atlanta was not as large as it is now, but it was a right smart town even then, and when the day for the fight came, everybody turned out.

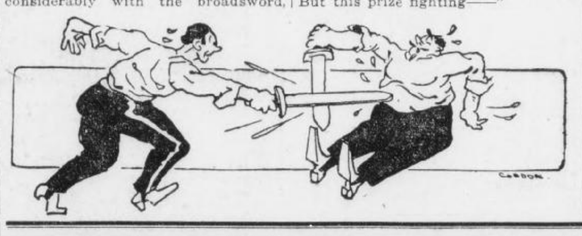
"We had planned to have the duel in a theater, owned in the days of old Atlanta by a man named Williams. The place was packed, and I began to be a little nervous over the public nature of the affair.

"We squared off, and the crowd settled back in the seats for a long and interesting fight. But it wasn't for long. The Frenchman came at me with a flourish, and I had a flourish to match his. Thence I made a thrust at him, the thrust that we know technically as the point tierce. It went through his guard, and to his body. If we had been fighting with real swords, my opponent would have been run through.

"All Atlanta laughed. The Frenchman had pretty generally advertised his ability to fight, and everybody was there. However, there were one or two persons who didn't like the way the fight came out, particularly the new captain of the dragoons and his ally. After the fight they began working to get me to resign. The duel, they claimed everywhere, might have an effect in breaking up discipline. And so, with their dissatisfaction showing plain, I resigned.

"The Frenchman we didn't see after the half minute duel. If the dragoons learned broadsword fencing, they learned it from somebody else.

"It's a pity the art of fencing does not survive in the popular fancy. It is clean, beneficial and interesting. But this prize fighting——"



LOOKS FOR BODY OF FATHER LOST IN ICE 43 YEARS

Miss Edith Randall, of Boston, Expects to Find Corpse on Glacier at Foot Mt. Blanc.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Miss Edith Randall, of this city, has gone to Chamonix, Switzerland, one one of the strangest erranda known. She hopes to find in the glacier there the body of her father, who lost his life climbing on Mont Blanc forty-three years ago. Ten others were lost with him in a snowstorm near the summit. All told, two Americans, one Scotchman and eight guides and porters died.

Five of the bodies were recovered. It is expected by guides that the six others will be delivered up by the glacier this year.

Scientists are interested as it may supply evidence to prove their theories on the speed of the annual march of glaciers toward the valleys.

Miss Randall's father, John Randolph, a Boston banker, was fifty-four when he lost his life in 1870.

Last year Miss Randall came to Chamonix, as the ice axe and several small articles relonging to Mr. Randall had been found by guides at the foot of the Glacier des Bossons.

Many Americans and English Alpinists, as well as guides, joined in the search for the body, but without result. All hope for better luck this summer.

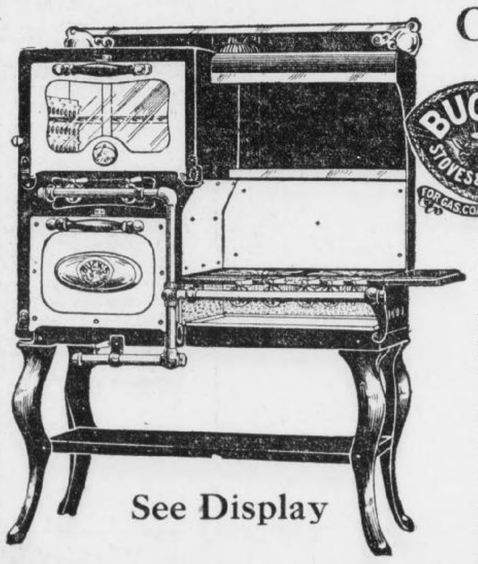
"Back on the Job"

again and very quickly, too, if you will only let Hostetter's Stomach Bitters help the digestion to become normal, keep the liver active and the bowels free from constipation. These are absolutely necessary in order to maintain health. Try it to-day but be sure it's

HOSTETTER'S Stomach Bitters

25% DISCOUNT

On All BUCK'S Gas Stoves and Ranges



See Display

Buck's—the most conveniently arranged, the most sanitary, and certainly the most economical gas user made—comes in for a tremendous discount this week.

They are here—anything from the small stove to the most elaborate range—and all are carrying the same big discount. Discard your old, worn, smoking, fuel-consuming cooking machine to-morrow, and let us replace it with one of these modern stoves or ranges.

The savings of your fuel bill will soon pay for any BUCK'S you may select.

Connections Free--$1 a Week Buys Your Choice

That's fair enough, isn't it? We will actually put it in your kitchen—ready to turn on the gas—and you can pay the bill at one dollar per week. Come in to-morrow and take your choice. See our big Mitchell street window display.

Rhodes-Wood FURNITURE COMPANY

COMPLETE HOUSEFURNISHERS

103-5-7-9-11 Whitehall Street, Corner Mitchell

SOUTHWEST GEORGIA EXTRA

HEARST'S SUNDAY AMERICAN

EXTRA

VOL. I. NO. 21. Copyright, 1913, by The Georgian Company. ★★★ ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY, AUGUST 24, 1913. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

BOLL WEEVIL COSTS SOUTH BILLION; ZONE CURE URGED

Senator Smith of South Carolina Secures Government Expert's Figures on Total Estimated Ravages During Last 17 Years.

Shows How $107,539,127 Yearly Cost of Proposed Remedy Could Be Counteracted by Diversified Crops and United States Aid.

(The zone strip to which Senator Smith refers as a remedy for the boll weevil, as proposed, would begin in Tennessee and run down through Alabama and part of Florida.)

By ELLISON D. SMITH.
(United States Senator From South Carolina.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—A few weeks ago I asked some of the officials in the Department of Agriculture to give me an estimate of the losses the farmers of the South have suffered as the result of the boll weevil. The figures furnished me are startling. From the report I make the following extract:

"The only adequate way of arriving at the losses due to the boll weevil is by studying the average production per acre by States, comparing years of non-infestation with years of infestation. It is quite noticeable that every State by the third year of infestation has shown a decided reduction in average yield per acre.

"This average production is used in connection with the acreage planted to obtain an estimate in money value of the loss from the boll weevil to the producers. This is only the primary loss and is turned over and over again as it reacts upon ginners, oil mill men, merchants, bankers, property values, manufacturers of the textile and the final consumers.

"The total loss to producers obtained by this method from 1895 through 1912 is $841,521,135, or an average during the 18 years of $46,751,174 per annum, with the loss now reaching over $100,000,000 per annum.

These Only Obvious Losses.

"Only the more obvious losses from the ravages of this pest can even be estimated. These are the losses in productivity suffered by the producers and the losses in business of the first processes in manufacture.

"Figures are presented to show the losses to the planter, the ginner and the oil mills as follows, for the period from 1895 to 1912:

Loss to the planters	$841,521,135
Loss to the ginners	17,446,295
Loss to the oil mills	72,270,421
Total	$931,237,852

"To these must be added losses in business suffered by cotton buyers and brokers, merchants, bankers and cotton mills, the loss in property values, the ultimate effects upon the consumer."

In other words, officials of the Department of Agriculture estimate that the loss to the South from the boll weevil between 1895 and 1912 has been considerably more than $1,000,000,000. This is staggering.

The Government has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars to stamp out the boll weevil, but without avail. The Government experts, entomologists, farm demonstration agents and others have done splendid work in teaching the farmers better methods of cultivation, rotation of crops, etc., but so far as checkmating the boll weevil is concerned they themselves admit that their work has been a failure.

Moves Eastward Steadily.

"The weevil continues its march eastward at a steady pace each year, and in no section where it has made its appearance has any method been discovered of minimizing the damage done by it.

Unless something is done it will not be very long until the entire cotton area of the South is infested.

Of course, some cotton can be grown in the area infested by the boll weevil, but the yield per acre and per farm is greatly reduced, while the cost of production is greatly increased. I am told by a member of Congress who owns a large plantation in an infested section that it costs just about twice as much to produce a bale of cotton now as it cost before the boll weevil came. Many others have given me testimony to the same effect.

When one undertakes to estimate the loss to the South during recent years because of this little insect, and then tries to estimate the probable loss in the future, the result must be appalling.

I have been deeply interested in the boll weevil for a number of years. I have watched its spread from the time it made its first appearance in

Continued on Page 6, Column 4.

New Cancer Cure Arouses Germany

Kaiser's Subjects Have Cornered Supply of Mesothorium, Found in U. S. and Brazil.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Mesothorium, the new cure for cancer, is causing great excitement in Germany, according to Dr. F. D. Donoughe, of Boston, who has just returned from the Cancer Congress at Brussels and the Medical Congress in London. German towns have subscribed large sums for the purchase of mesothorium, which is found in Colorado, the Carolinas and Brazil.

A rayless product of therum, it becomes active through transformation into radio-therum. The price, formerly one-sixth that of radium, recently has become higher. Hungary and Germany have purchased the supply of mesothorium available until 1915. It is said to be a dependable cure for certain forms of cancer.

Sir Herbert Tree's Cast Stirs British Ire

Americans in 'Joseph and His Brethren' Win Noted Playwright's Praise.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Antagonism has been aroused in London theatrical circles because Americans are to play the principal roles in Sir Herbert Tree's production of "Joseph and His Brethren."

Sir Herbert said:

"The Americans are wonderful in whatever they attempt to do. I have the greatest faith in their powers, and, without wishing to enter on a comparison between American and English methods, I must say I think Maxine Elliott will be a peerless Zeulika, and George Relph a most romantic Joseph."

Caruso Sadly Says: 'My Star Is Dimming'

Tenor Thinks Public Soon Will Desert Him for Young and Brilliant Star.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, Aug. 23.—Caruso, who is taking the cure with his eldest son at Monte Catini, is in a philosophical mood. To a newspaper man he said:

"It is about time the public ceased to take an interest in me. There are plenty of young stars rising who soon will shine with dazzling brilliancy in the firmament of art. Mine is dimming; don't you think so?"

Then he sadly shook his head and walked slowly away.

HEARTHSTONE 200 YEARS OLD FOUND IN MINNESOTA

ST. PAUL, MINN., Aug. 23.—The hearthstone used by early French voyagers who made their headquarters in the stone house at Taylors Falls, in Interstate Park, was found by workmen excavating in the foundations for relics. The house is thought to have been built 200 years ago.

NEGRO VILLAGE DESTROYED BY MOB OF WHITES

Buildings Are Blown Up by Heavy Dynamite Charge and Then Torch Is Applied.

NO CASUALTIES REPORTED

Attack of Merchant on Young Man Cause of Outbreak—Black Makes Escape.

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—Greenough, a negro village just over the line in Mitchell County, has been partially destroyed by a mob of white men. No deaths have been reported.

It appears that John Davis and his brother, young white men, had advanced some money to Bradley Brothers, negro proprietors of the leading store of Greenough. The negroes failed to return the money, and when the white men went to collect, a difficulty arose, in which one of the negroes struck John Davis with a scantling, knocking him unconscious. The Davis boys escaped to their home and reported the difficulty and the action of the negroes. At night a mob of white men asesmbled and marched on the village, armed with dynamite and such firearms as could be procured.

When the village was reached, it was found the Bradleys had escaped. A charge of dynamite was exploded under the store and it was completely demolished, together with the stock of goods. Other stores were fired and many shots emptied into negro houses. The fire was returned by the blacks for a short time, but without effect.

The Bradleys have not been seen since the outbreak, and further trouble is not expected by the whites.

LEO M. FRANK as he appeared in court yesterday. The defendant was calm under the terrific denunciation of the prosecutor and watched Mr. Dorsey intently through the many hours that the Solicitor consumed in declaring the defendant one of the greatest of criminals. He seemed scarcely more moved than the spectators.

DORSEY DEMANDS DEATH PENALTY FOR FRANK IN THRILLING CLOSING PLEA

Solicitor's Scathing Address Halted by Adjournment---Had Spoken for More Than Six Hours---Cheered by Big Crowd Outside the Courthouse.

PRISONER CALM, WIFE SOBS AS STATE CHARGES MURDER

Slain Girl's Mother Breaks Down, but Defendant Faces Spectators With Hint of Smile---Case May Go to the Jury by Monday Noon.

Insisting upon the application of the Mosaic law of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey demanded the life of Leo M. Frank yesterday in expiation of the murder of Mary Phagan on April 26.

Nothing less than the death penalty would satisfy justice, declared the Solicitor in one of the most bitter and impassioned addresses a Georgia courtroom audience ever has heard.

It was the closing argument of the State before the fate of Frank is placed in the hands of the twelve jurors. It was interrupted by adjournment at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The Solicitor had been speaking since 9 o'clock in the forenoon and was exhausted by his efforts. His address had begun at 3:30 the afternoon before and had consumed a total of six and a half hours.

Crowd Greets Him With Cheers.

When, weak with fatigue, he asked for a recess and court adjourned until Monday morning at 9 o'clock, a great crowd awaited him outside to cheer him and rend the air with their yells because of the magnificent fight he has put up to send Frank to the gallows for the murder of the little factory girl.

The demonstration was spontaneous and was of greater magnitude than that of the night before. He had aroused to the highest pitch the admiration of the populace for the earnest and determined battle he was conducting for the conviction of the man he deemed guilty of the murder.

Men in front of the courthouse cheered with all their might as Dorsey came in sight from out the courtroom doors. Men from across the street took up the cheer and the little Solicitor was given the demonstration of a governor or some other popular hero as he quickly tucked his books and records under his arms and escaped through the crowd into his law offices in the Kiser building.

Hurls Charge Directly at Frank.

If his tongue was tipped with venom and bitterness, it can hardly be said that the Solicitor was not sincere and in earnest. Every word and every pharse that he uttered during his long speech—the longest of the trial—carried with it the conviction that the speaker was in deadly earnest.

Much of the time he was talking directly at the prisoner and was accusing him of murder and other crimes unmentionable. He looked Frank right in the eye. He leveled his finger at the defendant sitting calmly between his mother and his beautiful wife. He called him a "red-handed murderer" and a pervert. Frank did not flinch.

During a brief intermission, Frank even walked in front of the spectators with the suggestion of a smile on his face. If there was any fear of the verdict in his heart, it was kept buried there, far out of sight of human eyes.

Likens Frank to Oscar Wilde.

Dorsey compared the defendant with that prince of perverts, Oscor Wilde, and there was never a flicker of Frank's eye nor a change in his quiet, speculative expression. Dorsey told of other men who had possessed good reputations and yet had been guilty of the most heinous offenses—Theodore Durant, of San Francisco; Pastor Richeson, of Boston; Mayor McCue, of Charlottsville, Va.; Henry C. Beattie, of Richmond; Dr. Crippen, and others. In the same connection he mentioned the name of Judge Iscariot and Benedict Arnold, both of whom, he said, were supposed to be of good character until they had become traitors and betrayers.

"Character isn't worth a cent when you've got the evidence before you," shouted the Solicitor after he had compared Frank with some of the most infamous persons he could call to mind.

Prisoner Encourages His Wife.

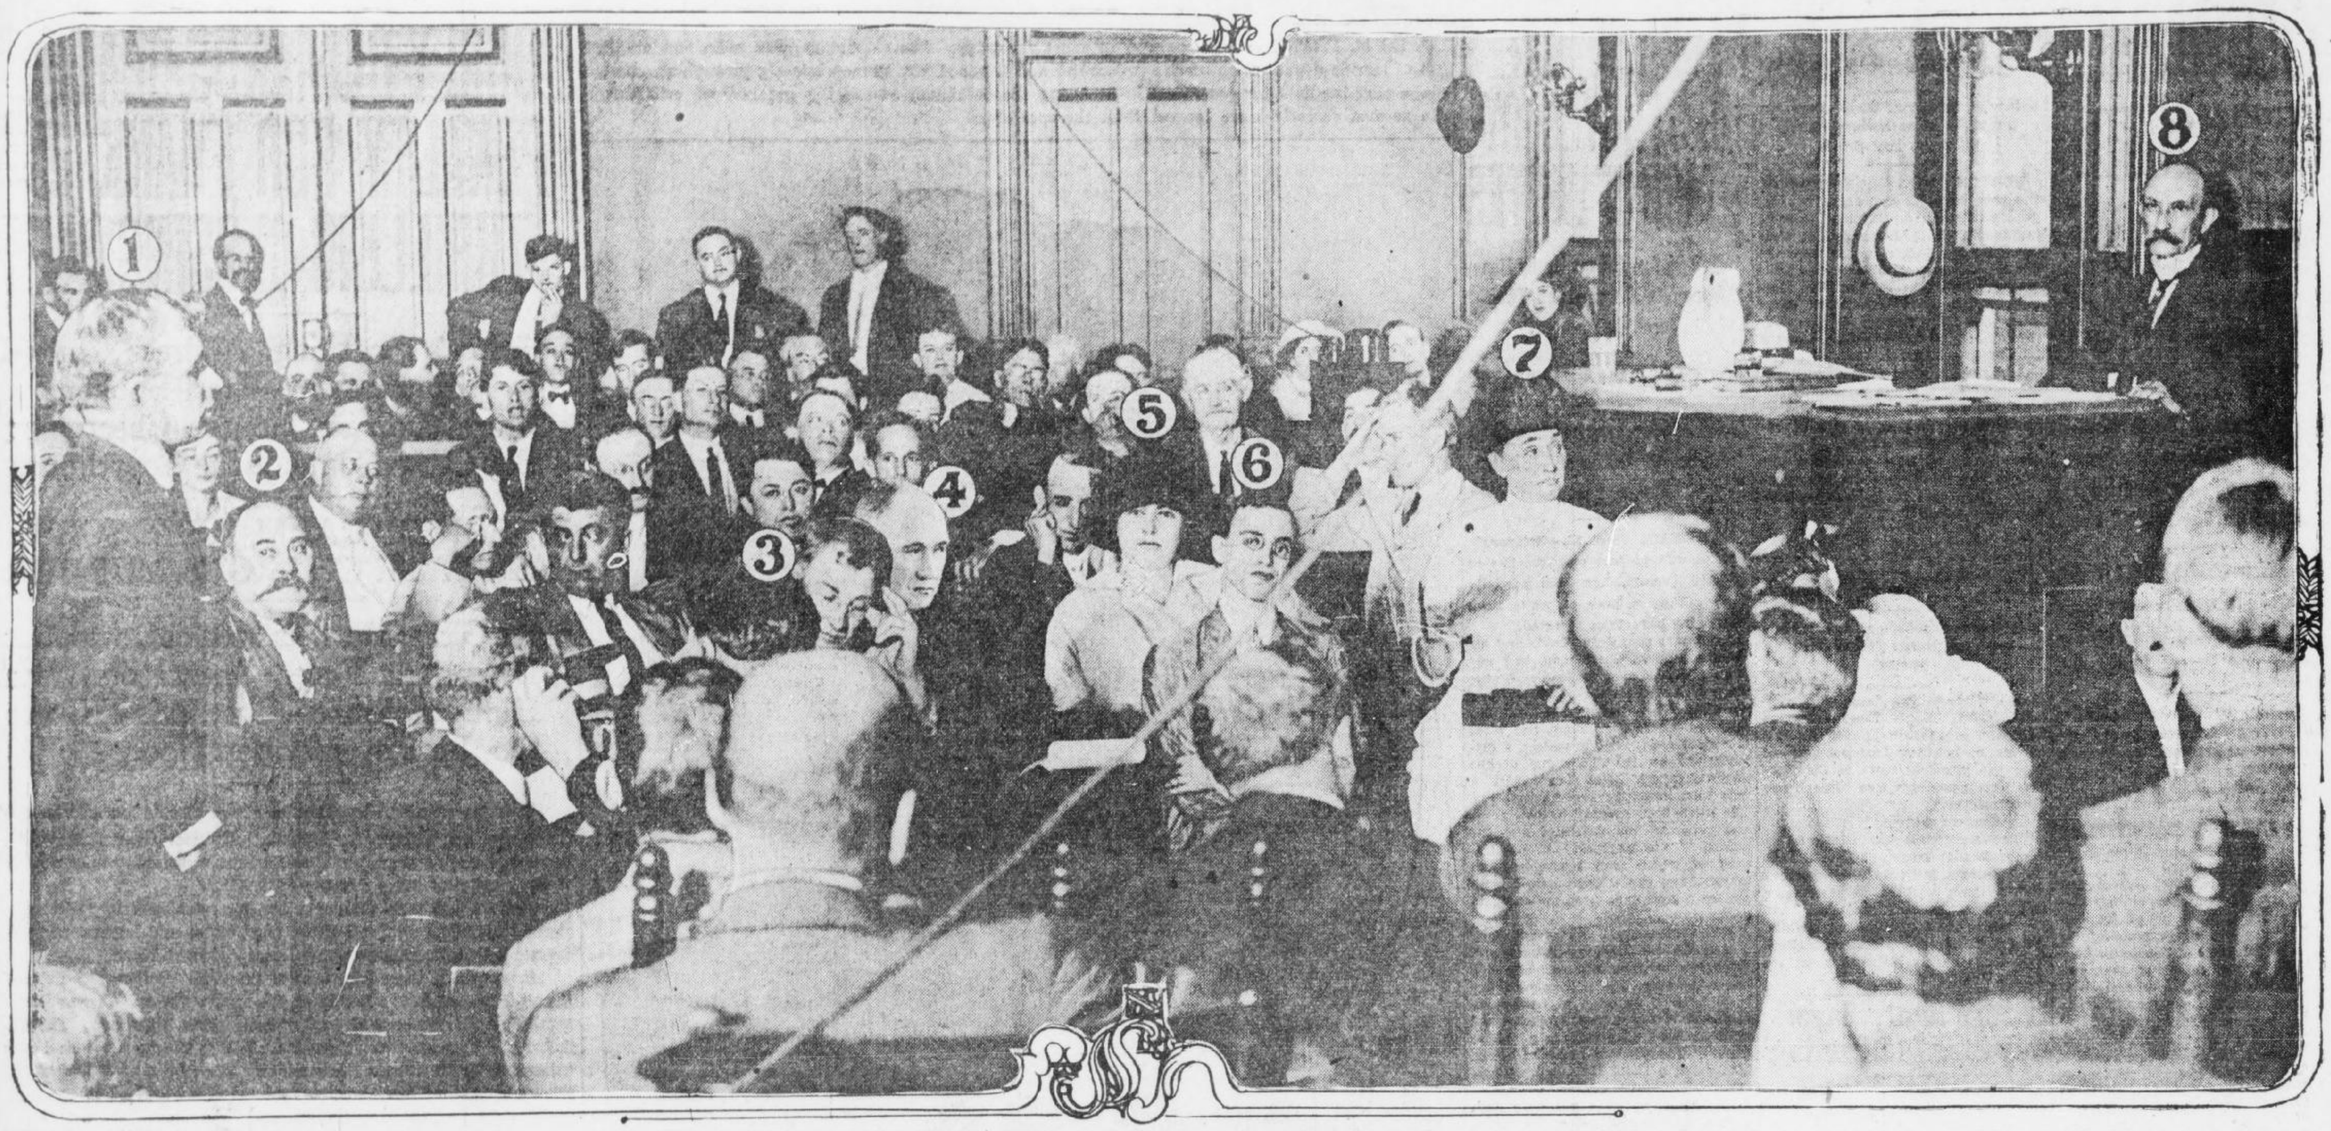
His denunciation at times was so unsparing and his words so like a physical blow that it seemed that the prisoner must quail before him. But Frank maintained his composure. In fact, during a lull in the storm of invective he occasionally would lean toward his wife or his mother and whisper a few words, accompanying them with a smile. For all that his manner betokened, he might be talking of some amusing incident that had just occured to him.

If the Solicitor's words failed to affect Frank, he was probably the only person in the courtroom who did not feel the intensity and the grim determination behind each sentence and each accusation that came from the lips of the State's representative.

So overcome at Dorsey's blunt and grewsome description of the torturous manner in which the pretty little factory girl had

DEATH PENALTY DEMANDED FOR LEO M. FRANK

A TENSE moment in the courtroom yesterday when Solicitor Dorsey was denouncing Frank in his dramatic plea to the jury. Numbered in the picture are (1) Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey, (2) Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford, (3) Attorney Reuben Arnold of counsel for the defense, (4) Luther Z. Rosser, who has had charge of the battle for Frank's life; (5) Mrs. Leo M. Frank, wife of the defendant; (6) Leo M. Frank, whose rate will soon rest with the jury; (7) Mrs. Rea Frank, his mother, and (8) Judge L. S. Roan.



DORSEY CHEERED AFTER GREAT CLOSING SPEECH

been attacked and strangled to death was Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan, that she collapsed utterly and wept. Frank's young wife was affected by the scene and she laid her head upon the shoulder of her accused husband and cried for several minutes.

The very manner in which Frank had borne himself during the long trial was used by the Solicitor against him. Such remarkable nerve and effrontery he declared he never had witnessed before in a court of justice. Dorsey thought it merely was one of the outcropping characteristics of the defendant's perverted moral and intellectual nature. He compared him to the brilliant Wilde, whose effrontery and insouciance in the midst of charges of unspeakable conduct was a mater of world-wide knowledge.

When he was interrupted by adjournment the Solicitor was far from the end of his argument. He had taken longer than he expected. He had paused longer on certain aspects of the cast than he had inteded. It seemed probable that he would require most of Monday forenoon to conclude his address.

Scoffs at Frank's Alibi.

Attacking the main points of Frank's defense, he came out boldly with the declaration that Frank's alibi was no alibi at all. He said that the whole of Frank's alibi practically hinged on the test mony of Miss Helen Curran, of No. 110 Ashby street, who had testified that she saw the young factory superintendent waiting for his car at Whitehall and Alabama streets Saturday afternoon at 1:10 o'clock.

At this point Dorsey dramatically brought forth the statement of Frank which he had made on the first day that he was detained at police headquarters.

"Listen to this," he said shaking the paper before the eyes of the jurymen. Then he quoted from Frank's statement which read:

"I didn't lock the door that morning. The mail was coming up. I locked it when I left for lunch at 1:10."

Makes Charge of Perjury.

"There goes your alibi," said the Solicitor. "It was punctured by your own statement made before you realized the importance of the time element."

Dorsey characterized as perjuries the statement of the Curran girl, that of Miss Fleming, a former stenographer; that of E. F. Holloway, day watchman, and that of Charley Lee.

He threw the suspicion of wrongdoing upon the character of the young woman, Miss Sarah Barnes, who dramatically had expressed her conviction of Frank's innocence on the stand and had declared her willingness to die in his place. The Solicitor overlooked nothing tending to point the hand of guilt toward Leo Frank.

Dorsey mentioned time and again the fact that the defense had failed to cross-examine the State's character witnesses. He said that he had dared them to do it, and that they had been afraid of the disclosures that would ensue.

Asserts Shirt Was "Plant."

He charged that the bloody shirt at Newt Lee's house, the pay envelope, the rope and the club on the first floor of the factroy were plants.

He said that Frank's statement in a letter to his unable, written the afternoon of the crime, that "nothing startling had happened," while intended to be self-serving, was in reality self-accusing.

Referring to the notes found by the girl's body, he called attention to the use of the word "did." He said that Conley always said "done," and that if "did" was used in the notes they must have been dictated by someone else.

He added that the reference in the notes to the toilet on the second floor was a strong indication that the murder had been committed there.

The Solicitor charged that Frank had been endeavoring to forfe his attentions upon the Phagan girl for weeks and that his advances culminated in the brutal attack of Memorial Day.

Gives His Theory of Crime.

Resisted again, Frank, in brutish fury, struck donw the girl, accomplished his purpose, and then, realizing his position, sought to escape being identified with the attack by winding a rope about the girl's neck and strangling her to death, according to the graphic words of the prosecutor.

As the hour passed noon, the Solicitor began to show signs of fatigue. His spirit was as indomitable and fiery as ever, but his features grew a bit haggard, and the weeks of tireless work on the case began to display themselves more plainly on his face.

At 1:30 he asked if there might not be a recess, as he was about exhausted. There was a side bar conference between the attorneys for both sides, and Judge Roan announced that adjournment would be taken until Monday.

It was thought likely that Dorsey would finish about noon. The judge's charge probably will occupy an hour or more, and then the case will go into the hands of the twelve jurors.

AUTOIST IS RUN OVER BY HIS OWN MACHINE

JOLIET, ILL., Aug. 23.—Because he cranked his automobile while it was in gear, Harry Lewis, a Joliet banker, was run over and badly injured. Lewis was in a hurry to take some friends to the Union station and neglected to inspect his gears, the machine would not spark the first few whirls of the crank, so he opened the throttle wider, one of the friends put on the exhilarator to help matters, and now Lewis has been two weeks in the hospital.

Policewoman Uses Her Stare as Club

Declares She Has No Trouble With Mashers After One Stern Glare.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Squelch the masher with a look. You don't need a whistle like the Boston women; hatpins do not make good weapons, and a club should be used only in a tight squeeze.

This is the opinion of two of Chicago's policewomen, both long in the business of protecting women.

"I haven't had any trouble with men on the beach this year, even those who didn't know I was a policewoman," said Officer Mary Boyd, who is in charge of the Thirty-ninth street bathing beach. "All you have to do when a man speaks to you insultingly is to look at him. He turns and runs."

Woman Toper Has Thirst Amputated

Obstruction in Her Throat Was Believed Cause of Her Longing For Alchohol.

LIMA, OHIO, Aug. 23.—Mary Calahan, 22, submitted to a surgical operation in the Chief of Police's office today, and it is hoped Mary's thirst was cut out, literally and figuratively.

Several years ago she was shot in the jaw. A splintered bone lodged against her palate, creating a continuous desire for drink. She insists the desire was for strictly alcoholic drink and that she had tried grape juice in vain. Since that time Mary and her tickling bone have given the police a ticklish time.

Chief Ernest May consulted with City Physician Steer. Between them they decided on the operation.

Offers to Serve Out Hawthorne's Term

Pastor-Classmate of Author-Convict Says it Would be 'Utmost Pleasure.'

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—The Rev. William Davis, of Everett, a member of the class of 1867 of Harvard and an evangelistic clergyman, has written his classmates, Julian Hawthorne and William James Morton, in the Federal Prison at Atlanta, offering to serve the remainder of their sentences, and states to do so would give him "the utmost pleasure."

EX-BANDIT GETS RELIGION; COLE YOUNGER CONVERTED

LEES SUMMIT, MO., Aug. 23.—Cole Younger, once a bandit, became a member of the Christian Church at a revival meeting to-night.

Dorsey's Closing Address a Scorching Attack on Frank

Hurls Charges of Perversion and Murder in Face of Defendant While Wife Bows Head and Weeps.

Probably a more stirring, denunciatofy, and at the same time incisive and analytical argument, has never been heard in a Georgia court than Solicitor Dorsey's closing address in the case against Leo M. Frank. Here it is as the Solicitor delivered it:

Dorsey moved over to the railing of the jury box as he opened his speech.

"Your honor and gentlemen of the jury," he said, "I was speaking to you yesterday of the character of this defendant. This defendant has not a good character. The conduct of the counsel in this case in failing to cross-examine, in refusing to cross-examine these twenty young ladies, refutes effectively and absolutely the claim of the defendant that he has a good character.

Says Defense Had Right to Refute Charge.

"As I said, if this man had a good character, no power on earth could have kept him and his counsel from asking those young girls where they got their information and why they dsai what they did. Now that's a common sense proposition.

"You know as twelve men seeking to get at the truth that they did not ask those hair-brained fanatics, as Mr. Arnold calls them, questions about Frank's character because they were afraid, and those witnesses, as good as any the defense put up, were unimpeached and are unimpeachable. And you tell me that because the good people come here from Washington street and testify to his good character is that he has one!

"It very often happens that a man's wife is the last person to know his wrongdoing. Sometimes the man uses charitable and religious organizations to cover up and hide his evil self. Very often his guilty conscience turns him that way. Many a man is a wolf in sheep's clothing.

"Many a man is a white sepulcher on the outside and absolutely rotten within. But suppose he has a good character. David had a good character until he put Uriah in the forefront of battle that he might be killed that he could get his wife. Judas Iscariot had a good character among those Twelve Men until he accepted those 30 pieces of silver.

"I have shown you that under the law they had a right to bring out all those things. You saw they dared not do it. Let's see what the law says. I'll read here from the Eighty-third Georgia Report:

"'Whenever any persons have evidence in their possession and they fail to produce it, the strongest presumption arises that it would be hurtful if they did, and their failure to produce evidence is a circumstance against them.'

'You don't need any lawbook to tell you that. It's plain common sense.

Recalls Case of Oscar Wilde.

"Benedict Arnold was brave. He enjoyed the confidence of all the people and those in charge of the Revolutionary War until he betrayed his country. Since that day his name has been a synonym for infamy. Oscar Wilde, an Irish knight, a brilliant author, whose works will go down through time, gave us 'De Profundis,' which he wrote while in jail—a remarkable work—yet when the Marquis of Queensberry discovered that there was something wrong between Wilde and his son, Wilde had the effrontery and the boldness to sue him for damages. A suit in retaliation resulted in the conviction of Wilde for criminal practices. Yet, wherever the English language is spoken the effrontery of the testimony on cross-examination of this man—an effrontery typical of this sort (turning to Frank)—will always be a matter for deep study for lawyers and for people interested in that sort of degeneracy.

"He had a wife and two children. His shame probably never would have been brought to light but for the fact that he had the effrontery and the boldness to start a suit. It ended in his being sent to prison.

"And the prosecution of Oscar!

"He was a man who led the esthetic movement. He was a scholar and a literary man. His cross-examination was a thing to be read with pride by every lawyer. The whole world took notice of his prosecution, and yet when Oscar Wilde was an old man, gray-haired and tottering to the grave, he confessed to his guilt. Prominent? Why, he was one of the most prominent men in the world! Why, he came to America and founded the esthetic movement here. He raised the sunflower from a weed to the dignity of a flower. He was handsome—one of the handsomest men to be found. He had moral courage, yet he was a pervert, proved and confessed.

"There was a handsome man in San Francisco, a member of this defendant's sect—Abe Ruef, a man who possessed all of the faculties of highest intelligence, yet he corrupted even Smith, and his corruption of the poor girls with whom he came in contact brought him to the penitentiary. I have already referred to Durant. His character did not prevent the jury from convicting him. This defendant's character, like Durant's, is not worth a cent when the case is proved.

"And crime is alike with the rich and poor, ignorant and learned. Take an ignorant man like Jim Conley. He is the man who commits the petty crimes, but take a man with high intellect, like this defendant—this intellect, when put to the right use, leads to glorious accomplishments; but if these faculties be put to the wrong use, it brings ruin to the man in the commission of the most diabolical crimes. Look at McCue, the Mayor of Charlottesville, Va. He was a man of broad intellect and high education, but, despite his intellect, despite his splendid character, he tired of his wife and shot her, and the jury, composed of Virginia gentlemen, broad-minded and fair, despite McCue's good character, found him guilty and sent him to a felon's grave.

"Take the case of Richeson, the preacher of Boston. Here was a man of highest intellect and with a brilliant future. He was engaged to one of the wealthiest and most beautiful girls of Boston, but entanglements with a poor little girl caused him to fear for his good name and he so far forgot his good character as to put this poor little girl to death. Even after his conviction in the last days of his hope he committed an act upon himself which he thought would draw the pity of the Governor and save his life. But a Massachusetts jury and a Massachusetts Governor were courageous enough to let that man's life go. They had the courage which will make every right-thinking man right by the laws of God and man and of his country.

"Take Beattie—Henry Clay Beattie, of Richmond. He was of splendid family, of wealth and proved a good character, though he did not possess it. He took the mother of his 12-month-old baby out in an automobile and shot her. He was cool, calm and deliberate. He laughed and he joked, but he joked too much, and although the detectives were maligned and abused and a large slush fund was used, a courageous, honest Virginia jury upheld justice and sent that man to death. And he never confessed, but he left a note saying he was guilty.

Likens Frank To Dr .Crippen.

"Crippen, of England, a man of high standing and recognized ability, killed his wife because of infatuation for another woman. He hid her where he thought she would not be found, as this man (pointing to Frank) thought the body of that little girl would not be found. But murder will out, and be it said to the glory of old England this man paid the penalty of death.

"Gentlemen, you have an opportunity that comes to few men. Measure up to it. Will you do it? If not, let your conscience say why not.

"But you say you've got an alibi. Let's examine that proposition. Here's an authority: 'An alibi as a defense involves the impossibility of the prisoner's presence at the scene of the offense at the time of its commitment, and the range of evidence must be such as reasonably to exclude the possibility.'

"The burden of carrying this alibi rests on the shoulders of this defendant. They must show to you that it was impossible for this man to have been at the scene of the crime—an alibi, while the best kind of evidence if properly sustained, otherwise is absolutely worthless. I am going to show you that this man's alibi is worse than useless. It is no defense at all.

"I want to give you the definition of an old darky of an alibi. It illustrates my point. Rastus asked old Sam, 'What is this hyar alibi I hear so much about?' Old Sam says, 'An alibi is provin' that you was at the prayer meeting where you wasn't, to prove you wasn't at the crap game where you was.'

"Let's see the time table of the defense. I want to turn it around for half a minute. Then I want to turn it to the wall and let it stay forever.

"'One p. m.—Frank leaves the factwall. That statement is refuted by the defendant himself when he didn't realize the importance of this time proposition.

"Frank's statement at police headquarters, taken by G. C. Febuary on Monday, April 28, says, 'I didn't lock the door that morning. The mail was coming up. I locked it when I started home to lunch at 1:10 o'clock.'

"Up goes your alibi punctured by your own statement when you didn't realize its importance. Yet these honorable gentlemen for the purpose of impressing your minds print in big letters on this chart he left the factory at 1 o'clock. If he swore when he was on the stand the other day that he left the factory at 1 o'clock it was because he saw the importance of this time point and had to leave there ten minutes earlier than he said he had at the police station before he had had time to confer with his lawyer, Mr. Luther Z. Rosser.

"I quote: 'I left at 1:10.' Right here let me interpolate. This man never made an omission from the beginning to the end of this case. Where he knew a person was aware that he was in the factory at a certain time he admitted it. He proved, or at least attempted to prove, an alibi by the little Curran girl. They had her get up on the stand and say that she saw Frank at 1:10. Yet here is his statement made to the police April 28 in the presence of his attorney, Mr. Luther Z. Rosser, in which he said that he did not leave the factory until 1:10.

"The saddest thing in this case—I don't know who caused it, I don't know who introduced it, and I hope I will go to my grave without ever learning who brought this little Curran girl into this case—the saddest thing in this case is bringing in this little girl who is connected with Montag's and placing her upon the stand here to protect this red-handed murderer.

"Jurors are sworn, and his honor has the right under the law to charge you to consider the truthfulness or the reasonableness of that which any witness swears to. And, gentlemen of the jury, anyone who looked upon that little girl noticed her bearing upon the stand, the slightly unusual manner and her connection with Montags—consider the fact that this little girl, like the little Bauer boy, had been riding in Montag's automobile—and if you can not tell just why and how she was brought here, then I am unable to understand your mental operations.

"If Frank locked that door at 1:10, how could she have seen him at Alabama and Whitehall street at 1:10? How could she be so positive that it was him, if she really saw anyone there? For, mark you, she had never seen him but once. She comes into your presence and tells you the unreasonable and absurd story of seeing him, which is in direct contradiction to Frank's story.

"On this time proposition, I want to read you this. It made a wonderful impression on me when I read it. It's from the speech of a wonderful man. It's from a man in whose presence even lawyers of the type of Ar-

Continued on Page 4, Column 1.

You Can't Be Well When Constipated

"Keep Your Bowels Open"—Doctors Estimate 75 Per Cent of Sickness Due to Torpid Liver.

Some undigested food is left in the stomach daily, which the liver should clear away. A heavy or unusual diet, or a change in water, may cause the liver to leave a few particles to press and clog, and the next day more are left over. So this waste accumulates, clogging stomach and intestines, and causing constipation.

That is not all. If the waste is not eliminated it ferments and generates uric acid, a poison which gets into the blood and through the system.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT immediately flushes the stomach and intestinal tract and washes away every particle of waste and fermentation; it purifies the blood by dissolving what uric acid has accumulated and passing it off in the urine.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is much better than calomel; no danger of salivation, no need of an after-cleansing dose of oil. It acts quickly and mildly; never forces, gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. Take it before breakfast and in an hour you'll feel splendid.

Don't take an inferior substitute; some closely imitate the name, but none produces the same result. All druggists should have the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT, 25c. If yours can not supply you, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

P-R-I-N-T-O-R-I-A-L-S
No. 224

The advance agent of Prosperity is in our midst!

Already FALL BUSINESS is "looking up"—already there is a subtle feeling of "GOOD TIMES" in the air. Have YOU prepared to take advantage of the increased opportunities for bigger and better times? Have you given your FALL PRINTING the attention it deserves? Phone for our representative to call. No time like the present to plan your PRINTING.

BYRD
Printing Co.
46-48-50 W. Alabama.
Atlanta.

Phones M. 1560-2608-2614.

HUGH DORSEY WINS HIS SPURS IN PHAGAN CASE

FOURTH WEEK OF FRANK TRIAL FINDS INTEREST OF PUBLIC STILL WHITE HOT

Popular Opinion Swayed, First When State Springs Climax With Conley's Story, Again When Defense Put the Accused Man on the Stand.

BY AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The fourth week of the Frank trial came to an end shortly after noon Saturday, with Solicitor Dorsey still far from the finish of his concluding argument in behalf of the State.

Judge Roan announced at 1:45 that he would adjourn the case over until Monday, as he has been doing heretofore, and the Solicitor will conclude his argument then.

The Solicitor had been speaking more than six hours when adjournment came, but apparently was physically able to go on if necessary.

His address, when it is finished Monday, will have been broken into three sections—one Friday afternoon, another Saturday morning, and a third Monday morning.

The Solicitor's address has been so far a wonderful piece of work.

On all sides he has been praised ungrudgingly for the fine effort he has made in behalf of the prosecution.

Atlanta will breathe a long, deep and soulful sigh of relief, however, when the last word is spoken by way of argument and the case is given into the hands of the jury for a verdict.

Leading Topic for Months.

Never before in the history of Fulton County has a criminal proceeding so challenged the unabated and undivided attention of the people.

For four months the Frank case—or the Phagan case, as it more generally is called—has been the leading topic of discussion among all classes of Georgians, rural and urban, rich and poor, high and low, informed and uninformed.

Every figure to the tragedy has been picturesque in the extreme.

Mary Phagan, a sweet young working girl, cruelly murdered; Leo Frank, a young business man of theretofore unblemished character and standing, indicted for the murder; Jim Conley, a negro, a confessed accessory after the fact of the murder, with a long criminal career attaching to him, the principal witness against Frank; Lucile Frank, the loving and devoted wife of the defendant, always at his side, with his mother, cheering and sustaining him; Reuben Arnold and Luther Rosser, two of the leading and most noted lawyers in the South, defending the accused; Frank Hooper and Hugh Dorsey, the former an attorney of established reputation, the latter a brilliant young lawyer lately named prosecuting attorney of the Atlanta Circuit; a presiding judge who has tried many of the most famous cases in the State—these make up the dramatis personae of the Frank case.

Case Fought Stubbornly.

Never before in Fulton County, if, indeed, within the State, has a case been so stubbornly and so bitterly fought as the Frank case.

It required more than three weeks to get the evidence all in. Every inch of ground was contested vigorously and to a finish.

It is estimated that the defense interposed more than 100 objections of one sort and another, as the case progressed, thus fortifying itself as abundantly as possible for an appeal, in the event of conviction.

The only party to the crime, as witness or otherwise, who has not been attacked vehemently one way or the other is the little dead girl, Mary Phagan!

All sides have agreed that, whatever else might or might not be true, the murdered child was blameless—a pathetic and unoffending victim of a brutal homicide.

Frank, the defendant, has been painted by the defense as a bright young business man, perfect in deportment at all times, a loving husband and a dutiful son, irreproachable in character, incapable of criminal deeds and thoughts, persecuted and assailed maliciously by hostile officials seeking reward both by way of fame and material gain!

By the State Frank has been painted as black as the darkest depths of Hades itself, an unfaithful husband, a vicious son, a lustful monster, particularly after young girls; a pervert, a leader of two lives, a designing and crafty monster—an inhuman murderer!

Conley Blamed and Praised.

Conley has been held up both as a witness worthy of all belief and as a witness worthy of no belief whatever—as a negro reluctant to tell the truth originally because of his disinclination to involve Frank, his erstwhile kind and profitable master, but rushing candidly and sincerely to recite the truth eventually, nevertheless, and, on the other hand, as a negro lying from start to finish for no other purpose than to save his own neck from the noose by slipping it over the head of the oppressed Frank.

Lucile Frank, the wife, has been cited both as the faithful and loving wife there at the husband's side in the courtroom and as the shrinking, suspicious wife, early indisposed even to visit Frank in his cell at the jail.

Rosser and Arnold have painted Hooper and Dorsey as direct agents of a wicked and malicious "frame-up against the life, liberty and most sacred honor of Leo Frank, deliberately and designedly seeking to hang the defendant to gratify a misguided enthusiasm and official zeal, if nothing worse; and Dorsey and Hooper have been unsparing in their criticisms of Rosser and Arnold, the paid attorneys of the defense.

An imposing array of witnesses have declared Frank's character both good and bad, while two other arrays of witnesses have sought both to uphold and to break down his alibis.

Medical experts, of repute and fame, have been set up one by one, only to be designated "fakes" and "quacks" by the other side, and vice versa.

Second Charge in Case.

Besides the original charge of murder there was injected into the case, in its early stages, an unspeakable charge of degeneracy.

First this charge went in with the defense's knowledge and consent, and then the defense moved to rule it out. It wasn't ruled out, and the defense then seized upon it and undertook to make a boomerang upon the State.

The State thereupon sought to enlarge upon it, and the State was stopped from doing that.

Three or four days was used up in attempting to show whether boiled cabbage could reach such and such a state of digestion in such and such a time, and after a long wrangle as to that, the defense and the State found that they were not particularly disagreed about the matter, anyway, as it fit both theories like a glove to show that Mary Phagan died within an hour after eating the cabbage.

The defense has contended that Jim Conley and not Leo Frank murdered Mary Phagan, and the State has contended quite as earnestly that Frank did it, and Conley was connected with it only after the exact fashion he swore to.

Looking backward over the trial from the present day point of view, one may see much that appears grimly humorous in the proceedings—and yet there has been nothing bordering ever so slightly upon the humorous, really. On the contrary, the trial has been tragedy piled uncompromisingly upon tragedy, from beginning to end!

Public Swayed Both Ways.

Into all the other complex, puzzling, elusive and sinister details of the mysterious Frank case, a large measure of prejudice was injected as it swept along.

The public has been swung first this way and then that, rushed to one conclusion, only to be rushed as madly, after a bit, to another, until, up one side and down the other, the public breathed, as aforesaid, a large and deep sigh of relief when at last the jury got the matter into its keeping, to unravel it as best it might and to speak the truth of it as nearly and as exactly as human ingenuity and the forms of law can approximate the same.

The State has fought doggedly to one theory: That Leo Frank, shortly after noon on Saturday, April 26, lured little Mary Phagan, for unspeakably immoral purpose, to the rear of the second floor of the National Pencil Factory in Forsyth street, after having paid her her weekly pittance, and there, when she refused to yield to his lustful purpose, he killed her, first by knocking her down and subsequently strangling her.

That after this horribly tragic culmination of a perhaps non-murderous original intent, Frank sought the help of a negro, Conley, with whom he had had previous very questionable relations, to hide the body, and that Conley, already deep in the mire with Frank, consented, and as a matter of fact, did hide the body of the dead girl in the basement of the factory, where subsequently he expected to burn it.

Charges Notes Were Framed.

That after this, Frank and his accomplice returned to the second floor, whereon Frank's office is located, and prepared some illiterate notes, which were placed beside the dead body for the purpose of diverting suspicion both from Frank and the negro.

That the defendant then gave the negro some money for his work, and promised him more eventually.

That Frank's actions following the murder were suspicious enough to prompt his retention at police headquarters.

That his general character is bad enough to warrant the presumption that he had lustful intentions toward Mary Phagan, as evidenced by his relations with other women and girls.

That his professed alibis are inconsequential and misleading, and not sustained by facts.

Finally, that Conley's seemingly contradictory attitude is accounted for in two directions, first by his desire to save both himself and Frank, and second by his desire to protect himself against a great measure of responsibility for the tragedy than rightfully belonged to him, when it became evident to him that Frank was preparing to let him suffer just so much measure of responsibility, even to the murder itself, as might be fixed if he did speak.

What Defense Has Claimed.

The defense has fought doggedly to this one theory: That Leo Frank scarcely knew Mary Phagan at all, and that the only time he saw her on Saturday, April 26, was when she came to his office to get her pay; that he never lured her to the rear of the second floor, or anywhere else, for any purpose whatever, and that he never saw her alive after the brief moment she stood in his office on Saturday.

That after she left his presence, happy and unharmed, she passed on downstairs, and encountered Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, whom Frank did not even know was in the building, and who was not supposed to be in the building at that time.

That Conley, then only partially recovered from a drunken debauch of the morning, saw her little mesh bag in her hand, and, being "broke" and wanting more whisky, he seized the girl, snatched her mesh bag, after knocking her down, threw her into the cellar below through the nearby open elevator shaft, whence later he dragged her to the trash pile in the rear of the building, tied the strangling rope about her neck, either to complete his dastardly work or to create a false suspicion as to the direct cause of her death.

That he then pulled the staple from the back door of the basement and thus made his escape finally from the building.

That all of Conley's story as to how he helped dispose of the body is a fabrication and a monstrous lie, framed for the purpose of shielding himself and placing the blame upon Frank.

That his story was dragged from him, bit by bit, beginning with the falsehood that he could not write, and that it was revised four times, always under oath, before its amazing and incompatible contradictions could be fixed up to stick with any degree of plausibility, and that he was helped in every one of these revisions by all too willing police officers, detectives and court officials bent upon finding in Frank a victim for Mary Phagan's murder.

Claim Negro Wrote Notes.

That the negro himself, of his own motion, wrote the notes he later confessed to having written, hoping thereby to divert suspicion from himself.

That Conley only began his series of contradictory "confessions" after he found that Frank was under suspicion, and thereby realized his (Conley's) opportunity to fasten more firmly upon Frank that suspicion, to Conley's own great benefit.

That Frank's general character is good, in contradistinction to Conley's admitted bad character.

That Frank has set up two unassailable alibis, and could not, therefore, have committed the crime charged.

That his nervousness the day following the murder was occasioned by the manner in which the fact of the murder was communicated to him, and not because of guilt.

That the long and delicate clerical work he did on the afternoon following the murder is proof that he could not then have been agitated by guilt or by any other sinister knowledge.

That Frank, as a matter of fact, knows nothing whatever of the cause of Mary Phagan's death, and is utterly and entirely guiltless of any participation therein.

Two intensely dramatic events marked the progress of the trial—and about them the entire case has revolved constantly.

Conley's remarkable story, containing the unspeakable charge of perversion, wealthy in detail and full of thrill, was the State's big point.

Frank's wonderfully clear, dispassionate and well-sustained statement from the witness stand was the defendant's big point.

These two contrary things have been pitted the one against the other, and upon which the jury finally would accept as the truth the case always has seemed to turn for final adjustment.

Attack Centers on Negro.

Every effort of the defense has been to break down Conley—including two days' unmerciful grilling by Mr. Rosser—and every effort of the State has been toward upholding him.

Every effort of the defense, therefore, has been also directed toward holding up Frank's statement, just as every effort of the State has been directed toward breaking it down.

It ever was Frank vs. Conley—the life of the one or the other as the law's satisfaction for the murder of Mary Phagan!

Regardless of all things else, the public is unstinting in its praise and approval of the brilliant young Solicitor General of the Atlanta Circuit, Hugh Dorsey, for the superb manner in which he has handled the State's side of the case.

It all along has been freely admitted that those two veterans of criminal practice, Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, would take ample care of the defendant.

Two more experienced, able and aggressive attorneys it would be impossible to secure in any cause.

When it was first learned that Rosser and Arnold were to defend Frank, the public realized that the defendant had determined to take no chances. He selected from among the cream of the Georgia bar.

That the State's interests, quite as sacred as the defendant's, would be looked after so jealously, so adroitly, and so shrewdly in the hands of the youthful Dorsey, however—that was a matter not so immediately settled!

Dorsey an Unknown Quantity.

Dorsey was known as a "bright young chap," not widely experienced, willing and aggressive enough, but—

He had been but lately named Solicitor General, and he hadn't been tried out exhaustively.

Maybe he could measure up to the standard of Rosser and Arnold, but it was a long way to measure up, nevertheless!

It soon became evident that Dorsey was not to be safely underrated. He could not be sneered down, laughed down, ridiculed down, or smashed down.

He took a lot of lofty gibing, and was called "bud" and "son" right along—but every time they pushed him down, he arose again, and generally stronger than ever!

Time and again he outgeneraled his more experienced opponents.

He forced them to make Frank's character an issue, despite themselves.

He got in vital and far-reaching evidence, over protest long and loud.

Whenever the Solicitor was called upon for an authority, he was right there with the goods. They never once caught him napping. He had prepared himself for the Frank case, in every phase of it.

The case had not progressed very far before the defense discovered unmistakably that it had in Dorsey a foreman worthy of its most trustworthy and best-tempered steel!

And the young Solicitor climaxed his long sustained effort with a masterful speech, that will long be remembered in Fulton County!

In places he literally tore to pieces the efforts of the defense. He overlooked no detail—at times he was crushing in his reply to the arguments of Rosser and Arnold, and never was he commonplace!

Fixed His Fame by Work.

Whatever the verdict, when Hugh Dorsey sat down, the Solicitor General had fixed his fame and reputation as an able and altogether capable prosecuting attorney—and never again will that reputation be challenged lightly, perhaps!

Much credit for hard work and intelligent effort will be accorded Frank Hooper, too, for the part he played in the Frank trial. He was at all times the repressed and painstaking first lieutenant of the Solicitor, and his work, while not so spectacular, formed a very vital part of the whole case made out and argued by the State. He was for fourteen years the Solicitor General of one of the most important South Georgia circuits, and his advice and suggestions to Dorsey were invaluable.

A noteworthy fact in connection with the Frank trial is that it generally is accepted as having been as fair and square as human forethought and effort could make it.

It may be true that a good deal of the irrelevant and not particularly pertinent crept into it, but one side has been to blame for that quite as much as the other side.

Ruling Cut Both Ways.

The judge's rulings have cut impartially both ways—sometimes favorable to the State, but quite as frequently in favor of the defense.

Even the one big charge of degeneracy, which many people hold had no proper place in the present trial, went in without protest from the defense, and cross-examination upon it even was indulged in.

Unlimited time was given both the State and the defense to make out their cases; expense was not considered. The trial has lasted longer than any other in the criminal history of Georgia. Nothing was done or left undone that could give either side the right to complain of unfairness after the conclusion of the hearing.

It is difficult to conceive how human minds and hman efforts could provide more for fair play than was provided in the Frank case.

MRS. LEO M. FRANK plainly showing the strain as Solicitor Dorsey arraigned her husband. Below is Mrs. Rea Frank, the defendant's mother, who also betrayed her agitation.

English Housewives Plan Bacon Boycott

Hope to Force Down Price by Abstaining From Buying for Fortnight.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The "English breakfast" is threatened with dire disaster. London housewives are preparing to boycott the toothsome "rasher" because of the continued high prices ruling for bacon.

They plan to refuse to buy bacon for a fortnight, beginning to-day. Enormous quantities are likley to remain in the hands of the wholesalers and prices are expected to come down with a rush.

Optimists predict a drop in price of at least 6 cents a pound.

Cost of Living Up in Britain 14 Per Cent

Prices of Foodstuffs Except Tea and Sugar Have Risen at Remarkable Rate.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Striking figures showing the increased cost of living are contained in a voluminous report issued by the British Board of Trade, according to which present prices are the highest in twenty-five years.

Retail prices of food have risen 14 per cent since 1900, while wages have increased only 3 per cent.

Prices of almost all foodstuffs, except tea and sugar, have risen, the greatest increases being in bacon, 52 per cent, and potatoes, 46 per cent.

People have been able to meet the advances only by reducing consumption.

CASTLE TO BE HOME OF TRAMPS OF GERMANY

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—Here is perhaps a bit of news which will be of interest to some of America's "Wandering Willies." A ruined castle at Merlenhausen, Saxony, is about to be restored by the local authorities, who will use it as a free rest house and night shelter for tramps from all parts of Germany.

Mail-Wooed Bride On Journey to Coast

Millionaire Ranchman Is Given Fine Recommendation by Pastors of His Neighbor.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Theresa Patterson, a handsome widow, aged 30, of Allentown, Pa., is nearing Los Molinas to-day, a journey of 3,000 miles across the continent, to become the bride of Charles H. Smart, a wealthy rancher, after a romantic courtship by mail.

Clergymen in Los Molinas and Allentown gave each a clean bill, the former stating that while Smart is not a millionaire, he is worth nearly that sum and would make a home happy for any woman of his choice.

The marriage is to take place immediately upon Mrs. Patterson's arrival.

5-Cent Fraud in Ice; 5 Days on Rockpile

Portland Dealer Is Sentenced for Cheating Customer in 25-Cent Transaction.

PORTLAND, OREG., Aug. 23.—Five days at the rockpile for a 5-cent fraud in the sale of a piece of ice was the sentence imposed by Municipal Judge Stevenson upon Thomas Barnes, proprietor of the National Ice and Coal Company.

Barnes delivered a 40-pound piece of ice worth 20 cents, saying it weighed 50 pounds and charging 25 cents.

RUSS SERFS JOLLY, BUT LAZY, SAYS VASSAR GIRL

Special Cable to The American.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 23.—Miss Texter, a graduate of Vassar College, who has been making a tour of Saratoff and Simbirsk, typical agricultural provinces of Russia, to study the land question, has been telling the Russian newspapers the peasants impress her most by their good temper and dislike for work.

For summer complaints

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is best. It will keep your stomach and bowels in fine condition to do all the work called for, thus avoiding or relieving cramps, dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, malaria and stomach troubles.

The genuine Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY, by druggists, grocers and dealers. Should our friends for any reason be unable to secure it in their locality, we will have it shipped to them from their nearest dealer, express prepaid (cash to accompany order) at the following prices:—

4 Large Bottles, $4.30.
6 Large Bottles, $5.90.
12 Large Bottles, $11.00.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey should be in every home and we make the above announcement so that you may become familiar with a source of supply.

Remit by express order, postoffice order, or certified check to
The Duffy Malt Whiskey Company,
98 White St., Rochester, N. Y.

ABSOLUTELY PURE & UNADULTERATED TRADE MARK

I Cannot Possibly

Impress upon your minds (through the newspapers) the importance of calling to see me when your teeth need attention. Give me a trial and learn for yourself how fair and honest I treat you—how my methods are ABSOLUTELY PAINLESS, and my prices MUCH LOWER than any other Dentist in Atlanta. I can assure you that it will be a pleasure to you to recommend me to your friends after you have once tried me. I employ no students. Each doctor has had from 5 to 18 years' experience and is thoroughly versed in my painless methods.

MY WORK IS GUARANTEED FOR 15 YEARS

They Must Fit $5 A Set

Terms: WELL, DON'T WORRY. THESE ARE ARRANGED TO SUIT.

Best Service for Least Money

They Never Slip or Drop.

SETS OF TEETH ..... $5.00 UP
GOLD FILLINGS ..... 75c UP
SILVER FILLINGS ..... 50c UP
BRIDGEWORK $3, $4, $5
GOLD CROWNS ..... a TOOTH

DR. WHITLAW, Painless Dentist

Largest and Most Thoroughly Equipped Sanitary Office in the South. Phone M. 1298.

73½ WHITEHALL ST.

SOLICITOR'S CLOSING ARGUMENT A MASTERPIECE

DENOUNCES DEFENDANT AS MORAL PERVERT AND LAUGHS ALIBI TO SCORN

Prisoner Likened to Oscar Wilde, Pastor Richeson and Beattie---Charged With Committing Murder to Hide Evidence of His Crime Against Girl.

Continued From Page 2.

nold and Rosser would take off their hats.

"I refer to Daniel Webster and his argument in the Knott case. 'Time is identical, days, hours, are not visible to any of senses except to the schooled. He who speaks of days, hours and minutes talks at random.' It is better than I could express it. What about this time? In this table here, minutes are moved up and down, contorted and twisted to protect this man. They say he arrived at the factory at 8:25. Frank himself in his first statement said he arrived at 8:30, and poor Jim Conley, lousy, filthy and dirty, said he arrived at 8:30, carrying a raincoat, and they tried to make it appear he didn't have one. If the truth is ever known, he tried to borrow that raincoat of Ursenbach's to create the same impression.

"Mattie Smith at 9:20 (quoting from the table), and Frank and Mattie Smith both say 9:30. He called Schiff at 10 o'clock (reading again), and yet this man with all his mathematical precision and accuracy at figures, said he was at Montag's at 10 o'clock. They say he arrived back at 11 o'clock, but in his first statement he said it was 11:05. At 12:12 they say Mary Phagan arrived at the factory.

"Oh my, they have to do it. Like the rabbit in Uncle Remus, they're 'just 'bleeged to do it.' Move the minutes up or back, for God's sake, or we are lost!

"But to crown it all! In the table which is now turned to the wall you have Lemmie Quinn arriving not on the minute, but, to suit your purpose, at from 12:20 to 12:22. That evidence conflicts with the statements of Miss Freeman and the other young woman, who put him there before 12 o'clock."

Arnold—Your honor, I must interrupt. No such evidence was ever brought out. Those young women testified that they left the factory at 11:45 and that they saw Lemmie Quinn at the Busy Bee Cafe considerably after. Mr. Dorsey says they saw him at the factory before 12 o'clock.'

orsey—No, your honor, I didn't say any such thing. They didn't see him there, and I don't think anyone else did.

The crowd laughed.

Arnold—Your honor, have we got to take this whole crowd into this case?

Judge Roan—Gentlemen, there must be order or I will clear the courtroom.

Dorsey—Find the records. They will show I am right. I have got Lemmie Quinn's affidavit. I am just arguing this case on the evidence.

"Jim Conley is a liar, is he? He said Quinn was there and that he was there before Mary Phagan came. Frank had a mighty hard time remembering whether Quinn was there. When Quinn saw him at the police station and said he had been there, Frank said he would have to see his lawyers before deciding whether or not to make it public.

"Is Jim Conley telling the truth or telling a lie? You can't go hot and cold on him. Why was it Frank wanted to consult his lawyers?"

Arnold—I will find the record.

Dorsey—Yes, you can find it. You can find where Quinn swore half a dozen ways. He was the most anxious witness I ever saw on a stand, except for old man Holloway. He would tell that he was there if Frank said tell it. He would keep quiet if Frank said no.

"Oh, gentlemen, let me read you what a great lawyer said on this sort of evidence. I read the words of Judge Lochrane:

"'I do not take the mere words of witnesses. I take their acts.'

"And while I am on this subject I want to read you another opinion:

"'Evidence given by a witness has inherent strength which a jury can not disregard. But a statement has none.'"

Arnold: "Now, your honor, I have found the records and it bears out just what I said."

Arnold read from the testimony of Miss Corinthia Hall that she and Mrs. Freeman went to the pencil factory at 11:35 and left there at 11:45.

Arnold: "Mr. Dorsey asked her the question, 'You saw Lemmie Quinn at 5 minutes to 12 o'clock?' Answer: 'I don't remember what time it was. He told us he had been up to the factory and saw Frank. He said he was going to the matinee.'

"Lemmie Quinn swore several times he was at the factory at 12:20," Arnold continued, "and here it is that he said that he was in a pool parlor at 12:30, just after leaving the factory."

Judge Roan: "Mr. Dorsey, have you anything in contradiction to that?"

Dorsey: "Yes, I have plenty; that doesn't scare anybody."

Arnold: "I just want to call attention to the glaring errors. The little ones I don't care anything about. I won't interrupt him except on glaring misstatements. Life is too short."

Dorsey: "Yes, you will. You will interrupt me every time I am incorrect. You are too shrewd, too anxious to let anything go by. Don't tell this jury you are going to let me say things that are incorrect.

"Here is your table turned to the wall, having the time of Lemmie Quinn's arrival at 12:20. I have an affidavit here of this pet foreman of the metal department. He said he got there at from 12 to 12:20. Those girls went out of the factory at 11:45 o'clock. They walked up a block and down a block to the Busy Bee Cafe. There they saw Quinn.

"In the name of goodness, if Frank, according to his own statement, could leave the factory at 1:10 o'clock and get home at 1:20, couldn't these girls walk up a block and down a block and see Quinn in fifteen minutes?

"I know it hurts, but this table here which puts Lemmie Quinn at the factory from 12:20 to 12:22 is a fraud on its face. There is no greater farce in this case than their straining at this particular point, with the exception of Billy Owens' pantomime. And, oh, what a farce that was!

"Gentlemen of the jury, you need not try to consider their attempts to be accurate about the time Quinn says he was there, for Lemmie says himself he could not be positive. He says he thinks he got there some time between 12:20 and 12:30.

Mentions Girl Who Would Die for Frank.

"Ah, gentlemen of the jury, whenever a man gets to swearing too definite and too specifically about time, then the words of our friend Webster, which I quoted to you, are right—'He is not to be relied upon.'

"And can you truly consider the words of a man whom your reason tells you is straining to set the exact time?

"But let's pass on from this. I will not take the time to read you everything that Lemmie says he did. Let's pass on to the perjury charge which Arnold has so flippantly made. You saw these witnesses upon the stand. You heard their words. You noticed their manner, their attitude and their interest.

"Why, one of these ladies from the factory wanted to die for this man Frank."

A titter of laughter ran around the room, and deputies were forced to rap for order.

"When did you ever know of an employee being so enamoured of her employer that she was willing to die for him, if their friendship was purely platonic? I know enough about human nature—I know enough of the passions which surge in the breast of mortal man—to know that this poor woman's anxiety to put her neck into the noose to save him were born of something besides platonic love.

"When you see a woman so passionately devoted to her employer—so anxious to die for him—you may know and you can gamble on it that there is something stronger there than platonic love. It must be a passion born of something beyond the relation which should exist between a married man—an employer—and his woman employee.

"Ah, gentlemen of the jury, we could have got witness after witness who would have gone upon the stand and sworn things about this man. There were people who would have perjured themselves. There were witnesses who came upon the stand for the deefndant who on the face of their testimony perjured themselves.

"Take this little Bauer boy. Remember his testimony before he took that automobile ride with Montag to the office of Arnold & Arnold. Before dinner he could remember each detail, but after dinner, after he had taken that ride with old Sig Montag, he had a lapse of memory. Old man Sig must have told this little boy about the Hard Shell preacher down in South Georgia who has his congregation pray for rain. They prayed and prayed, and after a while like old Sam Jones would have said, the Lord sent a trash mover, a gully washer.

Boy Must Have Overdone It."

"It rained and it rained until they had more water than they knew what to do with. Then the old hardshell preacher said: 'Brethren, it looks like we have a leetle overdone it.' So Montag must have whispered into Bauer's ear, 'You have a leetle overdone it.'

"And, after dinner, this little boy didn't know anything. But was that all? Why, gentlemen of the jury, before dinner that boy even remembered where his watch lay.

"Do you believe that? Talk about perjury! Willful foolishness, because an honest jury knows that it was not true. They brought in that machinist Lee. He was willing to swear to anything and there was not a man in the sound of his voice that didn't know he was telling an untruth. He wrote and signed a statement about Duffy's injuries. I brought it here and it was written in typewriting and didn't even have his name on it.

"They thought we could not find Duffy and thought you didn't have sense enough to know the first thing you do in a case like that is to wrap something around it to stop the loss of blood.

"I have never seen a case yet where women were so suborned as in this. Take this woman Fleming, his stenographer. They put her up and she swore Frank had a general good character. She only swore to what he had done in her presence when they cross-examined her. We don't contend Frank tried to seduce every girl in the factorwy. But he did pick them out. He picked out Mary Phagan and was called.

"Gentlemen, he got the wrong girl and he was called. And this stenographer said she only knew what he did to her. She testified that Frank's business Saturday morning was to make out the financial sheet. Mr. Arnold said immediately he didn't have time and she jumped at it like a duck at a June bug. Mr. Arnold was so nervous he would not let me finish the cross-examination, and interpolated that remark to guide her.

"It was unfair and not according to law and practice. But he got away with it. And then she turned right around and in the next breath said that she had never said Frank was working on the financial sheet Saturday morning.

"Oh, gentlemen, can you let a poor little girl go to her death and set her murderer free on such evidence as this? If you do, it is time to stop going through the process of summoning a jury.

"Perjury! When did old man Starnes and Pat Campbell stoop to that. And suspicions! Why didn't we get old man Lee and Gantt instead of Frank? Why didn't we get Conley? We tried it, but there was absolutely no case against either. But there is a perfect case against this man. But, oh, you cried 'Perjury.' But it is not worth fifteen cents until you put your fingers on something specific.

"And here, gentlemen, right before your very eyes, in black and white, the testimony ofthis woman, Fleming, shows that they perjured her.

"Do you tell me when that factory closes on Saturday afternoons that this man with the handsome wife that he possesses, this college graduate, who likes to read and play cards, who likes to see baseball games, would spend his time there, using the data that Schiff prepared on Saturday afternoons when he could do it Saturday morning? No, sir. Miss Fleming was right. She didn't stay there to work often on Saturday afternoons."

The jury was allowed to retire for a few minutes. When they returned, Dorsey resumed his argument.

"Now, gentlemen, I submit that this man made that lnance sheet Saturday morning. I am not going to fatigue you with my reasons. It is unnecessary. If he did make that sheet on Saturday afternoon, he did it thinking of an alibi. But don't tell me that because he might have done this on Saturday afternoon with a penmanship that showed no nervousness proves an alibi.

"If he could go home into the bosom of his family after such an atrocious crime, he could have made that sheet. But he wouldn't have done it if Schiff had not gotten up the data. He had done it fifty-two times a year for five or six years. If he would do additional work on that Saturday afternoon, it could only have been with a sinister purpose.

Witness Afraid Even to Identify Handwriting.

"In speaking of perjury, his mother said anybody ought to identify his handwriting."

Dorsey held up the photograph of the sample of handwriting Frank wrote for the police.

"Yet the man they put up to identify his handwriting was so afraid he might do Frank an injury that he wouldn't venture a guess. Grant that he did go home to his wife and those old people—his parents-in-law—and maintain a stoical countenance. Grant that he did make that sheet, which he could make up with his eyes shut. Grant that he did unlock the safe, a thing that he had done every day for years.

"But when he went to run the elevator; when he went to nail up that back door; he wavered; he paled when he talked to the police, and trembled on Darley's knee as he rode to the police station.

"He could sit in the hall and read a joke about a baseball umpire, but the frivolity annoyed the visitors at his home. It was the same kind of frivolity Henry Clay Beattie displayed when he stood beside the automobile that was stained with the blood of his wife. His joke was uttered only in annoyance; it farred.

"But whether or not he made up that financial sheet, while waiting for old Jim to come and burn the body, one thing I grant he did. Don't forget the envelope; don't forget the way the letter was quoted, that letter he wrote to his uncle in Brooklyn, that letter that begins: 'I trust that this finds you and dear Tante well.' He had no wealthy relations in Brooklyn! That old millionaire uncle was mighty near there when Frank told old Jim Conley: 'Why should I hand? I have wealthy relatives in Brooklyn!'

Dorsey finished reading the letter and then said:

"Here is a sentence pregnant with significance. It bears the earmarks of a guilty conscience. He wasn't trembling when he wrote. He is capable and smart, but here is a sentence that is a revelation. Here is a document I concede was written after little Mary Phagan, who died for virtue's sake, was lying mutilated in that dark cold basement."

At this juncture Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan, began to cry.

Dorsey read from the letter:

"'It is too short a time since you left for anything startling to have developed down here.'

"'Startling' and 'too short a time.' Those are the words that incriminate. That little sentence itself shows that the crime was committed in an incredibly short time.

"Tell me, honest men, courageous men of Georgia, that this phrase penned to his uncle that afternoon did not come from a stricken conscience. 'Too short a time since you left for anything to develop down here.'

"What do you think of that, honest men? Then notice what he writes about the thin, gray line of veterans facing the chilly weather, as if that old millionaire uncle of his traveling around Germany for his health, as if he cared for these old heroes in gray! Ample and reliable authority says that over-expression is an indication of guilt. Tell me that this old man, who was just preparing to sail for Europe, cared for these old heroes in gray—this wealthy old man who wanted to see the financial sheet. 'Too short a time'—yes, he said it was too short a time for anything to develop down here. But, gentlemen of the jury, there was something startling to develop, and it happened within the space of 30 minutes. There is nothing new in the factory to report, but there was something new in the cellar. There was something to report, and the time wasn't too short for it to happen.

"You tell me that letter was written in the morning? Do you believe it? Why, they haven't even tried to say that. I tell you that that letter shows on its face that something startling had happened, and I tell you that that rich uncle did not care the snap of his finger about the thin, gray line of veterans.

"Ah, yes, he had wealthy relatives in Brooklyn. That's what old Jim Conley said he told him. And his people lived in Brooklyn, and old Jim never would have known that if Frank had not told him. And they had at least $20,000 in cool cash in the bank; and he had a brother-in-law employing two or three people, at least, and we don't know how many more. And if his rich uncle was not in Brooklyn, he was near there.

"All right, let's go a step farther. On April 28 he wired Adolph Montag at the Imperial Hotel in New York: 'You may have read in Atlanta papers of factory girl found dead Sunday morning in cellar of pencil factory.'

"Yes, gentlemen of the jury, in the cellar of the pencil factory. There's where he placed her, and that is where he expected her to be found. And the thought of it welled up in his mind that Monday morning, April 28, before he had been arrested, and he wired Montag forestalling what he knew would certainly and surely happen unless the Atlanta detectives were corrupt and would suppress it.

Compliments Detectives.

"But, be it said to your credit, Starnes; to your credit, Campbell, and you, too, Rosser and Black, that you had the manhood and the courage to do your duty and roll the charge up to this man, protected as he was by wealth and influence.

"And notice what else he said in this telegram. Notice the credit he gives to the police: 'The police will eventually solve it.' And be it said to thee redit of the Atlanta police department, they did solve it. 'Assure my uncle I am all right in case he asks. Our company has case well in hand.' Maybe he did think when he got that fellow Scott that his company had it well in hand.

"I tell you there is an honest man—this fellow Scott. If there was a slush fund in this case—and witnesses have said there was no such fund—this man Scott could have gotten it. Not at first, maybe, but he could have gotten it later on. But Scott knew his duty, and he has done it. No wonder Frank could telegraph that his company had the case well in hand, for Scott's first words could not have suited him better had he wished for them. They were, 'The Pinkerton's always work arm and arm with the police.' This suited Frank well. It was just what he wanted. He wanted to know what the police thought he wanted to know what they were going to do, and this worked well, until the chain began to tighten.

"And Haas—and he is nobody's fool—when he saw the trend of the case, he opened the negotiations; he gave Scott the opportunity by saying, 'Now let us have what you get first.'

"But let us pass on from that. You ell me that letter and that telegram are not significant? That the work on this financial sheet is no significant? That Schiff's testimony as to the work on that financial sheet is not significant?

"Frank himself was not satisfied. He is as smart as his lawyers, too.

"He realized that he would have to go out and beyond the evidence, because he knew it was all bunk; and he tried to show you that he did write the financial sheet. Frank did write that letter Saturday afternoon, and he did write that telegram Monday; but he did not do any work on the financial sheet after Saturday at noon. I ask you twelve men if those documents and letters don't bear the impress of murder?

"And they still cry perjury. I just thought of another case, when that man could not identify Frank's handwriting that his own mother said was his. That was perjury, and there was perjury in the testimony of Bower and Lee. Mrs. Carson said she had worked there three years, and Arnold asked her a question that he would not ask a younger woman. He asked her about seeing blood around the toilet and in the dressing rooms. She said she saw it there very often. Then she talked about Conley being on the fourth floor that Monday. I pinned her down to say that Frank was there at the same time. It was then that Frank leaned over and said, 'Be a good boy, Jim,' and Jim, remembering his wealthy relatives in Brooklyn, and his promises of money, said, 'Yes, sir, boss; I will.'

"Surely the officers could not suborn Conley at that time. And she says she never saw the blood by the water cooler; she said she didn't look at it because she didn't like to look at things like that. But another lady on the stand says she did go back and look at it; that she was with her.

"But back again to Conley. If he had committed that crime and had not had Leo M. Frank and his promises back of him, would he have gone back to that factory every day and remained there until Thursday? They said they were going to put up all the girls on the fourth floor. But they didn't do it until we called their four-flush and put up witnesses who corroborated their witness, Miss Jackson, about the misconduct of this man.

"Miss Small, also on the fourth floor, corroborated Conley. She said she saw him on the fourth floor Monday. Now, why did Frank go to the fourth floor so often Monday and Tuesday? Because he knew Conley was up there, and he wanted to be sure the negro was not talking. Conley told Miss Carson that Frank was as innocent as an angel in heaven. We said he was merely doing what he had promised to do—protect his employer. Mr. Rosser characterized the statement as a dirty suggestion It was, and I accept it, but it is true; and you men would not sit here and see that negro hang for a crime Leo M. Frank committed.

"When Conley went up to the second floor in response to Frank's signal, Frank said, 'Did you see anything?' and he said, 'I saw two girls come up, but there ain't but one of them come down.' And then Frank knew that he would have to take this negro into his confidence.

Shaking his finger at Frank, Dorsey continued:

"And you told old Jim Conley to protect you! And he tried to do it. It is infamous to try to have Jim Conley hanged for a crime that Leo Frank did. Gentlemen, I haven't got to the State's case yet; I am just cutting away some of the underbrush this defense has planted in this forest of oaks. They have played the detectives. The only thing to the discredit of the police department is that it allowed itself to be intimidated by the influence of this man and his friends and his big lawyers.

Didn't Have Courage To Put Frank in Cell.

"When they took him down there guilty of this red-handed murder they didn't put him in a cell like they did Newt Lee and Jim Conley. It took time for them to get their courage up to the point of locking him up as he should have been. Old John Black—Mr. Rosser likes to brag about what he did to him—but he didn't make so much off of him after all. Black's methods are somewhat like Mr. Rosser's. If Black had had Frank in the position that Mr. Rosser had Jim Conley, this whole trial might have been obviated with a confession."

Dorsey turned and pointed at Frank.

"You didn't get counsel a moment too soon. You called for Darley and you called for Harris; you called for Rosser and Arnold, and it took them all to bolster up your nerve. Gentlemen of the jury, you know I am telling you the truth. The only thing against the police is that this man, who had just snuffed out the life of this little girl, was given too much consideration. His able counsel and the glamour of wealth that surrounded him, overawed the police. I had nothing to do with it, but I honor them for the way they went after Minola McKnight. I don't know whether they want me to apologize for them or not; but do you think that in protecting the people from such crimes as this the detectives are acting like they are at a tea party?

"Should they have the manners of a dancing master? If you do, you don't know anything about it. Once get an old 'possum dog on the trail, and you can't call him off. So it is with Starnes and Black; they knew Albert McKnight wouldn't have told those young men at the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company that story about his wife unless it were true. They went after Minola. They stuck to the trail. They smoked her out. Minola's friends got a writ of habeas corpus. Do you think if Mr. Haas had come to me with a writ of habeas corpus to release Frank I would have done it? I would have said it was none of my business.

"The next time the police have to use strong methods in an effort to protect the people by going after a red-handed murderer, I won't usurp their authority or the authority of the judges. I haven't anything to do with the police department, or the functions of the judges. I am responsible only for the office of Solicitor General for the term to which I was elected. I honor Mr. Charley Hill; I am as proud that I have succeeded him as I am that I was given this place by a vote of the people. He was honorable and strong; but I tell you gentlemen, no man is my pattern; I follow the dictates of my own conscience."

Tears Come to Dorsey's Eyes.

Mr. Dorsey raised his voice and tears came into his eyes.

"If there is one thing I am proud of during my term of office, it is that I joined hand and glove with the police; and when your influence (turning to the defense) tried to get Jim Conley indicted by the grand jury, I stood out against it. If that is treason, make the most of it. If you don't want me to do it, get somebody else.

"Mr. Hill was a noble man. He had the courage of a Caesar and the eloquence of a Demosthenes. I have wished a hundred times that he was here making the speech to you that I am making.

"He would have stripped the hides off of you (pointing to the defense). Such talk as that doesn't terrify me. It doesn't disturb the serenity of the conscience in everything I have done in the prosecution of this man. Let's get back to the talk on perjury.

"Don't get up here and call everybody a liar without giving the specific instances. Take the evidence of Mrs. Small. She said she saw Frank and Miss Rebecca Carson walking along and that she stopped Frank and had him O. K. a ticket. She said it was Miss Rebecca Carson she was with. She says that Mrs. Carson was not there at all. Mrs. Carson said she was there. Mrs. Small said she saw Conley standing up there by the elevator and that Frank must have seen him—that Frank passed within 4 feet of him. She says that Jim was doing nothing; that he was standing by the elevator with his hand on a truck.

"Mrs. Small also tells us that the elevator shook the entire building. She said he couldn't helped but hear it if the machinery was not running. She said: 'You might not hear it if the machinery was in full operation, if you were not paying attention to it, but if you listened you could hear it.'

"Now here is another thing. Mrs. Carson had already sworn positively that she never went back into the metal room to see that blood. Mrs. Small said that on Wednesday a crowd of them from the fourth floor went down out of pure curiosity to see those spots, and when I asked her who went with her, lo and behold the first person she mentioned was Mrs. Carson. She said she was sure she was there; she knew she was there. And when I asked why they went there, and why Mrs. Carson went there particularly, she said 'Curiosity sent us.'

Somebody Has Lied, Dorsey Asserts.

"Now, gentlemen of the jury, somebody, and I put it up to you, has lied. If this case is founded on perjury, it has been boiled until the pot is black.

"The truth is, there has not been a single instance where evidence was needed that someone has not come in to bolster it up.

"Now, let's pass on a little bit. I want to discuss briefly the writing of these letters found beside the body of the girl. If these letters were not the order of an overruling Providence, I would agree that they were the silliest things I ever heard of. But, gentlemen of the jury, these notes bear an intrinsic knowledge of this crime.

"This man Frank, by the language of these notes, in attempting to fix the guilt upon another, has indelibly fixed it upon himself."

The Solicitor repeated this statement.

"The pad, the paper the notes were written upon; the fact that there was a note fixed the guilt upon him. Tell me that a negro who, after having killed a white girl, ravished and outraged her, would have taken the time to have written these notes? And even if he did write them, would he have written them upon a scratch pad which is found only in an office?

"You tell me that a man like Jim Conley would have ravished this girl with the knowledge that Frank was in the house? You tell me that this Jim Conley, even though he has been as drunk as a sot could be, would have taken the time to write these notes?

"I tell you, gentlemen of the jury, it can not be true.

"You say that the fact those notes were written was foolish. It was foolish, but it was a mistake. Murder is a mistake. What man ever committed murder who did not make a mistake? And what man making the greatest mistake in the world would not make a lesser mistake in trying to cover up? Those notes were the lesser mistake.

"Scott said that when Leo M. Frank talked to him about the girl coming to the factory and asking him about the metal that he said, 'I don't know.' And now he says that he told her, 'No.' Arnold recognized the damage in the statement 'I don't know' getting in.

"Language of Notes Clears Conley."

"Leo Frank said in his statement again and again 'chatting' and 'chat.' Conley said that when Frank told him he wanted to watch for him that Frank said he wanted to have a 'chat.' Jim Conley said here time and again, 'I have done it,' but in the notes found near the body he said, 'did it.' Do you tell me that negro would have written the word 'did' unless it was dictated to him?

"Do you tell me that negro would have taken the time to carry that girl away back there and hide her body if he had knocked her down the hole, and then stopped to write those notes?

"No," shouted Dorsey, turning to Frank, "that child was murdered on the second floor and you wanted to get her into the cellar, just like you found her in the cellar, as you said in that telegram to Montag.

"Conley said once in his statement that when he met a man on the street that he knew, the man looked at him he though he though 'I done it.' Conley used that expression at least twenty times. He said 'I done it' when he closed the door, and in several other places I can't find just now. He didn't use the word 'did' one time.

"In the first note, the expression 'I went to make water and that long tall black negro pushed me down the hole.' You knew that toilet was back there on the second floor (addressing Frank), and you knew that was where that little girl met her death. And you knew that metal room was right back there, too.

"You tell me that negro would have written those words. Where was it she was going to make water on the first floor? Yet you tell me there is nothing in circumstantial evidence when these things creep in,

"When you wrote this note (turning to Frank), you said yourself that you had the original of the note before you, and you said yourself that you knew Conley could write because he had written you time and time again, trying to borrow money, and yet you sat there with the original of that note before you and Conley's own handwriting, the handwriting you had seen often enough to be familiar with it, and you didn't tell those officers that Conley wrote the notes.

"'I don't want you to convict this man unless you believe him guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, but I don't want you to let your verdict be governed by the opinion of a crank, but by the facts.

"Arnold and Rosser would say frequently, 'Are you going to convict this man on that, on this?'—selecting some little isolated point.

Chain Strong Enough To Hang Anybody.

"'Well, I don't want you to, but on all the facts—the chain that is unbroken and not by isolated instances, and I say that when you take them all together you have a cable that ought to hang anybody.

"I don't ask that he be convicted on this isolated instance or that, but all bound together make a cable that is as strong as is possible for the ingenuity of man to make.

"I don't know whether the statement of Frank's will rank along with that statement of the celebrated pervert Oscar Wilde, or not. He is brilliant. If you take his statement and just follow it you never would convict him. You never would convict anyone that way. But listen to this: 'I sat in my office counting over the money that had been left over.'" Dorsey read from Frank's statement.

"He wasn't talking about the petty cash," Dorsey continued. "He was talking about the money that had been left over from the payroll of $1,100. We don't know to this day how much that was. We don't know how big a roll it could have made, though Jim Conley said he saw a roll of $200.

"And he was trying to get old Jim to go down into the basement and burn the body of that little girl. Just as sure as the smoke curled from that stack toward the heavens, old Jim would have been there without a shadow of a defense. Frank would have been there with the detectives. Jim would have hanged for a crime that this man committed in his lust.

"But old Jim was too wise. He wrote the notes, but, drunk or sober, he wouldn't be entrapped like that. I do not doubt that when Frank handed him that roll of money it was like the kiss of Judas Iscariot when he kissed the Saviour, and then betrayed Him for 30 pieces of silver.

"I am going to show you that this man had long planned not murder, but to get this little girl to yield to his lust. Let me do it now.

"Back yonder in March this little Turner boy saw him making advances to Mary Phagan. Did that innocent little boy from the country lie? This little girl that came here from the Home of the Good Shepherd, she heard Frank speak to Mary Phagan and put his hands on her. She may have lost her virtue, but she is nothing but a child. Did she lie, this little girl?

Quotes From Same Poem as Rosser.

"Then there is Gantt. He quit the factory rather than make good a dollar that was charged he was short. Did he lie about Frank's inquiring of the little girl? Yesterday Mr. Rosser quoted from a poem of Bobbie Burns, the line was, 'Tis human to step aside.' I want to quote a line from that same poem, 'There is no telling what a man will do when he has the lassie.'

"When convenience is snug, I tell you gentlemen, there is no telling what a pervert will do when goaded by his passion. You tell me this brilliant young man, who looked over that payroll 52 times a year, saw the name of Mary Phagan every time, then when she was dead had to get his books to find out her name? He coveted that little girl way back in March. I have no doubt those little girls swore the truth when they said they saw him making advances. I would not be surprised if he did not hang around and try to get her to yield. I would not be surprised if he didn't get Gantt out of the way because he was an obstacle to his scheme.

"He knew the day before she was probably coming. He went and told old Jim Conley, who had watched for you so many Saturday afternoons while you and Schiff were making up that finance sheet. When Helen Ferguson came and asked for Mary Phagan's money, I wouldn't be surprised if he did not refuse to give it to her because he had already told old Jim to come and watch.

"Frank's plans were fixed. Ah, gentlemen, then Saturday comes, and it is a reasonable tale that old Jim tells. He says, 'I done it just like this.' He doesn't say, 'I did.' He says he 'done it' just as the brilliant factory superintendent told him to. This thing passion works in a terrible way. Good people don't know how the mind of a libertine works. They don't know of the planning, plotting and waiting. Way back in March Frank had his eyes upon her. He was infatuated with her and did not have the will power to resist.

"You can twist and wabble all you want (Dorsey turned to Frank and shook his finger at him), but you told Detective Scott that you did not know her. Notwithstanding what you have said here, notwithstanding what your witnesses have said, you knew her.

"And tell me, gentlemen of the jury, has this little Ferguson girl lied? Has she been suborned by Starnes? Has she come here and deliberately perjured herself? I tell you that is a charge that can not stand. His refusal to give Helen Ferguson Mary Phagan's envelope is an indication that he was plotting. And old Jim Conley's tale will stand, for Frank himself corroborates Conley in many things.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT OF VITAL IMPORTANCE TO PIANO BUYERS

THE WESTER MUSIC CO., 64 Peachtree Street, Desire to Announce the Opening of Their "Once-a-Year" Clearance at 8:30 Monday, August 25.

PIANOS OF HIGH GRADE AND ACKNOWLEDGED REPUTATION

Our Entire Stock Sacrificed—Everything Goes—Nothing Reserved—Every Person Interested in the Purchase of an Instrument Should Read Carefully, As It Concerns Them Most.

PROMPT ACTION WILL BRING REWARD

This Is Our Annual Clearance Sale of Fine Pianos—Your Opportunity to Save From $100 to $250 in Your Piano Purchase. Terms Are Made as Pleasing as the Prices. Opening Evenings.

In announcing this gigantic clearance sale of fine pianos, uprights, grands, player pianos and organs, we wish to take the piano buying public into our confidence, making a plain statement of facts, telling our good reason for sacrificing our entire stock. All thoughtful people realize the fact that in conducting a business the magnitude of ours, that a great number of discontinued styles, sample pianos, rental pianos, etc., will accumulate during the year, besides countless numbers of good used pianos taken in exchange for grands and players. They are all in good condition, and must be disposed of to make room for large shipments of fall goods already beginning to arrive. In order to open the fall season with an entire new stock, we have decided to include in this sale every instrument in our building, grands, uprights and players, including such well-known makes as A. B. Chase, Chickering & Sons, Knabe Brothers, Ivers & Pond, Kurtzmann, Kranich & Bach, Bush & Gerts, Hoffman and others. In players, A. B. Chase Artistano (grands and uprights), Emerson Angelus, Kurtzmann Angelus, The Angelus, The Auto de Luxe, The Autopiano, Koehler and Newton.

Such an array of high-grade instruments, numbering between 350 and 400, has never been offered before to the good people of Georgia. Remember, nothing will be reserved, and in order to move this stock in a limited space of time we have reduced the price in many cases from one-third to one-half the original price. All these points taken into consideration makes it possible for any family to have an instrument in their home at low prices and easy terms place them within reach of all. Your credit is good at The Wester Music Company. If you do not care to pay cash we can arrange terms to suit your convenience.

One Price; Plain Figures.

Every piano will bear two tags, one will be our regular one price tag, the other the clearance sale tag. Thus you may see at a glance just what can be saved on your purchase. Look for the blue tag.

Here are three sample pianos. Large size mahogany cases, fully guaranteed. Instruments must be seen to be appreciated. Regular price $275, your choice $129.

Three standard grade upright cabinet grands, mahogany, oak or walnut; fully guaranteed. Regular price $300, your choice of three different styles and makes $187.

Five standard makes. Five large size uprights, mahogany or oak cases, new styles, guaranteed for ten years, regular price $350, your choice $236; $10 cash and $6 per month.

Five large size cabinet grand upright sample pianos, mahogany or dark oak cases, fully guaranteed, regular price $375. These are going at $246; $10 cash and $7 per month. They are new.

Six large size uprights; your choice oak or mahogany case; guaranteed for ten years; three different styles and makes; regular price $375. They are standard makes. Your choice for $268. Easy terms.

Five large size cabinet grand mahogany cases; three different styles and makes, guaranteed for ten years; regular price $400, your choice $276; $15 cash and $7 per month. They are new.

Ten large size uprights, mahogany cases, different styles and makes, guaranteed for ten years; regular price $450, sale price $292. Easy payments can be arranged.

Four large size, mahogany cases, best makes; fully guaranteed; regular price $500; slightly shop-worn, but absolutely perfect. They will be taken quickly at $292.

Six large size upright cabinet grands, high grade mahogany and walnut cases, regular price $550 your choice $308, $312, $318. Fully guaranteed.

Three high grade grand pianos, mahogany cases, regular price $700, $750 and $800; your choice for $468, $612 and $642. Guaranteed ten years. They are new. One Steinway slightly used, good as new. Beautiful mahogany case, regular price $1,150. Must be seen to be appreciated. Will be offered at our regular discount. If you need a grand piano, don't miss this opportunity.

Nine player pianos, mahogany cases, some of them slightly shop-worn, but in first-class condition. Some are new. They are guaranteed for five years. The best makes are included. Regular prices, $550, $600, $650, $700, $750 and $800. All $418-$568 and new styles. Your choice, $418, $268, $296, $436, $487, $512. You must see the pianos to appreciate the values.

One large size mahogany case player piano, one of the best makes, regular price $850, slightly used. A big bargain for $298.

Fifty slightly used upright pianos. Oak, walnut, mahogany and ebony cases. Included in this lot will be found Vose & Sons, Hallet & Davis, Kranich & Bach, Painter & Ewing, Packard Conway, Bush & Gerts; Knabe Bros.; Sterling, Whitney, Cooper, Hoffman and others. Many of them are as good as new. They are all in splendid condition. Former prices ranging from $350 to $550. Your choice while they last from $75 to $268. They are guaranteed and you can make no mistake in selecting any one of them. Any second-hand piano that we sell will be taken back within one year and apply the price as part payment for a new piano.

Second-hand Organs.

Twenty-seven organs, including Carpenter, Estey, Wilcox & White, Packard, Chicago Cottage, Kimball, Mason & Hamlin and others. Former prices from $65 to $125. Your choice for $12, $17, $21, $26, 28, $31, $37, $42. All in good order and guaranteed.

Every instrument can be found on our floors and our personal guarantee goes with each instrument. Remember that we can arrange easy payments, if you don't care to pay cash. Out of town orders given special attention.

Any purchaser living nearer Macon than Atlanta will find the same bargains at our store, No. 157 Cotton avenue, Macon, Ga.

Store will be open evenings.

THE WESTER MUSIC COMPANY,
64 Peachtree Street, Atlanta, Ga.
157 Cotton Avenue, Macon, Ga.

THAW BASES HOPES OF ULTIMATE FREEDOM ON ENDLESS LEGAL TANGLE

POEM THAW WROTE IN MATTEAWAN

MATTEAWAN, N. Y., Aug. 23.—The following verses were written by Harry Kendall Thaw in his room at Matteawn and found in the waste-paper basket beside his reading table last December:

"There are lights aflame on Broadway,
There are hopes and lives undone;
There are debts of sin no man can pay,
And Broadway hates the sun.

"There are vain regrets on Broadway,
There are secret sighs and tears;
For one must smile as well as pray,
And the weakling meets with jeers."

Fugitive From Matteawan, Backed by Family's Millions, Will Utilize Every Technicality to Prevent Deportation From Dominion of Canada.

SHERBROOKE, QUEBEC, Aug. 23. With Harry Thaw's case now in the courts of Canada, the prediction made that it would be months—years, perhaps eternity—before the slayer of Stanford White is again in the jurisdiction of New York State is strengthened.

His family, wealthy and powerful, has rushed to his defense. He has unlimited resources to fight the legal battle against his deportation from Canadian soil. When the first writ of habeas corpus was granted, it assured him the right to appeal his cause to the highest Canadian court.

It is believed that this litigation can be made to last over years. It will be impossible to deny him bail in the Dominion, for he is a lunatic only in New York State. His status now is that he is simply considered an undesirable by Canadian immigration authorities, who, it is thought, may override the courts and deport him.

Should the courts of Canada finally rule against him, his case might be taken up from Washington. Even then if he were finally deported, should he be sent to any other State than New York, he could fight extradition there, and there are many eminent lawyers who believe that it is absolutely impossible to bring him back into New York then.

Probably Considered These Facts.

All these things probably had been considered when Thaw made his daring escape from Matteawan Asylum, when he dashed across the Connecticut border, then through the State into New Hampshire and from New Hampshire into the Dominion of Canada.

Thaw knows well the law's delay. He remembers his long period in the Tombs before he was first brought to trial for the slaying of White. He remembers the long fight for life and liberty then. He remembers the enforced wait after the first mistrial. He remembers the weary days of his second hearing.

He remembers the slow progress of his cause during his legal efforts to get his release from Matteawan Knowing these things and recognizing that there was hardly a bare possibility that bail would be denied him, he turned toward Canada rather than seek safety at sea, as his pursuers thought he surely would do.

It was probably due to this realization that he accepted his arrest at Coaticook, Quebec, coolly and that he awaits the issue of his habeas corpus proceedings just as coolly now.

Secures Talented Lawyers.

He is represented in his application for habeas corpus proceedings by W. L. Shurtleff and Colonel H. R. Fraser, one of the most talented lawyers of Eastern Canada. He is thoroughly buoyed up in the belief that the Canadian Government will never order his deportation or extradition.

"I have studied every legal phase of my case and have arrived at the belief that I am safe here," said Thaw. "My plans did not alone include my physical escape. I looked into the legal feature to establish my status in any other State than New York and any other country than the United States. I am not a dangerous man. I do not seek vengeance. My wife, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, need not fear me. Nor need anyone else fear me.

"All I want is peaceful and legal liberty. I feel that I am perfectly safe. I have studied law ever since I was admitted to Matteawan, and I believe that I am qualified to speak in this matter.

"Statements to the effect that I only sought liberty to kill are senseless. They are so ridiculous that I won't talk of them. I have the kindest feelings toward the people of Canada, and will retain such feelings, no matter what action the Dominion Government takes, but I hope that they do not deport me. Detention in an insane asylum is a living death. It is enough to make a maniac out of a perfectly sane man."

Refuses to Betray Friends.

Asked for a detailed story of his flight, he refused.

"Yes, I was the man they spotted in Lenox, Mass., said he. "But from that point on I must say nothing. I won't betray my friends."

Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, sister of Thaw, arrived soon after his arrest and immediately sought her brother. Thaw sent word to Roger O'Mara, the Pittsburg (Pa.) private detective, who has been his counsellor since youth, to rush here on the first train.

He said that he wanted to get the fight over with. His first trepidation came with the news that District Attorney Conger, of Dutchess County, New York, and Dr. Kleb, of the Matteawan Institution, would come to cooperate with the United States authorities in an effort to have Thaw deported bask to New York, or extradited.

Plans for the court battle in Thaw's behalf were carefully made by Mr. Shurtleff and Colonel Fraser and hopes to have his release ordered by Judge Globensky and plans to leave immediately for Quebec if he gets out. He intends to sail for France if he gets his freedom, so that he will be sure to be safe. Ultimately he hopes to have his legal freedom established so that he can return to Pittsburg.

Contend Thaw Is Tourist.

Among the grounds upon which the Thaw lawyers put into their plea for their client's liberty is that he is only a tourist passing through Canada, and they point to the case of Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, as a precedent.

They contend that Johnson was under conviction of an infraction of the United States law, whereas Thaw has not broken any law. They contended that Johnson was a fugitive from justice, whereas Thaw is a fugitive from an institution for the insane.

They pointed to Thaw's behavior to uphold the contention that no matter what his condition in the past, he is now sane and rational. The facts that Thaw has not broken any Canadian laws and that no indictment exists against him across the border were emphasized. Thaw offered many suggestions to his lawyers and in a way seemed to be their pilot. He looked very solemn and impressive as he gave his opinions of his own case.

"My idea is that speed is the requisite thing," Thaw told them.

News Unnerves Prisoner.

The Canadian Government and the United States Government were both represented by able counsel who resisted Thaw's efforts to gain his liberty on a writ of habeas corpus. They contended that the law governing Thaw's case is very plain and they pointed to precedents.

In fact, it was reported that Acting Superintendent of Immigration Blair in Ottawa had been counseled by the Ministry of Justice that Thaw should be deported at once. When Thaw heard this report he trembled and became pale. He was unnerved by the news and showed it.

The presence in Sherbrooke of the most spectacular and sensational prisoner in the world made a gala occasion. Not one of the Provincial fairs which are being held throughout Eastern Canada at this time could vie with Thaw as an attraction. Great crowds came into Sherbrooke from the surrounding country.

Families gathered about the jail, hoping to get a glimpse of the well-known prisoner if he was taken to the courthouse. Some came a distance of 100 miles to see Thaw. The street on which the jail is located was jammed.

Glad to Please Curious.

This curiosity tickled Thaw immensely. He said he did not want to disappoint anyone who really wanted to see what he looked like.

Mr. Shurtleff was resentful against Justice of the Peace Dupuis, of Coaticook, who held Thaw on the charge of being a fugitive and sent him here for further examination.

"We contend that Justice of the Peace Dupuis acted illegally," declared Shurtleff. "He exceeded his authority. He had no right to hold Thaw."

Colonel Fraser assured Thaw that conspiracy is not an extraditable offense and that he need not feel any great alarm over the fact that a warrant charging Thaw with conspiring to gain his liberty is on its way here from Dutchess County. He did not give such optimistic assurances about deportation, however.

Thaw lost no time in arranging to secure cash. He telegraphed to a banker relative in Pittsburg (where the bulk of the Thaw fortune is invested) to send him money to fight his case.

Thaw faced the habeas corpus hearing coolly and confidently. Before going to court, he ate a hearty breakfast and dressed with minute care, evidently realizing that he would be gazed on by thousands on the short ride from the jail to the courthouse.

Smuggling Claim Advanced.

He had prepared a number of notes to guide his lawyers in their conduct of his case, and was evidently disappointed when they did not seem to give these notes great consideration.

An investigation of the manner in which Thaw came into possession of a railroad ticket for Detroit, Mich., is being made. The Dominion authorities are not satisfied that Thaw bought the ticket himself.

It was learned from an authoritative source that immigration officers who are here plan to arrest Thaw on the ground that he smuggled his way into Canada if he gets his freedom on a habeas corpus writ.

The village of St. Hermenigilde, where Thaw and his companions came into Canada from the United States, is not a port of entry.

Evelyn Thaw, Fearing Death, Breaking Down Under Strain

'How Can He Say He Loves Me When He'd Let Me Starve?'

LATEST photograp of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw posed especially for The Sunday American at her hotel in New York where, it is said, she is near a breakdown rfom fear that her husband will regain his liberty and attempt to do her violence, and a photograph of Harry Kendall Thaw, taken in his cell at Matteawan from which he escaped to aCnada, where he is using every legal means to prevent his deportation to the United States

Copyright by INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

PHOTO BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

'He's a Paranoiac,' She Screams—Describes Her Sacrifice.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is breaking down under the fear that Harry K. Thaw may evade the law and succeed in reaching her. There were visible evidences of the strain under which she has been laboring since he escaped from Matteawan last Sunday when a Sunday American reporter saw her last night in the Hotel Brevoort.

Thaw's declaration from the jail in Sherbrooke that her return to the stage had prompted him to make a dash for liberty and that he loved her more than anything else in life were called to her attention.

"Good God!" she exclaimed "How could that man say he loves me when he would have let me starve in the streets?"

"Do you love him?" she was asked.

"Love him! I love him as much as he loves me," was her derisive reply. "He wanted to keep me down after I had testified and sold my soul for him and I had done everything that a human being could do for a man; and now he makes this maudlin statement about love.

Never Knew Love's Meaning.

"He is a paranoiac, and he doesn't know what love is. He has never known the meaning of it as long as I have known him. As for taking care of me as any man who loved a woman would do, both he and his mother them me out, after I had saved him from the electric chair.

"Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw entered into an agreement with me at the time of the trial to provide me with $12,000 a year on condition that I would consent to an annulment of our marriage. I did consent, and the papers were drawn. Then his mother repudiated it. That was in June, 1912, and I have received no money from them since that time.

"Before that date I had received $70 a week and my rent. I had to dispose of pictures and scrape and save to live, and I finally came to the conclusion that I had something within myself, that I could prove I possessed the gift of making my own living, which is a gift after all.

Breaks Into Tears.

"I thank God that I have that gift or his mother would be jeering at me in the gutter," and Mrs. Thaw broke into tears.

"He wants to spoil my life and my work," she continued, turning to John Reilly, her counsel, who was in the room. "I told you that if I made a success he would want to injure me, and here he has stated that my success was the thing that impelled him to break for his liberty. He wants to injure me and he will bend everything to that end.

"I told you also," she added to her lawyer, "that he would not be free long before he would betray himself through his excessive egotism.

"But there is worse coming if he retains his liberty. Things will begin to happen when he gets his drink. He is going to do something desperate, I know, just as surely as I could foresee the things I have referred to. Wait until he gets drink in him—it is horrible to contemplate!" And Mrs. Thaw again broke down and sobbed.

"Desperate and Dangerous."

"Don't you think that you may be exaggerating because of your overwrought state of mind?" was asked.

"I wish it were so," she replied. "But anyone who thinks Harry Thaw will not be a desperate man when he gets the opportunity to satisfy his appetite for drink, knows nothing of him. I know him. Dr. Flint knows him. Judge Jerome knows him. He will be a desperate and dangerous man.

"This great State ought to be ashamed of itself to allow a paranoiac to make and unmake its institutions. Thaw was permitted liberties that no man in his position had ever before enjoyed. Thaw has not done it, it has been the Thaw money.

"Do you know that when I used to see him in the Tombs he used to be drunk on Scotch whisky? Let the Tombs officials deny it if they dare. I know it and they know it. Harry Thaw told me he could get all the liquor he wanted there."

Mr. Reilly warned his client that she was overtaxing her strength, but she persisted in unloading her mind.

Old Graveyard Must Give Way to Railroad

Milwaukee Line Is Compelled to Move Old Burial Ground Near For Alcohol.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Aug. 23.—Among various other activities the Milwaukee Railroad people have found themselves engaged in rebuilding their line across Iowa is that of moving a cemetery.

In securing a right-of-way near the Des Moines River it purchased an old burial ground, one long since abandoned. Among the bodies the railroad men have removed is one that had been buried seventy-five years. The remarkable state of preservation of clothing and lack of decay of the bones after such a long period has been a source of surprise to the men exhuming the bodies.

U. S. Officer Invents Airship Destroyer

Balloon Equipped With Explosives and Wire Feelers Will Protect War Craft.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Joseph Steinmetz, a retired lieutenant of artillery in the United States army, has just perfected an invention that is likely to interfere greatly with the effectiveness of the aeroplan in naval warfare. Steinmetz is now negotiating with the War Department for the use of his invention. It consists of a captive hydrogen ballon suspended over either an arsenal or battleship. It carries a large quantity of explosives, which would be touched off by any aircraft coming in contact with wires extended from it. The airship would at once be blown up.

Couple Will Re-wed To Gain $1,000,000

Ceremony by Mormon Judge Is Called Unsatisfactory by Administrators of Estate.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—In order to comply with the wishes of the administrators of the $1,000,000 estate of her father, the late Thomas R. Lamb, of Edinburgh, Scotland, Mrs. Anna B. Lamb-Wilson must be married to her husband again.

The husband is E. Douglas Wilson, of this city. He pursued Miss Lamb more the Pennsylvania Rubber Company, of an 10,000 miles across the United States and over the Pacific Ocean before he married her in Honolulu last April. The ceremony was performed by Judge Hernandez, whom Wilson says is a Mormon. This marriage, though legal, did not meet with the approval of the administrators.

Edwin Booth Saves Lillian Russell

Rescuer Is Only Nine and His Playmate at Maine Resort Was Drowning.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug. 23.—Edwin Booth saved Lillian Russell from drowning at South Harpswell when she fell from the wharf. Both are summer visitors.

Edwin is 9 years old, and the son of Charles E. Booth, of Yonkers, N. Y., while Lillian is 13, and the daughter of Charles A. Russell, of Boston. Edwin, her playmate, was fully clad, but he dove into the ocean like a veteran, drawing the girl to safety.

Thieves Warn, Then Rob Rail Station

Telephone Central Office They Had Looted Pay Phone, Then Steal Instrument.

NYACK, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Before carrying away the telephone from the Stony Point station of the West Shore Railroad last night, thieves telephoned to the central office to say that they had robbed the office and telephone coin box. The operator thought some practical joker was at work and paid no attention to the man who called.

This morning it was found that the money drawer at the station had been robbed of 75 cents in cash, and from the telephone box had been taken about $3 in coins. The thieves also took the telephone.

WOMAN POLITICIAN IS MAD.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Countess Elizabeth Emilie Von Wedel, a Frenchwoman and a former "political agent," who was quite a celebrity, has been placed in a German asylum for the insane.

SENT FREE TO MEN

A Most Pleasing Remedy Given to Quickly Restore Lost Vitality.

A Free Trial Treatment Sent by Mail To All Who Write.

Free trial treatments of Enervita, a most pleasing remedy, are being mailed to all men who write to Dr. John S. Howell. So many who had battled for years against the mental and physical suffering of man weakness have written thanking him for the great benefit received, therefore, Dr. Howell has decided to send free trial treatments to all men who write. It is a home treatment, and all who suffer with any form of weakness, resulting from youthful folly, premature loss of strength and memory, weak back, lack of vitality and confidence can now receive this strength-giving treatment at home.

The treatment has a peculiar grateful effect of warmth and seems to act direct to the desired location, promoting strength and development just where it is needed. It is given to relieve the ills and troubles that come from years of misuse of the natural functions, and has met with remarkable success, even in cases approaching advanced age. A request to John S. Howell, M. D., Suite 1221, Auditorium Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, stating that you desire one of his free trial packages, will be complied with promptly.

He is desirous of reaching that great class of men who are unable to leave home to be treated, and the free sample will enable them to see how easy it is to successfully treat man weakness when the proper remedies are employed. Dr. Howell makes no restrictions. Any man who writes will be sent a free sample and literature, carefully sealed in a plain package, so that you need have no fear of embarrassment or publicity. Readers are requested to write without delay.

SCHOLAR BARES HOSEA FAMILY'S SKELETON NOW

University of Chicago Professor Declares Prophet Took Wife as Horrible Example.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Hosea's family skeleton has come to light, if not to life. The domestic scandal of ancient Israel's prophet has been removed from its closet, scoured with higher criticism and rattled in the face of Biblical scholars, who were perfectly willing to let it rest. Professor J. M. Powis Smith, of the University of Chicago, exhibits it in an article on "The Marriage of Hosea," in the current number of The Biblical World.

Hosea's wife, Gomer Bath Diblaim, is the villainess of the story reconstructed by Professor Smith from the account of her marriage to the prophet, and in the first three chapters of the book of Hosea, Professor Smith asserts that Gomer, contrary to the usual interpretation of the Scriptural account, was a person of evil reputation before the wedding ceremony was performed.

Prophet Knew His Faults.

Professor Smith adds to his version the fact that Hosea knew of Gomer's faults and took her "with his eyes open." In short, the prophet married Gomer with the curious purpose of making the match a horrible example to the rest of the Israelites, he asserts.

The marriage was to impress Israel with the fact of its own disloyalty to God.

According to the professor's view, the belief that "Hosea, as a young man, fell in love with Gomer and married her, supposing her to be all his youthful imagination fancied her to be," that she later left his home to live with another man, that he bought her back and then become a prophet, will not hold water. The scholar declares that this version is founded on an imperfect notion of the physiology of prophets.

Professor Smith asserts that the wife's name, which means "Gomer, daughter of Fig Cakes," signifies that she was held in low esteem. He retranslates several words in the Biblical account and gives the following as the proper version:

"Hosea, a prophet already burdened with the sense of his people's sin, felt himself called upon by Yahweh to marry a lewd woman, to the end that through such a marriage he might open the eyes of Israel to the enormity of its offense in being disloyal to Yahweh, its rightful lord. In pursuance of this conviction, Hosea bought Gomer, a woman living in public shame with her paramour.

Placed Her Under Restraint.

"But he at once placed her under restraint, denying her association with himself as well as with others, and seeking by such discipline to fit her for her position as his wife. This phase of the experience was interpreted for Israel as meaning that she as Yahweh's bride must be disciplined by exile before she could expect to enjoy any further favor from Yahweh.

"After this period of restraint for Gomer she was taken by Hosea into his home and became the mother of three children. Each of these in succession was given a prophetic name, and, like Isaiah's children, became a walking sermon to Israel just as the institution of marriage itself had been."

Hard Fall Re-sets Dislocated Spine

WIMINGTON, DEL., Aug. 23.—An expenditure of $16,000 and treatment for years in sanitariums in Germany and Paris failed to accomplish what a fall downstairs did. Mrs. William Heim, of Ellendale, Del., was cured of a dislocated spine in this unusual manner. The fall forced her spine into place. To-day she says she is well.

Her head is bandaged, but she was able to preside over a recent meeting of the Ellendale Ladies' Social, of which she is president.

Small Expenses Small Profit

This Advertisement Is Worth 50c

AT THE

Royal Shoe Shop

86 N. BROAD, NEAR LUCKIE ST.

This week, in order to introduce our new lines of Goodyear Welt and English Welt Dress Shoes for Men and Women, we will sell for

$2.50

If offered at our store, together with this advertisement
ONE PAIR TO A CUSTOMER
Our extra quality shoes as described above

ALL LEATHERS—Gun Metal, Kid, Russia and Patent Colt. ALL SIZES, All New Goods.

Made by one of the Greatest and Best Manufacturers In this Country.

We Make a Specialty of Comfortable Work Shoes for Mechanics and Workingmen

Certainly! We Sell EDUCATOR SHOES for the Whole Family

No reasonable offer refused on the remainder of our Low Shoes in stock. Come while the coming is good.

SAVE HALF A DOLLAR

The ROYAL SHOE SHOP

IRISH RAISE HUGE FUND TO ASSURE HOME RULE

American Hibernians Respond Liberally to Appeal Made After Great Demonstration in Chicago Against England's Domination.

Another Feature of Meeting Was Adoption of a Resolution Condemning Great Britain's Policy Toward U. S. in Canal Dispute.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Following the gigantic demonstration for Irish home rule at the thirty-eighth annual picnic of the United Irish Societies of Chicago, held in Brands Park, sons of Erin here are confident that in a few weeks American Hibernians will have raised a fund that will insure the home rule for which they have fought so long and which they have almost brought about.

Fifteen thousand persons visited the park during the day and they responded liberally to the call for funds with which to carry on their campaign. Three thousand dollars was raised at that time and the fund has grown steadily since.

A feature of the occasion was the reading by James T. Clark, president of the United Irish Societies, of a telegram from William Randolph Hearst, in which he warmly favored home rule. The president was quick to reply, expressing the thanks of the societies for the co-operation they have received in their work from Mr. Hearst's papers.

British Canal Stand Scored.

Another important feature of the day was the resolution prepared in advance and passed by a unanimous vote, opposing the British contention over the Panama Canal tolls.

The resolutions strongly uphold the views of the United States that this country, having built the canal and paid for it without aid, should have the right of passing her own ships through it without paying tolls, and that this action of the United States is entirely within its rights as a nation and is not subject to the criticism of any other nation.

The work of John Redmond, parliamentary leader, in forcing the home rule bill to the verge of final passage, also was commended highly.

One of the most impressive features of the occasion was the exhibition of a full-size model of the statue of Colonel F. Finerty, the famous soldier-journalist and a son of whom Erin is very proud.

Colonel Finerty wrote the story of the Custer campaign against old Sitting Bull, and the massacre in which Custer's whole command was wiped out. In his later years Colonel Finerty was editor of the Irish-American, and devoted all his energies to the home rule campaign, now so nearly won.

Work of Irish Sculptor.

The splendid statue of the old fighter is the work of Professor Charles J. Mulligan, of the Art Institute, a pupil of MacMonnies and Saint-Gaudens.

Among the speakers who addressed the enthusiastic throng were United States Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon, former Attorney General Maurice T. Maloney, P. H. O'Donnell, Joseph E. Ryan, John T. Sutton, of Lincoln, Neb., and Harry W. Smith, of Springfield, Ill.

In part, Mr. Maloney said: "We of the Celtic race have always struggled for a place in the sun, and have made a good deal of history, but we have been accused in the past of not being quite what we ought to be in the old country, and did not act to our own interest. English misgovernment and oppression were solely to blame for this.

"Now I can see a new Ireland rising above the horizon, a nation once again. The Irish people had advanced with giant strides, now that the long tribulation of our night is passing away."

Senator Twists Lion's Tail.

United States Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon said:

"My people came to this country to avoid persecution in the mother country, persecution by the English Government. Ireland had no measure of freedom in those times."

Speaking on the Panama Canal, he said: "We have a perfect right to arrange to suit ourselves charges on a canal that was made in America, solely by American money. If England will not send her exhibits to the San Francisco Exposition on this account, I would say let her keep them at home.

"If we were not careful to withstand these encroachments of the British Government, we might in the end find ourselves in the same case as Ireland finds herself to-day. I foresee home rule for that country within the next two or three years without question of doubt."

Tight Skirts Make Idle Factory Girls

Mill Men Assert Present Styles Curtail Demand for Goods and Cause Lack of Work.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., Aug. 23. That the factories manufacturing cloth are suffering from the present styles in women's wearing apparel, owing to the smaller sale of cloth, and that many operatives are being thrown out of work in consequence, is the opinion of many leading New Bedford manufacturers.

In the past three years the circumference of women's skirts has been cut down on the average about two yards. The smaller sales of cloth have necessitated a curtailment in the payrol and hundreds of idle operatives are waiting until the style change before they will be put to work again.

Irish Societies Leader Thanks Mr. Hearst for Support of Home Rule

CORDIAL telegrams of congratulation and thanks were exchanged between William Randolph Hearst and James T. Clark, president of the United Irish Societies of Chicago on the occasion of their annual picnic recently. Mr. Hearst expressed his belief in the justness and the ultimate success of the cause of home rule, while the head of the Irish societies in his reply earnestly thanked the publisher for his co-operation in their work in behalf of their fatherland. Mr. Clark's message follows:

CHICAGO, Aug. 20, 1913.

Hon. William Randolph Hearst,
San Francisco.

The sentiment of the United Irish Societies toward your papers has always been one of appreciation. Often in the past we have admired your unselfish advocacy of the cause of liberty and the 15,000 Irish-Americans at the ceremony of unveiling of the John F. Finerty monument were thrilled by your message in favor of home rule for Ireland. This monument is symbolic of the revitalized Irish nation that has been the inspiration of Parnell, Redmond and other patriots, and we believe it would strengthen the home rule cause immeasurably if you would publish in your Sunday papers, in the near future, a comprehensive account of our recent demonstration here, and emphasize its significance to Irish liberty.

JAS. T. CLARK, President,
United Irish Societies.

Mr. Hearst's Home Rule Message

San Francisco, Aug. 15.

As an American believing ardently in liberty and opportunity in equal rights and equal justice, I believe sincerely in home rule for Ireland.

If I were an Englishman I would believe with even greater earnestness in home rule not only for Ireland, but for every individual integral part of the British Empire.

I would believe in genuine home rule and in general home rule. I would believe in home rule which would insure complete independence in local government for every state and in a general government which would afford every state equal rights, equal liberties and proportionate representation.

Such just and genuine home rule is the best and perhaps the only remedy for the threatened decadence and possible dissolution of the British Empire. The preservation and perpetuation of the British Empire in its full prestige and power are only to be found in a voluntary federation of independent states, not held together loosely by compulsion but molded into an imperial entity by the natural and nationalizing forces of mutual confidence, mutual affection and mutual interest.

If I were an Irishman I would take pride in this fight for home rule, first because of the benefit I was helping to confer upon my country and my own countrymen, and, secondly, because of the benefit which will inevitably ensue to all other sections of the British Empire and to other nations throughout the world.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

'Perfect Baby' Fed on Soup and Vegetables

Hundred Per Cent Child Also Gets Abundance of Water and Fresh Air.

PASSAIC, N. J., Aug. 23.—"Good, substantial food, well cooked, is what I feed him," said Mrs. Thomas Watterston, of No. 110 Central avenue, when asked how she reared her son, Leslie, just declared the only 100 per cent perfect baby in the "better babies" contest in Passaic. Three hundred infants contested. He is 27 months old.

"He gets soups, fruit, vegetables, puddings, cereals," continued the mother. "I give him very little meat, few eggs, but plenty of water, inside and out."

Baby Leslie goes to bed about 8 p. m. and arises about 7:30, awakening of his own accord and bounding out into the fields before breakfast. He has a two-hour nap every afternoon, and always sleeps with the windows in his room wide open.

Women Voters Save Mayor From Recall

Committee From Their Organization Canvasses Every Ward to Prevent His Defeat.

JANESVILLE, WIS., Aug. 23.—Mayor James A. Fathers was the victor by a narrow margin to-day in Wisconsin's first recall election of importance under the commission form of government. He was elected by 98 votes, with a total of more than 3,000 votes cast, more than were ever before voted in a Janesville municipal election.

Mayor Fathers received 1,570 votes and his opponent, John C. Nichols, 1,472. Fathers carried three wards, the First, Second and Third, those chiefly occupied by the church and aristocratic elements, while Nichols carried the Fourth and Fifth Wards, the homes of the poorer people.

The election follows the trouble over saloons six months ago, when the Fathers administration started a campaign to clean up the town. Every ward in the city was canvassed by women's committees in the interest of Fathers.

Standardize Book to Simplify Grammar

Educators Work to Have Study of English Language Made More Uniform.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Aug. 23.—Standardization of grammatical nomenclature, which will do away with the confusion in the study of English, as well as other languages, in American schools, has been effected by a committee of fifteen, of which Professor Hills, of Colorado College, was a member.

The committee made a report to the National Educational Association in convention at Salt Lake City and its adoption without amendment virtually insures the following of the committee's recommendations in all schools and colleges.

According to Professor Hills it was found that in the sentence "John is good," the word "good" was called by nine different names in 26 grammars; the word "John" in "This is John," was called by nineteen terms, and in "We made John president," the word "president" was given eighteen different names in the text books examined.

Philippine Hero Can't Re-enlist in Army

Battle-Scarred Pensioner Rejected by Recruiting Office on Account of Wounds.

SPOKANE, Aug. 23.—One of the seven heroes of the United States army who survived the bloody massacre of Balingiga, P. I., when he saw more than 100 of his comrades and officers go to their death at the hands of a savage Philippine tribe, and himself, was mutilated in many places on his body and given up for dead, John M. Newhouse, applied for re-enlistment in the United States army.

Newhouse is 37 years old and came from Helena. He is now drawing $30 a month for the injuries he received in the massacre. Newhouse told of his experience while pleading with local army recruiting officers to take him into the army again.

Officials were compelled to reject the applicant on account of a stiff right arm caused by one of the cuts from a bolo.

Lightning Bug Used To Illuminate House

West Virginian Discovers New Light Medium Which He Declares Surpasses Electricity.

MORGANTOWN, W. VA., Aug. 23. Thornton Flowers, of Mora, claims that by treating the common firefly or lightning bug with a secret chemical process he has produced a light surpassing the tungsten incandescent. He has his home illuminated with the new light.

Several weeks ago, Flowers says, he captured an immense lightning bug. It gave out a brilliant light, and this gave him an idea that the light from fireflies would illuminate a room if they were made to glow incessantly. He hit upon a mixture of chemicals, which, he says, not only will retain the glow after the insect's life is extinct, but will increase it.

He captured the insects by hundreds, treated them with chemicals and placed them in globes throughout his home.

Blind Girl Student Marvelous Gardener

Produces Daisies Three Times Size of Ordinary Flowers and Vegetables Just as Big.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Twenty-seven deaf and dumb girls and boys, ranging from 10 to 17, are being taught to speak, read, write stories, sew, make biscuits, solve arithmetic problems, spell and garden at the Sixteenth Street school here, where an exhibition of their work was held recently.

Miss Elizabeth Kenealy, 15, is creating a sensation at the school because of her wonderful success in raising flowers and vegetables.

In a middy blouse and dark skirt, Miss Elizabeth works in her gardens, one at home and the other at school, producing daisies three times the size of the ordinary flowers, and beets that make the average vegetable look like radishes in size.

SMITH URGES ZONE CURE FOR BOLL WEEVIL

Senator From South Carolina Declares South's Loss in 17 Years Is $1,000,000,000.

Continued from Page 1.

an isolated spot in Texas until it has now reached the State of Alabama, and I have been appalled by the damage wrought by its ravages. During all these years I have been hoping for the discovery by which the pest could be exterminated, or even checked, but in both I have been disappointed.

Likes Zone Remedy Plan.

Some time ago the suggestion was made to establish across the entire cotton belt, east of the areas infested by the weevil a zone of 100 miles, in which no cotton should be planted. It was argued that this would check the eastward advance of the weevil, as it subsists only on the cotton plant, and it was also argued by entomologists and other experts on plant and insect life that my moving this zone westward from year to year all the weevils in the Cotton States would be starved out and entirely exterminated until the Mexican border was reached.

The idea appealed to me very strongly, and I have given the subject a great deal of study ever since. I believe this plan is entirely feasible, and while at first thought the cost may seem prohibitive, yet when the estimated cost is compared with the estimated saving the zone plan must be looked upon as a very sound business proposition.

The Government entomologists, farm demonstration agents and others admit that if this zone plan is put into operation it will undoubtedly check and finally exterminate the boll weevil, as it will have nothing to feed upon, and they admit at the same time that no other plan that has been tried so far has been at all effective.

I have had an estimate made of the cost of the proposed zone and I think it is a very liberal one. It follows:

"The cessation of cotton growing over an area of 46,245 square miles, in which the crop is valued at $98,990,047 per annum, is at first glance such an appalling suggestion that few have even thought to look deeper.

Sees Need of Substitute.

"We must add also to this the loss in ginning business, which is computed at $2,915,518 per annum and the loss in seed products totaling $5,633,562. This means that there must be compensation for a loss in earning value of $107,539,127 per annum.

"In the first place, any scheme which would call for the cessation of cotton growing must provide the means and knowledge for growing something else in the place of cotton.

"A large crop of trained agriculturists instructing in the cultivation of new and profitable crops and in the principles of rotation, maintenance of soil fertility, etc., would help the people to double and treble the output of their land within very few years. It would also be necessary to supply seed for planting the 2,572,672 acres of cotton land in other crops. Thus the greater part of the prospective loss can be met at a reasonable expense.

"The loss of the ginners and part of the loss of the oil men will have to be assumed by the Government. This loss would not exceed $9,000,000.

"It would be necessary for the western portion of the quarantine area to remain out of cotton for possibly three years.

"East of the proposed quarantine line there lies an area of 112,027 square miles of territory in which cotton can be produced. The average yield per acre (1908-1811) for this territory has been 3,051,103 bales (500 pounds), of which 32,892 bales (500 pounds was sea island cotton. The value of the latter was $4,224,235.

Places Faith in Expert.

"The value of the remaining or upland cotton, valued at 11.9 cents per pound, was $174,345,554. The value of the equivalent amount of seed produced would be $32,943,532. Thus the annual value of the producers of the crop to be protected is $217,514,211.

"History of the boll weevil has shown that if this area is not protected its production will be lowered year by year until possibly 50 per cent of the crop is taken, and sometimes as high as 75 per cent."

The zone plan is the only suggestion that has yet been offered that holds out any promise of relief. The cost of the zone plan is undoubtedly great, but when the estimated cost is compared with the estimated saving, the protection of sections not yet reached and the ultimate eradication of the boll weevil throughout the entire cotton belt, the cost does not seem to be prohibitive. In fact, the cost of the zone system will be mild compared with the loss that will be entailed if the boll weevil is not exterminated.

Sea Island Crop Imperiled.

It is practically certain that if the boll weevil spreads to the South Atlantic States the sea island cotton industry will be wiped out entirely. This is by reason of the semi-tropical nature of the islands, the luxuriant foliage which affords a safe harbor and breeding ground for the insects during winter and summer, and the fact that there is neither extreme heat nor extreme cold, both of which are destructive to insect life. It is my deliberate judgment that if the boll weevil reaches the sea islands, there will be no more sea island cotton.

I have spoken of the aggregate loss to the country, but the feature that appeals to me most strongly is the loss to the individual. The country may eventually recover from the damage done to the cotton crop, but the individual cotton farmer whose income is cut in half or destroyed, and whose property is made to depreciate in value, may never recover. The loss to him will be irreparable.

My object in writing this is in order that the people may know just how seriously the cotton crop is being menaced, and that they may discuss and understand the only plan that has been offered, which promises to accomplish the result needed. If any other plan is suggested that promises to accomplish the result at a less cost or in a quicker manner, I will give it my heartiest indorsement.

I will be glad to have the farmers and others of the South consider this problem carefully and write me what they think of it.

WOMAN IS KEY IN STRUGGLE TO UNSEAT SULZER

New York Governor's Foes Call Wife's Illness a Sham and Confession a Ruse.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Apparently deadlocked until the High Court of Impeachment meets September 18 to try the charges of high crimes and misdemeanors against Governor William Sulzer, both the accused Executive and Lieutenant Governor Martin Glynn are busy, the one strengthening his defense, the other preparing to invigorate his attack. In the meantime, the official business of the Empire State is at a standstill.

The government of New York presents a paradox unique to republican government. The State has two Governors, and it has none. Two men maintain they have the right to transact the State's business. No business is being transacted.

And in this struggle for power, the battle seemingly centers about a woman, a woman who has no voice in the government, who is not even allowed to vote under the statutes of the State.

Wife's Illness Questioned.

In addition to the law point raised by the defenders of Sulzer that he can not be impeached or tried for things he did before he took the oath of office, the defense lays greatest stock on the declaration by Sulzer's wife that she, not the Governor, used checks he had received as campaign contributions to speculate on the stock market.

On the other hand, it is learned that the Frawley Committee, which brought to light the charges on which the Governor was impeached, will make her confession the subject of a rigid examination to shatter, if possible, the defense, which will be based largely on her statement.

In the meantime, Mrs. Sulzer, it is reported, is dangerously ill, her nerves broken, it is said, under the strain which she has experienced since the charges were brought against her husband.

Sulzer's enemies even question this illness. They question it so seriously that it, too, is to be investigated. The first step in this investigation,

Both Accused of "Shamming."

The committee believes that "talking too much" consisted of telling stories of Mrs. Sulzer's true condition which were not to the liking of the Governor. An inkling of this purpose was contained in an interview with Assembly Majority Leader Aaron J. Levy, who declared:

"Not only is Mrs. Sulzer's confession a sham, but the pretended illness of Mrs. Sulzer is a sham, of which William Sulzer is the chief perpetrator."

However, should Sulzer be removed from office by Tammany votes, with all the judges of the Court of Appeals voting in his favor, he would count it a vindicaton and proof of his assertion that he is being persecuted because he would not turn over the State to Tammany Hall.

'Wild Man's' Haircut Fills Bushel Basket

Tramp That Frightened Woman and Children Gets Cleaning When Arrested.

MILLVILLE, N. J., Aug. 23.—A "wild man" was reported to the police as roaming the woods west of Millville and frightening women and children. Marshal Biggs hastened to the locality and discovered an uncouth man with shaggy beard which reached to his waist and long hair which hung matted over his shoulders.

When taken to the City Hall the man said he was Waldron Furry, of Low Banks, Canada, and that he was simply tramping.

Marshal Biggs acted as barber for the stranger and his hirsute adornment filled a bushel basket.

Pastor Adopts Wife He Had Divorced

Girl Becomes His Ward as Soon as Decree Was Granted by Court.

WOODWARD, OKLA., Aug. 23.—A divorce on unusual grounds has been granted here to B. F. Willett, who is an ordained Baptist minister, and who has served several terms as prosecuting attorney for the county.

Willett gives up his wife that she may become again, in effect, his adopted daughter. Years ago he adopted a little girl who took the name of Clara Willett. He put her in school at Enid, determined to give her the best education obtainable.

Six years ago, when Clara reached the age of 16, Judge Willett made his adopted daughter his bride.

In his petition for divorce the lawyer and former preacher set forth that "Mrs. Willett had told him she never could love him as a wife should, but that she could be devoted to him as a daughter."

Girl Wins First Wireless License

She Installs Her Own Apparatus

Miss Alice McConaughy, of Cincinnati, at the key of her wireless instrument.

This girl operates under a license granted under the new wireless laws.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 23.—Miss Alice McConaughy, 13-year-old schoolgirl, is the first person to obtain an operator's license under the new laws regulating wireless telegraphy on the Great Lakes, even if she did get it on something of a fluke.

The license was issued before the inspector discovered that he had failed to notice the age of the applicant, whose father is a national bank examiner of Ohio.

"I did give them the right age," declared Alice. "I sent for the blanks and filled them out myself."

Her work on the demonstration set was satisfactory. The youthful operator installed her own apparatus at home, doing all the wiring and even erecting the 50-foot aerial.

Chester Boynton Sue By Wife for Libel

Echo of Famous Litigation Against Rev. William B. Ayres in New Case.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Helen Theresa Willet Boynton, of Wollaston, Mass., wife of Chester A. Boynton, who some time ago created a sensational church scandal by suing the Rev. William B. Ayres, pastor of the Park and Down Congregational Church, Wollaston, for $10,000 for alienation of Mrs. Boynton's affections, has filed a libel for divorce from her husband on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

Boynton claimed in his suit that the minister had broken up his home after joining the Boynton household as a boarder. Mr. Ayres and Mrs. Boynton in the former's case of defense denied all of the husband's allegations and declared that the whole trouble in the Boynton household sprang out of Boynton's attentions to a choir girl at the Park and Down Church, at which Boynton and his wife were both prominent members.

Boynton lost his suit and was expelled from the Wollaston church. Boynton is now living at Los Angeles.

Has $18 Salary Cut To $10 to Spite Wife

Judge, However, Orders Bookkeeper to Pay Alimony Just the Same.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—G. Lester Pinkham, a bookkeeper of Flushing sued by his wife for alimony, testified that he was receiving only $10 a week.

His employer, A. M. Ryon, called as a witness, corroborated him.

"Is he worth more money?" asked the Magistrate.

"He certainly is," replied Mr. Ryon; "formerly I paid him $18 a week, but he asked to have his salary reduced to $10."

The Magistrate promptly ordered Pinkham to pay his wife $5 a week and furnish a bond of $520 to guarantee payment.

College Girl Walker Goes 25 Miles a Day

Little Pedestrian Reaches Pittsburg on Jaunt From New York to San Francisco.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 23.—With a jaunty rose-colored hat, Miss Gladys Mason, a petite New Yorker, who is "footing it" from Broadway to the Golden Gate, is on her way West.

The little pedestrian left New York on June 29 and has averaged 25 miles a days. Her high mark for a day is 41 miles, made east or Harrisburg.

Miss Mason is 22, a graduate of Emerson College, Boston. She expects to reach San Francisco Thanksgiving Day.

COUNTY TO GIVE COOK BOOKS TO NEWLYWEDS

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Leaden biscuits and leather-crusted pies and all the other dinner delicacies of Mrs. Newlywed soon may cease to cause physical pain and matrimonial estrangement. Their existence is threatened.

Authorities of Cook County are considering the advisability of giving away official Cook County cook books with all marriage licenses. Robert M. Sweitzer, County Clerk, will present the plan to the County Board.

SAYS WIFE AND MAGICIAN WERE IN DEATH PLOT

Husband Declares That Their Conspiracy Kept Him in Bed Three Years.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Alleging that his wife was madly infatuated with a man of strange, weird, magnetic powers, and that they conspired to incapacitate him by administering mysterious potions, Theodore Speaber, a former undertaker of Chicago, filed suit for divorce from Anna Speaber in the Circuit Court at Laporte, Ind.

Through the machinations of his wife and a man who represented himself as being a magnetic healer, assuming the name of Louis Odillo, Speaber avers that they tried to convince him that he had become a victim of tuberculosis. Odillo then injected a chemical in his ear, he alleges, which brought on an illness that confined him to a hospital bed for three years. This, he charges, was done with the deliberate intention of causing a fatal sickness to set in and get him out of the way.

His wife then sold out his undertaking business and their household effects, he charges, for less than one-third of the real value. She then refused to see him after he had been released from the hospital.

Friends of Speaber say that he was at one time an inmate of the Elgin State Insane Asylum. But he was released later as cured.

2 GALS $5.00 EXPRESS PREPAID

Alsobrook's OLD FORT
100 PROOF STRAIGHT
KENTUCKY WHISKEY

BEST BY TEST
TRY IT YOURSELF

If not satisfied, ship it back to us and get your money. Our straight 100 Proof Kentucky Whiskey is 100 by Proof—100% pure, 100% straight, and will give you 100% satisfaction. No chance of doctoring, extending or tampering with Old Fort 100 Proof Kentucky Whiskey, as it is guaranteed under the U. S. Pure Food Law. It is good as a beverage—as a medicine—as an all round Family Whiskey. (Other concerns ask $6 to $8 for same kind of whiskey.)

WHOLESALE PRICE
EXPRESS PREPAID—TWO GALLONS, $5; ONE GALLON, $3
Or we will ship, express paid, at same price, 100 Proof straight White Cob Corn Whiskey, guaranteed the finest White Corn Whiskey ever made. Remember this is 100 by Proof—no tampering or extending. Try either brand or send an assorted order; two gallons for $5. Express paid. If not satisfied your money returned.

A. L. ALSOBROOK CO.
CHATTANOOGA, TENN.
Return this adv. with order for above and Bottle of 100 Proof Apple Brandy sent Free

OTTLEY & KNOWLES
General Insurance
1508 Fourth National Bank Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

SEMI-ANNUAL STATEMENT
For the six months ending June 30, 1913, of the condition of the
Svea Fire and Life Insurance Company (Limited)
OF GOTHENBURG, SWEDEN,
Organized under the laws of the Kingdom of Sweden, made to the Governor of the State of Georgia, in pursuance of the laws of said State. Principal office in United States, 100 William street, New York, N. Y.

I. CAPITAL STOCK.
Whole amount of capital $200,000.00
Amount paid up in cash 200,000.00

II. ASSETS.
Total assets of the company, actual cash market value $1,422,807.30

III. LIABILITIES.
Total liabilities $1,422,807.30

IV. INCOME DURING THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THE YEAR 1913.
Total income actually received during the first six months in cash ..... $ 417,212.42

V. EXPENDITURES DURING THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THE YEAR 1913.
Total expenditures during the first six months of the year in cash ..... $ 379,770.04
Greatest amount insured in any one risk ..... $ 37,500.00
Total amount of insurance outstanding 121,363,329.00

A copy of the act of incorporation, duly certified, is of file in the office of the Insurance Commissioner.

STATE OF NEW YORK—County of New York.
Personally appeared before the undersigned M. L. Duncan, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the United States manager of the Svea Fire and Life Insurance Company, Ltd., and that the foregoing statement is correct and true.
M. L. DUNCAN, United States Manager.
Sworn to and subscribed before me this 15th day of August, 1913.
EDWIN F. COREY,
Commissioner for the State of Georgia.
Name of State Agent—DAN B. HARRIS, Atlanta.
Name of Agents at Atlanta—OTTLEY & KNOWLES.

MRS. GODBEE CALM; CALLS SELF A TOOL OF JUSTICE

Divorced Wife of Millen Judge, Who Killed Him and Young Bride, Shows No Remorse. Planned Shooting With Care.

Trouble Alleged to Have Started Twenty Years Ago Over Prisoner's Property—Jurist Is Said to Have Slain Brother-in-Law.

MILLEN, Aug. 23.—Convinced that she has been an instrument of justice, satisfied that the work she had planned for days has been well performed, Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee, in her cell in the Jenkins County jail, to-day calmly and confidently awaits the hour when she will face a court to answer to the law for the slaying of her former husband, Judge Walter M. Godbee, and the bride who had taken the slayer's place in his affections.

Mrs. Godbee saw life pass from the body of the man with whom she had lived for years, and there was no remorse shown on her face. While imprisoned for his slaying she was told that she must also answer to the charge of having murdered his wife. She did not blanch.

She had determined on the death of both. She had planned her deed carefully. She believed that she was justified in resorting to arms to avenge her real or fancied wrongs, and persons who know her best declare she is ready to meet the consequences.

No effort to obtain bail has been made by her. She has waived the right of preliminary trial. She is content to remain in jail until her time of trial comes.

Started Twenty Years Ago.

The attitude of this woman, who has passed her fiftieth year, is one of the most remarkable features of this remarkable tragedy.

Twenty years ago, when Judge Godbee and his second wife found they were mismated, the foundation for the double slaying was laid. The climax came Monday morning in the Millen postoffice, when Judge Godbee was almost instantly killed and his young wife fatally wounded by pistol shots fired by the woman from whom he had been separated by the courts.

Both Judge Godbee and the woman held as his slayer are of prominent Jenkins County families. Godbee had been prominent in politics. He had been married three times.

His first wife died many years ago, but, at his request, he is buried at her side in the cemetery at Waynesboro. Soon after her death he married Miss Edna Perkins, daughter of the late Mills Perkins, and heiress to considerable property.

They lived in apparent happiness until the early nineties, when the first signs of trouble came. At this time Judge Godbee acquired rights to certain properties which belonged to his wife before their marriage. It is charged that the judge afterward sold this property and reinvested the proceeds for his own personal benefit.

Shot Brother, Is Rumor.

Then there is an old story that years ago in Burke County Judge Godbee became involved in a difficulty with a brother of the woman he afterward married, and killed him. He pleaded self-defense and was acquitted.

There is no record, though, that this trouble had any bearing on the marital differences of the couple.

Friction between the couple reached a critical stage ten years ago, when Mrs. Godbee filed suit for divorce in Jenkins County, charging cruelty on the part of her husband.

She declared that the judge had humiliated her before her children, had driven her from his room and had nailed the entrance between the two chambers in which they lived.

Even after this suit was filed there was a reconciliation, but the trouble cropped out again about five years ago, when Mrs. Godbee again entered suit. She was granted absolute divorce, but the judge was successful in resisting her plea for allmony. Mrs. Godbee was also given the custody of her minor child, Miss Sarah Godbee, with whom she lived at the time of the tragedy.

Divorce Didn't End Trouble.

The divorce decree did not end the troubles of the pair, however. Mrs. Godbee always contended that the money on which Judge Godbee was living luxuriously after the decree rightfully belong to her.

It is certain that she was in straitened circumstances at the time of the killing, and it is believed that the sight of another woman enjoying the fortune she believed hers, while she virtually was living in poverty, had no little to do with her determination to take justice into her own hands.

For after the divorce Judge Godbee married again. His third wife was Miss Florence Boyer, 25 years old, of Youngstown, Ohio. After their meeting at the sea shore Judge Godbee continued his courtship at her home, and little more than four months ago he brought her to Millen as his bride.

A crisis was reached. Soon after the judge's return, it is declared, he received demands from his former wife that he contribute to the support of her and her daughter. In these demands she cited the fact that she was entitled to at least part of the income he derived from property which had originally been hers.

Judge Feared for Life.

Intimate friends of the judge say that from that time on he feared, not only for his own life, but for that of his bride.

So alarmed did he become that on receiving a threatening letter Sunday he refused to take his bride to church, although he was a steward of the First Methodist congregation, and requested the pastor, the Rev. E. E Rose, to come to the Hotel Estelle, where he had apartments, to conduct private prayers.

It is evident that on that same day Mrs. Godbee No. 2 decided on the deed she committed Monday. She got into communication with Marshal P. T. Foote and requested him to call on her at her daughter's home.

There, the marshal says, Mrs. Godbee showed him a .32-caliber pistol.

"Will this kill as quickly as a .38?" was the surprising question he was asked.

"It will if it hits the right spot," he replied. She seemed satisfied with the answer and the interview closed.

This same pistol was in Mrs. Godbee's handbag Monday morning when she went to the Millen postoffice. She knew that each day the judge visited there early in the forenoon to inquire for mail. She was seated writing as he entered the building, accompanied by his young wife. The slyaing followed.

Mrs. Godbee died Tuesday night in the apartments in which she and her husband had lived during the two months of their married life. Mrs. G. W. Boyer, mother of the slain bride, was en route from Williamsport to Millen when her daughter died.

Bulk of Estate to Daughter.

The will of Judge Godbee has been found in the possession of W. B. Wallace, a merchant, and one of the dead man's closest friends. The value of the estate is between $45,000 and $50,000. He bequeathes the bulk of his property and securities to his daughter by his first wife, formerly Miss Maggie Godbee, now married and living in Augusta.

Small portions of the estate are left to Frank Mills and King Godbee, sons of the divorced wife, and Miss Sarah Godbee, also an issue of the second marriage. The divorced wife is not provided for in the instrument. Frank Mills Godbee has been appointed temporary administrator of the estate of Judge Godbee, and A. S. Anderson, temporary administrator of the estate of Mrs. Florence Boyer Godbee.

The third Mrs. Godbee has been buried beside her husband and his first wife in Waynesboro. The condition of Mrs. Boyer, the slain bride's mother is said to be somewhat improved following her collapse upon first seeing the dead body of her young daughter. Her two sons have come from Pennsylvania and will remain with her until she returns to her home at Williamsport.

Neither of the boys expresses any animosity toward the slayer of their sister and her husband, but both join their mother in hoping that exact justice will be done. Archibald and LeRoy Boyer the brothers, have not yet decided whether they will attend the trial of the second Mrs. Godbee.

Vincent Astor Reported Captured

Name Is Linked With Miss Sands

Match Long Predicted by Gossips

Miss Elizabeth Sands and Vincent Astor.

Fiancee-To-Be Measures Up to Rigid Requirements of Young Multi-Millionaire's Mother.

NEWPORT, Aug. 23.—Decidedly the most interesting aftermath of the recent Newport yacht races is the persistent report that Miss Elizabeth Sands, beautiful daughter of Mrs. Frederick Sands, of this city, occupies the place of honor in the affections of Vincent Astor, head of that family and heir to its huge estates.

This report, which has been current in social circles here and in New York, took the form of a practical certainty, according to society's self-constituted soothsayers, when it was noted that in the party taken to the races by young Astor was only one of three girls to whom he paid marked attention last year. That one, of course, was Miss Sands.

It has long been known and greatly gossiped about at afternoon teas and other social functions that young Astor has felt a strong liking for the young beauty ever since they were school children.

Society wiseacres, who have long ago hung up in their mental art galleries a picture of young Astor and Miss Sands as a happy married couple, were not at all discouraged when the young man's affections at times seemed to wander from his childhood's choice.

"Just wait until Vincent's mother gets back to America and resumes her place at the 'helm,'" said these social clairvoyants, "and you'll notice a sudden slump in the fortunes of Elizabeth Sands' attractive rivals."

The prediction was based upon a firm belief that the aristocratic former Ava Willing would see to it that her son, who is now the head of the family and chancellor of its inexhaustible exchequer, should marry someone who measured up in every way to her rigid requirements as to ancestry, connections and social standing.

$175,000 TO BE GIVEN IN PRIZES FOR LIVE STOCK

Harness Race Purses at Panama-Pacific Exposition Will Total $225,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—The greatest live stock show in the history of the world is assured at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in 1915. Following the appropriation by the exposition management of $175,000 for awards for prize-winning live stock, and the news that $225,000 is offered in purses for harness races, each new announcement by Chief of the Department of Live Stock D. O. Lively discloses increasing interest in the forthcoming live stock exhibition.

The live stock department has at its disposal 50 acres of ground which will be devoted to the erection of live stock buildings, a hall for live stock congresses and agricultural meetings, a race track, and an open field upon which will be held drills, international cavalry horse contests, polo contests and exhibitions of the prize live stock of the world.

The live stock buildings will be constructed more from an exhibition standpoint than in keeping with any farm utility plan; the vast rows of barns which have characterized the live stock departments of other expositions will be avoided. Every separate section will be shown under a single roof.

In addition to the $175,000 set aside by the exposition management to be used in cash premiums, more than $45,000 has been offered by organizations representing various phases of the live stock industry. Of the prizes offered by the exposition, $50,000 will be given to horses, $50,000 to cattle, $25,000 to sheep and goats, $25,000 to swine, $12,000 to poultry, pigeons and pet stock, $7,500 to carloads of cattle, sheep and swine, $5,000 for prize-winning dogs and cats.

The department is making arrangements for holding the biggest poultry show on record, and birds from all over the world will compete for international prizes. The pigeons will take their place in the exposition not only as applied to the fancy, but as a utility, and some of the birds will be used as carriers, taking part in races across the continent from San Francisco.

Under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, the exposition will give two harness race meets, one in the spring and one in the fall of 1915, at which there will be offered $225,000 in stakes and purses. With one or two exceptions, the special stakes included in the grand aggregate of $225,000 will be the greatest that ever have been offered.

America's Oldest Church Discovered

Ruins of Centuries-Old House of Worship Off Yucatan Visited by Explorers.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 23.—The ruins of the oldest Christian church in America have been discovered on the Island of Cozumel off Yucatan by Professor Morley and Jesse Nusbaum, of the Sarvard-San Diego expedition.

Cozumel has not been visited by white men for almost a century, and Morley and Nusbaum had thrilling adventures, but deny that its people are cannibals. The scientists were equipped with a moving picture outfit, but in leaving the island for the mainland their canoe was upset and much of the photograph material was spoiled.

While Cozumel is only 30 by 7 miles in extent, it was found extraordinarily rich in monumental and architectural remains. It was here that Cortez had a fierce battle with the natives and erected what is declared to have been the first Christian church in America.

Repeats His Wedding Date as Punishment

Husband Who Told Court He Wished to Forget Marriage Has New Litany.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 23.—"June 14 1887," Philip Leborski will have to repeat ten times a day for the next 60 days in order to keep out of the house of correction, by sentence pronounced upon him by District Court Judge Elsner.

Leborski, who is a wealthy real estate owner, was arrested when a patrolman found him shaking his fist and swearing at his wife, while she was perched on the gable of their residence.

In the trial Leborski told the Court he was trying to forget he was married and that he had succeeded in forgetting the date of the ceremony. The Court informed him that no man had a right to forget such a date and then ordered his case continued 60 days and told Leborski to recite the date of the wedding ten times daily or he would have to go to jail. Leborski started his recitations before he was out of the courtroom and his wife was doing the counting.

Crusade Started on Big Sunday Dinners

Domestic Science Teachers of Kansas Schools Are Enlisted In The Campaign.

TOPEKA, KANS., Aug. 23.—The custom and the physical requirements that a man must rest at least one day in seven have brought about a campaign in Kansas against the big Sunday dinners that have so long been the delight of the average man. The domestic science teachers of the schools have enlisted the aid of domestic science students throughout the State and the big Sunday dinner is going the way of the hard biscuit and the underdone meat in the Kansas homes.

The campaign was started a year ago at the University of Kansas, but it now has the support of every high school and college with domestic science courses.

Maryland Jews to Raise Shaft to Friend

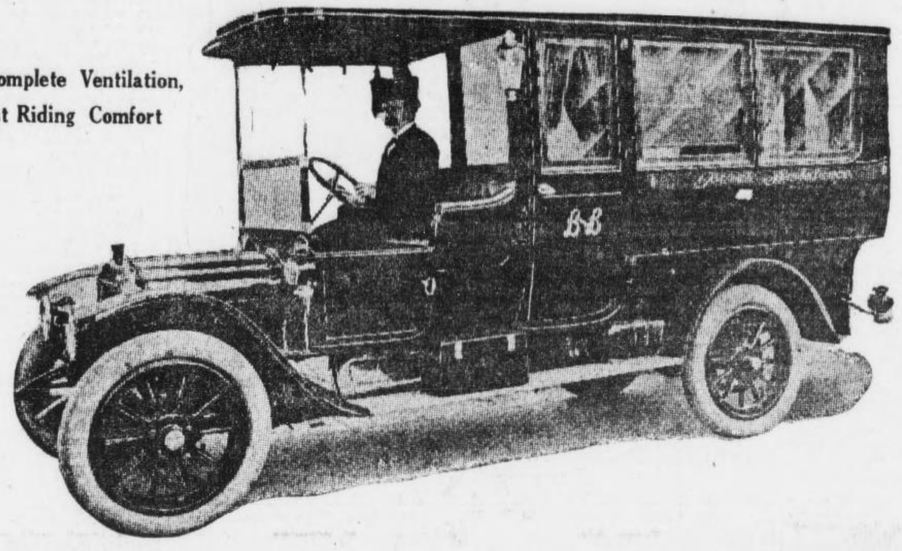
Thomas Kennedy, Who Passed Law Giving Them Right to Hold Office, To Be Honored.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., Aug. 23.—Mendes Cohen, of Baltimore, a grandnephew of one of the first Jews elected to office in the State of Maryland, will act as treasurer of the fund to be raised to build a monument to Thomas Kennedy, author of the law passed in 1826 that gave Jews the right to hold office.

Kennedy was famous in several other respects than as champion of the cause of political equality, for which he fought as a member of the Legislature eight years. He wrote many ballads that aroused the martial ardor of his fellow citizens in the days preceding the War of 1812.

Barclay & Brandon
S-E-R-V-I-C-E

Most Complete Ventilation, Fullest Riding Comfort



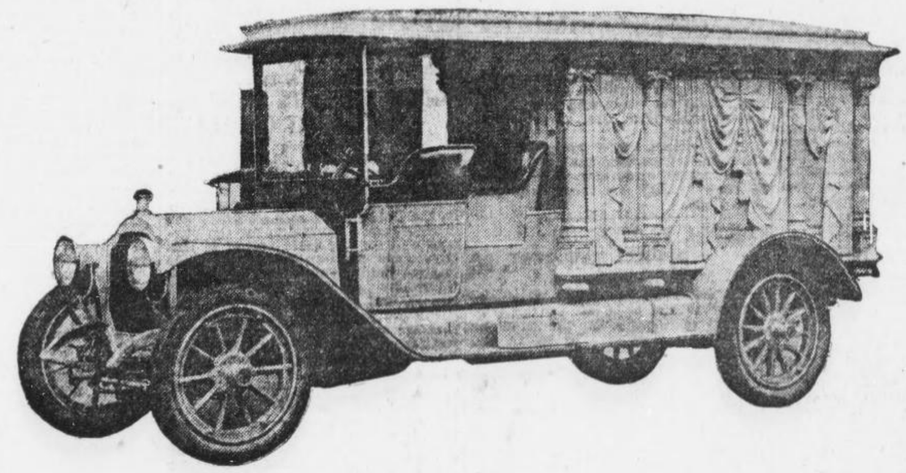
Equipment — Electric Fan, Running Hot and Cold Water, Ice Water, Steam Heat

This Picture Shows the Very Finest and Best Equipped Ambulance in the Entire South

The Barclay & Brandon PRIVATE AMBULANCE is positively the very last word in up-to-date Ambulances.

Nothing could be more complete—not a single thing can be suggested that might tend to give further and more complete comfort to the patient, that is not already a part of its wonderful equipment.

This most complete Ambulance is at your immediate service at all times, whether you live in Atlanta or suburbs. For white people only.



BARCLAY & BRANDON Service as Funeral Directors is Widely Known for Its Dignity and Exclusiveness

One very important point is that Barclay & Brandon alone can furnish you with a COMPLETE AUTOMOBILE FUNERAL, as they have just purchased a $7,000 Packard Hearse, the only Auto Hearse in the State. Choice of either auto or horse-drawn hearse.

In time of bereavement it is assuring at least to know that there is some one to whom you can intrust all the details of a funeral service, secure in the knowledge that every requisite will be carefully attended to.

This you may expect AT ALL TIMES from

BARCLAY & BRANDON

246 Ivy Street, Corner of Baker Phones Bell, Ivy 788, Ivy 168. Atlanta, 788

Columbus — Latest Southwest Georgia News — Albany

TWO BROTHERS GIVE 116 YEARS TO MINISTRY

The Revs. E. H. and John B. McGehee Oldest Active Workers in South Ga. Conference.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—Perhaps there are no more interesting characters in Georgia than the Rev. E. H. McGehee, of Columbus, and his brother, Dr. John B. McGehee, of Oglethorpe, whose combined services in the ministry are 116 years. Both were born in Perry, Houston County, and were admitted to the ministry when young men.

Sunday night at East Highlands Methodist Church in Columbus, the Rev. E. H. McGehee, who is pastor of the church, will give some reminiscences of 55 years as an itinerant minister. He was admitted to the South Georgia Conference 55 years ago next November, in Columbus. Since that time he has served two years as a missionary to the negroes, ten years on circuits, fifteen years as a presiding elder and twenty-eight years on stations. Of the class of 29 ministers admitted to the conference with him, he is the only living, active minister. In the past 60 years he has not been confined to his room for a period as long as four days at a time from sickness.

The record of his brother, Dr. John B. McGehee, who is now 80 years of age, is still more remarkable. He has been a minister for 61 years, during which time he has served thirty-nine years as presiding elder, two or three years as president of Andrew College and the remainder of the time on circuits and stations. During his long and successful career he has represented the South Georgia Conference at nine sessions of the General Conference, which meets every four years.

Dr. McGehee is said to be the oldest presiding elder in the Southern Methodist Church from a standpoint of service, while he and his brother are the oldest effective ministers in the South Georgia Conference, and they are strong refutation of the idea that a man when he reaches an advanced age is no longer capable of rendering service to the church.

The Rev. E. H. McGehee, of Columbus, is exceedingly active for a man of 74 years of age, and on his seventy-fourth birthday, which occurred recently, he preached three sermons and made a Sunday school address in addition to making a number of pastoral calls.

It is probable that there is not a charge within the bounds of the South Georgia Conference that one of these old and highly esteemed ministers has not served in some capacity since their admission to the ministry.

During their ministry they have served a number of the leading churches in South Georgia, and both have been regarded as among the ablest preachers in the conference throughout their long careers.

Begin Married Life With 24 Chlidren

Moultrie Bride and Bridegroom Had Even Dozen Each.

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—It is a very rare thing for newlyweds to begin keeping house with 24 children to make things lively from the first day of married bliss, yet this was the experience of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Truit, who were recently made man and wife by Justice J. J. Serrell in the Lee district of this County.

The bride was Mrs. M. J. Flowers, a widow with twelve children, and Mr. Truit, whose first wife has been dead for some time leaving him with an even dozen motherless children. Both of the participants in the recent wedding were bereaved about the same time and, living in the same community, they naturally turned ot one another for comfort, and finally agreed that the best thing to do was to marry.

SEABOARD CONDUCTOR GIVEN $10,000 DAMAGES

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—After a strongly contested trial, both sides being represented by able counsel, a verdict was returned yesterday afternoon in Crisp Superior Court for $10,000 in favor of W. B. McMichael, of Jackson, against the Seaboard Railroad Company. McMichael had been in the employ of the road as a freight conductor and in an accident near Birmingham on the Atlanta and Birmingham division he lost a leg. He entered suit for $25,000 and the case was brought to this court for trial under the Federal employees' liability act.

NEW SCHOLARSHIP AT WOODBERRY SCHOOL

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Rosa Woodberry, of Atlanta, has notified the Thomasville Study Class that she has given a scholarship in her school in Atlanta to the class to be awarded by them to any deserving girl that they may select.

This action on the part of Miss Woodberry is appreciated by the members of the class, as it will afford advantages to some deserving girl here who is not able otherwise to have them. It is not known yet who has been selected for the place, but the class has the matter under advisement.

ALBANY GETS ANOTHER LARGE OIL COMPANY

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—Present indications are that another large oil company will make Albany a distributing center in the near future. N. H. Cook, of Atlanta, district superintendent of the Texas Oil Company, one of the largest of the independent companies, has looked over the situation here with a view of locating a distributing plant for the

Miss Lillian Roberts

Popular Valdosta society girl, whose engagement to George L. Patterson, a prominent attorney, has been announced. The wedding is to take place on October 8.

Thomas Farmers Can Own Products

Vegetables Put Up at Home Find Ready Sale In Thomasville Market.

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—Thomas County canned vegetables are on sale here at many of the grocery stores and are proving very popular.

There were more vegetables canned in this county this year than was ever known before, and it has been found to be quite a profitable business, the stores in Thomasville taking them readily and paying the highest market price for them.

Tomatoes especially have been canned in large quantities, and they are unusualy fine, better than the best quality bought heretofore by the merchants from wholesale houses in the North.

The advantage of the home product is that the tomatoes are gathered fresh from the vines and canned before they have had time to get old or damaged.

One farmer, who recently sold about 2,000 cans, said that he had received many compliments in regard to their quality by those who had used them.

CAMILLA TO VOTE ON SCHOOL TAX SEPT. 30

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—September 30 has been set by the City Council of Camilla as the date for holding an election to ratify the schol tax bill for that town recently passed by the Legislature.

The election will be held under the same rules as elections for members of the General Assembly and the same qualifications will be required in registering. It is probable the opening of the school of Camilla will be deferred somewhat on account of this election.

RULES FOR PRIZES AT FAIR DECIDED UPON

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—The Directors of the Thomas County Fair to be held here this fall have received from the committee in charge the rules and regulations for measuring all crops to be exhibited for premiums and they will be followed closely.

J. Willis Moore has been named general director and will measure all acres and crops free of charge. It is said all indications point to the finest exhibit at this fair that has been known since it was organized.

THOMAS COUNTY FARMER EXHIBITS PRIZE CORN EAR

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—J. P. Cary, residing near Coolidge, had on exhibition here this week some corn grown by himself which is an example of what Thomas County can do in that line. One ear of this corn weighed two pounds and nine ounces and when shelled the grains filled a quart measure. The ear was twelve inches long.

Mr. Cary has a half acre of this corn which he will exhibit at the fair here this fall. He thinks his chances for first premium are fine.

Bumper Cotton Crop In Albany District

Several Hundred Bales Have Already Been Received in Market.

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—That about 50 per cent of the cotton in the Albany territory is from ten to fifteen days earlier than last year is the estimate of well-informed cotton men in Albany. The fact that Albany has received several hundred bales already, not counting that moved direct to the compress, is considered evidence that its estimate is approximately correct.

Last year, in addition to making a poor cotton crop, the farmers had no forage and have had to buy high-priced feed for eight months. While the acreage in feed crops this year is not much greater than it was last, the farmers have paid more attention to its cultivation, therefore making a better crop. With a bumper cotton crop and plenty of feed for their stock, the farmers expect a season of prosperity.

COTTON RECEIPTS SHOW DECLINE AT COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—Taking the position that Columbus has suffered the past few years because her cotton receipts have fallen off materially, the Columbus Board of Trade has inaugurated a campaign for the purpose of bringing more cotton to this city. Last year an effort was made to stem the tide of cotton going elsewhere by placing buyers on the streets, and while it had some effect, it did not counteract all the damage that has been done. An effort will be put forth to make the cotton market one of the most attractive in the State.

NEGRO SLAYER IS GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE AT ALBANY

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—In Superior Court of Baker County, which convened at Newton this week, several cases were tried. Simon Johnson, a negro, who killed his stepson on the Grant place in July, was found guilty and given a life sentence. Will Bodford, a negro, was found guilty of attacking a negro girl and sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary. Jake Rhoades was found guilty of violating the prohibition law and given a six months' sentence or a fine of $200.

BAPTIST ASSOCIATION TO MEET IN COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—The Columbus Baptist Association will meet in its annual session on Wednesday after the third Sunday in September in Manchester. Dr. B. W. Bussey, the moderator, will preach the doctrinal sermon. There are more than 30 churches in the association.

ASKS $5,000 DAMAGES FOR INJURIES IN MILL

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—Because of alleged injuries Charles Wiggins claims to have sustained while employed by the Swift Manufacturing Company of Columbus, on July 7, he has brought suit against the mills for $5,000. He claims that he has been unable to earn a livelihood since he received his injuries.

NEGRO SLAYER DIES OF WOUND IN MACON JAIL

Rushed From Albany for Safekeeping by Officers Who Captured Him.

MACON, Aug. 23.—Dock Mathis, the negro who shot and killed B. L. Jossey, near Leesburg several days ago, died Friday night in the Bibb County jail at Macon, where he was brought for safe keeping.

During the shooting Jossey is said to have shot the negro in the side. The wound was not serious, but the negro hid in the woods for several days and then laid in a shanty in the western part of Albany for a number of hours without receiving medical attention, blood poisoning set in and he died.

Officer R. M. Denson, of the Albany police force, through whose efforts he and Sheriff Barbre were enabled to capture Mathis, has received the reward of $100 that was offered by Sheriff Moreland, of Lee County, for the capture of the negro.

Officer Denson has not heard from G. A. Wallace and W. B. Bothwell, who each offered a reward of $100, but both are satisfied with the arrest of the negro and will pay the reward at the proper time.

The negro was located in the western part of Albany by Officer Denson, and with the aid of Sheriff Barbre he was captured and spirited through the country to Macon, where he was left for safe keeping.

Columbus Fights For Better Service

Board of Trade Wants Central of Georgia to Put on More Passenger Trains.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—The Columbus Board of Trade has inaugurated a campaign to secure better passengere service over the Central of Georgia to points east and west from Columbus, it being claimed that the service that is now being given by the road is not satisfactory.

The Board of Trade is anxious to have the Central put on an additional train or two, or to have trains that come to the city reach Columbus in time to allow the people coming to the city an opportunity to do their shopping and return home if they wish in the afternoon of the same day. The trade organization has the backing of practically every business man in the city.

Runs Small Farm In Heart of Griffin

Young Man Makes Large Yield of Irish Potatoes and Corn.

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Jan:es C. Nutt, one of Griffin's best-known young men, is running a small farm in the heart of the city, and is making good at it. On a plot of land adjoining the cemetery, Nutt planted four acres of Irish cobbler potatoes. So many Irish potatoes in one field had never been seen in this section before.

For some time now the crop has been in process of harvesting. Up to date only a portion of the crop has been disposed of, but 400 bushels of the potatoes have been sold at a price ranging from 80 cents to $1 per bushel.

To increase the returns from the land, Nutt has planted rows of corn between the rows of potatoes, and the corn is now over shoulder high. The corn gives promise of making not less than 25 bushels to the acre, and if season is propitious, a good deal more.

JUDGE DANIEL TOO ILL TO PRESIDE OVER COURTS

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Judge R. T. Daniel, of the Flint River Circuit, who was so ill last week that he had to adjourn the August term of Spalding Superior Court, and who has not been able to attend the Butts County Court this week, continues quite ill at his residence here on Poplar street. He will not be able to preside over the Monroe Superior Court, which is to convene at Forsyth Monday.

Judge H. A. Matthews, of Macon, presided over the Butts court for Judge Daniel, and it is likely that he again will preside for ihm next week.

WOMAN'S MISSION UNION CONVENES IN GAINESVILLE

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union, auxiliary to the Chattahoochee Baptist Association, was in session at the First Baptist Church here several days the past week, bringing a number of prominent women church workers to this city. It is said that the work of this union has become one of the most important in the denomination.

HALL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION TO MEET

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—One hundred delegates representing 65 Sunday schools of Hall County will come together in an interdenominational association, the first annual session to convene in this city next Tuesday morning for a two days' session. Hammond Johnson is county president, Henry H. Estes county secretary, and J. T. Telford, treasurer.

REVIVAL AT ELBERTON.

ELBERTON, Aug. 23.—The Rev. R. C. Cleckler, pastor, is conducting a series of meetings at the First Methodist Church. P. M. Boyd, of Nashville, is in charge of the singing.

Lineman Fights With Rattlesnake

Hemmed by Reptiles Under House in Thomasville—Desperate Battle.

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—Employee Rogers, of the Southern Bell Telephone Company, in this city, had an experience with snakes a day or two ago which was something of a thriller and which he is not likely to forget soon.

Rogers was sent out to C. B. Parsons' winter home near the country club to do some work on a broken telephone wire where he was trapped under the house by two rattlesnakes.

There was nothing within reach that could be used for killing a snake so he had only to wait and see what would happen. After about a quarter of an hour one snake crawled away and Rogers slipped down and, grabbing a stick, attacked the one remaining. He managed to kill it, but only after a desperate fight, the snake coiling up and fighting for all it was worth. It was over five feet long and a bad looking enemy. The other could not be found.

Columbus Treasury Is Short of Funds

Assessor Issues Order That City Taxes Must Be Paid Promptly.

COLUMBUS, GA., Aug. 23.—As an evidence of the depleted condition of the city treasury of Columbus, it has been announced by the City Tax Assessor that all city taxes due September 1 and not paid promptly, steps will be taken at once to collect same, and to this end will issue executions against the property in order to collect.

While the date upon which the taxes are due is still several days off, there is already much dissatisfaction over the announced intention of the City Tax Collector. Heretofore when it was not convenient for property owners to pay their taxes when due, they were given more time and given the privilege of paying interest at the rate of 7 per cent. It is known that much dissatisfaction is going to be felt.

Cupid Hits Old Mark; Children Wed, Too

One Pair Experienced in Matrimony, While Other Had to Run Away.

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The northern part of the county was this week the scene of two weddings of interest, owing to the wide difference in age of the couples, together with their popularity.

At Cohutta the Rev. W. C. Haddock and Mrs. Mary Ann Hartley were married. The wedding proved "Uncle Billy" Haddock's fourth venture, while his bride, Mrs. Hartley, was marrying for the third time. The Rev. J. C. Parrott performed the ceremony.

On the same date Miss Nola Starks, of Concord, became the wife of William Crain, of Beaverdale, the ceremony being performed by 'Squire J. D. Brackett. Mrs. Crain is 14 and her husband is just two years her senior.

While the wedding of Miss Starks and Mr. Crain was a runaway match, witnessed by only a few intimate friends and coming as a distinct surprise, there were fully 100 friends assembled to witness the Hartley-Haddock nuptials.

Auto Traded for Horse Wouldn't Go

Doctor Calls on Other Man to Swap Back, and He Says Was Cheated Again.

ROME, GA., Aug. 23.—Dr. W. A. Wright's fondness for automobiles was the cause of trouble with A. W. Williman, of Cave Spring, which resulted in the arrest of the latter on a warrant charging him with cheating and swindling.

Dr. Wright has discovered that an automobile, which looks as good as new standing still, easily could be not worth anything running. It is alleged that William traded an automobile to the doctor which, after the deal, refused to move.

A horse and buggy was given in exchange. When the physician called upon Filliman to trade back, he was quite willing, but had sold the horse. He, however, agreed to give him another. This horse was defective, Dr. Wright alleges. The case will be aired in the September term of the City Court.

COLQUITT LIKELY TO VOTE $400,000 BONDS FOR ROADS

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—A bond issue of $400,000 soon will be submitted to the voters of Colquitt County. The money is for public roads. Prominent politicians are firm in the belief that the issue will carry.

CITY RESERVOIR TURNED INTO A SWIMMING POOL

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—Those of Cordele who like an occasional dip into the water to alleviate the suffering of the summer heat probably will have their desires satisfied during this season of next year.

It is proposed to convert the reservoir at the old waterworks station into a swimming pool when the new plant is constructed.

FLAG AND BIBLE ARE PRESENTED TO SCHOOL

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The Patriotic Order Sons of America of Dalton yesterday afternoon gave to the Dug Gap School a handsome American flag and a Bible.

Appropriate exercises marked the flag raising. Senator M. C. Tarver and the Hon. T. R. Ridley being among the speakers.

COTTON BUYERS REFUSE TO PAY TAX IN CORDELE

Local Men Claim Transients Are Given Advantage—Big Yield Increase in Crisp.

CORDELE, GA., Aug. 23.—Becoming dissatisfied over the tax of $1 per day recently assessed by the City Council on transient buyers, local cotton men have refused to pay the tax of $25 assessed them.

It is claimed that the tax on transients is so low that it practically gives them free rein to come into the city and buy up all the cotton. The local buyers state that they will not be satisfied until the tax on transients is made the same as was assessed them. Some of them paid the license and then recalled it. Cases were made against them by the police, and the matter will have to be settled by Mayor Harder.

The movement of cotton in the Cordele market is getting well under way, over 500 bales having been ginned and warehoused. Within the past several days the receipts have been increased rapidly, the farmers making a strenuous rush to get the crop gathered and on the market to take advantage of the very fair prices that now prevail. Not a bale has been held for better prices, and most of the staple is classing as good middling, with the prospects of the grades nolding up well through all of teh season.

Five thousand bales above the receipts of last year are expected in the local market, due altogether to the increased yield in Crisp County over last season.

TIFT COUNTY VETERANS TO HOLD ENCAMPMENT

TIFTON, Aug. 23.—The annual encampment of the Tift County Camp, U. C. V., will be held at Murrow Springs, four miles west of Tifton, on Little River, September 3.

Arrangements will also be made for holding a big barbecue on September 4, in which the Charlotte Carson Chapter, U. D. C., of Tifton, and the Sons of Veterans will assist the veterans.

Columbus Girl and Escort Near Death

Cling to Overturned Boat Until Rescued by Fishermen at Lanark, Fla.

LANARK, FLA., Aug. 23.—William Byrd, of Tallahassee, and Miss Leonora Goldin, of Columbus, Ga., narrowly escaped drowning when Byrd's swift little cat-rig sailboat was overturned by a stiff wind in the bay off the beach here.

They were rescued by fishermen after clinging to the overturned boat for more than an hour. They were almost exhausted when assistance reached them.

BRUNSWICK TO HAVE ONLY ONE ELECTION THIS YEAR

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 23.—Brunswick will have only one election this year, which will take place in November, when four members of City Council will be elected. From present indications it will be one of the quietest ever held in this city—in fact, it is doubtful if there will even be any opposition for the four Aldermanic places.

For society news of the South see page 10 of this section and the Society Section.

SUNBURNT SKINS NEED

CUTICURA SOAP

And Cuticura Ointment. For heat rashes, itchings, sunburn, wind irritations, redness and roughness of the face and hands, Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, has no rivals worth mentioning. No others do so much for the complexion, hair and hands.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address post-card "Cuticura," Dept. 13G, Boston.

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Shaves Himself 50 Years With Cleaver

Moultrie Pioneer Takes Pride in Neat Job He Does With Old Blade Whetted on Boot.

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—Hezekiah Adams, of this county, has shaved himself twice a week for 50 years, but never owned a shaving mug, a razor, a strop or a hone.

It is Mr. Adams' boast that he keeps his instrument used in lieu of a razor, an old cleaver—twice the size of a common razor—in the finest trim with the least trouble of any man in the country.

He wears old-style boots, and still has one pair which he purchased 26 years ago. Wishing to shave, Mr. Adams first puts on these boots. He then smacks the razor substitute back and forth along the leather leg of the left one for a minute or two. His next operation is to moisten his face with rain water—no perfumed soap for him—and then he just shaves.

Church to Reopen Big Night School

Columbus Baptists Make Decided Success—Enrollment More Than 100.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—The night school, which was conducted so successfully last year under the auspices of Rose Hill Baptist Church, will begin its second scholastic year Tuesday night, September 9.

In addition to the useful branches taught by the school last year, a department of theology has been added, of which Rev. J. C. Wilkinson, pastor of the church, will be the teacher. The school is absolutely free, and among the things taught is bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting, domestic science and a number of other useful occupations. More than one hundred were enrolled last term, and it looks as if the enrollment will be still larger next year.

STREET PAVING MATERIAL HAS ARRIVED IN ALBANY

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—Material for paving North and Pine streets from Washington to Front has been contracted for and work on the North street paving will begin as soon as the materials arrive. The Pine street paving will not be started until after the cotton season is over, as two large warehouses are located on the street. The brick will come from Chattanooga, while the slag and cement will move from Alabama points.

GENERAL MELDRIM MAY HEAD BAR ASSOCIATION

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—That General Peter W. Meldrim, of Savannah, will be elected the next president of the American Bar Association at its meeting on September 1 at Montreal, Canada, is thought by many to be very probable. For a number of years General Meldrim has been regularly attending the annual meetings of this association, and he has been regarded for some time as one of its most prominent members.

NEW SYSTEM OF ACCOUNTING TO BE GIVEN TRIAL

City Government of Savannah Will Adopt Method Recommended by Auditors.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—It is not likely that the new system of accounting, recommended by the auditors who recently checked up the city's books, will be put into effect before the first of the year. Likewise none of the changes recommended along with the new system will be made before the first of the year. Preliminary reports on the proposed new system, together with the several recommendations for changes in the methods of conducting the municipal government, are now in the hands of Mayor Richard J. Davant.

The most important change recommended, perhaps, is that a department of finance and accounts be established, with a Comptroller in charge. It is not the intention to have the office of City Treasurer abolished, but to let him perform merely the functions of a cashier. His office will be in addition to that of Comptroller, to which official he will be responsible. Neither is it intended to abolish the office of City Marshal, but to have an additional officer, that of City Collector, created. The Marshal will be the man in authority, and he will report directly to the finance committee of Council.

The auditors recommend the creation of a purchasing agent, who would be at the head of the department of purchases and supplies. This official would probably be directly under the Mayor and the finance committee.

In the matter of the exhausted cemetery funds, the auditors submit a complete report. They show that a fund was created for the purpose of perpetuating the care of lots in the cemeteries. Funds to the amount of approximately $12,000 should be on hand at this time, besides the interest that would have accrued during the years the fund has been in existence. This trust fund, it is claimed, was protected by ordinance, but the auditors show that the securities—stocks, bonds and cash—were diverted to the general treasury and spent.

It is understood that former Mayor George W. Tiedeman is to make a statement in a few days explaining what he knows about the cemetery trust fund matter. Mr. Tiedeman has called on Mayor Davant for certain information.

The investigation covered only the tenure of office of Mayor Tiedeman and his administration.

MELL BAPTISTS TO MEET.

TIFTON, Aug. 23.—The Union meeting of the Mell Baptist Association will be held with the Brookfield Church, Tift County, August 30-31. An interesting program has been arranged, the subject being: "Office and Work of the Holy Spirit."

ALL DENTAL WORK GUARANTEED AT

DR. E. G. GRIFFIN'S

GATE CITY DENTAL ROOMS

24 1-2 Whitehall St. Phone M. 1708 — Over Brown & Allen's Hours: 8-6; Sundays 9-1

$5.

Made Same Day

OUR PRICES:

Bridge Work.... $4
Gold Crown..... $4
Gold Filling $1
Amalgam Filling ..50c Up
Teeth Cleaned .$1 Up

Our guarantee means something. It is backed by our absolute responsibility and by 23 years of successful practice.

PAY ME FOR CURES ONLY

If you have been taking treatment for weeks and months and paying out your hard earned money without being cured, don't you think it is high time to accept DR. HUGHES' GRAND OFFER?

You will certainly not be out any more money if not cured. Consultation and Examination are Free for the next thirty days.

If I decide that your condition will not yield readily to my treatment, I will be honest with you and tell you so, and not accept your money under a promise of a cure.

My treatment will positively cure or I will make you no charge for the following diseases:

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND URINARY TROUBLE, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, RUPTURE, ULCERS AND SKIN DISEASES CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

Eczema, Rheumatism, Catarrhal Affections, Piles and Fistula and all Nervous, Chronic and Private Diseases of Men and Women.

Newly contracted and chronic Cases of Burning, Itching and Inflammation stopped in 24 hours. I am against high and extortionate fees charged by some physicians and specialists. My fees are reasonable and no more than you are willing to pay for a cure. All medicines, the surest and best of drugs, are supplied from my own private laboratory. OUT-OF-TOWN MEN VISITING THE CITY, consult me at once upon arrival, and maybe you can be cured before returning home. Many cases can be cured in one or two visits.

CALL OR WRITE—No detention from business. Treatment and advice confidential. Hours 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. Sundays, 9 to 1. If you can't call, write and give me full description of your case in your own words. A complete consultation costs you nothing, and if I can help you I will.

DR. HUGHES, Opposite Third National Bank 16 1-2 North Broad Street, Atlanta, Ga

Latest News of South Georgia

MURPHY HOLDS POSTOFFICE JOB TO END OF TERM

Scramble for Waycross Postmastership Temporarily Suspended. Dozen Candidates.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—An effort to discredit the Waycross postmaster, Charles E. Murphy, met with complete failure, it developed to-day, and instead of any grounds being made for a request for his resignation the investigation made locally has shown that he is stronger than before and not apt to be removed by the present administration until his term expires, which will be some time in 1916.

Despite this there are not less than a dozen active candidates for the position, some of them being among this section's best known men. The candidates known include former Mayor J. A. Jones, Dr. W. H. Buchanan, who is a relative of Congressman Charles G. Edwards, of the First District; Harvey C. Bunn, cashier of the Citizens Bank; County Commissioner G. P. Folks, Assistant Postmaster A. H. Morgan, J. D. Crawford, Transfer Clerk E. D. Carswell and J. E. T. Bowden. The latter denies that he is seeking the place, but it is generally known that he is in the race. He was Congressman Randall Walker's Ware County campaign manager, and also had charge of Woodrow Wilson's South Georgia headquarters at Waycross.

Information from Washington states that no charges have been made against the incumbent, Postmaster Murphy, but on the other hand it is known thta his record is unusually good. He has the backing of a number of staunch Democrats, too, which will undoubtedly aid him in holding to the position until his term expires.

Congressman Walker to-day advised parties here that he is not considering anyone for the Waycross office at this time, which puts an end to the various rumors to the effect that the present postmaster had been asked to resign and that the Eleventh's Congressman had decided on his successor.

Waycross Council Asked to Explain

Claimed Number of Transactions Were in Violation of City Charter.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—It became known to-day that some time during September City Council would be requested for information of a number of transactions which have taken place within the past eighteen months, many of the alleged to have been in direct violation of the city charter. It is further alleged that a city employee while drawing his full time salary from the city looked after other work for which he was amply paid.

No namese have been disclosed as yet, and it is not known who will be mentioned when the request reaches Council. Some members of Council are inclined to demand an explanation of the published reports, but have not done so.

Pugilist Trains In Savannah Jail

Jeff Gaffney Keeps in Condition, Despite His Confinement in Prison.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Even though confined in jail, with the odds against him, Jeff Gaffney, the stocky little pugilist, who is held for trial in the Federal Court for violating the "white slave" law, has not forsaken his training.

Jeff's favorite pastime and mode of exercising is skipping the rope. The jail provides cold spray showers, which Jeff enjoys when he has limbered up his muscles.

Jeff is a lightweight. There are other prisoners who are in the heavyweight class. Jeff enjoys wrestling on the floor with these, with a few blankets for a mat, and sometimes one of the prisoners will muster sufficient courage to spar a few rounds with him without gloves.

Sale of Drainage Bonds Authorized

Finance Committee of Savannah City Council Is Given Power to Act.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Authority for the printing and sale of the $600,000 of drainage bonds has been vested in the Finance Committee by City Council.

This does not mean that the bonds will be placed on the market right away, however. First it will be necessary to advertise for the printing of the bonds, and then, after the contract has been awarded, it will be several weeks before they can be delivered to the committee.

It is the desire of the Drainage Commisison to start the work as soon after October 1 as possible. Council has been requested to prepare to sell the bonds as soon after November 1 as possible.

WARE COUNTY TAX RATE REDUCED 10 PER CENT

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Because of the big increase in the taxable property in Ware over last year's returns, the county tax rate was to-day reduced from 80 cents a hundred to 70 cents a hundred, with prospects bright for the same decrease another year. Approximately $50,000 will be spent by the county on road work this year, according to the budget an-

SCHOOLHOUSES UNFIT FOR GOATS SAY TEACHERS

Ware and Clinch County Institute Starts Campaign for County-Wide Taxation.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Stating that a great many of the buildings now in use as school houses in Ware and Clinch Counties would not make good goat houses, the joint institute of teachers of the counties named have just passed resolutions asking for the aid of the citizens in a campaign for better schools.

County-wide taxation for school purposes in place of the district taxation now in vogue is also urged, in view of the slight prospect of additional aid from the State for school purposes.

Condemnation of the recent State Legislature in providing prompt payment for all legislators, convict guards, and janitors of the public buildings, while not providing for the full payment of accounts due school teachers is also contained in the joint institute resolutions.

Ware County's report showed a big increase in school attendance, which is due to the steady campaign that has been and is still being waged for better rural schools. New buildings have replaced old ones in many of the school districts and there is a marked improvement in the work in Clinch. Within a few years it is claimed that every school district will be provided with the proper buildings, in view of the sentiment created in favor of general improvements for rural schools.

Fight Over Waycross Fire Department On

Council Likely to Pass Bills to Enlarge Brigade Over Chairman's Protest.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Unless Chairman H. Hengeveld, of the Police and Fire Committee, changes his opinion, a resolution providing to enlarge the Waycross fire department will be passed over his head. Two resolutions on the subject have been introduced in City Council, one by Alderman Beaton and the other by Alderman Morton.

Chairman Hengeveld claimed the city's financial condition would not permit any further expense for the fire department. Alderman Morton replied that when there was talk of making former Fire Chief Thomas Ballentyne, of Savannah, chief of the Waycross department, Chairman Hengeveld was willing to pay more money to get Ballentyne, and it seems the city is as well off now as when Mr. Hengeveld wanted to make the change.

The resolution for the employment of more men has enough votes to pass, according to Mr. Morton, but he will make no effort to get it through Council until Mr. Hengeveld makes a report.

Edwards Approves Military Highway

Savannah to Tybee Road Would Cost About $300,000—Congressman Sees Benefit.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—That the construction of a military highway from Savannah to Tybee, as advocated by Congressman Charles G. Edwards, would be of great benefit to the entire State, is the belief of J. N. King, well-known cotton factor of Rome.

At interior points the project is not looked upon as one that will be of benefit to Savannah alone, but is considered a movement on the part of the Government that would result in good to the State at large.

The proposed highway will cost approximately $300,000, but it is believed that it would be money well expended since all sections would be benefited.

LARGEST HOO HOO KITTEN IS TAKEN IN AT WAYCROSS

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—At an all-night concatenation of the Order of Hoo Hoo, Waycross came in for the unique honor of offering for initiation the largest kitten who ever applied to the order for membership. He was W. T. Brinson, whose weight is around 600. He was one of 35 kittens who emerged from the night's "horrors" a full-fledged cat. Mr. Brinson is the biggest Elk in the world, the biggest Knight of Pythias, and now ranks as the bigest Hoo Hoo.

EXTENSIVE IMPROVEMENTS ON BRUNSWICK HARBOR

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 23.—The extensive improvements and additional facilities for handling cargoes at both the Southern and Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic terminals, just completed, means a material increase in export business through the port of Brunswick. Colonel Dan C. Kingman, United Statse army engineer of this district, has recommended extensive improvements in Brunswick harbor. From the estimates the additional depth sought can be obtained at a reasonable cost as compared to the cost at other South Atlantic ports.

FIVE SCHOONER LOADS OF CROSSTIES AT BRUNSWICK

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 23.—The Joyce-Watkins Company, which entrede the local field in May, now has over 325,000 crossties on the local docks, which will be shipped in five schooners during the next two weeks. This will be one of the largest shipments to leave this port in some time.

Waycross to Vote on Government Change

Hard Fight To Be Made by Both Sides—Election October 4.

WAYCROSS, GA., Aug. 23.—Voters of Waycross on October 4 will decide whether to change the form of city government to a combination city manager-commission form or retain the aldermanic form with a board of aldermen of twelve members instead of six.

A special election will be held then and the registration books are now open. It is known a strong fight will be made by both sides, and at this time it is hard to predict which will win. The city manager form of government has much support, but it is doubtful if those in favor of the change will work as hard to get the new charter approved as the opponents will work to defeat the measure which the Legislature passed this year.

If the city manager plan is approved Waycross will be the first Georgia city to adopt it.

Gov. Slaton Vetoes Chatham Land Grant

Says Resolutions Had Not Been Properly Passed by the Legislature.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Savannahans were surprised to read that Governor Slaton had vetoed a resolution providing for land grants to the trustees of the Chatham Academy.

Governor Slaton explained he vetoed the resolution because it had not been properly passed. It relates to disposition of ungranted lands in the county. Acts passed in 1788 and 1856 vested in the Chatham Academy and the Union Society considerable ungranted lands in Chatham. The purpose of the resolution is to authorize these institutions to claim the lands under the old acts.

Famous Vessel in Brunswick Port

Old City of Washington Is Now Used as Barge—Rescued Marines From Maine.

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 23.—There is now in Brunswick harbor one of the most famous boats traveling on the Atlantic coast. The vessel is the old Ward liner, City of Washington, which was within 30 yards of the Maine when she was blown up in Havana harbor over fifteen years ago and whose captain was instrumental in saving scroes of lives after the explosion.

The liner has been converted into a barge and is now used for carrying lumber and coal from Atlantic coast ports to New York. All the machinery has been taken out of the boat and she is now towed by tug from port to port.

Ice Supply Gives Out at Brunswick

Machinery Breaks and Famine Is Feared—Waycross Relieves the Situation.

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 23.—Brunswick suffered a temporary ice famine yesterday morning due to the machinery at the local plant breaking down, and as a result the places of business that get their ice every day were compelled to wait some time before it could be furnished.

When it was discovered ice could not be had for four or five hours and that the people would suffer, a hurry call was sent to Waycross and a large supply was brought here on the next train.

After being closed down nearly ten hours the machinery was fixed and the first ice famine Brunswick ever had ended.

New Road Planned For Chatham County

Would Tap Trunk Lines of Three Big Railroads—To Be Built Within Year.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Tapping the trunk lines of three big railroads and running diagonally across a part of Chatham County to Effingham County, a fifteen-mile railroad is to be built within a year.

Eastern capitalists, it is said, are backing the enterprise. The complete right of way was all bought or options taken several months ago, and it is understood that the construction of the new line will begin in the near future.

SAVANNAH SHRINERS PLAN BIG RECEPTION

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Completing preparations for the reception of William W. Erwin, of Wheeling, W. Va., Imperial Potentate of the Shriners of North America, other members of the Imperial Divan of the Shriners and visitors from various temples, who will come to Savannah next month, the entire seventh floor of the Hotel Savannah has been reserved for them.

The Shriners of the Imperial Divan came in response to an invitation from Potentate Robert L. Travis, of Alle Temple, of this city, to attend a ceremonial session of that temple on September 12.

OVER 50 DIVORCE SUITS SET FOR HEARING IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Fifty-five divorce suits have been assigned for trial in the Superior Court before Judge Walter G. Charlton during the week which begins October 27. There are about an equal number of first and second verdict cases in the batch, which are divided among three days.

AUDITORIUM FOR SAVANNAH NOW ASSURED

Election for Bond Issue Will Win Out by Big Majority—Artillery May Co-operate.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—With a registration of 1,651 and with at least 75 per cent of those registered understood to favor the auditorium project, the success of the proposed bond issue to secure this important public utility is pretty well assured. It will require two-thirds of the registered voters to pass the bond issue.

The auditorium proposition is not being made an issue by either political faction, and for this reason it can be safely said that the majority of those who registered are in favor of an auditorium. Their interest in registering was not due to political pressure, but by a desire to see a needed improvement provided for.

The Chamber of Commerce and the retail merchants are responsible for a good portion of the registration. They carried on an active campaign for registration, and everybody, perhaps without exception, who registered as a result of their efforts will vote for the bonds.

If the issue is approved by the voters at the election on September 15, the city will have $200,000 with which to build an auditorium. The Chatham Artillery, which organization has made arrangements for the construction of any armory, is awaiting the outcome of the bond election before proceeding with its plans. If this issue is authorized, the city will in all probability make the artillery company a proposition regarding a joint auditorium-armory.

Of course, it will not be binding upon the Chatham Artillery to accept this proposition, and the impression is that it will not listen to the city unless the proposition is especially attractive. Most of the Artillery prefer having their armory unincumbered, and do not wish to subordinate their interests by allowing the city to join with them in the erection of an auditorium-armory.

But the city will not be dependent upon the Artillery. There will be enough money at the disposal of the city to purchase a lot and build an auditorium. According to an estimate already prepared, it would cost the city about $190,000 to go in with the artillery company.

The building committee of the Artillery has had several conferences recently with Captain Richard . Davant, commandant of the organization and Mayor of Savannah, on the proposition. The committee is going ahead and getting everything in readiness for the construction of the armory, so that in the event the city's proposition does not suit them they can go ahead with the work. A contract has already been let for an armory to cost something over 70,000. The contractor is now waiting for instructions to start the work.

Beaton to Run for Mayor of Waycross

Announcement of Several Candidates Expected To Be Made in Few Days.

WAYCROSS, GA., Aug. 23.—While there have been no positive announcements so far for Mayor of Waycross, it has become generally known that within a short time, probably about September 1, Alderman Scott T. Beaton, of the Fourth Ward, will announce.

His announcement will be followed by several others. J. E. T. Bowden, former Mayor John M. Cox former City Clerk J. W. Strickland and ex-Alderman James Sinclair are all probable candidates.

The only aldermanic candidate to date is Dr. J. H. Lattimer, of the Second Ward, who is expected to announce in opposition to H. Hengeveld, the present Alderman of the Second Ward.

THEFT OF MONEY PACKET ADMITTED BY EXPRESSMAN

WAYCROSS, GA., Aug. 23.—It was stated to-day that no action would be taken in the case of B. E. Lakin, former night money clerk for the Southern Express Company at Waycross, until the Grand Jury meets in December. Lakin was brought to Waycross from Savannah yesterday and has made no further statement concerning the robbery than the one in which he admitted taking a money package.

The package taken was signed for by another employee of the Waycross office and contained $430.50.

RECORDER'S COURT TO OPEN IN WAYCROSS ON MONDAY

WAYCROSS, GA., Aug. 23.—The first session of Recorder's Court ever held in Waycross will be called to order Monday by the newly-elected Recorder, Charles L. Redding, former City Attorney.

The position was created by an act of the Legislature this year, and pays $50 a month. The duties of the Recorder in the past have been filled by the Mayor.

Jerome Crawley, a brother of Representative J. L. Crawley, succeeds Colonel Redding as City Attorney.

DENIES DISCRIMINATION CLAIMED BY SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—J. C. Whitney, president of the Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company, is in Savannah for a conference with the directors of the Board of Trade, to go over the allegations of discrimination against Savannah in favor of Jacksonville. Whitney asserted that there was no discrimination against Savannah. Except in a very few instances, he said, the freight rates to Jacksonville from Baltimore and other points in the North are higher than they are to Savannah.

HON. RALPH O. COCHRAN DELIVERS OPENING SPEECH AT CLAYTON, GA.

Candidate for United States Senate in Strong Address Outlines His Views On State and National Issues.

I am glad to be in Clayton and have an opportunity of addressing the people of Rabun County. You have heard the expression, "From Rabun Gap to Tybee Light," and it is fitting that in my campaign for the United States Senate I should deliver the keynote address in this county—the address that in a substantial measure carries my position on the questions that the people of Georgia will be interested in in casting their votes in the election next summer for a United States Senator—and this for the reason that I will show considerable activity in this campaign which will extend from the mountains to the sea.

It is further true that you people of Rabun live in a county that was established in 1819, almost a hundred years ago, and it bears the name of one of the Chief Executives of this State. This county has furnished many men in the public arena during its history who have been worthy sons and distinguished servants of the people.

I am here to-day in advocacy of my candidacy for the United States Senate. At the suggestion of some zealous friends, I entered this race some time ago. It is an undertaking worthy of any man's highest ambition, and I entered the field conscious of the great responsibilities that will rest upon me if elected, and also conscious of the difficulties that confront me in achieving this ambition.

I want to tell you here to-day that I am going to Washington. I expect to win this race, and I have every confidence in ultimate success. It is a big undertaking, but I believe that the sentiment of the people of Georgia today is in favor of electing a business man, a man in the best vigor of his life, and one who will endeavor to represent all people alike and all interests alike within the borders of the State.

It is true that probably in point of years, as I am only 33 years of age, I am the youngest man who has ever offered in the State of Georgia for this high position. During the progress of the campaign I will be confronted with the charge that I am too youthful, and further that I have not had sufficient experience. I want to say in advance in answer to any such criticism that may be raised, that many of the best political servants that this country has ever had have been men who have achieved success and attained high political positions early in life. With a long stretch of years before them they well used them, and therefore their services were of inestimable worth. As a matter of fact, it is common knowledge that any man is in his prime from thirty-five to fifty years of age. In fact, the Constitution of the United States requires that one must be only 30 years old to be eligible for the United States Senate.

I am frank to tell you that at no period in life do I anticipate ability for greater labor or clearer thought. It is true that I am inexperienced on many matters pertaining to state affairs, but I do insist that I am capable of learning and that I can count upon a reasonable number of years in which to be of service to my State and country if honored with this high position.

In advocacy of my candidacy, I place before the people of Georgia the proposition of electing a business man. I can properly be classed as one of the young business men of this State. It occurs to me that in these times of industrial growth and progress that the best thing that the people of any State can do is to elect a larger percentage of the men of the business circles of their State. If there is any question that requires business ability and skill to properly settle, I should say that those which pertain to the nature of the laws under which we shall live are pre-eminently the ones where business experience, understanding of the people's wants and the ultimate effect are the ones that literally demand the business man to pass upon. A slogan of the day in which we live is more business and less theory.

Prejudice and Demagogy to Play No Part in Campaign.

I want to tell you here and now that as far as I am concerned you will never see any trace of demagogy in anything that I may say or do. I shall deal frankly with the people of Georgia, and my campaign will be devoid of tricks and makeshifts. My candidacy will be put up to the people of Georgia strictly on its merits, without frills or deception. I am nothing more than a plain business man. I have no pre-eminent ability on any lines but I assure you in advance that if I am elected I shall ever endeavor to follow the paths of right and do my duty. This campaign as far as I am concerned will never be marred with the demagogism that arouses the prejudices of the rich against the poor, the city man against the country man, or the young man against the old man. I shall take the position in the beginning and shall maintain it throughout the campaign that if I am elected I want to be elected by all classes of our citizens, and if elected I pledge you my most sincerely and earnestly that I will represent all the people of Georgia and all the lawful interests within her borders.

Under my political canopy, so to speak, all classes of our citizens can rally. No prejudice has ever taken root in my bosom against the Jew in favor of the Gentile, against the Catholic in favor of the Protestant, against the Third party man in favor of the Democrat or against any man or class of men within our State who may belong to different parties, political faith, social circle or other relation contrary to that I occupy. I am frank to say that any man who harbors hatred for any class of our citizens is unworthy of the high position to which I now aspire. In truth, the bigot, the maligner of character, the small man, should have no place in shaping the policies and destiny of this country. The same sun shines on all of us alike, we are the children of the same Creator, and in its last analysis there is no great difference in us anyway.

I have always endeavored to be fair to all the interests of capital; I have always endeavored to be fair to the cause of labor; I shall endeavor to be fair in all of my relations with my fellow man, whether that relation be in private business matters or in public position, and if I go down in defeat contending for the wisdom of such a position I shall do so gladly and you shall have my approbation. It is well that I state on this occasion that I have never been aligned with any of the political factions of Georgia. During the past few decades when partisan heat reached high water mark, I have always stood, since the early years of my manhood, as a free man and have acted on every election day in the way that I thought my vote would count for most looking to the best interests of the people of this State. We have been confronted at a number of elections with partisan politics and partisan issues. I thank God that we are now living in a more desirable day.

I am a friend of no class legislation. All legislation should be founded on the idea of the greatest good for the greatest number, irrespective of nationalities, wealth, education or anything else. However, if there is to be any class legislation, it should be in favor of the biggest class, and I should say that this class is composed of those of moderate means. If I ever cast a vote, if elected to the United States Senate, for any class whatsoever, it will be for the class here designated.

In my campaign for the Senate throughout the entire time I shall remain absolutely a free man. I shall not tie myself up with promises and political alignments. If elected I want to be a free man to represent the entire people of Georgia.

To men of experience and men of business affairs it is an accepted truth that no man need be a Croesus or an intellectual giant to represent well his people in legislative halls. What counts most is industry, integrity and sound common sense. If these elements are united in a candidate, he deserves well at the hands of his people. The making of laws and the administration of government is largely a business matter where good judgment and good conscientious service avail much.

Permit me to say also that God has endowed me with a degree of manhood and independence, so much so that I can tell you in all frankness and truth that if you do not see fit to elect me that it will be perfectly all right and I assure you that my self respect will be left behind over which I will brood through the coming years. In this independence and manhood that I declare to you, there is no place for mudslinging and assassination of character. I will not indulge in any of this nor will I permit any of my friends to do so if within my power to prevent. The campaign does not involve personal issues. The issues are more substantial and more worthy of the intelligence of the people of Georgia.

I stand for good government in all of its forms, and I shall ever be the enemy of those principles and practices that are opposed to its preservation and promotion. I shall ever stand for the principles of government that represent the best interests of the farmer as well as the merchant, and in general, the best interests of every man of every class of citizens within the confines of this great State. I was born and reared on a farm in Campbell County, and I feel that my years of association with the people of the rural districts, their needs and their interests, have made me know once for all the important recognition that should be accorded to them. Then with the business experience that I have had elsewhere, as an education in after years, I feel that I can represent the entire people of this State with fellowship of feeling and wisdom and justice to all.

Economy in National Expenditures Insisted Upon.

At this time I want to put the people of Georgia on notice that, if elected as one of the United States Senators from Georgia, I will become in a measure a watchdog of your treasury. I have long been convinced that the practices that we are following of continuously raising taxes on property, businesses, corporations, and otherwise, should be stopped. There is hardly a session of the Georgia Legislature or a session of the United States Congress that some new form of taxing the people or else increasing the old forms is not projected. I ask you, in the name of reason, when and where will these agitations and practices stop? There is an eternal cry of more money, that our institutions are being throttled and that the State and nation are lagging in progress on account of insufficient funds. You know as well as I do that if the State of Georgia had five times as much revenue for the Legislature to spend that every dollar of it would be spent and they would still be in need of more money.

As a matter of fact, unless the increase of the burdens of taxation is not halted, taxes will become very oppressive to the people of this country. Take your State tax, your county tax, your city tax, your professional tax, your corporation tax, your inheritance tax, your income tax, your occupation tax, your road tax, your local school tax, your poll tax, and possibly others, and I tell you when any man gets through at the end of the year with paying these various amounts he has done a fairly good year's work to have made profit enough out of his business to meet them. The philosophy of all taxation, according to my thinking, is that instead of the everlasting increase in the forms of taxing the people and also the amount, that the revenue of the State should only increase with the enhancement of property, more money coming into the State, and more citizens as our common population. With an increase of revenue along these lines, with a corresponding limitation of appropriations, our State and country will always be in a solvent condition and our people will be prosperous and happy.

I have all along been of the opinion that our people should not look too much for support to the Government under which they live. The greatest men that this State or country have ever produced have been men who have worked their way through difficulties and hardships. The best principle of government that can be advocated is that of throwing every citizen that is able-bodied upon his own resources. Therefore, the sentiment that is rapidly taking root in the States of this country that we should look more to the bounties of the Government is a cancer in the body politic and will ultimately prove fatal if it is not checkmated. History records the fact that the decline of the Roman Empire set in with free corn that was distributed to the population. It has been estimated that at one time more than 360,000 people were fed at public expense. The manhood of this country has always been honest and hardy, and we have builded a republic that is the light of the world, and if it continues in its leadership the same manhood and independence that led us into freedom must care for the affairs of state through the coming years.

Opposes Unnecessary Legislation.

In our zeal for this cause or that cause that may be advocated, we should always be conservative in our thoughts, speech and actions. There is no business, much less a government, that can go forward in splender and success where fits and spasms characterize those who are interested. Sanity should characterize every man's discussion of public questions, and I tell you that when your vote is cast on the side of conservatism you will seldom err from what is best for your family, yourself and your country.

It is true that State laws and National laws, in fact laws of all kinds, should be somewhat in the vanguard of actual practice and in a measure become high ideals for the manhood and womanhood of this State and country, as well as for the rising generation. However, we all know that laws that are not supported with public sentiment are of no avail and become nullities on our statute books.

I am further of the opinion that we are passing too many laws in our State and Nation. It seems that we have arrived at the point where we are law-ridden; almost unnumbered laws that everybody is presumed to know, but on the other hand there is no one who does know. There is much legislation that is transgressing the inalienable rights of property and person and much of that that is suggested tends too much this way. I took occasion not long ago to count the sections of laws that compose the Code of Georgia. It is astounding but true that there are approximately 8,000 sections of laws under which we are living this day. It has almost gotten to the point where a man's mind must be an encyclopedia to carry the innumerable laws governing cities, counties, State and Nation. It reminds one of the old adage that that people is best governed which is least governed.

Favors Federal Aid for Good Roads.

I want to say on this occasion that, if elected to the United States Senate, I shall stand at all times for the cause of good roads. If we ever expect to have great systems of roads traversing this entire country the National Government will have to take hold of the proposition. It strikes me that money appropriated for this purpose is just as much within the Constitution of this country as the right to appropriate funds to deepen the waterways and improve harbors. By navigation the products of the country are distributed and it is a method of travel. The public roads of the country are the avenues of distribution whereby the products of the country reach the centers and are ultimately distributed throughout the country and the world. Furthermore, public roads are used by everybody, and the benefits derived from appropriations for this cause are participated in by all the people of the country. What cause more equitable or more worthy could be mentioned for the appropriation of public funds? The additional circumstance associated with improved public roads is the enhancement of property. Down in my country it is generally estimated that property on a macadamized road is never worth less than double as much as property on a road that has not been so improved. Also think of the convenience, pleasure and general benefits that are derived by reason of the construction of such thoroughfares. Think of the benefits to your county or any county that might be mentioned that would be derived from the construction of such highways. In consideration of these substantial reasons, I shall ever be a friend to the cause of good roads.

High Cost of Living Caused by Not Producing Enough.

Any people or any legislative body has lost sight of the greatest cause when they do not cultivate and improve the great agricultural interests of their county and State. You may talk of laws that curb vice, you may ponder over measures that involve appropriations, you may consider well laws that look to the raising of revenue, but back and more fundamental and of far greater importance is the great proposition of production. What we need most is more corn, more cotton, more of all the farm products, more manufacturing, more businesses that produce, businesses that feed and clothe the world. That is to-day, in my opinion, the prime reason for the high cost of living. We are just not producing enough.

The people of Georgia will never reach that point of prosperity that is most desired until they have learned to produce enough to get the other man's money and then have enough to live on so as to save them from the condition of having to buy the other fellow's products. I trust that I will live to see that day when by education and disposition the people of Georgia will learn and desire to produce more than they consume in the way of farm products, that splendid day when cotton, the staple product, will be the surplus crop, that new era when every town and hamlet can boast of numerous manufacturing enterprises, when Georgia-made goods are sold around the world. Let us make the people of other States become the buyers of our products, and we the recipients of the splendid income.

If elected to the United States Senate I shall always do the best that in me lies to get increased appropriations for the educational interests of the various States of this Union where agricultural training is taught. The National Government, in wisdom, through the Agricultural Department, has started up a system of education and scientific experiment along agricultural lines which will prove, I have no doubt, to be of the greatest service to the material interests of this country of any department known to the National Government. It will be my purpose to work for and to vote for all measures and appropriations which look to the improvement and enlargement of this great cause in the dispensation of National funds.

If I am elected to the United States Senate I want to pledge you here and now my unswerving support of all measures that look to the general betterment of humanity. We are living in times when the humanity of man is manifested in its most splendid form. Laws that are humanitarian in their nature, just in their spirit, broad in their conception of human rights will always find a friend in me. The day is long since passed away that every man should live for himself. Thank God that we live in a better and brighter day when the living and the hopes of humanity are upon a more just basis and there is recognition of the higher laws of nature and the beneficent conceptions of the Creator of us all.

As an incentive to high purpose and lofty achievement, we should bear in mind that the names and memories of those only are revered and live in history who lived and gave and worked and sacrificed for others. Selfishness, living for self, has never made any man great in the estimation of his fellowman. The world has gotten rid of most of the tyranny that has characterized it in the past, but the tyranny of brain and the tyranny of worth should continue and will continue as long as civilization endures. Ambition to do something for others as well as self should characterize the life of every man.

Favors Exploiting the Great Resources of Georgia.

There is another matter that I wish to speak of to which I will give as much of my ability and time as possible if elected. I refer to the advertising of the resources of Georgia and the entire Southland. This advertising by one in this exalted position by speech and otherwise can be made of inestimable worth to this State and section. Georgia and the entire South needs more capital, more people and no man who is in favor of any laws that tend to antagonize capital and mistreat the institutions in which it is invested is an enemy of his State. In addition, what county in Georgia would not be better off if it had twice as many people in it as it has to-day? A multiplication of population means better roads, better schools, better churches, better mail facilities and better communities in general. These ends are worthy of note and should always receive the attention of the representatives of this State in these high positions.

If elected to the United States Senate, it will be my purpose to perform well what might be termed the small duties incident to this high office. Those who might desire positions either for themselves or their boys, who might at any time wish information concerning any matters in the city of Washington pertaining to the Government, or local matters, those who desire appropriations for this purpose or that purpose in their respective cities and districts, in general those who want ready service of their representative in getting something or doing something where their United States Senator can be of service to them, I will be the man to call on. I desire you in advance that no considerable amount of my time will be taken up in the study of foreign questions or the preparation of what might be termed big speeches, but, on the other hand, I will try to inject as much business in the situation as possible and serve in a business way the people of Georgia, not only concerning such matters as I hear mentioned, but in promoting and voting for legislation which will promote the general interests of the State, as well as the country at large.

I am deeply interested in the cause of education in all of its forms. Our public schools are the greatest institution that has become a part of the government of this State. Public schools touch every man's interest, and in them is involved the element of an elementary education which means better citizenship and more happiness on the part of our entire population. Almost as essential are the institutions of higher learning of this State. Also our colleges of technical training which prepare the young man and young woman to make a living have probably become the most popular institutions in the way of higher training that we have in the State. The old idea was to educate the smart boys in classical training either for the ministry, medicine or the law. This conception of higher learning is in a measure passing away, and technical training is largely the slogan of the times in which we live.

I do not know how you people in Rabun County feel about it, but I imagine that you have about the same feeling and sentiment that we people of Fulton have, as well as the people of all the other counties of this State—that is the constantly recurring panics that disturb and distress the business interests of this country. I do not know whether or not any man can assign with accuracy the immediate causes of these recurring panics. However, I am inclined to believe that the most prominent cause is the drastic reform legislation that sets up about every eight or ten years. I am in favor of a certain amount of reform. We all know that in the great economy of nature change must take place either for good or ill. The country that does not improve its condition must of necessity retrograde. On the other hand, I am opposed, and I shall always vote accordingly, to reforms and reform measures which come in bunches and have the inevitable effect of upsetting the entire business of this State and country. As far as I am concerned, I want a little rest so that I may have an opportunity of accumulating some of the world's goods while in the vigor of manhood, and not look too much to the eradication of all evil and the improvement of our institutions and country on the Utopian idea for our children and our children's children. As I see it, the prescription we now need most is the rest cure.

We often lose sight of the untold good that has been accomplished by the people of our day and our fathers before us. In fact, we live in the best times and we constitute the greatest people that this world has ever seen. Six thousand years of recorded history does not find a parallel. There is not so much ill in man and the human race as we are often led to believe. I have often said that any man in any community is a pretty good fellow after all. Think of man in this day of enlightenment and the society in which we live. He works hard and usually by the sweat of his brow he provides for wife and children. He is interested in educational advantages of his family, he looks forward with a feverish mind to the ultimate condition when no longer he will be the mainstay of these loved ones. We are rich in charity, we are humane in the treatment of those who are unfortunate, our ideals are high, and we are recipients by reason of our intelligence and industry of most of the good that the world affords.

Another point that I wish to bring out: Too much experiment is always dangerous. The people of any State or country that is experimenting with this law, this institution, and this new idea are apt to fall into the ways that will lead them into departures from the fundamentals of their institutions which probably will prove dangerous and fatal. It is always better to let other people, other States and other men, whether in business or affairs of state, experiment and ascertain the truth, and then the wisdom of its adoption becomes clear and of no loss to that people who follow in the light of this experience. Of course some experiment along sane and conservative lines is good for all people, and if such is not indulged in they are liable to become laggards and drones. However, the people of Georgia should never become distinguished as people of experiment, and the State should never be known as an incubator of new ideas.

If I am elected to the United States Senate, I shall always stand for clean government, wise laws and pure administration. We live in a country where in theory every man's chance is alike. God has made us unequal in body and mind, but under the Constitution and laws of the United States, as drawn by those immortal men, the fathers of this country, whose names shall live as long as recorded history is preserved, imbedded in that great instrument and laws, the general principle of equal rights to all and an equal chance in the struggles of this life. No man should ask for more than justice and an equal chance. No man should be willing to surrender to any other man his equal chance and justice in the race of life. I shall always be opposed to plunder in any form and shall ever stand for the best laws to perpetuate and preserve the Government as founded by the fathers of this country.

However, it is true that it does seem like something is wrong at times with our institutions when one man in the short space of a lifetime can accumulate a billion of dollars. We have in these United States one-sixteenth of the population of the world and we possess one-fourth of its entire wealth. Such a splendid commentary upon the people who in only a century or two past found the vast expanse of our country a wilderness and here the institutions and wealth to which we are heirs.

Amid the masterful strides made in this country within the past fifty years, on account of a serious handicap, the South is just now coming into her own. Georgia and the entire Southern States are rich in natural resources—we have the climate, we have the soil, we have the minerals, we have the water power, and, thank God, we have the brain and the industry that will yet make of our Southland the fairest spot beneath the sun.

There is no use for history except the lessons that it teaches. We are living in the light of many experiences of the past, and as the light of these experiences falls upon our pathway our days will be splendid and our accomplishments beyond the dreams of men.

I love Georgia and her people. Born within her borders, educated within her institutions, associated with Georgia people, I bear to her the warmth of sympathy and childish affection that I trust will continue unabated during the time that I shall live. The mountains lifting their lofty peaks amid the skies, the old red hills of Georgia, dear to the heart of all, the table lands, rich and fertile, and extended in area, her rippling streams in music wind their way to the mighty sea, seven out of the nine climates with which the Nation is characterized, I am devoted to this people and this mighty State.

With renewed purpose, and a common ambition, let us press forward in the mighty causes of civilization and the accomplishment of higher ideals.

(Adv.)

SOCIETY NEWS of the SOUTH

Waycross

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Mrs. V. L. Stanton and Miss Mary Stanton have returned from a visit to Atlanta and points in North Georgia.

Miss Clifton Wing, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. B. Thorpe, has returned to her home in Macon.

Mr. and Mrs. Deasau Bunn, en route to their home at Fairfax from St. Simons Island, where they spent the summer, were guests of relatives in Waycross this week.

Miss Jessie Lou Stanley visited relatives in Brunswick this week.

Miss Lelia Paschall, who has been visiting in Atlanta, will spend some time in Rome before returning home.

Mrs. R. E. Brown and children have returned from a visit to relatives in Scranton, Pa.

Mrs. J. P. Dukes and children visited in Savannah this week.

Misses Viola and Ruby Clemens are visiting relatives in Savannah.

Following a short visit in New York City, Mr. L. Volney Williams will join Mrs. Williams and children in Michigan for an extended visit. Mr. Williams sailed for New York from Savannah Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gaston Lewis, of New York, are in the city for a visit of several months.

Mrs. E. J. Seay and Miss Elwood Seay have returned from a visit to Columbia, S. C.

Mrs. J. P. Moody, of Florida, is the guest of Mrs. W. T. Seaman.

Mrs. A. J. Miller left Thursday for Wilmington, N. C., where she will visit relatives.

Mrs. M. Z. Hinnant and children have returned to Wilmington, N. C., after a visit to friends and relatives in Waycross.

Mrs. C. R. Powrie and little daughter, Jean, of New York, arrived Wednesday to join Mr. Powrie and will make Waycross their home.

Members of the Friday Club were entertained yesterday by Misses Lucile and Susie Sutton.

Miss Aline Jeffers is expected home shortly from a visit to her sister, Mrs. John D. Tucker, in Birmingham, Ala.

Crawfordville

CRAWFORDVILLE, GA., Aug. 23. Miss Virginia Butler, of Madison, is the guest of Miss Frances Burgess. Several delightful entertainments have been given in her honor among them receptions by Misses Melton and Asbury.

Miss Mattie Jordan, of Atlanta, spent a few days here the past week the guest of Miss Blanche Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Golucke, Mr. A. G. and Mrs. R. W. Golucke and daughters, Anna Catherine and Mary Gordon, are spending the week at Hot Springs, N. C.

Miss Lillian Asbury leaves this week for Elberton to visit Miss Allen, who was one of Miss Asbury's attractive guests last week.

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Owens and daughter, Alleene, of DeLand, Fla., are spending some time here with friends.

Colonel and Mrs. J. Frank and daughters, Cornelia and Nell, of Dothan, Ala., spent several days here as the guests of Mr. W. P. Reid.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Leary and Guy, Jr., have returned to Augusta after spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Gee. Miss Martha Griffith returned home with them.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Anthony and Mr. L. P. McCord, of East Palm Beach Fla., are here visiting.

Miss Mary Fannie Harris, of Augusta, is the guest of Miss Emma Chapman.

Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Gunn have returned from Augusta and Atlanta, where they spent several days last week.

Colonel and Mrs. J. A. Beasley are visiting in Atlanta.

Mesdames J. V. Andrews, J. H. Callahan and W. C. Andrews, all of this city, are spending some time at Borden Wheeler, Ala.

Miss Minnie Olive Park will entertain a house party this week. Those invited are Misses Mary Holden, of Athens; Anita Sanford of Augusta, and Kathleen Kendrick, of Sharon.

Milledgeville

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Joseph Cleveland Cooper entertained on Thursday evening in honor of her sister, Miss Carrie Talbot. Hearts-dice was played after which a delightful salad course was served. Those present were the Misses Susan Myrick, Jesse Allen, Maggie Bivins, Floride Allen, Isabella Allen, Pauline Nisbit, Helen Maxwell, Hattie Pottle, Mary Amos and Francis Conn, Edwin Allen, James Sibley, Erwin Sibley, John Sibley, Malcolm Flemister, Charles Conn, Henry McAuliffe, Charles Brown, Arthur Carr, Stewart Wootten and James Clark, of Atlanta.

Miss Marguerite Joseph entertained on Monday at a suit-case shower for Miss Katherine Scott, who leaves soon for an extended trip through the North. Each lady brought some gift for the honoree.

Mrs. Frank Bone entertained at her home on Greene street Wednesday afternoon in honor of Miss Francis Stevens, of Macon, when "42" was played, after which a salad course was served. Those present were Mrs. W. T. Garrard, Mrs. Y. A. Little, Mrs. Steve Cooper, Mrs. Lodrick Jones, Mrs. Culver Kidd, Mrs. John Barrett, Mrs. I. C. Case, Mrs. E. A. Tignor, Mrs. E. E. Bass, Miss Carrie Talbot, Miss Beuna Barrett and Miss Annie McKinley.

Another social event of the week was a party given by Miss Katie Cline on Tuesday afternoon, her guests being Mrs. L. M. Jones, Jr., Mrs. Harry Bone, Mrs. Frank Bone, Mrs. Logan Griswold, Mrs. Bee Bethune, Mrs. George Brantley, Miss Francis Conn, Miss Frances Stevens, Miss Pauline McKinley, Miss Annie McKinley and Miss Hattie Pottle.

Covington

COVINGTON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Clarence Terrell entertained at the Lyric Theater on Thursday afternoon, in honor of Mrs. Alva Cooper, of Savannah, who is the guest of Mrs. J. O. Cooper. Mrs. Terrell's guests included Mrs. Alva Cooper, Mrs. J. O. Cooper, the Misses Eloise Cooper, Ida and Annie Higgins, Eleanor Butler, Frances Henderson, Hyda Heard and Bonner Sims, Mrs. H. D. Terrell and Mrs. J. Bain Terrell.

Miss Louise Whitehead entertained on Tuesday evening at her home on Monticello street with a progressive conversation party in honor of her house guest, Miss Ella Mae Ellis, of Macon. The guests included the Misses Natalie Turner, Annie Pauline Anderson, Lartrelle Meadors, Dorothy Lee, Ruth Weldon, of Talladega, Alabama; Frances Dearing and Marion Sherman, James Lester, Jim Wells, Rufus Franklin, Charles Ellis, Guy Robinson, Candler Harwell, Ivey Smith, Lamar Smith, Reginald Robinson, Perrino Dearing, Fred Bush and Guy Rogers.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Fowler, Miss Louise Fowler, Mrs. J. W. Stephenson, Miss Eva Stephenson, Mrs. Lillian Stephenson Weaver, Roy Stephenson, of Tampa, Fla., and Hugh Wright were among those from Covington who attended the Duffy-Stephenson wedding, which was a pretty event of Thursday, taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Parker Ernest Duffy at Morrow.

Mrs. Thomas Berry entertained a number of relatives last week at a family reunion, the guests including Mr. and Mrs. John P. Blanton, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Harris, of Alabama; Mrs. J. W. Loyd, of Dawson, Ala.; Mrs. R. L. Tye, of Mansfield; Mrs. H. B. Thacker, of Oxford, and Mrs. A. J. Blanton.

Moultrie

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—Miss Lucile Autrey entertained the members of the Entre Nous Club on Saturday morning. Assisting Miss Autrey were her sisters, Mrs. Roy Autrey and Mrs. Clyde Taylor.

Complimentary to her sister, Miss Mary Walker, of Atlanta, Mrs. T. W. Maddox entertained at a "42" party on Tuesday morning.

Mrs. A. W. Chase entertained a number of her friends on Thursday afternoon at a domino party.

Sylvania

SYLVANIA Aug. 23.—Miss Nelle Davis entertained at cards on Tuesday morning for the Misses Willie Christie and Lucile Evans, of Savannah. First prize, a box of stationery, was won by Miss Ruby Mauldin. Those present were the Misses Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, of Atlanta; Bertha Pearson, Maud Hilton, Juanita Williamson, Ruby Mauldin, Kate Patrick, Lucy Morel, Sadie Lovett and Esther, Ruth and Kathleen Mimms.

Mrs. John C. Hollingsworth entertained the Ladies' Culture Club on Tuesday afternoon. The program consisted of a study of "Famous Georgians."

A party enjoying an outing at Brannen's Bridge on Wednesday included Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Powell, Mesdames A. T. Perkins, Lecie Davis and J. W. Overstreet; the Misses Mattie Zoe Mallory, Willie Christie, Lucile Evans, Nelle Davis and Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, Julian Cooper, Willie Robbins, Spencer Powell, Bates Lovett and Edward Overstreet.

Mrs. R. F. Jarrell, Jr., entertained the Civic Club on Wednesday afternoon. An interesting program was rendered, followed by delicious refreshments.

Mrs. J. C. Hollingsworth entertained at cards on Tuesday evening for Miss Mattie Mallory and Paul Mallory, of Clyo. Those present were the Misses Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, of Atlanta; Miss Mattie Zoe Mallory, of Clyo; Miss Ruby Mauldin, Miss Nelle Davis, Paul Mallory, of Clyo; Abe Greenberg, Spencer Powell, Edward Overstreet and Bates Lovett.

Tallahassee

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 23.—Mrs. H. T. Felkel entertained informally at her home on College avenue Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. W. E. Shackelford, of Jacksonville, was a recent visitor to the Capital City.

Governor Park Trammell left Thursday for a ten days' vacation at Waynesville, N. C., where he joined Mrs. Trammell.

Mrs. S. D. Chittenden at her beautiful home on Park avenue on Wednesday morning entertained at auction bridge in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Wight, of Cairo, Ga., who is visiting her for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Winthrop returned Thursday from Atlantic Beach, having made the return trip from Tallahassee in their automobile.

The regular Thursday night's dance was enjoyed by the society folk at the Elks' Club.

Pensacola

PENSACOLA, Aug. 23.—Pensacola society was much interested in the marriage on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock of Mrs. Mary Dallas Strong, formerly a social favorite in Pensacola, to William F. Quicksall, which took place in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Strong recently visited Mrs. Albert Hyer at her beautiful Bayshore residence, Virginia Lodge, and while here was entertained by Mrs. E. J. Wilson and many other of her old friends.

Mrs. W. H. Northup, who has been spending the past month in the North Carolina mountains, in the beautiful Sapphire Country of Saluda and Waynesville, returned home on Tuesday. Mrs. Northup stopped a few days in Atlanta, where she met Mrs. Pat McHugh, formerly Mrs. Pebley, of Pensacola, at the Hotel Majestic.

Miss Madge Cushman, of Knoxville, Tenn., accompanied by her nephew, Robert Daniels, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Daniels, arrived Saturday on a two weeks' visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton H. Cushman.

The North Carolina mountains are a favorite summer resort for Pensacolans, and at Waynesville this summer there is quite a colony. Mrs. C. W. D'Alemberte, who is now in Rome, Ga., and Mrs. W. H. Northup spent some time at Waynesville, and Mrs. Smithwick, two children, William and Mary, and Mrs. Smithwick's sister, Miss Verren, are now there. Mrs. Alice Aylward, who formerly made her home here and who was recently the guest of Mrs. J. J. Hooton, is also at Waynesville.

Miss Margaret Flood

Of Savannah, one of the popular members of the school set. Miss Flood is also taking an active part in the girl scout movement, being captain of a patrol.

Griffin

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Carlton Jones entertained her bridge club Tuesday afternoon at an al fresco party. On Wednesday afternoon she was hostess at a domino party.

Miss Mamie Slade and Miss Carrie Slade were hostesses Wednesday evening at a lawn party in honor of their guests, Miss Irene Dempsey, of Cedartown, and Miss Inez Hyman, of Cordele.

Miss Mary Bass was hostess at an automobile party to Barnesville in honor of Misses Mamie and Carrie Slade, Irene Dempsey and Inez Hyman.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Baxter were hosts at a lawn party Friday evening in compliment to their guest, Miss Jessie Robertson, of Forsyth.

On Wednesday morning Miss Olive Boyd was hostess at a rook party in honor of her guest, Miss Mary Watkins, of Atlanta.

Mrs. James Nutt entertained Monday afternoon at a bridge party in honor of Miss Katherine Wooten, of Washington.

Mrs. John Henry Newman entertained fifty ladies Friday afternoon at a theater party especially in compliment to her sisters, Mrs. H. L. Wheat, of Macon, and Mrs. Idus C. Doe, of LaGrange.

Mrs. James Kimbrough entertained Wednesday evening at a dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burr, of Atlanta. Invited to meet Mr. and Mrs. Burr were Mr. and Mrs. John B. Mills and Mrs. James Mills.

Mrs. Charles Murray and Mrs. Frank Ingram were hostesses Wednesday morning at a sewing party in compliment to Mrs. James Porter and her daughter, Mrs. Everts, Miss Della Porter and Miss Laura Porter, of Houston, Texas.

Little Miss Ethelyn Ison entertained twenty of her little friends Friday morning in honor of the fifth birthday.

Master Ernest Carlisle was host Wednesday afternoon in celebration of the fourth anniversary of his birth.

Little Miss Lily Rivers Griffin entertained a party of her young friends celebrating the fourth anniversary of her birth.

Cordele

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—A congenial party of young people enjoyed a picnic and fish fry Monday afternoon on the Flint River, the affair being in honor of the Misses Ruth and Clara Mae Jefferson, of Columbus.

Mrs. I. J. Lamb and daughter, Miss Mae Lamb, entertained Tuesday afternoon in honor of Miss Grace Dill, of Ocilla, the guest of Mrs. P. C. Dill and Misses Jefferson.

Mrs C. E. Todd was the hostess Monday afternoon to the Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church.

Durham

DURHAM, Aug. 23.—Misses Margaret and Bessie Erwin, with W. A. Erwin, "cotton king" of North Carolina, gave an elaborate dance at the Durham Country Club in honor of guests who were attending a house-party at "Hillcrest," the Erwin home. It was the most brilliant social affair of the season and was attended by young folks prominent in society through the State.

The guests of honor were Miss Agnes Tinsley Harrison, Atlanta; Miss Sadie William, Augusta; Miss Katherine Overman, Washington, D. C.; Hamilton Jones, Charlotte; Hugh Thompson, Raleigh, and Terry Lyon, Fayetteville.

West Point

WEST POINT, Aug. 23.—Miss Mary Booker entertained at rook Thursday evening in honor of Mrs. John T. Ivey and Miss Eloise Sikes, of Luverne, Ala. After the game sandwiches and tea were served.

Dublin

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—Miss Ruth Toole, of Macon, was the guest of honor at an auction bridge party which Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Toole gave Tuesday evening. Playing were the Misses Ruth Toole, Mabel Harvard, Dorothy Hooks, Mamie Ramsay, Frances Webb and T. W. Hooks, O. G. Sparks, J. B. Hicks and W. R. Brigham.

A much-enjoyed affair of the week was the auction bridge luncheon which Miss Dorothy Hooks gave on Wednesday for Miss Ruth Toole. Miss Hooks' guests included Mrs. E. S. Street, Mrs. J. M. Finn, Mrs. T. R. Ramsay, Mrs. H. P. Shewmake, Mrs. A. J. Toole and Miss Frances Webb.

Of much interest socially will be the wedding of Miss Mary Lee Randall, of Grovania, and Richard P. Hicks, of Wrightsville, next Tuesday evening at the home of the bride's parents in Grovania. A party of friends from Dublin and Wrightsville will go over for this event. A reception will follow the ceremony.

The visitors in the city were honorees at a dance on Wednesday evening at East Lake. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Graham, Miss Lucy Gibson, of Macon; Miss Pearl Dowling, of Lake City, Fla.; Miss McLendon, Miss Otelia Gibson, of Macon; Miss Algie Prince, Miss Leonora Starr, Robert Hightower, Ramsay Fuller, S. Dixon, Paul Williamson, Dewitt Varnadoe, Cliff Holcomb, Clay O'Neal, Alex Blackshear, Claude Brantley, Alex Burch, Patrick Roach and William Brunson.

Senoia

SENOIA, Aug. 23.—Miss Lena Hand entertained a large party of Shorter and Wesleyan girls at a party at her home Monday evening.

The Methodist Missionary Society was royally entertained Monday afternoon by Mrs. H. B. Sasser.

The caming party given at Starr's Mill by Misses Lois and Annie Lou Hardy the past week was one of the most enjoyable events of the year. Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hardy chaperoned the party. The out-of-town guests included Misses Helen Carpenter, Newnan; Elizabeth Baker, Macon; Minnie McMichael, Buena Vista; Sallie Thompson, Hawkinsville; Mary and Lena Render Greenville; Messrs. Tom Tolleson, Fayetteville; Kendal Fielder, Cedartown; Albert Jelks, Hawkinsville; Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Freeman and Mr. and Mrs. J. D Hunter.

Miami

MIAMI, Aug. 23.—Miss Josephine Bravo, one of the first children born in Miami, was united in marriage on Monday night to Dallas D. Hoffman, of this city. The ceremony took place at the bride's home in the presence of a number of friends and relatives and was followed by an informal reception.

One of the pretty dinner-dances of the summer was that given Tuesday night at the beach by Clement and Bazil Brossier, in honor of the Misses Frances and Jane Tatum, two of the charming buds of the city, who leave soon for an exclusive girls' school in the North. The guests were the Misses Frances and Jane Tatum, Jewel Green and Ruth Rose, and Victor Moffat, Merle McLeannon and B. B. Tatum. The affair was held at the Casino at the beach.

Complimentary to the Misses Maude and Alice Reilly, of New Haven, Conn., who are visiting their brother, John B. Reilly, a luncheon was given at the Dade Club by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Coleman Romfh. Roses were used for the decorations. Covers were laid for the Misses Reilly, Miss Flavia DeCamp, R. B. Black, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Reilly, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McDonald and Mr. and Mrs. Romfh.

A Cooncan Club has been organized by a group of the young women of the city. Miss Cornelia Leffler was hostess at the last meeting of the club. Those present were the Misses Myrtle Rose, Hilda Baile, Christine Worley, Ruth Rose, Helen Skelly and Mildred Taylor.

Mrs. Everett George Sewell is spending the latter part of the summer at Asheville, N. C., where many other Miami people are stopping.

Jackson

JACKSON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. L. M. Crawford complimented her guest, Mrs. James Crawford Nutt, of Griffin, with a "42" party on Thursday morning.

The young men of the city gave a moonlight picnic at Indian Springs on Tuesday in honor of Miss Sarah Wylie, of Cartersville, the guest of Miss Mary Land.

In compliment to her niece, Miss Julia Collier, of St. Louis, Mrs. Levi entertained four tables of bridge on Wednesday evening.

Tampa

TAMPA, Aug. 23.—Dr. William Monroe Rowlett and Miss Gregory Walker, daughter of Mrs. Julian Walker, of New York City, will be married at the cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York on September 10. Dr. Rowlett's brother, Caius Rowlett, and the bride-elect's brother, Hewitt Walker, will be best men and will be the only attendants. Dr. Rowlett and his bride will take a trip to Canadian resorts before returning to this city about October 1 to make their home. Dr. Rowlett is one of the young physicians of the city and is very popular. Miss Walker is related to many families here, and she and her mother spent last winter here, taking a house on the Boulevard. This summer they have been spending in the Berkshires. She is an accomplished pianist.

Two well-known young couples of Winter Haver, one of the fine resorts and orange grove towns of interior Florida, are to be married at the same time on September 14. They are Norman Wyckoff and Miss Larra McCrary and Leslie Winston Anderson and Miss Kathleen Winston Perder. The double ceremony will take place at the First Christian Church of Winter Haven, and the young couples will go for a wedding trip together.

Mrs. A. B. Gerner, of this city, is chaperoning a house party at Wall Springs. The party is made up of Tampa and Dade City people, and they are enjoying the bathing at this resort. Among the Dade City members of the party are the Misses Lulu and Ethel Cochrane. A number from Dade City motored over to the camp at various times during the last week or so to spend a few days.

Buchanan

BUCHANAN, Aug. 23.—The recital and reading given at the Methodist Church Tuesday evening by Miss Shirley Sutherlin, of Caye Springs, was enjoyed by all present. Miss Sutherlin has accepted a position with the Southern Female College at LaGrange next year.

Tifton

TIFTON, Aug. 23.—Miss Aline Shipp entertained in honor of her guests, Misses Julia Williams and Florence Parks, with a Japanese party Monday night. Those present were the Misses Julia Williams, Florence Parks, Annie Howard, Marie Garbutt and Vernice Kennedy, James Pate, Roy Thrasher, Robert Hall, Louie Monk, Watson Holmes, Joe Gammon and Mark and Conrad Shipp.

Miss Josie Golden entertained Friday afternoon at four tables of salmagundi in honor of her guest, Miss Kate Harrell, of Doerun.

Miss Annie Howard entertained Tuesday night in honor of Miss Aline Shipp's house guests.

St. Augustine

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 23.—A pretty event of the week was the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Josephine Masters and Marcus Pappy at the Cathedral Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. Father James O'Brien officiating. Both are among the best known young people of the city and are members of old Florida families.

Captain and Mrs. Henry Marcotte left yesterday for Williamsport, Pa., where they will spend several weeks.

Miss Nell Edmonds and her mother have gone to Miami, where they will reside in the future. They were social favorites here.

Miss Ruth Green, a popular member of the younger society set, has returned from an extended visit with friends in Tallahassee.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald White have returned from a several months' honeymoon trip spent in England, Mr. White's old home. Mr. White is a well-known banker. Mrs. White was formerly Miss Elizabeth Frazer, of this city. Their wedding was a social event of the early summer.

Mrs. G. H. Bruer has returned from Syracuse, N. Y., where she visited her daughter, Mrs. Ernest Johnson.

Gainesville

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Elizabeth Kimbrough will entertain at a house party next week, her guests to include Miss Jamie Hall, of Grantville; Miss Cora Candler, of Dallas, Texas; Miss Marie Dinkins, of Atlanta; Miss Emily Dorsey, of Opelika, Ala., and Miss Laura Mae Kennimerg, of Cleveland. Among the social attention planned for her guests are a masquerade party at the home of Miss Kimbrough and a reception, with Miss Mary Florence McKinney as hostess.

A social affair of the week was the bridge luncheon Wednesday morning which Mrs. Pillow gave for her daughter, Mrs. French, of New Orleans. About twenty guests were present.

A compliment to Mrs. J. B. Fitzgerald, who leaves this week for her future home in Augusta, was a porch party given Tuesday morning by Mrs. M. C. Brown and her mother, Mrs. Flanders.

Mrs. J. E. Jackson was hostess at a sewing party at her home on Academy street in honor of her sister, Mrs. H. W. Campbell, of Atlanta.

Miss Ione and Louise Jackson entertained eight couples at a dinner party Friday evening in honor of Miss Marjorie Wilkes, who was a guest of Mrs. J. H. Banks.

Acworth

ACWORTH, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Daniell Humphries Collins entertained on Thursday afternoon in compliment to Mrs. Norman Smith Kitchen, of Birmingham, Ala.

Mrs. Zollie L. McLain, Mrs. W. Arthur Nichols and Mrs. Charles Gribble were hostesses on Friday afternoon at a reception at the home of Mrs. Gribble, in honor of Mrs. D'Armand Breard, of Monroe, La.; Miss Avis Elgin, of Anderson, S. C., and Mrs. Norman Smith Kitchen, of Birmingham, Ala.

Washington

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—In honor of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Newsom, whose wedding Monday afternoon in Atlanta was a social event of cordial interest to a large circle of friends and relatives in Wilkes County, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Armstrong entertained a number of friends Thursday with a barbecue at their country home five miles north of Washington.

Tuesday's meeting of the Bimonthly Bridge Club, composed of the young married set of Washington, was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Clement E. Sutton. It was decided to call in further meetings until October on account of the number of members who are spending September out of town.

Lanark

LANARK, Aug. 23.—The residents at the Byrd cottage and a few invited guests enjoyed an excursion to Dog Island on Thursday evening. A delicious lunch was served on the island and a dip in the surf was enjoyed.

On Wednesday night at the hotel Willie Byrd was host at a crab supper.

Making up a pleasant house party at Lanark for a week or ten days are Mrs. B. H. Hardaway, Miss Slade, Miss Gerge, Charles Porter and B. H. Hardaway, Jr., all of Columbus, Ga. The house party is given by Mrs Hardaway in honor of her son, B. H. Hardaway, Jr. The party is occupying the cottage of Mrs. Hardaway.

The party of Tallahassee campers at St. Theresa, composed of John McDougall Abe McDougall, Guy Haynes and Phil Caldwell, on Saturday evening sailed over to Lanark, enjoyed the Saturday night dance at the hotel and remained over Sunday, taking the members of the Columbus house party for a sail. John and Abe McDougall returned to their camp at St. Theresa and Guy Haynes and Phil Caldwell to Tallahassee.

A party of campers at Lanark occupying the Phillips-Culley cottage is made up of Walter Culley, Humphrey Gwynn, Horace VanBrunt and Harbert Keith, of Tallahassee.

Gainesville

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Mamie McGrew has returned from a four-weeks outing, during which she visited friends in Jacksonville, Augusta, Ga., and Hendersonville, N. C.

Mrs. J. I. Blake and children are now in Atlanta on a visit to relatives.

Miss Birdie Wood, of Fernandina; Miss Gussie Steindorff, of Greenville, Ala., and Miss Nellie Dekle, of Tampa, are guests of Mrs. Robert E. Lee on West Arlington street.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Harris, of Haverhill, Mass., announce the engagement of their daughter, Marion Carr, to Lee Graham, of Gainesville, Fla. This announcement is of great interest to the social circle of this city. Mr. Graham is cashier of the First National Bank of Gainesville, a member of the City Council and a most popular citizen. It is said the wedding will be some time in October.

Cartersville

CARTERSVILLE, Aug. 23.—On Tuesday evening a dance was given at the Opera House by the young men of Cartersville to the visiting girls. The out-of-town guests were Misses Marion Perdue, Ruth Blackman and Ruth Barry, of Atlanta; Kathrine and May Stiles, of Brunswick; Addie McCollister and Ida Moody, of Piedmont, Ala., and Mrs. Keith Carson, of Tifton. The chaperons wer Mr. and Mrs. E. Strickland, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hammond and Mr. and Mrs. Madison Milam.

Mrs. Walter Holcombe, of Nashville, entertained at an afternoon tea at "Roselawn," the home of her mother, Mrs. Sam P. Jones, on Saturday. The guests were Mrs. John G. Simpson and Miss Hattie Jones, Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. Bert Sims, Murfreesboro, Tenn., and Mrs. Conyers Fite, Washington, D. C.

Nashville

NASHVILLE, Aug. 23.—A lawn social was given on the courthouse square by the ladies of the Civic League yesterday evening from 6 to 9 o'clock. The proceeds will go for the benefit of the public library.

Ocilla

OCILLA, Aug. 23.—At the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. J. W. Layfield, Miss Meta Clair Sibley and Edwin E. Howell were married on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, and left immediately for Atlanta and other points in North Georgia to return in ten days, when they will make this city their home. The Rev. Mr. Ansley, Baptist minister at this place, officiated.

Claims To Be Heir To Cooper Estate

Henry D. Ritch Says He Was Adopted Son of Savannah Man. Files Suit.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—A suit in which Henry David Ritch seeks to establish himself as an heir-at-law of the late Clem T. Cooper so that he may inherit one-third of the $43,000 Cooper estate, has been filed in the Superior Court of Chatham County.

The obstacle in the way of Ritch's claim is Mrs. Lillian Hamilton, formerly Mrs. Lillian Cooper, wife of the man who died intestate, leaving this desirable property. Ritch says he was legally adopted by Cooper and is entitled to inherit one-third of the estate, as well as to share in the net proceeds from the estate since the death of Cooper on January 14, 1903.

The petitioner is 19 years old. He began the proceedings through J. J. Rahn, Jr., a friend. He shows that when a child 6 years old he was adopted by Cooper, and that he took the name of his foster parent. At that time Cooper was a widower. Ritch continued to live at the Cooper home until six months after the death of Cooper.

FORGOT TO CLOSE WINDOW; GAS FAILED TO KILL MAN

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Because he forgot to close a window in the back of his store when he attempted to kill himself by inhaling illuminating gas, Laurence Louis, a confectioner, will probably recover.

Louis had removed the burners from a gas stove, and placing a rubber tube in his mouth, turned on the gas. Despondency because of business affairs is said to have been the cause of the act.

BIG DISAPPEARING GUN ARRIVES IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Occupying four freight cars, the carriage for the 10-inch disappearing gun in the dummy fortifications in the park extension has arrived from Bethlehem, Pa.

The total weight of the carriage is 225,000 pounds. It will support a gun weighing 30 tons and measuring 35 feet in length. The gun will be mounted inside the fortifications which will be used by the Savannah Volunteer Guards in practice work.

The "Ice Kist"

APPROVED BY
Good Housekeeping Institute

No Crank
No Dasher
No Handle
No Cogs
No Wheels
No Wood
No Hoops
No
Hard Work

$1.95 POSTPAID 15 DAYS' TRIAL 2-QUART SIZE $1.95

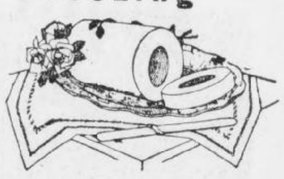
PACK IT THAT'S ALL

For the ICE-KIST all you have to do is to pour in the cream, sherbet or whatever refreshment it may be, and pack in the ice as in the ordinary freezer. Then the work is ended. There is no working a dasher, no turning a handle or crank, no straining your arms and back, no opening the freezer to "see" if it is freezing, no extra packing in of ice. All you do after packing is to open the freezer and serve the refreshment. It saves work, time, trouble and—you.

Perfect Freezing

The Ice-Kist has no dasher or crank because it has two freezing surfaces. The old-fashioned freezer had only one freezing surface—that is why a crank and dasher were necessary. The Ice-Kist has a metal freezing tube that extends directly through the cream to the bottom. This gives the two freezing surfaces. The cold penetrates from the center and from the outside, too. The cream is frozen with a smoothness that will delight you.



The Ice-Kist makes a beautiful and perfect-frozen mold.

Special 15-Day Offer

We want you to know the joy of having an Ice-Kist Crankless Freezer in your home. We will send it post-paid upon the return of the coupon together with $1.95—our introductory price. If, after trying the ICE-KIST for 15 days, you are not delighted with it, return it and we will return the $1.95. Don't let the coupon get lost. Send it NOW.

Western Merchandise & Supply Co.,
326 W. Madison St., Chicago., Ill.

Enclosed is money order for $1.95. Please send the ICE-KIST CRANKLESS FREEZER for 15 days' trial.

Name.....

Address.....

.....Ex.

FRANKLIN WILL FOUND INTACT AND RESTORED

Document Contains Severe Arraignment of Custom of Wearing Jewelry in This Country.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—All controversies regarding the disposition of the estate of Benjamin Franklin have been settled by the restoration of his will by the manuscript repair department of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

The document, recently resurrected from a vault under the City Hall for the purpose of verifying an office copy, was found to have deteriorated so much during more than a century of obscurity that it was practically indecipherable. Through the renovating process to which it was subjected it has regained much of its original freshness and legibility, making it possible for every detail to be understood.

In a finely-worded passage he makes disposition of his best cane as follows: "My fine crabtree walking stick with a gold head curiously wrought in the form of the cap of liberty I give to my friend and the friend of mankind, General Washington. If it were a scepter, he has merited it and would become it. It was a present to me from that excellent woman, Mme. de Forback, the Dowager Duchess of Deux Ponts."

A small painting of the King of France, presented to him by that monarch, which was mounted in a frame containing 408 diamonds, he bequeathed to his daughter, with the following curious proviso: "The King of France's picture, set with 408 diamonds, to my daughter, Sarah Bache, on the condition that she is not to form any of the diamonds into ornaments either for herself or daughters, and, therefore, countenance the expensive, vain and useless fashion of wearing jewels in this country."

TOLD HE'D DIE WHEN 29, BUT LIVING AT 101

Centenarian Walks to Church on Last Birthday and Gives Sunday School Advice.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Aug. 23.—William T. Osborne, of this city, was 101 years old to-day and he didn't mind it a bit.

Answer to "Old Subscriber," "Vox Populi," "Constant Reader" and "Friend of the Paper:" NO, HE NEVER SMOKED OR DRANK.

In the spring of 1841—when he was 29—four physicians visited him at different times to give him some concrete idea of how much longer he was going to adorn the earth. All said he was firmly in the grip of consumption. Three said he'd be lucky to last more than a few days. The fourth said Osborne didn't have a chance of picking anything off the next Christmas tree.

The four doctors are dead.

Five generations gathered at his home to-day. Naturally, he was delighted. Being a regular communicant of Trinity Methodist Church, he went there this morning. He wanted to walk, but the temperature made that seem unwise. Before the service he addressed a class in the Sunday school and told the scholars to be clean in their habits, stick on the sprinkling cart and keep up a strong activity in labor. He thinks that if he hadn't worked so hard he would not have taken part in to-day's party.

The old man didn't dance any jigs to indicate that he was as lively as he used to be, but he gave plenty of evidence that he was around the place. A natural decline in the power of his eyes recently forced him to give up reading, but he still writes, can hear well, enjoys walking and has a good memory.

He was born nine miles from Newburgh. He has been a farmer, tanner and storekeeper. His wife Sarah died eleven years ago at the age of 91.

WAR IN MEXICO BLOCKS WEDDING OF PAIR 5 TIMES

Young Engineer Kept From Love by Succession of Revolutions in Republic.

DENVER, Aug. 23.—What chance has a little fellow like the god of love in a mix-up with a big bully like the person who holds down the job of god of war?

The young man is Arthur N. Zwetow, a mining engineer employed in Mexico. He and the young woman, Miss Mildred Lewin, have tried to get married five times, to use their own expression, and each time that god of war person has "butted in" and dealt Cupid a knock-out blow.

Young Zwetow is in Concepcion del Oro, a mining camp near the border of the State of Coahuila. Six months ago he wrote his betrothed that he had obtained a leave of absence and the wedding bells would ring any time she said. The young woman got her trousseau ready and set the wedding day. But the bridegroom did not come. A letter from him said the Federals had started a war, the railroad had quit running, bullets were flying and he had to stay.

So it has been for five successive attempts.

Girl Chases 8 Cows With Auto; Gets $4

New Jersey Chauffeurette Uses Machine to Hustle Bovine Trespassers to Pound.

PETERSON, N. J., Aug. 23.—Four dollars of the money Joseph Smith paid for the wanderings of his cows yesterday went into the purse of Miss Minnie DeGray.

Eight Smith cows entered her garden and were eating her corn. She chased them in her auto out of the field, across a lot, into the road and a half-mile to the poundmaster's yard. Smith paid $8 for their release. Miss DeGray received half of it.

OREGON 8-HOUR BILL HITS EVERY WORKING CLASS

Professors, Trades, Occupations and Even Day Labor Limited to 48 Hours Weekly Work.

SALEM, OREG., Aug. 23.—If the universal eight-hour bill, filed under the initiative to be voted on at the next general election, should become a law it would revolutionize the industries of the State.

The measure is drafted to apply to every industry, every business or vocation or profession in the State. No one is to be permitted, under its provisions, to work for more than eight hours out of nine consecutive hours a day, or more than forty-eight hours a week.

By this law neither manual labor, trades, nor the professions shall be exempted, but every form of labor, skilled or unskilled, as well as every trade and profession, and persons working therein or thereat, shall be included, in, by and under this law, and the same shall be included, in, by and under this law, within the State or Oregon.

The measure provides that the Labor Commissioner must see to the enforcement of its provisions, and if he does not do this immediately it becomes mandatory upon the Governor to remove the Labor Commissioner from office.

AGED FATHER THRASHES SON WHO THINKS HIM EASY PREY

EAST LIVERPOOL, OHIO, Aug. 23. When Francis Beaver, 30 years old, charged his father, Henry Beaver, aged 65, with having spoken in an uncomplimentary tone of the former's wife, the father resented the imputation and soundly thrashed his son.

The son, thinking he could easily worst his aged father, began the fight with a hard blow on the elder man's nose. Thoroughly aroused, Beaver, Sr., then started in and soon the son was lying on the ground with a fractured ankle and a fractured right leg.

ANNIVERSARY CLUB MEETS WITH THE SOUTHERN STATES LIFE

Leading Life Insurance Agents Hold Convention Here—Every Man Produced Over $100,000 Worth of Paid For Business in Twelve Months — Interesting Sessions Held.

There was a feast of reason, a sparkle of wit and a flow of soul at the brilliant banquet given at the Hotel Ansley last night when the Sixth Annual Convention of the Anniversary Club of the Southern States Life Insurance Company brought that gathering to a close.

Over one hundred guests were present.

This convention is celebrated by those members of the agency force of The Southern States Life Insurance Company who produced over $100,000 worth of paid for insurance during the year which ends June 30.

This convention had been in session two days, business sessions being held in the morning, the afternoon and evening being given over to entertainment.

Opening Session.

The first session of the Convention was held in the assembly room

J. C. WALDEN, SR., President.

of the Hotel Ansley on Friday morning. The largest attendance in the history of the club was present.

President Wilmer L. Moore, of The Southern States Life Insurance Company, greeted the club membership in a warm address of welcome, in which he congratulated them upon the splendid work just closed, and the beginning of the new year of the Anniversary Club, the first month of which saw the agents break all producing records.

J. R. WILLIAMS, Vice President.

Officers are not elected by the Anniversary Club, but office is won by the amount of insurance written. The agent writing the most business is President, the second man is Vice President, the leaders in each State are State Vice Presidents.

J. C. Walden, Sr., of Alabama, won the coveted honor of President. J. R. Williams, of South Carolina, was installed as Vice President.

Officers Installed.

The State Vice Presidents installed were T. Peters, Jr., of Georgia; B. B. Murray, of Florida; H. Clay Smith, of Alabama, and G. J. McDowell, of South Carolina.

In addition to these there were present other members of this Club who qualified for 1912-13: H. N. McAfee, of Georgia, a member for the sixth time; H. Willis Hogg, of Georgia, a member for the third time; J. T. Weems, of Georgia, the oldest member of the agency force of the company in point of service, for the sixth time; Fred Hines, of South Carolina, for the fifth time, and L. E. Black, Jr., C. S. Gurr and J. R. Munroe, for the first time.

Joe W. Vinson, whose absence from the meeting, owing to ill health, was greatly regretted by all present, completes his fifth year of membership

He also signalized his intention of making his election for next year sure by not only leading the agency force in the month of July but by beating his own and all other previous records of written business in any one month, and thereby establishing a high mark for agents to aim at.

Brief addresses were delivered to the club by the President and Vice President of the Club.

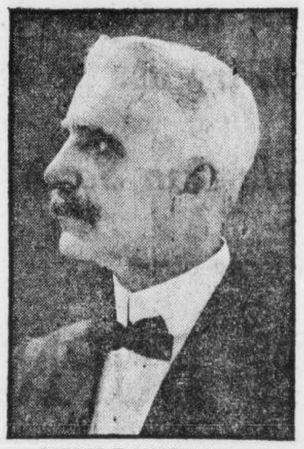
Unanimously Re-elected.

Robert F. Moore, Agency Secretary, was unanimously re-elected Secretary of the Anniversary Club, which position he has held with credit since the beginning of the organization.

Following the roll call of the Anniversary Club badges and certificates were distributed, after which the first "Keystone Degree" was conferred.

"New Policy" was the subject of an interesting paper by Supervisor of Agents, W. S. McLeod, which was followed by discussion and questions.

Agency Secretary Robert F. Moore followed with an interesting paper on "Items of Expense Charged to First Year's Business—Economy, What it Means to the Agent and the Policyholder." His paper was followed by discussion and questions.



ROBERT F. MOORE, Secretary.

The photograph of the Anniversary Club, which appears on this page, was taken, after which the Club was entertained at luncheon at the Capital City Club by President Moore. Friday afternoon the Club attended the baseball game and Friday evening occupied boxes at the Forsyth theater.

Concluding Session.

The concluding session of this interesting convention was held on Saturday morning, at which time a symposium of talks entitled "Confidential Chats With Medical Department," was participated in by E. M. Veatch, Dr. Gaines, Dr. W. S. Kendrick and Samuel Barnett, Actuary. This was followed by discussion and questions.

"The Company's Method of Payment of Death Claims—What It Should Mean to the Supervisor, the Agent, the Company and the Beneficiary," was delivered by Supervisor Frank E. Brodnax. This was followed by a discussion on the analysis of this subject under the following heads: (1) Bankers Agents Contracts, (2) Local Advertisement; (3) Draft on Local Bank, and (4) Follow Up of Prospects from Payment.

J. E. McLauchlin, Director of the Metropolitan Agency, followed with an interesting talk on "Systematic Following Up of Prospects."

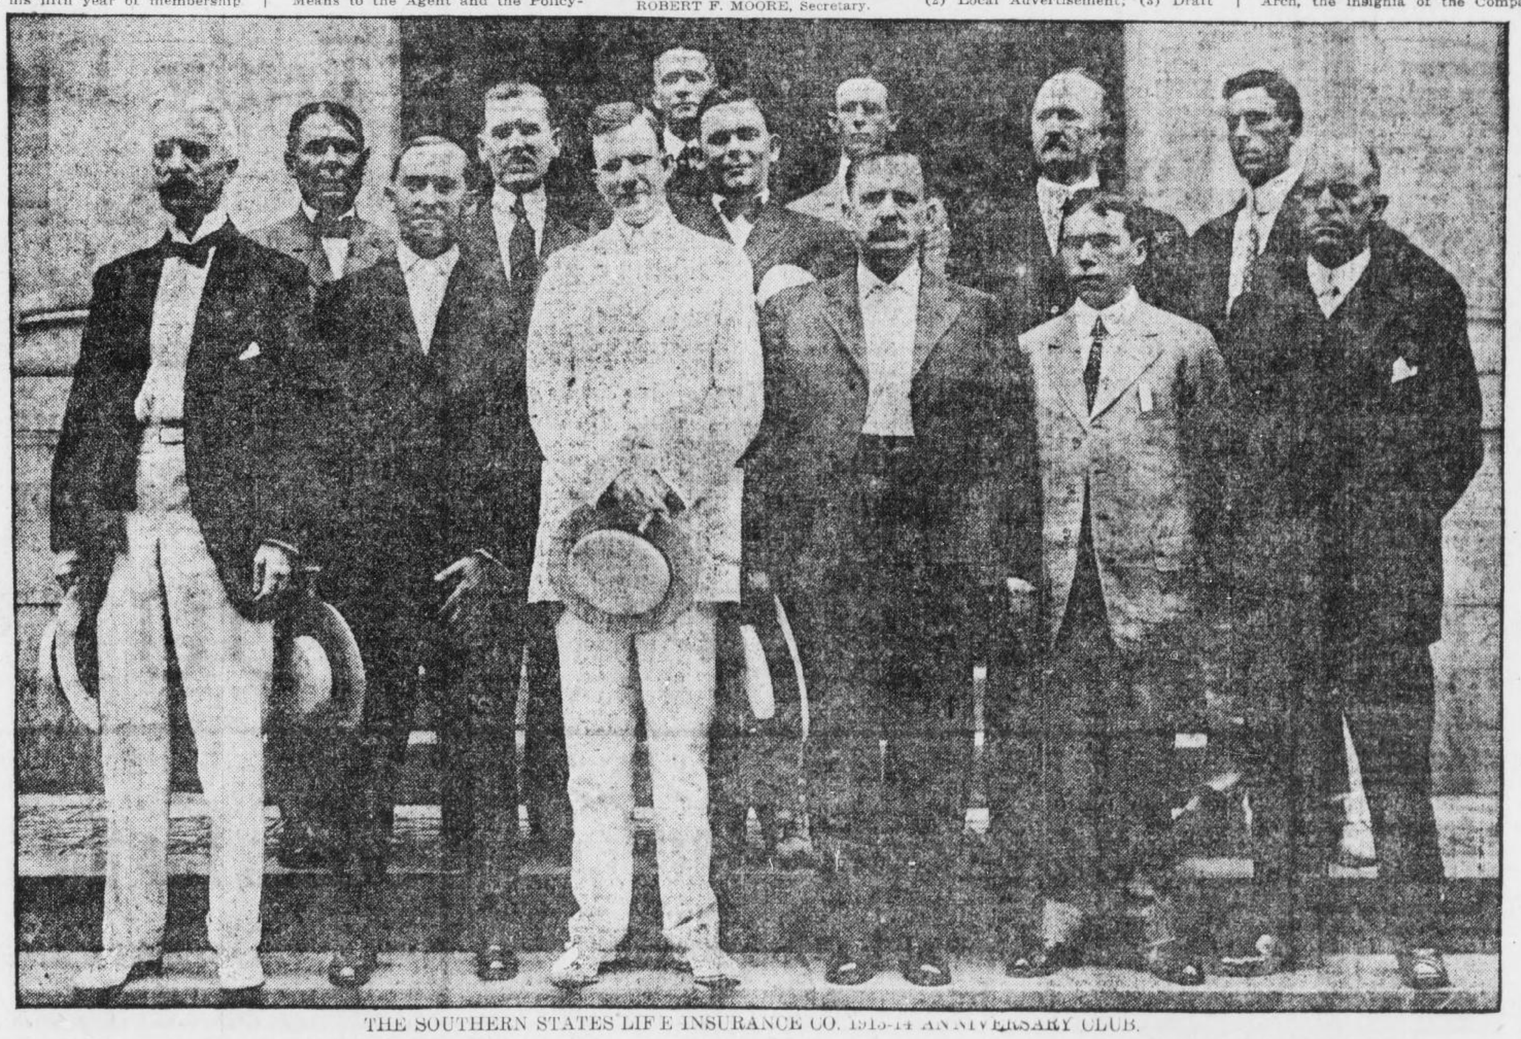
A symposium of actual experiences by all agents came next and the formal addresses of the Convention were concluded with a most interesting address by Hon. Hervey W. Laird, former Assistant Insurance Commissioner of Alabama, and now Assistant to President Wilmer L. Moore.

Entertained at Luncheon.

The Club was entertained at luncheon at the Hotel Ansley and again attended the baseball game in the afternoon.

The Banquet at the Hotel Ansley last night was probably the most brilliant gathering held in the history of the Club and the Hotel.

Over one hundred guests were entertained. The colors of the Southern States Life Insurance Company—Red, Blue and White, and the Keystone Arch, the insignia of the Company,



THE SOUTHERN STATES LIFE INSURANCE CO. 1913-14 ANNIVERSARY CLUB.

T. PETERS, JR., Georgia Vice President

MENU

GEORGIA CANTALOUPE

CELERY QUEEN OLIVES ALMONDS

CONSOMME FLORENTINE
CHEESE STRAWS

POMPANO A LA CARONDELET POTATOES ANNA

CALVE'S SWEETBREAD ST. CLAIR
MOYENS PEAS

CHICKEN FILLET, LUCULLUS
PEELED ASPARAGUS HOLLANDAISE

LETTUCE, RUSSIAN DRESSING
BEATEN BISCUIT

MOUSSE A LA PARISIENNE
PETITS FOUR

CHEESE AND BENT'S CRACKER

DEMI TASSE

APOLLINARIS
CIGARS

Banquet Menu.

B. B. MURRAY, Florida Vice President.

Hotel Ansley Scene of Wonderful Banquet to Club Last Night—Toasts Were Made by Speaker Burwell, Hon. C. B. Brown, of Alabama, Hon. W. S. Witham and Clark Howell.

were carried out in the flowers, ices and place cards.

President Wilmer L. Moore presided as toastmaster, and introduced the speakers.

J. C. Walden, Sr., President of the Club, was the first and his response to the toast, "The Anniversary Club—the Top Rung," was warmly received.

He was followed by J. R. Williams, Vice President, whose subject, "The Southern States Life—Confidence Begets Loyalty," was handled in a splendid manner.

G. J. McDowell, a member of the Anniversary Club, and a familiar speaker at these banquets, responded to the toast, "The Keystone Degree—An Incentive to Work."

Burwell Responds.

Speaker W. H. Burwell, of the General Assembly of Georgia, delivered a splendid toast in response to President Moore's cordial introduction, on

G. J. McDOWELL, South Carolina V. P.

"Success Is Measured by Ambition."

He was followed by Hon. Clark Howell, who responded to the toast, "Civic Duties—Every Man Has His Part."

Hon. Cyrus B. Brown, Assistant Commissioner of Insurance for the State of Alabama, represented that commonwealth and responded to the toast, "Alabama—Her Part in the Nation's Progress."

H. CLAY SMITH, Alabama Vice Pres.

Hon. W. S. Witham concluded the evening's gayety with a wonderful potpourri when he was presented to his hearers, with the following title for his toast, "A Toast, Like a Text, Is Given to Talk From."

EUROPE TROTS, BUT CAN'T KEEP STEP TO MUSIC

Syncopated Tunes and Dances Beyond Ken of Old World, Says American Composer.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Armand Vecsey, composer and director of music at the Ritz-Carlton, has returned fresh from a European trip with lots of new music and some comments upon the musical situation abroad which may act as balm to the souls of American composers, and a joy for those who are not musicians, but like to hear the scream of the American Eagle.

Mr. Vecsey has not lived on this side of the Atlantic long enough to have taken out final naturalization papers, but there is nobody on this side of Weehawken who is more intensely and enthusiastically American in a musical way. He says American music and American motifs have spread over all Europe, but the music the natives over there don't know how to play.

Opera in Europe, as Mr. Vecsey has viewed it this summer, is poor as compared with what is given at the Metropolitan Opera House, and there isn't anything now between London and Vienna that has to do with music or the stage which local talent can't beat hands down.

"I have been in Paris, London, Berlin, Munich, and Vienna," said Mr. Vecsey, "and everywhere I have found American music the most popular. Then the turkey trot one finds all over the Continent. Yet nowhere did I hear the music played correctly, although they try hard, and when it came to fitting German or French words to a typical trotting tune, the effect was ludicrous.

Recognize the "Truthahn Tanz?"

"Think of what the result was in Berlin, when they turned 'When the Midnight Choo-Choo Leaves for Alabam' into German! In Germany they call the trot 'Truthahn Tanz,' and in France it is the 'Pas du Dindon.' Who would recognize the original under such appellations?

"Then the French can not dance the trot, nor can the Germans. Somehow they can't just find out the character of it. Of course their bands and orchestras can not get the time right in the first place. Why, at the Folies Bergere in Paris, I saw two of the best French dancers giving what was supposed to be a most perfect rendition of the trot, and I assure you it was ridiculous. It was a very poor imitation of the real thing.

"Yet, I was astonished to find that all the new French music and most of the new German operettas are either in the American style, as nearly as their composers could approach it, or have American motifs. The tango seems to be breaking up the trot over there, partly, I suppose, because their dancers can come nearer to dancing it than the purely American steps. In Paris I saw a couple trying the Texas Tommy, and it was a sight to cause a horse to double up.

"Why can't they play a turkey trot? For the same reason that nobody except a Hungarian can play Hungarian music. Almost every musical country has something that is peculiarly its own—a style of music that when played correctly is infectious.

American Style Has Call.

"Hungary has its csardas, Austria its waltz, and America its syncopated time. When each is played properly, it is bound to move an assemblage of people, and just now the American style has the call everywhere.

"At the Palais de Danse, in Berlin, I first heard a turkey trot played by a German orchestra. It was very bad. I want to tell you that in Europe this summer there is no music, no opera, no Philharmonic concert, and no play that can compare with what has been heard here in New York this year."

"In Paris," went on Mr. Vecsey, with a trace of feeling, "when they see an American trunk, they lie in wait to rob the owner, and go crazy over the thought of loot. It is the same in Berlin.

"I must tell you that not anywhere are women so generally chic in their costumes nowadays as right here in New York.

"True, I did see many smartly gowned women, but investigation showed that most of them were Americans."

Rector Denounces Paid Choir Singers

Clergyman Declares There Is No Worship in Their Strange and Unutterable Music.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., Aug. 23.—The Rev. E. J. Craft, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, caused a sensation while addressing a meeting of the parishioners of Calvary parish by telling them what he would do if he were entering upon a new pastorate.

For one thing, he said, he did not believe in paid singers for church choirs "The service of the church was designed for the people as a whole and not alone for the choir," he said. "These modern choirs take the worship away from the people of the congregation and do all the worshiping themselves. They sing in wild and strange ways and in unutterable tongues the praises of God."

Veering of River Threatens Farms

Every Laborer Available Is Rushed to Head Off Flow of Missouri.

FREEMONT, NEBR., Aug. 23.—Every laborer available is being sent by the Burlington Railroad to Folsom to fight the Missouri River, which is again eating into the valuable farm lands of that section and threatening to cut its way to the railroad tracks. Many carloads of stone have been dumped into the river.

The river suddenly began veering from its channel a few days ago. Inside of two days it had swamped 20 acres of land. Fear is now felt that the river will eat its way back to the extensive [illegible] within the last year at a cost more than $500,000.

Tame Trout Craves Petting; Fed by Hand

Feels Insulted if Food Is Not Served in Manner to Which He Is Accustomed.

ESTES PARK, COLO., Aug. 23.—Sunbeam, the pet speckled trout in the fish hatchery at Estes Park, has just recovered from an indisposition caused by stomach trouble or rheumatism, and is again able to take its place as the only pet trout in captivity.

The fish, now a 3-year-old and about eleven inches long, is as good an example of gentle and loving trouthood as it is possible to find. Fed from the hand from the time it was hatched, it feels insulted now unless its food is given to it in that way.

It is very fond of being stroked and petted, and will swim around and rub itself against a person's hand whenever a chance is given it.

Stranger Is Son, Gone for 20 Years

Father Turns Wanderer Away, but Mother Calls Him Back, and Reunion Follows.

GLASGOW, KY., Aug. 23.—Virgil Huffman had been away from home twenty years, seeking his fortune in Alaska, and the father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. James Huffman, were sitting in a room of their home near here discussing him and wondering if he would ever come back.

There was a knock at the door and Mr. Huffman opened it to see a dusty traveler, who said he was tired and was seeking lodging for the night. Mr. Huffman thought he could do nothing for him, but Mrs. Huffman "reckoned" they could manage somehow.

Then they led him into the hall, under the swinging lamp, and as the light fell on his face the aged couple recognized him as their son.

African Chieftain Is Harvard Student

Begins Stupendous Task of Reducing His Own Language to Written Form.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., Aug. 23.—A full-blooded African chieftain has just passed his entrance examinations at Harvard with flying colors and will enter the university next September as a member of the class of 1917. He is P. Gbe Wolo, and his people, 300,000 strong, are the Krus of Liberia, on the west coast of Africa.

They have no written language, so that the only way he can communicate with his family is through traders on the coast, who send the message by word of mouth along the trail. He has begun the stupendous task of reducing his language to writing.

Goes to Cemetery Instead of Ball Park

Fan Mistakes Funeral Hack for Omnibus on Its Way to Diamond.

MONTGOMERY, MO., Aug. 23.—A baseball rooter came here from a distance to attend the St. Charles-Montgomery game, and by mistake he got into a hack at the depot filled with pallbearers going to a funeral.

As he had crepe on his hat, the pallbearers thought he had come as a mourner and he was taken to the cemetery instead of the ball park.

Finding himself in a funeral procession, he woke up and escaped. He got to the ball grounds just in time to see the home team win.

'Star Baths' Latest Complexion Remedy

Young Women Campers Take Nightly 'Plunge' in Milky Way Beams on Tower.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Star baths are the fad at the summer camp of the Young Women's Christian Association in Blauvelt, N. Y. Miss Marion Hopkins, the camp leader, is given credit for the innovation. The baths are taken on top of a high tower in the center of the camp. It will accommodate a dozen bathers.

There is a long waiting list of young women campers who are anxious to enjoy the reported benefits of immersion in starlight. Chief among these is said to be the "star-shine complexion."

Husband in Prison; Wife Willed $20,000

Richmond Woman Given Share of Estate After Helpmate Is Sentenced for Embezzlement.

RICHMOND, VA., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Maud Kent Bowley, whose husband, William J. Bowley, formerly connected with a hotel here, was recently sentenced to serve two years in State prison for embezzling $8,000 from the Jefferson Hotel in this city while auditor there, inherits $20,000 from the estate of her aunt, Mrs. Junius A. Morris, of Richmond, who died August 3 at Atlantic City.

The value of the estate is placed at $496,000.

Woman Works as Circus Roustabout

Breaks Down While Handling Heavy Tent Pole and Her Secret Is Revealed.

LA CROSSE, WIS., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Ada Broughton, unable to support her two children and invalid husband on wages paid a woman, donned a man's attire and labored beside farm hands in Dakota wheat fields. She broke down under the strain and came to La Crosse to seek lighter employment, becoming a circus roustabout. Lifting heavy poles and canvas resulted in her complete breakdown. Then she told her story to the police and collapsed. She was taken unconscious to a hospital. Relatives are on the way from her home at Rice Lake.

HEARST'S SUNDAY
American Advertising Contest
$10.00 Given Away!!

Last Sunday only the trade-marks or distinguishing characteristics of the advertisers below were given. $10.00 in cash was offered to the person sending in to The American, in the fewest possible words, a description of the advertisers whose "slogan" appeared below. Thousands of these replies were received and the prize goes to Mrs. O. D. Gorman, Jr., 79 W. 15th St., her answers appearing below:

WALL-PAPER

Thirty years in the wall-paper business have made us proficient. Ask our customers. Before you buy, try us. :: ::

"Better Be Safe than Sorry"

71 South Pryor Street

BURNETT WALL PAPER CO. BURNETT

"Go Where the Crowds Go"

AND

You will be delighted with the cool, comfortable Montgomery Theater. Absolutely the latest pictures.

Anna Von Hoffman is now singing

AT

The Montgomery

The easy way to buy clothes

Your Credit is Good at

DOLLAR A WEEK DAY
14 W. MITCHELL ST.

"Truly Duffy's"

The home of low prices, on the corner of Mitchell and Forsyth Sts. Attend our immense Clearing-Out Sale now going on. :: ::

DUFFY'S

"The Velvet Kind"

The kind of Ice Cream you really like. It's pure, clean and wholesome. Try it once. ∴ ∴ ∴

PHONE IVY 6849

VELVET ICE CREAM CO.

26 E. North Avenue

27 years in the same stand.

Shoes for the Entire Family

See our Fall and Winter stock of Men's and Ladies' models. Just from the Eastern style centers.

MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED

R. C. BLACK

35 Whitehall Street

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

ATLANTA HAS SUPPORT FOR HOME-GOODS EXPOSITION

Spirit Which Makes City Famous Prevails, and Enough Exhibitors Sign Agreements to Assure Success of Project.

Decision Necessary Tuesday So That Plans for New Commerce Building Might Be Changed. Manufacturers Are Responding.

It was a close shave, everyone admits, but as usual the Atlanta spirit prevailed, and the "Made in Atlanta" exhibit is assured.

Tuesday's luncheon at the Ansley was the "clincher." Several years of agitation, a year of actual work, brought to a climax by a vigorous campaign of three months, developed the exhibit project to a point where about 36 manufacturers had signed their names to agreements binding them to take floor space for a period of three years.

Thus matters stood Tuesday. Meanwhile the contractors were at work in the new Chamber building remodeling it. The plans called for offices. If a change were to be made, a decision was necessary at once.

The case was put squarely up to the Atlanta manufacturers Tuesday, and on Tuesday's luncheon was staked the entire plan. The result of the appeal was success.

To Have Four Floors.

Four floors will be devoted to the exhibit. One floor will be given over to the cotton industry—textiles, oils and by-products. Furniture made in Atlanta will take another entire floor. Building materials probably will take a floor, kindred lines of manufacture will be grouped together as far as is consistent with economical disposal of space.

Who will be in charge of the exhibit in the new building at Pryor street and Auburn avenue has not been determined. Neither has it been decided when the exhibits will be installed. All this remains to be done.

This much is certain—there will be telephone service on each floor, an expert in charge and an intelligent effort to make the exhibit pay in dollars and cents for every participant.

Had the project fallen through, it would have been lamentable, for Nashville, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Hartford, Conn., St. Louis and other cities have such exhibits; others are planning them, and Atlanta would, for the first time, be forced to admit itself less progressive than its rivals.

Those Already Pledged.

The following firms had signed for space up to Saturday, the nature of the business being suggested where the name is not self-explanatory:

Southern Engraving Company.
Frederick Disinfectant Company.
J. K. Orr Shoe Company.
E. VanWinkle Company (motor trucks)..
Atlanta Gas Light Company.
Southern Upholstering Company.
Atlanta Stove Works.
Southern Spring Bed Company.
Burnett, Bell & Klapper (furniture).
Gholstin - Cunningham Company (bed springs).
All-Star Manufacturing Company (necktles).
Byrd Printing Company.
Norris, Inc. (candies).
Willingham-Tift Lumber Company.
Tripod Paint Company.
J. P. Stevens Engraving Company.
Atlanta Paper Company.
Atlanta Blank Book Manufacturing Company.
White Provision Company.
Dowman-Dozier (metal workers).
Foote & Davies (office furnishings).
Golden Eagle Buggy Company.
Metzger Mattress Company.
Whittier Mills (textiles).
Marcus Loeb & Co. (overalls).
Nunnally & McCrae (overalls).
Phoenix Planing Mills.
Parian Paint Company.
Atlanta Show Case Company.
Greer Manufacturing Company (jewelry).
F. J. Cooledge (building materials).
M. D. & H. L. Smith (awnings).
Reed Oil Company.
Atlanta Metal Bed Company.
Atlanta Auto Top and Trimming Company.
Moncrief Furnace Company.
Coca-Cola Company.
Walter Ballard Optical Company.
Hagan & Dodd Co. (soft drinks).
Atlanta Art Glass Company.
A. E. Hill Manufacturing Company (razor blade strops).

In addition to the above, the Southern Cotton Seed Crushers' Association, the cotton oil mills, the textile and other cotton interests have an entire floor, where they will exhibit the cotton plant and all of its various uses.

ENGLISH MAKERS INVENT CAP WHICH KEEPS SHAPE

A problem that has engaged English cap manufacturers for some time has been how to produce a cloth cap that will keep its shape after it has been in use for some time. An enterprising firm of manufacturers now claims that they have solved the problem and that the shape of their caps is not affected by rain. The idea introduced consists of placing a flat plate of straw plait in the cap between the lining and the cloth crown.

This makes the top of the cap sit flat, and as the straw is not affected by wet it is said the cap can be worn for a much longer period than the ordinary kind.

Sweet Potato Crop Yields Big Returns

Would Bring Much More if Southern Farmers Did Not Glut Market at Harvest.

Each year the sweet potato is becoming of greater importance as a money crop in the South. The value of this crop in the United States in 1900 was $34,429,000, 90 per cent of which was produced in the Southern States. The total area devoted to sweet potatoes in the United States increased from 537,000 acres in 1899 to 641,000 in 1909, and the yield increased from 42,500,000 to 52,200,000 bushels. The total value of the crop increased at a much more rapid rate than either the acreage or the yield, showing an increase of 78.3 per cent in ten years.

With better methods of storing and marketing the potatoes, it is said, their value could be doubled without increasing the acreage or production. This is especially true in the South, where the potatoes are either rushed on the market at digging time, when the price is low, or stored in outdoor pits or banks, where a large portion decays.

Very few of the sweet potatoes stored in pits or banks ever reach the market, for from 25 to 50 per cent spoil, and those that remain are not of good quality. Even if the pit or bank method of storage would keep the potatoes, it is not economical.

Too much labor and expense are required to make these banks every year and to get the potatoes out when wanted for market. Sweet potatoes can be marketed more economically and to much better advantage from storage houses.

Green Shirts Shown For Winter Wear

Long-Pointed Collars in White and Self-Striped Effects Continue in Vogue.

New features are noted among collars and shirts shown by leading manufacturers for fall and winter. Imported dress shirts, in soft laundered effects with musnroom tucks and semi-French cuffs are selling readily. Shirts with a short stiff bosom in various color combinations are also featured.

White self-striped in French pique with stiff and unstarched bosoms are also meeting a good demand. A soft bosom with cross-striped plaits, in various color combinations, is a new fall feature that has been well received.

Woven madras in colored effects will be strong.

The demand for silk shirts is increasing and they are becoming more of a staple than formerly. Green will be a popular shirt color for the new season

The long pointed collars in white and self-striped effects are continuing into the next season.

A departure in them is the wider two-inch band instead of the narrow one now worn. These new collars have a three and a half inch point.

The wider band is claimed to give them more the appearance of a standing collar, besides causing them to sit better and afford greater comfort.

Stocks of Iron Not Above 100,000 Tons

Accumulation in Yards Reduced Rapidly in Southern Territory. Curtailment Continues.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 23.—Small sales of pig iron continue in the Southern territory, with a satisfactory aggregate.

The price of pig iron holds around $11 per ton, No. 2 Foundry. There have been a number of sales made for delivery during the last part of the year and some inquiries are in hand for iron to be delivered the first quarter in 1914.

There still is curtailment of the make. It is believed Alabama will produce during August almost as much iron as in July. Furnace companies are expressing the belief that before the end of the year a buying movement is likely to call for an immense tonnage. The furnace and warrant yards inventory will show now over 100,000 tons on hand. A few months ago there were 150,000 tons on the yards.

Basic iron demand is more satisfactory. Charcoal iron price is above $23, with the make as low as it ever was in the South.

Steel operations are steady, the several plants in Alabama working on practically full time. Fabricated steel is going out in all directions. Cotton tie manufacturers have had a prosperous season.

Fertilizer Concern Has Splendid Year

American Agricultural Chemical Earns Close to 7 Per Cent on Its Common Stock.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—American Agricultural Chemical for its year to June 30 is understood to have earned something better than 6 per cent on the $18,320,000 common. In fact, it is barely possible that the final figures will come nearer 7 per cent on this issue.

Unless conditions in the fertilizer trade become very much worse than for the last two years, the company can continue to earn and pay the present 4 per cent dividend. This dividend rate is, by the way, a testimonial to the wisdom of directors in making the initial distribution on the common stock rather modest. If a 5 per cent or 6 per cent rate had been adopted two years ago, the future outlook would not be nearly so happy as it is to-day.

A very strong feature of American Agricultural operations is the high percentage of branded or trade-marked goods which it sells. It is safe to state that 90 per cent of the company's tonnage consists of trade-mark goods, which farmers buy on the reputation of a particular brand for the specific purpose desired.

SAMPLES COST DRY GOODS MEN MANY DOLLARS

Dealers Feel Something Should Be Done to Stop Incessant Drain on Their Profits.

There is strong feeling in dry goods circles that something should be done to curb the increasing demands of buyers for samples. In most quarters there is a strong opinion expressed that the giving of samples is a necessary evil up to a certain point, but there is also a strong opinion that this point has long since been passed.

Few manufacturers and wholesalers take the trouble to find out just what samples cost them. In only a few cases are definite records kept and the cost of the samples figured.

A New York silk firm gets out about 250 styles a season and the buyers got fair-sized samples of each style they bought. This is really necessary, but it is trade custom, the house follows the general path.

A big woolen firm in New York which does business with the cutting-up trades and larger retailers is one of the best informed on the subject of sample expense.

"On our books," the head of the firm said, "there are about 2,500 accounts. Of these about 1,800 are manufacturers of clothing. To each manufacturer we give five or ten sample books. The cloth in each book is valued at about 20 cents, and the expense of getting them up brings the cost to about 50 cents. This means that each manufacturing account costs us about $3.75 a season for samples. With two seasons a year and 1,800 manufacturers' accounts it is easy to see what samples mean to us without trying to figure the cost of samples for the retail accounts."

In another quarter of the woolen goods trade it was said that the samples given out mounted up to a tidy sum in the course of a year, but that the expense had not been so great of late because several houses had agreed to make clothiers pay for most of the samples they got.

"One of the worst features of the sample business in this industry," this agent said, "is the way some members of the clothing trade use them. Many of them have no scruples at all about taking our samples to a competitor and asking him at how much less than our price he can get the goods made up by his mill. This is a little off the subject, perhaps, but it illustrates one of the worst phases of the woolen industry."

Among the cotton goods houses the evil is seen in its worst form so far as quantity is concerned, but the cheaper qualities of these goods tends to lessen the aggregate loss as compared with wool and silk goods. Lace and embroidery firms also pay tribute to the sample god at the rate of several hundreds to several thousands of dollars a year.

Last, but not least, comes the big department store. Inquiry at several of them in New York brought out the assertion that samples cost them from $30,000 to $60,000 a year. Only 15 to 20 per cent of the people who take these samples from the stores really buy anything afterward, and the resultant loss necessarily is heavy.

N. O. T. & M. Receiver May Ask Big Loan

Frisco Subsidiary Almost Certain to Default on Interest Due September 1.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—As soon as New Orleans, Texas and Mexico receivers know whether Frisco receivers will or will not pay the $700,000 interest due September 1, they will make application for permission to issue approximately $1,000,000 receivers' certificates. In the meantime the Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust Company is making temporary loans to the receivers comprising $100,000 for debt falling due August 1, and about $200,000 additional to middle of September.

The engineers employed to examine the properties which make up the Frisco's South Texas lines have not yet made their report, but the most favorable statement would show that at least 18 months of steady work and adequate funds would be necessary to put New Orleans, Texas and Mexico in a position to earn interest on its bonds. Others believe at least three years would be consumed in putting the line on its feet, and between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 expenditures would be needed.

Under these circumstances assumption is made in certain quarters that Frisco will default its guarantee of the interest due September 1. In fact, it is said that any other course would be improper.

KNITTING YARNS SLOWER BECAUSE STRIKE IS ON

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Buying of knitting yarns has slowed up, due to the knit goods strike in New York and Brooklyn, but prices show no change. Just how the strike will affect the market is a matter of conjecture, although most dealers admit that prices will drop if it is continued.

Spinners were unwilling to raise quotations on worsted yarns materially, as it would result in advancing the prices for worsted goods and so kill the prospective demand for them.

Cotton yarns were quiet, the small demand for them being attributed to the spinners' high prices. Weaving yarns were selling at lower figures than for several weeks, but only small orders were placed. Buyers, influenced by favorable cotton crop reports, were holding out for still lower prices.

There were no changes in Southern frame-spun knitting yarns, but there was less activity noted in the coarser counts of single combed yarns.

SUMMER TRADE DEVELOPED BY BRAINY EFFORT

August Dullness of Years Ago Is Overcome by Teaching Public What to Buy Then.

"Summer isn't the terror to us that it used to be," remarked a white-haired veteran of the department stores of Atlanta—a man who is an interesting talker and a consistent advertiser, but who keeps his own name and his own personality persistently in the background.

"There was a time," he went on in reminiscence, "when we might almost as well have closed up the store during July and August. That was years ago.

"In the summer all the well-to-do customers went out of Atlanta, and did not return until fall. Fall was a mad scramble for customers and stores alike.

"The less wealthy, who stayed in town, did little shopping. Everyone thought it was too hot. No one ever paid any attention to buying in midsummer. The stores were unattractive. Usually the proprietor was vacationing—if that's a good word—himself.

"I do not know who had the inspiration first in Atlanta. But a change came about. The wisest merchant, whoever he was, decided there were people in town with money to spend, even in the summer time.

"He schemed out the way to get it, which is followed almost universally by Atlanta stores nowadays.

"To make the story short, he offered bargains so attractive that shoppers simply had to come to town for the August sales. The custom has grown until to-day the things which have no season of necessity have been exploited so skillfully that the public believes summer is the season for them.

"That may sound obscure, but I do not intend it to be.

"Take furniture, for instance. There is no more reason why one should buy furniture in January than in August. Nor is there any reason why one should buy furniture in August in preference to January.

"But the summer furniture sale has become so much a fixture in the leading stores that people wait for it. It is good business for all concerned. The merchant is striving toward the ideal condition, which would be sales and collections of an unvarying amount every month in the year—unattainable, but none the less an ideal state of affairs.

"The customer, likewise, is winning. She effects economies by midsummer buying of furniture and blankets, and distributes her expenditures more evenly over the year."

Textile Furs Being Featured for Fall

Wide Variety of Pile Fabrics Shown in Cloaks for the 1913-14 Season.

Many new effects in pile fabrics are being featured for the fall and winter seasons. Matelasse plushes in brocaded effects and high colors, to be used for cloakings and millinery, as well as other brocaded effects, are prominent features in present trading.

There is also a tendency to moires, in Scotch plaids and checks, for dresses, cloaks and trimmings. A wide variety of Oriental and Bulgarian effects in plushes and velvets are also shown for vestings, collars and cuffs.

A new item is the jasper effect, which has a rich woolen appearance and is featured for cloakings.

The fabric is of an indefinite striped appearance, and is shown in black and white and blue and brown mixtures.

Imitation Persian lamb is also popular among the more expensive fabrics, being made to retail at about $7.50 for 50-inch widths.

FRENCH CALICOMAKERS MAKE 20-YEAR COMPACT

Several years ago an attempt was made to organize the French calico printing trade, a cartel being formed which included the principal producers, and an effort was made to fix standard prices. The results were not altogether satisfactory, and the agreement was allowed to expire. The matter was taken up again recently, and it is now reported that a new cartel, comprising seven of the leading French firms whose works are situated in Rouen, Epinal, Bolbec and Valenciennes, has been formed.

A central sales bureau, which will transact the entire selling business of the concerns interested, has been established under the style of the Comptoir de Vente des Tissus Francais Imprimees.

According to the Daily Consular and Trade Report, the agreement is for twenty years.

SMALL TOWN SECURES NATIONAL BANK CHARTER

STOCKTON, CAL., Aug. 23.—Announcement is made that application the first big rubber factory to be established on the South American continent, to cost $1,300,000.

the first big rubber factory to be established on the South American continent, to cost $1,300,000.

Southern Hosiery Buyers in Market

Winter Goods Reported Scarce and Stringency May Become Acute by Fall.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Southern hosiery buyers are visiting the local market. Although mill agents report cheap goods sold up, some provision is evidently being made for the newcomers. The Southern jobbers have waited this year until the indications of the cotton crop were fairly certain before operating. They are not taking 84-needle bundle goods, as they predict lower prices on those lines. There are said to be fewer orders for extracts booked this year than formerly.

This is not affecting the valume of sales, as extracts are made up only to order, and customary buyers of those lines are simply seeking a different finish. Winter goods are already reported scarce, and, as the duplicating period has not yet begun, the stringency will probably be acute before the end of the fall.

Cotton Goods Buying Seems to Lack Snap

Limited Number of Desirable Spring Dress Fabrics Taken by Purchasers in East.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—While certain cotton good sellers are satisfied with conditions, nearly everywhere is the complaint that the market is without any snap save for a limited number of desirable spring dress fabrics.

A number of buyers are reported to have gone home without purchasing, while others took only sample pieces. Such wide lines were shown that, in some cases, buyers got the impression that there was plenty of goods back of them. This was not the case, but the buyers were frightened off.

Staples are not in demand as they should be at this time, and specialties are holding the lead. Fancies in ratines, crepes and voiles have shown little tendency to lose their popularity.

According to The Textile Manufacturers' Journal, several larger selling agencies have opened their spring lines of dress ginghams, zephyrs, seersuckers, madras, krinkles, cheviots and shirtings.

MEN WANT AMERICAN STYLES IN THEIR CLOTHES

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—During the past few weeks several English clothing manufacturers have had representatives in the local market with their garment samples. While some interest was displayed, it was mostly for obtaining information.

The sales made were principally on overcoats, and were intended only to add a few imported garments to the lines regularly offered. The English salesmen learned that the majority of retailers in the larger cities of the United States prefer American styles.

A local manufacturer said that foreign competitors will have to realize this still more and make their clothing which they intend selling here more on American lines, or else there will be little business developed in this country.

He also said that foreign ready-to-wear garments would not have to be seriously reckoned with by local merchants for some time to come.

LONDON STYLES FAVOR LOOSE ENDS FOR TIES

According to a London report there will be increased activity in the neckwear trade there this fall. The marked style tendency now is not toward color, but toward shape. The loose ended knot is favored, but many four-in-hands are also shown. Various shades of blue and gray constitute the color trend at present.

In London men are wearing either a jacket suit or a frock coat with a small black bow tie. The start with black will probably extend to other colors as the season continues.

It is thought, however, that this vogue will not be generally adopted, as it is entirely out of keeping with the fall ideas advanced by English haberdashers.

Once-overs and Ascots are being revived in a small way.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The United States ranks fourth as purchaser of English goods, with $146,000,000 last year.

The Bethlehem Steel Corporation is seeking bids in England and Ireland to build nine iron ore carriers of 15,000 tons dead-weight capacity.

The Canadian Government, in contract with the United Fruit Company of Nova Scotia, has established a new steamship line between Canada and England, in order to secure more satisfactory access to the English market.

The Chicago and Northwestern, with proceeds of $4,000,000 equipment trust certificates recently sold, will pay for switching engines, 2,000 gondola cars and 2,005 box cars.

WHITCOMB CO. IMPORT MUCH CORNED BEEF

Soaring Prices of Meats Bringing South American Product to the United States

Meat is going up, and up, with no end in sight.

This has led to a curious state of affairs. Corned beef, peculiarly a product of the United States, now is being imported from South America in great quantities, and Libby, McNeill & Libby, the Chicago packers, advise their representatives in Atlanta, H. H. Whitcomb & Burke Company, that nothing but the South American product now is to be had.

The quality is declared to be excellent. The steers of the Argentine prairies are fully equal in quality to those of our own Western ranges, and the only difference the consumer can detect is that instead of saying "U. S. Inspected and Passed," the labels bear the stamps, "Inspected under the Food and Drug Act of June 30, 1906"—in other words, the customs service now does the inspecting instead of the Bureau of Animal Industry.

Never before, so far as anyone remembers, has it been profitable to import tinned meats. This could take place only under exceptional conditions such as the present, when corned beef in 14-pound containers is quoted to retailers at $37 per dozen or thereabouts, while two years ago it was quoted at about $21.

Libby, McNeill & Libby were among the first to foresee the inevitable shortage of American meats and to establish a packing house on the other side of the equator. They now are reaping the benefit.

While it is believed that corned beef never before has been imported direct from South America, last year the same packers, after shipping large quantities of the product to Europe, reimported it at a profit because of a sudden bulge in prices in the United States.

Vienna sausage and potted ham, the Whitcomb company advises, have advanced 5 per cent in the past ten days, and pork sausage, pure, has advanced 28 per cent in three weeks.

Temporarily, the live stock market is depressed by the heavy shipments from the West, East and South, due to the great damage to the corn crop in the West and to the hay crop in the East. The shipments from the South were attracted by the high prices buyers paid when they made a "raid" on Southern cattle a month or so ago, which attracted the attention of the United States Government.

The Government warned the farmers of Georgia and Florida to keep their cattle, not deplete their herds, and to fatten them for market at home instead of selling them lean for fattening in the West and North.

NEW KIND OF PIPE LINE.

One of the most remarkable mechanical devices ever used in connection with the manufacture of paper is being installed at Orange, Texas. This is a "blower," more than a mile long, through which the waste yellow pine timber from a local lumber mill will be sent to a paper mill. The slabs as they come from the mill will be ground into small particles and forced by means of compressed air through the long pipe to the paper manufacturing plant. This paper mill is said to be the only plant in the world that makes paper from yellow pine pulp. It has a daily output of thirty-three tons of wrapping paper.

DEMAND FOR RAMIES TO IMPROVE IN THE SPRING

The fall linen season is shaping up well. The demand for ratines has hurt ramie linens, but it is pointed out that the former soil more easily and do not hold their shape as well as ramie suitings, and that a better demand for ramies is looked for next spring. Light blues, pinks and browns will lead the color demand for ramie goods.

ENGLISH TRADE GROWS.

The July statement of English Board of Trade shows increases of $17,436,500 in imports and $25,880,000 in exports. Imports of foodstuffs increased $8,875,000, and raw material about $5,000,000.

RUBBER FACTORY FOR BRAZIL.

Within a year the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company will have in operation in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, first big rubber factory to be established on the South American continent, to cost $1,300,000.

Women's Footwear Seen in Many Colors

Leather and Cloth Combinations Shown—Men's Shoes Made Along English Lasts.

Imported models on which fall and winter styles for women's evening slippers are based are leather and cloth color combinations, among which red, green, gray, white and champagne are to be featured in strap and colonial effects.

There is a tendency to drop cut steel buckles, and those of jet will be much used. Another popular buckle will be of oxidized silver, in colonial design, with a satin filler to match the panel.

Panel effects are featured in the smartest slippers. A model well thought of is of patent leather, has a modified duck bill, too, and a jet buckle filled with satin matching the narrow panel extending from the buckle to the side seam. The heel is full Louis-Cuban. Featured suede slippers are of taupe, also with color combinations.

Women's street shoes shown have the long French vamp and square throat combined with cloth top color combinations. They are made with a plain toe, are fitted with the full Louis-Cuban heel and are of the button variety.

Men's shoes for fall and winter are made along the straight, laced, English last, and the color tendency is toward dark tan and gunmetal. Low, flat heels are shown almost exclusively. The blucher style is taboo.

Arizona Grows Fine Egyptian Cotton

Salt River Valley Experiments Reach Stage Where Gin and Oil Mill Are Needed.

Excellent results are being obtained in the growing of long staple Egyptian cotton in the Salt River Valley of Arizona. Under the direction of Mr. E. W. Hudson, of the Department of Agriculture, the industry has come to include over 4,000 acres in planted cotton, yielding in most cases a net profit of $100 an acre.

While the severe drouth throughout the entire West has made inroads on every other crop, the Arizona cotton has prospered to such a degree that a ginning plant and an oil mill to make use of the cotton seed are to be established by the time the crop is ready.

The subcommittee of the American commission which has been making a study of cotton growing and cotton marketing in Egypt shows that not only can American methods applied to the raising of Egyptian cotton reduce the cost approximately 50 per cent, but that our progressive farmers, although handicapeed by the quality of our soil as compared with that of the Nile Delta, can bring our long staple cotton yield per acre up to that of Egypt's.

Long staple cotton brings from 21 to 25 cents a pound on the spot.

Already the irrigation system employed in the Delta lands has been employed in Arizona. The rest must be worked up by American intelligence and American industry, for Egypt with her antiquated methods of cultivation offers little further guidance.

FIRST BALE BRINGS 12 CTS. PER POUND IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Before the entrance to the Cotton Exchange the first bale of upland cotton grown in Chatham County was auctioned. The bale brought 12 cents a pound, 3 cents better than current values. The first bale was grown by W. M. Kennedy and ginned by Floyd & So. The staple graded good middling.

FANCY SHOE BUCKLES.

The wearing of elaborate slipper buckles was particularly noticeable during the Grand Semaine racing week, as the prevailing style of short skirts allows the entire shoe to be seen. The custom is now quite the craze, and many society people are adopting special buckle designs to be worn with various costumes. They are appearing daily with a different buckle to harmonize with each different gown.

MEN'S COLLARS ARE INVENTION OF A HOUSEWIFE

Ingenious Woman Contrived Familiar Article to Lessen Amount of Washing in Home.

The detachable collar now worn by men the world round was the invention of a thrifty housewife 83 years ago. It sprang from sheer necessity, and yet it was so simple an article of wearing apparel that its first maker never looked upon her production as an invention, and it is doubtful if the other early manufacturers thought of patenting the idea.

During the succeeding years, in which the manufacture of collars and their allied products has become a great industry in and around Troy, N. Y., the incident of the invention of the collar had almost been lost until recently brought to light by the unearthing of a family tradition.

It is now certain that Mrs. Hannah Lord Montague was the maker of the first detachable linen collar. Mr. Montague was engaged in the manufacture of fine shoes for women. He was a large man, very particular in matters of dress, and in those days before the invention of the sewing machine and before great public laundries were established, the making, washing and ironing of the shirts formed quite an item in the work of the household.

Mrs. Montague was resourceful, and in endeavoring to lighten her household duties she hit upon the idea of a detached collar, which could be fastened to a neckband of her husband's shirt and washed and ironed separately. Before this time, when the collar was soiled, the whole shirt had to be washed, but by this device two or three collars might be used to one shirt. Acting upon the idea which had come to her, Mrs. Montague went to the patch bag, selected a strip of white linen, which she cut and shaped to fit the neckband of her husband's shirt, sewed it, turned it inside out, and attached a narrow string of braid at either end to tie about the neck. This was the original string collar.

Thus through the resourcefulness of a woman the modern detachable collar was evolved.

A FREE TRIP

To Atlanta is available to the merchant who buys an adequate bill from the members of the Merchants' Association.

Write to

H. T. Moore
SECRETARY.
Rhodes Building,
Atlanta.

Write for our latest Catalogue. The leading merchants are adding the 5c and 10c departments. Why not one for your town?
McCLURE 10c CO., 47-49 S. Broad St.
Give Your "DIMES" a Chance

The Hirshberg Company
STATIONERY DRUGGISTS' SUNDRIES NOVELTIES BLANK BOOKS
Glendale Line
13-15-17 NELSON STREET ATLANTA

DIXIE PICKLE AND PRESERVING CO.
Manufacturers of
Pure Apple and Distilled Vinegar, Catsup, Pickles, Mustard, Pepper Sauce, Sauer Kraut, Jelly, Etc.
CANNED GOODS
364 to 378 Marietta Street, Atlanta, Ga.

HATS
Caps, Gloves, Umbrellas
QUALITY and VALUES
BROWN, PERRYMAN & GREENE CO.
ATLANTA

VOLLMER MANUFACTURING COMPANY
Moore Building
ATLANTA, GEORGIA
MAKERS OF FINE JEWELRY
Special Designs in Platinum
Engravers Diamond Setters Watchmakers
Specialists in Jewelry Repairing

U. S. CERTAIN CAMINETTI WILL SHARE DIGGS' FATE

Government Bends Every Effort to Speed Trial of Federal Immigration Commissioner's Son on the Charge of "White Slavery."

Former California State Architect, Facing Four to Twenty Years in Prison, Plans Appeal—Companion to Follow Suit if Convicted.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—Supremely confident after the conviction of Maury I. Diggs, former State architect, the United States authorities, prosecuting the famous "white slave" cases, which at one time threatened to disrupt President Wilson's Cabinet, are using every energy to speed the trial and obtain a similar verdict against Drew Caminetti, who was Diggs' companion in the sensational flight to Reno with Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris.

Diggs will be sentenced September 2. Under the verdict of the jury, the Judge can fix the penalty at from four to twenty years, and owing to the fact that virtually the same evidence that was introduced against Diggs will be introduced against Caminetti, leads the Government to believe that conviction is certain.

Diggs' attorneys have already announced they will carry the case to the highest court in the land. Should Caminetti be convicted, he, too, doubtless would appeal.

Diggs Gives $20 000 Bail.

Bail in the sum of $20,000 was readily furnished by Diggs' relatives when the amount was fixed by the court and was accepted by the United States Commissioner.

The case was one of the most spectacular ever tried in California. Diggs is a former State architect. Caminetti is a son of the United States Commissioner of Immigration. Both men are married and have families. Both are of high social standing in Sacramento.

Both men are considerably older that the girls with whom they eloped. The undisputed evidence in the case was that the intimate relations between Diggs and Miss Warrington and Caminetti and Miss Norris had become notorious in Sacramento. Families of both the young men were preparing to start criminal action against them to break these relations.

Then they and the girls disappeared. They were traced to Reno, where the two couples were living as men and wives in a rented bungalow. The men were charged with violations of the Mann anti-white slave act.

Blames Girls for Elopement.

Both Miss Warrington and Miss Norris charged that the men had threatened, cajoled and coerced them into making the trip to Reno. They declared that they had promised to obtain divorces from their wives in order to wed them.

Diggs, in his defense, pleaded that the girls were the persons responsible for the flight, that they had induced them to fly to Reno.

It was this attitude of hiding behind a woman's skirt that caused the most severe condemnation of Diggs. Great stress was laid on it by Theodore Roche, attorney for the Government, in his final appeal to the jury for conviction.

"This defendant," said Roche, "did not deny on the stand the truth of the essential facts we have shown. And then he comes before you and asks acquittal.

"Hides Behind Wife's Skirts."

"The defendant in a criminal case usually bases defense on the presumption of innocence, but this defendant relies on his own depravity. He comes into court covered with his own shame and hides behind the skirts of his wife and child.

"When these girls went to Reno their departure meant social ostracizement. Marsha Warrington went because she believed and trusted this man. She didn't desire money, dresses or presents. Her parents gave her these. But this man had promised her marriage, as Caminetti had promised Lola Norris.

"Those promises were never intended to be kept. What was intended was to abandon the girls in Reno. They never could have returned to Sacramento—and you know what that meant. But the alluring promise of marriage had been held out to them."

Scores Conduct in Home.

Attorney Roche was particularly severe with Diggs for the misconduct in his own home to which he testified yesterday. He had not been content, said Roche, with making an assignation house out of his office, but he was similarly to degrade the privacy of a home he shared with a virtuous and loving wife.

In seeking to establish that the trip was not premeditated and that the two girls had not been induced to take it by threats of scandal on one hand and promises of marriage on the other, Diggs willingly testified to his own misconduct and the embarrassments, domestic and business, into which it had led him.

His counsel in summing up the evidence did not palliate these acts.

"Paint this defendant as you will—a monster if you please," argued Robert Devlin, his senior counsel, "but tell me what motive he would have had in going out of the State for the purpose of accomplishing those things already accomplished.

"Counsel may characterize him as they please, and I may not differ with them. They say his act was shameless, and I may feel the same way about it, but it isn't white slavery."

This was the whole argumentative substance of the defense. There remained the rhetorical and the emotional appeals and, of course, they were not neglected. The girls were blamed for tempting the men. They were, called willing accomplices in what evil had been done, and the wisdom of trusting a woman scorned when she bears witness against the lover who has discharged her was called into question.

Southern Drawl an Opera Asset

Alabama Singer Lauds Accent

Sees Fame for Dixie Song Birds

Miss Neida Humphrey.

Miss Neida Humphrey, of Huntsville, Blames Laziness for Dearth of Divas.

HUNTSVILLE, ALA., Aug. 23.—The soft, musical voice of Southern women, which poets have raved about, others have envied, and the comic papers have made subject of satire, has a value in dollars, and it has an even greater value in the world of art.

So thinks Miss Neida Humphrey, of Huntsville, who has just returned home after a three-year course of voice culture under Caruso in New York.

Miss Humphrey, realizing the supreme demand for American prima donnas on the operatic stage, not only in this country, but in every capital in Europe, thinks there is a world of opportunity for the young women of her own section in this field.

"The Southern woman's voice," says Miss Humphrey, "possesses more natural musical qualities than the voices of any other women in the world. With proper cultivation that quality should make them the greatest opera stars. The world has long known of this quality, but the Southern women of talent have just refused to grasp their opportunities.

Blames Indolence in Part.

"And I guess the laziness so generally attributed to our people may have a great deal to do with it. Singing, I mean serious singing, is the hardest sort of work.

"There is hardly a girl of social position in the Southland who has not a smattering of musical education. The trouble is it's only a smattering. When they reached the point where singing meant real work they retired gracefully to other fields.

"But I believe that the time is not far off when the Southern girl of talent will realize the life she is overlooking and then I am certain that there will be girls of Dixie whose names will be just as famous as those of Farrar, Suzanne Adams and Louise Homer, all American born.

Miss Humphrey is very young and she is very, very pretty, but that is not all. She has a voice of remarkable power and dramatic quality, but withal she holds in it that soft sweetness that declares her home as plainly as it would be declared were she to walk on the stage waving the Stars and Bars.

Has Charmed the President.

She has already done things in music and she intends to do more. In New York she has sung before the most critical audiences in concert and has won their high approbation. It was she who charmed President Wilson and a distinguished gathering in New York recently at a concert.

In Chattanooga last May, during the reunion of the Confederate Veterans, she sang before the old soldiers and was given an ovation.

Miss Humphrey intends to return to New York in the fall to complete her studies. She has already been assured of an operatic engagement and Huntsville believes that it will soon boast an operatic celebrity.

Dweller in Desert Sees First Pine Tree

Full Grown Woman Is Mystified by Foliage—Also Takes Mountain Snow Bath.

CHICO, CAL., Aug. 23.—Miss Ilene Locey, of Visalia, cousin of Frank M. Moore, of this city, a grown woman, saw her first pine tree when she went with the Moores for an auto trip to the mountains.

She has resided long in the desert southland, and was not only pleased but mystified at the foliage and the fact that she could reach the snow-bound regions of the Sierra Nevadas inside of an hour's time.

The party left here especially to give Miss Locey an idea of the diversified climate of the Sacramento Valley and a snow bath in the higher altitude.

Tents Only Shelter For Toledo Families

City Is Growing So Rapidly That Builders Can Not Construct Houses Demanded.

TOLEDO, Aug. 23.—Because the city has not enough houses to rent and builders are not able to construct houses as rapidly as they are desired tents are being used as homes in Toledo.

Two tent colonies have been established in the city. In both districts occupants of the tents are owners of lots on which the temporary homes have been erected. The lots have been purchased as home sites and tents are serving as temporary homes.

The tent homes consist of living rooms, dining rooms and kitchens. Each has a flower and vegetable garden and one is equipped with a chicken park, a stable and outbuildings. Living rooms are convertible into bedrooms, and hammocks, stretched in the open, are used day and night.

SOUTH IS PAYING HEAVY TOLL FOR CANAL BENEFITS

Colonel Gailliard, of South Carolina, Breaks Down Under Tremendous Task.

More than any other section of the country, the South is expected to realize in prosperity and development by the opening of the Panama Canal. But the South is to pay its toll and pay for it dearly.

Just when the canal was an assured fact, Senator John T. Morgan, of Alabama, father of the Isthmian Waterway idea, died as a result of his years of ceaseless labor impressing the necessity of rthe canal on Congress.

Nok Lieutenant Colonel David Du Bois Gailliard, of South Carolina, the army engineer who dug the Culebra Cut, has had to abandon the scene of his triumph and return to the United States to give his nervous system, shattered by his work, a rest which it has needed for months.

And that is not all. From the zone the advices come that Colonel William L. Sibert, of Alabama, the army engineer in charge of the work on the great Gatun Dam, is on the point of a breakdown and it is extremely doubtful if he will be strong enough to stay in the zone to see his work completed.

Careers of Two Similar.

The careers of Colonel Sibert and Colonel Gailliard have been remarkably similar. Gailliard was born in South Carolina; Sibert, in Alabama. They entered West Point the same year and both graduated in 1884 among the first five men in their class.

After their graduation, both were sent to Willets Point and in 1908, when the canal work was put in the hands of the army engineers, Colonel Goethals immediately picked the two Southerners as his chief aides. Sibert was put in charge of the work on the Atlantic side, which included the building of the Gatun Dam, while Gailliard was in charge of the work in the interior of the zone.

That Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard had suffered a nervous breakdown was known only to a few of his intimate friends in the army. A few weeks ago when his condition became serious the matter was brought to the attention of General Bixby, the chief engineer in Washington, and by General Bixby called to the attention of Secretary of War Garrison, who immediately granted the stricken engineer a long leave of absence.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles F. Mason, Medical Corps, U. S. A., the director of the Ancon Hospital, in the Canal Zone; Mrs. Gaillard and Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard's young son came with him and went with him to Baltimore, where he will enter the John Hopkins Hospital. There he will be under the care of some of the most eminent specialists in nervous disorders in this country.

Leave Did Not Aid Him.

Colonel Gaillard was in New York less than two months ago after a six weeks' leave of absence that he had taken in the hope that the rest would benefit his health to the extent that he would be able to remain in the Canal Zone. He sailed from New York on June 27 last, again to take charge of the work in the Central Division.

Those who talked with him at that time remember that he expressed a desire to get away from the Isthmus as soon as his work was finished, but, he added, with a touch of sadness in his soft Southern voice, "When I do leave it will be with deep and sincere regret."

Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard is the first of the famous army engineers employed in the construction of the Panama Canal to be stricken as a result of his work. A few weeks ago Colonel William M. Black, Corps of Engineers, the chief of that branch of the service in this part of the United States, the officer who was head of the engineering board which solved the problem of raising the old battleship Maine, was in Panama and was Gaillard's guest.

Close Friends for Years.

The two officers have been intimate friends for years. During his stay at Empire, the headquarters of Colonel Gaillard, Colonel Black noted and realized that the builder of Culebra Cut needed a long and complete rest.

"Gaillard," said Colonel Black last night, "is one of the most wonderful organizers the army has developed. His work in the Canal Zone has been little short of marvelous. He laid out his plans in such a way that he got the maximum out of everything, especially in the handling of the railroad part of the work. He was also able within a few months after he took charge at Empire to double the work accomplished in a specified time. Some of the things that he did experienced railroad men had said were practically impossible."

Woman Given Job Of Cleaning Up State

Success in Making Tacoma a Spotless Town Causes Promotion in Service.

TACOMA, Aug. 23.—Because of her successful efforts to transform Tacoma into a "Spotless Town," Miss Arizona B. Wimple, food and market inspector, is to be rewarded with a bigger job—the cleaning up of the State of Washington.

This was the advice received here today from the Governor's office in Olympia, where it is said Miss Wimple is to be appointed State bakery and sanitary inspector.

Her methods in cleaning up Tacoma were simple and direct and included publicity as an aid in bringing about the desired reforms.

Frequent inspections of bakeries and other food dispensing establishments were made and the score announced in the newspapers.

Miss Wimple, who is young and pretty, will receive $4,000 a year from the State.

She is a graduate of the University of Michigan.

CANDLES BURNING AT WAKE SET HOUSE AFIRE

CALGARY, ALBERTA, Aug. 23.—A fire which started from candles set about a coffin at a wake, at the house of J. Selar, here burned the hair and eyebrows off the body of an aged woman. Portions of the face were charred.

Firemen extinguished the blaze.

WATCHING MAN WHO STOLE AND HID A FORTUNE

Detectives Shadowing Mail Thief Believed to Have Cached $40,000 After Robbery.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 23.—Charles Savage, a negro mail robber, released from the penitentiary in Leavenworth, is being shadowed by three detectives. He will be kept under watch constantly because somewhere is hidden $40,000 of the $50,000 in currency he stole five years ago from a registered mail pouch, and nobody except Savage knows where it is.

When Savage was released he was met at the door by his mother and a young woman to whom he was engaged before he was sent to prison. They came at once to Kansas City to see an uncle, who is dying.

"They needn't watch me," he said. "If they think I'm going to dig up $40,000 they're mistaken. I wish I knew where there was $40,000 buried."

"Isn't it queer that $2,000 in $20 gold certificates of the same series as stolen from the mail sack were found blowing around in the wind near your mother's home in South Leavenworth this spring?" Savage was asked.

"Yes, that's queer. I don't understand," he answered. "I read about that, and I figured it out that some person who lived in South Leavenworth had stolen that mail sack and hidden the money there, and the rain had washed away the dirt where it was buried, and the wind got at it and blew it away."

Employees' Pension Measure Approved

Pennsylvania Cities Are Permitted to Establish Fund for Faithful Municipal Workers.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—Under the provisions of an act passed by the Legislature, which Governor Tener has approved, this city is given authority to establish a municipal pension fund for employees. The act applies to all city employees who have given twenty years of service to the city.

The act provides that in the event of the creating of the fund every employee will be compelled to pay into the fund 1 per cent of his yearly salary.

The pension to be allowed the beneficiary will be equal to one-half of the average yearly salary received by him during the last two years before his retirement.

College Professor Seeks Laborer's Pay

Unable to Make Both Ends Meet, Teacher Resigns Chair In University.

BERKELEY, CAL., Aug. 23.—Unable to make both ends meet on a salary of $900 paid him by the University of California, Paul Boehncke, an instructor in the German department, has withdrawn from the faculty and is seeking a position in which he can support himself and family of two children.

During the last few summers Boehncke has managed to augment his meager salary by working as a plasterer at from $5 to $7 a day, or nearly twice the amount he was paid by the university.

Apache War in '80's Is Cause of Divorce

Husband Deserted Thirty Years Ago by Wife Who Didn't Like Wild West.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Geronimo and his wild hordes of Apaches, who terrorized New Mexico in the eighties, were the direct cause of a divorce suit which Allen L. Eaton begun yesterday in the Superior Court against Zuma E. Eaton.

The Eatons were married in Silver City, N. Mex., in 1886, when the Apache uprising was on. Mrs. Eaton, who hailed from Pittsburg, did not enjoy the wild Western life her married life entailed, and she deserted her husband.

Common Laborer Strikes Big Gold Vein

Ore Will Run $60,000 to Ton and Mine Is Largest in Southern Oregon.

MEDFORD, OREG., Aug. 23.—What is reported as the biggest gold strike made in Southern Oregon has been reported by Elmer Higginbotham on the mine owned by him and M. G. Womack on Kane's Creek. The ore will run $60,000 to the ton, according to assays of samples made here.

Higginbotham had been a common laborer for many years until Womack offered to "grub-stake" him on a prospecting trip up Kane's Creek.

BERI BERI CAUSED BY RICE DIET, SAYS EXPERT

Special Cable to The American.

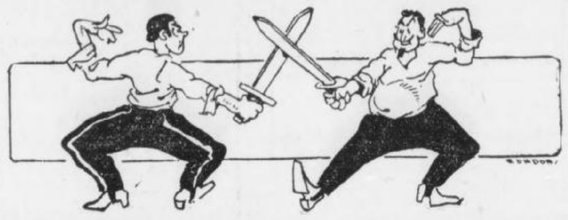
BERLIN, Aug. 23.—The Berlin Medical Association reports that the well-known investigator of beri beri, Dr. Max Moszkowski, finds, after a remarkable experiment, that the disease is caused by the use of rice.

Dr. Moszkowski for 138 days subsisted almost entirely upon rice. All the symptoms of beri beri manifested themselves.

At the close of the experiment an injection of serum containing an extract of rice resulted in a complete recovery.

Hunnicutt Won in First Round

Beat Bravo With Wooden Sword



How Atlanta's Broadsword Champion Worsted French Fencing Master.

Time was when the prize fight was not au fait, when in the best families, and even in the second best, and maybe in the third, they frowned down upon the pugilistic art as brutal and degenerate. Then it was that the youn bloods turned to cockfighting and fencing for the gladiatorial features of their lives, and were satisfied.

And that time was not so very long ago. Calvin W. Hunnicutt, who is Atlanta's oldest citizen, revived them in memory yesterday, when he fell to the young bloods turned to cockfight-between Charley White and Frank Whitney, with the remark that things were not like this of yore.

Of course, he had a dueling story of his own to tell, and he told it—of how he fought an arrogant French fencing master in a combat with wooden swords, and how all Atlanta looked on and cheered him as its champion.

It occurred before the war, when all good things, it seems, occurred. It occurred just at the beginning of the war, and had its effect in keeping Mr. Hunnicutt out of that conflict.

"There had been talk of war, war, war pretty generally," he said. The trouble clouds were thick and black, and we organized here in Atlanta a cavalry troop that we called the Fulton Dragoons. Captain Wilson was our officer, I was first lieutenant, and C. B. Whaley, my best friend, was first sergeant.

"All went well at first, and things were pleasant. But after a while politics began to leak in, as inevitably it will with all volunteer military bodies. Everybody knows everybody else so well, you see, that very naturally jealousy comes in. Anyhow, when the time came for the election of a captain for a new term, Whaley and I, backing Wilson, lost out, because the other man promised horses to all members of the troop. Then dissatisfaction grew and the organization loosened.

"The new captain and his great ally, Second Lieutenant Williams, were full of ideas as to how to run a military organization, and began to put these ideas into play. That made more dissatisfaction for no volunteer soldier likes to be driven by men who were their friends and associates.

"One of their ideas was the importation of a fencing teacher to instruct the men in broadsword use. Now Whaley and I had practiced considerably with the broadsword, and were rather expert in its use, but we said nothing of it to the captain and his friends.

"Well, the fencing master came, a Frenchman from Mobile. He was a flourishing, affected sort of fellow, and considerable of a boaster. Not long after he was here, he broke off teaching and began to talk about his own great skill and to show it off.

"One day he challenged all of us.

" 'Nobody here can touch me with his sword,' he announced. 'I don't fear to let any of you try.' And he flourished his sword.

"Whaley and I decided to take him on, and I went to him. He laughed at me. But I insisted, and the date was set for our combat. That there should be no bloodshed—because we were going to do some furious fencing, it seemed—I put a negro of mine to work making two wooden swords, or sticks. These were to be our weapons.

"Somehow the tidings that there was to be a fight got abroad. Atlanta was not as large as it is now, but it was a right smart town even then, and when the day for the fight came, everybody turned out.

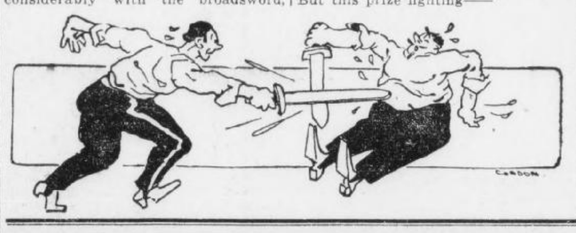
"We had planned to have the duel in a theater, owned in the days of old Atlanta by a man named Williams. The place was packed, and I began to be a little nervous over the public nature of the affair.

"We squared off, and the crowd settled back in the seats for a long and interesting fight. But it wasn't for long. The Frenchman came at me with a flourish, and I had a flourish to match his. Thence I made a thrust at him, the thrust that we know technically as the point tierce. It went through his guard, and to his body. If we had been fighting with real swords, my opponent would have been run through.

"All Atlanta laughed. The Frenchman had pretty generally advertised his ability to fight, and everybody was there. However, there were one or two persons who didn't like the way the fight came out, particularly the new captain of the dragoons and his ally. After the fight they began working to get me to resign. The duel, they claimed everywhere, might have an effect in breaking up discipline. And so, with their dissatisfaction showing plain, I resigned.

"The Frenchman we didn't see after the half minute duel. If the dragoons learned broadsword fencing, they learned it from somebody else.

"It's a pity the art of fencing does not survive in the popular fancy. It is clean, beneficial and interesting. But this prize fighting——"



LOOKS FOR BODY OF FATHER LOST IN ICE 43 YEARS

Miss Edith Randall, of Boston, Expects to Find Corpse on Glacier at Foot Mt. Blanc.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Miss Edith Randall, of this city, has gone to Chamonix, Switzerland, one one of the strangest errands known. She hopes to find in the glacier there the body of her father, who lost his life climbing on Mont Blanc forty-three years ago. Ten others were lost with him in a snowstorm near the summit. All told, two Americans, one Scotchman and eight guides and porters died.

Five of the bodies were recovered. It is expected by guides that the six others will be delivered up by the glacier this year.

Scientists are interested as it may supply evidence to prove their theories on the speed of the annual march of glaciers toward the valleys.

Miss Randall's father, John Randolph, a Boston banker, was fifty-four when he lost his life in 1870.

Last year Miss Randall came to Chamonix, as the ice axe and several small articles relonging to Mr. Randall had been found by guides at the foot of the Glacier des Bossons.

Many Americans and English Alpinists, as well as guides, joined in the search for the body, but without result. All hope for better luck this summer.

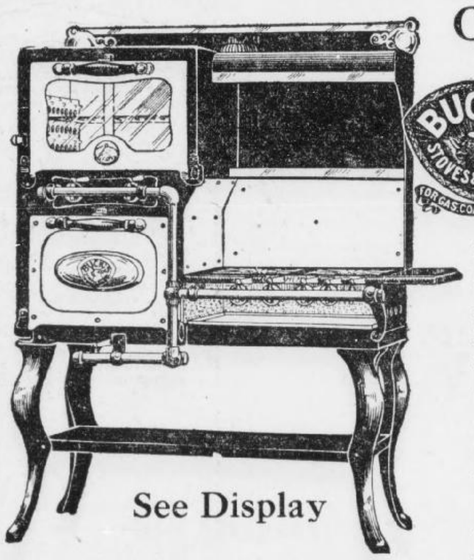
"Back on the Job"

again and very quickly, too, if you will only let Hostetter's Stomach Bitters help the digestion to become normal, keep the liver active and the bowels free from constipation. These are absolutely necessary in order to maintain health. Try it to-day but be sure it's

HOSTETTER'S Stomach Bitters

25% DISCOUNT

On All BUCK'S Gas Stoves and Ranges



See Display

Buck's—the most conveniently arranged, the most sanitary, and certainly the most economical gas user made—comes in for a tremendous discount this week.

They are here—anything from the small stove to the most elaborate range—and all are carrying the same big discount. Discard your old, worn, smoking, fuel-consuming cooking machine to-morrow, and let us replace it with one of these modern stoves or ranges.

The savings of your fuel bill will soon pay for any BUCK'S you may select.

Connections Free--$1 a Week Buys Your Choice

That's fair enough, isn't it? We will actually put it in your kitchen—ready to turn on the gas—and you can pay the bill at one dollar per week. Come in to-morrow and take your choice. See our big Mitchell street window display.

Rhodes-Wood FURNITURE COMPANY

COMPLETE HOUSEFURNISHERS

103-5-7-9-11 Whitehall Street, Corner Mitchell

EXTRA

HEARST'S SUNDAY AMERICAN

EXTRA NORTH GEORGIA

VOL. I. NO. 21. Copyright, 1913, by The Georgian Company. ★★★ ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY, AUGUST 24, 1913. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

BOLL WEEVIL COSTS SOUTH BILLION; ZONE CURE URGED

Senator Smith of South Carolina Secures Government Expert's Figures on Total Estimated Ravages During Last 17 Years.

Shows How $107,539,127 Yearly Cost of Proposed Remedy Could Be Counteracted by Diversified Crops and United States Aid.

(The zone strip to which Senator Smith refers as a remedy for the boll weevil, as proposed, would begin in Tennessee and run down through Alabama and part of Florida.)

By ELLISON D. SMITH.
(United States Senator From South Carolina.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—A few weeks ago I asked some of the officials in the Department of Agriculture to give me an estimate of the losses the farmers of the South have suffered as the result of the boll weevil. The figures furnished me are startling. From the report I make the following extract:

"The only adequate way of arriving at the losses due to the boll weevil is by studying the average production per acre by States, comparing years of non-infestation with years of infestation. It is quite noticeable that every State by the third year of infestation has shown a decided reduction in average yield per acre.

"This average production is used in connection with the acreage planted to obtain an estimate in money value of the loss from the boll weevil to the producers. This is only the primary loss and is turned over and over again as it reacts upon ginners, oil mill men, merchants, bankers, property values, manufacturers of the textile and the final consumers.

"The total loss to producers obtained by this method from 1895 through 1912 is $841,521,135, or an average during the 18 years of $46,751,174 per annum, with the loss now reaching over $100,000,000 per annum.

These Only Obvious Losses.

"Only the more obvious losses from the ravages of this pest can even be estimated. These are the losses in productivity suffered by the producers and the losses in business of the first processes in manufacture.

"Figures are presented to show the losses to the planter, the ginner and the oil mills as follows, for the period from 1895 to 1912:

Loss to the planters	$841,521,135
Loss to the ginners	17,446,295
Loss to the oil mills	72,270,421
Total	$931,237,852

"To these must be added losses in business suffered by cotton buyers and brokers, merchants, bankers and cotton mills, the loss in property values, the ultimate effects upon the consumer."

In other words, officials of the Department of Agriculture estimate that the loss to the South from the boll weevil between 1895 and 1912 has been considerably more than $1,000,000,000. This is staggering.

The Government has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars to stamp out the boll weevil, but without avail. The Government experts, entomologists, farm demonstration agents and others have done splendid work in teaching the farmers better methods of cultivation, rotation of crops, etc., but so far as checkmating the boll weevil is concerned they themselves admit that their work has been a failure.

Moves Eastward Steadily.

The weevil continues its march eastward at a steady pace each year, and in no section where it has made its appearance has any method been discovered of minimizing the damage done by it.

Unless something is done it will not be very long until the entire cotton area of the South is infested.

Of course, some cotton can be grown in the area infested by the boll weevil, but the yield per acre and per farm is greatly reduced, while the cost of production is greatly increased. I am told by a member of Congress who owns a large plantation in an infested section that it costs just about twice as much to produce a bale of cotton now as it cost before the boll weevil came. Many others have given me testimony to the same effect.

When one undertakes to estimate the loss to the South during recent years because of this little insect, and then tries to estimate the probable loss in the future, the result must be appalling.

I have been deeply interested in the boll weevil for a number of years. I have watched its spread from the time it made its first appearance in

Continued on Page 6, Column 4.

New Cancer Cure Arouses Germany

Kaiser's Subjects Have Cornered Supply of Mesothorium, Found in U. S. and Brazil.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Mesothorium, the new cure for cancer, is causing great excitement in Germany, according to Dr. F. D. Donoughe, of Boston, who has just returned from the Cancer Congress at Brussels and the Medical Congress in London. German towns have subscribed large sums for the purchase of mesothorium, which is found in Colorado, the Carolinas and Brazil.

A rayless product of therum, it becomes active through transformation into radio-therum. The price, formerly one-sixth that of radium, recently has become higher. Hungary and Germany have purchased the supply of mesothorium available until 1915. It is said to be a dependable cure for certain forms of cancer.

Sir Herbert Tree's Cast Stirs British Ire

Americans in 'Joseph and His Brethren' Win Noted Playwright's Praise.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Antagonism has been aroused in London theatrical circles because Americans are to play the principal roles in Sir Herbert Tree's production of "Joseph and His Brethren."

Sir Herbert said:

"The Americans are wonderful in whatever they attempt to do. I have the greatest faith in their powers, and, without wishing to enter on a comparison between American and English methods, I must say I think Maxine Elliott will be a peerless Zeulika, and George Relph a most romantic Joseph."

Caruso Sadly Says: 'My Star Is Dimming'

Tenor Thinks Public Soon Will Desert Him for Young and Brilliant Star.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, Aug. 23.—Caruso, who is taking the cure with his eldest son at Monte Catini, is in a philosophical mood. To a newspaper man he said:

"It is about time the public ceased to take an interest in me. There are plenty of young stars rising who soon will shine with dazzling brilliancy in the firmament of art. Mine is dimming; don't you think so?"

Then he sadly shook his head and walked slowly away.

HEARTHSTONE 200 YEARS OLD FOUND IN MINNESOTA

ST. PAUL, MINN., Aug. 23.—The hearthstone used by early French voyagers who made their headquarters in the stone house at Taylors Falls, in Interstate Park, was found by workmen excavating in the foundations for relics. The house is thought to have been built 200 years ago.

NEGRO VILLAGE DESTROYED BY MOB OF WHITES

Buildings Are Blown Up by Heavy Dynamite Charge and Then Torch Is Applied.

NO CASUALTIES REPORTED

Attack of Merchant on Young Man Cause of Outbreak—Black Makes Escape.

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—Greenough, a negro village just over the line in Mitchell County, has been partially destroyed by a mob of white men. No deaths have been reported.

It appears that John Davis and his brother, young white men, had advanced some money to Bradley Brothers, negro proprietors of the leading store of Greenough. The negroes failed to return the money, and when the white men went to collect, a difficulty arose, in which one of the negroes struck John Davis with a scantling, knocking him unconscious. The Davis boys escaped to their home and reported the difficulty and the action of the negroes. At night a mob of white men asesmbled and marched on the village, armed with dynamite and such firearms as could be procured.

When the village was reached, it was found the Bradleys had escaped. A charge of dynamite was exploded under the store and it was completely demolished, together with the stock of goods. Other stores were fired and many shots emptied into negro houses. The fire was returned by the blacks for a short time, but without effect.

The Bradleys have not been seen since the outbreak, and further trouble is not expected by the whites.

LEO M. FRANK as he appeared in court yesterday. The defendant was calm under the terrific denunciation of the prosecutor and watched Mr. Dorsey intently through the many hours that the Solicitor consumed in declaring the defendant one of the greatest of criminals. He seemed scarcely more moved than the spectators.

DORSEY DEMANDS DEATH PENALTY FOR FRANK IN THRILLING CLOSING PLEA

Solicitor's Scathing Address Halted by Adjournment---Had Spoken for More Than Six Hours---Cheered by Big Crowd Outside the Courthouse.

PRISONER CALM, WIFE SOBS AS STATE CHARGES MURDER

Slain Girl's Mother Breaks Down, but Defendant Faces Spectators With Hint of Smile---Case May Go to the Jury by Monday Noon.

Insisting upon the application of the Mosaic law of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey demanded the life of Leo M. Frank yesterday in expiation of the murder of Mary Phagan on April 26.

Nothing less than the death penalty would satisfy justice, declared the Solicitor in one of the most bitter and impassioned adesses a Georgia courtroom audience ever has heard.

It was the closing argument of the State before the fate of Frank is placed in the hands of the twelve jurors. It was interrupted by adjournment at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The Solicitor had been speaking since 9 o'clock in the forenoon and was exhausted by his efforts. His address had begun at 3:30 the afternoon before and had consumed a total of six and a half hours.

Crowd Greets Him With Cheers.

When, weak with fatigue, he asked for a recess and court adjourned until Monday morning at 9 o'clock, a great crowd awaited him outside to cheer him and rend the air with their yells because of the magnificent fight he has put up to send Frank to the gallows for the murder of the little factory girl.

The demonstration was spontaneous and was of greater magnitude than that of the night before. He had aroused to the highest pitch the admiration of the populace for the earnest and determined battle he was conducting for the conviction of the man he deemed guilty of the murder.

Men in front of the courthouse cheered with all their might as Dorsey came in sight from out the courtroom doors. Men from across the street took up the cheer and the little Solicitor was given the demonstration of a governor or some other popular hero as he quickly tucked his books and records under his arms and escaped through the crowd into his law offices in the Kiser building.

Hurls Charge Directly at Frank.

If his tongue was tipped with venom and bitterness, it can hardly be said that the Solicitor was not sincere and in earnest. Every word and every pharse that he uttered during his long speech—the longest of the trial—carried with it the conviction that the speaker was in deadly earnest.

Much of the time he was talking directly at the prisoner and was accusing him of murder and other crimes unmentionable. He looked Frank right in the eye. He leveled his finger at the defendant sitting calmly between his mother and his beautiful wife. He called him a "red-handed murderer" and a pervert. Frank did not flinch.

During a brief intermission, Frank even walked in front of the spectators with the suggestion of a smile on his face. If there was any fear of the verdict in his heart, it was kept buried there, far out of sight of human eyes.

Likens Frank to Oscar Wilde.

Dorsey compared the defendant with that prince of perverts, Oscor Wilde, and there was never a flicker of Frank's eye nor a change in his quiet, speculative expression. Dorsey told of other men who had possessed good reputations and yet had been guilty of the most heinous offenses—Theodore Durant, of San Francisco; Pastor Richeson, of Boston; Mayor McCue, of Charlottsville, Va.; Henry C. Beattie, of Richmond; Dr. Crippen, and others. In the same connection he mentioned the name of Judge Iscariot and Benedict Arnold, both of whom, he said, were supposed to be of good character until they had become traitors and betrayers.

"Character isn't worth a cent when you've got the evidence before you," shouted the Solicitor after he had compared Frank with some of the most infamous persons he could call to mind.

Prisoner Encourages His Wife.

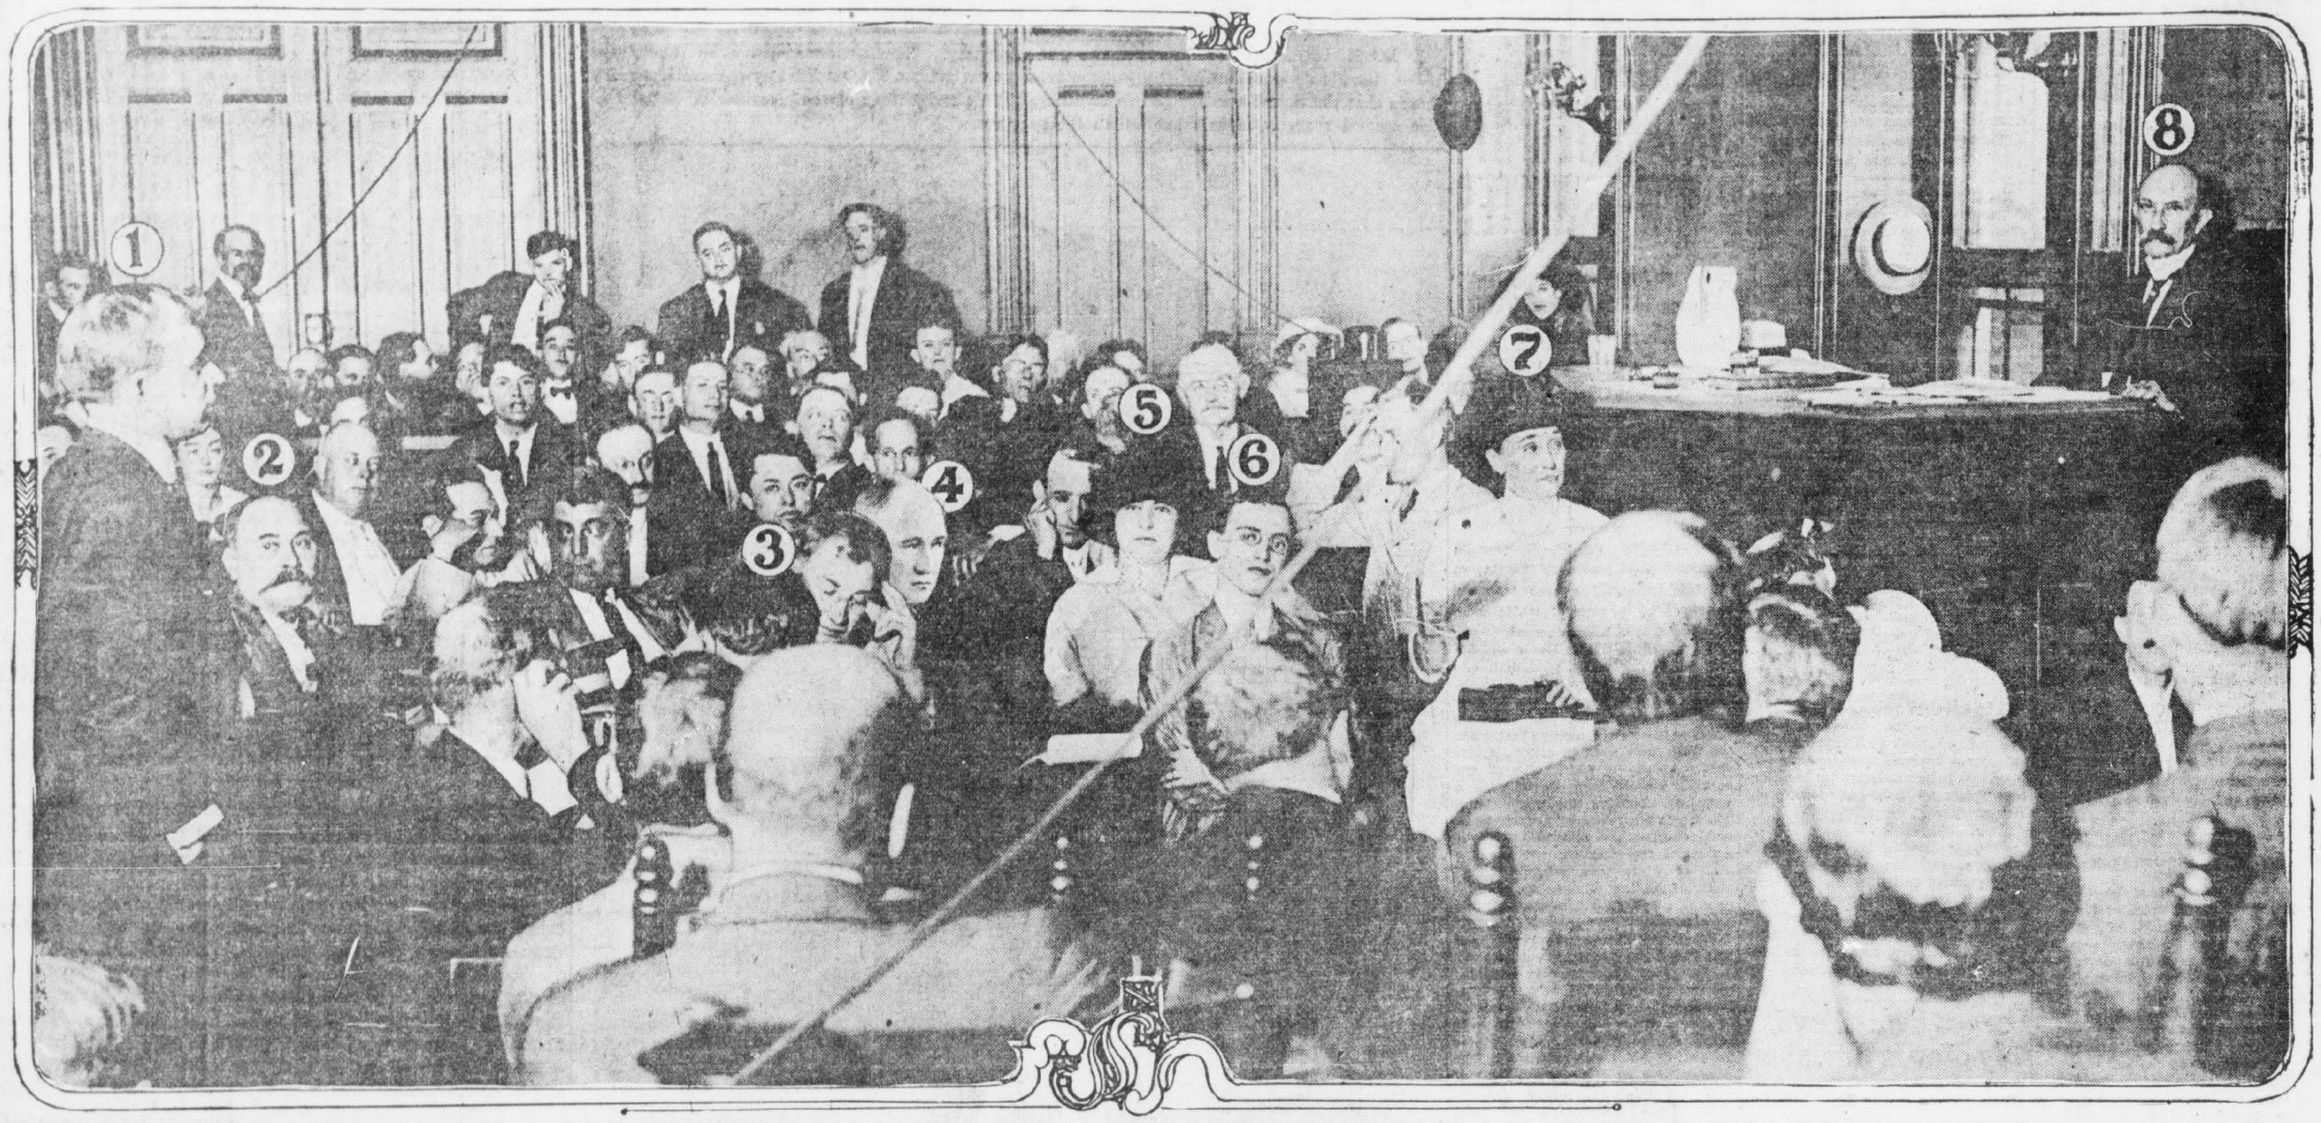
His denunciation at times was so unsparing and his words so like a physical blow that it seemed that the prisoner must quail before him. But Frank maintained his composure. In fact, during a lull in the storm of invective he occasionally would lean toward his wife or his mother and whisper a few words, accompanying them with a smile. For all that his manner betokened, he might be talking of some amusing incident that had just occured to him.

If the Solicitor's words failed to affect Frank, he was probably the only person in the courtroom who did not feel the intensity and the grim determination behind each sentence and each accusation that came from the lips of the State's representative.

So overcome at Dorsey's blunt and grewsome description of the torturous manner in which the pretty little factory girl had

DEATH PENALTY DEMANDED FOR LEO M. FRANK

A TENSE moment in the courtroom yesterday when Solicitor Dorsey was denouncing Frank in his dramatic plea to the jury. Numbered in the picture are (1) Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey, (2) Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford, (3) Attorney Reuben Arnold of counsel for the defense, (4) Luther Z. Rosser, who has had charge of the battle for Frank's life; (5) Mrs. Leo M. Frank, wife of the defendant; (6) Leo M. Frank, whose rate will soon rest with the jury; (7) Mrs. Rea Frank, his mother, and (8) Judge L. S. Roan.



DORSEY CHEERED AFTER GREAT CLOSING SPEECH

been attacked and strangled to death was Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan, that she collapsed utterly and wept. Frank's young wife was affected by the scene and she laid her head upon the shoulder of her accused husband and cried for several minutes.

The very manner in which Frank had borne himself during the long trial was used by the Solicitor against him. Such remarkable nerve and effrontery he declared he never had witnessed before in a court of justice. Dorsey thought it merely was one of the outcropping characteristics of the defendant's perverted moral and intellectual nature. He compared him to the brilliant Wilde, whose effrontery and insouciance in the midst of charges of unspeakable conduct was a mater of world-wide knowledge.

When he was interrupted by adjournment, the Solicitor was far from the end of his argument. He had taken longer than he expected. He had paused longer on certain aspects of the cast than he had inteded. It seemed probable that he would require most of Monday forenoon to conclude his address.

Scoffs at Frank's Alibi.

Attacking the main points of Frank's defense, he came out boldly with the declaration that Frank's alibi was no alibi at all. He said that the whole of Frank's alibi practically hinged on the testimony of Miss Helen Curran, of No. 160 Ashby street, who had testified that she saw the young factory superintendent waiting for his car at Whitehall and Alabama streets Saturday afternoon at 1:10 o'clock.

At this point Dorsey dramatically brought forth the statement of Frank which he had made on the first day that he was detained at police headquarters.

"Listen to this," he said shaking the paper before the eyes of the jurymen. Then he quoted from Frank's statement which read:

"I didn't lock the door that morning. The mail was coming up. I locked it when I left for lunch at 1:10."

Makes Charge of Perjury.

"There goes your alibi," said the Solicitor. "It was punctured by your own statement made before you realized the importance of the time element."

Dorsey characterized as perjuries the statement of the Curran girl that of Miss Fleming, a former stenographer; that of E. F. Holloway, day watchman, and that of Charley Lee.

He threw the suspicion of wrongdoing upon the character of the young woman, Miss Sarah Barnes, who dramatically had expressed her conviction of Frank's innocence on the stand and had declared her willingness to die in his place. The Solicitor overlooked nothing tending to point the hand of guilt toward Leo Frank.

Dorsey mentioned time and again the fact that the defense had failed to cross-examine the State's character witnesses. He said that he had dared them to do it, and that they had been afraid of the disclosures that would ensue.

Asserts Shirt Was "Plant."

He charged that the bloody shirt at Newt Lee's house, the pay envelope, the rope and the club on the first floor of the factroy were plants.

He said that Frank's statement in a letter to his unable, written the afternoon of the crime, that "nothing startling had happened," while intended to be self-serving, was in reality self-accusing.

Referring to the notes found by the girl's body, he called attention to the use of the word "did." He said that Conley always said "done," and that if "did" was used in the notes they must have been dictated by someone else.

He added that the reference in the notes to the toilet on the second floor was a strong indication that the murder had been committed there.

The Solicitor charged that Frank had been endeavoring to force his attentions upon the Phigan girl for weeks and that his advances culminated in the brutal attack of Memorial Day.

Gives His Theory of Crime.

Resisted again, Frank, in brutish fury, struck donw the girl, accomplished his purpose, and then, realizing his position, sought to escape being identified with the attack by winding a rope about the girl's neck and strangling her to death, according to the graphic words of the prosecutor.

As the hour passed noon, the Solicitor began to show signs of fatigue. His spirit was as indomitable and fiery as ever, but his features grew a bit haggard, and the weeks of tireless work on the case began to display themselves more plainly on his face.

At 1:30 he asked if there might not be a recess, as he was about exhausted. There was a side bar conference between the attorneys for both sides, and Judge Roan announced that adjournment would be taken until Monday.

It was thought likely that Dorsey would finish about noon. The judge's charge probably will occupy an hour or more, and then the case will go into the hands of the twelve jurors.

AUTOIST IS RUN OVER BY HIS OWN MACHINE

JOLIET, ILL., Aug. 23.—Because he cranked his automobile while it was in gear, Harry Lewis, a Joliet banker, was run over and badly injured. Lewis was in a hurry to take some friends to the Union station and neglected to inspect his gears, the machine would not spark the first few whirls of the crank, so he opened the throttle wider, one of the friends put on the exhilarator to help matters, and now Lewis has been two weeks in the hospital.

Policewoman Uses Her Stare as Club

Declares She Has No Trouble With Mashers After One Stern Glare.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Squelch the masher with a look. You don't need a whistle like the Boston women; hatpins do not make good weapons, and a club should be used only in a tight squeeze.

This is the opinion of two of Chicago's policewomen, both long in the business of protecting women.

"I haven't had any trouble with men on the beach this year, even those who didn't know I was a policewoman," said Officer Mary Boyd, who is in charge of the Thirty-ninth street bathing beach. "All you have to do when a man speaks to you insultingly is to look at him. He turns and runs."

Woman Toper Has Thirst Amputated

Obstruction in Her Throat Was Believed Cause of Her Longing For Alchohol.

LIMA, OHIO, Aug. 23.—Mary Calahan, 32, submitted to a surgical operation in the Chief of Police's office today, and it is hoped Mary's thirst was cut out, literally and figuratively.

Several years ago she was shot in the jaw. A splintered bone lodged against her palate, creating a continuous desire for drink. She insists the desire was for strictly alcoholic drink and that she had tried grape juice in vain. Since that time Mary and her tickling bone have given the police a ticklish time.

Chief Ernest May consulted with City Physician Steer. Between them they decided on the operation.

Offers to Serve Out Hawthorne's Term

Pastor-Classmate of Author-Convict Says it Would be 'Utmost Pleasure.'

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—The Rev. William Davis, of Everett, a member of the class of 1867 of Harvard and an evangelistic clergyman, has written his classmates, Julian Hawthorne and William James Morton, in the Federal Prison at Atlanta, offering to serve the remainder of their sentences, and states to do so would give him "the utmost pleasure."

EX-BANDIT GETS RELIGION; COLE YOUNGER CONVERTED

LEES SUMMIT, MO., Aug. 23.—Cole Younger, once a bandit, became a member of the Christian Church at a revival meeting to-night.

Dorsey's Closing Address a Scorching Attack on Frank

Hurls Charges of Perversion and Murder in Face of Defendant While Wife Bows Head and Weeps.

Probably a more stirring, denunciatory, and at the same time incisive and analytical argument, has never been heard in a Georgia court than Solicitor Dorsey's closing address in the case against Leo M. Frank. Here it is as the Solicitor delivered it:

Dorsey moved over to the railing of the jury box as he opened his speech.

"Your honor and gentlemen of the jury," he said, "I was speaking to you yesterday of the character of this defendant. This defendant has not a good character. The conduct of the counsel in this case in failing to cross-examine, in refusing to cross-examine these twenty young ladies, refutes effectively and absolutely the claim of the defendant that he has a good character.

Says Defense Had Right to Refute Charge.

"As I said, if this man had a good character, no power on earth could have kept him and his counsel from asking those young girls where they got their information and why they dsai what they did. Now that's a common sense proposition.

"You know as twelve men seeking to get at the truth that they did not ask those half-brained fanatics, as Mr. Arnold calls them, questions about Frank's character because they were afraid, and those witnesses, as good as any the defense put up, were unimpeached and are unimpeachable. And you tell me that because the good people come here from Washington street and testify to his good character is that he has one!

"It very often happens that a man's wife is the last person to know als wrongdoing. Sometimes the man uses charitable and religious organizations to cover up and hide his evil self. Very often his guilty conscience turns him that way. Many a man is a wolf in sheep's clothing.

"Many a man is a white sepulcher on the outside and absolutely rotten within. But supose he has a good character. David had a good character until he put Uriah in the forefront of battle that he might be killed that he could get his wife. Judas Iscariot had a good character among those Twelve Men until he accepted those 30 pieces of silver.

"I have shown you that under the law they had a right to bring out all those things. You saw they dared not do it. Let's see what the law says. I'll read here from the Eighty-third Georgia Report:

"'Whenever any persons have evidence in their possession and they fail to produce it, the strongest presumption arises that it would be hurtful if they did, and their failure to produce evidence is a circumstance against them.

"You don't need any lawbook to tell you that. It's plain common sense.

Recalls Case of Oscar Wilde.

"Benedict Arnold was brave. He enjoyed the confidence of all the people and those in charge of the Revolutionary War until he betrayed his country. Since that day his name has been a synonym for infamy. Oscar Wilde, an Irish knight, a brilliant author, whose works will go down through time, gave us 'De Profundis,' which he wrote while in jail—a remarkable work—yet when the Marquis of Queensberry discovered that there was something wrong between Wilde and his son, Wilde had the effrontery and the boldness to sue him for damages. A suit in retaliation resulted in the conviction of Wilde for criminal practices. Yet, wherever the English language is spoken the effrontery of the testimony on cross-examination of this man—an effrontery typical of this sort (turning to Frank)—will always be a matter for deep study for lawyers and for people interested in that sort of degeneracy.

"He had a wife and two children. His shame probably never would have been brought to light but for the fact that he had the effrontery and the boldness to start a suit. It ended in his being sent to prison.

"And the prosecution of Oscar!

"He was a man who led the esthetic movement. He was a scholar and a literary man. His cross-examination was a thing to be read with pride by every lawyer. The whole world took notice of his prosecution, and yet when Oscar Wilde was an old man, gray-haired and tottering to the grave, he confessed to his guilt. Prominent? Why, he was one of the most prominent men in the world! Why, he came to America and founded the esthetic movement here. He raised the sunflower from a weed to the dignity of a flower. He was handsome—one of the handsomest men to be found. He had moral courage, yet he was a pervert, proved and confessed.

"There was a bandsome man in San Francisco, a member of this defendant's sect—Abe Ruef, a man who possessed all of the faculties of highest intelligence, yet he corrupted even Smith, and his corruption of the poor girls with whom he came in contact brought him to the penitentiary. I have already referred to Durant. His character did not prevent the jury from convicting him. This defendant's character, like Durant's, is not worth a cent when the case is proved.

"And crime is alike with the rich and poor, ignorant and learned. Take an ignorant man like Jim Coniey. He is the man who commits the petty crimes, but take a man with high intellect, like this defendant—this intellect, when put to the right use, leads to glorious accomplishments; but if these faculties be put to the wrong use, it brings ruin to the man in the commission of the most diabolical crimes. Look at McCue, the Mayor of Charlottesville, Va. He was a man of broad intellect and high education, but, despite his intellect, despite his splendid character, he tired of his wife and shot her, and the jury, composed of Virginia gentlemen, broad-minded and fair, despite McCue's good character, found him guilty and sent him to a felon's grave.

"Take the case of Richeson, the preacher of Boston. Here was a man of highest intellect and with a brilliant future. He was engaged to one of the wealthiest and most beautiful girls of Boston, but entanglements with a poor little girl caused him to fear for his good name and he so far forgot his good character as to put this poor little girl to death. Even after his conviction in the last days of his hope he committed an act upon himself which he thought would draw the pity of the Governor and save his life. But a Massachusetts jury and a Massachusetts Governor were courageous enough to let that man's life go. They had the courage which will make every right-thinking man rigat by the laws of God and man and of his country.

"Take Beattie—Henry Clay Beattie, of Richmond. He was of splendid family, of wealth and proved a good character, though he did not possess it. He took the mother of his 12-month-old baby out in an automobile and shot her. He was cool, calm and deliberate. He laughed and he joked, but he joked too much, and although the detectives were maligned and abused and a large slush fund was used, a courageous, honest Virginia jury upheld justice and sent that man to death. And he never confessed, but he left a note saying he was guilty.

Likens Frank To Dr .Crippen.

"Crippen, of England, a man of high standing and recognized ability, killed his wife because of infatuation for another woman. He hid her where he thought she would not be found, as this man (pointing to Frank) thought the body of that little girl would not be found. But murder will out, and be it said to the glory of old England this man paid the penalty of death.

"Gentlemen, you have an opportunity that comes to few men. Measure up to it. Will you do it? If not, let your conscience say why not.

"But you say you've got an alibi. Let's examise that proposition. Here's an authority: 'An alibi as a defense involves the impossibility of the prisoner's presence at the scene of the offense at the time of its commitment, and the range of evidence must be such as reasonably to exclude the possibility.'

"The burden of carrying this alibi rests on the shoulders of this defendant. They must show to you that it was impossible for this man to have been at the scene of the crime—an alibi, while the best kind of evidence if properly sustained, otherwise is absolutely worthless. I am going to show you that this man's alibi is worse than useless. It is no defense at all.

"I want to give you the definition of an old darky of an alibi. It illustrates my point. Rastus asked old Sam, 'What is this hyar alibi I hear so much about?' Old Sam says, 'An alibi is provin' that you was at the prayer meeting where you wasn't, to prove you wasn't at the crap game where you was.'

"Let's see the time table of the defense. I want to turn it around for half a minute. Then I want to turn it to the wall and let it stay forever.

"'One p. m.—Frank leaves the factory at 1 o'clock. If he swore when he was on the stand the other day that he left the factory at 1 o'clock it was because he saw the importance of this time point and had to leave there ten minutes earlier than he said he had at the police station before he had had time to confer with his lawyer, Mr. Luther Z. Rosser.

"I quote: 'I left at 1:10.' Right here let me interpolate. This man never made an omission from the beginning to the end of this case. Where he knew a person was aware that he was in the factory at a certain time he admitted it. He proved, or at least attempted to prove, an alibi by the little Curran girl. They had her get up on the stand and say that she saw Frank at 1:10. Yet here is his statement made to the police April 28 in the presence of his attorney, Mr. Luther Z. Rosser, in which he said that he did not leave the factory until 1:10.

"The saddest thing in this case—I don't know who caused it, I don't know who introduced it, and I hope I will go to my grave without ever learning who brought this little Curran girl into this case—the saddest thing in this case is bringing in this little girl who is connected with Montag's and placing her upon the stand here to protect this red-handed murderer.

"Jurors are sworn, and his honor has the right under the law to charge you to consider the truthfulness or the reasonableness of that which any witness swears to. And, gentlemen of the jury, anyone who looked upon that little girl noticed her bearing upon the stand, the slightly unusual manner and her connection with Montags—consider the fact that this little girl, like the little Bauer boy, had been riding in Montag's automobile—and if you can not tell just why and how she was brought here, then I am unable to understand your mental operations.

"If Frank locked that door at 1:10, how could she have seen him at Alabama and Whitehall street at 1:10? How could she be so positive that it was him, if she really saw anyone there? For, mark you, she had never seen him but once. She comes into your presence and tells you the unreasonable and absurd story of seeing him, which is in direct contradiction to Frank's story.

"On this time proposition, I want to read you this. It made a wonderful impression on me when I read it. It's from the speech of a wonderful man. It's from a man in whose presence even lawyers of the type of Ar-

Continued on Page 4, Column 1.

You Can't Be Well When Constipated

"Keep Your Bowels Open"—Doctors Estimate 75 Per Cent of Sickness Due to Torpid Liver.

Some undigested food is left in the stomach daily, which the liver should clear away. A heavy or unusual diet, or a change in water, may cause the liver to leave a few particles to press and clog, and the next day more are left over. So this waste accumulates, clogging stomach and intestines, and causing constipation.

That is not all. If the waste is not eliminated it ferments and generates uric acid, a poison which gets into the blood and through the system.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT immediately flushes the stomach and intestinal tract and washes away every particle of waste and fermentation; it purifies the blood by dissolving what uric acid has accumulated and passing it off in the urine.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is much better than calomel; no danger of salivation, no need of an after-cleansing dose of oil. It acts quickly and mildly; never forces, gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. Take it before breakfast and in an hour you'll feel splendid.

Don't take an inferior substitute; some closely imitate the name, but none produces the same result. All druggists should have the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT, 25c. If yours can not supply you, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

P-R-I-N-T-O-R-I-A-L-S
No. 224
The advance agent of Prosperity is in our midst!

Already FALL BUSINESS is "looking up"—already there is a subtle feeling of "GOOD TIMES" in the air. Have YOU prepared to take advantage of the increased opportunities for bigger and better times? Have you given your FALL PRINTING the attention it deserves? Phone for our representative to call. No time like the present to plan your PRINTING.

BYRD
Printing Co.
46-48-50 W. Alabama,
Atlanta.
Phones M. 1560-2608-2614.

HUGH DORSEY WINS HIS SPURS IN PHAGAN CASE

FOURTH WEEK OF FRANK TRIAL FINDS INTEREST OF PUBLIC STILL WHITE HOT

Popular Opinion Swayed, First When State Springs Climax With Conley's Story, Again When Defense Put the Accused Man on the Stand.

BY AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The fourth week of the Frank trial came to an end shortly after noon Saturday, with Solicitor Dorsey still far from the finish of his concluding argument in behalf of the State.

Judge Roan announced at 1:45 that he would adjourn the case over until Monday, as he has been doing heretofore, and the Solicitor will conclude his argument then.

The Solicitor had been speaking more than six hours when adjournment came, but apparently was physically able to go on if necessary.

His address, when it is finished Monday, will have been broken into three sections—one Friday afternoon, another Saturday morning, and a third Monday morning.

The Solicitor's address has been so far a wonderful piece of work.

On all sides he has been praised ungrudgingly for the fine effort he has made in behalf of the prosecution.

Atlanta will breathe a long, deep and soulful sigh of relief, however, when the last word is spoken by way of argument and the case is given into the hands of the jury for a verdict.

Leading Topic for Months.

Never before in the history of Fulton County has a criminal proceeding so challenged the unabated and undivided attention of the people.

For four months the Frank case—or the Phagan case, as it more generally is called—has been the leading topic of discussion among all classes of Georgians, rural and urban, rich and poor, high and low, informed and uninformed.

Every figure to the tragedy has been picturesque in the extreme.

Mary Phagan, a sweet young working girl, cruelly murdered; Leo Frank, a young business man of theretofore unblemished character and standing, indicted for the murder; Jim Conley, a negro, a confessed accessory after the fact of the murder, with a long criminal career attaching to him, the principal witness against Frank; Lucile Frank, the loving and devoted wife of the defendant, always at his side, with his mother, cheering and sustaining him; Reuben Arnold and Luther Rosser, two of the leading and most noted lawyers in the South, defending the accused; Frank Hooper and Hugh Dorsey, the former an attorney of established reputation, the latter a brilliant young lawyer lately named prosecuting attorney of the Atlanta Circuit; a presiding judge who has tried many of the most famous cases in the State—these make up the dramatis personae of the Frank case.

Case Fought Stubbornly.

Never before in Fulton County, if, indeed, within the State, has a case been so stubbornly and so bitterly fought as the Frank case.

It required more than three weeks to get the evidence all in. Every inch of ground was contested vigorously and to a finish.

It is estimated that the defense interposed more than 100 objections of one sort and another, as the case progressed, thus fortifying itself as abundantly as possible for an appeal, in the event of conviction.

The only party to the crime, as witness or otherwise, who has not been attacked vehemently one way or the other is the little dead girl, Mary Phagan!

All sides have agreed that, whatever else might or might not be true, the murdered child was blameless—a pathetic and unoffending victim of a brutal homicide.

Frank, the defendant, has been painted by the defense as a bright young business man, perfect in deportment at all times, a loving husband and a dutiful son, irreproachable in character, incapable of criminal deeds and thoughts, persecuted and assailed maliciously by hostile officials seeking reward both by way of fame and material gain!

By the State Frank has been painted as black as the darkest depths of Hades itself, an unfaithful husband, a vicious son, a lustful monster, particularly after young girls; a pervert, a leader of two lives, a designing and crafty monster—an inhuman murderer!

Conley Blamed and Praised.

Conley has been held up both as a witness worthy of all belief and as a witness worthy of no belief whatever—as a negro reluctant to tell the truth originally because of his disinclination to involve Frank, his erstwhile kind and profitable master, but rushing candidly and sincerely to recite the truth eventually, nevertheless, and, on the other hand, as a negro lying from start to finish for no other purpose than to save his own neck from the noose by slipping it over the head of the oppressed Frank.

Lucile Frank, the wife, has been cited both as the faithful and loving wife there at the husband's side in the courtroom and as the shrinking, suspicious wife, early indisposed even to visit Frank in his cell at the jail.

Rosser and Arnold have painted Hooper and Dorsey as direct agents of a wicked and malicious "frame-up against the life, liberty and most sacred honor of Leo Frank, deliberately and designedly seeking to hang the defendant to gratify a misguided enthusiasm and official zeal, if nothing worse; and Dorsey and Hooper have been unsparing in their criticisms of Rosser and Arnold, the paid attorneys of the defense.

An imposing array of witnesses have declared Frank's character both good and bad, while two other arrays of witnesses have sought both to uphold and to break down his alibis.

Medical experts, of repute and fame, have been set up one by one, only to be designated "fakes" and "quacks" by the other side, and vice versa.

Second Charge in Case.

Besides the original charge of murder there was injected into the case, in its early stages, an unspeakable charge of degeneracy.

First this charge went in with the defense's knowledge and consent, and then the defense moved to rule it out. It wasn't ruled out, and the defense then seized upon it and undertook to make a boomerang upon the State.

The State thereupon sought to enlarge upon it, and the State was stopped from doing that.

Three or four days was used up in attempting to show whether boiled cabbage could reach such and such a state of digestion in such and such a time, and after a long wrangle as to that, the defense and the State found that they were not particularly disagreed about the matter, anyway, as it fit both theories like a glove to show that Mary Phagan died within an hour after eating the cabbage.

The defense has contended that Jim Conley and not Leo Frank murdered Mary Phagan, and the State has contended quite as earnestly that Frank did it, and Conley was connected with it only after the exact fashion he swore to.

Looking backward over the trial from the present day point of view, one may see much that appears grimly humorous in the proceedings—and yet there has been nothing bordering ever so slightly upon the humorous, really. On the contrary, the trial has been tragedy piled uncompromisingly upon tragedy, from beginning to end!

Public Swayed Both Ways.

Into all the other complex, puzzling, elusive and sinister details of the mysterious Frank case, a large measure of prejudice was injected as it swept along.

The public has been swung first this way and then that, rushed to one conclusion, only to be rushed as madly, after a bit, to another, until, up one side and down the other, the public breathed, as aforesaid, a large and deep sigh of relief when at last the jury got the matter into its keeping, to unravel it as best it might and to speak the truth of it as nearly and as exactly as human ingenuity and the forms of law can approximate the same.

The State has fought doggedly to one theory: That Leo Frank, shortly after noon on Saturday, April 26, lured little Mary Phagan, for unspeakably immoral purpose, to the rear of the second floor of the National Pencil Factory in Forsyth street, after having paid her her weekly pittance, and there, when she refused to yield to his lustful purpose, he killed her, first by knocking her down and subsequently strangling her.

That after this horribly tragic culmination of a perhaps non-murderous original intent, Frank sought the help of a negro, Conley, with whom he had had previous very questionable relations, to hide the body, and that Conley, already deep in the mire with Frank, consented, and as a matter of fact, did hide the body of the dead girl in the basement of the factory, where subsequently he expected to burn it.

Charges Notes Were Framed.

That after this, Frank and his accomplice returned to the second floor, whereon Frank's office is located, and prepared some illiterate notes, which were placed beside the dead body for the purpose of diverting suspicion both from Frank and the negro.

That the defendant then gave the negro some money for his work, and promised him more eventually.

That Frank's actions following the murder were suspicious enough to prompt his retention at police headquarters.

That his general character is bad enough to warrant the presumption that he had lustful intentions toward Mary Phagan, as evidenced by his relations with other women and girls.

That his professed alibis are inconsequential and misleading, and not sustained by facts.

Finally, that Conley's seemingly contradictory attitude is accounted for in two directions, first by his desire to save both himself and Frank, and second by his desire to protect himself against a great measure of responsibility for the tragedy than rightfully belonged to him, when it became evident to him that Frank was preparing to let him suffer just so much measure of responsibility, even to the murder itself, as might be fixed if he did speak.

What Defense Has Claimed.

The defense has fought doggedly to this one theory: That Leo Frank scarcely knew Mary Phagan at all, and that the only time he saw her on Saturday, April 26, was when she came to his office to get her pay; that he never lured her to the rear of the second floor, or anywhere else, for any purpose whatever, and that he never saw her alive after the brief moment she stood in his office on Saturday.

That after she left his presence, happy and unharmed, she passed on downstairs, and encountered Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, whom Frank did not even know was in the building, and who was not supposed to be in the building at that time.

That Conley, then only partially recovered from a drunken debauch of the morning, saw her little mesh bag in her hand, and, being "broke" and wanting more whisky, he seized the girl, snatched her mesh bag, after knocking her down, threw her into the cellar below through the nearby open elevator shaft, whence later he dragged her to the trash pile in the rear of the building, tied the strangling rope about her neck, either to complete his dastardly work or to create a false suspicion as to the direct cause of her death.

That he then pulled the staple from the back door of the basement and thus made his escape finally from the building.

That all of Conley's story as to how he helped dispose of the body is a fabrication and a monstrous lie, framed for the purpose of shielding himself and placing the blame upon Frank.

That his story was dragged from him, bit by bit, beginning with the falsehood that he could not write, and that it was revised four times, always under oath, before its amazing and incompatible contradictions could be fixed up to stick with any degree of plausibility, and that he was helped in every one of these revisions by all too willing police officers, detectives and court officials bent upon finding in Frank a victim for Mary Phagan's murder.

Claim Negro Wrote Notes.

That the negro himself, of his own motion, wrote the notes he later confessed to having written, hoping thereby to divert suspicion from himself.

That Conley only began his series of contradictory "confessions" after he found that Frank was under suspicion, and thereby realized his (Conley's) opportunity to fasten more firmly upon Frank that suspicion, to Conley's own great benefit.

That Frank's general character is good, in contradistinction to Conley's admitted bad character.

That Frank has set up two unassailable alibis, and could not, therefore, have committed the crime charged.

That his nervousness the day following the murder was occasioned by the manner in which the fact of the murder was communicated to him, and not because of guilt.

That the long and delicate clerical work he did on the afternoon following the murder is proof that he could not then have been agitated by guilt or by any other sinister knowledge.

That Frank, as a matter of fact, knows nothing whatever of the cause of Mary Phagan's death, and is utterly and entirely guiltless of any participation therein.

Two intensely dramatic events marked the progress of the trial—and about them the entire case has revolved constantly.

Conley's remarkable story, containing the unspeakable charge of perversion, wealthy in detail and full of thrill, was the State's big point.

Frank's wonderfully clear, dispassionate and well-sustained statement from the witness stand was the defendant's big point.

These two contrary things have been pitted the one against the other, and upon which the jury finally would accept as the truth the case always has seemed to turn for final adjustment.

Attack Centers on Negro.

Every effort of the defense has been to break down Conley—including two days' unmerciful grilling by Mr. Rosser—and every effort of the State has been toward upholding him.

Every effort of the defense, therefore, has been also directed toward holding up Frank's statement, just as every effort of the State has been directed toward breaking it down.

It ever was Frank vs. Conley—the life of the one or the other as the law's satisfaction for the murder of Mary Phagan!

Regardless of all things else, the public is unstinting in its praise and approval of the brilliant young Solicitor General of the Atlanta Circuit, Hugh Dorsey, for the superb manner in which he has handled the State's side of the case.

It all along has been freely admitted that those two veterans of criminal practice, Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, would take ample care of the defendant.

Two more experienced, able and aggressive attorneys it would be impossible to secure in any cause.

When it was first learned that Rosser and Arnold were to defend Frank, the public realized that the defendant had determined to take no chances. He selected from among the cream of the Georgia bar.

That the State's interests, quite as sacred as the defendant's, would be looked after so jealously, so adroitly, and so shrewdly in the hands of the youthful Dorsey, however—that was a matter not so immediately settled!

Dorsey an Unknown Quantity.

Dorsey was known as a "bright young chap," not widely experienced, willing and aggressive enough, but—

He had been but lately named Solicitor General, and he hadn't been tried out exhaustively.

Maybe he could measure up to the standard of Rosser and Arnold, but it was a long way to measure up, nevertheless!

It soon became evident that Dorsey was not to be safely underrated. He could not be sneered down, laughed down, ridiculed down, or smashed down.

He took a lot of lofty gibing, and was called "bud" and "son" right along—but every time they pushed him down, he arose again, and generally stronger than ever!

Time and again he outgeneraled his more experienced opponents.

He forced them to make Frank's character an issue, despite themselves.

He got in vital and far-reaching evidence, over protest long and loud.

Whenever the Solicitor was called upon for an authority, he was right there with the goods. They never once caught him napping. He had prepared himself for the Frank case, in every phase of it.

The case had not progressed very far before the defense discovered unmistakably that it had in Dorsey a foreman worthy of its most trustworthy and best-tempered steel!

And the young Solicitor climaxed his long sustained effort with a masterful speech, that will long be remembered in Fulton County!

In places he literally tore to pieces the efforts of the defense. He overlooked no detail—at times he was crushing in his reply to the arguments of Rosser and Arnold, and never was he commonplace!

Fixed His Fame by Work.

Whatever the verdict, when Hugh Dorsey sat down, the Solicitor General had fixed his fame and reputation as an able and altogether capable prosecuting attorney—and never again will that reputation be challenged lightly, perhaps!

Much credit for hard work and intelligent effort will be accorded Frank Hooper, too, for the part he played in the Frank trial. He was at all times the repressed and painstaking first liteutenant of the Solicitor, and his work, while not so spectacular, formed a very vital part of the whole case made out and argued by the State. He was for fourteen years the Solicitor General of one of the most important South Georgia circuits, and his advice and suggestions to Dorsey were invaluable.

A noteworthy fact in connection with the Frank trial is that it generally is accepted as having been as fair and square as human forethought and effort could make it.

It may be true that a good deal of the irrelevant and not particularly pertinent crept into it, but one side has been to blame for that quite as much as the other side.

Ruling Cut Both Ways.

The judge's rulings have cut impartially both ways—sometimes favorable to the State, but quite as frequently in favor of the defense.

Even the one big charge of degeneracy, which many people hold had no proper place in the present trial, went in without protest from the defense, and cross-examination upon it even was indulged in.

Unlimited time was given both the State and the defense to make out their cases; expense was not considered. The trial has lasted longer than any other in the criminal history of Georgia. Nothing was done or left undone that could give either side the right to complain of unfairness after the conclusion of the hearing.

It is difficult to conceive how human minds and hman efforts could provide more for fair play than was provided in the Frank case.

MRS. LEO M. FRANK plainly showing the strain as Solicitor Dorsey arraigned her husband. Below is Mrs. Rea Frank, the defendant's mother, who also betrayed her agitation.

English Housewives Plan Bacon Boycott

Hope to Force Down Price by Abstaining From Buying for Fortnight.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The "English breakfast" is threatened with dire disaster. London housewives are preparing to boycott the toothsome "rasher" because of the continued high prices ruling for bacon.

They plan to refuse to buy bacon for a fortnight, beginning to-day. Enormous quantities are likley to remain in the hands of the wholesalers and prices are expected to come down with a rush.

Optimists predict a drop in price of at least 6 cents a pound.

Cost of Living Up in Britain 14 Per Cent

Prices of Foodstuffs Except Tea and Sugar Have Risen at Remarkable Rate.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Striking figures showing the increased cost of living are contained in a voluminous report issued by the British Board of Trade, according to which present prices are the highest in twenty-five years.

Retail prices of food have risen 14 per cent since 1900, while wages have increased only 3 per cent.

Prices of almost all foodstuffs, except tea and sugar, have risen, the greatest increases being in bacon, 32 per cent, and potatoes, 46 per cent.

People have been able to meet the advances only by reducing consumption.

CASTLE TO BE HOME OF TRAMPS OF GERMANY

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—Here is perhaps a bit of news which will be of interest to some of America's "Wandering Willies." A ruined castle at Merlenhausen, Saxony, is about to be restored by the local authorities, who will use it as a free rest house and night shelter for tramps from all parts of Germany.

Mail-Wooed Bride On Journey to Coast

Millionaire Ranchman Is Given Fine Recommendation by Pastors of His Neighbor.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Theresa Patterson, a handsome widow, aged 30, of Allentown, Pa., is nearing Los Molinas to-day, a journey of 3,000 miles across the continent, to become the bride of Charles H. Smart, a wealthy rancher, after a romantic courtship by mail.

Clergymen in Los Molinas and Allentown gave each a clean bill, the former stating that while Smart is not a millionaire, he is worth nearly that sum and would make a home happy for any woman of his choice.

The marriage is to take place immediately upon Mrs. Patterson's arrival.

5-Cent Fraud in Ice; 5 Days on Rockpile

Portland Dealer Is Sentenced for Cheating Customer in 25-Cent Transaction.

PORTLAND, OREG., Aug. 23.—Five days at the rockpile for a 5-cent fraud in the sale of a piece of ice was the sentence imposed by Municipal Judge Stevenson upon Thomas Barnes, proprietor of the National Ice and Coal Company.

Barnes delivered a 40-pound piece of ice worth 20 cents, saying it weighed 50 pounds and charging 25 cents.

RUSS SERFS JOLLY, BUT LAZY, SAYS VASSAR GIRL

Special Cable to The American.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 23.—Miss Texter, a graduate of Vassar College, who has been making a tour of Saratoff and Simbirsk, typical agricultural provinces of Russia, to study the land question, has been telling the Russian newspapers the peasants impress her most by their good temper and dislike for work.

For summer complaints

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is best. It will keep your stomach and bowels in fine condition to do all the work called for, thus avoiding or relieving cramps, dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, malaria and stomach troubles.

The genuine Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY, by druggists, grocers and dealers. Should our friends for any reason be unable to secure it in their locality, we will have it shipped to them from their nearest dealer, express prepaid (cash to accompany order) at the following prices:—

4 Large Bottles, $4.30.
6 Large Bottles, $5.90.
12 Large Bottles, $11.00.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey should be in every home and we make the above announcement so that you may become familiar with a source of supply.

Remit by express order, postoffice order, or certified check to

The Duffy Malt Whiskey Company,
98 White St., Rochester, N. Y.

ABSOLUTELY PURE & UNADULTERATED TRADE MARK

I Cannot Possibly

Impress upon your minds (through the newspapers) the importance of calling to see me when your teeth need attention. Give me a trial and learn for yourself how fair and honest I treat you—how my methods are ABSOLUTELY PAINLESS, and my prices MUCH LOWER than any other Dentist in Atlanta. I can assure you that it will be a pleasure to you to recommend me to your friends after you have once tried me. I employ no students. Each doctor has had from 5 to 18 years' experience and is thoroughly versed in my painless methods.

MY WORK IS GUARANTEED FOR 15 YEARS

They Must Fit $5 A Set

Terms: WELL, DON'T WORRY. THESE ARE ARRANGED TO SUIT.

Best Service for Least Money

They Never Slip or Drop.

SETS OF TEETH ..... $5.00 UP
GOLD FILLINGS ..... 75c UP
SILVER FILLINGS ..... 50c UP
BRIDGEWORK $3, $4, $5
GOLD CROWNS ..... a TOOTH

DR. WHITLAW, Painless Dentist

Largest and Most Thoroughly Equipped Sanitary Office in the South. Phone M. 1298.

73½ WHITEHALL ST.

SOLICITOR'S CLOSING ARGUMENT A MASTERPIECE

DENOUNCES DEFENDANT AS MORAL PERVERT AND LAUGHS ALIBI TO SCORN

Prisoner Likened to Oscar Wilde, Pastor Richeson and Beattie---Charged With Committing Murder to Hide Evidence of His Crime Against Girl.

Continued From Page 2.

nold and Rosser would take off their hats.

"I refer to Daniel Webster and his argument in the Knott case. 'Time is identical, days, hours, are not visible to any of senses except to the schooled. He who speaks of days, hours and minutes talks at random.' It is better than I could express it. What about this time? In this table here, minutes are moved up and down, contorted and twisted to protect this man. They say he arrived at the factory at 8:25. Frank himself in his first statement said he arrived at 8:30, and poor Jim Conley, lousy, filthy and dirty, said he arrived at 8:30, carrying a raincoat, and they tried to make it appear he didn't have one. If the truth is ever known, he tried to borrow that raincoat of Ursenbach's to create the same impression.

"Mattie Smith at 9:20 (quoting from the table), and Frank and Mattie Smith both say 9:30. He called Schiff at 10 o'clock (reading again), and yet this man with all his mathematical precision and accuracy at figures, said he was at Montag's at 10 o'clock. They say he arrived back at 11 o'clock, but in his first statement he said it was 11:05. At 12:12 they say Mary Phagan arrived at the factory.

"Oh my, they have to do it. Like the rabbit in Uncle Remus, they're 'just 'bleeged to do it.' Move the minutes up or back, for God's sake, or we are lost!

"But to crown it all! In the table which is now turned to the wall you have Lemmie Quinn arriving not on the minute, but, to suit your purpose, at from 12:20 to 12:22. That evidence conflicts with the statements of Miss Freeman and the other young woman, who put him there before 12 o'clock."

Arnold—Your honor, I must interrupt. No such evidence was ever brought out. Those young women testified that they left the factory at 11:45 and that they saw Lemmie Quinn at the Busy Bee Cafe considerably after. Mr. Dorsey says they saw him at the factory before 12 o'clock.

Dorsey—No, your honor, I didn't say any such thing. They didn't see him there, and I don't think anyone else did.

The crowd laughed.

Arnold—Your honor, have we got to take this whole crowd into this case?

Judge Roan—Gentlemen, there must be order or I will clear the courtroom.

Dorsey—Find the records. They will show I am right. I have got Lemmie Quinn's affidavit. I am just arguing this case on the evidence.

"Jim Conley is a liar, is he? He said Quinn was there and that he was there before Mary Phagan came. Frank had a mighty hard time remembering whether Quinn was there. When Quinn saw him at the police station and said he had been there, Frank said he would have to see his lawyers before deciding whether or not to make it public.

"Is Jim Conley telling the truth or telling a lie? You can't go hot and cold on him. Why was it Frank wanted to consult his lawyers?"

Arnold—I will find the record.

Dorsey—Yes, you can find it. You can find where Quinn swore half a dozen ways. He was the most anxious witness I ever saw on a stand, except for old man Holloway. He would tell that he was there if Frank said tell it. He would keep quiet if Frank said no.

"Oh, gentlemen, let me read you what a great lawyer said on this sort of evidence. I read the words of Judge Lochrane:

"'I do not take the mere words of witnesses. I take their acts.'

"And while I am on this subject I want to read you another opinion:

"'Evidence given by a witness has inherent strength which a jury can not disregard. But a statement has none.'"

Arnold: "Now, your honor, I have found the records and it bears out just what I said."

Arnold read from the testimony of Miss Corinthia Hall that she and Mrs. Freeman went to the pencil factory at 11:35 and left there at 11:45.

Arnold: "Mr. Dorsey asked her the question, 'You saw Lemmie Quinn at 5 minutes to 12 o'clock?' Answer: 'I don't remember what time it was. He told us he had been up to the factory and saw Frank. He said he was going to the matinee.'

"Lemmie Quinn swore several times he was at the factory at 12:20." Arnold continued, "and here it is that he said that he was in a pool parlor at 12:30, just after leaving the factory."

Judge Roan: "Mr. Dorsey, have you anything in contradiction to that?"

Dorsey: "Yes, I have plenty; that doesn't scare anybody."

Arnold: "I just want to call attention to the glaring errors. The little ones I don't care anything about. I won't interrupt him except on glaring misstatements. Life is too short."

Dorsey: "Yes, you will. You will interrupt me every time I am incorrect. You are too shrewd, too anxious to let anything go by. Don't tell this jury you are going to let me say things that are incorrect.

"Here is your table turned to the wall, having the time of Lemmie Quinn's arrival at 12:20. I have an affidavit here of this pet foreman of the metal department. He said he got there at from 12 to 12:20. Those girls went out of the factory at 11:45 o'clock. They walked up a block and down a block to the Busy Bee Cafe. There they saw Quinn.

"In the name of goodness, if Frank, according to his own statement, could leave the factory at 1:10 o'clock and get home at 1:20, couldn't these girls walk up a block and down a block and see Quinn in fifteen minutes?

"I know it hurts, but this table here which puts Lemmie Quinn at the factory from 12:20 to 12:22 is a fraud on its face. There is no greater farce in this case than their straining at this particular point, with the exception of Billy Owens' pantomime. And, oh, what a farce that was!

"Gentlemen of the jury, you need not try to consider their attempts to be accurate about the time Quinn says he was there, for Lemmie says himself he could not be positive. He says he thinks he got there some time between 12:20 and 12:30.

Mentions Girl Who Would Die for Frank.

"Ah, gentlemen of the jury, whenever a man gets to swearing too definite and too specifically about time, then the words of our friend Webster, which I quoted to you, are right—'He is not to be relied upon.'

"And can you truly consider the words of a man whom your reason tells you is straining to set the exact time?

"But let's pass on from this. I will not take the time to read you everything that Lemmie says he did. Let's pass on to the perjury charge which Arnold has so flippantly made. You saw these witnesses upon the stand. You heard their words. You noticed their manner, their attitude and their interest.

"Why, one of these ladies from the factory wanted to die for this man Frank."

A titter of laughter ran around the room, and deputies were forced to rap for order.

"When did you ever know of an employee being so enamoured of her employer that she was willing to die for him, if their friendship was purely platonic? I know enough about human nature—I know enough of the passions which surge in the breast of mortal man—to know that this poor woman's anxiety to put her neck into the noose to save him were born of something besides platonic love.

"When you see a woman so passionately devoted to her employer—so anxious to die for him—you may know and you can gamble on it that there is something stronger there than platonic love. It must be a passion born of something beyond the relation which should exist between a married man—an employer—and his woman employee.

"Ah, gentlemen of the jury, we could have got witness after witness who would have gone upon the stand and sworn things about this man. There were people who would have perjured themselves. There were witnesses who came upon the stand for the deefndant who on the face of their testimony perjured themselves.

"Take this little Bauer boy. Remember his testimony before he took that automobile ride with Montag to the office of Arnold & Arnold. Before dinner he could remember each detail, but after dinner, after he had taken that ride with old Sig Montag, he had a lapse of memory. Old man Sig must have told this little boy about the Hard Shell preacher down in South Georgia who h is congregation pray for rain. They prayed and prayed, and after a while, like old Sam Jones would have said, the Lord sent a trash mover, a gully washer.

Boy Must Have Overdone It."

"It rained and it rained until they had more water than they knew what to do with. Then the old hardshell preacher said: 'Brethren, it looks like we have a leetle overdone it.' So Montag must have whispered into Bauer's ear, 'You have a leetle overdone it.'

"And, after dinner, this little boy didn't know anything. But was that all? Why, gentlemen of the jury, before dinner that boy even remembered where his watch lay.

"'Do you believe that?' Talk about perjury! Willful foolishness, because an honest jury knows that it was not true. They brought in that machinist Lee. He was willing to swear to anything and there was not a man in the sound of his voice that didn't know he was telling an untruth. He wrote and signed a statement about Duffy's injuries. I brought it here and it was written in typewriting and didn't even have his name on it.

"They thought we could not find Duffy and thought you didn't have sense enough to know the first thing you do in a case like that is to wrap something around it to stop the loss of blood.

"I have never seen a case yet where women were so suborned as in this. Take this woman Fleming, his stenographer. They put her up and swore that Frank had a general good character. She only swore to what he had done in her presence when they cross-examined her. We don't contend Frank tried to seduce every girl in the factorwy. But he did pick them out. He picked out Mary Phagan and was called.

"Gentlemen, he got the wrong girl and he was called. And this stenographer said she only knew what he did to her. She testified that Frank's business Saturday morning was to make out the financial sheet. Mr. Arnold said immediately he didn't have time and she jumped at it like a duck at a June bug. Mr. Arnold was so nervous he would not let me finish the cross-examination and interpolated that remark to the jury.

"It was unfair and not according to law and practice. But he got away with it. And then she turned right around and in the next breath said that she had never said Frank was working on the financial sheet Saturday morning.

"Oh, gentlemen, can you let a poor little girl go to her death and set her murderer free on such evidence as this? If you do, it is time to stop going through the process of summoning a jury.

"Perjury! When did old man Starnes and Pat Campbell stoop to that. And suspicions! Why didn't we get old man Lee and Gantt instead of Frank? Why didn't we get Conley? We tried it, but there was absolutely no case against either. But there is a perfect case against this man. But, oh, you cried 'Perjury.' But it is not worth fifteen cents until you put your fingers on something specific.

"And here, gentlemen, right before your very eyes, in black and white, the testimony ofthis woman, Fleming, shows that they perjured her.

"Do you tell me when that factory closes on Saturday afternoons that this man with the handsome wife that he possesses, this college graduate, who likes to read and play cards, who likes to see baseball games, would spend his time there, using the data that Schiff prepared on Saturday afternoons when he could do it Saturday morning? No, sir. Miss Fleming was right. She didn't stay there to work often on Saturday afternoons."

The jury was allowed to retire for a few minutes. When they returned, Dorsey resumed his argument.

"Now, gentlemen, I submit that this man made that inance sheet Saturday morning. I am not going to fatigue you with my reasons. It is unnecessary. If he did make that sheet on Saturday afternoon, he did it thinking of an alibi. But don't tell me that because he might have done this on Saturday afternoon with a penmanship that showed no nervousness proves an alibi.

"If he could go home into the bosom of his family after such an atrocious crime, he could have made that sheet. But he wouldn't have done it if Schiff had not gotten up the data. He had done it fifty-two times a year for five or six years. If he would do additional work on that Saturday afternoon, it could only have been with a sinister purpose.

Witness Afraid Even to Identify Handwriting.

"In speaking of perjury, his mother said anybody ought to identify his handwriting."

Dorsey held up the photograph of the sample of handwriting Frank wrote for the police.

"Yet the man they put up to identify his handwriting was so afraid he might do Frank an injury that he wouldn't venture a guess. Grant that he did go home to his wife and those old people—his parents-in-law—and maintain a stoical countenance. Grant that he did make that sheet, which he could make up with his eyes shut. Grant that he did unlock the safe, a thing that he had done every day for years.

"But when he went to run the elevator; when he went to nail up that back door; he wavered; he paled when he talked to the police, and trembled on Darley's knee as he rode to the police station.

"He could sit in the hall and read a joke about a baseball umpire, but the frivolity annoyed the visitors at his home. It was the same kind of frivolity Henry Clay Beattie displayed when he stood beside the automobile that was stained with the blood of his wife. His joke was uttered only in annoyance; it jarred.

"But whether or not he made up that financial sheet while waiting for old Jim to come and burn the body, one thing I grant he did. Don't forget the envelope; don't forget the way the letter was quoted, that letter he wrote to his uncle in Brooklyn, that letter that begins: 'I trust that this finds you and dear Tante well.' He had no wealthy relations in Brooklyn! That old millionaire uncle was mighty near there when Frank told old Jim Conley: 'Why should I hand? I have wealthy relatives in Brooklyn!'

Dorsey finished reading the letter and then said:

"Here is a sentence pregnant with significance. It bears the earmarks of a guilty conscience. He wasn't trembling when he wrote. He is capable and smart, but here is a sentence that is a revelation. Here is a document I conceive was written after little Mary Phagan, who died for virtue's sake, was lying mutilated in that dark cold basement."

At this juncture Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan, began to cry.

Dorsey read from the letter:

"'It is too short a time since you left for anything startling to have developed down here.'

"'Startling' and 'too short a time.' Those are the words that incriminate. That little sentence itself shows that the crime was committed in an incredibly short time.

"Tell me, honest men, courageous men of Georgia, that this phrase penned to his uncle that afternoon did not come from a stricken conscience. 'Too short a time since you left for anything to develop down here.'

"What do you think of that, honest men? Then notice what he writes about the thin, gray line of veterans facing the chilly weather, as if that old millionaire uncle of his traveling around Germany for his health, as if he cared for these old heroes in gray! Ample and reliable authority says that over-expression is an indication of guilt. Tell me that this old man, who was just preparing to sail for Europe, cared for these old heroes in gray—this wealthy old man who wanted to see the financial sheet. 'Too short a time'—yes, he said it was too short a time for anything to develop down here. But, gentlemen of the jury, there was something startling to develop, and it happened within the space of 30 minutes. There is nothing new in the factory to report, but there was something new in the cellar. There was something to report, and the time wasn't too short for it to happen.

"You tell me that letter was written in the morning? Do you believe it? Why, they haven't even tried to say that. I tell you that that letter shows on its face that something startling had happened, and I tell you that that rich uncle did not care the snap of his finger about the thin, gray line of veterans.

"Ah, yes, he had wealthy relatives in Brooklyn. That's what old Jim Conley said he told him. And his people lived in Brooklyn, and old Jim never would have known that if Frank had not told him. And they had at least $20,000 in cool cash in the bank; and he had a brother-in-law employing two or three people, at least, and we don't know how many more. And if his rich uncle was not in Brooklyn, he was near there.

"All right, let's go a step farther. On April 28 he wired Adolph Montag at the Imperial Hotel in New York: 'You may have read in Atlanta papers of factory girl found dead Sunday morning in cellar of pencil factory.'

"Yes, gentlemen of the jury, in the cellar of the pencil factory. There's where he placed her, and that is where he expected her to be found. And the thought of it welled up in his mind that Monday morning, April 28, before he had been arrested, and he wired Montag forestalling what he knew would certainly and surely happen unless the Atlanta detectives were corrupt and would suppress it.

Compliments Detectives.

"But, be it said to your credit, Starnes; to your credit, Campbell, and you, too, Rosser and Black, that you had the manhood and the courage to do your duty and roll the charge up to this man, protected as he was by wealth and influence.

"And another word what else he said in this telegram. Notice the credit he gives to the police: 'The police will eventually solve it.' And be it said to thec redit of the Atlanta police department, they did solve it. 'Assure my uncle I am all right in case he asks.' Our company has case well in hand.' Maybe he did think when he got that fellow Scott that his company had it well in hand.

"I tell you there is an honest man—this fellow Scott. If there was a slush fund in this case—and witnesses have said there was no such fund—this man Scott could have gotten it. Not at first, maybe, but he could have gotten it later on. But Scott knewhis duty, and he has done it. No wonder Frank could telegraph that his company had the case well in hand, for Scott's first words could not have suited him better had he wished for them. They were, 'The Pinkerton's always work arm and arm with the police.' This suited Frank well. It was just what he wanted. He wanted to know what the police thought he wanted to know what they were going to do, and this worked well, until the chain began to tighten.

"And Haas—and he is nobody's fool—when he sa wthe trend of the case, he opened the negotiations; he gave Scott the opportunity by saying, 'Now let us have what you get first.'

"But let us pass on from that. You ell me that letter and that telegram are not significant? That the work pn this financial sheet is no significant? That Schiff's testimony as to the work on that financial sheet is not significant?

"Frank himself was not satisfied. He is as smart as his lawyers, too.

"He realized that he would have to go out and beyond the evidence, because he knew it was all bunk; and he tried to show you that he did write the financial sheet. Frank did write that letter Saturday afternoon, and he did write that telegram Monday; but he did not do any work on the financial sheet after Saturday at noon. I ask you twelve men if those documents and letters don't bear the impress of murder?

"And they still cry perjury. I just thought of another case, when that man could not identify Frank's handwriting that his own mother said was his. That was perjury, and there was perjury in the testimony of Bower and Lee. Mrs. Carson said she had worked there three years, and Arnold asked her a question that he would not ask a younger woman. He ask 1 her about seeing blood around the toilet and in the dressing rooms. She said she saw it there very often. Then she talked about Conley being on the fourth floor that Monday. I pinned her down to say that Frank was there at the same time. It was then that Frank leaned over and said, 'Be a good boy, Jim,' and Jim, remembering his wealthy relatives in Brooklyn, and his promises of money, said, 'Yes, sir, boss; I will.'

"Surely the officers could not suborn Conley at that time. And she says she never saw the blood by the water cooler; she said she didn't look at it because she didn't like to look at things like that. But another lady on the stand says she did go back and look at it; that she was with her.

"But back again to Conley. If he had committed that crime and had not had Leo M. Frank and his promises back of him, would he have gone back to that factory every day and remained there until Thursday? They said they were going to put up all the girls on the fourth floor. But they didn't do it until we called their four-flush and put up witnesses who corroborated their witness, Miss Jackson, about the misconduct of this man.

"Miss Small, also on the fourth floor, corroborated Conley. She said she saw him on the fourth floor Monday. Now, why did Frank go to the fourth floor so often Monday and Tuesday? Because he knew Conley was up there, and he wanted to be sure the negro was not talking. Conley told Miss Carson that Frank was as innocent as an angel in heaven. We said he was purely doing what he had promised to do—protect his employer. Mr. Rosser characterized the statement as a dirty suggestion. I was, and I accept it, but it is true; and you men would not s't here and see that negro hang for a crime Leo M. Frank committed.

"When Conley went up to the second floor in response to Frank's signal, Frank said, 'Did you see anything?' and he said, 'I saw two girls come up, but there ain't but one of them come down.' And then Frank knew that he would have to take this negro into his confidence.

Shaking his finger at Frank, Dorsey continued:

"And you told old Jim Conley to protect you! And he tried to do it. It is infamous to try to have Jim Conley hanged for a crime that Leo Frank did. Gentlemen, I haven't got to the State's case yet; I am just cutting away some of the underbrush this defense has planted in this forest of oaks. They have played the detectives. The only thing to the discredit of the police department is that it allowed itself to be intimidated by the influence of this man and his friends and his big lawyers.

Didn't Have Courage To Put Frank in Cell.

"When they took him down there guilty of this red-handed murder they didn't put him in a cell like they did Newt Lee and Jim Conley. It took time for them to get their courage up to the point of locking him up as he should have been. Old John Black—Mr. Rosser likes to brag about what he did to him—but he didn't make so much off of him after all. Black's methods are somewhat like Mr. Rosser's. If Black had had Frank in the position that Mr. Rosser had Jim Conley, this whole trial might have been obviated with a confession."

Dorsey turned and pointed at Frank.

"You didn't get counsel a moment too soon. You called for Darley and you called for Harris; you called for Rosser and Arnold, and it took them all to bolster up your nerve. Gentlemen of the jury, you know I am telling you the truth. The only thing against the police is that this man, who had just snuffed out the life of this little girl, was given too much consideration. His able counsel and the glamour of wealth that surrounded him, overawed the police. I had nothing to do with it, but I honor them for the way they went after Minola McKnight. I don't know whether they want me to apologize for them or not; but do you think that in protecting the people from such crimes as this the detectives are acting like they are at a tea party?

"Should they have the manners of a dancing master? If you do, you don't know anything about it. Once get an old 'possum dog on the trail, and you can't call him off. So it is with Starnes and Black; they knew Albert McKnight wouldn't have told those young men at the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company that story about his wife unless it were true. They went after Minola. They stuck to the trail. They smoked her out. Minola's friends got a writ of habeas corpus. Do you think if Mr. Haas had come to me with a writ of habeas corpus to release Frank I would have done it? I would have said it was none of my business.

"The next time the police have to use strong methods in an effort to protect the people by going after a red-handed murderer, I won't usurp their authority or the authority of the judges. I haven't anything to do with the police department, or the functions of the judges. I am responsible only for the office of Solicitor General for the term to which I was elected. I honor Mr. Charley Hill; I am as proud that I have succeeded him as I am that I was given this place by a vote of the people. He was honorable and strong; but I tell you gentlemen, no man is my pattern; I follow the dictates of my own conscience."

Tears Come to Dorsey's Eyes.

Mr. Dorsey raised his voice and tears came into his eyes.

"If there is one thing I am proud of during my term of office, it is that I joined hand and glove with the police; and when your influence (turning to the defense) tried to get Jim Conley indicted by the grand jury, I stood out against it. If that is treason, make the most of it. If you don't want me to do it, get somebody else.

"Mr. Hill was a noble man. He had the courage of a Caesar and the eloquence of a Demosthenes. I have wished a hundred times that he was here making the speech to you that I am making.

"He would have stripped the hides off of you (pointing to the defense). Such talk as that doesn't terrify me. It doesn't disturb the serenity of the conscience in everything I have done in the prosecution of this man. Let's get back to the talk on perjury.

"Don't get up here and call everybody a liar without giving the specific instances. Take the evidence of Mrs. Small. She said she saw Frank and Miss Rebecca Carson walking along and that she stopped Frank and had him O. K. a ticket. She said it was Miss Rebecca Carson she was with. She says that Mrs. Carson was not there at all. Mrs. Carson said she was there. Mrs. Small said she saw Conley standing up there by the elevator and that Frank must have seen him—that Frank passed within 4 feet of him. She says that Jim was doing nothing; that he was standing by the elevator with his hand on a truck.

"Mrs. Small also tells us that the elevator shook the entire building. She said he couldn't helped but hear it if the machinery was not running. She said: 'You might not hear it if the machinery was in full operation, if you were not paying attention to it, but if you listened you could hear it.'

"Now here is another thing. Mrs. Carson had already sworn positively that she never went back into the metal room to see that blood. Mrs. Small said that on Wednesday a crowd of them from the fourth floor went down out of pure curiosity to see those spots, and when I asked her who went with her, lo and behold the first person she mentioned was Mrs. Carson. She said she was sure she was there; she knew she was there. And when I asked why they went there, and why Mrs. Carson went there particularly, she said 'Curiosity sent us.'

Somebody Has Lied, Dorsey Asserts.

"Now, gentlemen of the jury, somebody, and I put it up to you, has lied. If this case is founded on perjury, it has been boiled until the pot is black.

"The truth is, there has not been a single instance where evidence was needed that someone has not come in to bolster it up.

"Now, let's pass on a little bit. I want to discuss briefly the writing of these letters found beside the body of the girl. If these letters were not the order of an overruling Providence, I would agree that they were the silliest things I ever heard of. But, gentlemen of the jury, these notes bear an intrinsic knowledge of this crime.

"This man Frank, by the language of these notes, in attempting to fix the guilt upon another, has indelibly fixed it upon himself."

The Solicitor repeated this statement.

"The pad, the paper the notes were written upon; the fact that there was a note fixed the guilt upon him. Tell me that a negro who, after having killed a white girl, ravished and outraged her, would have taken the time to have written these notes? And even if he did write them, would he have written them upon a scratch pad which is found only in an office?

"You tell me that a man like Jim Conley would have ravished this girl with the knowledge that Frank was in the house? You tell me that this Jim Conley, even though he has been as drunk as a sot could be, would have taken the time to write these notes?

"I tell you, gentlemen of the jury, it can not be true.

"You say that the fact those notes were written was foolish. It was foolish, but it was a mistake. Murder is a mistake. What man ever committed murder who did not make a mistake? And what man making the greatest mistake in the world would not make a lesser mistake in trying to cover up? Those notes were the lesser mistake.

"Scott said that when Leo M. Frank talked to him about the girl coming to the factory and asking him about the metal that he said, 'I don't know.' And now he says that he told her, 'No.' Arnold recognized the damage in the statement 'I don't know' getting in.

"Language of Notes Clears Conley."

"Leo Frank said in his statement again and again 'chatting' and 'chat.' Conley said that when Frank told him he wanted to watch for him that Frank said he wanted to have a 'chat.' Jim Conley said here time and again, 'I have done it,' but in the notes found near the body he said, 'did it.' Do you tell me that negro would have written the word 'did' unless it was dictated to him?

"Do you tell me that negro won't have taken the time to carry that girl away back there and hide her body if he had knocked her down the hole, and then stopped to write those notes?

"No," shouted Dorsey, turning to Frank, "that child was murdered on the second floor and you wanted to get her into the cellar, just like you found her in the cellar, as you said in that telegram to Montag.

"Conley said once in his statement that when he met a man on the street that he knew, the man looked at him he though he though 'I done it.' Conley used that expression at least twenty times. He said 'I done it' when he closed the door, and in several other places I can't find just now. He didn't use the word 'did' one time.

"In the first note, the expression 'I went to make water and that long tall black negro pushed me down the hole.' You knew that toilet was back there on the second floor (addressing Frank), and you knew that was where that little girl met her death. And you knew that metal room was right back there, too.

"You tell me that negro would have written those words. Where was it she was going to make water on the first floor? Yet you tell me there is nothing in circumstantial evidence when these things creep in,

"When you wrote this note (turning to Frank), you said yourself that you had the original of the note before you, and you said yourself that you knew Conley could write because he had written you time and time again, trying to borrow money, and yet you sat there with the original of that note before you and Conley's own handwriting, the handwriting you had seen often enough to be familiar with it, and you didn't tell those officers that Conley wrote the notes.

"I don't want you to convict this man unless you believe him guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, but I don't want you to let your verdict be governed by the opinion of a crank, but by the facts.

"Arnold and Rosser would say frequently, 'Are you going to convict this man on that, on this?'—selecting some little isolated point.

Chain Strong Enough To Hang Anybody.

"'Well, I don't want you to, but on all the facts—the chain that is unbroken and not by isolated instances, and I say that when you take them all together you have a cable that ought to hang anybody.

"I don't ask that he be convicted on this isolated instance or that, but all bound together make a cable that is as strong as is possible for the ingenuity of man to make.

"I don't know whether the statement of Frank's will rank along with that statement of the celebrated pervert Oscar Wilde, or not. He is brilliant, but if you take his statement and just follow it you never would convict him. You never would convict anyone that way. But listen to this: 'I sat in my office counting over the money that had been left over,'" Dorsey read from Frank's statement. "He wasn't talking about the petty cash," Dorsey continued. "He was talking about the money that had been left over from the payroll of $1,100. We don't know to this day how much that was. We don't know how big a roll it could have made, though Jim Conley said he saw a roll of $200.

"And he was trying to get old Jim to go down into the basement and burn the body of that little girl. Just as sure as the smoke curled from that stack toward the heavens, old Jim would have been there without a shadow of a defense. Frank would have been there with the detectives. Jim would have hanged for a crime that this man committed in his lust.

"But old Jim was too wise. He wrote the notes, but, drunk or sober, he wouldn't be entrapped like that. I do not doubt that when Frank handed him that roll of money it was like the kiss of Judas Iscariot when he kissed the Saviour, and then betrayed Him for 30 pieces of silver.

"I am going to show you that this man had long planned not murder, but to get this little girl to yield to his lust. Let me do it now.

"Back yonder in March this little Turner boy saw him making advances to Mary Phagan. Did that innocent little boy from the country lie? This little girl that came here from the Home of the Good Shepherd, she heard Frank speak to Mary Phagan and put his hands on her. She may have lost her virtue, but she is nothing but a child. Did she lie, this little girl?

Quotes From Same Poem as Rosser.

"Then there is Gantt. He quit the factory rather than make good a dollar that was charged he was short. Did he lie about Frank's inquiring of the little girl? Yesterday Mr. Rosser quoted from a poem of Bobbie Burns, the line was, 'Tis human to step aside.' I want to quote a line from that same poem, 'There is no telling what a man will do when he has the lassie.'

"When convenience is snug, I tell you gentlemen, there is no telling what a pervert will do when goaded by his passion. You tell me this brilliant young man, who looked over that payroll 52 times a year, saw the name of Mary Phagan every time, then when she was dead had to get his books to find out her name? He coveted that little girl way back in March. I have no doubt those little girls swore the truth when they said they saw him making advances. I would not be surprised if he did not hang around and try to get her to yield. I would not be surprised if he didn't get Gantt out of the way because he was an obstacle to his scheme.

"He knew the day before she was probably coming. He went and told old Jim Conley, who had watched for you so many Saturday afternoons while you and Schiff were making up that finance sheet. When Helen Ferguson came and asked for Mary Phagan's money, I wouldn't be surprised if he did not refuse to give it to her because he had already told old Jim to come and watch.

"Frank's plans were fixed. Ah, gentlemen, then Saturday comes, and it is a reasonable tale that old Jim tells. He says, 'I done it just like this.' He doesn't say, 'I did.' He says he 'done it' just as the brilliant factory superintendent told him to. This thing passion works in a terrible way. Good people don't know how the mind of a libertine works. They don't know of the planning, plotting and waiting. Way back in March Frank had his eyes upon her. He was infatuated with her and did not have the will power to resist.

"You can twist and wabble all you want (Dorsey turned to Frank and shook his finger at him), but you told Detective Scott that you did not know her. Notwithstanding what you have said here, notwithstanding what your witnesses have said, you knew her.

"And tell me, gentlemen of the jury, has this little Ferguson girl lied? Has she been suborned by Starnes? Has she come here and deliberately perjured herself? I tell you that is a charge that can not stand. His refusal to give Helen Ferguson Mary Phagan's envelope is an indication that he was plotting. And old Jim Conley's tale will stand, for Frank himself corroborates Conley in many things.

Dorsey Attacks Frank's Statement

"'1 p. m.—Frank leaves the factory.' It looks mighty nice on the chart. Turn that chart to the wall, Mr. Sheriff. Let it stay turned to the wall. That statement is refuted by the defendant himself when he didn't realize the importance of this time proposition.

"Frank's statement at police headquarters, taken by G. C. Febuary on Monday, April 28, says. 'I didn't lock the door that morning. The mail was coming up. I locked it when I started home to lunch at 1:10 o'clock.'

"Up goes your alibi, punctured by your own statement when you didn't realize its importance. Yet these honorable gentlemen, for the purpose of impressing your minds, print in big letters on this chart he left the factory at 1 o'clock. If he swore when he was on the stand the other day that he left the factory at 1 o'clock it was because he saw the importance of this time point, and had to leave there ten minutes earlier than he said he had at the police station before he had had time to confer with his lawyer, Mr. Luther Z. Rosser."

AN ANNOUNCEMENT OF VITAL IMPORTANCE TO PIANO BUYERS

THE WESTER MUSIC CO., 64 Peachtree Street, Desire to Announce the Opening of Their "Once-a-Year" Clearance at 8:30 Monday, August 25.

PIANOS OF HIGH GRADE AND ACKNOWLEDGED REPUTATION

Our Entire Stock Sacrificed—Everything Goes—Nothing Reserved—Every Person Interested in the Purchase of an Instrument Should Read Carefully, As It Concerns Them Most.

PROMPT ACTION WILL BRING REWARD

This Is Our Annual Clearance Sale of Fine Pianos—Your Opportunity to Save From $100 to $250 in Your Piano Purchase. Terms Are Made as Pleasing as the Prices. Opening Evenings.

In announcing this gigantic clearance sale of fine pianos, uprights, grands, player pianos and organs, we wish to take the piano buying public into our confidence, making a plain statement of facts, telling our good reason for sacrificing our entire stock. All thoughtful people realize the fact that in conducting a business the magnitude of ours, that a great numoer of discontinued styles, sample pianos, rental pianos, etc., will accumulate during the year, besides countless numbers of good used pianos taken in exchange for grands and players. They are in first-class condition, and must be disposed of to make room for large shipments of fall goods already beginning to arrive. In order to open the fall season with an entire new stock, we have decided to include in this sale every instrument in our building, grands, uprights and players, including such well-known makes as A. B. Chase, Chickering & Sons, Knabe Brothers, Ivers & Pond, Kurtzmann, Kranich & Bach, Bush & Gerts, Hoffman and others. In players, A. B. Chase Artistano (grands and uprights), Emerson Angelus, Kurtzmann Angelus, The Angelus, The Auto de Luxe, The Autoplano, Koehler and Newton.

Such an array of high-grade instruments, numbering between 350 and 400, has never been offered before to the good people of Georgia. Remember, nothing is reserved, and in order to move this stock in a limited space of time we have reduced the price many cases from one-third to one-half the original price. All these points taken into consideration makes it possible for any family to have an instrument in their home, as our low prices and easy terms place them within reach of all. Your credit is good at The Wester Music Company. If you do not care to pay cash we can arrange terms to suit your convenience.

One Price; Plain Figures.

Every piano will bear two tags, one will be our regular one price tag, the other the clearance sale tag. Thus you may see at a glance just what can be saved on your purchase. Look for the blue tag.

Here are three sample pianos. Large size mahogany cases, fully guaranteed. Instruments must be seen to be appreciated. Regular price $275, your choice $127.

Three standard grade upright cabinet grands, mahogany, oak or walnut; fully guaranteed. Regular price $300, your choice of three different styles and makes $187.

Five standard makes. Five large size uprights, mahogany or oak cases, new styles, guaranteed for ten years, regular price $350, your choice $236; $10 cash and $6 per month.

Five large size cabinet grand upright sample pianos, mahogany or dark oak cases, fully guaranteed, regular price $375. These are going at $246; $10 cash and $7 per month. They are new.

Six large size uprights; your choice oak or mahogany case; guaranteed for ten years; three different styles and makes; regular price $375. They are standard makes. Your choice for $268. Easy terms.

Five large size cabinet grand mahogany cases; three different styles and makes; guaranteed for ten years; regular price $400; your choice $276; $15 cash and $7 per month. They are new.

Ten large size uprights, mahogany cases, different styles and makes, guaranteed for ten years; regular price $450, sale price $292. Easy payments can be arranged.

Four large size, mahogany cases, best makes; fully guaranteed; regular price $500; slightly shop-worn, but absolutely perfect. They will be taken quickly at $293.

Six large size upright cabinet grands, high grade mahogany and walnut cases, regular price $550, your choice $368, $312, $318. Fully guaranteed.

Three high grade grand pianos, mahogany cases, regular price $700, $750 and $800; your choice of $468, $612 and $642. Guaranteed for ten years. They are new. One Steinway slightly used, good as new. Beautiful mahogany case, regular price $1,150. Must be seen to be appreciated. Will be offered at our regular discount. If you need a grand piano, don't miss this opportunity.

Nine player pianos, mahogany cases, some of them slightly shopworn, but in first-class condition. Some are new. They are guaranteed for five years. The best makes are included. Regular prices, $550, $600, $650, $700, $750 and $800. All 88-note and new styles. Your choice, $418, $368, $396, $436, $487, $512. You must see the pianos to appreciate the values.

One large size mahogany case player piano, one of the best makes, regular price $850, slightly used. A big bargain for $296.

Fifty slightly used upright pianos. Oak, walnut, mahogany and ebony cases. Included in this lot will be found Vose & Sons, Hallet & Davis, Kranich & Bach, Painter & Ewing, Packard Conway, Bush & Gerts; Knabe Bros.; Sterling, Whitney Cooper, Hoffman and others. Many of them are as good as new. They are all in splendid condition. Former prices ranging from $350 to $550. Your choice while they last from $75 to $268. They are guaranteed and you can make no mistake in selecting any one of them. Any second-hand piano that we sell may be taken back within one year and apply the price as part payment for a new piano.

Second-hand Organs.

Twenty-seven organs, including Carpenter, Estey, Wilcox & White, Packard, Chicago Cottage, Kimball, Mason & Hamlin and others. Former prices from $65 to $125. Your choice for $12, $17, $21, $26, $28, $31, $37, $42. All in good order and guaranteed.

Every instrument can be found on our floors and our personal guarantee goes with each instrument. Remember that we can arrange easy payments, if you don't care to pay cash. Out of town orders given special attention.

Any purchaser living near Macon than Atlanta will find the same bargains at our store, No. 157 Cotton avenue, Macon, Ga.

Store will be open evenings.

THE WESTER MUSIC COMPANY,
64 Peachtree Street, Atlanta, Ga.
157 Cotton Avenue, Macon, Ga.

THAW BASES HOPES OF ULTIMATE FREEDOM ON ENDLESS LEGAL TANGLE

POEM THAW WROTE IN MATTEAWAN

MATTEAWAN, N. Y., Aug. 23.—The following verses were written by Harry Kendall Thaw in his room at Matteawn and found in the waste-paper basket beside his reading table last December:

"There are lights aflame on Broadway,
There are hopes and lives undone;
There are debts of sin no man can pay,
And Broadway hates the sun.

"There are vain regrets on Broadway,
There are secret sighs and tears;
For one must smile as well as pray,
And the weakling meets with jeers."

Fugitive From Matteawan, Backed by Family's Millions, Will Utilize Every Technicality to Prevent Deportation From Dominion of Canada.

SHERBROOKE, QUEBEC, Aug. 23. With Harry Thaw's case now in the courts of Canada, the prediction made that it would be months—years, perhaps eternity—before the slayer of Stanford White is again in the jurisdiction of New York State is strengthened.

His family, wealthy and powerful, has rushed to his defense. He has unlimited resources to fight the legal battle against his deportation from Canadian soil. When the first writ of habeas corpus was granted, it assured him the right to appeal his cause to the highest Canadian court.

It is believed that this litigation can be made to last over years. It will be impossible to deny him bail in the Dominion, for he is a lunatic only in New York State. His status now is that he is simply considered an undesirable by Canadian immigration authorities, who, it is thought, may override the courts and deport him.

Should the courts of Canada finally rule against him, his case might be taken up from Washington. Even then if he were finally deported, should he be sent to any other State than New York, he could fight extradition there, and there are many eminent lawyers who believe that it is absolutely impossible to bring him back into New York then.

Probably Considered These Facts.

All these things probably had been considered when Thaw made his daring escape from Matteawan Asylum, when he dashed across the Connecticut border, then through the State into New Hampshire and from New Hampshire into the Dominion of Canada.

Thaw knows well the law's delay. He remembers his long period in the Tombs before he was first brought to trial for the slaying of White. He remembers the long fight for life and liberty then. He remembers the enforced wait after the first mistrial. He remembers the weary days of his second hearing.

He remembers the slow progress of his cause during his legal efforts to get his release from Matteawan Knowing these things and recognizing that there was hardly a bare possibility that bail would be denied him, he turned toward Canada rather than seek safety at sea, as his pursuers thought he surely would do.

It was probably due to this realization that he accepted his arrest at Coaticook, Quebec, coolly and that he awaits the issue of his habeas corpus proceedings just as coolly now.

Secures Talented Lawyers.

He is represented in his application for habeas corpus proceedings by W. L. Shurtleff and Colonel H. R. Fraser, one of the most talented lawyers of Eastern Canada. He is thoroughly buoyed up in the belief that the Canadian Government will never order his deportation or extradition.

"I have studied every legal phase of my case and have arrived at the belief that I am safe here," said Thaw. "My plans did not alone include my physical escape. I looked into the legal feature to establish my status in any other State than New York and any other country than the United States. I am not a dangerous man. I do not seek vengeance. My wife, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, need not fear me. Nor need anyone else fear me.

"All I want is peaceful and legal liberty. I feel that I am perfectly safe. I have studied law ever since I was admitted to Matteawan, and I believe that I am qualified to speak in this matter.

"Statements to the effect that I only sought liberty to kill are senseless They are so ridiculous that I won't talk of them. I have the kindest feelings toward the people of Canada, and will retain such feelings, no matter what action the Dominion Government takes, but I hope that they do not deport me. Detention in an insane asylum is a living death. It is enough to make a maniac out of a perfectly sane man."

Refuses to Betray Friends.

Asked for a detailed story of his flight, he refused.

"Yes, I was the man they spotted in Lenox, Mass., said he. "But from that point on I must say nothing. I won't betray my friends."

Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, sister of Thaw, arrived soon after his arrest and immediately sought her brother. Thaw sent word to Roger O'Mara, the Pittsburg (Pa.) private detective, who has been his counsellor since youth, to rush here on the first train.

He said that he wanted to get the fight over with. His first trepidation came with the news that District Attorney Conger, of Dutchess County, New York, and Dr. Kieb, of the Matteawan Institution, would come to cooperate with the United States authorities in an effort to have Thaw deported bask to New York, or extradited.

Plans for the court battle in Thaw's behalf were carefully made by Mr. Shurtleff and Colonel Fraser and hopes to have his release ordered by Judge Globensky and plans to leave immediately for Quebec if he gets out. He intends to sail for France if he gets his freedom, so that he will be sure to be safe. Ultimately he hopes to have his legal freedom established so that he can return to Pittsburg.

Contend Thaw Is Tourist.

Among the grounds upon which the Thaw lawyers put into their plea for their client's liberty is that he is only a tourist passing through Canada, and they point to the case of Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, as a precedent.

They contend that Johnson was under conviction of an infraction of the United States law, whereas Thaw has not broken any law. They contended that Johnson was a fugitive from justice, whereas Thaw is a fugitive from an institution for the insane.

They pointed to Thaw's behavior to uphold the contention that no matter what his condition in the past, he is now sane and rational. The facts that Thaw has not broken any Canadian laws and that no indictment exists against him across the border were emphasized. Thaw offered many suggestions to his lawyers and in a way seemed to be their pilot. He looked very solemn and impressive as he gave his opinions of his own case.

"My idea is that speed is the requisite thing," Thaw told them.

News Unnerves Prisoner.

The Canadian Government and the United States Government were both represented by able counsel who resisted Thaw's efforts to gain his liberty on a writ of habeas corpus. They contended that the law governing Thaw's case is very plain and they pointed to precedents.

In fact, it was reported that Acting Superintendent of Immigration Blair in Ottawa had been counseled by the Ministry of Justice that Thaw should be deported at once. When Thaw heard this report he trembled and became pale. He was unnerved by the news and showed it.

The presence in Sherbrooke of the most spectacular and sensational prisoner in the world made a gala occasion. Not one of the Provincial fairs which are being held throughout Eastern Canada at this time could vie with Thaw as an attraction. Great crowds came into Sherbrooke from the surrounding country.

Families gathered about the jail, hoping to get a glimpse of the well-known prisoner if he was taken to the courthouse. Some came a distance of 100 miles to see Thaw. The street on which the jail is located was jammed.

Glad to Please Curious.

This curiosity tickled Thaw immensely. He said he did not want to disappoint anyone who really wanted to see what he looked like.

Mr. Shurtleff was resentful against Justice of the Peace Dupuis, of Coaticook, who held Thaw on the charge of being a fugitive and sent him here for further examination.

"We contend that Justice of the Peace Dupuis acted illegally," declared Shurtleff. "He exceeded his authority. He had no right to hold Thaw."

Colonel Fraser assured Thaw that conspiracy is not an extraditable offense and that he need not feel any great alarm over the fact that a warrant charging Thaw with conspiring to gain his liberty is on its way here from Dutchess County. He did not give such optimistic assurances about deportation, however.

Thaw lost no time in arranging to secure cash. He telegraphed to a banker relative in Pittsburg (where the bulk of the Thaw fortune is invested) to send him money to fight his case.

Thaw faced the habeas corpus hearing coolly and confidently. Before going to court, he ate a hearty breakfast and dressed with minute care, evidently realizing that he would be gazed on by thousands on the short ride from the jail to the courthouse.

Smuggling Claim Advanced.

He had prepared a number of notes to guide his lawyers in their conduct of his case, and was evidently disappointed when they did not seem to give these notes great consideration.

An investigation of the manner in which Thaw came into possession of a railroad ticket for Detroit, Mich., is being made. The Dominion authorities are not satisfied that Thaw bought the ticket himself.

It was learned from an authoritative source that immigration officers who are here plan to arrest Thaw on the ground that he smuggled his way into Canada if he gets his freedom on a habeas corpus writ.

The village of St. Hermenigilde, where Thaw and his companions came into Canada from the United States, is not a port of entry.

Evelyn Thaw, Fearing Death, Breaking Down Under Strain

'How Can He Say He Loves Me When He'd Let Me Starve?'

LATEST photograp of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw posed especially for The Sunday American at her hotel in New York where, it is said, she is near a breakdown rfom fear that her husband will regain his liberty and attempt to do her violence, and a photograph of Harry Kendall Thaw, taken in his cell at Matteawan from which he escaped to aCnada, where he is using every legal means to prevent his deportation to the United States

COPYRIGHT BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

PHOTO BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

'He's a Paranoiac,' She Screams—Describes Her Sacrifice.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is breaking down under the fear that Harry K. Thaw may evade the law and succeed in reaching her. There were visible evidences of the strain under which she has been laboring since he escaped from Matteawan last Sunday when a Sunday American reporter saw her last night in the Hotel Brevoort.

Thaw's declaration from the jail in Sherbrooke that her return to the stage had prompted him to make a dash for liberty and that he loved her more than anything else in life were called to her attention.

"Good God!" she exclaimed. "How could that man say he loves me when he would have let me starve in the streets?"

"Do you love him?" she was asked.

"Love him! I love him as much as he loves me," was her derisive reply. "He wanted to keep me down after I had testified and sold my soul for him and I had done everything that a human being could do for a man; and now he makes this maudlin statement about love.

Never Knew Love's Meaning.

"He is a paranoiac, and he doesn't know what love is. He has never known the meaning of it as long as I have known him. As for taking care of me as any man who loved a woman would do, both he and his mother them me out, after I had saved him from the electric chair.

"Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw entered into an agreement with me at the time of the trial to provide me with $12,000 a year on condition that I would consent to an annulment of our marriage. I did consent, and the papers were drawn. Then his mother repudiated it. That was in June, 1912, and I have received no money from them since that time.

"Before that date I had received $70 a week and my rent. I had to dispose of pictures and scrape and save to live, and I finally came to the conclusion that I had something within myself, that I could prove I possessed the gift of making my own living, which is a gift after all.

Breaks Into Tears.

"I thank God that I have that gift or his mother would be jeering at me in the gutter," and Mrs. Thaw broke into tears.

"He wants to spoil my life and my work," she continued, turning to John Reilly, her counsel, who was in the room. "I told you that if I made a success he would want to injure me, and here he has stated that my success was the thing that impelled him to break for his liberty. He wants to injure me and he will bend everything to that end.

"I told you also," she added to her lawyer, "that he would not be free long before he would betray himself through his excessive egotism.

"But there is worse coming if he retains his liberty. Things will begin to happen when he gets his drink. He is going to do something desperate, I know, just as surely as I could foresee the things I have referred to. Wait until he gets drink in him—it is horrible to contemplate!" And Mrs. Thaw again broke down and sobbed.

"Desperate and Dangerous."

"Don't you think that you may be exaggerating because of your overwrought state of mind?" was asked.

"I wish it were so," she replied. "But anyone who thinks Harry Thaw will not be a desperate man when he gets the opportunity to satisfy his appetite for drink, knows nothing of him. I know him. Dr. Flint knows him. Judge Jerome knows him. He will be a desperate and dangerous man.

"This great State ought to be ashamed of itself to allow a paranoiac to make and unmake its institutions." Thaw was permitted liberties that no man in his position had ever before enjoyed. Thaw has not done it, it has been the Thaw money.

"Do you know that when I used to see him in the Tombs he used to be drunk on Scotch whisky? Let the Tombs officials deny it if they dare. I know it and they know it. Harry Thaw told me he could get all the liquor he wanted there."

Mr. Reilly warned his client that she was overtaxing her strength, but she persisted in unloading her mind.

Old Graveyard Must Give Way to Railroad

Milwaukee Line Is Compelled to Move Old Burial Ground Near For Alcohol.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Aug. 23.—Among various other activities the Milwaukee Railroad people have found themselves engaged in rebuilding their line across Iowa is that of moving a cemetery.

In securing a right-of-way near the Des Moines River it purchased an old burial ground, one long since abandoned. Among the bodies the railroad men have removed is one that had been buried seventy-five years. The remarkable state of preservation of clothing and lack of decay of the bones after such a long period has been a source of surprise to the men exhuming the bodies.

U. S. Officer Invents Airship Destroyer

Balloon Equipped With Explosives and Wire Feelers Will Protect War Craft.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Joseph Steinmetz, a retired lieutenant of artillery in the United States army, has just perfected an invention that is likely to interfere greatly with the effectiveness of the aeroplan in naval warfare. Steinmetz is now negotiating with the War Department for the use of his invention. It consists of a captive hydrogen ballon suspended over either an arsenal or battleship. It carries a large quantity of explosives, which would be touched off by any aircraft coming in contact with wires extended from it. The airship would at once be blown up.

Couple Will Re-wed To Gain $1,000,000

Ceremony by Mormon Judge Is Called Unsatisfactory by Administrators of Estate.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—In order to comply with the wishes of the administrators of the $1,000,000 estate of her father, the late Thomas R. Lamb, of Edinburgh, Scotland, Mrs. Anna B. Lamb-Wilson must be married to her husband again.

The husband is E. Douglas Wilson, of this city. He pursued Miss Lamb more the Pennsylvania Rubber Company, of an 10,000 miles across the United States and over the Pacific Ocean before he married her in Honolulu last April. The ceremony was performed by Judge Hernandez, whom Wilson says is a Mormon. This marriage, though legal, did not meet with the approval of the administrators.

Edwin Booth Saves Lillian Russell

Rescuer Is Only Nine and His Playmate at Maine Resort Was Drowning.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug. 23.—Edwin Booth saved Lillian Russell from drowning at South Harpswell when she fell from the wharf. Both are summer visitors.

Edwin is 9 years old, and the son of Charles E. Booth, of Yonkers, N. Y., while Lillian is 13, and the daughter of Charles A. Russell, of Boston. Edwin, her playmate, was fully clad, but he dove into the ocean like a veteran, drawing the girl to safety.

Thieves Warn, Then Rob Rail Station

Telephone Central Office They Had Looted Pay Phone, Then Steal Instrument.

NYACK, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Before carrying away the telephone from the Stony Point station of the West Shore Railroad last night, thieves telephoned to the central office to say that they had robbed the office and, telephone coin box. The operator thought some practical joker was at work and paid no attention to the man who called.

This morning it was found that the money drawer at the station had been robbed of 75 cents in cash, and from the telephone box had been taken about $3 in coins. The thieves also took the telephone.

WOMAN POLITICIAN IS MAD.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Countess Elizabeth Emilie Von Wedel, a Frenchwoman and a former "political agent," who was quite a celebrity, has been placed in a German asylum for the insane.

SCHOLAR BARES HOSEA FAMILY'S SKELETON NOW

University of Chicago Professor Declares Prophet Took Wife as Horrible Example.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Hosea's family skeleton has come to light, if not to life. The domestic scandal of ancient Israel's prophet has been removed from its closet, scoured with higher criticism and rattled in the face of Biblical scholars, who were perfectly willing to let it rest. Professor J. M. Powis Smith, of the University of Chicago, exhibits it in an article on "The Marriage of Hosea," in the current number of The Biblical World.

Hosea's wife, Gomer Bath Diblaim, is the villainess of the story reconstructed by Professor Smith from the account of her marriage to the prophet, and in the first three chapters of the book of Hosea, Professor Smith asserts that Gomer, contrary to the usual interpretation of the Scriptural account, was a person of evil reputation before the wedding ceremony was performed.

Prophet Knew His Faults.

Professor Smith adds to his version the fact that Hosea knew of Gomer's faults and took her "with his eyes open." In short, the prophet married Gomer with the curious purpose of making the match a horrible example to the rest of the Israelites, he asserts.

The marriage was to impress Israel with the fact of its own disloyalty to God.

According to the professor's view, the belief that "Hosea, as a young man, fell in love with Gomer and married her, supposing her to be all his youthful imagination fancied her to be," that she later left his home to live with another man, that he bought her back and then become a prophet, will not hold water. The scholar declares that this version is founded on an imperfect notion of the physiology of prophets.

Professor Smith asserts that the wife's name, which means "Gomer, daughter of Fig Cakes," signifies that she was held in low esteem. He retranslates several words in the Biblical account and gives the following as the proper version:

"Hosea, a prophet already burdened with the sense of his people's sin, felt himself called upon by Yahweh to marry a lewd woman, to the end that through such a marriage he might open the eyes of Israel to the enormity of its offense in being disloyal to Yahweh, its rightful lord. In pursuance of this conviction, Hosea bought Gomer, a woman living in public shame with her paramour.

Placed Her Under Restraint.

"But he at once placed her under restraint, denying her association with himself as well as with others, and seeking by such discipline to fit her for her position as his wife. This phase of the experience was interpreted for Israel as meaning that she as Yahweh's bride must be disciplined by exile before she could expect to enjoy any further favor from Yahweh.

"After this period of restraint for Gomer she was taken by Hosea into his home and became the mother of three children. Each of these in succession was given a prophetic name, and, like Isaiah's children, became a walking sermon to Israel just as the institution of marriage itself had been."

Hard Fall Re-sets Dislocated Spine

WIMINGTON, DEL., Aug. 23.—An expenditure of $16,000 and treatment for years in sanitariums in Germany and Paris failed to accomplish what a fall downstairs did. Mrs. William Helm, of Ellendale, Del., was cured of a dislocated spine in this unusual manner. The fall forced her spine into place. To-day she says she is well.

Her head is bandaged, but she was able to preside over a recent meeting of the Ellendale Ladies' Social, of which she is president.

SENT FREE TO MEN

A Most Pleasing Remedy Given to Quickly Restore Lost Vitality.

A Free Trial Treatment Sent by Mail To All Who Write.

Free trial treatments of Enervita, a most pleasing remedy, are being mailed to all men who write to Dr. John S. Howell. So many who had suffered for years against the mental and physical suffering of man weakness have written thanking him for the great benefit received, therefore, Dr. Howell has decided to send free trial treatments to all men who write. It is a home treatment, and all who suffer with any form of weakness, resulting from youthful folly, premature loss of strength and memory, weak back, lack of vitality and confidence can now receive this strength-giving treatment at home.

The treatment has a peculiar grateful effect of warmth and seems to act direct to the desired location, promoting strength and development just where it is needed. It is given to relieve the ills and troubles that come from years of misuse of the natural functions, and has met with remarkable success, even in cases approaching advanced age. A request to John S. Howell, M. D., Suite 1221, Auditorium Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, stating that you desire one of his free trial packages, will be complied with promptly.

He is desirous of reaching that great class of men who are unable to leave home to be treated, and the free sample will enable them to see how easy it is to successfully treat man weakness when the proper remedies are employed. Dr. Howell makes no restrictions. Any man who writes will be sent a free sample and literature, carefully sealed in a plain package, so that you need have no fear of embarrassment or publicity. Readers are requested to write without delay.

Small Expenses Small Profit

This Advertisement Is Worth 50c

AT THE

Royal Shoe Shop

86 N. BROAD, NEAR LUCKIE ST.

This week, in order to introduce our new lines of Goodyear Welt and English Welt Dress Shoes for Men and Women, we will sell for

$2.50

If offered at our store, together with this advertisement
ONE PAIR TO A CUSTOMER
Our extra quality shoes as described above

ALL LEATHERS—Gun Metal, Kid, Russia and Patent Colt. ALL SIZES, All New Goods.

Made by one of the Greatest and Best Manufacturers in this Country.

We Make a Specialty of Comfortable Work Shoes for Mechanics and Workingmen

Certainly! We Sell EDUCATOR SHOES for the Whole Family

No reasonable offer refused on the remainder of our Low Shoes in stock. Come while the coming is good.

SAVE HALF A DOLLAR

The ROYAL SHOE SHOP

IRISH RAISE HUGE FUND TO ASSURE HOME RULE

American Hibernians Respond Liberally to Appeal Made After Great Demonstration in Chicago Against England's Domination.

Another Feature of Meeting Was Adoption of a Resolution Condemning Great Britain's Policy Toward U. S. in Canal Dispute.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Following the gigantic demonstration for Irish home rule at the thirty-eighth annual picnic of the United Irish Societies of Chicago, held in Brands Park, sons of Erin here are confident that in a few weeks American Hibernians will have raised a fund that will insure the home rule for which they have fought so long and which they have almost brought about.

Fifteen thousand persons visited the park during the day and they responded liberally to the call for funds with which to carry on their campaign. Three thousand dollars was raised at that time and the fund has grown steadily since.

A feature of the occasion was the reading by James T. Clark, president of the United Irish Societies, of a telegram from William Randolph Hearst, in which he warmly favored home rule. The president was quick to reply, expressing the thanks of the societies for the co-operation they have received in their work from Mr. Hearst's papers.

British Canal Stand Scored.

Another important feature of the day was the resolution prepared in advance and passed by a unanimous vote, opposing the British contention over the Panama Canal tolls.

The resolutions strongly uphold the views of the United States that this country, having built the canal and paid for it without aid, should have the right of passing her own ships through it without paying tolls, and that this action of the United States is entirely within its rights as a nation and is not subject to the criticism of any other nation.

The work of John Redmond, parliamentary leader, in forcing the home rule bill to the verge of final passage also was commended highly.

One of the most impressive features of the occasion was the exhibition of a full-size model of the statue of Colonel F. Finerty, the famous soldier-journalist and a son of whom Erin is very proud.

Colonel Finerty wrote the story of the Custer campaign against old Sitting Bull, and the massacre in which Custer's whole command was wiped out. In his later years Colonel Finerty was editor of the Irish-American, and devoted all his energies to the home rule campaign, now so nearly won.

Work of Irish Sculptor.

The splendid statue of the old fighter is the work of Professor Charles J. Mulligan, of the Art Institute, a pupil of MacMonnies and Saint-Gaudens.

Among the speakers who addressed the enthusiastic throng were United States Senator George E. Chamberlain, of Oregon, former Attorney General Maurice T. Maloney, P. H. O'Donnell, Joseph E. Ryan, John T. Sutton, of Lincoln, Neb., and Harry W. Smith, of Springfield, Ill.

In part, Mr. Maloney said: "We of the Celtic race have always struggled for a place in the sun, and have made a good deal of history, but we have been accused in the past of not being quite what we ought to be in the old country, and did not act to our own interest. English misgovernment and oppression were solely to blame for this.

"Now I can see a new Ireland rising above the horizon, a nation once again. The Irish people had advanced with giant strides, now that the long tribulation of our night is passing away."

Senator Twists Lion's Tail.

United States Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon said:

"My people came to this country to avoid persecution in the mother country, persecution by the English Government. Ireland had no measure of freedom in those times."

Speaking on the Panama Canal, he said: "We have a perfect right to arrange to suit ourselves charges on a canal that was made in America, solely by American money. If England will not send her exhibits to the San Francisco Exposition on this account, I would say let her keep them at home.

"If we were not careful to withstand these encroachments of the British Government, we might in the end find ourselves in the same case as Ireland finds herself to-day. I foresee home rule for that country, within the next two or three years without question of doubt."

Tight Skirts Make Idle Factory Girls

Mill Men Assert Present Styles Curtail Demand for Goods and Cause Lack of Work.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., Aug. 23.—That the factories manufacturing cloth are suffering from the present styles in women's wearing apparel, owing to the smaller sale of cloth, and that many operatives are being thrown out of work in consequence, is the opinion of many leading New Bedford manufacturers.

In the past three years the circumference of women's skirts has been cut down on the average about two yards. The smaller sales of cloth have necessitated a curtailment in the mayro and hundreds of idle operatives are waiting until the styles change before they will be put to work again.

Irish Societies Leader Thanks Mr. Hearst for Support of Home Rule

CORDIAL telegrams of congratulation and thanks were exchanged between William Randolph Hearst and James T. Clark, president of the United Irish Societies of Chicago on the occasion of their annual picnic recently. Mr. Hearst expressed his belief in the justness and the ultimate success of the cause of home rule, while the head of the Irish societies in his reply earnestly thanked the publisher for his co-operation in their work in behalf of their fatherland. Mr. Clark's message follows:

CHICAGO, Aug. 20, 1913.

Hon. William Randolph Hearst,
San Francisco.

The sentiment of the United Irish Societies toward your papers has always been one of appreciation. Often in the past we have admired your unselfish advocacy of the cause of liberty and the 15,000 Irish-Americans at the ceremony of unveiling of the John F. Finerty monument were thrilled by your message in favor of home rule for Ireland. This monument is symbolic of the revitalized Irish nation that has been the inspiration of Parnell, Redmond and other patriots, and we believe it would strengthen the home rule cause immeasurably if you would publish in your Sunday papers, in the near future, a comprehensive account of our recent demonstration here, and emphasize its significance to Irish liberty.

JAS. T. CLARK, President,
United Irish Societies.

Mr. Hearst's Home Rule Message

San Francisco, Aug. 15.

As an American believing ardently in liberty and opportunity in equal rights and equal justice, I believe sincerely in home rule for Ireland.

If I were an Englishman I would believe with even greater earnestness in home rule not only for Ireland, but for every individual integral part of the British Empire.

I would believe in genuine home rule and in general home rule. I would believe in home rule which would insure complete independence in local government for every state and in a general government which would afford every state equal rights, equal liberties and proportionate representation.

Such just and genuine home rule is the best and perhaps the only remedy for the threatened decadence and possible dissolution of the British Empire. The preservation and perpetuation of the British Empire in its full prestige and power are only to be found in a voluntary federation of independent states, not held together loosely by compulsion but molded into an imperial entity by the natural and nationalizing forces of mutual confidence, mutual affection and mutual interest.

If I were an Irishman I would take pride in this fight for home rule, first because of the benefit I was helping to confer upon my country and my own countrymen, and, secondly, because of the benefit which will inevitably ensue to all other sections of the British Empire and to other nations throughout the world.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

'Perfect Baby' Fed on Soup and Vegetables

Hundred Per Cent Child Also Gets Abundance of Water and Fresh Air.

PASSAIC, N. J., Aug. 23.—"Good, substantial food, well cooked, is what I feed him," said Mrs. Thomas Watterston, of No. 110 Central avenue, when asked how she reared her son, Leslie, just declared the only 100 per cent perfect baby in the "better babies" contest in Passaic. Three hundred infants contested. He is 27 months old.

"He gets soups, fruit, vegetables, puddings, cereals," continued the mother. "I give him very little meat, few eggs, but plenty of water, inside and out."

Baby Leslie goes to bed about 8 p. m. and arises about 7:30, awakening of his own accord and bounding out into the fields before breakfast. He has a two-hour nap every afternoon, and always sleeps with the windows in his room wide open.

Women Voters Save Mayor From Recall

Committee From Their Organization Canvasses Every Ward to Prevent His Defeat.

JANESVILLE, WIS., Aug. 23.—Mayor James A. Fathers was the victor by a narrow margin to-day in Wisconsin's first recall election of importance under the commission form of government. He was elected by 88 votes, with a total of more than 3 00 votes cast, more than were ever before voted in a Janesville municipal election.

Mayor Fathers received 1,570 votes and his opponent, John C. Nichols, 1,472. Fathers carried three wards, the First, Second and Third, those chiefly occupied by the church and aristocratic elements, while Nichols carried the Fourth and Fifth Wards, the homes of the poorer people.

The election follows the trouble over saloons six months ago, when the Fathers administration started a campaign to clean up the town. Every ward in the city was canvassed by women's committees in the interest of Fathers.

Standardize Book to Simplify Grammar

Educators Work to Have Study of English Language Made More Uniform.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Aug. 23.—Standardization of grammatical nomenclature, which will do away with the confusion in the study of English, as well as other languages, in American schools, has been effected by a committee of fifteen, of which Professor Hills, of Colorado College, was a member.

The committee made a report to the National Educational Association in convention at Salt Lake City and its adoption without amendment virtually insures the following of the committee's recommendations in all schools and colleges.

According to Professor Hills it was found that in the sentence "John is good," the word "good" was called by nine different names in 20 grammars. the word "John" in "This is John," was called by nineteen terms, and in "We made John president," the word "president" was given eighteen different names in the books examined.

Philippine Hero Can't Re-enlist in Army

Batt'e-Scarred Pensioner Rejected by Recruiting Office on Account of Wounds.

SPOKANE, Aug. 23.—One of the seven heroes of the United States army who survived the bloody massacre of Balingiga, P. I., when he saw more than 100 of his comrades and officers go to their death at the hands of a savage Philippine tribe, and himself, was mutilated in many places on his body and given up for dead, John M. Newhouse, applied for reenlistment in the United States army.

Newhouse is 37 years old and came from Helena. He is now drawing $30 a month for the injuries he received in the massacre. Newhouse told of his experience while pleading with local army recruiting officers to take him into the army again.

Officials were compelled to reject the applicant on account of a stiff right arm caused by one of the cuts from a bolo.

Lightning Bug Used To Illuminate House

West Virginian Discovers New Light Medium Which He Declares Surpases Electricity.

MORGANTOWN, W. VA., Aug. 23. Thornton Flowers, of Mora, claims that by treating the common firefly or lightning bug with a secret chemical process he has produced a light surpassing the tungsten incandescent. He has his home illuminated with the new light.

Several weeks ago, Flowers says, he captured an immense lightning bug. It gave out a brilliant light, and this gave him an idea that the light from fireflies would illuminate a room if they were made to glow incessantly. He hit upon a mixture of chemicals, which, he says, not only will retain the glow after the insect's life is extinct, but will increase it.

He captured the insects by hundreds, treated them with chemicals and placed them in globes throughout his home.

Blind Girl Student Marvelous Gardener

Produces Daisies Three Times Size of Ordinary Flowers and Vegetables Just as Big.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Twenty-seven deaf and dumb girls and boys, ranging from 10 to 17, are being taught to speak, read, write stories, sew, make biscuits, solve arithmetic problems, spell and garden at the Sixteenth Street school here, where an exhibition of their work was held recently.

Miss Elizabeth Kenealy, 15, is creating a sensation at the school because of her wonderful success in raising flowers and vegetables.

In a middy blouse and dark skirt, Miss Elizabeth works in her gardens, one at home and the other at school, producing daisies three times the size of the ordinary flowers, and beets and many average vegetable food like radishes in size.

SMITH URGES ZONE CURE FOR BOLL WEEVIL

Senator From South Carolina Declares South's Loss in 17 Years Is $1,000,000,000.

Continued from Page 1.

an isolated spot in Texas until it has now reached the State of Alabama, and I have been appalled by the damage wrought by its ravages. During all these years I have been hoping for the discovery by which the pest could be exterminated, or even checked, but in both I have been disappointed.

Likes Zone Remedy Plan.

Some time ago the suggestion was made to establish across the entire cotton belt, east of the areas infested by the weevil a zone of 100 miles, in which no cotton should be planted. It was argued that this would check the eastward advance of the weevil, as it subsists only on the cotton plant, and it was also argued by entomologists and other experts on plant and insect life that my moving this zone westward from year to year all the weevils in the Cotton States would be starved out and entirely exterminated until the Mexican border was reached.

The idea appealed to me very strongly, and I have given the subject a great deal of study ever since. I believe this plan is entirely feasible, and while at first thought the cost may seem prohibitive, yet when the estimated cost is compared with the estimated saving the zone plan must be looked upon as a very sound business proposition.

The Government entomologists, farm demonstration agents and others admit that if this zone plan is put into operation it will undoubtedly check and finally exterminate the boll weevil, as it will have nothing to feed upon, and they admit at the same time that no other plan that has been tried so far has been at all effective.

I have had an estimate made of the cost of the proposed zone and I think it is a very liberal one. It follows:

"The cessation of cotton growing over an area of 46,245 square miles, in which the crop is valued at $98,990,047 per annum, is at first glance such an appalling suggestion that few have even thought to look deeper.

Sees Need of Substitute.

"We must add also to this the loss in ginning business, which is computed at $2,915,518 per annum and the loss in seed products totaling $5,633,562. This means that there must be compensation for a loss in earning value of $107,539,127 per annum.

"In the first place, any scheme which would call for the cessation of cotton growing must provide the means and knowledge for growing something else in the place of cotton.

"A large crop of trained agriculturists instructing in the cultivation of new and profitable crops and in the principles of rotation, maintenance of soil fertility, etc., would help the people to double and treble the output of their land within very few years. It would also be necessary to supply seed for planting the 2,573,672 acres of cotton land in other crops. Thus the greater part of the prospective loss can be met at a reasonable expense.

"The loss of the ginners and part of the loss of the oil men will have to be assumed by the Government. This loss would not exceed $9,000,000.

"It would be necessary for the western portion of the quarantine area to remain out of cotton for possibly three years.

"East of the proposed quarantine line there lies an area of 112,027 square miles of territory in which cotton can be produced. The average yield per acre (1908-1811) for this territory has been 3,051,103 bales (500 pounds), of which 32,892 bales (500 pounds was sea island cotton. The value of the latter was $4,224,235.

Places Faith in Expert.

"The value of the remaining or upland cotton, valued at 11.9 cents per pound, was $174,345,554. The value of the equivalent amount of seed produced would be $33,943,522. Thus the annual value of the producers of the crop to be protected is $217,514,211.

"History of the boll weevil has shown that if this area is not protected its production will be lowered year by year until possibly 50 per cent of the crop is taken, and sometimes as high as 75 per cent."

The zone plan is the only suggestion that has yet been offered that holds out any promise of relief. The cost of the zone plan is undoubtedly great, but when the estimated cost is compared with the estimated saving, the protection of sections not yet reached and the ultimate eradication of the boll weevil throughout the entire cotton belt, the cost does not seem to be prohibitive. In fact, the cost of the zone system will be mild compared with the loss that will be entailed if the boll weevil is not exterminated.

Sea Island Crop Imperiled.

It is practically certain that if the boll weevil spreads to the South Atlantic States the sea island cotton industry will be wiped out entirely. This is by reason of the semi-tropical nature of the islands, the luxuriant foliage which affords a safe harbor and breeding ground for the insects during winter and summer, and the fact that there is neither extreme heat nor extreme cold, both of which are destructive to insect life. It is my deliberate judgment that if the boll weevil reaches the sea islands, there will be no more sea island cotton.

I have spoken of the aggregate loss to the country, but the feature that appeals to me most strongly is the loss to the individual. The country may eventually recover from the damage done to the cotton crop, but the individual cotton farmer whose income is cut in half or destroyed, and whose property is made to depreciate in value, may never recover. The loss to him will be irreparable.

My object in writing this is in order that the people may know just how seriously the cotton crop is being menaced, and that they may discuss and understand the only plan that has been offered, which promises to accomplish the result needed. If any other plan is suggested that promises to accomplish the result at a less cost or in a quicker manner, I will give it my heartiest indorsement.

I will be glad to have the farmers and others of the South consider this problem carefully and write me what they think of it.

WOMAN IS KEY IN STRUGGLE TO UNSEAT SULZER

New York Governor's Foes Call Wife's Illness a Sham and Confession a Ruse.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Apparently deadlocked until the High Court of Impeachment meets September 18 to try the charges of high crimes and misdemeanors against Governor William Sulzer; both the accused Executive and Lieutenant Governor Martin Glynn are busy, the one strengthening his defense, the other preparing to invigorate his attack. In the meantime, the official business of the Empire State is at a standstill.

The government of New York presents a paradox unique to republican government. The State has two Governors, and it has none. Two men maintain they have the right to transact the State's business. No business is being transacted.

And in this struggle for power, the battle seemingly centers about a woman, a woman who has no voice in the government, who is not even allowed to vote under the statutes of the State.

Wife's Illness Questioned.

In addition to the law point raised by the defenders of Sulzer that he can not be impeached or tried for things he did before he took the oath of office, the defense lays greatest stock on the declaration by Sulzer's wife that she, not the Governor, used checks he had received as campaign contributions to speculate on the stock market.

On the other hand, it is learned that the Frawley Committee, which brought to light the charges on which the Governor was impeached, will make her confession the subject of a rigid examination to shatter, if possible, the defense, which will be based largely on her statement.

In the meantime, Mrs. Sulzer, it is reported, is dangerously ill, her nerves broken, it is said, under the strain which she has experienced since the charges were brought against her husband.

Sulzer's enemies even question this illness. They question it so seriously that it, too, is to be investigated. The first step in this investigation,

Both Accused of "Shamming."

The committee believes that "talking too much" consisted of telling stories of Mrs. Sulzer's true condition which were not to the liking of the Governor. An inkling of this purpose was contained in an interview with Assembly Majority Leader Aaron J. Levy, who declared:

"Not only is Mrs. Sulzer's confession a sham, but the pretended illness of Mrs. Sulzer is a sham, of which William Sulzer is the chief perpetrator."

However, should Sulzer be removed from office by Tammany votes with all the judges of the Court of Appeals voting in his favor, he would count it a vindicaton and proof of his assertion that he is being persecuted because he would not turn over the State to Tammany Hall.

'Wild Man's' Haircut Fills Bushel Basket

Tramp That Frightened Woman and Children Gets Cleaning When Arrested.

MILLVILLE, N. J., Aug. 23.—A "wild man" was reported to the police as roaming the woods west of Millville and frightening women and children. Marshal Biggs hastened to the locality and discovered an uncouth man with shaggy beard which reached to his waist and long hair which hung matted over his shoulders.

When taken to the City Hall the man said he was Waldron Furry, of Low Banks, Canada, and that he was simply tramping.

Marshal Biggs acted as barber for the stranger and his hirsute adornment filled a bushel basket.

Pastor Adopts Wife He Had Divorced

Girl Becomes His Ward as Soon as Decree Was Granted by Court.

WOODWARD, OKLA., Aug. 23.—A divorce on unusual grounds has been granted here to B. F. Willett, who is an ordained Baptist minister, and who has served several terms as prosecuting attorney for the county.

Willett gives up his wife that she may become again, in effect, his adopted daughter. Years ago he adopted a little girl who took the name of Clara Willett. He put her in school at Enid, determined to give her the best education obtainable.

Six years ago, when Clara reached the age of 16, Judge Willett made his adopted daughter his bride.

In his petition for divorce the lawyer and former preacher set forth that Mrs. Willett had told him she never could love him as a wife should, but that she could be devoted to him as a daughter.

Girl Wins First Wireless License

She Installs Her Own Apparatus

Miss Alice McConaughy, of Cincinnati, at the key of her wireless instrument.

This girl operates under a license granted under the new wireless laws.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 23.—Miss Alice McConaughy, 13-year-old schoolgirl, is the first person to obtain an operator's license under the new laws regulating wireless telegraphy on the Great Lakes, even if she did get it on something of a fluke.

The license was issued before the inspector discovered that he had failed to notice the age of the applicant, whose father is a national bank examiner of Ohio.

"I did give them the right age," declared Alice. "I sent for the blanks and filled them out myself."

Her work on the demonstration set was satisfactory. The youthful operator installed her own apparatus at home, doing all the wiring and even erecting the 50-foot aerial.

Chester Boynton Sue By Wife for Libel

Echo of Famous Litigation Against Rev. William B. Ayres in New Case.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Helen Theresa Willet Boynton, of Wollaston, Mass., wife of Chester A. Boynton, who some time ago created a sensational church scandal by suing the Rev. William B. Ayres, pastor of the Park and Down Congregational Church, Wollaston, for $10,000 for alienation of Mrs. Boynton's affections, has filed a libel for divorce from her husband on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

Boynton claimed in his suit that the minister had broken up his home after joining the Boynton household as a boarder. Mr. Ayres and Mrs. Boynton in the former's case of defense denied all of the husband's allegations and declared that the whole trouble in the Boynton household sprang out of Boynton's attentions to a choir girl at the Park and Down Church, at which Boynton and his wife were both prominent members.

Boynton lost his suit and was expelled from the Wollaston church. Boynton is now living at Los Angeles.

Has $18 Salary Cut To $10 to Spite Wife

Judge, However, Orders Bookkeeper to Pay Alimony Just the Same.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—G. Lester Pinkham, a bookkeeper of Flushing, sued by his wife for alimony, testified that he was receiving only $10 a week.

His employer, A. M. Ryon, called as a witness, corroborated him.

"Is he worth more money?" asked the Magistrate.

"He certainly is," replied Mr. Ryon, "formerly I paid him $18 a week, but he asked to have his salary reduced to $10."

The Magistrate promptly ordered Pinkham to pay his wife $5 a week and furnish a bond of $520 to guarantee payment.

College Girl Walker Goes 25 Miles a Day

Little Pedestrian Reaches Pittsburg on Jaunt From New York to San Francisco.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 23.—With a jaunty rose-colored hat, Miss Gladys Mason, a petite New Yorker, who is "footing it" from Broadway to the Golden Gate, is on her way West.

The little pedestrian left New York on June 29 and has averaged 25 miles a days. Her high mark for a day is 41 miles, made east or Harrisburg.

Miss Mason is 22, a graduate of Emerson College, Boston. She expects to reach San Francisco Thanksgiving Day.

SAYS WIFE AND MAGICIAN WERE IN DEATH PLOT

Husband Declares That Their Conspiracy Kept Him in Bed Three Years.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Alleging that his wife was madly infatuated with a man of strange, weird, magnetic powers, and that they conspired to incapacitate him by administering mysterious potions, Theodore Speaber, a former undertaker of Chicago, filed suit for divorce from Anna Speaber in the Circuit Court at Laporte, Ind.

Through the machinations of his wife and a man who represented himself as being a magnetic healer, assuming the name of Louis Odillo, Speaber avers that they tried to convince him that he had become a victim of tuberculosis. Odillo then injected a chemical in his ear, he alleges, which brought on an illness that confined him to a hospital bed for three years. This, he charges, was done with the deliberate intention of causing a fatal sickness to set in and get him out of the way.

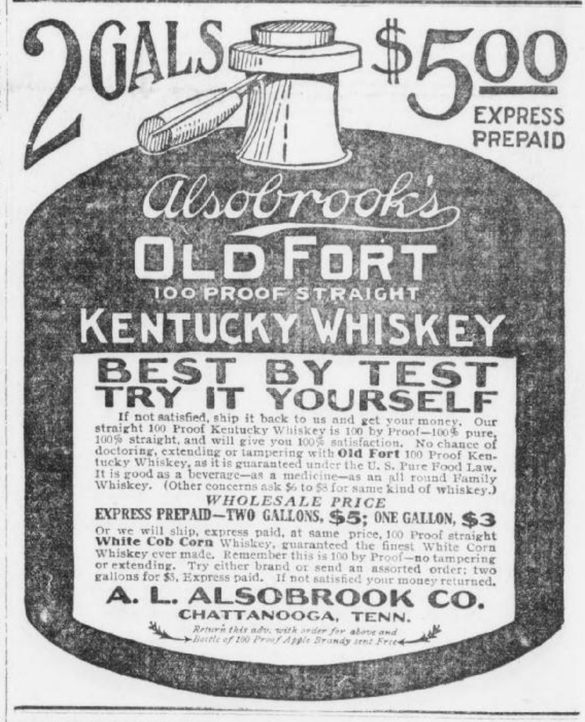
His wife then sold out his undertaking business and their household effects, he charges, for less than one-third of the real value. She then refused to see him after he had been released from the hospital.

Friends of Speaber say that he was at one time an inmate of the Elgin State Insane Asylum. But he was released later as cured.

COUNTY TO GIVE COOK BOOKS TO NEWLYWEDS

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Leaden biscuits and leather-crusted pies and all the other dinner delicacies of Mrs. Newlywed soon may cease to cause physical pain and matrimonial estrangement. Their existence is threatened.

Authorities of Cook County are considering the advisability of giving away official Cook County cook books with all marriage licenses. Robert M. Sweitzer, County Clerk, will present the plan to the County Board.



OTTLEY & KNOWLES

General Insurance

1508 Fourth National Bank Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

SEMI-ANNUAL STATEMENT

For the six months ending June 30, 1913, of the condition of the

Svea Fire and Life Insurance Company (Limited)

OF GOTHENBURG, SWEDEN.

Organized under the laws of the Kingdom of Sweden, made to the Governor of the State of Georgia, in pursuance of the laws of said State. Principal office in United States, 100 William street, New York, N. Y.

I. CAPITAL STOCK.

Whole amount of capital $200,000.00
Amount paid up in cash 200,000.00

II. ASSETS.

Total assets of the company, actual cash market value $1,422,807.39

III. LIABILITIES.

Total liabilities $1,422,807.39

IV. INCOME DURING THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THE YEAR 1913.

Total income actually received during the first six months in cash ..... $ 417,212.42

V. EXPENDITURES DURING THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THE YEAR 1913.

Total expenditures during the first six months of the year in cash ..... $ 379,770.04
Greatest amount insured in any one risk ..... $ 37,500,00
Total amount of insurance outstanding 121,363,329.00

A copy of the act of incorporation, duly certified, is of file in the office of the Insurance Commissioner.

STATE OF NEW YORK—County of New York.

Personally appeared before the undersigned M. L. Duncan, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the United States manager of the Svea Fire and Life Insurance Company, Ltd., and that the foregoing statement is correct and true.

M. L. DUNCAN, United States Manager.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 15th day of August, 1913.

EDWIN F. COREY,
Commissioner for the State of Georgia.

Name of State Agent—DAN B. HARRIS, Atlanta.
Name of Agents at Atlanta—OTTLEY & KNOWLES.

MRS. GODBEE CALM; CALLS SELF A TOOL OF JUSTICE

Divorced Wife of Millen Judge, Who Killed Him and Young Bride, Shows No Remorse. Planned Shooting With Care.

Trouble Alleged to Have Started Twenty Years Ago Over Prisoner's Property—Jurist Is Said to Have Slain Brother-in-Law.

MILLEN, Aug. 23.—Convinced that she has been an instrument of justice, satisfied that the work she had planned for days has been well performed, Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee, in her cell in the Jenkins County jail, to-day calmly and confidently awaits the hour when she will face a court to answer to the law for the slaying of her former husband, Judge Walter M. Godbee, and the bride who had taken the slayer's place in his affections.

Mrs. Godbee saw life pass from the body of the man with whom she had lived for years, and there was no remorse shown on her face. While imprisoned for his slaying she was told that she must also answer to the charge of having murdered his wife. She did not blanch.

She had determined on the death of both. She had planned her deed carefully. She believed that she was justified in resorting to arms to avenge her real or fancied wrongs, and persons who know her best declare she is ready to meet the consequences.

No effort to obtain bail has been made by her. She has waived the right of preliminary trial. She is content to remain in jail until her time of trial comes.

Started Twenty Years Ago.

The attitude of this woman, who has passed her fiftieth year, is one of the most remarkable features of this remarkable tragedy.

Twenty years ago, when Judge Godbee and his second wife found they were mismated, the foundation for the double slaying was laid. The climax came Monday morning in the Millen postoffice, when Judge Godbee was almost instantly killed and his young wife fatally wounded by pistol shots fired by the woman from whom he had been separated by the courts.

Both Judge Godbee and the woman held as his slayer are of prominent Jenkins County families. Godbee had been prominent in politics. He had been married three times.

His first wife died many years ago, but, at his request, he is buried at her side in the cemetery at Waynesboro. Soon after her death he married Miss Edna Perkins, daughter of the late Mills Perkins, and heiress to considerable property.

They lived in apparent happiness until the early nineties, when the first signs of trouble came. At this time Judge Godbee acquired rights to certain properties which belonged to his wife before their marriage. It is charged that the judge afterward sold this property and reinvested the proceeds for his own personal benefit.

Shot Brother, Is Rumor.

Then there is an old story that years ago in Burke County Judge Godbee became involved in a difficulty with a brother of the woman he afterward married, and killed him. He pleaded self-defense and was acquitted.

There is no record, though, that this trouble had any bearing on the marital differences of the couple.

Friction between the couple reached a critical stage ten years ago, when Mrs. Godbee filed suit for divorce in Jenkins County, charging cruelty on the part of her husband.

She declared that the judge had humiliated her before her children, had driven her from his room and had nailed the entrance between the two chambers in which they lived.

Even after this suit was filed there was a reconciliation, but the trouble cropped out again about five years ago, when Mrs. Godbee again entered suit. She was granted absolute divorce, but the judge was successful in resisting her plea for allmony. Mrs. Godbee was also given the custody of her minor child, Miss Sarah Godbee, with whom she lived at the time of the tragedy.

Divorce Didn't End Trouble.

The divorce decree did not end the troubles of the pair, however. Mrs. Godbee always contended that the money on which Judge Godbee was living luxuriously after the decree rightfully belong to her.

It is certain that she was in straitened circumstances at the time of the killing, and it is believed that the sight of another woman enjoying the fortune she believed hers, while she virtually was living in poverty, had no little to do with her determination to take justice into her own hands.

For after the divorce Judge Godbee married again. His third wife was Miss Florence Boyer, 25 years old, of Youngstown, Ohio. After their meeting at the sea shore Judge Godbee continued his courtship at her home, and little more than four months ago he brought her to Millen as his bride.

A crisis was reached. Soon after the judge's return, it is declared, he received demands from his former wife that he contribute to the support of her and her daughter. In these demands she cited the fact that she was entitled to at least part of the income he derived from property which had originally been hers.

Judge Feared for Life.

Intimate friends of the judge say that from that time on he feared, not only for his own life, but for that of his bride.

So alarmed did he become that on receiving a threatening letter Sunday he refused to take his bride to church, although he was a steward of the First Methodist congregation, and requested the pastor, the Rev. E. E. Rose, to come to the Hotel Estelle, where he had apartments, to conduct private prayers.

It is evident that on that same day Mrs. Godbee No. 2 decided on the deed she committed Monday. She got into communication with Marshal P. T. Foote and requested him to call on her at her daughter's home.

There, the marshal says, Mrs. Godbee showed him a .32-caliber pistol.

"Will this kill as quickly as a .38?" was the surprising question he was asked.

"It will if it hits the right spot," he replied. She seemed satisfied with the answer and the interview closed.

This same pistol was in Mrs. Godbee's handbag Monday morning when she went to the Millen postoffice. She knew that each day the judge visited there early in the forenoon to inquire for mail. She was seated writing as he entered the building, accompanied by his young wife. The slyaing followed.

Mrs. Godbee died Tuesday night in the apartments in which she and her husband had lived during the two months of their married life. Mrs. G. W. Boyer, mother of the slain bride, was en route from Williamsport to Millen when her daughter died.

Bulk of Estate to Daughter.

The will of Judge Godbee has been found in the possession of W. B. Wallace, a merchant, and one of the dead man's closest friends. The value of the estate is between $45,000 and $50,000. He bequeathes the bulk of his property and securities to his daughter by his first wife, formerly Miss Maggie Godbee, now married and living in Augusta.

Small portions of the estate are left to Frank Mills and King Godbee, sons of the divorced wife, and Miss Sarah Godbee, also an issue of the second marriage. The divorced wife is not provided for in the instrument. Frank Mills Godbee has been appointed temporary administrator of the estate of Judge Godbee, and A. S. Anderson, temporary administrator of the estate of Mrs. Florence Boyer Godbee.

The third Mrs. Godbee has been buried beside her husband and his first wife in Waynesboro. The condition of Mrs. Boyer, the slain bride's mother, is said to be somewhat improved following her collapse upon first seeing the dead body of her young daughter. Her two sons have come from Pennsylvania and will remain with her until she returns to her home at Williamsport.

Neither of the boys expresses any animosity toward the slayer of their sister and her husband, but both join their mother in hoping that exact justice will be done. Archibald and LeRoy Boyer, the brothers, have not yet decided whether they will attend the trial of the second Mrs. Godbee.

Vincent Astor Reported Captured Name Is Linked With Miss Sands Match Long Predicted by Gossips

Miss Elizabeth Sands and Vincent Astor.

Fiancee-To-Be Measures Up to Rigid Requirements of Young Multi-Millionaire's Mother.

NEWPORT, Aug. 23.—Decidedly the most interesting aftermath of the recent Newport yacht races is the persistent report that Miss Elizabeth Sands, beautiful daughter of Mrs. Frederick Sands, of this city, occupies the place of honor in the affections of Vincent Astor, head of that family and heir to its huge estates.

This report, which has been current in social circles here and in New York, took the form of a practical certainty, according to society's self-constituted soothsayers, when it was noted that in the party taken to the races by young Astor was only one of three girls to whom he paid marked attention last year. That one, of course, was Miss Sands.

It has long been known and greatly gossiped about at afternoon teas and other social functions that young Astor has felt a strong liking for the young beauty ever since they were school children.

Society wiseacres, who have long ago hung up in their mental art galleries a picture of young Astor and Miss Sands as a happy married couple, were not at all discouraged when the young man's affections at times seemed to wander from his childhood's choice.

"Just wait until Vincent's mother gets back to America and resumes her place at the 'helm,'" said these social clairvoyants, "and you'll notice a sudden slump in the fortunes of Elizabeth Sands' attractive rivals."

The prediction was based upon a firm belief that the aristocratic former Ava Willing would see to it that her son, who is now the head of the family and chancellor of its inexhaustible exchequer, should marry someone who measured up in every way to her rigid requirements as to ancestry, connections and social standing.

$175,000 TO BE GIVEN IN PRIZES FOR LIVE STOCK

Harness Race Purses at Panama-Pacific Exposition Will Total $225,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—The greatest live stock show in the history of the world is assured at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in 1915. Following the appropriation by the exposition management of $175,000 for awards for prize-winning live stock, and the news that $225,000 is offered in purses for harness races, each new announcement by Chief of the Department of Live Stock D. O. Lively discloses increasing interest in the forthcoming live stock exhibition.

The live stock department has at its disposal 50 acres of ground which will be devoted to the erection of live stock buildings, a hall for live stock congresses and agricultural meetings, a race track, and an open field upon which will be held drills, international cavalry horse contests, polo contests and exhibitions of the prize live stock of the world.

The live stock buildings will be constructed more from an exhibition standpoint than in keeping with any farm utility plan; the vast rows of barns which have characterized the live stock departments of other expositions will be avoided. Every separate section will be shown under a single roof.

In addition to the $175,000 set aside by the exposition management to be used in cash premiums, more than $45,000 has been offered by organizations representing various phases of the live stock industry. Of the prizes offered by the exposition, $50,000 will be given to horses, $50,000 to cattle, $25,000 to sheep and goats, $25,000 to swine, $12,000 to poultry, pigeons and pet stock, $7,500 to carloads of cattle, sheep and swine, $5,000 for prize-winning dogs and cats.

The department is making arrangements for holding the biggest poultry show on record, and birds from all over the world will compete for international prizes. The pigeons will take their place in the exposition not only as applied to the fancy, but as a utility, and some of the birds will be used as carriers, taking part in races across the continent from San Francisco.

Under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, the exposition will give two harness race meets, one in the spring and one in the fall of 1915, at which there will be offered $225,000 in stakes and purses. With one or two exceptions, the special stakes included in the grand aggregate of $225,000 will be the greatest that ever have been offered.

America's Oldest Church Discovered

Ruins of Centuries-Old House of Worship Off Yucatan Visited by Explorers.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 23.—The ruins of the oldest Christian church in America have been discovered on the Island of Cozumel off Yucatan by Professor Morley and Jesse Nusbaum, of the Sarvard-San Diego expedition.

Cozumel has not been visited by white men for almost a century, and Morley and Nusbaum had thrilling adventures, but deny that its people are cannibals. The scientists were equipped with a moving picture outfit, but in leaving the island for the mainland their canoe was upset and much of the photograph material was spoiled.

While Cozumel is only 30 by 7 miles in extent, it was found extraordinarily rich in monumental and architectural remains. It was here that Cortez had a fierce battle with the natives and erected what is declared to have been the first Christian church in America.

Repeats His Wedding Date as Punishment

Husband Who Told Court He Wished to Forget Marriage Has New Litany.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 23.—"June 14 1887," Philip Leborski will have to repeat ten times a day for the next 60 days in order to keep out of the house of correction, by sentence pronounced upon him by District Court Judge Elsner.

Leborski, who is a wealthy real estate owner, was arrested when a patrolman found him shaking his fist and swearing at his wife, while she was perched on the gable of their residence.

In the trial Leborski told the Court he was trying to forget he was married and that he had succeeded in forgetting the date of the ceremony. The Court informed him that no man had a right to forget such a date and then ordered his case continued 60 days and told Leborski to recite the date of the wedding ten times daily or he would have to go to jail. Leborski started his recitations before he was out of the courtroom and his wife was doing the counting.

Crusade Started on Big Sunday Dinners

Domestic Science Teachers of Kansas Schools Are Enlisted in The Campaign.

TOPEKA, KANS., Aug. 23.—The custom and the physical requirements that a man must rest at least one day in seven have brought about a campaign in Kansas against the big Sunday dinners that have so long been the delight of the average man. The domestic science teachers of the schools have enlisted the aid of domestic science students throughout the State and the big Sunday dinner is going the way of the hard biscuit and the underdone meat in the Kansas homes.

The campaign was started a year ago at the University of Kansas, but it now has the support of every high school and college with domestic science courses.

Maryland Jews to Raise Shaft to Friend

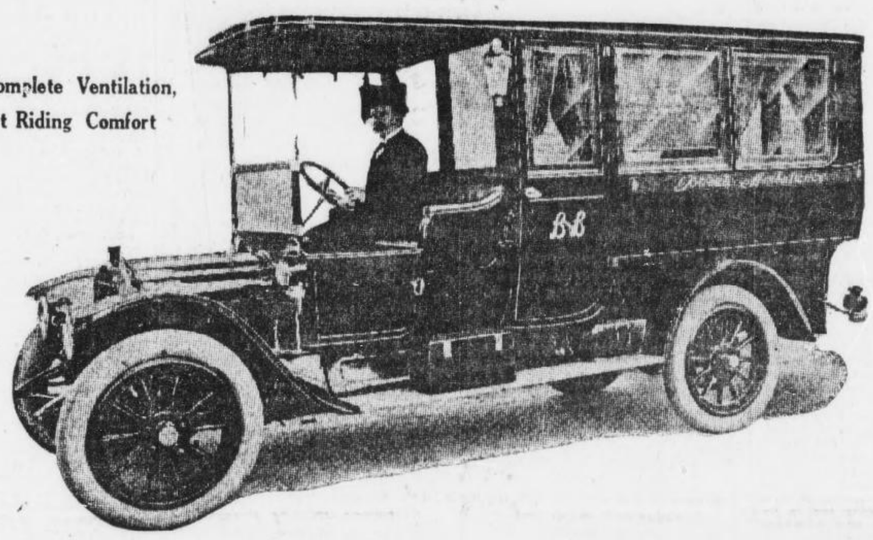
Thomas Kennedy, Who Passed Law Giving Them Right to Hold Office, To Be Honored.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., Aug. 23.—Mendes Cohen, of Baltimore, a grand-nephew of one of the first Jews elected to office in the State of Maryland, will act as treasurer of the fund to be raised to build a monument to Thomas Kennedy, author of the law passed in 1826 that gave Jews the right to hold office.

Kennedy was famous in several other respects than as champion of the cause of political equality, for which he fought as a member of the Legislature eight years. He wrote many ballads that aroused the martial ardor of his fellow citizens in the days preceding the War of 1812.

Barclay & Brandon S-E-R-V-I-C-E

Most Complete Ventilation, Fullest Riding Comfort



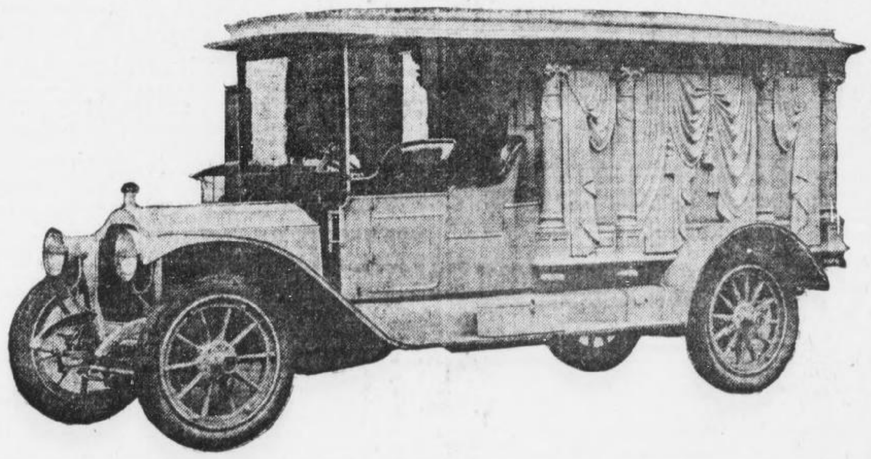
Equipment — Electric Fan, Running Hot and Cold Water, Ice Water, Steam Heat

This Picture Shows the Very Finest and Best Equipped Ambulance in the Entire South

The Barclay & Brandon PRIVATE AMBULANCE is positively the very last word in up-to-date Ambulances.

Nothing could be more complete—not a single thing can be suggested that might tend to give further and more complete comfort to the patient, that is not already a part of its wonderful equipment.

This most complete Ambulance is at your immediate service at all times, whether you live in Atlanta or suburbs. For white people only.



BARCLAY & BRANDON Service as Funeral Directors is Widely Known for Its Dignity and Exclusiveness

One very important point is that Barclay & Brandon alone can furnish you with a COMPLETE AUTOMOBILE FUNERAL, as they have just purchased a $7,000 Packard Hearse, the only Auto Hearse in the State. Choice of either auto or horse-drawn hearse.

In time of bereavement it is assuring at least to know that there is some one to whom you can intrust all the details of a funeral service, secure in the knowledge that every requisite will be carefully attended to.

This you may expect AT ALL TIMES from

BARCLAY & BRANDON

246 Ivy Street, Corner of Baker Phones Bell, Ivy 788, Ivy 168. Atlanta, 788

Athens — Latest News of North Georgia — Rome

ATHENS JUMPS TO TOP NOTCH IN BUILDINGS

Figures for Year To Be $1,250,000—Nine-Story Structure Is Ready.

ATHENS, Aug. 23.—The classic city of Athens, once considered an educational community only, is fast assuming an aspect that will be as commercial as academic, with tall business buildings fast going up. A few years ago the tallest building here was about four stories, and at present there is a handsome seven-story structure completed and a $400,000, nine-story structure which will be ready for occupancy about October 1.

Building permits for the year will probably total $1,250,000, which is as good a record in proportion to population as Atlanta's banner year, and perhaps a little better. The million and a quarter will be the highest that Athens has yet attained.

Commerce Chamber Active.

The Chamber of Commerce is concentrating its efforts along constructive lines, and as evidence of what the city is doing points to new industries that have located here in recent months.

Among the new plants is that of the Athens Pottery Company, which, after an investigation of raw material supply in various parts of the country, located in Athens because of the high quality and large quantity of clays in this section. This plant came from East Liverpool, Ohio, which is one of the old pottery centers of the country. There are within nineteen miles of Athens white silica clay deposits that are well suited for the manufacture of high-class clay products, and efforts are being made to have manufacturers locate plants to utilize this valuable raw material.

The Allen-Moss Tannery Company also was secured by the Chamber of Commerce. This plant is costing $50,000, and will manufacture sole leather and by-products of soap and glue.

The Georgia Plow and Implement Company, which has been in operation about seven months, has a new plant and equipment costing about $10,000, including cupola, woodworking and ironworking shops and foundry and machine rooms.

Extensive Building Operations.

Prominent among buildings in course of erection is the Holman Building, 65 by 200 feet, and nine stories in height. This structure is of reinforced concrete, with an exterior of dark red tapestry brick. Stores will be located on the first floor and offices above, with a ballroom on the top floor. The cost will be $400,000. C. M. Strahan, of Athens, is the architect, and the H. J. Carr Construction Company, of Atlanta, the builders. This building is very near completion, and will be ready for occupancy about the middle of September or first of October.

This is the second office building to be erected in Athens. The other is the Southern Mutual Insurance Company's building, seven stories in height. Office space in both of the buildings is fully taken.

Athens is also to have a new Y. M. C. A. building to cost, complete, about $140,000. It will be of fireproof construction. The architects are Shattuck & Hussey, of Chicago. The Y. W. C. A. also has a new building, costing $35,000.

Demand for Office Space.

James Smith is erecting a new structure three stories in height, 125 by 225 feet. This will be of fireproof construction, the exterior of white brick and ornamental terra cotta trimmings.

There will be five storerooms on the ground floor, and these storerooms have already been leased for long terms, notwithstanding the fact that the building will not be completed until near the middle of September. J. W. Barnett, of Athens, is the architect, and the L. C. Smith Construction Company, of Athens, is the builder.

The Athens firm of H. T. Huggins & Son is building a four-story store building. This building is being finished in light colored brick and is quite an addition to the business district.

Atlantan Is Architect.

The new county courthouse, designed by A. Ten Eyck Brown, of Atlanta, will cost $150,000. This building is to be of reinforced concrete, with exterior of red brick and stone trimmings. It will be four stories high, and one of its interesting features is that the county jail will be located on the top floor. This will replace the structure at Prince avenue and Hill street, known to thousands of university men over the State.

The Athens Ice Company, a new industry for Athens, has just completed its plant at a cost of $30,000.

Several new churches are included in the building activities, among them being a Catholic church costing $20,000, a Baptist tabernacle costing $10,000 and a Presbyterian church costing over $25,000.

Costly New Residences.

Quite a number of new residences are being built, prominent among them being one for W. T. Bryan of fireproof construction, costing over $30,000, and a number of small residences being erected by John E. Talmadge to cost $75,000.

Athens streets are exceptionally well paved, and in the last ten years the city has spent $300,000 in this work, and not long ago voted $75,000 additional for further street improvement. The expenditure of this amount is now under way, and it is conceded that when the work is completed Athens will be one of the best paved cities in the South.

The city has also voted $100,000 for new schools, $25,000 being for a new building and $27,000 for asite for a modern high school, the remainder to be used for improvements and additions to established schools. With this expenditure Athens can boast of one of the most up-to-date city school systems in the State.

The Athens Gas Light and Fuel Company has recently expended about $30,000 in laying new gas mains throughout the city.

Miss Ruby Gillen

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Gillen, of Athens, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. S. D. Fambrough, at Bishop. Miss Gillen is a 1913 graduate of the State Normal School at Athens.

Auto Traded for Horse Wouldn't Go

Doctor Calls on Other Man to Swap Back, and He Says Was Cheated Again.

ROME, GA., Aug. 23.—Dr. W. A. Wright's fondness for automobiles was the cause of trouble with A. W. Williman, of Cave Spring, which resulted in the arrest of the latter on a warrant charging him with cheating and swindling.

Dr. Wright has discovered that an automobile, which looks as good as new standing still, easily could be not worth anything running. It is alleged that William traded an automobile to the doctor which, after the deal, refused to move.

A horse and buggy was given in exchange. When the physician called upon Filliman to trade back, he was quite willing, but had sold the horse. He, however, agreed to give him another. This horse was defective, Dr. Wright alleges. The case will be aired in the September term of the City Court.

TICK ERADICATION WORK IS PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Petty thievery has annoyed housekeepers here during the last week, for all articles of food possess an irresistible attraction to the depredators.

Pantries have been raided of flour, meal, potatoes, etc., while fresh meats, vegetables, butter and eggs have been taken from refrigerators. Many have been forced to worry through breakfast without bread. The citizens are becoming desperate.

TIFT COUNTY VETERANS TO HOLD ENCAMPMENT

TIFTON, Aug. 23.—The annual encampment of the Tift County Camp, U. C. V., will be held at Murrow Springs, four miles west of Tifton, on Little River, September 3.

Arrangements will also be made for holding a big barbecue on September 4, in which the Charlotte Carson Chapter, U. D. C., of Tifton, and the Sons of Veterans will assist the veterans.

ASKS $5,000 DAMAGES FOR INJURIES IN MILL

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—Because of alleged injuries Charles Wiggins claims to have sustained while employed by the Swift Manufacturing Company of Columbus, on July 7, he has brought suit against the mills for $5,000. He claims that he has been unable to earn a livelihood since he received his injuries.

LUMBER-LADEN SHIP SAILS.

PENSACOLA, Aug. 23.—The steamship Etolia has sailed for Buenos Ayres, loaded with 2,640,000 feet of pitch pine lumber. It also took on 847 tons of bunker coal in this port.

Begin Married Life With 24 Chlidren

Moultrie Bride and Bridegroom Had Even Dozen Each.

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—It is a very rare thing for newlyweds to begin keeping house with 24 children to make things lively from the first day of married bliss, yet this was the experience of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Truit, who were recently made man and wife by Justice J. J. Serrell in the Lee district of this County.

The bride was Mrs. M. J. Flowers, a widow with twelve children, and Mr. Truit, whose first wife has been dead for some time leaving him with an even dozen motherless children. Both of the participants in the recent wedding were bereaved about the same time and, living in the same community, they naturally turned ot one another for comfort, and finally agreed that the best thing to do was to marry.

FOOD THIEVES HARASS RESIDENTS OF DALTON

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The report made by E. M. Nighbert, inspector in charge of the tick eradication work, shows rapid progress the last month. Twelve dipping vats are in operation. There are now 372 herds, containing 2,347 cattle, free of ticks. The herds under local quarantine number 175 and contain 1,224 cattle.

The county has appropriated money to assist in the work, and it is believed the quarantine will be raised from this county by next year at the latest.

ALBANY GETS ANOTHER LARGE OIL COMPANY

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—Present indications are that another large oil company will make Albany a distributing center in the near future. N. H. Cook, of Atlanta, district superintendent of the Texas Oil Company, one of the largest of the independent companies, has looked over the situation here with a view of locating a distributing plant for the company.

BAPTIST ASSOCIATION TO MEET IN COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—The Columbus Baptist Association will meet in its annual session on Wednesday after the third Sunday in September in Manchester. Dr. B. W. Bussey, the moderator, will preach the doctrinal sermon. There are more than 30 churches in the association.

FIRST BALE BRINGS 14 1-4 CTS.

ELBERTON, Aug. 23.—G. P. Hall sold the first bale of cotton here. It was bought by T. O. Tabor & Son for 14 1-4 cents per pound, and it weighed 466 pounds. It was classed as strict middling.

ATHENS MAYOR URGED TO RUN FOR 3D TERM

H. J. Rowe Petitioned by Hundreds of Citizens to Enter Race Again.

ATHENS, Aug. 23.—Despite the fact that he has already served two terms as mayor of Athens, H. J. Rowe, who is now at the head of the city government, is being urged strongly by his hundreds of friends here to enter the race again this fall. A petition is being circulated freely by his friends and many are signing it, but as yet the Mayor has kept quiet as to his decision, and it will probably be several days before he gives out a statement as to whether he will stand for re-election again.

A bill providing a commission form of government for Athens passed by the general assembly is to be voted on by the people this fall and what bearing this will have on the mayor's race is still problematical.

Bumper Cotton Crop In Albany District

Several Hundred Bales Have Already Been Received in Market.

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—That about 50 per cent of the cotton in the Albany territory is from ten to fifteen days earlier than last year is the estimate of well-informed cotton men in Albany. The fact that Albany has received several hundred bales already, not counting that moved direct to the compress, is considered evidence that its estimate is approximately correct.

Last year, in addition to making a poor cotton crop, the farmers had no forage and have had to buy high-priced feed for eight months. While the acreage in feed crops this year is not much greater than it was last, the farmers have paid more attention to its cultivation, therefore making a better crop. With a bumper cotton crop and plenty of feed for their stock, the farmers expect a season of prosperity.

COUPLE REWEDS AFTER HAVING BEEN DIVORCED

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—After living together for twenty years and having several children born to them, Mrs. Lizzie Cooper sued Thomas Cooper for divorce, which was granted. Then he sued her for the amount of earnings, claimed as $1,800 in value, during this twenty years, she having possession of it all, and the husband not a penny.

The Supreme Court this week granted him a half interest. The wife claimed she had paid out $1,000 in fines for selling whisky, etc., but admitted she had also sold liquor. The two have become reconciled and have again married.

TWO CRAZY MEN ENGAGE IN FIGHT IN HALL JAIL

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Two crazy men, allowed the freedom of the hallway in the Hall County jail here, became engaged in a fight, and J. C. Johnson was choked and walloped severely. W. C. Stephens, whose form of mental derangement is on the order of melancholia.

Screams for help and the sound of blows were heard and a large number in the neighborhood of the prison were attracted. Johnson was beat up and bruised considerably by Stephens.

COTTON RECEIPTS SHOW DECLINE AT COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—Taking the position that Columbus has suffered the past few years because her cotton receipts have fallen off materially, the Columbus Board of Trade has inaugurated a campaign for the purpose of bringing more cotton to this city. Last year an effort was made to stem the tide of cotton going elsewhere by placing buyers on the streets, and while it had some effect, it did not counteract all the damage that has been done. An effort will be put forth to make the cotton market one of the most attractive in the State.

NEGRO SLAYER IS GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE AT ALBANY

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—In Superior Court of Baker County, which convened at Newton this week, several cases were tried. Simon Johnson, a negro, who killed his stepson on the Grant place in July, was found guilty and given a life sentence. Will Bodiford, a negro, was found guilty of attacking a negro girl and sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary. Jake Rhoades was found guilty of violating the prohibition law and given a six months' sentence or a fine of $200.

CITY RESERVOIR TURNED INTO A SWIMMING POOL

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—Those of Cordele who like an occasional dip into the water to alleviate the suffering of the summer heat probably will have their desires satisfied during this season of next year.

It is proposed to convert the reservoir at the old waterworks station into a swimming pool when the new plant is constructed.

COLQUITT LIKELY TO VOTE $400,000 BONDS FOR ROADS

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—A bond issue of $400,000 soon will be submitted to the voters of Colquitt County. The money is for public roads. Prominent politicians are firm in the belief that the issue will carry.

MASONS FROM 3 COUNTIES TO MEET AT ETON

Members of Order in Whitfield, Murray and Catoosa to Hold Convention Thursday.

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Masons of three counties—Whitfield, Murray and Catoosa—will gather at Eton, in Murray County, next Thursday for the annual meeting of the Tri-County Masonic Convention, Dr. S. A. Brown, worshipful master of the organization, having issued the formal call.

The day will be devoted to speaking and other matters of interest, to be featured at noon by a big picnic dinner. It is expected that several of the Grand Lodge officers will be in attendance, and plans are being made to entertain hundreds of visiting Masons.

The elective officers of the convention are as follows: Dr. S. A. Brown, Eton, worshipful master; H. B. Farrar, Dalton, senior warden; F. J. Vining, Dawnville, junior warden; W. M. Sapp, Dalton, secretary and treasurer.

Invitations have been extended to neighboring Masonic lodges to meet here Monday, when the grand master of the State Grand Lodge, Robert L. Colding, of Savannah, will be the guest of Dalton Masons. Plans are being made to entertain a large number of visitors at the afternoon and evening receptions for the distinguished visitor.

Columbus Fights For Better Service

Board of Trade Wants Central of Georgia to Put on More Passenger Trains.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—The Columbus Board of Trade has inaugurated a campaign to secure better passenger service over the Central of Georgia to points east and west from Columbus, it being claimed that the service that is now being given by the road is not satisfactory.

The Board of Trade is anxious to have the Central put on an additional train or two, or to have trains that come to the city reach Columbus in time to allow the people coming to the city an opportunity to do their shopping and return home if they wish in the afternoon of the same day. The trade organization has the backing of practically every business man in the city.

SEABOARD CONDUCTOR GIVEN $10,000 DAMAGES

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—After a strongly contested trial, both sides being represented by able counsel, a verdict was returned yesterday afternoon in Crisp Superior Court for $10,000 in favor of W. B. McMichael, of Jackson, against the Seaboard Railroad Company. McMichael had been in the employ of the road as a freight conductor and in an accident near Birmingham on the Atlanta and Birmingham division he lost a leg. He entered suit for $25,000 and the case was brought to this court for trial under the Federal employees' liability act.

NEW SCHOLARSHIP AT WOODBERRY SCHOOL

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Rosa Woodberry, of Atlanta, has notified the Thomasville Study Class that she has given a scholarship in her school in Atlanta to the class to be awarded by them to any deserving girl that they may select.

This action on the part of Miss Woodberry is appreciated by the members of the class, as it will afford advantages to some deserving girl here who is not able otherwise to have them. It is not known yet who has been selected for the place, but the class has the matter under advisement.

CAMILLA TO VOTE ON SCHOOL TAX SEPT. 30

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—September 30 has been set by the City Council of Camilla as the date for holding an election to ratify the schol tax bill for that town recently passed by the Legislature.

The election will be held under the same rules as elections for members of the General Assembly and the same qualifications will be required in registering. It is probable the opening of the school of Camilla will be deferred somewhat on account of this election.

RULES FOR PRIZES AT FAIR DECIDED UPON

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—The Directors of the Thomas County Fair to be held here this fall have received from the committee in charge the rules and regulations for measuring all crops to be exhibited for premiums and they will be followed closely.

J. Willis Moore has been named general director and will measure all acres and crops free of charge. It is said all indications point to the finest exhibit at this fair that has been known since it was organized.

THOMAS COUNTY FARMER EXHIBITS PRIZE CORN EAR

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—J. P. Cary, residing near Coolidge, had on exhibition here this week some corn grown by himself which is an example of what Thomas County can do in that line. One ear of this corn weighed two pounds and nine ounces and when shelled the grains filled a quart measure. The ear was twelve inches long.

Mr. Cary has a half acre of this corn which he will exhibit at the fair here this fall. He thinks his chances for first premium are fine.

Cupid Hits Old Mark; Children Wed, Too

One Pair Experienced in Matrimony, While Other Had to Run Away.

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The northern part of the county was this week the scene of two weddings of interest, owing to the wide difference in age of the couples, together with their popularity.

At Cohutta the Rev. W. C. Haddock and Mrs. Mary Ann Hartley were married. The wedding proved "Uncle Billy" Haddock's fourth venture, while his bride, Mrs. Hartley, was marrying for the third time. The Rev. J. C. Parrott performed the ceremony.

On the same date Miss Nola Starks, of Concord, became the wife of William Crain, of Beaverdale, the ceremony being performed by 'Squire J. D. Brackett. Mrs. Crain is 14 and her husband is just two years her senior.

While the wedding of Miss Starks and Mr. Crain was a runaway match, witnessed by only a few intimate friends and coming as a distinct surprise, there were fully 100 friends assembled to witness the Hartley-Haddock nuptials.

Thomas Farmers Can Own Products

Vegetables Put Up at Home Find Ready Sale in Thomasville Market.

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—Thomas County canned vegetables are on sale here at many of the grocery stores and are proving very popular.

There were more vegetables canned in this county this year than was ever known before, and it has been found to be quite a profitable business, the stores in Thomasville taking them readily and paying the highest market price for them.

Tomatoes especially have been canned in large quantities, and they are unusualy fine, better than the best quality bought heretofore by the merchants from wholesale houses in the North.

The advantage of the home product is that the tomatoes are gathered fresh from the vines and canned before they have had time to get old or damaged.

One farmer, who recently sold about 2,000 cans, said that he had received many compliments in regard to their quality by those who had used them.

GRIFFIN AFTER MEETING OF HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Through its secretary, W. B. Royster, the new Griffin Board of Trade has extended an urgent invitation for the State Horticultural Society to appoint this city as its place of meeting in 1914. The invitation is heartily indorsed by the Georgia Experiment Station. This is the first invitation sent out by the newly organized Board of Trade.

Another move by the board is to make Griffin the city beautiful. To this end a committee has been appointed to employ a civil engineer to look over the situation and make suggestions for improvements.

DALTON PRESIDING ELDER BEGINS FINAL ROUND

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Presiding Elder W. T. Irvine, of the Dalton District, to-day began his final round, and will visit the thirty-seven churches in the district before the annual meeting of the North Georgia Methodist Conference.

For society news of the South see page 10 of this section and the Society Section.

SUNBURNT SKINS NEED

CUTICURA SOAP

And Cuticura Ointment. For heat rashes, itchings, sunburn, wind irritations, redness and roughness of the face and hands, Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, has no rivals worth mentioning. No others do so much for the complexion, hair and hands.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address post-card "Cuticura," Dept. 13G, Boston.

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

PLANS NATIONAL MERCHANTS AND FARMERS' UNION

Louis S. Daniel, of Rome, Boosts Organization Similar to American Federation of Labor.

ROME, Aug. 23.—The organization of a National Farmers and Merchants' Co-operative Association for the mutual benefit is the plan conceived by Louis Spencer Daniel, the well-known booster and director of the local association and former director of the Rome Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

Daniel states that he is sure of the success of the national organization. He has already received hundreds of letters from all parts of the country.

The National Farmers and Merchants' Association would have an organization similar to that of the American Federation of Labor and Farmers' Union that would be absolutely free from politics.

WOMAN'S MISSION UNION CONVENES IN GAINESVILLE

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union, auxiliary to the Chattahoochee Baptist Association, was in session at the First Baptist Church here several days the past week, bringing a number of prominent women church workers to this city. It is said that the work of this union has become one of the most important in the denomination.

HALL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION TO MEET

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—One hundred delegates representing 65 Sunday schools of Hall County will come together in an interdenominational association, the first annual session to convene in this city next Tuesday morning for a two days' session. Hammond Johnson is county president, Henry H. Estes county secretary, and J. T. Telford, treasurer.

FLAG AND BIBLE ARE PRESENTED TO SCHOOL

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The Patriotic Order Sons of America of Dalton yesterday afternoon gave to the Dug Gap School a handsome American flag and a Bible.

Appropriate exercises marked the flag raising, Senator M. C. Tarver and the Hon. T. R. Ridley being among the speakers.

REVIVAL AT ELBERTON.

ELBERTON, Aug. 23.—The Rev. R. C. Cleckler, pastor, is conducting a series of meetings at the First Methodist Church. P. M. Boyd, of Nashville, is in charge of the singing.

$151,000 SUIT FILED TO TEST OLD STATE LAW

Former Dublin Merchant Defendant in Case Brought by Arthur H. Codington, of Macon.

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—An unusual suit to test the validity of an old statute which has been codified in the Georgia laws since 1837 and which is said to be the first suit of its kind ever filed in the State, has been filed here against G. A. Baynard, a former merchant of Dublin, by Arthur H. Codington, of Macon, for the sum of $151,000.

The law upon which the suit is based says that no business partnership may insert in their firm name the name of any individual not actually a co-partner nor continue in such firm the name of a retired partner, under the penalty of $100 a day for each day the name is so used. In his suit Codington alleges that Baynard indorsed certain notes with an old firm name of G. A. Baynard & Son and secured credit in this manner after the original partner had retired from business.

The case has excited a good deal of interest here, and much discussion as to whether the old statute can be enforced and Baynard be made liable for the full amount of $151,000 or that the statute can not be enforced now. It is said that Codington has filed the suit more to test the validity of the law than for any other purpose, and does not think that he has been damaged to the extent of the sum named.

CONFEREDATE MEMORIAL STANDS ON FEDERAL LAND

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—The only monument to a Confederate soldier which has been erected upon Federal grounds, except in national military parks, is that to be unveiled here August 27. It stands on the postoffice building square. This memorial also bears the distinction of being the first monument to a Confederate soldier erected by Children of the Confederacy. It is the monument to Colonel C. C. Sanders. Miss Katherine Dozier will present the monument to the chapter. There will be interesting exercises and addresses.

FRONT END OF MULE WAS "LOADED;" TALLEY IS KICKED

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Not dreaming that the front end of a Georgia mule could be "loaded," Sam Talley, of Harmony, came near being seriously injured when his mule jumped at him and struck him down with his fore feet. Mr. Talley rolled out of reach of the mule after suffering a number of severe bruises.

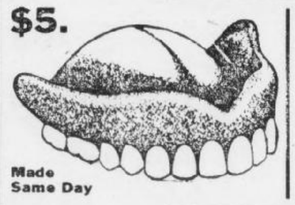
ALL DENTAL WORK GUARANTEED AT

DR. E. G. GRIFFIN'S

GATE CITY DENTAL ROOMS

24 1-2 Whitehall St. Phone M. 1708 — Over Brown & Allen's Hours: 8-6; Sundays 9-1

$5.



Made Same Day

OUR PRICES:

Bridge Work $4
Gold Crown $4
Gold Filling $1
Amalgam Filling .. 50c Up
Teeth Cleaned . $1 Up

Our guarantee means something. It is backed by our absolute responsibility and by 23 years of successful practice.

PAY ME FOR CURES ONLY

If you have been taking treatment for weeks and months and paying out your hard earned money without being cured, don't you think it is high time to accept DR. HUGHES' GRAND OFFER? You will certainly not be out a cent more money if not cured. Consultation and Examination are Free for the next thirty days.

If I decide that your condition will not yield readily to my treatment, I will be honest with you and tell you so, and not accept your money under a promise of a cure.

My treatment will positively cure or I will make you no charge for the following diseases:

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND URINARY TROUBLE, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, RUPTURE, ULCERS AND SKIN DISEASES CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

Eczema, Rheumatism, Catarrhal Affections, Piles and Fistula and all Nervous, Chronic and Private Diseases of Men and Women.

Newly contracted and chronic Cases of Burning, Itching and Inflammation stopped in 24 hours. I am against high and extortionate fees charged by some physicians and specialists. My fees are reasonable and no more than you are willing to pay for a cure. All medicines, the surest and best of drugs, are supplied from my own private laboratory. OUT-OF-TOWN MEN VISITING THE CITY, consult me at once upon arrival, and maybe you can be cured before returning home. Many cases can be cured in one or two visits.

CALL OR WRITE—No detention from business. Treatment and advice confidential. Hours 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. Sundays, 9 to 1. If you can't call, write and give me full description of your case in your own words. A complete consultation costs you nothing, and if I can help you I will.

DR. HUGHES, Opposite Third National Bank, 16 1-2 North Broad Street, Atlanta, Ga.

LATEST NEWS OF MIDDLE GEORGIA

3 CANDIDATES SEEKING TO BE MACON MAYOR

Miller, Dasher and Smith Promise Live Campaign in Central City. Outcome Very Uncertain.

MACON, Aug. 23.—Wallace Miller, Arthur L. Dasher or Bridges Smith will be the next Mayor of Macon. The entry of Mr. Miller a week ago assured a spirited three-cornered contest, the outcome of which it will be hard for anyone to forecast.

Mr. Dasher announced his candidacy eight months ago, running on an independent platform. Mr. Smith is the candidate of the administration faction. Mr. Miller heads a young men's ticket. The campaign has just opened, but it will become exceedingly active and interesting with the announcement this week of the Aldermanic tickets.

Mr. Dasher proposes to make a vigorous speaking campaign. Mr. Smith, on the other hand, will not make a speech or write a card, according to his present intention. He will simply depend upon his record and his friends for election. Mr. Miller will likely make a number of addresses setting forth his views on municipal questions.

Mr. Dasher has already begun his speaking schedule, having addressed various meetings of the laboring men.

Mr. Dasher is one of Macon's best-known lawyers. His practice is large and lucrative. Until elected Alderman two years ago, he had never held, or asked for, political office. In Council he took such a prominent stand on leading issues that he leaped into the limelight, and before he had served a year he was freely asked to run for Mayor. He announced last December. Eight years ago Mr. Dasher was president of the Chamber of Commerce, and that organization, under his administration, made a splendid record. Previously he had been chairman of the board of directors, and was for a number of years one of the recognized leaders of the trade body. He is a married man, with a large family. His eldest son, Arthur L., Jr., is associated with him in the practice of law.

Bridges Smith is perhaps as widely known as any Macon citizen. Since 1888, with the exception of two years, 1908 and 1909, he has been connected with the city government. In 1888 he was elected City Clerk, under Mayor Daisy Price. He served in that capacity until 1899, when Mayor Price died in office, shortly after being re-elected. Mr. Smith was then chosen as his successor, and he stayed in office until 1908, when he voluntarily retired. His friend and Alderman, John T. Moore, then ran against Judge A. L. Miller, and the latter was elected. At the ensuing election, Mr. Moore was again a candidate, and this time he beat Judge Miller. Mr. Moore held office two years, and was opposed at the expiration of his first term by Alderman N. I. Brunner, whom he defeated. A charter provision, which restricts a Mayor to two terms, debars him from running again.

Mr. Smith is avowedly the candidate for the administration, and in his announcement he declared his intention of continuing the policies of the Moore administration.

Before entering politics, Mr. Smith was a newspaper reporter, and during his quarter of a cenutry in public life, he has maintained a newspaper association. He writes special articles and local news for the Macon Telegraph. He has never been defeated for office. Mr. Smith is 66 years of age, though very active in both mind and body.

Mr. Miller, if elected Mayor, will be the youngest executive this city has ever had. He is only 28 years old. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia. He began the practice of law here, but later became manager of a provision house. Two years ago he resumed law, announced his candidacy for the Legislature, and was elected, although it took a recount of the ballots to establish his victory.

It was Mr. Miller's father, Judge A. L. Miller, who served as Mayor of Macon four years ago, defeating John T. Moore, who in turn defeated him. However, Wallace Miller is not running on his father's strength, as the elder Miller is opposed to his son's present political venture. He will get his father's support, however.

Mr. Miller's candidacy was first suggested two weeks ago, but in a very few days the boom became so substantial that Mr. Miller could not resist.

Waycross Council Asked to Explain

Claimed Number of Transactions Were In Violation of City Charter.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Is became known to-day that some time during September City Council would be requested for information of a number of transactions which have taken place within the past eighteen months, many of the alleged to have been in direct violation of the city charter. It is further alleged that a city employee while drawing his full time salary from the city looked after other work for which he was amply paid.

No namese have been disclosed as yet, and it is not known who will be mentioned when the request reaches Council. Some members of Council are inclined to demand an explanation of the published reports, but have not done so.

DENIES DISCRIMINATION CLAIMED BY SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—J. C. Whitney, president of the Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company, is in Savannah for a conference with the directors of the Board of Trade, to go over the allegations of discrimination against Savannah in favor of Jacksonville. Whitney asserted that there was no discrimination against Savannah. Except in a very few instances, he said, the freight rates to Jacksonville from Baltimore and other points in the North are higher than the rates to Savannah.

Dublin to Hold Big Agricultural Fair

Entire Twelfth Congressional District Will be Asked to Participate.

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—Plans are well under way for holding a large fair in Dublin this year, to be known as the Twelfth District Agricultural Fair, in which exhibits will be open to all of the counties in the Twelfth Congressional District, of which there are thirteen. The dates have been set at October 14 to 17, inclusive, the week previous to the State fair.

At a meeting held here this week organization of the corporation to handle the show was effected and the officers elected, as follows: President, W. B. Rice; vice presidents, Izzie Bashinski and M. S. Jones; secretary and treasurer, N. G. Bartlett.

The board of directors is as follows: W. B. Rice, M. S. Jones, N. G. Bartlett, Izzie Bashinski, T. W. Hooks, Frank Lawson, F. N. Watkins, H. E. Ray and H. G. Stevens.

Governor John M. Slaton will be invited to make an address during the fair, along with State School Superintendent M. L. Brittain and other prominent men of the State. A delegation of Dublin citizens will go to Atlanta Tuesday for the purpose of extending an invitation to Governor Slaton personally to come down and make an address during the fair.

Runs Small Farm In Heart of Griffin

Young Man Makes Large Yield of Irish Potatoes and Corn.

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—James C. Nutt, one of Griffin's best-known young men, is running a small farm in the heart of the city, and is making good at it. On a plot of land adjoining the cemetery, Nutt planted four acres of Irish cobbler potatoes. So many Irish potatoes in one field had never been seen in this section before.

For some time now the crop has been in process of harvesting. Up to date only a portion of the crop has been disposed of, but 400 bushels of the potatoes have been sold at a price ranging from 80 cents to $1 per bushel.

To increase the returns from the land, Nutt has planted rows of corn between the rows of potatoes, and the corn is now over shoulder high. The corn gives promise of making not less than 25 bushels to the acre, and if season is propitious, a good deal more.

JUDGE DANIEL TOO ILL TO PRESIDE OVER COURTS

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Judge R. T. Daniel, of the Flint River Circuit, who was so ill last week that he had to adjourn the August term of Spalding Superior Court, and who has not been able to attend the Butts County Court this week, continues quite ill at his residence here on Poplar street. He will not be able to preside over the Monroe Superior Court, which is to convene at Forsyth Monday.

Judge H. A. Matthews, of Macon, presided over the Butts court for Judge Daniel, and it is likely that he again will preside for ihm next week.

RURAL MAIL CARRIERS TO MEET AT MILLEDGEVILLE

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—The rural mail carriers for the Tenth Congressional District will meet here on Monday, September 1.

A barbecue dinner will be served to the visiting carriers, and plans are being perfected to make their visit an enjoyable one. The following program has been arranged: Prayer by the Rev. Harold Major. Address of welcome by Mayor M. S. Bell and Postmaster R. B. Moore. The response will be made by G. D. Braddock, the president of the association.

BIG BUILDING BOOM CONTINUES IN DUBLIN

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—There are in Dublin at this time in course of erection one six-story building, two three-story buildings five large warehouses and one large livery stable, which will be the largest in any city in this section of the State. The building boom has held up unusually well in the city this year despite the dull times that have been experienced in some other cities. These buildings are in addition to a large number of residences erected this year, also.

DUBLIN'S NEW THEATER TO OPEN SEPTEMBER 1

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—Dublin's new theater, "The Bertha," which has been in course of erection for the past few months, will open for the season in the second week in September next, the first play being "The Rose Maid."

Other plays booked for the coming season include the "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "Polly of the Circus," "The Blue Bird," "Everywoman," Fields' Minstrels, "The Leopard Spots" and a large number of other famous plays.

DUBLIN PUTS TIGHT LID UPON IMMORAL SHOWS

DUBLIN, Aug. 23. This city has put the lid on tight on shows, both motion picture and regular theaters, and has just created and elected a board of censors, whose duty it shall be to supervise the theaters of the city and rule out all immoral plays and pictures. The members of the board were elected by the City Council Tuesday night last.

SAVANNAH SHRINERS PLAN BIG RECEPTION

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Completing preparations for the reception of William W. Erwin, of Wheeling, W. Va., Imperial Potentate of the Shriners of North America, other members of the Imperial Divan of the Shriners and visitors from various temples, who will come to Savannah next month, the entire seventh floor of the Hotel Savannah has been reserved for them.

The Shriners of the Imperial Divan came in response to an invitation from Potentate Robert L. Travis, of Allee Temple, of this city, to attend a ceremonial session of that temple on September 12.

$8,000 IN CASH PRIZES IN LIST OF STATE FAIR

More Than Five Thousand Displays To Be Made at Macon. Nine County Exhibits.

MACON, Aug. 23.—Officials of the Georgia State Fair Association are enthusiastic over the prospects for this year's show. Already more exhibitors have applied than ever before, and the indications are that in all of the departments there will be a total of more than 5,000 different displays. The prizes this year aggregate more than $8,000 in cash, in addition to the special premiums given by individuals and corporations.

Nine counties have contracted to make county agricultural exhibits, and probably three more will enter the competition. Cobb County, represented by Gid Morris, has taken the first prize of $1,200 for three successive years, but this year Houston County proposes to contest for this award. W. C. Lewis, of Houston, is arranging that county's exhibit.

Racing will be a special feature this year, and purses awarded will amount to several thousand dollars. This will be the first State fair racing since 1908. A motordrome also is being erected for motorcycle racing.

Secretary Harry Robert is booking individual attractions for the midway instead of engaging a carnival company. More than 50 shows have already been secured, and more will be provided.

Judges Are Named.

Announcement has been made of the judges for the various departments, as follows:

Farm Implements—W. W. Elfe, Morris Putzel and W. G. Lewis.

Poultry and Pet Stock—Loring Brown.

Textile—John A. Porter.

Horticulture and Floriculture—Dan C. Horgan.

Flour, Tea and Coffee—Mrs. John C. Dietz, Miss Henrietta Glover and Mrs. Sol Hoge.

Carriages, Buggies and Wagons—W. A. Goodyear and W. P. Welsiger.

Musical Instruments—Mrs. I. H. Adams.

Canning Clubs—A. W. Smith, Mrs. W. D. Lamar and J. Walter Collins.

Fine Arts—T. O. Chestney and Rufus W. Evans.

Dairy and Beef Cattle—Sam N. Warren.

Swine and Sheep—Professor H. B. Carpenter.

Dairy—Sam N. Warren.

Apiary—W. V. McCook and C. E. Glisson.

Horses, Mules, Ponies and Colts—Professor Milton P. Jarnigan.

Machinery—W. W. Elfe, Morris Putzel and W. C. Lewis.

Textile Machinery—John A. Porter.

Cakes, Pies, Breads, etc.—Mrs. John C. Dietz, Miss Henrietta Glover and Mrs. Sol Hoge.

Needle and Fancy Work—Mrs. J. Ross Bowdre, Mrs. J. C. Morton and Mrs. W. E. Cookerly.

Fight Over Waycross Fire Department On

Council Likely to Pass Bills to Enlarge Brigade Over Chairman's Protest.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Unless Chairman H. Hengeveld, of the Police and Fire Committee, changes his opinion, a resolution providing to enlarge the Waycross fire department will be passed over his head. Two resolutions on the subject have been introduced in City Council, one by Alderman Beaton and the other by Alderman Morton.

Chairman Hengeveld claimed the city's financial condition would not permit any further expense for the fire department. Alderman Morton replied that when there was talk of making former Fire Chief Thomas Ballentyne, of Savannah, chief of the Waycross department, Chairman Hengeveld was willing to pay more money to get Ballentyne, and it seems the city is as well off now as when Mr. Hengeveld wanted to make the change.

The resolution for the employment of more men has enough votes to pass, according to Mr. Morton, but he will make no effort to get it through Council until Mr. Hengeveld makes a report.

Edwards Approves Military Highway

Savannah to Tybee Road Would Cost About $300,000—Congressman Sees Benefit.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—That the construction of a military highway from Savannah to Tybee, as advocated by Congressman Charles G. Edwards, would be of great benefit to the entire State, is the belief of J. N. King, well-known cotton factor of Rome.

At interior points the project is not looked upon as one that will be of benefit to Savannah alone, but is considered a movement on the part of the Government that would result in good to the State at large.

The propcsed highway will cost approximately $300,000, but it is believed that it would be money well expended since all sections would be benefited.

WARE COUNTY TAX RATE REDUCED 10 PER CENT

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Because of the big increase in the taxable property in Ware over last year's returns, the county tax rate was to-day reduced from 80 cents a hundred to 70 cents a hundred, with prospects bright for the same decrease another year. Approximately $50,000 will be spent by the county on road work this year, according to the budget announcement.

MERCHANTS OF AUGUSTA PLAN BIG TRADE BODY

Chamber of Commerce and Merchants and Manufacturers' Ass'n to Quit Field.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 23.—The Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Augusta has accepted the proposition of A. W. McKeand, of Atlanta, to take charge of a new commercial organization. To do this Mr. McKeand states that $60,000, or $20,000 a year for three years, must be secured.

The object of the new movement is to replace the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, which, with practically the same object in view, have been working at cross purposes for some years. It is stated that the Chamber of Commerce is making arrangements to wind up its business. This would leave the new organization planned in full command of the field.

At a meeting of citizens Mr. McKeand told them his proposition and some details of the work. It was agreed that his method was good. The new organization, which the officers and directors of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association agreed to, will be a consolidation of the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

Five Departments.

The new organization will have five departments.

First, the wholesale trade department, which will direct the trades trips; the salesman's school reports of trade openings; rebates on fares, and will foster a spirit of friendly rivalry between the merchants.

Second, the retail trades department, which shall handle all things pertaining to the retail trade. Especially will the credit bureau, now such a valuable asset of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, come under this department.

Third, the publicity department, from which will come all such literature as that pertaining to the city, its advantages, etc., and through the department conventions will be secured, special feature weeks arranged, etc.

Fourth, the industrial promotion department, which will handle all business pertaining to industrial work.

Fifth, the transportation department, under which will come the freight bureau, the most valuable asset of the Chamber of Commerce.

To begin this organization will entail much preliminary work, including a campaign of local men, directed by Mr. McKeand.

Augustans of all classes, whether in sympathy with the Chamber of Commerce or the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, have taken kindly to the new organization plan, and it bids fair to begin a new and entirely prosperous era for the city, whose natural advantages are such that with proper handling little is needed to make her the truly progressive city she deserves to be.

Waycross to Vote on Government Change

Hard Fight To Be Made by Both Sides—Election October 4.

WAYCROSS, GA., Aug. 23.—Voters of Waycross on October 4 will decide whether to change the form of city government to a combination city manager-commission form or retain the aldermanic form with a board of aldermen of twelve members instead of six.

A special election will be held then and the registration books are now open. It is known a strong fight will be made by both sides, and at this time it is hard to predict which will win. The city manager form of government has much support, but it is doubtful if those in favor of the change will work as hard to get the new charter approved as the opponents will work to defeat the measure which the Legislature passed this year.

If the city manager plan is approved Waycross will be the first Georgia city to adopt it.

Gov. Slaton Vetoes Chatham Land Grant

Says Resolutions Had Not Been Properly Passed by the Legislature.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Savannahans were surprised to read that Governor Slaton had vetoed a resolution providing for land grants to the trustees of the Chatham Academy.

Governor Slaton explained he vetoed the resolution because it had not been properly passed. It relates to disposition of ungranted lands in the county. Acts passed in 1788 and 1856 vested in the Chatham Academy and the Union Society considerable ungranted lands in Chatham. The purpose of the resolution is to authorize these institutions to claim the lands under the old acts.

G. M. C. OPENS SEPTEMBER 1.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—The Georgia Military College will open for the fall session on September 2. President Horton is expecting the largest attendance in the history of the institution. The Hon. Roy Stubbs, of Eatonton, will make the opening address.

FIRST BALE AT MILLEDGEVILLE.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—The first bale of cotton was marketed here yesterday by Mike Jackson, a negro, living in Wilkinson County. The cotton was sold to Mr. John Barrett, and brought 15 cents a pound.

HON. RALPH O. COCHRAN DELIVERS ∴ ∵ OPENING SPEECH AT CLAYTON, GA.

Candidate for United States Senate in Strong Address Outlines His Views On State and National Issues.

I am glad to be in Clayton and have an opportunity of addressing the people of Rabun County. You have heard the expression, "From Rabun Gap to Tybee Light," and it is fitting that in my campaign for the United States Senate I should deliver the keynote address in this county—the address that in a substantial measure carries my position on the questions that the people of Georgia will be interested in in casting their votes in the election next summer for a United States Senator—and this for the reason that I will show considerable activity in this campaign which will extend from the mountains to the sea.

It is further true that you people of Rabun live in a county that was established in 1819, almost a hundred years ago, and it bears the name of one of the Chief Executives of this State. This county has furnished many men in the public arena during its history who have been worthy sons and distinguished servants of the people.

I am here to-day in advocacy of my candidacy for the United States Senate. At the suggestion of some zealous friends, I entered this race some time ago. It is an undertaking worthy of any man's highest ambition, and I entered the field conscious of the great responsibilities that will rest upon me if elected, and also conscious of the difficulties that confront me in achieving this ambition.

I want to tell you here to-day that I am going to Washington. I expect to win this race, and I have every confidence in ultimate success. It is a big undertaking, but I believe that the sentiment of the people of Georgia to-day is in favor of electing a business man, a man in the best vigor of his life, and one who will endeavor to represent all people alike and all interests alike within the borders of the State.

It is true that probably in point of years, as I am only 39 years of age, I am the youngest man who has ever offered in the State of Georgia for this high position. During the progress of the campaign I will be confronted with the charge that I am too youthful, and further that I have not had sufficient experience. I want to say in advance in answer to any such criticism that may be raised, that many of the best political servants that this country has ever had have been men who have achieved success and attained high political positions early in life. With a long stretch of years before them they well used them, and therefore their services were of inestimable worth. As a matter of fact, it is common knowledge that any man is in his prime from thirty-five to fifty years of age. In fact, the Constitution of the United States requires that one must be only 30 years old to be eligible for the United States Senate.

I am frank to tell you that at no period in life do I anticipate ability for greater labor or clearer thought. It is true that I am inexperienced on many matters pertaining to state affairs, but I do insist that I am capable of learning and that I can count upon a reasonable number of years in which to be of service to my State and country if honored with this high position.

In advocacy of my candidacy, I place before the people of Georgia the proposition of electing a business man. I can properly call attention to the young business men of this State and to the fact that in these times of industrial growth and progress that the best thing that the people of any State can do is to elect a larger percentage of the men of the business circles of their State. If there is any question that requires business ability and skill to properly settle, I should say that those which pertain to the nature of the laws under which we shall live are pre-eminently the ones where business experience, understanding of the people's wants and the ultimate effect are the ones that literally demand the business man to pass upon. A slogan of the day in which we live is more business and less theory.

Prejudice and Demagogy to Play No Part in Campaign.

I want to tell you here and now that as far as I am concerned you will never see any trace of demagogy in anything that I may say or do. I shall deal frankly with the people of Georgia, and my campaign will be devoid of tricks and makeshifts. My candidacy will be put up to the people of Georgia strictly on its merits, without frills or deception. I am nothing more than a plain business man. I have no pre-eminent ability on any lines, but I assure you in advance that if I am elected I shall ever endeavor to follow the paths of right and do my duty. This campaign as far as I am concerned will never be marred with the demagogism that arouses the prejudices of the rich against the poor, the city man against the country man, or the young man against the old man. I shall take the position in the beginning and shall maintain it throughout the campaign that if I am elected I want to be elected by all classes of our citizens, and if elected I pledge you most sincerely and earnestly that I will represent all the people of Georgia and all the lawful interests within her borders.

Under my political canopy, so to speak, all classes of our citizens can rally. No prejudice has ever taken root in my bosom against the Jew in favor of the Gentile, against the Catholic in favor of the Protestant, against the Third party man in favor of the Democrat or against any man or class of men within our State who may belong to different parties, political faith, social circle or other relation contrary to that I occupy. I am frank to say that any man who harbors hatred for any class of our citizens is unworthy of the high position to which I now aspire. The bigot, the maligner of character, he a small man, should have no place in shaping the policies and destiny of this country. The same sun shines on all of us alike, we are the children of the same Creator, and in its last analysis there is no great difference in us anyway.

I have always endeavored to be fair to all the interests of capital; I have always endeavored to be fair to the cause of labor; I shall endeavor to be fair in all of my relations with my fellow man, whether that relation be in private business matters or in public position, and if I go down in defeat contending for the wisdom of such a position I shall do so gladly and you shall have my approbation. It is well that I state on this occasion that I have never been aligned with any of the political factions of Georgia. During the past few decades when partisan heat reached high water mark I have always stood, since the early years of my manhood, as a free man and have acted on every election day in the way that I thought my vote would count for most looking to the best interests of the people of this State. We have been confronted at a number of elections with partisan politics and partisan issues. I thank God that we are now living in a more desirable day.

I am in favor of no class legislation. All legislation should be founded on the idea of the greatest good for the greatest number, irrespective of nationalities, wealth, education or anything else. However, if there is to be any class legislation, it should be in favor of the biggest class, and I should say that this class is composed of those of moderate means. If I ever cast a vote, if elected to the United States Senate, for any class whatsoever, it will be for the class here designated.

In my campaign for the Senate throughout the entire time I shall remain absolutely a free man. I shall not tie myself up with promises and political alignments. If elected I want to be a free man to represent the entire people of Georgia.

To men of experience and men of business affairs it is an accepted truth that no man need be a Croesus or an intellectual giant to represent well his people in legislative halls. What counts most is industry, integrity and sound common sense. If these elements are united in a candidate, he deserves well at the hands of his people. The making of laws and the administration of government is largely a business matter where good judgment and good conscientious service avail much.

Permit me to say also that God has endowed me with a degree of manhood and independence, so much so that I can tell you in all frankness and truth that if you do not see fit to elect me that it will be perfectly all right and I assure you that no scars will be left behind over which I will brood through the coming years. In this independence and manhood that I declare to you, there is no place for mudslinging and assassination of character. I will not indulge in any of this nor will I permit any of my friends to do so if within my power to prevent. The campaign does not involve personal issues. The issues are more substantial and more worthy of the intelligence of the people of Georgia.

I stand for good government in all of its forms, and I shall ever be the enemy of those principles and practices that are opposed to its preservation and promotion. I shall ever stand for the principles of government that represent the best interests of the farmer as well as the merchant, and in general, the best interests of every man of every class of citizens within the confines of this great State. I was born and reared on a farm in Campbell County, and I feel that my years of association with the people of the rural districts, their needs and their interests, have made me to know once for all the important recognition that should be accorded to them. Then with the business experience that I have had elsewhere, as an education in after years, I feel that I can represent the entire people of this State with fellowship of feeling and wisdom and justice to all.

Economy in National Expenditures Insisted Upon.

At this time I want to put the people of Georgia on notice that, if elected as one of the United States Senators from Georgia, I will become in a measure a watchdog of your treasury. I have long been convinced that the practices that we are following of continuously raising taxes on property, businesses, corporations, and otherwise, should be stopped. There is hardly a session of the Georgia Legislature or a session of the United States Congress that some new form of taxing the people or else increasing the old forms is not projected. I ask you, in the name of reason, when and where will these agitations and practices stop? There is an eternal cry of more money, that our institutions are being throttled and that the State and nation are lagging in progress on account of insufficient funds. You know as well as I do that if the State of Georgia had five times as much revenue for the Legislature to spend that every dollar of it would be spent and they would still be in need of more money.

As a matter of fact, unless the increase of the burdens of taxation is not halted, taxes will become very oppressive to the people of this country. Take your State tax, your county tax, your city tax, your professional tax, your corporation tax, your inheritance tax, your income tax, your occupation tax, your road tax, your local school tax, your poll tax, and possibly others, and I tell you when any man gets through at the end of the year with paying these various amounts he has done a fairly good year's work to have made profit enough out of his business to meet them. The philosophy of all taxation, according to my thinking, is that instead of the everlasting increase in the forms of taxing the people and also the amounts, that the revenue of the State should only increase with the enhancement of property, more money coming into the State, and more citizens as our common population. With an increase of revenue along these lines, with a corresponding limitation of appropriations, our State and country will always be in a solvent condition and our people will be prosperous and happy.

I have all along been of the opinion that our people should not look too much for support to the Government under which they live. The greatest men that this State or country have ever produced have been men who have worked their way through difficulties and hardships. The best principle of government that can be advocated is that of throwing every citizen that is able-bodied upon his own resources. Therefore, the sentiment that is rapidly taking root in the States of this country that we should look more to the bounties of the Government is a cancer in the body politic and will ultimately prove fatal if it is not checkmated. History records the fact that the decline of the Roman Empire set in with the free corn that was distributed to the population. It has been estimated that at one time more than 300,000 people were fed at public expense. The manhood of this country has always been honest and hardy, and we have builded a republic that is the light of the world, and if it continues in its leadership the same manhood and independence that led us into freedom must care for the affairs of state through the coming years.

Opposes Unnecessary Legislation.

In our zeal for this cause or that cause that may be advocated, we should always be conservative in our thoughts, speech and actions. There is no business, much less a government, that can go forward in splender and success where fits and spasms characterize those who are interested. Sanity should characterize every man's discussion of public questions, and I tell you that when your vote is cast on the side of conservatism you will seldom err from what is best for your family, yourself and your country.

It is true that State laws and National laws, in fact laws of all kinds, should be somewhat in the vanguard of actual practice and in a measure be some high ideals for the manhood and womanhood of this State and country, as well as for the rising generation. However, we all know that laws that are not supported with public sentiment are of no avail and become nullities on our statute books.

I am further of the opinion that we are passing too many laws in our State and Nation. It seems that we have arrived at the point where we are law-ridden; almost unnumbered laws that everybody is presumed to know, but on the other hand there is no one who does know. There is much legislation that is transgressing the inalienable rights of property and person and much of that that is suggested tends too much this way. I took occasion not long ago to count the sections of laws that compose the Code of Georgia. It is astounding but true that there are approximately 8,000 sections of laws under which we are living this day. It has almost gotten to the point where a man's mind must be an encyclopedia to carry the innumerable laws governing cities, counties, State and Nation. It reminds one of the old adage that that people is best governed which is least governed.

Favors Federal Aid for Good Roads.

I want to say on this occasion that, if elected to the United States Senate, I shall stand at all times for the cause of good roads. If we ever expect to have great systems of roads traversing this entire country the National Government will have to take hold of the proposition. It strikes me that money appropriated for this purpose is just as much within the Constitution of this country as the right to appropriate funds to deepen the waterways and improve harbors. By navigation the products of the country are distributed and it is a method of travel. The public roads of the country are the avenues of distribution whereby the products of the country reach the centers and are ultimately distributed throughout the country and the world. Furthermore, public roads are used by everybody, and the benefits derived from appropriations for this cause are participated in by all the people of the country. What cause more equitable or more worthy could be mentioned for the appropriation of public funds? The additional circumstance associated with improved public roads is the enhancement of property. Down in my country it is generally estimated that property on a macadamized road is never worth less than double as much as property on a road that has not been so improved. Also think of the convenience, pleasure and general benefits that are derived by reason of the construction of such thoroughfares. Think of the benefits to your county or any county that might be mentioned that would be derived from the construction of such highways. In consideration of these substantial reasons, I shall ever be a friend to the cause of good roads.

High Cost of Living Caused by Not Producing Enough.

Any people or any legislative body has lost sight of the greatest cause when they do not cultivate and improve the great agricultural interests of their county and State. You may talk of laws that curb vice, you may ponder over measures that involve appropriations, you may consider well laws that look to the raising of revenue, but back and more fundamental and of far greater importance is the great proposition of production. What we need most is more corn, more cotton, more of all the farm products, more manufacturing, more businesses that produce, businesses that feed and clothe the world. That is to-day, in my opinion, the prime reason for the high cost of living. We are just not producing enough.

The people of Georgia will never reach that point of prosperity that is most desired until they have learned to produce enough to get the other man's money and then have enough to live on so as to save them from the condition of having to buy the other fellow's products. I trust that I will live to see that day when by education and disposition the people of Georgia will learn and desire to produce more than they consume in the way of farm products, that splendid cash crop, the staple product, will be the surplus crop, that new era when every town and hamlet can boast of numerous manufacturing enterprises, when Georgia-made goods are sold around the world. Let us make the people of other States become the buyers of our products, and we the recipients of the splendid income.

If elected to the United States Senate I shall always do the best that in me lies to get increased appropriations for the educational interests of the various States of the Union where agricultural training is taught. The National Government, in wisdom, through the Agricultural Department has started up a system of education and scientific experiment along agricultural lines which will prove, I have no doubt, to be of the greatest service to the material interests of this country of any department known to the National Government. It will be my purpose to work for and to vote for all measures and appropriations which look to the improvement and enlargement of this great cause in the dispensation of National funds.

If I am elected to the United States Senate I want to pledge you here and now my unswerving support of all measures that look to the general betterment of humanity. We are living in times when the humanity of man is manifested in its most splendid form. Laws that are humanitarian in their nature, just in their spirit, broad in their conception of human rights will always find a friend in me. The old idea has long since passed away that every man should live for himself. Thank God that we live in a better and brighter day when the living and the hopes of humanity are upon a more just basis and there is recognition of the higher laws of nature and the beneficent conceptions of the Creator of us all.

As an incentive to high purpose and lofty achievement, we should bear in mind that the names and memories of those only are revered and live in history who lived and worked to do something for others. Selfishness, living for self, has never made any man great in the estimation of his fellowman. The world has gotten rid of much of the tyranny that has characterized it in the past, but the tyranny of brain and the tyranny of worth should continue and will continue as long as civilization endures. Ambition to do something for others as well as self should characterize the life of every man.

Favors Exploiting the Great Resources of Georgia.

There is another matter that I wish to speak of to which I will give as much of my ability and time as possible if elected. I refer to the advertising of the resources of Georgia and the entire Southland. This advertising by one in this exalted position by speech and otherwise can be made of inestimable worth to this State and section. Georgia and the entire South needs more capital and more people. Any man who is in favor of any law or laws that tend to antagonize capital and mistreat the institutions in which it is invested is the enemy of the State. In addition, what county in Georgia would not be better off if it had twice as many people in it as it has to-day? The multiplication of population means better roads, better schools, better churches, better mail facilities and better communities in general. These ends are worthy of note and should always receive the attention of the representatives of this State in these high positions.

If elected to the United States Senate, it will be my purpose to perform well what might be termed the small duties incident to this high office. Those who might desire positions either for themselves or their boys, who might at any time wish information concerning any matters in the city of Washington pertaining to the Government, or local matters, those who desire appropriations for this purpose or that purpose in their respective cities and districts, in general those who want ready service of their representative in getting something or doing something where their United States Senator can be of service to them, I will be the man to call upon. I pledge you in advance that no considerable amount of my time will be taken up in the study of foreign questions or the preparation of what might be termed big speeches, but, on the other hand, I will try to inject as much business in the situation as possible and serve in a business way the people of Georgia, not only concerning such matters as I hear mentioned, but in promoting and voting for legislation which will promote the general interests of the State, as well as the country at large.

I am deeply interested in the cause of education in all of its forms. Our public schools are the greatest institution that has become a part of the government of this State. Public schools touch every man's interest, and in them is involved the element of an elementary education which means better citizenship and more happiness on the part of our entire population. Almost as essential are the institutions of higher learning of this State. Also our colleges of technical training which prepare the young man and young woman to make a living have probably become the most popular institutions in the way of higher training that we have in the State. The old idea was to educate the smart boys in classical training either for the ministry, medicine or the law. This conception of higher learning is in a measure passing away, and technical training is largely the slogan of the times in which we live.

I do not know how you people in Rabun County feel about it, but I imagine that you have about the same feeling and sentiment that we people of Fulton have, as well as the people of all the other counties of this State—that is the constantly recurring panics that disturb and distress the business interests of this country. I do not know whether or not any man can assign with accuracy the immediate causes of these recurring panics. However, I am inclined to believe that the most prominent cause is the drastic reform legislation that sets up about every eight or ten years. I am in favor of a certain amount of reform. We all know that in the great economy of nature change must take place either for good or ill. The country that does not improve its condition must of necessity retrograde. On the other hand, I am opposed, and I shall always vote accordingly, to reforms and reform measures which come in bunches and have the inevitable effect of upsetting the entire business of this State and country. As far as I am concerned, I want a little rest so that I may have an opportunity of accumulating some of the world's goods while in the vigor of manhood, and not look too much to the eradication of all evil and the improvement of our institutions and country on the Utopian idea for our children and our children's children. As I see it, the present epoch we now call recent is the most prosperous and happy period that the world has ever known.

We often lose sight of the untold good that has been accomplished by the people of our day and our fathers before us. In fact, we live in the best times and we constitute the greatest people that this world has ever seen. Six thousand years of recorded history does not find a parallel. There is not so much ill in man and the human race as we are often led to believe. I have often said that the good man in any community is the good fellow after all. Think of man in this day of enlightenment and the society in which we live. He works hard and usually by the sweat of his brow he provides for wife and children. He is interested in educational advantages of his family, he looks forward with a feverish mind to the ultimate condition when no longer he will be the mainstay of these loved ones. We are rich in charity, we are humane in the treatment of those who are unfortunate, our ideals are high, and we are recipients by reason of our intelligence and industry of most of the good that the world affords.

Another point that I wish to bring out: Too much experiment is always dangerous. The people of any State or country that is experimenting with this law, this institution, and this new idea are apt to fall into the ways that will lead them into departures from the fundamentals of their institutions which probably will prove dangerous and fatal. It is always better to let other people, other States and other men work out the issues of state, experiment and ascertain the truth, and then the wisdom of its adoption becomes clear and of no loss to that people who follow in the light of this experience. Of course some experiment along sane and conservative lines is good for all people, and if such is not indulged in they are liable to become laggards and drones. However, the people of Georgia should never become distinguished as a people of experiment, and the State should never be known as an incubator of new ideas.

If I am elected to the United States Senate, I shall always stand for clean government, wise laws and pure administration. We live in a country where in theory every man's chance is alike. God has made us unequal in body and mind, but under the Constitution and laws of the United States, as drawn by those immortal men, the fathers of this country, whose names shall live as long as recorded history is preserved, imbedded in that great instrument and laws, the general principle of equal rights to all and an equal chance in the struggles of this life. No man should ask for more than justice and an equal chance. No man should be willing to surrender to any other man his equal chance and justice in the race of life. I shall always be opposed to plunder in any form and shall ever stand for the best laws to perpetuate and preserve the Government as founded by the fathers of this country.

However, it is true that it does seem like something is wrong at times with our institutions when one man in the short space of a lifetime can accumulate a billion of dollars. We have in these United States one-sixteenth of the population of the world and we possess one-fourth of its entire wealth. Such a splendid commentary upon the people who in only a century or two past found the vast expanse of our country a wilderness and here the institutions and wealth to which we are heirs.

Amid the masterful strides made by this country within the past fifty years, on account of a serious handicap, the South is just now coming into her own. Georgia and the entire Southern States are rich in natural resources—we have the climate, we have the soil, we have the minerals, we have the water power, and, thank God, we have the brain and the industry that will yet make of our Southland the fairest spot beneath the sun.

There is no use for history except the lessons that it teaches. We are living in the light of many experiences of the past, and as the light of these experiences falls upon our pathway our days will be splendid and our accomplishments beyond the dreams of men.

I love Georgia and her people. Born within her borders, educated within her institutions, associated with Georgia people, I bear to her the warmth of sympathy and childish affection that I trust will continue unabated during the time that I shall live. The mountains lifting their lofty peaks amid the skies, the old red hills of Georgia, dear to the heart of all, the table lands, rich and fertile, and extended in area, her rippling streams in music, wind their way to the mighty sea, seven out of the nine climates with which the Nation is characterized, I am devoted to this people and this mighty State.

With renewed purpose, and a common ambition, let us press forward in the mighty causes of civilization and the accomplishment of higher ideals.

(Adv.)

SOCIETY NEWS of the SOUTH

Waycross

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Mrs. V. L. Stanton and Miss Mary Stanton have returned from a visit to Atlanta and points in North Georgia.

Miss Clifton Wing, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. B. Thorpe, has returned to her home in Macon.

Mr. and Mrs. Dessau Bunn, en route to their home at Fairfax from St. Simons Island, where they spent the summer, were guests of relatives in Waycross this week.

Miss Jessie Lou Stanley visited relatives in Brunswick this week.

Miss Leila Paschall, who has been visiting in Atlanta, will spend some time in Rome before returning home.

Mrs. R. E. Brown and children have returned from a visit to relatives in Scranton, Pa.

Mrs. J. P. Dukes and children visited in Savannah this week.

Misses Viola and Ruby Clemens are visiting relatives in Savannah.

Following a short visit in New York City, Mr. L. Volney Williams will join Mrs. Williams and children in Michigan for an extended visit. Mr. Williams sailed for New York from Savannah Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gaston Lewis, of New York, are in the city for a visit of several months.

Mrs. E. J. Seay and Miss Elwood Seay have returned from a visit to Columbia, S. C.

Mrs. J. P. Moody, of Florida, is the guest of Mrs. W. T. Seaman.

Mrs. A. J. Miller left Thursday for Wilmington, N. C., where she will visit relatives.

Mrs. M. Z. Hinnant and children have returned to Wilmington, N. C., after a visit to friends and relatives in Waycross.

Mrs. C. R. Powrie and little daughter, Jean, of New York, arrived Wednesday to join Mr. Powrie and will make Waycross their home.

Members of the Friday Club were entertained yesterday by Misses Lucile and Susie Sutton.

Miss Aline Jeffers is expected home shortly from a visit to her sister, Mrs. John D. Tucker, in Birmingham, Ala.

Crawfordville

CRAWFORDVILLE, Ga., Aug. 23.—Miss Virginia Butler, of Madison, is the guest of Miss Frances Burgess. Several delightful entertainments have been given in her honor among them receptions by Misses Melton and Asbury.

Miss Mattie Jordan, of Atlanta, spent a few days here the past week the guest of Miss Blanche Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Golucke, Mr. A. G. and Mrs. R. W. Golucke and daughters, Anna Catherine and Mary Gordon, are spending the week at Hot Springs, N. C.

Miss Lillian Asbury leaves this week for Elberton to visit Miss Allen, who was one of Miss Asbury's attractive guests last week.

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Owens and daughter, Aileene, of DeLand, Fla., are spending some time here with friends.

Colonel and Mrs. J. Frank and daughters, Cornelia and Nell, of Dothan, Ala., spent several days here as the guests of Mr. W. P. Rid.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Leary and Guy, Jr., have returned to Augusta after spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Gee. Miss Martha Griffith returned home with them.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Anthony and Mr. L. P. McCord, of East Palm Beach Fla., are here visiting.

Miss Mary Fannie Harris, of Augusta, is the guest of Miss Emma Chapman.

Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Gunn have returned from Augusta and Atlanta, where they spent several days last week.

Colonel and Mrs. J. A. Beasley are visiting in Atlanta.

Mesdames J. V. Andrews, J. H. Callahan and W. C. Andrews, all of this city, are spending some time at Borden Wheeler, Ala.

Miss Minnie Olive Park will entertain a house party this week. Those invited are Misses Mary Holden, of Athens; Anita Sanford, of Augusta, and Kathleen Kendrick, of Sharon.

Milledgeville

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Joseph Cleveland Cooper entertained on Thursday evening in honor of her sister, Miss Carrie Talbot. Hearts-dice was played, after which a delightful salad course was served. Those present were the Misses Susan Myrick, Jesse Allen, Maggie Bivins, Floride Allen, Isabella Allen, Pauline Nisbit, Helen Maxwell, Hattie Pottle, Mary Amos and Francis Conn, Edwin Allen, James Sibley, Erwin Sibley, John Sibley, Malcolm Flemister, Charles Conn, Henry McAuliffe, Charles Brown, Arthur Carr, Stewart Wootten and James Clark, of Atlanta.

Miss Marguerite Joseph entertained on Monday at a suit-case shower for Miss Katherine Scott, who leaves soon for an extended trip through the North. Each lady brought some gift for the honoree.

Mrs. Frank Bone entertained at her home on Greene street Wednesday afternoon in honor of Miss Francis Stevens, of Macon, when "42" was played, after which a salad course was served. Those present were Mrs. W. T. Garrard, Mrs. Y. A. Little, Mrs. Cleve Cooper, Mrs. Lodrick Jones, Mrs. Culver Kidd, Mrs. John Barrett, Mrs. I. C. Case, Mrs. E. A. Tignor, Mrs. E. E. Bass, Miss Carrie Talbot, Miss Beuna Barrett and Miss Annie McKinley.

Another social event of the week was a party given by Miss Katie Cline on Tuesday afternoon, her guests being Mrs. L. M. Jones, Jr., Mrs. Harry Bone, Mrs. Frank Bone, Mrs. Logan Griswold, Mrs. Bee Bethune, Mrs. George Brantley, Miss Francis Conn, Miss Frances Stevens, Miss Pauline McKinley, Miss Annie McKinley and Miss Hattie Pottle.

Covington

COVINGTON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Clarence Terrell entertained at the Lyric Theater on Thursday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Alva Cooper, of Savannah, who is the guest of Mrs. J. O. Cooper. Mrs. Terrell's guests included Mrs. Alva Cooper, Mrs. J. O. Cooper, the Misses Eloise Cooper, Ida and Annie Higgins, Eleanor Butler, Frances Henderson, Hyda Heard and Bonner Sims, Mrs. H. D. Terrell and Mrs. J. Bain Terrell.

Miss Louise Whitehead entertained on Tuesday evening at her home on Monticello street with a progressive conversation party in honor of her house guest, Miss Ella Mae Ellis, of Macon. The guests included the Misses Natalie Turner, Annie Pauline Anderson, Lartrelle Meadors, Dorothy Lee, Ruth Weldon, of Talladega, Alabama; Frances Dearing and Marion Sherman, James Lester, Jim Wells, Rufus Franklin, Charles Ellis, Guy Robinson, Candler Harwell, Ivey Smith, Lamar Smith, Reginald Robinson, Perrino Dearing, Fred Bush and Guy Rogers.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Fowler, Miss Louise Fowler, Mrs. J. W. Stephenson, Miss Eva Stephenson, Mrs. Lillian Stephenson Weaver, Roy Stephenson, of Tampa, Fla., and Hugh Wright were among those from Covington who attended the Duffy-Stephenson wedding, which was a pretty event of Thursday, taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Parker Ernest Duffy at Morrow.

Mrs. Thomas Berry entertained a number of relatives last week at a family reunion, the guests including Mr. and Mrs. John P. Blanton, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Harris, of Alabama; Mrs. J. W. Loyd, of Dawson, Ala.; Mrs. R. L. Tye, of Mansfield; Mrs. H. B. Thacker, of Oxford, and Mrs. A. J. Blanton.

Moultrie

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—Miss Lucile Autrey entertained the members of the Entre Nous Club on Saturday morning. Assisting Miss Autrey were her sisters, Mrs. Roy Autrey and Mrs. Clyde Taylor.

Complimentary to her sister, Miss Mary Walker, of Atlanta, Mrs. T. W. Maddox entertained at a "42" party on Tuesday morning.

Mrs. A. W. Chase entertained a number of her friends on Thursday afternoon at a domino party.

Sylvania

SYLVANIA, Aug. 23.—Miss Nelle Davis entertained at cards on Tuesday morning for the Misses Willie Christie and Lucile Evans, of Savannah. First prize, a box of stationery, was won by Miss Ruby Mauldin. Those present were the Misses Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, of Atlanta; Bertha Pearson, Maud Hilton, Jupnita Williamson, Ruby Mauldin, Kate Patrick, Lucy Morel, Sadie Lovett and Esther, Ruth and Kathleen Mimms.

Mrs. John C. Hollingsworth entertained the Ladies' Culture Club on Tuesday afternoon. The program consisted of a study of "Famous Georgians."

A party enjoying an outing at Brannen's Bridge on Wednesday included Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Powell, Mesdames A. T. Perkins, Lecie Davis and J. W. Overstreet; the Misses Mattie Zoe Mallory, Willie Christie, Lucile Evans, Nelle Davis and Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, Julian Cooper, Willie Robbins, Spencer Powell, Bates Lovett and Edward Overstreet.

Mrs. R. F. Jarrell, Jr., entertained the Civic Club on Wednesday afternoon. An interesting program was rendered, followed by delicious refreshments.

Mrs. J. C. Hollingsworth entertained at cards on Tuesday evening for Miss Mattie Mallory and Paul Mallory, of Clyo. Those present were the Misses Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, of Atlanta; Miss Mattie Zoe Mallory, of Clyo; Miss Ruby Mauldin, Miss Nelle Davis, Paul Mallory, of Clyo; Abe Greenberg, Spencer Powell, Edward Overstreet and Bates Lovett.

Miss Margaret Flood

of Savannah, one of the popular members of the school set. Miss Flood is also taking an active part in the girl scout movement, being captain of a patrol.

Tallahassee

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 23.—Mrs. H. T. Felkel entertained informally at her home on College avenue Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. W. E. Shackelford, of Jacksonville, was a recent visitor to the Capital City.

Governor Park Trammell left Thursday for a ten days' vacation at Waynesville, N. C., where he joined Mrs. Trammell.

Mrs. S. D. Chittenden at her beautiful home on Park avenue on Wednesday morning entertained at auction bridge in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Wight, of Cairo, Ga., who is visiting her for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Winthrop returned Thursday from Atlantic Beach, having made the return trip from Tallahassee in their automobile.

The regular Thursday night's dance was enjoyed by the society folk at the Elks' Club.

Pensacola

PENSACOLA, Aug. 23.—Pensacola society was much interested in the marriage on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock of Mrs. Mary Dallas Strong, formerly a social favorite in Pensacola, to William F. Quicksall, which took place in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Strong recently visited Mrs. Albert Hyer at her beautiful Bayshore residence, Virginia Lodge, and while here was entertained by Mrs. E. J. Wilson and many other of her old friends.

Mrs. W. H. Northup, who has been spending the past month in the North Carolina mountains, in the beautiful Sapphire Country of Saluda and Waynesville, returned home on Tuesday. Mrs. Northup stopped a few days in Atlanta, where she met Mrs. Pat McHugh, formerly Mrs. Pebley, of Pensacola, at the Hotel Majestic.

Miss Madge Cushman, of Knoxville, Tenn., accompanied by her nephew, Robert Daniels, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Daniels, arrived Saturday on a two weeks' visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton H. Cushman.

The North Carolina mountains are a favorite summer resort for Pensacolans, and at Waynesville this summer there is quite a colony. Mrs. C. W. D'Alemberte, who is now in Rome, Ga., and Mrs. W. H. Northup spent some time at Waynesville, and Mrs. Smithwick, two children, William and Mary, and Mrs. Smithwick's sister, Miss Verren, are now there. Mrs. Alice Aylward, who formerly made her home here and who was recently the guest of Mrs. J. J. Hooton, is also at Waynesville.

Griffin

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Carlton Jones entertained her bridge club Tuesday afternoon at an al fresco party. On Wednesday afternoon she was hostess at a domino party.

Miss Mamie Slade and Miss Carrie Slade were hostesses Wednesday evening at a lawn party in honor of their guests, Miss Irene Dempsey, of Cedartown, and Miss Inez Hyman, of Cordele.

Miss Mary Bass was hostess at an automobile party to Barnesville in honor of Misses Mamie and Carrie Slade, Irene Dempsey and Inez Hyman.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Baxter were hosts at a lawn party Friday evening in compliment to their guest, Miss Jessie Robertson, of Forsyth.

On Wednesday morning Miss Olive Boyd was hostess at a rook party in honor of her guest, Miss Mary Watkins, of Atlanta.

Mrs. James Nutt entertained Monday afternoon at a bridge party in honor of Miss Katherine Wooten, of Washington.

Mrs. John Henry Newman entertained fifty ladies Friday afternoon at a theater party especially in compliment to her sisters, Mrs. H. L. Wheat, of Macon, and Mrs. Idus C. Doe, of LaGrange.

Mrs. James Kimbrough entertained Wednesday evening at a dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burr, of Atlanta. Invited to meet Mr. and Mrs. Burr were Mr. and Mrs. John B. Mills and Mrs. James Mills.

Mrs. Charles Murray and Mrs. Frank Ingram were hostesses Wednesday morning at a sewing party in compliment to Mrs. James Porter and her daughter, Mrs. Everts. Miss Della Porter and Miss Laura Porter, of Houston, Texas.

Little Miss Ethelyn Ison entertained twenty of her little friends Friday morning in honor of the fifth birthday.

Master Ernest Carlisle was host Wednesday afternoon in celebration of the fourth anniversary of his birth.

Little Miss Lily Rivers Griffin entertained a party of her young friends celebrating the fourth anniversary of her birth.

Cordele

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—A congenial party of young people enjoyed a picnic and fish fry Monday afternoon on the Flint River, the affair being in honor of the Misses Ruth and Clara Mae Jefferson, of Columbus.

Mrs. I. J. Lamb and daughter, Miss Mae Lamb, entertained Tuesday afternoon in honor of Miss Grace Dill, of Ocilla, the guest of Mrs. P. C. Dill and Misses Jefferson.

Mrs C. E. Todd was the hostess Monday afternoon to the Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church.

Durham

DURHAM, Aug. 23.—Misses Margaret and Bessie Erwin, with W. A. Erwin, "cotton king" of North Carolina, gave an elaborate dance at the Durham Country Club in honor of guests who were attending a house-party at "Hillcrest," the Erwin home. It was the most brilliant social affair of the season and was attended by young folks prominent in society through the State.

The guests of honor were Miss Agnes Tinsley Harrison, Atlanta; Miss Sadie Willham, Augusta; Miss Katherine Overman, Washington, D. C.; Hamilton Jones, Charlotte; Hugh Thompson, Raleigh, and Terry Lyon, Fayetteville.

West Point

WEST POINT, Aug. 23.—Miss Mary Booker entertained at rook Thursday evening in honor of Mrs. John T. Ivey and Miss Eloise Sikes, of Luverne, Ala. After the game sandwiches and tea were served.

Dublin

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—Miss Ruth Toole, of Macon, was the guest of honor at an auction bridge party which Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Toole gave Tuesday evening. Playing were the Misses Ruth Toole, Mabel Harvard, Dorothy Hooks, Mamie Ramsay, Frances Webb and T. W. Hooks, O. G. Sparks, J. B. Hicks and W. R. Brigham.

A much-enjoyed affair of the week was the auction bridge luncheon which Miss Dorothy Hooks gave on Wednesday for Miss Ruth Toole. Miss Hooks' guests included Mrs. E. S. Street, Mrs. J. M. Finn, Mrs. T. R. Ramsay, Mrs. H. P. Shewmake, Mrs. A. J. Toole and Miss Frances Webb.

Of much interest socially will be the wedding of Miss Mary Lee Randall, of Grovania, and Richard P. Hicks, of Wrightsville, next Tuesday evening at the home of the bride's parents in Grovania. A party of friends from Dublin and Wrightsville will go over for this event. A reception will follow the ceremony.

The visitors in the city were honorees at a dance on Wednesday evening at East Lake. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Graham, Miss Lucy Gibson, of Macon; Miss Pearl Dowling, of Lake City, Fla.; Miss McLendon, Miss Otelia Gibson, of Macon; Miss Algie Prince, Miss Leonora Starr, Robert Hightower, Ramsay Fuller, S. Dixon, Paul Williamson, Dewitt Varnadoe, Cliff Holcomb, Clay O'Neal, Alex Blackshear, Claude Brantley, Alex Burch, Patrick Roach and William Brunson.

Senoia

SENOIA, Aug. 23.—Miss Lena Hand entertained a large party of Shorter and Wesleyan girls at a party at her home Monday evening.

The Methodist Missionary Society was royally entertained Monday afternoon by Mrs. H. B. Sasser.

The caming party given at Starr's Mill by Misses Lois and Annie Lou Hardy the past week was one of the most enjoyable events of the year. Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hardy chaperoned the party. The out-of-town guests included Misses Helen Carpenter, Newnan; Elizabeth Baker, Macon; Minnie McMichael, Buena Vista; Sallie Thompson, Hawkinsville; Mary and Lena Render, Greenville; Messrs. Tom Tolleson, Fayetteville; Kendal Fielder, Cedartown; Albert Jelks, Hawkinsville; Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Freeman and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hunter.

Miami

MIAMI, Aug. 23.—Miss Josephine Bravo, one of the first children born in Miami, was united in marriage on Monday night to Dallas D. Hoffman, of this city. The ceremony took place at the bride's home in the presence of a number of friends and relatives and was followed by an informal reception.

One of the pretty dinner-dances of the summer was that given Tuesday night at the beach by Clement and Bazil Brossier, in honor of the Misses Frances and Jane Tatum, two of the charming buds of the city, who leave soon for an exclusive girls' school in the North. The guests were the Misses Frances and Jane Tatum, Jewel Green and Ruth Rose, and Victor Moffat, Merle McLeannon and B. B. Tatum. The affair was held at the Casino at the beach.

Complimentary to the Misses Maude and Alice Reilly, of New Haven, Conn., who are visiting their brother, John B. Reilly, a luncheon was given at the Dade Club by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Coleman Romfh. Roses were used for the decorations. Covers were laid for the Misses Reilly, Miss Flavia DeCamp, R. B. Black, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Reilly, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McDonald and Mr. and Mrs. Romfh.

A Cooncan Club has been organized by a group of the young women of the city. Miss Cornelia Leffler was hostess at the last meeting of the club. Those present were the Misses Myrtle Rose, Hilda Baile, Christine Worley, Ruth Rose, Helen Skelly and Mildred Taylor.

Mrs. Everett George Sewell is spending the latter part of the summer at Asheville, N. C., where many other Miami people are stopping.

Jackson

JACKSON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. L. M. Crawford complimented her guest, Mrs. James Crawford Nutt, of Griffin, with a "42" party on Thursday morning.

The young men of the city gave a moonlight picnic at Indian Springs on Tuesday in honor of Miss Sarah Wylie, of Cartersville, the guest of Miss Mary Land.

In compliment to her niece, Miss Julia Collier, of St. Louis, Mrs. Levi entertained four tables of bridge on Wednesday evening.

Tampa

TAMPA, Aug. 23.—Dr. William Monroe Rowlett and Miss Gregory Walker, daughter of Mrs. Julian Walker, of New York City, will be married at the cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York on September 10. Dr. Rowlett's brother, Calus Rowlett, and the bride-elect's brother, Hewitt Walker, will be best men and will be the only attendants. Dr. Rowlett and his bride will take a trip to Canadian resorts before returning to this city about October 1 to make their home. Dr. Rowlett is one of the young physicians of the city and is very popular. Miss Walker is related to many families here, and she and her mother spent last winter here, taking a house on the Boulevard. This summer they have been spending in the Berkshires. She is an accomplished pianist.

Two well-known young couples of Winter Haven, one of the fine resorts and orange grove towns of interior Florida, are to be married at the same time on September 14. They are Norman Wyckoff and Miss Larra McCrary and Leslie Winston Anderson and Miss Kathleen Winston Pepper. The double ceremony will take place at the First Christian Church of Winter Haven, and the young couples will go for a wedding trip together.

Mrs. A. B. Gerner, of this city, is chaperoning a house party at Wall Springs. The party is made up of Tampa and Dade City people, and they are enjoying the bathing at this resort. Among the Dade City members of the party are the Misses Lulu and Ethel Cochrane. A number from Dade City motored over to the camp at various times during the last week or so to spend a few days.

Buchanan

BUCHANAN, Aug. 23.—The recital and reading given at the Methodist Church Tuesday evening by Miss Shirley Sutherlin, of Cave Springs, was enjoyed by all present. Miss Sutherlin has accepted a position with the Southern Female College at LaGrange next year.

Tifton

TIFTON, Aug. 23.—Miss Aline Shipp entertained in honor of her guests, Misses Julia Williams and Florence Parks, with a Japanese party Monday night. Those present were the Misses Julia Williams, Florence Parks, Annie Howard, Marie Garbutt and Vernice Kennedy, James Pate, Roy Thrasher, Robert Hall, Louie Monk, Watson Holmes, Joe Gammon and Mark and Conrad Shipp.

Miss Josie Golden entertained Friday afternoon at four tables of salmagundi in honor of her guest, Miss Kate Harrell, of Doerun.

Miss Annie Howard entertained Tuesday night in honor of Miss Aline Shipp's house guests.

St. Augustine

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 23.—A pretty event of the week was the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Josephine Masters and Marcus Pappy, at the Cathedral Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. Father James O'Brien officiating. Both are among the best known young people of the city and are members of old Florida families.

Captain and Mrs. Henry Marcotte left yesterday for Williamsport, Pa., where they will spend several weeks.

Miss Nell Edmonds and her mother have gone to Miami, where they will reside in the future. They were social favorites here.

Miss Ruth Green, a popular member of the younger society set, has returned from an extended visit with friends in Tallahassee.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald White have returned from a several months' honeymoon trip spent in England. Mr. White's old home. Mr. White is a well-known banker. Mrs. White was formerly Miss Elizabeth Frazer, of this city. Their wedding was a social event of the early summer.

Mrs. G. H. Bruer has returned from Syracuse, N. Y., where she visited her daughter, Mrs. Ernest Johnson.

Gainesville

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Elizabeth Kimbrough will entertain at a house party next week, her guests to include Miss Jamie Hall, of Graniville; Miss Cora Candler, of Dallas, Texas; Miss Marie Dinkins, of Atlanta; Miss Emily Dorsey, of Opelika, Ala., and Miss Laura Mae Kennimerg, of Cleveland. Among the social attention planned for her guests are a masquerade party at the home of Miss Kimbrough and a reception, with Miss Mary Florence McKinney as hostess.

A social affair of the week was the bridge luncheon Wednesday morning which Mrs. Pillow gave for her daughter, Mrs. French, of New Orleans. About twenty guests were present.

A compliment to Mrs. J. B. Fitzgerald, who leaves this week for her future home in Augusta, was a porch party given Tuesday morning by Mrs. M. C. Brown and her mother, Mrs. Flanders.

Mrs. J. E. Jackson was hostess at a sewing party at her home on Academy street in honor of her sister, Mrs. H. W. Campbell, of Atlanta.

Miss Jone and Louise Jackson entertained eight couples at a dinner party Friday evening in honor of Miss Marjorie Wilkes, who was a guest of Mrs. J. H. Banks.

Acworth

ACWORTH, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Daniell Humphries Collins entertained on Thursday afternoon in compliment to Mrs. Norman Smith Kitchen, of Birmingham, Ala.

Mrs. Zollie L. McLain, Mrs. W. Arthur Nichols and Mrs. Charles Gribble were hostesses on Friday afternoon at a reception at the home of Mrs. Gribble, in honor of Mrs. D'Armand Breard, of Monroe, La.; Miss Aris Elgin, of Anderson, S. C., and Mrs. Norman Smith Kitchen, of Birmingham, Ala.

Washington

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—In honor of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Newsom, whose wedding Monday afternoon in Atlanta was a social event of cordial interest to a large circle of friends and relatives in Wilkes County, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Armstrong entertained a number of friends Thursday with a barbecue at their country home five miles north of Washington.

Tuesday's meeting of the Bimonthly Bridge Club, composed of the young married set of Washington, was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Clement E. Sutton. It was decided to call it further meetings until October on account of the number of members who are spending September out of town.

Lanark

LANARK, Aug. 23.—The residents at the Byrd cottage and a few invited guests enjoyed an excursion to Dog Island on Thursday evening. A delicious lunch was served on the island and a dip in the surf was enjoyed.

On Wednesday night at the hotel Willie Byrd was host at a crab supper.

Making up a pleasant house party at Lanark for a week or ten days are Mrs. B. H. Hardaway, Miss Slade, Miss Gerge, Charles Porter and B. H. Hardaway, Jr., all of Columbus, Ga. The house party is given by Mrs. Hardaway in honor of her son, B. H. Hardaway, Jr. The party is occupying the cottage of Mrs. Hardaway.

The party of Tallahassee campers at St. Theresa, composed of John McDougall, Abe McDougall, Guy Haynes and Phil Caldwell, on Saturday evening sailed over to Lanark, enjoyed the Saturday night dance at the hotel and remained over Sunday, taking the members of the Columbus house party for a sail. John and Abe McDougall returned to their camp at St. Theresa and Guy Haynes and Phil Caldwell to Tallahassee.

A party of campers at Lanark occupying the Phillips-Culley cottage is made up of Walter Culley, Humphrey Gwynn, Horace VanBrunt and Harbert Keith, of Tallahassee.

Gainesville

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Mamie McGrew has returned from a four-weeks outing, during which she visited friends in Jacksonville, Augusta, Ga., and Hendersonville, N. C.

Mrs. J. I. Blake and children are now in Atlanta on a visit to relatives.

Miss Birdie Wood, of Fernandina; Miss Gussie Steindorff, of Greenville, Ala., and Miss Nellie Dekle, of Tampa, are guests of Mrs. Robert E. Lee on West Arlington street.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Harris, of Haverhill, Mass., announce the engagement of their daughter, Marion Carr, to Lee Graham, of Gainesville, Fla. This announcement is of great interest to the social circle of this city. Mr. Graham is cashier of the First National Bank of Gainesville, a member of the City Council and a most popular citizen. It is said the wedding will be some time in October.

Cartersville

CARTERSVILLE, Aug. 23.—On Tuesday evening a dance was given at the Opera House by the young men of Cartersville to the visiting girls. The out-of-town guests were Misses Marion Perdue, Ruth Blackman and Ruth Barry, of Atlanta; Kathrine and May Stiles, of Brunswick; Addie McCollister and Ida Moody, of Piedmont, Ala., and Mrs. Keith Carson, of Tifton. The chaperons wer Mr. and Mrs. E. Strickland, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hammond and Mr. and Mrs. Madison Milam.

Mrs. Walter Holcombe, of Nashville, entertained at an afternoon tea at "Roselawn," the home of her mother, Mrs. Sam P. Jones, on Saturday. The guests were Mrs. John G. Simpson and Miss Hattie Jones, Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. Bert Sims, Murfreesboro, Tenn., and Mrs. Conyers Fite, Washington, D. C.

Nashville

NASHVILLE, Aug. 23.—A lawn social was given on the courthouse square by the ladies of the Civic League yesterday evening from 6 to 9 o'clock. The proceeds will go for the benefit of the public library.

Ocilla

OCILLA, Aug. 23.—At the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. J. W. Layfield, Miss Meta Clair Sibley and Edwin E. Howell were married on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, and left immediately for Atlanta and other points in North Georgia to return in ten days, when they will make this city their home. The Rev. Mr. Ansley, Baptist minister at this place, officiated.

Claims To Be Heir To Cooper Estate

Henry D. Ritch Says He Was Adopted Son of Savannah Man. Files Suit.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—A suit in which Henry David Ritch seeks to establish himself as an heir-at-law of the late Clem T. Cooper so that he may inherit one-third of the $43,000 Cooper estate, has been filed in the Superior Court of Chatham County.

The obstacle in the way of Ritch's claim is Mrs. Lillian Hamilton, formerly Mrs. Lillian Cooper, wife of the man who died intestate, leaving this desirable property. Ritch says he was legally adopted by Cooper and is entitled to inherit one-third of the estate, as well as to share in the net proceeds from the estate since the death of Cooper on January 14, 1903.

The petitioner is 19 years old. He began the proceedings through J. J. Rahn, Jr., a friend. He shows that when a child 6 years old he was adopted by Cooper, and that he took the name of his foster parent. At that time Cooper was a widower. Ritch continued to live at the Cooper home until six months after the death of Cooper.

FORGOT TO CLOSE WINDOW; GAS FAILED TO KILL MAN

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Because he forgot to close a window in the back of his store when he attempted to kill himself by inhaling illuminating gas, Laurence Louis, a confectioner, will probably recover.

Louis had removed the burners from a gas stove, and placing a rubber tube in his mouth, turned on the gas. Despondency because of business affairs is said to have been the cause of the act.

BIG DISAPPEARING GUN ARRIVES IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Occupying four freight cars, the carriage for the 10-inch disappearing gun in the dummy fortifications in the park extension has arrived from Bethlehem, Pa.

The total weight of the carriage is 225,000 pounds. It will support a gun weighing 30 tons and measuring 35 feet in length. The gun will be mounted inside the fortifications which will be used by the Savannah Volunteer Guards in practice work.

The "Ice Kist"

APPROVED BY
Good Housekeeping Institute

No Crank
No Dasher
No Handle
No Cogs
No Wheels
No Wood
No Hoops
No
Hard Work

$1.95 POSTPAID 15 DAYS' TRIAL 2-QUART SIZE $1.95

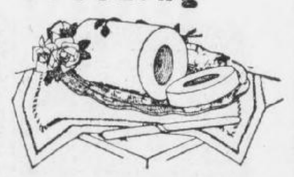
PACK IT — THAT'S ALL

For the ICE-KIST all you have to do is to pour in the cream, sherbet or whatever refreshment it may be, and pack in the ice as in the ordinary freezer. Then the work is ended. There is no working a dasher, no turning a handle or crank, no straining your arms and back, no opening the freezer to "see" if it is freezing, no extra packing in of ice. All you do after packing is to open the freezer and serve the refreshment. It saves work, time, trouble and—you.

Perfect Freezing

The Ice-Kist has no dasher or crank because it has two freezing surfaces. The old-fashioned freezer had only one freezing surface—that is why a crank and dasher were necessary. The Ice-Kist has a metal freezing tube that extends directly through the cream to the bottom. This gives the two freezing surfaces. The "cold penetrates from the center and from the outside, too. The cream is frozen with a smoothness that will delight you.



The Ice-Kist makes a beautiful and perfect-frozen mold.

Special 15-Day Offer

We want you to know the joy of having an Ice-Kist Crankless Freezer in your home. We will send it post-paid upon the return of the coupon together with $1.95—our introductory price. If, after trying the ICE-KIST for 15 days, you are not delighted with it, return it and we will return the $1.95. Don't let the coupon get lost. Send it NOW.

Western Merchandise & Supply Co.,
326 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Enclosed is money order for $1.95. Please send the ICE-KIST CRANKLESS FREEZER for 15 days' trial.

Name.....

Address.....

.....Ex.

FRANKLIN WILL FOUND INTACT AND RESTORED

Document Contains Severe Arraignment of Custom of Wearing Jewelry in This Country.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—All controversies regarding the disposition of the estate of Benjamin Franklin have been settled by the restoration of his will by the manuscript repair department of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

The document, recently resurrected from a vault under the City Hall for the purpose of verifying an office copy, was found to have deteriorated so much during more than a century of obscurity that it was practically indecipherable. Through the renovating process to which it was subjected it has regained much of its original freshness and legibility, making it possible for every detail to be understood.

In a finely-worded passage he makes disposition of his best cane as follows: "My fine crabtree walking stick with a gold head curiously wrought in the form of the cap of liberty I give to my friend and the friend of mankind, General Washington. If it were a scepter, he has merited it and would become it. It was a present to me from that excellent woman, Mme. de Forback, the Dowager Duchess of Deux Ponts."

A small painting of the King of France, presented to him by that monarch, which was mounted in a frame containing 408 diamonds, he bequeathed to his daughter, with the following curious proviso: "The King of France's picture, set with 408 diamonds, to my daughter, Sarah Bache, on the condition that she is not to form any of the diamonds into ornaments either for herself of daughters, and, therefore, countenance the expensive, vain and useless fashion of wearing jewels in this country."

TOLD HE'D DIE WHEN 29, BUT LIVING AT 101

Centenarian Walks to Church on Last Birthday and Gives Sunday School Advice.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Aug. 23.—William T. Osborne, of this city, was 101 years old to-day and he didn't mind it a bit.

Answer to "Old Subscriber," "Vox Populi," "Constant Reader" and "Friend of the Paper:" NO, HE NEVER SMOKED OR DRANK.

In the spring of 1841—when he was 29—four physicians visited him at different times to give him some concrete idea of how much longer he was going to adorn the earth. All said he was firmly in the grip of consumption. Three said he'd be lucky to last more than a few days. The fourth said Osborne didn't have a chance of picking anything off the next Christmas tree.

The four doctors are dead.

Five generations gathered at his home to-day. Naturally, he was delighted. Being a regular communicant of Trinity Methodist Church, he went there this morning. He wanted to walk, but the temperature made that seem unwise. Before the service he addressed a class in the Sunday school and told the scholars to be clean in their habits, stick on the sprinkling cart and keep up a strong activity in labor. He thinks that if he hadn't worked so hard he would not have taken part in to-day's party.

The old man didn't dance any jigs to indicate that he was as lively as he used to be, but he gave plenty of evidence that he was around the place. A natural decline in the power of his eyes recently forced him to give up reading, but he still writes, can hear well, enjoys walking and has a good memory.

He was born nine miles from Newburgh. He has been a farmer, tanner and storekeeper. His wife Sarah died eleven years ago at the age of 91.

WAR IN MEXICO BLOCKS WEDDING OF PAIR 5 TIMES

Young Engineer Kept From Love by Succession of Revolutions in Republic.

DENVER, Aug. 23.—What chance has a little fellow like the god of love in a mix-up with a big bully like the person who holds down the job of god of war?

The young man is Arthur N. Zwetow, a mining engineer employed in Mexico. He and the young woman, Miss Mildred Lowin, have tried to get married five times, to use their own expression, and each time that god of war person has "butted in" and dealt Cupid a knock-out blow.

Young Zwetow is in Concepcion del Oro, a mining camp near the border of the State of Coahulla. Six months ago he wrote his betrothed that he had obtained a leave of absence and the wedding bells would ring any time she said. The young woman got her trousseau ready and set the wedding day. But the bridegroom did not come. A letter from him said the Federals had started a war, the railroad had quit running, bullets were flying and he had to stay.

So it has been for five successive attempts.

Girl Chases 8 Cows With Auto; Gets $4

New Jersey Chauffeurette Uses Machine to Hustle Bovine Trespassers to Pound.

PETERSON, N. J., Aug. 23.—Four dollars of the money Joseph Smith paid for the wanderings of his cows yesterday went into the purse of Miss Minnie DeGray

Eight Smith cows entered her garden and were eating her corn. She chased them in her auto out of the field, across a lot, into the road and a half-mile to the poundmaster's yard. Smith paid $8 for their release. Miss DeGray received half of it.

OREGON 8-HOUR BILL HITS EVERY WORKING CLASS

Professors, Trades, Occupations and Even Day Labor Limited to 48 Hours Weekly Work.

SALEM, OREG., Aug. 23.—If the universal eight-hour bill, filed under the initiative to be voted on at the next general election, should become a law it would revolutionize the industries of the State.

The measure is drafted to apply to every industry, every business or vocation or profession in the State. No one is to be permitted, under its provisions, to work for more than eight hours out of nine consecutive hours a day, or more than forty-eight hours a week.

By this law neither manual labor, trades, nor the professions shall be exempted, but every form of labor, skilled or unskilled, as well as every trade and profession, and persons working therein or thereat, shall be included, in, by and under this law, and the same shall be included, in, by and under this law, within the State or Oregon.

The measure provides that the Labor Commissioner must see to the enforcement of its provisions, and if he does not do this immediately it becomes mandatory upon the Governor to remove the Labor Commissioner from office.

AGED FATHER THRASHES SON WHO THINKS HIM EASY PREY

EAST LIVERPOOL, OHIO, Aug. 23. When Francis Beaver, 30 years old, charged his father, Henry Beaver, aged 65, with having spoken in an uncomplimentary tone of the former's wife, the father resented the imputation and soundly thrashed his son.

The son, thinking he could easily worst his aged father, began the fight with a hard blow on the elder man's nose. Thoroughly aroused, Beaver, Sr., then started in and soon the son was lying on the ground with a fractured ankle and a fractured right leg.

ANNIVERSARY CLUB MEETS WITH THE SOUTHERN STATES LIFE

Leading Life Insurance Agents Hold Convention Here—Every Man Produced Over $100,000 Worth of Paid For Business in Twelve Months — Interesting Sessions Held.

There was a feast of reason, a sparkle of wit and a flow of soul at the brilliant banquet given at the Hotel Ansley last night when the Sixth Annual Convention of the Anniversary Club of the Southern States Life Insurance Company brought that gathering to a close.

Over one hundred guests were present.

This convention is celebrated by those members of the agency force of The Southern States Life Insurance Company who produced over $100,000 worth of paid for insurance during the year which ends June 30.

This convention had been in session two days, business sessions being held in the morning, the afternoon and evening being given over to entertainment.

Opening Session.

The first session of the Convention was held in the assembly room

J. C. WALDEN, SR., President.

of the Hotel Ansley on Friday morning. The largest attendance in the history of the club was present.

President Wilmer L. Moore, of The Southern States Life Insurance Company, greeted the club membership in a warm address of welcome, in which he congratulated them upon the splendid work just closed, and the beginning of the new year of the Anniversary Club, the first month of which saw the agents break all producing records.

J. R. WILLIAMS, Vice President.

Officers are not elected by the Anniversary Club, but office is won by the amount of insurance written. The agent writing the most business is President, the second man is Vice President, the leaders in each State are State Vice Presidents.

J. C. Walden, Sr., of Alabama, won the coveted honor of President. J. R. Williams, of South Carolina, was installed as Vice President.

Officers Installed.

The State Vice Presidents installed were T. Peters, Jr., of Georgia; B. B. Murray, of Florida; H. Clay Smith, of Alabama, and G. J. McDowell, of South Carolina.

In addition to these there were present other members of this Club who qualified for 1912-13: H. N. McAfee, of Georgia, a member for the sixth time; H. Willis Hogg, of Georgia, a member for the third time; J. T. Weems, of Georgia, the oldest member of the agency force of the company in point of service, for the sixth time; Fred Hines, of South Carolina, for the fifth time, and L. E. Black, Jr., C. S. Gurr and J. R. Munroe, for the first time.

Joe W. Vinson, whose absence from the meeting, owing to ill health, was greatly regretted by all present, completes his fifth year of membership.

He also signalized his intention of making his election for next year sure by not only leading the agency force in the month of July but by beating his own and all other previous records of written business in any one month, and thereby establishing a high mark for agents to aim at.

Brief addresses were delivered to the club by the President and Vice President of the Club.

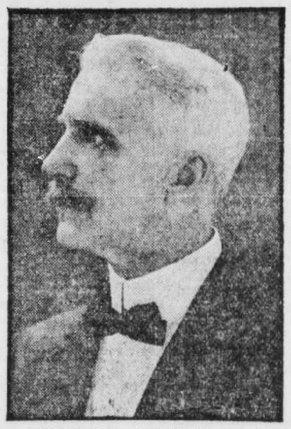
Unanimously Re-elected.

Robert F. Moore, Agency Secretary, was unanimously re-elected Secretary of the Anniversary Club, which position he has held with credit since the beginning of the organization.

Following the roll call of the Anniversary Club badges and certificates were distributed, after which the first "Keystone Degree" was conferred.

"New Policy" was the subject of an interesting paper by Supervisor of Agents, W. S. McLeod, which was followed by discussion and questions.

Agency Secretary Robert F. Moore followed with an interesting paper on "Items of Expense Charged to First Year's Business—Economy, What it Means to the Agent and the Policy-holder." His paper was followed by discussion and questions.



ROBERT F. MOORE, Secretary.

The photograph of the Anniversary Club, which appears on this page, was taken, after which the Club was entertained at luncheon at the Capital City Club by President Moore. Friday afternoon the Club attended the baseball game and Friday evening occupied boxes at the Forsyth theater.

Concluding Session.

The concluding session of this interesting convention was held on Saturday morning, at which time a symposium of talks entitled "Confidential Chats With Medical Department," was participated in by E. M. Veatch, Dr. Gaines, W. S. Kendrick and Samuel Barrett, Actuary. This was followed by discussion and questions.

"The Company's Method of Payment of Death Claims—What It Should Mean to the Supervisor, the Agent, the Company and the Beneficiary," was delivered by Supervisor Frank E. Brodnax. This was followed by a discussion on the analysis of this subject under the following heads: (1) Bankers Agents Contracts, (2) Local Advertisement; (3) Draft on Local Bank, and (4) Follow Up of Prospects from Payment.

J. E. McLauchlin, Director of the Metropolitan Agency, followed with an interesting talk on "Systematic Following Up of Prospects."

A symposium of actual experiences by all agents came next and the formal addresses of the Convention were concluded with a most interesting address by Hon. Hervey W. Laird, former Assistant Insurance Commissioner of Alabama, and now Assistant to President Wilmer L. Moore.

Entertained at Luncheon.

The Club was entertained at luncheon at the Hotel Ansley and again attended the baseball game in the afternoon.

The Banquet at the Hotel Ansley last night was probably the most brilliant gathering held in the history of the Club and the Hotel.

Over one hundred guests were entertained. The colors of the Southern States Life Insurance Company—Red, Blue and White, and the Keystone Arch, the insignia of the Company, were carried out in the flowers, ices and place cards.

President Wilmer L. Moore presided as toastmaster, and introduced the speakers.

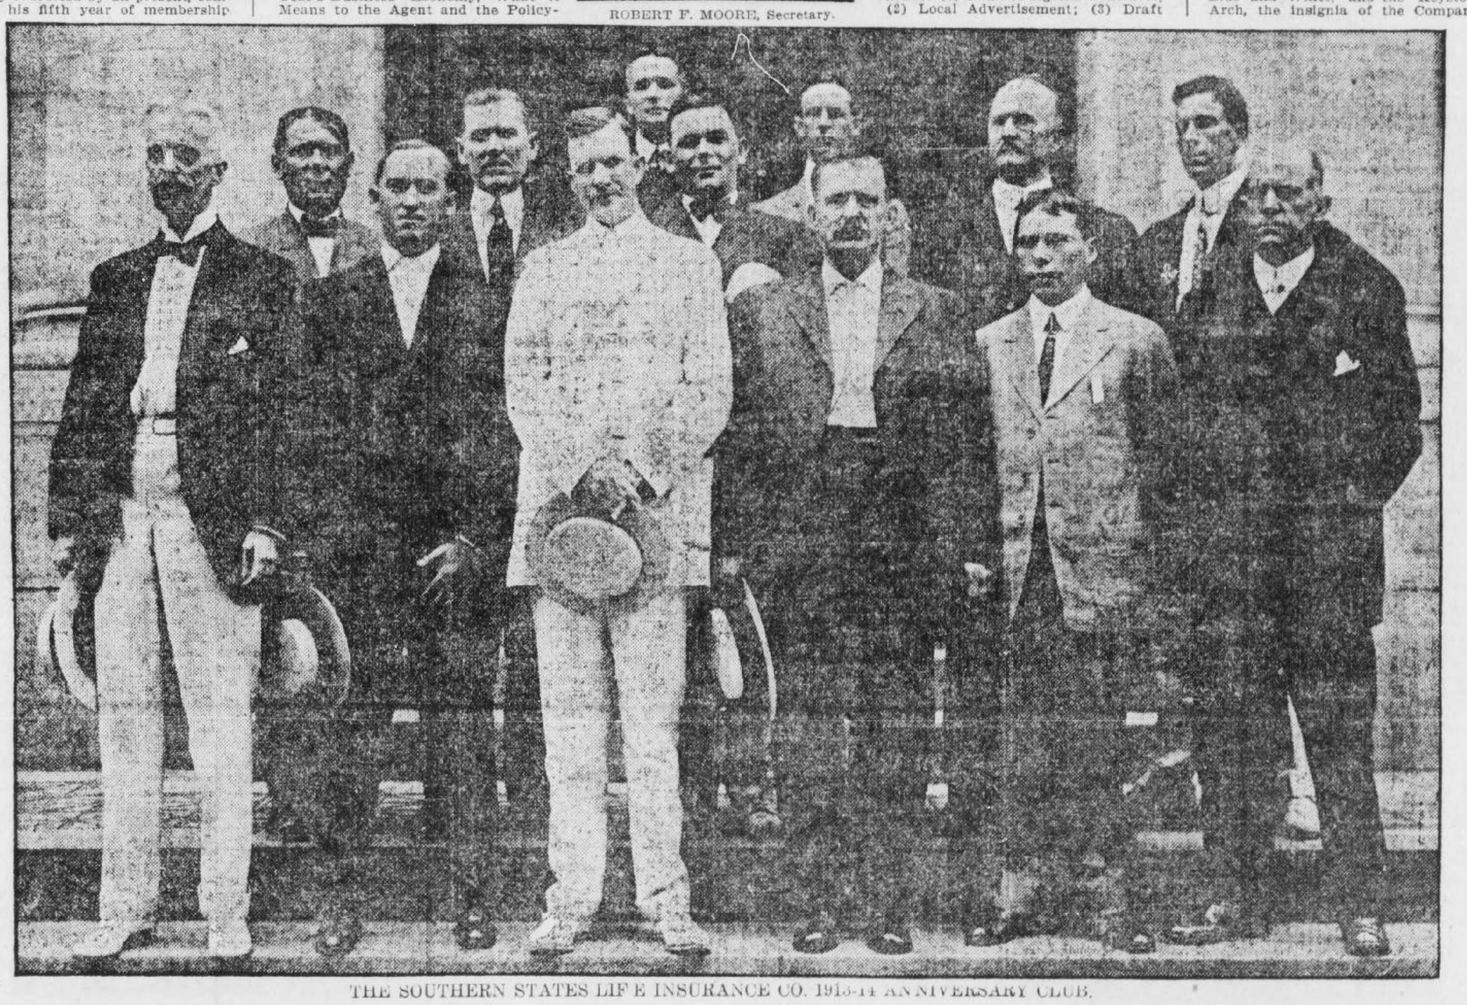
J. C. Walden, Sr., President of the Club, was the first and his response to the toast, "The Anniversary Club—the Top Rung," was warmly received.

He was followed by J. R. Williams, Vice President, whose subject, "The Southern States Life—Confidence Begets Loyalty," was handled in a splendid manner.

G. J. McDowell, a member of the Anniversary Club, and a familiar speaker at these banquets, responded to the toast, "The Keystone Degree—An Incentive to Work."

Burwell Responds.

Speaker W. H. Burwell, of the General Assembly of Georgia, delivered a splendid toast in response to President Moore's cordial introduction, on



THE SOUTHERN STATES LIFE INSURANCE CO. 1913-14 ANNIVERSARY CLUB.

T. PETERS, JR., Georgia Vice President

MENU

GEORGIA CANTALOUPE

CELERY QUEEN OLIVES ALMONDS

CONSOMME FLORENTINE
CHEESE STRAWS

POMPANO A LA CARONDELET POTATOES ANNA

CALVE'S SWEETBREAD ST. CLAIR
MOYENS PEAS

CHICKEN FILLET, LUCULLUS
PEELED ASPARAGUS HOLLANDAISE

LETTUCE, RUSSIAN DRESSING
BEATEN BISCUIT

MOUSSE A LA PARISIENNE
PETITS FOUR

CHEESE AND BENT'S CRACKER

DEMI TASSE

APOLLINARIS
CIGARS

Banquet Menu.

B. B. MURRAY, Florida Vice President.

Hotel Ansley Scene of Wonderful Banquet to Club Last Night—Toasts Were Made by Speaker Burwell, Hon. C. B. Brown, of Alabama, Hon. W. S. Witham and Clark Howell.

G. J. McDOWELL, South Carolina V. P.

"Success Is Measured by Ambition."

He was followed by Hon. Clark Howell, who responded to the toast, "Civic Duties—Every Man Has His Part."

Hon. Cyrus B. Brown, Assistant Commissioner of Insurance for the State of Alabama, represented that commonwealth and responded to the toast, "Alabama—Her Part in the Nation's Progress."

H. CLAY SMITH, Alabama Vice Pres.

Hon. W. S. Witham concluded the evening's gayety with a wonderful potpourri when he was presented to his hearers, with the following title for his toast, "A Toast, Like a Text, Is Given to Talk From."

EUROPE TROTS, BUT CAN'T KEEP STEP TO MUSIC

Syncopated Tunes and Dances Beyond Ken of Old World, Says American Composer.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Armand Vecsey, composer and director of music at the Ritz-Carlton, has returned fresh from a European trip with lots of new music and some comments upon the musical situation abroad which may act as balm to the souls of American composers, and a joy for those who are not musicians, but like to hear the scream of the American Eagle.

Mr. Vecsey has not lived on this side of the Atlantic long enough to have taken out final naturalization papers, but there is nobody on this side of Weehawken who is more intensely and enthusiastically American in a musical way. He says American music and American motifs have spread over all Europe, but the music the natives over there don't know how to play.

Opera in Europe, as Mr. Vecsey has viewed it this summer, is poor as compared with what is given at the Metropolitan Opera House, and there isn't anything now between London and Vienna that has to do with music or the stage which local talent can't beat hands down.

"I have been in Paris, London, Berlin, Munich, and Vienna," said Mr. Vecsey, "and everywhere I have found American music the most popular. Then the turkey trot one finds all over the Continent. Yet nowhere did I hear the music played correctly, although they try hard, and when it came to fitting German or French words to a typical trotting tune, the effect was ludicrous.

Recognize the "Truthahn Tanz?"

"Think of what the result was in Berlin, when they turned 'When the Midnight Choo-Choo Leaves for Alabam' into German! In Germany they call the trot 'Truthahn Tanz,' and in France it is the 'Pas du Dindon.' Who would recognize the original under such appellations?

"Then the French can not dance the trot, nor can the Germans. Somehow they can't just find out the character of it. Of course their bands and orchestras can not get the time right in the first place. Why, at the Folies Bergere in Paris, I saw two of the best French dancers giving what was supposed to be a most perfect rendition of the trot, and I assure you it was ridiculous. It was a very poor imitation of the real thing.

"Yet, I was astonished to find that all the new French music and most of the new German operettas are either in the American style, as nearly as their composers could approach it, or have American motifs. The tango seems to be breaking up the trot over there, partly, I suppose, because their dancers can come nearer to dancing it than the purely American steps. In Paris I saw a couple trying the Texas Tommy, and it was a sight to cause a horse to double up.

"Why can't they play a turkey trot? For the same reason that nobody except a Hungarian can play Hungarian music. Almost every musical country has something that is peculiarly its own—a style of music that when played correctly is infectious.

American Style Has Call.

"Hungary has its csardas, Austria its waltz, and America its syncopated time. When each is played properly, it is bound to move an assemblage of people, and just now the American style has the call everywhere.

"At the Palais de Danse, in Berlin, I first heard a turkey trot played by a German orchestra. It was very bad. I want to tell you that in Europe this summer there is no music, no opera, no Philharmonic concert, and no play that can compare with what has been heard here in New York this year."

"In Paris," went on Mr. Vecsey, with a trace of feeling, "when they see an American trunk, they lie in wait to rob the owner, and go crazy over the thought of loot. It is the same in Berlin.

"I must tell you that not anywhere are women so generally chic in their costumes nowadays as right here in New York.

"True, I did see many smartly gowned women, but investigation showed that most of them were Americans."

Rector Denounces Paid Choir Singers

Clergyman Declares There Is No Worship in Their Strange and Unutterable Music.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., Aug. 23.—The Rev. E. J. Craft, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, caused a sensation while addressing a meeting of the parishioners of Calvary parish by telling them what he would do if he were entering upon a new pastorate.

For one thing, he said, he did not believe in paid singers for church choirs "The service of the church was designed for the people as a whole and not alone for the choir," he said. "These modern choirs take the worship away from the people of the congregation and do all the worshiping themselves. They sing in wild and strange ways and in unutterable tongues the praises of God."

Veering of River Threatens Farms

Every Laborer Available Is Rushed to Head Off Flow of Missouri.

FREEMONT, NEBR., Aug. 23.—Every laborer available is being sent by the Burlington Railroad to Folsom to fight the Missouri River, which is again eating into the valuable farm lands of that section and threatening to cut its way to the railroad tracks. Many carloads of stone have been dumped into the river.

The river suddenly began veering from its channel a few days ago. Inside of two days it had swamped 20 acres of land. Fear is now felt that the river will eat its way back to the extensive farms within the last year at a cost of more than $500,000.

Tame Trout Craves Petting; Fed by Hand

Feels Insulted if Food Is Not Served in Manner to Which He Is Accustomed.

ESTES PARK, COLO., Aug. 23.—Sunbeam, the pet speckled trout in the fish hatchery at Estes Park, has just recovered from an indisposition caused by stomach trouble or rheumatism, and is again able to take its place as the only pet trout in captivity.

The fish, now a 3-year-old and about eleven inches long, is as good an example of gentle and loving trouthood as it is possible to find. Fed from the hand from the time it was hatched, it feels insulted now unless its food is given to it in that way.

It is very fond of being stroked and petted, and will swim around and rub itself against a person's hand whenever a chance is given it.

Stranger Is Son, Gone for 20 Years

Father Turns Wanderer Away, but Mother Calls Him Back, and Reunion Follows.

GLASGOW, KY., Aug. 23.—Virgil Huffman had been away from home twenty years, seeking his fortune in Alaska, and the father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. James Huffman, were sitting in a room of their home near here discussing him and wondering if he would ever come back.

There was a knock at the door and Mr. Huffman opened it to see a dusty traveler, who said he was tired and was seeking lodging for the night. Mr. Huffman thought he could do nothing for him, but Mrs. Huffman "reckoned" they could manage somehow.

Then they led him into the hall, under the swinging lamp, and as the light fell on his face the aged couple recognized him as their son.

African Chieftain Is Harvard Student

Begins Stupendous Task of Reducing His Own Language to Written Form.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., Aug. 23.—A full-blooded African chieftain has just passed his entrance examinations at Harvard with flying colors and will enter the university next September as a member of the class of 1917. He is P. Gbe Wolo, and his people, 300,000 strong, are the Krus of Liberia, on the west coast of Africa.

They have no written language, so that the only way he can communicate with his family is through traders on the coast, who send the message by word of mouth along the trail. He has begun the stupendous task of reducing his language to writing.

Goes to Cemetery Instead of Ball Park

Fan Mistakes Funeral Hack for Omnibus on Its Way to Diamond.

MONTGOMERY, MO., Aug 23.—A baseball rooter came here from a distance to attend the St. Charles-Montgomery game, and by mistake he got into a hack at the depot filled with pallbearers going to a funeral.

As he had crepe on his hat, the pallbearers thought he had come as a mourner and he was taken to the cemetery instead of the ball park.

Finding himself in a funeral procession, he woke up and escaped. He got to the ball grounds just in time to see the home team win.

'Star Baths' Latest Complexion Remedy

Young Women Campers Take Nightly 'Plunge' in Milky Way Beams on Tower.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Star baths are the fad at the summer camp of the Young Women's Christian Association in Blauvelt, N. Y. Miss Marion Hopkins, the camp leader, is given credit for the innovation. The baths are taken on top of a high tower in the center of the camp. It will accommodate a dozen bathers.

There is a long waiting list of young women campers who are anxious to enjoy the reported benefits of immersion in starlight. Chief among these is said to be the "star-shine complexion."

Husband in Prison; Wife Willed $20,000

Richmond Woman Given Share of Estate After Helpmate Is Sentenced for Embezzlement.

RICHMOND, VA., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Maud Kent Rowley, whose husband, William J. Rowley, formerly connected with a hotel here, was recently sentenced to serve two years in State prison for embezzling $8,000 from the Jefferson Hotel in this city while auditor there, inherits $20,000 from the estate of her aunt, Mrs. Junius A. Morris, of Richmond, who died August 3 at Atlantic City.

The value of the estate is placed at $496,000.

Woman Works as Circus Roustabout

Breaks Down While Handling Heavy Tent Pole and Her Secret Is Revealed.

LA CROSSE, WIS., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Ada Broughton, unable to support her two children and invalid husband on wages paid a woman, donned a man's attire and labored beside farm hands in Dakota wheat fields. She broke down under the strain and came to La Crosse to seek lighter employment, becoming a circus roustabout. Lifting heavy poles and canvas resulted in her complete breakdown. Then she told her story to the police and collapsed. She was taken unconscious to a hospital. Relatives are on the way from her home at Rice Lake.

HEARST'S SUNDAY American Advertising Contest

$10.00 Given Away!!

Last Sunday only the trade-marks or distinguishing characteristics of the advertisers below were given. $10.00 in cash was offered to the person sending in to The American, in the fewest possible words, a description of the advertisers whose "slogan" appeared below. Thousands of these replies were received and the prize goes to Mrs. O. D. Gorman, Jr., 79 W. 15th St., her answers appearing below:

WALL-PAPER

Thirty years in the wall-paper business have made us proficient. Ask our customers. Before you buy, try us. :: ::

"Better Be Safe than Sorry"

71 South Pryor Street

BURNETT WALL PAPER CO. BURNETT

"Go Where the Crowds Go"

AND

You will be delighted with the cool, comfortable Montgomery Theater. Absolutely the latest pictures.

Anna Von Hoffman is now singing

AT

The Montgomery

The easy way to buy clothes

Your Credit is Good at

DOLLAR A WEEK DAY 14 W. MITCHELL ST.

"Truly Duffy's"

The home of low prices, on the corner of Mitchell and Forsyth Sts. Attend our immense Clearing-Out Sale now going on. :: ::

DUFFY'S

"The Velvet Kind"

The kind of Ice Cream you really like. It's pure, clean and wholesome. Try it once. ∴ ∴ ∴

PHONE IVY 6849

VELVET ICE CREAM CO.

26 E. North Avenue

27 years in the same stand.

Shoes for the Entire Family

See our Fall and Winter stock of Men's and Ladies' models. Just from the Eastern style centers.

MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED

R. C. BLACK

35 Whitehall Street

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

ATLANTA HAS SUPPORT FOR HOME-GOODS EXPOSITION

Spirit Which Makes City Famous Prevails, and Enough Exhibitors Sign Agreements to Take Space to Assure Success of Project.

Decision Necessary Tuesday So That Plans for New Commerce Building Might Be Changed. Manufacturers Are Responding.

It was a close shave, everyone admits, but as usual the Atlanta spirit prevailed, and the "Made in Atlanta" exhibit is assured.

Tuesday's luncheon at the Ansley was the "clincher." Several years of agitation, a year of actual work, brought to a climax by a vigorous campaign of three months, developed the exhibit project to a point where about 36 manufacturers had signed their names to agreements binding them to take floor space for a period of three years.

Thus matters stood Tuesday. Meanwhile the contractors were at work in the new Chamber building remodeling it. The plans called for offices. If a change were to be made, a decision was necessary at once.

The case was put squarely up to the Atlanta manufacturers Tuesday, and on Tuesday's luncheon was staked the entire plan. The result of the appeal was success.

To Have Four Floors.

Four floors will be devoted to the exhibit. One floor will be given over to the cotton industry—textiles, oils and by-products. Furniture made in Atlanta will take another entire floor. Building materials probably will take a floor, kindred lines of manufacture will be grouped together as far as is consistent with economical disposal of space.

Who will be in charge of the exhibit in the new building at Pryor street and Auburn avenue has not been determined. Neither has it been decided when the exhibits will be installed. All this remains to be done.

This much is certain—there will be telephone service on each floor, an expert in charge and an intelligent effort to make the exhibit pay in dollars and cents for every participant.

Had the project fallen through, it would have been lamentable, for Nashville, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Hartford, Conn., St. Louis and other cities have such exhibits; others are planning them, and Atlanta would, for the first time, be forced to admit itself less progressive than its rivals.

Those Already Pledged.

The following firms had signed for space up to Saturday, the nature of the business being suggested where the name is not self-explanatory:

Southern Engraving Company.
Frederick Disinfectant Company.
J. K. Orr Shoe Company.
E. VanWinkle Company (motor trucks).
Atlanta Gas Light Company.
Southern Upholstering Company.
Atlanta Stove Works.
Southern Spring Bed Company.
Burnett, Bell & Klapper (furniture).
Gholstin - Cunningham Company (bed springs).
All-star Manufacturing Company (neckties).
Byrd Printing Company.
Norris, Inc. (candies).
Willingham-Tift Lumber Company.
Tripod Paint Company.
J. P. Stevens Engraving Company.
Atlanta Paper Company.
Atlanta Blank Book Manufacturing Company.
White Provision Company.
Dowman-Dozier (metal workers).
Foote & Davies (office furnishings).
Golden Eagle Buggy Company.
Metzger Mattress Company.
Whittier Mills (textiles).
Marcus Loeb & Co. (overalls).
Nunnally & McCrae (overalls).
Phoenix Planing Mills.
Parian Paint Company.
Atlanta Show Case Company.
Greer Manufacturing Company (jewelry).
F. J. Cooledge (building materials).
M. D. & H. L. Smith (awnings).
Reed Oil Company.
Atlanta Metal Bed Company.
Atlanta Auto Top and Trimming Company.
Monerief Furnace Company.
Coca-Cola Company.
Walter Baillard Optical Company.
Hagan & Liddd Co. (soft drinks).
Atlanta Art Glass Company.
K. E. Hill Manufacturing Company (razor blade strops).

In addition to the above, the Southern Cotton Seed Crushers' Association, the cotton oil mills, the textile and other cotton interests have an entire floor, where they will exhibit the cotton plant and all of its various uses.

ENGLISH MAKERS INVENT CAP WHICH KEEPS SHAPE

A problem that has engaged English cap manufacturers for some time has been how to produce a cloth cap that will keep its shape after it has been in use for some time. An enterprising firm of manufacturers now claims that they have solved the problem and that the shape of their caps is not affected by rain. The idea introduced consists of placing a flat plate of straw plait in the cap between the lining and the cloth crown.

This makes the top of the cap sit flat, and as the straw is not affected by wet it is said the cap can be worn for a much longer period than the ordinary

Sweet Potato Crop Yields Big Returns

Would Bring Much More if Southern Farmers Did Not Glut Market at Harvest.

Each year the sweet potato is becoming of greater importance as a money crop in the South. The value of this crop in the United States in 1900 was $34,429,000. 90 per cent of which was produced in the Southern States. The total area devoted to sweet potatoes in the United States increased from 537,000 acres in 1899 to 641,000 in 1909, and the yield increased from 42,500,000 to 52,200,000 bushels. The total value of the crop increased at a much more rapid rate than either the acreage or the yield, showing an increase of 78.3 per cent in ten years.

With better methods of storing and marketing the potatoes, it is said, their value could be doubled without increasing the acreage or production. This is especially true in the South, where the potatoes are either rushed on the market at digging time, when the price is low, or stored in outdoor pits or banks, where a large portion decays.

Very few of the sweet potatoes stored in pits or banks ever reach the market, for from 25 to 50 per cent spoil, and those that remain are not of good quality. Even if the pit or bank method of storage would keep the potatoes, it is not economical.

Too much labor and expense are required to make these banks every year and to get the potatoes out when wanted for market. Sweet potatoes can be marketed more economically and to much better advantage from storage houses.

Green Shirts Shown For Winter Wear

Long-Pointed Collars in White and Self-Striped Effects Continue in Vogue.

New features are noted among collars and shirts shown by leading manufacturers for fall and winter. Imported dress shirts, in soft laundered effects with musnroom tucks and semi-French cuffs are selling readily. Shirts with a short stiff bosom in various color combinations are also featured.

White self-striped effects in French pique with stiff and unstarched bosoms are also meeting a good demand. A soft bosom with cross-striped plaits, in various color combinations, is a new fall feature that has been well received.

Woven madras in colored effects will be strong.

The demand for silk shirts is increasing and they are becoming more of a staple than formerly. Green will be a popular shirt color for the new season

The long pointed collars in white and self-striped effects are continuing into the next season.

A departure in them is the wider two-inch band instead of the narrow one now worn. These new collars have a three and a half inch point.

The wider band is claimed to give them more the appearance of a standing collar, besides causing them to sit better and afford greater comfort.

Stocks of Iron Not Above 100,000 Tons

Accumulation in Yards Reduced Rapidly in Southern Territory. Curtailment Continues.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 23.—Small sales of pig iron continue in the Southern territory, with a satisfactory aggregate.

The price of pig iron holds around $11 per ton, No. 2 Foundry. There have been a number of sales made for delivery during the last part of the year and some inquiries are in hand for iron to be delivered the first quarter in 1914.

There still is curtailment of the make. It is believed Alabama will produce during August almost as much iron as in July. Furnace companies are expressing the belief that before the end of the year a buying movement is likely to call for an immense tonnage. The furnace and warrant yards inventory will show now over 100,000 tons on hand. A few months ago there were 150,000 tons on the yards.

Basic iron demand is more satisfactory. Charcoal iron price is above $23, with the make as low as it ever was in the South.

Steel operations are steady, the several plants in Alabama working on practically full time. Fabricated steel is going out in all directions. Cotton tie manufacturers have had a prosperous season.

Fertilizer Concern Has Splendid Year

American Agricultural Chemical Earns Close to 7 Per Cent on Its Common Stock.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—American Agricultural Chemical for its year to June 30 is understood to have earned something better than 6 per cent on the $18,330,000 common. In fact, it is barely possible that the final figures will come nearer 7 per cent on this issue.

Unless conditions in the fertilizer trade become very much worse than for the last two years, the company can continue to earn and pay the present 4 per cent dividend. This dividend rate is, by the way, a testimonial to the wisdom of directors in making the initial distribution on the common stock rather modest. If a 5 per cent or 6 per cent rate had been adopted two years ago, the future outlook would not be nearly so happy as it is to-day.

A very strong feature of American Agricultural operations is the high percentage of branded or trade-marked goods which it sells. It is safe to state that 90 per cent of the company's tonnage consists of trade-mark goods, which farmers buy on the reputation of a particular brand for the specific purpose desired,

SAMPLES COST DRY GOODS MEN MANY DOLLARS

Dealers Feel Something Should Be Done to Stop Incessant Drain on Their Profits.

There is strong feeling in dry goods circles that something should be done to curb the increasing demands of buyers for samples. In most quarters there is a strong opinion expressed that the giving of samples is a necessary evil up to a certain point, but there is also a strong opinion that this point has long since been passed.

Few manufacturers and wholesalers take the trouble to find out just what samples cost them. In only a few cases are definite records kept and the cost of the samples figured.

A New York silk firm gets out about 250 styles a season and the buyers got fair-sized samples of each style they bought. This is really necessary, but it is trade custom, the house follows the general path.

A big woolen firm in New York which does business with the cutting-up trades and larger retailers is one of the best informed on the subject of sample expense.

"On our books," the head of the firm said, "there are about 2,500 accounts. Of these about 1,800 are manufacturers of clothing. To each manufacturer we give five or ten sample books. The cloth in each book is valued at about 20 cents, and the expense of getting them up brings the cost to about 50 cents. This means that each manufacturing account costs us about $3.75 a season for samples. With two seasons a year and 1,800 manufacturers' accounts it is easy to see what samples mean to us without trying to figure the cost of samples for the retail accounts."

In another quarter of the woolen goods trade it was said that the samples given out mounted up to a tidy sum in the course of a year, but that the expense had not been so great of late because several houses had agreed to make clothiers pay for most of the samples they got.

"One of the worst features of the sample business in this industry," this agent said, "is the way some members of the clothing trade use them. Many of them have no scruples at all about taking our samples to a competitor and asking him at how much less than our price he can get the goods made up by his mill. This is a little off the subject, perhaps, but it illustrates one of the worst phases of the woolen industry."

Among the cotton goods houses the evil is seen in its worst form so far as quantity is concerned, but the cheaper qualities of these goods tends to lessen the aggregate loss as compared with wool and silk goods. Lace and embroidery firms also pay tribute to the sample god at the rate of several hundreds to several thousands of dollars a year.

Last, but not least, comes the big department store. Inquiry at several of them in New York brought out the assertion that samples cost them from $30,000 to $60,000 a year. Only 15 to 20 per cent of the people who take these samples from the stores really buy anything afterward, and the resultant loss necessarily is heavy.

N. O. T. & M. Receiver May Ask Big Loan

Frisco Subsidiary Almost Certain to Default on Interest Due September 1.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—As soon as New Orleans, Texas and Mexico receivers know whether Frisco receivers will or will not pay the $700,000 interest due September 1, they will make application for permission to issue approximately $1,000,000 receivers' certificates. In the meantime the Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust Company is making temporary loans to the receivers' comprising $100,000 for debt falling due August 1, and about $200,000 additional to middle of September.

The engineers employed to examine the properties which make up the Frisco's South Texas lines have not yet made their report, but the most favorable statement would show that at least 18 months of steady work and adequate funds would be necessary to put New Orleans, Texas and Mexico in a position to earn interest on its bonds. Others believe at least three years would be consumed in putting the line on its feet, and between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 expenditures would be needed.

Under these circumstances assumption is made in certain quarters that Frisco will default its guarantee of the interest due September 1. In fact, it is said that any other course would be improper.

KNITTING YARNS SLOWER BECAUSE STRIKE IS ON

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Buying of knitting yarns has slowed up, due to the knit goods strike in New York and Brooklyn, but prices show no change. Just how the strike will affect the market is a matter of conjecture, although most dealers admit that prices will drop if it is continued.

Spinners were unwilling to raise quotations on worsted yarns materially, as it would result in advancing the prices for worsted goods and so kill the prospective demand for them.

Cotton yarns were quiet, the small demand for them being attributed to the spinners' high prices. Weaving yarns were selling at lower figures than for several weeks, but only small orders were placed. Buyers, influenced by favorable cotton crop reports, were holding out for still lower prices.

There were no changes in Southern frame-spun knitting yarns, but there was less activity noted in the coarser counts of single combed yarns.

SUMMER TRADE DEVELOPED BY BRAINY EFFORT

August Dullness of Years Ago Is Overcome by Teaching Public What to Buy Then.

"Summer isn't the terror to us that it used to be," remarked a white-haired veteran of the department stores of Atlanta—a man who is an interesting talker and a consistent advertiser, but who keeps his own name and his own personality persistently in the background.

"There was a time," he went on in reminiscence, "when we might almost as well have closed up the store during July and August. That was years ago.

"In the summer all the well-to-do customers went out of Atlanta, and did not return until fall. Fall was a mad scramble for customers and stores alike.

"The less wealthy, who stayed in town, did little shopping. Everyone thought it was too hot. No one ever paid any attention to buying in midsummer. The stores were unattractive. Usually the proprietor was vacationing—if that's a good word—himself.

"I do not know who had the inspiration first in Atlanta. But a change came about. The wisest merchant, whoever he was, decided there were people in town with money to spend, even in the summer time.

"He schemed out the way to get it, which is followed almost universally by Atlanta stores nowadays.

"To make the story short, he offered bargains so attractive that shoppers simply had to come to town for the August sales. The custom has grown until to-day the things which have no season of necessity have been exploited so skillfully that the public believes summer is the season for them.

"That may sound obscure, but I do not intend it to be.

"Take furniture, for instance. There is no more reason why one should buy furniture in January than in August. Nor is there any reason why one should buy furniture in August in preference to January.

"But the summer furniture sale has become so much a fixture in the leading stores that people wait for it. It is good business for all concerned. The merchant is striving toward the ideal condition, which would be sales and collections of an unvarying amount every month in the year—unattainable, but none the less an ideal state of affairs.

"The customer, likewise, is winning. She effects economies by midsummer buying of furniture and blankets, and distributes her expenditures more evenly over the year."

Textile Furs Being Featured for Fall

Wide Variety of Pile Fabrics Shown in Cloaks for the 1913-14 Season.

Many new effects in pile fabrics are being featured for the fall and winter seasons. Matelasse plushes in brocaded effects and high colors, to be used for cloakings and millinery, as well as other brocaded effects, are prominent features in present trading.

There is also a tendency to moires, in Scotch plaids and checks, for dresses, cloaks and trimmings. A wide variety of Oriental and Bulgarian effects in plushes and velvets are also shown for vestings, collars and cuffs.

A new item is the jasper effect, which has a rich woolen appearance and is featured for cloakings.

The fabric is of an indefinite striped appearance, and is shown in black and white and blue and brown mixtures.

Imitation Persian lamb is also popular among the more expensive fabrics, being made to retail at about $7.50 for 50-inch widths.

FRENCH CALICOMAKERS MAKE 20-YEAR COMPACT

Several years ago an attempt was made to organize the French calico printing trade, a cartel being formed which included the principal producers, and an effort was made to fix standard prices. The results were not altogether satisfactory, and the agreement was allowed to expire. The matter was taken up again recently, and it is now reported that a new cartel, comprising seven of the leading French firms whose works are situated in Rouen, Epinal, Bolbec and Valenciennes, has been formed.

A central sales bureau, which will transact the entire selling business of the concerns interested, has been established under the style of the Comptoir de Vente des Tissus Francais Imprimees.

According to the Daily Consular and Trade Report, the agreement is for twenty years.

SMALL TOWN SECURES NATIONAL BANK CHARTER

STOCKTON, CAL., Aug. 23.—Announcement is made that application the first bie rubber factory to be eat Riverbank has been granted.

This is the first time in California that a town of 600 inhabitants has secured a charter for a national bank. The bank is capitalized at $25,000.

TURNING TO FRENCH MODELS.

Fall models for men's lounge suits show complete ignoring of English fashions and tend toward the French for the first time in many years. Cheviots yield to unfinished worsteds, and the colorful textures to the plainer. The popularity of dark greens and browns in "off" shades is evidenced by the earlier selections of tailors, while inconspicuous plaids and gun club checks are also well in demand.

Southern Hosiery Buyers in Market

Winter Goods Reported Scarce and Stringency May Become Acute by Fall.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Southern hosiery buyers are visiting the local market. Although mill agents report cheap goods sold up, some provision is evidently being made for the newcomers. The Southern jobbers have waited this year until the indications of the cotton crop were fairly certain before operating. They are not taking 84-needle bundle goods, as they predict lower prices on those lines. There are said to be fewer orders for extracts booked this year than formerly.

This is not affecting the valume of sales, as extracts are made up only to order, and customary buyers of those lines are simply seeking a different finish. Winter goods are already reported scarce, and, as the duplicating period has not yet begun, the stringency will probably be acute before the end of the fall.

Cotton Goods Buying Seems to Lack Snap

Limited Number of Desirable Spring Dress Fabrics Taken by Purchasers in East.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—While certain cotton good sellers are satisfied with conditions, nearly everywhere is the complaint that the market is without any snap save for a limited number of desirable spring dress fabrics.

A number of buyers are reported to have gone home without purchasing, while others took only sample pieces. Such wide lines were shown that, in some cases, buyers got the impression that there was plenty of goods back of them. This was not the case, but the buyers were frightened off.

Staples are not in demand as they should be at this time, and specialties are holding the lead. Fancies in ratines, crepes and voiles have shown little tendency to lose their popularity.

According to The Textile Manufacturers' Journal, several larger selling agencies have opened their spring lines of dress ginghams, zephyrs, seersuckers, madras, krinkles, cheviots and shirtings.

MEN WANT AMERICAN STYLES IN THEIR CLOTHES

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—During the past few weeks several English clothing manufacturers have had representatives in the local market with their garment samples. While some interest was displayed, it was mostly for obtaining information.

The sales made were principally on overcoats, and were intended only to add a few imported garments to the lines regularly offered. The English salesmen learned that the majority of retailers in the larger cities of the United States prefer American styles.

A local manufacturer said that foreign competitors will have to realize this still more and make their clothing which they intend selling here more on American lines, or else there will be little business developed in this country.

He also said that foreign ready-to-wear garments would not have to be seriously reckoned with by local merchants for some time to come.

LONDON STYLES FAVOR LOOSE ENDS FOR TIES

According to a London report there will be increased activity in the neckwear trade there this fall. The marked style tendency now is not toward color, but toward shape. The loose ended knot is favored, but many four-in-hands are also shown. Various shades of blue and gray constitute the color trend at present.

In London men are wearing either a jacket suit or a frock coat with a small black bow tie. The start with black will probably extend to other colors as the season continues.

It is thought, however, that this vogue will not be generally adopted, as it is entirely out of keeping with the fall ideas advanced by English haberdashers.

Once-overs and Ascots are being revived in a small way.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The United States ranks fourth as purchaser of English goods, with $146,000,000 last year.

The Bethlehem Steel Corporation is seeking bids in England and Ireland to build nine iron ore carriers of 15,000 tons dead-weight capacity.

The Canadian Government, in contract with the United Fruit Company of Nova Scotia, has established a new steamship line between Canada and England, in order to secure more satisfactory access to the English market.

The Chicago and Northwestern, with proceeds of $4,000,000 equipment trust certificates recently sold, will pay for switching engines, 2,000 gondola cars and 2,005 box cars.

WHITCOMB CO. IMPORT MUCH CORNED BEEF

Soaring Prices of Meats Bringing South American Product to the United States

Meat is going up, and up, with no end in sight.

This has led to a curious state of affairs. Corned beef, peculiarly a product of the United States, now is being imported from South America in great quantities, and Libby, McNeill & Libby, the Chicago packers, advise their representatives in Atlanta, H. H. Whitcomb & Burke Company, that nothing but the South American product now is to be had.

The quality is declared to be excellent. The steers of the Argentine prairies are fully equal in quality to those of our own Western ranges, and the only difference the consumer can detect is that instead of saying "U. S. Inspected and Passed," the labels bear the stamps, "Inspected under the Food and Drug Act of June 30, 1906"—in other words, the customs service now does the inspecting instead of the Bureau of Animal Industry.

Never before, so far as anyone remembers, has it been profitable to import tinned meats. This could take place only under exceptional conditions such as the present, when corned beef in 14-pound containers is quoted to retailers at $37 per dozen or thereabouts, while two years ago it was quoted at about $21.

Libby, McNeill & Libby were among the first to foresee the inevitable shortage of American meats and to establish a packing house on the other side of the equator. They now are reaping the benefit.

While it is believed that corned beef never before has been imported direct from South America, last year the same packers, after shipping large quantities of the product to Europe, reimported it at a profit because of a sudden bulge in prices in the United States.

Vienna sausage and potted ham, the Whitcomb company advises, have advanced 5 per cent in the past ten days, and pork sausage, pure, has advanced 28 per cent in three weeks.

Temporarily, the live stock market is depressed by the heavy shipments from the West, East and South, due to the great damage to the corn crop in the West and to the hay crop in the East. The shipments from the South were attracted by the high prices buyers paid when they made a "raid" on Southern cattle a month or so ago, which attracted the attention of the United States Government.

The Government warned the farmers of Georgia and Florida to keep their cattle, not deplete their herds, and to fatten them for market at home instead of selling them lean for fattening in the West and North.

NEW KIND OF PIPE LINE.

One of the most remarkable mechanical devices ever used in connection with the manufacture of paper is being installed at Orange, Texas. This is a "blower," more than a mile long, through which the waste yellow pine timber from a local lumber mill will be sent to a paper mill. The slabs as they come from the mill will be ground into small particles and forced by means of compressed air through the long pipe to the paper manufacturing plant. This paper mill is said to be the only plant in the world that makes paper from yellow pine pulp. It has a daily output of thirty-three tons of wrapping paper.

DEMAND FOR RAMIES TO IMPROVE IN THE SPRING

The fall linen season is shaping up well. The demand for ratines has hurt ramie linens, but it is pointed out that the former soil more easily and do not hold their shape as well as ramie suitings, and that a better demand for ramies is looked for next spring. Light blues, pinks and browns will lead the color demand for ramie goods.

ENGLISH TRADE GROWS.

The July statement of English Board of Trade shows increases of $17,436,500 in imports and $25,880,000 in exports. Imports of foodstuffs increased $8,875,000, and raw material about $5,000,000.

RUBBER FACTORY FOR BRAZIL.

Within a year the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company wil have in operation in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, first big rubber factory to be established on the South American continent, to cost $1,300,000.

Women's Footwear Seen in Many Colors

Leather and Cloth Combinations Shown—Men's Shoes Made Along English Lasts.

Imported models on which fall and winter styles for women's evening slippers are based are leather and cloth color combinations, among which red, green, gray, white and champagne are to be featured in strap and colonial effects.

There is a tendency to drop cut steel buckles, and those of jet will be much used. Another popular buckle will be of oxidized silver, in colonial design, with a satin filler to match the panel.

Panel effects are featured in the smartest slippers. A model well thought of is of patent leather, has a modified duck bill, too, and a jet buckle filled with satin matching the narrow panel extending from the buckle to the side seam. The heel is full Louis-Cuban. Featured suede slippers are of taupe, also with color combinations.

Women's street shoes shown have the long French vamp and square throat combined with cloth top color combinations. They are made with a plain toe, are fitted with the full Louis-Cuban heel and are of the button variety.

Men's shoes for fall and winter are made along the straight, laced, English last, and the color tendency is toward dark tan and gunmetal. Low, flat heels are shown almost exclusively. The blucher style is taboo.

Arizona Grows Fine Egyptian Cotton

Salt River Valley Experiments Reach Stage Where Gin and Oil Mill Are Needed.

Excellent results are being obtained in the growing of long staple Egyptian cotton in the Salt River Valley of Arizona. Under the direction of Mr. E. W. Hudson, of the Department of Agriculture, the industry has come to include over 4,000 acres in planted cotton, yielding in most cases a net profit of $100 an acre.

While the severe drouth throughout the entire West has made inroads on every other crop, the Arizona cotton has prospered to such a degree that a ginning plant and an oil mill to make use of the cotton seed are to be established by the time the crop is ready.

The subcommittee of the American commission which has been making a study of cotton growing and cotton marketing in Egypt, shows that not only can American methods applied to the raising of Egyptian cotton reduce the cost approximately 50 per cent, but that our progressive farmers, although handicapeed by the quality of our soil as compared with that of the Nile Delta, can bring our long staple cotton yield per acre up to that of Egypt's.

Long staple cotton brings from 21 to 25 cents a pound on the spot.

Already the irrigation system employed in the Delta lands has been employed in Arizona. The rest must be worked up by American intelligence and American industry, for Egypt with her antiquated methods of cultivation offers little further guidance.

FIRST BALE BRINGS 12 CTS. PER POUND IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Before the entrance to the Cotton Exchange the first bale of upland cotton grown in Chatham County was auctioned. The bale brought 12 cents a pound, 3 cents better than current values. The first bale was grown by W. M. Kennedy and ginned by Floyd & So. The staple graded good middling.

FANCY SHOE BUCKLES.

The wearing of elaborate slipper buckles was particularly noticeable during the Grand Semaine racing week, as the prevailing style of short skirts allows the entire shoe to be seen. The custom is now quite the craze, and many society people are adopting special buckle designs to be worn with various costumes. They are appearing daily with a different buckle to harmonize with each different gown.

MEN'S COLLARS ARE INVENTION OF A HOUSEWIFE

Ingenious Woman Contrived Familiar Article to Lessen Amount of Washing in Home.

The detachable collar now worn by men the world round was the invention of a thrifty housewife 83 years ago. It sprang from sheer necessity, and yet it was so simple an article of wearing apparel that its first maker never looked upon her production as an invention, and it is doubtful if the other early manufacturers thought of patenting the idea.

During the succeeding years, in which the manufacture of collars and their allied products has become a great industry in and around Troy, N. Y., the incident of the invention of the collar had almost been lost until recently brought to light by the unearthing of a family tradition.

It is now certain that Mrs. Hannah Lord Montague was the maker of the first detachable linen collar. Mr. Montague was engaged in the manufacture of fine shoes for women. He was a large man, very particular in matters of dress, and in those days before the invention of the sewing machine and before great public laundries were established, the making, washing and ironing of the shirts formed quite an item in the work of the household.

Mrs. Montague was resourceful, and in endeavoring to lighten her household duties she hit upon the idea of a detached collar, which could be fastened to a neckband of her husband's shirt and washed and ironed separately. Before this time, when the collar was soiled, the whole shirt had to be washed, but by this device two or three collars might be used to one shirt. Acting upon the idea which had come to her, Mrs. Montague went to the patch bag, selected a strip of white linen, which she cut and shaped to fit the neckband of her husband's shirt, sewed it, turned it inside out, and attached a narrow string of braid at either end to tie about the neck. This was the original string collar.

Thus through the resourcefulness of a woman the modern detachable collar was evolved.

A FREE TRIP

To Atlanta is available to the merchant who buys an adequate bill from the members of the Merchants' Association.

Write to

H. T. Moore
SECRETARY.
Rhodes Building,
Atlanta.

Write for our latest Catalogue. The leading merchants are adding the 5c and 10c departments. Why not one for your town?

McCLURE 10c CO., 47-49 S. Broad St.
Give Your "DIMES" a Chance

The Hirshberg Company
STATIONERY — NOVELTIES
DRUGGISTS' SUNDRIES — BLANK BOOKS
Glendale Line
12-15-17 NELSON STREET
ATLANTA

DIXIE PICKLE AND PRESERVING CO.
Manufacturers of
Pure Apple and Distilled Vinegar, Catsup, Pickles, Mustard, Pepper Sauce, Sauer Kraut, Jelly, Etc.
CANNED GOODS
364 to 378 Marietta Street, Atlanta, Ga.

HATS
Caps, Gloves, Umbrellas
QUALITY and VALUES
BROWN, PERRYMAN & GREENE CO.
ATLANTA

VOLLMER MANUFACTURING COMPANY
Moore Building
ATLANTA, GEORGIA
MAKERS OF FINE JEWELRY
Special Designs in Platinum
Engravers — Diamond Setters — Watchmakers
Specialists in Jewelry Repairing

U. S. CERTAIN CAMINETTI WILL SHARE DIGGS' FATE

Government Bends Every Effort to Speed Trial of Federal Immigration Commissioner's Son on the Charge of "White Slavery."

Former California State Architect, Facing Four to Twenty Years in Prison, Plans Appeal—Companion to Follow Suit if Convicted.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—Supremely confident after the conviction of Maury I. Diggs, former State architect, the United States authorities, prosecuting the famous "white slave" cases, which at one time threatened to disrupt President Wilson's Cabinet, are using every energy to speed the trial and obtain a similar verdict against Drew Caminetti, who was Diggs' companion in the sensational flight to Reno with Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris.

Diggs will be sentenced September 2. Under the verdict of the jury, the Judge can fix the penalty at from four to twenty years, and owing to the fact that virtually the same evidence that was introduced against Diggs will be introduced against Caminetti, leads the Government to believe that conviction is certain.

Diggs' attorneys have already announced they will carry the case to the highest court in the land. Should Caminetti be convicted, he, too, doubtless would appeal.

Diggs Gives $20,000 Bail.

Bail in the sum of $20,000 was readily furnished by Diggs' relatives when the amount was fixed by the court and was accepted by the United States Commissioner.

The case was one of the most spectacular ever tried in California. Diggs is a former State architect. Caminetti is a son of the United States Commissioner of Immigration. Both men are married and have families. Both are of high social standing in Sacramento.

Both men are considerably older that the girls with whom they eloped. The undisputed evidence in the case was that the intimate relations between Diggs and Miss Warrington and Caminetti and Miss Norris had become notorious in Sacramento. Families of both the young men were preparing to start criminal action against them to break these relations.

Then they and the girls disappeared. They were traced to Reno, where the two couples were living as men and wives in a rented bungalow. The men were charged with violations of the Mann anti-white slave act.

Blames Girls for Elopement.

Both Miss Warrington and Miss Norris charged that the men had threatened, cajoled and coerced them into making the trip to Reno. They declared that they had promised to obtain divorces from their wives in order to wed them.

Diggs, in his defense, pleaded that the girls were the persons responsible for the flight, that they had induced them to fly to Reno.

It was this attitude of hiding behind a woman's skirt that caused the most severe condemnation of Diggs. Great stress was laid on it by Theodore Roche, attorney for the Government, in his final appeal to the jury for conviction.

"This defendant," said Roche, "did not deny on the stand the truth of the essential facts we have shown. And then he comes before you and asks acquittal.

"Hides Behind Wife's Skirts."

"The defendant in a criminal case usually bases defense on the presumption of innocence, but this defendant relies on his own depravity. He comes into court covered with his own shame and hides behind the skirts of his wife and child.

"When these girls went to Reno their departure meant social ostracizement. Marsha Warrington went because she believed and trusted this man. She didn't desire money, dresses or presents. Her parents gave her these. But this man had promised her marriage, as Caminetti had promised Lola Norris.

"Those promises were never intended to be kept. What was intended was to abandon the girls in Reno. They never could have returned to Sacramento—and you know what that meant. But the alluring promise of marriage had been held out to them."

Scores Conduct in Home.

Attorney Roche was particularly severe with Diggs for the misconduct in his own home to which he testified yesterday. He had not been content, said Roche, with making an assignation house out of his office, but he was similarly to degrade the privacy of a home he shared with a virtuous and loving wife.

In seeking to establish that the trip was not premeditated and that the two girls had not been induced to take it by threats of scandal on one hand and promises of marriage on the other, Diggs willingly testified to his own misconduct and the embarrassments, domestic and business, into which it had led him.

His counsel in summing up the evidence did not palliate these acts.

"Paint this defendant as you will—a monster if you please," argued Robert Devlin, his senior counsel, "but tell me what motive he would have had in going out of the State for the purpose of accomplishing those things already accomplished.

"Counsel may characterize him as they please, and I may not differ with them. They say his act was shameless, and I may feel the same way about it, but it isn't white slavery."

This was the whole argumentative substance of the defense. There remained the rhetorical and the emotional appeals and, of course, they were not neglected. The girls were blamed for tempting the men. They were called willing accomplices in what evil had been done, and the wisdom of trusting a woman scorned when she bears witness against the lover who has discharged her was called into question.

Southern Drawl an Opera Asset

Alabama Singer Lauds Accent

Sees Fame for Dixie Song Birds

Miss Neida Humphrey.

Miss Neida Humphrey, of Huntsville, Blames Laziness for Dearth of Divas.

HUNTSVILLE, ALA., Aug. 23.—The soft, musical voice of Southern women, which poets have raved about, others have envied and the comic papers have made subject of satire, has a value in dollars, and it has an even greater value in the world of art.

So thinks Miss Neida Humphrey, of Huntsville, who has just returned home after a three-year course of voice culture under Caruso in New York.

Miss Humphrey, realizing the supreme demand for American prima donnas on the operatic stage, not only in this country, but in every capital in Europe, thinks there is a world of opportunity for the young women of her own section in this field.

"The Southern woman's voice," says Miss Humphrey, "possesses more natural musical qualities than the voices of any other women in the world. With proper cultivation that quality should make them the greatest opera stars. The world has long known of this quality, but the Southern women of talent have just refused to grasp their opportunities.

Blames Indolence in Part.

"And I guess the laziness so generally attributed to our people may have a great deal to do with it. Singing, I mean serious singing, is the hardest sort of work.

"There is hardly a girl of social position in the Southland who has not a smattering of musical education. The trouble is it's only a smattering. When they reached the point where singing meant real work they retired gracefully to other fields.

"But I believe that the time is not far off when the Southern girl of talent will realize the life she is overlooking and then I am certain that there will be girls of Dixie whose names will be just as famous as those of Farrar, Suzanne Adams and Louise Homer, all American born.

Miss Humphrey is very young and she is very, very pretty, but that is not all. She has a voice of remarkable power and dramatic quality, but withal she holds in it that soft sweetness that declares her home as plainly as it would be declared were she to walk on the stage waving the Stars and Bars.

Has Charmed the President.

She has already done things in music and she intends to do more. In New York she has sung before the most critical audiences in concert and has won their high approbation. It was she who charmed President Wilson and a distinguished gathering in New York recently at a concert.

In Chattanooga last May, during the reunion of the Confederate Veterans, she sang before the old soldiers and was given an ovation.

Miss Humphrey intends to return to New York in the fall to complete her studies. She has already been assured of an operatic engagement and Huntsville believes that it will soon boast an operatic celebrity.

Dweller in Desert Sees First Pine Tree

Full Grown Woman Is Mystified by Foliage—Also Takes Mountain Snow Bath.

CHICO, CAL., Aug. 23.—Miss Ilene Locey, of Visalia, cousin of Frank M. Moore, of this city, a grown woman, saw her first pine tree when she went with the Moores for an auto trip to the mountains.

She has resided long in the desert southland, and was not only pleased but mystified at the foliage and the fact that she could reach the snow-bound regions of the Sierra Nevadas inside of an hour's time.

The party left here especially to give Miss Locey an idea of the diversified climate of the Sacramento Valley and a snow bath in the higher altitude.

Tents Only Shelter For Toledo Families

City Is Growing So Rapidly That Builders Can Not Construct Houses Demanded.

TOLEDO, Aug. 23.—Because the city has not enough houses to rent and builders are not able to construct houses as rapidly as they are desired tents are being used as homes in Toledo.

Two tent colonies have been established in the city. In both districts occupants of the tents are owners of lots on which the temporary homes have been erected. The lots have been purchased as home sites and tents are serving as temporary homes.

The tent homes consist of living rooms, dining rooms and kitchens. Each has a flower and vegetable garden and one is equipped with a chicken park, a stable and outbuildings. Living rooms are convertible into bedrooms, and hammocks, stretched in the open, are used day and night.

SOUTH IS PAYING HEAVY TOLL FOR CANAL BENEFITS

Colonel Gailliard, of South Carolina, Breaks Down Under Tremendous Task.

More than any other section of the country, the South is expected to realize in prosperity and development by the opening of the Panama Canal. But the South is to pay its toll and pay for it dearly.

Just when the canal was an assured fact, Senator John T. Morgan, of Alabama, father of the Isthmian Waterway idea, died as a result of his years of ceaseless labor impressing the necessity of rthe canal on Congress.

Nok Lieutenant Colonel David Du Bois Gailliard, of South Carolina, the army engineer who dug the Culebra Cut, has had to abandon the scene of his triumph and return to the United States to give his nervous system shattered by his work, a rest which it has needed for months.

And that is not all. From the zone the advices come that Colonel William L. Sibert, of Alabama, the army engineer in charge of the work on the great Gatun Dam, is on the point of a breakdown and it is extremely doubtful if he will be strong enough to stay in the zone to see his work completed.

Careers of Two Similar.

The careers of Colonel Sibert and Colonel Gailliard have been remarkably similar. Gailliard was born in South Carolina; Sibert, in Alabama. They entered West Point the same year and both graduated in 1884 among the first five men in their class.

After their graduation, both were sent to Willets Point and in 1908, when the canal work was put in the hands of the army engineers, Colonel Goethals immediately picked the two Southerners as his chief aides. Sibert was put in charge of the work on the Atlantic side, which included the building of the Gatun Dam, while Gaillard was in charge of the work in the interior of the zone.

That Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard had suffered a nervous breakdown was known only to a few of his intimate friends in the army. A few weeks ago when his condition became serious the matter was brought to the attention of General Bixby, the chief engineer in Washington, and by General Bixby called to the attention of Secretary of War Garrison, who immediately granted the stricken engineer a long leave of absence.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles F. Mason, Medical Corps, U. S. A., the director of the Ancon Hospital, in the Canal Zone; Mrs. Gaillard and Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard's young son came with him and went with him to Baltimore, where he will enter the John Hopkins Hospital. There he will be under the care of some of the most eminent specialists in nervous disorders in this country.

Leave Did Not Aid Him.

Colonel Gaillard was in New York less than two months ago after a six weeks' leave of absence that he had taken in the hope that the rest would benefit his health to the extent that he would be able to remain in the Canal Zone. He sailed from New York on June 27 last, again to take charge of the work in the Central Division.

Those who talked with him at that time remember that he expressed a desire to get away from the Isthmus as soon as his work was finished, but, he added, with a touch of sadness in his soft Southern voice, "When I do leave it will be with deep and sincere regret."

Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard is the first of the famous army engineers employed in the construction o. the Panama Canal to be stricken as a result of his work. A few weeks ago Colonel William M. Black, Corps of Engineers, the chief of that branch of the service in this part of the United States, the officer who was head of the engineering board which solved the problem of raising the old battleship Maine, was in Panama and was Gaillard's guest.

Close Friends for Years.

The two officers have been intimate friends for years. During his stay at Empire, the headquarters of Colonel Gaillard, Colonel Black noted and realized that the builder of Culebra Cut needed a long and complete rest.

"Gaillard," said Colonel Black last night, "is one of the most wonderful organizers the army has developed. His work in the Canal Zone has been little short of marvelous. He laid out his plans in such a way that he got the maximum out of everything, especially in the handling of the railroad part of the work. He was also able within a few months after he took charge at Empire to double the work accomplished in a specified time. Some of the things that he did experienced railroad men had said were practically impossible."

Woman Given Job Of Cleaning Up State

Success in Making Tacoma a Spotless Town Causes Promotion in Service.

TACOMA, Aug. 23.—Because of her successful efforts to transform Tacoma into a "Spotless Town," Miss Arizona B. Wimple, food and market inspector, is to be rewarded with a bigger job—the cleaning up of the State of Washington.

This was the advice received here today from the Governor's office in Olympia, where it is said Miss Wimple is to be appointed State bakery and sanitary inspector.

Her methods in cleaning up Tacoma were simple and direct and included publicity as an aid in bringing about the desired reforms.

Frequent inspections of bakeries and other food dispensing establishments were made and the score announced in the newspapers.

Miss Wimple, who is young and pretty, will receive $4,000 a year from the State.

She is a graduate of the University of Michigan.

CANDLES BURNING AT WAKE SET HOUSE AFIRE

CALGARY, ALBERTA, Aug. 23.—A fire which started from candles set about a coffin at a wake, at the house of J. Selar, here burned the hair and eyebrows off the body of an aged woman. Portions of the face were charred. Firemen extinguished the blaze.

WATCHING MAN WHO STOLE AND HID A FORTUNE

Detectives Shadowing Mail Thief Believed to Have Cached $40,000 After Robbery.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 23.—Charles Savage, a negro mail robber, released from the penitentiary in Leavenworth, is being shadowed by three detectives. He will be kept under watch constantly because somewhere is hidden $40,000 of the $50,000 in currency he stole five years ago from a registered mail pouch, and nobody except Savage knows where it is.

When Savage was released he was met at the door by his mother and a young woman to whom he was engaged before he was sent to prison. They came at once to Kansas City to see an uncle, who is dying.

"They needn't watch me," he said. "If they think I'm going to dig up $40,000 they're mistaken. I wish I knew where there was $40,000 buried."

"Isn't it queer that $2,000 in $20 gold certificates of the same series as stolen from the mail sack were found blowing around in the wind near your mother's home in South Leavenworth this spring?" Savage was asked.

"Yes, that's queer. I don't understand," he answered. "I read about that, and I figured it out that some person who lived in South Leavenworth had stolen that mail sack and hidden the money there, and the rain had washed away the dirt where it was buried, and the wind got at it and blew it away."

Employees' Pension Measure Approved

Pennsylvania Cities Are Permitted to Establish Fund for Faithful Municipal Workers.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—Under the provisions of an act passed by the Legislature, which Governor Tener has approved, this city is given authority to establish a municipal pension fund for employees. The act applies to all city employees who have given twenty years of service to the city.

The act provides that in the event of the creating of the fund every employee will be compelled to pay into the fund 1 per cent of his yearly salary.

The pension to be allowed the beneficiary will be equal to one-half of the average yearly salary received by him during the last two years before his retirement.

College Professor Seeks Laborer's Pay

Unable to Make Both Ends Meet, Teacher Resigns Chair in University.

BERKELEY, CAL., Aug. 23.—Unable to make both ends meet on a salary of $900 paid him by the University of California, Paul Boehncke, an instructor in the German department, has withdrawn from the faculty and is seeking a position in which he can support himself and family of two children.

During the last few summers Boehncke has managed to augment his meager salary by working as a plasterer at from $5 to $7 a day, or nearly twice the amount he was paid by the university.

Apache War in '80's Is Cause of Divorce

Husband Deserted Thirty Years Ago by Wife Who Didn't Like Wild West.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Geronimo and his wild hordes of Apaches, who terrorized New Mexico in the eighties, were the direct cause of a divorce suit which Allen L. Eaton begun yesterday in the Superior Court against Zuma E. Eaton.

The Eatons were married in Silver City, N. Mex., in 1886, when the Apache uprising was on. Mrs. Eaton, who hailed from Pittsburg, did not enjoy the wild Western life her married life entailed, and she deserted her husband.

Common Laborer Strikes Big Gold Vein

Ore Will Run $60,000 to Ton and Mine Is Largest in Southern Oregon.

MEDFORD, OREG., Aug. 23.—What is reported as the biggest gold strike made in Southern Oregon has been been reported by Elmer Higginbotham on the mine owned by him and M. G. Womack on Kane's Creek. The ore will run $60,000 to the ton, according to assays of samples made here.

Higginbotham had been a common laborer for many years until Womack offered to "grub-stake" him on a prospecting trip up Kane's Creek.

BERI BERI CAUSED BY RICE DIET, SAYS EXPERT

Special Cable to The American.

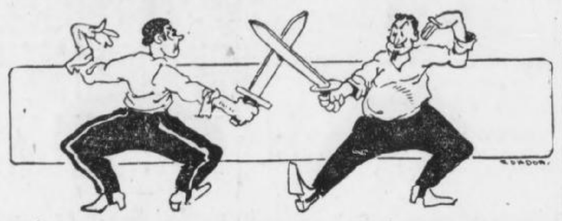
BERLIN, Aug. 23.—The Berlin Medical Association reports that the well-known investigator of beri beri, Dr. Max Moszkowski, finds, after a remarkable experiment, that the disease is caused by the use of rice.

Dr. Moszkowski for 138 days subsisted almost entirely upon rice. All the symptoms of beri beri manifested themselves.

At the close of the experiment an injection of serum containing an extract of rice resulted in a complete recovery.

Hunnicutt Won in First Round

Beat Bravo With Wooden Sword



How Atlanta's Broadsword Champion Worsted French Fencing Master.

Time was when the prize fight was not au fait, when in the best families, and even in the second best, and maybe in the third, they frowned down upon the pugilistic art as brutal and degenerate. Then it was that the youn bloods turned to cockfighting and fencing for the gladiatorial features of their lives, and were satisfied.

And that time was not so very long ago. Calvin W. Hunnicutt, who is Atlanta's oldest citizen, revived them in memory yesterday, when he fell to the young bloods turned to cockfighting between Charley White and Frank Whitney, with the remark that things were not like this of yore.

Of course, he had a dueling story of his own to tell, and he told it—of how he fought an arrogant French fencing master in a combat with wooden swords, and how all Atlanta looked on and cheered him as its champion.

It occurred before the war, when all good things, it seems, occurred. It occurred just at the beginning of the war, and had its effect in keeping Mr. Hunnicutt out of that conflict.

"There had been talk of war, war, war pretty generally," he said. The trouble clouds were thick and black, and we organized here in Atlanta a cavalry troop that we called the Fulton Dragoons. Captain Wilson was our officer, I was first lieutenant, and C. B. Whaley, my best friend, was first sergeant.

"All went well at first, and things were pleasant. But after a while politics began to leak in, as inevitably it will with all volunteer military bodies. Everybody knows everybody else so well, you see that very naturally jealousy comes in. Anyhow, when the time came for the election of a captain for a new term, Whaley and I, backing Wilson, lost out, because the other man promised horses to all members of the troop. Then dissatisfaction grew and the organization loosened.

"The new captain and his great ally, Second Lieutenant Williams, were full of ideas as to how to run a military organization, and began to put these ideas into play. That made more dissatisfaction for no volunteer soldier likes to be driven by men who were their friends and associates.

"One of their ideas was the importation of a fencing teacher to instruct the men in broadsword use. Now Whaley and I had practiced considerably with the broadsword, and were rather expert in its use, but we said nothing of it to the captain and his friends.

"Well, the fencing master came, a Frenchman from Mobile. He was a flourishing, affected sort of fellow, and considerable of a boaster. Not long after he was here, he broke off teaching and began to talk about his own great skill and to show it off.

"One day he challenged all of us.

" 'Nobody here can touch me with his sword,' he announced. 'I don't fear to let any of you try.' And he flourished his sword.

"Whaley and I decided to take him on, and I went to him. He laughed at me. But I insisted, and the date was set for our combat. That there should be no bloodshed—because we were going to do some furious fencing, it seemed—I put a negro of mine to work making two wooden swords, or sticks. These were to be our weapons.

"Somehow the tidings that there was to be a fight got abroad. Atlanta was not as large as it is now, but it was a right smart town even then, and when the day for the fight came, everybody turned out.

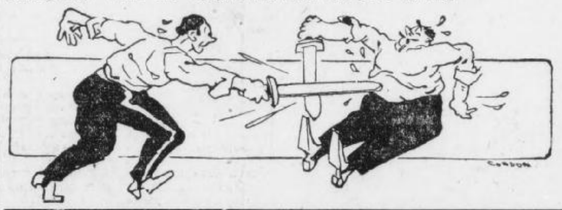
"We had planned to have the duel in a theater, owned in the days of old Atlanta by a man named Williams. The place was packed, and I began to be a little nervous over the public nature of the affair.

"We squared off, and the crowd settled back in the seats for a long and interesting fight. But it wasn't for long. The Frenchman came at me with a flourish, and I had a flourish to match his. Thence I made a thrust at him, the thrust that we know technically as the point tierce. It went through his guard, and to his body. If we had been fighting with real swords, my opponent would have been run through.

"All Atlanta laughed. The Frenchman had pretty generally advertised his ability to fight, and everybody was there. However, there were one or two persons who didn't like the way the fight came out, particularly the new captain of the dragoons and his ally. After the fight they began working to get me to resign. The duel, they claimed everywhere, might have an effect in breaking up discipline. And so, with their dissatisfaction showing plain, I resigned.

"The Frenchman we didn't see after the half minute duel. If the dragoons learned broadsword fencing, they learned it from somebody else.

"It's a pity the art of fencing does not survive in the popular fancy. It is clean, beneficial and interesting. But this prize fighting——"



LOOKS FOR BODY OF FATHER LOST IN ICE 43 YEARS

Miss Edith Randall, of Boston, Expects to Find Corpse on Glacier at Foot Mt. Blanc.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Miss Edith Randall, of this city, has gone to Chamonix, Switzerland, one one of the strangest errands known. She hopes to find in the glacier there the body of her father, who lost his life climbing on Mont Blanc forty-three years ago. Ten others were lost with him in a snowstorm near the summit. All told, two Americans, one Scotchman and eight guides and porters died.

Five of the bodies were recovered. It is expected by guides that the six others will be delivered up by the glacier this year.

Scientists are interested as it may supply evidence to prove their theories on the speed of the annual march of glaciers toward the valleys.

Miss Randall's father, John Randolph, a Boston banker, was fifty-four when he lost his life in 1870.

Last year Miss Randall came to Chamonix, as the ice axe and several small articles relonging to Mr. Randall had been found by guides at the foot of the Glacier des Bossons.

Many Americans and English Alpinists, as well as guides, joined in the search for the body, but without result. All hope for better luck this summer.

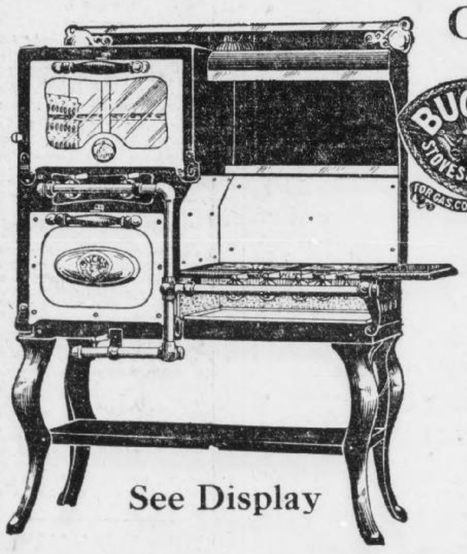
"Back on the Job"

again and very quickly, too, if you will only let Hostetter's Stomach Bitters help the digestion to become normal, keep the liver active and the bowels free from constipation. These are absolutely necessary in order to maintain health. Try it to-day but be sure it's

HOSTETTER'S Stomach Bitters

25% DISCOUNT

On All BUCK'S Gas Stoves and Ranges



See Display

Buck's—the most conveniently arranged, the most sanitary, and certainly the most economical gas user made—comes in for a tremendous discount this week.

They are here—anything from the small stove to the most elaborate range—and all are carrying the same big discount. Discard your old, worn, smoking, fuel-consuming cooking machine to-morrow, and let us replace it with one of these modern stoves or ranges.

The savings of your fuel bill will soon pay for any BUCK'S you may select.

Connections Free--$1 a Week Buys Your Choice

That's fair enough, isn't it? We will actually put it in your kitchen—ready to turn on the gas—and you can pay the bill at one dollar per week. Come in to-morrow and take your choice. See our big Mitchell street window display.

Rhodes-Wood FURNITURE COMPANY

COMPLETE HOUSEFURNISHERS

103-5-7-9-11 Whitehall Street, Corner Mitchell

EXTRA

HEARST'S SUNDAY AMERICAN

EXTRA

VOL. I. NO. 21. Copyright, 1913, by The Georgian Company. ★★★ ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY, AUGUST 24, 1913. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

BOLL WEEVIL COSTS SOUTH BILLION; ZONE CURE URGED

Senator Smith of South Carolina Secures Government Expert's Figures on Total Estimated Ravages During Last 17 Years.

Shows How $107,539,127 Yearly Cost of Proposed Remedy Could Be Counteracted by Diversified Crops and United States Aid.

(The zone strip to which Senator Smith refers as a remedy for the boll weevil, as proposed, would begin in Tennessee and run down through Alabama and part of Florida.)

By ELLISON D. SMITH.
(United States Senator From South Carolina.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—A few weeks ago I asked some of the officials in the Department of Agriculture to give me an estimate of the losses the farmers of the South have suffered as the result of the boll weevil. The figures furnished me are startling. From the report I make the following extract:

"The only adequate way of arriving at the losses due to the boll weevil is by studying the average production per acre by States, comparing years of non-infestation with years of infestation. It is quite noticeable that every State by the third year of infestation has shown a decided reduction in average yield per acre.

"This average production is used in connection with the acreage planted to obtain an estimate in money value of the loss from the boll weevil to the producers. This is only the primary loss and is turned over and over again as it reacts upon ginners, oil mill men, merchants, bankers, property values, manufacturers of the textile and the final consumers.

"The total loss to producers obtained by this method from 1895 through 1912 is $841,521,135, or an average during the 18 years of $46,751,174 per annum, with the loss now reaching over $100,000,000 per annum.

These Only Obvious Losses.

"Only the more obvious losses from the ravages of this pest can even be estimated. These are the losses in productivity suffered by the producers and the losses in business of the first processes in manufacture.

"Figures are presented to show the losses to the planter, the ginner and the oil mills as follows, for the period from 1895 to 1912:

Loss to the planters	$841,521,135
Loss to the ginners	17,446,295
Loss to the oil mills	72,270,421
Total	$931,237,852

"To these must be added losses in business suffered by cotton buyers and brokers, merchants, bankers and cotton mills, the loss in property values, the ultimate effects upon the consumer."

In other words, officials of the Department of Agriculture estimate that the loss to the South from the boll weevil between 1895 and 1912 has been considerably more than $1,000,000,000. This is staggering.

The Government has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars to stamp out the boll weevil, but without avail. The Government experts, entomologists, farm demonstration agents and others have done splendid work in teaching the farmers better methods of cultivation, rotation of crops, etc., but so far as checkmating the boll weevil is concerned they themselves admit that their work has been a failure.

Moves Eastward Steadily.

The weevil continues its march eastward at a steady pace each year, and in no section where it has made its appearance has any method been discovered of minimizing the damage done by it.

Unless something is done it will not be very long until the entire cotton area of the South is infested.

Of course, some cotton can be grown in the area infested by the boll weevil, but the yield per acre and per farm is greatly reduced, while the cost of production is greatly increased. I am told by a member of Congress who owns a large plantation in an infested section that it costs just about twice as much to produce a bale of cotton now as it cost before the boll weevil came. Many others have given me testimony to the same effect.

When one undertakes to estimate the loss to the South during recent years because of this little insect, and then tries to estimate the probable loss in the future, the result must be appalling.

I have been deeply interested in the boll weevil for a number of years. I have watched its spread from the time it made its first appearance in

Continued on Page 6, Column 4.

New Cancer Cure Arouses Germany

Kaiser's Subjects Have Cornered Supply of Mesothorium, Found in U. S. and Brazil.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Mesothorium, the new cure for cancer, is causing great excitement in Germany, according to Dr. F. D. Donoughe, of Boston, who has just returned from the Cancer Congress at Brussels and the Medical Congress in London. German towns have subscribed large sums for the purchase of mesothorium, which is found in Colorado, the Carolinas and Brazil.

A rayless product of therum, it becomes active through transformation into radio-therum. The price, formerly one-sixth that of radium, recently has become higher. Hungary and Germany have purchased the supply of mesothorium available until 1915. It is said to be a dependable cure for certain forms of cancer.

Sir Herbert Tree's Cast Stirs British Ire

Americans in 'Joseph and His Brethren' Win Noted Playwright's Praise.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Antagonism has been aroused in London theatrical circles because Americans are to play the principal roles in Sir Herbert Tree's production of "Joseph and His Brethren."

Sir Herbert said:

"The Americans are wonderful in whatever they attempt to do. I have the greatest faith in their powers, and, without wishing to enter on a comparison between American and English methods, I must say I think Maxine Elliott will be a peerless Zeulika, and George Relph a most romantic Joseph."

Caruso Sadly Says: 'My Star Is Dimming'

Tenor Thinks Public Soon Will Desert Him for Young and Brilliant Star.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, Aug. 23.—Caruso, who is taking the cure with his eldest son at Monte Catini, is in a philosophical mood. To a newspaper man he said:

"It is about time the public ceased to take an interest in me. There are plenty of young stars rising who soon will shine with dazzling brilliancy in the firmament of art. Mine is dimming; don't you think so?"

Then he sadly shook his head and walked slowly away.

HEARTHSTONE 200 YEARS OLD FOUND IN MINNESOTA

ST. PAUL, MINN., Aug. 23.—The hearthstone used by early French voyagers who made their headquarters in the stone house at Taylors Falls, in Interstate Park, was found by workmen excavating in the foundations for relics. The house is thought to have been built 200 years ago.

NEGRO VILLAGE DESTROYED BY MOB OF WHITES

Buildings Are Blown Up by Heavy Dynamite Charge and Then Torch Is Applied.

NO CASUALTIES REPORTED

Attack of Merchant on Young Man Cause of Outbreak—Black Makes Escape.

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—Greenough, a negro village just over the line in Mitchell County, has been partially destroyed by a mob of white men. No deaths have been reported.

It appears that John Davis and his brother, young white men, had advanced some money to Bradley Brothers, negro proprietors of the leading store of Greenough. The negroes failed to return the money, and when the white men went to collect, a difficulty arose, in which one of the negroes struck John Davis with a scantling, knocking him unconscious. The Davis boys escaped to their home and reported the difficulty and the action of the negroes. At night a mob of white men assembled and marched on the village, armed with dynamite and such firearms as could be procured.

When the village was reached, it was found the Bradleys had escaped. A charge of dynamite was exploded under the store and it was completely demolished, together with the stock of goods. Other stores were fired and many shots emptied into negro houses. The fire was returned by the blacks for a short time, but without effect.

The Bradleys have not been seen since the outbreak, and further trouble is not expected by the whites.

LEO M. FRANK as he appeared in court yesterday. The defendant was calm under the terrific denunciation of the prosecutor and watched Mr. Dorsey intently through the many hours that the Solicitor consumed in declaring the defendant one of the greatest of criminals. He seemed scarcely more moved than the spectators.

DORSEY DEMANDS DEATH PENALTY FOR FRANK IN THRILLING CLOSING PLEA

Solicitor's Scathing Address Halted by Adjournment---Had Spoken for More Than Six Hours---Cheered by Big Crowd Outside the Courthouse.

PRISONER CALM, WIFE SOBS AS STATE CHARGES MURDER

Slain Girl's Mother Breaks Down, but Defendant Faces Spectators With Hint of Smile---Case May Go to the Jury by Monday Noon.

Insisting upon the application of the Mosaic law of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey demanded the life of Leo M. Frank yesterday in expiation of the murder of Mary Phagan on April 26.

Nothing less than the death penalty would satisfy justice, declared the Solicitor in one of the most bitter and impassioned addresses a Georgia courtroom audience ever has heard.

It was the closing argument of the State before the fate of Frank is placed in the hands of the twelve jurors. It was interrupted by adjournment at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The Solicitor had been speaking since 9 o'clock in the forenoon and was exhausted by his efforts. His address had begun at 3:30 the afternoon before and had consumed a total of six and a half hours.

Crowd Greets Him With Cheers.

When, weak with fatigue, he asked for a recess and court adjourned until Monday morning at 9 o'clock, a great crowd awaited him outside to cheer him and rend the air with their yells because of the magnificent fight he has put up to send Frank to the gallows for the murder of the little factory girl.

The demonstration was spontaneous and was of greater magnitude than that of the night before. He had aroused to the highest pitch the admiration of the populace for the earnest and determined battle he was conducting for the conviction of the man he deemed guilty of the murder.

Men in front of the courthouse cheered with all their might as Dorsey came in sight from out the courtroom doors. Men from across the street took up the cheer and the little Solicitor was given the demonstration of a governor or some other popular hero as he quickly tucked his books and records under his arms and escaped through the crowd into his law offices in the Kiser building.

Hurls Charge Directly at Frank.

If his tongue was tipped with venom and bitterness, it can hardly be said that the Solicitor was not sincere and in earnest. Every word and every pharse that he uttered during his long speech—the longest of the trial—carried with it the conviction that the speaker was in deadly earnest.

Much of the time he was talking directly at the prisoner and was accusing him of murder and other crimes unmentionable. He looked Frank right in the eye. He leveled his finger at the defendant sitting calmly between his mother and his beautiful wife. He called him a "red-handed murderer" and a pervert. Frank did not flinch.

During a brief intermission, Frank even walked in front of the spectators with the suggestion of a smile on his face. If there was any fear of the verdict in his heart, it was kept buried there, far out of sight of human eyes.

Likens Frank to Oscar Wilde.

Dorsey compared the defendant with that prince of perverts, Oscar Wilde, and there was never a flicker of Frank's eye nor a change in his quiet, speculative expression. Dorsey told of other men who had possessed good reputations and yet had been guilty of the most heinous offenses—Theodore Durant, of San Francisco; Pastor Richeson, of Boston; Mayor McCue, of Charlottsville, Va.; Henry C. Beattie, of Richmond; Dr. Crippen, and others. In the same connection he mentioned the name of Judge Iscariot and Benedict Arnold, both of whom, he said, were supposed to be of good character until they had become traitors and betrayers.

"Character isn't worth a cent when you've got the evidence before you," shouted the Solicitor after he had compared Frank with some of the most infamous persons he could call to mind.

Prisoner Encourages His Wife.

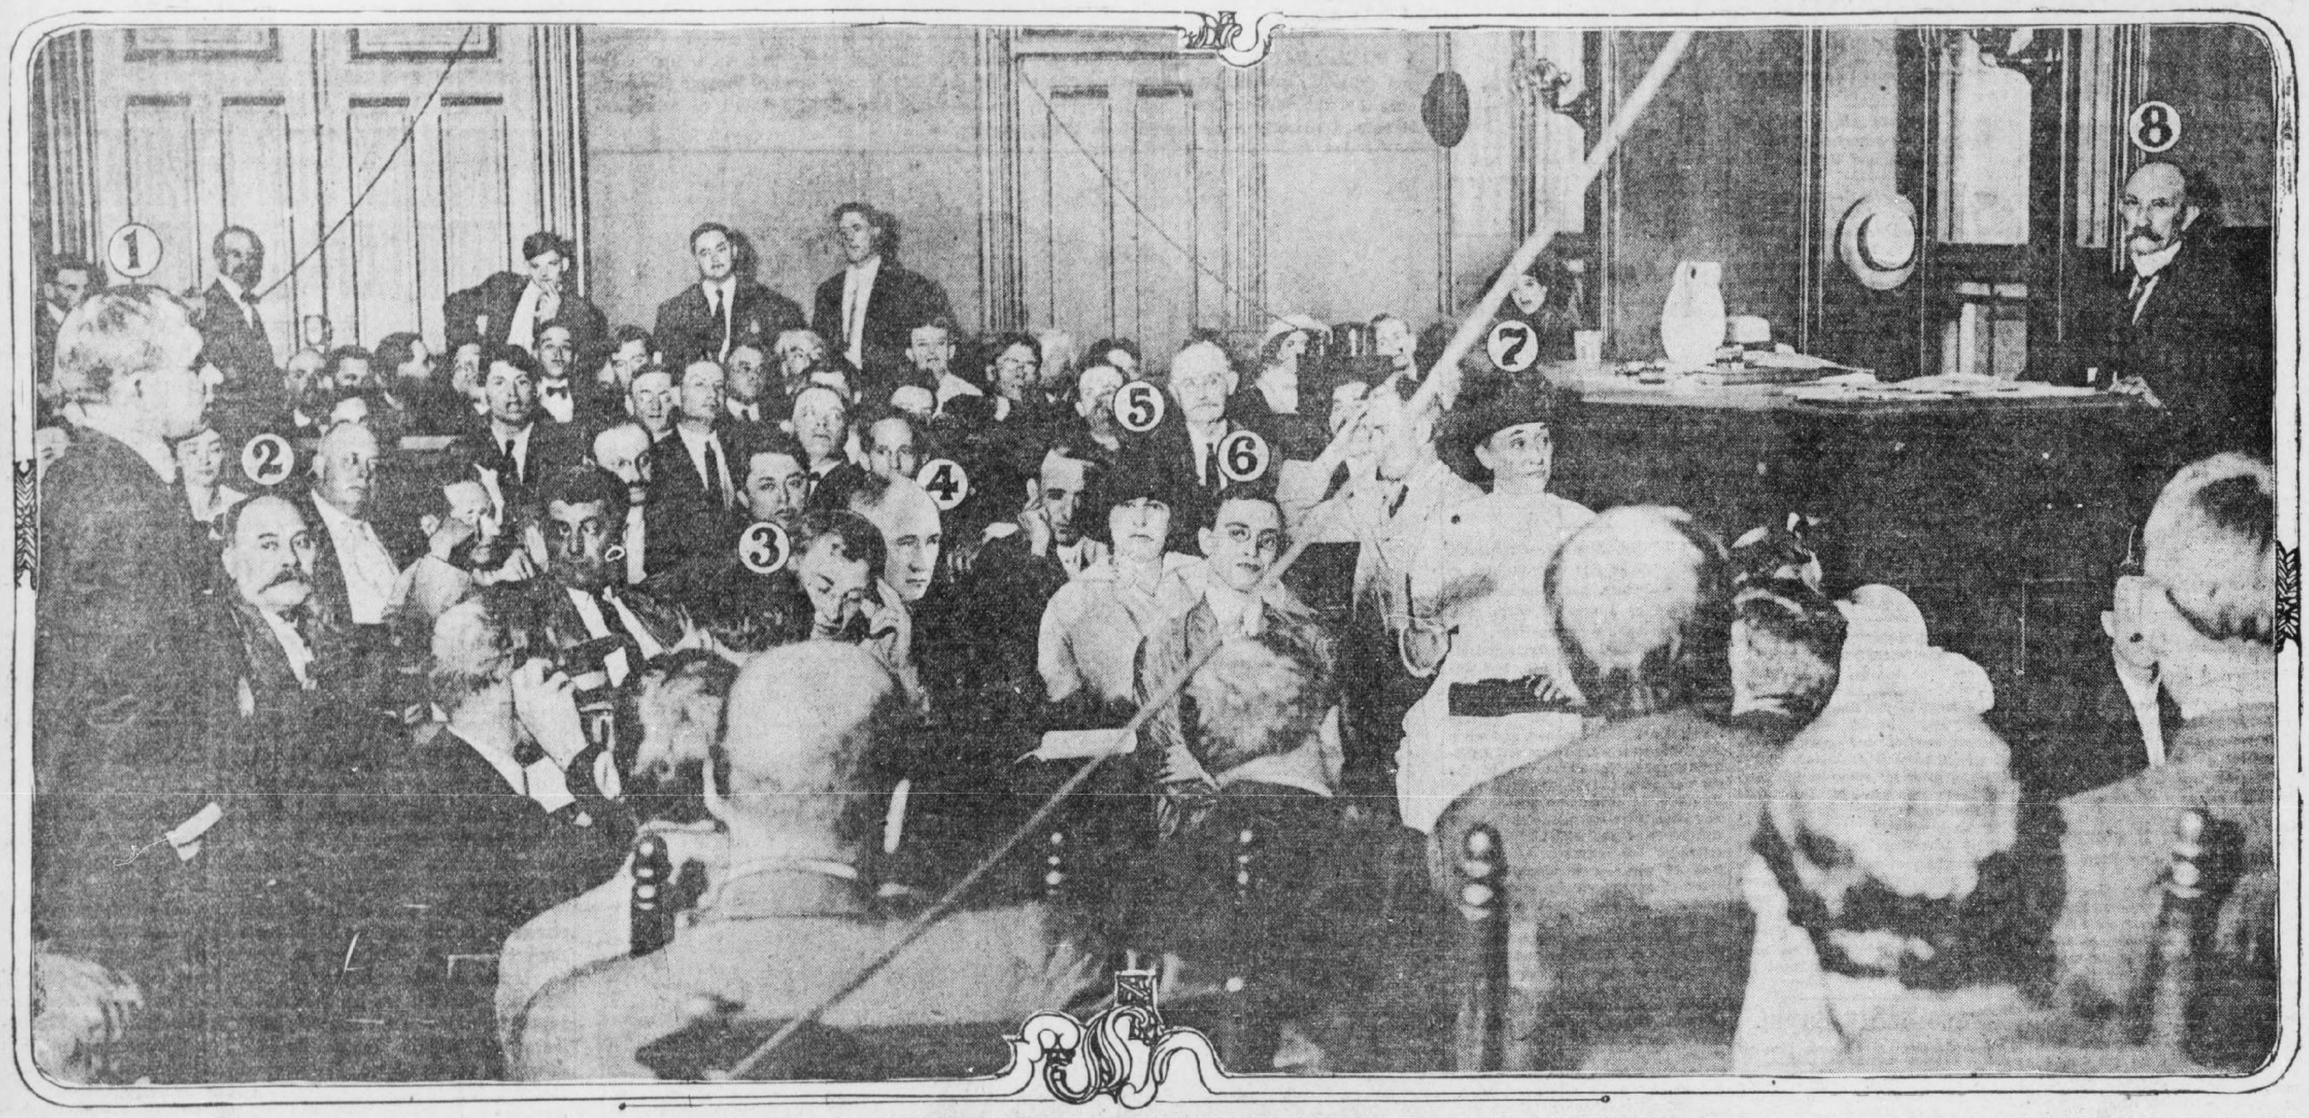
His denunciation at times was so unsparing and his words so like a physical blow that it seemed that the prisoner must quail before him. But Frank maintained his composure. In fact, during a lull in the storm of invective he occasionally would lean toward his wife or his mother and whisper a few words, accompanying them with a smile. For all that his manner betokened, he might be talking of some amusing incident that had just occured to him.

If the Solicitor's words failed to affect Frank, he was probably the only person in the courtroom who did not feel the intensity and the grim determination behind each sentence and each accusation that came from the lips of the State's representative.

So overcome at Dorsey's blunt and grewsome description of the torturous m... in which the pretty little factory girl had

DEATH PENALTY DEMANDED FOR LEO M. FRANK

A TENSE moment in the courtroom yesterday when Solicitor Dorsey was denouncing Frank in his dramatic plea to the jury. Numbered in the picture are (1) Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey, (2) Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford, (3) Attorney Reuben Arnold of counsel for the defense, (4) Luther Z. Rosser, who has had charge of the battle for Frank's life; (5) Mrs. Leo M. Frank, wife of the defendant; (6) Leo M. Frank, whose rate will soon rest with the jury; (7) Mrs. Rea Frank, his mother, and (8) Judge L. S. Roan.



DORSEY CHEERED AFTER GREAT CLOSING SPEECH

been attacked and strangled to death was Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan, that she collapsed utterly and wept. Frank's young wife was affected by the scene and she laid her head upon the shoulder of her accused husband and cried for several minutes.

The very manner in which Frank had borne himself during the long trial was used by the Solicitor against him. Such remarkable nerve and effrontery he declared he never had witnessed before in a court of justice. Dorsey thought it merely was one of the outcropping characteristics of the defendant's perverted moral and intellectual nature. He compared him to the brilliant Wilde, whose effrontery and insouciance in the midst of charges of unspeakable conduct was a mater of world-wide knowledge.

When he was interrupted by adjournment, the Solicitor was far from the end of his argument. He had taken longer than he expected. He had paused longer on certain aspects of the cast than he had intended. It seemed probable that he would require most of Monday forenoon to conclude his address.

Scoffs at Frank's Alibi.

Attacking the main points of Frank's defense, he came out boldly with the declaration that Frank's alibi was no alibi at all. He said that the whole of Frank's alibi practically hinged on the testimony of Miss Helen Curran, of No. 160 Ashby street, who had testified that she saw the young factory superintendent waiting for his car at Whitehall and Alabama streets Saturday afternoon at 1:10 o'clock.

At this point Dorsey dramatically brought forth the statement of Frank which he had made on the first day that he was detained at police headquarters.

"Listen to this," he said shaking the paper before the eyes of the jurymen. Then he quoted from Frank's statement which read:

"I didn't lock the door that morning. The mail was coming up. I locked it when I left for lunch at 1:10."

Makes Charge of Perjury.

"There goes your alibi," said the Solicitor. "It was punctured by your own statement made before you realized the importance of the time element."

Dorsey characterized as perjuries the statement of the Curran girl, that of Miss Fleming, a former stenographer; that of E. F. Holloway, day watchman, and that of Charley Lee.

He threw the suspicion of wrongdoing upon the character of the young woman, Miss Sarah Barnes, who dramatically had expressed her conviction of Frank's innocence on the stand and had declared her willingness to die in his place. The Solicitor overlooked nothing tending to point the hand of guilt toward Leo Frank.

Dorsey mentioned time and again the fact that the defense had failed to cross-examine the State's character witnesses. He said that he had dared them to do it, and that they had been afraid of the disclosures that would ensue.

Asserts Shirt Was "Plant."

He charged that the bloody shirt at Newt Lee's house, the pay envelope, the rope and the club on the first floor of the factroy were plants.

He said that Frank's statement in a letter to his unable, written the afternoon of the crime, that "nothing startling had happened," while intended to be self-serving, was in reality self-accusing.

Referring to the notes found by the girl's body, he called attention to the use of the word "did." He said that Conley always said "done," and that if "did" was used in the notes they must have been dictated by someone else.

He added that the reference in the notes to the toilet on the second floor was a strong indication that the murder had been committed there.

The Solicitor charged that Frank had been endeavoring to force his attentions upon the Phagan girl for weeks and that his advances culminated in the brutal attack of Memorial Day.

Gives His Theory of Crime.

Resisted again, Frank, in brutish fury, struck donw the girl, accomplished his purpose, and then, realizing his position, sought to escape being identified with the attack by binding a rope about the girl's neck and strangling her to death, according to the graphic words of the prosecutor.

As the hour passed noon, the Solicitor began to show signs of fatigue. His spirit was as indomitable and fiery as ever, but his features grew a bit haggard, and the weeks of tireless work on the case began to display themselves more plainly on his face.

At 1:30 he asked if there might not be a recess, as he was about exhausted. There was a side bar conference between the attorneys for both sides, and Judge Roan announced that adjournment would be taken until Monday.

It was thought likely that Dorsey would finish about noon. The judge's charge probably will occupy an hour or more, and then the case will go into the hands of the twelve jurors.

AUTOIST IS RUN OVER BY HIS OWN MACHINE

JOLIET, ILL., Aug. 23.—Because he cranked his automobile while it was in gear, Harry Lewis, a Joliet banker, was run over and badly injured. Lewis was in a hurry to take some friends to the Union station and neglected to inspect his gears, the machine would not spark the first few whirls of the crank, so he opened the throttle wider, one of the friends put on the exhilarator to help matters, and now Lewis has been two weeks in the hospital.

Policewoman Uses Her Stare as Club

Declares She Has No Trouble With Mashers After One Stern Glare.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Squelch the masher with a look. You don't need a whistle like the Boston women; hatpins do not make good weapons, and a club should be used only in a tight squeeze.

This is the opinion of two of Chicago's policewomen, both long in the business of protecting women.

"I haven't had any trouble with men on the beach this year, even those who didn't know I was a policewoman," said Officer Mary Boyd, who is in charge of the Thirty-ninth street bathing beach. "All you have to do when a man speaks to you insultingly is to look at him. He turns and runs."

Woman Toper Has Thirst Amputated

Obstruction in Her Throat Was Believed Cause of Her Longing For Alchohol.

LIMA, OHIO, Aug. 23.—Mary Calahan, 22, submitted to a surgical operation in the Chief of Police's office today, and it is hoped Mary's thirst was cut out, literally and figuratively.

Several years ago she was shot in the jaw. A splintered bone lodged against her palate, creating a continuous desire for drink. She insists the desire was for strictly alcoholic drink and that she had tried grape juice in vain. Since that time Mary and her tickling bone have given the police a ticklish time.

Chief Ernest May consulted with City Physician Steer. Between them they decided on the operation.

Offers to Serve Out Hawthorne's Term

Pastor-Classmate of Author-Convict Says it Would be 'Utmost Pleasure.'

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—The Rev. William Davis, of Everett, a member of the class of 1867 of Harvard and an evangelistic clergyman, has written his classmates, Julian Hawthorne and William James Morton, in the Federal Prison at Atlanta, offering to serve the remainder of their sentences, and states to do so would give him "the utmost pleasure."

EX-BANDIT GETS RELIGION; COLE YOUNGER CONVERTED

LEES SUMMIT, MO., Aug. 23.—Cole Younger, once a bandit, became a member of the Christian Church at a revival meeting to-night.

Dorsey's Closing Address a Scorching Attack on Frank

Hurls Charges of Perversion and Murder in Face of Defendant While Wife Bows Head and Weeps.

Probably a more stirring, denunciatory, and at the same time incisive and analytical argument, has never been heard in a Georgia court than Solicitor Dorsey's closing address in the case against Leo M. Frank. Here it is as the Solicitor delivered it:

Dorsey moved over to the railing of the jury box as he opened his speech.

"Your honor and gentlemen of the jury," he said, "I was speaking to you yesterday of the character of this defendant. This defendant has not a good character. The conduct of the counsel in this case in failing to cross-examine, in refusing to cross-examine these twenty young ladies, refutes effectively and absolutely the claim of the defendant that he has a good character.

Says Defense Had Right to Refute Charge.

"As I said, if this man had a good character, no power on earth could have kept him and his counsel from asking those young girls where they got their information and why they dsai what they did. Now that's a common sense proposition.

"You know as twelve men seeking to get at the truth that they did not ask those hair-brained fanatics, as Mr. Arnold calls them, questions about Frank's character because they were afraid, and those witnesses, as good as any the defense put up, were unimpeached and are unimpeachable. And you tell me that because the good people come here from Washington street and testify to his good character is that he has one!

"It very often happens that a man's wife is the last person to know his wrongdoing. Sometimes the man uses charitable and religious organizations to cover up and hide his evil self. Very often his guilty conscience turns him that way. Many a man is a wolf in sheep's clothing.

"Many a man is a white sepulcher on the outside and absolutely rotten within. But suppose he has a good character. David had a good character until he put Uriah in the forefront of battle that he might be killed that he could get his wife. Judas Iscariot had a good character among those Twelve Men until he accepted those 30 pieces of silver.

"I have shown you that under the law they had a right to bring out all those things. You saw they dared not do it. Let's see what the law says. I'll read here from the Eighty-third Georgia Report:

"'Whenever any persons have evidence in their possession and they fail to produce it, the strongest presumption arises that it would be hurtful if they did, and their failure to produce evidence is a circumstance against them.'

'You don't need any lawbook to tell you that. It's plain common sense.

Recalls Case of Oscar Wilde.

"Benedict Arnold was brave. He enjoyed the confidence of all the people and those in charge of the Revolutionary War until he betrayed his country. Since that day his name has been a synonym for infamy. Oscar Wilde, an Irish knight, a brilliant author, whose works will go down through time, gave us 'De Profundis,' which he wrote while in jail—a remarkable work—yet when the Marquis of Queensberry discovered that there was something wrong between Wilde and his son, Wilde had the effrontery and the boldness to sue him for damages. A suit in retaliation resulted in the conviction of Wilde for criminal practices. Yet, wherever the English language is spoken the effrontery of the testimony on cross-examination of this man—an effrontery typical of this sort (turning to Frank)—will always be a matter for deep study for lawyers and for people interested in that sort of degeneracy.

"He had a wife and two children. His shame probably never would have been brought to light but for the fact that he had the effrontery and the boldness to start a suit. It ended in his being sent to prison.

"And the prosecution of Oscar!

"He was a man who led the esthetic movement. He was a scholar and a literary man. His cross-examination was a thing to be read with pride by every lawyer. The whole world took notice of his prosecution, and yet when Oscar Wilde was an old man, gray-haired and tottering to the grave, he confessed to his guilt. Prominent? Why, he was one of the most prominent men in the world! Why, he came to America and founded the esthetic movement here. He raised the sunflower from a weed to the dignity of a flower. He was handsome—one of the handsomest men to be found. He had moral courage, yet he was a pervert, proved and confessed.

"There was a handsome man in San Francisco, a member of this defendant's sect—Abe Ruef, a man who possessed all of the faculties of highest intelligence, yet he corrupted even Smith, and his corruption of the poor girls with whom he came in contact brought him to the penitentiary. I have already referred to Durant. His character did not prevent the jury from convicting him. This defendant's character, like Durant's, is not worth a cent when the case is proved.

"And crime is alike with the rich and poor, ignorant and learned. Take an ignorant man like Jim Conley. He is the man who commits the petty crimes, but take a man with high intellect, like this defendant—this intellect, when put to the right use, leads to glorious accomplishments; but if these faculties be put to the wrong use, it brings ruin to the man in the commission of the most diabolical crimes. Look at McCue, the Mayor of Charlottesville, Va. He was a man of broad intellect and high education, but, despite his intellect, despite his splendid character, he tired of his wife and shot her, and the jury, composed of Virginia gentlemen, broad-minded and fair, despite McCue's good character, found him guilty and sent him to a felon's grave.

"Take the case of Richeson, the preacher of Boston. Here was a man of highest intellect and with a brilliant future. He was engaged to one of the wealthiest and most beautiful girls of Boston, but entanglements with a poor little girl caused him to fear for his good name and he so far forgot his good character as to put this poor little girl to death. Even after his conviction in the last days of his hope he committed an act upon himself which he thought would draw the pity of the Governor and save his life. But a Massachusetts jury and a Massachusetts Governor were courageous enough to let that man's life go. They had the courage which will make every right-thinking man right by the laws of God and man and of his country.

"Take Beattie—Henry Clay Beattie, of Richmond. He was of splendid family, of wealth and proved a good character, though he did not possess it. He took the mother of his 12-month-old baby out in an automobile and shot her. He was cool, calm and deliberate. He laughed and he joked, but he joked too much, and although the detectives were maligned and abused and a large slush fund was used, a courageous, honest Virginia jury upheld justice and sent that man to death. And he never confessed, but he left a note saying he was guilty.

Likens Frank To Dr. Crippen.

"Crippen, of England, a man of high standing and recognized ability, killed his wife because of infatuation for another woman. He hid her where he thought she would not be found, as this man (pointing to Frank) thought the body of that little girl would not be found. But murder will out, and be it said to the glory of old England this man paid the penalty of death.

"Gentlemen, you have an opportunity that comes to few men. Measure up to it. Will you do it? If not, let your conscience say why not.

"But you say you've got an alibi. Let's examine that proposition. Here's an authority: 'An alibi as a defense involves the impossibility of the prisoner's presence at the scene of the offense at the time of its commitment', and the range of evidence must be such as reasonably to exclude the possibility.'

"The burden of carrying this alibi rests on the shoulders of this defendant. They must show to you that it was impossible for this man to have been at the scene of the crime—an alibi, while the best kind of evidence if properly sustained, otherwise is absolutely worthless. I am going to show you that this man's alibi is worse than useless. It is no defense at all.

"I want to give you the definition of an old darky of an alibi. It illustrates my point. Rastus asked old Sam, 'What is this hyar alibi I hear so much about?' Old Sam says, 'An alibi is provin' that you was at the prayer meeting where you wasn't, to prove you wasn't at the crap game where you was.'

"Let's see the time table of the defense. I want to turn it around for half a minute. Then I want to turn it to the wall and let it stay forever.

"'One p. m.—Frank leaves the factory.

"'One-fifteen p. m.—Frank arrives at his home.

"'One-fifteen to one-forty-five p. m.—Frank eats lunch.

"'One-forty-five p. m.—Frank leaves his home.

"'Two p. m.—Frank arrives at the factory.'

"Now, gentlemen, I want to turn it to the wall. That statement is refuted by the defendant himself when he didn't realize the importance of this time proposition.

"Frank's statement at police headquarters, taken by G. C. Febuary on Monday, April 28, says, 'I didn't lock the door that morning. The mail was coming up. I locked it when I started home to lunch at 1:10 o'clock.'

"Up goes your alibi punctured by your own statement when you didn't realize its importance. Yet these honorable gentlemen for the purpose of impressing your minds print in big letters on this chart he left the factory at 1 o'clock. If he swore when he was on the stand the other day that he left the factory at 1 o'clock it was because he saw the importance of this time point and had to leave there ten minutes earlier than he said he had at the police station before he had had time to confer with his lawyer, Mr. Luther Z. Rosser.

"I quote: 'I left at 1:10.' Right here let me interpolate. This man never made an omission from the beginning to the end of this case. Where he knew a person was aware that he was in the factory at a certain time he admitted it. He proved, or at least attempted to prove, an alibi by the little Curran girl. They had her get up on the stand and say that she saw Frank at 1:10. Yet here is his statement made to the police April 28 in the presence of his attorney, Mr. Luther Z. Rosser, in which he said that he did not leave the factory until 1:10.

"The saddest thing in this case—I don't know who caused it, I don't know who introduced it, and I hope I will go to my grave without ever learning who brought this little Curran girl into this case—the saddest thing in this case is bringing in this little girl who is connected with Montag's and placing her upon the stand here to protect this red-handed murderer.

"Jurors are sworn, and his honor has the right under the law to charge you to consider the truthfulness or the reasonableness of that which any witness swears to. And, gentlemen of the jury, anyone who looked upon that little girl noticed her bearing upon the stand, the slightly unusual manner and her connection with Montags—consider the fact that this little girl, like the little Bauer boy, had been riding in Montag's automobile—and if you can not tell just why and how she was brought here, then I am unable to understand your mental operations.

"If Frank locked that door at 1:10, how could she have seen him at Alabama and Whitehall street at 1:10? How could she be so positive that it was him, if she really saw anyone there? For, mark you, she had never seen him but once. She comes into your presence and tells you the unreasonable and absurd story of seeing him, which is in direct contradiction to Frank's story.

"On this time proposition, I want to read you this. It made a wonderful impression on me when I read it. It's from the speech of a wonderful man. It's from a man in whose presence even lawyers of the type of Ar-

Continued on Page 4, Column 1.

You Can't Be Well When Constipated

"Keep Your Bowels Open"—Doctors Estimate 75 Per Cent of Sickness Due to Torpid Liver.

Some undigested food is left in the stomach daily, which the liver should clear away. A heavy or unusual diet, or a change in water, may cause the liver to leave a few particles to press and clog, and the next day more are left over. So this waste accumulates, clogging stomach and intestines, and causing constipation.

That is not all. If the waste is not eliminated it ferments and generates uric acid, a poison which gets into the blood and through the system.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT immediately flushes the stomach and intestinal tract and washes away every particle of waste and fermentation; it purifies the blood by dissolving what uric acid has accumulated and passing it off in the urine.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is much better than calomel; no danger of salivation, no need of an after-cleansing dose of oil. It acts quickly and mildly, never forces, gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. Take it before breakfast and in an hour you'll feel splendid.

Don't take an inferior substitute; some closely imitate the name, but none produces the same result. All druggists should have the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT, 25c. If yours can not supply you, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

P-R-I-N-T-O-R-I-A-L-S
No. 224

The advance agent of Prosperity is in our midst!

Already FALL BUSINESS is "looking up"—already there is a subtle feeling of "GOOD TIMES" in the air. Have YOU prepared to take advantage of the increased opportunities for bigger and better times? Have you given your FALL PRINTING the attention it deserves? Phone for our representative to call. No time like the present to plan your PRINTING.

BYRD
Printing Co.
46-48-50 W. Alabama, Atlanta.

Phones M. 1560-2608-2614.

HUGH DORSEY WINS HIS SPURS IN PHAGAN CASE

FOURTH WEEK OF FRANK TRIAL FINDS INTEREST OF PUBLIC STILL WHITE HOT

Popular Opinion Swayed, First When State Springs Climax With Conley's Story, Again When Defense Put the Accused Man on the Stand.

BY AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The fourth week of the Frank trial came to an end shortly after noon Saturday, with Solicitor Dorsey still far from the finish of his concluding argument in behalf of the State.

Judge Roan announced at 1:45 that he would adjourn the case over until Monday, as he has been doing heretofore, and the Solicitor will conclude his argument then.

The Solicitor had been speaking more than six hours when adjournment came, but apparently was physically able to go on if necessary.

His address, when it is finished Monday, will have been broken into three sections—one Friday afternoon, another Saturday morning, and a third Monday morning.

The Solicitor's address has been so far a wonderful piece of work.

On all sides he has been praised ungrudgingly for the fine effort he has made in behalf of the prosecution.

Atlanta will breathe a long, deep and soulful sigh of relief, however, when the last word is spoken by way of argument and the case is given into the hands of the jury for a verdict.

Leading Topic for Months.

Never before in the history of Fulton County has a criminal proceeding so challenged the unabated and undivided attention of the people.

For four months the Frank case—or the Phagan case, as it more generally is called—has been the leading topic of discussion among all classes of Georgians, rural and urban, rich and poor, high and low, informed and uninformed.

Every figure to the tragedy has been picturesque in the extreme.

Mary Phagan, a sweet young working girl, cruelly murdered; Leo Frank, a young business man of theretofore unblemished character and standing, indicted for the murder; Jim Conley, a negro, a confessed accessory after the fact of the murder, with a long criminal career attaching to him, the principal witness against Frank; Lucile Frank, the loving and devoted wife of the defendant, always at his side, with his mother, cheering and sustaining him; Reuben Arnold and Luther Rosser, two of the leading and most noted lawyers in the South, defending the accused; Frank Hooper and Hugh Dorsey, the former an attorney of established reputation, the latter a brilliant young lawyer lately named prosecuting attorney of the Atlanta Circuit; a presiding judge who has tried many of the most famous cases in the State—these make up the dramatis personae of the Frank case.

Case Fought Stubbornly.

Never before in Fulton County, if, indeed, within the State, has a case been so stubbornly and so bitterly fought as the Frank case.

It required more than three weeks to get the evidence all in. Every inch of ground was contested vigorously and to a finish.

It is estimated that the defense interposed more than 100 objections of one sort and another, as the case progressed, thus fortifying itself as abundantly as possible for an appeal, in the event of conviction.

The only party to the crime, as witness or otherwise, who has not been attacked vehemently one way or the other is the little dead girl, Mary Phagan!

All sides have agreed that, whatever else might or might not be true, the murdered child was blameless—a pathetic and unoffending victim of a brutal homicide.

Frank, the defendant, has been painted by the defense as a bright young business man, perfect in deportment at all times, a loving husband and a dutiful son, irreproachable in character, incapable of criminal deeds and thoughts, persecuted and assailed maliciously by hostile officials seeking reward both by way of fame and material gain!

By the State Frank has been painted as black as the darkest depths of Hades itself, an unfaithful husband, a vicious son, a lustful monster, particularly after young girls; a pervert, a leader of two lives, a designing and crafty monster—an inhuman murderer!

Conley Blamed and Praised.

Conley has been held up both as a witness worthy of all belief and as a witness worthy of no belief whatever—as a negro reluctant to tell the truth originally because of his disinclination to involve Frank, his erstwhile kind and profitable master, but rushing candidly and sincerely to recite the truth eventually, nevertheless, and, on the other hand, as a negro lying from start to finish for no other purpose than to save his own neck from the noose by slipping it over the head of the oppressed Frank.

Lucile Frank, the wife, has been cited both as the faithful and loving wife there at the husband's side in the courtroom and as the shrinking, suspicious wife, early indisposed even to visit Frank in his cell at the jail.

Rosser and Arnold have painted Hooper and Dorsey as direct agents of a wicked and malicious "frame-up against the life, liberty and most sacred honor of Leo Frank, deliberately and designedly seeking to hang the defendant to gratify a misguided enthusiasm and official zeal, if nothing worse; and Dorsey and Hooper have been unsparing in their criticisms of Rosser and Arnold, the paid attorneys of the defense.

An imposing array of witnesses have declared Frank's character both good and bad, while two other arrays of witnesses have sought both to uphold and to break down his alibis.

Medical experts, of repute and fame, have been set up one by one, only to be designated "fakes" and "quacks" by the other side, and vice versa.

Second Charge in Case.

Besides the original charge of murder there was injected into the case, in its early stages, an unspeakable charge of degeneracy.

First this charge went in with the defense's knowledge and consent, and then the defense moved to rule it out. It wasn't ruled out, and the defense then seized upon it and undertook to make a boomerang upon the State.

The State thereupon sought to enlarge upon it, and the State was stopped from doing that.

Three or four days was used up in attempting to show whether boiled cabbage could reach such and such a state of digestion in such and such a time, and after a long wrangle as to that, the defense and the State found that they were not particularly disagreed about the matter, anyway as it fit both theories like a glove to show that Mary Phagan died within an hour after eating the cabbage.

The defense has contended that Jim Conley and not Leo Frank murdered Mary Phagan, and the State has contended quite as earnestly that Frank did it, and Conley was connected with it only after the exact fashion he swore to.

Looking backward over the trial from the present day point of view, one may see much that appears grimly humorous in the proceedings—and yet there has been nothing bordering ever so slightly upon the humorous, really. On the contrary, the trial has been tragedy piled uncompromisingly upon tragedy, from beginning to end!

Public Swayed Both Ways.

Into all the other complex, puzzling, elusive and sinister details of the mysterious Frank case, a large measure of prejudice was injected as it swept along.

The public has been swung first this way and then that, rushed to one conclusion, only to be rushed as madly, after a bit, to another, until, up one side and down the other, the public breathed, as aforesaid, a large and deep sigh of relief when at last the jury got the matter into its keeping, to unravel it as best it might and to speak the truth of it as nearly and as exactly as human ingenuity and the forms of law can approximate the same.

The State has fought doggedly to one theory: That Leo Frank, shortly after noon on Saturday, April 26, lured little Mary Phagan, for unspeakably immoral purpose, to the rear of the second floor of the National Pencil Factory in Forsyth street, after having paid her her weekly pittance, and there, when she refused to yield to his lustful purpose, he killed her, first by knocking her down and subsequently strangling her.

That after this horribly tragic culmination of a perhaps non-murderous original intent, Frank sought the help of a negro, Conley, with whom he had had previous very questionable relations, to hide the body, and that Conley, already deep in the mire with Frank, consented, and as a matter of fact, did hide the body of the dead girl in the basement of the factory, where subsequently he expected to burn it.

Charges Notes Were Framed.

That after this, Frank and his accomplice returned to the second floor, whereon Frank's office is located, and prepared some illiterate notes, which were placed beside the dead body for the purpose of diverting suspicion both from Frank and the negro.

That the defendant then gave the negro some money for his work, and promised him more eventually.

That Frank's actions following the murder were suspicious enough to prompt his retention at police headquarters.

That his general character is bad enough to warrant the presumption that he had lustful intentions toward Mary Phagan, as evidenced by his relations with other women and girls.

That his professed alibis are inconsequential and misleading, and not sustained by facts.

Finally, that Conley's seemingly contradictory attitude is accounted for in two directions, first by his desire to save both himself and Frank, and second by his desire to protect himself against a great measure of responsibility for the tragedy than rightfully belonged to him, when it became evident to him that Frank was preparing to let him suffer just so much measure of responsibility, even to the murder itself, as might be fixed if he did speak.

What Defense Has Claimed.

The defense has fought doggedly to this one theory: That Leo Frank scarcely knew Mary Phagan at all, and that the only time he saw her on Saturday, April 26, was when she came to his office to get her pay; that he never lured her to the rear of the second floor, or anywhere else, for any purpose whatever, and that he never saw her alive after the brief moment she stood in his office on Saturday.

That after she left his presence, happy and unharmed, she passed on downstairs, and encountered Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, whom Frank did not even know was in the building, and who was not supposed to be in the building at that time.

That Conley, then only partially recovered from a drunken debauch of the morning, saw her little mesh bag in her hand, and, being "broke" and wanting more whisky, he seized the girl, snatched her mesh bag, after knocking her down, threw her into the cellar below through the nearby open elevator shaft, whence later he dragged her to the trash pile in the rear of the building, tied the strangling rope about her neck, either to complete his dastardly work or to create a false suspicion as to the direct cause of her death.

That he then pulled the staple from the back door of the basement and thus made his escape finally from the building.

That all of Conley's story as to how he helped dispose of the body is a fabrication and a monstrous lie, framed for the purpose of shielding himself and placing the blame upon Frank.

That his story was dragged from him, bit by bit, beginning with the falsehood that he could not write, and that it was revised four times, always under oath, before its amazing and incompatible contradictions could be fixed up to stick with any degree of plausibility, and that he was helped in every one of these revisions by all too willing police officers, detectives and court officials bent upon finding in Frank a victim for Mary Phagan's murder.

Claim Negro Wrote Notes.

That the negro himself, of his own motion, wrote the notes he later confessed to having written, hoping thereby to divert suspicion from himself.

That Conley only began his series of contradictory "confessions" after he found that Frank was under suspicion, and thereby realized his (Conley's) opportunity to fasten more firmly upon Frank that suspicion, to Conley's own great benefit.

That Frank's general character is good, in contradistinction to Conley's admitted bad character.

That Frank has set up two unassailable alibis, and could not, therefore, have committed the crime charged.

That his nervousness the day following the murder was occasioned by the manner in which the fact of the murder was communicated to him, and not because of guilt.

That the long and delicate clerical work he did on the afternoon following the murder is proof that he could not then have been agitated by guilt or by any other sinister knowledge.

That Frank, as a matter of fact, knows nothing whatever of the cause of Mary Phagan's death, and is utterly and entirely guiltless of any participation therein.

Two intensely dramatic events marked the progress of the trial—and about them the entire case has revolved constantly.

Conley's remarkable story, containing the unspeakable charge of perversion, wealthy in detail and full of thrill, was the State's big point.

Frank's wonderfully clear, dispassionate and well-sustained statement from the witness stand was the defendant's big point.

These two contrary things have been pitted the one against the other, and upon which the jury finally would accept as the truth the case always has seemed to turn for final adjustment.

Attack Centers on Negro.

Every effort of the defense has been to break down Conley—including two days' unmerciful grilling by Mr. Rosser—and every effort of the State has been toward upholding him.

Every effort of the defense, therefore, has been also directed toward holding up Frank's statement, just as every effort of the State has been directed toward breaking it down.

It ever was Frank vs. Conley—the life of the one or the other as the law's satisfaction for the murder of Mary Phagan!

Regardless of all things else, the public is unstinting in its praise and approval of the brilliant young Solicitor General of the Atlanta Circuit, Hugh Dorsey, for the superb manner in which he has handled the State's side of the case.

It all along has been freely admitted that those two veterans of criminal practice, Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, would take ample care of the defendant.

Two more experienced, able and aggressive attorneys it would be impossible to secure in any cause.

When it was first learned that Rosser and Arnold were to defend Frank, the public realized that the defendant had determined to take no chances. He selected from among the cream of the Georgia bar.

That the State's interests, quite as sacred as the defendant's, would be looked after so jealously, so adroitly, and so shrewdly in the hands of the youthful Dorsey, however—that was a matter not so immediately settled!

Dorsey an Unknown Quantity.

Dorsey was known as a "bright young chap," not widely experienced, willing and aggressive enough, but—

He had been but lately named Solicitor General, and he hadn't been tried out exhaustively.

Maybe he could measure up to the standard of Rosser and Arnold, but it was a long way to measure up, nevertheless!

It soon became evident that Dorsey was not to be safely underrated. He could not be sneered down, laughed down, ridiculed down, or smashed down.

He took a lot of lofty gibing, and was called "bud" and "son" right along—but every time they pushed him down, he arose again, and generally stronger than ever!

Time and again he outgeneraled his more experienced opponents.

He forced them to make Frank's character an issue, despite themselves.

He got in vital and far-reaching evidence, over protest long and loud.

Whenever the Solicitor was called upon for an authority, he was right there with the goods. They never once caught him napping. He had prepared himself for the Frank case, in every phase of it.

The case had not progressed very far before the defense discovered unmistakably that it had in Dorsey a foreman worthy of its most trustworthy and best-tempered steel!

And the young Solicitor climaxed his long sustained effort with a masterful speech, that will long be remembered in Fulton County!

In places he literally tore to pieces the efforts of the defense. He overlooked no detail—at times he was crushing in his reply to the arguments of Rosser and Arnold, and never was he commonplace!

Fixed His Fame by Work.

Whatever the verdict, when Hugh Dorsey sat down, the Solicitor General had fixed his fame and reputation as an able and altogether capable prosecuting attorney—and never again will that reputation be challenged lightly, perhaps!

Much credit for hard work and intelligent effort will be accorded Frank Hooper, too, for the part he played in the Frank trial. He was at all times the repressed and painstaking first lieutenant of the Solicitor, and his work, while not so spectacular, formed a very vital part of the whole case made out and argued by the State. He was for fourteen years the Solicitor General of one of the most important South Georgia circuits, and his advice and suggestions to Dorsey were invaluable.

A noteworthy fact in connection with the Frank trial is that it generally is accepted as having been as fair and square as human forethought and effort could make it.

It may be true that a good deal of the irrelevant and not particularly pertinent crept into it, but one side has been to blame for that quite as much as the other side.

Ruling Cut Both Ways.

The judge's rulings have cut impartially both ways—sometimes favorable to the State, but quite as frequently in favor of the defense.

Even the one big charge of degeneracy, which many people hold had no proper place in the present trial, went in without protest from the defense, and cross-examination upon it even was indulged in.

Unlimited time was given both the State and the defense to make out their cases; expense was not considered. The trial has lasted longer than any other in the criminal history of Georgia. Nothing was done or left undone that could give either side the right to complain of unfairness after the conclusion of the hearing.

It is difficult to conceive how human minds and hman efforts could provide more for fair play than was provided in the Frank case.

MRS. LEO M. FRANK plainly showing the strain as Solicitor Dorsey arraigned her husband. Below is Mrs. Rea Frank, the defendant's mother, who also betrayed her agitation.

English Housewives Plan Bacon Boycott

Hope to Force Down Price by Abstaining From Buying for Fortnight.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The "English breakfast" is threatened with dire disaster. London housewives are preparing to boycott the toothsome "rasher" because of the continued high prices ruling for bacon.

They plan to refuse to buy bacon for a fortnight, beginning to-day. Enormous quantities are likley to remain in the hands of the wholesalers and prices are expected to come down with a rush.

Optimists predict a drop in price of at least 6 cents a pound.

Cost of Living Up in Britain 14 Per Cent

Prices of Foodstuffs Except Tea and Sugar Have Risen at Remarkable Rate.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Striking figures showing the increased cost of living are contained in a voluminous report issued by the British Board of Trade, according to which present prices are the highest in twenty-five years.

Retail prices of food have risen 14 per cent since 1900, while wages have increased only 3 per cent.

Prices of almost all foodstuffs, except tea and sugar, have risen, the greatest increases being in bacon, 22 per cent, and potatoes, 46 per cent.

People have been able to meet the advances only by reducing consumption.

CASTLE TO BE HOME OF TRAMPS OF GERMANY

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—Here is perhaps a bit of news which will be of interest to some of America's "Wandering Willies." A ruined castle at Merlenhausen, Saxony, is about to be restored by the local authorities, who will use it as a free rest house and night shelter for tramps from all parts of Germany.

Mail-Wooed Bride On Journey to Coast

Millionaire Ranchman Is Given Fine Recommendation by Pastors of His Neighbor.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Theresa Patterson, a handsome widow, aged 30, of Allentown, Pa., is nearing Los Molinas to-day, a journey of 3,000 miles across the continent, to become the bride of Charles H. Smart, a wealthy rancher, after a romantic courtship by mail.

Clergymen in Los Molinas and Allentown gave each a clean bill, the former stating that while Smart is not a millionaire, he is worth nearly that sum and would make a home happy for any woman of his choice.

The marriage is to take place immediately upon Mrs. Patterson's arrival.

5-Cent Fraud in Ice; 5 Days on Rockpile

Portland Dealer Is Sentenced for Cheating Customer in 25-Cent Transaction.

PORTLAND, OREG., Aug. 23.—Five days at the rockpile for a 5-cent fraud in the sale of a piece of ice was the sentence imposed by Municipal Judge Stevenson upon Thomas Barnes, proprietor of the National Ice and Coal Company.

Barnes delivered a 40-pound piece of ice worth 20 cents, saying it weighed 50 pounds and charging 25 cents.

RUSS SERFS JOLLY, BUT LAZY, SAYS VASSAR GIRL

Special Cable to The American.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 23.—Miss Texter, a graduate of Vassar College, who has been making a tour of Saratoff and Simbirsk, typical agricultural provinces of Russia, to study the land question, has been telling the Russian newspapers the peasants impress her most by their good temper and dislike for work.

For summer complaints

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is best. It will keep your stomach and bowels in fine condition to do all the work called for, thus avoiding or relieving cramps, dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, malaria and stomach troubles.

The genuine Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY, by druggists, grocers and dealers. Should our friends for any reason be unable to secure it in their locality, we will have it shipped to them from their nearest dealer, express prepaid (cash to accompany order) at the following prices:—

4 Large Bottles, $4.30.
6 Large Bottles, $5.90.
12 Large Bottles, $11.00.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey should be in every home and we make the above announcement so that you may become familiar with a source of supply.

Remit by express order, postoffice order, or certified check to

The Duffy Malt Whiskey Company,
98 White St., Rochester, N. Y.

I Cannot Possibly

Impress upon your minds (through the newspapers) the importance of calling to see me when your teeth need attention. Give me a trial and learn for yourself how fair and honest I treat you—how my methods are ABSOLUTELY PAINLESS, and my prices MUCH LOWER than any other Dentist in Atlanta. I can assure you that it will be a pleasure to you to recommend me to your friends after you have once tried me. I employ no students. Each doctor has had from 5 to 18 years' experience and is thoroughly versed in my painless methods.

MY WORK IS GUARANTEED FOR 15 YEARS

They Must Fit $5 A Set

Terms: WELL, DON'T WORRY. THESE ARE ARRANGED TO SUIT.

Best Service for Least Money

They Never Slip or Drop.

SETS OF TEETH	$5.00 UP
GOLD FILLINGS	75c UP
SILVER FILLINGS	50c UP
BRIDGEWORK	$3, $4, $5
GOLD CROWNS	a TOOTH

DR. WHITLAW, Painless Dentist

Largest and Most Thoroughly Equipped Sanitary Office In the South. Phone M. 1298.

73½ WHITEHALL ST.

SOLICITOR'S CLOSING ARGUMENT A MASTERPIECE

DENOUNCES DEFENDANT AS MORAL PERVERT AND LAUGHS ALIBI TO SCORN

Prisoner Likened to Oscar Wilde, Pastor Richeson and Beattie---Charged With Committing Murder to Hide Evidence of His Crime Against Girl.

Continued From Page 2.

nold and Rosser would take off their hats.

"I refer to Daniel Webster and his argument in the Knott case. 'Time is identical, days, hours, are not visible to any of senses except to the schooled. He who speaks of days, hours and minutes talks at random.' It is better than I could express it. What about this time? In this table here, minutes are moved up and down, contorted and twisted to protect this man. They say he arrived at the factory at 8:25. Frank himself in his first statement said he arrived at 8:30, and poor Jim Conley, lousy, filthy and dirty, said he arrived at 8:30, carrying a raincoat, and they tried to make it appear he didn't have one. If the truth is ever known, he tried to borrow that raincoat of Ursenbach's to create the same impression.

"Mattie Smith at 9:20 (quoting from the table), and Frank and Mattie Smith both say 9:30. He called Schiff at 10 o'clock (reading again), and yet this man with all his mathematical precision and accuracy at figures, said he was at Montag's at 10 o'clock. They say he arrived back at 11 o'clock, but in his first statement he said it was 11:05. At 12:12 they say Mary Phagan arrived at the factory.

"Oh my, they have to do it. Like the rabbit in Uncle Remus, they're 'just 'bleeged to do it.' Move the minutes up or back, for God's sake, or we are lost!

"But to crown it all! In the table which is now turned to the wall you have Lemmie Quinn arriving not on the minute, but, to suit your purpose, at from 12:20 to 12:22. That evidence conflicts with the statements of Miss Freeman and the other young woman, who put him there before 12 o'clock."

Arnold—Your honor, I must interrupt. No such evidence was ever brought out. Those young women testified that they left the factory at 11:45 and that they saw Lemmie Quinn at the Busy Bee Cafe considerably after. Mr. Dorsey says they saw him at the factory before 12 o'clock.

Dorsey—No, your honor, I didn't say any such thing. They didn't see him there, and I don't think anyone else did.

The crowd laughed.

Arnold—Your honor, have we got to take this whole crowd into this case?

Judge Roan—Gentlemen, there must be order or I will clear the courtroom.

Dorsey—Find the records. They will show I am right. I have got Lemmie Quinn's affidavit. I am just arguing this case on the evidence.

"Jim Conley is a liar, is he? He said Quinn was there and that he was there before Mary Phagan came. Frank had a mighty hard time remembering whether Quinn was there. When Quinn saw him at the police station and said he had been there, Frank said he would have to see his lawyers before deciding whether or not to make it public.

"Is Jim Conley telling the truth or telling a lie? You can't go hot and cold on him. Why was it Frank wanted to consult his lawyers?"

Arnold—I can find the record.

Dorsey—Yes, you can find it. You can find where Quinn swore half a dozen ways. He was the most anxious witness I ever saw on a stand, except for old man Holloway. He would tell that he was there if Frank said tell it. He would keep quiet if Frank said no.

"Oh, gentlemen, let me read you what a great lawyer said on this sort of evidence. I read the words of Judge Lochrane:

"'I do not take the mere words of witnesses. I take their acts.'

"And while I am on this subject I want to read you another opinion:

"'Evidence given by a witness has inherent strength which a jury can not disregard. But a statement has none.'"

Arnold: "Now, your honor, I have found the records and it bears out just what I said."

Arnold read from the testimony of Miss Corinthia Hall that she and Mrs. Freeman went to the pencil factory at 11:35 and left there at 11:45.

Arnold: "Mr. Dorsey asked her the question, 'You saw Lemmie Quinn at 5 minutes to 12 o'clock?' Answer: 'I don't remember what time it was. He told us he had been up to the factory and saw Frank. He said he was going to the matinee.'

"Lemmie Quinn swore several times he was at the factory at 12:20," Arnold continued, "and here it is that he said that he was in a pool parlor at 12:30, just after leaving the factory."

Judge Roan: "Mr. Dorsey, have you anything in contradiction to that?"

Dorsey: "Yes. I have plenty; that doesn't scare anybody."

Arnold: "I just want to call attention to the glaring errors. The little ones I don't care anything about. I won't interrupt him except on glaring misstatements. Life is too short."

Dorsey: "Yes, you will. You will interrupt me every time I am incorrect. You are too shrewd, too anxious to let anything go by. Don't tell this jury you are going to let me say things that are incorrect.

"Here is your table turned to the wall, having the time of Lemmie Quinn's arrival at 12:20. I have an affidavit here of this pet foreman of the metal department. He said he got there at from 12 to 12:20. Those girls went out of the factory at 11:45 o'clock. They walked up a block and down a block to the Busy Bee Cafe. There they saw Quinn.

"In the name of goodness, if Frank, according to his own statement, could leave the factory at 1:10 o'clock and get home at 1:20, couldn't these girls walk up a block and down a block and see Quinn in fifteen minutes?

"I know it hurts, but this table here which puts Lemmie Quinn at the factory from 12:20 to 12:22 is a fraud on its face. There is no greater farce in this case than their straining at this particular point, with the exception of Billy Owens' pantomime. And, oh, what a farce that was!

"Gentlemen of the jury, you need not try to consider their attempts to be accurate about the time Quinn says he was there, for Lemmie says himself he could not be positive. He says he thinks he got there some time between 12:20 and 12:30.

Mentions Girl Who Would Die for Frank.

"Ah, gentlemen of the jury, whenever a man gets to swearing too definite and too specifically about time, then the words of our friend Webster, which I quoted to you, are right—'He is not to be relied upon.'

"And can you truly consider the words of a man whom your reason tells you is straining to set the exact time?

"But let's pass on from this. I will not take the time to read you everything that Lemmie says he did. Let's pass on to the perjury charge which Arnold has so flippantly made. You saw these witnesses upon the stand. You heard their words. You noticed their manner, their attitude and their interest.

"Why, one of these ladies from the factory wanted to die for this man Frank."

A titter of laughter ran around the room, and deputies were forced to rap for order.

"When did you ever know of an employee being so enamoured of her employer that she was willing to die for him, if their friendship was purely platonic? I know enough about human nature—I know enough of the passions which surge in the breast of mortal man—to know that this poor woman's anxiety to put her neck into the noose to save him were born of something besides platonic love.

"When you see a woman so passionately devoted to her employer—so anxious to die for him—you may know and you can gamble on it that there is something stronger there than platonic love. It must be a passion born of something beyond the relation which should exist between a married man—an employer—and his woman employee.

"Ah, gentlemen of the jury, we could have got witness after witness who would have gone upon the stand and sworn things about this man. There were people who would have perjured themselves. There were witnesses who came upon the stand for the defendant who on the face of their testimony perjured themselves.

"Take this little Bauer boy. Remember his testimony before he took that automobile ride with Montag to the office of Arnold & Arnold. Before dinner he could remember each detail, but after dinner, after he had taken that ride with old Sig Montag, he had a lapse of memory. Old man Sig must have told this little boy about the Hard 'hell preacher down in South Georgia who had his congregation pray for rain. They prayed and prayed, and after a while, like old Sam Jones would have said, the Lord sent a trash mover, a gully washer.

Boy Must Have Overdone It."

"It rained and it rained until they had more water than they knew what to do with. Then the old hardshell preacher said: 'Brethren, it looks like we have a leetle overdone it.' So Montag must have whispered into Bauer's ear, 'You have a leetle overdone it.'

"And, after dinner, this little boy didn't know anything. But was that all? Why, gentlemen of the jury, before dinner that boy even remembered where his watch lay.

"Do you believe that? Talk about perjury! Willful foolishness, because an honest jury knows that it was not true. They brought in that machinist Lee. He was willing to swear to anything and there was not a man in the sound of his voice that didn't know he was telling an untruth. He wrote and signed a statement about Duffy's injuries. I brought it here and it was written in typewriting and didn't even have his name on it.

"They thought we could not find Duffy and thought you didn't have sense enough to know the first thing you do in a case like that is to wrap something around it to stop the loss of blood.

"I have never seen a case yet where women were so suborned as in this. Take this woman Fleming, his stenographer. They put her up and she swore Frank had a general good character. She only swore to what he had done in her presence when they cross-examined her. We don't contend Frank tried to seduce every girl in the factorwy. But he did pick them out. He picked out Mary Phagan and was called.

"Gentlemen, he got the wrong girl and he was called. And this stenographer said she only knew what he did to her. She testified that Frank's business Saturday morning was to make out the financial sheet. Mr. Arnold said immediately he didn't have time and she jumped at it like a duck at a June bug. Mr. Arnold was so nervous he would not let me finish the cross-examination, and interpolated that remark to guide her.

"It was unfair and not according to law and practice. But he got away with it. And then she turned right around and in the next breath said that she had never said Frank was working on the financial sheet Saturday morning.

"Oh, gentlemen, can you let a poor little girl go to her death and set her murderer free on such evidence as this? If you do, it is time to stop going through the process of summoning a jury.

"Perjury! When did old man Starnes and Pat Campbell stoop to that. And suspicions! Why didn't we get old man Lee and Gantt instead of Frank? Why didn't we get Conley? We tried it, but there was absolutely no case against either. But there is a perfect case against this man. But, oh, you cried 'Perjury.' But it is not worth fifteen cents until you put your fingers on something specific.

"And here, gentlemen, right before your very eyes, in black and white, the testimony ofthis woman, Fleming, shows that they perjured her.

"Do you tell me when that factory closes on Saturday afternoons that this man with the handsome wife that he possesses, this college graduate, who likes to read and play cards, who likes to see baseball games, would spend his time there, using the data that Schiff prepared on Saturday afternoons when he could do it Saturday morning? No, sir. Miss Fleming was right. She didn't stay there to work often on Saturday afternoons."

The jury was allowed to retire for a few minutes. When they returned, Dorsey resumed his argument.

"Now, gentlemen, I submit that this man made that inance sheet Saturday morning. I am not going to fatigue you with my reasons. It is unnecessary. If he did make that sheet on Saturday afternoon, he did it thinking of an alibi. But don't tell me that because he might have done this on Saturday afternoon with a penmanship that showed no nervousness proves an alibi.

"If he could go home into the bosom of his family after such an atrocious crime, he could have made that sheet. But he wouldn't have done it if Schiff had not gotten up the data. He had done it fifty-two times a year for five or six years. If he would do additional work on that Saturday afternoon, it could only have been with a sinister purpose.

Witness Afraid Even to Identify Handwriting.

"In speaking of perjury, his mother said anybody ought to identify his handwriting."

Dorsey held up the photograph of the sample of handwriting Frank wrote for the police.

"Yet the man they put up to identify his handwriting was so afraid he might do Frank an injury that he wouldn't venture a guess. Grant that he did go home to his wife and those old people—his parents-in-law—and maintain a stoical countenance. Grant that he did make that sheet, which he could make up with his eyes shut. Grant that he did unlock the safe, a thing that he had done every day for years.

"But when he went to run the elevator; when he went to nail up that back door; he wavered; he paled when he talked to the police, and trembled on Darley's knee as he rode to the police station.

"He could sit in the hall and read a joke about a baseball umpire, but the frivolity annoyed the visitors at his home. It was the same kind of frivolity Henry Clay Beattie displayed when he stood beside the automobile that was stained with the blood of his wife. His joke was uttered only in annoyance; it jarred.

"But whether or not he made up that financial sheet, while waiting for old Jim to come and burn the body, one thing I grant he did. Don't forget the envelope; don't forget the way the letter was quoted, that letter he wrote to his uncle in Brooklyn, that letter that begins, 'I trust that this finds you and dear Tante well.' He had no wealthy relations in Brooklyn! That old millionaire uncle was mighty near there when Frank told old Jim Conley: 'Why should I hand? I have wealthy relatives in Brooklyn!'

Dorsey finished reading the letter and then said:

"Here is a sentence pregnant with significance. It bears the earmarks of a guilty conscience. He wasn't trembling when he wrote. He is capable and smart, but here is a sentence that is a revelation. Here is a document I concede was written after little Mary Phagan, who died for virtue's sake, was lying mutilated in that dark cold basement."

At this juncture Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan, began to cry.

Dorsey read from the letter:

"'It is too short a time since you left for anything startling to have developed down here.'

"'Startling' and 'too short a time.' Those are the words that incriminate. That little sentence itself shows that the crime was committed in an incredibly short time.

"Tell me, honest men, courageous men of Georgia, that this phrase penned to his uncle that afternoon did not come from a stricken conscience. 'Too short a time since you left for anything to develop down here.'

"What do you think of that, honest men? Then notice what he writes about the thin, gray line of veterans facing the chilly weather, as if that old millionaire uncle of his traveling around Germany for his health, as if he cared for these old heroes in gray! Ample and reliable authority says that over-expression is an indication of guilt. Tell me that this old man, who was just preparing to sail for Europe, cared for these old heroes in gray—this wealthy old man who wanted to see the financial sheet. 'Too short a time'—yes, he said it was too short a time for anything to develop down here. But, gentlemen of the jury, there was something startling to develop, and it happened within the space of 30 minutes. There is nothing new in the factory to report, but there was something new in the cellar. There was something to report, and the time wasn't too short for it to happen.

"You tell me that letter was written in the morning? Do you believe it? Why, they haven't even tried to say that. I tell you that that letter shows on its face that something startling had happened, and I tell you that that rich uncle did not care the snap of his finger about the thin, gray line of veterans.

"Ah, yes, he had wealthy relatives in Brooklyn. That's what old Jim Conley said he told him. And his people lived in Brooklyn, and old Jim never would have known that if Frank had not told him. And they had at least $20,000 in cool cash in the bank; and he had a brother-in-law employing two or three people, at least, and we don't know how many more. And if his rich uncle was not in Brooklyn, he was near there.

"All right, let's go a step farther. On April 28 he wired Adolph Montag at the Imperial Hotel in New York: 'You may have read in Atlanta papers of factory girl found dead Sunday morning in cellar of pencil factory.'

"Yes, gentlemen of the jury, in the cellar of the pencil factory. There's where he placed her, and that is where he expected her to be found. And the thought of it welled up in his mind that Monday morning, April 28, before he had been arrested, and he wired Montag forestalling what he knew would certainly and surely happen unless the Atlanta detectives were corrupt and would suppress it.

Compliments Detectives.

"But, be it said to your credit, Starnes; to your credit, Campbell, and you, too, Rosser and Black, that you had the manhood and the courage to do your duty and roll the charge up to this man, protected as he was by wealth and influence.

"And notice what else he said in this telegram. Notice the credit he gives to the police: 'The police will eventually solve it.' And be it said to thec redit of the Atlanta police department, they did solve it. 'Assure my uncle I am all right in case he asks. Our company has case well in hand.' Maybe he did think when he got that fellow Scott that his company had it well in hand.

"I tell you there is an honest man—this fellow Scott. If there was a slush fund in this case—and witnesses have said there was no such fund—this man Scott could have gotten it. Not at first, maybe, but he could have gotten it later on. But Scott knew his duty, and he has done it. No wonder Frank could telegraph that his company had the case well in hand, for Scott's first words could not have suited him better had he wished for them. They were, 'The Pinkerton's always work arm and arm with the police.' This suited Frank well. It was just what he wanted. He wanted to know what the police thought he wanted to know what they were going to do, and this worked well, until the chain began to tighten.

"And Haas—and he is nobody's fool—when he sa wthe trend of the case, he opened the negotiations; he gave Scott the opportunity by saying, 'Now let us have what you get first.'

"But let us pass on from that. You tell me that letter and that telegram are not significant? That the work on this financial sheet is no significant? That Schiff's testimony as to the work on that financial sheet is not significant?

"Frank himself was not satisfied. He is as smart as his lawyers, too.

"He realized that he would have to go out and beyond the evidence, because he knew it was all bunk; and he tried to show you that he did write the financial sheet. Frank did write that letter Saturday afternoon, and he did write that telegram Monday; but he did not do any work on the financial sheet after Saturday at noon. I ask you twelve men if those documents and letters don't bear the impress of murder?

"And they still cry perjury. I just thought of another case, when that man could not identify Frank's handwriting that his own mother said was his. That was perjury, and there was perjury in the testimony of Bower and Lee. Mrs. Carson said she has worked there three years, and Arnold asked her a question that he would not ask a younger woman. He asked her about seeing blood around the toilet and in the dressing rooms. She said she saw it there very often. Then she talked about Conley being on the fourth floor that Monday. I pinned her down to say that Frank was there at the same time. It was then that Frank leaned over and said, 'Be good boy, Jim,' and Jim, remembering his wealthy relatives in Brooklyn, and his promises of money, said, 'Yes, sir, boss; I will.'

"Surely the officers could not suborn Conley at that time. And she says she never saw the blood by the water cooler; she said she didn't look at it because she didn't like to look at things like that. But another lady on the stand says she did go back and look at it; that she was with her.

"But back again to Conley. If he had committed that crime and had not had Leo M. Frank and his promises back of him, would he have gone back to that factory every day and remained there until Thursday? They said they were going to put up all the girls on the fourth floor. But they didn't do it until we called their four-flush and put in witnesses to corroborated their witness, Miss Jackson, about the misconduct of this man.

"Miss Small, also on the fourth floor, corroborated Conley. She said she saw him on the fourth floor Monday. Now, why did Frank go to the fourth floor so often Monday and Tuesday? Because he knew Conley was up there, and he wanted to be sure the negro was not talking. Conley told Miss Carson that Frank was as innocent as an angel in heaven. We said he was merely doing what he had promised to do—protect his employer. Mr. Rosser characterized the statement as a dirty suggestion. It was, and I accept it, but it is true, and you men would not sit here and see that negro hang for a crime Leo M. Frank committed.

"When Conley went up to the second floor in response to Frank's signal, Frank said, 'Did you see anything?' and he said, 'I saw two girls come up, but there ain't but one of them come down.' And then Frank knew that he would have to take this negro into his confidence.

Shaking his finger at Frank, Dorsey continued:

"And you told old Jim Conley to protect you! And he tried to do it. It is infamous to try to have Jim Conley hanged for a crime that Leo Frank did. Gentlemen, I haven't got to the State's case yet; I am just cutting away some of the underbrush this defense has planted in this forest of oaks. They have played the detectives. The only thing to the discredit of the police department is that it allowed itself to be intimidated by the influence of this man and his friends and his big lawyers.

Didn't Have Courage To Put Frank in Cell.

"When they took him down there guilty of this red-handed murder they didn't put him in a cell like they did Newt Lee and Jim Conley. It took time for them to get their courage up to the point of locking him up as he should have been. Old John Black—Mr. Rosser likes to brag about what he did to him—but he didn't make so much off of him after all. Black's methods are somewhat like Mr. Rosser's. If Black had had Frank in the position that Mr. Rosser had Jim Conley, this whole trial might have been obviated with a confession."

Dorsey turned and pointed at Frank.

"You didn't get counsel a moment too soon. You called for Darley and you called for Harris; you called for Rosser and Arnold, and it took them all to bolster up your nerve. Gentlemen of the jury, you know I am telling you the truth. The only thing against the police is that this man, who had just snuffed out the life of this little girl, was given too much consideration. His able counsel and the glamour of wealth that surrounded him, overawed the police. I had nothing to do with it, but I honor them for the way they went after Minola McKnight. I don't know whether they want me to apologize for them or not; but do you think that in protecting the people from such crimes as this the detectives are acting like they are at a tea party?

"Should they have the manners of a dancing master? If you do, you don't know anything about it. Once get an old 'possum dog on the trail, and you can't call him off. So it is with Starnes and Black; they knew Albert McKnight wouldn't have told those young men at the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company that story about his wife unless it were true. They went after Minola. They stuck to the trail. They smoked her out. Minola's friends got a writ of habeas corpus. Do you think if Mr. Haas had come to me with a writ of habeas corpus to release Frank I would have done it? I would have said it was none of my business.

"The next time the police have to use strong methods in an effort to protect the people by going after a red-handed murderer, I won't usurp their authority or the authority of the judges. I haven't anything to do with the police department, or the functions of the judges. I am responsible only for the office of Solicitor General for the term to which I was elected. I honor Mr. Charley Hill; I am as proud that I have succeeded him as I am that I was given this place by a vote of the people. He was honorable and strong; but I tell you gentlemen, no man is my pattern; I follow the dictates of my own conscience."

Tears Come to Dorsey's Eyes.

Mr. Dorsey raised his voice and tears came into his eyes.

"If there is one thing I am proud of during my term of office, it is that I joined hand and glove with the police; and when your influence (turning to the defense) tried to get Jim Conley indicted by the grand jury, I stood out against it. If that is treason, make the most of it. If you don't want me to do it, get somebody else.

"Mr. Hill was a noble man. He had the courage of a Caesar and the eloquence of a Demosthenes. I have relished a hundred times that he was here making the speech to you that I am making.

"He would have stripped the hides off of you (pointing to the defense). Such talk as that doesn't terrify me. It doesn't disturb the serenity of the conscience in everything I have done in the prosecution of this man. Let's get back to the talk on perjury.

"Don't get up here and call everybody a liar without giving the specific instances. Take the evidence of Mrs. Small. She said she saw Frank and Miss Rebecca Carson walking along and that she stopped Frank and had him O. K. a ticket. She said it was Miss Rebecca Carson she was with. She says that Mrs. Carson was not there at all. Mrs. Carson said she was there. Mrs. Small said she saw Conley standing there by the elevator and that Frank must have seen him—that Frank passed within 4 feet of him. She says that Jim was doing nothing; that he was standing by the elevator with his hand on a truck.

"Mrs. Small also tells us that the elevator shook the entire building. She said he couldn't helped but hear it if the machinery was not running. She said: 'You might not hear it if the machinery was in full operation, if you were not paying attention to it, but if you listened you could hear it.'

"Now here is another thing. Mrs. Carson had already sworn positively that she never went back into the metal room to see that blood. Mrs. Small said that on Wednesday a crowd of them from the fourth floor went down out of pure curiosity to see those spots, and when I asked her who went with her, lo and behold the first person she mentioned was Mrs. Carson. She said she was sure she was there; she knew she was there. And when I asked why they went there, and why Mrs. Carson went there particularly, she said 'Curiosity sent us.'

Somebody Has Lied, Dorsey Asserts.

"Now, gentlemen of the jury, somebody, and I put it up to you, has lied. If this case is founded on perjury, it has been boiled until the pot is black.

"The truth is, there has not been a single instance where evidence was needed that someone has not come in to bolster it up.

"Now, let's pass on a little bit. I want to discuss briefly the writing of these letters found beside the body of the girl. If these letters were not the order of an overruling Providence, I would agree that they were the silliest things I ever heard of. But, gentlemen of the jury, these notes bear an intrinsic knowledge of this crime.

"This man Frank, by the language of these notes, in attempting to fix the guilt upon another, has indelibly fixed it upon himself."

The Solicitor repeated this statement.

"The pad, the paper the notes were written upon; the fact that there was a note fixed the guilt upon him. Tell me that a negro who, after having killed a white girl, ravished and outraged her, would have taken the time to have written these notes? And even if he did write them, would he have written them upon a scratch pad which is found only in an office?

"You tell me that a man like Jim Conley would have ravished this girl with the knowledge that Frank was in the house? You tell me that this Jim Conley, even though he has been as drunk as a sot could be, would have taken the time to write these notes?

"I tell you, gentlemen of the jury, it can not be true.

"You say that the fact those notes were written was foolish. It was foolish, but it was a mistake. Murder is a mistake. What man ever committed murder who did not make a mistake? And what man making the greatest mistake in the world would not make a lesser mistake in trying to cover up? Those notes were the lesser mistake.

"Scott said that when Leo M. Frank talked to him about the girl coming to the factory and asking him about the metal that he said, 'I don't know.' And now he says that he told her, 'No.' Arnold recognized the damage in the statement 'I don't know' getting in.

"Language of Notes Clears Conley."

"Leo Frank said in his statement again and again 'chatting' and 'chat.' Conley said that when Frank told him he wanted to watch for him that Frank said he wanted to have a 'chat.' Jim Conley said here time and again, 'I have done it,' but in the notes found near the body he said, 'did it.' Do you tell me that negro would have written the word 'did' unless it was dictated to him?

"Do you tell me that negro would have taken the time to carry that girl away back there and hide her body if he had knocked her down the hole, and then stopped to write those notes?

"No," shouted Dorsey, turning to Frank, "that child was murdered on the second floor and you wanted to get her into the cellar, just like you found her in the cellar, as you said in that telegram to Montag.

"Conley said once in his statement that when he met a man on the street that he knew, the man looked at him he though he though 'I done it.' Conley used that expression at least twenty times. He said 'I done it' when he closed the door, and in several other places I can't find just now. He didn't use the word 'did' one time.

"In the first note, the expression 'I went to make water and that long tall black negro pushed me down the hole.' You knew that toilet was back there on the second floor (addressing Frank), and you knew that was where that little girl met her death. And you knew that metal room was right back there, too.

"You tell me that negro would have written those words. Where was it she was going to make water on the first floor? Yet you tell me there is nothing in circumstantial evidence when these things creep in.

"When you wrote this note (turning to Frank), you said yourself that you had the original of the note before you, and you said yourself that you knew Conley could write because he had written you time and time again, trying to borrow money, and yet you sat there with the original of that note before you and Conley's own handwriting, the handwriting you had seen often enough to be familiar with it, and you didn't tell those officers that Conley wrote the notes.

"I don't want you to convict this man unless you believe him guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, but I don't want you to let your verdict be governed by the opinion of a crank, but by the facts.

"Arnold and Rosser would say frequently, 'Are you going to convict this man on that, on this?'—selecting some little isolated point.

Chain Strong Enough To Hang Anybody.

"Well, I don't want you to, but on all the facts—the chain that is unbroken and not by isolated instances, and I say that when you take them all together you have a cable that ought to hang anybody.

"I don't ask that he be convicted on this isolated instance or that, but all bound together make a cable that is as strong as is possible for the ingenuity of man to make.

"I don't know whether the statement of Frank's will rank along with that statement of the celebrated pervert Oscar Wilde or not. He is brilliant. If you take his statement and just follow it you never would convict him. You never would convict anyone that way. But listen to this: 'I sat in my office counting over the money that had been left over.'" Dorsey read from Frank's statement. "He wasn't talking about the petty cash," Dorsey continued. "He was talking about the money that had been left over from the payroll of $1,100. We don't know to this day how much that was. We don't know how big a roll it could have made, though Jim Conley said he saw a roll of $200.

"And he was trying to get old Jim to go down into the basement and burn the body of that little girl. Just as sure as the smoke curled from that stack toward the heavens, old Jim would have been there without a shadow of a defense. Frank would have been there with the detectives. Jim would have hanged for a crime that this man committed in his lust.

"But old Jim was too wise. He wrote the notes, but, drunk or sober, he wouldn't be entrapped like that. I do not doubt that when Frank handed him that roll of money it was like the kiss of Judas Iscariot when he kissed the Saviour, and then betrayed Him for 30 pieces of silver.

"I am going to show you that this man had long planned not murder, but to get this little girl to yield to his lust. Let me do it now.

"Back yonder in March this little Turner boy saw him making advances to Mary Phagan. Did that innocent little boy from the country lie? This little girl that came here from the Home of the Good Shepherd, she heard Frank speak to Mary Phagan and put his hands on her. She may have lost her virtue, but she is nothing but a child. Did she lie, this little girl?

Quotes From Same Poem as Rosser.

"Then there is Gantt. He quit the factory rather than make good a dollar that was charged he was short. Did he lie about Frank's inquiring of the little girl? Yesterday Mr. Rosser quoted from a poem of Bobbie Burns, the line was, 'Tis human to step aside.' I want to quote a line from that same poem, 'There is no telling what a man will do when he has the lassie.'

"When convenience is snug, I tell you gentlemen, there is no telling what a pervert will do when goaded by his passion. You tell me this brilliant young man, who looked over that payroll 52 times a year, saw the name of Mary Phagan every time, then when she was dead had to get his books to find out her name? He coveted that little girl way back in March. I have no doubt those little girls swore the truth when they said they saw him making advances. I would not be surprised if he did not hang around and try to get her to yield. I would not be surprised if he didn't get Gantt out of the way because he was an obstacle to his scheme.

"He knew the day before she was probably coming. He went and told old Jim Conley, who had watched for you so many Saturday afternoons while you and Schiff were making up that finance sheet. When Helen Ferguson came and asked for Mary Phagan's money, I wouldn't be surprised if he did not refuse to give it to her because he had already told old Jim to come and watch.

"Frank's plans were fixed. Ah, gentlemen, then Saturday comes, and it is a reasonable tale that old Jim tells. He says, 'I done it just like this.' He doesn't say, 'I did.' He says he 'done it' just as the brilliant factory superintendent told him to. This thing passion works in a terrible way. Good people don't know how the mind of a libertine works. They don't know of the planning, plotting and waiting. Way back in March Frank had his eyes upon her. He was infatuated with her and did not have the will power to resist.

"You can twist and wabble all you want (Dorsey turned to Frank and shook his finger at him), but you told Detective Scott that you did not know her. Notwithstanding what you have said here, notwithstanding what your witnesses have said, you knew her.

"And tell me, gentlemen of the jury, has this little Ferguson girl lied? Has she been suborned by Starnes? Has she come here and deliberately perjured herself? I tell you that is a charge that can not stand. His refusal to give Helen Ferguson Mary Phagan's envelope is an indication that he was plotting. And old Jim Conley's tale will stand, for Frank himself corroborates Conley in many things.

Dorsey Attacks Frank's Statement

"'1 p. m.—Frank leaves the factory.' It looks mighty nice on the chart. Turn that chart to the wall, Mr. Sheriff. Let it stay turned to the wall. That statement is refuted by the defendant himself when he didn't realize the importance of this time proposition.

"Frank's statement at police headquarters, taken by G. C. Febuary on Monday, April 28, says. 'I didn't lock the door that morning. The mail was coming up. I locked it when I started home to lunch at 1:10 o'clock.'

"Up goes your alibi, punctured by your own statement when you didn't realize its importance. Yet these honorable gentlemen, for the purpose of impressing your minds, print in big lefters on this chart he left the factory at 1 o'clock. If he swore when he was on the stand the other day that he left the factory at 1 o'clock it was because he saw the importance of this time point, and had to leave there ten minutes earlier than he said he had at the police station before he had had time to confer with his lawyer, Mr. Luther Z. Rosser."

AN ANNOUNCEMENT OF VITAL IMPORTANCE TO PIANO BUYERS

THE WESTER MUSIC CO., 64 Peachtree Street, Desire to Announce the Opening of Their "Once-a-Year" Clearance at 8:30 Monday, August 25.

PIANOS OF HIGH GRADE AND ACKNOWLEDGED REPUTATION

Our Entire Stock Sacrificed—Everything Goes—Nothing Reserved—Every Person Interested in the Purchase of an Instrument Should Read Carefully, As It Concerns Them Most.

PROMPT ACTION WILL BRING REWARD

This Is Our Annual Clearance Sale of Fine Pianos—Your Opportunity to Save From $100 to $250 in Your Piano Purchase. Terms Are Made as Pleasing as the Prices. Opening Evenings.

In announcing this gigantic clearance sale of fine pianos, uprights, grands, player pianos and organs, we wish to take the piano buying public into our confidence, making a plain statement of facts, telling our good reason for sacrificing our entire stock. All thoughtful people realize the fact that in conducting a business the magnitude of ours, that a great number of discontinued styles, sample pianos, rental pianos, etc., will accumulate during the year, besides countless numbers of good used pianos taken in exchange for grands and players. They are in first-class condition, and must be disposed of to make room for large shipments of fall goods already beginning to arrive. In order to open the fall season with an entire new stock, we have decided to include in this sale every instrument in our building, grands, players and players, including such well-known makes as A. B. Chase, Chickering & Sons, Knabe Brothers, Ivers & Pond, Kurtzmann, Kranich & Bach, Bush & Gerts, Hoffman and others. In players, A. B. Chase Aristano (grand and uprights), Emerson Angelus, Kurtzmann Angelus, The Angelus, The Auto de Luxe, The Autoplano, Koehler and Newton.

Such an array of high-grade instruments, ranging between 350 and 400, has never been offered before to the good people of Georgia. Remember, nothing is reserved, and in order to move this stock in a limited space of time we have reduced the price in many cases from one-third to one-half of the original price. All these points taken into consideration makes it possible for any family to have an instrument in their home, as our low prices and easy terms place them within reach of all. Your credit is good at The Wester Music Company. If you do not care to pay cash we can arrange terms to suit your convenience.

One Price; Plain Figures.

Every piano will bear two tags, one will be our regular one price tag, the other the clearance sale tag. Thus you may see at a glance just what can be saved on your purchase. Look for the blue tag.

Here are three sample pianos. Large size mahogany cases, fully guaranteed. Instruments must be seen to be appreciated. Regular price $275, your choice $127.

Three standard grade upright cabinet grands, mahogany, oak or walnut; fully guaranteed. Regular price $300, your choice of three different styles and makes $187.

Five standard makes. Five large size uprights, mahogany or oak cases, new styles, guaranteed for ten years, regular price $350, your choice $236; $10 cash and $6 per month.

Five large size cabinet grand upright sample pianos, mahogany or dark oak cases, fully guaranteed, regular price $375. These are going at $246; $10 cash and $7 per month. They are new.

Six large size uprights; your choice oak or mahogany case; guaranteed for ten years; three different styles and makes; regular price $375. They are standard makes. Your choice for $268. Easy terms.

Five large size cabinet grand mahogany cases; three different styles and makes; guaranteed for ten years; regular price $400, your choice $276; $15 cash and $7 per month. They are new.

Ten large size uprights, mahogany cases, different styles and makes, guaranteed for ten years; regular price $450, sale price $292. Easy payments can be arranged.

Four large size, mahogany cases, best makes; fully guaranteed; regular price $500; slightly shop-worn, but absolutely perfect. They will be taken quickly at $269.

Six large size upright cabinet grands, high grade mahogany and walnut cases, regular price $550 your choice $308, $312, $318. Fully guaranteed.

Three high grade grand pianos, mahogany cases, regular price $700, $750 and $900; your choice for $468, $612 and $642. Guaranteed for ten years. They are new. One Steinway slightly used, good as new. Beautiful mahogany case, regular price $1,150. Must be seen to be appreciated. Will be offered at our regular discount. If you need a grand piano, don't miss this opportunity.

Nine player pianos, mahogany cases, some of them slightly shopworn, but in first-class condition. Some are new. They are guaranteed for five years. The best makes are included, regular prices, $550, $600, $650, $700, $750 and $800. All 88-note and new styles. Your choice, $418, $368, $396, $436, $487, $512. You must see the pianos to appreciate the values.

One large size mahogany case player piano, one of the best makes, regular price $850, slightly used. A big bargain for $256.

Fifty slightly used upright pianos. Oak, walnut, mahogany and ebony cases. Included in this lot will be found Vose & Sons, Hallet & Davis, Kranich & Bach, Painter & Ewing, Packard Conway, Bush & Gerts; Knabe Bros.; Sterling, Whitney, Cooper, Hoffman and others. Many of them are as good as new. They are all in splendid condition. Former prices ranging from $360 to $550. Your choice while they last from $75 to $268. They are guaranteed and you can make no mistake in selecting any one of them. Any second-hand piano that we sell will be taken back within one year and apply the price as part payment for a new piano.

Second-hand Organs.

Twenty-seven organs, including Carpenter, Estey, Wilcox & White, Packard, Chicago Cottage, Kimball, Mason & Hamlin and others. Former prices from $65 to $125. Your choice for $12, $17, $21, $26, 28, $31, $37, $42. All in good order and guaranteed.

Every instrument can be found on our floors and our personal guarantee goes with each instrument. Remember that we can arrange easy payments, if you don't care to pay cash. Out of town orders given special attention.

Any purchaser living nearer Macon than Atlanta will find the same bargains at our store, No. 157 Cotton avenue, Macon, Ga.

Store will be open evenings.

THE WESTER MUSIC COMPANY,
64 Peachtree Street, Atlanta, Ga.
157 Cotton Avenue, Macon, Ga.

THAW BASES HOPES OF ULTIMATE FREEDOM ON ENDLESS LEGAL TANGLE

POEM THAW WROTE IN MATTEAWAN

MATTEAWAN, N. Y., Aug. 23.—The following verses were written by Harry Kendall Thaw in his room at Matteawn and found in the waste-paper basket beside his reading table last December:

"There are lights aflame on Broadway,
There are hopes and lives undone;
There are debts of sin no man can pay,
And Broadway hates the sun.

"There are vain regrets on Broadway,
There are secret sighs and tears;
For one must smile as well as pray,
And the weakling meets with jeers."

Fugitive From Matteawan, Backed by Family's Millions, Will Utilize Every Technicality to Prevent Deportation From Dominion of Canada.

SHERBROOKE, QUEBEC, Aug. 23. With Harry Thaw's case now in the courts of Canada, the prediction made that it would be months—years, perhaps eternity—before the slayer of Stanford White is again in the jurisdiction of New York State is strengthened.

His family, wealthy and powerful, has rushed to his defense. He has unlimited resources to fight the legal battle against his deportation from Canadian soil. When the first writ of habeas corpus was granted, it assured him the right to appeal his cause to the highest Canadian court.

It is believed that this litigation can be made to last over years. It will be impossible to deny him bail in the Dominion, for he is a lunatic only in New York State. His status now is that he is simply considered an undesirable by Canadian immigration authorities, who, it is thought, may override the courts and deport him.

Should the courts of Canada finally rule against him, his case might be taken up from Washington. Even then if he were finally deported, should he be sent to any other State than New York, he could fight extradition there, and there are many eminent lawyers who believe that it is absolutely impossible to bring him back into New York then.

Probably Considered These Facts.

All these things probably had been considered when Thaw made his daring escape from Matteawan Asylum, when he dashed across the Connecticut border, then through the State into New Hampshire and from New Hampshire into the Dominion of Canada.

Thaw knows well the law's delay. He remembers his long period in the Tombs before he was first brought to trial for the slaying of White. He remembers the long fight for life and liberty then. He remembers the enforced wait after the first mistrial. He remembers the weary days of his second hearing.

He remembers the slow progress of his cause during his legal efforts to get his release from Matteawan Knowing these things and recognizing that there was hardly a bare possibility that bail would be denied him, he turned toward Canada rather than seek safety at sea, as his pursuers thought he surely would do.

It was probably due to this realization that he accepted his arrest at Coaticook, Quebec, coolly and that he awaits the issue of his habeas corpus proceedings just as coolly now.

Secures Talented Lawyers.

He is represented in his application for habeas corpus proceedings by W. L. Shurtleff and Colonel H. R. Fraser, one of the most talented lawyers of Eastern Canada. He is thoroughly buoyed up in the belief that the Canadian Government will never order his deportation or extradition.

"I have studied every legal phase of my case and have arrived at the belief that I am safe here," said Thaw. "My plans did not alone include my physical escape. I looked into the legal feature to establish my status in any other State than New York and any other country than the United States. I am not a dangerous man. I do not seek vengeance. My wife, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, need not fear me. Nor need anyone else fear me.

"All I want is peaceful and legal liberty. I feel that I am perfectly safe. I have studied law ever since I was admitted to Matteawan, and I believe that I am qualified to speak in this matter.

"Statements to the effect that I only sought liberty to kill are senseless They are so ridiculous that I won't talk of them. I have the kindest feelings toward the people of Canada, and will retain such feelings, no matter what action the Dominion Government takes, but I hope that they do not deport me. Detention in an insane asylum is a living death. It is enough to make a maniac out of a perfectly sane man."

Refuses to Betray Friends.

Asked for a detailed story of his flight, he refused.

"Yes, I was the man they spotted in Lenox, Mass., said he. "But from that point on I must say nothing. I won't betray my friends."

Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, sister of Thaw, arrived soon after his arrest and immediately sought her brother. Thaw sent word to Roger O'Mara, the Pittsburg (Pa.) private detective, who has been his counsellor since youth, to rush here on the first train.

He said that he wanted to get the fight over with. His first trepidation came with the news that District Attorney Conger, of Dutchess County, New York, and Dr. Kieb, of the Matteawan Institution, would come to cooperate with the United States authorities in an effort to have Thaw deported bask to New York, or extradited.

Plans for the court battle in Thaw's behalf were carefully made by Mr. Shurtleff and Colonel Fraser and hopes to have his release ordered by Judge Globensky and plans to leave immediately for Quebec if he gets out. He intends to sail for France if he gets his freedom, so that he will be sure to be safe. Ultimately he hopes to have his legal freedom established so that he can return to Pittsburg.

Contend Thaw Is Tourist.

Among the grounds upon which the Thaw lawyers put into their plea for their client's liberty is that he is only a tourist passing through Canada, and they point to the case of Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, as a precedent.

They contend that Johnson was under conviction of an infraction of the United States law, whereas Thaw has not broken any law. They contended that Johnson was a fugitive from justice, whereas Thaw is a fugitive from an institution for the insane.

They pointed to Thaw's behavior to uphold the contention that no matter what his condition in the past, he is now sane and rational. The facts that Thaw has not broken any Canadian laws and that no indictment exists against him across the border were emphasized. Thaw offered many suggestions to his lawyers and in a way seemed to be their pilot. He looked very solemn and impressive as he gave his opinions of his own case.

"My idea is that speed is the requisite thing," Thaw told them.

News Unnerves Prisoner.

The Canadian Government and the United States Government were both represented by able counsel who resisted Thaw's efforts to gain his liberty on a writ of habeas corpus. They contended that the law governing Thaw's case is very plain and they pointed to precedents.

In fact, it was reported that Acting Superintendent of Immigration Blair in Ottawa had been counseled by the Ministry of Justice that Thaw should be deported at once. When Thaw heard this report he trembled and became pale. He was unnerved by the news and showed it.

The presence in Sherbrooke of the most spectacular and sensational prisoner in the world made a gala occasion. Not one of the Provincial fairs which are being held throughout Eastern Canada at this time could vie with Thaw as an attraction. Great crowds came into Sherbrooke from the surrounding country.

Families gathered about the jail, hoping to get a glimpse of the well-known prisoner if he was taken to the courthouse. Some came a distance of 100 miles to see Thaw. The street on which the jail is located was jammed.

Glad to Please Curious.

This curiosity tickled Thaw immensely. He said he did not want to disappoint anyone who really wanted to see what he looked like.

Mr. Shurtleff was resentful against Justice of the Peace Dupuis, of Coaticook, who held Thaw on the charge of being a fugitive and sent him here for further examination.

"We contend that Justice of the Peace Dupuis acted illegally," declared Shurtleff. "He exceeded his authority. He had no right to hold Thaw."

Colonel Fraser assured Thaw that conspiracy is not an extraditable offense and that he need not feel any great alarm over the fact that a warrant charging Thaw with conspiring to gain his liberty is on its way here from Dutchess County. He did not give such optimistic assurances about deportation, however.

Thaw lost no time in arranging to secure cash. He telegraphed to a banker relative in Pittsburg (where the bulk of the Thaw fortune is invested) to send him money to fight his case.

Thaw faced the habeas corpus hearing coolly and confidently. Before going to court, he ate a hearty breakfast and dressed with minute care, evidently realizing that he would be gazed on by thousands on the short ride from the jail to the courthouse.

Smuggling Claim Advanced.

He had prepared a number of notes to guide his lawyers in their conduct of his case, and was evidently disappointed when they did not seem to give these notes great consideration.

An investigation of the manner in which Thaw came into possession of a railroad ticket for Detroit, Mich., is being made. The Dominion authorities are not satisfied that Thaw bought the ticket himself.

It was learned from an authoritative source that immigration officers who are here plan to arrest Thaw on the ground that he smuggled his way into Canada if he gets his freedom on a habeas corpus writ.

The village of St. Hermenigilde, where Thaw and his companions came into Canada from the United States, is not a port of entry.

Evelyn Thaw, Fearing Death, Breaking Down Under Strain

'How Can He Say He Loves Me When He'd Let Me Starve?'

LATEST photograp of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw posed especially for The Sunday American at her hotel in New York where, it is said, she is near a breakdown rfom fear that her husband will regain his liberty and attempt to do her violence, and a photograph of Harry Kendall Thaw, taken in his cell at Matteawan from which he escaped to aCnada, where he is using every legal means to prevent his deportation to the United States

COPYRIGHT BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

PHOTO BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

'He's a Paranoiac,' She Screams—Describes Her Sacrifice.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is breaking down under the fear that Harry K. Thaw may evade the law and succeed in reaching her. There were visible evidences of the strain under which she has been laboring since he escaped from Matteawan last Sunday when a Sunday American reporter saw her last night in the Hotel Brevoort.

Thaw's declaration from the jail in Sherbrooke that her return to the stage had prompted him to make a dash for liberty and that he loved her more than anything else in life were called to her attention.

"Good God!" she exclaimed. "How could that man say he loves me when he would have let me starve in the streets?"

"Do you love him?" she was asked.

"Love him! I love him as much as he loves me," was her derisive reply. "He wanted to keep me down after I had testified and sold my soul for him and I had done everything that a human being could do for a man; and now he makes this maudlin statement about love.

Never Knew Love's Meaning.

"He is a paranoiac, and he doesn't know what love is. He has never known the meaning of it as long as I have known him. As for taking care of me as any man who loved a woman would do, both he and his mother them me out, after I had saved him from the electric chair.

"Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw entered into an agreement with me at the time of the trial to provide me with $12,000 a year on condition that I would consent to an annulment of our marriage. I did consent, and the papers were drawn. Then his mother repudiated it. That was in June, 1912, and I have received no money from them since that time.

"Before that date I had received $70 a week and my rent. I had to dispose of pictures and scrape and save to live, and I finally came to the conclusion that I had something within myself, that I could prove I possessed the gift of making my own living, which is a gift after all.

Breaks Into Tears.

"I thank God that I have that gift or his mother would be jeering at me in the gutter," and Mrs. Thaw broke into tears.

"He wants to spoil my life and my work," she continued, turning to John Reilly, her counsel, who was in the room. "I told you that if I made a success he would want to injure me, and here he has stated that my success was the thing that impelled him to break for his liberty. He wants to injure me and he will bend everything to that end.

"I told you also," she added to her lawyer, "that he would not be free long before he would betray himself through his excessive egotism.

"But there is worse coming if he retains his liberty. Things will begin to happen when he gets his drink. He is going to do something desperate, I know, just as surely as I could foresee the things I have referred to. Wait until he gets drink in him—it is horrible to contemplate!" And Mrs. Thaw again broke down and sobbed.

"Desperate and Dangerous."

"Don't you think that you may be exaggerating because of your overwrought state of mind?" was asked.

"I wish it were so," she replied. "But anyone who thinks Harry Thaw will not be a desperate man when he gets the opportunity to satisfy his appetite for drink, knows nothing of him. I know him. Dr. Flint knows him. Judge Jerome knows him. He will be a desperate and dangerous man.

"This great State ought to be ashamed of itself to allow a paranoiac to make and unmake its institutions." Thaw was permitted liberties that no man in his position had ever before enjoyed. Thaw has not done it, it has been the Thaw money.

"Do you know that when I used to see him in the Tombs he used to be drunk on Scotch whisky? Let the Tombs officials deny it if they dare. I know it and they know it. Harry Thaw told me he could get all the liquor he wanted there."

Mr. Reilly warned his client that she was overtaxing her strength, but she persisted in unloading her mind.

Old Graveyard Must Give Way to Railroad

Milwaukee Line Is Compelled to Move Old Burial Ground Near For Alcohol.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Aug. 23.—Among various other activities the Milwaukee Railroad people have found themselves engaged in rebuilding their line across Iowa is that of moving a cemetery.

In securing a right-of-way near the Des Moines River it purchased an old burial ground, one long since abandoned. Among the bodies the railroad men have removed is one that had been buried seventy-five years. The remarkable state of preservation of clothing and lack of decay of the bones after such a long period has been a source of surprise to the men exhuming the bodies.

U. S. Officer Invents Airship Destroyer

Balloon Equipped With Explosives and Wire Feelers Will Protect War Craft.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Joseph Steinmetz, a retired lieutenant of artillery in the United States army, has just perfected an invention that is likely to interfere greatly with the effectiveness of the aeroplan in naval warfare. Steinmetz is now negotiating with the War Department for the use of his invention. It consists of a captive hydrogen ballon suspended over either an arsenal or battleship. It carries a large quantity of explosives, which would be touched off by any aircraft coming in contact with wires extended from it. The airship would at once be blown up.

Couple Will Re-wed To Gain $1,000,000

Ceremony by Mormon Judge Is Called Unsatisfactory by Administrators of Estate.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—In order to comply with the wishes of the administrators of the $1,000,000 estate of her father, the late Thomas R. Lamb, of Edinburgh, Scotland, Mrs. Anna B. Lamb-Wilson must be married to her husband again.

The husband is E. Douglas Wilson, of this city. He pursued Miss Lamb more the Pennsylvania Rubber Company, of an 10,000 miles across the United States and over the Pacific Ocean before he married her in Honolulu last April. The ceremony was performed by Judge Hernandez, whom Wilson says is a Mormon. This marriage, though legal, did not meet with the approval of the administrators.

Edwin Booth Saves Lillian Russell

Rescuer Is Only Nine and His Playmate at Maine Resort Was Drowning.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug. 23.—Edwin Booth saved Lillian Russell from drowning at South Harpswell when she fell from the wharf. Both are summer visitors.

Edwin is 9 years old, and the son of Charles E. Booth, of Yonkers, N. Y., while Lillian is 13, and the daughter of Charles A. Russell, of Boston. Edwin, her playmate, was fully clad, but he dove into the ocean like a veteran, drawing the girl to safety.

Thieves Warn, Then Rob Rail Station

Telephone Central Office They Had Looted Pay Phone, Then Steal Instrument.

NYACK, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Before carrying away the telephone from the Stony Point station of the West Shore Railroad last night, thieves telephoned to the central office to say that they had robbed the office and, telephone coin box. The operator thought some practical joker was at work and paid no attention to the man who called.

This morning it was found that the money drawer at the station had been robbed of 75 cents in cash, and from the telephone box had been taken about $3 in coins. The thieves also took the telephone.

WOMAN POLITICIAN IS MAD.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Countess Elizabeth Emilie Von Wedel, a Frenchwoman and a former "political agent," who was quite a celebrity, has been placed in a German asylum for the insane.

SCHOLAR BARES HOSEA FAMILY'S SKELETON NOW

University of Chicago Professor Declares Prophet Took Wife as Horrible Example.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Hosea's family skeleton has come to light, if not to life. The domestic scandal of ancient Israel's prophet has been removed from its closet, scoured with higher criticism and rattled in the face of Biblical scholars, who were perfectly willing to let it rest. Professor J. M. Powis Smith, of the University of Chicago, exhibits it in an article on "The Marriage of Hosea," in the current number of The Biblical World.

Hosea's wife, Gomer Bath Diblaim, is the villainess of the story reconstructed by Professor Smith from the account of her marriage to the prophet, and in the first three chapters of the book of Hosea, Professor Smith asserts that Gomer, contrary to the usual interpretation of the Scriptural account, was a person of evil reputation before the wedding ceremony was performed.

Prophet Knew His Faults.

Professor Smith adds to his version the fact that Hosea knew of Gomer's faults and took her "with his eyes open." In short, the prophet married Gomer with the curious purpose of making the match a horrible example to the rest of the Israelites, he asserts.

The marriage was to impress Israel with the fact of its own disloyalty to God.

According to the professor's view, the belief that "Hosea, as a young man, fell in love with Gomer and married her, supposing her to be all his youthful imagination fancied her to be," that she later left his home to live with another man, that he bought her back and then become a prophet, will not hold water. The scholar declares that this version is founded on an imperfect notion of the physiology of prophets.

Professor Smith asserts that the wife's name, which means "Gomer, daughter of Fig Cakes," signifies that she was held in low esteem. He retranslates several words in the Biblical account and gives the following as the proper version:

"Hosea, a prophet already burdened with the sense of his people's sin, felt himself called upon by Yahweh to marry a lewd woman, to the end that through such a marriage he might open the eyes of Israel to the enormity of its offense in being disloyal to Yahweh, its rightful lord. In pursuance of this conviction, Hosea bought Gomer, a woman living in public shame with her paramour.

Placed Her Under Restraint.

"But he at once placed her under restraint, denying her association with himself as well as with others, and seeking by such discipline to fit her for her position as his wife. This phase of the experience was interpreted for Israel as meaning that she as Yahweh's bride must be disciplined by exile before she could expect to enjoy any further favor from Yahweh.

"After this period of restraint for Gomer she was taken by Hosea into his home and became the mother of three children. Each of these in succession was given a prophetic name, and, like Isaiah's children, became a walking sermon to Israel just as the institution of marriage itself had been."

Hard Fall Re-sets Dislocated Spine

WIMINGTON, DEL., Aug. 23.—An expenditure of $16,000 and treatment for years in sanitariums in Germany and Paris failed to accomplish what a fall downstairs did. Mrs. William Helm, of Ellendale, Del., was cured of a dislocated spine in this unusual manner. The fall forced her spine into place. To-day she says she is well.

Her head is bandaged, but she was able to preside over a recent meeting of the Ellendale Ladies' Social, of which she is president.

SENT FREE TO MEN

A Most Pleasing Remedy Given to Quickly Restore Lost Vitality.

A Free Trial Treatment Sent by Mail To All Who Write.

Free trial treatments of Enervita, a most pleasing remedy, are being mailed to all men who write to Dr. John S. Howell. So many who had suffered for years against the mental and physical suffering of man weakness have written thanking him for the great benefit received, therefore, Dr. Howell has decided to send free trial treatments to all men who write. It is a home treatment, and all who suffer with any form of weakness, resulting from youthful folly, premature loss of strength and memory, weak back, lack of vitality and confidence can now receive this strength-giving treatment at home.

The treatment has a peculiar grateful effect of warmth and seems to act direct to the desired location, promoting strength and development just where it is needed. It is given to relieve the ills and troubles that come from years of misuse of the natural functions, and has met with remarkable success, even in cases approaching advanced age. A request to John S. Howell, M. D., Suite 1221, Auditorium Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, stating that you desire one of his free trial packages, will be complied with promptly.

He is desirous of reaching that great class of men who are unable to leave home to be treated, and the free sample will enable them to see how easy it is to successfully treat man weakness when the proper remedies are employed. Dr. Howell makes no restrictions. Any man who writes will be sent a free sample and literature, carefully sealed in a plain package, so that you need have no fear of embarrassment or publicity. Readers are requested to write without delay.

Small Expenses Small Profit

This Advertisement Is Worth 50c

AT THE

Royal Shoe Shop

86 N. BROAD, NEAR LUCKIE ST.

This week, in order to introduce our new lines of Goodyear Welt and English Welt Dress Shoes for Men and Women, we will sell for

$2.50

If offered at our store, together with this advertisement
ONE PAIR TO A CUSTOMER
Our extra quality shoes as described above

ALL LEATHERS—Gun Metal, Kid, Russia and Patent Colt. ALL SIZES, All New Goods.

Made by one of the Greatest and Best Manufacturers in this Country.

We Make a Specialty of Comfortable Work Shoes for Mechanics and Workingmen

Certainly! We Sell EDUCATOR SHOES for the Whole Family

No reasonable offer refused on the remainder of our Low Shoes in stock. Come while the coming is good.

SAVE HALF A DOLLAR

The ROYAL SHOE SHOP

IRISH RAISE HUGE FUND TO ASSURE HOME RULE

American Hibernians Respond Liberally to Appeal Made After Great Demonstration in Chicago Against England's Domination.

Another Feature of Meeting Was Adoption of a Resolution Condemning Great Britain's Policy Toward U. S. in Canal Dispute.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Following the gigantic demonstration for Irish home rule at the thirty-eighth annual picnic of the United Irish Societies of Chicago, held in Brands Park, sons of Erin here are confident that in a few weeks American Hibernians will have raised a fund that will insure the home rule for which they have fought so long and which they have almost brought about.

Fifteen thousand persons visited the park during the day and they responded liberally to the call for funds with which to carry on their campaign. Three thousand dollars was raised at that time and the fund has grown steadily since.

A feature of the occasion was the reading by James T. Clark, president of the United Irish Societies, of a telegram from William Randolph Hearst, in which he warmly favored home rule. The president was quick to reply, expressing the thanks of the societies for the co-operation they have received in their work from Mr. Hearst's papers.

British Canal Stand Scored.

Another important feature of the day was the resolution prepared in advance and passed by a unanimous vote, opposing the British contention over the Panama Canal tolls.

The resolutions strongly uphold the views of the United States that this country, having built the canal and paid for it without aid, should have the right of passing her own ships through it without paying tolls, and that this action of the United States is entirely within its rights as a nation and is not subject to the criticism of any other nation.

The work of John Redmond, parliamentary leader, in forcing the home rule bill to the verge of final passage also was commended highly.

One of the most impressive features of the occasion was the exhibition of a full-size model of the statue of Colonel F. Finerty, the famous soldier-journalist and a son of whom Erin is very proud.

Colonel Finerty wrote the story of the Custer campaign against old Sitting Bull, and the massacre in which Custer's whole command was wiped out. In his later years Colonel Finerty was editor of the Irish-American, and devoted all his energies to the home rule campaign, now so nearly won.

Work of Irish Sculptor.

The splendid statue of the old fighter is the work of Professor Charles J. Mulligan, of the Art Institute, a pupil of MacMonnies and Saint-Gaudens.

Among the speakers who addressed the enthusiastic throng were United States Senator George E. Chamberlain, of Oregon, former Attorney General Maurice T. Maloney, P. H. O'Donnell, Joseph E. Ryan, John T. Sutton, of Lincoln, Neb., and Harry W. Smith, of Springfield, Ill.

In part, Mr. Maloney said: "We of the Celtic race have always struggled for a place in the sun, and have made a good deal of history, but we have been accused in the past of not being quite what we ought to be in the old country, and did not act to our own interest. English misgovernment and oppression were solely to blame for this.

"Now I can see a new Ireland rising above the horizon, a nation once again. The Irish people had advanced with giant strides, now that the long tribulation of our night is passing away."

Senator Twists Lion's Tail.

United States Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon said:

"My people came to this country to avoid persecution in the mother country, persecution by the English Government. Ireland had no measure of freedom in those times."

Speaking on the Panama Canal, he said: "We have a perfect right to arrange to suit ourselves charges on a canal that was made in America, solely by American money. If England will not send her exhibits to the San Francisco Exposition on this account, I would say let her keep them at home.

"If we were not careful to withstand these encroachments of the British Government, we might in the end find ourselves in the same case as Ireland finds herself to-day. I foresee home rule for that country, within the next two or three years without question of doubt."

Tight Skirts Make Idle Factory Girls

Mill Men Assert Present Styles Curtail Demand for Goods and Cause Lack of Work.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., Aug. 23.—That the factories manufacturing cloth are suffering from the present styles in women's wearing apparel, owing to the smaller sale of cloth, and that many operatives are being thrown out of work in consequence, is the opinion of many leading New Bedford manufacturers.

In the past three years the circumference of women's skirts has been cut down on the average about two yards. The smaller sales of cloth have necessitated a curtailment in the mayro and hundreds of idle operatives are waiting until the styles change before they will be put to work again.

Irish Societies Leader Thanks Mr. Hearst for Support of Home Rule

CORDIAL telegrams of congratulation and thanks were exchanged between William Randolph Hearst and James T. Clark, president of the United Irish Societies of Chicago on the occasion of their annual picnic recently. Mr. Hearst expressed his belief in the justness and the ultimate success of the cause of home rule, while the head of the Irish societies in his reply earnestly thanked the publisher for his co-operation in their work in behalf of their fatherland. Mr. Clark's message follows:

CHICAGO, Aug. 20, 1913.

Hon. William Randolph Hearst,
San Francisco.

The sentiment of the United Irish Societies toward your papers has always been one of appreciation. Often in the past we have admired your unselfish advocacy of the cause of liberty and the 15,000 Irish-Americans at the ceremony of unveiling of the John F. Finerty monument were thrilled by your message in favor of home rule for Ireland. This monument is symbolic of the revitalized Irish nation that has been the inspiration of Parnell, Redmond and other patriots, and we believe it would strengthen the home rule cause immeasurably if you would publish in your Sunday papers, in the near future, a comprehensive account of our recent demonstration here, and emphasize its significance to Irish liberty.

JAS. T. CLARK, President,
United Irish Societies.

Mr. Hearst's Home Rule Message

San Francisco, Aug. 15.

As an American believing ardently in liberty and opportunity in equal rights and equal justice, I believe sincerely in home rule for Ireland.

If I were an Englishman I would believe with even greater earnestness in home rule not only for Ireland, but for every individual integral part of the British Empire.

I would believe in genuine home rule and in general home rule. I would believe in home rule which would insure complete independence in local government for every state and in a general government which would afford every state equal rights, equal liberties and proportionate representation.

Such just and genuine home rule is the best and perhaps the only remedy for the threatened decadence and possible dissolution of the British Empire. The preservation and perpetuation of the British Empire in its full prestige and power are only to be found in a voluntary federation of independent states, not held together loosely by compulsion but molded into an imperial entity by the natural and nationalizing forces of mutual confidence, mutual affection and mutual interest.

If I were an Irishman I would take pride in this fight for home rule, first because of the benefit I was helping to confer upon my country and my own countrymen, and, secondly, because of the benefit which will inevitably ensue to all other sections of the British Empire and to other nations throughout the world.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

'Perfect Baby' Fed on Soup and Vegetables

Hundred Per Cent Child Also Gets Abundance of Water and Fresh Air.

PASSAIC, N. J., Aug. 23.—"Good, substantial food, well cooked, is what I feed him," said Mrs. Thomas Watterston, of No. 110 Central avenue, when asked how she reared her son, Leslie, just declared the only 100 per cent perfect baby in the "better babies" contest in Passaic. Three hundred infants contested. He is 27 months old.

"He gets soups, fruit, vegetables, puddings, cereals," continued the mother. "I give him very little meat, few eggs, but plenty of water, inside and out."

Baby Leslie goes to bed about 8 p. m. and arises about 7:30, awakening of his own accord and bounding out into the fields before breakfast. He has a two-hour nap every afternoon, and always sleeps with the windows in his room wide open.

Women Voters Save Mayor From Recall

Committee From Their Organization Canvasses Every Ward to Prevent His Defeat.

JANESVILLE, WIS., Aug. 23.—Mayor James A. Fathers was the victor by a narrow margin to-day in Wisconsin's first recall election of importance under the commission form of government. He was elected by 88 votes, with a total of more than 3 00 votes cast, more than were ever before voted in a Janesville municipal election.

Mayor Fathers received 1,570 votes and his opponent, John C. Nichols, 1,472. Fathers carried three wards, the First, Second and Third, those chiefly occupied by the church and aristocratic elements, while Nichols carried the Fourth and Fifth Wards, the homes of the poorer people.

The election follows the trouble over saloons six months ago, when the Fathers administration started a campaign to clean up the town. Every ward in the city was canvassed by women's committees in the interest of Fathers.

Standardize Book to Simplify Grammar

Educators Work to Have Study of English Language Made More Uniform.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Aug. 23.—Standardization of grammatical nomenclature, which will do away with the confusion in the study of English, as well as other languages, in American schools, has been effected by a committee of fifteen, of which Professor Hills, of Colorado College, was a member.

The committee made a report to the National Educational Association in convention at Salt Lake City and its adoption without amendment virtually insures the following of the committee's recommendations in all schools and colleges.

According to Professor Hills it was found that in the sentence "John is good," the word "good" was called by nine different names in 20 grammars. the word "John" in "This is John," was called by nineteen terms, and in "We made John president," the word "president" was given eighteen different names in the books examined.

Philippine Hero Can't Re-enlist in Army

Batt'e-Scarred Pensioner Rejected by Recruiting Office on Account of Wounds.

SPOKANE, Aug. 23.—One of the seven heroes of the United States army who survived the bloody massacre of Balingiga, P. I., when he saw more than 100 of his comrades and officers go to their death at the hands of a savage Philippine tribe, and himself, was mutilated in many places on his body and given up for dead, John M. Newhouse, applied for reenlistment in the United States army.

Newhouse is 37 years old and came from Helena. He is now drawing $30 a month for the injuries he received in the massacre. Newhouse told of his experience while pleading with local army recruiting officers to take him into the army again.

Officials were compelled to reject the applicant on account of a stiff right arm caused by one of the cuts from a bolo.

Lightning Bug Used To Illuminate House

West Virginian Discovers New Light Medium Which He Declares Surpases Electricity.

MORGANTOWN, W. VA., Aug. 23. Thornton Flowers, of Mora, claims that by treating the common firefly or lightning bug with a secret chemical process he has produced a light surpassing the tungsten incandescent. He has his home illuminated with the new light.

Several weeks ago, Flowers says, he captured an immense lightning bug. It gave out a brilliant light, and this gave him an idea that the light from fireflies would illuminate a room if they were made to glow incessantly. He hit upon a mixture of chemicals, which, he says, not only will retain the glow after the insect's life is extinct, but will increase it.

He captured the insects by hundreds, treated them with chemicals and placed them in globes throughout his home.

Blind Girl Student Marvelous Gardener

Produces Daisies Three Times Size of Ordinary Flowers and Vegetables Just as Big.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Twenty-seven deaf and dumb girls and boys, ranging from 10 to 17, are being taught to speak, read, write stories, sew, make biscuits, solve arithmetic problems, spell and garden at the Sixteenth Street school here, where an exhibition of their work was held recently.

Miss Elizabeth Kenealy, 15, is creating a sensation at the school because of her wonderful success in raising flowers and vegetables.

In a middy blouse and dark skirt, Miss Elizabeth works in her gardens, one at home and the other at school, producing daisies three times the size of the ordinary flowers, and beets and many average vegetable food like radishes in size.

SMITH URGES ZONE CURE FOR BOLL WEEVIL

Senator From South Carolina Declares South's Loss in 17 Years Is $1,000,000,000.

Continued from Page 1.

an isolated spot in Texas until it has now reached the State of Alabama, and I have been appalled by the damage wrought by its ravages. During all these years I have been hoping for the discovery by which the pest could be exterminated, or even checked, but in both I have been disappointed.

Likes Zone Remedy Plan.

Some time ago the suggestion was made to establish across the entire cotton belt, east of the areas infested by the weevil a zone of 100 miles, in which no cotton should be planted. It was argued that this would check the eastward advance of the weevil, as it subsists only on the cotton plant, and it was also argued by entomologists and other experts on plant and insect life that my moving this zone westward from year to year all the weevils in the Cotton States would be starved out and entirely exterminated until the Mexican border was reached.

The idea appealed to me very strongly, and I have given the subject a great deal of study ever since. I believe this plan is entirely feasible, and while at first thought the cost may seem prohibitive, yet when the estimated cost is compared with the estimated saving the zone plan must be looked upon as a very sound business proposition.

The Government entomologists, farm demonstration agents and others admit that if this zone plan is put into operation it will undoubtedly check and finally exterminate the boll weevil, as it will have nothing to feed upon, and they admit at the same time that no other plan that has been tried so far has been at all effective.

I have had an estimate made of the cost of the proposed zone and I think it is a very liberal one. It follows:

"The cessation of cotton growing over an area of 46,245 square miles, in which the crop is valued at $98,990,047 per annum, is at first glance such an appalling suggestion that few have even thought to look deeper.

Sees Need of Substitute.

"We must add also to this the loss in ginning business, which is computed at $2,915,518 per annum and the loss in seed products totaling $5,633,562. This means that there must be compensation for a loss in earning value of $107,539,127 per annum.

"In the first place, any scheme which would call for the cessation of cotton growing must provide the means and knowledge for growing something else in the place of cotton.

"A large crop of trained agriculturists instructing in the cultivation of new and profitable crops and in the principles of rotation, maintenance of soil fertility, etc., would help the people to double and treble the output of their land within very few years. It would also be necessary to supply seed for planting the 2,573,672 acres of cotton land in other crops. Thus the greater part of the prospective loss can be met at a reasonable expense.

"The loss of the ginners and part of the loss of the oil men will have to be assumed by the Government. This loss would not exceed $9,000,000.

"It would be necessary for the western portion of the quarantine area to remain out of cotton for possibly three years.

"East of the proposed quarantine line there lies an area of 112,027 square miles of territory in which cotton can be produced. The average yield per acre (1908-1811) for this territory has been 3,051,103 bales (500 pounds), of which 32,892 bales (500 pounds was sea island cotton. The value of the latter was $4,224,235.

Places Faith in Expert.

"The value of the remaining or upland cotton, valued at 11.9 cents per pound, was $174,345,554. The value of the equivalent amount of seed produced would be $33,943,522. Thus the annual value of the producers of the crop to be protected is $217,514,211.

"History of the boll weevil has shown that if this area is not protected its production will be lowered year by year until possibly 50 per cent of the crop is taken, and sometimes as high as 75 per cent."

The zone plan is the only suggestion that has yet been offered that holds out any promise of relief. The cost of the zone plan is undoubtedly great, but when the estimated cost is compared with the estimated saving, the protection of sections not yet reached and the ultimate eradication of the boll weevil throughout the entire cotton belt, the cost does not seem to be prohibitive. In fact, the cost of the zone system will be mild compared with the loss that will be entailed if the boll weevil is not exterminated.

Sea Island Crop Imperiled.

It is practically certain that if the boll weevil spreads to the South Atlantic States the sea island cotton industry will be wiped out entirely. This is by reason of the semi-tropical nature of the islands, the luxuriant foliage which affords a safe harbor and breeding ground for the insects during winter and summer, and the fact that there is neither extreme heat nor extreme cold, both of which are destructive to insect life. It is my deliberate judgment that if the boll weevil reaches the sea islands, there will be no more sea island cotton.

I have spoken of the aggregate loss to the country, but the feature that appeals to me most strongly is the loss to the individual. The country may eventually recover from the damage done to the cotton crop, but the individual cotton farmer whose income is cut in half or destroyed, and whose property is made to depreciate in value, may never recover. The loss to him will be irreparable.

My object in writing this is in order that the people may know just how seriously the cotton crop is being menaced, and that they may discuss and understand the only plan that has been offered, which promises to accomplish the result needed. If any other plan is suggested that promises to accomplish the result at a less cost or in a quicker manner, I will give it my heartiest indorsement.

I will be glad to have the farmers and others of the South consider this problem carefully and write me what they think of it.

WOMAN IS KEY IN STRUGGLE TO UNSEAT SULZER

New York Governor's Foes Call Wife's Illness a Sham and Confession a Ruse.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Apparently deadlocked until the High Court of Impeachment meets September 18 to try the charges of high crimes and misdemeanors against Governor William Sulzer; both the accused Executive and Lieutenant Governor Martin Glynn are busy, the one strengthening his defense, the other preparing to invigorate his attack. In the meantime, the official business of the Empire State is at a standstill.

The government of New York presents a paradox unique to republican government. The State has two Governors, and it has none. Two men maintain they have the right to transact the State's business. No business is being transacted.

And in this struggle for power, the battle seemingly centers about a woman, a woman who has no voice in the government, who is not even allowed to vote under the statutes of the State.

Wife's Illness Questioned.

In addition to the law point raised by the defenders of Sulzer that he can not be impeached or tried for things he did before he took the oath of office, the defense lays greatest stock on the declaration by Sulzer's wife that she, not the Governor, used checks he had received as campaign contributions to speculate on the stock market.

On the other hand, it is learned that the Frawley Committee, which brought to light the charges on which the Governor was impeached, will make her confession the subject of a rigid examination to shatter, if possible, the defense, which will be based largely on her statement.

In the meantime, Mrs. Sulzer, it is reported, is dangerously ill, her nerves broken, it is said, under the strain which she has experienced since the charges were brought against her husband.

Sulzer's enemies even question this illness. They question it so seriously that it, too, is to be investigated. The first step in this investigation,

Both Accused of "Shamming."

The committee believes that "talking too much" consisted of telling stories of Mrs. Sulzer's true condition which were not to the liking of the Governor. An inkling of this purpose was contained in an interview with Assembly Majority Leader Aaron J. Levy, who declared:

"Not only is Mrs. Sulzer's confession a sham, but the pretended illness of Mrs. Sulzer is a sham, of which William Sulzer is the chief perpetrator."

However, should Sulzer be removed from office by Tammany votes with all the judges of the Court of Appeals voting in his favor, he would count it a vindicaton and proof of his assertion that he is being persecuted because he would not turn over the State to Tammany Hall.

'Wild Man's' Haircut Fills Bushel Basket

Tramp That Frightened Woman and Children Gets Cleaning When Arrested.

MILLVILLE, N. J., Aug. 23.—A "wild man" was reported to the police as roaming the woods west of Millville and frightening women and children. Marshal Biggs hastened to the locality and discovered an uncouth man with shaggy beard which reached to his waist and long hair which hung matted over his shoulders.

When taken to the City Hall the man said he was Waldron Furry, of Low Banks, Canada, and that he was simply tramping.

Marshal Biggs acted as barber for the stranger and his hirsute adornment filled a bushel basket.

Pastor Adopts Wife He Had Divorced

Girl Becomes His Ward as Soon as Decree Was Granted by Court.

WOODWARD, OKLA., Aug. 23.—A divorce on unusual grounds has been granted here to B. F. Willett, who is an ordained Baptist minister, and who has served several terms as prosecuting attorney for the county.

Willett gives up his wife that she may become again, in effect, his adopted daughter. Years ago he adopted a little girl who took the name of Clara Willett. He put her in school at Enid, determined to give her the best education obtainable.

Six years ago, when Clara reached the age of 16, Judge Willett made his adopted daughter his bride.

In his petition for divorce the lawyer and former preacher set forth that Mrs. Willett had told him she never could love him as a wife should, but that she could be devoted to him as a daughter.

Girl Wins First Wireless License

She Installs Her Own Apparatus

Miss Alice McConaughy, of Cincinnati, at the key of her wireless instrument.

This girl operates under a license granted under the new wireless laws.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 23.—Miss Alice McConaughy, 13-year-old schoolgirl, is the first person to obtain an operator's license under the new laws regulating wireless telegraphy on the Great Lakes, even if she did get it on something of a fluke.

The license was issued before the inspector discovered that he had failed to notice the age of the applicant, whose father is a national bank examiner of Ohio.

"I did give them the right age," declared Alice. "I sent for the blanks and filled them out myself."

Her work on the demonstration set was satisfactory. The youthful operator installed her own apparatus at home, doing all the wiring and even erecting the 50-foot aerial.

Chester Boynton Sue By Wife for Libel

Echo of Famous Litigation Against Rev. William B. Ayres in New Case.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Helen Theresa Willet Boynton, of Wollaston, Mass., wife of Chester A. Boynton, who some time ago created a sensational church scandal by suing the Rev. William B. Ayres, pastor of the Park and Down Congregational Church, Wollaston, for $10,000 for alienation of Mrs. Boynton's affections, has filed a libel for divorce from her husband on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

Boynton claimed in his suit that the minister had broken up his home after joining the Boynton household as a boarder. Mr. Ayres and Mrs. Boynton in the former's case of defense denied all of the husband's allegations and declared that the whole trouble in the Boynton household sprang out of Boynton's attentions to a choir girl at the Park and Down Church, at which Boynton and his wife were both prominent members.

Boynton lost his suit and was expelled from the Wollaston church. Boynton is now living at Los Angeles.

Has $18 Salary Cut To $10 to Spite Wife

Judge, However, Orders Bookkeeper to Pay Alimony Just the Same.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—G. Lester Pinkham, a bookkeeper of Flushing, sued by his wife for alimony, testified that he was receiving only $10 a week.

His employer, A. M. Ryon, called as a witness, corroborated him.

"Is he worth more money?" asked the Magistrate.

"He certainly is," replied Mr. Ryon, "formerly I paid him $18 a week, but he asked to have his salary reduced to $10."

The Magistrate promptly ordered Pinkham to pay his wife $5 a week and furnish a bond of $520 to guarantee payment.

College Girl Walker Goes 25 Miles a Day

Little Pedestrian Reaches Pittsburg on Jaunt From New York to San Francisco.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 23.—With a jaunty rose-colored hat, Miss Gladys Mason, a petite New Yorker, who is "footing it" from Broadway to the Golden Gate, is on her way West.

The little pedestrian left New York on June 29 and has averaged 25 miles a days. Her high mark for a day is 41 miles, made east or Harrisburg.

Miss Mason is 22, a graduate of Emerson College, Boston. She expects to reach San Francisco Thanksgiving Day.

SAYS WIFE AND MAGICIAN WERE IN DEATH PLOT

Husband Declares That Their Conspiracy Kept Him in Bed Three Years.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Alleging that his wife was madly infatuated with a man of strange, weird, magnetic powers, and that they conspired to incapacitate him by administering mysterious potions, Theodore Speaber, a former undertaker of Chicago, filed suit for divorce from Anna Speaber in the Circuit Court at Laporte, Ind.

Through the machinations of his wife and a man who represented himself as being a magnetic healer, assuming the name of Louis Odillo, Speaber avers that they tried to convince him that he had become a victim of tuberculosis. Odillo then injected a chemical in his ear, he alleges, which brought on an illness that confined him to a hospital bed for three years. This, he charges, was done with the deliberate intention of causing a fatal sickness to set in and get him out of the way.

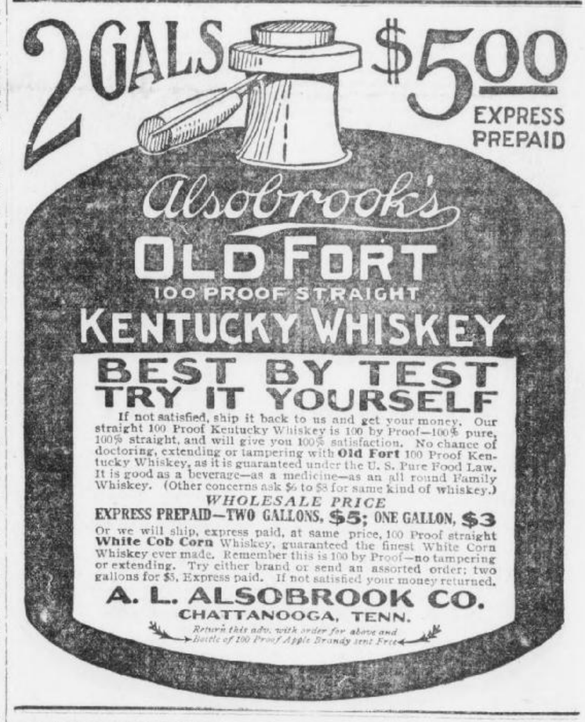
His wife then sold out his undertaking business and their household effects, he charges, for less than one-third of the real value. She then refused to see him after he had been released from the hospital.

Friends of Speaber say that he was at one time an inmate of the Elgin State Insane Asylum. But he was released later as cured.

COUNTY TO GIVE COOK BOOKS TO NEWLYWEDS

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Leaden biscuits and leather-crusted pies and all the other dinner delicacies of Mrs. Newlywed soon may cease to cause physical pain and matrimonial estrangement. Their existence is threatened.

Authorities of Cook County are considering the advisability of giving away official Cook County cook books with all marriage licenses. Robert M. Sweitzer, County Clerk, will present the plan to the County Board.



OTTLEY & KNOWLES

General Insurance

1508 Fourth National Bank Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

SEMI-ANNUAL STATEMENT

For the six months ending June 30, 1913, of the condition of the

Svea Fire and Life Insurance Company (Limited)

OF GOTHENBURG, SWEDEN.

Organized under the laws of the Kingdom of Sweden, made to the Governor of the State of Georgia, in pursuance of the laws of said State. Principal office in United States, 100 William street, New York, N. Y.

I. CAPITAL STOCK.

Whole amount of capital $200,000.00
Amount paid up in cash 200,000.00

II. ASSETS.

Total assets of the company, actual cash market value $1,422,807.39

III. LIABILITIES.

Total liabilities $1,422,807.39

IV. INCOME DURING THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THE YEAR 1913.

Total income actually received during the first six months in cash ..... $ 417,212.42

V. EXPENDITURES DURING THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THE YEAR 1913.

Total expenditures during the first six months of the year in cash ..... $ 379,770.04
Greatest amount insured in any one risk ..... $ 37,500,00
Total amount of insurance outstanding 121,363,329.00

A copy of the act of incorporation, duly certified, is of file in the office of the Insurance Commissioner.

STATE OF NEW YORK—County of New York.

Personally appeared before the undersigned M. L. Duncan, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the United States manager of the Svea Fire and Life Insurance Company, Ltd., and that the foregoing statement is correct and true.

M. L. DUNCAN, United States Manager.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 15th day of August, 1913.

EDWIN F. COREY,
Commissioner for the State of Georgia.

Name of State Agent—DAN B. HARRIS, Atlanta.
Name of Agents at Atlanta—OTTLEY & KNOWLES.

MRS. GODBEE CALM; CALLS SELF A TOOL OF JUSTICE

Divorced Wife of Millen Judge, Who Killed Him and Young Bride, Shows No Remorse. Planned Shooting With Care.

Trouble Alleged to Have Started Twenty Years Ago Over Prisoner's Property—Jurist Is Said to Have Slain Brother-in-Law.

MILLEN, Aug. 23.—Convinced that she has been an instrument of justice, satisfied that the work she had planned for days has been well performed, Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee, in her cell in the Jenkins County jail, to-day calmly and confidently awaits the hour when she will face a court to answer to the law for the slaying of her former husband, Judge Walter M. Godbee, and the bride who had taken the slayer's place in his affections.

Mrs. Godbee saw life pass from the body of the man with whom she had lived for years, and there was no remorse shown on her face. While imprisoned for his slaying she was told that she must also answer to the charge of having murdered his wife. She did not blanch.

She had determined on the death of both. She had planned her deed carefully. She believed that she was justified in resorting to arms to avenge her real or fancied wrongs, and persons who know her best declare she is ready to meet the consequences.

No effort to obtain bail has been made by her. She has waived the right of preliminary trial. She is content to remain in jail until her time of trial comes.

Started Twenty Years Ago.

The attitude of this woman, who has passed her fiftieth year, is one of the most remarkable features of this remarkable tragedy.

Twenty years ago, when Judge Godbee and his second wife found they were mismated, the foundation for the double slaying was laid. The climax came Monday morning in the Millen postoffice, when Judge Godbee was almost instantly killed and his young wife fatally wounded by pistol shots fired by the woman from whom he had been separated by the courts.

Both Judge Godbee and the woman held as his slayer are of prominent Jenkins County families. Godbee had been prominent in politics. He had been married three times.

His first wife died many years ago, but, at his request, he is buried at her side in the cemetery at Waynesboro. Soon after her death he married Miss Edna Perkins, daughter of the late Mills Perkins, and heiress to considerable property.

They lived in apparent happiness until the early nineties, when the first signs of trouble came. At this time Judge Godbee acquired rights to certain properties which belonged to his wife before their marriage. It is charged that the judge afterward sold this property and reinvested the proceeds for his own personal benefit.

Shot Brother, Is Rumor.

Then there is an old story that years ago in Burke County Judge Godbee became involved in a difficulty with a brother of the woman he afterward married, and killed him. He pleaded self-defense and was acquitted.

There is no record, though, that this trouble had any bearing on the marital differences of the couple.

Friction between the couple reached a critical stage ten years ago, when Mrs. Godbee filed suit for divorce in Jenkins County, charging cruelty on the part of her husband.

She declared that the judge had humiliated her before her children, had driven her from his room and had nailed the entrance between the two chambers in which they lived.

Even after this suit was filed there was a reconciliation, but the trouble cropped out again about five years ago, when Mrs. Godbee again entered suit. She was granted absolute divorce, but the judge was successful in resisting her plea for allmony. Mrs. Godbee was also given the custody of her minor child, Miss Sarah Godbee, with whom she lived at the time of the tragedy.

Divorce Didn't End Trouble.

The divorce decree did not end the troubles of the pair, however. Mrs. Godbee always contended that the money on which Judge Godbee was living luxuriously after the decree rightfully belong to her.

It is certain that she was in straitened circumstances at the time of the killing, and it is believed that the sight of another woman enjoying the fortune she believed hers, while she virtually was living in poverty, had no little to do with her determination to take justice into her own hands.

For after the divorce Judge Godbee married again. His third wife was Miss Florence Boyer, 25 years old, of Youngstown, Ohio. After their meeting at the sea shore Judge Godbee continued his courtship at her home, and little more than four months ago he brought her to Millen as his bride.

A crisis was reached. Soon after the judge's return, it is declared, he received demands from his former wife that he contribute to the support of her and her daughter. In these demands she cited the fact that she was entitled to at least part of the income he derived from property which had originally been hers.

Judge Feared for Life.

Intimate friends of the judge say that from that time on he feared, not only for his own life, but for that of his bride.

So alarmed did he become that on receiving a threatening letter Sunday he refused to take his bride to church, although he was a steward of the First Methodist congregation, and requested the pastor, the Rev. E. E. Rose, to come to the Hotel Estelle, where he had apartments, to conduct private prayers.

It is evident that on that same day Mrs. Godbee No. 2 decided on the deed she committed Monday. She got into communication with Marshal P. T. Foote and requested him to call on her at her daughter's home.

There, the marshal says, Mrs. Godbee showed him a .32-caliber pistol.

"Will this kill as quickly as a .38?" was the surprising question he was asked.

"It will if it hits the right spot," he replied. She seemed satisfied with the answer and the interview closed.

This same pistol was in Mrs. Godbee's handbag Monday morning when she went to the Millen postoffice. She knew that each day the judge visited there early in the forenoon to inquire for mail. She was seated writing as he entered the building, accompanied by his young wife. The slyaing followed.

Mrs. Godbee died Tuesday night in the apartments in which she and her husband had lived during the two months of their married life. Mrs. G. W. Boyer, mother of the slain bride, was en route from Williamsport to Millen when her daughter died.

Bulk of Estate to Daughter.

The will of Judge Godbee has been found in the possession of W. B. Wallace, a merchant, and one of the dead man's closest friends. The value of the estate is between $45,000 and $50,000. He bequeathes the bulk of his property and securities to his daughter by his first wife, formerly Miss Maggie Godbee, now married and living in Augusta.

Small portions of the estate are left to Frank Mills and King Godbee, sons of the divorced wife, and Miss Sarah Godbee, also an issue of the second marriage. The divorced wife is not provided for in the instrument. Frank Mills Godbee has been appointed temporary administrator of the estate of Judge Godbee, and A. S. Anderson, temporary administrator of the estate of Mrs. Florence Boyer Godbee.

The third Mrs. Godbee has been buried beside her husband and his first wife in Waynesboro. The condition of Mrs. Boyer, the slain bride's mother, is said to be somewhat improved following her collapse upon first seeing the dead body of her young daughter. Her two sons have come from Pennsylvania and will remain with her until she returns to her home at Williamsport.

Neither of the boys expresses any animosity toward the slayer of their sister and her husband, but both join their mother in hoping that exact justice will be done. Archibald and LeRoy Boyer, the brothers, have not yet decided whether they will attend the trial of the second Mrs. Godbee.

Vincent Astor Reported Captured Name Is Linked With Miss Sands Match Long Predicted by Gossips

Miss Elizabeth Sands and Vincent Astor.

Fiancee-To-Be Measures Up to Rigid Requirements of Young Multi-Millionaire's Mother.

NEWPORT, Aug. 23.—Decidedly the most interesting aftermath of the recent Newport yacht races is the persistent report that Miss Elizabeth Sands, beautiful daughter of Mrs. Frederick Sands, of this city, occupies the place of honor in the affections of Vincent Astor, head of that family and heir to its huge estates.

This report, which has been current in social circles here and in New York, took the form of a practical certainty, according to society's self-constituted soothsayers, when it was noted that in the party taken to the races by young Astor was only one of three girls to whom he paid marked attention last year. That one, of course, was Miss Sands.

It has long been known and greatly gossiped about at afternoon teas and other social functions that young Astor has felt a strong liking for the young beauty ever since they were school children.

Society wiseacres, who have long ago hung up in their mental art galleries a picture of young Astor and Miss Sands as a happy married couple, were not at all discouraged when the young man's affections at times seemed to wander from his childhood's choice.

"Just wait until Vincent's mother gets back to America and resumes her place at the 'helm,'" said these social clairvoyants, "and you'll notice a sudden slump in the fortunes of Elizabeth Sands' attractive rivals."

The prediction was based upon a firm belief that the aristocratic former Ava Willing would see to it that her son, who is now the head of the family and chancellor of its inexhaustible exchequer, should marry someone who measured up in every way to her rigid requirements as to ancestry, connections and social standing.

$175,000 TO BE GIVEN IN PRIZES FOR LIVE STOCK

Harness Race Purses at Panama-Pacific Exposition Will Total $225,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—The greatest live stock show in the history of the world is assured at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in 1915. Following the appropriation by the exposition management of $175,000 for awards for prize-winning live stock, and the news that $225,000 is offered in purses for harness races, each new announcement by Chief of the Department of Live Stock D. O. Lively discloses increasing interest in the forthcoming live stock exhibition.

The live stock department has at its disposal 50 acres of ground which will be devoted to the erection of live stock buildings, a hall for live stock congresses and agricultural meetings, a race track, and an open field upon which will be held drills, international cavalry horse contests, polo contests and exhibitions of the prize live stock of the world.

The live stock buildings will be constructed more from an exhibition standpoint than in keeping with any farm utility plan; the vast rows of barns which have characterized the live stock departments of other expositions will be avoided. Every separate section will be shown under a single roof.

In addition to the $175,000 set aside by the exposition management to be used in cash premiums, more than $45,000 has been offered by organizations representing various phases of the live stock industry. Of the prizes offered by the exposition, $50,000 will be given to horses, $50,000 to cattle, $25,000 to sheep and goats, $25,000 to swine, $12,000 to poultry, pigeons and pet stock, $7,500 to carloads of cattle, sheep and swine, $5,000 for prize-winning dogs and cats.

The department is making arrangements for holding the biggest poultry show on record, and birds from all over the world will compete for international prizes. The pigeons will take their place in the exposition not only as applied to the fancy, but as a utility, and some of the birds will be used as carriers, taking part in races across the continent from San Francisco.

Under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, the exposition will give two harness race meets, one in the spring and one in the fall of 1915, at which there will be offered $225,000 in stakes and purses. With one or two exceptions, the special stakes included in the grand aggregate of $225,000 will be the greatest that ever have been offered.

America's Oldest Church Discovered

Ruins of Centuries-Old House of Worship Off Yucatan Visited by Explorers.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 23.—The ruins of the oldest Christian church in America have been discovered on the Island of Cozumel off Yucatan by Professor Morley and Jesse Nusbaum, of the Sarvard-San Diego expedition.

Cozumel has not been visited by white men for almost a century, and Morley and Nusbaum had thrilling adventures, but deny that its people are cannibals. The scientists were equipped with a moving picture outfit, but in leaving the island for the mainland their canoe was upset and much of the photograph material was spoiled.

While Cozumel is only 30 by 7 miles in extent, it was found extraordinarily rich in monumental and architectural remains. It was here that Cortez had a fierce battle with the natives and erected what is declared to have been the first Christian church in America.

Repeats His Wedding Date as Punishment

Husband Who Told Court He Wished to Forget Marriage Has New Litany.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 23.—"June 14 1887," Philip Leborski will have to repeat ten times a day for the next 60 days in order to keep out of the house of correction, by sentence pronounced upon him by District Court Judge Elsner.

Leborski, who is a wealthy real estate owner, was arrested when a patrolman found him shaking his fist and swearing at his wife, while she was perched on the gable of their residence.

In the trial Leborski told the Court he was trying to forget he was married and that he had succeeded in forgetting the date of the ceremony. The Court informed him that no man had a right to forget such a date and then ordered his case continued 60 days and told Leborski to recite the date of the wedding ten times daily or he would have to go to jail. Leborski started his recitations before he was out of the courtroom and his wife was doing the counting.

Crusade Started on Big Sunday Dinners

Domestic Science Teachers of Kansas Schools Are Enlisted in The Campaign.

TOPEKA, KANS., Aug. 23.—The custom and the physical requirements that a man must rest at least one day in seven have brought about a campaign in Kansas against the big Sunday dinners that have so long been the delight of the average man. The domestic science teachers of the schools have enlisted the aid of domestic science students throughout the State and the big Sunday dinner is going the way of the hard biscuit and the underdone meat in the Kansas homes.

The campaign was started a year ago at the University of Kansas, but it now has the support of every high school and college with domestic science courses.

Maryland Jews to Raise Shaft to Friend

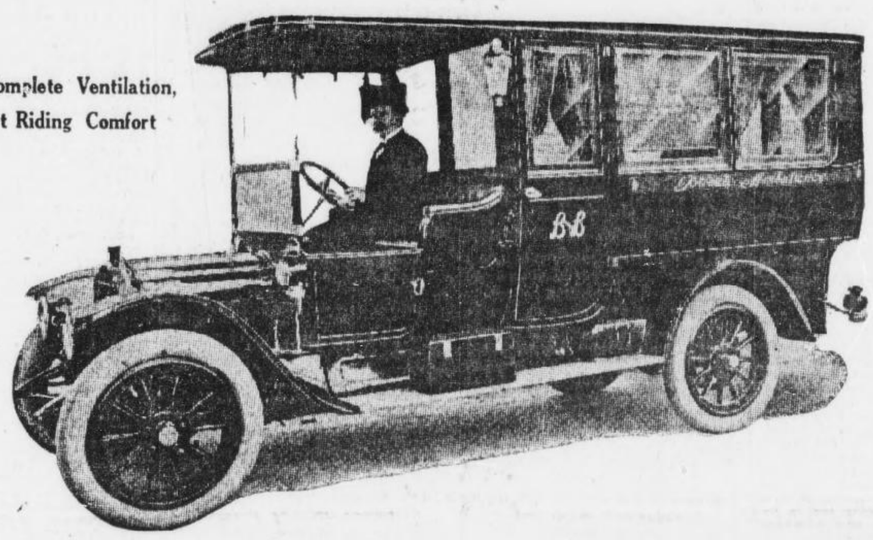
Thomas Kennedy, Who Passed Law Giving Them Right to Hold Office, To Be Honored.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., Aug. 23.—Mendes Cohen, of Baltimore, a grand-nephew of one of the first Jews elected to office in the State of Maryland, will act as treasurer of the fund to be raised to build a monument to Thomas Kennedy, author of the law passed in 1826 that gave Jews the right to hold office.

Kennedy was famous in several other respects than as champion of the cause of political equality, for which he fought as a member of the Legislature eight years. He wrote many ballads that aroused the martial ardor of his fellow citizens in the days preceding the War of 1812.

Barclay & Brandon S-E-R-V-I-C-E

Most Complete Ventilation, Fullest Riding Comfort



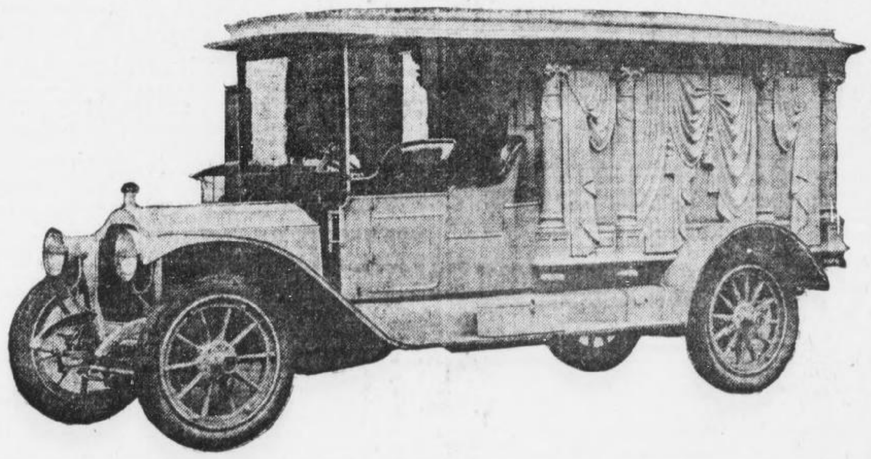
Equipment — Electric Fan, Running Hot and Cold Water, Ice Water, Steam Heat

This Picture Shows the Very Finest and Best Equipped Ambulance in the Entire South

The Barclay & Brandon PRIVATE AMBULANCE is positively the very last word in up-to-date Ambulances.

Nothing could be more complete—not a single thing can be suggested that might tend to give further and more complete comfort to the patient, that is not already a part of its wonderful equipment.

This most complete Ambulance is at your immediate service at all times, whether you live in Atlanta or suburbs. For white people only.



BARCLAY & BRANDON Service as Funeral Directors is Widely Known for Its Dignity and Exclusiveness

One very important point is that Barclay & Brandon alone can furnish you with a COMPLETE AUTOMOBILE FUNERAL, as they have just purchased a $7,000 Packard Hearse, the only Auto Hearse in the State. Choice of either auto or horse-drawn hearse.

In time of bereavement it is assuring at least to know that there is some one to whom you can intrust all the details of a funeral service, secure in the knowledge that every requisite will be carefully attended to.

This you may expect AT ALL TIMES from

BARCLAY & BRANDON

246 Ivy Street, Corner of Baker Phones Bell, Ivy 788, Ivy 168. Atlanta, 788

Athens — Latest News of North Georgia — Rome

ATHENS JUMPS TO TOP NOTCH IN BUILDINGS

Figures for Year To Be $1,250,000—Nine-Story Structure Is Ready.

ATHENS, Aug. 23.—The classic city of Athens, once considered an educational community only, is fast assuming an aspect that will be as commercial as academic, with tall business buildings fast going up. A few years ago the tallest building here was about four stories, and at present there is a handsome seven-story structure completed and a $400,000, nine-story structure which will be ready for occupancy about October 1.

Building permits for the year will probably total $1,250,000, which is as good a record in proportion to population as Atlanta's banner year, and perhaps a little better. The million and a quarter will be the highest that Athens has yet attained.

Commerce Chamber Active.

The Chamber of Commerce is concentrating its efforts along constructive lines, and as evidence of what the city is doing points to new industries that have located here in recent months.

Among the new plants is that of the Athens Pottery Company, which, after an investigation of raw material supply in various parts of the country, located in Athens because of the high quality and large quantity of clays in this section. This plant came from East Liverpool, Ohio, which is one of the old pottery centers of the country. There are within nineteen miles of Athens white silica clay deposits that are well suited for the manufacture of high-class clay products, and efforts are being made to have manufacturers locate plants to utilize this valuable raw material.

The Allen-Moss Tannery Company also was secured by the Chamber of Commerce. This plant is costing $50,000, and will manufacture sole leather and by-products of soap and glue.

The Georgia Plow and Implement Company, which has been in operation about seven months, has a new plant and equipment costing about $10,000, including cupola, woodworking and ironworking shops and foundry and machine rooms.

Extensive Building Operations.

Prominent among buildings in course of erection is the Holman Building, 65 by 200 feet, and nine stories in height. This structure is of reinforced concrete, with an exterior of dark red tapestry brick. Stores will be located on the first floor and offices above, with a ballroom on the top floor. The cost will be $400,000. C. M. Strahan, of Athens, is the architect, and the H. J. Carr Construction Company, of Atlanta, the builders. This building is very near completion, and will be ready for occupancy about the middle of September or first of October.

This is the second office building to be erected in Athens. The other is the Southern Mutual Insurance Company's building, seven stories in height. Office space in both of the buildings is fully taken.

Athens is also to have a new Y. M. C. A. building to cost, complete, about $140,000. It will be of fireproof construction. The architects are Shattuck & Hussey, of Chicago. The Y. W. C. A. also has a new building, costing $35,000.

Demand for Office Space.

James Smith is erecting a new structure three stories in height, 125 by 225 feet. This will be of fireproof construction, the exterior of white brick and ornamental terra cotta trimmings.

There will be five storerooms on the ground floor, and these storerooms have already been leased for long terms, notwithstanding the fact that the building will not be completed until near the middle of September. J. W. Barnett, of Athens, is the architect, and the L. C. Smith Construction Company, of Athens, is the builder.

The Athens firm of H. T. Huggins & Son is building a four-story store building. This building is being finished in light colored brick and is quite an addition to the business district.

Atlantan Is Architect.

The new county courthouse, designed by A. Ten Eyck Brown, of Atlanta, will cost $150,000. This building is to be of reinforced concrete, with exterior of red brick and stone trimmings. It will be four stories high, and one of its interesting features is that the county jail will be located on the top floor. This will replace the structure at Prince avenue and Hill street, known to thousands of university men over the State.

The Athens Ice Company, a new industry for Athens, has just completed its plant at a cost of $30,000.

Several new churches are included in the building activities, among them being a Catholic church costing $20,000, a Baptist tabernacle costing $10,000 and a Presbyterian church costing over $25,000.

Costly New Residences.

Quite a number of new residences are being built, prominent among them being one for W. T. Bryan of fireproof construction, costing over $30,000, and a number of small residences being erected by John E. Talmadge to cost $75,000.

Athens streets are exceptionally well paved, and in the last ten years the city has spent $300,000 in this work, and not long ago voted $75,000 additional for further street improvement. The expenditure of this amount is now under way, and it is conceded that when the work is completed Athens will be one of the best paved cities in the South.

The city has also voted $100,000 for new schools, $25,000 being for a new building and $27,000 for asite for a modern high school, the remainder to be used for improvements and additions to established schools. With this expenditure Athens can boast of one of the most up-to-date city school systems in the State.

The Athens Gas Light and Fuel Company has recently expended about $30,000 in laying new gas mains throughout the city.

Miss Ruby Gillen

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Gillen, of Athens, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. S. D. Fambrough, at Bishop. Miss Gillen is a 1913 graduate of the State Normal School at Athens.

Auto Traded for Horse Wouldn't Go

Doctor Calls on Other Man to Swap Back, and He Says Was Cheated Again.

ROME, GA., Aug. 23.—Dr. W. A. Wright's fondness for automobiles was the cause of trouble with A. W. Williman, of Cave Spring, which resulted in the arrest of the latter on a warrant charging him with cheating and swindling.

Dr. Wright has discovered that an automobile, which looks as good as new standing still, easily could be not worth anything running. It is alleged that William traded an automobile to the doctor which, after the deal, refused to move.

A horse and buggy was given in exchange. When the physician called upon Filliman to trade back, he was quite willing, but had sold the horse. He, however, agreed to give him another. This horse was defective, Dr. Wright alleges. The case will be aired in the September term of the City Court.

TICK ERADICATION WORK IS PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Petty thievery has annoyed housekeepers here during the last week, for all articles of food possess an irresistible attraction to the depredators.

Pantries have been raided of flour, meal, potatoes, etc., while fresh meats, vegetables, butter and eggs have been taken from refrigerators. Many have been forced to worry through breakfast without bread. The citizens are becoming desperate.

TIFT COUNTY VETERANS TO HOLD ENCAMPMENT

TIFTON, Aug. 23.—The annual encampment of the Tift County Camp, U. C. V., will be held at Murrow Springs, four miles west of Tifton, on Little River, September 3.

Arrangements will also be made for holding a big barbecue on September 4, in which the Charlotte Carson Chapter, U. D. C., of Tifton, and the Sons of Veterans will assist the veterans.

ASKS $5,000 DAMAGES FOR INJURIES IN MILL

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—Because of alleged injuries Charles Wiggins claims to have sustained while employed by the Swift Manufacturing Company of Columbus, on July 7, he has brought suit against the mills for $5,000. He claims that he has been unable to earn a livelihood since he received his injuries.

LUMBER-LADEN SHIP SAILS.

PENSACOLA, Aug. 23.—The steamship Etolia has sailed for Buenos Ayres, loaded with 2,640,000 feet of pitch pine lumber. It also took on 847 tons of bunker coal in this port.

Begin Married Life With 24 Chlidren

Moultrie Bride and Bridegroom Had Even Dozen Each.

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—It is a very rare thing for newlyweds to begin keeping house with 24 children to make things lively from the first day of married bliss, yet this was the experience of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Truit, who were recently made man and wife by Justice J. J. Serrell in the Lee district of this County.

The bride was Mrs. M. J. Flowers, a widow with twelve children, and Mr. Truit, whose first wife has been dead for some time leaving him with an even dozen motherless children. Both of the participants in the recent wedding were bereaved about the same time and, living in the same community, they naturally turned ot one another for comfort, and finally agreed that the best thing to do was to marry.

FOOD THIEVES HARASS RESIDENTS OF DALTON

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The report made by E. M. Nighbert, inspector in charge of the tick eradication work, shows rapid progress the last month. Twelve dipping vats are in operation. There are now 372 herds, containing 2,347 cattle, free of ticks. The herds under local quarantine number 175 and contain 1,224 cattle.

The county has appropriated money to assist in the work, and it is believed the quarantine will be raised from this county by next year at the latest.

ALBANY GETS ANOTHER LARGE OIL COMPANY

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—Present indications are that another large oil company will make Albany a distributing center in the near future. N. H. Cook, of Atlanta, district superintendent of the Texas Oil Company, one of the largest of the independent companies, has looked over the situation here with a view of locating a distributing plant for the company.

BAPTIST ASSOCIATION TO MEET IN COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—The Columbus Baptist Association will meet in its annual session on Wednesday after the third Sunday in September in Manchester. Dr. B. W. Bussey, the moderator, will preach the doctrinal sermon. There are more than 30 churches in the association.

FIRST BALE BRINGS 14 1-4 CTS.

ELBERTON, Aug. 23.—G. P. Hall sold the first bale of cotton here. It was bought by T. O. Tabor & Son for 14 1-4 cents per pound, and it weighed 466 pounds. It was classed as strict middling.

ATHENS MAYOR URGED TO RUN FOR 3D TERM

H. J. Rowe Petitioned by Hundreds of Citizens to Enter Race Again.

ATHENS, Aug. 23.—Despite the fact that he has already served two terms as mayor of Athens, H. J. Rowe, who is now at the head of the city government, is being urged strongly by his hundreds of friends here to enter the race again this fall. A petition is being circulated freely by his friends and many are signing it, but as yet the Mayor has kept quiet as to his decision, and it will probably be several days before he gives out a statement as to whether he will stand for re-election again.

A bill providing a commission form of government for Athens passed by the general assembly is to be voted on by the people this fall and what bearing this will have on the mayor's race is still problematical.

Bumper Cotton Crop In Albany District

Several Hundred Bales Have Already Been Received in Market.

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—That about 50 per cent of the cotton in the Albany territory is from ten to fifteen days earlier than last year is the estimate of well-informed cotton men in Albany. The fact that Albany has received several hundred bales already, not counting that moved direct to the compress, is considered evidence that its estimate is approximately correct.

Last year, in addition to making a poor cotton crop, the farmers had no forage and have had to buy high-priced feed for eight months. While the acreage in feed crops this year is not much greater than it was last, the farmers have paid more attention to its cultivation, therefore making a better crop. With a bumper cotton crop and plenty of feed for their stock, the farmers expect a season of prosperity.

COUPLE REWEDS AFTER HAVING BEEN DIVORCED

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—After living together for twenty years and having several children born to them, Mrs. Lizzie Cooper sued Thomas Cooper for divorce, which was granted. Then he sued her for the amount of earnings, claimed as $1,800 in value, during this twenty years, she having possession of it all, and the husband not a penny.

The Supreme Court this week granted him a half interest. The wife claimed she had paid out $1,000 in fines for selling whisky, etc., but admitted she had also sold liquor. The two have become reconciled and have again married.

TWO CRAZY MEN ENGAGE IN FIGHT IN HALL JAIL

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Two crazy men, allowed the freedom of the hallway in the Hall County jail here, became engaged in a fight, and J. C. Johnson was choked and walloped severely. W. C. Stephens, whose form of mental derangement is on the order of melancholia.

Screams for help and the sound of blows were heard and a large number in the neighborhood of the prison were attracted. Johnson was beat up and bruised considerably by Stephens.

COTTON RECEIPTS SHOW DECLINE AT COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—Taking the position that Columbus has suffered the past few years because her cotton receipts have fallen off materially, the Columbus Board of Trade has inaugurated a campaign for the purpose of bringing more cotton to this city. Last year an effort was made to stem the tide of cotton going elsewhere by placing buyers on the streets, and while it had some effect, it did not counteract all the damage that has been done. An effort will be put forth to make the cotton market one of the most attractive in the State.

NEGRO SLAYER IS GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE AT ALBANY

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—In Superior Court of Baker County, which convened at Newton this week, several cases were tried. Simon Johnson, a negro, who killed his stepson on the Grant place in July, was found guilty and given a life sentence. Will Bodiford, a negro, was found guilty of attacking a negro girl and sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary. Jake Rhoades was found guilty of violating the prohibition law and given a six months' sentence or a fine of $200.

CITY RESERVOIR TURNED INTO A SWIMMING POOL

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—Those of Cordele who like an occasional dip into the water to alleviate the suffering of the summer heat probably will have their desires satisfied during this season of next year.

It is proposed to convert the reservoir at the old waterworks station into a swimming pool when the new plant is constructed.

COLQUITT LIKELY TO VOTE $400,000 BONDS FOR ROADS

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—A bond issue of $400,000 soon will be submitted to the voters of Colquitt County. The money is for public roads. Prominent politicians are firm in the belief that the issue will carry.

MASONS FROM 3 COUNTIES TO MEET AT ETON

Members of Order in Whitfield, Murray and Catoosa to Hold Convention Thursday.

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Masons of three counties—Whitfield, Murray and Catoosa—will gather at Eton, in Murray County, next Thursday for the annual meeting of the Tri-County Masonic Convention, Dr. S. A. Brown, worshipful master of the organization, having issued the formal call.

The day will be devoted to speaking and other matters of interest, to be featured at noon by a big picnic dinner. It is expected that several of the Grand Lodge officers will be in attendance, and plans are being made to entertain hundreds of visiting Masons.

The elective officers of the convention are as follows: Dr. S. A. Brown, Eton, worshipful master; H. B. Farrar, Dalton, senior warden; F. J. Vining, Dawnville, junior warden; W. M. Sapp, Dalton, secretary and treasurer.

Invitations have been extended to neighboring Masonic lodges to meet here Monday, when the grand master of the State Grand Lodge, Robert L. Colding, of Savannah, will be the guest of Dalton Masons. Plans are being made to entertain a large number of visitors at the afternoon and evening receptions for the distinguished visitor.

Columbus Fights For Better Service

Board of Trade Wants Central of Georgia to Put on More Passenger Trains.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—The Columbus Board of Trade has inaugurated a campaign to secure better passenger service over the Central of Georgia to points east and west from Columbus, it being claimed that the service that is now being given by the road is not satisfactory.

The Board of Trade is anxious to have the Central put on an additional train or two, or to have trains that come to the city reach Columbus in time to allow the people coming to the city an opportunity to do their shopping and return home if they wish in the afternoon of the same day. The trade organization has the backing of practically every business man in the city.

SEABOARD CONDUCTOR GIVEN $10,000 DAMAGES

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—After a strongly contested trial, both sides being represented by able counsel, a verdict was returned yesterday afternoon in Crisp Superior Court for $10,000 in favor of W. B. McMichael, of Jackson, against the Seaboard Railroad Company. McMichael had been in the employ of the road as a freight conductor and in an accident near Birmingham on the Atlanta and Birmingham division he lost a leg. He entered suit for $25,000 and the case was brought to this court for trial under the Federal employees' liability act.

NEW SCHOLARSHIP AT WOODBERRY SCHOOL

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Rosa Woodberry, of Atlanta, has notified the Thomasville Study Class that she has given a scholarship in her school in Atlanta to the class to be awarded by them to any deserving girl that they may select.

This action on the part of Miss Woodberry is appreciated by the members of the class, as it will afford advantages to some deserving girl here who is not able otherwise to have them. It is not known yet who has been selected for the place, but the class has the matter under advisement.

CAMILLA TO VOTE ON SCHOOL TAX SEPT. 30

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—September 30 has been set by the City Council of Camilla as the date for holding an election to ratify the schol tax bill for that town recently passed by the Legislature.

The election will be held under the same rules as elections for members of the General Assembly and the same qualifications will be required in registering. It is probable the opening of the school of Camilla will be deferred somewhat on account of this election.

RULES FOR PRIZES AT FAIR DECIDED UPON

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—The Directors of the Thomas County Fair to be held here this fall have received from the committee in charge the rules and regulations for measuring all crops to be exhibited for premiums and they will be followed closely.

J. Willis Moore has been named general director and will measure all acres and crops free of charge. It is said all indications point to the finest exhibit at this fair that has been known since it was organized.

THOMAS COUNTY FARMER EXHIBITS PRIZE CORN EAR

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—J. P. Cary, residing near Coolidge, had on exhibition here this week some corn grown by himself which is an example of what Thomas County can do in that line. One ear of this corn weighed two pounds and nine ounces and when shelled the grains filled a quart measure. The ear was twelve inches long.

Mr. Cary has a half acre of this corn which he will exhibit at the fair here this fall. He thinks his chances for first premium are fine.

Cupid Hits Old Mark; Children Wed, Too

One Pair Experienced in Matrimony, While Other Had to Run Away.

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The northern part of the county was this week the scene of two weddings of interest, owing to the wide difference in age of the couples, together with their popularity.

At Cohutta the Rev. W. C. Haddock and Mrs. Mary Ann Hartley were married. The wedding proved "Uncle Billy" Haddock's fourth venture, while his bride, Mrs. Hartley, was marrying for the third time. The Rev. J. C. Parrott performed the ceremony.

On the same date Miss Nola Starks, of Concord, became the wife of William Crain, of Beaverdale, the ceremony being performed by 'Squire J. D. Brackett. Mrs. Crain is 14 and her husband is just two years her senior.

While the wedding of Miss Starks and Mr. Crain was a runaway match, witnessed by only a few intimate friends and coming as a distinct surprise, there were fully 100 friends assembled to witness the Hartley-Haddock nuptials.

Thomas Farmers Can Own Products

Vegetables Put Up at Home Find Ready Sale in Thomasville Market.

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—Thomas County canned vegetables are on sale here at many of the grocery stores and are proving very popular.

There were more vegetables canned in this county this year than was ever known before, and it has been found to be quite a profitable business, the stores in Thomasville taking them readily and paying the highest market price for them.

Tomatoes especially have been canned in large quantities, and they are unusualy fine, better than the best quality bought heretofore by the merchants from wholesale houses in the North.

The advantage of the home product is that the tomatoes are gathered fresh from the vines and canned before they have had time to get old or damaged.

One farmer, who recently sold about 2,000 cans, said that he had received many compliments in regard to their quality by those who had used them.

GRIFFIN AFTER MEETING OF HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Through its secretary, W. B. Royster, the new Griffin Board of Trade has extended an urgent invitation for the State Horticultural Society to appoint this city as its place of meeting in 1914. The invitation is heartily indorsed by the Georgia Experiment Station. This is the first invitation sent out by the newly organized Board of Trade.

Another move by the board is to make Griffin the city beautiful. To this end a committee has been appointed to employ a civil engineer to look over the situation and make suggestions for improvements.

DALTON PRESIDING ELDER BEGINS FINAL ROUND

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Presiding Elder W. T. Irvine, of the Dalton District, to-day began his final round, and will visit the thirty-seven churches in the district before the annual meeting of the North Georgia Methodist Conference.

For society news of the South see page 10 of this section and the Society Section.

SUNBURNT SKINS NEED

CUTICURA SOAP

And Cuticura Ointment. For heat rashes, itchings, sunburn, wind irritations, redness and roughness of the face and hands, Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, has no rivals worth mentioning. No others do so much for the complexion, hair and hands.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address post-card "Cuticura," Dept. 13G, Boston.

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

PLANS NATIONAL MERCHANTS AND FARMERS' UNION

Louis S. Daniel, of Rome, Boosts Organization Similar to American Federation of Labor.

ROME, Aug. 23.—The organization of a National Farmers and Merchants' Co-operative Association for the mutual benefit is the plan conceived by Louis Spencer Daniel, the well-known booster and director of the local association and former director of the Rome Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

Daniel states that he is sure of the success of the national organization. He has already received hundreds of letters from all parts of the country.

The National Farmers and Merchants' Association would have an organization similar to that of the American Federation of Labor and Farmers' Union that would be absolutely free from politics.

WOMAN'S MISSION UNION CONVENES IN GAINESVILLE

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union, auxiliary to the Chattahoochee Baptist Association, was in session at the First Baptist Church here several days the past week, bringing a number of prominent women church workers to this city. It is said that the work of this union has become one of the most important in the denomination.

HALL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION TO MEET

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—One hundred delegates representing 65 Sunday schools of Hall County will come together in an interdenominational association, the first annual session to convene in this city next Tuesday morning for a two days' session. Hammond Johnson is county president, Henry H. Estes county secretary, and J. T. Telford, treasurer.

FLAG AND BIBLE ARE PRESENTED TO SCHOOL

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The Patriotic Order Sons of America of Dalton yesterday afternoon gave to the Dug Gap School a handsome American flag and a Bible.

Appropriate exercises marked the flag raising, Senator M. C. Tarver and the Hon. T. R. Ridley being among the speakers.

REVIVAL AT ELBERTON.

ELBERTON, Aug. 23.—The Rev. R. C. Cleckler, pastor, is conducting a series of meetings at the First Methodist Church. P. M. Boyd, of Nashville, is in charge of the singing.

$151,000 SUIT FILED TO TEST OLD STATE LAW

Former Dublin Merchant Defendant in Case Brought by Arthur H. Codington, of Macon.

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—An unusual suit to test the validity of an old statute which has been codified in the Georgia laws since 1837 and which is said to be the first suit of its kind ever filed in the State, has been filed here against G. A. Baynard, a former merchant of Dublin, by Arthur H. Codington, of Macon, for the sum of $151,000.

The law upon which the suit is based says that no business partnership may insert in their firm name the name of any individual not actually a co-partner nor continue in such firm the name of a retired partner, under the penalty of $100 a day for each day the name is so used. In his suit Codington alleges that Baynard indorsed certain notes with an old firm name of G. A. Baynard & Son and secured credit in this manner after the original partner had retired from business.

The case has excited a good deal of interest here, and much discussion as to whether the old statute can be enforced and Baynard be made liable for the full amount of $151,000 or that the statute can not be enforced now. It is said that Codington has filed the suit more to test the validity of the law than for any other purpose, and does not think that he has been damaged to the extent of the sum named.

CONFEREDATE MEMORIAL STANDS ON FEDERAL LAND

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—The only monument to a Confederate soldier which has been erected upon Federal grounds, except in national military parks, is that to be unveiled here August 27. It stands on the postoffice building square. This memorial also bears the distinction of being the first monument to a Confederate soldier erected by Children of the Confederacy. It is the monument to Colonel C. C. Sanders. Miss Katherine Dozier will present the monument to the chapter. There will be interesting exercises and addresses.

FRONT END OF MULE WAS "LOADED;" TALLEY IS KICKED

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Not dreaming that the front end of a Georgia mule could be "loaded," Sam Talley, of Harmony, came near being seriously injured when his mule jumped at him and struck him down with his fore feet. Mr. Talley rolled out of reach of the mule after suffering a number of severe bruises.

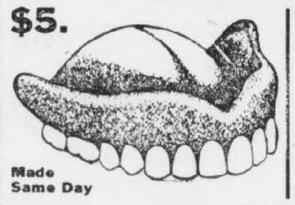
ALL DENTAL WORK GUARANTEED AT

DR. E. G. GRIFFIN'S

GATE CITY DENTAL ROOMS

24 1-2 Whitehall St. Phone M. 1708 — Over Brown & Allen's Hours: 8-6; Sundays 9-1

$5.



Made Same Day

OUR PRICES:

Bridge Work $4
Gold Crown $4
Gold Filling $1
Amalgam Filling .. 50c Up
Teeth Cleaned . $1 Up

Our guarantee means something. It is backed by our absolute responsibility and by 23 years of successful practice.

PAY ME FOR CURES ONLY

If you have been taking treatment for weeks and months and paying out your hard earned money without being cured, don't you think it is high time to accept DR. HUGHES' GRAND OFFER? You will certainly not be out a cent more money if not cured. Consultation and Examination are Free for the next thirty days.

If I decide that your condition will not yield readily to my treatment, I will be honest with you and tell you so, and not accept your money under a promise of a cure.

My treatment will positively cure or I will make you no charge for the following diseases:

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND URINARY TROUBLE, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, RUPTURE, ULCERS AND SKIN DISEASES CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

Eczema, Rheumatism, Catarrhal Affections, Piles and Fistula and all Nervous, Chronic and Private Diseases of Men and Women.

Newly contracted and chronic Cases of Burning, Itching and Inflammation stopped in 24 hours. I am against high and extortionate fees charged by some physicians and specialists. My fees are reasonable and no more than you are willing to pay for a cure. All medicines, the surest and best of drugs, are supplied from my own private laboratory. OUT-OF-TOWN MEN VISITING THE CITY, consult me at once upon arrival, and maybe you can be cured before returning home. Many cases can be cured in one or two visits.

CALL OR WRITE—No detention from business. Treatment and advice confidential. Hours 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. Sundays, 9 to 1. If you can't call, write and give me full description of your case in your own words. A complete consultation costs you nothing, and if I can help you I will.

DR. HUGHES, Opposite Third National Bank, 16 1-2 North Broad Street, Atlanta, Ga.

LATEST NEWS OF MIDDLE GEORGIA

3 CANDIDATES SEEKING TO BE MACON MAYOR

Miller, Dasher and Smith Promise Live Campaign in Central City. Outcome Very Uncertain.

MACON, Aug. 23.—Wallace Miller, Arthur L. Dasher or Bridges Smith will be the next Mayor of Macon. The entry of Mr. Miller a week ago assured a spirited three-cornered contest, the outcome of which it will be hard for anyone to forecast.

Mr. Dasher announced his candidacy eight months ago, running on an independent platform. Mr. Smith is the candidate of the administration faction. Mr. Miller heads a young men's ticket. The campaign has just opened, but it will become exceedingly active and interesting with the announcement this week of the Aldermanic tickets.

Mr. Dasher proposes to make a vigorous speaking campaign. Mr. Smith, on the other hand, will not make a speech or write a card, according to his present intention. He will simply depend upon his record and his friends for election. Mr. Miller will likely make a number of addresses setting forth his views on municipal questions.

Mr. Dasher has already begun his speaking schedule, having addressed various meetings of the laboring men.

Mr. Dasher is one of Macon's best-known lawyers. His practice is large and lucrative. Until elected Alderman two years ago, he had never held, or asked for, political office. In Council he took such a prominent stand on leading issues that he leaped into the limelight, and before he had served a year he was freely asked to run for Mayor. He announced last December. Eight years ago Mr. Dasher was president of the Chamber of Commerce, and that organization, under his administration, made a splendid record. Previously he had been chairman of the board of directors, and was for a number of years one of the recognized leaders of the trade body. He is a married man, with a large family. His eldest son, Arthur L., Jr., is associated with him in the practice of law.

Bridges Smith is perhaps as widely known as any Macon citizen. Since 1888, with the exception of two years, 1908 and 1909, he has been connected with the city government. In 1888 he was elected City Clerk, under Mayor Daisy Price. He served in that capacity until 1899, when Mayor Price died in office, shortly after being re-elected. Mr. Smith was then chosen as his successor, and he stayed in office until 1908, when he voluntarily retired. His friend and Alderman, John T. Moore, then ran against Judge A. L. Miller, and the latter was elected. At the ensuing election, Mr. Moore was again a candidate, and this time he beat Judge Miller. Mr. Moore held office two years, and was opposed at the expiration of his first term by Alderman N. I. Brunner, whom he defeated. A charter provision, which restricts a Mayor to two terms, debars him from running again.

Mr. Smith is avowedly the candidate for the administration, and in his announcement he declared his intention of continuing the policies of the Moore administration.

Before entering politics, Mr. Smith was a newspaper reporter, and during his quarter of a cenutry in public life, he has maintained a newspaper association. He writes special articles and local news for the Macon Telegraph. He has never been defeated for office. Mr. Smith is 66 years of age, though very active in both mind and body.

Mr. Miller, if elected Mayor, will be the youngest executive this city has ever had. He is only 28 years old. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia. He began the practice of law here, but later became manager of a provision house. Two years ago he resumed law, announced his candidacy for the Legislature, and was elected, although it took a recount of the ballots to establish his victory.

It was Mr. Miller's father, Judge A. L. Miller, who served as Mayor of Macon four years ago, defeating John T. Moore, who in turn defeated him. However, Wallace Miller is not running on his father's strength, as the elder Miller is opposed to his son's present political venture. He will get his father's support, however.

Mr. Miller's candidacy was first suggested two weeks ago, but in a very few days the boom became so substantial that Mr. Miller could not resist.

Waycross Council Asked to Explain

Claimed Number of Transactions Were In Violation of City Charter.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Is became known to-day that some time during September City Council would be requested for information of a number of transactions which have taken place within the past eighteen months, many of the alleged to have been in direct violation of the city charter. It is further alleged that a city employee while drawing his full time salary from the city looked after other work for which he was amply paid.

No namese have been disclosed as yet, and it is not known who will be mentioned when the request reaches Council. Some members of Council are inclined to demand an explanation of the published reports, but have not done so.

DENIES DISCRIMINATION CLAIMED BY SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—J. C. Whitney, president of the Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company, is in Savannah for a conference with the directors of the Board of Trade, to go over the allegations of discrimination against Savannah in favor of Jacksonville. Whitney asserted that there was no discrimination against Savannah. Except in a very few instances, he said, the freight rates to Jacksonville from Baltimore and other points in the North are higher than the rates to Savannah.

Dublin to Hold Big Agricultural Fair

Entire Twelfth Congressional District Will be Asked to Participate.

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—Plans are well under way for holding a large fair in Dublin this year, to be known as the Twelfth District Agricultural Fair, in which exhibits will be open to all of the counties in the Twelfth Congressional District, of which there are thirteen. The dates have been set at October 14 to 17, inclusive, the week previous to the State fair.

At a meeting held here this week organization of the corporation to handle the show was effected and the officers elected, as follows: President, W. B. Rice; vice presidents, Izzie Bashinski and M. S. Jones; secretary and treasurer, N. G. Bartlett.

The board of directors is as follows: W. B. Rice, M. S. Jones, N. G. Bartlett, Izzie Bashinski, T. W. Hooks, Frank Lawson, F. N. Watkins, H. E. Ray and H. G. Stevens.

Governor John M. Slaton will be invited to make an address during the fair, along with State School Superintendent M. L. Brittain and other prominent men of the State. A delegation of Dublin citizens will go to Atlanta Tuesday for the purpose of extending an invitation to Governor Slaton personally to come down and make an address during the fair.

Runs Small Farm In Heart of Griffin

Young Man Makes Large Yield of Irish Potatoes and Corn.

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—James C. Nutt, one of Griffin's best-known young men, is running a small farm in the heart of the city, and is making good at it. On a plot of land adjoining the cemetery, Nutt planted four acres of Irish cobbler potatoes. So many Irish potatoes in one field had never been seen in this section before.

For some time now the crop has been in process of harvesting. Up to date only a portion of the crop has been disposed of, but 400 bushels of the potatoes have been sold at a price ranging from 80 cents to $1 per bushel.

To increase the returns from the land, Nutt has planted rows of corn between the rows of potatoes, and the corn is now over shoulder high. The corn gives promise of making not less than 25 bushels to the acre, and if season is propitious, a good deal more.

JUDGE DANIEL TOO ILL TO PRESIDE OVER COURTS

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Judge R. T. Daniel, of the Flint River Circuit, who was so ill last week that he had to adjourn the August term of Spalding Superior Court, and who has not been able to attend the Butts County Court this week, continues quite ill at his residence here on Poplar street. He will not be able to preside over the Monroe Superior Court, which is to convene at Forsyth Monday.

Judge H. A. Matthews, of Macon, presided over the Butts court for Judge Daniel, and it is likely that he again will preside for ihm next week.

RURAL MAIL CARRIERS TO MEET AT MILLEDGEVILLE

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—The rural mail carriers for the Tenth Congressional District will meet here on Monday, September 1.

A barbecue dinner will be served to the visiting carriers, and plans are being perfected to make their visit an enjoyable one. The following program has been arranged: Prayer by the Rev. Harold Major. Address of welcome by Mayor M. S. Bell and Postmaster R. B. Moore. The response will be made by G. D. Braddock, the president of the association.

BIG BUILDING BOOM CONTINUES IN DUBLIN

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—There are in Dublin at this time in course of erection one six-story building, two three-story buildings five large warehouses and one large livery stable, which will be the largest in any city in this section of the State. The building boom has held up unusually well in the city this year despite the dull times that have been experienced in some other cities. These buildings are in addition to a large number of residences erected this year, also.

DUBLIN'S NEW THEATER TO OPEN SEPTEMBER 1

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—Dublin's new theater, "The Bertha," which has been in course of erection for the past few months, will open for the season in the second week in September next, the first play being "The Rose Maid."

Other plays booked for the coming season include the "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "Polly of the Circus," "The Blue Bird," "Everywoman," Fields' Minstrels, "The Leopard Spots" and a large number of other famous plays.

DUBLIN PUTS TIGHT LID UPON IMMORAL SHOWS

DUBLIN, Aug. 23. This city has put the lid on tight on shows, both motion picture and regular theaters, and has just created and elected a board of censors, whose duty it shall be to supervise the theaters of the city and rule out all immoral plays and pictures. The members of the board were elected by the City Council Tuesday night last.

SAVANNAH SHRINERS PLAN BIG RECEPTION

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Completing preparations for the reception of William W. Erwin, of Wheeling, W. Va., Imperial Potentate of the Shriners of North America, other members of the Imperial Divan of the Shriners and visitors from various temples, who will come to Savannah next month, the entire seventh floor of the Hotel Savannah has been reserved for them.

The Shriners of the Imperial Divan came in response to an invitation from Potentate Robert L. Travis, of Allee Temple, of this city, to attend a ceremonial session of that temple on September 12.

$8,000 IN CASH PRIZES IN LIST OF STATE FAIR

More Than Five Thousand Displays To Be Made at Macon. Nine County Exhibits.

MACON, Aug. 23.—Officials of the Georgia State Fair Association are enthusiastic over the prospects for this year's show. Already more exhibitors have applied than ever before, and the indications are that in all of the departments there will be a total of more than 5,000 different displays. The prizes this year aggregate more than $8,000 in cash, in addition to the special premiums given by individuals and corporations.

Nine counties have contracted to make county agricultural exhibits, and probably three more will enter the competition. Cobb County, represented by Gid Morris, has taken the first prize of $1,200 for three successive years, but this year Houston County proposes to contest for this award. W. C. Lewis, of Houston, is arranging that county's exhibit.

Racing will be a special feature this year, and purses awarded will amount to several thousand dollars. This will be the first State fair racing since 1908. A motordrome also is being erected for motorcycle racing.

Secretary Harry Robert is booking individual attractions for the midway instead of engaging a carnival company. More than 50 shows have already been secured, and more will be provided.

Judges Are Named.

Announcement has been made of the judges for the various departments, as follows:

Farm Implements—W. W. Elfe, Morris Putzel and W. G. Lewis.

Poultry and Pet Stock—Loring Brown.

Textile—John A. Porter.

Horticulture and Floriculture—Dan C. Horgan.

Flour, Tea and Coffee—Mrs. John C. Dietz, Miss Henrietta Glover and Mrs. Sol Hoge.

Carriages, Buggies and Wagons—W. A. Goodyear and W. P. Welsiger.

Musical Instruments—Mrs. I. H. Adams.

Canning Clubs—A. W. Smith, Mrs. W. D. Lamar and J. Walter Collins.

Fine Arts—T. O. Chestney and Rufus W. Evans.

Dairy and Beef Cattle—Sam N. Warren.

Swine and Sheep—Professor H. B. Carpenter.

Dairy—Sam N. Warren.

Apiary—W. V. McCook and C. E. Glisson.

Horses, Mules, Ponies and Colts—Professor Milton P. Jarnigan.

Machinery—W. W. Elfe, Morris Putzel and W. C. Lewis.

Textile Machinery—John A. Porter.

Cakes, Pies, Breads, etc.—Mrs. John C. Dietz, Miss Henrietta Glover and Mrs. Sol Hoge.

Needle and Fancy Work—Mrs. J. Ross Bowdre, Mrs. J. C. Morton and Mrs. W. E. Cookerly.

Fight Over Waycross Fire Department On

Council Likely to Pass Bills to Enlarge Brigade Over Chairman's Protest.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Unless Chairman H. Hengeveld, of the Police and Fire Committee, changes his opinion, a resolution providing to enlarge the Waycross fire department will be passed over his head. Two resolutions on the subject have been introduced in City Council, one by Alderman Beaton and the other by Alderman Morton.

Chairman Hengeveld claimed the city's financial condition would not permit any further expense for the fire department. Alderman Morton replied that when there was talk of making former Fire Chief Thomas Ballentyne, of Savannah, chief of the Waycross department, Chairman Hengeveld was willing to pay more money to get Ballentyne, and it seems the city is as well off now as when Mr. Hengeveld wanted to make the change.

The resolution for the employment of more men has enough votes to pass, according to Mr. Morton, but he will make no effort to get it through Council until Mr. Hengeveld makes a report.

Edwards Approves Military Highway

Savannah to Tybee Road Would Cost About $300,000—Congressman Sees Benefit.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—That the construction of a military highway from Savannah to Tybee, as advocated by Congressman Charles G. Edwards, would be of great benefit to the entire State, is the belief of J. N. King, well-known cotton factor of Rome.

At interior points the project is not looked upon as one that will be of benefit to Savannah alone, but is considered a movement on the part of the Government that would result in good to the State at large.

The propcsed highway will cost approximately $300,000, but it is believed that it would be money well expended since all sections would be benefited.

WARE COUNTY TAX RATE REDUCED 10 PER CENT

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Because of the big increase in the taxable property in Ware over last year's returns, the county tax rate was to-day reduced from 80 cents a hundred to 70 cents a hundred, with prospects bright for the same decrease another year. Approximately $50,000 will be spent by the county on road work this year, according to the budget announcement.

MERCHANTS OF AUGUSTA PLAN BIG TRADE BODY

Chamber of Commerce and Merchants and Manufacturers' Ass'n to Quit Field.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 23.—The Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Augusta has accepted the proposition of A. W. McKeand, of Atlanta, to take charge of a new commercial organization. To do this Mr. McKeand states that $60,000, or $20,000 a year for three years, must be secured.

The object of the new movement is to replace the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, which, with practically the same object in view, have been working at cross purposes for some years. It is stated that the Chamber of Commerce is making arrangements to wind up its business. This would leave the new organization planned in full command of the field.

At a meeting of citizens Mr. McKeand told them his proposition and some details of the work. It was agreed that his method was good. The new organization, which the officers and directors of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association agreed to, will be a consolidation of the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

Five Departments.

The new organization will have five departments.

First, the wholesale trade department, which will direct the trades trips; the salesman's school reports of trade openings; rebates on fares, and will foster a spirit of friendly rivalry between the merchants.

Second, the retail trades department, which shall handle all things pertaining to the retail trade. Especially will the credit bureau, now such a valuable asset of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, come under this department.

Third, the publicity department, from which will come all such literature as that pertaining to the city, its advantages, etc., and through the department conventions will be secured, special feature weeks arranged, etc.

Fourth, the industrial promotion department, which will handle all business pertaining to industrial work.

Fifth, the transportation department, under which will come the freight bureau, the most valuable asset of the Chamber of Commerce.

To begin this organization will entail much preliminary work, including a campaign of local men, directed by Mr. McKeand.

Augustans of all classes, whether in sympathy with the Chamber of Commerce or the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, have taken kindly to the new organization plan, and it bids fair to begin a new and entirely prosperous era for the city, whose natural advantages are such that with proper handling little is needed to make her the truly progressive city she deserves to be.

Waycross to Vote on Government Change

Hard Fight To Be Made by Both Sides—Election October 4.

WAYCROSS, GA., Aug. 23.—Voters of Waycross on October 4 will decide whether to change the form of city government to a combination city manager-commission form or retain the aldermanic form with a board of aldermen of twelve members instead of six.

A special election will be held then and the registration books are now open. It is known a strong fight will be made by both sides, and at this time it is hard to predict which will win. The city manager form of government has much support, but it is doubtful if those in favor of the change will work as hard to get the new charter approved as the opponents will work to defeat the measure which the Legislature passed this year.

If the city manager plan is approved Waycross will be the first Georgia city to adopt it.

Gov. Slaton Vetoes Chatham Land Grant

Says Resolutions Had Not Been Properly Passed by the Legislature.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Savannahans were surprised to read that Governor Slaton had vetoed a resolution providing for land grants to the trustees of the Chatham Academy.

Governor Slaton explained he vetoed the resolution because it had not been properly passed. It relates to disposition of ungranted lands in the county. Acts passed in 1788 and 1856 vested in the Chatham Academy and the Union Society considerable ungranted lands in Chatham. The purpose of the resolution is to authorize these institutions to claim the lands under the old acts.

G. M. C. OPENS SEPTEMBER 1.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—The Georgia Military College will open for the fall session on September 2. President Horton is expecting the largest attendance in the history of the institution. The Hon. Roy Stubbs, of Eatonton, will make the opening address.

FIRST BALE AT MILLEDGEVILLE.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—The first bale of cotton was marketed here yesterday by Mike Jackson, a negro, living in Wilkinson County. The cotton was sold to Mr. John Barrett, and brought 15 cents a pound.

HON. RALPH O. COCHRAN DELIVERS ∴ ∵ OPENING SPEECH AT CLAYTON, GA.

Candidate for United States Senate in Strong Address Outlines His Views On State and National Issues.

I am glad to be in Clayton and have an opportunity of addressing the people of Rabun County. You have heard the expression, "From Rabun Gap to Tybee Light," and it is fitting that in my campaign for the United States Senate I should deliver the keynote address in this county—the address that in a substantial measure carries my position on the questions that the people of Georgia will be interested in in casting their votes in the election next summer for a United States Senator—and this for the reason that I will show considerable activity in this campaign which will extend from the mountains to the sea.

It is further true that you people of Rabun live in a county that was established in 1819, almost a hundred years ago, and it bears the name of one of the Chief Executives of this State. This county has furnished many men in the public arena during its history who have been worthy sons and distinguished servants of the people.

I am here to-day in advocacy of my candidacy for the United States Senate. At the suggestion of some zealous friends, I entered this race some time ago. It is an undertaking worthy of any man's highest ambition, and I entered the field conscious of the great responsibilities that will rest upon me if elected, and also conscious of the difficulties that confront me in achieving this ambition.

I want to tell you here to-day that I am going to Washington. I expect to win this race, and I have every confidence in ultimate success. It is a big undertaking, but I believe that the sentiment of the people of Georgia to-day is in favor of electing a business man, a man in the best vigor of his life, and one who will endeavor to represent all people alike and all interests alike within the borders of the State.

It is true that probably in point of years, as I am only 39 years of age, I am the youngest man who has ever offered in the State of Georgia for this high position. During the progress of the campaign I will be confronted with the charge that I am too youthful, and further that I have not had sufficient experience. I want to say in advance in answer to any such criticism that may be raised, that many of the best political servants that this country has ever had have been men who have achieved success and attained high political positions early in life. With a long stretch of years before them they well used them, and therefore their services were of inestimable worth. As a matter of fact, it is common knowledge that any man is in his prime from thirty-five to fifty years of age. In fact, the Constitution of the United States requires that one must be only 30 years old to be eligible for the United States Senate.

I am frank to tell you that at no period in life do I anticipate ability for greater labor or clearer thought. It is true that I am inexperienced on many matters pertaining to state affairs, but I do insist that I am capable of learning and that I can count upon a reasonable number of years in which to be of service to my State and country if honored with this high position.

In advocacy of my candidacy, I place before the people of Georgia the proposition of electing a business man. I can properly call attention to the young business men of this State and to the fact that in these times of industrial growth and progress that the best thing that the people of any State can do is to elect a larger percentage of the men of the business circles of their State. If there is any question that requires business ability and skill to properly settle, I should say that those which pertain to the nature of the laws under which we shall live are pre-eminently the ones where business experience, understanding of the people's wants and the ultimate effect are the ones that literally demand the business man to pass upon. A slogan of the day in which we live is more business and less theory.

Prejudice and Demagogy to Play No Part in Campaign.

I want to tell you here and now that as far as I am concerned you will never see any trace of demagogy in anything that I may say or do. I shall deal frankly with the people of Georgia, and my campaign will be devoid of tricks and makeshifts. My candidacy will be put up to the people of Georgia strictly on its merits, without frills or deception. I am nothing more than a plain business man. I have no pre-eminent ability on any lines, but I assure you in advance that if I am elected I shall ever endeavor to follow the paths of right and do my duty. This campaign as far as I am concerned will never be marred with the demagogism that arouses the prejudices of the rich against the poor, the city man against the country man, or the young man against the old man. I shall take the position in the beginning and shall maintain it throughout the campaign that if I am elected I want to be elected by all classes of our citizens, and if elected I pledge you most sincerely and earnestly that I will represent all the people of Georgia and all the lawful interests within her borders.

Under my political canopy, so to speak, all classes of our citizens can rally. No prejudice has ever taken root in my bosom against the Jew in favor of the Gentile, against the Catholic in favor of the Protestant, against the Third party man in favor of the Democrat or against any man or class of men within our State who may belong to different parties, political faith, social circle or other relation contrary to that I occupy. I am frank to say that any man who harbors hatred for any class of our citizens is unworthy of the high position to which I now aspire. The bigot, the maligner of character, he a small man, should have no place in shaping the policies and destiny of this country. The same sun shines on all of us alike, we are the children of the same Creator, and in its last analysis there is no great difference in us anyway.

I have always endeavored to be fair to all the interests of capital; I have always endeavored to be fair to the cause of labor; I shall endeavor to be fair in all of my relations with my fellow man, whether that relation be in private business matters or in public position, and if I go down in defeat contending for the wisdom of such a position I shall do so gladly and you shall have my approbation. It is well that I state on this occasion that I have never been aligned with any of the political factions of Georgia. During the past few decades when partisan heat reached high water mark I have always stood, since the early years of my manhood, as a free man and have acted on every election day in the way that I thought my vote would count for most looking to the best interests of the people of this State. We have been confronted at a number of elections with partisan politics and partisan issues. I thank God that we are now living in a more desirable day.

I am in favor of no class legislation. All legislation should be founded on the idea of the greatest good for the greatest number, irrespective of nationalities, wealth, education or anything else. However, if there is to be any class legislation, it should be in favor of the biggest class, and I should say that this class is composed of those of moderate means. If I ever cast a vote, if elected to the United States Senate, for any class whatsoever, it will be for the class here designated.

In my campaign for the Senate throughout the entire time I shall remain absolutely a free man. I shall not tie myself up with promises and political alignments. If elected I want to be a free man to represent the entire people of Georgia.

To men of experience and men of business affairs it is an accepted truth that no man need be a Croesus or an intellectual giant to represent well his people in legislative halls. What counts most is industry, integrity and sound common sense. If these elements are united in a candidate, he deserves well at the hands of his people. The making of laws and the administration of government is largely a business matter where good judgment and good conscientious service avail much.

Permit me to say also that God has endowed me with a degree of manhood and independence, so much so that I can tell you in all frankness and truth that if you do not see fit to elect me that it will be perfectly all right and I assure you that no scars will be left behind over which I will brood through the coming years. In this independence and manhood that I declare to you, there is no place for mudslinging and assassination of character. I will not indulge in any of this nor will I permit any of my friends to do so if within my power to prevent. The campaign does not involve personal issues. The issues are more substantial and more worthy of the intelligence of the people of Georgia.

I stand for good government in all of its forms, and I shall ever be the enemy of those principles and practices that are opposed to its preservation and promotion. I shall ever stand for the principles of government that represent the best interests of the farmer as well as the merchant, and in general, the best interests of every man of every class of citizens within the confines of this great State. I was born and reared on a farm in Campbell County, and I feel that my years of association with the people of the rural districts, their needs and their interests, have made me to know once for all the important recognition that should be accorded to them. Then with the business experience that I have had elsewhere, as an education in after years, I feel that I can represent the entire people of this State with fellowship of feeling and wisdom and justice to all.

Economy in National Expenditures Insisted Upon.

At this time I want to put the people of Georgia on notice that, if elected as one of the United States Senators from Georgia, I will become in a measure a watchdog of your treasury. I have long been convinced that the practices that we are following of continuously raising taxes on property, businesses, corporations, and otherwise, should be stopped. There is hardly a session of the Georgia Legislature or a session of the United States Congress that some new form of taxing the people or else increasing the old forms is not projected. I ask you, in the name of reason, when and where will these agitations and practices stop? There is an eternal cry of more money, that our institutions are being throttled and that the State and nation are lagging in progress on account of insufficient funds. You know as well as I do that if the State of Georgia had five times as much revenue for the Legislature to spend that every dollar of it would be spent and they would still be in need of more money.

As a matter of fact, unless the increase of the burdens of taxation is not halted, taxes will become very oppressive to the people of this country. Take your State tax, your county tax, your city tax, your professional tax, your corporation tax, your inheritance tax, your income tax, your occupation tax, your road tax, your local school tax, your poll tax, and possibly others, and I tell you when any man gets through at the end of the year with paying these various amounts he has done a fairly good year's work to have made profit enough out of his business to meet them. The philosophy of all taxation, according to my thinking, is that instead of the everlasting increase in the forms of taxing the people and also the amounts, that the revenue of the State should only increase with the enhancement of property, more money coming into the State, and more citizens as our common population. With an increase of revenue along these lines, with a corresponding limitation of appropriations, our State and country will always be in a solvent condition and our people will be prosperous and happy.

I have all along been of the opinion that our people should not look too much for support to the Government under which they live. The greatest men that this State or country have ever produced have been men who have worked their way through difficulties and hardships. The best principle of government that can be advocated is that of throwing every citizen that is able-bodied upon his own resources. Therefore, the sentiment that is rapidly taking root in the States of this country that we should look more to the bounties of the Government is a cancer in the body politic and will ultimately prove fatal if it is not checkmated. History records the fact that the decline of the Roman Empire set in with the free corn that was distributed to the population. It has been estimated that at one time more than 300,000 people were fed at public expense. The manhood of this country has always been honest and hardy, and we have builded a republic that is the light of the world, and if it continues in its leadership the same manhood and independence that led us into freedom must care for the affairs of state through the coming years.

Opposes Unnecessary Legislation.

In our zeal for this cause or that cause that may be advocated, we should always be conservative in our thoughts, speech and actions. There is no business, much less a government, that can go forward in splender and success where fits and spasms characterize those who are interested. Sanity should characterize every man's discussion of public questions, and I tell you that when your vote is cast on the side of conservatism you will seldom err from what is best for your family, yourself and your country.

It is true that State laws and National laws, in fact laws of all kinds, should be somewhat in the vanguard of actual practice and in a measure be some high ideals for the manhood and womanhood of this State and country, as well as for the rising generation. However, we all know that laws that are not supported with public sentiment are of no avail and become nullities on our statute books.

I am further of the opinion that we are passing too many laws in our State and Nation. It seems that we have arrived at the point where we are law-ridden; almost unnumbered laws that everybody is presumed to know, but on the other hand there is no one who does know. There is much legislation that is transgressing the inalienable rights of property and person and much of that that is suggested tends too much this way. I took occasion not long ago to count the sections of laws that compose the Code of Georgia. It is astounding but true that there are approximately 8,000 sections of laws under which we are living this day. It has almost gotten to the point where a man's mind must be an encyclopedia to carry the innumerable laws governing cities, counties, State and Nation. It reminds one of the old adage that that people is best governed which is least governed.

Favors Federal Aid for Good Roads.

I want to say on this occasion that, if elected to the United States Senate, I shall stand at all times for the cause of good roads. If we ever expect to have great systems of roads traversing this entire country the National Government will have to take hold of the proposition. It strikes me that money appropriated for this purpose is just as much within the Constitution of this country as the right to appropriate funds to deepen the waterways and improve harbors. By navigation the products of the country are distributed and it is a method of travel. The public roads of the country are the avenues of distribution whereby the products of the country reach the centers and are ultimately distributed throughout the country and the world. Furthermore, public roads are used by everybody, and the benefits derived from appropriations for this cause are participated in by all the people of the country. What cause more equitable or more worthy could be mentioned for the appropriation of public funds? The additional circumstance associated with improved public roads is the enhancement of property. Down in my country it is generally estimated that property on a macadamized road is never worth less than double as much as property on a road that has not been so improved. Also think of the convenience, pleasure and general benefits that are derived by reason of the construction of such thoroughfares. Think of the benefits to your county or any county that might be mentioned that would be derived from the construction of such highways. In consideration of these substantial reasons, I shall ever be a friend to the cause of good roads.

High Cost of Living Caused by Not Producing Enough.

Any people or any legislative body has lost sight of the greatest cause when they do not cultivate and improve the great agricultural interests of their county and State. You may talk of laws that curb vice, you may ponder over measures that involve appropriations, you may consider well laws that look to the raising of revenue, but back and more fundamental and of far greater importance is the great proposition of production. What we need most is more corn, more cotton, more of all the farm products, more manufacturing, more businesses that produce, businesses that feed and clothe the world. That is to-day, in my opinion, the prime reason for the high cost of living. We are just not producing enough.

The people of Georgia will never reach that point of prosperity that is most desired until they have learned to produce enough to get the other man's money and then have enough to live on so as to save them from the condition of having to buy the other fellow's products. I trust that I will live to see that day when by education and disposition the people of Georgia will learn and desire to produce more than they consume in the way of farm products, that splendid cash crop, the staple product, will be the surplus crop, that new era when every town and hamlet can boast of numerous manufacturing enterprises, when Georgia-made goods are sold around the world. Let us make the people of other States become the buyers of our products, and we the recipients of the splendid income.

If elected to the United States Senate I shall always do the best that in me lies to get increased appropriations for the educational interests of the various States of the Union where agricultural training is taught. The National Government, in wisdom, through the Agricultural Department has started up a system of education and scientific experiment along agricultural lines which will prove, I have no doubt, to be of the greatest service to the material interests of this country of any department known to the National Government. It will be my purpose to work for and to vote for all measures and appropriations which look to the improvement and enlargement of this great cause in the dispensation of National funds.

If I am elected to the United States Senate I want to pledge you here and now my unswerving support of all measures that look to the general betterment of humanity. We are living in times when the humanity of man is manifested in its most splendid form. Laws that are humanitarian in their nature, just in their spirit, broad in their conception of human rights will always find a friend in me. The old idea has long since passed away that every man should live for himself. Thank God that we live in a better and brighter day when the living and the hopes of humanity are upon a more just basis and there is recognition of the higher laws of nature and the beneficent conceptions of the Creator of us all.

As an incentive to high purpose and lofty achievement, we should bear in mind that the names and memories of those only are revered and live in history who lived and worked to do something for others. Selfishness, living for self, has never made any man great in the estimation of his fellowman. The world has gotten rid of much of the tyranny that has characterized it in the past, but the tyranny of brain and the tyranny of worth should continue and will continue as long as civilization endures. Ambition to do something for others as well as self should characterize the life of every man.

Favors Exploiting the Great Resources of Georgia.

There is another matter that I wish to speak of to which I will give as much of my ability and time as possible if elected. I refer to the advertising of the resources of Georgia and the entire Southland. This advertising by one in this exalted position by speech and otherwise can be made of inestimable worth to this State and section. Georgia and the entire South needs more capital and more people. Any man who is in favor of any law or laws that tend to antagonize capital and mistreat the institutions in which it is invested is the enemy of the State. In addition, what county in Georgia would not be better off if it had twice as many people in it as it has to-day? The multiplication of population means better roads, better schools, better churches, better mail facilities and better communities in general. These ends are worthy of note and should always receive the attention of the representatives of this State in these high positions.

If elected to the United States Senate, it will be my purpose to perform well what might be termed the small duties incident to this high office. Those who might desire positions either for themselves or their boys, who might at any time wish information concerning any matters in the city of Washington pertaining to the Government, or local matters, those who desire appropriations for this purpose or that purpose in their respective cities and districts, in general those who want ready service of their representative in getting something or doing something where their United States Senator can be of service to them, I will be the man to call upon. I pledge you in advance that no considerable amount of my time will be taken up in the study of foreign questions or the preparation of what might be termed big speeches, but, on the other hand, I will try to inject as much business in the situation as possible and serve in a business way the people of Georgia, not only concerning such matters as I hear mentioned, but in promoting and voting for legislation which will promote the general interests of the State, as well as the country at large.

I am deeply interested in the cause of education in all of its forms. Our public schools are the greatest institution that has become a part of the government of this State. Public schools touch every man's interest, and in them is involved the element of an elementary education which means better citizenship and more happiness on the part of our entire population. Almost as essential are the institutions of higher learning of this State. Also our colleges of technical training which prepare the young man and young woman to make a living have probably become the most popular institutions in the way of higher training that we have in the State. The old idea was to educate the smart boys in classical training either for the ministry, medicine or the law. This conception of higher learning is in a measure passing away, and technical training is largely the slogan of the times in which we live.

I do not know how you people in Rabun County feel about it, but I imagine that you have about the same feeling and sentiment that we people of Fulton have, as well as the people of all the other counties of this State—that is the constantly recurring panics that disturb and distress the business interests of this country. I do not know whether or not any man can assign with accuracy the immediate causes of these recurring panics. However, I am inclined to believe that the most prominent cause is the drastic reform legislation that sets up about every eight or ten years. I am in favor of a certain amount of reform. We all know that in the great economy of nature change must take place either for good or ill. The country that does not improve its condition must of necessity retrograde. On the other hand, I am opposed, and I shall always vote accordingly, to reforms and reform measures which come in bunches and have the inevitable effect of upsetting the entire business of this State and country. As far as I am concerned, I want a little rest so that I may have an opportunity of accumulating some of the world's goods while in the vigor of manhood, and not look too much to the eradication of all evil and the improvement of our institutions and country on the Utopian idea for our children and our children's children. As I see it, the present epoch we now call recent is the most prosperous and happy period that the world has ever known.

We often lose sight of the untold good that has been accomplished by the people of our day and our fathers before us. In fact, we live in the best times and we constitute the greatest people that this world has ever seen. Six thousand years of recorded history does not find a parallel. There is not so much ill in man and the human race as we are often led to believe. I have often said that the good man in any community is the good fellow after all. Think of man in this day of enlightenment and the society in which we live. He works hard and usually by the sweat of his brow he provides for wife and children. He is interested in educational advantages of his family, he looks forward with a feverish mind to the ultimate condition when no longer he will be the mainstay of these loved ones. We are rich in charity, we are humane in the treatment of those who are unfortunate, our ideals are high, and we are recipients by reason of our intelligence and industry of most of the good that the world affords.

Another point that I wish to bring out: Too much experiment is always dangerous. The people of any State or country that is experimenting with this law, this institution, and this new idea are apt to fall into the ways that will lead them into departures from the fundamentals of their institutions which probably will prove dangerous and fatal. It is always better to let other people, other States and other men work out the issues of state, experiment and ascertain the truth, and then the wisdom of its adoption becomes clear and of no loss to that people who follow in the light of this experience. Of course some experiment along sane and conservative lines is good for all people, and if such is not indulged in they are liable to become laggards and drones. However, the people of Georgia should never become distinguished as a people of experiment, and the State should never be known as an incubator of new ideas.

If I am elected to the United States Senate, I shall always stand for clean government, wise laws and pure administration. We live in a country where in theory every man's chance is alike. God has made us unequal in body and mind, but under the Constitution and laws of the United States, as drawn by those immortal men, the fathers of this country, whose names shall live as long as recorded history is preserved, imbedded in that great instrument and laws, the general principle of equal rights to all and an equal chance in the struggles of this life. No man should ask for more than justice and an equal chance. No man should be willing to surrender to any other man his equal chance and justice in the race of life. I shall always be opposed to plunder in any form and shall ever stand for the best laws to perpetuate and preserve the Government as founded by the fathers of this country.

However, it is true that it does seem like something is wrong at times with our institutions when one man in the short space of a lifetime can accumulate a billion of dollars. We have in these United States one-sixteenth of the population of the world and we possess one-fourth of its entire wealth. Such a splendid commentary upon the people who in only a century or two past found the vast expanse of our country a wilderness and here the institutions and wealth to which we are heirs.

Amid the masterful strides made by this country within the past fifty years, on account of a serious handicap, the South is just now coming into her own. Georgia and the entire Southern States are rich in natural resources—we have the climate, we have the soil, we have the minerals, we have the water power, and, thank God, we have the brain and the industry that will yet make of our Southland the fairest spot beneath the sun.

There is no use for history except the lessons that it teaches. We are living in the light of many experiences of the past, and as the light of these experiences falls upon our pathway our days will be splendid and our accomplishments beyond the dreams of men.

I love Georgia and her people. Born within her borders, educated within her institutions, associated with Georgia people, I bear to her the warmth of sympathy and childish affection that I trust will continue unabated during the time that I shall live. The mountains lifting their lofty peaks amid the skies, the old red hills of Georgia, dear to the heart of all, the table lands, rich and fertile, and extended in area, her rippling streams in music, wind their way to the mighty sea, seven out of the nine climates with which the Nation is characterized, I am devoted to this people and this mighty State.

With renewed purpose, and a common ambition, let us press forward in the mighty causes of civilization and the accomplishment of higher ideals.

(Adv.)

SOCIETY NEWS of the SOUTH

Waycross

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Mrs. V. L. Stanton and Miss Mary Stanton have returned from a visit to Atlanta and points in North Georgia.

Miss Clifton Wing, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. B. Thorpe, has returned to her home in Macon.

Mr. and Mrs. Dessau Bunn, en route to their home at Fairfax from St. Simons Island, where they spent the summer, were guests of relatives in Waycross this week.

Miss Jessie Lou Stanley visited relatives in Brunswick this week.

Miss Leila Paschall, who has been visiting in Atlanta, will spend some time in Rome before returning home.

Mrs. R. E. Brown and children have returned from a visit to relatives in Scranton, Pa.

Mrs. J. P. Dukes and children visited in Savannah this week.

Misses Viola and Ruby Clemens are visiting relatives in Savannah.

Following a short visit in New York City, Mr. L. Volney Williams will join Mrs. Williams and children in Michigan for an extended visit. Mr. Williams sailed for New York from Savannah Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gaston Lewis, of New York, are in the city for a visit of several months.

Mrs. E. J. Seay and Miss Elwood Seay have returned from a visit to Columbia, S. C.

Mrs. J. P. Moody, of Florida, is the guest of Mrs. W. T. Seaman.

Mrs. A. J. Miller left Thursday for Wilmington, N. C., where she will visit relatives.

Mrs. M. Z. Hinnant and children have returned to Wilmington, N. C., after a visit to friends and relatives in Waycross.

Mrs. C. R. Powrie and little daughter, Jean, of New York, arrived Wednesday to join Mr. Powrie and will make Waycross their home.

Members of the Friday Club were entertained yesterday by Misses Lucile and Susie Sutton.

Miss Aline Jeffers is expected home shortly from a visit to her sister, Mrs. John D. Tucker, in Birmingham, Ala.

Crawfordville

CRAWFORDVILLE, Ga., Aug. 23.—Miss Virginia Butler, of Madison, is the guest of Miss Frances Burgess. Several delightful entertainments have been given in her honor among them receptions by Misses Melton and Asbury.

Miss Mattie Jordan, of Atlanta, spent a few days here the past week the guest of Miss Blanche Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Golucke, Mr. A. G. and Mrs. R. W. Golucke and daughters, Anna Catherine and Mary Gordon, are spending the week at Hot Springs, N. C.

Miss Lillian Asbury leaves this week for Elberton to visit Miss Allen, who was one of Miss Asbury's attractive guests last week.

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Owens and daughter, Aileene, of DeLand, Fla., are spending some time here with friends.

Colonel and Mrs. J. Frank and daughters, Cornelia and Nell, of Dothan, Ala., spent several days here as the guests of Mr. W. P. Rid.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Leary and Guy, Jr., have returned to Augusta after spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Gee. Miss Martha Griffith returned home with them.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Anthony and Mr. L. P. McCord, of East Palm Beach Fla., are here visiting.

Miss Mary Fannie Harris, of Augusta, is the guest of Miss Emma Chapman.

Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Gunn have returned from Augusta and Atlanta, where they spent several days last week.

Colonel and Mrs. J. A. Beasley are visiting in Atlanta.

Mesdames J. V. Andrews, J. H. Callahan and W. C. Andrews, all of this city, are spending some time at Borden Wheeler, Ala.

Miss Minnie Olive Park will entertain a house party this week. Those invited are Misses Mary Holden, of Athens; Anita Sanford, of Augusta, and Kathleen Kendrick, of Sharon.

Milledgeville

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Joseph Cleveland Cooper entertained on Thursday evening in honor of her sister, Miss Carrie Talbot. Hearts-dice was played, after which a delightful salad course was served. Those present were the Misses Susan Myrick, Jesse Allen, Maggie Bivins, Floride Allen, Isabella Allen, Pauline Nisbit, Helen Maxwell, Hattie Pottle, Mary Amos and Francis Conn, Edwin Allen, James Sibley, Erwin Sibley, John Sibley, Malcolm Flemister, Charles Conn, Henry McAuliffe, Charles Brown, Arthur Carr, Stewart Wootten and James Clark, of Atlanta.

Miss Marguerite Joseph entertained on Monday at a suit-case shower for Miss Katherine Scott, who leaves soon for an extended trip through the North. Each lady brought some gift for the honoree.

Mrs. Frank Bone entertained at her home on Greene street Wednesday afternoon in honor of Miss Francis Stevens, of Macon, when "42" was played, after which a salad course was served. Those present were Mrs. W. T. Garrard, Mrs. Y. A. Little, Mrs. Cleve Cooper, Mrs. Lodrick Jones, Mrs. Culver Kidd, Mrs. John Barrett, Mrs. I. C. Case, Mrs. E. A. Tignor, Mrs. E. E. Bass, Miss Carrie Talbot, Miss Beuna Barrett and Miss Annie McKinley.

Another social event of the week was a party given by Miss Katie Cline on Tuesday afternoon, her guests being Mrs. L. M. Jones, Jr., Mrs. Harry Bone, Mrs. Frank Bone, Mrs. Logan Griswold, Mrs. Bee Bethune, Mrs. George Brantley, Miss Francis Conn, Miss Frances Stevens, Miss Pauline McKinley, Miss Annie McKinley and Miss Hattie Pottle.

Covington

COVINGTON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Clarence Terrell entertained at the Lyric Theater on Thursday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Alva Cooper, of Savannah, who is the guest of Mrs. J. O. Cooper. Mrs. Terrell's guests included Mrs. Alva Cooper, Mrs. J. O. Cooper, the Misses Eloise Cooper, Ida and Annie Higgins, Eleanor Butler, Frances Henderson, Hyda Heard and Bonner Sims, Mrs. H. D. Terrell and Mrs. J. Bain Terrell.

Miss Louise Whitehead entertained on Tuesday evening at her home on Monticello street with a progressive conversation party in honor of her house guest, Miss Ella Mae Ellis, of Macon. The guests included the Misses Natalie Turner, Annie Pauline Anderson, Lartrelle Meadors, Dorothy Lee, Ruth Weldon, of Talladega, Alabama; Frances Dearing and Marion Sherman, James Lester, Jim Wells, Rufus Franklin, Charles Ellis, Guy Robinson, Candler Harwell, Ivey Smith, Lamar Smith, Reginald Robinson, Perrino Dearing, Fred Bush and Guy Rogers.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Fowler, Miss Louise Fowler, Mrs. J. W. Stephenson, Miss Eva Stephenson, Mrs. Lillian Stephenson Weaver, Roy Stephenson, of Tampa, Fla., and Hugh Wright were among those from Covington who attended the Duffy-Stephenson wedding, which was a pretty event of Thursday, taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Parker Ernest Duffy at Morrow.

Mrs. Thomas Berry entertained a number of relatives last week at a family reunion, the guests including Mr. and Mrs. John P. Blanton, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Harris, of Alabama; Mrs. J. W. Loyd, of Dawson, Ala.; Mrs. R. L. Tye, of Mansfield; Mrs. H. B. Thacker, of Oxford, and Mrs. A. J. Blanton.

Moultrie

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—Miss Lucile Autrey entertained the members of the Entre Nous Club on Saturday morning. Assisting Miss Autrey were her sisters, Mrs. Roy Autrey and Mrs. Clyde Taylor.

Complimentary to her sister, Miss Mary Walker, of Atlanta, Mrs. T. W. Maddox entertained at a "42" party on Tuesday morning.

Mrs. A. W. Chase entertained a number of her friends on Thursday afternoon at a domino party.

Sylvania

SYLVANIA, Aug. 23.—Miss Nelle Davis entertained at cards on Tuesday morning for the Misses Willie Christie and Lucile Evans, of Savannah. First prize, a box of stationery, was won by Miss Ruby Mauldin. Those present were the Misses Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, of Atlanta; Bertha Pearson, Maud Hilton, Jupnita Williamson, Ruby Mauldin, Kate Patrick, Lucy Morel, Sadie Lovett and Esther, Ruth and Kathleen Mimms.

Mrs. John C. Hollingsworth entertained the Ladies' Culture Club on Tuesday afternoon. The program consisted of a study of "Famous Georgians."

A party enjoying an outing at Brannen's Bridge on Wednesday included Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Powell, Mesdames A. T. Perkins, Lecie Davis and J. W. Overstreet; the Misses Mattie Zoe Mallory, Willie Christie, Lucile Evans, Nelle Davis and Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, Julian Cooper, Willie Robbins, Spencer Powell, Bates Lovett and Edward Overstreet.

Mrs. R. F. Jarrell, Jr., entertained the Civic Club on Wednesday afternoon. An interesting program was rendered, followed by delicious refreshments.

Mrs. J. C. Hollingsworth entertained at cards on Tuesday evening for Miss Mattie Mallory and Paul Mallory, of Clyo. Those present were the Misses Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, of Atlanta; Miss Mattie Zoe Mallory, of Clyo; Miss Ruby Mauldin, Miss Nelle Davis, Paul Mallory, of Clyo; Abe Greenberg, Spencer Powell, Edward Overstreet and Bates Lovett.

Miss Margaret Flood

of Savannah, one of the popular members of the school set. Miss Flood is also taking an active part in the girl scout movement, being captain of a patrol.

Tallahassee

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 23.—Mrs. H. T. Felkel entertained informally at her home on College avenue Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. W. E. Shackelford, of Jacksonville, was a recent visitor to the Capital City.

Governor Park Trammell left Thursday for a ten days' vacation at Waynesville, N. C., where he joined Mrs. Trammell.

Mrs. S. D. Chittenden at her beautiful home on Park avenue on Wednesday morning entertained at auction bridge in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Wight, of Cairo, Ga., who is visiting her for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Winthrop returned Thursday from Atlantic Beach, having made the return trip from Tallahassee in their automobile.

The regular Thursday night's dance was enjoyed by the society folk at the Elks' Club.

Pensacola

PENSACOLA, Aug. 23.—Pensacola society was much interested in the marriage on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock of Mrs. Mary Dallas Strong, formerly a social favorite in Pensacola, to William F. Quicksall, which took place in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Strong recently visited Mrs. Albert Hyer at her beautiful Bayshore residence, Virginia Lodge, and while here was entertained by Mrs. E. J. Wilson and many other of her old friends.

Mrs. W. H. Northup, who has been spending the past month in the North Carolina mountains, in the beautiful Sapphire Country of Saluda and Waynesville, returned home on Tuesday. Mrs. Northup stopped a few days in Atlanta, where she met Mrs. Pat McHugh, formerly Mrs. Pebley, of Pensacola, at the Hotel Majestic.

Miss Madge Cushman, of Knoxville, Tenn., accompanied by her nephew, Robert Daniels, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Daniels, arrived Saturday on a two weeks' visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton H. Cushman.

The North Carolina mountains are a favorite summer resort for Pensacolans, and at Waynesville this summer there is quite a colony. Mrs. C. W. D'Alemberte, who is now in Rome, Ga., and Mrs. W. H. Northup spent some time at Waynesville, and Mrs. Smithwick, two children, William and Mary, and Mrs. Smithwick's sister, Miss Verren, are now there. Mrs. Alice Aylward, who formerly made her home here and who was recently the guest of Mrs. J. J. Hooton, is also at Waynesville.

Griffin

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Carlton Jones entertained her bridge club Tuesday afternoon at an al fresco party. On Wednesday afternoon she was hostess at a domino party.

Miss Mamie Slade and Miss Carrie Slade were hostesses Wednesday evening at a lawn party in honor of their guests, Miss Irene Dempsey, of Cedartown, and Miss Inez Hyman, of Cordele.

Miss Mary Bass was hostess at an automobile party to Barnesville in honor of Misses Mamie and Carrie Slade, Irene Dempsey and Inez Hyman.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Baxter were hosts at a lawn party Friday evening in compliment to their guest, Miss Jessie Robertson, of Forsyth.

On Wednesday morning Miss Olive Boyd was hostess at a rook party in honor of her guest, Miss Mary Watkins, of Atlanta.

Mrs. James Nutt entertained Monday afternoon at a bridge party in honor of Miss Katherine Wooten, of Washington.

Mrs. John Henry Newman entertained fifty ladies Friday afternoon at a theater party especially in compliment to her sisters, Mrs. H. L. Wheat, of Macon, and Mrs. Idus C. Doe, of LaGrange.

Mrs. James Kimbrough entertained Wednesday evening at a dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burr, of Atlanta. Invited to meet Mr. and Mrs. Burr were Mr. and Mrs. John B. Mills and Mrs. James Mills.

Mrs. Charles Murray and Mrs. Frank Ingram were hostesses Wednesday morning at a sewing party in compliment to Mrs. James Porter and her daughter, Mrs. Everts. Miss Della Porter and Miss Laura Porter, of Houston, Texas.

Little Miss Ethelyn Ison entertained twenty of her little friends Friday morning in honor of the fifth birthday.

Master Ernest Carlisle was host Wednesday afternoon in celebration of the fourth anniversary of his birth.

Little Miss Lily Rivers Griffin entertained a party of her young friends celebrating the fourth anniversary of her birth.

Cordele

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—A congenial party of young people enjoyed a picnic and fish fry Monday afternoon on the Flint River, the affair being in honor of the Misses Ruth and Clara Mae Jefferson, of Columbus.

Mrs. I. J. Lamb and daughter, Miss Mae Lamb, entertained Tuesday afternoon in honor of Miss Grace Dill, of Ocilla, the guest of Mrs. P. C. Dill and Misses Jefferson.

Mrs C. E. Todd was the hostess Monday afternoon to the Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church.

Durham

DURHAM, Aug. 23.—Misses Margaret and Bessie Erwin, with W. A. Erwin, "cotton king" of North Carolina, gave an elaborate dance at the Durham Country Club in honor of guests who were attending a house-party at "Hillcrest," the Erwin home. It was the most brilliant social affair of the season and was attended by young folks prominent in society through the State.

The guests of honor were Miss Agnes Tinsley Harrison, Atlanta; Miss Sadie Willham, Augusta; Miss Katherine Overman, Washington, D. C.; Hamilton Jones, Charlotte; Hugh Thompson, Raleigh, and Terry Lyon, Fayetteville.

West Point

WEST POINT, Aug. 23.—Miss Mary Booker entertained at rook Thursday evening in honor of Mrs. John T. Ivey and Miss Eloise Sikes, of Luverne, Ala. After the game sandwiches and tea were served.

Dublin

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—Miss Ruth Toole, of Macon, was the guest of honor at an auction bridge party which Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Toole gave Tuesday evening. Playing were the Misses Ruth Toole, Mabel Harvard, Dorothy Hooks, Mamie Ramsay, Frances Webb and T. W. Hooks, O. G. Sparks, J. B. Hicks and W. R. Brigham.

A much-enjoyed affair of the week was the auction bridge luncheon which Miss Dorothy Hooks gave on Wednesday for Miss Ruth Toole. Miss Hooks' guests included Mrs. E. S. Street, Mrs. J. M. Finn, Mrs. T. R. Ramsay, Mrs. H. P. Shewmake, Mrs. A. J. Toole and Miss Frances Webb.

Of much interest socially will be the wedding of Miss Mary Lee Randall, of Grovania, and Richard P. Hicks, of Wrightsville, next Tuesday evening at the home of the bride's parents in Grovania. A party of friends from Dublin and Wrightsville will go over for this event. A reception will follow the ceremony.

The visitors in the city were honorees at a dance on Wednesday evening at East Lake. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Graham, Miss Lucy Gibson, of Macon; Miss Pearl Dowling, of Lake City, Fla.; Miss McLendon, Miss Otelia Gibson, of Macon; Miss Algie Prince, Miss Leonora Starr, Robert Hightower, Ramsay Fuller, S. Dixon, Paul Williamson, Dewitt Varnadoe, Cliff Holcomb, Clay O'Neal, Alex Blackshear, Claude Brantley, Alex Burch, Patrick Roach and William Brunson.

Senoia

SENOIA, Aug. 23.—Miss Lena Hand entertained a large party of Shorter and Wesleyan girls at a party at her home Monday evening.

The Methodist Missionary Society was royally entertained Monday afternoon by Mrs. H. B. Sasser.

The caming party given at Starr's Mill by Misses Lois and Annie Lou Hardy the past week was one of the most enjoyable events of the year. Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hardy chaperoned the party. The out-of-town guests included Misses Helen Carpenter, Newnan; Elizabeth Baker, Macon; Minnie McMichael, Buena Vista; Sallie Thompson, Hawkinsville; Mary and Lena Render, Greenville; Messrs. Tom Tolleson, Fayetteville; Kendal Fielder, Cedartown; Albert Jelks, Hawkinsville; Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Freeman and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hunter.

Miami

MIAMI, Aug. 23.—Miss Josephine Bravo, one of the first children born in Miami, was united in marriage on Monday night to Dallas D. Hoffman, of this city. The ceremony took place at the bride's home in the presence of a number of friends and relatives and was followed by an informal reception.

One of the pretty dinner-dances of the summer was that given Tuesday night at the beach by Clement and Bazil Brossier, in honor of the Misses Frances and Jane Tatum, two of the charming buds of the city, who leave soon for an exclusive girls' school in the North. The guests were the Misses Frances and Jane Tatum, Jewel Green and Ruth Rose, and Victor Moffat, Merle McLeannon and B. B. Tatum. The affair was held at the Casino at the beach.

Complimentary to the Misses Maude and Alice Reilly, of New Haven, Conn., who are visiting their brother, John B. Reilly, a luncheon was given at the Dade Club by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Coleman Romfh. Roses were used for the decorations. Covers were laid for the Misses Reilly, Miss Flavia DeCamp, R. B. Black, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Reilly, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McDonald and Mr. and Mrs. Romfh.

A Cooncan Club has been organized by a group of the young women of the city. Miss Cornelia Leffler was hostess at the last meeting of the club. Those present were the Misses Myrtle Rose, Hilda Baile, Christine Worley, Ruth Rose, Helen Skelly and Mildred Taylor.

Mrs. Everett George Sewell is spending the latter part of the summer at Asheville, N. C., where many other Miami people are stopping.

Jackson

JACKSON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. L. M. Crawford complimented her guest, Mrs. James Crawford Nutt, of Griffin, with a "42" party on Thursday morning.

The young men of the city gave a moonlight picnic at Indian Springs on Tuesday in honor of Miss Sarah Wylie, of Cartersville, the guest of Miss Mary Land.

In compliment to her niece, Miss Julia Collier, of St. Louis, Mrs. Levi entertained four tables of bridge on Wednesday evening.

Tampa

TAMPA, Aug. 23.—Dr. William Monroe Rowlett and Miss Gregory Walker, daughter of Mrs. Julian Walker, of New York City, will be married at the cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York on September 10. Dr. Rowlett's brother, Calus Rowlett, and the bride-elect's brother, Hewitt Walker, will be best men and will be the only attendants. Dr. Rowlett and his bride will take a trip to Canadian resorts before returning to this city about October 1 to make their home. Dr. Rowlett is one of the young physicians of the city and is very popular. Miss Walker is related to many families here, and she and her mother spent last winter here, taking a house on the Boulevard. This summer they have been spending in the Berkshires. She is an accomplished pianist.

Two well-known young couples of Winter Haven, one of the fine resorts and orange grove towns of interior Florida, are to be married at the same time on September 14. They are Norman Wyckoff and Miss Larra McCrary and Leslie Winston Anderson and Miss Kathleen Winston Pepper. The double ceremony will take place at the First Christian Church of Winter Haven, and the young couples will go for a wedding trip together.

Mrs. A. B. Gerner, of this city, is chaperoning a house party at Wall Springs. The party is made up of Tampa and Dade City people, and they are enjoying the bathing at this resort. Among the Dade City members of the party are the Misses Lulu and Ethel Cochrane. A number from Dade City motored over to the camp at various times during the last week or so to spend a few days.

Buchanan

BUCHANAN, Aug. 23.—The recital and reading given at the Methodist Church Tuesday evening by Miss Shirley Sutherlin, of Cave Springs, was enjoyed by all present. Miss Sutherlin has accepted a position with the Southern Female College at LaGrange next year.

Tifton

TIFTON, Aug. 23.—Miss Aline Shipp entertained in honor of her guests, Misses Julia Williams and Florence Parks, with a Japanese party Monday night. Those present were the Misses Julia Williams, Florence Parks, Annie Howard, Marie Garbutt and Vernice Kennedy, James Pate, Roy Thrasher, Robert Hall, Louie Monk, Watson Holmes, Joe Gammon and Mark and Conrad Shipp.

Miss Josie Golden entertained Friday afternoon at four tables of salmagundi in honor of her guest, Miss Kate Harrell, of Doerun.

Miss Annie Howard entertained Tuesday night in honor of Miss Aline Shipp's house guests.

St. Augustine

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 23.—A pretty event of the week was the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Josephine Masters and Marcus Pappy, at the Cathedral Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. Father James O'Brien officiating. Both are among the best known young people of the city and are members of old Florida families.

Captain and Mrs. Henry Marcotte left yesterday for Williamsport, Pa., where they will spend several weeks.

Miss Nell Edmonds and her mother have gone to Miami, where they will reside in the future. They were social favorites here.

Miss Ruth Green, a popular member of the younger society set, has returned from an extended visit with friends in Tallahassee.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald White have returned from a several months' honeymoon trip spent in England. Mr. White's old home. Mr. White is a well-known banker. Mrs. White was formerly Miss Elizabeth Frazer, of this city. Their wedding was a social event of the early summer.

Mrs. G. H. Bruer has returned from Syracuse, N. Y., where she visited her daughter, Mrs. Ernest Johnson.

Gainesville

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Elizabeth Kimbrough will entertain at a house party next week, her guests to include Miss Jamie Hall, of Graniville; Miss Cora Candler, of Dallas, Texas; Miss Marie Dinkins, of Atlanta; Miss Emily Dorsey, of Opelika, Ala., and Miss Laura Mae Kennimerg, of Cleveland. Among the social attention planned for her guests are a masquerade party at the home of Miss Kimbrough and a reception, with Miss Mary Florence McKinney as hostess.

A social affair of the week was the bridge luncheon Wednesday morning which Mrs. Pillow gave for her daughter, Mrs. French, of New Orleans. About twenty guests were present.

A compliment to Mrs. J. B. Fitzgerald, who leaves this week for her future home in Augusta, was a porch party given Tuesday morning by Mrs. M. C. Brown and her mother, Mrs. Flanders.

Mrs. J. E. Jackson was hostess at a sewing party at her home on Academy street in honor of her sister, Mrs. H. W. Campbell, of Atlanta.

Miss Jone and Louise Jackson entertained eight couples at a dinner party Friday evening in honor of Miss Marjorie Wilkes, who was a guest of Mrs. J. H. Banks.

Acworth

ACWORTH, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Daniell Humphries Collins entertained on Thursday afternoon in compliment to Mrs. Norman Smith Kitchen, of Birmingham, Ala.

Mrs. Zollie L. McLain, Mrs. W. Arthur Nichols and Mrs. Charles Gribble were hostesses on Friday afternoon at a reception at the home of Mrs. Gribble, in honor of Mrs. D'Armand Breard, of Monroe, La.; Miss Aris Elgin, of Anderson, S. C., and Mrs. Norman Smith Kitchen, of Birmingham, Ala.

Washington

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—In honor of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Newsom, whose wedding Monday afternoon in Atlanta was a social event of cordial interest to a large circle of friends and relatives in Wilkes County, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Armstrong entertained a number of friends Thursday with a barbecue at their country home five miles north of Washington.

Tuesday's meeting of the Bimonthly Bridge Club, composed of the young married set of Washington, was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Clement E. Sutton. It was decided to call it further meetings until October on account of the number of members who are spending September out of town.

Lanark

LANARK, Aug. 23.—The residents at the Byrd cottage and a few invited guests enjoyed an excursion to Dog Island on Thursday evening. A delicious lunch was served on the island and a dip in the surf was enjoyed.

On Wednesday night at the hotel Willie Byrd was host at a crab supper.

Making up a pleasant house party at Lanark for a week or ten days are Mrs. B. H. Hardaway, Miss Slade, Miss Gerge, Charles Porter and B. H. Hardaway, Jr., all of Columbus, Ga. The house party is given by Mrs. Hardaway in honor of her son, B. H. Hardaway, Jr. The party is occupying the cottage of Mrs. Hardaway.

The party of Tallahassee campers at St. Theresa, composed of John McDougall, Abe McDougall, Guy Haynes and Phil Caldwell, on Saturday evening sailed over to Lanark, enjoyed the Saturday night dance at the hotel and remained over Sunday, taking the members of the Columbus house party for a sail. John and Abe McDougall returned to their camp at St. Theresa and Guy Haynes and Phil Caldwell to Tallahassee.

A party of campers at Lanark occupying the Phillips-Culley cottage is made up of Walter Culley, Humphrey Gwynn, Horace VanBrunt and Harbert Keith, of Tallahassee.

Gainesville

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Mamie McGrew has returned from a four-weeks outing, during which she visited friends in Jacksonville, Augusta, Ga., and Hendersonville, N. C.

Mrs. J. I. Blake and children are now in Atlanta on a visit to relatives.

Miss Birdie Wood, of Fernandina; Miss Gussie Steindorff, of Greenville, Ala., and Miss Nellie Dekle, of Tampa, are guests of Mrs. Robert E. Lee on West Arlington street.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Harris, of Haverhill, Mass., announce the engagement of their daughter, Marion Carr, to Lee Graham, of Gainesville, Fla. This announcement is of great interest to the social circle of this city. Mr. Graham is cashier of the First National Bank of Gainesville, a member of the City Council and a most popular citizen. It is said the wedding will be some time in October.

Cartersville

CARTERSVILLE, Aug. 23.—On Tuesday evening a dance was given at the Opera House by the young men of Cartersville to the visiting girls. The out-of-town guests were Misses Marion Perdue, Ruth Blackman and Ruth Barry, of Atlanta; Kathrine and May Stiles, of Brunswick; Addie McCollister and Ida Moody, of Piedmont, Ala., and Mrs. Keith Carson, of Tifton. The chaperons wer Mr. and Mrs. E. Strickland, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hammond and Mr. and Mrs. Madison Milam.

Mrs. Walter Holcombe, of Nashville, entertained at an afternoon tea at "Roselawn," the home of her mother, Mrs. Sam P. Jones, on Saturday. The guests were Mrs. John G. Simpson and Miss Hattie Jones, Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. Bert Sims, Murfreesboro, Tenn., and Mrs. Conyers Fite, Washington, D. C.

Nashville

NASHVILLE, Aug. 23.—A lawn social was given on the courthouse square by the ladies of the Civic League yesterday evening from 6 to 9 o'clock. The proceeds will go for the benefit of the public library.

Ocilla

OCILLA, Aug. 23.—At the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. J. W. Layfield, Miss Meta Clair Sibley and Edwin E. Howell were married on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, and left immediately for Atlanta and other points in North Georgia to return in ten days, when they will make this city their home. The Rev. Mr. Ansley, Baptist minister at this place, officiated.

Claims To Be Heir To Cooper Estate

Henry D. Ritch Says He Was Adopted Son of Savannah Man. Files Suit.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—A suit in which Henry David Ritch seeks to establish himself as an heir-at-law of the late Clem T. Cooper so that he may inherit one-third of the $43,000 Cooper estate, has been filed in the Superior Court of Chatham County.

The obstacle in the way of Ritch's claim is Mrs. Lillian Hamilton, formerly Mrs. Lillian Cooper, wife of the man who died intestate, leaving this desirable property. Ritch says he was legally adopted by Cooper and is entitled to inherit one-third of the estate, as well as to share in the net proceeds from the estate since the death of Cooper on January 14, 1903.

The petitioner is 19 years old. He began the proceedings through J. J. Rahn, Jr., a friend. He shows that when a child 6 years old he was adopted by Cooper, and that he took the name of his foster parent. At that time Cooper was a widower. Ritch continued to live at the Cooper home until six months after the death of Cooper.

FORGOT TO CLOSE WINDOW; GAS FAILED TO KILL MAN

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Because he forgot to close a window in the back of his store when he attempted to kill himself by inhaling illuminating gas, Laurence Louis, a confectioner, will probably recover.

Louis had removed the burners from a gas stove, and placing a rubber tube in his mouth, turned on the gas. Despondency because of business affairs is said to have been the cause of the act.

BIG DISAPPEARING GUN ARRIVES IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Occupying four freight cars, the carriage for the 10-inch disappearing gun in the dummy fortifications in the park extension has arrived from Bethlehem, Pa.

The total weight of the carriage is 225,000 pounds. It will support a gun weighing 30 tons and measuring 35 feet in length. The gun will be mounted inside the fortifications which will be used by the Savannah Volunteer Guards in practice work.

The "Ice Kist"

APPROVED BY
Good Housekeeping Institute

No Crank
No Dasher
No Handle
No Cogs
No Wheels
No Wood
No Hoops
No
Hard Work

$1.95 POSTPAID 15 DAYS' TRIAL 2-QUART SIZE $1.95

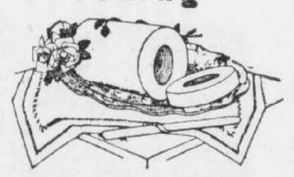
PACK IT — THAT'S ALL

For the ICE-KIST all you have to do is to pour in the cream, sherbet or whatever refreshment it may be, and pack in the ice as in the ordinary freezer. Then the work is ended. There is no working a dasher, no turning a handle or crank, no straining your arms and back, no opening the freezer to "see" if it is freezing, no extra packing in of ice. All you do after packing is to open the freezer and serve the refreshment. It saves work, time, trouble and—you.

Perfect Freezing

The Ice-Kist has no dasher or crank because it has two freezing surfaces. The old-fashioned freezer had only one freezing surface—that is why a crank and dasher were necessary. The Ice-Kist has a metal freezing tube that extends directly through the cream to the bottom. This gives the two freezing surfaces. The "cold penetrates from the center and from the outside, too. The cream is frozen with a smoothness that will delight you.



The Ice-Kist makes a beautiful and perfect-frozen mold.

Special 15-Day Offer

We want you to know the joy of having an Ice-Kist Crankless Freezer in your home. We will send it post-paid upon the return of the coupon together with $1.95—our introductory price. If, after trying the ICE-KIST for 15 days, you are not delighted with it, return it and we will return the $1.95. Don't let the coupon get lost. Send it NOW.

Western Merchandise & Supply Co.,
326 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Enclosed is money order for $1.95. Please send the ICE-KIST CRANKLESS FREEZER for 15 days' trial.

Name.....

Address.....

.....Ex.

FRANKLIN WILL FOUND INTACT AND RESTORED

Document Contains Severe Arraignment of Custom of Wearing Jewelry in This Country.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—All controversies regarding the disposition of the estate of Benjamin Franklin have been settled by the restoration of his will by the manuscript repair department of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

The document, recently resurrected from a vault under the City Hall for the purpose of verifying an office copy, was found to have deteriorated so much during more than a century of obscurity that it was practically indecipherable. Through the renovating process to which it was subjected it has regained much of its original freshness and legibility, making it possible for every detail to be understood.

In a finely-worded passage he makes disposition of his best cane as follows: "My fine crabtree walking stick with a gold head curiously wrought in the form of the cap of liberty I give to my friend and the friend of mankind, General Washington. If it were a scepter, he has merited it and would become it. It was a present to me from that excellent woman, Mme. de Forback, the Dowager Duchess of Deux Ponts."

A small painting of the King of France, presented to him by that monarch, which was mounted in a frame containing 408 diamonds, he bequeathed to his daughter, with the following curious proviso: "The King of France's picture, set with 408 diamonds, to my daughter, Sarah Bache, on the condition that she is not to form any of the diamonds into ornaments either for herself of daughters, and, therefore, countenance the expensive, vain and useless fashion of wearing jewels in this country."

TOLD HE'D DIE WHEN 29, BUT LIVING AT 101

Centenarian Walks to Church on Last Birthday and Gives Sunday School Advice.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Aug. 23.—William T. Osborne, of this city, was 101 years old to-day and he didn't mind it a bit.

Answer to "Old Subscriber," "Vox Populi," "Constant Reader" and "Friend of the Paper:" NO, HE NEVER SMOKED OR DRANK.

In the spring of 1841—when he was 29—four physicians visited him at different times to give him some concrete idea of how much longer he was going to adorn the earth. All said he was firmly in the grip of consumption. Three said he'd be lucky to last more than a few days. The fourth said Osborne didn't have a chance of picking anything off the next Christmas tree.

The four doctors are dead.

Five generations gathered at his home to-day. Naturally, he was delighted. Being a regular communicant of Trinity Methodist Church, he went there this morning. He wanted to walk, but the temperature made that seem unwise. Before the service he addressed a class in the Sunday school and told the scholars to be clean in their habits, stick on the sprinkling cart and keep up a strong activity in labor. He thinks that if he hadn't worked so hard he would not have taken part in to-day's party.

The old man didn't dance any jigs to indicate that he was as lively as he used to be, but he gave plenty of evidence that he was around the place. A natural decline in the power of his eyes recently forced him to give up reading, but he still writes, can hear well, enjoys walking and has a good memory.

He was born nine miles from Newburgh. He has been a farmer, tanner and storekeeper. His wife Sarah died eleven years ago at the age of 91.

WAR IN MEXICO BLOCKS WEDDING OF PAIR 5 TIMES

Young Engineer Kept From Love by Succession of Revolutions in Republic.

DENVER, Aug. 23.—What chance has a little fellow like the god of love in a mix-up with a big bully like the person who holds down the job of god of war?

The young man is Arthur N. Zwetow, a mining engineer employed in Mexico. He and the young woman, Miss Mildred Lowin, have tried to get married five times, to use their own expression, and each time that god of war person has "butted in" and dealt Cupid a knock-out blow.

Young Zwetow is in Concepcion del Oro, a mining camp near the border of the State of Coahulla. Six months ago he wrote his betrothed that he had obtained a leave of absence and the wedding bells would ring any time she said. The young woman got her trousseau ready and set the wedding day. But the bridegroom did not come. A letter from him said the Federals had started a war, the railroad had quit running, bullets were flying and he had to stay.

So it has been for five successive attempts.

Girl Chases 8 Cows With Auto; Gets $4

New Jersey Chauffeurette Uses Machine to Hustle Bovine Trespassers to Pound.

PETERSON, N. J., Aug. 23.—Four dollars of the money Joseph Smith paid for the wanderings of his cows yesterday went into the purse of Miss Minnie DeGray

Eight Smith cows entered her garden and were eating her corn. She chased them in her auto out of the field, across a lot, into the road and a half-mile to the poundmaster's yard. Smith paid $8 for their release. Miss DeGray received half of it.

OREGON 8-HOUR BILL HITS EVERY WORKING CLASS

Professors, Trades, Occupations and Even Day Labor Limited to 48 Hours Weekly Work.

SALEM, OREG., Aug. 23.—If the universal eight-hour bill, filed under the initiative to be voted on at the next general election, should become a law it would revolutionize the industries of the State.

The measure is drafted to apply to every industry, every business or vocation or profession in the State. No one is to be permitted, under its provisions, to work for more than eight hours out of nine consecutive hours a day, or more than forty-eight hours a week.

By this law neither manual labor, trades, nor the professions shall be exempted, but every form of labor, skilled or unskilled, as well as every trade and profession, and persons working therein or thereat, shall be included, in, by and under this law, and the same shall be included, in, by and under this law, within the State or Oregon.

The measure provides that the Labor Commissioner must see to the enforcement of its provisions, and if he does not do this immediately it becomes mandatory upon the Governor to remove the Labor Commissioner from office.

AGED FATHER THRASHES SON WHO THINKS HIM EASY PREY

EAST LIVERPOOL, OHIO, Aug. 23. When Francis Beaver, 30 years old, charged his father, Henry Beaver, aged 65, with having spoken in an uncomplimentary tone of the former's wife, the father resented the imputation and soundly thrashed his son.

The son, thinking he could easily worst his aged father, began the fight with a hard blow on the elder man's nose. Thoroughly aroused, Beaver, Sr., then started in and soon the son was lying on the ground with a fractured ankle and a fractured right leg.

ANNIVERSARY CLUB MEETS WITH THE SOUTHERN STATES LIFE

Leading Life Insurance Agents Hold Convention Here—Every Man Produced Over $100,000 Worth of Paid For Business in Twelve Months — Interesting Sessions Held.

There was a feast of reason, a sparkle of wit and a flow of soul at the brilliant banquet given at the Hotel Ansley last night when the Sixth Annual Convention of the Anniversary Club of the Southern States Life Insurance Company brought that gathering to a close.

Over one hundred guests were present.

This convention is celebrated by those members of the agency force of The Southern States Life Insurance Company who produced over $100,000 worth of paid for insurance during the year which ends June 30.

This convention had been in session two days, business sessions being held in the morning, the afternoon and evening being given over to entertainment.

Opening Session.

The first session of the Convention was held in the assembly room

J. C. WALDEN, SR., President.

of the Hotel Ansley on Friday morning. The largest attendance in the history of the club was present.

President Wilmer L. Moore, of The Southern States Life Insurance Company, greeted the club membership in a warm address of welcome, in which he congratulated them upon the splendid work just closed, and the beginning of the new year of the Anniversary Club, the first month of which saw the agents break all producing records.

J. R. WILLIAMS, Vice President.

Officers are not elected by the Anniversary Club, but office is won by the amount of insurance written. The agent writing the most business is President, the second man is Vice President, the leaders in each State are State Vice Presidents.

J. C. Walden, Sr., of Alabama, won the coveted honor of President. J. R. Williams, of South Carolina, was installed as Vice President.

Officers Installed.

The State Vice Presidents installed were T. Peters, Jr., of Georgia; B. B. Murray, of Florida; H. Clay Smith, of Alabama, and G. J. McDowell, of South Carolina.

In addition to these there were present other members of this Club who qualified for 1912-13: H. N. McAfee, of Georgia, a member for the sixth time; H. Willis Hogg, of Georgia, a member for the third time; J. T. Weems, of Georgia, the oldest member of the agency force of the company in point of service, for the sixth time; Fred Hines, of South Carolina, for the fifth time, and L. E. Black, Jr., C. S. Gurr and J. R. Munroe, for the first time.

Joe W. Vinson, whose absence from the meeting, owing to ill health, was greatly regretted by all present, completes his fifth year of membership.

He also signalized his intention of making his election for next year sure by not only leading the agency force in the month of July but by beating his own and all other previous records of written business in any one month, and thereby establishing a high mark for agents to aim at.

Brief addresses were delivered to the club by the President and Vice President of the Club.

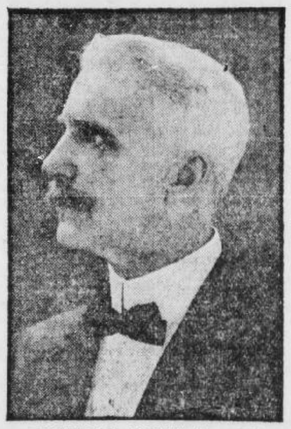
Unanimously Re-elected.

Robert F. Moore, Agency Secretary, was unanimously re-elected Secretary of the Anniversary Club, which position he has held with credit since the beginning of the organization.

Following the roll call of the Anniversary Club badges and certificates were distributed, after which the first "Keystone Degree" was conferred.

"New Policy" was the subject of an interesting paper by Supervisor of Agents, W. S. McLeod, which was followed by discussion and questions.

Agency Secretary Robert F. Moore followed with an interesting paper on "Items of Expense Charged to First Year's Business—Economy, What it Means to the Agent and the Policy-holder." His paper was followed by discussion and questions.



ROBERT F. MOORE, Secretary.

The photograph of the Anniversary Club, which appears on this page, was taken, after which the Club was entertained at luncheon at the Capital City Club by President Moore. Friday afternoon the Club attended the baseball game and Friday evening occupied boxes at the Forsyth theater.

Concluding Session.

The concluding session of this interesting convention was held on Saturday morning, at which time a symposium of talks entitled "Confidential Chats With Medical Department," was participated in by E. M. Veatch, Dr. Gaines, W. S. Kendrick and Samuel Barrett, Actuary. This was followed by discussion and questions.

"The Company's Method of Payment of Death Claims—What It Should Mean to the Supervisor, the Agent, the Company and the Beneficiary," was delivered by Supervisor Frank E. Brodnax. This was followed by a discussion on the analysis of this subject under the following heads: (1) Bankers Agents Contracts, (2) Local Advertisement; (3) Draft on Local Bank, and (4) Follow Up of Prospects from Payment.

J. E. McLauchlin, Director of the Metropolitan Agency, followed with an interesting talk on "Systematic Following Up of Prospects."

A symposium of actual experiences by all agents came next and the formal addresses of the Convention were concluded with a most interesting address by Hon. Hervey W. Laird, former Assistant Insurance Commissioner of Alabama, and now Assistant to President Wilmer L. Moore.

Entertained at Luncheon.

The Club was entertained at luncheon at the Hotel Ansley and again attended the baseball game in the afternoon.

The Banquet at the Hotel Ansley last night was probably the most brilliant gathering held in the history of the Club and the Hotel.

Over one hundred guests were entertained. The colors of the Southern States Life Insurance Company—Red, Blue and White, and the Keystone Arch, the insignia of the Company, were carried out in the flowers, ices and place cards.

President Wilmer L. Moore presided as toastmaster, and introduced the speakers.

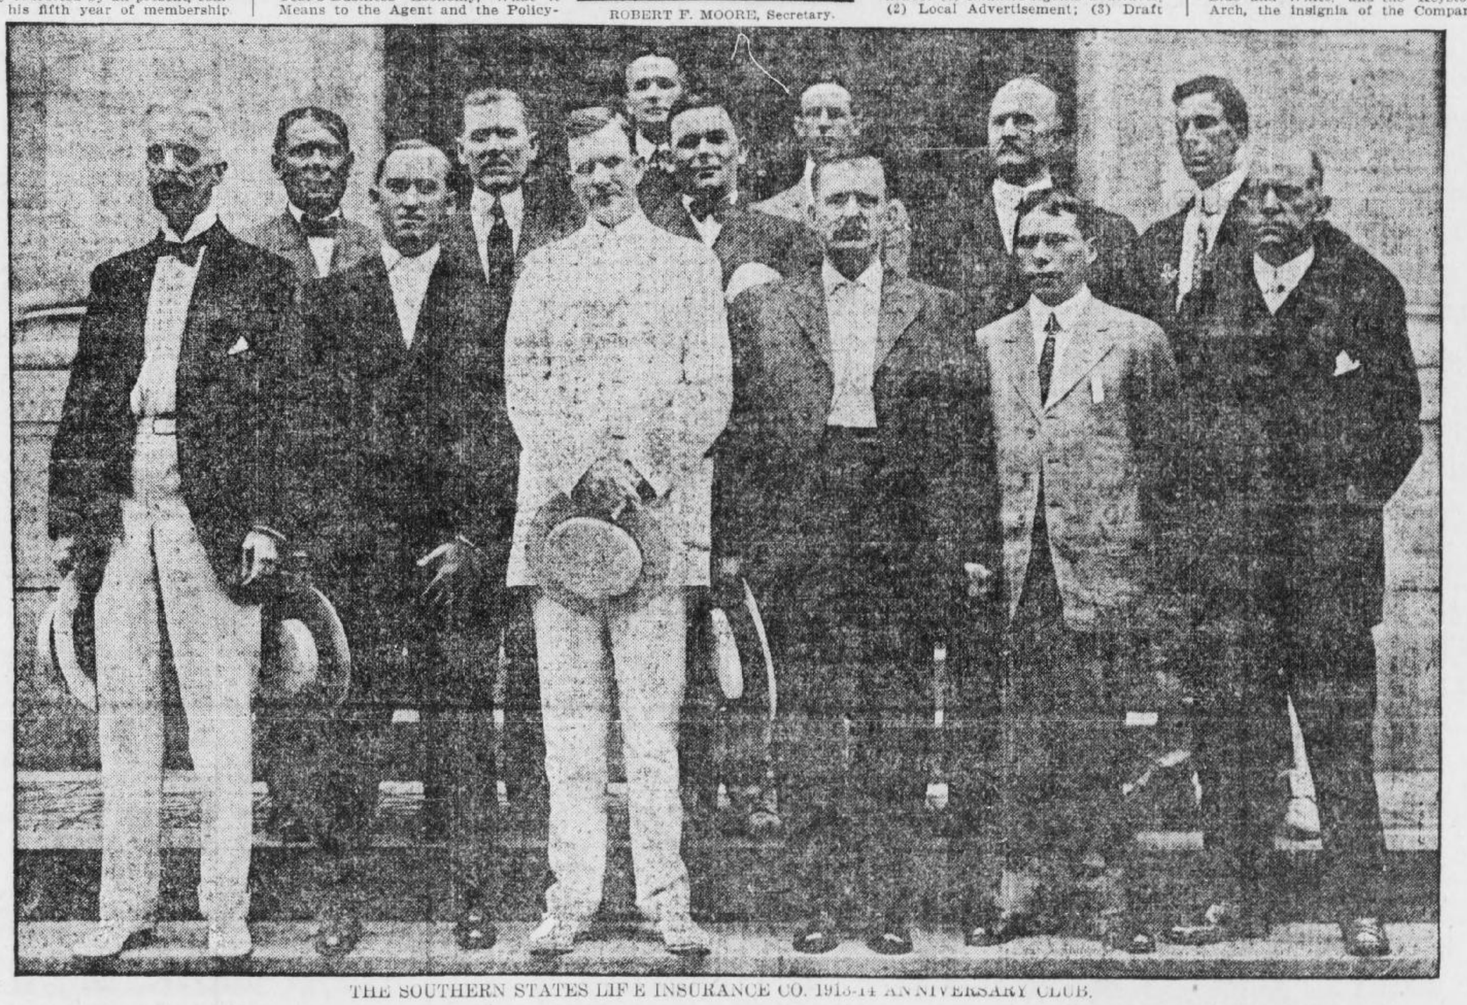
J. C. Walden, Sr., President of the Club, was the first and his response to the toast, "The Anniversary Club—the Top Rung," was warmly received.

He was followed by J. R. Williams, Vice President, whose subject, "The Southern States Life—Confidence Begets Loyalty," was handled in a splendid manner.

G. J. McDowell, a member of the Anniversary Club, and a familiar speaker at these banquets, responded to the toast, "The Keystone Degree—An Incentive to Work."

Burwell Responds.

Speaker W. H. Burwell, of the General Assembly of Georgia, delivered a splendid toast in response to President Moore's cordial introduction, on



THE SOUTHERN STATES LIFE INSURANCE CO. 1913-14 ANNIVERSARY CLUB.

T. PETERS, JR., Georgia Vice President

MENU

GEORGIA CANTALOUPE

CELERY QUEEN OLIVES ALMONDS

CONSOMME FLORENTINE
CHEESE STRAWS

POMPANO A LA CARONDELET POTATOES ANNA

CALVE'S SWEETBREAD ST. CLAIR
MOYENS PEAS

CHICKEN FILLET, LUCULLUS
PEELED ASPARAGUS HOLLANDAISE

LETTUCE, RUSSIAN DRESSING
BEATEN BISCUIT

MOUSSE A LA PARISIENNE
PETITS FOUR

CHEESE AND BENT'S CRACKER

DEMI TASSE

APOLLINARIS
CIGARS

Banquet Menu.

B. B. MURRAY, Florida Vice President.

Hotel Ansley Scene of Wonderful Banquet to Club Last Night—Toasts Were Made by Speaker Burwell, Hon. C. B. Brown, of Alabama, Hon. W. S. Witham and Clark Howell.

G. J. McDOWELL, South Carolina V. P.

"Success Is Measured by Ambition."

He was followed by Hon. Clark Howell, who responded to the toast, "Civic Duties—Every Man Has His Part."

Hon. Cyrus B. Brown, Assistant Commissioner of Insurance for the State of Alabama, represented that commonwealth and responded to the

H. CLAY SMITH, Alabama Vice Pres.

toast, "Alabama—Her Part in the Nation's Progress."

Hon. W. S. Witham concluded the evening's gayety with a wonderful potpourri when he was presented to his hearers, with the following title for his toast, "A Toast, Like a Text, Is Given to Talk From."

EUROPE TROTS, BUT CAN'T KEEP STEP TO MUSIC

Syncopated Tunes and Dances Beyond Ken of Old World, Says American Composer.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Armand Vecsey, composer and director of music at the Ritz-Carlton, has returned fresh from a European trip with lots of new music and some comments upon the musical situation abroad which may act as balm to the souls of American composers, and a joy for those who are not musicians, but like to hear the scream of the American Eagle.

Mr. Vecsey has not lived on this side of the Atlantic long enough to have taken out final naturalization papers, but there is nobody on this side of Weehawken who is more intensely and enthusiastically American in a musical way. He says American music and American motifs have spread over all Europe, but the music the natives over there don't know how to play.

Opera in Europe, as Mr. Vecsey has viewed it this summer, is poor as compared with what is given at the Metropolitan Opera House, and there isn't anything now between London and Vienna that has to do with music or the stage which local talent can't beat hands down.

"I have been in Paris, London, Berlin, Munich, and Vienna," said Mr. Vecsey, "and everywhere I have found American music the most popular. Then the turkey trot one finds all over the Continent. Yet nowhere did I hear the music played correctly, although they try hard, and when it came to fitting German or French words to a typical trotting tune, the effect was ludicrous.

Recognize the "Truthahn Tanz?"

"Think of what the result was in Berlin, when they turned 'When the Midnight Choo-Choo Leaves for Alabam' into German! In Germany they call the trot 'Truthahn Tanz,' and in France it is the 'Pas du Dindon.' Who would recognize the original under such appellations?

"Then the French can not dance the trot, nor can the Germans. Somehow they can't just find out the character of it. Of course their bands and orchestras can not get the time right in the first place. Why, at the Folies Bergere in Paris, I saw two of the best French dancers giving what was supposed to be a most perfect rendition of the trot, and I assure you it was ridiculous. It was a very poor imitation of the real thing.

"Yet, I was astonished to find that all the new French music and most of the new German operettas are either in the American style, as nearly as their composers could approach it, or have American motifs. The tango seems to be breaking up the trot over there, partly, I suppose, because their dancers can come nearer to dancing it than the purely American steps. In Paris I saw a couple trying the Texas Tommy, and it was a sight to cause a horse to double up.

"Why can't they play a turkey trot? For the same reason that nobody except a Hungarian can play Hungarian music. Almost every musical country has something that is peculiarly its own—a style of music that when played correctly is infectious.

American Style Has Call.

"Hungary has its csardas, Austria its waltz, and America its syncopated time. When each is played properly, it is bound to move an assemblage of people, and just now the American style has the call everywhere.

"At the Palais de Danse, in Berlin, I first heard a turkey trot played by a German orchestra. It was very bad. I want to tell you that in Europe this summer there is no music, no opera, no Philharmonic concert, and no play that can compare with what has been heard here in New York this year."

"In Paris," went on Mr. Vecsey, with a trace of feeling, "when they see an American trunk, they lie in wait to rob the owner, and go crazy over the thought of loot. It is the same in Berlin.

"I must tell you that not anywhere are women so generally chic in their costumes nowadays as right here in New York.

"True, I did see many smartly gowned women, but investigation showed that most of them were Americans."

Rector Denounces Paid Choir Singers

Clergyman Declares There Is No Worship in Their Strange and Unutterable Music.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., Aug. 23.—The Rev. E. J. Craft, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, caused a sensation while addressing a meeting of the parishioners of Calvary parish by telling them what he would do if he were entering upon a new pastorate.

For one thing, he said, he did not believe in paid singers for church choirs "The service of the church was designed for the people as a whole and not alone for the choir," he said. "These modern choirs take the worship away from the people of the congregation and do all the worshiping themselves. They sing in wild and strange ways and in unutterable tongues the praises of God."

Veering of River Threatens Farms

Every Laborer Available Is Rushed to Head Off Flow of Missouri.

FREEMONT, NEBR., Aug. 23.—Every laborer available is being sent by the Burlington Railroad to Folsom to fight the Missouri River, which is again eating into the valuable farm lands of that section and threatening to cut its way to the railroad tracks. Many carloads of stone have been dumped into the river.

The river suddenly began veering from its channel a few days ago. Inside of two days it had swamped 20 acres of land. Fear is now felt that the river will eat its way back to the extensive farms within the last year at a cost of more than $500,000.

Tame Trout Craves Petting; Fed by Hand

Feels Insulted if Food Is Not Served in Manner to Which He Is Accustomed.

ESTES PARK, COLO., Aug. 23.—Sunbeam, the pet speckled trout in the fish hatchery at Estes Park, has just recovered from an indisposition caused by stomach trouble or rheumatism, and is again able to take its place as the only pet trout in captivity.

The fish, now a 3-year-old and about eleven inches long, is as good an example of gentle and loving trouthood as it is possible to find. Fed from the hand from the time it was hatched, it feels insulted now unless its food is given to it in that way.

It is very fond of being stroked and petted, and will swim around and rub itself against a person's hand whenever a chance is given it.

Stranger Is Son, Gone for 20 Years

Father Turns Wanderer Away, but Mother Calls Him Back, and Reunion Follows.

GLASGOW, KY., Aug. 23.—Virgil Huffman had been away from home twenty years, seeking his fortune in Alaska, and the father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. James Huffman, were sitting in a room of their home near here discussing him and wondering if he would ever come back.

There was a knock at the door and Mr. Huffman opened it to see a dusty traveler, who said he was tired and was seeking lodging for the night. Mr. Huffman thought he could do nothing for him, but Mrs. Huffman "reckoned" they could manage somehow.

Then they led him into the hall, under the swinging lamp, and as the light fell on his face the aged couple recognized him as their son.

African Chieftain Is Harvard Student

Begins Stupendous Task of Reducing His Own Language to Written Form.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., Aug. 23.—A full-blooded African chieftain has just passed his entrance examinations at Harvard with flying colors and will enter the university next September as a member of the class of 1917. He is P. Gbe Wolo, and his people, 300,000 strong, are the Krus of Liberia, on the west coast of Africa.

They have no written language, so that the only way he can communicate with his family is through traders on the coast, who send the message by word of mouth along the trail. He has begun the stupendous task of reducing his language to writing.

Goes to Cemetery Instead of Ball Park

Fan Mistakes Funeral Hack for Omnibus on Its Way to Diamond.

MONTGOMERY, MO., Aug 23.—A baseball rooter came here from a distance to attend the St. Charles-Montgomery game, and by mistake he got into a hack at the depot filled with pallbearers going to a funeral.

As he had crepe on his hat, the ballbearers thought he had come as a mourner and he was taken to the cemetery instead of the ball park.

Finding himself in a funeral procession, he woke up and escaped. He got to the ball grounds just in time to see the home team win.

'Star Baths' Latest Complexion Remedy

Young Women Campers Take Nightly 'Plunge' in Milky Way Beams on Tower.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Star baths are the fad at the summer camp of the Young Women's Christian Association in Blauvelt, N. Y. Miss Marion Hopkins, the camp leader, is given credit for the innovation. The baths are taken on top of a high tower in the center of the camp. It will accommodate a dozen bathers.

There is a long waiting list of young women campers who are anxious to enjoy the reported benefits of immersion in starlight. Chief among these is said to be the "star-shine complexion."

Husband in Prison; Wife Willed $20,000

Richmond Woman Given Share of Estate After Helpmate Is Sentenced for Embezzlement.

RICHMOND, VA., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Maud Kent Rowley, whose husband, William J. Rowley, formerly connected with a hotel here, was recently sentenced to serve two years in State prison for embezzling $8,000 from the Jefferson Hotel in this city while auditor there, inherits $20,000 from the estate of her aunt, Mrs. Junius A. Morris, of Richmond, who died August 3 at Atlantic City.

The value of the estate is placed at $496,000.

Woman Works as Circus Roustabout

Breaks Down While Handling Heavy Tent Pole and Her Secret Is Revealed.

LA CROSSE, WIS., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Ada Broughton, unable to support her two children and invalid husband on wages paid a woman, donned a man's attire and labored beside farm hands in Dakota wheat fields. She broke down under the strain and came to La Crosse to seek lighter employment, becoming a circus roustabout. Lifting heavy poles and canvas resulted in her complete breakdown. Then she told her story to the police and collapsed. She was taken unconscious to a hospital. Relatives are on the way from her home at Rice Lake.

HEARST'S SUNDAY American Advertising Contest

$10.00 Given Away!!

Last Sunday only the trade-marks or distinguishing characteristics of the advertisers below were given. $10.00 in cash was offered to the person sending in to The American, in the fewest possible words, a description of the advertisers whose "slogan" appeared below. Thousands of these replies were received and the prize goes to Mrs. O. D. Gorman, Jr., 79 W. 15th St., her answers appearing below:

WALL-PAPER

Thirty years in the wall-paper business have made us proficient. Ask our customers. Before you buy, try us. :: ::

"Better Be Safe than Sorry"

71 South Pryor Street

BURNETT WALL PAPER CO. BURNETT

"Go Where the Crowds Go"

AND

You will be delighted with the cool, comfortable Montgomery Theater. Absolutely the latest pictures.

Anna Von Hoffman is now singing

AT

The Montgomery

The easy way to buy clothes

Your Credit is Good at

DOLLAR A WEEK DAY 14 W. MITCHELL ST.

"Truly Duffy's"

The home of low prices, on the corner of Mitchell and Forsyth Sts. Attend our immense Clearing-Out Sale now going on. :: ::

DUFFY'S

"The Velvet Kind"

The kind of Ice Cream you really like. It's pure, clean and wholesome. Try it once. ∴ ∴ ∴

PHONE IVY 6849

VELVET ICE CREAM CO.

26 E. North Avenue

27 years in the same stand.

Shoes for the Entire Family

See our Fall and Winter stock of Men's and Ladies' models. Just from the Eastern style centers.

MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED

R. C. BLACK

35 Whitehall Street

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

ATLANTA HAS SUPPORT FOR HOME-GOODS EXPOSITION

Spirit Which Makes City Famous Prevails, and Enough Exhibitors Sign Agreements to Take Space to Assure Success of Project.

Decision Necessary Tuesday So That Plans for New Commerce Building Might Be Changed. Manufacturers Are Responding.

It was a close shave, everyone admits, but as usual the Atlanta spirit prevailed, and the "Made in Atlanta" exhibit is assured.

Tuesday's luncheon at the Ansley was the "clincher." Several years of agitation, a year of actual work, brought to a climax by a vigorous campaign of three months, developed the exhibit project to a point where about 36 manufacturers had signed their names to agreements binding them to take floor space for a period of three years.

Thus matters stood Tuesday. Meanwhile the contractors were at work in the new Chamber building remodeling it. The plans called for offices. If a change were to be made, a decision was necessary at once.

The case was put squarely up to the Atlanta manufacturers Tuesday, and on Tuesday's luncheon was staked the entire plan. The result of the appeal was success.

To Have Four Floors.

Four floors will be devoted to the exhibit. One floor will be given over to the cotton industry—textiles, oils and by-products. Furniture made in Atlanta will take another entire floor. Building materials probably will take a floor, kindred lines of manufacture will be grouped together as far as is consistent with economical disposal of space.

Who will be in charge of the exhibit in the new building at Pryor street and Auburn avenue has not been determined. Neither has it been decided when the exhibits will be installed. All this remains to be done.

This much is certain—there will be telephone service on each floor, an expert in charge and an intelligent effort to make the exhibit pay in dollars and cents for every participant.

Had the project fallen through, it would have been lamentable, for Nashville, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Hartford, Conn., St. Louis and other cities have such exhibits; others are planning them, and Atlanta would, for the first time, be forced to admit itself less progressive than its rivals.

Those Already Pledged.

The following firms had signed for space up to Saturday, the nature of the business being suggested where the name is not self-explanatory:

Southern Engraving Company.
Frederick Disinfectant Company.
J. K. Orr Shoe Company.
E. VanWinkle Company (motor trucks).
Atlanta Gas Light Company.
Southern Upholstering Company.
Atlanta Stove Works.
Southern Spring Bed Company.
Burnett, Bell & Klapper (furniture).
Gholstin - Cunningham Company (bed springs).
All-star Manufacturing Company (neckties).
Byrd Printing Company.
Norris, Inc. (candies).
Willingham-Tift Lumber Company.
Tripod Paint Company.
J. P. Stevens Engraving Company.
Atlanta Paper Company.
Atlanta Blank Book Manufacturing Company.
White Provision Company.
Dowman-Dozier (metal workers).
Foote & Davies (office furnishings).
Golden Eagle Buggy Company.
Metzger Mattress Company.
Whittier Mills (textiles).
Marcus Loeb & Co. (overalls).
Nunnally & McCrae (overalls).
Phoenix Planing Mills.
Parian Paint Company.
Atlanta Show Case Company.
Greer Manufacturing Company (jewelry).
F. J. Cooledge (building materials).
M. D. & H. L. Smith (awnings).
Reed Oil Company.
Atlanta Metal Bed Company.
Atlanta Auto Top and Trimming Company.
Monerief Furnace Company.
Coca-Cola Company.
Walter Baillard Optical Company.
Hagan & Liddd Co. (soft drinks).
Atlanta Art Glass Company.
K. E. Hill Manufacturing Company (razor blade strops).

In addition to the above, the Southern Cotton Seed Crushers' Association, the cotton oil mills, the textile and other cotton interests have an entire floor, where they will exhibit the cotton plant and all of its various uses.

ENGLISH MAKERS INVENT CAP WHICH KEEPS SHAPE

A problem that has engaged English cap manufacturers for some time has been how to produce a cloth cap that will keep its shape after it has been in use for some time. An enterprising firm of manufacturers now claims that they have solved the problem and that the shape of their caps is not affected by rain. The idea introduced consists of placing a flat plate of straw plait in the cap between the lining and the cloth crown.

This makes the top of the cap sit flat, and as the straw is not affected by wet it is said the cap can be worn for a much longer period than the ordinary

Sweet Potato Crop Yields Big Returns

Would Bring Much More if Southern Farmers Did Not Glut Market at Harvest.

Each year the sweet potato is becoming of greater importance as a money crop in the South. The value of this crop in the United States in 1900 was $34,429,000. 90 per cent of which was produced in the Southern States. The total area devoted to sweet potatoes in the United States increased from 537,000 acres in 1899 to 641,000 in 1909, and the yield increased from 42,500,000 to 52,200,000 bushels. The total value of the crop increased at a much more rapid rate than either the acreage or the yield, showing an increase of 78.3 per cent in ten years.

With better methods of storing and marketing the potatoes, it is said, their value could be doubled without increasing the acreage or production. This is especially true in the South, where the potatoes are either rushed on the market at digging time, when the price is low, or stored in outdoor pits or banks, where a large portion decays.

Very few of the sweet potatoes stored in pits or banks ever reach the market, for from 25 to 50 per cent spoil, and those that remain are not of good quality. Even if the pit or bank method of storage would keep the potatoes, it is not economical.

Too much labor and expense are required to make these banks every year and to get the potatoes out when wanted for market. Sweet potatoes can be marketed more economically and to much better advantage from storage houses.

Green Shirts Shown For Winter Wear

Long-Pointed Collars in White and Self-Striped Effects Continue in Vogue.

New features are noted among collars and shirts shown by leading manufacturers for fall and winter. Imported dress shirts, in soft laundered effects with musnroom tucks and semi-French cuffs are selling readily. Shirts with a short stiff bosom in various color combinations are also featured.

White self-striped effects in French pique with stiff and unstarched bosoms are also meeting a good demand. A soft bosom with cross-striped plaits, in various color combinations, is a new fall feature that has been well received.

Woven madras in colored effects will be strong.

The demand for silk shirts is increasing and they are becoming more of a staple than formerly. Green will be a popular shirt color for the new season

The long pointed collars in white and self-striped effects are continuing into the next season.

A departure in them is the wider two-inch band instead of the narrow one now worn. These new collars have a three and a half inch point.

The wider band is claimed to give them more the appearance of a standing collar, besides causing them to sit better and afford greater comfort.

Stocks of Iron Not Above 100,000 Tons

Accumulation in Yards Reduced Rapidly in Southern Territory. Curtailment Continues.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 23.—Small sales of pig iron continue in the Southern territory, with a satisfactory aggregate.

The price of pig iron holds around $11 per ton, No. 2 Foundry. There have been a number of sales made for delivery during the last part of the year and some inquiries are in hand for iron to be delivered the first quarter in 1914.

There still is curtailment of the make. It is believed Alabama will produce during August almost as much iron as in July. Furnace companies are expressing the belief that before the end of the year a buying movement is likely to call for an immense tonnage. The furnace and warrant yards inventory will show now over 100,000 tons on hand. A few months ago there were 150,000 tons on the yards.

Basic iron demand is more satisfactory. Charcoal iron price is above $23, with the make as low as it ever was in the South.

Steel operations are steady, the several plants in Alabama working on practically full time. Fabricated steel is going out in all directions. Cotton tie manufacturers have had a prosperous season.

Fertilizer Concern Has Splendid Year

American Agricultural Chemical Earns Close to 7 Per Cent on Its Common Stock.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—American Agricultural Chemical for its year to June 30 is understood to have earned something better than 6 per cent on the $18,330,000 common. In fact, it is barely possible that the final figures will come nearer 7 per cent on this issue.

Unless conditions in the fertilizer trade become very much worse than for the last two years, the company can continue to earn and pay the present 4 per cent dividend. This dividend rate is, by the way, a testimonial to the wisdom of directors in making the initial distribution on the common stock rather modest. If a 5 per cent or 6 per cent rate had been adopted two years ago, the future outlook would not be nearly so happy as it is to-day.

A very strong feature of American Agricultural operations is the high percentage of branded or trade-marked goods which it sells. It is safe to state that 90 per cent of the company's tonnage consists of trade-mark goods, which farmers buy on the reputation of a particular brand for the specific purpose desired,

SAMPLES COST DRY GOODS MEN MANY DOLLARS

Dealers Feel Something Should Be Done to Stop Incessant Drain on Their Profits.

There is strong feeling in dry goods circles that something should be done to curb the increasing demands of buyers for samples. In most quarters there is a strong opinion expressed that the giving of samples is a necessary evil up to a certain point, but there is also a strong opinion that this point has long since been passed.

Few manufacturers and wholesalers take the trouble to find out just what samples cost them. In only a few cases are definite records kept and the cost of the samples figured.

A New York silk firm gets out about 250 styles a season and the buyers got fair-sized samples of each style they bought. This is really necessary, but it is trade custom, the house follows the general path.

A big woolen firm in New York which does business with the cutting-up trades and larger retailers is one of the best informed on the subject of sample expense.

"On our books," the head of the firm said, "there are about 2,500 accounts. Of these about 1,800 are manufacturers of clothing. To each manufacturer we give five or ten sample books. The cloth in each book is valued at about 20 cents, and the expense of getting them up brings the cost to about 50 cents. This means that each manufacturing account costs us about $3.75 a season for samples. With two seasons a year and 1,800 manufacturers' accounts it is easy to see what samples mean to us without trying to figure the cost of samples for the retail accounts."

In another quarter of the woolen goods trade it was said that the samples given out mounted up to a tidy sum in the course of a year, but that the expense had not been so great of late because several houses had agreed to make clothiers pay for most of the samples they got.

"One of the worst features of the sample business in this industry," this agent said, "is the way some members of the clothing trade use them. Many of them have no scruples at all about taking our samples to a competitor and asking him at how much less than our price he can get the goods made up by his mill. This is a little off the subject, perhaps, but it illustrates one of the worst phases of the woolen industry."

Among the cotton goods houses the evil is seen in its worst form so far as quantity is concerned, but the cheaper qualities of these goods tends to lessen the aggregate loss as compared with wool and silk goods. Lace and embroidery firms also pay tribute to the sample god at the rate of several hundreds to several thousands of dollars a year.

Last, but not least, comes the big department store. Inquiry at several of them in New York brought out the assertion that samples cost them from $30,000 to $60,000 a year. Only 15 to 20 per cent of the people who take these samples from the stores really buy anything afterward, and the resultant loss necessarily is heavy.

N. O. T. & M. Receiver May Ask Big Loan

Frisco Subsidiary Almost Certain to Default on Interest Due September 1.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—As soon as New Orleans, Texas and Mexico receivers know whether Frisco receivers will or will not pay the $700,000 interest due September 1, they will make application for permission to issue approximately $1,000,000 receivers' certificates. In the meantime the Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust Company is making temporary loans to the receivers' comprising $100,000 for debt falling due August 1, and about $200,000 additional to middle of September.

The engineers employed to examine the properties which make up the Frisco's South Texas lines have not yet made their report, but the most favorable statement would show that at least 18 months of steady work and adequate funds would be necessary to put New Orleans, Texas and Mexico in a position to earn interest on its bonds. Others believe at least three years would be consumed in putting the line on its feet, and between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 expenditures would be needed.

Under these circumstances assumption is made in certain quarters that Frisco will default its guarantee of the interest due September 1. In fact, it is said that any other course would be improper.

KNITTING YARNS SLOWER BECAUSE STRIKE IS ON

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Buying of knitting yarns has slowed up, due to the knit goods strike in New York and Brooklyn, but prices show no change. Just how the strike will affect the market is a matter of conjecture, although most dealers admit that prices will drop if it is continued.

Spinners were unwilling to raise quotations on worsted yarns materially, as it would result in advancing the prices for worsted goods and so kill the prospective demand for them.

Cotton yarns were quiet, the small demand for them being attributed to the spinners' high prices. Weaving yarns were selling at lower figures than for several weeks, but only small orders were placed. Buyers, influenced by favorable cotton crop reports, were holding out for still lower prices.

There were no changes in Southern frame-spun knitting yarns, but there was less activity noted in the coarser counts of single combed yarns.

SUMMER TRADE DEVELOPED BY BRAINY EFFORT

August Dullness of Years Ago Is Overcome by Teaching Public What to Buy Then.

"Summer isn't the terror to us that it used to be," remarked a white-haired veteran of the department stores of Atlanta—a man who is an interesting talker and a consistent advertiser, but who keeps his own name and his own personality persistently in the background.

"There was a time," he went on in reminiscence, "when we might almost as well have closed up the store during July and August. That was years ago.

"In the summer all the well-to-do customers went out of Atlanta, and did not return until fall. Fall was a mad scramble for customers and stores alike.

"The less wealthy, who stayed in town, did little shopping. Everyone thought it was too hot. No one ever paid any attention to buying in midsummer. The stores were unattractive. Usually the proprietor was vacationing—if that's a good word—himself.

"I do not know who had the inspiration first in Atlanta. But a change came about. The wisest merchant, whoever he was, decided there were people in town with money to spend, even in the summer time.

"He schemed out the way to get it, which is followed almost universally by Atlanta stores nowadays.

"To make the story short, he offered bargains so attractive that shoppers simply had to come to town for the August sales. The custom has grown until to-day the things which have no season of necessity have been exploited so skillfully that the public believes summer is the season for them.

"That may sound obscure, but I do not intend it to be.

"Take furniture, for instance. There is no more reason why one should buy furniture in January than in August. Nor is there any reason why one should buy furniture in August in preference to January.

"But the summer furniture sale has become so much a fixture in the leading stores that people wait for it. It is good business for all concerned. The merchant is striving toward the ideal condition, which would be sales and collections of an unvarying amount every month in the year—unattainable, but none the less an ideal state of affairs.

"The customer, likewise, is winning. She effects economies by midsummer buying of furniture and blankets, and distributes her expenditures more evenly over the year."

Textile Furs Being Featured for Fall

Wide Variety of Pile Fabrics Shown in Cloaks for the 1913-14 Season.

Many new effects in pile fabrics are being featured for the fall and winter seasons. Matelasse plushes in brocaded effects and high colors, to be used for cloakings and millinery, as well as other brocaded effects, are prominent features in present trading.

There is also a tendency to moires, in Scotch plaids and checks, for dresses, cloaks and trimmings. A wide variety of Oriental and Bulgarian effects in plushes and velvets are also shown for vestings, collars and cuffs.

A new item is the jasper effect, which has a rich woolen appearance and is featured for cloakings.

The fabric is of an indefinite striped appearance, and is shown in black and white and blue and brown mixtures.

Imitation Persian lamb is also popular among the more expensive fabrics, being made to retail at about $7.50 for 50-inch widths.

FRENCH CALICOMAKERS MAKE 20-YEAR COMPACT

Several years ago an attempt was made to organize the French calico printing trade, a cartel being formed which included the principal producers, and an effort was made to fix standard prices. The results were not altogether satisfactory, and the agreement was allowed to expire. The matter was taken up again recently, and it is now reported that a new cartel, comprising seven of the leading French firms whose works are situated in Rouen, Epinal, Bolbec and Valenciennes, has been formed.

A central sales bureau, which will transact the entire selling business of the concerns interested, has been established under the style of the Comptoir de Vente des Tissus Francais Imprimees.

According to the Daily Consular and Trade Report, the agreement is for twenty years.

SMALL TOWN SECURES NATIONAL BANK CHARTER

STOCKTON, CAL., Aug. 23.—Announcement is made that application the first bie rubber factory to be eat Riverbank has been granted.

This is the first time in California that a town of 600 inhabitants has secured a charter for a national bank. The bank is capitalized at $25,000.

TURNING TO FRENCH MODELS.

Fall models for men's lounge suits show complete ignoring of English fashions and tend toward the French for the first time in many years. Cheviots yield to unfinished worsteds, and the colorful textures to the plainer. The popularity of dark greens and browns in "off" shades is evidenced by the earlier selections of tailors, while inconspicuous plaids and gun club checks are also well in demand.

Southern Hosiery Buyers in Market

Winter Goods Reported Scarce and Stringency May Become Acute by Fall.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Southern hosiery buyers are visiting the local market. Although mill agents report cheap goods sold up, some provision is evidently being made for the newcomers. The Southern jobbers have waited this year until the indications of the cotton crop were fairly certain before operating. They are not taking 84-needle bundle goods, as they predict lower prices on those lines. There are said to be fewer orders for extracts booked this year than formerly.

This is not affecting the valume of sales, as extracts are made up only to order, and customary buyers of those lines are simply seeking a different finish. Winter goods are already reported scarce, and, as the duplicating period has not yet begun, the stringency will probably be acute before the end of the fall.

Cotton Goods Buying Seems to Lack Snap

Limited Number of Desirable Spring Dress Fabrics Taken by Purchasers in East.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—While certain cotton good sellers are satisfied with conditions, nearly everywhere is the complaint that the market is without any snap save for a limited number of desirable spring dress fabrics.

A number of buyers are reported to have gone home without purchasing, while others took only sample pieces. Such wide lines were shown that, in some cases, buyers got the impression that there was plenty of goods back of them. This was not the case, but the buyers were frightened off.

Staples are not in demand as they should be at this time, and specialties are holding the lead. Fancies in ratines, crepes and voiles have shown little tendency to lose their popularity.

According to The Textile Manufacturers' Journal, several larger selling agencies have opened their spring lines of dress ginghams, zephyrs, seersuckers, madras, krinkles, cheviots and shirtings.

MEN WANT AMERICAN STYLES IN THEIR CLOTHES

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—During the past few weeks several English clothing manufacturers have had representatives in the local market with their garment samples. While some interest was displayed, it was mostly for obtaining information.

The sales made were principally on overcoats, and were intended only to add a few imported garments to the lines regularly offered. The English salesmen learned that the majority of retailers in the larger cities of the United States prefer American styles.

A local manufacturer said that foreign competitors will have to realize this still more and make their clothing which they intend selling here more on American lines, or else there will be little business developed in this country.

He also said that foreign ready-to-wear garments would not have to be seriously reckoned with by local merchants for some time to come.

LONDON STYLES FAVOR LOOSE ENDS FOR TIES

According to a London report there will be increased activity in the neckwear trade there this fall. The marked style tendency now is not toward color, but toward shape. The loose ended knot is favored, but many four-in-hands are also shown. Various shades of blue and gray constitute the color trend at present.

In London men are wearing either a jacket suit or a frock coat with a small black bow tie. The start with black will probably extend to other colors as the season continues.

It is thought, however, that this vogue will not be generally adopted, as it is entirely out of keeping with the fall ideas advanced by English haberdashers.

Once-overs and Ascots are being revived in a small way.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The United States ranks fourth as purchaser of English goods, with $146,000,000 last year.

The Bethlehem Steel Corporation is seeking bids in England and Ireland to build nine iron ore carriers of 15,000 tons dead-weight capacity.

The Canadian Government, in contract with the United Fruit Company of Nova Scotia, has established a new steamship line between Canada and England, in order to secure more satisfactory access to the English market.

The Chicago and Northwestern, with proceeds of $4,000,000 equipment trust certificates recently sold, will pay for switching engines, 2,000 gondola cars and 2,005 box cars.

WHITCOMB CO. IMPORT MUCH CORNED BEEF

Soaring Prices of Meats Bringing South American Product to the United States

Meat is going up, and up, with no end in sight.

This has led to a curious state of affairs. Corned beef, peculiarly a product of the United States, now is being imported from South America in great quantities, and Libby, McNeill & Libby, the Chicago packers, advise their representatives in Atlanta, H. H. Whitcomb & Burke Company, that nothing but the South American product now is to be had.

The quality is declared to be excellent. The steers of the Argentine prairies are fully equal in quality to those of our own Western ranges, and the only difference the consumer can detect is that instead of saying "U. S. Inspected and Passed," the labels bear the stamps, "Inspected under the Food and Drug Act of June 30, 1906"—in other words, the customs service now does the inspecting instead of the Bureau of Animal Industry.

Never before, so far as anyone remembers, has it been profitable to import tinned meats. This could take place only under exceptional conditions such as the present, when corned beef in 14-pound containers is quoted to retailers at $37 per dozen or thereabouts, while two years ago it was quoted at about $21.

Libby, McNeill & Libby were among the first to foresee the inevitable shortage of American meats and to establish a packing house on the other side of the equator. They now are reaping the benefit.

While it is believed that corned beef never before has been imported direct from South America, last year the same packers, after shipping large quantities of the product to Europe, reimported it at a profit because of a sudden bulge in prices in the United States.

Vienna sausage and potted ham, the Whitcomb company advises, have advanced 5 per cent in the past ten days, and pork sausage, pure, has advanced 28 per cent in three weeks.

Temporarily, the live stock market is depressed by the heavy shipments from the West, East and South, due to the great damage to the corn crop in the West and to the hay crop in the East. The shipments from the South were attracted by the high prices buyers paid when they made a "raid" on Southern cattle a month or so ago, which attracted the attention of the United States Government.

The Government warned the farmers of Georgia and Florida to keep their cattle, not deplete their herds, and to fatten them for market at home instead of selling them lean for fattening in the West and North.

NEW KIND OF PIPE LINE.

One of the most remarkable mechanical devices ever used in connection with the manufacture of paper is being installed at Orange, Texas. This is a "blower," more than a mile long, through which the waste yellow pine timber from a local lumber mill will be sent to a paper mill. The slabs as they come from the mill will be ground into small particles and forced by means of compressed air through the long pipe to the paper manufacturing plant. This paper mill is said to be the only plant in the world that makes paper from yellow pine pulp. It has a daily output of thirty-three tons of wrapping paper.

DEMAND FOR RAMIES TO IMPROVE IN THE SPRING

The fall linen season is shaping up well. The demand for ratines has hurt ramie linens, but it is pointed out that the former soil more easily and do not hold their shape as well as ramie suitings, and that a better demand for ramies is looked for next spring. Light blues, pinks and browns will lead the color demand for ramie goods.

ENGLISH TRADE GROWS.

The July statement of English Board of Trade shows increases of $17,436,500 in imports and $25,880,000 in exports. Imports of foodstuffs increased $8,875,000, and raw material about $5,000,000.

RUBBER FACTORY FOR BRAZIL.

Within a year the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company wil have in operation in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, first big rubber factory to be established on the South American continent, to cost $1,300,000.

Women's Footwear Seen in Many Colors

Leather and Cloth Combinations Shown—Men's Shoes Made Along English Lasts.

Imported models on which fall and winter styles for women's evening slippers are based are leather and cloth color combinations, among which red, green, gray, white and champagne are to be featured in strap and colonial effects.

There is a tendency to drop cut steel buckles, and those of jet will be much used. Another popular buckle will be of oxidized silver, in colonial design, with a satin filler to match the panel.

Panel effects are featured in the smartest slippers. A model well thought of is of patent leather, has a modified duck bill, too, and a jet buckle filled with satin matching the narrow panel extending from the buckle to the side seam. The heel is full Louis-Cuban. Featured suede slippers are of taupe, also with color combinations.

Women's street shoes shown have the long French vamp and square throat combined with cloth top color combinations. They are made with a plain toe, are fitted with the full Louis-Cuban heel and are of the button variety.

Men's shoes for fall and winter are made along the straight, laced, English last, and the color tendency is toward dark tan and gunmetal. Low, flat heels are shown almost exclusively. The blucher style is taboo.

Arizona Grows Fine Egyptian Cotton

Salt River Valley Experiments Reach Stage Where Gin and Oil Mill Are Needed.

Excellent results are being obtained in the growing of long staple Egyptian cotton in the Salt River Valley of Arizona. Under the direction of Mr. E. W. Hudson, of the Department of Agriculture, the industry has come to include over 4,000 acres in planted cotton, yielding in most cases a net profit of $100 an acre.

While the severe drouth throughout the entire West has made inroads on every other crop, the Arizona cotton has prospered to such a degree that a ginning plant and an oil mill to make use of the cotton seed are to be established by the time the crop is ready.

The subcommittee of the American commission which has been making a study of cotton growing and cotton marketing in Egypt, shows that not only can American methods applied to the raising of Egyptian cotton reduce the cost approximately 50 per cent, but that our progressive farmers, although handicapeed by the quality of our soil as compared with that of the Nile Delta, can bring our long staple cotton yield per acre up to that of Egypt's.

Long staple cotton brings from 21 to 25 cents a pound on the spot.

Already the irrigation system employed in the Delta lands has been employed in Arizona. The rest must be worked up by American intelligence and American industry, for Egypt with her antiquated methods of cultivation offers little further guidance.

FIRST BALE BRINGS 12 CTS. PER POUND IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Before the entrance to the Cotton Exchange the first bale of upland cotton grown in Chatham County was auctioned. The bale brought 12 cents a pound, 3 cents better than current values. The first bale was grown by W. M. Kennedy and ginned by Floyd & So. The staple graded good middling.

FANCY SHOE BUCKLES.

The wearing of elaborate slipper buckles was particularly noticeable during the Grand Semaine racing week, as the prevailing style of short skirts allows the entire shoe to be seen. The custom is now quite the craze, and many society people are adopting special buckle designs to be worn with various costumes. They are appearing daily with a different buckle to harmonize with each different gown.

MEN'S COLLARS ARE INVENTION OF A HOUSEWIFE

Ingenious Woman Contrived Familiar Article to Lessen Amount of Washing in Home.

The detachable collar now worn by men the world round was the invention of a thrifty housewife 83 years ago. It sprang from sheer necessity, and yet it was so simple an article of wearing apparel that its first maker never looked upon her production as an invention, and it is doubtful if the other early manufacturers thought of patenting the idea.

During the succeeding years, in which the manufacture of collars and their allied products has become a great industry in and around Troy, N. Y., the incident of the invention of the collar had almost been lost until recently brought to light by the unearthing of a family tradition.

It is now certain that Mrs. Hannah Lord Montague was the maker of the first detachable linen collar. Mr. Montague was engaged in the manufacture of fine shoes for women. He was a large man, very particular in matters of dress, and in those days before the invention of the sewing machine and before great public laundries were established, the making, washing and ironing of the shirts formed quite an item in the work of the household.

Mrs. Montague was resourceful, and in endeavoring to lighten her household duties she hit upon the idea of a detached collar, which could be fastened to a neckband of her husband's shirt and washed and ironed separately. Before this time, when the collar was soiled, the whole shirt had to be washed, but by this device two or three collars might be used to one shirt. Acting upon the idea which had come to her, Mrs. Montague went to the patch bag, selected a strip of white linen, which she cut and shaped to fit the neckband of her husband's shirt, sewed it, turned it inside out, and attached a narrow string of braid at either end to tie about the neck. This was the original string collar.

Thus through the resourcefulness of a woman the modern detachable collar was evolved.

A FREE TRIP

To Atlanta is available to the merchant who buys an adequate bill from the members of the Merchants' Association.

Write to

H. T. Moore
SECRETARY.
Rhodes Building,
Atlanta.

Write for our latest Catalogue. The leading merchants are adding the 5c and 10c departments. Why not one for your town?

McCLURE 10c CO., 47-49 S. Broad St.
Give Your "DIMES" a Chance

The Hirshberg Company
STATIONERY — NOVELTIES
DRUGGISTS' SUNDRIES — BLANK BOOKS
Glendale Line
12-15-17 NELSON STREET
ATLANTA

DIXIE PICKLE AND PRESERVING CO.
Manufacturers of
Pure Apple and Distilled Vinegar, Catsup, Pickles, Mustard, Pepper Sauce, Sauer Kraut, Jelly, Etc.
CANNED GOODS
364 to 378 Marietta Street, Atlanta, Ga.

HATS
Caps, Gloves, Umbrellas
QUALITY and VALUES
BROWN, PERRYMAN & GREENE CO.
ATLANTA

VOLLMER MANUFACTURING COMPANY
Moore Building
ATLANTA, GEORGIA
MAKERS OF FINE JEWELRY
Special Designs in Platinum
Engravers — Diamond Setters — Watchmakers
Specialists in Jewelry Repairing

U. S. CERTAIN CAMINETTI WILL SHARE DIGGS' FATE

Government Bends Every Effort to Speed Trial of Federal Immigration Commissioner's Son on the Charge of "White Slavery."

Former California State Architect, Facing Four to Twenty Years in Prison, Plans Appeal—Companion to Follow Suit if Convicted.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—Supremely confident after the conviction of Maury I. Diggs, former State architect, the United States authorities, prosecuting the famous "white slave" cases, which at one time threatened to disrupt President Wilson's Cabinet, are using every energy to speed the trial and obtain a similar verdict against Drew Caminetti, who was Diggs' companion in the sensational flight to Reno with Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris.

Diggs will be sentenced September 2. Under the verdict of the jury, the Judge can fix the penalty at from four to twenty years, and owing to the fact that virtually the same evidence that was introduced against Diggs will be introduced against Caminetti, leads the Government to believe that conviction is certain.

Diggs' attorneys have already announced they will carry the case to the highest court in the land. Should Caminetti be convicted, he, too, doubtless would appeal.

Diggs Gives $20,000 Bail.

Bail in the sum of $20,000 was readily furnished by Diggs' relatives when the amount was fixed by the court and was accepted by the United States Commissioner.

The case was one of the most spectacular ever tried in California. Diggs is a former State architect. Caminetti is a son of the United States Commissioner of Immigration. Both men are married and have families. Both are of high social standing in Sacramento.

Both men are considerably older that the girls with whom they eloped. The undisputed evidence in the case was that the intimate relations between Diggs and Miss Warrington and Caminetti and Miss Norris had become notorious in Sacramento. Families of both the young men were preparing to start criminal action against them to break these relations.

Then they and the girls disappeared. They were traced to Reno, where the two couples were living as men and wives in a rented bungalow. The men were charged with violations of the Mann anti-white slave act.

Blames Girls for Elopement.

Both Miss Warrington and Miss Norris charged that the men had threatened, cajoled and coerced them into making the trip to Reno. They declared that they had promised to obtain divorces from their wives in order to wed them.

Diggs, in his defense, pleaded that the girls were the persons responsible for the flight, that they had induced them to fly to Reno.

It was this attitude of hiding behind a woman's skirt that caused the most severe condemnation of Diggs. Great stress was laid on it by Theodore Roche, attorney for the Government, in his final appeal to the jury for conviction.

"This defendant," said Roche, "did not deny on the stand the truth of the essential facts we have shown. And then he comes before you and asks acquittal.

"Hides Behind Wife's Skirts."

"The defendant in a criminal case usually bases defense on the presumption of innocence, but this defendant relies on his own depravity. He comes into court covered with his own shame and hides behind the skirts of his wife and child.

"When these girls went to Reno their departure meant social ostracizement. Marsha Warrington went because she believed and trusted this man. She didn't desire money, dresses or presents. Her parents gave her these. But this man had promised her marriage, as Caminetti had promised Lola Norris.

"Those promises were never intended to be kept. What was intended was to abandon the girls in Reno. They never could have returned to Sacramento—and you know what that meant. But the alluring promise of marriage had been held out to them."

Scores Conduct in Home.

Attorney Roche was particularly severe with Diggs for the misconduct in his own home to which he testified yesterday. He had not been content, said Roche, with making an assignation house out of his office, but he was similarly to degrade the privacy of a home he shared with a virtuous and loving wife.

In seeking to establish that the trip was not premeditated and that the two girls had not been induced to take it by threats of scandal on one hand and promises of marriage on the other, Diggs willingly testified to his own misconduct and the embarrassments, domestic and business, into which it had led him.

His counsel in summing up the evidence did not palliate these acts.

"Paint this defendant as you will—a monster if you please," argued Robert Devlin, his senior counsel, "but tell me what motive he would have had in going out of the State for the purpose of accomplishing those things already accomplished.

"Counsel may characterize him as they please, and I may not differ with them. They say his act was shameless, and I may feel the same way about it, but it isn't white slavery."

This was the whole argumentative substance of the defense. There remained the rhetorical and the emotional appeals and, of course, they were not neglected. The girls were blamed for tempting the men. They were called willing accomplices in what evil had been done, and the wisdom of trusting a woman scorned when she bears witness against the lover who has discharged her was called into question.

Southern Drawl an Opera Asset

Alabama Singer Lauds Accent

Sees Fame for Dixie Song Birds

Miss Neida Humphrey.

Miss Neida Humphrey, of Huntsville, Blames Laziness for Dearth of Divas.

HUNTSVILLE, ALA., Aug. 23.—The soft, musical voice of Southern women, which poets have raved about, others have envied and the comic papers have made subject of satire, has a value in dollars, and it has an even greater value in the world of art.

So thinks Miss Neida Humphrey, of Huntsville, who has just returned home after a three-year course of voice culture under Caruso in New York.

Miss Humphrey, realizing the supreme demand for American prima donnas on the operatic stage, not only in this country, but in every capital in Europe, thinks there is a world of opportunity for the young women of her own section in this field.

"The Southern woman's voice," says Miss Humphrey, "possesses more natural musical qualities than the voices of any other women in the world. With proper cultivation that quality should make them the greatest opera stars. The world has long known of this quality, but the Southern women of talent have just refused to grasp their opportunities.

Blames Indolence in Part.

"And I guess the laziness so generally attributed to our people may have a great deal to do with it. Singing, I mean serious singing, is the hardest sort of work.

"There is hardly a girl of social position in the Southland who has not a smattering of musical education. The trouble is it's only a smattering. When they reached the point where singing meant real work they retired gracefully to other fields.

"But I believe that the time is not far off when the Southern girl of talent will realize the life she is overlooking and then I am certain that there will be girls of Dixie whose names will be just as famous as those of Farrar, Suzanne Adams and Louise Homer, all American born.

Miss Humphrey is very young and she is very, very pretty, but that is not all. She has a voice of remarkable power and dramatic quality, but withal she holds in it that soft sweetness that declares her home as plainly as it would be declared were she to walk on the stage waving the Stars and Bars.

Has Charmed the President.

She has already done things in music and she intends to do more. In New York she has sung before the most critical audiences in concert and has won their high approbation. It was she who charmed President Wilson and a distinguished gathering in New York recently at a concert.

In Chattanooga last May, during the reunion of the Confederate Veterans, she sang before the old soldiers and was given an ovation.

Miss Humphrey intends to return to New York in the fall to complete her studies. She has already been assured of an operatic engagement and Huntsville believes that it will soon boast an operatic celebrity.

Dweller in Desert Sees First Pine Tree

Full Grown Woman Is Mystified by Foliage—Also Takes Mountain Snow Bath.

CHICO, CAL., Aug. 23.—Miss Ilene Locey, of Visalia, cousin of Frank M. Moore, of this city, a grown woman, saw her first pine tree when she went with the Moores for an auto trip to the mountains.

She has resided long in the desert southland, and was not only pleased but mystified at the foliage and the fact that she could reach the snow-bound regions of the Sierra Nevadas inside of an hour's time.

The party left here especially to give Miss Locey an idea of the diversified climate of the Sacramento Valley and a snow bath in the higher altitude.

Tents Only Shelter For Toledo Families

City Is Growing So Rapidly That Builders Can Not Construct Houses Demanded.

TOLEDO, Aug. 23.—Because the city has not enough houses to rent and builders are not able to construct houses as rapidly as they are desired tents are being used as homes in Toledo.

Two tent colonies have been established in the city. In both districts occupants of the tents are owners of lots on which the temporary homes have been erected. The lots have been purchased as home sites and tents are serving as temporary homes.

The tent homes consist of living rooms, dining rooms and kitchens. Each has a flower and vegetable garden and one is equipped with a chicken park, a stable and outbuildings. Living rooms are convertible into bedrooms, and hammocks, stretched in the open, are used day and night.

SOUTH IS PAYING HEAVY TOLL FOR CANAL BENEFITS

Colonel Gailliard, of South Carolina, Breaks Down Under Tremendous Task.

More than any other section of the country, the South is expected to realize in prosperity and development by the opening of the Panama Canal. But the South is to pay its toll and pay for it dearly.

Just when the canal was an assured fact, Senator John T. Morgan, of Alabama, father of the Isthmian Waterway idea, died as a result of his years of ceaseless labor impressing the necessity of rthe canal on Congress.

Nok Lieutenant Colonel David Du Bois Gailliard, of South Carolina, the army engineer who dug the Culebra Cut, has had to abandon the scene of his triumph and return to the United States to give his nervous system shattered by his work, a rest which it has needed for months.

And that is not all. From the zone the advices come that Colonel William L. Sibert, of Alabama, the army engineer in charge of the work on the great Gatun Dam, is on the point of a breakdown and it is extremely doubtful if he will be strong enough to stay in the zone to see his work completed.

Careers of Two Similar.

The careers of Colonel Sibert and Colonel Gailliard have been remarkably similar. Gailliard was born in South Carolina; Sibert, in Alabama. They entered West Point the same year and both graduated in 1884 among the first five men in their class.

After their graduation, both were sent to Willets Point and in 1908, when the canal work was put in the hands of the army engineers, Colonel Goethals immediately picked the two Southerners as his chief aides. Sibert was put in charge of the work on the Atlantic side, which included the building of the Gatun Dam, while Gaillard was in charge of the work in the interior of the zone.

That Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard had suffered a nervous breakdown was known only to a few of his intimate friends in the army. A few weeks ago when his condition became serious the matter was brought to the attention of General Bixby, the chief engineer in Washington, and by General Bixby called to the attention of Secretary of War Garrison, who immediately granted the stricken engineer a long leave of absence.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles F. Mason, Medical Corps, U. S. A., the director of the Ancon Hospital, in the Canal Zone; Mrs. Gaillard and Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard's young son came with him and went with him to Baltimore, where he will enter the John Hopkins Hospital. There he will be under the care of some of the most eminent specialists in nervous disorders in this country.

Leave Did Not Aid Him.

Colonel Gaillard was in New York less than two months ago after a six weeks' leave of absence that he had taken in the hope that the rest would benefit his health to the extent that he would be able to remain in the Canal Zone. He sailed from New York on June 27 last, again to take charge of the work in the Central Division.

Those who talked with him at that time remember that he expressed a desire to get away from the Isthmus as soon as his work was finished, but, he added, with a touch of sadness in his soft Southern voice, "When I do leave it will be with deep and sincere regret."

Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard is the first of the famous army engineers employed in the construction o. the Panama Canal to be stricken as a result of his work. A few weeks ago Colonel William M. Black, Corps of Engineers, the chief of that branch of the service in this part of the United States, the officer who was head of the engineering board which solved the problem of raising the old battleship Maine, was in Panama and was Gaillard's guest.

Close Friends for Years.

The two officers have been intimate friends for years. During his stay at Empire, the headquarters of Colonel Gaillard, Colonel Black noted and realized that the builder of Culebra Cut needed a long and complete rest.

"Gaillard," said Colonel Black last night, "is one of the most wonderful organizers the army has developed. His work in the Canal Zone has been little short of marvelous. He laid out his plans in such a way that he got the maximum out of everything, especially in the handling of the railroad part of the work. He was also able within a few months after he took charge at Empire to double the work accomplished in a specified time. Some of the things that he did experienced railroad men had said were practically impossible."

Woman Given Job Of Cleaning Up State

Success in Making Tacoma a Spotless Town Causes Promotion in Service.

TACOMA, Aug. 23.—Because of her successful efforts to transform Tacoma into a "Spotless Town," Miss Arizona B. Wimple, food and market inspector, is to be rewarded with a bigger job—the cleaning up of the State of Washington.

This was the advice received here today from the Governor's office in Olympia, where it is said Miss Wimple is to be appointed State bakery and sanitary inspector.

Her methods in cleaning up Tacoma were simple and direct and included publicity as an aid in bringing about the desired reforms.

Frequent inspections of bakeries and other food dispensing establishments were made and the score announced in the newspapers.

Miss Wimple, who is young and pretty, will receive $4,000 a year from the State.

She is a graduate of the University of Michigan.

CANDLES BURNING AT WAKE SET HOUSE AFIRE

CALGARY, ALBERTA, Aug. 23.—A fire which started from candles set about a coffin at a wake, at the house of J. Selar, here burned the hair and eyebrows off the body of an aged woman. Portions of the face were charred. Firemen extinguished the blaze.

WATCHING MAN WHO STOLE AND HID A FORTUNE

Detectives Shadowing Mail Thief Believed to Have Cached $40,000 After Robbery.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 23.—Charles Savage, a negro mail robber, released from the penitentiary in Leavenworth, is being shadowed by three detectives. He will be kept under watch constantly because somewhere is hidden $40,000 of the $50,000 in currency he stole five years ago from a registered mail pouch, and nobody except Savage knows where it is.

When Savage was released he was met at the door by his mother and a young woman to whom he was engaged before he was sent to prison. They came at once to Kansas City to see an uncle, who is dying.

"They needn't watch me," he said. "If they think I'm going to dig up $40,000 they're mistaken. I wish I knew where there was $40,000 buried."

"Isn't it queer that $2,000 in $20 gold certificates of the same series as stolen from the mail sack were found blowing around in the wind near your mother's home in South Leavenworth this spring?" Savage was asked.

"Yes, that's queer. I don't understand," he answered. "I read about that, and I figured it out that some person who lived in South Leavenworth had stolen that mail sack and hidden the money there, and the rain had washed away the dirt where it was buried, and the wind got at it and blew it away."

Employees' Pension Measure Approved

Pennsylvania Cities Are Permitted to Establish Fund for Faithful Municipal Workers.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—Under the provisions of an act passed by the Legislature, which Governor Tener has approved, this city is given authority to establish a municipal pension fund for employees. The act applies to all city employees who have given twenty years of service to the city.

The act provides that in the event of the creating of the fund every employee will be compelled to pay into the fund 1 per cent of his yearly salary.

The pension to be allowed the beneficiary will be equal to one-half of the average yearly salary received by him during the last two years before his retirement.

College Professor Seeks Laborer's Pay

Unable to Make Both Ends Meet, Teacher Resigns Chair in University.

BERKELEY, CAL., Aug. 23.—Unable to make both ends meet on a salary of $900 paid him by the University of California, Paul Boehncke, an instructor in the German department, has withdrawn from the faculty and is seeking a position in which he can support himself and family of two children.

During the last few summers Boehncke has managed to augment his meager salary by working as a plasterer at from $5 to $7 a day, or nearly twice the amount he was paid by the university.

Apache War in '80's Is Cause of Divorce

Husband Deserted Thirty Years Ago by Wife Who Didn't Like Wild West.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Geronimo and his wild hordes of Apaches, who terrorized New Mexico in the eighties, were the direct cause of a divorce suit which Allen L. Eaton begun yesterday in the Superior Court against Zuma E. Eaton.

The Eatons were married in Silver City, N. Mex., in 1886, when the Apache uprising was on. Mrs. Eaton, who hailed from Pittsburg, did not enjoy the wild Western life her married life entailed, and she deserted her husband.

Common Laborer Strikes Big Gold Vein

Ore Will Run $60,000 to Ton and Mine Is Largest in Southern Oregon.

MEDFORD, OREG., Aug. 23.—What is reported as the biggest gold strike made in Southern Oregon has been been reported by Elmer Higginbotham on the mine owned by him and M. G. Womack on Kane's Creek. The ore will run $60,000 to the ton, according to assays of samples made here.

Higginbotham had been a common laborer for many years until Womack offered to "grub-stake" him on a prospecting trip up Kane's Creek.

BERI BERI CAUSED BY RICE DIET, SAYS EXPERT

Special Cable to The American.

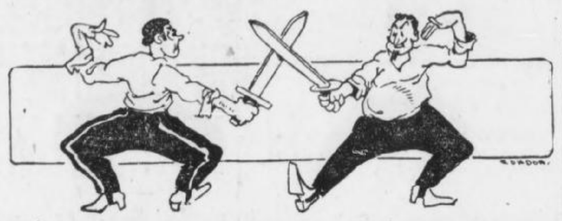
BERLIN, Aug. 23.—The Berlin Medical Association reports that the well-known investigator of beri beri, Dr. Max Moszkowski, finds, after a remarkable experiment, that the disease is caused by the use of rice.

Dr. Moszkowski for 138 days subsisted almost entirely upon rice. All the symptoms of beri beri manifested themselves.

At the close of the experiment an injection of serum containing an extract of rice resulted in a complete recovery.

Hunnicutt Won in First Round

Beat Bravo With Wooden Sword



How Atlanta's Broadsword Champion Worsted French Fencing Master.

Time was when the prize fight was not au fait, when in the best families, and even in the second best, and maybe in the third, they frowned down upon the pugilistic art as brutal and degenerate. Then it was that the youn bloods turned to cockfighting and fencing for the gladiatorial features of their lives, and were satisfied.

And that time was not so very long ago. Calvin W. Hunnicutt, who is Atlanta's oldest citizen, revived them in memory yesterday, when he fell to the young bloods turned to cockfighting between Charley White and Frank Whitney, with the remark that things were not like this of yore.

Of course, he had a dueling story of his own to tell, and he told it—of how he fought an arrogant French fencing master in a combat with wooden swords, and how all Atlanta looked on and cheered him as its champion.

It occurred before the war, when all good things, it seems, occurred. It occurred just at the beginning of the war, and had its effect in keeping Mr. Hunnicutt out of that conflict.

"There had been talk of war, war, war pretty generally," he said. The trouble clouds were thick and black, and we organized here in Atlanta a cavalry troop that we called the Fulton Dragoons. Captain Wilson was our officer, I was first lieutenant, and C. B. Whaley, my best friend, was first sergeant.

"All went well at first, and things were pleasant. But after a while politics began to leak in, as inevitably it will with all volunteer military bodies. Everybody knows everybody else so well, you see that very naturally jealousy comes in. Anyhow, when the time came for the election of a captain for a new term, Whaley and I, backing Wilson, lost out, because the other man promised horses to all members of the troop. Then dissatisfaction grew and the organization loosened.

"The new captain and his great ally, Second Lieutenant Williams, were full of ideas as to how to run a military organization, and began to put these ideas into play. That made more dissatisfaction for no volunteer soldier likes to be driven by men who were their friends and associates.

"One of their ideas was the importation of a fencing teacher to instruct the men in broadsword use. Now Whaley and I had practiced considerably with the broadsword, and were rather expert in its use, but we said nothing of it to the captain and his friends.

"Well, the fencing master came, a Frenchman from Mobile. He was a flourishing, affected sort of fellow, and considerable of a boaster. Not long after he was here, he broke off teaching and began to talk about his own great skill and to show it off.

"One day he challenged all of us.

" 'Nobody here can touch me with his sword,' he announced. 'I don't fear to let any of you try.' And he flourished his sword.

"Whaley and I decided to take him on, and I went to him. He laughed at me. But I insisted, and the date was set for our combat. That there should be no bloodshed—because we were going to do some furious fencing, it seemed—I put a negro of mine to work making two wooden swords, or sticks. These were to be our weapons.

"Somehow the tidings that there was to be a fight got abroad. Atlanta was not as large as it is now, but it was a right smart town even then, and when the day for the fight came, everybody turned out.

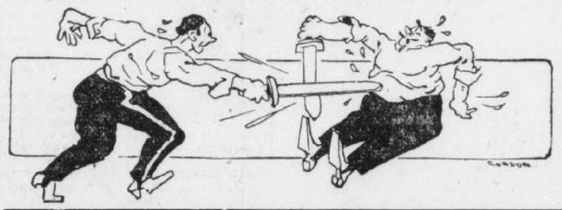
"We had planned to have the duel in a theater, owned in the days of old Atlanta by a man named Williams. The place was packed, and I began to be a little nervous over the public nature of the affair.

"We squared off, and the crowd settled back in the seats for a long and interesting fight. But it wasn't for long. The Frenchman came at me with a flourish, and I had a flourish to match his. Thence I made a thrust at him, the thrust that we know technically as the point tierce. It went through his guard, and to his body. If we had been fighting with real swords, my opponent would have been run through.

"All Atlanta laughed. The Frenchman had pretty generally advertised his ability to fight, and everybody was there. However, there were one or two persons who didn't like the way the fight came out, particularly the new captain of the dragoons and his ally. After the fight they began working to get me to resign. The duel, they claimed everywhere, might have an effect in breaking up discipline. And so, with their dissatisfaction showing plain, I resigned.

"The Frenchman we didn't see after the half minute duel. If the dragoons learned broadsword fencing, they learned it from somebody else.

"It's a pity the art of fencing does not survive in the popular fancy. It is clean, beneficial and interesting. But this prize fighting——"



LOOKS FOR BODY OF FATHER LOST IN ICE 43 YEARS

Miss Edith Randall, of Boston, Expects to Find Corpse on Glacier at Foot Mt. Blanc.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Miss Edith Randall, of this city, has gone to Chamonix, Switzerland, one one of the strangest errands known. She hopes to find in the glacier there the body of her father, who lost his life climbing on Mont Blanc forty-three years ago. Ten others were lost with him in a snowstorm near the summit. All told, two Americans, one Scotchman and eight guides and porters died.

Five of the bodies were recovered. It is expected by guides that the six others will be delivered up by the glacier this year.

Scientists are interested as it may supply evidence to prove their theories on the speed of the annual march of glaciers toward the valleys.

Miss Randall's father, John Randolph, a Boston banker, was fifty-four when he lost his life in 1870.

Last year Miss Randall came to Chamonix, as the ice axe and several small articles relonging to Mr. Randall had been found by guides at the foot of the Glacier des Bossons.

Many Americans and English Alpinists, as well as guides, joined in the search for the body, but without result. All hope for better luck this summer.

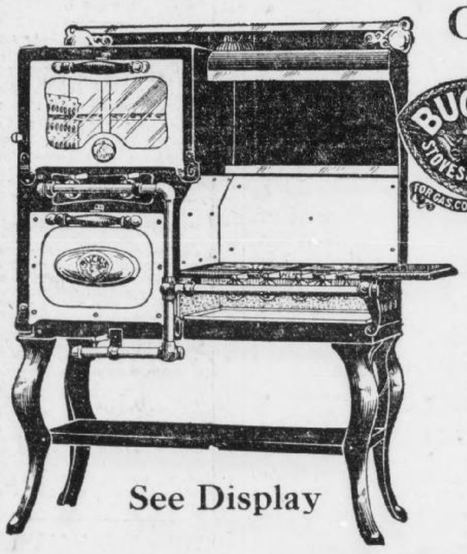
"Back on the Job"

again and very quickly, too, if you will only let Hostetter's Stomach Bitters help the digestion to become normal, keep the liver active and the bowels free from constipation. These are absolutely necessary in order to maintain health. Try it to-day but be sure it's

HOSTETTER'S Stomach Bitters

25% DISCOUNT

On All BUCK'S Gas Stoves and Ranges



See Display

Buck's—the most conveniently arranged, the most sanitary, and certainly the most economical gas user made—comes in for a tremendous discount this week.

They are here—anything from the small stove to the most elaborate range—and all are carrying the same big discount. Discard your old, worn, smoking, fuel-consuming cooking machine to-morrow, and let us replace it with one of these modern stoves or ranges.

The savings of your fuel bill will soon pay for any BUCK'S you may select.

Connections Free--$1 a Week Buys Your Choice

That's fair enough, isn't it? We will actually put it in your kitchen—ready to turn on the gas—and you can pay the bill at one dollar per week. Come in to-morrow and take your choice. See our big Mitchell street window display.

Rhodes-Wood FURNITURE COMPANY

COMPLETE HOUSEFURNISHERS

103-5-7-9-11 Whitehall Street, Corner Mitchell

EXTRA

HEARST'S SUNDAY AMERICAN

EXTRA

VOL. I. NO. 21. Copyright, 1913, by The Georgian Company. ★★★ ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY, AUGUST 24, 1913. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

BOLL WEEVIL COSTS SOUTH BILLION; ZONE CURE URGED

Senator Smith of South Carolina Secures Government Expert's Figures on Total Estimated Ravages During Last 17 Years.

Shows How $107,539,127 Yearly Cost of Proposed Remedy Could Be Counteracted by Diversified Crops and United States Aid.

(The zone strip to which Senator Smith refers as a remedy for the boll weevil, as proposed, would begin in Tennessee and run down through Alabama and part of Florida.)

By ELLISON D. SMITH.
(United States Senator From South Carolina.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—A few weeks ago I asked some of the officials in the Department of Agriculture to give me an estimate of the losses the farmers of the South have suffered as the result of the boll weevil. The figures furnished me are startling. From the report I make the following extract:

"The only adequate way of arriving at the losses due to the boll weevil is by studying the average production per acre by States, comparing years of non-infestation with years of infestation. It is quite noticeable that every State by the third year of infestation has shown a decided reduction in average yield per acre.

"This average production is used in connection with the acreage planted to obtain an estimate in money value of the loss from the boll weevil to the producers. This is only the primary loss and is turned over and over again as it reacts upon ginners, oil mill men, merchants, bankers, property values, manufacturers of the textile and the final consumers.

"The total loss to producers obtained by this method from 1895 through 1912 is $841,521,135, or an average during the 18 years of $46,751,174 per annum, with the loss now reaching over $100,000,000 per annum.

These Only Obvious Losses.

"Only the more obvious losses from the ravages of this pest can even be estimated. These are the losses in productivity suffered by the producers and the losses in business of the first processes in manufacture.

"Figures are presented to show the losses to the planter, the ginner and the oil mills as follows, for the period from 1895 to 1912:

Loss to the planters	$841,521,135
Loss to the ginners	17,446,295
Loss to the oil mills	72,270,421
Total	$931,237,852

"To these must be added losses in business suffered by cotton buyers and brokers, merchants, bankers and cotton mills, the loss in property values, the ultimate effects upon the consumer."

In other words, officials of the Department of Agriculture estimate that the loss to the South from the boll weevil between 1895 and 1912 has been considerably more than $1,000,000,000. This is staggering.

The Government has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars to stamp out the boll weevil, but without avail. The Government experts, entomologists, farm demonstration agents and others have done splendid work in teaching the farmers better methods of cultivation, rotation of crops, etc., but so far as checkmating the boll weevil is concerned they themselves admit that their work has been a failure.

Moves Eastward Steadily.

The weevil continues its march eastward at a steady pace each year, and in no section where it has made its appearance has any method been discovered of minimizing the damage done by it.

Unless something is done it will not be very long until the entire cotton area of the South is infested.

Of course, some cotton can be grown in the area infested by the boll weevil, but the yield per acre and per farm is greatly reduced, while the cost of production is greatly increased. I am told by a member of Congress who owns a large plantation in an infested section that it costs just about twice as much to produce a bale of cotton now as it cost before the boll weevil came. Many others have given me testimony to the same effect.

When one undertakes to estimate the loss to the South during recent years because of this little insect, and then tries to estimate the probable loss in the future, the result must be appalling.

I have been deeply interested in the boll weevil for a number of years. I have watched its spread from the time it made its first appearance in

Continued on Page 6, Column 4.

New Cancer Cure Arouses Germany

Kaiser's Subjects Have Cornered Supply of Mesothorium, Found in U. S. and Brazil.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Mesothorium, the new cure for cancer, is causing great excitement in Germany, according to Dr. F. D. Donoughe, of Boston, who has just returned from the Cancer Congress at Brussels and the Medical Congress in London. German towns have subscribed large sums for the purchase of mesothorium, which is found in Colorado, the Carolinas and Brazil.

A rayless product of therum, it becomes active through transformation into radio-therum. The price, formerly one-sixth that of radium, recently has become higher. Hungary and Germany have purchased the supply of mesothorium available until 1915. It is said to be a dependable cure for certain forms of cancer.

Sir Herbert Tree's Cast Stirs British Ire

Americans in 'Joseph and His Brethren' Win Noted Playwright's Praise.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Antagonism has been aroused in London theatrical circles because Americans are to play the principal roles in Sir Herbert Tree's production of "Joseph and His Brethren."

Sir Herbert said:

"The Americans are wonderful in whatever they attempt to do. I have the greatest faith in their powers, and, without wishing to enter on a comparison between American and English methods, I must say I think Maxine Elliott will be a peerless Zeulika, and George Relph a most romantic Joseph."

Caruso Sadly Says: 'My Star Is Dimming'

Tenor Thinks Public Soon Will Desert Him for Young and Brilliant Star.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, Aug. 23.—Caruso, who is taking the cure with his eldest son at Monte Catini, is in a philosophical mood. To a newspaper man he said:

"It is about time the public ceased to take an interest in me. There are plenty of young stars rising who soon will shine with dazzling brilliancy in the firmament of art. Mine is dimming; don't you think so?"

Then he sadly shook his head and walked slowly away.

HEARTHSTONE 200 YEARS OLD FOUND IN MINNESOTA

ST. PAUL, MINN., Aug. 23.—The hearthstone used by early French voyagers who made their headquarters in the stone house at Taylors Falls, in Interstate Park, was found by workmen excavating in the foundations for relics. The house is thought to have been built 200 years ago.

NEGRO VILLAGE DESTROYED BY MOB OF WHITES

Buildings Are Blown Up by Heavy Dynamite Charge and Then Torch Is Applied.

NO CASUALTIES REPORTED

Attack of Merchant on Young Man Cause of Outbreak—Black Makes Escape.

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—Greenough, a negro village just over the line in Mitchell County, has been partially destroyed by a mob of white men. No deaths have been reported.

It appears that John Davis and his brother, young white men, had advanced some money to Bradley Brothers, negro proprietors of the leading store of Greenough. The negroes failed to return the money, and when the white men went to collect, a difficulty arose, in which one of the negroes struck John Davis with a scantling, knocking him unconscious. The Davis boys escaped to their home and reported the difficulty and the action of the negroes. At night a mob of white men assembled and marched on the village, armed with dynamite and such firearms as could be procured.

When the village was reached, it was found the Bradleys had escaped. A charge of dynamite was exploded under the store and it was completely demolished, together with the stock of goods. Other stores were fired and many shots emptied into negro houses. The fire was returned by the blacks for a short time, but without effect.

The Bradleys have not been seen since the outbreak, and further trouble is not expected by the whites.

LEO M. FRANK as he appeared in court yesterday. The defendant was calm under the terrific denunciation of the prosecutor and watched Mr. Dorsey intently through the many hours that the Solicitor consumed in declaring the defendant one of the greatest of criminals. He seemed scarcely more moved than the spectators.

DORSEY DEMANDS DEATH PENALTY FOR FRANK IN THRILLING CLOSING PLEA

Solicitor's Scathing Address Halted by Adjournment---Had Spoken for More Than Six Hours---Cheered by Big Crowd Outside the Courthouse.

PRISONER CALM, WIFE SOBS AS STATE CHARGES MURDER

Slain Girl's Mother Breaks Down, but Defendant Faces Spectators With Hint of Smile---Case May Go to the Jury by Monday Noon.

Insisting upon the application of the Mosaic law of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey demanded the life of Leo M. Frank yesterday in expiation of the murder of Mary Phagan on April 26.

Nothing less than the death penalty would satisfy justice, declared the Solicitor in one of the most bitter and impassioned addresses a Georgia courtroom audience ever has heard.

It was the closing argument of the State before the fate of Frank is placed in the hands of the twelve jurors. It was interrupted by adjournment at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The Solicitor had been speaking since 9 o'clock in the forenoon and was exhausted by his efforts. His address had begun at 3:30 the afternoon before and had consumed a total of six and a half hours.

Crowd Greets Him With Cheers.

When, weak with fatigue, he asked for a recess and court adjourned until Monday morning at 9 o'clock, a great crowd awaited him outside to cheer him and rend the air with their yells because of the magnificent fight he has put up to send Frank to the gallows for the murder of the little factory girl.

The demonstration was spontaneous and was of greater magnitude than that of the night before. He had aroused to the highest pitch the admiration of the populace for the earnest and determined battle he was conducting for the conviction of the man he deemed guilty of the murder.

Men in front of the courthouse cheered with all their might as Dorsey came in sight from out the courtroom doors. Men from across the street took up the cheer and the little Solicitor was given the demonstration of a governor or some other popular hero as he quickly tucked his books and records under his arms and escaped through the crowd into his law offices in the Kiser building.

Hurls Charge Directly at Frank.

If his tongue was tipped with venom and bitterness, it can hardly be said that the Solicitor was not sincere and in earnest. Every word and every pharse that he uttered during his long speech—the longest of the trial—carried with it the conviction that the speaker was in deadly earnest.

Much of the time he was talking directly at the prisoner and was accusing him of murder and other crimes unmentionable. He looked Frank right in the eye. He leveled his finger at the defendant sitting calmly between his mother and his beautiful wife. He called him a "red-handed murderer" and a pervert. Frank did not flinch.

During a brief intermission, Frank even walked in front of the spectators with the suggestion of a smile on his face. If there was any fear of the verdict in his heart, it was kept buried there, far out of sight of human eyes.

Likens Frank to Oscar Wilde.

Dorsey compared the defendant with that prince of perverts, Oscar Wilde, and there was never a flicker of Frank's eye nor a change in his quiet, speculative expression. Dorsey told of other men who had possessed good reputations and yet had been guilty of the most heinous offenses—Theodore Durant, of San Francisco; Pastor Richeson, of Boston; Mayor McCue, of Charlottsville, Va.; Henry C. Beattie, of Richmond; Dr. Crippen, and others. In the same connection he mentioned the name of Judge Iscariot and Benedict Arnold, both of whom, he said, were supposed to be of good character until they had become traitors and betrayers.

"Character isn't worth a cent when you've got the evidence before you," shouted the Solicitor after he had compared Frank with some of the most infamous persons he could call to mind.

Prisoner Encourages His Wife.

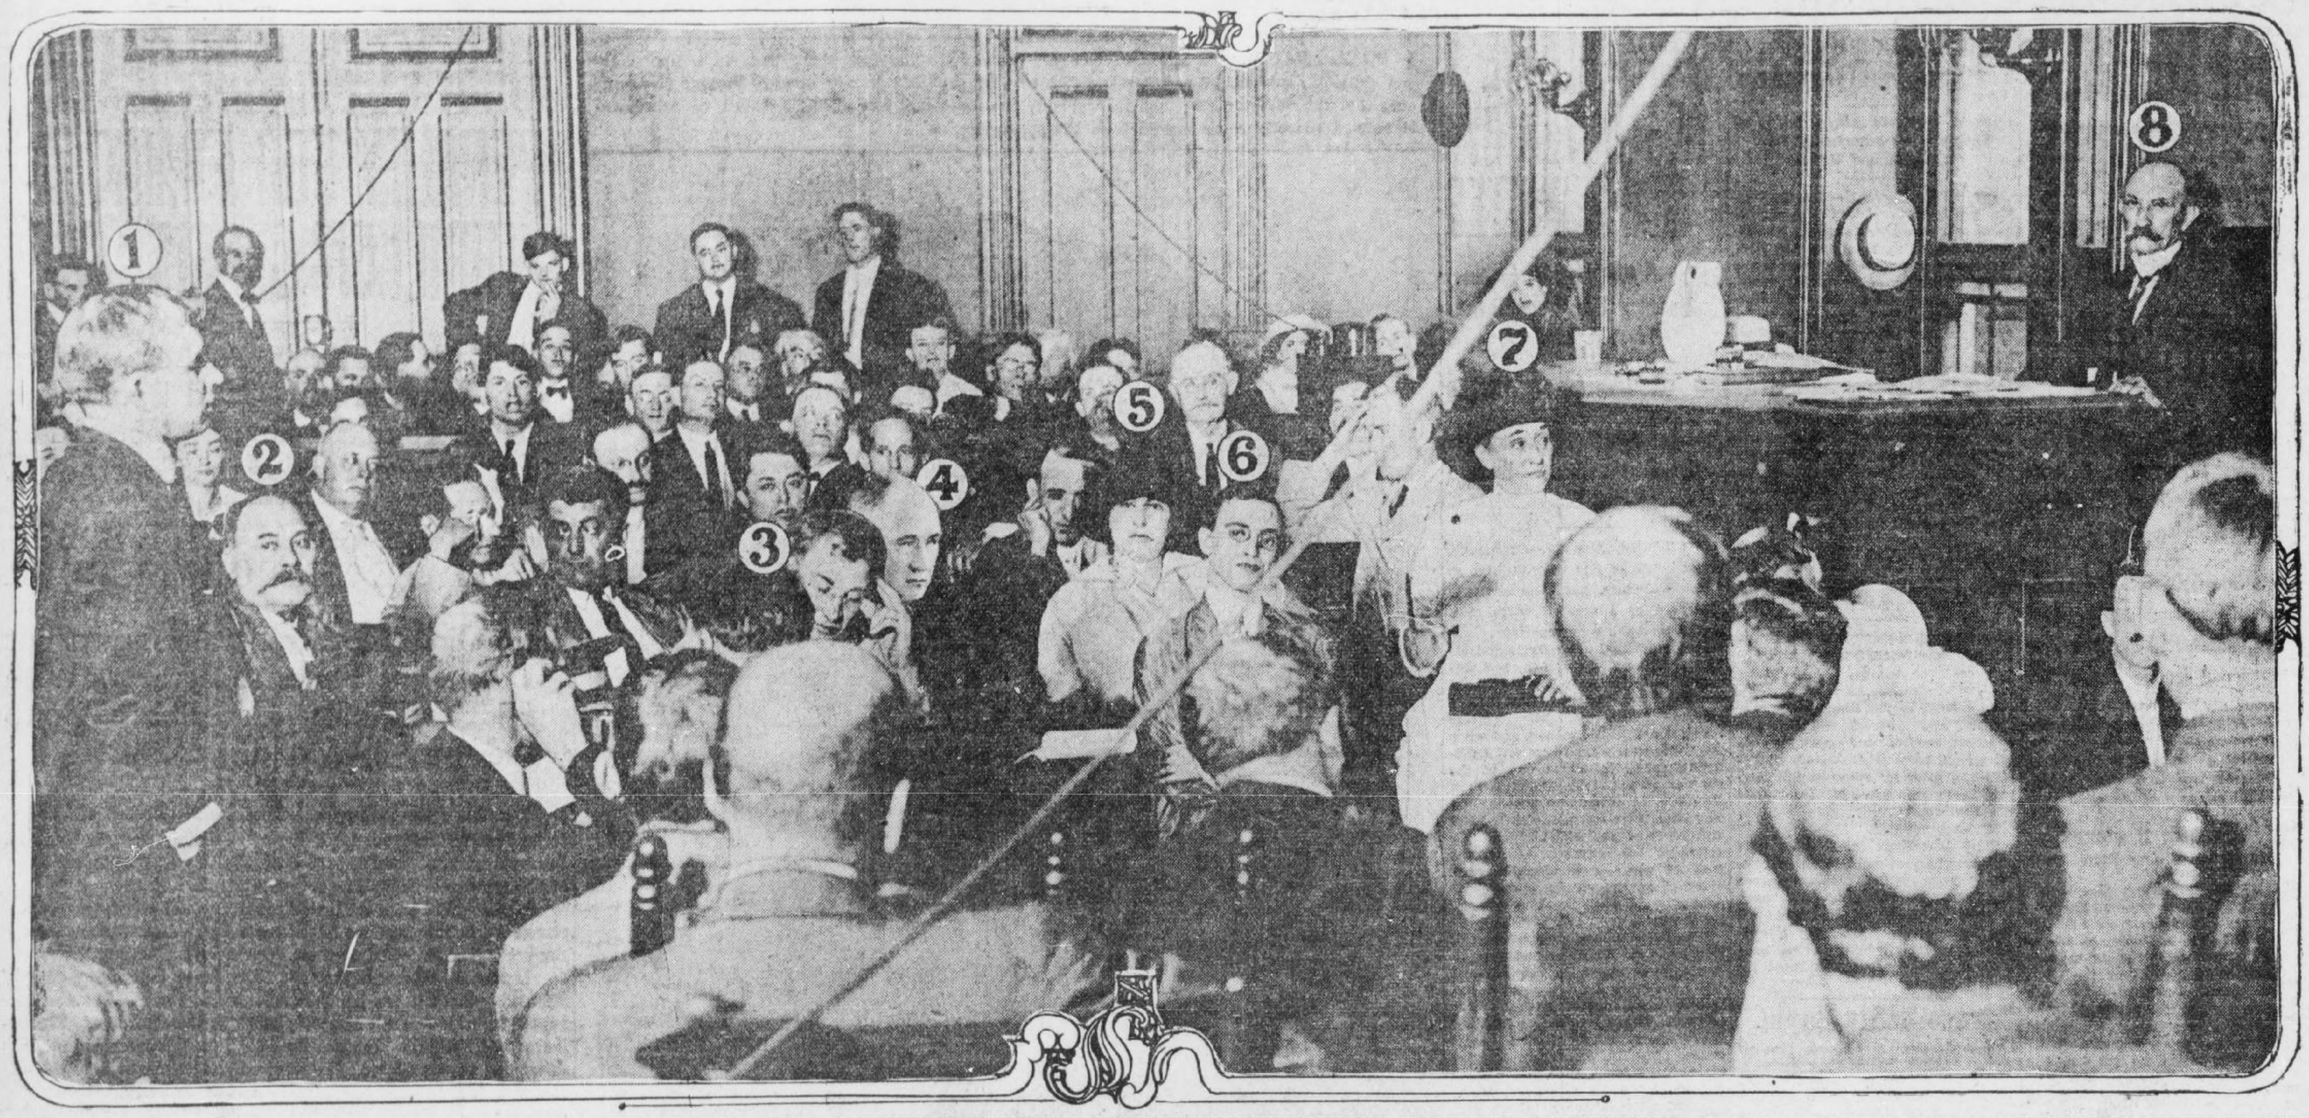
His denunciation at times was so unsparing and his words so like a physical blow that it seemed that the prisoner must quail before him. But Frank maintained his composure. In fact, during a lull in the storm of invective he occasionally would lean toward his wife or his mother and whisper a few words, accompanying them with a smile. For all that his manner betokened, he might be talking of some amusing incident that had just occured to him.

If the Solicitor's words failed to affect Frank, he was probably the only person in the courtroom who did not feel the intensity and the grim determination behind each sentence and each accusation that came from the lips of the State's representative.

So overcome at Dorsey's blunt and grewsome description of the torturous m... in which the pretty little factory girl had

DEATH PENALTY DEMANDED FOR LEO M. FRANK

A TENSE moment in the courtroom yesterday when Solicitor Dorsey was denouncing Frank in his dramatic plea to the jury. Numbered in the picture are (1) Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey, (2) Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford, (3) Attorney Reuben Arnold of counsel for the defense, (4) Luther Z. Rosser, who has had charge of the battle for Frank's life; (5) Mrs. Leo M. Frank, wife of the defendant; (6) Leo M. Frank, whose rate will soon rest with the jury; (7) Mrs. Rea Frank, his mother, and (8) Judge L. S. Roan.



DORSEY CHEERED AFTER GREAT CLOSING SPEECH

been attacked and strangled to death was Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan, that she collapsed utterly and wept. Frank's young wife was affected by the scene and she laid her head upon the shoulder of her accused husband and cried for several minutes.

The very manner in which Frank had borne himself during the long trial was used by the Solicitor against him. Such remarkable nerve and effrontery he declared he never had witnessed before in a court of justice. Dorsey thought it merely was one of the outcropping characteristics of the defendant's perverted moral and intellectual nature. He compared him to the brilliant Wilde, whose effrontery and insouciance in the midst of charges of unspeakable conduct was a mater of world-wide knowledge.

When he was interrupted by adjournment, the Solicitor was far from the end of his argument. He had taken longer than he expected. He had paused longer on certain aspects of the cast than he had intended. It seemed probable that he would require most of Monday forenoon to conclude his address.

Scoffs at Frank's Alibi.

Attacking the main points of Frank's defense, he came out boldly with the declaration that Frank's alibi was no alibi at all. He said that the whole of Frank's alibi practically hinged on the testimony of Miss Helen Curran, of No. 160 Ashby street, who had testified that she saw the young factory superintendent waiting for his car at Whitehall and Alabama streets Saturday afternoon at 1:10 o'clock.

At this point Dorsey dramatically brought forth the statement of Frank which he had made on the first day that he was detained at police headquarters.

"Listen to this," he said shaking the paper before the eyes of the jurymen. Then he quoted from Frank's statement which read:

"I didn't lock the door that morning. The mail was coming up. I locked it when I left for lunch at 1:10."

Makes Charge of Perjury.

"There goes your alibi," said the Solicitor. "It was punctured by your own statement made before you realized the importance of the time element."

Dorsey characterized as perjuries the statement of the Curran girl, that of Miss Fleming, a former stenographer; that of E. F. Holloway, day watchman, and that of Charley Lee.

He threw the suspicion of wrongdoing upon the character of the young woman, Miss Sarah Barnes, who dramatically had expressed her conviction of Frank's innocence on the stand and had declared her willingness to die in his place. The Solicitor overlooked nothing tending to point the hand of guilt toward Leo Frank.

Dorsey mentioned time and again the fact that the defense had failed to cross-examine the State's character witnesses. He said that he had dared them to do it, and that they had been afraid of the disclosures that would ensue.

Asserts Shirt Was "Plant."

He charged that the bloody shirt at Newt Lee's house, the pay envelope, the rope and the club on the first floor of the factroy were plants.

He said that Frank's statement in a letter to his unable, written the afternoon of the crime, that "nothing startling had happened," while intended to be self-serving, was in reality self-accusing.

Referring to the notes found by the girl's body, he called attention to the use of the word "did." He said that Conley always said "done," and that if "did" was used in the notes they must have been dictated by someone else.

He added that the reference in the notes to the toilet on the second floor was a strong indication that the murder had been committed there.

The Solicitor charged that Frank had been endeavoring to force his attentions upon the Phagan girl for weeks and that his advances culminated in the brutal attack of Memorial Day.

Gives His Theory of Crime.

Resisted again, Frank, in brutish fury, struck donw the girl, accomplished his purpose, and then, realizing his position, sought to escape being identified with the attack by binding a rope about the girl's neck and strangling her to death, according to the graphic words of the prosecutor.

As the hour passed noon, the Solicitor began to show signs of fatigue. His spirit was as indomitable and fiery as ever, but his features grew a bit haggard, and the weeks of tireless work on the case began to display themselves more plainly on his face.

At 1:30 he asked if there might not be a recess, as he was about exhausted. There was a side bar conference between the attorneys for both sides, and Judge Roan announced that adjournment would be taken until Monday.

It was thought likely that Dorsey would finish about noon. The judge's charge probably will occupy an hour or more, and then the case will go into the hands of the twelve jurors.

AUTOIST IS RUN OVER BY HIS OWN MACHINE

JOLIET, ILL., Aug. 23.—Because he cranked his automobile while it was in gear, Harry Lewis, a Joliet banker, was run over and badly injured. Lewis was in a hurry to take some friends to the Union station and neglected to inspect his gears, the machine would not spark the first few whirls of the crank, so he opened the throttle wider, one of the friends put on the exhilarator to help matters, and now Lewis has been two weeks in the hospital.

Policewoman Uses Her Stare as Club

Declares She Has No Trouble With Mashers After One Stern Glare.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Squelch the masher with a look. You don't need a whistle like the Boston women; hatpins do not make good weapons, and a club should be used only in a tight squeeze.

This is the opinion of two of Chicago's policewomen, both long in the business of protecting women.

"I haven't had any trouble with men on the beach this year, even those who didn't know I was a policewoman," said Officer Mary Boyd, who is in charge of the Thirty-ninth street bathing beach. "All you have to do when a man speaks to you insultingly is to look at him. He turns and runs."

Woman Toper Has Thirst Amputated

Obstruction in Her Throat Was Believed Cause of Her Longing For Alchohol.

LIMA, OHIO, Aug. 23.—Mary Calahan, 22, submitted to a surgical operation in the Chief of Police's office today, and it is hoped Mary's thirst was cut out, literally and figuratively.

Several years ago she was shot in the jaw. A splintered bone lodged against her palate, creating a continuous desire for drink. She insists the desire was for strictly alcoholic drink and that she had tried grape juice in vain. Since that time Mary and her tickling bone have given the police a ticklish time.

Chief Ernest May consulted with City Physician Steer. Between them they decided on the operation.

Offers to Serve Out Hawthorne's Term

Pastor-Classmate of Author-Convict Says it Would be 'Utmost Pleasure.'

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—The Rev. William Davis, of Everett, a member of the class of 1867 of Harvard and an evangelistic clergyman, has written his classmates, Julian Hawthorne and William James Morton, in the Federal Prison at Atlanta, offering to serve the remainder of their sentences, and states to do so would give him "the utmost pleasure."

EX-BANDIT GETS RELIGION; COLE YOUNGER CONVERTED

LEES SUMMIT, MO., Aug. 23.—Cole Younger, once a bandit, became a member of the Christian Church at a revival meeting to-night.

Dorsey's Closing Address a Scorching Attack on Frank

Hurls Charges of Perversion and Murder in Face of Defendant While Wife Bows Head and Weeps.

Probably a more stirring, denunciatory, and at the same time incisive and analytical argument, has never been heard in a Georgia court than Solicitor Dorsey's closing address in the case against Leo M. Frank. Here it is as the Solicitor delivered it:

Dorsey moved over to the railing of the jury box as he opened his speech.

"Your honor and gentlemen of the jury," he said, "I was speaking to you yesterday of the character of this defendant. This defendant has not a good character. The conduct of the counsel in this case in failing to cross-examine, in refusing to cross-examine these twenty young ladies, refutes effectively and absolutely the claim of the defendant that he has a good character.

Says Defense Had Right to Refute Charge.

"As I said, if this man had a good character, no power on earth could have kept him and his counsel from asking those young girls where they got their information and why they dsai what they did. Now that's a common sense proposition.

"You know as twelve men seeking to get at the truth that they did not ask those hair-brained fanatics, as Mr. Arnold calls them, questions about Frank's character because they were afraid, and those witnesses, as good as any the defense put up, were unimpeached and are unimpeachable. And you tell me that because the good people come here from Washington street and testify to his good character is that he has one!

"It very often happens that a man's wife is the last person to know his wrongdoing. Sometimes the man uses charitable and religious organizations to cover up and hide his evil self. Very often his guilty conscience turns him that way. Many a man is a wolf in sheep's clothing.

"Many a man is a white sepulcher on the outside and absolutely rotten within. But suppose he has a good character. David had a good character until he put Uriah in the forefront of battle that he might be killed that he could get his wife. Judas Iscariot had a good character among those Twelve Men until he accepted those 30 pieces of silver.

"I have shown you that under the law they had a right to bring out all those things. You saw they dared not do it. Let's see what the law says. I'll read here from the Eighty-third Georgia Report:

"'Whenever any persons have evidence in their possession and they fail to produce it, the strongest presumption arises that it would be hurtful if they did, and their failure to produce evidence is a circumstance against them.'

'You don't need any lawbook to tell you that. It's plain common sense.

Recalls Case of Oscar Wilde.

"Benedict Arnold was brave. He enjoyed the confidence of all the people and those in charge of the Revolutionary War until he betrayed his country. Since that day his name has been a synonym for infamy. Oscar Wilde, an Irish knight, a brilliant author, whose works will go down through time, gave us 'De Profundis,' which he wrote while in jail—a remarkable work—yet when the Marquis of Queensberry discovered that there was something wrong between Wilde and his son, Wilde had the effrontery and the boldness to sue him for damages. A suit in retaliation resulted in the conviction of Wilde for criminal practices. Yet, wherever the English language is spoken the effrontery of the testimony on cross-examination of this man—an effrontery typical of this sort (turning to Frank)—will always be a matter for deep study for lawyers and for people interested in that sort of degeneracy.

"He had a wife and two children. His shame probably never would have been brought to light but for the fact that he had the effrontery and the boldness to start a suit. It ended in his being sent to prison.

"And the prosecution of Oscar!

"He was a man who led the esthetic movement. He was a scholar and a literary man. His cross-examination was a thing to be read with pride by every lawyer. The whole world took notice of his prosecution, and yet when Oscar Wilde was an old man, gray-haired and tottering to the grave, he confessed to his guilt. Prominent? Why, he was one of the most prominent men in the world! Why, he came to America and founded the esthetic movement here. He raised the sunflower from a weed to the dignity of a flower. He was handsome—one of the handsomest men to be found. He had moral courage, yet he was a pervert, proved and confessed.

"There was a handsome man in San Francisco, a member of this defendant's sect—Abe Ruef, a man who possessed all of the faculties of highest intelligence, yet he corrupted even Smith, and his corruption of the poor girls with whom he came in contact brought him to the penitentiary. I have already referred to Durant. His character did not prevent the jury from convicting him. This defendant's character, like Durant's, is not worth a cent when the case is proved.

"And crime is alike with the rich and poor, ignorant and learned. Take an ignorant man like Jim Conley. He is the man who commits the petty crimes, but take a man with high intellect, like this defendant—this intellect, when put to the right use, leads to glorious accomplishments; but if these faculties be put to the wrong use, it brings ruin to the man in the commission of the most diabolical crimes. Look at McCue, the Mayor of Charlottesville, Va. He was a man of broad intellect and high education, but, despite his intellect, despite his splendid character, he tired of his wife and shot her, and the jury, composed of Virginia gentlemen, broad-minded and fair, despite McCue's good character, found him guilty and sent him to a felon's grave.

"Take the case of Richeson, the preacher of Boston. Here was a man of highest intellect and with a brilliant future. He was engaged to one of the wealthiest and most beautiful girls of Boston, but entanglements with a poor little girl caused him to fear for his good name and he so far forgot his good character as to put this poor little girl to death. Even after his conviction in the last days of his hope he committed an act upon himself which he thought would draw the pity of the Governor and save his life. But a Massachusetts jury and a Massachusetts Governor were courageous enough to let that man's life go. They had the courage which will make every right-thinking man right by the laws of God and man and of his country.

"Take Beattie—Henry Clay Beattie, of Richmond. He was of splendid family, of wealth and proved a good character, though he did not possess it. He took the mother of his 12-month-old baby out in an automobile and shot her. He was cool, calm and deliberate. He laughed and he joked, but he joked too much, and although the detectives were maligned and abused and a large slush fund was used, a courageous, honest Virginia jury upheld justice and sent that man to death. And he never confessed, but he left a note saying he was guilty.

Likens Frank To Dr. Crippen.

"Crippen, of England, a man of high standing and recognized ability, killed his wife because of infatuation for another woman. He hid her where he thought she would not be found, as this man (pointing to Frank) thought the body of that little girl would not be found. But murder will out, and be it said to the glory of old England this man paid the penalty of death.

"Gentlemen, you have an opportunity that comes to few men. Measure up to it. Will you do it? If not, let your conscience say why not.

"But you say you've got an alibi. Let's examine that proposition. Here's an authority: 'An alibi as a defense involves the impossibility of the prisoner's presence at the scene of the offense at the time of its commitment', and the range of evidence must be such as reasonably to exclude the possibility.'

"The burden of carrying this alibi rests on the shoulders of this defendant. They must show to you that it was impossible for this man to have been at the scene of the crime—an alibi, while the best kind of evidence if properly sustained, otherwise is absolutely worthless. I am going to show you that this man's alibi is worse than useless. It is no defense at all.

"I want to give you the definition of an old darky of an alibi. It illustrates my point. Rastus asked old Sam, 'What is this hyar alibi I hear so much about?' Old Sam says, 'An alibi is provin' that you was at the prayer meeting where you wasn't, to prove you wasn't at the crap game where you was.'

"Let's see the time table of the defense. I want to turn it around for half a minute. Then I want to turn it to the wall and let it stay forever.

"'One p. m.—Frank leaves the factory.

"'One-fifteen p. m.—Frank arrives at his home.

"'One-fifteen to one-forty-five p. m.—Frank eats lunch.

"'One-forty-five p. m.—Frank leaves his home.

"'Two p. m.—Frank arrives at the factory.'

"Now, gentlemen, I want to turn it to the wall. That statement is refuted by the defendant himself when he didn't realize the importance of this time proposition.

"Frank's statement at police headquarters, taken by G. C. Febuary on Monday, April 28, says, 'I didn't lock the door that morning. The mail was coming up. I locked it when I started home to lunch at 1:10 o'clock.'

"Up goes your alibi punctured by your own statement when you didn't realize its importance. Yet these honorable gentlemen for the purpose of impressing your minds print in big letters on this chart he left the factory at 1 o'clock. If he swore when he was on the stand the other day that he left the factory at 1 o'clock it was because he saw the importance of this time point and had to leave there ten minutes earlier than he said he had at the police station before he had had time to confer with his lawyer, Mr. Luther Z. Rosser.

"I quote: 'I left at 1:10.' Right here let me interpolate. This man never made an omission from the beginning to the end of this case. Where he knew a person was aware that he was in the factory at a certain time he admitted it. He proved, or at least attempted to prove, an alibi by the little Curran girl. They had her get up on the stand and say that she saw Frank at 1:10. Yet here is his statement made to the police April 28 in the presence of his attorney, Mr. Luther Z. Rosser, in which he said that he did not leave the factory until 1:10.

"The saddest thing in this case—I don't know who caused it, I don't know who introduced it, and I hope I will go to my grave without ever learning who brought this little Curran girl into this case—the saddest thing in this case is bringing in this little girl who is connected with Montag's and placing her upon the stand here to protect this red-handed murderer.

"Jurors are sworn, and his honor has the right under the law to charge you to consider the truthfulness or the reasonableness of that which any witness swears to. And, gentlemen of the jury, anyone who looked upon that little girl noticed her bearing upon the stand, the slightly unusual manner and her connection with Montags—consider the fact that this little girl, like the little Bauer boy, had been riding in Montag's automobile—and if you can not tell just why and how she was brought here, then I am unable to understand your mental operations.

"If Frank locked that door at 1:10, how could she have seen him at Alabama and Whitehall street at 1:10? How could she be so positive that it was him, if she really saw anyone there? For, mark you, she had never seen him but once. She comes into your presence and tells you the unreasonable and absurd story of seeing him, which is in direct contradiction to Frank's story.

"On this time proposition, I want to read you this. It made a wonderful impression on me when I read it. It's from the speech of a wonderful man. It's from a man in whose presence even lawyers of the type of Ar-

Continued on Page 4, Column 1.

You Can't Be Well When Constipated

"Keep Your Bowels Open"—Doctors Estimate 75 Per Cent of Sickness Due to Torpid Liver.

Some undigested food is left in the stomach daily, which the liver should clear away. A heavy or unusual diet, or a change in water, may cause the liver to leave a few particles to press and clog, and the next day more are left over. So this waste accumulates, clogging stomach and intestines, and causing constipation.

That is not all. If the waste is not eliminated it ferments and generates uric acid, a poison which gets into the blood and through the system.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT immediately flushes the stomach and intestinal tract and washes away every particle of waste and fermentation; it purifies the blood by dissolving what uric acid has accumulated and passing it off in the urine.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is much better than calomel; no danger of salivation, no need of an after-cleansing dose of oil. It acts quickly and mildly, never forces, gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. Take it before breakfast and in an hour you'll feel splendid.

Don't take an inferior substitute; some closely imitate the name, but none produces the same result. All druggists should have the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT, 25c. If yours can not supply you, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

P-R-I-N-T-O-R-I-A-L-S
No. 224

The advance agent of Prosperity is in our midst!

Already FALL BUSINESS is "looking up"—already there is a subtle feeling of "GOOD TIMES" in the air. Have YOU prepared to take advantage of the increased opportunities for bigger and better times? Have you given your FALL PRINTING the attention it deserves? Phone for our representative to call. No time like the present to plan your PRINTING.

BYRD
Printing Co.
46-48-50 W. Alabama, Atlanta.

Phones M. 1560-2608-2614.

HUGH DORSEY WINS HIS SPURS IN PHAGAN CASE

FOURTH WEEK OF FRANK TRIAL FINDS INTEREST OF PUBLIC STILL WHITE HOT

Popular Opinion Swayed, First When State Springs Climax With Conley's Story, Again When Defense Put the Accused Man on the Stand.

BY AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The fourth week of the Frank trial came to an end shortly after noon Saturday, with Solicitor Dorsey still far from the finish of his concluding argument in behalf of the State.

Judge Roan announced at 1:45 that he would adjourn the case over until Monday, as he has been doing heretofore, and the Solicitor will conclude his argument then.

The Solicitor had been speaking more than six hours when adjournment came, but apparently was physically able to go on if necessary.

His address, when it is finished Monday, will have been broken into three sections—one Friday afternoon, another Saturday morning, and a third Monday morning.

The Solicitor's address has been so far a wonderful piece of work.

On all sides he has been praised ungrudgingly for the fine effort he has made in behalf of the prosecution.

Atlanta will breathe a long, deep and soulful sigh of relief, however, when the last word is spoken by way of argument and the case is given into the hands of the jury for a verdict.

Leading Topic for Months.

Never before in the history of Fulton County has a criminal proceeding so challenged the unabated and undivided attention of the people.

For four months the Frank case—or the Phagan case, as it more generally is called—has been the leading topic of discussion among all classes of Georgians, rural and urban, rich and poor, high and low, informed and uninformed.

Every figure to the tragedy has been picturesque in the extreme.

Mary Phagan, a sweet young working girl, cruelly murdered; Leo Frank, a young business man of theretofore unblemished character and standing, indicted for the murder; Jim Conley, a negro, a confessed accessory after the fact of the murder, with a long criminal career attaching to him, the principal witness against Frank; Lucile Frank, the loving and devoted wife of the defendant, always at his side, with his mother, cheering and sustaining him; Reuben Arnold and Luther Rosser, two of the leading and most noted lawyers in the South, defending the accused; Frank Hooper and Hugh Dorsey, the former an attorney of established reputation, the latter a brilliant young lawyer lately named prosecuting attorney of the Atlanta Circuit; a presiding judge who has tried many of the most famous cases in the State—these make up the dramatis personae of the Frank case.

Case Fought Stubbornly.

Never before in Fulton County, if, indeed, within the State, has a case been so stubbornly and so bitterly fought as the Frank case.

It required more than three weeks to get the evidence all in. Every inch of ground was contested vigorously and to a finish.

It is estimated that the defense interposed more than 100 objections of one sort and another, as the case progressed, thus fortifying itself as abundantly as possible for an appeal, in the event of conviction.

The only party to the crime, as witness or otherwise, who has not been attacked vehemently one way or the other is the little dead girl, Mary Phagan!

All sides have agreed that, whatever else might or might not be true, the murdered child was blameless—a pathetic and unoffending victim of a brutal homicide.

Frank, the defendant, has been painted by the defense as a bright young business man, perfect in deportment at all times, a loving husband and a dutiful son, irreproachable in character, incapable of criminal deeds and thoughts, persecuted and assailed maliciously by hostile officials seeking reward both by way of fame and material gain!

By the State Frank has been painted as black as the darkest depths of Hades itself, an unfaithful husband, a vicious son, a lustful monster, particularly after young girls; a pervert, a leader of two lives, a designing and crafty monster—an inhuman murderer!

Conley Blamed and Praised.

Conley has been held up both as a witness worthy of all belief and as a witness worthy of no belief whatever—as a negro reluctant to tell the truth originally because of his disinclination to involve Frank, his erstwhile kind and profitable master, but rushing candidly and sincerely to recite the truth eventually, nevertheless, and, on the other hand, as a negro lying from start to finish for no other purpose than to save his own neck from the noose by slipping it over the head of the oppressed Frank.

Lucile Frank, the wife, has been cited both as the faithful and loving wife there at the husband's side in the courtroom and as the shrinking, suspicious wife, early indisposed even to visit Frank in his cell at the jail.

Rosser and Arnold have painted Hooper and Dorsey as direct agents of a wicked and malicious "frame-up against the life, liberty and most sacred honor of Leo Frank, deliberately and designedly seeking to hang the defendant to gratify a misguided enthusiasm and official zeal, if nothing worse; and Dorsey and Hooper have been unsparing in their criticisms of Rosser and Arnold, the paid attorneys of the defense.

An imposing array of witnesses have declared Frank's character both good and bad, while two other arrays of witnesses have sought both to uphold and to break down his alibis.

Medical experts, of repute and fame, have been set up one by one, only to be designated "fakes" and "quacks" by the other side, and vice versa.

Second Charge in Case.

Besides the original charge of murder there was injected into the case, in its early stages, an unspeakable charge of degeneracy.

First this charge went in with the defense's knowledge and consent, and then the defense moved to rule it out. It wasn't ruled out, and the defense then seized upon it and undertook to make a boomerang upon the State.

The State thereupon sought to enlarge upon it, and the State was stopped from doing that.

Three or four days was used up in attempting to show whether boiled cabbage could reach such and such a state of digestion in such and such a time, and after a long wrangle as to that, the defense and the State found that they were not particularly disagreed about the matter, anyway as it fit both theories like a glove to show that Mary Phagan died within an hour after eating the cabbage.

The defense has contended that Jim Conley and not Leo Frank murdered Mary Phagan, and the State has contended quite as earnestly that Frank did it, and Conley was connected with it only after the exact fashion he swore to.

Looking backward over the trial from the present day point of view, one may see much that appears grimly humorous in the proceedings—and yet there has been nothing bordering ever so slightly upon the humorous, really. On the contrary, the trial has been tragedy piled uncompromisingly upon tragedy, from beginning to end!

Public Swayed Both Ways.

Into all the other complex, puzzling, elusive and sinister details of the mysterious Frank case, a large measure of prejudice was injected as it swept along.

The public has been swung first this way and then that, rushed to one conclusion, only to be rushed as madly, after a bit, to another, until, up one side and down the other, the public breathed, as aforesaid, a large and deep sigh of relief when at last the jury got the matter into its keeping, to unravel it as best it might and to speak the truth of it as nearly and as exactly as human ingenuity and the forms of law can approximate the same.

The State has fought doggedly to one theory: That Leo Frank, shortly after noon on Saturday, April 26, lured little Mary Phagan, for unspeakably immoral purpose, to the rear of the second floor of the National Pencil Factory in Forsyth street, after having paid her her weekly pittance, and there, when she refused to yield to his lustful purpose, he killed her, first by knocking her down and subsequently strangling her.

That after this horribly tragic culmination of a perhaps non-murderous original intent, Frank sought the help of a negro, Conley, with whom he had had previous very questionable relations, to hide the body, and that Conley, already deep in the mire with Frank, consented, and as a matter of fact, did hide the body of the dead girl in the basement of the factory, where subsequently he expected to burn it.

Charges Notes Were Framed.

That after this, Frank and his accomplice returned to the second floor, whereon Frank's office is located, and prepared some illiterate notes, which were placed beside the dead body for the purpose of diverting suspicion both from Frank and the negro.

That the defendant then gave the negro some money for his work, and promised him more eventually.

That Frank's actions following the murder were suspicious enough to prompt his retention at police headquarters.

That his general character is bad enough to warrant the presumption that he had lustful intentions toward Mary Phagan, as evidenced by his relations with other women and girls.

That his professed alibis are inconsequential and misleading, and not sustained by facts.

Finally, that Conley's seemingly contradictory attitude is accounted for in two directions, first by his desire to save both himself and Frank, and second by his desire to protect himself against a great measure of responsibility for the tragedy than rightfully belonged to him, when it became evident to him that Frank was preparing to let him suffer just so much measure of responsibility, even to the murder itself, as might be fixed if he did speak.

What Defense Has Claimed.

The defense has fought doggedly to this one theory: That Leo Frank scarcely knew Mary Phagan at all, and that the only time he saw her on Saturday, April 26, was when she came to his office to get her pay; that he never lured her to the rear of the second floor, or anywhere else, for any purpose whatever, and that he never saw her alive after the brief moment she stood in his office on Saturday.

That after she left his presence, happy and unharmed, she passed on downstairs, and encountered Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, whom Frank did not even know was in the building, and who was not supposed to be in the building at that time.

That Conley, then only partially recovered from a drunken debauch of the morning, saw her little mesh bag in her hand, and, being "broke" and wanting more whisky, he seized the girl, snatched her mesh bag, after knocking her down, threw her into the cellar below through the nearby open elevator shaft, whence later he dragged her to the trash pile in the rear of the building, tied the strangling rope about her neck, either to complete his dastardly work or to create a false suspicion as to the direct cause of her death.

That he then pulled the staple from the back door of the basement and thus made his escape finally from the building.

That all of Conley's story as to how he helped dispose of the body is a fabrication and a monstrous lie, framed for the purpose of shielding himself and placing the blame upon Frank.

That his story was dragged from him, bit by bit, beginning with the falsehood that he could not write, and that it was revised four times, always under oath, before its amazing and incompatible contradictions could be fixed up to stick with any degree of plausibility, and that he was helped in every one of these revisions by all too willing police officers, detectives and court officials bent upon finding in Frank a victim for Mary Phagan's murder.

Claim Negro Wrote Notes.

That the negro himself, of his own motion, wrote the notes he later confessed to having written, hoping thereby to divert suspicion from himself.

That Conley only began his series of contradictory "confessions" after he found that Frank was under suspicion, and thereby realized his (Conley's) opportunity to fasten more firmly upon Frank that suspicion, to Conley's own great benefit.

That Frank's general character is good, in contradistinction to Conley's admitted bad character.

That Frank has set up two unassailable alibis, and could not, therefore, have committed the crime charged.

That his nervousness the day following the murder was occasioned by the manner in which the fact of the murder was communicated to him, and not because of guilt.

That the long and delicate clerical work he did on the afternoon following the murder is proof that he could not then have been agitated by guilt or by any other sinister knowledge.

That Frank, as a matter of fact, knows nothing whatever of the cause of Mary Phagan's death, and is utterly and entirely guiltless of any participation therein.

Two intensely dramatic events marked the progress of the trial—and about them the entire case has revolved constantly.

Conley's remarkable story, containing the unspeakable charge of perversion, wealthy in detail and full of thrill, was the State's big point.

Frank's wonderfully clear, dispassionate and well-sustained statement from the witness stand was the defendant's big point.

These two contrary things have been pitted the one against the other, and upon which the jury finally would accept as the truth the case always has seemed to turn for final adjustment.

Attack Centers on Negro.

Every effort of the defense has been to break down Conley—including two days' unmerciful grilling by Mr. Rosser—and every effort of the State has been toward upholding him.

Every effort of the defense, therefore, has been also directed toward holding up Frank's statement, just as every effort of the State has been directed toward breaking it down.

It ever was Frank vs. Conley—the life of the one or the other as the law's satisfaction for the murder of Mary Phagan!

Regardless of all things else, the public is unstinting in its praise and approval of the brilliant young Solicitor General of the Atlanta Circuit, Hugh Dorsey, for the superb manner in which he has handled the State's side of the case.

It all along has been freely admitted that those two veterans of criminal practice, Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, would take ample care of the defendant.

Two more experienced, able and aggressive attorneys it would be impossible to secure in any cause.

When it was first learned that Rosser and Arnold were to defend Frank, the public realized that the defendant had determined to take no chances. He selected from among the cream of the Georgia bar.

That the State's interests, quite as sacred as the defendant's, would be looked after so jealously, so adroitly, and so shrewdly in the hands of the youthful Dorsey, however—that was a matter not so immediately settled!

Dorsey an Unknown Quantity.

Dorsey was known as a "bright young chap," not widely experienced, willing and aggressive enough, but—

He had been but lately named Solicitor General, and he hadn't been tried out exhaustively.

Maybe he could measure up to the standard of Rosser and Arnold, but it was a long way to measure up, nevertheless!

It soon became evident that Dorsey was not to be safely underrated. He could not be sneered down, laughed down, ridiculed down, or smashed down.

He took a lot of lofty gibing, and was called "bud" and "son" right along—but every time they pushed him down, he arose again, and generally stronger than ever!

Time and again he outgeneraled his more experienced opponents.

He forced them to make Frank's character an issue, despite themselves.

He got in vital and far-reaching evidence, over protest long and loud.

Whenever the Solicitor was called upon for an authority, he was right there with the goods. They never once caught him napping. He had prepared himself for the Frank case, in every phase of it.

The case had not progressed very far before the defense discovered unmistakably that it had in Dorsey a foreman worthy of its most trustworthy and best-tempered steel!

And the young Solicitor climaxed his long sustained effort with a masterful speech, that will long be remembered in Fulton County!

In places he literally tore to pieces the efforts of the defense. He overlooked no detail—at times he was crushing in his reply to the arguments of Rosser and Arnold, and never was he commonplace!

Fixed His Fame by Work.

Whatever the verdict, when Hugh Dorsey sat down, the Solicitor General had fixed his fame and reputation as an able and altogether capable prosecuting attorney—and never again will that reputation be challenged lightly, perhaps!

Much credit for hard work and intelligent effort will be accorded Frank Hooper, too, for the part he played in the Frank trial. He was at all times the repressed and painstaking first lieutenant of the Solicitor, and his work, while not so spectacular, formed a very vital part of the whole case made out and argued by the State. He was for fourteen years the Solicitor General of one of the most important South Georgia circuits, and his advice and suggestions to Dorsey were invaluable.

A noteworthy fact in connection with the Frank trial is that it generally is accepted as having been as fair and square as human forethought and effort could make it.

It may be true that a good deal of the irrelevant and not particularly pertinent crept into it, but one side has been to blame for that quite as much as the other side.

Ruling Cut Both Ways.

The judge's rulings have cut impartially both ways—sometimes favorable to the State, but quite as frequently in favor of the defense.

Even the one big charge of degeneracy, which many people hold had no proper place in the present trial, went in without protest from the defense, and cross-examination upon it even was indulged in.

Unlimited time was given both the State and the defense to make out their cases; expense was not considered. The trial has lasted longer than any other in the criminal history of Georgia. Nothing was done or left undone that could give either side the right to complain of unfairness after the conclusion of the hearing.

It is difficult to conceive how human minds and hman efforts could provide more for fair play than was provided in the Frank case.

MRS. LEO M. FRANK plainly showing the strain as Solicitor Dorsey arraigned her husband. Below is Mrs. Rea Frank, the defendant's mother, who also betrayed her agitation.

English Housewives Plan Bacon Boycott

Hope to Force Down Price by Abstaining From Buying for Fortnight.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The "English breakfast" is threatened with dire disaster. London housewives are preparing to boycott the toothsome "rasher" because of the continued high prices ruling for bacon.

They plan to refuse to buy bacon for a fortnight, beginning to-day. Enormous quantities are likley to remain in the hands of the wholesalers and prices are expected to come down with a rush.

Optimists predict a drop in price of at least 6 cents a pound.

Cost of Living Up in Britain 14 Per Cent

Prices of Foodstuffs Except Tea and Sugar Have Risen at Remarkable Rate.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Striking figures showing the increased cost of living are contained in a voluminous report issued by the British Board of Trade, according to which present prices are the highest in twenty-five years.

Retail prices of food have risen 14 per cent since 1900, while wages have increased only 3 per cent.

Prices of almost all foodstuffs, except tea and sugar, have risen, the greatest increases being in bacon, 22 per cent, and potatoes, 46 per cent.

People have been able to meet the advances only by reducing consumption.

CASTLE TO BE HOME OF TRAMPS OF GERMANY

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—Here is perhaps a bit of news which will be of interest to some of America's "Wandering Willies." A ruined castle at Merlenhausen, Saxony, is about to be restored by the local authorities, who will use it as a free rest house and night shelter for tramps from all parts of Germany.

Mail-Wooed Bride On Journey to Coast

Millionaire Ranchman Is Given Fine Recommendation by Pastors of His Neighbor.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Theresa Patterson, a handsome widow, aged 30, of Allentown, Pa., is nearing Los Molinas to-day, a journey of 3,000 miles across the continent, to become the bride of Charles H. Smart, a wealthy rancher, after a romantic courtship by mail.

Clergymen in Los Molinas and Allentown gave each a clean bill, the former stating that while Smart is not a millionaire, he is worth nearly that sum and would make a home happy for any woman of his choice.

The marriage is to take place immediately upon Mrs. Patterson's arrival.

5-Cent Fraud in Ice; 5 Days on Rockpile

Portland Dealer Is Sentenced for Cheating Customer in 25-Cent Transaction.

PORTLAND, OREG., Aug. 23.—Five days at the rockpile for a 5-cent fraud in the sale of a piece of ice was the sentence imposed by Municipal Judge Stevenson upon Thomas Barnes, proprietor of the National Ice and Coal Company.

Barnes delivered a 40-pound piece of ice worth 20 cents, saying it weighed 50 pounds and charging 25 cents.

RUSS SERFS JOLLY, BUT LAZY, SAYS VASSAR GIRL

Special Cable to The American.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 23.—Miss Texter, a graduate of Vassar College, who has been making a tour of Saratoff and Simbirsk, typical agricultural provinces of Russia, to study the land question, has been telling the Russian newspapers the peasants impress her most by their good temper and dislike for work.

For summer complaints

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is best. It will keep your stomach and bowels in fine condition to do all the work called for, thus avoiding or relieving cramps, dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, malaria and stomach troubles.

The genuine Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY, by druggists, grocers and dealers. Should our friends for any reason be unable to secure it in their locality, we will have it shipped to them from their nearest dealer, express prepaid (cash to accompany order) at the following prices:—

4 Large Bottles, $4.30.
6 Large Bottles, $5.90.
12 Large Bottles, $11.00.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey should be in every home and we make the above announcement so that you may become familiar with a source of supply.

Remit by express order, postoffice order, or certified check to

The Duffy Malt Whiskey Company,
98 White St., Rochester, N. Y.

I Cannot Possibly

Impress upon your minds (through the newspapers) the importance of calling to see me when your teeth need attention. Give me a trial and learn for yourself how fair and honest I treat you—how my methods are ABSOLUTELY PAINLESS, and my prices MUCH LOWER than any other Dentist in Atlanta. I can assure you that it will be a pleasure to you to recommend me to your friends after you have once tried me. I employ no students. Each doctor has had from 5 to 18 years' experience and is thoroughly versed in my painless methods.

MY WORK IS GUARANTEED FOR 15 YEARS

They Must Fit $5 A Set

Terms: WELL, DON'T WORRY. THESE ARE ARRANGED TO SUIT.

Best Service for Least Money

They Never Slip or Drop.

SETS OF TEETH	$5.00 UP
GOLD FILLINGS	75c UP
SILVER FILLINGS	50c UP
BRIDGEWORK	$3, $4, $5
GOLD CROWNS	a TOOTH

DR. WHITLAW, Painless Dentist

Largest and Most Thoroughly Equipped Sanitary Office In the South. Phone M. 1298.

73½ WHITEHALL ST.

SOLICITOR'S CLOSING ARGUMENT A MASTERPIECE

DENOUNCES DEFENDANT AS MORAL PERVERT AND LAUGHS ALIBI TO SCORN

Prisoner Likened to Oscar Wilde, Pastor Richeson and Beattie---Charged With Committing Murder to Hide Evidence of His Crime Against Girl.

Continued From Page 2.

nold and Rosser would take off their hats.

"I refer to Daniel Webster and his argument in the Knott case. 'Time is identical, days, hours, are not visible to any of senses except to the schooled. He who speaks of days, hours and minutes talks at random.' It is better than I could express it. What about this time? In this table here, minutes are moved up and down, contorted and twisted to protect this man. They say he arrived at the factory at 8:25. Frank himself in his first statement said he arrived at 8:30, and poor Jim Conley, lousy, filthy and dirty, said he arrived at 8:30, carrying a raincoat, and they tried to make it appear he didn't have one. If the truth is ever known, he tried to borrow that raincoat of Ursenbach's to create the same impression.

"Mattie Smith at 9:20 (quoting from the table), and Frank and Mattie Smith both say 9:30. He called Schiff at 10 o'clock (reading again), and yet this man with all his mathematical precision and accuracy at figures, said he was at Montag's at 10 o'clock. They say he arrived back at 11 o'clock, but in his first statement he said it was 11:05. At 12:12 they say Mary Phagan arrived at the factory.

"Oh my, they have to do it. Like the rabbit in Uncle Remus, they're 'just 'bleeged to do it.' Move the minutes up or back, for God's sake, or we are lost!

"But to crown it all! In the table which is now turned to the wall you have Lemmie Quinn arriving not on the minute, but, to suit your purpose, at from 12:20 to 12:22. That evidence conflicts with the statements of Miss Freeman and the other young woman, who put him there before 12 o'clock."

Arnold—Your honor, I must interrupt. No such evidence was ever brought out. Those young women testified that they left the factory at 11:45 and that they saw Lemmie Quinn at the Busy Bee Cafe considerably after. Mr. Dorsey says they saw him at the factory before 12 o'clock.

Dorsey—No, your honor, I didn't say any such thing. They didn't see him there, and I don't think anyone else did.

The crowd laughed.

Arnold—Your honor, have we got to take this whole crowd into this case?

Judge Roan—Gentlemen, there must be order or I will clear the courtroom.

Dorsey—Find the records. They will show I am right. I have got Lemmie Quinn's affidavit. I am just arguing this case on the evidence.

"Jim Conley is a liar, is he? He said Quinn was there and that he was there before Mary Phagan came. Frank had a mighty hard time remembering whether Quinn was there. When Quinn saw him at the police station and said he had been there, Frank said he would have to see his lawyers before deciding whether or not to make it public.

"Is Jim Conley telling the truth or telling a lie? You can't go hot and cold on him. Why was it Frank wanted to consult his lawyers?"

Arnold—I can find the record.

Dorsey—Yes, you can find it. You can find where Quinn swore half a dozen ways. He was the most anxious witness I ever saw on a stand, except for old man Holloway. He would tell that he was there if Frank said tell it. He would keep quiet if Frank said no.

"Oh, gentlemen, let me read you what a great lawyer said on this sort of evidence. I read the words of Judge Lochrane:

"'I do not take the mere words of witnesses. I take their acts.'

"And while I am on this subject I want to read you another opinion:

"'Evidence given by a witness has inherent strength which a jury can not disregard. But a statement has none.'"

Arnold: "Now, your honor, I have found the records and it bears out just what I said."

Arnold read from the testimony of Miss Corinthia Hall that she and Mrs. Freeman went to the pencil factory at 11:35 and left there at 11:45.

Arnold: "Mr. Dorsey asked her the question, 'You saw Lemmie Quinn at 5 minutes to 12 o'clock?' Answer: 'I don't remember what time it was. He told us he had been up to the factory and saw Frank. He said he was going to the matinee.'

"Lemmie Quinn swore several times he was at the factory at 12:20," Arnold continued, "and here it is that he said that he was in a pool parlor at 12:30, just after leaving the factory."

Judge Roan: "Mr. Dorsey, have you anything in contradiction to that?"

Dorsey: "Yes. I have plenty; that doesn't scare anybody."

Arnold: "I just want to call attention to the glaring errors. The little ones I don't care anything about. I won't interrupt him except on glaring misstatements. Life is too short."

Dorsey: "Yes, you will. You will interrupt me every time I am incorrect. You are too shrewd, too anxious to let anything go by. Don't tell this jury you are going to let me say things that are incorrect.

"Here is your table turned to the wall, having the time of Lemmie Quinn's arrival at 12:20. I have an affidavit here of this pet foreman of the metal department. He said he got there at from 12 to 12:20. Those girls went out of the factory at 11:45 o'clock. They walked up a block and down a block to the Busy Bee Cafe. There they saw Quinn.

"In the name of goodness, if Frank, according to his own statement, could leave the factory at 1:10 o'clock and get home at 1:20, couldn't these girls walk up a block and down a block and see Quinn in fifteen minutes?

"I know it hurts, but this table here which puts Lemmie Quinn at the factory from 12:20 to 12:22 is a fraud on its face. There is no greater farce in this case than their straining at this particular point, with the exception of Billy Owens' pantomime. And, oh, what a farce that was!

"Gentlemen of the jury, you need not try to consider their attempts to be accurate about the time Quinn says he was there, for Lemmie says himself he could not be positive. He says he thinks he got there some time between 12:20 and 12:30.

Mentions Girl Who Would Die for Frank.

"Ah, gentlemen of the jury, whenever a man gets to swearing too definite and too specifically about time, then the words of our friend Webster, which I quoted to you, are right—'He is not to be relied upon.'

"And can you truly consider the words of a man whom your reason tells you is straining to set the exact time?

"But let's pass on from this. I will not take the time to read you everything that Lemmie says he did. Let's pass on to the perjury charge which Arnold has so flippantly made. You saw these witnesses upon the stand. You heard their words. You noticed their manner, their attitude and their interest.

"Why, one of these ladies from the factory wanted to die for this man Frank."

A titter of laughter ran around the room, and deputies were forced to rap for order.

"When did you ever know of an employee being so enamoured of her employer that she was willing to die for him, if their friendship was purely platonic? I know enough about human nature—I know enough of the passions which surge in the breast of mortal man—to know that this poor woman's anxiety to put her neck into the noose to save him were born of something besides platonic love.

"When you see a woman so passionately devoted to her employer—so anxious to die for him—you may know and you can gamble on it that there is something stronger there than platonic love. It must be a passion born of something beyond the relation which should exist between a married man—an employer—and his woman employee.

"Ah, gentlemen of the jury, we could have got witness after witness who would have gone upon the stand and sworn things about this man. There were people who would have perjured themselves. There were witnesses who came upon the stand for the defendant who on the face of their testimony perjured themselves.

"Take this little Bauer boy. Remember his testimony before he took that automobile ride with Montag to the office of Arnold & Arnold. Before dinner he could remember each detail, but after dinner, after he had taken that ride with old Sig Montag, he had a lapse of memory. Old man Sig must have told this little boy about the Hard 'hell preacher down in South Georgia who had his congregation pray for rain. They prayed and prayed, and after a while, like old Sam Jones would have said, the Lord sent a trash mover, a gully washer.

Boy Must Have Overdone It."

"It rained and it rained until they had more water than they knew what to do with. Then the old hardshell preacher said: 'Brethren, it looks like we have a leetle overdone it.' So Montag must have whispered into Bauer's ear, 'You have a leetle overdone it.'

"And, after dinner, this little boy didn't know anything. But was that all? Why, gentlemen of the jury, before dinner that boy even remembered where his watch lay.

"Do you believe that? Talk about perjury! Willful foolishness, because an honest jury knows that it was not true. They brought in that machinist Lee. He was willing to swear to anything and there was not a man in the sound of his voice that didn't know he was telling an untruth. He wrote and signed a statement about Duffy's injuries. I brought it here and it was written in typewriting and didn't even have his name on it.

"They thought we could not find Duffy and thought you didn't have sense enough to know the first thing you do in a case like that is to wrap something around it to stop the loss of blood.

"I have never seen a case yet where women were so suborned as in this. Take this woman Fleming, his stenographer. They put her up and she swore Frank had a general good character. She only swore to what he had done in her presence when they cross-examined her. We don't contend Frank tried to seduce every girl in the factorwy. But he did pick them out. He picked out Mary Phagan and was called.

"Gentlemen, he got the wrong girl and he was called. And this stenographer said she only knew what he did to her. She testified that Frank's business Saturday morning was to make out the financial sheet. Mr. Arnold said immediately he didn't have time and she jumped at it like a duck at a June bug. Mr. Arnold was so nervous he would not let me finish the cross-examination, and interpolated that remark to guide her.

"It was unfair and not according to law and practice. But he got away with it. And then she turned right around and in the next breath said that she had never said Frank was working on the financial sheet Saturday morning.

"Oh, gentlemen, can you let a poor little girl go to her death and set her murderer free on such evidence as this? If you do, it is time to stop going through the process of summoning a jury.

"Perjury! When did old man Starnes and Pat Campbell stoop to that. And suspicions! Why didn't we get old man Lee and Gantt instead of Frank? Why didn't we get Conley? We tried it, but there was absolutely no case against either. But there is a perfect case against this man. But, oh, you cried 'Perjury.' But it is not worth fifteen cents until you put your fingers on something specific.

"And here, gentlemen, right before your very eyes, in black and white, the testimony ofthis woman, Fleming, shows that they perjured her.

"Do you tell me when that factory closes on Saturday afternoons that this man with the handsome wife that he possesses, this college graduate, who likes to read and play cards, who likes to see baseball games, would spend his time there, using the data that Schiff prepared on Saturday afternoons when he could do it Saturday morning? No, sir. Miss Fleming was right. She didn't stay there to work often on Saturday afternoons."

The jury was allowed to retire for a few minutes. When they returned, Dorsey resumed his argument.

"Now, gentlemen, I submit that this man made that inance sheet Saturday morning. I am not going to fatigue you with my reasons. It is unnecessary. If he did make that sheet on Saturday afternoon, he did it thinking of an alibi. But don't tell me that because he might have done this on Saturday afternoon with a penmanship that showed no nervousness proves an alibi.

"If he could go home into the bosom of his family after such an atrocious crime, he could have made that sheet. But he wouldn't have done it if Schiff had not gotten up the data. He had done it fifty-two times a year for five or six years. If he would do additional work on that Saturday afternoon, it could only have been with a sinister purpose.

Witness Afraid Even to Identify Handwriting.

"In speaking of perjury, his mother said anybody ought to identify his handwriting."

Dorsey held up the photograph of the sample of handwriting Frank wrote for the police.

"Yet the man they put up to identify his handwriting was so afraid he might do Frank an injury that he wouldn't venture a guess. Grant that he did go home to his wife and those old people—his parents-in-law—and maintain a stoical countenance. Grant that he did make that sheet, which he could make up with his eyes shut. Grant that he did unlock the safe, a thing that he had done every day for years.

"But when he went to run the elevator; when he went to nail up that back door; he wavered; he paled when he talked to the police, and trembled on Darley's knee as he rode to the police station.

"He could sit in the hall and read a joke about a baseball umpire, but the frivolity annoyed the visitors at his home. It was the same kind of frivolity Henry Clay Beattie displayed when he stood beside the automobile that was stained with the blood of his wife. His joke was uttered only in annoyance; it jarred.

"But whether or not he made up that financial sheet, while waiting for old Jim to come and burn the body, one thing I grant he did. Don't forget the envelope; don't forget the way the letter was quoted, that letter he wrote to his uncle in Brooklyn, that letter that begins, 'I trust that this finds you and dear Tante well.' He had no wealthy relations in Brooklyn! That old millionaire uncle was mighty near there when Frank told old Jim Conley: 'Why should I hand? I have wealthy relatives in Brooklyn!'

Dorsey finished reading the letter and then said:

"Here is a sentence pregnant with significance. It bears the earmarks of a guilty conscience. He wasn't trembling when he wrote. He is capable and smart, but here is a sentence that is a revelation. Here is a document I concede was written after little Mary Phagan, who died for virtue's sake, was lying mutilated in that dark cold basement."

At this juncture Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan, began to cry.

Dorsey read from the letter:

"'It is too short a time since you left for anything startling to have developed down here.'

"'Startling' and 'too short a time.' Those are the words that incriminate. That little sentence itself shows that the crime was committed in an incredibly short time.

"Tell me, honest men, courageous men of Georgia, that this phrase penned to his uncle that afternoon did not come from a stricken conscience. 'Too short a time since you left for anything to develop down here.'

"What do you think of that, honest men? Then notice what he writes about the thin, gray line of veterans facing the chilly weather, as if that old millionaire uncle of his traveling around Germany for his health, as if he cared for these old heroes in gray! Ample and reliable authority says that over-expression is an indication of guilt. Tell me that this old man, who was just preparing to sail for Europe, cared for these old heroes in gray—this wealthy old man who wanted to see the financial sheet. 'Too short a time'—yes, he said it was too short a time for anything to develop down here. But, gentlemen of the jury, there was something startling to develop, and it happened within the space of 30 minutes. There is nothing new in the factory to report, but there was something new in the cellar. There was something to report, and the time wasn't too short for it to happen.

"You tell me that letter was written in the morning? Do you believe it? Why, they haven't even tried to say that. I tell you that that letter shows on its face that something startling had happened, and I tell you that that rich uncle did not care the snap of his finger about the thin, gray line of veterans.

"Ah, yes, he had wealthy relatives in Brooklyn. That's what old Jim Conley said he told him. And his people lived in Brooklyn, and old Jim never would have known that if Frank had not told him. And they had at least $20,000 in cool cash in the bank; and he had a brother-in-law employing two or three people, at least, and we don't know how many more. And if his rich uncle was not in Brooklyn, he was near there.

"All right, let's go a step farther. On April 28 he wired Adolph Montag at the Imperial Hotel in New York: 'You may have read in Atlanta papers of factory girl found dead Sunday morning in cellar of pencil factory.'

"Yes, gentlemen of the jury, in the cellar of the pencil factory. There's where he placed her, and that is where he expected her to be found. And the thought of it welled up in his mind that Monday morning, April 28, before he had been arrested, and he wired Montag forestalling what he knew would certainly and surely happen unless the Atlanta detectives were corrupt and would suppress it.

Compliments Detectives.

"But, be it said to your credit, Starnes; to your credit, Campbell, and you, too, Rosser and Black, that you had the manhood and the courage to do your duty and roll the charge up to this man, protected as he was by wealth and influence.

"And notice what else he said in this telegram. Notice the credit he gives to the police: 'The police will eventually solve it.' And be it said to thec redit of the Atlanta police department, they did solve it. 'Assure my uncle I am all right in case he asks. Our company has case well in hand.' Maybe he did think when he got that fellow Scott that his company had it well in hand.

"I tell you there is an honest man—this fellow Scott. If there was a slush fund in this case—and witnesses have said there was no such fund—this man Scott could have gotten it. Not at first, maybe, but he could have gotten it later on. But Scott knew his duty, and he has done it. No wonder Frank could telegraph that his company had the case well in hand, for Scott's first words could not have suited him better had he wished for them. They were, 'The Pinkerton's always work arm and arm with the police.' This suited Frank well. It was just what he wanted. He wanted to know what the police thought he wanted to know what they were going to do, and this worked well, until the chain began to tighten.

"And Haas—and he is nobody's fool—when he sa wthe trend of the case, he opened the negotiations; he gave Scott the opportunity by saying, 'Now let us have what you get first.'

"But let us pass on from that. You tell me that letter and that telegram are not significant? That the work on this financial sheet is no significant? That Schiff's testimony as to the work on that financial sheet is not significant?

"Frank himself was not satisfied. He is as smart as his lawyers, too.

"He realized that he would have to go out and beyond the evidence, because he knew it was all bunk; and he tried to show you that he did write the financial sheet. Frank did write that letter Saturday afternoon, and he did write that telegram Monday; but he did not do any work on the financial sheet after Saturday at noon. I ask you twelve men if those documents and letters don't bear the impress of murder?

"And they still cry perjury. I just thought of another case, when that man could not identify Frank's handwriting that his own mother said was his. That was perjury, and there was perjury in the testimony of Bower and Lee. Mrs. Carson said she has worked there three years, and Arnold asked her a question that he would not ask a younger woman. He asked her about seeing blood around the toilet and in the dressing rooms. She said she saw it there very often. Then she talked about Conley being on the fourth floor that Monday. I pinned her down to say that Frank was there at the same time. It was then that Frank leaned over and said, 'Be good boy, Jim,' and Jim, remembering his wealthy relatives in Brooklyn, and his promises of money, said, 'Yes, sir, boss; I will.'

"Surely the officers could not suborn Conley at that time. And she says she never saw the blood by the water cooler; she said she didn't look at it because she didn't like to look at things like that. But another lady on the stand says she did go back and look at it; that she was with her.

"But back again to Conley. If he had committed that crime and had not had Leo M. Frank and his promises back of him, would he have gone back to that factory every day and remained there until Thursday? They said they were going to put up all the girls on the fourth floor. But they didn't do it until we called their four-flush and put in witnesses to corroborated their witness, Miss Jackson, about the misconduct of this man.

"Miss Small, also on the fourth floor, corroborated Conley. She said she saw him on the fourth floor Monday. Now, why did Frank go to the fourth floor so often Monday and Tuesday? Because he knew Conley was up there, and he wanted to be sure the negro was not talking. Conley told Miss Carson that Frank was as innocent as an angel in heaven. We said he was merely doing what he had promised to do—protect his employer. Mr. Rosser characterized the statement as a dirty suggestion. It was, and I accept it, but it is true, and you men would not sit here and see that negro hang for a crime Leo M. Frank committed.

"When Conley went up to the second floor in response to Frank's signal, Frank said, 'Did you see anything?' and he said, 'I saw two girls come up, but there ain't but one of them come down.' And then Frank knew that he would have to take this negro into his confidence.

Shaking his finger at Frank, Dorsey continued:

"And you told old Jim Conley to protect you! And he tried to do it. It is infamous to try to have Jim Conley hanged for a crime that Leo Frank did. Gentlemen, I haven't got to the State's case yet; I am just cutting away some of the underbrush this defense has planted in this forest of oaks. They have played the detectives. The only thing to the discredit of the police department is that it allowed itself to be intimidated by the influence of this man and his friends and his big lawyers.

Didn't Have Courage To Put Frank in Cell.

"When they took him down there guilty of this red-handed murder they didn't put him in a cell like they did Newt Lee and Jim Conley. It took time for them to get their courage up to the point of locking him up as he should have been. Old John Black—Mr. Rosser likes to brag about what he did to him—but he didn't make so much off of him after all. Black's methods are somewhat like Mr. Rosser's. If Black had had Frank in the position that Mr. Rosser had Jim Conley, this whole trial might have been obviated with a confession."

Dorsey turned and pointed at Frank.

"You didn't get counsel a moment too soon. You called for Darley and you called for Harris; you called for Rosser and Arnold, and it took them all to bolster up your nerve. Gentlemen of the jury, you know I am telling you the truth. The only thing against the police is that this man, who had just snuffed out the life of this little girl, was given too much consideration. His able counsel and the glamour of wealth that surrounded him, overawed the police. I had nothing to do with it, but I honor them for the way they went after Minola McKnight. I don't know whether they want me to apologize for them or not; but do you think that in protecting the people from such crimes as this the detectives are acting like they are at a tea party?

"Should they have the manners of a dancing master? If you do, you don't know anything about it. Once get an old 'possum dog on the trail, and you can't call him off. So it is with Starnes and Black; they knew Albert McKnight wouldn't have told those young men at the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company that story about his wife unless it were true. They went after Minola. They stuck to the trail. They smoked her out. Minola's friends got a writ of habeas corpus. Do you think if Mr. Haas had come to me with a writ of habeas corpus to release Frank I would have done it? I would have said it was none of my business.

"The next time the police have to use strong methods in an effort to protect the people by going after a red-handed murderer, I won't usurp their authority or the authority of the judges. I haven't anything to do with the police department, or the functions of the judges. I am responsible only for the office of Solicitor General for the term to which I was elected. I honor Mr. Charley Hill; I am as proud that I have succeeded him as I am that I was given this place by a vote of the people. He was honorable and strong; but I tell you gentlemen, no man is my pattern; I follow the dictates of my own conscience."

Tears Come to Dorsey's Eyes.

Mr. Dorsey raised his voice and tears came into his eyes.

"If there is one thing I am proud of during my term of office, it is that I joined hand and glove with the police; and when your influence (turning to the defense) tried to get Jim Conley indicted by the grand jury, I stood out against it. If that is treason, make the most of it. If you don't want me to do it, get somebody else.

"Mr. Hill was a noble man. He had the courage of a Caesar and the eloquence of a Demosthenes. I have relished a hundred times that he was here making the speech to you that I am making.

"He would have stripped the hides off of you (pointing to the defense). Such talk as that doesn't terrify me. It doesn't disturb the serenity of the conscience in everything I have done in the prosecution of this man. Let's get back to the talk on perjury.

"Don't get up here and call everybody a liar without giving the specific instances. Take the evidence of Mrs. Small. She said she saw Frank and Miss Rebecca Carson walking along and that she stopped Frank and had him O. K. a ticket. She said it was Miss Rebecca Carson she was with. She says that Mrs. Carson was not there at all. Mrs. Carson said she was there. Mrs. Small said she saw Conley standing there by the elevator and that Frank must have seen him—that Frank passed within 4 feet of him. She says that Jim was doing nothing; that he was standing by the elevator with his hand on a truck.

"Mrs. Small also tells us that the elevator shook the entire building. She said he couldn't helped but hear it if the machinery was not running. She said: 'You might not hear it if the machinery was in full operation, if you were not paying attention to it, but if you listened you could hear it.'

"Now here is another thing. Mrs. Carson had already sworn positively that she never went back into the metal room to see that blood. Mrs. Small said that on Wednesday a crowd of them from the fourth floor went down out of pure curiosity to see those spots, and when I asked her who went with her, lo and behold the first person she mentioned was Mrs. Carson. She said she was sure she was there; she knew she was there. And when I asked why they went there, and why Mrs. Carson went there particularly, she said 'Curiosity sent us.'

Somebody Has Lied, Dorsey Asserts.

"Now, gentlemen of the jury, somebody, and I put it up to you, has lied. If this case is founded on perjury, it has been boiled until the pot is black.

"The truth is, there has not been a single instance where evidence was needed that someone has not come in to bolster it up.

"Now, let's pass on a little bit. I want to discuss briefly the writing of these letters found beside the body of the girl. If these letters were not the order of an overruling Providence, I would agree that they were the silliest things I ever heard of. But, gentlemen of the jury, these notes bear an intrinsic knowledge of this crime.

"This man Frank, by the language of these notes, in attempting to fix the guilt upon another, has indelibly fixed it upon himself."

The Solicitor repeated this statement.

"The pad, the paper the notes were written upon; the fact that there was a note fixed the guilt upon him. Tell me that a negro who, after having killed a white girl, ravished and outraged her, would have taken the time to have written these notes? And even if he did write them, would he have written them upon a scratch pad which is found only in an office?

"You tell me that a man like Jim Conley would have ravished this girl with the knowledge that Frank was in the house? You tell me that this Jim Conley, even though he has been as drunk as a sot could be, would have taken the time to write these notes?

"I tell you, gentlemen of the jury, it can not be true.

"You say that the fact those notes were written was foolish. It was foolish, but it was a mistake. Murder is a mistake. What man ever committed murder who did not make a mistake? And what man making the greatest mistake in the world would not make a lesser mistake in trying to cover up? Those notes were the lesser mistake.

"Scott said that when Leo M. Frank talked to him about the girl coming to the factory and asking him about the metal that he said, 'I don't know.' And now he says that he told her, 'No.' Arnold recognized the damage in the statement 'I don't know' getting in.

"Language of Notes Clears Conley."

"Leo Frank said in his statement again and again 'chatting' and 'chat.' Conley said that when Frank told him he wanted to watch for him that Frank said he wanted to have a 'chat.' Jim Conley said here time and again, 'I have done it,' but in the notes found near the body he said, 'did it.' Do you tell me that negro would have written the word 'did' unless it was dictated to him?

"Do you tell me that negro would have taken the time to carry that girl away back there and hide her body if he had knocked her down the hole, and then stopped to write those notes?

"No," shouted Dorsey, turning to Frank, "that child was murdered on the second floor and you wanted to get her into the cellar, just like you found her in the cellar, as you said in that telegram to Montag.

"Conley said once in his statement that when he met a man on the street that he knew, the man looked at him he though he though 'I done it.' Conley used that expression at least twenty times. He said 'I done it' when he closed the door, and in several other places I can't find just now. He didn't use the word 'did' one time.

"In the first note, the expression 'I went to make water and that long tall black negro pushed me down the hole.' You knew that toilet was back there on the second floor (addressing Frank), and you knew that was where that little girl met her death. And you knew that metal room was right back there, too.

"You tell me that negro would have written those words. Where was it she was going to make water on the first floor? Yet you tell me there is nothing in circumstantial evidence when these things creep in.

"When you wrote this note (turning to Frank), you said yourself that you had the original of the note before you, and you said yourself that you knew Conley could write because he had written you time and time again, trying to borrow money, and yet you sat there with the original of that note before you and Conley's own handwriting, the handwriting you had seen often enough to be familiar with it, and you didn't tell those officers that Conley wrote the notes.

"I don't want you to convict this man unless you believe him guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, but I don't want you to let your verdict be governed by the opinion of a crank, but by the facts.

"Arnold and Rosser would say frequently, 'Are you going to convict this man on that, on this?'—selecting some little isolated point.

Chain Strong Enough To Hang Anybody.

"Well, I don't want you to, but on all the facts—the chain that is unbroken and not by isolated instances, and I say that when you take them all together you have a cable that ought to hang anybody.

"I don't ask that he be convicted on this isolated instance or that, but all bound together make a cable that is as strong as is possible for the ingenuity of man to make.

"I don't know whether the statement of Frank's will rank along with that statement of the celebrated pervert Oscar Wilde or not. He is brilliant. If you take his statement and just follow it you never would convict him. You never would convict anyone that way. But listen to this: 'I sat in my office counting over the money that had been left over.'" Dorsey read from Frank's statement. "He wasn't talking about the petty cash," Dorsey continued. "He was talking about the money that had been left over from the payroll of $1,100. We don't know to this day how much that was. We don't know how big a roll it could have made, though Jim Conley said he saw a roll of $200.

"And he was trying to get old Jim to go down into the basement and burn the body of that little girl. Just as sure as the smoke curled from that stack toward the heavens, old Jim would have been there without a shadow of a defense. Frank would have been there with the detectives. Jim would have hanged for a crime that this man committed in his lust.

"But old Jim was too wise. He wrote the notes, but, drunk or sober, he wouldn't be entrapped like that. I do not doubt that when Frank handed him that roll of money it was like the kiss of Judas Iscariot when he kissed the Saviour, and then betrayed Him for 30 pieces of silver.

"I am going to show you that this man had long planned not murder, but to get this little girl to yield to his lust. Let me do it now.

"Back yonder in March this little Turner boy saw him making advances to Mary Phagan. Did that innocent little boy from the country lie? This little girl that came here from the Home of the Good Shepherd, she heard Frank speak to Mary Phagan and put his hands on her. She may have lost her virtue, but she is nothing but a child. Did she lie, this little girl?

Quotes From Same Poem as Rosser.

"Then there is Gantt. He quit the factory rather than make good a dollar that was charged he was short. Did he lie about Frank's inquiring of the little girl? Yesterday Mr. Rosser quoted from a poem of Bobbie Burns, the line was, 'Tis human to step aside.' I want to quote a line from that same poem, 'There is no telling what a man will do when he has the lassie.'

"When convenience is snug, I tell you gentlemen, there is no telling what a pervert will do when goaded by his passion. You tell me this brilliant young man, who looked over that payroll 52 times a year, saw the name of Mary Phagan every time, then when she was dead had to get his books to find out her name? He coveted that little girl way back in March. I have no doubt those little girls swore the truth when they said they saw him making advances. I would not be surprised if he did not hang around and try to get her to yield. I would not be surprised if he didn't get Gantt out of the way because he was an obstacle to his scheme.

"He knew the day before she was probably coming. He went and told old Jim Conley, who had watched for you so many Saturday afternoons while you and Schiff were making up that finance sheet. When Helen Ferguson came and asked for Mary Phagan's money, I wouldn't be surprised if he did not refuse to give it to her because he had already told old Jim to come and watch.

"Frank's plans were fixed. Ah, gentlemen, then Saturday comes, and it is a reasonable tale that old Jim tells. He says, 'I done it just like this.' He doesn't say, 'I did.' He says he 'done it' just as the brilliant factory superintendent told him to. This thing passion works in a terrible way. Good people don't know how the mind of a libertine works. They don't know of the planning, plotting and waiting. Way back in March Frank had his eyes upon her. He was infatuated with her and did not have the will power to resist.

"You can twist and wabble all you want (Dorsey turned to Frank and shook his finger at him), but you told Detective Scott that you did not know her. Notwithstanding what you have said here, notwithstanding what your witnesses have said, you knew her.

"And tell me, gentlemen of the jury, has this little Ferguson girl lied? Has she been suborned by Starnes? Has she come here and deliberately perjured herself? I tell you that is a charge that can not stand. His refusal to give Helen Ferguson Mary Phagan's envelope is an indication that he was plotting. And old Jim Conley's tale will stand, for Frank himself corroborates Conley in many things.

Dorsey Attacks Frank's Statement

"'1 p. m.—Frank leaves the factory.' It looks mighty nice on the chart. Turn that chart to the wall, Mr. Sheriff. Let it stay turned to the wall. That statement is refuted by the defendant himself when he didn't realize the importance of this time proposition.

"Frank's statement at police headquarters, taken by G. C. Febuary on Monday, April 28, says. 'I didn't lock the door that morning. The mail was coming up. I locked it when I started home to lunch at 1:10 o'clock.'

"Up goes your alibi, punctured by your own statement when you didn't realize its importance. Yet these honorable gentlemen, for the purpose of impressing your minds, print in big lefters on this chart he left the factory at 1 o'clock. If he swore when he was on the stand the other day that he left the factory at 1 o'clock it was because he saw the importance of this time point, and had to leave there ten minutes earlier than he said he had at the police station before he had had time to confer with his lawyer, Mr. Luther Z. Rosser."

AN ANNOUNCEMENT OF VITAL IMPORTANCE TO PIANO BUYERS

THE WESTER MUSIC CO., 64 Peachtree Street, Desire to Announce the Opening of Their "Once-a-Year" Clearance at 8:30 Monday, August 25.

PIANOS OF HIGH GRADE AND ACKNOWLEDGED REPUTATION

Our Entire Stock Sacrificed—Everything Goes—Nothing Reserved—Every Person Interested in the Purchase of an Instrument Should Read Carefully, As It Concerns Them Most.

PROMPT ACTION WILL BRING REWARD

This Is Our Annual Clearance Sale of Fine Pianos—Your Opportunity to Save From $100 to $250 in Your Piano Purchase. Terms Are Made as Pleasing as the Prices. Opening Evenings.

In announcing this gigantic clearance sale of fine pianos, uprights, grands, player pianos and organs, we wish to take the piano buying public into our confidence, making a plain statement of facts, telling our good reason for sacrificing our entire stock. All thoughtful people realize the fact that in conducting a business the magnitude of ours, that a great number of discontinued styles, sample pianos, rental pianos, etc., will accumulate during the year, besides countless numbers of good used pianos taken in exchange for grands and players. They are in first-class condition, and must be disposed of to make room for large shipments of fall goods already beginning to arrive. In order to open the fall season with an entire new stock, we have decided to include in this sale every instrument in our building, grands, players and players, including such well-known makes as A. B. Chase, Chickering & Sons, Knabe Brothers, Ivers & Pond, Kurtzmann, Kranich & Bach, Bush & Gerts, Hoffman and others. In players, A. B. Chase Aristano (grand and uprights), Emerson Angelus, Kurtzmann Angelus, The Angelus, The Auto de Luxe, The Autoplano, Koehler and Newton.

Such an array of high-grade instruments, ranging between 350 and 400, has never been offered before to the good people of Georgia. Remember, nothing is reserved, and in order to move this stock in a limited space of time we have reduced the price in many cases from one-third to one-half of the original price. All these points taken into consideration makes it possible for any family to have an instrument in their home, as our low prices and easy terms place them within reach of all. Your credit is good at The Wester Music Company. If you do not care to pay cash we can arrange terms to suit your convenience.

One Price; Plain Figures.

Every piano will bear two tags, one will be our regular one price tag, the other the clearance sale tag. Thus you may see at a glance just what can be saved on your purchase. Look for the blue tag.

Here are three sample pianos. Large size mahogany cases, fully guaranteed. Instruments must be seen to be appreciated. Regular price $275, your choice $127.

Three standard grade upright cabinet grands, mahogany, oak or walnut; fully guaranteed. Regular price $300, your choice of three different styles and makes $187.

Five standard makes. Five large size uprights, mahogany or oak cases, new styles, guaranteed for ten years, regular price $350, your choice $236; $10 cash and $6 per month.

Five large size cabinet grand upright sample pianos, mahogany or dark oak cases, fully guaranteed, regular price $375. These are going at $246; $10 cash and $7 per month. They are new.

Six large size uprights; your choice oak or mahogany case; guaranteed for ten years; three different styles and makes; regular price $375. They are standard makes. Your choice for $268. Easy terms.

Five large size cabinet grand mahogany cases; three different styles and makes; guaranteed for ten years; regular price $400, your choice $276; $15 cash and $7 per month. They are new.

Ten large size uprights, mahogany cases, different styles and makes, guaranteed for ten years; regular price $450, sale price $292. Easy payments can be arranged.

Four large size, mahogany cases, best makes; fully guaranteed; regular price $500; slightly shop-worn, but absolutely perfect. They will be taken quickly at $269.

Six large size upright cabinet grands, high grade mahogany and walnut cases, regular price $550 your choice $308, $312, $318. Fully guaranteed.

Three high grade grand pianos, mahogany cases, regular price $700, $750 and $900; your choice for $468, $612 and $642. Guaranteed for ten years. They are new. One Steinway slightly used, good as new. Beautiful mahogany case, regular price $1,150. Must be seen to be appreciated. Will be offered at our regular discount. If you need a grand piano, don't miss this opportunity.

Nine player pianos, mahogany cases, some of them slightly shopworn, but in first-class condition. Some are new. They are guaranteed for five years. The best makes are included, regular prices, $550, $600, $650, $700, $750 and $800. All 88-note and new styles. Your choice, $418, $368, $396, $436, $487, $512. You must see the pianos to appreciate the values.

One large size mahogany case player piano, one of the best makes, regular price $850, slightly used. A big bargain for $256.

Fifty slightly used upright pianos. Oak, walnut, mahogany and ebony cases. Included in this lot will be found Vose & Sons, Hallet & Davis, Kranich & Bach, Painter & Ewing, Packard Conway, Bush & Gerts; Knabe Bros.; Sterling, Whitney, Cooper, Hoffman and others. Many of them are as good as new. They are all in splendid condition. Former prices ranging from $360 to $550. Your choice while they last from $75 to $268. They are guaranteed and you can make no mistake in selecting any one of them. Any second-hand piano that we sell will be taken back within one year and apply the price as part payment for a new piano.

Second-hand Organs.

Twenty-seven organs, including Carpenter, Estey, Wilcox & White, Packard, Chicago Cottage, Kimball, Mason & Hamlin and others. Former prices from $65 to $125. Your choice for $12, $17, $21, $26, 28, $31, $37, $42. All in good order and guaranteed.

Every instrument can be found on our floors and our personal guarantee goes with each instrument. Remember that we can arrange easy payments, if you don't care to pay cash. Out of town orders given special attention.

Any purchaser living nearer Macon than Atlanta will find the same bargains at our store, No. 157 Cotton avenue, Macon, Ga.

Store will be open evenings.

THE WESTER MUSIC COMPANY,
64 Peachtree Street, Atlanta, Ga.
157 Cotton Avenue, Macon, Ga.

THAW BASES HOPES OF ULTIMATE FREEDOM ON ENDLESS LEGAL TANGLE

POEM THAW WROTE IN MATTEAWAN

MATTEAWAN, N. Y., Aug. 23.—The following verses were written by Harry Kendall Thaw in his room at Matteawn and found in the waste-paper basket beside his reading table last December:

"There are lights aflame on Broadway,
There are hopes and lives undone;
There are debts of sin no man can pay,
And Broadway hates the sun.

"There are vain regrets on Broadway,
There are secret sighs and tears;
For one must smile as well as pray,
And the weakling meets with jeers."

Fugitive From Matteawan, Backed by Family's Millions, Will Utilize Every Technicality to Prevent Deportation From Dominion of Canada.

SHERBROOKE, QUEBEC, Aug. 23. With Harry Thaw's case now in the courts of Canada, the prediction made that it would be months—years, perhaps eternity—before the slayer of Stanford White is again in the jurisdiction of New York State is strengthened.

His family, wealthy and powerful, has rushed to his defense. He has unlimited resources to fight the legal battle against his deportation from Canadian soil. When the first writ of habeas corpus was granted, it assured him the right to appeal his cause to the highest Canadian court.

It is believed that this litigation can be made to last over years. It will be impossible to deny him bail in the Dominion, for he is a lunatic only in New York State. His status now is that he is simply considered an undesirable by Canadian immigration authorities, who, it is thought, may override the courts and deport him.

Should the courts of Canada finally rule against him, his case might be taken up from Washington. Even then if he were finally deported, should he be sent to any other State than New York, he could fight extradition there, and there are many eminent lawyers who believe that it is absolutely impossible to bring him back into New York then.

Probably Considered These Facts.

All these things probably had been considered when Thaw made his daring escape from Matteawan Asylum, when he dashed across the Connecticut border, then through the State into New Hampshire and from New Hampshire into the Dominion of Canada.

Thaw knows well the law's delay. He remembers his long period in the Tombs before he was first brought to trial for the slaying of White. He remembers the long fight for life and liberty then. He remembers the enforced wait after the first mistrial. He remembers the weary days of his second hearing.

He remembers the slow progress of his cause during his legal efforts to get his release from Matteawan Knowing these things and recognizing that there was hardly a bare possibility that bail would be denied him, he turned toward Canada rather than seek safety at sea, as his pursuers thought he surely would do.

It was probably due to this realization that he accepted his arrest at Coaticook, Quebec, coolly and that he awaits the issue of his habeas corpus proceedings just as coolly now.

Secures Talented Lawyers.

He is represented in his application for habeas corpus proceedings by W. L. Shurtleff and Colonel H. R. Fraser, one of the most talented lawyers of Eastern Canada. He is thoroughly buoyed up in the belief that the Canadian Government will never order his deportation or extradition.

"I have studied every legal phase of my case and have arrived at the belief that I am safe here," said Thaw. "My plans did not alone include my physical escape. I looked into the legal feature to establish my status in any other State than New York and any other country than the United States. I am not a dangerous man. I do not seek vengeance. My wife, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, need not fear me. Nor need anyone else fear me.

"All I want is peaceful and legal liberty. I feel that I am perfectly safe. I have studied law ever since I was admitted to Matteawan, and I believe that I am qualified to speak in this matter.

"Statements to the effect that I only sought liberty to kill are senseless They are so ridiculous that I won't talk of them. I have the kindest feelings toward the people of Canada, and will retain such feelings, no matter what action the Dominion Government takes, but I hope that they do not deport me. Detention in an insane asylum is a living death. It is enough to make a maniac out of a perfectly sane man."

Refuses to Betray Friends.

Asked for a detailed story of his flight, he refused.

"Yes, I was the man they spotted in Lenox, Mass., said he. "But from that point on I must say nothing. I won't betray my friends."

Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, sister of Thaw, arrived soon after his arrest and immediately sought her brother. Thaw sent word to Roger O'Mara, the Pittsburg (Pa.) private detective, who has been his counsellor since youth, to rush here on the first train.

He said that he wanted to get the fight over with. His first trepidation came with the news that District Attorney Conger, of Dutchess County, New York, and Dr. Kieb, of the Matteawan Institution, would come to cooperate with the United States authorities in an effort to have Thaw deported bask to New York, or extradited.

Plans for the court battle in Thaw's behalf were carefully made by Mr. Shurtleff and Colonel Fraser and hopes to have his release ordered by Judge Globensky and plans to leave immediately for Quebec if he gets out. He intends to sail for France if he gets his freedom, so that he will be sure to be safe. Ultimately he hopes to have his legal freedom established so that he can return to Pittsburg.

Contend Thaw Is Tourist.

Among the grounds upon which the Thaw lawyers put into their plea for their client's liberty is that he is only a tourist passing through Canada, and they point to the case of Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, as a precedent.

They contend that Johnson was under conviction of an infraction of the United States law, whereas Thaw has not broken any law. They contended that Johnson was a fugitive from justice, whereas Thaw is a fugitive from an institution for the insane.

They pointed to Thaw's behavior to uphold the contention that no matter what his condition in the past, he is now sane and rational. The facts that Thaw has not broken any Canadian laws and that no indictment exists against him across the border were emphasized. Thaw offered many suggestions to his lawyers and in a way seemed to be their pilot. He looked very solemn and impressive as he gave his opinions of his own case.

"My idea is that speed is the requisite thing," Thaw told them.

News Unnerves Prisoner.

The Canadian Government and the United States Government were both represented by able counsel who resisted Thaw's efforts to gain his liberty on a writ of habeas corpus. They contended that the law governing Thaw's case is very plain and they pointed to precedents.

In fact, it was reported that Acting Superintendent of Immigration Blair in Ottawa had been counseled by the Ministry of Justice that Thaw should be deported at once. When Thaw heard this report he trembled and became pale. He was unnerved by the news and showed it.

The presence in Sherbrooke of the most spectacular and sensational prisoner in the world made a gala occasion. Not one of the Provincial fairs which are being held throughout Eastern Canada at this time could vie with Thaw as an attraction. Great crowds came into Sherbrooke from the surrounding country.

Families gathered about the jail, hoping to get a glimpse of the well-known prisoner if he was taken to the courthouse. Some came a distance of 100 miles to see Thaw. The street on which the jail is located was jammed.

Glad to Please Curious.

This curiosity tickled Thaw immensely. He said he did not want to disappoint anyone who really wanted to see what he looked like.

Mr. Shurtleff was resentful against Justice of the Peace Dupuis, of Coaticook, who held Thaw on the charge of being a fugitive and sent him here for further examination.

"We contend that Justice of the Peace Dupuis acted illegally," declared Shurtleff. "He exceeded his authority. He had no right to hold Thaw."

Colonel Fraser assured Thaw that conspiracy is not an extraditable offense and that he need not feel any great alarm over the fact that a warrant charging Thaw with conspiring to gain his liberty is on its way here from Dutchess County. He did not give such optimistic assurances about deportation, however.

Thaw lost no time in arranging to secure cash. He telegraphed to a banker relative in Pittsburg (where the bulk of the Thaw fortune is invested) to send him money to fight his case.

Thaw faced the habeas corpus hearing coolly and confidently. Before going to court, he ate a hearty breakfast and dressed with minute care, evidently realizing that he would be gazed on by thousands on the short ride from the jail to the courthouse.

Smuggling Claim Advanced.

He had prepared a number of notes to guide his lawyers in their conduct of his case, and was evidently disappointed when they did not seem to give these notes great consideration.

An investigation of the manner in which Thaw came into possession of a railroad ticket for Detroit, Mich., is being made. The Dominion authorities are not satisfied that Thaw bought the ticket himself.

It was learned from an authoritative source that immigration officers who are here plan to arrest Thaw on the ground that he smuggled his way into Canada if he gets his freedom on a habeas corpus writ.

The village of St. Hermenigilde, where Thaw and his companions came into Canada from the United States, is not a port of entry.

Evelyn Thaw, Fearing Death, Breaking Down Under Strain

'How Can He Say He Loves Me When He'd Let Me Starve?'

LATEST photograp of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw posed especially for The Sunday American at her hotel in New York where, it is said, she is near a breakdown rfom fear that her husband will regain his liberty and attempt to do her violence, and a photograph of Harry Kendall Thaw, taken in his cell at Matteawan from which he escaped to aCnada, where he is using every legal means to prevent his deportation to the United States

COPYRIGHT BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

PHOTO BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

'He's a Paranoiac,' She Screams—Describes Her Sacrifice.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is breaking down under the fear that Harry K. Thaw may evade the law and succeed in reaching her. There were visible evidences of the strain under which she has been laboring since he escaped from Matteawan last Sunday when a Sunday American reporter saw her last night in the Hotel Brevoort.

Thaw's declaration from the jail in Sherbrooke that her return to the stage had prompted him to make a dash for liberty and that he loved her more than anything else in life were called to her attention.

"Good God!" she exclaimed. "How could that man say he loves me when he would have let me starve in the streets?"

"Do you love him?" she was asked.

"Love him! I love him as much as he loves me," was her derisive reply. "He wanted to keep me down after I had testified and sold my soul for him and I had done everything that a human being could do for a man; and now he makes this maudlin statement about love.

Never Knew Love's Meaning.

"He is a paranoiac, and he doesn't know what love is. He has never known the meaning of it as long as I have known him. As for taking care of me as any man who loved a woman would do, both he and his mother them me out, after I had saved him from the electric chair.

"Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw entered into an agreement with me at the time of the trial to provide me with $12,000 a year on condition that I would consent to an annulment of our marriage. I did consent, and the papers were drawn. Then his mother repudiated it. That was in June, 1912, and I have received no money from them since that time.

"Before that date I had received $70 a week and my rent. I had to dispose of pictures and scrape and save to live, and I finally came to the conclusion that I had something within myself, that I could prove I possessed the gift of making my own living, which is a gift after all.

Breaks Into Tears.

"I thank God that I have that gift or his mother would be jeering at me in the gutter," and Mrs. Thaw broke into tears.

"He wants to spoil my life and my work," she continued, turning to John Reilly, her counsel, who was in the room. "I told you that if I made a success he would want to injure me, and here he has stated that my success was the thing that impelled him to break for his liberty. He wants to injure me and he will bend everything to that end.

"I told you also," she added to her lawyer, "that he would not be free long before he would betray himself through his excessive egotism.

"But there is worse coming if he retains his liberty. Things will begin to happen when he gets his drink. He is going to do something desperate, I know, just as surely as I could foresee the things I have referred to. Wait until he gets drink in him—it is horrible to contemplate!" And Mrs. Thaw again broke down and sobbed.

"Desperate and Dangerous."

"Don't you think that you may be exaggerating because of your overwrought state of mind?" was asked.

"I wish it were so," she replied. "But anyone who thinks Harry Thaw will not be a desperate man when he gets the opportunity to satisfy his appetite for drink, knows nothing of him. I know him. Dr. Flint knows him. Judge Jerome knows him. He will be a desperate and dangerous man.

"This great State ought to be ashamed of itself to allow a paranoiac to make and unmake its institutions." Thaw was permitted liberties that no man in his position had ever before enjoyed. Thaw has not done it, it has been the Thaw money.

"Do you know that when I used to see him in the Tombs he used to be drunk on Scotch whisky? Let the Tombs officials deny it if they dare. I know it and they know it. Harry Thaw told me he could get all the liquor he wanted there."

Mr. Reilly warned his client that she was overtaxing her strength, but she persisted in unloading her mind.

Old Graveyard Must Give Way to Railroad

Milwaukee Line Is Compelled to Move Old Burial Ground Near For Alcohol.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Aug. 23.—Among various other activities the Milwaukee Railroad people have found themselves engaged in rebuilding their line across Iowa is that of moving a cemetery.

In securing a right-of-way near the Des Moines River it purchased an old burial ground, one long since abandoned. Among the bodies the railroad men have removed is one that had been buried seventy-five years. The remarkable state of preservation of clothing and lack of decay of the bones after such a long period has been a source of surprise to the men exhuming the bodies.

U. S. Officer Invents Airship Destroyer

Balloon Equipped With Explosives and Wire Feelers Will Protect War Craft.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Joseph Steinmetz, a retired lieutenant of artillery in the United States army, has just perfected an invention that is likely to interfere greatly with the effectiveness of the aeroplan in naval warfare. Steinmetz is now negotiating with the War Department for the use of his invention. It consists of a captive hydrogen ballon suspended over either an arsenal or battleship. It carries a large quantity of explosives, which would be touched off by any aircraft coming in contact with wires extended from it. The airship would at once be blown up.

Couple Will Re-wed To Gain $1,000,000

Ceremony by Mormon Judge Is Called Unsatisfactory by Administrators of Estate.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—In order to comply with the wishes of the administrators of the $1,000,000 estate of her father, the late Thomas R. Lamb, of Edinburgh, Scotland, Mrs. Anna B. Lamb-Wilson must be married to her husband again.

The husband is E. Douglas Wilson, of this city. He pursued Miss Lamb more the Pennsylvania Rubber Company, of an 10,000 miles across the United States and over the Pacific Ocean before he married her in Honolulu last April. The ceremony was performed by Judge Hernandez, whom Wilson says is a Mormon. This marriage, though legal, did not meet with the approval of the administrators.

Edwin Booth Saves Lillian Russell

Rescuer Is Only Nine and His Playmate at Maine Resort Was Drowning.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug. 23.—Edwin Booth saved Lillian Russell from drowning at South Harpswell when she fell from the wharf. Both are summer visitors.

Edwin is 9 years old, and the son of Charles E. Booth, of Yonkers, N. Y., while Lillian is 13, and the daughter of Charles A. Russell, of Boston. Edwin, her playmate, was fully clad, but he dove into the ocean like a veteran, drawing the girl to safety.

Thieves Warn, Then Rob Rail Station

Telephone Central Office They Had Looted Pay Phone, Then Steal Instrument.

NYACK, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Before carrying away the telephone from the Stony Point station of the West Shore Railroad last night, thieves telephoned to the central office to say that they had robbed the office and, telephone coin box. The operator thought some practical joker was at work and paid no attention to the man who called.

This morning it was found that the money drawer at the station had been robbed of 75 cents in cash, and from the telephone box had been taken about $3 in coins. The thieves also took the telephone.

WOMAN POLITICIAN IS MAD.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Countess Elizabeth Emilie Von Wedel, a Frenchwoman and a former "political agent," who was quite a celebrity, has been placed in a German asylum for the insane.

SCHOLAR BARES HOSEA FAMILY'S SKELETON NOW

University of Chicago Professor Declares Prophet Took Wife as Horrible Example.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Hosea's family skeleton has come to light, if not to life. The domestic scandal of ancient Israel's prophet has been removed from its closet, scoured with higher criticism and rattled in the face of Biblical scholars, who were perfectly willing to let it rest. Professor J. M. Powis Smith, of the University of Chicago, exhibits it in an article on "The Marriage of Hosea," in the current number of The Biblical World.

Hosea's wife, Gomer Bath Diblaim, is the villainess of the story reconstructed by Professor Smith from the account of her marriage to the prophet, and in the first three chapters of the book of Hosea, Professor Smith asserts that Gomer, contrary to the usual interpretation of the Scriptural account, was a person of evil reputation before the wedding ceremony was performed.

Prophet Knew His Faults.

Professor Smith adds to his version the fact that Hosea knew of Gomer's faults and took her "with his eyes open." In short, the prophet married Gomer with the curious purpose of making the match a horrible example to the rest of the Israelites, he asserts.

The marriage was to impress Israel with the fact of its own disloyalty to God.

According to the professor's view, the belief that "Hosea, as a young man, fell in love with Gomer and married her, supposing her to be all his youthful imagination fancied her to be," that she later left his home to live with another man, that he bought her back and then become a prophet, will not hold water. The scholar declares that this version is founded on an imperfect notion of the physiology of prophets.

Professor Smith asserts that the wife's name, which means "Gomer, daughter of Fig Cakes," signifies that she was held in low esteem. He retranslates several words in the Biblical account and gives the following as the proper version:

"Hosea, a prophet already burdened with the sense of his people's sin, felt himself called upon by Yahweh to marry a lewd woman, to the end that through such a marriage he might open the eyes of Israel to the enormity of its offense in being disloyal to Yahweh, its rightful lord. In pursuance of this conviction, Hosea bought Gomer, a woman living in public shame with her paramour.

Placed Her Under Restraint.

"But he at once placed her under restraint, denying her association with himself as well as with others, and seeking by such discipline to fit her for her position as his wife. This phase of the experience was interpreted for Israel as meaning that she as Yahweh's bride must be disciplined by exile before she could expect to enjoy any further favor from Yahweh.

"After this period of restraint for Gomer she was taken by Hosea into his home and became the mother of three children. Each of these in succession was given a prophetic name, and, like Isaiah's children, became a walking sermon to Israel just as the institution of marriage itself had been."

Hard Fall Re-sets Dislocated Spine

WIMINGTON, DEL., Aug. 23.—An expenditure of $16,000 and treatment for years in sanitariums in Germany and Paris failed to accomplish what a fall downstairs did. Mrs. William Helm, of Ellendale, Del., was cured of a dislocated spine in this unusual manner. The fall forced her spine into place. To-day she says she is well.

Her head is bandaged, but she was able to preside over a recent meeting of the Ellendale Ladies' Social, of which she is president.

SENT FREE TO MEN

A Most Pleasing Remedy Given to Quickly Restore Lost Vitality.

A Free Trial Treatment Sent by Mail To All Who Write.

Free trial treatments of Enervita, a most pleasing remedy, are being mailed to all men who write to Dr. John S. Howell. So many who had suffered for years against the mental and physical suffering of man weakness have written thanking him for the great benefit received, therefore, Dr. Howell has decided to send free trial treatments to all men who write. It is a home treatment, and all who suffer with any form of weakness, resulting from youthful folly, premature loss of strength and memory, weak back, lack of vitality and confidence can now receive this strength-giving treatment at home.

The treatment has a peculiar grateful effect of warmth and seems to act direct to the desired location, promoting strength and development just where it is needed. It is given to relieve the ills and troubles that come from years of misuse of the natural functions, and has met with remarkable success, even in cases approaching advanced age. A request to John S. Howell, M. D., Suite 1221, Auditorium Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, stating that you desire one of his free trial packages, will be complied with promptly.

He is desirous of reaching that great class of men who are unable to leave home to be treated, and the free sample will enable them to see how easy it is to successfully treat man weakness when the proper remedies are employed. Dr. Howell makes no restrictions. Any man who writes will be sent a free sample and literature, carefully sealed in a plain package, so that you need have no fear of embarrassment or publicity. Readers are requested to write without delay.

Small Expenses Small Profit

This Advertisement Is Worth 50c

AT THE

Royal Shoe Shop

86 N. BROAD, NEAR LUCKIE ST.

This week, in order to introduce our new lines of Goodyear Welt and English Welt Dress Shoes for Men and Women, we will sell for

$2.50

If offered at our store, together with this advertisement
ONE PAIR TO A CUSTOMER
Our extra quality shoes as described above

ALL LEATHERS—Gun Metal, Kid, Russia and Patent Colt. ALL SIZES, All New Goods.

Made by one of the Greatest and Best Manufacturers in this Country.

We Make a Specialty of Comfortable Work Shoes for Mechanics and Workingmen

Certainly! We Sell EDUCATOR SHOES for the Whole Family

No reasonable offer refused on the remainder of our Low Shoes in stock. Come while the coming is good.

SAVE HALF A DOLLAR

The ROYAL SHOE SHOP

IRISH RAISE HUGE FUND TO ASSURE HOME RULE

American Hibernians Respond Liberally to Appeal Made After Great Demonstration in Chicago Against England's Domination.

Another Feature of Meeting Was Adoption of a Resolution Condemning Great Britain's Policy Toward U. S. in Canal Dispute.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Following the gigantic demonstration for Irish home rule at the thirty-eighth annual picnic of the United Irish Societies of Chicago, held in Brands Park, sons of Erin here are confident that in a few weeks American Hibernians will have raised a fund that will insure the home rule for which they have fought so long and which they have almost brought about.

Fifteen thousand persons visited the park during the day and they responded liberally to the call for funds with which to carry on their campaign. Three thousand dollars was raised at that time and the fund has grown steadily since.

A feature of the occasion was the reading by James T. Clark, president of the United Irish Societies, of a telegram from William Randolph Hearst, in which he warmly favored home rule. The president was quick to reply, expressing the thanks of the societies for the co-operation they have received in their work from Mr. Hearst's papers.

British Canal Stand Scored.

Another important feature of the day was the resolution prepared in advance and passed by a unanimous vote, opposing the British contention over the Panama Canal tolls.

The resolutions strongly uphold the views of the United States that this country, having built the canal and paid for it without aid, should have the right of passing her own ships through it without paying tolls, and that this action of the United States is entirely within its rights as a nation and is not subject to the criticism of any other nation.

The work of John Redmond, parliamentary leader, in forcing the home rule bill to the verge of final passage also was commended highly.

One of the most impressive features of the occasion was the exhibition of a full-size model of the statue of Colonel F. Finerty, the famous soldier-journalist and a son of whom Erin is very proud.

Colonel Finerty wrote the story of the Custer campaign against old Sitting Bull, and the massacre in which Custer's whole command was wiped out. In his later years Colonel Finerty was editor of the Irish-American, and devoted all his energies to the home rule campaign, now so nearly won.

Work of Irish Sculptor.

The splendid statue of the old fighter is the work of Professor Charles J. Mulligan, of the Art Institute, a pupil of MacMonnies and Saint-Gaudens.

Among the speakers who addressed the enthusiastic throng were United States Senator George E. Chamberlain, of Oregon, former Attorney General Maurice T. Maloney, P. H. O'Donnell, Joseph E. Ryan, John T. Sutton, of Lincoln, Neb., and Harry W. Smith, of Springfield, Ill.

In part, Mr. Maloney said: "We of the Celtic race have always struggled for a place in the sun, and have made a good deal of history, but we have been accused in the past of not being quite what we ought to be in the old country, and did not act to our own interest. English misgovernment and oppression were solely to blame for this.

"Now I can see a new Ireland rising above the horizon, a nation once again. The Irish people had advanced with giant strides, now that the long tribulation of our night is passing away."

Senator Twists Lion's Tail.

United States Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon said:

"My people came to this country to avoid persecution in the mother country, persecution by the English Government. Ireland had no measure of freedom in those times."

Speaking on the Panama Canal, he said: "We have a perfect right to arrange to suit ourselves charges on a canal that was made in America, solely by American money. If England will not send her exhibits to the San Francisco Exposition on this account, I would say let her keep them at home.

"If we were not careful to withstand these encroachments of the British Government, we might in the end find ourselves in the same case as Ireland finds herself to-day. I foresee home rule for that country, within the next two or three years without question of doubt."

Tight Skirts Make Idle Factory Girls

Mill Men Assert Present Styles Curtail Demand for Goods and Cause Lack of Work.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., Aug. 23.—That the factories manufacturing cloth are suffering from the present styles in women's wearing apparel, owing to the smaller sale of cloth, and that many operatives are being thrown out of work in consequence, is the opinion of many leading New Bedford manufacturers.

In the past three years the circumference of women's skirts has been cut down on the average about two yards. The smaller sales of cloth have necessitated a curtailment in the mayro and hundreds of idle operatives are waiting until the styles change before they will be put to work again.

Irish Societies Leader Thanks Mr. Hearst for Support of Home Rule

CORDIAL telegrams of congratulation and thanks were exchanged between William Randolph Hearst and James T. Clark, president of the United Irish Societies of Chicago on the occasion of their annual picnic recently. Mr. Hearst expressed his belief in the justness and the ultimate success of the cause of home rule, while the head of the Irish societies in his reply earnestly thanked the publisher for his co-operation in their work in behalf of their fatherland. Mr. Clark's message follows:

CHICAGO, Aug. 20, 1913.

Hon. William Randolph Hearst,
San Francisco.

The sentiment of the United Irish Societies toward your papers has always been one of appreciation. Often in the past we have admired your unselfish advocacy of the cause of liberty and the 15,000 Irish-Americans at the ceremony of unveiling of the John F. Finerty monument were thrilled by your message in favor of home rule for Ireland. This monument is symbolic of the revitalized Irish nation that has been the inspiration of Parnell, Redmond and other patriots, and we believe it would strengthen the home rule cause immeasurably if you would publish in your Sunday papers, in the near future, a comprehensive account of our recent demonstration here, and emphasize its significance to Irish liberty.

JAS. T. CLARK, President,
United Irish Societies.

Mr. Hearst's Home Rule Message

San Francisco, Aug. 15.

As an American believing ardently in liberty and opportunity in equal rights and equal justice, I believe sincerely in home rule for Ireland.

If I were an Englishman I would believe with even greater earnestness in home rule not only for Ireland, but for every individual integral part of the British Empire.

I would believe in genuine home rule and in general home rule. I would believe in home rule which would insure complete independence in local government for every state and in a general government which would afford every state equal rights, equal liberties and proportionate representation.

Such just and genuine home rule is the best and perhaps the only remedy for the threatened decadence and possible dissolution of the British Empire. The preservation and perpetuation of the British Empire in its full prestige and power are only to be found in a voluntary federation of independent states, not held together loosely by compulsion but molded into an imperial entity by the natural and nationalizing forces of mutual confidence, mutual affection and mutual interest.

If I were an Irishman I would take pride in this fight for home rule, first because of the benefit I was helping to confer upon my country and my own countrymen, and, secondly, because of the benefit which will inevitably ensue to all other sections of the British Empire and to other nations throughout the world.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

'Perfect Baby' Fed on Soup and Vegetables

Hundred Per Cent Child Also Gets Abundance of Water and Fresh Air.

PASSAIC, N. J., Aug. 23.—"Good, substantial food, well cooked, is what I feed him," said Mrs. Thomas Watterston, of No. 110 Central avenue, when asked how she reared her son, Leslie, just declared the only 100 per cent perfect baby in the "better babies" contest in Passaic. Three hundred infants contested. He is 27 months old.

"He gets soups, fruit, vegetables, puddings, cereals," continued the mother. "I give him very little meat, few eggs, but plenty of water, inside and out."

Baby Leslie goes to bed about 8 p. m. and arises about 7:30, awakening of his own accord and bounding out into the fields before breakfast. He has a two-hour nap every afternoon, and always sleeps with the windows in his room wide open.

Women Voters Save Mayor From Recall

Committee From Their Organization Canvasses Every Ward to Prevent His Defeat.

JANESVILLE, WIS., Aug. 23.—Mayor James A. Fathers was the victor by a narrow margin to-day in Wisconsin's first recall election of importance under the commission form of government. He was elected by 88 votes, with a total of more than 3 00 votes cast, more than were ever before voted in a Janesville municipal election.

Mayor Fathers received 1,570 votes and his opponent, John C. Nichols, 1,472. Fathers carried three wards, the First, Second and Third, those chiefly occupied by the church and aristocratic elements, while Nichols carried the Fourth and Fifth Wards, the homes of the poorer people.

The election follows the trouble over saloons six months ago, when the Fathers administration started a campaign to clean up the town. Every ward in the city was canvassed by women's committees in the interest of Fathers.

Standardize Book to Simplify Grammar

Educators Work to Have Study of English Language Made More Uniform.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Aug. 23.—Standardization of grammatical nomenclature, which will do away with the confusion in the study of English, as well as other languages, in American schools, has been effected by a committee of fifteen, of which Professor Hills, of Colorado College, was a member.

The committee made a report to the National Educational Association in convention at Salt Lake City and its adoption without amendment virtually insures the following of the committee's recommendations in all schools and colleges.

According to Professor Hills it was found that in the sentence "John is good," the word "good" was called by nine different names in 20 grammars. the word "John" in "This is John," was called by nineteen terms, and in "We made John president," the word "president" was given eighteen different names in the books examined.

Philippine Hero Can't Re-enlist in Army

Batt'e-Scarred Pensioner Rejected by Recruiting Office on Account of Wounds.

SPOKANE, Aug. 23.—One of the seven heroes of the United States army who survived the bloody massacre of Balingiga, P. I., when he saw more than 100 of his comrades and officers go to their death at the hands of a savage Philippine tribe, and himself, was mutilated in many places on his body and given up for dead, John M. Newhouse, applied for reenlistment in the United States army.

Newhouse is 37 years old and came from Helena. He is now drawing $30 a month for the injuries he received in the massacre. Newhouse told of his experience while pleading with local army recruiting officers to take him into the army again.

Officials were compelled to reject the applicant on account of a stiff right arm caused by one of the cuts from a bolo.

Lightning Bug Used To Illuminate House

West Virginian Discovers New Light Medium Which He Declares Surpases Electricity.

MORGANTOWN, W. VA., Aug. 23. Thornton Flowers, of Mora, claims that by treating the common firefly or lightning bug with a secret chemical process he has produced a light surpassing the tungsten incandescent. He has his home illuminated with the new light.

Several weeks ago, Flowers says, he captured an immense lightning bug. It gave out a brilliant light, and this gave him an idea that the light from fireflies would illuminate a room if they were made to glow incessantly. He hit upon a mixture of chemicals, which, he says, not only will retain the glow after the insect's life is extinct, but will increase it.

He captured the insects by hundreds, treated them with chemicals and placed them in globes throughout his home.

Blind Girl Student Marvelous Gardener

Produces Daisies Three Times Size of Ordinary Flowers and Vegetables Just as Big.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Twenty-seven deaf and dumb girls and boys, ranging from 10 to 17, are being taught to speak, read, write stories, sew, make biscuits, solve arithmetic problems, spell and garden at the Sixteenth Street school here, where an exhibition of their work was held recently.

Miss Elizabeth Kenealy, 15, is creating a sensation at the school because of her wonderful success in raising flowers and vegetables.

In a middy blouse and dark skirt, Miss Elizabeth works in her gardens, one at home and the other at school, producing daisies three times the size of the ordinary flowers, and beets and many average vegetable food like radishes in size.

SMITH URGES ZONE CURE FOR BOLL WEEVIL

Senator From South Carolina Declares South's Loss in 17 Years Is $1,000,000,000.

Continued from Page 1.

an isolated spot in Texas until it has now reached the State of Alabama, and I have been appalled by the damage wrought by its ravages. During all these years I have been hoping for the discovery by which the pest could be exterminated, or even checked, but in both I have been disappointed.

Likes Zone Remedy Plan.

Some time ago the suggestion was made to establish across the entire cotton belt, east of the areas infested by the weevil a zone of 100 miles, in which no cotton should be planted. It was argued that this would check the eastward advance of the weevil, as it subsists only on the cotton plant, and it was also argued by entomologists and other experts on plant and insect life that my moving this zone westward from year to year all the weevils in the Cotton States would be starved out and entirely exterminated until the Mexican border was reached.

The idea appealed to me very strongly, and I have given the subject a great deal of study ever since. I believe this plan is entirely feasible, and while at first thought the cost may seem prohibitive, yet when the estimated cost is compared with the estimated saving the zone plan must be looked upon as a very sound business proposition.

The Government entomologists, farm demonstration agents and others admit that if this zone plan is put into operation it will undoubtedly check and finally exterminate the boll weevil, as it will have nothing to feed upon, and they admit at the same time that no other plan that has been tried so far has been at all effective.

I have had an estimate made of the cost of the proposed zone and I think it is a very liberal one. It follows:

"The cessation of cotton growing over an area of 46,245 square miles, in which the crop is valued at $98,990,047 per annum, is at first glance such an appalling suggestion that few have even thought to look deeper.

Sees Need of Substitute.

"We must add also to this the loss in ginning business, which is computed at $2,915,518 per annum and the loss in seed products totaling $5,633,562. This means that there must be compensation for a loss in earning value of $107,539,127 per annum.

"In the first place, any scheme which would call for the cessation of cotton growing must provide the means and knowledge for growing something else in the place of cotton.

"A large crop of trained agriculturists instructing in the cultivation of new and profitable crops and in the principles of rotation, maintenance of soil fertility, etc., would help the people to double and treble the output of their land within very few years. It would also be necessary to supply seed for planting the 2,573,672 acres of cotton land in other crops. Thus the greater part of the prospective loss can be met at a reasonable expense.

"The loss of the ginners and part of the loss of the oil men will have to be assumed by the Government. This loss would not exceed $9,000,000.

"It would be necessary for the western portion of the quarantine area to remain out of cotton for possibly three years.

"East of the proposed quarantine line there lies an area of 112,027 square miles of territory in which cotton can be produced. The average yield per acre (1908-1811) for this territory has been 3,051,103 bales (500 pounds), of which 32,892 bales (500 pounds was sea island cotton. The value of the latter was $4,224,235.

Places Faith in Expert.

"The value of the remaining or upland cotton, valued at 11.9 cents per pound, was $174,345,554. The value of the equivalent amount of seed produced would be $33,943,522. Thus the annual value of the producers of the crop to be protected is $217,514,211.

"History of the boll weevil has shown that if this area is not protected its production will be lowered year by year until possibly 50 per cent of the crop is taken, and sometimes as high as 75 per cent."

The zone plan is the only suggestion that has yet been offered that holds out any promise of relief. The cost of the zone plan is undoubtedly great, but when the estimated cost is compared with the estimated saving, the protection of sections not yet reached and the ultimate eradication of the boll weevil throughout the entire cotton belt, the cost does not seem to be prohibitive. In fact, the cost of the zone system will be mild compared with the loss that will be entailed if the boll weevil is not exterminated.

Sea Island Crop Imperiled.

It is practically certain that if the boll weevil spreads to the South Atlantic States the sea island cotton industry will be wiped out entirely. This is by reason of the semi-tropical nature of the islands, the luxuriant foliage which affords a safe harbor and breeding ground for the insects during winter and summer, and the fact that there is neither extreme heat nor extreme cold, both of which are destructive to insect life. It is my deliberate judgment that if the boll weevil reaches the sea islands, there will be no more sea island cotton.

I have spoken of the aggregate loss to the country, but the feature that appeals to me most strongly is the loss to the individual. The country may eventually recover from the damage done to the cotton crop, but the individual cotton farmer whose income is cut in half or destroyed, and whose property is made to depreciate in value, may never recover. The loss to him will be irreparable.

My object in writing this is in order that the people may know just how seriously the cotton crop is being menaced, and that they may discuss and understand the only plan that has been offered, which promises to accomplish the result needed. If any other plan is suggested that promises to accomplish the result at a less cost or in a quicker manner, I will give it my heartiest indorsement.

I will be glad to have the farmers and others of the South consider this problem carefully and write me what they think of it.

WOMAN IS KEY IN STRUGGLE TO UNSEAT SULZER

New York Governor's Foes Call Wife's Illness a Sham and Confession a Ruse.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Apparently deadlocked until the High Court of Impeachment meets September 18 to try the charges of high crimes and misdemeanors against Governor William Sulzer; both the accused Executive and Lieutenant Governor Martin Glynn are busy, the one strengthening his defense, the other preparing to invigorate his attack. In the meantime, the official business of the Empire State is at a standstill.

The government of New York presents a paradox unique to republican government. The State has two Governors, and it has none. Two men maintain they have the right to transact the State's business. No business is being transacted.

And in this struggle for power, the battle seemingly centers about a woman, a woman who has no voice in the government, who is not even allowed to vote under the statutes of the State.

Wife's Illness Questioned.

In addition to the law point raised by the defenders of Sulzer that he can not be impeached or tried for things he did before he took the oath of office, the defense lays greatest stock on the declaration by Sulzer's wife that she, not the Governor, used checks he had received as campaign contributions to speculate on the stock market.

On the other hand, it is learned that the Frawley Committee, which brought to light the charges on which the Governor was impeached, will make her confession the subject of a rigid examination to shatter, if possible, the defense, which will be based largely on her statement.

In the meantime, Mrs. Sulzer, it is reported, is dangerously ill, her nerves broken, it is said, under the strain which she has experienced since the charges were brought against her husband.

Sulzer's enemies even question this illness. They question it so seriously that it, too, is to be investigated. The first step in this investigation,

Both Accused of "Shamming."

The committee believes that "talking too much" consisted of telling stories of Mrs. Sulzer's true condition which were not to the liking of the Governor. An inkling of this purpose was contained in an interview with Assembly Majority Leader Aaron J. Levy, who declared:

"Not only is Mrs. Sulzer's confession a sham, but the pretended illness of Mrs. Sulzer is a sham, of which William Sulzer is the chief perpetrator."

However, should Sulzer be removed from office by Tammany votes with all the judges of the Court of Appeals voting in his favor, he would count it a vindicaton and proof of his assertion that he is being persecuted because he would not turn over the State to Tammany Hall.

'Wild Man's' Haircut Fills Bushel Basket

Tramp That Frightened Woman and Children Gets Cleaning When Arrested.

MILLVILLE, N. J., Aug. 23.—A "wild man" was reported to the police as roaming the woods west of Millville and frightening women and children. Marshal Biggs hastened to the locality and discovered an uncouth man with shaggy beard which reached to his waist and long hair which hung matted over his shoulders.

When taken to the City Hall the man said he was Waldron Furry, of Low Banks, Canada, and that he was simply tramping.

Marshal Biggs acted as barber for the stranger and his hirsute adornment filled a bushel basket.

Pastor Adopts Wife He Had Divorced

Girl Becomes His Ward as Soon as Decree Was Granted by Court.

WOODWARD, OKLA., Aug. 23.—A divorce on unusual grounds has been granted here to B. F. Willett, who is an ordained Baptist minister, and who has served several terms as prosecuting attorney for the county.

Willett gives up his wife that she may become again, in effect, his adopted daughter. Years ago he adopted a little girl who took the name of Clara Willett. He put her in school at Enid, determined to give her the best education obtainable.

Six years ago, when Clara reached the age of 16, Judge Willett made his adopted daughter his bride.

In his petition for divorce the lawyer and former preacher set forth that Mrs. Willett had told him she never could love him as a wife should, but that she could be devoted to him as a daughter.

Girl Wins First Wireless License

She Installs Her Own Apparatus

Miss Alice McConaughy, of Cincinnati, at the key of her wireless instrument.

This girl operates under a license granted under the new wireless laws.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 23.—Miss Alice McConaughy, 13-year-old schoolgirl, is the first person to obtain an operator's license under the new laws regulating wireless telegraphy on the Great Lakes, even if she did get it on something of a fluke.

The license was issued before the inspector discovered that he had failed to notice the age of the applicant, whose father is a national bank examiner of Ohio.

"I did give them the right age," declared Alice. "I sent for the blanks and filled them out myself."

Her work on the demonstration set was satisfactory. The youthful operator installed her own apparatus at home, doing all the wiring and even erecting the 50-foot aerial.

Chester Boynton Sue By Wife for Libel

Echo of Famous Litigation Against Rev. William B. Ayres in New Case.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Helen Theresa Willet Boynton, of Wollaston, Mass., wife of Chester A. Boynton, who some time ago created a sensational church scandal by suing the Rev. William B. Ayres, pastor of the Park and Down Congregational Church, Wollaston, for $10,000 for alienation of Mrs. Boynton's affections, has filed a libel for divorce from her husband on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

Boynton claimed in his suit that the minister had broken up his home after joining the Boynton household as a boarder. Mr. Ayres and Mrs. Boynton in the former's case of defense denied all of the husband's allegations and declared that the whole trouble in the Boynton household sprang out of Boynton's attentions to a choir girl at the Park and Down Church, at which Boynton and his wife were both prominent members.

Boynton lost his suit and was expelled from the Wollaston church. Boynton is now living at Los Angeles.

Has $18 Salary Cut To $10 to Spite Wife

Judge, However, Orders Bookkeeper to Pay Alimony Just the Same.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—G. Lester Pinkham, a bookkeeper of Flushing, sued by his wife for alimony, testified that he was receiving only $10 a week.

His employer, A. M. Ryon, called as a witness, corroborated him.

"Is he worth more money?" asked the Magistrate.

"He certainly is," replied Mr. Ryon, "formerly I paid him $18 a week, but he asked to have his salary reduced to $10."

The Magistrate promptly ordered Pinkham to pay his wife $5 a week and furnish a bond of $520 to guarantee payment.

College Girl Walker Goes 25 Miles a Day

Little Pedestrian Reaches Pittsburg on Jaunt From New York to San Francisco.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 23.—With a jaunty rose-colored hat, Miss Gladys Mason, a petite New Yorker, who is "footing it" from Broadway to the Golden Gate, is on her way West.

The little pedestrian left New York on June 29 and has averaged 25 miles a days. Her high mark for a day is 41 miles, made east or Harrisburg.

Miss Mason is 22, a graduate of Emerson College, Boston. She expects to reach San Francisco Thanksgiving Day.

SAYS WIFE AND MAGICIAN WERE IN DEATH PLOT

Husband Declares That Their Conspiracy Kept Him in Bed Three Years.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Alleging that his wife was madly infatuated with a man of strange, weird, magnetic powers, and that they conspired to incapacitate him by administering mysterious potions, Theodore Speaber, a former undertaker of Chicago, filed suit for divorce from Anna Speaber in the Circuit Court at Laporte, Ind.

Through the machinations of his wife and a man who represented himself as being a magnetic healer, assuming the name of Louis Odillo, Speaber avers that they tried to convince him that he had become a victim of tuberculosis. Odillo then injected a chemical in his ear, he alleges, which brought on an illness that confined him to a hospital bed for three years. This, he charges, was done with the deliberate intention of causing a fatal sickness to set in and get him out of the way.

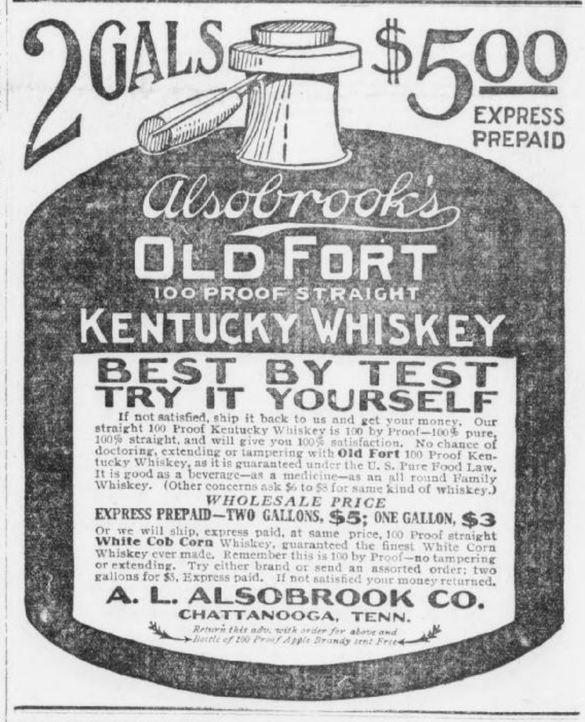
His wife then sold out his undertaking business and their household effects, he charges, for less than one-third of the real value. She then refused to see him after he had been released from the hospital.

Friends of Speaber say that he was at one time an inmate of the Elgin State Insane Asylum. But he was released later as cured.

COUNTY TO GIVE COOK BOOKS TO NEWLYWEDS

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Leaden biscuits and leather-crusted pies and all the other dinner delicacies of Mrs. Newlywed soon may cease to cause physical pain and matrimonial estrangement. Their existence is threatened.

Authorities of Cook County are considering the advisability of giving away official Cook County cook books with all marriage licenses. Robert M. Sweitzer, County Clerk, will present the plan to the County Board.



OTTLEY & KNOWLES

General Insurance

1508 Fourth National Bank Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

SEMI-ANNUAL STATEMENT

For the six months ending June 30, 1913, of the condition of the

Svea Fire and Life Insurance Company (Limited)

OF GOTHENBURG, SWEDEN.

Organized under the laws of the Kingdom of Sweden, made to the Governor of the State of Georgia, in pursuance of the laws of said State. Principal office in United States, 100 William street, New York, N. Y.

I. CAPITAL STOCK.

Whole amount of capital $200,000.00
Amount paid up in cash 200,000.00

II. ASSETS.

Total assets of the company, actual cash market value $1,422,807.39

III. LIABILITIES.

Total liabilities $1,422,807.39

IV. INCOME DURING THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THE YEAR 1913.

Total income actually received during the first six months in cash ..... $ 417,212.42

V. EXPENDITURES DURING THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THE YEAR 1913.

Total expenditures during the first six months of the year in cash ..... $ 379,770.04
Greatest amount insured in any one risk ..... $ 37,500,00
Total amount of insurance outstanding 121,363,329.00

A copy of the act of incorporation, duly certified, is of file in the office of the Insurance Commissioner.

STATE OF NEW YORK—County of New York.

Personally appeared before the undersigned M. L. Duncan, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the United States manager of the Svea Fire and Life Insurance Company, Ltd., and that the foregoing statement is correct and true.

M. L. DUNCAN, United States Manager.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 15th day of August, 1913.

EDWIN F. COREY,
Commissioner for the State of Georgia.

Name of State Agent—DAN B. HARRIS, Atlanta.
Name of Agents at Atlanta—OTTLEY & KNOWLES.

MRS. GODBEE CALM; CALLS SELF A TOOL OF JUSTICE

Divorced Wife of Millen Judge, Who Killed Him and Young Bride, Shows No Remorse. Planned Shooting With Care.

Trouble Alleged to Have Started Twenty Years Ago Over Prisoner's Property—Jurist Is Said to Have Slain Brother-in-Law.

MILLEN, Aug. 23.—Convinced that she has been an instrument of justice, satisfied that the work she had planned for days has been well performed, Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee, in her cell in the Jenkins County jail, to-day calmly and confidently awaits the hour when she will face a court to answer to the law for the slaying of her former husband, Judge Walter M. Godbee, and the bride who had taken the slayer's place in his affections.

Mrs. Godbee saw life pass from the body of the man with whom she had lived for years, and there was no remorse shown on her face. While imprisoned for his slaying she was told that she must also answer to the charge of having murdered his wife. She did not blanch.

She had determined on the death of both. She had planned her deed carefully. She believed that she was justified in resorting to arms to avenge her real or fancied wrongs, and persons who know her best declare she is ready to meet the consequences.

No effort to obtain bail has been made by her. She has waived the right of preliminary trial. She is content to remain in jail until her time of trial comes.

Started Twenty Years Ago.

The attitude of this woman, who has passed her fiftieth year, is one of the most remarkable features of this remarkable tragedy.

Twenty years ago, when Judge Godbee and his second wife found they were mismated, the foundation for the double slaying was laid. The climax came Monday morning in the Millen postoffice, when Judge Godbee was almost instantly killed and his young wife fatally wounded by pistol shots fired by the woman from whom he had been separated by the courts.

Both Judge Godbee and the woman held as his slayer are of prominent Jenkins County families. Godbee had been prominent in politics. He had been married three times.

His first wife died many years ago, but, at his request, he is buried at her side in the cemetery at Waynesboro. Soon after her death he married Miss Edna Perkins, daughter of the late Mills Perkins, and heiress to considerable property.

They lived in apparent happiness until the early nineties, when the first signs of trouble came. At this time Judge Godbee acquired rights to certain properties which belonged to his wife before their marriage. It is charged that the judge afterward sold this property and reinvested the proceeds for his own personal benefit.

Shot Brother, Is Rumor.

Then there is an old story that years ago in Burke County Judge Godbee became involved in a difficulty with a brother of the woman he afterward married, and killed him. He pleaded self-defense and was acquitted.

There is no record, though, that this trouble had any bearing on the marital differences of the couple.

Friction between the couple reached a critical stage ten years ago, when Mrs. Godbee filed suit for divorce in Jenkins County, charging cruelty on the part of her husband.

She declared that the judge had humiliated her before her children, had driven her from his room and had nailed the entrance between the two chambers in which they lived.

Even after this suit was filed there was a reconciliation, but the trouble cropped out again about five years ago, when Mrs. Godbee again entered suit. She was granted absolute divorce, but the judge was successful in resisting her plea for allmony. Mrs. Godbee was also given the custody of her minor child, Miss Sarah Godbee, with whom she lived at the time of the tragedy.

Divorce Didn't End Trouble.

The divorce decree did not end the troubles of the pair, however. Mrs. Godbee always contended that the money on which Judge Godbee was living luxuriously after the decree rightfully belong to her.

It is certain that she was in straitened circumstances at the time of the killing, and it is believed that the sight of another woman enjoying the fortune she believed hers, while she virtually was living in poverty, had no little to do with her determination to take justice into her own hands.

For after the divorce Judge Godbee married again. His third wife was Miss Florence Boyer, 25 years old, of Youngstown, Ohio. After their meeting at the sea shore Judge Godbee continued his courtship at her home, and little more than four months ago he brought her to Millen as his bride.

A crisis was reached. Soon after the judge's return, it is declared, he received demands from his former wife that he contribute to the support of her and her daughter. In these demands she cited the fact that she was entitled to at least part of the income he derived from property which had originally been hers.

Judge Feared for Life.

Intimate friends of the judge say that from that time on he feared, not only for his own life, but for that of his bride.

So alarmed did he become that on receiving a threatening letter Sunday he refused to take his bride to church, although he was a steward of the First Methodist congregation, and requested the pastor, the Rev. E. E. Rose, to come to the Hotel Estelle, where he had apartments, to conduct private prayers.

It is evident that on that same day Mrs. Godbee No. 2 decided on the deed she committed Monday. She got into communication with Marshal P. T. Foote and requested him to call on her at her daughter's home.

There, the marshal says, Mrs. Godbee showed him a .32-caliber pistol.

"Will this kill as quickly as a .38?" was the surprising question he was asked.

"It will if it hits the right spot," he replied. She seemed satisfied with the answer and the interview closed.

This same pistol was in Mrs. Godbee's handbag Monday morning when she went to the Millen postoffice. She knew that each day the judge visited there early in the forenoon to inquire for mail. She was seated writing as he entered the building, accompanied by his young wife. The slyaing followed.

Mrs. Godbee died Tuesday night in the apartments in which she and her husband had lived during the two months of their married life. Mrs. G. W. Boyer, mother of the slain bride, was en route from Williamsport to Millen when her daughter died.

Bulk of Estate to Daughter.

The will of Judge Godbee has been found in the possession of W. B. Wallace, a merchant, and one of the dead man's closest friends. The value of the estate is between $45,000 and $50,000. He bequeathes the bulk of his property and securities to his daughter by his first wife, formerly Miss Maggie Godbee, now married and living in Augusta.

Small portions of the estate are left to Frank Mills and King Godbee, sons of the divorced wife, and Miss Sarah Godbee, also an issue of the second marriage. The divorced wife is not provided for in the instrument. Frank Mills Godbee has been appointed temporary administrator of the estate of Judge Godbee, and A. S. Anderson, temporary administrator of the estate of Mrs. Florence Boyer Godbee.

The third Mrs. Godbee has been buried beside her husband and his first wife in Waynesboro. The condition of Mrs. Boyer, the slain bride's mother, is said to be somewhat improved following her collapse upon first seeing the dead body of her young daughter. Her two sons have come from Pennsylvania and will remain with her until she returns to her home at Williamsport.

Neither of the boys expresses any animosity toward the slayer of their sister and her husband, but both join their mother in hoping that exact justice will be done. Archibald and LeRoy Boyer, the brothers, have not yet decided whether they will attend the trial of the second Mrs. Godbee.

Vincent Astor Reported Captured Name Is Linked With Miss Sands Match Long Predicted by Gossips

Miss Elizabeth Sands and Vincent Astor.

Fiancee-To-Be Measures Up to Rigid Requirements of Young Multi-Millionaire's Mother.

NEWPORT, Aug. 23.—Decidedly the most interesting aftermath of the recent Newport yacht races is the persistent report that Miss Elizabeth Sands, beautiful daughter of Mrs. Frederick Sands, of this city, occupies the place of honor in the affections of Vincent Astor, head of that family and heir to its huge estates.

This report, which has been current in social circles here and in New York, took the form of a practical certainty, according to society's self-constituted soothsayers, when it was noted that in the party taken to the races by young Astor was only one of three girls to whom he paid marked attention last year. That one, of course, was Miss Sands.

It has long been known and greatly gossiped about at afternoon teas and other social functions that young Astor has felt a strong liking for the young beauty ever since they were school children.

Society wiseacres, who have long ago hung up in their mental art galleries a picture of young Astor and Miss Sands as a happy married couple, were not at all discouraged when the young man's affections at times seemed to wander from his childhood's choice.

"Just wait until Vincent's mother gets back to America and resumes her place at the 'helm,'" said these social clairvoyants, "and you'll notice a sudden slump in the fortunes of Elizabeth Sands' attractive rivals."

The prediction was based upon a firm belief that the aristocratic former Ava Willing would see to it that her son, who is now the head of the family and chancellor of its inexhaustible exchequer, should marry someone who measured up in every way to her rigid requirements as to ancestry, connections and social standing.

$175,000 TO BE GIVEN IN PRIZES FOR LIVE STOCK

Harness Race Purses at Panama-Pacific Exposition Will Total $225,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—The greatest live stock show in the history of the world is assured at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in 1915. Following the appropriation by the exposition management of $175,000 for awards for prize-winning live stock, and the news that $225,000 is offered in purses for harness races, each new announcement by Chief of the Department of Live Stock D. O. Lively discloses increasing interest in the forthcoming live stock exhibition.

The live stock department has at its disposal 50 acres of ground which will be devoted to the erection of live stock buildings, a hall for live stock congresses and agricultural meetings, a race track, and an open field upon which will be held drills, international cavalry horse contests, polo contests and exhibitions of the prize live stock of the world.

The live stock buildings will be constructed more from an exhibition standpoint than in keeping with any farm utility plan; the vast rows of barns which have characterized the live stock departments of other expositions will be avoided. Every separate section will be shown under a single roof.

In addition to the $175,000 set aside by the exposition management to be used in cash premiums, more than $45,000 has been offered by organizations representing various phases of the live stock industry. Of the prizes offered by the exposition, $50,000 will be given to horses, $50,000 to cattle, $25,000 to sheep and goats, $25,000 to swine, $12,000 to poultry, pigeons and pet stock, $7,500 to carloads of cattle, sheep and swine, $5,000 for prize-winning dogs and cats.

The department is making arrangements for holding the biggest poultry show on record, and birds from all over the world will compete for international prizes. The pigeons will take their place in the exposition not only as applied to the fancy, but as a utility, and some of the birds will be used as carriers, taking part in races across the continent from San Francisco.

Under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, the exposition will give two harness race meets, one in the spring and one in the fall of 1915, at which there will be offered $225,000 in stakes and purses. With one or two exceptions, the special stakes included in the grand aggregate of $225,000 will be the greatest that ever have been offered.

America's Oldest Church Discovered

Ruins of Centuries-Old House of Worship Off Yucatan Visited by Explorers.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 23.—The ruins of the oldest Christian church in America have been discovered on the Island of Cozumel off Yucatan by Professor Morley and Jesse Nusbaum, of the Sarvard-San Diego expedition.

Cozumel has not been visited by white men for almost a century, and Morley and Nusbaum had thrilling adventures, but deny that its people are cannibals. The scientists were equipped with a moving picture outfit, but in leaving the island for the mainland their canoe was upset and much of the photograph material was spoiled.

While Cozumel is only 30 by 7 miles in extent, it was found extraordinarily rich in monumental and architectural remains. It was here that Cortez had a fierce battle with the natives and erected what is declared to have been the first Christian church in America.

Repeats His Wedding Date as Punishment

Husband Who Told Court He Wished to Forget Marriage Has New Litany.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 23.—"June 14 1887," Philip Leborski will have to repeat ten times a day for the next 60 days in order to keep out of the house of correction, by sentence pronounced upon him by District Court Judge Elsner.

Leborski, who is a wealthy real estate owner, was arrested when a patrolman found him shaking his fist and swearing at his wife, while she was perched on the gable of their residence.

In the trial Leborski told the Court he was trying to forget he was married and that he had succeeded in forgetting the date of the ceremony. The Court informed him that no man had a right to forget such a date and then ordered his case continued 60 days and told Leborski to recite the date of the wedding ten times daily or he would have to go to jail. Leborski started his recitations before he was out of the courtroom and his wife was doing the counting.

Crusade Started on Big Sunday Dinners

Domestic Science Teachers of Kansas Schools Are Enlisted in The Campaign.

TOPEKA, KANS., Aug. 23.—The custom and the physical requirements that a man must rest at least one day in seven have brought about a campaign in Kansas against the big Sunday dinners that have so long been the delight of the average man. The domestic science teachers of the schools have enlisted the aid of domestic science students throughout the State and the big Sunday dinner is going the way of the hard biscuit and the underdone meat in the Kansas homes.

The campaign was started a year ago at the University of Kansas, but it now has the support of every high school and college with domestic science courses.

Maryland Jews to Raise Shaft to Friend

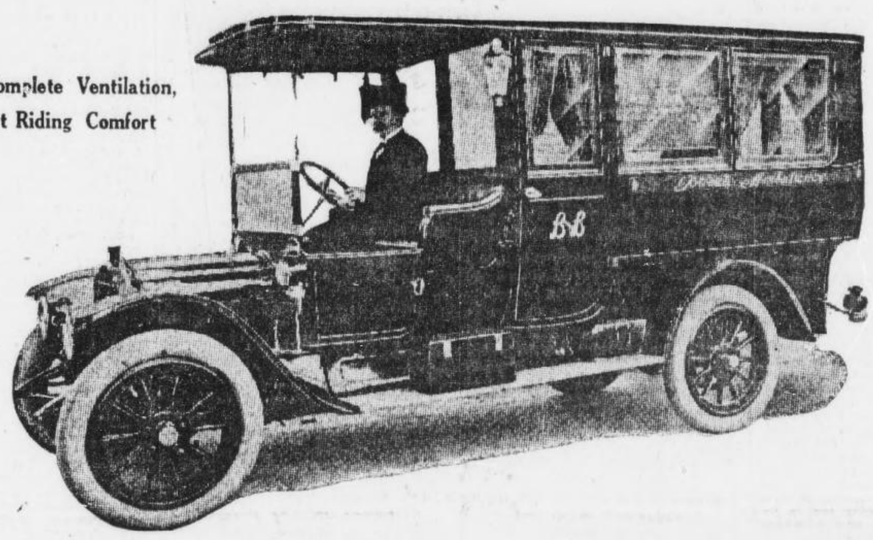
Thomas Kennedy, Who Passed Law Giving Them Right to Hold Office, To Be Honored.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., Aug. 23.—Mendes Cohen, of Baltimore, a grand-nephew of one of the first Jews elected to office in the State of Maryland, will act as treasurer of the fund to be raised to build a monument to Thomas Kennedy, author of the law passed in 1826 that gave Jews the right to hold office.

Kennedy was famous in several other respects than as champion of the cause of political equality, for which he fought as a member of the Legislature eight years. He wrote many ballads that aroused the martial ardor of his fellow citizens in the days preceding the War of 1812.

Barclay & Brandon S-E-R-V-I-C-E

Most Complete Ventilation, Fullest Riding Comfort



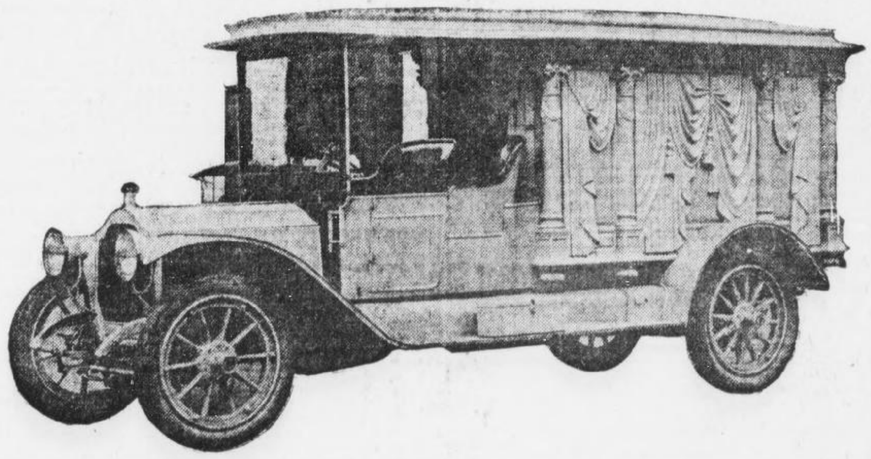
Equipment — Electric Fan, Running Hot and Cold Water, Ice Water, Steam Heat

This Picture Shows the Very Finest and Best Equipped Ambulance in the Entire South

The Barclay & Brandon PRIVATE AMBULANCE is positively the very last word in up-to-date Ambulances.

Nothing could be more complete—not a single thing can be suggested that might tend to give further and more complete comfort to the patient, that is not already a part of its wonderful equipment.

This most complete Ambulance is at your immediate service at all times, whether you live in Atlanta or suburbs. For white people only.



BARCLAY & BRANDON Service as Funeral Directors is Widely Known for Its Dignity and Exclusiveness

One very important point is that Barclay & Brandon alone can furnish you with a COMPLETE AUTOMOBILE FUNERAL, as they have just purchased a $7,000 Packard Hearse, the only Auto Hearse in the State. Choice of either auto or horse-drawn hearse.

In time of bereavement it is assuring at least to know that there is some one to whom you can intrust all the details of a funeral service, secure in the knowledge that every requisite will be carefully attended to.

This you may expect AT ALL TIMES from

BARCLAY & BRANDON

246 Ivy Street, Corner of Baker Phones Bell, Ivy 788, Ivy 168. Atlanta, 788

Athens — Latest News of North Georgia — Rome

ATHENS JUMPS TO TOP NOTCH IN BUILDINGS

Figures for Year To Be $1,250,000—Nine-Story Structure Is Ready.

ATHENS, Aug. 23.—The classic city of Athens, once considered an educational community only, is fast assuming an aspect that will be as commercial as academic, with tall business buildings fast going up. A few years ago the tallest building here was about four stories, and at present there is a handsome seven-story structure completed and a $400,000, nine-story structure which will be ready for occupancy about October 1.

Building permits for the year will probably total $1,250,000, which is as good a record in proportion to population as Atlanta's banner year, and perhaps a little better. The million and a quarter will be the highest that Athens has yet attained.

Commerce Chamber Active.

The Chamber of Commerce is concentrating its efforts along constructive lines, and as evidence of what the city is doing points to new industries that have located here in recent months.

Among the new plants is that of the Athens Pottery Company, which, after an investigation of raw material supply in various parts of the country, located in Athens because of the high quality and large quantity of clays in this section. This plant came from East Liverpool, Ohio, which is one of the old pottery centers of the country. There are within nineteen miles of Athens white silica clay deposits that are well suited for the manufacture of high-class clay products, and efforts are being made to have manufacturers locate plants to utilize this valuable raw material.

The Allen-Moss Tannery Company also was secured by the Chamber of Commerce. This plant is costing $50,000, and will manufacture sole leather and by-products of soap and glue.

The Georgia Plow and Implement Company, which has been in operation about seven months, has a new plant and equipment costing about $10,000, including cupola, woodworking and ironworking shops and foundry and machine rooms.

Extensive Building Operations.

Prominent among buildings in course of erection is the Holman Building, 65 by 200 feet, and nine stories in height. This structure is of reinforced concrete, with an exterior of dark red tapestry brick. Stores will be located on the first floor and offices above, with a ballroom on the top floor. The cost will be $400,000. C. M. Strahan, of Athens, is the architect, and the H. J. Carr Construction Company, of Atlanta, the builders. This building is very near completion, and will be ready for occupancy about the middle of September or first of October.

This is the second office building to be erected in Athens. The other is the Southern Mutual Insurance Company's building, seven stories in height. Office space in both of the buildings is fully taken.

Athens is also to have a new Y. M. C. A. building to cost, complete, about $140,000. It will be of fireproof construction. The architects are Shattuck & Hussey, of Chicago. The Y. W. C. A. also has a new building, costing $35,000.

Demand for Office Space.

James Smith is erecting a new structure three stories in height, 125 by 225 feet. This will be of fireproof construction, the exterior of white brick and ornamental terra cotta trimmings.

There will be five storerooms on the ground floor, and these storerooms have already been leased for long terms, notwithstanding the fact that the building will not be completed until near the middle of September. J. W. Barnett, of Athens, is the architect, and the L. C. Smith Construction Company, of Athens, is the builder.

The Athens firm of H. T. Huggins & Son is building a four-story store building. This building is being finished in light colored brick and is quite an addition to the business district.

Atlantan Is Architect.

The new county courthouse, designed by A. Ten Eyck Brown, of Atlanta, will cost $150,000. This building is to be of reinforced concrete, with exterior of red brick and stone trimmings. It will be four stories high, and one of its interesting features is that the county jail will be located on the top floor. This will replace the structure at Prince avenue and Hill street, known to thousands of university men over the State.

The Athens Ice Company, a new industry for Athens, has just completed its plant at a cost of $30,000.

Several new churches are included in the building activities, among them being a Catholic church costing $20,000, a Baptist tabernacle costing $10,000 and a Presbyterian church costing over $25,000.

Costly New Residences.

Quite a number of new residences are being built, prominent among them being one for W. T. Bryan of fireproof construction, costing over $30,000, and a number of small residences being erected by John E. Talmadge to cost $75,000.

Athens streets are exceptionally well paved, and in the last ten years the city has spent $300,000 in this work, and not long ago voted $75,000 additional for further street improvement. The expenditure of this amount is now under way, and it is conceded that when the work is completed Athens will be one of the best paved cities in the South.

The city has also voted $100,000 for new schools, $25,000 being for a new building and $27,000 for asite for a modern high school, the remainder to be used for improvements and additions to established schools. With this expenditure Athens can boast of one of the most up-to-date city school systems in the State.

The Athens Gas Light and Fuel Company has recently expended about $30,000 in laying new gas mains throughout the city.

Miss Ruby Gillen

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Gillen, of Athens, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. S. D. Fambrough, at Bishop. Miss Gillen is a 1913 graduate of the State Normal School at Athens.

Auto Traded for Horse Wouldn't Go

Doctor Calls on Other Man to Swap Back, and He Says Was Cheated Again.

ROME, GA., Aug. 23.—Dr. W. A. Wright's fondness for automobiles was the cause of trouble with A. W. Williman, of Cave Spring, which resulted in the arrest of the latter on a warrant charging him with cheating and swindling.

Dr. Wright has discovered that an automobile, which looks as good as new standing still, easily could be not worth anything running. It is alleged that William traded an automobile to the doctor which, after the deal, refused to move.

A horse and buggy was given in exchange. When the physician called upon Filliman to trade back, he was quite willing, but had sold the horse. He, however, agreed to give him another. This horse was defective, Dr. Wright alleges. The case will be aired in the September term of the City Court.

TICK ERADICATION WORK IS PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Petty thievery has annoyed housekeepers here during the last week, for all articles of food possess an irresistible attraction to the depredators.

Pantries have been raided of flour, meal, potatoes, etc., while fresh meats, vegetables, butter and eggs have been taken from refrigerators. Many have been forced to worry through breakfast without bread. The citizens are becoming desperate.

TIFT COUNTY VETERANS TO HOLD ENCAMPMENT

TIFTON, Aug. 23.—The annual encampment of the Tift County Camp, U. C. V., will be held at Murrow Springs, four miles west of Tifton, on Little River, September 3.

Arrangements will also be made for holding a big barbecue on September 4, in which the Charlotte Carson Chapter, U. D. C., of Tifton, and the Sons of Veterans will assist the veterans.

ASKS $5,000 DAMAGES FOR INJURIES IN MILL

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—Because of alleged injuries Charles Wiggins claims to have sustained while employed by the Swift Manufacturing Company of Columbus, on July 7, he has brought suit against the mills for $5,000. He claims that he has been unable to earn a livelihood since he received his injuries.

LUMBER-LADEN SHIP SAILS.

PENSACOLA, Aug. 23.—The steamship Etolia has sailed for Buenos Ayres, loaded with 2,640,000 feet of pitch pine lumber. It also took on 847 tons of bunker coal in this port.

Begin Married Life With 24 Chlidren

Moultrie Bride and Bridegroom Had Even Dozen Each.

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—It is a very rare thing for newlyweds to begin keeping house with 24 children to make things lively from the first day of married bliss, yet this was the experience of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Truit, who were recently made man and wife by Justice J. J. Serrell in the Lee district of this County.

The bride was Mrs. M. J. Flowers, a widow with twelve children, and Mr. Truit, whose first wife has been dead for some time leaving him with an even dozen motherless children. Both of the participants in the recent wedding were bereaved about the same time and, living in the same community, they naturally turned ot one another for comfort, and finally agreed that the best thing to do was to marry.

FOOD THIEVES HARASS RESIDENTS OF DALTON

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The report made by E. M. Nighbert, inspector in charge of the tick eradication work, shows rapid progress the last month. Twelve dipping vats are in operation. There are now 372 herds, containing 2,347 cattle, free of ticks. The herds under local quarantine number 175 and contain 1,224 cattle.

The county has appropriated money to assist in the work, and it is believed the quarantine will be raised from this county by next year at the latest.

ALBANY GETS ANOTHER LARGE OIL COMPANY

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—Present indications are that another large oil company will make Albany a distributing center in the near future. N. H. Cook, of Atlanta, district superintendent of the Texas Oil Company, one of the largest of the independent companies, has looked over the situation here with a view of locating a distributing plant for the company.

BAPTIST ASSOCIATION TO MEET IN COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—The Columbus Baptist Association will meet in its annual session on Wednesday after the third Sunday in September in Manchester. Dr. B. W. Bussey, the moderator, will preach the doctrinal sermon. There are more than 30 churches in the association.

FIRST BALE BRINGS 14 1-4 CTS.

ELBERTON, Aug. 23.—G. P. Hall sold the first bale of cotton here. It was bought by T. O. Tabor & Son for 14 1-4 cents per pound, and it weighed 466 pounds. It was classed as strict middling.

ATHENS MAYOR URGED TO RUN FOR 3D TERM

H. J. Rowe Petitioned by Hundreds of Citizens to Enter Race Again.

ATHENS, Aug. 23.—Despite the fact that he has already served two terms as mayor of Athens, H. J. Rowe, who is now at the head of the city government, is being urged strongly by his hundreds of friends here to enter the race again this fall. A petition is being circulated freely by his friends and many are signing it, but as yet the Mayor has kept quiet as to his decision, and it will probably be several days before he gives out a statement as to whether he will stand for re-election again.

A bill providing a commission form of government for Athens passed by the general assembly is to be voted on by the people this fall and what bearing this will have on the mayor's race is still problematical.

Bumper Cotton Crop In Albany District

Several Hundred Bales Have Already Been Received in Market.

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—That about 50 per cent of the cotton in the Albany territory is from ten to fifteen days earlier than last year is the estimate of well-informed cotton men in Albany. The fact that Albany has received several hundred bales already, not counting that moved direct to the compress, is considered evidence that its estimate is approximately correct.

Last year, in addition to making a poor cotton crop, the farmers had no forage and have had to buy high-priced feed for eight months. While the acreage in feed crops this year is not much greater than it was last, the farmers have paid more attention to its cultivation, therefore making a better crop. With a bumper cotton crop and plenty of feed for their stock, the farmers expect a season of prosperity.

COUPLE REWEDS AFTER HAVING BEEN DIVORCED

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—After living together for twenty years and having several children born to them, Mrs. Lizzie Cooper sued Thomas Cooper for divorce, which was granted. Then he sued her for the amount of earnings, claimed as $1,800 in value, during this twenty years, she having possession of it all, and the husband not a penny.

The Supreme Court this week granted him a half interest. The wife claimed she had paid out $1,000 in fines for selling whisky, etc., but admitted she had also sold liquor. The two have become reconciled and have again married.

TWO CRAZY MEN ENGAGE IN FIGHT IN HALL JAIL

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Two crazy men, allowed the freedom of the hallway in the Hall County jail here, became engaged in a fight, and J. C. Johnson was choked and walloped severely. W. C. Stephens, whose form of mental derangement is on the order of melancholia.

Screams for help and the sound of blows were heard and a large number in the neighborhood of the prison were attracted. Johnson was beat up and bruised considerably by Stephens.

COTTON RECEIPTS SHOW DECLINE AT COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—Taking the position that Columbus has suffered the past few years because her cotton receipts have fallen off materially, the Columbus Board of Trade has inaugurated a campaign for the purpose of bringing more cotton to this city. Last year an effort was made to stem the tide of cotton going elsewhere by placing buyers on the streets, and while it had some effect, it did not counteract all the damage that has been done. An effort will be put forth to make the cotton market one of the most attractive in the State.

NEGRO SLAYER IS GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE AT ALBANY

ALBANY, Aug. 23.—In Superior Court of Baker County, which convened at Newton this week, several cases were tried. Simon Johnson, a negro, who killed his stepson on the Grant place in July, was found guilty and given a life sentence. Will Bodiford, a negro, was found guilty of attacking a negro girl and sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary. Jake Rhoades was found guilty of violating the prohibition law and given a six months' sentence or a fine of $200.

CITY RESERVOIR TURNED INTO A SWIMMING POOL

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—Those of Cordele who like an occasional dip into the water to alleviate the suffering of the summer heat probably will have their desires satisfied during this season of next year.

It is proposed to convert the reservoir at the old waterworks station into a swimming pool when the new plant is constructed.

COLQUITT LIKELY TO VOTE $400,000 BONDS FOR ROADS

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—A bond issue of $400,000 soon will be submitted to the voters of Colquitt County. The money is for public roads. Prominent politicians are firm in the belief that the issue will carry.

MASONS FROM 3 COUNTIES TO MEET AT ETON

Members of Order in Whitfield, Murray and Catoosa to Hold Convention Thursday.

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Masons of three counties—Whitfield, Murray and Catoosa—will gather at Eton, in Murray County, next Thursday for the annual meeting of the Tri-County Masonic Convention, Dr. S. A. Brown, worshipful master of the organization, having issued the formal call.

The day will be devoted to speaking and other matters of interest, to be featured at noon by a big picnic dinner. It is expected that several of the Grand Lodge officers will be in attendance, and plans are being made to entertain hundreds of visiting Masons.

The elective officers of the convention are as follows: Dr. S. A. Brown, Eton, worshipful master; H. B. Farrar, Dalton, senior warden; F. J. Vining, Dawnville, junior warden; W. M. Sapp, Dalton, secretary and treasurer.

Invitations have been extended to neighboring Masonic lodges to meet here Monday, when the grand master of the State Grand Lodge, Robert L. Colding, of Savannah, will be the guest of Dalton Masons. Plans are being made to entertain a large number of visitors at the afternoon and evening receptions for the distinguished visitor.

Columbus Fights For Better Service

Board of Trade Wants Central of Georgia to Put on More Passenger Trains.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23.—The Columbus Board of Trade has inaugurated a campaign to secure better passenger service over the Central of Georgia to points east and west from Columbus, it being claimed that the service that is now being given by the road is not satisfactory.

The Board of Trade is anxious to have the Central put on an additional train or two, or to have trains that come to the city reach Columbus in time to allow the people coming to the city an opportunity to do their shopping and return home if they wish in the afternoon of the same day. The trade organization has the backing of practically every business man in the city.

SEABOARD CONDUCTOR GIVEN $10,000 DAMAGES

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—After a strongly contested trial, both sides being represented by able counsel, a verdict was returned yesterday afternoon in Crisp Superior Court for $10,000 in favor of W. B. McMichael, of Jackson, against the Seaboard Railroad Company. McMichael had been in the employ of the road as a freight conductor and in an accident near Birmingham on the Atlanta and Birmingham division he lost a leg. He entered suit for $25,000 and the case was brought to this court for trial under the Federal employees' liability act.

NEW SCHOLARSHIP AT WOODBERRY SCHOOL

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Rosa Woodberry, of Atlanta, has notified the Thomasville Study Class that she has given a scholarship in her school in Atlanta to the class to be awarded by them to any deserving girl that they may select.

This action on the part of Miss Woodberry is appreciated by the members of the class, as it will afford advantages to some deserving girl here who is not able otherwise to have them. It is not known yet who has been selected for the place, but the class has the matter under advisement.

CAMILLA TO VOTE ON SCHOOL TAX SEPT. 30

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—September 30 has been set by the City Council of Camilla as the date for holding an election to ratify the schol tax bill for that town recently passed by the Legislature.

The election will be held under the same rules as elections for members of the General Assembly and the same qualifications will be required in registering. It is probable the opening of the school of Camilla will be deferred somewhat on account of this election.

RULES FOR PRIZES AT FAIR DECIDED UPON

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—The Directors of the Thomas County Fair to be held here this fall have received from the committee in charge the rules and regulations for measuring all crops to be exhibited for premiums and they will be followed closely.

J. Willis Moore has been named general director and will measure all acres and crops free of charge. It is said all indications point to the finest exhibit at this fair that has been known since it was organized.

THOMAS COUNTY FARMER EXHIBITS PRIZE CORN EAR

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—J. P. Cary, residing near Coolidge, had on exhibition here this week some corn grown by himself which is an example of what Thomas County can do in that line. One ear of this corn weighed two pounds and nine ounces and when shelled the grains filled a quart measure. The ear was twelve inches long.

Mr. Cary has a half acre of this corn which he will exhibit at the fair here this fall. He thinks his chances for first premium are fine.

Cupid Hits Old Mark; Children Wed, Too

One Pair Experienced in Matrimony, While Other Had to Run Away.

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The northern part of the county was this week the scene of two weddings of interest, owing to the wide difference in age of the couples, together with their popularity.

At Cohutta the Rev. W. C. Haddock and Mrs. Mary Ann Hartley were married. The wedding proved "Uncle Billy" Haddock's fourth venture, while his bride, Mrs. Hartley, was marrying for the third time. The Rev. J. C. Parrott performed the ceremony.

On the same date Miss Nola Starks, of Concord, became the wife of William Crain, of Beaverdale, the ceremony being performed by 'Squire J. D. Brackett. Mrs. Crain is 14 and her husband is just two years her senior.

While the wedding of Miss Starks and Mr. Crain was a runaway match, witnessed by only a few intimate friends and coming as a distinct surprise, there were fully 100 friends assembled to witness the Hartley-Haddock nuptials.

Thomas Farmers Can Own Products

Vegetables Put Up at Home Find Ready Sale in Thomasville Market.

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 23.—Thomas County canned vegetables are on sale here at many of the grocery stores and are proving very popular.

There were more vegetables canned in this county this year than was ever known before, and it has been found to be quite a profitable business, the stores in Thomasville taking them readily and paying the highest market price for them.

Tomatoes especially have been canned in large quantities, and they are unusualy fine, better than the best quality bought heretofore by the merchants from wholesale houses in the North.

The advantage of the home product is that the tomatoes are gathered fresh from the vines and canned before they have had time to get old or damaged.

One farmer, who recently sold about 2,000 cans, said that he had received many compliments in regard to their quality by those who had used them.

GRIFFIN AFTER MEETING OF HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Through its secretary, W. B. Royster, the new Griffin Board of Trade has extended an urgent invitation for the State Horticultural Society to appoint this city as its place of meeting in 1914. The invitation is heartily indorsed by the Georgia Experiment Station. This is the first invitation sent out by the newly organized Board of Trade.

Another move by the board is to make Griffin the city beautiful. To this end a committee has been appointed to employ a civil engineer to look over the situation and make suggestions for improvements.

DALTON PRESIDING ELDER BEGINS FINAL ROUND

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Presiding Elder W. T. Irvine, of the Dalton District, to-day began his final round, and will visit the thirty-seven churches in the district before the annual meeting of the North Georgia Methodist Conference.

For society news of the South see page 10 of this section and the Society Section.

SUNBURNT SKINS NEED

CUTICURA SOAP

And Cuticura Ointment. For heat rashes, itchings, sunburn, wind irritations, redness and roughness of the face and hands, Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, has no rivals worth mentioning. No others do so much for the complexion, hair and hands.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address post-card "Cuticura," Dept. 13G, Boston.

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

PLANS NATIONAL MERCHANTS AND FARMERS' UNION

Louis S. Daniel, of Rome, Boosts Organization Similar to American Federation of Labor.

ROME, Aug. 23.—The organization of a National Farmers and Merchants' Co-operative Association for the mutual benefit is the plan conceived by Louis Spencer Daniel, the well-known booster and director of the local association and former director of the Rome Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

Daniel states that he is sure of the success of the national organization. He has already received hundreds of letters from all parts of the country.

The National Farmers and Merchants' Association would have an organization similar to that of the American Federation of Labor and Farmers' Union that would be absolutely free from politics.

WOMAN'S MISSION UNION CONVENES IN GAINESVILLE

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union, auxiliary to the Chattahoochee Baptist Association, was in session at the First Baptist Church here several days the past week, bringing a number of prominent women church workers to this city. It is said that the work of this union has become one of the most important in the denomination.

HALL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION TO MEET

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—One hundred delegates representing 65 Sunday schools of Hall County will come together in an interdenominational association, the first annual session to convene in this city next Tuesday morning for a two days' session. Hammond Johnson is county president, Henry H. Estes county secretary, and J. T. Telford, treasurer.

FLAG AND BIBLE ARE PRESENTED TO SCHOOL

DALTON, Aug. 23.—The Patriotic Order Sons of America of Dalton yesterday afternoon gave to the Dug Gap School a handsome American flag and a Bible.

Appropriate exercises marked the flag raising, Senator M. C. Tarver and the Hon. T. R. Ridley being among the speakers.

REVIVAL AT ELBERTON.

ELBERTON, Aug. 23.—The Rev. R. C. Cleckler, pastor, is conducting a series of meetings at the First Methodist Church. P. M. Boyd, of Nashville, is in charge of the singing.

$151,000 SUIT FILED TO TEST OLD STATE LAW

Former Dublin Merchant Defendant in Case Brought by Arthur H. Codington, of Macon.

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—An unusual suit to test the validity of an old statute which has been codified in the Georgia laws since 1837 and which is said to be the first suit of its kind ever filed in the State, has been filed here against G. A. Baynard, a former merchant of Dublin, by Arthur H. Codington, of Macon, for the sum of $151,000.

The law upon which the suit is based says that no business partnership may insert in their firm name the name of any individual not actually a co-partner nor continue in such firm the name of a retired partner, under the penalty of $100 a day for each day the name is so used. In his suit Codington alleges that Baynard indorsed certain notes with an old firm name of G. A. Baynard & Son and secured credit in this manner after the original partner had retired from business.

The case has excited a good deal of interest here, and much discussion as to whether the old statute can be enforced and Baynard be made liable for the full amount of $151,000 or that the statute can not be enforced now. It is said that Codington has filed the suit more to test the validity of the law than for any other purpose, and does not think that he has been damaged to the extent of the sum named.

CONFEREDATE MEMORIAL STANDS ON FEDERAL LAND

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—The only monument to a Confederate soldier which has been erected upon Federal grounds, except in national military parks, is that to be unveiled here August 27. It stands on the postoffice building square. This memorial also bears the distinction of being the first monument to a Confederate soldier erected by Children of the Confederacy. It is the monument to Colonel C. C. Sanders. Miss Katherine Dozier will present the monument to the chapter. There will be interesting exercises and addresses.

FRONT END OF MULE WAS "LOADED;" TALLEY IS KICKED

DALTON, Aug. 23.—Not dreaming that the front end of a Georgia mule could be "loaded," Sam Talley, of Harmony, came near being seriously injured when his mule jumped at him and struck him down with his fore feet. Mr. Talley rolled out of reach of the mule after suffering a number of severe bruises.

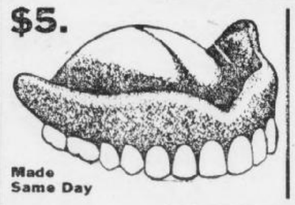
ALL DENTAL WORK GUARANTEED AT

DR. E. G. GRIFFIN'S

GATE CITY DENTAL ROOMS

24 1-2 Whitehall St. Phone M. 1708 — Over Brown & Allen's Hours: 8-6; Sundays 9-1

$5.



Made Same Day

OUR PRICES:

Bridge Work $4
Gold Crown $4
Gold Filling $1
Amalgam Filling .. 50c Up
Teeth Cleaned . $1 Up

Our guarantee means something. It is backed by our absolute responsibility and by 23 years of successful practice.

PAY ME FOR CURES ONLY

If you have been taking treatment for weeks and months and paying out your hard earned money without being cured, don't you think it is high time to accept DR. HUGHES' GRAND OFFER? You will certainly not be out a cent more money if not cured. Consultation and Examination are Free for the next thirty days.

If I decide that your condition will not yield readily to my treatment, I will be honest with you and tell you so, and not accept your money under a promise of a cure.

My treatment will positively cure or I will make you no charge for the following diseases:

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND URINARY TROUBLE, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, RUPTURE, ULCERS AND SKIN DISEASES CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

Eczema, Rheumatism, Catarrhal Affections, Piles and Fistula and all Nervous, Chronic and Private Diseases of Men and Women.

Newly contracted and chronic Cases of Burning, Itching and Inflammation stopped in 24 hours. I am against high and extortionate fees charged by some physicians and specialists. My fees are reasonable and no more than you are willing to pay for a cure. All medicines, the surest and best of drugs, are supplied from my own private laboratory. OUT-OF-TOWN MEN VISITING THE CITY, consult me at once upon arrival, and maybe you can be cured before returning home. Many cases can be cured in one or two visits.

CALL OR WRITE—No detention from business. Treatment and advice confidential. Hours 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. Sundays, 9 to 1. If you can't call, write and give me full description of your case in your own words. A complete consultation costs you nothing, and if I can help you I will.

DR. HUGHES, Opposite Third National Bank, 16 1-2 North Broad Street, Atlanta, Ga.

LATEST NEWS OF MIDDLE GEORGIA

3 CANDIDATES SEEKING TO BE MACON MAYOR

Miller, Dasher and Smith Promise Live Campaign in Central City. Outcome Very Uncertain.

MACON, Aug. 23.—Wallace Miller, Arthur L. Dasher or Bridges Smith will be the next Mayor of Macon. The entry of Mr. Miller a week ago assured a spirited three-cornered contest, the outcome of which it will be hard for anyone to forecast.

Mr. Dasher announced his candidacy eight months ago, running on an independent platform. Mr. Smith is the candidate of the administration faction. Mr. Miller heads a young men's ticket. The campaign has just opened, but it will become exceedingly active and interesting with the announcement this week of the Aldermanic tickets.

Mr. Dasher proposes to make a vigorous speaking campaign. Mr. Smith, on the other hand, will not make a speech or write a card, according to his present intention. He will simply depend upon his record and his friends for election. Mr. Miller will likely make a number of addresses setting forth his views on municipal questions.

Mr. Dasher has already begun his speaking schedule, having addressed various meetings of the laboring men.

Mr. Dasher is one of Macon's best-known lawyers. His practice is large and lucrative. Until elected Alderman two years ago, he had never held, or asked for, political office. In Council he took such a prominent stand on leading issues that he leaped into the limelight, and before he had served a year he was freely asked to run for Mayor. He announced last December. Eight years ago Mr. Dasher was president of the Chamber of Commerce, and that organization, under his administration, made a splendid record. Previously he had been chairman of the board of directors, and was for a number of years one of the recognized leaders of the trade body. He is a married man, with a large family. His eldest son, Arthur L., Jr., is associated with him in the practice of law.

Bridges Smith is perhaps as widely known as any Macon citizen. Since 1888, with the exception of two years, 1908 and 1909, he has been connected with the city government. In 1888 he was elected City Clerk, under Mayor Daisy Price. He served in that capacity until 1899, when Mayor Price died in office, shortly after being re-elected. Mr. Smith was then chosen as his successor, and he stayed in office until 1908, when he voluntarily retired. His friend and Alderman, John T. Moore, then ran against Judge A. L. Miller, and the latter was elected. At the ensuing election, Mr. Moore was again a candidate, and this time he beat Judge Miller. Mr. Moore held office two years, and was opposed at the expiration of his first term by Alderman N. I. Brunner, whom he defeated. A charter provision, which restricts a Mayor to two terms, debars him from running again.

Mr. Smith is avowedly the candidate for the administration, and in his announcement he declared his intention of continuing the policies of the Moore administration.

Before entering politics, Mr. Smith was a newspaper reporter, and during his quarter of a cenutry in public life, he has maintained a newspaper association. He writes special articles and local news for the Macon Telegraph. He has never been defeated for office. Mr. Smith is 66 years of age, though very active in both mind and body.

Mr. Miller, if elected Mayor, will be the youngest executive this city has ever had. He is only 28 years old. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia. He began the practice of law here, but later became manager of a provision house. Two years ago he resumed law, announced his candidacy for the Legislature, and was elected, although it took a recount of the ballots to establish his victory.

It was Mr. Miller's father, Judge A. L. Miller, who served as Mayor of Macon four years ago, defeating John T. Moore, who in turn defeated him. However, Wallace Miller is not running on his father's strength, as the elder Miller is opposed to his son's present political venture. He will get his father's support, however.

Mr. Miller's candidacy was first suggested two weeks ago, but in a very few days the boom became so substantial that Mr. Miller could not resist.

Waycross Council Asked to Explain

Claimed Number of Transactions Were In Violation of City Charter.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Is became known to-day that some time during September City Council would be requested for information of a number of transactions which have taken place within the past eighteen months, many of the alleged to have been in direct violation of the city charter. It is further alleged that a city employee while drawing his full time salary from the city looked after other work for which he was amply paid.

No namese have been disclosed as yet, and it is not known who will be mentioned when the request reaches Council. Some members of Council are inclined to demand an explanation of the published reports, but have not done so.

DENIES DISCRIMINATION CLAIMED BY SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—J. C. Whitney, president of the Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company, is in Savannah for a conference with the directors of the Board of Trade, to go over the allegations of discrimination against Savannah in favor of Jacksonville. Whitney asserted that there was no discrimination against Savannah. Except in a very few instances, he said, the freight rates to Jacksonville from Baltimore and other points in the North are higher than the rates to Savannah.

Dublin to Hold Big Agricultural Fair

Entire Twelfth Congressional District Will be Asked to Participate.

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—Plans are well under way for holding a large fair in Dublin this year, to be known as the Twelfth District Agricultural Fair, in which exhibits will be open to all of the counties in the Twelfth Congressional District, of which there are thirteen. The dates have been set at October 14 to 17, inclusive, the week previous to the State fair.

At a meeting held here this week organization of the corporation to handle the show was effected and the officers elected, as follows: President, W. B. Rice; vice presidents, Izzie Bashinski and M. S. Jones; secretary and treasurer, N. G. Bartlett.

The board of directors is as follows: W. B. Rice, M. S. Jones, N. G. Bartlett, Izzie Bashinski, T. W. Hooks, Frank Lawson, F. N. Watkins, H. E. Ray and H. G. Stevens.

Governor John M. Slaton will be invited to make an address during the fair, along with State School Superintendent M. L. Brittain and other prominent men of the State. A delegation of Dublin citizens will go to Atlanta Tuesday for the purpose of extending an invitation to Governor Slaton personally to come down and make an address during the fair.

Runs Small Farm In Heart of Griffin

Young Man Makes Large Yield of Irish Potatoes and Corn.

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—James C. Nutt, one of Griffin's best-known young men, is running a small farm in the heart of the city, and is making good at it. On a plot of land adjoining the cemetery, Nutt planted four acres of Irish cobbler potatoes. So many Irish potatoes in one field had never been seen in this section before.

For some time now the crop has been in process of harvesting. Up to date only a portion of the crop has been disposed of, but 400 bushels of the potatoes have been sold at a price ranging from 80 cents to $1 per bushel.

To increase the returns from the land, Nutt has planted rows of corn between the rows of potatoes, and the corn is now over shoulder high. The corn gives promise of making not less than 25 bushels to the acre, and if season is propitious, a good deal more.

JUDGE DANIEL TOO ILL TO PRESIDE OVER COURTS

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Judge R. T. Daniel, of the Flint River Circuit, who was so ill last week that he had to adjourn the August term of Spalding Superior Court, and who has not been able to attend the Butts County Court this week, continues quite ill at his residence here on Poplar street. He will not be able to preside over the Monroe Superior Court, which is to convene at Forsyth Monday.

Judge H. A. Matthews, of Macon, presided over the Butts court for Judge Daniel, and it is likely that he again will preside for ihm next week.

RURAL MAIL CARRIERS TO MEET AT MILLEDGEVILLE

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—The rural mail carriers for the Tenth Congressional District will meet here on Monday, September 1.

A barbecue dinner will be served to the visiting carriers, and plans are being perfected to make their visit an enjoyable one. The following program has been arranged: Prayer by the Rev. Harold Major. Address of welcome by Mayor M. S. Bell and Postmaster R. B. Moore. The response will be made by G. D. Braddock, the president of the association.

BIG BUILDING BOOM CONTINUES IN DUBLIN

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—There are in Dublin at this time in course of erection one six-story building, two three-story buildings five large warehouses and one large livery stable, which will be the largest in any city in this section of the State. The building boom has held up unusually well in the city this year despite the dull times that have been experienced in some other cities. These buildings are in addition to a large number of residences erected this year, also.

DUBLIN'S NEW THEATER TO OPEN SEPTEMBER 1

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—Dublin's new theater, "The Bertha," which has been in course of erection for the past few months, will open for the season in the second week in September next, the first play being "The Rose Maid."

Other plays booked for the coming season include the "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "Polly of the Circus," "The Blue Bird," "Everywoman," Fields' Minstrels, "The Leopard Spots" and a large number of other famous plays.

DUBLIN PUTS TIGHT LID UPON IMMORAL SHOWS

DUBLIN, Aug. 23. This city has put the lid on tight on shows, both motion picture and regular theaters, and has just created and elected a board of censors, whose duty it shall be to supervise the theaters of the city and rule out all immoral plays and pictures. The members of the board were elected by the City Council Tuesday night last.

SAVANNAH SHRINERS PLAN BIG RECEPTION

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Completing preparations for the reception of William W. Erwin, of Wheeling, W. Va., Imperial Potentate of the Shriners of North America, other members of the Imperial Divan of the Shriners and visitors from various temples, who will come to Savannah next month, the entire seventh floor of the Hotel Savannah has been reserved for them.

The Shriners of the Imperial Divan came in response to an invitation from Potentate Robert L. Travis, of Allee Temple, of this city, to attend a ceremonial session of that temple on September 12.

$8,000 IN CASH PRIZES IN LIST OF STATE FAIR

More Than Five Thousand Displays To Be Made at Macon. Nine County Exhibits.

MACON, Aug. 23.—Officials of the Georgia State Fair Association are enthusiastic over the prospects for this year's show. Already more exhibitors have applied than ever before, and the indications are that in all of the departments there will be a total of more than 5,000 different displays. The prizes this year aggregate more than $8,000 in cash, in addition to the special premiums given by individuals and corporations.

Nine counties have contracted to make county agricultural exhibits, and probably three more will enter the competition. Cobb County, represented by Gid Morris, has taken the first prize of $1,200 for three successive years, but this year Houston County proposes to contest for this award. W. C. Lewis, of Houston, is arranging that county's exhibit.

Racing will be a special feature this year, and purses awarded will amount to several thousand dollars. This will be the first State fair racing since 1908. A motordrome also is being erected for motorcycle racing.

Secretary Harry Robert is booking individual attractions for the midway instead of engaging a carnival company. More than 50 shows have already been secured, and more will be provided.

Judges Are Named.

Announcement has been made of the judges for the various departments, as follows:

Farm Implements—W. W. Elfe, Morris Putzel and W. G. Lewis.

Poultry and Pet Stock—Loring Brown.

Textile—John A. Porter.

Horticulture and Floriculture—Dan C. Horgan.

Flour, Tea and Coffee—Mrs. John C. Dietz, Miss Henrietta Glover and Mrs. Sol Hoge.

Carriages, Buggies and Wagons—W. A. Goodyear and W. P. Welsiger.

Musical Instruments—Mrs. I. H. Adams.

Canning Clubs—A. W. Smith, Mrs. W. D. Lamar and J. Walter Collins.

Fine Arts—T. O. Chestney and Rufus W. Evans.

Dairy and Beef Cattle—Sam N. Warren.

Swine and Sheep—Professor H. B. Carpenter.

Dairy—Sam N. Warren.

Apiary—W. V. McCook and C. E. Glisson.

Horses, Mules, Ponies and Colts—Professor Milton P. Jarnigan.

Machinery—W. W. Elfe, Morris Putzel and W. C. Lewis.

Textile Machinery—John A. Porter.

Cakes, Pies, Breads, etc.—Mrs. John C. Dietz, Miss Henrietta Glover and Mrs. Sol Hoge.

Needle and Fancy Work—Mrs. J. Ross Bowdre, Mrs. J. C. Morton and Mrs. W. E. Cookerly.

Fight Over Waycross Fire Department On

Council Likely to Pass Bills to Enlarge Brigade Over Chairman's Protest.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Unless Chairman H. Hengeveld, of the Police and Fire Committee, changes his opinion, a resolution providing to enlarge the Waycross fire department will be passed over his head. Two resolutions on the subject have been introduced in City Council, one by Alderman Beaton and the other by Alderman Morton.

Chairman Hengeveld claimed the city's financial condition would not permit any further expense for the fire department. Alderman Morton replied that when there was talk of making former Fire Chief Thomas Ballentyne, of Savannah, chief of the Waycross department, Chairman Hengeveld was willing to pay more money to get Ballentyne, and it seems the city is as well off now as when Mr. Hengeveld wanted to make the change.

The resolution for the employment of more men has enough votes to pass, according to Mr. Morton, but he will make no effort to get it through Council until Mr. Hengeveld makes a report.

Edwards Approves Military Highway

Savannah to Tybee Road Would Cost About $300,000—Congressman Sees Benefit.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—That the construction of a military highway from Savannah to Tybee, as advocated by Congressman Charles G. Edwards, would be of great benefit to the entire State, is the belief of J. N. King, well-known cotton factor of Rome.

At interior points the project is not looked upon as one that will be of benefit to Savannah alone, but is considered a movement on the part of the Government that would result in good to the State at large.

The propcsed highway will cost approximately $300,000, but it is believed that it would be money well expended since all sections would be benefited.

WARE COUNTY TAX RATE REDUCED 10 PER CENT

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Because of the big increase in the taxable property in Ware over last year's returns, the county tax rate was to-day reduced from 80 cents a hundred to 70 cents a hundred, with prospects bright for the same decrease another year. Approximately $50,000 will be spent by the county on road work this year, according to the budget announcement.

MERCHANTS OF AUGUSTA PLAN BIG TRADE BODY

Chamber of Commerce and Merchants and Manufacturers' Ass'n to Quit Field.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 23.—The Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Augusta has accepted the proposition of A. W. McKeand, of Atlanta, to take charge of a new commercial organization. To do this Mr. McKeand states that $60,000, or $20,000 a year for three years, must be secured.

The object of the new movement is to replace the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, which, with practically the same object in view, have been working at cross purposes for some years. It is stated that the Chamber of Commerce is making arrangements to wind up its business. This would leave the new organization planned in full command of the field.

At a meeting of citizens Mr. McKeand told them his proposition and some details of the work. It was agreed that his method was good. The new organization, which the officers and directors of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association agreed to, will be a consolidation of the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

Five Departments.

The new organization will have five departments.

First, the wholesale trade department, which will direct the trades trips; the salesman's school reports of trade openings; rebates on fares, and will foster a spirit of friendly rivalry between the merchants.

Second, the retail trades department, which shall handle all things pertaining to the retail trade. Especially will the credit bureau, now such a valuable asset of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, come under this department.

Third, the publicity department, from which will come all such literature as that pertaining to the city, its advantages, etc., and through the department conventions will be secured, special feature weeks arranged, etc.

Fourth, the industrial promotion department, which will handle all business pertaining to industrial work.

Fifth, the transportation department, under which will come the freight bureau, the most valuable asset of the Chamber of Commerce.

To begin this organization will entail much preliminary work, including a campaign of local men, directed by Mr. McKeand.

Augustans of all classes, whether in sympathy with the Chamber of Commerce or the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, have taken kindly to the new organization plan, and it bids fair to begin a new and entirely prosperous era for the city, whose natural advantages are such that with proper handling little is needed to make her the truly progressive city she deserves to be.

Waycross to Vote on Government Change

Hard Fight To Be Made by Both Sides—Election October 4.

WAYCROSS, GA., Aug. 23.—Voters of Waycross on October 4 will decide whether to change the form of city government to a combination city manager-commission form or retain the aldermanic form with a board of aldermen of twelve members instead of six.

A special election will be held then and the registration books are now open. It is known a strong fight will be made by both sides, and at this time it is hard to predict which will win. The city manager form of government has much support, but it is doubtful if those in favor of the change will work as hard to get the new charter approved as the opponents will work to defeat the measure which the Legislature passed this year.

If the city manager plan is approved Waycross will be the first Georgia city to adopt it.

Gov. Slaton Vetoes Chatham Land Grant

Says Resolutions Had Not Been Properly Passed by the Legislature.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Savannahans were surprised to read that Governor Slaton had vetoed a resolution providing for land grants to the trustees of the Chatham Academy.

Governor Slaton explained he vetoed the resolution because it had not been properly passed. It relates to disposition of ungranted lands in the county. Acts passed in 1788 and 1856 vested in the Chatham Academy and the Union Society considerable ungranted lands in Chatham. The purpose of the resolution is to authorize these institutions to claim the lands under the old acts.

G. M. C. OPENS SEPTEMBER 1.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—The Georgia Military College will open for the fall session on September 2. President Horton is expecting the largest attendance in the history of the institution. The Hon. Roy Stubbs, of Eatonton, will make the opening address.

FIRST BALE AT MILLEDGEVILLE.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—The first bale of cotton was marketed here yesterday by Mike Jackson, a negro, living in Wilkinson County. The cotton was sold to Mr. John Barrett, and brought 15 cents a pound.

HON. RALPH O. COCHRAN DELIVERS ∴ ∵ OPENING SPEECH AT CLAYTON, GA.

Candidate for United States Senate in Strong Address Outlines His Views On State and National Issues.

I am glad to be in Clayton and have an opportunity of addressing the people of Rabun County. You have heard the expression, "From Rabun Gap to Tybee Light," and it is fitting that in my campaign for the United States Senate I should deliver the keynote address in this county—the address that in a substantial measure carries my position on the questions that the people of Georgia will be interested in in casting their votes in the election next summer for a United States Senator—and this for the reason that I will show considerable activity in this campaign which will extend from the mountains to the sea.

It is further true that you people of Rabun live in a county that was established in 1819, almost a hundred years ago, and it bears the name of one of the Chief Executives of this State. This county has furnished many men in the public arena during its history who have been worthy sons and distinguished servants of the people.

I am here to-day in advocacy of my candidacy for the United States Senate. At the suggestion of some zealous friends, I entered this race some time ago. It is an undertaking worthy of any man's highest ambition, and I entered the field conscious of the great responsibilities that will rest upon me if elected, and also conscious of the difficulties that confront me in achieving this ambition.

I want to tell you here to-day that I am going to Washington. I expect to win this race, and I have every confidence in ultimate success. It is a big undertaking, but I believe that the sentiment of the people of Georgia to-day is in favor of electing a business man, a man in the best vigor of his life, and one who will endeavor to represent all people alike and all interests alike within the borders of the State.

It is true that probably in point of years, as I am only 39 years of age, I am the youngest man who has ever offered in the State of Georgia for this high position. During the progress of the campaign I will be confronted with the charge that I am too youthful, and further that I have not had sufficient experience. I want to say in advance in answer to any such criticism that may be raised, that many of the best political servants that this country has ever had have been men who have achieved success and attained high political positions early in life. With a long stretch of years before them they well used them, and therefore their services were of inestimable worth. As a matter of fact, it is common knowledge that any man is in his prime from thirty-five to fifty years of age. In fact, the Constitution of the United States requires that one must be only 30 years old to be eligible for the United States Senate.

I am frank to tell you that at no period in life do I anticipate ability for greater labor or clearer thought. It is true that I am inexperienced on many matters pertaining to state affairs, but I do insist that I am capable of learning and that I can count upon a reasonable number of years in which to be of service to my State and country if honored with this high position.

In advocacy of my candidacy, I place before the people of Georgia the proposition of electing a business man. I can properly call attention to the young business men of this State and to the fact that in these times of industrial growth and progress that the best thing that the people of any State can do is to elect a larger percentage of the men of the business circles of their State. If there is any question that requires business ability and skill to properly settle, I should say that those which pertain to the nature of the laws under which we shall live are pre-eminently the ones where business experience, understanding of the people's wants and the ultimate effect are the ones that literally demand the business man to pass upon. A slogan of the day in which we live is more business and less theory.

Prejudice and Demagogy to Play No Part in Campaign.

I want to tell you here and now that as far as I am concerned you will never see any trace of demagogy in anything that I may say or do. I shall deal frankly with the people of Georgia, and my campaign will be devoid of tricks and makeshifts. My candidacy will be put up to the people of Georgia strictly on its merits, without frills or deception. I am nothing more than a plain business man. I have no pre-eminent ability on any lines, but I assure you in advance that if I am elected I shall ever endeavor to follow the paths of right and do my duty. This campaign as far as I am concerned will never be marred with the demagogism that arouses the prejudices of the rich against the poor, the city man against the country man, or the young man against the old man. I shall take the position in the beginning and shall maintain it throughout the campaign that if I am elected I want to be elected by all classes of our citizens, and if elected I pledge you most sincerely and earnestly that I will represent all the people of Georgia and all the lawful interests within her borders.

Under my political canopy, so to speak, all classes of our citizens can rally. No prejudice has ever taken root in my bosom against the Jew in favor of the Gentile, against the Catholic in favor of the Protestant, against the Third party man in favor of the Democrat or against any man or class of men within our State who may belong to different parties, political faith, social circle or other relation contrary to that I occupy. I am frank to say that any man who harbors hatred for any class of our citizens is unworthy of the high position to which I now aspire. The bigot, the maligner of character, he a small man, should have no place in shaping the policies and destiny of this country. The same sun shines on all of us alike, we are the children of the same Creator, and in its last analysis there is no great difference in us anyway.

I have always endeavored to be fair to all the interests of capital; I have always endeavored to be fair to the cause of labor; I shall endeavor to be fair in all of my relations with my fellow man, whether that relation be in private business matters or in public position, and if I go down in defeat contending for the wisdom of such a position I shall do so gladly and you shall have my approbation. It is well that I state on this occasion that I have never been aligned with any of the political factions of Georgia. During the past few decades when partisan heat reached high water mark I have always stood, since the early years of my manhood, as a free man and have acted on every election day in the way that I thought my vote would count for most looking to the best interests of the people of this State. We have been confronted at a number of elections with partisan politics and partisan issues. I thank God that we are now living in a more desirable day.

I am in favor of no class legislation. All legislation should be founded on the idea of the greatest good for the greatest number, irrespective of nationalities, wealth, education or anything else. However, if there is to be any class legislation, it should be in favor of the biggest class, and I should say that this class is composed of those of moderate means. If I ever cast a vote, if elected to the United States Senate, for any class whatsoever, it will be for the class here designated.

In my campaign for the Senate throughout the entire time I shall remain absolutely a free man. I shall not tie myself up with promises and political alignments. If elected I want to be a free man to represent the entire people of Georgia.

To men of experience and men of business affairs it is an accepted truth that no man need be a Croesus or an intellectual giant to represent well his people in legislative halls. What counts most is industry, integrity and sound common sense. If these elements are united in a candidate, he deserves well at the hands of his people. The making of laws and the administration of government is largely a business matter where good judgment and good conscientious service avail much.

Permit me to say also that God has endowed me with a degree of manhood and independence, so much so that I can tell you in all frankness and truth that if you do not see fit to elect me that it will be perfectly all right and I assure you that no scars will be left behind over which I will brood through the coming years. In this independence and manhood that I declare to you, there is no place for mudslinging and assassination of character. I will not indulge in any of this nor will I permit any of my friends to do so if within my power to prevent. The campaign does not involve personal issues. The issues are more substantial and more worthy of the intelligence of the people of Georgia.

I stand for good government in all of its forms, and I shall ever be the enemy of those principles and practices that are opposed to its preservation and promotion. I shall ever stand for the principles of government that represent the best interests of the farmer as well as the merchant, and in general, the best interests of every man of every class of citizens within the confines of this great State. I was born and reared on a farm in Campbell County, and I feel that my years of association with the people of the rural districts, their needs and their interests, have made me to know once for all the important recognition that should be accorded to them. Then with the business experience that I have had elsewhere, as an education in after years, I feel that I can represent the entire people of this State with fellowship of feeling and wisdom and justice to all.

Economy in National Expenditures Insisted Upon.

At this time I want to put the people of Georgia on notice that, if elected as one of the United States Senators from Georgia, I will become in a measure a watchdog of your treasury. I have long been convinced that the practices that we are following of continuously raising taxes on property, businesses, corporations, and otherwise, should be stopped. There is hardly a session of the Georgia Legislature or a session of the United States Congress that some new form of taxing the people or else increasing the old forms is not projected. I ask you, in the name of reason, when and where will these agitations and practices stop? There is an eternal cry of more money, that our institutions are being throttled and that the State and nation are lagging in progress on account of insufficient funds. You know as well as I do that if the State of Georgia had five times as much revenue for the Legislature to spend that every dollar of it would be spent and they would still be in need of more money.

As a matter of fact, unless the increase of the burdens of taxation is not halted, taxes will become very oppressive to the people of this country. Take your State tax, your county tax, your city tax, your professional tax, your corporation tax, your inheritance tax, your income tax, your occupation tax, your road tax, your local school tax, your poll tax, and possibly others, and I tell you when any man gets through at the end of the year with paying these various amounts he has done a fairly good year's work to have made profit enough out of his business to meet them. The philosophy of all taxation, according to my thinking, is that instead of the everlasting increase in the forms of taxing the people and also the amounts, that the revenue of the State should only increase with the enhancement of property, more money coming into the State, and more citizens as our common population. With an increase of revenue along these lines, with a corresponding limitation of appropriations, our State and country will always be in a solvent condition and our people will be prosperous and happy.

I have all along been of the opinion that our people should not look too much for support to the Government under which they live. The greatest men that this State or country have ever produced have been men who have worked their way through difficulties and hardships. The best principle of government that can be advocated is that of throwing every citizen that is able-bodied upon his own resources. Therefore, the sentiment that is rapidly taking root in the States of this country that we should look more to the bounties of the Government is a cancer in the body politic and will ultimately prove fatal if it is not checkmated. History records the fact that the decline of the Roman Empire set in with the free corn that was distributed to the population. It has been estimated that at one time more than 300,000 people were fed at public expense. The manhood of this country has always been honest and hardy, and we have builded a republic that is the light of the world, and if it continues in its leadership the same manhood and independence that led us into freedom must care for the affairs of state through the coming years.

Opposes Unnecessary Legislation.

In our zeal for this cause or that cause that may be advocated, we should always be conservative in our thoughts, speech and actions. There is no business, much less a government, that can go forward in splender and success where fits and spasms characterize those who are interested. Sanity should characterize every man's discussion of public questions, and I tell you that when your vote is cast on the side of conservatism you will seldom err from what is best for your family, yourself and your country.

It is true that State laws and National laws, in fact laws of all kinds, should be somewhat in the vanguard of actual practice and in a measure be some high ideals for the manhood and womanhood of this State and country, as well as for the rising generation. However, we all know that laws that are not supported with public sentiment are of no avail and become nullities on our statute books.

I am further of the opinion that we are passing too many laws in our State and Nation. It seems that we have arrived at the point where we are law-ridden; almost unnumbered laws that everybody is presumed to know, but on the other hand there is no one who does know. There is much legislation that is transgressing the inalienable rights of property and person and much of that that is suggested tends too much this way. I took occasion not long ago to count the sections of laws that compose the Code of Georgia. It is astounding but true that there are approximately 8,000 sections of laws under which we are living this day. It has almost gotten to the point where a man's mind must be an encyclopedia to carry the innumerable laws governing cities, counties, State and Nation. It reminds one of the old adage that that people is best governed which is least governed.

Favors Federal Aid for Good Roads.

I want to say on this occasion that, if elected to the United States Senate, I shall stand at all times for the cause of good roads. If we ever expect to have great systems of roads traversing this entire country the National Government will have to take hold of the proposition. It strikes me that money appropriated for this purpose is just as much within the Constitution of this country as the right to appropriate funds to deepen the waterways and improve harbors. By navigation the products of the country are distributed and it is a method of travel. The public roads of the country are the avenues of distribution whereby the products of the country reach the centers and are ultimately distributed throughout the country and the world. Furthermore, public roads are used by everybody, and the benefits derived from appropriations for this cause are participated in by all the people of the country. What cause more equitable or more worthy could be mentioned for the appropriation of public funds? The additional circumstance associated with improved public roads is the enhancement of property. Down in my country it is generally estimated that property on a macadamized road is never worth less than double as much as property on a road that has not been so improved. Also think of the convenience, pleasure and general benefits that are derived by reason of the construction of such thoroughfares. Think of the benefits to your county or any county that might be mentioned that would be derived from the construction of such highways. In consideration of these substantial reasons, I shall ever be a friend to the cause of good roads.

High Cost of Living Caused by Not Producing Enough.

Any people or any legislative body has lost sight of the greatest cause when they do not cultivate and improve the great agricultural interests of their county and State. You may talk of laws that curb vice, you may ponder over measures that involve appropriations, you may consider well laws that look to the raising of revenue, but back and more fundamental and of far greater importance is the great proposition of production. What we need most is more corn, more cotton, more of all the farm products, more manufacturing, more businesses that produce, businesses that feed and clothe the world. That is to-day, in my opinion, the prime reason for the high cost of living. We are just not producing enough.

The people of Georgia will never reach that point of prosperity that is most desired until they have learned to produce enough to get the other man's money and then have enough to live on so as to save them from the condition of having to buy the other fellow's products. I trust that I will live to see that day when by education and disposition the people of Georgia will learn and desire to produce more than they consume in the way of farm products, that splendid cash crop, the staple product, will be the surplus crop, that new era when every town and hamlet can boast of numerous manufacturing enterprises, when Georgia-made goods are sold around the world. Let us make the people of other States become the buyers of our products, and we the recipients of the splendid income.

If elected to the United States Senate I shall always do the best that in me lies to get increased appropriations for the educational interests of the various States of the Union where agricultural training is taught. The National Government, in wisdom, through the Agricultural Department has started up a system of education and scientific experiment along agricultural lines which will prove, I have no doubt, to be of the greatest service to the material interests of this country of any department known to the National Government. It will be my purpose to work for and to vote for all measures and appropriations which look to the improvement and enlargement of this great cause in the dispensation of National funds.

If I am elected to the United States Senate I want to pledge you here and now my unswerving support of all measures that look to the general betterment of humanity. We are living in times when the humanity of man is manifested in its most splendid form. Laws that are humanitarian in their nature, just in their spirit, broad in their conception of human rights will always find a friend in me. The old idea has long since passed away that every man should live for himself. Thank God that we live in a better and brighter day when the living and the hopes of humanity are upon a more just basis and there is recognition of the higher laws of nature and the beneficent conceptions of the Creator of us all.

As an incentive to high purpose and lofty achievement, we should bear in mind that the names and memories of those only are revered and live in history who lived and worked to do something for others. Selfishness, living for self, has never made any man great in the estimation of his fellowman. The world has gotten rid of much of the tyranny that has characterized it in the past, but the tyranny of brain and the tyranny of worth should continue and will continue as long as civilization endures. Ambition to do something for others as well as self should characterize the life of every man.

Favors Exploiting the Great Resources of Georgia.

There is another matter that I wish to speak of to which I will give as much of my ability and time as possible if elected. I refer to the advertising of the resources of Georgia and the entire Southland. This advertising by one in this exalted position by speech and otherwise can be made of inestimable worth to this State and section. Georgia and the entire South needs more capital and more people. Any man who is in favor of any law or laws that tend to antagonize capital and mistreat the institutions in which it is invested is the enemy of the State. In addition, what county in Georgia would not be better off if it had twice as many people in it as it has to-day? The multiplication of population means better roads, better schools, better churches, better mail facilities and better communities in general. These ends are worthy of note and should always receive the attention of the representatives of this State in these high positions.

If elected to the United States Senate, it will be my purpose to perform well what might be termed the small duties incident to this high office. Those who might desire positions either for themselves or their boys, who might at any time wish information concerning any matters in the city of Washington pertaining to the Government, or local matters, those who desire appropriations for this purpose or that purpose in their respective cities and districts, in general those who want ready service of their representative in getting something or doing something where their United States Senator can be of service to them, I will be the man to call upon. I pledge you in advance that no considerable amount of my time will be taken up in the study of foreign questions or the preparation of what might be termed big speeches, but, on the other hand, I will try to inject as much business in the situation as possible and serve in a business way the people of Georgia, not only concerning such matters as I hear mentioned, but in promoting and voting for legislation which will promote the general interests of the State, as well as the country at large.

I am deeply interested in the cause of education in all of its forms. Our public schools are the greatest institution that has become a part of the government of this State. Public schools touch every man's interest, and in them is involved the element of an elementary education which means better citizenship and more happiness on the part of our entire population. Almost as essential are the institutions of higher learning of this State. Also our colleges of technical training which prepare the young man and young woman to make a living have probably become the most popular institutions in the way of higher training that we have in the State. The old idea was to educate the smart boys in classical training either for the ministry, medicine or the law. This conception of higher learning is in a measure passing away, and technical training is largely the slogan of the times in which we live.

I do not know how you people in Rabun County feel about it, but I imagine that you have about the same feeling and sentiment that we people of Fulton have, as well as the people of all the other counties of this State—that is the constantly recurring panics that disturb and distress the business interests of this country. I do not know whether or not any man can assign with accuracy the immediate causes of these recurring panics. However, I am inclined to believe that the most prominent cause is the drastic reform legislation that sets up about every eight or ten years. I am in favor of a certain amount of reform. We all know that in the great economy of nature change must take place either for good or ill. The country that does not improve its condition must of necessity retrograde. On the other hand, I am opposed, and I shall always vote accordingly, to reforms and reform measures which come in bunches and have the inevitable effect of upsetting the entire business of this State and country. As far as I am concerned, I want a little rest so that I may have an opportunity of accumulating some of the world's goods while in the vigor of manhood, and not look too much to the eradication of all evil and the improvement of our institutions and country on the Utopian idea for our children and our children's children. As I see it, the present epoch we now call recent is the most prosperous and happy period that the world has ever known.

We often lose sight of the untold good that has been accomplished by the people of our day and our fathers before us. In fact, we live in the best times and we constitute the greatest people that this world has ever seen. Six thousand years of recorded history does not find a parallel. There is not so much ill in man and the human race as we are often led to believe. I have often said that the good man in any community is the good fellow after all. Think of man in this day of enlightenment and the society in which we live. He works hard and usually by the sweat of his brow he provides for wife and children. He is interested in educational advantages of his family, he looks forward with a feverish mind to the ultimate condition when no longer he will be the mainstay of these loved ones. We are rich in charity, we are humane in the treatment of those who are unfortunate, our ideals are high, and we are recipients by reason of our intelligence and industry of most of the good that the world affords.

Another point that I wish to bring out: Too much experiment is always dangerous. The people of any State or country that is experimenting with this law, this institution, and this new idea are apt to fall into the ways that will lead them into departures from the fundamentals of their institutions which probably will prove dangerous and fatal. It is always better to let other people, other States and other men work out the issues of state, experiment and ascertain the truth, and then the wisdom of its adoption becomes clear and of no loss to that people who follow in the light of this experience. Of course some experiment along sane and conservative lines is good for all people, and if such is not indulged in they are liable to become laggards and drones. However, the people of Georgia should never become distinguished as a people of experiment, and the State should never be known as an incubator of new ideas.

If I am elected to the United States Senate, I shall always stand for clean government, wise laws and pure administration. We live in a country where in theory every man's chance is alike. God has made us unequal in body and mind, but under the Constitution and laws of the United States, as drawn by those immortal men, the fathers of this country, whose names shall live as long as recorded history is preserved, imbedded in that great instrument and laws, the general principle of equal rights to all and an equal chance in the struggles of this life. No man should ask for more than justice and an equal chance. No man should be willing to surrender to any other man his equal chance and justice in the race of life. I shall always be opposed to plunder in any form and shall ever stand for the best laws to perpetuate and preserve the Government as founded by the fathers of this country.

However, it is true that it does seem like something is wrong at times with our institutions when one man in the short space of a lifetime can accumulate a billion of dollars. We have in these United States one-sixteenth of the population of the world and we possess one-fourth of its entire wealth. Such a splendid commentary upon the people who in only a century or two past found the vast expanse of our country a wilderness and here the institutions and wealth to which we are heirs.

Amid the masterful strides made by this country within the past fifty years, on account of a serious handicap, the South is just now coming into her own. Georgia and the entire Southern States are rich in natural resources—we have the climate, we have the soil, we have the minerals, we have the water power, and, thank God, we have the brain and the industry that will yet make of our Southland the fairest spot beneath the sun.

There is no use for history except the lessons that it teaches. We are living in the light of many experiences of the past, and as the light of these experiences falls upon our pathway our days will be splendid and our accomplishments beyond the dreams of men.

I love Georgia and her people. Born within her borders, educated within her institutions, associated with Georgia people, I bear to her the warmth of sympathy and childish affection that I trust will continue unabated during the time that I shall live. The mountains lifting their lofty peaks amid the skies, the old red hills of Georgia, dear to the heart of all, the table lands, rich and fertile, and extended in area, her rippling streams in music, wind their way to the mighty sea, seven out of the nine climates with which the Nation is characterized, I am devoted to this people and this mighty State.

With renewed purpose, and a common ambition, let us press forward in the mighty causes of civilization and the accomplishment of higher ideals.

(Adv.)

SOCIETY NEWS of the SOUTH

Waycross

WAYCROSS, Aug. 23.—Mrs. V. L. Stanton and Miss Mary Stanton have returned from a visit to Atlanta and points in North Georgia.

Miss Clifton Wing, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. B. Thorpe, has returned to her home in Macon.

Mr. and Mrs. Dessau Bunn, en route to their home at Fairfax from St. Simons Island, where they spent the summer, were guests of relatives in Waycross this week.

Miss Jessie Lou Stanley visited relatives in Brunswick this week.

Miss Leila Paschall, who has been visiting in Atlanta, will spend some time in Rome before returning home.

Mrs. R. E. Brown and children have returned from a visit to relatives in Scranton, Pa.

Mrs. J. P. Dukes and children visited in Savannah this week.

Misses Viola and Ruby Clemens are visiting relatives in Savannah.

Following a short visit in New York City, Mr. L. Volney Williams will join Mrs. Williams and children in Michigan for an extended visit. Mr. Williams sailed for New York from Savannah Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gaston Lewis, of New York, are in the city for a visit of several months.

Mrs. E. J. Seay and Miss Elwood Seay have returned from a visit to Columbia, S. C.

Mrs. J. P. Moody, of Florida, is the guest of Mrs. W. T. Seaman.

Mrs. A. J. Miller left Thursday for Wilmington, N. C., where she will visit relatives.

Mrs. M. Z. Hinnant and children have returned to Wilmington, N. C., after a visit to friends and relatives in Waycross.

Mrs. C. R. Powrie and little daughter, Jean, of New York, arrived Wednesday to join Mr. Powrie and will make Waycross their home.

Members of the Friday Club were entertained yesterday by Misses Lucile and Susie Sutton.

Miss Aline Jeffers is expected home shortly from a visit to her sister, Mrs. John D. Tucker, in Birmingham, Ala.

Crawfordville

CRAWFORDVILLE, Ga., Aug. 23.—Miss Virginia Butler, of Madison, is the guest of Miss Frances Burgess. Several delightful entertainments have been given in her honor among them receptions by Misses Melton and Asbury.

Miss Mattie Jordan, of Atlanta, spent a few days here the past week the guest of Miss Blanche Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Golucke, Mr. A. G. and Mrs. R. W. Golucke and daughters, Anna Catherine and Mary Gordon, are spending the week at Hot Springs, N. C.

Miss Lillian Asbury leaves this week for Elberton to visit Miss Allen, who was one of Miss Asbury's attractive guests last week.

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Owens and daughter, Aileene, of DeLand, Fla., are spending some time here with friends.

Colonel and Mrs. J. Frank and daughters, Cornelia and Nell, of Dothan, Ala., spent several days here as the guests of Mr. W. P. Rid.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Leary and Guy, Jr., have returned to Augusta after spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Gee. Miss Martha Griffith returned home with them.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Anthony and Mr. L. P. McCord, of East Palm Beach Fla., are here visiting.

Miss Mary Fannie Harris, of Augusta, is the guest of Miss Emma Chapman.

Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Gunn have returned from Augusta and Atlanta, where they spent several days last week.

Colonel and Mrs. J. A. Beasley are visiting in Atlanta.

Mesdames J. V. Andrews, J. H. Callahan and W. C. Andrews, all of this city, are spending some time at Borden Wheeler, Ala.

Miss Minnie Olive Park will entertain a house party this week. Those invited are Misses Mary Holden, of Athens; Anita Sanford, of Augusta, and Kathleen Kendrick, of Sharon.

Milledgeville

MILLEDGEVILLE, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Joseph Cleveland Cooper entertained on Thursday evening in honor of her sister, Miss Carrie Talbot. Hearts-dice was played, after which a delightful salad course was served. Those present were the Misses Susan Myrick, Jesse Allen, Maggie Bivins, Floride Allen, Isabella Allen, Pauline Nisbit, Helen Maxwell, Hattie Pottle, Mary Amos and Francis Conn, Edwin Allen, James Sibley, Erwin Sibley, John Sibley, Malcolm Flemister, Charles Conn, Henry McAuliffe, Charles Brown, Arthur Carr, Stewart Wootten and James Clark, of Atlanta.

Miss Marguerite Joseph entertained on Monday at a suit-case shower for Miss Katherine Scott, who leaves soon for an extended trip through the North. Each lady brought some gift for the honoree.

Mrs. Frank Bone entertained at her home on Greene street Wednesday afternoon in honor of Miss Francis Stevens, of Macon, when "42" was played, after which a salad course was served. Those present were Mrs. W. T. Garrard, Mrs. Y. A. Little, Mrs. Cleve Cooper, Mrs. Lodrick Jones, Mrs. Culver Kidd, Mrs. John Barrett, Mrs. I. C. Case, Mrs. E. A. Tignor, Mrs. E. E. Bass, Miss Carrie Talbot, Miss Beuna Barrett and Miss Annie McKinley.

Another social event of the week was a party given by Miss Katie Cline on Tuesday afternoon, her guests being Mrs. L. M. Jones, Jr., Mrs. Harry Bone, Mrs. Frank Bone, Mrs. Logan Griswold, Mrs. Bee Bethune, Mrs. George Brantley, Miss Francis Conn, Miss Frances Stevens, Miss Pauline McKinley, Miss Annie McKinley and Miss Hattie Pottle.

Covington

COVINGTON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Clarence Terrell entertained at the Lyric Theater on Thursday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Alva Cooper, of Savannah, who is the guest of Mrs. J. O. Cooper. Mrs. Terrell's guests included Mrs. Alva Cooper, Mrs. J. O. Cooper, the Misses Eloise Cooper, Ida and Annie Higgins, Eleanor Butler, Frances Henderson, Hyda Heard and Bonner Sims, Mrs. H. D. Terrell and Mrs. J. Bain Terrell.

Miss Louise Whitehead entertained on Tuesday evening at her home on Monticello street with a progressive conversation party in honor of her house guest, Miss Ella Mae Ellis, of Macon. The guests included the Misses Natalie Turner, Annie Pauline Anderson, Lartrelle Meadors, Dorothy Lee, Ruth Weldon, of Talladega, Alabama; Frances Dearing and Marion Sherman, James Lester, Jim Wells, Rufus Franklin, Charles Ellis, Guy Robinson, Candler Harwell, Ivey Smith, Lamar Smith, Reginald Robinson, Perrino Dearing, Fred Bush and Guy Rogers.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Fowler, Miss Louise Fowler, Mrs. J. W. Stephenson, Miss Eva Stephenson, Mrs. Lillian Stephenson Weaver, Roy Stephenson, of Tampa, Fla., and Hugh Wright were among those from Covington who attended the Duffy-Stephenson wedding, which was a pretty event of Thursday, taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Parker Ernest Duffy at Morrow.

Mrs. Thomas Berry entertained a number of relatives last week at a family reunion, the guests including Mr. and Mrs. John P. Blanton, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Harris, of Alabama; Mrs. J. W. Loyd, of Dawson, Ala.; Mrs. R. L. Tye, of Mansfield; Mrs. H. B. Thacker, of Oxford, and Mrs. A. J. Blanton.

Moultrie

MOULTRIE, Aug. 23.—Miss Lucile Autrey entertained the members of the Entre Nous Club on Saturday morning. Assisting Miss Autrey were her sisters, Mrs. Roy Autrey and Mrs. Clyde Taylor.

Complimentary to her sister, Miss Mary Walker, of Atlanta, Mrs. T. W. Maddox entertained at a "42" party on Tuesday morning.

Mrs. A. W. Chase entertained a number of her friends on Thursday afternoon at a domino party.

Sylvania

SYLVANIA, Aug. 23.—Miss Nelle Davis entertained at cards on Tuesday morning for the Misses Willie Christie and Lucile Evans, of Savannah. First prize, a box of stationery, was won by Miss Ruby Mauldin. Those present were the Misses Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, of Atlanta; Bertha Pearson, Maud Hilton, Jupnita Williamson, Ruby Mauldin, Kate Patrick, Lucy Morel, Sadie Lovett and Esther, Ruth and Kathleen Mimms.

Mrs. John C. Hollingsworth entertained the Ladies' Culture Club on Tuesday afternoon. The program consisted of a study of "Famous Georgians."

A party enjoying an outing at Brannen's Bridge on Wednesday included Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Powell, Mesdames A. T. Perkins, Lecie Davis and J. W. Overstreet; the Misses Mattie Zoe Mallory, Willie Christie, Lucile Evans, Nelle Davis and Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, Julian Cooper, Willie Robbins, Spencer Powell, Bates Lovett and Edward Overstreet.

Mrs. R. F. Jarrell, Jr., entertained the Civic Club on Wednesday afternoon. An interesting program was rendered, followed by delicious refreshments.

Mrs. J. C. Hollingsworth entertained at cards on Tuesday evening for Miss Mattie Mallory and Paul Mallory, of Clyo. Those present were the Misses Mary Lizzie and Annie Dixon Homer, of Atlanta; Miss Mattie Zoe Mallory, of Clyo; Miss Ruby Mauldin, Miss Nelle Davis, Paul Mallory, of Clyo; Abe Greenberg, Spencer Powell, Edward Overstreet and Bates Lovett.

Miss Margaret Flood

of Savannah, one of the popular members of the school set. Miss Flood is also taking an active part in the girl scout movement, being captain of a patrol.

Tallahassee

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 23.—Mrs. H. T. Felkel entertained informally at her home on College avenue Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. W. E. Shackelford, of Jacksonville, was a recent visitor to the Capital City.

Governor Park Trammell left Thursday for a ten days' vacation at Waynesville, N. C., where he joined Mrs. Trammell.

Mrs. S. D. Chittenden at her beautiful home on Park avenue on Wednesday morning entertained at auction bridge in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Wight, of Cairo, Ga., who is visiting her for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Winthrop returned Thursday from Atlantic Beach, having made the return trip from Tallahassee in their automobile.

The regular Thursday night's dance was enjoyed by the society folk at the Elks' Club.

Pensacola

PENSACOLA, Aug. 23.—Pensacola society was much interested in the marriage on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock of Mrs. Mary Dallas Strong, formerly a social favorite in Pensacola, to William F. Quicksall, which took place in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Strong recently visited Mrs. Albert Hyer at her beautiful Bayshore residence, Virginia Lodge, and while here was entertained by Mrs. E. J. Wilson and many other of her old friends.

Mrs. W. H. Northup, who has been spending the past month in the North Carolina mountains, in the beautiful Sapphire Country of Saluda and Waynesville, returned home on Tuesday. Mrs. Northup stopped a few days in Atlanta, where she met Mrs. Pat McHugh, formerly Mrs. Pebley, of Pensacola, at the Hotel Majestic.

Miss Madge Cushman, of Knoxville, Tenn., accompanied by her nephew, Robert Daniels, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Daniels, arrived Saturday on a two weeks' visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton H. Cushman.

The North Carolina mountains are a favorite summer resort for Pensacolans, and at Waynesville this summer there is quite a colony. Mrs. C. W. D'Alemberte, who is now in Rome, Ga., and Mrs. W. H. Northup spent some time at Waynesville, and Mrs. Smithwick, two children, William and Mary, and Mrs. Smithwick's sister, Miss Verren, are now there. Mrs. Alice Aylward, who formerly made her home here and who was recently the guest of Mrs. J. J. Hooton, is also at Waynesville.

Griffin

GRIFFIN, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Carlton Jones entertained her bridge club Tuesday afternoon at an al fresco party. On Wednesday afternoon she was hostess at a domino party.

Miss Mamie Slade and Miss Carrie Slade were hostesses Wednesday evening at a lawn party in honor of their guests, Miss Irene Dempsey, of Cedartown, and Miss Inez Hyman, of Cordele.

Miss Mary Bass was hostess at an automobile party to Barnesville in honor of Misses Mamie and Carrie Slade, Irene Dempsey and Inez Hyman.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Baxter were hosts at a lawn party Friday evening in compliment to their guest, Miss Jessie Robertson, of Forsyth.

On Wednesday morning Miss Olive Boyd was hostess at a rook party in honor of her guest, Miss Mary Watkins, of Atlanta.

Mrs. James Nutt entertained Monday afternoon at a bridge party in honor of Miss Katherine Wooten, of Washington.

Mrs. John Henry Newman entertained fifty ladies Friday afternoon at a theater party especially in compliment to her sisters, Mrs. H. L. Wheat, of Macon, and Mrs. Idus C. Doe, of LaGrange.

Mrs. James Kimbrough entertained Wednesday evening at a dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burr, of Atlanta. Invited to meet Mr. and Mrs. Burr were Mr. and Mrs. John B. Mills and Mrs. James Mills.

Mrs. Charles Murray and Mrs. Frank Ingram were hostesses Wednesday morning at a sewing party in compliment to Mrs. James Porter and her daughter, Mrs. Everts. Miss Della Porter and Miss Laura Porter, of Houston, Texas.

Little Miss Ethelyn Ison entertained twenty of her little friends Friday morning in honor of the fifth birthday.

Master Ernest Carlisle was host Wednesday afternoon in celebration of the fourth anniversary of his birth.

Little Miss Lily Rivers Griffin entertained a party of her young friends celebrating the fourth anniversary of her birth.

Cordele

CORDELE, Aug. 23.—A congenial party of young people enjoyed a picnic and fish fry Monday afternoon on the Flint River, the affair being in honor of the Misses Ruth and Clara Mae Jefferson, of Columbus.

Mrs. I. J. Lamb and daughter, Miss Mae Lamb, entertained Tuesday afternoon in honor of Miss Grace Dill, of Ocilla, the guest of Mrs. P. C. Dill and Misses Jefferson.

Mrs C. E. Todd was the hostess Monday afternoon to the Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church.

Durham

DURHAM, Aug. 23.—Misses Margaret and Bessie Erwin, with W. A. Erwin, "cotton king" of North Carolina, gave an elaborate dance at the Durham Country Club in honor of guests who were attending a house-party at "Hillcrest," the Erwin home. It was the most brilliant social affair of the season and was attended by young folks prominent in society through the State.

The guests of honor were Miss Agnes Tinsley Harrison, Atlanta; Miss Sadie Willham, Augusta; Miss Katherine Overman, Washington, D. C.; Hamilton Jones, Charlotte; Hugh Thompson, Raleigh, and Terry Lyon, Fayetteville.

West Point

WEST POINT, Aug. 23.—Miss Mary Booker entertained at rook Thursday evening in honor of Mrs. John T. Ivey and Miss Eloise Sikes, of Luverne, Ala. After the game sandwiches and tea were served.

Dublin

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—Miss Ruth Toole, of Macon, was the guest of honor at an auction bridge party which Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Toole gave Tuesday evening. Playing were the Misses Ruth Toole, Mabel Harvard, Dorothy Hooks, Mamie Ramsay, Frances Webb and T. W. Hooks, O. G. Sparks, J. B. Hicks and W. R. Brigham.

A much-enjoyed affair of the week was the auction bridge luncheon which Miss Dorothy Hooks gave on Wednesday for Miss Ruth Toole. Miss Hooks' guests included Mrs. E. S. Street, Mrs. J. M. Finn, Mrs. T. R. Ramsay, Mrs. H. P. Shewmake, Mrs. A. J. Toole and Miss Frances Webb.

Of much interest socially will be the wedding of Miss Mary Lee Randall, of Grovania, and Richard P. Hicks, of Wrightsville, next Tuesday evening at the home of the bride's parents in Grovania. A party of friends from Dublin and Wrightsville will go over for this event. A reception will follow the ceremony.

The visitors in the city were honorees at a dance on Wednesday evening at East Lake. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Graham, Miss Lucy Gibson, of Macon; Miss Pearl Dowling, of Lake City, Fla.; Miss McLendon, Miss Otelia Gibson, of Macon; Miss Algie Prince, Miss Leonora Starr, Robert Hightower, Ramsay Fuller, S. Dixon, Paul Williamson, Dewitt Varnadoe, Cliff Holcomb, Clay O'Neal, Alex Blackshear, Claude Brantley, Alex Burch, Patrick Roach and William Brunson.

Senoia

SENOIA, Aug. 23.—Miss Lena Hand entertained a large party of Shorter and Wesleyan girls at a party at her home Monday evening.

The Methodist Missionary Society was royally entertained Monday afternoon by Mrs. H. B. Sasser.

The caming party given at Starr's Mill by Misses Lois and Annie Lou Hardy the past week was one of the most enjoyable events of the year. Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hardy chaperoned the party. The out-of-town guests included Misses Helen Carpenter, Newnan; Elizabeth Baker, Macon; Minnie McMichael, Buena Vista; Sallie Thompson, Hawkinsville; Mary and Lena Render, Greenville; Messrs. Tom Tolleson, Fayetteville; Kendal Fielder, Cedartown; Albert Jelks, Hawkinsville; Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Freeman and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hunter.

Miami

MIAMI, Aug. 23.—Miss Josephine Bravo, one of the first children born in Miami, was united in marriage on Monday night to Dallas D. Hoffman, of this city. The ceremony took place at the bride's home in the presence of a number of friends and relatives and was followed by an informal reception.

One of the pretty dinner-dances of the summer was that given Tuesday night at the beach by Clement and Bazil Brossier, in honor of the Misses Frances and Jane Tatum, two of the charming buds of the city, who leave soon for an exclusive girls' school in the North. The guests were the Misses Frances and Jane Tatum, Jewel Green and Ruth Rose, and Victor Moffat, Merle McLeannon and B. B. Tatum. The affair was held at the Casino at the beach.

Complimentary to the Misses Maude and Alice Reilly, of New Haven, Conn., who are visiting their brother, John B. Reilly, a luncheon was given at the Dade Club by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Coleman Romfh. Roses were used for the decorations. Covers were laid for the Misses Reilly, Miss Flavia DeCamp, R. B. Black, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Reilly, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McDonald and Mr. and Mrs. Romfh.

A Cooncan Club has been organized by a group of the young women of the city. Miss Cornelia Leffler was hostess at the last meeting of the club. Those present were the Misses Myrtle Rose, Hilda Baile, Christine Worley, Ruth Rose, Helen Skelly and Mildred Taylor.

Mrs. Everett George Sewell is spending the latter part of the summer at Asheville, N. C., where many other Miami people are stopping.

Jackson

JACKSON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. L. M. Crawford complimented her guest, Mrs. James Crawford Nutt, of Griffin, with a "42" party on Thursday morning.

The young men of the city gave a moonlight picnic at Indian Springs on Tuesday in honor of Miss Sarah Wylie, of Cartersville, the guest of Miss Mary Land.

In compliment to her niece, Miss Julia Collier, of St. Louis, Mrs. Levi entertained four tables of bridge on Wednesday evening.

Tampa

TAMPA, Aug. 23.—Dr. William Monroe Rowlett and Miss Gregory Walker, daughter of Mrs. Julian Walker, of New York City, will be married at the cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York on September 10. Dr. Rowlett's brother, Calus Rowlett, and the bride-elect's brother, Hewitt Walker, will be best men and will be the only attendants. Dr. Rowlett and his bride will take a trip to Canadian resorts before returning to this city about October 1 to make their home. Dr. Rowlett is one of the young physicians of the city and is very popular. Miss Walker is related to many families here, and she and her mother spent last winter here, taking a house on the Boulevard. This summer they have been spending in the Berkshires. She is an accomplished pianist.

Two well-known young couples of Winter Haven, one of the fine resorts and orange grove towns of interior Florida, are to be married at the same time on September 14. They are Norman Wyckoff and Miss Larra McCrary and Leslie Winston Anderson and Miss Kathleen Winston Pepper. The double ceremony will take place at the First Christian Church of Winter Haven, and the young couples will go for a wedding trip together.

Mrs. A. B. Gerner, of this city, is chaperoning a house party at Wall Springs. The party is made up of Tampa and Dade City people, and they are enjoying the bathing at this resort. Among the Dade City members of the party are the Misses Lulu and Ethel Cochrane. A number from Dade City motored over to the camp at various times during the last week or so to spend a few days.

Buchanan

BUCHANAN, Aug. 23.—The recital and reading given at the Methodist Church Tuesday evening by Miss Shirley Sutherlin, of Cave Springs, was enjoyed by all present. Miss Sutherlin has accepted a position with the Southern Female College at LaGrange next year.

Tifton

TIFTON, Aug. 23.—Miss Aline Shipp entertained in honor of her guests, Misses Julia Williams and Florence Parks, with a Japanese party Monday night. Those present were the Misses Julia Williams, Florence Parks, Annie Howard, Marie Garbutt and Vernice Kennedy, James Pate, Roy Thrasher, Robert Hall, Louie Monk, Watson Holmes, Joe Gammon and Mark and Conrad Shipp.

Miss Josie Golden entertained Friday afternoon at four tables of salmagundi in honor of her guest, Miss Kate Harrell, of Doerun.

Miss Annie Howard entertained Tuesday night in honor of Miss Aline Shipp's house guests.

St. Augustine

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 23.—A pretty event of the week was the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Josephine Masters and Marcus Pappy, at the Cathedral Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. Father James O'Brien officiating. Both are among the best known young people of the city and are members of old Florida families.

Captain and Mrs. Henry Marcotte left yesterday for Williamsport, Pa., where they will spend several weeks.

Miss Nell Edmonds and her mother have gone to Miami, where they will reside in the future. They were social favorites here.

Miss Ruth Green, a popular member of the younger society set, has returned from an extended visit with friends in Tallahassee.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald White have returned from a several months' honeymoon trip spent in England. Mr. White's old home. Mr. White is a well-known banker. Mrs. White was formerly Miss Elizabeth Frazer, of this city. Their wedding was a social event of the early summer.

Mrs. G. H. Bruer has returned from Syracuse, N. Y., where she visited her daughter, Mrs. Ernest Johnson.

Gainesville

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Elizabeth Kimbrough will entertain at a house party next week, her guests to include Miss Jamie Hall, of Graniville; Miss Cora Candler, of Dallas, Texas; Miss Marie Dinkins, of Atlanta; Miss Emily Dorsey, of Opelika, Ala., and Miss Laura Mae Kennimerg, of Cleveland. Among the social attention planned for her guests are a masquerade party at the home of Miss Kimbrough and a reception, with Miss Mary Florence McKinney as hostess.

A social affair of the week was the bridge luncheon Wednesday morning which Mrs. Pillow gave for her daughter, Mrs. French, of New Orleans. About twenty guests were present.

A compliment to Mrs. J. B. Fitzgerald, who leaves this week for her future home in Augusta, was a porch party given Tuesday morning by Mrs. M. C. Brown and her mother, Mrs. Flanders.

Mrs. J. E. Jackson was hostess at a sewing party at her home on Academy street in honor of her sister, Mrs. H. W. Campbell, of Atlanta.

Miss Jone and Louise Jackson entertained eight couples at a dinner party Friday evening in honor of Miss Marjorie Wilkes, who was a guest of Mrs. J. H. Banks.

Acworth

ACWORTH, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Daniell Humphries Collins entertained on Thursday afternoon in compliment to Mrs. Norman Smith Kitchen, of Birmingham, Ala.

Mrs. Zollie L. McLain, Mrs. W. Arthur Nichols and Mrs. Charles Gribble were hostesses on Friday afternoon at a reception at the home of Mrs. Gribble, in honor of Mrs. D'Armand Breard, of Monroe, La.; Miss Aris Elgin, of Anderson, S. C., and Mrs. Norman Smith Kitchen, of Birmingham, Ala.

Washington

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—In honor of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Newsom, whose wedding Monday afternoon in Atlanta was a social event of cordial interest to a large circle of friends and relatives in Wilkes County, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Armstrong entertained a number of friends Thursday with a barbecue at their country home five miles north of Washington.

Tuesday's meeting of the Bimonthly Bridge Club, composed of the young married set of Washington, was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Clement E. Sutton. It was decided to call it further meetings until October on account of the number of members who are spending September out of town.

Lanark

LANARK, Aug. 23.—The residents at the Byrd cottage and a few invited guests enjoyed an excursion to Dog Island on Thursday evening. A delicious lunch was served on the island and a dip in the surf was enjoyed.

On Wednesday night at the hotel Willie Byrd was host at a crab supper.

Making up a pleasant house party at Lanark for a week or ten days are Mrs. B. H. Hardaway, Miss Slade, Miss Gerge, Charles Porter and B. H. Hardaway, Jr., all of Columbus, Ga. The house party is given by Mrs. Hardaway in honor of her son, B. H. Hardaway, Jr. The party is occupying the cottage of Mrs. Hardaway.

The party of Tallahassee campers at St. Theresa, composed of John McDougall, Abe McDougall, Guy Haynes and Phil Caldwell, on Saturday evening sailed over to Lanark, enjoyed the Saturday night dance at the hotel and remained over Sunday, taking the members of the Columbus house party for a sail. John and Abe McDougall returned to their camp at St. Theresa and Guy Haynes and Phil Caldwell to Tallahassee.

A party of campers at Lanark occupying the Phillips-Culley cottage is made up of Walter Culley, Humphrey Gwynn, Horace VanBrunt and Harbert Keith, of Tallahassee.

Gainesville

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 23.—Miss Mamie McGrew has returned from a four-weeks outing, during which she visited friends in Jacksonville, Augusta, Ga., and Hendersonville, N. C.

Mrs. J. I. Blake and children are now in Atlanta on a visit to relatives.

Miss Birdie Wood, of Fernandina; Miss Gussie Steindorff, of Greenville, Ala., and Miss Nellie Dekle, of Tampa, are guests of Mrs. Robert E. Lee on West Arlington street.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Harris, of Haverhill, Mass., announce the engagement of their daughter, Marion Carr, to Lee Graham, of Gainesville, Fla. This announcement is of great interest to the social circle of this city. Mr. Graham is cashier of the First National Bank of Gainesville, a member of the City Council and a most popular citizen. It is said the wedding will be some time in October.

Cartersville

CARTERSVILLE, Aug. 23.—On Tuesday evening a dance was given at the Opera House by the young men of Cartersville to the visiting girls. The out-of-town guests were Misses Marion Perdue, Ruth Blackman and Ruth Barry, of Atlanta; Kathrine and May Stiles, of Brunswick; Addie McCollister and Ida Moody, of Piedmont, Ala., and Mrs. Keith Carson, of Tifton. The chaperons wer Mr. and Mrs. E. Strickland, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hammond and Mr. and Mrs. Madison Milam.

Mrs. Walter Holcombe, of Nashville, entertained at an afternoon tea at "Roselawn," the home of her mother, Mrs. Sam P. Jones, on Saturday. The guests were Mrs. John G. Simpson and Miss Hattie Jones, Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. Bert Sims, Murfreesboro, Tenn., and Mrs. Conyers Fite, Washington, D. C.

Nashville

NASHVILLE, Aug. 23.—A lawn social was given on the courthouse square by the ladies of the Civic League yesterday evening from 6 to 9 o'clock. The proceeds will go for the benefit of the public library.

Ocilla

OCILLA, Aug. 23.—At the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. J. W. Layfield, Miss Meta Clair Sibley and Edwin E. Howell were married on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, and left immediately for Atlanta and other points in North Georgia to return in ten days, when they will make this city their home. The Rev. Mr. Ansley, Baptist minister at this place, officiated.

Claims To Be Heir To Cooper Estate

Henry D. Ritch Says He Was Adopted Son of Savannah Man. Files Suit.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—A suit in which Henry David Ritch seeks to establish himself as an heir-at-law of the late Clem T. Cooper so that he may inherit one-third of the $43,000 Cooper estate, has been filed in the Superior Court of Chatham County.

The obstacle in the way of Ritch's claim is Mrs. Lillian Hamilton, formerly Mrs. Lillian Cooper, wife of the man who died intestate, leaving this desirable property. Ritch says he was legally adopted by Cooper and is entitled to inherit one-third of the estate, as well as to share in the net proceeds from the estate since the death of Cooper on January 14, 1903.

The petitioner is 19 years old. He began the proceedings through J. J. Rahn, Jr., a friend. He shows that when a child 6 years old he was adopted by Cooper, and that he took the name of his foster parent. At that time Cooper was a widower. Ritch continued to live at the Cooper home until six months after the death of Cooper.

FORGOT TO CLOSE WINDOW; GAS FAILED TO KILL MAN

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Because he forgot to close a window in the back of his store when he attempted to kill himself by inhaling illuminating gas, Laurence Louis, a confectioner, will probably recover.

Louis had removed the burners from a gas stove, and placing a rubber tube in his mouth, turned on the gas. Despondency because of business affairs is said to have been the cause of the act.

BIG DISAPPEARING GUN ARRIVES IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Occupying four freight cars, the carriage for the 10-inch disappearing gun in the dummy fortifications in the park extension has arrived from Bethlehem, Pa.

The total weight of the carriage is 225,000 pounds. It will support a gun weighing 30 tons and measuring 35 feet in length. The gun will be mounted inside the fortifications which will be used by the Savannah Volunteer Guards in practice work.

The "Ice Kist"

APPROVED BY
Good Housekeeping Institute

No Crank
No Dasher
No Handle
No Cogs
No Wheels
No Wood
No Hoops
No
Hard Work

$1.95 POSTPAID 15 DAYS' TRIAL 2-QUART SIZE $1.95

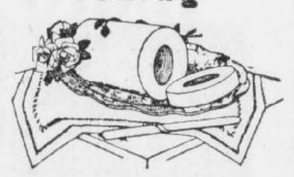
PACK IT — THAT'S ALL

For the ICE-KIST all you have to do is to pour in the cream, sherbet or whatever refreshment it may be, and pack in the ice as in the ordinary freezer. Then the work is ended. There is no working a dasher, no turning a handle or crank, no straining your arms and back, no opening the freezer to "see" if it is freezing, no extra packing in of ice. All you do after packing is to open the freezer and serve the refreshment. It saves work, time, trouble and—you.

Perfect Freezing

The Ice-Kist has no dasher or crank because it has two freezing surfaces. The old-fashioned freezer had only one freezing surface—that is why a crank and dasher were necessary. The Ice-Kist has a metal freezing tube that extends directly through the cream to the bottom. This gives the two freezing surfaces. The "cold penetrates from the center and from the outside, too. The cream is frozen with a smoothness that will delight you.



The Ice-Kist makes a beautiful and perfect-frozen mold.

Special 15-Day Offer

We want you to know the joy of having an Ice-Kist Crankless Freezer in your home. We will send it post-paid upon the return of the coupon together with $1.95—our introductory price. If, after trying the ICE-KIST for 15 days, you are not delighted with it, return it and we will return the $1.95. Don't let the coupon get lost. Send it NOW.

Western Merchandise & Supply Co.,
326 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Enclosed is money order for $1.95. Please send the ICE-KIST CRANKLESS FREEZER for 15 days' trial.

Name.....

Address.....

.....Ex.

FRANKLIN WILL FOUND INTACT AND RESTORED

Document Contains Severe Arraignment of Custom of Wearing Jewelry in This Country.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—All controversies regarding the disposition of the estate of Benjamin Franklin have been settled by the restoration of his will by the manuscript repair department of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

The document, recently resurrected from a vault under the City Hall for the purpose of verifying an office copy, was found to have deteriorated so much during more than a century of obscurity that it was practically indecipherable. Through the renovating process to which it was subjected it has regained much of its original freshness and legibility, making it possible for every detail to be understood.

In a finely-worded passage he makes disposition of his best cane as follows: "My fine crabtree walking stick with a gold head curiously wrought in the form of the cap of liberty I give to my friend and the friend of mankind, General Washington. If it were a scepter, he has merited it and would become it. It was a present to me from that excellent woman, Mme. de Forback, the Dowager Duchess of Deux Ponts."

A small painting of the King of France, presented to him by that monarch, which was mounted in a frame containing 408 diamonds, he bequeathed to his daughter, with the following curious proviso: "The King of France's picture, set with 408 diamonds, to my daughter, Sarah Bache, on the condition that she is not to form any of the diamonds into ornaments either for herself of daughters, and, therefore, countenance the expensive, vain and useless fashion of wearing jewels in this country."

TOLD HE'D DIE WHEN 29, BUT LIVING AT 101

Centenarian Walks to Church on Last Birthday and Gives Sunday School Advice.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Aug. 23.—William T. Osborne, of this city, was 101 years old to-day and he didn't mind it a bit.

Answer to "Old Subscriber," "Vox Populi," "Constant Reader" and "Friend of the Paper:" NO, HE NEVER SMOKED OR DRANK.

In the spring of 1841—when he was 29—four physicians visited him at different times to give him some concrete idea of how much longer he was going to adorn the earth. All said he was firmly in the grip of consumption. Three said he'd be lucky to last more than a few days. The fourth said Osborne didn't have a chance of picking anything off the next Christmas tree.

The four doctors are dead.

Five generations gathered at his home to-day. Naturally, he was delighted. Being a regular communicant of Trinity Methodist Church, he went there this morning. He wanted to walk, but the temperature made that seem unwise. Before the service he addressed a class in the Sunday school and told the scholars to be clean in their habits, stick on the sprinkling cart and keep up a strong activity in labor. He thinks that if he hadn't worked so hard he would not have taken part in to-day's party.

The old man didn't dance any jigs to indicate that he was as lively as he used to be, but he gave plenty of evidence that he was around the place. A natural decline in the power of his eyes recently forced him to give up reading, but he still writes, can hear well, enjoys walking and has a good memory.

He was born nine miles from Newburgh. He has been a farmer, tanner and storekeeper. His wife Sarah died eleven years ago at the age of 91.

WAR IN MEXICO BLOCKS WEDDING OF PAIR 5 TIMES

Young Engineer Kept From Love by Succession of Revolutions in Republic.

DENVER, Aug. 23.—What chance has a little fellow like the god of love in a mix-up with a big bully like the person who holds down the job of god of war?

The young man is Arthur N. Zwetow, a mining engineer employed in Mexico. He and the young woman, Miss Mildred Lowin, have tried to get married five times, to use their own expression, and each time that god of war person has "butted in" and dealt Cupid a knock-out blow.

Young Zwetow is in Concepcion del Oro, a mining camp near the border of the State of Coahulla. Six months ago he wrote his betrothed that he had obtained a leave of absence and the wedding bells would ring any time she said. The young woman got her trousseau ready and set the wedding day. But the bridegroom did not come. A letter from him said the Federals had started a war, the railroad had quit running, bullets were flying and he had to stay.

So it has been for five successive attempts.

Girl Chases 8 Cows With Auto; Gets $4

New Jersey Chauffeurette Uses Machine to Hustle Bovine Trespassers to Pound.

PETERSON, N. J., Aug. 23.—Four dollars of the money Joseph Smith paid for the wanderings of his cows yesterday went into the purse of Miss Minnie DeGray

Eight Smith cows entered her garden and were eating her corn. She chased them in her auto out of the field, across a lot, into the road and a half-mile to the poundmaster's yard. Smith paid $8 for their release. Miss DeGray received half of it.

OREGON 8-HOUR BILL HITS EVERY WORKING CLASS

Professors, Trades, Occupations and Even Day Labor Limited to 48 Hours Weekly Work.

SALEM, OREG., Aug. 23.—If the universal eight-hour bill, filed under the initiative to be voted on at the next general election, should become a law it would revolutionize the industries of the State.

The measure is drafted to apply to every industry, every business or vocation or profession in the State. No one is to be permitted, under its provisions, to work for more than eight hours out of nine consecutive hours a day, or more than forty-eight hours a week.

By this law neither manual labor, trades, nor the professions shall be exempted, but every form of labor, skilled or unskilled, as well as every trade and profession, and persons working therein or thereat, shall be included, in, by and under this law, and the same shall be included, in, by and under this law, within the State or Oregon.

The measure provides that the Labor Commissioner must see to the enforcement of its provisions, and if he does not do this immediately it becomes mandatory upon the Governor to remove the Labor Commissioner from office.

AGED FATHER THRASHES SON WHO THINKS HIM EASY PREY

EAST LIVERPOOL, OHIO, Aug. 23. When Francis Beaver, 30 years old, charged his father, Henry Beaver, aged 65, with having spoken in an uncomplimentary tone of the former's wife, the father resented the imputation and soundly thrashed his son.

The son, thinking he could easily worst his aged father, began the fight with a hard blow on the elder man's nose. Thoroughly aroused, Beaver, Sr., then started in and soon the son was lying on the ground with a fractured ankle and a fractured right leg.

ANNIVERSARY CLUB MEETS WITH THE SOUTHERN STATES LIFE

Leading Life Insurance Agents Hold Convention Here—Every Man Produced Over $100,000 Worth of Paid For Business in Twelve Months — Interesting Sessions Held.

There was a feast of reason, a sparkle of wit and a flow of soul at the brilliant banquet given at the Hotel Ansley last night when the Sixth Annual Convention of the Anniversary Club of the Southern States Life Insurance Company brought that gathering to a close.

Over one hundred guests were present.

This convention is celebrated by those members of the agency force of The Southern States Life Insurance Company who produced over $100,000 worth of paid for insurance during the year which ends June 30.

This convention had been in session two days, business sessions being held in the morning, the afternoon and evening being given over to entertainment.

Opening Session.

The first session of the Convention was held in the assembly room

J. C. WALDEN, SR., President.

of the Hotel Ansley on Friday morning. The largest attendance in the history of the club was present.

President Wilmer L. Moore, of The Southern States Life Insurance Company, greeted the club membership in a warm address of welcome, in which he congratulated them upon the splendid work just closed, and the beginning of the new year of the Anniversary Club, the first month of which saw the agents break all producing records.

J. R. WILLIAMS, Vice President.

Officers are not elected by the Anniversary Club, but office is won by the amount of insurance written. The agent writing the most business is President, the second man is Vice President, the leaders in each State are State Vice Presidents.

J. C. Walden, Sr., of Alabama, won the coveted honor of President. J. R. Williams, of South Carolina, was installed as Vice President.

Officers Installed.

The State Vice Presidents installed were T. Peters, Jr., of Georgia; B. B. Murray, of Florida; H. Clay Smith, of Alabama, and G. J. McDowell, of South Carolina.

In addition to these there were present other members of this Club who qualified for 1912-13: H. N. McAfee, of Georgia, a member for the sixth time; H. Willis Hogg, of Georgia, a member for the third time; J. T. Weems, of Georgia, the oldest member of the agency force of the company in point of service, for the sixth time; Fred Hines, of South Carolina, for the fifth time, and L. E. Black, Jr., C. S. Gurr and J. R. Munroe, for the first time.

Joe W. Vinson, whose absence from the meeting, owing to ill health, was greatly regretted by all present, completes his fifth year of membership.

He also signalized his intention of making his election for next year sure by not only leading the agency force in the month of July but by beating his own and all other previous records of written business in any one month, and thereby establishing a high mark for agents to aim at.

Brief addresses were delivered to the club by the President and Vice President of the Club.

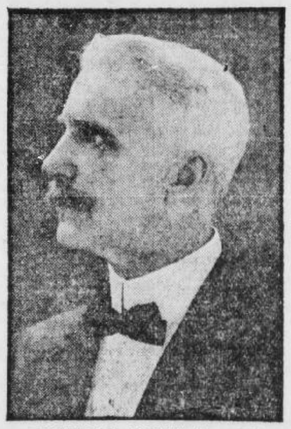
Unanimously Re-elected.

Robert F. Moore, Agency Secretary, was unanimously re-elected Secretary of the Anniversary Club, which position he has held with credit since the beginning of the organization.

Following the roll call of the Anniversary Club badges and certificates were distributed, after which the first "Keystone Degree" was conferred.

"New Policy" was the subject of an interesting paper by Supervisor of Agents, W. S. McLeod, which was followed by discussion and questions.

Agency Secretary Robert F. Moore followed with an interesting paper on "Items of Expense Charged to First Year's Business—Economy, What it Means to the Agent and the Policy-holder." His paper was followed by discussion and questions.



ROBERT F. MOORE, Secretary.

The photograph of the Anniversary Club, which appears on this page, was taken, after which the Club was entertained at luncheon at the Capital City Club by President Moore. Friday afternoon the Club attended the baseball game and Friday evening occupied boxes at the Forsyth theater.

Concluding Session.

The concluding session of this interesting convention was held on Saturday morning, at which time a symposium of talks entitled "Confidential Chats With Medical Department," was participated in by E. M. Veatch, Dr. Gaines, W. S. Kendrick and Samuel Barrett, Actuary. This was followed by discussion and questions.

"The Company's Method of Payment of Death Claims—What It Should Mean to the Supervisor, the Agent, the Company and the Beneficiary," was delivered by Supervisor Frank E. Brodnax. This was followed by a discussion on the analysis of this subject under the following heads: (1) Bankers Agents Contracts, (2) Local Advertisement; (3) Draft on Local Bank, and (4) Follow Up of Prospects from Payment.

J. E. McLauchlin, Director of the Metropolitan Agency, followed with an interesting talk on "Systematic Following Up of Prospects."

A symposium of actual experiences by all agents came next and the formal addresses of the Convention were concluded with a most interesting address by Hon. Hervey W. Laird, former Assistant Insurance Commissioner of Alabama, and now Assistant to President Wilmer L. Moore.

Entertained at Luncheon.

The Club was entertained at luncheon at the Hotel Ansley and again attended the baseball game in the afternoon.

The Banquet at the Hotel Ansley last night was probably the most brilliant gathering held in the history of the Club and the Hotel.

Over one hundred guests were entertained. The colors of the Southern States Life Insurance Company—Red, Blue and White, and the Keystone Arch, the insignia of the Company, were carried out in the flowers, ices and place cards.

President Wilmer L. Moore presided as toastmaster, and introduced the speakers.

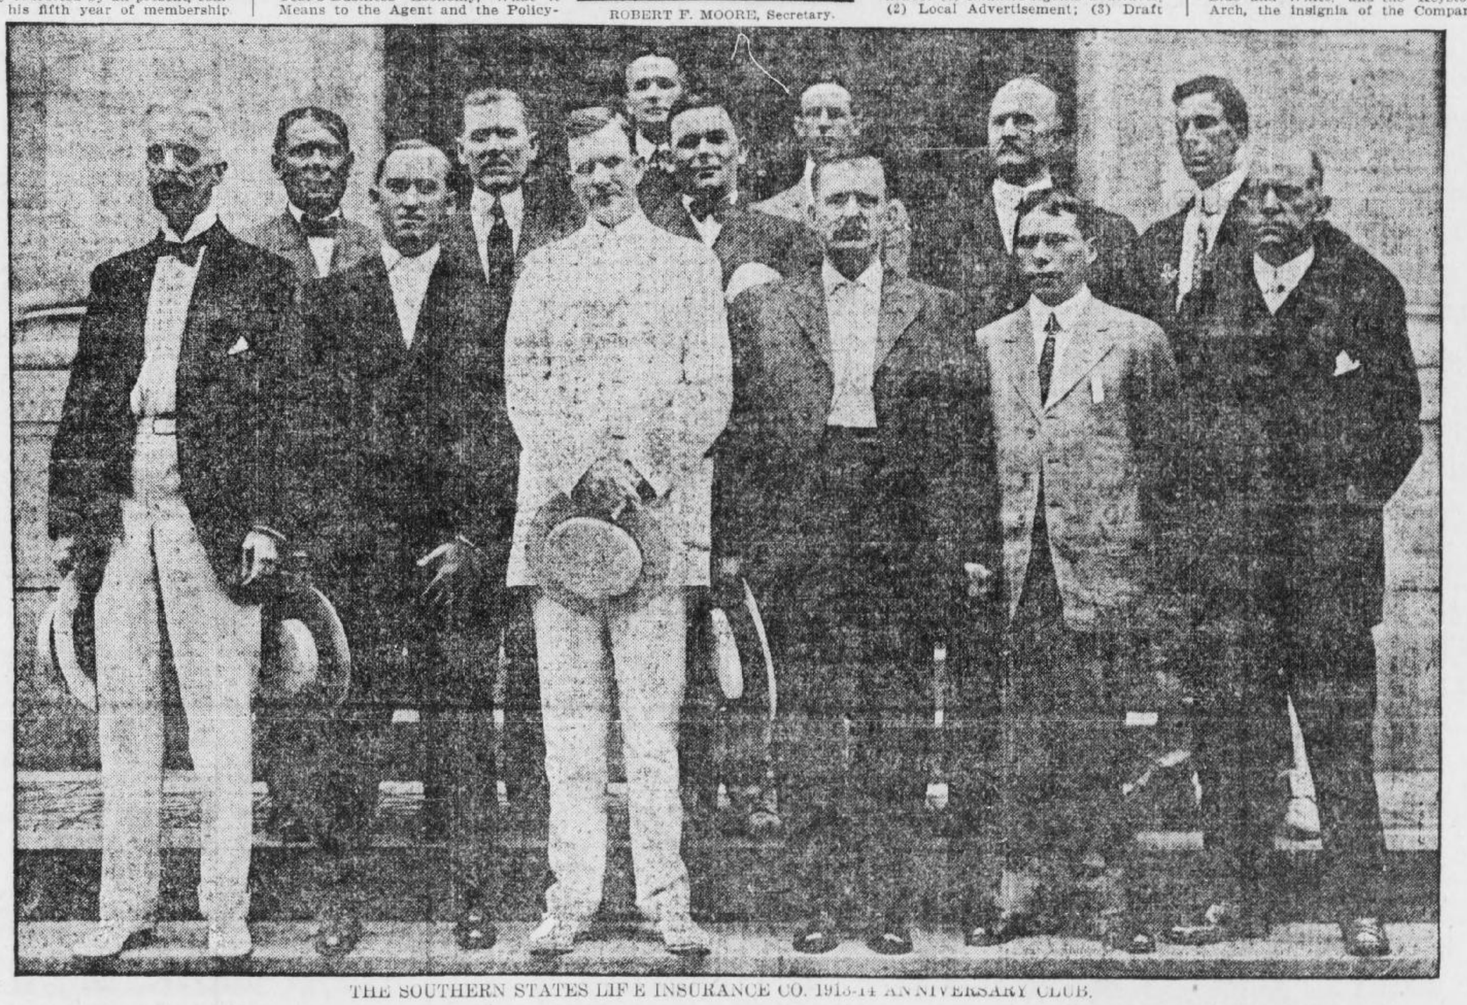
J. C. Walden, Sr., President of the Club, was the first and his response to the toast, "The Anniversary Club—the Top Rung," was warmly received.

He was followed by J. R. Williams, Vice President, whose subject, "The Southern States Life—Confidence Begets Loyalty," was handled in a splendid manner.

G. J. McDowell, a member of the Anniversary Club, and a familiar speaker at these banquets, responded to the toast, "The Keystone Degree—An Incentive to Work."

Burwell Responds.

Speaker W. H. Burwell, of the General Assembly of Georgia, delivered a splendid toast in response to President Moore's cordial introduction, on



THE SOUTHERN STATES LIFE INSURANCE CO. 1913-14 ANNIVERSARY CLUB.

T. PETERS, JR., Georgia Vice President

MENU

GEORGIA CANTALOUPE

CELERY QUEEN OLIVES ALMONDS

CONSOMME FLORENTINE
CHEESE STRAWS

POMPANO A LA CARONDELET POTATOES ANNA

CALVE'S SWEETBREAD ST. CLAIR
MOYENS PEAS

CHICKEN FILLET, LUCULLUS
PEELED ASPARAGUS HOLLANDAISE

LETTUCE, RUSSIAN DRESSING
BEATEN BISCUIT

MOUSSE A LA PARISIENNE
PETITS FOUR

CHEESE AND BENT'S CRACKER

DEMI TASSE

APOLLINARIS
CIGARS

Banquet Menu.

B. B. MURRAY, Florida Vice President.

Hotel Ansley Scene of Wonderful Banquet to Club Last Night—Toasts Were Made by Speaker Burwell, Hon. C. B. Brown, of Alabama, Hon. W. S. Witham and Clark Howell.

G. J. McDOWELL, South Carolina V. P.

"Success Is Measured by Ambition."

He was followed by Hon. Clark Howell, who responded to the toast, "Civic Duties—Every Man Has His Part."

Hon. Cyrus B. Brown, Assistant Commissioner of Insurance for the State of Alabama, represented that commonwealth and responded to the toast, "Alabama—Her Part in the Nation's Progress."

H. CLAY SMITH, Alabama Vice Pres.

Hon. W. S. Witham concluded the evening's gayety with a wonderful potpourri when he was presented to his hearers, with the following title for his toast, "A Toast, Like a Text, Is Given to Talk From."

EUROPE TROTS, BUT CAN'T KEEP STEP TO MUSIC

Syncopated Tunes and Dances Beyond Ken of Old World, Says American Composer.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Armand Vecsey, composer and director of music at the Ritz-Carlton, has returned fresh from a European trip with lots of new music and some comments upon the musical situation abroad which may act as balm to the souls of American composers, and a joy for those who are not musicians, but like to hear the scream of the American Eagle.

Mr. Vecsey has not lived on this side of the Atlantic long enough to have taken out final naturalization papers, but there is nobody on this side of Weehawken who is more intensely and enthusiastically American in a musical way. He says American music and American motifs have spread over all Europe, but the music the natives over there don't know how to play.

Opera in Europe, as Mr. Vecsey has viewed it this summer, is poor as compared with what is given at the Metropolitan Opera House, and there isn't anything now between London and Vienna that has to do with music or the stage which local talent can't beat hands down.

"I have been in Paris, London, Berlin, Munich, and Vienna," said Mr. Vecsey, "and everywhere I have found American music the most popular. Then the turkey trot one finds all over the Continent. Yet nowhere did I hear the music played correctly, although they try hard, and when it came to fitting German or French words to a typical trotting tune, the effect was ludicrous.

Recognize the "Truthahn Tanz?"

"Think of what the result was in Berlin, when they turned 'When the Midnight Choo-Choo Leaves for Alabam' into German! In Germany they call the trot 'Truthahn Tanz,' and in France it is the 'Pas du Dindon.' Who would recognize the original under such appellations?

"Then the French can not dance the trot, nor can the Germans. Somehow they can't just find out the character of it. Of course their bands and orchestras can not get the time right in the first place. Why, at the Folies Bergere in Paris, I saw two of the best French dancers giving what was supposed to be a most perfect rendition of the trot, and I assure you it was ridiculous. It was a very poor imitation of the real thing.

"Yet, I was astonished to find that all the new French music and most of the new German operettas are either in the American style, as nearly as their composers could approach it, or have American motifs. The tango seems to be breaking up the trot over there, partly, I suppose, because their dancers can come nearer to dancing it than the purely American steps. In Paris I saw a couple trying the Texas Tommy, and it was a sight to cause a horse to double up.

"Why can't they play a turkey trot? For the same reason that nobody except a Hungarian can play Hungarian music. Almost every musical country has something that is peculiarly its own—a style of music that when played correctly is infectious.

American Style Has Call.

"Hungary has its csardas, Austria its waltz, and America its syncopated time. When each is played properly, it is bound to move an assemblage of people, and just now the American style has the call everywhere.

"At the Palais de Danse, in Berlin, I first heard a turkey trot played by a German orchestra. It was very bad. I want to tell you that in Europe this summer there is no music, no opera, no Philharmonic concert, and no play that can compare with what has been heard here in New York this year."

"In Paris," went on Mr. Vecsey, with a trace of feeling, "when they see an American trunk, they lie in wait to rob the owner, and go crazy over the thought of loot. It is the same in Berlin.

"I must tell you that not anywhere are women so generally chic in their costumes nowadays as right here in New York.

"True, I did see many smartly gowned women, but investigation showed that most of them were Americans."

Rector Denounces Paid Choir Singers

Clergyman Declares There Is No Worship in Their Strange and Unutterable Music.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., Aug. 23.—The Rev. E. J. Craft, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, caused a sensation while addressing a meeting of the parishioners of Calvary parish by telling them what he would do if he were entering upon a new pastorate.

For one thing, he said, he did not believe in paid singers for church choirs "The service of the church was designed for the people as a whole and not alone for the choir," he said. "These modern choirs take the worship away from the people of the congregation and do all the worshiping themselves. They sing in wild and strange ways and in unutterable tongues the praises of God."

Veering of River Threatens Farms

Every Laborer Available Is Rushed to Head Off Flow of Missouri.

FREEMONT, NEBR., Aug. 23.—Every laborer available is being sent by the Burlington Railroad to Folsom to fight the Missouri River, which is again eating into the valuable farm lands of that section and threatening to cut its way to the railroad tracks. Many carloads of stone have been dumped into the river.

The river suddenly began veering from its channel a few days ago. Inside of two days it had swamped 20 acres of land. Fear is now felt that the river will eat its way back to the extensive farms within the last year at a cost of more than $500,000.

Tame Trout Craves Petting; Fed by Hand

Feels Insulted if Food Is Not Served in Manner to Which He Is Accustomed.

ESTES PARK, COLO., Aug. 23.—Sunbeam, the pet speckled trout in the fish hatchery at Estes Park, has just recovered from an indisposition caused by stomach trouble or rheumatism, and is again able to take its place as the only pet trout in captivity.

The fish, now a 3-year-old and about eleven inches long, is as good an example of gentle and loving trouthood as it is possible to find. Fed from the hand from the time it was hatched, it feels insulted now unless its food is given to it in that way.

It is very fond of being stroked and petted, and will swim around and rub itself against a person's hand whenever a chance is given it.

Stranger Is Son, Gone for 20 Years

Father Turns Wanderer Away, but Mother Calls Him Back, and Reunion Follows.

GLASGOW, KY., Aug. 23.—Virgil Huffman had been away from home twenty years, seeking his fortune in Alaska, and the father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. James Huffman, were sitting in a room of their home near here discussing him and wondering if he would ever come back.

There was a knock at the door and Mr. Huffman opened it to see a dusty traveler, who said he was tired and was seeking lodging for the night. Mr. Huffman thought he could do nothing for him, but Mrs. Huffman "reckoned" they could manage somehow.

Then they led him into the hall, under the swinging lamp, and as the light fell on his face the aged couple recognized him as their son.

African Chieftain Is Harvard Student

Begins Stupendous Task of Reducing His Own Language to Written Form.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., Aug. 23.—A full-blooded African chieftain has just passed his entrance examinations at Harvard with flying colors and will enter the university next September as a member of the class of 1917. He is P. Gbe Wolo, and his people, 300,000 strong, are the Krus of Liberia, on the west coast of Africa.

They have no written language, so that the only way he can communicate with his family is through traders on the coast, who send the message by word of mouth along the trail. He has begun the stupendous task of reducing his language to writing.

Goes to Cemetery Instead of Ball Park

Fan Mistakes Funeral Hack for Omnibus on Its Way to Diamond.

MONTGOMERY, MO., Aug 23.—A baseball rooter came here from a distance to attend the St. Charles-Montgomery game, and by mistake he got into a hack at the depot filled with pallbearers going to a funeral.

As he had crepe on his hat, the pallbearers thought he had come as a mourner and he was taken to the cemetery instead of the ball park.

Finding himself in a funeral procession, he woke up and escaped. He got to the ball grounds just in time to see the home team win.

'Star Baths' Latest Complexion Remedy

Young Women Campers Take Nightly 'Plunge' in Milky Way Beams on Tower.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Star baths are the fad at the summer camp of the Young Women's Christian Association in Blauvelt, N. Y. Miss Marion Hopkins, the camp leader, is given credit for the innovation. The baths are taken on top of a high tower in the center of the camp. It will accommodate a dozen bathers.

There is a long waiting list of young women campers who are anxious to enjoy the reported benefits of immersion in starlight. Chief among these is said to be the "star-shine complexion."

Husband in Prison; Wife Willed $20,000

Richmond Woman Given Share of Estate After Helpmate Is Sentenced for Embezzlement.

RICHMOND, VA., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Maud Kent Rowley, whose husband, William J. Rowley, formerly connected with a hotel here, was recently sentenced to serve two years in State prison for embezzling $8,000 from the Jefferson Hotel in this city while auditor there, inherits $20,000 from the estate of her aunt, Mrs. Junius A. Morris, of Richmond, who died August 3 at Atlantic City.

The value of the estate is placed at $496,000.

Woman Works as Circus Roustabout

Breaks Down While Handling Heavy Tent Pole and Her Secret Is Revealed.

LA CROSSE, WIS., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Ada Broughton, unable to support her two children and invalid husband on wages paid a woman, donned a man's attire and labored beside farm hands in Dakota wheat fields. She broke down under the strain and came to La Crosse to seek lighter employment, becoming a circus roustabout. Lifting heavy poles and canvas resulted in her complete breakdown. Then she told her story to the police and collapsed. She was taken unconscious to a hospital. Relatives are on the way from her home at Rice Lake.

HEARST'S SUNDAY American Advertising Contest

$10.00 Given Away!!

Last Sunday only the trade-marks or distinguishing characteristics of the advertisers below were given. $10.00 in cash was offered to the person sending in to The American, in the fewest possible words, a description of the advertisers whose "slogan" appeared below. Thousands of these replies were received and the prize goes to Mrs. O. D. Gorman, Jr., 79 W. 15th St., her answers appearing below:

WALL-PAPER

Thirty years in the wall-paper business have made us proficient. Ask our customers. Before you buy, try us. :: ::

"Better Be Safe than Sorry"

71 South Pryor Street

BURNETT WALL PAPER CO. BURNETT

"Go Where the Crowds Go"

AND

You will be delighted with the cool, comfortable Montgomery Theater. Absolutely the latest pictures.

Anna Von Hoffman is now singing

AT

The Montgomery

The easy way to buy clothes

Your Credit is Good at

DOLLAR A WEEK DAY 14 W. MITCHELL ST.

"Truly Duffy's"

The home of low prices, on the corner of Mitchell and Forsyth Sts. Attend our immense Clearing-Out Sale now going on. :: ::

DUFFY'S

"The Velvet Kind"

The kind of Ice Cream you really like. It's pure, clean and wholesome. Try it once. ∴ ∴ ∴

PHONE IVY 6849

VELVET ICE CREAM CO.

26 E. North Avenue

27 years in the same stand.

Shoes for the Entire Family

See our Fall and Winter stock of Men's and Ladies' models. Just from the Eastern style centers.

MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED

R. C. BLACK

35 Whitehall Street

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

ATLANTA HAS SUPPORT FOR HOME-GOODS EXPOSITION

Spirit Which Makes City Famous Prevails, and Enough Exhibitors Sign Agreements to Take Space to Assure Success of Project.

Decision Necessary Tuesday So That Plans for New Commerce Building Might Be Changed. Manufacturers Are Responding.

It was a close shave, everyone admits, but as usual the Atlanta spirit prevailed, and the "Made in Atlanta" exhibit is assured.

Tuesday's luncheon at the Ansley was the "clincher." Several years of agitation, a year of actual work, brought to a climax by a vigorous campaign of three months, developed the exhibit project to a point where about 36 manufacturers had signed their names to agreements binding them to take floor space for a period of three years.

Thus matters stood Tuesday. Meanwhile the contractors were at work in the new Chamber building remodeling it. The plans called for offices. If a change were to be made, a decision was necessary at once.

The case was put squarely up to the Atlanta manufacturers Tuesday, and on Tuesday's luncheon was staked the entire plan. The result of the appeal was success.

To Have Four Floors.

Four floors will be devoted to the exhibit. One floor will be given over to the cotton industry—textiles, oils and by-products. Furniture made in Atlanta will take another entire floor. Building materials probably will take a floor, kindred lines of manufacture will be grouped together as far as is consistent with economical disposal of space.

Who will be in charge of the exhibit in the new building at Pryor street and Auburn avenue has not been determined. Neither has it been decided when the exhibits will be installed. All this remains to be done.

This much is certain—there will be telephone service on each floor, an expert in charge and an intelligent effort to make the exhibit pay in dollars and cents for every participant.

Had the project fallen through, it would have been lamentable, for Nashville, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Hartford, Conn., St. Louis and other cities have such exhibits; others are planning them, and Atlanta would, for the first time, be forced to admit itself less progressive than its rivals.

Those Already Pledged.

The following firms had signed for space up to Saturday, the nature of the business being suggested where the name is not self-explanatory:

Southern Engraving Company.
Frederick Disinfectant Company.
J. K. Orr Shoe Company.
E. VanWinkle Company (motor trucks).
Atlanta Gas Light Company.
Southern Upholstering Company.
Atlanta Stove Works.
Southern Spring Bed Company.
Burnett, Bell & Klapper (furniture).
Gholstin - Cunningham Company (bed springs).
All-star Manufacturing Company (neckties).
Byrd Printing Company.
Norris, Inc. (candies).
Willingham-Tift Lumber Company.
Tripod Paint Company.
J. P. Stevens Engraving Company.
Atlanta Paper Company.
Atlanta Blank Book Manufacturing Company.
White Provision Company.
Dowman-Dozier (metal workers).
Foote & Davies (office furnishings).
Golden Eagle Buggy Company.
Metzger Mattress Company.
Whittier Mills (textiles).
Marcus Loeb & Co. (overalls).
Nunnally & McCrae (overalls).
Phoenix Planing Mills.
Parian Paint Company.
Atlanta Show Case Company.
Greer Manufacturing Company (jewelry).
F. J. Cooledge (building materials).
M. D. & H. L. Smith (awnings).
Reed Oil Company.
Atlanta Metal Bed Company.
Atlanta Auto Top and Trimming Company.
Monerief Furnace Company.
Coca-Cola Company.
Walter Baillard Optical Company.
Hagan & Liddd Co. (soft drinks).
Atlanta Art Glass Company.
K. E. Hill Manufacturing Company (razor blade strops).

In addition to the above, the Southern Cotton Seed Crushers' Association, the cotton oil mills, the textile and other cotton interests have an entire floor, where they will exhibit the cotton plant and all of its various uses.

ENGLISH MAKERS INVENT CAP WHICH KEEPS SHAPE

A problem that has engaged English cap manufacturers for some time has been how to produce a cloth cap that will keep its shape after it has been in use for some time. An enterprising firm of manufacturers now claims that they have solved the problem and that the shape of their caps is not affected by rain. The idea introduced consists of placing a flat plate of straw plait in the cap between the lining and the cloth crown.

This makes the top of the cap sit flat, and as the straw is not affected by wet it is said the cap can be worn for a much longer period than the ordinary

Sweet Potato Crop Yields Big Returns

Would Bring Much More if Southern Farmers Did Not Glut Market at Harvest.

Each year the sweet potato is becoming of greater importance as a money crop in the South. The value of this crop in the United States in 1900 was $34,429,000. 90 per cent of which was produced in the Southern States. The total area devoted to sweet potatoes in the United States increased from 537,000 acres in 1899 to 641,000 in 1909, and the yield increased from 42,500,000 to 52,200,000 bushels. The total value of the crop increased at a much more rapid rate than either the acreage or the yield, showing an increase of 78.3 per cent in ten years.

With better methods of storing and marketing the potatoes, it is said, their value could be doubled without increasing the acreage or production. This is especially true in the South, where the potatoes are either rushed on the market at digging time, when the price is low, or stored in outdoor pits or banks, where a large portion decays.

Very few of the sweet potatoes stored in pits or banks ever reach the market, for from 25 to 50 per cent spoil, and those that remain are not of good quality. Even if the pit or bank method of storage would keep the potatoes, it is not economical.

Too much labor and expense are required to make these banks every year and to get the potatoes out when wanted for market. Sweet potatoes can be marketed more economically and to much better advantage from storage houses.

Green Shirts Shown For Winter Wear

Long-Pointed Collars in White and Self-Striped Effects Continue in Vogue.

New features are noted among collars and shirts shown by leading manufacturers for fall and winter. Imported dress shirts, in soft laundered effects with musnroom tucks and semi-French cuffs are selling readily. Shirts with a short stiff bosom in various color combinations are also featured.

White self-striped effects in French pique with stiff and unstarched bosoms are also meeting a good demand. A soft bosom with cross-striped plaits, in various color combinations, is a new fall feature that has been well received.

Woven madras in colored effects will be strong.

The demand for silk shirts is increasing and they are becoming more of a staple than formerly. Green will be a popular shirt color for the new season

The long pointed collars in white and self-striped effects are continuing into the next season.

A departure in them is the wider two-inch band instead of the narrow one now worn. These new collars have a three and a half inch point.

The wider band is claimed to give them more the appearance of a standing collar, besides causing them to sit better and afford greater comfort.

Stocks of Iron Not Above 100,000 Tons

Accumulation in Yards Reduced Rapidly in Southern Territory. Curtailment Continues.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 23.—Small sales of pig iron continue in the Southern territory, with a satisfactory aggregate.

The price of pig iron holds around $11 per ton, No. 2 Foundry. There have been a number of sales made for delivery during the last part of the year and some inquiries are in hand for iron to be delivered the first quarter in 1914.

There still is curtailment of the make. It is believed Alabama will produce during August almost as much iron as in July. Furnace companies are expressing the belief that before the end of the year a buying movement is likely to call for an immense tonnage. The furnace and warrant yards inventory will show now over 100,000 tons on hand. A few months ago there were 150,000 tons on the yards.

Basic iron demand is more satisfactory. Charcoal iron price is above $23, with the make as low as it ever was in the South.

Steel operations are steady, the several plants in Alabama working on practically full time. Fabricated steel is going out in all directions. Cotton tie manufacturers have had a prosperous season.

Fertilizer Concern Has Splendid Year

American Agricultural Chemical Earns Close to 7 Per Cent on Its Common Stock.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—American Agricultural Chemical for its year to June 30 is understood to have earned something better than 6 per cent on the $18,330,000 common. In fact, it is barely possible that the final figures will come nearer 7 per cent on this issue.

Unless conditions in the fertilizer trade become very much worse than for the last two years, the company can continue to earn and pay the present 4 per cent dividend. This dividend rate is, by the way, a testimonial to the wisdom of directors in making the initial distribution on the common stock rather modest. If a 5 per cent or 6 per cent rate had been adopted two years ago, the future outlook would not be nearly so happy as it is to-day.

A very strong feature of American Agricultural operations is the high percentage of branded or trade-marked goods which it sells. It is safe to state that 90 per cent of the company's tonnage consists of trade-mark goods, which farmers buy on the reputation of a particular brand for the specific purpose desired,

SAMPLES COST DRY GOODS MEN MANY DOLLARS

Dealers Feel Something Should Be Done to Stop Incessant Drain on Their Profits.

There is strong feeling in dry goods circles that something should be done to curb the increasing demands of buyers for samples. In most quarters there is a strong opinion expressed that the giving of samples is a necessary evil up to a certain point, but there is also a strong opinion that this point has long since been passed.

Few manufacturers and wholesalers take the trouble to find out just what samples cost them. In only a few cases are definite records kept and the cost of the samples figured.

A New York silk firm gets out about 250 styles a season and the buyers got fair-sized samples of each style they bought. This is really necessary, but it is trade custom, the house follows the general path.

A big woolen firm in New York which does business with the cutting-up trades and larger retailers is one of the best informed on the subject of sample expense.

"On our books," the head of the firm said, "there are about 2,500 accounts. Of these about 1,800 are manufacturers of clothing. To each manufacturer we give five or ten sample books. The cloth in each book is valued at about 20 cents, and the expense of getting them up brings the cost to about 50 cents. This means that each manufacturing account costs us about $3.75 a season for samples. With two seasons a year and 1,800 manufacturers' accounts it is easy to see what samples mean to us without trying to figure the cost of samples for the retail accounts."

In another quarter of the woolen goods trade it was said that the samples given out mounted up to a tidy sum in the course of a year, but that the expense had not been so great of late because several houses had agreed to make clothiers pay for most of the samples they got.

"One of the worst features of the sample business in this industry," this agent said, "is the way some members of the clothing trade use them. Many of them have no scruples at all about taking our samples to a competitor and asking him at how much less than our price he can get the goods made up by his mill. This is a little off the subject, perhaps, but it illustrates one of the worst phases of the woolen industry."

Among the cotton goods houses the evil is seen in its worst form so far as quantity is concerned, but the cheaper qualities of these goods tends to lessen the aggregate loss as compared with wool and silk goods. Lace and embroidery firms also pay tribute to the sample god at the rate of several hundreds to several thousands of dollars a year.

Last, but not least, comes the big department store. Inquiry at several of them in New York brought out the assertion that samples cost them from $30,000 to $60,000 a year. Only 15 to 20 per cent of the people who take these samples from the stores really buy anything afterward, and the resultant loss necessarily is heavy.

N. O. T. & M. Receiver May Ask Big Loan

Frisco Subsidiary Almost Certain to Default on Interest Due September 1.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—As soon as New Orleans, Texas and Mexico receivers know whether Frisco receivers will or will not pay the $700,000 interest due September 1, they will make application for permission to issue approximately $1,000,000 receivers' certificates. In the meantime the Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust Company is making temporary loans to the receivers' comprising $100,000 for debt falling due August 1, and about $200,000 additional to middle of September.

The engineers employed to examine the properties which make up the Frisco's South Texas lines have not yet made their report, but the most favorable statement would show that at least 18 months of steady work and adequate funds would be necessary to put New Orleans, Texas and Mexico in a position to earn interest on its bonds. Others believe at least three years would be consumed in putting the line on its feet, and between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 expenditures would be needed.

Under these circumstances assumption is made in certain quarters that Frisco will default its guarantee of the interest due September 1. In fact, it is said that any other course would be improper.

KNITTING YARNS SLOWER BECAUSE STRIKE IS ON

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Buying of knitting yarns has slowed up, due to the knit goods strike in New York and Brooklyn, but prices show no change. Just how the strike will affect the market is a matter of conjecture, although most dealers admit that prices will drop if it is continued.

Spinners were unwilling to raise quotations on worsted yarns materially, as it would result in advancing the prices for worsted goods and so kill the prospective demand for them.

Cotton yarns were quiet, the small demand for them being attributed to the spinners' high prices. Weaving yarns were selling at lower figures than for several weeks, but only small orders were placed. Buyers, influenced by favorable cotton crop reports, were holding out for still lower prices.

There were no changes in Southern frame-spun knitting yarns, but there was less activity noted in the coarser counts of single combed yarns.

SUMMER TRADE DEVELOPED BY BRAINY EFFORT

August Dullness of Years Ago Is Overcome by Teaching Public What to Buy Then.

"Summer isn't the terror to us that it used to be," remarked a white-haired veteran of the department stores of Atlanta—a man who is an interesting talker and a consistent advertiser, but who keeps his own name and his own personality persistently in the background.

"There was a time," he went on in reminiscence, "when we might almost as well have closed up the store during July and August. That was years ago.

"In the summer all the well-to-do customers went out of Atlanta, and did not return until fall. Fall was a mad scramble for customers and stores alike.

"The less wealthy, who stayed in town, did little shopping. Everyone thought it was too hot. No one ever paid any attention to buying in midsummer. The stores were unattractive. Usually the proprietor was vacationing—if that's a good word—himself.

"I do not know who had the inspiration first in Atlanta. But a change came about. The wisest merchant, whoever he was, decided there were people in town with money to spend, even in the summer time.

"He schemed out the way to get it, which is followed almost universally by Atlanta stores nowadays.

"To make the story short, he offered bargains so attractive that shoppers simply had to come to town for the August sales. The custom has grown until to-day the things which have no season of necessity have been exploited so skillfully that the public believes summer is the season for them.

"That may sound obscure, but I do not intend it to be.

"Take furniture, for instance. There is no more reason why one should buy furniture in January than in August. Nor is there any reason why one should buy furniture in August in preference to January.

"But the summer furniture sale has become so much a fixture in the leading stores that people wait for it. It is good business for all concerned. The merchant is striving toward the ideal condition, which would be sales and collections of an unvarying amount every month in the year—unattainable, but none the less an ideal state of affairs.

"The customer, likewise, is winning. She effects economies by midsummer buying of furniture and blankets, and distributes her expenditures more evenly over the year."

Textile Furs Being Featured for Fall

Wide Variety of Pile Fabrics Shown in Cloaks for the 1913-14 Season.

Many new effects in pile fabrics are being featured for the fall and winter seasons. Matelasse plushes in brocaded effects and high colors, to be used for cloakings and millinery, as well as other brocaded effects, are prominent features in present trading.

There is also a tendency to moires, in Scotch plaids and checks, for dresses, cloaks and trimmings. A wide variety of Oriental and Bulgarian effects in plushes and velvets are also shown for vestings, collars and cuffs.

A new item is the jasper effect, which has a rich woolen appearance and is featured for cloakings.

The fabric is of an indefinite striped appearance, and is shown in black and white and blue and brown mixtures.

Imitation Persian lamb is also popular among the more expensive fabrics, being made to retail at about $7.50 for 50-inch widths.

FRENCH CALICOMAKERS MAKE 20-YEAR COMPACT

Several years ago an attempt was made to organize the French calico printing trade, a cartel being formed which included the principal producers, and an effort was made to fix standard prices. The results were not altogether satisfactory, and the agreement was allowed to expire. The matter was taken up again recently, and it is now reported that a new cartel, comprising seven of the leading French firms whose works are situated in Rouen, Epinal, Bolbec and Valenciennes, has been formed.

A central sales bureau, which will transact the entire selling business of the concerns interested, has been established under the style of the Comptoir de Vente des Tissus Francais Imprimees.

According to the Daily Consular and Trade Report, the agreement is for twenty years.

SMALL TOWN SECURES NATIONAL BANK CHARTER

STOCKTON, CAL., Aug. 23.—Announcement is made that application the first bie rubber factory to be eat Riverbank has been granted.

This is the first time in California that a town of 600 inhabitants has secured a charter for a national bank. The bank is capitalized at $25,000.

TURNING TO FRENCH MODELS.

Fall models for men's lounge suits show complete ignoring of English fashions and tend toward the French for the first time in many years. Cheviots yield to unfinished worsteds, and the colorful textures to the plainer. The popularity of dark greens and browns in "off" shades is evidenced by the earlier selections of tailors, while inconspicuous plaids and gun club checks are also well in demand.

Southern Hosiery Buyers in Market

Winter Goods Reported Scarce and Stringency May Become Acute by Fall.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Southern hosiery buyers are visiting the local market. Although mill agents report cheap goods sold up, some provision is evidently being made for the newcomers. The Southern jobbers have waited this year until the indications of the cotton crop were fairly certain before operating. They are not taking 84-needle bundle goods, as they predict lower prices on those lines. There are said to be fewer orders for extracts booked this year than formerly.

This is not affecting the valume of sales, as extracts are made up only to order, and customary buyers of those lines are simply seeking a different finish. Winter goods are already reported scarce, and, as the duplicating period has not yet begun, the stringency will probably be acute before the end of the fall.

Cotton Goods Buying Seems to Lack Snap

Limited Number of Desirable Spring Dress Fabrics Taken by Purchasers in East.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—While certain cotton good sellers are satisfied with conditions, nearly everywhere is the complaint that the market is without any snap save for a limited number of desirable spring dress fabrics.

A number of buyers are reported to have gone home without purchasing, while others took only sample pieces. Such wide lines were shown that, in some cases, buyers got the impression that there was plenty of goods back of them. This was not the case, but the buyers were frightened off.

Staples are not in demand as they should be at this time, and specialties are holding the lead. Fancies in ratines, crepes and voiles have shown little tendency to lose their popularity.

According to The Textile Manufacturers' Journal, several larger selling agencies have opened their spring lines of dress ginghams, zephyrs, seersuckers, madras, krinkles, cheviots and shirtings.

MEN WANT AMERICAN STYLES IN THEIR CLOTHES

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—During the past few weeks several English clothing manufacturers have had representatives in the local market with their garment samples. While some interest was displayed, it was mostly for obtaining information.

The sales made were principally on overcoats, and were intended only to add a few imported garments to the lines regularly offered. The English salesmen learned that the majority of retailers in the larger cities of the United States prefer American styles.

A local manufacturer said that foreign competitors will have to realize this still more and make their clothing which they intend selling here more on American lines, or else there will be little business developed in this country.

He also said that foreign ready-to-wear garments would not have to be seriously reckoned with by local merchants for some time to come.

LONDON STYLES FAVOR LOOSE ENDS FOR TIES

According to a London report there will be increased activity in the neckwear trade there this fall. The marked style tendency now is not toward color, but toward shape. The loose ended knot is favored, but many four-in-hands are also shown. Various shades of blue and gray constitute the color trend at present.

In London men are wearing either a jacket suit or a frock coat with a small black bow tie. The start with black will probably extend to other colors as the season continues.

It is thought, however, that this vogue will not be generally adopted, as it is entirely out of keeping with the fall ideas advanced by English haberdashers.

Once-overs and Ascots are being revived in a small way.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The United States ranks fourth as purchaser of English goods, with $146,000,000 last year.

The Bethlehem Steel Corporation is seeking bids in England and Ireland to build nine iron ore carriers of 15,000 tons dead-weight capacity.

The Canadian Government, in contract with the United Fruit Company of Nova Scotia, has established a new steamship line between Canada and England, in order to secure more satisfactory access to the English market.

The Chicago and Northwestern, with proceeds of $4,000,000 equipment trust certificates recently sold, will pay for switching engines, 2,000 gondola cars and 2,005 box cars.

WHITCOMB CO. IMPORT MUCH CORNED BEEF

Soaring Prices of Meats Bringing South American Product to the United States

Meat is going up, and up, with no end in sight.

This has led to a curious state of affairs. Corned beef, peculiarly a product of the United States, now is being imported from South America in great quantities, and Libby, McNeill & Libby, the Chicago packers, advise their representatives in Atlanta, H. H. Whitcomb & Burke Company, that nothing but the South American product now is to be had.

The quality is declared to be excellent. The steers of the Argentine prairies are fully equal in quality to those of our own Western ranges, and the only difference the consumer can detect is that instead of saying "U. S. Inspected and Passed," the labels bear the stamps, "Inspected under the Food and Drug Act of June 30, 1906"—in other words, the customs service now does the inspecting instead of the Bureau of Animal Industry.

Never before, so far as anyone remembers, has it been profitable to import tinned meats. This could take place only under exceptional conditions such as the present, when corned beef in 14-pound containers is quoted to retailers at $37 per dozen or thereabouts, while two years ago it was quoted at about $21.

Libby, McNeill & Libby were among the first to foresee the inevitable shortage of American meats and to establish a packing house on the other side of the equator. They now are reaping the benefit.

While it is believed that corned beef never before has been imported direct from South America, last year the same packers, after shipping large quantities of the product to Europe, reimported it at a profit because of a sudden bulge in prices in the United States.

Vienna sausage and potted ham, the Whitcomb company advises, have advanced 5 per cent in the past ten days, and pork sausage, pure, has advanced 28 per cent in three weeks.

Temporarily, the live stock market is depressed by the heavy shipments from the West, East and South, due to the great damage to the corn crop in the West and to the hay crop in the East. The shipments from the South were attracted by the high prices buyers paid when they made a "raid" on Southern cattle a month or so ago, which attracted the attention of the United States Government.

The Government warned the farmers of Georgia and Florida to keep their cattle, not deplete their herds, and to fatten them for market at home instead of selling them lean for fattening in the West and North.

NEW KIND OF PIPE LINE.

One of the most remarkable mechanical devices ever used in connection with the manufacture of paper is being installed at Orange, Texas. This is a "blower," more than a mile long, through which the waste yellow pine timber from a local lumber mill will be sent to a paper mill. The slabs as they come from the mill will be ground into small particles and forced by means of compressed air through the long pipe to the paper manufacturing plant. This paper mill is said to be the only plant in the world that makes paper from yellow pine pulp. It has a daily output of thirty-three tons of wrapping paper.

DEMAND FOR RAMIES TO IMPROVE IN THE SPRING

The fall linen season is shaping up well. The demand for ratines has hurt ramie linens, but it is pointed out that the former soil more easily and do not hold their shape as well as ramie suitings, and that a better demand for ramies is looked for next spring. Light blues, pinks and browns will lead the color demand for ramie goods.

ENGLISH TRADE GROWS.

The July statement of English Board of Trade shows increases of $17,436,500 in imports and $25,880,000 in exports. Imports of foodstuffs increased $8,875,000, and raw material about $5,000,000.

RUBBER FACTORY FOR BRAZIL.

Within a year the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company wil have in operation in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, first big rubber factory to be established on the South American continent, to cost $1,300,000.

Women's Footwear Seen in Many Colors

Leather and Cloth Combinations Shown—Men's Shoes Made Along English Lasts.

Imported models on which fall and winter styles for women's evening slippers are based are leather and cloth color combinations, among which red, green, gray, white and champagne are to be featured in strap and colonial effects.

There is a tendency to drop cut steel buckles, and those of jet will be much used. Another popular buckle will be of oxidized silver, in colonial design, with a satin filler to match the panel.

Panel effects are featured in the smartest slippers. A model well thought of is of patent leather, has a modified duck bill, too, and a jet buckle filled with satin matching the narrow panel extending from the buckle to the side seam. The heel is full Louis-Cuban. Featured suede slippers are of taupe, also with color combinations.

Women's street shoes shown have the long French vamp and square throat combined with cloth top color combinations. They are made with a plain toe, are fitted with the full Louis-Cuban heel and are of the button variety.

Men's shoes for fall and winter are made along the straight, laced, English last, and the color tendency is toward dark tan and gunmetal. Low, flat heels are shown almost exclusively. The blucher style is taboo.

Arizona Grows Fine Egyptian Cotton

Salt River Valley Experiments Reach Stage Where Gin and Oil Mill Are Needed.

Excellent results are being obtained in the growing of long staple Egyptian cotton in the Salt River Valley of Arizona. Under the direction of Mr. E. W. Hudson, of the Department of Agriculture, the industry has come to include over 4,000 acres in planted cotton, yielding in most cases a net profit of $100 an acre.

While the severe drouth throughout the entire West has made inroads on every other crop, the Arizona cotton has prospered to such a degree that a ginning plant and an oil mill to make use of the cotton seed are to be established by the time the crop is ready.

The subcommittee of the American commission which has been making a study of cotton growing and cotton marketing in Egypt, shows that not only can American methods applied to the raising of Egyptian cotton reduce the cost approximately 50 per cent, but that our progressive farmers, although handicapeed by the quality of our soil as compared with that of the Nile Delta, can bring our long staple cotton yield per acre up to that of Egypt's.

Long staple cotton brings from 21 to 25 cents a pound on the spot.

Already the irrigation system employed in the Delta lands has been employed in Arizona. The rest must be worked up by American intelligence and American industry, for Egypt with her antiquated methods of cultivation offers little further guidance.

FIRST BALE BRINGS 12 CTS. PER POUND IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Aug. 23.—Before the entrance to the Cotton Exchange the first bale of upland cotton grown in Chatham County was auctioned. The bale brought 12 cents a pound, 3 cents better than current values. The first bale was grown by W. M. Kennedy and ginned by Floyd & So. The staple graded good middling.

FANCY SHOE BUCKLES.

The wearing of elaborate slipper buckles was particularly noticeable during the Grand Semaine racing week, as the prevailing style of short skirts allows the entire shoe to be seen. The custom is now quite the craze, and many society people are adopting special buckle designs to be worn with various costumes. They are appearing daily with a different buckle to harmonize with each different gown.

MEN'S COLLARS ARE INVENTION OF A HOUSEWIFE

Ingenious Woman Contrived Familiar Article to Lessen Amount of Washing in Home.

The detachable collar now worn by men the world round was the invention of a thrifty housewife 83 years ago. It sprang from sheer necessity, and yet it was so simple an article of wearing apparel that its first maker never looked upon her production as an invention, and it is doubtful if the other early manufacturers thought of patenting the idea.

During the succeeding years, in which the manufacture of collars and their allied products has become a great industry in and around Troy, N. Y., the incident of the invention of the collar had almost been lost until recently brought to light by the unearthing of a family tradition.

It is now certain that Mrs. Hannah Lord Montague was the maker of the first detachable linen collar. Mr. Montague was engaged in the manufacture of fine shoes for women. He was a large man, very particular in matters of dress, and in those days before the invention of the sewing machine and before great public laundries were established, the making, washing and ironing of the shirts formed quite an item in the work of the household.

Mrs. Montague was resourceful, and in endeavoring to lighten her household duties she hit upon the idea of a detached collar, which could be fastened to a neckband of her husband's shirt and washed and ironed separately. Before this time, when the collar was soiled, the whole shirt had to be washed, but by this device two or three collars might be used to one shirt. Acting upon the idea which had come to her, Mrs. Montague went to the patch bag, selected a strip of white linen, which she cut and shaped to fit the neckband of her husband's shirt, sewed it, turned it inside out, and attached a narrow string of braid at either end to tie about the neck. This was the original string collar.

Thus through the resourcefulness of a woman the modern detachable collar was evolved.

A FREE TRIP

To Atlanta is available to the merchant who buys an adequate bill from the members of the Merchants' Association.

Write to

H. T. Moore
SECRETARY.
Rhodes Building,
Atlanta.

Write for our latest Catalogue. The leading merchants are adding the 5c and 10c departments. Why not one for your town?

McCLURE 10c CO., 47-49 S. Broad St.
Give Your "DIMES" a Chance

The Hirshberg Company
STATIONERY — NOVELTIES
DRUGGISTS' SUNDRIES — BLANK BOOKS
Glendale Line
12-15-17 NELSON STREET
ATLANTA

DIXIE PICKLE AND PRESERVING CO.
Manufacturers of
Pure Apple and Distilled Vinegar, Catsup, Pickles, Mustard, Pepper Sauce, Sauer Kraut, Jelly, Etc.
CANNED GOODS
364 to 378 Marietta Street, Atlanta, Ga.

HATS
Caps, Gloves, Umbrellas
QUALITY and VALUES
BROWN, PERRYMAN & GREENE CO.
ATLANTA

VOLLMER MANUFACTURING COMPANY
Moore Building
ATLANTA, GEORGIA
MAKERS OF FINE JEWELRY
Special Designs in Platinum
Engravers — Diamond Setters — Watchmakers
Specialists in Jewelry Repairing

U. S. CERTAIN CAMINETTI WILL SHARE DIGGS' FATE

Government Bends Every Effort to Speed Trial of Federal Immigration Commissioner's Son on the Charge of "White Slavery."

Former California State Architect, Facing Four to Twenty Years in Prison, Plans Appeal—Companion to Follow Suit if Convicted.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—Supremely confident after the conviction of Maury I. Diggs, former State architect, the United States authorities, prosecuting the famous "white slave" cases, which at one time threatened to disrupt President Wilson's Cabinet, are using every energy to speed the trial and obtain a similar verdict against Drew Caminetti, who was Diggs' companion in the sensational flight to Reno with Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris.

Diggs will be sentenced September 2. Under the verdict of the jury, the Judge can fix the penalty at from four to twenty years, and owing to the fact that virtually the same evidence that was introduced against Diggs will be introduced against Caminetti, leads the Government to believe that conviction is certain.

Diggs' attorneys have already announced they will carry the case to the highest court in the land. Should Caminetti be convicted, he, too, doubtless would appeal.

Diggs Gives $20,000 Bail.

Bail in the sum of $20,000 was readily furnished by Diggs' relatives when the amount was fixed by the court and was accepted by the United States Commissioner.

The case was one of the most spectacular ever tried in California. Diggs is a former State architect. Caminetti is a son of the United States Commissioner of Immigration. Both men are married and have families. Both are of high social standing in Sacramento.

Both men are considerably older that the girls with whom they eloped. The undisputed evidence in the case was that the intimate relations between Diggs and Miss Warrington and Caminetti and Miss Norris had become notorious in Sacramento. Families of both the young men were preparing to start criminal action against them to break these relations.

Then they and the girls disappeared. They were traced to Reno, where the two couples were living as men and wives in a rented bungalow. The men were charged with violations of the Mann anti-white slave act.

Blames Girls for Elopement.

Both Miss Warrington and Miss Norris charged that the men had threatened, cajoled and coerced them into making the trip to Reno. They declared that they had promised to obtain divorces from their wives in order to wed them.

Diggs, in his defense, pleaded that the girls were the persons responsible for the flight, that they had induced them to fly to Reno.

It was this attitude of hiding behind a woman's skirt that caused the most severe condemnation of Diggs. Great stress was laid on it by Theodore Roche, attorney for the Government, in his final appeal to the jury for conviction.

"This defendant," said Roche, "did not deny on the stand the truth of the essential facts we have shown. And then he comes before you and asks acquittal.

"Hides Behind Wife's Skirts."

"The defendant in a criminal case usually bases defense on the presumption of innocence, but this defendant relies on his own depravity. He comes into court covered with his own shame and hides behind the skirts of his wife and child.

"When these girls went to Reno their departure meant social ostracizement. Marsha Warrington went because she believed and trusted this man. She didn't desire money, dresses or presents. Her parents gave her these. But this man had promised her marriage, as Caminetti had promised Lola Norris.

"Those promises were never intended to be kept. What was intended was to abandon the girls in Reno. They never could have returned to Sacramento—and you know what that meant. But the alluring promise of marriage had been held out to them."

Scores Conduct in Home.

Attorney Roche was particularly severe with Diggs for the misconduct in his own home to which he testified yesterday. He had not been content, said Roche, with making an assignation house out of his office, but he was similarly to degrade the privacy of a home he shared with a virtuous and loving wife.

In seeking to establish that the trip was not premeditated and that the two girls had not been induced to take it by threats of scandal on one hand and promises of marriage on the other, Diggs willingly testified to his own misconduct and the embarrassments, domestic and business, into which it had led him.

His counsel in summing up the evidence did not palliate these acts.

"Paint this defendant as you will—a monster if you please," argued Robert Devlin, his senior counsel, "but tell me what motive he would have had in going out of the State for the purpose of accomplishing those things already accomplished.

"Counsel may characterize him as they please, and I may not differ with them. They say his act was shameless, and I may feel the same way about it, but it isn't white slavery."

This was the whole argumentative substance of the defense. There remained the rhetorical and the emotional appeals and, of course, they were not neglected. The girls were blamed for tempting the men. They were called willing accomplices in what evil had been done, and the wisdom of trusting a woman scorned when she bears witness against the lover who has discharged her was called into question.

Southern Drawl an Opera Asset

Alabama Singer Lauds Accent

Sees Fame for Dixie Song Birds

Miss Neida Humphrey.

Miss Neida Humphrey, of Huntsville, Blames Laziness for Dearth of Divas.

HUNTSVILLE, ALA., Aug. 23.—The soft, musical voice of Southern women, which poets have raved about, others have envied and the comic papers have made subject of satire, has a value in dollars, and it has an even greater value in the world of art.

So thinks Miss Neida Humphrey, of Huntsville, who has just returned home after a three-year course of voice culture under Caruso in New York.

Miss Humphrey, realizing the supreme demand for American prima donnas on the operatic stage, not only in this country, but in every capital in Europe, thinks there is a world of opportunity for the young women of her own section in this field.

"The Southern woman's voice," says Miss Humphrey, "possesses more natural musical qualities than the voices of any other women in the world. With proper cultivation that quality should make them the greatest opera stars. The world has long known of this quality, but the Southern women of talent have just refused to grasp their opportunities.

Blames Indolence in Part.

"And I guess the laziness so generally attributed to our people may have a great deal to do with it. Singing, I mean serious singing, is the hardest sort of work.

"There is hardly a girl of social position in the Southland who has not a smattering of musical education. The trouble is it's only a smattering. When they reached the point where singing meant real work they retired gracefully to other fields.

"But I believe that the time is not far off when the Southern girl of talent will realize the life she is overlooking and then I am certain that there will be girls of Dixie whose names will be just as famous as those of Farrar, Suzanne Adams and Louise Homer, all American born.

Miss Humphrey is very young and she is very, very pretty, but that is not all. She has a voice of remarkable power and dramatic quality, but withal she holds in it that soft sweetness that declares her home as plainly as it would be declared were she to walk on the stage waving the Stars and Bars.

Has Charmed the President.

She has already done things in music and she intends to do more. In New York she has sung before the most critical audiences in concert and has won their high approbation. It was she who charmed President Wilson and a distinguished gathering in New York recently at a concert.

In Chattanooga last May, during the reunion of the Confederate Veterans, she sang before the old soldiers and was given an ovation.

Miss Humphrey intends to return to New York in the fall to complete her studies. She has already been assured of an operatic engagement and Huntsville believes that it will soon boast an operatic celebrity.

Dweller in Desert Sees First Pine Tree

Full Grown Woman Is Mystified by Foliage—Also Takes Mountain Snow Bath.

CHICO, CAL., Aug. 23.—Miss Ilene Locey, of Visalia, cousin of Frank M. Moore, of this city, a grown woman, saw her first pine tree when she went with the Moores for an auto trip to the mountains.

She has resided long in the desert southland, and was not only pleased but mystified at the foliage and the fact that she could reach the snow-bound regions of the Sierra Nevadas inside of an hour's time.

The party left here especially to give Miss Locey an idea of the diversified climate of the Sacramento Valley and a snow bath in the higher altitude.

Tents Only Shelter For Toledo Families

City Is Growing So Rapidly That Builders Can Not Construct Houses Demanded.

TOLEDO, Aug. 23.—Because the city has not enough houses to rent and builders are not able to construct houses as rapidly as they are desired tents are being used as homes in Toledo.

Two tent colonies have been established in the city. In both districts occupants of the tents are owners of lots on which the temporary homes have been erected. The lots have been purchased as home sites and tents are serving as temporary homes.

The tent homes consist of living rooms, dining rooms and kitchens. Each has a flower and vegetable garden and one is equipped with a chicken park, a stable and outbuildings. Living rooms are convertible into bedrooms, and hammocks, stretched in the open, are used day and night.

SOUTH IS PAYING HEAVY TOLL FOR CANAL BENEFITS

Colonel Gailliard, of South Carolina, Breaks Down Under Tremendous Task.

More than any other section of the country, the South is expected to realize in prosperity and development by the opening of the Panama Canal. But the South is to pay its toll and pay for it dearly.

Just when the canal was an assured fact, Senator John T. Morgan, of Alabama, father of the Isthmian Waterway idea, died as a result of his years of ceaseless labor impressing the necessity of rthe canal on Congress.

Nok Lieutenant Colonel David Du Bois Gailliard, of South Carolina, the army engineer who dug the Culebra Cut, has had to abandon the scene of his triumph and return to the United States to give his nervous system shattered by his work, a rest which it has needed for months.

And that is not all. From the zone the advices come that Colonel William L. Sibert, of Alabama, the army engineer in charge of the work on the great Gatun Dam, is on the point of a breakdown and it is extremely doubtful if he will be strong enough to stay in the zone to see his work completed.

Careers of Two Similar.

The careers of Colonel Sibert and Colonel Gailliard have been remarkably similar. Gailliard was born in South Carolina; Sibert, in Alabama. They entered West Point the same year and both graduated in 1884 among the first five men in their class.

After their graduation, both were sent to Willets Point and in 1908, when the canal work was put in the hands of the army engineers, Colonel Goethals immediately picked the two Southerners as his chief aides. Sibert was put in charge of the work on the Atlantic side, which included the building of the Gatun Dam, while Gaillard was in charge of the work in the interior of the zone.

That Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard had suffered a nervous breakdown was known only to a few of his intimate friends in the army. A few weeks ago when his condition became serious the matter was brought to the attention of General Bixby, the chief engineer in Washington, and by General Bixby called to the attention of Secretary of War Garrison, who immediately granted the stricken engineer a long leave of absence.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles F. Mason, Medical Corps, U. S. A., the director of the Ancon Hospital, in the Canal Zone; Mrs. Gaillard and Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard's young son came with him and went with him to Baltimore, where he will enter the John Hopkins Hospital. There he will be under the care of some of the most eminent specialists in nervous disorders in this country.

Leave Did Not Aid Him.

Colonel Gaillard was in New York less than two months ago after a six weeks' leave of absence that he had taken in the hope that the rest would benefit his health to the extent that he would be able to remain in the Canal Zone. He sailed from New York on June 27 last, again to take charge of the work in the Central Division.

Those who talked with him at that time remember that he expressed a desire to get away from the Isthmus as soon as his work was finished, but, he added, with a touch of sadness in his soft Southern voice, "When I do leave it will be with deep and sincere regret."

Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard is the first of the famous army engineers employed in the construction o. the Panama Canal to be stricken as a result of his work. A few weeks ago Colonel William M. Black, Corps of Engineers, the chief of that branch of the service in this part of the United States, the officer who was head of the engineering board which solved the problem of raising the old battleship Maine, was in Panama and was Gaillard's guest.

Close Friends for Years.

The two officers have been intimate friends for years. During his stay at Empire, the headquarters of Colonel Gaillard, Colonel Black noted and realized that the builder of Culebra Cut needed a long and complete rest.

"Gaillard," said Colonel Black last night, "is one of the most wonderful organizers the army has developed. His work in the Canal Zone has been little short of marvelous. He laid out his plans in such a way that he got the maximum out of everything, especially in the handling of the railroad part of the work. He was also able within a few months after he took charge at Empire to double the work accomplished in a specified time. Some of the things that he did experienced railroad men had said were practically impossible."

Woman Given Job Of Cleaning Up State

Success in Making Tacoma a Spotless Town Causes Promotion in Service.

TACOMA, Aug. 23.—Because of her successful efforts to transform Tacoma into a "Spotless Town," Miss Arizona B. Wimple, food and market inspector, is to be rewarded with a bigger job—the cleaning up of the State of Washington.

This was the advice received here today from the Governor's office in Olympia, where it is said Miss Wimple is to be appointed State bakery and sanitary inspector.

Her methods in cleaning up Tacoma were simple and direct and included publicity as an aid in bringing about the desired reforms.

Frequent inspections of bakeries and other food dispensing establishments were made and the score announced in the newspapers.

Miss Wimple, who is young and pretty, will receive $4,000 a year from the State.

She is a graduate of the University of Michigan.

CANDLES BURNING AT WAKE SET HOUSE AFIRE

CALGARY, ALBERTA, Aug. 23.—A fire which started from candles set about a coffin at a wake, at the house of J. Selar, here burned the hair and eyebrows off the body of an aged woman. Portions of the face were charred. Firemen extinguished the blaze.

WATCHING MAN WHO STOLE AND HID A FORTUNE

Detectives Shadowing Mail Thief Believed to Have Cached $40,000 After Robbery.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 23.—Charles Savage, a negro mail robber, released from the penitentiary in Leavenworth, is being shadowed by three detectives. He will be kept under watch constantly because somewhere is hidden $40,000 of the $50,000 in currency he stole five years ago from a registered mail pouch, and nobody except Savage knows where it is.

When Savage was released he was met at the door by his mother and a young woman to whom he was engaged before he was sent to prison. They came at once to Kansas City to see an uncle, who is dying.

"They needn't watch me," he said. "If they think I'm going to dig up $40,000 they're mistaken. I wish I knew where there was $40,000 buried."

"Isn't it queer that $2,000 in $20 gold certificates of the same series as stolen from the mail sack were found blowing around in the wind near your mother's home in South Leavenworth this spring?" Savage was asked.

"Yes, that's queer. I don't understand," he answered. "I read about that, and I figured it out that some person who lived in South Leavenworth had stolen that mail sack and hidden the money there, and the rain had washed away the dirt where it was buried, and the wind got at it and blew it away."

Employees' Pension Measure Approved

Pennsylvania Cities Are Permitted to Establish Fund for Faithful Municipal Workers.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—Under the provisions of an act passed by the Legislature, which Governor Tener has approved, this city is given authority to establish a municipal pension fund for employees. The act applies to all city employees who have given twenty years of service to the city.

The act provides that in the event of the creating of the fund every employee will be compelled to pay into the fund 1 per cent of his yearly salary.

The pension to be allowed the beneficiary will be equal to one-half of the average yearly salary received by him during the last two years before his retirement.

College Professor Seeks Laborer's Pay

Unable to Make Both Ends Meet, Teacher Resigns Chair in University.

BERKELEY, CAL., Aug. 23.—Unable to make both ends meet on a salary of $900 paid him by the University of California, Paul Boehncke, an instructor in the German department, has withdrawn from the faculty and is seeking a position in which he can support himself and family of two children.

During the last few summers Boehncke has managed to augment his meager salary by working as a plasterer at from $5 to $7 a day, or nearly twice the amount he was paid by the university.

Apache War in '80's Is Cause of Divorce

Husband Deserted Thirty Years Ago by Wife Who Didn't Like Wild West.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Geronimo and his wild hordes of Apaches, who terrorized New Mexico in the eighties, were the direct cause of a divorce suit which Allen L. Eaton begun yesterday in the Superior Court against Zuma E. Eaton.

The Eatons were married in Silver City, N. Mex., in 1886, when the Apache uprising was on. Mrs. Eaton, who hailed from Pittsburg, did not enjoy the wild Western life her married life entailed, and she deserted her husband.

Common Laborer Strikes Big Gold Vein

Ore Will Run $60,000 to Ton and Mine Is Largest in Southern Oregon.

MEDFORD, OREG., Aug. 23.—What is reported as the biggest gold strike made in Southern Oregon has been been reported by Elmer Higginbotham on the mine owned by him and M. G. Womack on Kane's Creek. The ore will run $60,000 to the ton, according to assays of samples made here.

Higginbotham had been a common laborer for many years until Womack offered to "grub-stake" him on a prospecting trip up Kane's Creek.

BERI BERI CAUSED BY RICE DIET, SAYS EXPERT

Special Cable to The American.

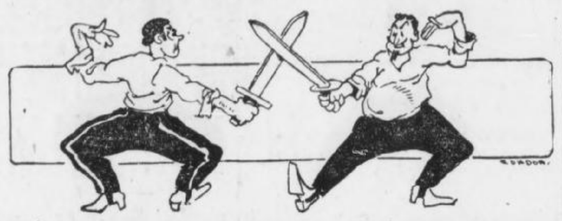
BERLIN, Aug. 23.—The Berlin Medical Association reports that the well-known investigator of beri beri, Dr. Max Moszkowski, finds, after a remarkable experiment, that the disease is caused by the use of rice.

Dr. Moszkowski for 138 days subsisted almost entirely upon rice. All the symptoms of beri beri manifested themselves.

At the close of the experiment an injection of serum containing an extract of rice resulted in a complete recovery.

Hunnicutt Won in First Round

Beat Bravo With Wooden Sword



How Atlanta's Broadsword Champion Worsted French Fencing Master.

Time was when the prize fight was not au fait, when in the best families, and even in the second best, and maybe in the third, they frowned down upon the pugilistic art as brutal and degenerate. Then it was that the youn bloods turned to cockfighting and fencing for the gladiatorial features of their lives, and were satisfied.

And that time was not so very long ago. Calvin W. Hunnicutt, who is Atlanta's oldest citizen, revived them in memory yesterday, when he fell to the young bloods turned to cockfighting between Charley White and Frank Whitney, with the remark that things were not like this of yore.

Of course, he had a dueling story of his own to tell, and he told it—of how he fought an arrogant French fencing master in a combat with wooden swords, and how all Atlanta looked on and cheered him as its champion.

It occurred before the war, when all good things, it seems, occurred. It occurred just at the beginning of the war, and had its effect in keeping Mr. Hunnicutt out of that conflict.

"There had been talk of war, war, war pretty generally," he said. The trouble clouds were thick and black, and we organized here in Atlanta a cavalry troop that we called the Fulton Dragoons. Captain Wilson was our officer, I was first lieutenant, and C. B. Whaley, my best friend, was first sergeant.

"All went well at first, and things were pleasant. But after a while politics began to leak in, as inevitably it will with all volunteer military bodies. Everybody knows everybody else so well, you see that very naturally jealousy comes in. Anyhow, when the time came for the election of a captain for a new term, Whaley and I, backing Wilson, lost out, because the other man promised horses to all members of the troop. Then dissatisfaction grew and the organization loosened.

"The new captain and his great ally, Second Lieutenant Williams, were full of ideas as to how to run a military organization, and began to put these ideas into play. That made more dissatisfaction for no volunteer soldier likes to be driven by men who were their friends and associates.

"One of their ideas was the importation of a fencing teacher to instruct the men in broadsword use. Now Whaley and I had practiced considerably with the broadsword, and were rather expert in its use, but we said nothing of it to the captain and his friends.

"Well, the fencing master came, a Frenchman from Mobile. He was a flourishing, affected sort of fellow, and considerable of a boaster. Not long after he was here, he broke off teaching and began to talk about his own great skill and to show it off.

"One day he challenged all of us.

" 'Nobody here can touch me with his sword,' he announced. 'I don't fear to let any of you try.' And he flourished his sword.

"Whaley and I decided to take him on, and I went to him. He laughed at me. But I insisted, and the date was set for our combat. That there should be no bloodshed—because we were going to do some furious fencing, it seemed—I put a negro of mine to work making two wooden swords, or sticks. These were to be our weapons.

"Somehow the tidings that there was to be a fight got abroad. Atlanta was not as large as it is now, but it was a right smart town even then, and when the day for the fight came, everybody turned out.

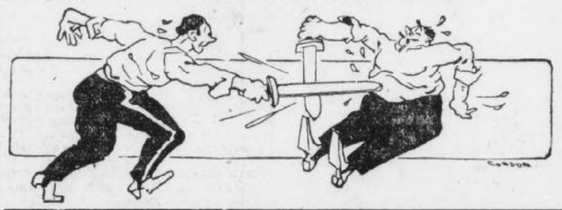
"We had planned to have the duel in a theater, owned in the days of old Atlanta by a man named Williams. The place was packed, and I began to be a little nervous over the public nature of the affair.

"We squared off, and the crowd settled back in the seats for a long and interesting fight. But it wasn't for long. The Frenchman came at me with a flourish, and I had a flourish to match his. Thence I made a thrust at him, the thrust that we know technically as the point tierce. It went through his guard, and to his body. If we had been fighting with real swords, my opponent would have been run through.

"All Atlanta laughed. The Frenchman had pretty generally advertised his ability to fight, and everybody was there. However, there were one or two persons who didn't like the way the fight came out, particularly the new captain of the dragoons and his ally. After the fight they began working to get me to resign. The duel, they claimed everywhere, might have an effect in breaking up discipline. And so, with their dissatisfaction showing plain, I resigned.

"The Frenchman we didn't see after the half minute duel. If the dragoons learned broadsword fencing, they learned it from somebody else.

"It's a pity the art of fencing does not survive in the popular fancy. It is clean, beneficial and interesting. But this prize fighting——"



LOOKS FOR BODY OF FATHER LOST IN ICE 43 YEARS

Miss Edith Randall, of Boston, Expects to Find Corpse on Glacier at Foot Mt. Blanc.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Miss Edith Randall, of this city, has gone to Chamonix, Switzerland, one one of the strangest errands known. She hopes to find in the glacier there the body of her father, who lost his life climbing on Mont Blanc forty-three years ago. Ten others were lost with him in a snowstorm near the summit. All told, two Americans, one Scotchman and eight guides and porters died.

Five of the bodies were recovered. It is expected by guides that the six others will be delivered up by the glacier this year.

Scientists are interested as it may supply evidence to prove their theories on the speed of the annual march of glaciers toward the valleys.

Miss Randall's father, John Randolph, a Boston banker, was fifty-four when he lost his life in 1870.

Last year Miss Randall came to Chamonix, as the ice axe and several small articles relonging to Mr. Randall had been found by guides at the foot of the Glacier des Bossons.

Many Americans and English Alpinists, as well as guides, joined in the search for the body, but without result. All hope for better luck this summer.

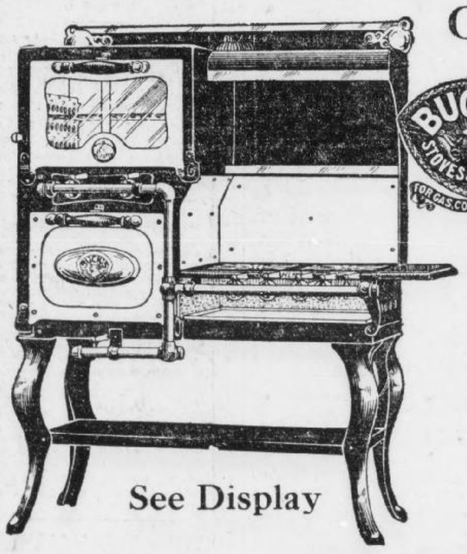
"Back on the Job"

again and very quickly, too, if you will only let Hostetter's Stomach Bitters help the digestion to become normal, keep the liver active and the bowels free from constipation. These are absolutely necessary in order to maintain health. Try it to-day but be sure it's

HOSTETTER'S Stomach Bitters

25% DISCOUNT

On All BUCK'S Gas Stoves and Ranges



See Display

Buck's—the most conveniently arranged, the most sanitary, and certainly the most economical gas user made—comes in for a tremendous discount this week.

They are here—anything from the small stove to the most elaborate range—and all are carrying the same big discount. Discard your old, worn, smoking, fuel-consuming cooking machine to-morrow, and let us replace it with one of these modern stoves or ranges.

The savings of your fuel bill will soon pay for any BUCK'S you may select.

Connections Free--$1 a Week Buys Your Choice

That's fair enough, isn't it? We will actually put it in your kitchen—ready to turn on the gas—and you can pay the bill at one dollar per week. Come in to-morrow and take your choice. See our big Mitchell street window display.

Rhodes-Wood FURNITURE COMPANY

COMPLETE HOUSEFURNISHERS

103-5-7-9-11 Whitehall Street, Corner Mitchell