READY TO FIGHT, SAYS M'CONNELL TO MAYOR

Senator Broyles, Dying, Kills Foe in Duel

SLAY EACH OTHER IN VIEW OF SCORES

Mississippi State Senator and Tennessee Lumberman Battle to Death With Ax and Gun.

Dispatches received in Atlanta Tuesday told of the death of Dr. H. P. Broyles, a State Senator of Mississippi and cousin of Recorder Nash R. Broyles, of Atlanta, in a duel between the Senator and E. F. Kendricks, a wealthy timberman of Selmer, Tenn., on the top of a lake dam at the Greenwood Springs summer resort near Aberdeen, Miss., Tuesday morning.

Dr. Broyles was well known in Atlanta, having been in this city ten days ago, accompanied by two police officers of his State, to take back A. D. Oliver, a swindler, who had been released from jail after serving a three-year sentence. Dr. Broyles was one of the victims of Oliver's alleged crooked operations in Mississippi and had brought requisition papers to take the prisoner back to his State for trial.

Through Recorder Broyles the Senator had been introduced to Governor Slaton and secured the Governor's signature to the requisition papers. He returned to Mississippi just last Wednesday.

Broyles died with a bullet in his heart and Hendricks' skull was cleft almost by the keen edge of an ax wielded by the Senator as the revolver of his foe discharged.

So quickly was the double tragedy enacted, that a score of persons on the hotel veranda, who had seen the start of the difficulty and were running to separate the men, gained only half the distance before they were paralyzed with horror as the flash of the revolver and the fall of the death-dealing ax brought the two men down together to the stone flooring lifeless.

Follows Business Quarrel.

The bodies rolled off the dam and fell a distance of 20 feet into the gully below, where they were picked up.

The fight to death brought to an end a quarrel of a year's standing between Broyles and Hendricks, which found its origin in the value of some timber holdings when the former had sold to the latter and his son.

By chance the two men came together at the Greenwood Springs Hotel, which was owned by the Senator. The old quarrel was renewed and a clash was averted between them in the hotel lobby last night.

Slaying Stirs Whole State.

This morning the men came together again, on top of the dam, whether by appointment, is not known, but early risers at the hotel saw them there and gave the alarm. Several persons shouted to the disputants and started running toward them.

As they did so, Senator Broyles was seen to stoop over as if pick up an ax lying on the dam. At the same time Hendricks drew a revolver. As Hendricks' revolver flashed, Broyles buried the ax in his opponent's skull.

The double slaying is one of the most startling that has been committed in this State in years, owing to the prominence of the men involved.

2 Brothers Killed In Carolina Feud by Same Load of Shot

AUGUSTA, Sept. 16.—B. V. and W. H. Hogg, prosperous farmers at Kline, S. C., were killed with the same load of shot this morning that was fired from a gun in the hands of J. W. Hogg, a distant relative.

The men met at one of the village stores and W. H. Hogg and a man named Barnett engaged in a fight. J. V. Hogg went for another brother to see that W. H. Hogg would get a square deal, and when he returned J. W. Hogg, who seems to have taken sides with Barnett, fired at the brothers while they were standing close together. Both fell, one dying instantly and the other in a few minutes.

TIFTON, Sept. 16.—Is 13 a hoodoo after all? All the hoodoo seems to have been knocked out in the year 13, many farmers realizing their dreams of 13-cent cotton.

What 13 had to do with cotton ginning in Tift County can't be said, but the Government's report for cotton ginned in Tift County up to the first of September shows 1,313 bales.

Dixie Is Awakening, Says Woman Leader

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—That woman suffrage is winning the South after a half-century of indifference was the claim made here by Mrs. Solon Jacobs, president of the Alabama Woman Suffragists, who is seeking means to further the cause.

Miss Kate Gordon, of New Orleans, has invited all Southern Governors to meet in New Orleans in November to draft a model suffrage amendment.

100 Near Death in Pennsylvania Wreck

COATESVILLE, PA., Sept. 16.—More than 100 passengers on the Pennsylvania Railroad's Pittsburg Flyer narrowly escaped death or serious injury to-day when three sleeping cars left the track, went down an embankment and one of them turned over.

A broken rail caused the wreck. Only two persons were injured.

Slaying Revealed by Telephone Message

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Sept. 16.—A mysterious telephone message led the police to-day to a room in the house at No. 411 Hill avenue, where they found a woman, named Ritger, 28, dead. It is believed she was murdered.

The mysterious telephone informant, a man, has not been located.

POLICE SAY SCHMIDT IS ARCH SLAYER

Story of Alleged Accomplice Reveals Priest Who Killed Anna Aumuller as Counterfeiter.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—In the belief that he has committed other murders than that of Anna Aumuller, the girl whose torso was found in the Hudson River, the police to-day planned to put Hans Schmidt, the priest who confessed to slaying the girl, through an examination intended to force him to reveal every act of his shrouded past.

That Schmidt was a counterfeiter, as well as a murderer, came to light to-day through the arrest shortly after midnight of Ernest Arthur Muret, a bogus dentist, and Bertha Zech, his girl assistant.

It also was developed by the Catholic clergy that Schmidt was an imposter, having forged the credentials as a priest which he used in this country.

Muret, under merciless grilling by the police, not only admitted that he knew both Schmidt and the murdered girl, but also confessed that Schmidt had been a partner of his in a counterfeiting scheme.

After the arrest the police raided Muret's flat and also another flat which it had been found was rented jointly last June by Muret and Schmidt. In the latter flat was found a complete counterfeiting outfit, including chemicals, tools, a printing press, several half-destroyed bogus bills and a loaded revolver.

In the flat in which Muret lived were found a number of surgical tools, such as are used to perform illegal operations.

Girl Held as Witness.

Whether Muret will be charged with direct connection with the murder and the dismemberment of the Aumuller girl's body, is a matter which the police would not discuss to-day. They claim they are holding the Zech girl as a material witness, while Muret's confession that he attempted counterfeiting is sufficient to hold him.

The discovery of the counterfeiting establishment will of course bring the United States Government into the priest's case.

Muret told the police to-day that shortly before the death of Anna Aumuller the girl had visited Central Park and was blistered by poison ivy.

When he asked Schmidt September 4, three days after the murder, how the girl was, the priest replied, he says, "Oh, she's in great shape. Poison ivy will never bother her again."

Priest Sleeps Well.

Schmidt spent a restful night in his cell. The enormity of his crime does not seem to bother him. He ate a hearty breakfast and seemed calm and undisturbed.

He still refuses to see reporters, denying interviews on the ground that "they can understand the acts of great men."

While police officials, the Coroner, and the Prison Warden held different views concerning Schmidt's sanity, the prisoner continued to ridicule the idea that he is insane.

"I am sane; there never has been any insanity in my family," he repeated time and again.

Warden Fallon declares Schmidt is the most dangerous lunatic confined in the Tombs prison in forty years.

The Catholic clergy here to-day devoted most of their time to tracing Schmidt's past. They now are convinced that he is a regularly ordained priest, but that his past has been a shady one, both here and in Europe.

As far as they have been able to learn, Schmidt was ordained in 1907,

JONES IN CHARGE AT POSTOFFICE; HINTS AT REORGANIZATION SOON

Rolling H. Jones, new Atlanta postmaster, on left, and I. G. Hart, the superintendent of mails, who, it is said, will continue in his office.

Depleted Jury Box Laid to Judge Speer

SAVANNAH, Sept. 16.—The charge that Federal Judge Emory Speer had purged the jury box for this district of Chatham County names was substantiated to-day when Judge William T. Newman, of the Atlanta circuit, tried to draw a jury to hear the Bench bankruptcy case.

Of the 30 names drawn only one was from this county. There were no other names in the box, but enough to legally draw a jury, and Judge Newman would not proceed until the lawyers signed an agreement.

Still Taken in Raid Stolen From Sheriff

DOUGLASVILLE, Sept. 16.—Several weeks ago Sheriff Daggett captured a distillery in the western part of the county and brought it to Douglasville.

Last week the outfit was stolen from the Sheriff. Will Strickland, who was charged with operating the still, has been arrested with the additional accusation of stealing the still.

Raleigh Loan Sharks Put Out of Business

RALEIGH, Sept. 16.—Threats made by City Attorney Charles Scarlett that all loan sharks were to be closed out by the first of October has had the desired effect.

Several loan offices have closed their doors and others are contemplating doing so. Those who continue to do business after the first of October will be arrested, charged with usury.

MISSIONARY MEETING CALLED.

GADSDEN, Sept. 16.—Announcement has been made that a missionary conference of all the Protestant churches in Gadsden and the district will be held October 12 and 13 in this city. Each church will be represented by the pastor and two lay members.

First Change in Force May Result in the Ousting of Negro Carriers.

Declaring that he does not contemplate any immediate changes in the personnel of his force, Rolling H. Jones, successor to Hugh L. McKee as postmaster of Atlanta, took office Tuesday morning. Mr. Jones intimated, however, that there might be some change in the working force later, perhaps within a few months.

It is generally understood that the new official's first move toward changing the make-up of the force will be the ousting of the negro letter carriers, as it is known he is opposed to negroes holding positions of so much responsibility.

Mr. Jones became formally postmaster with the signing of a receipt for the postage stamps and other supplies in the Federal Building, which had been charged to Mr. McKee. He was ready to take office early Monday afternoon, having furnished his bond and subscribed to the oath earlier in the day. The delay was occasioned by the fact that the "postoffice day" ends at midnight.

Mr. McKee, who retires after three years and six months of service, stated Tuesday morning that he expects to remain in private life for at least three years. He has moved his office to the Moore Building, where he plans to engage in the real estate business.

Forty members of the boards of directors of the Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, the Atlanta Freight Bureau and the Credit Men's Association called at the Federal Building at noon Tuesday and paid their respects to the new postmaster. The delegation was headed by H. T. Moore, manager of the Freight Bureau.

The visit was made as a mark of respect and courtesy to Mr. Jones, who is a director in each of the organizations that were represented. The party met at the offices of the Freight Bureau in the Rhodes Building, and proceeded to the Federal Building in a body.

Retiring Mayor Frees All Convicts

COLUMBIA, Sept. 16.—Mayor Sain, of Orangeburg, S. C., who has retired after two years of service to be replaced by commission form of government, celebrated his retirement to-day by giving freedom to the city convict chaingang at work on the roads.

Both men were desperate fighters, and the struggle continued all night before Jim Christopher overpowered his man and slew him.

O'NEAL HIGH SCHOOL OPENS.

CORDELE, Sept. 16.—Under most promising conditions the fall term of the O'Neal High School of Cordele began yesterday. An optimistic address was made by Superintendent W. H. Lanier. Before another week it is expected that approximately 8,000 will have matriculated.

Reach Agreement On Freight Rates

RALEIGH, Sept. 16.—What looks to be a settlement of the freight rate controversy between this State and the railroads on interstate shipments from the West was presented to Governor Craig to-day by Chairman Travis, of the Corporation Commission.

The railroads modified their former offer so that Gastonia and other border towns would receive increased reductions. Commodity rates from North Carolina to the West were also allowed.

Preacher-Banker In Race for Senate

COLUMBUS, Sept. 16.—After having declined to become a candidate for State Senator, to represent Russell and Macon Counties in Alabama, announcing that he preferred to serve his congregation as pastor to serving the people as Senator, Rev. W. J. Price, cashier of the Phenix-Girard Bank, of Girard, has finally decided to become a candidate.

In addition to being pastor of North Girard Methodist Church, Mr. Price is one of the most prominent bankers in this section.

Drummer Is Charged With Embezzlement

CHATTANOOGA, Sept. 16.—John S. Meyers, well dressed and said to be a commercial traveler, was arrested here to-day upon instructions from the authorities at Birmingham.

It is charged he is wanted for embezzlement and obtaining money under false pretense.

TARVIN TRIAL JURY DRAWN.

GADSDEN, Sept. 16.—The jury for the trial of Dave Tarvin, charged with assault on Nettie Waldrop, 9 years old, was drawn to-day. Although a jury Saturday declared Tarvin sane the defense will still retain the plea of not guilty, by reason of insanity.

OFFERS TO LAY ASIDE CLERICAL CLOTH

Dr. Lincoln McConnell, in Hot Reply to Woodward, Upholds Anti-Kissing War.

Dr. Lincoln McConnell, in a letter burning with sarcastic criticism and innuendoes, made heated reply Tuesday to the attack made upon him by Mayor Woodward.

The minister, after implying that Mayor Woodward had been on an exdrunkard and other unenviable things, branded him as a "common scold" and flung down the gauntlet to him in the declaration that he was perfectly willing to doff his clerical garments at any time the Mayor felt that his health and happiness demanded satisfaction.

Dr. McConnell denied that he had inveighed against "spooning." "Heaven forbid!" he declared. "I merely was taking a stand for law and order which the Mayor had attacked."

McConnell's Letter.

His reply to the Mayor, except for one unprintable expression, is given here in full.

Here is Dr. McConnell's letter:

James G. Woodward, in the Mayor's Office, Atlanta, Ga.:

Sir—I have your very interesting letter of this date and think it but proper, in view of the fact that you have honored me with three sheets of matter and 10 cents postage, to reply to you in somewhat extended fashion.

In the first place, you were not my subject Sunday night. I had a large subject. You were merely an illustration. I was preaching on "Sowing the Wind and Reaping the Whirlwind" (Hosea viii:7), and was trying to show that the laws of cause and effect operated in all realms, not merely the physical. I was showing that the "wind" of bad thinking resulted in the destructive moral "whirlwinds," etc., etc., and in developing the thought I came naturally to that bad conduct called crime and law enforcement, one here as where you came in. I was talking against the dangerous tendencies of our time, and I referred to the fact that "many good men so talk at times as to cause the thoughtless to believe that they have no respect for the law, its officers or machinery, the in-vitable result of which must be the breaking down of the last vestige of fear or respect that remains in the minds of the criminally inclined for the law."

I said: "I was amazed the other day to read what seemed to be an interview from our Mayor himself, in which he scathingly attacked the police, referring to them in such contemptuous terms as to indicate his utter lack of respect for them. Talking as an excuse the recent arrests of some person for 'spooning,' he sneered at the 'snake in the grass' methods,' etc., etc., in such manner and terms as to bring the very office into disrepute. According to the report he did not confine his sneers to the particular men who made the arrests, but the impression is inevitable that he, the head of this great city, feels a contempt for the officers of the law."

Actually and More.

I said further: "If Mr. Woodward does not know that such expressions from a man in his high position are dangerous and have a tendency to encourage the vicious, he is too big a fool to be the head of this city, while if he really feels as he seems to feel, he is unfit for the place."

As nearly as I can recall my words, that is what I said on that subject, so you see I was not accurately reported, for I actually said more about you than the report indicates.

The fact is, no reporter was here,

A county anti-jug act also passed. The bills will pass the House easily and be signed by the Governor.

The bills of Governor Hooper to enforce prohibition throughout the State were pending when an adjournment was forced until 2 o'clock by the anti-prohibition forces in the Senate. The vote on these is close, a tie being probable.

He made the 36 holes in 151 and now is the favorite with the betting contingent. As this photograph shows, the ex-English champion has perfect form.

Rabid Dog Chews Policeman's Shoe And Bites Revolver

After terrorizing the neighborhood for two days, a rabid dog belonging to Gerald A. Seymour, No. 32 West Fifth street, was killed Wednesday morning by Policeman O. R. Jones, who fired five bullets into the brute.

The dog went mad several days ago and had been confined in a back lot. Several children of the neighborhood narrowly escaped being bitten.

When Jones tried to shoot the dog Wednesday, the animal snapped at him, catching the heel of the policeman's shoe between his teeth. Jones' revolver snapped on an empty cartridge, and the officer ran out into an alley. He pushed his revolver between the pickets and stuck it into the animal's mouth. The dog grabbed the revolver in his teeth and pulled it from the officer's hand just as Jones pulled the trigger.

Husband Wouldn't Let Her See Throngs On Peachtree; Sues

Alleging that her husband compelled her to keep her head bowed when she accompanied him on the streets with the threat that he would "make it warm for her" if she looked up, Mrs. Mattie Johnson Wednesday filed suit for divorce in the Superior Court.

Mrs. Johnson claims also that she was refused admittance to her home when her husband was away. She was forced also to go to work and contribute to her husband's support, she claims.

CONFEDERATE VETS SLIGHTED BY G. A. R.

CHATTANOOGA, Sept. 17.—Through some sort of inexplicable blunder, out of which considerable feeling has raisen to mar the pleasure of the present G. A. R. reunion in this city, no Confederate troops marched in the big parade to-day.

Arrangements had been made, or were thought to have been made, whereby N. B. Forrest Camp of Confederate Veterans was to occupy a place of honor in to-day's line of march, representing the ancient enemies of the G. A. R., now the organization's cherished friends.

When it came to making up the line, however, notwithstanding the fact that N. B. Forrest Camp was ready with a delegation to march, there was no place assigned to it.

Despite much hustling and hustling around, no one could be found with authority or inclination, as the case may have been, to remedy the stupid blunder, or whatever it was.

The Confederates were plainly disappointed and feel a little disgusted at the turn of affairs, and did not hesitate to express themselves accordingly. The parade, however, proceeded without them.

EX-WIFE TO ATTACK BARLOW IN COURT

Declares Remarriage of the Millionaire Is Illegal, and Will Ask Annulment.

Mrs. Edith Barlow, once the wife of the wealthy Cuban promoter, J. E. Barlow, and now a masseuse at No. 219 West Peachtree street, proposes to strike directly at the home life of her rich ex-husband in the action which will be heard at American, Ga., September 27, according to an announcement of her attorney, Hudson Moore, Wednesday.

She will spare neither Barlow nor his childhood sweetheart whom he recently married. She will ask that their marriage be annulled and declared illegal. This petition, if it prevails, will place Barlow and his present wife in a most embarrassing position, as it will mean that they have been living together impropernly in the eyes of the law.

The trouble all has arisen over Barlow's determined efforts to regain possession of his pretty 8-year-old daughter, Madeline, whom he claims his former wife kidnaped from Lumpkin, Ga. After Mrs. Maud Barlow, the promoter's present wife, had intituted habeas corpus proceedings in Stewart County and Barlow himself had filed an appeal when a writ was denied, the ex-wife got busy on her own account and began retaliatory action.

To Ask Annulment.

Here is what she wants

The annulment of the marriage of Barlow and his present wife.

Permanent possession, care and control of her daughter, Madeline.

An alimony of $25,000 for the support and education of her daughter.

A judgment against her ex-husband declaring him in contempt of court for his refusal to let her see her daughter when the little girl was in his possession, and for his endeavor to override the decision of the ordinary by his habeas corpus proceedings.

"From my investigation of the case, I am convinced Mr. Barlow's present marriage is illegal," said Attorney Moore. "The law makes certain definite provisions as to length of residence a plaintiff must have in the jurisdiction where action for divorce is brought.

"When Mr. Carlow brought his action against Mrs. Edith Barlow in Stewart County it appears that he did not fulfill these legal conditions. He had lived in Massachusetts and in Cuba, but his legal residence was not in Stewart County. Therefore the divorce granted him was illegal as well as his subsequent marriage.

Say Barlow Isn't Rich.

"As for the child around whom the fight for possession has centered, Mrs. Barlow is determined to have her because she believes she is the person best fitted to look out for the care and moral instruction of the little girl. Her rights, she believes, were decided beyond question by the Court of Ordinary in Stewart County and she is basing her fight on these grounds. If the issue is raised, however, she will be prepared to show that she is the one most fit to have the custody.

"The report that he is a millionaire is absurd. His holdings, I venture to say, do not approximate anywhere near this amount. That talk about his fabulous riches is mostly bluff and bluster."

Barlow will be in Atlanta next week to consult with his attorneys, Burton Smith and Arthur G. Powell. He will accompany them to American where the suit filed by his former wife will be heard before Judge Littlejohn. He is confident that he will be awarded possession of the child on the showing made and declares that, if necessary, he will carry his fight to the highest court.

Beavers Refuses Plea of Friends to Enter Sheriff Race

Police Chief Beavers declared Wednesday that he had received many entreaties to get him in the race for Sheriff of Fulton County. He said he would stay Chief of Police of Atlanta until he was fired.

Rumors have it that some of the friends of Beavers wanted him to run for Sheriff because they fear his duty as Chief of Police are numbered and that the opponents of his vice crusade saw a chance to get rid of him and urged him to enter the race.

Gossip had it Wednesday that County Commissioner Tull C. Waters might become a candidate. Wheeler Mangum, the incumbent, W. N. Mayo, police captain, and L. J. Wright, Deputy City Marshal, have positively announced for the office.

SECRET NOTE IS CABLED TO LIND

Huerta's Desire, in Belligerent Message, for Vessels to Leave Before Election Is Ignored.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Secretary of State Bryan to-day cabled additional instructions to former Governor Lind at Vera Cruz, based on President Huerta's message to the Mexican Congress yesterday. He declined to make public his message.

The Navy Department to-day ordered the battleship Michigan to relieve the South Carolina at Vera Cruz, Mexico.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Although Washington recognizes the fact that the address of General Huerta at Mexico City yesterday is distinctly meant for home consumption, officials here are studying it to find out whether Huerta retains any hope that the negotiations with the United States Government will culminate with success.

The message is belligerent toward the United States in some respects, and the only recognition of American policy running through it is the definite promises that elections will be held next month throughout Mexico.

Reports are current that Senor Zamacona has been in informal communication with the State Department and that the negotiations have advanced since his coming here. Secretary of State Bryan has refused to confirm or deny this.

American warships will remain in Mexican waters indefinitely, despite any desire to the contrary announced by President Huerta.

This was the opinion expressed by State and Navy Department officials to-day in commenting on the clause in Huerta's message, in which he said the period of six months for which Mexico had "invited" the American battleship would expire June 4 next.

The United States considers it is entirely within its rights in keeping a part—or all, if it desires—of its fleet in Mexican waters.

History is full of precedents for such action and Government officials believe Huerta would not dare to request the withdrawal of the American ships, because this country is empowered by international law to maintain war vessels in any vicinity where Americans are believed to be in danger.

It is thought Huerta's move is a shrewd step to try to get rid of the American ships on or before October 25, the date on which he claims the "permission" to remain expires, and the day before the scheduled elections.

SWITCH IS FIXED TO DERAIL FLYER

Attempt to Send Fast Passenger Train Into Ditch at Hampton, Ga., Is Thwarted.

Engineer Tom Ragsdale, driver of Dixie Flyer, Train No. 94, at his room, No. 101½ Whitehall street, Wednesday afternoon told how he foiled a most astounding attempt at wholesale murder when he discovered a switch that had been split to derail Dixie Flyer No. 95 at Hampton, Ga., and send it crashing into a high embankment at 9:20 o'clock Tuesday night.

Only by the engineer's keen-sighted vision was the wreck averted. The switch had been broken open. Small cubes of steel had been placed on either side of the tapering rail to prevent the wheels of the on-coming train from resetting it automatically, and destruction had been made doubly sure by the tearing off of the switch light.

As the Flyer runs 60 miles an hour at this point, coming down a small grade, a bad wreck was inevitable striking the split switch, the engine with its train of vestibuled coaches would have hurtled the tracks and plunged into a high embankment to the left, carrying its passengers to death.

Trap Carefully Set.

The carefulness with which the death trap was planned showed that the perpetrators had made their calculations with expert eyes. They aimed at but the one grim end for the flying train.

By the strong headlight on his engine, Engineer Ragsdale discovered the trap which was set for the other train just 15 minutes before it was due.

"I was driving westbound at a speed of 45 miles and hour," said the engineer, "when I approached Hampton. Neither auf the fliers stop there. As I hit teh switch for the sidetrack at the west end of the Hampton depot, I noticed that the switchlight at the east end was not burning.

"This peculiarity made me look closer. By the light of my engine's headlight I caught a flash of the open switch. It was set not against my train, but against No. 95, which was due to pass over that spot within 15 minutes.

"Instantly I threw on brakes and brought my train to a halt after all of my coaches had passed over the switch. My fireman and I ran back to examine the switch, thinking its being open was due to carelessness.

Dogs Put on Trail.

"We found that the lock had been broken. The switch had been opened halfway and steel cubes placed on either side to prevent its moving from its position. Also the light had been torn off its post and extinguished. We later found it over in a cotton field.

"No. 95 was then almost due to hit this switch. At this point it goes at a rate of 60 miles an hour. The ones who fixed teh switch made a death trap from which it would have been almost impossible for any passenger on the train to have escaped."

Appalled at the gravity of the attempt, officials of the Central of Georgia Railroad, which receives the Dixie Flyer at Atlanta and carries it through Georgia, are securing the State for the guilty persons. Detectives with bloodhounds secured from the Fulton County Police, picked up their trails at the broken switch.

Rain Tuesday night has made the work of the bloodhounds difficult.

Sheriff L. D. Hudson, of Spalding County, together with his men, is aiding the railroad detectives.

This attempt is the fourth made to do injury to Train No. 95 in the past four months in this section. Detectives have taken this fact to work on and believe the plotters live near the scene of their activities and have taken this action as teh result of some ill-feeling they bear against the railroad.

Foil Plot to Wreck Speeding Dixie Flyer

SEARCH FOR WRECKERS BEGUN BY ROAD

State Scoured for Plotters—Fulton County Asked for Use of Dogs to Pick Up Trail.

An amazing attempt to wreck the "Dixie Flyer" with its hundreds of passengers while it was speeding at a high rate on its southbound trip Wednesday morning at Hampton, Ga., a small town on the Central of Georgia Railroad, was revealed Wednesday.

The attempt became known in Atlanta when detectives of the Central road asked the Fulton County police for bloodhounds with which to trace the guilty persons.

Only by the keen-sightedness of the engineer of the through train, T. B. Ragsdale, of Atlanta, was the fact noted, that the switch signal at the north end of the Hampton yards had been tampered with while still some distance away, and was able to bring his train to a halt.

Investigation showed that the switch had been surreptitiously opened to receive the flying train, which does not stop at Hampton, and plunge it and its burden of life into death and destruction.

Passengers on the train were thrown into a panic when they learned of their narrow escape. The alarm was first spread when the train drew up jerkily and came to a stop. Many persons sprang down from the coaches and went with the train officials to investigate the switch. They were appalled at what they found.

The train was crowded with the first of the Florida winter sojourners from Northern points. Many of them were women and children. With the flyer moving at its accustomed rate of speed, which is around 60 miles an hour, to have been shot through the open switch would have meant its derailment and inevitable loss of life.

Officials of the Central road, which receives the Dixie Flyer at Atlanta and takes it south through Georgia, have endeavored to prevent the ghastly attempt becoming known while the still hunt for the intruders is projected.

The State is being scoured for the wreckers.

Husband Wouldn't Let Her See Throngs On Peachtree; Sues

Alleging that her husband compelled her to keep her head bowed when she accompanied him on the streets with the threat that he would "make it warm for her" if she looked up, Mrs. Mattie Johnson Wednesday filed suit for divorce in the Superior Court.

Mrs. Johnson claims also that she was refused admittance to her home when her husband was away. She was forced also to go to work and contribute to her husband's support, she claims.

Sues Wife Who Hit Him on Tender Spot

Charging his wife struck him with her fist on a spot where he had been operated on, Royal E. Butler, No. 75 East Pair street, Wednesday morning filed suit for divorce from Margaret W. Butler.

Mr. and Mrs. Butler were married in Lakeland, Fla. Butler claims his wife has treated him so cruelly he is almost a physical wreck.

Declares Remarriage of the Millionaire Is Illegal, and Will Ask Annulment.

Mrs. Edith Barlow, once the wife of the wealthy Cuban promoter, J. E. Barlow, and now a masseuse at No. 219 West Peachtree street, proposes to strike directly at the home life of her rich ex-husband in the action which will be heard at Americus, Ga., September 27, according to an announcement of her attorney, Hudson Moore, Wednesday.

She will spare neither Barlow nor his childhood sweetheart whom he recently married. She will ask that their marriage be annulled and declared illegal. This petition, if it prevails, will place Barlow and his present wife in a most embarrassing position, as it will mean that they have been living together improperly in the eyes of the law.

"The trouble all has arisen over Barlow's determined efforts to regain possession of his 4-year-old daughter, Madeline, whom he claims is former wife kidnaped from Lumpkin, Ga. After Mrs. Maud Barlow, the promoter's present wife, had instituted habeas corpus proceedings in Stewart County and Barlow himself had filed an appeal when a writ was denied, the ex-wife got busy on her own account and began retaliatory action."

To Ask Annulment.

Here is what she wants

The annulment of the marriage of Barlow and his present wife.

Permanent possession, care and control of her daughter, Madeline.

An alimony of $25,000 for the support and education of her daughter.

A judgment against her ex-husband declaring him in contempt of court for his refusal to let her see her daughter when the little girl was in his possession, and for his endeavor to override the decision of the ordinary by his habeas corpus proceedings.

"From my investigation of the case I am convinced Mr. Barlow's present marriage is illegal," said Attorney Moore. "The law makes certain definite provisions as to length of residence a plaintiff must have in the jurisdiction where action for divorce is brought.

"When Mr. Barlow brought his action against Mrs. Edith Barlow in Stewart County it appears that he did not fulfill these legal conditions. He had lived in Massachusetts and in Cuba, but his legal residence was not in Stewart County. Therefore the divorce granted him was illegal as well as his subsequent marriage.

Say Barlow Isn't Rich.

"As for the child, around whom the fight for possession has centered, Mrs. Barlow is determined to have her because she believes she is the person best fitted to look out for the care and moral instruction of the little girl. Her rights, she believes, were decided beyond question by the Court of Ordinary in Stewart County and she is basing her fight on these grounds. If the issue is raised, however, she will be prepared to show that she is the one most fit to have the custody.

"The report that he is a millionaire is absurd. His holdings, I venture to say, do not approximate anywhere near this amount. That talk about his fabulous riches is mostly bluff and bluster."

Barlow will be in Atlanta next week to consult with his attorneys, Burton Smith and Arthur G. Powell. He will accompany them to Americus, where the suit filed by his former wife will be heard before Judge Ligleohn. He is confident that he will be awarded possession of the child on the showing made and declares that, if necessary, he will carry his fight to the highest court.

'I WILL NOT BE INTIMIDATED,' SAYS M'CONNELL; PASTOR DECLARES SPOONING IS A SIDE ISSUE

MAYOR WOODWARD.

REV. LINCOLN M'CONNELL.

Said Mayor Woodward to Minister McConnell: "I want to put you on notice that the pulpit nor the cloth will shield you from personal responsibility."

Said Minister McConnell to Mayor Woodward: "I only wear my 'clerical coat' while behind the pulpit, and any time you feel that your health demands any 'satisfaction' from me I shall feel it my religious duty to pay that debt on demand."

Chief Beavers only smiled through it all.

CHIEF BEAVERS.

CONFEDERATE VETS SLIGHTED BY G. A. R.

CHATTANOOGA, Sept. 17.—Through some sort of inexplicable blunder, out of which considerable feeling has raisen to mar the pleasure of the present G. A. R. reunion in this city, no Confederate troops marched in the big parade to-day.

Arrangements had been made, or were thought to have been made, whereby N. B. Forrest Camp of Confederate Veterans was to occupy a place of honor in to-day's line of march, representing the ancient enemies of the G. A. R., now the organization's cherished friends.

No Place Assigned Them.

When it came to making up the line, however, notwithstanding the fact that N. B. Forrest Camp was ready with a delegation to march, there was no place assigned to it.

Despite much hustling and bustling around, no one could be found with authority or inclination, as the case may have been, to remedy the stupid blunder, or whatever it was.

The Confederates were plainly disappointed and not a little disgusted at the turn of affairs, and did not hesitate to express themselves accordingly. The parade, however, proceeded without them.

Parade a Mile Long.

The line of march was more than a mile in length and required almost an hour to pass. The crowd upon the streets was the largest that has been witnessed during the encampment, as all business was suspended by all auxiliary associations during the time of the parade.

Beginning in the residence district in the northern part of the city, the course of march extended over the principal streets of the business section.

The veterans were in line two hours, but protected from the sun by lowering clouds and quickened by the coolness of the early fall, few showed signs of fatigue.

Leaders among the veterans to-day admitted that indications were pointing to the election of G. E. Adams, of Nebraska, as commander-in-chief. Former Congressman Washington Gardner, of Wisconsin, was still considered a factor.

Minister, Defying Mayor, Is "Out for Big Game in Wilderness of Sin."

The Rev. Lincoln McConnell, pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle, in an interview given to The Georgian Wednesday, fearlessly outlined his plans to aid in the betterment of the city and wage war on evil. Here is his statement:

I am here to fight the forces of evil in Atlanta. I will not be intimidated. I will not be turned back by any politician or any set of politicians. I do not fear any man or set of men. I shall conduct my campaign for civic righteousness in the manner I think best, regardless of the criticisms or threats of anyone.

Mayor Woodward has obscured the real issue by making it appear that the minister was making a war on "spooning" and kissing.

Why, I probably would be an unhappy single man to-day if it had not been for the divine right of this so-called spooning. Far be it from me to inveigh against such a necessary institution. I would be the last man.

What I was criticising was the Mayor's general and invariable policy of attacking, ridiculing and belittling the police. They are the personification of law and order. If the influential people of the city can laugh at them, scoff at them and oppose them in their every move, what will the thugs and thieves and people of the underworld do? It would be only a matter of time before the department would be disorganized if other officials of the city joined with the Mayor.

As for the individual cases of spooning on the Capitol grounds, I know nothing of them except as I was informed by the Chief of Police. I did not attempt to pass judgment on any couple who innocently were present when the two policemen came to make the arrest.

In fact, if I'd seen a young couple spooning and at the same time noticed some plainclothes men sneaking and prying about in the hope of gathering the two in their

Rabid Dog Chews Policeman's Shoe And Bites Revolver

After terrorizing the neighborhood for two days, a rabid dog belonging to Gerald A. Seymour, No. 32 West Fifth street, was killed Wednesday morning by Policeman O. R. Jones, who fired five bullets into the brute.

The dog went mad several days ago and had been confined in a back lot. Several children of the neighborhood narrowly escaped being bitten.

When Jones tried to shoot the dog Wednesday, the animal snapped at him, catching the heel of the policeman's shoe between his teeth. Jones' revolver snapped on an empty cartridge, and the officer ran out into an alley. He pushed his revolver between the pickets and stuck it into the animal's mouth. The dog grabbed the revolver in his teeth and pulled it from the officer's hand just as Jones pulled the trigger.

Two-Year Sentence For Maury I. Diggs

FLIGHT OF PRICES IS LAID TO RENTS

One Grocer Declares Meats Are High Because Farmers Do Not Raise Stock for Market.

The high-cost-of-living specter is stalking in Atlanta to-day. Figures published by the Federal Department of Labor show that Atlanta is second among leading cities of the United States in high cost of food products. Only in Boston is the expense of staple articles greater, according to the report.

Leading Atlanta merchants consulted regarding the situation were frank to admit the expense of food products, and ready to blame a number of circumstances, including excessive freight rates, the lack of home raised cattle, unfavorable discrimination of local statutes and high rents.

The Government report is made as a result of investigations conducted in fifteen leading cities during the period between May 15 and June 15. It is based on the prevailing prices charged for seven articles of food, sirloin steak, round steak, pork chops, bacon, ham, eggs and butter.

Bacon Extremely High.

Atlanta's average is raised by the extremely high price of bacon, which is given as 37 cents a pound. As to other articles the price in Atlanta, in most instances, is not more expensive than the average price in the other cities.

The next highest price on bacon, Atlanta's bugaboo, is in Denver, where 35 cents is quoted. But in Denver there is a lower price on several other of the staples, which brings down the average of the Western city.

In Atlanta the price of sirloin steak is far above the average. Round steak is sold here for about the same price as elsewhere, and pork chops find here the average price. But bacon is higher in Atlanta than anywhere else in the United States; eggs are higher than anywhere except Boston, and butter is as expensive. Only in the price of ham is Atlanta below the average, according to the report.

Here is a tale that shows how prices advanced in one year, maximum prices being quoted:

Meats Come From West.

Local merchants, acknowledging the high cost of food products in Atlanta, attribute the fact to various circumstances. One of the reasons which C. J. Kamper, well-known grocer of Peachtree street, thinks is the most potent in increasing the prices in Atlanta is the failure of farmers in Georgia to diversify their output and to raise cattle or hogs together with their cotton and corn.

"Atlanta must depend largely upon the Western packers for the meats that are consumed here," he said. "Georgia and Tennessee are States well adapted to the successful culture of cattle and hogs for food. Farmers will come to realize the dependence of their section on other parts of the country and to see the advantage which is before them. Until they do the cost of meats must be high, coming as they do from beyond the Mississippi River."

Freight rates, too, are not favorable to Atlanta, Mr. Kamper thinks.

Meats Come From West.

Local merchants, acknowledging the high cost of food products in Atlanta, attribute the fact to various circumstances. One of the reasons which C. J. Kamper, well-known grocer of Peachtree street, thinks is the most potent in increasing the prices in Atlanta is the failure of farmers in Georgia to diversify their output and to raise cattle or hogs together with their cotton and corn.

Atlanta must depend largely upon the Western packers for the meats that are consumed here," he said. "Georgia and Tennessee are States well adapted to the successful culture of cattle and hogs for food. Farmers will come to realize the dependence of their section on other parts of the country and to see the advantage which is before them. Until they do the cost of meats must be high, coming as they do from beyond the Mississippi River."

Freight rates, too, are not favorable to Atlanta, Mr. Kamper thinks.

"Relatively, freight rates are more excessive into Atlanta than into most cities its size," he said. "There is no competition in the express business, and Atlanta doesn't get the benefit of any rate-cutting, as other cities do.

"Then, too, if the prices are a little high, it must be remembered that Atlanta people live well, and many of them demand the best that is to be obtained. This fact may have been an element in the conclusion that it costs more to live.

Cherry Blames High Rents.

"Certainly, the high cost of living affects the dealers as well as the consumers. The public may be assured that the figures are not large, because of too great profits inherited by dealers. The margin of profits is very small, as a matter of fact."

Pink Cherry, another big grocer, had an interesting theory regarding the high cost of living in Atlanta. For one thing, he blamed high rents.

"Rents in Atlanta are excessive," he said, "and are getting higher. This would explain why expenses of operation are so great, and therefore why the cost of food products to the consumer is so high. A time surely will come when the steady increase in rent rates must stop."

Mr. Cherry declared also that there existed a discrimination in certain laws of the city against local slaughter house men, which reacted in favor of the Western dealer in meats.

"For instance, in Atlanta a calf can not be slaughtered for veal unless it is 50 pounds in weight," he said. "Animals killed under that weight must not be put on sale. On the other hand, the Western bakers are under no such restrictions, and can send almost any meat into the South."

Local merchants were frank in saying that the figures quoted in the Government report were fair, and an average for the market quotations. They said even that the figures were rather lower in some instances than those prevailing at present.

A corps of experts gathered and tabulated the cost of living figures in Atlanta in the interest of the campaign of the Government to ascertain the cost of living throughout the country.

Here is a striking table compiled from their figures:

'HE CAN'T BLUFF ME,' DECLARES M'CONNELL

Tabernacle Pastor Determined to Fight Sin in His Own Way. Calls Spooning Side Issue.

The Rev. Lincoln McConnell, pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle, in an interview given to The Georgian Wednesday, fearlessly outlined his plans to aid in the betterment of the city and wage war on evil. Here is his statement:

I am here to fight the forces of evil in Atlanta. I will not be intimidated. I will not be turned back by any politician or any set of politicians. I do not fear any man or set of men. I shall conduct my campaign for civic righteousness in the manner I think best, regardless of the criticisms or threats of anyone.

Mayor Woodward has obscured the real issue by making it appear that the minister was making a war on "spooning" and kissing.

Why, I probably would be an unhappy single man to-day if it had not been for the divine right of this so-called spooning. Far be it from me to inveigh against such a necessary institution. I would be the last man.

What I was criticising was the Mayor's general and variable policy of attacking, ridiculing and belittling the police. They are the personification of law and order. If the influential people of this city can laugh at them, scoff at them and oppose them in their every move, what will the thugs and thieves and people of the underworld do? It would be only a matter of time before the department would be disorganized if other officials of the city joined with the Mayor.

As for the individual cases of spooning on the Capitol grounds, I know nothing of them except as I was informed by the Chief of Police. I did not attempt to pass judgment on any couple who innocently were present when the two policemen came to make the arrest.

In fact, if I'd seen a young couple spooning and at the same time noticed some plainclothes men sneaking and prying about in the hope of gathering the two in their net, I think I would whistle and warn the young people of their danger.

Pastor After "Big Game."

No, my plan of campaign is bigger than any crusade against kissing or any fight against Mayor Woodward. I did not come here looking for a scrap. I had no chip on my shoulder. At the same time, I shall not run to cover if I see an honest stand-up and knock-down fight coming my way.

Into every city that one goes to do good over there will see the forces of evil aligned against him. This is inevitable. Sometimes it is the gamblers. Sometimes it is the proprietors of the so-called soft drink sorts. Sometimes it is the saloon and liquor interests. Not infrequently it is all combined.

Denounces Lawlessness.

But I am not afraid of them. I have met them before. Why, down in Enid, Okla., I had a deputation wait upon me to inform me that they were going to run me out of town. Did they do it? Well, I should rather say not. Instead, within a short time they had McConnell converts in not a few of the influential positions where the wire pulling politicians and representatives of the underworld formerly had held sway.

I expect to do my work here fearlessly, I hope I shall do it intelligently. My fight always will be to uphold the morals and the laws of the city. I supose I am entitled to an opinion on the subject of law and order. I believe that the greatest menace of the American people to-day is the menace of lawlessness. Some talk about the menace of Socialism and the menace of this idea and that idea, but I tell you that the greatest danger lies in the growing disrespect for law and the officers who are sworn to enforce it.

Tired of "Sorrowing" People.

It is true that I was a detective in Atlanta. I got heart-sick of the job. That is why I quit. Everything then was "down." I would touch a young man on the shoulder and tell him to come down to the police station with me. His father's head would go down. His mother's heart would go down.

I decided that it was pretty near time for me to engage in lifting people up, instead of eternally bringing sorrow and disgrace to them by putting them in prison cells. That's what I'm trying to do now. I'm trying to make them happy. I'm trying to bring the peace of God into their hearts. I hope I may succeed.

Mayor Says He's Through With Pastor.

Mayor Woodward declared Wednesday that he would have nothing further to say regarding Dr. Lincoln McConnell. He explained that he had received Dr. McConnell's special delivery letter Tuesday, but had returned it unopened.

"I have dismissed Sensationalist McConnell from my mind," he said. "I refuse to furnish him any further newspaper notriety. I've got too much respect for the dignity of the position I hold.

"I have been apprised of his record from the time that he and 'Flop' Beerman visited the saloons and dives of Knoxville, McConnell picking a guitar and 'Flop' singing. He was called 'Flop' because of the hang of his lower lip. After the performance they would pass around the hat. I presume that was the source of his livelihood at that time.

"But I don't care to go into all that history. I now dismiss him with contempt."

20,000 ARE IDLE IN LABOR WAR IN ENGLAND

Martial Law Likely To Be Called in Agitation Which Grips All Great Britain.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

DUBLIN, Sept. 17.—Nearly 20,000 men are to-day idle either from strike or lockout in the great movement of labor unrest which began here with the tram-way troubles and spread to England and Scotland.

Armed police fired upon a crowd of rioting farm laborers near Finglass, fatally wounding a boy. The policeman who fired the fatal shot was arrested.

Soldiers will be sent to patrol the district north of Dublin and martial law may be declared. The strike movement is spreading and the extension of the movement is increasing the hatred of the men.

It is estimated that the strike already has cost $5,000,000. Dispatches say that there are 12,000 men idle in Ireland, 5,000 are out at Liverpool, 5,000 at Birmingham and 1,000 at Glasgow.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, Sept. 17.—The strike of railroad employees which extended here from Dublin and Liverpool is spreading. This afternoon 2,000 men in the suburban service joined the strike. Railroad traffic here is becoming paralyzed. Leaders say that before the beginning of next week rail traffic over the greater part of England will be tied up.

Mrs. Zachry to Ask Custody of Children

AUGUSTA, GA., Sept. 17.—The Zachry case is to come up again. Attorney C. E. Dunbar, representing Mrs. Zachry, will ask Judge Hammond in the Superior Court September 27 to give Frances and Mildred Zachry over to their mother. Zachry now has the elder child, Francis.

Judge Hammond has told Zachry to bring Frances down to see her mother one day this week and Mrs. Zachry has promised not to run away to South Carolina with her again if the court allows her to see her little girl.

DR. CONVERSE IS PRESBYTERIAN MODERATOR

Druid Hills Pastor Succeeds Dr. Dunbar H. Ogden of Central Atlanta Church.

TURIN, GA., Sept. 17.—Dr. Thomas E. Converse, pastor of the Druid Hills Presbyterian Church, of Atlanta, was elected Moderator of the Presbytery of Atlanta at the opening session of the three days' convention. He succeeds Dr. Dunbar H. Ogden, of the Central Presbyterian Church of Atlanta.

Other officers elected are as follows:

Recording Clerk—Elder C. D. Montgomery, of Atlanta.

Press Secretary—The Rev. Fritz Rauschenberg.

Engrossing Clerk—The Rev. J. G. Herndon.

Dr. Ogden, retiring Moderator, preached the opening sermon of the Presbytery on the subject of "Profit and Loss." Addresses of welcome were delivered by George H. Urquhart, Mayor of Turin, and by V. P. Enloe, of the Turin Presbyterian Church.

The Wednesday's meeting was opened this morning with devotional exercises in charge of the Rev. W. E. Hill. The Rev. A. A. Little preached the doctrinal sermon, and at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon a conference on stewardship and evangelism was held.

Prince Sure to Get At Least One Bear

CODY, WYO., Sept. 17.—The Prince of Monaco, who is in Cody with the intention of going bear hunting with Buffalo Bill, will certainly have an opportunity of killing at least one bear, if the stories in circulation here are true.

In an abandoned cabin on the mountain side there is said to be an old, decrepit bear which is being saved for the Prince. It has been in captivity for years.

The plan is to take the bear out on the mountain and that's just where the Prince and his party will pass.

Chicago Shop Held Up And Robbed of $2,000

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—One man was killed, three men were bound and gagged and $2,000 in currency was stolen from a safe in a branch delivery station of Mandel Brothers, large department store owners, today.

Four masked men accomplished the robbery after a desperate fight between the four employees of the station and the robbers. Michael Waschuk, a wagonmaker, was shot through the heart as he grappled with one of the bandits.

JUDGE CALHOUN TO PROLONG SESSION

Hopes to Clear Up the Heaviest Criminal Docket in Years by September 29.

In order to clear up the heaviest docket in years, Judge Calhoun, of the Superior Court of Fulton County, Wednesday morning decided to hold court until September 29. The criminal division of the Superior Court will open then, according to Solicitor Hugh Dorsey.

In the meantime preparations are under way for the convening of the new branch of the Superior Court of Atlanta, which will be presided over by Judge Ben Hill, recently appointed by Governor Slaton.

The new court, according to present indications, probably will get under way about October 1, or perhaps earlier, following the hearing of the motion for a new trial for Leo M. Frank, convicted of killing Mary Phagan, before Judge Roan.

When the new court has been established Judge Roan will take his seat in the Court of Appeals bench and Judge Hill will handle all those cases which now fall in Judge Roan's division of the criminal court as well as others.

COURT PASSES ON NO SMOKING RULE

Railroad Conductors Must Enforce Regulations Impartially or Not at All.

Hereafter if the conductor on a railway train forbids smoking, or certain cars he must enforce his rule against all passengers alike or nobody at all will be bound by his order.

In a decision handed down by the Court of Appeals to-day in the case of the Seaboard Air Line against Lindsey, an award of $100 in the city Court of Atlanta was affirmed because a conductor undertook to make Lindsey stop smoking aboard one of the road's trains without at the same time undertaking to make other passengers stop also.

Lindsey refused to cease puffing his cigar, unless everybody on the car was also forced to stop—there were others smoking at the time—and because he would not cease he was subjected to harsh criticism by the conductor.

The Court of Appeals held with the lower court and denied the railway's right to single out Lindsey or any one else as a subject to regulations enforced impartially. It also decided the conductor's right to "have out" Lindsey, because Lindsey would not comply with his orders.

Druggist Bankrupt; Merchant Also Fails

Two voluntary petitions in bankruptcy were filed Wednesday. Arthur G. Gillan, a druggist, No. 361 South Boulevard, admitted liabilities of $7,859.97 and claimed assets of $2,000.

T. H. Williams, a merchant, of Gainesville, Ga., listed his liabilities at $1,319.91 and submitted assets of $232.

Man Who Confesses Killing Girl Was Church Worker by Day, Profligate at Night.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Is Hans Schmidt, forger, counterfeiter, murderer, now held in the Tombs, the same Hans Schmidt who was ordained to the priesthood in Germany five or six years ago, or is the prisoner here an impostor who in some way came into the possession of the credentials of the real Father Hans Schmidt?

This is the question that the police and the Catholic clergy to-day are asking, and to find an answer the photograph and complete description of the prisoner were sent to Germany to see if they tally with the real priest.

The belief is expressed here that the real Father Schmidt came to his death in Germany and that the prisoner seized his papers and name and used them to further his own criminal aims.

A Jekyll and Hyde.

More revolting details of the life led by Schmidt during the past year are just coming to life. His was a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde existence in real life. Everything tends to show that Schmidt during the day lived a model life, but as soon as night came he divested himself of his priestly garb and indulged in orgies that eclipsed even those that are common in the underworld.

There seems no doubt to-day in the minds of the public that Schmidt is a monster and a master criminal—a man who would stop at nothing to gain the end he desired. And it is the belief of most of those who have come in contact with the man that his expression, intended to create the impression that he is a madman, is a part of a shrewd scheme by which he intends to cheat the death chair.

That Schmidt cut the throat of the Aumuller girl and then dismembered her body because he feared she would expose his relationship with her was learned to-day through the story told by Annie Hirt, who worked with Anna Aumuller in St. Boniface's rectory.

Through the story the police learned that even before Miss Aumuller was placed in the flat by Schmidt, where he later murdered her, a child was born to her—in another part of the city.

Hid News of Child's Death.

The little babe died soon after coming into the world. Whether its death was from natural causes or whether it was killed is not known. After the birth of the child it is said, Schmidt told the girl he would take care of it, placing it in an orphanage, and that as soon as possible he would desert his duties as priest, rent a flat, and live with her as her husband and bring the child with him. He never told the girl it was dead.

It was evident from the conversation Miss Aumuller had with Miss Hirt but a day or two before the Aumuller girl quit her position in the rectory to live in the flat, that she had lost faith in Schmidt's promise to her. Tearfully she told Miss Hirt that she was in "great trouble."

Miss Hirt pleaded with her to unburden herself then. The girl decided that she would wait until Tuesday of the next week, promising that if then her troubles had not vanished she would tell her story not only to Miss Hirt but to Father Braun, pastor of St. Boniface's Church.

It is believed that Schmidt promised the girl that on September 2 (Tuesday) he would come to the girl and live with her.

Schmidt in Carousals.

It is believed he made this promise because of the girl's threat to expose him. Instead of keeping his promise, Schmidt crept into the flat at night and murdered the girl while she slept, chopping her body into pieces and dumping it into the Hudson River in the hope of destroying all evidence of his crime.

United States secret service men to-day were tracing the counterfeit operations alleged to have been conducted by Schmidt and his friend, "Dr." Muret, dentist, who is being held in the Tombs on a technical charge. Bogus $10 and $20 bills recently were passed in nearby Connecticut towns, and the secret service men are trying to trace them to Schmidt and Muret.

Muret to-day declared that it was Schmidt who suggested the counterfeiting scheme. Schmidt, no doubt, laid particular stress upon the fact of how easy it would be for him, in his priestly garb, to "shove the queer." In case he were caught in the act of passing bogus money he easily could explain that the money had been in the collection box and so escape any suspicion that he was implicated in its manufacture.

From those who lived in the neighborhood of Muret's flat, which it is said Schmidt visited almost nightly, to-day came stories of wild escapades in which women and girls nearly always figured. Carousing was kept up until the early morning hours.

AUTO SKIDS, GIRL HURT; 2 ESCAPE

Machine Turns Over on Roswell Road, and Young Woman Is Taken to Grady.

Mrs. Grace M. G. Graham, 22 years old, a stenographer, residing at No. 68 West Georgia avenue, was injured when an automobile in which she was riding with two men skidded and overturned on the Roswell road, three miles beyond Buckhead, early Wednesday morning. Mrs. Graham was cut about the face and received scalp wounds, though her condition is not serious. The men, O. G. Putnam and A. Mr. King, escaped without injury.

The accident became known when the young woman was brought into the home of Dr. Chapman, near Buckhead. There her injuries were dressed and an ambulance called. She was then taken to Grady Hospital, where further aid was given. Later she was removed to her home.

According to the report made by County Policeman Hance, who investigated the matter, the automobile was speeding toward Buckhead when the accident occurred. As it rounded Dead Horse curve, on the slippery road the wheels skidded and the machine slipped into the gutter, where it struck against the curb and capsized. All three occupants were thrown from the car. The men aided the injured woman to the physician's home.

One of the men told Haney they had been on a fishing trip to the river Haney said he saw no fish.

'MOVIE' OF BRYAN LECTURE, SHOWING THE GREAT MONEY-MAKER AT HIS WORK

Here, in five illuminating scenes, is a performance in which the Secretary of State for the United States is the leading figure. Observe the crowds at the tent door buying ice cream cones and pink lemonade. Once inside, the show begins with the Tyrolean yodelers, followed by the gypsy violinist. At last the famous Commoner appears (for $250 a performance, plus a percentage). The last scene shows him adding to his meager $12,000 income.

M'CONNELL MAKES HOT REPLY TO MAYOR'S NOTE

and no stenographic report was made of my remarks. From other inaccuracies in the report I suppose some friend of the papers must have reported from memory what they thought I really said. I did not give it out nor write a word of it. Another evidence of this, to me, is in what I am reported to have said about "yellow journalism." I never said a word about yellow journalism. All that I said that could have been so construed was a reference to the sort of vulgar prints of dancing women that have found a place in the papers of to-day, and in that connection I said "there is a marked change, and, in my opinion, not for the better, in what some papers publish of this sort to-day. Twenty years ago had a paper in Atlanta printed some of the pictures of nude or semi-nude women, their papers would have been debarred from the homes of the best people."

"Common Scold."

I was not speaking either in particular indorsement of the police or standing for every officer. I was speaking as strongly as possible in favor of law and order, decency and good morals, and I was showing that one of the greatest needs of our day was that all good men should stand squarely behind law and order, and if we do not have worthy officers, get them, and stand behind them in the performance of every duty. That was my text and that the line of my talk. I have given it to you thus at length, because I think it due you as well as myself that I do so.

As far as those parts of your letter go that refer to myself personally, or your opinion of me, or the motive that actuates my ministry, I have nothing to say. Your opinions of men of my calling are not likely to be very friendly. I have no idea but that the "old-fashioned preacher" would suit you and your sort better. Especially that "old-fashioned" sort that confined his preaching to the sins of Sodom and who ignored the demagogues who pander to the filthy for their votes' sake.

It is rather strange to see you, of all men, so impatient of criticism. One, to read the daily papers, would think that you were the only really honest, brainy man in public life. What department of the city government or what official of the city have you not held up to contempt and ridicule? I can't claim to know who all the men in your city are, but if there has been a day since I have been here, two weeks past, that someone has not been severely criticised or "roasted" in the Mayor's office, I have missed the paper that day.

Threats Wasted.

You are right about my being an "ex-detective." I was on the pay roll of the city here several years ago. I don't think I ever did anything of great importance while in the service of the city, and I am neither very proud nor am I at all ashamed of that experience. I am rather proud of the fact, however, that while in the employ of the city, and eating bread that it provided, I never caused any good citizen to blush for shame by my conduct.

I am an "ex-detective," as you say, but I am not an "ex-drunkard" or an "ex-* * *" and I have never been held in very high esteem by the gamblers, saloonists, crooks generally, so far as I have ever heard. I have no idea that that gang would vote for me should I run for office in Atlanta.

Your threat toward me and your warning, Mr. Mayor, are both wasted. I am not in the least afraid of you, and so long as you hold public office in Atlanta I shall criticise your public acts and public utterances whenever I think them contrary to public morals.

I most assuredly want no difficulty with any man, but in view of the stuff you seem to be labboring under, let me say to you now

I only wear my "clerical coat" while behind the pulpit, and any time you feel that your health or happiness demands any "satisfaction" from me I shall feel it my religious duty to pay you that debt on demand. Just let me add in conclusion: If you really stand for law and order, decency and good morals, you are the worst misunderstood man in the city of Atlanta. I sincerely wish I might believe it true. Very truly,

LINCOLN M'CONNELL.

Mayor's Reply Calm.

Mayor Woodward was very calm in his reply to the Rev. McConnell's second outburst.

"I'm going to treat my office of Mayor of Atlanta with more dignity and respect than ex-Detective Linc McConnell treats the Christian religion and the Tabernacle Church," he said.

"The ex-detective is out for what he can get for himself, and his means just now is sensational publicity, the same he lamented so in his sermon Sunday night.

"When he didn't progress sufficiently as a detective he became a meek and lowly Presbyterian. The Presbyterians didn't take to his style much, so he changed to a Methodist. In that denomination he was ruled successful for a time, finally becoming pastor of the Wesley Memorial Church.

"I'd like to know just why he quit there. The next I heard of him he was traveling over the country as a Baptist preacher for another job.

"He got a call to the Baptist Tabernacle at a good salary, but I'll bet if he saw a better opportunity with the Mormons he would go to Utah and try to fill Brigham Young's shoes."

Mayor Woodward in his first attack branded Dr. McConnell as "a demagogic coward" and as "a notoriety-seeking 'sensationalist'" in his letter made public on Tuesday. The communication was a reply to the minister's arraignment of the Mayor Sunday for his attitude on the "spooning" question.

The Mayor warned the distinguished preacher that his cloth nor the pulpit would shield him in the future from personal responsibility for his utterances. He added that he had stood all the blackguarding he proposed to, and hoped that the warning would be sufficient.

The Mayor's Letter.

Here is the Mayor's letter in full:

"Rev. Lincoln McConnell, Atlanta, Ga.:

"Sir: I notice by the morning papers and I presume that you have correctly quoted, that I was partly the theme of your discussion last night at the Tabernacle.

"I am somewhat surprised to see where you think that claims even ordinary sense would allow himself to be made the subject matter of such matter that he seems, from his utterances, to know nothing about. You seem to be so much surprised at a position that the Mayor should take on questions of crime, and suffering and expense. I am a regular graduate and licensed, long established and reliable.

criticised such work as that, and regardless as to whether you like it or not, I will continue to criticise it, and I care very little for your good opinions at any rate. My suggestions to you would be that you lay out an original line to discuss and not attempt to ape other sensationalists. It is hard to imagine what Atlanta has done that she should be eternally cursed with such characters and sensationalists. She certainly has had a surfeit of this character of people.

Sympathizes With Detectives.

You seem to take special privilege in letting the world know that you are an ex-detective. I have often heard of ex-gamblers and ex-drunkards and ex-bandits generally giving up their vocation and going to preaching. I presume from the way you play the ex-detective that you class yourself with them. The only ones who have my sympathy in that matter are the detectives that you have in the past associated with.

On the same page of the paper that contained your prelude of sense, tion was an act of two other preachers, one for killing a girl and one where a pastor and his flock spent the day in jail. It would appear from that, that some of you preachers, supposed to be, would do well to take care of your own spooning affairs.

"It is quite amusing that in your tirade you should take the newspapers to task for sensational publications. Did it not occur to you at that time that it would be possibly proper that you take some of this advice to yourself? Did you not expect when you got up this morning to see Lincoln McConnell in big, black type on the front page of the morning paper? That is what you did it for. If such as you will give the papers legitimate news and deal in dignified, well-behaved Christian work, the newspapers will not have quite so much sensational stuff to print, but in that case you and your kind will miss their much-coveted advertising.

"In conclusion, allow me to say this: that a man privately in the cloth and filling a pulpit, who will engage in personal abuse, when he knows that the world will not sanction a man representing it in the proper spirit, is a contemptible coward, and that you and all, I want to put you on notice that the pulpit nor the cloth will shield you from personal responsibility. I have submitted to all of that kind of thing that I will and feel that I, guardian until I am tired of it, and I hope I will not have to call your attention or have any further talk with you on these subjects.

"Respectfully,

"JAMES G. WOODWARD."

Girl's Mother Scores McConnell and Police.

A denunciation of the police, who arrested her daughter because she was found sitting on the steps of the Capitol with her sweetheart, and of the Rev. Lincoln McConnell, who has taken up the cudgel in behalf of his old comrades, has been issued by Mrs. Nathan M. Weisman, of No. 290 East Fair street, the mother of Miss Dora Weisman, arrested by Detectives Clack and Welchel, of the "vice squad," and exonerated in Judge Broyles' court.

Mrs. Weisman charges that Dr. McConnell, when he said in the pulpit Sunday night that her daughter had been caught in a compromising position, arrested and given a heavy fine, had deliberately misrepresented the facts.

She characterized the minister's misstatement as outrageous, and declared that as a result of Mr. McConnell's statements and of the work of the police her daughter had been done an irreparable wrong.

Says Lies Are Circulated.

"My daughter's character has been so attacked that she is almost ashamed to go upon the streets," Mrs. Weisman said. "Irreparable damage has been done to the child. Scandalous stories have been circulated about her by the police and have been spread all over town. She didn't do wrong. She's not that kind.

"She couldn't see her sweetheart at home because her father would not allow him to enter the house. There was nowhere for them to go but to the steps of the parks and they went to the Capitol about 9:30 o'clock and had been there but a few moments when they were arrested.

"I can't see why it is that people especially the ministers of the gospel preaching love and forgiveness should want to circulate lies against their daughters. I am confident that she should be arrested and haled into court, but it is definitely worse to have a preacher get up in his pulpit and deliberately misrepresent the facts. Why did he say my daughter had been fined by Judge Broyles when as a matter of fact she was dismissed and completely exonerated of any wrongdoing?"

Scores Chief Beavers.

"Why didn't this preacher find out what he was talking about, why didn't he learn the truth of the affair before he made any statement from the pulpit?

"The police have done my daughter great injury, and the policemen who arrested her should be dealt with in their superior. During the trial I understand there wasn't a word said about the immoral conduct of the girls. Chief of Police read about in a long report to the Police Commission.

"The policemen didn't even testify at the trial that they had seen a kiss. They swore simply that they had seen Dora and the boy sitting on a paper

WARM WEATHER PREDICTED FOR WEDNESDAY

Plenty More in Store, Says Forecaster vonHerrmann—Scoffs at Equinoctial Storms.

Atlantans awoke Tuesday morning to find the city still in the grip of the first cold spell of the fall, the thermometer standing at 56. The mercury rose slowly all morning, and Government Forecaster vonHerrmann predicted that warm weather will be here again Wednesday.

The cold weather is due to high pressure over the North Atlantic Ocean, causing the northeast winds to bring cool moist air from the sea.

According to Mr. vonHerrmann, there is plenty of warm weather in store for Atlanta. Cool spells like the present one are not unusual for this time of year. The lowest temperature for September 16 shown on the official records, which cover the past 47 years, was 50 degrees in 1892. The records also show a temperature of above 90 degrees for every day during September, but that figure is not expected to be reached during 1913.

"This cold spell should not be called an equinoctial storm," said Mr. von-Herrmann. "The theory of equinoctial storms was exploded long ago and the custom of calling every rainstorm around September 22 and equinoctial storm is as great a fallacy as saying that the moon governs the weather, or waiting till the dark of the moon to plant certain crops. The records show only one especially severe storm during the past 47 years on or around September 22."

All Rain Records At Mobile Broken.

MOBILE, Sept. 16.—A total of 12.69 inches of rain has fallen in three days in this city, breaking all records in the history of the local weather bureau. The heavy rains of early today did more damage to streets, roads and crops. It is estimated the total damage will reach $20,000.

THAW WINNER IN FIRST FIGHT IN U. S. COURT

Execution of Writ of Habeas Corpus Suspended Until After Extradition Hearing Is Held.

LITTLETON, N. H., Sept. 16.—Harry K. Thaw was arraigned to-day in United States Court for the first time in his long, turbulent fight for freedom and won a partial victory.

Judge Aldrich suspended execution of the writ of habeas corpus and instructed counsel for both sides that arguments might be heard later or that fresh applications could be made subsequently.

This action was taken because Thaw's extradition hearing before Governor Felker has not yet taken place, being postponed until next Tuesday.

The court ordered Thaw committed to the custody of United States Marshal Nute and Sheriff Drew. Thaw will be taken to Woodsville.

Judge Aldrich left it to the attorneys to fix a date and inform the court when they are prepared to present arguments on the continuance or discontinuance of the writ granted Saturday. Thaw was taken to the Thayer Hotel from the courtroom and on the way was cheered by hundreds of women, men and girls.

Judge Foster Sent To Speer's Court

Judge Don A. Pardee, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, after deliberating for several weeks as to whom to select to try the cases appearing on the docket of the Federal Court of the Southern District of Georgia, necessitated by the inability of Judge Emory Speer to hold the term, announced Tuesday that he would send Judge Foster, of New Orleans, to Augusta the third week in October.

A number of important cases appear on the docket of this court, including that of the Government vs. Tom Watson, who has been indicted for sending degrading literature through the mails.

The requests for bids on this amount of twine have been sent to manufacturers.

Augusta Must Use Savannah River or Lose Appropriation

AUGUSTA, Sept. 16.—Chairman T. S. Gray, of the Savannah River Traffic Committee, and fifty Augusta business men are visiting the wholesale merchants, cotton exporters and cotton mill men for the purpose of getting 100,000 tons of freight guaranteed each year for the next two years via the Savannah River.

By virtue of her position, being on a navigable river, Augusta has better freight rates than has Atlanta, Macon, Columbia, or any other interior city in this section. However, the people have not supported the river steamers as they should have, and Colonel D. C. Kingman, of the United States Corps of Engineers in charge of the Savannah River, has stated that this city must get busy at once or lose the appropriations which the Government makes annually to keep the channel open.

Quits Society Whirl To Sell Wallpaper

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 16.—"I simply want to show that a society girl can be of benefit to the world," Miss Marie Bakewell said to-day in the drapery and house decorating department of a store, where, as a saleswoman, she was exhibiting rolls of wallpaper in contrast to serving afternoon tea to members of the local "400."

Miss Bakewell comes of an aristocratic family and has given up society to see how it feels to earn her own living.

Snubbed by Sorority Members, Vanishes

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—The snobbish treatment given her by the sorority girls of the Girls' High School, where she was a pupil, is ascribed as the cause of the disappearance of pretty 15-year-old Georgia Cameron. She left her home for school a week ago Monday and has not been heard from since.

Mrs. Cameron said her daughter had been depressed by the slights of sorority members.

J. WYLIE SMITH IS TOO ILL TO GO TO TRIAL NOW

Case Against Alleged Forger Is Postponed as He Is Forced to Bed by Physician.

With three separate charges of forgery, involving $2,200, pending against him in the justice courts of Atlanta, J. Wylie Smith, soldier of fortune, Tuesday was too ill to stand trial, a victim of the worst form of tuberculosis. His critical condition Monday caused a postponement of the preliminary hearing until September 24.

Dr. C. M. Curtis, Smith's physician, declared Tuesday that his patient was in a dangerous condition.

Despite his precarious condition, however, Smith, who has braved all sorts of dangers in Mexico while a fugitive from Georgia, retains his old courage. He is brave in the face of death, and Monday steeled himself for the ordeal which may send him to the penitentiary. The relapse came first, however, much to his disappointment, and, upon the orders of his physician, he remained at his temporary home at No. 190 South Forsyth street. Justice Grisinlean honored the request of Dr. Curtis and postponed the hearing.

Smith, according to Dr. Curtis, contracted tuberculosis about six months ago, following a severe case of pneumonia which was brought on by exposure in Mexican jails and elsewhere.

Thus far his marvelous will power and determination to live, regardless of obstacles, have actually prolonged his life. He still is hopeful, and has taken his bed only upon the strict orders of his physician. He expressed the hope Tuesday of being able to stand trial on September 24.

Theatergoers Enjoy Initiation of Oyster Season at Piedmont

Old King Cole was a merry old soul, yet the legend says he became blase. But the opening of the oyster season at the Piedmont Hotel Monday night was of the kind that would have caused the old fellow to bestir himself.

While the formal after-theater opening did not take place until 10 o'clock, the excitement really began at 6 o'clock, when the dining room was opened for dinner. An orchestra of five women furnished a mixture of the latest rags and melodious classics. At 10 o'clock a shrill blast on a cornet announced that the after-the-after season was on. The 125 tables in the main dining room filled rapidly.

Assistant Manager Frank Taylor was in charge of the opening and received congratulations on his work.

C. J. HADEN, ATLANTA, ELECTED HEAD OF STATE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

By JAMES E. NEVIN.

MACON, Sept. 16.—Charles J. Haden, of Atlanta, was elected president of the new State Chamber of Commerce to-day in an enthusiastic meeting of leading representatives of the progressive business world of Georgia.

The meeting was generally acclaimed as marking a new era in the State's progress.

Macon was the Mecca of nearly one-half the counties in Georgia, and an active and effective State Chamber of Commerce was organized.

More than 300 delegates were here, besides various organizations of Boy Scouts, brass bands, marching clubs and other booming and boosting aggregations.

The visitors were the guests of the Macon Chamber of Commerce, where, in the beautiful new Hotel Lanier, everything from a fine meeting hall to all things imaginable by way of good eatables and drinkables had been provided.

The purpose of the State Chamber of Commerce is to bring the various counties and municipalities, large and small, into closer relationship, particularly in the matter of bringing about mutual efforts toward progress in Georgia between the urban and the rural populations.

North Meets the South.

The Atlanta and Decatur delegations, representing Fulton and DeKalb Counties, were the last to reach Macon, preceded by only a few minutes; however, by the Waycross delegation, representing Ware County, thus bringing together in the central Georgia city almost simultaneously the extreme northern and southern ends of the State, making the sectional representative for organization purposes complete upon the occasion of the State Chamber's initial gathering.

The enthusiasm of the visitors was unmistakable. From the beginning it was apparent that those counties participating to-day took upon the organization of the State Chamber as highly important and promising work, and besides the sixty-odd counties directly represented some thirty-odd sent written assurances of the gathering of their cordial sympathy and future co-operation in the work of the State Chamber.

The Atlanta delegation, headed by Secretary Privy, of the Chamber of Commerce; Wilmer Moore, Mr. Haden and others, immediately assumed a leading part in perfecting the State organization, inasmuch as it was in Atlanta that the idea of a State Chamber organization was conceived, and where, in its preliminary details, it was worked out. Notwithstanding this primacy of the Atlanta boomers for the State Chamber, however, the matter of effecting permanent organization was participated in by all sections of the State generally, and no one county or section in any way dominated the proceedings.

Expect 10,000 Members in Year.

The State Chamber expects to run its membership well over 5,000 from the beginning and to double that or more within the next twelve months. It also promises to work through its county and municipal commercial bodies in working inside Georgia, and to work within itself and by itself outside the State, so far as boosting and pushing the State abroad is concerned.

The first session of to-day's meeting was given over almost entirely to speech-making by gentlemen from various points throughout the State, while the executive committee was working out the problems of a constitution and by-laws and nominations for officers of the permanent organization.

Friendly but acute rivalry soon developed on the floor in the matter of a president of the State Chamber of Commerce and the location of its permanent headquarters. Prominent bidders for the headquarters are Atlanta, Macon, Albany, Americus and Griffin, while numerous places had favorite sons who wished to serve as president.

This has been particularly noticeable, however, that none of this rivalry was tinged in any manner by bitterness or unfriendliness. If ever before in Georgia an organization of this sort was perfected under more genuine harmony and real good fellowship, no one here seems to know where and when it was.

Many Subjects Discussed.

Every topic of interest conceivable in the business world of Georgia was discussed. All the way from banking and school to plowing and hog culture. It is the purpose of the State Chamber of Commerce to touch every note in the keyboard of industrial progress in Georgia to the genuine good of the State in all directions.

After much discussion the State Chamber of Commerce named Mr. Haden president. The place of permanent headquarters will be decided later by the executive committee of the chamber.

Mr. Haden acted as temporary chairman of to-day's meeting, and his nomination to the permanent presidency gave unanimous satisfaction. Constitution and by-laws providing for a broad and catholic organization were adopted.

The greatest and most impressive showing made by any visiting delegation was that of the DeKalb County organization. Headed by a score of more members of the Decatur Board of Trade, a dozen prosperous and progressive farmers and a cracker-jack drum corps of Boy Scouts, this delegation paraded the streets and the convention hall, and everywhere it went it was received with loud and prolonged applause, while Wilmer Moore, of Atlanta, probably made the very best speech of the many really good speeches.

Other Officers Named.

Comparisons are out of order, perhaps, as all of the visitors were full of enthusiasm, and the State chairman adjourned in the afternoon more than well pleased with the work accomplished.

Besides the president of the chamber, the following officers were named:

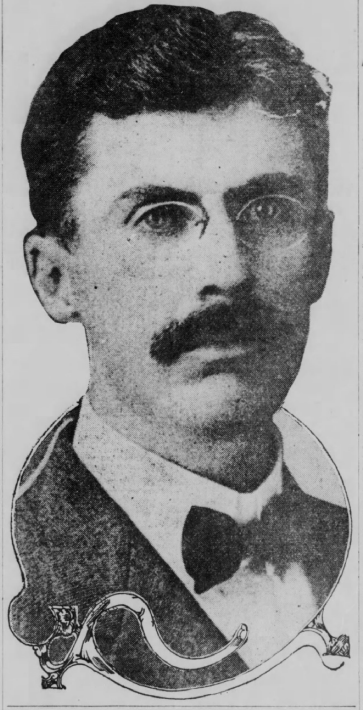
First vice president, F. W. Stetson, Macon; second vice president, A. A. Bush, Camilla; third vice president, L. F. Maddox, Atlanta; fourth vice president, P. J. Reid, of Waycross.

The only salaried member of the State Chamber is the secretary, whose compensation is yet to be fixed. For this place M. B. Powell, of Columbus, was named. At one time the race question was interjected into the proceedings by a member from Bibb County, who moved that the organization be restricted to whites after some debate, a little sharp at times, the motion was adopted.

The chamber then adjourned to meet at 2 o'clock.

ATLANTAN PRESIDENT OF STATE CHAMBER

CHARLES J. HADEN.



LOST ESSIE NIX IS SEEN IN COUNTRY

Disquieting information as to the whereabouts of Essie Nix, the pretty 16-year-old daughter of Mrs. G. M. Nix, of No. 626 Chestnut street, who has been lost since last Saturday, was received by Chief of Police James L. Beavers Tuesday morning.

Robert Cain and J. Harris, of Buckhead, visited the Chief and said they had seen the missing girl Monday afternoon walking aimlessly along a lonely country road some two miles north of Roswell.

The two men were in an automobile when they came upon the girl, who was walking with her head bowed. The men said that as they had known the girl for some time they had no hesitancy in accosting her. According to the men, she said she was on her way to the home of a relative not far distant.

It is feared by the police that the girl may have lost her mind. Immediately following the receipt of this information the Chief notified the girl's mother. Every effort will be made to locate the child. Men in automobiles have started in search of her.

BANKERS' OFFICIAL PRAISES ATLANTA

Fred E. Farnsworth, secretary of the American Bankers' Association, during an inspection of Atlanta's hotel facilities Tuesday declared this city was fully capable of entertaining the 1914 convention of the association.

Mr. Farnsworth was given a dinner at Hotel Ansley Monday night by the convention committee of the Hotel Men's Association. Mr. Farnsworth was optimistic over the probability of Atlanta getting the convention. Tuesday Fred Hunser, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce Convention Bureau, continued to conduct him through a personal examination of the hotels.

Mr. Farnsworth said there would be 3,000 bankers attending the convention. He already has been guaranteed 1,791 rooms, and the hotel men have promised to make the number 2,000.

Atlantic City is the only other city that has announced to make an open fight for the 1914 meeting when the bankers assemble in their 1913 convention in Boston.

CONLEY TO FIGHT FELON CHARGE BITTERLY

Attorney Will Permit Him to Plead Guilty to Misdemeanor. Judge Sought.

Jim Conley's trial on a felony charge as accessory after the fact in the murder of Mary Phagan will be strongly combated by his attorney, W. M. Smith, according to announcement made Tuesday.

It is the contention that Conley, on the State's own theory of the crime, is guilty of nothing more than a misdemeanor, and that he can not be tried for a crime of which he is not accused.

Two indictments were drawn against the negro at the last session of the Grand Jury. One charged him with a misdemeanor and the other with a felony. A nice point of law has arisen on the felony indictment, the Georgia statutes providing that an accessory after the fact, to be liable to punishment as a felon, must have "hidden, harbored or concealed" the person guilty of the capital crime, as well as to have withheld the information of the crime from the officers.

Fight Centers on One Word.

If an attempt is made to try Conley on the felony charge, a legal fight will ensue on the interpretation of the word "conceal." The State will contend that it has a broad meaning, which includes assisting the culprit to escape and concealing his identity from the authorities. This, the Prosecutor will contend, admittedly was done by Conley when he shielded Frank for several weeks.

Conley's attorney, on the other hand, will insist that the law be interpreted with the strictest literalness. Legal citations will be made to show that "conceal" in the statutes means nothing else than hiding or harboring the person of the guilty man. This, the negro's lawyers will insist, Conley did not do.

Case May Come Up September 29.

Conley will be allowed to plead guilty to the misdemeanor charge and nothing more. The carrying of the girl's body to the basement was a part of the negro's action in withholding knowledge of the crime from the officers, and did not in itself constitute a felony, it is held.

The negro's case probably will come up the week of September 29. Solicitor Dorsey has abandoned his attempt to hold court before this time. He hopes to be able to get a judge either from the Fulton Superior Court or an outside circuit, to preside. Judge Ben H. Hill, the newly appointed judge to the Atlanta Circuit, will not take up his duties before October 6, and it may be a week or two later than this.

Convention Bureau Boosts Atlanta in Booklet, Just Out

A book containing photographs of interesting places in and about Atlanta, and filled with facts and figures that show why life is worth living in Atlanta, was issued from the office of the Atlanta Convention Bureau Monday. It was compiled by Fred Houser.

On the cover are photographs of the Battle of Atlanta reproduced from the cycloramas at Grant Park, and below them are pictures of Atlanta as it is today, with factories and skyscrapers taking the place of smoking ruins and marching soldiers.

It illustrates strikingly the strides of the Gate City since the war. The 48 pages of the book are brim full of valuable information concerning Atlanta.

The book will be circulated freely throughout the North, and is expected to be a great aid in bringing conventions to Atlanta.

NABBED 4TH TIME ON FRAUD CHARGE

Kirkwood Man Is Accused of Swindling Lumber Firm in Several Transactions.

R. F. Mitchell, of Kirkwood, was arrested Tuesday on a warrant sworn out by Robert Anderson, a lumberman of Warrenton, charging fraud in lumber deals. Mitchell was taken to Warrenton by Sheriff W. O. Brinkley, of Warren County.

This is the fourth time Mitchell has been taken into custody, it is said. On August 27 Mitchell was arrested and taken to Roberta, Ga. Later he was taken to Somerville, and finally he was arrested, but released upon the failure of the Sheriff of Chattooga County to come for him.

According to the charges filed by Anderson, Mitchell has represented himself as the W. H. Mitchell Lumber Company. Under that name, it is alleged, Mitchell has received large consignments of lumber from Anderson.

When arrested by Detective J. W. Hollingsworth at his home in Kirkwood, Mitchell inquired, pleasantly, where he was "to be taken this time."

TWO SOUTH SEA ISLES DISAPPEAR

Several Hundred Natives and White Men Lost as Part of Tonga Group Sinks.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—Falcon and Hope Islands of the Friendly or Tonga group in the South Pacific, have disappeared from view. With them, several hundred natives and a few white men also have disappeared.

This news was brought to San Francisco by Capt. J. T. Trask, of the steamship Sonoma, which arrived from Sydney, via Pago Pago and Honolulu. Captain Trask said:

One of the regular trading steamships, between Sydney and the Tonga group, reported the sinking of the islands. The vessel steamed to where Falcon Island should have been, but it was no where in sight.

"Just prior to this the instruments at the Sydney Naval station showed that several violent earthquake shocks had taken place about 1,000 miles northeast of Sydney."

Rheumatism

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It

In the spring of 1891 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism, so severely that I could not walk a step for three weeks. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but each relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has never returned. I have given it to a number of my friends afflicted as I was, and it effected a cure in every instance. I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Just send a card, simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proved itself to be just the long looked-for remedy you want to keep on hand, you can send the price of it, one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write to-day.

STATE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE LAUNCHES NEW BUSINESS ERA

Eugene W. Stetson, of Macon, first vice president, and Charles J. Haden, of Atlanta, president State Chamber of Commerce.

President Haden Begins Organization of Fighting Force Under Most Favorable Auspices.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The organization of the State Chamber of Commerce means a new era in the industrial and business world of Georgia, so the returning Atlanta delegates to the big Macon meeting believe.

The organization was effected in such a large degree of enthusiasm and genuine good fellowship, and the various counties responded so readily and so cordially to every request made upon them that the new State president, Charles J. Haden, of Atlanta, will proceed immediately to the assembling of a fighting field force, charged with the responsibility of leadership in the new movement.

After the chamber had been organized Tuesday in Macon, the new president announced that $2,000 was desired to finance the pressing necessities of the moment.

He stated that it would be possible, perhaps, to get along with as little as $1,000 for the present, but the responses to his appeal were so prompt that the $2,000 desired was raised within less than half an hour. President Haden and Wilmer Moore led the subscription list, on behalf of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, with $200.

Macon May Win Head Office.

The executive committee of the chamber, given authority by the State convention to fix a place of permanent headquarters, has postponed that matter until after the next meeting which will be held in Macon.

There is some rivalry between Macon, Atlanta, Americus and Albany for those headquarters, but the impression is that Macon will win.

Discussing the new chamber today, President Haden said:

"The State Chamber of Commerce means much to Georgia—to all Georgia. Two things, primarily, we expect to keep out of it—sectionalism and politics.

"The State Chamber will know no North, South, nor Middle Georgia. A provision has been made in the by-laws for the expulsion of any member who undertakes to inject politics into the organization.

National Assistance Certain.

"In our work we shall have the cooperation of both the National and State Departments of Agriculture. The presence of Miss Mary Cresswell, representing the National Department at the Macon meeting, and the splendid address she delivered, and the presence of Assistant Commissioner Hughes and Entomologist Worsham, of the State Department, attested the real sincerity of those bureaus with this movement.

"It also was gratifying in the extreme to note the evident interest of the railroads in the organization of the State Chamber.

"Another thing that shows how seriously the delegates to Macon took the work in hand is the manner in which subscriptions were piled up when our first call for funds was made. You know, the most tickling part of movements of this kind is the asking for money. I ventured to spring that topic late in the day, and I sprung it somewhat in fear and trembling. My anxiety was misdirected, however. Subscriptions simply piled in. Wilmer Moore, for instance, thinking his first subscription might not be thought sufficiently large, or something, got up later along and had his two boys' names placed on the list—one of his boys is 5 and the other 15—saying that he wanted them to start right in matters of this kind."

CANDY KITCHEN REMODELED.

Garrow's Candy Kitchen, at No. 40 Marietta street, has been completely remodeled. A beautiful front with tile flooring, new fixtures and facilities for better service make this kitchen better than ever. Garrow's pure candies of various kinds are growing more popular in Atlanta every day.

Ex-Gov. Patterson Joins Church and Turns Prohibitionist

MEMPHIS, Sept. 17.—Former Governor M. R. Patterson, in a signed statement made public here to-day, declared he would henceforth fight for prohibition laws and for the strict enforcement of Tennessee's four-mile liquor law.

Patterson was elected Governor of Tennessee on a "wet" platform over Edward W. Carmack. Later he pardoned Duncan B. Cooper, after he had been sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment for the killing of Carmack.

The former Governor's statement said he had lived an evil life, but that he had "experienced an entire change of heart" and would devote himself henceforth to leading the life of a Christian. He became a member of the Presbyterian Church in Memphis a few days ago.

ESSIE NIX FOUND IN BIRMINGHAM, GA.

Girl Missing Since Saturday Believed to Have Walked Twenty Miles to Brother's Home.

Essie Nix, the pretty 18-year-old telephone operator who disappeared from her home, No. 626 Chestnut street, Saturday morning, was discovered Wednesday at the home of her brother, James Nix, who resides at Birmingham, Ga., about twenty miles north of Atlanta.

The girl, whose disappearance caused her mother, Mrs. G. M. Nix, the deepest anxiety, evidently had walked the entire distance from Atlanta to the home of her brother. She was seen walking Sunday near Roswell by two men in an automobile, and that time she seemed exhausted, but refused to ride with them.

Her mother was notified Wednesday morning. The girl will be brought back to Atlanta at once.

She ran away from home seven months ago and was found a week later in the home of her uncle in Milton County. No reason was given for her actions.

BIBLE SCHOOLS TO HOLD BIG RALLIES

Superintendents Plan City-Wide Membership Campaign for Sunday, October 5.

A city-wide membership campaign, with a "rally day" in every Sunday school on October 5, is planned by the Atlanta Sunday School Superintendents' Congress. The campaign was outlined at a meeting of the congress Tuesday evening at the Park Street Methodist Church.

October 5 promises to be the biggest day Atlanta Sunday schools have ever known. Besides the rallies in the various schools, a great mass meeting of teachers is planned for the afternoon, probably at the First Baptist Church.

Several superintendents of Sunday schools stated at the meeting Tuesday night that they have already formulated their plans for the campaign. Dr. Marion Hull, who presided, said the North Avenue Presbyterian Sunday School would hold a rally each evening of the week preceding October 5. J. R. Guinn, superintendent of the Wesley Memorial Sunday School, said his school would hold departmental rallies each Sunday until the big rally day in October.

ROTARY CLUB COMES TO ASSOCIATED CHARITIES' AID; $3,000 IS PLEDGED

Realizing the need of immediate response to the appeals for aid sent out by Joseph C. Logan, secretary of the Atlanta Associated Charities, the members of the Atlanta Rotary Club have inaugurated a campaign to raise $3,000 to tide over the affairs of the Associated Charities until some permanent means of income can be devised.

With nearly $500 raised in a few hours late Tuesday afternoon, more than 30 of the members of the club started out Wednesday morning with the intention of securing enough subscriptions by nightfall to make up the $3,000 that is necessary to insure the continuation of the work of the Charities. The campaign will be of the whirlwind character that proved so successful when the project of raising money to entertain the Shriners came up, and members of the club are confident that they will experience no difficulty in raising the money and saving the charitable organization that has taken care of the city's poor for so many years.

Plans to Get Fixed Income.

Virtually every member of the Rotary Club has enthusiastically expressed his willingness to aid in the campaign. Each man will solicit subscriptions from every man in Atlanta who is engaged in the particular business which the Rotary Club member represents. They will be asked for donations of any amount they feel they can give. These donations are to be paid in cash to the solicitor made out in check payable to the Rotary Club.

Even though the club members are successful in raising the entire amount of $3,000 to-day or tomorrow, they will continue their work until the next meeting of the club two weeks hence. Then the money will be turned over to the Associated Charities, and the club probably will start a campaign to obtain a permanent income for the organization.

Each Member Pledges $100.

The proposition to raise a fund for the charities was broached at a meeting of the Rotary Club at the Majestic Hotel Tuesday afternoon, and met with an enthusiastic response from the 30 or 40 men who were present. The urgency of the situation and the necessity for immediate action were explained by F. O. Foster, A. S. Adams, Ivan E. Allen, President H. W. Anderson and others. Lee M. Jordan made the first motion that the club interest itself in behalf of the Associated Charities and a few moments later, on motion of W. B. Carlton, every member present pledged himself to raise $100 for the fund.

Among the members of the club who are calling on the business men of the city and soliciting donations to the fund are the following:

Nearly $500 Secured.

Mr. Seabrook has charge of the donations, and all members of the club are requested to telephone to him the names of contributors. His office is at 615 Third National Bank Building; his phone is Ivy 1126. Any person who desires to contribute to the fund and who has not been seen by any member of the club is also requested to notify Mr. Seabrook.

Subscriptions aggregating $422.50 were secured late Tuesday afternoon, as follows:

J. T. Holleman, $25; Coca-Cola Bottling Company, $100; Lindsey Hopkins, $60; John S. Owens, $25; J. G. Dodson, $25; cash, $2.50; Capital City Laundry, $50; Charles P. Byrd, $25; S. S. White Dental Company, $50; Fred Hoyt, $10; George B. Allen, $25; Ivan E. Allen, $25.

"Wizard" Blames Vacation for Illness, and Will Try Different Sort of Rest in Future.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Thomas A. Edison, "wizard of electricity," was out of danger to-day and had so far rallied from his weak attack, following two weeks' vacation in Maine, that he was able to sit up. He declared that to-morrow would find him back among his bottles and instruments.

His rapid recovery is due largely, he thinks, to the nursing and painstaking care of Mrs. Edison and her daughter, Madeline.

They took command of the situation and personally prepared his food, allowing the nurses in charge to go.

"All that my husband needs," said Mrs. Edison, "is the personal attention that only Madeline and I can give him. We have decided that Dr. Bradshaw's orders for him to remain in bed for the present are to be carried out. It is not necessary to send him to a hospital or do anything we can not accomplish."

Mr. Edison has found that the only real rest he can thrive on is to be found in his laboratory, where he often spends 21 hours a day thinking over and working upon his inventions.

NEW NUPTIAL VOW STIRS CLERGYMEN

"Socialist Pastor" Does Not Make Bride Promise to Love, Honor and Obey.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—The form of the marriage service used by the Rev. Paul Harris Drake, the "Socialist Pastor," of Wollaston, at the wedding of Miss Maude Adele Heath and John Theodore Mendenhall last week, has caused a sensation among clergymen. The form is original with Mr. Drake, and it does not require the bride to love, honor and obey.

This is the husband's vow:

"I, John, take you, Maude, for my lawful wife, and I faithfully promise you that I will endeavor to be to you a good husband, a true comrade and partner, a respector of your own individuality and a loyal supporter of the home and family relationship upon which we are now entering, so far as in me lies, and so long as I shall live. As a pledge of my intention to fulfill these promises, I give you this ring."

This is the wife's vow:

"I, Maude, take you, John, for my lawful husband. I accept your token, and in return, I promise you that I will endeavor to be to you a true comrade and helpmeet, striving to do all that lies in my power to make our married life complete and, cheerfully accepting my share of the duties and responsibilities of a home, as your wife and partner for life, I give you my pledge in this ring."

UPSET STOMACH, COSTIVE, BILIOUS, CASCARETS TONIGHT---DIME A BOX

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases, that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, feeling of fullness, dizziness and sick headache, means your stomach is sour—your liver is torpid—your bowels constipated. It isn't your stomach's fault—it isn't indigestion—it's biliousness and constipation. Try Cascarets; they sweeten the stomach, remove the sour, fermenting food and foul gases, take the bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter from the bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended. A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning.

SLAYER OF GIRL BRANDED AS IMPOSTOR BY CLERGY; ALSO IS A COUNTERFEITER

but a short time later was arrested charged with forging papers as to the examinations he had taken to qualify himself for the priesthood. The German authorities found Schmidt guilty, but freed him on the ground that he was feeble-minded.

Schmidt then came to America, and by use of forged ecclesiastical letters secured an assistant pastorate in Trenton, N. J. A short time later some of his acts were brought to the attention of Bishop McFaul, who dismissed Schmidt from the Trenton Diocese.

Later Schmidt came to New York. He presented dismissorial letters, which it is now asserted, were forgeries, but which seemed genuine because they were written on the letterheads of the different bishops and stamped with the bishops' seals. It is believed that Schmidt in some way secured possession of these letterheads, stamped them with the seals and later wrote out the letters of reference himself.

Quarreled With Pastor.

When these letters were presented to the ecclesiastical authorities in New York, they bore every evidence of being genuine, were accepted as such and Schmidt was first given a position as assistant pastor in St. Boniface Church, where he met Anna Aumuller. His open acts while there, although merely technically one of misconduct, displeased Father Braun, the pastor, and he and Schmidt had a disagreement, which resulted in Schmidt assuming the duties of assistant pastor at St. Joseph's Church.

It was from some of the papers found among Schmidt's effects in his room at the rectory of St. Joseph's Church that the police were able to bring about the arrest of Muret and the Zech girl and establish the fact that Schmidt was a counterfeiter, in addition to being a murderer.

These papers showed that a man named "Miller" had rented a flat in 154th street. The police went there, broke into the flat, found the counterfeiting outfit and also a paper giving the address of Muret.

Enlisting the aid of the girl superintendent of the flat, the police went to Muret's place. There the girl identified Muret as "Miller."

New Slaying Mystery Baffles New York Police.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The police of this city and Yonkers united today to attempt to solve another murder mystery which just now seems as baffling as the Aumuller case seemed a week ago.

For three months a woman, aged about 30, well dressed and pretty, has been seen almost daily on the cliffs overlooking the Hudson just above Yonkers. As she struggled up the hillside yesterday afternoon she came upon two boys driving a wagon. She asked to be driven to Hastings.

Her manner aroused the curiosity of the boys who returned to the spot where the woman had been seen clambered down the rocky hillside and came upon the skeleton of a man. Not far away was found a woman's glove and a little distance away the silk sleeve of a woman's dress filled with stones. This evidently had been the weapon with which the man had been murdered.

Efforts to trace the woman failed and it is believed that she is hiding in New York. One theory is that the woman was lured by a psychological force to the scene of the crime.

CORPORATION AIDING SMITH, SAYS DASHER

MACON, Sept. 16.—A. L. Dasher, Sr., an independent candidate for Mayor, has charged Bridges Smith, the administration candidate, in a paid advertisement to-day, with accepting large contributions to his campaign fund, amounting to thousands of dollars, from the Macon Railway and Light Company.

He asserts that the money was given partially by Leon S. Dure, vice president of the company, and partially secured by A. Emmett Barnes, a campaign worker, who went to New York and obtained the coin from the A. B. Leach Company, owners of the local public utility companies.

He further charges that the saloonkeepers were levied upon for a sum aggregating $2,000, and threatened with raids unless they have the money. He also claims that there has been a wholesale illegal registration.

The charges are denied by Mr. Smith.

36 Candidates for Council.

There are now 36 candidates for city Council and three candidates for Mayor in the municipal race, the election for which will take place on September 26.

All candidates paid their assessments to-day, which was the occasion for the announcement of the complete ticket offering for Council in support of A. L. Dasher, who is running for Mayor.

The Bridges Smith and Wallace Miller aldermanic tickets were announced several weeks ago.

Six Candidates for Commissioner.

Macon tomorrow will elect a water commissioner and a judge for the Municipal Court. The contest for both offices has been hard fought, there being four candidates for one and six for the other. Ed Crimmins, a painter, J. W. Wilcox, a civil engineer, Howell Harris, a solicitor, H. R. Brown, a retired plumber, and C. E. Brunner, a druggist, are opposing Commissioner C. T. Williamson for re-election for a six-year term.

The candidates for the judgeship are Augustin Daly, Lloyd Moore, Henry Strobecker and J. P. Burnett, all lawyers. There being a registration of over 5,100, a large vote is anticipated.

When the City Executive Committee met to-day at noon for a three days' purging of the registration list to be used in the municipal primary on September 24, there were challenges to more than 200 voters.

Over 100 challenges were made by the Wallace Miller campaign committee. The committee will consider these objections during the next three days. A petition of the Miller committee for a longer time in which to purge the registration was denied.

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES' DEFICIT IS $5,200; PLANS MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

Facing the prospect of a deficit of $5,200 on January 1, even with the $3,000 pledged by the Atlanta Rotary Club, which members of that organization are now raising, Secretary Joseph C. Logan, of the Associated Charities, Wednesday began laying plans for a membership campaign by which it is hoped to place the organization on a solid financial foundation and provide a permanent annual income sufficient to carry on the work.

Unless the people of Atlanta respond, and shortly, to the appeals of the Associated Charities, that organization, which has saved hundreds of poor girls from ruin and brought good cheer and happiness into hundreds of Atlanta homes must abandon its work; its offices must be closed—and Atlanta will enjoy the distinction of being the only large city in the United States that can not support a charitable organization, the value of which can hardly be estimated in dollars and cents.

Rotary Club Pledges $3,000.

The Atlanta Rotary Club has pledged the Associated Charities $2,000, which is now being raised by subscription among the classes of business represented by the club members. This sum is only an emergency relief fund, designed to keep the association on its feet until the citizens of Atlanta respond to its appeals and provide a permanent revenue for the organization.

"The Associated Charities needs $9,200 to carry on the work until January 1," Mr. Logan said this morning. "Of that amount we have about $2,000 in outstanding dues which we hope to collect, and the Rotary Club has promised us $3,000, a total of $5,000, all the money that is in sight. That leaves a deficit of $5,200 we must face on January 1, and it means that we must abandon the work unless we receive aid at once.

The campaign for membership probably will begin within a week or two. The organization now has 1,200 members, and the Charities needs $21,000 a year to maintain the work properly. This year only $16,500 has been collected.

Linton C. Hopkins, president of the Associated Charities, issued a statement Wednesday morning in which he called attention to the fact that the organization is now facing the most serious crisis in its career. After giving a summary of the work during the past year, Mr. Hopkins asked the citizens of Atlanta to rally to its support and maintain it on a basis commensurate with the importance of the city.

The members of the Rotary Club had raised nearly $500 up to Wednesday at noon. More than 50 of them are out this afternoon, soliciting donations to the promised $3,000.

Plans to Get Fixed Income.

Virtually every member of the Rotary Club has enthusiastically expressed his willingness to aid in the campaign. Each man will solicit subscriptions from every man in Atlanta who is engaged in the particular business which the Rotary Club member represents. They will be asked for donations of any amount they feel they can give. These donations are to be paid in cash to the solicitor or made out in check payable to the Rotary Club.

Even though the club members are successful in raising the entire amount of $2,000 to-day or tomorrow, they will continue their work until the next meeting of the club two weeks hence. Then the money will be turned over to the Associated Charities, and the club probably will start a campaign to obtain a permanent income for the organization.

Each Member Pledges $100.

The proposition to raise a fund for the charities was broached at a meeting of the Rotary Club at the Majestic Hotel Tuesday afternoon, and met with an enthusiastic response from the 30 or 40 men who were present. The urgency of the situation and the necessity for immediate action were explained by P. O. Foster, A. S. Adams, Ivan E. Allen, President H. W. Anderson and others. Lee M. Jordan made the first motion that the club interest itself in behalf of the Associated Charities and a few moments later, on motion of W. B. Carlton, every member present pledged himself to raise $100 for the fund.

Among the members of the club who are calling on the business men of the city and soliciting donations to the fund are the following:

Nearly $500 Secured.

Mr. Seabrook has charge of the donations, and all members of the club are requested to telephone to him the names of contributors. His office is at 615 Third National Bank Building, his phone is 1y 1156. Any person who desires to contribute to the fund and who has not been seen by any member of the club is also requested to notify Mr. Seabrook.

Subscriptions aggregating $422.50 were secured late Tuesday afternoon, as follows:

J. T. Holleman, $25; Coca-Cola Bottling Company, $100; Lindsey Hopkins, $60; John S. Owens, $25; J. G. Carlton, $25; cash, $2.50; Capital City Laundry, $50; Charles P. Byrd, $25; S. S. White Dental Company, $50; Fred Hoyt, $10; George B. Allen, $25; Ivan E. Allen, $25.

Hotel Music 'Plague,' Says Nerve Expert

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—That modern hotel life has had much to do with breaking down sensitive nerves and bringing on nerve diseases, and that it is impossible to obtain quiet and rest in modern hotels is the statement made by Prof. H. Oppenheim, a famous German nerve specialist.

He says that for the purposes of rest and recovery of nerves the simplest farm house is far preferable to the most luxurious modern hotel.

After dwelling upon the evils of many meat courses in hotel diet, the professor says the worst plague of all is hotel music.

U. S. IMPORTS OF FOREIGN BEEF INCREASING

Current Year's Total Will Exceed Eight Million Pounds, According to Official Figures.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Fresh beef from the South Temperate Zone is now an established factor in the import trade of the United States. Between 7,000,000 and 8,000,000 pounds of fresh beef, practically all of it from Australia and Argentina, has entered the ports of the United States in the past three months, indicating that the imports of the current fiscal year will amount to more than 8,000,000 pounds, according to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Prior to 1912, the importations of fresh beef averaged about 333,333 pounds per annum. In 1912, however, there was a sharp increase, the total for that year being a little over 1,000,000 pounds, while in 1913 the total was over 4,000,000 pounds.

Census Bureau Gets Data.

This increase, coupled with the announcement that refrigerator ships had been put on to bring Australian and Argentine meats to the United States has led the Bureau to instruct the collectors of customs at the various ports to report from month to month the quantity of fresh beef received and the countries from which it was brought.

These detailed figures are now in hand for the months of June, July and August. They show that the imports of fresh beef in June amounted to 567,205 pounds, of which 396,914 pounds entered at the port of San Francisco, 26,947 pounds at Seattle and 143,013 pounds at New York.

Argentine Beef for Gotham.

The entrances at San Francisco were from Australia, those at Seattle from Canada and those at New York from England, but understood to be Argentine beef, which had been sent from Argentina to England and thence to the United States.

THAW IN PERSON TO ASK LIBERTY OF GOVERNOR

Plays Piano and Gets Bushel of Letters Before Leaving for Concord, N. H.

LITTLETON, N. H., Sept. 17.—Jubilant over the victory his lawyers had won in Federal Court, Harry K. Thaw left this morning for Concord, where he will remain in the joint custody of Sheriff Holman Drew, of Coos County, and United States Marshal E. P. Nute, until Governor Felker holds his hearing next Tuesday on the application of the State of New York for extradition.

A crowd gathered at the station and cheered Thaw as he boarded the train. He had put in his time as he waited for the train playing the piano at his hotel. He received a bushel basketful of mail. One woman admirer sent him a basket of flowers.

It is now generally expected that the question of Thaw's sanity will be fought out when he is arraigned again before Judge Aldrich in Federal Court upon the writ of habeas corpus granted last Saturday. Attorney Merrill Shurtleff, one of Thaw's lawyers, feels sure the fugitive will get a jury trial.

Thaw looked forward with eagerness to seeing his mother in Concord. He has gone to Concord to make a personal appeal to Governor Felker. As he was on his way to the station the prisoner stopped in a photographer's gallery and posed for some pictures.

Thaw settled down in the smoking car, lighted a cigar and prepared to enjoy the scenery on the four-hour-and-ten-minute ride.

$1,000,000 Forgery Case at Savannah

SAVANNAH, Sept. 17.—The charge of forgery in the Beach Manufacturing Company case, involving approximately $1,000,000, was taken up before Judge Newman to-day.

The forgery charge was buried at the president, W. R. Beach, when he was on the stand yesterday. He said that he didn't know whether H. D. Gilmore signed an arbitrator's statement for the company. The attorney for the creditors jumped to his feet and openly declared Gilmore's signature to the paper a forgery and promised to produce evidence placing the guilt.

Appeals Court Gives 'Tiger' a New Trial

A new trial has been granted Ed Murphy, convicted on a "blind tiger" charge at Brunswick by the Court of Appeals. In granting a reopening of the case an important ruling was handed down on the manner in which a judge may question a witness.

In this case the judge asked a witness, "Did you not testify to the Grand Jury that you purchased liquor from the defendant?" Such a question is held to be an expression of opinion on the part of the judge and is not allowable.

ALTON, Ills., Sept. 17.—When William Cannon threw one of his wife's biscuits on the floor at his home in a fit of anger and shouted, "Watch it bounce," it was too much for his wife, and as the result, William was arrested.

His wife, Mrs. Julia Cannon, said that she had overlooked a number of minor troubles with her husband of late, but this was too much.

26TH TECH TERM OPENS; RECORD YEAR CERTAIN

Registration Begun With Rush. Dormitories Crowded — Night School Sets Entry Age at 14.

The twenty-sixth session of the Georgia School of Technology was inaugurated Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock when the registration books were opened for the matriculation of old and new students. The attendance this year, according to conservative estimates, will break the record.

President Matheson declared on the eve of the registration that the school this year undoubtedly will enjoy the greatest year in its history. A competent faculty, he said, has been engaged, and the students who have signified their intention of returning represent the highest type of American manhood.

Because of the late registration of many of the former students, as well as the new, accurate enrollment figures can not be had for several days. The dormitories of the school are filled.

According to announcement Wednesday, the age limit for eligibility to attend the night school, which will open Wednesday night, has been changed from 16 to 14 years. The attendance at the night school will be greatly increased, it is believed, as most boys conclude their grammar school work at the age of 14.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 21 and am very much in love with a girl of 20. She loves me very much, and we would gladly marry, the only objection being a clause of her father's will, which states that she will lose her legacy of $3,000 if she marries before the age of 25. She is willing to lose the legacy, but I can hardly bring myself to the point of letting her make the sacrifice.

ANXIOUS.

Her father's last wish was that she should not marry under the age of 25, and she must consider that, though no legacy attached.

The five years of waiting will not be long if you sincerely love each other, and I trust you love her so much you will insist after marriage that her little fortune remain personally hers, and not be dribbled away on rent and bacon.

IN A DIFFICULT PLACE.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My girl friend and her friend and my friend and I have been in the habit of going out together. Her friend seems to pay more attention to me than he does to her. She noticed this and mentioned it to me, and I said it was not my fault. We have worn each other's rings for years and have been dear friends. She asked me for her ring and gave me mine. As she is a dear friend to me, and as I do not wish to win her gentleman friend, will you kindly advise me how I should act toward him?

H. L. L. T.

Avoid future plans that include all four of you, and if this is not always avoidable devote yourself to your own escort and treat her escort coolly.

Do not, I urge, lose this girl's friendship if you can help it. She is jealous, naturally, and may not behave normally, but I trust you will be broad enough and kind enough to remember this, and cherish no resentment.

Her Soldier Dad.

Mrs. Johnson was all excitement. Her husband was a Gordon Highlander, and she had an invitation to visit him in barracks in Scotland.

"You'll soon see daddy now," she said to her 5-year-old little daughter as the express bore them to their destination.

On arrival at the barracks Mrs. Johnson was informed that her husband was on sentry duty. One of the soldiers pointed him out to her, but, of course, they could not approach him. The child eyed her daddy with big round eyes full of wonder as he paced up and down the square, rifle on shoulder, in his regimental kilt.

"There's daddy!" cried the mother.

The child, however, was too lost in the amazing spectacle to answer, but at last it came out.

"Mamma," she said, in a childish treble, but with a strictly confidential air, "if daddy finds the man who stole his trousers will he give me that tickle frock?"

Narrow Escape.

Friend—Were you ever lost in the woods?

Batch—Almost.

Friend—Who rescued you?

Batch—Nature.

Friend—What do you mean?

Batch—The wind was blowing so hard that the girl didn't hear me when I proposed.

While Others Were Fast Asleep, Mrs. Sanders Would Often Get Out of Bed and Do Sewing.

Cadiz, Ky.:—"I was in a terrible condition, caused from nervousness," says Mrs. Boon Sanders, of this place. "At times, last spring and summer, I did not get any rest at night; could not sleep at all. Very often I would get out of my bed and do some of my sewing, while the rest of the family were fast asleep.

"One of my lady friends advised me to take Cardui, the woman's tonic. Just as soon as I commenced taking it, I began resting better. After taking four bottles, I now feel better, and get perfect rest and plenty of sleep. I am doing every bit of my housework now, and although I am small, I feel very strong in every way.

"You may publish this letter if you wish, and I hope all women, who suffer as I did, will try Cardui and get relief."

THE GREATEST STORY OF ITS KIND SINCE JULES VERNE

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Ethel, still in her splendid wedding gown, sat on a low divan playing with the famous Rosy Diamond that hung around her neck and gazing thoughtfully at the wonderful andirons in the cold fireplace. Allan paced the room restlessly for a few moments, then he lit a cigarette and made as if to sit beside his wife, but she waved him away with a little smile.

"No, sit there—facing me—that's it. I want to talk to you."

A look of puzzled interest came to his face, and then for the first time that day he smiled, naturally. It was a rather wan smile, but it was sincere, and Ethel appreciated it as such.

"Is it necessary that I face you? Couldn't I give you a sort of side-front?" he inquired as he took the big chair she had indicated.

"No, because this is going to be a frank and friendly face-to-face talk," she replied gently. "Listen, my dear. There are a few important things that we have to talk about—or don't have to, according to the way in which we look at life. It seems to me better that we should talk about them—and avoid misunderstandings later."

Her Scheme.

Allan looked at her with new interest and sat forward in his chair in an attitude of attention.

"I don't know what you are driving at, Ethel," he said, quietly, "but I'll follow your lead. Go ahead."

She sat with her hands folded in her lap, looking down at them for a few moments in silence. Then she raised her eyes and looked full into his.

"I don't want you to be unhappy, Mac," she said, gently. "No; now you must not interrupt—let me finish, please. I said this was going to be a frank and friendly talk, and I don't want you to say nice things at the expense of frankness."

He flushed slightly, and bowed.

"I don't want you to be unhappy, Mac," she repeated, in the gentle, quiet voice in which she had begun the conversation. "Indeed, it is the dearest wish of my heart that you should be happy—as happy as is humanly possible. If there was ever a man who deserved it, it is you."

He remained silent, as he had been bidden.

"I think you know me well enough to give me credit for understanding that you do not love me. Oh, yes, I know you are very fond of me. I know you care for me more than for any other woman in the world; but that isn't saying a great deal. I don't think you care for any other woman at all." She said this without bitterness, as one stating a fact.

"What I am telling you is an outline of what hundreds and thousands of women do all of the time, but they are never frank enough to say so. I would be considered a traitor to my sex if it were known that I had been frank about it. I know that you do not love me, and yet I am not base enough to think, and I know you are not base enough to have married me simply as a matter of power and money. I know that in many ways I am very dear to you—more so than you think, because you have felt called upon to pretend that I am dearer than I really am. I have taken these things into my mouth because I want to keep what I have—and I know that the way to lose it is to force you to pretend that I have what I have not—your love.

"I have no claim on your whole heart—I haven't any right to claim it. I knew that when I proposed to you. Oh, you did the talking—you went through the necessary formalities, but you know and I know that I married you because I wanted to, and you had very little to do with it."

She paused for an instant. His eyes were on her face with a strange, fascinated look. It would not have been necessary to forbid his interrupting. He was without the power of speech

"So you must not shame me with pretenses, dear, nor sully the purity of what you can honestly give me by glossing it over with lies. I will ask nothing that you cannot give with all honesty. I will be happy to be with you a little every day as I have been.

The Truth.

"It should be a comfort to both of us and a safeguard made for the happiness of our future to drop our masks this once, my husband, and talk without concealment. You do not know me—I know that you don't. When you do, things will be different. I am vain enough to believe that, I have played a part to win a thing that I wanted—and I have won. It was necessary—even in this sort of game there are conventional rules. But the game is over now, dear, and the serious business of winning happiness—which is not a game—has begun. That's why I want to tell you everything—from the beginning."

She played with the marriage ring on her finger and went on in the detached manner of one relating an impersonal story.

"I liked you immensely from the first time I saw you—do you remember?—the night that Jack Rives brought you to see father. Then you made a tremendous impression on father, and that interested me more than ever; and then, I admire your bigness, your work, your energy, your courage."

The Terrible Day.

"It seemed to me that I had none of these things. I had more money than any one could possibly need. The world had given me that and told me to be happy with it. I had never met a man who was not making a transparent inventory of father's fortune all the time he was murmuring nice things to me. I know I am not altogether unlovely, and if it hadn't been for all this money some man might have seen something in just me, but the money frightened off the real men and the other kind I couldn't have anything to do with.

"In sheer boredom I got to taking an interest in father's affairs and he discovered that I had a talent for finance. He always said that it was because I never took money seriously—that I considered money some sea mariners in a game. I played the game for its own sake until you came along with your tunnel project. Then, for the first time, I took a real interest in life. It appealed to all the latent force there was in me—and it was natural that the author of the appeal should come in for his share.

"You gradually became the biggest thing in my life. I knew that I could never be that to you. I knew that you never had a thought of any woman save one. But I found a secret joy and pride in the fact that I was helping a big man do a big thing.

"Then—then—came that horrible—that horrible day, and—oh, how I suffered for you and with you! And in the days that followed, before you went away and when you returned, I loved to believe that you needed me ever so little, and that I could help you and cheer you a little. Was I—did—could I? Just a little, dear?"

Her great deep eyes had grown misty and were looking into his with a pathetic yearning. She seemed to have grown a child again.

"God knows it!" he murmured huskily.

"And—since then—I—I have tried to make you love me. I knew you suspected me of some double-dealing about father's coming to your aid in this last crisis, but it wasn't exactly as you thought. Father wouldn't have stirred without me, and—and I did want you to know how much I wanted you to know that I had not only the will but the power to help you. I wanted you to want me.

"Don't think that this feeling was all primitive and pagan, my friend. It was far from that. We women are for the most debarred from the opportunity of doing really big things. If we have money it is just that much more difficult. Then we can only do things that money will do. So we are forced to do big things vicariously—through some man that we love, or—through his children. I love you—and I have never in the past year or so attempted to conceal that even from you, much less myself. I love you because you are what you are—a big-minded, courageous man, made to do and think big things, and I want to feel that I, too, have done big things, even if I must know that I have done them through you. Do you understand?"

"Yes," he said, in the same husky voice.

"I know that you do not love me the way I want you to love. I'm going to try to win that love. I will know when I have succeeded, dear—if I succeed. So till then we need have no pretense. And—and—I—guess that's all."

Her quiet self-possession suddenly fled. Her face and neck and bosom turned a deep red and she covered her face with her slender fingers. The next instant he was kneeling beside her, with unseeing eyes and a tight throat.

"Domine, non sum dignus," he breathed in a fervent, broken whisper. "Lord, I am not worthy!"

His bowed head touched her knee. She looked down, her eyes swimming with unshed tears, and stroked his hair lightly for a moment or two.

"I am tired, dear," she whispered. "I'm going now. When you're ready, Henderson will show you to your apartments. Good-night, beloved!"

He drew back enough to permit her to rise, but he felt that it would be desecration to look upon her face at that moment. She stood over him a lingering instant and he reverently kissed her hand. He did not rise until the sound of her footsteps had died away and the rustle of her gown was lost in the whispering bubble of the fountain in the hall.

New Life.

"ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND men wanted!"

They came—as if in response to a call to arms. The great farms of the West and the Canadian wheat belt sent in their armies as fast as the harvests were gathered home. The mines gave up thousands, attracted by the bigger wage scale, and even the hungry soldiers of the highways were drawn to Tunnel City as if by a giant magnet. The scattered regiments of the gigantic enterprise were rallied once more.

And so it was all over the world. From Germany, England, Belgium, France, Russia, Italy and even the far-off hamlets of central Asia the army of labor was concentrating on the construction cities. These dead places woke again. At night the great glass-covered power houses threw their old-time glare against the black sky. Once more columns of smoke and dust rose as before. The ironwork of new buildings pushed their gaunt and ugly skeletons up into the sunlight, swarming with busy little ants. The Tunnel Cities trembled, yelled and roared as of old.

And in the first rush of this new life the announcement was made that Lloyd and his associates had guaranteed the financial backing to complete the tunnel at any cost. Then, like a live thing, the tunnel drew in deep breaths and pulsed with life from end to end. In the galleries drills and riveters were chattering and thundering. Allan's great rock-devouring machines hurled themselves against the barriers with renewed strength. Strike, explosion, the dread of flood and fire—all were forgotten. The tunnel builders had struck their old tremendous pace. And, as of old, men dropped and died in the terrific heat and strain and were carried out and forgotten.

The Tom's River-Bermuda section was the first conquered. Five years after work had been resumed the two borings met under the Atlantic. So exact had been the calculations of Allan and his aides that there was a horizontal difference of only 22 feet and a vertical difference of 31.

Thirteen months later the double bed of concrete was completed, bedded down and the whole "right of way" incased in its solid shell of concrete and steel were ready for operation.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

The Victim.

"Yes," said the solemn-faced man, "it would ruin me financially if the whisky business should be wiped out."

"Are you in the liquor business, sir?"

"No, no. I'm a temperance orator."

"Atkins," said the sergeant angrily, "why haven't you shaved this morning."

"Ain't I shaved?" asked Atkins, in apparent surprise.

"No, you are not," insisted the sergeant, "and I want to know why."

"Well, you see, sergeant," replied the soldier, "there was a dozen of us using the same mirror, and I must have shaved some other man."

A Letter to Mary

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A CERTAIN little girl whose father is necessarily away from home a great deal found the following letter from him under her plate this morning:

"You ask my consent to your marriage with John. Since you were old enough to climb on my lap and whisper a desire in my ear I have given you everything you longed for. I see my mistake, for now, when you ask for something I should refuse, I know that the power of refusal is beyond me.

"I know that you ask me as a matter of form; that should I say no you will do as you have done for years, laugh at my refusal, and then proceed as it pleases you.

"This is my fault. I am not blaming you, my child. I have never taught you to investigate, to reason, or to consider the consequences. When I knew your own way would not be best for you I have weakly let you have it and then have thrust myself between you and the punishment that came afterward.

"In this case, I can not do that. Have you thought of that?

"So I say in the beginning that I will give my consent to your marriage with John if you insist, but I wonder at your ignorance (or bravery) in dreaming of going away from your home with a man you have known less than six months and then chiefly through correspondence.

Some Doubts.

"You know that he is good looking, is of pleasing manners, generous to a fault with his money, and that you love him. You will marry him and go with him to a strange town, and you do not know what his standing in that town is.

"You do not know if he is considered in his home town the kind of a man a respectable girl cares to associate with; you do not know if he is good to his mother; if his business prospects entitle him to assume the support of a wife.

"You do not know what his habits are. He may drink, gamble, loaf, and be addicted to the company of those who blaze the primrose path, but of this you know nothing. You are not making as much effort to learn something of the character of the man who wants to be your partner for life as your mother makes in finding out about the maid whose stay will not be longer than six months.

"You know nothing whatever about him, yet you are anxious to go away from your comfortable home to risk a leap in the dark, landing only the good Lord knows where.

"No, mother and I have never let you take a trip as far as ten miles from home without assurance of who would meet you at the end, and how you would fare. This is a trip for life, and we are powerless to protect you.

"Be Sure!"

"You must throw up your own safeguards in my dear! We have let you have your own sweet, unreasoning and unreasonable way too many years to protest now. We have brought you to the habit of your own way. We want you to have it now, if it is for your happiness, but we want you to be sure that it is.

"Love is all there is in life, my dear. I have been happy too many years in the love of your mother to decry it. But, child, I compled her to wait with her father's permission, after proving to that worthy gentleman's satisfaction that I was of good moral habits, stood well in my home town, and had the past to conceal and was willing and able to support her in every luxury she had enjoyed in her home. We had known each other five years and were engaged two years.

"I did not make her fit correspondence for a few weeks and then ask her to marry me without first proving myself desirable to her father. I did not use less consideration in taking his daughter from his home forever than I would have taken in borrowing his horse for an hour.

Changed Times.

"The times have changed. Your mother and I realize that this rapid-fire courting, with ever divorce in fashion is quite the fashion, but it is not the fashion we want our girl to follow.

"We want you to love, to be loved, to be happy. But we want more than this for you to marry so happily you will stay married. We don't want you to come back in a few months with every hope, every faith in life, love and mankind trailing in the dust.

"I give my consent, of course, realizing that if I refused it you would marry without it, but I am going to do it straight up to you to be sure in your own heart that you want it.

"It is up to you! Shall I order the wedding cake as I ordered the doll you cried for when a child, or will you make him prove his worthiness first."

The Making of a Movie

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.

Scene—Court Room. Discovered, Portia, Nerissa, Bassanio, Antonio and Director.

DIRECTOR—Now we gotta hustle through this quick, for we do "East Lynne" afterwards an' that's a real play that takes actin'.

Portia—Where do I sit?

Director—Up there on that bench. You're the judge. You keep lookin' wise an' actin' as if you was runnin' the whole shebang.

Nerissa—No chance of her forgettin' to do that.

Portia—Isn't you complimentary? NOW I ain't goin' to tell you what I heard Jake say about you.

Nerissa—Oh, come on, what was it a boost or a knock?

Portia—It was a boost. He said you was awful well preserved.

Nerissa—Awful sweet of you to tell me. You're lookin' pretty well yourself. I ain't seen you lookin' better since I sent them flowers to your grandaughter the day she was married.

Portia—If spitefulness kept people young you wouldn't be born yet, for a hundred years.

Director—Ladies, cut out that mewowin' an' get ready for the machine. Pete, you're the prisoner here. You get down in the dock there.

Antonio—Ah, I never get on chance to show myself. An' I got this bath robe built special for me to act in.

Director—Never mind, you look handsome they'll all see you all right.

Bassanio—Here comes Jake, with whiskers on.

Enter Shylock.

Antonio—Hello, Jake, you're just the guy I want to see. What about that ten spot you give me the quick touch for the other night?

Shylock—Ain't you said enough about that ten?

Antonio—It looks like I hadn't, but I will.

Shylock—I told you I'd give it to you Saturday, didn't I?

Antonio—Yes, you told me that every Monday for the last three weeks. Now come across with the ten.

Shylock—Aw, don't be such a grasping guy. Anybody think I was tryin' to do you of it.

Antonio—Anybody that would think that would be some thinker, believe me. Do I get the ten, or don't I?

Shylock—I'll give you two on account, if that'll satisfy you.

Antonio—Gimme the two. It won't satisfy me, but it relieves me to that to eight for the time being.

Shylock—Here's your two. I'll never do nothin' for you again.

Antonio—Yes you will. You'll come through with the other eight next week or I'll take it out of your hide.

Director—When you ginks get your finances settled maybe you'll be kind enough to go through the play.

Portia—That's always the way with them kinds—"actin' an' callin' names an' spoilin' the work of real artists.

Bassanio—Aw, forget it, Lizzie. The only way you could be a real artist would be singing hash like you used to.

Portia—I'll sting you, you impertinent mutt, if you dare to insult me again.

Nerissa—Don't get worked up, Lizzie. It's bad for the heart at your age.

Portia (to Director)—Do I haf to listen to talk like that?

Director—Maggie, try to behave like a lady, even if you ain't rehearsed the part much.

Nerissa—I didn't come here to be bawled out by no twelve dollar camera hose. You can put your show on without me.

Antonio—Me too. I'm out. I'm goin' back to my bath.

Bassanio—I guess we might as well all knock off then. I ain't very strong for these cheap plays myself.

(They exit.)

Director—Well, Lizzie, you see what you done. Now we can't even put on East Lynne.

Portia—That's right, always blame it on a poor sufferin' down-trod woman. You hateful thing. (She weeps and exits.)

Two Powerful Arguments.

The Mayor of an Australian mining town had been elected on a platform that he had outstayed it a vote of censure was passed upon him. At the next meeting of the council he, in his capacity of Mayor, directed the minutes of the previous meeting to be read. The minutes contained the following entry:

"A vote of censure was passed on the Mayor for outstaying his leave, and it was resolved to ask for an explanation."

"Who proposed this vote of censure?" asked the Mayor.

"I did," said a councillor, standing up.

"You did, did you," continued his interrogator, stepping from his presidential chair to the unfortunate member. "Then like that!"

With these words the Mayor smote his enemy in the right eye and felled him to the ground.

"Who seconded this resolution?" he again roared, looking round with determination.

There was no answer; the councillors were not over-anxious for a physical contest with so hard a hitter as the Mayor.

"Who seconded this resolution?" he again repeated.

Still no reply.

Then, said the Mayor, "as there is no seconder it is informal. Scratch it off the minutes."

Cute Tommy.

Mrs. Jordan had "ideas" on the way children should be reared. Her young hopeful, Tommy, caused her a little anxiety in this respect. Now once again, therefore, a serious "polite-ness" lecture was administered.

"Now, Tommy, dear," she started, "supposing you accidentally stepped upon a gentleman's feet, what would you say?"

"I would say, 'Beg your pardon,'" "That's my own little son!" smiled the pleased mother. "And if the gentleman gave you a penny for your politeness what would you do?"

The innocent look passed from Tommy's eyes as he quickly answered:

"Why, I would stand on the other foot and say, 'Beg pardon' again, of course!"

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

Mental Charm, Animation and a Useful Collection of "Don'ts" from Grace Field

Grace Field's Maxims of Beauty.

Beauty may come by the grace of Heaven—but you must give it a proper welcome.

My mother stands as my link with God and Heaven.

"How to avoid being ugly" is the best beauty secret.

Don't use other people as stepping stones to success—help them up instead.

Grace Field's Magnetic Beauty.

"PERHAPS you think that beauty comes by the grace of Heaven. Well, even if it comes that way it only stays when it is made very welcome. And the best way to welcome beauty is to set most earnestly about not being ugly!" said Grace Field with her I'll-be-there-if-you-want-me smile lurking in the depths of great hazel eyes.

"Of course, quite a few of us have a hard time winning the title of 'beauty,' but any of us can avoid being ugly or homely. I have a long list of 'don'ts' for the girl who wants to avoid being ugly. And I have one great big positive rule for beauty. It is to keep in sympathetic touch with all the world through your own joy in your mother's sympathy. My mother—with her sweet, helpful sympathy—stands as my link with God and Heaven.

"The smile—wistful and sweet—trembled out now and fit the face of New York's cleverest soubrette. Sunshine crinkled the mouth corners and lit the wonderful gold-brown hair of Miss Field, the fascinating Anna of "Lieber Augustin" at the Casino Theater, instead of lovable Grace Field in her own beautiful home life.

Her Dont's.

"My 'don'ts'—which stand for 'How to avoid being ugly'—seem to me to be the cardinal beauty secret. Don't worry. Don't dwell on your troubles even if they are big enough to be griefs. Don't get bitter over burdens; that will corrode the sweetness of your nature. It will make your smile acrid instead of sweet and make your eyes hard and cold instead of sweet and wistful. Don't use other people as stepping stones to your success. Help them up instead. Don't insist on receiving all the time. It is great fun to give—and if you can give nothing more than a cheerful smile and a friendly greeting, you'll find that gift will make happiness and friendship grow in your personal sunshine. It takes sunshine to grow things, you know—beauty and friendship and the joy of a generous nature.

"I suppose any one of us would like to be as beautiful as a poet's dream—or the artist's choice of the 'most beautiful woman in America.' But I have noticed one thing—women who are radiantly beautiful are rarely brilliant and brainy. Perhaps they think that their being lovely pictures is enough—and they don't lay up any thing for the rainy day when beauty fades.

"Pink and white prettiness and golden hair—even wonderful blue eyes do fade in the glare of our strenuous life. A beauty has to take care of every one of her physical charms. And if she is wise she will add a few mental charms for the rainy day of aging loveliness.

"The girl who is frankly not a beauty can cultivate some splendid 'just as good as what you asked for.' An air of breeding, simple charm of manner, animation, merry sweetness, good humor and a sympathetic attitude toward life are fine substitutes for beauty.

"You look at the woman who is merely beautiful, but you look at the Venus de Milos, too, and you don't invite her out to dinner!. For a companion you choose the girl who is interesting, and sweet mannered. Becoming clothes, physical cleanness, brains and a gracious manner certainly give a girl charm. With a sweet nature blossoming out into a sweet smile a girl can fairly hypnotize you into thinking she is beautiful.

"There is a glamour and a fascination and a charm about the radiant expression of liking it here on earth. I wish I knew something just as good as the fatal beauty of Helen of Troy. The something just as good won't fade. It is the ability to give LASTING EXPRESSION OF BEAUTY. It is the mind to move all the forces of your nature—the heart to be in tune with life and the face molded to sweetness by the calm, happy, eager nature tending the larger shrine."

The radiant smile of her own sweet nature played in little dancing lights across Miss Field's face of wistful, thoughtful, delicate beauty. A sweet, tempered, kindly, generous smile like that is a whole chapter on Beauty.

And Miss Field gave me a little conclusion far better than any I ever could write. It was a summing up of her whole philosophy of sunshine: "If you have troubles the Creator must feel that you are strong enough to bear them. There is nothing to be proud about in having everything come your way with no effort on your part. Troubles are a compliment from the Giver. And a compliment from Heaven ought to be received with a gracious manner, a sweet smile and a thankful heart!"

Do You Know That—

According to official statistics recently compiled in Germany, the number of centenarians in Europe is far greater than is generally imagined. Spain possesses 410; France, 213; Italy, 197; Great Britain, 93; Russia, 89; Germany, 76; Norway, 23; Sweden, 10; Belgium, 5, and Denmark, 2. Switzerland has none. The Balkan States hold the record. In Bulgaria alone there are no fewer than 3,883 centenarians, and there are another 1,054 in Roumania, and 573 in Servia.

A bright little Irish terrier has been trained as a perfect caddie by a well-known professional golfer in Ireland. When his master is giving a lesson the terrier goes out with the party and sits on the teeing green, well out of reach of the swinging club, critically watching the performance. He follows the flight of the hardest hit or worst sliced ball unerringly, and having marked it down, races to fetch it back. He returns with the ball gently held in his mouth, and drops it beside the sand-box.

The most valuable pearl ever found on the American continent has been taken to Chicago to be appraised. The pearl was found by Dr. Jesse Carr on the banks of the Fox River. It weighs 62 grains and is a perfect specimen. The finder named it "Queen of America," and presented it to his wife. On his first opportunity he took it to Chicago to have it appraised, and was astonished when he was told that it was worth over $10,000.

An extraordinary case of religious mania is reported from Panama. An individual who has proclaimed himself the Messiah predicts the destruction of the world by a deluge in a short time, and some of his 50 adherents are engaged in building an ark, while others are busy collecting in pairs animals of all species found in their region.

A remarkable women's fashion reported from Paris consists in wearing waistcoats of the regulation men's style and size, not the small vests that were tentatively introduced some time ago. Some experts predict that a man's heavy gold watch chain will follow suit, to give a finish to the garment.

An Equine Scarecrow.

A prosperous farmer, who had gained the reputation of being exceedingly stingy, owned an old horse which was very thin, and, as if to make up for the lack of flesh on its body, its animal had an abnormally large head.

One day the farmer went to the expense of a new collar for the animal, but a very few minutes after the delivery of the collar he was back at the saddler's with it.

"Don't you know nothin'?" he blurted out. "You've made it too small. I can't get it over his head!"

"You're the head," said the saddler. "Man alive, it wasn't made to go over his head. Back him into it!"

The Girl Who Is Jilted

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE young man fell in love, dead in love, or at least he acted as if that was what he was doing.

He never left the girl alone a minute. He followed her from pillar to post and back to the pillar again. He wrote poetry and he sang and he sent flowers and he told her she was the prettiest thing alive and he talked about a bungalow, and a little garden and just they two together on the world, and he bought a ring — and then—he went away.

At first he wrote—oh such beautiful letters—silly her mother thought them, but they weren't silly to the girl. She smiled over them and cried over them and hid them under her pillow at night—and answered them—and waited for the postman—and now he's stopped writing.

She noticed that the letters were not quite so sweet as they used to be—then they were shorter, then they came seldomer and then—they stopped altogether. She knows the man is well, for she took pains to find that out. Now, then, what shall she do?

She was to write to him every day—she does write a half dozen letters a day—and tears them up.

Sad letters—letters that try to be gay and alluring, letters with a sob in every line, letters that sound like a fit of hysterics—letters that are an agony of appeal—calm, reasonable letters—free letters—all kinds—tear them all up, little girl, tear them all up, except the friendly ones and only send one of those.

If you are really engaged to the man, it is your right to know what is the matter with him. Don't risk your life's happiness for a silly reserve—write him and ask him what's the matter—you could do that to your own brother, couldn't you? That will give him his chance, and that's what you want to do —give him his chance—and yours—to get out of what may be a disagreeable situation for you both.

No, don't appeal to his pity, don't try to bring back what he once felt for you. That isn't fair; it isn't fair to him—or to yourself.

If he wants to get away from you now—you can't let him get far enough. If you can't hold him before marriage, what in the world would you do once you were just his wife. And, then, it isn't honest; it isn't square to make a man actually break with you. Let him give you the chance to do that.

What ever else you lose, don't lose your pride. That will help you through when nothing else on earth will—oh, yes, I know the world swims under your feet at the very idea that he doesn't care for you as he did—you want to die—you pray to stop living—just now.

You think it will last forever, this misery, this lonely gnawing at your heart. Oh! no, oh! no, it will not—it will not—nothing lasts—nothing, not even happiness; not just the same way.

A year from now you'll have trouble to remember the color of his eyes, and five years from now, when somebody asks you where he is you'll have a time trying to think when it was that you last saw him.

Oh, yes, you will, you aren't so different from all the rest of the world—you aren't the first to crush out a joy from your very heart and live and laugh afterwards.

Others have gone through with it, so can you.

Don't let anyone know, don't let anyone dream what it is you suffer, for, when all is gone, good old honest pride will come and say: "Lean upon me, little sister," and first you know your heart will stop aching and then how glad you'll be that you kept your own counsel.

And the man—don't be too bitter about him—he is in trouble, too.

It is a bad thing for a decent man to find out that he has made a mistake like that—don't make it any harder for him—or for yourself.

Love, love—oh, yes, it makes the world go round, all right—but you have not bid farewell to love just because one young man isn't writing to you every day in the week and twice on Sundays.

And whisper—when you want a man to run after you—you pick up your skirts and run—just as fast as you can —if he has a particle of sporting blood in him he'll take after you as fast as he can—it's the nature of the animal.

Write to Him.

Write this particular young man a letter, kindly, friendly, puzzled—ask him what is the matter—then if he doesn't answer that, or if he answers it in some sort of half way maybe and maybe not fashion—drop him and drop him quickly.

That's the best way, that's the only way—a girl who has to run after a man never gets a man worth running after —all the decent ones can run so much faster than she can—and they will do it every time, before they even suspect they hear her little high heels pounding down the road after them.

Now be sure—be sure—be sure of that if you are not sure of another thing on earth.

IT'S NO LONGER A SECRET

It Certainly Looks as if Every Family in Atlanta Has Come to Realize That the Quaker Herb Extract Is the Greatest Remedy in the World.

Every day Coursey & Munn's drug store is crowded to the utmost anxiety. People of Atlanta are realizing that the Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm do cure where all others have failed.

Many of your friends and neighbors that you are acquainted with have been ailing for years. Some have spent much time and money for different treatments and never received any benefits until after using the Quaker Remedies for a few weeks they are now well or greatly relieved. Many were severe cases of rheumatism, catarrh, kidney, liver, stomach or bladder troubles; some were indigestion, constipation, and hundreds of children have expelled stomach, fit, hookpin, or tapeworms; others that were in a nervous, weak, run down condition are now strong, robust and healthy.

This is the reason for the wonderful demand for the Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm. Is it any wonder?

If you will call at the Coursey & Munn drug store, see and hear the people buying or reporting the good Quaker has done for them, you can't help but believe in the merits of Quaker Extract.

Mr. Frank Pope, who is an engineer on the M. & O. R. R., was laid up for five months with indigestion, kidney and liver trouble. He had tried a lot of treatment, but nothing did him any good. He was getting very despondent. He called at the store and purchased one bottle of Quaker Extract, one bottle of the Oil of Balm, using them according to directions, and in seven days he went to work on his engine and has worked for months without pain, and says he has no more indigestion, no more kidney trouble, and Quaker Extract is the greatest medicine in the world.

Call to-day and obtain this wonderful Quaker Extract, 8 for $2.50, 4 for $1.00, and Oil of Balm, 25c or 5 for $1.00, at Coursey & Munn's drug store, 28 Marietta street. We prepay all express charges on all orders of $3.0 0or over. Advt.

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES, WITHOUT FUNDS, FACES ABANDONMENT OF WORK

The Associated Charities of Atlanta, an organization similar to that maintained by every modern city of the nation for the aid of its helpless thousands, is on the brink of abandonment, as a result of failure of the citizens of this city to support it.

The growing demands for assistance, which have increased in leaps and bounds as the aims of the institution have become known, pitched against the meager flow of subscriptions from those with well-filled purses and the failure of others to pay up more than $3,000 which they had subscribed to the association, has brought about the crisis.

What Has Been Accomplished.

Unless immediate assistance is given the work of this splendid institution will have to be discontinued. For those who are not familiar with the work accomplished in Atlanta by the Associated Charities, the following review of the past two years has been formed into a statement for the public. This statement follows:

"From January 1 to September 1, 1912, the Associated Charities aided 1,632 cases and 1,096 of these had never been known to the association before.

"During 1912 there were 5,543 people aided by the association, 2,206 of whom were children under 14 years of age.

"School facilities were provided and medicine and physicians' and opticians' services were secured for 593.

Nearly 2,000 Pleas in Month.

"During a single month in 1912 1,936 individuals or families appealed to the Associated Charities for aid. Numbered in the families were 3,286 individuals. Of these, 1,429 were children under 14 years of age.

"There were 161 widows with children, 88 deserted wives with children to support and 383 families stricken with sickness.

"The above gives an idea of the enormity of the work accomplished. And it reveals the grim responsibility which the citizens of Atlanta will be shirking if it permits the Associated Charities to pass out."

Attention is called in the report to the approach of winter when the absolute necessity of assistance to the helpless renders even their lives endangered.

Based Budget on Pledges.

The Associated Charities based its budget on the amount of money pledged by popular subscription the first of the year. While Atlanta responded liberally, most of the amounts were small and the total was subscribed by a large number of citizens. Of these small amounts $2,-000 is now overdue.

Officials of the organization are very much worried over the condition. They feel that the public does not feel sufficient sympathy with the work because of the quiet manner in which it is carried on.

The point they stress is that while much immediate relief is given the main work of the institution is to give permanent aid, putting people on their feet in an unostentatious way and making normal members of society out of mendicants.

NEWT LEE GIVEN A "NO BILL" BY GRAND JURY

In Record-Breaking Session 18 Indictments, Two Against City Hall Men, Are Returned.

In a record-breaking session, the Fulton County Grand Jury Tuesday morning returned eighteen true bills and four no bills. The Grand Jury adjourned at noon until Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

Prominent among the indictments Tuesday morning was the return of two true bills against Charles P. Martin, connected with the city waterworks department, who is charged with cursing and beating a negro in his employ, and the indictment of J. Wylie Smith on charges of forgery, preferred by a half dozen witnesses who appeared before the Grand Jury.

No Bill for Lee.

The Grand Jury also returned a "no bill" against Newt Lee, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, the little pencil factory girl, for which Lee Frank is under sentence of death. The return of the "no bill" Tuesday morning eliminates Newt Lee from all connection with the murder.

Charles P. Martin was indicted on two counts charging assault and battery and a misdemeanor on Jim Briscoe, a negro employed at the City Hall. Bond was fixed at $100 in each case.

Jackson Case Held Up.

The indictment of Martin reveals an interesting incident which stirred City Hall circles last week. Martin, who is an inspector in the waterworks department, it is alleged invited the negro Briscoe, who is commonly known at the City Hall as "Shamrock" down into the basement where, it is said, he proceeded to give him a beating with a cowhide as the result of alleged statements made by "Shamrock," who had declared that Martin had taken some paper from a section of the City Hall. Zoie Smith, General Manager of the department, it is said, was present at the cowhiding.

The Grand Jury failed to act on the Parries-Jackson case because of the absence of important witnesses. Parries, a railroad engineer, is charged with killing Sam Jackson, a fellow railroad engineer, last July.

Venue Change Denied To Gadsden Slayer

GADSDEN, Sept. 16.—Judge J. A. Bilbro overruled the application of J. Smith, charged with murder, for a change of venue. The case will probably be tried this week.

Smith killed Patrolman Patterson, of Alabama City, and was sentenced to hang, but secured a new trial when the Supreme Court found a part of the court records had been omitted from the transcript.

TO MEET AT CALHOUN.

DALTON, Sept. 16.—The Eighteenth Division of Odd Fellows, embracing the lodges of Whitfield, Murray, Gordon, Catoosa, and Bartow counties, will hold its spring convention in Calhoun.

150 TO BE TRIED ON MOONSHINE WARRANTS

Collector Blalock Has Office Full of Illicit Still Apparatus to Offer as Evidence.

The names of more than 150 persons appear on the United States District Court criminal docket for trial before Federal Judge Newman the first week in October on charges of illicit distilling.

An interesting collection of moonshine paraphernalia has been gathered by Collector of Internal Revenue A. O. Blalock and his agents in their apprehension of this large batch of alleged violators of the Federal excise laws.

Mr. Blalock has been in office but a short time, being a Wilson appointee, but he has made the most of that time and has filled his office with all sorts of queer devices employed by moonshiners.

On entering Mr. Blalock's office one finds himself confronted with odd, rough-looking objects strewn about the floor. There are long sticks with little sickles run through holes in the ends, giving the implement the appearance of a shovel.

Others made in practically the same manner have the appearance of rakes. Others look like bolo clubs and weapons of primitive warfare. Then there are old pots and kettles made of copper, which Mr. Blalock calls his "antiques."

The latest accession to this collection, however, is kept in the closet at the end of the room. It is a complete still, taken in Dawson County several weeks ago by Revenue Agents Brown, Kemp and Henderson.

It is one of the finest outfits confiscated in several years, and consists of a still and cap, condenser and worm, together with all the tools used, including a gigantic mash stick made of hickory.

Money Matters May Have Led to Killing

GADSDEN, Sept. 16.—That Robert R. Butler, who died in Birmingham Saturday from a pistol wound inflicted by his wife, quarreled frequently with her over money which she had gotten from the estate of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob C. Lutes, who were killed in their lonely mountain home near Gallant, is the theory advanced by local people who know something of the troubles of the couple.

J. A. Gallant, administrator of the Lutes estate, paid Mrs. Butler $2,500 as her share. It is said that her husband wanted her to give him the money.

Convict Road Work To Be Systematized

Action looking to the systematizing of the work of convicts on the public roads probably will be taken by the State Prison Commission at its next meeting.

It is understood the commission has had under consideration the advisability of appointing State road supervisors to work in conjunction with the counties in efforts to build up a State-wide system of good roads.

Robber Band Sought For Theft of Electric

Police are searching for an electric automobile, belonging to John S. Owens, the capitalist, of 37 West Eleventh street, which was stolen from in front of his residence late Monday.

The number of the car is 2477. It is thought that it was taken by members of the gang of automobile thieves that has been operating in Atlanta for several weeks.

Pastor to Tell Judge Why He Spanked Dad

TERRE HAUTE, IND., Sept. 16.—The Rev. Elijah M. Hanley, president of Franklin College, is preparing to answer the charge of assault contained in an indictment returned by the Grand Jury after his admission that he spanked his father, Calvin Hanley, last Thursday.

He sent word to the authorities that he would appear for trial whenever wanted and it would not be necessary to send an officer after him.

STRAGGLERS OF G. A. R. HURRY ON TO MEET

Over 30,000 Veterans Gathered at Chattanooga on Lookout Mountain Battlefields.

In a drizzling rain that brought forcibly to mind the hardships of the Civil War, the last straggiers of the Grand Army of the Republic passed through Atlanta Tuesday morning, en route to the reunion at Chattanooga. More than a score of grizzled veterans changed trains at the Atlanta stations, and some of them spent several hours visiting the historic battlefields about the city.

Prominent among the visiting Northerners were C. L. Smith, of Greenfield, Mass., and William H. Hart, of Worcester, Mass. Both fought in the Union forces during the war. Mr. Smith as a member of Company A, Second Massachusetts, and Mr. Hart in Company H, First Massachusetts Artillery. Neither fought in the battles about Atlanta, but both had friends and relatives in Sherman's army, and they are as familiar with the history of the Atlanta battlefields as their comrades who fought here.

At Chattanooga to-day more than 50,000 veterans are gathered on the historic battlefields of Lookout Mountain and the sites of the great struggles about the Tennessee city. Tuesday and Wednesday will be spent visiting the battlefields and narrating about the campfires the incidents of the great war. Thursday the active business of the convention will begin, when a city will be selected for the 1914 reunion and officers chosen for the Grand Army.

To-day was Chickamauga Park Day, but the prospect of sunshine and showers again kept the majority of the veterans downtown.

The real feature of the morning was the parade of the Seventeenth United States Infantry from Fort McPherson, which, with the First Battalion of the Third Infantry of the National Guard of Tennessee, furnished the first military spectacle of the encampment.

Many of the veterans have announced their intention of visiting Atlanta, the old Andersonville prison and the National Conservation Exposition at Knoxville before they return to their homes.

MRS. PANKHURST HOPES TO TALK TO WILSON

Anxious to Explain Militancy in England—Wants to Address Congress During Visit.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—It was said at the offices of the Women's Social and Political Union to-day that Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, founder of militant suffragette methods, would try to meet President Wilson personally in the United States and is anxious to deliver a speech before the United States Congress.

Mrs. Pankhurst, who is president of the union, will sail for the United States from France about October 11.

In a public letter to the union Miss Barbara Kerr, one of the officers says:

"Mrs. Pankhurst is anxious to explain to the people of the United States why militant methods and violence are necessary here.

"She would be pleased to meet and chat with President Wilson and would accept with alacrity an invitation to speak before Congress if some gallant member of that body will invite her.

"The still Suffragettes need have no fear that she will carry a satchel full of bombs or try to pull their beards. She will prove harmless."

MOTHER LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE

If Cross, Feverish, Constipated, Give "California Syrup of Figs."

A laxative to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, don't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!

CLEVELAND

THE SCENIC WAY WITH DINING CARS L&N

FIVE BILLIONS WILL BE PAID TO FARMERS OF THE U. S. FOR CROP THIS YEAR

With a total quantity of agricultural products 25 per cent less than in 1912, the year's gross revenue for the farmers will be 6 per cent more than last year, according to a bulletin issued by the Orange Judd Company, which publishes several agricultural papers. Total value of all crops in the United States will be $5,000,000,000, or $289,000,000 more than a year ago.

The reason for this extraordinary condition is, of course, the high prices per unit for several of the large cereal crops. Corn, for example, will show a total volume of 20 per cent under 1912, but with a value of 42 per cent better will produce for the farmers $100,000,000 more than a year ago.

"The wealth the farmers will receive for their decreased tonnage," says the report, "also has these two decided advantages. Less labor and expense will be required for harvesting and marketing the crop this year, at a time when farm help is scarce and high.

Shortage Saves Railroads.

"Only the decrease of about 50,000,000 tons in the weight of these staples will enable American railways to move the crops of 1913 without a veritable breakdown of the transportation system, in view of the heavy tonnage of other freight and of passenger traffic caused by the resumption of good times.

"The outcome of the agricultural season, therefore, is profoundly beneficial to industry, commerce and finance, taking the country as a whole, although certain individuals and limited sections have been hard hit by the drouth.

"The shortage in new corn is not a disaster. It is a blessing in disguise. For with over 400,000,000 bushels of old corn on hand October 1, the aggregate supply of maize this autumn will be some 2,750,000,000 bushels. This is not about equals the corn supply following the harvest of 1911—only two years ago, when the yield was 2,650,000,000 and the supply of old corn was then only about one-fourth as large as now."

The Cotton Prospect.

The wheat output will be the greatest in quantity and value in the country's history, and the value for potatoes $224,000,000, which is $40,000,000 more than last year, breaks all records.

"Even more remarkable than the foregoing is the present promise of the cotton crop," continues the bulletin. "Although nearly a million bales less than last year, a decrease of 5 per cent, its price of around 14 cents per pound to the planter will make the cotton crop worth the unprecedented aggregate of nearly $950,000,000.

"In other words, cotton growers will receive a total of around $125,000,000 more than last year, or a total increase of 22 per cent. This will be the greatest amount ever paid to planters in the history of the cotton industry."

SAYS U. S. LEAD IN COTTON IS LAGGING

Georgia Expert Urges Farmers to Use Improved Method of Baling and Caring for Staple.

Declaring the supremacy of America in cotton production is in danger because of improper methods of baling and caring for the staple, T. H. Kimbrough, of Catnula, Ga., former member of the legislative committee of the Farmers' Union, has issued a letter to Southern farmers, pleading for reforms.

"This loss of supremacy in cotton growing," Mr. Kimbrough said, "may not appear probable for several years, but looks possible when we remember that only a few years ago we produced 85 per cent of the cotton of the world, and now we produce only 70 per cent.

"If we would hold our own and make any progress, there are improvements and many changes that must be made.

"Our cotton should be gathered when dry, housed and protected until ready for the gin. The gin roll should be run out sufficiently close when changing on bales to prevent a mixture of grades, and avoid false packs, which can be done if honestly prepared and properly looked after by the gin man.

"Your cotton should be baled in a standard press box (not over 27 by 54), using a good grade of bagging of sufficient width, weight and strength, also secured at the ends with good twine, to protect it in transit, and so far as possible the bales should be of uniform weight, never less than 400 pounds nor more than 500 pounds."

Court Holds Male Visitors Permissible

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—The Supreme Court at Leipsic has decided that a woman has an indisputable right to receive male visitors in her own apartments.

The case arose from the action of an actress in receiving men visitors in a rented apartment. The landlord tried to restrain her from doing this, but the court decided that the prohibition of visits by men would be illegal and a restriction of personal liberty.

Slays Man He Finds Embracing His Wife

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 17.—Joseph Stout, a collector for the National Oil Company, died to-day following an operation for the removal of a bullet fired into his abdomen by Dr. Charles M. Clayton, 35, when, the doctor declares, he found his wife in the embrace of Stout.

The shooting occurred at noon Monday, when Clayton drove up to his home in his automobile and found Stout there.

CARUSO OFFERS TO ASSIST CHARLTON

Wife Slayer Flooded With Sympathetic Letters, One From Girl Seeking Marriage.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

COMO, ITALY, Sept. 17.—Letters of sympathy or denunciation, gifts and offers of various kinds are daily pouring in upon Porter Charlton, the 24-year-old American who was acquitted here to stand trial for the murder of his wife, Mrs. Mary Scott Castle Charlton. The young prisoner received an offer of marriage from a young girl who said she had fallen in love with his picture.

Enrico Caruso, the famous tenor, has written to ex-Judge John Ippolito, of New York, who is here, offering the service of his personal attorney, Signor Ceola, to help defend Charlton.

To vary the monotony Charlton sometimes plays the lottery which is sanctioned by the Government. He is pictured in the newspapers as a "second Harry Thaw," and as "the criminal Croesus" and "millionaire murderer." On the contrary Charlton has no money of his own and his father already has spent a big sum defending him in America.

Wanted Fine Cut For Kicking Beggar

F. A. Minhinnett, of Buckhead, felt that he did Atlanta a valuable service when he vigorously kicked John Booth, an aged and decrepit DeKalb County man, who is a familiar seeker of alms in Atlanta's downtown streets.

Minhinnett made no denial of the kicking before Recorder Broyles, but startled the court by remarking:

"Your honor, I think I ought to be allowed something off of my fine for kicking that old pest."

Judge Broyles fined him $25.75.

MEN WELCOME MOTHER'S FRIEND

A Duty That Every Man Owes to Those Who Perpetuate the Race.

It is just as important that men almost know of progressive methods in advance of motherhood. The suffering, pain and distress incident to child-bearing can be easily avoided by having at hand a bottle of Mother's Friend.

This is a wonderful penetrating, external application that relieves all tension upon the muscles and enables them to expand without the painful strain upon the ligaments. Thus there is avoided all those nervous spells, the tendency to nausea, or morning sickness is counteracted, and a bright, sunny, happy disposition is preserved that reflects wonderfully upon the character and temperament of the little one soon to open its eyes in bewilderment at the joy of his arrival. You can obtain a bottle of "Mother's Friend" at any drug store at $1.00, and it will be the best dollar's worth you ever obtained. It preserves the mother's health, enables her to make a quick and complete recovery, and this renewed strength she will eagerly devote herself to the care and attention which mean so much to the welfare of the child. Write to the Bradfield Regulator Co., 129 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their valuable and instructive book of guidance for expectant mothers. Get a bottle of Mother's Friend to-day.

MOTHER OF FIVE URGES REFORM IN COURTSHIP

Disregards Spooning Crusade to Denounce Parlor Manners of Her Daughters' Wooers.

It was ever thus. Out in the red hills of Georgia the call is for "refawm." In the elegant city parlors clubwomen suavely discuss reform—of everything from the slit skirt to the ballot. Atlanta policemen are tainted, thoroughly with the reform bacteria, until you can no more kiss the lady of your heart than you could tousle the mustache of Chief Beavers with impunity.

The wonder of it is how September Morn got by.

It is everywhere thus in Georgia. Therefore, the crusade that was begun to-day by a mother in Rome, Ga., is no more than consistent. Here's is a real reform, aimed at what she says is the bad manners of the young men of Rome who call on her daughters.

They smoke cigarettes in her parlor, these young men, and very nonchalantly, after they have known her daughter Elizabeth ten minutes, call her Lizzie or Liz. All this the mother considers improper.

In a statement "to the public," meaning the mother-public, she is asking that a stop be put to all this. Her "Beatrice" must not be "Trixy" to practical strangers, and the picture of her grandfather that hangs sedately over the parlor mantel must not be wreathed in cigarette smoke. And it seems hard that she should be forced to view through the smoke pall the figures of languid young men with their feet on her parlor chairs.

At least there should be no doubt that this mother in Rome, who gives the only hint of her identity by signing herself "A Mother of Five Daughters," has a worthy reform to advocate. The Woman's Club of Rome will consider it when next its members meet, and the eloquent appeal of the "Mother of Five Daughters," to clubwomen everywhere in Georgia, is likely to have an effect in regenerating the parlor manners of Georgia youths.

Important Sayings By Important People

"The charter to be voted upon is a bona fide codification of the existing charter with only the alterations or changes to which attention has been called, in the epitome of the same, or short statement of its contents, heretofore published. The board of public safety will comprise the duties of both the police and the fire departments. There is undoubted need for harmony of method and effort in both of these departments, and it is confidently believed that a union of the two will result in great good.—JUDGE GEORGE HILLYER, Chairman of the Citizens' Committee.

"You must be efficient, each in his own line and all working together as a unit, else you would not have been turned over to me by a postmaster whose administration has been satisfactory to the patrons of the office. The work of every one of you is of record. Half of you know within yourselves whether or not you have made good. If you've made good you will have the chance of making better, so far as my administration is concerned."—POSTMASTER JONES to Postal Employes.

The cotton crop in Georgia is fairly up to the average—much better than it is in any of the adjacent States. The corn crop is also good, while throughout the country generally it is almost a total failure. I did not see any good corn after I left Georgia. I did not stop off of the train in Alabama, confining my inspection to the States of Mississippi and Louisiana, but, judging from what we saw on the railroad, the corn crop is almost a total failure. Georgia is indeed fortunate both in cotton and corn this year.—JAMES D. PRICE, Commissioner of Agriculture.

If the cotton exchanges are taxed out of existence, the whole machinery of modern mill cotton buying will be thrown out of gear. The only people who will be benefited will be the very large mills and the big spot cotton operators, who will sit back and complacently watch spot cotton accumulate at sundry "concentrating points" in the South, and when the load gets too big for the local banks, they will step in and buy at their own price, and the grower of the cotton will be the sufferer.—PRESIDENT GORDON, of the Georgia Cotton Manufacturers' Association.

URGES ACTIVITY IN CHARTER'S BEHALF

Judge Hillyer Advises Mass Meetings and the Circulation of Copies of Document.

Judge George Hillyer, chairman of the new charter campaign committee, Wednesday urged a more active campaign to pass the charter on September 24.

"Meetings to discuss the new charter should be held in every ward," he declared. "Thousands of copies of the charter should be printed and distributed. Many people in Atlanta are misinformed as to the meaning of the document, and all that is necessary to get their support is to let them know the facts.

"There is no politics or personal ambition back of this movement. It simply is an effort to codify and simplify the old charter. It systematizes the construction department and improves our form of government in many other details. But the fundamental principle of representative government is left undisturbed.

"I think the new charter is worthy of the support of every good Atlantan."

Attorney General Of Tennessee Quits

Frank M. Thompson, of Chattanooga, and Assistant Attorney General W. W. Faw are mentioned to succeed Cates.

Hunter Slays Man He Takes for a Squirrel

ELLIJAY, Sept. 17.—News has just reached this place that George Dyer, of the Mountaintown district, this county, was accidentally shot and killed by Walter Hill, a neighbor, in the latter's corn field.

Both men were out squirrel hunting and Hill, not knowing that Dyer was in his field, got a glimpse of him through the tall corn and thinking he was a squirrel shot him.

One Sneeze Means Death to This Man

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—Doctors in the City Hospital here declare that if Henry Parker sneezes just once he will die.

Parker's back was broken recently.

Men & Women Who Appreciate the Beauty & Serviceability of Fine Oriental Rugs Are Invited to Share in the Annual Fall Sale of Oriental Rugs

With Its Unquestioned Savings of a Fifth to a Third

——New connections established with the largest and foremost dealers in Oriental Rugs in America make this Annual Sale an event of rare importance to lovers of Oriental Rugs.

——Because the unusual assemblage of rugs holds for them a rich store of delight, furnishing inspiration to the finer setting of their homes.

——Because the prices are a fifth to a third less than we could, or would, customarily ask.

——The importers we spoke of seek a larger volume of business. To induce us to buy more rugs than we usually sell, they make us decisive price concessions.

——We also seek a larger volume of business. The price concessions we received we pass on to you. Also we forego part of our own profits. In a sale wherein we dispose of hundreds of rugs, the aggregate profits justify a modest profit on individual rugs otherwise impossible. Though these rugs are art treasures, we treat them as regular merchandise—pricing them at an exceedingly thin margin of profit.

——The addition of these many new rugs to our stock forces a price revision downward on the many other rugs in stock. Their new price tickets read from a fifth to a third less than formerly, the greater reductions being on rugs.

——Most of the rugs in the sale group themselves under one of these headings and sizes:

Shirvans—light shades and designs, about 3½ by 6 feet.
Moussouls—small all-over medallion patterns, 3½ by 4 feet to 6 by 8 feet.
Baluchistans—deep, rich, dark red colorings, 3 by 5 feet.
Iran—genuine time-mellowed antiques, 4 by 7 feet to 5 by 8 feet.
Kirmanshahs—of surpassing beauty and excellence, 4 by 5 feet.
Sarouks—softer and deeper tinted than Kirmanshahs, 4 by 7 feet.

Rugs for Hall Strips include rich, mellow patterns in the handsome Irans, Carabaghs, Hamadans and Kurdistans. Sizes 3 by 10 feet to 4 by 15 feet.

Carpet Size Rugs

Ideal rugs for library or living rooms. Their short, close pile insures lasting service. Mouskabads, Mesheds, Mahals, Serapis, Anatolins. Sizes 9 by 12 feet to 10 by 15 feet.

PRICES—Persian rugs are unlike other merchandise. Prices mean nothing until you see the rugs. Therefore, we have purposely omitted prices. Savings, however, generally run about like this: $15 from $20; $25 from $30; $20 from $30 in several odd rugs; $40 from $50; $67.50 from $85; $110 and $115 from $150.

(Rugs—Third Floor)

Special New Tailored Suits, Two Popular Prices, $15 and $25

Instances of Remarkable but Regular Values

FOR their hard service tailored suits, many women like to pay about $15, and $25 is a good price to pay for a suit that may be worn on the street afternoons or for informal occasions.

Because of these popular preferences, Rich's has SPECIALIZED in suits at approximately these prices, and we believe our patrons will find here the broadest stocks, the most attractive styles and the best values in this vicinity.

There are close upon a score of models, and the number is added to daily. They are distinctive and smart in style, cut upon fine lines, strictly man-tailored, lined with good wearing silks and satins, finished with care, calculated in every way to give the best service possible.

$15.00—shepherd checks, navy blue and black French and storm serges. Cutaway coats, silk lined, finished with silk shields.

$19.75—brings choice of a remarkably fine line of French and storm serges and ratines. Plainly tailored—the value is put in the lines and materials where it can be seen. Cutaway models in varying styles. Black, blue, grey, Copenhagen, brown.

$23.50 and $25—Because many women like to pay about $25 for a suit, we have provided exceptional assortments here. Wool fallies, eponiques, French and storm serges, chevlots, wool corduroys, broadcloths, brocades, mannish suitings. Plain and fancy tailored, silk or satin lined. Black and colors.

$29.50—At this price we have Paris-copied suits—suits with the elegant details that characterize the work of custom tailors. Paris modes extraordinarily reproduced.

Have we aimed too low? It is surely not for want of suits. The racks are crowded with new arrivals that start at $35 and slowly march, step by step, to $97.50.

Mannish Shirts for Women

Are here in great variety. All white or white with black, blue or lavender stripes. Attached and detachable collar. $1 and $1.50.

RAYING for a brief space off the considerably beaten trail of the now-done Southern League pen- chase, we come to a couple of is just approaching their respec- termini.

we wanted to be original, we ld select the Yanks and the Cards the World's Series.

t there are limits to originality, the other side of which the various colleges find most of their ients.

t it is to be Giants and the Ath- s.

ITHER club, however, has had quite such an easy time of it of yore.

ast season, saving only one hys- al setback by the Cubs relics, the ts breezed along unthreatened. year the raucous bellow of the ne seemed at the outset, only to y in the distance. But the Phil- game, and came again, like the wicked, those Phillies er ceased from troubling, and it ms late in the season before they e simmered down into vapid bab- es of what will happen in 1914.

MILARLY in the American League, the Naps spurred on by ningham, hung valiantly in the ds of the White Elephant, and hit bit again.

ot only to be shaken off in the d drive.

he old pachyderm is more wabbly of yore. His breathing appar- is wheezes. His knees are in- ed to creak.

t if his giant stride wavers, it shakes the earth. And if his ng joints creak, they still carry at a round gait—and he charges ere.

hat is to say, the W. E. still has PUNCH.

RD right there, in the proverbial shell-game, is the reason why llies and Naps must rest content year with the job of runner-up worse.

either has THE PUNCH.

RMINGHAM has a fine ball club. a young, lusty ball club, a lively ting ball club. He has pitchers. has two of the greatest swingers game knows. He has speed and th and dash.

ut he lacks the PUNCH.

oolh has a corking ball club. He the slugging Gavvy Cravath, , the fence-buster. She has a id pitching staff, headed by Seo- and Alexander. The club looks d, on paper, on the field.

ut it lacks the PUNCH.

AIN and again the Phillies have worked themselves up to a peak from which to threaten and ry the Giants—from which they ht have assisted McGraw's clan the well-known and effective Walter.

ey didn't have it.

ey ran in Birmingham drove most abreast of the way- tering Athletics, only to see his great team break in its stride and fall back- ward toward the pack.

They simply weren't THERE.

ONE illustration will do for both clubs and work an injustice on neither.

Last week the Naps were trawling along on the top of their latest spring. The Athletics were wabbling in the manner that has grown almost into a habit with them.

Hope burned in Napdom as its pets herded into Washington for five games.

The Senators took all five.

It was the final chance.

It resulted in the final break.

The Naps didn't have the PUNCH.

SIZING it up crudely, the principal difference between the Athletics and the Naps, between the Giants and the Phillies, is the PUNCH.

That difference amounts to a pen- nant in each case.

That's all.

WE notice it, down here in the South. Perhaps we get it bet- ter and nearer than the fans whose popping optics convey to fevered Philadelphia a bewildered idea of the games they actually witness.

We see the games in cold type, in the grim dawn of the well-known Morning After.

And we see the grim spurt end in a break, and we see the reeling Giants settle under the strain and hand out the old Poppy Wilson left and right, and we see the wavering Athletics crowded near the rim, stiffen up with the old defense and roll back the Browns with the master hand of Bender and Coombs and Plank at their finest.

COOMBS is out of it. Bender is in the ring. Plank's cunning eke out his aging whip.

But—somehow, in the pinch, the old PUNCH is there.

And it is the PUNCH that makes the difference, when all's said and done- Once in a while—in 1906, to be specific—a team comes along like the Cubs, that can not be beaten, for it is the class of a classier league than ours. There is no competition.

But in all ordinary races, in the race just ended in the Southern as both the big league races, it takes more than paper-class, more than batting, more than mere fielding and hard hitting and clever pitching to win out.

It takes THE PUNCH.

Ritchie Announces Fight With Cross

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—Wil- lie Ritchie, lightweight champion, announced to-day that he had been engaged for a ten-round boxing bout with Leach Cross in New York. Ritch- ie said the date had not been fixed, but that he thought the fight would take place early in October. He leaves to-day for the East.

Jimmy Johnson Has Stolen 100 Bases

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 17.—Jimmy Johnson, second baseman for the San Francisco team of the Pacific Coast League, whom the Cubs recently drafted, brought his season's record for stolen bases up to 100 in the sev- enth inning of yesterday's game be- tween San Francisco and Los An- geles.

JIM PREAS CAN PLAY ALL KINDS SPORT GAMES

JIM PREAS, the mighty athlete from Riverside Military Acad- emy, is now a Tech man. He has been called the Jim Thorpe of the South, as he is considered by many to be the best prep man in the South. Preas is not only a football star, bas- ing whistfiated at end and halfback at Riverside, where they play foot- ball like it is "writ" and turn out some of the best athletes in the South, but is a star in every branch of athletics.

He plays forward on the basket ball team and is about as fast as they make 'em, shooting the goals with great accuracy. He covers the initial sack on the diamond and gets everything coming his way. He hits them out at a good clip and is a real Ty Cobb on the paths. He is also a good track man, running the hundred in little short of a record time, and handles the weights a la Ralph Rose.

A large crowd of alumni and old Tech stars were out yesterday to see the mighty Thorpe of the South in action. He looks like a million dol- lars, standing about six feet and weighs about 185 pounds. He has an ideal build, broad shoulders and thick through the chest.

McWhorter is about whom Preas will be played at end or in the backfield, as he is equally good at each place and is also a good punter, but where- ever he is played he is sure to star, and before the season is over, will more deserve his soubriquet.

He displayed a corking stiff arm, something that McWhorter doesn't know any more about, or didn't last season, than a cat does about Atlanta politics.

He can shift his stride when car- rying the ball to perfection when he would-be tackler looms up to get him, and maybe he can't shake off arms once they seem to be knitted around his underpinning.

The good old pep just bubbles out of his veins, too. Coach Heisman was forced to caution him yesterday time and again to slow up. And Preas, believe-me-or-not, is a fine listener, at all times, to the wise counsel of his coach, for the am- bitious young footballer often gets himself an unpleasant "Charley Horse" when his muscles are not properly hardened.

SEWANEE is trying to have this same Patten ruled out on a charge of professionalism. Some ru- mies that he ever did anything that takes him without the bounds of ama- teurism.

Sewanee wanted Patten to go to Sewanee. Sewanee lost Patten.

It sure looks to be somewhat out of the ordinary run of sportsmanship for Sewanee to try to secure Patten and then, after they lose him, to enter a protest.

Seven Southern colleges wanted this boy and among them was Vande- derbilt. My old Side Kick, Innis Brown, former Commodore captain, brought Patten's name before me some time, but Heisman beat the genial Innis to it.

And yet, Vanderbilt isn't trying to spoil a Sewanee feast because Tech landed a man that they wanted.

HEISMAN has another man now who is going to make good. His name is Jim Preas, and he hangs his hat at home at home in the good vil- lage of Johnson City, Tenn.

Preas is the former Riverside boy who has been hailed as another Jim Thorpe, the Indian marvel who set all the universe agog at the last Olympiad in Stockholm.

This Preas looks like a "regular" football player. He is put up a lot like Thorpe, to possessed of a wonder- full pair of legs and an even more marvelous pair of shoulders. He did little yesterday outside of passing the ball and some light gymnastics.

But from reports, he is going to be one of the big sensations this fall.

HEISMAN has a mighty good-look- ing tackle named Nance, who is a brother-in-law of one of the pro- fessors at Tech. Nance hasn't played much football for two years, but he was a demon tackle as a schoolboy when he attended the Denver (Colo.) High School about three seasons back.

He weighs fully 200 pounds and must stand 6 feet 2 inches. He is lightning fast for a big fellow. Just at present he is not in top-notch con- dition and Heisman is bringing him out slowly and carefully.

HEISMAN believes in having his men well trained. Billy Muldoon never put a man through more set- stunts than J. W. does his young athletes.

A few of the stunts are really amusing. The 300 spectators who witnessed them yesterday were forced to "smile aloud" as some of the lads tried to follow Heis through his mo- tions.

"Say, you fellows over there on the sidelines," yelled the coach, "will have to close up or we will take up a con- tribution."

Yes, Heis was in a good mood yes- terday.

But what a merry time he will give some of those lazy candidates when he has one of his crabby days!

Ex-Cracker Performs Well for the Phillies

An ex-cracker distinguished himself at Cincinnati yesterday, when Mayer, pitching the second game of a double- header for Philadelphia, handed the Reds a clean shutout in the six in- nings the contest traveled.

Mayer was allowed to slip away to Portsmouth, Lou Castro's Virginia League team, after the season opened, but, being the short-sighted manager, Lou developed a lot of stuff in the youngster and sold him to the Phillies, where he is now compiling an excellent record.

Bonus for Carrigan If Red Sox Win Flag

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—If Bill Carri- gan lands the American League pen- nant next year his salary will auto- matically be raised. This is the infor- mation given out to-day following the signing of the catcher as manager of the Red Sox for next year at a salary of $5,000.

It appears that a bonus is to be added to Carrigan's regular stipula- tion in the event that he succeed in copping the flag for the Red Sox president in 1914. Carrigan has been taking the team along since Jake Stahl was deposed, and has appar- ently made a success of things. Joe McAleer, who is satisfied with his work, is

"I am satisfied with Bill Carrigan's work," said McAleer. He is showing as much as could be expected, and I can depend upon him to turn out be a winner for next season. Carrigan has my confidence, I believe in him and am sure that results will show that the right thing has been done."

Patten Another Bob McWhorter Heisman Has Picked Up a 'Find'

By W. S. Farnsworth.

ONE hundred and eighty-eight pounds of man, possessing a Sharkey chest, a Jeffries neck, a McCoy waist, a Fitzsimmons pair of shoulders, a pair of Corbett legs for footwork, and a head—well, a head not unlike the athletic hero of a dime novel, is the backbone of Tech's foot- ball eleven this fall.

That's Gene Patten.

Georgia boasts of its McWhorter. Tech will be boasting in just as loud tones of its Patten within the next few weeks.

And Patten is not unlike McWhor- ter physically. In fact, they resemble each other enough to be twins.

McWhorter is a great offensive man. Patten will be every bit as good at gaining ground this year, or yours truly will declare himself a bum Judge.

This Patten is going to be a tough man to bring to the ground. Any young tackler who thinks he can down him by grabbing him below the knees will have another guess com- ing to him. He will have to be pounced on, actually hammed to the earth before he is "floored."

I WENT out to Tech yesterday after- noon and enjoyed two hours of good, solid practice by the Yellow Jacket candidates. But the work of Patten held my eye most of the time. He has a mighty pretty running back punts that impressed me the most. He grabs the ball exactly the same as McWhorter, as much faster get- ting underway and just as difficult to get at.

He displayed a corking stiff arm, something that McWhorter doesn't know any more about, or didn't last season, than a cat does about Atlanta politics.

He can shift his stride when car- rying the ball to perfection when a would-be tackler looms up to get him, and maybe he can't shake off arms once they seem to be knitted around his underpinning.

The good old pep just bubbles out of his veins, too. Coach Heisman was forced to caution him yesterday time and again to slow up. And Preas, believe-me-or-not, is a fine listener, at all times, to the wise counsel of his coach, for the am- bitious young footballer often gets himself an unpleasant "Charley Horse" when his muscles are not properly hardened.

SEWANEE is trying to have this same Patten ruled out on a charge of professionalism. Some ru- mies that he ever did anything that takes him without the bounds of ama- teurism.

Sewanee wanted Patten to go to Sewanee. Sewanee lost Patten.

It sure looks to be somewhat out of the ordinary run of sportsmanship for Sewanee to try to secure Patten and then, after they lose him, to enter a protest.

Seven Southern colleges wanted this boy and among them was Vande- derbilt. My old Side Kick, Innis Brown, former Commodore captain, brought Patten's name before me some time, but Heisman beat the genial Innis to it.

And yet, Vanderbilt isn't trying to spoil a Sewanee feast because Tech landed a man that they wanted.

Red Man Heap Rich--Won't Play Baseball

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. There is one Indian who can play ball, but doesn't care to, even with the added lure of a chance to cut into the world's series money. He is Barry Bokis, a Chippewa—same nation as "Chief" Bender, but of a tiny band north of Lake Superior.

Word came down that he was pitching startling ball and an invi- tation to come out of the woods was extended by the Athletics. Bokis sent back word that he'd like to, but couldn't afford to, even for a chance to the Cincinnati club, and ordered that the latter club be reimbursed for any expense it had gone to in securing the player.

Manager Carr, of the Kansas City club, and Morgan himself testified that his arm was not in condition when or- dered to report to Cincinnati.

What's This--Carl Morris on Short End?

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Considerable interest is being shown in the Al Reich- Carl Morris heavyweight bout, to be staged here Friday night. Reich, who entered the professional ranks a week ago and knocked out his opponent, is a favorite in the early betting, despite the fact that he is a mere novice in the ring in comparison with Morris, who has been "white hoping" almost since Johnson knocked out Jeffries.

Says Draft of Stock Is Not Legal Deal

MOBILE, ALA., Sept. 17.—There is a roar from the local Southern League club over the drafting of Stock, the Mobile shortstop, by the Boston Na- tional League club.

C. Z. Colson, secretary of the Galls, says that the draft is illegal and can not stand, as Stock was sold to New York outright July 1.

King Cole Not Merry Old Soul, Although Drafted by Yanks

ST. PAUL, Sept. 17.—There is one drafted American Association star whose heart is not filled with joy, al- though he has been burning with am- bition to return to the big leagues. He is King Cole, of Columbus. When Cole was informed that he had been awarded to the New York American League team he dashed his cap on the ground and displayed other evidences of dis- gust.

The reason is that Cole has been with Frank Chance before and does not like him any too well. In the summer of 1910, when Cole was having his best year in the National League, Cole was put out of a close game for kicking and was fined $100 by the Peerless Leader.

Cole did not worry much about it until the close of the season, when to his astonishment the penalty was not remitted. Ever since that time Cole has had little personal regard for the "Tip L."

Another Syndicate May Get Herreshoff To Build a Defender

BRISTOL, R. I., Sept. 17.—It was learned to-day that another New York Yacht Club syndicate, to include Fred- erick G. Bourne, George F. Baker, Jr., and probably C. Oliver Iselin, to back a second Herreshoff boat to compete in the trials for the America cup defender next year, is a strong probability.

Plans for this syndicate were dis- cussed to-day at a meeting of certain members of the New York Yacht Club near Newport. While Nat Herreshoff, the designer, has left it be understood heretofore that he would accept only one commission, that of the Vanderbilt syndicate, for a cup-defender can- didate, it is said that he is now in a more receptive mood.

Another meeting of the New York Yacht Club members to plan for the new syndicate will be held early next week.

Sale of Cy Morgan Set Aside by Com.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 17.—The National Commission set aside the sale of Pitch- er Cy Morgan, of the Kansas City club, to the Cincinnati club, and ordered that the latter club be reimbursed for any expense it had gone to in securing the player.

Manager Carr, of the Kansas City club, and Morgan himself testified that his arm was not in condition when or- dered to report to Cincinnati.

McGraw and Mack Are Hopeful Both Rely on Veteran Pitchers

THE resurgence of Connie Mack's veteran Athletic pitch- ers and the continually improv- ing form of Christy Mathewson in his thirteenth year of big league service give the impression that the forth- coming world's series will be a renew- al of the classic of 1905.

The managers of the Giants and Athletics have virtually admitted as much. Connie Mack, tactical and taciturn, and John McGraw, stra- tegic and silent, heretofore have de- clared themselves in few words, which for them is verbosity.

Mack and McGraw submitted to in- terviews during the week and each declared his team's chances in the October event. It is not the custom with these shrewd leaders to "tip off" their hands, but each is so cer- tain of winning that one fears not the other.

Mack is not so optimistic of ulti- mate victory as he was when his team opposed the Giants two years ago. In discussing his club's chances he said:

"I intend to rely on my old stand- bys—Eddie Plank and Chief Bender. Presuming of course, that we win the American League pennant. That we will accomplish this little detail I am certain. This pair of hardy vet- erans have stood me in good stead for a number of years, and they are surely not going to throw me down now.

Four Young Pitchers.

"I have four good young pitchers —Shawkey, Houck, Dauss and Brown —but Plank and Bender will shoulder the brunt of the work on the mound for the Athletics when we meet the Giants for the third time.

"I will not go on record as saying that we will outhit McGraw's horde. My club can hit equally as hard as that of McGraw's, but in an abbre- viated series such as the world's se- ries "dope" can not be very de- pendable. My players are more re- liable afield, and that will prove a big advantage in our favor.

"I have no intention of using either Donnie Bush or Harry Davis in the big series, but they will be of ines- timable value to the team in proffer- ing advice. Both are veterans of the diamond and have a keen insight for the fine points and intricacies.

"While Plank and Bender are not rated very high in the pitchers' rec- ords, they are as reliable a duo of hurlers as I have ever had. Both are at their best in the pinches and in a short series I can recommend them as best anything in sight.

"Shawkey and Houck lead Bender in the pitching averages. The first named are second and third in the rating, being next to Walter John- son, while the Indian is seventh with seventeen victories and seven defeats Plank is credited with seventeen vic- tories and nine defeats.

Veterans Cold Weather Hurlers.

"But it must be remembered that Plank and Bender are cold weather pitchers, and that is why I look to them to carry the Athletics through to another world's championship."

Analyzing the foregoing, it is found that Mack makes the reservation that if Plank and Bender are in their top form, his team has a good chance of victory. But should these veterans fall him—or should even one of them be unable to come up to the mark— Mack will be forced to call upon his Youngsters and jeopardize his club's chances.

McGraw is almost jubilant over the opportunity of another clash with the Athletics. He desires to atone for the ignominy of the conflicts of 1911, when the Athletics unceremoniously routed his fledgling Giants.

"I always refrain from trying to be a prophet," said McGraw, "but this is the first time I feel justified in pre- dicting the big gonfalon for the Giants. My corps of pitchers excels that of any team in the country, and it is the box-work that counts in the world's series.

"Here I have Mathewson, Mar- quard, Tesreau and Demaree primed to put big game. And the Athletics are certainly big game for me. I earnestly believe Matty will repeat his success of 1905, when he shut out the Athletics in three games. Mar- quard and Tesreau are sterling al- ternates for the big fellow.

McGraw to Give Demaree Chance.

"I will give Demaree a chance to work in one of the games. He is still a youngster in big league service, but he is a veteran in knowledge of how the game should be played in the majors. He is the most promising pitcher I have ever seen break into the big circuits.

"I am well fortified in the other de- partments though not as strongly as in the box. My infield has stood up well in two world's series and the outfield is strengthened by the pres- ence of George Burns.

"In Chief Meyers and Larry Mc- Lean I have two of the most capable backstops in the business. But keep your eye on Matty, for he is the peer of all pitchers of all time."

So it can be seen that veteran pitchers will play a prominent part in the proceedings. Matty for both Bender and Plank in the 1905 series, and according to McGraw, "Big Six" will repeat.

'SPOONING' WAR IS AMUSING TO BROUGHTON

Famous Pastor Expresses Mild Misgivings Over Vice Crusade as He Bids Atlanta Adieu.

Dr. Len G. Broughton said goodbye to Atlanta Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. He boarded a Seaboard Air Line train for Athens, where he will visit a day or two. From Athens he will go to New York and thence to London.

Dr. Broughton had a hearty laugh over the sudden activity of the police in arresting girls "spooners," while he was waiting for his train. He would not, however, offer any censure or commend the police for their espionage over the love affairs of the city's young.

"Atlanta is such a remarkable, growing, changing city that it is impossible to lay down any rules for its moral government, unless you intimately are acquainted with its present needs and the existing mood divine. I know that what Atlanta is one day is entirely different from what it was two years before. It, therefore, is impossible to hypothesize its moral needs or what one may have known of the city one, two or three years before.

"Atlanta is just a great, big, overgrown baby reaching for everything within its grasp and without its grasp. For this reason it eternally is changing. Its changes are more varied and rapid than any kaleidoscope. One day it is on the crest of a great wave of reform. The next day it is going in a direction exactly opposite.

"Knowing Atlanta's shifting moods so well I am at a loss to prescribe any antidote for the present vicissitudes, if they are any greater than usual. I would have to be here some time longer and study conditions more closely that I have done."

Dr. Broughton's Son At State University.

ATHENS, Sept. 16.—Dr. Len G. Broughton, of London, entered his son at the University of Georgia yesterday and filled the pulpit at the Tabernacle Church in the evening. Several thousand crowded the auditorium to hear him.

In addition to a large number of local good roads enthusiasts, many members of the Dallas Auto Club motored over for the event. Mr Ferguson was the guest of honor.

U. S. WARSHIPS RESENTED BY MEXICO

Huerta, in Message to His Congress, Lauds His Own Administration.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 16.—The salient features of President Huerta's message to Congress this evening created much discussion. In brief, they were:

"Mexico takes exception to the presence of United States warships in the harbors of the Republic and will probably inform the United States next month that the Government can not permit longer the presence of foreign men-of-war unless for special purposes.

"Mexico now has an army of 100,000 men, loyal to the Republic by the ties of warmest patriotism, and all are ready on a moment's notice to rise in the defense of the country.

"The Government is on a firmer financial foundation than it was a year ago, in spite of domestic dissension. The revenues are $7,500,000 greater and the expenditures are $5,000,000 greater than they were under the regime of ex-President Madero.

"The Government will omit no effort to obtain much desired peace and guarantee fully at the next national election free use of the ballot."

The briefest mention is made to the strained relations between Mexico and the United States. The exact words used are:

"Besides our fratricidal conflict, which is about to terminate owing to the efforts of the Federal army, the tension of our diplomatic relations with the United States Government, fortunately not with its people, has caused general alarm, has made us suffer more than one undeserved reserve and delayed complete and final pacification of the Mexican Republic."

Huerta praises his own administration, saying that it has been one of triumph and asks the members of Congress to be loyal to him and to work for pacification.

American, Smugglers' Leader, Man of Mystery.

CARRIZO SPRINGS, TEXAS, Sept. 16.—"Give me a handful of 'makings' and I don't care what happens," declared Barney Cline, the daredevil soldier of fortune and captain of a band of Mexican ammunition smugglers, who was captured with thirteen Mexicans by United States cavalrymen and inflicted yesterday.

Cline and his companions, who killed a deputy sheriff and tried to run ammunition across the border through the blockade of Federal troops, will be put on trial to-morrow.

Cline is 35 years old. He claims to be a graduate of Harvard and the renegade member of a rich family. He admits Cline is not his right name, but will not talk of his past. He is an inveterate cigarette smoker.

Lind Warned to Stay on Warship.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VERA CRUZ, MEXICO, Sept. 16.—The booming of big guns on a Mexican gunboat in the harbor ushered in the independence celebration here to-day. Thousands of out-of-town persons came to Vera Cruz and mingled with the local celebrants.

It was feared that the United States warships in the harbor might have a bad effect upon the Mexicans and Special Envoy John Lind, the representative of President Wilson, was advised either to spend the day upon a United States ship or to keep indoors.

Francis Stronge, retiring British Minister, who arrived here from Mexico City in President Huerta's private car, sailed to-day on the Fuerst Bismarck.

It became known to-day that the presence of United States men of war in the harbors of the republic is repugnant to President Huerta and his advisers, and it is believed likely that steps will be immediately taken by the central government in Mexico to compel their departure.

SAYS FLETCHER FORCED HIM TO DECLINE

John W. Martin Arraigns Florida Senator in Card for Withdrawing His Appointment

JACKSONVILLE, Sept. 16.—John W. Martin, of this city, who was given the job of Collector of Customs here several months ago with a string attached to it and was then set aside in favor of Judge J. F. C. Griggs, of Apalachicola, in a signed statement to-day exposed the whole deal whereby he alleges United States Senator Duncan U. Fletcher double-crossed him.

Martin's statement is given to a local newspaper in reply to a Washington dispatch published yesterday, in which the Senator's side of the controversy was plausibly explained. He declares that after appointing him Collector of Customs for the port of Jacksonville, Senator Fletcher forced him to tender his resignation, by threatening to either withdraw his name from the Senate or have that body refuse to confirm him.

Martin further declares that Senator Fletcher's attitude resulted from the fact that the change in customs collection districts, by which Jacksonville became headquarters of the State, would automatically place him (Martin) in charge of the State. This chance of attitude by Senator Fletcher, he declares, gave him an opportunity after Sam Fletcher, a Tampa lawyer and a cousin of Senator Fletcher, had requested that former Mayor W. H. Frecker, of Tampa, be made customs collector. Frecker would appoint him (Fletcher) legal adviser at a salary of several thousand dollars a year, Frecker is a native of Canada.

Martin, who is president of the Jacksonville Salesmen's Association, and his hundreds of friends here are bitter over the treatment accorded him, and it is expected that the salesmen will wreak revenge upon Fletcher by voting for John N. C. Stockton to succeed him as United States Senator in the coming senatorial primary.

Self Help For Nervous Persons

Can often be achieved by a simple change of food and drink.

Much nervousness is caused by coffee drinking—eminent medical authorities having demonstrated that the coffee drug, caffeine, is a definite nerve poison to many persons.

Coffee has no food value whatever, and is a deceitful friend. Under its use the nerves first become irritated; then so sensitive and "on edge" that a slight variation from general health often appears most serious to its victim.

However, Nature responds quickly to common-sense treatment, and right living frequently does more than medicine. So, if you value peace and comfort, try this easy experiment.

Stop coffee entirely and have hot, well-made

POSTUM

This pure food-drink made from prime wheat has a Java like flavor and a fine dark brown color which changes to rich golden brown when cream is added.

It contains the genuine nourishing elements of the grain, but is absolutely free from the coffee drug, or any other harmful ingredient.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum must be well boiled.

Instant Postum is a soluble powder. A spoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a very palatable beverage instantly.

Thousands have been wonderfully benefited by using Postum instead of coffee—

WOMEN TO FIGHT ANTI-SUFFRAGE CANDIDATES

Georgia Association Plans Active Part in Coming Campaign for Legislature.

Preparations for the inauguration of a fight on candidates for the State Legislature who do not favor woman suffrage are being made by the Georgia Women's Equal Suffrage Association.

The work of lining up the suffrage forces in anticipation of the battle has begun, and the efforts of the suffragists and their men sympathizers will be directed toward the election of a Legislature that will give the women of Georgia a hearing at least.

The suffragists have not completed their plan of campaign, but definite announcement is expected within a few weeks. It is proposed to search out every candidate and force him to commit himself on the question.

To Fight Senator Stark.

Those who say they are in favor of woman suffrage will be given the indorsement and support of the suffragists; those who openly express their opposition or fail to make their position plain will be fought by the suffragists.

In view of the fact that Senator Stark, of the Thirty-fourth District, led the opposition to woman suffrage during the last session of the Legislature and prevented them from holding a meeting in the Senate Chamber, it is understood that the guns of the suffragists will be trained on him when he runs for office again.

The leaders of the "votes for women" movement have the names of several other State Senators and several members of the House of Representatives who will meet with opposition in their campaigns for re-election.

Several Candidates "Felt Out."

Several prospective candidates for the Legislature have been interviewed on the question, and, according to one of the advisers of the suffrage association, more than half of them have come out in the open as advocates of the movement.

These, when they announce, will be officially indorsed by the State Association and will be given the active support of the Georgia women and their sympathizers.

The suffragist leaders also are inaugurating a movement to organize in Georgia a branch of the National Men's League for Equal Suffrage, which now has branches in many of the States, especially in the North.

This campaign will be under the direction of James Lee Laidlaw, of New York, national president of the league, who will appoint a local representative to carry on the work. The national headquarters probably will send workers to Georgia to stir up enthusiasm and aid in obtaining members.

1,000 Members Expected.

Cards announcing the formation of the Georgia branch of the league have been sent out and more than 300 have been returned, signed by men who are willing to join the league and aid in the battle for the cause. It is thought there will be no difficulty in obtaining a membership of 1,000 within a year.

Georgia suffragists are planning a winter of activity, centering in Atlanta, by which they hope to bring their cause prominently before the people of Georgia. Several open meetings are planned, at which time there will be heard some of the most prominent advocates of suffrage in the United States. Among them will be Jane Addams, of Chicago, the noted head of Hull House, and Senator Robert M. LaFollette, of Wisconsin.

Watson Trial Set for Early Part of October

SAVANNAH, Sept. 17.—The case of Thomas E. Watson, charged with sending obscene matter through the mails, will be tried before Judge Foster, of the Circuit Court of Appeals at Augusta the second Monday in October, according to Judge William T. Newman, of Atlanta, presiding in the Federal Court here for this term.

Judge Foster, he said, had been named in the place of Judge Emory Speer, and there was little doubt the case would come to trial, as the Judiciary Department was very anxious to have it disposed of.

Fire Sweeps Keene Farm; Loss $100,000

LEXINGTON, Sept. 17.—Fire, believed of incendiary origin, early today burned the $100,000 clubhouse, ice plant and garage on David M. Look's Charleston stock farm, five miles from this city.

Mr. Look is a New York multimillionaire, who bought the Castleton farm from James R. Keene a year ago. Three months ago fire caused a loss of $50,000 at the farm.

"Wizard" Blames Vacation for Illness, and Will Try Different Sort of Rest in Future.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Thomas A. Edison, "wizard of electricity," was out of danger to-day and had so far rallied from his weak attack, following two weeks' vacation in Maine, that he was able to sit up. He declared that to-morrow would find him back among his bottles and instruments.

His rapid recovery is due largely, he thinks, to the nursing and painstaking care of Mrs. Edison and her daughter, Madeline.

They took command of the situation and personally prepared his food, allowing the nurses in charge to go.

"All that my husband needs," said Mrs. Edison, "is the personal attention that only Madeline and I can give him. We have decided that Dr. Bradshaw's orders for him to remain in bed for the present are to be carried out. It is not necessary to send him to a hospital or do anything we can not accomplish."

Mr. Edison has found that the only real rest he can thrive on is to be found in his laboratory, where he often spends 21 hours a day thinking over and working upon his inventions.

CITIZENS OPPOSE CLEMENCY FOR M'NAUGHTON

Governor's Desk Piled High With Pleas—Promises Hearing for Both Sides.

A protest against the action of the Prison Commission in recommending a pardon for Dr. W. J. McNaughton has been received by Governor Slaton from a mass meeting of Emanuel County residents. A telegram signed by several citizens of Swainsboro asked that the Governor delay action in the matter until both sides could be heard from.

The message was signed by a committee composed of J. F. Price, F. C. Branan, S. S. Moore, W. F. Thompson and R. L. Colson, and reads: "We are convinced beyond doubt that if this recommendation is heeded by his excellency it will directly foster and instigate lynch law, as men will feel no protection under the law, and it will ultimately lead to anarchy, which we know is a blot on civilization, and will impoverish us of justice and freedom which our fathers fought to establish."

Governor Slaton replied to the message, addressing his answer to J. F. Price, chairman of the committee, telling him that he would give a hearing in the case in a short while and requesting him to attend it.

A petition has been circulated in Swainsboro asking the Governor to decline the request for pardon, and will be sent to the Governor in the next day or two. It is also understood that a counter petition is being circulated.

Each day for the past week Governor Slaton has been studying the case and the date for a hearing will be set for the latter part of this week or the first part of next. Piled high on the desk of Executive Secretary Harry Ulm are letters, telegrams and petitions, either asking the Governor to pardon the condemned doctor or protesting against the delaying of clemency.

The date for the hearing will be set at the convenience of the attorneys.

MEN AND RELIGION BULLETIN NO. 78

PERSONAL LIBERTY

"You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."
---John 8:32.

"Her captor——was one
Of those whose passion was done,
A cold fierce worm of the sea——
What hangman shall wait his host,
Of butchers from coast to coast,
New York to the Golden Gate——
Lust-kings with a careful plan——"

CHIEF BEAVERS smashed their plan in Atlanta.

September, a year ago, he made it impossible for them in the Capital of Georgia to follow that trade which demands the seduction of girls.

He has done more; his success has taught that one fearless and honest official can end the reign of "lust-kings" in other cities.

Little Rock has followed his example.

Birmingham has notified the world that her houses of shame must go.

And last week the Mayor of the Capital of Texas, Austin, in directing that the red light district close October 1, pointed to the act of your CHIEF OF POLICE.

Cities and smaller towns seeing the work that he has done in Atlanta have thrown off the disgraceful yoke.

From Tacoma, Buffalo, San Francisco, Richmond, Nashville, Charleston, Mobile and other cities come pouring inquiries as to the work of your police force and its chief.

"Lust-kings" are aghast.

Their occupation of buying, defiling and selling girls and women will become a thing of the past!

They strive to stem the tide.

"COLD FIERCE WORMS" willing and anxious to enrich themselves by the sale of the souls of women and girls—these to-day are trying to poison your minds against your Chief of Police; IN THIS WAY they hope to destroy the discipline and efficiency of your police force. If word continues to go out that an honest Chief of Police having under him a body of honorable men can cope with "lust-kings" and their kind, WHAT WILL THEY DO?

They seek to undermine a man.

But not yet has the day dawned in Georgia—never will that day come in our State, when the criminal element can ruin a man simply because he loves honor more than gold.

Chief Beavers is safe. But our City and State have suffered.

God forbid that more damage be done!

The eyes of the world are upon the meeting of our Police Commissioners to-night—Wednesday.

You are not a fool; you know that neither the Chief nor any of the men under him oppose or knowingly interfere with innocent love-making in our parks; you are not blind.

And squids can not emit enough of ink to hide the truth or obscure the REAL ISSUES.

They are these—

For the third time charges have been preferred against one man now holding a captain's commission on the force. A second time the charges involve the relations of this man with women. Twice he has been cleared. If innocent, he should be cleared again. But this time he stands accused of improper conduct in one of our city parks where children play.

The man is married.

Chief Beavers suspended him.

What has this to do with the "lust-kings" and their plans? EVERYTHING. The Chief must have power to prevent the contamination of our children's playgrounds; if a married man, an officer of our force, offends, DUTY DEMANDS the more that the Chief remove him. If the Board should condone such actions upon the part of subordinates where would be the discipline of our force? Who would be responsible for the just contempt with which men would view the officers of the law?

And the plain-clothes men!

THEY WERE a part of the force before the Chief gave Protected Vice its death blow: the "lust-kings" and their friends forgot the existence of these men and THE INTEGRITY of the police force when they sneered:

"He can scatter evil. He can not control it. He will only make a mess."

But these men have handled the situation: they have controlled it.

Hence the effort to discredit them and take them away from the force—the attempt to cut off THIS EFFECTUAL ARM that has put the fear of God into the hearts of the pimps and panderers of the underworld and those whom these unspeakable creatures serve!

THAT FEAR will continue.

PERSONAL LIBERTY? God offers it: He has given it to you. Fear in the hearts of the white slaver and the "lust-kings" is not inconsistent with your freedom.

On the contrary, the liberty which you, your sister, your daughter and family enjoy is wholly dependent upon the fear of the law impressed upon those to whom honor and a woman's name are meaningless terms.

No man's personal liberty requires the sacrifice of the daughters and sisters of other men.

You will not be deceived.

"You shall know the truth."

The Police Board of the City of Atlanta will not play into the hands of the criminal element which infests every city in our land.

"The truth shall make YOU FREE."

POLICE FOES OF SPOONING TO BE PUNISHED

Majority of Board Seems Against Clack and Wetchel—Captain Norman Ready for Trial.

A good majority of the Police Commission has lined up on the side of Cupid in the fight to be staged at the special meeting of the commission Wednesday night, when the police policy on kissing and spooning will be determined.

Several members of the Police Commission, who were unwilling to be quoted before the hearing, declared that the officers who arrested the couples for spooning on the Capitol grounds either would be severely reprimanded, suspended or discharged. They said that the course pursued would depend upon the evidence.

The members of the "vice squad," Clack and Wetchel, who made the arrests, have prepared a written statement of what they saw. It is reported that this statement conflicts with the evidence they gave in the Recorder's Court. Recorder Broyles dismissed the case against one of the couples, and he will appear as a witness Wednesday night to state how nearly the evidence coincides with the evidence sworn to in his court.

J. O. Cochran, president of the Park Board, and Dan Carey, general manager of parks, both will appear as witnesses for Policeman Norman, who is charged with kissing a woman in Grant Park. They will state, it is understood, that Norman has been an excellent officer in the parks and urge that the case against him be dismissed.

On account of the long service of Policeman Norman the members of the Police Commission are inclined to be light with him. They state that if he is convicted his punishment won't be more than a short suspension. There will be a strong array of witnesses in his favor.

There will be other witnesses who will testify that they saw the patrolman kiss the young woman repeatedly in full view of passersby.

One of the witnesses is a woman. She has been subpenaed on the suspicion of being the woman Norman is said to have been meeting in the park. A plainclothesman is said to have witnessed a meeting between Norman and a woman and to have trailed the latter to a certain residence. The subpena was issued for the woman living in the house.

Five witnesses will be called by the commission to identify her as the one they saw with Norman. Two who will testify are plainclothesmen. The other three are citizens who are said to have witnessed the embraces.

The hearing was postponed from the regular session of the commission Tuesday of last week. He denies all the charges and declares the stories of misconduct have been circulated as part of a plot to discredit him and drive him of his position.

It is probable that the matter of the "spooning" arrests by Clack and Wechtel, plainclothesmen, also will be thrashed out at the special meeting Wednesday night. Reports will be submitted to allow the commissioners to judge whether or not the arrests were justified. One of the young men arrested on the Capitol grounds is expected to be present to tell his side of the story.

Auto Looters Active Again; Two Thefts In Broad Daylight

Automobile thieves renewed their activities Wednesday. Reports of rifling of two machines were made to the police. In both instances the thefts occurred in broad daylight.

Dr. L. C. Roughlin, with offices in the Candler Building reported that a pair of automobile gloves had been taken from his car while it stood in front of the Majestic Hotel.

Dr. Jacobs' Return Wednesday Awaited By Burns Readers

Dr. Joseph Jacobs is expected to arrive in Atlanta from New York Wednesday afternoon, after spending a honeymoon of several months in Europe. He has reserved rooms at the Piedmont Hotel and probably will make his home there a short while.

Dr. Jacobs' coming is awaited with interest by lovers of Burns and members of the Burns Association of Atlanta. Press dispatches from London several weeks ago told of his purchase of the famous Glenridden Burns manuscripts and though members of his family have denied that he bought the rare volumes, nothing has been heard from Dr. Jacobs himself on the subject.

Word was received at the Department of Justice to-day unofficially that Judge Speer will not sit on the bench during the investigation of his case.

Cheer Up! Sun Likely To Shine on Friday

Atlanta shivered with a continuance of the cold damp weather Wednesday. The mercury stood at 61 degrees at dawn, and had climbed only 6 degrees at 1 o'clock. Signs of winter were seen.

The sun has not been in evidence this week, and, according to the weather man, it is not likely to be seen before Friday. The prediction is that Thursday will be a cold and rainy day. A warm and pleasant week-end is promised, however.

Should Smith fail to make the additional bond Wednesday afternoon he can be re-committed to the county jail, from which he was released a few days ago when he made the bond of $3,000. That he will not go to jail in his present condition, however, was intimated by Deputy Miner, who made his home there a short while.

Deputy Miner understood Smith was very ill. The preliminary hearing set for Monday was postponed to September 24.

Woman Held as Aide In Hold-up of Trains

MEMPHIS, TENN., Sept. 17.—The police to-day believed that in the arrest of J. T. Miller and Helen Miller, a relative, they have the ringleaders of a gang of train robbers.

They were taken in a raid early to-day on information furnished by a farmer who was implicated in a plan to hold up a Mobile and Ohio train last Saturday near Jackson, Tenn. The plan failed because the farmer informed the authorities.

BEAUCHAMP SAYS HE IS AIDING HALL

City Tax Receiver Denies Report to Contrary—Not Worried About Losing Office.

George R. Beauchamp, City Tax Receiver, whose political activity during the last several weeks has attracted attention, Wednesday wrote the following letter to The Georgian in which he declared his support for Councilman Orville H. Hall, from the Third Ward:

"Editor Georgian:

"In your issue of Tuesday, September 16, there appears a statement to the effect that I am afated to be dropped from the office of City Tax Receiver by the Tax Committee when the election comes up in January. That statement does not trouble me, but the reason given in your article does.

Says Hall Is Able Official.

"This determination, according to your article, is due to my having been active in securing opposition to Colonel Orville Hall for re-election to Council from the Third Ward. Your article further stated that Colonel Hall had been my friend and helped me politically.

"I have had absolutely nothing to do with bringing out opposition to Colonel Hall, but on the other hand I am supporting him in his race. I have nothing but the kindest feelings for Mr. R. E. Jackson, who is opposing Mr. Hall, but on account of the splendid service rendered to the city by Colonel Hall, I feel it my duty to support him.

"I do not consider that I am detracting in the least from the candidacy of Mr. Jackson, but paying a just tribute to a splendid city official."

Hall Makes Statement.

Councilman Hall also issued a statement in which he declared that he had not joined the opposition to Mr. Beauchamp, and that Mr. Beauchamp was supporting him for Council.

"In voting for city employees I have been governed by their qualifications for the position rather than because of their political affiliances, and I intend to continue the same policy," he said.

Belle From Home of Tango Denounces It

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Miss Virginia Pasman, said to be the prettiest girl in the Argentine Republic, who is here as a guest at the third international congress of refrigeration, to-day denounced the tango in cold words.

"No proper person in Argentine dances the tango," she said.

BASEBALL LURES DR. PRESSLEY FROM PRACTICE

Matty Matthews Can Again Manage Newport News Team if He Desires.

RICHMOND, VA., Sept. 17.—Lure of the diamond may keep Dr. W. R. Pressley in the game a while longer, despite his announced intentions a few weeks ago to hang up his medical shingle in his native town of Due West, S. C., just as soon as he finished his term as interne at Jefferson Hospital, Roanoke.

After graduating from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in Atlanta a couple of years or so ago, the doctor determined to try his hand at professional baseball preliminary to buckling down to his chosen calling.

He made good in a jiffy, and as player-manager of the Roanoke Tigers in the Virginia League this season he succeeded in landing his team in second place.

Now, he is being urged to manage the Richmond Colts next season, and it looks as if the doctor will fall for the offer which was made to him Saturday following the close of the season. In fact, he has practically said that if he can obtain his release from the Roanoke hospital early next spring he will undertake the job. Roanoke is also anxious to secure his services again, but it appears that financial allurements in these parts are more attractive.

In addition to his managerial qualities, Pressley is a first baseman of no mean ability and is particularly strong with the stick.

STEVE GRIFFIN, who has managed Richmond the past two seasons, landing the club in third place on both occasions, is slated for manager of the Charleston, S. C., club next year.

PRESENT indications are that Purnon Perryman, who springs from a family of ball players down in Georgia, will also wear a Colt uniform next season. John McGraw has relinquished all claims on him, it is understood, thus leaving Perryman free to go where he pleases. He finished the past season with Roanoke in fine form. He was with Richmond last year, and it was because of his excellent twirling here that McGraw got a string on him.

Perryman has finished his college work and announces that he will winter in Atlanta. He expects to take a ministerial course at Vanderbilt later.

GRAY, Norfolk's clever short fielder, will probably be with Atlanta or Mobile next season. At least, it is reported that both those clubs are after him.

HARRY MATTHEWS, well-known throughout Southern balldom, is receiving congratulations on all sides for the way he lifted Newport News' Shipbuilders out of the pit into fifth place.

When Matthews took charge of this club under the wire, the team had nineteen losses to its credit, with not a single game on the other side of the column. He will manage Newport News again next season if he wants the job. Matthews' work behind the bat was particularly noteworthy.

Can for C. Dooin Predicted Next Year

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17.—Charley Dooin will not be manager of the Phillies next year if a man more competent to fill the bill can be found. The owners of the Philadelphia National League team are quietly hunting for a new manager.

After hunting all over for a new leader the choice appears to have dwindled to Hank O'Day, former Cincinnati manager, and Otto Knabe, second baseman of the Phillies.

Dooin's contract expires at the end of this season, and he acknowledged to-day that he had not been tendered a new contract. He also said that he knew nothing of the plans to refrain him.

The friends of Dooin are preparing to take up the cudgels in his behalf, and they will demand that he be retained to give another trial to make good and bring a pennant winner to Philadelphia.

Old Joe M'Ginnity Still Is 'Iron Man'

SEATTLE, WASH., Sept. 17.—McGinnity, the former "Iron man" of the Giants, has already won one Northwestern League record. He has participated in 83 games up to and including the games of last Wednesday. That beats the records made by the older old-timers.

He had scored the greatest number of wins, 21, and still look at his total bases on ball? For a total of 246 innings, 43 full games, he has granted only 62 free tickets to first base.

Young Ahearn Wins From Bert Fagan

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Bert Fagan, California middleweight, made his first appearance East in a 10-round bout with Young Ahearn, of Brooklyn. Although Fagan conceded seven pounds to his opponent, he outfought and outpointed the Californian in every round but the first. In this session a heavy right to the heart almost knocked Ahearn to the mat.

VARDON LEADS OPEN GOLFERS; LOW SCORE 151

BROOKLINE, MASS., Sept. 17.—A fresh group of distinguished golf stars will take the field in the play for the national open championship and the scores of such players as McDermott, Ray Smith, Travis, Anderson and Travers will be awaited with much curiosity. The play is drawing much interest here.

The elimination rounds yesterday and to-day split up the stellar field into two sections. Of the forty-odd pair that started yesterday 33 finished with a score of 170 or under. The balance of the field will go through the same eliminatory test to-day, 33 more qualifying, or 66 in all. These will comprise the championship division, which will play to-morrow and Friday.

Edward Ray and William Reid meet to-day in the second qualifying round and their play will attract much interest. Harry Vardon, the British golfer, showed best in the qualifying round yesterday, beating Frank Quimet 151 to 152.

SNODGRASS WILL GET CHANCE TO REDEEM ERROR

By Sam Crane.

FRED SNODGRASS, the Giants' center fielder, will no doubt be on the regular team that plays against the Athletics in the coming world's series next month.

While neither McGraw's nor Mack's club has an absolute cinch on the pennants of the National and American Leagues respectively, still both the Giants and Athletics have such a commanding lead over their closest rivals that they are acknowledged contestants for the coming battle for the gonfalon emblematic of the baseball supremacy of the universe.

Possibly no player was more unpopular or reviled than was Snodgrass after the last world's series. He had lost the Giants the championship by making one of the most costly errors ever known in the history of the national game. The muff he made of an easy fly cost not only himself and his fellow players more than $1,500 each, or the difference between the winners' and losers' end, but also caused the changing of hands of an amount of money wagered on the result of the series the country over that may have been up in the millions.

McGraw Has Faith In Him.

But while time has smoothed over the pangs of abuse showered on the head of the unlucky player, Manager McGraw has been from the very time of the accident never lost faith in the Californian and in the height of all the roasting and knocking against Snodgrass came out publicly on the vaudeville stage and said he did not blame him in the least, and that he would be a member of the Giants again this year.

McGraw has frequently announced that Snodgrass is the gamest player on the Giants' team and when it is taken into consideration that on the very next play after he had made the historical muff that Snodgrass made about as grand a catch as the entire series produced, McGraw's opinion is probably correct.

Anyhow, Snodgrass will be given the chance this fall to redeem himself, and while he has as yet failed to make good in any post-season series he has been a Giant, still I think he will go to the front this year and come to his own, as did "Red" Murray after his batting slump in 1911.

Fielding Well Now.

Snodgrass has played a better fielding game this season than he ever did as a youth, while he has a record of opposing batters has been superb and he has covered more ground than any center fielder in his league. He has been doing this day after day, too, for it is no flash in the pan. His throwing has improved, too, and his running at times has shown much better headwork. He seems to have scratched out those "bone" plays that were the giant's fault and insinuedly aggravating.

There is no player with McGraw who will take more daring chances, and as McGraw has succeeded in taming his do-seen individuality, he does better team work and is consequently more value to his club than heretofore.

Snodgrass' batting this season has not been uniformly good, in fact, his hitting has been erratic, but none of the Giants have been batting very steadily. "Snod" did get on a splendid spurt on one Western trip and he won many games during it. He is very liable to "come back" with the rest of his fellow players with their batting and when they do bat all together Snodgrass will be there with the wielding sullog as often as any.

At any rate, Snodgrass can be relied on to be out there fighting to the last drop of good hat. He will never quit or weaken.

Majors Draft Three From Rome Team

ROME, Sept. 15.—Philip Utley, Carlos East and John Cochran, the three star players of the Rome baseball team, have been drafted by the major leagues. Utley and Cochran go to the St. Louis Americans and East to the Cincinnati Nationals.

World's Series Players

SNODGRASS OF GIANTS

THE GIANTS' CENTER FIELDER.

Snodgrass, whose famous error in last year's world series lost a game for the Giants, will have a chance to redeem himself this year.

FODDER FOR FANS

Demaree, the youthful pitcher of the Giants, and Humphries, the Cub recruit who are battling for leadership among the old league pitchers, grappled yesterday to a 0-0 draw, which ended in the fourth stanza because of rain.

* * *

Heinie Zimmerman, the belligerent third baseman of the Cubs, came mighty near establishing a record for himself yesterday by pulling four complete innings of baseball without once passing the umpire or being chased from the ball park.

* * *

"Slim" Caldwell, the Yankee pitcher, hurled a nine game yesterday and deserved a victory, but his mates again failed to deliver hits at the proper moment and the game went to the Tigers.

The Naps lost to the Athletics yesterday in a ten-inning game, giving the Cleveland's a record of seven defeats in the eight games which they have played on their final Eastern invasion.

The Naps-Athletics game yesterday was considerable of a farce. The Naps batted three pitchers against the Quakers, who used four against the Clevelanders. The contest was a see-saw affair, characterized by loose fielding and "baseball" pitching.

Walter Johnson was at his best yesterday and as a result the Senators triumphed over the White Sox, the victory placing them only one game behind the second-place Naps. Johnson allowed six hits and fanned eleven batters.

The Yankees next year give promise of being one of the speediest teams in either league. Chance has gathered together an aggregation of recruits who are lightning fast both on the paths and in fielding. Chance hopes to keep them in first division form during the season.

Tris Speaker, the Red Sox slugger, made another big gain on Jackson and Cobb, whom he is trying to overhaul in the race for clubbing leadership in the big league. Speaker got three hits in five times up.

The Red Sox defeated the Browns in a 5 to 4 game yesterday, scoring the winning run in the ninth inning after two were out.

The Reds and Phillies divided a double-header yesterday, the Chicago winning the first game 4 to 3 in a ninth inning rally that sent two runs across the plate. The second fray went to the Phillies 4 to 0, due to the fine pitching of Mayer, former Cracker.

Charlie McDonald, who was quietly bought for the Braves, has been released to the Rochester club, although McDonald was the batting leader in the National League with .359 for 70 games.

The race for the pennant in the International Leagues has developed into a thrilling one. A month ago Newark led by a wide margin. Then they began to slump and at the same time the Rochester club began shooting along like a comet and the result is that Newark now leads Rochester by only one and one-half games, or a matter of 16 points. The season closes Sunday.

The crowd that witnessed the fourth inning game between the Cubs and Giants yesterday totaled just 439. Most of them were relatives of Demaree, the Giant twirler, whose home is near Chicago.

* * *

Garry Herrmann, the boss of the Reds, refused to be gold-bricked. He paid $15,000 for the release of Pitcher Mc-Morgan fly the Kansas City club. Morgan reported with a lame arm. Garry appealed to the National Commission and that body ruled that Morgan was to be returned to the Kansas City club, which was to return Garry's $15,000 and reimburse him for all expenses incurred in the deal.

A BASEBALL ORGAN IN FRANCE.

That baseball has at last "come to stay" in France is demonstrated by how fast that game now has its official organ in the French language, "Baseball," the object of which is to popularize the American national game in France and to instruct English-like players in the rules of play. This new sporting paper, which is issued monthly, price 20 centimes, is published by the Union Francaise de Baseball, 71 Rue Rochechouart, Paris, which organization will furnish any information required concerning the game in France.

$1,000 - R GILBERT M.

JACKSONVILLE, ILL., Sept. 17.—Gilbert M., the last of Morgan County's high-priced harness racing horses, was sold to-day by Scott Green to W. H. Winslow, of Taylorville, for $1,900.

KILBANE GIVES JIMMY WALSH GOOD LACING

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—Johnny Kilbane, of Cleveland, successfully defended his featherweight championship crown at catch-weights before a large crowd at the Atlas A. A. here last night. Jimmy Walsh was completely outclassed. Kilbane knocked the local boy down with a right-hand smash to the jaw in the tenth round and would have knocked him out for Walsh hanging on. Referee Jack McGuigan, of Philadelphia, awarded Kilbane the decision.

It was the third bout between the two men, and the first decision at any of their meetings. Walsh was apparently much lighter than Kilbane, and fought defensively most of the time. Without offering a very strenuous offense, Kilbane scored minor points in nearly every round. Walsh did not land half a dozen blows up to the tenth. Then he started an attack of left and right swings, several of which found their mark on Kilbane's body and neck. The champion, aroused, rained blows upon his opponent, and one right uppercut sent Walsh to the mat. He was apparently dazed for a second or two but, sparring for time, waited during a count of eight and straightened out for action. Kilbane rushed him, but was stopped by the bell.

Except for the twelfth round, this was the only extended series of punches throughout the fight. In the closing sessions Walsh became the aggressor, but Kilbane checked all but a few of his efforts, then himself took up the attack and scored two punches to Walsh's one in the last two minutes of fighting.

During the early rounds Kilbane made some futile swings around Walsh's head. Never was the Boston boy's defense, but occasionally the blows landed. One with the left hand caught Walsh over the right eye in the third round and made him wince. Another landed under his ear in the fifth. In the seventh Kilbane crossed a right to the jaw followed it up with several light lefts, and Walsh, at a loss entirely to evade the blows, slipped to the mat. It was not a knockdown.

Capt. Emerson Wins Nev. Trophy Match

SEAGIRT, N. J., Sept. 17.—Captain George H. Emerson, of Ohio, with a total score of 143, won the Nevada trophy match, shooting at 200 yards, while Lieutenant Robert Sears was second, with 140.

Cross and Rivers Are Matched for October

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 17.—It was announced to-day that negotiations for a 20-round bout between Leach Cross and Joe Rivers, lightweights at Vernon, October 7 or 14, virtually had been concluded.

Cross and Rivers have twice battled to a draw. This will be the first boxing contest at Vernon since the Willard-John Yeng match, which was followed by the arrest of Jeffries.

CLABBY TO FACE PETROSKEY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—Jimmy Clabby, the Milwaukee middleweight, and Sailor Petroskey have been matched for a 20-round fight here on the night of October 3. The men will weigh in at 158 pounds at 5 p. m.

CINCINNATI BASE HITS.

"I make three hits," Joe Tinker said;
"three solid, healthy blows.
I walloped Myers on the jaw and
Sweeney on the nose,
And Maranville they tell me still is lying comatose."

"It must have been a gladsome sight
to see you spilling gore,
But tell me," I besought him, "what was the final score?"
"We scored five knock-outs," answered he, "and Boston got but four."

Still, managing the Reds is enough to make any man feel like starting a rough house.

We note by the batting averages that Maranville is improving in his hitting. But reports from Cincinnati indicate that he can't hit in the same class with Joe Tinker.

Speaking of hitting, Ray Demmitt is the leading batter in the International League. If you ask an International League pitcher about it he will say: "Yes, Demmitt!"

The report that Connie Mack has offered a college pitcher $15,000 in real money leads one to suspect that the recent losing streak has affected his mind.

Arthur Pelky now arises to state that Tommy Burns is the acme, the ne plus ultra and the e pluribus unum of all that is square in the boxing game. The said statement has the unanimous approval of Tommy Burns.

Messrs. McGoorty and Klaus were matched in Milwaukee a few years back, but when McGoorty took one look at Klaus he became violently ill. He recovered immediately after the match was amputated.

It is said that George Stovall wants his unconditional release from St. Louis, but a man ought to be satisfied with any kind of a release from St. Louis.

Boxers in Wisconsin will have to be on the level or keep out of the State. Wrestlers are congratulating themselves on the fact that there is no wrestling commission.

YOU CAN'T TELL THESE DAYS.

"I was a long and dreary game;
The players lorfed and stalled
As if they all were halt and lame
And wished that time were called.

"Oh, let us leave this place," said I;
"This game is on the blink.
I know a quiet place nearby
Where we can get a drink."

"Oh, let us stick around some more,"
A friend replied to me.
"For they may start a fight before
The game is done," said he.

LINES BY CONNIE MACK.

The gladdest words of tongue or pen
Are these: "The Naps have lost
again."

It seems that the sole object of the Nats is to cause champions to lose sleep, in this particular they resemble Chick Evans.

As we understand it, the only White Sox who will take part in the Sox-Giants tour are James J. Callahan and Charles A. Comiskey.

With Ad Wolgast out of the game and Jess Willard in the hands of the constable, poor Tom Jones has been deprived of all visible means of support.

Reports from England lead one to believe that the Disturber is not creating any great disturbance.

And yet I wouldn't take the job held

SOX-GIANTS TOUR TO COST BIG FORTUNE

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—One-half of the money to cover the transportation of the globe-girdling tour of the White Sox and the Giants from Vancouver to Port Said has been delivered into the keeping of the steamship company which has contracted to carry 75 tourists to the Far East. Several weeks ago the first installment—$11,200—was paid by President Comiskey, of the Sox, and Manager McGraw, of the Giants. At a recent meeting of these baseball men yesterday another check was written for $11,200. On October 10 the third and last payment of $22,400 will be made, the total amount, $44,800, to be applied toward the expenses of the party to Port Said.

That this colossal undertaking is one in which a fortune must be expended to carry out the plans laid down by the promoting forces is evident from the fact that both Comiskey and McGraw will be required to write additional checks for $100,000 more to defray expenses from Port Said through the last laps of the world tour. Advance Agent Bunnel, who was in Europe, has attended to this detail, and will have the necessary transportation in hand before the "pilgrims" alight in Egypt.

According to information advanced by President Comiskey there will be 50 persons in his party when the baseballists sails from Vancouver November 19. The New York delegation will number 25. Each tourist's fare on the long expedition will amount to at least $1,500, as the officials have determined that there will be countless minor expenses. Each player making the trip will be assessed just this amount to guarantee his appearance on the ship, but the money will be refunded when the steamer lifts anchor in the harbor of Vancouver and puts out to sea.

Hammond Tourney Last at East Lake

The golf tournament for the T. A. Hammond trophy, the qualifying round of which will be played at East Lake Saturday, will bring the Atlanta Athletic Club's golfing season to a close.

Players will qualify according to their score, and club handicaps will also apply in the match play. The first and second rounds of match play must be played by September 25, the semi-finals by September 27, and the finals by September 28.

MORE WHITE HOPES MEET.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Jim Savage, "white hope" of Utica, N. Y., is the name, will meet in a ten-round bout tonight. Kendall claims a record of eighteen straight knockouts.

The Social World

Miss Julia Meador, whose marriage to Mr. Thomas Walker Palmer, of Miama, Fla., on Saturday evening, will be one of the most interesting social events of the season, is being tendered a series of parties.

Mrs. Charles P. Byrd was hostess at an informal tea Tuesday afternoon at the Piedmont Club, in honor of Miss Meador. Tea was served from a large round table, prettily decorated with Killarney roses, pink shaded candles, and decorative details in pink and white.

Miss Leewood Oglesby, of New York, who is Miss Meador's guest and will be bridesmaid at the wedding, was a special guest present, both she and Miss Meador wearing smart afternoon toilets. Mrs. Byrd wore, with a skirt of white ratine, a coat of pink and a large pink hat faced in black.

Invited to meet Miss Meador were Miss Leewood Oglesby of New York, Miss Sallie Cobb Johnson, Miss Grace Thorn, Mrs. Charles D. SAY PARTEE SHOT IN SELF-DEFENSE

Witnesses Tell Grand Jury Jackson Killing Was Justified—'No Bill' Asked for Newt Lee.

That W. D. Partee, a locomotive engineer, who on July 23 shot and killed Samuel Jackson, another engineer, in the yards of the Georgia Railroad, acted in self-defense was the testimony given before the Fulton County Grand Jury when it met Tuesday morning.

J. W. Hix, of Etowah, Tenn., an eyewitness to the shooting, testified that Jackson cursed Partee and then attacked him before the latter drew his weapon and fired the fatal bullet. Other witnesses were J. F. Jordan and R. H. Morris.

Partee has been out on bond. His attorneys seek to have a "no bill" returned by the Grand Jury.

Attorneys for Newt Lee, the Frank trial witness and one-time suspect in the investigation of the slaying of Mary Phagan, appeared before the Grand Jury at its morning hearing to ask that a "no bill" be returned in the negro's favor that he might be cleared entirely.

VETERANS DONATE FOR PHAGAN SHAFT

Marietta Campp Joins Trainmen in Plan to Erect and Unveil Monument Memorial Day.

The members of the United Confederate Veterans, Camp No. 765, of Marietta, Ga., have joined with the Atlanta Lodge, No. 270, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, in the movement to raise funds for the erection of a monument to Mary Phagan, who was murdered in the National Pencil Factory on April 26.

At the last meeting of the camp the veterans voted unanimously to take $5 from the camp treasury and devote it to the fund, and a sum of 25 cents was assessed against each member. Forty dollars was raised in less than an hour. George S. Owen, a member of the famous Eighteenth Georgia Regiment, was named treasurer of the fund, and authorized to accept donations.

Expressing the willingness of the veterans to co-operate with the railroad men in the movement, J. Gid Morris, commander of the Marietta Camp, has issued an appeal to all lodges, organizations, churches, Confederate Veterans' camps and private persons to join in the movement to erect a suitable memorial to the little girl who gave her life for honor. It is requested that all donations be sent to Camp No. 765, P. C. V., Marietta, Ga.

Mr. Morris is preparing to call a meeting of the railroad men, veterans and all others raising funds for this purpose at his home in Marietta on December 16, when a committee will be named to select a design for a monument and make arrangements for its erection and unveiling on Confederate Memorial Day, 1914, the first anniversary of her death.

These Are the Silks for Fall

Here, in Atlanta, at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company's are the silks that such dress-wizards as

Paquin	Bichoff
Callot	Doucet
Agnes	Worth
Zimmerman	Lucile
Mayer	Premet
Rondeau	Jenny

have stamped with the mark of distinction. They have used these silks this season—have made them into the models that set the fashion for Fall. This is the "Sterling" mark of silks. The words in this pen can not tell their beauty. It remains for your eyes and your "color sense" to appreciate them—and so now with the wealth and novelties of the silk world to show you, we invite you now to the Silk Section and its surprises and beauties.

Season after season our Silk Section harbors the silks of fashion—Atlantans know this, but Atlantans do not know what it offers this season and can not until they have visited it.

Modern and Semi-Oriental fabrics in designs and colors—the recent art movement with its "queer" figures and bold splashings of colors and the picturesque Oriental patterns and blendings of color vie with each other for your favor—one time they are reflected in high-piled fabrics and again they are lissome and limp as a gossamer—and still again they are combined.

Here—

Voile Velour Brocade—a voile of the substance of a humming bird's wing weighted with a heavy velour brocade—in colors.

Ratine Voiles—Great "rough" patterns scattered over a silk voile.

Crepe Broche—the beauty of the supplest silk crepe with a raised velvet florals.

Crepe Faille, in a more weighty fabric it would be termed corded. A fabric to fit in with the draped styles of the season.

Velour de Laine—a novelty of the corded fabrics and at the same time of the pile fabrics.

Moire Renaissance—a poplin moire that has been brocaded—new.

Charmeuse Matelasse—the winding matelasse patterns on a ground of shimmering charmeuse.

Moire Charmeuse—As the name implies, a rippled effect on this soft fabric.

And so we might go on telling of the fabrics, the Oriental and Dresden vestings (important themselves in the fashions), the pebble back and the serge back charmeuse, the uncut velvets, the costume velvets, the crepe meteors, the crepe de chines, the embroidered chiffons and the wonderful robes with their gold and burnished and silver ornaments—we might tell much of these fabrics that lift our Silk Section to its commanding eminence. But we would rather you see them, their exquisite texture and their colors—among which are these novelties—

POMEROY DENIES COMPANY F IS TO DISBAND

Several Members Who Capitulated to Debutantes Will Not Enlist, However, Declares Colonel.

Colonel F. E. Pomeroy of the Fifth Regiment, National Guard of Georgia, Wednesday emphatically denied that Company F, the Fulton Blues, would disband.

Colonel Pomeroy was shocked at the intimation that the military has lost the romantic charm in the report that the young members of the company, the very Beau Brummels of Atlanta, were going to quit because they could not spare drill nights from their rounds of the theaters, dinner parties and dances.

"The gilt and glitter of the military is just as alluring and inspiring to-day as it was when Alexander the Great marched through Persia, or Caesar made triumphant entry into Rome," he said.

Military Real Protection.

"Some people don't seem to realize it, but our army and navy are the only real protectors of our lives, liberty and happiness. Did you ever stop to think if it were not for the military foreign troops might be landed at Brunswick, marched straight to Atlanta and The Georgian office burned to the ground?

"Lots of people don't seem to thinz such things possible. They ought to talk to Governor Colquitt, of Texas.

"But there has been no lessening of the feminine admiration for the military. That's as permanent as the service of the military. A brilliant uniform still is the surest way to a woman's heart. What woman would not rather rest her head on the manly bosom of one who would shed his blood for his country than to lean lightly on the arms of the champion turkey trotter.

Admits Some Will Quit.

"Some of Atlanta's young Lochinvars are making a serious mistake." Colonel Pomeroy admits that a number of the members of the Fulton Blues will not re-enlist when their two-year terms expire in December. Captain Harrison Jones and Lieutenant George W. McCarty, Jr., already have resigned. Captain Jones is to be married. Lieutenant McCarty's increasing business duties demand more of his time.

The rank and file of the company, though, are charged with yielding to the lure of the debutantes. The admission of Colonel Pomeroy is this: If they would give a little more attention to attracting feminine attention to themselves rather than being attracted by the charming young women they would not be so quick to quit, and that their social careers ultimately would be more successful.

Recruits To Be Obtained.

Lieutenant McWhorter is expected to remain in the company along with about 20 of the 60 members. Recruits to bring it to a normal company will be obtained, Colonel Pomeroy explained that a larger number of this company fell short on the two-year enlistment than in the average company, and that, therefore, it was not unusual that a large number should fail to re-enlist.

Colonel Pomeroy himself soon will resign on account of the press of his law business. He, as both colonel of the regiment for five years, Lieutenant Colonel Orville H. Hall is said to be slated to succeed him.

Military enthusiasts advise all who doubt the charm of the soldier life to gaze upon Colonel Hall the next time he comes down Peachtree street in a parade on horseback. They say he has the poise of an old Roman soldier, and it is certain that he has the finest set of whiskers in Atlanta.

Poet, too Proud to Take Aid, Starves

CLEVELAND, Sept. 17.—Rather than lower the dignity of art by accepting aid as a charity patient, Richard De Vinez, poet and scholar, and said to be a graduate of Cornell University, died of starvation beneath a tree in a vacant lot in Cleveland. Persons who identified the body said that De Vinez had just recovered from pneumonia and that he had beggared himself to pay the hospital bill.

"I'm living under the trees," he told one as he declined proffered aid. Under the trees they found him.

Court Holds Beating Of Convicts Illegal

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 17.—Declaring that the Constitution does not permit guards to whip convicts, Judge Charles M. Cooke, in the Wake Superior Court, to-day interrupted argument of counsel for the defense and charged the jury that if they believed Dan Gallagher, a convict, who subsequently died, was whipped, the jury should find J. M. Nipper and Jim Johnson, two guards, guilty.

The jury was out only five minutes and returned a verdict of guilty. Fines of $20 each were imposed and an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court.

HOME FROM LAW MEET.

Hamilton Dodgson, Jr., instructor in public and appellate practice in the Atlanta Law School, has returned from St. Paul, where he attended a conference of law instructors.

'NATIONAL FIELD' MAKES ATLANTA MAIN OFFICE

Farmers' Union Head Arranges for Publication of Official Paper of United States Organization.

Atlanta is to be the headquarters of what is expected to develop into the greatest agricultural paper in the United States—the official organ of the National Farmers' Union, which will make its first appearance on the first Thursday in November. The new publication, which will be called The National Field, will be a weekly, and will start with a circulation greater than that of many farm journals which have achieved great success. The number of pages and the size of the paper will be determined largely by future developments and the reception it receives from the farmers.

The publication will be edited, compiled and published in Atlanta, and will be sent to its readers through the Atlanta postoffice, swelling the postal receipts that have already made Atlanta, with its large number of trade journals and other publications, one of the greatest second class mail centers in the United States. The new paper will be circulated generally throughout the United States and will cater to the needs of farmers all over the country instead of one particular section.

Farmers' Union Head Founder.

The National Field is to be started by the Farmers' Union and maintained and published as one of the activities of that organization for the betterment of the tillers of the soil. Charles S. Barrett, of Union City, Ga., president of the union, together with A. C. Davis, national secretary, and other officials of the company, has been in Atlanta several days making arrangements for the publication of the first issue. They have closed a contract for printing and publishing with a prominent Atlanta printing house, and are now looking for a location for the executive offices for the editorial and business staffs as the final details of their work.

"We expect The National Field to become the greatest farm paper in the United States," said Mr. Barrett. "It is an enterprise backed by the union, and our decision to start it followed an exhaustive investigation by which we came to the conclusion that an official organ for the union is necessary.

3,000,000 Possible Patrons.

"The union now has more than 3,000,000 members, and while we do not expect all of them to become subscribers to our new paper we feel sure that enough of them will subscribe to enable us to carry out our plans and make The National Field the best paper of its kind in the country.

"We intend to spare neither pains nor expense to make the paper what it should be. It will be a farmers' paper, pure and simple, and first of all it will be a paper for the members of the Farmers' Union. We have just completed the employment of the strongest editorial force that money can obtain. The men who write for The National Field will be experts, men who know what they are talking about, and whose opinions are worth listening to. We expect to fill the paper with information particularly interesting to the farmer and all the information gathered at the union headquarters for the betterment of the condition of the farmers will be transmitted to its members through the columns of the official paper."

Mr. Barrett came to Atlanta from Salina, Kans., where he has spent several weeks on business.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

At the Forsyth.

That the Forsyth bill this week is one of extraordinary interest is best evidenced by the fact that the attendance records are being broken. The Big City Four score a hit. Theatergoers who like a good dramatic effort will enjoy the offering of Mme. Bason and her company. Bernard Reinhold and his company win many laughs in the presentation of their sketch, showing how "Hoffmeister" made his daughter marry the man of her choice. It is a delightful bit of comedy play. Ida Brooke Hunt sings herself into popularity and the Metropolitan Trio are popular because they are clever.

"A Man's Game."

Kethe Williams in Owen Davis' play, "A Man's Game," is scoring a real success at the Lyric Theater this week. The play is really one of exceptional power, and every demand of its lines is met by Miss Williams and her company.

The story is of intense human interest. The company supporting Miss Williams is good throughout. Edwin Walter, as the husband, is natural, the part seems to suit a splendid stage presence and a good voice. Harry L. Dobson as the newspaper does good work, and special mention must be made of W. A. White, as Rita Carleton and Frank Hetson, for their very impersonation of the roles assigned to them. Matinees will be given on Thursday and Saturday.

At the Bijou.

The cordial reception that has been given "A Man of Mystery" this week at the Bijou promises one of the big successes of the Jewell Kelley engagement, and unless all signs fail the week will break all previous records at this company. "A Man of Mystery" is a detective play, sensational in parts, thrillingly dramatic, telling a story that holds one with interest, and the various characters as portrayed by the Jewell Kelley Company are interesting.

"New Clothes" Is the Cry Now

And the Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. Ready-to-Wear Department Answers With Suits, Dresses, Skirts and Coats That Are Indeed New

To assemble such vast stocks of suits, dresses, skirts and coats and to see that each separate garment has about it some style point (and always true worth) is no mean undertaking. That it has been successfully consummated is a matter that you may prove to your own satisfaction.

"New clothes" at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co.'s are new, delightfully new and captivating. To tell you how is a task that balks the advertising pen and leads it to the commonplace of asking you to see---for this you must, if you would know just how varied and charming the new fashions are.

There is a scope and breadth to this display that lends finality to choice.

It is true of the simple and inexpensive things, just as it is of the elaborate and gorgeous creations ---for one is as much a part of this store's business as the other---and both are done with characteristic thoroughness---as instanced by

The New Silk Dresses at $11.98, $16.95, $19.75 and $25

Dresses that come in for much service these early fall days.

Materials are poplins, crepe de chines, Canton crepes and charmeuse—but the material is only one of the charms. You will marvel at the varied—and, in every instance, graceful—ways that the skirts are draped, at the daring of the genius who combined colors shown in sashes and girdles and big bows at the front waist, and then again at the usually soft and "fluffy" waist—laces and nets and chiffons set off with tiny bows.

New Skirts at $6.50, $7.98, $8.75 and $11.98

Their vogue is pronounced—that is, the vogue for such skirts you will see here—in New York it amounts to a rage.

They are smart—the "Scotchiest" of Scotch plaids are used, rich but soft toned colors showing dark green, navy, purple and dark red in wonderfully effective combinations, and then matelasses are used. The models are draped and some are very wide at the hips—all with raised waist line.

The New Woolen Dresses at $5.75, $10.00, $15.00, to $25.00

A display calculated to meet all demands that the women of Atlanta could make.

It begins by showing at $5.75 little serge dresses that the college-going Miss will need for general wear, rather simple and very neatly made. Then come the eponges and matelasses and wool crepes in navy, Copenhagen, Russian and olive green, mahogany and black, and new trimming ideas that show in sashes, collars, yokes and the new lines—skirts very wide around the hips, and narrow at the bottom. All are draped.

New Coats at $10.00, $12.50 and $15.00

The especially fine coat news to-day must concern the new sport coats.

They are in a word jaunty.

Young folks will like them.

Boxy affairs that, in length, strike just above the knees. They are worked out in chinchilla, polo cloth and loose diagonals—big collars, some are belted. India red, Russian green, dark rose and Copenhagen are the favored colors.

Atlanta will quickly adopt them now.

At 48c $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 Aprons, white, several styles, daintily trimmed; they are 48c because they are a bit soiled.

At 49c $1.00 and $1.25 Brassieres, lace and embroidery trimmed. So priced because they are an odd surplus.

THE GREATEST STORY OF ITS KIND SINCE JULES VERNE

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Ethel, still in her splendid wedding gown, sat on a low divan playing with the famous Rosy Diamond that hung around her neck and gazing thoughtfully at the wonderful andirons in the cold fireplace. Allan paced the room listlessly for a few moments, then he lit a cigarette and made as if to sit beside his wife, but she waved him away with a little smile.

"No, sit there—facing me—that's it. I want to talk to you."

A look of puzzled interest came to his face, and then for the first time that day he smiled, naturally. It was a rather wan smile, but it was sincere, and Ethel appreciated it as such.

"Is it necessary that I face you? Couldn't I give you a sort of side-front?" he inquired as he took the big chair she had indicated.

"No, because this is going to be a frank and friendly face-to-face talk," she replied gently. "Listen, my dear. There are a few important things that we have to talk about—or don't have to, according to the way in which we look at life. It seems to me better that we should talk about them—and avoid misunderstandings later."

Her Scheme.

Allan looked at her with new interest and sat forward in his chair in an attitude of attention.

"I don't know what you are driving at, Ethel," he said, quietly, "but I'll follow your lead. Go ahead."

She sat with her hands folded in her lap, looking down at them for a few moments in silence. Then she raised her eyes and looked full into his.

"I don't want you to be unhappy, Mac," she said, gently. "No; now you must not interrupt—let me finish, please. I said this was going to be a frank and friendly talk, and I don't want you to say nice things at the expense of frankness."

He flushed slightly, and bowed.

"I don't want you to be unhappy, Mac," she repeated, in the gentle, quiet voice in which she had begun the conversation. "Indeed, it is the dearest wish of my heart that you should be happy—as happy as is humanly possible. If there was ever a man who deserved it, it is you."

He remained silent, as he had been bidden.

"I think you know me well enough to give me credit for understanding that you do not love me. Oh, yes, I know you are very fond of me. I know you care for me more than for any other woman in the world, but that isn't saying a great deal. I don't think you care for any other woman at all." She said this without bitterness, as one stating a fact.

"What I am telling you is an outline of what hundreds and thousands of women do all of the time, but they are never frank enough to say so. I would be considered a traitor to my sex if it were known that I had been frank about it. I know that you do not love me, and yet I am not base enough to think, and I know you are not base enough to have married me simply as a matter of power and money. I know that in many ways I am very dear to you—more so than you think, because you have felt called upon to pretend that I am dearer than I really am. I have taken these things into my mouth because I want to keep what I have—and I know that the way to lose it is to force you to pretend that I have what I have not—your love.

"I have no claim on your wholeheart—I haven't any right to claim it. I knew that when I proposed to you. Oh, you did the talking—you went through the necessary formalities, but you know and I know that I married you because I wanted to, and you had very little to do with it."

She paused for an instant. His eyes were on her face with a strange, fascinated look. It would not have been necessary to forbid his interrupting. He was without the power of speech.

"So you must not shame me with pretenses, dear, not sully the purity of what you can honestly give me by glossing it over with lies. I will ask nothing that you cannot give with all honesty. I will be happy to be with you a little every day as I have been.

The Truth.

"It should be a comfort to both of us and surely make for the happiness of our future to drop our masks this once, my husband, and talk without concealment. You do not know me—I know that you don't. When you do, things will be different. I am calm enough to believe that, I have played a part to win a thing that I wanted—and I have won. It was necessary—even in this sort of game there are conventional rules. But the game is over now, dear, and the serious business of winning happiness—which is not a game—has begun. That's why I want to tell you everything—from the beginning."

She played with the marriage ring on her finger and went on in the detached manner of one relating an impersonal history.

"I liked you immensely from the first time I saw you—do you remember?—the night that Jack Rivers brought you to see father. Then you made a tremendous impression on father, and I liked you even more than ever; and I came to admire your business, your work, your energy, your courage.

The Terribl Day.

"It seemed to me that I had none of these things. I had more money than any one could possibly need. The world had given me that and told me to be happy with it. I had never met a man who was not making a tremendous inventory of father's fortune all the time he was murmuring nice things to me. I know I am not altogether unlovely, and if it hadn't been for all this money some man might have seen something in just me; but the money frightened off the real men and the other kind I couldn't have anything to do with.

"In sheer boredom I got to taking an interest in father's affairs and so discovered that I had a talent for finance. He always said that it was because I never took money seriously.

"But I considered dollars so many markers in a game. I played the game for its own sake until you came along with your tunnel project. Then, for the first time, I took a real interest in life. It appealed to all the best men and the other kind

NEW AUTO PATROL FILLS CITY PRISON

Desire to Ride in Luxurious Car Reason for Many Offenses, Police Believe.

It was an unusually gay crowd of Darktown denizens that peered through police station bars Wednesday morning.

They had been hauled to the prison in the night in Atlanta's handsome new automobile patrol, which went into commission Tuesday afternoon. The police say they believe some of the passengers actually were glad they were arrested.

R. Lester Reed, who says he is a piano tuner from Holly Springs, Miss. and who was the first prisoner to ride in the new auto, however, frankly admitted to the police that he is not proud of the distinction. Reed was arrested by Detective Rosser near the City Hall on the charge of soliciting alms.

Chief Beavers and Police Commissioner C. R. Garner, chairman of the committee that purchased the new patrol, were its first official passengers, and expressed themselves as delighted with it. The car is a combination patrol and ambulance, being equipped with a stretcher and other essentials. It also is supplied with a heater, assuring comfort for drunks and other cargo in the coming winter months.

Another auto of exactly the same pattern is being built for the police department and is expected in Atlanta within the next three weeks. This will give the department two brand new cars. The machines cost $2,500 each.

William D. Alexander, local manager of the truck department of the White company, drove the new car on its first trip to show the police drivers how to handle it properly.

29 GRADUATES AT PHARMACY SCHOOL

Dr. Daniel Congratulates the Students Who Work Their Way Through College.

Expressing admiration for the manner in which many of the students had fought their way through college, the Rev. Charles W. Daniel addressed the graduating class of the Southern College of Pharmacy, whose commencement exercises were held Tuesday night at the Atlanta Theater.

Twenty-nine young men composed the class. They came from Georgia, Alabama, Florida and Cuba. The school is one of the largest pharmaceutical colleges in the South and holds two sessions a year. The next session begins October 1.

"Upon you rests a great distinction, for the world owes much of its progress to the laboratory man," said Dr. Daniel. "I can not help but admire the manner in which many of you have literally fought your way through school, for while some have faced the necessity of paying their educational expenses as well as earning a living at the same time, I am informed that each of you has received excellent marks. This should give each of you something to be proud of in the years to come."

Degrees were conferred by Thomas H. Jeffries, president of the board of trustees, while the invocation was offered by the Rev. A. R. Holderby.

BANK ASKS CHARTER.

Application for a charter for the Farmers and Merchants' Bank of Cleveland, White County, was received by Secretary of State Phil Cook Wednesday.

COBWEB GOWNS FAIL TO CHARM SCHOOLGIRLS

Board of Education Has No 'Back to Eve' Garb Problem on Its Hands.

"Boards of education in other cities may be having trouble over High School girls dressing in extreme or immodest styles, but the Atlanta board is perfectly satisfied with the way the school girls here dress," declared Colonel Walter R. Daley, president of the Board of Education, to a Georgian reporter Wednesday.

"Our Atlanta girls are too well trained at home and have too good an example set them at school to go to ridiculous extremes," continued Colonel Daley." Both the Girls' High Schools here are entirely free from foolish competition in dress, and the board has never heard a single complaint.

Desire Culture, Not Fads.

"The girls realize that frivolity and lessons do not mix, and they are more anxious to acquire an education than to follow the fads and fancies of modern fashion.

"I am sure no set of schoolgirls look neater or sweeter than ours. We have as fine a looking lot of girls as any school in the country, and every one always looks nicely and sensibly dressed. I notice that in Los Angeles, Kansas City and other places the boards of education have had to pass rules against the girls wearing silt skirts, tight gowns, bobbie dresses and other extreme styles. I am sure such a problem will never confront the local board, and, anyway, we are not going to worry about it until we come to it."

Girls Show Democracy.

"Schoolgirls should not try to outdress each other. A public school is supposed to be democratic, and while all people can not be born equal as far as brains and family are concerned, the schoolgirl should not try to more forcibly impress upon her less fortunate schoolmate the difference in their station in life by far outdressing her.

"The Girls' High School graduated fourteen fine young ladies last June, and all had their graduating dresses made exactly alike. That was true democracy, and doubtless many a young girl was saved a heartache over the fact that her dress was not as pretty as the other girl's. Again I may say that Atlanta has a sensible, modest lot of schoolgirls, and the Board of Education is proud of every one of them."

Red Gleams of Hope at Georgia

But Gloom Supplies Black Enough

ATHENS, Sept. 16.—The Georgia football squad, augmented by several new recruits, started its second week of training yesterday by spending the afternoon in the gymnasium, the rain keeping them off the field. There are on hand to date, with the opening of college only a day off, 28 candidates, and the arrival of almost every train boosts the Red and Black gridiron stock.

The prospects last week were gloomy indeed, with hardly an old man on hand of real merit, and but few of the new ones wearing anything that savored of a varsity look. However, the arrival of Crump, Conyers, Thompson and several other last year "near champions" is causing a gleam of light to penetrate the gloom in the vicinity of Sanford Mead. There is still anything but a scintillating halo of prospects greeting the makers of football history for the season of 1913.

COACH CUNNINGHAM was with the squad for the first time yesterday afternoon, and he was given a cheering welcome, but the absence of so many of the counted-on and necessary players is causing much worry. Paddock still is to be lured from his home in the City of Churches, and seems extremely eager to be close enough to the Polo Grounds to see New York and Philadelphia tussle for the baseball title of the world. Malone is unaccounted for. "Big John" Henderson has been overdue a couple of days, and, despite reports, Conklin, the hard-tackling end who made the touchdown that won the Auburn game last year, has failed to show any inclinations to return. So it seems that Georgia is to have as much trouble rounding up her players as in rounding out a winning team.

DONALD M'KINNON, who saw service under McHugh at Michigan two years ago and was in college last year, blew in from the celery farms on the Michigan shore yesterday, and looks to be in great shape. He weighs 190 pounds. Wingate, from the Third District Agricultural School, has matriculated, and looks like a 200-pound guard. The Smith brothers, the "Delaware Twins," from Riverside, Roy and Ralph, are two nervy 150-pounders working for ends, while Thrash, from Gedron, and Howard McWhorter, a brother of Bob, look like pounding back fodder. Other new men who look fairly well are Petree, from Powder Springs; Sidberry, from Riverside; Davidson, from Monticello, and Owen, from the Cavalry.

ARTHUR DELAPERRIERE, center of the 1911 team, has decided to re-enter Georgia this year, it is reported, and will arrive to-day from Winder. This will give Cunningham a good outs to take Covington's place, and if he can find two guards to replace Lomas and Peacock he will have a fairly good line, with Delaperriere at center, Malone and Henderson at tackle, provided they return, and Hitchcock and Crump or Conklin at ends. Conyers has subbed at guard for a couple of seasons, and since he weighs 200 pounds, will be no slouch at this position.

It is too early, though, to be shaping up a probable line-up, and too many men expected are missing. That old maxim that a bad beginning augurs a good ending is giving more than one Athenian courage as to gridiron possibilities just now.

FODDER FOR FANS

The fight for batting honors in the American League has now developed into a three-cornered one. While Cobb and Jackson, who have been battling for leadership all season, have been in the throes of a slump for the past month, Tris Speaker, the Red Sox slugger, has been rushing along like a rifle bullet and is now only a few points in the rear.

* * *

The Phillies and Reds lashed ten innings to a 2-2 tie yesterday, the duel ending on account of darkness.

Russell, the White Sox twirler, who has been the Chicagoans' mainstay for the box all season, grappled with the Senators yesterday and coated them with whitewash.

Larry Doyle, the Giants' slugger who has been in a batting nearly all season and now has a clubbing average of about .370, is trying to make good his promise to finish the season over .300. He annexed three hits in six times up yesterday.

Those scrappy Cubs forced the Giants to go thirteen innings yesterday before they submitted to defeat. With the Cubs two runs in the rear in the ninth inning, Vic Saier pulled out a home run, sending Phelan across the plate ahead of him. The Giants scored a run in the twelfth and Saier did likewise. The Giants added another tally in the thirteenth, but Saier didn't get a chance to bat in that inning, so the Giants grabbed the game.

The Cub rooters were up to some of their old tricks yesterday. They never did have a very great fondness for Umpire Bill Klem, and when Bill gave a couple of decisions that seemed to favor the New Yorkers the Cub fans began pegging lemons in Bill's direction. They went even further; they called Bill names, the one name that always makes Bill just awfully mad. In days gone by Bill has chased players out of the lot who murmured such a name in his direction. Bill could not very well chase the spectators away, so he had to grin and bear it.

The Braves and Pirates split a double-header yesterday. The Braves took the first game with a ninth inning rally that netted them three runs, while the Pirates annexed the second game aided by the timely hitting of Honus Wagner, who made three safeties in four trips to the plate.

The Tigers defeated the Yankees in a ten-inning game by batting out two runs in the ninth inning, giving them a 7 to 6 victory.

The Red Sox had rather a tough job yesterday defeating the Browns.

The Naps and Athletics met yesterday in the second clash of the final series of the season and the Athletics nabbed the game. They got four runs in the third and the Naps got six in the fourth. From this point the Clevelanders were held scoreless, while the Athletics managed to score four more tallies.

W. H. HRUCE, Secretary.

Ot Course It Had To Be Bizzy---"Big League" Was Written All Over Him

PREDICTED DRAFT OF R. BISLAND WELL DESERVED

By O. B. Keeler.

SO it is Rivington Bisland, after all Of course—

Every time we lamped that lad there was the sign "Big League" all over him.

We were sure Bizzy would be taken from us, and we predicted it, and repeated the prediction.

It couldn't be helped, even if anybody could be born sport enough to want to see a grand player kept out of a big league berth.

But it DOES seem rather tough on Bisland, at that.

The Browns have got him.

TWELVE clubs had drafts in for Rivington.

That's how the Big Show regarded The Best Shortstop in the Southern League.

So the Hon. Nat. Com. put all the twelve names in a hat—probably a Kelly belonging to Augy Herrmann —and then Secretary Bruce, performing somewhat after the fashion of Little Jack Horner, put in his thumb and pulled out a plum—for the St. Louis Browns.

That's the way the Hon. Nat. Com. works.

Congratulations, Messrs. Browns.

AF that, it isn't so bad for Bizzy.

With the Browns, the youngester will get the chance to jump in with a fine little splash and begin reeling off the dazzle stuff.

Bobby Wallace—grand old Scot—is about done. He has been at it a long time—longer probably than any other player in the American League.

And Bizzy is slated to be the man in the shoes and the chances are all in favor of his being the man in the breeches, too, no matter how tight.

BISLAND came to the Crackers from the Pirates late last spring for some more seasoning. As a matter of fact, that wasn't the reason. Bizzy had a fine little job with the Pirates, being understudy to Hans Wagner.

Fine chance—what?

And since Bill has chased players out of the lot who murmured such a name in his direction, Bill could not very well chase the spectators away, so he had to grin and bear it.

NOW there will be some wise geeks jumping up with a roar that Bisland should have been "covered" and thus preserved to the Cracker box of 1914.

By "covering" is meant the delicate process by which a ball player is sold by a minor league club to a major league club, with a sort of invisible string tied to him. This preserves him from the drafting process, and presumably wrenches him back to the old stamping ground when the next season rolls around.

Now, why wasn't Bisland covered?

WITHOUT posing as the announcer for the Atlanta club's directorate, we don't mind hazarding a bit of a guess.

The management of the Atlanta club wouldn't have been doing the square thing by Bisland.

Bisland is good enough for a try at the big league game, at the very least.

That brilliant fielding ability of Bisland's—that disposition to hit in the pinches—that smooth, swift action—All that is Bisland's capital in life.

Of course, Bisland is ambitious. He wants to play in the Big League. He wouldn't be a true ball player, else.

Then there's the money part of it —for it must be remembered that Bisland's capital is his baseball ability.

LOOKING at it that way, what would you think of a ball club management that would craftily seek to hold a great player in a minor league, when he had the chance to play on any one of a dozen big league clubs?

Exactly. Our idea, to a dot.

IF we had to make any criticism of the Atlanta management in the handling of the Bisland matter, it would be for the reason that only the meager draft price was realized for one of the greatest minor league shortstops to go up in recent years.

Corriden went from Kansas City, and Tobeau got Del Drake and Tex Covington and "Tillie" Walker for him—the latter, by the way, being good enough to go up this year in a whaling big trade with the Reds.

And Corriden never saw the day he looked as good as Rivington Bisland has been looking the last two months.

IT does seem the Atlanta club should have been able to get a nice trade in players, with maybe some money on the side, for Bisland, instead of merely the draft price.

Certainly the drafting process showed Bizzy was in demand in many quarters.

BUT let's let that "cover" thing die out naturally.

It's an idea unworthy of Bisland's value, and unworthy of the Atlanta club's attitude toward its players, which attitude has been uniformly generous and praiseworthy.

THE Agler incident is proof of that contention.

Joe was "covered" last year, and everything worked out satisfactorily. But this year Joe blossomed forth after the fashion of the mellifluous manola, and it became a question of whether Joe should waste any more of his fragrance on the desert air—desert being used as a comparative term, when Joey could get $100 a month more from Jersey City, with an extremely good prospect for going right over to take up a job with an American League club.

The Atlanta club, bound by its salary limits, couldn't pay Joe what he could get in Jersey City. Jersey City was willing to pay a fair price. Joe probably would have been drafted, anyway. So the fair thing to do was to sell him—to give him the chance to earn more money.

A little expose of these things doesn't hurt the game any. Rather, it improves the flavor.

AND, by the way, suppose we just slip one to Messrs. Callaway, Ryan et al. for that little job of handling the Agler business.

The Crackers got Iron men to the extent of $3,000 for Joe, selling him, bag, baggage and secondhand first baseman's mitt, to Jersey City.

Just about the time Joe gets to J. C., Detroit mails him in the draw at the draft price of $2,500.

Rather tough on Jersey City—what?

NORTH CAROLINA TEAMS START WEEDING OUT

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 16.—With the first games of football only three weeks off, the coaches of the four North Carolina institutions whose students participate in the game begin to-day to weed out the candidates for the first teams.

The season will open at Chapel Hill October 4 with Wake Forest College against the University of North Carolina and in Raleigh on the same day with the men from the United States training ship Franklin lined up against the team from the Agricultural and Mechanical College here.

Never before in the history of the sport have the State's two leading institutions the University and the Agricultural and Mechanical College, made such elaborate preparations for the season. Carolina has four coaches, Doggie Trenchard being head coach, and Tol T. Pendleton, Thomas A. Wilson and Arthur Bluthenthal, all former Princeton stars, as his assistants. The A. & M. College has Eddie Green, a former Pennsylvania all-American, and Jack Hegarty, the famous Georgetown player. Trenchard was also a Princeton all-American in his day.

A REPORT from Chapel Hill to-day stated that Coach Trenchard had as many as 80 candidates on the field in a single day, but that the weeding out process would start this afternoon. Of last year's team, Captain Abernethy and six other varsity players are back, and good men have come from other institutions. None of them have made their debuts, however.

At the Agricultural and Mechanical College 40 men are working for the team. Seven old men are back and a dozen promising players have reported. Van Brocklin, formerly end with Georgetown, has joined the squad. The prospects are bright here for a successful year.

Wake Forest and Davidson Colleges promise fight but fighting teams this fall.

OF chief interest in North Carolina will be the game here Saturday, November 15, between Carolina and the A. & M. College. This will be the first time the football elevens have met in seven years. The Farmers have tied the University three times in fifteen years, but have never been able to score a victory. Both teams will train especially for this contest and enthusiasts from all parts of the State will come here to back their patriotism and judgment.

The season will close with the Thanksgiving Day game, Carolina will go up against its ancient rival, the University of Virginia, and A. & M. will meet Washington and Lee at Norfolk. As is usually the case, Tar Heels will invade Virginia soil in large numbers for these contests.

THE records of football teams at both Carolina and A. & M. have not been brilliant for the past several years. The University has lacked coaching and the A. & M. teams have not had the speed necessary to winning contests. The Farmers however, have shown better in action than their neighbors in Orange County.

Charley White Stops Sheridan

Can Beat Ritchie, Says Expert

By E. J. Geiger.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—If that Charley White person of this city ever gets a chance to trade wallops with Willie Ritchie, and negotiations are now under way, look out, Ritchie. Charley again demonstrated his wonderful ring work when he knocked out Mickey Sheridan in the second round of what was to have been a ten-round go. A left clip to the jaw that traveled no more than four inches brought his heavier opponent down with a crash and it was ring down the curtain.

Sheridan has been in the ring five years and has fought some pretty tough boys. In all that time he has never been knocked off his feet. The boys agreed to do 138 pounds at 6 o'clock. Charley weighed 128 and Sheridan 135 when the battle began.

Cool and collected, White spent the first three minutes judging his opponent. Then scarcely had the second round opened when he whirled Sheridan around and sent in the left. White to-day is the best boy at his weight, and if he doesn't beat the champion when they meet, I'm ready to buy the drinks.

Charley comes mighty near being a second Joe Gans and the only regret hereabouts is that Packey McFarland is too big for him. Those of us who have watched White and Packey in gym work are free to admit that in science, speed, cleverness and ring generalship, the little Hebrew has it on the Irishman. He sure has it on him in the kick and by a big margin.

If Ritchie gets here for an October match, he can get it without trouble.

Not Much to Story Of Patten Protest; Tech Gets Another

So far as could be learned at Tech headquarters this morning there appears to be nothing to the story emanating from Sewanee to the effect that Gene Patten, of Chattanooga, the celebrated prep school halfback, will be declared ineligible to play with Georgia Tech by reason of his having received pay for coaching a high school team at Jasper, Tenn., last year.

Coach Heisman was reticent, having, as he said, not sufficient information to warrant him in referring specifically to the charges said to have been made by "Jenks" Gillem and Manager Gass, of the Sewanee team.

Another good prospect arrived yesterday from Chattanooga, Senter, captain and tackle of the University of Chattanooga, a man standing well over six feet and weighing close to 200, is a baseball and basket ball star as well as crack football player.

While Others Were Fast Asleep, Mrs. Sanders Would Often Get Out of Bed an' Do Sewing.

Cadiz, Ky.:—"I was in a terrible condition, caused from nervousness," says Mrs. Boon Sanders, of this place. "At times, last spring and summer, I did not get any rest at night; could not sleep at all. Very often I would get out of my bed and do some of my sewing, while the rest of the family were fast asleep.

"One of my lady friends advised me to take Cardui, the woman's tonic. Just as soon as I commenced taking it, I began resting better. After taking four bottles, I now feel better, and get perfect rest and plenty of sleep. I am doing every bit of my housework now, and although I am small, I feel very strong in every way.

"You may publish this letter if you wish, and I hope all women, who suffer as I did, will try Cardui and get relief."

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT

Ethel, still in her splendid wedding gown, sat on a low divan playing with the famous Rosy Diamond that hung around her neck and gazing thoughtfully at the wonderful andirons in the cold fireplace. Allan posed the room hastily for a few moments, then he lit a cigarette and made as if to sit beside his wife, but she waved him away with a little smile.

"No, sit there—facing me—that's it. I want to talk to you."

A look of puzzled interest came to his face, and then for the first time that day he smiled, naturally. It was a rather wan smile, but it was sincere, and Ethel appreciated it as such.

"Is it necessary that I face you? Couldn't I give you a sort of side-front?" he inquired as he took the big chair she had indicated.

"No, because this is going to be a frank and friendly face-to-face talk," she replied gently. "Listen, my dear. There are a few important things that we have to talk about—or don't have to, according to the way in which we look at life. It seems to me better that we should talk about them—and avoid misunderstandings later."

Her Scheme.

Allan looked at her with new interest and sat forward in his chair in an attitude of attention.

"I don't know what you are driving at, Ethel," he said, quietly, "but I'll follow your lead. Go ahead."

She sat with her hands folded in her lap, looking down at them for a few moments in silence. Then she raised her eyes and looked full into his.

"I don't want you to be unhappy, Mac," she said, gently. "No, now you must not interrupt—let me finish, please. I said this was going to be a frank and friendly talk, and I don't want you to say nice things at the expense of frankness."

He flushed slightly, and bowed.

"I don't want you to be unhappy, Mac," she repeated, in the gentle, quiet voice in which she had begun the conversation. "Indeed, it is the dearest wish of my heart that you should be happy—as happy as is humanly possible. If there was ever a man who deserved it, it is you."

He remained silent, as he had been bidden.

"I think you know me well enough to give me credit for understanding that you do not love me. Oh, yes, I know you are very fond of me. I know you care for me more than for any other woman in the world, but that isn't saying a great deal. I don't think you care for any other woman at all." She said this without bitterness, as one stating a fact.

"What I am telling you is an outline of what hundreds and thousands of women do all of the time, but they are never frank enough to say so. I would be considered a traitor to my sex if it were known that I had been frank about it. I know that you do not love me, and yet I am not huge enough to think, and I know you are not huge enough to have married me simply as a matter of power and money. I know that in many ways I am very dear to you—more so, then you think, because you have felt called upon to defend that I am dearer than I really am. I have taken these things into my mouth because I want to keep what I have—and I know that the way to lose it is to force you to pretend that I have what I have not—your love.

"I have no claim on your whole heart—I haven't any right to claim it. I knew that when I proposed to you. Oh, you did the talking—you went through the necessary formalities, but I knew and I know that I married you because I wanted to, and you had very little to do with it."

She paused for an instant. His eyes were on her face with a strange, fascinated look. It would not have been necessary to forbid his interrupting. He was without the power of speech.

"So you must not shame me with pretenses, dear, nor sully the purity of what you can honestly give me by glossing it over with lies. I will seek nothing that you cannot give with all honesty. I will be happy to be with you a little every day as I have been.

The Truth.

"It should be a comfort to both of us and surely make for the happiness of our future to drop our masks, once, my husband, and talk without concealment. You do not know me—I know that you don't. When you do, things will be different. I am vain enough to believe that, I have played a part to win a thing that I wanted—and I have won. It was necessary—even in this sort of game there are conventional rules. But the game is over now, dear, and the serious business of winning happiness—which is not a game—has begun. That's why I want to tell you everything—from the beginning."

She played with the marriage ring on her finger and went on in the detached manner of one relating an impersonal history.

"I first saw you immensely from the first time I saw you—do you remember?—that night that Jack Rives brought you to see father. Then you made a tremendous impression on father, and that interested me more than ever, and I came to admire your highness, your work, your energy, your courage."

The Terribl Day.

"It seemed to me that I had none of these things. I had more money than any one could possibly need. The world had given me that and told me to be happy with it. I had never met a man who was not making a transparent inventory of father's fortune all the time he was murmuring nice things to me. I know I am not altogether unlovely, and if it hadn't been for all this money some man might have seen something in just me, but the money frightened off the real men and the other kind I couldn't have anything to do with.

"In sheer boredom I got to taking an interest in father's affairs and he discovered that I had a talent for finance. He always said that it was because I never took money seriously—that I considered dollars so many markers in a game. I played the game for its own sake until you came along with your tunnel project. Then, for the first time, I took a real interest in life. It appealed to all the latent force there was in me—and it was natural that the author of the appeal should come in for his share.

"You gradually became the biggest thing in my life. I knew that I could never be that to you. I knew that you never had a thought of any sort in you save one. But I found a secret joy and pride in the fact that I was helping a big man do a big thing.

"And then—then came that horrible—that horrible day, and—oh, how I suffered for you and with you! And in the days that followed, before you went away and when you returned, I loved to believe that you needed me, ever so little, and that I could help you and cheer you a little. Was I—did—could I? Just a little, dear?"

Her great deep eyes had grown misty and were looking into his with a pathetic yearning. She seemed to have grown a child again.

"God knows it!" he murmured hoarsely.

"And—since then—I—I have tried to make you love me. I knew you suspected me of some double-dealing about father's coming to your aid in that last crisis. It wasn't entirely for you thought. Father wouldn't have helped you, me, and—and I did want you to know that I had not sold you for the power or help you. I wanted you to want me.

"Don't think that this feeling was all primitive and pagan, my friend. It was far from that. We women are for the most debarred from the opportunity of doing really big things. If we have money it is just that much more difficult. Then we can only help—from the beginning. So we are forced to do big things vicariously—through some man that we love, or—through his children. I love you—and I have never in the past year or so attempted to conceal that even from you, much less myself. I love you because you are what you are—a big-minded, courageous man, made to do and think big things, and I want to feel that I, too, have done big things, even if I must know that I have done them through you. Do you understand?"

"Yes," he said, in the same husky voice.

"I know that you do not love me in the way I want you to love. I'm going to try to win that love. I will know when I have succeeded, dear—if I succeed. So till then we need have no pretense. And—and—I—guess that's all."

Her quiet self-possession suddenly died. Her face and neck and bosom turned a deep red and she covered her face with her slender fingers. The next instant he was kneeling beside her, with unseeing eyes and a tight throat.

"Domine, non sum dignus," he breathed in a fervent, broken whisper. "Lord, I am not worthy."

His bowed head touched her knee. She looked down, her eyes swimming, with unshed tears, and stroked his hair lightly for a moment or two.

"I am tired, dear," she whispered. "I'm going now. When you're ready Henderson will show you to your apartments. Good-night, beloved!"

He drew back enough to permit her to rise, but he felt that it would be rebellion to look upon her face at that moment. She stood over him a lingering instant and he reverently kissed her hand. He did not rise until the sound of her footsteps had died away and the rustle of her gown was lost in the whispering babble of the fountain in the hall.

New Life.

"ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND men wanted!"

They came—as if in response to a call to arms. The great farms of the West and the Canadian wheat belt sent in their armies as fast as the harvests were gathered home. The mines gave up thousands, attracted by the bigger wage scale. And even the hungry soldiers of industry were drawn to Tunnel City, as if by a giant magnet. The scattered regiments of the gigantic enterprise were rallied once more.

And so it was all over the world, from Germany, England, Belgium, France, Russia, Italy and even the far-off hamlets of Central Asia the army of labor was concentrating on the construction cities. These dead places woke again. At night the great glass-covered power houses threw their cold-fire lights against the skies. The great columns of smoke and dust rose as before. The ironwork of new buildings pushed their gaunt and ugly skeletons up into the sunlight, swarming with busy little ants. The Tunnel cities trembled, yelled and roared as of old.

And in the first rush of this new life the announcement was made that Lloyd and his associate had guaranteed the financial backing to complete the tunnel at any cost. Then, like a live thing, the tunnel drew in deep breaths and pulsed with life from end to end. In the galleries drills and riveters were chattering and thundering. Allan's great rock-devouring machines hurled themselves against the barriers with renewed strength. Strike, explosion, the dread of flood and fire—all were forgotten. The tunnel builders had struck their old tremendous pace. And, as of old, men dropped and died in the terrific heat and strain and were carried out and forgotten.

The Tom's River-Bermuda section was the first conquered. Five years after work had been resumed the two borings met under the Atlantic. An exact had been the calculations of Allan and his aides that there was a horizontal difference of only 22 feet and a vertical difference of 31.

Thirteen months later the double galleries with the monorail tracks, bedded down and the whole right of way incased in its solid shell of concrete and steel were ready for operation.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

The Victim.

"Yes" said the solemn-faced man, "it would not be so finally if the whisky business should be wiped out."

"Are you in the liquor business, sir?"

"No, no. I'm a temperance orator."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WAIT FIVE YEARS

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 21 and am very much in love with a girl of 20. She loves me very much, and we could gladly marry, the only obstacle being a clause of her father's will, which states that she will lose her legacy of $2,000 if she marries before the age of 25. She letting to lose the legacy, but am hardly bring myself to the int of letting her make the sacrifice. ANXIOL

Her father's last wish was it she should not marry under the age 25, and she must consider that. Ugh no legacy attached.

The five years of waiting what be long if you sincerely love ch other, and I trust you love h much you will insist after marria that her little fortune remain nom ally hers and not be dribbled a on rent and board.

IN A DIFFICULT PLACE.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My girl friend and her frien and my friend and I have been t the habit of going out togethe Her friend seems to pay more at tention to me than he does To her She noticed this and mentioned t to me, and I said it was not my fault. We have worn each other's rings for years and have been dear friends. She asked me for her ring and gave me mine. As she is a dear friend to me, and as I do not wish to win her gentleman friend, will you kindly advise me how I should act toward him?

H. L. L. T.

Avoid future plans that include a four of you, and if this is not alway avoidable devote yourself to your own escort and treat her escort coolly.

Do not, I urge, lose this girl's friendship if you can help it. She is jealous, naturally, and may not be have normally, but I trust you will be broad enough and kind enough to remember this and cherish no resentment.

Her Soldier Dad.

Mrs. Johnson was all excitement. Her husband was a Gordon Highlander and she had an invitation to visit him in barracks in Scotland.

"You'll soon see daddy now," she said to her 6-year-old little daughter as the express bore them to their destination.

On arrival at the barracks Mrs. Johnson was informed that her husband was on sentry duty. One of the soldiers pointed him out to her, but, of course, they could not approach him. The child eyed her daddy with big round eyes full of wonder as he paced up and down the square, rifle on shoulder, in his regimental kilt.

"There's daddy!" cried the mother.

The child, however, was too lost in the amazing spectacle to answer, but at last it came out.

"Mamma," she said, in a childish treble, but with a strictly confidential air, "if daddy finds the man who stole his trousers will he give me that bickle frock?"

Up-to-Date Jokes

"Atkins," said the sergeant angrily, "why haven't you shaved this morning."

"Aint I shaved?" asked Atkins, in apparent surprise.

"No, you are not," insisted the sergeant, "and I want to know why."

"Well, you see, sergeant," replied the soldier, "there was a dozen of us using the same mirror, and I must have shaved some other man."

"How does Darling stand in this community?"

"Yes."

"Why, he makes about as much noise in this community as the letter 'h' does in 'debt.'"

American Citizens Are Slaughtered and the Civilized World Scoffs

Mexican authorities are "investigating" the case of one hundred American refugees from Torreon, including women and children, who fell into the hands of rebels while proceeding overland from Saltillo. This "investigation" is being made at the polite request of the American Embassy. A polite request is all that the American Embassy is permitted to make when American citizens in Mexico are threatened with the same dreadful fate that has befallen so many of their fellow countrymen there.

A few Japanese are killed in China, and Japan demands an apology and full reparation. Japan is but a fraction of the size of China, yet such a demand promptly results in an apology and full reparation.

Americans are killed in Mexico, American women are outraged and ALL THE REPARATION OUR GOVERNMENT EXTENDS IS BLAND ADVICE TO THOSE WHO HAVE NOT YET BEEN KILLED TO LEAVE THE COUNTRY, IF THEY ARE ABLE TO DO SO. The case of the one hundred refugees now in the hands of murderous bandits proves that not all of them may be able to do so—alive.

The Democratic party is destroyed and THE VERY NAME AMERICAN IS DISGRACED BY SUCH PEDAGOGIC PUSILLANIMITY.

The comic papers of the world are making us the butt of their jokes. And, what is worse, hostile nations and inimical individuals are making us the object of their insults.

It is SAFE to pick on Americans. IT IS SAFE TO KILL AMERICANS. It is particularly safe to murder and mutilate American women and children. The American Government HAS NO CONCERN FOR SUCH THINGS. Its pedagogue and its demagogue have no concerns for anything but postoffices, political spoils and Carnegie pensions.

A United States Senator living in a border State and familiar with the indifference to the lives of Americans in Mexico—an indifference that apparently is shared alike in Mexico and Washington—said recently:

"A Mexican can kill an American in Mexico or can commit worse outrages on Americans, but our Government will not interfere unless, while in the act, he says: 'I am doing this solely because you are an American citizen.'

"And I am not at all sure," added the Senator, "that it would not be necessary for the Mexican to notify the Secretary of State that he committed his crime as an act of hostility against the United States Government before we would bring ourselves to interfere with him."

EVERY DAY BRINGS NEWS OF FRESH AND MORE TERRIBLE OUTRAGES, AND STILL NOTHING IS DONE.

"The pedagogue lampooned by Punch must put his fanciful English theories into injurious operation. The demagogue must make his money-grubbing circuit tour of the chautauquas," as the Vossische Zietung puts it.

MEANWHILE, AMERICAN CITIZENS ARE SLAUGHTERED, AND THE CIVILIZED WORLD SCOFFS.

White Slavers and the Mann Law

The conviction of Diggs and Caminetti in San Francisco has been promptly followed by a secret attempt on the part of gentlemen of the same stripe to repeal the Mann White Slave Law, which has proved an effective means of punishing the crime that such persons make their profession. Alarmed by the prospect of being interfered with by the law, this gang has started a dangerous raid on the law which threatens them.

Their business being criminal, they will brook no interference with it. Not only is this apparent in the effort now being put forth to repeal the Mann Law, but it is perfectly evident in the legal farce that has been made of the pursuit of Harry Thaw.

For seven years Thaw has been hounded by a gang of fashionable white slavers who object to their operations being interfered with, and who have the usual pull that all white slavers have with Tammany Hall and the State administration.

This band of polite cadets may have law, art, photography or architecture as a pastime, put their profession is criminal. And they feel that Thaw must be punished in order that they may pursue their criminal operations in safety.

Officials, big and little, high and low, in two American States and in Canada, have, knowingly or unknowingly, served the purposes of this crowd of dissolute scoundrels just as they would have Congress serve their purpose by repealing the Mann White Slave Law.

The Canadian law has been flouted in order that Thaw, who was quietly awaiting a hearing in Canada, might be taken from his cell and hurried across the border where he was within the reach of men ready to take him back to Matteawan.

There should be no possible excuse for this particular piece of high-handedness. Thaw was doing no harm in Canada and was not in a position to do any harm there. Public sympathy was with him. Yet not even a writ from the highest court could save him from violent delivery into the hands of his prosecutors.

This is all of a piece with the subterraneas methods now being employed to take the Mann Law from the statute books where it has proved a real menace to the blackguardly persons who use their wealth to promote their scoundrelly profession.

Any effort to punish a man who would remove a white slaver will be applauded, if not actually aided, by such men as these. They may be depended upon in future to do their utmost to safeguard their dastardly calling, and to seek the punishment of anyone who dares interfere with them—even though it be the father, brother or husband of one of their victims.

That such men have a pull with the authorities, high and low, is an undoubted fact. That they use that pull vigorously is apparent every time an effort is made to rescue a victim from their toils, or whenever a law is passed which will enable the courts to punish one of their number as he deserves to be punished.

THE "PIFFLE" HEADLINERS

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

"Ladies an' gentlemen, the attractions has all came! The show will now begin!" Scarcely had these startling words been uttered by the stage manager of the Jonesville Opera House when Admiral Juice, of the battleship "Piffle," advanced gracefully to the footlights and commenced his lecture on "The Making of a Bank Account." At the same moment Professor Tights, the celebrated juggler, and Pretzel and Stein, the Dutch comedians, began their acts. Through the half-open door at the back of the stage the Tyrolean Yodlers could be seen awaiting their turn. It was a ripping show! Suddenly there was a commotion at the rear of the auditorium. Two woe-begone strangers had tried to enter without tickets, claiming that they had urgent business with Admiral Juice. The next instant they were seized by the doorkeeper and violently ejected, while from the stage the voices of the yodlers were heard in the following refrain, as follows, to wit:

"Uf you vant to know
How to get der dough,
Hoo la la ee hoo, hoo la la ee hoo!
On der platform go,
Mit a circus show,
Hoo la la ee, la ee, la ee, hoo!

Advice to Girls in Picking Husbands

Great Care Should Be Exercised in Selecting a Helpmate---Liberality, Tenderness and Even Temper Are Necessary to Happiness.

By DOROTHY DIX

I HAVE received a letter signed by thirteen girls who request my advice in the selection of a husband, and ask what qualities they should look for in picking out their life partners.

Of course, the conventional way to answer this question is to say to a girl: "My dear, marry a man who is honest and honorable, who neither drinks nor smokes nor swears nor plays poker and who belongs to the Y. M. C. A. and goes to church every Sunday, and you will be happy ever after."

Some of the Best Men on Earth Are Meanest Husbands.

Unfortunately, this isn't true. Some of the best men on earth are the meanest husbands. Many a man who never says anything stronger than "Oh, fudge," can growl for six weeks at a stretch. Many a man who has moral principles that are as impregnable as the Rock of Gibraltar is as hard and cold also as the said rock. Many a man who is as honest as the day is as close as a steel trap, and has to be chloroformed before he can be pried loose from a quarter. Many a philanthropist is so busy promoting the welfare of the world he has no time to devote to making his own home happy.

I am not disparaging the big virtues. Far from it. Every girl in selecting a husband should see that the man she marries is moral and upright, but she shouldn't stop there. She should see that he has some of the amenities of life as well as its virtues, that he's got a few graces as well as a backbone.

Now, if I were picking out a husband, after satisfying myself that the man was neither a drunkard nor a thief, nor leading the double life, the very first thing that I would take into consideration would be his temper. I would see whether he was good-natured and could meet the ordinary little misadventures of existence with philosophy, or whether he went off into silent grouches whenever anything crossed his sovereign will, or else flew into a fury about it.

I should know that in the ordinary run of married life there would be plenty of times when things went wrong; when I would make mistakes and do foolish things, when the soup would be too salty, and the roast burnt, when a million things would happen to vex him, and I shouldn't want a husband who sulked around the house, or said things to me in anger that cut like the lash of a whip every time there was a hitch in the domestic machinery.

Nor should I want to spend my life, as many wives do, going in mortal terror of doing or saying something that would rouse the slumbering devil in their husbands. Believe me, temper has wrecked more homes than the Demon Rum ever has, and between a man with a temper hung on a hair trigger and one who goes off on an occasional jag the choice is with the jagger.

The second quality that I should look for in a husband is tenderness. If I were thinking of picking out a man to spend the next 30 or 40 years with, I should watch like a lynx to see how he treated old women and little children and servants. If he let an old woman stand while he sat; if he called children "brats" and knocked them out of his way; if he was insolent to servants, I should say "no" to him, no matter how attractive he was in other ways.

For I should know that he had no pity or sympathy for the weakness and the helplessness of humanity, and that when the day came when I was no longer young nor strong nor vivacious and able to entertain and amuse him, he would forsake me for somebody able to minister to his pleasure.

The third quality that I should look for in a husband is liberality. I should watch to see how he spent his money. If he haggled over the price of everything, if he shooed away every beggar and gave the waiter the least possible tip, I should know that he would make the kind of a husband who doles out car fare to his wife, goes over the grocery book and snoops around the kitchen to see the thickness of the potato parings. And I wouldn't marry him if he was the last call to the dining car I was ever likely to get. No women on earth work as hard for their living as those who have to chisel it out of a tightwad husband.

The fourth thing that I would take into consideration in a man is his ability to get along in the world. He wouldn't need to be rich. I would rather marry a man, and take my chances for future comfort with him, if he was getting twenty-five hundred dollars a year that he made by his own effort than one who had an income of twenty-five thousand dollars a year that he had inherited from papa, and who had never made a dollar of his own. The best luck that can ever fall to a woman is to marry an energetic, capable young fellow and help him make his fortune, but the worst fate that ever befalls a girl is to be tied to a shiftless ne'er-do-well, who fails at everything he tries to do.

Therefore, before I married a man I'd make it my business to find out whether he had strength enough to stand on his own feet, or whether he would be one of those clinging-vine men that somebody else has to support all of his days. I'd know, for one thing, that I should be hungry and need clothes after marriage just as much as I did before, and also that I shouldn't have much respect for a husband who wasn't man enough to hold his place among other men.

Then I should positively refuse to marry any man who wasn't a suffragist, and who didn't believe that women had a right to have a half of the pleasures and perquisites of the world. I should know that the man who thought that women in general were only fit to be classed with criminals, idiots and the insane would make the sort of a husband who derides his wife's opinions, refuses to give her an allowance, and who regards her as an upper servant to minister to his lordly self.

Girls Should Look for a Sympathetic and Generous Man.

That's what I'd do, girls. I'd look out for a man who was good-natured and good-tempered and generous and sympathetic, and who thought that a woman, even a wife, was a human being with a right to her own opinions and pocketbook, and when I'd found that sort of a man I'd marry him, if he asked me, no matter what other faults he might have. For I'd know he'd make the kind of a husband that is lovable and easy to live with. And that's the thing that counts in matrimony.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Hustling

Hard work is necessary to success, but overwork leads to carelessness and disaster. In the end the human machine called man is a wreck, sacrificed on the altar of speed.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

(Copyright, 1913.)

IF you are an American you probably have great respect for that American word, "hustle." If you employ help, no doubt you use that expression, "Get a hustle on," which has been dignified by classification in Mr. Bell's "The Worth of Words"

"Getting a hustle on" is supposed to be the first long stride toward any success in life. It is an excellent thing, indeed, to feel impelled to put all your powers into immediate action.

Every human being is a reservoir of the energy which is back of all creation. The more fully he realizes that fact and the more earnestly he puts that energy into action the more positive and immediate are the results.

There is such a thing, however, as overhustling. The continual "hustler" who never rests and never allows any one about him to rest at times defeats his own ends. He breaks down with the nervous strain of his own hurry and causes others to break down.

Aside from these direct disasters he is the indirect cause of innumerable accidents and misfortunes, which he attributes to "ill luck" or "carelessness" of others.

Science Teaches Accidents and Fatigue To Be Closely Related.

This carelessness may in countless cases be traced to the door of the hustler.

The scientific men have decided that there is a close relationship between fatigue and accidents. Investigation of the cause and conditions leading to accidents has given an interesting number of statistics to prove that as a workman grows more fatigued he becomes more liable to meet with accidents and to produce them.

This is the scientific argument for shorter hours for man and beast.

The investigators found that in each succeeding hour of the first half of the day's work accidents become more numerous, while after the midday rest during the first hours of the afternoon they were fewer. Then later in the afternoon the number of accidents increased until toward the end of the second half of the day the proportion was larger than for the latter half of the morning hours.

Therefore the scientists argue that a short rest spell in the middle of the afternoon would tend to decrease the number of accidents.

What we term non-living objects are capable of weariness as well as men and animals. It is a good thing to change your implements of labor, whether you are in the trades, arts or professions, periodically. Science has proven that even inanimate things are capable of a certain amount of feeling.

Take an occasional rest yourself whenever you feel worn and nervous. See to it that your employees are enabled to do so. Let them relax for five minutes even after a strain of hard hours of labor, and you will find they turn out better work and show more interest in your affairs for this privilege.

Short Rests During the Day Enrich Employers in the Long Run.

Let your horse relax and rest at intervals during the day. When it is a possible thing to do, even at the cost of a little money, hire a fresh animal for half a day and let your own toiling beast rest. It will last longer and do better service as a result.

Instead of the continual cry of "Get a hustle on you!" say to your helpers occasionally, "All relax and rest five minutes." Set the example yourself and then rouse to work with your old American battle cry if you like.

But how much better if the new generation of Americans would cultivate the spirit of earnestness instead of that of continually "hustling." It is a great thing to be in earnest. But—

The hurry of the times affects us so
In this swift rushing hour, we crowd, we press
And thrust each other backward as we go.
We do not pause to lay sufficient stress
Upon that good, strong word, "earnestness."
In our impetuous haste, could we but know
Its full, deep meaning, its vast import; oh,
That might we grasp the secret of success,
In that receding age when men were great,
The bone and sinew of their purpose lay
In that one word. God loves an earnest soul—
Too earnest to be eager. Soon or late
It leaves the spent horde breathless, by the way,
And stands serene, triumphant, at the goal.

THE BOY AND LEARNING.

Editor The Georgian:

Your editorial, "The College Man," is a most timely article, and hits the nail on the head. The parent that has had to hustle from early youth out in the world taking and giving hard knocks that make men, seems to think in many cases that his son should be saved that which made a man of him and is essential to making a man of his boy. Hence the boy is sent to school for the best part of his life, when his mind is capable of absorbing things that are worth while and things that are not taught in books at all.

The son is thus put far away from the real activities of life and when he has a diploma, a frat pin and a college yell he feels that the world is at his feet. When he awakes, if he ever does, he finds that there are very few of life problems of daily life that can be solved by algebra, and that Greek roots and Latin classics play little part in the earning of daily bread. The fact that the great work of the world is done by hands and not by brain power seems to be the last thing taught in schools. Until boys are taught that manual labor is the highest class of work, that work with the hands, directed by the brain, brings in the highest wage; that no kind of physical toil is dishonorable, and that true education is the fitting of the body and mind to the carrying on of some specific physical work, in which the muscles of the body play the most important part, until this is done education as given today is at fault. All education that tends to take the mind and body of a boy from nature and natural life is wrong.

A boy, coming out of a college with a diploma, may think he is educated, yet if he can not tell how a seed planted in the ground can be made to yield a harvest and bring forth food, and if he has no interest in the making of a larger yield of corn to the acre, or the perfection of wheat for bread, and the improvement and care of stock for meat, he is too ignorant to be turned loose upon the public without a guardian.

HERE'S A STUMP PULLER.

Editor The Georgian:

In a recent issue of your paper I noticed a description of the "Holt Caterpillar," together with your comment.

As a representative of the Zimmerman Steel Company, of Lone Tree, Iowa, I wish to call your attention to a machine they manufacture for removing trees and stumps.

This machine will uproot the longest tree or stump that grows—can be operated by three men and a pair of horses or mules, and will remove anywhere from 50 to 300 stumps or trees per day.

Wish to say that this machine has been in use in South Georgia for the last twelve years. My father, D. S. Williamson, of Mount Vernon, Ga., was the first man to introduce this machine in the South, and they are being shipped into South Georgia now at the rate of 200 to 300 each year.

Of course, this machine can not be used for preparing or cultivating, but as for removing stumps and trees it will do it much cheaper than the "Holt Caterpillar" or any other contrivance on the market.

SAVANNAH NOW LIKELY TO END AUTO CLASSIC

Harvey Granger Announces That Manufacturers Ask Entrance Fees Be Returned.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 16.—Unless there is a satisfactory number of high-class entries in by October 1, the Grand Prize and Vanderbilt races will not be run over the Chatham County course this fall.

This positive declaration was made by Harvey Granger, president of the Savannah Automobile Club, upon his return from the Elgin races, who is far from optimistic about the outlook for the big events. The manufacturers and others, who own racing cars, balk at paying the entrance fees, and in some instances even demand a bonus for running their cars.

President Granger says the Savannah races will not be of the hippodrome character, and that is what they would be if entrance fees were waived and no restrictions imposed. Unless the same high-class events can be had as have always been held here the races will be called off. That is why President Granger has arbitrarily fixed upon October 1 as the on-side date when the entries are to be in.

Manufacturers Balk.

President Granger says neither the cars nor the drivers were entered in the Elgin races, and the disposition of the manufacturers of the best class of racing cars is not to pay for the privilege of entering their cars in a trophy event. All of the manufacturers have been sounded out on the proposition, and almost to a man the demand has been made for a waiver of the entrance fees. This will not be done. As already stated, the Savannah club does not care to run a hippodrome down here.

In the 1911 races the receipts from entries alone amounted to $19,500. And then the margin of profit on the whole racing proposition was small. If all of this amount were waived to the car owners, where would the promoters get off? The situation was different at Indianapolis, where President Granger says, perhaps more than 50 per cent of the entrance fees were rebated. Then there was the main-object was to get cars on the track to entertain the people, the same as a vaudeville show manager gets acts, without particular regard to the class.

Mr. Granger says it was never the intention of those who started the Grand Prize Trophy that it should be cheapened in this way, and he feels the same about the Vanderbilt cup. He has written a long letter to Mr. Vanderbilt explaining the difficulties he is having in interesting the big world in the fall events on a high-class sporting plane. He also advised Mr. Vanderbilt that with a high-class list of entries had been received by October 1 the races would be declared off. By satisfactory be means class and number of cars and first-class drivers.

Some of the prospective entries even want the Savannah club to pay the freight on their cars here.

Will Make the Effort.

"We owe the Motor Cups Company an honest effort to get entries to run the races," said President Granger. "We will make that effort. That is the reason we have fixed an outside date for the entries. The manufacturers certainly ought to know by October 1 whether they intend coming in. If they know it we are entitled to be advised. There will be plenty of time for us to get the course in condition after that time if the prospect is satisfactory. In fact, we could get ready for the race in ten days or two weeks.

"I went over the situation thoroughly with the owners and drivers of the cars entered in the Elgin races. On my arrival at Elgin I found, through Mr. Beacroft, official referee there, that to secure the cars which participated in the various events, all entrance money was guaranteed to be refunded if the cars showed up at the starting line. I went into the entry proposition with Mr. Stutz, owner of the car which won the principal event, Mr. Duesenberg, manager of the Mason racing team, and others. While they are all willing and anxious to come to Savannah, they take the position that all entrance money should be refunded, and that in some cases, the freight on their cars should be paid.

"I made it plain to both Mr. Stutz and Mr. Duesenberg, as well as the other miners present, that the entrance provided in the blanks of the Savannah Automobile Club for the Vanderbilt Cup and Grand Prize races were paid, and that unless there was a satisfactory list of entries, both in number of cars and in character, received before October 1, there would be no races this year at Savannah.

Little Interest in Game.

"The trouble is that the manufacturers are taking little interest in the racing game. Instead of the racing cars, as in the past, the whole scheme of things has been changed so that it resembles a hippodrome proposition now, where the independent professional driver goes into the race purely for the money he has a chance to win, and not for the honor and glory of owning the handsome trophies which are offered. The racing game has come around to the point of purely professional entertainment.

"We are making every possible effort to secure entries which will make the races worthy to hold here the fall the splendid success they have always been, but unless entries are prepared to pay the fees we call for, just as in the past, and unless the class and number of entrants is entirely sufficient in our estimation to make the meeting in every respect an event which will reflect credit both on the city and the State, and furnish just what the visitors to the city and the residents of Savannah expect and want, there will be no races."

CLEMSON LOST ONLY FOUR MEN FROM '12 TEAM

CLEMSON COLLEGE, S. C., Sept. 16.—Why should the Tigers worry? They lost only four men from the regular varsity football team—Captain Britt, Coles, Kangeter and Turbeville. These were good men, but their places can be filled with a little extra care. There were a number of the scrubs last season that are back, eager for a chance to make varsity. Fifty old students were out in uniforms yesterday. The freshmen will report to-day, and it is said that there is much likely material in the bunch.

So Captain Gandy is hopeful. There are to be three football fields this year. Dr. Calhoun, president of the Athletic Association, says that one field will be used for the purpose of learning signals. This field will be at some distance from the others so that no one team will know the signals of another. This plan will make the scrimmages much more valuable. The main athletic field will give room for two gridirons. On one the scrubs and the class teams will practice; the other will be used almost exclusively for match games and for formal practice.

The fields will soon be in fine condition. The regular practice is going on every afternoon under the careful guidance of Coaches Williams and Major. Falling on the ball held the Scarlets last evening. A new tackling dummy is to be put up at once.

There have been a few changes made in the schedule. Manager Doumit gives out the following revised schedule:

October 4—Davidson at Clemson.
October 11—Alabama at Tuscaloosa.
October 18—Auburn at Clemson.
October 25—University of South Carolina in Columbia, at the fair.
November 6.—University of Georgia in Augusta.
November 8 — The Citadel in Charleston.
November 15—Mercer in Macon.

Agler Goes by Draft From Jersey City To Detroit Tigers

News from the Seat of War, now located in that dear Cincinnati, has it that Joe Agler, class of the Southern League at first-basing in the season of 1913, will not linger in Jersey City, to which club he recently was sold for $3,000 by the Crackers.

It seems Detroit's draft for Joe has been allowed, and the Jersey club management—unless special arrangements have been made—it stung.

When Joe was sold to Jersey City some weeks ago, the idea was that J. C. was purchasing him as a sort of agent for Frank Chance and the New York Highlanders, and that Agler would start the season of 1914 with F. LeRoy Chance. The Cracker management sold Joseph to give him the chance to better himself—which he certainly had earned—and because there seemed to be no way of avoiding the draft process, should he be not sold, except by the unsatisfactory and unjust method of "covering."

One hundred and eight minor league players were elevated by the drafting process, the St. Louis Browns getting 30 of them, under the system of award which includes drawing names out of a hat. Under this system, it is noteworthy that the St. Louis Cardinals got only one player in the draft, and the New York Americans two.

RITCHIE CLAIMS VANCOUVER GAME WAS NOT FAIR

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Sept. 16.—Willie Ritchie's incontinental flight from Vancouver is the talk of sportdom and everyone is wondering what really impelled Ritchie to cut and run. Willie says it was because the promoters did not play fair, so far as a division of the money accruing from the advertising privileges is concerned, but Harry Pollok, manager of Freddy Welsh, pooh-poohs the idea.

Pollok was known years ago in San Francisco as a youth with fine ideas of finance. When Harry had poor Jack Munro training at the beach for the fight with Jeffries, Munro and Pollok had everything figured out. They knew just what the house end would be in any kind of a house from one of $5,000 to one of $50,000, so that directly Coffroth made known the gross receipts Harry and Jack knew in an instant what was coming to them.

Pollok says the advertising privileges which Ritchie made an issue of amounted to but a few hundred dollars and that is ridiculous to suppose that Ritchie would make his escape on that account when there was a sum of $16,000 lying in the bank for him, no matter whether he won, lost or drew with Welsh.

Looking at it from a common-sense viewpoint, there is logic in what Pollok says and, consequently, Ritchie's explanation of the causes leading up to his flight are made to appear somewhat diaphanous.

Good Time Now For Blood Health

Blood Disorders Gone to Stay.

A few doses of that wonderful blood purifier, S. S. S., will start activities in the cellular tissues of the body and soon show decided changes in the skin. The skin is but a fine network of tiny blood vessels and the specific action of S. S. S. is to feed the rich, pronounced stimulation of the active life of these cells. Certain it is that in a surprisingly short time any skin eruption shows a most remarkable change. It begins to dry up; the skin scales off in tiny flecks, and soon a layer of clear, healthy and firm flesh results.

The reason for this is in the peculiar stimulation of S. S. S., which enables the cells in the skin to select from the blood the nutriment it requires for regeneration.

You can obtain S. S. S. at any well stocked drug store. If you insist upon it, but be sure you are not offered something "just as good."

S. S. S. is compounded by the Swift Specific Company, 160 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Write for their illustrated book on skin diseases.

Wolgast and Nelson To Meet Again Over Ten-Round Route

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 16.—What for three years the leading fight promoters of the country have failed to do was accomplished in Milwaukee to-day when Ad Wolgast and Battling Nelson were matched for a second time. The pair have agreed to go ten rounds before Ben Steinel's Milwaukee club the second week of October. There was little trouble in bringing the two hated rivals together.

Both Nelson and Wolgast were spectators at the Charley White-Mickey Sheridan fight in Racine last night. The matter was put up to the Dane and he accepted without hesitation. Ad asked for time to consider, and when seen in Milwaukee this morning accepted. He wants a rest two weeks and then will begin training.

One Hundred Atlanta Fans Chip in to Buy C. Frank Loving Cup

Charley Frank will have a trifle worthy of a high place in his esteem and on the parlor mantel when he gets the loving cup the Atlanta fans are buying for him.

John D. Harrington, a good fan himself, has got a hundred other fans to "chip in" for the cup to mark in the Dutchman's memory the heroic battle of Mobile Sunday, September 7, 1913. The fund has reached $76 and has been turned over to F. E. Callaway, President of the Atlanta Baseball Association, at his office, 810 Third National Bank Building. Mr. Callaway will receive additional subscriptions for a few days and then apply the total to a handsome cup, suitably inscribed, to be sent to C. Frank with a bushel of compliments.

SPORTING COMMENT

By Ed W. Smith.

THE whole system of rearing the "white hope" crop is wrong. They start the big burlies on their fighting careers too late in life to make them effective. As a result, the boxer is too old when he starts in to learn the rudiments of the boxing game. This at least is the opinion of George Dawson, one of the veterans of the boxing game and a student of the present day methods of the ring. Dawson isn't an active agent at present and never expects to be again, all of his time and attention being taken up by members of the Chicago Athletic Association, who like a little exercise with the gloves now and then. But George is a keen figurer just the same and his ideas are sound and true.

ACCORDING to the Dawson system of figuring a boxer should begin early in life to learn the simpler points of the boxing game. When yet a boy he should know all that one man can teach another about the art of sifting straight and stopping 'em before they can reach you. If that system prevails then the boy can finish his basic education at his leisure as he grows into manhood and the nicer points of the game will come with experience, and in that way only. As a matter of fact, Dawson believes the real fighting man should be reared carefully, so that by the time he becomes a man he will be able to embark on a boxing career well equipped and not be forced to learn what there is to the game.

"THEY wait too long before starting out," says Dawson in discussing the "white hope" situation, which just now isn't much of a situation. "By the time the present-day heavyweight is well out on his career, he's almost too old to learn anything. The system is all wrong. Just because a man has the size and the natural strength is no sound reason that he is going to be molded into a champion with a few weeks of instruction. Yet that is what some managers expect of a man. The best athletes have been those who started early, learned thoroughly, and then got their experience by actual fighting. Such men always last better and are in every way thoroughly equipped for the serious business of fighting. You can not develop a good fighter, except in very rare cases, in a hurry any more than you could develop a great musician in a brief time."

GLANCING over the list of the leading white heavyweights of the day, we are impressed with the wisdom of Dawson's remarks. Most of them right now are almost too ancient to be classified as young men, at least in an athletic sense. Arthur Pelky admits being 29 years old, but some who know him insist that he is at least 32. Carl Morris, who has been doing well lately, is 27 all over, and Frank Moran, who trimmed Al Palzer in New York the other night and jumped well to the front, is 25. Gunboat Smith is the youngest of the lot—that is, of the real prominent ones—and is only about 22. The available list of big ones has about dwindled down to these now—and of them Moran and Smith look to be the two that should fight it out unless Morris shows enough pretty quick to entitle him to the highest consideration.

MORAN has come to the front with a greater degree of sharpness than any of the others and if his improvement in the next year or so is as great as it has been in the last six or eight months they will have a hard time of it keeping him out of the championship.

SENIORITY RULE IS MENACE TO RAILROADS

Forbes Pleads for "Safety First" in Assailing the Promotion of New Haven Engineers.

By B. C. FORBES.

The public first.

That is the new keynote.

Corporations have had it dinned into their ears. Politicians are beginning to listen to it.

SHALL RAILROAD EMPLOYEES BE ALLOWED TO FLOUT IT?

Is the answer to be dictated by railway men's unions or by YOU, the public?

* * *

The time to reply is NOW.

The subject has been raised sharply by the New Haven Railroad engineers. They claim that the public safety must receive not first, but only second consideration.

The men flatly declare that the managers entrusted with the running of the road must accept the selection of their union in promoting men to positions of great responsibility, that the matter of fitness is none of the managers' business, that the "rule of seniority" must be slavishly adhered to, even if engineers guilty of playing with human life by running past red signals have to be placed at the throttle of the fastest and most important passenger trains on the whole system.

The Union Pacific was confronted with a similar problem not long ago, but rather than allow the men to override the management the company decided to suffer all the inconvenience and loss entailed by a prolonged strike. But the Union Pacific was fighting for a just principle. And it won.

Is the public to support the hands of President Elliott in his fight against the tyranny of the engineers' union? Is the public, and especially the public of New England, willing to intrust its life, whenever traveling on the New Haven, to engine drivers believed by the company to be grossly incompetent, but foisted into express engines by an overreaching union?

Does age necessarily sharpen the eyesight, quicken the intelligence and improve the physique of every engine driver? Shall a second-rate man be given a first-class position simply and solely because of his length of service?

Do YOU want to ride behind the BEST man the road can pick to command its passenger trains? Or are you content to let the union have its way no matter how grave the danger entailed?

Rolled down, stripped of all technicalities, that is the real, the only question.

Assuredly, the public has little reason to place a high estimate upon the ability of the old New Haven managers to run a railroad. But a new president has taken hold. He is entitled to your support and mine in devising methods for the protection of every traveler on his lines. It is not for him to let a union tie his hands? Is he to have no word to say in selecting the most capable engineers available to pilot express trains? Must he accept abjectly the men ordained by the union's caution rule?

The engineers' union is not fighting President Elliott. It is not fighting the New Haven. It is fighting you. it is fighting every one of us. It is sacrificing safety for its own ends.

Are managers to manage railroads in the interest of the public or is an engineers' union to manage them in its own interest?

The engineers should be left in no doubt of how the public feels on the subject. Let the New Haven engineers triumph in this case, and there will domination by unions, where will trifling with human lives stop? Railway travel is dangerous enough at best. Are we to let it be made doubly so just because a union has passed a rule that it does not want broken, no matter what its observance may cost in human blood?

U. S. IMPORTS OF FOREIGN BEEF INCREASING

Current Year's Total Will Exceed Eight Million Pounds, According to Official Figures.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Fresh beef from the South Temperate Zone is now an established factor in the import trade of the United States. Between 2,000,000 and 4,000,000 pounds of fresh beef, practically all of it from Australia and Argentina, has entered the ports of the United States in the past three months, indicating that the ranchers of the cattle districts of our west will amount to more than 8,000,000 pounds, according to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Prior to 1912, the importations of fresh beef averaged about 333,333 pounds per annum. In 1912, however, there was a sharp increase, the total for that year being a little over 1,000,000 pounds, while in 1913 the total was over 4,000,000 pounds.

Census Bureau Gets Data.

This increase, coupled with the announcement that refrigerator ships had been put on to bring Australian and Argentine meats to the United States has led the Bureau to instruct the collectors of customs at the various ports to report from month to month the quantity of fresh beef received and the countries from which it was brought.

These detailed figures are now in hand for the months of June, July and August. They show that the imports of fresh beef in June amounted to 567,295 pounds, of which 396,913 pounds entered at the port of San Francisco, 26,347 pounds at Seattle and 143,035 pounds at New York.

Argentine Beef for Gotham.

The entrances at San Francisco were from Australia, those at Seattle from Canada and those at New York from England, but understood to be Argentine beef, which had been sent from Argentina to England and thence to the United States.

In July, the total was larger than in June, being 643,333 pounds, of which 201,317 pounds coming from Australia entered at Seattle, while 419,232 pounds direct from England, but probably originating in Argentina, entered at New York.

Import Prices Are Low.

In August, the total still grew, being for that month 823,342 pounds, of which 404,126 pounds were from Australia and entered by the Pacific ports and 397,138 pounds entering at New York were from England, but probably originated in Argentina.

The import prices of this foreign beef ranged from approximately 7 cents to 10 cents per pound, the average valuation of the meats received during the three months for which these details are available having been from Australia, 6.9 cents per pound and from England, 9.6 cents per pound.

It must be remembered, however, that these are the figures of value in the country from which the beef is sent to the United States and do not therefore include the cost of transportation or the tariff of 1 1-2 cents per pound.

BIBLE SCHOOLS TO HOLD BIG RALLIES

Superintendents Plan City-Wide Membership Campaign for Sunday, October 5.

A city-wide membership campaign, with a "rally day" in every Sunday school on October 5, is planned by the Atlanta Sunday School Superintendents' Congress. The campaign was outlined at a meeting of the congress Tuesday evening at the Park Street Methodist Church.

October 5 promises to be the biggest day Atlanta Sunday schools have ever known. Besides the rallies in the various schools, a great mass meeting of teachers is planned for the afternoon, probably at the First Baptist Church.

Several superintendents of Sunday schools stated at the meeting Tuesday night that they have already formulated their plans for the campaign. Dr. Marion Hull, the presiding elder of the North Avenue Presbyterian Sunday School would hold a rally each evening of the week preceding October 5. J. R. Gunn, superintendent of the Fourth Memorial Sunday School said his school would hold departmental rallies each Sunday until the big rally day in October.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Influenced by a sharp upturn in Liverpool, the cotton market opened firm to-day at a net advance of 16 to 20 points from Tuesday's close. Some private cables attributed the rise in Liverpool to American and continent buying, based on bad crop news from Texas, also bears turning to bulls. However, it was obvious this news of crop damage had considerable influence in the local market.

Immediately after the opening a wave of profit-taking, attributed to commission houses also selling, caused prices to work 1 to 3 points under the initial range. With the cables to create sentiment in their favor, the bulls made a concentrated effort to advance the market after the call. In this they succeeded, the list rallying to the opening range. There was news of cooler weather in Oklahoma and part cloudy to cloudy weather in the rest of the belt, also light precipitation over the Western States, but further rains in the eastern half of the belt.

Spot people were credited with buying contracts and the bulls maintained a more confident position and advised purchases, predicting 14 cents this week. It looked to unprejudiced observers as if the market was hard to bull over 13 cents because every time it is forced above 13 cents there is heavy selling and prices react to that level.

Following are the closing bids in New York: October, 13.29; December, 13.23; January, 13.13; March, 13.25.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Sternberger, Sinn & Co.: We think cotton should be bought on breaks.

Shearson, Hammill & Co.: We think the market is still in a trading position.

Norden & Co.: It may be that the present level will prove to be a temporary selling point, but we see no reason to anticipate any decline of consequence.

E. F. Hutton & Co.: We still see no reason for taking the short side unless temporarily.

Logan & Bryan: We rather look for a reaction.

Miller & Co.: We think the market is still a bull proposition.

A new book entitled "Practical Studies in the Fourth Gospel," by Bishop Warren Candler, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, has been issued from the press. The book is the first of two volumes dealing with the studies of the author.

The studies, it is said, are not "critical," but rather "practical" in that the matter engages the attention of the heart instead of the mind.

GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Corn led in activity and strength this morning, with shorts covering and the fact that offerings were held tightly. Sentiment was at ¼ above yesterday's closing price.

An improved shipping demand for the cash article and the belief of corn circles that the receipts are not to keep up to present proportions were the leading bullish influences.

Wheat was a shade easier. News from abroad was decidedly bearish.

Oats were irregular.

Provisions were higher with an advance of 5 to 10c in the price of hogs at the yards.

Bull leaders are talking 14 cents within a week, but the opinion of Senator Clarke hangs over the market.

However, some good spot people say that markets are not buying because of the doubt due to the tax legislation. They do not believe the advance will hold.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says on the eve of determining action by the conference committee on the measure of the cotton market legislation the United States Congress is in receipt of a cotton market stood at attention, hoping for the best, yet prepared for the worst, and ready, on the one hand, to begin a period of splendid constructive endeavor in the behalf of the cotton interests as a whole, and on the way to prepare, through the elimination of the market, for day to day trade in barter and sale of the South's other staple, which reverts to primary principles of trade in vogue before the days of speculative markets.

News from Washington was of the encouraging sort. The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "Benjamin in the wheat trade continues mostly bullish, but those who believe in higher prices look for a sharp reaction of an advance right away. They say the premium on cash property is very small and cuts no figure at present.

It was the belief of most corn traders last night that the market had seen its break for the present. It was noticed that a effort started to stop a number of local professionals who had been short of the market for several days waiting for the market to break came in and bought liberally.

STOCKS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—There was heavy trading in Reading at the opening of the stock market to-day, most of the speculative interest centering in that security. Reading began at 168⅞ for a gain of 1⅞ and immediately increased its advance to over 2 points. Later there was some profit taking. A majority of the railroad issues were under some pressure and sold off from last night's closing.

The first sales of Reading amounted to 12,000 shares.

Among the declines were the following: United States Steel common, ⅜; Union Pacific, ⅜; Southern Pacific, ¼; Northern Pacific, ¼; Pennsylvania, ¼; New York Central, ⅝; Great Northern preferred, ⅝; Erie, ¼; Chesapeake and Ohio, ⅝; Canadian Pacific, ⅞; Anaconda Copper, ⅛; Amalgamated Copper, ⅜.

New York, New Haven and Hartford gained 41 8⅝, and declined further within the next few minutes, touching the lowest point it has reached on its present movement. New Haven closed last night at 88⅜. Missouri Pacific after opening unchanged, gained ⅛. St. Paul advanced ⅜, and the same amount of gain was recorded by American Telephone and Telegraph. Lehigh Copper was unchanged on the first sale, but later advanced. Baltimore and Ohio was strong, gaining 1 point, and Atlantic Coast also rose.

The curb was steady.

Labor troubles in Great Britain caused heaviness in the London stock market. Americans in London were cheerful with gains above New York parity. Union Pacific in London was irregular, but Canadian Pacific there was strong on international buying.

Enthusiasm Is Running High In Pedalmobile Contest

"Gee, ain't it a peach! Couldn't I speed some if I had one of them! How many are you going to give away, Mister?" These are some of the remarks to be heard around The Georgian Office where the big red "Georgian Flyer" is on exhibition—the one just like The Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian will give to each boy and girl who secures forty new subscriptions to the paper before October 1.

There are many earnest workers and the subscriptions are coming fast. It would only be a wild guess now to say who will win the first fifteen cars and receive the Charter Membership Certificates to the Atlanta Pedalmobile Racing Club. These Certificates will entitle the holder to compete in any or all races and events to be held in the near future.

Pedalmobile Clubs are to be found in many of the large cities, having been promoted by some of the largest and best newspapers in the country. This sort of sport may be new in Atlanta, but in many particulars the Pedalmobile races are to the children what the Auto races are to the grown-ups. In fact, they are handled a good deal on the same order and are interesting to the parents as well as the children.

These little machines are not to be confined to pleasure alone, but can be put to good use in many different ways. In some cities carrier boys who have won Pedalmobiles may be seen distributing their papers in them. All these cars are well-made and serviceable and will surely gladden the heart of any boy or girl who is fortunate enough to win one.

These cars are now on exhibition in the window of O. C. Polk Dry Goods Store, 29 South Gordon Street; South Pryor Ice Cream Parlor, 353 South Pryor Street, and Imperial Tire and Tube Company, 349 Peachtree Street. While attending the Odd-and-Ends Sale at Polk's Dry Goods Company, be sure to notice the "Georgian Flyer" in the window.

OUTSIDE WORKERS.

A number of boys and girls outside of the city of Atlanta have sent in their application blanks and are now working earnestly to obtain one of the handsome little cars. The Pedalmobile man will be glad to send subscription blanks to more honest hustlers who would like to own a Pedalmobile.

Just fill out the application blank below and full particulars will be mailed you at once.

SILK HAT HARRY'S DIVORCE SUIT

JIM PREAS CAN PLAY ALL KINDS SPORT GAMES

JIM PREAS, the mighty athlete from Riverside Military Academy, is now a Tech man. He has been called the Jim Thorpe of the South, as he is considered by many to be the best prep man in the South. Preas is not only a football star, having established at end and halfback at Riverside, where they play football like it is "writ" and turn out some of the best athletes in the South, but is a star in every branch of athletics.

He plays forward on the basket ball team and is about as fast as they make 'em, shooting the goals with great accuracy. He covers the initial sack on the diamond and gets everything coming his way. He hits them out at a good clip and is a real Ty Cobb on the paths. He is also a good track man, running the hundred in little short of record time, and handles the weights a la Ralph Rose.

A large crowd of alumni and old Tech stars were out yesterday to see the mighty Thorpe of the South in action. He looks like a million dollars, standing about six feet and weighs about 185 pounds. He has an ideal build, broad shoulders and thick through the chest.

It is not known whether Preas will be played at end or in the backfield, as he is equally good at each place, and is also a good punter, but wherever he is played he is sure to star, and before the season is over will more deserve his sobriquet.

Bonus for Carrigan If Red Sox Win Flag

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—If Bill Carrigan lands the American League pennant next year his salary will approximate $16,000. This is the information given out to-day following the signing of the catcher as manager of the Red Sox for next year at a salary of $8,000.

It appears that a bonus is to be added to Carrigan's regular stipulation for the event that he succeeds in copping the flag for the Red Sox president in 1914. Carrigan has been talking the team since Jake Stahl was deposed, and has apparently met the conditions imposed by McAleer, who is satisfied with his work.

"I am satisfied with Bill Carrigan's work," said McAleer. He is showing as much as could be expected, and I can depend upon him to turn out a winner for next season. Carrigan has my confidence. I believe in him and am sure that results will show that the right thing has been done."

Ex-Cracker Performs Well for the Phillies

An ex-Cracker distinguished himself at Cincinnati yesterday, when Erskine Mayer pitching the second game of a double-header for Philadelphia, handed the Reds a clean shut-out in the six innings the contest traveled.

Mayer was allowed to slip away to Portsmouth, Leo Cantrell, Virginia League club, last year. Charley Hempill being the short-sighted manager. Leo developed a lot of stuff in the Virginia circuit and sold him to the Phillies, where he is now compiling an excellent record.

Class Minus Punch Can't Win Naps and Phillies Examples

By O. B. Keeler.

STRAYING for a brief space off the rounds that approaching their respective termini.

They are labeled the N. L. and the A. L.

And they supply a couple of examples that may excuse a trifle of comment. At any rate we recall vaguely having seen something in the papers recently concerning them.

The Senators took all five.

It was the final chance.

It resulted in the final break.

The Naps didn't have the PUNCH.

SIZING it up crudely, the principal difference between the Athletics and the Naps, between the Giants and the Phillies, is the PUNCH.

That difference amounts to a pennant in each case.

That's all.

WE notice it down here in the South. Perhaps we get it better and clearer than the fans whose inspiring optics convey to fevered think-tanks a bewildered idea of the games they certainly witness.

We see the games in cold type, in the gray dawn of the world-known Morning After.

And we see the grim spirit end in a break, and we see the reeling Giants settle under the strain and hand out the old Poppy Wallop left and right, and we see the wavering Athletics crowded near the rim stiffen up with the old defense and fall back the charge as with the master hand of Bender and Coombs and Plank at their finest.

COOMBS is out of it. Bender is yielding. Plank's cunning ekes out his aging wiles.

But somehow, in the pinch, the old PUNCH is there.

And it is the PUNCH that makes champions, when all's said and done. Class in a while—but rare to be specific—a team comes along like the Cubs, and it can not be beaten, for it is the class of a classic league than owns it—there is no competition.

But in all ordinary races, in the race just ended in the Southern, in both the big league races, it takes more than paper-class, more than field-class, more than sharp fielding and hard hitting and clever pitching to win out.

It takes THE PUNCH.

AND right there, in the proverbial A. shell-game is the reason why Phillies and Naps must rest content this year with the job of runner-up to a wow.

Neither has THE PUNCH.

BIRMINGHAM has a fine ball club. It is a young lusty ball club, a lively fighting ball club. He has pitchers. He has two of the greatest sluggers the game knows. He has speed and pep and dash.

But he lacks the PUNCH.

Keith has a winning ball club. He has the slugging Gavvy Cravath—Gavvy, the fence-buster. He has a great pitching staff, headed by Seaton and Alexander. The club looks great, looks all to the good.

But it lacks the PUNCH.

AGAIN and again the Phillies have A. worked themselves up to a position within whistling distance and worry the Giants—from which they might have assailed McGraw's clan with the well-known and effective Poppy Wallop.

But they didn't have it.

Again and again Birmingham drove the Naps almost distract of the ways during Athletics, only to see his great team break in its stride and fall backward toward the Pack.

They simply weren't THERE.

ONE illustration will do for both clubs and work an injustice on neither.

Last week the Naps were traveling along on the top of their latest spurt. The Athletics were wabbling in the manner that has grown almost into a habit with them.

Hope burned in Naptown as its pets breezed into Washington for five games.

The Senators took all five.

It was the final chance.

It resulted in the final break.

The Naps didn't have the PUNCH.

King Cole Not Merry Old Soul, Although Drafted by Yanks

ST. PAUL, Sept. 17.—There is one drafted American Association star whose heart is not filled with joy, although he has been hurling with ambition to return to the big leagues. He is King Cole, of Columbus. When Cole was informed that he had been awarded to the New York American League team he dashed his cap on the ground and displayed other evidences of disgust.

The reason is that Cole has been with Frank Chance before and does not like him any too well. In the summer of 1910, when Cole was having his best year in the National League, Cole was put out of a close game for kicking and was fined $100 by the Peerless Leader.

Cole did not worry much about it until the close of the season, when to his astonishment the penalty was not remitted. Ever since that time Cole has had little personal regard for the "P. L."

Sale of Cy Morgan Set Aside by Com.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 17.—The National Commission set aside the sale of Pitcher Cy Morgan, of the Kansas City club, to the Cincinnati club, and ordered that the latter club be reimbursed for any expense it had gone to in securing the player.

Manager Carr, of the Kansas City club, and Morgan himself testified that his arm was in bad condition, when ordered to report to Cincinnati.

Cross and Rivers Are Matched for October

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 17.—It was announced to-day that negotiations for a 20-round bout between Leach Cross and Joe Rivers, lightweights, at Vernon, October 7 or 14, virtually had been concluded.

Cross and Rivers have twice battled to a draw. This will be the first boxing contest at Vernon since the Jess Willard-John Young match, which was followed by the latter's death.

Says Draft of Stock Is Not Legal Deal

MOBILE, ALA., Sept. 17.—There is a roar from the local Southern League club over the drafting of Stock, the Mobile shortstop, by the Boston National League club.

C. Z. Culpepper, secretary of the Mobile, says that the draft is illegal and can not stand, as Stock was sold to New York outright July 1.

What's This-Carl Morris on Short End?

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Considerable interest is being shown in the Al Reich-Carl Morris six-round bout, to be staged here Friday night. Reich, who entered the professional ranks a week ago and knocked out his opponent in a few rounds in the early betting, despite the fact that he is a mere novice in the ring is in comparison with Morris, who has been "white hoping" almost since Johnson knocked out Jeffries.

$1,000 FOR GILBERT M.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Sept. 17.—Gilbert M., the last of Morgan County's high priced harness racing horses, was sold to-day by Scott Green to W. H. Winslow, of Taylorville, for $1,000.

Jimmy Johnson Has Stolen 100 Bases

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 17.—Jimmy Johnson, center fielder for the San Francisco team of the Pacific Coast League, whom the Cubs recently drafted, brought his season's record for stolen bases up to 100 in the seventh inning of yesterday's game between San Francisco and Los Angeles.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

CINCINNATI BASE HITS.

"I make three hits," Joe Tinker said;
"three solid, healthy blows.
I walloped Myers on the jaw and
Sweeney on the nose,
And Maranville they tell me still is
lying comatose."

"It must have been a gladsome sight
to see you spilling gore,
But tell me," I besought him, "what was the final score?"
"We scored five knockouts," answered he, "and Boston got but four."

Still, managing the Reds is enough to make any man feel like starting a rough house.

We note by the batting averages that Maranville is improving in his hitting. But reports from Cincinnati indicate that he can't hit in the same class with Joe Tinker.

Speaking of hitting, Ray Demmitt is the leading batter in the International League. If you ask an International League pitcher about it he will say: "Ye, Demmitt!"

The report that Connie Mack has offered a college pitcher $15,000 in real money leads one to suspect that the recent losing streak has affected his mind.

Arthur Polly now arises to state that Tommy Burns is the acme, the ne plus ultra and the e pluribus unum of all that is square in the boxing game. The said statement has the unanimous approval of Tommy Burns.

Messrs. McGeehan and Klaus were matched in Milwaukee a few years back, but when McGeehan took one look at Klaus he became violently ill. He recovered immediately after the match was completed.

It is said that George Stovall wants his unconditional release from St. Louis, but a man ought to be satisfied with any kind of a release from St. Louis.

Boxers in Wisconsin will have to be on the level or keep out of the State. Wrestlers are congratulating themselves on the fact that there is no wrestling commission.

YOU CAN'T TELL THESE DAYS.

It was a long and dreary game;
The players loafed and stalled
As if they all were dull and lame
And wished that time were called.

"Oh, let us leave this place," said I;
"This game is on the blink.
I know a quiet place near by
Where we can get a drink."

"Oh, let us stick around some more,"
A friend replied to me.
"For they may start a fight before
The game is done," said he.

LINES BY CONNIE MACK.

The gladdest words of tongue or pen
Are these: "The Naps have lost
again."

It seems that the sole object of the Naps is to cause a champion to lose sleep. In this particular they resemble Chick Evans.

As we understand it, the only White Sox who will take part in the Sox-Giants tour are James J. Callahan and Charles A. Comiskey.

With Ad Wolgast out of the game and Jess Willard in the hands of the comptroller, Tom Jones has been deprived of all visible means of support.

JOBS.

I'd like to hold Ban Johnson's job—
it is a lead pipe cinch.
And yet I wouldn't take the job held down by old Tom Lynch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Here are the results of the three bouts staged last night at the Atlantic Garden A. C.:

Johnny Howard, of New York, defeated Larry English, formerly a New York policeman.

Young Ahearn, of Brooklyn, outpointed Bert Fagin, of San Francisco.

"Hugh" Anderson and Tommy Bergan battled to a draw.

Majors Draft Three From Rome Team

ROME, Sept. 17.—Philip Utley, Carlos Hurt and John Cochran, the three star players of the Rome baseball team, have been drafted by the major leagues. Utley and Cochran go to the St. Louis Americans and Hurt to the Cincinnati Nationals.

A BASEBALL ORGAN IN FRANCE.

That baseball has at last "come to stay" in France is demonstrated by the fact that the game now has its official organ in the French language, "Baseball," the object of which is to popularize the American national game in France and to instruct would-be players in the rules of play. This new sporting paper, which is issued monthly, price 20 centimes, is published by the Union Francaise de Baseball, 71 Rue Rochechouart, Paris, which organization will furnish any information required concerning the game in France.

American Citizens Are Slaughtered and the Civilized World Scoffs

Mexican authorities are "investigating" the case of one hundred American refugees from Torreon, including women and children, who fell into the hands of rebels while proceeding overland from Saltillo. This "investigation" is being made at the polite request of the American Embassy. A polite request is all that the American Embassy is permitted to make when American citizens in Mexico are threatened with the same dreadful fate that has befallen so many of their fellow countrymen there.

A few Japanese are killed in China, and Japan demands an apology and full reparation. Japan is but a fraction of the size of China, yet such a demand promptly results in an apology and full reparation.

Americans are killed in Mexico, American women are outraged and ALL THE REPARATION OUR GOVERNMENT EXTENDS IS BLAND ADVICE TO THOSE WHO HAVE NOT YET BEEN KILLED TO LEAVE THE COUNTRY, IF THEY ARE ABLE TO DO SO. The case of the one hundred refugees now in the hands of murderous bandits proves that not all of them may be able to do so—alive.

The Democratic party is destroyed and THE VERY NAME AMERICAN IS DISGRACED BY SUCH PEDAGOGIC PUSILLANIMITY.

The comic papers of the world are making us the butt of their jokes. And, what is worse, hostile nations and inimical individuals are making us the object of their insults.

It is SAFE to pick on Americans. IT IS SAFE TO KILL AMERICANS. It is particularly safe to murder and mutilate American women and children. The American Government HAS NO CONCERN FOR SUCH THINGS. Its pedagogue and its demagogue have no concerns for anything but postoffices, political spoils and Carnegie pensions.

A United States Senator living in a border State and familiar with the indifference to the lives of Americans in Mexico—an indifference that apparently is shared alike in Mexico and Washington—said recently:

"A Mexican can kill an American in Mexico or can commit worse outrages on Americans, but our Government will not interfere unless, while in the act, he says: 'I am doing this solely because you are an American citizen.'

"And I am not at all sure," added the Senator, "that it would not be necessary for the Mexican to notify the Secretary of State that he committed his crime as an act of hostility against the United States Government before we would bring ourselves to interfere with him."

EVERY DAY BRINGS NEWS OF FRESH AND MORE TERRIBLE OUTRAGES, AND STILL NOTHING IS DONE.

MEANWHILE, AMERICAN CITIZENS ARE SLAUGHTERED, AND THE CIVILIZED WORLD SCOFFS.

White Slavers and the Mann Law

The conviction of Diggs and Caminetti in San Francisco has been promptly followed by a secret attempt on the part of gentlemen of the same stripe to repeal the Mann White Slave Law, which has proved an effective means of punishing the crime that such persons make their profession. Alarmed by the prospect of being interfered with by the law, this gang has started a dangerous raid on the law which threatens them.

Their business being criminal, they will brook no interference with it. Not only is this apparent in the effort now being put forth to repeal the Mann Law, but it is perfectly evident in the legal farce that has been made of the pursuit of Harry Thaw.

For seven years Thaw has been hounded by a gang of fashionable white slavers who object to their operations being interfered with, and who have the usual pull that all white slavers have with Tammany Hall and the State administration.

This band of polite cadets may have law, art, photography or architecture as a pastime, put their profession is criminal. And they feel that Thaw must be punished in order that they may pursue their criminal operations in safety.

Officials, big and little, high and low, in two American States and in Canada, have, knowingly or unknowingly, served the purposes of this crowd of dissolute scoundrels just as they would have Congress serve their purpose by repealing the Mann White Slave Law.

The Canadian law has been flouted in order that Thaw, who was quietly awaiting a hearing in Canada, might be taken from his cell and hurried across the border where he was within the reach of men ready to take him back to Matteawan.

There should be no possible excuse for this particular piece of high-handedness. Thaw was doing no harm in Canada and was not in a position to do any harm there. Public sympathy was with him. Yet not even a writ from the highest court could save him from violent delivery into the hands of his prosecutors.

This is all of a piece with the subterranean methods now being employed to take the Mann Law from the statute books where it has proved a real menace to the blackguardly persons who use their wealth to promote their scoundrelly profession.

Any effort to punish a man who would remove a white slaver will be applauded, if not actually aided, by such men as these. They may be depended upon in future to do their utmost to safeguard their dastardly calling, and to seek the punishment of anyone who dares interfere with them—even though it be the father, brother or husband of one of their victims.

That such men have a pull with the authorities, high and low, is an undoubted fact. That they use that pull vigorously is apparent every time an effort is made to rescue a victim from their toils, or whenever a law is passed which will enable the courts to punish one of their number as he deserves to be punished.

THE "PIFFLE" HEADLINERS

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

"Ladies an' gentlemen, the attractions has all came! The show will now begin!" Scarcely had these startling words been uttered by the stage manager of the Jonesville Opera House when Admiral Juice, of the battleship "Piffle," advanced gracefully to the footlights and commenced his lecture on "The Making of a Bank Account." At the same moment Professor Tights, the celebrated juggler, and Pretzel and Stein, the Dutch comedians, began their acts. Through the half-open door at the back of the stage the Tyrolean Yodlers could be seen awaiting their turn. It was a ripping show! Suddenly there was a commotion at the rear of the auditorium. Two woe-begone strangers had tried to enter without tickets, claiming that they had urgent business with Admiral Juice. The next instant they were seized by the doorkeeper and violently ejected, while from the stage the voices of the yodlers were heard in the following refrain, as follows, to wit:

"Uf you vant to know
How to get der dough,
Hoo la la ee hoo, hoo la la ee hoo!
On der platform go,
Mit a circus show,
Hoo la la ee, la ee, la ee, hoo!

Advice to Girls in Picking Husbands

By DOROTHY DIX

I HAVE received a letter signed by thirteen girls who request my advice in the selection of a husband, and ask what qualities they should look for in picking out their life partners.

Of course, the conventional way to answer this question is to say to a girl: "My dear, marry a man who is honest and honorable, who neither drinks nor smokes nor swears nor plays poker and who belongs to the Y. M. C. A. and goes to church every Sunday, and you will be happy ever after."

Some of the Best Men on Earth Are Meanest Husbands.

Unfortunately, this isn't true. Some of the best men on earth are the meanest husbands. Many a man who never says anything stronger than "Oh, fudge," can growl for six weeks at a stretch. Many a man who has moral principles that are as impregnable as the Rock of Gibraltar is as hard and cold also as the said rock. Many a man who is as honest as the day is no more as a steel trap, and has to be chloroformed before he can be pried loose from a quarter. Many a philanthropist is so busy promoting the welfare of the world he has no time to devote to making his own home happy.

I am not disparaging the big virtues. Far from it. Every girl in selecting a husband should see that the man she marries is moral and upright, but she shouldn't stop there. She should see that he has some of the amenities of life as well as its virtues, that he's got a few graces as well as a backbone.

Now, if I were picking out a husband, after satisfying myself that the man was neither a drunkard nor a thief, nor leading the double life, the very first thing that I would take into consideration would be his temper. I would see whether he was good-natured and could meet the ordinary little misadventures of existence with philosophy, or whether he went off into silent grouches whenever anything crossed his sovereign will, or else flew into a fury about it.

I should know that in the ordinary run of married life there would be plenty of times when things went wrong; when I would make mistakes and do foolish things, when the soup would be too salty, and the roast burnt, when a million things would happen to vex him, and I shouldn't want a husband who sulked around the house, or said things to me in anger that cut like the lash of a whip every time there was a hitch in the domestic machinery.

Nor should I want to spend my life, as many wives do, going in mortal terror of doing or saying something that would rouse the slumbering devil in their husbands. Believe me, temper has wrecked more homes than the Demon Rum ever has, and between a man with a temper hung on a hair trigger and one who goes off on an occasional jag the choice is with the jaggist.

The second quality that I should look for in a husband is tenderness. If I were thinking of picking out a man to spend the next 30 or 40 years with, I should watch like a lynx to see how he treated old women and little children and servants. If he let an old woman stand while he sat; if he called children "brats" and knocked them out of his way; if he was insolent to servants, I should say "no" to him, no matter how attractive he was in other ways.

For I should know that he had no pity or sympathy for the weakness and the helplessness of humanity, and that when the day came when I was no longer young nor strong nor vivacious and able to entertain and amuse him he would forsake me for somebody able to minister to his pleasure.

The third quality that I should look for in a husband is liberality. I should watch to see how he spent his money. If he haggled over the price of everything, if he shooed away every beggar and gave the waiter the least possible tip, I should know that he would make the kind of a husband who doles out car fare to his wife, goes over the grocery book and snoops around the kitchen to see the thickness of the potato parings. And I wouldn't marry him if he was the last call to the dining car I was ever likely to get. No women on earth work as hard for their living as those who have to cajole it out of a flinty-hearted husband.

The fourth thing that I would take into consideration in a man is his ability to get along in the world. He wouldn't need to be rich. I would rather marry a man, and take my chances for future comfort with him, if he was getting twenty-five hundred dollars a year that he made by his own effort than one who had an income of twenty-five thousand dollars a year that he had inherited from papa, and who had never made a dollar of his own. The best luck that can ever fall to a woman is to marry an energetic, capable young fellow and help him make his fortune, but the worst fate that ever befalls a girl is to be tied to a shiftless never-do-well, who fails at everything he tries to do.

Therefore, before I married a man I'd make it my business to find out whether he had strength enough to stand on his own feet, or whether he would be one of those clinging-vine men that somebody else has to support all of his days. I'd know, for one thing, that I should be hungry and need clothes after marriage just as much as I did before, and also that I shouldn't have much respect for a husband who wasn't man enough to hold his place among other men.

Then I should positively refuse to marry any man who wasn't a suffragist, and who didn't believe that women had a right to have a half of the pleasures and perquisites of the world. I should know that the man who thought that women in general were only fit to be classed with criminals, idiots and the insane would make the sort of a husband who derides his wife's opinions, refuses to give her an allowance, and who regards her as an upper servant to minister to his lordly self.

Girls Should Look for a Sympathetic and Generous Man.

That's what I'd do, girls. I'd look out for a man who was good-natured and good-tempered and generous and sympathetic, and who thought that a woman, even a wife, was a human being with a right to her own opinions and pocketbook, and when I'd found that sort of a man I'd marry him, if he asked me, no matter what other faults he might have. For I'd know he'd make the kind of a husband that is lovable and easy to live with. And that's the thing that counts in matrimony.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Hustling

Hard work is necessary to success, but overwork leads to carelessness and disaster. In the end the human machine called man is a wreck, sacrificed on the altar of speed.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox
(Copyright, 1913.)

If you are an American you probably have great respect for that American word, "hustle." If you employ help, no doubt you use that expression, "Get a hustle on," which has been dignified by classification in Mr. Bell's "The Worth of Words."

"Getting a hustle on" is supposed to be the first long stride toward any success in life. It is an excellent thing, indeed, to feel impelled to put all your powers into immediate action.

Every human being is a reservoir of the energy which is back of all creation. The more fully he realizes that fact and the more earnestly he puts that energy into action the more positive and immediate are the results.

There is such a thing, however, as overhustling. The continual "hustler" who never rests and never allows any one about him to rest at times defeats his own ends. He breaks down with the nervous strain of his own hurry and causes others to break down.

Aside from these direct disasters he is the indirect cause of innumerable accidents and misfortunes, which he attributes to "ill luck" or "carelessness" of others.

Science Teaches Accidents and Fatigue To Be Closely Related.

This carelessness may in countless cases be traced to the door of the hustler.

The scientific men have decided that there is a close relationship between fatigue and accidents. Investigation of the cause and conditions leading to accidents has given an interesting number of statistics to prove that as a workman grows more fatigued he becomes more liable to meet with accidents and to produce them.

This is the scientific argument for shorter hours for man and beast.

The investigators found that in each succeeding hour of the first half of the day's work accidents become more numerous, while after the midday rest during the first hours of the afternoon they were fewer. Then later in the afternoon the number of accidents increased until toward the end of the second half of the day the proportion was larger than for the latter half of the morning hours.

Therefore the scientists argue that a short snap spell in the middle of the afternoon would tend to decrease the number of accidents.

What we term non-living objects are capable of weariness as well as men and animals. It is a good thing to change your impressions of labor, whether you are in the trades, arts or professions, radically. Science has proven that even inanimate things are capable of a certain amount of feeling.

Take an occasional rest yourself whenever you feel worn and nervous. See to it that your employees are enabled to do so. Let them relax for five minutes even after a strain of hard hours of labor, and you will find they turn out better work and show more interest in your affairs for this privilege.

Short Rests During the Day Enrich Employers in the Long Run.

Let your horse relax and rest at intervals during the day. When it is a possible thing to do, even at the cost of a little money, hire a fresh animal for half a day and let your own tolling beast rest. He will last longer and do better service as a result.

Instead of the continual cry of "Get a hustle on you!" say to your helpers occasionally, "All relax and rest five minutes." Set the example yourself and then rouse the work with your old American battle cry if you like.

But how much better if the new generation of Americans would cultivate the spirit of earnestness instead of that of continually "hustling." Is a great thing to be in earnest. But—

The hurry of the times affects us s
In this swift rushing hour, w crowd, we press
And thrust each other backward a we go,
We do not pause to lay sufficien stress
Upon that good, strong word, "earn estness."
In our impetuous haste, could w
but know
Its full, deep meaning, its vast im port; oh,
Then might we grasp the secre
of success.
In that receding age when me were great,
The bone and sinew of their pur pose lay
In that one word. God loves a earnest soul—
Too earnest to be eager. Soon o late
It leaves the spent horde breat less, by the way,
And stands serene, triumphant at the goal.

Letters From the Readers of The Georgian

THE BOY AND LEARNING.

Editor The Georgian:

Your editorial, "The College Man," is a most timely article, and hits the nail on the head. The parent that has had to hustle from early youth out in the world lasting and giving hard knocks that make men, seems to think in many cases that his son should be saved that which made a man of him and is essential to making a man of his boy. Hence the boy is sent to school for the best part of his life, when his mind is capable of absorbing things that are worth while and things that are not taught in books at all.

The son is thus put far away from the real activities of life and when he has a diploma, a frat pin and a college yell he feels that the world is at his feet. When he awakes, if he ever does, he finds that there are very few of the problems of daily life that can be solved by algebra, and that Greek roots and Latin classics play little part in the earning of daily bread. The fact that the great work of the world is done by hands and not by brain power seems to be the last thing taught in schools. Until boys are taught that manual labor is the highest class of work, that work with the hands, directed by the brain, brings in the highest wage, that no kind of physical toil is dishonorable, and that true education is the fitting of the body and mind to the carrying on of some specific physical work, in which the muscles of the body play the most important part, until this is done education as given to-day is a fault. All education that tends to take the mind and body of a boy from nature and natural life is wrong.

A boy, coming out of a college with a diploma, may think he is educated, yet if he can not tell how a seed planted in the ground can be made to yield a harvest and bring forth food, and if he has no interest in the making of a larger yield of corn to the acre, of the perfection of wheat for bread, and the improvement and care of stock for meat, he is too ignorant to be turned loose upon the public without a guardian.

HERE'S A STUMP PULLER.

Editor The Georgian:

In a recent issue of your paper I noticed a description of the "Holt Caterpillar," together with your comment.

As a representative of the Zimmerman Steel Company, of Lone Tree, Iowa, I wish to call your attention to a machine they manufacture for removing trees and stumps.

This machine will uproot the longest tree or stump that grows —can be operated by three men and a pair of horses or mules, and will remove anywhere from 20 to 300 stumps or trees per day.

Wish to say that this machine has been in use in South Georgia for the last three years. My father, D. S. Williamson, of Mount Vernon, Ga., was the first man to introduce this machine in the South, and they are being shipped into South Georgia now at the rate of 200 to 250 each year.

Of course, this machine can not be used for preparing or cultivating, but as for removing stumps and trees it will do it much cheaper than the "Holt Caterpillar" or any other contrivance on the market.

F. D. WILLIAMSON.

WEEKLY WEATHER SUMMARY UNFAVORABLE TO ALL CROPS.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Mean temperatures were below normal during the week, except there was a slight excess in Tennessee, northern and western Alabama, the greater portion of Mississippi, extreme northern Arkansas and central Florida.

The greatest deficiency was 8 degrees at Fort Worth, Texas. Maximum temperatures ranged from 84 to 90 degrees over the eastern half, from 94 to 98 degrees over the central and from 98 to 78 degrees over the western portion of the belt.

The lowest mean temperature, 64 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the mean for 68 stations at Wilmington, N. C., and Oklahoma City.

The highest mean temperature was 80 degrees, at Tampa, Fla.

The week closed with cool weather prevailing over the greater part of the cotton region.

Light frosts occurred at Clarendon, Texas. Precipitation occurred generally throughout the cotton region, but the amounts were generally light in Tennessee and the Carolinas and they were less than one inch over the greater portion of Georgia, the northern part of Alabama and a few counties in Texas. The precipitation was unusually heavy in Mississippi, Louisiana, southern and eastern Oklahoma and the eastern part of east Texas, where the rains were generally in excess of four inches, and there was a considerable area in southeastern Oklahoma, northeastern Texas and southwestern Arkansas, where the amounts were between 8 and 10 inches. There were a few over-night temperatures with more than 8 inches, namely: Galveston and Mobile, 12; New Orleans, 8.80, and Marble Falls, Texas, 8.20.

The heavy rains caused some damage. The drought continued in Middle Tennessee and more rain is needed in parts of western Oklahoma, western North Carolina and in the central part of South Carolina.

SUDDEN CHANGE IN MARKET TONE

Market Erratic All Day, With Indifferent Cables on One Hand and Bad Map on the Other.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—In the face of large receipts and poor cables, the cotton market opened steady to-day, with first prices 2 points lower to 1 point higher than Monday's close. There was considerable buying as the prices neared the low level, on the idea that splendid weather would take around that figure. It was a talk that spinners were showing symptoms of attention and were ready to buy cotton at current levels than heretofore.

At 11:08, almost an hour after the opening of 15:00, while January advanced 4 points, March was about 2 points lost ground.

Cleanage reports were quite numerous from the interior. There was no special feature to trading after the call and the market developed a reactionary tendency in the early hours, with prices easing off all Europe discloses labor unrest spreading. Much of the recent buying has been for speculation and this will force back on the market in case of checking tendency and a very small offering sets skids. The market opened as though it needed constant support to hold it up. Shorts were the only big buyers for the day. The market has sold rather freely and broke 7 to 9 points under the previous close.

Local bears say the market is long and unless continually supported it will sell lower, as cables from Manchester and the continent say trade is becoming dull.

The ring had apparently gotten short when some of the bull leaders and brokers closely identified with spot houses began to show signs early of an upturn during the late forenoon. October rallied to 13.12, against 13.02, and January, 13.01. The next potent factor for the buying was based on the Government's weekly weather report. Which was unfavorable, showing that drouth still continues in parts of Texas and Oklahoma, and where rains were excessive the crops were damaged considerably.

Liverpool was said to be a seller in this market.

Erratic trading during the afternoon hours resulted in prices receding to the initial level and at the close the market was 4 points off to 1 point below than the closing quotations of Monday.

Following are the closing notations in New York: October, 12.91; December, 12.94; January, 12.85; March, 12.95.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: October, 12.88; December, 12.94; January, 12.97; March, 13.07; May, 13.14.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 16.—Liverpool shows weakness and declining tendency; department where sales to-day were 4,000 bales at 7,000 bales at Monday's notations. There are further reports of heavy shipping in some sections owing to poor trade.

Weather conditions overnight were favorable with practically no rain in the Atlantic States, light overnight rains in the Central and Eastern States, mostly in the Southern and Southwestern States and Mobile sections. Indications are for rains in the Western and Southern States; further light showers in the Eastern States; warmer to-night.

Our market opened slightly lower and showed an easing tendency, but trading was much quieter. The small business in Liverpool, improved weather conditions with consequent anticipation of further showers and poor trade reports checked support and prompted realizing to long.

Feeling, however, is still friendly to the bull side, owing to unfavorable conditions coming daily from New York on the weather map.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Hutton & Co.: It looks like a good many bears bought on dips for the present, at least.

Hayward & Clark: We think cotton should be bought on slight breaks.

Miller & Co.: We think the market continues a bull proposition.

Sternberger, Sinn & Co.: While we are still bullish, we would be careful about buying on price spots.

COTTON GOSSIP

The census bureau places the total supply of cotton for the year ending August 31 at 16,156,221 bales, as compared with 17,876,221 bales for the same period last year.

The New York Cotton Exchange will open at 12 o'clock noon, on Monday. Also the stock exchange.

Liverpool cables that Manchester has failed to confirm gloomy trade reports. The majority of English spinners are committed for the next few months and must buy cotton. Business is less active, but this is deemed natural, owing to the late advances, and Manchester authorities look for full consumption until the market advances extremely, though on a narrow margin of profit.

The spot situation in the South is pretty well portrayed in the following dispatches to E. F. Hutton & Co.:

Atlanta, Ga.: "Fair demand, but movement just beginning in our territory crop fine."

Greenville, S. C.: "Fair demand spots, but practically no offers."

Dallas: "Demand poor. Interior to be on of line. Still raising large harm now."

"Not much demand spots from Europe, but interior price very high, and these rains will stop picking and selling, which is the main thing Europe has been waiting for. Think good parlance."

Fort Worth, Texas: "Demand much improved at better basis. Spots have not followed options."

Houston: "Heavy rains all over State will make low grade and retard movement. Better inquiry for spots."

Oklahoma City: "Spots dragging very slow with us. No improvement."

Texarkana: "Rains during the week damaged cotton considerably. As for rains being beneficial, it's a joke and everybody knows. Prices being paid for spots in this section are 1/2 to 3/4c. Buyers are cagey at that. Mostly exporters buying. They realize the situation."

Decatur, Ala.: "Spots demand only fair. Mills are fighting hard to buy clean basis cotton."

Sakatah: "No weakness spots here. Firmly held for full prices. Offerings small."

Spots advices to N. L. Carpenter & Co.:

Anderson, S. C.: "Crop conditions good; movement free; spots locally quarter lower than yesterday."

Charlotte, N. C.: "Think our crop doing well, absolutely guaranteed on late frost for good yield."

Advices from Washington say: "Commission on the Clarke cotton tax amendment is in sight. Just now it looks as if the substitute suggested by Senator Hoke Smith would be accepted. This is a plan for regulating delivery pursuant to sales made on exchanges. Hoke confreres are apparently favorable to the Smith substitute. Protests have poured in on Congressmen from the South against the Clarke proposal in such numbers that it looks certain the Clarke bill will have to be modified or eliminated. The Smith amendment offered in the Senate caucus as a substitute and defeated accepts the New Orleans Exchange contract as a model, and would require the New York Exchange to conform to that system."

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 16.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map to-day is favorable, shows rainfall chiefly in the eastern States, no frost, light showers in the central and eastern States, with general rainfall, mostly light, reported in Texas, except in Mobile and Memphis districts, where more heavy rains fell. Warmer in the western States.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "The wire of the Census Bureau for August on cotton consumption in the United States, reported from Washington yesterday, completed the data for the commercial year. The total was about as predicted in this column and editorially in a recent issue. We have put forward by Secretary Hester in his annual report of September.

"The Bureau makes the total consumption for the year ending August 31 in South, including foreign cotton, for the year, 3,780,000 bales, which is about put the total at 3,805,000 bales, a difference of 15,000, or about one-third of 1 per cent."

The next ginning report will be issued on the 18th, and private estimates vary 2, and will show cotton ginned to September 25 piled on after date, and that at the time, the Bureau will issue its last regular cotton report for the cotton season, showing the condition of cotton crop on September 25.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The market for cotton seed oil was active to-day. Prices were reflected by the following fluctuations, that month sold down 15 points on the opening on the result of heavy liquidation and stop loss selling, precipitated as the morning advices from Texas offerings at lower prices. Distant months were steady, however, on sentiment and covering by commission house buying and absorption of the offerings.

STOCKS JUMP ON RENEWED BUYING

Canadian Pacific and Reading Purchased Heavily, Causing Sensational Rise.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—There was a renewal of buying at the opening of the stock market to-day and Amalgamated Copper and Canadian Pacific made gains of a point on first sales. There was unusually heavy trading in all the active issues and a brisk demand was shown for Reading, United States Steel common and Union Pacific.

Fair crop reports and made a fractional gain on the strength of the earnings statement. Among the declares were Steel common ½, Union Pacific ¾, St. Paul, Southern Pacific ¼, People's Gas ¼, Northern Pacific ¼, Erie ¼, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western ¼, Chesapeake & Ohio ½, American Can ½.

During the first half hour, the buying fell off and there were some reactions. Rises were also recorded in Western ¼, New York Central ¼, Louisville and Nashville ¼, Great Northern ¼.

Pittsburg Coal issues were active and strong.

The curb market was steady.

Americans in London were steady. There was also a better demand for foreign orders for Reading, Union Pacific and United States Steel, as outlined from New York. The belief here is that the London powerful interests are cooperating to reduce the floating supply.

Canadian Pacific advanced about 4 points, crossing 235 in the last hour. Reading was also in demand, both in New York market and the London exchange. It rose a point to 168. Union Pacific was up ¾ on the day, selling around 186¾, and Amalgamated Copper and Smelting were also fractionally higher on the boom range. American Can sold off.

The tone was firm.

The market closed steady. Government unchanged; other bonds steady.

DAVIS SLATED TO WIN OVER MERCER

Knowing Politicians Assert That Warm Springs Man Will Be Next Game Warden.

The impression among those political observers who put two and two together with more than average accuracy is that Charles Davis, of Warm Springs, will be named State Game Warden in succession to Jesse Mercer, of Fitzgerald, within the next few days.

Mr. Davis is one of the very best posted men in Georgia on matters pertaining to game and has made a study of not only the laws of Georgia, but of every other State in the Union as well. He has been heavily indorsed to the Governor for the position.

Mr. Mercer, who has served in the capacity of State Game Warden since the office was created, has had the backing of a large number of sincere patriotists for reappointment, but the knowing ones predict that he will lose, nevertheless.

This is one of the best offices within the gift of the administration. Mr. Mercer has taken great interest and has been very active in the administration of his game laws, and for a time it was thought that he might be reappointed.

The firm of Wadren Mercer expired several weeks ago, and he now is holding office until "his successor is named and qualified."

Speedway, One of the Best in U. S., Will Be Sold; $180,000 Asked

The automobile speedway near Hapeville, one of the best automobile racing tracks in the United States, is to be abandoned as a racing center and the land and buildings sold. The formal decision to close out the property—long anticipated—was made by the stockholders of the Speedway Association at a meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms Wednesday morning, with nearly 40 present.

F. J. Coolidge, president of the association, stated after the meeting that the track is to be abandoned because of the inability to draw crowds to the races, owing to poor transportation facilities. The property is to be placed in the hands of Asa G. Candler, Jr., secretary of the association, and a price of $180,000 has been placed on it.

Augusta's Coroner Fines and Fires

AUGUSTA, GA., Sept. 17.—Because Dr. C. J. Montgomery, Coroner's physician, refused to sign the papers by which he could collect pay from Richmond County for holding an inquest over the body of T. W. Beaden, a traveling man who committed suicide here early today by inhaling gas, Coroner W. A. Mamsey fined the doctor $25 and ordered his arrest.

Constable Clifton Wall, of the Coroner's Court, refused to arrest Dr. Montgomery, whereupon Coroner Ramsey insisted upon Wall's immediate resignation, which was tendered and accepted.

Leiters Race Home to Get Son's Toy Rabbit

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17. — A speedy trip taken by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter from Bar Harbor, Me., to this city, to recover a toy demanded by their young son, who threatened when the couple found an old and battered rabbit hidden away in their home in the Virginia hills.

Young Joe refused to be on the world cruise his parents had planned without his Peter Rabbit, which had been left behind.

'Put Poison, and Not Victims, in Coffins'

CLEVELAND, Sept. 17.—An ordinance to compel manufacturers to make all poisonous pills and tablets in the shape of a coffin will be introduced in the Cleveland Council by Councilman M. E. Sieder.

An unprecedented number of accidental poisonings, mainly from bichloride of mercury taken for headache tablets, aroused the Councilman to seek a remedy.

Bible Book Issued By Bishop Candler

A new book entitled "Practical Studies in the Fourth Gospel," by Bishop Warren Candler, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, has been issued from the press. The book is the first of two volumes dealing with studies of the gospels.

The studies, it is said, are not "critical," but rather "practical" in that the matter engages the attention of the heart instead of the mind.

Needle Tours Body Quietly for 50 Years

WINSTED, CONN., Sept. 17.—A needle, which entered the body of G. Tibbals, 61 years old, over a half century ago, was removed in two parts from Tibbals' right elbow.

In traveling through his body the needle had never given any trouble until recently, when the elbow began to swell.

Chinese Wear U. S. Garters on Outside

EAST ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 17.—The Rev. Dr. Stanley White, of this town, said that in a recent trip to China he discovered native men wearing American-made garters—but on the outside of their trousers.

FOREIGN DEMAND SENDS COTTON UP

Damage Reports From Western States Disgust Bears—Four-teen Cents in Sight.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Influenced by a sharp upturn in Liverpool, the cotton market opened firm to-day at a net advance of 16 to 20 points from Tuesday's close. Some private cables attributed the rise in Liverpool to American and continent buying, based on bad crop news from Texas, also bears turning to bulls. However, it was obvious that news of crop damage had considerable influence in the local market.

Immediately after the opening a wave of profit-taking and bullish commission houses and the ring, caused prices to work 1 to 3 points above the highest on the opening. With the cables to create sentiment in their favor, the bulls made a concentrated effort to advance the market still further, but in the rest of the belt, also light precipitation over the Western States, but better over the Texas, the eastern half of the belt.

Cotton people were confident with buying contracts and the bulls maintained a more confident position and advised purchases, predicting 14 cents this week. It looked to many prejudiced observers as if the market was hard to bull over after it had become every time it is forced above 13 cents there is heavy selling and prices react to that level.

The market was heavily purchased during the afternoon session based on unfavorable reports from the western States; prices, however, failed to bulge to any extent from the early high mark, but it was noticeable that bull leaders were adding to their lines and that there was buying up to the close by those who are inclined to the belief that the market trends higher. Predictions of clearing weather failed to disturb the market and the close was firm with prices at a net advance of 25 points from the closing quotations of Tuesday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 17.—Liverpool anticipated the effect of favorable political developments in Washington and advanced sharply, futures being 14 to 16 points higher at the opening of our market, spots 8 points higher, sales, 7,000 bales.

Washington news is more positive in regard to the chance for sane legislation and the continuation of low American markets.

A Liverpool cable said: "America and interior buying, bears turning bull, decidedly bad account Texas and Arkansas."

The weather map shows local rains and a general precipitation; very light in the Western States, heavier in the eastern half of the belt, particularly in northeast Alabama, where rain is needed, according to yesterday's Government report. Indications are for clearing and cooler weather in Oklahoma; little precipitation in the Western States, with a tendency toward clearing generally Thursday, but scattered rains in the eastern half of the belt, although less extensive.

Our market opened 15 points higher and advanced to 13.25 for December.

There is no opposition to the advance. Bullish feeling predominates and controls the market. All interests are in favor of an advance. Considering the long spot buyers want it, because it furnishes the basis and differences buying, and the country wants to sell the spot as high a price as possible.

Another low or bullish Government Bureau report is already looked for.

The daily New York wires are bullish and are the principal factor in pushing the advance further.

The present rainy spell, while lowering the grade, is favorable to an increase in yield, particularly with a late fall.

Spots are pulled up by futures.

Trade orders are not rushing and buying is mostly against bank interests.

COTTON GOSSIP

J. M. Anderson: "Traders who went home short last night, expecting an easier Liverpool because of labor troubles, were surprised at the quotations sent over by that market and their covering sent December to 13.29 on the opening.

"Cables reported good buying in the English market led by Eccles & Co. and the unfavorable crop reports from Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas, which this market has apparently but ignored on the theory that they had already been discounted.

"Leading local bulls appeared to be adding to their lines to-day, and there was also buying by smaller traders, who believed the trend points higher. Selling was scattered and looked to be parties profit-taking and partly hedge sales.

"Clearing weather may bring about some reaction, but figuring from crop reports from central and western belt, it looks a purchase on any reasonable downturn."

Miss Giles makes the condition of the cotton crop as of September 11 at 68 per cent, as compared with 69.9 per cent two weeks ago, against 74.4 per cent a month ago and 70.7 per cent for the five-year period last year.

All States show declines as follows: North Carolina, 2; South Carolina, 2; Georgia, 3; Florida, 4; Alabama, 3; Mississippi, 5; Louisiana, 6; Arkansas, 6; Tennessee, 12; Oklahoma, 5 per cent; and Texas remains the same as two weeks ago, when the condition was 62 per cent.

Condition by States follows: South Carolina, 78, against 80; Georgia, 72, against 89; Florida, 81, against 85; Alabama, 76, against 79; Mississippi, 76, against 75; Louisiana, 68, against 74; Texas, 65, against 65; Arkansas, 74, against 72; Tennessee, 68, against 80; Oklahoma, 67, against 54. Average 69, against 69.9.

S. Tate says: "Liverpool cables strongly reflect change of sentiment abroad. Foreign manufacturers have not secured their cotton. They may now be expected to come actively into the market. I look for considerable advance before the end of the month."

* * * *

Brown, Drakeford & Co., Liverpool, cable: "Heavy buying by America and the continent. Reports of crop damage and local bears turning to bulls caused advance."

* * * *

Bull leaders are talking 14 cents within a week, but the student of Senator Clarke hangs over the market.

* * * *

However, some good spot people say that spinners are not buying because of the doubt due to the tax legislation. They do not believe the advance will hold.

Ocean freight rates to Liverpool are easier, being quoted at 30 to 32½ against a flat 35-cent rate last week.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 17.—Hayward & Clark: "The weather map favorable, shows cloudy over the entire belt, general rains, only very light in Texas and Oklahoma, but some good rains in Alabama, particularly in the eastern portion, where the Government says rain is needed; general showers also fell over the Atlantic.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "On the eve of the meeting called by the conference committee on the character of the cotton standards, under the United States Congress is to pass, the cotton market is in a receptive condition hoping for the best, yet prepared for the worst, and ready on the one hand, to begin a period of splendid constructive endeavor in the behalf of the cotton industry as a whole, and on the other hand, to prepare, through the closed doors of interest, for a day to come when the barter and sale of Dr. South's great staple shall revert to primary principles of trade in vogue before the days of scientific protection.

"News from Washington was of the encouraging sort. The New Orleans tailor, from whose hands the cotton planters men, who, during recent years, have made the winning fight for the cotton producer, felt that, should science and intelligent business methods win the day, the force generated in the Senate by prudence and ignorance should serve as a warning for the future.

"Very little rain fell in Texas, and none in Oklahoma in the 24 hours ending Tuesday morning, though the weather continued unsettled in the west. However, the Agricultural Department's checked the spread of bearish sentiment that showed signs of developing in reporting in its weekly cotton region weather bulletin excessive rains in some sections and enough in others."

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Sternberger, Sinn & Co.: We think cotton should be bought on breaks.

Shearson, Hammill & Co.: We think the market is still in a trading position.

A. Norden & Co.: It may be that the present level will prove to be a temporary halting point, but we see no reason to anticipate any decline of consequence.

C. F. Hutton & Co.: We still see no reason for taking the short side unless temporarily.

Logan & Bryan: We rather look for a reaction.

Miller & Co.: We think the market is still a bull proposition.

DUBLIN COTTON RECEIPTS.

ROCK ISLAND AND M. P. LED DECLINE

Poor Crops, Profit Taking and Wide Fluctuations of Reading Market Features.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—There was heavy trading in Reading at the opening of the stock market to-day, most of the speculative interest centering in that security. Reading began at 163½ for a gain of 1¾ and immediately increased the advance to over 2 points. Later there was some profit taking. A material decline in railroad issues were under some pressure and sold off from last night's closing.

The first sales of Reading amounted to 1,200 shares.

Among the declines were the following: Rock Island Steel common, 1¾; Union Pacific, ¼; Southern Pacific, ¼; Northern Pacific, ¼; Pennsylvania, ¼; New York Central, ¾; Great Northern preferred, ¾; Erie, ¼; Chesapeake and Ohio, ¼; Canadian Pacific, ¼; Anaconda Copper, ¼; Amalgamated Copper, ½.

New York, New Haven and Hartford began at 88¼ and declined further within a point. Missouri Pacific, after opening unchanged, sold off to 31. Pfd. advanced ¾ and the same amount of Missouri, Kansas and Texas preferred. Telephone and Telegraph, Chino Copper and Central Leather were strong, the latter advanced. Baltimore and Ohio, after selling 1 point, and American Can also rose.

The bond market was steady.

Labor troubles in Great Britain caused heaviness in the London stock market. Americans in London were liberal with gains above New York parity. Union Pacific in London was irregular, but Canadian Pacific there was strong on international buying.

Central of New Jersey dropped back in the last half hour and sold at 295, off 5 points under pressure and a number of issues sold lower in sympathy. Quotations Steel went to 64¾, for a fractional loss from noon and the low of a point from the opening. Reading dropped under 163 for the loss of over a point since midday. American Pacific sold down to 222¾, which was over a point lower than last night's final. American Smelting and American Can also were beneath the noon range.

The market closed dull. Governments unchanged, other bonds firm.

GRAIN PRICES HELD AT SLIGHT ADVANCE

Early Sellers Turn to Buyers Before the Close and Some Take Profits.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—The grain market was fairly well held, with closing prices for the day unchanged to ½c higher for wheat, ¾ to ⅞c higher for corn and ½c better for oats. Many of those who sold early were on the buying side late. There was a disposition on those sales to let profits run as the day were away.

The cash markets were slow, but this was because of the light offerings. The seaboard reported 10 loads of Manitoba late yesterday and there were 50,000 bushels sold here. Minneapolis and Duluth exporters at Chicago and 15,000 bushels otherwise bought in store. Chain corn sales were 100,000 bushels and oats 230,000 bushels.

Hog products were strong and the best prices for the day were fairly well held.

SENIORITY RULE IS MENACE TO RAILROADS

Forbes Pleads for "Safety First" in Assailing the Promotion of New Haven Engineers.

By B. C. FORBES.

The public first.

That is the new keynote.

* * *

Corporations have had it dinned in to their ears. Politicians are beginning to listen to it.

SHALL RAILROAD EMPLOYEES BE ALLOWED TO FLOUT IT?

* * *

Is the answer to be dictated by railway men's unions or by YOU, the public?

* * *

The time to reply is NOW.

The subject has been raised sharply by the New Haven Railroad engineers. They claim that the public safety must receive not first, but only second consideration.

The men flatly declare that the managers entrusted with the running of the road must accept the selection of their union in promoting men to positions of great responsibility, thus the matter of fitness is none of the managers' business, that the "rule of seniority" must be slavishly adhered to, even if engineers guilty of playing with human life by running past red signals have to be placed at the throttle of the fastest and most important passenger trains on the whole system.

* * *

The Union Pacific was confronted with a similar problem not long ago, but rather than allow the men to override the management the company decided to suffer all the inconvenience and loss entailed by a prolonged strike. But the Union Pacific was fighting for a just principle. And it won.

Is the public to support the hands of President Elliott in his fight against the tyranny of the engineers' union? Is the public, and especially the public of New England, willing to intrust its life, whenever travelling on the New Haven, to engine drivers believed by the company to be grossly incompetent, but foisted into express engines by Van overreaching union?

Does age necessarily sharpen the eyesight, quicken the intelligence and improve the physique of every engine driver? Shall a second-rate man be given a first-class position simply and solely because of his length of service?

* * *

Do YOU want to ride behind the BEST man the road can pick to command its passenger trains? Or are you content to let the union have its way no matter how grave the danger entailed?

* * *

Boiled down, stripped of all technicalities, that is the real, the only question.

Assuredly, the public has little reason to place a high estimate upon the ability of the old New Haven managers to run a railroad. But a new president has taken hold. He is entitled to your support and mine in devising methods for the protection of every traveler on his lines. Is it fair to him to let a union tie his hands? Is he to have no word to say in selecting the most capable engineers available to pilot express trains? Must he accept abjectly the men ordained by the union's castiron rule?

* * *

The engineers' union is not fighting President Elliott. It is not fighting the New Haven. It is fighting you. It is fighting every one of us. It is sacrificing safety for its own ends.

Are managers to manage railroads in the interest of the public or is an engineers' union to manage them in its own interest?

The engineers should be left in no doubt of how the public feels on the subject. Let the New Haven engineers triumph in this case, and where will domination by unions, where will trifling with human lives, stop? Railway travel is dangerous enough at best. Are we to let it be made doubly so just because a union has passed a rule that it does not want broken, no matter what its observance may cost in human blood?

Bible Book Issued By Bishop Candler

A new book entitled "Practical Studies in the Fourth Gospel," by Bishop Warren Candler, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, has been issued from the press. This book is the first of two volumes dealing with studies of the Gospels.

The studies, it is said, are not "critical," but rather "practical in that the matter engages the attention of the heart instead of the mind.

FOREIGN DEMAND SENDS COTTON UP

Damage Reports From Western States Disgust Bears—Fourteen Cents in Sight.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Influenced by a sharp upturn in Liverpool, the cotton market opened firm to-day at a net advance of 16 to 20 points from Tuesday's close. Some private cables attributed the rise in Liverpool to America and continent buying, based on bad crop news from Texas; also bears turning to bulls. However, it was obvious that news of crop damage had created considerable influence in the local market.

Immediately after the opening a wave of profit-taking, attributed to commission houses and the ring, caused prices to work 1 to 3 points below the opening range. With the cables to create sentiment in their favor, the bulls made a concentrated effort to advance the market after the call. In the rush of covering, the last rallying to the opening range. There was more talk of general weather in Oklahoma and part cloudy to cloudy weather in the rest of the belt, also light precipitation over the Western States, further rains in the eastern half of the belt.

Spot houses were credited with buying contracts and the bulls maintained a more confident position in January purchases, predicting 14 cents this week if locked to unprofitable shorts; also if the market was hard to put over 14 cents because of the fact that prices above 13 cents there is heavy selling and profit-taking by spots.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 17.—Liverpool anticipated the effect of favorable political developments in Washington and advanced sharply, futures being about 16 points higher at the opening of our market, spots 8 points higher; sales, 7,000 bales.

Washington news is more positive in regard to the chance for tariff legislation and the continuation of the American cotton market.

A Liverpool cable said: "America and Continental buying basis turning bull, steadily bad account Texas and Arkansas.

The weather map shows cloudy over all the entire belt, general precipitation very light in the Western States, but heavier in the eastern half of the belt, particularly in northeast Alabama, where rain is needed, according to yesterday's Government report. Indications are for clearing and cooler weather in Oklahoma; little precipitation in the Western States, with a tendency toward clearing and cooler. Prospects for further rains in the eastern half of the belt, although less emphasized.

Our market opened 12 to 15 points higher, advanced to 13.25 for December.

There is no opposition to the advance. Bullish feeling predominates and continued activity in the market are in favor of an advance. Speculation is fairly active. Weather map favors a clearance, the basis and facilitates buying. Crop orders are not rushing and buying is mostly against high futures.

COTTON GOSSIP

J. M. Anderson: "Traders who went home short last night, expecting an easier Liverpool because of labor troubles, were surprised at the quotations sent over by their brokers and their covering sent December to 13.29 on the opening.

"Cables reported good buying in the English market led b Eccles & Co. on the unfavorable crop reports from Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas, which this market had yesterday, but ignored on the theory that they had already been discounted.

"Leading local bulls appeared to be adding to their lines to-day, and there was also buying by smaller traders, who believed the trend points higher. Selling was scattered and looked to be partly profit-taking and partly hedge selling.

"Clearing weather may bring about some reaction, but judging from crop reports from central and western belt, to look a purchase on any reasonable downturn."

Miss Giles makes the condition of the cotton crop as of September 11 at 67 per cent, as compared with 69.3 per cent a month ago and 74.4 per cent a year ago and 68.9 per cent for the same period last year.

The following shows declines as follows: North Carolina, 1; South Carolina, 2; Georgia, 3; Florida, 4; Alabama, 3; Mississippi, 5; Louisiana, 6; Arkansas, 6; Oklahoma, 12; Oklahoma, Upper coast, and Texas remains the same as two weeks ago, when the condition was 83 per cent.

Condition by States follows: South Carolina 78, against 79; Georgia 77, against 80; Florida 81, against 85; Alabama 56, against 72; Mississippi 76, against 81; Louisiana 68, against 74; Texas 65, against 65; Arkansas 64, against 72; Tennessee 88, against 90; Oklahoma 47, against 56. Average 67, against 69.3.

S. Tate says: "Liverpool cables strongly reflect change of sentiment abroad. Bears manufactures have not secured their cotton. They may now be expected to come into and support the market. I look for considerable advance before the end of the month."

* * *

Brown, Drakeford & Co., Liverpool, cable: "Heavy buying by America and the continent. Reports of crop damage and local bears turning to bulls causes advance."

* * *

Bull leaders are talking 14 cents within a week, but the shrewd Senator Clarke hangs over the market.

* * *

However, some good spot people say that spinners are not buying because of the doubt due to the tax legislation. They do not believe the advance will hold.

* * *

Ocean freight rates to Liverpool are easier, being quoted at 20 to 25 cents, against a flat 35-cent rate last week.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 17.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map favorable, shows cloudy over the entire belt, general rains, only very light in Texas and Oklahoma, but some good rains in Arkansas, particularly in the eastern portion, where the Government says rain is needed, general showers also fell over the Atlantics.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "On the eve of Congressional action by the conference committee on the character of the cotton market and cotton the United States Congress is to meet, the cotton market seems to attention hoping for the best yet fearing for the worst, and feeling, on the one hand, to begin a period of speculative activity in which the behalf of the cotton industry as a whole, and on the way to prepare, through the elimination of interest, for a big increase in the number and sale of the South's chief staple shall result in primary principles of trade in vogue before the days of scientific legislation.

"News from Washington was of the encouraging sort. The New Orleans cabinet, from whose ranks have come the men who, during recent years, have made the winning fight for the cotton producer, felt that should science and intelligent business methods win the day, the forces gathered by the Senate in his prejudice and ignorance should serve as a warning for the future.

"Very little rain fell in Texas, and none in Oklahoma, in the 24 hours ending Tuesday morning, though the weather has continued unsettled in the west. However, the Agricultural Department believed the spread of the rainfall sufficient that showed signs of developing by reporting in its weekly crop report weather bulletin excessive rains in some sections and not enough in others.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Sternberger, Sinn & Co.: We think cotton should be bought on breaks.

Dawson: Bullish on the belt, think the market is still in a trading position.

Neely & Co.: It may be that the present level is about as high as temporary bulling point, but we see no reason for taking the short side on account of any decline of consequence.

C. F. Hutton & Co.: We still see no reason for taking the short side unless temporarily.

Logan & Bryan: We rather look for a reaction.

Miller & Co.: We think the market is still a bull proposition.

DUBLIN COTTON RECEIPTS.

R. I.-M. P. DROP ON DAMAGE TO CROPS

Other Issues Firm on Renewed Interest by Big Operators—Labor Unrest in London Hurts.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—There was heavy trading in Reading at the opening of the stock market to-day, most of the speculative interest centering in that security. Reading began at 160¾ for a gain of 1¾, and immediately increased the advance to over 2 points. Later there was some profit taking. A majority of the railroad issues were under some pressure and sold off from last night's closing.

The first sales of Reading amounted to 12,000 shares.

Among the declines were the following: United States Steel common, ¾; Union Pacific, ¼; Southern Pacific, ¼; Northern Pacific, ¼; Pennsylvania, ¼; New York Central, ⅜; Great Northern preferred, ⅛; Erie, ⅛; Chesapeake and Ohio, ¼; Canadian Pacific, ⅛; Copper Consolidated Copper, ⅛; Amalgamated Copper, ⅛.

New York, New Haven and Hartford broke 3¾ on 88⅛ and declined further with the next few minutes, touching the lowest point it has reached on its present movement. New Haven closed last night at 89¾. Missouri Pacific, after opening unchanged, gained ¼. St. Paul advanced ⅝, and the same amount of gain was recorded by American Telephone and Telegraph. China Copper was unchanged on the first sale, but later advanced. Baltimore and Ohio was strong, gaining 1 point, and American Can also rose.

The curb was steady.

Labor troubles in Great Britain caused heaviness in the London stock market. Americans in London were cheerful with gains above New York prices. Pacific in London was 1 point irregular, but Canadian Pacific there was 3 points above the New York close.

The market shows remarkable strength and the trailing sales are well absorbed. Public interest is increasing and will continue to increase as prices go higher. Realizing on stocks has been rapid in certain stocks, every bulge inducing profit taking and values before the bull market culminated, I believe the leaders, like Reading, Union Pacific, Steel and Copper, are a purchase on reactions. It is expected by some that Interboro preferred will be put on a dividend basis to-day.—G. H. Potter.

Interboro Rapid Transit declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent.

The stock market has developed remarkable strength in many of the leading issues. While some stocks have secured a good advance, speculation is still in its higher prices. As the market becomes broader public participation will increase. We believe stocks should be purchased on all moderate reactions.—G. H. Potter.
