Marietta Social News

MARIETTA.—The wedding of Miss Irene Jackson and Mr. Harold Hawkins at the First Baptist church last Wednesday evening was a beautiful and interesting event. The bride and her matron of honor were dressed in white duchess satin and the maids were in pink and blue crepe meteor. Miss Maud Foster and Mr. George Hardeman played the marches and the "Traumerei" during the ceremony. The ring was borne in a white lily by the small brother of the bride and her two little nieces, Elizabeth and Sarah Frances Northcutt, were flower girls. Rev. G. S. Tumlin performed the ceremony. A reception at the bride's home was the most enjoyable. The front veranda was screened and embowered in wisteria vines. The invitations were in one nook and the punch bowl in another, where Miss Minnie Lee McNeel and Miss Marie Owenby served. Those serving in the dining room were Misses Matt Black, Helen Lewis, Anne Mae Jones, Hooper Wilkie, Alice Wilson, Jean Wallace, Virginia Barnes and Rosa Willingham. Assisting in entertaining were Mrs. George Montgomery, Mrs. S. H. Hall, Mrs. Lee Baldwin and Miss Nina Moon. When the bride's cake was cut the thimble was found by Miss Willie May Blair, the dime by Miss Jessie Butler and the button was unacknowledged. The bride's traveling suit was taupe cloth, with hat to match.

A notable wedding took place at high noon Thursday in the Marietta encampment of the Confederacy to which many prominent citizens were invited. Father Jackson, pastor of St. Anthony's church, in Atlanta, performed the ceremony uniting Miss Jennie Collins and Mr. Patrick O'Kelly. Miss Bridget Shanlock was bridesmaid and Mr. Peter Sherlock best man. A sumptuous wedding feast was served on a long table set under the trees, in the center of which was a magnificent bride's cake, baked and presented in Atlanta. The clan presented a handsome new tent with suitable furnishings to the bride.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

BRIGHT and early Saturday morning the streets will be thronged with a bevy of pretty girls and young matrons each hastening to her appointed place at some particular street corner, or else at the door of one of the great office buildings, there to stand the whole day, offering gaily colored tags for the benefit of the little babies of the day nurseries of the Sheltering Arms. Like grand opera, since the initial occasion "Tag day" has become a permanent institution in Atlanta and is a synonym for a time of fun and frolic, for on that particular day, the whole city unites hold high carnival. The little tin pails fill rapidly with silver, as each dime or quarter or nickel as the case may be rattles its way into the tiny buckets held out for the offering, in exchange for the tag which promises immunity to the wearer. Towards the end of the day, the vision comes as visions do at sunset of the open doors of the nurseries, the long line of babies waiting to be taken in, cared for and better still, loved, while the busy mothers are away at the mills earning the money for their support, secure in the knowledge that for that day at least that the helpless little ones are shielded and wrapped about with loving care away from the probability of harm or accident. So, it is, that realization comes that each tag day makes for the possibility of more nurseries as the city grows, and one is quite sure, with a growing certainty, that the whole of Atlanta will be not only willing, but eager to be tagged on this first Saturday in the merry month of May.

Selecting the Bride's Silver Is an Important Duty

EVERY Atlanta bride should have cause to be pleased at the results of studies made in the silver and jewel fashion centers by the Haynes Company this winter and spring.

Look in upon our wonderful collections of silverware for dining room, drawing room, library or for personal use. You will feel indeed that you have been well represented by our scientific quest for specialized information.

Simplicity and refinement of line dominate the bride's gifts for this year. Among the most popular patterns are found the following:

Mary Chilton — Paul Revere
Fairfax — Louis XV — Chantilly

All of these, and others, abound in our beautiful store. Call and inspect the collections at your will.

M. RICH & BROS. CO. 47th Anniversary Sale

1867--47 Years of Growth--1914

In 1867, when war-riven Atlanta was struggling to establish itself anew, Mr. Morris Rich opened a store at 36 Whitehall St., where Maier & Berkele's Annex now stands. In two years he was joined by his brothers, Messrs. Daniel and Emanuel Rich.

The little store that served so well the 20,000 to 25,000 people of that time has now grown to be a big store, serving equally well ten to twenty times that number of people throughout Atlanta and the South.

Though the store has changed largely physically, it has changed not at all in policy.

The store policy then was to serve—quality, service and satisfaction went with each purchase. After 47 years of store-keeping we know no way to improve upon that policy.

It was easy to serve the people of that date. There were no telephones nor street cars; attending Grand Opera and entertaining the Shriners were as far away as the millennium.

With the growth of Atlanta, however, the store had to justify its existence by enlarging its usfeulness. The firm expanded; trips to New York became more frequent; foreign connections were established; direct importations were made.

Atlanta kept on growing; Rich's always abreast with it. It is the pride of the store today that it has kept pace with Atlanta throughout its 47 years of phenomenal growth.

We are now down to 1914. As a complement to our 47 years of growth and service has come SUCCESS.

To our many friends and patrons who have made this success possible,

The 47th Anniversary Sale Is Dedicated

The Forty-Seventh Anniversary Sale

Will Make "Bargain" History For the Entire Month of May

—We've planned the event for months; every department has entered into it with zest.

—Our merchandise manager spent nearly all of April in New York with the buyers. The time was ripe for picking up many fine lots. Manufacturers, too, were glad to co-operate with their life-long customer—they favored us with many surpluses and odd lots. This page tells of them only in PART. There is another FULL PAGE in THE GEORGIAN and still another FULL PAGE in THE CONSTITUTION. MANY other items, moreover, are not advertised—find them scattered about the store under 47th Anniversary Sale signs.

WEDDINGS OF THE WEEK

Miller-Gheesling

A beautiful wedding of Wednesday evening was that of Miss Eddie Eugenia Gheesling, of Thomson, Ga., and Mr. Lawton Alexander Miller, of Jacksonville, Fla., which occurred at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Gheesling. Mrs. B. F. Siler sang "Love Thee, Truly," and Mrs. Tom Fleming, of Sparta, played the wedding march. Mrs. Hugh F. Gheesling, of Atlanta, was matron of honor, entered alone, gowned in white crepe meteor trimmed in duchess lace and carried pink carnations.

Next came Miss Madeline Gheesling, the maid of honor, wearing a pink crepe meteor with lace overdress and carrying pink carnations.

The bride entered on the arm of the groom, and stood under an arch of white roses, from which was suspended a wedding bell. The bride was lovely in an exquisite creation of duchess crepe meteor trimmed in duchess lace and embroidered in seed pearls. Her tulle veil was confined with a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and valley lilies.

Dr. W. D. Young, pastor of the Baptist church, performed the ring ceremony.

A large reception followed the wedding ceremony.

Clark-McAfee

An event of interest to a wide circle of friends and relatives was the marriage of Miss Jessie Bell McAfee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McAfee, and Mr. Arthur Puchee Clark, of Boston, Mass., which took place Wednesday afternoon, April 29, at 3 o'clock, at the Park Street Methodist church, Rev. Wallace Rogers officiating.

The bride was lovely in a coat suit of blue, carrying bride roses.

On account of recent bereavement in the bride's family the wedding was very quiet, with no attendants, only relatives and intimate friends being present.

After a luncheon at the home of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Clark left for their future home in Dallas, Tex.

The out-of-town guests attending the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Clark, of Boston, Mass., parents of the groom; Mrs. J. B. McAfee, of Dalton, sister of the bride, and Mr. Hill, of Dallas, Tex.

Jordan-Farrell

A beautiful event of Wednesday evening was the wedding of Miss Margaret Farrell and Mr. William Jordon which took place at the home of the bride's brother at 98 West Peachtree street.

The bride was beautiful in a gown of white satin with tunic of chiffon and trimmings of real lace, and carried a bouquet of Easter and valley lilies.

The matron of honor, Mrs. J. A. Pendergast, of Louisville, Ky., was beautifully gowned in pink crepe de chine and carried a bouquet of Killarney roses.

Mr. W. J. Apel was best man.

After May 10 Mr. and Mrs. Jordan will be at home to their friends at 98 West Peachtree street.

Hazlett-Davidson

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Davidson announce the marriage of their daughter, Jewel Winifred, and Mr. George H. Hazlett Thursday evening, April 30.

The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents on North Boulevard.

Only the immediate families were present on account of the serious illness of the bride's mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Hazlett will make their home in Buford.

Beam-Davis

The marriage of Miss Florence Paulite Davis, of Brunswick, and Mr. Paul Dish Beam, of Atlanta, took place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. H. B. Butler, 1621 Lee street, on Friday afternoon at 6 o'clock, Rev. C. A. Jackson of the First Methodist church officiating.

Only the immediate families were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Beam will be at home to their friends at 57 Piedmont place.

Griffith-Vanderford

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Vanderford announce the marriage of their daughter, Cora Gertrude, to Mr. Carroll S. Griffith on Saturday evening, April 25, Rev. N. S. O'Kelly officiating.

Strouss-Hollingsworth

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Hollingsworth have issued cards announcing the marriage of their daughter, Ada, to Mr. William Strouss, on Wednesday, April 29.

Rag Rug Exhibit

The Yard committee of the home for incurables will hold a Rag Rug exhibit at an early date, the time and place to be announced later.

This is the second display of work by this committee—the first one early in the spring meeting with such marked success, and creating such a demand for these articles that it was decided there was an imperative need for another display.

It will include a much more varied assortment of rags, pillow tops and table covers, and in addition will be shown a variety of new articles, displaying the many artistic as well as useful purposes to which this industry can be applied.

A distinctive feature will be the use of the official Shrine colors in pillow covers, suitable for lawns and porches, and forming a most attractive and useful souvenir of the Shrine convention in Atlanta.

Piano Recital

The pupils of Miss Martha Phillips' piano class gave a recital Friday evening.

Those taking part were Miss Katie Wallace, Miss Mary Wallace, Miss Eva Lyle, Miss Clara Phillips, Miss Gussie Mae Jone, Miss Sadie Harrison, Miss Georgia Phillips, Miss Ruth Lindorme, Miss Memory Tucker, Miss Florence Cooper, Miss Kathleen Allen and Masters Pascal Harrison and Russell Phillips.

After the program an informal reception was held.

Children's Party

Master St. Elmo Massengale, Jr., celebrated his fourth birthday with a pretty party Wednesday afternoon.

During the afternoon of games, after which dainty refreshments were served, the little guests drew favors from the heart of a large red poppy.

Vesper Club Dance

An interesting event of the coming week will be the dance to be given by the Vesper club at their club room in West End, on Friday evening, May 8.

Plans are being made to make it a very enjoyable affair, and all members are cordially invited to attend.

BRIDE OF THE WEEK

MRS. E. A. LAMBERT.

Formerly Miss Mary Lawrence, of Ashburn, whose wedding to Dr. Lambert was solemnized Thursday, April 30. Dr. and Mrs. Lambert will make their home in Denton.

Things Worth While

These are the things worth while:
The rainbow after rain;
The peace that follows pain;
The dew-tipped garden rose;
The flower that by the wayside grows
To calm an urchin's smile.

The little sacrifices made
By patient mother-love;
The touch of little children's hands;
And sweet affection's subtle bands.

The bright sunshine above;
The song the robin sings;
The chord of music that awakes,
Yearning for nobler things.
These, and a trusting woman's love—
In life are most worth while.
—VERNE DEWITT ROWELL, in Nautilus.

Cooking School

The Atlanta Chapter D. A. R., will conduct a cooking school, beginning on Monday, May 4, from 10 to 12 o'clock at the chapter house, with Mrs. S. R. Dull as teacher.

GRAY HAIR GOOD BYE

No Need to Look Old or Played Out—Hair Beautifully Darkened.

To darken your gray, white, faded, streaked or permanently gray hair try the following: Get from any druggist a 7-oz. bottle of Q-Ban. On retiring apply it to the hair and scalp like a shampoo. Let the hair fall free and dry all night. The gray disappears and a few more applications of Q-Ban your hair is beautifully darkened so evenly and naturally no one will suspect you use Q-Ban. In addition, Q-Ban gives the hair that fascinating appearance of abundance and beauty which is so attractive. Q-Ban gives a delightful feeling of refreshment and cleanliness to the scalp—as Q-Ban is not sticky or messy, has a mild, pleasant odor; safe to use and always beautifully darkens the hair. This will make you look years younger. Try Q-Ban if you want soft, fluffy, beautiful dark hair and lots of it. Big 7-oz. bottle 50c, sold by Edmonson's Drug Store, 11 N. Broad St., and 106 N. THE WEEK IN RETROSPECT

...ith the last strains of "Il Pa...
...ciacci" on Monday evening, filling
...the auditorium with their melody
...and sweetness, one of the
...most socially successful weeks
...ever known in Atlanta came to a triumphant
...close in the mammoth building
...on Peachtree, with a
...listened with breathless
...attention to the strains of exquisite
...music rendered by the greatest artists of the ...season, to the accompaniment of the ...full orchestra, the intervals between
...each act given over to a series of ...entertainments.

...The week was given Thursday by Mr.
...and Mrs. [illegible] one of the most delightful events
...of the season was a charming ex-
...hibition of real southern hospitality,
...the house and a tempting col-
...lation served on the wide veranda,
...where small tables which had
...been placed in center vivid blue corn flowers
...in artistic arrangement. The guests of ...honor were Miss Geraldine Pearce, and
...Richard T. Wilson, of Nashville,
...Among the guests were a num-
...ber of the celebrated artists and at the ...conclusion of the breakfast many exquisite
...musical numbers were given. Mrs.
...Brown, who possesses an operatic
...voice of rare beauty, sang several se-
...lections which contributed greatly to
...the pleasure of the morning. Mrs.
...Brown was assisted in the entertainment
...by guests by her daughters, Mrs.
...Dan Gallaghly, Mrs. Inman Gray, Mrs.
...M. Brumby, Jr., and Mrs. James R.
...Gray, and the occasion was one of ...the most beautiful that marked the ...season.

...Colonel and Mrs. William Lawson

...The event evening following the opera
...at the auditorium an informal
...dance has been held at the ...Capital club, while two of the ...most delightful entertainments of the ...week were dinner dance on Tues-
...day evening at the Piedmont club, and
...the dinner at the Capital City club on ...Saturday evening.

...On each occasion the degree of brilliant
...entertainment for which Atlanta hosts
...are so famous was manifested especially within the club
...walls by the many distinguished vis...itors and the social world
...of Atlanta became known to each other
...and hospitality was dispensed
...by hosts and members of each
...club.

...The guests were present at
...the club Tuesday evening,
...dinner was served at 8 o'clock. The ball
...room, main dining room, loggia and
...the porch of the north and east
...sides were used to seat the brilliant
...throng, and each table presented a
...picture with a centerpiece of
...[illegible] pale pink roses, yellow

...The presence of a number of the ...members of the Metropolitan com-
...pany added interest to the oc...casion, and much attention was shown
...the beautiful visiting matrons and girls
...who have added so much to the social
...side of opera week.

...Following dinner the guests danced
...in the ball room and dining room, music
...being furnished by a stringed orchestra
...in each room.

...Large gathering was pres-
...ent at dinner dance at the Capital
...club Thursday evening. Each in...stance was arranged for the dinner
...table, each with a vase of glow-
...ing roses, and the long table at
...which the officers of the Atlanta Music
...Festival association entertained Mr. Gi-

MR. AND MRS. VICTOR H. HANSON, of Birmingham, Ala., and Mrs. Frederick F. Mots, of New York, were the guests of honor at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Atkinson Thursday evening at the Capital City club. The table was charming in its appointments of rose and white, the center bring a graceful arrangement of pale pink Killarney roses and the bonbons and ices continuing the pretty color suggestion. Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson's guests included Mr. and Mrs. Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. Motz, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Gunster, Mrs. Barringer, and Mr. Julian Dawe, of Birmingham, Ala. and Mrs. Ralph W. Davidson, of Ontario, Canada.

Mrs. Motz was gowned in white satin combined with rare lace and embroidered with crystal. Mrs. Hanson's lovely gown was of ciel blue brocaded satin and lace with a French touch of gold on the bodice. Mrs. Gunster wore pink taffeta with overdrapery of white embroidered chiffon. Mrs. Barringer wore an imported model of [illegible] satin draped with lace, and Mrs. [illegible] was gowned in bronze satin with French combination of cloth of gold and soft tulle.

The large number of distinguished visitors in the city has been one of the very pleasant features of opera week. Each occasion was marked by the presence of scores of representative people from many states.

Mr. Otto Kahn, director of the Metropolitan Opera company, was accompanied south by a party including Lord Viscount Acheson, of England, Mr. W. Forbes Morgan, of New York, Mr. Henry Bull, Mr. Bernard Baruch, Mr. Roland C. Cottonet, Mr. Frank Keech, Mr. Henry Rogers Winthrop, Captain Philip Little, Mr. James Stillman, Jr., and Mr. Alvin W. Kreach.

A large party from east Tennessee included Mr. and Mrs. Ross Faxon, Mrs. R. Read, Mrs. W. H. Pryor, Mr. and Mrs. Z. C. Patten, Mr. Chan Norfleet, Miss Louise Van Dyke. Miss Mary Louise Spurlock, Colonel and Mrs. L. D. Tyson, Miss Isabella Tyson, Miss Ida Van Dyke, Miss Cary Van Dyke, Mrs. Richard Gettis, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Baxter, Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Wilson, Miss Alice Smith, Mrs. J. T. Crane, Mrs. Hulbert, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Andrews and Mr. and Mrs. George Lafayette.

Mr. and Mrs. Emory Winship, Miss Margaret Casey, Mrs. Frances Wadley Coleman, Judge and Mrs. Walter Lamar and Mr. Samuel Dunlap were interesting visitors from Macon.

Mr. Frank A. Munsey, of New York, made many friends as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Little.

As the guests of Colonel Willis Ragan, Mrs. DeLos Blodgett and Miss Helen Blodgett, of Washington, D. C., were beautifully entertained while Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Murchison, of New York, and Mrs. Hurkamp received a round of parties as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ellis.

During the early part of the week Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson entertained Dr. and Mrs. Llewellyn F. Barker, of Baltimore, Md., who on several occasions shared honors with Dr. and Mrs. Ira Ramsen, of Johns Hopkins, who are visiting their son and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Heman.

Two very charming visiting matrons have been Mrs. Waring Carrington, of Charleston, S. C., the guest of Mrs. Gilham H. Morrow, and Mrs. Hubert Stanley Dent, of Washington, D. C., who has been charmingly entertained by the friends of Mr and Mrs. James L. Hickey.

Included in another group of charming visitors were Mr and Mrs. Frederick P. Motz, of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Victor H. Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Gunster, Mrs. Barringer and Mr. Julian Dawe, all of Birmingham, and Mrs. Ralph W. Davidson, of Ontario, Canada.

HAPPENINGS IN LONDONTOWN

Ambassador and Mrs. Page were among the notables who attended the recent dinner given by M. Paul Cambon, the French ambassador. Other notables who attended were German Ambassador and Princess Lichnowsky, the Japanese ambassador and Mme. Inouye, the Italian minister and Mme. Mieu, the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Marees van Swinderen, the Servian minister, the Duke and Duchess of Somerset, Lord and Lady Lansdowne, Lord and Lady Granmore and Browne, Lord and Lady Balfour and Miss Fraser, Sir Gerard and Lady Lowther, Sir Arthur and Lady Clementine Walsh, Sir William and Lady Tyrell, Sir Douglas and Lady Dawson, Lady Herbert, Mrs. A. James, Count and Countess Trauttmansdorff, Mrs. Guthrie, Comte and Comtesse de Saint Saine and Viscount de la Panouse.

It is almost definitely settled that Prince Arthur, of Connaught, is to be the first home rule viceroy of Ireland, and in club and political circles the appointment is generally regarded as the best that can be made. As one of the Irish representatives remarked to me the other day, Prince Arthur would make an able and responsible figurehead in Dublin, and his nearness to the throne and his personal intimacy with the king should have a great effect in soothing the Unionist susceptibilities in Ireland. There is certainly no more popular member of the royal family today than Prince Arthur, whose tact and natural charm would undoubtedly endear him to the hearts of the Irish people.

All arrangements for the forthcoming visit of the king and queen of Denmark are now practically complete. Their majesties will arrive in this country early in June, and be lodged at Buckingham palace for a few days, although they will probably be at Windsor for Ascot week. I learn that the main object of the visit of Denmark's king is to enable King George to bestow the Order of the Garter upon his royal cousin.

At the last court every one was remarking how well and handsome Queen Mary looked. As a matter of fact, her majesty has never been in better health and spirits. On state occasions, however, the queen always looks her best, for she is one of those women who can wear gorgeous dresses and quantities of fine jewels without appearing overdressed and overjewelled. The English court jewels are among the finest in the world, and since the queen has had them reset in the present delicate light style, they make a display of extraordinary brilliance.

It must be distressing even for a queen to destroy $10,000 worth of gems in a moment. No more waywardness, like Cleopatra's in dissolving her pearl in wine, lost Queen Mary, as I am told, three pearls from the necklace presented to her by Queen Victoria, King Edward and Queen Alexandra. While aiding her majesty to disrobe recently her chief dresser found some difficulty in opening the clasp of the necklace, and the queen in coming to her aid, broke the clasp, with the result that nine of the pearls fell to the floor. Three of them were trodden on and crushed, and the damage is estimated at quite $10,000.

Not a little curiosity has been aroused by the stipulation on the part of Queen Alexandra that on Alexandra day, which is to be celebrated this year on June 24, no flower-seller shall be under sixteen years of age, and they shall always go in couples. I am informed that this situation has arisen through certain impertinent liberties which were taken last year by men whose manners merited the soundest thrashing. Various complaints were made by young girls who were doing their best in the cause of charity, and men who repeat the conduct this year are likely to meet with a warm reception, for brawny brothers will be on the warpath.

Royal ladies and other leaders of society it is necessary to cultivate the cult of the straight back, for which most American women are notorious. Many royal ladies go through their physical drill every morning, and would soon think of abandoning their daily bath as giving it up. Lord Tankerville's tastes are many and varied. He has been soldier, author, courtier, cow-puncher, artist, singer, sportsman, athlete, evangelist. Now sixty-two he seems in the pink of condition. A turning point in his career was when he met Mr. Moody, the famous American preacher. His own fell into line, and his fine voice enabled him to take the place once occupied by Mr. Ira D. Sankey. He is capable of painting miniatures (which have been exhibited at the Royal academy), shooting bears in the Rocky mountains, or boxing half a dozen rounds. He has brought up his two sons—Lord Osmington and young George Bamat—to be good boxers as himself, and the "gloves" were a great feature in their nurseries. Lady Tankerville is an American, charming and versatile. She speaks five languages fluently, is an expert in art, shoots well, and has driven a railway train.

Lord and Lady Newborough have gone to Egypt. Her ladyship is tall, fair and handsome, has brains as well as looks, talks well, dresses well, and wears wonderful emeralds. She and her sister now the Hon Mrs. Bingham (once Mrs. Chauncey) are Americans, who soon gained a foothold in London. Lord Newborough is an Irish peer, but of Welsh descent, and has a country place called Bryn Llewellyn, in Merionethshire. He is very popular, and his heart is kind and he is much liked by his tenants. At the time of the Welsh coal strike he held a good deal by finding fuel for the deserving poor of the district. He instructed his agent to select wood from his home woods, and had it distributed free of cost by a committee. This was done in no niggardly style, but he expressed a wish that the best trees would be spared. The first of his line was Sir Thomas Wynn, member for Carnarvonshire. This worthy took an Irish title, probably because he wished, after his promotion, to sit in the house of commons, a line that was later on followed by Lord Curson, of Kedleston.

Lady Enid Pane is to marry Mr. Henry Vane, eldest son and heir of Lord Barnard. Young and pretty, the only daughter of Lord Westmoreland, she has been in the ultra-smart set, and was chaperoned by her aunts, Lady Londesborough and Millicent Duchess of Sutherland. Lord Westmoreland at fifty-four is young as we now count age, is a fine shot, a good fellow and much in request in country houses. His late wife was a sister of Lord Rosslyn.

CHARMING VISITORS OF THE OPERA SEASON

MRS. DE LOS BLODGETT AND MISS HELEN BLODGETT.

Mrs. Blodgett and her lovely debutante daughter who have been the guests of Col. Willis E. Ragan for the opera have been feted visitors of the week. Mrs. Blodgett, who was formerly the beautiful Miss Daisy Peck, has been the recipient of a cordial greeting from her many friends, and Miss Blodgett has been the central figure at a number of the delightful entertainments which have marked opera week.

INTERESTING GOSSIP OF INTERESTING PEOPLE

Of interest to thousands and it may be even millions of the feminine persuasion will be the information that has recently leaked out that the renowned novelist, Bertha M. Clay, was a mere ordinary every day man! This will doubtless prove a terrible shock to "Miss Sweet Sixteen" who for many years has been wont in a tempest of sentimental grief to fly to the novels of Bertha M. Clay for a right understanding of the woman heart. The dispatch follows:

"Millions of men and women were amazed to learn on the recent death of Thomas W. Hanshew that he was responsible for the hundreds of very obvious but nevertheless entertaining novels written under the name of Bertha M. Clay, Charlotte Braeme and Charlotte May Kingsley. His last novel, "Creek of Scotland Yard," a detective story written under his own name, was published a few weeks ago."

Super-Tango Tea.

In London the super-tango tea has arrived, thanks to the restless genius of "Jack" May, the American manager of Murray's, who, when the old-fashioned orthodox tango tea seemed to have fallen on evil days and was positively on its last legs, came to the relief of jaded Londoners with the very newest time-killing device.

The super-tango tea, which does not demand any active participation or physical exertion on the part of its devotees beyond paying a minimum of 60 cents for tea and toast, consists of a formidable program which is a melange of tableaux vivants, ultra-modern dances, singing and the added novelty of a fashion parade of mannequins showing the latest Parisian creations.

The specially constructed stage at one end of the supper room is draped with cloth of gold and represents a Chinese interior "in the palace of benevolent blessings."

The footlights are a row of one-legged storks, holding tiny colored electric bulbs in their bills, while Chinese lanterns and much burning of incense add to the atmosphere.

While one sips tea he sees first two Chinese ladies labeled on the program as "Precious Pearl" and "Roundabout Beauty" in tableaux, representing "The Earthly Paradise, 1368 A. D." After this the ta-tao is danced by the Misses Wang and Tuan to the strains of a negro banjo manad.

Then a loud-mouthed megaphone man announces:

"Next will be the Venetian Furlana as recommended by the Pope," although it is doubtful if his Holiness ever recommended the daring slit skirts which the graceful Furlana dancers wear.

Then the tea drinkers are treated in quick succession to the hesitation waltz, the maxixe, and the inevitable tango. Coon songs and banjo ragtime form the transition to the real feature of the super-tango tea—the fashion parade.

Seven models, wearing the latest Parisian evening dresses, all showing marked Chinese influence, pose on the stage, first singly, then en masse, and slowly parade up and down the aisles and around the tables of the tea drinkers, giving the women in the audience, many of whom have come with opera glasses, a chance to examine critically each creation.

Following comes a procession of other mannequins, showing afternoon dresses in the newest shade—rose, charlotte rouge, snakeskin green, nelumbium, harlot red, misse millet and blue dragon. Then the negro band plays 'God Save the King," and the show is over.

The super-tango tea is proving popular. Even for a man it is not only amusing but instructive.

Spurn Hatpin Protectors.

The hatpin problem is as annoying in London as it is elsewhere, and two members of the London county council, Messrs. Montagu Shearman and Anderton, have introduced a resolution suggesting that, in view of the increasing danger and inconvenience to the public caused by the use of long and unprotected hatpins and other projecting ornaments in the headdress worn by women, the local government records and museums committee should report as to the desirability of introducing a new bylaw to deal with the question.

Mr. Shearman said in regard to the resolution that there seemed to be a general feeling that something ought to be done. Most people agree that long hatpins were an inconvenience and a danger. Once a by-law was introduced it would be an easy thing for the police to administer it, and one or two test cases would have a deterrent effect.

Mr. Shearman added that a friend of his, a doctor at St. Thomas' hospital, had told him that there were frequent cases of hatpin injuries on the face treated in the out-patient department.

At a large establishment in the West End it was stated that, though hatpin protectors were stocked, women refused to buy them.

"Marguerite Sylva Day."

Belgium is preparing to bestow unusual honors on Marguerite Sylva, the Belgian-American prima donna, who since her retirement from light opera in the United States two years ago has made a name in grand opera in Europe. The municipality of Brussels has organized a "Marguerite Sylva day" at the Hotel de Ville. The feature of this will be a concert by Mlle. Sylva and several Belgian artists. The king and queen of the Belgians will attend and bring with them the king and queen of Denmark, who will be visiting Brussels at the time. The date of the celebration is May 20.

Mrs. Grace Fjord McCauley, the New York soprano, who recently sang in the "Quest" engagements at the royal operas in Berlin and Munich, has gone to Paris to sing in Henry Russell's Champs Elysees Opera company. She will be a guest while in Paris of Mlle. Sylva, who has just begun her annual season at the Opera Comique.

The Mattress that Makes Any Bed Your Friend

The most beautiful bed is but a poor resting place unless equipped with a clean, comfortable mattress. The poorest bed of insignificant appearance is a true friend if equipped with a Princess Sanitary Felt Mattress.

Because The Princess is a clean, comfortable mattress which supports the body lines, it is restful, which enables you to prepare for tomorrow by sleeping tonight. The Princess is germ and moisture proof and needs no other renovating than an occasional sun-bath.

PRINCESS MATTRESS

is made of carefully sanitized cotton woven into layers of felt that will never lump, pack down or become hard. The ticking is of durable quality and artistic design. The workmanship is by hand; only skilled experts of long experience are employed.

We sell The Princess under a 60 night's guarantee. Ask your dealer. If he can't supply you write us.

Be sure to see The Princess. We guarantee it to be the equal of any, and the superior of many mattresses sold for $15.00 or less. Get Best for Less.

HIST! I KNOW WHERE THERE'S SOME MINT

If you write me, I'll tell you were you can find a nice mint bed right in the heart of Atlanta, and I'll send you a ticket of admission. Then I'll supply the rest and there's no reason why people who have traveled long miles over hot sands to worship at the shrine of Mary Garden or any other shrine, should go away with parched throats.

ATLANTA'S GUESTS ARE YOUR GUESTS

Guess you're pretty proud of the old place yourself—I know I am. You'll want to show 'em a little hospitality, which you can make both genteel and yet convivial with either a light wine or a julep, which for expressing pure warmth of friendship has never yet been equalled by mere words.

FOR THE JULEP

Gold Armor makes the very best, most "julepy" julep in the world because it's blended with whiskey 22 years old.
4 QUARTS, $6.00 Express Prepaid

Silver Armor. Just as silver is to gold—the next most precious and is a julep, well, well—it's blended with whiskey 18 years old.
4 QUARTS $5.00 Express Prepaid

Black Armor. It's a gentlemen among whiskies. Fit for a king—the only difference is it is blended with 12 year old whiskey.

WITH THE COLLEGE GIRLS

Cox College

The art exhibition of Cox college began on Saturday with a reception in the studios and will continue throughout commencement week ending May 13.

The students who will exhibit work are Miss Lucile McWhorter, Miss Annie Lamar Noble, Miss Mazie Gantt, Miss Lota B. Cheek, Miss Estelle Harvey, Miss Alice Hemperly, Miss Lilla Cheshire, Miss Moselle Eason and the members of the China Painting class.

One of the features of the exhibit is the original composition work and landscapes from the beautiful scenes around the college.

A cordial invitation is extended the friends of the college to this exhibit.

An artistic program of piano compositions will be given on Monday evening by Miss Ellen Goodrich, who will receive her certificate in the school of piano this commencement. The recital was followed by a reception in the college parlors.

Large parties of the girls and members of faculty attended the performances by the Metropolitan Opera company at the auditorium this week.

Mrs. C. A. Harvey, of St. Petersburg, Fla., is the guest of her daughter, Miss Estelle Harvey.

Invitations have been issued to the commencement exercises of the college which will begin on Friday evening, May 8, and continue through the evening of May 13.

Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick will address the members of the graduating class Monday evening, May 11.

Lucy Cobb College

Miss Ellen Wolff left last Friday to spend the past week in Atlanta to attend grand opera. During her stay she will be at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Bernard Wolff, on Peachtree place.

On Tuesday, April 28, the tennis tournament in doubles was finished. Miss Janet Newton and Miss Vivian Fulghum won the championship, while Miss Annie Linton and Miss Julia Orr hold the honors of being the runners up. The tournament in singles will not be finished until next week. Great interest will center in the last part of the tournament.

The election of Y. W. C. A. officers for 1914-15 was held Tuesday and the result was as follows:

Miss Louise Walker, president.
Miss Lillian Mitchell, vice president.
Miss Julia Orr, second vice president.
Miss Alice Wood, treasurer.
Miss Ellen Wolff, secretary.
Miss Marian Fargo, chairman of social committee.

This election includes some of the strongest members of the present organization, and it is safe to predict a great success in the work of next year.

Miss Ruth Reid is at her home in College Park for a few days to attend grand opera.

Brenau College

GAINESVILLE, Ga.—Miss Mary Disbro, of Atlanta, took part in the Orpheus recital, which was given on Wednesday evening in Brenau auditorium, her selections being rendered with much skill. Others who participated in the program were Miss Etta Burney, Miss Isabelle Padgett, Miss Louise Prince, Miss Jurelle Little, Miss Nell Newman, Miss Laura Harris and Miss Susie May Dozier.

The recital was one of the most entertaining events of the year, the varied musical program being beautifully rendered.

The visit of the Coburn Players and the meeting of the Emerson Colleges club of Georgia, made the latter part of the week at Brenau most interesting. The out-door performances were witnessed by large audiences, and proved a treat for the Emerson club members. The college campus is well adapted to outdoor dramatics, and the Coburn Players, leaders among the outdoor actors, utilized their opportunities to the very best advantage. The plays presented were "The Canterbury Pilgrims," "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and "Jeanne D'Arc."

Miss Brown, the art teacher at Brenau, has just completed a fine bas-relief for the entrance of Oratory hall, tragedy and comedy having been chosen as her figures.

The dancing party with which the Alpha Chi Omega Sorority entertained Saturday evening was one of the enjoyable events of the week. The rooms were decorated with masses of fragrant wild flowers and draperies of red and green added to the pretty effect.

One hundred and fifty guests were invited.

Miss Ellen Edmonds, assisted by Miss Grace Hines, gave a pianoforte recital in Brenau auditorium Friday afternoon. The program included selections from Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Brahms, Liszt and others.

MOST IMPORTANT Nemo WEEK
SHOWING of NEW NATURE-FIGURE MODELS BEGINNING MAY 4TH

What is the meaning of Nemo Week?
What's the inducement to buy Nemos this week, when I can get them any day in the year?
Questions often asked. We'll answer them:

Full Stocks.—For Nemo Week, dealers prepare full stocks of the very latest Nemo inventions, in addition to the well-known and popular models that are in constant demand.

Selection.—Your choice from full lines of clean, fresh stock, in up-to-date models that meet Fashion's latest and present demand for a fashionable figure rather than a fashionable gown.

Service.—Nemo Week brings keen rivalry to excel in Nemo Service. Expert fitters vie with each other to help you select the Nemo that is best suited to your needs.

Nemo Week Benefits You By Rivalry in SERVICE—not PRICE

The Nemo is the only complete standardized line of corsets in existence, from the old short models to the extreme of present fashion—

KOPSERVICE—Four models at $5.00
SELF-REDUCING—30 models—$3.00 up
LASTIKOPS—10 models—$3.00 to $10

All our former successes will be eclipsed by this Nemo Week. Practically every woman will realize that she cannot afford to miss this opportunity to study the new Nemo models, full assortments of which will be on sale in every leading Corset Department.

All Nemo Corsets represent at least twice as much value, in material and making, as any other corsets sold at the same prices. This is a bold statement, but its truth is known to millions of Nemo wearers. BE A WISE WOMAN! During Nemo Week, get better acquainted with Nemo hygienic comfort and perfect style. BE SURE that you get the RIGHT MODEL in the RIGHT SIZE, and that every corset bears the trademarks "NEMO" and "LASTIKOPS."

Please remember—Monday, May 4, to Saturday, May 9—at your favorite store.

All Designed and Manufactured Under Supervision of the Nemo Hygienic-Fashion Institute, N. Y.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

The Original Germ-Remedy for Dandruff.
Makes hair soft and fluffy. Stops itching of the scalp.

DON'T BLAME YOUR MIRROR

Many ladies compel their mirrors to bear silent witness to needless hair destruction. Day after day they see beauty and attractiveness destroyed by that constant and grave combfulls of slightly diseased hair that could be saved, if your mirror could talk to it, it would plead with you to "save your hair—not the combings." It can be done with Herpicide which eradicates the contagion that causes dull, brittle and lusterless hair, also dandruff and falling hair. Scores of cases of natural luster and abundance will return. Almost extraordinary results. An exquisite hair dressing.

Send 10 cents in stamps to The Herpicide Company, Dept. 107B, Detroit, Michigan, for sample and booklet.

Two Sizes—50 cents and $1.00. Sold and guaranteed at all Toilet Goods Counters.

When you call for Herpicide, do not accept a substitute. Applications at prominent Barber Shops.

Only Opportunity to Build Up Vote—Standings Are on Straight Sets and Combinations Withdrawn May 2

The Journal's M. & M. selling campaign has but two weeks to run, and only opportunity offered to build up votes. The standings will be on straight sets as all combinations were withdrawn Saturday, May 2.

The M. & M. is leading the organization fight with the Hungarian Benevolent Society second, and the First Universalist Church third.

The Circulation Department, in the retail clerks' office, with Miss Brown still leads the clubbers with Theodore Dunnings second.

Reference to a typographical error in Wednesday's vote standing. McHenry Brown's standing should have been 132,169,413 and not two hundred and some odd million.

As this department cannot be responsible for typographical errors, we would appreciate it if contestants will advise us immediately if their vote standings are incorrect.

One point that must be given proper attention is the exchanging of votes between organizations and individuals—THEY MUST BE MADE AT THE TIME VOTES ARE ISSUED FOR SLIPS AND LABELS—This department will appreciate if this request is complied with. Another point that will be a great deal of help both to contestants and this department, is when turning in sets or labels to have all labels or one kind together.

We herewith publish the FINAL sets on which extra votes will be given.

Asheville Social News

ASHEVILLE.—The dances of the week have been well attended. At a special dance given at the Country Club on an informal evening was the dancing of the Maxixe and one-step by the Duchess de Chaulnes, Miss Margaret Shonts and Miss Grace Allen, daughter of General and Mrs. Tyler Allen. Miss Allen, a young woman had tea with Miss Ruth St. Denis, the famous dancer, when she gave her on dancing at the tea before the general dancing began. Miss St. Denis, who was a guest at the Inn for two days, was the guest at an informal supper on Tuesday evening, given by the Duchess de Chaulnes and her sister, Miss Marguerite Shonts, at the Shonts villa in Grove Park.

At the week-end dinner-dance at the Inn this week, several figures in the cotillion were ordered during an intermission in the program of Modern dances. These dances were led by Mr. Oliver Eaton Cromwell, of Philadelphia, dancing with Mrs. Thompson Frazier, who is a niece of Mrs. Edward Stoesbury, of Philadelphia. About fifteen couples took part in this special dancing, among these being Miss Elizabeth Babcock and Miss Dorothy Wolcott, of New York; Misses Madge and Helen Hepburn, of Watervliet; Misses Lindsay, of Rochester, and Miss Maude Willis, of New Orleans.

The Country Club was the scene of the elegant Saturday afternoon, Miss Annie Williams presiding at the punch bowl. A reception was held in the ball room of the Battery Park on Friday evening. The first dance of the summer season at the Montreat Park hotel was also an event of interest this week, a special feature of which was the Maxixe dances of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Neff.

A united dances handicap golf tournament attracting many people to the Country club this week, and the pretty dresses worn by the visitors who formed little tea parties or played bridge, afforded a glance now and then at the progress of the tournament. Among the couples playing were Mr. James Cromwell, of Philadelphia, with Miss Helen Chapman; Miss Case, of New York, with Mr. Bishop Rowland, of New York; Miss Marjorie Pearson with Mr. F. W. Thomas, Miss Therese Chapin with Mr. George Rowley, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. H. C. Johnston with Dr. W. F. Hendrick.

The Duchess de Chaulnes and her son, the little de Chaulnes, have returned from New York and are again the guests of Mrs. Theodore P. Shonts, at her villa here. The son of the Duchess de Chaulnes is with the Duchess de Chaulnes and spent a few days in Asheville during the latter part of the week for New York.

The personal villa colony is changing somewhat with the advance of spring. Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Firestone, who always visit here, left this week for Akron, Ohio. They have occupied a villa on the Beaver Dam road since January. Mr. and Mrs. Witherbee Black have given up their winter cottage here and returned to New York. Mrs. William Sidney Porter and Miss Porter, the wife and daughter of the late "O Henry," will arrive soon to visit the latter's daughter, Mrs. Dillon, in the cozy "Warsaw" villa, which was built by "O Henry," in Weaverville. Miss Dillon is a social favorite here.

Former Governor Herbert S. Hadley, of Missouri, has leased a place here for the summer, and will spend the next three months in Asheville.

Mrs. Percy Pennypacker, of Austin, Texas, arrived in Asheville, as the guest of Mrs. William Johnston Cocke. Mrs. Pennypacker, who is president general of the National Association of Women's clubs, was informally entertained while here, although the formal reception planning for her was called off, at her request.

Mrs. N. M. Watson returned to her home in Grove Park this week from Clearwater, Fla., where she spent the season at her winter home there. Mrs. Watson will be in Asheville until the time of Princeton's commencement, when she goes there for the graduation of her son, Mr. Roy Watson, sailing a short time thereafter with Mr. Watson for Europe and abroad.

With the approach of summer, the names of southerners begin to appear on the register of the hotels here, where New York and Washington names have predominated. Among the prominent southern guests now at Grove Park Inn are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cleveland, of New Orleans.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Ai Henry and Miss Carolyn Henry, of Jacksonville, arrived this week to spend the summer in Asheville. They will occupy a place on the Beaver Dam road, with Mr. and Mrs. Julia Wray, parents of Mrs. Henry.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Barrs, of Jacksonville, arrive soon for the summer. They will make a motor trip from Florida to Asheville.

Mrs. John A. Miller, Mrs. J. J. Ferguson, Mr. Hall Miller and Master Joseph Haines, of Atlanta, were members of a motoring party which stopped at the Grove Park Inn this week, on their home from a trip to Asheville. They left Wednesday accompanied by Mrs. J. D. Couch, who visited friends here, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wadsworth, in Atlanta, for the next two weeks.

How to arouse a sluggish skin

A dull, sallow, lifeless complexion has several causes.

Whatever the cause in your case, your skin needs stimulating.

The following treatment is the most effective you can use;

To refresh your skin

Just before retiring, wash your face and neck with plenty of Woodbury's Facial Soap and hot water. Rub the skin hard—the badly neglected, rub a generous lather into the pores very thoroughly with an upward and outward motion, until the skin feels somewhat sensitive. Leave the lather on your face a minute, then cold water. Then rub your skin five minutes with a lump of ice and dry thoroughly.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is the work of an authority on the skin and its needs. This treatment with it cleanses the pores, brings the blood to the surface and stimulates the tissues of the skin. You can feel the difference the first time you use it—a promise of that lovelier complexion which the steady use of Woodbury's always brings.

Woodbury's Facial Soap costs 25c a cake. No one hesitates at the price of the first cake.

Do this today—Now! Tear out the illustration of the cake below and put it in your purse as a reminder to get Woodbury's. Tear out the cake now. Take it to your druggist or toilet counter today. Begin tonight to get the benefit of this Facial soap. For sale by dealers everywhere.

Plans for May Festival

Many plans are being made to make the May festival at the home of Uncle Remus a bright and beautiful occasion. Little Miss Louise Nicholas will be May Queen and Harold Bloodworth and William Hartman will carry the canopy over the queen as she walks slowly from beneath the bower of crimson rambler roses up the long avenue leading to her royal throne made entirely of ivy and white roses. The crown will be of maidenhair ferns and lilies of the valley and will be borne to the throne on a white satin pillow by little William Booth. He will give the crown to Miss Katherine Vickers, last year's queen. She will place the pillow for the new queen to kneel on while her crown is being placed upon her brow. The throne will be made of ivy and white roses.

When the orchestra begins, the following knights will walk slowly, one by one, to the large platform upon which the throne is placed: Harry Whitlock, Lucien Harris, Edgar Wilson, Brevard Montgomery, Clifford Smith and Joe Longino. As the last knight reaches the throne the first maid of honor will step upon the long platform leading to the throne and as she nears the throne she is met by her knight and together they will salute last year's queen who reigns until the new queen appears. Miss Nichols has chosen as her maid of honor Miss Margie Kurfees. The following young girls have been chosen by the queen as her maids of honor: Laura Jenkins, Armabeth Smith, Mildred Ryan, Fay Pitts, Evelyn Jordan and Jane Riley.

In the front of the queen the following dainty little flower girls and pages will scatter roses in her path: Isabelle Montgomery, Earl Cox, Jr., Annie Muse Hays, J. O. Skinner the Third, Cynthia Ward, Julian Kelly, Katherine Baker, Fritz Wagner, Jr., Malvina Renolds, Evaline Vinson, Florence Worthington, Robert Hopkins, Jr., Lelia McBride, John Coursey, Margaret Arnold, Mamie Belle Hollis and St. Elmo Massengale, Jr.

Improvement League

JACKSON, Ga.—Mrs. Robert T. Daniel, president of the ninth district Woman's club, organized a civic improvement league in Jackson last Saturday.

The members will work in conjunction with the county commissioners and the city council and will begin work immediately on the court house square.

The mayor, Colonel W. E. Watkins, has been asked by the organization to issue a proclamation setting May 16, as "clean up" day.

At that time both the business and residence sections of the town will take on a different look and the council will strictly enforce the ordinance forbidding paper or other trash from being thrown on the streets.

Club Entertained

The Whitehall Terrace club met with Mrs. Matlock Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. S. A. Nicholes read an interesting article on progressive topics of the day and it was decided that this organization would investigate and adopt all plans for the betterment and uplifting of women and children.

The next meeting will be May 13, with Mrs. Gautt. All members are urged to be present.

Crackers Take Second Game Of Vol Series

Dent Hurls Well and Locals Win Second Contest 8 to 2, Stevens Knocked Off Slab by Crackers' Stick Work

By Elliott Dent

NASHVILLE, May 2.—We evened up matters with the Vols Saturday by beating them in the second game of the series 8 to 2. It was an easy game and should have had a shutout. Nashville's two runs were scored in the third and an infield fly with a score will show a number of hits for the Vols, they came when were out in nearly every inning and consequently did very little damage.

We left Atlanta and since I was handicapped from a strained side, I did not feel very well after our boys had started a few runs in the early stages of the game. We got to Stevens, the star pitcher, right at the jump, and scored two runs in the first and one in the second.

Nashville sent their two in the first on Bond's triple. Stevens gave way to Wells with an eight-footer of a throw to third and we did not get at first but collected two runs in the ninth, when Kircher walked, Powell and Jennings home runs, after they had each hit safely and advanced on Elbel's sacrifice.

HOW RUNS WERE SCORED.

As stated above, we got an early lead by scoring three runs in the first inning. With two outs, Elbel drew a base on balls. He went to third when Dexter singled to right. Flanagan was walked, filling the bases. Holland hit a short single past third and Elbel scored. Browning singled to left, scoring Kircher and Flanagan. We added another on the third, when Elbel and Dexter walked. Both moved up on Flanagan's out and Elbel scored on Wilson's sacrifice fly.

We kept right on piling them up in the fourth Dunn was safe when Bill Bender to Lindsay took a bad hop. On an attempt to sacrifice Joe was caught at second. I reached second on McDowell's single and we both scored on Ellis' three base drive against the left field dump. Our last runs were put in the ninth. McConnell singled and Jennings was safe when Marshall failed his bunt. Elbel sacrificed and Dexter drove the two runners over with a single.

Nashville got one in the first, when Bond pushed a Texas leaguer back of second, and scored when Dunn's throw to catch him stealing was wide. In the fourth they scored their second run on a double by Sloan and Jennings's single.

It looks like a jinx is still pursuing Stevens. Another Cracker was added to the sick list yesterday when Joe Lynch was confined to his bed at home. Lynch, Browning played centers and each looked like a regular fielding, getting several flies and making two runs with a single through short in the first. Lynch will be out of the game and will be sent to Atlanta, where the club's physician can take a look at him.

King to Detail Today's Game

Eddie King, the well-known baseball writer, is expected to Atlanta fans to-day via the Atlanta game at Sulphur Springs this afternoon. He will play at his baseball talks and will be followed by a number of Vols. last summer. No admission will be charged, but there will be a box at the door, and all of the fans who care to contribute to defray the expenses they can. If they do not care to they can see the same absolutely free.

In presenting this game to Atlanta fans, however, King wants it distinctly understood that absolute quiet must prevail during the game. There must be no yelling or cheering, and at the first sign of such the game will be stopped. The game starts promptly at 3:30 o'clock at Sulphur Springs.

A QUARTET OF COLLEGE BALL PLAYERS WHO ARE SHOWING WELL ON SOUTHERN DIAMONDS THIS SEASON

Cargile, Hamilton and Joplin are members of the Alabama team which has just finished a hot series with the Yellow Jackets. Cargile, who plays third, is a new man on the team, and has hung up a great record in games played to date for hitting and base running. Captain Joplin, who plays shortstop, is the only veteran on the Tuscaloosans' infield. Hamilton first baseman, is also a first year man. Captain Murphy Pound of the Tech team, has maintained his record as a first-class outfielder and a heavy batter.

Jackets Enter Tennis Tourney

Four Players Go to Charlotte to Take Part in Intercollegiate Racquet Battles

The Georgia Tech tennis team left for Charlotte, N. C., Saturday night, where they will play in the intercollegiate tournament which starts in that city on Monday.

The Garner brothers will represent the school in the doubles, while Reg. Fleet and Harry Hallman will take care of the singles. An unusual amount of interest has been taken in this line of sport this spring. The athletic association has had several new courts built and more are under construction. When the work is finished there will be eight in all.

The men representing the school are the winners in the recent tournament, held for all men in school. Over 100 men entered this meet and some good tennis was played. Harry Hallman is the only old player at the school, he having made his letter last season. This season, however, a letter was awarded to the men that were winners in the school tournament. The men will return Wednesday. Charles Gardner, one of the players, is manager of the team, and it is largely due to his work that so much interest has been created at Tech.

Wilcox Equals Meridith's Record

EXETER, N. H., May 2.—W. Wilcox, Jr., of Norfolk, Va., a member of Harvard freshman class, won a 440-yard dash with ease turn in 48 4-5 seconds in the annual Phillips-Exeter-Harvard freshman track meet today. This time equals the intercholastic record held by Ted Meredith, now of the University of Pennsylvania.

Exeter athletes won the meet.

Early Games Show Three Contenders in Southern

Crackers, Pelicans and Lookouts Still Appear to Have Something on Other Clubs in League—Condition Shows in Games Played

BY INNIS BROWN

"The time has come, the Walrus said,
To lamp the lay of the land."

An excellent feature of the theories of baseball is the ante-season speculation as to what the home manager has in store for the fans during the coming season. In other words, the rehashing of Winter League dope is a favorite pastime of the off-season.

Then when the boys begin to troop in for spring practice, comes another spasm of drawing forms on the lads who will carry the colors. The big leaguers stop over a few days, play an exhibition game or two, and then the scramble for position in the first few games of the season is on. These have all passed now, including the first lap of the real race, and things are beginning to settle down for the long grind. Within a period of ten days the so-called southern section clubs will clash for the first time with the northern half of the league, after which it will be regular stuff day in and day out, half the time at home, half on the road.

To date the Crackers have played the three other teams of the northern division, two of which, Nashville and Memphis, have been met at home as well as abroad. The Lookouts alone have been played only away from Ponce de Leon. There is, therefore, some grounds for conclusions on the three clubs.

In their games here Nashville appears to have played in rather abnormal form That is, the Vols showed strength of surprising degree. True enough, the Crackers bested them in three of the four games, but even then Schwartz's men were hammering the ball in great shape save in one battle. Now, it is apparent that such heavy hitting may not be expected of this bunch throughout the season. John Lindsay, for one, was tearing the cover off of the ball. John may reasonably be expected to hit .300 for the season, but anything in excess of that mark will be largely lagniappe, which Dame Fortune will throw in for good luck. Otto Williams also hit well here, but on his form for several years past, Otto can hardly be figured better than a .260 hitter. And there were others.

As for the pitching shown by the Vols, Roy Stevens furnished a bit of classy hurling. Rogers and Renfer got by with one five-inning game. Renfer looked good in the innings that he worked, but Rogers did not have much to offer. Forrest More is a good steady reliable flinger, who will have an good an average as will his team. Berger is pretty much on the order of More, but neither can be expected to show anything brilliant. In other words, unless Stevens, or Renfer comes through with an excess of box work, it is hard to figure where the Vols can show anything especially strong. Callahan, King and Sloan stack up as a pretty fair outfit.

TURTLES VERY WEAK.

The Turtles looked very sad in their work here, barring the last game, which they won with a mad swatfest at the expense of Kissinger and Browning. They got one of three at home, and the same proportion here, which can hardly be considered consternation. Neither of their hurlers showed much, and, with the exception of that one final game, they failed to develop any formidable offensive strength. However, the Turtles are in sore straits, through injuries and sickness. Liebhardt, who, according to Tommy Long, has shown more stuff than any pitcher to face the Crackers, is sick in bed. McDermott, third baseman, is also laid up with rheumatism. Dunckel is nursing a fractured arm. And Bernis worked his

Fanned Twenty Men

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 3.—Royce, pitching for Hamilton college, which today defeated University of Rochester 8 to 2, struck out twenty of the home team.

Va. Athletes Win on Track

BALTIMORE, Md., May 2.—University of Virginia won the third annual South Atlantic intercollegiate track and field meet championship here today by a wide margin. The score by points of the first three teams was:

Virginia, 54; Georgetown, 32; Johns Hopkins, 31.

Three South Atlantic records were established and one was equalled.

John Cromly, of Virginia, ran the 120 yards high hurdles in 15 3-5 seconds and the 220-yard low hurdles in 24 2-5 seconds. "Joe" Connolly of Hopkins, cleared the high jump with a leap of 6 feet 1-2 inch. The 100-yard record of 10 seconds was equaled by Captain T. B. Wagner, of Hopkins. A slight wind aided the runners.

Castle Heights Won Track Meet

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 2.—Castle Heights High school of Lebanon, Tenn., carried off the premier honors in the interscholastic prep school track meet here this afternoon, with Knoxville High school finishing second and Rhea County High, Dayton, Tenn., third. Castle Heights finished with 37 points; Knoxville High 31 points; Rhea County High, 15 points. The mile race, won by Sheffer, of Memphis High in the excellent time of 4:44, was the prettiest event of the day.

Davis, of Knoxville High, won the 100-yard dash in 10 2-5, and aside from these two races the meet was only ordinary.

Seventeen schools with an entry list of 96 athletes competed. The weather was ideal. A large crowd was in attendance.

Harvard Wins at Soccer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 2.—Harvard today won the intercollegiate soccer championship by defeating Princeton.

Yellowjackets Lose First Game And Win Second

Alabama Takes First Contest From Tech, 5 to 2, and Jackets Win Last Game, 5 to 4 Hogue Works Both Games

By Innis Brown

With the count 3 to 1 in favor of the Tech boys the University of Alabama and the Jackets engaged in a double-header Saturday, completing the six games scheduled between the two teams. The Jackets lowered their colors in the first battle of the double bill, but turned the tables on the visitors in the second contest. The scores were, Alabama 5, Tech 2, Tech 5, Alabama 4.

Coach Graves, of the visitors, was anxious to get an even break on the six-game series, if possible. He sent in Hogue, his left-hander, and the southpaw delivered the goods in the first fray. However, in the second battle he was worsted, in spite of the fact that he allowed only five hits. Coach Heisman selected Bryant, his big left-hander, to oppose Hogue in the first battle, and the Alabamians got to him for eight hits, which accounted for five runs, taken together with the four passes that he issued, and a few misplays by his team mates.

The Alabama athletes went after the first game from the jump. They scored one run in the first, missed fire for the next three frames, and then followed with two each in the fifth and sixth innings. Joplin, first up in the opener, singled and went to third on a low throw to second to head him off. Walls grounded out, but Bryant walked Cargile and cut loose a wild heave which allowed Joplin to scoot.

JOPLIN BEGAN RALLY.

Joplin started things again in the fifth when he singled on the first ball pitched. Hill threw Wells' bunt wild and both men were safe. Cargile beat out a bunt toward third for a hit, filling the bases. Hill fielded Sewell's grounder to plate too late, and Joplin counted. Crawford fanned, and Hill caught Walls at the plate on Hagan's grounder. Hamilton singled to left and Cargile counted.

With two down in the sixth, Wells singled to left. Holland fumbled Cargile's slow bounder and both runners were safe. Wells moving up to third. Sewell scored the two with a long triple to left. Cargile, first up in the ninth, singled and stole second, but was left stranded.

Second Game

Coach Heisman sent Eubanks in for the second game, while Hogue returned to the mound for the visitors. Spence also worked a part of the second game at third, while Edgar Montague divided time with Merritt Holland at second, and Tyler Montague worked for a time behind the plate.

Alabama got one run in the first. With two down, Hill dropped Cargile's fly, and he went on to second. He stole third and scored on Sewell's single. Two more were counted in the second, after two men had been put out. Ladd singled to the infield, and when Hill threw Hogue's grounder wild Ladd moved to third and Hogue took second. The two scored on a long single to right by Joplin. In the ninth Cargile tripled and scored on Sewell's sacrifice fly.

In the meantime Tech had counted two in the first inning. Wooten walked, and T. Montague sacrificed. Hagan let Burr's single get away from him, and Wooten scored while Burr was making third. Burr scored on Johnson's out. Another pair was shoved over in the fifth. With one out, Witherington doubled and Wooten was passed. Montague singled, and Garlington, running for Witherington, scored. Wooten advanced to third and scored on Burr's out at first from Joplin. The winning run was registered in the ninth. Sewell muffed Spence's fly. Eubanks attempted to sacrifice, and both runners were safe when Hogue fumbled the tag, Spence making third. Witherington failed to bring him in, but he counted on Wooten's roller down the first base line.

Tech Now Ready For Big Games With Georgia

Jackets Have Played Brilliant Ball at Times, but Have Been Erratic — Team Composed of Young Stars—Record In Games Played

By Jim Moore

The Yellowjackets have finished their priming season and are now about ready to play the real games of the season, that is those with the University of Georgia on Friday and Saturday.

These are the games by which the success of the season is measured. In every game of the entire season is lost by either team and still a clean sweep is made of this series, the season is a success.

Tech has played good ball in spots, this season, but as yet the real strength of the team is an unknown quantity. The Georgia series will tell whether the season is a good one or a bad one. At times the Jackets have gotten together and played ball that was worthy of a team composed of veterans, and at other times they have shown about as poor form as is possible for even a high school team.

The pitchers are actually about the same as recruits as regards dependence. So far this season, Eubanks has shown about the steadiest line of goods. He gets by with his games at any stage of the time, whereas the others are just as good, but it is not known whether they are in good shape until about the first or second inning is over. One of them will pitch good ball for a few innings, and then before anyone knows it he can be in the hole. He will have gotten hopelessly in the hole.

PITTS UNSTEADY.

Pitts has not been going in his usual good style, this being due to the fact that he got away to a bad start early in this season, when he needed his strength the most. He was sick and had weather butted in just at the wrong time. Bryant has shown stuff, that few recent Tech twirlers have had, but for the past few weeks, he seems to be off his early form. Just what is the cause of his backward slide is not known, is the first part of the season he had everything. Curves were breaking good control was there and he had all the nerve and coolness of a veteran. He still has his nerve and coolness, but the "something" on the ball has gone. Eubanks, Pitts and Bryant are the only men that Tech can count on strongly.

The Georgians return Tech for a long road trip with a world of experience, old heads and good pitchers that are going good. The question is whether the Jackets turn the same trick that they did last season. With the exception of Turner, their batting order is almost the same as it was then. The Athenians went down before the onslaught of the Jackets.

With Auburn the Jackets broke even. The first game Auburn took by the score of 8 to 5. Tech then came back and won the second and got by 10 to 5. The Tech boys got scared of Mississippi and played good ball and won both games, 6 to 4 and 6 to 0. They put the trimmings to Illinois and broke even with Mercer. Vanderbilt easily defeated Tech the first game by the score of 11 to 3. The Jackets then turned and beat the Commodores 18 to 6 on the next day.

WON AT TUSCALOOSA.

Then the team went to Alabama and took away out of them the first game, going to Alabama by the score of 11 to 2. The next day the Jackets took a double header, 12 to 3 and 7 to 2. The following Monday they played the Mississippi A and M and lost 6 to 5. In the last Alabama series, the Jackets showed more real steady ball than they have all the rest of the season put together. In the game Friday, Pitts was hit in the first inning, but steadied down and won his game by the narrow margin of 4 to 3. Good steady work in the pinches and all around playing won for the Jackets.

Bryant went in Saturday and pitched fairly good ball, but lost 5 to 2. Eubanks went in the second contest and got the game with the last end of the train leaving. It was so near a defeat that it was not interesting from the standpoint. A couple of hits in the ninth and a bobble is all that saved him from going the route, and it looked like the Yellow Jackets have yet to be tried over such a route this season.

This is the status of the Tech team before the big battles of the week. The Athenians are hot after the Techites for the stinging defeat of last year. They have McWhorter in the outfield, and he has a stick that puts them over the fence at the drop of the hat. Burr can keep his head, he can put them as far as McWhorter, and at the right time also. Tyler Montague is a dangerous man in a pinch. The Jackets are fast on the bases, and daring with it all. They have a new team, made of youngsters, with one old man in the infield. Witherington is the anchor of the team. He has been rested most of the past week in an effort to get him in mental and physical shape for the big fracas.

Newsom is the only other man eligible for catcher. Tyler Montague was used Saturday afternoon but the manager said that he would not be used in the Georgia games, as he is too valuable a man elsewhere. The brunt of the pitching will fall on the shoulders of Eubanks in all probability. At the end of the season it was thought he would not be out for the team but he is now in good shape. If Bryan can get himself together he will be as good as the best, but if he keeps up his present peace he will be of little use. This is the youngest and most inexperienced bunch of men that Tech has ever put in the field against Georgia, but they have the fight and with an even break of luck much is expected of them.

Guils Send Tepe To Evansville Club

MOBILE, Ala., May 2.—Manager Briscoe Lord, of the local Southern league team, has sent Shortstop Tepe to the Evansville club, where he was purchased by the New Orleans team. He was sent to the latter club by the deal made by the two clubs. Tepe was a reliable hitter, but his fielding was erratic.

Yacht Resolute Meets With Two Accidents

BRISTOL, R. I., May 2.—Two slight accidents somewhat marred the first sail trial of the cup defender yacht Resolute in Narragansett bay today. The temporary loss of her center board kept the yacht in the harbor until late in the afternoon. She finally went out and, after an hour's spin, one of the peak halyards gave way. The Resolute limped back into port with her wooden battens flying out of the pockets in the reach of the mainsail.

St. Louis Easily Defeats Chicago

CHICAGO, May 2.—Pitcher Vaughn weakened in the seventh and eighth innings and allowed seven hits, which netted Brooklyn three runs, a wild pitch and a passed ball gave St. Louis an easy victory, 9 to 0. The locals had acquired a seemingly safe lead early in the game. Humphries relieved after the third inning on account of a sore arm.

Maxwell Enters Cars in Big Race

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 3.—Ernie Moross, who has looking after the managerial end of the Maxwell racing team, has made official entry of the Maxwell cars at the Indianapolis speedway. The committee in charge of the races has assigned numbers 8, 25 and 32 to the Maxwell entries, which are rapidly nearing completion at Detroit.

"With those numbers we surely ought to make a showing," said Moross today. "I had number 32 when I won the big Wheeler and Schesler trophy race in 1910 and number 25 when I won the first of the 1911 500-mile race. And number 8 has had a luck streak, too. Ralph Mulford won a race with that figure in it, and you believe in signs place your coin on the Maxwell team this year."

The Maxwell entries that will be first Maxwell racer will be complete by Wednesday. This car will be turned over to Billy Chandler, driver to sign up, and Carlson will probably depart for Indianapolis after several days' workout over the roads in the vicinity of Detroit. Teddy Tetzlaff, the sensational Pacific coast driver, is on his way to Detroit from Los Angeles and will receive the second Maxwell car within a few days after his arrival. Harroun plans to have all three cars on the speedway for two weeks' workouts previous to the big race on Memorial day.

Pittsburg Grabs Game From Tinker's Team

CHICAGO, May 2.—Manager Tinker used, sixteen men in a vain effort to stop Pittsburg today, Barger being invincible most of the time, while Fisk was batted off the slab early in the game, and three other local pitchers were hit hard, the visitors winning, 7 to 4. Unlucky base running kept the Pittsburg score down.

Castle Tells of Sales Growth On Motorcycle

Local Manager of Harley-Davidson Company Gives a Few Pointers on Development of Industry in This Section

Automobile dealers out Peachtre street have watched with open eyed amazement the rapid and wonderful increase in the sale of motorcycles that is now going on from Atlanta, especially so with the rapid increase in the demands for the Harley-Davidson motorcycle, which company opened a factory branch here about the first of December.

Several automobile branch managers in a conversation a few days ago with Gus Castle, manager of the southern branch of the Harley-Davidson Motor Co., asked the question, what effect would the sales of medium price automobiles have on the future sales of motorcycles. Answering the question, from long experience in the business, Mr. Castle replied as follows:

The motorcycle has been the developing field for the automobilist, that the public has looked to the motorcyclist. The school boy demanded a bicycle, as he grew older his desires then called for a motorcycle and then he was not satisfied until he owned an automobile later on. So far as the medium price automobile is concerned, it has not had any effect on the sale of motorcycles. The makers and dealers recognize the fact that a great number of their sales come from motorcycle riders; that the present sale of motorcycles while growing very rapidly is yet in its infancy and the field for future sales of these machines has not yet been scratched. Where from a demand a few years ago of twenty or thirty machines a year, it has developed into a sale that runs up into thousands. In fact it is very near a certainty that the sale of motorcycles from Atlanta this year will not fall far short of a million dollars. In addition to this the thousands of dollars worth of accessories, sundries and supplies that are used on the passenger attachments to the motorcycle that have been sold.

But the wonder to these automobile dealers, has been the rapid growth in the sales of the Harley-Davidson; as one of them stated, it's grown overnight. The sale and demand for these machines has been something marvelous coming as they do from all points in the seven southern states, from all classes of riders from the merchant to the farmer and, of course to the R. F. D. mail carriers, salesmen, doctors, collectors and all kinds of men find it absolutely necessary to use a motorcycle in their daily routine of business.

COMMERCIAL USES.

The machine, for service, is another reason for the increasing calls for motorcycles, since our department store, grocers and all business where a quick delivery service is required, the motorcycle has been an indispensable part of their business.

The present day motorcycle is built so compactly that it has practically reached a stage of perfection far in advance of the two-cylinder automobile built today. The ease in operation and control is another important point in favor from the motorcycle.

One of the principal reasons for the large sales and demand for the Harley-Davidson motorcycle has been the locating of this southern branch which includes not only a complete factory stock room, carrying a complete assortment of their motorcycles, and being so close to the factory, it only points out to Atlanta, that a system of service is maintained, that assures the rider the constant service he desires. In the event of an accident, he can get the necessary parts at once.

Dealers in all the towns of the seven southern states under this branch recognizing this superior service, quickly take advantage of it and push the sales of the machine on which they can get the best and quickest service. This applies not only to motorcycles but to a well known and established fact among automobile dealers for several automobile makers, who have their southern branch headquarters in Atlanta, maintain this same service.

The advantage of an out-of-town dealer getting his motorcycles and supplies from Atlanta and Chattanooga the Harley-Davidson dealers do, gives them an advantage over competitors who have to get their machines from more or less far away factories. This is one of the important facts which have helped the rapid growth and increase in the sales of Harley-Davidson motorcycles. Motorcycle riders fully appreciate this prompt service, which largely accounts for the increasing number of Harley-Davidsons seen on Atlanta streets.

Burke, left fielder for Roanoke, has been showing around the circuit some real hitting since the season began. In the first ten games Burke missed his hit only one contest, with an average for that period of .467. At the same time the fielder was not charged with a fielding error.

C. A. Mallinson

Mr. C. A. Mallinson, who has purchased a half interest in the Southern Motorcycle company of 224 Peachtree. Mr. Mallinson will devote his entire time and attention to all inside details. Mr. Allen leaves to sell an "Yokaway." Allen will continue to care for the outside affairs. The new arrangement should meet with great success.

Athletics Defeat Boston Score 5-2

PHILADELPHIA, May 2.—Rankin Johnson was largely responsible for the defeat of Boston, 5 to 2, here today, as he drew ahead in the second inning, after McInnis and Strunk each singled, the pitcher forced in two runs by giving bases on balls to Schang and Plank and hitting Murphy. An error by Scott en Daley's grounder sent in two more. Score:

Nap Recruit Is Leading Batter Amer. League

Young Wood Tops List—Sam Crawford Is Well Over .400 Mark—Ty Cobb Ranks 38th With Average of .240

The decided feature in connection with the batting averages of the American league through games played on Wednesday is the position held by George Cobb. The Peach stands thirty-eighth in the list with a mark of .240. It is doubtful whether the first of May ever found Tyrus so far down in the list since he joined the major league, and it is not likely that another week will find him there, either. He has made just twelve hits in fifty trips to the plate.

Cleveland furnished the winner for the above period in young Wood, a Little Rock recruit, who is playing his first year with the Naps. He hit for a mark of .467 in five games. Gus Williams, Brown outfielder, is second with an average of .429. Sam Crawford is over the .400 mark, while Joe Jackson is belting the ball at a .395 clip. Frank Baker and Eddie Collins are pulled somewhat from their high level of last week, and now possess modest marks of .346 and .344, respectively.

Jack Barry has shown speediest on the bases to Wednesday, with eight steals. Crawford has hit two circuit smashes, being the only man in the league who has gotten more than one. Joe Jackson leads in three-baggers with a total of four. John Collins, of the White Sox, had the six doubles made on Wednesday night, the best of the day.

Dobbs Facing Tough Job in Cutting Down

Pelican Manager Does Not Know Just Where to Begin, Contenders for Different Positions Have Shown Class, Pitching Has Been Unsteady

NEW ORLEANS, May 2.—When Johnny Dobbs reduces his Pelican squad to fifteen men there is going to be a number of surprised fans in New Orleans. Almost every day Dobbs' task becomes more complicated, for some fellow who has been occupying a seat on the bench breaks into the game and shows a little bit more stuff than the man he replaces.

This has happened four different times since the season. Barbare started subbing for Knaupp and made good from the jump. Sylvester then replaced Hendrix and hit the daylights out of the ball and Timmy immediately got a chance and made Hub Northern one of the doubtful. Tuesday Knaupp got his chance and showed a lot of form at third base, though Lindsay will probably return to his old job in a few days.

With so many players hustling for regular jobs and perhaps not a single one knowing with a degree of certainty he is out of the danger zone, Dobbs is getting a lot of good work out of his players. The squad now numbers nineteen and it is practically certain the Pel mogul can't carry more than fifteen players and himself to remain inside the salary arrangements after May 4.

PITCHING DOUBTFUL.

Jim Bagby's failure to stand off the Billikens after getting a five-run lead indicates that his right-hander is far from his best form. Bagby has been forced to leave the mound three times in succession, and with Southpaw Wilson on the shelf, the twirling corps looks very shaky at the best.

Manager Dobbs, however, expects Bagby to round to shortly. He also expects Wilson to get right, but if these two players are unable to show something by the time it comes to cutting the squad down, Dobbs will be up against the toughest proposition he ever faced.

Unless the pitchers are able to stand up after the Pelicans return from the Birmingham series Sunday week, when all of the northern clubs, which by the way, are the strongest in the league this year, the Pels will have to hustle to remain in front.

Instead of the northern clubs, Atlanta excepted, showing shaky teams, Nashville, Atlanta and Chattanooga are playing almost as good a game of ball as the Pelicans at present, which makes the invasion of these three clubs a real test for the local boys.

That Dobbs must beat the northern clubs out of the pennant becomes more evident every day. Despite the hard run of luck the Crackers have suffered, the Smithmen continue to pile up big scores. Chattanooga, too, continues winning and with Harry McCormick's young pitchers going like big leaguers, the Lookouts must be given a lot of consideration.

Emory Seniors Meet Juniors

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
EMORY COLLEGE, Oxford, Ga., May 2.—Two games which will have much to do with the final standing of the teams in Emory's interclass baseball race will be played Monday afternoon on Weberfield when the juniors and sophomores meet, and the freshmen and seniors battle.

The seniors and juniors are tied for the first round of the percentage ladder, while the sophomores are in striking distance of the pennant. The freshmen team is the only crew which are mathematically hopelessly out of the fight.

The juniors are torn to pieces on the eve of their big game, Neal, their stellar worker around the keystone bag, is out of the game possibly for the season because of injuries. Lester, one of their sure outfielders, has withdrawn from college. Stokes, the first baseman, is suffering from a pair of weak eyes. Their main hopes lie in the probability of Porter, Emory's best all-round athlete, arriving in time for the Monday game as it is reliably reported he will re-enter college after dropping out in the winter.

The seniors are going good, likewise the sophomores, and the smartest battle of Emory's baseball days is on for the honors of the season.

Valeska Suratt Buys Oakland

Valeska Suratt, the famous beauty who is starring with the Red Rose company in her sensational skit "black crepe and diamonds" is happy in the possession of an Oakland Sedan, which she has just purchased.

Miss Suratt with characteristic independence, said, "I wanted a car I could drive myself and I have looked at abroad but until I found the Oakland enclosed cars both in New York and Sedan, none of them seemed to just suit me. I love beautiful things and my car is surely beautiful; and its luxurious appointments pleased me too."

She will have the car upholstered in blue silk brocade, her favorite color, and the material will be imported from Paris at a cost of three hundred and fifty dollars. Her monogram "V. S." in gold, and a red rose will be painted on the panels of each door.

Miss Suratt is now touring the western states and after completing her western engagement will have the car shipped to New York and thence to Europe

CHANCE WAS LIBERAL.

King Cole, the elongated pitcher with the Yankees, isn't much of a hand at repartee, but he stopped Frank Chance once—only once. Chance had caught him at some infraction of the rules and was giving him a verbal manhandling.

"You long, yellow, minor league four flush," yelled Chance, "I'll teach you. I'll keep you broke all the rest of the season. This will cost you $100 and if you had any more coming to you I'd fine you that."

Cole did not speak.

"Well," roared Chance, "what have you got to say?"

"Only that you're darned liberal with other people's money, Frank."

TERRIBLE TEDDY TETZLAFF

The California speed demon has signed to drive one of Ray Harroun's Maxwells in the big Indianapolis race. He will be in the money, if his car holds out.

CHAIRMAN REN MULFORD NAMES TROPHY COMMISSION

Ren Mulford, Jr., of Cincinnati, chairman of the Chalmers trophy commission, hos announced the names of the newspaper men who will serve on this commission for the season of 1914. The Chalmers trophy commission is a jury of newspaper men who annually select the player in both the National and American leagues, who has been of most value to his club during the league pennant race, and to the two men selected by this commission, Hugh Chalmers of Detroit, presents the Chalmers trophy—which each season consists of two automobiles.

I. E. Sanborn, Chicago Tribune.
Tim Murnane, Boston Globe.
Abe Yager, Brooklyn Eagle.
Jack Ryder, Cincinnati Enquirer.
H. G. Salsinger, Detroit News.
Grantland Rice, New York Mail.
Ralph S. Davis, Pittsburg Press.
J. C. Isaminger, Philadelphia North American.
Sid C. Keener, St. Louis Times.
J. Ed Grillo, Washington Star.
Henry P. Edwards, Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The present season will be the fifth consecutive year during which the Chalmers trophy has been awarded in major league baseball. Mr. Chalmers' original offer to the national commission in presenting this trophy was that he would give automobiles to the most worth while players in the major leagues for five years. Since this is the last season included in the acceptance of the trophy by the national commission, 1914 may terminate the trophy commission and the awards.

CONTESTED.

For the past four years the Chalmers trophy awards have created interest in baseball circles everywhere; in fact, the competition among the players for these major league prizes has at times closely rivaled the interest in the pennant race among followers of the game.

Mr. Chalmers' idea in offering these annual awards for the players of greatest proved ability was to establish a sort of baseball hall of fame. He felt that in the period of five years the trophy awards would automatically create such a hall of fame. It is generally conceded by both followers and critics of baseball that Mr. Chalmers' original idea has worked out in the most satisfactory manner. The Chalmers trophy has been awarded to the most famous baseball players in the country, and almost without exception the decisions of the jury of newspaper men forming the Chalmers commission have been favorably received by the baseball public.

In the first year of Mr. Chalmers' offer the trophy was officially presented to the player who finished with the highest batting average. Fans will recall that both Cobb and Lajoie, of the American league, finished with a much higher average than any player in the National league, and that the race between the Detroit and Cleveland stars was so close that the official figures had to decide it. The margin in favor of Cobb was only a fraction of 1-1,000 per cent.

In view of the extreme closeness of the race Mr. Chalmers very liberally awarded a second car, giving a trophy to each of these great batsmen.

CONDITIONS CHANGED.

Keen rivalry was aroused by the very closeness of this batting competition, and some unjust criticism was offered. To obviate the possibility of any similar unfortunate situation Mr. Chalmers offered the trophy for the next four years on a different basis: the award to be made to the major league players who proved of greatest value to their teams. Ren Mulford, Jr., a former newspaper man, an old friend of Mr. Chalmers, was asked by the donor to act as chairman of a trophy commission. Under the new award a jury of the leading baseball writers of the country, known as the Chalmers trophy commission, was appointed by Mr. Mulford. This commission is composed of one newspaper man from each city in which a major league is represented. In all cities where both National and American leagues are represented, the commission votes on players from both leagues. In cities represented by only one major league, the commission votes only for the league in which his city is represented.

By this method the commission of eleven men virtually makes two committees of eight. These eight men, serving for each league, vote for eight players of the league, naming the players as they would rank them in ability and value to their respective teams. In considering the value of a player to his team his conduct on and off the field, his recognition of discipline, are considered as well as batting, fielding and all around playing ability.

When the eight ballots come in from each league, the players who receive eight points each are placed first on the ballots; those who receive seven points each, are placed second, and so on down to those who receive one point each who are placed eighth. The player who receives the greatest number of points in either league from the eight ballots get the trophy. This method assures absolute fairness as a player must be pretty generally recognized over the entire circuit to get the award.

In 1911, the first time the award was made under this system, Ty Cobb received 190 per cent of the votes—in other words, he was placed first on all of the American league ballots for a total of 64 points. No other player has been unanimous choice of the Chalmers commission.

The players in the Chalmers baseball hall of fame are as follows:

1910: For the highest batting percentage only, Ty Cobb and Larry Lajoie.

For best all round playing ability: American league, 1911, Ty Cobb, Detroit; 1912, Tris Speaker, Boston; 1913, Walter Johnson, Washington.

National league: 1911, Frank Schulte, Chicago; 1912, Larry Doyle, New York; 1913, Jake Daubert, Brooklyn.

Big Entry List For Motor Race

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 2.—Thirty seven cars, eleven foreign made, had been nominated for the fourth annual 500-mile automobile race at the local speedway on May 30, it was announced today. The entry list closed last night. The machines will be driven by the greatest automobile pilot of the United States and Europe. France, which had the honor of winning last year's contest, has six automobiles entered. Other foreign countries whose flags will be carried in the long grind are England, Italy, Germany and Belgium.

As only thirty cars will be admitted to start, seven will be eliminated in the speed trials which will occupy the two days preceeding the contest.

Among the famous drivers who have entered are: Goux, who won last year; Joe Dawson, who finished first in 1911; Burman, Oldfield, Anderson, Cooper, Bragg, Teletaff, Delinger, Mulford, Clasagne, Christiaens, Cuyot, Boillot and Grant.

A few of the cars and drivers have arrived at the track but the majority are not expected until next week.

Boston Braves Holding Kroft From the Vols

Manager George Stallings Unwilling to Let Ex-Pelican Get Away, Until His Men Begin to Pick Up in Stick Work

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 2.—The matter of whether or not the Vols are going to secure the services of Clarence Kraft to play first base during the coming season appears at present to have resolved itself into a question of whether or not the Boston Braves figure that Kraft would be of sufficient value to them to warrant Manager George Stallings in holding on to him. Kraft is at present with Brooklyn, but the Braves refuse to waive on him.

President Clyde Shropshire of the Vols has just returned from New York and Boston, where he went to clear the track for shipping Kraft to Nashville, if possible. He found that Brooklyn is willing to turn the ex-Pelican back, but that Stallings, who appreciates Kraft's sticking ability has a bunch that he may be able to use Clarence to advantage during the present campaign.

The Braves have been going none too well to date, and Stallings seems to think that a little more hitting power would help matters. Schmidt appears to look good enough at first, but the ability to hit the ball is rather lacking among the Braves' outfielders. Neither. Griffith, Connolly, Mann, Collins nor Murray has as yet shown the variety of hitting needed for a big league outfield, and until some of this quintet open up with the old willow, Kraft has slight chance of getting out of the big show.

President Shropshire talked the matter over with Kraft himself, and there is just one consideration so far as the player is concerned—he wants the money, wherever he goes, just as may reasonably be expected. He received a boost on going up to Brooklyn, and would prefer to stay in the big leagues. But if sufficient financial inducement is offered, he will pack his grip for Nashville o na moment's notice, if permitted to do so. The Vols' boss announces that money matters shall not stand in the way of the player's return. He appears to think that the Braves will round into form shortly, and that Stallings will be willing to send the first sacker down within the next week or so.

Track Meet at Macon Monday

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
EMORY COLLEGE, Oxford, Ga., May 2.—Emory college and Mercer university will hold their second track meet in Macon, at the Central City park, on Monday afternoon, May 18. This is the date, which has been agreed upon by Manager Gray, of the Mercer squad, and Manager Cranston Williams, of the Emory team.

The approaching event on the cinder path will be the second meet which the two Georgia colleges have held, the first being last spring in Macon, when Mercer rolled up the majority points.

Coach Peebles has a squad of twenty-five athletes out each afternoon putting them through the training rules in hopes will mean much in the totals of points at the Macon meet.

As this is the only form of intercollegiate athletics which are allowed the students of Emory by the authorities, much interest is centered in the meet.

Abbeville Beat Pitts

ABBEVILLE, Ga., May 2.—In a poor exhibition Abbeville beat the Pitts team here Friday afternoon by the score of 12 to 7. This was the first game of the local season, and both teams played a ragged game.

Oldfield Broke World's Record

Barney Oldfield has broken another world's record.

On April 22, at Bakersfield, Cal., in his Fiat Cyclone, he broke the five-mile record formerly held by Disbrow. Barney covered the five miles in 3 minutes, 56 seconds.

He also won the 50-mile free-for-all race, covering the 50 miles in 48 minutes.

As usual, Barney's faith in Firestone tires was not misplaced. He affirmed that the tires did not show a sign of wear after this contest.

Racers Practice For 500-Mile Race

INDIANAPOLIS, May 2.—Preliminary workouts for the 500-mile race on the Indianapolis motor speedway, May 30, have begun, Gil Anderson, last year's eastern road racing champion, being the first to take the track, in a Stutz, with Howard Wilcox, holder of the world's stock straightaway record of 49.12 seconds for a mile, a close second, at the wheel of a special Gray Fox. Both men made unsensationally fast time, negotiating the entire circuit close to 75 miles an hour. Further arrivals scheduled in the near future are Barney Oldfield, who will report May 11; Bob Burman and Ray Harroun, who wants to try out one of the new Maxwell's that has guaranteed to do a lap in 1:37.

Hupmobile

The Car of The American Family

A Real Incident

Hupmobile pulls up at curb; driver accosted by stranger on sidewalk.

After preliminaries, stranger says, "I'm on the fence between the Hup and the Blank car."

Hup owner, as usual, tells him he won't make mistake on the Hup; says this one—1914 model—is his second; tells of low running cost; rare repairs, etc.

Rivals Boost, Too

Stranger then tells of asking a friend—a salesman for the Dash car—about the Hup.

"For heaven's sake," the salesman-friend said, "don't buy the Blank. Take the Hup—it's the best car of it's class on the market."

This really happened.

Light Weight vs. Heavy Weight

What do you get for the extra weight of a heavy water-cooled car?

You get big tire and gasoline bills, heavy up-keep charges and a cooling system that freezes and boils. And hard riding and driving.

Light weight gives more tire and gasoline mileage.

It gives a car of longer life.

The direct-cooling system knows no weather conditions—it has no water to freeze or boil—no extra parts to get out of order.

The Franklin Six-Thirty is an efficient light car—it weighs but 2725 pounds, fully equipped.

Riding and driving comfort are remarkable in the Six-Thirty—350 miles a day without fatigue quite the usual thing.

This is the Goodyear All-Weather Tread

"All-Weather" because it runs like a smooth tread. The projections are flat and regular. Yet on wet roads the countless sharp edges afford a resistless grip.

This tread is double-thick. It is made of very tough rubber. The sharp edges last for thousands of miles.

Instead of rounded grips, here are grips with sharp edges. Instead of a rugged, irregular tread, here is one smooth and regular.

Instead of separate projections—centering all strains at small points in the fabric—here are projections which meet at the base, and spread the strains just like a plain tread.

Not a tire user can know this tread without wanting these tires on his car.

No Other Tire

No other tire has this All-Weather tread. No other tire has our No-Rim-Cut feature—the only feasible way to make rim-cutting impossible. No other tire is final-cured on air bags, to save the countless blow-outs due to wrinkled fabric. This extra process costs us $1,500 daily.

No other tire combats tread separation by creating at the danger point hundreds of large rubber rivets.

Much Lower Prices

In 1913 No-Rim-Cut tire prices dropped 28 per cent. Now there are 16 makes which sell at higher prices—some higher by at least 30 per cent.

Yet No-Rim-Cut tires have four costly features found in no other tires.

And no man knows of any way to give you greater mileage.

Bear this in mind. No-Rim-Cut tires have won top place in Tiredom. And they cost you only what the best should cost.

Our dealers are everywhere.

Mobile Outfielder Leads Southern League Hitters

Manager Briscoe Lord, Last Week's Leader, Drops aBck. George Kircher Now Runner-up—Cracker Show Five .300 Men Through Wednesday's Game

Larue Kirby, the pitcher, whom Manager Briscoe Lord has converted into an outfielder temporarily, is the batting leader of the Southern league up through games played Wednesday. Kirby had taken part in six games up to that time, and had compiled the juicy average of .519. George Kircher, who has been working regularly in recent games, is the runner up with a figure of .409. Tommy Long stood fifth with a mark of .395, while Captain Harry Welchonce, Amby McConnell and Ham Reynolds were all in the select crowd on the above date.

Bris Lord toppled from the head of the list to seventh place, and Johnny Lindsay became dizzy and fell from well over .400 to .392. Mobile was leading in club batting, with the Crackers second. The Gulls had six men hitting better than .300, while the Crackers showed five. Miller and Starr lead base stealers with six each. The Mobile outfielder purloined his sextet with a batting average of .519, while Starr was only hitting .133. Jacobson leads the home run hitters with three, and is also tied with Sloan on three-baggers with a like number. Burns, of New Orleans, made six doubles, the record.

Here are the figures:

Secretary Farrell Announces Decisions

AUBURN, N. Y., May 1.—Chairman John H. Farrell, of the national board of baseball arbitration, today made public the following decisions:

The Western association, embracing territory of Muskogee, Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Okla., Joplin, Mo., and Fort Smith Ark. and McAlester, Okla., has qualified for membership in class D. The Central Texas league, embracing territory of West Hillsboro, Italy, Waxahachie, Ennis and Corsicana, Tex., has qualified for membership in class D. The franchises and players of the Clay Center club in Kansas State league have been transferred to Emporia.

Ham Reynolds is certain to catch a large percentage of the Crackers' games this season if he continues to sting the ball at his present clip. Monday he rapped out two two-baggers and scored two runs out of four trips to the plate.

Douglas Fans Organize Club

DOUGLAS, Ga., May 1.—Douglas has organized a baseball club, with G. M. Stanton, president; C. R. Tidwell, secretary and treasurer, and W. A. Wood, manager.

There are about thirty citizens of Douglas who are members of the club. They have already organized and adopted by-laws and resolutions, and have raised a fund of $300 to begin with, which will be replenished from time to time as the necessity arises.

The club expects to have one of the best baseball teams in the southern section of the state, and some good games will be played, though it is not the present intention of the club to join the South Georgia league.

Pitcher Boehling added another victory to his list yesterday when the Senators defeated the Red Sox. Boehling is hurling in great form this season and should win a large percentage of his games.

MOTORDROME OPENS SEASON SATURDAY AFTERNOON; RIDERS COMING TUESDAY

This Is Morty Graves, One of the Most Daring Riders in the Game, and One of the Fastest—This Machine Is an Eight-Valve Indian on Which He Expects to Lower the Local Track Record During the Approaching Season

Graves Will Captain the Riders During the Meet—He Has Signed Up Some of the Most Brilliant Exponents of the Two-wheel Motor Racing Game, Including Richards, Flickenstein, Stokes, Shaw, Creviston and Others

With all the pop-pop of motors and the attendant thrills of the board-track racing game, the local motordrome, under the management of D. Noon Hudson, will open the season Saturday afternoon of this week. For several weeks improvements of various kinds have been going on, and Hudson announces that practically every small detail has been completed. The bandstand has been lowered, whatever repairs were needed on the track have been made, and a coat of white paint has been added to the paddocks, and judges' and bandstands.

The first meeting will be held Saturday afternoon, the event having a place on the official program of the Shriners. The entertainment committee has purchased a large block of tickets, and an enormous delegation is expected to attend the opening meet. Many of the visiting Shriners will bring their own musical organization, and several of these will play at the opening meet.

Morty Graves, speed king of a two-wheel craft, will captain the riders this year. He has already signed up a corps of the fastest and most daring riders in the country. These include Tex Richards, Larry Flickenstein, Ray Shaw, Glen Stokes, Henry Lewis, Ray Creviston, Billy Montgomery, Blount Burchell and Harry Glenn, local riders, and the Samuelson brothers, of Salt Lake City. Creviston and Flickenstein are already in the city, while Hudson has wired transportation to the others, and all of them are expected here by Tuesday.

Graves, who is acknowledged one of the greatest motorcycle riders in the world, will bring along his eight-valve Indian machine. This machine is said to be capable of doing a mile in a fraction over thirty seconds, and Graves will have a good chance to get down around the bottom of records for that distance on the local track. Flickenstein rides an old model Excelsior, which he has remodeled according to his own ideas. He rode a few races here last season, and demonstrated that his machine will make any of them hustle to beat him. This old fellow is not much for looks, but it has the speed in great bulk.

Shaw, Stokes, Montgomery, Creviston and the Samuelson boys will be new to local fans. The last named ride different makes of machine and are said to be bitter rivals on the boards. All of these have established records for speed and daring, which indicate that they will add lots to the rivalry among the riders in the coming meets.

The first races will take place on Saturday afternoon, beginning at 2:30 o'clock. The feature of this card will be the Woodward sweepstakes. Saturday night the Walter Taylor sweepstakes will be run. In addition to these feature races, several special match races are planned, and also several long distance races will doubtless be run. The distance races last season proved very attractive events, and should attract large crowds this season.

National Board Announces Decisions

AUBURN, N. Y., May 1.—The following decisions were handed down today by the national board of arbitration of the National Baseball association:

The Middle Texas league, embracing the territory of Temple, Belton, Bartlett, Texarkana, Longview and Georgetown, all in Texas, has qualified for membership in class B.

Claims allowed: Harry Glenn, against Nashville, Tenn.

Claims disallowed: W. A. Fuson, against Birmingham, Ala.

Services of players awarded: Pitcher Hanley to Mobile, Ala.; J. F. Eberlein to Fort Worth, Tex.; L. V. Hamilton to Macon, Ga.; Players Curtis, Elder and Morgan to Middleboro, Ky.; Player Birdshaw to Owensboro, Ky.; Player Goodwin to Salina, Kas.

Overland $950

$1075—With electric starter and generator. Prices f. o. b. Toledo, Ohio.

Costs 30% Less

THE 1914 Overland is a large, magnificent, five-passenger family touring car—having a powerful motor, a long wheel base and large tires. It is built to stand without stress or strain the hardest kind of work. Mechanically, the chassis is as sound as that found in the most expensive cars in the world. This new Overland is beautifully finished, absolutely durable, unusually comfortable, and comes completely equipped—even with a full set of the most up-to-date electric lights.

Yet, it costs 30% less than any other similar car made.

The Overland is a remarkably economical car on both gasoline, oil and tires. This is due to its perfect mechanical balance. It never wastes a drop of gasoline or oil.

Yet, it costs 30% less than any other similar car made.

Check up its specifications, the length of its wheel base, the size of its tires, the horse-power of its motor, the completeness of its fine equipment, its roomy tonneau; in fact, check every detail, part and piece with the corresponding specifications of any other car in its price class. Then compare the costs and you find—

That the Overland costs you 30% less than any other similar car made.

Our selling price is lower because our production is larger. Producing more cars of this type than any other manufacturer in the world, permits us to use the most economical and labor-saving manufacturing equipment ever invented. Every part of the Overland car is made in Overland factories.

That's why this car is 30% under other current prices.

The motoring season was never better. Roads are opening up in every direction. Nature, herself, is beckoning you out in the open. All out of doors is coaxing and teasing you to get a car.

But!

Buy with discretion; examine carefully this, the sturdiest of cars, and you will find it, without question or doubt, the most inexpensive car to buy, and the most economical car to operate.

Remember it is 30% under the market.

Selling of Stocks Principally Realizing on Speculative Profit

Not for Months Had the Bulls Seen Such Profits in a Week. No Aggressive Operations on the Bear Side

(By Associated Press.)

N. Y., Sat., May 2.—A new decline in stocks today brought the edge of the week's account. The movement was downward from first to last, but there was no real weakness and in a majority of cases losses were small.

After much an autumn as occurred this week the reaction came in natural sequence. The advance of the last few days put the bonnie shares 2 to 5 points higher. Not for months had the bulls seen such profits in a week. Selling today was principally realizing on an obvious move and there was no aggressive bear operations. Some offerings were accepted readily at concessions and it is evident that the bulls ing faction was taking on stocks in the expectation of a further upturn, pending the conference which alone should result in the Mexican situation.

Buyers and sellers were heaviest in those issues which have been under the troubles in the bituminous fields and today's profit taking in copper, coal and steel held up fairly well. Much of the late trading when it gave way on reports of further cuts in prices of pig iron and evidence of continued poor financial conditions of track leased were securities. Both common and preferred showed a sharp decline in the latter's share made a new low mark.

The gold export movement, also the day, developed little significance today. With the exception of the engagement of $1,000,000 for Paris.

The bank statement was a disappointment, though it showed on actual cash gain of more than $1,000,000 and a slight larger increase in surplus. A cash gain of $20,000,000 has been predicted.

Bonds were irregular. Total sales $1,3000,000. United States 2's declined 1/4 and Panama 2's 1/2 on the week.

IMPORTS OF FOODSTUFFS SHOW GOOD INCREASE

Imports of practically all leading classes of foodstuffs have shown a large and in many larger extent during the first eight months of the current fiscal year than during the same period of the two preceding years.

Cattle to the value of $10,000,000 in excess of the value of the preceding fiscal year were admitted and value of breadstuffs has more than doubled. Fruits and nuts have increased and dairy and poultry products about doubled, compared with the imports of 1913 or 1912. Following are official statistics for the periods indicated:

	1911-12	1912-13	1913-14
Animals	$ 15,702,742	$ 16,911,783	$ 26,911,783
Breadstuffs	25,204,653	11,161,868	10,373,451
Coffee	12,162,273	10,126,853	17,241,377
Fish	7,450,142	7,450,142	7,450,142
Fruits and nuts	34,202,841	34,922,023	39,335,229
Meats and dairy prod.	19,676,848	9,737,047	9,172,906
Veg oils	21,296,206	24,004,617	19,150,867
Vegetables	5,147,402	5,345,402	5,345,402
Vegetables	10,670,750	8,847,550	10,435,517
Total	$173,709,948	$158,948,215	$173,910,766

These nine classes of foodstuffs represent a value for these eight months of $173,910,766. The increase in approximately $31,000,000 over the total for the eight months ending with February, and $46,000,000 more than for the eight months ended February, 1913.

The heavy imports of live stock under the Underwood tariff from beasts of burden to the amount for the great increase in cattle values to $10,000,000. Meat and dairy products also reported repeatent Argentine and Australian meats and eggs and other dairy products from European and Asiatic countries.

EXPORTS OF FOODSTUFFS.

Exports of principal meats and dairy products for the nine months ending with March were the largest for the period in four years. The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce gives the value as $106,910,903. This compares with $89,695,137 a year ago and $101,562,256 for the nine months ended March, 1912. Principal breadstuffs exports for the past nine months were raised at $125,278,289, compared with $159,737,196 in 1912-13, followed oil exports fell off about one-third from last year to total value

COTTON GOSSIP.

Times-Democrat says:

Yesterday's decline can hardly be said to have affected any considerable change in the outlook. Spinners' takings for the week were less than 25,000 bales than the takings in the same week of last year, but it has been generally understood that a shrinkage was inevitable. On the other hand the accounts from Texas are glowing and the central belt has best valuable days, if not the best. Aside the extremely moderate increase of acreage foreshadowed by the Journal of Commerce and Tobacco figures suggest that, even with some allowance, this item may have been put too high by the bulls themselves. But after all the elements cast the insertia determine the size of a crop, and these are running much in favor of a big acreage and a free use of fertilizers may diminish the pitfalls.

Yesterday's decline was somewhat accentuated from the fact that New York dealt in April contracts to the extent of 5,000 bales over current month, thus compelling a readjustment of about 40 points over the old. But this movement was natural as it supposes the change which the adoption of government crop reports and consequent difference in April and May values should occasion in the Mexican situation.

Buyers and sellers were heaviest in those issues which have been under the troubles in the bituminous fields and today's profit taking in copper, coal and steel held up fairly well. Much of the late trading when it gave way on reports of further cuts in prices of pig iron and evidence of continued poor financial conditions of track leased were securities. IMPORTS OF FOODSTUFFS SHOW GOOD INCREASE

Imports of practically all leading classes of foodstuffs have shown a large and in many larger extent during the first eight months of the current fiscal year than during the same period of the two preceding years.

Cattle to the value of $10,000,000 in excess of the value of the preceding fiscal year were admitted and value of breadstuffs has more than doubled. Fruits and nuts have increased and dairy and poultry products about doubled, compared with the imports of 1913 or 1912. Following are official statistics for the periods indicated:

	1911-12	1912-13	1913-14
Animals	$ 15,702,742	$ 16,911,783	$ 26,911,783
Breadstuffs	25,204,653	11,161,868	10,373,451
Coffee	12,162,273	10,126,853	17,241,377
Fish	7,450,142	7,450,142	7,450,142
Fruits and nuts	34,202,841	34,922,023	39,335,229
Meats and dairy prod.	19,676,848	9,737,047	9,172,906
Veg oils	21,296,206	24,004,617	19,150,867
Vegetables	5,147,402	5,345,402	5,345,402
Vegetables	10,670,750	8,847,550	10,435,517
Total	$173,709,948	$158,948,215	$173,910,766

These nine classes of foodstuffs represent a value for these eight months of $173,910,766. The increase in approximately $31,000,000 over the total for the eight months ending with February, and $46,000,000 more than for the eight months ended February, 1913.

The heavy imports of live stock under the Underwood tariff from beasts of burden to the amount for the great increase in cattle values to $10,000,000. Meat and dairy products also reported repeatent Argentine and Australian meats and eggs and other dairy products from European and Asiatic countries.

EXPORTS OF FOODSTUFFS.

Exports of principal meats and dairy products for the nine months ending with March were the largest for the period in four years. The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce gives the value as $106,910,903. This compares with $89,695,137 a year ago and $101,562,256 for the nine months ended March, 1912. Principal breadstuffs exports for the past nine months were raised at $125,278,289, compared with $159,737,196 in 1912-13, followed oil exports fell off about one-third from last year to total value

FIDELITY FRUIT & PRODUCE COMPANY'S MARKET LETTER

ATLANTA, May 2.—Receipts continue heavy in all kinds of Florida vegetables, and prices were forced lower this week.

Strawberries, cucumbers, beans, lettuce, English peas, and new potatoes are all very plentiful, and on account of the reasonable prices, they are selling in large quantities in fact our market is being cleaned up every day.

Eggs and poultry would be going to lots of Atlantians to know that it takes from one-fourth to one-third more than the amount here to supply the demand here, when they are willing to pay anything like a reasonable price.

Irish potatoes are a little higher, but staple vegetables we have, taking from four to six cents per pound, are very reasonable.

Strawberries have been coming this week in large quantities, and have been selling very low. The heavy shipments to this market were caused by the fact that the Florida season is fast drawing to a close, berries getting ripe, and the shipper wanting to get them off, and carry to the northern markets.

Cucumbers are coming in rapid gait. It is surprising how the demand holds up, even through the strawberry season, which as a rule almost cuts off the demand for grapefruit and oranges. Shippers of both California and Florida oranges are asking an advance of 40c per box over last week's prices.

Apples are in light receipt, and the demand rather poor the past ten days.

Onions are advancing as the warm weather comes on, and the demand is increasing. The market has been very badly over stocked on cabbage all this week. Some cars have been returned rather than pay freight on them.

Tomatoes have been very scarce this week, priced up like a crate. All dealers are making special effort to get a supply of goods for the Atlanta Fruit Association; and it is believed they will be plenty here to take care of the demand, although it is supposed to be heavy.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF NEW ORLEANS COTTON MARKET

Fear of Hostile Legislation Reduced Operations in Contracts to a Minimum

(By WALTER PARKER.

NEW ORLEANS, May 2.—A week of bad weather, followed by the bullish but unfavorable week-end statistics brought comfort to the bulls on Friday and Saturday, and July contracts at 12.29 as against 12½ cents for standard middling at New Orleans. The week, where the supply of good seed is limited, has been one of rain and again. In the east the crop has made favorable progress. Cotton has responded to the favorable moon largely on prospective legislation. Fear of hostile legislation reduced operations in the cotton contract division to minimum. Now the trade feels fairly confident that the lower house will start in with predicted activity, however principles, and that house and senate will get together on the issues that have really vexed the cotton trade and industry generally. Such a new will curb speculation and open the way for the cotton trade to expand and do business on a more legitimate basis.

Meanwhile, the price position of March and April is far from satisfactory, and what may be expected to result from scientific legislation remains problematical. The spread of March closed at 11.65@11.70, while April closed at 12.06@12.08. The extreme of the sharp premium carried by April over March is found in the fact that New York's record contract which is based on government standard type good enough into which to deliver, is not allowed, congress enact a law along the lines expecting effective at once. Spot cotton here and at New Orleans will also be promptly adjusted and established, and brokerage charges will further sustain the proper parity between the two markets, which will be reflected in the market for future conditions generally.

Meanwhile, the into sight movement was smaller than last year, and henceforth is expected to show considerable decrease, but at the week-end exports were only 61,217 bales, against 107,000 last year, and 69,000 this week last year; for the season thus far 8,981,701 as against 7,800,000 last year.

Spinners' takings also made a less favorable showing, being 24,000 bales this week as against 240,000 last year. Thus far this season spinners have taken 6,000,000 bales, against 11,314,000 last year.

Favorable reports continue to come from Memphis reports continue to come from Memphis reports continue to be broadened considerably, any now most styles of cotton are selling there, the premium being on only the better styles worn in active demand.

It is said that the world will have to be full on consumption in both the United States and Europe during the coming year, as the first half of the year the continent took 200,000 bales more than the first half of the year, and quite favorable throughout the eastern belt but the reports that come from the western belt are heavy producing parts of the southwest where undesirable rains and cool weather have set in start fully two weeks late, and more in less related places. The outlook for consumption, spinners' takings, exports and all statistical figures have all ended in prospects for the question of the old crop. These bullish features have been offset, however, by the fact that the yarn market said to be heavily stocking with goods and the demand for goods has been rather below the market. Finished gods sales at the mills reports that orders have been small and the entire country reports a disposition to adhere to the policy of a hand to mouth buying, and a careful "watching and waiting" attitude. The cause to have become altogether too popular with the trade. This prevailing bullish policy deprives them of profits in that it prohibits them from taking advantage of the bull side both in buying the raw article and selling their goods. It is a matter of the better of the lower stocks of goods and means higher prices for cotton and goods, generally speaking.

There has also been some disappointment in the failure of the farmers to respond more sensitively to the heralded operations of promised legislation. The fact is that the farmer had considerable to do with this.

The farmer has been in a position to take profits from the rising advances of the past few days, but he has not done so. The farmer has been more than since the first part of March, and has always been in a position to cover and sell with general speculation. The farmer has not been readily found. Yet there is by the same token the unlikelihood of any appreciable general liquidation.

The farmer has cleverly drawn on the bullish situation and the approaching decision regarding the national rate case and congressional legislation it would seem that construction has been placed on the side of the latter of the argument from now on. The wonderful wheat crop prospects and the fact that the country is a business that should not be lost sight of and that the farmer has been receiving 12 cents for 13,000,000 bales of cotton in this year of prosperity has been responsible for the fact that this figure will be added to bring about higher prices and a general confidence to continue in favor the buying side on the actual basis. Those who are conservative or July for 15c. Those willing to participate in the speculation favor the buying side. Favorable weather should bring the new crops ahead rapidly from record levels in the south and retain a buying opportunity.

Cotton Seed Oil Liquidation.

Cotton seed oil has been taken by some as an abandonment of the bull side of cotton, but it has been maintained all season on the long side of cotton seed oil, and has been based on the certain character of selling of distant options on the theory that there is to be a material cut in the acreage. The general weakness in land and steady competition of other oils makes it difficult for the bull oil at this level until some months hence. Cotton seed oil is bringing a premium over the new crop prospects. We still believe conservative sales on the bulges will prove profitable.

HAYWARD & CLARK COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, May 2.—Our Liverpool correspondent cables that Manchester and manufacturers are requesting to keep their mills going during the season. Demand for cotton has broadened and completes every from the lowest grades to the best extra staples seem neglected.

Liverpool was rather steady over all the week-end liquidation. Futures and spots one point lower; sales 10,000.

Our market opened easier this morning on favorable weather reports and lower prices from Wall street, and centered on July and August. Trade is quiet, awaiting the eventual middle of the time. July there is over a cent and a half above the spot basis. Receipts of cotton from the south Stock is reported to be very small at the mills, nevertheless bear selling continues.

The crop summary of the Financial Chronicle for the week is bullish, pointing out the cool and wet weather in the east and damage and delay to seed in the south, with a pause in the planting.

The map shows fair weather in the northwest quarter, rather cool and cloudy in the rest of the belt, with rain generally falling in Texas and Oklahoma. The rainfall was mostly reporting 1 to 2 inches, with 2 to 3 inches somewhere, some heavier rains fell. Indications are for clearing off in Texas, Oklahoma and Atlantics, but unsettled rainy weather is indicated west of the river with little appearance coming on east Texas. Statistics for the week ending tonight will be very favorable to the crops, large exports and loss in stock, larger receipts.

Pressure continued in New York until near the close, causing weak and lower prices. July there dropped to 13.56. There has been steady buying on weakness, the market should be well liquidated and interest rather light. We look for a steady market with a ruling factor next week. Liverpool is due Monday 3 hour.

War Effect Has Short Boom on Opening of Week. War in Mexico Cannot but Stimulate Business at Present—Economic Losses in This Contest Will Be Negligible—Foreign Markets Nervous—General Business Not as Brisk as Might Be

NEW YORK, May 2.—Wall street entered upon the new week with the effects of a cessation of the disturbances in the Mexican territory, those who were carrying heavy short commitments found that they had greatly erred in prophesying the true course of the events. The reports from Washington to effect that both Huerta and President Wilson had agreed upon terms of mediation came as an invigorating tonic to a market that had hitherto floundered around the lowest level it has seen in many a day; especially was this true of those shares which depend for their production upon Mexican fields, or upon the commercial intercourse of the United States with the territory south of the Rio Grande. A notable example of the change in sentiment as related to the Mexican situation was the increase of 15 points in the quotations of Mexican Petroleum in one short session, followed almost immediately by an equal loss when it was rumored that the forces of Villa were contemplating the destruction of the company's property.

W. S. Cousins

Viewed from the standpoint of general business, it can hardly be said that a war with Mexico is attended with disastrous effects upon the business of the country, considered in its own light, the expense of such an undertaking would be in the additional outlay of money needed for equipment and munitions, the value of property destroyed, and the unproductive time lost in the army. It should not be forgotten that the men on the ships now being sent against Mexico have to be provided for in the regular maintenance of the service of war it is only logical that a considerable expansion of the maintenance of our military departments should be undertaken. It is good, therefore, the ready money needed for these operations, the Mexican problem is not a financial one, and it is exceedingly doubtful if it will be related to some extent, to stimulate, instead of handicap business. Such money as is spent will be spent at home, and will flow into the channels of the industries that cater to the equipment of military farces, as well as to the general foodstuffs industries.

There can of course be no doubt as to the final outcome of hostilities in Mexico. The only question that concerns us is, therefore, the immediate effect of the conflict as related to money and business. It is conceded that a war with Mexico would be attended with a large increase in the profits of railroads and indeed of all interests concerned in the supply of goods to the government are large and that the general circulation of money is greatly increased. The natural effect of such conditions is to produce a feeling of optimism in business circles to furnish a supply of funds that would find its way to the stock market.

As to the ultimate effect upon values, it is regarded in conservative quarters that the ultimate effect upon expense and losses incidental to the "war" have, in newspaper dispatches, been greatly exaggerated. It is not likely that it will check the production of necessities or interfere with the growth of business in the United States than it would be if the various factions there were left to fight their differences out without interference by this country. There will, however, be two effects which the investor must seriously consider. The first is the probable increase in taxation and increased revenue on the part of the government, which will tend to stiffen the money market. So far as can be seen at present, however, the effect upon the money market will be slight, and there is no reason to expect more than a moderate stiffening of rates. There will be an increase of taxes either by resorting to entirely new forms of taxationor increasing rate of taxes already levied. The second point which the investor must consider is the possible effect of the check to tendencies which have been developing so alarmingly right the evils in this present economic situation and establish the basis for a condition of solid prosperity later on. The process of liquidation of labor will probably be interfered with, but, on the other hand, there is no reason to believe that the immediate demand which we have been in prospect for some time past will not materialize, although the foundations of it will not be quite as strong as they would otherwise have become.

Should a war also assist in the solution of the problem of unemployment, since in the stimulation of production, more workmen are absorbed by necessary. Should the war last for an extended period, there will be a material reduction in the ranks of the unemployed, and Coxey will be fewer recruits than have been attracted to him in the past few years.

FOREIGN MARKETS AND FOREIGN TRADE.

The foreign markets, being so much farther removed from the scene of hostilities, and dealing, as they do, in securities shares on a large scale, have been extremely restless and agitated. As a result London and the financial centers most actively associated with Mexican securities have taken a more distrustful view of the effects of a war than do home markets. The only natural resultant of this policy is a heavy liquidation of what securities are now held, and a refusal to take on any new commitments until peace is more firmly established.

As regards the foreign commerce, figures for March, just available, show that this month established a new high record for imports, in the face of a backward domestic trade. Exports, on the other hand, were disappointingly small, leaving but $5,000,000 in favor of the country, as the result of the month. This is taken to mean the failure of the new tariff bill to have had been expected of it, and to increase the doubts of those who have never been entirely favorable to its principles.

The situation apparent is one to cause an uneasy feeling in an uncertain state at this time. Important interests who have recently made nation-wide observations found that in nearly all lines of trade there was a halting disposition and growing hesitancy with regard to business expansion. This situation is by no means confined to any particular section, but may be whole country. On the other hand, it was found by those who have traversed the crop sections of the country that never at this time of the year was the winter wheat crop appeared to be in such a perfect and healthy condition.

Western iron and steel trade continues to drag and and the leading interests in the industry are in a quandary as to the future. There is little hope of improvement from any section until a decision be reached regarding the long pending rate investigation, and in spite of the dullness and dragging disposition of the and those who have made a close study of conditions regard the market as a temporary state, and with the rendering of the rate decision there will be a marked improvement in the trade whether or not favors the railroads.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF NAVAL STORES MARKET

ANGORA GOAT RAISING PROFITABLE IN AMERICA

Refusal of South Africa to Permit Exports of Breeding Stock No Longer Menace

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The raising of Angora goats in the United States is now a demonstrated success, according to a report just published by the United States department of agriculture under the title, "The Angora Goat," farmers' bulletin 575. The industry, says the bulletin, is indeed an established here that growers need not be inconvenienced by the action of South Africa in prohibiting the exportation of Angoras, for the quantity of pure blood in this country is already sufficient to meet all requirements. In the opinion of experts, the best Angora mohair fleeces now equal any grown in South Africa or Asia Minor, the original home of the Angora.

Although nearly every state in the union now possesses its flocks, the southwest and northwest are the sections well adapted to the industry, in particular the large areas recently logged off in the northwest. There the Angora not only saves labor herself, but helps to clear away the brush, which if allowed to grow uncleared, might easily become a dangerous fire trap. Thus it is often said that the Angora works and pays for its board at the same time.

It is saying more and more, for the value of the fleece or mohair is increasing steadily. Formerly the use of mohair depended largely upon the prevailing fashion that its price would follow from year to year. This condition, however, is rapidly changing, as new uses for mohair are continually arising, from automobile tops and table covers to dress goods and curled false hair, and today a grower is assured of a reasonably steady market. The price of course varies with the quality. The best fleeces, the bulletin says, on the average from 42 to 55 cents a pound. The weight of a fleece has a very wide range, but in 1909 the average for Oregon was found to be 8.7 pounds and for Texas 7.81, on account of the greater heat, however, and the damage of shedding, Angoras in the southwest are frequently shorn twice a year—a fact which must be taken into consideration in all calculations.

This practice of clipping twice a year is in many ways a drawback to the industry, since it tends to lower the average grade of fleece, as in ginning. Mohair as good as any can be grown in this country, but the average quality is not today considered to be as good as the foreign. About 2,000,000 pounds are annually imported, principally from Turkey and spun with the domestic product. Six inches is the shortest length of fleece usually staplized, and, because of shearing twice a year, much Texas and New Mexico mohair falls below this standard. Where the fleece is allowed to grow for twelve months, the average length is 10 inches and in the best flocks it is not unusual to get 11 to 12 inches. Bucks of sweepstakes buck at the El Paso show in 1910, is an example of what is possible. His fleece weighed 18 pounds measured 20½ inches in length and sold for $1 per pound, or $18 for the product of ordinary commercial conditions. It implies a considerable amount of care and attention.

The birth rate is approximately 67 per cent, but in best methods of caring for the does it is as high as 126 per cent. Since the kids grow rapidly, it is obvious that the more skill and industry during the breeding season the greater the amount of caring for the does. All this time are discussed in some detail in the new bulletin. Otherwise, the management of Angoras does not differ greatly from that of sheep.

While the Angora goat needs attention, it is adaptable and as far as temperature is concerned should flourish in any part of the United States. In Nevada the flocks face the heavy snowfalls with equanimity as long as a dry shelter is provided for them at night and during the heat in th southwest frequently makes it necessary to shear twice a year in order to prevent shedding. It does not otherwise affect the health of the flocks. Rich land in the native state of the goat does not thoroughly agree with when left to themselves. Pure water is also essential.

Otherwise the Angora is not particular. It will feed with cattle and sheep, and, though in some danger of being kicked, with horses also. As a matter of fact however, the goat prefers a certain amount of rough pasture and is particularly happy when clearing on brush land. There is one instance of a flock of 600 being allowed free grazing in a California forest reserve in order to keep the strips of cleared land between the fire breaks free from seeds and vegetation. Settlers in the northwest find the Angora most serviceable in browsing off the brush on their new lands, and one settler in company purchased a flock to keep its right of way clear and attractive. On every hand the danger of injury to the fleece must, however, be kept in mind.

As has already been said, the Angora can be bred sufficiently pure for practical purposes from the stock already in this country and there is no need o further importations for breeding purposes. Some years ago, however, this was not believed to be the case and in 1903 the sultan of Turkey endeavored to preserve for its dominions the monopoly of the mohair trade by prohibiting the exportation of the live animal. The example was followed in South Africa, but it was too late. Some of the best stock was already in America and today other countries are buying of us flocks have been shipped recently to Brazil and the Argentine. Various companies have already been formed for the development of the industry in this country and a large quantity of the annual product is increasing rapidly. In 1913 it is estimated that 5,000,000 pounds of mohair were grown in the United States. Fuller details of the management and care of flocks are to be found in Farmers' Bulletin 573. "The Angora Goat," which will be sent free on application to the department of agriculture.

AUSTIN AND BAIT GRAIN LETTER.

NEW YORK, May 2. Wheat: This market has now assumed the leadership in activity of grains with interesting news on both sides of the list. Crop news and prospects are undoubtedly the best ever known and this has brought out the statement from James to Patten that June 1 will see the country of a combined winter and spring wheat crop yield of 900,000,000 bushels, and if these stupendous figures were reached is expected what to sell at 70 cents. Of course the "if" in this case is important. In the meantime shipments from Argentine, Australia, Russia and India are light and there is a corresponding demand for our own wheat with the weekly figures showing in favor of Atlantic. The market will, however, follow crop news from this time on, and if it continues as favorable as it has, of late, lower levels could be easily made, for the market becomes easily overbought and good rallies show profits to those trading on the sharp breaks. Sales should be limited to good bulges, as the least adverse crop news may find limited offerings on an oversold market.

Corn and oats: Wet weather has delayed our planting a little, but made for a good season in the ground, though our own crop conditions are not as favorable as last year. Corn and oats are therefore easily governed by the trade in wheat for our domestic article for April and May requirements. These rallies are just the time to anticipate the heavy Argentine shipments later on, and we still think July and September corn will drag down considerably lower until something shows up to estimate. Buy wheat on breaks for the present only, but have lost considerable in the southwest, and other positions should still hold market slow until there is something to animate it.

Provisions—The weakness in lard is depressing the entire list, notwithstanding moderate receipts of stock. Profuse hogs coming steadily from now on, but there is still a feeling of antagonism to high prices which are many in the ranks of the unemployed. There is but little to change the price of lard and this may bring ribs and pork lower without some incentive in the way news, although the packers are lending support on the breaks in the investment and will be slow in returns, but seems less risky than selling.—M. F. Austin.

Cancelling of Warehouse Receipts Caused Shorts to Cover in Grain

Belief That Stocks Would Be Reduced to an Impressive Extent in Near Future Caused Advance in Prices

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, May 2.—Belief that wheat stocks here would be reduced to an impressive extent in the near future had much to do today with causing the market to rally. The outcome was a steady close at a shade to 1-2@5-8c net advance. Corn wound up 1-2c to 7-8c above last night; oats with a drop of 1-8c to 1-2@5-8c, and provisions unchanged to 8c higher.

Cancelling of warehouse receipts on a large scale arouses misgivings among shorts in wheat. More than half a million bushels of No. 2 hard is reported as having been ordered out of Chicago elevators yesterday, and there were notices of Lake charters having been taken for 750,000 bushels of wheat from here in the last forty-eight hours. Moreover, cash trading today in old wheat here exceed 250,000 bushels, chiefly to millers and exporters. Cancelling of warehouse receipts for 2,000,000 bushels new for export in August and September, the largest aggregate of such transactions so far this season.

May delivery led the advance in wheat, although the biggest trade was in the new crop months. One sizing elevator concern alone purchased fully 1,000,000 bushels of September. Principal offerings came from some of yesterday's buyers who were rendered timid on account of an early decline brought about mainly through good rain all the way from north Dakota to the central part of Texas, and because of sensationally bearish state crop reports from Nebraska.

Shorts in corn evinced nervousness from the outset, and covered freely, especially for May. The chief incentives were the higher cables, the slowness of good deliveries here, and the prospect of stocks here showing a big decrease for the week. There have been general defaults on April contracts for shipments from Argentina. Expected liveral clearing out of oats stocks here led to an upturn for the oats market.

Buying, said to be for Milwaukee packers, gave provisions a lift. Demand, however, did not arise until quotations had undergone some setback.

A CONVERSATION OVERHEARD ON A STREET CAR

Two men were on a street car coming to town and they had lived in the same neighborhood for years. The Fat Man had a regular job and the little Skinny Man was only temporarily employed, as usual during elections. This is about all that the writer, who sat behind them, heard of their conversation:

Skinny Man—How about the sheriff's race?

Fat Man—Well, there seem to be two leading candidates and the race seems to be warming up.

Skinny Man—Three men are in the race, you know.

Fat Man—Yes, I heard of the Newton County man being in the race but I don't find any enthusiasm for him. It's between Mayo and Mangum.

Skinny Man—Well, I guess you're right, but I'm canvassing for Mangum, so I boost for both. All the votes Wright gets he takes away from Mayo, because Mayo is leading in the opposition to the present sheriff.

Fat Man—But is that fair?

Skinny Man—Oh, well—you know they say all is fair in war and politics.

Fat Man—That was years ago, though.

Skinny Man—I don't see why the people should kick Mangum out of office after he has been in for six years.

Fat Man—Well you see he was only elected this last time for two years and this was a gift from the people. So if another clean, honest and efficient citizen wants to run against him Mangum must not get mad and say they are trying to kick him out. He doesn't own the office and every two years it goes back to the people and they name a successor in the office.

Skinny Man—Yes, but he's given satisfaction and he is getting old now and he wants to be re-elected.

Fat Man—As to whether he has acceptably filled the office—is a question the people will decide on election day. No doubt he is getting old and if he lives he'll get older, but I suspect the older he gets the more he'll want the office. Besides it's not altogether a question of satisfaction, some folks believe in reasonable rotation of office and say six years is long enough.

Skinny Man—Well, Mangum has been in a long time and has been looking after his own while he was in office. He's got his political fences all built up and I think he's a politician of long time. Why,' I know of 1,500 votes in one bunch that are solid for him—and he's got a big campaign fund let me tell you that. Money talks in politics as well as anything else.

Fat Man—Yes, I have heard about the 1,500 votes in one block and also the immense campaign fund, but I guess you could count that though the better. Mayo doesn't make any point on that, be it said to his credit. The thing you don't want to overlook is that there are over seventeen thousand citizens registered and 1,500 is but one-eleventh or twelfth of the number.

Skinny Man—But where will Mayo get his strength? The people of this county are not going to vote for a policeman for Sheriff.

Fat Man—I am not connected with the Mayo ticket, so I don't know all about his strength. All I know is what I hear folks say and what I remember to have read in the papers. If you remember, about a year ago several men were spoken of to run against Mangum this time, and there seemed to be enough opposition to beat him. All these candidates got together, except Mr. Wright, and decided to elect the most popular man among them and let him make the race. Some few worked on Mayo's ticket and some just went to work for him. Mayo is a popular and hard working man and he seems to have a fine lot of men for deputies. In a way he is the People's candidate and if elected will be a model sheriff.

Skinny Man—Yep, maybe so—but what about his being a policeman?

Fat Man—Yes, he has been a policeman a long time and a good one, too, and there is the word of complaint. He has worked seven hundred men under him and not a word can you hear against him. Why they all praise him! He has been before the people as their servant and the people know that if he has been a faithful police officer and has been a politician of himself properly that this experience has fitted him to be sheriff. It isn't right to sneer at him because he's a policeman, unless you claim he hasn't been a good one. Why, they've even put that "policeman" idea into one of his talking points and the people are with him on it, too.

Skinny Man—Well, Mangum has got a mighty clever crowd of deputies and they have lots of friends.

Fat Man—Well, I guess you're right about that. So has Mayo and more of them. But one thing is certain Mayo's deputies don't campaign for themselves, they always work and pray for Mayo as the Head of their ticket and he will be the Head too.

Skinny Man—But what is Mayo going to do with all these deputies? Mangum only has about fifteen on his card and Mayo has twenty-four.

Fat Man—Well, Mayo shows the public all of his men. It takes at least twenty-five men, deputies, special officers and guards to run the office properly. I'll answer your question by saying that all these Mayo deputies are going to work. Mayo has to pay them, the people get the larger service and Mangum should worry!

At this juncture in the conversation the Skinny Man started to get off the car and the Fat Man called to him: "Say, if Mangum is running on any platform it must be a treadmill for he's not getting anywhere!"

The Slim Man slammed the door and a roar of laughter went up from the Fat Man and the good natured passengers on the car.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE DRY GOODS MARKET

NEW YORK, May 2.—Forward orders for cotton goods continue very light and prices on the medium priced lines in wholesale markets are easier. Heavy duck is firmer at the advanced quotations announced a week ago, but sales have as yet made no inroads to speak of on the abundant stocks. The leaking of certain of the specialties such as tire duck and certain grades of light weight ducks are busy.

Prints and print cloths are quiet with sales reported on only a few lots for delivery in the next thirty to sixty days. Ginghams are quiet, although mills are steady on the best known jobbing lines, but easy on the low priced embroidered lines. Wash goods are now moving in their normal volume at this period of the year, and the low weather has had an influence in delaying normal retail sales. Both yarn and cloth mills are beginning to curtail a her output because of a lack of forward orders.

Prices on cotton goods are as follows: Print cloths, 28-inch, 64x64s, 3¾c, nominal; 64x60s, 3¾c; 38½-inch, 64x64s, 3 5-16; standard southern brown sheeting 5 3-4c; 4-yard, 3-yard, 10-4, 42-inch, 48-inch, 9-ounce, 12¼; standard print 5¼; standard staple gingham 6¼; dress gingham 8¼c.

DRY GOODS MARKET.

NEW YORK, May 2.—The improvement was in the market for duck today, and while no large sales were reported during time, there is a large scale is expected next week. A moderate business was done in other lines, chiefly brown sheetings. Business generally was quiet and peanut fattened 1¼ to 2c under. Cattle scarce, market strong and higher.

Hog receipts light, market slightly lower.

Bonds for Grady Would Be Fine Step, Declares Mayor

Mr. Woodward Declares City Can Well Afford Proposed Issue and Makes Stirring Plea for Greater Hospital

In a statement given out for publication this morning, Mayor James G. Woodward drives home some of the points upon which he bases his advocacy of the $750,000 bond issue for Grady hospital.

Mayor Woodward asserts he was pledged when he entered office to favor no more bond issues until the city treasury was in sound shape. It has reached that stage, he says, and Atlanta can afford the bond issue.

One of the main reasons why he favors the issue, he says, is that the pay wards of the new institution will care for the interest on the bonds and redeem them as they mature.

Here is his statement in full To the People of Atlanta:

The bonds contemplating a larger and more efficient Grady hospital should, and I hope will be voted by the people on the 5th instant.

It is well understood that I took the position when I entered office that I would oppose the issuance of any more bonds until such time as the city should get her treasury in better condition financially. It is true that I found on entering office a great number of illegal contracts and debts hanging over the city to the amount of nearly $700,000. Through hard effort by eliminating a part of one contract and the discounting of others by paying cash, that $100,000 indebtedness has been reduced to $130,00, and the city has saved about $105,000 in cash money. So it will be seen that the city of Atlanta is now entering upon an era when her financial condition will be in much better shape. I therefore feel that the people of Atlanta can well afford to vote for the issuance of bonds for Grady hospital. This fact is made more impressive by reason of the building of the pay ward to the hospital. It is reasonable to estimate that 70 per cent or 75 per cent of that pay ward will, on an average, be occupied all the time. That being the case, the bond issue of $750,000 for Grady hospital will not become a burden upon the people of Atlanta or the treasury of the city, but the income from the pay department will pay both the interest on the bonds and redeem the bonds at maturity. This is one of the main reasons why I favor the bond issue

The present Grady hospital is rather in an antiquated condition, it was built twenty-odd years ago and has naturally depreciated in condition. It is not more than half large enough to take care of the demands made upon it. A great many patients have to be discharged from the hospital when really they should remain in bed. This is made necessary by having to provide for more urgent cases. Besides, there are a great number of people who receive treatment at the Grady hospital only by examinations and prescriptions. After receiving this treatment they have to return to their homes, when in reality they should be placed in the hospital until cured. This manner of treatment naturally creates criticism of the hospital and its management. It is evident to my mind that we should change this condition by making the hospital large enough to take care of all who desire to go there.

The idea that there should be no pay ward to the Grady hospital does not appear to me to be sound. It is well known that where a public institution of that character exists, kept up by public funds, that the very best of supplies and instruments for operation and the treatment of disease is secured, therefore I feel that any taxpayer in Atlanta who is burdened to keep up the charitable part of it should have an opportunity to go to the Grady hospital if he desires. It is not right that a person, because he is able to pay for such service, should be denied of it because he is able to pay. The fact that there is a pay department at the Grady hospital would naturally relieve it of the odium of being entirely charitable. It is true that a great number of deserving people are forced, through financial adversity, to take the advantage of such an institution as this and if it is provided with both pay and charity, it is not known to the world that the patient is receiving charitable treatment. The $750,000 worth of bonds, if voted upon by the people, will not only double the present capacity of the Grady hospital, but will provide places for contagious diseases for both white and colored, and provide a much needed dormitory for the nurses. It is little less than a disgrace that we should demand service from those noble ladies who go there to become professional nurses, and yet not provide comfortable quarters for them.

There should be no opposition, it appears to me, to this bond issue on the line that it is in the hands of any particular set of doctors, as it is well provided by ordinance of the city that any reputable, practicing physician can carry his patients to the pay ward of Grady hospital, and there are laws already in force that allow certain representation from different boards of physicians. It appears to me that to provide facilities for the sick and distressed should be a common ground upon which all can get together, whether they are so fortunate as to be placed in the charity ward or financially able to pay their way. Those who are unable to meet such an expense on account of misfortune should unite as one and vote for the Grady bonds.

I hope that the people of Atlanta will not allow the "distracting noises" of grand opera and the Shriners to make them forget or neglect to go to the polls on the 5th of this month and cast their ballots for the Grady bonds.

Respectfully,
J. G. WOODWARD.

BLAMES CARELESS BOYS FOR WOUND BY RIFLE

M. M. Elliott, who lives near Ashby and Simpson streets, received a slight flesh wound on the right side as the result of an accident in the Bellwood district early Saturday evening.

Elliott charges that two young boys of the neighborhood, Boyd Ray and Elmer Smith, carelessly shot a rifle in a vacant lot, and the bullet reached him.

As he did not charge any intention to injury, Ray and Smith were not locked up by Officers Dodd and Cochran, who made a hurry call to the scene, but both were served with subpoenaes.

There's No Corn That "GETS-IT" Won't Get

No More Fussing, Plasters, Salves and Corn Pains. Try the New Way.

"Just look at the way that sucker is going off!" That's what you'll say when you try wonderful "GETS-IT" on that corn you've tried so long to pry off of your toe. It's easy as rolling off a log. Just two, three, and it's done! The corn begins to shrivel, away she goes, sure), absolutely. A few drops will do it. "GETS-IT" makes toes red and raw. Corn pains go! It means the end of cutting and gouging of corns, the end of sticky plasters that don't work, anyhow, the end of salves that eat up your toes, no more "barbering" or fussing. Try "GETS-IT," the new, sure way, for corns and callouses.

"GETS-IT" is sold by all druggists, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

"GETS-IT" is sold in Atlanta by Jacobs' Pharmacy, Ellis Drug Co., Coursey & Mann, Green Trent Drug Co.—(Advt.)

Rouse the Liver

Jacobs' Liver Salt Brings the Bile

Take Jacobs' Liver Salt for Constipation, Indigestion, Headache and Biliousness.

Health is almost wholly a matter of regular bowels and active liver and kidneys. Let the liver run down, then come constipation, biliousness, indigestion, sick headache, dullness, rheumatism, simply because the system is being poisoned by gases generated from fermented food waste which has not been properly eliminated and forms uric acid. All food leaves waste in the alimentary tract, the richer the diet the more waste, and the liver should clean it out and give the bowels regular elimination. Health is a Habit—Watching your liver.

Jacobs' Liver Salt never forces; it just flushes the alimentary tract, loosens the waste deposit and gives the natural and cleansing elimination. It will regulate your liver and bowels and end those periodic bilious breakdowns and the dosing of calomel or blue mass with its nausea and awful sickness.

Jacobs' Liver Salt is agreeable and never gripes. It acts gently, naturally and promptly, the best liver regulator for everybody, and if you are not satisfied after taking it your druggist will return your money. Jacobs' Liver Salt before breakfast means a clear head and a splendid day for you. Try it. All druggists, 25c. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy, Atlanta.—(Advt.)

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

Some Alfalfa Notes

DURING the next few weeks hundreds of acres of alfalfa in Georgia will be cut for the first time, and unless many people are particular much of it will be killed. A little study and careful watching is essential in the successful growing and handling a stand of this plant after you once get it. There is such an immense amount of feed made by this plant that it is almost impossible for people to wait until the proper time to cut it. Especially should the first and second cutting be watched with care. Every plant that is cut too soon will die and the stand will be weakened. Therefore you should watch closely and when the second growth starts from the crowns and gets about two inches high the top is then ready to come off. Do not pay much attention to the bloom. It is never ready to cut until the second growth has started good and is sufficient size to sustain the plant after the top has been cut out. If top and limbs are cut from a tree the trunk will die, as there will be long to draw air and feed to the body and roots. The same thing applies to an alfalfa plant. If it should be cut before the new growth starts good it should be cut two or three inches high so that enough old leaves will be left on the plant to feed it until the new growth starts. In this way you can save every plant that is cut and get a good stand and maintain what you have, but unless this is done a large per cent of it will die the first year.

Soil conditions here are a little different from what they are in many sections. For instance, being careful anyone can soon learn the necessary things to do in the handling of alfalfa. The old two and three- year-old plants will give you some trouble most any time, as there is always a sufficient new growth coming to support the roots. The new young plants are the ones people should be particular about.

It is now pretty well settled that alfalfa will grow in almost any part of the state if conditions are made suited for it, and to this one plant we should look to for feed from now on. Therefore every one who has decided with it should be careful through the first year and maintain it as near as to encourage their neighbors and others to take up the growing of it.

Some people have fields have thin spots, but you need not feel any uneasiness about it. If you will give it time and be patient with it it is surprising how it will thicken up. Each plant is only usually small. There for one, and if you have one plant every 10 to 12 inches apart, and by top dressing with fertilizer and cultivating two or three times a year with a regular alfalfa cultivator it will surprise you to see how quickly it will thicken up and what an immense yield it will grow. What is supposed to be a thin stand the first year. Almost nothing else needs fertilizer and cultivation. The more the soil should by all means have two top dressings of fertilizer each season. A mixture of acid phosphate, bone meal, cotton seed meal, and a small per cent of nitrogen, either of these separately or mixed and applied at the rate of 200 pounds per acre will pay handsomely, especially if the alfalfa is thin and does not seem to be thriving.

Alfalfa will not fill more or less weeds with the first cutting. Some weeds are annuals and do not amount to much as they will appear after the first cutting. By fertilizing and harrowing the alfalfa will subdue the weeds and grass and soon take possession of the land. When not alfalfa is yellow and looks like it is not thriving it is a good plan to cut and let it start a new growth. After the new growth starts the plants have usually done what they will and the top should be cut off. It is no use to wait longer for it to make more growth. It is going to quit and let the new growth come. If in the life of alfalfa to cut it and cut it. The more the better. It grows very fast, and should have plenty water and hot sun will it make a rapid growth.

The first crop is usually very hard to cure, especially following a spring when rain as we have had this spring. The riper it can be cut the better it will be to cure. It should be cut after the dew is off in the morning. Let it take the sun one day. Then the next day after the dew is gone it should be raked in windrows and stacked in small high piles that afternoon. Two days later three of these cocks should be made into one. After it have stood for two or three days in good open weather it will be practically cured. Then by opening up to the sun for two or three days before hauling to the barn it will be ready to be stored in the barn. It should be stored on a wire or slatted floor so that the air can circulate through it. It will go through a second heat after being stored in the barn, and be ready for baling.

Yours very truly,

CINCINNATI, OHIO, Sept. 2nd, 1913

AUNT PATSY FEED CO., Memphis, Tenn.,

Gentlemen:

My Genius called on us a few weeks ago to interest us in Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed, we could not believe he was thinking about when he assured us that Aunt Patsy would make hens lay while moulting; still we were willing, and we are glad to be able to write you that results were more than we could hope for, but those to whom we sold the feed, are laying nicely and the hens look wonderfully in appearance.

We have at once 25 100-lb. bags of Aunt Patsy's Poultry

Yours truly,

J. S. HODGSON.

Send for Aunt Patsy, the egg producer, if he has not got Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed Co., Memphis, Tenn and they can get it

J. P. GENTRY.

THE MAN WHO PUT THE EGG IN THE FEED.

MISCELLANEOUS

AUNT PATSY POULTRY FEED, THE EGG PRODUCER

Look from what point of view Aunt Patsy is discussed. It proven to be the feed of all feeds.

It is the feed because it contains every ingredient of which egg is composed. You are feeding the small egg (the seed) in the egg when you feed Aunt Patsy, hence the eggs grow larger and larger, because it keeps the hen in a thrifty, healthy condition and is the best feed, because a baby chick will thrive on it as much as any other feed. It is the best feed, because you feed constantly Aunt Patsy will lay earlier than when fed on it is the best feed, because it is a properly balanced ration. It is the best feed, because it gives more eggs than other feeds. It is the best feed, because it costs less per day to feed the hen, against over 1 cent per day to feed the hen on other feeds.

It is the best feed, because it gives the hen everything she needs in the way of nourishment, as well as giving her all necessary help to make her lay to full growth and make her lay. J. P. GENTRY,

The Man Who Put the Egg in the Feed.

FOR SALE—FARMS

IN Henry County, 25 miles from Atlanta, about two miles north of McDonough, we have 177 acres of dandy good farm land that has two good streams of water running through it and the improvements on this place are actually worth at least one-half of the price asked. The Atlanta-Jonesboro automobile highway runs through one corner of this place and the Southern railroad is within about one mile. This place is rented for 1914 for seven bales of cotton, will bring ten bales just as easy. A good home and two good tenant houses are on same. Price $5,500, including rent for 1914, with $1,000 cash and two equal notes to suit for balance. This would make an excellent stock farm. A good dairy farm is another suggestion. You can get buy lands in this location for less than $45 to $60 per acre. This figures less than $32 per acre

SALESMEN—J. W. Rountree, S. C. Glass and R. D. Harper.

$2,250—BIG BARGAIN in a seven-room house on Grant street, lot 50x190, to alley; all conveniences, newly elevated, $500 cash, to save reasonable. This is one of the best buys in this section of the city.

$2,250—$2,000 CASH. Spring street bargain, eight-room, 2-story house. At the present time Spring street offers better improvements than any north side street.

$5,500—SEVEN-ROOM house on one of Atlanta's growing thoroughfares, on the west side of the city. This has a lot 100x300, with servant's house and garage, etc. Plenty of fruit and garden space. $1,000 cash. This is a good buy.

$3,100—SIX-ROOM cottage and a dandy, too, located on the south side, near Angier and Forrest avenues. All modern conveniences. A snap. Unusual opportunity to pick up "something worth while." Terms.

$3,500—CLOSE-IN, on south side, within walking distance, we have a good nine-room, two story house that is another good buy. The former price of this property was $4,500, but for business reasons, owner wants to sell quick and has put the "proper inducement" to do so.

$5,750—NEW and never occupied 7-room bungalow, with sleeping porch, large lot, fast developing section of the north side, furnace heat, hardwood floors, absolutely every convenience to be found in a home. Reasonable terms.

$6,000—BEAUTIFUL seven-room bungalow Druid Hills section, lot 80x186, all street improvements near car line. This will have to be seen to be appreciated. Most reasonable terms to an acceptable party. We have hundreds of other good home bargains to offer, and our salesmen will take pleasure in giving you their very best efforts and attention to helping you secure just what you are looking for in the way of an investment, or a home proposition, and on the most favorable basis to be had.

EIGHT BARGAINS

NO. 1 ON Moreland ave., at Inman Park, we have A beautiful elevated east front lot, 65x200. We can sell you this for $1,000 terms. You have heard that there was a lot that was a little back. This is it.

NO. 2—N.E. has a comfy, good, plain bungalow with every modern convenience, on the North Side, which has the location excelled by none, that we can sell you for $7,000 on good terms. This is on a nice, level shaded lot, 50x150 to alley, and is what you have been looking for. That is, an 8 room bungalow on elevated street, a half block of car line.

NO. 3—RIGHT close to the intersection of Ponce de Leon and Highland avenue, on a stripped brick paved street, east front, lot beautifully shaded and actually level, 85x200. Price $7,750. Terms. The location alone will sell the lot.

NO. 4—IN the fourth ward, close to Peachtree, Piedmont and Currier streets we have six building lots for reduced renting houses that lie together and have three street frontages. Now, this is not in a hole. This is the best residential section in the fourth ward. Make no guess this assertion. A pickup at $2,500, and can give you terms on this one.

NO. 5—In Decatur, on a good street, with in half a block of car line, we have a good 6 room cottage on large level lot, 105x170, and at the corner. Price $2,500. We can sell for $2,000 on terms of $500 cash, balance monthly or will trade equity of $1,750 for Atlanta property. This place is rented at $300 yearly.

NO. 6—ON N. Moreland, only about two blocks from Ponce de Leon, we have a good 8 room cottage on nice, elevated shaded lot, 60x200. THIS IS IN THE COUNTRY, but A GOOD STREET. A bargain for $5,500. Terms. Put a nice bungalow on the rear of the lot that faces a good street and make a nice piece of money out of it.

WOODLAND HILLS

THE FUTURE home section of the city.

Start at the bottom, get your lots first-handed at $12.50 per foot, one-fifth cash, balance 1, 2, 3 and 4 years. Long before you pay for them you will have water, sewer, cement walks, cherted streets 80x100 feet wide, car line by your door, and your lot will then bring $60 per foot, or $6,000. You get it now for $1,250, as every lot is 100 feet wide.

WOODLAND HILLS

WE SAY that every lot you buy in Woodland Hills will double in one year. We know it. If you invest, say, $250 or $300 the first cash payment and can make $1,250 clear in one year, it should interest you.

WOODLAND HILLS

IT IS ONLY 15 minutes by auto from the Piedmont Hotel to Woodland Hills. Go out Peachtree to Fifteenth, into Piedmont avenue, and out Piedmont avenue to Cheshire road. You will be on a fine cherted road all the way out, and be there in 15 minutes.

WOODLAND HILLS

EVERY LOT in Woodland Hills is 100 to 200 feet front and will not be cut for 20 years. They run back 300, 350 and 425 feet. Beautifully shaded. At $12.50 per foot you get water, sewer and sidewalks. Nothing else like it around Atlanta and never can be at the price.

25 ACRES

WE OFFER 25 acres near Ansley Park.

Have a frontage of 600 feet on an 80-foot cherted road, runs back 2,400 feet. Here is a place that would suit about three rich men, each having a lot 200x2,400 feet. This is not farm land; it's city property, and in the right section. Easy terms.

21 1-2 ACRES

ON THE Williams Mill road. Seaboard station on the place now. Fronts the road 1,218 feet; all elevated and beautiful. This can be classed city property. Subdivide this into twelve lots 100x1,000 feet, $13.50 per foot. Get your friends together; get it at wholesale and divide it up the way you want it.

VIRGINIA AVENUE

A SNOW BALL HAS AS MUCH SHOW---

IN A FIREY FURNACE as a poor man has who tries to buy a home on the north side. I mean every word I say. A man who hasn't over $100 or $200 in CASH, whose salary is from $100 to $150 per month, is acting like—well, he is using BAD JUDGMENT, to say the least of it. If he is trying to buy a $3,000, $4,000 or $5,000 home. But you need not take my advice unless you want to: it makes no difference with me. Out of 100 homes I have sold at Lakewood Heights for the last few years there were only TWO who fell down with their payments. Sold one this week. I have two more bungalows under way on large lots, just off the car line, and they are not BARNS, but BUNGALOWS; go out and take a look at them; get off car at Adair avenue, it will cost you nothing. It might be just what you have been looking for. I don't have to beg anybody to buy my bungalows; there is no use; they are too fast for that. If you are in earnest and are determined to buy a home that you CAN PAY for, I will be glad to hear from you. Prices $2,150 and $2,300 (the same kind you see on the north side). Sixteen dollars per month up. Enough said. F. B. Hopkins, 316 Empire bldg. Ivy 111.

On the Boundary Line

I am almost o'er the journey;
Time's broken hourglass lies
Just beside me in the pathway,
And its loosened sands deny.

Weary years lie far behind me
At my feet the moments die;
Time upon his scythe is leaning,
While eternity rolls by

How sad, yet, oh how sacred,
Is the meeting place where time
Slows his hour, to lead in silence,
To eternity sublime.

Here my feet are on the verdure
Which an endless springtime wears;
And my shadow faintly lingers
In the snow bid grave of years.

There are voices floating round me,
In whisperings soft and low;
They are calling just like voices
That I wept for years ago

Their touches holy touches,
As if angels kissed my soul,
And some unseen hands caress me,
As if loved ones around me stole.

I am pausing at the threshold,
Of a gate that's half ajar;
And a few more finger touches,
And the wicket will unbar.

I am listening to the music,
As the golden harp strings thrill,
Sweet it steals in holy touches
O'er my heart it is wrung and still.

I am looking at the glory,
That shines inside the gate;
And it floods my soul in beauty,
As my lingering footsteps wait.

I shall wait but little longer,
For the gate is opening wide,
And the master voice is calling,
Soon I'll rest me by His side.

Face to face, I'll see my Savior,
With the blood bought saints I'll roam;
Like the loved ones gone before me,
Cross the boundary line for home.

WEST VIRGINIA COAL MINERS STILL ON STRIKE

(By Associated Press.)

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 2.—Ten thousand coal miners in the Kanawha field remained idle today and will not return to work until the result of a conference between a committee from the district and John P. White, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, at Indianapolis, tomorrow, is known.

The miners today appointed a committee to go to Indianapolis and confer with White. Efforts of the district officers to have the men return to work pending a settlement have been unsuccessful.

GEORGIA REPRESENTATIVE GAINS POINT ON NAVY

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Provision in the naval appropriation bill for additional naval chaplains was stricken out in the house today on a point of order by Representative Tribble, of Georgia, who insisted there was no need for chaplains at shore stations, where the men could attend churches.

The annual fight between "big navy" and "little navy" men in the house will begin Monday. The construction section, with the administration two-battleship program, was reached tonight just before adjournment.

CONGRATULATE FOREIGN MINISTER FOR MEDIATING

(By Associated Press.)

BUENOS AYRES, May 2.—Dr. Luis M. Drago, former minister of foreign affairs, has written Jose Luis Murature, minister of foreign affairs, congratulating him for mediating in the trouble between the United States and Mexico. He says this act inaugurates the carrying out by agreement of her sacred duty to intervene in questions of universal liberty and lays the foundation of a motley and friendliness between nations which will be fruitful for the nations of South America.

TOWN MARSHAL KILLS VIRGINIA MERCHANT

(By Associated Press.)

MARION, Va., May 2.—W. L. Thornton, aged 50, a prominent merchant of this place, was shot and killed about 5 o'clock this afternoon by Town Sergeant W. E. Greer. Two shots were fired, both of which took effect.

The shooting, it tis said, grew out of a quarrel between the two.

Sergeant Greer was immediately arrested and is being held by the sheriff of Marion pending the result of a coroner's jury.

Rabun Candidates

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CLAYTON, Ga., May 2.—Rabun county primary will be held on May 15 and the following are the candidates: For sheriff, the present incumbent, J. H. Dockins, opposed by L. T. Mitchell; for tax collector, H. J. Ramey, the present incumbent, opposed by J. H. Lapride; for tax receiver, the present incumbent, with no opposition; for clerk of superior court, Charles R. Rogers, the present incumbent, opposed by James F. Ramey; for county surveyor, John A. Reynolds, the present incumbent, no opposition; for coroner, J. L. Welborn, the present incumbent, opposed by John Stansel.

MILITIA AND MINERS BLAMED FOR DEATHS

Coroner's Jury Returns Verdict on Fire Which Burned Women and Children

TRINIDAD, Col., May 2.—The fire that destroyed the Ludlow tent colony the night of April 20, causing the death of 13 women and children, was started by militiamen or mine guards or both, according to the verdict rendered by the coroner's jury here late today.

D. J. Riley testified today that a man in a militia uniform put a torch to a tent in the Ludlow colony at 7:05 o'clock the evening of April 20. Riley, a Colorado and Southern fireman, said he was on the engine of a freight train which pulled up at the Ludlow station in the hottest of the battle. He said two tents already were in flames.

"I saw a man in a military uniform touch a flame to a third tent," he said. He said he saw women and children screaming on the railroad right-of-way, apparently trying to escape from the colony.

When the train drew up at the station, Riley said, several militiamen put guns to the engineer's head and ordered him to "pull out, and do it quick."

HEARD WOMEN SCREAM.

J. S. Harrison, conductor of the camp train, testified that as the train pulled out of the station and past the tent colony, he heard women and children screaming and apparently trying to escape. He said that during this time the militia was firing into the colony.

No responsibility for the killing of Louis Tikas was fixed by the jury which contented itself by finding that he and seven other men were shot in battle. Strikers had charged Tikas received a blow in the cause of women and children was that they came to their death by asphyxiation or fire, or both, caused by the burning of the tents of the Ludlow tent colony, and that fire on tents was started by William Lester, Manor Hamrock, and Lieutenant Linderfelt, or mine guards, or both on the 20th day of April, 1914.

DEATH FROM BULLETS

A separate verdict was rendered on the death of Alfred Martin, a militiaman; Preme Larsis, a non-combatant; Louis Tisas, Frank Rebino, James Fyler, John Bartolo and Charles Scota, strikers, and Frank Snyder, a twelve-year-old-boy. The jury found they came to their death by bullet wounds in the battle between militiamen under Manor Hamrock and Lieutenant Linderfield, and mine guards on one side, and strikers on the other, said battle held in or about Ludlow on the 20th day of April, 1914."

United States regulars tonight patrolled the southern Colorado fields. Troops sent out from the central camp at Trinidad were in control of the situation at Walsenburg and Ludlow and small detachments had been distributed at various mining camps in Las Animas and Huerfano counties. No disorders have been reported.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY IS PLACED UNDER FIRE

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Another congressional investigation was proposed today when Chairman Ferris, of the house public lands committee, introduced a resolution to create a committee to investigate whether the Standard Oil company, organized and controlling all oil pipe lines in Oklahoma, has violated the anti-trust laws.

The resolution says 13,000 government allottees have lands containing valuable oil deposits that the Standard company refuses to transport the oil products from the Indian lands and has reduced the price of oil from $1.05 to 50 cents a barrel.

Houston Primary Held

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

PERRY, Ga., May 2.—The Democratic primary held here yesterday for the election of county officers resulted as follows: For sheriff, G. W. Winn, for city court, Judge A. C. BAPTISTS ARRANGE CITY-WIDE MEETINGS

Colored Churches to Participate in Big Evangelistic Campaign Last of May

The big evangelistic campaign in all the Baptist churches of the city, both white and colored, will begin May 17, at 8 a. m. In addition to the churches mentioned last week the Grant Park and Temple churches will be in the campaign. The central committee with their special committees are working hard to have everything in readiness for the campaign.

THE CAMPAIGN AMONG THE COLORED BAPTISTS

There are thirty colored Baptist churches in the city. The Colored Baptist Ministers' conference have appointed the following central committee to cooperate with the white ministers, and Dr. Bruner is arranging the details and conducting the campaign in their behalf: P. James Bryant, chairman; D. D. Williams, C. H. Young, E. P. Bryant, Jr., Jesse Brown, W. P. Paschal, W. Leland and R. H. Smith.

The colored churches have been divided into three groups for the campaign as follows:

South Side Group—Ebenezer, Mount Olive, Mount Pleasant, Mount Zion, Butler Street, St. Luke, West Beulah, West Mitchell, East Mitchell, East Beulah and Bridgeway.

West Side Group—Macedonia, West Hunter (white), Mount Pisgah, Colored Mount Olive, Shiloh, Allen Temple, Providence, Philadelphia, Southern Memorial, Pittsburg Group—Wood Street, Union Street, Bethlehem, Mount Paran, Martin Street, South Atlanta, Friendship and all other churches not mentioned in the above list.

The services at the campaign among the colored people will be conducted as follows:

A great central meeting will be held each day at the Wheat street church in the afternoon. The service from 3 to 3:45 will be a special workers' conference under the direction of Raleigh Wright. An inspirational service will be held each day from 3:45 to 4 during which reports from the several sections of the city each night will be made and a short sermon by one of the white evangelists will be preached.

The services at the three groups will be held each evening, as follows:

South Side Group—Rev. J. W. Baily, evangelist. Meeting first week at Central Street church, second week at Mount Olive church; third week at Mount Zion church, and so on as long as the meetings shall last. It will move from church to church.

West Side Group—Rev. E. M. Griggs, evangelist. Meetings first week at West Hunter church, second week at Macedonia church; third week at Friendship church, and so on as above indicated.

Summer Hill and Pittsburg Group—Rev. Richard Carroll, evangelist. Meeting first week at Reed Street church; second week at Zion Hill church; third week at Providence church, and so on as above indicated.

A great get-together meeting for the colored people will be held on May 17 at 3 p. m. at the Wheat Street church. At this meeting the three colored evangelists will speak, and Dr. Bruner will be present and speak. This will be a great time.

MINISTER TO PREACH ON THE MEXICAN SITUATION

Rev. A. W. Bealer, in Eastman Sermon, Outlines History of Country and Causes of Present Outbreak

EASTMAN, Ga.—"The Mexican War" was the text of a sermon preached here Sunday morning at the Baptist church by Rev. Alex W. Bealer. His text was taken from the thirty-second chapter of Exodus, "Shall your brethren go to war and shall you sit here."

The first part of the sermon explained the causes leading up to our present trouble with Mexico and the latter portion of the discourse was an earnest appeal for those who were in the army of the Lord to be as willing to fight as were the soldiers and sailors of the United States army and navy.

In referring to the Mexican trouble Mr. Bealer said: We must learn something about the man against whom the war is being waged. This is a strange statement but President Wilson has made it plain that we are not making war on Mexico but on one man by whom the nation is being ruined. Let me tell you of this man and his misdeeds. His name is spelled Hu-e-r-t-a, but is is pronounced Werta. He is today the most notorious character on whom the eyes of the world are fixed, to understand him and the conflict of which he is the cause it will be necessary to go back in the history of Mexico.

The country is called a republic but it is only one in name. It is similar in many respects to our country. It has twenty-seven states, two territories and one federal district. The constitution which was patterned after the one under which we live was adopted in 1857. It provides for the electing of a president by the people every six years. It also provides for a congress, senate and a supreme court. In the constitution there are twenty-nine articles dealing with the rights of the individual but these are on paper and little attention is paid to them. The members of congress are elected by the people to serve two years. There ar two senators for each state. The supreme court has fifteen judges.

In the seventies Porfiero Diaz a man of considerable ability and political following was elected president of the republic.

When his time was out he was reelected. This was the usual procedure for more than a quarter of a century until the world came to see that Mexico was not a real repunnc and that Diaz was really a despot who by the pulling of political wires kept himself in office.

Mexico is a very fertile country and it has many rich mines and much property yielding oil. These lands are owned for the most part by foreigners. Shrewd men from America, England, Germany and Japan have been purchasing property for years. This has created quite a rivalry between the different land owners and the people of Mexico. The poorer classes of natives were taught by the politicians that they had been deprived of their lands unjustly. Much bad blood has been created between the common people and those owning lands.

A few years ago a new star rose on the political horizon, Madero, a man of educational ability, who had received his education in the best schools of France and America. He saw that he could make for himself a place in the estimation of the people and when he could win high honors. He announced himself a candidate for the presidency against Diaz who had been in office for thirty-four years and in his announcement pledged the people that if he was elected he would restore the land to the natives of Mexico.

This platform made him very popular with the people, the masses of whom were densely ignorant as to the science of government. When in the course of a few months the land was still owned by foreigners they began to criticise him, charging that he was a political trickster and had deceived the people for the purpose of elevating himself to the presidency.

Just at this time Huerta came upon the scene of action. With Felix Diaz, a nephew of the old president he stirred up an insurrection.

One of the first moves made by the leaders of this movement was to arrest Madero on a trumped up charge and throw him into prison.

Not long after this, Huerta declaring that he feared for Madero's life had him moved from one prison to another in charge of detachment o fsoldiers. The latter was not a company of men overpowered the soldiers and killed Madero. It was given out by Huerta that it had been done by a combine of bandits. This story has never been accepted by the outside world. It has always been believed that it was a political plot and that Madero was murdered by order of Huerta to get him out of the way.

The president being dead Felix Diaz succeeded in having Huerta proclaimed provisional and temporary president until an election could be held.

One of the first steps taken by the new president was an order to have himself recognized as such by the other great world powers. His government was recognized by England, Germany and Japan, but President Wilson refused to recognize him for two good reasons. The first was that he had overthrown a republic and had called no election by which it might be removed. The second was that this government could not recognize a murderer as the head of a neighboring republic. Naturally this did not make Huerta love Wilson and the country over which he presided as president.

Wilson stated that if an election was called this country would recognize any duly elected president. Of course all these things created intense political excitement from one end of Mexico to the other. One of the senators in the regular meeting of that body indulged in some very pointed criticisms of Huerta for his course of conduct. A few days later he disappeared from his hotel. All that was heard of him was the story of a boy who said that some men had called to see him and he had went off with them. It was generally believed that he was murdered by the hirelings of Huerta. This belief was strengthened into conviction by the subsequent events. The lower house of congress appointed a committee to investigate the disappearance of the senator. Huerta when he learned of this action dissolved or disbanded the congress and sent the members home, thus breaking up the session.

While the country was in a fever of excitement over this act of the president he called the election demanded by Wilson and set it for only a week ahead. When it was over, his friends who controlled the ballot boxes, declared that he had been elected.

A second demand for recognition was made upon the United States. President Wilson again refused to recognize him, claiming that the election was illegal, a mockery and had fraud written on its face. Huerta, as a tyrant, lost no opportunity in showing his hatred and contempt for Wilson and his government.

His unpopularity was shown by the insurrection stirred up against him. This was so successfully managed that one-half of the country is in the hands of the revolutionists. Huerta has been fighting for his life, but he has been defeated in almost every important engagement. It is natural to suppose that he attributed his failure to the refusal of the United States to recognize him as the legal president of Mexico.

Many petty annoyances have been put upon the people and the officials of this country by the men who are under the tyrant. Americans have been murdered, it is believed, on the orders or with the consent of Huerta, although this could not be proved. Official telegrams to our representatives have been held back until threats were made to insure their delivery. These things were ignored until two more flagrant insults were thrown into the face of America.

A mail man from one of the warships was arrested and kept in prison for some time by the soldiers of Huerta. Nothing was done. Emboldened, still further affronts were offered this government. A boat from one of our ships with the stars and stripes at the bow and at the stern was landed for supplies. The official in charge and all the men were arrested and marched off to prison. They were subsequently released and the man making the arrest was punished. The commander offered an apology to the officer in command of the ship.

President Wilson felt that Huerta had not gone far enough. He demanded that as an apology to the flag of the United States should be saluted by the government of Mexico. Huerta, procrastinated by making many efforts to get away from the demand of the president. Wilson was firm.

Huerta offered to salute the flag if he would salute in turn. This was refused and Huerta was informed that action would be taken against him if he did not comply with the quest of this government by a certain time. Huerta refused and we proceeded to take possession of Vera Cruz. Four Americans were killed and some fifty or more wounded. Two hundred Mexicans were slain the fight. The folly of Huerta may be seen when we compare the two countries. Mexico has 15,000,000 people, the United States 101,000,000. Mexico can muster an army of 200,000 men, while the United States can put 1,000,000 men on the field. Our soldiers are intelligent volunteers who are well trained. Mexican soldiers are conscripted from the lowest classes and they know little about civilized warfare. This is shown in the way the men captured at Vera Cruz begged for their lives.

Mexico has a navy of less than a dozen warships, several of them being unfit for active service. The United States had more than a hundred fighting ships, of which some are the largest in the world.

If Huerta was not a blinded tyrant he would not think, for a moment, after his conduct, of offering armed resistance to this government.

SUPPLY OF MINISTERS INADEQUATE FOR NEEDS

Reports Tabulated Show That Decreasing Number of Men Enter Ministry Each Year

NEW YORK, May 2.—The supply of ministers for Protestant church pulpits is found to be more inadequate than for years. The number of new men needed annually is from 2,600 to 3,000. Theses are for vacancies caused by deaths, for growth at home, and for foreign mission field. The number of men to be graduated from all leading theological seminaries this spring is 2,350. This shortage has gone on now for a decade at least, and is producing conditions that have become acute and discouraging to officials in charge of congregations, especially of large ones. Some men get into Christian pulpits who do not pass through seminaries, but their numbers are offset by seminary graduates who go into secretarial rather than pulpit work.

Nobody seems able to determine the causes for this continued shortage, save the fact that in few bodies is there any systematic effort made to present the claims of the ministry to young men. Conditions are getting more desperate because churches are coming to have more members, larger financial budgets, and are trying to raise money in larger amounts for mission and similar outside causes. Demand for men of larger caliber is constant. Entrance upon social service work by the churches of smaller numbers and gifts. Pension plans, put forward by most bodies, do not as yet encourage new men, or better grade men.

Religious bodies in which conditions are reported as more serious than others this spring are the Presbyterian, the Baptist, the Congregational and the Episcopal. Much more hopeful conditions obtain among Disciples, Methodists and Lutherans, especially among the conservative Lutherans, due to the fact that greater attention is given to searching out young men and laying before them the call of their church for ministers. Large numbers of small seminaries, with easier conditions financially, also assist the three last named bodies. In some of the other four bodies twice as many men are demanded to fill pulpits vacant now or to become vacant before October as are being graduated from seminaries this month.

So far as can be learned, this long continued shortage of ministers is not due to advance of Higher Criticism. Orthodox and liberals fare the same. It is not due to small salaries, both whose average salaries are lowest of all have largest proportionate numbers entering their ministry. It is not due to competition of business. Some of the ablest men from the colleges are refusing business careers to enter upon altruistic work not involving ordination. Some religious bodies are making demands for men for foreign fields in the numbers actually going are not sufficient to chance supplies materially. Famous seminaries like Yale, Princeton, Union, the General, Methodist, Chicago, Virginia, Southern [illegible] both average classes [illegible] and some are below [illegible] here.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Marietta Street Railroad Frontage Brings $75,909 at Auction, Asa G. Candler Being One of the Buyers—Good Crowd Attends and Every Foot Offered Was Sold, Sale of Cooper Street Parcel

The auction of the Joseph F. Gatins property on Marietta street which was held by Forrest and George Adair yesterday afternoon, brought a total of $75,909, the prices ranging from $102 to $121 a front foot.

A feature of the sale was the attendance of Asa G. Candler, who bought 310.5 feet showing that he has confidence in the future of Atlanta real estate.

The property sold cheap, but every foot of it was sold. Forrest Adair, who was auctioneer, announced in the beginning that Mr. Gatins was not in the city, and that the property would be sold. There would be no by bidding, he added, but if the sale didn't seem to go well it would be stopped.

A large crowd attended, and the bidding was active. It began on lot 9, which, with lot 8, containing a frontage of 150 feet, went to J. B. Thompson for $18,150, or $121 a front foot.

Mr. Candler bought lots 6 and 7 at $111 a front foot, or $16,650. Lots 4 and 5 went to I. N. Ragsdale at $102 a front foot or $8,475. Mr. Candler bought by J. B. Thompson at $113 a front foot, or $8475. Mr. Candler bought lots 1 and 2, containing 16x5 feet of frontage, at $108 a front foot, or $17,334.

The depth of the property ranged from 388 feet to a point. Each lot, except lot 1, which had 85.5 feet, had 75 feet of frontage and 80 feet of width in the rear on the railroad.

The property is at the Howell mill road and Exposition street, and almost extends to the Marietta street bridge. It was formerly owned by the Palmer brick company.

COOPER STREET SALE.

The Martin-Osburn realty company sold for a client to R. C. Brannan Nos. 249-51 Cooper street, two houses on a lot 80x100, for $4,000.

FORD PLANT A MODEL OF INDUSTRIAL STYLE

Letting of Contract a Big Event in Real Estate Field

The news that the Ford Motor company let a contract for the erection of its assembly plant on Ponce de Leon avenue and the Southern railway, will be of deep interest.

As the building will call for an expenditure of at least $250,000, and the permit will be granted shortly, it means that the lead already taken by building permits in 1914 will be carried even further, or will greatly minimize the large aggregate value established in May, 1913.

The Ford motor car will build its plant as thoroughly and carefully as it would an automobile. Ed. R. Hayes, the building inspector, says that no building in this part of the country will be better constructed. It will be of reinforced concrete, and absolutely fireproof, every stairway and shaft being enclosed.

The company will attain two objects in locating where it does. Being on a main residence street, it can have a display room, where the finished cars can be shown behind show windows. Also it will have railroad frontage, where it can receive the shipments of automobile parts that will be put together in the plant.

Already there has been considerable activity around the plant's location, which will become a new center of population on account of the large force which will be brought here to work in the plant. The company hopes to have the building completed by October 1.

PROPERTY OWNERS WANT CAR LINE EXTENDED

Owners North of Virginia Avenue Are Asked to Meet Thursday

W. E. Worly, president of the Woodland Hills company, who has subdivided a tract of 400 acres of land into about 600 lots and who is having water and sewer mains laid, grading streets and laying tile sidewalks, has called a meeting of all property owners north of Virginia avenue, on Highland, to meet with him at the company's office, 418 Candler building, on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The purpose of the meeting is to make a showing to the Georgia Railway and Power company to extend their line from Virginia avenue into and through Woodland Hills. Every property owner on this route is earnestly requested to be present.

1914 CENSUS INDICATES 300,000 PEOPLE BY 1920

With More Territory and Present Increase, Population Will Almost Double

The warning in last Sunday's Journal that Atlanta would soon have to prepare for further annexation was followed in a few days by the government's unofficial estimate that this city now contained a population of 179,000.

This compares with 154,000 in 1910, an increase of 25,000 in four years in the corporate limits, or at the rate of 6,250 a year.

At this rate, Atlanta will have added 37,500 to its population by 1920, the time of the next census, now only six years off, giving the city of Atlanta, within its present corporate limits, a population of 216,500.

Curiously enough, the latter figure is given in the last city directory as the present population of both Atlanta and the districts oustide reached by the car lines.

Annexation would include practically all the territory given in the directory's estimate, which in the next six years would increase in population as rapidly, if not more so, than the population inside. President Hill, of the directory company, says that the main growth of population is new in the suburbs.

On the basis of the increase inside and outside the city, Atlanta in 1920 will have a population of 300,000 or more, or almost as much as the present population of New Orleans or Cincinnati.

Confining comparisons, however, to the increase of 25,000 in the city proper, the gain in four years has been only 16,000 less than the entire population of Macon or Augusta; it has been as great as the entire population of Columbus; and its yearly increase has been as much as the total population of several important Georgia towns.

These comparisons are not meant to show Atlanta's superiority over other Georgia cities, but to show how large her increase has been. Reports of this kind, now and then, explain why real estate values keep climbing in normal times, and hold their own in times of depression.

Several Lot Sales Are Made and New Building Is Going On

There has been a considerable lot of activity in the section around Brookhaven club, where several new subdivisions have been opened.

The Charles P. Glover Realty Co., announced yesterday that it had sold about $20,000 worth of lots at Brookhaven, and twelve or fifteen lots in Fernwood.

Several attractive homes have been built around the club grounds or are in course of construction there.

REAL ESTATE FIRM CHANGES LOCATION

The Parantha-Cantrell Realty company, successors to Smith, Turner & Parantha, with office at 901 Empire building, have moved to No. 320 Healey building, facing the main entrance to the interior office. This firm has built up a business that would be a source of gratification to a much older concern.

In addition to change in location, they have broadened the scope of their business to include the handling of farms and acreage in all sections of the south, as well as increasing their facilities for the rapid and satisfactory handling of city and suburban property.

Mr. M. W. Turner and Mr. Harry S. St. Clair, of the old sales force, will be associated with them at their new quarters and will be pleased to meet their old friends, also welcome new acquaintances.

BUILDING FINISHED ON NASSAU STREET

NEWS OF ATLANTA SCHOOLS

EDITED BY JOHN D. STEWART

ANNUAL FIELD DAY OF GRAMMAR SCHOOLS HELD

Ponce de Leon Park Crowded by Thousands of Happy Children

The annual Field Day exercises of the Atlanta Grammar schools, that are eagerly awaited by all the pupils throughout the whole year, were held at Ponce de Leon on Saturday afternoon. Every school in the city had a delegation to represent it either in the volley ball, dodge ball, captain ball, running jumping or drilling or in some of the many events of this red letter day.

Since the park could not be gotten for the entire day, some of the contests were postponed until Monday afternoon. There were games and contests for every grade and with the forty odd grammar schools, there were hundreds of participants as well as thousands of spectators.

Each school selected from its best athletics, two boys, one from class A, those over fifteen years old, and one from class B, those under that age. These two boys represented the school in the running, jumping, chinning and other events. The girls also had their own races, etc.

The drills and games were among teams picked from the different grades in the schools. One eight grade challenged another for a captain ball game, the seventh grades played volley ball or dodge ball and so it went.

The boxes were decorated with the banners of the different schools and the rooters were there by the car loads.

As the contests were not finished the number of points by the different schools could not be calculated, but on Monday afternoon the remaining events will be held and the schools that came first and the lucky winners of pins will be announced.

Peeples Entertainment Trio Planning Big Commencement

It delights the hearts of us girls to see the boys of our respective schools drumming and marching in the great Memorial day parade. We only wish we could march, too. Harry Owenby was captain of our platoons. The lieutenants were Abel Winburn, William Hartman and Ralph Pate.

Nothing of much importance has been enacted this past week, owing to our numerous holidays. This, however, we do not regret in the least.

We find our weekly "Current Events" very beneficial and helpful in keeping up the progress made by the Americans in the Mexican situation. Children at our school seem unusually interested in this affair, and it is the general topic of conversation on the yard at recess.

Margaret Smith and Virginia Kelley were rewarded in my class spelling match of the seventh grade. Virginia's side triumphed, she being the last to remain standing.

The entertainment committee of the eighth grade are planning a good time for them at the grammar school commencement exercises. Besides the eighth grade part of the show, interesting numbers are being arranged by members of the lower grades. Recitations, dialogues, cantatas and dances make up the program.

Ruth Sill, Howard McDade, Esther Nisbett and Charles Connally, of second grade A have been ahead for the past week in reading.

Pryor's Civic League Busy Planting Flowers

Our Walter Rich Junior Civic league met last Friday. The fifth grade rendered a very entertaining program, which was greatly enjoyed by everybody. A report from the treasurer showed that we had a little over $12 with which to buy flowers and seeds for the school. Miss Rodie, the principal, and Miss Haygood, the assistant principal, bought the flowers and last Thursday and Friday the eighth grade planted them.

We are certainly proud of our boys marching so well in the Memorial day parade. They had a splendid drum corps and they received many complimentary remarks on their fine marching.

The fourth and fifth grades played a game of baseball last week. The fourth grade teacher, Miss Griffin, and several others were about to get their hose and the fourth grade won, so we advise the fifth grade to take some rooters next time if they want to win.

The seventh grade has been having supplementary reading in new readers this week, which they enjoy very much. The window boxes are looking pretty with the colors in them.

The spelling banner was won by the eighth grade this week. We hope to buy us an attendance banner as soon as we have money enough.

HAZEL HUDDLESTON.

Walker St. Thanks Board for Holidays; Marched in Parade

The boys presented quite a nice looking spectacle as they paraded the streets last week in the Memorial day parade. The grammar school boys were one of the best features of the parade.

Mr. Slaton paid us a short visit Wednesday. He promised to be back soon and spend the day with us.

Miss Harralson visited the seventh and eighth grades last week. She helped the pupils of the eighth grade with their music for the concert. She gave the seventh grade a test.

Miss Graves came to the school Wednesday to assist the fourth grade children in the relay race.

We were made happy by learning that the board ruled to have Monday, April 27, a holiday, to be added to Tuesday and Thursday at 1 o'clock, so that the teachers and pupils might attend grand opera, and to have May 13, Shriners' day, a holiday.

Hoke Smith Godfrey, of first grade A, has made a very good record so far. He has not been absent or tardy, has made 100 in dictation, copying, spelling and arithmetic every month, and is one of the best pupils in reading and writing. This class has enjoyed visiting the third and fourth grades, where they put specimens of their penmanship on the blackboards.

The three little girls are playing dodge ball. They are Hermion Walker, Jessie Loise Cheatham, Carolyn Shivers and Leone McGaughey.

Edgewood Loves School, but Enjoys Its Holidays Anyway

We enjoyed a visit from Miss Graves last week. She came to assist in the fourth grade contest for field day.

After several weeks of hard practice on their marching, the boys had a fine time marching in the Memorial day parade last Monday, and we are very proud of the fine showing they made.

Although we all each and every one love to come to school, still we were very glad to welcome a holiday last Monday, and also the hour given us on Tuesday and Thursday. After these little holidays we all came back with fresh minds and new zeal to carry on our work.

The different grades are very much interested in their work assigned by Mrs. Osgood. The study of the Sphinx and pyramids, the Colosseum at Rome, the Hall of Karnak, the Parthenon of Athens, and many other famous ruins, is very interesting to all.

The eighth grade won the attendance banner for last week.

The seventh grade is very proud of the fact that three of the field day representatives will be from their room. They are Edith Holt, Nettie Johnson and Raymond Flournoy.

In athletics our school won three placques, to be awarded field day. The winners were the sixth grade A girls, sixth grade B boys and the eighth grade girls.

In sixth grade A a prize was offered to the child having the highest average for the month. The lucky winner was Nell Brooks, the prize being a lovely book. Last month the boys beat the girls on the honor rolls in this grade.

The first grade B was very sorry to lose two of its little pupils, Robert McWhorter and Fred Peavy.

The boys played a hard game last Tuesday with Oakland as opponent, but were defeated by them. The score was 12 to 3.

Fair's Boys in Field Meet Hope to Run Great Marathon

Even if the spelling in our school has not received a great deal of attention on this page, nevertheless it does not mean that the rivalry for the spelling banner has been settled. The seventh grade is now the proud possessor of the weekly banner. They have had it for the last two weeks.

There are many flourishing young athletes in our school who give rise to the hope that in the future the United States will find good representatives for the Marathon races.

If we made a rather broad statement last week that our boys would make as fine a showing as Uncle Sam's soldiers in the Memorial day parade, we did not miss our mark very far. Our boys not only kept in the best condition during the required part of the parade, but continued their unbroken march to the cemetery, where they quietly disbanded so that the veterans hardly knew when their younger companions left them.

SOUTH SIDE SCHOOL GAMES TOLD IN DETAIL

J. M. Peacock Reports Games Played During Week at Brisbine

TUESDAY'S GAMES.
HILL VS. FRASER.

Hill and Fraser clashed Tuesday only to play a very slow game of five innings. Crutchfield started the ditty work for Fraser with a home run with the sun on base. He also knocked down some hot grasses on short.

Fraser was held with a score of 3, while Hill slapped out ten safe ones that netted seven revolutions.

Thompson, who stood behind the willow for Fraser, received the gill fine.

Davis held short for Hill in up-to-date fashion.

Hill is determined that she will give Peeples a hot contest for second place. The two teams are tied for second now.

PEEPLES VS. FORMWWALT.

Peeples and Formwalt played a game equal to professionals Tuesday. Peeples tried their best to down the champions, but all in vain. Peeples swatted the pill for many safe ones, but succeeded in bringing across only one man. Formwalt's hitting was good. She landed three safe ones for home. Worwalt handled the ball in professional style. Burnett, Peeples' clever little shortstop, starred in fielding and hitting. Kemp, Peeples' receiver, was a tar bucket for all fouls as well as passed balls.

FRIDAY'S GAMES.
FRASER VS. PEEPLES.

Fraser gave Peeples a stubborn opposition Friday, but were defeated. Luck seemed to be against Fraser, for many times she had three men left on the sacks. Peeples laced out twelve hits, which sewed up five runs.

Sheffield hurled the sphere in fine style for Fraser. Crutchfield and Thompson played nice ball also.

Kemp did his usual good playing behind the pan. Peeples' entire team did fine fielding. It seemed as if Fraser was going to start something in the seventh. She pulled out a number of safe ones. The bases were full throughout the entire inning, but none reached home.

FORMWALT VS. WALKER.

Formwalt completely swamped Walker Friday. Formwalt circled the bases thirteen times, due to the inexcusable erfors of Walker. Walker hit a few safe ones, but were killed before they crossed the rubber. Walker was held without a score throughout the entire game. Long did his part for Walker, while the entire Formwalt team played a neat game.

ASHBY STREET SCHOOL.

The girls on section five in the first grade, Margaret Brown, Erin Logan, Lizzie Speights, Katie Suttles and Ruth Duncan have the most stars for doing the best work for four weeks in succession.

The fifth grade girls and boys got the reward last week for getting the most stars for good lines.

We had a delightful holiday Monday. We had a very nice time.

The first grade got the highest in attendance last week. Their teacher gave them a reward.

Miss eMillidge came today. She gave the first and fifth grades excellent. The other grades had a very good lesson.

GIRLS' NIGHT ENJOYED BIG PICNIC GIVEN THEM

One Teacher in Cincinnati Studying How to Better Night School

BY EDITH McMANUS.

We had another big picnic spread given us last Wednesday night by one of the classes from St. Mark's M. E. Sunday school and we enjoyed it, too. But it does not express what a good time we had, and we feel like giving those girls three times three big cheers. This is the second time that they have given us such a feast.

Mrs. Gamble, our principal, has been explaining to the girls what the trouble with Mexico really means, and she is telling us in such a way that it is more like a story than real facts.

Mrs. Gamble visited the Park Street Methodist Episcopal Sunday school last Sunday and talked to Mr. Davis' class. From the enthusiastic reception she received she came away feeling that she had done some good and was glad that she visited the class.

Mrs. Everett and Mrs. Kreigshaber of the board of education, visited the school last Thursday night and seemed to be pleased with the work we are doing.

Miss Rose Sugarman, teacher of the Jewish girls, is in Cincinnati visiting the night schools there. Miss Ida Myers has the class during Miss Sugarman's absence.

We enjoyed being off from school last Monday night on account of Memorial day.

Mae McGinnis was absent last Monday night because of illness. Viola Wallace, of the fourth division, has had to write up night school because of night work. We are very sorry indeed to lose Viola.

May Parks has returned to school after a week's absence.

Report cards were given out last Monday night and we were all well pleased with the marks which we received.

The girls of division three had a very interesting geography game last Thursday evening. There were two sets of cards, one with the capital of a state on it and the other with the state written on it. The girl who matched up the largest number of cards won.

ANTI-TRUST BILL IS REPORTED FAVORABLY

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The house judiciary committee today ordered favorably reported the omnibus anti-trust bill on which the committee had been engaged for weeks. Representative Clayton, chairman of the committee, who plans to defer taking up his new duties as federal judge in Alaska until after the bill is disposed of by the house, expects to bring up the measure as quickly as possible.

The bill includes provisions aimed against interlocking directorates, holding companies, restriction of the power of injunctions and restraining orders, with a ban on price discriminations and price fixing, with certain exceptions, and would provide for acceptance of decisions in federal anti-trust cases as conclusive in actions by other parties where the same issues are involved.

MARIST DEFEATED TECH HIGH BY 7 TO 2 SCORE

Game Featured by Hitting of Myers, Pitching of Brock

BY H. W. MCCALL, JR.

Marist college surprised the Smithies from Tech High school Friday afternoon when she easily defeated them by the score of 7 to 2. The Marist lads played a better brand of ball than their opponents and outclassed them all through the game. The Ivy street cadets have improved with every game and under the tutelage of their coach, "Goat" Holliday, have developed into a fast and peppery team.

The features of the game were the pitching of Brock for Marist, and the hitting of Myers for T. H. S., and Manning for Marist, each player getting three hits, one of these being a two-bagger. Thomas, of T. H. S., accepted some hard chances at third. Liddell caught a good game for Marist.

Marist found the Tech High pitcher in the second inning. With one down, Manning got a hit and Adair and McCall followed with two-base hits, bringing in two runs. Marist scored two more in the third on errors and T. H. S. came back with one in the fourth, also on errors. In the fifth Harrison and Brock got hits and were brought in by Manning's two-ply smash to left. Marist's last came in the eighth on a hit, passed ball, stolen base and error.

Tech High cornered their other run in the ninth aided by three hits.

Score by innings:

SMALL BOYS CONTRIBUTE "DISTRACTING NOISES"

At Grand Opera, Many Youngsters Yell "Brettos," or Programs

"Libraitos! Libraitos! You can't understand the opera without them. Libraitos!" This is the "distracting noise" that greeted you t the auditorium last week. As the doors were swung open and the gayly-dressed crowd poured in, the babble raised by a crowd of small boys yelling their wares reminded one of the bazar scene in "Kismet." Occasionally the practical man-of-the-world passed by and being accosted by the cry "you can't understand the opera without them, Libraitos!" demanded a guarantee that he could understand the opera with them. This invariably stumped the small boy.

There were notable characters in that line passing out programs and yelling "Brettos." On one side was a youthful Hitch school declaimer growing more eloquent as his voice loosened up and his arms began to shoot out in the old-time gestures. On the other side was a famous athlete presenting programs to the pretty girls only. Once in a while the chief-of-the-aupes would stalk by in his dress suit and superior smile.

All were "guests of the company" and absolutely essential for the success of the show, and all entertained high hopes of getting a box or first row seats the minute the lights went out.

If you want an expert opinion of the relative fineness or splendor of the different voices or operas, gracefulness of the actors or orchestra leaders or in short any of those topics of which the born critics or the steady, appreciative patron must judge, ask any of these "guests of the Metropolitan company," who are learning the business from the ground up; they'll be glad to tell you.

Battle Hill's Upper Grades Interested in Mexican War

As vacation time gets closer, things begin to hustle about in our school. Although the larger number prefer vacation, many would remain at home and ride instead. The remaining days are busily filled.

Tremendous applause greeted Mrs. Overby when she announced that we would have no school on Monday. We enjoy school work, but a little vacation now and then makes it more pleasant.

We are glad to welcome Miss Fowler in the sixth grade from Fraser and hope he will like this school.

We are glad to say that Miss Lyle, our representative among the boys, is working very hard and on field day the other representatives will have to do something worth to beat him. The representative among the girls are Lilly Harrington and Esther Mason, who are working forth their best efforts to win a prize. George Freeman, of the sixth grade, has always been a leader, so we naturally feel that he will do his very best.

The seventh grades feel very proud of the fact that they were able to win both of the banners this week for the best athletic record. As the seventh grade won both of these last year they were determined not to lose them this year and worked doubly hard to win them. They could not afford to lose the good reputation set by the class of '14 this year.

The second grade has won the spelling banner for the last two weeks and are delighted to know that they are going to make a spelling bee.

In first grade A the little pupils are improving greatly in writing The best writers are Dorothy Brooks, Leo Theodosis and Dorothy Burk.

The baseball sits have arrived at last. They are so exciting that Miss Sams had to remind the team not to pay so much attention to their parents' appearance and look at the ball. We certainly did take her advice.

The game with Peeples Tuesday was the prettiest of the season. Formwalt had to work mighty hard to win, but Miss Sams was pleased to see another victory to our credit. The score was 3 to 1.

BULL FIGHTING MAY BE STOPPED AT VERA CRUZ

VERA CRUZ, May 2.—Bull fighting will be stopped at Vera Cruz if the suggestion of the native city council is approved by Civil Governor Kerr.

It is not the civil government's intention to interfere with the customs of the people any more than is necessary until the education, spreading the last implanted depriving their over-fondness of their most popular form of sport, there was much surprise in the governor's office.

That there will be little if any opposition to the aldermen's suggestion is practically certain. Bull fighting is not indulged in so much in this state as in most of the others and for many years Francisco Madero's rule that permission to revive it was given.

Calhoun Well Represented In Field Day Exercises

We are working hard as usual and have every hope of winning honors at field day.

The Volley ball team is progressing finely under their captain, Alice Williams, who is time and time again perfect them for the game Saturday.

The relay race is doing fine work and have every hope of being among the winners. Their captain DeSales Harrison is working them up into fine shape.

The following children are to be participants in field day: Charles Bearden, representatives in athletics Class A; Fletcher Pierce, class B; Katherine Pierce, who will be class A's representatives is quite ill and she will not be able to be with us.

The ten year old runners are: Joseph Raine, Pauline Ware, nine years, Burrel Peterson, Vadie Smith, eight years, James Wilson, Ollie Lee Berry; seven years, Jack Royce, Mildred Wells.

Miss Milledge visited the primary grades this week and gave them an excellent report.

Miss Harralson paid a visit to the seventh and eighth grades and went over the songs for the May concert.

The Calhoun boys made a fine showing in the Memorial parade. The officers were Glenn Aenchbacher, captain; Halford DuPree, Albert Tinsley and Richard Alger Heutenants; Arthur Foster, color bearer.

MUSICAL TALENT SURE TO BE DEVELOPED AT B. H. S.

Grand Opera Charms "Barbs" Team Planning Road Trip

BY W. F. RINES.

The past week brought with it welcome holidays for the students of Boys' Hi. Memorial day was a holiday for all the city schools. Delegations from every school marched in the parade and thus showed the respect of the students for the heroes of the Civil war.

Boys' Hi had a holiday Friday on account of the annual teachers' examinations held in our building.

The boys as usual are showing much interest in grand opera, and are helping the stars in their entertainments by "auping." The school was dismissed at 1 o'clock on Tuesday and Thursday in order that the teachers and students might attend the matinees. We are all looking forward with dread to the musical "talent" that will develop in school when grand opera is over. Our only hope is that it will not become contagious among the "barbarians."

The baseball team went to Stone Mountain Thursday and had a good game with the University School for Boys. Johnston and Spurlock are planning to take the team some time soon on a tour of south Georgia to play several series. The contest for the pennant in the class league is becoming more and more exciting. The Juniors won from the Freshmen Tuesday by a score of 9 to 1 and thus forged to the front. The two remaining games to be played are the Senior-Sophomore game and the Junior-Freshmen game. If the Juniors win from the Freshmen they will have the pennant without dispute. If the Juniors and Sophomores both lose, there will be a triple tie.

Formwalt's Baseball Suits Arrive; Peeples Beaten, 3-1

We are very proud of our boys who marched in the parade on Memorial day for they did great credit to Formwalt and received many compliments on their fine marching.

Dr. Stephens and his assistants are with us now and we hope they will find us a very healthy lot of school children.

We are very glad that the Y. W. C. A. for whom Miss Graves is working is leading in The Journal contest. We are saving all the wrappers we can get for Miss Graves and hope they will be very successful.

Athletics are certainly enjoyed at Formwalt. Miss Williams, our representative among the boys, is working very hard and on field day the other representatives will have to do something worth to beat him. The representative among the girls are Lilly Harrington and Esther Mason, who are working forth their best efforts to win a prize. George Freeman, of the sixth grade, has always been a leader, so we naturally feel that he will do his very best.

The seventh grades feel very proud of the fact that they were able to win both of the banners this week for the best athletic record. As the seventh grade won both of these last year they were determined not to lose them this year and worked doubly hard to win them. They could not afford to lose the good reputation set by the class of '14 this year.

The second grade has won the spelling banner for the last two weeks and are delighted to know that they are going to make a spelling bee.

In first grade A the little pupils are improving greatly in writing The best writers are Dorothy Brooks, Leo Theodosis and Dorothy Burk.

The baseball sits have arrived at last. They are so exciting that Miss Sams had to remind the team not to pay so much attention to their parents' appearance and look at the ball. We certainly did take her advice.

The game with Peeples Tuesday was the prettiest of the season. Formwalt had to work mighty hard to win, but Miss Sams was pleased to see another victory to our credit. The score was 3 to 1.

BULL FIGHTING MAY BE STOPPED AT VERA CRUZ

VERA CRUZ, May 2—Bull fighting will be stopped at Vera Cruz if the suggestion of the native city council is approved by Civil Governor Kerr.

It is not the civil government's intention to interfere with the customs of the people any more than is necessary until the education, spreading the last implanted depriving their over-fondness of their most popular form of sport, there was much surprise in the governor's office.

That there will be little if any opposition to the aldermen's suggestion is practically certain. Bull fighting is not indulged in so much in this state as in most of the others and for many years Francisco Madero's rule that permission to revive it was given.

The last note of opera has been [illegible] Today Atlanta is [illegible]

[illegible] the city will be wide awake again, busy with final preparations for Shriners' week, the biggest in her history. That week, which begins seven days from now, with center round sessions of the imperial council of the Shrine, that will be held here May 12 and [illegible]

Thousands of visitors are coming, from all quarters of the North American continent, from every state in the union, from Canada, some from Mexico. The estimate is that 35,000 will be here. Not all of these will be Shriners. The law [illegible] cities from every point have [illegible] multitudes who know nothing of the "high sign" but who do [illegible] good travel opportunity when [illegible]

[illegible] a year the preparations [illegible] under way for this horde [illegible] Even before the Dallas [illegible] of the Shriners, in May [illegible] the Atlanta hotels signed contracts to Yaarab temple for over [illegible] thirds of their accomodations. [illegible] Atlanta's invitation was accepted in Dallas, work was begun in earnest. Some hundreds of the visiting [illegible] had their rooms reserved [illegible] well. The last hotel room [illegible] by Yaarab temple was [illegible] weeks ago. Whole boarding [illegible] have been reserved by [illegible] that temple. Rooms in private homes are engaged for the [illegible] Atlanta will be crowded to [illegible] her doors with many thousands more visitors than were here during the busiest days of the International Exposition in 1895. The meeting [illegible] the very biggest the Shriners [illegible] held anywhere.

[illegible] a week of carnival, of [illegible] and dancing and feasting and [illegible] For seven days Atlanta [illegible] constantly [illegible] use for all this is that the [illegible] council of the Ancient [illegible] Order, Nobles of the Mystic [illegible] will be holding its annual [illegible] here at the time. The imperial council governs the 133 temples of Shrinedom in North America. It is an inconsiderable body, as numbers go. From one to half a dozen representatives will come from each temple. They and a few officers will form the council. Their number will be probably less than 500.

This is the nucleus around which the Shriners of the continent gather each year for their big jollification. For every Shriner who sits in the imperial council, there will be scores of others who will not expect to see even the inside of the Lyric theater, where that body is to meet.

Atlanta will be the mecca of Shrinedom. The caravans will come from every direction across the deserts. Some even will come over sea. The first will arrive next Saturday morning. A few more will follow that afternoon, quite a number will come in during the night, and by next Sunday morning the city will have begun to fill up with Shriners. From then until Tuesday week special trains will be following each other into the railway stations every few minutes.

Will See the South.

Though Atlanta is to be the objective of all these pilgrims, it is not their sole attraction. Atlanta must compete with dozens of other southern cities through which the caravans will pass on their way to or from the gathering. All will entertain the visiting Shriners. The majority of these cities are making big plans. Diversions along the way will put Atlanta on her mettle and increase her cordiality toward the strangers. The Shriners will come one way and go another. The pilgrimage itself is at least as important as the stay in Mecca. The Shriners will see Atlanta, but they will see the south, too.

The things in Atlanta which hold interest for the stranger will be magnets drawing thousands, that week. Stone Mountain will be one of them. Uncle Remus' home another, the three battlefields others. President Roosevelt's mother's home at Roswell another. The state house, the police court, the Burns' club, the Confederate Soldiers' home—these and scores of other interesting subjects which Atlanta sees at a perspective too close to appreciate them, will be thronged every day.

While they are here the visitors will spend hundreds of thousands of dollars. Everywhere the Shriners meet, the bank clearings jump. Past records show this. It will be true again, and more so than ever, in Atlanta—for this is to be the biggest meeting of all.

A LLAMA HEAD

ALPACAS FEEDING ON THE ROOF OF THE WORLD

HARRY V. HARLAM, of our Department of Agriculture

By Frank G. Carpenter

(Copyrighted, 1914.)

SICUANI, Peru.

I AM at Sicuani, a little town on the great plateau that lies between the two ranges of the Andes. This plateau runs north and south for a thousand or more miles through Ecuador and Peru. I am now at the southern end of it, several hundred miles south of the region I have described in my letters from Cerro de Pasco. To reach Cerro, I had to cross the mountains at an altitude of 15,000 feet. The pass by which I came here is only 13,600 feet lower, and it was through a driving snowstorm that I slid over the mountains from the Pacific slope to the Atlantic.

It took me three days by rail to get here from the ocean. My road was the Southern Railway of Peru, which is one of the best managed in the republic. Its trains start on time and get there. The ride here was comparatively comfortable, although a part of my journey was not on the express. By the fast trains it is possible to reach Cuzco from the ocean inside of three days. I am taking four, in order that I may better see the country and people. The first stage of my travels was up the mountains from the port of Mollendo to Arequipa. That city is the metropolis of southern Peru. It is 8,000 feet above the sea, and in reaching it you rover only a little more than half of the altitude to the top of the Andes. I stayed there for a day or so, and then went on to Juliaca, a town a short distance from Lake Titicaca. The latter journey required a full day's railroad travel. During it I crossed the pass of Crucero Alto, and in coming down to Juliaca fell to a height of a little less than 13,000 feet. The high altitude affected me, and I felt a slight touch of soroche at the hotel where we stopped over night. Juliaca is the junction where the Southern railroad divides, one branch going southward to Puno on Lake Titicaca, and the other northward over the great plateau to the valley and ancient city of Cuzco. The journey is made by the express in one day. The ordinary trains take two days, and therefore after nine hours from Juliaca I have to stop over night at Sicuani. Tomorrow I shall resume my journey to the famed city of Incas, which is about 100 miles further on.

I have already described the ride over the Peruvian desert from the ocean to Arequipa. The journey from there to the top of the mountains is even more wonderful. You start from the level of Mexico City and wind your way around Mount Misti, which is more than 19,000 feet high, and at the same time you can see other mountains such as Chachacani, which are more than four miles above the sea and which are covered with snow all the year round. Higher still there are mountains covered with glaciers and on the way up the valley to Cuzco at La Raya you see glaciers in the far distance, which must cover many square miles.

The greater part of the way is through extinct volcanoes. The slope of Mount Misti is covered with great blocks of black lava and the mountains that wall this high valley in the region where I now am have Niagaras of lava which seem to have been frozen as they flowed from the craters above down the slopes. In places you look over walls of such rock a thousand feet high, and above them see glaciers on mountains that are more than four miles in height. At times these mountains rise up like a great white rampart of irregular shape, kissing the sky; and again they extend in a saw-tooth construction as far as your eyes can reach.

The vegetation changes the moment you near the top of the Andes. As you climb the western slope at an altitude of two miles or more the grass begins to sprinkle the semi-arid hillsides, and when you cross the pass and come down to the plateau you are in a region of sod covered with tufts of wiry grass which are too coarse for anything but the llamas. The plateau itself is covered with flocks of sheep and alpacas. There are herds of cattle, and you see droves of llamas loaded with goods of one kind or another being driven along. There are Indian villages at every few miles, and in places the pampa is spotted with low mud huts roofed with straw, each of which is the home of an Indian who grazes his alpacas and llamas nearby. Everywhere on the sides of the valley are the remains of the cultivation of the Incas. There are terraces that run from the plateau for thousands of feet up the mountain. These terraces were walled with stone, and where possible the water was carried from level to level. In many places the terraced farms had no water and the crops grown depended upon the scanty rainfall.

LLAMAS, A SNAPSHOT ON THE PAMPAS

And just here I want to give you an idea of the farming that goes on away up here on the roof of the world. The average altitude of the region I refer to is 12,000 or 13,000 feet above the sea, and it runs from that to more than 14,000 feet. There are millions of acres of such lands in Peru with a climate in which white men can live. They comprise a great part of the wide valley that runs north and south through the continent, and at this altitude they support hundreds of thousands of cattle and millions of alpacas, llamas and sheep. The highest of the plains are covered with native grasses, which are short and close to the earth. Scattered over them are the tufts of wire grass, the new sprouts of which are eaten by the stock and the coarser shunned by all but the llamas. Here and there near every Indian hut is a small patch of potatoes or quidua or barley, and there is no doubt but that the whole region might be plowed up and greatly improved.

And this brings me to the movement for the improvement of the high plateaus of the Andes, which has been inaugurated by the Peruvian corporation, a British company that has charge of the railroads for the government. This institution has sent to the United States for one of its agricultural experts, and he is now experimenting here in different places to find out the best grasses and best grains to be grown upon the plateau. The man chosen was Mr. Harry V. Harlan, the agronimist in the barley investigations of our department of agriculture. He came here seven months ago and is already making good progress. I met Mr. Harlan at Juliaca, and went with him to some of the experiment stations. He has one little farm of four or five acres right near the railroad, and this has been planted to cereals and grasses of various kinds. He showed me one plot of barley consisting of perhaps fifty rows, each from seed gathered from a different part of the world. Some of the barley came from Smyrna, some from Servia, and some from Russia and the western highlands of the United States. Other rows were of seeds from Manchuria, the high plateaus of India, and others were from the plateau of Thibet. All of these barleys are growing well and many of them far better than that from the native Peruvian grain. There seems to be no doubt but that almost any kind of hardy barley will grow on the pampas, and the experiments of Mr. Harlan may open up a new future for the highlands of Peru.

The soil of the plateau is almost free from stones. Its soil is rich, that of this region being mostly alluvial. It is composed of the shrunken basin of Lake Titicaca, and there are millions of acres of it which have never been thoroughly farmed. The Indians use plows made of wood that cut the ground to a depth of three inches. They have bullocks to drag them, and farm the same way they did generations ago. Nevertheless they grow fairly good crops, and with deep plowing large crops of barley are produced.

I talked with Mr. Harlan about the grasses of the pampa. We went together out on the plain, and he showed me the sod. It is a compact turf made of short native grasses, mixed with the wild clover that lies close to the ground.

It seemed to me very poor, but Mr. Harlan says that the sheep and alpacas and llamas live well on it, although it is short for the cattle.

Leaving this place we went to the grassplots where experiments are being made with hardy grasses from different parts of the world. There I saw American timothy and red clover sprouting through the brown soil. I saw patches of Russian grasses that were growing luxuriantly and also wheat grasses from our western plains as well as one of the families of blue grass that thrive on the high plateau of the Rockies. So far the experiments are not advanced enough to make decided predictions, but there is no doubt but that a great improvement can be produced by new seeds from abroad.

The farming I have referred to is where the moisture is supplied entirely by the rainfall. This is scanty, but it is enough for barley and grasses of various kinds, and it is a question whether with dry farming it would not be sufficient for wheat. It relates mostly to the pampa, which is 13,000 feet high.

It is different where the soil can be irrigated. Everywhere along the railroad from the sea to the tops of the Andes there are irrigated valleys. On the western slopes the water supply is poor, and the streams are small, but a little water makes the desert a garden. The Chile river is one strip of green all the way from the sea to the tops of the Andes, and about Arequipa it raises wheat, barley, corn and all of the vegetables and fruits of the tropic and temperate zones.

Crossing over the coast range and coming into the plateau, you find cultivated lands along both sides of the Vilcanota river all the way down to Cuzco. The valley in the plateau is in fact a series of little gardens of Eden, the water being carried out over them so that it falls from level to level. The fields are in terraces that are now green with luxuriant crops. In coming here to Sicuani I saw many patches of barley, potatoes and beans; and also hundreds of little fields of Indian corn. This crop now reaches to the height of my knee in the high altitudes, but to the height of my shoulder where the lands are a little lower and consequently warmer.

In the valley of Cuzco, which we shall go through tomorrow, the crops are still more advanced, and the barley, which is green in the highlands, is there almost ready for harvest. The lands of these valleys look very different from the plateaus that are fed alone by the rains. The irrigated lands are exceedingly valuable. They have all been taken up by the whites or the Cholos, and are exploited by them with Indian labor. Here the lands are often divided by mud fences. The fields are consecutive, and you see the villages made of mud huts which are occupied by the Indians, who do the hard work. On the non-irrigated plateaus the land yields much less and the greater part of them are given over to pastures. Here you find hundreds of Indian squatters, each of whom has his little mud hut, with a corral or so made of stones or mud into which his flocks are driven at night. He may have two or three acres of potatoes or quinua, and perhaps a small patch of barley, but as a rule the crop is grown only to supply his own needs. The methods of such farming are rude to an extreme, but the patches seem clean and the Indians work very hard.

The chief industry of this great plateau of the Andes is the raising of stock. I have seen millions of sheep on my way across the plateau, and tens of thousands of alpacas, llamas, as well as many horses, cattle and donkeys. The donkeys and llamas form the beasts of burden, and you see them driven in long caravans over the plain, followed by Indian men and women, who are either their owners or in charge of them for their masters. I never get tired of watching the llamas. One can see them everywhere on the plateau. They walk in caravans along the trails; they crowd the streets of the villages and droves of them line the plazas of every city and town. They are, in fact, the freight trains of the high Andes, and they compete, with the railroad. They carry grain, vegetables, hides, alcohol, ores, leaves and goods of every description. Many of them are used to transfer the ore from the mines to the smelters; and the farmers employ them to take their goods to the towns and railroads.

The llamas pack the freight on their backs, the burden being tied on like a saddle, and not in panniers, as upon donkeys. There is a current story that a llama will carry just 100 pounds, and that if you put on one ounce more he will lie down, and no whipping or beating can make him go on. This statement is ridiculous. The llama, if over-burdened, will surely lie down and refuse to move; but as to his having the intelligence to know when the hundred-pound load is reached, that is one of the fictions of traveling Munchausens. Indeed, there are very few llamas that can carry as much as a hundred pounds. The animals are of different strengths, and the average load is about seventy-five or eighty pounds, although there are some beasts that will carry one hundred and twenty. A matter of a pound or so makes no difference, and it is only when the animal feels that he has much more than his strength will support that he refuses to go.

The llamas are of different sizes, according to their ages and the care that has been taken of them. When full grown their heads reach a height of six feet or more; but they have long necks, and their hold these straight up, which makes them look taller. They have long ears that stand out like those of a fox terrier. They are full, round bodies, like that of a sheep, and comparatively long legs. The look, in short, like miniature camels, and I am told that they have the same power as the camel of going several days without food or water. Many of the farms are long distances from the towns or railroads, and a llama has often to make a journey of four or five days or a week in carrying his load to and from home. During this time he eats practically nothing, and goes along without water. This seems incredible, but I am told it is true. The llama wool is coarse, and it has no value in commerce. It is used by the Indians to spin thread and make cloth. The meat is also too coarse for the markets.

The alpacas are much smaller than the llamas, and in some respects more beautiful. They are a great deal more delicate, and are not used as beasts of burden, although there are crosses between the alpaca and llama which make as freight carriers. They are usually to be seen in the llama trains and are often of a brownish yellow color. The alpacas one sees on the pastures and there are millions of them on the high Andes, are white, black or brown. Sometimes they are spotted. They do not thrive anywhere below a mile and a half above the sea, and they are most found at a height of two miles or more. They have a fine long wool that brings 4 or 5 cents more a pound than sheep's wool. They are kept for the wool, being clipped every two years, when the fleece of the ordinary animal should weigh five pounds. The shearing is done sooner the wool is short and it brings very much less.

I have seen some vicunas during my trip through the Andes. They are the wild half-sisters and brothers of the llamas and alpacas and are smaller than either. They cannot be domesticated, but they will sometimes come down from the mountains and mix with flocks of llamas, alpacas and sheep on the plains. They are often shot by the Indians and Cholos, although this is against the law.

The vicuna wool is finer than that of the alpaca and it brings a high price. There is so little of it, however, that it is hardly worth mention. Much of the vicuna cloth so-called is made of alpaca wool. The vicunas are sandy in color, and their wools further as to that of a seal. For this reason their skins are used to make the rugs so highly prized by the tourists. These rugs vary in value according to the part of the animal from which the pieces of skin come. A rug made from the necks or legs is much more valuable than one from pieces taken from the rest of the body. During my visit to South America fifteen years ago I bought a beautiful rug in La Paz, Bolivia, for about $20 in gold. I am told that similar ones will now cost $75 and upward.

Is Mere Knowledge a Moral Prophylactic?

By Bishop Warren A. Candler

MANY people seem to assume that human sin is the result of human ignorance, and that it can be prevented by imparting to men the knowledge of its evil consequences. This was the belief of a certain school of ancient philosophers in Greece.

If the theory were correct, the problem of sin would be easy to solve. Information would be the efficacious remedy for all iniquity; and in school he found the sources of universal salvation.

Unfortunately, the facts of history do not justify the theory that accurate knowledge of evil is a moral prophylactic. Men do not sin for lack of knowledge, but for love of evil in the light of fullest acquaintance with its nature and results. A Latin poet perceived this and said, as paraphrased by Pope, "I know the right and approved it too; I know the wrong, and yet the wrong pursue."

St. Paul also said, "When I would do good, evil is present with me." Jesus said, "Men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil."

Universal experience contradicts the notion that men sin because they do not know the evil of sin. The eating of the fruit of the tree of knowledge has no effect to make men virtuous and holy. On the contrary, it not infrequently results in making them vicious and unclean. Men and nations have fallen to the lowest depths of depravity when they were most cultured and enlightened.

It is passing strange that many people, ignore these established facts of history and unquestionable records of human experience, and continue to insist that ignorance is the source of sin and knowledge the panacea for all evil.

We have reformers who think to cure licentiousness by prurient expositions of what they are pleased to call "sex hygiene." They mean well, perhaps; or it is charitable to assume that most of them mean well; but they are following a mistaken course whatever may be their intentions. They will by such unguided methods create more vice than they will cure. They will pollute the imaginations of thousands of boys and girls with all sorts of foul pictures and images. Boys of a certain type will find more demoralizing gratification in listening to the discussions of subjects of this kind than they will find moral benefit. It is not impossible that some who insist on giving these lessons in "sex hygiene" also really find a secret pleasure for themselves in the discussions of such matters. The over-emphasizing of the fact of sex cannot fail to be suggestive and productive of unspeakable evils.

"Vice is a monster of such hideous mien
That to be hated needs only to be seen.
But seen too oft, familiar with its face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

It is a specious way of setting up salacious shows, when vice is exhibited in moving pictures under the pretense of warning to the young against it. These exhibitions will yield a vast output of licentiousness.

Does any man think for a moment that the most licentious people are ignorant of the results of their vile habits? The sinners of Sodom and Gomarrah knew perfectly the evil of their foul courses of conduct. The debauched inhabitants of Herculaneum and Pompeii knew as well as we do the horrible consequences of such living as characterized them. They sinned against light, and not for lack of light.

There is another application of the truth that knowledge is not a moral prophylactic to which we do well to attend. There is a mania for education arising from the delusion that universal education will end all crime. Georgia spends hundreds of thousands of dollars annually at the behest of men who are laboring under this delusion. The experiment will lead to disappointment. Education alone will not diminish crime. It may increase such crimes as forgeries, embezzlements, infanticide, and immoral divorces. Our prisons and penitentiaries are filled with educated criminals.

There is no moral antiseptic quality in mere education.

We must depend upon religion for the moral renovation of mankind. Men are saved by faith, if they are ever saved at all. It is not the eating of the fruit of the tree of knowledge which brings health to morals. Men must eat of the tree of life which stands in the midst of the Paradise of God.

"'Tis life of which our veins are scant." For light out souls crave. And this is life eternal to know the only true God and Jesus Christ whom he has sent."

SOME MEXICAN FIGHTERS I'VE KNOWN

Wylie Smith

General Francisco Villa

By Angus Perkerson

FIRST let's have Orozco, that long-armed, long-legged, gangling, mule-driver," suggested Wylie Smith. "You spell his front name Pascual. Sounds like opera, but a specialty is war."

The chronicler of Mexican fighting men put his feet on the banisters, propped his cap on his knee, and chewed a cigar.

A scissors grinder across the street let a big brass bell up and down in a somnolent fashion suggesting the cream bell ringers Robert Louis Stevenson used to hear toward the close of a chapter when he was absorbing through the southern part of France and the sky was turning apricot and bell notes were just the thing to give atmosphere and roundness to a paragraph.

The trees on the sidewalk in front of 190 South Pryor were green with new leaves all fuzzy with a sort of blossom that isn't flowers or sweet, but is still satisfying if a rather drab symbol of spring. The sun was unearthly, the porch was shaded, the street was quiet.

"Is there such a place as Mexico? Who knows?

"What is it?"

Mr. Smith sighed, and passed his hand over his chin.

"I remember," he said, "the death of illustrious captain. Orozco shot him through the heart.

It was at Chihuahua. We hadn't been paid for three months, we'd parched corn till to this day it still gives me a shiver, and there was something we'd about seven-company of troops were needed to give a detachment near Chihuahua. I can see Pascual Orozco now as he started to a lean, lank, tall, dark, gloomy looking captain.

"Down there in a hurry,' he suggested. And then the captain did something I didn't think any man would be foolish enough to do. He put his long legs over toward me with a quid of tobacco sticking in his cheek—I remember that as he left cheek, it caught my eye. And he drew himself up, stuck one hand on his hip, and said:

"'When do we get paid?'

"'Pay?' said Orozco, wonderingly. "'Money?' Then he spread out his hands. A Mexican says a lot of things that way. What he meant now was that money was as strange to his fingers as sirloin steak was to his palate.

"The foolish captain humped up his shoulders, gathered his eyebrows together, and spread out his legs.

"'I don't go,' he said.

"Then, Orozco spread out his hands again, but he was speaking this time to the bunch of soldiers near him, and what he was saying in that dumb language was 'Grab him.' There's nothing a Mexican soldier had rather do to an officer.

"The captain turned as white around the gills as though something had happened to his circulation, and he backed off. Suddenly he wheeled round, took two long steps, and started to run.

Orozco's War.

"Well, of course the soldiers could have finished it. But I guess Orozco saw where he could increase the effect by playing the part himself. His hand went down to his belt, up into the air, his arm half bent, his head cocked to one side, and his face wrinkled.

"I must have looked from one man to the other. Anyway, I got an impression of two figures: Orozco, his head to one side, his body as still as marble, and the foolish captain, running, bent over, as though he knew what was coming. I couldn't see his face, but I know the fear of death was on him.

"Well, we heard the shot, we saw him turn over on his face, and kick out his feet.

"'Now,'" says Orozco to another captain, 'get down there in a hurry.'

"Then, he turned away, from the man who lay still on the ground, and again puffed out with a quid of tobacco.

"That was the way of Orozco—Pascual Orozco, the short-bodied, long-legged, long-armed, lean faced general who's fighting today under Huerta.

"I knew him best of all the Mexican fighting men. I also knew Jose Ynez Salazar, Francisco Villa, whom they called Pancho Villa, Antonio Rojas, and any number of the little ones. But let's keep to Orozco a little while longer.

"The man's a peon; he's practically illiterate. But he has the personality. You've met that sort, haven't you? Men that are coarse grained, rough in speech, but with something about them that holds you.

"That was Orozco. Whatever he said the peons did. I tell you he fairly hypnotized them. Madero was the man to realize this. When he started his revolution that led to the presidency and Death, that aftermath of Mexican victory, he met up with Orozco who was driving pack mules from the city of Madera over the mountains to Dolores.

When Orozco Quit.

"The very man to reach the lowest class, thought Madero, and he thought right.

"It was a matter of days and no more before Orozco had an army yelling for Madero and fighting for the mule-driver. They themselves thought they had Madero's cause. But it really was the long-armed, short-bodied, ungainly mule-driver they were fighting for.

"When the time came that Madero lost his love for Orozco, this was proved.

"If you'll remember, Orozco gave up his command at Chihuahua. He had lost Madero's confidence, so he quit and Villa was marching to the city to relieve him.

"It was Saturday morning, I remember, and Orozco walked out among his troops. They lined up and waited for him to speak.

"Whether you know it or not a Mexican likes to line up. If there are only three or four of them, they'll form in a line to listen to the spokesman.

"Orozco stood with his long arms dangling down, his hands reaching below his knees, and his shoulders bent a little in his characteristic way. Suddenly he threw out his arms.

"'We've done the fighting, haven't we?' he shouted. "'We're the peons? What's Madero—an aristocrat. What's he done for you or me? What's he ever going to do.

"'Now,' he cried, "'every man that's goin' with me, step out.'

They Ill Stepped.

"And they all stepped. In half an hour they were marching out to meet Villa, who was nearing the city, knowing nothing about what had happened. Orozco met him, and not a dozen shots were fired before Villa and all his men were footing it for safety.

"As for Villa, I fought against him, not with him; and my news of the exbandit is a good deal hearsay. You know, for 15 years he was a mere robber, taking whatever he needed. The murder of a Mexican started him on that road, but it's a crime in which you'll almost sympathize with him.

"He had a sister. They say she was as soft as he was hard, and they say, too, there was an uncommon love between them. She was about the only person who ever discovered any very deep vein of tenderness in Villa and she also uncovered not a little bit of murderous cold-bloodedness.

"Well, the long and short of it is, she suffered at the hands of a Mexican, and Villa found the man. He brought the fellow to the ranch where Villa and his sister lived, and called in a priest. The two were married, and Villa told the priest to go away. Then, he took the man out in front of the house—not 10 minutes after the wedding was done with—and shot him to death. That was his way.

What Villa Has Learned.

"One thing a Mexican doesn't know how to do is to follow up an advantage. If he dislodges an enemy he's satisfied. But Villa's learned to follow a successful attack with pursuit, and to rout the enemy thoroughly. But somebody's taught him that. No Mexican could find it out by himself.

"Well, let's talk a little about Salazar now. He's the czar, the unrivaled. When he passed by a group of soldiers, they stood up straight without breathing, and saluted. And when one of them came before him for misconduct the poor accused man made the sign of the cross and made his peace with God. It was a good thing to do. Any breach of discipline, and Salazar had you shot.

"Remember, I told you about him and the Mormons. A watch had been stolen. The threee men were found. 'Shoot them,' said Salazar. A woman was outraged, a troop of soldiers were lined up, and she was told to pick out the man. She hesitated, and pointed to one.

"'A little while to pray,'" he pleaded; and added, "'I'm innocent.'

"'If you're innocent,'" said Salazar, "'what's the use of praying.'

"Then, they shot him right there, though God knows whether he was the man or not. That was Salazar's way.

"He and Antonio Rojas are now in prison in Texas, and I understand that arrangements are being made to release them. But they are as unlike as fellow fighters could be. Rojas is the most whole-souled, good-natured murderer you ever met with. And he's a fighting man who goes the limit. But he isn't ruthless. He kills in war, but in peace he slaps his men on the back, private or officer, and makes the last one of them love him.

Tom Fountain's Death.

"But he's got the blood-lust in him, they all have in Mexico. They like to kill. Fifty per cent of the men that fought to put Madero in, fought to put him out. Same way with Huerta. It would take 50,000 troops to maintain peace in Mexico.

"I say they like to kill. I'll tell you the story of Tom Fountain to prove it. Salazar attacked Villa at Parral and ran him out. And one of the crowd that was cut off and taken was Tom Fountain, who'd been mowing us down with a machine gun he'd set up over in a corner of the town.

"'We'll shoot them all the first thing in the morning,'" was what Salazar decided.

"But the American consul heard Tom was from the states, and he got busy.

"'That's an American citizen,'" he sent word, "'so go slow.'"

"'Well, an American citizen has got to business shooting at us,' was the way Salazar answered. "'We're going to treat him like the others.'

"But he did decide to give Tom 24 hours respite. And when the bunch of rebs were moved out the next morning from a slaughter house to be shot, a separate squad took Tom Fountain and started him toward Salazar's tent.

"The consul, the general, and you are going to have a little three-cornered talk, was the first word they brought. But as they walked along, a sergeant siddled up and whispered in his ear.

"'Say,' said the Mexican, 'they're goin' to kill you up there, and your chance is to run now.'

"'And be shot,' said Tom Fountain.

"'No,' denied the sergeant. 'We won't shoot. We'll let you get away to avoid trouble.'

"They were passing then by an empty square, round which the adobe wall had crumbled. You know, in Mexico, it's a custom to wall up the vacant squares.

"'All right,' whispered the sergeant to Tom Fountain. And the American fighting man took his chance. He got as far as the crumbled wall when they fired, riddling him, and he crumpled up full of holes.

"I happened to know that if he'd gone on to Salazar's tent they wouldn't have dared to shoot him. But the guile of the sergeant gave him a chance to kill another man."

Wylie Smith leaned forward, put on his cap, and lit the cigar. The dreamy bell ringer returned along the street, the sun seemed to grow hotter, the neighborhood yawned.

"Mexico seemed a reality. And as for war—you could picture Orozco shooting another long, lean, dark, tall, dark, gloomy, ruthless captain.

"Yes," added Wylie Smith, "they've all got into the fighting habit down there. They've got the taste of blood and I don't know how it's to be got out of them.

Famous Race Horses and Turfmen of the Old South

By Mrs. G. O. Stovall

FOR a moment or two the old gentleman's deliberate air obtained his moustache gently, gazed in a far away manner ahead of him then in reply to a question which had been put to him said: "Yes, gentlemen, if I'm correct horse racing began in South Carolina far back as 1734, and some of our most distinguished were enthusiasts on the subject.

Soon after the Revolutionary war, generals Washington, Sumter, Hampton, Aiston, Richardson and a host of others were noted turfmen. My grandfather, and my father, who believed with the best men of the old south in the wholesomeness of outdoor sports, spent fortunes in keeping up first-class studs and tracks. From my boyhood I loved to see the speed and pedigree of well bred racers of the day.

Of all the horses my grandfather owned, continued the general, "there was probably none he so idolized as Fair Light. Cornet was great, wonderfully great in the turf world, as you probably know, but Flash Light ruled in my heart. His name suited him, he was keen as a blade, fleet of foot and was the matchless model of his time. He and Cornet were both the events especially for them, but with courageous spirit dashed in the speedily arranged handicaps for older horses and snatched the laurels from them. Ah! I tell you it must be a rare pleasure to the man with the love of the thoroughbred in his nature to be able to own a stable of famous equinine aristocracy such as our old south nabobs did.

"A man to look upon his horses from the time they were foaled until they walk down the paddock after their race victorious over everything which could run against them, brings an exaltation of spirit that is stimulating and glorious. By George! my blood tingles when I think of it."

Here the old general raised his glass and took a generous sip of gin-fix.

"Now, well as I can recall, the name of John Irving stands pre-eminent in the turf world of the sixties. He was the king of turfmen in lower Carolina, I do not know if any of you are aware that he was the father of the famous artist Beaufaine Irving, known as the American Messenger. Yes, Irving was a millionaire sportsman and his stables age most proof in the coast region of South Carolina.

"Meteor, a great black colt, was his most successful winner, but he had a long line of horses of royal pedigree. This old nabob used to emphasize the fact that he did not buy and breed horses solely to succeed in the betting ring, but as a matter of personal pride in gathering a collection of racers that should be invincible in certain contests.

"Now another distinguished turfman was Glascock Bacon. He was the grandson of the historical Ned Brace. Colonel Bacon's breeding farm in Edgefield was the wonder and envy of horse lovers. This farm was not very far from his home, Baconsfield, a grand old mansion where he used to dispense the most glorious hospitality.

"My father was a frequent guest at Baconsfield, and my memory glows with recitals of his princely entertainment. By the way, he was as famed for his mint juleps as for his racers, but we will discuss the latter," said the general.

"Now the record of his stables was one continued success. Girl O' My Heart was the beauty of the turf and she seemed to have made the run triumphant in many a race, but Colonel Bacon's favorite of any horse he ever owned was Mona, a handsome, clean-coated, sure-footed animal, the winner of stakes both in the south and east. But possibly the most valuable animal in the Bacon stables was Lynchburg, a high-spirited three-year-old and a three-year-old of sterling worth, well made and well muscled with a stride and a heart that carried him to victory in many a hard fought race on the fashionable tracks.

"It was at Saratoga that Lynchburg met with an accident resulting later in his death. This was after a most successful race. No victory of the year was hailed with such a wild burst of applause and approval as when the horse swept by the grandstand in the lead, and as his jockey jogged him back to the judge's stand to dismount, there was a popular demonstration.

"To prove his devotion to Lynchburg Colonel Bacon had one of the hoofs of the horse polished and beautifully carved and made into a medallion incrusted with rare jewels which his wife wore and treasured beyond all her possessions. This old school lady, Mrs. Bacon, died recently having nearly reached the century mark. To the last, she would glow and brighten with enthusiasm as she exhibited the various trophies and related the tales of tragedy and romance woven around the racers of the Baconsfield stables.

"James R. Keen," continued the general, "is the only man I ever met who had as deep affection for his racers as Colonel Bacon. I visited him at Castleton, Lexington, Ky., many years ago. The record of his stable has been one of immense financial victory, from the days of Domino, the famous black colt that won more than $190,000 as a two-year-old, and I know on authority that his horses won in five years one million dollars.

"Of all the horses Mr. Keen ever owned during his long career as a breeder and sportsman, Domino was his favorite.

"When Domino died in Kentucky in 1897 his owner caused to be erected over his grave a monument bearing an inscription which testified to his love for the horse and to his sterling worth as a racer. The inscription reads, 'One of the best friends I ever had, and the fleetest horse ever foaled is dead.'

"It was in 1893 that Mr. Keen was threatened with downfall in Wall street. The financial foundations were reported to be slipping from under his feet. Domino won for him more than $150,000. A stanch friend that, and one Mr. Keen never forgot, he loved the ground that the horse walked on. While Mr. Keen idolised Domino, he regarded Sysonby as the greatest horse that ever lived. Sysonby is immortalized in the Museum of Natural History for that reason. His skeleton is the frame work of an animal that stood above all his kind in the estimation of competent judges.

"Mr. Keen stated that he believed we were breeding better horses in America and our type was improving. We are getting both speed and stamina, which means much for the horse.

"While I'm no authority on the subject, it is my opinion that in the Blue Grass region of Kentucky comes the most graceful and the fleetest of America's race horses. But gentlemen, speaking of my friend Keen and the millions of dollars he has realized from his racers reminds me to say, in the days of our grandfathers, racing was far different from what it is now. It was excitement and pride centered in the thoroughbred animal, not in the stakes. The object was to iprove the breed of horses, and they were run by the owners for the satisfaction of having their stock distinguished. You ask," said the old general, "do I mean we had no prize or purse? Never a purse, my friend, but usually a piece of silver or an elegantly wrought cup. There is nothing in all this world of value more than several magnificent loving cups I inherit. You see in the 'South Carolina Jockey club' there was a rule that if the cup was won three times consecutively by the party who entered the horse it became his permanently. My grandfather's Flash Light won in 1842 the handsomest trophy I have. It is a massive gold vase-shaped affair engraved elaborately.

"Well you may say you would like to have lived south in those days," said the general warmly. "Yes, those were glorious times, and the turfmen were bred in a lofty, honest school. I can assure you there was no corruption and thievery tolerated by the old south turfman, but—." Here the old general broke off abruptly and smiled in a quizzical way as he glanced around the table.

"Now, if I'm not mistaken gentlemen, you would like to hear something of the famous mint julep of that day, and possibly you would enjoy a demonstration of its merits. You ask rust the mint—be—bruised? Why, of course not! From my early boyhood I remember hearing my father call to old Jerry, the butler, when ordering him to make a julep, his final order would be, 'remember don't bruise the mint.' I can now see the black face scowl with injured dignity as he would courtsey low and turn toward the mint plot which flourished luxuriously near by.

Speculators Are Getting Their Thrills In the Oklahoma Oil Fields

CLEVELAND, Okla.—The oil fields of Oklahoma, especially in the so-called "wildcat" territory, are daily bringing unexpected thrills to inexperienced speculators. Not to mention only chance for the man with small capital to dip in is at the beginning, when it is possible to lease the oil and gas rights on land for small sums.

Leases acquired at from 50 cents to $1 or $5 an acre often jump to $40 or $100 an acre in a week when oil is struck. This is when the small speculator takes his profits, as he is without capital to sink wells, and would be in danger of striking a "dry" hole and going to smash, even if he had a comfortable sum for development purposes.

A company of tenderfoot speculators got possession of a lot of acreage in this vicinity. The outlook was promising, but the company did not have enough money to begin drilling. Several days ago something happened to the members of the company that was not unlike a dynamite explosion. All are still looking at each other, dumfounded and amazed.

The tenderfeet had looked over the situation carefully, and reached the conclusion that it was about time to turn loose. If they should hold on too long somebody might strike a dry well on adjacent laud, and this would make their lease worthless. All agreed that the thing to do was to sell out. None of the men had ever been as much as a thousand dollars in one pile in his life.

Conspirators Agree on Price.

The first important step was to fix the selling price. They must put it high. One suggested that $15,000 would be pretty fair. An abler financier stuck for $20,000. After much discussion there was general agreement that $25,000 would be the bottom price. Then the plan was boldly to ask $35,000, and cut off $10,000 if the prospective purchaser should show signs of cold feet.

As a matter of fact, the tenderfeet, in their inexperience, had only a vague idea of how good or how bad were the possibilities of their lease holdings. The agents of the big producing company—a company that commanded millions, if necessary—had been in the field, and knew as nearly as such things may be known that a big oil pool was not far away.

An agent of this company went to see the company of tenderfeet, with authority to buy what they had. The tenderfeet gathered round him, each with the look of a conspirator.

"Gentlemen," said the agent, "my company is in the market for more production and wants to buy your holdings, for which it is willing to pay a fair price. This is purely a business transaction and I have no time to stall around with you. I am authorized to offer you"—

One of the tenderfeet had started in to say "Nothing less than $35,000 goes with us," but was kicked on the shins by a tenderfoot that sat next to him. The agent continued:

"The sum of $250,000. Think it over. You'll not get a better offer."

Well Is Still to Be Dug.

The tenderfeet gasped and then shook as if they had the ague. One of them managed, finally, to say, chatteringly, that a "little time would be necessary for consultation."

Did they sell? They did not. They stole in an inner room, locked the door, pounded each other on the back and danced a Highland fling. Then, as one, they charged the agent of the big producing company with being a tricky, designing person—trying to get something for much less than it was worth. They agreed that their land must have a fabulous value if such an offer as the agent had proposed could be made right off the bat.

So the tenderfeet told the agent to go away and not annoy them, as they were no longer in the market. The land has not been drilled. It may prove dry when it is drilled.

Selling of Stocks Principally Realizing on Speculative Profit

Not for Months Had the Bulls Seen Such Profits in a Week. No Aggressive Operations on the Bear Side

(By Associated Press.)

N. Y., Sat., May 2.—A new decline in stocks today brought the edge of the week's account. The movement was downward from first to last, but there was no real weakness and in a majority of cases losses were small.

After much an autumn as occurred this week the reaction came in natural sequence. The advance of the last few days put the bonnie shares 2 to 5 points higher. Not for months had the bulls seen such profits in a week. Selling today was principally realizing on an obvious move and there was no aggressive bear operations. Some offerings were accepted readily at concessions and it is evident that the bulls ing faction was taking on stocks in the expectation of a further upturn, pending the conference which alone should result in the Mexican situation.

Buyers and sellers were heaviest in those issues which have been under the troubles in the bituminous fields and today's profit taking in copper, coal and steel held up fairly well. Much of the late trading when it gave way on reports of further cuts in prices of pig iron and evidence of continued poor financial conditions of track leased were securities. Both common and preferred showed a sharp decline in the latter's share made a new low mark.

The gold export movement, also the day, developed little significance today. With the exception of the engagement of $1,000,000 for Paris.

The bank statement was a disappointment, though it showed on actual cash gain of more than $1,000,000 and a slight larger increase in surplus. A cash gain of $20,000,000 has been predicted.

Bonds were irregular. Total sales $1,3000,000. United States 2's declined 1/4 and Panama 2's 1/2 on the week.

IMPORTS OF FOODSTUFFS SHOW GOOD INCREASE

Imports of practically all leading classes of foodstuffs have shown a large and in many larger extent during the first eight months of the current fiscal year than during the same period of the two preceding years.

Cattle to the value of $10,000,000 in excess of the value of the preceding fiscal year were admitted and value of breadstuffs has more than doubled. Fruits and nuts have increased and dairy and poultry products about doubled, compared with the imports of 1913 or 1912. Following are official statistics for the periods indicated:

	1911-12	1912-13	1913-14
Animals	$ 15,702,742	$ 16,911,783	$ 26,911,783
Breadstuffs	25,204,653	11,161,868	10,373,451
Coffee	12,162,273	10,126,853	17,241,377
Fish	7,450,142	7,450,142	7,450,142
Fruits and nuts	34,202,841	34,922,023	39,335,229
Meats and dairy prod.	19,676,848	9,737,047	9,172,906
Veg oils	21,296,206	24,004,617	19,150,867
Vegetables	5,147,402	5,345,402	5,345,402
Vegetables	10,670,750	8,847,550	10,435,517
Total	$173,709,948	$158,948,215	$173,910,766

These nine classes of foodstuffs represent a value for these eight months of $173,910,766. The increase in approximately $31,000,000 over the total for the eight months ending with February, and $46,000,000 more than for the eight months ended February, 1913.

The heavy imports of live stock under the Underwood tariff from beasts of burden to the amount for the great increase in cattle values to $10,000,000. Meat and dairy products also reported repeatent Argentine and Australian meats and eggs and other dairy products from European and Asiatic countries.

EXPORTS OF FOODSTUFFS.

Exports of principal meats and dairy products for the nine months ending with March were the largest for the period in four years. The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce gives the value as $106,910,903. This compares with $89,695,137 a year ago and $101,562,256 for the nine months ended March, 1912. Principal breadstuffs exports for the past nine months were raised at $125,278,289, compared with $159,737,196 in 1912-13, followed oil exports fell off about one-third from last year to total value

COTTON GOSSIP.

Times-Democrat says:

Yesterday's decline can hardly be said to have affected any considerable change in the outlook. Spinners' takings for the week were less than 25,000 bales than the takings in the same week of last year, but it has been generally understood that a shrinkage was inevitable. On the other hand the accounts from Texas are glowing and the central belt has best valuable days, if not the best. Aside the extremely moderate increase of acreage foreshadowed by the Journal of Commerce and Tobacco figures suggest that, even with some allowance, this item may have been put too high by the bulls themselves. But after all the elements cast the insertia determine the size of a crop, and these are running much in favor of a big acreage and a free use of fertilizers may diminish the pitfalls.

Yesterday's decline was somewhat accentuated from the fact that New York dealt in April contracts to the extent of 5,000 bales over current month, thus compelling a readjustment of about 40 points over the old. But this movement was natural as it supposes the change which the adoption of government crop reports and consequent difference in April and May values should occasion in the Mexican situation.

Buyers and sellers were heaviest in those issues which have been under the troubles in the bituminous fields and today's profit taking in copper, coal and steel held up fairly well. IMPORTS OF FOODSTUFFS SHOW GOOD INCREASE

Imports of practically all leading classes of foodstuffs have shown a large and in many larger extent during the first eight months of the current fiscal year than during the same period of the two preceding years.

Cattle to the value of $10,000,000 in excess of the value of the preceding fiscal year were admitted and value of breadstuffs has more than doubled. Fruits and nuts have increased and dairy and poultry products about doubled, compared with the imports of 1913 or 1912. Following are official statistics for the periods indicated:

	1911-12	1912-13	1913-14
Animals	$ 15,702,742	$ 16,911,783	$ 26,911,783
Breadstuffs	25,204,653	11,161,868	10,373,451
Coffee	12,162,273	10,126,853	17,241,377
Fish	7,450,142	7,450,142	7,450,142
Fruits and nuts	34,202,841	34,922,023	39,335,229
Meats and dairy prod.	19,676,848	9,737,047	9,172,906
Veg oils	21,296,206	24,004,617	19,150,867
Vegetables	5,147,402	5,345,402	5,345,402
Vegetables	10,670,750	8,847,550	10,435,517
Total	$173,709,948	$158,948,215	$173,910,766

These nine classes of foodstuffs represent a value for these eight months of $173,910,766. The increase in approximately $31,000,000 over the total for the eight months ending with February, and $46,000,000 more than for the eight months ended February, 1913.

The heavy imports of live stock under the Underwood tariff from beasts of burden to the amount for the great increase in cattle values to $10,000,000. Meat and dairy products also reported repeatent Argentine and Australian meats and eggs and other dairy products from European and Asiatic countries.

EXPORTS OF FOODSTUFFS.

Exports of principal meats and dairy products for the nine months ending with March were the largest for the period in four years. The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce gives the value as $106,910,903. This compares with $89,695,137 a year ago and $101,562,256 for the nine months ended March, 1912. Principal breadstuffs exports for the past nine months were raised at $125,278,289, compared with $159,737,196 in 1912-13, followed oil exports fell off about one-third from last year to total value

FIDELITY FRUIT & PRODUCE COMPANY'S MARKET LETTER

ATLANTA, May 2.—Receipts continue heavy in all kinds of Florida vegetables, and prices were forced lower this week.

Strawberries, cucumbers, beans, lettuce, English peas, and new potatoes are all very plentiful, and on account of the reasonable prices, they are selling in large quantities in fact our market is being cleaned up every day.

Eggs and poultry would be going to lots of Atlantians to know that it takes from one-fourth to one-third more than the amount here to supply the demand here, when they are willing to pay anything like a reasonable price.

Irish potatoes are a little higher, but staple vegetables we have, taking from four to six cents per pound, are very reasonable.

Strawberries have been coming this week in large quantities, and have been selling very low. The heavy shipments to this market were caused by the fact that the Florida season is fast drawing to a close, berries getting ripe, and the shipper wanting to get them off, and carry to the northern markets.

Cucumbers are coming in rapid gait. It is surprising how the demand holds up, even through the strawberry season, which as a rule almost cuts off the demand for grapefruit and oranges. Shippers of both California and Florida oranges are asking an advance of 40c per box over last week's prices.

Apples are in light receipt, and the demand rather poor the past ten days.

Onions are advancing as the warm weather comes on, and the demand is increasing. The market has been very badly over stocked on cabbage all this week. Some cars have been returned rather than pay freight on them.

Tomatoes have been very scarce this week, priced up like a crate. All dealers are making special effort to get a supply of goods for the Atlanta Fruit Association; and it is believed they will be plenty here to take care of the demand, although it is supposed to be heavy.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF NEW ORLEANS COTTON MARKET

(By WALTER PARKER.

NEW ORLEANS, May 2.—A week of bad weather, followed by the bullish but unfavorable week-end statistics brought comfort to the bulls on Friday and Saturday, and July contracts at 12.29 as against 12½ cents for standard middling at New Orleans. The week, where the supply of good seed is limited, has been one of rain and again. In the east the crop has made favorable progress. Cotton has responded to the favorable moon largely on prospective legislation. Fear of hostile legislation reduced operations in the cotton contract division to minimum. Now the trade feels fairly confident that the lower house will start in with predicted activity, however principles, and that house and senate will get together on the issues that have really vexed the cotton trade and industry generally. Such a new will curb speculation and open the way for the cotton trade to expand and do business on a more legitimate basis.

Meanwhile, the price position of March and April is far from satisfactory, and what may be expected to result from scientific legislation remains problematical. The spread of March closed at 11.65@11.70, while April closed at 12.06@12.08. The extreme of the sharp premium carried by April over March is found in the fact that New York's record contract which is based on government standard type good enough into which to deliver, is not allowed, congress enact a law along the lines expecting effective at once. Spot cotton here and at New Orleans will also be promptly adjusted and established, and brokerage charges will further sustain the proper parity between the two markets, which will be reflected in the market for future conditions generally.

Meanwhile, the into sight movement was smaller than last year, and henceforth is expected to show considerable decrease, but at the week-end exports were only 61,217 bales, against 107,000 last year, and 69,000 this week last year; for the season thus far 8,981,701 as against 7,800,000 last year.

Spinners' takings also made a less favorable showing, being 24,000 bales this week as against 240,000 last year. Thus far this season spinners have taken 6,000,000 bales, against 11,314,000 last year.

Favorable reports continue to come from Memphis reports continue to come from Memphis reports continue to be broadened considerably, any now most styles of cotton are selling there, the premium being on only the better styles worn in active demand.

It is said that the world will have to be full on consumption in both the United States and Europe during the coming year, as the first half of the year the continent took 200,000 bales more than the first half of the year, and quite favorable throughout the eastern belt but the reports that come from the western belt are heavy producing parts of the southwest where undesirable rains and cool weather have set in start fully two weeks late, and more in less related places. The outlook for consumption, spinners' takings, exports and all statistical figures have all ended in prospects for the question of the old crop. These bullish features have been offset, however, by the fact that the yarn market said to be heavily stocking with goods and the demand for goods has been rather below the market. Finished gods sales at the mills reports that orders have been small and the entire country reports a disposition to adhere to the policy of a hand to mouth buying, and a careful "watching and waiting" attitude. The cause to have become altogether too popular with the trade. This prevailing bullish policy deprives them of profits in that it prohibits them from taking advantage of the bull side both in buying the raw article and selling their goods. It is a matter of the better of the lower stocks of goods and means higher prices for cotton and goods, generally speaking.

There has also been some disappointment in the failure of the farmers to respond more sensitively to the heralded operations of promised legislation. The fact is that the farmer had considerable to do with this.

The farmer has been in a position to take profits from the rising advances of the past few days, but he has not done so. The farmer has been more than since the first part of March, and has always been in a position to cover and sell with general speculation. The farmer has not been readily found. Yet there is by the same token the unlikelihood of any appreciable general liquidation.

The farmer has cleverly drawn on the bullish situation and the approaching decision regarding the national rate case and congressional legislation it would seem that construction has been placed on the side of the latter of the argument from now on. The wonderful wheat crop prospects and the fact that the country is a business that should not be lost sight of and that the farmer has been receiving 12 cents for 13,000,000 bales of cotton in this year of prosperity has been responsible for the fact that this figure will be added to bring about higher prices and a general confidence to continue in favor the buying side on the actual basis. Those who are conservative or July for 15c. Those willing to participate in the speculation favor the buying side. Favorable weather should bring the new crops ahead rapidly from record levels in the south and retain a buying opportunity.

Cotton Seed Oil Liquidation.

Cotton seed oil has been taken by some as an abandonment of the bull side of cotton, but it has been maintained all season on the long side of cotton seed oil, and has been based on the certain character of selling of distant options on the theory that there is to be a material cut in the acreage. The general weakness in land and steady competition of other oils makes it difficult for the bull oil at this level until some months hence. Cotton seed oil is bringing a premium over the new crop prospects. We still believe conservative sales on the bulges will prove profitable.

HAYWARD & CLARK COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, May 2.—Our Liverpool correspondent cables that Manchester and manufacturers are requesting to keep their mills going during the season. Demand for cotton has broadened and completes every from the lowest grades to the best extra staples seem neglected.

Liverpool was rather steady over all the week-end liquidation. Futures and spots one point lower; sales 10,000.

Our market opened easier this morning on favorable weather reports and lower prices from Wall street, and centered on July and August. Trade is quiet, awaiting the eventual middle of the time. July there is over a cent and a half above the spot basis. Receipts of cotton from the south Stock is reported to be very small at the mills, nevertheless bear selling continues.

The crop summary of the Financial Chronicle for the week is bullish, pointing out the cool and wet weather in the east and damage and delay to seed in the south, with a pause in the planting.

The map shows fair weather in the northwest quarter, rather cool and cloudy in the rest of the belt, with rain generally falling in Texas and Oklahoma. The rainfall was mostly reporting 1 to 2 inches, with 2 to 3 inches somewhere, some heavier rains fell. Indications are for clearing off in Texas, Oklahoma and Atlantics, but unsettled rainy weather is indicated west of the river with little appearance coming on east Texas. Statistics for the week ending tonight will be very favorable to the crops, large exports and loss in stock, larger receipts.

Pressure continued in New York until near the close, causing weak and lower prices. July there dropped to 13.56. There has been steady buying on weakness, the market should be well liquidated and interest rather light. We look for a steady market with a ruling factor next week. Liverpool is due Monday 3 hour.

War Effect Has Short Boom on Opening of Week. War in Mexico Cannot but Stimulate Business at Present—Economic Losses in This Contest Will Be Negligible—Foreign Markets Nervous—General Business Not as Brisk as Might Be

NEW YORK, May 2.—Wall street entered upon the new week with the effects of a cessation of the disturbances in the Mexican territory, those who were carrying heavy short commitments found that they had greatly erred in prophesying the true course of the events. The reports from Washington to effect that both Huerta and President Wilson had agreed upon terms of mediation came as an invigorating tonic to a market that had hitherto floundered around the lowest level it has seen in many a day; especially was this true of those shares which depend for their production upon Mexican fields, or upon the commercial intercourse of the United States with the territory south of the Rio Grande. A notable example of the change in sentiment as related to the Mexican situation was the increase of 15 points in the quotations of Mexican Petroleum in one short session, followed almost immediately by an equal loss when it was rumored that the forces of Villa were contemplating the destruction of the company's property.

W. S. Cousins

Viewed from the standpoint of general business, it can hardly be said that a war with Mexico is attended with disastrous effects upon the business of the country, considered in its own light, the expense of such an undertaking would be in the additional outlay of money needed for equipment and munitions, the value of property destroyed, and the unproductive time lost in the army. It should not be forgotten that the men on the ships now being sent against Mexico have to be provided for in the regular maintenance of the service of war it is only logical that a considerable expansion of the maintenance of our military departments should be undertaken. It is good, therefore, the ready money needed for these operations, the Mexican problem is not a financial one, and it is exceedingly doubtful if it will be related to some extent, to stimulate, instead of handicap business. Such money as is spent will be spent at home, and will flow into the channels of the industries that cater to the equipment of military farces, as well as to the general foodstuffs industries.

There can of course be no doubt as to the final outcome of hostilities in Mexico. The only question that concerns us is, therefore, the immediate effect of the conflict as related to money and business. It is conceded that a war with Mexico would be attended with a large increase in the profits of railroads and indeed of all interests concerned in the supply of goods to the government are large and that the general circulation of money is greatly increased. The natural effect of such conditions is to produce a feeling of optimism in business circles to furnish a supply of funds that would find its way to the stock market.

As to the ultimate effect upon values, it is regarded in conservative quarters that the ultimate effect upon expense and losses incidental to the "war" have, in newspaper dispatches, been greatly exaggerated. It is not likely that it will check the production of necessities or interfere with the growth of business in the United States than it would be if the various factions there were left to fight their differences out without interference by this country. There will, however, be two effects which the investor must seriously consider. The first is the probable increase in taxation and increased revenue on the part of the government, which will tend to stiffen the money market. So far as can be seen at present, however, the effect upon the money market will be slight, and there is no reason to expect more than a moderate stiffening of rates. There will be an increase of taxes either by resorting to entirely new forms of taxationor increasing rate of taxes already levied. The second point which the investor must consider is the possible effect of the check to tendencies which have been developing so alarmingly right the evils in this present economic situation and establish the basis for a condition of solid prosperity later on. The process of liquidation of labor will probably be interfered with, but, on the other hand, there is no reason to believe that the immediate demand which we have been in prospect for some time past will not materialize, although the foundations of it will not be quite as strong as they would otherwise have become.

Should a war also assist in the solution of the problem of unemployment, since in the stimulation of production, more workmen are absorbed by necessary. Should the war last for an extended period, there will be a material reduction in the ranks of the unemployed, and Coxey will be fewer recruits than have been attracted to him in the past few years.

FOREIGN MARKETS AND FOREIGN TRADE.

The foreign markets, being so much farther removed from the scene of hostilities, and dealing, as they do, in securities shares on a large scale, have been extremely restless and agitated. As a result London and the financial centers most actively associated with Mexican securities have taken a more distrustful view of the effects of a war than do home markets. The only natural resultant of this policy is a heavy liquidation of what securities are now held, and a refusal to take on any new commitments until peace is more firmly established.

As regards the foreign commerce, figures for March, just available, show that this month established a new high record for imports, in the face of a backward domestic trade. Exports, on the other hand, were disappointingly small, leaving but $5,000,000 in favor of the country, as the result of the month. This is taken to mean the failure of the new tariff bill to have had been expected of it, and to increase the doubts of those who have never been entirely favorable to its principles.

The situation apparent is one to cause an uneasy feeling in an uncertain state at this time. Important interests who have recently made nation-wide observations found that in nearly all lines of trade there was a halting disposition and growing hesitancy with regard to business expansion. This situation is by no means confined to any particular section, but may be whole country. On the other hand, it was found by those who have traversed the crop sections of the country that never at this time of the year was the winter wheat crop appeared to be in such a perfect and healthy condition.

Western iron and steel trade continues to drag and and the leading interests in the industry are in a quandary as to the future. There is little hope of improvement from any section until a decision be reached regarding the long pending rate investigation, and in spite of the dullness and dragging disposition of the and those who have made a close study of conditions regard the market as a temporary state, and with the rendering of the rate decision there will be a marked improvement in the trade whether or not favors the railroads.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF NAVAL STORES MARKET

Refusal of South Africa to Permit Exports of Breeding Stock No Longer Menace

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The raising of Angora goats in the United States is now a demonstrated success, according to a report just published by the United States department of agriculture under the title, "The Angora Goat," farmers' bulletin 575. The industry, says the bulletin, is indeed an established here that growers need not be inconvenienced by the action of South Africa in prohibiting the exportation of Angoras, for the quantity of pure blood in this country is already sufficient to meet all requirements. In the opinion of experts, the best Angora mohair fleeces now equal any grown in South Africa or Asia Minor, the original home of the Angora.

Although nearly every state in the union now possesses its flocks, the southwest and northwest are the sections well adapted to the industry, in particular the large areas recently logged off in the northwest. There the Angora not only saves labor herself, but helps to clear away the brush, which if allowed to grow uncleared, might easily become a dangerous fire trap. Thus it is often said that the Angora works and pays for its board at the same time.

It is saying more and more, for the value of the fleece or mohair is increasing steadily. Formerly the use of mohair depended largely upon the prevailing fashion that its price would follow from year to year. This condition, however, is rapidly changing, as new uses for mohair are continually arising, from automobile tops and table covers to dress goods and curled false hair, and today a grower is assured of a reasonably steady market. The price of course varies with the quality. The best fleeces, the bulletin says, on the average from 42 to 55 cents a pound. The weight of a fleece has a very wide range, but in 1909 the average for Oregon was found to be 8.7 pounds and for Texas 7.81, on account of the greater heat, however, and the damage of shedding, Angoras in the southwest are frequently shorn twice a year—a fact which must be taken into consideration in all calculations.

This practice of clipping twice a year is in many ways a drawback to the industry, since it tends to lower the average grade of fleece, as in ginning. Mohair as good as any can be grown in this country, but the average quality is not today considered to be as good as the foreign. About 2,000,000 pounds are annually imported, principally from Turkey and spun with the domestic product. Six inches is the shortest length of fleece usually staplized, and, because of shearing twice a year, much Texas and New Mexico mohair falls below this standard. Where the fleece is allowed to grow for twelve months, the average length is 10 inches and in the best flocks it is not unusual to get 11 to 12 inches. Buttons, the sweepstakes buck at the El Paso show in 1910, is an example of what is possible. His fleece weighed 18 pounds measured 20½ inches in length and sold for 75 cents a pound. This, of course, the product of ordinary commercial conditions. It implies a considerable amount of care and intelligent attention.

The birth rate is approximately 67 per cent, but the best methods of caring for the does and fawns as high as 126 per cent. Since the kids get ready to shelter from the weather skill and industry during the breeding season are the shortest path of caring for the flock at this time are discussed in some detail in the new bulletin. Otherwise, the management of Angoras does not differ greatly from that of sheep.

While the Angora goat needs attention, it is adaptable and as far as temperature is concerned should flourish in any part of the United States. In Nevada the flocks face the heavy snowfalls with equanimity as long as a dry shelter is provided for them at night and during the heat in th southwest frequently makes it necessary to shear twice a year in order to prevent shedding. It does not otherwise affect the health of the flocks. Rich land in the native state of the goat does not thoroughly suit them when left to themselves. Pure water is also essential.

Otherwise the Angora is not particular. It will feed with cattle and sheep, and, though in some danger of being kicked, with horses also. As a matter of fact however, the goat prefers a certain amount of rough pasture and is particularly happy when clearing on brush land. There is one instance of a flock of 600 being allowed free grazing in a California forest reserve in order to keep the strips of cleared land between the fire breaks free from seeds and vegetation. Settlers in the northwest find the Angora most serviceable in browsing off the brush on their new lands, and one settler in one company purchased a flock to keep its right of way clear and attractive. On every hand the danger of injury to the fleece must, however, be kept in mind.

As has already been said, the Angora can be bred sufficiently pure for practical purposes from the stock already in this country and there is no need o further importations for breeding purposes. Some years ago, however, this was not believed to be the case and in 1903 the sultan of Turkey endeavored to preserve for its dominions the monopoly of the breed thereof by prohibiting the exportation of the live animal. The example was followed in South Africa, but it was too late. Some of the best blood was already in America and today other countries are buying of us. Flocks have been shipped recently to Brazil and the Argentine. Various companies have already been formed for the development of the industry in this country and a large quantity of the annual product is increasing rapidly. In 1913 it is estimated that 5,000,000 pounds of mohair were grown in the United States. Fuller details of the management and care of flocks are to be found in Farmers' Bulletin 573. "The Angora Goat," which will be sent free on application to the department of agriculture.

AUSTIN AND BAIT GRAIN LETTER.

NEW YORK, May 2. Wheat: This market has now assumed the leadership in activity of grains with interesting news on both sides of the list. Crop news and prospects are undoubtedly the best ever known and this has brought out the statement from James to Patten that June 1 will see the country of a combined winter and spring wheat crop yield of 900,000,000 bushels, and if these stupendous figures were reached is expected what to sell at 70 cents. Of course the "if" in this case is important. In the meantime shipments from Argentine, Australia, Russia and India are light and there is a corresponding demand for our own wheat with the weekly figures showing a balance in favor of export. The market will, however, follow crop news from this time on, and if it continues as favorable as it has, of late, lower levels could be easily made, for the market becomes easily overbought and good rallies show profits to those trading on the sharp breaks. Sales should be limited to good bulges, as the least adverse crop news may find limited offerings on an oversold market.

Corn and oats: Wet weather has delayed our planting a little, but made for a good season in the ground, though our own crop conditions are not as favorable as last year. Corn and May requirements. These rallies are just the kind to anticipate the heavy Argentine shipments later on, and we still think July and September corn will drag down considerably lower until something shows up to estimate. Oats seems fairly progressive, however, but have lost considerable in the southwest, and other positions similar. We do not market slow until there is something to anticipate.

Provisions—The weakness in lard is depressing the entire list, notwithstanding moderate receipts of stock. Profiter should operate steadily from now on, but there is still a feeling of antagonism to high prices which are many in the ranks of the unemployed. There is but little to change the price of lard and this may bring ribs and pork lower without some incentive in the way news, although the packers are lending support on the breaks and the investment may be slow in returns, but seems less risky than selling.—M. F. Austin.

Cancelling of Warehouse Receipts Caused Shorts to Cover in Grain

Belief That Stocks Would Be Reduced to an Impressive Extent in Near Future Caused Advance in Prices

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, May 2.—Belief that wheat stocks here would be reduced to an impressive extent in the near future had much to do today with causing the market to rally. The outcome was a steady close at a shade to 1-2@5-8c net advance. Corn wound up 1-2c to 7-8c above last night; oats with a drop of 1-8c to 1-2@5-8c, and provisions unchanged to 8c higher.

Cancelling of warehouse receipts on a large scale arouses misgivings among shorts in wheat. More than half a million bushels of No. 2 hard is reported as having been ordered out of Chicago elevators yesterday, and there were notices of Lake charters having been taken for 750,000 bushels of wheat from here in the last forty-eight hours. Moreover, cash trading today in old wheat here exceed 250,000 bushels, chiefly to millers and exporters. Cancelling of warehouse receipts for 2,000,000 bushels new for export in August and September, the largest aggregate of such transactions so far this season.

May delivery led the advance in wheat, although the biggest trade was in the new crop months. One sizing elevator concern alone purchased fully 1,000,000 bushels of September. Principal offerings came from some of yesterday's buyers who were rendered timid on account of an early decline brought about mainly through good rain all the way from north Dakota to the central part of Texas, and because of sensationally bearish state crop reports from Nebraska.

Shorts in corn evinced nervousness from the outset, and covered freely, especially for May. The chief incentives were the higher cables, the slowness of good deliveries here, and the prospect of stocks here showing a big decrease for the week. There have been general defaults on April contracts for shipments from Argentina. Expected liveral clearing out of oats stocks here led to an upturn for the oats market.

Buying, said to be for Milwaukee packers, gave provisions a lift. Demand, however, did not arise until quotations had undergone some setback.

A CONVERSATION OVERHEARD ON A STREET CAR

Two men were on a street car coming to town and they had lived in the same neighborhood for years. The Fat Man had a regular job and the little Skinny Man was only temporarily employed, as usual during elections. This is about all that the writer, who sat behind them, heard of their conversation:

Skinny Man—How about the sheriff's race?

Fat Man—Well, there seem to be two leading candidates and the race seems to be warming up.

Skinny Man—Three men are in the race, you know.

Fat Man—Yes, I heard of the Newton County man being in the race but I don't find any enthusiasm for him. It's between Mayo and Mangum.

Skinny Man—Well, I guess you're right, but I'm canvassing for Mangum, so I boost for both. All the votes Wright gets he takes away from Mayo, because Mayo is leading in the opposition to the present sheriff.

Fat Man—But is that fair?

Skinny Man—Oh, well—you know they say all is fair in war and politics.

Fat Man—That was years ago, though.

Skinny Man—I don't see why the people should kick Mangum out of office after he has been in for six years.

Fat Man—Well you see he was only elected this last time for two years and this was a gift from the people. So if another clean, honest and efficient citizen wants to run against him Mangum must not get mad and say they are trying to kick him out. He doesn't own the office and every two years it goes back to the people and they name a successor in the office.

Skinny Man—Yes, but he's given satisfaction and he is getting old now and he wants to be re-elected.

Fat Man—As to whether he has acceptably filled the office—is a question the people will decide on election day. No doubt he is getting old and if he lives he'll get older, but I suspect the older he gets the more he'll want the office. Besides it's not altogether a question of satisfaction, some folks believe in reasonable rotation of office and say six years is long enough.

Skinny Man—Well, Mangum has been in a long time and has been looking after his own while he was in office. He's got his political fences all built up and I think he's a politician of long time. Why,' I know of 1,500 votes in one bunch that are solid for him—and he's got a big campaign fund let me tell you that. Money talks in politics as well as anything else.

Fat Man—Yes, I have heard about the 1,500 votes in one block and also the immense campaign fund, but I guess you could count that though the better. Mayo doesn't make any point on that, be it said to his credit. The thing you don't want to overlook is that there are over seventeen thousand citizens registered and 1,500 is but one-eleventh or twelfth of the number.

Skinny Man—But where will Mayo get his strength? The people of this county are not going to vote for a policeman for Sheriff.

Fat Man—I am not connected with the Mayo ticket, so I don't know all about his strength. All I know is what I hear folks say and what I remember to have read in the papers. If you remember, and not a year ago several men were spoken of to run against Mangum this time, and there seemed to be enough opposition to beat him. All these candidates got together, except Mr. Wright, and decided to elect the most popular man among them and let him make the race. Some few worked on Mayo's ticket and some just went to work for him. Mayo is a popular and hard working man and he seems to have a fine lot of men for deputies. In a way he is the People's candidate and if elected will be a model sheriff.

Skinny Man—Yep, maybe so—but what about his being a policeman?

Fat Man—Yes, he has been a policeman a long time and a good one, too, and that is the word of complaint. He has worked seven hundred men under him and not a word can you hear against him. Why they all praise him! He has been before the people as their servant and the people know that if he has been a faithful police officer and has been a politician of himself properly that this experience has fitted him to be sheriff. It isn't right to sneer at him because he's a policeman, unless you claim he hasn't been a good one. Why, I've heard folks call him "policeman" when I'd run out of his talking points and the people are with him on it, too.

Skinny Man—Well, Mangum has got a mighty clever crowd of deputies and they have lots of friends.

Fat Man—Well, I guess you're right about that. So has Mayo and more of them. But one thing is certain Mayo's deputies don't campaign for themselves, they always work and pray for Mayo as the Head of their ticket and he will be the Head too.

Skinny Man—But what is Mayo going to do with all these deputies? Mangum only has about fifteen on his card and Mayo has twenty-four.

Fat Man—Well, Mayo shows the public all of his men. It takes at least twenty-five men, deputies, special officers and guards to run the office properly. I'll answer your question by saying that all these Mayo deputies are going to work. Mayo has to pay them, the people get the larger service and Mangum should worry!

At this juncture in the conversation the Skinny Man started to get off the car and the Fat Man called to him: "Say, if Mangum is running on any platform it must be a treadmill for he's not getting anywhere!"

The Slim Man slammed the door and a roar of laughter went up from the Fat Man and the good natured passengers on the car.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE DRY GOODS MARKET

NEW YORK, May 2.—Forward orders for cotton goods continue very light and prices on the medium priced lines in wholesale markets are easier. Heavy duck is firmer at the advanced quotations announced a week ago, but sales have as yet made no inroads to speak of on the abundant stocks. The leaking of certain of the specialties such as tire duck and certain grades of light weight ducks are busy.

Prints and print cloths are quiet with sales reported on only a few lots for delivery in the next thirty to sixty days. Ginghams are quiet, although mills are steady on the best known jobbing lines, but easy on the low priced embroidered lines. Wash goods are now moving in their normal volume at this period of the year, and the new seersucker has had an influence in delaying normal retail sales. Both yarn and cloth mills are beginning to curtail for their output because of a lack of forward orders.

Prices on cotton goods are as follows: Print cloths, 28-inch, 64x64s, 3¾c, nominal; 64x60s, 3¾c; 38½-inch, 64x64s, 3 5-16; standard southern brown sheeting 5 9-16c; 4-yard 36-inch, 5½c; standard print 5½c; standard staple gingham 6¼c; wide gingham 8c.

DRY GOODS MARKET.

NEW YORK, May 2.—The improvement was in the market for duck today, and while no large sales were reported during the time, there is a large scale is expected next week. A moderate business was done in other lines, especially brown sheetings. Business generally was quiet and peanut fattened 1¼ to 2c under.

Cattle scarce, market strong and higher.

Hog receipts light, market slightly lower.

Bonds for Grady Would Be Fine Step, Declares Mayor

Mr. Woodward Declares City Can Well Afford Proposed Issue and Makes Stirring Plea for Greater Hospital

In a statement given out for publication this morning, Mayor James G. Woodward drives home some of the points upon which he bases his advocacy of the $750,000 bond issue for Grady hospital.

Mayor Woodward asserts he was pledged when he entered office to favor no more bond issues until the city treasury was in sound shape. It has reached that stage, he says, and Atlanta can afford the bond issue.

One of the main reasons why he favors the issue, he says, is that the pay wards of the new institution will care for the interest on the bonds and redeem them as they mature.

Here is his statement in full To the People of Atlanta:

The bonds contemplating a larger and more efficient Grady hospital should, and I hope will be voted by the people on the 5th instant.

It is well understood that I took the position when I entered office that I would oppose the issuance of any more bonds until such time as the city should get her treasury in better condition financially. It is true that I found on entering office a great number of illegal contracts and debts hanging over the city to the amount of nearly $700,000. Through hard effort by eliminating a part of one contract and the discounting of others by paying cash, that $100,000 indebtedness has been reduced to $130,00, and the city has saved about $105,000 in cash money. So it will be seen that the city of Atlanta is now entering upon an era when her financial condition will be in much better shape. I therefore feel that the people of Atlanta can well afford to vote for the issuance of bonds for Grady hospital. This fact is made more impressive by reason of the building of the pay ward to the hospital. It is reasonable to estimate that 70 per cent or 75 per cent of that pay ward will, on an average, be occupied all the time. That being the case, the bond issue of $750,000 for Grady hospital will not become a burden upon the people of Atlanta or the treasury of the city, but the income from the pay department will pay both the interest on the bonds and redeem the bonds at maturity. This is one of the main reasons why I favor the bond issue

The present Grady hospital is rather in an antiquated condition, it was built twenty-odd years ago and has naturally depreciated in condition. It is not more than half large enough to take care of the demands made upon it. A great many patients have to be discharged from the hospital when really they should remain in bed. This is made necessary by having to provide for more urgent cases. Besides, there are a great number of people who receive treatment at the Grady hospital only by examinations and prescriptions. After receiving this treatment they have to return to their homes, when in reality they should be placed in the hospital until cured. This manner of treatment naturally creates criticism of the hospital and its management. It is evident to my mind that we should change this condition by making the hospital large enough to take care of all who desire to go there.

The idea that there should be no pay ward to the Grady hospital does not appear to me to be sound. It is well known that where a public institution of that character exists, kept up by public funds, that the very best of supplies and instruments for operation and the treatment of disease is secured, therefore I feel that any taxpayer in Atlanta who is burdened to keep up the charitable part of it should have an opportunity to go to the Grady hospital if he desires. It is not right that a person, because he is able to pay for such service, should be denied of it because he is able to pay. The fact that there is a pay department at the Grady hospital would naturally relieve it of the odium of being entirely charitable. It is true that a great number of deserving people are forced, through financial adversity, to take the advantage of such an institution as this and if it is provided with both pay and charity, it is not known to the world that the patient is receiving charitable treatment. The $750,000 worth of bonds, if voted upon by the people, will not only double the present capacity of the Grady hospital, but will provide places for contagious diseases for both white and colored, and provide a much needed dormitory for the nurses. It is little less than a disgrace that we should demand service from those noble ladies who go there to become professional nurses, and yet not provide comfortable quarters for them.

There should be no opposition, it appears to me, to this bond issue on the line that it is in the hands of any particular set of doctors, as it is well provided by ordinance of the city that any reputable, practicing physician can carry his patients to the pay ward of Grady hospital, and there are laws already in force that allow certain representation from different boards of physicians. It appears to me that to provide facilities for the sick and distressed should be a common ground upon which all can get together, whether they are so fortunate as to be placed in the charity ward or financially able to pay their way. Those who are unable to meet such an expense on account of misfortune should unite as one and vote for the Grady bonds.

I hope that the people of Atlanta will not allow the "distracting noises" of grand opera and the Shriners to make them forget or neglect to go to the polls on the 5th of this month and cast their ballots for the Grady bonds.

Respectfully,
J. G. WOODWARD.

BLAMES CARELESS BOYS FOR WOUND BY RIFLE

M. M. Elliott, who lives near Ashby and Simpson streets, received a slight flesh wound on the right side as the result of an accident in the Bellwood district early Saturday evening.

Elliott charges that two young boys of the neighborhood, Boyd Ray and Elmer Smith, carelessly shot a rifle in a vacant lot, and the bullet reached him.

As he did not charge any intention to injury, Ray and Smith were not locked up by Officers Dodd and Cochran, who made a hurry call to the scene, but both were served with subpoenaes.

The bullet grazed Elliott's side, barely breaking the skin.

There's No Corn That "GETS-IT" Won't Get

No More Fussing, Plasters, Salves and Corn Pains. Try the New Way.

"Just look at the way that sucker is going off!" That's what you'll say when you try wonderful "GETS-IT" on that corn you've tried so long to pry off of your toe. It's easy as rolling off a log. Just two, three, and it's done! The corn begins to shrivel, away she goes, sure), absolutely. A few drops will do it. "GETS-IT" makes toes red and raw. Corn pains go! It means the end of cutting and gouging of corns, the end of sticky plasters that don't work, anyhow, the end of salves that eat up your toes, no more "barbering" or fussing. Try "GETS-IT," the new, sure way, for corns and callouses.

"GETS-IT" is sold by all druggists, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

"GETS-IT" is sold in Atlanta by Jacobs' Pharmacy, Ellis Drug Co., Coursey & Mann, Green Trent Drug Co.—(Advt.)

Rouse the Liver

Take Jacobs' Liver Salt for Constipation, Indigestion, Headache and Biliousness.

Health is almost wholly a matter of regular bowels and active liver and kidneys. Let the liver run down, then come constipation, biliousness, indigestion, sick headache, dullness, rheumatism, simply because the system is being poisoned by gases generated from fermented food waste which has not been properly eliminated and forms uric acid. All food leaves waste in the alimentary tract, the richer the diet the more waste, and the liver should clean it out and give the bowels regular elimination. Health is a Habit—Watching your liver.

Jacobs' Liver Salt never forces; it just flushes the alimentary tract, loosens the waste deposit and gives the natural and cleansing elimination. It will regulate your liver and bowels and end those periodic bilious breakdowns and the dosing of calomel or blue mass with its nausea and awful sickness.

Jacobs' Liver Salt is agreeable and never gripes. It acts gently, naturally and promptly, the best liver regulator for everybody, and if you are not satisfied after taking it your druggist will return your money. Jacobs' Liver Salt before breakfast means a clear head and a splendid day for you. Try it. All druggists, 25c. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy, Atlanta.—(Advt.)

Some Alfalfa Notes

DURING the next few weeks hundreds of acres of alfalfa in Georgia will be cut for the first time, and unless many people are particular much of it will be killed. A little study and careful watching is essential in the successful growing and handling a stand of this plant after you once get it. There is such an immense amount of feed made by this plant that it is almost impossible for people to wait until the proper time to cut it. Especially should the first and second cutting be watched with care. Every plant that is cut too soon will die and the stand will be weakened. Therefore you should watch closely and when the second growth starts from the crowns and gets about two inches high the top is then ready to come off. Do not pay much attention to the bloom. It is never ready to cut until the second growth has started good and is sufficient size to sustain the plant after the top has been cut out. If top and limbs are cut from a tree the trunk will die, as there will be long to draw air and feed to the body and roots. The same thing applies to an alfalfa plant. If it should be cut before the new growth starts good it should be cut two or three inches high so that enough old leaves will be left on the plant to feed it until the new growth starts. In this way you can save every plant that is cut and get a good stand and maintain what you have, but unless this is done a large per cent of it will die the first year.

Soil conditions here are a little different from what they are in many sections. For instance, being careful anyone can soon learn the necessary things to do in the handling of alfalfa. The old two and three- year-old plants will give you some trouble most any time, as there is always a sufficient new growth coming to support the roots. The new young plants are the ones people should be particular about.

It is now pretty well settled that alfalfa will grow in almost any part of the state if conditions are made suited for it, and to this one plant we should look to for feed from now on. Therefore every one who has decided with it should be careful through the first year and maintain it as near as to encourage their neighbors and others to take up the growing of it.

Some people have fields have thin spots, but you need not feel any uneasiness about it. If you will give it time and be patient with it it is surprising how it will thicken up. Each plant is only usually small. There for one, and if you have one plant every 10 to 12 inches apart, and by top dressing with fertilizer and cultivating two or three times a year with a regular alfalfa cultivator it will surprise you to see how quickly it will thicken up and what an immense yield it will grow. What is supposed to be a thin stand the first year. Almost nothing else needs fertilizer and cultivation. The more the soil should by all means have two top dressings of fertilizer each season. A mixture of acid phosphate, bone meal, cotton seed meal, and a small per cent of nitrogen, either of these separately or mixed and applied at the rate of 200 pounds per acre will pay handsomely, especially if the alfalfa is thin and does not seem to be thriving.

Alfalfa will not fill more or less weeds with the first cutting. Some weeds are annuals and do not amount to much as they will appear after the first cutting. By fertilizing and harrowing the alfalfa will subdue the weeds and grass and soon take possession of the land. When not alfalfa is yellow and looks like it is not thriving it is a good plan to cut and let it start a new growth. After the new growth starts the plants have usually done what they will and the top should be cut off. It is no use to wait longer for it to make more growth. It is going to quit and let the new growth come. If in the life of alfalfa to cut it and cut it. The more the better. It grows very fast, and should have plenty water and hot sun will it make a rapid growth.

The first crop is usually very hard to cure, especially following a spring when rain as we have had this spring. The riper it can be cut the better it will be to cure. It should be cut after the dew is off in the morning. Let it take the sun one day. Then the next day after the dew is gone it should be raked in windrows and stacked in small high piles that afternoon. Two days later three of these cocks should be made into one. After it have stood for two or three days in good open weather it will be practically cured. Then by opening up to the sun for two or three days before hauling to the barn it will be ready to be stored in the barn. It should be stored on a wire or slatted floor so that the air can circulate through it. It will go through a second heat after being stored in the barn, and be ready for baling.

Yours very truly,

AUNT PATSY FEED CO., Memphis, Tenn.,

Gentlemen:

My Genius called on us a few weeks ago to interest us in Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed, we could not believe he was thinking about when he assured us that Aunt Patsy would make hens lay while moulting; still we were willing, and we are glad to be able to write you that results were more than we could hope for, but those to whom we sold the feed, are laying nicely and the hens look wonderfully in appearance.

We have at once 25 100-lb. bags of Aunt Patsy's Poultry

Yours truly,

J. S. HODGSON.

Send for Aunt Patsy, the egg producer, if he has not got Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed Co., Memphis, Tenn and they can get it

MISCELLANEOUS

AUNT PATSY POULTRY FEED, THE EGG PRODUCER

Look from what point of view Aunt Patsy is discussed. It proven to be the feed of all feeds.

It is the feed because it contains every ingredient of which egg is composed. You are feeding the small egg (the seed) in the egg when you feed Aunt Patsy, hence the eggs grow larger and larger, because it keeps the hen in a thrifty, healthy condition and is the best feed, because a baby chick will thrive on it as much as any other feed. It is the best feed, because you feed constantly Aunt Patsy will lay earlier than when fed on it is the best feed, because it is a properly balanced ration. It is the best feed, because it gives more eggs than other feeds. It is the best feed, because it costs less per day to feed the hen, against over 1 cent per day to feed the hen on other feeds.

It is the best feed, because it gives the hen everything she needs in the way of nourishment, as well as giving her all necessary help to make her lay to full growth and make her lay. J. P. GENTRY,

The Man Who Put the Egg in the Feed.

FOR SALE—FARMS

IN Henry County, 25 miles from Atlanta, about two miles north of McDonough, we have 177 acres of dandy good farm land that has two good streams of water running through it and the improvements on this place are actually worth at least one-half of the price asked. The Atlanta-Jonesboro automobile highway runs through one corner of this place and the Southern railroad is within about one mile. This place is rented for 1914 for seven bales of cotton, will bring ten bales just as easy. A good home and two good tenant houses are on same. Price $5,500, including rent for 1914, with $1,000 cash and two equal notes for balance. This would make an excellent stock farm. A good farm is under cultivation. You can get buy lands in this location for less than $45 to $60 per acre. This figures less than $32 per acre

$2,250—BIG BARGAIN in a seven-room house on Grant street, lot 50x190, to alley; all conveniences, newly elevated, $500 cash, to save reasonable. This is one of the best buys in this section of the city.

$2,250—$2,000 CASH. Spring street bargain, eight-room, 2-story house. At the present time Spring street offers better improvements than any north side street.

$5,500—SEVEN-ROOM house on one of Atlanta's growing thoroughfares, on the west side of the city. This has a lot 100x300, with servant's house and garage, etc. Plenty of fruit and garden space. $1,000 cash. This is a good buy.

$3,100—SIX-ROOM cottage and a dandy, too, located on the south side, near Angier and Forrest avenues. All modern conveniences. A snap. Unusual opportunity to pick up "something worth while." Terms.

$3,500—CLOSE-IN, on south side, within walking distance, we have a good nine-room, two story house that is another good buy. The former price of this property was $4,500, but for business reasons, owner wants to sell quick and has put the "proper inducement" to do so.

$5,750—NEW and never occupied 7-room bungalow, with sleeping porch, large lot, fast developing section of the north side, furnace heat, hardwood floors, absolutely every convenience to be found in a home. Reasonable terms.

$6,000—BEAUTIFUL seven-room bungalow Druid Hills section, lot 80x186, all street improvements near car line. This will have to be seen to be appreciated. Most reasonable terms to an acceptable party. We have hundreds of other good home bargains to offer, and our salesmen will take pleasure in giving you their very best efforts and attention to helping you secure just what you are looking for in the way of an investment, or a home proposition, and on the most favorable basis to be had.

EIGHT BARGAINS

NO. 1 ON Moreland ave., at Inman Park, we have A beautiful elevated east front lot, 65x200. We can sell you this for $1,000 terms. You have heard that there was a lot that was a little back. This is it.

NO. 2—N.E. has a comfy, good, plain bungalow with every modern convenience, on the North Side, which has the location excelled by none, that we can sell you for $7,000 on good terms. This is on a nice, level shaded lot, 50x150 to alley, and is what you have been looking for. That is, an 8 room bungalow on elevated street, a half block of car line.

NO. 3—RIGHT close to the intersection of Ponce de Leon and Highland avenue, on a stripped brick paved street, east front, lot beautifully shaded and actually level, 85x200. Price $7,750. Terms. The location alone will sell the lot.

NO. 4—IN the fourth ward, close to Peachtree, Piedmont and Currier streets we have six building lots for reduced renting houses that lie together and have three street frontages. Now, this is not in a hole. This is the best residential section in the fourth ward. Make no guess this assertion. A pickup at $2,500, and can give you terms on this one.

NO. 5—In Decatur, on a good street, with in half a block of car line, we have a good 6 room cottage on large level lot, 105x170, and at the corner. Price $2,500. We can sell for $2,000 on terms of $500 cash, balance monthly or will trade equity of $1,750 for Atlanta property. This place is rented at $300 yearly.

NO. 6—ON N. Moreland, only about two blocks from Ponce de Leon, we have a good 8 room cottage on nice, elevated shaded lot, 60x200. THIS IS IN THE COUNTRY, but A GOOD STREET. A bargain for $5,500. Terms. Put a nice bungalow on the rear of the lot that faces a good street and make a nice piece of money out of it.

WOODLAND HILLS

THE FUTURE home section of the city.

Start at the bottom, get your lots first-handed at $12.50 per foot, one-fifth cash, balance 1, 2, 3 and 4 years. Long before you pay for them you will have water, sewer, cement walks, cherted streets 80x100 feet wide, car line by your door, and your lot will then bring $60 per foot, or $6,000. You get it now for $1,250, as every lot is 100 feet wide.

WOODLAND HILLS

WE SAY that every lot you buy in Woodland Hills will double in one year. We know it. If you invest, say, $250 or $300 the first cash payment and can make $1,250 clear in one year, it should interest you.

WOODLAND HILLS

IT IS ONLY 15 minutes by auto from the Piedmont Hotel to Woodland Hills. Go out Peachtree to Fifteenth, into Piedmont avenue, and out Piedmont avenue to Cheshire road. You will be on a fine cherted road all the way out, and be there in 15 minutes.

WOODLAND HILLS

EVERY LOT in Woodland Hills is 100 to 200 feet front and will not be cut for 20 years. They run back 300, 350 and 425 feet. Beautifully shaded. At $12.50 per foot you get water, sewer and sidewalks. Nothing else like it around Atlanta and never can be at the price.

25 ACRES

WE OFFER 25 acres near Ansley Park.

Have a frontage of 600 feet on an 80-foot cherted road, runs back 2,400 feet. Here is a place that would suit about three rich men, each having a lot 200x2,400 feet. This is not farm land; it's city property, and in the right section. Easy terms.

21 1-2 ACRES

ON THE Williams Mill road. Seaboard station on the place now. Fronts the road 1,218 feet; all elevated and beautiful. This can be classed city property. Subdivide this into twelve lots 100x1,000 feet, $13.50 per foot. Get your friends together; get it at wholesale and divide it up the way you want it.

VIRGINIA AVENUE

A SNOW BALL HAS AS MUCH SHOW---

IN A FIREY FURNACE as a poor man has who tries to buy a home on the north side. I mean every word I say. A man who hasn't over $100 or $200 in CASH, whose salary is from $100 to $150 per month, is acting like—well, he is using BAD JUDGMENT, to say the least of it. If he is trying to buy a $3,000, $4,000 or $5,000 home. But you need not take my advice unless you want to: it makes no difference with me. Out of 100 homes I have sold at Lakewood Heights for the last few years there were only TWO who fell down with their payments. Sold one this week. I have two more bungalows under way on large lots, just off the car line, and they are not BARNS, but BUNGALOWS; go out and take a look at them; get off car at Adair avenue, it will cost you nothing. It might be just what you have been looking for. I don't have to beg anybody to buy my bungalows; there is no use; they are too fast for that. If you are in earnest and are determined to buy a home that you CAN PAY for, I will be glad to hear from you. Prices $2,150 and $2,300 (the same kind you see on the north side). Sixteen dollars per month up. Enough said. F. B. Hopkins, 316 Empire bldg. Ivy 111.

On the Boundary Line

I am almost o'er the journey;
Time's broken hourglass lies
Just beside me in the pathway,
And its loosened sands deny.

Weary years lie far behind me
At my feet the moments die;
Time upon his scythe is leaning,
While eternity rolls by

How sad, yet, oh how sacred,
Is the meeting place where time
Slows his hour, to lead in silence,
To eternity sublime.

Here my feet are on the verdure
Which an endless springtime wears;
And my shadow faintly lingers
In the snow laid grave of years.

There are voices floating round me,
In whisperings soft and low;
They are calling just like voices
That I wept for years ago

Their touches holy touches,
As if angels touch my soul,
And some unseen hands caress me,
As if loved ones around me stole.

I am pausing at the threshold,
Of a gate that's half ajar;
And a few more finger touches,
And the wicket will unbar.

I am listening to the music,
As the golden harp strings thrill,
Sweet it steals in holy touches
O'er my heart it seems to wind and still.

I am looking at the glory,
That shines inside the gate;
And it floods my soul in beauty,
As my lingering footsteps wait.

I shall wait but little longer,
For the gate is opening wide,
And the master voice is calling,
Soon I'll rest me by His side.

Face to face, I'll see my Savior,
With the blood bought saints I'll roam;
Like the loved ones gone before me,
Cross the boundary line for home.

WEST VIRGINIA COAL MINERS STILL ON STRIKE

(By Associated Press.)

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 2.—Ten thousand coal miners in the Kanawha field remained idle today and will not return to work until the result of a conference between a committee from the district and John P. White, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, at Indianapolis, tomorrow, is known.

The miners today appointed a committee to go to Indianapolis and confer with White. Efforts of the district officers to have the men return to work pending a settlement have been unsuccessful.

GEORGIA REPRESENTATIVE GAINS POINT ON NAVY

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Provision in the naval appropriation bill for additional naval chaplains was stricken out in the house today on a point of order by Representative Tribble, of Georgia, who insisted there was no need for chaplains at shore stations, where the men could attend churches.

The annual fight between "big navy" and "little navy" men in the house will begin Monday. The construction section, with the administration two-battleship program, was reached tonight just before adjournment.

CONGRATULATE FOREIGN MINISTER FOR MEDIATING

(By Associated Press.)

BUENOS AYRES, May 2.—Dr. Luis M. Drago, former minister of foreign affairs, has written Jose Luis Murature, minister of foreign affairs, congratulating him for mediating in the trouble between the United States and Mexico. He says this act inaugurates the carrying out by agencies of her sacred duty to intervene in questions of universal liberty and lays the foundation of a motley and friendliness between nations which will be fruitful for the nations of South America.

TOWN MARSHAL KILLS VIRGINIA MERCHANT

Coroner's Jury Returns Verdict on Fire Which Burned Women and Children

TRINIDAD, Col., May 2.—The fire that destroyed the Ludlow tent colony the night of April 20, causing the death of 13 women and children, was started by militiamen or mine guards or both, according to the verdict rendered by the coroner's jury here late today.

D. J. Riley testified today that a man in a militia uniform put a torch to a tent in the Ludlow colony at 7:05 o'clock the evening of April 20. Riley, a Colorado and Southern fireman, said he was on the engine of a freight train which pulled up at the Ludlow station in the hottest of the battle. He said two tents already were in flames.

"I saw a man in a military uniform touch a flame to a third tent," he said. He said he saw women and children screaming on the railroad right-of-way, apparently trying to escape from the colony.

When the train drew up at the station, Riley said, several militiamen put guns to the engineer's head and ordered him to "pull out, and do it quick."

HEARD WOMEN SCREAM.

J. S. Harrison, conductor of the camp train, testified that as the train pulled out of the station and past the tent colony, he heard women and children screaming and apparently trying to escape. He said that during this time the militia was firing into the colony.

No responsibility for the killing of Louis Tikas was fixed by the jury which contented itself by finding that he and seven other men were shot in battle. Strikers had charged Tikas received a blow in the cause of women and children was that they came to their death by asphyxiation or fire, or both, caused by the burning of the tents of the Ludlow tent colony, and that fire on tents was started by William Lester, Manor Hamrock, and Lieutenant Linderfelt, or mine guards, or both on the 20th day of April, 1914.

DEATH FROM BULLETS

A separate verdict was rendered on the death of Alfred Martin, a militiaman; Preme Larsis, a non-combatant; Louis Tisas, Frank Rebino, James Fyler, John Bartolo and Charles Scota, strikers, and Frank Snyder, a twelve-year-old-boy. The jury found they came to their death by bullet wounds in the battle between militiamen under Manor Hamrock and Lieutenant Linderfield, and mine guards on one side, and strikers on the other, said battle held in or about Ludlow on the 20th day of April, 1914."

United States regulars tonight patrolled the southern Colorado fields. Troops sent out from the central camp at Trinidad were in control of the situation at Walsenburg and Ludlow and small detachments had been distributed at various mining camps in Las Animas and Huerfano counties. No disorders have been reported.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY IS PLACED UNDER FIRE

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Another congressional investigation was proposed today when Chairman Ferris, of the house public lands committee, introduced a resolution to create a committee to investigate whether the Standard Oil company, organized and controlling all oil pipe lines in Oklahoma, has violated the anti-trust laws.

The resolution says 13,000 government allottees have lands containing valuable oil deposits that the Standard company refuses to transport the oil products from the Indian lands and has reduced the price of oil from $1.05 to 50 cents a barrel.

Houston Primary Held

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

PERRY, Ga., May 2.—The Democratic primary held here yesterday for the election of county officers resulted as follows: For sheriff, G. W. Winn, for city court, Judge A. C. Riley; for city court solicitor, R. E. Brown; for clerk superior court, C. H. Hardison; for tax collector, J. D. Cherry; for tax receiver, John H. Hardison; for treasurer, L. BAPTISTS ARRANGE CITY-WIDE MEETINGS

Colored Churches to Participate in Big Evangelistic Campaign Last of May

The big evangelistic campaign in all the Baptist churches of the city, both white and colored, will begin May 17, at 8 a. m. In addition to the churches mentioned last week the Grant Park and Temple churches will be in the campaign. The central committee with their special committees are working hard to have everything in readiness for the campaign.

THE CAMPAIGN AMONG THE COLORED BAPTISTS

There are thirty colored Baptist churches in the city. The Colored Baptist Ministers' conference have appointed the following central committee to cooperate with the white ministers, and Dr. Bruner is arranging the details and conducting the campaign in their behalf: P. James Bryant, chairman; D. D. Williams, C. H. Young, E. P. Bryant, Jr., Jesse Brown, W. P. Paschal, W. Leland and R. H. Smith.

The colored churches have been divided into three groups for the campaign as follows:

South Side Group—Ebenezer, Mount Olive, Mount Pleasant, Mount Zion, Butler Street, St. Luke, West Beulah, West Mitchell, East Mitchell, East Beulah and Bridgeway.

West Side Group—Macedonia, West Hunter (white), Mount Pisgah, Colored Mount Olive, Shiloh, Allen Temple, Providence, Philadelphia, Southern Memorial, Pittsburg Group—Wood Street, Union Street, Bethlehem, Mount Paran, Martin Street, South Atlanta, Friendship and all other churches not mentioned in the above list.

The services at the campaign among the colored people will be conducted as follows:

A great central meeting will be held each day at the Wheat street church in the afternoon. The service from 3 to 3:45 will be a special workers' conference under the direction of Raleigh Wright. An inspirational service will be held each day from 3:45 to 4 during which reports from the several sections of the city each night will be made and a short sermon by one of the white evangelists will be preached.

The services at the three groups will be held each evening, as follows:

South Side Group—Rev. J. W. Baily, evangelist. Meeting first week at Central Street church, second week at Mount Olive church; third week at Mount Zion church, and so on as long as the meetings shall last. It will move from church to church.

West Side Group—Rev. E. M. Griggs, evangelist. Meetings first week at West Hunter church, second week at Macedonia church; third week at Friendship church, and so on as above indicated.

Summer Hill and Pittsburg Group—Rev. Richard Carroll, evangelist. Meeting first week at Reed Street church; second week at Zion Hill church; third week at Providence church, and so on as above indicated.

A great get-together meeting for the colored people will be held on May 17 at 3 p. m. at the Wheat Street church. At this meeting the three colored evangelists will speak, and Dr. Bruner will be present and speak. This will be a great time.

MINISTER TO PREACH ON THE MEXICAN SITUATION

Rev. A. W. Bealer, in Eastman Sermon, Outlines History of Country and Causes of Present Outbreak

EASTMAN, Ga.—"The Mexican War" was the text of a sermon preached here Sunday morning at the Baptist church by Rev. Alex W. Bealer. His text was taken from the thirty-second chapter of Exodus, "Shall your brethren go to war and shall you sit here."

The first part of the sermon explained the causes leading up to our present trouble with Mexico and the latter portion of the discourse was an earnest appeal for those who were in the army of the Lord to be as willing to fight as were the soldiers and sailors of the United States army and navy.

In referring to the Mexican trouble Mr. Bealer said: We must learn something about the man against whom the war is being waged. This is a strange statement but President Wilson has made it plain that we are not making war on Mexico but on one man by whom the nation is being ruined. Let me tell you of this man and his misdeeds. His name is spelled Hu-e-r-t-a, but is is pronounced Werta. He is today the most notorious character on whom the eyes of the world are fixed, to understand him and the conflict of which he is the cause it will be necessary to go back in the history of Mexico.

The country is called a republic but it is only one in name. It is similar in many respects to our country. It has twenty-seven states, two territories and one federal district. The constitution which was patterned after the one under which we live was adopted in 1857. It provides for the electing of a president by the people every six years. It also provides for a congress, senate and a supreme court. In the constitution there are twenty-nine articles dealing with the rights of the individual but these are on paper and little attention is paid to them. The members of congress are elected by the people to serve two years. There ar two senators for each state. The supreme court has fifteen judges.

In the seventies Porfiero Diaz a man of considerable ability and political following was elected president of the republic.

When his time was out he was reelected. This was the usual procedure for more than a quarter of a century until the world came to see that Mexico was not a real repunnc and that Diaz was really a despot who by the pulling of political wires kept himself in office.

Mexico is a very fertile country and it has many rich mines and much property yielding oil. These lands are owned for the most part by foreigners. Shrewd men from America, England, Germany and Japan have been purchasing property for years. This has created quite a rivalry between the different land owners and the people of Mexico. The poorer classes of natives were taught by the politicians that they had been deprived of their lands unjustly. Much bad blood has been created between the common people and those owning lands.

A few years ago a new star rose on the political horizon, Madero, a man of educational ability, who had received his education in the best schools of France and America. He saw that he could make for himself a place in the estimation of the people and when he could win high honors. He announced himself a candidate for the presidency against Diaz who had been in office for thirty-four years and in his announcement pledged the people that if he was elected he would restore the land to the natives of Mexico.

This platform made him very popular with the people, the masses of whom were densely ignorant as to the science of government. When in the course of a few months the land was still owned by foreigners they began to criticise him, charging that he was a political trickster and had deceived the people for the purpose of elevating himself to the presidency.

Just at this time Huerta came upon the scene of action. With Felix Diaz, a nephew of the old president he stirred up an insurrection.

One of the first moves made by the leaders of this movement was to arrest Madero on a trumped up charge and throw him into prison.

Not long after this, Huerta declaring that he feared for Madero's life had him moved from one prison to another in charge of detachment o fsoldiers. The latter was not a company of men overpowered the soldiers and killed Madero. It was given out by Huerta that it had been done by a combine of bandits. This story has never been accepted by the outside world. It has always been believed that it was a political plot and that Madero was murdered by order of Huerta to get him out of the way.

The president being dead Felix Diaz succeeded in having Huerta proclaimed provisional and temporary president until an election could be held.

One of the first steps taken by the new president was an order to have himself recognized as such by the other great world powers. His government was recognized by England, Germany and Japan, but President Wilson refused to recognize him for two good reasons. The first was that he had overthrown a republic and had called no election by which it might be removed. The second was that this government could not recognize a murderer as the head of a neighboring republic. Naturally this did not make Huerta love Wilson and the country over which he presided as president.

Wilson stated that if an election was called this country would recognize any duly elected president. Of course all these things created intense political excitement from one end of Mexico to the other. One of the senators in the regular meeting of that body indulged in some very pointed criticisms of Huerta for his course of conduct. A few days later he disappeared from his hotel. All that was heard of him was the story of a boy who said that some men had called to see him and he had went off with them. It was generally believed that he was murdered by the hirelings of Huerta. This belief was strengthened into conviction by the subsequent events. The lower house of congress appointed a committee to investigate the disappearance of the senator. Huerta when he learned of this action dissolved or disbanded the congress and sent the members home, thus breaking up the session.

While the country was in a fever of excitement over this act of the president he called the election demanded by Wilson and set it for only a week ahead. When it was over, his friends who controlled the ballot boxes, declared that he had been elected.

A second demand for recognition was made upon the United States. President Wilson again refused to recognize him, claiming that the election was illegal, a mockery and had fraud written on its face. Huerta, as a tyrant, lost no opportunity in showing his hatred and contempt for Wilson and his government.

His unpopularity was shown by the insurrection stirred up against him. This was so successfully managed that one-half of the country is in the hands of the revolutionists. Huerta has been fighting for his life, but he has been defeated in almost every important engagement. It is natural to suppose that he attributed his failure to the refusal of the United States to recognize him as the legal president of Mexico.

Many petty annoyances have been put upon the people and the officials of this country by the men who are under the tyrant. Americans have been murdered, it is believed, on the orders or with the consent of Huerta, although this could not be proved. Official telegrams to our representatives have been held back until threats were made to insure their delivery. These things were ignored until two more flagrant insults were thrown into the face of America.

A mail man from one of the warships was arrested and kept in prison for some time by the soldiers of Huerta. Nothing was done. Emboldened, still further affronts were offered this government. A boat from one of our ships with the stars and stripes at the bow and at the stern was landed for supplies. The official in charge and all the men were arrested and marched off to prison. They were subsequently released and the man making the arrest was punished. The commander offered an apology to the officer in command of the ship.

President Wilson felt that Huerta had not gone far enough. He demanded that as an apology to the flag of the United States should be saluted by the government of Mexico. Huerta, procrastinated by making many efforts to get away from the demand of the president. Wilson was firm.

Huerta offered to salute the flag if he would salute in turn. This was refused and Huerta was informed that action would be taken against him if he did not comply with the quest of this government by a certain time. Huerta refused and we proceeded to take possession of Vera Cruz. Four Americans were killed and some fifty or more wounded. Two hundred Mexicans were slain the fight. The folly of Huerta may be seen when we compare the two countries. Mexico has 15,000,000 people, the United States 101,000,000. Mexico can muster an army of 200,000 men, while the United States can put 1,000,000 men on the field. Our soldiers are intelligent volunteers who are well trained. Mexican soldiers are conscripted from the lowest classes and they know little about civilized warfare. This is shown in the way the men captured at Vera Cruz begged for their lives.

Mexico has a navy of less than a dozen warships, several of them being unfit for active service. The United States had more than a hundred fighting ships, of which some are the largest in the world.

If Huerta was not a blinded tyrant he would not think, for a moment, after his conduct, of offering armed resistance to this government.

SUPPLY OF MINISTERS INADEQUATE FOR NEEDS

Reports Tabulated Show That Decreasing Number of Men Enter Ministry Each Year

NEW YORK, May 2.—The supply of ministers for Protestant church pulpits is found to be more inadequate than for years. The number of new men needed annually is from 2,600 to 3,000. Theses are for vacancies caused by deaths, for growth at home, and for foreign mission field. The number of men to be graduated from all leading theological seminaries this spring is 2,350. This shortage has gone on now for a decade at least, and is producing conditions that have become acute and discouraging to officials in charge of congregations, especially of large ones. Some men get into Christian pulpits who do not pass through seminaries, but their numbers are offset by seminary graduates who go into secretarial rather than pulpit work.

Nobody seems able to determine the causes for this continued shortage, save the fact that in few bodies is there any systematic effort made to present the claims of the ministry to young men. Conditions are getting more desperate because churches are coming to have more members, larger financial budgets, and are trying to raise money in larger amounts for mission and similar outside causes. Demand for men of larger caliber is constant. Entrance upon social service work by the churches of smaller numbers and gifts. Pension plans, put forward by most bodies, do not as yet encourage new men, or better grade men.

Religious bodies in which conditions are reported as more serious than others this spring are the Presbyterian, the Baptist, the Congregational and the Episcopal. Much more hopeful conditions obtain among Disciples, Methodists and Lutherans, especially among the conservative Lutherans, due to the fact that greater attention is given to searching out young men and laying before them the call of their church for ministers. Large numbers of small seminaries, with easier conditions financially, also assist the three last named bodies. In some of the other four bodies twice as many men are demanded to fill pulpits vacant now or to become vacant before October as are being graduated from seminaries this month.

So far as can be learned, this long continued shortage of ministers is not due to advance of Higher Criticism. Orthodox and liberals fare the same. It is not due to small salaries, both whose average salaries are lowest of all have largest proportionate numbers entering their ministry. It is not due to competition of business. Some of the ablest men from the colleges are refusing business careers to enter upon altruistic work not involving ordination. Some religious bodies are making demands for men for foreign fields in the numbers actually going are not sufficient to chance supplies materially. Famous seminaries like Yale, Princeton, Union, the General, Methodist, Chicago, Virginia, Southern [illegible] both average classes [illegible] and some are below [illegible] here.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Marietta Street Railroad Frontage Brings $75,909 at Auction, Asa G. Candler Being One of the Buyers—Good Crowd Attends and Every Foot Offered Was Sold, Sale of Cooper Street Parcel

The auction of the Joseph F. Gatins property on Marietta street which was held by Forrest and George Adair yesterday afternoon, brought a total of $75,909, the prices ranging from $102 to $121 a front foot.

A feature of the sale was the attendance of Asa G. Candler, who bought 310.5 feet showing that he has confidence in the future of Atlanta real estate.

The property sold cheap, but every foot of it was sold. Forrest Adair, who was auctioneer, announced in the beginning that Mr. Gatins was not in the city, and that the property would be sold. There would be no by bidding, he added, but if the sale didn't seem to go well it would be stopped.

A large crowd attended, and the bidding was active. It began on lot 9, which, with lot 8, containing a frontage of 150 feet, went to J. B. Thompson for $18,150, or $121 a front foot.

Mr. Candler bought lots 6 and 7 at $111 a front foot, or $16,650. Lots 4 and 5 went to I. N. Ragsdale at $102 a front foot or $8,475. Mr. Candler bought by J. B. Thompson at $113 a front foot, or $8475. Mr. Candler bought lots 1 and 2, containing 16x5 feet of frontage, at $108 a front foot, or $17,334.

The depth of the property ranged from 388 feet to a point. Each lot, except lot 1, which had 85.5 feet, had 75 feet of frontage and 80 feet of width in the rear on the railroad.

The property is at the Howell mill road and Exposition street, and almost extends to the Marietta street bridge. It was formerly owned by the Palmer brick company.

FORD PLANT A MODEL OF INDUSTRIAL STYLE

Letting of Contract a Big Event in Real Estate Field

The news that the Ford Motor company let a contract for the erection of its assembly plant on Ponce de Leon avenue and the Southern railway, will be of deep interest.

As the building will call for an expenditure of at least $250,000, and the permit will be granted shortly, it means that the lead already taken by building permits in 1914 will be carried even further, or will greatly minimize the large aggregate value established in May, 1913.

The Ford motor car will build its plant as thoroughly and carefully as it would an automobile. Ed. R. Hayes, the building inspector, says that no building in this part of the country will be better constructed. It will be of reinforced concrete, and absolutely fireproof, every stairway and shaft being enclosed.

The company will attain two objects in locating where it does. Being on a main residence street, it can have a display room, where the finished cars can be shown behind show windows. Also it will have railroad frontage, where it can receive the shipments of automobile parts that will be put together in the plant.

Already there has been considerable activity around the plant's location, which will become a new center of population on account of the large force which will be brought here to work in the plant. The company hopes to have the building completed by October 1.

PROPERTY OWNERS WANT CAR LINE EXTENDED

Owners North of Virginia Avenue Are Asked to Meet Thursday

W. E. Worly, president of the Woodland Hills company, who has subdivided a tract of 400 acres of land into about 600 lots and who is having water and sewer mains laid, grading streets and laying tile sidewalks, has called a meeting of all property owners north of Virginia avenue, on Highland, to meet with him at the company's office, 418 Candler building, on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The purpose of the meeting is to make a showing to the Georgia Railway and Power company to extend their line from Virginia avenue into and through Woodland Hills. Every property owner on this route is earnestly requested to be present.

Former Southern Saw Works Representative Accepts New Position

P. C. Cashman, formerly representing the Southern Saw and Machinery Works throughout the southern states has been appointed manager of the sales department of H. M. Ashe & Co., real estate and insurance.

Mr. Cashman is prominent in T. P. A. circles and has many friends in Atlanta and over Georgia and the south who will be interested to know of his new position and will wish him well.

H. M. Ashe & Co., have offices on the thirteenth floor of the new Healey building.

1914 CENSUS INDICATES 300,000 PEOPLE BY 1920

With More Territory and Present Increase, Population Will Almost Double

The warning in last Sunday's Journal that Atlanta would soon have to prepare for further annexation was followed in a few days by the government's unofficial estimate that this city now contained a population of 179,000.

This compares with 154,000 in 1910, an increase of 25,000 in four years in the corporate limits, or at the rate of 6,250 a year.

At this rate, Atlanta will have added 37,500 to its population by 1920, the time of the next census, now only six years off, giving the city of Atlanta, within its present corporate limits, a population of 216,500.

Curiously enough, the latter figure is given in the last city directory as the present population of both Atlanta and the districts oustide reached by the car lines.

Annexation would include practically all the territory given in the directory's estimate, which in the next six years would increase in population as rapidly, if not more so, than the population inside. President Hill, of the directory company, says that the main growth of population is new in the suburbs.

On the basis of the increase inside and outside the city, Atlanta in 1920 will have a population of 300,000 or more, or almost as much as the present population of New Orleans or Cincinnati.

Confining comparisons, however, to the increase of 25,000 in the city proper, the gain in four years has been only 16,000 less than the entire population of Macon or Augusta; it has been as great as the entire population of Columbus; and its yearly increase has been as much as the total population of several important Georgia towns.

These comparisons are not meant to show Atlanta's superiority over other Georgia cities, but to show how large her increase has been. Reports of this kind, now and then, explain why real estate values keep climbing in normal times, and hold their own in times of depression.

Several Lot Sales Are Made and New Building Is Going On

There has been a considerable lot of activity in the section around Brookhaven club, where several new subdivisions have been opened.

The Charles P. Glover Realty Co., announced yesterday that it had sold about $20,000 worth of lots at Brookhaven, and twelve or fifteen lots in Fernwood.

Several attractive homes have been built around the club grounds or are in course of construction there.

REAL ESTATE FIRM CHANGES LOCATION

The Parantha-Cantrell Realty company, successors to Smith, Turner & Parantha, with office at 901 Empire building, have moved to No. 320 Healey building, facing the main entrance to the interior office. This firm has built up a business that would be a source of gratification to a much older concern.

In addition to change in location, they have broadened the scope of their business to include the handling of farms and acreage in all sections of the south, as well as increasing their facilities for the rapid and satisfactory handling of city and suburban property.

Mr. M. W. Turner and Mr. Harry S. St. Clair, of the old sales force, will be associated with them at their new quarters and will be pleased to meet their old friends, also welcome new acquaintances.

BUILDING FINISHED ON NASSAU STREET

H. J. Bruce has just finished his two-story apartment and business building on Nassau street, the first business building on the newest of Atlanta's business streets.

His has already leased some of the second floor. There are two store rooms on the ground floor.

NEWS OF ATLANTA SCHOOLS

EDITED BY JOHN D. STEWART

Ponce de Leon Park Crowded by Thousands of Happy Children

The annual Field Day exercises of the Atlanta Grammar schools, that are eagerly awaited by all the pupils throughout the whole year, were held at Ponce de Leon on Saturday afternoon. Every school in the city had a delegation to represent it either in the volley ball, dodge ball, captain ball, running jumping or drilling or in some of the many events of this red letter day.

Since the park could not be gotten for the entire day, some of the contests were postponed until Monday afternoon. There were games and contests for every grade and with the forty odd grammar schools, there were hundreds of participants as well as thousands of spectators.

Each school selected from its best athletics, two boys, one from class A, those over fifteen years old, and one from class B, those under that age. These two boys represented the school in the running, jumping, chinning and other events. The girls also had their own races, etc.

The drills and games were among teams picked from the different grades in the schools. One eight grade challenged another for a captain ball game, the seventh grades played volley ball or dodge ball and so it went.

The boxes were decorated with the banners of the different schools and the rooters were there by the car loads.

As the contests were not finished the number of points by the different schools could not be calculated, but on Monday afternoon the remaining events will be held and the schools that came first and the lucky winners of pins will be announced.

Peeples Entertainment Trio Planning Big Commencement

It delights the hearts of us girls to see the boys of our respective schools drumming and marching in the great Memorial day parade. We only wish we could march, too. Harry Owenby was captain of our platoons. The lieutenants were Abel Winburn, William Hartman and Ralph Pate.

Nothing of much importance has been enacted this past week, owing to our numerous holidays. This, however, we do not regret in the least.

We find our weekly "Current Events" very beneficial and helpful in keeping up the progress made by the Americans in the Mexican situation. Children at our school seem unusually interested in this affair, and it is the general topic of conversation on the yard at recess.

Margaret Smith and Virginia Kelley were rewarded in my class spelling match of the seventh grade. Virginia's side triumphed, she being the last to remain standing.

The entertainment committee of the eighth grade are planning a good time for them at the grammar school commencement exercises. Besides the eighth grade part of the show, interesting numbers are being arranged by members of the lower grades. Recitations, dialogues, cantatas and dances make up the program.

Ruth Sill, Howard McDade, Esther Nisbett and Charles Connally, of second grade A have been ahead for the past week in reading.

Pryor's Civic League Busy Planting Flowers

Our Walter Rich Junior Civic league met last Friday. The fifth grade rendered a very entertaining program, which was greatly enjoyed by everybody. A report from the treasurer showed that we had a little over $12 with which to buy flowers and seeds for the school. Miss Rodie, the principal, and Miss Haygood, the assistant principal, bought the flowers and last Thursday and Friday the eighth grade planted them.

We are certainly proud of our boys marching so well in the Memorial day parade. They had a splendid drum corps and they received many complimentary remarks on their fine marching.

The fourth and fifth grades played a game of baseball last week. The fourth grade teacher, Miss Griffin, and several others were about to get their hose and the fourth grade won, so we advise the fifth grade to take some rooters next time if they want to win.

The seventh grade has been having supplementary reading in new readers this week, which they enjoy very much. The window boxes are looking pretty with the colors in them.

The spelling banner was won by the eighth grade this week. We hope to buy us an attendance banner as soon as we have money enough.

HAZEL HUDDLESTON.

Walker St. Thanks Board for Holidays; Marched in Parade

The boys presented quite a nice looking spectacle as they paraded the streets last week in the Memorial day parade. The grammar school boys were one of the best features of the parade.

Mr. Slaton paid us a short visit Wednesday. He promised to be back soon and spend the day with us.

Miss Harralson visited the seventh and eighth grades last week. She helped the pupils of the eighth grade with their music for the concert. She gave the seventh grade a test.

Miss Graves came to the school Wednesday to assist the fourth grade children in the relay race.

We were made happy by learning that the board ruled to have Monday, April 27, a holiday, to be added to Tuesday and Thursday at 1 o'clock, so that the teachers and pupils might attend grand opera, and to have May 13, Shriners' day, a holiday.

Hoke Smith Godfrey, of first grade A, has made a very good record so far. He has not been absent or tardy, has made 100 in dictation, copying, spelling and arithmetic every month, and is one of the best pupils in reading and writing. This class has enjoyed visiting the third and fourth grades, where they put specimens of their penmanship on the blackboards.

The three little girls are playing dodge ball. They are Hermion Walker, Jessie Loise Cheatham, Carolyn Shivers and Leone McGaughey.

Edgewood Loves School, but Enjoys Its Holidays Anyway

We enjoyed a visit from Miss Graves last week. She came to assist in the fourth grade contest for field day.

After several weeks of hard practice on their marching, the boys had a fine time marching in the Memorial day parade last Monday, and we are very proud of the fine showing they made.

Although we all each and every one love to come to school, still we were very glad to welcome a holiday last Monday, and also the hour given us on Tuesday and Thursday. After these little holidays we all came back with fresh minds and new zeal to carry on our work.

The different grades are very much interested in their work assigned by Mrs. Osgood. The study of the Sphinx and pyramids, the Colosseum at Rome, the Hall of Karnak, the Parthenon of Athens, and many other famous ruins, is very interesting to all.

The eighth grade won the attendance banner for last week.

The seventh grade is very proud of the fact that three of the field day representatives will be from their room. They are Edith Holt, Nettie Johnson and Raymond Flournoy.

In athletics our school won three placques, to be awarded field day. The winners were the sixth grade A girls, sixth grade B boys and the eighth grade girls.

In sixth grade A a prize was offered to the child having the highest average for the month. The lucky winner was Nell Brooks, the prize being a lovely book. Last month the boys beat the girls on the honor rolls in this grade.

The first grade B was very sorry to lose two of its little pupils, Robert McWhorter and Fred Peavy.

The boys played a hard game last Tuesday with Oakland as opponent, but were defeated by them. The score was 12 to 3.

Fair's Boys in Field Meet Hope to Run Great Marathon

Even if the spelling in our school has not received a great deal of attention on this page, nevertheless it does not mean that the rivalry for the spelling banner has been settled. The seventh grade is now the proud possessor of the weekly banner. They have had it for the last two weeks.

There are many flourishing young athletes in our school who give rise to the hope that in the future the United States will find good representatives for the Marathon races.

If we made a rather broad statement last week that our boys would make as fine a showing as Uncle Sam's soldiers in the Memorial day parade, we did not miss our mark very far. Our boys not only kept in the best condition during the required part of the parade, but continued their unbroken march to the cemetery, where they quietly disbanded so that the veterans hardly knew when their younger companions left them.

SOUTH SIDE SCHOOL GAMES TOLD IN DETAIL

J. M. Peacock Reports Games Played During Week at Brisbine

TUESDAY'S GAMES.
HILL VS. FRASER.

Hill and Fraser clashed Tuesday only to play a very slow game of five innings. Crutchfield started the ditty work for Fraser with a home run with the sun on base. He also knocked down some hot grasses on short.

Fraser was held with a score of 3, while Hill slapped out ten safe ones that netted seven revolutions.

Thompson, who stood behind the willow for Fraser, received the gill fine.

Davis held short for Hill in up-to-date fashion.

Hill is determined that she will give Peeples a hot contest for second place. The two teams are tied for second now.

PEEPLES VS. FORMWWALT.

Peeples and Formwalt played a game equal to professionals Tuesday. Peeples tried their best to down the champions, but all in vain. Peeples swatted the pill for many safe ones, but succeeded in bringing across only one man. Formwalt's hitting was good. She landed three safe ones for home. Worwalt handled the ball in professional style. Burnett, Peeples' clever little shortstop, starred in fielding and hitting. Kemp, Peeples' receiver, was a tar bucket for all fouls as well as passed balls.

FRIDAY'S GAMES.
FRASER VS. PEEPLES.

Fraser gave Peeples a stubborn opposition Friday, but were defeated. Luck seemed to be against Fraser, for many times she had three men left on the sacks. Peeples laced out twelve hits, which sewed up five runs.

Sheffield hurled the sphere in fine style for Fraser. Crutchfield and Thompson played nice ball also.

Kemp did his usual good playing behind the pan. Peeples' entire team did fine fielding. It seemed as if Fraser was going to start something in the seventh. She pulled out a number of safe ones. The bases were full throughout the entire inning, but none reached home.

FORMWALT VS. WALKER.

Formwalt completely swamped Walker Friday. Formwalt circled the bases thirteen times, due to the inexcusable erfors of Walker. Walker hit a few safe ones, but were killed before they crossed the rubber. Walker was held without a score throughout the entire game. Long did his part for Walker, while the entire Formwalt team played a neat game.

ASHBY STREET SCHOOL.

The girls on section five in the first grade, Margaret Brown, Erin Logan, Lizzie Speights, Katie Suttles and Ruth Duncan have the most stars for doing the best work for four weeks in succession.

The fifth grade girls and boys got the reward last week for getting the most stars for good lines.

We had a delightful holiday Monday. We had a very nice time.

The first grade got the highest in attendance last week. Their teacher gave them a reward.

Miss eMillidge came today. She gave the first and fifth grades excellent. The other grades had a very good lesson.

GIRLS' NIGHT ENJOYED BIG PICNIC GIVEN THEM

One Teacher in Cincinnati Studying How to Better Night School

BY EDITH McMANUS.

We had another big picnic spread given us last Wednesday night by one of the classes from St. Mark's M. E. Sunday school and we enjoyed it, too. But it does not express what a good time we had, and we feel like giving those girls three times three big cheers. This is the second time that they have given us such a feast.

Mrs. Gamble, our principal, has been explaining to the girls what the trouble with Mexico really means, and she is telling us in such a way that it is more like a story than real facts.

Mrs. Gamble visited the Park Street Methodist Episcopal Sunday school last Sunday and talked to Mr. Davis' class. From the enthusiastic reception she received she came away feeling that she had done some good and was glad that she visited the class.

Mrs. Everett and Mrs. Kreigshaber of the board of education, visited the school last Thursday night and seemed to be pleased with the work we are doing.

Miss Rose Sugarman, teacher of the Jewish girls, is in Cincinnati visiting the night schools there. Miss Ida Myers has the class during Miss Sugarman's absence.

We enjoyed being off from school last Monday night on account of Memorial day.

Mae McGinnis was absent last Monday night because of illness. Viola Wallace, of the fourth division, has had to write up night school because of night work. We are very sorry indeed to lose Viola.

May Parks has returned to school after a week's absence.

Report cards were given out last Monday night and we were all well pleased with the marks which we received.

The girls of division three had a very interesting geography game last Thursday evening. There were two sets of cards, one with the capital of a state on it and the other with the state written on it. The girl who matched up the largest number of cards won.

ANTI-TRUST BILL IS REPORTED FAVORABLY

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The house judiciary committee today ordered favorably reported the omnibus anti-trust bill on which the committee had been engaged for weeks. Representative Clayton, chairman of the committee, who plans to defer taking up his new duties as federal judge in Alaska until after the bill is disposed of by the house, expects to bring up the measure as quickly as possible.

The bill includes provisions aimed against interlocking directorates, holding companies, restriction of the power of injunctions and restraining orders, with a ban on price discriminations and price fixing, with certain exceptions, and would provide for acceptance of decisions in federal anti-trust cases as conclusive in actions by other parties where the same issues are involved.

MARIST DEFEATED TECH HIGH BY 7 TO 2 SCORE

Game Featured by Hitting of Myers, Pitching of Brock

BY H. W. MCCALL, JR.

Marist college surprised the Smithies from Tech High school Friday afternoon when she easily defeated them by the score of 7 to 2. The Marist lads played a better brand of ball than their opponents and outclassed them all through the game. The Ivy street cadets have improved with every game and under the tutelage of their coach, "Goat" Holliday, have developed into a fast and peppery team.

The features of the game were the pitching of Brock for Marist, and the hitting of Myers for T. H. S., and Manning for Marist, each player getting three hits, one of these being a two-bagger. Thomas, of T. H. S., accepted some hard chances at third. Liddell caught a good game for Marist.

Marist found the Tech High pitcher in the second inning. With one down, Manning got a hit and Adair and McCall followed with two-base hits, bringing in two runs. Marist scored two more in the third on errors and T. H. S. came back with one in the fourth, also on errors. In the fifth Harrison and Brock got hits and were brought in by Manning's two-ply smash to left. Marist's last came in the eighth on a hit, passed ball, stolen base and error.

Tech High cornered their other run in the ninth aided by three hits.

Score by innings:

SMALL BOYS CONTRIBUTE "DISTRACTING NOISES"

At Grand Opera, Many Youngsters Yell "Brettos," or Programs

"Libraitos! Libraitos! You can't understand the opera without them. Libraitos!" This is the "distracting noise" that greeted you t the auditorium last week. As the doors were swung open and the gayly-dressed crowd poured in, the babble raised by a crowd of small boys yelling their wares reminded one of the bazar scene in "Kismet." Occasionally the practical man-of-the-world passed by and being accosted by the cry "you can't understand the opera without them, Libraitos!" demanded a guarantee that he could understand the opera with them. This invariably stumped the small boy.

There were notable characters in that line passing out programs and yelling "Brettos." On one side was a youthful Hitch school declaimer growing more eloquent as his voice loosened up and his arms began to shoot out in the old-time gestures. On the other side was a famous athlete presenting programs to the pretty girls only. Once in a while the chief-of-the-aupes would stalk by in his dress suit and superior smile.

All were "guests of the company" and absolutely essential for the success of the show, and all entertained high hopes of getting a box or first row seats the minute the lights went out.

If you want an expert opinion of the relative fineness or splendor of the different voices or operas, gracefulness of the actors or orchestra leaders or in short any of those topics of which the born critics or the steady, appreciative patron must judge, ask any of these "guests of the Metropolitan company," who are learning the business from the ground up; they'll be glad to tell you.

Battle Hill's Upper Grades Interested in Mexican War

As vacation time gets closer, things begin to hustle about in our school. Although the larger number prefer vacation, many would remain at home and ride instead. The remaining days are busily filled.

Tremendous applause greeted Mrs. Overby when she announced that we would have no school on Monday. We enjoy school work, but a little vacation now and then makes it more pleasant.

We are glad to welcome Miss Fowler in the sixth grade from Fraser and hope he will like this school.

We are glad to say that Miss Lyle, our representative among the boys, is working very hard and on field day the other representatives will have to do something worth to beat him. The representative among the girls are Lilly Harrington and Esther Mason, who are working forth their best efforts to win a prize. George Freeman, of the sixth grade, has always been a leader, so we naturally feel that he will do his very best.

The seventh grades feel very proud of the fact that they were able to win both of the banners this week for the best athletic record. As the seventh grade won both of these last year they were determined not to lose them this year and worked doubly hard to win them. They could not afford to lose the good reputation set by the class of '14 this year.

The second grade has won the spelling banner for the last two weeks and are delighted to know that they are going to make a spelling bee.

In first grade A the little pupils are improving greatly in writing The best writers are Dorothy Brooks, Leo Theodosis and Dorothy Burk.

The baseball sits have arrived at last. They are so exciting that Miss Sams had to remind the team not to pay so much attention to their parents' appearance and look at the ball. We certainly did take her advice.

The game with Peeples Tuesday was the prettiest of the season. Formwalt had to work mighty hard to win, but Miss Sams was pleased to see another victory to our credit. The score was 3 to 1.

BULL FIGHTING MAY BE STOPPED AT VERA CRUZ

It is not the civil government's intention to interfere with the customs of the people any more than is necessary until the education, spreading the last implanted depriving their over-fondness of their most popular form of sport, there was much surprise in the governor's office.

That there will be little if any opposition to the aldermen's suggestion is practically certain. Bull fighting is not indulged in so much in this state as in most of the others and for many years Francisco Madero's rule that permission to revive it was given.

Calhoun Well Represented In Field Day Exercises

We are working hard as usual and have every hope of winning honors at field day.

The Volley ball team is progressing finely under their captain, Alice Williams, who is time and time again perfect them for the game Saturday.

The relay race is doing fine work and have every hope of being among the winners. Their captain DeSales Harrison is working them up into fine shape.

The following children are to be participants in field day: Charles Bearden, representatives in athletics Class A; Fletcher Pierce, class B; Katherine Pierce, who will be class A's representatives is quite ill and she will not be able to be with us.

The ten year old runners are: Joseph Raine, Pauline Ware, nine years, Burrel Peterson, Vadie Smith, eight years, James Wilson, Ollie Lee Berry; seven years, Jack Royce, Mildred Wells.

Miss Milledge visited the primary grades this week and gave them an excellent report.

Miss Harralson paid a visit to the seventh and eighth grades and went over the songs for the May concert.

The Calhoun boys made a fine showing in the Memorial parade. The officers were Glenn Aenchbacher, captain; Halford DuPree, Albert Tinsley and Richard Alger Heutenants; Arthur Foster, color bearer.

MUSICAL TALENT SURE TO BE DEVELOPED AT B. H. S.

Grand Opera Charms "Barbs" Team Planning Road Trip

BY W. F. RINES.

The past week brought with it welcome holidays for the students of Boys' Hi. Memorial day was a holiday for all the city schools. Delegations from every school marched in the parade and thus showed the respect of the students for the heroes of the Civil war.

Boys' Hi had a holiday Friday on account of the annual teachers' examinations held in our building.

The boys as usual are showing much interest in grand opera, and are helping the stars in their entertainments by "auping." The school was dismissed at 1 o'clock on Tuesday and Thursday in order that the teachers and students might attend the matinees. We are all looking forward with dread to the musical "talent" that will develop in school when grand opera is over. Our only hope is that it will not become contagious among the "barbarians."

The baseball team went to Stone Mountain Thursday and had a good game with the University School for Boys. Johnston and Spurlock are planning to take the team some time soon on a tour of south Georgia to play several series. The contest for the pennant in the class league is becoming more and more exciting. The Juniors won from the Freshmen Tuesday by a score of 9 to 1 and thus forged to the front. The two remaining games to be played are the Senior-Sophomore game and the Junior-Freshmen game. If the Juniors win from the Freshmen they will have the pennant without dispute. If the Juniors and Sophomores both lose, there will be a triple tie.

Formwalt's Baseball Suits Arrive; Peeples Beaten, 3-1

We are very proud of our boys who marched in the parade on Memorial day for they did great credit to Formwalt and received many compliments on their fine marching.

Dr. Stephens and his assistants are with us now and we hope they will find us a very healthy lot of school children.

We are very glad that the Y. W. C. A. for whom Miss Graves is working is leading in The Journal contest. We are saving all the wrappers we can get for Miss Graves and hope they will be very successful.

Athletics are certainly enjoyed at Formwalt. Miss Williams, our representative among the boys, is working very hard and on field day the other representatives will have to do something worth to beat him. The representative among the girls are Lilly Harrington and Esther Mason, who are working forth their best efforts to win a prize. George Freeman, of the sixth grade, has always been a leader, so we naturally feel that he will do his very best.

As the seventh grade won both of these last year they were determined not to lose them this year and worked doubly hard to win them. They could not afford to lose the good reputation set by the class of '14 this year.

The last note of opera has been [illegible] Today Atlanta is [illegible]

[illegible] the city will be wide awake again, busy with final preparations for Shriners' week, the biggest in her history. That week, which begins seven days from now, with center round sessions of the imperial council of the Shrine, that will be held here May 12 and [illegible]

Thousands of visitors are coming, from all quarters of the North American continent, from every state in the union, from Canada, some from Mexico. The estimate is that 35,000 will be here. Not all of these will be Shriners. The law [illegible] cities from every point have [illegible] multitudes who know nothing of the "high sign" but who do [illegible] good travel opportunity when [illegible]

[illegible] a year the preparations [illegible] under way for this horde [illegible] Even before the Dallas [illegible] of the Shriners, in May [illegible] the Atlanta hotels signed contracts to Yaarab temple for over [illegible] thirds of their accomodations. [illegible] Atlanta's invitation was accepted in Dallas, work was begun in earnest. Some hundreds of the visiting [illegible] had their rooms reserved [illegible] well. The last hotel room [illegible] by Yaarab temple was [illegible] weeks ago. Whole boarding [illegible] have been reserved by [illegible] that temple. Rooms in private homes are engaged for the [illegible] Atlanta will be crowded to [illegible] her doors with many thousands more visitors than were here during the busiest days of the International Exposition in 1895. The meeting [illegible] the very biggest the Shriners [illegible] held anywhere.

[illegible] a week of carnival, of [illegible] and dancing and feasting and [illegible] For seven days Atlanta [illegible] constantly [illegible] use for all this is that the [illegible] council of the Ancient [illegible] Order, Nobles of the Mystic [illegible] will be holding its annual [illegible] here at the time. The imperial council governs the 133 temples of Shrinedom in North America. It is an inconsiderable body, as numbers go. From one to half a dozen representatives will come from each temple. They and a few officers will form the council. Their number will be probably less than 500.

This is the nucleus around which the Shriners of the continent gather each year for their big jollification. For every Shriner who sits in the imperial council, there will be scores of others who will not expect to see even the inside of the Lyric theater, where that body is to meet.

Atlanta will be the mecca of Shrinedom. The caravans will come from every direction across the deserts. Some even will come over sea. The first will arrive next Saturday morning. A few more will follow that afternoon, quite a number will come in during the night, and by next Sunday morning the city will have begun to fill up with Shriners. From then until Tuesday week special trains will be following each other into the railway stations every few minutes.

Will See the South.

Though Atlanta is to be the objective of all these pilgrims, it is not their sole attraction. Atlanta must compete with dozens of other southern cities through which the caravans will pass on their way to or from the gathering. All will entertain the visiting Shriners. The majority of these cities are making big plans. Diversions along the way will put Atlanta on her mettle and increase her cordiality toward the strangers. The Shriners will come one way and go another. The pilgrimage itself is at least as important as the stay in Mecca. The Shriners will see Atlanta, but they will see the south, too.

The things in Atlanta which hold interest for the stranger will be magnets drawing thousands, that week. Stone Mountain will be one of them. Uncle Remus' home another, the three battlefields others. President Roosevelt's mother's home at Roswell another. The state house, the police court, the Burns' club, the Confederate Soldiers' home—these and scores of other interesting subjects which Atlanta sees at a perspective too close to appreciate them, will be thronged every day.

While they are here the visitors will spend hundreds of thousands of dollars. Everywhere the Shriners meet, the bank clearings jump. Past records show this. It will be true again, and more so than ever, in Atlanta—for this is to be the biggest meeting of all.

A LLAMA HEAD

ALPACAS FEEDING ON THE ROOF OF THE WORLD

SICUANI, Peru.

I AM at Sicuani, a little town on the great plateau that lies between the two ranges of the Andes. This plateau runs north and south for a thousand or more miles through Ecuador and Peru. I am now at the southern end of it, several hundred miles south of the region I have described in my letters from Cerro de Pasco. To reach Cerro, I had to cross the mountains at an altitude of 15,000 feet. The pass by which I came here is only 13,600 feet lower, and it was through a driving snowstorm that I slid over the mountains from the Pacific slope to the Atlantic.

It took me three days by rail to get here from the ocean. My road was the Southern Railway of Peru, which is one of the best managed in the republic. Its trains start on time and get there. The ride here was comparatively comfortable, although a part of my journey was not on the express. By the fast trains it is possible to reach Cuzco from the ocean inside of three days. I am taking four, in order that I may better see the country and people. The first stage of my travels was up the mountains from the port of Mollendo to Arequipa. That city is the metropolis of southern Peru. It is 8,000 feet above the sea, and in reaching it you rover only a little more than half of the altitude to the top of the Andes. I stayed there for a day or so, and then went on to Juliaca, a town a short distance from Lake Titicaca. The latter journey required a full day's railroad travel. During it I crossed the pass of Crucero Alto, and in coming down to Juliaca fell to a height of a little less than 13,000 feet. The high altitude affected me, and I felt a slight touch of soroche at the hotel where we stopped over night. Juliaca is the junction where the Southern railroad divides, one branch going southward to Puno on Lake Titicaca, and the other northward over the great plateau to the valley and ancient city of Cuzco. The journey is made by the express in one day. The ordinary trains take two days, and therefore after nine hours from Juliaca I have to stop over night at Sicuani. Tomorrow I shall resume my journey to the famed city of Incas, which is about 100 miles further on.

I have already described the ride over the Peruvian desert from the ocean to Arequipa. The journey from there to the top of the mountains is even more wonderful. You start from the level of Mexico City and wind your way around Mount Misti, which is more than 19,000 feet high, and at the same time you can see other mountains such as Chachacani, which are more than four miles above the sea and which are covered with snow all the year round. Higher still there are mountains covered with glaciers and on the way up the valley to Cuzco at La Raya you see glaciers in the far distance, which must cover many square miles.

The greater part of the way is through extinct volcanoes. The slope of Mount Misti is covered with great blocks of black lava and the mountains that wall this high valley in the region where I now am have Niagaras of lava which seem to have been frozen as they flowed from the craters above down the slopes. In places you look over walls of such rock a thousand feet high, and above them see glaciers on mountains that are more than four miles in height. At times these mountains rise up like a great white rampart of irregular shape, kissing the sky; and again they extend in a saw-tooth construction as far as your eyes can reach.

The vegetation changes the moment you near the top of the Andes. As you climb the western slope at an altitude of two miles or more the grass begins to sprinkle the semi-arid hillsides, and when you cross the pass and come down to the plateau you are in a region of sod covered with tufts of wiry grass which are too coarse for anything but the llamas. The plateau itself is covered with flocks of sheep and alpacas. There are herds of cattle, and you see droves of llamas loaded with goods of one kind or another being driven along. There are Indian villages at every few miles, and in places the pampa is spotted with low mud huts roofed with straw, each of which is the home of an Indian who grazes his alpacas and llamas nearby. Everywhere on the sides of the valley are the remains of the cultivation of the Incas. There are terraces that run from the plateau for thousands of feet up the mountain. These terraces were walled with stone, and where possible the water was carried from level to level. In many places the terraced farms had no water and the crops grown depended upon the scanty rainfall.

LLAMAS, A SNAPSHOT ON THE PAMPAS

And just here I want to give you an idea of the farming that goes on away up here on the roof of the world. The average altitude of the region I refer to is 12,000 or 13,000 feet above the sea, and it runs from that to more than 14,000 feet. There are millions of acres of such lands in Peru with a climate in which white men can live. They comprise a great part of the wide valley that runs north and south through the continent, and at this altitude they support hundreds of thousands of cattle and millions of alpacas, llamas and sheep. The highest of the plains are covered with native grasses, which are short and close to the earth. Scattered over them are the tufts of wire grass, the new sprouts of which are eaten by the stock and the coarser shunned by all but the llamas. Here and there near every Indian hut is a small patch of potatoes or quidua or barley, and there is no doubt but that the whole region might be plowed up and greatly improved.

And this brings me to the movement for the improvement of the high plateaus of the Andes, which has been inaugurated by the Peruvian corporation, a British company that has charge of the railroads for the government. This institution has sent to the United States for one of its agricultural experts, and he is now experimenting here in different places to find out the best grasses and best grains to be grown upon the plateau. The man chosen was Mr. Harry V. Harlan, the agronimist in the barley investigations of our department of agriculture. He came here seven months ago and is already making good progress. I met Mr. Harlan at Juliaca, and went with him to some of the experiment stations. He has one little farm of four or five acres right near the railroad, and this has been planted to cereals and grasses of various kinds. He showed me one plot of barley consisting of perhaps fifty rows, each from seed gathered from a different part of the world. Some of the barley came from Smyrna, some from Servia, and some from Russia and the western highlands of the United States. Other rows were of seeds from Manchuria, the high plateaus of India, and others were from the plateau of Thibet. All of these barleys are growing well and many of them far better than that from the native Peruvian grain. There seems to be no doubt but that almost any kind of hardy barley will grow on the pampas, and the experiments of Mr. Harlan may open up a new future for the highlands of Peru.

The soil of the plateau is almost free from stones. Its soil is rich, that of this region being mostly alluvial. It is composed of the shrunken basin of Lake Titicaca, and there are millions of acres of it which have never been thoroughly farmed. The Indians use plows made of wood that cut the ground to a depth of three inches. They have bullocks to drag them, and farm the same way they did generations ago. Nevertheless they grow fairly good crops, and with deep plowing large crops of barley are produced.

I talked with Mr. Harlan about the grasses of the pampa. We went together out on the plain, and he showed me the sod. It is a compact turf made of short native grasses, mixed with the wild clover that lies close to the ground.

It seemed to me very poor, but Mr. Harlan says that the sheep and alpacas and llamas live well on it, although it is short for the cattle.

Leaving this place we went to the grassplots where experiments are being made with hardy grasses from different parts of the world. There I saw American timothy and red clover sprouting through the brown soil. I saw patches of Russian grasses that were growing luxuriantly and also wheat grasses from our western plains as well as one of the families of blue grass that thrive on the high plateau of the Rockies. So far the experiments are not advanced enough to make decided predictions, but there is no doubt but that a great improvement can be produced by new seeds from abroad.

The farming I have referred to is where the moisture is supplied entirely by the rainfall. This is scanty, but it is enough for barley and grasses of various kinds, and it is a question whether with dry farming it would not be sufficient for wheat. It relates mostly to the pampa, which is 13,000 feet high.

It is different where the soil can be irrigated. Everywhere along the railroad from the sea to the tops of the Andes there are irrigated valleys. On the western slopes the water supply is poor, and the streams are small, but a little water makes the desert a garden. The Chile river is one strip of green all the way from the sea to the tops of the Andes, and about Arequipa it raises wheat, barley, corn and all of the vegetables and fruits of the tropic and temperate zones.

Crossing over the coast range and coming into the plateau, you find cultivated lands along both sides of the Vilcanota river all the way down to Cuzco. The valley in the plateau is in fact a series of little gardens of Eden, the water being carried out over them so that it falls from level to level. The fields are in terraces that are now green with luxuriant crops. In coming here to Sicuani I saw many patches of barley, potatoes and beans; and also hundreds of little fields of Indian corn. This crop now reaches to the height of my knee in the high altitudes, but to the height of my shoulder where the lands are a little lower and consequently warmer.

In the valley of Cuzco, which we shall go through tomorrow, the crops are still more advanced, and the barley, which is green in the highlands, is there almost ready for harvest. The lands of these valleys look very different from the plateaus that are fed alone by the rains. The irrigated lands are exceedingly valuable. They have all been taken up by the whites or the Cholos, and are exploited by them with Indian labor. Here the lands are often divided by mud fences. The fields are consecutive, and you see the villages made of mud huts which are occupied by the Indians, who do the hard work. On the non-irrigated plateaus the land yields much less and the greater part of them are given over to pastures. Here you find hundreds of Indian squatters, each of whom has his little mud hut, with a corral or so made of stones or mud into which his flocks are driven at night. He may have two or three acres of potatoes or quinua, and perhaps a small patch of barley, but as a rule the crop is grown only to supply his own needs. The methods of such farming are rude to an extreme, but the patches seem clean and the Indians work very hard.

The chief industry of this great plateau of the Andes is the raising of stock. I have seen millions of sheep on my way across the plateau, and tens of thousands of alpacas, llamas, as well as many horses, cattle and donkeys. The donkeys and llamas form the beasts of burden, and you see them driven in long caravans over the plain, followed by Indian men and women, who are either their owners or in charge of them for their masters. I never get tired of watching the llamas. One can see them everywhere on the plateau. They walk in caravans along the trails; they crowd the streets of the villages and droves of them line the plazas of every city and town. They are, in fact, the freight trains of the high Andes, and they compete, with the railroad. They carry grain, vegetables, hides, alcohol, ores, leaves and goods of every description. Many of them are used to transfer the ore from the mines to the smelters; and the farmers employ them to take their goods to the towns and railroads.

The llamas pack the freight on their backs, the burden being tied on like a saddle, and not in panniers, as upon donkeys. There is a current story that a llama will carry just 100 pounds, and that if you put on one ounce more he will lie down, and no whipping or beating can make him go on. This statement is ridiculous. The llama, if over-burdened, will surely lie down and refuse to move; but as to his having the intelligence to know when the hundred-pound load is reached, that is one of the fictions of traveling Munchausens. Indeed, there are very few llamas that can carry as much as a hundred pounds. The animals are of different strengths, and the average load is about seventy-five or eighty pounds, although there are some beasts that will carry one hundred and twenty. A matter of a pound or so makes no difference, and it is only when the animal feels that he has much more than his strength will support that he refuses to go.

The llamas are of different sizes, according to their ages and the care that has been taken of them. When full grown their heads reach a height of six feet or more; but they have long necks, and their hold these straight up, which makes them look taller. They have long ears that stand out like those of a fox terrier. They are full, round bodies, like that of a sheep, and comparatively long legs. The look, in short, like miniature camels, and I am told that they have the same power as the camel of going several days without food or water. Many of the farms are long distances from the towns or railroads, and a llama has often to make a journey of four or five days or a week in carrying his load to and from home. During this time he eats practically nothing, and goes along without water. This seems incredible, but I am told it is true. The llama wool is coarse, and it has no value in commerce. It is used by the Indians to spin thread and make cloth. The meat is also too coarse for the markets.

The alpacas are much smaller than the llamas, and in some respects more beautiful. They are a great deal more delicate, and are not used as beasts of burden, although there are crosses between the alpaca and llama which make as freight carriers. They are usually to be seen in the llama trains and are often of a brownish yellow color. The alpacas one sees on the pastures and there are millions of them on the high Andes, are white, black or brown. Sometimes they are spotted. They do not thrive anywhere below a mile and a half above the sea, and they are most found at a height of two miles or more. They have a fine long wool that brings 4 or 5 cents more a pound than sheep's wool. They are kept for the wool, being clipped every two years, when the fleece of the ordinary animal should weigh five pounds. The shearing is done sooner the wool is short and it brings very much less.

I have seen some vicunas during my trip through the Andes. They are the wild half-sisters and brothers of the llamas and alpacas and are smaller than either. They cannot be domesticated, but they will sometimes come down from the mountains and mix with flocks of llamas, alpacas and sheep on the plains. They are often shot by the Indians and Cholos, although this is against the law.

The vicuna wool is finer than that of the alpaca and it brings a high price. There is so little of it, however, that it is hardly worth mention. Much of the vicuna cloth so-called is made of alpaca wool. The vicunas are sandy in color, and their wools further as to that of a seal. For this reason their skins are used to make the rugs so highly prized by the tourists. These rugs vary in value according to the part of the animal from which the pieces of skin come. A rug made from the necks or legs is much more valuable than one from pieces taken from the rest of the body. During my visit to South America fifteen years ago I bought a beautiful rug in La Paz, Bolivia, for about $20 in gold. I am told that similar ones will now cost $75 and upward.

Is Mere Knowledge a Moral Prophylactic?

By Bishop Warren A. Candler

MANY people seem to assume that human sin is the result of human ignorance, and that it can be prevented by imparting to men the knowledge of its evil consequences. This was the belief of a certain school of ancient philosophers in Greece.

If the theory were correct, the problem of sin would be easy to solve. Information would be the efficacious remedy for all iniquity; and in school he found the sources of universal salvation.

Unfortunately, the facts of history do not justify the theory that accurate knowledge of evil is a moral prophylactic. Men do not sin for lack of knowledge, but for love of evil in the light of fullest acquaintance with its nature and results. A Latin poet perceived this and said, as paraphrased by Pope, "I know the right and approved it too; I know the wrong, and yet the wrong pursue."

St. Paul also said, "When I would do good, evil is present with me." Jesus said, "Men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil."

Universal experience contradicts the notion that men sin because they do not know the evil of sin. The eating of the fruit of the tree of knowledge has no effect to make men virtuous and holy. On the contrary, it not infrequently results in making them vicious and unclean. Men and nations have fallen to the lowest depths of depravity when they were most cultured and enlightened.

It is passing strange that many people, ignore these established facts of history and unquestionable records of human experience, and continue to insist that ignorance is the source of sin and knowledge the panacea for all evil.

We have reformers who think to cure licentiousness by prurient expositions of what they are pleased to call "sex hygiene." They mean well, perhaps; or it is charitable to assume that most of them mean well; but they are following a mistaken course whatever may be their intentions. They will by such unguided methods create more vice than they will cure. They will pollute the imaginations of thousands of boys and girls with all sorts of foul pictures and images. Boys of a certain type will find more demoralizing gratification in listening to the discussions of subjects of this kind than they will find moral benefit. It is not impossible that some who insist on giving these lessons in "sex hygiene" also really find a secret pleasure for themselves in the discussions of such matters. The over-emphasizing of the fact of sex cannot fail to be suggestive and productive of unspeakable evils.

"Vice is a monster of such hideous mien
That to be hated needs only to be seen.
But seen too oft, familiar with its face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

It is a specious way of setting up salacious shows, when vice is exhibited in moving pictures under the pretense of warning to the young against it. These exhibitions will yield a vast output of licentiousness.

Does any man think for a moment that the most licentious people are ignorant of the results of their vile habits? The sinners of Sodom and Gomarrah knew perfectly the evil of their foul courses of conduct. The debauched inhabitants of Herculaneum and Pompeii knew as well as we do the horrible consequences of such living as characterized them. They sinned against light, and not for lack of light.

There is another application of the truth that knowledge is not a moral prophylactic to which we do well to attend. There is a mania for education arising from the delusion that universal education will end all crime. Georgia spends hundreds of thousands of dollars annually at the behest of men who are laboring under this delusion. The experiment will lead to disappointment. Education alone will not diminish crime. It may increase such crimes as forgeries, embezzlements, infanticide, and immoral divorces. Our prisons and penitentiaries are filled with educated criminals.

There is no moral antiseptic quality in mere education.

We must depend upon religion for the moral renovation of mankind. Men are saved by faith, if they are ever saved at all. It is not the eating of the fruit of the tree of knowledge which brings health to morals. Men must eat of the tree of life which stands in the midst of the Paradise of God.

"'Tis life of which our veins are scant." For light out souls crave. And this is life eternal to know the only true God and Jesus Christ whom he has sent."

SOME MEXICAN FIGHTERS I'VE KNOWN

Wylie Smith

General Francisco Villa

By Angus Perkerson

FIRST let's have Orozco, that long-armed, long-legged, gangling, mule-driver," suggested Wylie Smith. "You spell his front name Pascual. Sounds like opera, but a specialty is war."

The chronicler of Mexican fighting men put his feet on the banisters, propped his cap on his knee, and chewed a cigar.

A scissors grinder across the street let a big brass bell up and down in a somnolent fashion suggesting the cream bell ringers Robert Louis Stevenson used to hear toward the close of a chapter when he was absorbing through the southern part of France and the sky was turning apricot and bell notes were just the thing to give atmosphere and roundness to a paragraph.

The trees on the sidewalk in front of 190 South Pryor were green with new leaves all fuzzy with a sort of blossom that isn't flowers or sweet, but is still satisfying if a rather drab symbol of spring. The sun was unearthly, the porch was shaded, the street was quiet.

"Is there such a place as Mexico? Who knows?

"What is it?"

Mr. Smith sighed, and passed his hand over his chin.

"I remember," he said, "the death of illustrious captain. Orozco shot him through the heart.

It was at Chihuahua. We hadn't been paid for three months, we'd parched corn till to this day it still gives me a shiver, and there was something we'd about seven-company of troops were needed to give a detachment near Chihuahua. I can see Pascual Orozco now as he started to a lean, lank, tall, dark, gloomy looking captain.

"Down there in a hurry,' he suggested. And then the captain did something I didn't think any man would be foolish enough to do. He put his long legs over toward me with a quid of tobacco sticking in his cheek—I remember that as he left cheek, it caught my eye. And he drew himself up, stuck one hand on his hip, and said:

"'When do we get paid?'

"'Pay?' said Orozco, wonderingly. "'Money?' Then he spread out his hands. A Mexican says a lot of things that way. What he meant now was that money was as strange to his fingers as sirloin steak was to his palate.

"The foolish captain humped up his shoulders, gathered his eyebrows together, and spread out his legs.

"'I don't go,' he said.

"Then, Orozco spread out his hands again, but he was speaking this time to the bunch of soldiers near him, and what he was saying in that dumb language was 'Grab him.' There's nothing a Mexican soldier had rather do to an officer.

"The captain turned as white around the gills as though something had happened to his circulation, and he backed off. Suddenly he wheeled round, took two long steps, and started to run.

Orozco's War.

"Well, of course the soldiers could have finished it. But I guess Orozco saw where he could increase the effect by playing the part himself. His hand went down to his belt, up into the air, his arm half bent, his head cocked to one side, and his face wrinkled.

"I must have looked from one man to the other. Anyway, I got an impression of two figures: Orozco, his head to one side, his body as still as marble, and the foolish captain, running, bent over, as though he knew what was coming. I couldn't see his face, but I know the fear of death was on him.

"Well, we heard the shot, we saw him turn over on his face, and kick out his feet.

"'Now,'" says Orozco to another captain, 'get down there in a hurry.'

"Then, he turned away, from the man who lay still on the ground, and again puffed out with a quid of tobacco.

"That was the way of Orozco—Pascual Orozco, the short-bodied, long-legged, long-armed, lean faced general who's fighting today under Huerta.

"I knew him best of all the Mexican fighting men. I also knew Jose Ynez Salazar, Francisco Villa, whom they called Pancho Villa, Antonio Rojas, and any number of the little ones. But let's keep to Orozco a little while longer.

"The man's a peon; he's practically illiterate. But he has the personality. You've met that sort, haven't you? Men that are coarse grained, rough in speech, but with something about them that holds you.

"That was Orozco. Whatever he said the peons did. I tell you he fairly hypnotized them. Madero was the man to realize this. When he started his revolution that led to the presidency and Death, that aftermath of Mexican victory, he met up with Orozco who was driving pack mules from the city of Madera over the mountains to Dolores.

When Orozco Quit.

"The very man to reach the lowest class, thought Madero, and he thought right.

"It was a matter of days and no more before Orozco had an army yelling for Madero and fighting for the mule-driver. They themselves thought they had Madero's cause. But it really was the long-armed, short-bodied, ungainly mule-driver they were fighting for.

"When the time came that Madero lost his love for Orozco, this was proved.

"If you'll remember, Orozco gave up his command at Chihuahua. He had lost Madero's confidence, so he quit and Villa was marching to the city to relieve him.

"It was Saturday morning, I remember, and Orozco walked out among his troops. They lined up and waited for him to speak.

"Whether you know it or not a Mexican likes to line up. If there are only three or four of them, they'll form in a line to listen to the spokesman.

"Orozco stood with his long arms dangling down, his hands reaching below his knees, and his shoulders bent a little in his characteristic way. Suddenly he threw out his arms.

"'We've done the fighting, haven't we?' he shouted. "'We're the peons? What's Madero—an aristocrat. What's he done for you or me? What's he ever going to do.

"'Now,' he cried, "'every man that's goin' with me, step out.'

They Ill Stepped.

"And they all stepped. In half an hour they were marching out to meet Villa, who was nearing the city, knowing nothing about what had happened. Orozco met him, and not a dozen shots were fired before Villa and all his men were footing it for safety.

"As for Villa, I fought against him, not with him; and my news of the exbandit is a good deal hearsay. You know, for 15 years he was a mere robber, taking whatever he needed. The murder of a Mexican started him on that road, but it's a crime in which you'll almost sympathize with him.

"He had a sister. They say she was as soft as he was hard, and they say, too, there was an uncommon love between them. She was about the only person who ever discovered any very deep vein of tenderness in Villa and she also uncovered not a little bit of murderous cold-bloodedness.

"Well, the long and short of it is, she suffered at the hands of a Mexican, and Villa found the man. He brought the fellow to the ranch where Villa and his sister lived, and called in a priest. The two were married, and Villa told the priest to go away. Then, he took the man out in front of the house—not 10 minutes after the wedding was done with—and shot him to death. That was his way.

What Villa Has Learned.

"One thing a Mexican doesn't know how to do is to follow up an advantage. If he dislodges an enemy he's satisfied. But Villa's learned to follow a successful attack with pursuit, and to rout the enemy thoroughly. But somebody's taught him that. No Mexican could find it out by himself.

"Well, let's talk a little about Salazar now. He's the czar, the unrivaled. When he passed by a group of soldiers, they stood up straight without breathing, and saluted. And when one of them came before him for misconduct the poor accused man made the sign of the cross and made his peace with God. It was a good thing to do. Any breach of discipline, and Salazar had you shot.

"Remember, I told you about him and the Mormons. A watch had been stolen. The threee men were found. 'Shoot them,' said Salazar. A woman was outraged, a troop of soldiers were lined up, and she was told to pick out the man. She hesitated, and pointed to one.

"'A little while to pray,'" he pleaded; and added, "'I'm innocent.'

"'If you're innocent,'" said Salazar, "'what's the use of praying.'

"Then, they shot him right there, though God knows whether he was the man or not. That was Salazar's way.

"He and Antonio Rojas are now in prison in Texas, and I understand that arrangements are being made to release them. But they are as unlike as fellow fighters could be. Rojas is the most whole-souled, good-natured murderer you ever met with. And he's a fighting man who goes the limit. But he isn't ruthless. He kills in war, but in peace he slaps his men on the back, private or officer, and makes the last one of them love him.

Tom Fountain's Death.

"But he's got the blood-lust in him, they all have in Mexico. They like to kill. Fifty per cent of the men that fought to put Madero in, fought to put him out. Same way with Huerta. It would take 50,000 troops to maintain peace in Mexico.

"I say they like to kill. I'll tell you the story of Tom Fountain to prove it. Salazar attacked Villa at Parral and ran him out. And one of the crowd that was cut off and taken was Tom Fountain, who'd been mowing us down with a machine gun he'd set up over in a corner of the town.

"'We'll shoot them all the first thing in the morning,'" was what Salazar decided.

"But the American consul heard Tom was from the states, and he got busy.

"'That's an American citizen,'" he sent word, "'so go slow.'"

"'Well, an American citizen has got to business shooting at us,' was the way Salazar answered. "'We're going to treat him like the others.'

"But he did decide to give Tom 24 hours respite. And when the bunch of rebs were moved out the next morning from a slaughter house to be shot, a separate squad took Tom Fountain and started him toward Salazar's tent.

"The consul, the general, and you are going to have a little three-cornered talk, was the first word they brought. But as they walked along, a sergeant siddled up and whispered in his ear.

"'Say,' said the Mexican, 'they're goin' to kill you up there, and your chance is to run now.'

"'And be shot,' said Tom Fountain.

"'No,' denied the sergeant. 'We won't shoot. We'll let you get away to avoid trouble.'

"They were passing then by an empty square, round which the adobe wall had crumbled. You know, in Mexico, it's a custom to wall up the vacant squares.

"'All right,' whispered the sergeant to Tom Fountain. And the American fighting man took his chance. He got as far as the crumbled wall when they fired, riddling him, and he crumpled up full of holes.

"I happened to know that if he'd gone on to Salazar's tent they wouldn't have dared to shoot him. But the guile of the sergeant gave him a chance to kill another man."

Wylie Smith leaned forward, put on his cap, and lit the cigar. The dreamy bell ringer returned along the street, the sun seemed to grow hotter, the neighborhood yawned.

"Mexico seemed a reality. And as for war—you could picture Orozco shooting another long, lean, dark, tall, dark, gloomy, ruthless captain.

"Yes," added Wylie Smith, "they've all got into the fighting habit down there. They've got the taste of blood and I don't know how it's to be got out of them.

Famous Race Horses and Turfmen of the Old South

By Mrs. G. O. Stovall

FOR a moment or two the old gentleman's deliberate air obtained his moustache gently, gazed in a far away manner ahead of him then in reply to a question which had been put to him said: "Yes, gentlemen, if I'm correct horse racing began in South Carolina far back as 1734, and some of our most distinguished were enthusiasts on the subject.

Soon after the Revolutionary war, generals Washington, Sumter, Hampton, Aiston, Richardson and a host of others were noted turfmen. My grandfather, and my father, who believed with the best men of the old south in the wholesomeness of outdoor sports, spent fortunes in keeping up first-class studs and tracks. From my boyhood I loved to see the speed and pedigree of well bred racers of the day.

Of all the horses my grandfather owned, continued the general, "there was probably none he so idolized as Fair Light. Cornet was great, wonderfully great in the turf world, as you probably know, but Flash Light ruled in my heart. His name suited him, he was keen as a blade, fleet of foot and was the matchless model of his time. He and Cornet were both the events especially for them, but with courageous spirit dashed in the speedily arranged handicaps for older horses and snatched the laurels from them. Ah! I tell you it must be a rare pleasure to the man with the love of the thoroughbred in his nature to be able to own a stable of famous equinine aristocracy such as our old south nabobs did.

"A man to look upon his horses from the time they were foaled until they walk down the paddock after their race victorious over everything which could run against them, brings an exaltation of spirit that is stimulating and glorious. By George! my blood tingles when I think of it."

Here the old general raised his glass and took a generous sip of gin-fix.

"Now, well as I can recall, the name of John Irving stands pre-eminent in the turf world of the sixties. He was the king of turfmen in lower Carolina, I do not know if any of you are aware that he was the father of the famous artist Beaufaine Irving, known as the American Messenger. Yes, Irving was a millionaire sportsman and his stables age most proof in the coast region of South Carolina.

"Meteor, a great black colt, was his most successful winner, but he had a long line of horses of royal pedigree. This old nabob used to emphasize the fact that he did not buy and breed horses solely to succeed in the betting ring, but as a matter of personal pride in gathering a collection of racers that should be invincible in certain contests.

"Now another distinguished turfman was Glascock Bacon. He was the grandson of the historical Ned Brace. Colonel Bacon's breeding farm in Edgefield was the wonder and envy of horse lovers. This farm was not very far from his home, Baconsfield, a grand old mansion where he used to dispense the most glorious hospitality.

"My father was a frequent guest at Baconsfield, and my memory glows with recitals of his princely entertainment. By the way, he was as famed for his mint juleps as for his racers, but we will discuss the latter," said the general.

"Now the record of his stables was one continued success. Girl O' My Heart was the beauty of the turf and she seemed to have made the run triumphant in many a race, but Colonel Bacon's favorite of any horse he ever owned was Mona, a handsome, clean-coated, sure-footed animal, the winner of stakes both in the south and east. But possibly the most valuable animal in the Bacon stables was Lynchburg, a high-spirited three-year-old and a three-year-old of sterling worth, well made and well muscled with a stride and a heart that carried him to victory in many a hard fought race on the fashionable tracks.

"It was at Saratoga that Lynchburg met with an accident resulting later in his death. This was after a most successful race. No victory of the year was hailed with such a wild burst of applause and approval as when the horse swept by the grandstand in the lead, and as his jockey jogged him back to the judge's stand to dismount, there was a popular demonstration.

"To prove his devotion to Lynchburg Colonel Bacon had one of the hoofs of the horse polished and beautifully carved and made into a medallion incrusted with rare jewels which his wife wore and treasured beyond all her possessions. This old school lady, Mrs. Bacon, died recently having nearly reached the century mark. To the last, she would glow and brighten with enthusiasm as she exhibited the various trophies and related the tales of tragedy and romance woven around the racers of the Baconsfield stables.

"James R. Keen," continued the general, "is the only man I ever met who had as deep affection for his racers as Colonel Bacon. I visited him at Castleton, Lexington, Ky., many years ago. The record of his stable has been one of immense financial victory, from the days of Domino, the famous black colt that won more than $190,000 as a two-year-old, and I know on authority that his horses won in five years one million dollars.

"Of all the horses Mr. Keen ever owned during his long career as a breeder and sportsman, Domino was his favorite.

"When Domino died in Kentucky in 1897 his owner caused to be erected over his grave a monument bearing an inscription which testified to his love for the horse and to his sterling worth as a racer. The inscription reads, 'One of the best friends I ever had, and the fleetest horse ever foaled is dead.'

"It was in 1893 that Mr. Keen was threatened with downfall in Wall street. The financial foundations were reported to be slipping from under his feet. Domino won for him more than $150,000. A stanch friend that, and one Mr. Keen never forgot, he loved the ground that the horse walked on. While Mr. Keen idolised Domino, he regarded Sysonby as the greatest horse that ever lived. Sysonby is immortalized in the Museum of Natural History for that reason. His skeleton is the frame work of an animal that stood above all his kind in the estimation of competent judges.

"Mr. Keen stated that he believed we were breeding better horses in America and our type was improving. We are getting both speed and stamina, which means much for the horse.

"While I'm no authority on the subject, it is my opinion that in the Blue Grass region of Kentucky comes the most graceful and the fleetest of America's race horses. But gentlemen, speaking of my friend Keen and the millions of dollars he has realized from his racers reminds me to say, in the days of our grandfathers, racing was far different from what it is now. It was excitement and pride centered in the thoroughbred animal, not in the stakes. The object was to iprove the breed of horses, and they were run by the owners for the satisfaction of having their stock distinguished. You ask," said the old general, "do I mean we had no prize or purse? Never a purse, my friend, but usually a piece of silver or an elegantly wrought cup. There is nothing in all this world of value more than several magnificent loving cups I inherit. You see in the 'South Carolina Jockey club' there was a rule that if the cup was won three times consecutively by the party who entered the horse it became his permanently. My grandfather's Flash Light won in 1842 the handsomest trophy I have. It is a massive gold vase-shaped affair engraved elaborately.

"Well you may say you would like to have lived south in those days," said the general warmly. "Yes, those were glorious times, and the turfmen were bred in a lofty, honest school. I can assure you there was no corruption and thievery tolerated by the old south turfman, but—." Here the old general broke off abruptly and smiled in a quizzical way as he glanced around the table.

"Now, if I'm not mistaken gentlemen, you would like to hear something of the famous mint julep of that day, and possibly you would enjoy a demonstration of its merits. You ask rust the mint—be—bruised? Why, of course not! From my early boyhood I remember hearing my father call to old Jerry, the butler, when ordering him to make a julep, his final order would be, 'remember don't bruise the mint.' I can now see the black face scowl with injured dignity as he would courtsey low and turn toward the mint plot which flourished luxuriously near by.

Speculators Are Getting Their Thrills In the Oklahoma Oil Fields

CLEVELAND, Okla.—The oil fields of Oklahoma, especially in the so-called "wildcat" territory, are daily bringing unexpected thrills to inexperienced speculators. Not to mention only chance for the man with small capital to dip in is at the beginning, when it is possible to lease the oil and gas rights on land for small sums.

Leases acquired at from 50 cents to $1 or $5 an acre often jump to $40 or $100 an acre in a week when oil is struck. This is when the small speculator takes his profits, as he is without capital to sink wells, and would be in danger of striking a "dry" hole and going to smash, even if he had a comfortable sum for development purposes.

A company of tenderfoot speculators got possession of a lot of acreage in this vicinity. The outlook was promising, but the company did not have enough money to begin drilling. Several days ago something happened to the members of the company that was not unlike a dynamite explosion. All are still looking at each other, dumfounded and amazed.

The tenderfeet had looked over the situation carefully, and reached the conclusion that it was about time to turn loose. If they should hold on too long somebody might strike a dry well on adjacent laud, and this would make their lease worthless. All agreed that the thing to do was to sell out. None of the men had ever been as much as a thousand dollars in one pile in his life.

Conspirators Agree on Price.

The first important step was to fix the selling price. They must put it high. One suggested that $15,000 would be pretty fair. An abler financier stuck for $20,000. After much discussion there was general agreement that $25,000 would be the bottom price. Then the plan was boldly to ask $35,000, and cut off $10,000 if the prospective purchaser should show signs of cold feet.

As a matter of fact, the tenderfeet, in their inexperience, had only a vague idea of how good or how bad were the possibilities of their lease holdings. The agents of the big producing company—a company that commanded millions, if necessary—had been in the field, and knew as nearly as such things may be known that a big oil pool was not far away.

An agent of this company went to see the company of tenderfeet, with authority to buy what they had. The tenderfeet gathered round him, each with the look of a conspirator.

"Gentlemen," said the agent, "my company is in the market for more production and wants to buy your holdings, for which it is willing to pay a fair price. This is purely a business transaction and I have no time to stall around with you. I am authorized to offer you"—

One of the tenderfeet had started in to say "Nothing less than $35,000 goes with us," but was kicked on the shins by a tenderfoot that sat next to him. The agent continued:

"The sum of $250,000. Think it over. You'll not get a better offer."

Well Is Still to Be Dug.

The tenderfeet gasped and then shook as if they had the ague. One of them managed, finally, to say, chatteringly, that a "little time would be necessary for consultation."

Did they sell? They did not. They stole in an inner room, locked the door, pounded each other on the back and danced a Highland fling. Then, as one, they charged the agent of the big producing company with being a tricky, designing person—trying to get something for much less than it was worth. They agreed that their land must have a fabulous value if such an offer as the agent had proposed could be made right off the bat.

So the tenderfeet told the agent to go away and not annoy them, as they were no longer in the market. The land has not been drilled. It may prove dry when it is drilled.

SAVANNAH WOMAN DRESSED AS A MAN FOUGHT THROUGH CIVIL WAR

When Mrs. Patrick Kenney's Husband Enlisted in the Southern Army She Donned Man's Clothes and Went With Him to the War. When He Was Killed, She Brought His Remains Home for Burial

IN Savannah, Ga., there lives a woman whose life has been as remarkable as any characters of fiction. She is probably the only woman in the world who ever actually enlisted in the ranks and fought through war as a man. Mrs. Lucy Matilda Kenney, who says she is now a centenarian, is to the south what Joan of Arc is to France, and what Molly Pitcher is to Revolutionary fame. She is still in excellent health, her eyesight is perfect, and her recollections of the battles in which she participated graphic.

With her hair cropped and in the habiliments of a man, Mrs. Kenney, then Mrs. Bryant, fought from Manassas to Fredericksburg, shoulder to shoulder with her husband, whose dead body she finally brought from the trenches in front of Richmond for burial at the old home in Baden county, North Carolina. Mrs. Kenney was known on the rolls of the Confederacy as private Bill Thompson, Company B, Eighteenth North Carolina infantry, under the command of Captain Robert Tate. Of rather masculine appearance, it was only necessary for her to cut her hair and don a suit of her husband's clothes in order to pass as a man.

Mrs. Kenney and her husband went to the front with the first batch of volunteers from the "Tar Heel" state; was badly wounded in the first battle of Manassas, and as a result she wears a long, ragged scar on her scalp to this day. The wound was inflicted by a bursting shell. Her husband, Patrick Kenney, whom she married after the war, died a few weeks ago at the advanced age of one hundred years. The remarkable story of the old woman was found in his memoirs. She has a number of children and grandchildren living in Georgia and North Carolina.

Story Told for First Time.

This is the first time that Mrs. Kenney has ever consented to relate the details of her unusual career. Outside of her immediate family nobody knew of the tragic events in the life of this old woman, who is spending the evening of her days surrounded by a few of her remaining children, some of her grandchildren and a few friends. Fate has decreed to her only the bare necessities of life, but her indomitable spirit still lives, and she finds happiness in optimism. Mrs. Kenney declares that if she were some years younger and the war were to be fought over again for the same cause she would again be willing to fight for her country. But admits with a smile that she had much rather attend the Confederate reunion in Jacksonville next month.

While hundreds of the noble women of the southland were bending over their spinning wheels, weaving shirts and socks for their brave fathers, brothers and sweethearts facing death upon the firing line, the sturdy woman of whom this story relates was enduring the privations and hardships of the soldiers in the field, plunging through the murk of battle with a gun in her hands, taking life and offering her own in sacrifice. Now, a half century afterwards, when many of her comrades have answered the final roll call, Mrs. Kenney lives and relates with remarkable accuracy the history of those days that "tried men's souls."

Now, in her declining years, she has a mind that is bright and active, a sight that is keen and piercing, a heart that is perfect and a memory that is retentive. She has never worn glasses, and the visits of the family physician to her home have been infrequent in spite of the sufferings inflicted upon her by the hand of war and the misfortune of circumstances. Mrs. Kenney was born in the year that America wrested her second victory from the mother country, and she fully expects to live for many years to come. She is still active and ambitious, and takes a keen interest in the current history of the times.

But it is the story of her career as a soldier in the field that is of greatest interest. It is a story of war and love, of sacrifice and adventure, of struggles and sorrows. It is a human document as thrilling as any in the pages of fiction. There is not in all the world a woman who has endured the hardships of Mrs. Kenney and lives to tell the tale. There is not another woman in the world who has charged shoulder to shoulder with men over a field slippery with blood into the belching cannon's mouth.

Born in Old North State.

Born of the stanch stock of the rural districts of the Old North State, Mrs. Kenney had blossomed into matrue womanhood as the wife of Braynot G. Gauss when the Southern states seceded. She had been reared on a farm near Bladenboro. She had the vitality of the women accustomed to a life in the open in the days before modern inventions hastened the work of the agriculturist and his household. Her vigor enabled her to withstand the hardships which she later endured.

When the south first called her sons to arms, Bryant Gauss was among the first to offer his services to his country. His wife would not consent to be left at home. She feared that the fire of the enemy might cause his body to be left unidentified on some far battlefield. Her love overcame her natural timidity. She determined to accompany him in the ranks of the army and to share with him the fortunes of the struggle. The fact that a woman could not enlist was not sufficient to deter her. Those who composed the volunteers from that section of the state were her acquaintances. It was largely through this fact, and the sympathy these patriotic men had for her, that she was enabled to accomplish her purpose—that of accompanying her husband to the battlefield.

Enlisted With Her Husband.

Mrs. Gauss was then a woman of 165 pounds. Her rather masculine features aided her in disguising herself as a man. When her hair was shorn and she had donned a suit of man's clothing she could readily pass as a man. She enlisted in the same company with her husband—Company B, Eighteenth North Carolina Regiment, which was mustered in at Bladenboro. With her musket, knapsack, canteen and blanket, she took her place in line, shoulder to shoulder with the strong men of the community. Without her secret being known to anybody in authority to force her to return home, she fought from the Battle of Manassas until after Fredericksburg.

A compact existed between Mrs. Gauss and her husband. It was that if he should be killed on the field of battle she was to take his body home; if she was killed it should be his duty to see that she found a final resting place among the scenes of her childhood. This compact was carried out despite the fact that it was the man who was killed. Mrs. Gauss was forced to face all manner of dangers to accomplish it.

Today Mrs. Kenney recalls the name of the commander of her company—Capt. Bob Tate—and her first lieutenant—Wiley Sykes. Many of the names of those who composed the rank and of the command are also on the tip of her tongue. Likewise, she recalls the names of all the battles in which she was engaged. The plan of action and the results of these engagements are all vividly engraved on her memory. Of all the battles in which she participated she recalls most vividly the seven days' fight around Richmond—for it was here that her beloved husband went to his death. During the years she was in the army she was known by no other name than that of Private Thompson, and those of her comrades who knew her history never gave her secret away.

She Was a Good Soldier.

This soldier woman endured long marches, accepted without complaint the scanty fare which was the portion of the southern soldier, did her tours of duty on the picket line and forced her woman body into the thick of the fray whenever there was work to be done. She was a good soldier then and she is a good soldier now, doing her duty each day as she sees it, fearing naught but the wrath of God with whom she has long since made her peace.

"I have seen the lightning and the thunder," she remarked, referring to the firing of the old flint and steel guns. "I could handle my musket like a man."

Mrs. Kenney relates an instance in which the corporal of her company undertook to test her ability as a sentinel, and as a result narrowly escaped being shot. She was walking a beat on the line one night when the crackling of twigs warned her of the approach of some living thing. In those days a soldier shot first and thought about it afterward. Mrs. Kenney relates that she was quick to call "halt" and to ask for the countersign. It was not forthcoming. Upon her thrice repeated request she allowed her musket to back up her voice.

"But," she says, laughing, "I missed him," and adds that he then made himself known.

It was not long after entering the service that the nerve of the woman became steeled. After experiencing her first few engagements and losing her inherent shyness of guns and the smell of powder the battle lost a part of its fear for her, the bloody field some of its horrors.

"I have seen men on the field, after the battle," she says, "bleeding and dying and dead; some calling for water, others calling for help, many lying silent."

During the long months of the struggle she was with her husband almost continually. They fought side by side against the common enemy. He was her camp mate. Fortunately they were allowed to remain in the same company all the time. It was thus possible for Mrs. Kenney to continue her incognito. It was only when on detail duty that she was away from him.

Where Mrs. Kenney's Husband Was Killed

Mrs. Kenney's Ho me

Atlanta, Mecca of Shriners, Will Entertain 35,000 Guests

be busy night and day, all week. The big hotels will not close their dining rooms, except for an hour or so before daylight each morning. Special precautions have been taken to guard against a famine. Great quantities of meat and poultry and vegetables have been ordered, over and above what Atlanta normally would consume. These will be poured into the city by the carload in the week and during the first three days of next week.

Train City Is Coming.

A "train city," made up of Pullman cars parked on a vast maze of trackage south of the city will spring up overnight and be before the eyes one week from today. Special trains by the score will be parked there in their entirety, and thousands of Shriners will know no other quarters during their stay in Atlanta. This will be the sleeping place and the eating place of a great multitude of men and women. The city authorities have made extraordinary arrangements for the sanitation of the community. Pure water will be piped to the cars. Ice will be furnished every day. Supplies will be available. The assembling of that city, and its dissolution after the meeting is over, will present problems that none but experienced railroad men would dare to meet. During the week there will not be an extra Pullman car available at any price anywhere in the United States. All will be assembled in and around Atlanta.

Atlanta raised over $75,000, in April, 1913, for the entertainment of the Shriners this year. That fund was raised in a day, in response to The Journal's call upon Atlanta to finish the job at once. This money has been in use for weeks, paying for lights, for decorations, for special music, for programs. The bulk of it is left to be spent on banquets and balls and barbecues and other elaborate affairs.

The Hotel California.

But when Atlanta spends a dollar on entertainment the visitors will spend fifty. The four temples of California alone, for instance, will spend almost as much to get their trip to Atlanta as this city spends on all her visitors. The Californians are after the 1915 imperial council meeting. They want it to be held in San Francisco. Therefore they will make everybody in Atlanta boost California. They will keep open house on a magnificent scale in the Kimball house, having leased four floors of the hotel and secured the right to change its name for the week to "Hotel California." They will deck it with flags and lights until it won't be recognizable.

Seattle, too, is after the 1915 meeting. Other cities want it. The Californians will not have everything their own way. Other Shriners from the south, others from Canada, others from the northwest—all, in fact, will do their own share of entertaining. The Canadians, like the Californians, will bring with them trainloads of home products. Atlanta's hospitality will be lavish, but it will not begin to match that of her visitors during Shrine week. They will do their own entertaining, and Atlantians will be guests more frequently than they are hosts.

It will be that way about the spectacles, too. There is much in Atlanta that the Shriners want to see; but they will show us more than we will show them. There will be the two big parades, bigger than anything Atlanta—or the Shriners themselves, for that matter—ever saw before. One of these will march Tuesday morning, May 12, with 80 patrols and about 60 bands in the line. The other will march Tuesday evening, with all the patrols and bands plus every Shriner in Atlanta. There will be, too, the review and exhibition drills of the patrols, Wednesday morning, May 13, at Piedmont park. The park is really not big enough to hold the spectacle, but it is the biggest place available. Eight brigades, forming a division of men, will march in the review that morning. The patrols will drill three at a time, fifteen minutes each.

The only spectacle not furnished by the Shriners will be the motordrome races, and those are due to private enterprise encouraged by the local committee.

Brilliant Patrols.

The patrols will be things of beauty and perennial joy. Their uniforms, or rather their costumes, will cost an aggregate of about $1,000,000. They will be dressed like Arabs, like Persians, like nobles of the court of Queen Cleopatra, like everybody associated with the splendor of the Orient in silks and satins and gold lace, with gold-mounted scimitars and silver guns. Yaarab patrol is the Atlanta organization. It has ordered a costume of which its own members (save the officers) do not yet know the secret design and pattern. It has been drilling and drilling again, for weeks past. Its drilling and its trappings are expected to be second to no others that will be seen here.

The bands, too, will be gorgeously uniformed. Atlanta will furnish its own drum and bugle corps of 150 men recruited by Drum Major Johnny Peel, than whom there is no better, and uniformed by Yaarab temple. Every drum corps in Atlanta has merged into this one. The tremendous organization has been practicing for many days past, too. Those who heard it last Sunday afternoon in Ponce de Leon park (and they heard it, all right, if they were within a mile of the park) know what spirit there is in its music.

Bands will be everywhere, marching and serenading and concerting twenty-four hours a day. Many of the patrols will drill to music by their own bands. Music and bright colors will vie with each other to delight the senses. Some temples will bring not only their patrols and their bands, but also their own orchestras, or quartets, or glee clubs, or choruses.

Nor will all the colors be in the uniforms. Atlanta is to be decked with the red and yellow and green, Shrinedom's colors. Office buildings, stores, clubs, private homes, hotels, cafes—all are to be decorated with bunting and with lights. The Ansley hotel, headquarters of the imperial council, will be dressed lavishly by day and by night. The sign of the crescent and scimitar will be outlined everywhere. Even the dome of the state capitol will glow with light for the first time since the state house was built. Shop windows will be transformed. Shop windows will be filled with the official pennants, and they will be displayed in offices and on porches. Lawns will be abloom with flowers. Many beds of these have been planted to form the Shrine symbol of the scimitar and crescent. Everywhere—even on the automobiles in the streets—one will see the decorations honoring the Shriners.

Affairs for Ladies.

The ladies who come with the Shriners will not be overlooked. They will take part of course in the three grand balls at the auditorium, but not in the banquets and luncheons. The only private function at which all will be entertained will be the garden party at which Mrs. John M. Slaton will be the hostess on the grounds of her country home. They will be called upon in their hotels, though, by the ladies of the Atlanta reception committee, which Mrs. Slaton heads, and will be invited to innumerable smaller private affairs—teas, receptions, etc—which the ladies of Atlanta are planning. The social calendar of that week will be filled with attractive details.

The imperial council will leave for Savannah, Thursday night, May 14, under escort of Yaarab temple, traveling on several special trains. Its numbers and their ladies will spend Friday in Savannah. But the departure of this big party will not end the festivities in Atlanta. This city will be busy day and night till the end of the week.

Forrest Adair, illustrious potentate of Yaarab temple, who has been attending the imperial council meetings for the last dozen years or so, is the man responsible for Atlanta's privilege of entertaining the great gathering this year. From the time the suggestion was made by him, and was approved, and was accepted, until now he has been at the head of the whole affair. With the wisdom of a true general, he has delegated details to a score of assistants. He is the chairman of the local committee. His enthusiasm has been the spirit animating everything that has been done.

Colonel Frederic J. Paxon is one of Mr. Adair's foremost lieutenants. Colonel Paxon has worked zealously and unselfishly for the success of the big meeting. Another is Joseph C. Greenfield, secretary of the committee. Major J. O. Seamans has in charge all details relating to the review and drills of the patrols. Burton Smith has been designated grand marshal of the parades and has them in charge. W. A. Fuller has been assigned to direct the work of receiving the visitors on their arrival. A. S. Adams is head of the committee gathering automobiles for their use all week. A score of men have been directing different phases of the plans. Hundreds have been assisting them. It is no exaggeration to say literally that thousands of men have been engaged for weeks past in planning and preparing for the great week that lies ahead of Atlanta's history.

It is to be the greatest week in Atlanta's history.

Twenty-Two Years in Death Valley

LOS ANGELES.—Henry H. McVaughaen has returned to his Kerasfield home after twenty-two years in Death Valley, where for all that time he has been out of touch with civilization. The world around him, which has consisted of a sandy waste, hills and such reptiles and animals as Death Valley provides, has stood still, the world he left has gone ahead faster in the twenty-two years in a material way than it had in the century before.

Upon arrival McVaughaen found how far behind the procession he had been left. He walked around town to look up his old friends. He used to be the village blacksmith and knew nearly every one.

He thought at first he recognized a white horse he used to shoe and went up to it with pleasure, but upon coming closer he found it had a black mark above the left eye. He went along disconsolately.

Soon the great changes interested rather than depressed him. He experienced the sensation, despite his seventy-five years and twenty-two years of the world, of becoming a modern

"I never saw a skyscraper before," he said. "They told me I would know Los Angeles, it has grown into the air so. I'm gong down there and give my neck a good stretching looking up at them.

"What strikes me queerest, though, is the women. They don't look like women any more. When I went to the desert women had a lot of cloth in their skirts and curved hips and little waists, and it was only natural to suppose that was the way women were.

"But upon looking around me now I find they ain't that way at all. I can't figure out what's happened to them. They upset my ideas of what a woman should look like. Now out on the desert we have indian squaws and while they ain't very much on shape, nevertheless they sort of remind you of what a female form divine might appear like. I suppose it must be the fashions."

CONCERNING HEALTH and BEAUTY

MASSAGE—A FRIEND to the FAIR

Plumping the Cheeks

A Bit of Color

A Zig-Zag Massage

The Rotary Palm Motion

Hacking the Spine

Crows' Feet Will Disappear

WEBSTER'S definition of massage is "to knead; a system of remedial treatment consisting of kneading or rubbing the body." The word "massage" is derived from the Greek word "maseo," meaning "I knead." So far as can be learned, massaging originated in the east. Certainly it was known to ancient Romans and Egyptians for have we not read and heard how slaves were kept for this purpose? More than ever was massage necessary in those times because the limbs of persons were more exposed by the fashions of the day. In Russia the method is more strenuous than in our own and other countries, for after the kneading there comes frequently a light switching with birches.

I wish that every woman could realize the beautifying properties of massage. Massage, as you perhaps know, stimulates circulation. One thing about massage, however, that is little known is that it actually retards circulation if the body is kneaded and rubbed in the wrong direction. In massaging the body always rub from the heart, for rubbing in the opposite direction, that is away from the heart, sometimes, as I have said, actually retards circulation. Another thing about massage that is well to know is that a gentle rubbing of any part of the body makes for firmness, while vigorous rubbing does away with superfluous fat.

Where the circulation is good the skin is usually good, for the tissues and cells are being systematically fed by the stream of fresh blood that flows through the veins, and all waste matter is carried off by the flowing current. While telling you of the virtues of this really delightful treatment, I must also warn you against its perils. There is such a thing as overdoing in massaging. In most cases which can be treated at home by one not an expert it is just as well not to massage more than five minutes at a time. Massaging for too long a time has a tendency to fatigue rather than to stimulate. Massaging the face for five minutes at a time is also sufficient. Any massage is usually best when given midway between meals or just before retiring, or the first thing in the morning, so that the blood needed for the digestive process is not taken from the stomach. I usually find massaging most effective after bathing. This applies to the face as well as to the body.

But I have chatted about general massage quite long enough, almost forgetting that it is necessary to speak of definite things if I would be of the greatest help to you.

While a massage cream is not an absolute necessity, it is most desirable. There are many very good creams on the market, as well as home injurious ones. The one I am giving you is a favorite of mine, and I am sure that you will find it both pleasant and effective.

Massage Cream

Lanolin	2½ ounces
Spermaceti	2½ drams
White vaseline	2½ ounces
Cocanut oil	2 ounces
Sweet almond oil	2 ounces
Tincture of benzoin	½ dram

Melt the first five ingredients together and beat until the mass concretes, adding the benzoin, drop by drop, during the process. Extract of violet or any other perfume may be added.

Usually, one has more time for face massage when retiring than in the morning, when every one is in a hustle and breakfast is waiting. So, after the face has its warm bath for the night and before the dash of cold water is applied to harden the muscles, rub the massage cream gently into the skin and proceed to whisk away the wrinkles and lines left by the day's worries.

We will begin with the crow's feet at the corners of the eyes. Apply the massage cream and begin a gentle rotary motion with the cushioned tips of the fingers, working up and away from the eye toward the ear. One must be careful that the fingers are held in just the right position, so that the nails do not scratch and bruise the skin. There will also be some little lines under the eyes, especially near the nose. Place some cream upon them, being careful that the cream does not enter the eye. Close the eye and proceed to smooth the lines out gently with the tip of one finger, using a backward and forward movement.

If the cheeks are thin or one is desirous of color, permanently or in an emergency, a gentle pinching of the cheeks will do much toward these ends. One must be careful not to pinch too hard, and certainly the pinching must not be continued long enough to make the face tender to the touch. Proper massage of the face rarely brings discomfort. On the other hand, massage usually soothes the tired muscles at the end of the day. For color in emergency the flesh is gently but firmly grasped between thumb and forefinger, and this thumb and forefinger are then turned back toward the ear in screw fashion, gently turning the impressed cheek with them. About two minutes of this massage will bring the desired color. It is a massage that, however, requires great care, for the tissues must not be bruised. The pinching massage which makes for plumpness is somewhat similarly done by slightly pulling out and gently pinching the cheek with the thumb and all four fingers at once, not using the twisting motion.

For a general toning up of the muscles and to be sure that you have not missed any of the muscles and tissues in the ordinary rotary massage, it is well, just before ending the massage, to sweep across the cheek toward the ear with a firm zigzag motion.

If you are inclined to be nervous, the hacking massage along the spine is likely to prove both soothing and beneficial. Lying on the bath, let your robe slip down in back and have some one gently "hack" your spine from top to bottom on each side. Remember that the spine itself is not to be hacked, or the outcome might be serious. The hacking is done with the sides of the hand, fingers being held close together, as you held them when a child so that you might trace about your hand on a piece of paper. Only the side of the hand will be used, bringing the whole side of the little finger and that one side of the lower part of the hand. Better still, hold the hands in position, as though for pat-a-cacking, fingers close together, and proceed to "hack."

Massage properly done is indeed a friend to health, youth and beauty, but do be sure that you know what you are doing before you go ahead.

The same massage motions may be used on the neck, chest and arms.

Now, I have been talking to brides, and for some weeks have been advising them about many things. To them today this talk is dread, as well as to every other reader. For all of us are very human and are daily putting ourselves in the position to make apologies to our friends and also to our own ideals.

I think that every outburst of temper needs an apology. When the wild beast gets in control and we scream our wrath at some one who has offended us, there should be an apology. The sign of a kind man or woman is a consideration for others, and if we forget everything except our little rage, then we should be ashamed of it and make an acknowledgment of our shortcomings. The apology is the thing.

When you apologize, do not take all the sweetness out of a good act by being sulky and offering it as if you were compelled to do so. The half-hearted apology is worth little. If you do not feel that you should apologize, it will do no good. And right here I would suggest that the apology that is forced from a child when you know that he sees no reason for it and in his heart does not mean a word, is wrong. It is better to talk kindly with him and to bring him gradually around to the point of view that will acknowledge that he is wrong and will cheerfully admit it.

One of the best things about this rule is the fact that with each new offending you will find that it becomes easier to admit that you have erred. And, oh, the joy of being made confessed and forgiven!

Now, I do not wish to suggest that all errors can be wiped away by a quick, glib apology and that fact gives you plenty of scope for making mistakes. Your apologies should grow fewer in number as the years pass, for experience should teach you to be thoughtful and discreet and willing to conceive the right to be human to another. But the art of apologizing should not be allowed to die of inanition. Be just as willing to apologize as you ought to be to thank a person for a favor. Be earnest and sincere in your admission. It will be the finest little thing that you can do for yourself.

A written apology is sometimes necessary. Sometimes the words in black and white have a different effect on different people. There may be not one but several different accents, and also one entire meaning of the note. Read over your apology, and if necessary, leave it and come back again after an hour or so. Then you will give it a different effect on the mind.

I recently saw a boy and a young man who forgot that he had asked to call on me. He was very busy, and very inconsiderate when he did not come. He wrote a letter and told the truth. He had entirely forgotten his engagement. That was not strange, but it was the truth, and he was sincerely sorry and apologized. What do you know, that I liked him for the true ring in the note? All of us like sincerity and truth. Let these be the foundation stones of every apology that you make.

Solutions to Social Problems

At a Banquet

DEAR MRS. ADAMS:

Will you please tell me what I shall do when attending a banquet? I do not know what utensils should be used first. BINGHAMITE.

As a general rule to follow, I might say that you will hardly go wrong if you begin at the outside and use each utensil working toward the plate. A small, three-pronged fork is supplied for oysters or clams, a round-bowled spoon or a small tablespoon for soup, a small knife for butter, a larger knife to cut chicken, etc. Croquettes, patties, etc., are eaten with a fork. If fish is served, the second fork is used for it, and a third fork is provided for salad. The tiny spoon is for black coffee and the larger spoon for dessert. Watching your host or some one who has good table manners will also help you.

Who Precedes?

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Please tell me whether the man or woman precedes when going to their seats at the theater. What is the proper thing to do when no usher is present at an informal entertainment? DOROTHY.

When an usher is present, the woman precedes the man. When the usher is present, the rule is reversed.

What to Say

Dear Mrs. Adams:

What is the proper thing to say when one compliments me about my beautiful hair and complexion? I know that both are attractive, but I don't want to appear conceited. MARY.

You may say, "Thank you, Mrs. White; it is very kind of you to pay me the compliment."

Dark Gloves

Dear Mrs. Adams:

When a man is taken unexpectedly to the theater in the evening and has nothing but dark gloves to wear, should he keep them on during the entire performance? DORCAS.

Dark gloves should be put off with the hat and overcoat.

Sealing a Note

Dear Mrs. Adams:

When sending a note to a friend by an official messenger boy is it proper to seal the envelope? M. M.

Yes.

Taking Soup

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Will you kindly tell me whether soup should be taken from the side or the tip of the spoon?

Is it proper to cut pastries with a knife? Or rather, should knives be provided when pastries are served? M.

Soup and all liquids are taken from the side of the spoon, not the tip of the spoon. Patties are eaten with a fork. Knives should not be provided.

The Best Man

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Is it absolutely necessary for a groom to ask a married man to serve as best man? My dearest pal is married and I should like to have him play the part, but my fiancee does not care to have his wife for her attendant.

Who selects the ushers? GEORGIE

While it is customary for brides to have a bachelor best man, a married friend or relative is quite eligible to the office. It is not necessary, however, that the best man's wife should attend the bride. She is at liberty to select whom she pleases. In consultation with your fiancee you can make up the list of ushers. It is your duty to ask them to serve.

A Dinner Invitation

Dear Mrs. Adams:

When sending a dinner invitation to a husband and wife, to which one is the envelope addressed? IN DOUBT.

To the wife.

Announcing an Engagement

Dear Mrs. Adams:

I wish to announce my engagement to about six of my nearest girl friends. Is it proper to send out written invitations for them to call, or is it necessary for me to go to them so that I may make the announcement? I do not care to be formal. MARGE.

A written invitation is not absolutely necessary, but a little friendly note to each one would not be considered formal.

Candy Not Necessary

Dear Mrs. Adams:

When a man takes a girl to the theater is it necessary for him to buy her a box of candy? TOM.

It is not necessary for him to buy her candy. If he wishes to send or take her something, he could buy her a bouquet of her favorite flowers.

For Baptising

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Will you kindly tell me if it is proper to give a clergyman a fee for baptising one's child? If it is, when should the money be given him? IN DOUBT.

Unless the clergyman is a relative or intimate friend, it is quite proper, but not compulsory, to send him a fee a short time after the day of the ceremony.

A Departing Friend

Dear Mrs. Adams:

What is the proper thing to do when one learns that a friend is going to sail for Europe?

One should send the friend a steamer letter, a basket of fruit, a box of candy or an appropriate gift.

At a Wedding Reception

Dear Mrs. Adams:

I have never gone into society and therefore do not know whether guests are to be announced at a wedding reception. Please oblige me by letting me know the correct thing to do in this case. MAY.

Guests are not announced at a wedding reception, but are simply served by and introduced to the bride and bridegroom.

Soup the First Course

Dear Mrs. Adams:

When soup is to be the first course served at a dinner party, should the soup be already on the table when the guests sit down? IVY.

No. Soup, to be palatable, must be hot; therefore it should not be served until after the guests have been seated

Leaving One's Hostess

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Is it quite correct for any goodnight to one's hostess after attending a formal dinner? M. J.

It is quite correct, and it is also advisable to make some remark assuring her that you enjoyed the evening.

Eating Asparagus

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Will you kindly let me know if it is proper to eat asparagus with the fingers or with a fork? Should one open one's napkin wide on the lap? BESSIE LEE.

Asparagus is not taken up in the fingers. All that is possible of the stalk can be cut from it with a fork.

No. Simply unfold it once and lay it across the lap.

Using the Street Car

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Will you kindly tell me if it is proper for a young man to take a girl to the theater in the street car?

P. S. It proper for a girl when receiving the attentions of one young man to pay attention to another young man in his presence? P. W.

1. It is quite proper. The men who are able to take their friends to the theater in a private conveyance are in the minority.

2. Certainly. A girl would surely get herself disliked if she were to ignore the presence of others.

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

Mrs Chester Adams
most cordially invites for friends to bring to her their Social Problems and Perplexities by letter at any time

THE ART OF APOLOGIZING

ONE of the hardest things in the world of conduct is to make a quick, sincere apology and an admission that you are in the wrong. To me it is a gauge of a big nature. The ability to recognize in one's self the shortcomings that are so easily seen in others shows that the nature is not self-centered and ingrown and that the consideration of others is there. When a woman is able to admit that she has erred in judgment or in action, she has much chance to grow from egoism to altruism, which is the ideal progress of humanity.

Now, I have been talking to brides, and for some weeks have been advising them about many things. To them today this talk is dread, as well as to every other reader. For all of us are very human and are daily putting ourselves in the position to make apologies to our friends and also to our own ideals.

ANSWERS TO BEAUTY QUERIES

REPLIES to letters to the writer of this department will be printed in regular order; but no replies in print may be expected in less than three or four weeks.

Correspondents desiring immediate replies to queries may get them by inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope. Personal inquiries will receive prompt attention if accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Witch Hazel Cold Cream

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you give me the recipe for a cold cream containing witch hazel and cocoanut oil? I can't remember the other ingredients. MYRTLE.

Following is the recipe to which you refer:

Witch Hazel Cold Cream

White wax	1 ounce
Spermaceti	½ ounce
Sweet almond oil	½ pint
Witch hazel	1 ounce

Melt the wax and spermaceti and add the oil, being careful that it is not too hot. Remove from the fire and stir in the witch hazel, which has been mixed with the rose water. Stir until cold. Perfume with a few drops of any desired perfume, and afterward until the cream is thick and creamy.

To Whiten the Hands

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you kindly tell me what I can do to whiten my hands? JULIA.

To whiten your hands apply lemon juice to them once a day. After washing the hands rub oatmeal into the skin. This will soften and whiten the hands.

Hair Is Straight

Dear Mrs. Symes:

My hair is straight and I should like to have it curly. Can you tell me something that will cause it to curl? Several years ago I was very curly, but it is not so now. Also please tell me what will keep the hair from splitting at the ends. My hair is a medium brown. "CAT RYAN."

I am not able to give you anything that will put a permanent wave in your hair, but you can use the curling fluid, which will keep the curl in for a certain length of time.

Curling Fluid for the Hair

It is made of a tablespoonful of bruised gumarabic to a pint of hot water. The water is poured over the seeds and the mixture allowed to stand for several hours. The resultant mucilage may then be thinned with a few drops of essence of violet. The hair is moistened with the fluid before curling.

Your hair splits because it is in need of nourishment. Rub castor oil into the scalp every day. After massaging the scalp, brush the hair for five or ten minutes.

For Corns

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you please give me the recipe for something I can use on my corns? HELEN.

Following is the recipe for a very good mixture to be applied to corns:

Boracic acid	1 dram
Extract of cannabis	1 scruple
Cuticolon	1 ounce

Paint over the corn once or twice a day and scrape away superficial growth in three or four days.

Chapped Hands

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Please give me the recipe for a lotion which will be used on chapped hands. VIOLENCE.

A very excellent lotion to be applied to chapped skin is made of:

Tincture benzoin	30 drops
Glycerin	1 ounce
Rosewater	6 ounces

Rub this on the hands night and morning.

A Skin Food

Dear Mrs. Symes:

My face is getting so old, and I think this is because my skin is dry and wrinkled. Please tell me what to do to improve my appearance. H. N.

Your skin is evidently in need of nourishment. I advise you to rub into the skin food for which you will find the recipe below. Always rinse the face with tepid water after hot water has been used on it. Do not worry, and avoid late hours for retiring if you would keep a young appearance.

Cream of Sweet Oranges

(As Skin Food)

Sweet oil of almonds	2 ounces
Orange-flower water	2 ounces
White wax	2 drams
Oil of sweet oranges	1 dram
Spermaceti	2 drams

Half fill a saucepan with boiling water. Stand a jar in the pan. Shred the wax and spermaceti into the jar. Let it dissolve, then add almond oil and add to the wax. Heat orange-flower water; add it half a teaspoonful at a time, stirring the mixture quickly. Lift the jar out of the saucepan. Beat mixture with the whisk. Heat and add oil of sweet oranges. Whisk cream until it is cold. Put in pots and cover with parchment.

A Mouth Wash

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Please give me the recipe for a mouth wash. PHOEBE.

Here is the recipe for a splendid mouth wash:

Myrrh and Lemon Mouth Wash

Rub together in a mortar ½ ounce each of pulverized myrrh and strained honey; then add gradually 1 pint of rose water and ½ ounce each of gum tragath and red saunders wood. Let the whole stand in a large mouth glass bottle for two weeks, shaking the bottle occasionally. Pass through a filtering paper and it is ready for use.

Constipation

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you kindly tell me what to do for constipation? I do not like to be taking medicine for it. Some time. I. B.

Before breakfast drink a cup of hot water to which a quarter of a teaspoonful of table salt has been added. Eat plenty of fruit, drink three pints of water a day and exercise. If possible you should walk for half an hour before breakfast.

To Soften the Cuticle

Dear Mrs. Symes:

I have great difficulty pushing back the cuticle on my nails. Why can I do to make the work easier? KATHERINE.

If you will soften the cuticle by holding it in warm soapsuds and then apply cold cream to it after the fingers have been dried, you will find it much easier to push back the cuticle. Use the blunt edge of an orangewood stick to do this work. A steel instrument should not be used for this purpose.

Blackheads

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Please tell me what to do to remove blackheads.

The green soap treatment should be effective in your case. The following are the directions for using same:

Tincture of green soap ..... 1 ounce
Distilled witch hazel ..... 3 ounces

Let this mixture stay on only a few moments, then wash off with hot water. If the green soap irritates the skin, as it sometimes will, use it every other day. Apply a cold cream.

Green soap may be purchased at any drug store, or at a regular "soda soap." Dissolve about the consistency of custard.

Open each seed pore with the point of a fine camphric needle. The hardened mass must be pressed or picked out. The empty pore of the plane should then be bathed with a little toilet vinegar and water, or with a very weak solution of carbolic acid and water. Sterilize the needle before using it by dipping into boiling water, as the use of any instrument, unless the skin as well as the needle is thoroughly cleansed, is always dangerous.

Eyebrows Grow Together

Dear Mrs. Symes:

How can I cure my eyebrows from growing together? I am using vaseline on them. FRECKLE FACE.

You can have the superfluous hairs removed by electricity. Be sure to go to a reliable operator to have the work done.

The article you mention in your first question is perfectly safe, and as I am unfamiliar with it I cannot say anything about its effects. If you are desirous to remove freckles, I advise you to bathe the face with buttermilk, and use the paste for which I am giving the recipe:

Obstinate Freckles

Oxide of zinc	½ dram
Subnitrate of bismuth	½ dram
Dextrine	1½ drams
Glycerin	1½ drams

Spread the paste upon the freckles at night before going to bed. In the morning remove what remains with a little powdered borax and sweet oil.

Brushing the Teeth

Dear Mrs. Symes:

How often do you think it is necessary to brush the teeth?

Please give me the recipe for a tooth powder. LEAH.

The teeth should be brushed after every meal and before going to bed. A piece of dental floss should be used to dislodge any particles of food which the brush may have been unable to remove from between the teeth.

Following is the recipe for a tooth powder:

Tooth Powder

Arrowroot powder	6 ounces
Castile soap powder	1 ounce
Rose water, just pounded	2 ounces

Pound and mix. Two or three drops of oil of cloves or of cassia may be added if a perfume is required.

A Cold Cream

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you please tell me the name of a good cold cream I can buy to use for rough skin and lips?

Following is the recipe for a very splendid cold cream. Take the recipe to your druggist and have him prepare it for you:

Kentucky Cold Cream

Rosewater	4 ounces
Almond oil	2 ounces
Spermaceti	1 ounce
White wax	1 ounce

Add the rosewater slowly, so that it will mix well.

Wrinkles

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Some time ago you published the recipe for a lotion to be used on wrinkles. It contained rosewater, alum and another ingredient. Please publish it again. M. L. F.

Following is the recipe to which I presume you refer:

Lotion for Premature Wrinkles

Alum, powdered	70 grains
Almond milk (thick)	1½ ounces
Rosewater	6 ounces

Dissolve the alum in the rosewater, then pour gently into the almond milk, with constant agitation. Apply with a soft linen cloth every night before retiring.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

DO YOU MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS?

PERHAPS it might be better if I put my question in another form and asked instead of "Do you mind your own business?" "Do you mind other people's business?" I can imagine a number of decided assents to the former question and of negatives to the latter.

A great many persons mind their own business very well. They attend to the affairs of their home and family, to their personal concerns and duties. No one could accuse them of neglecting to discharge their full proportion of work and care so far as their own business is concerned. The trouble is that they mind that of others as well.

Here is an illustration of what I mean.

A woman was visiting in the house of a friend last summer when one of the dishes at the table was young onions, fresh from the garden, boiled and served with butter sauce. It was the second time they had appeared in the course of the visitor's week's stay and she commented upon them by inquiring: "Do you always have your onions served with melted butter like this? At home we usually have white sauce with ours."

Was the hostess, who was a young housekeeper and a little sensitive to criticism, foolish in feeling a trifle uncomfortable? She told herself so and probably might have thought nothing further of it had it not been that the day following when strawberry shortcake was served the visitor asked: "Why do you have a biscuit dough made for short cake? We always make a cupcake at home. Do you like it better this way?"

Not for a moment would it have occurred to the guest that she was minding another person's business and incidentally was not minding her own, but the hostess felt strongly that she wished her housekeeping could be left to her and that she might be spared suggestion and implied criticism.

Ready with Comment.

Another case occurs to me. This time it was the case of a mother and her small son. The child had been guilty of some piece of childish naughtiness and the mother had punished him with what she considered a severity in proportion to the gravity of the offense. When she came into the room where her sister-in-law was sewing, after the small culprit had been left in penance, the relative was ready with comment.

"Don't you think if you tried some other way of punishing Jack when he is naughty it might have a better effect?" she inquired.

I submit that the mother would have been more—or less—than human if she had not replied: "If I thought so I would have tried some other way."

But the sister-in-law did not think she had been minding another person's business and not minding her own. Not at all. She wished privately that her brother had married a woman of more even temper than poor Mary.

"Why do you wear that sort of a hat?" an interested woman asked of the friend who sat in front of her in church. "I was wondering about it all during the sermon?"

"Because I like that sort of hat!" retorted the attacked one with spirit.

"Do you?" said the inquirer, nothing daunted. "Well, I only wish you would try my milliner!"

I could take up pages with the recital of just such anecdotes as this, but I believe that every reader of this Corner could match my stories with like experiences of her own. When you come to ponder upon the matter you are likely to reach the point where you wonder if any one in the world minds his or her own business or at least refrains from minding the business of others.

How About You?

Look over your own conduct and see if you can show a clean record. Do you recollect when dear old Mrs. B. appeared in her new skirt which you thought entirely too close to the extreme of fashion to be seemly for a person of her years? Have you forgotten that you asked her if she did not think there was danger of her falling in one of those narrow skirts? Do you remember how she flushed with irritation as she said she was not yet so advanced in years as to be unable to adapt herself to any sort of a skirt? She didn't tell you to mind your own business and stop minding hers, but I am willing to guarantee that she thought it.

Or the time that your younger brother married and went to housekeeping. He had always been your favorite and you were prepared to be great friends with his wife. At first you managed beautifully together, but you will never forget how unreasonable you thought her because she resented your finding fault with her maid when you felt the girl did not keep the steps properly clean. Your sister-in-law looked positively angry when you told her you had pointed out to Jane that she ought to brush in the corners and to get a damp cloth and wipe off the spots that the broom would not remove.

Of course, the matter was smoothed over, but somehow the relations between you have never been quite so warm since then, absurd as it seems to think such a trifle as that could make a difference between two sensible persons.

Believe me, no one likes to be called to account and put to rights for what she considers her own affair.

Fussy Daughter-in-Law.

"If Maria puts my combs in for me again I feel as if I should box her ears!" I heard an irate mother-in-law remark one day about her very gentle and amiable daughter-in-law. At my look of surprise the mother-in-law gave an apologetic laugh.

"I suppose I'm a peppery old fool," she said. "I dare say Maria wouldn't care how I looked if she were not fond of me, and she is a dear, good child. But it's my business how my hair looks and when she comes hanging around me, taking my combs out after I've put them where I want them and sticking them in again where she thinks they ought to be, I get to the point where I feel as though I should scream. What if my hair does straggle about? It's my hair, I suppose, and I really think I have a right to keep it the way I choose, without any 'in-law' coming around straightening me out. I never touch her combs. Why can't she leave mine alone?"

Was she unreasonable and silly? What do you think about it? Do you like to have your hair rearranged and your combs taken out and put in again by any one, unless it may be one of your own daughters? I confess that I don't like it the least bit and that I sympathized with my exasperated old friend.

Possibly you may be more amiable than either of us and feel gratitude to any one who is sufficiently interested in your appearance to care to set it to rights. Nevertheless, I venture to believe that there are some matters of no more importance than the combs on which you are sensitive and when these are meddled with you are inclined to put out prickles on your own account. It may be that you dislike being criticised on the way you manage your servants, or arrange your work, or bring up your children, or indulge your husband, or make your clothes. Whatever the tender point may be, you wince just as much when it is touched as do any of the women of whom I have told when their especial sore spot is knocked against.

Taking a One-Sided View.

One of the uncomfortable features of minding other person's business is that we always see it when we are interfered with in what we consider an unjustifiable manner, while it is extremely difficult for us to perceive that we are guilty of "butting in" (forgive the slang) when we call our neighbor's attention to her negligences or shortcomings. We feel that she is at fault if she resents our shorts to her or to comfort her in righting wrongs we feel wrong.

If Mrs. J.'s small daughter scuffs shoes along on the sidewalk in a way you know is likely to wear out the do you feel it incumbent upon you tion it to Mrs. J. the next time you If Mrs. B.'s Tommy is playing on the side street at an hour when to be on his way to school, do your duty to tell Mrs. B. about it? you like it if either of those matters formed you when your dents and were guilty of similar delinquency afraid that even if I had sufficient given me to believe that the talk told because of a sincere interest children I always would cherish soreness of feeling towards the who had reported the faults of my boy girl.

I am willing to grant that in many genuine interest is at the bottom minding of other persons' business know this to be the case. Of course are busybodies and mischiefmakers choice in the ill luck of their neighbors and seem to take a positive pleasure finding fault and picking flaws, but to believe that they are the exceptions the general rule.

They Mean Well.

To my mind the majority of those speak to you of the peculiarities of children or your servants, who advise you to try another milliner or dressmaker, ask you if you really think it moves to leal to pay your bills once a month, of every week, who say they cannot understand how you can afford to keep little girls in white frocks for every and who tell you that you will save by changing your butcher or your and that the most expensive thing you do is to market by telephone, for things not with any desire to make unhappy but with a real belief that ought to be shown how to do better your own sake. They all mean well.

"I wish he would stop meaning so do a little better," I once heard a man growl about an incompetent for whom some one had made the that he had excellent intentions. be blamed if we occasionally ma mark of the same kind about our and next of kin? Can they be blamed once in a while they think or say some of the sort about us? Is there any rest of us feel about it.

If any of you write your opinion hope many of you will—bear in mind we are not considering unkind criticism prompted by spite or ill feeling. That barred out. What we wish to decide whether those who mind their own ness strictly and leave that of others alone is the majority or the minority. What is your judgment in this? How do you feel about it in your own case and in that of others?

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

"I WRITE to you for advice from you and the Cornerites. My husband is an invalid and we have children to educate. There is no school near us except an excellent country school. I am thankful we have this, but two of our daughters are too advanced now for it, so it is necessary for us to send them away. The expense is hard for us to bear. They girls have worked to help themselves, but it is not always easy to do it in a boarding school where there are several working their way. I have tried to get work that I can do at home, for I am obliged to be here with my husband and smaller children who are still in the country school. Could any of you tell me of anything I could possibly get to do at home? I have the agency for several magazines, and I have done very well with them here, but have covered the territory near home, so can do nothing more with them here. Would I be allowed to ask for subscriptions through your columns? I have thought of having my daughter take a correspondence course through a home correspondence school. Then they would be at home with me and the expense would not be so great. Would you advise me to do this?

MRS. E. I. M."

Your case is a hard one and I only hope some good counsel may come to you from the Cornerites. If you had told me more of what you can do I could perhaps advise you more intelligently. It may be that you have skill in embroidery or that you can do some special kind of cookery well or have some other money making gift of which you do not speak. It is the more difficult to counsel you because I know nothing of the place in which you live, how large it is, what chance you would have there of finding a market for anything you can do. I am sorry to say that it is impossible for you to ask for subscriptions to magazines through our Corner. You can readily see that if this were once begun we would have to open our doors to workers in any line, and worthy though they might be, this is of course out of the question. I regret also that it is impossible for me to tell you anything of the correspondence school to which you refer. I believe that some of those schools are excellent, but I am not able to speak authoritatively of any of them. You will feel, I am afraid, that you have turned to me in vain, and yet my heart goes out to you in sympathy, for I can understand your position and see how bitterly hard it all is. I can only hope and pray that a way may be opened before you and that some of our Cornerites may be able to make a suggestion which will help you to know in which direction to turn

An Offer of Magazines.

"I wish to thank you for printing my letter and to tell you that I have already received two answers. We subscribe for several good magazines and I would like to give them as soon as we finish with them to some poor shut-in who can't afford to buy periodicals and who likes to read. I have different friends who would be willing to do the same, I am sure, and it would be fine for some poor invalid.

"Have you a recipe for making sweet chocolate like that you buy by the cake? Milk and chocolate are two of the ingredients. Here are a couple of good, tried recipes you may like:

"PARISIAN CONFECTION.—Equal parts of nuts, figs, and dates ground into a paste; add powdered sugar to make a stiff dough, roll out, cut into circles or crescents, and roll in powdered sugar.

"A NEW HEAVENLY HASH.—First layer: Quarter cup of cream, one cup of powdered sugar; boil five minutes; add chopped nuts and pour in tin. Second layer: Quarter cup of cream, one cup of powdered sugar, one square of chocolate; boil as before; pour on first layer. Third layer: Add chopped fruits to the boiled cream and sugar; pour on top of other layers. When cold cut into squares.

"IMITATION CRAB SALAD.—Pound to a powder the yolks of three hard boiled eggs; add one teaspoon salt, three teaspoons powdered sugar, juice of one lemon, one teaspoon onion juice, three tablespoons salad oil, one pound dry grated cheese; mix well and serve on lettuce leaves.

"OUR WEST GIRL."

Thank you for the generous offer of the magazines. There seems to be no reason why you and the friend of whom you speak should not start a shut-in magazine club right in your town. There could be an exchange made among the invalids who read the magazines, and each periodical could be passed on after it had done its share towards cheering the weary hours of some shut-in. I hope your letter may receive prompt replies. Thank you, too, for the recipes. Are you quite sure of the amount of sugar in the last one? To me three teaspoons seems a pretty heavy allowance for the other materials.

Crowing Roosters and Crying Babies.

"Let me tell the sufferer from neighborhood noises how a young friend of mine by the simplest means successfully quieted that joy of the vicinity, the early crowing rooster. In the first place, my friend noticed that a rooster stretches upwards when it crows; and in the second place, that it does not get down from its perch until daylight. Bearing these facts in mind, he added to his coops a dark coop, four feet high, as many broad, and eight feet long, with a small door hinged at the top and opening into the light coop to connect the two. The walls of the dark coop were solid boards, the roof flat and hinged, so that during the day air and sunshine could keep it sweet. The perches were placed about eighteen inches from the top and were reached by the old fashioned chicken ladder. There was absolute quiet until about 6 o'clock in the morning and then by pushing open the door they could get into the old coop and were none the worse for the long period of quiet. As far the other nuisance, the crying baby, I feel a great pity and that after a horrible two months in which I endured a neighbor's child who screamed about all day and during the night as well. That child was spoiled, and for its own future happiness needed the stripper and great firmness. The poor little underfed baby we all know, and the sick one, and there is the baby who has been handled too much. I think myself that more children are restless and cry at night from that cause than from almost any other, especially first babies. I made that mistake myself, and finally I tried the experiment of not picking him up during the day until an hour before his supper. The result was almost magical. He cried for the first two or three days, but his nights were solid sleep, and when he woke up early he didn't have his usual cry. Also he gained in weight and his color was better, to say nothing of his digestion. I am inclosing the list of jewels for the different weddings, as I see some one has asked for it.

E. W. B."

It is a great relief to me to receive a letter on neighborhood noises which does not censure those who say they have suffered from them. Now I cherish hopes that we may yet hear from some one with a remedy for a barking dog. The cure for the early crowing rooster is worthy of imitation, and I fully agree with you in your remarks about the babies. It is easy to teach well children habits of quiet, and even those who are not strong and healthy are usually the better for a little such wise discipline as you say you tried on yours. Thank you for your list of the jewels. I am at a loss to know who asked for them, as you did not give the signature of the applicant, but I will hold them in case your gift of them is seen.

Invalid Collecting Stamps.

"I write to you to make an appeal to the kind friends of the Helping Hand. I have been a shut-in for nearly twenty-seven years with rheumatism. I have not stood or walked a step in twenty-five years and am frozen out of places. To help pass the time I collect all kinds of United States and foreign stamps—special delivery, postage dues, parcel posts, and revenues—except the common 2 cent stamps of the present issue. I don't care how many are alike—I can use them all. I also collect certificates and coupons, old coins, confederate money and stamps, and cigar bands. Now that spring is here and housecleaning time, I wonder if some of you would look through your old trunks and boxes that are stored away and see if you can't find some old letters with stamps on them or some of the old postmarks that were used before stamps were in use. If you find any of the old envelopes with stamps or postmarks I would like them entire. I would appreciate your kindness very much.

J. T. T."

To me there is something pathetic in the thought of a man who has been a cripple for so many years finding his recreation in the collecting of any small objects. When you compare those with the work that would absorb him if he were able to do his part in the world, it seems little enough for those of us who are well and strong to do our share towards helping pass the weary hours. Will not some of you who are the possessors of old letters and envelopes take the time to give an hour's inspection to them and see if there are not among them some of the stamps or postmarks he wishes? I will gladly supply his address to any who want it.

Walnut Stains on Linen.

"Will you please tell me if you know anything that will take walnut stains out of blue linen? Also can anyone send me the song, 'Death Is Only a Dream'? I will gladly pay postage.

MRS. S. L. N."

I am afraid that anything which will take out the stain will remove the color of the linen as well. You might try Javelle water and see if that will help the matter. Experiment with a little of it on a bit of the linen first to see if it affects the tint. As to the song, it is impossible for it to be sent to you by anyone, since you gave no signature but your initials and no address.

Old Time Schoolbooks.

"Can any one tell me where I can secure some of the old time school books—the books such as we used to have in the long ago? I would like to know how to get such books.

F. C."

If the experience of others were like my own by the time the children were ready to graduate from any reader or geography to another there was not enough of the one they left to make it worth while to save the remnants. Still, even among children there may be degrees of carefulness, and if any one has old school books that are no longer wanted here is an opportunity to give them away where they will be appreciated.

Wants Phonograph Records.

"I am an old lady raised in affluence, but have had many sorrows and changes, although I have never suffered really terrible poverty. I am now, for the first time in my life, away out in the country, fifteen miles from a railroad, and am lonely. All my people are dead, with a few exceptions. I am fond of music and have a phonograph, but only a few records. Perhaps some of your helpers would send me a few more. Almost any disk record can be used. I would pay the express on them. I would like magazines, too, if any one has them to spare, but if I could get the records I would be pleased more than I can express.

A lonely old lady, far out in the country! I hope some one has the records to spare and will send them to her! My friends who own phonographs have records for a while and weary of some of them. Such records as these would be as much pleasure to the old lady as the newer ones, I am sure.

Formula for Root Beer.

"Will some one give a formula for root beer?

H. H. R."

In these modern days I am told that the best way to make root beer is by the use of one of the patent preparations which come ready to mix and require little beyond water and attention. That is not the kind of root beer our mothers and grandmothers made, which had the tang of the woods and the swamps and the spicy growing things about it. Does no one make that kind any more? Are there not some of our old fashioned housekeepers who have the directions for compounding the old time beverage from roots and barks and the like—sassafras and black birch and wintergreen? I am sure

HOSPITAL FOR DOLLS

Treating a Patient

Mrs. Ida B. Higgins, and Some of the Patients of Her Dolls' Hospital at 110 Luckie Street.

By Ward Greene

A TIMID squeak and a faint patter sounded beneath the bed in the corner and a quivering nose explored the outside world. Then the spotted body of a guinea pig slid into view and slid back again.

A twitter sounded above the highplied shelves. There was a rustle, the high, sweet notes of the canary's aria. Outside, soft crunchings from the stable discovered Billy, the Shetland pony. The poodle dogs were quarreling over a bone beneath the window.

Another guinea pig crept to the center of the carpet. Pets were everywhere. And from the shelves that banked the room on every hand, from odd corners and out-of-the-way boxes, loomed forth arms and heads, headless bodies and trunkless heads.

The late afternoon sunshine made grotesque wall shadows of tiny feet and legs. A box of glaring eyes stared out, glazed and unwinking. Golden hair drooped from the mantelpiece like a scalp, a bare torso in wax was cramped as if in pain. And yet it all seemed very natural as the woman sitting by the open window stopped fitting the wax arm to a shoulder and said: "I love them both, you know. Dolls and pets. They're so helpless."

Far off in Florida a little girl was waiting anxiously for the arm to be restored to the shoulder, for the doll she had sent to Atlanta's Doll Hospital to be made well once more.

"I must hurry," said the woman by the window. "They are all so anxious to get them back again."

The Sailor Boy Doll.

She took a small hammer from a conglomerate mass of awls and screw-drivers and shoe-buttons and wire in the box beside her, and tapped the arm hard against the shoulder.

There was one little boy last week," she went on while she worked. "He was so small he could hardly talk plain; but he told me with the tears streaming down his face about his broken sailor boy. The sailor boy's neck was twisted almost off, but this is one place where broken necks are easily cured.

"But when I told him he must leave the sailor boy for a week or more, he almost sobbed his heart out. 'He sleeps wif me ev'ry night,' he cried. And I had to give him another doll for a bed-fellow while the sailor boy was being fixed."

And then the woman by the window told her story, how Mrs. Ida B. Higgins came to establish the Atlanta Dolls Hospital, where sleepy-eyed dolls are taught to close again the eyes that will not close, where fractured heads are made whole again and lost hair restored without the aid of tonic and lame dolls made to walk and blind ones to see.

It was many years ago, she said, when first she came to love dolls and repair them. Then Mrs. Higgins was one of the late John Barclay's helpers in the Barclay mission. One day there came to the mission a truck-load of those presents which are so often the parcel of sweet charity—wrecked chairs and other furniture, the sweepings of attic and cellar, and toys—rocking-horses with no tails and scraped sides, jumping-jacks that will not jump, chipped tea sets and many mutilated dolls.

The dolls Mr. Barclay turned over to Mrs. Higgins with "I know you never did it before, but I'm sure you could fix these."

And she did fix them, fixed them well, and pretty soon afterward went to Rome to live and forgot all about them.

Crippled for Life.

In Rome Mrs. Higgins was a trained artisan, a "folder" in a print shop. Today she takes pride in telling of the time the new patent folding machine broke down, and she beat its own record by folding 5,000 slips in a day.

But then came the accident. She fell and fractured her hip. Atlanta doctors and surgeons told her she would never walk again without crutches.

"When I lay there day after day," she said, "I was desperate. I would never go back to the print-shop on crutches. What could I do? I prayed, prayed night after night, asked the Lord if He could not give me something that I, a cripple, could do for a living.

"This is the answer to my prayer," and she swept her hands out toward the shelves and boxes of arms and legs, eyes and trunks.

"The Lord made me remember Barclay mission and the dolls. It was hard, fearfully hard, at first. I knew nothing except what I learned at the mission. I had no stock, no money, no materials.

"With $5, all I had in the world, I bought enough glue and wire to start on. Last fall I made $300 in two weeks.

"At first it was just the neighbors, but pretty soon people began to hear about me and to bring their dolls. But I didn't know where to send for stock like these arms and heads. Then one day an old lady from Kirkwood brought me a doll that she had when a little girl.

"She wanted a new head and she wouldn't have any but the old-fashioned kind. Well, sir, I didn't know where to get one and I told her so.

"So she said she had an old scrapbook at home with an advertisement in it of a firm that sold just the kind of stuff I wanted. She mailed the book to me and I wrote to the firm.

"I wrote them a lot of letters about different doll pieces after that and when they didn't have what I wanted, they referred me to another firm. And so it went, until today I am sending orders to five different companies."

It was three years ago that Mrs. Higgins put up the sign, "Atlanta Dolls' Hospital," at 110 Luckie street and began her battle.

Work from Dawn to Daylight.

Today she can look back with pride and say she has won it. She has patronage from every part of Atlanta, from Florida, South Carolina, far off Oklahoma and California. She does the repairing for nearly every store in Atlanta that sells toys.

Last Christmas holidays she worked from 7 o'clock in the morning until long after midnight doing nothing but mending dolls, dolls, dolls.

While she told her story there by the open window, her mother, Mrs. C. L. Powell, a little, gray-haired woman, with bright blue eyes, entered the room and smiled fondly at her daughter.

"She does everybody's work, don't you, honey?" said the little old lady. "All these Peachtree folk bring their dolls here. See," and with an eager look on her face she turned to the order book and the names of many an Atlanta society leader whose little girl or boy had smashed some loved plaything.

The old lady's face seemed to shine with some inner fire. She talked on gloatingly. "There was the doll Mrs. Lena Swift Huntley brought, the doll for the $30,000 baby you told about in the papers. Governor Slaton's niece had a doll mended. Oh, there were lots of them, all rich folks, too."

She turned to a cabinet by the wall and brought forth a long parcel heavily wrapped with brown paper. "This is one," she whispered breathlessly, touching the brown paper with reverent fingers.

But the daughter had seized another doll in the cabinet, a cheap wisp of a flaxen-haired toy. "This was the first doll I ever mended," she exclaimed. "It was one of the Barclay mission dolls and I told Mr. Barclay I would keep it for my own all my life. His name"—and she laughed—"is John Barclay."

Dolls for Grownups.

"Oh, no," she continued, at a question. "They're not all children's dolls by any means. There was an old lady brought one the other day that she got before the war. There was a young lady brought one last week that was twenty-five years old, a relic. And I have one customer—another old lady —who still loves dolls for herself and plays with them."

Mrs. Higgins raised her head proudly.

"And I can fix them all. It's a mighty broken doll that I can't cure. All I ask is work."

"Do you know?" she went on, folding her hands in her lap and speculating with her eyes. "It's curious. The more I work the more I learn about it and the more I love them. It's funny how little most people know about dolls. Not long ago they brought me a right new doll they said they had just bought.

"It was one of the sleepy kind, but they said it was broken. It wouldn't close its eyes. I just reached back of its head and handed it to them and the eyes were closed."

She threw back her head and laughed.

"When these dolls come from the factory," said the doll woman, "very often this weight is tied by a string that runs through a hole in the back of the head. It's fastened under the hair so that people don't see it. All I did was to break the string and the weight swung the eyes down."

While she was talking an old man had entered the room. A beard flowed out beneath a beaked nose, flanked by bright blue eyes. He is a familiar sight daily on the viaduct, his head bent beneath a slouch hat as he stands beside the little stand that advertises Marshall's cement.

"This is my uncle," said Mrs. Higgins. "I use his glue in all my work. Tell him how you discovered it, uncle."

The old man peered forward and spoke. "I had a dream. The Lord came to me in a dream and told me of this preparation. It is wonderful. If I had had capital, I would be rich today—rich."

How She Was Cured.

His voice shook with earnestness, while mother and daughter nodded soberly in unbounded faith.

"It was the Lord," said the mother. "He has been very good to us. My daughter, you know, she was healed. Perhaps you have heard about it?

"April 3, Friday night, it was. We went to the Etter meeting at the old Baptist Tabernacle. My daughter was sitting way out in the audience. Mrs. Etter never touched her. But she asked Mrs. Etter to pray for her and Mrs. Etter told her she would walk before morning.

"And praise the Lord, next day she threw away her crutches and she hasn't used them since! The Lord has been good to us, very good."

The three of them stood up together, the old man with sombre eyes fixed absently on some distant day-dream of his own, the mother still smiling her tremulous smile of pride in her daughter, the daughter herself with one hand resting gently on the worn crutches beside the roller chair which she will never need again.

The sunshine had died to dusk of summer twilight. It was quiet in the little room, save for the faint crunch of the pony at his supper and the rustle of the canary setting for slumber.

Soft half-lights gathered around the pieced arms and severed heads and the shadows thickened on ghastly shapes of broken dolls in the corners.

Tiny feet pattered across the carpet. The guinea pig in the middle of the room cocked his head inquiringly at the three figures and then with a whimper scuttled under the bed, half frightened at the silence.

The hush was broken by the crash of a street car outside. On the corner an arc light sputtered blue for a moment and then broke into a clear white flame.

Pearl Mussels Raised Near Chattanooga by the Government

CHATTANOOGA.—The government fisheries bureau has begun to breed pearl mussels by artificial means in the valley of the Cumberland river. Already the problem has been fully worked out from a biological standpoint. Through the development of this enterprise the future of the important pearl button industry is to be made secure.

The method adopted in the propagation of the mussels is based upon knowledge of the fact that the perpetuation of their species depends on small fishes to whose fins and gills they cling while in the larvae stage. As for the pearls, there would be none except for the intervention of the muskrat. The muskrat is the intermediate host of a minute worm which, boring its way into the flesh of the mussel, becomes the nucleus of the pearl.

Apparently Cumberland valley was the original home of the fresh water mussels on this continent, all streams and lakes elsewhere in which they are found having been populated from the earliest source. At least 8 varieties are found there.

The mussel's eggs are hatched in brood pouches in the outer gills, from which they are finally thrown out in little packets, a dozen or more, each half an inch long and resembling a piece of pearl of triangular shape. After lying for a while on the bottom the packets go to pieces, each of them liberating some thousands of larvae which swim about in the water. The larvae are minute and the most conspicuous feature of their anatomy is a pair of hooks somewhat like ice tongs, with which they seek to grasp and hold on to some passing fish. If they fail in this endeavor they perish.

Now the plan adopted by the fisheries bureau experts is to take ripe pearl mussels from the natural beds, abstract from them their little brook packets and place the latter in tubs together with small fish, such as sun fish and perch. This gives an opportunity for the glochidia, as the larvae are called, to fasten themselves upon the fins and gills of the fishes, which sometimes become so heavily loaded in this way that they can hardly swim.

All that is then necessary is to turn the fish loose in a stream, and the rest of the business will take care of itself. For at the end of about seventy days the glochidia will drop off of their own accord, and failing to the bottom will assume their adult form.

Thus it appears that in babyhood the pearl mussels are parasites of fish. When they have secured a grip on such a nurse they set up an irritation which causes the fish to throw out a sort of protective growth, forming a cyst, airtight and waterproof, to cover them. Thus they are safe against injury of disturbance while undergoing their early development.

The experts are satisfied that by this means mussel planting can be kept in the future well ahead of mussel fishing, so that an abundant supply of the mollusks will always be available for use by the button-making industry.

RAFFLES—NEW AMATEUR CRACKSMAN SERIES

BY E. W. HORNUNG

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

A Trap to Catch a Cracksman

WAS just putting out my light when the telephone rang a furious encore in the next room.

"Hello!"

"That you, Bunny?"

"Yes—are you Raffles?"

"What's left of me! Bunny, I want you—quick."

"I'll come at once. Are you at the Albany?"

"No, no, at Maguire's."

"And so're's Maguire?"

"In Half-Moon street."

"I know that. Is he there now?"

"No—not come in yet—and I'm caught."

"Caught!"

"In the trap he bragged about. It serves me right. I didn't believe in it. But I'm caught at last—caught—at last!"

In utter panic I rushed back into my bedroom, and flung myself into the crumpled shirt and evening clothes that lay where I had cast them off. But I knew no more what I was doing than what to do next.

It was only the week before that Raffles and I had been introduced to Maguire at the Imperial Boxing club. Heavy-weight champion of the United States, the fellow was still drunk with his sanguinary triumphs on that side, and clamoring for fresh conquests on ours. But his reputation had crossed the Atlantic before Maguire himself. The grandiose hotels had closed their doors to him; and he had already taken and sumptuously furnished the house in Half-moon street which does not relet to this day. Raffles had made friends with the magnificent brute, while I took timid stock of his diamond studs, his jeweled watch chain, his eighteen karat bangle, and his six-inch lower jaw. I had shuddered to see Raffles admiring the gewgaws in his turn, in his own brazen fashion, with that air of the cool connoisseur which had its double meaning for me. And when we finally went home with Maguire to see his other trophies, it seemed to me like entering the tiger's lair.

The trophies were a still greater surprise. Among other offerings, we were permitted to handle the jeweled belt presented to the pugilist by the state of Nevada, a gold brick from the citizens of Sacramento, and a model of himself in solid silver from the Fistcuff club in New York. I still remember waiting with bated breath for Raffles to ask Maguire if he were not afraid of burglars, and Maguire replying that he had a trap to catch the cleverest cracksman alive, but flatly refusing to tell us what it was. Yet it was easy to see that Raffles had accepted the braggart's boast as a challenge. Nor did he deny it later when I taxed him with his mad resolve; he merely refused to allow me to implicate myself in its execution.

Within the last twenty-four hours Barney Maguire had fought his first great battle on British soil. Obviously, he would no longer be the man that he had been in the strict training before the fight; never, as I gathered, was such a ruffian more off his guard or less capable of protecting himself and his possessions than in these first hours of relaxation and inevitable debauchery for which Raffles had waited with characteristic foresight.

And yet—and yet—what could have happened? I must have asked myself the question between each and all of the above reflections, made partly as I dressed and partly in the hansom on the way to Half-moon street. It was as yet the only question in my mind. You cannot know what your emergency is before you can decide how to cope with it; and to this day I sometimes tremble to think of the rashly direct method by which I set about obtaining the requisite information. I drove every yard of the way to the pugilist's very door.

Yet at the last I had a rough idea of what I meant to say when the door was opened. It seemed almost probable that the sudden end of the talk over the telephone had been caused by the arrival of Barney Maguire. In the case I was resolved to tell him that Raffles and I had made a bet about his burglar trap, and that I had come to see who had won. If, however, it was anyone else about Maguire, and he had not come home at all, then my action would depend upon the menial who answered my reckless ring.

I had a more than one to come to some decision, since I rang and rang in vain. The hall, indeed, was in darkness; but when I peeped through the letter box I could see a faint beam of light from the back room. That was the room in which Maguire kept his trophies and set his trap.

A brougham rolled sedately down the street from Piccadilly; to my horror, it stopped behind me as I peered once more through the letter box, and out tumbled the disheveled prize fighter and two companions. I was nicely caught in my turn. There was a lamp post right opposite the door, and I can still see the three of them regarding me in its light. The pugilist had a black eye and a bloated lip, hat on the back of his head, and both hands under one ear. His companions were his sallow little Yankee secretary, whose name I really forget, and one that I had met with Maguire at the Boxing club, and a very grand female in a second skin of shimmering sequins.

I can neither forget nor repeat the terms in which Barney Maguire asked me who I was and what I was doing there.

"You'll remember Raffles," said I, "if you don't remember me. You showed us your trophies the other night, and asked us both to look you up at any hour of any day or night after the fight."

"You don't say!" he cried. "I took you for some darned crook, but now I remember you perfectly. Come right in, and have a drink to show there's no—Jee-hosaphat!"

The secretary had turned the latch-key in the door, only to be hauled back by the collar as the door stood open, and the light from the inner room was seen streaming upon the banisters at the foot of the narrow stairs.

"A light in my den," said Maguire in a mighty whisper. "Talk about crooks, eh? Holy smoke, how I hope we've landed one alive! You ladies and gentlemen, lay round where you are, while I—"

And the bulking figure advanced on tiptoe, like a performing elephant, until just at the open door, when for a second we saw his left revolving like a piston and his head thrown back at its fighting angle. But in another second his fists were hands again, and Maguire was rubbing them together as he stood shaking with laughter in the light of the open door.

"Walk up!" he cried, as he beckoned to us three. "Walk up and see one o' their blamed British crooks laid as low as the blamed carpet, and nailed as tight!"

Imagine my feelings on the mat!

"Real home-grown, low-down, unwashed Whitechapel!" I heard Maguire remark within.

For some moments even I failed to identify the truly repulsive object about which I found them grouped. There was no false hair upon the face, but it was as black as any sweep's The clothes, on the other hand, were new to me, though older and more pestiferous in themselves than most worn by Raffles for professional purposes.

"Think you know him?" asked the sallow secretary, as I stooped and peered with my heart in my boots.

"Good Lord, no! I only wanted to see if he was dead," I explained, having satisfied myself that it was really Raffles, and that Raffles was really insensible. "But what on earth has happened?"

"I should judge," observed the secretary, "that it's for Mr. Maguire to say, or not to say, just as he darn' pleases."

"Isn't it bully?" asked the prizefighter, smiling on us each in turn, with his black and bloodshot eyes and his bloated lip. "To think that I've only to invent a trap to catch a crook for a blamed crook to walk right into it! You, Mr. Man," and he nodded his great head at me, "you'll recollect me telling you that I'd got one when you come in that night with the other sport? See that decanter on the table?"

"I was just looking at it," said the persons in sequins. "You don't know what a turn I've had or you'd offer me a little something."

"You shall have a little something in a minute," rejoined Maguire. "But if you take a little anything out of that decanter you'll collapse like our friend upon the floor."

"Good heavens!" I cried out, with involuntary indignation, as his fell scheme broke upon me in a flash.

"Yes, sir!" said Maguire, fixing me with his bloodshot orbs. "My trap for crooks and cracksmen is a bottle of bocused whisky, and I guess that's it on the table, with the silver label around its neck. Now look at this other decanter, without any label at all; but for that they're the dead image of each other. I'll put them side by side, so you can see. It isn't only the decanters, but the liquor looks the same in both and tastes so you wouldn't know the difference till you woke up in your tracks. I got the poison from an Indian away west, and it's ruther ticklish stuff. So I keep the label around the trap bottle, and only leave it out nights. That's the idea, and that's all there is to it," added Maguire, putting the labeled decanter back in the stand. "But I figure it's enough for ninety-nine crooks out of a hundred, and nineteen out of twenty'll have their doctor before they go to work."

"I would figure on that," observed the secretary, with a downward glance as though at the prostrate Raffles. "Have you looked to see if the trophies are all safe?"

"Not yet," said Maguire, with a glance at the pseudo-antique cabinet in which he kept them.

"Then you can save yourself the trouble," rejoined the secretary, as he dived under the octagonal table and came up with a small black bag that I knew at a glance. It was the one that Raffles had used for heavy plunder ever since I had known him.

The bag was so heavy now that the secretary used both hands to lift it up on the table. In another moment he had taken out the gold belt presented to Maguire by the state of Nevada, the solid silver statuette of himself from the gold brick from the citizens of Sacramento.

Either the sight of his treasures, so nearly lost, or the feeling that the thief had come to open proper with them after all, suddenly infuriated Maguire to such an extent that he had bestowed a couple of brutal kicks upon the senseless form of Raffles before the secretary and I could interfere.

"Play fair, Mr. Maguire!" cried the sallow secretary. "The man's drugged, as well as down."

"He'll be lucky if he ever gets up, darn him! But what's the matter with the phone?"

The secrtary had picked up the dangling receiver.

"It looks to me," said he, "as though the crook had rung up somebody before he went off."

"Like his cheek!" Maguire thundered. "But who in blazes should he ring up?"

"It'll all come out," said the secretary, with a shrug. "I'll be at the central, and we shall find out fast enough."

"It don't matter now," said Maguire. "Let's have a drink and then rouse the devil up."

But now I was shaking in my shoes. I saw quite clearly what this meant. Even if I rescued Raffles for the time being, the police would promptly ascertain that it was I who had been rung up by the burglar, and that a part of my not having said a word about it would be directly damaging to me. If in the end Raffles incriminate us both, yet I could see no middle course of concealable safety if I held my tongue another moment.

"I order it! Do not ring me up!" I exclaimed as if inspired.

"You, sonny?" echoed Maguire, decanter in hand. "What in hell could he know about you?"

"Or what could you know about him?" amended the secretary, fixing me with eyes like drills.

"Nothing," I admitted, regretting my temerity with all my heart. "But I turned my attention to Raffles last of all. I shook him gently. He made no sign. I introduced vigor into the process. He muttered incoherently, caught and twisted an unresisting wrist—and at that he yelped profanely. But it was many and many an anxious moment before his blinking eyes knew mine.

"Bunny!" he yawned, and nothing more until his position came back to him. Then he sat up and saw the comatose trio for himself.

Raffles seemed less amazed at the result than I had been as a puzzled witness of the process. It was all obvious enough, as the three of us sat round the octagonal table.

"So suddenly," I replied "that I never knew who it was who rang me up. No, thank you—not any for me."

"What!" cried Maguire, rising a depressed head suddenly. "That's not being a good boy!"

"But I've been dining out," I expostulated.

Barney Maguire smote the table with terrific fist.

"Say," sonny, I like you a lot," said he. "But I shan't like you any if you're not a good boy!"

"Very well, very well," I said hurriedly. "One finger, if I must."

And the secretary helped me to not more than two.

"Why should it have been your friend Raffles?" he inquired, returning remorsefully to the charge, while Maguire roared "Drink up!" and then drooped once more.

"I was half asleep," I answered, "and he was the first person who occurred to me. We are both on the telephone, you see. And we had made a bet—"

The glass was at my lips, but I was able to set it down untouched. Maguire's huge jaw had dropped upon his spreading shirtfront, and beyond him I saw the person in sequins fast asleep in the artistic armchair.

"What bet?" asked a voice with a sudden start in it. The secretary was blinking as he drained his glass.

"About the very thing we've just had explained to us," said I, watching my man intently as I spoke, "and made it was a mantrap. Raffles thought it must be something else. We had a tremendous argument about it. Raffles said it wasn't a mantrap. I said it was. We had a bet about it in the end. I put my money on the mantrap. Raffles put his upon the other thing. And Raffles was right—it wasn't a mantrap. But it's every bit as good—every little bit—and the whole boiling of you are caught in it except me!"

I sank my voice with the last sentence, but I might just as well have raised it instead. The secretary's head fell forward on the table, with never a quiver at the blow, never a twitch when I pillowed it upon one of his own sprawling arms. And there sat Maguire bolt upright, but for the jowl upon his shirtfront, while the sequins twinkled in a regular rise and fall upon the reclining form of the lady in the fanciful chair. All three were sound asleep, by what accident or by whose design I did not pause to inquire.

"For some moments even I failed to identify the truly repulsive object about which I found them grouped."

I said to myself that we were out of the mess already—that we had merely to make a clean escape from the house—now the easiest thing in the world.

"If we simply cleared out," continued Raffles, "you would be incriminated in the first place as my accomplice, and once they had you they would have a compass with the needle pointing straight to me. They mustn't have either of us, Bunny, or they will get us both. And for my part they may as well!"

I echoed a sentiment that was generosity itself in Raffles, but in my case a mere truism.

"It's easy enough for me," he went on. "I am a common housebreaker, and I escape. They don't know me from Noah. But they do know you; and how do you come to let me escape? What has happened to you, Bunny? That's the crux. What could have happened after they all dropped off?" And for a minute Raffles frowned and smiled like a sensation novelist working out a plot; then the light broke, and transfigured him through his burnt cork. "I've got it, Bunny!" he exclaimed. "You took some of the stuff yourself, though of course not nearly so much as they did. You dozed off in your turn, but you were naturally the first to come to yourself. I had flown; so had the gold brick, the jeweled belt, and the silver statuette. You tried to rouse the others. You couldn't succeed; nor would you if you did try. So what did you do? What's the only really innocent thing you could do in the circumstances?"

"Go for the police," I suggested dubiously, little relishing the prospect.

"There's a telephone installed for the purpose," said Raffles. "I should ring them up, if I were you. It's really the most convincing story one could conceive; But unfortunately there's another point which will take more explaining away."

And even Raffles looked grave enough as I nodded.

"You mean that they'll find out you rang me up?"

"They may," said Raffles. "I see that I managed to replace the receiver all right. But still—they may."

"I'm afraid they will, said I, uncomfortably. "I'm very much afraid I gave something of the kind away. You see, you had not replaced the receiver; it was dangling over you where you lay. This very question came up, and the brutes themselves seemed so quick to see its possibilities that I thought it best to take the bull by the horns and own that I had been rung up by somebody. To be absolutely honest, I even went so far as to say I thought it was Raffles!"

"You didn't, Bunny!"

"What could I say? I was obliged to think of somebody, and I saw they were not going to recognize you. So I put up a yarn about a wager we had made about this very trap of Maguire's. But it made all that part about the telephone fit in rather well."

"I should think it did, Bunny," murmured Raffles, in a tone that added sensibly to my reward. "But the bother of it is that there's still so much to do, and to hit upon, and so precious little time for thought as well as action."

I took out my watch and showed it to Raffles without a word. It was 3 o'clock in the morning, and the latter end of March. In little more than an hour there would be no daylight in the streets. Raffles roused himself from a reverie with sudden decision.

"There's only one thing for it, Bunny," said he. "We must trust each other and divide the labor. You ring up the police, and leave the rest to me."

"You haven't hit upon any reason for the sort of burglar they think you were ringing up?"

"Not yet, Bunny, but I shall. It may not be wanted for a day or so, and after all it isn't for you to give the explanation. It would be highly suspicious if you did."

"So it would," I agreed.

"Then will you trust me to hit on something—if possible before morning—in any case by the time it's wanted? I won't fail you, Bunny."

That settled it. I gripped his hand without another word, and remained on guard over the three sleepers while Raffles stole upstairs. He let himself out, and told me afterward that the first person he encountered in the street was the constable on the beat. Raffles wished him good morning, as well he might; for he had been upstairs to wash his face and hands; and in the prizefighter's great hat and fur coat he might have marched round Scotland Yard itself, in spite of his having the gold brick from Sacramento in one pocket, the silver statuette of Maguire in the other and round his waist the jeweled belt presented to that worthy by the state of Nevada.

It was daybreak when I gave the alarm with bell and telephone. In a few minutes we had the house congested with disheveled domestics, irascible doctors, and arbitrary minions of the law. If I told my story once, I told it a dozen times, and all on an empty stomach. And in the end I was permitted to retire from the scene until required to give further information, or to identify the prisoner whom the good police confidently expected to make before the day was out.

I drove straight to the flat. The porter flew to help me out of my hansom. His face alarmed me more than any I had left in Half-moon street.

"Your flat's been entered in the night, sir," he cried. "The thieves have taken everything they could lay hands on."

"Thieves in my flat!" I ejaculated aghast. "You don't mean to tell me a Jimmy," said the porter. "It was the milkman who found it out. There's a constable up there now."

I rushed up stairs without waiting for the lift. The invader was moistening his pencil between laborious notes in a fat pocketbook, he had penetrated no farther than the forced door. I dashed past him in a fever. I kept my trophies in a wardrobe drawer specially fitted with a patent lock; the lock was broken—the drawer void.

"Something valuable, sir?" inquired the intrusive constable at my heels.

"Yes, indeed—some old family silver," I answered. It was quite true. But the family was not mine.

And not till then did the truth flash across my mind. Nothing else of value had been taken. But there was a meaningless litter in all the rooms. I turned to the porter, who had followed me up from the street. It was his wife who looked after the flat.

"Get rid of this idiot as quick as you can," I whispered. "I'm going straight to Scotland Yard myself. Let your wife tidy the place while I'm gone, and have the lock mended before she leaves. I'm going as I am, this minute!"

And go I did, in the first hansom I could find—but not straight to Scotland Yard. I stopped the cab in Piccadilly on the way.

Old Raffles opened his own door to me. I cannot remember finding him fresher, more immaculate, more delightful to behold in every way. Could I paint a picture of Raffles with something other than my pen, it would be as I saw him that bright March morning, at his open door in the Albany, a trim, slim figure in matutinal gray, cool and gay and breezy as the dramatis agency.

"What on earth did you do it for?" I asked within.

"It was the only solution," he answered, handing me the cigarettes. "I saw it the moment I got outside."

"I don't see it yet."

"Why should a burglar call as innocent gentleman away from home?"

"That's what we couldn't make out."

"I tell you I got it directly I had left you. He called you away in order to burgle you, too, of course!"

And Raffles stood smiling upon me in all his incomparable radiance and audacity.

"But why me?" I asked. "Why on earth should he burgle me?"

"My dear Bunny, we must leave something to the imagination of the police. But we will assist them to a fact or too in due season. It was the dead of night when Maguire first took us to his house; it was at the Imperial Boxing club we met him; and you must queer fish at the Imperial Boxing club. You may remember that he telephoned to his man to prepare supper for us, and that you and he discussed telephones and treasure as we marched through the midnight streets. He was certainly bucking about his trophies, and for the sake of the argument you will be good enough to admit that you probably bucked about yours. What happens? You are overheard; you are followed; you are worked into the same scheme, and robbed on the same night."

"And you really think this will meet the case?"

"I am quite certain of it, Bunny, so far as it rests with us to meet the case at all."

"Then give me another cigarette, my dear fellow, and let me push on to Scotland Yard."

Raffles held up both hands in admiring horror.

"Scotland Yard!"

"To give a false description of what you took from that drawer in my wardrobe."

"A false description! Bunny, you have no more to learn from me. Time was when I wouldn't have let you go there without me to retrieve a lost umbrella—let alone a lost cause!"

And for once I was not sorry for Raffles to have the last unworthy word, as he stood once more at his outer door and gayly waved me down the stairs.

Indians to See President

SHERIDAN, Wyo.—Three Crow Indians have started from the city hall at Sheridan on one of the most remarkable horseback trips ever undertaken. Rex Fox, White Horse and Three Irons, all of the younger generation, are traveling in this way to Washington with a message to President Wilson, asking his support in having an "Indian day" set aside as an annual holiday.

A bill is in congress providing for this, and on their way the young Indians will endeavor to arouse public interest in behalf of the measure. Rex Fox, who is a half-breed, carries a letter from Governor Stewart, of Montana, to President Wilson, and Three Irons, who is a full-blooded Crow, bears a special message to the president from Plenty Coos, the chief of the Crow tribe.

By traveling about thirty miles a day the Indians expect to reach Washington some time in September. Along the route they will make speeches upon the object of their mission. Most of the distance will be along the proposed Lincoln highway, and the Indians will speak in favor of goods roads.

Have a Mission in New York.

From Washington they will go to New York, where they hope to interest Y. M. C. A. officials in the establishment of a branch of that organization at the Crow agency, the center of the Crow reservation. It is proposed to make this branch of the Y. M. C. A. serve as a central branch for all the reservations near the Crows, including the northern Cheyenne reservation, which is separated from the Crow country by a low range of mountains.

From New York the Indians will go south. They plan to stop at Memphis, St. Louis and Kansas City, from which last point they will come home by train.

Three Irons is a graduate of Carlisle, White Horse went through the Haskell Indian school, and Red Fox, spokesman for the party, is a graduate of a college in Spokane.

All speak good English, and as all are members of the Y. M. C. A. they will not travel Sundays. White Horse has had naval experience, having enlisted in the United States navy several years ago, traveling around the world.

Of late he has been employed by the government as teacher in the Industrial school at Crow agency, and obtained a leave of absence for this trip.

Red Fox carries on his saddle horn a linen lunch cloth, on which he has drawn many pictures of stirring scenes in the history of the Crows. This he intends to present to President Wilson.

Want a Y. M. C. A. "Gym."

"There is no place where a good Y. M. C. A. can be more needed than on an Indian reservation," said Red Fox. "This is particularly true of the Crow reservation, where our Indian boys have to the agency and have nothing to do. They can only loaf around the streets, which is not good for any young man, red or white. We want a Y. M. C. A. with plunge bath, gymnasium and library, and this is a matter we wish to present to the Y. M. C. A. officials in New York.

The young men are riding typical Indian ponies, selected from the herds of wiry animals which roam the Crow reservation. They are all expert cow-punchers and take part in the big round-ups which are a feature of life on the Indian reservation.

At Sheridan, where the boys are well known and liked, the mayor presented them with the keys to the city and the messengers were entertained by the Commercial club and given a hearty speeding on their journey.

Sheridan is at the southern edge of the Crow reservation, and the Crow Indians can be seen on the city streets at all times of the year. The Crows are prosperous and honest, and most of them have settled on their individual allotments and are making a living farming and stock raising.

This has led to a general sentiment among the Indians for the opening of the unused lands of the reservation to white settlement. There is a total of more than 1,500,000 acres of land available for farming in the reservation and the younger Indians realize that the best thing for the tribe will be the opening of these unused lands to the palefaces.

Teaching Girls Carpentering and Agriculture

Work With Hammer and Saw Is Part of the College Course at the Georgia Normal and Industrial School at Milledgeville.

Tending of Flowers and the Care of Garden Plants Are Taught to Complete the Industrial Training of Students.

By William Garrard

THE college bell peals across the campus.

One hundred girls, dignified seniors at the Georgia Normal and Industrial college at Milledgeville, file slowly out of the lecture room in which they have been acquiring quantities of culture from Emerson's essays.

A quick walk to the dormitory, and gingham aprons are donned over their neat shirt-waist-and-skirt uniforms, and away they march to the carpenter shop.

Saws and hammers and hoes and chisels and other things work carpenters use are busy in their hands, all under the direction of a teacher who is an expert in manual training.

One hour of this healthful work, the bell rings again. Back to the dormitory off with the aprons. Then the long line of pretty carpenters file into the academic building again, to display their knowledge of Cicero's "de Senectute." Next they have a recitation in organic and food chemistry, followed by a lecture on the philosophy of education, for which they have prepared by reading text books by Horne and also by current pedagogical readings in the library.

Then dinner.

The inevitable bell rings again.

Some of them rush to don rough-looking "dress overalls," while others wearing aprons, go to the large school kitchens, where scientific instruction is given them in cooking.

Gardening is Taught.

Afterward they do light gardening work, in which they are taught as much to tend flowers as cabbages. No part of the college course is more pleasing than this digging among growing plants.

Cooking, teaching, chicken raising, agriculture, shorthand, typewriting, carpenter work, sewing, hat making are among the courses given at this industrial college, in addition to the regular old-fashioned studies as given at every woman's college in the country.

This institution is so popular that with 600 pupils in the college, 600 more were turned away from the doors this year because there was not room for them.

"The object of the state in establishing and supporting this school is to provide for the young women of Georgia an institution in which they may get such special instruction and training as will prepare them to earn their own living by the vocation of teaching or by those industrial and fine arts that are suitable for women to pursue," says the catalogue.

Two New Vocations.

Despite the fact that the state of Georgia does not see fit to allow women to practice law, yet the state is very broad-minded in reference to industrial arts—for, in teaching carpentering and agriculture, two new fields of endeavor, hitherto belonging exclusively to men, are extended to the women of Georgia.

The carpenter work turned out by the students is of excellent quality. So are the biscuits and cakes baked by the girls; the chickens they raise are fat and fine, and the clothes and hats they make are pretty.

One young graduate, it is said, having just returned home with her sheepskin after the end of commencement week, was entertaining a mere man.

It was June, and warm, and they were sitting in the hanging swing on the porch.

"This is a fine swing," said the young man.

"Yes, I made it," answered the girl.

He was astonished, but interested.

They walked into the library. He sat down in a comfortable rocker.

"This is a fine chair," remarked the man, having nothing else to say.

"Yes, I made that, too. And that big bookcase was built by me in my senior year at college. I also embroidered that table cover," the graduate continued.

The young fellow by now was sitting up and taking notice. After he had eaten a fat hen which she had raised and cooked, and some big biscuits, the product of her college education, he was very much interested.

However, although he was almost sure he was in love with the accomplished young graduate, yet there lurked in the back of his brain (or heart) some doubt. She was too practical. He himself had been through high school, and was strong for education—

Liszt Instead of Ragtime.

"Let's go in the parlor," said the girl, after they had finished a delicious French dessert.

In the parlor was a piano. The girl sat down in front of the keys.

"Would you like a little music?" she asked.

"Yes," said the young man, with ragtime in his soul.

So she began Liszt's Rhapsodie Hongroise, No. 2. Before the wilds strains of this composition had ceased, the young man had forgotten his anticipated ragtime. His respect for her college education likewise had increased.

She then sang a little Italian love song to him in a beautifully cultivated voice, and, turning around suddenly, asked him what was his favorite among Horace's odes.

"Mine is the one beginning.

"Quis muita grancilis te puer in Rosa
"Perfusus liquidis urgat odoribus
"Grato. Fyrrha, subanto?
"Cui flavam religas comam—"

she said, quoting the ode to the end.

A Journal man, after visiting the industrial college, came away impressed with the general contentment evident there.

The diversified work that the girls are required to do, the mixture of higher education and practical training of all sorts, seems to keep them more contented and happy than most students at colleges where a superabundance of "culture" is all that it is possible to acquire.

Under the able direction of M. M. Parks, the president, a graduate of Emory and of Harvard, with additional special studies at Oxford, England, the college's growth has been phenomenal.

Starting in 1892 with 171 students, it has grown until in 1913 600 students were enrolled. Every year, for the past ten years, so great has been the demand for the kind of education given that hundreds of would-be pupils are turned away and a waiting list longer than the list of students always exists.

Growth of School.

In 1911, for instance, there were 549 girls admitted to the college. In that year, 565 applicants were refused admission.

In spite of the meager appropriations given the college by the state, the buildings on the campus have increased steadily to meet the growing demands.

Practically all of these buildings were designed by President M. M. Parks, and constructed under his directions, thus saving the cost of the services of architects and designers and contractors.

The girls wear the regulation college uniform on all occasions. On weekdays this is a pretty blue serge skirt with a simple white shirt waist. A high collar, with a small black bow tie, completes the uniform.

On Sundays and other dress occasions, the uniform is a more elaborate white skirt with a white shirt waist and white tie.

The students are not allowed to leave the campus except with written permits from the president, and none of the pupils can stay anywhere except in the dormitories. Attendance at church every Sunday morning is required of every girl, except in case of sickness or other valid reason.

The rule about wearing uniforms is strictly enforced, and none of the girls ever appears in public in any other attire. The rule on this reads, "Pupils are requested not to bring any other dresses to the college than the uniform suits."

Teachers Are Trained.

One of the main purposes of the college is to fit young women for the vocation of teaching, and this is done in a most thorough manner. The normal courses given here are said to be among the finest in the country.

The pupils get much practical experience in the college. When they have become advanced in the study of education and pedagogy, they are given classes of little girls, from six to ten years old, to teach. In this way hundreds of little Milledgeville girls are well educated in the training and practice school which is operated in connection with the college.

One of the pretty sights of the school is the campus on a summer's day, when seniors in the normal department go around with a group of interested little girls, teaching them the elementary principles of botany.

In addition to the exercises obtained by cooking, raising chickens and making furniture, every pupil in the school is required to take courses in physical culture. This is absolutely compulsory.

Good Health Assured.

"The first requisite to happiness and success in life is to be a good animal." This aphorism from Emerson contains a fundamental principle in the science of education," reads the catalogue. Perhaps the physical fitness that is required of all the girls is one of the real reasons for the air of marked happiness and contentment. At any rate, it results in marvelous basketball and tennis team.

The college at Milledgeville is a real college in every particular, plus special courses that cannot be obtained at many colleges. It combines the work of a college, a normal school, a business college, an agricultural school and an industrial school.

The entrance requirements are the same as those for the University of Georgia in Athens. "Students from accredited schools of the University of Georgia will be admitted without examination on the same basis of accredited units as at the university" is the rule.

Four diplomas are given.

For the normal diploma, students take the regular academic work for the freshmen, sophomore and junior years, and in the senior year take pedagogy and teaching.

For the domestic science diploma students take the regular work for the first three years, and for the senior year take domestic science, organic chemistry and the chemistry of foods and other elective courses.

For the collegiate diploma, Latin is required in the first three years of work. In the senior year higher mathematics, Latin, English and two additional courses are required.

For the business diploma after the first three years of the regular course the students take bookkeeping, stenography and typewriting.

Many of the girls, however, instead of taking any of these four courses, elect a mixture of all of them.

Problem of the Bachelor Girls in New York City

They are mostly business women, older in business for themselves or employed in responsible or confidential positions by business firms. Then there are women lawyers, women doctors, singers, writers, artists, actresses, women canvassers, insurance agents, milliners, dressmakers and generally women wage earners in almost every field of business and professional activity.

A bachelor girl who is employed as confidential stenographer in a big Wall street office, and whose salary is $15 a week, was telling me how she lived. She said:

"I live in a woman's hotel, which has many of the advantages of a woman's club. It is, perhaps, a very expensive way, and its greatest drawback is that at the end of the year I have little to show except a lot of receipted bills; but it affords me the best protection and I have no housekeeping worries. My evenings are my own, and I can either spend them with my friends or retire to my own den as I please.

"My cost of living is less than $1,200 a year, but this does not include clothes. I leave them out of the calculation because a woman can dress on very little if she knows how, just as she can spend a fortune on her back if she is so inclined. You see, I pay $10.50 a week for my room at the hotel. It is small, but it suits me. I eat my breakfast and my tea in the hotel and take my lunch downtown. The average cost of my meals is $1.20 a day—30 cents for breakfast, 50 cents for lunch and 40 cents for tea, or supper, as you like to call it. Including tips, I spent $560 last year on meals; that, added to my $546 for room, brought my actual living expenses to $1,046, but to this you must add about $160 for laundry and $50 for telephone calls, as I have to pay 10 cents a call at the hotel. By adding $30 for carfare to and from my office for 300 days, you see my total cost of living was $1,226, or about $23.60 a week. That leaves me only a little more than $11 a week for clothes, doctors, books, newspapers and all the hundred and one things a woman needs."

Discussing this budget with another bachelor girl, who has a business of her own downtown, I heard a very different story. She said:

Another Who Keeps House.

"That's funny. Thirty-five dollars a week is just the amount I take out of my business for living expenses, but I don't live in a hotel, thank God! I manage to keep my own home and a servant on that amount, and last year I had a trip to Europe besides."

I asked her to tell me how she did it, and she said:

"When I came to New York I knew nobody and had no one to go to for advice as to how and where to live. So I have tried everything. I have lived in a boarding house, in a furnished room, in a woman's hotel, in an uptown kitchenette flat and in an ordinary apartment house. It is folly for the business woman who has to work long and regular hours to attempt to keep house herself in addition to doing her office work. The professional or semi-professional woman, who can have her mornings to herself, can manage it quite nicely, but it is not possible for a woman who works, say from 9 in the morning till 6 at night, to go home and cook her own dinner and wash dishes and attend to her household duties.

"I have a small four-room apartment on the east side. The rent is $50 a month, and it is sufficiently far downtown to enable me to eat my midday meal at home. The servant problem I solved by getting an elderly woman who is a good cook and who appreciates the comfortable home she gets with me. She has a nice room and nothing to do except to look after my wants. I pay her $20 a month. My telephone costs me $48 a year and gas and electricity amount to about $60. I eat all my meals home and get three square meals a day and very frequently have a friend with me for a total cost of less than $9 a week."

MOVING PICTURES HERE TO SHOW HOW THE WORLD WAS CREATED

MOVING pictures are being shown here free at the Atlanta theater to teach the Bible. Moving pictures have taught many things here, but not often religion.

First, a vague blur is shown on the white cloth stretched across the stage of the theater. Then, the blur takes shape, becomes a round ball, and a phonograph in the wings explains that this is the creation of the world.

You glimpse the Garden of Eden, then the Ark, the Tower of Babylon, the wandering of the Israelites, and at last a soft glow breaks over the curtain, the people in the pictures lift up their faces, and a figure moves quietly among them. It is the figure of Christ.

Such are the pictures shown daily at the Atlanta theater, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and at 8 o'clock at night, by the International Bible Students' association.

The exhibition of these pictures began a week ago, and will continue until May 24. Since the pictures are a religious tract in a new form, no price for admission is charged.

The association thinks that the Bible is read little nowadays, and that people are becoming skeptical of the things once believed devoutly.

The pictures are meant to teach the indifferent and to convince the doubtful.

To Teach Religion.

Moving pictures have been used here at Wesley Memorial church to illustrate sermons and to aid Sunday school lessons. But they were merely part of Sunday services. While the pictures shown free at the Atlanta theater are a campaign to teach religion.

By means of a picture machine in the gallery of the theater, the instances which stand out in the Bible are pictured on a piece of white cloth stretched across the stage.

The Bible is set before your eyes. Moses, Aaron, the Children of Israel, even Christ, are pictured.

"Our observation," says F. D. Pottle, the manager, "is that infidelity and skepticism are increasing, and our effort is to restore the faith of people in the Bible as inspired. An impression made on the mind through the eye is more lasting than something merely read or heard. So, we use moving pictures."

This is what the pictures are:

Creation Story.

The story of creation is drawn as accurately as possible from the Bible story. First to be shown are a series of stereopticon slides, gradually changing from one to the other. There appears first the earth, apparently no more than a dot among the great stars in the blue sky. The second slide shows the earth in the process of cooling, and then are shown in sequence the seven creative "days" or periods. The slides are made to revolve to teach geographical and astronomical principles. Throughout the exhibitions a lecture is given by a phonograph, which is so constructed that it is strong enough to fill the theater. The enunciation of the machine is so clear that every word may be heard distinctly in the remotest corners. Besides giving the lectures, which are timed to fit in exactly with the pictures, the phonograph also furnishes the music, which consists of an elaborate overture and choruses during the impressive scenes.

Required Study.

The moving pictures were actually taken in the Holy Land, with the exception of those which tell of the story of the Exodus. These pictures were taken in Egypt. The wonderfully beautiful scenes which tell the story of the last agonized hour of prayer in the Garden of Gethsemane were photographed by moving picture experts in the very spot where Jesus is believed to have knelt in prayer, before Judas Iscariot betrayed him to the Romans with a kiss. The expense to which the association was put in order to secure these pictures can not be estimated.

Bible Story
Is Followed By Stereopticon and Moving Pictures.

The story of man's creation in his Maker's image, of his disobedience, of the result of the fall from Divine favor, of the downward tendency of sin, is brought out by easy stages in stereopticon views up to the time of the Deluge. In delineating the philosophy of the Deluge, the Bible account is strictly followed. Here the moving pictures begin.

The pictures, which tell the story of the Deluge and the building of the Ark by Noah, are probably the most inspiring and awful in the entire exhibition. The construction of the ark by stages gives a very realistic idea of how Noah and his children worked to complete the task. The old patriarch is shown pleading with his neighbors to follow the Word of God and prepare for the great catastrophe. But his hearers who have gathered about to watch Noah and his family toil, laugh and mock him as he speaks. Then, finally, the great ark is completed.

The mockers, still gathered about, see the old man lead in the beasts, two by two, and still they laugh and refuse to listen to his pleadings. Then Noah orders his sons to enter the big boat, and when the doors are closed, the people rush upon it and pound at its sides, making sport of what they believe to be foolish fanaticism.

Then the sky darkens suddenly. A flash of lightning cuts the clouds on the horizon. A great storm arises. The people's mockery now turns to terror. The rain falls in relentless torrents and the sea swells rapidly. Men and women gather up little children and rush to the ark for refuge. But they find the doors locked fast against them. They clamber over one another to sit upon the narrow edges of its bulwarks. The moving picture here is very realistic. The ark floats upon the rising waters, the waves buffet it about until the last man, clinging desperately to the craft, is swept away by the angry waves.

Babel Tower Shown.

Next follows the story in pictures of the confusion of tongues, the Divine adoption of Abraham and his posterity down to the tenth plague upon the Egyptians and the final demand of Moses and Aaron that Pharaoh release the Children of Israel from bondage. The story of the tenth plague, or the slaying of the first born, is graphically told in the pictures. After Pharaoh refuses the demand of the Israelites, his son, a beautiful boy, is seen in the luxury of his home, surrounded by servants, living a life of affluence and ease. In a moment he is stricken and falls over dead. In contrast is shown a miller and his wife, grinding corn by pushing the handle of a huge millstone. Their son is seated beside them, playing. As they work the Avenging Angel appears and the youth sickens and dies before his helpless and grief-stricken parents. The pictures have been constructed on so large a scale that one of the great battles of Joshua, the warrior leader of Israelites, is shown.

Wandering of Israelites.

The second great division of the film story has to do with the wanderings of the Israelites in the wilderness and the illustration and explanation of their affairs during the reigns of Kings Saul, David and Solomon. A beautiful feature of this part of the story is the film illustrating the Prophet Elisha's restoration of the Shulamite's son. Israel's history follows according to the Biblical account, and then opens the story which leads up through the most wonderful period of the world's history to the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ. Stereopticon pictures of delicate color and realistic in the description of people, costumes and modes of living, introduce the beginning of a new era.

See Star of East.

The atmosphere of reverence, of awe, of wonderful peace and good will among men, seems to be transferred from the picture screen to the vast audience as it sits breathlessly and watches the Star of the East rise before the shepherds, watching over their sleeping flocks. The heavenly choir of angels appear and the shepherds all upon their knees and give thanks. Then they arise and follow the star to the manger, where the Christ-child sleeps. The three wise men are seen traversing the desert on their camels. To them the great moving star appears and they follow it, as do the shepherds.

Infant Jesus.

But more awe-inspiring than all this, is the film which shows the appearance of Jesus as an infant to Joseph and Mary. They have come to Bethlehem to pay their taxes and have found the inns overcrowded. The only place of shelter they can find in a stable and there they lie down to rest among the cattle. As the assemblage watches Mary preparing to retire for the night they see her bend for a moment over the manger. She places her hand in the straw and gradually the Radiant Child materializes from the straw and she lifts Him in her arms. Then come the shepherds and the three wise men who fall down and worship and present gifts to the child. Jesus' boyhood at nine and at fourteen and His Manhood at thirty, when, according to the law, he might enter upon His work, is traced. His laying aside His carpenter's tools and going to join John the Baptist, are pictured and explained. The baptism of Jesus is illustrated, the descent upon Him of the Holy Spirit in the beginning of His ministry, the selection of His disciples, and the performances of many of the miracles bring to an end the second section of the exhibition.

Last Section.

The third or final section of the films begins with the events that led up to the Crucifixion. The Last Supper is shown in contrast with the typical Jewish feast of the Passover. The triumphal entry of Jesus into Jerusalem is illustrated in detail. Following the Last Supper, Christ's agonized prayer in Gethsemene and the arrival above him of the comforting angel is shown. Then follows the scene of his betrayal by a disciple's kiss, his trial before Pilate and the Crucifixion.

In illustrating the scenes of the Crucifixion, also, no efforts have been spared to make the picture realistic and impressive. Jesus is seen wearing a crown of thorns and bleeding from the cruel thrusts of the sharp points which pierce His brow, staggering under the weight of a great cross. The slow march up the hill is shown. The erection of the cross between those put up for two thieves is given in detail. Then the Savior of the world is nailed to the cross. Great spikes, in the hands of workmen, are pounded into His flesh and He is left to die slowly. The patient suffering in His face as He speaks to the poor creatures on either side of Him is strongly brought out.

Martyrdom Given Vivid Depictions.

From His resurrection, which is also clearly pictured, the story leads into the narrative of early Christianity. There is shown the Pentecostal blessing and the preaching by the Apostles, the martyrdom of St. Stephen, who was stoned to death, and there are also representations of the early church and its methods, drawing on history till the time of the Crusades and later the great cathedrals. In this section of the film show is delineated the persecutions and martyrdom of the thousands of early Christians. The massacres of the faithful in the Roman arena before Nero are shown. In the midst of this story the film show is stopped and a slide is inserted to illustrate more fully the actual horrors of the time. The slide was made from the great painting of Nero's Circus, which shows hundreds of Christians crucified in the arena. The original painting was destroyed in the Chicago fire of 1871. The stereopticon slide is a reproduction from this painting and is faithful to the original in every detail of form and color. It is a magnificent, although terrifying, illustration of the barbarity of the time.

Before Nero.

The moving pictures following this bring out a feature of human interest in the story of Marcellus and the Lion. Marcellus was an early Christian who had succeeded in taming a great lion during his wanderings through a forest near Rome. He fed the lion daily with bowls of milk and meat. Later Marcellus and his wife were captured by the Romans with other Christians and sentenced to die in the arena. The decision of Nero was that the strongest Christian was to do battle alone and unarmed with the greatest lion in the dens. Marcellus is selected and appears before the spectators in the big arena stripped for the fray. He falls on his knees and prays. In a moment the keepers armed with whips and bludgeons force a huge, growling lion into the ring. The animal approaches Marcellus who is crouched in the middle of the ring. It shows its fangs and shakes its great mane. In another instant it will spring upon him and with one blow from its great paw will end the unequal encounter. But now Marcellus arises from his crouched position and speaks to the brute. The animal walks towards him, sniffs at his knees, rubs its tawny mane against his body and licks his hand. Marcellus puts out his arm and clasps the lion about the neck. Then he leads the great beast up before Nero's throne. The audience cries out: "A miracle! A miracle!" and demands mercy by lifting up thumbs that the emperor may see. Three times is Marcellus forced to lead his tame lion to the throne before he gains the lenient ear of the monarch. The lion he had proved to be the one he had tamed in the forest.

Nature of the Organization Giving the Photo Drama

The International Bible Students' association, which is giving the "Story of Creation," is a non-sectarian, evangelical society, founded by Pastor Russell, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Its object is to encourage and stimulate independent and individual Bible study, or to get the people to return to the faith once delivered, as the organization has it, unto the saints. The association is made up of persons from all religious denominations. The membership of the board of elders in the Brooklyn tabernacle, the headquarters for the United States, represents twenty-seven nationalities. There can be no account made of the membership, as no books are kept. No dues are paid by members, the organization being kept up by voluntary contributions. The association has spread all over the world and maintains headquarters in London, Berlin, New Zealand, South Africa, China and Japan, as well as in the United States. No financial assistance is asked at any of the meetings or entertainments, and the organization will not participate in any meeting or entertainment where admission is charged or a collection is taken. Classes are maintained in most of the cities of the United States, and the work is directed and supervised by Pastor Russell.
