FRANK LOSES FIGHT FOR NEW TRIAL

FIFTY BANDS PLAYING AS ONE TO FEATURE SHRINERS' MEETING

Magnificent Review and Drill of Patrols Will Be Held at Piedmont Park Next Wednesday Morning

COMMITTEES COMPLETING PLANS FOR GATHERING

Two Mammoth Parades Will Combine to Make Convention Most Spectacular South Has Ever Seen

Every hour of the day and night now brings new developments leadfig up to the great gathering of Shriners and other visitors that will crowd Atlanta next week.

The local committee is receiving telegraphic dispatches every few minutes telling of the departure of this or that temple for Atlanta aboard its special train, or the progress of others already started. By Thursday morning many will be under way; by Friday their company will have increased to scores; and by Saturday every railroad in the United States will be sending its caravans to the Atlanta meeting.

In Atlanta the last plans are being discussed, the last orders are being issued, the last instructions given. Here a tremendous organization with many branches is formed and ready for the coming of the first big delegations. At the head of this organization is Forrest Adair, potentate of Yaarab Temple, only incidentally now a real estate business man. He and all other leading Shriners in the city are taking leave of their business, and will pay it scant attention until after the session.

The four California temples, traveling together, were in Niagara Falls Wednesday morning, and were due to spend the afternoon and evening in Buffalo.

Local railroad representatives have been advised to look out for the arrival of a refrigerator car from California, loaded with fruit, to be served here at an "open house" by the California temples in the Hotel California (Kimball); also to look out for another refrigerator car loaded with fresh flowers from California. The Californians will bring with them many of the choicest products of their home state.

Morton Smith, grand marshal of the parades, has transmitted to Chief Beavers a copy of the general orders governing the two parades, morning and afternoon, May 12 (Tuesday), and Chief of Staff Henry Heinz and Mr. Smith have gone over the line of march with the chief. The full co-operation of the entire police force is being organized for the parades and generally on duty for service while the Shriners are here. A general meeting of the police aides also was held Tuesday afternoon in Masonic Temple to go over details and discuss final instructions.

Grand Marshal Smith issued Wednesday morning the following statement:

"The parade will move promptly at 9 o'clock. Each patrol is advised by general order and blue print as to its location, and without the assistance of myself or any of my aides it would move perfectly. We have such a well organized force besides that they could, without the general orders, move the parades.

"The parade will move promptly at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday morning from Ponce de Leon avenue and Peachtree, and the night parade will move on the minute that evening at 7:30. The line of march will be Peachtree to Whitehall, Whitehall to Mitchell, Mitchell to Spring, to Walton, to Forsyth, to Carnegie Way, to the Lyric theater.

"The gorgeous costumes of the patrols, their elaborate and picturesque drill and marching formations, and, the number and excellence of the bands will present a picture never before seen in Atlanta and never surpassed anywhere.

Arrangement has been made by Dr. A. B Elkin, who has organized a number of physicians for duty during the parades. These will be stationed along the line of march to furnish aid to anyone who may need it.

Also, headquarters of physicians, members of the Shrine, will be kept open day and night in the Grand theater building, telephone Ivy 839. Physicians can be secured there at a moment's notice, for service without cost to the visiting nobles.

Forrest Adair, potentate of Yaarab temple, has addressed F. C. Wilkinson, president of the Building Managers' association, calling his attention to Mayor Woodward's suggestion that the office buildings be kept lighted on all floors next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Mr. Adair asks Mr. Wilkinson to take the matter up with the various building managers and secure their agreement to this.

Secretary J. C. Greenfield, of the local Shrine committee, announced on Wednesday the following offer, which has been accepted by the Remington Typewriter company:

"We propose to furnish at our office, 92 North Pryor street, ten to twenty Remington typewriters and stenographers for the convenience of visiting Shriners, absolutely free of charge. We will furnish paper and envelopes free. We will provide every possible convenience and comfort for those who visit our office, and will prohibit as much as possible the typists in our office at that time from accepting tips for work done. We will pay the extra stenographers good salaries and will employ none but the best. In addition, I wish to offer you and the other members of the executive committee the privilege of using our extra stenographic service for any work you may wish to do." The offer is made by C. A. Beauchamp, manager of the local branch.

This is the first time a convenience of this kind has been offered at meetings

RE-COUNT ORDERED BETWEEN HIGHTOWER AND CHAS. G. TURNER

But After Committee Adjourns Turner Declares Agreement by His Attorney to Re-Count Was Without Authority

OTHER RESULTS ARE FORMALLY DECLARED

Mangum, Stewart, Armistead and Mills Are Official Nominees of Primary, Together With Unopposed Candidates

A recount of the votes for county commissioners from the county at large was ordered Wednesday by the Fulton county Democratic executive committee.

This action was taken at the request of T. J. Hightower, jr., whose total of 4,242 votes was only six less than the total of 4,248 votes polled by Charles G. Turner.

Walter R. Brown, the lawyer, appeared before the committee representing Mr. Hightower and made the request. E. V. Carter, the lawyer, appeared for Mr. Turner and agreed to a recount. The question then arose whether the recount should include also the votes of Dr. W. L. Gilbert, whose total was 4,701. Dr. Gilbert, who was present, agreed that his should be counted, to satisfy all parties.

The committee directed that the recount be made by representatives of Mr. Hightower, Mr. Turner and Dr. Gilbert, and be conducted in the presence of the chairman of the sub-committee, A. D. Thomson, and the secretary of the sub-committee, J. O. Cochran, at a time to be agreed upon all around. The committee further directed a special session at the call of the chairman to receive the result of the re-count.

After the meeting of the committee Mr. Turner announced that he had not authorized Mr. Carter to agree to a recount and that he was unwilling to go back of the returns as submitted to the committee.

Mr. Turner's unwillingness to go into a recount will probably necessitate a special called meeting of the executive committee at once, since the above method of making the recount cannot be followed if Mr. Turner appoints no representatives to take part therein. A. D. Thomson, the vice chairman of the committee, upon hearing of Mr. Turner's refusal to support Attorney Carter's agreement, stated that either he or Eugene D. Thomas, the chairman of the committee, probably would call a meeting Thursday, or as soon thereafter as possible.

THE OFFICIAL VOTE.

The votes polled by the various candidates according to the returns by the election managers were as follows:

For Sheriff—C. W. Mangum 5,623, W. M. Mayo 5,562, L. O. Wright 1,206; Mangum's plurality 321.

For Tax Collector—Charles I Branan 4,694, A. P. Stewart 7,558, Stewart's majority 2,864.

For Tax Receiver—W. H. Abbott 4,922, T. M. Armistead 5,013, W. W. Wesley 2,112, Armistead's plurality 173.

For County Commissioner from County Districts (one to be elected)—Charles Mills 7, 563, Tull C. Waters 4,450; Mills' majority 3,113.

For county commissioners from the county at large, two to be elected, N. A. Chastain, 3,753; George R. Findley, 3,153; W. L. Gilbert, 4,701; T. J. Hightower, jr., 4,242; J. W. Maddox, 3,076, Charles G. Turner, 4,248; Walter Wier, 2,626.

Mangum for sheriff, Stewart for tax collector, Armistead for tax receiver and Mills for county commissioner from the country district were declared the nominees of the primary, but the official result of the race for county commissioner from the county at large was withheld, pending the recount.

Arnold Broyles for clerk of the superior court, Hubert L. Culberson for county treasurer, Paul Donehoo for county coroner, and C. S. Robert for county surveyor, these being the unopposed candidates, were also declared the nominees of the primary.

NEGRO VOTE THROWN OUT.

The attention of the committee was called to the fact that a negro named J. D. Phillips presented himself at the Ninth ward polls, Precinct A, and asked to vote, and was allowed to vote by the managers. The committee directed that the box from this precinct be opened and the vote thrown out, which was done. This took one vote each away from Mangum, Branan, Gilbert and Hightower, leaving their final totals, respectively, as follows: Mangum, 5,622; Branan, 4,693; Mills, 7,562; Gilbert, 4,700; Hightower, 4,241. In making out his ballot the negro failed to scratch two names for tax receiver, which nullitied the ballot so far as this race was concerned.

MAY ADJOURN CONGRESS JULY 10, IS PREDICTION

Senator Kern Says Panama Tolls Question May Be Disposed Of in Two Weeks

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Probable adjournment of congress by July 10 was predicted today by Senator Kern, Democratic leader of the senate, after a white House conference at which the president and Senators Kern, Hoke Smith and O'Gorman discussed the legislative program.

Senator Kern said he believed the Panama canal tolls repeal bill would be disposed of within two weeks and that the administration anti-trust program would be completed before adjournment. He said he was hopeful the rural credits bill would be reached.

BISHOPS REFUSE TO CONCEDE JUSTICE OF VANDERBILT DECISION

They Bow to Court, However, Protesting That Church Is Left a Mere Shadow in Connection With University

COURSE TO "REPAIR LOSS" IS PUT UP TO CONFERENCE

Address Indicates No New Bishops Will Be Named at Oklahoma City and Hits 'Social Betterment' Schemes

(By Associated Press.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., May 6.—Hundreds of delegates and visitors packed St. Luke's Methodist church here today when the seventeenth quadrennial conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, was formally convened by Bishop A. W. Wilson. Interest centered in the address of the bishop's reviewing the work of the past four years and containing recommendations for the consideration of the conference, especially that portion in reference to the Vanderbilt university controversy.

After reviewing the history of the litigation over Vanderbilt, from the time the control of the university by the church was first questioned in 1909 to the Tennessee supreme decision last month, holding that the church had no control over the school, the address declared:

"The decree of the court leaves to the church a mere shadow of connection with the university which, in our opinion, does not justify the church in any attempt to direct the affairs of the institution or assume any responsibility for it. We don't presume to indicate to you what course you should pursue to repair the loss which has been inflicted on the church.

The Episcopal address was read to the conference by Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta.

HISTORY OF LITIGATION.

While the address reviewed the reorganization of the missionary department of the church, ordered at the conference in Asheville, N. C., in 1910, and acted action on the question of federation with the Methodist Episcopal church and discussed the question of "laity rights" for women, special attention was paid to the Vanderbilt litigation in regard to Vanderbilt university at Nashville. After several years of litigation, followed by the action of the church commission to reach a satisfactory settlement of the question of the Methodist church's control of the university, the Tennessee supreme court recently decided that the university belonged to the church, through its bishops, old not control the school.

The bishops reviewed the action of the last general conference on the matter, the appointment of a commission of lawyers to report on the case; the refusal of the board of trust of Vanderbilt to accept three men appointed by the last conference to fill vacancies in the board of trust, and the suit in chancery brought by the bishops to maintain the rights of the church in the university. The proposed gift of $1,000,000 to Vanderbilt by Andrew Carnegie was vetoed by the bishops acting as a board of visitors of Vanderbilt. It was stated, because it, "proposed the segregation of the medical department and its control by a board unknown to the church, and expressly and openly offensive to the self-respect of the church."

"The decree of the court leaves to the church a mere shadow of connection with the university," declared the address, "which in our opinion does not justify the church in any attempt to direct the affairs of the institution or assume any responsibility for it. We are thus deprived of what we honestly believed to be our own and which in hundreds of actions taken in our general and annual conferences and in the board of trust of the said university has been affirmed to be the property of the church. Indeed, the ownership of the university by the church was never questioned for more than thirty years by anyone within or without the church.

"The words of the address of the bishops to the last general conference expressed the universal sentiment of the concerned when the Vanderbilt university was called our Vanderbilt,' ours in the world, and 'ours in law.'"

After referring to the appointment of the commissioners to investigate the Vanderbilt matter and the acceptance of their report by the church, the address continued:

"The board of trust also, after receiving the report, thanked the commission for its services and declared that while the trustees' recognized and rejoiced in the ownership of the church as the untrammeled, they were assured that the resolutions of the board were intended to be a "full and explicit acceptance of the report in the sense of the terms in which it was conveyed to them."

"WE BOW TO THE COURT."

"But as law-abiding citizens we bow to the decision of the court. This, however, does not mean that we are bound to agree that the church has received justice in what has been done and decided. All the actions of the church in asserting its ownership in Vanderbilt university has been characterized by scrupulous conscientiousness; and its methods of procedure have been open, loyal and straightforward.

"We don't presume to indicate to you what course you should pursue to repair the loss which has been inflicted on the church. That is for the wisdom of the general conference to determine, and we venture to express the opinion that our people will promptly supply whatever means you may judge necessary to make up for the institution which has been taken from the ownership and control of the church. It is respectfully recommended that the whole matter be re-

O'SHAUGHNESSY, ENVOY TO MEXICO, STOPS IN ATLANTA AND CHATS A BIT

Regrets Loss of His Other Shoes—Glad to Be Back in Good Old United States

Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the only American diplomat now living who has been given his passports by a foreign ruler, visited from the train at the Terminal station in Atlanta Wednesday morning and gazed forlornly at his shoes, gray-black with train dust.

"The only boots I have in the world," he said sadly. "I guess some Mexican peon is wearing the other forty pairs."

With Mrs. O'Shaughnessy and their little son, Elin, America's former charge at Mexico City, arrived in Atlanta at 11:50 o'clock, en route for Washington after a tempestuous trip from the capital of the turbulent republic, a trip that included jolting many miles on a torn railroad, losing all their baggage, riding down the steep trails for more miles in an automobile, a few days aboard a battleship in Vera Cruz and a harbor passage to New Orleans on the gunboat Yankton.

The O'Shaughnessy family was in Atlanta but fifteen minutes, which they spent strolling around the sooty train-shed and gazing longingly at the Georgia sunshine outside.

He was dressed in the surviving remnants of his stolen baggage and what little necessaries he had time to pick up in New Orleans—a slouch hat, tan light grey suit, soft shirt and black tie—and the dusty shoes.

O'Shaughnessy is a tall, well built man with short moustache, open, pleasant face and blue eyes that twinkle. He was glad to see a newspaper man and talked freely about Mexico and Mexicans, but not about Mexico and Americans.

"COULD, BUT CAN'T.

"No," he said, "I just can't discuss the situation down there until after I get to Washington. I could say a lot, but I can't say anything. You get the distinction, don't you? And that will let you out with your paper."

Mr. O'Shaughnessy smiled when questioned about his trip. "Well, I left Mexico City on a train with one hundred soldiers. We were met at a split half way to Vera Cruz by the United States train, coming into the Mexican lines to get me under the white flag.

"We jolted over the split in the roughest automobile I ever rode in. And somewhere back there at the split our baggage was stolen—well, I won't say stolen, but somebody got it.

"The thing I regretted losing most of all was the sack with my boots in it. I guess there were forty pairs of boots I had in Mexico City, riding boots, dress boots, pumps, hob-nails—boots that I had just brought. boots I have had for fifteen years.

"We packed so fast that I didn't know what in the mischief to do with em, so I crammed every last pair in a United States mail sack. The Mexican that copped the mail sack must have said some mean things when he opened what looked like valuable mail and found—nothing but boots."

O'Shaughnessy threw back his head and laughed. "We stayed on board a battleship in Vera Cruz and then they

SELECTING JURY IN NEW TRIAL OF LIEUT. BECKER

Defense Attacks Whitman, Say He Talks Too Much for Newspapers

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 6.—Charles Becker, once a lieutenant in the New York police department, today was plaged on trial for the second time for the murder of the gambler, Herman Rosenthal, on July, 1912. Public interest in the case appeared less acute than at the first trial, when Becker and the four gunmen were found guilty. The latter died in the electric chair. Becker was granted a new trial by a higher court.

At the outset today the defense attacked what it characterized as District Attorney Whitman's practice of "talking to the newspapers," to the detriment of their client's case. For this reason they asked for a change of venue.

While the court denied the application, the selection of the jury was begun. By noon thirteen talesmen had been called and eliminated, and one juror had been accepted by both sides.

Becker, apparently in better health than when brought down from the death watch at Sing Sing after the court of appeals decision, sat with his wife at the counsel table and followed closely the questioning of talesmen.

He seemed slightly nervous when he first took his seat, but his self-ash hour regained the composure he maintained during the trial.

FRANK OWENS SUCCUMBS IN PEACHTREE RESIDENCE

Suffered Nervous Breakdown Several Months Ago, and Never Recovered

Mr. Frank C. Owens, president of the Southern Lamp company, died Wednesday afternoon about 1 o'clock at his residence, 754 Peachtree street. Although he had been in poor health for several months, his death was unexpected, and was quite a shock to his family and friends. About three or four months ago he suffered a nervous breakdown, and since that time had not been at all well. He went to the mountains to recuperate, but became quite ill and was brought home Wednesday morning.

He is survived by his wife, three children, Frank C. Owens, jr., Theodora and Floyeanne Owens. Two brothers, John S. Owens, the alderman, and William D. Owens, of Atlanta, also survive him.

No arrangements for the funeral have yet been made.

ARMY'S MOVEMENT MEANS NO ADVANCE OUT OF VERA CRUZ

Gen. Funston Declares Forces Will Only Be Extended to Afford Protection for City and Vicinity

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Up to noon few dispatches had been received from Vera Cruz, Mexico, by the war and navy departments, but General Funston earlier in the day had formally been authorized to extend his lines about Vera Cruz as far as he deemed it necessary to afford proper protection to the city. It was explained that changes in the blacking of American troops would not include any movement that could be considered as an advance from Vera Cruz.

General Funston reported that he had no definite information regarding concentration of Mexican forces except the movements made to defend the railroad lines leading to Mexico City. Many reports reach here from various sources to the effect that the Mexican already are deserting the railroads and bridges, but the department has received no confirmation of these reports up to this time.

Persistent reports from Tampico of preparations for a decisive conflict between the constitutionalists and federals attracted attention of the American officers here and at Vera Cruz and reports from Mexico City continue to pour in from official sources that Huerta's position is growing worse.

FEAR GENERAL ZAPATA.

In diplomatic circles dispatches have been received stating that fear of an attack on Mexico City by General Zapata's forces causes considerable alarm. Huerta's hold upon his soldiers, dispatches state, is weakening, and the possibility of opposition to the Zapata movement, it is declared, is decreasing. Zapata has said he would get to Mexico City before Villa. May 1, the patriotic holiday, is reported to have passed with notes of the anticipated anti-foriegn disorders in Mexico.

Admiral Howard reported today from the west coast of Mexico that "relations with the Mexican authorities are more cordial than would be expected under the conditions."

All ships of the American fleet, he said, "had been ordered to avoid hostilities and jeopardize lives."

A late dispatch from General Funston stated that foot is not coming into Vera Cruz from the interior of Mexico, but that it was being brought from shore villages and towns from the north and from Tejas on the south.

JUDGE HILL DENIES MOTION AS DEFENSE CLOSES ARGUMENTS

Court Announces Mind Is Already Made Up and Renders Decision Without Hearing From Solicitor Dorsey

CASE WILL BE TAKEN UP TO SUPREME COURT

Judge Hill Says He Will Sign Bill of Exceptions, but Will Send Written Opinions With It—Resentencing Will Be Delayed

The extraordinary motion of Leo M. Frank for a new trial was denied by Judge Benjamin H. Hill Wednesday afternoon at the conclusion of arguments by the attorneys Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold, for the defense. Judge Hill made his decision without hearing from Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey.

Judge Hill announced he would certify to a bill of exceptions, allowing the defense to carry the case to the supreme court of Georgia. This will delay the resentencing of Frank for several months.

While announcing that he would certify to a bill of exceptions, Judge Hill stated that in the event the motion was carried to the supreme court for review he would send along with the bill a written opinion by himself.

The motion of Jim Conley, negro, et al in set aside the verdict on the ground that Frank was not in the court room when the verdict was rendered, was set for 10 o'clock Saturday morning by Judge Hill. Solicitor Dorsey said he did not know whether he would be able to get ready by that date or not.

Judge Hill's decision on the extraordinary motion was forecast at the conclusion of Mr. Rosser's argument, when he told Attorney Rosser not to take all the time he wished for his argument, as it was not his intention to hear from the solicitor. Prior to this announcement it was expected the court would take the case under advisement after the arguments were in.

MR. ROSSER'S ARGUMENT.

Mr. Rosser's argument dwelt largely upon the character of the witnesses on which the state's conviction was secured. He declared that there was so much to explain passion and prejudice in the case that it was not surprising the court was confronted with much conflicting testimony. He dwelt at length on the power of the state and the solicitor, declaring that it was not necessary for the solicitor to abuse his office in order to use it tremendously in influencing the evidence of witnesses.

In his argument Mr. Arnold contended he does not beleive there is any perversion in the case, and that Frank's part or on Conley's talk. The whole talk of perversion, said he, is rot. He repudiated the theory advanced by Mr. J. Burtts, detective employed by the defense, who said the way the garments of the dead girl were cut indicated a perverted servert, by declaring that in his own (Arnold's) opinion, there is indication of nothing.

Before they began the arguments Solicitor Dorsey announced he understood Judge Hill desired to hear the clemency. The court had given five days from May 4 for her return to Atlanta, if her affidavits are to be considered. In his brief to submitted that if it was true she was in Chattanooga, so much time would be needed. Both Mr. Rosser and Mr. Arnold stated they didn't know whether she was in Chattanooga or not. They had heard that she was, and that the court would set an hour for her to appear, if she were there, or if it was possible.

CHARACTER AFFIDAVITS.

The defense commenced the day's hearing by reading a number of affidavits as to the character of witnesses. Not include any movement that could be considered as an advance from Vera Cruz.

The defense commenced the day's hearing by reading a number of affidavits as to the character of witnesses. The characters of D. I. MacIntyre and J. O. Knight, two notaries before whom a number of the defense's affidavits had been made.

Attorney Leonard Haas, who was reading for the defense, took up an affidavit by Herbert G. Schiff, attacking the character of Becker's stenographer proposition. Schiff asserted that when Becker left the employ of the factory he (Schiff) surreptitiously copied the contents of Becker's desk on the floor of Becker's office. He took a number of letters here and other papers to be preserved, and filed them; and gave directions that the remainder of the desk's contents be handed to Mr. Becker.

Making the Summer Clothes

With the coming of May every woman begins to think of the clothes that must soon be ready for the summer wear—herself and her daughters and the hunt for a competent seamstress or dressmaker.

Sometimes several are tried before the "right" one is found and, many times often that "right" one is never discovered and the summer dressmaking becomes a veritable scourge.

The really wise housewives turn to The Journal Want Ad Columns and always find there the very seamstress they want and the result is peace and comfort all during the month.

LEO M. FRANK LOSES OUT IN BATTLE FOR NEW TRIAL

ment. Schiff also stated that the number of the order blanks appearing in the yellow murder note is 1018, and he attached to his affidavit the original invoices of the Cotton States Belting Supply company, on requisitions from the factory Nos. 1018 and 1019, signed September 16, 1909.

Next came an affidavit by George T. Wrenn in which he denied the charges made against him in the affidavits of the negroes, Fred Perkerson and Frank Reese.

Wrenn denied positively that he ever offered these negroes any reward to get a confession from Conley, or that he was called to them about getting a confession from Conley. He himself did not attempt to get any confession, and he did not tell Anna Carter to try to get one. He did not know Anna Carter was trying to get a confession from the negro until after he made her affidavit presented at this hearing.

Affidavits were read from Herbert Schiff, Fritz Dezanka and Joseph Stelle, corroborating Schiff's main affidavit on the point that the contents of Berlin's desk were emptied on the floor and ordered carted to the basement.

The affidavit of Henry A. Alexander, an attorney, stated that the print of the yellow murder note which appears in the pamphlet is absolutely the same and identical with the print of the murder note appearing in the record of evidence certified to by Judge Roan.

An affidavit from W. W. Burke was read in which he detailed his version of the Epps Birmingham episode. Burke swore that some time in September of last year Wrenn reported to him that Epps, who was with the Miller Messenger service, had put him personally and in a conversation had admitted that part of his testimony at the trial was false; that Epps also told him he was afraid of John Black and other detectives and wouldn't make an affidavit here, although he was sorry he swore as he did at the trial. Burke swore he then instructed Wrenn to tell Epps to wait a day, a prize fighter, and was getting ready to go New Orleans for a bout. Wrenn reported that Epps had told him he had stolen $10 from the messenger service and that he was not being treated properly at home and was getting ready, anyway, to make a hobo trip.

HODE IN DIFFERENT COACHES.

Burke swore that he and Austin G. Dennison in New York detective who was working on the case took the same train to Birmingham with Wrenn and Epps, but did not talk to them en route as they were in the day coach and he and Dennison were in the Pullman. After they got off the train her Burke approached the other two and did talk with Epps about the money he had stolen from the messenger service, telling him very careful not to say or intimate at any time that he was an officer. After they got to the hotel he left Epps for would phone to Atlanta about the money, but instead phoned Dennison by previous arrangement, and told him that his (Burke's) chief was coming up to talk to him.

Dennison approached Epps as one simply interested in the Frank case and asked Epps to tell him what he knew of it; and Epps repeated the testimony given by him at the trial. Then Dennison said: "I don't see much in your story, and that if it is the truth." Epps said: "Some of it was the truth, and some of it wasn't."

Dennison told him to tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Burke told Wrenn both he and Dennison had written out a three-cent stamp. In their presence Dennison read it to Epps, telling him to make any corrections and that Epps did make several corrections.

MADE NO CORRECTIONS.

A stenographer was called in and the statement was dictated to him, Dennison being told again to make any correction but this time he had none to make. They then took the boy before a notary and he swore to the affidavit. He was made absolutely no promise of reward, nor was he coerced in any way. Burke swears.

The affidavit of J. W. Wrenn was read next, corroborating Burke in detail. Wrenn added that when he first met Epps, the boy was ragged and filthy and he gave him some clothes and a dollar of his own to wear and also a dollar to get some food. On the train there was a white man, he said, that he knew was not Burke, but was some one Wrenn had never seen before.

B. Bernard Levy, next to the next affidavit. It was that Bernard never met Burke until yesterday, the day he made the affidavit; that he saw Epps for the first time last Saturday, and had not been in Birmingham in eight years, and that he had seen the solicitor and urged him to make an investigation of Epps' story.

The next affidavit was that of Lemmie Quinn, who stated he had introduced Marie Karst to C. W. Burke; that he heard her tell her story and make her affidavit to Burke; that Burke offered her no reward or hope thereof, and that he intimidate her nor conduct himself in any way improperly.

HOPKINS' AFFIDAVIT.

Mr. Haas read an affidavit by Stiles Hopkins, who swore that though he is associated with the law firm of Rosser, Brandon, Slaton & Phillips, he is not a partner in that firm and had never been connected with Frank's case as counsel; that he did take the trip to Chicago for the purpose of taking an affidavit by the negro, Aaron Allen; that after he arrived in Chicago he talked with C. A. Ieem, Jeems Burns, Pinkerton detective, and others who had interviewed Allen, and from the information given him by them he concluded Allen's testimony would be of no benefit to Frank's case; that it did not bear relevantly on the extraordinary motion for a new trial, and that therefore he declined to see Allen or to take an affidavit; that he was not a detective; that after the various detectives had failed to obtain any relevant evidence from Allen, he considered it unnecessary for him to take his affidavit.

The only affidavit taken in his presence while he was in Chicago was made by a negro named Calhoun, the contents of which were of doubtful relevancy to the extraordinary motion for a new trial and for that reason was not read. He had never heard Detective Burns abuse Allen or Calhoun. He swore no affidavit about the case had been made in his presence by a Salvation Army man.

ROSSER ADDRESSES COURT.

At this point Attorney Rosser said: "I wish to call the attention of the court to the questions and answers of Dr. Harris during the Frank trial; also the questions and answers of Miss Nellie Wood; also part of the questions and answers of Newt Lee."

Judge Hill said he had read the brief of evidence, and that this brief would be available while he was considering the extraordinary motion.

An affidavit was read by Henry A. Alexander, supplementing his affidavit read by Mr. Haas. In that Mr. Alexander swore he attested and submitted an attached photographic copy of the murder note.

Attorney Rosser said he wished to read an affidavit by Frank that he was ready to hear it because it was his own affidavit. The contents of the affidavit were that Mr. Rosser was not aware of the existence of C. B. Ragsdale and R. L. Barber until they came to his office to give an affidavit; that he was out at the time and Mr. Morris Brandon, a partner in the firm, began taking the affidavit; that when he came into the office where Ragsdale and Barber were making the affidavit, he did not know what they were testifying to, and only learned it after they had told him; that he had heard rumors that Ragsdale and Barber had overheard Conley make a confession, but he did not know the identity of the informants; that before or after he obtained the affidavit from Ragsdale and Barber he made an inquiry into their characters.

AFFIDAVIT NOT NECESSARY.

Judge Hill said: "Mr. Rosser, it is not necessary for you to present that affidavit."

"I did so merely because in his affidavit Ragsdale made it appear that as soon as I arrived in my office I immediately began to take the affidavit," replied Mr. Rosser, "indicating that I had previous knowledge of it."

The judge said it wouldn't be necessary to put Mr. Rosser's affidavit into the record.

Solicitor Dorsey announced that the state would have two or three other affidavits, "which he had not had time to examine, but that he would outline what these witnesses would swear; that this would be unnecessary for the record, later he would file the affidavits. This was acceptable to Messrs. Rosser and Arnold, and Mr. Dorsey began.

"I will submit an affidavit by J. W. Coleman, stepfather of Mary Pangan. Coleman didn't know what he had to say before the detective Black brought George Epps before the coroner's jury to testify at the inquest, and an affidavit by Detective Black to the effect that he had never met Conley in the jail or at the solicitor's office."

Both sides announced that all their evidence was in, and Judge Hill allowed two hours as the time allowed each side for argument. Mr. Rosser opened for the defense.

ROSSER NOT FEELING WELL.

After furnishing a deputy sheriff with a book of law books that he desired from the state library, Mr. Rosser stated to the court that he was not at all well; that he had a bad throat, and with the court's permission he would make his argument while seated.

Before Mr. Rosser began his argument Solicitor Dorsey asked the court that he had been advised that Anna Maud Carter was in Chattanooga, Tenn.; that on May 4, when it was understood she was in New Orleans, the court had given the defense five days in which to produce her; and that inasmuch as she was close at hand now, that much time would not be necessary. Messrs. Rosser and Arnold declared they did not know the whereabouts of Anna Maud Carter but that they had been informed she was in Chattanooga. They asked the court to fix an hour for her appearance in Atlanta. Judge Hill fixed the hour of 10 o'clock Thursday morning for her to appear, and announced that in the event it developed the woman was not in Chattanooga he would consider that fact.

Mr. Rosser began his argument.

"Your honor, a great deal—a vast amount—of time in this case has been introduced in this case really has no part or parcel in it."

AFFIDAVITS TO BE FILED.

The solicitor interrupted to request the court to take an order requiring all affidavits submitted by both sides during the hearing to be filed in the clerk's office within three days from date. The solicitor said:

"We will wish to refer to them from time to time."

Both Mr. Rosser and Mr. Arnold agreed that such action was customary and that the order should be issued. Judge Hill issued the order.

Mr. Rosser resumed his argument.

"Much of the testimony that has been submitted during this hearing has been let in by your honor on the ground that it showed the manner of getting the testimony—not because it was relevant or had any direct bearing on the case. You will notice as you consider the evidence that several of the witnesses swore Burke took their affidavits. You will notice also that in some of these cases Burke did not take the affidavit and had no connection with them. This, however, is not to be wondered at. In a case where there is so much to excite the passions and prejudices of individuals, you may expect conflicting evidence due to the excitement of mind in such cases. Witnesses frequently change their evidence, honestly or dishonestly.

PRESSURE IS STRONG.

"Anybody who has the least understands human nature knows full well the power of the state and the power of the city—knows that its power is sufficient to cause a witness who has changed his testimony to change back. No individual hasn't the power, or capacity of the state or city. I want to say right here in the presence of the solicitor or the other state and city officials to use their power forcefully to exercise a tremendous and compelling influence over these witnesses. The solicitor's power to the grand jury is sufficient. Not a single man who testified falsely in the Frank trial on material matters but had an opportunity to rectify his testimony if he wished to do so.

"The solicitor doesn't have to put in the public prints that he will prosecute for perjury those who change their original testimony. All he has to do is to sit still. His very power rests in the stillness of his office, which is sufficiently potent. "

Mr. Rosser read a code section dealing with the circumstances under which the law was laid down that ordinarily cumulative and impeaching evidence is not a cause for a new trial.

JUDGE HILL AGREES.

"That was never meant that it was not in the discretion of a Georgia judge to grant a new trial if the evidence was wholly cumulative and wholly impeaching, but it was meant that the judge should exercise prudence and care," he said.

Mr. Rosser started to read a number of cases to uphold his contention, when the court said:

"I agree with you on that point, Mr. Rosser."

Continuing his argument, Mr. Rosser said that the judge must look carefully in his own mind the entire trial, not, of course, with the view to passing on the facts, but to get exact knowledge with this motion. Mr. Rosser said he would not read any part of the record of the trial as any part of the first motion for a new trial, because he knew the court was familiar with it.

"I am only going into the matter, the McKnight and the Mas Barrett propositions, except incidentally. Here I will say that I have criticisms of the detectives or of Brother Dorsey. Twelve months have passed since that court battle, and I am older now. But cull them out—these witnesses; see what kind of people they have convicted us with'

"Take Dalton. Take Epps. They will testify to anything, indicating that the detectives were working out this evidence. they thought Burke had taken all of the affidavits. I think he took only two of them. Jones says that his affidavit is a forgery. I only ask that your honor compare the signature on the state's affidavit with that on ours.

"Take Dewey Robinson. Compare our affidavit with their affidavit.

"I will rest this case—I will risk my life's record on this case—when you will say the signatures are the same."

Mr. Rosser continued to talk of the character of the witnesses against Frank.

"I only ask you honor compare, for instance, the testimony that Miss Nellie Wood gave at the coroner's inquest with the testimony she gives in the affidavits made to the state. I ask your honor to make that comparison, for I know you wouldn't convict a mosquito on her testimony.

DENOUNCE WITNESSES.

"Take her affidavit, and take that of Marie Karst, the other girl witness. I am sure that Mr. Dorsey did not write those affidavits, for he would not have made the mistakes those stenographers have placed there for no purpose but to exasperate and inflame. Frank was confined on the testimony of Dalton, Epps, Conley and people of that stamp. The jury knew nothing about these people. Your honor knows them.

"Now let us come back and leave all that for the time being. Let's look at a fair interpretation of Dr. Harris' testimony. Let's consider the prior evidence of Dr. Harris' testimony and its significance. There were two things that the state contended in support of the theory that the murder was committed on the second floor of the factory. These two things were apart from the testimony of Conley. What were they? It was contended that some blood was found by the dressing room door. It was contended that some hair had been found on a lathe handle. It was contended that the body of Mary Phagan's blood and that therefore the murder was committed on the second floor.

"Your honor will see readily the significance of this testimony relating to these two points. We had no opportunity to examine the hair. The solicitor had it here long. I have no doubt my brother was correct in his statement."

The solicitor interrupted.

"Mr. Rosser is mistaken," said he. "I had the hair through the trial, until after the trial and I may have it now. Please refer to the record on this point."

HAIR FOUND ON LATHE.

Mr. Rosser resumed.

"I do not wish to reflect upon the solicitor in this matter. I think my Brother Dorsey is mistaken. The testimony was to the effect that there were only six or eight strands of this hair. Harris says he found six or eight strands, and I understood at the time that the hair had been lost."

The solicitor replied.

"Your honor, I can obtain an affidavit from Mr. Dan Goodlin to the effect that he had this hair in his possession after the trial, and he may have it now."

Mr. Rosser resumed.

"Your honor, the only opportunity we had to get at the facts in connection with this hair incident was to cross-examine the little girl who said it looked like Mary Phagan's hair, and to cross-examine Harris, who said about the same thing. I want to call your honor's attention to the fact as shown by the record, that Harris expressed this hair matter on the jury four different times. Now what was the truth?

"Dr. Harris had examined the hair found on the lathe, under a microscope, and had compared it with the hair taken from Mary Phagan's head. He had a better opportunity than anybody on earth to know whether that was the little girl's hair.

"When Harris was on the stand he knew that he had compared the hair. He is a man who claims to be skilled in science. In making the autopsy on Mary Phagan's body he claimed to have used the best microscope in the world. He should have known more than a dozen said little girls who said it looked like Mary Phagan's hair. I don't want to criticise Dr. Harris too severely, but I submit, your honor, that in the evidence given by him at the trial and in his subsequent affidavit there never was such evasion. He could have given 'Delphic' or 'Oracle' Dodger cards and spades and beat him blind. There was was such a sealed-up witness. And with the facts before you, I want to ask him to be honest dealing?

"Oscar Pappenheimer, a very good friend of Dr. Harris, made an affidavit about the results of his examination and autopsy of the dead girl. The doctor revoked. Dr. Harris made a statement by saying: 'There isn't anything of importance in my finding.' Learning that Dr. Harris contradicted Mr. Pappenheimer Arnold and I went to him as taxpayers, who have helped pay his salary, and as citizens, feeling that there could be no honest purpose for dodging.

ASKED WHAT HE FOUND.

"We asked Dr. Harris to make clear what you found by that autopsy? What part of the body did you examine? And for what purpose? We took pains to cross-examination when he went on the stand.

of justice—and if he be a scientist, to the shame of science—he would state that he had promised to keep it secret; that he should learn the result of his examination when he went o nthe stand.

"On the stand he was constantly evading, and subsequent events have proved Mr. Arnold cross-examined Dr. Harris and asked him specifically what parts of the body he had examined, and for what purpose. He said he had examined the stomach organs. He never said a word about hair.

"Let's take up his present evidence. He told Harlee Branch, this Atlanta journal reporter, reporter sitting there, that he had examined the hair and compared it under the microscope, and that it differed in texture, color and shape.

"He reported to Solicitor Dorsey that the hair found on the lathe was not Mary Phagan's hair. He told the solicitor that he had consulted with Mr. Smith. What does he say now? 'I told Mr. Dorsey I didn't think it was the same hair.' Evasion after evasion. After all this publicity he in effect now says he committed perjury when whether it was or was not Mary Phagan's hair. What does this dodging testimony by Dr. Harris mean, your honor? It means that when an honest jury has had an opportunity to consider his latest evidence I will find that he says he examined the hair and told the solicitor it was not Mary Phagan's hair.

LET JURY DECIDE."

"Then, your honor, let this go to a jury. Let this point be made before a jury. No judge who ever loved the right can approve the conduct of those in that hair incident. My brother Dorsey was mistaken in his zeal. My brother Dorsey should have represented the whole state and counsel Dr. Harris to tell all he knew, the whole truth. Those were dark days! The bright sunlight has dimmed by passion and prejudice, and stronger men than my brother Dorsey and I lost their heads."

Referring to the alleged blood stains on the second floor of the factory, Mr. Rosser said:

"Your honor, the record shows little Mary Phagan had a wound on the head, where there were many blood vessels that would most likely bleed profusely. I want to call your attention to the fact that there was not a drop of blood where Conley swore the body was lying when he picked it up. According to the evidence, she was carried with her head exposed, from this spot to the elevator. There was no coagulation of the blood, the body was still warm, and yet there was not a drop of blood at the spot where the body was found, between that spot and the dressing room door—where the state claims there were blood stains, and between the dressing room door and the elevator. There was not a drop of blood in the elevator, although it was contended that the body in the elevator floor.

THOUGHTS NOT SUFFICIENT.

"State those things, and no man will contend that those spots at the dressing room door were blood. It physically couldn't happen. I ask your honor to think of that and deal with it with your heart and conscience. Some thought it was blood. But that is not the test. The same spots can be where no doubt remains. It must be a scientific test. Those spots by the dressing room door were not blood. There were five or six chips, I think. They were taken to a chemist—a chemist who, by the way, is the friend of ours. Some of these chips there was not a trace of blood. And yet these chips were covered with the same spots which had been thought to be blood. O none of these chips the chemist discovered four or five corpuscles to the field. Just before leaving the stand, the chemist swore it might have been the blood of a fly. Take that testimony, your honor, and weigh it!

"If the jury thought wrong, your honor, and if that is the testimony relative to the blood and the hair, won't you, your honor, allow a jury to pass on the evidence?"

At this point Attorney Arnold called Mr. Rosser's attention to the fact that he had spoken an hour and ten minutes of the two hours allowed. Mr. Rosser said he had not known it had been his intention to discuss the Conley letters, but that Mr. Arnold would have to do it if he desired.

"That's all right," said the court. "Take whatever time you need. I don't want to be present advised he does not wish to hear from the solicitor first."

This was interpreted to mean that the judge did not feel that there was necessity for the case to go on. The evidence submitted by it in combatting the extraordinary motion for a new trial. The impression was strengthened a moment or two later when Mr. Arnold began the closing argument for the defense.

Under the custom and rule, the defense would have the opening and closing speeches, the solicitor speaking between them.

ARNOLD BEGINS SPEECH.

Attorney Arnold began speaking.

"I don't suppose there was ever a more unfortunate coincidence for a committee than this crime. It was a horrible crime, and the perpetrator deserves the severest punishment. I have no attempt to palliate or to mitigate the crime. The point has been: Who committed the crime? And has his conviction been according to law? The question we are considering now is: Has sufficient evidence been turned in the scales even ever so slightly if all had been known at the trial?

"The state has fallen in with a number of men all of whom are criminals. It relied on the testimony of Conley, in connection with Frank. Who are Conley, Dalton, McKnight, Epps and Dufty. At the time of the trial Conley and Dalton were known to be criminals.

"Since the trial McKnight, Epps and Dufty have been shown to have criminal records. Four of their crimes is rank, bald perjury. Would it not have produced another verdict if this fact had been thrown on these men at the trial? Nearly all of the state's evidence revolves around Conley.

"The perjury that has been committed in this case is sickening. It almost makes one doubt the human race. The essential point now is not which of their stories is true, but the fact that they all shown they are not worthy of belief."

JUDGE HILL INTERRUPTS.

Judge Hill interrupted, "Regarding the credibility of witnesses, Mr. Arnold, is it not the rule of law that you should indict, prosecute and convict witnesses for perjury before asking a new trial?"

Mr. Arnold: "Mr. Dorsey is on record as saying he would quit his office before he would indict and prosecute Conley. So long as we are helpless."

Judge Hill: "Wait. Suppose you had come to me and asked me to indict a solicitor, saying Mr. Dorsey is disqualified by his speech."

Mr. Arnold: "No, but think what a handicap in the trial of the case his statement would be."

Mr. Arnold said he had not read the law quoted by the court. Judge Hill remarked that he remembered the case of the state vs. Malone, 149 Ga. The solicitor was on his feet, saying he could furnish Mr. Arnold with citations.

The solicitor read: "The law is that testimony given by a witness under oath has recanted is not a ground for new trial." The solicitor then cited about a dozen cases, remarking that under one of them Mr. Arnold would find the law quoted by the court.

Mr. Arnold: "I do not think that the law is such that under it a man can be caught by perjury and not be able to get out by the law."

"I am not calling much attention to the evidence which has been read because God alone knows what is the truth. These witnesses seem to be of a type that with some hope of reward in their own minds they will agree to make the statement that the man talking to them would like for them to make; or if they feared punishment, such as the bars of the station house, even if they were not threatened they would come to say what the man talking to them wanted them to say.

CONLEY SET THE PACE.

"You could not hunt the penitentiary though and find such a set of witnesses as my friend convicted Frank with. Conley led off with such a nice bunch of lies and got away with them so well, that he encouraged all other men to try their hand. I didn't believe there was so much depravity in the world."

Judge Hill: "Credibility of witnesses is a matter for the jury."

Mr. Arnold: "Yes, but this is different from other cases."

Mr. Arnold said passion was rampant at the time of the trial.

Judge Hill: "I think you are shut off as to the credibility of witnesses."

Mr. Arnold: "If Frank was a witness to come to him with a plain bold truth, it's a hard proposition to hold him. Take the case of Samuel A. Pardee, who I am informed is a reputable business man. He swore that he saw Frank on the block on the streets, and this was exceedingly important since at that hour Conley swore that he and Frank were moving the body. It turns out that Starnes and Campbell have deviled him and swear that he, a respectable citizen, comes out and says that he probably was mistaken, and asks that his affidavit be withdrawn. If you will shake reputable men that way, what can you do to ignorant negroes for whom the jail door is yearning? That's what they do to their witnesses. To make them stick to a story they lock them up in jail, even for a year, as they have Conley.

PUT WITNESSES IN JAIL.

"And so does the state put witnesses in jail. Take Dufty, for instance. They put him in jail, and in a few minutes he had confessed. Look at the men they have to work with! The solicitor has nearly the whole detective force with him.

"The thieves and crooks must abound in Atlanta during the court hours. Give me such a bunch of detectives and a station house to put my witnesses in, and I can make them swear to any lie I propose. In this case all they have to do is to send out a lot of witnesses to prove anything. They just open the doors and say 'Come all ye!' Ye will be received.' And the witnesses answer like sullen cattle coming to the bugle call. My God! They corral all the criminal elements and they drive them just like we would a herd of sheep. I am beginning to long for a case where I've got some showing with the public.

"Poor old Burke goes around, talking religion, and he gets some of the witnesses to recant their lies and tell the truth. But they quickly go back to their lies when the detectives come around. Look at the affidavits of Ragsdale's falls into insignificance when compared with the lies of Dalton, Conley, and other state's evidence witnesses. I wish we had a counter grand jury, so we could indict my friend Dorsey's witnesses. We could have a great indicting match. My friend Dorsey is making a great mistake out of this case, and he does not lose sight of the fact for an instant. But it does look like, that with all the perjury on his side he could indict some of them."

EXPLAINS ABOUT RAGSDALE.

Mr. Arnold then went on to explain-

Why We Make Kryptok Bifocals and Recommend Them.

First of all because of their convenience. They give Near and Far Vision in one solid glass, doing away with two pairs of glasses.

They can be more perfectly ground than any other bifocal known, no ugly seams or pieces to blister or come loose. We make them in Toric or Curved form, giving a larger field both for reading and distance.

Each pair is made to order, conforming to the face in every detail. Your best friend would never know you have on Bifocals. They are absolutely invisible while on the face. They are a joy, not a discomfort. Ask some of our patients how they are pleased.

SUFFERED WITH ERUPTION ON LEG

Above Ankle. Part of Time Had to Walk on Crutches. Itching on Leg Beyond Explanation. CuticuraSoap and Ointment Cured in 6 Weeks.

Chuckey, Tenn.—"I had a sore on my leg just above the ankle. It was sore for twelve months. They called it a fever sore. It could not begin to tell what I suffered. Part of the time I had to walk on crutches. The itching on my leg was beyond my explanation. My leg would itch all around and I would have it rubbed and it rubbed too hard the skin would slip off somewhere else. That would make another sore. There would come out a kind of sticky water all around the leg and around the sore. Anything that scratched would make it itch and if I just put cloth on it to scratch it would make it itch a thousand times worse. It gave me a sight of trouble at night.

"I tried one or four treatments and they failed to cure. At last I saw Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertised and I thought I would try it. I washed the leg twice a day with Cuticura Soap and then applied the Cuticura Ointment for six weeks and it got well. Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me." (Signed) J. D. Hesley, June 8, 1913.

FRANK LOSES NEW TRIAL FIGHT

ation of how the defense happened to find in the Ragsdale story.

"I looked a little fishy," said he, "and so was this man, a long-time minister of the gospel, a man vouched for by Dr. John E. White and other well known and reputable men, and he told his story positively and emphatically. Certainly this minister of the gospel was worthy of belief than the affidavits of jail birds for which the state stands. We would have been lax to the duty to our clients, and we would have been cowards as well, if we hadn't put up the Ragsdale affidavit if Ragsdale lies lied, and he seems to have—it is just one more lie to add to the thousand that mark the case. And I want to say here that so far as Mr. Rosser and myself is the cleanest defense ever made in a case. We know that in this case nothing but the truth would stick, and even when we get the truth right some and take it away. But I say that I don't any hard feeling, for I am not pleaded by all against any one, even though a great many narrow, prejudiced people are bitterly arraigning Mr. Rosser and myself because we have taken the course of this man and every day we write, filth letters are attacking us in the unpopular side, now; but time that great healer of all things, will vindicate the truth, I feel sure. We will leave out the witnesses, and in this case where there is so much perjury, facts should control. I will take up three important physical considerations.

WHAT STATE CONTENDED.

The state contended for conviction upon the finding which it claimed it submitted Conley, notably the blood spots and the hair, which the state claimed to show the crime was committed on the second floor."

Mr. Arnold said Conley's first brought perjurious charge into the case at first.

"I believe all of this perversion talk is fiction," said he, "I don't believe there has been any perversion in the case on the part of Conley or of Frank. It was just a proposition of common sense.

"I don't see where the cutting of the fingernails indicated perversion."

Mr. Arnold discussed the blood spots and the hair.

Conley, in the fitting process, learned that some of something was supposed to be and had been found in front of the sewing room, so he just said he "suspected" blood was on the floor. The state contended that strands of hair on the body forced Mary Phagan struck her and there and that this so-called blood had proved Conley's story that he was around the body in front of the dressing room. Around this spot five or six hairs were taken, and on one of the six with teeth identified he found several blood corpuscles. There are 8,000 red corpuscles in a single drop of blood. Almost anything could have committed to that much blood.

Microscopic could have been stepped and then Dr. Smith's testimony practically eliminated the blood spot theory, which left the state to depend upon the hair. The hair was very powerful evidence, yet we did not see it; we never saw it, but Dorsey did not produce it.

PRISONER NOT REPRESENTED.

Neither did we have any of Mary Phagan's hair with which to compare it. Dr. Harris claims to have made an autopsy, but nobody represented the prisoner at the autopsy. In that matter we were completely in Mr. Dorsey's hands. Mr. Dorsey had an expert to testify that it was not Mary Phagan's hair. We all know that the naked eye test, in comparison of hair, is valueless, yet Dorsey had and kept to himself the expert to testify, he knew the importance of the hair, and with the knowledge of the expert's opinion locked up in breast used the hair proposition for all it was worth.

Maybe such extreme partisanship in a civil case, where only property is involved, might be excusable. But I think a criminal court should be a step-over that. I think every material fact in the possession of a solicitor general should be disclosed. Yet when I asked the opinion of an expert he cited to the jury the opinion of the Kennaw affidavit, which was Mary Phagan's. If Mr. Dorsey did not know that an expert's opinion was better than that of any man who had made only a casual examination, why did he go to the trouble of having Dr. Harris refute a opinion of the girl's hair. This is one fact they can't threaten out of the case with that of a comparison except by expert testimony breaks up the record conclusion to which they claimed the crime was committed on the second floor. And I think that by itself the state would be entitled to a new trial in the original case.

DISPOSES BECKER NOTE.

Mr. Arnold then took up the Becker note proposition, remarking again that Becker had wrote the notes killed Frank, he submitted a photograph of the notes furnished by the solicitor—the ones used by the defense—to the jury, and asked him to examine the notes on the order blanks.

"That is number 1914," he said. "That is one thing in this case that they can't throw away from, although I will admit that if those detectives started to dispute the fact that this table is number 1914 I begin to believe it has disappeared in thin air."

Judge Hill after examining the photograph of the note for a moment, said:

"That looks like 1914 to me."

"It is altogether probable that Chambers, Gantt and others went through the basement looking for trash and probably looked these carbon copies of the order blanks," said Mr. Arnold. "It is not to be assumed that they found all the scraps of paper. There has never been any pretense that the whole basement was ever cleaned up before this tragedy. All they say is that the main trash pile was burned.

"Conley is an habitual note writer. That has been demonstrated. At first he denied he could write, and then when he could deny it no longer he admitted he could write but said all he could write was what somebody else told him.

"Aren't these notes important enough to justify another investigation? For weeks after the murder everybody said the writer of the notes committed the crime. But that was before the case had been worked up against Frank. It was before they were on Frank's trail. When they had pushed the case so far they were afraid to change about.

TRIAL WAS DEPLORABLE

"I am going to ask you to read these notes written in jail by Conley to Anna Maud Carter. They are unutterably vile.

"The original tragedy was horrible, but it was not more deplorable than the trial.

"These notes show that Jim Conley is an artful and fatal creature as ever lived in the world. They show that his body and mind were saturated and absorbed with lust. His original motive may have been robbery but he followed it up with lust.

"Mr. Burns, after reading those jail notes, declared it as his opinion that Conley was a pervert. I give Mr. Burns full credit for honesty and sincerity. It may be that he doesn't thoroughly understand the negro nature, and that Conley isn't a pervert, but I think to call him a pervert is to pay him a compliment.

"Conley admitted in his affidavit that he knew Anna Maude Carter. I believe she has told the truth about Conley's relations with her.

"The fact is not denied that she knew Conley and that she passed notes with him, and the truth of her affidavit is strengthened by the fact that Conley, in his own affidavit, does not deny that he wrote the notes to her."

Mr. Arnold compared the jail notes with the murder notes, and the murder notes with the affidavit given by Conley on the witness stand. He pointed out numerous similarities in the use of words and in phrasing. He declared that instead of there having been two murder notes there was one murder note which was written on two pieces of paper.

PUTS BLAME ON CONLEY.

"They say," declared Mr. Arnold, "that the murder note was Frank's conception and Conley's execution. I contend in the light of these jail notes and the similarity of words and phrases used by Conley on the witness stand with words and phrases in the murder note that it was Conley's conception and Conley's execution.

"I am now omitting my argument to three physical facts—the carbon copy of the order blanks, which was never in Frank's office or on the second floor; the hair which Dr. Harris declared not to have been Mary Phagan's hair, and the subsequent notes written in jail by Conley. I am doing this because I think they come squarely and groundedly up to the law for an extraordinary motion."

At this point Mr. Arnold stopped his argument to inquire if Judge Hill would permit the defense to submit a brief on the points of law raised by the solicitor.

Judge Hill replied: "Mr. Arnold, I think you will probably be too late. I may decide this case at the close of the argument."

Mr. Arnold resumed his comparison of the jail notes with those found by Mary Phagan's body in the factory basement. He declared Conley's impulse was to write notes; that it would never have occurred to anybody else to write those jail notes.

"In conclusion," said he, "we have presented this case to your honor under great difficulties. All of the facts brought out have not been subjected to the closest scrutiny, and if any of them stands muster they should receive due consideration. We had to go into their camp to get Harris on the hair.

"Without the testimony of Ragsdale, Epps and the others, shouldn't these notes be published, they claimed the crime was committed on the second floor. And think that by itself the state would be entitled to raise a new trial in the original case.

"I submit that the verdict rendered by the jury in sweeping aside Conley's evidence."

ALEXANDER IS HEARD.

As Mr. Arnold concluded and sat down Attorney Harry A. Alexander arose and addressed the court.

"Your honor, he said, "I think that Mr. Pye is under the impression that before deciding this extraordinary motion you will give him an opportunity to present reasons why your decision should not be rendered until after you have heard the arguments on our motion to set aside the verdict."

"No, I have not given Mr. Pye to understand that," replied Judge Hill. "I told him distinctly I would not delay this case. Mr. Dorsey you will take an order overruling the extraordinary motion."

Immediately Mr. Rosser and Mr. Arnold were on their feet to insist that the court would certify to a bill of exceptions to the supreme court. Judge Hill said he would, but later announced that in the event the case was carried up he would send along a written opinion with it.

Before adjourning the hearing Judge Hill announced that on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock he would begin the hearing on the motion filed by Attorneys Pye, Peeples and others asking that the original verdict in the Frank case be set aside because the defendant had been denied his constitutional right to be present when the jury returned its verdict against him.

Solicitor Dorsey said he had been so busy with the extraordinary motion that he had not had time to prepare himself to combat the "set aside" motion and he feared he might not be ready Saturday.

"We will consider that at that time," said Judge Hill.

Dorsey Promises Thorough Probe by Grand Jury

Distinctly the sensation of Tuesday's hearing was the placing of Dan S. Lemon, the Burns lieutenant, under a $1,000 bond to appear as a witness before the grand jury.

The solicitor has announced that the grand jury will be given the data for a thorough probe of the many charges of perjury and bribery which have been made in the case. The solicitor, however, has consistently refused to name the men against whom he will ask the grand jury to bring indictments.

In the prosecutions, which are to follow the hearing, the solicitor says he will reach just as high as the evidence permits.

When Lehon was placed under bond the solicitor stated he would probably be needed before the grand jury within a week or ten days and it is presumed general prosecutions will start within that time.

GILLELAND MAKES STATEMENT.

Deputy Sheriff J. W. Gilleland, the officer referred to in the affidavit made by the Carter woman for the police, decides most emphatically that he ever allowed the woman to enter Conley's cell.

The only person allowed to enter the negro's cell, the deputy explains, were the newspaper men who cleaned up and the man who brought Conley his meals. He does not know of the passing of any notes between Conley and the negro woman, he says. His brand practically the entire story of the negress as a "lie."

She at one time requested him to allow her to enter the cell, but did not again bring up the matter, when he flatly refused the request, he says.

Bernard Denies Charge Of Luring Epps Away

Branding as false and a "lie out of the whole cloth" the charge that he had any connection whatever in enticing young George Epps with C. W. Burke and Jimmie Wrenn, from Birmingham, Ala., and others securing an affidavit to be used in connection with the extraordinary motion for a new trial for Leo M. Frank, B. Bernard has written a letter to The Journal with the request that it be published.

The communication follows:

"Inasmuch as I see a card which I see published that I, with C. W. Burke and Jimmie Wrenn, enticed young George Epps to Birmingham, Ala., I am intimidated him into changing his evidence in the Frank case, I wish to say it is a lie out of the whole cloth. I do not know C. W. Burke or Jimmie Wrenn, and never saw George Epps until a day or two ago upon his return to Atlanta.

Immediately upon hearing the charge that I was supposed to be connected with it, I went to Solicitor Dorsey's office, told the boy and the solicitor that the boy was lying, and requested the solicitor to at least make a record investigation or the boy's statements, before using my name. I haven't been in Birmingham in what years, I would have been an easy matter to have investigated and found out that the charges so far as I am concerned are not true. It does seem that with the large force of detectives at work that a citizen should at least have the protection of some show of investigation and not parade him in public upon just the word of an irresponsible criminal child, that has to be nursed as to his testimony, an occasional demandant.

If there is no more truth to the other charges of bribery, intimidation and improper methods than there is in this charge against me, then the public only has to wait a few minutes to find that they are but an empty pretense and sham.

I requested an investigation by the solicitor's force. This it seems has been denied me. I will now demand one, where the law gives me the right to have one, in the criminal courts, and while prosecuting is good, I will take a warrant for the little Epps man, and give him an opportunity to make good, or go where they punish juveniles who try to obtain indemnity for their own sins by lying on others.

B. BERNARD.

Rabbi Asserts Witness Gave False Testimony

The Journal has been requested to publish the following communication from Rabbi David Marx, which is self explanatory:

To the Editor of The Journal:

Dear Sir: I crave the courtesy of saying through your publication a few words about the affidavit made by Mary Rich that Mrs. Frank, Mrs. Burke and Lehon and I attempted to persuade her to give false testimony in the Frank case. This is a deliberate falsehood. As the request of Mrs. Frank I accompanied her to the place where Mary Rich has her stand. The purpose of this call was not to intimidate or coerce the woman nor to persuade her in anything that was not right or proper. It was to ascertain if the story which had been widely circulated that she had sold Jim Conley a lunch near the National Pencil factory's alley on the afternoon of Memorial day last year was true and if true whether she would make affidavit to this fact. This woman was urged to tell only the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

She declared that Jim Conley had bought a 20 cent lunch a little before 1:30 o'clock on the afternoon of that day and at the place where she has her stand, which is near said alley. She said that she knew the time because a gentleman going towards the Terminal station with a grip in his hand had told her the time and that Conley had just left her stand. She further stated that she would sign nothing because the paper to which had been given her had injured her business and she had swore not to sign anything but that she would tell the truth in court. At no time was she asked or was it suggested to her by any one in the party to do anything except tell the truth.

She refused to make the affidavit asked for but insisted that it was the truth and because it was true she said it then and would always say it. Mrs. Frank told her that her affidavit might be of service but she said: "I have been told not to sign anything, but I'd rather tell the truth."

I understand that she certified to this very thing she told us, before the commissioner appointed by the court to take her deposition. I make this statement in justice to all parties concerned and to the public in general. Respectfully yours.

DAVID MARX.

VETERANS WELCOMED BY FLORIDA GOVERNOR

Park Trammell Delivers Fervid Address at Opening of Jacksonville Reunion

(By Associated Press.)

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 6.—United Confederate Veterans and allied organizations, in twenty-fourth annual reunion here, were extended a cordial welcome today by Governor Park Trammell, in a fervid address at the veterans' first official meeting.

"Veterans and friends," said Governor Trammell, "Floridians are loyal to the Stars and Stripes and are ever ready to sustain the Banner of our republic. Today in the life of our nation, and in the search of progress for the upbuilding the greatest country on the globe, we know no north, no south, no east, or west, but are a reunited people under one flag, with a common purpose and a common destiny. The bitterness of yesterday, engendered by the Civil strife is but a memory—and we now esteem, respect and appreciate our brothers of the north, as our friends, our neighbors and fellow Americans.

"The city of Jacksonville and the state of Florida have entertained many important conventions and we have welcomed them and friends.

"We honor you, veterans, not only because you went forth in defense of our land, but as well for your loyalty and courage, and energy in bringing back to life, prosperity and influence in our southland.

"Every nation boasts of its soldiers and brave deeds, but no nation has a greater right to feel proud of its soldiers than the American republic. Today as war is impending in the far south-west, the fire of patriotism is burning as white heat, within the breasts of our southern people, and at a moment's call our men would gladly rally to the flag and again, undaunted, face death upon the battlefield.

"Veterans, sons and daughters of the Confederacy, you will find here a congenial spirit and good fellowship. May your stay be full of pleasure and may you long remember with fond recollections your visit to the Land of Flowers."

THEY ARE THE RAPID DRILLERS

GATLING GUN SQUAVES OF SORAK TEMPLE, TERRE HAUTE.

These Zouaves will appear in the parades and maneuvers of the Shriners' patrols in Atlanta next Tuesday and Wednesday. At the speed of 240 steps a minute the patrol executes numerous spectacular movements of gun and bayonet exercises, gun whirling, wall scaling and pyramid building. They will be seen in the night parade next Tuesday as a mounted patrol with four horses attached to each of their two guns.

FIFTY BANDS PLAYING AS ONE TO FEATURE SHRINERS' MEETING

of the Shriners. Many business men and men of affairs attending the convention will avail themselves of it. Cards entitling the visitors to the service will be issued by the local committee.

REVIEW AND DRILL.

Captain J. O. Seamans, commanding Yaarab patrol, Atlanta, issued Wednesday the following statement:

"The patrols' review and drill star promptly at 9 o'clock next Wednesday morning. This will be the biggest uniformed body of men assembled in the southern states since the Spanish-American war. The uniforms alone will represent more than a million and a half dollars of expense. Fifty thousand people can see the whole spectacle from the embankments surrounding the great arena in Piedmont park. The review will take about three-quarters of an hour. It will be composed of one division, comprising three brigades, or eight regiments of twelve companies each. The average will be forty men to the patrol. The division will be commanded by Past Imperial Potentate Frank C. Baundy, of Chicago, Ill. His aides will be Nobles John A. Hynds, Burton Smith, George Napier, Frank Adair, W. M. Slaton, W. P. Andrews, Theo Toepel, Chas Reed, David Yarbrough, W. J. Stoddard, George Argard and J. Hall Miller.

"After the division has passed in review, the bands of each regiment will be assembled into one mammoth composite band in front of the reviewing stand and will play tune of the national anthems. There will be fifty bands in that composite aggregation. It will be led by Noble Fred Wedemeyer, of Yaarab temple, Atlanta. Captain Seamans will be field marshal of the whole affair, so the command of Yaarab patrol through the manoeuvers will devolve upon First Lieutenant Homer C. Ashford and Second Lieutenant F. E. Van der Veer.

It is expected the imperial potentate and members of the imperial council, who will not appear before until 11 o'clock that morning, will take part in the review of the patrols.

SOUTHERN HELL ASKS HELP.

The Southern Bell asks subscribers to help it handle extraordinary traffic next week by using phones only when necessary between hours of 9 and 11 o'clock and 3 and 5 o'clock. Statistics from other cities where Shriners have met furnish conclusion that the heaviest use of the telephones is between those hours.

"A city is judged by its public service utilities, and we ask your co-operation," it says to subscribers.

Potentate Forrest Adair has asked all members of Yaarab temple to display official pennants during the week in their homes or offices.

The ladies' reception committee, Mrs. John M. Slaton, chairman, met at the executive mansion Wednesday at 11 a. m. and planned details finally.

Orders issued Wednesday by Captain J. O. Seamans direct members of Yaarab patrol to report at the Masonic temple Saturday afternoon, wearing red uniforms, white canvas shoes, and white sash; prepared to remain under orders until excused. The patrol will report at headquarters at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning for the parade, and at 6 o'clock Tuesday evening for the second parade.

SHRINERS CALL FOR AUTOS; 300 NEEDED FOR PARADE.

Atlanta must furnish 500 automobiles for the Shriners' parade Tuesday of next week. The committee in charge has not more than 200 secured. They want 300 more.

Every owner of an automobile in Atlanta is asked to give its use for that parade Tuesday morning if he possibly can. Telephone A. S. Adams, Ivy 4285, and let him know at once if you can furnish a car.

Movie Men Will Be On Job Entire Week

Three "movie" operators will be on the job at the Shriners' convention from the time the first elegation gets here, Supday, until all the patrols have left at the end of the week.

They will take pictures of the parades and drills and entertainments and will show them in Atlanta and all over the United States. It is certain to be a big advertisement for this city. The operators are making preparations to develop their films right here—the only city in the south where "movie" films can be developed—and to show the first pictures taken at local theaters while the convention is in session.

Potentate Forrest Adair has issued an order assigning Nobles C. L. Barnwell, L. J. Harris and James T. Scott to trail the operators and see that they are allowed to break through the lines and get the stuff they want.

The specially appointed operators are representatives of the Scenic Film company. H. S. Rowland, Carl B. Rountree and S. L. Brownle.

SHIP RAIDED AND ROBBED BY 17 CHINESE PIRATES

SAN FRANCISCO, May 6.—Details of a raid by Chinese pirates on the steamer Shanghai March 31, in which several of the ship's officers and crew were killed and $18,000 stolen, were brought here today by the Japanese liner Nippon Maru.

The Shanghai, a Chinese-owned vessel which flies the British flag, sailed from Hong Kong in the evening with seventeen passengers, who proved to be pirates. Three hours out of port, at a prearranged signal, the pirates drew pistols and knives and attacked four soldiers who had been supplied to guard the vessel's treasure. One soldier was killed and another injured. The pirates then rushed into the engine rooms and took charge. The keeper of the ship's stores tried to intervene and was killed. By disguising himself as a coolie and hiding, the Chinese skipper escaped.

According to the Nippon Maru's officers the entire coast of China is infested by pirates. The government, being without funds to operate a coast patrol, is powerless.

Thus far only native vessels have been attacked.

Since this is not Fancy but FACT, Prepare Yourself for A Most Extraordinary Announcement of Embroideries

$5 to $12.50 Lovely New Flouncings

"COME to the checkroom, quick," came the summons over the phone. So the writer hung up the receiver and hurried downstairs. He found an excited lace buyer reveling in boxes of new embroideries. $2.19

—"Here," she said, throwing out an exquisite embroidery flouncing; "here is an identical pattern we had earlier at $9 a yard; this Baby Irish flouncing was $10; that handsome Filet piece was $12.50. And we are to sell them all at $2.19! Did you ever see such values! Aren't they just dear? Won't people clamor for them!"

—Good women of Atlanta, the lace buyer's enthusiasm is justified. In the writer's experience of fifteen years he has never seen such values. If you will look at the window display; if you will handle the embroideries at the counter; if you will but see these dreams of loveliness; you will be as delighted as we.

—But down to sober business. In cold detail we put down these facts:

—The flouncings are 27 and 45 inches wide.
—The materials are chiefly white in crepes, voiles, glass cloth, linens and mulls.
—The patterns are Baby Irish, Teneriffe, Flat Venise, Shadow and Filet.
—Most of them are all white; some are in colors.
—Some few novelties are shown; flouncings with net ruffle; hand loom edges, etc.
—Not a yard is worth under $5; some are worth $10 and $12.50; the average price is easily $7.50. Choice $2.19.

CONFIDENT BOND ISSUE WILL CARRY NEXT TIME

Leaders of Campaign for Greater Hospital Encouraged With Showing of Voters

While the leaders in the Grady bond campaign naturally regret the failure of the bonds to carry, at the same time they feel highly encouraged by the large vote that was polled and by the fact that an overwhelming majority of these votes were favorable to the issue.

They consider that the campaign served the good purpose of educating the public to the needs of Grady hospital and thereby sewed seed that will bear fruit whenever the voters are again asked to authorize a bond issue to enlarge and rebuild this great institution which does so much for suffering humanity.

Ivan E. Allen, chairman of the general bond campaign committee, said Wednesday morning:

"We won by losing. The vote really was better than I expected, considering the short time we had for educating the people as to the hospital's needs. The law requiring bonds to be authorized by two-thirds of the entire registration is a handicap on Atlanta and every other city in the state, and should be changed. It would be sufficient to require a two-thirds majority of those voting. With the law as it now stands, the result of a bond election is controlled by those who are indifferent combined with those who are out of the city and those who have died since the registration list became effective. Take the case, in this election, of the late Judge T. P. Westmoreland. The last public appearance he made was at a meeting of the Grady bond committee. Then he was taken ill and died. Had he lived, his vote would have been among the first to be cast at his precinct for Grady bonds. But his vote counted against the bonds, as much as if he had lived and voted against them. Take the case of my partner, Mr. Felder. He was out of town yesterday on business which he was obliged to attend to. If he had been here he would have taken great pleasure in voting for the bonds. But his vote counted against them. Then there was the indifferent voter, who staid away because he did not feel enough interest even to go and vote against the bonds. His vote counted against them just the same.

"So, I say we are handicapped by the law as it now stands. I realize that it is a constitutional provision and could not be changed without a vote of the people of the state, but I believe if a constitutional amendment were submitted they would ratify it."

R. L. Foreman, another of the leaders in the bond campaign, was similarly optimistic. He said:

"The bonds did not fail because the people are opposed to them, but because not quite a sufficient number of people were aroused to the importance of Grady's needs and because some of those who were giving thought to the matter could not quite see where $750,000 is needed. Both of these obstacles could have been overcome with a little more time to make our campaign of education.

"However, I am not discouraged. An overwhelming majority of the voters showed that they have Grady hospital in their minds and want it enlarged and improved. The more they think about the hospital, the more they will appreciate the fact that it should be made a great municipal hospital commensurate with Atlanta's present size and prospective growth. And the next time it is proposed to issue Grady bonds, I feel sure that they will authorize the issue. One of the most encouraging features of the campaign was that so many people joined in support of the movement right from the start, showing that our people take an interest in their municipal affairs and are alive to the needs of the various departments."

Mr. W. Harris Dead

EASTMAN, Ga., May 6.—Mr. W. Harris, a prominent merchant of Eastman, died at his home here Monday night at 10:45 o'clock. He was 58 years of age. He is survived by a wife and five children.

FLAGS FLYING FOR SHRINERS ALREADY

ANNUAL MOTHERS' DAY PROCLAMATION ISSUED

Governor Slaton Gives Statement Settling Date for Sunday, May 10

In accordance with the time-honored custom, Governor Slaton Tuesday morning issued the annual "mothers' day" proclamation, setting Sunday, May 10 as the date.

The proclamation follows:

State of Georgia,
Executive Department
May 5, 1914.

There is one obligation which we can never hope to pay. That is the debt we owe to the mothers who bore us. The price they freely gave that we might live, their tender nurture of our infancy and watchful guardianship of our childhood and later years passes the power of thought to measure or of words to express. But though we cannot hope to repay, we can, at least, revere. It is fitting then that we should set apart one day in the year to offer our vows at the holy altar of Motherhood.

Therefore, I, John M. Slaton, governor of the state of Georgia, do hereby designate Sunday, May 10, 1914, to be observed as MOTHERS' DAY.

Let each of us, who is blessed with a living mother, testify to her on that day by written or spoken word or by some other appropriate token his tender appreciation of her love and care; let us lay a garland on the graves of the mothers who are gone as an offering of affectionate remembrance; and let us each wear the white flower as an emblem of the simplicity, the purity and selflessness of Mother's devotion.

(Signed) JOHN M. SLATON,
Governor.

SULPHUR FOR ECZEMA

APPLIED LIKE COLD CREAM IT STOPS ITCHING AND DRIES SKIN ERUPTIONS RIGHT UP

With the first application of bold-sulphur cream the angry itching attending any eczema eruption ceases and its remarkable healing powers begin. Sulphur, says a renowned dermatologist, just common bold-sulphur, made into a thick cream will soothe and heal the skin when irritated and broken out with Eczema or any form of eruption. The moment it is applied all itching ceases and after two or three applications the Eczema disappears, leaving the skin clear and smooth.

He tells Eczema sufferers to get from any good pharmacy an ounce of bold-sulphur cream and apply it to the irritated, inflamed skin, the same as you would any cold cream.

For many years this soothing, healing sulphur has occupied a secure position in the treatment of cutaneous affections by reason of its parasite-destroying property. It is not only parasiticidal, but also antipruritic, antiseptic and remarkably healing in all irritable and inflammatory conditions of the skin. While not always establishing a permanent cure it never fails to instantly subdue the irritation and heal the Eczema right up and it is often years later before any eruption again appears on the skin.

COUNTERFEITER DIES IN ATLANTA FEDERAL PRISON

Vincenco Giglo, Member of Lupo the Wolf Gang, Succumbs at Supper Table

Vincenco Giglo, thirty-four years of age, a member of the famous Lupo the Wolf gang of counterfeiters, died suddenly at the federal prison yesterday afternoon. Heart failure was the cause.

Giglo, who was apparently in the very best of health, had taken his seat at the supper table when without warning he slipped from his chair to the floor and died almost before his companions could reach him.

Comparatively little is known of the man at the prison. He was sent from New York, his home state, to serve a fourteen-year term together with five other members of the noted band of counterfeiters headed by Lupo the Wolf, who is himself serving a term in the prison. Of the fourteen years, Giglo had served a little more than four.

The body has been turned over to Harry G. Poole, undertaker, to be shipped to New York City, the dead man's home.

MAKING EAST POINT A REAL SPOTLESS TOWN

Leading Citizens Whitewash Telegraph Poles; Others Make Dirt Disappear

Wednesday was "clean-up day" in East Point and men, women and children went to work with enthusiasm to clear away dirt and debris. The leading men of the town were put to work whitewashing telegraph poles and trees, pruning shrubs and trees and cutting grass along the main street, while the club women of the little city, under whose auspices the clean-up movement was held, swept and garnished and made things spick and span wherever they could.

In the afternoon, when school was out, the children got busy picking up trash and papers and doing whatever else they could to aid.

As a reward of merit the men were invited to a dinner which was given by the women in one of the downtown stores, and many good things to eat were served.

Mr. Henson has received no trace of the car since it disappeared.

The car tag was No. 2624 Georgia and the owner's initials, C. A. H., were on both doors.

When Week-Old News Went Out of Favor, Day-Old News Was Doomed, Too!

It seems a long time ago when we were content to wait a week to learn the news of the neighborhood and of the rest of the world. But it was not so long ago---and the weekly newspaper still has its sphere of usefulness.

The newspaper of morning issue was a great stride in advance of the old-fashioned weekly---for it printed today the news of yesterday.

Of course the advent of the morning newspaper meant, in due course, the appearance of the evening newspaper, whose organization and equipment should enable it to print the day's news the same day---for the benefit of those who do not like to wait until tomorrow to learn what has been going on in the world today.

Advertising has kept step with the news. Being a specialized form of news, advertising nowadays is TIMELY, giving publicity to every selling event in the stores which could possibly appeal to the self-interest of the reader.

SHERIFF MANGUM THANKS PEOPLE FOR THEIR HELP

Deputies Also Express Their Appreciation for Aiding in Their Elections

Sheriff C. W. Mangum and members of his force of deputies have requested that The Journal express to the people of Fulton county their deep appreciation of the support they received in the primary Tuesday.

The sheriff left the city Wednesday to attend the Confederate Veterans' reunion in Jacksonville, but before leaving said:

"I wish to express my most heartfelt thanks for the support accorded us in the election yesterday. We feel that this support is an indorsement of the service we have attempted to render in the past and we pledge ourself to prove our appreciation by the same attention to duty that has won for us this victory."

J. H. Owen, Mr. Mangum's chief deputy, also expressed deep appreciation of the support of his friends. "I would like to thank my friends in College Park, where I live, especially," he said.

"They gave us better than a 3 to 1 vote and I feel that this is an indorsement not only of Mr. Mangum's administration of the county's business, but of my own humble efforts."

Deputy Plennie Minor is another who spoke feelingly of his gratification at the result of the primary. "We feel," he said, "that the votes of our thousands of supporters show their appreciation of our efforts in attempting to render them efficient service and we wish to assure them that it shall ever be our aim in the future to prove to them that their faith in us has not been misplaced. We shall attempt to make them more certain by the service we shall render that they made no mistake in again honoring us with their confidence and support."

ferred to a select committee to report what should be done as the case now stands."

During the four-year period now ended, it was pointed out, the increase in membership was 171,237; the increase in profits from the church publishing houses at Nashville, Texas, Dallas, Tex., and Richmond, Va., was $116,760.87.

On educational institutions the address showed there are 87 schools as compared to 102 in 1910, but showing an increase in value of property, buildings and equipments of $83,149,989 and an increase of $3,282,192 in endowments.

It was stated that these figures, compiled by the secretary of the board, included Vanderbilt university, but don't include the Southern Methodist university at Dallas, now in course of building. The enrollment in the schools of the church was 19,218 compared to 21,063 in 1910.

MISSION WORK.

In discussing the question of missions the bishops pointed out that the opening of the Panama canal "brings the Orient to our doors and creates also new and speedier lines of communication with other nations in the world's sphere. Even the disturbed political conditions of the countries into which we have undertaken to carry the message of salvation, notwithstanding their distressing and discouraging aspects at present, foreshadow to us that great and effectual doors will be presently opened such as never before confronted us.

"The general conference of 1910 reorganized the missionary department of the church, uniting the bodies then known as the board of missions, the Woman's Foreign Missionary society and the Woman's Home Mission society. Under the new system the quadrennium now closing has been necessarily one of readjustment of plans and reconstruction of policies. The report of the board of missions, as now constituted, including the reports of its several departments, will be laid before the conference later."

Attention was paid to so-called schemes for social betterment when the address declared there are many who would have the church "abandon her high calling in Jesus Christ and give herself exclusively to all sorts of pretentious programs for 'social betterment,' 'improved environment,' and the like. They conjure her to rely on eugenics rather than upon regeneration by the Holy Ghost for the making of a new and nobler race, and to bring to bear upon man, the free agent, stock-raising expedients, and plant-culture devices as the most efficacious means to improve the species. But she may not heed the voices of these spurious renovators of mankind x x x believing that 'the soul of all improvement is the improvement of the soul.'"

The forthcoming report of the commission on U. federation with the Methodist Episcopal church was referred to when it was stated "it appears the federal council of Methodism has at last been completely organized, with full power to hear and finally decide without appeal every decision, all cases of conflict and misunderstanding between the two Episcopal Methodisms."

The first formal meeting of this council will take place in June, 1914. Hope was expressed that it would be the means of securing the long sought end of perfect peace between the two churches.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

An increase of 1,000 Sunday schools, 10,000 teachers and nearly 325,000 scholars since 1910, was noted. The number of houses of worship was given at 17,038, valued at $53,683,491.

A call in the endowment fund for superannuated preachers during the past four years was given as $143,429.

The conference was urged to "take such action as may be deemed necessary to secure the speedy and definite erection of a church in Washington, D. C., adequately representative of our Methodism."

CHANGE IN NAME.

The bishops reported that the question of changing the name of the church to "the Methodist Episcopal Church in America" had been submitted to the annual conferences during 1913 and was not approved, 3,891 voting against the change and 1,316 in favor.

On the question of "laity rights" for women, the cause for a widespread discussion at the 1910 general conference, the address declared:

"Experience has confirmed us in the view which we expressed four years ago in the bishop's address at Asheville. We have reason to believe that the demand for this kind of equality is not in harmony with the general sentiment of the women of our church. * * * We believe, furthermore, that the spirit of this movement is against the view which our people at large have held and still hold in regard to woman's place in the church and in society, and that such a step wouldn't, therefore, make for the greater efficiency of our church as a whole in any of the regions occupied by it."

Under the subject of "legislation suggested," the bishops recommended the repeal of the church order providing that an unordained preacher in charge of a circuit, station or mission, may celebrate the rites of matrimony and administer baptism in the absence of an elder or bishop. They recommended that the law touching the location of a traveling preacher without his consent be changed so that the matter be referred to a special committee or the standing committee of conference relations in the annual conferences.

The sale of church property by order of the quarterly conference was referred to as "open to serious objection."

In connection with "methods of procedure in the administration of discipline," the bishops declared:

"We regard it as very unfortunate when the methods and principles of the common law are brought into our Methodist procedure in matters of discipline, leading as it does to confusion and even worse results. We earnestly recommend that such changes in our law be made as will do away with all needless technicalities and as nearly as may be long by legislation, let recourse be adopted as will make it easy for essential justice to be done, and when done allowed to stand."

NO NEW BISHOPS.

That no new bishops will be elected at the present general conference was indicated when the address declared:

"Without increasing the present number of bishops, all reasonable demands for Episcopal service can be met, the lack of service of any who may be providentially disabled being supplied by others without serious inconvenience."

In presiding over the conference Bishop A. W. Wilson used a gavel sent by Mrs. Scruggs, daughter of the late Bishop Paine, made from wood of the bishop's favorite cedar tree.

Bishop W. E. Waterhouse, of Los Angeles, read the opening hymn, "Are We yet Alive?" and the opening prayer was offered by Bishop W. B. Murrah, of Jackson, Miss. Bishops Collins Denny, of Richmond, and John C. Kilgo, of Durham, N. C., read the scriptural lessons. Bishop J. M. McCoy and Dr. J. H. McClain, of the North Texas conference, also participated in the service.

The roll call showed more than 250 out of 323 accredited delegates in attendance.

Birmingham Is Facing "Blue Law" Sunday in War on Sabbath Movies

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 6.—Birmingham faces the prospect of a real blue law Sunday, beginning next week, unless some compromise is reached in the meanwhile. This would mean no operation of street cars, taxicabs, soft drink stands, cigar stands, amusement parks, etc.

The pastors' union has just blocked an effort of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' association to open movies a few hours Sunday afternoon and the president of the movie association, A. A. Walhas, has written Police Chief Eagan demanding enforcement of every Sunday law in the city code.

SATURDAY PICNIC DAY AT STONE MOUNTAIN

Saturday is picnic day at Stone Mountain, and several thousand visitors, among them a number of the Shriners, who will have arrived in Atlanta, by that time, are expected to be in attendance.

The second Saturday in May, for the past twenty years, has been set aside as picnic day at Stone Mountain, and every year the size of the crowd, which comes form all surrounding sections, for an all day outing, has been increasing.

This year, because of the better transportation facilities, the citizens of Stone Mountain expect the largest crowd in the history of "Picnic Day."

WILL UTILIZE ATLANTA IN MOVING PICTURE DRAMA

Word was received today that Benjamin Chapin, the famous Lincoln impersonator who appears Friday in the closing number of the Alkahest Lyceum course at the Baptist Tabernacle, intends to utilize Atlanta in the scenario of an unusually ambitious motion picture drama which he is producing.

The picture is to be called "What Would Lincoln Do?" It is to be a thorough portrayal of sociological conditions all over the United States. Pictures have already been taken in the north and west. Mr. Chapin intends to point with the drama the moral that the struggle for human freedom is still in progress, and that, while one kind of slavery is over, another is still in existence—the slavery of wages and necessity.

sent me up in a gunboat. It was a wet little tub and a rough passage. For two days I didn't eat a thing. I still feel weak."

Mr. O'Shaughnessy enthusiastically declared that he was glad to get back to the states after nearly two years' absence. He took charge at Mexico City in 1912 and his wife and the little boy have been with him all that time. "It's a hard climate down there," said Mrs. O'Shaughnessy. "But I like Mexico. I think it's fine. The altitude is so high there, that you don't feel very energetic. Just think of a place where water boils at 110 and 112 degrees! But there's lots of fun. Mexicans do a great many other things beside bull fighting."

The clank and rattle of the waiting train startled them and the trio hurried toward the steps.

"I don't want to miss it, you see," said O'Shaughnessy, as he said good-by. "I'm mighty anxious to get to Washington. Send me one of those pictures, will you? And a paper, too. Care of the state department. That'll get me."

And with that he swung aboard. The last thing visible was a smudge of dusty heel as his only boots vanished up the steps.

LARGE ESTATE IS LEFT TO WIFE AND DAUGHTER

NEW YORK, May 6.—Herman Frasch, of Cleveland, Ohio, for many years chief chemist of the Standard Oil company, who died in Paris May 1, divided his estate of at least $1,000,000 between his wife and daughter, Mrs. Henry Devereux Wilson, of Hewitt, L. I., leaving his son, George B. Frasch, of Sydney, Australia, only the income from a trust fund of $50,000. The will was filed for probate here yesterday. Father and son had lived apart for many years. Should a contest of the will be brought, the father provided that the contestant should not share in the estate.

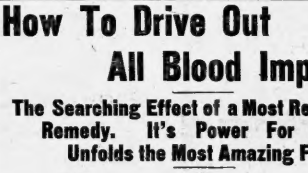
How To Drive Out All Blood Impurities

The Searching Effect of a Most Remarkable Remedy. It's Power For Health Unfolds the Most Amazing Facts



In Just Three Minutes You are on the Way to Blood Health

Countless people who suffered with some form of blood trouble have marveled at their recovery after using S. S. S.

This famous blood purifier, known wherever civilization has set its foot, has an action in the blood that makes it truly a wonder and a safeguard in this day of dangerous drugs. To begin with S. S. S. is purely vegetable, yet it accomplishes all that has been claimed for mercury, iodides, arsenic and a host of other mineral and poisonous substances.

When you look at the bulk of an adult human body it is amazing to realize that in its maze of main arteries and network of capillaries there is in circulation a volume of blood equal to only three quarts.

Now, this will help us to realize how quickly any weak and effete blood will purify the blood supply with even a small quantity of S. S. S.

In twenty seconds a drop of blood traverses the entire system and the whole volume of blood in the body is completely its journey throughout the body in an average of three minutes. This shows the tremendous activity of S. S. S., for it is a perfectly assimilable product, becomes a part of the blood almost at once, adds nourishing food, and begins its antidotal activity just as soon as it enters the blood.

A glance at the book on the bulk of an adult human body it is amazing to realize that in its maze of main arteries and network of capillaries there is in circulation a volume of blood equal to only three quarts.

Now, this will help us to realize how quickly any weak and effete blood will purify the blood supply with even a small quantity of S. S. S.

In twenty seconds a drop of blood traverses the entire system and the whole volume of blood in the body is completed its journey throughout the body in an average of three minutes. This shows the tremendous activity of S. S. S., for it is a perfectly assimilable product, becomes a part of the blood almost at once, adds nourishing food, and begins its antidotal activity just as soon as it enters the blood.

A great deal is claimed for the capillaries but one and a half seconds but in this limited time the oxygen and nutritive matter are given to the tissues along with the purifying activity of S. S. S. and no matter how wrecked the blood has become impregnated with some form of impurity you may be sure S. S. S. will drive it out. Nor is this the act of more importance than to know that in thus ridding the blood of disease, the ingredients composing S. S. S. are themselves eliminated just as soon as they have done their duty in the cells of the tissues.

Nature put some marvelous healing elements into the products from which is extracted S. S. S. These are readily assimilated, they get right into the blood and actually bathe all these tissues with a most wonderful healing influence.

It is a well-known fact that the body strives to throw out through the skin in the form of perspiration an excess of salts and acids that accumulate in the blood. When you take a hot bath you know how the sweat stings if it drops into the eyes. This same effect goes on at various different spots on the skin and if not given assistance results in sores, boils, salt rheum, terrible itching and a general plague of the skin. Now, the action of S. S. S. is just as if you were continually perspiring only there is no visible evidence of the fact. The remedy cures the blood through the intestines and in a few seconds is hard at work. It follows the law of circulation by which, having served its purpose, it seeks an outlet and at once is caught in the myriad of little blood vessels that reach the skin pores all over the body.

A wonderful work is now going on; instead of these poisons collecting in the form of crusts and irritating, itching eczema, they dry up and new blood elements, made possible by S. S. S. form new skin and eruptions are completely banished. It is remarkable how quickly this results. Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any druggist.

Don't accept a substitute. Beware of those "just as good" impositions. And if your blood is in such condition that you would like the personal opinion of an authority, write to the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Co., 622 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Don't Suffer With Stomach Trouble

There Is a Positive Cure for You—No Matter if It Is Ordinary Indigestion or if It's Catarrh of the Stomach, Quaker Extract Will Cure You.

Thousands of people in Atlanta or vicinity will tell you how they suffered for years with stomach trouble, indigestion, kidney, bladder or weak and all run-down condition of the system; they had been taking many different kinds of medicines, constantly spending their money, but never received any material benefits until they commenced taking the Quaker Extract, and after taking that God's gift to humanity for a few days or a week, are all cured completely—not temporarily, but permanently cured. That's what you receive for your money when you buy Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm.

Here is a report of R. C. Williams, who resides in West End. He suffered for years with stomach and kidney trouble, also had rheumatism for years, has tried dozens of different treatments, but nothing seemed to reach his case until he called at Coursey & Munn's drug store. He explained how quickly and permanently the Quaker Remedies would cure. "I procured a treatment of the Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm; also got some of the Quaker Salve and Soap for my two children, two and four years of age, who have been covered with sores all over the face and body, and it seemed impossible to get anything to cure them; but they looked much better to say I haven't felt as well in ten years.

"I have no rheumatism and I eat anything I want without the slightest distress in my stomach, and the children's sores are well and their skin is as clear as ever it was; in fact, they are looking brighter and more playful than they ever were, and I want to say that the Quaker Remedies are the best medicines in the world."

The Health Teacher has told you of the great number of people who have been cured. Now, if you intend to call, do not delay any longer. Quaker Extract, $1.00, or three for $2.50. Oil of Balm 25c, or five for $1.00. At Coursey & Munn's drug store, 29 Marietta street. We prepay all express charges of $3.00 or over.—(Advt.)

Only a single rate of postage will be charged and this will be collected when the letter is delivered.

A SURE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

Stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp—At Once.

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is by dissolving it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need) apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you value your hair, you should get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair so quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dully, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everybody notices it.—(Advt.)

Thousands of Former Sufferers Now Happy Through Taking Dodson's Liver Tone Instead of Calomel.

Many thousands of people have found that constipation can now be safely and easily overcome, in a perfectly pleasant manner, by taking Dodson's Liver Tone in the place of calomel, which is really dangerous to so large a proportion of sufferers.

Dodson's Liver Tone is made to take the place of calomel and has been from the first bottle put on the market. It has none of the disagreeable features and after-effects of calomel, which is in fact a form of mercury, a mineral and a poison.

Your druggist positively guarantees to refund purchase price ($0c.) of Dodson's Liver Tone in case you are not entirely satisfied, and will recommend this remedy as a strictly vegetable liquid, containing nothing harmful.

Aside from the perfect safety, Dodson's Liver Tone not only leaves no bad effects, but works easily and naturally, so that you hardly know and without interfering at all with your regular habits, diet or occupation. It is very simple to profit by experience of others and gain relief from constipation and sluggish liver now.—(Advt.)

MANY STORES TO CLOSE DAY OF SHRINERS' PARADE

Beaumont Davison Starts Movement for Closing on Whitehall and Peachtree

As a result of a movement begun by Beaumont Davison, of Davison-Paxon-Stokes company, the big retail stores on Whitehall street will be closed during the Shriners' parade next Tuesday morning. It is probable, too, that the Peachtree street stores will also close their doors.

Mr. Davison took up the matter Wednesday morning and in less than thirty minutes heads of the big retail stores on Whitehall signed an agreement not to open their stores on the day of the parade until 1 o'clock. At noon Tuesday, Mr. Davison had not been in touch with the Peachtree merchants, but it is understood that they will probably follow the example set them by their Whitehall street neighbors.

In speaking of the matter, Mr. Davison pointed out that the parade is scheduled to form at 7:30 o'clock and will move promptly at 8:30. This, Mr. Davison points out, will preclude the possibility of the stores' doing any business before the parade begins, and the parade itself will be sufficient, he feels certain, to suspend business while in progress. The schools of the city, he points out, will be closed in honor of the occasion and he feels that consideration of the visiting Shriners as well as the employes in the various stores warrants their being closed until after the parade has been concluded. It is expected that the parade will occupy upwards of five hours, hence the closing until 1 o'clock.

Every person approached on the subject gave the movement his hearty approval and expressed his pleasure at co-operating in the movement.

Besides Davison-Paxon-Stokes company, the firms which have agreed to close are:

J. P. Allen & Co., Keely company, J. M. High company, Chamberlin-Johnson-DuRose company, M. Rich & Bros. company, Eugene V. Haynes, Maier & Berkele, Fred S. Sewart, George Muse Clothing company, J. Eiseman & Sons' company, Eiseman Bros., Carlton Shoe and Clothing company; J. Regenstein company, Byck Bros. company and Davis & Freeman.

THEATERS

(Criticisms of initial performances at the local theaters are written by members of The Journal staff. All other matter appearing in this column is furnished by the theater managements.)

The Forsyth's big bill of features has got every one headed towards the Forsyth theater twice daily. It is undoubtedly a great bill, and perhaps is the best offering seen in that house this season. The advance sale started with a rush immediately after the matinee on Monday, when that tremendous throng got out on the streets and told their friends just what a big show it was.

The headliner, Jesse Lasky's "The Trained Nurses" wins. Clark and Bergman are featured ,and those awfully pretty trained nurses frolicking out on the roof of a sanitarium in New York make the audience almost wish they were sick, that is the male portion, in order to be waited upon by such attractive femininity. The stage setting is elaborate, and the costuming very, very pretty, especially the last number, the wedding.

This cat, however, is just one part of the show—there is Milt Collins, who just makes you feel, well like hurraahing all through his number. He tells you all about cheerinap babies, the Mexicans, Roosevelt, and most anything else he happens to think of.

The Five Musical Normans, three extremely pretty young ladies, and two young gentlemen, make up the best musical act ever heard here. Miss Kathryn Gorman is one of the foremost cornetists in the country.

Jimmie Lucas is a comedian of the type that makes you feel jolly whether you want to or not, the Three Renanos, the closing feature, show their true worth and value by holding the audience in their seats until the very last minute, and two other good acts complete this sure enough really good entertainment.

Next week, Shriners' bill at the Forsyth will be headed by Nax Willa.

It isn't often that a manager of a theatrical company forgets counting the coin long enough to appear behind the footlights, but William Waide Scott, who handles the business end of the Lucille LaVerne company at the Lyric, had to play a double role this week. "The Heir to the Hoorah" calls for a big company, besides a "borrowed baby," and Mr. Scott was yanked in to fill the cast. And of course, being the goat, they gave him the villain's role. He received a hearty round of hisses from the gallery, and hisses to a villain mean applause, so Mr. Scott thinks he "got by."

"The Heir to the Hoorah" is giving several members of the company at the Lyric a new opportunity and the several pretty women in the organization appear to unusually good advantage.

The tabloid musical comedy, "Oh, Look Who's Here," has proved a good attraction for the Grand the past two days and the final performances will be given tonight at 7:30 and 9 o'clock. Tomorrow, junior Keith vaudeville returns with what the management promises is the best show presented this far. The bill of five acts is almost entirely of a comedy nature and the result should prove a big laughing show.

WANTS OFFICE BUILDINGS LIGHTED FOR SHRINERS

Mayor Asks Owners of Downtown Structures to Illuminate for Week

Mayor Woodward has called on the owners of office buildings, stores, etc., in the down town sections of Atlanta to keep all their lights burning during the nights when the Shriners are here next week.

"Our greatest pride are our office buildings," said the mayor. "The Shriners will see them in the daytime, of course, but their attention ought to be attracted to the buildings at night as well as in the day, and the best way to do this is by burning all the lights. I can imagine no finer sight than for every room in every office building, hotel, store and other structures in the downtown section to be lighted up.

"I have no formal statement on the subject, but I would be glad if the newspapers would simply make the suggestion, for me, to the owners of the buildings. I am confident they will be glad to take it up, if not already planning something of the kind.

"Let's have all our lights burning every night while the Shriners are here, until midnight at least."

Appointment of Harding On First Reserve Board Came as Birthday Gift

W. P. G. HARDING

Birmingham Man, Who May Be Named Head of Board, Has Had Notable Career in Commercial World

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 6.—News of the greatest of his life came to W. P. G. Harding on his fiftieth birthday, when the press dispatches told him definitely he had been named by President Wilson on the first federal reserve board. However, Mr. Harding had forgotten all about it, being his birthday until a telegram from his brother recalled the fact to him.

Mr. Harding was born in Greene county, Ala., May 5, 1864, and was educated at the University of Alabama, taking his bachelor's degree in 1889 and his master's degree in 1891. He took a business course at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and was for a while bookkeeper for J. H. Fitts & Co., of Tuscaloosa.

He came to Birmingham in 1886 and worked in the office of Robert Jemison, Sr., broker. In 1895, he went with the Berney National bank, as assistant cashier, and was made cashier in 1894. He became vice president of the First National bank in 1896 and became president in 1902. He has held that position from then until now.

He has long been considered the leading banker in Birmingham and one of the leaders in the south. He has been deeply interested in civic affairs and was president of the Birmingham chamber of commerce last year. He first attracted attention of the present administration when at the Atlanta hearing this winter, he presented the argument for a regional reserve bank for Birmingham before the temporary organization committee. He was asked by Secretary McAdoo at that time to prepare full data on a division of the country, in line with the plan he had presented orally, giving capitalization, deposits, etc., of all regional banks throughout the country under that plan.

He has sacrifices a considerable amount in salary to take the place on the board. Besides being president and a large stockholder in the First National bank, Mr. Harding has other financial interests. He was at the head of a huge consolidation of practically all the coal mining interests in Alabama, outside of the properties of the United States Steel corporation, that was planned this winter.

Attorney General McReynolds practically ended all possibilities of this huge merger being perfected under the Sherman law, but it was considered a stroke of financial genius to have pacified the warring elements enough to have made the merger practicable from a commercial viewpoint.

Atlanta Boy, Sailor At Vera Cruz, Eager For Copy of Journal

Officer E. G. Phillips, stationed at police headquarters in Atlanta, has received a letter from his son, stationed at police headquarters in Vera Cruz, Mexico, Arthur J. Phillips, one of Uncle Sam's bluejackets who was among the first to land on Mexican soil when the sailors took the town.

Young Phillips is a seaman on the United States battleship Utah. He was wounded in the first engagement between the Mexicans and the bluejackets, but is rapidly recovering.

"I was among the first to land," he writes his father, "and I was among the first that the Mexican snipers got. It was just a flesh wound in the right side, so I kept right on fighting until we captured the town. About three hours later they bandaged me up. I'm all right now, so don't be worried by newspaper reports. I'm stationed at Vera Cruz police station. It's very different from Atlanta's."

And he adds this postscript: "For goodness' sake send me an Atlanta Journal so I can keep up with the home news."

Why the Grady Bonds Failed.

The failure of the Grady hospital bond issue in Tuesday's election is deeply regrettable because, in the first place, improvements that are essential to the city's welfare will be delayed and because, furthermore, the expressed will of the great majority of the voters has been nullified.

Of the eight thousand, eight hundred and thirty-five citizens who voted, seven thousand, eight hundred and nine cast their ballots for the bonds. Only one thousand and twenty-six were against the bonds. The judgment of those interested enough in the community's affairs to go to the polls was overwhelmingly in favor of enlarging Grady hospital and of making it adequate to Atlanta's needs. But their will has been frustrated and the cause of progress retarded by the unjust provision which requires for the indorsement of a bond issue a majority of two-thirds of the registered voters.

Tuesday's bond election was determined not by those who voted but by those who did not vote, not by the representative element of citizens and taxpayers but by those who indifferently or of necessity staid away from the polls. Votes that were not cast counted against the bonds—the votes of dead men, of men who had moved from the city and of men who had no interest in the issue at stake. That is not fair; it is not Democratic; it is contrary to all the principles of free, progressive government.

This antiquated provision should be changed so that a two-thirds majority of those voting and a simple majority of those registered will be sufficient to carry a bond issue. The Journal fully recognizes the importance of duly safeguarding the power to issue bonds, in order that it may not be lightly or extravagantly employed, but we also recognize the folly and injustice of making a bond issue that is vitally needed dependent on those who do not vote and who do not represent the people's wishes and interests.

Under the plan we have suggested the Grady bonds would easily have carried. The total registration for Tuesday's election was fourteen thousand, six hundred and sixty-two. The seven thousand, eight hundred and nine votes cast for the bonds was a majority of the registration and an overwhelming majority of the votes polled. This plan would afford all necessary restrictions against extravagant use of the bonding power and at the same time it would remove the grave obstacles that now stand in the way of development and progress.

Atlanta's urgent need of a larger and better Grady hospital remains. It must be met, and it will be met. We are disappointed but in no wise discouraged over the outcome of Tuesday's bond election. The fact that only a thousand-odd votes were cast against the bonds while nearly nine thousand were cast for them, shows where the people stand on this supremely important question. The public's will shall prevail, but it is necessary that the technical encumbrances which now weigh it down be removed.

Already it begins to look like a Greater Shriners' Atlanta.

The Last Hours of Huerta.

The persistent rumor of Huerta's preparation for flight is in keeping with his desperate condition. Whatever hope the dictator may have had of playing out his game with any measure of safety or success has vanished. For months his treasury has been depleted, and his troops have lost every battle with the Constitutionalists. The American seizure of Vera Cruz has deprived him of the country's most important port and has reduced still further his meager revenues; it has also cut off his supply of military stores, and has left him more vulnerable than ever to the attack of the revolutionists.

Reports indicate that in Mexico City itself, popular sentiment against Huerta is becoming pronounced, if not dangerous. The Mexicans are finding out at last how egregiously he has deceived them, how he has reported famous victories against Villa when in fact his armies were being beaten and his strongholds in northern and central Mexico falling rapidly into the enemy's grasp. They are discovering that instead of a strong man, capable of restoring peace and mending the country's broken fortunes, Huerta is in reality a vain, stubborn weakling. With more than half of Mexico wrested from even his nominal control, with Vera Cruz held by American forces, and Tampico, the second port of importance bottled up by the Constitutionalists, he now faces a gathering storm of popular resentment at his very doorway.

No wonder that rumors of his purposed flight are increasing and are growing more clearly defined. It is possible that for a while Huerta deceived himself as he deceived his followers. But he is now face to face with grim facts. It is reported, indeed, that he is in hourly fear of just such a coup as that by which he himself treacherously overthrew Madero. There is yet time for him to choose between safety abroad and a probably tragic end at home, and if it be true, as the story goes, that he has some three million dollars laid by in Paris, his common sense may lead him to the former course.

Huerta's departure would simplify the Mexican situation so far as the United States is concerned. Many problems would remain but we could deal with them more directly and more easily than with the usurper. His elimination has been the main, practical end of our Government's policy. The moment he goes our diplomacy and our measures of force will have attained their first object. Until he is gone, the problem will continue vexing.

Villa and Carranza seem to be more successful as fighters than as mediators.

Wireless in War.

It is estimated that in the last few years more than four thousand lives have been saved through wireless telegraphy. Wrecks like that of the Republic and the Volturno, which would formerly have proved fatal to everyone abroad, have been robbed of many terrors, and all sea travel has been made far safer. Wireless storm warnings and weather forecasts, covering conditions a hundred miles from shore, are issued daily, so that vessels are not only aided in distress but are also spared many dangers they cannot foresee.

This wonderful invention is yet, however, in the infancy of its service. Its present achievements merely indicate the wider uses it will attain. Recent experiments show that it can be made to start and guide a boat miles from land, a fact which some students declare marks the beginning of a revolution in naval warfare. John Hays Hammond, Jr., who graduated from a Massachusetts school of technology a few years ago, has devised a craft which he can steer as precisely as he pleases from a station ashore.

"This wireless boat," says a writer in the Chicago Record-Herald, "runs by the powers of her own engines, but is directed by the man on the distant cliff. Here on a wooded height overlooking the harbor, stand two enormous masts three hundred and sixty feet high, connected with antennae, and close by is the look-out station of the operator, who conducts the movements of the boat. Mr. Hammond's experiments have had the interested support of United States government officials. Early in his work he enlisted the aid of General Weaver, chief of the coast artillery, accompanied by Colonel R. P. Davis, an expert in these matters. They stood on the lookout tower and watched Mr. Hammond cause his maniess boat to dart about the harbor under perfect control. They watched it circle about and turn instantly at the touch of a key; saw it head directly for a certain mark and hit it with a precision that must have meant certain destruction had the mark been an enemy's battleship, and the boat a torpedo loaded with dynamite."

The value of wireless telegraphy in navy maneuvers is obvious; our Government was thus able to follow every detail in the recent movement of the Atlantic fleet to Mexican waters. Hourly reports and orders could be issued; emergencies could be anticipated and any necessary change in plans directed. No less interesting is the use of wireless by the army. The "wireless pack," we are told, has been introduced among the United States troops, and is largely taking the place of old time methods of signalling. An entire outfit can be borne by two mules and can be put in working order in less than a minute. It is effective over a radius of eighty miles.

Wireless telegraphy will render its most substantial service in matters of commerce and transportation, but its part in the affairs of war will be distinctly important.

It's all over now but paying the campaign expenses.

The First Fire.

A favorite field of speculation among ancient philosophers was man's discovery and earliest use of fire. "Lucretius," says the Hardwood Record, of Chicago, "supposed that the first fire was procured from hot ores, but he neglected to explain what heated the ores. Others thought that trees rubbing together started the first fire; others traced the origin to rolling stones; still others to sparks struck from horses' feet. But not one suggestion of lightning occurs anywhere in the literature of ancient times, unless the lines of an old Greek poet may be so interpreted when he wrote, "With sacrilegious hands Prometheus stole celestial fire and bore it down from heaven."

That lightning kindled the first flame and thus opened the way for those arts and industries on which civilization depends, appears broadly probable in view of the fact that more than half the forest fires in the United States last year were set by lightning. According to the government's report, all the forest fires started by locomotives and camping parties did not equal the number caused by electric storms. During 1913 fires of this nature occurred in the forests of twenty-two States, and in California a single storm started a series of conflagrations that extended over seven hundred and fifty miles.

The Hardwood Journal interestingly comments that:

"All the precautions which it is possible for man to take cannot greatly lessen the danger of forests being set afire by lightning; but the consequent damage may be greatly decreased by readiness to fight. The government's forest service has its forces organized, its tools and apparatus at strategic points, trails built and telephone lines strung, so that when a fire begins the fighters converge at the point of danger and usually win in a short time. The effectiveness of the system is shown by the fact that half of the fires are extinguished before they burn over a quarter of an acre, and half of the remainder before they spread over ten acres."

A STUDY IN PLAGIARISM

By Savoyard

WASHINGTON, April 22.—A long time ago there was a popular ditty sung by the thoughtless youth of both sexes of all cities, towns, villages and hamlets of our country, the refrain of which was "Shoo, Fly, Don't Bodder Me!" It took like wildfire and had a run like "Down Went McGinty," "Johnnie Jones and His Sister Sue," "A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," and the others that appeared subsequently, and all of which had more merit in verse and more melody in tune.

Well—it was about 1876—this ditty was in its bloom of popularity, and "Shoo, Fly," was heard every time you turned round. In those days politics was at fever heat in congress, and Ben Butler was the commanding figure on the Republican side of the national house of representatives.

Politically, he was the most odious and, personally, the most execrable individual in public life, and the Republicans had almost as little use for him as the Democrats, but allowed him to fetch and carry for them at a time when much dirty work had to be done to keep the bloody shirt at the masthead. At that time most everybody in congress or out of congress who had any pretensions to respectability was agreed with what John Mitchell, the Irish patriot, said of him at the close of an invective that was a classic, "Behold if I should characterize everything that is pusillanimous in war, inhuman in peace, foriddan in morals and corrupt in politics, I would call it Butlerism."

As I said, this old devil was universally discredited by respectable folk, but as a debater in congress Ben Butler never met his match. Even Blaine himself carried great scars dealt by the old monster. "Sunset" Cox was a Democratic representative from New York. He was a man of diminutive physique, but of brilliant, incisive and powerful mind, cultivated by vast and omniverous reading. He was a wit and a poet, a scholar and a philosopher. He one day attempted to assail old Butler from a new quarter. Inveighing whether from Democrat or Republican, had no more effect on the old scamp than a gentle sprinkle from a May cloud on a veteran old gander's back, and so Cox undertook to defend him, and in a remarkable speech, that should have lived, pronounced eulogy on the old reprobate a little after the order of Henry Fieldings chapter on Jonathan Wild, though not precisely like it.

The house was in a bitter when Cox sat down and old Butler rose. After half a dosen incisive sentences, discussing the question before the committee—and in a running debate he could beat 'em—he turned to the Democratic side, and in that terrible voice, half roar, half bellow, sent this shaft. "As to the gentleman from New York who has so kindly defended me from undeserved enmities and vindicated me from baseless slanders, all I have to answer is in the ditty heard from every gamin on the street, 'Shoo, fly, don't bodder me!'"

The effect was electrical the two actors being who and what they were. The house and the galleries were convulsed and shouts of laughter went up. Cox, for the first time of his life—the second was when he got that unprintable shaft from the Quaker, Ben Butterworth's, wit—was in a rage. As soon as he could be heard he exclaimed, "The rhinocerosian hide of the member from Massachusetts is impervious to all sense of duty, of decency, of honor, of shame!"

Well, a year or two later these two again clashed, and old Butler was imprudent enough to again hurl his "shoo fly" at his adversary, but now the house jeered the old reprobate and charged him with lack of versatility; they laughed at him, and Cox was triumphant. Cox said but in his entire public life old Butler never winced but twice—once, this occasion when he served up a warmed-over dish of repartee, and the other, one day when he found himself in the supreme court with old Jeremy Black on the other side, who shook him as a terrier does a rat.

In my not very extensive yet somewhat varied reading I have perused some few books relating to the politics, the letters and the art of that epoch of English history that may be said to have been encompassed between the close of Pope's career and the opening of the regime of which Thackeray was the greatest exemplar, and I read this: Arthur Murphy, a successful dramatist, the companion and biographer of the great, with its adobe houses, its muddy streets, its rotten schools and its poor, ragged women and children, it makes me mad. Our women and children have as good a right to the protection as the women and children of the United States have; and it's the fault of the Mexican men that they haven't got them."

So Sancho Villa once replied to an American who asked him why he was on the war path.

In other words, his insurgency rests upon precisely the same basis of motive as the politer progressive movement in the United States, differing only in circumstances.

The rebel chief expresses a feeling which is the chief mainspring of human progress.

Most of the important activities of the world today are directly due to a desire to distribute more fairly the rewards of industry and the openings of opportunity.

The reason why the fate of England swings in the balance isn't because nature in England has suddenly gone bankrupt, but because man's arbitrary adjustment of nature's bleadings has dispossessed millions to make a few thousands supreme.

Villa is no more a revolutionist than Lloyd-George—the latter would fight as Villa fights, if Lloyd-George were his only possible way of getting decks for a new deal. You, too, would go for gore if, deprived of the ballot, the bullet seemed the only weapon of hope. The man who wouldn't is unfit to encumber the earth.

Don't let the shock of Villa's crudities and much exaggerated cruelties close your mind to the possibility—may we believe certainty—that underneath them is a human soul flaming with righteous wrath at acute injustice. A Mexican man out to do, as best he may, a man's job in behalf of the weak, the poor, the wronged.

And don't forget, you comfortable American, that Washington was a "rebel," Lincoln a "buffoon" and Grant a "drunkard," "wallowing in blood"—in the judgment of armchair critics, who saw only on the surface, and not beneath it.

The pathway of human advance isn't all smooth macadam. Somebody has to fell the trees, grub out the roots and break stone.

GEN. WOOD WILL WATCH THE MEXICAN BORDER

BY HERBERT CORBY.

WASHINGTON.—It's a queer thing, this army game. Now and then one hears an army officer crying earnestly for rotation in office. And then the officer gets the rotation and cries louder than ever. Then in years ago one heard a good deal of this sort:

"It's a shame that Leonard Wood has been made chief of staff. Why, he's nothing but a doctor."

And now Wood is chief of staff, but has been gazetted in command of the army on the Mexican border. And the very same people who ones sobbed at the thought of a mere pill roller bossing a beautifully ornamented military force now deprecate the mistake that has been made.

"You'll notice," they say, "that they're still keeping Wood in Washington—even if he wasn't good enough for chief of staff."

Most of which, on both sides, is nonsense. Wood became major general and chief of staff because he was pre-eminently the best man in the army. Most of the army will admit that now. The administration prefers another man as chief of staff—or wants Wood on the border—and the change is effected. Wherever he may be, Wood will be doing a day's work. And in a service that is crammed with picturesque figures, Wood stands out like a city hall in a park.

To begin with, he never was a mere pill-roller, as the men who "want to be his detractors" before they got better acquainted with him used to say. The formula of his make-up has run something after this fashion: Fighting, 20 per cent; politics, 20 per cent; society man, 9 per cent; medical man, a trace.

He is six feet something tall, with the shoulders of a piano mover and the waist of a tango dancer. He has the thick, leathlike nose of the man of force, and a pair of odd knobs over the eyebrows, which old-fashioned phrenologists used to say were indications of great powers of observation. Also, he was born with the capacity for getting tired. His father was a New Egland country doctor, who returned home invalidated from the civil war. Naturally, that made his son want to be a soldier. He passed an examination for military surgeon brilliantly in 1885, and then jumped at a chance to go west as a contract surgeon with the army at $100 a month. He joined General Lawton's command in that soldier man's first getting ready to run down Geronimo and his Apaches.

"What the hell do you want out here?" Lawton asked.

"I hope to be transferred to the line," said Wood. "I want to be a fighting man."

During that campaign Wood actually "walked down" Apache warriors through their own hills. One day he tramped twenty-five miles to a wounded soldier, rode seventy-three miles with a message, and then marched thirty-four miles with the troops.

"That night," said Lawton, "he wanted to play pinochle."

Lawton paid him the highest compliment in his power for his services in that first campaign. For ten years Wood stayed out there, chasing bad Indians and physicking soldiers. He made a good reputation as a doctor, but he also became known as a thoroughly good fellow and a good soldier. He was transferred to the White House as the attending surgeon under President McKinley, and there became very chummy with Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy. Roosevelt used to like to take good fellows out on long, ardent tramps, and walk them into a state of physical decay.

Everyone thought that funny except the decayed one. When he took Wood out, that Apache-walking thoroughbred came in on the chin strap, with the assistant secretary flagging himself desperately in the effort to keep up. They hoved to, panting, and argued loudly together. So that when the Spanish war broke out and Roosevelt determined to get into it he made Wood a surgeon in that regiment.

"You can have a colonel's commission," said Secretary Alger to him.

"Give it to Wood," said Roosevelt. "He knows how to organize and work a regiment. I don't."

Wood's service in Cuba will be remembered by most people. He cleaned the yellow fever out and reorganized the municipal government of Havana and ultimately became governor general of Cuba. He made enemies—lots of them. He has retained a great many of them. But such an impartial judge of delivering the goods as Elihu Root declared as regretting that he could not have such an administrator to succeed him in Egypt. Business men appreciated Wood, too. He had an offer of $40,000 a year cash, with prospects of more, if he would leave the service. Instead, he went to Manila, and there first licked the hostiles and then pacified them. The men of the army who had been fighting out in the Philippine swamps at first were sullen.

"He's a blue mass specialist," they called him. "A White House pet. What does he know about war?"

They found out. Wood got early rather than any of them, marched farther, lived on less, and did it more cheerfully. He was uniformly successful, because he prepared himself for his tasks. One visitor to his office at Manila observed that three walls of the room were covered with books of military and colonial subjects relating to his new job. Wood said he had gathered them since he arrived.

"When do you expect to find time to read them?"

"I've read every line in them," said Wood. "Some of them I have read over and over. They have helped me a lot."

So that when Wood was made chief of the fighting force the army had learned to respect him. Not all of the army love him even yet. He does not put his orders to a vote. He just gives orders, and expects them to be obeyed. He is admittedly arbitrary, autocratic, and assertive. Nor will the fact that two presidents jumped him over the heads of many generals when he was promoted ever be forgiven. But the very men who dislike him admit his complete efficiency. His career has been a meteoric one, but little of his success has been due to luck. Most of it can be attributed to natural qualifications and the friends he has made.

Soldiering for the Common Good

"When I look across the Rio Grande into El Paso, with its fine buildings, its clean houses, its clean, well-clothed gentle children and women, and then look at Juarez, with its adobe houses, its muddy streets, its rotten schools and its poor, ragged women and children, it makes me mad. Our women and children have as good a right to the protection as the women and children of the United States have; and it's the fault of the Mexican men that they haven't got them."

So Sancho Villa once replied to an American who asked him why he was on the war path.

In other words, his insurgency rests upon precisely the same basis of motive as the politer progressive movement in the United States, differing only in circumstances.

The rebel chief expresses a feeling which is the chief mainspring of human progress.

Most of the important activities of the world today are directly due to a desire to distribute more fairly the rewards of industry and the openings of opportunity.

The reason why the fate of England swings in the balance isn't because nature in England has suddenly gone bankrupt, but because man's arbitrary adjustment of nature's bleadings has dispossessed millions to make a few thousands supreme.

Villa is no more a revolutionist than Lloyd-George—the latter would fight as Villa fights, if Lloyd-George were his only possible way of getting decks for a new deal. You, too, would go for gore if, deprived of the ballot, the bullet seemed the only weapon of hope. The man who wouldn't is unfit to encumber the earth.

Don't let the shock of Villa's crudities and much exaggerated cruelties close your mind to the possibility—may we believe certainty—that underneath them is a human soul flaming with righteous wrath at acute injustice. A Mexican man out to do, as best he may, a man's job in behalf of the weak, the poor, the wronged.

And don't forget, you comfortable American, that Washington was a "rebel," Lincoln a "buffoon" and Grant a "drunkard," "wallowing in blood"—in the judgment of armchair critics, who saw only on the surface, and not beneath it.

The pathway of human advance isn't all smooth macadam. Somebody has to fell the trees, grub out the roots and break stone.

A Change of Heart

There was a little bank
And it said "This law is rank
And will never, never do,
Oh, no, no, no!
It is drastic, socialistic;
Makes the outlook pessimistic,
And the country to the dogs
Will go, go, go."

But the president was frank,
And he said that "he would thank
The banker man to make another
Guess, guess, guess."
Then the banker took a tumble,
Less important, much more humble,
And then he came up smiling
And said, "Yes, yes, yes."

Many middle-aged Americans think of Lillian Nordica as the singer who taught them that vocal music is something more than gymnastics, more than beauty of tone, more than graceful or brilliant coloratura. She taught them that grand opera roles are made to be interpreted as well as sung. Others than she fulfilled this function for other audiences, but she came to the American people at a time when a great many of them were just beginning to appreciate Wagner and she was the instrument through which they learned the distinction between the opera and the opera-drama. Thus she opened to them an entirely new field in the realm of music. They and all who have heard her sing will hope that she is not so ill as the news from Java would indicate and that she may get entirely well again.—Baltimore Sun.

FUTURE OF OUR NAVY

By Frederic J. Haskin

It is by no means certain that all the emergencies to be encountered by our navy in the future can be met with as little difficulty as the recent crisis at Vera Cruz.

There is wild competition today among the great powers to be best prepared for war. They are straining every nerve to outdo one another, especially in endeavors to construct large and formidable navies; and in the rush to be prepared they are continually demanding of their peoples larger and larger contributions of men and money.

With its rivals arming as though they lived in constant dread that war is about to flame throughout the world, the naval authorities of the United States are unremittently at work to win back and maintain our place as second among naval powers. While Great Britain, Germany and Japan are building dreadnaughts in wild competition, this country cannot afford to be idle.

Forty-eight first-line battleships ready for action by 1920 is the substance of the policy which the general board of the navy has mapped out for its guidance. This would mean a rate of construction of four or more dreadnaughts a year, or annual appropriations for the navy of not less than $60,000,000 or more than $65,000,000. At the same time, provision would have to be made for a proportional increase in the number of auxiliary vessels and in the force of enlisted men. The general board has estimated that for every eight battleships there should be thirty-two destroyers, sixteen submarines, one ammunition ship, two destroyer tenders, four fuel ships, one hospital ship, one repair ship, two submarine tenders, three supply ship and one transport. If this program were carried out, there would be nearly 200 warcraft upon the active list of the navy by 1920, and our fleet would be strong enough to take its part in whatever international entanglements that might arise.

In order that the greater navy may be created and maintained at a minimum of expense to the people, a number of projects have been considered for the development of the navy's organization ashore. One of the most costly materials that is purchased in large quantities by the government for the fighting force afloat is the specially treated armor plate for the protection of its battleships. Other expensive supplies are manufactured by the government factories in the prices paid for these three items would decrease the navy bills by many millions of dollars.

According to the secretary of the navy, only three corporations in this country are able to manufacture the grade of armor plate which enters into the construction of the battleship. These concerns do not compete with one another for government contracts, but, navy officials testify, the last one to submit the contract divides the work with the others. They charge the government the topmost prices for its armor, and instances are not wanting where they have sold armor plate abroad at much lower quotations than ever have been made to the navy department.

It has, therefore, been recommended to congress by the secretary that the navy be authorized to establish and operate its own plant for the production of armor plate. Experts have estimated that the department could manufacture its armor plate at $187 a ton. The private concerns are charging from $464 to $440 a ton from the government for the same quality plate. It takes about 3,900 tons of steel plate to clothe the modern dreadnaught against the deadly shells which may be hurled against it. Hence, government foundry turning out armor at a cost of $187 a ton would save to the people the sum of $986,000 in the construction of every battleship. In other words, enough would be saved to the government in every ten dreadnaughts to construct an extra up-to-the-minute fighting machine. With a proportionate saving upon all other armor, battleship after battleship upon the twentieth century battleship, this saving would mount hundreds of thousands of dollars more. Our latest battleship, known as No. 38, requires 8,000 tons of armor in all.

The manufacture of its own supplies of armor would be no innovation in the navy's works. It is now a large manufacturing establishment. Among the naval gun factory at Washington, which is one of the largest gun-making establishments in the world. Here the fourteen-inch giants of destruction are made, the largest gun built, which flash 1,400 pounds of steel through the air with an initial velocity of more than half a mile a second. A recent investigation disclosed the fact that the navy is able to build these guns at lesser costs than any of its rivals. The navy builds the fourteen-inch gun for something less than $60,000. The army has contracted to make ten of these guns for the navy at a cost of $61,000 each, while private steel corporations have submitted bids of $79,000 apiece for them. The naval gun factory saves the government $19,000 on the manufacture of every fourteen-inch gun, in comparison with prices charged by private concerns.

The navy also makes part of its own powder. This it produces at 18 cents a pound, while it pays 55 cents a pound to the powder trust, and formerly paid as high as 70 to 80 cents a pound. Where the navy manufactures, similar savings are made in the production of gun forgings, armor plate, projectiles and munitions. It is, therefore, suggested by naval authorities that one of the steps to be taken toward the creation and maintenance of a new, formidable navy at a minimum of expenditure is the development of adequate factories for the fabrication of materials and supplies which enter into the construction of the ships and the armament of them, while the reason for the manufacture of its own ammunition is that it would be able to make the secrecy of explosives developed by its use absolute against all outsiders. Under present conditions, there is no sufficient guarantee that such secrets are secure against investigations of other nations.

Another important project which is being urged by the department for the good of the future navy is the acquirement of oil lands. With only a part of our fleet equipped to burn oil, the navy consumes about 50,000,000 gallons a year. It is predicted that this amount soon will be increased to more than 125,000,000 gallons a year in times of peace.

Of course, in time of war this consumption would be much heavier, probably three times as heavy. The cost of this fuel is steadily advancing. It has mounted from 1 1-4 cents per gallon, in 1911, to 3.31 cents in 1914. In other words, in three years the price has doubled.

There are marked advantages in the use of oil as fuel. In the first place, most experts of the world agree that a far better fighting ship can be built, using oil instead of coal. Moreover, the oil-burning ships are more reliable, easier to supply with fuel, and their boilers can be crowded more closely together, saving weight and space. Further, an enormous amount of human effort required for firing and trimming the coal-burning ships would be entirely eliminated. Altogether, the advantages of oil as battleship fuel are so great that they cannot well be disregarded by the nations planning great navies for the future.

As far as the amount of home supply of oil is concerned, the United States has an important advantage over the other great naval powers. This country produces two-thirds of the world's oil, and its stores of this valuable fluid are almost inexhaustible. The other powers have perplexing oil problems to solve. Great Britain is making frantic efforts to establish a reliable source of oil supply from which she could not be cut off in time of war. The same problem confronts the German navy.

THURSDAY IS TAG DAY FOR SHELTERING ARMS

Members of Society Expect Generous Donations for Benefit of Little Folk

Thursday will be Tag day, the day when all good Atlantians will have opportunity to give of their plenty that the children of the day nurseries may benefit by their generosity.

The Sheltering Arms society, of which Mrs. W. S. Elkin is president, is directing the Tag day plans, and the members of the society expect to pin a tag on thousands of men and women Thursday. Last year the donations ranged from 1 cent to $1.00, and this year the society hopes to do even better than it did last year.

When one considers that for 50 cents one may ensure the maintenance of one child in the nursery for one week, the donation seems small enough. During that week the child receives two meals a day, is given medical attention if necessary and is kept clean and happy.

For 25 cents one child can be kept in the nursery kindergarten for a week, which means that they receive one meal a day and training.

Headquarters on Tag day will be in the Southern railroad ticket office on the viaduct. Mrs. Elkin will be there from 4 to 6 o'clock to give out tags and buckets and information.

BUCHU FINE FOR WEAK KIDNEYS

We Eat Too Many Sweets, Which Clogs Kidneys, Then Back Hurts and Diabetes Catches You

Candy, sugar and sweets, eaten to excess have a bad effect on the kidneys and bladder, says a well known authority. The kidneys get clogged and sluggish and hurt. You experience scalding, dribbling, straining or too frequent passage of urine; forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; stitches and pains in the back; bone pains; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps, unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and despondency, diabetes, Bright's disease. The moment you have any of the above symptoms or rheumatic twinges, get from any reliable druggist a good sized bottle of Stuart's Buchu and Juniper. Take a tablespoonful after meals. Drink plenty of fresh water and abstain from eating too much sugar, sweets or highly seasoned foods. Your kidneys and bladder will then act fine and natural. Stuart's Buchu and Juniper has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer hurts you to pass water. It is old folks' recipe for weak kidneys and bladder and strengthens these organs and cures diabetes.

Be sure you get Stuart's Buchu and Juniper as Stuart's is properly compounded for kidney and bladder troubles.—(Advt.)

WEDNESDAY CLOSING IS INDORSED BY MINISTERS

Evangelical Assn. and Others in Favor of Mid-Week Holiday

The Wednesday closing plan of the retail stores, was indorsed Monday by the Evangelical ministers' association, at its regular meeting.

The plan has now been indorsed by a half dozen prominent civic organizations. More indorsements are expected in the next week or so.

It permits workers who receive their pay on Saturday to do their Sunday shopping on Saturday afternoon.

The plan is expected to go into effect throughout the city on June 10.

Cards soliciting the co-operation of customers, are being distributed by employes of the retail grocers. They read:

"We, the retail Grocery and Market clerks, solicit your co-operation toward making Wednesday half holiday general and effective."

Other placcards are being distributed by the Retail Grocers and Butchers' association, which is responsible for the Wednesday half holiday plan.

Police Locate Goods Valued at $700 In Home of Negro

Twelve blue serge suits, 122 tennis shoes, two dozen shirts, many of them silk, and other apparel valued in all at $700, supposedly stolen from the old Y. M. C. A. at Auburn avenue and Pryor streets, was found by two plain clothes men in the home of Nathan Zealy, colored, forty-four-years old, in the rear of 152 Courtland street, Tuesday night.

Zealy is a scrubber at the Piedmont hotel. The two officers investigating the loss of a valuable umbrella in the hotel, became suspicious of Zealy and searched his house, which resulted in the Y. M. C. A. find. Zealy was for several years a janitor at the old Y. M. C. A.

All of the stuf recovered from Zealy's house is being held at police barracks, and Chief of Detectives Lanford says it will be given out to persons that identify the articles as belonging to them.

---Zech. 8:5.

Every near beer saloon so-called in Atlanta is violating the law.

Yet city officials under oath to support the law, the majority of them officers in the Church, members of Council, vote to license them.

And not content with putting this stigma upon Atlanta, the capital of Georgia, Monday, this ordinance was passed:

"Be it ordained by the Mayor and General Council, that the provisions of Section 1566 of the City Code of 1910 regulating the opening and closing hours of all billiard, pool room and near beer places in the City of Atlanta shall not apply from May 11th to May 18th, 1914, and that the opening and closing hours during said period shall be six o'clock A. M. and one o'clock A. M."

Those voting for this ordinance were ALDERMEN THOMPSON, MADDOX and NUTTING, and COUNCILMEN WARDLAW, ALVERSON, KNIGHT, ASHLEY, LEE, BOYNTON, WOOD, COLCORD, DALLAS, HUMPHREY, REYNOLDS, WHITE, MASON.

Those who opposed it were ALDERMEN SEAWRIGHT, KELLEY, OWENS AND RAGSDALE, COUNCILMEN SHEPARD, HALL, SISSON, FARLINGER AND SMITH.

For this indefensible wrong to our city, the Shrine Convention is given as an excuse. This insult should not be offered to the guests of our city. Shriners, as a whole, would not knowingly permit violators of the law who fatten upon the sorrow and degradation of others to use the name of this great Order in a vain and futile attempt to prove to the world that Atlanta is a city without regard for the sacredness of law.

The Churches protest.

CHRISTIANS WHO LOVE ATLANTA AND RESPECT THE GREAT BODY OF MASONRY UPON WHICH RESTS THE SHRINE APPEAL TO OUR MAYOR AND GENERAL COUNCIL AND TO THE POLICE AUTHORITIES OF ATLANTA TO UNDO THIS WRONG BEFORE IT IS TOO LATE.

"'Of these alcohol sick of one half year, 55 had been previously punished by the courts, 22 one to ten times, 9 eleven to twenty times, 5 twenty-one to thirty times, and 1 each thirty-nine, forty-five, fifty-four and ninety-nine times. Remembering this will cause you to cease prating of beer as a temberance drink.

Collier's Weekly says of the crazy attempt upon the life of Mayor Mitchel of New York: "The would-be assassin, in telling of his actions on the day of the shooting, said "Then today I came down town about ten o'clock. I took a glass of whiskey and then a glass of beer on Park Row."

One who knows from personal investigation says: "Recently at Eckeren, near Antwerp, a band of drunkards from a tavern, raided a workman's house, dragged his wife out of bed, and clubbed the husband to death.

"These brutes do not drink hard liquor but alcohol in the form of beer. This drink is the chief stimulus to crime in the country in Belgium, as distilled drinks are in the city. There has been in the country at large a considerable diminution in the consumption of distilled liquors BUT THAT OF BEER CONSTANTLY INCREASES AND WITH IT CRIMINALITY RISES."

The Recorder's Court of the City of Atlanta contains records of men who have again and again been before him as Kraeplin describes that wearying Munich procession of beer-soaked victims.

Georgia has recognized the evil. To put an end to it she has passed laws forbidding the sale of whiskey, wine or beer, intoxicating liquors regardless of their form.

We appeal to those in public office to enforce these laws, not to deprive any man of pleasure but to put an effectual stop to this source of crime and disease, suffering and sorrow.

Atlanta stands for law, order and decency, upon which depend the happiness and safety of all.

Her people will not stand idly by and watch her good name sacrificed to the liquor trade.

Market in New York Closed 3 Points Off to 8 Points Up From Previous Close

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 6.—The cotton market opened steady, unchanged to three points higher, and sold over the first prices on higher domestic early trading. Weather advices were favorable and the crop suggested selling pressure for the next day or two, but there did not seem to be much cotton for sale here while Liverpool was at a further rise of July and there was a good demand for new crop months. The Liverpool bulletin was supposed to be unsatisfactory and July showed a discount of 180 points under July. August showed

The market was very quiet late in the morning, but continued steady and was closed to nine points net higher shortly after midday. The market was easier during the early afternoon owing to the favorable detailed weather reports and scattered showers, but the old crop months held a shade over yesterday's basis but later deliveries sold over 3 points net lower.

Throngs See Election Returns Flashed on Screen by Journal

Throngs of people who filled the Forsyth and Broad street bridges and the approaches to them watched the election returns flashed from The Journal tonight.

It was one of the largest crowds ever seen at a purely local election. The Journal alone flashed the returns.

In addition to the bulletins The Journal also issued extras during the evening which gave the results hot from the polls, and supplied the public with information by telephone. A considerable portion of the city's population knew the election results before it went to bed.

It was a typical election night crowd, noisy and enthusiastic but orderly. Each candidate had his following in the big audience that watched the bulletins which showed as the figures were flashed.

Many women were present, and long lines of automobiles on Forsyth and Broad streets filled with parties waiting for the results.

Particular interest was shown in the sheriff's race, the result of which was in doubt until the early hour. The Grady bond vote was soon known. The county commissioners' race was also exciting, due to the large number of candidates.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

It is fun to play dodge when the one who is trying to catch you is friend and it is all a game. But to play dodge when the one trying to catch you is doing it so as to have you for his dinner is quite another matter. It isn't fun then unless you are sure that you can get away, but it is very exciting. Peter Rabbit is one of the best dodgers on the Green Meadows or in the Green Forest. One of the very first things Peter learned when he was a very little fellow was how to dodge. Since then he has had to dodge so often in order to keep his skin whole that none of his neighbors can dodge like him unless it is his cousin, Jumper the Hare, and it is doubtful if Jumper can, because his legs are so much longer and he can run so much faster that he doesn't have to dodge as Peter does.

But never had Peter had greater need of knowing how to dodge than now. You see, he had been having a terrible fight with himself in the Green Forest, trying to decide whether to tell Buster Bear where Busy Bee kept her store of honey and so make Buster his friend forever, or to keep it to himself. If he told Buster would be sure to make trouble for Busy Bee, for he is very fond of honey. He wanted to tell, for he was very, very anxious to have Buster his friend, but a little voice inside, his better self, kept urging him not to tell. First he would listen to his own selfish desires and then run a little way to look for Buster Bear. Then his better self would make him stop and sit still.

So he would run a little way, then sit down; run a little further and sit down. All the time he was so busy fighting with himself that he had no eyes or ears for anything else, and so he didn't see Reddy Fox hiding behind an old stump just ahead of him. At last Peter sat down within two jumps of the old stump, and there he fought it all out with himself, and he decided that he wouldn't tell Buster Bear. Yes, sir, Peter decided not to do such a mean thing as to make trouble for Busy Bee, not even to win Buster Bear for a friend.

Now, it usually pays to do right. It paid Peter this time, though he didn't know it was going to. You see, he sat still a long time just two jumps from the old stump, and when Reddy Fox was hiding with his mouth fairly watering at the thought of what a good dinner Peter would make, if he had decided to go on and tell Buster Bear he would have passed right close to the old stump and—well—probably Reddy Fox would have had a chance to find out just how good a dinner Peter would make. But when Peter finally did make up his mind not to tell, he started to turn back, for then, of course, he didn't want to find Buster Bear. Like a red flash, Reddy was after him.

Now, you know, Peter's eyes are so placed that he can see behind him without turning his head, and the very second Reddy jumped Peter saw him and dodged sidewise, so that Reddy missed him. But Reddy is almost as quick as Peter, and in a flash he had turned and Peter had to dodge again.

"I'll get you this time!" snarled Reddy.

"You'll be smarter than you've ever been before if you do," panted Peter, dodging behind a tree.

"Caw, caw, caw!" shouted Blacky the Crow, who happened along just then. "Go it, Peter!"

Peter went it. He twisted this way and dodged that way, while Reddy Fox right at his heels, and all the time he wished with all his heart for the dear Old Briar Patch. He knew that unless he found some safe hiding place soon Reddy would tire him out.

"Caw, caw, caw!" shrieked Blacky the Crow in great excitement. It was great fun for Blacky. "Caw, caw, caw!"

At last Peter saw a great pile of brush. If he could get under that he would be safe. He dodged just in the nick of time, and, then drawing a long breath, he started for that pile of brush as fast as ever he could.

"Caw, caw, caw!" shouted Blacky the Crow.

Afternoon Rest Hour

If you are hungry eat something before you begin the afternoon rest hour. A glass of warm milk taken in sips induces sleep and rests the nerves; clam juice, tea and coffee or milk punch are more bracing, and the after effects are not so good as those of the heated milk. But don't take the rest on a hungry stomach, for the bit of nourishment is above all a beautifier, calming irritated nerves and so smoothing out the worried lines of the face.

The beauty of the hair is improved by letting it flow every now and then, and as one is supposed to lounge only in the privacy of the bedroom the resting moment is an excellent time for this. Pass the comb through the locks once or twice to relieve the strain hairpins have given the scalp, and then tie a ribbon loosely about the head to keep front strands from falling over the face. The more the fresh air blows through the hair while it is hanging down the better for it.

When there is time enough for it, and the rest moment with a beauty bath—that is to say, a hot bath prolonged for quite fifteen minutes. A bath of this sort, with the water quite as hot as it can be borne, something in the water for softening the skin, or used afterward for perfuming, is the height of luxury and a sure cure for tired face lines.

The cheapest bath is made with bicarbonate of soda, which bleaches the skin and gives it a pearllike smoothness. About ten cents worth of the soda is required for the usual tub of hot water. The soda bath is likewise splendidly restful to the nerves and is often ordered for rheumatic persons.

Roast beef, vegetables, spinach border, potato roses with peas.

Dancing Frock Of Taffeta

White taffeta and black velvet form a striking combination in this charming evening gown.

The Woman Who Has Aspirations

Aspirations make the world go around. Of that we all feel sure. And no one ought to criticise mankind for dreaming. It is a good thing for women to look forward to the day when their position will be in every way better than it is today. It is a good thing for them to plan in their mind the part they will do in the great "uplift" movement that is going forward now. That is to say, all these things are good if—the woman who does the dreaming does not neglect the present while she is dreaming of the future.

While the young housewife sits in the living room dreaming of the coming age when housework will be free from drudgery, when a woman can be a perfect wife, mother and housekeeper and still have time and energy left so that she can be president or queen consort, perhaps the potatoes are burning or the baby is crying itself into a state of nervous unhappiness or the weekly mending is lying unattended to. And of course the dust is collecting and today's work, whatever it may be, is piling up for tomorrow.

Let modern woman dream on. Of dreams realities are made. But while she dreams, let her do the work of the present. Perhaps an age of drudgeryless work is coming but it is still far away. Every one respects the woman who puts her shoulder to the wheel—after making it as smooth and well-oiled a wheel, of course, as she can—and pushes ahead in the work of the world. She can dream and plan for the future as she pushes.

What Anne Rittenhouse Says

Will Eighteenth Century France Dominate the Coming Fashion?

PARIS.—It is a very happy fact that the pictorial in dress is revived. There are many women who go well with it; women to whom the severe mannish style is utterly unsuitable.

Many of the dressmakers have struggled to bring back the pictorial, and in this they have been aided and encouraged by the artists, who recently have allied themselves to the art of dress in a pronounced manner.

There are few artists who have been successful in this alliance and their failure is easily understood when one remembers that, after all, a costume is but a colored plate; it is a mechanical adjustment of cloth. This fact the artist overlooks. Paris is full of the gossip of such failures and if one had the space to repeat it, there would be interesting reading.

Today, at this early hour, the dressmakers are struggling to satisfy a strong feeling on the part of women to wear clothes that represent the epochs of frivolous dressing. They have gone back to the days when the two last Louis were kings of France and when Napoleon brought the Italian styles into Paris.

They have added to these well-known epochs in dress, a variety of other features that are far removed from the semi-barbaric influence of Russia and Persia. There is no doubt in the minds of those who follow in the wake of fashion that this is the next phase in clothes. It smacks not of the east. It is reminiscent of the eighteenth century France.

ROSES AND FLOUNCES.

The first vigorous step in this direction was the use of the wig on the powdered hair. That fantasy received its meed of laughter at its innovation, but there was a deeper meaning behind it than the amiling public saw. The age of powder and postiche was the age of picturesque dressing and the fashion foretold by the wig has come to pass.

One may never see this white hair really in fashion to any extent, but in Paris, it is already so general in the evening that it no longer causes comment. All around one in the theater, at the dances, at the restaurants, at supper after the opera are women wearing white wigs or powdered hair, and in addition there are gowns of laces and roses, there are black velvet bands at the top of the neck, and a black beauty spot on the cheek bone.

Every dressmaker is preparing evening gowns that represent that epoch of French history which called for strictly feminine apparel. America may not especially care for it, because it was in America that the mannish attire for women had its birth, and it will always be more suitable to the American figure than anything frivolous.

However, every woman believes that she looks her best when she is dressed in the pictorial style and today the dress-

OUR ASTROLOGER

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

HOROSCOPE FOR THURSDAY, MAY 7, 1914.

This is a day when all the influences should be stimulating and helpful, for, according to astrology, Venus, Uranus and Saturn are all in benefic aspect.

Women should benefit, under this configuration. The signs are most promising for whatever concerns them. They should be fortunate in business affairs, or in any activity which brings into play their intuitive and intellectual faculties.

The way is a fortunate one for love affairs. There is a lucky omen for weddings.

It is an auspicious day for beginning new friendships, especially with persons of opposite sex. The stars are believed to be peculiarly favorable to moods which inspire admiration and affection.

All social affairs should be successful under this rule of the stars.

As Venus is said to preside over gardens and fountains, outdoor fêtes shound no most fortunate in their results, bringing together congenial guests.

Hotel keepers, confectioners, managers of restaurants, and all who contribute to public comfort are under a government of the stars said to bring gain.

The signs are promising for those who make collections or send out bills. Canvassers, also, are under a happy sign.

Actors, singers, artists, and all who cultivate the higher arts should benefit by this rule of Venus, which is supposed to guide persons who have extraordinary talent.

Whatever contributes to the physical charm of women is held to be of special virtue during this aspect.

It is a fortunate time for beginning travels, especially when business or science is the motive. There is an auspicious sign for inventions and the summer will reveal many novel ideas practically applied. Aerial navigation will be improved.

There is a prophecy that a western United States senator will be unsuccessful in the autumn election, owing to the work of women whom he has antagonized and that his defeat will be a great surprise.

Persons whose birthdate it is "have the augury of a happy year. Financial conditions should be most satisfactory. Travel and change that will bring success are prognosticated. Romance is foreshadowed for the young, who will become engaged or marry.

Children born on this day have kindly stars to guide them. They should be clever, lovable and persevering. These subjects of Taurus are usually conservative but they are able to see possibilities of gain and to act prudently where more impetuous persons would commit follies.

(By Associated Press.)

RALEIGH N. C., May 6.—Representing a membership of 3,253 in eighty-nine women's clubs in the state, the North Carolina Federation of Women's clubs began its annual convention in Greenville last night with a large attendance. The convention will close Friday night.

Miss Adelaide L. Fries of Winston, president of the federation, in the annual address, told of the growth of the organization and its work. Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, president of the national federation, will speak Wednesday night and Mrs. Eugene Reilly, of Charlotte spoke Tuesday evening on "The General Federal Council Meeting."

A reception to the federation followed.

If there is no time for the all-over bath, put a tablespoonful of toilet ammonia, perfumed, into a basin of warm water, and sponge off the neck and arms. This must not touch the face as the ammonia will bite the skin, which is more tender there than elsewhere. A small quantity of any pure toilet water, eau de cologne, orange flower water or rosewater made hot, and put on the face with a soft rag is likewise beautifying to the skin and restful to the facial nerves.—Copyright 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

AMERICAN WOMEN WHO ARE WIVES OF THE GREAT

KEPT HOUSEKEEPER IN WASHINGTON.

Mrs. J. A. O'Gorman.

They say the pantries in Mrs. James A. O'Gorman's home at Washington, D. C., are stocked just like our grandmothers' used to be with row upon row of homemade pickles and preserves.

And they say the pies and cakes that come from Mrs. O'Gorman's big, cheerful kitchen are just like those which women made before the baker's shop sprung up just around the corner.

Anyway, it is generally known that the wife of Senator O'Gorman, of New York, is the best housekeeper in the capital circle.

Like many another woman who married early and has grown up with her young folks, Mrs. O'Gorman retains an amazing youthfulness. She has the freshness and enthusiasm of viewpoint which a debutante might envy.

However, notwithstanding the many cares she has had as a mother, this wonderful woman has found time to spend twenty consecutive summers traveling abroad with her husband.

At rst, the little folks were left in charge of some competent instructor. Later it was no uncommon thing for Senator, then Judge O'Gorman, to engage passage for himself, his wife, five or six young O'Gormans and one or two competent nurses. When the party reached the other side a governess was attached and the young folks learned the language and geography of the country while they traveled through it.

Mrs. O'Gorman has three married daughters. One of them is the wife of Dudley Field Malone, collector of the port in New York.

She is a great believer in higher education for women and has always taken the greatest interest in the studies of her daughters.

She is well read and widely traveled. A fully stocked library is a feature of her home at Cleveland Park, one of the residence sections in the capital.

She cares little for society and takes small part in it outside of a strict observance of the social duties attached to her position.

WEDDINGS

Thomas-Bowen

BOWMAN, Ga.—Mrs. H. Thomas announces the marriage of her daughter, Bertha Mae, to Mr. W. G. Bowen. The ceremony took place May 3 at the home of Rev. Ficklen in Atlanta.

Hutchinson-May

HELENA, Ga.—A beautiful wedding was solemnized Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Dunford when Miss Ruth Hutchinson, of Baxley, was united in marriage to Mr. O. J. May, of Sandersville. The bride and groom entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Mrs. R. E. Dunford, and stood under an arch of roses and ferns. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. A. Mallory.

The home was artistically decorated in honeysuckle, roses and ferns, the colonial scheme of white and green being effectively carried out in every detail. The bride wore her going-away gown of blue cloth with hat to match, and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. May left immediately after the ceremony for Savannah, and North Carolina and Virginia, after which they will visit points of interest in Florida.

MOTHER COMES TO DAUGHTER'S RESCUE

When, Daughter Thought, Every Avenue of Escape Closed, Mother Came to Rescue

Louisville, Ala.—In referring to her recent troubles, Mrs. Bessie E. Pruce, of this town says: "After childbirth, I suffered greatly with wasting, and various womanly troubles, and was in bed for six weeks. Half the time, I could not move, only when I was turned over by some one. Oh! how I suffered, no one knows.

I was told that I would have to go through an operation, but at the time of the operation, I was too weak to undergo it, and I decided there was no chance for me.

As a last resort, my mother advised me to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, and my husband bought me a bottle. I could tell from the first that it was doing me good, and by the time I had taken the first bottle, I could stand on my feet. I got another bottle, and before I had taken it up, I was just about well. The pains all stopped, and in a short while I was able to do my work.

I know that Cardui saved my life, and I would not be without it in the house. I almost waited too long, and I advise all suffering women not to wait, but to begin taking Cardui at once."

Your druggist sells Cardui. Get a bottle today.—(Advt.)

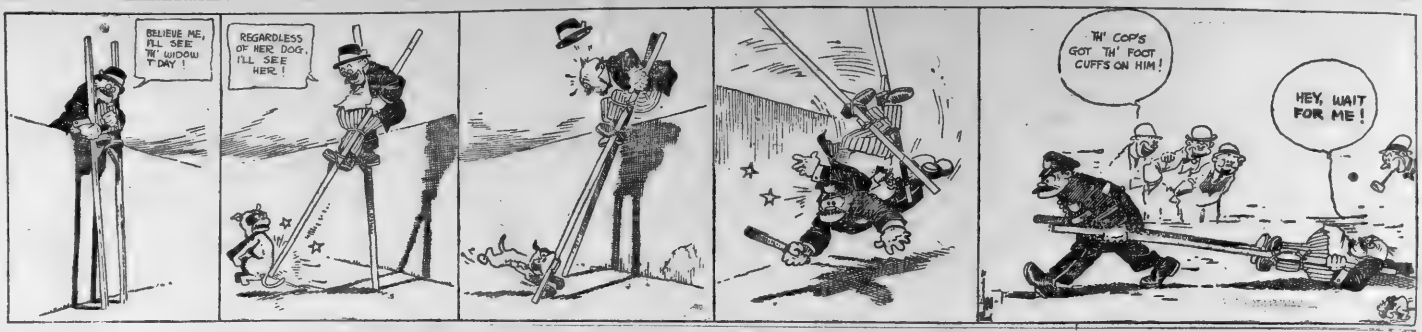
McCormick's Lookouts Took First Game From Bill Smith's Crackers

LITTLE PAL---HE'S STILL TRYING TO SEE THE WIDOW -BY LEO



HOW LOOKOUTS WON

By Innis Brown

We once heard an expression which ran something like this: "The more you see 'em the worser you'll hate 'em." Not very grammatical, but highly expressive and thoroughly applicable to the Merry Marauders led by Manager Moose McCormick. We entertained a rather unsavory opinion of this bunch of land pirates and slug-shirks, following a recent visit of our Crackers to Chattanooga a short time since. That opinion was sorely aggravated at a little session held at Ponce de Leon Tuesday afternoon. Result, a ball game lost to the invaders by a score of 5 to 3.

Yes sir, it was bad enough for this band of baseball brigands to seize onto the opportunity of humiliating our home folk in the resent series in Louisville, but when they come back with further fusillades and vanquish our home people right here in our own ballwick, something must be done. It's all wrong, Herman, it's all wrong.

Our diamond guests arrived in the city Tuesday morning, rode to the park with an air of superb confidence, took their preliminary practice, after a fashion that expressed fully a feeling that they expected to slam the eternal lights out of any resistance that the home people might essay to rear in their path. Then, to keep up the general tenor of their behavior they waded right in in the first canto and proceeded to do just as their very appearance indicated that they were bent on doing.

Manager Smith sent in Key Perryman. Perry has been a victim of illness for two or three days, and that job Saturday was no task for a sick man or a boy. As evidence of the fact just listen to what the aliens did before Perry could duck to cover. Johnson hit an awfully strong drive to Tommy Long in left, and when Thomas allowed it to carom off his shins to the foul line, Johnson hiked on to second. Mike Balenti hit a grounder to Jennings in deep short, which Morley flagged, but could not get to Fibel in time to head off the chief. Jacobson hit one over second, which McConnell barely managed to check, and Johnson scored and Balenti went to third. McCormick smashed a line drive just inside first for two bags, and Balenti scored, while Flanagan's clean handling of the ball held Jacobson at third.

For a man with a rather impetuous disposition, Bill Smith was some considerable time in deciding that enough of a thing is enough. However, after this third pole, Bill reached such a conclusion, and summoned Rube Kisslinger to take up Perry's burden. Rube chimed in with some awful twirling right from the hop, and no further scoring was done in this inning. Men were on second and third with none down, but Rube threw Coyle out on his grounder, after driving Jacobson back to third. He also caught Jacobson at the plate on Flick's tap, and made Graff hoist a foul to Dunn.

Rube then negotiated four rounds without further damage, but fell into parlous paths in the sixth. McCormick bounded one way up in the air toward McConnell, and by the time the ball came down, the Moose was safely over the bag. Coyle filed to Flanagan, but Flick hit to the same field, and when Flanagan threw to third, trying to catch McCormick, Rube deflected the ball out of Holland's reach and the Moose counted. Flick came over on Graff's single. Again in the seventh Jacobson whizzed one past Leibold that came near shooting off a fin for Harry, and counted when McCormick clouted one a mile or more to left center. Had the Moose been built on speedier lines he could have ambled home on the punch.

In the third, McConnell punched a drive between Johnson and Jacobson for three bags, and counted on Jennings' safe rap through Balenti. In the sixth Leibel drew a pass and moved up on a passed ball. He went to third as Long was beating out his tap to Coyle, and counted on Flanagan's sacrifice fly. The Crackers had several other opportunities to score, but a combination of failure to hit in the pinches and lucky breaks for the Lookouts at every turn choked off all further scoring.

LOOKOUTS HITTING WELL; ARE NOT WORLD-BEATERS

BY THEIR EQUOR.

The game at Ponce de Leon Tuesday afternoon afforded local fans their first opportunity to behold the manner of club that Manager Harry McCormick has gathered together. Give one slant at the box score of that game, and then admit quietly but positively that the Lookouts can hit the ball. They slammed the pitching offered them Tuesday, and they are likely to murder the offerings of many another murler come the dies of October.

However, aside from their ability to hit, there is little to indicate that they are extraordinarily formidable, and it is hardly likely that they can keep up such a batting tirade as was perpetrated in that opening battle. On the other hand, they were getting the breaks in great gobs to say nothing of several timely decisions by Dan Pfennimer on balls and strikes. In one case particularly, Dan appeared to be off. In the sixth, when the Crackers appeared set for a batting rally, with the count three and two on Kircher, Dan called George out on a service that looked to be several inches wide of the plate.

However, it was no ten-man victory for the Moosemen. They outhit the Crackers, and should have won, but not by as wide margin as they did. In the eighth with one down and men on second and third, Graff tore in and speared Holland's drive on a desperate chance and whipped to Balenti to catch Kircher. The toss was wide, and the Chief flagged it with his bare hook, completing a play that would have failed on the one end or the other four times out of five.

Hack Eibel was also the victim of at least two tough breaks on his hitting in the seventh, he drove a fierce liner to right that made a target of McCormick without the Moose's moving from his tracks. Again in the ninth, he all but knocked Flick over with a line drive directly at that gent. Had either of these punches been a few feet to either side, they would have been safe, and the first would have gone for at least two bags. 'Tis said that Dame Fortune smiles on the hustler. If such be the case, the Lookouts are the gents who wrote that line.

The game served to stir up more of the genuine dyed-in-the-wool brand of rooting than has been crowded into the eight preceding games combined. There are lots more popular events for Atlanta sport fans than the spectacle of a Chattanooga ball team trimming the home folk, and every time opportunity was afforded, the crowd on hand emitted loud and noisy expressions of rejoicing and delight. And in spite of the fact that the Moosemen got home three laps ahead of the Crackers, there were several such opportunities.

The second game of the series will be played this afternoon. The Crackers left the grounds as mad as a bunch of wet hens, and they will wade into that Chattanooga crew this afternoon with a vim and determination. And they are about due. No club in this league has any license to panhandle Smith's brigade in the manner that the Lookouts have treated them, and no day is a better day to turn the tide than today.

ANOTHER LUCKY ONE

If this fan will call at The Journal office with a copy of The Journal containing this out, he will be given a free ticket to the game.

Georgia Made Clean Sweep of Alabama Games--Making Ready for Tech

DIANA DILLPICKLES IN "THOUGHTFUL LITTLE BROTHER" A 4-REEL "SCREECHER" FILM

Jackets About Ready for the Georgia Games

Hard Practice Scheduled for Today, With Easy Workout Thursday—Eubanks Probable Pitching Choice for Opener

A more hard day's practice and the Tech players will be ready for the games of all games, the Georgia series. The two teams will open the series in Athens on next Friday and from all indications it will be the first shot fired in one of the hardest college series played around here in many, many moons.

Tech has been playing some good ball and they have been playing some bad ball. Consistency has not been their byword, but they have gone exceedingly well at times. In the last games with Alabama the team worked better than ever before. So far this season all one pitcher has worked smoothly, that one is Eubanks. He seems to have more on the ball this season than ever before, and it will be up to him to bear the heaviest part of the burden.

According to the series plan this will decide the championship of the state and the championship of the S. I. A. A. as will make the second time this athletic year that a championship has been decided on an Atlanta field. Last fall Auburn and Georgia played at Ponce de Leon for the football championship and this spring Tech and Georgia will play for the baseball honors. Such a thing as dope is out of place, when these two teams meet. They both, in past years, have absolutely refused to be governed by dope. Last season with the pennant cinched so far as dope went, Georgia went down in defeat before a team that was about the same as a high school team as far as form went. This season the teams are better matched than they were last year. Tech has some fight and better players, while Georgia has about the same team, and perhaps nothing above the average pair.

Last season Tech beat Georgia three games and the season before Georgia beat the Yellowjackets four games, thereby winning the championship clear. Dope is not worth a cent, but will be made to fit the situation in all probability Eubanks will be used in the opener against Georgia. The Tech student body will go to Athens on a special train Saturday, and the returns will be gotten at the field for those who cannot go.

Chattanooga Golfers Invade Birmingham

CHATTANOOGA, May 6.—Ten of the strongest golfers of the Chattanooga golf club left Tuesday morning for Birmingham to represent this city in the match invitation tournament which opens there tomorrow. The local party is headed by Garnet Watkins, and includes Scott Peake, T. H. Martin, Frank Clark, F. T. Rogers, Morgan Watkins, T. H. Peake, Lachlan Watkins, T. P. Hazan and R. M. Kales.

Star Player Dismissed

EVANSTON, Ill., May 6.—Mac-Emerson McCormick, star of the Northwestern University baseball team, star of the football team, has been dismissed from college. This action followed a meeting yesterday of Coach Dennis Grant after an investigation of charges against McCormick had been made by the faculty committee. The charges assumed definite form some time ago against the University baseball star a week ago.

Georgia Beats Alabama Again

With Corley Pitching, Red and Black Won by Score of 7 to 2—Team Ready for Tech

ATHENS, Ga., May 6.—Georgia defeated Alabama this afternoon in the second and last game of the series by the score of 7 to 2. The Red and Black squad was right there when it came to fast snappy playing. The boys were masters of the situation at all times. Corley, Georgia's veteran pitcher, did the twirling for the Red and Black, while Smith tossed the sphere for the Red and White. The Athenians pounded out five safe hits during the game, and managed to rake in seven scores while the Alabamians only scored twice out of the same number of hits.

The game closes the season for Georgia so far as southern colleges are concerned, with the exception of Georgia Tech. After a long hard schedule the Georgia boys have come out on top and have settled down to real hard baseball as was shown by the game this afternoon. "Chick" Owens made a beautiful catch in right field, and fell just as he caught the ball but he held to it like grim death. "Torbett" has become an expert at its receiving end pegs to second like an old timer.

That "double" play trio is still working good. It pulled off a couple of fast double plays today. Clements to Harrison to Henderson is getting to be a common expression with the score keeper. Henderson got a pinch hit in the first inning with the bases full, and again in the sixth, he knocked a screamer to the centerfield fence for two bags. Owens brought him in with a clean hit to right.

Smith pitched good ball except for the first and sixth innings. All the rest of the time he kept the Georgia boys off the bases by heady pitching. Corley kept his hits well scattered and was in pretty good form. The Alabamians could not hit him at the right time. This makes it four out of four from Alabama. Hitchcock will open for Georgia against Tech here next Friday.

LEADS THE LOOKOUTS

Manager Harry McCormick, who is handling the Chattanooga team now playing the Crackers at Ponce de Leon demonstrated in Tuesday's game that he can hit the ball. He had three hits including a triple, a double and a single.

Record of Transfers Shows Activity of Small Trader in Many Sections of City and County—Marietta Street Railroad Frontage Parcel Changes Hands—Two Sales of North Side Properties Rumored but Not Verified — Other Notes

The record of property transfers shows that the small trader is at work in various sections of the city and county.

In Wednesday's record, for instance, there were six bonds for title representing new sales, the considerations ranging from $2,500 to $8,500.

There were two Washington street sales at $2,500 and $6,500 respectively, a St. Charles avenue transfer at $2,000, one on Waverly Way at $5,000; another on Greenaferry avenue at $2,750, and one on Fryor street at $1,000.

Otherwise there are no announcements of consequence. W. L. and John C. DuPree sold for George M. Kohn to George A. Clayton No. 524 Marietta street, a two-story brick building on a lot 23x70 to the railroad, for $4,750.

The sale of a close-in apartment house on the north side was reported but not verified.

There was a report also that Dr. J. E. Hopkins had either sold or given an option on his property at Peachtree and Baker streets, but Dr. Hopkins is out of the city and the report could not be verified.

Building continues to show a gain, and this is about the most encouraging feature of the market at this time, for it means that vacant land is being put to a practical use either to live on or for business purposes.

Loan agents report that money is easier, but in some cases they have trouble in getting hold of good applications.

M. RICH & BROS. CO. HOLD 47TH ANNIVERSARY

Business Began in Small House Shipped Here From Stone Mountain in 1865

With a record of nearly half a century of good service to the public and of growing business, M. Rich & Bros. Co. is celebrating this month the forty-seventh anniversary of the establishment of the big department store. As a means of showing its appreciation of the public whose patronage has enabled the business to grow, the firm has announced a big anniversary sale that will continue throughout the month of May. During this sale prices will be cut in departments, and from time to time there will be special features of interest.

On Monday, the opening day of the sale, the store was crowded with purchasers, and interest in the sale has continued through the week. The store is gaily decorated from basement to roof with flags and banners and palms, and special efforts are being made to serve the public even better than is customary.

The growth of M. Rich & Bros. Co. parallels the growth of Atlanta. It begins when Atlanta lay in ashes following Sherman's devastating march to the sea. A small two-story building first housed the meager stock which Morris Rich presented to the public in 1867, and instead of fine silks and satins, imported novelties, expensive and beautiful accessories of dress, calico and the staple goods of the small dry goods store of the '60s were offered for sale.

The business really began even earlier than 1867, when William Rich, the elder brother of those in the present firm, came to Atlanta in 1865. At that time no house had been left in the city, so Mr. Rich brought bodily from Stone Mountain a house that was already built, shipping it over the one railroad then entering the city. This little house he set down on Whitehall street where the viaduct now is and opened business in it.

PRESENT ESTABLISHMENT.

While the present establishment of M. Rich & Bros. company did not actually develop from that little transported house, the coming of William Rich, who is now in Nashville, Tenn., to Atlanta was what attracted Morris Rich, Dan Rich and Emmanuel Rich to the city, and in 1867 they founded the present business under the firm name of M. Rich & Bros. Emmanuel Rich is now dead, but his interest in the business is held by his son, Walter Rich, who, though young, is already well known in business and educational circles. The remaining two brothers, Morris and Dan Rich, are the only two of the older pioneer merchants who are still actively engaged in business.

When Morris Rich first came from Albany he located his store on Whitehall street, where the Maier & Berkele Annex now is. Later it was moved to the building at the southwest corner of Hunter and Whitehall streets, and thirty-five years ago the firm moved over to its present location.

In those days the shutters were opened soon after daylight, the store was kept open until 9 or 9:30 at night, and only three clerks were employed. Some of Atlanta's well-known merchants were then connected with the establishment, among them being W. A. Foster, known throughout the south as "Gus Lang." "Jim" Duffy, who now has his own business at the corner of Mitchell and Forsyth streets; Joe Corrigan, now with the Keely company; John Morris, a member of Keely company's firm; Jim Haverty, of the Haverty Furniture company; Harry Silverman, and others.

Of the force connected with M. Rich & Bros. at that time only two remain at present with the establishment. They are J. P. Wingfield, of the linen department, and Mrs. Sallie Gardner, who has charge of the seamstress work in the carpet department.

CHANGE FIRM NAME.

In 1901 the firm name was changed to that of M. Rich & Bros. Co., under which the business has been operated ever since. Eight years ago the present new building was completed, and the store is now one of the largest in the city.

It has been progressive and considerate of the public and its employes during the forty-seven of its existence. It was the first store to install big show windows, and was the first to make direct importations from abroad, and the customs records show that it is now one of the largest importers in the city. The policy of the store has been that it has kept pace with the city's growth and has given honest, conscientious service to the public.

It has also inaugurated a number of features whereby its employes benefit, notably the profit sharing plan recently put into operation whereby the clerks receive not only a salary but a commission on all their sales. This enables them to add materially to their monthly salary and according to the benefit by the plan during the anniversary sale, which will last until the end of May.

Becomes a Bride

MRS. DONALD MacMILLAN.
Formerly Miss Lillian Browning Bryant, who is now wife of former Tech student.

TAKES GIRL INSTEAD OF FOREIGN COLLEGE COURSE

Europe is a long way off under ordinary conditions, but when a fellow has a girl on this side of the big pond and a course of four-years study staring him in the face on the other, the distance gets further and further and then some.

At least, so it seemed to Donald M. MacMillan, of Milledgeville, Ga., former Tech student, but more lately connected with the faculty of the Atlanta institution. The girl was right here in the city and so was he. Father was at home in Milledgeville and that foreign college he was to attend—as has been said—was across the Atlantic.

And so it came to pass Monday afternoon that Mr. MacMillan and Miss Lillian Browning Bryant, daughter of Dr. W. C. Bryant, state oil inspector, with offices in the capitol, talked the matter over most confidentially and incidentally most secretly.

Europe and foreign study might have had their charms for the young man but a continuation of simple blessedness for four years likewise had its backsets. And so it was that the young couple slipped away to the residence of Dr. Richard Orme Flynn, just as the first shades of darkness began to gather and there were married in the presence of a few intimate friends.

Papa MacMillan doesn't know it yet, and neither does Papa Bryant, who left the city Monday at noon on a short business trip, so this will come somewhat as a surprise to both of them.

And now that the knot has been tied, Mr. and Mrs. MacMillan, who were to have been the party at Dr. Bryant's country home at Camp Yonah, near Tallulah Falls, Ga., this summer, will be there just the same, but in the role of chaperones of a jolly party of young people.

As for that course of study in Europe which was to have lasted four years, well that has absolutely nothing to do with the story now.

A SONG BOOK WITH A SOUL

Books have been said to possess personalities. If this be true, then they may be said to have souls, and if there ever appeared a book that had both personality and soul—that book is "Heart Songs." We have been handling these books—thousands of them—in the houses of our readers during the past few weeks, and we have never undertaken a task that has given us more satisfaction and our readers more pleasure. We announce elsewhere the closing days of the distribution and urge those of our readers who have not yet participated in the distribution to lose no time in clipping the coupon that appears daily in this paper. "Heart Songs" is bound to grow in value with her years.

BERNARD SWEARS OUT WARRANT FOR GEO. EPPS

B. Bernard, the auctioneer, has sworn out a warrant in the criminal division of the municipal court, charging George Epps, jr., the state witness in the Frank case, with perjury.

Epps, in one of the various affidavits made for the state, swore Mr. Bernard was one of three men who secured an affidavit from him for the defense in Birmingham.

He charged Bernard posed as the chief of the Birmingham detective force.

C. W. Burke and George Wrenn, both of whom admit they secured the affidavit from Epps in Birmingham, swear the third man in the party was Austin Dennison, a New York detective.

Mr. Bernard has been indignant from the time he was identified by Epps as "the chief," and Wednesday he went before the magistrate and swore out the warrant.

RESERVE BANK OFFICIALS GIVE OUT INSTRUCTIONS

Issue Circular to Expedite Regional Organizations and Plans for Launching

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The federal reserve bank organization committee issued today a circular to expedite the organization of the several regional banks, calling attention to steps that must be taken before the institutions can be fully launched. Particular reference is made to the method of electing Class A and Class B directors by member banks.

The circular contains an exhibit giving a tentative analysis of the banks that have signified their intention of subscribing to the capital stock in the several districts. This analysis groups the banks in the respective districts.

The sixth reserve district of which Atlanta is the center, has 136 banks in group No. 1, with capital stock and surplus of $130,000 or more; 124 banks in group No. 2, with capital stock and surplus of less than $130,000 but more than $60,000, and 124 banks in group No. 3, with capital and surplus of $60,000 or less.

The organization committee in accordance with the currency law will, not later than May 9, designate five banks in each district to execute the organization certificate. To facilitate incorporation, the representatives of the banks so designated will be requested to meet promptly in the federal reserve city of their respective district so that the organization certificate may be executed and filed with the comptroller of the currency.

SUBSCRIBING BANKS.

Following this formality, all subscribing banks will become member banks and the choice of electors and the nomination of directors will be proceeded with immediately.

All banks are required under the law to send in their subscriptions not later than May 8. The organization committee declares that it is probable that Class A and Class B directors should be regularly elected as soon thereafter as possible, and Class C directors appointed by the federal reserve board.

The law provides that each member bank shall be permitted to nominate to the chairman one candidate for director of class "A" and class "B" respectively. That is, of class A state, thus nominated, shall be submitted within fifteen days to each elector. Each member bank is entitled to one elector who must be chosen by the bank and properly certified to the chairman. A pre-requisite for class "A" directors is that they shall be chosen by and representatives of stockholding banks. Class "B" directors need not necessarily be bankers, but must at the time of the election be actively engaged in commerce, agriculture or other industrial pursuit.

Forms will be mailed to each member bank in each district for use in reporting to the organization committee the name of the district reserve elector and nominees of class "A" and class "B" directors.

FORM OF BALLOTS.

A form of ballot has also been prepared which will show the candidate for class "A" and the candidate for class "B" directors of each group.

Each district reserve elector will indicate on this ballot his first, second and third choices for one director of class "A" and his first, second and third choices for one director of class "B."

The ballot furnished will show the name of the bank nominating each candidate.

Each group will elect one class "A" and one class "B" director. The electors will therefore vote only on the nominees of their own group and not on all the nominees of their district.

When these ballots have been received by the organization committee a poll will be made and the results of the election announced as early as practicable.

When this announcement has been made and the federal reserve board has named the three class "C" directors in each district, the board of directors of each federal reserve bank will be immediately convened and organized and this board will then adopt such by-laws and elect such officers as may be deemed necessary.

The board of directors of each federal reserve bank will also arrange for proper banking quarters and for the employment of the necessary clerical force in order to place the banks in operation as early as possible.

RUN-DOWN FOR YEARS

Strength Restored by Vinol.

Strength and even life itself depends upon nourishment and proper assimilation of food, and unless digestion is good the body suffers.

Mrs. C. W. Busby, of Moundsville, W. Va., says: "For years I was in a weakened, run-down condition, and I could not find anything that would help me. Vinol was recommended, and I tried it. Before I had finished the first bottle I was better. I continued its use and am now strong and well. I have gotten several neighbors to take Vinol with the same result."

We know the great power of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, in building up all weakness, run-down conditions, and for chronic coughs, colds and pulmonary trouble, and that is why we guarantee to return your money if it does not help you. Elkin Drug Co., Atlanta, Ga.

P. S.—Our Sazo Salve is truly wonderful for Eczema. We guarantee it. (Advt.)

A Message to Thin, Weak, Scrawny Folks

An Easy Way to Gain 10 to 30 lbs of solid, Healthy, Permanent Flesh.

Thin, nervous, undersloped men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good, substantial food." The reason is: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the oils and fats and hand them over to the blood, where they may reach the starved, shrunken, run-down tissues and build them up. Then the thin person's body is like a dry sponge—eager and hungry for the rich material of which it is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. The best way to overcome this sinful waste of flesh building elements and to stop the leakage of fats is to use Sargol, the recently discovered regenerative force that is recommended so highly by physicians here and abroad. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and notice how quickly your cheeks fill out and rolls of firm, healthy flesh are deposited over your body, covering each bony angle and projecting point. Jacobs' Pharmacy and other good druggists have Sargol, or can get it from their wholesaler, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied with the gain in weight it produces as stated on the guarantee in each package. It is inexpensive, easy to take and highly efficient.

Caution—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles, it should not be taken unless you are willing to gain ten pounds or more, for it is a wonderful flesh-builder. (Advt.)

Out of Sorts?

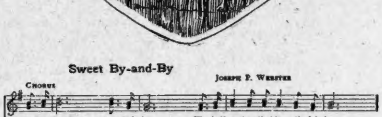
When everything goes wrong and the future looks black, instead of moping around go right to your druggist and ask for

Tutt's Pills

You will find this a short cut to happiness, because they will remove the cause of your trouble which is nothing more than a sluggish liver. At your druggist—sugar coated or plain.

What word-magic can paint your feelings, when, as the years go by, some far-off tune is whistled in the street, that your mother used to sing to you; orsome hand-organ ditty, softened by distance, floats into your window with a strain that you often heard on her lips; or some phrase in the neighborhood accompanies a sweet voice with the music that once charmed away all your childish cares and troubles.

What words, we say, can describe these tender memories that come floating to you on the wings of melody. Yet, what would you not give to be able to summon at will these dearest of life's recollections!



(Found on page 485, "Heart Songs")

"Heart Songs"—a piano or an organ—a woman's voice—be it that of wife—or daughter—or sister—will give you, once again, all your mother's favorites. Every evening, after your day's work, you may soothe your wearied senses with the old songs she used to sing to you. Your children will be the better for singing them and you the better for hearing them. Try it! This paper puts it into your power, almost as a gift.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR OPEN CONVENTION IN WAYCROSS

Meeting Will Come to End Thursday With Election and Shrine Festivities

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
WAYCROSS, Ga., May 6.—All Waycross turned out today to give Knights Templar of Georgia a royal reception when the annual meeting of the grand commanders was opened here with public exercises at the Grand theater. Welcome addresses were delivered by Major S. T. Beaton for the city and Rev. R. A. Brown for Damascus commandery, No. 18, Knights Templar, after which W. F. Bowe, deputy grand master, of Augusta, responded for the Knights Templar.

After the public meeting the formal opening of the grand commandery was held at the Masonic hall. Today's program is a busy one for the Knights Templar, and it is proposed to stick to the business confronting grand commandery steadily until everything is completed. Adjournment may be taken shortly after noon tomorrow.

The grand master, Arthur McArthur, of New York, was represented at the annual review today by W. C. Andreas, past grand commander, of Jacksonville, Fla. J. P. Godwin, as acting adjutant, was in charge of the parade. Tomorrow afternoon the annual competitive drill will be held, this being the last event on the program for the grand conclave.

ELECTION THURSDAY.

Tonight the religious service will be held at the First Methodist church. The grand prelate will be in charge, after which the Templar address will be delivered by Rev. Guyton L. Fisher, of Montezuma. Tomorrow morning officers will be elected. As it is customary to promote all officers, the only contest will be that for warden. This is expected to provoke much interest, as well as the contest for the 1915 meeting place. It is predicted that Augusta will be chosen for the grand conclave of 1915.

Wives of Waycross Masons have arranged an elaborate entertainment program for the wives of the delegates. This morning a public reception was tendered the visiting ladies at La Grande, after which a delightful luncheon was served. Late this afternoon the visiting ladies will be guests for an auto ride. Tomorrow they will have another auto ride, going to Blackshear, where Mrs. B. D. Brantley and Mrs. John T. Brantley will entertain in their honor with an elaborate reception. The closing feature on the entrtainment program for both the Knights Templar and their wives will be a large barbecue at the Country club tomorow shortly after noon.

SHRINE FESTIVITIES.

While not a part of the grand conclave an interesting feature in connection with the big gathering will be the ceremonial session of Alee Temple, Mystic Order of Shriners, which will be held tomorrow night. The famous Alee patrol and band of Savannah will attend and take a leading part in the night's doings. The class of candidates is unusually large, owing to the fact that this will be the last ceremonial before the start of the national meeting of Shriners in Atlanta. The committee in charge have arranged a spectacular torchlight parade for tomorrow night, in which as usual the candidates will be featured. Among those who will cross the hot sands is Scott T. Beaton, mayor of Waycross. A banquet will conclude the Shriners' ceremonial.

The annual report of the grand commander, A. G. Miller, of Waycross, was submitted to the grand conclave at this afternoon's session.

Traveling in special sleepers the Atlanta and North Georgia delegates to the grand conclave reached Waycross this morning. Many delegates motored through the country, arriving last night.

North Georgia Templars To Attend Waycross Meeting

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
ROME, Ga., May 6.—A delegation and special drill team from Rome commandery of Knights Templar leaves Tuesday night for Waycross, Ga., to attend the grand commandery of Georgia, which will be in session there Wednesday and Thursday.

The party, accompanied by delegations from Chickamauga and Dalton, will make the trip in a special Pullman and will return to Rome Friday morning. Past Grand Commander John J. Seay will head the delegation.

TEDDER DECLARES DORSEY BROKE HIS CONFIDENCE

Asserts Solicitor Promised to Keep His Name From Appearing in Frank Case

C. C. Tedder, who has been mentioned frequently in the past few days in connection with the famous Ragsdale affidavit in the Frank case has requested The Journal to print the following card setting out his connection with the entire case.

It has been my purpose to stay entirely out of any public prints, in connection with the investigation of the Frank case, but so much has been said about my connection with the Ragsdale incident, in justice to myself, the public should be apprised of my position.

My presence in the Burns camp was not only known to my friend and employer, Mr. William M. Smith, but also to the solicitor general. They both not only knew that I was in the Burns camp, but were consulted and agreed to my going into the Burns camp, before it was done. I would never have thought of going to Burns without the approval of Mr. Smith and Mr. Dorsey.

As to the Ragsdale incident that matter was reported by me to Mr. Smith, and I am advised by both Mr. Smith and Mr. Dorsey, that it was reported by Mr. Smith to Mr. Dorsey. By my presence in the Burns camp, the solicitor general knew of the Ragsdale matter, before the affidavit was presented in court, and was advised to act sooner than he did.

This it not only true as to the Ragsdale, but as to other features of the investigation, and the information thus derived through me by the state, I thought was being appreciated.

I was led to believe that my name was to be left out in all matters, and not even referred to by name. This part of the state's contract, seems not only not to have been lived up to, but that it seems expedient, for some unexplained reason, that I too must be made a victim, of cruel publicity, and assembly prosecution. With part of the faith broken, I suppose I may look for the worst.

Upon Mr. Dorsey's urgent insistance, I went to his office and gave to him an affidavit covering the Ragsdale incident, and in which he agreed that all reference to my Burns connection be left out, and then went immediately into court and went back on that agreement and made it one of the most prominent parts of the record.

In my judgment, the treatment I have received can have but one explanation, and that is the explanation practically given by Mr. Dorsey when he took my statement, and that is that he was looking for larger fish than I. If he was seeking the man higher up, possibly Mr. Lehon, Mr. Burns, Mr. Arnold, Mr. Haas, Mr. Rosser, I suppose. I told Mr. Dorsey frankly that I could not supply the mitsing link; that so far as I knew all of these gentlemen named had acted honorably in the matter.

This seemed to disappoint Mr. Dorsey very much. He stressed the idea that it would be a rich joke if I had put one over on the Burns crowd, and intimated that I would be some sort of a hero if I had and would now deliver the goods to him.

In the first place I give the Burke people credit for some sense, and I told Mr. Dorsey that I had never been able to get their complete confidence, and that if they were going to put a deal over like that, that I would probably be the last man to find it out. I told him further that so far as I knew Burns knew nothing about it, and that I believed Lehon was in perfect good faith.

All I would have had to have done would have been to make an affidavit for Mr. Dorsey involving the whole crowd, including the attorneys representing the defense, and I been a hero.

I may have made a mistake in dealing in this matter in this way, but I feel that those with whom I advised, and who agreed to my doing so, including the solicitor general, are parties to the wrong done. But if I have got to buy my release from this embarrassing position by swearing innocent man into trouble, I expect I will have to be victimized.

The chestnuts raked out of the Burns fireplace no doubt were very much enjoyed by the solicitor, who seems now to forget that he owes some sort of gratitude to the cat whose paw he used in raking them out.

C. C. TEDDER.
