

had him. I could not see the man that was carried on the shoulders of the men very well, but was told that it was Dorsey. There was at this time fully three thousand men gathered around the court house, filling the streets on all sides of the court house. I only know Col. Dorsey by sight.

J. H. G. Cochran makes the following affidavit, deposing and saying as follows: that he is a resident of Atlanta, Georgia; he remembers the close of the trial of Leo M. Frank, and was present in front of the court house in Atlanta, Georgia, on the day that the case closed and on the day that the jury returned the verdict of guilty in said case; that on the day aforesaid, to-wit; that the jury returned the verdict, Mr. Cochran was standing in front of the court house at the time the jury came out of the court house to go to dinner; at just about the same time or near that time, and while the jury were in the vicinity of the court house, Solicitor General Hugh M. Deponent says that at the appearance of Solicitor Dorsey on the street coming from the court house the crowd in the street, numbering between 500 and 1,000 people, to the best of this deponent's estimate, broke into loud and tumultuous cheering of the Solicitor, the jury being at the time near the court house and proceeding up Pryor Street, and being within sight of this deponent at the time the cheering commenced, and that said cheering lasted the whole time that the Solicitor General was crossing the street and until he had entered the Kiser Building.

This deponent knows that this cheering which took place in the presence of the jury, or in their hearing, and while they were on Pryor Street a short distance from the court house, was cheering for the Solicitor, and he remembers the Solicitor's stopping at the entrance of the Kiser Building and taking off his hat and bowing to the crowds cheering him; not only were the crowds cheering him, but people in the windows of the Kiser Building were also cheering and waving their hands and handkerchiefs at the Solicitor; all of which was practically in the presence of the jury, at least within their hearing, before they proceeded up Pryor St. He says that on said day the jury took dinner at the German Cafe, on South Pryor St., a distance of approximately 150 feet to 200
