Interest Is Centered on the Conflict in Poland Because the Result Will Have Most Important Bearing on the War.

FIERCEST FIGHTING BETWEEN THE RIVERS VISTULA AND WARTA

Partial Success Claimed by Russians, But Berlin Gives No Hint of a Reverse—The Cold Weather Has Checked Fighting in Belgium and France—Success Is Claimed for Anglo-French Forces in Artillery Duels.

London, November 21.—Because the result will have an important bearing on the war, interest is still centered on the battle in Poland. As has been the case heretofore when important events were impending, little news is coming from either Petrograd or Berlin. It is known, however, that the Germans are offering stubborn resistance to the Russian advance in East Prussia.

General von Hindenburg, commander of the German troops, and Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russian, two of the greatest strategists the war has produced, are maneuvering for positions between the Vistula and the Warta, and a big battle is in progress on the Cracow-Czestochowa line between Russian and Austro-German forces.

Dawson Making Preparations To Give Royal Entertainment To South Georgia Conference

Keen Interest Is Being Felt Among the Pastors in the Number of Changes Expected.

BISHOP CANDLER PRESIDES THIS TIME

Four Hundred Members Expected to Attend the Conference, Which Will Convene on November 25.

Dawson, Ga., November 21.—(Special.)—All Dawson stands ready to receive and entertain the nearly 400 members of the South Georgia conference, which meets in the First Methodist church of this city, November 25. Those of every denomination have thrown open their doors for the entertainment of the visiting brethren and assurance is given that a most cordial greeting will be given them.

Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta, will preside at this session of the conference and will make the appointments of the preachers for another year's work. Assistant Bishop Candler in making the appointments will be a cabinet of ten presiding elders, who are subordinate to him in the management of the church affairs in the bounds of this conference. The managers making up the cabinet are: Dr. T. D. Ellis, of the American district; Dr. A. W. Williams, of the Columbus district; Rev. J. B. Johnson, of the Savannah district; Rev. P. McPhee, of the Macon district; Rev. J. P. Wardlaw, of the Columbus district; Rev. John M. Outler, of the Thomasville district; Rev. W. H. Smith, of the Valdosta district; Rev. L. W. Tyson, of the Waycross district; Rev. H. Hill, of the Milledgeville district; and Rev. Isaacson Anthony, of the Dublin district.

As the date for the annual session of the conference approaches no little interest is taken in the appointments of the preachers for another year. Under the policy of the Southern Methodist church, every preacher is admitted into the conference with the understanding that he is willing to go wherever he may be sent; and in addition to that stipulation it is a matter of Methodist tradition that no preacher is allowed to know what his appointment will be until he reads out the last thing before final adjournment. This uncertainty and mystery creates no little speculation among the ministers as to where they may be sent for another season, and who will be the recipients of the best places in the conference.

Mark Uncertainty.

This uncertainty and mystery is increased more than usual this year, owing to the fact that fourteen of the South Georgia conference men will be forced to move, according to the four-year limit of service in Methodist lands. Since fourteen men must move, an equal number must be transferred to make way for them. It will be noted that many of these men are believed to be well qualified to fill the removal of a large number of ministers from one charge to another.

Among the preachers to be moved this year are two presiding elders—Dr. J. P. McPhee, of the Columbus district, and the Rev. John M. Outler, of the Thomasville district. These two men have been in charge of their districts for four years. During this time their districts have made considerable advances along every line of church enterprise. Financial contributions have greatly increased, churches have been built, Sunday school progress has been notable, missionary activity has been maintained, and a more wholesome social condition among the churches prevails. Just who will be moved to take their places, and where they will be assigned for further service, no man can say.

The pastors of the conference who have served their four-year limit and will be moved are: Dr. J. P. McPhee, of the Columbus district; Rev. J. B. Johnson, of the Savannah district; Rev. P. McPhee, of the Macon district; Rev. J. P. Wardlaw, of the Columbus district; Rev. John M. Outler, of the Thomasville district; Rev. W. H. Smith, of the Valdosta district; Rev. L. W. Tyson, of the Waycross district; Rev. H. Hill, of the Milledgeville district; and Rev. Isaacson Anthony, of the Dublin district.

Large Conference.

The South Georgia conference is one of the largest conferences in southern Methodist churches. It has 179 churches, 1,000 pastors, and 15,000 members. The total value of the churches is $2,014,255 in the last year. The total value of the churches is $2,014,255 in the last year. The total value of the churches is $2,014,255 in the last year.

To Aid Red Cross.

For a young man desiring to become a Methodist minister and desiring to be employed in the conference it is necessary for him to undergo a series of examinations and pursue a course of study lasting through five calendar years. Before he is admitted to the study, he must secure a recommendation from the conference. Before he is admitted to the study, he must secure a recommendation from the conference. Before he is admitted to the study, he must secure a recommendation from the conference.

McDonald-Guinn.

A beautiful wedding solemnized at the Pitts Christian church on Friday evening was that of Miss Ruby McDonald and Mr. Richard Dudley Guinn.

The church was decorated with palms, and music rendered by the organist, Miss Adelle Stevens. The bridesmaids, Messrs. D. Bennett and Leo Hoyt Williams, came down the center aisle and were joined by Rev. J. O. Heister, who officiated the union. With her mother on her right, the bride, with her maid of honor, Mrs. Clifton L. Bennett, and the groom, with his best man, Mr. Thomas Duval Pollock, completed the wedding party.

Miss McDonald wore white satin on train with lace train and small trimmings, the long veil and orange sash, some embracing her plump beauty. She carried an arm bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilacs. Mrs. Bennett wore a becoming gown of yellow satin with chiffon and lace over-drapery and carried yellow roses.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride party repaired to the home of Mrs. Ella D. Guinn, the mother of the groom, where a delightful reception was held. The attractive home was decorated with rare plants and yellow chrysanthemums. Refreshments were served by Miss Isabel Guinn. Later Miss Adelaide Clayton, assisted by Miss Mary Guinn, passed delicious refreshments.

Julia Jackson Chapter.

UNIQUE CYLINDER BLOCK ON THE CADILLAC "EIGHT"

The design of the cylinder block casting is unique among motor cases by reason of its ability to provide a cooling surface. The cooling surfaces are fluted at each end of the cylinder block.

Thus an entirely new scheme for the cooling of the cylinder block is put into operation in the Cadillac four-cylinder engine.

The usual practice of water circulation is to pump the water into the space that surrounds the cylinder block.

But in the Cadillac engine, the water is pumped into the cylinder block by means of a special water pump, having several advantages. One of these is that the water is pumped into the block before the casting is made. This means that the water is distributed uniformly and insures uniform thickness of the cylinder wall.

Another advantage is that the water is pumped into the block at the water, both of which are necessary to efficient cooling of the motor.

Thus, the Cadillac engine is a departure from the usual practice of pumping the water around, inspection casting is made, and the water is pumped in. No form has not been formed which would interfere with the water circulation. The water is pumped in for such interference is likely to be caused by the water pump.

The third advantage is that the use of the water pump in the Cadillac engine removes any sediment that may have been deposited by the water in the cooling system. The water pump is a simple device that is capable of pumping water at a pressure of 100 pounds per square inch.

WOMEN DEMONSTRATORS ADVOCATED FOR AUTOS

Maxwell Motor Co. About to Start Nation-Wide Campaign
for Good Workers.

Word comes that an entirely new kind of endeavor is about to be opened to women; and it is one of the most pleasant as well as profitable labor to which women may aspire. The word is that Walter E. Flinders, of the Maxwell Motor company, is about to make nation-wide canvases of all the women's organizations to find capable women to act as demonstrators of the Maxwell car.

Flinders is the most prominent club and suffrage leader of New York, who interviewed last week by one of New York's leading papers.

It is a genuine business move on the part of Flinders, who believes that women will be well-served in the automobile business, and particularly in demonstrations, which is exceptionally light and easy to handle, and has already proved highly popular with women drivers.

Who questioned regarding the move,
Mr. Flinders said: "We think we can sell the Maxwell car to women, and we think women can sell them successfully. It has been our experience that women in department stores as agents
have sold more automobiles than men,
and we believe, with Charlotte Perkins Gilman, that the made time of progress is toward economic equality and freedom. That is all there is to it."

mile grand race motorcycle race at Savannah on Thanksgiving day.

Thirty-two entries have been received,
which are composed of the fastest riders in the world. Eight hundred and fifty dollars cash prizes are offered by the Savannah Motorcycle club,
the promoters of this event, with $400 added cash prizes by several private persons, making the total prize of $1,250 in cash to be distributed among the three first riders across the tape.

Already, it is Savannah, quite a number of the riders have been kept training for this event. Among them Harley-Davidson Motor company, who are entering into the contest for the first time. In preliminary sprints over part of the course, which is a 4-mile straight-away, a speed has been attained of 100 miles per hour. When it is figured against the fast time made last year of 47 miles per hour, it will be readily seen that records are going to fall.

This event will be pulled off over the same course in which the Vanderbilt cup race took place several years ago, at which time over the fastest part of the course the automobiles made a speed of thirty miles per hour. It will be seen that the motorcycle is not behind when it comes to speed.

The Savannah Grand Prix motorcycle event will be held on Thanksgiving day, when experts predict that this year around 60 miles per hour. Motorcycle enthusiasts from all parts of the country are on their way to Savannah to be present during the week-end of the Savannah Motorcycle club from the experience gained last year expect to make a grand success of the second annual event.

$100,000 Moving Picture Theater for Atlanta; Twenty-Year Lease of House Brings $300,000

This is a drawing by A. Ten Eyck Brown, the architect, of the new $100,000 moving picture theater, which J. B. Frost will build on Houston street, adjoining the Dakota hotel. The theater has been leased for a term of twenty years by Arthur S. Hyman, southern manager of the World Film corporation, at an aggregate consideration of $300,000.

By the middle of December work will have started on a $100,000 moving picture theater, the most magnificent structure of its kind in the south, according to announcement made Saturday by Arthur S. Hyman, southern manager of the World Film corporation,
who is lessee of the theater.

The theater, which is located on the south side of Houston street, forty feet east of Pryor street and adjoining the east side of the Dakota hotel. It is expected to be ready for occupancy by the middle of next April.

A. Ten Eyck Brown is the architect.
Mr. Hyman has closed a lease upon the structure for a term of twenty years at an approximate aggregate consideration of $300,000.

The contract for the construction has not yet been let.

High-Class Films.

The new theater will be known as the Fulton theater. It will show high-class feature films exclusively, and will show the entire artistic and operatic attractions.

"The Fulton theater," said Mr. Hyman, "will be on a par with the Strand theater of New York. I have always had my ideal of a high-class moving picture theater, one which can bring out the entire artistic and operatic attractions of the moving picture, and place
it upon the plane which is the province of a popular medium, and the Fulton theater will be the realization of that dream. I have faith enough in the taste and appreciation of Atlanta to believe that the city will support such an institution. In moving pictures the Fulton will represent to Atlanta what the annual grand opera season represents in the world of opera."

The Fulton theater will stand upon a lot with a frontage of 80 feet and a depth of 155 feet. It will be two and one-half stories high.

Extensive of the new theater will be thoroughly equipped with the latest thoroughly equipped construction, and will be finished in its interior in Italian marble, white terra cotta and gray marbled brick, the whole being outfitted in electric lights. The interior will be finished throughout in Italian marble.
Extending to the curb will be a slight ornamental marquee.

On the side of the entrance toward Peachtree street will be a store. Upon the top floor along the front of the building will be a series of offices,
which will either be leased or occupied by the owner. These offices will be reached by a stairway whose entrance will be from the street on the opposite side of the theater entrance.

The entrance of the theater will consist of a spacious lobby finished exclusively in Italian marble. The box offices in this lobby will also be of Italian marble.

The entrance lobby, but for a vestibule, will open directly upon the floor of the theater. All the floor will be finished in Italian marble, and the walls at either side will have two window-balconies overlooking of Italian
marble.

The interior of the theater will be beautifully and artistically decorated in a restrained color. All the floor will be hand-carved parquet. The seats will be upholstered in a soft leather.
Upholstery. No theater in America, perhaps, will be more beautifully appointed than the Fulton. A feature will be a series of loges, or boxes, on the upper level of the theater. The balcony will be very deep.

The interior of the theater will be 140
feet wide and 100 feet high. The seats will be so arranged that no one in the theater will be at a disadvantage in viewing the performance.

By way of parenthesis, some moving picture man could do worse than invent a word which fits the words of going to a moving picture show. An authoritative man has said for the purpose of hearing. People go to moving picture theaters to see and not to hear.
primarily. Why not a word such as "vidiothea," say?

But about the new Fulton theater—

A Beautiful Stage.

The stage will be of such elegance and beauty as will enhance the other details of the building. Its drapery will consist of seven different sets of scenery
of all different shades.

The theater will be equipped with a pipe organ and orchestra. Both the organ and the orchestra will be operated behind the stage.

Above the stage will be dressing rooms for actors who will run from time to time under special musical and operatic features.

In this connection Mr. Hyman said that the Fulton theater will be considered as a landmark in the city. It will be a word which fits the words of going to a moving picture show. An authoritative man has said for the purpose

The Greatest Victories Ever Won on Any Tires

SUCH may be said of the Los Angeles-
Phoenix and the El Paso-Phoenix Road Races ending November 11th, both of which were won on Firestone Tires. These races put tires to a terrific test in the grueling grind over mountain trails and desert sands.

Firestone TIRES

stood that test as shown by results:

Los Angeles-Phoenix 696 Miles

- 1st Oldfield Equipped with Firestone Tires
- 2nd Nikrent Equipped with Firestone Tires
- 3rd Beaudet Equipped with Firestone Tires

El Paso-Phoenix Race 533 Miles

- 1st Miller Equipped with Firestone Tires

At Phoenix the next day all cars that finished in both races entered in a track race where all the honors were also won on Firestone Tires.

These victories are but the climax of fifteen years of leadership. Think what this means to you.
It means Strength and Endurance to meet all emergencies.

The Thanksgiving Thumber

JUST THE color of the grape juice in which they are drinking to the royal bird is the charmeuse gown on the extreme right. Its long bodice, draped fichu fashion and tied in the back in a butterfly bow, has black velvet collar and revers and its chiffon sleeves falling full from their drooping arm holes are tied with black velvet ribbon. The velvet again shows in the draped underskirt over which the full tunic corded at the bottom falls in the new line, shorter in back than in front.

The little green taffeta frock is a very attractive and girlish model. The waist is of black velvet, hooking like a little jacket over its three tier accordion pleated skirt. It has two points at each side and fastens at the back with three big rhinestone buttons. A few folds of white tulle outline the V-shaped neck and green chiffon has been used for the sleeves while a green taffeta sash has been loosely knotted around the hips.

For a little girl to wear at the festival dinner, nothing could be prettier than the little smocked dress of corn-colored challis. Its very simplicity is its charm for the only trimming is the smocking used for yoke and cuffs and the sheer white linen embroidered in yellow collar and wrist ruffles.

Black satin is always suitable for the very elderly woman and in this case, its severity has been relieved by the fine lace collar and ruffles which match the quaint, little, old lady's cap.

FOURTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

The photo drama corresponding to this installment of "The Troy of Hearts" may be seen at the Savoy and Alpha theatres tomorrow. By this unique arrangement with the Universal Film Mfg. Co. it is, therefore, not only possible to read "The Troy of Hearts" in this paper, but also to see each installment of it at the moving picture theatres.

(Copyright, 1914, by Louis Joseph Vasson)

THE FIRST LAW

STORY.—The 3 of Hearts is the "death" employed by Baron von Trine in the prize fight (the first) which was held at the Savoy and Alpha theatres tomorrow. The 3 of Hearts is a woman of violent and unscrupulous temper, whose father is a simple, honest, and unscrupulous man. She is a woman of violent and unscrupulous temper, whose father is a simple, honest, and unscrupulous man. She is a woman of violent and unscrupulous temper, whose father is a simple, honest, and unscrupulous man.

I—THE LAST WARNING.

In the still, violet-shadowed dusk of that clear evening, a chap-fallen motor car crept sluggishly into the little mountain town of Mesquite, at the head of two mountain roads, driven by a chauffeur who steered with one hand while the other flourished a crackling whip-lash over the backs of its sole motive power.

Its one passenger, a cripple as helpless as the car itself, huddled in a corner, and a celebration saluted Mesquite with a cheer. Though he was in need of such rude comforts as the town stood prepared to afford him, his demeanor toward it was that of one who suffers as a lodger rather than as a guest.

And now, as the car crawled to a pause before the Mountain house—Mesquite's one caravansary—and Mesquite itself, to the last fast-bitten bond, gathered round to view this wonder, Mr. Trine's indignation and chagrin distilled words of poisonous import.

Far from resenting this, Mesquite, pipe in mouth, hands in pockets, admired and applauded, and rather than the change to a more comfortable position of some sort was in progress was evidenced by the frequency with which Marrophat and Jimmy called on the bar for more liquid refreshment as well as by bursts of laughter and loud and somehow strangely cynical of accent.

And toward midnight one belated Mesquite stepped in the street outside the Mountain house for one last curious stare at the lighted windows of Mr. Trine's quarters, and so witnessed an incident which puzzled him by its start and through-out the balance of his life.

He saw, clearly silhouetted against the glowing oblong of the window, the Mephistophelean profile of Seneca Trine, distant with a grimace of the cruellest joy that ever heart of man conceived. He saw Marrophat approach his master with a drunkard's swagger and a drunkenness which, though undeniable to the unseen auditor, unquestionably afforded both of the other men ample excuse for ecstatic glee. Toward the conclusion Mr. Marrophat apparently capped the peak of jubilation by fumbling in his coat pocket and bringing forth something which strongly resembled a stage play card.

Now when he had contrived to master his mirth, the cripple made a gesture which eloquently attested this card, a gesture which said quite plainly: "All that is finished. This has served its purpose. To hell with it!"

Whereupon, with a smart jerk of his wrist, Mr. Marrophat sent the card spinning and saw it whizz through the open window to lose itself in the night.

The watcher didn't see it fall, and though he spent an uncomfortable time searching for it in the deep dust of the roadway, he won't say in the end with curiosity unsated. Fate had reserved that card for a higher purpose.

"I disturbed it, I lay where it had fallen, face upward, not a dozen feet from the front door of the Mountain house, until another day dawned on Mesquite."

Then, in the clear light of that dawn, four more strangers straggled into town—two weary and bagged men, two footsore and bedraggled women. One of these last was dressed in a suit of man's clothing, much the worse for wear. The other members of the party one and all wore the look of people who have escaped the jaws of death by the narrowest of imaginable squeals.

At sight of the Mountain house the party betrayed slight symptoms of a more cheerful spirit: rejoicing in its promise of food and drink and beds within wherein to sleep, the four quickened their steps.

But of a sudden one of the women—the one who wore the garment of her sex—uttered a low cry, a shrill with terror, and clutching the arm of the man nearest her, pointed down to the card that stared up from the dust at her feet.

It was a Troy of Hearts.

II—FULL FLIGHT.

"Oh, what can it mean?" Rose whispered brokenly, clinging to her lover's arm. "Surely you don't think . . . Surely it must be accidental . . . Surely I can't mean—"

"I'm afraid it does," Alan Law responded gravely, ereing the front of the Mountain house. "Our luck holds consistently—that's all. It wouldn't be us if we didn't pick out the one place where Marrophat and Jimmy choose to stop over night. Fortunately, it's early: I doubt they're up. With half a shoe we ought to be able to find some way of putting a good distance between us and this town before they waken . . . Tom!"

But Mr. Barcus was already at his elbow, in thorough sympathy with Alan's intention, and the significance to be attached to the card that trembled in Rose's hand.

motor car over there, in front of the blacksmith's. Probably we can hire her—"

"Trine's car!" Alan exclaimed, staring round and recognizing the automobile at a glance. "Then he's here, as well!"

"Looks like it," Barcus admitted. "But so much the better. We'll just naturally take the darn' thing off his hands, and I'll bet a dollar there isn't another car within a radius of fifty miles!"

But his confidence was demonstrated to be premature by the discovery, which rewarded the first cursory examination, that the car was very thoroughly out of commission.

Two minutes later, however, their earnest inquiries elicited the fact that the neighboring country was poverty-stricken in respect of motor cars. Mesquite itself boasted two motorcycles whose owners were not inclined to a chance to sell them second-hand at a considerable advance on the retail list price of the machines, when Jimmy said that it was that, within ten minutes from Rose's discovery of that chance-fung warning in the dust, the party was again in rapid motion.

His heavily sleep disturbed by the departure of the machine bearing Barcus and Judith, Seneca Trine roused on an elbow and looked out of the window just in time to see the second motor car, Mesquite itself, headed by the man who Jimmy had seen in the moonlight, Alan steering, Rose in the seat behind.

Sixty seconds later a flaming banner of dust and all that remained to remind Mesquite that Rose had passed that way—that, and a series of passionate screams emanating from the bedcham-bers to hinder the pursuit—never knowing whether the latter lot or gained.

And thus catastrophe befell . . . Round the swelling bosom of a wooded mountain-side the motorcycle swept like a hunted hare, and without the least warning came upon Barcus and Judith, dismounted, Barcus bounding over his cycle and thithering with his motor.

For one horrifying instant collision seemed unavoidable.

And it was impossible to stop the cycle—so brief was all his warning. In desperation Alan chose the outside of the road; and for the space of a single heartbeat thought that he might possibly make it, but with the next realized that he would not—seeing the front wheel swing off over the lip of the slope.

At this he acted sharply and upon sheer instinct. As the cycle fell the road altogether he raised a broken knee by releasing his grasp of the handlebars and straightening out his leg and driving it down forcibly against the roadbed. The effect of this was to lift him bodily from the saddle; the machine shot from beneath him like some strange projectile hurled from the bow of a great gun; and Rose crashed against him in the same instant of a second.

Headings they plunged as one down the hillside, struck its shelving surface a good twenty feet from the brink of the road, and flying apart, tumbling their separate ways down the remainder of the drop and into the friendly shelter of the underbrush.

Something nearly miraculous saved them. Beyond a few scratches and bruises and a severe about a quarter of a mile over yonder. If it's all the same to you people, we might stroll round that way and see what its natural attractions may be—if any. But it's sure a mighty poor sort of a canyon that doesn't lead anywhere."

"Excellent!" Mr. Law interrupted with a bleak smile.

Crooking a deferential arm, Barcus offered it to Judith.

"Everything is lovely in the formal garden," he insisted—"so sweetly romantic. Are you game for an idle stunter, just to while the idle hours away?"

The woman found spirit enough for a weak smile as she tucked her hand gratefully beneath his arm.

"You're the cheeriest soul I ever met," she said demurely. "What I'm going to do without you when it ever—we get out of this awful business."

"Let's talk of something else," he suggested heartily.

"Unless, of course," she pursued with unbroken gravity, "I marry you . . ."

"Heaven, the young man prayed fervently, 'for real!'"

"That is hardly gallant—"

"I mean—beaten forward that you should throw yourself away!"

"Rumph!" she mused. "Perhaps you're right." Their banter was not without a subtle object, namely to reassure the girl who followed, supported by her lover's arm.

In the course of the last twenty-four hours Rose's jealousy of her sister's awkward friendliness with Alan had become acutely evident. The least conceivable circumstance now and again demanded the easiest climbing, when Alan stole back to Judith and reported that, on the evidence of observation and belief, he was convinced that the pursuit had turned back—perhaps for want of ammunition, perhaps to extenuate some less hazardous attempt upon the lives of the fugitives.

Without delay, then, he made the tree end of the rope fast round his own waist and, following the way Barcus had chosen, began the ascent.

Two-thirds of the climb had been accomplished, and Rose and Barcus had arrived in safety at the top, before the temptation to look down proved irresistible.

Alan shuddered and swallowed hard before resuming the ascent.

Another twenty feet, however, brought him to a ledge quite six feet wide, offering a broad and easy path to the summit. He gained this with a prayer of heartfelt relief and was on the point of raising to his feet when a cry of horror from Barcus and a scream of terror from Rose, watching over the upper edge, warned him barely in time to enable him to snatch at and grasp a knob of rock before Judith's weight suddenly centered the rope between them and jerked Alan's legs from under him.

His feet and legs kicking the empty air beyond the lip of the ledge, he lay face downward, clutched desperately the knob of rock, praying that it might not come loose.

The fall of twenty feet to the shale roof was nothing. What would follow would, however, spell death. The impact of her body would set the shale in motion, like an avalanche beyond the saves was only emptiness and the howling-screams of the chasm, a hundred feet below!

The great ponder from his face the rate. His eyes started in their sockets. The blood streamed in his ears with a roar resembling distant thunder. His fingers grew numb, his throat dry . . .

He felt that he could not hold on another instant when, abruptly, that torture was no more. The rope had been relieved of its burden. He heard a scream from below echoed by one from above, then the thump of Judith's body falling on the shale, then the uttering rumble of the landslide gathering momentum.

Barcus, at length aroused, assisted him to a place of security. Spent and faint and sick with horror, he lay prone, shuddering.

Only the assurance that Judith had somehow escaped being precipitated over the edge of the shale roof roused him and gave him nerve enough to resume the climb.

It was true, when he found courage to look and see for himself, she lay within three yards of the brink, motionless, her face upturned to the sun, staring—she dared not stir; a single movement was calculated to set the shale bed again in motion.

Painfully he realized that if, as Barcus guessed, she had deliberately cut the rope, Barcus, Judith had offered up her life to spare his own.

IV—RETRIBUTION.

And yet the very consciousness of the girl's danger—the all the smallest that Alan needed to recall him to himself.

Once arrived with Barcus at the top of the cliff, he lost no time in setting about preparations to effect her rescue.

In this business, Fortune smiled upon him, so it was, by predisposition.

A broad roadway ran along the top of the precipice, turning off, at a little distance to the right, to descend the mountain-side. And just beyond this turning formation had chosen to locate the camp of a hydraulic mining operation.

Alan's appearance at the top, in fact, was coincident with the arrival at that point of half a dozen excited miners, and he had no more than voiced his demands than three of their number were hastening back to the camp to procure rope and more hands.

Within five minutes Alan, assisted the protests of Rose and Barcus, was being lowered over the edge and down to the shale roof, on which he landed at a spot far to one side of Judith, so as to escape all danger of sending a second landslide down the brink.

Picking his way carefully down to the very brink, Alan edged along this, more than once saved a fall to death only by the rope, until he stood immediately below Judith.

Then pausing, he instructed her carefully, tossed the end of the rope into her hands, and when she had wound it twice round her arms, crept up to her side and helped her make it fast about her body.

His signal to the miners that all was well elicited prompt response. There was a giddy interval in which the two swung perilously between heaven and earth. Then they stood once more in safety.

Supported by sympathetic hands, the quivering stage into camp, their story, commended by Barcus and breathlessly confirmed by Alan, already winning them enthusiastic champions.

And this was very well for them. For they had no more than seated themselves and begun to appreciate what perils they had just escaped, when the rumble of a motor car sounded beyond the shoulder of the hill.

Startled by this alarm once more into full command of his flagging faculties, Alan rose and started into the roadway, taking quick cognizance of such facilities as he detected on the steeply sloping hillside, and issuing instructions with a voice vibrant with fear, not for his own safety, but for the safety of those whom he loved.

Not far from the point where the road swung from the cliff to thread the camp the hydraulic machine was in action, its terrible force of water mashing the mountain-side away ton by ton.

Toward this Barcus ran at top speed, gaining the men in charge of the machine just as the car swung round the bend.

Pausing only long enough to make certain that there could be no mistake—and having this certainty made doubly sure by Jimmy's action in releasing him from his seat and firing over the windmilled pointblank at Alan as this last stood waiting in the roadway—Barcus and the miner swung the machine round until it bore directly on the car.

The power of its stream was such that the car was checked instantly in its track; and before the water could have been shifted off or the stream inverted, the machine was driven back to the very lip of the cliff and over it completely, taking with it those who had been sitting on it. The stream of Seneca Trine of late had been enormous.

A death that was merciful, in that it was instantaneous, awaited them at the foot of the cliff. (To be continued.)

Fumbled in His Coat Pocket and Brought Forth a Playing Card.

ber of Seneca Trine, where the cripple lay possessed by seven devils of insensate malice.

His screams brought attendance; but it was a matter of many precious minutes before his demands could be met, and Marrophat, who hurried roused from their capricious slumbers in adjoining chambers; and half an hour elapsed before the chauffeur, roused from his own well-earned rest, succeeded in convincing the pair that pursuit with the motor car was out of the question until he had spent at least half the day overhauling the motor and mending the mischief that had developed in it.

But the devil takes care of his own: within another half hour what seemed to be sheer, bull-headed, dumb luck brought a camel automobile to Mesquite—a two-seated, high-power racing machine of the latest and speediest pattern, driven by two irresponsible wayfarers who proved only too susceptible to Marrophat's offer of double the cost of the car—4 o. b. Detroit—for its immediate surrender.

The two piled off promptly enough; Marrophat and Jimmy jumped in; Trine from his back window speeded them on their murderous mission.

It must have been an hour later when Alan, checking his motorcycle as it surrounded the summit of a long, upward, looked back and discovered, several miles distant on the far-flung windings of the mountain road, a small crimson shape that ran like a spot of blood through the air.

A motor car, beyond all question, and one of uncommon road-developing quality. It sped as might not contain Marrophat and Jimmy, once more in pursuit. Whether or not, latter experience long since schooled Alan in the gentle art of taking no chances.

Barcus and Judith must be overhauled and warned on every matter, since the machine which bore them was, if anything, faster than Alan's, but as the racing automobile was faster than either.

Alan kept his gaze steadfast to the road before them, daring not once to look up and round or back, but continued even to watch their way; but at such frightful speed as they were now making the slightest obstruction was fraught with direct peril; one trifling misstep away from that narrow and tortuous path, and death would be their portion.

So cautious and pondering was its course, indeed, that Alan seldom could see a bendred curve of it ahead, but must peep on in panic flight, hoping for the best—that Judith and Barcus would soon show up in front, that something might happening they escaped unharm. And they were picking themselves up and regaining their breath and recollecting their scattered wits when, with impetus so less terrific than their own had been, the present motor car swung round the bend and hurled itself directly at the two who remained upon the road above.

III—SACRIFICE.

But Tom Barcus hadn't failed to profit by the warning implicit in Alan's accident.

He was therefore on the alert, quick to see the racing automobile when it came hurtling round the bend, and in the very nick of time grasped Judith's arm and swung her bodily with him back out of harm's way, and the tree that bordered the side of the road.

Of necessity his motorcycle suffered. Abandoned in the middle of the road, it was struck by the buffers of the motor car and flung aside as if it had been nothing more ponderable than a mass of straw—landing half-way down the embankment, a hopeless tangle of shattered tubing and twisted wire.

At first Murch the circumstance seemed surprising, that the car did not stop. But then Barcus reminded himself that Marrophat and Jimmy could not possibly have witnessed the accident involving Alan and Rose, who, together with the wreck of their machine, remained well-locked by the underbrush at the bottom of the canyon. In all probability, then, the assassin had assumed that Alan had hurried on; and since their own first business was concerned exclusively with them, they had done likewise.

As for Rose and Alan—Barcus alone knew what had happened to them. So Barcus set himself to find out whatever Providence knew without more delay.

To find them not only alive but practically unscathed affected that loyal soul almost to tears.

But when congratulations had been actually exchanged there fell an awkward pause. The crew of the four-wheeled car, and the man who had been quick with the underbrush but inexpressible inquiry: What next?

In the end, it was Mr. Barcus who advanced the suggestion which was adopted—though this was his reception more through lack of a better than for any actual appeal intrinsic in the proposition.

"When we broke down, up there," he ventured, with a backward jerk of his thumb to indicate the road, "I saw a canyon branching off from this one that he show Judith or seem a boor, was enough to cloud the countenance of Alan's betrothed.

Silently and painfully these four toiled along an obscure trail that followed the windings of the little river, until a branch struck into the main stream and so discovered to them yet another trail leading into the westward canyon.

They again slowly and painfully they plodded on, following blindly another trail blazed by Fate as blind as they.

Above them, on the road they had abandoned, the crimson racer doubled back to the point where it had passed Judith and Barcus; its occupants descended, explored, and came presently upon the trail of the fugitives.

Bloodhounds could not have settled down upon a scent with more good-will and eagerness than Mr. Marrophat and his faithful side.

The sun was high and blazing above the canyon when the pursuit came within rifle shot of the mine.

The spiteful crack roused the quartet from a pause of lethargic dismay due to tardy appreciation of the fact that they had penetrated witlessly almost to the end of a blind alley.

A last council of war armed Alan with Judith's revolver and posted him behind a boulder commanding the approaches to the chasm. The weapon, a powerful .45, had a range sufficient to smash the impetuosity of the assassins and keep them under cover and out of sight of the desperate snays the fugitives were making to compass an escape.

For in the shed behind an abandoned log cabin—sovereign, no doubt, of some forgotten prospector—Barcus had unearthed a length of stout hemlock rope.

With the aid of a rusty shovel he had hacked this into two equal lengths. One of these lengths he proceeded to make fast round his own waist, then round Rose's. The other he left to be similarly employed by Alan and Judith, after it was agreed that they must climb, and while the cliff offered no problem to desert a mountaineer's any pretensions, it was considered best that the fugitives should be hitched up in pairs against any possible peril. The pairing and being deposited by the fact that Barcus boasted some experience in mountaineering, while Rose was plainly the most unskilled of the two women, Alan was able to help himself in an emergency.

He had worked his cautious way, with the girl in tow, to a point about midway up the face of the cliff, following a long diagonal that provided

Declares Alderman Did Not Tell the Whole Story When Opposing Mayor's Veto.

Mayor James G. Woodward, in a statement issued Saturday in connection with his veto of the resolution training the salary of City Electrician R. C. Turner from $1,850 to $2,400 per annum, comes back strong at Alderman John S. Candler.

Alderman Candler took the floor in council last Monday to advocate the adoption of the resolution providing for the increase. He also led the fight in the Germanic board. The alderman sustained Mayor Woodward's veto by failing to concur in council's favorable action.

The mayor's statement follows:
"I do not care to be drawn into any controversy with Judge Candier or anyone else over the matter of my former vote of the Turner slavery, but Judge Candier, in his correction at the meeting of the aldermanic board, should [redacted] told the whole story and not related a little part to suit his own con-

"It is true with him, as well as myself that at a meeting of the salary committee of my office a year ago, we both favored the fact that the police department was according to its standing and duties. What caused this discussion was an effort of mine to try to consolidate all the electrical work of the city under one heading, that is, the police alarm systems and fire alarm systems and waterworks electric lighting. I was under the impression, as I had stated, that the city would be willing to pay considerable money by consolidating all the electrical affairs of the city under one head.

"Judge Candier took the position at that time that the position of that character was worth $2,400 per year, but he did not believe that Turner was the man for the job and I agreed with him there, and the understanding in my office was that Judge Candier favored the $2,400, provided the whole electrical business of the city was consolidated, otherwise he was opposed to paying Turner $2,400 per year. This is the whole story."

J. F. Letton, manager of the Wine-coff hotel, who engaged in a fight with his house officer, Harry Sapphire, last Saturday night, will answer a charge of assault and battery in Judge Ridley's division of the municipal court Monday morning. Both Letton and Sapphire appeared Friday in the recorder's court to answer a charge of disorderly conduct, caused by this same encounter. Manager Letton was fined $8.75, while the case against the house officer was dismissed.

Fully 100 delegates are expected to attend the conferences on Belgian immigration to Georgia farm lands, to be held in Atlanta, Tuesday morning, at 10 o'clock at the Piedmont hotel.

The delegates will be composed of members of special committees appointed by many counties and cities throughout the state, to push the Belgian Immigration question; representatives of the leading railroads, who are said to be backing the movement; delegates from chambers of commerce and other trade bodies; representatives from civil organizations; large landowners; real estate men and other interested parties from many points.

The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the wisdom of forming a permanent organization to bring good Belgian refugee farmers and their families, now in England, France and Holland, to Georgia, to settle the unoccupied farm lands of this section.

The local committee, headed by R. F. Snedden, has been actively engaged for several weeks in preparing for the convention.

Albany, Ga., November 21.—(Special.)—A large crowd watched the entire fire department, with its hose from the city hall, and a line of firemen from the three-story Woolfolk building, at the corner of Pine and Washington streets, had its upper story cut off by flames. The fire started in a lodge room and after smoldering all night, burst through the roof. The Georgia National bank, the Postal Telegraph building, the Albany Hotel and a number of other tenants were flooded out and the upper story was left a mass of wreckage. The loss will approximately be $100,000, but seems to be pretty well covered by insurance.

The state board of health has inaugurated a system of bulletins, designed to educate the superintendents of public and private water supplies throughout the state on matters pertaining to the better supervision of their filtering plants. These bulletins will be sent out from time to time, each one dealing with various subjects.

Bulletins Nos. 1 and 2 were sent out

The work and preparation of the bulletin is being carried on under the supervision of Ray C. Warner, who has the assistance of a bacteriologist, expert supervision and analytical control of water supplies. Mr. Warner is an expert consulting chemist and bacteriologist.

Bulletin No. 1 deals with the subject of "Typhoid Fever—Its Origin, Prevalence and Transmission by Polluted Water." Bulletin No. 2 takes up "Typhoid Death Rates in Relation to Impure Water."

The efficient money is appropriated for this excellent work during the coming year it will be extended in its

The police are looking for a young man dressed in a blue suit who received 15 cents worth of medicine and charged for $5 in exchange for a one-dollar bill, which he had "raised" to the five-dollar denomination.

Friday evening the Cox Prescription Shop, on Peachtree street, received a call from 33 Ellis street, to send out a package for the value of 25 cents and the change for $1. As the messenger boy was approaching the designated address, a young man stepped to the curb and asked for the package and the change for the five-dollar bill. When the messenger boy returned to the drug store he discovered the clever game of which he had been the victim.

Mrs. Rhoda A. King, a sad faced young woman, has filed divorce proceedings against her husband charging that he lived a gay and reckless life along the white way while she was forced to subsist on beans. Besides that, she also charges he was cruel and negligent. She is represented by Attorneys Gober & Jackson. The suit was filed Saturday morning.
