

the fourth floor of the pencil factory. Before the stereotyped questions could be put to her she asserted her absolute faith in the innocence of Frank, and said she would be willing to die almost to prove his innocence. She said she had heard slighting remarks made about him after the commission of the crime, but that she did not care—that she knew him to be the soul of honor and kindness.

These were the main features of the proceedings Friday. At the morning session Mrs. Rae Frank, mother of the accused, was again placed on the stand. Her testimony was of minor importance, and on cross-examination she was questioned principally as to her husband's financial affairs.

Many of the girl employees of the National Pencil factory took the stand Saturday and testified to Frank's good character.

Speculation on the Frank Trial POLITICS RELEGATED TO BACKGROUND Absorbs the Small-Town Loafers

BY BRIT CRAIG.
There is a subtle fascination in viewing a big murder trial through the newspapers, especially if the reviewer lives in a small town, where a barber shop, a grocery store, and a bunch of the public square constitute the centers of discussion.

There is not a hamlet or wayside, city or township in Georgia that is not submerged, head over heels, in interest in the Frank case. It is as widespread as it is tragic, and there are hundreds in remote sections of the state who do not know the initials of the president but who can tell you as much about the Frank trial as some of the newspaper men who are reporting it.

Atlanta sees and hears the Frank case. It is a part of Atlanta, and Atlanta is so thoroughly saturated with it that the two have become intimate. But, to Atlanta, it is nothing more than a sordidly sensational tragedy that weighs upon the mind with a depressing effect. Atlanta is more of a witness to an affliction, a sort of which Atlanta wants to be rid. There is nothing about it enjoyable, except to the morbidly curious ones who have the striking sensationalism and sickening gawdiness.

Who testified to Frank's good character.

MISS LOVEY HAYES,
Who testified she saw Frank a few minutes after murder was committed.

Small-Town Reader Sees It. Yet it is limited daily in the mind of the small-town reader.

And they discuss the case! Everywhere it is talked. On corners, in stores, in homes, anywhere, everywhere, all the time. They have views, strange views, absurd, accurate, plausible. Theories, too, worlds of them. There is the small-town lawyer who sits the boardroom table and deals in theories of this and theories of that, the eager gossip, who heard someone say such-and-such, and shows good reasons for believing it.

TRIAL'S THIRD WEEK REPLETE WITH SENSATIONAL INCIDENTS Strong Points Scored by Defense

By far the main feature of the evidence brought out during the third week of the Frank trial was the testimony of pedestrians in the uptown district and residents of the vicinity in which Frank lives, to the effect that the accused man had been seen calmly walking around only a few minutes after the time the murder is claimed to have been committed.

This chain of testimony, forged with a number of links, has established a seemingly unbreakable corroboration of Frank's account of his whereabouts during the time he was gone from the factory for dinner. One person saw him leaving the factory, a girl saw him at Whitehall and Alabama streets, and a woman resident of George avenue saw him get off the car near his home.

his penchant for borrowing money which she seldom returned.

A number of girls and women testified that not only would they not believe the negro on his oath, but they would not believe any negro on his oath.

A dramatic incident of the week was the outburst of the mother in the courtroom, when she blazed upon the solicitor during an attack upon her son's character.

There followed an effort on the part of Dorsey to exclude Frank's wife and mother from the courtroom, which was warmly contested by the defense. Judge Roan's ruling admitted the two women under condition that they allow no further outburst under penalty of future exclusion.

BIRDWOMAN NOT HURT BY A FALL OF 200 FEET

Milleda, L. L., August 15.—Mrs. Mary Summs, a wealthy young widow of New York and who has been taking flying lessons at the Hempstead aviation field, was saved from death today by the fact that she was strapped in the seat of her monoplane when it turned turtle at the height of 200 feet. When the wrecked machine was lifted, the woman aviator emerged smiling and only slightly injured.

Prisoner's Mother Questioned As to Wealth of Frank Family

Mrs. Rae Frank, mother of Leo Frank, resumed the stand at the opening of the morning session Saturday. Under cross-examination by Solicitor Dorsey, she was forced to tell much of her business interests in Brooklyn, her home, and that of many of her relatives.

She was questioned first on direct examination by Mr. Rosser.

"Has your son, Leo Frank, any rich relatives in Brooklyn?"

"When you opened this letter which he wrote to his uncle, where there are other papers in the envelope?"

"Yes."

"Did you recognize the handwriting of your son?"

"Yes."

Cross-examination by Dorsey.

"What kind of papers were in the envelope?"

"I don't know, except they were some kind of reports about prices."

"You never had this price list in your hand?"

"No."

"Where was it read to you?"

"In my brother-in-law's room in the Hotel McAlpin, New York city."

"What kind of business is he in?"

"In the retail cigar business."

"Where is your other son-in-law?"

"I don't know. I don't keep up with them all the time. I have enough of my own to attend to."

"$20,000 Out at Interest."

"What are the amounts of your tax returns?"

"I have no estate other than my home."

"How do you provide a livelihood?"

"We have a little money out at interest."

"How much?"

"About $20,000."

"How much is the worth of your home?"

"I don't know, except that we pay $85 taxes."

"How much is the mortgage on the home?"

"$8,000."

"What did you pay for this home?"

"$4,000 and assumed the mortgage."

"How much notes did you give?"

"I'm no business woman and don't know."

"The home, then, cost you at least $10,000?"

"How long have you owned it?"

"Five or six years."

"How much do you now owe on it?"

"Daily the mortgage."

"However, you more than $20,000 loaned out?"

"No."

Husband Not at Work.

"What business is your husband in?"

"Nothing at present."

"In other words, then, he is a retired capitalist?"

"Yes, exactly."

"What other kinspeople have you in Brooklyn?"

"Two sisters."

"Mrs. Bennett and Mrs. Jacobs?"

"What do they do for a living?"

"Miss Jacobs works. Mrs. Bennett is married."

"Where is it Frank's uncle lives?"

"Here in Atlanta."

"Does he spend any of his time in Brooklyn?"

"Yes, he visits us frequently."

"He is very wealthy, isn't he?"

"He is supposed to be."

"What rate of interest does your $20,000 draw?"

"Six per cent."

"How much of this amount belongs to you?"

"About $3,000."

"How much cash has your husband in the bank?"

"I don't know exactly, but would say $200."

Rosser resuming direct examination:

"How old is your husband, Mrs. Frank?"

"Sixty-seven."

"He is broke in health?"

"Yes, and it was impossible for him to come here."

Strike Closes Mine.

GIRL CALLED BY DEFENSE SWEARS FRANK ENTERED GIRLS' DRESSING ROOMS

When the defense called Miss Irene Jackson, the pretty 18-year-old daughter of A. W. Jackson, county policeman, to the stand Saturday morning to testify as to the good character of Frank, they placed in the hands of the prosecution what is probably the most powerful weapon they have had or will have to strike at the good name of the accused.

No more cool or level-headed a witness has been placed on the stand by either side than Miss Jackson. At all times she weighed her answers carefully and deliberately. At every question her massive features showed but the calmest calculation. Therefore when she was questioned by Arnold as to Frank's character the lukewarmness of her replies occasioned some little surprise, but when she was turned over to Dorsey for cross-examination her testimony that on three different occasions Leo Frank had opened the door to the women's dressing room and gazed upon her and others in various stages of disabillie fell like a thunder-bolt in the camp of the defense.

Arnold made a brave effort to cover, by trying to show that Frank had issued orders against flirting out of the girls' dressing room windows, but when Dorsey once more got the witness she testified that the forelady could have come into the room as well as Frank to see whether the girls were flirting, and that furthermore, that when Frank did come in the door he did not mention the subject of flirting, or give any other excuse for his presence.

Girl Was Undressing.

Miss Jackson testified that once when Frank came to the door Miss Ermilie Mayfield was undressing and that Frank smiled at her, or twisted his features into an expression "which she supposed was meant for a smile."

Arnold asked Miss Jackson whether she worked at the National Pencil factory.

She stated that she did not, but had formerly worked there for about three years up until two days after the murder.

"Why did you quit work there?" asked Arnold.

"My father made me."

"Do you know Leo M. Frank?"

"Yes."

"Are you able to testify as to his character?"

"It is all right, I suppose."

"First, Miss Jackson, you must answer the question showing whether you know enough about his character to say whether or not it was good or bad."

She paused a moment.

"I don't know whether I do or not."

She was turned over to the prosecution for cross-examination.

Dorsey asked her:

"What did you hear the other girls say about Frank?"

"They were afraid of him, and didn't have much to say."

"They were afraid of him?"

"Yes. Whenever he would come around they would all get to work again right hard."

"What about one day when Frank came to the door of the girls' dressing room when you were in there?"

"He came to the door one morning when Ermilie Mayfield and myself were in there."

"What did he do?"

"He just pushed open the door and looked in and walked away."

"The door was shut and he pushed it open?"

"The door was just pushed to—and there was no way to fasten it—and he pushed it open."

"Were you dressed?"

"And Miss Mayfield?"

"She was undressing."

"Miss Mayfield was partly undressed?"

"Yes. She had off her top dress and held her old work dress in her hand."

"What did Miss Mayfield do about Frank's looking in at her?"

Girl Reported Frank.

"She reported it to the forelady."

Mrs. Jackson then testified:

"Did you start to quit?"

"No. My sister started to quit once."

"Did Mr. Darley ask you about quitting?"

"Yes. When papa told me to quit after the murder, he asked me if I were going to quit. I said papa would make me. And Mr. Darley said that the girls that stuck to them through this examination wouldn't lose anything."

"Did Darley tell anyone else that?"

"I don't know."

"Did anyone else hear it when he told you?"

"Clara Stewart was sitting there and heard it."

"Did you ever hear others talking about Frank going into the girls' dressing room?"

"Yes."

"You were willing to work on?"

"Yes. I had some bills I wanted to pay."

"Did you ever hear of girls flirting out these windows with people passing on the street?"

"Yes."

Hooper objected to this question as leading the witness. Arnold stated that he wanted to show that Frank had attempted to put a stop to girls flirting out the dressing room windows. Judge Roan ruled in favor of the prosecution.

"When Frank looked in, was your sister fully dressed?"

"Yes. I was dressed, too."

Frank Said Nothing.

"Did Frank say anything?"

"He said nothing."

"Were you fully dressed when you were in the dressing room with Ermilie Mayfield?"

"Yes. I was not fully dressed when I was in the room with Mary Kitchen, though."

"What did you have on?"

"I had on my undershirt, but no top skirt."

Arnold laid particular stress in his cross-examination on the fact that none of the girls seen in the dressing room by Frank were ever more undressed than simply having off their top skirts, and that Frank did not enter the room, but merely stood in the doorway.

Dorsey again took the witness.

"Could Frank tell before opening the door whether the girls were dressed or undressed?"

"No."

"What time was it when Frank looked in?"

"Just a few minutes after 7 o'clock."

"You had just come to work and had to change your dresses?"

"Yes."

"The girls had registered on?"

"Yes. Did Frank see you register on?"

"I don't know."

"Could he have seen you register on?"

"He could if he had looked."

"When did you stop work?"

"She wanted to stop on the day that Frank looked in the dressing room and saw her lying down, but the forelady persuaded her to stay on. She quit soon afterwards."

"Did Frank smile when he looked in the door?"

"He smiled at Ermilie Mayfield."

"He smiled?"

"He twisted his face or did something which I thought was meant for a smile."

"Did Frank ever say anything about the girls flirting when he looked in the door?"

"The forelady could have looked in the room just as well as Frank to see if everything was all right while the girls were dressing, couldn't she?"

"Yes."

The witness was then dismissed.

COMMERCIAL SCIENCE COURSE OPEN AT TECH

Georgia Tech will offer this fall a three-year course in commercial science, an opportunity for the business men of Atlanta, both young and old, to get collegiate work in commerce, accounts, finance and commercial law.

The lectures will be held in the early evening hours (around 6 to 8 p. m.) A complete booklet and description of these studies and lectures has been published by the school of commerce, and is being distributed to those interested in business education.

Frank to Tell His Own Story Monday Afternoon to Jury Which Will Decide His Fate

That Leo Frank will take the stand Monday afternoon is the statement of his attorneys Saturday afternoon, who predicted that the defense would be able to close its side at the end of the Monday session.

It is now a settled fact that the accused man will make a statement. Heretofore there has been much speculation over this prospect. Some were inclined to think that no statement would be made by the defendant, while scores of others, who gave attention to his story at the coroner's inquest, felt assured that he would take the stand.

Under the Georgia law, he cannot be examined either directly by his own attorneys or indirectly by counsel for the prosecution. His own story will be told without effort at support or contradiction, and he will come from the stand immediately upon its completion.

Long List of Girls Testify To Frank's Good Character

Another important development was made public yesterday when it was learned that the defense will examine every girl and woman employee of the pencil factory, 150 or more in number. This will occupy all the morning session Monday and part of the afternoon proceedings. A large number of employees already have been placed upon the stand.

They will be asked regulation questions regarding Frank's character and scenes they have witnessed in his office, whether or not they have gone to his office or elsewhere with him for immoral purposes.

It is also hinted that a strong effort will be made to impeach Jim Conley on the testimony of pencil factory employees. A majority of these workers who have already testified have declared that they would not believe the negro on oath.

Case May Reach Jury Wednesday.
Both counsel for the defense and state express the belief that the case will go to the jury not later than Wednesday night.

The prosecution, it is rumored, will put more than fifty new witnesses in rebuttal to evidence produced by the defense. Chief of this new testimony, it is rumored, is the statement of the little 11-year-old girl who was recently brought from Cincinnati by Mrs. Mary Bohmefeld for the express purpose of testifying in the Frank trial.

Pretty Women at Frank Trial

That Pinkertons Double-Crossed Police, Dorsey Tries to Prove

With the introduction of W. D. MacWorth, the Pinkerton detective who discovered the blood spots on the floor near the trap door and the bloody cloth and pay envelope nearby, came the verification of a rumor that the prosecution would try to show an attempt on the part of the Pinkertons in the employ of the National Pencil factory to double-cross the police. This came when Dorsey sought to prove that the Pinkertons had tried to conceal from the police the fact of the discovery of the club, piece of buggy whip and the pay envelope.

"Not blood stains—stains." "Didn't you say in your report to headquarters that they were blood-stains?" "I can't say they were blood spots. How can you find the cord being the radiator?" "I was tracing the stains. I didn't know where they would lead." At this point of the cross-examination a dispute arose between the prosecution and the defense over a severe complaint made by Mr. Rosser to the appearance in the courtroom of an officer who brought a message to John Starnes, Dorsey, upon seeing Herbert Schiff, a witness, sitting beside Frank, asked the judge to order Schiff from the room. He was forced to leave.

"Did you work on the Phagan case?" "Yes, I made several searches of the factory premises." "Did you search the ground floor on the 15th of May? What did you find?" "I found seven stains that resembled blood near the trap door by the elevator. Upon searching behind the radiator, I also found a piece of wrapping cord that looked as though it had been freshly cut at one end. The radiator on the side against the wall was packed with rubbish and trash. There were papers in the trash dated as early as January 13, 1913, which indicated that it had been there only a short while.

Witness Denies Conversation.
Dorsey then addressed the witness. "Didn't any such conversation occur?" "No." "Did they call your attention to a $5?" "No." "What money did Mary Phagan get on the day of the murder?" "One dollar and twenty cents, I think." Dorsey then showed MacWorth the report supposed to have been made by him which stated that the last figure in Mary Phagan's pay was "5."

Various Distances to Factory Measured by Civil Engineer

A. Thomas, a civil engineer, who measured the distance from Marletta and Forsyth streets along Forsyth to the pencil plant and who also timed himself in walking the distance, was put on the stand following Mrs. Frank. Direct examination by Arnold. "Did you measure the distance from the intersection of Forsyth at Marletta along Forsyth street to the National Pencil factory?" "Yes, it is 1,016 feet." "Did you walk over it to test the time?" "Yes, at a moderate pace it took me four and a half minutes." "Did you measure the distance from the factory along Forsyth street to Alabama and along Alabama to Whitehall?" "Yes, the distance is 830 feet. Walking at the same rate, I reached White-

Reporter Tells How Conley Went Through Phantomine

The last witness to be called to the stand on Saturday was Harilee Branch, a reporter for the Atlanta Journal. He was called upon to testify in regard to an interview he had with Jim Conley, as set forth in the Journal in an issue of May 31, 1913, and as to the pantomime which Conley gave in the pencil factory to show just how his part of the disposal of the body was executed.

Branch was shown the copy of the Journal containing the interview in question and identified it. He repeated the substance of his interview with Conley, being that of the Journal's story. Rosser asked him: "Did he tell you that it took thirty minutes to dispose of the body?" "Yes."

Stress Time Element.
Dorsey, on cross-examination, asked whether Branch was accurate about the time. Branch qualified his statement by the word "about."

"Where was Conley when you had the interview with him?" asked Dorsey. "He was in the jail." "Were you at the plant with him, and did you see him go through the actions, step by step?" "Yes." Rosser objected to the witness testifying to Conley's portrayal in the pencil factory. Judge Roan overruled Rosser's objection, and Branch was allowed to trace on the diagram the movements of the body.

Slender Little Factory Woman Eulogizes Frank While on Stand

The most fluent and probably the most ardent witness as to the good character of Frank was Mrs. Cora Barnes, who when placed on the stand Saturday morning, proceeded into such an impassioned enumeration of his virtues that Mr. Dorsey waived the asking of the legal set questions by the defense. She is a slender little woman with Auburn hair.

"Who subpoenaed you?" "I haven't been subpoenaed." "How, then, did you get into the courtroom and on the witness stand?" "Mr. Arnold came down to Mr. Frank's office one day last week and asked me whether I knew anything good or bad about Mr. Frank, and I told him that I thought he was innocent. Then he told me he would want me here."

"Then somebody did talk to you about the case?" "I hadn't thought about that?" The witness was dismissed. Other women employees of the National Pencil factory who testified that Frank's character was good were Mrs. Sarah Barnes, Miss Mollie Blair and Miss Ethel Stewart.

TEN MEN ARE ARRESTED AFTER A BLOODY RIOT

Erie, Pa., August 18.—Ten men were arrested today in connection with the rioting here last night in which three were shot. None of the injured is seriously hurt. George Hall and Kenneth Lapsley, detectives, and Alexander Orewski, a strike-breaker, are held on charges of shooting with intent to kill.

The rioting was the first serious development of the molders' strike, which has been in effect ten months, and which involves 1,500 men. No outward signs were visible today of the trouble, but an undercurrent of unrest prevailed to such an extent that the advisability of calling the state constabulary was under consideration. One of the rioters under arrest is Joseph Novak, who was released two days ago from the penitentiary where he had served a long sentence for a similar offense. He is said to have been the leader of the demonstration.

TWENTY PER CENT PAY FOR TEACHERS MONDAY

Board Takes Up Renewal of Contracts September 29—Text of McCrory Resolution

Everything is in readiness for the payment of a 20 per cent dividend to the school teachers tomorrow. The governor has borrowed $475,000 and there are funds in the treasury which bring the sum up to about $310,000. This will be sufficient to pay 20 per cent of the year's appropriation. Superintendent of Schools Brittain has been at work for the past two days allotting their proportions of the fund to the various counties. He will have completed his work by Monday and the money can be paid out. After a conference Saturday between the governor and the state superintendent of education in regard to the matter of renewing the contracts for books now in use in the public schools the following resolution was adopted:

The state board of education announces that at its next regular meeting on September 20 consideration will be given to the question of making new contracts for the books now in use in the common schools of the state as provided by law. At this time in all probability the board will arrange to hear from the different publishers with regard to their rates prior to the adoption on October 27, 1913.

Signed: JOHN M. MCCRORY, Governor and Ex. Officer; W. L. BRANT, Superintendent of Schools; A. J. Ex. Officer; Secretary.

McCrory Resolution

The McCrory resolution in its final form as it passed the legislature and will be signed by the governor will be of much interest to teachers and is as follows: Whereas the contract for books for the public schools of the state expires this year and

Whereas it appears that the present prices paid for school books are excessive and that it is the duty of the state to secure the best possible results at the least expense, and

Resolved, That the board of education be authorized to make a complete revision of the books now in use in the common schools of the state and to make such changes as may be necessary to secure the best possible results at the least expense.

Away With Worthless Makershifts

Niney nine out of every hundred men who suffer from urinary troubles are afflicted with makershifts. These are the most worthless of all remedies and do nothing to cure the disease.

The Only Thing Good Enough To Stand a 60 Day Test

There is only one thing good enough to stand a 60 day test. It is the only medicine that will cure urinary troubles without causing any harm to the system.

McMichael had informed Irvine he would receive a weekly salary until he had corroborated Mulhall's testimony. "I have a contract to begin after this hearing but I don't think you have any right to inquire into my private business," retorted McMichael when pressed for details.

The committee finally required a fuller answer. He gets $75 a week. "I am under a verbal agreement—not one in writing," began McMichael.

McMichael testified today that the pawnbrokers raised $7,500 to defeat the bill and McMichael was to get $6,000. He swore that the conference at which that was arranged took place in April 1911.

Back of Certain Dollars

Attorney Smith led McMichael back to certain figures in Washington and asked him about McMichael's share in them.

during the next ten months the surplus will probably be a million dollars. The income of next year cannot be estimated definitely, because no one can tell how much the tax equalization and the inheritance tax laws will yield.

Unquestionably the state's fiscal system has been put on a sound business basis though it will take a year or two to recover entirely from the lapses of the last several years.

Registration Difficulties Removed

Objections to existing registration laws have been in the main removed by Governor Slaton's permanent registration act.

A farmer may send his tax money to the courthouse by a neighbor or through the mails, and if received within the time prescribed by law the certificate—that is, if he is already registered and has not removed from his district or county and has complied with the law about paying taxes.

Having gotten all of his administration program passing immediate action through the assembly, he has established a reputation for a man of action.

Several measures viewed as administrative bills did not get through, because of the lack of time, but in each case they can be introduced next year without loss or harm to the state.

It removes the objections to the present military law by repealing the provision requiring the governor to declare a state of insurrection in any community where he sends troops.

Slaton Adds to His Popularity

The splendid results of the recent session have added much to Governor Slaton's popularity.

Probably the most popular thing done by the new administration so far is the appointment of Judge John C Hart state tax commissioner.

Harry Glenn Has Close Call When Rear Tire Blows Out At Motordrome Saturday

Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, the popular rider at Jack Prince's motordrome, escaped death by a hair's breadth on the drome track last night when he burst a rear tire in the third lap of the second heat of the Valedrome de Buffalo sweepstakes. Glenn was unhurt.

The 5-mile run of the second heat had just begun and Harry was doing a mile in about 45 when the accident happened. He had just crossed the starting line for the second time when the rear tire went up with a bang and writhed around the rear wheel.

Nothing but Glenn's level head and skillful handling of his machine saved his life. Quickly he shut off his power and dropped off the track. The crowd stood up and held their breath until the Atlanta boy was safely on the runway. He rolled around the runway to the pits on his rim and the crowd cheered him.

The Valedrome de Buffalo sweepstakes, which is based upon the French point system, did not prove a howling success, mainly by reason of the fact that many did not understand it.

An exciting feature of the night was the dead heat finish of Swartz and Lochner in the third heat of the special three-cornered match race. The heat was run off in a 1-mile race, Swartz finishing in 43.2-5.

In the second heat of this race Graves gave Swartz a run for the money when he passed him near the finish, but was unable to hold his place against the flying Dutchman. Here are the summaries:

Motordrome Purses.
(Heats, 1 mile, final, 2 miles.)
First Heat—Graves, first, Swartz, second. Time, 41.2-5 seconds.
Second Heat—Renel, first; Lochner, second. Time, 43.2-5 seconds.
Third Heat—First, Renel, second; Swartz, third. Time, 1.24-5.
Special Match Race.
(First heat 1 mile, second heat 2 miles, third heat 3 miles. Two best out of three to win.)
First Heat—Graves, first, Swartz, second, Lochner, third. Time, 43 seconds.
Second Heat—Swartz, first, Graves, second, Lochner, third. Time, 43.2-5 seconds.
Valedrome de Buffalo Sweepstakes.
(First heat 3 miles, second heat 5 miles, third heat 7 miles. French point system.)
First Heat—Richard, first, Luther, second. Time, 3.19-1-5.
Second Heat—Richard, first, Renel, second, Luther, third. Time, 3.45-1-5.
Third Heat—Glenn, first, Richards, second. Time, 3.59-1-5.
Richard won with a total of 38 points.

Manager Becker, of the Overland Southern Auto Company, Showing the Merits of the New 1914 Overland Car

MANAGER BECKER SHOWING OVERLAND.

Specifications of the new models of the Overland car, just announced by the Willys-Overland company, Toledo, Ohio, and just received in Atlanta by the Overland Southern Automobile company, reveals a line applying three body designs to the same chassis construction. In keeping with the policy of the Overland company, not to announce new models to the public until prospective buyers may view the new product in the showroom of the dealer, this announcement, through the Overland Southern Automobile company, also does the same thing.

A roomy cowl dash touring body, seating five passengers and finished in dark green with light green stripings and nickel and aluminum trimmings is mounted on a wheel base of 114 inches, its doors are "U" shaped, very wide, and hinged at the front. The steering wheel is 18 inches in diameter and the steering post carries a carburetor adjusting lever within easy reach of the driver's hand.

The radiator of the new Overland cars is of an improved type, with large water spaces.

The touring car and the roadster are electrically lighted, current being furnished from a Willard storage battery carried at the right side of the running board, and the dashboard which illuminates the instruments, such as speedometer, ammeter, etc., is connected with this lighting system, so that the proper working of the lighting is indicated by the dashboard.

The tops are hooked to the brackets of the side rails, which leaves the front of the car unobstructed and certainly aids to the slightness of the covering when the top is up. turbing the camshaft, being held in place by drop forged claws. The operation of the push rods is made almost noiseless by the use of bronze caps fitted over the push rod tops. In order to compensate for the lower volatility of present day gasoline, the intake manifold has been redesigned and given a smaller diameter. The universal joint is larger than last year to compensate for the increased power.

The three-quarter floating Overland rear axle remains the same as before, as also does the braking equipment.

A roomy cowl dash touring body, seating five passengers and finished in dark green with light green stripings and nickel and aluminum trimmings is mounted on a wheel base of 114 inches, its doors are "U" shaped, very wide, and hinged at the front. The steering wheel is 18 inches in diameter and the steering post carries a carburetor adjusting lever within easy reach of the driver's hand.

The radiator of the new Overland cars is of an improved type, with large water spaces.

ALL GAMES START SOONER FROM NOW UNTIL SEASON-END

74,000 Miles in Two Years and Ten Days
Record of a Cadillac

Beginning Monday, all the games at Ponce de Leon for the rest of the season, will start at 3:30 o'clock instead of 3:45. The afternoons are getting shorter now, hence the switch.

Seventy-four thousand miles in two years and ten days is the astonishing record made by the Cadillac five-passenger touring car which has been operated by the police department of Houston, Texas, for the regular work of the city, including transporting officers and prisoners to and from the courts, and the like. The car was purchased in 1911 and has just been replaced by a 1913 Cadillac.

The total of 74,000 miles is a remarkable record, for the average distance a motor car travels each year is not much more than 7,000 miles. The grand total of 74,000 is nearly three times around the globe. Yet this police car did its work night and day, irrespective of time or weather, and over some of the worst roads the city possesses. Moreover, as it is necessary for police service, quick action was necessary and therefore it was impossible on many occasions to return for a second or third load. Consequently it was a common practice to load this car with a dozen and even as many as sixteen people.

In spite of the number carried, the car traveled and the distance covered is still in good condition and, after being somewhat rebuilt, will be sold at a good price with a guarantee back of it.

JOE TINKER DEFIES AUGUST HERRMANN

Refuses to Be "Gagged"—Will Quit Unless the Club Owner Changes His Policies.

Boston, August 16.—Joe Tinker, manager of the Cincinnati National league team, is ready to quit, he says, unless President Garry Herrmann, of the club, changes his policies.

Tinker today received a telegram from President Herrmann, notifying him that he had "violated baseball law" by publicizing the differences in the club and requesting him to make no further statements at present.

In refusing to be "gagged," as he termed it, Manager Tinker said: "I realize I must take a stand with regard to the management of this club or step out. The teams showing has been a great disappointment to all concerned, and I have held off as long as I could because I felt I am not a success myself that the club has not been making money, owing to its low standing, and, therefore, that it was up to me to stand for some things I would not otherwise have endured."

But when I found that our players were being sold outright to minor league clubs, without option, and that I was constantly being urged to cut off players against my best judgment without waiting for a chance to make a trade which would help the team, I decided I must make a stand. If Rogers' action does not meet with the approval of President Herrmann I can't help it, and he has the right to let me out at any time. I would rather go out to my fruit farm in Oregon than to try to handle a club when I am not backed up by the owners."

ELEVEN SOUTHERN LEAGUERS RECALLED

Cincinnati, August 16.—The National Commission today handed down a supplemental list of major league players recalled to minor league clubs with the following additional optional agreements:

The following additional optional agreements were not included in that list:

American League.
By St. Louis—To Chattanooga, Walsh, $200; Austin, Roche, $300.
By Washington—To Atlanta, Clark, $300, transferred to Montreal.
National League.
By Cincinnati—To Nashville, Grandfield, $500.
The following options have been exercised by major league clubs and checks in payment for the release of the players involved forwarded to Secretary Parrell, of the National association for transmission to the minor league clubs entitled to them.

National League.
By Pittsburgh—From Atlanta, Conzelman.
By Boston—From San Antonio, Schwinn.
By New York—From Mobile, Robertson.
American League.
By Chicago—From Birmingham, Frough, and Mayer.
By St. Louis—From Montgomery, C. B. Brown and Sloan, from Chattanooga, Gray and D. Walsh.
By Cleveland—From New Orleans, Walker.
By Detroit—From Nashville, Gibson.
By New York—From Atlanta, Thompson.

MATT M'GRATH MAY LOSE SIGHT OF EYE

New York, August 16.—Matthew McGrath, Olympic champion hammer thrower, probably will lose the sight of one eye as the result of a fight in the lobby of a Broadway theater at midnight last night.

Five men who sought to buy tickets to the roof garden of the theater were prevented by a special policeman who judged them intoxicated and attempted to eject them from the lobby. The men resisted and the officer summoned McGrath, who is employed as a special officer for the roof garden. In resisting the efforts of the two officers one of the men swung his cane and struck McGrath in the right eye with it.

The five men who engaged in the fight were arrested when reinforcements arrived. The man held by the police to be the one who injured McGrath is charged with felonious assault. He described himself as John Brink, 35 years old, a civil engineer of this city.

Dodgers Get Collins.

Brooklyn, August 16.—The Brooklyn National league club today negotiated a three-year deal whereby Bill Collins, the sensational outfielder of the Newark, will join the Superbas next Monday.

Brooklyn gives Leo Callahan to Toronto for that club's consent to allow Hub Northern to be transferred to Newark, the latter club sending Collins to the major leaguers. Brooklyn will use Collins in right field immediately.

Blackburn Recalled.

Chicago, August 16.—The Chicago Americans today recalled Shortstop Ted Blackburn from the Milwaukee American Association team.

CAMP PERRY SHOOT.

Camp Perry, Ohio, August 16.—The second day of the National Rifle association matches closed today and so far the shooting has been of a new character, as more possibilities are being made this year than ever before in the history of the national association.

The adjutant general's match was finished on the 1,000-yard range this evening. Lieutenant Colonel C. H. Winder, of Ohio, being the winner with a score of 100 plus 5 balls.

ALL-COMERS TENNIS TOURNAY AT NEWPORT

Newport, R. I., August 16.—The placing of the aspirants for national lawn tennis honors in the all-comers tournament which begins Monday at the Crystal courts was made today by association officials. The entries include virtually the entire American aggregation of lawn tennis stars and it is expected that the finals will not be reached until the middle of the second week.

In making public the result of the draw, President R. D. Wrenn announced that the championship match in doubles would be played Wednesday instead of Monday, as has usually been the case. The postponement is due to the desire to give the present titleholders, M. E. McLaughlin and F. C. Bundy, of California, a few days for practice as they have not played together since the early spring.

The doubles match will be a Pacific coast affair, McLaughlin and Bundy defending against two other Californians, John R. Strachan and Clarence J. Griffin.

The association officials are arranging a complimentary subscription dinner in honor of the Davis cup team to be held in New York after the all-comers tournament.

In the names of the more famous players came out of the hat toward the close placing them in the lower half.

Second Round, Top Half.
H. H. Hackett v. W. E. Hery, Jr.
E. W. Gardner, Jr. v. Ewing Taylor.
M. W. Niles v. J. H. Carpenter, Jr.
Gardner Beals v. A. R. Dutton.
Charles S. Dabney v. F. W. Valle.
D. C. Joseph v. W. M. Washburn.

First Round, Middle Section.
S. H. Foster v. Harold Harshorn.
G. Touchard v. Walter Roberts.

Spencer's Weekly Auto Notes Gathered from Various Sources

By F. Ed Spencer, "On the Spot." Detroit, August 16.—During the lake's trip of the Wolverine Automobile club of last Sunday, President Pfeffer and F. Ed Spencer talked over plans for a great annual Wolverine club encampment on the wooded shores of some of the many pretty lakes of Oakland county, and decided to organize such a camp for 1914. The project will be complete in every detail as soon as the members of the club in the city of Detroit will be secured and fitted up throughout in every respect. Tents will be erected that will house small families, and there will be larger tents for men only with four rooms and a parlor each. The big dining tent will be the cook tent, with competent tent chefs in charge of the culinary department. Competent waiters will serve in the dining tent. Hammocks will be strung at frequent intervals under the trees, and boats will be provided for each camper, with bathing outfits for all. At night the camp will be lighted by gasoline torches, and music being provided nightly. Every detail will be carefully looked after by a competent manager, it being the idea to keep the camp open during the entire summer, in order that the members and their families may remain as long as they desire and in order that all members may run up over the week's end should they desire. Many of the members seen have said that they would take up permanent headquarters at the camp for the summer, motoring in to business when ever necessary. The tents of the camp will be artistically located under the great trees and in cool locations, and as near as possible to a beach suitable for bathing, while bath houses will be placed along the shore. Tennis courts, baseball grounds and croquet grounds will be a part of the camp equipment. No venture of like character has ever been attempted on so large a scale during motoring days, but during the early days of cycling, the later eighties and early nineties, the members of the Lincoln Cycling club, of Chicago, spent their summers under the guidance of F. Ed Spencer, who organized the camps at Piquette bay, and each camp was more successful than the last one year after year. The cycling club members held week-end runs to the camp in great numbers, and always found plenty of accommodations and food, while many members summered at the camp just as it is expected the Wolverine club members will be one day willing to do. Times have changed, and the automobile has become a factor, bringing the camping grounds very near to the city in point of time consumed in reaching the grounds, and long distances. There will be garages at the proposed camp also.

Stearns-Knight 6-Cylinder 7-Passenger Touring Car Equipped With Wire Wheels

The new Stearns models offer the largest variety of any of their former seasons' output. Four, five, six and seven-passenger touring car bodies are mounted on either the four or six-cylinder chassis, while the same applies to the new three-passenger roadsters, limousines and landaulets. In addition, the Cleveland factory announces two new models, a coupe and sedan, to be built on either the four or six-cylinder chassis. Taking into consideration the fact that altogether the Stearns factory is building four chassis types—two-wheel-base lengths in both the four and six-cylinder models—it is quickly seen that the new Stearns line is most complete in every detail.

TELLS OF BAD EFFECTS OF RIDING TIRES SOFT

L. Greenwald, manager service department of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, says that when the tires are ridden soft there is too much action in the side wall, or hinge, which must eventually result in the same injury to the fabric that occurs to a wire when bent numerous times at a given point. This excessive heating softens the rubber cement, or "friction," on the fabric carcass. In a sense devulcanization takes place. This combined with an irregular tension of one layer of fabric in relation to another, develops a separation, chafing and ultimately a blowout. It might be well to mention that most of the advantage of a large tire is lost unless its kept inflated to the comparative air volume of a smaller size.

After Ball Gamblers.

Cleveland, Ohio, August 16.—Police tonight arrested Thomas Ward, a saloonkeeper, on a charge of recording wagers on a baseball game. They claim that over $1,000 daily has been recorded in wagers in Ward's saloon. The arrest is a part of the fight to prevent betting on baseball.

Tire Prices Down

Large advertisement for Goodyear tires. Text: 'Tire Prices Down. How We Did It Without Skimping On the Costliest Tire That's Built. Here are a few amazing facts which every tire user should know. Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires used to cost one-fifth more than other standard tires. And yet they gained the topmost place in Tiredom. Three things caused this extra price. In the base of each tire we vulcanize six flat bands of 126 braided wires. It is thus that we make a hookless tire—a tire that can't be rim-cut. Then every No-Rim-Cut gets the "On-Air Cure." It is final-vulcanized on air bags. This is done to save blow-outs. It adds to our tire cost $1,500 per day. Then we use in each tread base a patent "river" fabric. We paid $50,000 for this feature to prevent tread separation. Not one of these costly features are used in any other make of tire. Now No Extra Price. That's Why They Outsell. Hundreds of thousands now use these tires. They far outsell any other. Yet the demand from users is now growing faster than ever before in our history. That's for the reasons told you. Rim-Cutting alone, with old-type tires, ruins 31.8 per cent—almost one tire in three. Blow-outs and loose treads, which our methods combat, are immensely costly items. You should get these savings—get them all—when you pay the Goodyear price. Our dealers are everywhere. THE GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY, AKRON, OHIO. ATLANTA BRANCH, 223 PEACHTREE STREET. Thousands of dollars worth of damage was done at the farm of E. LeRoy Pelletier in the storm of Sunday, August 11, which was more severe at Orchard Lake than anywhere else. Fruit trees were blown down, and the severe hail with hailstones as large as eggs, broke glass and tore fruit from the trees. Over forty trees of long standing on the island belonging to Mr. Pelletier were blown down, and the trees skirting the lake shore were all broken off at the ground. For the shade trees alone Mr. Pelletier said Monday he would not have taken several thousand dollars. Frank Brisson, formerly of Detroit, and now a member, with his brother, of the Brisson family, of Paris, France, is in Detroit. Benjamin Brisson, former head of the United States Motor company, remained in the east. The Brisson brothers will take up manufacturing in Detroit, but the model car which they have turned over will, according to report, be turned over to an American manufacturer to turn out for American trade. S. J. Kunkin, vice-president of the Royal Motor Car company, Indianapolis, is in Detroit. Mr. Kunkin said that the Cole 1014 model driven to San Francisco starting two days before than the tour and arriving with the Indiana-Pacific tourists, was the center of attraction on the coast, and at San Francisco was taken apart for a demonstration by experts Monday.

THE 1914 Overland is the most wonderful car of the new season. And the price is reduced again.

The motor is more powerful; the wheelbase is longer; the tonneau is larger; the equipment is more complete, better and costlier than ever. In every respect Overland value has been increased while the price has been decreased.

The manufacturers have turned their enormous facilities over to the building of this one model. In no other way could such value be secured.

The production has been increased to 50,000 cars. There is an even stricter practice of the well-known Overland manufacturing economies. And this means a greater car at less cost to you.

So finely drawn is the big 1914 Overland production plan, that 50,000 cars will be built; 10,000 men will be kept busy all the year 'round, every wheel of the $4,000,000 worth of most modern machinery kept in constant operation, and never a moment's hesitation permitted in a plant that covers more than 100 acres of ground.

This is the way the Overland makes possible a $1200 value for $950.

Their great business is built on established standardized quality.

System is the watchword in the Overland factories—and you get the benefit.

We want inquiries from live, hustling agents who are anxious to handle this car on a legitimate businesslike basis. This car is now touring the state. Wire request at once for a visit.

We have the new Model 79 Overlands on our sales-room floor. We urge you to see this new model at once. Ride in the car; feel what a difference the big 114-inch wheelbase makes; note the car's entirely changed appearance. It is neater, prettier than ever—and that means the handsomest car of the year.

The long wheelbase gives increased riding comfort.

The improved Overland motor is rated at 35 horsepower—plenty of power to give satisfying comfort and speed. Inspect the many motor refinements which make the power plant more flexible and accessible.

You'll find a most efficient and reliable electric lighting system on the new Overland. This costly addition to equipment is worthy of a $1500 car.

The new Overland body has a handsome finish—beautiful rich, dark Brewster green. The trimmings are of heavy nickel and aluminum. And the big graceful cowl dash gives to the car an appearance of dignity vainly sought in many other cars of higher price.

Examine the spacious tonneau; note the big, soft, deep and luxurious folds of upholstery. The new Overland is bigger and better; we can show you point for point where it is the best your money can buy.

You can see it today.

 Gentlemen:-
 I notice with a great deal of pleasure your new classification system to be used in your Classified Columns.
 It will enable us to promptly locate the thing for which we may be after and avoid the necessity of reading endless numbers of little ads entirely foreign to what we are seeking.
 I think that you will find the result will be that the efficiency of your columns will be greatly enhanced and that you will have many more readers who will look to your columns to supply their wants. It will not be necessary to read "Automobile for sale", "Husband wanted" and "Second hand furniture for sale" when you want to employ a stenographer.

 Gentlemen:-
 I was glad to read your page announcement in Sunday's paper regarding your system of classifying "Want Ads".
 The newspaper which publishes a classified page in the true sense of the word, serves the people (The Readers), but that paper which does not, makes money for itself and gives the reader a puzzle page, and lessens the benefit to both advertiser and reader.
 Your announcement is a move in the right direction, and will make it possible to advertise any article from a dress suit, to a cork leg, real estate, old stoves and every need of life, and will aid the reader in locating any one of these articles if he so desires.
 Glad to see you so progressive,

These Men Made Fortunes Out of Want Ads!

You Can Do the Same—
 If You'll Use Them

Read What They Say About The Constitution's System of Classifying Its Want Ads, So You Can Find What You Want When You Want It

Turn to the want ad pages now and see for yourself how easy it is to find anything your heart desires.
 The index to the want ads is on the first page of the want ad section.
 If it's a room you want, look under the classification "FOR RENT---Rooms." You'll find the furnished and unfurnished rooms classified separately, and the north side rooms separated from the south side, etc.
 If it's an automobile, look under "AUTOMOBILES---For Sale." You won't find any rooms for rent there, but you will find plenty of good new and second-hand automobiles, which the other fellow can't use, but which might answer your purpose exactly.

Haven't you something you'd like to trade? Look in the "BARTER AND EXCHANGE" column. You may be able to make a trade for the very thing you now feel you can't afford to buy.
 And in the "HOUSEHOLD GOODS" column there's enough furniture and house furnishings offered for sale to actually stock a store. It's all good, too, or the advertiser wouldn't pay real money to tell you about it.
REMEMBER---All of these ads in The Constitution are paid for. That's why you're not wasting your time in answering them.
 That's one of the many reasons why you too would get quick results if you should advertise your wants in The Constitution.

JUDGE HART TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

Declares He Will Move to Atlanta—Will Try to Make the New Law Popular and Effective

Judge John C. Hart took the oath of office as the first tax commissioner of Georgia yesterday.

When seen yesterday he declared that he had no statement to make for publication but expected to prepare a statement for the press soon outlining the policy which he would pursue in the performance of his official duties.

I am entering upon my new duties," he said with a full sense of the responsibilities devolving upon me and of the difficulties which will confront me.

Only Motive to Serve State The only motive which prompted me to accept the office was to serve Georgia in the enforcement of a law which I believe to be vital to the future progress of the state.

It shall be my utmost effort to make the law not only effective but popular. To do this I shall need the cooperation of the press and the good will of the people.

Judge Hart was met in the capitol by a number of friends who shook hands with him and congratulated him on securing such a man as he to inaugurate the office of tax commissioner.

General Appointment to Hart The law gives to the comptroller general the appointment of the clerks of the tax office.

I think it must be some oversight in the law which will place the appointment of these clerks in my hands rather than in those of the tax commissioner.

FORREST AND GEORGE ADAIR ... Another one of the "old reliable" stocks is Illinois Central. It was held in high esteem by investors; financial writers used to include it in the list of stocks for conservative people to buy.

The date, "June, 1906," looks familiar; we recall something that happened in Atlanta in that particular month of that identical year. In this way we get a line on the performances of so-called "high-grade standard stocks," as compared with Atlanta real estate.

In June, 1906, at the same time when Illinois Central sold at 18 1/2, we closed out the East Atlanta Land Company's holdings on Edgewood avenue. Take the block between Fort and Hilliard streets. At that sale this land brought $40 a foot. Among the purchasers were Hamilton Douglas, John E. Murphy, T. R. Sawtell and Fitzhugh Knox.

At this same sale property in the block between Courtland and Piedmont brought $140 a foot, the purchaser was Mr. J. Carroll Payne. This frontage is now valued at $600. You must understand that Edgewood avenue frontage has always moved in a rather narrow market, but it has traded steadily on up, and prices have become firmer all the time.

People are finding out more about real estate every day, and it grows higher in public esteem. You go to the owners of central property, those who have owned for a term of years, and try to pry them loose from their property. You will find it a difficult matter to get anyone of them even to name a price, or to consider an offer.

Financial writers do not expect that railroad stocks will ever reach the high levels obtained in the past. There has been too much exposure, too much light turned on in dark places. Public utility concerns now operate under interstate commerce commissions, and under state public service commissions; they must give an account of themselves. In their case increased information caused a decline instead of a rise.

ALTOLOMA
1/4-ACRE TRACTS TO 5-ACRE TRACTS

ALTOLOMA is situated just beyond Decatur, on the Georgia Railroad and the Stone Mountain Electric car line, both of which cut through the very heart of ALTOLOMA a distance of nearly 1,800 feet. ALTOLOMA is on the "New York to Atlanta Highway." ALTOLOMA has three churches. ALTOLOMA has a handsome Public School Building, which has just been completed at a cost of $8,000. ALTOLOMA is close to Agnes Scott College and the new Lamar College. ALTOLOMA contains more than 350 beautiful lots, ranging in size from QUARTER-ACRE TRACTS TO FIVE-ACRE TRACTS. Many of these tracts have running water. ALTOLOMA is unusually high and dry and enjoys perfect drainage throughout.

STONE MOUNTAIN ELECTRIC CAR LINE IS FAST NEARING COMPLETION

The Georgia Railway and Power Company is extending its Decatur Car Line to Stone Mountain as fast as money, men and material can accomplish the work. It will be only a few weeks until this company will be operating its cars to ALTOLOMA, and just as soon as the first car makes its initial trip the price of every lot remaining unsold in ALTOLOMA will advance TEN TO THIRTY PER CENT. Don't wait until the shrewd speculators have picked all the plums and forced both prices and terms far beyond your reach.

FOR SALE
THE PRETTIEST and best suburban farm near Atlanta, situated within the incorporated limits of the city of Clarkston, Ga., in one block of the Georgia railroad and the Stone Mountain trolley line, fronting 700 feet on Georgia railroad and principal street and fronting about 1,400 feet on other streets. Seven acres fine oak and hickory grove, 30 acres in fine Pecan grove, now bearing to bear. Twelve acres in fine bottom land, balance terraced, all in high state of cultivation; fine crops growing of corn, cotton, potatoes, peas, sorghum and garden truck. Several fine springs, branches and a creek. This is suitable for a "Gentleman's Country home" or could be subdivided.
I OFFER this splendid piece of property, cross and acreage, for $30,000. Thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) will be worth $50,000 in two years when most of the pecan trees will be bearing.
IF SOME man will lend me $10,000 (ten thousand dollars) on this property at a reasonable rate of interest, I will not sell it now.
I WILL take pleasure in showing this property to anyone interested at any time.

ATLANTA'S STRIDES FROM DAY TO DAY

number of changes in the architecture of the residences of Atlanta. Formerly the old so-called Puritan type, with the front stoop, the small windows, and the small veranda were the vogue. Now everything is built for comfort, with large windows, roomy verandas, and high ceilings. The bungalow type is also in vogue at the present time.
Pittsburgh Knox, besides building several of Atlanta's costliest apartments, has gained quite a reputation for the "Bungalow King" of Atlanta. At the present writing he has more than a dozen in the course of construction, besides those which he has already completed in the past five months.

This type of building seems to have taken hold on Atlanta for good. There are many desirable qualities about them, the main one being the low cost of construction, considering the finished structure. For fifteen hundred dollars and up one can have a fine dwelling which is classic in outline, durable in structure, and comfortable as well.
Another popular type is the semi-colonial, which is very prevalent in Atlanta today. Unlike as a rule these cost more to construct than the bungalows, yet there are a number going up at the present time, in brick and terra cotta.

Relative Value of Paving.
Since Atlanta now ranks as one of the leading cities of the country, citizens are beginning to pay more attention to its paving. In former days was a time when any kind of paving would do, just so it was durable. But with the advent of the motor vehicle using the pneumatic tire difficult problems arose.

Asphalt, considered by many the ideal paving material, has shown that under certain conditions it is not all that it is claimed to be, though as near the ideal as possible. In certain cases when the surface becomes sticky from the heat of the sun's rays and heavy wagon wheels passing over it causes ridges to form. By midnight this has hardened again to a certain extent and the early morning auto driver finds that his tires are in for a good deal of cutting by these same ridges.
Possibly the time will come when a perfect surface will be obtained for asphalt. Chemists are working on this problem today.

Big Ponce de Leon Sale.
The R. C. Woodberry Realty company has sold to W. J. Hepburn a residence property at 539 Ponce de Leon Avenue for $10,650. The property is 50x150 feet.

Sale on Peachtree Road.
Mrs. M. C. Johnson has sold to an Atlanta capitalist the northwest corner of Peachtree road and Piedmont Avenue for an aggregate consideration of $18,000. The property, which is vacant, is 240x485 feet. Homer McAfee, of the real estate department of Haas & McIntyre, engineered the deal.
Treadwell Realty Company Sale.
The W. E. Treadwell Realty company has sold for L. W. Franklin to L. E. Hart, a 9-room, 2-story house at 210 St. Charles Avenue for $7,000. The property is 50x200 feet. E. H. Treadwell, of W. E. Treadwell & Co., made the sale.

Big Business by Bottenfield.
Despite the hot weather and rather dull times which seemed to have prevailed the past week, the L. P. Bottenfield agency's sales for the week totaled $30,700, an enviable record. The following sales were recorded in their various subdivisions:
In Clairmont Park—Lot 4, block 2, $1,100; lot 5, block 2, $1,100; lot 6, block 2, $1,100; lot 16, block 2, $650; lot 3, block 2, $1,100; lot 12, block 2, $1,200.
In Peachtree Highlands—Lot 11, block C, $1,400; lot 13, block A, $1,500; lot 17, block B, $500; lot 18, block B, $600; lot 25, block B, $750; lot 7, block A, $1,800; lot 20, block B, $1,000; lot 21, block B, $1,000.
In Woodlawn Park—Lot 23, $850; lot 17, $700; lot 15, $700.
In Oakwood Terrace—Lot 11, $550.

Bottenfield Notes.
Mrs. J. O. Hipp bought of Lounsford & Buncham lot 4, block C, Peachtree Highlands subdivision, for $1,750.
This lot was bought thirty days ago through the L. P. Bottenfield Realty office for $1,600, and the result at $1,750 netted the original buyers $150 profit within thirty days. Mrs. Hipp will build a $4,000 bungalow at once, and will move in as soon as completed. The house was made by Miss Mabel Hampton.
J. E. Pritchett sold through the L. P. Bottenfield Realty office a lot 59x150, corner Moreland Avenue and North Avenue, to Mrs. Gustie May Bridges for $12,500.
J. E. Pritchett sold through the L. P. Bottenfield Realty office to Mrs. Ella C. Freeman a lot 59x130, corner Moreland Avenue and Hume Street, for $2,500 cash. This was an all cash transaction.
J. E. Pritchett sold through the L. P. Bottenfield Realty office to F. C. and E. C. Wilkerson, lot 27x115 for $650. Corner Ira and West Georgia Avenue.
Ernest F. Culpepper sold through the L. P. Bottenfield Realty office to Dixon Andrews, house and lot, side 50x150, No. 150 Tift Avenue. Price, $2,400.
Ernest F. Culpepper sold through the L. P. Bottenfield Realty office to J. J. T.

ENRAGED ADVANCE MADE IN COTTON Renewal of Buying Movement Caused Prices to Close 3 to 5 Points Up—Spot Cotton 10 Points Higher.

New York, August 16.—The cotton market was active today and prices advanced further on a renewal of yesterday's buying movement, with active trading reaching the highest level touched since the rally following the publication of the last governing report. Realizing for over the week-end on private reports of more rain in Oklahoma than suggested by the official weather map, caused reactions after an early advance, but offerings were well enough taken to give the market a steady undertone, and last prices were 2 to 5 points higher.

New Orleans Cotton.

New Orleans, August 16.—The week in the cotton market closed with a very steady feeling as the result of continued droughty conditions in the western belt, and the general belief that the drought in Oklahoma had been partly relieved as grass and private reports said a rain was steady and considerable number of points. The official report, however, made light of the Oklahoma rainfall and the forecast completely fair weather for a week or half of the cotton belt, which destroyed hope that the drought would be broken over Sunday. At the opening, the market was steady and prices were 1 point up to 1 point of. Cables were much higher than this, but were offset by reports of rain in the western belt. The weather map noted rain at only three points in Oklahoma and at none at all in Texas. When it became aware that private reports of moisture were not being confirmed, buying in ease.

STOCKS SLIGHTLY RALLIED AT CLOSE Lead of Rain in West and Southwest Caused Another Selling Movement in Early Part of Session.

New York, August 16.—Continued lack of rain in the west and southwest was made the basis of another selling movement in today's early stock market. Declines of a point were abruptly registered by St. Paul, Atchafson, Rock Island preferred, Union Pacific and Erie. United States Steel also felt the force of the initial impact more than any other industrial issue except the harvest issues, which were notably heavier. Some of the minor specialties yielded as much as 2 points.

Supporting orders soon brought the market back to the selling color or to the belief that the pressure had its origin largely in short selling. In final dealings, the market gathered fresh impetus and closing prices for the favorites were well above those of the previous day. The day's movement was favorable. The mercantile authorities are agreed that business in general is holding on well.

STORIES OF WALL STREET

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

Drawing by D. RUSSOM

ON A SLENDER MARGIN

Young Reverdy—he was always "Young Reverdy to the Street even after his father's retirement—was not an Exchange member.

Gallinger had been a classmate of Young Reverdy and now he enjoyed the position of that gentleman's confidential broker wherefore his commissions were not to be sneezed at. Young Reverdy dealt in stocks by the block of ten thousand shares rather than by hundreds and thousands.

Wherefore also when Gallinger received Young Reverdy's brief note apprising him of his return to the speculative arena and asking him to call Gallinger was glad.

He was thinking that it was a very long time since he had entered his friend's office and he turned to the left and down the Wall Street corridor the Syndicate Building presently stopping before a door whose ground glass panel was modestly and simply lettered.

CLIFFORD REVERDY

Gallinger went in closing the door softly behind him. He was thinking hard—trying to recollect what it had been that had deprived the Street of Young Reverdy's influence for all that long year. "Something about a girl?" Gallinger hazarded a vague guess.

"I forget." Gallinger's gaze followed Reverdy's carefully. The well was broad and garishly white flooded with the one gold late June sunshine on the farther side it was broken by row upon row of plate glass windows blank and characterless some open to the bland spring air others tightly closed.

The one directly opposite Reverdy's for instance was wide to the winds and framed in it Gallinger saw a woman working at a desk. Bynum & Shackelford's office he thought abstractedly and Hello Cliff he said aloud.

Reverdy swung around with a start. Howdy Gallinger he cried his face lighting up with a welcoming smile. How goes it?

Tolerably tolerably deprecated Gallinger. You're looking well. I am affirmed Young Reverdy heartily.

For some minutes the two men discussed ways and means earnestly Reverdy laying down the law. Gallinger concurring expostulating or meekly accepting his inclusions. His business brain was fully occupied with the weighing of measures toward their common end with the recording of Reverdy's commands but subconsciously he did not cease to watch his friend's face to note the changes that the year had wrought in the man. Particularly he speculated about that pained look in Reverdy's eyes.

Well Reverdy said finally you go ahead and put that through and we'll make the bear crowd sit up and take notice.

Right assented Gallinger. He penciled a memorandum or two on the back of an envelope and put it away rising from his chair.

Don't go Reverdy told him. Sit down and have a talk. Thank you consented Gallinger. Trip do you good Cliff he asked trimming the wad.

Lots Reverdy glanced at him sharply. Im cured he stated. Gallinger started.

Cured? Eh what? Oh yes he laughed awkwardly vainly cudgeling his wits. Who was that girl anyway?

Reverdy swung aimlessly in his chair knitting his fingers. Many changes he asked curiously. New faces in the Street?

Oh some Gallinger told him. Nothing much everything just about the same.

This was unsatisfactory. At least Reverdy laughed unasily. I see that Bynum & Shackelford have a new ten grapher.

Gallinger checked and looking realized. Oh by thunder Helen Shackelford? he remembered suddenly.

Why that—I suppose so he ended lamely. Old Shackelford's dead you know he blurted out.

What? Reverdy faced him again. Yes—six months ago. Did you hear about it? Heart failure. I believe something. I think it killed everything to his daughter. I told Helen eh? Reverdy's tone was as calm as he could have wished.

"And who's Bynum's partner now?" he asked.

"Why—er—Gallinger stammered—I wonder if he doesn't recognize her? I don't want to rouse sleeping dogs!" he disclaimed mentally—Why—er—some relative of old Shackelford's I understand' he replied.

And Gallinger was much relieved when Reverdy's opportune fit of musing afforded him the chance to get away without having to answer any more embarrassing questions.

For that matter Reverdy himself was glad to see the last of Gallinger—for that day, at least. He had learned from him that which he desired to know. And now he wanted to think.

That's all right he told himself at length hopefully. Im cured. Guess there isn't much doubt about that. All the same he added after a while. I'd like to know what you're doing in a broker's office Helen. Bynum isn't the sort that you'd naturally pick to associate with you know.

On the morning of the third day however came the inevitable. Reverdy hurrying in from the street with his hat on the back of his head and a cigar in the corner of his mouth all but trod blindly upon the train of a woman's skirt as he entered the elevator. Great Heavens he muttered with a swift intuition as the gate clanged. Now there was no escape.

Seven he heard her tell the elevator boy and Reverdy knew that her voice thrilled him through and through. He looked up unhappily and caught her eye as it was shifted swiftly from him. He bowed—his hat already in his hand—and muttered something indelicate with a tongue as suddenly hot and dry as a brick. She returned the salutation distantly.

And then he knew that he ought to speak. Put what was he to say? What commingled would suffice after all that had passed between this girl and himself? How was he to speak when the nearness of her took his breath away and set his heart to hammering like—

Very suddenly his heart seemed to surge upward and for the instant his tongue clove to the roof of his mouth. The elevator paused in its upward flight seemed to hesitate a brief second—and dropped like a shot. The sensation was sickening but in Reverdy was room for but one thought and that was for Helen's safety. There would be the crash at the bottom of course and had he had the time he would have shrieked at the vision of what would follow that crash.

His brain was working with meretricious swiftness. If she could be supported held up from the floor of the cage her injuries might be less than if—she struck warily her of a mind to cut her up in his arms.

And then the cushion device began to work. The car seemed to strike upon a firm sill. It sank to its level and halted. It had struck a second time and dropped a few feet. It came to rest in a blinding series of reflections resting finally between the second and third floors.

You're not hurt he cried. Hello! Think you—she gasped adding in a tremulous voice. Mr Reverdy. Her eyes met his were sane now. A little time the reaction. The girl looked hysterically at first then more calm. But Reverdy's smile was wan and sickly. He was taken by a little fit of rage at fate that had treated him so severely and he turned upon the elevator boy.

What do you mean by this? he demanded unreasonably. Let us out at once.

The attendant eyed him with calm scorn. Reverdy was nobody to him. Turn my fault he declaimed silently. You use letter take it easy. Hello! This went let us down for heaven's sake.

Oh Lord Reverdy groined. Hea—er—told the girl. Its nutter his fault er—mine. Im sorry. He'd well shall I trust the storm will have blown but he expected her to do it. It felt wretched. I think something desperate though the girl was so scared rather inclined to regard the matter as naturally.

Don't be sorry she smiled he whispered. Only this. I can't be helped. Only this. I feel that we are both to be divided. Let us to our offices.

I—I—he stammered becoming aware of her in a down and remembering in which memory she wore it. I heard only the day before yesterday of your loss Miss Shackelford—and I—

She bowed her head the merriment dying from her eyes. Thank you she murmured. I understand.

You have been away?" she asked, graciously helping him to extricate himself from what seemed hopeless embarrassment.

"Yes—Florida—for a year," he floundered. "I've a shooting box in the Everglades, you know. And you?"

"Oh I've taken up the broker's burden she told him, lightly. I am now the office partner of Bynum & Shackelford."

Bynum partner! Reverdy was fairly staggered. He had not suspected that even in his wildest imaginations Bynum's partner! And Bynum was one of the most unscrupulous black guards in the Street! Did she know what she was doing, he wondered had none warned her?

Reverdy's soul was faint with disgust at the prospect. He felt that he—someone—ought to warn her. But how? How to reveal to her Bynum's moral turpitude without casting reflections on the character of his late partner her father? Old Shackelford had innocently enough allowed himself to become a party to one or two of Bynum's dirtiest deals—that the Street knew of.

"I didn't know it," he confessed, quickly. "But I'm glad to hear it. The new firm prospers I trust? Possibly I may be able to throw a little business in your way."

Why? she began, formulating a courteous refusal. Im sure you are very kind Mr Reverdy but—

But the elevator was on Reverdy's side that morning. In the middle of her sentence it slid sedately to the bottom of the shaft and the starter opened the gates to release them. They stepped out and into another car. Reverdy tactfully changing the subject so that she was unable to conclude her declination. During the brief ascent Reverdy talked—talked feverishly. Later he found himself unable to recall just precisely what he did say before they parted on the seventh floor, but the

"Oh, about the same," he said. Every one on the Street knows to a moral certainty that Bynum pockets half the money his customers give him, but you can't fasten it on the fellow."

"Thank you Reverdy muttered, glumly. He looked at his watch, ten o'clock. Bynum was due on the Exchange floor at that minute, Helen would be alone. Reverdy took a sudden resolution without troubling to vouchsafe an explanation to Gallinger. You stay here for a few minutes, will you? he asked. I'll be back before long. Just a minute—

This time he did not falter, but rather with rapid, nervous strides made his way around the building into the south era corridor. His mind was in a turmoil, he had no coherent idea of what he was about to do one thing only was patent to him—that, since Bynum was still threading the devious shady by paths of speculation Helen must be warned in order that she might withdraw from association with her partner and save her name from the ignominy of the ultimate exposure that comes inevitably to men of Bynum's stamp. And he burst quick recklessly through the swinging doors of Bynum & Shackelford's customers room full of his purpose and regardless of all else.

In a moment he caught a glimpse of her as she sat in the firm's private room, her ear to the telephone receiver. So far she had not become aware of his arrival. But now as he started toward the door she looked up saw him and nodded with a little smile. Reverdy waited on the threshold until she spoke a final low word into the transmitter and hung the receiver on the hook.

Then, "Can I come in?" he asked. Why certainly, Mr Reverdy. What can I do for you?"

She rose and gave him her hand frankly and with no hesitation the ardent pressure which he was unable to Street, she had made use of the technical jargon with a large but misplaced self-confidence.

"But this she did not know—that a reputable house does not accept commissions on less than a ten point margin. Reverdy made a mental note of her inadvertent expose of Bynum's methods, and replied quietly.

"Better make it ten points. I'll send over my check at once."

"Thank you," She pushed the pad toward him, offering her pencil for his signature to the buying order.

"You'll keep this between ourselves, of course," he said. "I don't mind telling you that there is going to be a bull movement in Erie—about twenty points."

"Why that is very kind—"

"I'd advise you—if you'll permit me—to get aboard."

"Thank you, Mr Reverdy, but—but—well, to be frank with you, I am unable to accept the tip."

She considered a moment biting her tongue to keep back the words. But still she wished to show him her mastery of the intricacies of speculation. "I'm pretty well tied up in Ontario Preferred," she volunteered. "We are looking for a ten point advance."

"Oh!" Reverdy's tone spoke volumes. In that one brief sentence she had revealed to his trained intelligence the depths of Bynum's duplicity—had assured him of the correctness of his suspicions. Ontario—why it was dead so far as legitimate speculation was concerned the issuing company was practically bankrupt and the Street knew it, the security was a drug on the market—going begging around thirty. So that was what Bynum had drawn her slight fortunes into! Reverdy thanked the providence that had brought him upon the boards in time to avert this financial ruin that hung menacingly over the head of the man's heart fairly bled for her, but her words were merciless. "You are not acting honorably. I would not have thought it of you, Mr Reverdy. You—you are—"

"Thank you," he interrupted, his eyes blazing. "You need say no more."

"I think not," she concurred, amiably. "Naturally after this we cannot handle your commission, Mr Reverdy. Good day."

She took the buying order he had just signed and shredded it with her white slender fingers. The fragments fluttered to the floor.

Reverdy turned to go, waited a brief moment, irresolute, hoping she would relent. He was very angry, but beneath that emotion, deep down in the soul of him he knew that he could bear with disdain if only she would listen to reason. With him it was her welfare before all.

"Helen!" he began, well-nigh frantic, just as the telephone bell rang. She whirled around in her chair to answer it. "Good-day," she repeated.

And he went out—with tears of chagrin in his eyes and his temples throbbing like mad. To think that he should love her so and that she should be so blind so unjust!

Helen Shackelford might be blind and unjust, but Clifford Reverdy was not going to stand by and see her suffer for it—he could help it. And he thought he could.

"Gallinger!" he greeted that impatient gan broker. Have you a new clerk in your office—some one about as green as a salad?

"Whoa!" Gallinger was astounded. "What the devil are you driving at, Cliff?"

"I say"—impatiently—"have you a youngster in your office that the Street doesn't know for your man?"

Gallinger subdued his surprise considered, mentally reviewing his office force and announced.

"Well, there's little Walcott."

"He'll do," Reverdy sat down at his desk and scribbled a check which he handed his confidential broker.

"You get that cashed and give the money to Walcott. Have him go to Bynum & Shackelford's to day—the sooner the better—and buy one hundred shares of Ontario Preferred on a five point margin, for his own account. Don't let him use my name or yours."

"But," expostulated Gallinger, "he'll have to be introduced in order to open an account."

Not with Bynum & Shackelford, Gallinger. Did you hear me say five-point margin? With a firm that'll take a five point margin ready cash will prove the best introduction in the world. You understand? Send Walcott there at once.

"Well all right," Gallinger agreed dubiously. But it seems to me you might tell a chap what you're driving at."

"I'm driving at Bynum," Reverdy announced grimly. And I'm going to drive him out of the Street. Look here.

He sat down and talked seriously with Gallinger for the matter of ten minutes or so.

Ontario Preferred which was quoted at twenty nine at the opening of the first day's trading dropped quietly and unostentatiously from that point to twenty five at noon of the second day, where it rested upon half hearted support.

At one o'clock Reverdy in his office received a telephone message from Gallinger on the floor of the Exchange. "Bynum has left the floor. Gallinger reported.

Reverdy smiled mysteriously into the transmitter.

Walcott raised his hand to knock again, without replying, but before his knuckles touched the panels of the door it was opened from within, and Bynum looked out angrily.

"What the devil do you want?" he stormed angrily. I gave orders—"

"Want to see you?" put in Walcott, cheerfully. Hold on! Won't detain you a minute?"

Bynum recognized him at last. "Oh Mr Walcott he exclaimed in his most soothing manner. "If you'll excuse me just a second—"

"How about my Ontario?" interrupted Walcott.

"Why—er—I regret—the fall in the price obliged me to sell you out, not half an hour ago. If you had only been here to put up more margin—"

Too thin, commented Gallinger, audibly.

Bynum looked quickly toward the speaker. He saw Reverdy also, and a puzzled expression crossed his handsome face.

"What does this mean Mr Walcott?" he inquired querulously.

Walcott quietly inserted his foot behind the half open door and the jamb. "Want to talk to you?" he replied, tersely. Better let us in so that we won't be overheard."

Bynum attempted to close the door. But I don't understand—" he began.

Let me in sir!" he told Bynum, sternly.

Nonplussed, Bynum gave way for the moment his wits deserted him, and in that moment Gallinger also had entered and put his shoulders to the door. Then Bynum began to have an inkling of what was in the wind.

By what right?" he blustered furiously at Reverdy. do you intrude?"

Why he said indignantly, "Miss Shackelford wished to see me, so I just came in." But promptly he dropped his bantering tone.

"We came to see you, primarily, about Mr Walcott's Ontario Bynum," he said, coldly. "Mr Walcott wants his money back."

Bynum sneered. "Oh, he does!" he snarled. "Well, I don't know by what right—"

Oh yes, you do. You say you sold him out at twenty-five. I believe Well, now to whom did you sell Walcott's one hundred shares of Ontario?"

Belden & Tausig?" Reverdy turned to the girl at his side.

How much did he induce you to put into the Ontario deal, Helen?" he asked.

Fifty thousand dollars all told," she faltered. "He had just informed me that we are both wiped out—insolvent. Of course, I believed him, but—but Clifford, are you sure—sure?"

Bynum's sure," he laughed. "Aren't you, Bynum? Come, what have you done with the money? It's deposited to your account somewhere, we know where?"

For a little while there was a strained silence in the office. Bynum's eyes, which at first had glared defiance into Reverdy's fell before the others unmoved, unrelenting regard.

"Oh well—I" he snapped at length. "I agree."

He sat down at the desk, taking a check book from his pocket, and jabbing the pen viciously into the inkstand. Gallinger's plump sides shook with silent merriment.

memory of an amused smile that had lurked in the corners of her mouth lingered with the man—and maddened him.

I supposed I made a damned ass of myself he groaned when he had run the gauntlet of the yellow haired stenographers the rolling eyes and the office boy's beady inquisitive stare and was at length alone in his private office.

He glowers moodily across the air-shaft.

I'll have to move to another building he concluded. I can't stand this! The girl was at her desk talking with Bynum. Bynum was leaning over her with exaggerated deference. A meagre figure of a man he was—Bynum—a man to fit a woman's eye. Reverdy fancied it all in some old ways. In his manner it was sleek courtesy there was an adoration which Reverdy interpreted as half mocking but which might well turn the head of a woman.

A pang of wild jealousy rent the heart of Young Reverdy, and he stalked a tortive fist at the self satisfied Bynum.

Thus glooming Gallinger found him an hour later and before Gallinger could open his mouth Reverdy had snapped a question at him.

What's Bynum up to now Gallinger? Still at the old dodges?

"BUT WHY DID YOU REFUSE TO SEE ME?"

refrain from giving her fingers brought a startled appeal to her eyes and a slow, dull color burned in her cheeks.

"What can I do for you?" she persisted more brusquely.

It brought him to his senses. To be sure what plausible excuse had he to offer for the intrusion? Why—why—"

"He hesitated. And then with a rush of thankfulness he remembered his remark about throwing a little business in the way of Bynum & Shackelford and became more composed.

He took the chair at the corner of her desk.

I want you to buy me some Erie," he said. Certainly Miss Shackelford reached for a memorandum pad she was all business now and the crimson was gone from her cheeks.

"How much?"

"Five thousand shares," he told her. It was a large order for Bynum & Shackelford to handle. Her start of surprise told him that.

"At what price?" she asked hoping that he had not noticed.

"At the market."

"On margin?"

"Certainly."

"How many points? Three or five?"

It was for first misstep. Deep in the woman's heart was the desire to prove to this man that she was no novice—as she really was—in the ways of the of the woman he loved.

"You disapprove?" she would know, rightly interpreting his exclamation.

"Well—er—Bynum advised you, I suppose?"

Yes she nodded.

He leaned toward her speaking guardedly though they were practically alone.

"If you'll take my advice Miss Shackelford you'll sell your holding of Ontario Preferred at whatever price you can get. Bynum—"

He paused pondering to what motive would she ascribe what he was about to say to her?

"He—well you should know it—I suppose no one has informed you—you didn't suspect of course—"

Reverdy dashed out of the bank, beaming a large satisfaction at the whole wide world.

"It's all right—certified" he almost shouted at the girl. She nestled back against the cushions with a little, halting sigh. "Reverdy gave the cabman her address and climbed in."

At first she had drawn a little away from him half fearfully glancing at him from under her up curled lashes. But Reverdy did not attempt to force the issue. Though his life's happiness hung in the balance still he thought he knew—

I—I don't know how I am to thank you, Cliff—Clifford he heard her say.

I haven't asked for thanks he returned. I believe it's hardly necessary for me to state what I would ask.

No she breathed.

He saw her hand stealing timidly across the cushion toward his own. In an instant he was very happy. After a long pause. But why did you send me away?" he would know imperatively.

He could feel her trembling in the pressure of her fingers. It—it was all a mistake dear she said at length. I did not know until you were gone, how much I lo—

"Hush!" he cried gravely. "Not now not here, sweetheart!" he pleaded. Why don't you know that all the world's on tiptoe holding its breath to hear you say just that?"

"That's Bynum," said Gallinger to

MEXICAN MUDDLE LOOKING CLEARER

President Believes Substantial Progress Has Been Made. Huerta Expected to Reply to Envoy Lind's Statement.

Mexico City, August 16—(Special) Gamboa, the Mexican minister of foreign affairs, tonight gave out the first statement made by any Mexican official regarding the message sent to provisional President Huerta by President Wilson through his personal representative, John Lind.

Minister Gamboa said the Mexican government would give consideration to the communication presented by Mr. Lind and after fully discussing it, would make a reply.

This procedure is contrary to the opinion held generally here the past week regarding the Mexican government's attitude, it being assumed in view of General Huerta's note of August 6, in which he characterized Mr. Lind as being persona non grata unless he brought proper credentials and recognition of the Huerta administration that any message to the ex-governor brought a mild rebuff.

Washington, August 16—Substantial progress has been achieved in the judgment of administration officials here, by John Lind in the discharge of his delicate mission to Mexico. They feel the United States ambassador at least has made a considerable impression on the Mexican government in the object which he has in mind in dispatching him to Mexico City.

Huerta Advised to Make Concessions.

The delivery of these preliminary communications either orally or in writing will depend entirely upon the reception which the Mexican government accords the first communication. This is now under careful consideration, a fact regarded as of the utmost importance for the ultimate success of the negotiations. It is understood that while there is nothing in these views, in the nature of a demand for the withdrawal of General Huerta from the presidency or for the arbitrary fixing of a date for a general election, there is nevertheless a distinct intimation of the administration's belief that some concession should be made by the Huerta government to bring about the present of a solution and to insure the stability of a truly constitutional government.

If these fundamental are accepted the way will be open for conference to define the means by which the desired results will be brought about. It is expected that the state department that the next step in the negotiations will not be taken before Monday. The request of the Mexican government for time to consider Mr. Lind's presentation practically conveyed that idea. Meanwhile it is deemed essential that the principals in the negotiations shall surround them with the utmost secrecy at this interesting phase.

Foreign Powers to Be Informed.

Not the slightest intimation of Mr. Lind's communication has reached any of the representatives of foreign powers. It is expected that the principal nations as the Mexican government reaches a decision as to whether further overtures are to be received at all, steps will be taken to acquaint the representatives in Mexico of the foreign powers with the nature of Lind's mission.

The same information probably will be conveyed to the diplomatic representatives of the same powers accredited to the United States.

Senator Lodge had a long talk with Secretary Bryan today about Mexican affairs. It is expected that the principal action in the senate of his purpose to stand squarely behind the president, providing the Mexican difficulty could be kept out of the field of politics, this is believed to foreshadow a better entente between the democratic and republican members of the foreign relations committee than existed yesterday.

Henry Lane Wilson, retired ambassador to Mexico, remains in Washington, still undecided as to his future movements. Mr. Wilson today also was reflecting upon the communication with Secretary Bryan dispatched to Ambassador Page in London regarding his comment upon the statement attributed to the British foreign office. Whether he will make any further criticism in this matter probably will depend upon Great Britain's answer to Secretary Bryan's apology which probably will be delayed until Monday or Tuesday.

To Reorganize Probing Committee.

Democratic members of the senate foreign relations committee have determined that if the investigation of Mexican border conditions and American financial support to revolutionists is to be continued by the special subcommittee that worked along the border last year, that committee will be reorganized so that its control rests with democratic senators.

The investigation conducted last year was under direction of Senator Smith of Michigan, and Senator Fall, both Republicans, who are now preparing reports. Prior to the end of the last congress Senator Smith obtained permission to continue the investigation into the present congress.

The foreign relations committee will determine next week as to whether the investigation is to be carried on. If the committee is authorized to continue, it will be reorganized so that the democratic members will control it and the chairman will become a democrat.

Natural relations for investigation of Mexican conditions have been introduced in the senate recently and demands are being considered by the foreign relations committee in the general discussion involving the future of the work of the existing investigating committee. The Smith Fall committee was appointed under a resolution directing it to determine whether a bill had been introduced in congress which would be considered in the scope of Mexican border conditions and the treatment of American in the United States of Mexico.

Mexico City, August 16—Vicarious attacks on Dr. William Bayard Rust who is here for the purpose of advising President Wilson on affairs in Mexico, are contained today in nearly all the Mexican newspapers.

The intemperate attacks accuse him of being an interventionist whose great desire is to see the stars and stripes waving over Mexico.

Other comments are of a similar tenor.

Dr. Rust has received a dozen anonymous warnings either telephoned or written that he is in danger of arrest or expulsion. He believes that the campaign against him is directed from the United States.

Mantoloking, N. J., August 16—After an eight day trip, 100 miles through mountains and over deserts with a 100 lb. trunk, Eugene Wyatt, a former Mantoloking man with a party here expected from Mexico and is at El Paso, Texas, and his party traveled night and day for eight days and reached Mantoloking in an exhausted state.

Wyatt is chief organist for a special company of 150 volunteers in New York and was at Sierra Nevada. The revolutionists seized the rail lines and cut the telegraph wires and Wyatt was unable to get a dispatch through to his company or leave the country. Fearing for their lives, families and assistants left the night with a mule train carrying their baggage.

Upper Texas Peace Plan.

Beale, Texas, August 16—Henry Allen Tupper, president of the Upper Texas Peace League, who bears a proposition for peace, the nature of which he has not disclosed, will seek permission from constitutionalists to make a trip into the interior of Mexico and submit his proposition to Governor Lugo of Coahuila in person. He is expected to leave today. Tupper has arranged a conference with General Jesus Caraniza, brother of the constitutionalist leader for this morning but the meeting was postponed on account of the battle at Rodriguez.

Silly Season Statesman.

From the Engineer and Mining Journal.

One of the things that is a part of the business of a statesman is to be able to get out of a tight place. Reading of Atlanta Charter Bill Proved McClatchey's Biggest Job

Here is D. M. McClatchey, reading the bill of the house of representatives, which is probably the biggest thing he has done here, is written on 110 sheets of paper, each 25x15 inches in its dimensions. The entire bill requires four hours to be read through. It weighs six pounds and, as Mr. McClatchey says, "takes a blacksmith to hold it long enough to read it."

"If the things Atlanta does under this new charter," says Mr. McClatchey, "measure up to the size of the bill, she will have New York backed up into the Atlantic ocean in a few years."

Famed English Organist Plays At This Afternoon's Concert

Eugene Wyatt the celebrated English organist, will be the soloist at the free concert at the Auditorium Army this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Everybody in Atlanta is invited to hear him. He is the man who plays to 12,000 people at a time in Royal Albert Hall, London. He is expected to play to over 6,000 here in Atlanta.

Mr. Wyatt's program will be as follows:

- 1. Bach—Grand Fugue in G minor
- 2. Volstein—(a) "The Question" (b) "The Answer" Hoffman, (c) Scherzo in F, Op. 70, No. 3
- 3. Bachmann—(a) Prelude in C sharp minor, Chopin, (b) Polonaise in A, Op. 40, No. 1
- 4. Wyatt—(a) "Improvisation," (b) "Credo Serenade," (c) Scherzo Jalousie
- 5. Lemare—(a) Romance in D flat major, (b) Andante Pastorale, Op. 22, No. 1 (dedicated to E. W.)
- 6. Widor—(a) Allegro Cantabile, from Organ Symphony No. 5 Gounod, (b) Grand march from "La Reine de Saba"

It will be seen from the above that while the program is one that will surely interest all musicians, it is full of melody and harmony, and will appeal strongly to the popular ear.

Mr. Wyatt has been in Atlanta since Friday and has already thoroughly acquainted himself with the mechanism of the great organ. He is the first of a number of distinguished organists who will be brought here by the Music Festival association during the next couple of months. From among them will be chosen a successor to Dr. Percy J. Starnes.

"CUSSES" OUT TURNKEY AND GETS NEW CHARGE

Sam Goss, aged 20, of 47 Harold avenue, will face Recorder "Pro Tem" Preston Monday on two counts of disorderly conduct. Goss was arrested at Howell and Decatur streets Saturday night about 9 o'clock by Call Officers Milan and Palmer. Goss is said by the officers to have been raving drunk, and to have been swearing at everybody within hearing distance.

When taken to the station house Goss proceeded to raise such a disturbance and used such language in addressing Turnkey Whitley that the last named officer made a second charge of disorderly conduct against him.

LYNCHERS RECOGNIZED, INDICTMENTS EXPECTED

Grand Jury of Calhoun County Investigating Killing of Negro at Morgan.

Sylvester, Ga., August 15—(Special) The grand jury of Calhoun county called in special session by Judge Frank Park immediately after the lynching of Son Lovett, a negro, charged with murder at Morgan, on Thursday night, is reported to have evidence against members of the mob that took part in the crime, and it is believed that a special term of court will be called to try those who may be indicted.

Several prominent citizens of Shellman and others from Calhoun and Terrell counties are said to have been recognized when their masks were knocked off in a struggle they had with Deputy Sheriff W. L. Calhoun. No one was injured in the scuffle between the guards in charge of the negro and the members of the mob.

It is reported that the guards, when questioned before the grand jury swore that members of the mob gave the distress signal of a fraternal order when they approached to get the negro.

Reports that the lynchers made sarcastic remarks to Judge Park when he pleaded with them to spare the negro are untrue. Although they persisted in their effort to kill the black, the lynchers maintained a respectful attitude toward the judge.

Our Ineffective Mexican Policy. (From The Engineering and Mining Journal.)

During the last week the affairs of Mexico have figured more extensively in our newspapers than at any time since the fighting in the Mexican capital. Ambassador Wilson has returned and the president has intimated the nature of his own policy. This seems to be to try to persuade the Mexican factions to hold a prompt and fair election, and to promise to abide by the result, thus creating a government which the United States will recognize. If the Mexicans will not do this the United States may let all parties have arms and fight things to a finish among themselves. These proposals do not impress us as being effective. The idea of a fair election in Mexico is an idea rather a joke. The idea of letting the Mexicans fight things out has a certain merit. By the time they have done so they will have learned a lesson that may last a century, but the prospect that might in the meantime happen to foreigners in the country is not pleasing.

Melodies of Golden Grain.

The well-preserved octogenarian whose youthful days may have been passed on some New England farm may now, as he butters his white bread while gazing through a window of a swiftly rushing dining coach, look out upon harvest scenes calculated to arouse a farm smile over some contrasts between methods and conditions of the present and those of sixty or seventy years ago.

The wheat field in harvest time tells wonderful stories, it will sing a mid-summer hymn to one who will think upon it. Our sturdy old friend may recall the days when much time was mixed with the seed wheat to supply the deficiency in the soil, when the strong hand sowed it broadcast to the meagred trend when he clutched the sheaves to his body and cut them with a sickle possibly before his father bought a cradle.

A wisp of the wheat straw was used for binding twine was not in common use. And then the thrashing with the flail and the sacking of the grain and the long, slow drive to the old water-power mill down by the lively little stream the return with flail and the weekly baking in the big oven "Presto!" The few acres became vast fields of hundreds, and thousands in the middle states, the Ohio valley, the middle west, the great northwest and in states whose names were unknown in his youth he holds now the greatest potentialities in giving the whole world the staff of life. The drill succeeds the hand sower and gasoline drive the reaping, thrashing and winnowing machines through many decades that rings in the old gentleman's ears as his eyes flash to memories of a humble past and realization of a proud present.

Over seven hundred million bushels of wheat produced in the United States in the one year 1912! Yes of winter wheat whose green velvet emerged from its downy blanket of protecting snow there were 29,819,000 bushels. The most important producers with over twenty millions each of winter wheat to their account were Kansas, with 91,450,000, Nebraska, 50,850,000, Washington, 27,260,000, Missouri (notwithstanding its pest of the Hessian fly), 23,750,000, Pennsylvania, 23,220,000, Oklahoma, 20,095,000 bushels.

And of the 330,345,000 bushels of spring wheat the most important producers (over twenty millions each) were North Dakota, 143,820,000, Minnesota, 67,068,000, South Dakota, 52,158,000, Washington, 28,495,000.

Washington, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Oklahoma—our old student of wheat culture never heard of them in those days when, with each advance of his foot, his good right hand methodically scatter the seed broadcast.

Our Military "Movies."

(From The Chicago Record-Herald)

Tommy Atkins is not so large a figure in our national life as in that of Britain. We have had no Kipling to sing of him, army reports are not so interesting and most of us know precious little about him except what we can see when he follows the band down the avenue on holidays. Then we admire the process, machine-like regularity of his stride and his way of holding his chest, and speculate as to how the result was achieved.

Through the aid of moving pictures, army officials are trying to restrict the range of our speculation and widen the range of our knowledge. The new admirer of the process, machine-like action as well as the public exhibition last week by Major Thomas J. Dickson represent the first successful attempt to get the soldier before the public in work and play. The pictures were taken at Fort Riley and show a battery of horse artillery entraining to the front and in battle action as well as the work of the scouts and the telephone signal corps and many details of the soldier's daily life.

So far as the public is concerned, the pictures will have great educational value as well as unusual interest when they are publicly exhibited. They afford vivid glimpses of a little known phase of governmental activity and point the moral of efficiency. So far as the officers are concerned, the moving pictures should be highly

The Political Rights of Women

MRS. MARY L. McLENDON, Editor

President Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association

Years ago that fearless woman, Helen Gardner, declared: "Nowhere in all nature is the more fact of sex made a reason for inequality of liberty, for subjugation, for subordination and for determined inferiority of opportunity in education, in acquirement, in position—in a word, in freedom. Nowhere until we reach man's world."

Thirty-five years after we find the same state of affairs existing for woman as it still considered man's inferior, although three-fourths of the church members are women, while more than three-fourths of the inmates of prisons and other places of detention are men and boys. Women are not considered worthy to act as delegates in the great deliberative meetings of the church or to administer the sacraments, or to preach the gospel except in a few of the newer and more progressive churches.

But women are counted in the representation of the church as well as in both state and national governments, and they are assessed as much for being permitted to be so counted.

The negro slaves in the south fifty years ago were counted the same way, and we had many congressmen in those days who were indebted to the negroes and the women (non-voters) for their place and power.

The Power of the Ballot!

When the negro men were enfranchised by the passage of the fifteenth amendment to the United States constitution they left the women behind, white and colored, far in the rear, and are their political superiors today. These negro men are treated with respect and consideration in the south today. They are written about and talked of as Mr. So and So, Bishop So and So, while the negro woman who teach are not designated as Miss or Mrs. So and So in the newspapers when the list of public school teachers are published. If these negro women school teachers had the ballot every one of them would have Miss or Mrs. prefixed to their names. This may appear unimportant, but it serves to illustrate the power of the ballot in a simple, homely way.

Who works any harder than the housewives of the United States of America?

Nobody!

But housewives are not to be counted in the United States census, and the enumerators have been instructed not to count anything, so Uncle Sam says, and only "gainful occupations" can be counted in the statistics of the United States census bureau.

Now why not have a law to force men to pay housewives a living wage, and an eight-hour day for work which is indispensable? Justice demands this, but the men who monopolize the ballot consider it to be their duty to keep the women down just as they did the negro men in days gone by. This system and standard of inequality for women, fostered by both church and state, is largely responsible for woman's unequal share of the law, and everywhere else with man. If the church would move in this matter women would stand a living chance with men in their pursuit of life, liberty and happiness. No church and its attitude towards any movement has a wonderful influence on government.

Years ago that wonderful man, Canon Charles Kingsley, said: "This will never be a good world for women until the last remnant of the canon law is civilized from the face of the earth," and Lord Brougham as emphatically declared: "The common law of England is a disgrace to Christianity and the civilization of the nineteenth century." In 1837 he said the English laws concerning women were in such a bad state that he dared not amend one of them because, so vile were they, as soon as the attention was directed to them he believed the most of them would crumble and most of the human relationships would be left without a law.

As the laws of the United States are largely copied from the old English laws, which Lord Brougham so strongly condemns, we can see that we are right in his day and generation. This is one of the things that Theodore Roosevelt thought of when he said: "There are many injustices from which women suffer which can only be removed by the use of the ballot."

Age of Consent in Georgia.
The W. C. T. U. the Woman's suffrage association and the Woman's clubs of Georgia have been trying since 1887 to have the age of consent raised from ten years to twenty-one years in Georgia. How have they succeeded? They have no political power.

Hon. R. B. Blackburn introduced a bill at this last session to raise it to twelve years, and he thought a little of its value that he had never heard anything of it. The first thing the Georgia women did with their political power was to raise the age of consent in that state to twenty-one years. There must be a lot of sensible, level-headed men in Tennessee, for those men have raised the age to twenty-one years also, and women cannot vote in Tennessee either. In all the "free states" the first thing women do is to see that the girls are protected as far as laws can protect anybody.

Votes for Women
Will change the status of things very much, as has in the ten states and one territory where women have equal rights with men. There are eighteen southern states in the union where mothers are now co-guardians with the fathers of their children. Missouri has been the first to raise the state to do this simple act of justice to the women of that state.

This law gives mothers and fathers equal jurisdiction over their children. How is it in Georgia? Consider the case of Mrs. Mary W. Zachry of Julian J. Zachry. The father is entitled to the custody of his children unless the law says, "clear and strong proof can be given of his unfitness." And the law and the church and society has a different standard of morals for man and woman. What would be unbecomable in the man would be condoned in the woman. Judge Henry C. Hammond (suffragist) says: "The court expressly refrains from discussing the natural rights of the mother—in law they do not exist!"

That is to say Mrs. Zachry has by Georgia law no right of possession whatever of her children, although she has suffered and almost died to bring them into this world to give the man who promised to love, cherish and protect her the power to write her name and light her life by stealing her oldest child. He did not want the baby, because it would be too much trouble to himself.

Votes for women would stop all such meanness as has been manifested in Mrs. Zachry's case as well as in thousands of others not considered worthy of mention, because of the obscurity of the people who suffered.

Pensioning Mothers.

Eighteen states now have laws pensioning mothers. They are: Illinois, California, Colorado, Washington, Utah, South Dakota, Idaho, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, Ohio, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nevada, New Hampshire and Oregon. Wisconsin's governor will sign a bill very soon and Governor Sulzberger of New York, has appointed two women members of a commission to inquire into the practicability of pensions for widows in New York state. Ohio's Mother's Pension Fund is $700,000 each year. Pennsylvania's is $200,000, and Missouri's is less than $1,000,000 which it had been spending each year for the institutional care of children. Within two or three years nearly every state in the union will have a law that widows and deserted mothers shall have the help from the state if it is necessary to keep the children in the homes with their mothers to care for them. In Kansas, where a man deserts his wife and child, he is arrested and forced to work and his wages are sent to his wife and children. The two laws will work beautifully together to preserve the home which anti-suffragists call the "sanctuary of woman's vote."

How a California Citizen Lost Her Vote.
Mrs. Ethel Coope McKenzie, of San Francisco, married a Scotchman and the state supreme court decided August 1st that the San Francisco election commission were acting according to law when they refused to let her vote in a late election. It was decided that Mrs. McKenzie is no longer a citizen of California because she married a subject of the King of Great Britain who had not foreworn his allegiance and was not a citizen of the United States.

If the right of the male to vote in an present determined by the naturalization laws, the right of the female to vote may be determined by practically no standards at all. Under the present laws, the naturalization of women follows that of their husbands and fathers. Women citizens of the ten "free" states can and are deprived of their vote if they marry aliens, but immigrant women may be immediately enfranchised and vote if they marry male citizens of the free states. Their citizenship is retained, even though they may be divorced, if they still continue to live in the United States and in states where women have the vote. There are 1,000,000 foreign-born adult females in the United States and they are continually coming to "the land of the free and the home of the brave." Of the ten states where women vote, three are leading immigrant states. It is absolutely necessary that a better standard for the naturalization of women must be adopted in the interest of fairness toward women.

Why should the old-time prejudices and unfair laws be allowed to stand in the way of the rights and privileges of women "who are to the manor born," and make their citizenship dependent on that of their husbands and fathers? Anybody can see the unfairness of the whole proceeding and feel sure that the brave women of the "free" states will never rest until their political and legal status are made equal with that of men whether native-born or aliens, who, as a general rule, are the most ignorant and the least intelligent of our government than the negroes and women of the south.

Men v. Women.

We have been treated to an illuminating illustration of the fact that men are against women by the flippancy in which the Georgia legislature have sought to dispose of the Home for Wayward Girls. Nobody was surprised that Senator W. W. Stark, chairman of the appropriations committee, should have proposed to cut out $10,000 from the $200,000 appropriation. Everybody knows he is "a little wimpy," first, last and all the time.

He is known as the man who made it not attorney (himself) but women suffragists from using the senate chamber for the purpose of advocating the complete enfranchisement of women. He said he was not in favor of it because Jesus Christ had not selected women to be His disciples. He (Stark) would have selected a woman to fill Judas Iscariot's place, if he had been Jesus Christ.

We are constrained to believe that he has had such an unfortunate case with his own women that he cannot refrain from displaying how seriously he has been hurt. Yet he could not refrain from accepting the position of senator, by which he promised to look after the interests of all the people (both male and female) of the senatorial district which has thereby been dishonored.

He should remember that a woman did not betray our Master; a woman did not deny Him; even Peter did. Womanhood should not be insulted by even a suggestion that one of them should fill the traitor's place.

That there are wayward girls in Georgia is largely the fault of wayward fathers who do not protect their own mothers and sisters, and look upon woman as made for man's use and abuse.

The truth is, men, as a rule, are accustomed to think of women when we have classed so long with lunatics, criminals, idiots, paupers, mimes and aliens, that it is not very surprising that this man Stark should have declared:

"If this measure (the Home for Wayward Girls) were made the law, next year would cause committees urging the state to take care of cats and dogs as well as girls."

Clubs Are Urged to Appoint Strong Legislative Committees

With the closing of the 1913 session of the legislature we should feel proud that the "spell of forty-four years" has been broken and the state no longer discriminates against her country teachers. Now we are assured we are progressing in our evolution when we reason from the basis of society and recognize the value of the state's most valuable assistants. We want a higher civilization—the competent country teacher who carries inspiration to both the child and the home.

While the mother's congress has been interested in many special bills we were glad for the great question of tax reform to have precedence over all others, that our progress should no longer be impeded and now that the basis is adjusted we feel sure the various interests pertaining to child welfare will be intelligently and conscientiously considered by this same body of men next year.

In our efforts to further the interests of child welfare in Georgia, the mothers' congress has been actively working for four bills: the kindergarten, vital statistics, revision of state health laws and for defective and delinquent children. Perhaps the one creating the widest interest this session was the kindergarten bill, which was a permissive bill, purely optional with each county or district, and no appropriation involved. Much enthusiasm over the state was shown in this bill and a large delegation from different parts of the state were present to speak in its behalf before the committee.

It was unanimously passed by the educational committee of the senate, was referred to the same committee of the house and discussed at three sessions. At the first and third sessions of the house committee a large number of speakers present, both for and against the bill, and it was lost by one vote and a minority report was filed and the bill rests with the rules committee to be taken up next session.

The vital statistics bill was read, but never reached the committee, Mr. Ellis' bill to revise the laws of the state board of health was passed by committee unanimously and with the rules committee will be heard next session.

The bill for defective and delinquent children called for an appropriation, and for this reason was held over for another year. Much educational work for each of these bills has been done, and now, as Mother's club and Parent-Teacher association are making out their programs for the coming year, it is hoped each club will have a strong committee on legislation and will outline an active campaign to begin work with the representatives now, and continue it while they are at home.

Fourth International Hygiene Congress Meets August 25th

Much interest centers in the fourth international congress on school hygiene, which will be held in Buffalo, N. Y. August 25-30. This is the initial meeting for America. In 1914 they met in Nuremberg, Paris, in 1907, London, 1910.

This will be the first time woman has been heard in this congress, but this time she will be an important factor, for every woman's organization is asked to send delegates.

The foremost authorities in the world will read papers and take part in discussions. This congress has to do with the health, moral and physical of school children.

Former President Elliot, of Harvard is the president of this congress. It is expected many from our state will be present.

I. Those who register in person at this congress will be listed in the published proceedings under the following headings:

The Longest Sentence.

(From The New York Mail.)
The English papers are running a competition in the citation of long sentences—famous long sentences—the works of great writers. It is claimed that this one from Ruskin holds the record up to date:

"If it be true—and it can scarcely be disputed—that nothing has been for centuries consecrated by public admiration, without possessing in a high degree some kind of sterling excellence, it is not because the average intellect and feeling of the majority of the public are competent in any way to distinguish what is really excellent, but because all erroneous opinion is inconsistent, and all ungrounded opinion transitory; so that while the fancies and feelings which deny deserved honor and award what is undue have neither root nor strength sufficient to maintain constant testimony for a length of time, the opinions formed on right grounds by those few who are in reality competent judges, being necessarily stable, communicate themselves gradually from mind to mind, descending lower as they extend wider, until they leave the whole lump and rule by absolute authority, even where the grounds and reasons for them cannot be understood. On this, the gradual victory of what is consistent over what is vacillating, depends the reputation of all that is highest in art and literature."

But this certainly cannot be the longest sentence on record. It is a mere laconicism, a phraseological baby, compared with the celebrated "hypothetical question" which was submitted to experts by Counsel Delmas in the Thaw murder trial:

A Crab's Housemaid.

The common hermit crab keeps a housemaid to clean out his house. When he first starts life this particular species of crab goes for some large shell which he keeps in which he can live at ease, rent free. He usually chooses a large whelk shell, and introduces a large seaworm, belonging to what is known as the "nerella" family, and which grows to a length of 8 or 9 inches, to keep the interior of the shell clean. The crab feeds heartily on sea creatures that wander carelessly into the shell, and throws the indigestible parts of them about the floor. The nerella worm promptly consumes these remains, and keeps the shell as clean as a new pin.

Georgia's Sons at Uncle Sam's Military Academy

NORTH BARRACKS (Lower) CADET CHAPEL (On Chapel Hill) U. S. M. A. at WEST POINT.

By Harris P. Scott.
The commonwealth of Georgia has been one of the foremost of the southern states in furnishing officers for the United States army through the medium of the military academy at West Point.

Two hundred and seventy-four Georgians have been admitted to West Point since the foundation of the academy, back in 1802, a very large percentage of whom have graduated and gone out into the service as army officers.

Cadets have been coming to West Point from the state of Georgia for just a century. One hundred years ago, in 1811, the first Georgians were admitted. Two of them entered that year. One more came in a year later and as there were exigencies requiring army officers at that particular period, the United States being at war with Great Britain, the Georgians at West Point got through the military academy in "fix-time," all three graduating in March, 1815.

The first cadets admitted from Georgia were Robert M. Forsyth, who entered July 25, 1913, Robert W. Pooler, who entered December 27 of the same year, and William Washington Gordon, who entered May 14, 1914.

Gordon seems to have had the best academic record of the trio while at the academy. He was always well up in his class and stood No. 7 at graduation that year. Upon his graduation Gordon was assigned as a third lieutenant of ordnance and served as aide-de-camp for a short time on the staff of Major General Gaines during the war of 1812-16. He resigned six months later to practice law in Savannah and afterward became a prominent figure in the political activities of his section of the state, serving in the house of representatives at Washington in 1825-26.

Pooler Goes to Congress.
Pooler graduated No. 23 in the class and was given a commission as brevet second lieutenant of engineers. He, too, resigned from the army to take up the practice of law and in 1818 opened an office in Savannah, where he got into politics and, like his classmate, Gordon, was elected to congress, where he served 1823-25.

Pooler's army career was short. He graduated No. 24 in his class and was assigned as a third lieutenant of artillery, serving with troops in various posts in the north until

DAVID B. FALK, JR.

ALLEN G. THURMAN.

JEFFERSON R. DAVENPORT.

1818, when he was finally dismissed from the service. He died a year later in New York.
From that time on and until 1889 Georgia steadily contributed her quota of cadets to West Point, but from 1889 to 1893 not one Georgian entered the academy. In the last named year eight were admitted, not all of them graduates, however.

For a period of six more years until 1899 there was another "hull in Georgia cadets, not one of the many candidates from the "Cracker" state being among those who were successful in the summer of 1899, however, four more were admitted and then not until 1873 were there any more Georgians coming to West Point. Since that time not a year has rolled by but that some one or more cadets from Georgia have been admitted.

Among the more prominent of the many Georgians who have graduated at West Point and who have made names for themselves in military life, are Edward Porter Alexander of the class of 1857, Frederick W. Sibley, of the class of 1874, Earnest Albert Garlington, of 1878, and Cornelius DeWitt Wilcox, of 1887. Both Alexander and Wilcox, besides having brilliant military records, have distinguished themselves in the literary world through frequent and various contributions in service publications and technical journals.

Col. Wilcox, professor at West Point, writes a splendid linguist and at present holds a chair as professor of modern languages at West Point with the rank of colonel in the army. He graduated No. 4 in his class, having served with gallantry and distinction in the Philippines and is one of the most popular and best liked officers ever on duty at the Military Academy.

Colonel Frederick W. Sibley entered the academy in 1869, and was five years in getting through the course. Sibley has a meritorious army career, serving brilliantly throughout the various Indian campaigns and the Spanish-American war. He was commander of the battalion of cadets at West Point from 1903 to 1911 and is now colonel of the Fourth regiment of cavalry with station at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Ernest A. Garlington was admitted to West Point in 1872 and graduated four years later standing No. 30 in the class. He is now inspector general of the United States army with the rank of brigadier general, and is on duty as the chief of his department in Washington. General Garlington's son, Crawford Garlington, graduated from West Point in the class of 1910, and is now a lieutenant in the engineer branch of the army.
Some others of the Georgians who have gone out into the army from West Point and who are serving with prominence in their respective commands are Major James P. Jewey, of the class of 1892, who graduated No. 2 in the class and is now in the engineer corps of the army; Captain Fuller H. Lindsey, of the same class, who went into the cavalry branch of the service upon graduation and who is now back at West Point in command of the military academy band; and Major John W. Schaeffer, who was then superintendent of the military academy.
Phipps' coming caused considerable "fury" at the time, but notwithstanding much adverse criticism, the staff stuck it out for the whole four years and at graduation stood No. 30 in order of general merit in a class of 74 members. In recognizing his worth, the army gave him the rank of No. 15 in law No. 11 in geology No. 7 in ordnance and gunnery No. 57, and was up with the leaders in discipline, having few demerits for misconduct and standing No. 15.

Phipps was commissioned with the members of his class, and was afterwards assigned to one of the negro regiments in the army. He went along swimmingly for some time until appointed commissary officer of his regiment. While in that job (and in his accounts were said to have been responsible for a hurried flight into Mexico, from which country he was never known to have returned.)
Despite his color, Phipps got along immensely well with the other cadets in the corps. He lived alone during his four years' stay here, and, of course, had no part in the social activities of the corps, but he was not socially ostracized by any means. There are officers in the service today who remember Phipps as a pretty "good fellow."

There are nine cadets now at West Point who hail from the state of Georgia. The class which graduates next June contains two. They are Jefferson Reese Davenport and Clifford James Mathews. Four others from Georgia were admitted at the same time with Davenport and Mathews, but only these two have survived.
Cadet Davenport is representing the tenth congressional district, and entered West Point in March, 1910. He is one of the most popular cadets in the corps today, a sergeant in the battalion organization and a regular "fly catch" to the army's baseball team. Cadet Mathews was also admitted to the academy in March, 1910 and represents the third congressional district. Davenport lives at Warrenton, while Mathews' home is at Ford Valley, Ga. Both have been doing well since their entrance. At the last published standing of the "order of general merit," Davenport was No. 8 and Mathews No. 9. There are 107 members in the class.

In the class of '15 there are three cadets left out of the seven who were admitted from Georgia in 1911. They are Clifford Barrington King, Clarence Brewster Lindner and Benjamin Anthony Yancey. They represent the seventh, first and fifth congressional districts, respectively. The 1915 is the biggest class ever at West Point, and two years hence will graduate the largest number of officers ever turned out of the academy. The class now numbers 172. There were 265 when it was admitted two years ago. King stands No. 83 on the general merit roll, Lindner No. 87 and Yancey No. 163. King lives at Rome, Ga., Lindner at Savannah and Yancey in Atlanta. All are now home on three months' furlough.

The three cadets who were admitted to the academy from Georgia in 1912 are all here yet. They are George Hollenbeck Blankenship, representing the fourth congressional district, Barrington Lockhart Flanigan, representing the eighth congressional district, and William Spence, representing the second congressional district. Spence stands the best of these three. The last posted "markings" placed him No. 38 in a class of 150 members. Blankenship was No. 59 and Flanigan No. 134. Blankenship lives at Columbus, Fla., Flanigan at Athens and Spence at Camilla.
Only one cadet of the 1912 admitted this June is from Georgia. He is Clark Kittrell, appointed from the tenth congressional district. Cadets Davenport and Kittrell are from the same congressional district. There is a law providing that when any cadet has served three years at West Point his successor may be appointed and admitted, if successful in the entrance examination. Davenport has been here three years.
A Georgia "plebe."
Cadet Kittrell has the honor of being the only Georgia "plebe" in the corps of cadets. He takes readily to the routine, however, and gets as much enjoyment out of it as the upper classmen will permit.

Georgia had two representatives in the class which graduated officers from West Point this year. They were David Beauregard Falk, Jr., and Allen G. Thurman. Falk and Thurman were the only Georgians admitted four years ago, and both survived the hard grind to the finish, graduating well up in the class in June.

Cadet Thurman did especially well, standing No. 19 in a class of 93. Falk was No. 50. Both these Georgians worked hard while here, especially during the past year. Thurman stood No. 43 a year ago and Falk No. 66. Falk was a senatorial appointee, his home being at 115 East Liberty street, Savannah. Thurman was appointed from the sixth congressional district, and resides at Barnesville, Pike county. Both were popular while at the academy.
According to the "Howitzer," a year-book published by the cadets of the graduating class, Falk had the reputation of being the "squarest man in the class," and of "unswerving loyalty to Georgia." Falk, who is now a full-fledged lieutenant, has been assigned to the infantry branch of the army, and is at present spending his "leave" at his home in Savannah.
Cadet Thurman's high standing gave him the choice of three branches of the service, artillery, cavalry or infantry. He chose the latter, and after that Thurman is no slouch with the rifle, and before his graduation from West Point won a marksman's medal at the target butts. He was prominent in athletics, and a member of the army wrestling squad. He is at present spending his vacation at Barnesville. Both these new officers will join their respective commands at the expiration of their "leaves" of absence in October.

Decatur Boy Scouts Camp on the Chestatee River

"Line up for the sirup and corn-bread!" Have you ever hiked fifteen miles over mountain trails and arrived in camp just in time to hear the call for supper? It's the exact sort of a scout and a fellow-camper that hungry feeling on days the Decatur, Ga. troop of Boy Scouts have been camping in the famous Blue Ridge mountains of north Georgia on the banks of the Chestatee river, at a point twenty-four miles north of Gainesville and about eight miles east of Dublin, Ga. The scouts, under the leadership of Scott Candler, scoutmaster, and Hayes Gibson, a member of the local scout council, left Atlanta early Monday morning over the Southern railway and arrived in Gainesville about 7:30 a. m. In that city, provisions for the ten days' outing were bought and loaded on a two-wheeled team. Another team holding ten boys started about 11:00 with the provision wagon, while the other ten boys walked. The boys who began the journey in the wagon unloaded, after an hour's ride, and the boys who had been waiting took their places. The squads alternated in this way, each riding and walking an hour at the time. The winding mountain road on their trip of forty miles was attractive at every turn. After crossing the Chattahoochee river four miles out of Gainesville, a gradual ascent was made into the foothills of the Blue Ridge.

Boy Scouts rode the river a fine place to swim.

A pair of Scouts on guard.

Sun Was Hot.
With a bright sun beating down upon us in the afternoon the walking was warm, but the haze that enveloped the chain of mountains across the northern horizon made them appear cool and quiet and invited us onward with an enticing charm. Grand old Yonah stood off in the distance at our right, with the lower peaks swept round toward away as our eyes swept round toward the western horizon, until they melted away completely. The mountain heights were an inspiration to urge us along, but four thousand eight hundred and forty-one blackberry patches along the roadside, burdened with luscious fruit, in a measure hindered the advance. As the system passed each blackberry bush became as bare as the proverbial cupboard at old Mother Hubbard and the thorns and "higgers" even were swept upward in the rush with the rank of weeds. The Chestatee river, where we were to camp, after following for two miles a small road leading off from the main thoroughfare. Twilight in north Georgia is very very short, and soon after the sun slipped down behind the mountains right was upon us. It being too late to pitch our tents the whole troop unrolled their army blankets spread them on the floor of the grand old cottages near our camping site. The west had been left of the midday meal, duly up in the blankets and not a fellow boy in the troop needed rocking to enter the land of dreams.

Getting into Camp Life.
Next morning the business of pitching the tents was completed and camp life was begun.

A splash of clear cold water was at the bottom of a deep ravine just below our tents and the water little stream that it made it out for the whole four cottages near our camping site. The west had been left of the midday meal, duly up in the blankets and not a fellow boy in the troop needed rocking to enter the land of dreams.
Getting into Camp Life.
Next morning the business of pitching the tents was completed and camp life was begun.

of sixty feet. This was the swimming "hole." A sand bar on one side a hundred and fifty feet long and fifty feet wide gave the appearance of an ocean beach and made the place ideal for swimming, and it was here that the scouts found daily amusement. Swimming and diving and basking on the beach, however, were not the only pleasures. All of the boys, to use the scout language, were tenderfoot on reaching camp, but after a few days, examinations for second-class scouts were held at various times, the eral different kinds of food, sending messages by either semaphore, Myers or Morse codes, making a trip of seven miles through the country alone and writing a correct description of same.

Bread Line Was Popular.
The bread line was an interesting feature of camp life. At mess call the boys would line up, each with his tin plate, fork, spoon and glass pass by the table which held the victrola. On the opposite side of the table, Georgia, the colored cook, dished out the beans, cabbage, rice, peach and blackberry pie, etc., and after each meal every boy would go down to the stream near the spring and wash his plate and eating tools. It was amusing to hear the trades that were made during mealtimes. One boy would swap another a piece of bread for cabbage, and another would wash the other's dishes for his share of syrup. David Hartman as a leader didn't have a thing on these boys. That's a wonderful climate for the appetite.
The last afternoon in camp, a field meet was held on the sandy beach by the swimming hole. Those boys who had been through the course and were carrying along bathing suits used them for track suits, and those who did not bring bathing suits managed to worry along with anything at all.
On the morning of the field meet, camp was broken, the tent, blankets and bedding were folded up and loaded on a wagon, the boys piled into a motor wagon and the return trip was made to Gainesville. The wagons arrived just in time to have the baggage checked and the troop boarded the for Atlanta, unburdened, brown and happy for ten days' life in the open, with not even a broken comb or a snake bite to mar the pleasure of such a delightful experience.
The following boys from the Decatur troop made the trip: Tom Alexander, Ross Wilson, Louis East, Joe Gibson, Joe Cole, Joe Gardner, Joe Gibson, Joe Wilson, Joe Maddox, Joe Harrel, Luke Green, Ralph Harrel, Edwin Barry, Harry Stanley, John Stapler, Pat Wat, Cliff Allen, Alton, Pinner, Wilson, James A. McLennan, Nat Pratt, Scott Candler, scoutmaster, Hayes Gibson and George, the cook.

GET READY FOR GOOD TIMES. Unless all signs fail, Georgia is in for a remarkably prosperous fall and winter.

Reports from every part of the state indicate splendid crop conditions, and the effect is already felt in the quickening of trade.

Ask the average banker, whose duty it is to keep in close touch with local business, and he will tell you that from every report that reaches him the outlook is exceedingly promising.

Ask the jobbing merchant and he will tell you that he gets the same reports from the country merchants the state over.

Ask the manufacturer and he will tell you that the situation approximates that of two years ago, and already he is increasing his output for the winter's business.

Ask the farmer himself, and he will tell you that unless something serious happens between now and the harvest time—and the harvest season is now here—he hopes to do "tolerably well" this year.

When a farmer tells you that it may be regarded as a somewhat superlative expression, for, generally speaking, the farmer is not in the habit of "blowing" crop conditions or of taking too bright a view of harvest surroundings.

He has worked like a horse all the year to get what is in sight, and he very naturally regrets that it is not a little more than whatever it is.

And human nature, generally, takes about the same view. "But this is going to be another farmer's year!"

Things came his way two years ago, and then there was a slump, and that slump, as bad as it seemed at the time, was not without its good effect.

It caused him to pause and to take an inventory. He studied his gait and went at this year's crop with the determination to get a maximum result at a minimum expense.

He cut off here and there, and the upshot of it all was that he faces the harvest this year with the satisfaction of knowing that in many respects this has been the most economical crop raised in Georgia during the past ten years.

Whether, therefore, the crop is as large this year as it was two years ago, the net profit will undoubtedly be greater, for the bumper crop of two years ago was one of the most expensive crops ever produced in Georgia.

So get ready for good times this fall! Business is already "opening up."

And when the fall is fairly here and the crops are in and the money which is to pay for them is on its way through the channels of trade, we may expect to find every branch of trade and industry in full response.

Mark our prediction: good times are in store for Georgia, and the next few years should bring the state the richest returns on record.

A WOMAN'S LOVE.

The impeachment of Governor Sulzer is a tragedy so far-reaching that, while carrying its own bitter lesson, it overshadows not only one man's life, but lives linked to his by the strongest human ties.

Confronted by it, notable achievement in the past counts for little or nothing—remembered by his friends with sorrow, it is forgotten by his enemies; it cannot help him now.

A strong man in many things—entrenched in the faith of friends—tolling valiantly up to high estate, only to stand on unsure ground, fast crumbling beneath him! The pity of it all! Ruined ambition—present and future irretrievably blighted; implacable enmity with hands at his throat—justice, stern, immovable, though, perhaps, a pitying avenger, the solemn figure in the shadow of a dark destiny!

But there is another figure that illumines the darkness fast gathering around him: The man is not alone. From faces frowning on him he turns to one, radiant with the light, the loyalty and devotion of a woman's changeless love: There he encounters no reproach; only Love that would hide in its heart forever all the wounding thorns of life: Love that says: "He is guiltless; I alone have offended,—and take the cross!"

Therein lies the pathos of it—the one relieving gleam in all the shadows of the tragedy. If Love could save him, that woman's would.

That must be the beauty and bitterness of it all to the man himself—that this sacrifice of Love should be necessary, yet unavailing.

It is the one star in the storm—the divine sermon of truth and trust, of faithfulness unto death itself, and it is worth a life's ambition to know it—to be thrilled by its deep significance. "There are foes almost innumerable, but here is shelter—here is rest, and life's worth living for the sake of Love!"

It is but the sweet, uplifting story of woman's love the world over; which says today, even as of old: "The shadow or the light with thee? The love of life's morning is for the darkness, too; it alters not when it alteration finds; my hand in thine, and 'whither thou goest I will go; and thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.'"

STANDING BY THE COLORS!

The distressing news comes from the Chicago Garment Manufacturers' association that Milady's frocks, this season, are to be rather more subdued than the rich, Bulgarian effects of the past season.

We protest. Fashion has led us luminously along thus far, and we have no wish to emerge from red realms of roses into the somber shadows of a Quaker environment. We know very well why the rainbow has been the theme of poets from the time it blossomed in the storm: It is the many-hued ribbon which belts the blue dress of the sky, and at its end imagination has pictured a glitter of gold.

The world reveals in color, and the sun-painter of the sky gives glowing lessons in it. Give us color, and plenty of it! Why should Beauty be gowned in gray? Bright colors make us resigned to the loss of sunlight on dim days; houses in dull gray seem to have no doors of welcome, but a colorful dwelling attracts, invites, and suggests bright fares, and laughter and song.

Color is a recognition of one of the inalienable rights of beauty; we don't give priceless jewels sadder settings, but the richest! "Old Glory," rippling out its red bars, is the most beautiful of national banners; color "takes" with the savage, and with all reasonable earthly saints, who hope for golden crowns hereafter; a dignified senator—even Colonel Bob Lowry—would not dare wear a red necktie in too close proximity to a bull proudly feeding in a home-pasture; the bull would "go for it," and heaven help the senator if he had forgotten his tree-climbing days! And there's the Spanish matador—you know what happens when the bull glimpses his red cloak!

Who is clamoring for modification of the sparkling beauty of woman's dress? Some gray Diogenes, perhaps, blinking at the sunlight, who is trying to find an honest man with a dark lantern!

Away with him and all who would prevent us from feasting our eyes on a riot of color.

Here's to the bright-gowned woman the admiration of the world, and heaven forbid that the church should challenge if we add: "And the envy of the angels!"

OUR PHYSICIANS IN LONDON.

The American medical profession is to be congratulated on the prominent part taken by some of their number in the recent medical congress in London. There were ten thousand physicians there, from all parts of the world, and of those who delivered addresses and performed operations, none attracted more attention, or occasioned more serious and favorable comment than the Americans.

Sir Thomas Barlow is reported as having said that the address on surgery, delivered before a large general meeting in Albert Hall, by Dr. Harvey Cushing, formerly of Johns Hopkins, now of Harvard, was the keynote of the congress.

Dr. Cushing, in the midst of his address, rebuked the anti-vivisectionists, pointing out how much better it would have been to have employed animals instead of human volunteers when investigating the ravages of fever in Cuba and Panama. He said, further, "Animals whose preservation is desirable benefit as greatly as man from these investigations." This statement was loudly cheered even by those who find some merit in Browning's "Old Dog Tray."

Dr. A. L. Sorensen, of New York, caused the sage physicians of the world to marvel as he outlined the possibility of grafting legs and arms to replace those lost. Dr. Sorensen said that one, who has suffered an amputation may have the leg of a dead man or woman fixed upon him or her by surgeons who will join the nerves and the blood vessels, making the dead limb revive and become alive to its new owner.

Dr. Sorensen has, for a number of years, been experimenting on animals. He gave this illustration of his success: "I took the leg from a dead white dog and grafted it on a yellow dog whose leg had been removed. The yellow dog, with one white leg, now trots about thoroughly well." Dr. Sorensen said, further, "I have now three patients awaiting my return, to whom I hope to give new limbs taken from the bodies of persons accidentally killed."

Dr. F. H. Albee, also of New York, performed an operation of a kind that had never before been seen in England. The demonstration was witnessed by a vast crowd of the most famous surgeons of the world. A London surgeon thus describes the operation in The Daily Mail:

"The basis of our present method of treatment of tuberculosis of the spine is to reduce to a minimum the movements of the diseased spinal bones by means of splints or plaster casts applied to the body. Dr. Albee applies his spirit to the unaffected ends of the diseased bones themselves. With the patient, a child of four, lying on its face, Dr. Albee made a semi-circular incision through the skin and raised a skin flap some three inches in diameter from over the diseased bone. Then projecting portions of each vertebra were split vertically about a third of an inch deep with a chisel and mallet.

"This wound was then temporarily covered in with bandages and a new skin incision was made over the front of the shin bone with a circular electric saw. Dr. Albee then cut out of the shin a piece of bone about three inches long and a third of an inch wide. This was then inserted edgewise into the furrow made in the diseased vertebrae. The spirit was then firmly fixed in place by stitching ligaments on each side of the backbone over it. Both wounds were then closed and the child was sent back to bed."

The observers were unanimous in praise of the operation. Professor Henry Koplik, of New York, also attracted considerable attention by his discussion of "Infant Mortality in the First Four Months of Life." He explained that there are many conditions of both the father and the mother which result in the birth of a child that cannot possibly live a month. He said, also, that the social position of the parents has much to do with infant mortality, that not half as many infants die among the well-to-do or comfortable classes as among the poor. Possibly Dr. Koplik used the term "social position" because he was speaking in London. "Well-to-do" and "comfortable" do not, necessarily, have to do with American social position.

The address of Dr. K. R. Beall, of Texas, on pellagra, attracted special attention because Sir William Osler—he of the chloroform joke—five years ago declared to the American Medical association, that the disease had no practical interest for them, as it did not exist in the United States. Dr. Beall interested the congress in statistics of southern states, as compiled by Dr. Stewart Roberts of Atlanta, whose work on pellagra has received unstinted praise from the leading medical experts of Italy, where Dr. Roberts spent several months carefully studying the disease.

A book would be required to give the names of all the American physicians who attended the congress, and to tell the many interesting and valuable things said and done by them. As Americans we can feel proud of the work of our physicians who are, indeed, our servants and often our saviors.

SPEEDING UP THE TARIFF BILL.

The greatest service congress can do the country is to speed up consideration of the tariff bill and hasten the date of a final vote.

Everywhere business men are mainly concerned in the date when the new customs duties will become effective. Petitions sent to congress and publications in many states bear testimony to this fact.

Yet despite the urgency of action, members of congress are over-indulging in the temptation to talk. Democrats are as notorious offenders as republicans. Knowledge that the measure will be judged by its final effect rather than by what is said now, has not restrained the irresistible flow of words.

Republican senators and those democrats who are opposed to currency revision are reconvinced to this orgy of talk, because it furthers their plans. Otherwise they would probably be fuming with impatience.

The Constitution regrets to note a lack of driving power among the democratic leaders. It would be a national calamity for them now to justify the predictions of inefficiency long urged against democratic statesmen. What the country expects from them now is action and not talk.

Arguments against the bill do not have to be answered word for word, at a double consumption of time. Let the measure speak for itself. The futility of debate should be apparent, since no amount of talk can now alter a single vote.

Let us have action.

Pretty soon all poems in honor of the Georgia watermelon will be returned to their authors who, if they are keen to business, may give them possum trimmings and still make them "go."

An old negro preacher announced from his Georgia pulpit recently that "Hell is sholy in de sun," whereupon a brother in the "Amten Corner" shouted: "Amen! Dat's hot 'nuff!"

An exchange tells of a Maryland poet who is "marketing nuff." Probably the poor fellow can't afford the other ingredients.

Peace pacts to the contrary, notwithstanding, there will be no peace until some of the lecture platforms are consumed by their own hot air.

Pretty soon they'll be awfully willing to trade that costly coat of tan for a light-weight ton of coal.

Huerta isn't different from the American officeholder—he doesn't know how to resign.

According to Walt Mason, it's so hot in Kansas that if a man from that state should go to hades he'd catch cold.

Just From Georgia

By FRANK L. STANTON

In the Fine Campmeatin' Season.

I in the fine campmeatin' season—that's the happy time to me. When the table's spread with Plenty—like salvation, full an' free place—

An' a-sayin' that reminds me of a time I have in view: Lost my heart to three young widders, till I shouted "Hallelu!"

I must say to tell it plain—I wasn't thinkin' o' the skies. But I sure did git religion—the religion of bright eyes!

There, whilst they was shinin' on me, 'twuz a privilege to be, An' I read my titles clearer since them eyes heid heaven for me!

When they "lined" the old hymns out my heart hopped out, o' place—'Specially the one that tells about "Amazing Grace." For when I saw my honey's eyes outshin the brightest gem, I knowed it wuz Amazing Grace that led me close to them!

The parson said: "That hymn'll hit yer road from the sky." But unless my honey went with me I didn't want to fly!

"For her," I said, "I'll render thanks—them cheeks, jes' like a rose, An' stand on Jordan's stormy banks till Gabriel's trumpet blow!"

"Love one another," wuz the text, an' fair the words did fall; I felt like stretchin' out my arms an' lovin' o' 'em all!

An' I told the parson plainly—the faith o' me to prove: "I'd camp here for eternity an' never want to move!"

Oh, time o' halleluia! The best time ever kivered: An' when that campmeatin' seemed the road for me, straight to heaven! An' when into the pearly gates my time has come to roam, 'I'll take my honey's hand in mine an' say: "We've both come home!"

Summer's a-kojn' jes' a-skinmin'; Winter the green trees 'll be trimmin', but any time o' day they'll announce here to stay you'll find me a-fishin' or a-widmin'. "You only are a boy once," is the sayin'; statesmen too dignified for playin'; Bet they'd like to be splasht' round with me down here where the happy times are stayin'!

Lightnin' not de stepple on fire in a minute, De auto-wagon 'sploded wid de preacher settin' in it; De man in de dr'hip wuz gwine out o' shitt!

Sure, The Condit'! The followin', from The Washington Herald, is headed "A Little Nonsense," but it is anything but that:

"There is much worth in Edgar Poe, but all the expert critics say His poems run too much to woe; He couldn't sell his stuff today."

"While Dante in his time was good At triolot or roundelay, He sometimes wrote in somber mood; He couldn't sell his stuff today."

"And so it goes with Pope and Kild And Addison and Keats and Gray, 'Tis well they flourished when they did; They couldn't sell their stuff today."

"Heed the Lesson!" "Heaven wuzn't built wid hammers an' nails," said the old-time darkey preacher, "but 'll say dis much fer de information of some o' you: When you flops yo' wings, waitin' for an invitation to enter, you'll see 'em natlin' up de gates wid railroad spikes, ter keep you out!"

Of Course Not. "The art of conversation is dying out." "We, perhaps, might improve things." "But we don't feel like exchanging our epigrams for other people's platitudes."—Washington Herald.

A Story of the Moment

By WALT MASON, The Famous Prose Poet

DOGS AND WOMEN.

"I have been reading a disgusting story about a society woman who hired a trained nurse and a distinguished physician to attend her sick dog," said the school superintendent. "Such instances intensify the feeling against the idle rich and make every sane man want to arm himself with a shotgun and stir up some business for the under-takers."

"Never worries me to hear of the idle rich spending their money foolishly," remarked the village patriarch. "Various worthy people have been ruined by the illness of that aristocrat's dog. The trained nurse doubtless draws a good salary and spends it in the dry goods stores, and thus commerce is boosted along. The eminent veterinary surgeon in charge of the case will send in a bill as long as your leg, and the money he gets will be spent among the people in one way or another. Then the druggist gets his rake-off, and the average druggist is a highly moral man who deserves all the velvet that comes to him. If the dog dies, as it probably will under such conditions, an undertaker will be called in, and he'll charge twice as much for burying a dog as he would for planting an intelligent voter. The monument dealer also will have a chance, and sundry other business men."

"Thus we see that the extravagance of the rich is a good thing for the proletariat. It makes one sore to read in the evening paper that young Astorbilt has thirty-five automobiles, while we have to trust to our careworn legs when we want to go joy riding, but when we reflect for a little we see that it's all for the best. The money spent for the motor cars goes to useful workmen as wages; gasoline in great quantities has to be purchased to operate them, and this benefits poor but respectable citizens like Rockefeller and his employes. The more the rich loosh upon the better it is for the rest of us. We shouldn't criticize them."

"Nowtwithstandin' which, I don't like to see a woman lavishing the wealth of her affections upon a dog. It brings good-will to the surface of my person. If a woman must have a pet, let her go to a founding auction and adopt a child, or let her marry a man who likes to be caressed, and tie blue ribbons on him."

"Shortly after my first wife eloped I began paying attention to a beautiful widow who lived in our town. It was rumored that she had an abundance of kale in the bank, but that fact didn't influence me. I was fascinated by the woman, and would have been glad to marry her if she hadn't a pleasurable tendency to making excellent headway in the matter of giving her affection."

"I called at her house on many occasions, and the more I saw of her the more I realized that she was a peach. The only thing I didn't like about her was her evident love for a little sawed-off pug dog. She was ever fondling that offensive critter. I discouraged that sort of thing after we were married. It would be easy to feed the pup a few deadly capsules."

"One evening I went to her abode determined to propose and learn my fate. She had a maid servant, and this damsel ushered me into the parlor, and told me the mistress would be there presently. So I seated myself in a chair in a dark corner, and there arose from that chair a howl that made my blood run cold. I sprang to my feet and looked around and saw that the thing I had mistaken for a cushion was really the dog. I was a large man, as I am now, and I had sat down with much vehemence, and the dog had no chance whatever. He was squashed so flat that he looked like a pie, and he dumb animal could be any deader than he was at the moment."

"While I stood there looking at the deceased, and wishing I had a palmtree, which wasn't invented then, the widow came into the room, and when she saw me holding the remains up by the tail and contemplating all that was left of Fido, she called me all the names you ever heard of and chased me out of the house."

"That was the end of love's young dream, my friends. The widow married business and a far-reaching, who cut a wide swath with her money."

Congratulates Constitution On Winning Its Fight for Just System of Taxation

Editor Constitution—Let me congratulate you on the great fight that you made for an honest and just system of tax assessment and equalization in Georgia, and upon the success of your fight.

I am personally, particularly gratified, not only that this bill passed, but that the appropriations to the institutions of the state were not cut. As you have said, I made the most exhaustive study of which I was capable of the needs of the state's institutions, and arrived at the conclusion that they could not be maintained efficiently for one cent less than the money then appropriated to them. This judgment was approved by the present legislature which, in every case, gave to the institutions of the state the same amount appropriated to them under the act of 1911.

I stated in a legislative speech in 1911, and again in 1912, that it would be a public calamity for Georgia to attempt to cure the financial ills of the state, caused by the cutting off of sources of revenue, by adopting a retrogressive policy with reference to the beneficial functions of the state government, contrary to all modern ideas of government. The potential and actual wealth of Georgia is too great for it to become a second-rate state. The provision of adequate revenue and the efficient maintenance of the institutions of the state, guarantee the continued progress of the state along all lines, social and industrial.

Atlanta. WALTER McELREATH.

"An Important Factor."

(From The Commerce News.) The Atlanta Constitution was an important factor in the movement to equalize the taxes paid by property owners. Even before the meeting of the general assembly, the Constitution began the agitation of the matter and since then nearly every issue of the paper has contained a strong editorial showing the need of equalization, and urging the passage of a law that would result in an increased revenue. The Constitution deserves the thanks of all the people of the state for the unprecedented fight it has made with reference to this matter.

Mistake of the Lawmakers.

(From The Douglasville Sentinel.) L. A. Eskew flushed a covey of boys in his watermelon patch Sunday and ran them to cover. The boys, we understand, are anxious to settle up, but at it is a violation of the law to compound a crime. Mr. Eskew can't accept their proposition. It is a very good idea, boys, to stay out of the other fellow's melon patch or orchard. The lawmakers failed to make a distinction between this and stealing.

Clothes

BY GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Hwain"

The Creator did not make man with clothes. But man has always acted as if this was an oversight.

When a baby is born it is hustled into clothes. And when an old man dies, he is buried in a new suit.

Man can get along without ears or hair and can be fairly happy without arms or legs, but without clothes he is helpless and sad. If a prominent citizen should be extracted from his trousers and a million dollars were to be piled across the street from him with his name on it he would spend all day shouting for a barrel.

Clothes are used by some for a protection, by others as a convention, by others as a decoration, and by still others as an adventure. In this country clothes are now a cross between a scandal and a national panic.

The lilies of the field are not arrayed like a New York woman in the latest style of skirt. If they were, the farmer would throw a gunny sack over them.

Four years ago people were shocked by the peek-a-boo waist and the mosquito's friend stocking. Now we would be relieved if the women would put them back.

If Paris continues to send us new limits in clothes-docking, the fashionable woman should be compelled to wear the bill and have the clothes mailed to her husband.

All over the fashionable world clever men are racking their brains in the effort to design something that women will not wear. But they have not succeeded up to date. In the old days man carried a link for his family and put the rest into clothes for his women folks. But now he earns clothes for the women and sinks back into the protecting arms of a rich son-in-law when all is over.

Women puts on the new style today and marches down the street protected by a platoon of police. But tomorrow she weeps and will not be comforted because her best friend is being mobbed in a new gown with a pergamia skirt and her own picture in an umbrella cover skirt and hair.

"He would spend all day shouting for a barrel." nose is being crowded out of all the newspapers.

The question is not "Whether are we drifting?" but "whether are we rushing with outstretched necks?" And will the time soon come when the modest youth from the country will rush from our city streets into the burlesque theaters to spare his blushes?

ON SELLING.

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

The greatest Profession in the world is that of Selling—because we are all in it as Salesmen and Saleswomen. Back of the very principle of Survival is that of presenting the best that is in us in order that we may enjoy our largest proportion of that Survival.

Selling is no mere Trick. It is a great Platonic and guiding the levers that work its motive power is the human Brain, and all its resources. So that finally, in action, Selling is Brains against Brains. In which friendly contest enters quick Thinking, honest Determination, tremendous Intelligence, dogged Determination that is always calm and sure, a clear knowledge of the subject, and finally, an Enthusiasm that nothing can foil.

With these qualities any Salesman can win—provided he has first SOLD HIMSELF. For no man can sincerely Sell what he himself would not buy under the most favorable circumstances. You cannot long convince any one of a thing in which you yourself do not first believe. So important and far-reaching is the influence of Selling that Business would crumble without its help.

A few other qualities and suggestions that go to make up Winning in Selling are Cheerfulness, Vibrating Health, Frankness, Fact, neat Dress, confidence of Argument, and Never-Say-Die Luck. For there is that kind of Luck—people make it themselves.

How the Chiggers Get on You.

(From The Alpharetta Press.) "If the chigger were bigger, As big as a cow, And his subsoil had vigor Like a subsoil plow, Can you figger, plenicker, Where you'd be now?"

Chiggers are always interesting. They make themselves acquainted with you while you ain't thinking about it. They stick to you closer than a brother, and they give you a swell time while they stay.

How do they get on your body? That's a question. Judge Lowry Dorris says they get on your feet and crawl up your leg. He asserts that a chigger biter will keep them back for a long time.

Greer Evans says that a little sulphur in your shoes will kill them, and that this precaution will save you all the trouble of scratching.

Silvey Hosteller says to sweat—provided, of course, you do not have to work too hard to make the sweat come. Hard work is worse than a chigger bite, he says. Another preventive, he says, is to make a chalk mark around your ankles. If you are too lazy to sweat, try the chalk.

An Industrious Turkey Hen.

(From The Alpharetta Press.) Here is a turkey tale as told us by our good friend, Hard Pool, of three miles north-west of town. John W. Chambers, of Little River district, owns a turkey hen which laid a nest of eggs last spring and went to sitting on them. The day she hatched she began to lay again, and while sitting she continued to lay an egg every other day. She is the biggest fool turkey hen we have ever heard of. She is bent on taking care of country editors when Thanksgiving and Christmas come.

He Should Know.

"What is personal magnetism?" "Personal magnetism," replied the manager, "is what enables a man to stand up and keep the audience interested in a lecture without the use of moving pictures."

Atlanta's Colony of Women Selwynites

By Isma Dooly

What must be done with the Women Selwynites? The question is a timely one for in this day and hour when there is so much women can do and so much women need to do the principle of conservation demands that something be done to protect the future generations against the selfishness of the mother while the all innocent honest intending man who goes in search of a wife should be warned against the Selwynite wife.

Women Selwynites absorbing the sensational features of the Frank trial

Yes I know there is intellectual stimulus given by the trial which fits one great legal mind against another and that the speech for and against the woman Selwynite are of a high order which the human mind can express but I am safe in stating I am told that there is nothing in the attitude faces and conduct of the women who have taken part in this trial to warrant the charitable construction that they have come to feast their intellects on the legal ability of the lawyers handling the case.

I considered when a certain part of the testimony (expurgated from the press report) was being given and I looked quickly at the direction where the woman Selwynite sat for I believed they would arise as one and leave the room.

But the history of that name may interest some. I confess I have heard of women Selwynites exactly but the title Selwynite originated with one George Selwyn an Irishman who lived during the reign of George II.

I believe he continued the woman who go to murder trials just to hear the harrowing details are the ones whose homes are unclean and insanitary they are the women whose husbands find their loves elsewhere because such women have not the minds to give the common attraction of a thorough domestic obligation.

Did these women all of them have the hair curling countenance, as described on the mother who brought the little child to the trial? Was asked the young newspaper man. No not exactly but these were many of them with negative faces which might have been made as just dull and vacant or bold in the easy way they met the eye of any they encountered.

was hurried into it and surrounded by a detachment of thirty soldiers, armed with loaded rifles and fixed bayonets was driven to the court martial. In court the precautions were even more stringent...

The trial was in more respects than this a farce. It soon developed that the defendant did not have the semblance of a case against Dona Constanca. Her accuser was the negro promoter of justice who since he himself been arrested charged with conspiracy against the republic into court were brought hundreds of ominous looking documents...

Lodged in Dirty Cell Dona Constanca was lodged in a cell while the court martial deliberated on the "evidence." The cell was a dirty cupboard without light or ventilation. Her food and letters were passed during the hours which the military court spent in debating her case...

Don's Constanca went back to her work. But even her public trial has not freed her from persecution. She is frequently receiving threatening letters and a few days ago she was threatened with assassination unless she gave up her mission of mercy. But Dona Constanca is not even the slightest bit daunted. Now it is a great work for her to be president of the Portuguese republic. Dr. Manuel de Arriazza is proud to be numbered among her friends.

RING WAS TOO SMALL FOR INEZ MILHOLLAND

Suffragette Bride Had to 'Lick It' in Order to Get It On. London August 16—A little bit of unrehearsed comedy that marked the latest of Anglo-American weddings has just come to my ears. It appears that Inez Milholland's ring, which she had procured for her bride ring, was too small to fit. The bridegroom pushed and pushed it but the wretched thing would not go down. Then he whispered to the bride to 'lick it' and both began to laugh. Having done as she was told the obstinate thing moved. However that same evening a jeweler had to cut off a swollen finger and a new one was forthcoming.

Three Czars of the Press of France

Three Papers in Paris Which Boast of a Circulation of 1,000,000 Copies—Expansion in Twenty Years

Paris August 16—How many daily newspapers can boast of a circulation of 1,000,000 copies? Three only, and curiously enough all three are published in Paris. The Matin, the Journal and the Petit Journal each boasts its buyers in seven figures and each has almost a million in a single generation from small unimportant sheets to leading places among the contemporaries is at once an engraving record and a curious commentary upon the expansion of the French newspaper readers.

CHARLES FEUILLETON

Doesn't Like Big Papers The Frenchman does not like voluminous papers and the six pages of the Matin are quite enough for the average business proposition. A man who makes a reputation of himself as a writer is the better part of readers as it has the reputation of being the best informed paper on the continent. It is connected by private wires with New York, London and Berlin and it is the only paper in the world that has the reputation of being the best informed paper on the continent.

Founded Twenty Years Ago The Journal The Matin's great rival was founded twenty years ago. It is better known for its literary contents than its journalistic coupes. Although its proprietor of the Matin detests publicity and never goes into society he takes an active part in the management of his paper. He goes to his office regularly at midnight and does not leave until the paper goes to press.

News Plays Small Part in The Petit Journal—Nine Hundred Men and Women on the Staff of Le Matin hours for foreign news he is supreme indifferent to what takes place outside Paris. The Journal short stories which are contributed by such men as Charles Henry Hirsch, Henri Duvernois and J. H. Rosny are masterpieces of their kind. The usual price paid is $90 for a column story. The Journal was the best paid contributor getting $100 for a story of a column and a half.

Only French News Wanted Possessing as it does an old and firmly established following The Petit Journal is not obliged to spend money on competitors nor does it attach any importance to foreign cables. Its readers are supremely indifferent to anything that happens outside France. While The Matin and The Journal are making desperate bids for popularity the Petit Journal pursues the calm unchanging policy that 50 years experience has proved to be the best.

By Leaps and Bounds One of the first feuilletonists published by The Petit Journal was written by Charles Dickens but it did not meet with much success. The French man has always preferred native talent. The circulation went up by leaps and bounds when Alexandre Dumas began to write his inimitable adventures at his own pace and soon reached 100,000 copies a day.

OTTO KAHN'S HOBBY IS BUYING MANSIONS

Being Superstitious, Financier Sold One Place Because of Wife's Turned Ankle. London August 16—Otto Kahn's pet hobby is purchasing mansions dotting them up regardless and then selling them for a song. While the alterations and decorations are in progress he is in his element and in love with the place but directly everything is arranged to his complete satisfaction he sickens of it all and wants to be rid of it. When he purchased Mrs. Maidwin Drummond's house in Carlton House Terrace he was so overcome by the beauty of the place that he bought it to keep it as his London abode for all time. Then suddenly to the amusement of everybody one morning it was in the hands of the agents. Now it is a great work for the president of the Anglo-American Bank to find a buyer for the mansion in London and anyone who comes along and offers him a third of his outlay can have it.

Japanese in Brazil

From The Indianapolis News. The first Japanese to come to Sao Paulo Brazil arrived several years ago. They are now coming in considerable numbers and will devote themselves to the cultivation of rice and the mulberry tree for the feeding of silk worms which in time will be expected to bring to Brazil a large silk industry. Years ago the thirty far seeing Japanese sent much merchandise to Brazil and these shipments have continually increased. A French correspondent writes I was present at the first saffron advance guard composed of a thousand people. The spectacle was curious and very different to the disembarking of European immigrants. The men of whom many had their chests adorned with the Manchurian medal carried little flags on which the Rising Sun and Japanese characters were intertwined, green and gold. They had an attention which until then no group of immigrants had ever thought of. The extreme cleanliness of the Japanese was remarkable while European immigrants and particularly those from the south of Europe leave the ship that has transported them in a filthy state the cabins of the boat on which the Japanese traveled were as clean as a new ship at the time of departure. Each of them had in his baggage in addition to the inevitable bottles of sauces and preserves medicinal plants, writing paper, desk, small boxes for holding rice, numerous articles of toilet, tooth paste and tooth brushes. What European immigrants departing for America dream of in cumbering their baggage with so many 'useless' articles.

Tallulah Lake at Last Is Formed, After Years of Work; Waters Are Banked 90 Feet High and Turned Into Tunnel

View of the construction work now in progress on the upper dam, at Mathis, Ga., six miles above Tallulah falls, where a lake will be formed eight miles long. The picture is taken from a point north of the dam and besides showing the height of the structure shows how the trees have been cleared away for the site of the lake. This is the last part of the power plant work, practically everything else being now complete.

This is the first picture ever published of the Tallulah lake! The water was still rising when the picture was taken, and lacked only six feet of being at its height—90 feet above the river bed. Just at the right of the dam is seen the entrance of the tunnel, where the river begins its dark underground journey of a mile and a half.

The completed Tallulah dam, photographed from the side of the gorge at a point below the lake, showing the water pouring through the sluice gates. On top of the dam is the public roadway, the site of the former bridge leading over the chasm being submerged by the lake. When the plant is in operation the water that remains from the tunnel flow, if there is any, will roll over the dam through the openings below the roadway.

Here stands the completed power house, with three of the big 5-foot penstock tubes, already finished, leading up the side of the gorge into the reservoir into which the tunnel empties. To the left of the tubes is the incline railway. As soon as the generators and transformers are finished the operation of the plant will begin.

BY J. WALTER LECRAW
Staff Correspondent of The Constitution.

Tallulah Falls, August 16—Special.—This week has seen the greatest and most sudden change in all the spectacular history of Tallulah Falls. The sluice gates in the giant dam have been closed and at last the much heralded lake has been formed. Ninety feet above the river bed the waters of the turbulent Tallulah have been banked and turned aside into the long and tortuous tunnel that leads through the solid rock of the mountain to the power plant at the foot of the falls.

Winding through the rocky gorge for half a mile northward from the dam, the lake at Tallulah has furnished a new and interesting sight during the past few days to the hundreds of summer visitors who are now in this section of the Blue Ridge mountains.

While the lake was being formed the water was not taken entirely off the falls. All the sluice gates were closed except one and this let enough water through the dam to run the compressor plant beside Tempesta and to keep the falls from becoming dry. The remaining force of the river remained above the dam to swell the lake. It was last Monday that the level of the lake began slowly to rise, and for 48 hours it crept upward and upward, crawling higher in the gorge, until on Wednesday it reached its full height and rolled tumultuously over the top of the dam.

NINETY FEET ABOVE RIVER BED!

An interesting picture has this week for those who have from the beginning watched the development of the enormous water power project at Tallulah Falls. Where once the waters of the mountain river tumbled madly over a rocky river bed they are now banked 90 feet high! The surface of the lake is smooth and gives no suspicion of the murky depths in which the waters move below. Just beside the dam is the mouth of the tunnel which is now of course below the level of the lake.

The tunnel itself, 14 feet high, is filled with water throughout its entire length of nearly two miles, the water being at present stopped at the lower end of the tunnel. The entrance to the tunnel is protected by an iron framework through which the water passes from the lake and which serves to keep all objects from being drawn into that long underground canal.

But though the dam stands completed and the tunnel is filled with water, the $5,000,000 electric plant is not yet in operation. Work continues day after day on the five electric generators, each of which will produce 18,000 horse power, and on the five enormous tubes that will carry the water down the gorge into the turbines.

PLANT TO OPERATE BY SEPTEMBER

Engineers at Tallulah declare that at least one of the five generators will be finished by September 1, and the water will then be turned into one of the tubes, starting the first operation of the plant. Power will probably not be furnished to Atlanta until November or December but the company is under contract to provide power over its South Carolina lines by the first of September.

In the meantime the tremendous force of the Tallulah river, standing in the tunnel at the top of the mountain, is merely waiting to be turned loose upon the power plant. The outlet of the tunnel, high up on the side of the gorge, is 600 feet above the level of the power house. In the pent-up waters held thus at the top of the chasm is represented 90,000 horse power, which will turn the wheels and spindles of Georgia now within a very few weeks.

It is as if a mighty force of 90,000 horses stood enchained at the mountain top, prancing and restless to be unleashed! They have been fed and groomed and their bridles set. They are merely waiting for the course to be finished over which they will plunge down the mountain side. It is an odd and interesting situation that has seen no equal in the history of Georgia.

But what of the falls? This is a question that naturally arises because of the controversy waged over the fate of this little Switzerland of Georgia. While the lake was filling up, the river flowed at half force over the five big waterfalls in the Tallulah gorge, retaining part of the splendor of the falls but losing much of the spectacular through their decrease in size. When the lake reached its height and the tunnel was filled, the river then regained its natural size.

WHAT WILL BECOME OF THE FALLS?

What will happen when the full force of the river is turned into the power plant is still a matter that is variously argued. It is declared that there will always be some water flowing over the falls, and that except in the driest season the falls will be as large and spectacular as they have been during the past week when the river was at half flow. It is also claimed by many, including the conservationists, that practically the entire river will be let to the falls and they will be shorn of all their beauty.

FOR ONE DAY THE FALLS WERE DRY

Tallulah has already seen one day on which the precipice rocks of the falls were dry! It was last Sunday week, when the power company as an experiment closed the dam entirely and raised the lake to the level of the bottom of the tunnel. It was done on Sunday, as the compressor plant had to run every week-day. The closing of the dam took all the water from the river bed for the day.

Tempesta, Hurricane, Bridal Veil, Oceana, L'Eau D'or—all were unbarred as meaningless rocks, shorn of the spray and ponderous volume of water that had poured over them for ages. Only a few pools of water around the falls, and the springs that furnished a trickling stream that dropped mournfully over the giant rocks.

"Devil's Jail" itself, within whose surging whirlpools a young engineer was drawn to his death last summer, became quiescent. It was a sight that turned the hearts of the oldest inhabitants to sorrow, and as one of them put it, "The day seemed like the funeral of a life-long friend to me."

But the very next day the water was tumbling over the falls again, and the compressor plant beside Tempesta fall was again being operated, to furnish compressed air for the machines at work on the various parts of the work. This is the question that is gripping the minds of those awaiting the final result—"What will really become of the falls when the plant at last runs full force?"

MATHIS DAM PROGRESSING FAST

Work on the upper dam at Mathis, Ga., six miles north of Tallulah, is also progressing rapidly, though it is far behind the work at the main plant. The foundation for the dam has been completed and the great concrete structure is growing rapidly. Here the Tallulah river will be turned into a long and narrow lake of eight miles length, winding around the hills of old Rabun county. This lake will act as a storage reservoir, to send additional supply of water to the power plant when the river grows too small at dry seasons.

Though the main lake at the tunnel is small and has very steep banks, the Mathis lake will be large and beautiful, with scores of beautiful sites for summer cottages along its green banks. This part of Rabun county will probably reap the greatest benefit in summer resort trade as a result of the construction work. All this section, however, is on the boom, and the greatest optimism prevails among the people living here, and with the rapid development that will follow the operation of the $5,000,000 power plant, a great future is predicted for this beautiful Blue Ridge section of Georgia.

CONSERVATION SOCIETY PLANNING NEW SUIT?

Just what will be the final outcome of the state's suit against the power company is one of the matters that is still somewhat in doubt. After the power company won the hearing in the Rabun county courthouse at Clayton, Ga., and the presiding judge refused to grant the state's appeal for a new trial, the question was then taken to the supreme court, where it is now pending. It will receive its final hearing in October.

Members of the Tallulah Falls Conservation society, which prompted the state to bring suit days ago, however, declared a few days ago, however, that they had not by any means given up the fight. A prominent member made the statement that new court action was imminent, and that announcement would probably be made in the press within a week or two. Meanwhile the work goes on unwaveringly, and as the $5,000,000 plant nears completion it now seems a certainty that enormous enterprises will actually begin operation within the near future, in spite of the unrelenting "battles" that has been waged against it.

ESSAY CONTEST URGED BY STATE PRESIDENT

Mrs Fitzpatrick Calls Attention to the Opportunity Before Young People of State

The Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs is offering a very valuable prize in their essay contest as will be seen from the notice in the announcement elsewhere.

On account of the opportunity to win a prize from the Library of Congress, it is announced by the press of the state so that it may come to the notice of every young man and woman in Georgia.

We are so glad to hear from Mrs. Fitzpatrick in which she says that she will so gladly help in this teaching of Southern history and literature to our young people. It is our hope that every young man and woman entering the contest will secure her book, "The South in History and Literature for 1913" instead of $1.00. This book will be sent to the district secretary and right in the district secretary's hands to be sent to the contest.

The contest is open to all young men and women in the state. The prize is $100.00. The contest is open to all young men and women in the state. The prize is $100.00.

Tallulah Falls School Closes Unusually Successful Term

Mrs M. A. Lipscomb the able director of Tallulah Falls industrial school has just written me of the closing of its scholastic year with unusually good report thanks to the efficient staff—Miss Laura Blaloch, Miss Kate Thornton and Miss Mattie Downs—who have earnestly labored to give the training that will prepare them to make the most of life.

This industrial school has increased annually until last year the enrollment was 110 which speaks for itself.

The State Federation of Women's Clubs is proud of such an investment and ever ready to rally to its call.

The site of this school is ideal, the need of education in that section being quickly observed.

The farm is the place to give a boy a good start in life. It is there he learns independence of thought and action. He is not coddled nor helped over the rough places as the city boys. Should you go to this school and see the many bright girls and boys acquiring a thirst for knowledge, feel sure the interest would broaden.

We have more applicants for schoolships than we can supply. We are glad to see the girls and boys in giving some girl an opportunity to be prepared to meet the duties of life.

Assist in doing life's greatest work the building of character. Our world is full of teachers and the real business is the graduating point character is the diploma which is given to individuals wherever they exist in cities where boys move in grooves that have been cut out for them by custom or in rural districts where boys dream of the outside world which they have never seen fighting battles while chopping wood and slogs for bigger words to conquer. Many of the really big men who dominate the affairs in larger cities are farm bred.

May the state federation appreciate fully and vividly the great legacy they have in Tallulah Falls industrial school where not only the literary courses are taught but sewing, cooking, basketry. Also a fully equipped workshop for the boys. This school has done magnificent service not only for pupils but for the community.

The fiscal year closed in July every debt paid thanks to our ever dependable director Mrs M. A. Lipscomb and to the state federation for their untiring efforts.

The fall term begins soon therefore it is necessary that each club realize its share in this great investment for good in so doing the school will progress this year more than ever.

The Compulsory Educational Bill

The genuine heart felt interest of every Daughter of the Revolution in Georgia was centered upon the compulsory education bill which passed the senate by a vote of 27 to 11.

The bill as introduced by Senator Sweet of the fifth district, was presented by Mrs A. O. Harper chairman of the state committee D. A. R. on compulsory education and received the endorsement of the state conference which convened in Augusta March 26. It was strongly advocated by the state regent Mrs Sheppard W. Foster and the executive board.

While it is not the policy of the D. A. R. to engage in politics nevertheless when a bill is pending that affects the home and the country the D. A. R. feel called upon to bring the weight of their united efforts and influence to secure the passage of that bill.

Our beloved state stands with her just laws as a guardian for those who do not know what is the best course for themselves. As a physician who compels others against their inclinations. As worthy representatives of our state we are our brothers keepers and we are certainly responsible for him to the extent that he be given that whereby he is placed at a fair advantage among his fellows.

The bill presented by Mrs Harper and introduced by Mr Sweet was so modified as to meet any higher obligation that might arise and provided that under peculiar circumstances compulsory education shall not be enforced.

It provides that children between the ages of 5 and 12 years of age be compelled to attend school at least twelve weeks of each year and also children between the ages of 12 and 14 who are not engaged regularly and lawfully in some useful employment or service. These stipulations did not apply where the child had attended for the prescribed period some other school giving instruction in the ordinary branches of an English education had completed the fourth grade of school where the services of the child are necessary for its support, or the support of a parent or other member of the family dependent upon such services where the parent or guardian were unable to provide the necessary books and clothing where the attendance of the child was impracticable or inexpedient on account of mental or physical condition where the child resides more than three miles from a school house and the good results accruing from the enforcement of such a law cannot be properly estimated until we have lived a generation of illiterate but become an intelligent and an enlightened people who seek the ways of wisdom and who choose the paths of pleasantness and peace.

Miss Rutherford's Address in the Congressional Record

Extract from an address delivered by Miss Mildred Lewis Rutherford, historian general at the U. S. Capitol in Washington D. C. This address was published in full in the Congressional Record the first time in the history of the United States that a woman had so publicly addressed the daughters of confederate heroes to plead with you to urge you to a more aggressive and progressive campaign in collecting and preserving this history. We have now living almost as many who lived during the old plantation days—some who can now tell us from their own experiences what that institution of slavery was and what it meant to the nation before us. We have now living almost as many who lived during the old plantation days—some who can now tell us from their own experiences what that institution of slavery was and what it meant to the nation before us.

Who is responsible for the southern unwritten history? Surely we cannot blame the northern historians for this. It is we of the south who have not given them the facts as they are given to him and if we of the south have not given them these facts how can we hold the historians of the north responsible? The fault is with us, but there are a few exceptions. It is not so much what he has said against us as what he has omitted to say.

Unless we Daughters of the Confederacy will look into this matter and see where the trouble lies we will still have this history untrue to us as long as the book trust controls our board of education and the northern text books continue to be used in the southern schools to the exclusion of southern text books we will see that the history of the south will never be known to the coming generations.

We cannot in the south compete with the north in publishing houses. Therefore we cannot sell books at a small cost as they can be sold by northern publishers. This throws the responsibility upon the manufacturer of the books as he is the one who has the means to have them published. We must not blame the manufacturer of the books as he is the one who has the means to have them published.

No Daughters of the Confederacy too long have been indifferent to this long. We have been indifferent for twenty years we have really awakened to the fact that our history has not been written. The institutions of the south especially the institution of slavery which was the backbone of civilization unique in the annals of history have never been justly presented from the southern point of view. Thomas Nelson Page more than any other southern writer has endeavored to present the thought of the world. And we are so greatly indebted to him.

Daughters are the books of Thomas Nelson Page in your libraries especially his "Old South". Are those books given to your children to read? Are your children encouraged to read them? If not, we must urge you to do so. We cannot expect the north and you can not expect other nations to know by

Newman Civic League Edits Issue of Local Paper

Inspired by the success of the Woman's Issue of the Atlanta Constitution the Newman Civic League decided to edit an issue of the local paper for the benefit of the settlement work which has been undertaken there.

The results were very gratifying both in literary and financial value. Prominent club women and other prominent women of the town and a few of our most sympathetic friends among the men contributed to the success of the paper.

Reports of all club work was given in Newman except in case of the church which was given an opportunity to publish its history.

A page of reminiscences was an interesting feature of the edition giving to the Newnantes of today many facts of the days gone by which will be preserved in the club scrapbook for the benefit of future generations.

Through our efforts we realized a good valuable history to the credit of our club and about $75 in money.

At the June meeting of the Civic League a vacation of two months was declared but our activities have not ceased. The president and the settlement work committee are busy visiting various districts where club women have established their work and hope to find points to be gotten from these examples to be able to do fine work this fall.

History of Georgia D. A. R.

BY MRS JOHN M. GRAHAM

An account will now be given of some of the patriotic service rendered by the Daughters of the American Revolution in Georgia.

In the Spanish American war Georgia daughters showed their patriotism by supplying food and clothing for the soldiers and during six weeks in an auxiliary hospital corps of daughters headed by Mrs Porter King the state regent served nearly 30,000 meals in the hospital at Fort McPherson.

Later Miss Margaret Hart of the Red Cross society was taken by the Red Cross society a certificate in recognition of her services.

Of incalculable value was work done by the Georgia daughters for the preservation and publication of important records of the Colonial and Revolutionary and later periods in Georgia. Mrs E. H. Green had a large series of manuscript records of her daughters' records of Georgia which were copied in England in 1838 and after wards at a cost to the state of about $7,000. Valuable records of the Civil War period in Georgia were also in the state archives were mouldering and becoming torn and illegible. Lists of thousands of soldiers of the revolution were in this condition but no complete copy had been printed. In many instances made it difficult to learn whether a Georgia ancestor had served in the revolution or to prove his service.

In the efforts of Mrs W. L. Lee and at the joint expense of the Atlanta chapter (of which she was then a member) and the Piedmont chapter these lists of soldiers were copied and printed and sent Mrs Lee of the Merlon chapter of Pennsylvania (whose chapter house was on a site occupied by Georgia troops on their way to Valley Forge) became a member of the committee. In recent years Mrs Lee has published them in Volume III of the historical collections of the Joseph Habersham chapter. Volumes I and II of this series contain genealogical and historical material original in the records of the state. It is published in the Atlanta chapter under the supervision of Mrs Lee. WOMEN AS JURORS SLOWER THAN MEN

Chicago, August 16.—Women as jurors are more deliberate than men. County Judge Owens announced today in explaining a change in the jury list of having nearly twice as many women as men on a jury to consider the cases of women and children and several complaints that the women had been too slow to reach a verdict. The men jurors who decide all other cases ascertained they were kept waiting too long.

Judge Owens allowed the system permitting the women to sit last and insisted that the change must not be construed as a reflection upon women's competency as a jury.

It is just the reverse, asserted the court clerk, who illustrates that women are given the thought needed in judging insane cases. The change will expedite the business of the court.

WOODROW WILSON WANTED TO BE SAILOR

Newport, R. I., August 16.—Secretary Daniels presented the target, Dr. Woodrow Wilson, to the battery of crack shots of the navy here today and read the ships officers and crew a lesson in preparedness.

There never is time to make ready in any truly great crisis. The secretary commending the crack gunners for their skill. What is a growing navy worth to us unless manned by men who live in a state of preparedness?

You may not know it but it will add to your appreciation when I tell you that as a boy he was the enthusiast of Woodrow Wilson to enter the navy and become a sailor. If he had not led him into other lines the probability is that today he would be with us as a captain or an admiral.

4,000,000 DEAD FLIES SOLD AT 5 CENTS A PINT

BRANDY TAX FOUGHT BY WINE PRODUCERS

Washington, August 16.—California wine producers, backed by the congressional delegation from that state, protested today to the senate finance committee against the proposed tax on brandy in fortifying sweet wines and the methods by which Ohio wine makers are permitted to manufacture their product.

Theodore A. Bell and M. F. Tappan, representing the California producers, declared that to levy an internal revenue tax on brandy used in fortifying sweet wines would ruin the California wine industry. The hearing was continued until Monday.

Death of Another Real Daughter

From the Emily Virginia Mason chapter D. A. R. of Hastings Mich. comes the news of the death of a real daughter member of that chapter Mrs Emily Sayre Welter died at her home in Ovid Mich. April 9, 1913, aged 95 years.

Her father Nathan Sayre was a lieutenant in the continental army and died at age 70 at the time of her birth. Yet he lived to see his daughter Emily Sayre become a wife and begin for herself the great problem of motherhood.

She was born at Hector N. Y. in 1818 and lived there until 22 years of age. In 1840 she married Jacob Welter and a few years later came to Clinton county Mich. where they built there a home in the wilderness and where fifty seven years from the day they settled on their farm she passed away.

She was the mother of three sons and one daughter one of her boys giving his life to his country in the war between the states. Her's was a long and a Christian life and even though bed ridden and nearly blind in her closing years she retained all control of her mental faculties to the end.

Her funeral was held at her home in Ovid Mich. on Monday, August 11, 1913, at 11 o'clock.

Peace Costs More Than War

(From a Foreign Exchange)

It costs this world far more to keep the peace than to be engaged in active combat. More money is spent by the combined powers and outside nations on the maintenance of their armies and navies than the ordinary civilian would care to think about.

To Russia falls the distinction of spending the most on its arm. The latest estimate of her military works out roughly to $66,000,000. Germany comes next spending some $40,000,000 on its arm. The United States spends the least on its arm, representing the amount $2,500,000,000.

The total annual expenditure of the United States on its arm is $2,500,000,000. The United States spends the least on its arm, representing the amount $2,500,000,000.

Men are really too mean for anything. What's the trouble now? Why I asked John for an automobile today and he said that I must be content with the splendid carriage that nature has given me. Judge circumstances.

BEEF WILL BE HIGHER BECAUSE OF DROUGHT

Washington, August 16.—Sharp increase in prices of fresh beef are expected to follow the drought that is scouring the cattle raising states of Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska and Oklahoma and the officials of the department of agriculture are not concealing their anxiety over the outlook.

Their apprehension is increased by unfavorable reports said to have been received from agents now in South America concerning the condition of cattle there.

It is said that a serious hoof and mouth epidemic is ranging among the cattle in Argentina and this necessarily would bar the entrance of such meat to the United States.

Australia is expected to furnish much of the meat consumed by Americans in the immediate future. This supply may be limited, however, because of Great Britain's demand if Argentine falls her market.

How to Get Horse Radish for the Family

The following is taken from the current issue of Farm and Fireside.

You can easily grow a horse radish the family may want.

It is best grown as a fall crop to follow early cabbage or early cauliflower peas and similar early winter-planted crops.

In cultivating pay no attention to the horseradish. You cannot hurt it much keep it down until the early crop is ready to harvest. The roots run down quite deep and much pains must be taken in digging to get as much as possible of the straight root. This is quite a task in our clay loam. Dig the roots before winter if not disposed of at once, they can be stored in a root cellar or buried in sand and worked up during the winter.

NEW CHAPTER ENROLLED FOR FORTY DAUGHTERS

The work of organization of the James Monroe chapter Forsyth North Carolina have been completed by the officers present at the chapter held its first meeting on July 13 at the private home of Mrs Richard F. Brooks.

An interesting program was rendered and the chapter begins its patriotic work under the most favorable circumstances.

The list of officers as given are: President—Mrs J. W. Ponder. Vice Regent—Mrs W. B. K. Oubertie. Registrar—Miss Elizabeth Thwait. Assistant Registrar—Miss Florie Hollis.

Treasurer—Mrs Charles Hardin. Recording Secretary—Mrs Lee McGeehe. Corresponding Secretary—Miss Elizabeth Hardin. Genealogist—Miss Kate Ford.

NEW YORK POST WIRES SILVEY CO.

Requests Views of Big Local Dry Goods Firm on Business Outlook for Coming Autumn.

John Silvey & Co., the big wholesale dry goods and notions firm, received a wire last week from the New York Evening Post requesting information about the business outlook for fall in the southern territory. Their wire is given here, together with the reply which the Silvey company sent.

"New York, August 11, 1913. John Silvey & Co., Atlanta, Ga.: Dear Sir:—We are glad to hear of your interest in our business and at once at our expense for publication in New York Evening Post your views business outlook for coming autumn. Do you expect marked improvement? How will corn crop and money market effect business? Preferred reply. NEW YORK EVENING POST."

John Silvey & Co.'s reply was as follows:

"Atlanta, Ga., August 15, 1913. New York Evening Post, New York City: Business outlook in this state unusually good. We notice steady improvement in trade at present and look for this to continue during the fall. It is our opinion that corn crop and money market will not to any extent interfere with business in this section. Crops have been made on an economical basis. Secretary McAdoo's offer to the banks of the south very helpful.

"JOHN SILVEY & CO."

Z. C. Allison, the prize winning raiser of Sumner, Ga., paid John Silvey and company a visit last week. Mr. Allison raised 110 bushels an acre on eight acres. He was much interested in the company's alfalfa patch.

J. C. Porter, special representative of the American Cigar Co., is at present working with C. C. Phillips, of the Capital City Tobacco company, and will do so for some few weeks to come.

Max Samuels, with the Hirschberg company, is hitting the grit in Mississippi just at present.

Convention Was Success In Every Way Is Verdict

Reviewing Past Two Weeks, Atlanta Wholesalers Join With Visiting Merchants in Stating That Southern Merchants' Convention Fulfilled Every Expectation.

The Southern Merchants' convention is over. For two weeks Atlanta has been the scene of a gathering of southern merchants which marks no epoch in the development of southern business. Secretary Harry T. Moore, of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association, stated Saturday that the success of the convention had exceeded their expectations as a result of the results of the convention has been good, and from both a business and a social viewpoint everyone is satisfied.

While the exact figures are not yet known, it is certain that about 1,500 merchants were here during the convention, and not one of them has returned to his home without feeling that Atlanta is the place for him, both as a good city for a good time and a supremely excellent market in which to buy his goods.

When the next convention is called to order in February, 1914, it is certain that all the delegates to this one just closed will be there, and also that each one will bring as many of his fellow merchants from his own territory as can be persuaded to come, because it is human nature to desire to share a good thing with as many as possible.

Last Friday was the final day of the entertainment features, and the item on the program for that day was the ball game, and there was a good registration of spectators. Those who registered Friday were as follows:

- J. E. Dickerson, Griffin Mercantile company, Griffin, Ga.
- W. E. Bonzetti, same, Bethlehem, Ga.

KISER COMPANY WELL SATISFIED

Big Wholesale Shoe House More Than Pleased With Results of Convention, and Say So With Emphasis.

The M. C. Kiser company, the big wholesale shoe house whose "Shield Brand" shoes are famous all over the southern territory, are literally wearing a broad smile these days.

Last Friday the Firing Line man called upon Secretary C. L. Sullivan and asked him how he thought the convention had come off.

Mr. Sullivan's face lit up with a big grin and he turned around a couple of times before he replied. Then he said:

"It was just thinking what was the best way of expressing to you my thorough satisfaction over the results. You may say for us that the M. C. Kiser company is more than satisfied. We are delighted. We have met hundreds of our good merchant friends. We have all had a splendid time and have sold shoes. I repeat—we have sold shoes, and then some more shoes."

Mr. Sullivan drew his visitor into his own private office and presented his own private brand of cigars. "These are good smokes," said he, "but they just express our feeling. After the trade we have done during the past two weeks, it is certainly up to us to celebrate, and nothing can be too good for the celebration. The address we give in your columns helped to get the big results wonderfully and so you are in on the celebrating. Smoke up, and if you want to stay around here, smile—because everybody's doing it."

CHILE CON CARNE

J. L. Smith, with the A. M. Robinson Co., received a card Saturday morning from Clarence Butler, of Caldwell, Ga., expressing thanks for the good time given during the convention. Mr. Smith appreciated the card highly.

All the salesmen with the J. K. Orr Shoe company are now going out with the new 1914 spring models in Red Seal shoes, which are wonders of attractiveness and value.

W. J. Nisbet, bookkeeper with the F. L. Adams Co., attended the ball game Friday and Saturday and expresses his ideas of the two days' play in very different terms.

Edward Glaster, representing the Grand Lacks company, of New York, manufacturer of paper bags, visited their Atlanta connection, the Consolidated Paper company, yesterday.

Brown, Perryman & Greene Co., report all their men getting out again after a night's good time, both in a business and a social way, at the convention.

The Dobbs & Wey Co., salesmen are all busy getting their lines together for the fall trade, and will be out about the first of September, after the big orders. They express themselves as very pleased with the results of the convention.

H. C. Parkinson, with John Silvey & Co., who makes his home in Columbia, S. C., was called suddenly to Richmond last week on account of the serious illness of his wife.

G. A. Paulk, from Apalaha, Ga., a customer of the Capital City Tobacco company, and one of the Georgia state legislators, was found in their offices Friday morning last. Messrs. Malone and Carlton both stated that if every customer they had was as satisfactory as Mr. Paulk they would both tip the scales at many more pounds than they do at present.

The Dixie Pickle and Preserving company were found up to the eyes in pickles last Friday. A carload of cucumbers had just arrived and they were sure some busy.

L. T. Stallings, credit men with the Lamar & Rankin Drug company, is at present on his vacation at Highlands, N. C. He left last Sunday and will stay for two weeks.

James R. Cailler, with the Hirschberg Co., came in Friday from South Carolina and is busy getting his samples of holiday goods together.

The All Star Manufacturing company report all their men out and sending in the big orders, with the exception of V. C. Almond, who was in the city with a few of his customers who attended the convention.

The M. C. Kiser Co., report the following salesmen out on their territories again, after the convention: J. K. Dixon, E. C. Watson, C. C. Reeves, George E. Burnett, O. E. Kenimer, S. D. Akin, W. W. Benson, O. L. Diehl, N. A. Morse and L. C. Wade. The rest will all leave this week.

The S. P. Richards company report big results from the new catalogue they have just sent out to the trade. They are receiving orders on every mail and are just headed to death over the business it is bringing in.

V. M. Hyatt, with John Silvey and company, sold an opening bill for $1,500 cash as an afterthought on the part of a merchant who was on his way home again after visiting Baltimore.

George H. Page, with the All Star Manufacturing company, is at present in Mountain City, Ga., and will come in again about September 1.

Bill Beacham, the J. K. Orr Shoe company salesman from Athens, Ga., is much interested in the Phagan case. It is reported that he has spent $9.20 on extras during the convention.

W. O. Stamps, of Fain & Stamps, purposes returning the visits of some of the merchants who called on him during the convention. He will be out with Cliff Edwards this week and probably with Sanders Smith next week.

Dougherty-Little-Redwine company report that the business in the house, was just all they could do last Friday. Nevertheless, they let the men who could not go to the barbecue Wednesday attend the ball game on Friday afternoon. Their idea of the convention is "a success clean through."

C. D. Dickinson, the popular salesman with Brown, Perryman & Greene company, will be out in a few days seeing his many friends and showing them some more good things in the way of hats, caps, gloves, etc.

Fain & Stamps' entire city sales force, consisting of E. H. Messer, W. S. Gaston, M. N. Clyatt and W. A. Quarles, attended the annual picnic of the Atlanta Retail Grocers and Butchers' association at Warm Springs, Georgia, last Wednesday.

P. H. Jeter, with John Silvey & Co., goes to North Carolina and the valleys of Virginia Saturday for a vacation of about ten days.

James Smith, member of the firm of the Walker Roofing company, states that their business is extremely good, and that they start on three new out-of-town jobs this week.

Z. V. Peterson, representative of the Clark Woodenware company, has just completed a very successful trip through southeast Georgia and South Carolina.

Paul Stradley, with the John F. Rogers company, of Anniston, Ala., was in the John Silvey company house last Friday buying a good bill. The company also report four or five mail orders received that morning for opening bills, and the fact that it will take their billing department about two weeks to catch up, which all indicate mighty good business.

At What Rate Do You Do Business?

Fire insurance rates on a building are based not only on the chances of that building catching fire, but to a larger extent on the facilities at hand for putting out the fire, should it occur.

The more convenient the Fire Service, the lower the rate.

Just so in merchandising; the cost of doing business is directly governed by the convenience of a merchant's source of supply.

Take shoes for instance; the Southern merchant who buys his stock in the distant markets of New England and the west is paying a mighty high rate to do business.

Here are the extra costs he pays:

- 1st—Excess freight charges.
- 2nd—Interest on half the stock he now carries that would be unnecessary with a near-by efficient factory connection.
- 3rd—Loss on accumulation and depreciation of dead styles.
- 4th—Sales missed by being out of the right styles and sizes when you need them.

The RED SEAL Shoe Factory right here in Georgia offers—QUICK SHIPMENTS, LOW FREIGHTS, THE BEST KNOWN AND BEST SPOKEN OF LINE IN THE SOUTH.

Its Mail Order Service is the best remedy for the High Cost of Doing Business.

Si Hawkins Has Gone Home; Was Called Home by Letter

Si's Wife, Mirandy, Writes Letter to Absent Spouse Which Causes His Speedy Departure from Our Midst.

The Constitution special convention correspondent was unexpectedly called home the latter part of last week. He received a letter from his wife which seemed to impress him strongly, and, after receiving it, he seemed unable to put his mind steadily on his work, and left for home shortly.

Before going, however, he left the letter which Mirandy sent, and also a brief note to the many friends he had made during his visit to Atlanta. He remarked that "he reckoned as how Mirandy's letter wud kinder speak for itself, and he figured the folks wd know how come him to leave—least ways the married men would."

Mirandy's letter was as follows:

"Si: Come home now. I wuz over to Miss Smyth's Smalls yesterday, an I see that that pitcher with you assistin up on their front seat same as if you was to big meetin', an in that that paper you wux a lookin' at them scandalous gals. Si Hawkins, I'm plum shamed for you, an, you're pore, an your wife out here, mindin the cows an their chickens, an plowin a spell now an then, an you up ther lookin at such things, yew kin jez march yerself back here now, an ef yew haint here by Saturday I shore am a comin' fer you. Ther pigs got loose Monday nite and come pretty nigh routin up all ther taters, if yew fernt to fetch me them pigskins I give yew a list I shore will make it hot fer yew, yew old salavanter.

"Then too, Si, I shore do miss you. For pretty nigh 30 years ye whaint let me this long. Come home Si, I miss yore hand in mine.

"MIRANDY HAWKINS.
"P. S. fetch me a pair of silk mitts too, ef yore money aint give out."

Before leaving, Si left the following brief note to be published as a farewell letter:

"Dear Folks: I shore an mighty sorry to have to leave yowals. Yew see I wuz gettin to feel rite to home wida yew, an I reckon in about seven hundred year I cud be a city feller same as the rest of ye. But I reckon when dooty calls, a feller has ter obey. In this here instance, dooty is only another name fer Mirandy, but it shore is jes as forswal a call.

"Before I left I went around and bot some mighty nice goods fer th' store and ef ever I comes back to this here place, I reckon ef how I'll have to tell yow how th' business come on. I went to thar baseball game and pretty nigh hollerin my fool self horse. But them fellers from Chattanooga, win out at that time. I guess even Atlanta has to lose now and agin jes to incoridge the other side, kinder. I hopes yowal gets that thar pennant I hears so much of, and ef an ol feller like me kin help anny, yew hev only to holler and I'll come.

"I shore will never ferget th' good time yew give me. Come to see me some time. Yours fer good bizness,
"SI HAWKINS."

Fulton Council 505

Brother J. M. Wingfield is sick at his home, 94 East Pine street. The members are requested to do anything they can to help him in his illness.

Junior Counselor J. W. Curry returned lat week from Mississippi, and the boys are all glad to see him around shaking hands again.

Brother J. J. Kennedy, with the Enterprise Manufacturing company, accepted the degrees with much grace at the last meeting.

The officers of 505 compose one team, and the members the other, in a race which is on for the new members to initiate at the big meeting in October. The losers will give a banquet to the winners; so, get busy, boys.

Brother A. R. Tucker, the Armour man, was on his vacation last week, but stayed right in the vicinity of Atlanta. There was doubtless a good reason.

Many members of 505 were in for the barbecue last Wednesday entertaining their customers.

C. E. Byrd, the coffee man, was in Athens last week, and found the orders so numerous that he couldn't get them written up to come home before Saturday.

Brother A. M. Sheets, the Remington typewriter man, is fully recovered from the recent accident to his eye, we are glad to report.

Brother A. V. Dickens, the overall man, is back in his car, after working his whole territory.

Unused Tickets.

An interesting item which was published last week was to the effect that the Pennsylvania railroad has arranged to refund the full purchase price of unused tickets at the ticket window, when it is presented by the original purchaser. Formally the ticket had to be forwarded to the head office of the company before the money could be collected, and considerable red tape was connected with the transaction. The new ruling is of much value to the traveling public, and it is one which could easily be adopted by other systems with slight inconvenience to themselves and much benefit to the travelers.

Secretary E. M. Lunceford is in Philadelphia at present, at the home office of his company, the Youngs-Foyth-Field company. He will not be back until some time in September.

Brother J. M. McKibbin is ill at his home with typhoid fever. He has been down for about two weeks, and is doing as well as possible.

We are pleased to report many replies to the letter sent out asking for help for the relief fund. The replies to this request were very gratifying, and show a ready response. We will be glad to receive more checks.

Many U. C. T. members were in this week attending the convention with their customers.

Atlanta 18 will hold no more meetings for two weeks. The meetings have been suspended until the weather gets a little cooler.

To the Public

The T. E. Henry Furnace Co., of Cleveland, Ohio., has recently opened a Branch in this City on Walton St., under the name

"Moncrief Atlanta Co."

"Notice the Name, Please"

These Parties have been making the Moncrief Furnace for several years in Cleveland—and supplying the Northern Trade. They have come here trying to Steal not only my business but MY NAME as well. They claim to sell the ORIGINAL MONCRIEF FURNACE, WHICH IS ABSOLUTELY FALSE. The writer, S. P. MONCRIEF, is the ORIGINATOR of the "MONCRIEF FURNACE." The first MONCRIEF furnace ever made was made in Atlanta in 1898 and they have been made here and installed in hundreds of Homes all these years.

There are more than 125 people in Atlanta dependent for their support on Mr. S. P. Moncrief, the originator and manufacturer of the Moncrief Furnace.

Won't you continue to give us your work in this line?

These people are represented by R. A. JONES, who, when you call him over the telephone, will say he is with us and that they are no longer on Pryor St., but have moved to Walton St. He has been working this game since he came to Atlanta, and is deceiving our customers and friends, they believing when they give him an order they are placing the business with the "MONCRIEF FURNACE COMPANY," who have worked hard and long to build up a reputation for the MONCRIEF FURNACE.

Our phone number is Main 285.

SALESMEN'S CONVENTION

Salesmen of the John Deere Plow Co., of Atlanta, attending their convention, held here last week.

The sales force of the John Deere Plow company, of Atlanta, have all been in the city the latter part of last week. They convened on Friday morning and held meetings in the company's splendid show rooms on South Forsyth street for the two days. They had luncheon at the Ansley hotel Friday noon and the convention closed with a meeting held there on Saturday afternoon. There were twenty-two men in for the convention and among them were: W. M. Stentz, manager; T. K. Johnson, sales manager; H. T. Bell, publicity manager; F. C. Cameron, sales department; R. C. Hipp, office manager, and J. L. Reddick, K. D. Brobston, E. F. Geiselman, A. T. Stevens, J. M. Jeffreys, William Shoemaker, A. T. Moreland, F. R. Lubbeck, L. Burrus, H. R. Roberts, R. H. Learned, S. W. Guinnison, A. J. Potts, L. J. Hurd, J. D. Ivey, J. A. Wilson, J. D. Babcock and J. A. Moore, salesmen.

The Ins this week with Fain & Stamps are Cliff Edwards, W. V. Bailey and S. E. Smith.

after a ten-day vacation at Borden Springs, Ga.

The J. K. Orr Shoe company report big sales during the convention. They state that they are more than satisfied, and expect results to show for years to come.

The A. M. Robinson company report themselves entirely satisfied with results. They entertained many guests and sold many goods during the convention.

L. P. Rawlins, of Milan, Ga., made his first trip to the Atlanta market during the convention. He bought a nice bill from John Silvey & Co., and stated that he would be a sure delegate at every future convention.

Banks Whiteman, with John Silvey & Co. left yesterday for Nashville, Tenn., where he will visit his relatives for about ten days.

The Capital City Tobacco company stated that the Sovereign cigarette people are going to give away a safety razor with every package of cigarettes starting tomorrow.

The E. L. Adams company have had extra good house business for this convention, and state that they have enjoyed entertaining the many merchants who have visited them immensely.

There were many buyers at the Ward-Truitt company this week. This is the second week of their closing out sale. Mr. Ward states that at the present rate their goods will all be gone before the sixty-day limit is up.

W. E. Rhumph, with the All Star Manufacturing company, has been kept more than busy waiting on the house trade during the convention.

Au Revoir---Come Again in February

WE, THE undersigned wholesalers and manufacturers of Atlanta, wish to express to all our merchant friends the great pleasure we have taken in your company during the Southern Merchants' Convention, just closed. We have done our best to make your stay a pleasant one, and in return would like to tell you how we appreciate the big business we have done together in these two weeks. By all indications this fall is going to be one of the best business seasons we have had for years, and the proof of this statement is in the way you have prepared for your trade, by buying freely in the best market for Southern Merchants.

We are always at your service and will expect to see you all again next February.

ATLANTA MUST SPEND MILLIONS FOR ELBOW-ROOM

When a city that is growing by leaps and bounds permits skyscrapers to be built along narrow streets, only one thing can happen—the fronts of the skyscrapers must be cut off to give the people on the street elbow room.

This picture represents the expensive proposition of widening the streets that now straddle the city of Atlanta in the face

The fact that the building in the picture happens to be the Piedmont hotel comes only by haphazard selection, for the same thing that is being done to the Piedmont in this picture will shortly have to be done to every building that faces on Peachtree street in the business section of the city.

The Piedmont is representative of all these buildings and the grim energy of the men who are sawing off a portion of this magnificent structure is typical of the cold blooded drive the city of Atlanta must inevitably make into its "jeans" for the cash to widen the city's business streets

Long years ago, when Atlanta was only Marthasville, the towering walls of Peachtree street were nothing more than waving fields of corn or white stretches of cotton and nobody cared that the road was a bit narrow.

In fact, everyone was glad that it was not wider. It meant more room for crops. The farmer in his buggy driving in to Marthasville stopped hub to hub with his neighbor, who had already "been to town," and discussed the gossip of the countryside at length and there was room enough for that.

That was all the road was good for, so why make it wider?

Things Began to Change

But after a while things began to change. Marthasville became Atlanta, and slowly business began creeping out Peachtree road, and that road became Peachtree street. Even then, though, the site of the Candler building was "in the country," and the necessity of widening the road occurred to but few.

Thus the city grew overnight, as it were, and soon the more far-sighted men began to realize that the street must be made wider.

The iron was hot then, and if the citizens of Atlanta had struck untold millions of dollars would have been saved and made. But in every city there are those who would rather keep a dollar and make ten, so no one cut off the few feet that would have been necessary

In the course of time the Candler building went up, and people declared that the street was doomed to narrowness for the rest of the existence of the city, for who would think of touching such a magnificent structure as the Candler building just to widen a street?

Still, there were far-sighted men who said:

"Let's widen it."

But the old crowd yawned and said:

"I reckon it's good enough like it is!"

Vertex of Traffic

In later years, though, the enormous development of the business section both north and south of the Candler building has made Peachtree street a veritable vortex of traffic that shrieks for more room.

For several years the business men of Atlanta have been striving for a wider Peachtree street, and have in a measure accomplished something in the widening of the street at Baker street and the junction of the Peachtree

The gigantic proposition of sawing off great slices of skyscrapers and moving back the sidewalks, however, is still before them. This is the proposition that is new up to the city.

Year after year it has come up, but little or nothing has resulted.

There is at present pending a plan to widen Peachtree at "the neck of the bottle," that is, at Ellis street, and for this purpose the Winsor hotel building has been set back from the sidewalk.

If this plan is carried out it will heart of the business section where more room is urgent there are half a million buildings of the city. While in the be but a drop in the bucket, for it drown or more big buildings that must give way

Ten Years Hence.

This looks expensive, doesn't it? Well, it is, but it is worlds cheaper today than it will be ten years from now.

Gradually leases are expiring on the smaller buildings on Peachtree street, leaving their sites free for improvements of greater magnitude. The property owner cannot wait a decade for the street to be widened. The immediate improvement of his property means millions to him.

So, in a few years the skyscrapers will not be the exception to the rule along Peachtree, but the entire street in the business section will be walled with twenty-story buildings, and across the viaduct palatial stores will line Whitehall street.

The Travelers bank, at Peachtree and Walton streets, has announced its intention of building a skyscraper on that corner.

The fact that the lease on the property at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Marietta streets, now occupied by the Elkin Drug company, has not so many more years to run, leads to the prophecy of something better on that strategic site.

Others will follow.

It will not be a question of millions then, but a question of billions.

Now is the time to widen Peachtree, Whitehall and several others of the narrow downtown thoroughfares.

It will cost—cost like blue blazes, but it will be the best economy the city could exercise!

Atlanta will be a city of 500,000 in 1920 and a million people will call it home by 1925.

If elbow room is needed now what will it be like in five years?

Book Reviews in Tabloid

Los Michael. By Mrs. Lutz, was reviewed in these columns some time ago, but at that time we were unable to present her picture to our readers. Some who know her as a brilliant author think it is one of the best that was reviewed last week. Mrs. Lutz read the poem at the twenty-fifth anniversary of the summer of 1842 on the night of Chautauque, after which she received the salutes and congratulations and best wishes for Mrs. Lutz in the literary world.

The Lady and the Pirate. Emerson Hough, author walked into the office of the Bobbs-Merrill company, of Indianapolis, not so long ago and announced that he was tired of saving the country and shooting off big guns. He had under his arm a manuscript of a novel called "The Lady and the Pirate" which he described as a sort of picnic of a book, just written to cheer the tired business man and his tiresome, not too tiresome but tired wife, the man who wanted to stay at home instead of going to the club, the wife who was glad of a pleasant evening with a humorous book, a contented husband, a few good laughs, etc. It seems that the number is growing large who want a literary vacation, and the point of view taken by Mr. Hough has not been exhibited since Frank Stockton; in fact, it is so full of fun and out-door adventure, love-making that it is really a literary excursion.

Henry Francis Drake. The hero of the story is a millionaire bachelor in ordinary, but in this year of 1913 he became a pirate by choice, and sails the Mississippi from its head to the gulf. Of course there is a villainous crew who helps the pirate to kidnap the girl and to fly his rival ashore, but the villainous crew who are just two small runaway boys caught the old bachelor pirate and set him chasing down the Mississippi after his own boat, which he had rented unwittingly to his rival. The secret of this interesting story is the old bachelor kidnaps his sweetheart maroons his rival and learns from the practical crew how to make love and the secret of the boyhood he never had. Mr. Hough, though an explorer and a naturalist, has given this story all the lilt of the high seas and all the fragrance of the woods.

El Dorado. An adventure of the Scarlet Pimpernel. By Baroness Orczy. In the foreword the author says: "There has of late years crept so much confusion into the mind of the student, as well as the general reader, as to the identity of the Scarlet Pimpernel with that of the Gascon royalist plotter known to history as the Baron de Batz, that the time seems opportune for settling all doubts on that subject at rest. But the identity of the Scarlet Pimpernel is in no way whatever connected with that of the Baron de Batz.

In this novel, the Baroness Orczy, writes to the literary world the long promised story. She recounts a new adventure of the Scarlet Pimpernel in the perilous days of the reign of terror, and makes of him as a fascinating and bewildering figure in the streets of ancient Paris.

Emuska. Baroness Orczy. In Hungary her husband was situated in Russia and Paris married, and settles in Yorkshire, where she writes of her native country and France, which she knows so well, and thus, her latest work will be read with unusual interest, for she writes dramatically of the defender of the fallen royalists (George H. Doran company, New York).

Discov'ring "Evelina." An Old Fashioned Romance, by F. Frankfort Moore. Is a companion book to "The Jessamy Bride," which was so popular that it is now one of the classic books. "Miss Burney and I want to have an undisturbed talk together about writing books," said Mrs. Thrane.

"Books, madam, any fool can talk of books, and a good many fools avail themselves of the license," cried Dr. Johnson. "Miss Burney and I are going to talk about life. Books are not life, Miss Burney. 'No, sir,' said Miss Burney slowly, "books are not life—books are not life."

Mr. Moore, the author, does not tell us whether the talk on life ended in the old, old story, but it is the best most books end, so, after all, books are life.

GRACE LIVINGSTONE HILL-LUTZ.

location one year ago. It is already in its eighth edition.

"Making Over Martha." by Jule M. Juppman, is a book for September and companion for the above popular story of "Martha-by-the-Day." This story follows Martha to the country, and, of course, will be interesting.

Mr. George Middleton is at present working on a new book at Susconset, Mass., but he will be in New York in a short while for the rehearsal of his dramatization of "The Prodigal Judge," and of his new play for Colman & Harris.

Louis Joseph Vance, author, is spending the summer at Providence, with his wife, who is studying in one of the summer art classes. Mr. Vance made a trip to Europe for the purpose of study and his new novel, "John Thursday," will soon be in the hands of his publishers.

William Dean Howells, who is spending the summer in Europe, is also busy on a new book.

Rex Beach has written an Alaskan story, and the report is that he is spending his time high up on the slopes of Lake Honatcong.

Sir Hugh Clifford has written "Malayan Monochrome" from the official palace of the colonial secretary of Ceylon, in the land of Allah, where he has spent twenty years studying the languages and the customs of the people.

prise to literary readers is "Wileam," by Miss Nethersole. "Out of the flood, and let us of literature," says "The Baltimore News," "Wileam is the novel which leads the books for the week," and its success does not seem confined to so short a time.

Will N. Harben, whose latest contribution was "Paul Rander," has finished a new novel which is to appear in the fall. Mr. Harben is at home resting instead of traveling as is his usual custom during the summer.

MAGAZINE CLIPPINGS.

"What Will People Say?" By Rupert Hughes. A novel of American society which is the leading fiction in the August Red Book. If this installment is a sample of Mr. Hughes' chapters that are to follow, the readers will not doubt become fully acquainted with the lango-turkey-trotting, Boston dip which seems to be making the 1913 New York mad and the author's serial a success.

Mr. Willard Huntington Wright, the new editor of the Smart Set, says: "I believe this is a day of enlightenment on the part of magazine readers, men and women have grown tired of the femininity and falsities of current fiction, essays and poetry." Mr. Wright's life thus far has been devoted entirely to literary matters, both as a critic and as a practical writer.

The Edgerton Standard, by Eleanor Mr. Ingram, was quite a favorite with the August readers of Lippincott's magazine. Will Livingston Comfort contributes a brilliant short story, "The Crusade Conquest," and there are quite a number of interesting data to interest the summer reader.

The Newallian has an article on "Extical Co-Operation," which should be read by everyone.

The Popular Magazine, which is published twice a month, has printed the complete novel, "The Golden Goddess," by Henry C. Rowland, in the August month-end number. It is a romance of the Balkan war, and is one of the most realistic stories Dr. Rowland has ever written.

The Shoals of Matrimony, by Louise Winter is the opening novelette in the September issue of Young's Magazine, but there are quite a number of interesting short stories among them "Across the Light Shaft," by Reginald Wright Kauffman, which is an interesting study of "nerves."

LEVENE NAMED RABBI
BY THE ANSHIE SFARD

The new congregation, Anshie Starb, with temporary quarters on Woodward avenue, has elected Rabbi J. M. Levene, who was the rabbi for the congregation Ahavat Achim for the past six years.

Sunday at 3 o'clock at the Red Men's hall, 86 Central avenue, he will deliver a lecture his subject being "The Jewish Home in America." The well-known kander, D. Stein, from Lemberg, will sing national songs. The prominent speakers of the evening are W. Woods White, H. Kriegshaber and others. The public is invited.

Another of those useless noises in the language indulged in by the average baseball fan when the umpire makes a decision that doesn't please him.

Summer-Spoiled Skin Removed by Absorption

(From Home Queen)

An undue summer exposure usually leaves an undesirable surface of tan dust or grease, often freckles too. It would seem more sensible to remove such surface than to hide it with cosmetics. There is nothing better for this than ordinary mercurized wax which actually absorbs the tan or grease. The thin layer of surface skin is itself absorbed gently and gradually, so there is no inconvenience and no detention indoors. It spreads the wax lightly over the entire face at bedtime and take it off in the morning with warm water. If you will get one ounce of mercurized wax at the drug store and use for a week or so you may expect marked improvement daily. When the undesirable skin is wholly in view your complexion will be a marvel of spot, purity and beautiful whiteness. Don't let those summer spots worry you. Better to banish them by bathing the face in a solution of mercurized wax 1 oz. dissolved in 1 lb. witch hazel. Used daily for awhile this will be found wonderfully effective.—(Adv.)

PORTER-KITCHENS.

Dublin, Ga. August 16.—(Special)—The marriage of Miss Julia Porter, of Danville and Mrs. C. U. Kitchens, of Dublin took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Porter, near Danville Tuesday afternoon last in the presence of a number of friends and relatives of the two young people. Rev. T. Bright performed the ceremony just a few minutes before 4 o'clock.

The party fled into the parlor to the wedding march played by Mrs. J. C. Chanler of Swainboro. First came the matron of honor Mrs. E. E. Smith, of Birmingham, Ala. Following her came little Miss Melissa Porter, niece of the bride, ringbearer, and then followed the bride and groom together.

Immediately after the ceremony a luncheon was served the guests. Miss Ruth Porter served punch on the veranda both before and after the ceremony.

This Cheerful Message From the Store Where Weather Makes No Difference

I Say! Isn't It Hot?

Yes, but what's the use of wasting strength and making ourselves hotter by hot talk?

A Few Cooling Thoughts

Study to be unhurried, unflurried and not easily provoked.

Pay out gold coins of gentle speech as change for another's half-manners or rough brusque speech.

Spend few words, but be generous with quiet cheerfulness, patience and serenity, little thoughtful courtesies and good nature.

Smiles are red roses along the way.

Black gauze-lisle hose for Women, at 25c pair.

New Jersey Top Silk Petticoats at $3.98

These Jersey-top Petticoats are in great demand, because they best meet the requirements of present fashions in skirts and dresses. Soft, clinging, perfect fitting; the flounce is of soft mull, all fashionable colors and black, at $3.98.

New Fall Suits for Women

Including beautiful Novelty Suits. Only a few of each, for nobody who buys such suits wants to run the risk of their being duplicated. The lustrous zibelines and velours de laine are rich and beautiful, the sort of thing one delights in when the autumn tang gets in the air.

The bronze greens, dark blues, lovely silvery taupe shades, rich plum wine red, mahogany and russet brown are among the favored shades.

The Suits are of various types, among them strictly tailored, demi-tailored and dressy models.

The demi-tailored types are of simple design, but touched up with trimmings on collar, cuffs and revers and with the vests which are coming into vogue.

The Coats are all in cutaway style 36 to 38 inches long in the back. On account of the popularity of vests, many of the jackets are cut away sharply in front, so that they appear quite short.

As for the skirts, they are draped—most of them—enough to seem almost voluminous, till you see them on, then they fall into slender, clinging silhouette.

New Crepe de Chine Dresses

There is something indescribable about the charm of the new crepe Dresses, just in. One wonders whether it is their richness and beauty of coloring, their superb materials, or the delightful trimming ideas. Perhaps it is the combined whole. Soft shimmering crepes in the new shades—Strawberry, mahogany, russet, silvery taupe, leather, Nell rose and new blues—Crepe de chine, Canton crepe, Ottoman crepe and so on through the range of soft silky fabrics.

We want to show you all the new and beautiful dresses here. We believe you will be delighted.

Monday—A Sale of Linens That Will Surely Please Housekeepers

For Miss Birdsong.

One of the most enjoyable affairs of the past week was the "at home," given on Thursday evening by the Misses Hartley in honor of their guest, Miss Pearl Birdsong, of Macon. The porch of their beautiful country home was artistically decorated in southern style, with pink and white flowers, and the Japanese lanterns.

Progressive rick was played, and the prize for highest score was won by Miss Lucille Hartley.

Miss Mattie Emma Hartley presided at the punch bowl. A number of musical selections were beautifully rendered by the guest of honor. At a late hour refreshments were served, the ice and cakes carrying out a color scheme of green and white.

The invited guests were Miss Pearl Birdsong and Misses Susie, Marie and Sarah Morrill, of Macon; Misses Mattie Kate Vinson and Nellie Peary, of Byron; Misses Paul Hodge, of Henderson; Jasper Hurdison, Charles Shepard, Homer Overa, Hiram Sandefur, Roy Simson, Mildred Vinson, R. F. Ousley, B. F. Champion, Clarence Vinson and Grover Cleveland, Beesie and Paule Pearson, of Zenith; Miss Odelle Owsley, Miss Lucille Young, Misses Ina and Fannie Ruth Hard-son, Misses Roberta Uen, Wynline and Lucille Hartley, Misses Henry Peary and C. C. Richardson, of Byron, John A. Coffee, of Marshallville.

Theater Party.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. White will entertain Thursday evening at a theater party in honor of their guest, Miss Adeline Small, of Macon. The other members of the party will be Misses Jamie Arnold, Ethel Law and Messrs. Clarence Jordan, Linton Ployd and Emmette White.

Miss Stewart's House Party. One of the most enjoyable house parties of the season was the one given by Miss Zedie Stewart at her summer home at Pine Mountain Springs. Besides the pleasures of the country, swimming parties, tennis, watermelon cuttings, dances and straw rides added much to the amusement of the guests. Miss Stewart's guests included Misses Mattie Lou and Willie Richardson, Miss Frances and Annie Smith and Miss Mildred Harris, of Atlanta; Miss Virginia Stewart of Yatesville; Miss Ruth Hegin of Macon and Miss Annie Byrd Ogilvie of Laurel, Mr. Bussey Eberhart and Mr. Gordon Freeman of Atlanta, Messrs. Uhlard and Terah Stewart of Savannah, Mr. Homer Sullivan of Thomaston, Mr. Will Teague and Mr. Pierce Southern of Atlanta, and Mr. Otis Stewart of Savannah.

Picnic at Silver Lake.

A delightful motor ride was given the past week by a number of Marxist cadets. The party went out in the afternoon to Silver Lake, returning by moonlight.

A picnic supper was enjoyed and later dancing.

The party included Misses Helen Fields of Nashville, Tenn., Margaret Clarke, Margaret Moore, Geraldine Vinson, Dorothy Vinson, Louise Callahan, Annie LaHatte, Lillian Burkhardt, Messrs. Clarence Calahan, Augustin Kane, George Clark, Willie Berris, Willie Wrigley, Wallie Murphy, Jamie LaHatte, Roy Scott, Pierre Vinson, John Mason. The chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. Mulkey and Mrs. Burckhardt.

At the Country Clubs.

At the country clubs last night were assembled most of the club-going element, and music and dancing as well as the beauty of out-of-doors were enjoyed.

Among those entertaining small parties at the Driving Club were Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Sommersville, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Gunby, of Florida, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dougherty, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Ransom, Miss Nina Gentry, Messrs. H. M. Atkinson, Howie Martin, Dr. Jerry Osborne, James Rasen, E. C. Lamb, James Harris, Dostler Lowmiden, Jesse Draper, Charles Sciple, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Spalding, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Spear, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Gentry.

At East Lake, where the new dances were for the first time introduced, there was a bright company including a group of attractive visiting young women, among them Miss Mildred Henson, the guest of Miss McCarty, Miss Hixon, of Americus, the guest of Mrs. Russell Bridges, and Miss Carol Dean, the guest of Miss Mary Lucy Turner.

Mr. and Mrs. Cox Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Cox entertained a number of friends at their home in Inman Park Thursday evening, August 14th. The house was decorated with beautiful growing plants and cut flowers. Functi was served in the dining room by Miss Grace Lanford. Interesting games of progressive heart-dice and cards were enjoyed until a late hour. Miss Mattie Cox won the prize for the heart-dice game, and Miss Lucy Saratto the card prize. Recitations and solos were rendered by Miss Mattie Pearl Edwards. Mrs. H. T. Thomas and John Davis, little Misses Evelyn and Mary Davis.

Matinee Party.

Mr. W. F. Falk gave a box party Tuesday evening in compliment to Mrs. E. A. Bradley, of Birmingham, Ala., who is the guest of his sister, Mrs. W. L. Ebbert. Those present were Mrs. E. A. Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Koush, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Ebbert, and Mr. W. F. Falk.

Beavers-Thornton.

A wedding of interest to many friends was that of Miss Sarah Louise Beavers and Mr. John E. Thornton, of Atlanta, which took place Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Georgia Beavers, in Campbellton, Ga. The attractive home was beautifully decorated with handsome ferns and summer flowers, and ivy framed the rare etchings and engravings which adorned the walls. The ceremony, performed by Dr. L. C. Bicker, of the First Christian church, of Atlanta, was witnessed by a small company of relatives and friends. The bride was lovely in a gown of white embroidered crepe, and she carried white roses. She is a charming and cultured young woman, and Mr. Thornton, who is well known in business circles of Atlanta, has many friends to congratulate him. After a bridal trip Mr. and Mrs. Thornton will be at home with the bride's mother in Campbellton.

For Mrs. Dorn.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hill Orr entertained delightfully Thursday evening at their suburban home on Cheney street, in East Point, in honor of their mother, Mrs. A. W. Dorn, of Anniston, Ala., the occasion being the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Dorn.

The home was prettily decorated with forms and white roses. Lunch was served on the veranda by Misses Mildred Bell, Marguerite Chick and Martha Acker. The games, rick and forty-two were played by the guests, and music was furnished by Mrs. Chester Seales and Miss Hazel Whitney. At conclusion of the games ices and cake were served.

Those invited to meet Mrs. Dorn were Mrs. and Mrs. Chester Seales, Mrs. J. F. Mrs. J. W. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Callahan, Eubanks, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Orr, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Society

Society in Asheville

Asheville, N. C. August 16.—(Special)—Society people from the south journeying at the Pattery Park hotel and those visiting Asheville were represented in large numbers on the opening day of the much advertised horse show on Thursday. Never in the history of this annual event has the attendance been as large nor of such social promise as with three horse show halls at the Pattery Park, the Grove Park, and the Ingersoll Hotel. The week has been the greatest of the summer. So many young people are present that it is not probable that it will have been held nightly in the palm room and the young men and women have been enjoying the merriest kind of a time.

Take the airship for a sight-seeing run over the mountains may be heard here before long according to Henry C. Brown, who is trying to arrange for such exhibitions. He is with the expectation of later carrying passengers. He is a member of the Aero Club of America and although he has a reputation as one of the most courageous aviators, he declares that he believes in the safety and sane flights for he has never had an accident yet in the many flights he has made in different parts of the country.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt whose magnificent estate, Billmore is again open entertained at another of their delightful camping out parties at Mr. Vanderbilt's shooting lodge near the top of Mount Pisgah. The guests enjoyed a week end visit and all the wondrous rustic beauties of the place combined with the modern luxuries of one of the finest hunting lodges in the country. Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt's guests were Dr. and Mrs. C. J. Smith and Miss Anne Williams of Asheville.

A HANDSOME WOMAN OF 40 WITH FINE HAIR

INSTEAD of age nearing a gray-haired old age at forty? The world's most famous beauties reached the zenith in their 40s. But when a woman's hair loses its beauty and becomes gray and straggling, be she 40 or less the world looks upon her as an old woman.

Robinson's Hair Dye is not intended to bleach or change the original color of the hair. It is to restore faded or gray hair to its original color and make it beautiful, lustrous and beautiful again. It is a pure preparation from our own laboratory, guaranteed harmless and no woman or man need hesitate to use it. Thousands now are using it with best results and during the quarter century we have sold it never have we heard of an untoward hair treatment. Does not stain the scalp and is not detected.

Don't make the sad mistake of pulling out the white hairs. Very short by they will come faster than you can pull them out. Instead use Robinson's Hair Dye, and we promise that you will be restored to your natural color. Successful restorative. Prepared for light medium and dark brown and black hair. Dyes are sold in all departments. 75c per parcel post. See send us the name of your druggist if we cannot supply you and we will send you FREE samples of Robinson's Hair Dye and Cold Cream, of Geneva, Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Christian Association Hall at Cox College

The above view represents the Y. W. C. A. Hall at Cox College, College Park, Ga., that has just been remodeled, showing its two-manual organ recently installed and giving a glimpse into the reading room.
 The Association is the center of the religious and social activities of the college and many prominent patrons have often addressed the young ladies and inspired them to higher and nobler things. Many interesting social gatherings where distinguished people from Atlanta and other cities are entertained, form a valuable feature of college life. At these gatherings students from the Conservatory furnish delightful programs. At times the guests are treated to a recital on the large three-manual organ in the chapel, which is considered the largest and sweetest toned college instrument in the South.
 With the splendid environment of rural seclusion on the one hand and a great city near by all throbbing with life and the greatest intellectual and moral forces on the other, with the fine equipments and strong faculty, great things may be accomplished by the earnest student. The College points with pride to its alumnae who hold prominent positions all over the Southland.
 Workmen have been busy throughout the summer, putting in many improvements which the students will appreciate and enjoy the coming season.
 Cox College can be reached in a day from any point in this or adjoining states and many prospective patrons have visited the college this summer.
 Preparations have been made to accommodate a larger student body than usual the coming year and all Atlanta is looking forward to the arrival of the students on September 10, when the seventy-first session of this time-honored institution begins.—(Adv.)

DUFFY-STEPHENSON.

Covington, Ga., August 16—(Special.) The marriage of Miss Evelyn Duffey, of Morrow, and Mr. Robert Edgar Stephenson, of Covington, was a beautiful social event of last week, taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Parker Ernest Duffey, on Thursday afternoon, August 14, at 1 o'clock. Rev. DeFoor, of Morrow, officiating.
 Just before the ceremony Mrs. John Callaway, of Covington, sang "The Hour That Gave Me You," and during the ceremony "Simple Confession" was played on piano and violin by Mr. Walter Stephenson, on the former, and Miss Lucy White, of Covington, on the latter.
 The bridal party entered the parlor to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by the above musicians, and were met at the improvised altar of palms and ferns by the groom and his best man, Mr. Hugh Wright, of Covington.
 The bridesmaids were Misses Henry Blalock, of Jonesboro, Lillian Maxwell, of Lexington; Agnes Duffey, of Mor-

WRITE NOW

Prof. Clay Burton Vance, the well-known Paris psychologist, has made arrangements to give free Readings, as a test of his ability to delineate people's characters at a distance, to all readers who send him a specimen of their hand-writing and date of birth. The following are amongst the subjects dealt with in these free Readings—
ADVICE ON BUSINESS, MARRIAGE, OCCUPATION, CHANGES, JOURNEYS, FRIENDS, ENEMIES, AND ALL IMPORTANT EVENTS OF LIFE.
 Attention of the Scientific World is at present focused upon the work of Prof. Clay Burton Vance, who seems to read the lives of people with amazing accuracy. It has been said that the exactitude with which he reads the past would convince any skeptic of his ability to read the future. Conspicuous among the high endorsements of Prof. Vance's powers is that of Prof. C. Dixon, M.A., F.R.S.
 Director of the Lunark Observatory, Member of the "Societe Astronomique de France" and of the "Astronomische Gesellschaft," Germany.
 "I duly received your letter and complete Life Reading. I am perfectly satisfied with your reading, it is nearly all the items as exact as it could possibly be. IT SEEMS STRANGE that you should refer to my suffering from throat trouble. I have just had a bad attack and usually have it two or three times per year. I shall certainly recommend you to my friends who desire a Life Reading."
 Simply send to undermentioned address, in your own hand-writing, your full name and address, together with the date, month and year of your birth, state sex and whether married or single.

AUGUSTA, GA.

Augusta, Ga., August 16.—(Special Correspondence.)—The First Baptist church was the scene of a pretty wedding Tuesday at 2 o'clock. Mr. Charles Goodrich, formerly of this city, more recently of Atlanta, but now transferred to Savannah, and Miss Elizabeth Dilworth, daughter of Rev. Charles P. Dilworth, were the contracting parties. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Osa P. Gilbert, of the Second Baptist church. The church was tastefully decorated with ferns, palms and trailing bamboo. The ushers were Messrs. Edward Eull, near, Walker Pondleton, Doughty Goodrich and Clifford Van Dyke. The maid of honor, Miss Lila Dilworth, preceded the bride, who also walked up the aisle alone, joining the groom at the altar, where he awaited her with his best man, Mr. Randolph Goodrich. After the ceremony they left for Washington city and Hot Springs. They will make their home in Savannah.

A most notable society event of the week was the marriage on Saturday morning at St. Paul's church of Mr. Thomas Irvin and Miss Marion Dunbar Martin. Rev. George Sherwood officiating. Mr. Irvin is one of the prominent and well known young men both in society and business circles and his bride is the granddaughter of the late Barney Dunbar and only daughter of Mrs. Alfred Martin. Mr. Irvin having accepted a business offer with a cotton firm which takes him at once to Texas, the marriage, which had been rumored for the fall, was hurried up so that his bride might accompany him. There were no attendants, but a large number of their friends filled the church to witness the ceremony and extend congratulations and good wishes before their departure for Austin, Texas. The bride inherited much of the graceful charm of her mother, adding an attractive individuality which has won for her great popularity in the social world.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Mr. Jesse L. Pace, of Augusta, and Miss Caroline Jennings Phillips, of Portsmouth, on September 3 at the home of the bride's parents, Coligny Beach, opposite Old Point Comfort.

Give Hair and Complexion a Chance Plead the Specialists in Those Lines

By Isma Dooly

This is the season when a woman should try to give her hair and complexion a chance—just the chance she tries occasionally to give her mind and body, for in the "good old summer time" the hair is tried not only with the excessive heat, but with the curling tongs which have to be used them more than at any other time.

The complexion, too, with its naturally open pores becomes clogged with powder and cosmetics, and with the effort to look dainty and cool, women have to do the very things which do away with the relaxing period summer should prove to be.

Take a Rest from Tonics.

The tonics which are supposed to be good at all times for the head, had just as well be laid aside during the summer months, especially during the time of the hottest weather, and the pores of the head be given the opportunity to throw off the impurities. When a shampoo is given, the hair should be thoroughly dried, and the same precaution should be taken when the head becomes wet from swimming. Not to dry it in time produces a stiffness of the hair which makes it break off easily, and look lifeless.

To use the curling tongs in summer is always bad for the hair, and the use of brilliantine is equally injurious at this particular time. The hair should be well brushed each night and the hair should be washed with water and the inclination of the head to perspire freely, the hair should be dried then, too, as thoroughly as possible.

Steel hair pins are bad at any time, but especially so in summer, and to use perfume and Cologne on the hair takes the life and color out of it.

The hair should never be adjusted at night with hair pins, no matter how warm it is, but be braided, or left flowing.

The Complexion.

The many tonics and salves, lotions, powders, etc., proposed for the complexion in summer are always dangerous if not intelligently used. Each preparation is good in itself, but if ignorantly applied is just as apt to do harm as good. What is good for one skin is not for another and for a woman to go blindly and use something her neighbor uses, is just as dangerous as it would be if she took a prescription intended for another, without consulting the physician who gave it.

The cream which is really necessary for the building up of one woman's skin, may be the very thing that will clog the pores of another woman's skin, and make it dark and rough. On the other hand, the greasiness of one kind of skin requires the application of lotions which tend to dry the skin, rather than otherwise, and that cannot be used on the naturally dry skin without producing a bad effect.

Right now, every woman young and old, would do well just to give her complexion a rest, keeping the skin as clean as possible, and giving nature a chance to work out its problems. Powders are refreshing to the dainty person, but they really do the skin no good in hot weather, any more than any other time.

The smart woman of this period of the summer's most trying time, is the one who adjusts her time and social activities that she can retire to her boudoir, and for several weeks let her hair and skin get the rest they deserve. The powers that be know that woman's hair and skin serve her well. She tries them hard and fast, and never gives them a rest. It is but humane she should and it will mean their better service to her later.

Miss Julia Hale, of Nashville, Tenn.

Miss Rosa Kate Green was hostess at a lawn party Wednesday evening, to which seventy-five guests were invited, in compliment to Miss Julia Hale.

A lovely of Thursday was the morning bridge luncheon at which Mrs. Robert Walker entertained in honor of Miss Julia Hale, of Nashville, Tenn., the guest of Miss Mary Bass, and Miss Mary Louise Walker, of Monroe, who is the guest of Miss Luciline Hamilton.

GOSSIP OF GEORGIANS IN THE METROPOLIS

By R. S. Caraway, The Constitution's New York Bureau.

New York, August 16.—(Special.)—There will be no more "Cady Taylor" hymns, or "Germán" band hymns in any of the church hymnals now in general use if the delegates to the national convention of organists, which was in session in Atlantic City and after several weeks of long their honeymoon in and around New York, upon the termination of which they will go to Millbridgeville, in the future. Mrs. Major was Miss Mildred Lee Dryer, of Louisville, and Mr. Major's home is in this city. Having been recently transferred to the south by his firm he will leave shortly to take up his new duties in Georgia.

Judge and Mrs. William C. Dunbar, who were married in Washington last week, are spending their honeymoon in Atlantic City, and after several weeks there will go to Judge Dunbar's home in August for the remainder of the summer. Judge Dunbar, who was formerly mayor of Augusta, is now postmaster of the house of representatives in Washington. Their wedding was one of the social events of the national capital, and was largely attended by members of the Georgia congressional delegation and other friends of the bride, who was formerly Mrs. Virginia Turner Bennett, and who was unattended, wore a handsome gown of white brocade charmeuse embroidered with beads, and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids.

The engagement of Miss Louise Peterson Thwait, of New York, to Oscar Jackson Meyer, of Germantown, Pa., was announced one day this week. The marriage will take place the latter part of October. Miss Thwait is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Thwait, of No. 600 West 150th street, formerly of Georgia, and a socially well known family of that state.

The climax of a pretty romance will come with the marriage of Miss Lane Bracker, a well known magazine illustrator, to Miss Mildred Erlich, daughter of a Savannah millionaire merchant, which will take place on September 8 at the St. Regis hotel in this city. Mr. Bracker's sister, Miss Della Bracker, is also an artist of note, and she designed a number of the gowns worn at Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish's mother goose ball at Newport recently. It was through Miss Bracker that Mr. Bracker and Miss Erlich met. The two young women were girlhood friends, and during one of her summer visits in the north, Miss Erlich met Mr. Bracker.

The wedding will be very quietly solemnized, with only the relatives of the two principals in attendance. After the wedding Mr. Bracker and his bride will spend several weeks at Atlantic City. They have taken a bungalow in Maine, where they will stay until November, when they will go to Savannah for the automobile races. They will sail December 1 for Europe and will make a voyage around the world. They do not expect to return to America until a year from next Christmas, when they will make their home in this city.

While in Europe they will visit many interesting personages, who are Mr. Bracker's friends. They will be the guests in London of William J. Locke, the author, and in Paris of E. H. Reardon.

Mr. Bracker is one of the most successful illustrators in New York today. He devotes his efforts almost entirely to magazine drawing. Miss Erlich is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Erlich, of Savannah.

Another wedding of interest which will take place on September 8, at the home of the bride's parents on Newark Heights, Newark, N. J., will be that of Miss Dorothy Hoffman Porter, of Ernest Theodore Kruger, of Augusta. This wedding also, will be very quiet, with only the immediate relatives of the couple in attendance. After a honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Kruger will make their home in Augusta.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Major, who were recently married at the home of the bride in Louisville, Ky., are spending their honeymoon in and around New York, upon the termination of which they will go to Millbridgeville, in the future.

AFTERNOON TEA

SEVERAL charming late Summer gowns are shown here. The first, which is worn by the girl who pours, is of pale blue charmeuse. The blouse is trimmed with deep collar and cuffs of white charmeuse, embroidered with wild roses. Crossed bands of pale blue tulle are finished at the waist with a smart black velvet bow. Frills finish the neck and sleeves.

The next figure wears a becoming gown of cool grape green voile. The collar and cuffs of eyelet embroidery are edged with plaited tulle of the same shade. The surplice waist and the overskirt are embroidered in eyelet work. A large pond lily is used effectively in catching the drapery of the overskirt, while another is woven into the belt.

A simple frock of lavender crepe is worn by the hostess, while the remaining figure is gowned in white Crepe de Chine, the blouse cut susplice, and worn over an effective lace yoke. An Oriental sash of strawberry Crepe de Chine is tied low at the left side. A white tulle hat with low black velvet crown completes the costume.

How You May Reinforce Your Summer Wardrobe

By Marion Morris

TO SOME women Summer is nearly over! There have had their vacations and therefore are indifferent about the condition of their clothes.

But the women who are just about to enjoy their vacations now consider clothes to be quite vital.

Indeed, the latter women who now find their wardrobes "run down at the heels," have a serious problem at hand, for it is no easy matter to rejuvenate Summer clothes. And to purchase new Autumn modes would be absurd, as they would not be reasonable in all places, and when Fall comes you would again feel passé and shabby.

To begin with, examine every blouse, skirt, dress and suit. Then take those days and consider this vital that you will need—cleanse them point very carefully—and have them pressed, laundered, dry cleaned or pressed with new pleatings of lace or net, and put clean linings or lace collars on your suits and coats. The perfecting of these little details is money-saving as well as important for the appearance of your costumes.

I shall tell you about a friend of mine who is just about to start for a short trip to Europe with a rejuvenated wardrobe, instead of a new outfit, for it you are contemplating such a trip, or if you are getting ready to go to the seashore, country or mountains, I am sure that the way she solved the problem will be helpful to you.

First of all she had her two white linen and cotton serge skirts lengthened so that they would not look as though they had been the right size last year. This may seem a bit ridiculous, but even the best of these materials continue to shrink. Then she had them beautifully laundered so that they would be immaculate to wear on deck in the morning and early afternoon. And you should do likewise for on land, because such skirts are indispensable for golf, tennis and general cutting wear.

Her second best—last year's suit was pressed and cleaned for wear on cool days aboard ship. Such a costume gives much satisfaction, because you need not worry if it wrinkles or if it gets a little spotted.

Even her motoring and traveling coat of chambray cloth was relieved of its few grease spots that marred its quite new appearance. Undoubtedly the extravagantly indulged woman would not have bothered about having it cleaned, as it would have been just as easy to have gotten a new coat. But think of the difference of expenditure.

A few blouses had to be purchased for this going-away wardrobe, because they are needed with the knockabout as well as the dressy suit. She considered her two silk shirts the most comfortable things in her outfit, because they are just right to wear at sea and are also ideal for golf and tennis wear. Cravats of polka dotted foulard give these waists an air of distinction that is much sought this season. Net, shadow lace and silk blouses with the low pointed neck, edged with double ruffles of lace or net, are correct for afternoon wear with a suit of the worsted or silk.

Only two lingerie frocks were cleaned for the trip, because they are not worn after six P. M.

For formal dinners and evening affairs, she took several of her last season's gowns of beautiful chiffons and rich silks.

As dancing is the craze on both sides of the Atlantic, she realized that her one lace frock that was in good condition, would not suffice. So she got a three tier dress of embroidered net. This picturesque mode, which is a recent Callot creation, is also very charming when its three deep ruffles are of chiffon or tulle.

But just at this point, she discovered that she lacked the most necessary dress—one that could be worn in the afternoons, as well as in informal dinners in restaurants. Indeed, this requirement puzzled her very much, for she did not relish the idea of expending forty or fifty dollars or more for such a silk gown. Then she thought of a black crepe de chine evening gown that had been "that indispensable and always convenient dress" for several seasons. And it was a happy thought, for the draped skirt of this gown was sufficient to make the very dress that she needed. Then came the problem of its trimming, for she did not want to expend much on a made-over gown—but, this proved quite simple when she decided to have it made with a plain bodice that opened in a wide V all the way to the waistline, and that was finished with a roll of the silk, and a surplus vest of fine white net, and a net frill that was wired in the back to give the effect of a de Miedel collar. Its short sleeves were also finished with net frills. At first, she thought that a bright-color silk girdle would lighten the crepe, but afterwards decided that a crushed girdle and wide tailored bow (at the front) of rich black satin ribbon would be the most effective. The ribbon she used was seven inches wide. This dress, which turned out to be very good-looking, required an outlay of about ten dollars, as she helped her dressmaker so that it could be finished in a day and a half.

Of course, her trotteur dress of crepe meteor, and an afternoon frock of polka dotted foulard were not left at home.

Although her hats were carefully cleaned, she felt the need of a new chapeau for dressy wear. And in spite of the fact that the shops are giving their Summer models away for very little, she thought it best to get an early Autumn hat with black velvet crown and shirred lace brim, trimmed with a large butterfly of lace.

This is the first photograph of the new train to be shown. It is extremely long and being of soft satin or chiffon like the gown gives the appearance of being quite scant, though it is really very voluminous.

Of velvet and satin this artistic and beautiful costume shows many of the most desirable points of the coming fashions. The gown itself is of pale gray satin, the coat of velvet of a deeper tone. The wide girdle and the up-standing collar are good.

"This Season the Train Will be Worn as an Evening Wrap," Says Dame Fashion

In this picture the train is shown wrapped about the shoulders as it will be worn during the coming season. The fashion is one which evinces great possibility of development, though whether it will become a popular one is yet to be seen.

The Colored Sash

If a girl is at all enterprising this Summer she may have credit for many more costumes than she really has, by the use of the versatile sash.

Now that the wide, crushed girdle or sash is so very much in vogue, Made-moiselle may vary her wardrobe by having two or three such sashes for each frock. Or, if her wardrobe and purse are limited, a wise idea is to have one fluffy white frock and different colored sashes for that one.

American Beauty, vivid green, corn color, sky blue, pink, the new Italian purple, Copenhagen blue or black are but a few of the many hues that are fashionable and much used.

A pretty scheme is to use parasols and stockings to match the girdle—particularly green and red—which are the sunshades most seen, and the stockings and hose that are not difficult to procure.

Some of the sashes are simply very wide crushed or folded bands; others tie around once and end in loosely tied knots at the side, and still others are tied directly in front. Some of these sashes are made of satin, others of ribbon and tulle is also fashionable. And if the ends are finished with tassels or pendants or balls so much the better.

Home-Made Bathing Shoes

Take an old pair of stockings and cut them off just below the knee. Hem the top edges and cut and buttonhole little slits all around, about one inch below the hem. Buy a pair of cork soles and slip into the feet of the stockings, fastening them on well. Run a wide tape or ribbon through the slits at the top and tie around the leg, and you have a pair of good bathing boots.

The New Skirts

As a change from the much-draped and decorated skirt, come the new straight models in two and three tier effects. They keep to the silhouette effect of the earlier tight skirts and are very youthful in their effect.

Sometimes the skirt is in two sections, as was the French model noted in a shop recently, which had a plain straight pleated effect at the top, which reached to the knees and beneath that was crossed in the front and draped.

But many, many of the skirts are very straight in line with no drapery whatever.

Another Paris idea is to have the skirt perfectly plain, somewhat high waisted and decorated with frills, two or three inches wide. One smart model had three rows of frills or ruffles just at the line of the knee, but quite snugly fitting above and below that.

Still another very fetching skirt had three rows of frills at the knees and three at the hem. This was very quaint and picturesque and was composed of soft figured foulard in one of the attractive patterns.

But she is a wise woman who adopts the style that is most becoming—that gives her the best lines, regardless of whether it is the "newest" or not, for never were fashions more varied and broad, and it should be easy for a woman to find something which just suits her.

Miss Furnished Roomer's New Idea

Don't continue to dry pocket handkerchiefs on your toilet table's mirror, Miss Furnished-Roomer. To launder one's mouschoirs is a laudable economy, but to paste them while wet upon the vanity side surface of a mirror, always blurs and occasionally breaks it—and the latter misfortune brings seven years of bad luck to the superstitious transgressor of lodging house rules. Moreover, they can be dried more smoothly and more quickly on the sides of the bathtub. After the tub's enamel has been thoroughly scrubbed place the sopping wet handkerchiefs flatly against it and spare no pains to strike the corners of each square of linen, so that they will firmly adhere. They'll dry in a few moments.

KID-TRIMMED MILLINERY

It comes via Paris. It was introduced there at the races. It is very smart for the "tallorish" type of hat.

It is combined with hemp and tanzal straw.

Crowns are of soft white kidskin and the brim of straw. One very chic model was of black straw and white kidskin, with two long quills arranged flat on either side, extending backward.

Other hats with kid trimmings were finished simply with a tailored bow of moire ribbon.

COMBINED PRESENT FOR A BRIDE AND BRIDEGROOM

Watches for both the bride and the bridegroom come in one box like a single gift, but each of the wedded pair instantly recognizes their distinctive present. The smaller timepiece which may be detached from its golden bracelet and worn as the pendant of a necklace, is encased in gold, mother-of-pearl or coral enamel and has an open face framed in tiny jewels. This obviously is for the lady. The other watch, attached to a slender link chain, is encased in chased or engraved gold and has an open face. It is so very thin that it may be placed in the pocket of an evening suit's waistcoat.

SPORT COATS

—They are the jaunty new topcoats. —One sees them much at the seashore.

—Young girls especially like them. —They are straight of cut and masculine as to tailoring.

White chinchilla coats are particularly well liked.

—Bright colored cloths are much favored, too, for these sport wraps. —Vivid greens, soft blues, chambray color, rose, red and checked coats are to be seen.

Brass buttons characterize the colored coats.

—Most all these short coats have wide belts, passing through loops, which extend all the way round.

—The different cuts and colors are in evidence morning, noon and night.

A BEAUTIFUL BRIDAL GOWN

One pretty bride has chosen silver and white brocade decorated with Brussels applique lace. The train is cut in one with the dress, and is lined with dull silver tissue and edged on the inner side with white beater. The carriage is cut in a rather low square and veiled with the Brussels lace. The sleeves are long and tight-fitting, veiled with the lace. Brussels lace also forms the mob cap, and attached to this is a long net tulle veil, bordered with seed pearls.

Another wedding gown is in oyster white satin, having a tunic drapery of white mousseline de soie caught up with a large wreath of orange blossoms and green leaves. The train is quite short, and attached to the shoulders.

BUTTONHOLES IN LACE AND THIN MATERIALS

Beautiful buttonholes may be made in any material, no matter how thin, if they are first marked and the outlines stitched around with the machine. Buste small squares of lawn underneath each place where you wish to make a buttonhole in lace, then cut the buttonhole and work them. Cut away the surplus lawn. Also put tiny squares of lawn under the buttons before sewing them on.

The Way to Care for Jewelry

Have you ever learned how to take care of your jewels? It is not a matter of keeping them securely in a safety deposit vault or in a burglar proof safe when you are not wearing them. The main thing is to be sure that they are safe when you are wearing them and the only way of doing that is to regularly have their settings tested by a jeweler. He will do it while you wait, working in your presence. Many jewels, especially small ones, which lock firm in their ring settings, are loose enough to drop out if the hand falls with unusual swiftness or violence or is struck against some object. And having small stones replaced frequently quickly increases the cost of a ring far beyond its value. As for the other smaller articles of jewelry—the eels, sash and hat pins, eost barettes, chaperlaines and la valloises—are easily damaged because carelessly handled. Necklaces, tiaras, stomachers and bracelets receive more consideration because of their great cost, but even these articles are often laid down on hard surfaces instead of placed delicately on the velvet beds of their cases as soon as they are taken off of the body. Great care should be exercised in cleaning jewels. The table should first be covered with a soft washable pad and as with each piece has been gone over a soft brush dipped in jeweler's polish, it should be set on one side, where every piece has received its coat of polish, the sawdust should be generously shaken through a sifter over the entire assortment and each article finally polished with a second brush especially for that purpose.

The Amateur Dressmaker Exploits the Durability of the Blue and White Costume

OUR family seems to be obsessed with a liking for blue and white. The very day that father sent home a pair of white flannel trousers to go with his "tissue paper" navy blue serge coat, Mildred, Louise and I, shopping in as many different directions, purchased white and blue materials which we believed could be prettily combined. Mildred bought enough white crush to make a plain skirt having side seams only and fastening under a placket at the left front, enough heavy white linen, finely striped with dark blue to make a peplum-bodice and enough dark blue fine linen with which to trim it. The bodice, having long, close-fitting set-in sleeves finished at the wrist with knife-plaited frills of the plain blue, fastens at the left front over a shirred vest of plain blue linen whose low-rounded neck is corded with white crush and filled in with a gumpie and collar in plain white net. Four inches above the waist-line the bodice blouses all round over a broad, loosely folded plain blue linen belt under which it attached a striped peplum which falls half way to the knees at the sides, is a little longer at the back and a trifle shorter at the front. By the time that Mildred had trimmed her white straw hat with a band of broad blue ribbon terminating in a three-looped bow that slants well upward above the left rear edge of the brim, she had a very smart get-up indeed, and one that cost her less than five dollars.

LOUISE'S new costume was equally inexpensive although it's of serge. The skirt, overlaid seamed only at the left center of the back, is gathered to a raised belt that is covered in front by the twin points of a single-breasted V-necked vest of white serge whose slight fullness at the waist-line is held in and puckered by a broad belt that fastens with a big pearl button run through a white kid-bound buttonhole. Only the portion of the belt crossing the waistcoat is of white kid. The rest of it, which starts at either side of the back, is of blue serge and runs through wide slits cut into either front of a blue serge blazer coat. The edges of this belt, of the coat and its turned-over collar, short revers and wide turned-back cuffs are doubly stitched with dull red does. Dull red velvet faces the straight, narrow brim of the last Spring wide straw hat whose rather shabby crown Louise draped with white grosgrain wide ribbon matching the stiff loop aigrette standing straight up from the back of the brim. A white-topped hat that is faced with a dark color does not soil quickly if a reasonable amount of care is taken in handling it, and if the hat pins are never wholly removed once they have been run through its crown.

SINCE narrow skirts first began to come into fashion I've tried all sorts of experiments with them and really believe that a plump matron cannot have a more becoming model than the one after which my pastel blue wool taffeta is made. It has a single seam at the front centre which is concealed by the way the material is gathered into the waist band. Similar treatment is accorded to the samplar lower portion of a kimono-croast bodice and fastened under the broad pump bow fastening a draped girdle of pastel blue wool taffeta, that holds the fullness of the upper garment. Over the hips the material of the skirt is drawn smoothly but not tightly and the narrow silhouette from the waist to the feet is only broken by the peplum sides and fronts of the coat-bodice which is of white wool taffeta. A seven-eighths length, are finished with sleeves, rather close-fitting and of eleven-eighths length, are finished with narrow white wool taffeta cuffs and the fronts, rolling to the waist-line, turn back under a narrow self-collar that is separated by a hem-stitched-bordered white soft silk fichu-waistcoat, crossing at the bust and worn over a high-collared gumpie of plain white net. With a half yard of white wool satin Mildred covered a wire hat shape whose narrow brim is faced with a biased scrap of pastel blue velvet and whose crown is trimmed with a home-dyed pastel blue "fancy" which formerly was white.

Ruth's sailor frock, made from the legs of her father's oldest pair of white flannel trousers, goes on as one piece, but its waist and skirt were made separately and joined under a navy blue silk belt matching the tie fastening her anchor-embroidered wide collar. The fronts of the blouse join with blue silk shoe lacing and under its skirt, instead of a petticoat and drawers in white lingerie she wears knickerbockers of light weight navy blue flannel. The white flannel of her frock is so closely woven, that the blue underwear does not show through and as both the rough surfaces stick together, the effect is as clinging and scanty—yet without modest as fashion demands.

IT WAS easy to make Ruth a little pea jacket out of one of father's blue flannel coats and we think she's going to find this garment very useful indeed. It looks smart and "comfy" these late Summer days over her white lingerie frocks and it didn't cost us a penny since we could even use the buttons that were on the paternal garment. When all these new costumes were shown to father he admired them tremendously. Then he said: "You'll never dare to wear them at the same time, for all of the blues 'swear' at each other." And to think that none of us should have noticed that fact while working upon the materials!

VERY NEW SLIPPERS

They hail from Paris, are very feminine, very dainty and quite different, so one may be sure that Dame Fashion will approve them.

They may be of soft kidskin, of patent leather or calfskin, and they are made on the last of a dress slipper, with French heels. But it is the fastening, and not the cut, which distinguishes them. Instead of having flat tailored bows like the familiar pumps, or buckles or rosettes, they have satin ribbons about a half inch in width, which come from each side, cross just above the instep and are drawn up at the side, where they are tied in fetching, little bows.

At a pretty wedding not long ago, where the bridesmaids wore pink and blue, they were these newest slippers—the slippers of a lovely blue satin, with fastenings of delicate pink ribbons. The effect was quite charming and carried out the scheme of their gowns.

THE IDEA FOR THIS NOVEL & PRACTICAL DESIGN WAS ORIGINATED BY "WINIFRED WORTH"

DESIGN FOR CHILD'S DRESS

TO BE WORKED IN EMBROIDERY

HAVE used this pattern because its extreme simplicity is pleasing. It may be used on white, or colored fabrics. It is prettiest in all white, then one does not run the risk of seeing fine work faded. Eyelet work is indicated by circles. These are made by puncturing the holes to their extreme edge. Flowers are embroidered with one thread the better to insure the perfect diamond shape. All foliage leaves should be made in satin embroidery. A handsome example of embroidery is done in white floss upon cream, brown or yellow linen. Butternut brown crash embroidered in white is strikingly beautiful in a dress worn by a little brown-eyed miss. Sincerely yours, Winifred Worth

TO TRANSFER THIS DESIGN.

Put some soap in a pint of hot water, stir and remove soap. Saturate Design with mixture, then remove excess moisture by partially drying Design. Place material on a hard, flat surface and lay the Design, face down, upon the material. END OF BELT

ODDS AND ENDS

IN slicing pineapple it is well to remember not to use the same knife for slicing that has been used in peeling. The rind contains an acid that is apt to cause a sore mouth and swollen lips.

WHEN washing mauve prints and muslins put a little soda in the water in which they are washed in order to keep the color from running out. Soda is said to have exactly the opposite effect on mauve that it has on other dyes.

FOR Washing baby's flannels and many other purposes natural soft water is preferred to artificially softened water. To secure soft water for these purposes use the water in your refrigerator pan. It always is soft.

THE celery knobs that grocers sell are one of the popular vegetables and are very wholesome. They are boiled like turnips, scraped, cut into small pieces and mixed with a French dressing for a salad, or have a white sauce thrown over them and are served as an entree.

A SPOT on polished wood caused by a hot dish being placed upon it will disappear if it be covered with a little salad oil and salt, which, after it has been left on for an hour or so, should then be rubbed off with a soft cloth.

SILK stockings will look their best if they are washed in bran water, not with soap. To each quart of water allow two heaped tablespoonfuls of bran, boil it for about five minutes, then strain out the bran.

TO polish amster rub it with whitening moistened with water, and lastly with a little olive oil laid on, and well polished off with a piece of flannel.

WHEN roasting meat in an open pan, wet a clean white muslin cloth and lay over the top of the meat. It will keep from getting hard and does not require basting so often, and the meat is much nicer.

WHEN ironing box-plaited waists and the plaits are twisted together with the starching, make a stick of wood and insert in the waist to open it up, and you will find the plaits can be ironed quite readily.

A FLAT brass button sewed on the corner of a dishcloth will be a great help in washing dishes. It can be used as a "scratcher," and will not injure the finest china.

SMALL TRUNKS

ONE of the best, in thirty-six inch and smaller sizes, is several inches lower than an ordinary trunk and about the same width. A second, equally well liked, is longer, narrower and about six inches higher—shaped more like a shirt waist box. The first has a lower tray, a tray divided in sections in the cover, and a rack between for skirts and waists, which is swung upright on hinges at one end of the trunk to get at the lower tray and to pack and unpack. Gowns can be slipped over the hangers and the rack lowered into the trunk in half the time it would take to pack in the ordinary way and with less creasing, it has been found. The narrower, higher, week end model is divided into a long, lower tray, a hat box and several small drawers one above the other. Trunks shaped like square hat boxes show more varieties than any other style. Some open almost in the middle, the upper half containing a deep tray and a small drawer or two, the lower half being reserved for hats. One design has a tray as described and one end of the hat box is partitioned off for shoes.

FOR A RAINY DAY

FASHIONS and customs have changed overwhelmingly in the past ten years, but in no other respect more than in the rainy day garb. Every one remembers with many a hearty laugh the way people used to look out of the window and say in a resigned way: "Well, it's raining." That meant very positively that good looking clothes were not in decent taste in such weather and one must wear a mackintosh—was there ever a more hideous garment made?—leather rubbers, dark clothes, shabby shoes and one's oldest hat. And who ever did enjoy anything in her oldest hat! Nowadays the girl who looks on the cheerful side of things and rather enjoys the rainy day for a change has a bright red or purple hat that, of course, has no feathers, but is plain and serviceable, but which she knows is most becoming. She wears her tailored suit, but it has a short skirt and is protected by a good looking raincoat. Her shoes are high and thick, but they are just as good looking as those she keeps for sunny days, and often, to add another bit of color, she carries a red or purple silk umbrella. It keeps the rain off just as well as a black one and it just makes you feel better. It is wonderful what a becoming hat and gay umbrella can do toward chasing away the blues on a stormy day.

A NEW AND USEFUL KITCHEN ACCESSORY

SCORE CARDS

IF you want to make inexpensive and handsome score cards, buy some floral wall paper. Roses and carnations are both very effective. One way is to paste the floral paper smoothly on water color paper, which costs 6 cents a sheet. When the paste is thoroughly dry, cut into odd shapes so that a flower is on each card. Attach a pencil, and letter with a small brush. No one would ever suspect that they are not hand-painted.

EXERCISES BEGET MORALS

BY MRS. MCCUNE.

A REALIZATION of this fact is at the bottom of much of the agitation for parks and recreation grounds in the larger cities that is so conspicuous an element of modern municipal improvement. Indoor life is productive of all the ills induced by ozoneless and vitiated air—the most extreme manifestation being tuberculosis, that scourge of the sunless tenement—and the white-faced multitudes to be met with everywhere should be encouraged for the sake of their morals as well as their physical health to seek the green field and the seashore, and go in for athletics of some kind.

No movement of modern times interests the far-sighted more than the village associations, just beginning to be operative, which have for their object the establishment of communities (with schools, churches, manufactories, and opportunities for agriculture on extensive tracts of land) for the purpose of giving the poor classes a chance on the one hand to get away from the unhealthy and immoral conditions of life in a crowded city, and on the other to escape the barrenness and isolation of the usual type of country life. Such garden associations, as they are called, deserve the hearty support of all who are concerned with the spiritual and material well being of their fellows.

The wealthier class in the community have for some time shunned the city for fully six months of the year, and the middle classes remain out of town later and later in the autumn. But these classes constitute only a very small minority compared to the aggregate populations of cities and towns, and it is to these millions of little leisure that must be preached the gospel of fresh air and outdoor exercise as a way of physical and moral regeneration.

In this propaganda the parson and the school teacher should help; in fact, they are the main medium through which such teaching can be presented for more than any other classes they can thin out the overpopulation of cities, through the presentation of purer and simpler ideas than those of the complex "packed" life the majority lead. The school teachers have their opportunity in the nature study department, and the preachers theirs in tactful endorsement of the garden associations and similar enlightened movements. If they would but encourage Sunday outdoor recreations, such as country walks, or picnics after morning service, instead of frowning upon efforts at out of door pleasure, they would surely accomplish much in weaning population pent up in shops, offices and factories for six days in the week, from the questionable attractions and less moral amusements of life in the poorer sections of cities.

BE OPEN MINDED

BY EDNA EGAN.

WHETHER you have gone to school or not, whether you have had the advantages of book learning or not, there is one test that will mark you as an educated person. Are you open minded? Are you free from trailing prejudices around you? According to John Van Dyke, the art critic, "raising ourselves above prejudices is not easy of accomplishment. It is what is broadly called education—a difficult attainment to many—an absolute impossibility to some."

If you have never taken stock of your prejudices, it may be that you do not know how many are clinging to you. You may have one against the person with a foreign accent. Or against a certain author's whole collection of works, merely because you disapproved of a certain remark found in one of them. It may be against the profession of the actress. Certainly, any one of these marks you as provincial. It places you in a narrow set. With these feelings you can never hope to rank in the class of the one or two great men and women in the world. It is significant that the word "welt-kind" has been applied to this type. In English—a child of the universe.

Ridiculous as it sounds, the following story is true. A friend of mine was motoring through a small southern town. "Can you tell me where the B's live?" she asked of a kindly looking woman sitting on a porch.

"The minister?" the latter asked, with interest.

"No," said my friend. "These are business people."
"Oh!" came her frigid response. "They must be so and so," mentioning a different denomination of religion than hers. "I do not know them." And she refused to give any more information.

Now, that was a small town. She could not help knowing where any one in her social class lived. But because she had a prejudice against this family's religious denomination she refused to acknowledge their existence. No matter how much book learning she had, no matter what her superficial culture, it would be difficult to call her an educated woman in the broadest sense of the word. Yet, doubtless, she considered herself such. Every prejudice is a veil between you, and the reality of life.

IN housecleaning times it is often difficult to handle mattresses; and get them out into the open air for a thorough beating. One housekeeper has overcome this clumsiness by sewing strips of canvas belting, about six inches long, to each side of the mattress to serve as handles. With these two women can carry the heaviest mattress with comparative ease.

Good Looking Fashions in Millinery and Coiffure

MOURNING HAT

THE fashions that appear at the end of the summer, usually point more or less indirectly to the modes that will prevail during the early Autumn. In the illustrations shown on this page are several excellent models. The small close fitting hat with its simple decoration displayed in the center of the page, the smart Colonial hat of black velvet with ornament of white ostrich tips, and the modest mourning chapeau adorned with berries and foliage in dull black, are all refined and becoming. The method of wearing the hair as depicted in the upper right hand corner of the page, is very youthful and graceful, and will be popular with the girl with a well shaped forehead. The other coiffure shows the braid wrapped about the head in coronet style, a fashion which will continue in its popularity.
