TWO HOT FIRES FOR HOKE SMITH OVER PATRONAGE

Relations Between Senator Smith and Georgia Members of House Are Becoming Exceedingly Strained.

HALF OF PATRONAGE CLAIMED BY SENATOR

But Hoke Smith Opponents Say He Wants More Than Half—Statement Made by the Senator.

By John Corrigan, Jr.—(Special)—Washington D C July 12—(Special)—Senator Hoke Smith gave his side of the Gainesville postoffice controversy today and indicated briefly his attitude and future course in regard to the distribution of federal patronage about which there is considerable interesting speculation.

The situation over patronage is more acute than at any time during the past five months. Numbers of nominations are being held up in the postoffice department and the department of justice awaiting a sign from Senator Smith and the relations between him and Senator Bacon and between Senator Smith and members of the house are becoming exceedingly strained.

Senator Smith and Representative Bell seem divided beyond hope of reconciliation and other representatives are becoming restive over their appointments being kept back.

Hoke Smith Between Hot Fires There is no doubt that Senator Smith is between two hot fires. Beseiged on the one hand by eager and clamorous supporters at home demanding offices and reminding him of past support, he faces on the other hand determined congressmen who want to control the patronage of their respective districts to which they believe themselves entitled.

Disappointed office-seekers and their supporters are claiming he wants more than one-half and that even in regard to those offices where his hand is not shown it is still potent.

Formal Statement by Smith Senator Smith in his formal statement says 'As I understand the publication by Congressman Bell he complains because I did not aid him to secure the position of postmaster at Gainesville for a gentleman who had literally opposed me in every political contest I have ever had.'

LEGISLATORS SEE AT ATHENS WHAT UNIVERSITY NEEDS

Many Members Surprised at What the Institutions Are Doing on the Funds Furnished

BARBECUE TO BE MADE ANNUAL EVENT IN CITY

Chancellor Barrow Says All That Is Expected From the State This Year Is Good Will

By T. B. Conner, Staff Correspondent
Athens, Ga., July 12.—(Special)—
Whether the legislature may find itself able to do for the state university this year is the certain that the city of Athens left nothing undone that it could do for the legislature to day.

With 225 members of the general assembly and their friends on board the special train of the Athens chamber of commerce which left Atlanta at shortly after 8 o'clock this morning rolled into Athens promptly on time at 11 o'clock eastern time and was greeted by several hundred Athens citizens who devoted the entire day to showing the visitors a good time.

Street cars, automobiles and any other modes of conveyance available were placed at their service. The rain, which was pouring down when this train left the capital, had ceased when Athens was reached, and the day was an ideal one for enjoyment. With a brass band to furnish music and the Barnes McClatchey quartet to furnish topical songs there was nothing lacking to keep the crowd in the liveliest of humor.

From the station the members of the legislature headed by President Randolph Anderson of the state senate were taken in cars to the State Normal school about a mile out on Prince avenue.

They were assembled in the auditorium and addressed for a few minutes by President Jerome M. Pound. After that Mr. Pound took them over the buildings and gave them ocular demonstration that all he had been telling them as to the needs of the institution was true. The impression made upon the solons was a fine one and it may be said that the normal school which was in recent years been badly neglected will receive first consideration when the legislature begins to hand appropriations at this year. They recognized the fact that here the common school teachers of the state were made and that improvement of the common schools must begin here.

The Barbecue
After the inspection of the normal school the visiting party was taken to the warehouse of the Southern Cotton mills where a splendid barbecue was ready to be served. Thanks to the efficiency of D. P. Hazleton who has established a reputation in this part of the state as a "one man C. C. Callaway" secretary of the Athens chamber of commerce and their able assistants on the chamber directorate there was no waiting. Everything was pulled off by the clock and there was nothing lacking in the way of eatables and potables to supply the wants of the inner man.

There was no need of a demonstration that Georgia legislators have good appetites but if there had been it would have been supplied. Suffice to say that the guests did full justice to all that they found and went away well satisfied. For the miller members there was buttermilk in great abundance from the college of agriculture.

Heat Very Trying to Women's Nerves

They Neglect Their Bowels and the Poisons Vitiate the Blood

Hot weather has a very weakening effect on women. They are too languid to exert and as a result have little appetite for foods that seem light and tasty such as salads and other cold concoctions. But these frequent produce indigestion and with it comes constipation.

It is especially in hot weather that women should keep up the highest standard of health for it is necessary to have strength to resist the heat. The first essentials are good digestion and regular bowel movement and then good red blood and steady nerves will follow. The best way to obtain these is not by an over-indulgence in fruits which often are not ripe or over ripe and hence are dangerous but in the use of a gentle and pleasant laxative.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a laxative for women and children. You will find it in the strongest purgatives and salts after trying Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Females wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell 415 Washington St. Monticello Ill.

A Blue Serge Suit is to a man's summer outfit as bread is to his daily bill of fare. It "hits the spot" at any time of day, and serves as nothing else in summer evenings.

Your blue serge coat with a pair of white flannel trousers is about the most effective manner in which you might dress for summer afternoons or informal evenings.

Quality Counts, of course. It counts much in your favor in the good serges we commend to you. Don't get a fanciful viewpoint that you could buy here the serge that stretches and wobbles and wants to be pressed every twenty minutes to be acceptable in good society.

On the contrary, MUSE serges are of superfine quality, and they're styled and tailored in a strictly custom manner.

GUARDS SURROUND LOBBYIST MULHALL AS HE TELLS STORY

MULHALL DISAPPEARS AFTER LEAVING STAND

Senate Resolved Not to Let House Probers Have Witness at Present—Sensational Story by Mulhall.

Washington July 12.—When the senate and house lobby investigators adjourned today for Sunday's rest, the fight for possession of Martin M. Mulhall, J. H. McMichael and other witnesses still was in progress, with the odds strongly favoring Chairman Overman and his senate committee.

The Overman committee adopted a technical measure of safety to allow Mulhall to get out of town for Sunday by remaining in session until after he had boarded a 2 o'clock train for New York. Chairman Overman was prepared to resume the investigation this afternoon, had the house committee made any attempt to stop Mulhall or subpoena him for immediate testimony before the Garrett committee.

Overtures of peace from both sides passed back and forth by special messengers during the day and on the last exchange of courtesies late this afternoon it seemed certain the house investigators would be given an opportunity to start work next week with McMichael or some other witness, provided they made a respectful request on the senate committee for his production.

Tried to Take Mulhall Away.

The fight which came to a head late last night when an officer of the house tried to take Mulhall away from

Forrest Adair Is Honored By Friends With Loving Cup

Beautiful loving cup presented to Forrest Adair by his friends at the swimming pool Saturday afternoon.

Never was the symbolism of the loving cup more appropriate to the occasion than when yesterday a group of the friends of Forrest Adair interrupted his afternoon plunge in his swimming pool to present him with a beautiful silver loving cup.

Had the word been given out that such a gift were contemplated there would have been many more times the twenty-one who were the donors of the cup, for Mr. and Mrs. Adair's hospitality since his swimming pool was christened several weeks ago has been of the kind that extended beyond the mere pleasure of entertainment into a real joy.

The spirit of the gifters was that they wanted to do something to let their host know how heartily they appreciated his hospitality. Words could not express what they felt, and no gift could be big enough to measure up to their feelings so they selected a gift that would symbolize what they meant.

And with it went also the sentiment Walter Whitman, the rugged poet and lover of men, expressed when he said "The gift is to the giver and comes back most to him."

At the end of an evening's hearing was resumed as soon as preliminaries could be dispensed with this morning. Mulhall already had started the recital of his alleged activities as lobbyist for the National Association of Manufacturers, and was prepared to take up the identification of his letters where he left off last night.

With Mulhall, McMichael and the other witnesses in the room, and witnesses and papers guarded by a cord of sergeants-at-arms and senate employees, Chairman Overman and his committee retired and indicted an epistle to Chairman Garrett of the house committee.

This called attention to the attempt of the house to capture Mulhall the night before and asserted the determination of the senate to hold the witnesses and the papers until it got through with them. Chairman Overman said no disrespect was meant to the house and that there was no desire to hamper the other body's investigation.

The epistle was dispatched by special messenger and the committee waded into the mass of Mulhall correspondence with officers and attorneys of the National Association of Manufacturers watching proceedings. They had not gotten out of the 1904 file when Chairman Garrett's special messenger arrived with an answer to the Overman letter.

Night Take Hold of McMichael.

Mr. Garrett said the house committee thought it might take hold of Mr. McMichael who Mulhall alleged, had received pay from the National Association of Manufacturers while acting as chief page of the house of representatives. Mr. Garrett wanted to know whether it was true the senate committee had told McMichael he could not testify before the house committee until the senate investigators finished with him. Mr. Garrett protested no disrespect was meant to the senate committee, but that the house committee wanted to investigate its own affairs.

Again there was a council of war behind closed doors in the senate, and a new letter was drafted. In it, Chairman Overman intimated that the senate committee intended to keep all its witnesses under its direct surveillance where they could be had when wanted but that if the house should present a proper request for some witnesses who did not happen to be then engaged on the senate side, the committee would give courteous consideration to applications.

In the meantime Mr. Mulhall, who had progressed only as far as the latter part of 1908 in his documentary recital of his lobbying work for the National Association of Manufacturers, had disappeared from the senate committee. He was released from the senate committee at 10 o'clock Monday.

Mulhall Goes to New York.

With the consent of the committee Mulhall had departed for New York, to spend Sunday, but the senate committee remained technically in session so he could be called back to the stand if stop him, or subpoena him for testimony this afternoon.

Chairman Overman's last letter was gone over by the Garrett committee in a secret session late in the afternoon but no answer was made. The committee will reconvene at 10:30 a. m. Monday. From the language of the final letter from the senate chairman the house committee expects to be able to get hold of witness McMichael Monday.

James A. Emery, counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers, and referred to by Mulhall in a published statement as the chief lobbyist of the association at Washington, had also been subpoenaed "duces tecum" by the house committee. He arrived in the afternoon to tell them that he had previously been summoned by the senate committee, who also commanded him to produce the papers, and he said the senate committee had possession of all his papers, as well as those of Mulhall and the other witnesses.

In Pay of Manufacturers.

If McMichael is put on the stand by the Garrett committee Monday, the body will plunge at once into the Mulhall charges that spying work was done in the house for the manufacturers' association. Mulhall alleged that McMichael received $50 weekly and extra amounts to secure information when chief of the house pages and that he used the staff of pages to aid him. In one of the replies to Chairman Garrett today, Chairman Overman of the senate committee, said that body of investigators did not expect "to enter into any special investigation of the charges against house membership or employees." It is expected that two investigations, therefore, will be in full running order Monday or Tuesday.

The senate committee today secured the identification of nearly 200 additional letters and documents furnished by Mulhall bearing on his activities as a representative of the National Association of Manufacturers in 1904 and 1905 and in political fights in Maryland and New Jersey and in union labor fights in Philadelphia. His activity as a strike suppressor in Philadelphia in 1906 gave the committee the occasion for most of its questioning. He admitted he had employed officers or members of labor unions to secure inside information of their doings had spent money freely to break up the printers' strike in Philadelphia, and had in various ways tried to control labor union affairs.

Many letters told in detail of the fight made against former Senator McComas, of Maryland, because of his advocacy of eight-hour legislation; and against William Hughes, then representative, now senator from New Jersey, because of his activity in support of labor measures. In all his work, Mulhall said, he represented the National Association of Manufacturers.

James A. Emery, counsel for the association, made a formal request upon the committee to have it give Robert McCarter, of New Jersey, the right to appear as counsel for the manufacturer's body.

Factor H. Ralston, of Washington, also requested permission to appear as counsel for the American Federation of Labor. The senate committee did not decide today as to whether the attorneys would be permitted to take part.

Subpoenas for Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Springs of Baltimore, parents of Mrs. Martin M. Mulhall, were issued by the house committee.

While the senate committee retired for its executive conference three employees from the manufacturer's office shared secret clerks and a page kept guard over the original and duplicate papers on the committee table and watched the witnesses to prevent the serving of any house subpoenas upon them.

Sensory Reed called a 10-year-old page boy.

"Here, boy, keep watch of those papers, and if anybody tries to get them, shoot him."

Mulhall Identifies Letters.

Chairman Overman said the committee would not decide whether McCarter should have the general privilege of an attorney for the association.

Mulhall identified more letters showing his relations with Marshall Cushing and entirely surprised revealed the names of the association of manufacturers. He testified he had an understanding with Cushing that he was to receive $100 a week and $10 a week for expenses for "general field work" in the summer of 1904 and he understood it to be permanent, although he had nothing in writing to bind the association.

Mulhall testified further that he worked for the late Senator McComas, of Maryland, although he posed as the senator's friend. He said he had received 500 letters from Cushing directed against McComas.

"I turned them over to Carl M. Downs, secretary to McComas," he added.

"Do you mean you delivered these letters against McComas to his secretary?" demanded Senator Reed.

"Carl M. Downs was in the pay of Cushing," replied the witness, who went on to explain that he carried on this work because he "was buying out the secretary of a senator."

A letter to Senator Foraker, September 19, 1904, referred to a suggestion that Mulhall go to Rhode Island to help Senator Aldrich in his campaign. He testified he went later at the request of Aldrich. "He asked me to get into touch with labor men there to get their support."

Double Game Is Denied.

Letters from C. E. Alden, then secretary to Foraker, and Arthur B. Shelton, secretary to Aldrich, showed that Mulhall's suggestion to go to Rhode Island had been the subject of some correspondence. Alden and Shelton knew he was employed by the association, and he had not tried to conceal the source of his employment.

Mulhall identified a letter from James J. Ridge, outlining work done in Ridge among the labor unions in 1901 in behalf of Aldrich's candidacy. Mulhall testified giving Ridge $50 which he got from Cushing, secretary for the manufacturers, to help Aldrich in his campaign for re-election.

In a letter relating to Ridge it was said "the senator is well pleased with the work of your friend."

Attorney McCarter tried to have the committee keep out testimony by Mulhall relating to conversations between Cushing and others which he had not actually heard. The committee refused.

Reference to Taft.

A reference to President Taft came in connection with the opening of the book of one of the Mulhall envelopes. The following names appeared: C. D. Firstone, Columbus Buggy company, Colopol W. H. Morgan, Alliance, Ohio, John A. Taylor East Liverpool, D. J. Sinclair, Steubenville, Ill. M. Hanna, Cleveland.

Names of names were submitted to me by Senator Foraker, of Ohio, to hand to President Taft at an interview I was to have with him at his summer residence in Ohio," Mulhall testified. The committee did not develop that point further.

Taft's reply against the campaign against Hughes, Mulhall swore he went to Paterson to aid Hughes' opponent. He hired six union men to work against Hughes and paid them altogether about $1,800, which came from the National Association of Manufacturers through Mulhall.

"The union men in the pay of the National Association of Manufacturers," Mulhall said, "took possession of 75,000 circulars sent into the district by the American Federation of Labor to aid Hughes, and turned them over to the republican campaign committee."

He named the following as the men he hired to work against Hughes: Michael Collins, of Philadelphia; Jacob Castillar, of New York; William Egan, of the Electrical Workers' union in New York; and George Burke, of Paterson.

Mulhall thought that George Burke, who voted in Hughes' district, a deputy collector of internal revenue, was on his payroll in the campaign against Hughes.

Paid a Weekly Salary.

"You bribed these men to vote against Hughes," asked Senator Cummins.

"I don't know whether you can call it bribery or not—they were paid a weekly salary. That money was spent in legitimate work—that was what they called it. It has been done by both parties for years. Ryan was on my list for about fifteen weeks altogether first at $40 and then $50 a week," said Mulhall. He added that Ryan was "on the list" to do general political work in labor ranks, engaged in "chasing" to beat Hughes.

Sensory Reed asked if the National Association of Manufacturers went "generally into politics" and supported the republican organization, or whether it singled out individual men throughout the country whom it supported. Mulhall said it "generally supported the republican ticket, and particularly opposed democrats who were too actively opposed to its labor policies."

Efforts to control Senator McComas on labor legislation were further shown by another letter. Dated July 1904, apparently to Mulhall, and which he said was written by Cushing. It urged Mulhall to deal with McComas on the supposition that the latter wanted a federal judgeship.

"I don't know whether you need to understand," the letter added, "that the industrial needs of the country are more thoroughly organized than ever before, and that they will have none of him or of his eight-hour bill. All the same, they are not vindictive, and they honestly mean to let up, you of course, can promise to do anything

NEAR MIRACLE NEEDED TO AVERT RAIL STRIKE

Garretson Thinks That the 100,000 Trainmen in the East Will Go Out.

New York, July 12.—Representatives of the 100,000 trainmen and conductors who threaten the eastern railroads with a strike for a wage increase deferred formal ratification of the recent strike vote at a conference concluded late today.

H. Garretson, head of the Trainmen's Brotherhood, said tonight the leaders were under a duty to approve the vote at a meeting to be held tomorrow in view of the conference called for Monday in Washington to be attended by President Wilson and other government officials, at which efforts are to be made to avert an industrial conflict.

It was announced that W. S. Stone and W. I. Wilson, heads of the engineers and firemen's brotherhoods, respectively, both of which obtained increases through arbitration, will attend the white house conference. Mr. Garretson said they have been authorized to represent their brotherhoods.

Former Mayor John P. Mitchell of the National Civic Federation, Ralph M. Lasky, chairman of that body's executive committee, and Marjorie M. Winks, chairman of the mediation committee, attended the meeting today. They urged the trainmen to delay decision until after the Washington conference and invited them to be represented at it.

Members of Conference Committee. Washington, July 12.—Secretary of Labor William Wilson tonight made out the names of the representatives of the railroads and of railroad employees who will confer with President Wilson. The secretary of labor and others in a congress in an effort to avert a union ground out which will cover not only the railroads but the unions of railway workers and other transportation employees.

Representatives of the employees will be W. I. Wilson, secretary of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and possibly A. B. Robertson of the Order of Railway Conductors and W. G. Talmadge, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Several new and old members of the senate interstate commerce commission representative Clayton chairman of the house judiciary committee, Henry C. Deming, republican leader of the house, President S. B. Low and Chairman Ralph M. Lasky, of executive council of the National Civic Federation also have signified their acceptance of the president's invitation.

ATLANTA'S ENGINEERS ENJOY BIG BARBECUE

Association for Advancing Prosperity of City Organized Saturday Afternoon.

Seventy-five of Atlanta's prominent members of the various engineering bodies gathered at a big barbecue at the pumping station Saturday afternoon for the purpose of organizing an association in which all of the technical engineers of the city will be included for the purpose of advancing Atlanta's prosperity, representative members of the following societies being present.

American Society of Civil Engineers, American Institute of Architects, American Society of Mechanical Engineers, American Chemical Society, American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the Engineering Association of the South, all having local chapters besides those individual representatives of the American Society of Mining Engineers and of the National Electric Lighting Association, American Society of Municipal Engineering, American Waterworks association, American Public Health association were in attendance.

After an old-fashion Georgia barbecue, with all the trimmings, the meeting was called to order by Allen H. Schaub, president of the local section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, who briefly outlined the object of the meeting and the means employed to bring it about.

He called upon James Nisbet Hazlehurst, chairman executive committee of the American Society of Civil Engineers, who spoke on the movement and its advantages and made an appeal for the support of the technical men in public affairs.

Mr. Hazlehurst was followed by L. J. Hill, Jr., president of the Atlanta section of the Engineering Association of the South, who chose as his topic the advantages of affiliation by the different technical organizations.

The American Institute of Architects being asked for an expression were represented by Hal Henz, who spoke strongly upon the needs of professional advice where technical matters were involved referring especially to this need in the matter of city parks and buildings.

J. S. Bregden, of the Georgia section of the American Chemical Society, explained the need of the chemical engineer in the many commercial developments of the section.

He was followed by Park A. Dallas of the Mechanical Engineers and his theme was the need of organization and the benefits of fraternal association.

Upon motion of Professor T. P. Brantly, duly seconded, the following members of the several separate organizations were continued as executive committee: James Nisbet Hazlehurst, L. J. Hill, Jr., Hal Henz, W. T. Heath, Park A. Dallas and A. M. Whelan, with instructions to formulate a plan for permanent organization by laws governing same.

Personnel of Committee Assures Success For Permanent Manufacturers' Exhibit

When the chewing stick whittling fraternity on the porch of the country store say that "er furrer sint no straighter in ther long run than ther man at ther plow handles" they are simply voicing an old adage which springs from the effects of the Great South Sea bubble—maybe—an enterprise is no larger than the men behind it.

J. K. ORR.

W. H. WHITE, JR.

V. H. KRIESHABER.

J. T. ROSE.

M. M. DAVIES.

BROOKS MORGAN.

Today they are planning a campaign which will make Atlanta rank as the best known manufacturing center of the United States. They are for Atlanta first and last, and all the time the public good in connection with the commercial progress of a city.

Have you seen these names in Atlanta papers before? Brooks Morgan, Bolling H. Jones, J. K. Orr, V. H. Krieshaber, M. M. Davies, J. T. Rose and W. H. White, Jr. Of course you have. And these men compose this manufacturers' committee Brooks Morgan a man of keen foresight, is chairman.

It is extremely rare, indeed, that a general is put in command of an army who has never been on the firing line who knows nothing of military tactics.

These men are experienced Most of them were on the committee which made last year's exhibit of Atlanta-made goods a rip-roaring, howling success.

Brooks Morgan, for instance, Third vice president of the chamber of commerce, manager of the P. E. Block Manufacturing company, President of the National Association of Cracker Manufacturers, and formerly a big railroad official. And now a big man of affairs in a big city. He is the man at the helm, and if the permanent exhibit is a success, which it will be, he will receive credit due for work well done.

Then there is Jones—Bolling H. If you please, and our postmaster appointed. Mr. Jones makes stoves now at the Atlanta Stove works, and turns out some of the finest hollow ware in the country at his factory at Birmingham, Ala. He is a man with the happy faculty of quick judgment, and his presence on the new committee will prove most helpful. Only last year he was on the committee which made such a success of the manufacturers' exhibit.

J. K. Orr. This is the same J. K. Orr who did the state of Georgia a most excellent service by raising the endowment fund of Agnes Scott college. And with the aid of Marion Jackson he saw that the money was piled up for Atlanta's new Y. M. C. A. He was chairman of the committee which handled the recent Presbyterian assemblies—the greatest gathering of that body in the world. He is president of the Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers' association, and about the quickest man at repartee on the committee.

V. H. Krieshaber is a big man in more than two ways. By profession he is a civil engineer. By occupation he is a convoyer of ideas for Atlanta's good. As second vice president of the chamber he has more than once lent that body most estimable service. He is a man of practical affairs. As a director of the Atlanta Terra Cotta works he has brought much capital to Atlanta. Though a native of Germany, he is a citizen of Atlanta. He is versatile and possesses a keen judgment which is one of his marked attributes.

There is an old, old saying that every committee must have a printer in its midst. And here is where M. M. Davies, of the firm of Foote & Davies enters. Mr. Davies was a member of the committee which made last year's exhibit famous, and will see to it that the permanent affair will be a matter of pride to Atlantians.

Public Spirited Man. The name of J. T. Rose, superintendent of the Atlanta Steel works, was quite prominently mentioned in connection with that now noted last year's exhibit. And naturally, Mr. Rose was placed on this new one. Mr. Rose is one of the big public spirited men of Atlanta, a man who has helped to make famous "the Atlanta spirit."

W. H. White, Jr. is a man who right now is a man-maker. As the main spirit behind the White Provision company, he has attained an enviable success. Starting his plant in direct competition with the big western houses, many predicted failure—and that soon. Mr. White just shook his head, smiled, and succeeded. He is the chairman of the chamber committee on cattle.

And incidentally, just to show you what kind of man he is, he has taken Ollie Taylor in charge, and is giving him the chance of his life to grow into a man.

These are the men who will make a success of the permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods.

LONGING FOR FRIENDS, GIRL OF 12 RUNS AWAY

Bewildered by Crowds in Terminal Station, She Is Willing Now to Go Home.

Separated from her friends and playmates, Ida Lou Rolly, who had been sent by her stepfather to live with her aunt in Gainesville, plied for her companions in Atlanta.

Her aunt, Mrs. J. R. Harwell, refused to let her make the trip by herself. Her stepfather, too, was afraid to let her venture alone into the city. She decided to come, anyhow, and saved $5 for railroad fare and incidental expenses.

Like Saturday afternoon she stole away from home, bought a ticket to Atlanta and climbed aboard the 7-45 o'clock train. Within two hours she arrived at the Terminal station, very undecided as to what to do and very fearful that she could not find her way along the city streets.

She is only 12 years old, and when her aunt missed her she immediately notified relatives in Atlanta. Police headquarters were requested to make a search, and Plain Clothes Policemen Hughes and Portson were sent to the Terminal station.

In the meantime Ida Lou had found herself swallowed up by the human whirlpool in the Terminal waiting rooms. She was dazzled by the brilliant lights, and the noise and roar dumfounded her. She grew more fearful as each moment passed.

There were so many things going so many ways and so many things and people going in so many different directions that she didn't know where to go. She suddenly grew homesick, and walked up to Stationmaster Pope for instructions about the next train that went toward Gainesville.

The next train would leave at 8-45 o'clock. It was then 8-30. She curled her tired body upon a bench and fell fast asleep. The hat she held in her hand dropped to the floor, and she was slumbering when Hughes and Fortson walked in.

They carried her on a street car to police headquarters. Her stepfather is Ellison Freeman, who lives at 15 Capitol place, but she didn't want him to know she was in town. Her intentions were to return home just as soon as she had visited her playmates, she said, and it wouldn't be necessary for her parents to know anything of her trip.

She had $3 and some odd cents in her hand, and willingly agreed to stay with Matron Bohnefeldt until 10 o'clock this morning, when she will be sent back to Gainesville.

MISS MORDECAI KILLED BY BURSTING OF TIRE

South Carolina People in Auto Accident Near the Home of George Foster Peabody.

Troy, N. Y., July 12.—The bursting of a tire on the wheel of a touring car carrying a party of South Carolina people, near the residence of George Foster Peabody, on the Bolton road, Lake George, this afternoon, resulted in the death one young woman and the more or less serious injury of all the others in the party. The victim was Miss Gertrude Mordecai, of Charleston, S. C., the daughter of Judge T. M. Mordecai, of that city. The most seriously injured is Miss Hanna Folk, also of Charleston. Her arm was broken and she received bad bruises about the head and body.

The bursting of the tire caused the car to crash into a tree and the occupants were thrown in all directions. Miss Mordecai was pinned beneath the wreckage. She was alive when removed and was placed in Mr. Peabody's car, but died on the way to a hospital.

TWO CORDELE WOMEN INJURED IN RUNAWAY

Cordele, Ga., July 12.—(Special)—As a result of serious injuries sustained while driving a buggy, which was overturning the buggy of which she was an occupant, as it dashed wildly down one of the residence streets, Mrs. John Whitsett remained in an unconscious state for more than two hours this morning.

Miss Estelle Holt, who was also in the buggy, sustained painful though not serious injuries. The ladies were thrown violently to the ground, Mrs. Whitsett falling on her head and shoulders. She suffered a severe nervous shock and two ribs were broken where the buggy pinned her beneath it. She will probably recover.

Madras Negro Killed.

Madras, Ga., July 12.—(Special)—The dead body of John Allen, colored, was found yesterday afternoon by the side of a road. Although it looked at first as though the negro had been killed by a fall from his mule, further investigation indicated foul play. LEE MUST REMAIN BEHIND THE BARS

Solicitor Dorsey Does Not Believe the Negro Guilty of Any Part in Crime.

That Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey does not believe that Newt Lee, negro night watchman at the National Penitentiary, who was bound over by the grand jury with Superintendent Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan, is guilty, was the only matter of importance brought out yesterday at the hearing of the habeas corpus before Judge W. D. Ellis by which Lee's attorneys, Graham & Chappell, sought to free him.

Judge Ellis denied the motion for habeas corpus and remanded Lee back to the custody of the sheriff to await the outcome of Frank's trial. Attorneys L. Z. Rosser and Reuben Arnold were also successful in their fight to prevent Frank being brought into court to testify.

Solicitor Dorsey declared that he had not brought a bill against Lee before the grand jury because he believed he had no evidence which would indict Lee.

The negro's attorneys secured from the sheriff a statement that Lee would be given more exercise, as the darkey declared that this was all that was troubling him. He said he was getting stiff from staying in his cell.

"Frank has the entire freedom of the jail whenever he wants it," declared Attorney Chappell, "and Lee ought to be allowed some chance to take exercise."

The character of the darkey and his love for the juicy fruit of a Georgia watermelon came out when Lee was being taken back to jail in charge of Deputy Plennie Miner.

"Why don't you get Mr. Miner to buy you a high beer, Newt?" said a bystander.

"Ah ain't want no beer; all Ah want is er watermelon," replied the negro, and his large eyes rolled hopefully in his head.

"Ah ain't had er melon this summer, and it's the first time that July ever come 'round without me having er melon."

WAVES TOO STRONG FOR REBUILT NIAGARA

Erie, Pa., July 12.—The wind on Lake Erie kicked up such a sea this afternoon that Captain William L. Morrison, commanding the naval training ship Wolverine, decided he would not trust the rebuilt Niagara, Commodore Perry's flagship, in the waves tonight and the little fleet did not leave Erie harbor at sunset. Captain Morrison hopes to be able to tow the Niagara, conveyed by the naval training ship Essex, out of port tomorrow.

The announcement disappointed the great crowds assembled to see the Niagara off.

Work on the boat had been pushed day and night so that she might be ready for the voyage through the Great Lakes to visit several ports as the principal feature of other Perry victory centennial celebrations, and the task was almost completed. Nine o'clock is the hour set for her departure tomorrow and the little fleet is expected to reach Fairport, Ohio, the first stop, late in the afternoon. No attempt will be made to stretch the canvas on the old brig and she will be towed under bare poles. The towing vessel, the Wolverine, is the oldest iron vessel on the lakes.

Erie's week of celebration ended with the industrial pageant this afternoon. One of the largest crowds of the centennial participated.

HE SETTLED AFFAIRS, THEN KILLED HIMSELF

Chicago, July 12.—Kossuth H. Ball, former general manager of the Hammond Packing company, killed himself with a revolver shot here today after spending the morning in visits to banking houses where he methodically settled his affairs. He was 50 years old.

Mr. Ball had caused his chauffeur to drive him to the end of a boulevard to the prairie south of the city.

"Wait here, while I go for a stroll," he said.

He walked away a few hundred yards and was seen by several boys to stand a few moments as if in thought. Then he took out his revolver and fired a shot into the ground. Then he shot himself in the temple.

Mr. Ball was wealthy and his business affairs were in prosperous condition. His wife, however, was suing him for separate maintenance as a result of family troubles extending over several years.

BANKER HUTTIG DIES IN THE ADIRONDACKS

New York, July 12.—Charles Henry Huttig, president of the American Bankers' association and of the Third National bank of St. Louis, died today in his summer home in the Adirondacks, according to word received here tonight by Frederick E. Farnsworth, secretary of the American Bankers' association.

St. Louis, July 12.—A telegram was received tonight announcing the death of Charles H. Huttig.

Mr. Huttig had been ill more than a year and had not been at his desk since last January. His health had been declining since he underwent an operation for a complication of diseases in September, 1911. Last spring he went to his summer home on Lake Honnetada, N. Y., chiefly to rest.

Mr. Huttig is survived by his wife and two children.

JOHN E. McCLELLAND HEADS NEW LAW FIRM

Together With His Sons He Has Law Offices in the Atlanta National Bank Building.

In new offices, handsomely and conveniently equipped on the tenth floor of the Atlanta National Bank building, fronting both Whitehall and Alabama streets, Hon. John E. McClelland and his eldest son, John Spence McClelland, have joined hands in the practice of law, a profession to which the elder McClelland has given years of his life, and upon which the younger enters as a graduate from the University of Georgia.

Recently the J. E. & L. F. McClelland law firm, widely known in the south, especially in the practice of commercial law, dissolved. L. F. McClelland retaining the offices in the Temple Court building, where the firm had been located for years. The dissolution was brought about by the withdrawal of J. E. McClelland so he might associate with him his two sons, John Spence McClelland, a graduate of the state university, and a member of the Atlanta bar for more than three years, and J. R. McClelland, the second son, now a senior in the Atlanta Law school, to whom a diploma will come at the end of the next term. In the meantime, J. R.

JOHN S. McCLELLAND.

McClelland will be in charge of the collection and financial work of the new firm.

Few members of the Georgia bar have shown greater ability in the legal profession than John E. McClelland, senior member of the firm. Thirty years ago he began his business career as a cash boy with the J. M. High dry goods firm. His loyalty to his employer, his devotion to his business brought him rapid and frequent promotion until he was recognized in commercial life as the personal and confidential representative of J. M. High, one of the most successful merchants of the south in his days.

Some of the most important commercial litigation in the Atlanta courts within the past fifteen years have been worked out most successfully for their clients by the McClelland brothers, while John E. McClelland's name has been associated within the past few years with a number of criminal cases in which he has proven successful—his opposition to Stripling's pardon being one of the number.

John Spence McClelland went through a state university with an excellent record, and had been practicing law two years when he was taken so severely ill that his recovery was not expected for several months.

Of unusually striking appearance, physically, his pleasant manners make him easy a prominent member of any gathering in which he may be found. Full of life, now that he has fully recovered, and ambitious of success in his profession, John Spence McClelland is sure of advancement and preferment as he works his daily life in Atlanta, his home forever, as he says.

ENDEAVORERS PLAN TO CLOSE ALL SALOONS

Los Angeles, Cal., July 12.—Twenty different meetings were held today by the delegates to the twenty-sixth international Christian Endeavor convention, at the most important of which Rev. Daniel A. Polling, of Columbus, Ohio, national superintendent of the organization, and the Christian citizenship divisions of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, outlined a program for the next two years. It is expected that his plan will be adopted on Monday as the official policy of the organization.

The feature of Dr. Polling's plan was the work to be done in the campaign which has for its object a "saloonless United States by 1929." Ultimately he said, he hoped there would be a federal constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of liquor.

He declared Christian endeavor leaders were not satisfied with the prohibition bill introduced in congress by Senator Hobson, of Alabama, because of "loopholes" in it.

"The Hobson measure," he said, "seeks to prevent the manufacture of intoxicating liquors for use as a beverage, but does not go far enough. It should provide against the importation or exportation of liquor."

Junior and intermediate rallies were held today and tonight.

THREE GIRLS DROWNED IN SIGHT OF HUNDREDS

Norristown, Penn., July 12.—Three young women were drowned in the Schuylkill river within the sight of hundreds of persons this afternoon when their boat sprung a leak during a thunderstorm. The dead are Misses Mary Livergood and Emma Rex, of this city, and Miss Helen Green, of Philadelphia, daughter of the Rev. D. W. Green, pastor of the Chestnut Hill Methodist Episcopal church of Philadelphia.

The storm broke suddenly while the girls were some distance from shore. The boat sprung a leak and the girls, terrified stood up. Other boats started to their assistance but before they could reach them the leaking craft turned over. Three of the girls sank and did not come up. Margaret Green, a fourth in the party, clung to the upturned boat until rescued.

GIANT LOAF OF BREAD GIVEN TO THE STRIKERS

Paterson, N. J., July 12.—Strikers of the Paterson silk mills received today a single loaf of bread which will suffice to feed several hundred of the destitute. The loaf is 10 feet long and weighs 180 pounds. It was made by local No. 100 of the Bakers union, in New York, to carry in the parade of union members in celebration of the fifth anniversary of the founding of the union. A cake weighing 150 pounds also was sent to the strikers.

FOR WORLD-WIDE PEACE BRYAN OUTLINES PLAN

Twenty Nations Have Accepted the Scheme of Secretary in Principle.

Washington, July 12.—A proposal to maintain the status quo as to military and naval preparations among disputants during the period of investigation of international differences, constitutes the third and final proposal in Secretary Bryan's peace plan. In making that portion of the proposal public today, Secretary Bryan said that the obligation to maintain the status quo would not be obligatory in the event of danger to either of the two contracting parties from a third party.

The proposal which he submitted to the twenty nations, which have accepted his plan in principle as well as to the other nineteen nations not yet heard from is as follows:

"This government is prepared to consider a change in said program, in which case the party feeling itself menaced by a third power, shall confidentially communicate the matter in writing to the other contracting party and it shall thereupon be released from the obligation not to change its military or naval program and this release will at the same time operate as a release of the other contracting parties. This protects each party from the other in ordinary cases and yet provides freedom of action in emergencies."

The proposals previously announced provide for an international commission of five members, one from each of the contracting countries, to be chosen by the government, or to be chosen by each of the contracting countries from some other country, and the fifth to be agreed upon by the two contracting governments. One year is suggested as a proper time for the investigation of the subject under dispute.

"All of these suggestions," said Secretary Bryan discussing his plan today, "are presented for consideration, and not with the intention of imposing any fixed conditions. The principle of investigation being accepted, the details are matters for conference and consideration."

The twenty nations which have accepted the principle of the peace proposal in the order named, are:

Italy, Great Britain, France, Brazil, Sweden, Norway, Peru, Russia, Austria-Hungary, Netherlands, Japan, Germany, Bolivia, Argentine Republic, China, Dominican Republic, Haiti, Spain, Portugal and Belgium.

One man—with a handful of assistants—directs the Dodge distribution to every part of the world.

Consecutive thought and tireless energy have made possible a remarkable Service.

Dodge Service means that no matter where in the United States your factory may be located, Dodge can reach you with standard equipment in double quick time.

The most difficult—and consequently the most carefully arranged distributing stations are in the great South.

For years railroad facilities limited a successful service.

Today Dodge-Atlanta, through its Subsidiary Service agents, can supply you with "what you want when you want it."

A break-down—crippling your factory—call Dodge.

A replacement—call Dodge.

A new building that should be hurried into operation—call Dodge.

A liquid varnish that flows as freely as water. Apply it like a polish with a piece of cheese cloth. It fills the pores of the wood—becomes a part of it—checking deterioration and restoring the original beauty of the grain. It leaves a smooth, hard surface that will not chip or crack. And the luster lasts.

Economical to Use

Because Tacco is so thin it spreads quickly and smoothly. A bottle of it will go three times as far as the same size bottle of any other varnish made. Big Atlanta corporations have proved this statement by tests measuring the amount used by spoonfuls. This, with the fact that one coat of Tacco is usually enough, makes it the most economical varnish offered.

Dries in 2 to 5 Hours

Thus it is convenient to use. No time need be lost. Begin at the parlor, say. Varnish the woodwork, then the furniture, in a few minutes. Work back to the last room on that floor. By the time that is finished the parlor and its furniture will be quite dry and ready for use.

Water, Heat and Dust-Proof

Washing and scrubbing have no ill effect on Tacco. As explained above, this varnish, unlike others, becomes a part of the wood. It is not only on it, but in it, so you can't chip or scrub it off. Being tough, but not elastic, when dry, Tacco is heat-proof. And thus it is also dust-proof. So it's an easy matter to keep furniture clean and looking like new, with no more energy than when dusting.

FINE AUTO HIGHWAY OUT OF ATLANTA

Alpharetta Editor Comes to Atlanta With a Splendid "Good Roads" Idea, for Which He Is Working.

By Smith Clayton. Do you know George Rucker, of the Alpharetta Free Press, and the good old county of Milton? No?

Well, that argues yourself, unknown. There is not a more progressive citizen of north Georgia. For many months he has been striking sledgehammer blows in his paper, The Alpharetta Free Press, in advocacy that one of the greatest developments that ever engaged the power of the press.

He stands for progress, the advancement of Atlanta, the development of his section, all of which will redound to the upbuilding of north Georgia and the extension of Georgia and the greatness and glory of Georgia and the south.

I took a few turns with Editor Rucker in the records of the Kimball the other night, and in a few pungent sentences the unfolded one of the grandest and most feasible enterprises of the day.

I take pleasure in giving him credit for suggesting and working for a grand highway from Atlanta to Dahlonega.

"What about it?" I asked. "It is the thing to build," said he. The proposed route would be straight out Peachtree street to Roswell, on by Alpharetta, Cumming, Dawsonville to Dahlonega. It is the greatest need of that section which has the richest farming lands in all Georgia, those great juicy, loamy, fruitful bottom lands, where every product necessary for man and beast can be raised.

"It would be a modern road, of course." "Yes, a strictly up-to-date highway as smooth and beautiful as Peachtree street out to Buckhead and Brookhaven, not less than thirty feet wide and preferably built of cement, which would cost upwards of $5,000 a mile. I think, but a fine highway of clay and sand, it is stated, could be constructed for from $1,000 to $1,500 per mile."

"Why, the superb driveway from Atlanta to Roswell, which extends to the river bridge at that point. This is a highway of the highest and of your splendid Peachtree street and the grand highway proposed would be a continuation of the driveway from Atlanta to Roswell bridge."

"A capital idea—and a big start." "Why, certainly. The idea would be to raise the money for this great development in Atlanta and from the land owners along the proposed route and to put up the great road to the counties of Cobb, Gwinnett, Forsyth, Dawson and Lumpkin, the route taken. You can see how immensely such a grand permanent, public improvement would benefit the section through which it is built, not only add most materially to the wealth and population of that section, but enhance greatly the value of all property along the route. I am satisfied that the people of the towns and counties which it would please would contribute liberally to the construction of this highway and Atlanta, which is another name for progress and advancement, would surely do her part.

"In my opinion," said Mr. Rucker, measuring his words, "such a highway would be worth half a million dollars to the section traversed and a million dollars to Atlanta. Because it would move the towns and counties of that section closer to Atlanta and the worlds of produce from that section, which now go to Calhounville, Buford and other points on the Southern railroad, would be diverted by tracks running on this highway to Atlanta. The transportation would be far quicker, far more convenient and less expensive. For instance, near Dahlonega, you could put 5,000 pounds of produce on a truck, run it down to the Atlanta market in the morning and return home in the afternoon. This is just a simple illustration of course, such a highway with a rapid outlet for produce to a great market would lead to the general use of trucks such as are used by farmers in the middle west all along the route, and before long trucks with a capacity of five tons would be rolling into Atlanta from all along the line of this magnificent highway."

"How far is Dahlonega from Atlanta?" "About seventy miles. That distance could be made in a few hours. Besides all that has been said, government aid could be asked and probably gotten in the construction of the idea of a national highway. You see, double daily mails would go over this great road from Atlanta to Dahlonega delivered, also, at Roswell, Alpharetta, Cumming and Dawsonville. The delivery of the free rural mail would be greatly facilitated."

"Mr. Rucker went on to say that this highway would be, also, a grand driveway for automobiles, forming the greatest automobile and truck road in the south. This would interest the automobile people greatly and they would probably offer substantial aid. A highway combining the widest utility with the highest pleasure, it would prove a boon and a tremendous benefit to all farmers and all joy-riders."

"He said, also, that Alpharetta already had about thirty automobiles. He could get in his car and make the spin from Roswell bridge to Atlanta in thirty-five minutes."

"Well, if built I believe it would be doubled in a few years. Roswell now has about 1,000, Alpharetta 500, Cumming 500, Dawsonville 350 and Dahlonega about 1,000. This grand highway would practically put these towns within elbow reach of each other, practically bring them and their counties almost to the doors of Atlanta."

"Another big thing," he concluded, "Gainesville is the biggest egg and chicken market in the country and this important business is being taken from the section indicated. The grand highway would divert this enormous trade from Milton, Forsyth, Dawson and Lumpkin to Atlanta."

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 12.—Montgomery defeated Chattanooga twice today, the locals failing to score in either game. Covaleskie lost a no-hit game in the first contest, Montgomery's run scoring on a base on balls; the pitcher's wild throw to first and Walker's sacrifice fly. Two sensational catches by Walker each averted a run off Case in the first game, while the same player made two more in the second and against two equal by an sensational catch coming with two men on base. Both games were called at the end of the seventh inning by agreement.

Willie Ritchie as Champion Classiest Since Gans' Time; Leach Cross Next Opponent

By JAMES J. GORRETT. (Former Heavyweight Champion of the World. Written Exclusively for The Constitution.)

New York, July 12.—(Special.)—Willie Ritchie is the classiest lightweight champion who has been since the days when the late Joe Gans ruled supreme in the division.

There were a number of so-called experts who asserted that Willie was very lucky when he was referred awarded him the title on a foul in the battle with Ad Wolgast, and referred to him as an "accident" champion...

ready to fight again, and to his credit it must be said did not look for an easy mark. On the contrary he selected Joe Rivers, one of the toughest propositions in the lightweight division...

Probable Opponents. Ritchie is that very rare combination of scientific boxer and hard hitter, which is a combination hard to beat. There is no reason to believe that he will not hold the title for a long time...

His Welsh Bout. Ritchie's prowess at that occasion was little short of sensational for a comparative novice, and while he lost to Harry Lewis, a professional record of twenty rounds, his class was established then and there.

Of Interest to Autoists

Motoring Department, The Constitution: The spark plug in one of the cylinders of my car gets out of working order after the motor has been running an hour or so. Soot forms on it quickly, causing the motor to miss fire and skip. The valves have been ground and the compression in the defective cylinder seems to be as good as in any of the others. The other plugs may be used for a month with out cleaning. What do you think may cause this trouble?—Motorist

The cylinder in question is either getting too much oil or is not properly cleared of exhaust gasses. If the rings are not fitted properly the oil will work up through the ring openings and also through the spaces back of the rings. Inspect the exhaust valve and note whether it has the maximum lift. The clearance between the lap net rod and the valve stem should not be greater than one sixteenth inch. The greater this clearance in less lift the valve has which in turn prevents proper scavenging of the cylinder. There is no reason why one cylinder should carbonize more than another except that the piston and rings are not properly fitted. In modern oiling systems each cylinder should receive equal lubrication. Sometimes where grease is used in timing gears it will work through the main crankshaft bearing into the forward compartment of the case. When this happens the forward cylinder is usually most affected with carbonization. If the adjustment of the valves does not remedy your trouble, would suggest that you have properly fitted to this cylinder new piston rings.

Motoring Department, The Constitution: My car is fitted with overhead valves and operated with a single cam shaft and rocker arm. The coil ignition system is employed. While recently testing the engine I secured out two of the four bolts that held the connecting rod bearing of the second cylinder on the crankshaft. After replacing these I adjusted the other bearings and worked them in until the crankshaft turned over with ease. When I started the engine it missed on the second cylinder. I tested the ignition changed the spark plugs and put in a new high tension wire from the magneto to the cylinder. I then adjusted the timing of the engine. I put new copper gaskets around them and put in a new roller at the bottom of the pushrod where it works on the cam shaft. Also tested the compression, which was about the same as on the other cylinders. Still it did not run. I then put new gaskets in the intake manifold and readjusted the carburetor. The exhaust pipe got hot it the engine is run for ten minutes or longer and after it went over thirty miles per hour it seemed to work all right but under that it missed and knock. I want to see how long it will run before it runs perfectly all the time. It runs about twenty miles per hour but it does not seem to be completed our trip the exhaust pipe was red hot and the radiator was steaming and boiling. The next day it missed on the second cylinder again. I am very puzzled by this mysterious trouble and should like to know some remedy to overcome it.—M. Deenan

Your trouble undoubtedly lies in the rocker arm adjustments. The adjustments are not accurate the lead to the intake and exhaust valve is changed, thereby upsetting the functions of this cylinder. Usually there are marks on the flywheel which will help you to determine when the valves should open and when they should close. In overhead valve motors the adjustments to the valves cannot always be according to rule especially when the motor has been used considerably. Would suggest also that you inspect the valve guides for wear. If the guides are slanted by wear the gaskets will not hold. The overheating would not occur if the valve and spark are timed correctly. An over rich mixture will cause overheating. Would suggest that you reduce the mixture to as lean a state as possible. If the mixture is right and you know the valves and ignition are timed properly then you must look to the cooling system. It may be that the radiator needs to be cleaned, or that the hose connections, etc., need replacing.

Motoring Department, The Constitution: Please inform if while starting a car it is better to accelerate the motor before engaging the clutch or to accelerate after the clutch is let in? It seems that the latter method would be less wearing on the clutch facing.—S. D. Rheims

It is more advisable to accelerate the engine as the clutch is being engaged. The judgment must be used to accelerate the motor sufficiently in order to take care of the load when the clutch is engaged otherwise the motor will stall. If the motor is speeded up first and then the clutch engaged, the motor will be to start the car with a jerk.

Motoring Department, The Constitution: After the engine of my car has been running for a little while the carburetor runs dry but it only does this when I start up the engine the first time in the day. Otherwise, it never gives any trouble on the road, either driving or running idle. The auxiliary tank on the dash remains full and the hole in the cap is quite clear. I have opened the valve that shuts off the gas from the carburetor a little more, but it does not remedy the trouble. I have taken the carburetor, piping and auxiliary apart, but find nothing to stop the gas from flowing. Can you assist me in locating the trouble?—Owner

Motoring Department, The Consti-

I have a two-cylinder touring car 1908 make. After running a few miles the muffler and the exhaust pipe get red hot beyond the back cylinder and when once the car is stopped on the road I cannot start her. The exhaust from the cylinders makes such a noise that it is impossible to hear the horn blow.—T. J. Franklin

Either the exhaust valves or the sparks appear to be timed too late. Were this not so the unburned gases would not be so intensely hot. The burning of the gases should take place within the cylinder, the exhaust simply being the exit of waste products of combustion. With a constant flame passing through the exhaust valves they will pit and warp beyond use. The loud noise you speak of is a natural result of late timing. It is possible that your trouble simply lies in the spark. Would advise your inspection of this first.

Motoring Department, The Constitution: Is there any advantage in putting lubricating oil in the gasoline? Are any motor car engines so lubricated?—S. D. Friend

There are a number of cases where lubricating oil is used in the gasoline and in this manner fed to the cylinder. There are no particular advantages to this system. However, in cases where two cycle motors are used it is necessary and advisable.

Motoring Department, The Constitution: Can a vibrating coil be used in place of a non vibrating coil, and if so, how can it be done?—W. L. M.

It is not practical to use an ordinary vibrating coil in place of a non-vibrating coil. The usual vibrating unit is used in connection with a battery. The non vibrating type is used with magneto. In the latter case the current generated is much greater, hence coil capacity must be much greater. As in the construction of the coil differ. The function of the vibrator is to automatically interrupt or make and break the primary circuit to help induce the desired high voltage secondary current. When the magneto and non vibrating coil is used the interrupter or circuit breaker of the magneto accomplishes the make and break of the primary and accordingly eliminates the use of the coil vibrator.

It will also be found that the condenser connections are different in the two coils. In the vibrating coil no condenser connections appear since the terminals are within and across the vibrator. In the non-vibrating one condenser terminal appears outside. This must be attached across the breaker in such a way that the condenser action may be obtained. Even though the vibrator may be cut out on the vibrating coil, and the desired condenser and other connections made, it is not advisable or practical to overload a coil which in no way was designed for the work. The coil would undoubtedly be ruined very quickly.

Motoring Department, The Constitution: Please give me some information as to how the exhaust valve of my motor should be timed. The cam shaft gear broke and I do not understand how to set the gear back in place. I understand that it must work with the intake valve, which is on the other side of the cylinder. How should the gear be set?—R. Perkinson

The intake valve opens about forty degrees before bottom center and closes about ten degrees past top center. The flywheel of the motor is usually marked to indicate when exhaust valve should begin to open. Determine the firing stroke of number one cylinder and when piston is about three-quarters down note the flywheel mark. There is usually a pointer to guide when pointer is opposite mark the No. 1 cam of the cam shaft should be set to raise valve lifter. In this position the gear should be engaged in mesh. Should there be no marks on the flywheel to guide you it will be necessary to chalk mark or otherwise subdivide the wheel. Bear in mind that the lead to the valves differs on different motors, depending upon the design of the motor. The forty-degree lead mentioned is approximately correct but to be accurate would suggest that you obtain the information directly from the manufacturer of the motor.

Motoring Department, The Constitution: I have a four-cylinder 35 horse power car of this year's model which has suddenly developed a peculiar miss. The car is equipped with a magneto and misses on cylinders 2 and 3 at all speeds, and hits as well as even on cylinders 1 and 4. There is no spark at 2 and 3 whatever while 1 and 4 have a strong spark. The wires are in good shape also the plugs. What is the remedy for this trouble?—Frank S. Murray

HIGH GRADE OF TIRES FURNISHED FOR SOUTH

Herbert Barnes, manager of the New South Rubber company, which has the exclusive sale in southern states for the well-known brand of G and J tires, in an interview yesterday had the following to say about his company and the G and J tires. "The New South Rubber company is making an earnest and we might add a highly successful effort to give to the southern trade not only a high grade of tire, but also the very best service that any tire and accessory house can give. Rarely has a company experienced such marked success as has this one since it opened business some fifteen months ago. The high character of the products we handle we believe sufficient to merit the generous patronage on the part of the southern trade.

This company gives the dealers of the south an excellent opportunity to secure close at hand a brand of tires that has a country-wide reputation for high quality, coupled with quick service and prompt deliveries. "Men and tires are a good deal alike. They all look a good deal alike and act a good deal alike when it's fine weather and 'smooth going.' It takes a difficult task or a bit of hard service to pick out the weak ones. They generally 'blow up'." "He is a wise man who picks either men or tires which come from good stock and have records of good service behind them. It means dollars in his pocket to do so. G and J tires come from the 'pioneer stock' of the pneumatic tire industry of America."

CADILLAC MODELS FOR 1914 ARE BEING EAGERLY AWAITED

The automobile world, always susceptible to changes and innovations, has been put on tenter hooks by the preliminary announcement of the Cadillac Motor Car company referring to certain progressive developments which will distinguish the 1914 Cadillac, the exact nature of which will soon be revealed.

Those active in the industry, and laymen as well, are always keenly curious about contemplated motor car improvements and what they portend, but this interest is whetted to its keenest edge when the Cadillac announces a new series because of the position the company occupies in the history and development of the motor car. The reason is obvious; conservatism has been coupled with foresightedness. Henry M. Leland, advisory manager of the Cadillac, the founder and guiding spirit of the concern, is an extremely conservative man with half a century of experience in the mechanical world, yet he has been called the "youngest" man in the automobile industry today.

In the affairs of the Cadillac there has been a wholesome fear of the whims of the fan and the merely temporary in innovations. But the company, nevertheless, has from time to time played the role of pioneer and has inaugurated several important epochs in the development of the motor car. One of these epochs illustrates in an especially significant manner the reason for the public's attitude toward this company. It was two years ago that the Cadillac had the honor of being first to introduce an automatic electrical cranking and lighting system. It was a revolution in efficiency and comfort. As there have been many other progressive features first developed in this car, the query is now naturally voiced each year: "What will the Cadillac do?"

The Cadillac company's conservatism has not permitted it to make rash promises. Therefore, when it declares that it is about to inaugurate another new and progressive development, the automobile world, remembering past performances, is on the qui vive to know just what these statements portend.

Washington July 12—Secretary Houston of the department of agriculture received a protest today from the Manchester (England) Cotton Association against the practice of certain American ginners of mixing various staple cottons in the same bale. You will appreciate, says the letter of protest, the serious consequences that this growing practice must have upon the quality of the American crop thereby effectively reducing its monetary value.

Secretary Houston is urged to make representation to the cotton exchanges of the south asking them to inform the ginners of the necessity of keeping different seed cottons of various staples separate and not mix different qualities together.

At the department it was pointed out that the trouble was due largely to the discrimination of the American ginner to take the time after ginning one kind of cotton from the gin and then to introduce another staple. It was said that the value of a bale is lessened from $1.50 to $1 by a per cent mixture of grades.

It is pointed out that cotton merchants sample from each side of the bale and receiving with one lot in storage a mixture in which cotton of a single staple is used. While the producer can take a large quantity of cotton to the gin and be sure that it is not mixed with other grades, when it is taken to the gin all these bales are mixed with any other kind.

The department sees particularly upon our growers to limit their cotton to one side of the bale. It is pointed out that the cotton in the first layer of a bale would result in such a bale being rated in the market probably only ten to twenty per cent of its value. It is pointed out that the value of a bale is lessened from $1.50 to $1 by a per cent mixture of grades.

HE FAVORS MOVIES ALL DAY SUNDAY

E. B. Lester Writes Letter Condemning Sensational Articles in Local Newspapers.

E. B. Lester, of the Kimball Piano company, is a strong advocate of Sunday moving pictures. He has written the following to the Constitution in which he voices his views and deprecates sensationalism in the newspapers.

Atlanta, Ga., July 12, 1913.

Atlanta Constitution: I have read with considerable interest the various articles in your paper concerning Atlanta's places of amusement and would like to inquire the full fairness and consideration of private individuals who receive revenue from such places, why it is that such places as White City park, where you find nothing but cheap midway attractions, are allowed to operate week days and Sundays, when a great deal is made when such attractions and places of amusement and recreation as a refined motion picture show is desired.

I am a resident in the Grant Park and White City section of Atlanta and I like hundreds of other Atlantans, do not care to visit and patronize such places. You are no doubt aware of the fact that you can make good or evil of any of everything and when you stop and consider the real virtue of a refined picture, as compared with cheap attractions as found in a circus, you cannot deny that there is really no comparison between the two.

Do you think it is fair to favor some few and discriminate against the many?

Do you not think our city would fare better and be better thought of by broad minded people if our newspapers would use less red ink when some individual strays from the righteous path and turn your thoughts and use more newspaper space toward up lifting humanity instead of giving such prominence to crooks.

Mr. Editor, take for a few moments the place of one living in some foreign city or country. What would your opinion be of a city after you read its newspapers, especially when it is preceded by box-car letter type and displayed most conspicuously in all colors of ink?

All people do not see everything alike and it is the opinion of the writer that every one would enjoy living this life if there was more fairness accorded to the masses than to the minority of privilege extended to a few individuals that perchance own a few acres of dirt. I feel certain that I voice the sentiment of the majority of the population of Atlanta when I say that Atlanta should have the motion picture on Sunday full day, provided that they are not suggestive of evil.

Respectfully,
E. B. LESTER,
2322 White Avenue, Salesman, W. W. Kimball Piano Co.

VENABLE IS CONNECTED WITH TRAVELERS' BANK

Resigns New York Position to Become Officer of Atlanta Institution.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Travelers' Bank and Trust company, held Friday evening, W. P. Venable, of New York, was elected active vice president of that institution.

Mr. Venable, who was manager of the southern department of the Mechanics and Metals National bank, of New York, has resigned that position following his election as vice president of the Atlanta Institution and will become a permanent resident of this city. Mr. Venable and his family will be an acquisition to Atlanta's business and social life.

Mr. Venable is a southern man, a native of Virginia, and is one of a family of bankers. His grandfather, Abram Z. Venable, was engaged in the banking business many years prior to the civil war, and his father, William C. Venable, was an official of the old Farmers' bank, of Virginia.

After the war the latter bank was reorganized as the Planters' bank, of Farmville, and W. P. Venable succeeded his father as its cashier. Mr. Venable has been in the banking business all his life. In January, 1909, he went to New York to become secretary representative of the National Copper bank, of New York, and in that capacity traveled a year through the south, familiarizing himself with conditions in every section. One year later he was made manager of the southern department of one of the greatest financial institutions in New York.

Mr. Venable was a member of the executive committee of the Virginia Bankers' association for several years, and at the time of his leaving for New York was vice president of the Virginia Bankers' association.

The affiliation of Mr. Venable with the Travelers' Bank and Trust company, of Atlanta, will therefore be of interest not only here, but in banking circles throughout the country. Mr. Venable's connection as active vice president is in addition to the other officers, who all remain in the same capacity as in the past.

At the Local Theaters

Eight Dancing Madcaps in "Hotel a la Carte" at the Bijou this week.

Keith's Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth.)
Valerie Bergere and her talented company of players, who so successfully presented "His Japanese Wife" to the biggest attendance that was recorded at the Grand during the season of vaudeville at that big theater, will be the headline attraction at the Forsyth, commencing with matinee on Monday and continuing throughout the week. Miss Bergere will present her newest success called "Judgment," a play founded on a sensational climax that has been worked into one of the most interesting offerings that vaudeville has recorded for the coming season. "Judgment" has been presented in only a few selected places, and though booked for an appearance in regular season at the Forsyth, the people induced the talented actress to appear in Atlanta at this time, with the distinct understanding that she will be seen again here either later in the winter or before spring. The play will be magnificently and the same talented support appearing with Miss Bergere when seen last, will have the important assignments assisting her. There is hardly any question about the fact that Miss Bergere is an emotional and dramatic talent. She has been offered a great many inducements to enter the legitimate, but her engagements in vaudeville have always been profitable and pleasant, and she has chosen to continue in this department of things theatrical. "Judgment" promises to be one of the greatest drawing cards the vaudeville has ever seen.

The six other acts that will complete the program have been selected with the utmost care.

Europe contributes to the bill, sharing honors with American performers. A feature will be the first appearance here of the Metropolitan minstrels, a combination of clever juveniles, who have scored tremendous success in the leading vaudeville theaters this season. This is a company of young men and girls, who present a genuine first part minstrel show, introducing unusual novelties and song and dance. The musical program includes a number of original song hits that have never been heard here before, and the style in which they are to be rendered will add wonderfully to the magnetism of this act.

Perhaps the greatest musical novelty that has been produced here in vaudeville will be the appearance of a European duo, billed as Les Gougets, who have just been imported through the Keith agents. These people created a wonderful impression upon their first appearance in New York a few weeks ago, and were immediately assigned for a tour of America. Their season will start in the west in August. Prior to that time, the Keith offices have assigned them to Atlanta, Louisville and Detroit. They are skilled musicians, this man and woman, but unusual in that they will offer for exhibition the largest instruments that have ever been seen on any stage. One of these is a horn, measures twenty feet in length and weighs 184 pounds. Another is a cornet eight feet high, and built after the fashion of Jacob's ladder. Aside from the musical ability of this duo, it can be readily seen

There is a sensational feature that always has value in vaudeville.

Clark and Verdi, the Italian comedians, promise an unusually clever attraction to the vaudeville. This is another act that has a recognized standing in the Keith houses. The style of the comedians is so different from anything else in vaudeville that there is always a response from an audience.

Britt Wood, the clever young comedian, who appeared here last summer, scoring splendidly in grotesque dances and unique harmonic playing, will be one of the special features on this bill. Wood was discovered in the south playing in one of the small vaudeville houses. He was given an opportunity to establish himself in the high-grade theaters, and the result that he was given a year's consecutive engagement over the circuit, and has been given a duplicate of this tour at a tremendous increase in salary for the coming season.

Works and Fleis, unique jesting gymnasts, who are splendid entertainers, and the Shelvey Brothers, contortionists of exceptional ability, complete the bill.

The Forsyth management announces for its headliner for the week of July 21 John Conroy and his models, the most wonderful swimming and diving act in the world. Conroy, who is a life saver of national reputation, has been on the stage but two seasons, and has advanced to star headline honors in that time. He has drilled and trained two beautiful young ladies as assistants in his act, and he uses a number of original and wonderful water performance that has been given on any platform anywhere.

parts well, putting plenty of ginger into their acts, and assisting them greatly is a very pretty bunch of chorus girls.

The success of the policy has been so pronounced that the management has determined to continue the operation of the big theater with exclusive pictures daily from 2:30 until 10:30 at night, with a complete and entire change of program every day. Arrangements have been made for an exclusive service of five subjects that will run an hour and a half for each program. This means that a movie fan can come into the Grand at any time from 2:30 on and be sure of witnessing five to seven complete, exclusive pictures, the finest productions of the finest producers.

The admission fee will be ten cents, including any seat at any time. Special features will be offered from time to time, announcements of which will be displayed in the theater, and the lobby of the theater. The Grand is roomy, clean, cool and safe, and skilled operators are in charge of the stage and the operating room. Attendees will look after the comfort and convenience of every patron, and it is predicted that the Grand will become one of the most popular places in Atlanta. Just as big first-class theaters in other cities adopting this policy have registered tremendous success.

Motion Pictures.

(At the Grand.)
Motion pictures of the highest quality and very best type will be continued at the Grand indefinitely. The success of the policy has been so pronounced that the management has determined to continue the operation of the big theater with exclusive pictures daily from 2:30 until 10:30 at night, with a complete and entire change of program every day. “Hotel a la Carte.”

(At the Bijou.)
If you are looking for fun, of the kind that makes you laugh down deep, the Bijou is the place to find it this week. "Hotel a la Carte," a musical comedy, said to be one of extraordinary merit, and one of the funniest that has hit the town in a long time, will be the attraction at this popular house for the week. The piece is said to contain an abundance of good music, graceful dancing and pretty girls. Some of those who take the principal parts are Miss Mamie Elmors as Flossie Spearmin, Walter Waldhouse as the barber, Helme Schultz and Joe Scott, as Charles Knickerbocker, a bell-hop. The principals are all said to be clever and carry out their

FIDDLERS' CONVENTION HELD AT LUCY LAKE

Fitzgerald, Ga., July 12.—(Special.) A crowd estimated at anywhere from three to five thousand people gathered at Lucy Lake Friday to enjoy a picnic and hear the fiddlers compete for a prize. The convention was under the auspices of the United Daughters of the Confederacy of Irwin county, and the members of the park generously donated a part of the proceeds of the day to the Daughters, and a good addition was made to their fund for the erection of a monument which has already been placed at Ocala.

Twenty-five contestants were present to compete for the prizes, but on account of the crowd only seventeen were able to get on to the platform to take part. The first prize was awarded to Riley Toxson, of Nashville, in the section of Willie Hyatt, of Irwin county. None but those who played by ear and not by note were allowed in the competition. A voting contest to determine the most popular young lady in several towns, resulted in favor of Miss Omnia Paulk, of Ocala.

BUGS IN THOMAS COTTON MAY BE DREADED WEEVIL

Thomasville, Ga., July 12.—(Special.) Are the bugs that are injuring his cotton the advance guard of the dreaded boll weevil, is what Frank Hancock, living in the district of Thomas county just across the Ocklocknee river, is anxious to know. The bug in question has many of the characteristics that fit the description of the boll weevil and in its operations it eats the lower edge of the leaf, causing it to drop off. Mr. Hancock has heard here before of them on his cotton within the past few days and so worried is he by the thought that they may be that great pest that he has sent samples of them to the state entomologists that he may find out just what they are.

M'Laurin is Quizzed IN CASE OF GROCERS

WOMAN IS INJURED WHEN AUTO PLUNGES OVER 20-FOOT BANK

Americus, Ga., July 12.—(Special.) W. S. Ferris and family, residing near Southville, narrowly escaped death here this morning when their touring car tumbled 20 feet down an embankment near Muckalee creek, within the city limits.

Ferris attempted to exchange seats with another occupant of the automobile without stopping the car or reducing speed, thus losing control of the steering wheel. The car overturned several times and one occupant, Mary Ferris, sustained a broken collar bone.

The car was stopped against a fence at the brink of the deep creek, into which it otherwise would have rolled with its five occupants.

His part of the estate is estimated to be worth $250,000 and is mostly in securities and some real estate.

The division of the property has been held up for some time. Mr. Kastenhuber has been devoting more of his time to laboratory work since coming here, and his experiments with sand and chemical mixtures have been unusually successful in manufacturing tile for floors and mantels.

APPLE SHIPPERS MAY CONVENE IN ATLANTA

The latest prospective convention for Atlanta in 1914 is that of the International Apple Shippers' association, which the convention bureau is now striving to land.

Louis B. Magid, in a letter to the apple shippers, has urged the convention to come here because of the market the south affords for the product, and the increasing interest in apple growing in Georgia.

Mr. Magid promises a regular, old-time Georgia barbecue in the apple orchards of north Georgia as one of the entertaining features of the apple growers come to Atlanta.

How's Your Appetite?

Eat three good meals a day? Enjoy your food? Never know you've eaten except for that pleasurable feeling that food well-digested brings?

Or, don't you any interest at mealtime because you're afraid of what will happen afterward? Does the little you do eat lie like lead in your stomach? If that's the way you feel,

Take Nuxcara 3 Times a Day

One-half hour before each meal. You can eat what you please without fear. Nuxcara is a scientific remedy for indigestion, dyspepsia, all stomach and bowel disorders. It not only gives instant relief, but when taken regularly gradually effects a permanent cure.

Unlike other preparations, it acts directly on the lining of the stomach and bowels, restoring them to their natural healthy condition; encouraging the secretion and flow of the gastric juices which control digestion.

Nuxcara is a pure vegetable preparation, the discovery of a well-known local druggist. Through its use, hundreds of Atlantans now enjoy vigorous health, and hundreds more use and recommend it daily. It has been prescribed by reputable physicians for many years with wonderful success.

Read the testimonial to the right. What Nuxcara has done for them, it will do for you, if you take it three times a day.

Mr. S. B. Baldwin, 411 Rawson St., Atlanta, says:

My wife suffered for a long time with stomach and intestinal indigestion which finally set up a general condition of the entire digestive tract, resulting in chronic appendicitis. We thought this could be relieved only by an operation. But through the advice of friends I gave her Nuxcara, the scientific remedy for indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach and bowel disorders. The first bottle removed all distressing symptoms and after taking four more bottles she is completely recovered and now enjoys perfect health.

My wife's mother was so pleased with the result in this case that she, too, decided to try Nuxcara. Where an operation had failed to relieve her Nuxcara gave her immediate relief. Today she is in better health than she has been for years. Nuxcara is the best medicine I know of for stomach and bowel disorders and I heartily recommend it as a positive remedy.

NEWSPAPERS FIRST STATE ADVERTISERS

Their Columns Declared Best and Most Economical Method of Reaching Public.

Evansville, Ind., July 12.—(Special.)—A lively discussion has been going on here for some weeks among a number of merchants and manufacturers as to which was the most economical method of advertising. Being named to investigate the matter, J. E. Oliver, advertising manager of the Evansville Brewing association, wrote to twenty of the most prominent national advertisers in the United States and asked them which publicity medium, in their estimation, was the most valuable for newspapers, billboards, painted walls, street cars or direct circulars.

Nineteen of the twenty named newspapers without hesitation, and a number went so far as to recite their experiences in detail and named the reasons for their conviction. One firm had been a persistent and successful advertiser for thirty years; practically all of them manufacture articles that have long been household words throughout the whole country, and who have had sufficient practical experience to qualify them as capable judges.

This disclosure has influenced the Evansville Brewing association to appropriate a considerable sum to be expended for newspaper advertising.

FERTILIZER FACTORY TO LOCATE AT DAWSON

Dawson, Ga., July 12.—(Special.)—Dawson is to have at an early date a big fertilizer factory, to cost about $100,000, which the Alabama Chemical company will erect here on a lot purchased from J. D. Laing, near the depot of the Seaboard Air Line railway. The enterprise has been secured largely through the efforts of Messrs. Lowrey Bros. & Davidson, of this city, and John S. Lowrey will be the manager of the company, which will give employment to about 150 men. The city council passed a resolution in order to induce the company to locate here, giving it an exemption from taxes for a period of five years.

The city tax assessors have completed their arduous labors and delivered their report to City Clerk R. E. Bell and the total valuation of Dawson's property is fixed by the board at $2,062,043, which is an increase of nearly $100,000 over last year's figures.

MARIETTA DISTRICT CONFERENCE CLOSES

Jasper, Ga., July 12.—(Special.)—The Methodist conference of the Marietta district closed its session here this week. The conference was largely attended, more than one hundred delegates and teachers being there. The Marietta district is very large in territory, stretching from Bienville in Union county to Atlanta Heights. Presiding Elder Cooper was in charge of the conference. He dispatched the business rapidly and fearlessly. A resolution against intercollegiate sports was passed by a large majority. The opposition was led by Dr. J. A. Sharp, of Young Harris college.

A resolution indorsing the Webb bill was passed. A resolution offered by Rev. Nath Thompson to remove some of the restrictions placed upon women of the church was tabled on motion of one of the delegates.

TARIFF ON BANANAS IS BEING PROTESTED

New York, July 12.—President Wilson will be deluged with hundreds of letters from New Yorkers in defense of the banana as the "poor man's fruit" if those present last night at a meeting in Cooper Union follow the advice of speakers in protest against the proposed tax of one-tenth of one per cent per pound on bananas imported into this country.

Miss Julia Heath, president of the Housewives' league, and other women spoke, urging their auditors to send to President Wilson a personal letter of protest. Resolutions also were passed calling upon congress to reject the proposed tax, declaring that "such a tariff was not within the purview of the voters who elected the democratic party to power."

GOVERNOR EATS SOLDIERS' GRUB

Chief Executive Sleeps in a Tent and Generally Enjoys Roughing It at St Simons Camp

By Robert Gull, Special Correspondent
St Simons Island Ga. July 12—(Special) John Marshall Slaton governor of Georgia ate a soldier's grub for supper in the camp of the Fifth regiment tonight and slept in a soldier's tent roughing it like the other six hundred Atlantans who are undergoing instruction in war tactics under the direction of army officers.

The governor and his party arrived on the pier promptly at 10 o'clock and were escorted to camp by Colonel Pomeroy and staff while a band played the governor's salute of seven ensembles. The regiment had been formed on the parade ground and passed in review headed by the twenty two piece regiment band. A war strength company then gave an exhibition attack and late in the afternoon the governor saw the regiment in dress parade.

Governor Well Pleas'd

The governor was highly pleased with the showing made by the fifth and congratulated Colonel Pomeroy on the conduct of the men.

From a tin plate he was served the regular camp fare of boiled meat, corn and light bread and from a tin cup he drank his coffee and declared it was great. An ever pleasant smile on the chief executive's face showed that he was having a good time and was thoroughly enjoying the hospitality of camp Joseph M. Brown.

Gov. Slaton and the Ladies of the Georgia Society are at the new St. Simons hotel tonight the official party was entertained at the hotel by the officers of the regiment. The party will remain here all day Sunday returning to Atlanta Monday.

Boys Given Hard Work

The boys are being put through strenuous drill in extended order and are learning how to fight as in the battlefield. A long hike will be taken Tuesday the regiment leaving camp in heavy march equipment. The division will be on the march in food and sleep at night under tents.

A large number of lady visitors came to camp during the day and brightened up the drill. The one half of the regiment was drilled in the air line today at 10 o'clock and reported as being very sick.

The president nevertheless is in of his summer home. His son is expected to get back here in the afternoon of the present session. The address which the president is expected to have will not be before the time that the president immediately after that adjournment the president intends to take a three week trip to the Panama canal.

ROLF GETS GOOD PLACE AT OKLAHOMA STATION

It will be pleasing information to the friends in Georgia of Arthur Rolf that he has been called to the headship of the police department of the Oklahoma experiment station at a time he is glad to hear he will have a broad field in which to work.

During the election in this state Rolf was at the head of the police department of the Georgia station he did excellent work and made many friends throughout the state. The department at the Georgia station was discontinued at the first of this month because of a question in Georgia and the station at Oklahoma is being expanded to a larger station rather than experimental work.

COLLEGE PARK OFFERS $25 PRIZE FOR SLOGAN

New Name Is Also Wanted to Replace That of "Board of Trade"

College Park a progressive residential suburb of Atlanta through the board of trade of that place makes an appeal to the slogan writers everywhere. Not only does the board offer a prize of $25 in gold for the organization and town but they want a better name than that of the board of trade for their organization. A prize of $25 in gold is offered to the person who will suggest the best name and slogan.

After some discussion among the members of the board of trade Friday night an appropriate name and a suitable slogan it was decided to leave the task to the public in general hence the idea of the prize.

The contest closes July 31 and the prize will be awarded at the next meeting of the organization which will be held August 1. All replies should be sent to the publicity committee at College Park or to Rev. Fritz Rauschenberg secretary of the present board of trade.

Name Changed in 1895

The suggestion of a contest for a slogan brought to mind the fact that in 1895 a lot in the town at that time was offered to the person who would suggest its best name for the town at that time known as Manchester.

The contest interested prominent people throughout the entire country and resulted in the name of College Park the name having been suggested by Mrs. Mary Gordon R. Pe. At that time the lot that was awarded Mrs. Roper was valued at only $500 today its value is given at $2,000.

Despite the unfavorable weather conditions the meeting of the College Park board of trade was largely attended Friday night. This was the second meeting of the organization on having been launched only the week before. At this meeting the constitution and bylaws as submitted by a committee of prominent citizens were adopted. New members were enrolled bringing the membership up from fifty two to seventy eight.

One of the first acts of the organization was to pass a resolution on the engagement and better equipping of the College Park postoffice. A committee was appointed to take the matter up with the proper government authorities and Congressman Howard and Senator Smith.

Chief Engineer, Third Engineer and Boatswain of British Steamer Near Death

Newport News Va. July 12—Fourteen Chinamen stokers and firemen on the British steamship Norman Monarch bound from New Orleans to Hamburg mutinied Thursday about 130 miles off this port and attacked the ship's officers with knives crow bars hatch bars and other weapons.

MORE PROBING URGED FOR "MONEY TRUST"

Resolutions Along Two Different Lines Introduced in the House

Washington July 12—Currency difficulties broke out along two different lines in the house today with the introduction of resolutions directing investigations.

The first by Representative Henry proposes a renewal of the investigation of the money trust as an adjunct and aid to the banking committee in its consideration of the administration currency bill.

The second by Representative Lindbergh of Minnesota progressive member of the committee proposes an investigation to determine whether the Glass bill would create a monstrous monopoly controlled and operated by private interests.

Representative Henry's resolution would give the committee plenary and inquisitorial powers over national banks and interest corporations.

In a statement accompanying his resolution Representative Henry declared that it was introduced solely with a view to aid and expedite consideration of pending banking and currency legislation and should be hastened to aid the banking committee to obtain all the valuable information still concealed that will be of vast importance in the solution of the currency problems.

He declared that the recent bank failure in Pittsburg emphasized the need of knowing directly how these great institutions use their office boys.

WOMEN'S VOTES FAIL TO GET KINDERGARTEN

Aurora Ill. July 12—Women's votes in Geneva Ill. did not procure for that city a public kindergarten in a special election today. One hundred and eighty women voted in a total of 407 votes cast but the proposition was lost 168 to 229.

The measure was urged by club women who had half a dozen automobiles placarded with We Want a Kindergarten carrying voters to the polls. Mrs. Robert Farson leader of the women voters, tonight declared that the defeat was caused by their inability to get working women interested in voting so soon after their enfranchisement by the recent legislation.

whether the Glass bill would not operate a government policy inconsistent with the Sherman law doctrine by fostering a monopoly to privately control for selfish interests, the distribution of money and credit and whether or not "It is constitutional for the government to provide a method by which to organize private interests into a corporate mutual interest with the power to control the distribution of money and credit."

Both resolutions were referred to the rules committee of which Representative Henry is chairman.

Make This the Time to Buy Pianos and Player-Pianos

It's Just Like Teacher's

Now it happened that teacher was an excellent judge of those vital things about a piano that one doesn't see. There was the action, the touch, the balance preserved between treble and bass, and above all, the sweetness and resonance of tone.

And teacher had graduated from a well equipped College of Music where she had seen Kingsbury Pianos subjected, month in and month out, to the strain of all day teaching and practice. They were durably built—held their tune and tone, proving the excellence of their materials and careful workmanship. But, it's more than a great school piano!

—This Sweet Toned Kingsbury

A Great Home Piano. It is made in the dull satin finishes as well as highly polished and in three different woods and five different models. While admiring its made-to-order appearance, you will marvel at its low price.

ATLANTA'S STRIDES, DAY BY DAY

Atlanta's movements in the real estate field were quiet though consistent with the first week's trading. Nothing of a sensational nature developed though there was some sharp trading on small parcels.

Medium Residence Sale. Smith & Frazier, through R. F. Cox, has sold to A. L. Stinson, Jr., Mrs. R. C. Brandon, 17 acres and a burglar on the Johnson road for $90,000.

A Rat-Power Motor.

That raw power is actually being used in certain coal mines for the dual purpose of detecting dangerous gases and illuminating dark passages is asserted by Coal Age, which gives a picture of a rat motor with an electric light attachment. A treadmill over which a rat is shown running, presumably after a bit of cheese forever out of reach, is shown, and this treadmill is described as working a dynamo which supplies the light. The box containing the treadmill has sides of screening permitting the entrance of mine gases whose presence would be readily detected by the behavior of the rat, which is susceptible to their influence. This, the Coal Age remarks, dispenses with the necessity of carrying an innocent and attractive gas bird to a hideous death—referring to the use of canaries to detect mine gases.

For the best results, the same periodical says, a nimble and sinewy rat weighing about three pounds should be used. As soon as the gas inspection is finished, or the helmet man returns to his base of supplies, the faithful animal upon the treadmill may be gently removed, carefully cured and killed down, given food and water and allowed to sleep and recuperate for the next shift.

It is asserted that many advantages are to be gained from the use of this ingenious gas detecting animal. The supply of motive power is always abundant and cheap around the mines, so much, in fact, that it may rightfully be regarded as a by-product. The expense of feeding an adequate number of rats while in captivity is small, since to keep them in good running condition they should not be allowed to acquire superfluous flesh, as this renders them phlegmatic and short winded.

In Simplified Spelling.

(From The Columbus Dispatch.)
Simplified spelling is not new. They had it in Breathitt county, Kentucky, years ago for its found, early in the last century. While engaged in relief work in that state, L. E. Stein, special agent of the Red Cross, obtained a verbatim copy of what is reputed to be the first warrant issued in Breathitt county. It is something of a curiosity, it reads:

"State of Jetts Creek, Breathitt County, Kentucky.
"I, Jackson Terry, III, official magistrate and justice of the peace do hereby issue the following writ against Henderson Harris charging him with assault and the battery and the breach of the peace, on his brother-in-law, Tom Fox by name, this warrant causes him to be seized, fined and thrown in jail, doing everything that was mean and contrary to law in the State of Jetts creek and aforesaid.

"The warrant authorizes the constable to take him where he finds him on the hills as well as in the level, to take him whar he aint as well as where he is and to bring to me to be dealt with according to the laws of Jetts creek, & aforesaid.

"JACKSON TERRY,
"Magistrate Squire & Justice of the Peace.
January 2 1838."

The Opal.

(From Harpers Weekly.)
Experts in such matters assure us that among jewels the opal alone defies the ingenuity of the imitator. The stone owes its charm not so much to its own intrinsic merits as to the splendor of the rays of light it reflects. It has been called "the chameleon of stones" and it has always been a great favorite with lovers of gems. Nearly 2,000 years ago Pliny remarked that it "displays at once the piercing fires of carbuncles, the purple brilliancy of the amethysts, and the transparency of emeralds, the whole blended together and retulgent with a brightness that is quite incredible."

The opal is a stone "with a temper." The diamond rises superior, the emerald as does the ruby, the emerald and the sapphire, but the opal is of such delicate organization that when exposed to severe cold it loses color and under the influence of excessive moisture becomes dull. It is a curious fact, however, that the temperature of one's hand will cause it to resume its wondrous fire and brilliancy as will also be the case when it is exposed to the direct rays of the sun.

The opal has always been invested with much charm, mystery and superstition. The Greeks believed that it possessed the power of bestowing second sight on those under its influence, provided the stone was not employed toward selfish ends. Misuse of the opal resulted in rivers of misfortunes. And so originated the notion that the opal was unlucky. Succeeding generations have kept alive this superstition which has been utilized by many writers among whom may be mentioned Sir Walter Scott by whom in "Anne of Gelestein," the opal is made to play an unfortunate part.

The Romans were so fond of the opal that they bestowed upon it the name of "lovely youth," but, curiously enough they, sharing in most of the Greek superstitions, were known to be kind, did not deem the opal unlucky.

During the Middle Ages there were not wanting those who shared the Roman weakness for the opal and it entered largely into the adornment of both sexes.

Honest Sweat.

(From The Kansas City Star.)
Some persons of the class that Tennessee called "the oiled and curled Assyrian balls" object to riding in the street cars with tired working men. Most of these persons are probably seen in "Little Brothers of the rich," who have none of the broad fellowship and true democracy that all capable men feel, whether they are rich or poor.

Against the selfish spirit contrast the fine brotherhood and manly regard to these lines of a new poet, Wilfrid Wilson Gibson:

"Sung in my easy chair,
I stirred the fire to flame,
I'll dazzled by the drowsy glare,
I shut my eyes to heat and light,
And saw, in sudden night,
Crouched in the dripping dark,
With steaming shoulders stark,
The man that heeds the coal to feed my fire."

What care I for trouble makers?
I can reap where I have sown,
I've a patch of ten green acres
And a roof tree all my own.
This the song of all the ages—
First in manhood's ranks shall stand
He who toils for no man's wages,
Owns the soil and rules the land.

COTTON SLIGHTLY HIGHER AT CLOSE

Market Was Very Quiet in the Morning—Advances Followed by Reactions, Resulting From Realizing

New York July 12.—Trade buying of August and early new crop deliveries was about the only feature in a generally very quiet cotton market this morning. A consequent advance of about 1/4 points was followed by a slight reaction as a result of cotton and wheat trading over the week end but the issue was steady net up changed to 3 points higher.

Review of the new crop and the few private advices received during the morning continued of a generally favorable character, but the morning complaints that high temperatures were checking growth or of sheath loss as a result of drought about the only unsatisfactory features it seemed however that the optimistic view of the new crop progress failed to stimulate any selling of cotton in and in some quarters rather a more bullish view was expressed of the market on the ground that with speculation limited by less speculative capital and a continuation of the large cotton supply of contracts would be insufficient to meet the requirements of trade buyers pending a free movement of the new crop.

Part of the day's buying was supposed to be based on the theory, and after opening to 1/4 points higher, the market ruled generally steady in the absence of fresh selling. Business was very quiet many brokers having left town yesterday for over Sunday and trading may have been restricted to some extent in the absence of cables as Liverpool was closed again today.

Weekly reviews of the fall River market indicated increased sales from that point and advices from the northern region indicated good demand for export owing to a favorable crop of it in some of the harvesters and that the surplus of the early new crop will show a sharp falling off in some of the staples.

Cotton is a quiet market, middling upland 1 1/2 middling gulf 1 1/2 1/2 sales none.

ANDERSON SCORES TAX SYSTEM EVILS

Rank Discrimination Charged by Senate President in Calling for Action to Remedy State's Finances

The speech of J. Randolph Anderson president of the senate delivered before the general assembly last Thursday night when the chamber retained the legislature at a dinner is a clarion call to the need of immediate action to remedy the state's depleted financial condition.

President Anderson pointed out that while Georgia boasts herself the Empire State of the South, in fact she is controlled by a few men in her own hands. He declared that the lack of resources in this state is due to a great extent to the rank discrimination in the present tax system.

He put the problem of a remedy squarely upon the present session of the general assembly.

President Anderson's address follows: To the Senate and Gentlemen of the General Assembly, it gives me great pleasure to be here tonight as the guests of the leading business men of the greatest state of the South.

It may be remembered that my views and conditions were bitterly assailed in the public press and that the result has been a bitter and a bitter soldier of his day in England.

The income tax system of Georgia is a disgrace to the state and a disgrace to the South.

Remedy for Tax Evil. The evils of the present system are now apparently becoming more and more apparent to the people.

It will repay you because we give you the best prints that can be made. They are printed on Velox Paper—no cheap paper used.

Kindergarten Bill Is Now
Before the House and Senate

The kindergarten bill that was introduced last year by the Free Kindergarten Association and the Georgia Congress of Mothers was brought before the house and the senate this week and will be considered before the committee in a few days. Last year sentiment was strong in its favor and this year the enthusiasm over the entire state leaves little doubt that the bill will receive favorable consideration as it involves no immediate expenditure of money.

The following is the bill in full:
1. From and after the passage of this act any board of education throughout the state whether known by that name or otherwise created by general or special act shall have power to establish and provide for kindergartens for the education of the children of not less than 4 years of age within their respective jurisdiction.

2. Be it further enacted that said kindergartens when so established shall be part of the free common school systems of this state and all funds now available or which may hereafter become available or which may be raised by any system and all other funds which may come into the hands of said boards of education for educational purposes shall be available for the establishment and maintenance of said kindergartens.

3. Be it further enacted that no teacher or instructor employed by any school in the kindergarten of this state who has not taken at least a two years course in kindergarten training in and received a certificate or diploma from a recognized kindergarten normal training school approved by the state board of education.

4. Be it further enacted that all rules and regulations for examination and qualification and admission of teachers and instructors in the free common schools and kindergartens in this state shall be prescribed and approved by the state board of education.

5. Be it further enacted that all laws and parts of laws heretofore in force which are in conflict with this act be and they are hereby repealed.

Many States Have Acted
Majority of states have passed legislation establishing kindergartens and many kindergartens are supported in the different states but of our 8,000,000 children from 4 to 6 4,000,000 are out of the kindergarten.

Perhaps we have not realized that the time of our children is being wasted educationally as any other period in the life of the child that work as field agents and educational work delivering courses of lectures to the pupils of state normal schools. The bill also provides for a district commissioner of each sanitary district composed of one or more counties. Such a commissioner thoroughly qualified for his duties shall give all his time to his office and shall have the statutory powers of a constable within his district in all matters pertaining to public health and in the enforcement of the laws of health. The work of the district commissioner as contemplated in this bill is the heart of the matter so far as practical results are concerned. His duties are such as making sanitary inspections and surveys of school buildings, grounds and water supply and examining pupils and teachers and sanitators for infectious and contagious diseases.

BILL FOR THE REVISION OF HEALTH LAWS OF STATE

The bill for establishing a state department of health provides just the machinery that is absolutely necessary to insure the maximum degree of health in every part of the state. Such machinery does not now exist hence the need for the enactment.

It provides for a state board of health giving to it authority and power to enact and enforce such regulations as are needed to provide uniform and effective health laws and to secure practical results. It provides also for county boards of health to have supervision over all matters relating to health and sanitation in their respective counties and with authority to act.

This comprehensive bill seems in every way sufficient and with it greatly needed reforms and improvements along the line of health and physical betterment can be accomplished.

Importance of Kindergarten Bill
Is Stressed by Mrs. J. R. Little

To Presidents of Parent Teacher Associations, Mothers Clubs and All Women Working for the Welfare of the Child. Four bills are to be considered at this legislature pertaining to the welfare of the child. Each is vital in importance and each is important. There can be no separation of physical, mental, moral and spiritual development of life.

happines to many homes now surrounded by gloom.
The kindergarten bill was introduced last week and will be considered this coming week. The passing of this bill would give to every child an equal opportunity to develop its greatest power and highest instincts to make its first preparation for life under the guidance of an expert instructor trained by study and experience to know conditions and methods that will best develop little children.

Defective Children.

The question before us now is whether we shall save the state of Georgia money and citizens or shall we continue on our course and be forced year after year to appropriate large sums for the maintenance of reformatories and insane asylums.
It is said that almost every worker supports two poor in his pocket—shall we add a third one to this already overburdened individual?
If these weak minded or deficient children were taken early in childhood and given good practical and scientific training out of every hundred could be rendered self supporting and capable of giving and receiving some happiness in this world. A great deal of happiness comes from work that is well done and why should any one be deprived of this noble pleasure? There is no greater source of misery than enforced idleness of mind and body and we should prevent this from being the fate of anyone.
The school for defectives that Georgia hopes to build provides for farm mechanical and household training. There will be work for all classes of children in this school and when we have trained them to work as best they can we have fitted them for happiness and usefulness.

The Mothers congress has done much noble work but if it can extend any aid to these helpless ones it will have surely have done God's work. For even as you do it to the least of these you do it unto Me.

Shoering the World.
American shoes are making their tracks the world over, not these worn by the constant procession of tourists to foreign lands but the exported cow hide boot and the sturdy shoe for men and the light finely modeled slipper for the other sex. Everywhere the American made shoe seems to find favor and our foreign trade in this product is jumping ahead at a rapid rate. We are showing foreigners how to shoe themselves in a better way than they have ever known and we are setting a style which is being followed in London, Paris and Berlin.
In the fiscal year ended with June the United States has sent abroad $20,000,000 worth of shoes, boots and slippers. This is an increase of 300 per cent in thirteen years. Not only have peoples of other lands found the American shoe more comfortable, but better appearing than their own make it is winning on its merits.

WHERE GEORGIA'S WAYWARD BOYS ARE CARED FOR—

How State Reformatory Is Working to Save the Boys That May Save the State

By E. A. Tigner.

Milledgeville, Ga., July 12—(Special.)—Although the state reformatory, for the care of young offenders against the law, has probably attracted less attention than any of the other institutions of the state, the records of the reformatory show that since its establishment in 1906 wonderful work has been accomplished towards making good citizens of boys, both white and black, who, if they had not been sent to the reformatory, would probably have become members of the criminal class.

The institution, which is situated just outside the city limits of Milledgeville, began its existence seven years ago in a manner rather meager, as only a small sum was appropriated by the state for its establishment. Only one building was constructed and in it were housed both white and black youths.

Such an arrangement was always unsatisfactory. It soon became overcrowded and also so obnoxious to the better sentiment in the state that a separate building was provided for the negro boys.

From the beginning judges all over the state have been sending the young offenders against the law here and today there are nearly two hundred boys in the reformatory, about seventy of these being white boys.

No state institution has made more rapid progress than has the reformatory during the seven years of its existence in approaching the ideals for which it was established. Day by day, as the public mind is becoming more alive to the needs and benefits of this kind of work, the evolution or development of reformatory work is easily noticeable. Where years ago there were obstacles and criticisms, today there is interest and encouragement.

Industrial Trade Shops.

Under Superintendent Lovorn, who is studious, inventive and a man of broad scope, the institution is making forward steps in many directions. Particularly worthy of mention is the starting of industrial trade shops. This commenced in a very primitive way by first setting up an old cast-off anvil on a block in the back yard with the sky for a roof and the four winds for walls. With an improvised bellows and forge and such makeshift tools as could be had the boys began their first lesson in elementary blacksmithing and simple rough wood work.

This crude beginning instituted by Superintendent Lovorn and his boys when seen by the state authorities enlisted their interest and since then there has been erected a rude workshop with pretty fair equipment. Numbers of the boys are making rapid progress in the different lines of work in manual training. Under the guidance of the foremen they do very creditably all the wood work and blacksmithing for the institution.

Here, also, they have beginners in shoe repairing, sign lettering, painting, barber work, tanning hides, bottling chairs, etc. This feature of reformatory work, teaching industrial trades as a means of awakening the latent talents and ambitions of idle and wayward youth, is strongly urged by all students of sociology and is firmly believed in by Superintendent Lovorn. He has made a real start in that direction, and if the state, through its general assembly, will make provision for the erection of some industrial trade buildings where the different kinds of shops can be maintained, the reformatory will be sending out some well-equipped boys in future years.

The state of Georgia, in the interests of society, has undertaken the watchcare of the delinquents committed to this institution, and in simple justice these boys should be given an opportunity for development during the years of their detention.

Work and Study Alternated.

There are separate schools for white and colored boys in constant operation, taught by competent and experienced teachers. As boys are coming and going all the time at the reformatory, these schools run with out vacation, the boys alternating between their study and work, and the result being a wholesome program. The school is about the usual grade school, giving instruction in the elementary branches of education, besides emphasizing particularly the importance of caring for health of the body, agriculture and civil government.

In the operation of the farm and gardens in connection with the institution all the boys are given a practical education in agriculture. The raising and storing of all forage and feed stuffs for the upkeep of farm mules and the herd of milk cows is all done by the boys as well as all the other farm work.

Religion and Moral Training.

It is the endeavor of the management of the reformatory to make the atmosphere surrounding the juvenile prisoners distinctly moral and elevating and particular encouragement is given to religious habits.

The good people of Milledgeville are endeavoring to do their part by this institution located near them, and many phases of work in connection with the reformatory are receiving the attention of some philanthropic person or organization.

Particularly noteworthy is the work organized by John Sibley, a young attorney of this city. A year or more ago he, as superintendent, began a Sunday school, and his corps of teachers, consecrated Bible scholars of different denominations, including prominent business men and members of both faculties of the Georgia Normal and Industrial college and the Georgia Military college, have worked with him, freely giving their time and energies to this interesting work. By their aid a fund was raised and a piano purchased and placed in the Sunday school room.

The Sunday school work is eagerly entered into by the boys. At a recent union meeting of the Sunday schools of Milledgeville Colonel Sibley's reformatory boys won prizes for the best recitation in concert from memorization of the Commandments and Psalms.

In addition to their devotional services at the institution the boys frequently attend services in the different churches in Milledgeville.

Entertainment for Boys.

Numerous things are done for their pleasure and entertainment. The manager of the moving picture theater in Milledgeville has been exceedingly thoughtful and has extended an invitation to see gratis one selected picture show each month. This kind-

A STATE'S GREAT WORK

By E. A. TIGNER.

It took a long time for the state to start at the right end of the matter of how to treat its criminal class with respect to making out of such offenders better men and useful citizens.

In this present day of our civilization no one will go so far as to say that imprisonment and punishment of offenders against law and society is unnecessary, but the idea is growing and is growing very fast that the state should look more toward plans and methods of reforming and correcting evil tendencies in prisoners than toward the punishment of them and the using of them for mere revenue benefits.

Strange that in a democracy such as we boast of it was not sooner realized that in order to continue and to preserve the republic in its purity for a long and useful life it is absolutely necessary to use every effort to make a good citizen of every man, criminal or otherwise. It is not necessary for the preservation of governments such as monarchies, autocracies and other centralized forms that the individual be so educated and morally trained for self government as in a republic.

It is only in recent years that much thought has been given to the betterment of men suffering imprisonment. But through the influence of organizations such as prison improvement associations a great reformatory is being steadily worked out.

This constant movement that is on throughout the land to make better characters out of prisoners first of all rather than to have them serve penitentiary and to reap revenue from their labors is brought to our notice by such criticisms as made by the recent Westchester grand jury on the famous Sing Sing prison, the jury recommending that more attention be given to moral character training and healthy, humane treatment of the inmates of that prison. Also by the recent utterances of Philip Wetmore, secretary of the Prison Association of Georgia, who characterizes the present prison system as "an iniquity of the basest sort," because in the operation of the system but little thought has been given to the betterment of men, only the building of roads and other public work has been considered.

While all this concern is felt for the welfare of grown-up prisoners some doubting that much reformation can be brought about in them, there is one line of reform work that gains universal approval, this being the work among young criminals and the establishment of well-equipped reformatories for this accomplishment. The accompanying story tells of what Georgia is doing along this line.

THE DAILY LIFE OF AN ATLANTA FIREMAN IS FILLED WITH THRILLS AND DANGER

These pictures show Chief of the Fire Department W. D. Cummings (top center) and some interesting phases of the work of the fire ladders. At the left of the chief is his big red automobile, just leaving the Alabama street station for a fire, and under it is a hose wagon, also from headquarters, making a mad dash to the scene of action. The new combination automobile truck of Station No. 14, in West End, is shown to the right of the chief, and in the diagonally opposite corner the machine is shown again leaving the new West End firehouse, which Chief Cummings considers ideal in arrangement and architecture. The firemen do not have time to dress for action before leaving the station, as is shown in the picture (right center) where the firemen are dressing on the extension ladder truck while it is going at full speed. Beneath, the extension ladder is shown in use with three firemen upon it ready for a rescue. The small picture in the center shows the work of fire-fighting in progress. Beneath this picture are the ruins of the building at Whitehall street and Trinity avenue, which, on the morning of last February 26, crushed to death J. J. Gillespie, one of the bravest men of the department.

By Ned McIntosh.
This month celebrates the thirty-first anniversary of the organized paid fire department of the city of Atlanta. There are in the department today but four of the very essential items of the first proud little department which paraded down Peachtree street in 1832. Two of these are human, which have been exposed continuously to the perils of death which have swept man after man from their sides, while the other two are the products of the mind and hand of man, and, strange to say, the former are still in active service and the latter have, for so, these many years, been mere relics of the first glory that was Chief W. B. Cummings, at headquarters, and Captain W. B. Cody, of Engine House No. 4, are the only members now "on the job" of the first paid department.

The little copy of the constitution and by-laws of the first organization lies moldy and yellow with age in a drawer in Chief Cummings' desk, and its venerable measures are never consulted by the powers that now be, but it is only drawn out occasionally by the chief to be exhibited to visitors as a curiosity. Chief Cummings glances through its yellowed pages and pauses at a list of the members that is printed in it to dream for a moment of the days that were, and the little book is laid away until the next visitor needs entertainment.

The Clang of the Bell.
In the tower of the headquarters station, down on Alabama street, hangs the big bell that in the early days was the wonder of the town and guardian of the lives and property of its citizens. In those days the sound of its tongue was a power in the land, arousing to action and striking terror to the heart in the dead of the night. But today it hangs silent, and there is not so much as a responsive vibration to the shouts of the men, the pounding of hoofs that strike fire from the pavement and the shriek of the chief's siren below!
But in fighting the red terror, Chief Cummings is older even than the paid department itself.
Five years before the paid department ever came into existence, the chief was awaiting up the Washington street hill with the hose cart of Volunteer Fire Station No. 2 in tow. But even in those days, when the chief had a bit more wool where the wool ought to grow and his whiskers were not so grizzled, he was making his mark. Many of the older citizens will remember a dashing youth who, about 1830, was the foreman of Volunteer Fire Station No. 2, which stood down on Washington street, where the present viaduct spans the railroad. Foreman Cummings was even then a recognized leader and expert in fire fighting.

When the big bell boomed out its call into the night, as some shivering citizen clad in night attire tugged excitedly at the rope, Foreman Cummings was usually the first mother's son of the volunteer service to bounce into his "homespun" and show up at the station.
Early Fire Fighting.
Fire fighting in those days was a very different proposition from what it is today. There was not the big and well-trained corps of men always waiting at the station for the alarm to ring, but in the middle of the night when somebody's house was burning down the citizenry which composed the fire department was snugly tucked away in bed in various parts of town, and it depended on how soundly they were sleeping and which way the wind was carrying the sound of the alarm bell as to whether there were enough "firemen" pulled from bed to put out the fire.

There was no straining of excited horses, clamor of gongs and shrieking of automobile sirens when a fire broke out then. And there was no spectacular array of formidable machinery dashing around the corner the second the alarm sounded. Far different. When the bell rang then the customer in the store went unaided, for every man dropped his business and rushed to the nearest fire station, and grabbed the rope of the hose cart. Then he had to run a mile, maybe, lugging the cart behind him, only to arrive at the fire after the house had burned down.
Neither was the fire department then what it is now. The volunteer fire service was more or less of a social organization then. There were crack society companies, which held their balls and dances and entertainments, and the fire house was the rendezvous of the "sports" of the town, and the gossiping place of local politicians. The fire station was the general dispenser of news.

But today a fireman has something more to attend to than dancing and politics. His is a business and not a pastime or fad.
It is his to be awake even while he is asleep. At night his clothes are arranged by his bed so that when the electric alarm sounds he literally steps from his bed into his clothes and is instantly dressed. There is not even time for the use of stairs nowadays, but the husky fireman makes a leap for a brass pole beside his bed and slides down through a hole in the floor to the room below where the apparatus is waiting.
The horses are not less well trained than the men, but as soon as the alarm rings, rush from their stalls to their respective pieces of apparatus. A fireman pulls a trigger and the harness drops on the horses and they are automatically hitched to the fire wagon.

ons. By this time each fireman is standing in his position, and as the apparatus dashes out catches his place. His fire fighting clothes are on the wagons and each man dresses for his work as the apparatus dashes madly up the street.
Meanwhile the chief's red automobile is three blocks up the street ahead of the horses, shrieking like a soul in the regions of the damned. Pedestrians are scattering helter-skelter. Policemen have taken positions on each corner with hands aloft, and all traffic is at a standstill to give the chief and his boys the right of way.
The danger has already begun, long before the firemen reach the scene of battle, for, perhaps, a fireman dreads nothing more than being flung from his wagon as it takes a corner on two wheels and being crushed under the hoofs of the foaming horses and the heavy wheels behind him.
The chief himself says that one of the closest calls he has ever had in his thirty-six years of service was in this very way.
But at the fire dangers multiply with lightninglike speed on all sides. There is the boiling, straining smoke and the hungry flames that leap from the dark to destroy. There is the treacherous wall that drops like a deadfall upon its victims, and the pitfall of the undermined floor. The dreaded live wire lurks silently in the dark to strike like a serpent.
There is a little book in Chief Cummings' desk that contains the name of every man that has ever left the department for any reason. There is not a man in the department who has not the hope that when the time comes for him to go the words, "He died in discharge of his duty," may be inscribed after his name.
These words spell faithfulness, honor, bravery, heroism and all that is to be desired in a man.
During the administration of Chief Cummings this has been written after the names of four men.
On September 30, 1907, G. W. Watts was killed at a fire on Culver street.

PARALYZING THE STATE.

The climax to Georgia's dishonest and inexorable tax system has come in the first unmistakable symptom of paralysis of her educational institutions.

THE STATE OF GEORGIA, WEALTHIEST OF THE SOUTHEASTERN STATES, WILL FOR THE FORTHCOMING YEAR DENY TO THE INSTITUTIONS EQUIPPING ITS FUTURE CITIZENS ANY ALLOWANCE WHATEVER FOR EXPANSION, LEAVING THEM WITH FUNDS BARELY SUFFICIENT TO KEEP OPEN THEIR DOORS.

The meaning of this situation should come like a blow between the eyes to every man in Georgia who is not awake to the demand for tax reform.

This is not a sudden crisis. The strain is of years' duration and has been aggravated at each session of the general assembly.

UNLESS THAT SYSTEM IS REFORMED AND THE FUNDS FOR GROWTH ARE QUICKLY FORTHCOMING THE SYSTEM WILL NOT SIMPLY STAND STILL—IT WILL INEVITABLY GO BACKWARD!

The unselfish attitude of the state's educational institutions in yielding without protest to the condition of the treasury is a challenge to the manhood of the general assembly.

The Technology school is forced to abandon a power plant, given to it by friends on the understanding that the state would pay for it in a few years and justify itself in the first year in encouraged honesty and efficiency of students by emancipating them from the present worn-out and inadequate equipment of stoves and fireplaces.

would supply only a building. The building would have cost about $30,000. The plant to be located is valued at $75,000.

The State Normal School at Athens and the Girls' Industrial School at Milledgeville will continue to be compelled to turn away hundreds of matriculates each year.

The school for mountain boys at Dahlonega will be forced to get along without a new building, substantially crippling the work of education.

Other institutions... similar sacrifices. The eleemosynary institutions are in the same boat, proportionately.

All these evils and injustices are bad enough. But THE CRIMINAL RECORD in the calendar of a state's shame is the fact that an army of common school teachers—men and women who are instructing Georgia's children—have for seven months gone without one penny of their small pay for services rendered.

The few who have been paid have been driven to shylock their scrip at from 3 to 5 per cent of its face value. This spectacle is not of a single year's occurrence. It has been recurring and becoming worse each year since the system was established forty-four years ago.

PLAIN THIEVERY!

Georgia is one of the richest states in the country, all things considered. One asset, the state road, has a sufficient valuation to retire the entire public debt and leave a margin of from seven to ten million dollars.

Why, then, do we annually pile up an increasing deficit, and why are our institutions brought actually to the verge of starvation and paralysis?

BECAUSE TAXATION IN GEORGIA IS DISHONEST AND INEFFICIENT TO THE CORE, AND EVERY LEGISLATOR KNOWS IT. Taxpayers in every county, from richest to poorest, pay the state what they please, not what they ought to.

The speaker of the house, the president of the senate, and the chairmen of the finance, appropriations and ways and means committees and the members of these committees are alive to the crisis. It is up to the legislature to manifest a similar alertness and to act upon it.

It looks, too, as though the task will be done. For not in 40 years has a more able or courageous legislature assembled in Georgia. This legislature is faced by the patriotic duty of disposing of an issue which it did not create, but which it inherited wholesale from many past legislatures.

The principal ingredients of the undertaking are that uniformity must be substituted for crazy-quilt irregularity in taxation, honesty for dishonesty. If that is not done Georgia may be next year menaced by an absolutely needless crisis hardly approached in gravity since reconstruction days.

IS COTTON THE "GOAT"?

We reproduce elsewhere an extract from The New York Journal of Commerce commenting on the proposed tax on cotton futures. A rider to the new tariff bill provides that transactions in cotton futures shall be taxed one-tenth of a cent per pound, the tax to be refunded should actual delivery be made.

Another feature The Constitution thinks the finance committee and the senate might well investigate is that relating to any possible discrimination. The measure contemplates, by implication, that speculation in cotton is subservient of legitimate business, otherwise the tax would not be imposed. We do not undertake to say if this principle, speaking from the economic point of view, is right or wrong.

If it is desirable that future transactions in cotton be checked or made to yield a revenue, is it not equally desirable that such transactions in other farm products, and in stock deliveries, be subjected to the same process? As we see it, the issue does not affect cotton alone.

Since the tax is included in the tariff bill, it is safe to assume that the finance committee regards it a revenue measure. If that is true, then the products of all industries should be put upon the same plane.

The matter is of sufficient importance to warrant careful deliberations on part of both senate and house.

MONEY ATLANTA LOSES.

Brooks Morgan, chairman of the manufacturers' committee of the chamber of commerce, said the other day that hardly a corporal's guard of Atlantans realized that over 1,000 articles for daily use are manufactured in this city.

Atlanta has shared proportionately in that development. The manufacturers' exposition held here last August was a sledge-hammer demonstration of that fact. Exhibits covering most of the articles required in daily life were on display.

It would be a task to estimate how much money Atlanta annually sends to other sections for goods that can be bought in the home market of the same quality and at less or equal price.

Atlanta has shared proportionately in that development. The manufacturers' exposition held here last August was a sledge-hammer demonstration of that fact.

But where all things are equal it is to the interest of the community to patronize the home manufacturer. He is not the only one benefited. Every dollar turned loose here is a contribution to the prosperity of each factor, running the entire social gamut.

A WEEVIL DEAD-LINE.

Senator Smith, of South Carolina, would protect the South Atlantic cotton states from the Boll weevil by establishing a dead-line in the state of Alabama, recently invaded by the pest.

The scheme seems more ingenious than feasible. In the first place, cost argues against it. Enforcement is another obstacle. It is estimated that to be effectual the zone should be fifty miles wide.

Though it has been hot enough, so far the legislature hasn't raised the roof.

A PROTEST AGAINST THE TAX ON COTTON FUTURES.

(From New York Journal of Commerce.) A well-known spot cotton merchant from the south who had just returned from Europe discussed the measure with a representative of The Journal of Commerce yesterday. He said:

"The rider attached to the tariff bill by the Democratic caucus of the senate reported to have been submitted by Senator Clarke of Arkansas, imposes a tax of one-tenth of a cent a pound on all cotton sold for future delivery, with a proviso that should said cotton be delivered on contract against the sale for future delivery the one-tenth of a cent a pound should be refunded to the seller.

"This, at first reading, is a very innocent rider, but upon analysis it becomes a very expensive rider to the cotton producers of the south.

"The system of trading in contracts for the future delivery of cotton is one that has grown to such an extent that it enables the farmer to dispose of his cotton at times when the spinner is not buying for his immediate use and at prices that are satisfactory and enables the spinner to accept business which is offered for shipment many months in advance at a time of the year when he does not wish to put the cotton in his warehouse and at times when he is because of the quality he required to make the manufactured goods would not be available.

"There are hundreds of thousands of bales carried daily by spot merchants throughout the south, and the world, for times when it is difficult to make a sale to a spinner, and the merchant in order not to speculate, sells contracts for the future delivery of cotton on some cotton exchange to cover the cotton he has that day bought from the farmer.

"The extensive hedging operations which the merchants of the country have to do (to keep from speculating) would pay this tax of 50 cents a bale to the government, but would be governed by the market from the farmer with the tax as they do today without the tax, which is the all-important question. It does not seem logical that cotton merchants would tie themselves up with an enormous lot of spot cotton which they could sell to the mills at which the government tax would have to be paid in cash at the time the hedge sale was made on some cotton exchange and await indefinitely to see whether the cotton would be delivered on contract or the contract transferred by purchase from some other seller and the cotton shipped to the mill or whether it would be delivered on contract on some cotton exchange and the tax refunded.

Tax Inheritance, Urges Banker.

Editor Constitution: Business on such an unbusinesslike basis as the tax system of the state of Georgia must result in disaster. We are opposed to the Home and Farm Trust of Athens, Ga., for the tabulation of the census valuation of land in the different counties, and the value at which these lands are returned to the tax receivers. The extremes are:

Table with 3 columns: County, Tax Valuation, Census of 1906. Includes Hart county, Burke county, Geneva county, Camden county, Glynn county, Richmond county.

This can exist no shadow of equity in the bearing of tax burdens, where such unequal returns are allowed and accepted by the state. No better material can be contributed toward increasing the personal following of the pernicious socialists than is shown by the fact of one man paying twice as much ad valorem taxation as another.

Both of these altruistic patriotic men advocate this system of taxation, not to put a burden upon others, but because it is equitable, just and right.

MYSTERIES OF ROYALTY.

HAS RICHARD III. ABHORRENT TO LOOK UPON?

Historians have pictured Richard III. of England, as a person abhorrent to look upon. They have painted him ill-shaped, undersized, homely of both face and figure and yet it would appear that this king has been greatly maligned so far as his personal appearance is concerned, and that instead he was a soldier of fine form, some pretensions at good looks and of great personal strength and courage.

The latest edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica says: "Tradition represents Richard as deformed. It seems clear that he had some physical defect, though not so great as has been alleged. John Stow, who described him as in bodily form comely enough, extant portraits show an intellectual face characteristic of the early renaissance, but do not indicate any deformity."

Was Richard III. in reality the deformed, crooked, repulsive being such as has been described in the pages of Lancastrian chroniclers and in the immortal poems of William Shakespeare? According to Sir Thomas Moore he was "little of stature, ill-falter of limb, crook-backed, his left shoulder much higher than his right and had featured of visage."

Both Hall and Speed draw an exactly similar picture of Richard. Hollinshead also described him as "small and little of stature, his body greatly deformed, his countenance cruel, and savagely marked with freckles and deceit." His very birth is described as having been a monstrous and unnatural one.

According to Camden "of body he was crooked-backed, hook-shouldered, spry-footed and goggle-eyed. His face was little and round. His complexion was swarthy. His left arm from his birth was dry and withered. He bore the deformities of mind and body which ignorance and prejudice frequently delighted to attribute to Richard of Gloucester.

Let us turn, however, to the other side and note the difference. What a much more attractive picture is painted by contemporary writers. Neither the "Chronicles" of Vroyland, nor William of Worcester, nor Abbott Wethamsted, nor the other of the Fleetwood "Chronicle" makes allusion to any deformity in the person of Richard of Gloucester.

How another contemporary, bitterly prejudiced as he is against Richard, could judge himself with affirming that he was small of stature, having a short face and uneven shoulders, the left being lower than the right. But even Rous seems to admit that his countenance was not totally disagreeable.

His face is said to have borne a resemblance to that of his father, the Duke of York, a likeness which was alluded to by Dr. Shaw from the pulpit at Paul's Cross before a large concourse of people, Richard himself being present. According to Rev. Dr. Rich he stood before them that "the special part of his knighthood was well in all princely behaviors as in the lineaments and favor of his visage, representing the very face of his father."

Had Richard been the deformed and unattractive object he has been pictured the crowd would have broken through the gates of the city with a shout of derision. Philip de Commines, who must have often seen Richard in company with his brother, Edward, twice speaks of the latter as the most beautiful prince he had ever seen. Surely, therefore, if there had existed any remarkable countenance of knightly prowess, as well as in two kings, it would have been pointed out by the gossiping and free-speech historian.

Again Stow, who was inquisitive and curious in regard to the habits and personal appearance of Richard III., could arrive at no other conclusion than that he was "of low but especially comely, though only of low stature."

Lastly, the old Countess of Desmond, who had danced with Richard, declared to more than one of her admirers that he was the handsomest man in the room, except his brother, Edward. It is not surprising, therefore, that while Richard III. may not have been a beauty by any means, he was surely not so bad in personal attractiveness as he has been painted.

Fra Angelico. (Richard Burton in The Bellman.) They called him angel brother, for his smile Was amiable like angels, and he loved To paint them ever on the convent walls; Yea, in his very cell he made them sing And praise and weep Lord Jesus and the Maid, While all his fellow monks looked raptly on, twice fast he took for work, and ne'er began To paint an angel till he breathed a prayer; And by that prayer and from that dreaming hand Came pictures tremulous with worshippin', Till all beholding them are fain to say: "Angelico the best loved painter that ever shined through his colors and his saintly forms And shows to men a half-forgotten heaven." The flower-like name of Florence sounds twice fast, he was the painter of the state, Because he worked within her walls of fame And on the heights of lovely Fiesole Floats like a Presence his so pure renown.

Hits the "Book Trust." (DeKalb News Era.) If you move from the country to town you had better buy a book. If you move from one town to another you have to buy new school books. Also if you move from town to the country you have to buy new school books. Good business for the "book trust," but sometimes rather hard on the poor man with a large family. Can't be helped, however—"book trust" needs the money.

Governor Slaton's Big Task. (Barnesville News-Gazette.) Governor Slaton has a big task on his hands to get the finance of the state government on a better condition, but with his experience as a legislator and his ability as a business man, he will evidently make a big step in that direction during his administration. It is a worthy task.

STATE CHAMBER MEETS APPROVAL

From All Parts of the State Come Letters Indorsing the Plan of a Central Body.

Ever since the preliminary announcements of the proposed organization of a state chamber of commerce were made, there has been pouring in from all parts of the state indorsing the proposition and giving assurances of the heartiest kind of support to the movement.

The response from every part of the state being so hearty and encouraging those behind the plans for a state chamber of commerce have decided to have on the 23rd of July in Atlanta a general meeting of representative men from all over Georgia, at which time formal organization will be perfected.

There is apparently a general recognition of the fact that the chamber should be tied together in concrete form with an efficient head to the work, for the benefit of all established as early as plans can be outlined and all arrangements made.

The trade bodies of Georgia, working independently and in a haphazard manner, without any general head for the direction of the forces and energies of the state, have accomplished wonders for the state. But there has been a growing recognition of the fact that if these bodies of the state were joined together, the effort would be more than doubled.

Such a state of affairs is what is sought by the organization of the state chamber of commerce.

That there is needed a strong organization for the purpose of keeping before the nation the wonderful growth and remarkable attractions of the state is generally recognized, and in the state chamber of commerce the state would have a force at work at all times, advertising and boosting through the nation Georgia as the great state in the American union.

The keynote of the entire movement is co-operation. The bankers, the merchants and the business men of each community will be working with the farmers of that district, aiming to bring better results.

This will encourage the upbuilding of home production, yielding money for the state and for the northwest for fuel for the state.

Naturally, one asks how this magic is to be accomplished.

To start with, the local chamber will do all things incidental to the welfare of that community, such as encourage good roads and rivalry with other counties. The state chamber will perform such functions as to look after the welfare of the whole state wherein the collective strength is needed.

This state institution will be entirely divorced from private gain; its expenditures will be maintained pro rata equitably and its books and correspondence will be subject to investigation at all times by the organization itself.

So much for the organization itself. Plans for the matter in an extremely large nutshell, the state organization will do such things as induce each town of sufficient population, not already organized, to form a local trade body.

In addition to the development of manufacturing, city improvement and their allies within the scope of trade and commerce, the present system of state improvement will be reorganized as never since the days of John Wesley at Savannah.

Encourage Road Building.

Road building of a permanent kind will be encouraged. Friendly rivalries between the counties as to greatest mileage of good roads constructed in a certain time in ratio of population will be encouraged.

This keynote of rivalry will be carried throughout. By this manner, as by no other, can the public spirit of the county be aroused. Men are simply grown-up boys, some sage once remarked, and when you get the men of one county pulling against those of another, there will be between the rivalries as between two football teams on Thanksgiving day.

This rivalry will extend to the encouragement of schools.

Better health conditions will be had by requiring the physical examination of school children; by teaching the rudiments of health and its care in the rural schools; by establishing county and best sanitary regulations.

The diversity of crops will be encour-

MANY OLD VETERANS, NEEDING PENSIONS, HUNT FOR COMRADES

Three letters have come to The Constitution within the past two days from people who are hunting for the comrades of old confederate veterans in order that the aged soldiers may qualify for pensions. Such letters are coming all the time in to the newspaper office, and it often happens that comrades of fifty years ago are thus found and by this means the pensions secured.

Two letters are written by friends of the veterans, instead of by the old soldiers themselves.

"Would you kindly give a few lines of space in behalf of an old soldier of the lost cause?" writes Miss Elma Miller Slaughter, of Louisville, Ky.

"His name is John Zachariah Hedges. He is a Georgian and enlisted some years before the close of the war at a camp situated between Decatur and Atlanta. He recalls one officer named Colonel Bob Henderson and another named Captain Halsey, or Hulce. Hedges became ill and while he was sick his regiment marched away. On recovering he joined another command, either Cheatham's or Morgan's. If someone who knew him will aid him in securing his pension by writing to my address, he will receive lasting thanks." (Signed) Elma Slaughter, 34th and Western Boulevard, Louisville, Ky.

The second letter is written by W. McD. Felder, of Elko, Ga. In behalf of an old, invalid confederate veteran named James Davis, who left Macon in 1863 in General Cobb's regiment, Captain Priggett's company.

"He would like to find out if Captain Priggett or Mr. George Washington Adkison, or any of the company or regiment, is still living, and would appreciate any information," writes Mr. Felder.

The third letter is from a confederate veteran named H. K. Akins, whose address is Winnsboro, Texas. He says he belonged to Company I, of the 2d Georgia regiment, from March to August, 1864, and wants to find anybody that remembers him.

as well as the promotion of Georgia's live stock and dairy industries; the state board acting in conjunction with the county board, will induce business men of the town such as the farmers, to establish warehouses, cold storage for perishables; to establish creameries and develop a ready cash market in the towns for hay, corn, butter and eggs. Such a plan will be money throughout the year, and at the same time fortify against the approach of the cool weevil.

A book will be prepared under the direction of the state agricultural department, giving all the material facts of Georgia which an incoming settler would desire to know and giving it only by county.

Practical Advertising.

A fund will be created to keep the name of Georgia in the large northern and northwestern periodicals, inviting the readers to write for literature. The wishes of the enquirers and furnished the local board of each section which is thus concerned, and such boards may take up the matter with the enquirer direct, with a view of securing him as an investor, or settler, or both.

The governing body of the state institution will probably be composed of one member from each congressional district, which shall meet bi-monthly; this meeting place will be in different points throughout the state, as Rome, Augusta, Savannah, Macon, Albany, Columbus and Atlanta, so that during each year all parts of the state will be visited by the meetings, where the various local bodies in that particular section by governing board may meet with the enquirer direct. This will enable the organization to work for every section of the state impartially.

This board will co-operate and work in harmony at all times with the representative of the state experimental station, the various farmers' institutes, demonstration work, boys' corn clubs, girls' canning clubs, etc.

One of the most important functions of the board will be the encouraging of better marketing conditions for cotton and other staple products.

Big Georgia men with the interest of the state at heart are back of this movement. L. Moore, president of the Atlanta chamber of commerce, is one of its heartiest backers. Charles J. Haden, chairman of the committee on agriculture, is also back of it. The state chamber of commerce, and the prominent Atlanta lawyers, are doing every spare minute to its development.

Many Letters Received.

Mr. Haden has received hundreds of letters not only from citizens in every section of Georgia, but from over the United States, well approving of a movement which is destined to place Georgia at the forefront in agricultural pursuits. Sentence extracts from such letters read as follows:

"I will encourage the agricultural regeneration of the state." Joseph D. Davis, Albany, Ga.

"A campaign such as you propose is the best way to get the state of Georgia before the nation as a success story of opportunities." G. L. Williams, capitalist, of St. Louis, Mo.

"The concerted effort of resourceful men for the purpose of establishing facilities for analysis, research and study of all agencies for the state's good should be met with success."—Marvus A. Bierman, New Jersey state chamber of commerce.

"I congratulate the citizens of Georgia on what they are doing for the state."—Horrendus, Geneva chamber of commerce, Geneva, N. Y.

"You can count on the Waycross board of trade to assist you in every movement."—W. E. Ransom, president of the Waycross board of trade.

"This plan under consideration should be fully effective and very successful."—Hugh G. Keegan, capitalist, of Fort Wayne, Ind.

"The Morgan county chamber has evolved into the one flexible tool by which the true cohesive progress of the state to its God-given destiny can be accomplished—the county chamber fitted to be joined to like organizations in a state-wide federation."—C. G. Rader, general secretary of Morgan county chamber of commerce.

R. J. Nelson, a prominent operator of Chicago, wrote to Mr. Haden: "You people in Georgia have taken hold of the problem of development on the right track. There is a rich future for the state chamber of commerce."

The citizens of south Georgia especially have rallied to the call. Replies to the hundreds of letters of cooperation have poured in. And when the meeting of county representatives is held on the 23rd of this month, the success of Georgia's state chamber of commerce will be assured.

History of the Presbyterian Church in Georgia. By Rev. James Stacy, D.D. Among the religious publications that have attracted wide attention in Georgia, especially since the recent Presbyterian assemblies in Atlanta, is the "History of the Presbyterian Church in Georgia," by Rev. James Stacy, D.D.

No preacher who ever lived and labored in Georgia was better known or had more friends than Dr. Stacy. For 43 years he was pastor of the Presbyterian church at Newnan, and for 23 years he was stated clerk of the synod of Georgia. And it was at the request of the synod, in session at Griffin in 1895, that Dr. Stacy assumed the difficult task of preparing a history of the growth of Presbyterianism in Georgia.

Dr. Stacy's work traces the history of the church to the very first Presbyterians who landed in Georgia, as far back as 1733. They were a band of Scottish Highlanders, with their pastor, Rev. John McLeod, who was Georgia's first Presbyterian minister. In very engaging narrative form the history is then traced through its many stages to the present-day organization and work of the synod of Georgia. The various chapters go into the detailed history of the separate presbyteries in the state, while the internal development of Presbyterianism in the cities of Atlanta, Savannah, Augusta, Macon and Columbus receives also particular description.

Of particular interest are the chapters devoted to religious education in Georgia, containing a full and vivid history of Oglethorpe university. Owing to the fact that a concerted plan is now on foot toward the re-establishing of Oglethorpe, at Swyer Lake, near Atlanta, the history contains a most interesting data concerning the checkered career of this university, which "rose with great promise—ephemeral as the opening flower—but only for a season, for like a burning meteor it blazed for time only and then went out in the darkness of night."

In the recent publication of this remarkable history, great credit is due to the Rev. C. I. Stacy, of Elberton, a nephew of the beloved Dr. Stacy, who since his uncle's death has labored faithfully in completing and editing the work.

The Jews of Today. (Die Juden Der Gegenwart). By Arthur Ruppin. Translated by Margary Bentwich. With an introduction by Dr. Joseph Jacobs, who says: "An interesting, if not happy, quoting the lines from Sir John Seeley with reference to the Jews who have had the unfortunate knack of attracting the world's attention to themselves for the last 2,000 years. Indeed, the modern Jew is an anomalous enough, but it is his attention of the world. He is always raising a whole Cadmean crop of questions, economic, demographic, religious, social, eugenical, even political. Are the Jews of today direct descendants of the Israelites? Or are they a new race? Is there a specific Jewish culture differing from the civilizations of the nation among whom they live? Is there a Jewish music, a Jewish art? What is the cause of the Jewish superiority of the Jewish intellect, if there be such superiority? These are but samples of questions that have been raised in our times about Jews, and still lack definite answers."

Dr. Jacobs very interestingly discusses the points raised in this book by Dr. Ruppin which will be appreciated both by the Jews and others, as well as this wonderful work of the author's, who, after studying law and economics, entered the Prussian state service. He has written upon the "Theory of Value," expounded by Thunson, and on Darwinism and sociology, etc. He was the founder and first editor of a popular Jewish work of eight volumes, has helped to found a bureau of Jewish statistics, etc., so that he writes on matters Jewish with the fullest knowledge of all the information that can be obtained.

Dr. Ruppin has been a resident of Palestine for a number of years, and is, therefore, in a position to write a solution of the problem, which he now proposes in the above volume. (Henry Holt & Co., New York city.)

This is the fifth series of the lectures of John Calvin McNaughton before the University of North Carolina. The author treats his subject from the standpoint of the sociologist rather than from that of the psychologist, and this is what gives this little volume its distinctive character.

By the will of the late John Calvin McNaughton a course of lectures was established at the University of North Carolina whose object should be to show the mutual bearing of science and theology upon each other. (Yale University Press, 225 Fifth avenue, New York, or New Haven, Conn.)

Experiments in Government and the Essentials of the Constitution. By Elihu Root. Published by the Princeton University Press, Princeton. his imperial majesty to stay at Buckingham palace. The invitation has not been accepted. King George, of course, knew it would not be, though he was bound to give it just as the Kaiser was bound by the etiquette that exists among monarchs to inform King George of his intention of coming to England...

The Kaiser is going to stay at the German embassy in London and will become the guest of the German ambassador and so relieve his royal cousin of the trouble of acting as his host, a ceremony that would be as tedious and disagreeable to the Kaiser as it would be to King George.

The king and queen of Norway constantly come to England, but they are always guests of Queen Alexandra, either at Sandringham or at Marlborough house. They have not been at Buckingham palace since the death of King Edward. The queen of Norway, like her brother well enough, though illiterate (as her majesty has been called by her relations since she was a little girl) never liked him as well as she did the Duke of Clarence. But it is not only King George who is the cause of the Norway monarchs not going to Buckingham palace...

When the Princess May arrived at Sandringham she was greeted by all the members of the royal family with the exception of Princess Maud, who had remained in her room in spite of her father's and mother's wishes to the contrary. Later the Princess May went up to her future sister-in-law's room to receive her congratulations.

There is one aspect of the absence of royal visitors from the English court that, when properly understood, reveals King George and his consort in the light of rather clever economists, and shows how they cleverly foiled even the sharp Lloyd George. In 1910, when parliament was called upon to arrange the various salaries and allowances for the crown, Lloyd George stated in the house of commons that King George suggested that if the king returned to his majesty in future should pay out of his own private purse all the expenses of entertaining foreign monarchs at the English court...

ROYAL PERSONAGES DEIFIED BY BRITONS

Most Unmitigated Bunkum Is Swallowed by the General Public.

London July 12.—Of one thing, anyway, does the public over here never tire, and that is the deification of royal personages. Discovering that what they have been told about the accomplishments of one of them was the most unmitigated bunkum does not discourage them in the least, they are quiet as ready to swallow more fiction about another. One is reminded of this queer obsession by a pertinent paragraph of "What the King Reads," in a supposedly literary weekly. "Unlike his father," announces the writer, "King George is a great reader and uses all his spare moments to keep in touch with all that is best in modern literature. Historical works interest him greatly, and it is needless to say that he pays special attention to the study of the life of his father. He also likes to read about industrial developments, and he pays some attention to the march of scientific knowledge, though he is no mechanic. Sir Henry's biography described him as 'practically a non-reader.' One remembers being assured, before the present sovereign mounted the throne, that the king 'uses all his spare moments to keep in touch with all that is best in modern literature.' We have his own word for it that the king reads a chapter of the Bible daily, and I have heard that on the rare occasions when he picks up any other book, he likes it to be a good, rousing story or derring-do. His late father was said to enjoy being read to, the more highly seasoned the better.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL FACTORY RECONCILES CAPITAL AND LABOR. BY STEPHEN ARDEN.

DETECTIVE HARRY SCOTT'S HUNCH—THRILLING STORY OF HOW IT SECURED JAMES CONLEY'S CONFESSION

By Britt Craig.
Have you ever had a hunch that there wasn't anybody around the table that held a higher hand than your Jacks over tens and consequently you shoved a 'blue' to the mahogany with the result that every hostile hand went to the discard?
Have you ever had a hunch that it was going to rain and you pulled in the rugs and took the clothes off the line and let down the windows just in time to see the elements express themselves in a downpour?
Have you ever had a hunch of any kind—one of those real, undeniable inner promptings that chases round and round in your bonnet and worries the life out of you and invariably forces you to do something that you really intended doing but about which you were sorely undecided?
If you're human you have.

Detective Harry Scott had one about Jim Conley, the negro sweeper in the Phagan mystery. It was one of those irresistible hunches that buzz about like a June bug. He took it for its word with the result that he found the key that is predicted to unlock the secret of Atlanta's most hideous murder.
Detectives are very normal beings. They have hunches like the weakest of us. They're superstitious, too. You can't find a single one that will walk under a ladder or fail to knock wood when he brags about himself.
A hunch is one of the most common of human afflictions. It is the very essence of a frailty that affects every normal somebody. The very fact that it is a weakness requires a nerve of steel and backbone of similar fortitude to play one to the limit like Detective Scott played his.

Good detectives, like genius, are utterly human. Genius frequently stalks about in his shirt sleeves with out a slave and wearing suspenders. It has been known to chew tobacco and cuss volubly. Sometimes, it has a red nose and a thirst. It can sleep as contentedly on Decatur street as on Peachtree.
Detectives Very Human.
A good detective is so absolutely human that he generally chews tobacco, doesn't care where he spits it, possesses a vocabulary of profanity that is surprising and brightens up sardonically only when he falls in love or his wife makes him.

Detective Scott, although he doesn't chew tobacco not since he was 16, at least—or allow his profanity to interfere with his knowledge of perfectly good English. Is so keenly human that he had a premonition that Jim Conley knew something about the death of Mary Phagan.
While the investigation was at its zenith, the negro lay in police headquarters, neglected and sorely in need of a bath. Scott, casting about for someone on whom to cast suspicion in order to convince himself that he wasn't prejudiced against the white prisoner, was guided by the hunch to Conley.

He had no reason to suspect the sweeper other than the fact that Jim had been caught washing his shirt in order to appear presentable at the inquest. Nothing but the hunch pointed Conleywards.
He tried to figure that the negro was guilty and there was nothing to figure on. He tried to figure he was innocent, and the hunch figured for him. It pointed to Conley like that unanny feeling which irresistibly draws you over on the right hand side of the street on the way home of a dark night when the left side is really the nearest.
He weighed as heavily as remembered wrong. It tortured him of nights and made his days miserable. Conley knows something, it whispered. Pick it out of him or go back to selling fish.

Finally, the Pinkerton man set out with Detective John Black, of police headquarters, to prove that either the hunch was a liar or he had always considered as good as he wasn't a detective as good as he had always considered as illiterate—couldn't even write his name, and as this seemed the only vulnerable spot in his story, Scott told him he probably was a liar.

At least, it was the only thing about the negro that could plausibly be discredited. On the theory that every negro who owns a wife and home as Conley owned, the possession of a nature bought on the installment plan, the two teeth cast about for some contract to which the black man could possibly have attached his signature.
They visited third-rate furniture stores, business houses and jewelry shops. The search was fruitless. The signature of Conley was as missing as the secret of the sphinx. Scott was prepared to abandon his hunch on the doorsteps of failure, when a man with a thirst—took them to the vicinity of a place known as Five Points.
Providence—and not the bouncer—urged a gentleman in Panama hat and white shoes, and with the oily air of a collector, gently through the doorway. He stepped to the sidewalk and recognized Black. He greeted and shook a disconsolate hand.

Wanted to See Conley.
"You've got a nigger down at police station. I'd certainly like to see," he announced.
"What nigger?" said Black, promoting conversation.
"That Conley nigger!"
Something bright and dazzling flashed through Scott's hunch-ridden brain as he noticed the batch of bills carefully folded in the person's coat pocket.

The hunch told him to collar the oily individual and search his batch of bills. He did, and the oily one's consent. A single glance revealed a contract issued to Jim Conley. A second glance revealed the negro's name, scrawled in a characteristic hand all over the signer's line.
Scott's hunch had been fulfilled. It had guided him to a specimen of the black sweeper's handwriting—two words in barely legible script that proved the negro a liar three ways from breakfast. It had since proved the means of lifting the Phagan secret from the mire of mystery.

Detective Harry Scott (in Panama hat), of the Pinkertons, who played the hunch that Jim Conley, the negro, knew something of the girl's murder. The accompanying figure is Detective John Black, of police headquarters, whose work in co-operation with the Pinkerton man did much to solve the crime. Great dependence will be put in their testimony at the coming trial of Leo Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan.

The contract was signed by Conley more than twelve months ago for a watch he had bought from a jewelry firm. It is now in possession of the solicitor general, and likely will be produced as evidence in the coming trial of Leo Frank.

The Third Degree.
What followed its discovery was the most successful third degree ever operated at police headquarters. Scott and Black showed the signature to the solicitor general, detective chief and Chief Beavers.

Then, they showed it to Conley. It was on a Sunday afternoon. Police station was dull and drowsy and a sleepy atmosphere pervaded the building. Even the inevitable newspaper reporter was absent. Scott and Black took the prisoner into the little 6x8 "sweat box" and sat him where the light could play full on his face.

Scott locked the door and threw the key over the transom. Black pulled off his coat, let down his suspenders and put cigarettes conveniently near. Conley blinked at the light, and wondered what was coming off.

Scott pulled a mysterious something from his pocket and laid it on the table. It was a folded bit of paper, and he smiled significantly as it left his hand. Conley grimaced and shifted a leg.

"Well, Jim, we've got the dead-wood on you. Better cough up and tell us something."
"Honest, white folks, I swear 'fore God and High heaven I don't know a thing." His plea was pathetic in its apparent sincerity.

"But we know better. The quicker you tell the better off you'll be. Kick in, Jim—kick in. It's the best for you."
"I can't kick," protested the negro. "I ain't got nothin' to kick for."
Scott stepped to the table and pointed at the folded slip.

"You see that? It's enough to hang you. You don't know what it is, and you couldn't guess in a year. It's a dead-wood, nigger. It's dead-wood. You'd better kick through or we'll pull it out of you."
The negro studied the slip intently. He was sorely puzzled. Great drops of sweat rolled down his face and his fingers twitched nervously. His very air betrayed guilt.

"Listen," said Scott. "Can you write?"
"Now, sir, I can't. I never could."
"Will you swear it?"
"I shore will!"
"Do you know the penalty for perjury?"
"Now, sir—what is it?"
"Twenty years in the gang—maybe more."
"What's perjury?"
"Swearing a lie."
"But I ain't goin' to swear no lie."
"You will if you swear you can't write. Here! Look at this!"
The Pinkerton man unfolded the mysterious slip. It was the contract. The negro noted the signature with a betraying flash of recognition.
"How could you sign this if you couldn't write?"
Conley was wordless for minutes. He stared dumbly out the window and twisted his fingers. Suddenly, he exclaimed:
"White folks, I'm a liar!"
"Good! We thought so all the time. Now, we want you to write a bit."

The sleuths produced pen and paper. Conley was put at the table to write his name.
"Now, write the alphabet."
He wrote the A, B, C's in huge, scrawling figures.
"Write this: 'That long, tall, black negro did this by himself.'"
Conley winced slightly as he evidently recalled the words of the tragic note found beside the body.

He wrote, slowly and deliberately with apparently no effort to disguise his script:
"That long, tall, black negro did this boy himself."
The detectives, peering eagerly over the negro's shoulder, noted with satisfaction the misspelling of

DAILY LIFE OF AN ATLANTA FIREMAN

Just off Peters street, when the porch of a burning house caved in upon him.
R. M. Fisher, of Engine House No. 4, died in discharge of his duty July 20, 1908, at Courtland and Gilmer streets, when he was hurled from a ladder before the eyes of hundreds of terror-stricken spectators.

The memory of the remaining two victims is fresh in the minds of everyone.
It was in the early morning of last February 26 that the fire department was called to the corner of Whitehall street and Trinity avenue. There was no fire, but a building undergoing repairs was crumbling in upon the sleeping occupants.

The ladders were hastily run up to the windows, and the first man to mount one of these ladders was J. J. Gillespie. Several men followed him. Shriek of Terror.
Suddenly there was a wailing shriek of terror from the people below. The firemen leaped—all but Gillespie, who was too high upon the ladder to escape.
"My God, he's gone!" moaned his comrades as they covered their eyes to avoid the horrible sight.

The avalanche of brick crumbled and wavered and crashed down upon brave Gillespie before he had the remotest chance of escape.
It was only two weeks later that the department responded to a call at Washington and Glenn streets. A home was burning. Shortly after the firemen entered the house there were cries for help in the darkness of the second floor. Men dashed to the rescue, but the cries continued, and Chief Cummings himself was first to guess the real cause of the trouble.
He found the switch which cut off the electric current, but too late to save the life of Charles Dougherty, who was electrocuted by volts which passed through his body for several minutes.

The people of Atlanta are highly appreciative of the heroism of the men who have died for them. They know that no man hath greater love than to lay down his life for another, and have never failed to respond liberally to help the relatives of the firemen who have died in discharge of their duty.
The Humorous Side.
The incidents in the life of a fireman, however, are not without their humorous side.

With thousands of dollars worth of property literally going up in smoke many a fireman has been pleaded with to risk his life to save some lady's pet canary or poodle dog!

On Christmas eve last, there was a fire in a negro rooming house on Peters street. Chief Cummings was there superintending the fight against the flames. Personally he went through the house and aroused the occupants. Just when he thought every body was out a man rushed to him madly and cried, "Chief, there's a man asleep in a back room on the second floor!"
Quick as a flash the chief was back in the smoke and flames. He found the man and hauled him from his bed.
"Just a minute, boss," pleaded the negro. "There's something under this mattress what I's jes' bleeged 'ter have."

The chief had seen people before pleading for a chance to rescue the savings of many years' hard work and granted the poor negro his request.
The negro drew from under the mattress—not his savings, but a bottle of beer!

The fire department is rendering excellent service with the apparatus it has, but Chief Cummings realizes that horse apparatus is rapidly becoming behind the times and inadequate to protect a city of the size of Atlanta. His department is outgrowing the methods of yesterday, and he urges that the city buy as soon as possible automobile apparatus, such as has already been installed in the new stations in Inman Park and West End.

"It is imperative," he says, "that we have the best possible apparatus to protect the great improvements which are the pride of the city and the wonder of the entire country. The West End station is a step in the right direction. The apparatus is up-to-date and efficient. The fire house is the most modern in the country. It is as near like a home as it is possible to make a fire station—and, after all, firemen are human and need the comforts that such a station as No. 14 in West End offers. We should beware lest we fall behind the times."

And thus has Chief Cummings, in his thirty-six years of service, outlived the life of the organization which he helped to create—and, without a moment's rest, is still the youngest of them!

"But I ain't guilty. I don't know a thing about them notes or about that killing—honest, white folks. Can't you believe a word I say?"
"Now, Jim, we wouldn't believe you on the gallows. You tell so many lies."
Black broke in.
"Listen, Jim, you don't want to go to the scaffold. It's hell to be slung at the end of a rope to God knows where. You're going, though, just as sure's hell's hot, and still heatin' there ain't but one way out of it—

"There ain't a jury in the world—uncork and tell all you know. Even a nigger jury—that'd believe you didn't kill this girl. They'd hang you or lynch you—likely Lynchin'."

A LITTLE STORY OF A BIG MAN FROM THE COUNTRY

This is a story of how a farm boy, born in the foothills of North Carolina, came to Atlanta and made good in a big way in less than five years.
His name is Lindsey Hopkins.
At the age of 34 years he is voluntarily retiring from the presidency of the largest auto sales concern in the south, and will hang out a shingle with the modest inscription, "Private Banker."

In rounding out a big business success at an age when most business men are only beginning to cut their wisdom teeth, Lindsey Hopkins has followed some rules which are amazingly simple.
"I got my philosophy of life at the plow handles," says Mr. Hopkins.
"When my old daddy put me to work up in Rockingham county, N. C., he gave me two pieces of advice. Both were good. But looking back, I am satisfied that neither would have been of any real value without the other. It is the combination that wins. The first piece of advice was to work hard, and the second was to keep my eyes open. I have been trying to do both ever since.

"My advice to any ambitious young man who wants to make a substantial success is be a plodder, but not be a mule. Plod with your head up. You can't get ahead very fast, even by the hardest work, unless you look ahead. It is all right to concentrate your whole soul and energy on sweeping a floor or plowing a furrow—if you know why you are doing it. But nothing is more pathetic than to see a fellow who is a good worker so absorbed in a little two-by-four job that he can't see anything beyond it."

Lindsey Hopkins was probably the first man in the south to recognize the true significance of the coming of the automobile. While older and more experienced heads were still regarding the horseless carriage as a fad, he knew that it had come to stay, and he acted accordingly.
But the first "job" he ever had was as printer's devil on The Greensboro Patriot. Before that time, however, he had developed on the farm a sturdy capacity for hard work. He received a liberal amount of schooling, going to the public schools in winter and working on the farm in the summer, not because he had to, but because work came natural to him. Later he took a limited course in the University of North Carolina, You've got yourself in a pickle, and there ain't but one way out—kick in. Tell all about it."

"I don't know a thing, boss. I swear I don't. If I did, I'd tell you the truth—the whole truth, so he'p me God!"
Black's tone had been so convincing that the negro had been left in a quandary. The detectives comprehended it.
Scott said:
"We'll give you a day to think it over."

With which, they transferred the prisoner to a dark and desolate cell in the prison downstairs, locked him in and left him alone to his thoughts and a vivid outlook of the scaffold.
While the detectives jubiled in knowledge of the marvelous development, they quizzed Conley for seven following days trying to exact a confession. It was locked firm in his bosom. He stoutly maintained the original story.

It was the following Saturday—the day that veteran reporters declare was the newest in Atlanta's history. Beside the famous Felder-Lanford dictagraph row, Frank was indicted, developments came thick and fast from many quarters, and other things were happening that kept an army of news-gatherers the busiest of their careers.
At daybreak, Detective Black was summoned by Conley to the negro's cell.

"I've got something to tell you, boss," he said. Black locked himself in with the prisoner and Conley began to unburden himself of his first tale of complicity in the Phagan crime.
"I wrote those notes," he admitted. "Mr. Frank had me write 'em. I didn't know what he wanted with them, and he gave me some money to do it. I'd a told you sooner, but I thought he'd send me more money for not tellin'." I hoped some of his friends 'd get me out."
Dorsey is notified.

The solicitor was notified immediately. The grand jury was being presented with evidence against the suspected Frank. Conley's confession was submitted in the meanwhile. Thirty minutes later the famous bill of indictment was drawn.
Although he had eeked a wonderful yarn from the negro, Scott's hunch failed to subside. It buzzed about in his head like a circular saw and got frantic at times. It told him the negro knew even more than he had confessed.

The detective, by this time, considered the hunch productive and trustworthy. He set out on new lines. He faced the negro with a daily accusation of guilt and a picture of his predicted doom. It had a satisfactory effect. Conley grew weak and lost his appetite. He slept little and a nervous and haunted look crept into his eyes.

While the Pinkerton man assumed an attitude of hostility toward the black sweeper, Detective Black affected sympathy, as per plot, and bought the prisoner drinks and pies and sandwiches and consolation. Between the two fires, Jim inclined toward the headquarters man and gradually the crust of his reticence began to crack.
"Mister Black," he said one day, "you've been mighty good to me, and some day I'm going to be the same to you—whenever I get the chance."
Black carried the news to Scott. Scott went directly to Conley's cell and drew a masterful picture of a hanging at daybreak. He declared that efforts already were being made to indict him for the actual murder, and told that officials of the pencil factory had openly accused the negro of the crime.

Scott's visit and attitude left the negro in a state of fear. Black reached his cell shortly after the Pinkerton man had departed. He played upon the suspect's emotion. He pretended sympathy and offered to see the black carried safely through the 'plot' against him.
Finally, when Black and Scott and headquarters had become convinced that the negro was ripe for confessing, he was carried into Chief Lanford's office. He faced a group of detectives—shirts off, sleeves rolled and a prevailing widespread willingness to wade in.
The sleuths cajoled and coerced. They warned and threatened. They did everything that detective ingenuity could suggest. Conley seemed adamant. He stuck to his story and never wavered. He was worked into a heat, a boiling, bubbling heat and left thereon to think things over.

His questioners stepped into the hallway outside and compared notes. A newsboy arrived with an afternoon newspaper. Glaring headlines announced that pencil factory authorities had publicly charged Conley with murdering Mary Phagan and of trying to shift the crime to their superintendent.
Scott again had an idea. It was born in a dazzling brilliance that was overwhelming.
"Here, boy," he called to the newsie. "Take one of those papers to that nigger in the room." The boy did as directed. Conley was given the paper containing the accusation. What happened to his emotions isn't on police record. No one knows but Conley. The result, though, is a gilded page in police history.
When Scott and his fellow-examiners returned to the room, the negro was staring blankly at the headline, perspiration streaming and fingers trembling. He glanced at the headquarters men with an air of weak resignation.
"Listen, Mr. Black," he said to the detective, "I'd like to talk to you privately, please, sir."

Black was left with the suspect, closeted in the chief's office. Thirty minutes later he emerged, a smile flooding his face, success in his soul and his mind filled with Conley's startling confession of complicity in disposing of Mary Phagan's body in assistance to his superintendent.
It was the second conflicting story he had had. The first was of having only written the murder notes. It has been replaced by his latter and more incriminating tale, to which he has made a definite and sworn statement.
The prosecution maintains that this last admission solves the Phagan case. It pins the crime conclusively to one of two sources—Frank or the negro.
One or the other will be proved at the coming trial—the trial for which an entire state awaits with unprejudiced eagerness—the amazing result of a hunch, a pure, simple hunch, one of the many frailties that affect us all. But a frailty few of us can resist. A frailty which Harry Scott, in a flight of fancy, analyzes thusly:
"The God of Good Luck's Gift—A whisper of the conscience, To work a wonder with."

and formed a life-long habit of reading good books, and later became a traveling salesman for the Atlantic Refining company, and as such became known throughout the south. He was made special representative of the company in Europe. This, however, was in the nature of a preliminary to Mr. Hopkins' real business career. It was when he converted himself with the automobile business that he began to be recognized throughout the south as one of the young captains of industry of this section.
In 1905 he demonstrated the practicality of the automobile for cross country traveling. He started from Atlanta in a one-lung Cadillac, and successfully reached Greensboro, N. C., after a seasonal trip over roads which had never been traversed before by a self-propelled vehicle. It was a sort of paragonically conducted "hidden tour," the first in automobles history. The ride has been celebrated throughout the Carolinas by Colonel A. Furber's "Ride of Paul Revere, Jr."

In 1906, through a special concession of the Atlantic Refining company, he became agent for three big motor cars—a side issue. Almost overnight he became the greatest auto sales agent in southern auto history. In 1908 he turned down a salary of $12,000 a year and made his first contract for the sale of fifty cars during the season of 1908-9. Since that time Mr. Hopkins has sold 3,313 automobiles in southern territory, involving a net cash transaction of $5,000,000.

At the same time Mr. Hopkins has taken a leading part in the building up of many other southern industries. He was one of the half-dozen men who broke together the three big North Carolina insurance companies and merged them into one strong and successful organization. He is heavily interested in banking and cotton mills and owns thousands of acres of farm land in south Georgia. In Atlanta, where he recently purchased P. L. Seely's palatial home on Peachtree road, he is interested in banking, real estate, life insurance, cotton and other enterprises. He is also heavily interested in California oil fields.

He took up the aeroplane just as he took up the automobile, formed an aviation exhibition company. Two years ago, purchased the first Curtiss biplane ever sold to an individual and directed successful exhibitions in all parts of the country, and if aviation ever attains a practical and commercial basis Lindsey Hopkins will have a hand in it.

While in appearance and achievement a typical example of the successful and intensely modern business man, Mr. Hopkins is a living refutation of the popular belief indulged in by so many people who have not made money, that a man who achieves material success must do it at the expense of blunting his finer sensibilities and his power to enjoy things that are truly great and beautiful.

Judging by Appearances.
"No the shoe is on the wrong foot—absolutely on the wrong foot," he declared. "I was born in the state of North Dakota. He was arguing the Democratic side. He was arguing the Democratic side."
"Yes," he continued, "our friends are as mistaken in this matter as the little lady from the middle west who on her return from a winter on the Riviera, was recounting to a friend the delights of Nice.
"Have you ever visited Monte Carlo?" her friend asked.
"No, I didn't," she replied. "Pop called on him, though. But judging from pop's disappointed look when he got back to the hotel, I guess Monte must have been out."

LACK OF $35,000
MAY LOSE $100,000

Tech Must Erect New Building or Lose Large Amount of Very Valuable Equipment.

It is not often that a $100,000 gift is turned down on account of the absence of a plan to keep the gift, but such will necessarily be the action of the Georgia School of Technology if the Georgia legislature refuses to donate $35,000 for the purpose of erecting a power station plant at the Tech in which to keep approximately a hundred thousand dollars' worth of the very latest and most modern machinery which has been offered to the school with the only condition that the appliances shall be properly housed.

In view of the fact that the board of trustees of the University of Georgia has decided not to ask for any additional appropriations, but only for a sufficient maintenance fund for the various state institutions, the School of Technology is faced by an enigma, the solution to which has not been solved. Of course after the action of the trustees the Tech will not ask for the necessary appropriation to erect the new building which they had expected to receive from the present legislature, and the only way to get the amount will be to have it thrust upon them by the general assembly of the state without making any pleas or prayers. The millenium has not yet arrived and the legislature has never been known to seize upon opportunities to make unrequested donations to anybody or anything.

The situation as it now exists is pitiable. The school now has the same power plants which it erected when the attendance at the institute was only one-fourth of the present enrollment and building, machinery and every other facility of the station is now outgrown, out-of-date and entirely inadequate for a position at the Tech, which has made such brilliant advances in the last ten years in every line of instruction.

Plans Already Prepared.
So certain were the authorities of the Tech that the state would be willing to pay $35,000 for a building with all the modern equipment of the best technical schools in the country, for which the other state technical institutes would not have spent over $100,000, that authorities proceeded to have the plans drawn for the proper housing of the machinery which has been offered to them gratis.

J. V. Stephens, a graduate of the Tech and a consulting engineer of New York, drafted the complete plans for the new building, giving approximately $5,000 worth of his time to his alma mater. These plans were supervised by the technical committee of New York and Railway Company, of which George G. Crawford, the first graduate of Tech, is president. They were also revised by the engineers of the Willis-Fabcock Company of New York, and other companies and are absolutely the very latest word in the question of power stations.

The plans call for a building of brick with cement floors and steel roof and absolutely fireproof. The length of the structure is 115 feet and the proposed location is directly behind the present textile building, where a site was purchased for the erection of the power station two years ago. The site is peculiarly adapted to the erection of such a plant and it is so situated that invisible coal bunkers could be constructed which would hold 2,000 tons of coal. The most efficient method of handling both the coal and the ashes would be installed.

"In fact," stated President K. G. Matheson, "an engineer of International reports has told me that it would be the most efficient and complete station in America." Offered by Manufacturing Concerns. The presidents of six great multi-millionaire manufacturing companies have offered the machinery for the steam generator and this equipment would amount to $60,000. Other concerns have practically promised between thirty and forty thousand dol-

Suggests More Normal Courses In Church Colleges for Girls

By Dumas Malone, Professor of Bible and Education, Andrew College, Cuthbert, Ga.

The most hopeful of modern educational tendencies is the "back to normal" movement. With the growing consciousness on the part of educators that the school must prepare for life has come a marked growth on the part of those institutions which prepare for some specific phase or phases of life. Witness the growth of the technical and normal schools.

He is no wild fanatic who says that boys and girls ought to be prepared by the schools for that work which they are to do in the world. If the majority of the graduates of the woman's colleges teach, whether in the school or in the homes over which they preside, the colleges ought to prepare them to teach. If most women have intimate relations with a home, they ought to learn something of how a home should be ordered and directed.

This feeling that the girls of today ought to receive such definite training to be the women of tomorrow has led to the instituting in our colleges of courses with this aim in view. And it has led, furthermore, to the establishment of a distinct class of institutions which are usually called normal and industrial schools.

Competition Is Growing.
For one thing there is now considerable competition between church schools, even between those belonging to the same denomination. This is inevitable where institutions stress the same line of work. To be specific, should they all aim at the performance of the classical college requirements, there would be of necessity considerable competition between the three Methodist colleges for women in Georgia—Westlyan, LaGrange and Andrew. And, indeed, there has been such competition in the past. In view of the fact that these institutions are backed by the same church and that competition would tend to engender ill feeling in the denomination, and in view of the fact that they have largely the same ideas and purposes, such competition would be exceedingly unfortunate. Doubtless similar instances might be found among the colleges of other churches.

Another reason why it would be advisable for the church to enter this field of education is that there is now more demand for this type of training than the state is able to supply. The number of girls who are turned away each year by the Georgia Normal and Industrial college at Milledgeville is proof enough of this. Not only is there now this great demand, but there is going to be each year a greater one. Training for service in the home is yet in the early stages of its development and the training of women for self-sustaining work is yet rather a novelty in our state at any rate.

There are, furthermore, many parents who desire for their daughters the atmosphere of a church school, and who, yet, wish for them training of the type which I have indicated. As it is now, there is no school which will satisfy them. If a girl is sent to a state school, she will miss that special religious atmosphere and special religious attention which her parents wish for her; if she is sent to a church-school, she will miss that special vocational training which they wish her to receive. So it seems reasonable to believe that a normal and industrial college conducted by a religious denomination would make a distinct appeal to a large class of patrons and pupils.

Tails Grafted on Fishes by Japs.
(From The New York Press.)
Among the many interesting arts in which the Japanese excel is that of the making of fish-tails. Almost every one has seen the bush-tailed goldfish, with its four, five and sometimes more of the wavy tails, but it is not generally known that most of them are not its own.

When the little goldfish are very young, their flesh is as clear as glass, so that one can see every bone in their tiny bodies. At this time the few that are born with two or more tails are put by themselves, and then a queer-looking old Jap, with a great magnifying glass fastened in front of his eye and was sharp tools handy, reaches down under the water and cuts off the tails of the plain little fish, and then three or four of these tails are joined on to the backbone where the one was cut off and fastened there with tiny bandages until they grow fast.

The Japanese, who are very skillful in queer things of this kind, grow the finest goldfish in the world and it is a very good business for very fine fish of the kind often bring as much as $300 to $500, and one sold not long ago for $1,000.

A DEMOCRATIC, CHRISTIAN HOME SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

The grounds of the college comprise twelve acres, and are attractively located at one of the highest points in Cuthbert.

The three buildings are modern and comfortable, being equipped with steam heat, waterworks, electric lights, electric bells and inter-communicating telephones. $20,000 has been expended within the past year for improvements.

Cuthbert is 526 feet above the sea level, the highest point in South Georgia, and the healthfulness of the town is exceptional. The health record of the college household is almost perfect.

The courses of study in literary and special departments are in keeping with modern tendencies in education, and are under the direction of teachers who are thoroughly qualified for their work. Courses in home economics and normal training are a feature. The officers and teachers number 17.

The cost is low, ranging from $178 to $196 for board, tuition and general fees. Additional charge is made for music, art and expression.

The president, his family, and all except one of the teachers live in the college home. All know all the pupils by name and take a personal interest in each. Since the boarding patronage is limited to 120, real home life is possible.

The spirit of the school is democratic and the atmosphere is Christian in a true sense. It is a wholesome place for a girl to live and grow in.

Brenau South's most Progressive College

BY Mary Carter Winter

BRENAU TENNIS GIRL

leges of the south, and is steadily advancing along the most progressive educational lines.

Its growth has been phenomenal, but so logical that needed modifications of ideals and customs have been made naturally and without radical changes.

Brenau bases its claim to leadership on several distinctive innovations.

It was one of the first colleges for women to recognize the need of training young girls for their special duties as women, and led the movement for comprehensive education in domestic science and related studies by accrediting such studies among the regular college courses.

As early as 1898 Brenau had adopted the system of self-government in the student body—a system which is now being recognized by many other colleges, both for women and men; and which, since its establishment, has proven most successful.

Brenau's unit system, originated several years ago, is peculiarly advantageous, as it enables girls of varying mental endowment to complete the college course within the time best suited to their needs. Those who are especially gifted or mature may finish the prescribed work within three years instead of four, while those who work slowly because of ill health, or poor natural endowment, may finish in five years without embarrassment. The average girl under this system will make the required credits in the usual four years.

INTERESTING INNOVATIONS

Brenau leads also in its recognition of the necessity of familiarizing the students with the everyday things they will need to know when no longer sheltered by college walls.

How many times one hears some laughing or disparaging remark about a woman's inability to understand banking customs, postoffice regulations and business procedure in general. The Brenau girl has opportunity to acquire practical knowledge of

YONAH ENTRANCE

Brenau, with its beautiful buildings and large campus shaded with big oaks, is like a picturesque old-world estate. The archway shown above is particularly lovely. It is the entrance to Yonah Hall, the main building in a group of thirty-two.

THE JAPANESE ROOM

The Japanese room is the most beautiful parlor in a series of four representing foreign countries. Its furnishings and decorations have been imported from Japan, and the Italian parlor, Egyptian room and East Indian room are also filled with curios from abroad.

A SCENE IN BRENAU PARK

Brenau Park is filled with pretty vistas. It is a natural growth of trees and shrubs, and every improvement is in keeping with the rustic atmosphere. korn, composer, concert pianist and teacher, it offers unequalled opportunity for acquiring technical skill and an intellectual understanding of music.

Through the addition to the faculty this year of Gustav Louis Becker, the noted musician, who will direct the newly established normal department, the scope of the conservatory is materially broadened.

Another advantage is that Gainesville is so near to Atlanta that the students have opportunity to hear grand opera by the artists of the Metropolitan Opera company of New York, who annually come for a week's festival of music; as well as other events of educational and artistic value.

Brenau has an art school second to none in the south. Sketching, painting, pottery, metal work, wood carving, basketry, stenciling, interior decoration, all have their place in the work of the art student.

The Brenau School of Oratory is the largest for the study of literary expression in the south. Oratory graduates are entitled to admission to the senior class of the Emerson School of Oratory, at Boston, the foremost in America.

BRENAU'S FACULTY.

The Brenau faculty is composed of forty-four men, and women who have studied in the universities of the world. Some have graduated from Berlin universities, from the University of Wuerzburg, from Paris, from London and American universities of note. Some have been with the college for years. Their work has become a part of themselves, the expression of their ideals and hopes. They have mothered so many girls that they instinctively know how to reach the best in each, and to each they give a part of their love and interest.

The students feel the Brenau atmosphere. They respond to the wishes and ambitions of their protectors and grow to strong and gracious womanhood.

When a girl goes to college she leaves the supporting influence of home surroundings and home love. It is the duty of the college to supply them.

At Brenau she enters a refined and cultivated environment. She is associated with men and women who have in mind always the ideal Brenau Girl—that is, the Ideal Woman. Every influence lends itself to her development.

THE TRAINED NURSE'S DUTY.

A trained nurse looks after her health—keeps her well instead of curing her when sick. Athletics, gymnastic work and pleasant excursions supplement the benefits of light, well ventilated and comfortable rooms for dormitory and class uses.

Whole-hearted comradeship with several hundred girls trains her to respect the rights of others and to recognize the necessity for a few fundamental laws. Brenau is a little world in itself wherein the student learns the meaning of justice, fair play and helpfulness.

Thus are strengthened her ethical and moral nature, while the influences of church and Y. W. C. A. form permanent religious standards.

Intellectual training is sane and thorough; the artistic sensibilities are highly cultivated.

The Domestic Science Department creates a new and interesting viewpoint towards everyday things, training not the cook, the dressmaker, or milliner (though the work will prove valuable to any who may adopt professions of the kind) but the head of a household.

Brenau's distinctive features are too many to be enumerated. The best way in which to secure a more comprehensive idea of the college, is to send for the beautiful illustrated catalog; or, better still, pay Brenau a visit and see for yourself. You will like it.

SORORITIES AIDING GIRLS IN THEIR WORK

The President of Brenau College Declares That Their Advantages Are Many-Fold.

By H. J. Pearce, Ph. D., (Wrensburg) President of Brenau College.
The word sorority is but recently coined but its meaning is quite clear especially to those who know the classics. It means literally a sisterhood and is used to represent an organization among college women similar to the fraternity among college men.

The disposition on the part of some of these organizations of women to use the term fraternity instead of sorority is rather to be deplored. Fraternity is an older and better established term but its significance is already well understood and has no more proper application to a band of sisters than the term brothers would have to a band of sisters.

Object of Sororities.
The prime object of both the fraternity and the sorority is mutual help and encouragement. Each member assumes a certain amount of responsibility for the welfare and happiness of the others.

Advantages.
The advantages of the sorority to the individual member are two fold: first the assistance which she receives from her associates and second the qualities of leadership and breadth of sympathy which she develops as a result of the demands which are made upon her. Perhaps the second is even a greater advantage than the first.

Development of Leadership.
Perhaps the most important part of these is the development of leadership. The membership of the sorority is small and each member has to perform some duty. As she grows older in years and in college residence her responsibilities increase. The number of officers usually is three or four in each sorority, but they pass out of college and a new group takes up the responsibility. This the writer conceives to be the greatest advantage of the sorority. From its ranks will be the future leaders among the women of the future.

Of great advantage to the sorority girl is the almost certain acquirement of self control. Her own interests must always be regarded as secondary to the interests of the sorority. And in this subordinating her desires, whims, appetites even, to the welfare of others she attains a self mastery which is the highest end of education. The greatest value of the home comes in the teaching of responsibility on the one hand and of obligation on the other. When the individual members have for each other in the large measure of care it is a danger that this feeling of responsibility and obligation may be lost and it sometimes happens that the college student freed from the restraints and influence of home may be carried away by excess and self-indulgence.

Influence. In a measure takes the place of the home and home influence in these large institutions. In some cases the members of the sorority fifteen to twenty in number live together in dormitories on or near the campus under the supervision of a mother or mother of a mother or possibly of some member of the college faculty. Here the girls and the chaperon come to know each other intimately and in all of the elements of the home are reproduced and yet there is the enthusiasm and interest of college life.

ATTENTION

Parents desirous of sending their boys to an institution that emphasizes all the different phases of an education of young men, will do well to investigate this College. The Literary Departments are in charge of men of long personal training and years of experience. Each is a specialist in his line. The College does not employ amateur instructors.

THE MILITARY COLLEGE OF THE SOUTH

The Military Department is under the supervision of an officer of the United States Army. Strict, but not harsh, discipline is encouraged and kept. All forms of athletics are carried on here under the censorship of the instructors. The social and moral side of the students receive particular attention. The students are not left to solve the social and moral problems and questions that come to them alone, each instructor is delegated to a certain number of students to look after their moral and social development.

The institution is not operated on the dollar-and-cent basis—it is not run for profit—each dollar spent is spent for the welfare of the student.

The College has as its home the building of the old State Capitol—rich in historical romances and stories which make for the greater patriotism of the students. The buildings are equipped with all modern conveniences. All advantages of present-day institutions are to be had here. Fall term opens September 2.

The Mission and the Method Of Modern College for Girls

WILLIAM S. COX, President Cox College.

The mission of the college is twofold: to educate and to inspire. By education is meant the drawing out and developing the individual gifts, talents and abilities of the student and training his faculties to deal with the fund of facts and information that the centuries have stored away for him. Through astronomy and geology he learns of the formation of the world and traces its history through the records and preserves his thought in buildings, in science and in art. When greater progress brings about a written record, the student passes quickly through the achievements of the Chaldeans and Egyptians, sits at the feet of old Parnassus and draws his inspiration from the civilization, and military feats and the fine arts of the peaceful Greeks. Thrilled with the conquests of the Roman eagles, he follows their victorious flight over continent and sea and studies with wonder the progress in commerce, arts and science that invariably springs with their passing. In modern times the development along all practical lines is nothing short of marvelous. Wireless telegraphy and aerial navigation are among the feats accounted impossible a few years ago. History comes that through college instruction we are the heirs of the knowledge that has been accumulating through all the past ages, and a young student under 20 years of age, by virtue of study and research, is in reality more than 5000 years old in his knowledge and information. Yet this storehouse of knowledge is of no value through the training of every faculty by which it is to be utilized may be as effortless as springing a mine. Vital force and energy of purpose to convert it into strong and efficient service for the good of mankind. This inspiration and insight into human values comes most often from contact with college men and women whose lives have been consecrated to the training of the young into high and holy endeavor.

The Methods Employed.

The college accomplishes its mission by means of systematized, individualized and specializing its instruction. The system of the college, consisting of its faculty, equipment and curriculum, is worked out today almost scientifically. Here, as everywhere else, organization produces the best results. This principle is true in the military field, it is true in the commercial life of a nation, it is true in the religious world, it is true in every sphere of human activity.

A chartered institution, organized, corporate, with fixed policies and permanent organization, appeals to the student and public. The private teacher, no matter what his individual worth, here today and gone tomorrow, is of little value in the educational world. College associations are among the most powerful factors of college training. Friendships formed at school are among the most lasting and influential. Therefore, the older the institution, the greater its history, the larger its number of alumni, the greater becomes its prestige and usefulness.

The modern college recognizes the right of the individual to develop along the lines of his own nature. Square pegs will not fit in round holes. The old stereotyped college course will not produce the highest type of

MAKES CONVENTION DELEGATES ELECTIVE

Representative Beck Has Bill to Create All Party Machinery at the Polls.

A proposed primary election law of which Representative Beck, of Carroll, is the author, has been made a special order for its next meeting by house general Judiciary committee No. 1.

The bill is modeled after the primary election law that has been enacted in some of the northern states, and that barely failed of passage in New York this year.

It prescribes that all party nominations shall be made by primary election, the primary election for state and county offices to be held on the second Tuesday in July. Rigid safeguards are thrown around primary elections to prevent improper interferences with the voter.

The most sweeping changes in the present system, however, are those sections of the bill which provide for all the party machinery to be created by ballot.

Would Choose Delegates by Ballot. Delegates to state and national conventions are to be elected by popular ballot as an order of the executive committee of the party. It is provided that four members of the executive committee shall be elected by the state-at-large and two by each congressional district.

No party shall be allowed to participate in the primary election unless it has cast at least 30,000 votes in the last preceding presidential election or unless it is backed by a petition signed by at least 10,000 qualified voters.

State and County to Pay. The expenses of holding the primary election is to be borne equally by the state and county, and each political party is forbidden from levying assessments of any kind on candidates.

One of the most rigid features of the bill is the section which prohibits any person except the duly authorized managers and clerks to be nearer than 100 feet of the voter at the time he casts his ballot.

It is hardly expected that the bill will pass without amendment, but there is a growing sentiment that a primary law of some kind is needed, and certain features of the measure will meet with strong support.

trained workers. China and Japan both owe their onward strides to the impulse given by students who were educated in this country and Europe. Statistics furnished by the government show that from a list of 8000 persons who have rendered distinguished service to their country, only thirty-two have risen without the aid of an education. The world moves by brain, not brawn, and the college of today is furnishing its motive power.

Advice to women: In selecting a husband pick out a plain plug. Men of talent rarely make good husbands. Men of genius never do.

3,500 LBS. OF TOMATOES FROM THIRD OF ACRE

Thomasville, Ga., July 12.—From a third of an acre of land Charles Pittman, farming about two and a half miles from Thomasville, has recently gathered 3,500 pounds of tomatoes. These tomatoes were of the finest variety and all perfectly sound and good. They were grown by Mr. Pittman for the purpose of canning and he has been busy of late putting them up. His intention is to market them and they will, no doubt, command the best prices. Several other of the farmers near town and in other sections of the county are engaged in the work of canning tomatoes both for home consumption and for marketing and it begins to look as if soon the merchants of this section will be able to buy much of their canned goods at home, even though there is no canning factory. The crop of tomatoes in south Georgia has been the finest this year that has probably ever been known and a great many have been shipped to the northern markets. The prices received have been unusually good and dealers report that the quality of the Georgia tomato is superior to any other received this year.

A LETTER FROM BANKS WHITEMAN

The Genial Dry Goods Salesman Talks of Crops, Prospects, Business and the Coming Convention.

Tennille, Ga., July 11, 1913—Editor Constitution Firing Line—Dear Sir: In response to your request I am writing you about the condition I have found in the state on my journeys of the past few weeks.

The state of Georgia as a whole from the wholesaler to the cotton picker, is now looking forward to the marketing of the present cotton crop. The traveling man though feels a little hesitancy in bragging of the crop too much and telling of big future prospects especially if his business is not in keeping with the crops. However, neither the wholesaler the retailer nor the salesman can derive any benefit until the crops are marketed. We have had good seasons in south Georgia but rain only settles dust and not accounts.

On account of the dry spring we have cotton in all stages some early and a great quantity of it late as a good many early planters had to re-plant.

In covering my territory for the past week I have been in several large cotton raising counties. But look for one which has always stood in the lead in long staple cotton raising but this year the majority of the farmers planted short cotton, and they have almost a perfect crop both of long and short.

The last county I was in was Laurens, another one of the large cotton-raising counties. Looking at the crops in this county I find them excellent in all kinds of production and the merchants farmers bankers even the cotton pickers are all in smiles and I believe this fall will be paid with everybody.

A great many of the merchants are awaiting late to purchase fall stocks and I expect to see more of them in Atlanta at the convention this fall by 50 per cent than we have ever had before. We will surely show them a good time and also put good lines of merchandise as they have crops.

Very respectfully,
BANKS WHITEMAN
(Salesman for John Silvey & Co.)

THANKS FOR COURTESY.

South Carolina Paper Boosting for Merchants' Week

The editor of this department while visiting Greenville S. C. recently took the opportunity to ask the newspapers of that city to run a notice about the coming southern merchants' convention to be held in Atlanta in August. The Greenville Daily Piedmont very courteously carried a nice notice and gave the convention a strong boost thereby. This opportunity is taken of thanking the paper as well as Messrs. Koesel and Foker, the publisher and editor of The Daily Piedmont.

The writer also talked with a number of Greenville merchants and was pleased to hear that the great majority of them are most certainly going to be in Atlanta for the convention. A representative merchant said it goes without saying that I will be there because I never miss my trip to Atlanta twice every year. I find that I can keep in touch with the cities and my staples in Atlanta just as well as anywhere and I always enjoy myself on a visit to your city. But this year there are at least two dozen merchants from here who will come with me and we are going to form a boost party for Greenville. First of course, but after that for the south and the south's metropolis—Atlanta.

W. B. Carlton of the Capital City Tobacco Company is responsible for a lot. He saw the ball game last Thursday and the Crackers lost the first game they have dropped—nine starts.

SOME WORKERS FOR THE Southern Merchants' Convention

ATLANTA—TWO WEEKS—AUGUST 4-16

No. 5. W. A. Ward

When W. A. Ward was approached for his views on the approaching southern merchants' convention he was found busy on his morning mail. As he opened a letter after the first a pleased smile gradually spread over his features and finally he looked up with that genial expression for which he is famous and said:

Did you know that some people are talking of bad times and poor collections? Well, of the five letters I have just received four of them contained checks. That doesn't sound so bad does it?

We were forced to admit that it did comprise a high batting average and a look of joyous must have crept into his eyes as we thought of the mail we had just received. He then said very much as Mr. Ward continues:

Of course it doesn't happen that way with every five I open but it is true that my collection is much better than we had until I left for this time of the year. Our business is in a splendid state and I am very much putting off their buying time as far as possible. Personally I am not sorry at all that they are because I am feeling exceedingly optimistic about the prospects for the fall and I think so far ahead of my fellow merchants that I can see the best in the long run.

About the convention? Why certainly we will have 1000 men here. I shall be surprised if I don't get considerable notice that number from all parts of the city as we receive word daily of men who are coming here. Our prospects are fine and the time is short. It is a big case. Cotton is doing well and we have all some ideal cotton for the fall. It is only because of the way we are doing that we are looking for a year of plenty which will allow us to overcome the winter that I am sure we have suffered from in this state.

Also I think we have arranged one of the best programs for a business convention I ever saw. It will be like attending the finest business college in the country because the speakers will be practical business men who are confronted with the conditions we wish to discuss. Then there will be the various entertainments at the ball parks and the barbecues, lunches and receptions which will make it a dandy time for anyone even aside from the beneficial aspect.

Yes, you can say for me that I am well pleased with the work being done and am confident of the best convention Atlanta has ever had!

GOOD NEWS ABOUT CONVENTION 'CUE

Jim Little Will Once More Exercise His Famous Art at Barbecue in August. R. K. Rambo, Assistant.

The Merchants and Manufacturers' association sent out one of the best bits of news in reference to the forthcoming Southern Merchants' convention when they announced that James P. Little (better known as 'Jim Little') would have charge of the barbecue again. The fame of Jim Little as a barbecue artist is state wide and it is said that he approaches the task with the reverence that the true artist always feels for a chance to affect a masterpiece in his own particular line.

As assistant Mr. Little will have R. K. Rambo, the well known sales manager for John Silvey & Co. When these two dry goods men get together there ought to be something going. (Everyone knows that Mr. Little is president of the Dougherty-Little Redwine company.) Of course if things don't move they will surely rip.

Anyway the cue is sure to be a record breaker and the only advice which can conscientiously be given is this: When you hear that Jim Little is at the helm in a barbecue affair—come. Never mind such little things as sickness, distance, storm and pestilence—but just come.

THE TWO BILLS RUN HOT RACE FOR BILLS

The two popular city salesmen with J. N. & Stamps, Bill Quaries and Bill Giston are getting into warmer and warmer rivalry every day. The latter's supremacy is now a matter of fact and it is not to be discovered who is the victor for July at present the race is in a snarl. The way these two salesmen are after the big bills is a terror and a shame of the office force remarking that if Bill got after a big bill, Bill would surely hunt him all night.

Gideons' Meeting

The Atlanta camp of Gideons extended a cordial invitation to all traveling men in their families and friends to meet with them in the convention hall of the Piedmont Hotel at 3 p. m. today. A specially attractive program has been arranged for the meeting and everyone who comes is sure to go away with something of benefit to himself.

J. S. Cheek and R. W. Webb are in this week with the Radley Williamson Watt company. They report business is good although a number of merchants are holding off their buying until they come to Atlanta in August for the convention.

In the Manager's Office

"And After the Last Letter Was Signed They Talked Together of Many Things."

A couple of the boys from the road were sitting in the manager's office the other Saturday morning when the conversation turned to automobiles. Jim remarked:

"To my mind the automobile is one of the biggest curses to business that was ever invented."

"How come? Let's hear the reasons for that sweeping condemnation."

"Let me give you an example. Last week I had two men to see in town here. It was Thursday afternoon. One lives out at East Lake and I went out there to see him. Did I see him? No. Why? Mr. Man had gone to the ball game in his automobile. So I started for my second call which was in Decatur. Customer No. 2 was another automobile enthusiast and he had gone out to the river to do some fishing. I think or for a spin out toward Roswell perhaps. Anyway I couldn't see him either, and my entire afternoon was spent on account of two men who would have been attending to their business as well as allowing me to attend to mine if they had only had as much interest in their businesses as they had in their automobiles."

It is a fact that for about three months out of the year my business is badly broken into on account of the automobiles my customers own. It is worst in the small towns, and the trouble comes from various points. I know men who have business with about six or seven thousand capital behind them who have two or three thousand of it tied up in a car. And when you go to see them you find them out having a good time in the car. Things weren't run that way when daddy was in business and I believe there wouldn't be as many business failures today if the owners and managers of businesses didn't do so much gallivanting around in automobiles.

The oldest traveler had been an interested listener to the foregoing conversation and just here he broke in:

"The bad part of your argument is that it sounds good while it is really full of holes. In the first place the kind of man who uses an automobile to the detriment of his business today would have attended all the barn raisings, hog killings and dances in the countryside in his horse and buggy in your father's day, and his business would have gone to rack and ruin just the same. It isn't the surroundings which make a man a good reliable business man or the reverse. It is the man himself. If your father was alive today he would probably own an automobile and use it for the benefit of his business as wise men do now and he would have been thankful for the new business which the automobile industry has brought to the country. For the good roads it has compelled and the thousands of other improvements which have come in its wake. The trouble with your viewpoint is that it is narrow. You wouldn't grumble because conditions have changed, but act the part of a man and adapt yourself to the advancement of the world and keep step with the procession. Think it over."

CHILE CON CARNE GET IT WHILE IT'S HOT

Ed ("Sunshine") Harrison, with the S. P. Richards company, was in the house for a few minutes Friday morning but made his usual brief stay and got back on the road again at once.

The "ins" this week with Fain & Stamps are J. C. Owens, Cliff Edwards, W. Y. Bailey and S. E. Smith.

H. P. Lovelace, shipping clerk with the Consolidated Paper company, was on his vacation last week.

The "ins" this week with the Dougherty Little Redwine company are W. F. Seay, A. S. Wilkins, J. O. Castlebury and J. M. McKibbin. They all report continually improving prospects in their territories and good rains generally.

C. D. Dickinson, with the Brown, Perryman & Greene company, came in Saturday, after a week on the road, and reported the outlook for business this fall as improving steadily. Said he: "We have had a splendid corn crop the best in years and prospects for cotton are excellent."

The "ins" this week with the A. M. Robinson company are Claude Smith and Chris Irby. They both bring in excellent business and Mr. Irby in particular has evidently hit the spots where the big orders grow for the past week.

Brother A. C. Leske is now recovered from his recent accident, and is hard at work on the job again.

Brother George Maddox, with the N. K. Fairbanks company, has changed his address to Macon, Ga. This is on account of the fact that Brother Maddox recently joined the noble army of benefactors, taking unto himself a wife.

Fulton 505 will hold a booster meeting on Saturday, July 26, at 2 p. m. There are between twenty and thirty candidates who will be initiated at that time.

Brother J. C. Hood reports an accident, but we are glad to note that he adds that he expects to be out again shortly.

Past Counselor H. J. McDonald was on the West Point road last week in the interests of his company, the Brower Candy company.

Brother C. B. Pepper, writing from his new headquarters in Columbia, S. C., reports business as excellent.

The S. P. Richards company report that James "Rainbow" Thornton is still hammering hard in his southern territory with mighty good results.

"Get busy," we said to the Committees. "Make this the best one we've ever put over."

And the committees did that same. That is to say, they are now doing it. They are a bright and industrious set of lads, too, and they're the kind who get what they go after.

They're fixing up an assortment of Staples and Fancies that will do your heart good. They're going to put the prize in surprise all the way through this Convention.

And we're beginning to hear from the comers. Don't wait. Let us hear you're going to be with us. It will do us good to know that you expect to be among those present. Drop a line to Secretary Harry T. Moore.

If you haven't already made up your mind to attend, do it now and go to work on your plans. We want you without fail.

Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers Association

IN THE TRENCHES

Joe White, the genial Mississippi salesman with the A. M. Robinson company, leaves this afternoon for his territory. He remarked before leaving that he was going to clean up down there and that all his orders would be of the "big and prosperous" variety.

Thursday after his vacation at Charleston, S. C., where he went with the City Salesmen's association's excursion.

George H. Page, on the South Georgia territory for the All Star Manufacturing company, is in the city for Sunday.

R. H. Learned, the south Florida man for the John Deere Plow company, of Atlanta, has been in the city for three or four days this week, but returned to his territory on Thursday.

Whirlpool Suggested Silencer.
(American Mechanist.)
Mr. Maxim had been working on the development of automobile engine mufflers for some time before he thought of a silencer in connection with a gun. In addition to this was the inventor's desire to enjoy target practice without creating a disturbance. Experiment ensued, covering a couple of years and all kinds of valves, vents, by-passes, expansion chambers, etc., but without success. One morning after his bath the inventor noticed the small whirlpool over the drain hole, the action of which retards the egress of the water. It does not silence it (as this phenomenon is usually accompanied by a more or less pronounced sucking sound), but in a gun the noise acting on this suggestion, a little tube was then made, constructed so as to induce a whirlpool in the escaping gases from the gun. This, when tried, was a success.

While the Firing Line man was on his regular trip down Edgewood avenue last week, he dropped into Anderson Brothers & Rich and was just in time to overhear Mr. Anderson sell a nice contract for placing a furnace in a new residence. As this is a new line with the company, they are pushing it hard.

The A. E. Hill Manufacturing company, of Atlanta, are just making two foreign shipments of the Hill safety razor blade sharpener. One of these goes to Paris, France, and the other to Berlin, Germany.

Captain W. J. McDaniel, better known as "Captain Bill," proprietor of Happy Hollow Farm, near Decatur, Ga., is at present visiting his daughter, Mrs. O. L. Johnston, who resides in West End.

Salesman Tebo, formerly sales manager in this territory for H. J. Helms company, has accepted a position with the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company and will take charge of the Alabama territory for them, starting Monday.

H. H. Lee, billing clerk with the Lamar & Rankin Drug company, returned

CHILE CON CARNE

W. F. Spaulding, of the Gramling-Spaulding company, returned from the eastern markets the other day with some extra good ideas for Premium Brand shoes.

Cliff McDowell and Doc Westbrook, with the E. L. Adams company, will both be on their vacations next week. The company is hoping for some extra good collections in order to provide ball for them in case of too much holiday spirit.

The Dougherty-Little-Redwine company report that they have had their hands full all week shipping out orders and that they are now in good shape in their temporary quarters, liking them very much.

John Silvey & Co. have been receiving some good free advertising lately. The Edison Moving Picture company recently took some pictures in Atlanta and in one of these, entitled "Scenes of Other Days," the big Silvey sign on Marietta street is the most conspicuous name in the entire film.

The All Star Manufacturing company received a big shipment of silks in exhibit pattern last week. They state that their neckwear in those designs has been so popular that they have had to rush forward all this silk they could lay their hands on.

"HAVERS, MON, A WEE DRAPPIE O' COCOA WANNA HURT YE!"

The above picture was taken at the picnic of the Atlanta Scottish association, held on July 4. It shows various members of the Southern Coffee and Spice Mills force, considering whether to adopt the famous "Rona" brand of cocoa as the national drink of Scotland. The result of the conference was that, while cocoa was good and that more of it should be drunk, it was a different class of beverage altogether from the genuine Scotch, and could not be used for the same purpose, effect or result.

THE "PROFIT" OF KENNESAW MOUNTAIN
BLUE SHY — STUNG AGAIN — A TRUE STORY.

Dear Sally: I arrived here in Atlanta all right and Henry and Alice met me at the train, or rather at the Terminal station, and after walking up those long wearisome flights of steps I was tuckered out entirely. If there was ever an inconvenient station that new Terminal here is it, for its walk and climb and climb and climb, go through gates, walk about a mile before you get to the front of the place.

Now I am going to tell you about the things I have seen here. In the first place Alice has a real nice home out on the north side, reception hall and porches and all those kind of things that I never did see much good in. Their three little children, my great niece, are as sweet as can be, but land alive, you never would know they were her children. She gets up in the morning about 12 o'clock and takes her coffee and lunch in her room, long after Henry has gone downtown, then she fools around her room till after regular dinner time. Why, Sally, before Alice gets up I have done a full day's work at home, milked two cows and set the bread, cooked breakfast, washed up the dishes and swept, looked after the children and got them off to school.

About 4 o'clock Alice has the car brought around and goes downtown. I went with her several times, but it was no fun for me loafing around stores and soda fountains and ice cream parlors. It does seem to me that more men and women live on the streets here than any place I ever saw. All day long they are drifting about from one corner to another, from one picture show to another and from one ice cream place to another. I feel so sorry for these folks here in Atlanta, for there are some real likely looking girls and boys and they could be doing so many things if they lived in any kind of a decent place where folks had something to do pretty much all the time like we do out in the country.

And the styles! Why for the first time in my life I am really ashamed that I am a woman. I simply can't write what I have seen here, for it will do you nor any one else and good to hear or see.

I want to tell you about Alice and her housekeeping. She don't go to market at all and don't any more know what she is going to have for dinner than she did not live there. She don't know what chickens or eggs cost; she lets the housekeeper look after everything. Land a live! I couldn't no more let my house be run that way. Why, she loses all the pleasure of living. And the children; I got after her yesterday when little Mary and Agnes came and said, "Mother, tell us a story." Alice said, "Don't ask me, I don't want to be bothered with you now. I have a heart ache." Alice pays no more attention to those children than if they were strays or belonged to some one else. They are the dearest little things I ever saw and I wish I had them out home to raise. I was telling them last night while mother was at a dance about the time we had last fall with that lot of Plymouth Rock chickens and the little darlings didn't know what she was going to have, then hatched out the dearest little yellow chicks ever seen. They wanted to know whether Irish potatoes grew on a vine like grapes or on a tree like figs.

I asked Mary last night if she ever saw her mother plant tomatoes in the garden and she said: "Oh! mother has no garden; she is so society that she don't plant anything. Father asked her once if she wanted a garden in the back lot and she said: 'No, I can't look after all my engagements now, and I have no time for work of any kind.'" I feel real sorry for Henry, for you know he was raised in the country and he don't care so much for society, but Alice has him on the go all the time except when he stays out at night to attend to some office work. But I always will believe that he is at the club or somewhere else resting up a bit. There sure ain't no rest for him here in this home, and he has no companionship with his wife. I am coming home Friday, for I wouldn't stay here another day and see these dear sweet little children neglected and left with a nurse all day long for anything. I hope that you all have dug the last patch of Irish potatoes. If you don't they will rot in the hill. Tell Jim to put them in the cellar, as they will keep there all right, and don't put over ten eggs under that little Leshorn hen when she gets ready to set.

My but I'm homesick. Alice wants me to dress to go to day, after-noon for a ride, then for supper and then for a show or something every night. This life here is too strenuous for me. And there is somebody killed every day or so by automobiles. It gets so dangerous to try to write anywhere at all. Alice went to a dance at a club Monday night and did not get home till 4 in the morning. Just think of it—just about the time Jim rings the bell for the hands to get out for cotton chopping, Henry didn't go to work next day and Alice had an awful "head" she said and seemed that she wanted nothing but ice water all day.

Well, this may be living, and living high, but I'll take mine low and be contented. You know it's pretty hard to be extra good anyway, but when you are forever on the go and everything around you artificial and nothing to remind you of nature or the Creator, it's about the last thing any one thinks of. And talk of being neighborly! Why when I asked Alice who lived next door she said, "I don't know" and "I don't care"—just think when Jane Wilson's youngest boy got me to get sick or need anything, I would feel real put out about it if they didn't call on me or some of my folks to come over and help them out. You remember how last summer when Jane Wilson's youngest boy got took down with measles how you and me took turns sitting up with him. This kind of living don't suit your ma. Tell Jim to meet me at the train Friday evening at 8 o'clock, and tell him to use the light buggy if he is going to drive the bay mare, as she is likely to be a bit lame from that nail that stuck in her foot, and have a plate of biscuit a foot high, for I am famished for some shore nough food, and if anybody ever says "bonds" to me any more I'll faint, and that broad, my— I chewed it, and I chewed it, and I soaked it, and I soaked it, and it never did have any taste or flavor. Well, go the night, dear. Kiss me the folks for me. I want to get back. Your fond mother,
CYNTHIA.

(From The Lewiston, Me., Sun.)
Remember the railroad is at the foundation of our industrial and commercial system. To stop transportation is to stop the circulation of our blood. Some twenty-five or thirty years ago there was a great snow-storm that blocked the streets of New York city and paralyzed the railroads. The paralysis did not last many days; but in that short time there was a great suffering, and even greater was the fear, for New York city could not live many days without the food supplies that are pouring in over the railroads day and night. The collapse of the railroads of the United States would mean the starvation of millions. It would be a greater calamity than any war ever reported. More destructive than many earthquakes.

AN ALL-AROUND GOOD MAN, THIS

W. N. NICHOLS.

The gentleman whose picture is shown herewith is W. N. Nichols, who ranks as one of the very best fellows to know in the ranks of the salesmen who make Atlanta their headquarters. Mr. Nichols is city salesman for the Gramling-Spaulding company, and as an enthusiast for the "Premium Brand" of shoes every retailer in Atlanta knows and likes him. He is a crack-jack good salesman.

But he is other things as well. He is a real, modern, live and energetic Sunday school superintendent, and one who knows Mr. Nichols in this capacity realizes that this is a real man's job and that he fills it well.

Then he is a baseball enthusiast. He is manager of the Smyrna baseball team and under his guidance they have the rather good record of 1,000 for the season, having played fourteen games and won them all.

All in all, Mr. Nichols is some fine fellow and this picture and story are only run here because his friends requested it in order that some others might get to know him and benefit thereby.

Labor's Share in Asiatic Turkey.
(The Christian Herald.)
In the second of the three large mounds, the Kasr, of the fortress, the Germans have done their best work here, with a constant force of 2,000 men, the excavations have been continued winter and summer. The workmen from the neighboring town of Hillah are Arabs whose long experience in digging for antiquities has specially qualified them for excavation work. They are arranged in groups of 12. The foreman, with native one-pronged pick, loosens up the dirt. Men with pointed hoes scrape the dirt into the baskets, and other men, with small baskets of data, carry it to a car which is pushed along a narrow iron track to the dump of the edge of the mound. The pay of these men ranges from 12 to 20 cents a day. It is only at Babylon that a railroad has ever been employed in the excavation of an ancient ruin. There is a commissioner who is appointed by the Turkish government to take charge of all the antiquities, for all the objects found beneath the soil in Turkey belong to the Government; the excavators who find them may only photograph them, or copy their inscriptions.

On The Constitution Firing Line With the Commercial Travelers

GET IT WHILE IT'S HOT

J. D. Burrus special wagon sales man with the John Deere Plow company, returned to the hotel office at Midway Hill last Friday after a successful trip of some weeks around the southern territory.

The M. C. Kiser company reports some excellent daily good business from O. E. Kenzie.

The S. P. Richards company state that the steady plugging made by their salesman John Heavens Huff and J. M. Bennett is certainly bringing in the results and that they will always rank in the brilliant class of salesmen as far as results go—which is all the way.

T. H. Withers and Sons the contractors of Carterville, Ga. stated that they had just two more contracts for residence buildings such as the one they had advertised in last week's Constitution.

tion Firing Line. They state that if their Atlanta business keeps growing that at its present rate that they will have to move their headquarters here.

T. A. Gramling of the Gramling Spalding company will leave within the next few days for Indianapolis Ind where he will spend several weeks.

Ben Thompson with Fain & Stamps is at present on his vacation in the mountains of north Georgia in the N. C. Northchase Valley.

Sales Manager O. L. Johnston of the Carroll Adams Shoe company motored through to Macon last week. Mr. Johnston remarked in conversation that he did not call himself a drummer. Rather he said he is an ambassador of trade. He stated that he just goes after the big orders and does not fritter away his time with the little flies.

T. P. A. JOTTINGS

BY W. M. JENKINS, Press Chairman, Georgia Division, T. P. A.

There is no method of making friends equal to the method of making good.

There is something in freedom and justice that narrow souls cannot dare to admire.

We believe in freedom and justice and have no remedy against the man who calls for a bill for preventing our side of the case more than granting him the privilege to judge and submitting the matter as an appeal to the Constitution Firing Line many readers. We think it is noble to publish truth regardless of the man or institutions that differ with us.

Texas came to Richmond with the years record for increased membership. Will Virginia go to Houston with similar credentials? This question can only be answered by Virginia and Texas.

Virginia and Texas are in the line light and are incidentally pitted against each other in the contest for a place in class A. Any present advantage of one over the other is not necessarily permanent—nor is it necessarily temporary. It all depends on Virginia—and Texas.

Georgia formerly in class B has passed the corresponding division and is now in class A.

We are gradually climbing and want all the available members possible. Won't you come in and help us?

All traveling salesmen eligible should send in their applications for membership to the secretary, Hon. J. C. Andrews, Atlanta, Ga. Seven dollars turns the trick and you will also get an accident policy that would ordinarily cost $25. The T. P. A. is just as good if not better for several reasons.

Blessings some time come to us in the shape of sickness, pains, sufferings, losses and disappointments. We get to know who our true friends are but we can be patient and trust in God. God is the true power and will in the time be manifested in its proper light.

There are many evils which too often attend wealth and if we will observe more closely we will find they are greater than those found in poverty.

Equal rights to all is a thing of the past or at least of small consequence to those in power. But special privilege to some few is of the greatest importance. When will the ruling classes do right? Ever or never?

If this world is ever redeemed from ignorance, sorrow, distress, war, and sin, it will be through the same unselfish goodwill influence and power of commonsense business men and not through a hawk-eyed people that can see eye, a fruit and real all mistakes and take minutes notice of every wrong act that may unintentionally be committed. We need good men as leaders but brass band reformers and politicians do not answer to the call generally.

Recall the traveling man with a suit and hat with him as your friend—it will do you both good.

Listen! It would take but a few minutes of your time to weave the golden threads of kindness into the warp and woof of their makeup and business life daily. Don't offer a gentleman one finger to shake when you can just as well give him your hand. You can be happy if you will, and make others happy also.

We know some people and institutions that sulogize after a man is gone. We prefer that you tell us now while we live of our good acts. It will encourage us to think better live better and be better.

We are not looking for perfection. The most perfect life like the fairest flower has some defect but we would have honesty, faithfulness and justice in all branches of business among all men. These above all other considerations.

Real genuine commonsense men are very few—they are an exception but wherever you find them you can trust them. Their ability may vary but they are safe just the same whether salesmen, merchants, bankers, brokers, lawyers, doctors or well-disposed. But those who are petted and spoiled, waded them, addled and coddled, cured for in every conceivable way, laughed with and chuckled to can not be much of anything outside of referenda and they should be the first to be reformed.

The T. P. A. are trying to create a firm ties of friendship that will prove binding sacred and true for ever not just for a day or two as emerald new would have but that kind which grows sweeter as we get older. Let our policy be Peace and good will to all mankind.

Some men say we have no right to question the motives or good intentions of those who have banded themselves together in cliques for what they deem the protection of law. But we say if some men had never questioned the justice of the law and denied the law there would be today no such thing as freedom.

Military despots of the Cossack, Turkish, Huerta and Russian kind for Georgia are deplorable and we trust the present legislature will pass the Slade bill. The common people have rights that should be considered as a whole and not for special privileges alone. To shoot innocent citizens down in the streets like dogs would give swing and power to anarchy as nothing else could do.

For one time we are with those wanting change and reform.

(From The London Chronicle)
We have only ourselves or rather our forefathers to blame for the trouble about the pronunciation of valet. If they had stuck to valet there would have been no difficulty. Valet and valet are the same word meaning originally just a boy the diminutive of vassal a man. Unfortunately when our ancestors applied a word meaning a boy to signify a servant, they went on to make it bear a scornful sense. And so valet degenerated hopelessly just as did knave, which is simply the German "kanabe," boy.

BUSINESS BUILDERS

THE SALESMAN'S MOTTO: I will accomplish everything within the power of energy, tact and resourcefulness; nay, more, I will attempt and overcome the impossible.

EMPLOYEES SUGGESTIONS

There are a number of business houses today which are encouraging their employees to contribute any suggestions they may have for the better conduct of the business and the elimination of waste motion.

This is a feature of all businesses which are employing large numbers of people which has been too much overlooked in the past.

One large concern to the writers knowledge offers a small bonus for every idea which is accepted, and in various other ways encourages the men to help with their brains and originality.

The executive head of a business should approach this matter with care and thought or he will scare off much valuable help which he would otherwise get.

It is probable that the employees of a factory will give fifty ideas which are impracticable, and in many cases foolish, for one which is worth considering but it is worth the time and trouble to receive the fifty impracticable ones with courtesy for the sake of the one good one which will save time and money. It should always be remembered that it is not good business to treat the employee who is making the suggestion with any kind of reception other than the most attentive and courteous.

DIRECTING PUBLICITY.
There is much advertising written which has no special appeal to any class of people and which on this account frequently loses a great part of its effect.

Every advertisement written has a special class of the public to which it should appeal but there is one section of the population to which practically every ad should be more or less directed and which is too often neglected. This is the women.

It is hard to estimate the extent of the influence which the women exercise in the matter of purchasing. Of course it is self-evident that it is the women who are most interested in department store advertising and its effect on business.

But it is also a fact that the women have a great deal to do with every purchase that is made whether it is for their own use or for that of a male member of the family. It is certain that the wife takes a great interest in whatever is to be purchased for the home, whether it be groceries, clothes, for herself, decoration for her husband, or walls, or clothes for her husband. A prominent gentleman in a large city recognizes this fact, and he has made a mailing list of the wives and mothers of all his customers. Every Christmas he mails a dainty reminder of his store addressed exclusively to the women. A woman is always pleased to get anything decorative and this idea has brought in more money to the business than any other advertising idea which the merchant has ever used.

All merchants should always remember the important part the women play in directing purchases and direct their publicity energies accordingly. About the only thing that a woman does not direct the buying of is a Christmas present for herself and very frequently she indicates her choice in this matter also.

CHEERFULNESS.
The man who regards business in the proper light will always remember that the chief reason he is in business is in order to pay dividends.

There are many ways of going about this job of earning dividends for the business and the cause of much of the suffering in the world is simply because business men have had a mistaken idea of what methods will bring in the dividends surest. Child labor, inadequate wages, graft and crooked dealing are all the offshoots of the dividend paying idea and at the root of the matter they are all unnecessary offshoots. It is an absolute fact that the man who acts in the fairest and squarest manner to ward those with whom he lives whether they are his employers, employees or family connections, will eventually get the most dividends out of his business and out of the most important business there is the business of living.

But there is one dividend bringer which is a sure paying investment to every business paying in hard dollars and cents. And that is cheerfulness. There is nothing which will popularize a retail store with the shoppers more rapidly than cheerful clerks who make the shopper forget the rain and cold outside and the little inconveniences which they sometimes have to undergo.

To the traveling salesman there is nothing which will pay him and his firm better than a well cultivated spirit of cheerfulness. Practically every salesman realizes the importance of optimism and practices it daily. But it is little use to preach good times with a long face. The man who brings the feeling of good times into a merchant's store is he who comes in with a cheery smile, a glad handclasp and a general effect of all is well in this best of all possible worlds.

The factory which gets the best results out of the workmen is the one here there is a universal spirit of good fellowship and where the manager who goes through sees the men enjoying their work and doing it with that spirit of interest and willing effort which gets results quicker than any other.

Cheerfulness in all business is the best paying investment there is. Cultivate it.

(From The New York Evening Sun)
There's rattlers an' terantillas,
There's centerpedes with pizened fangs,
An' pythons snakes that measure

Most Accidents Preventable.
The Pennsylvania railroad which has comparatively few accidents considering the extent of the system makes a careful analysis of every accident to discover its fundamental cause. Their investigation shows that 70 per cent of all the accidents in 1912 whether the derailment of a passenger train or simply the case of a woman tripping on station steps could have been prevented if employees had exercised special caution. The company, through its general manager, has made a personal appeal for the co-operation of every employee in the prevention of accidents, and to every employee has been given a book entitled Safety Hints and Suggestions for the Prevention of Personal Injury Accidents.

DEVEREUX, GA.

Deveraux Ga July 12—(Special).—A beautiful wedding of Thursday evening was that of Miss Lora Ethel Stacer and Dr Bernard Lamar Helton of Deenstep, which took place at 7:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr and Mrs G G Stacer, Rev C A Norton of the Methodist church, performing the ceremony.

The bride's home was elaborately decorated for the occasion, a color scheme of pink and white being used in the halls and parlor, where the ceremony was read. Handsome ferns and southern smiles intermingling with white wedding bells, formed an artistic background for the bridal party.

The ribbons were drawn from the doorways by little Misses Elizabeth Coleman and Ruth Smith, forming an aisle through which the bridal party passed to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Miss Ernestine Davis.

The bridesmaids, Misses Fannie Holmes, of Augusta, and Bessie Davis, of Sanderaville, wore lovely gowns of white lingerie with pink sashes and carried bouquets of daisies and ferns. The bride entered with her maid of honor, Miss Ola Schroeder, of Logtown, Miss.

Of the marriage of Miss Corinne Tebault of New Orleans, and Mr Howard Vance Harper, the bride the granddaughter of the late David G. Bailey of Griffin. The marriage of New Orleans has the following story:

A meeting of wide social interest was that of Miss Corinne Tebault, daughter of Dr and Mrs C Hamilton Tebault, to Mr Howard Vance Harper, which was solemnly celebrated on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at Trinity Episcopal church. The bride, also having been christened and having received her confirmation at the same altar.

The wedding at which only relatives of the two immediate families were present was one characterized by quiet simplicity in all its details. The bride, a charming young woman, was escorted to the altar by her father who gave her the traditional kiss. She wore a chic suit of dark blue broadcloth silk, with lace waist and dark blue hat trimmed with dark blue wings and carried lavender orchids. There were no attendants on either the bride or bridegroom. Rev Dr Robert S. Couland, rector of Trinity performed the ceremony. There was no reception following the bridal pair leaving from the church for the train for a trip of two months to the west, but the greatest amount of interest was felt in the social world in the marriage, the bride being one of the most popular young women in New Orleans.

She is a member of a distinguished family connection throughout the south and is the daughter of one of the south's most gallant soldiers of the confederacy. In addition to her social graces she is a talented writer and reader and is a great student. Besides her literary gifts she possesses a charming personality and is widely known and has been feted in the social world of a dozen southern cities.

New Mid-Summer Dresses At Opportunity Prices

To announce that we have 2,000 summer dresses in stock at mid-season is the unprecedented, though certainly not an exaggeration. Neither are they simply unsold goods, but very decidedly the reverse of this condition.

There are few dresses in this house that have not arrived within 30 days. In the last two weeks we have received over 500 summer dresses of the very newest models, of the chosen summer fabrics, all highly fashioned in the latest designs, many of them advancing the ideas being now accepted for fall wear.

It is the plan of this house that summer stocks do not "run down" because of the approach of fall, but rather to improve them by advance ideas.

'Tis your privilege of selections from a large stock, and your opportunity to buy at greatly reduced prices. At this season we buy to advantage, of new stocks, and we sell them according to the buying, which is a decided advantage over buying old stocks that have been remarked, because of being shopworn.

In addition to the 500 new dresses on sale tomorrow at special summer prices, every dress that has been here over 30 days has also received a new mark for this special Monday selling.

Women of Georgia, Show Your Power on These Vital Questions

Welfare of Children of the State Demands Quick Action in the Matter of Paying Salaries of Georgia's School Teachers.

By Isma Dooly.

As the tax problem and teachers' problem are settled or ignored, the welfare of the child of this state is advanced or neglected. These issues reach into every home. They are going to arbitrate the destinies of tomorrow's citizens. They are a little abstract and require study on the part of the women of Georgia, and the time for that study and intelligent and immediate action has come.

Of more than striking interest at the time was the urgent suggestion made by a Georgia club woman last fall at the state convention here that the women of Georgia—should at once create in their organizations study classes in political science and public questions. The time has come to act on that suggestion, for each day the obligations of women require that they post themselves and be equipped to meet the calls made upon them to co-operate in all public movements.

Let us for the moment leave the subject of women voting out of the question and see their value as they are. Let us test their value in pushing questions which deal directly with their most essential center of activity—the home.

THE HOME AND TAXES.

There is not a home in Georgia which is not affected by any law which deals with taxes, and there is no home in Georgia which roofs a child which is not related directly to the school. This brings the teacher and the mother logically very close together; makes them through the child people of inseparable interests. Upon the teacher the mother puts her most precious care when she consigns the child to the teacher to carry on the direction of the training she (the mother) has begun. The teacher, on the other hand, has not only her obligation to the mother to fulfill, but her obligation to the state and society, when she becomes a factor in civilization second to none other.

The other day the very startling statement was made in the Georgia press that the school teachers of Georgia had been unpaid for their services for several months, and that there was no money in the treasury to pay them.

Time for Action.

The wise minded at once began to agitate tax reform as the most direct remedy to come to the aid of the exhausted treasury, and much is being said and written on the subject.

It is timely for the women of Georgia individually and in organization to rise to the situation as they did once before when they put their influence back of the measure which made it awful for counties to borrow money for the payment of teachers, the movement to bring about such legislation ratagitated by the Women's club of Cambridge.

Will the women not come forward and urge upon the present legislative body the need for direct action?

We are told that this is the day of only of education, but of specializing in education—that the child cannot get on any longer with the merely basic training but that he must be trained on and given a chance to meet with the demand for specialists made every branch of commerce and industry. How can the child of the state Georgia have the first and most literary chance which is his, if the teachers of the common schools of the state are expected to work for charity and not given the pay which is rightfully theirs?

In the child of the state to extend its aid to outside aid for education? Are the mothers of the state of Georgia going to remain silent when the men and women who have faithfully rendered service to their children are left unpaid for their services?

Help find the remedy. There must be a remedy and it is to the women of Georgia who are others who are patriots, who are anxious to see the child of Georgia ke its place with the child of other commonwealths who are taught by all-paid, consequently well-equipped teachers to help find the remedy. What can be done? may be the question asked. It is up to the women of the state to investigate what can be done. They can look into the remedy suggested of tax reform, and see how if that is the remedy, it can be in the quickest way brought about.

It would seem to me that for a moment everything should be made second to the investigation the women of Georgia have a right to make into the affairs of state, as they directly effect the child of the state, and having posted themselves they would be in a position to co-operate intelligently with the men of the state who now are perplexed with many questions which just as directly affect the women of the state as they do any other individuals.

A realize with intense appreciation the wonderful efficiency work the women of Georgia individually and through organizations, have done for the advancement of education. Their activity and practical form of work have taken the time they might have given to the study of the questions now pressing upon them, and they are dashed almost by the story that comes to them, that the teachers of their children are not paid, and the very basis of that education for which they have worked, is struck at in the most vital spot.

Let All Women Work.

I would like to see the leader of every woman's organization in the state, those patriotic, those for philanthropy—all of them, call a halt just long enough to plan a course of study, which would embrace first and foremost a knowledge of the laws of their own state, and the conditions which have led up to the non-payment of the teachers of Georgia. Then they might reach out for the remedy, and, finding it, make for its application.

There are 23,000 women in the Georgia Federation, and many more thousands in other organizations—the Daughters of the Confederacy, the Daughters of the Revolution, the Mothers congress of the W C T U, the Suffragists, the Parent-Teacher association. If only one-half of these should post themselves about the things going on around them sufficiently well to agitate the cause in their communities, and extend their knowledge and their wishes to the men sent to the statehouse to make laws there would be no teacher in Georgia unpaid and if tax reform was needed tax reform would be found. It is the moment for the women of Georgia to come forward and put their shoulder to the wheel to push on the state's prosperity. In that way they can prove not only the value of their organizations, but their right to demand anything they want of the lawmakers of Georgia. And what all the women of Georgia want that they will get.

Superfluous Hair Truths

Stop Experimenting

There are but few depilatories sold. You think there are hundreds because you have used the same identical preparation under several different names. This is easily explained. Women stop using when they learn that they are harmful. Therefore, they can not be sold under the same name for any length of time. Then the identical, worthless, harmful concoctions are given new names and advertised again as totally different preparations to who stop using depilatories over and over again under different names, and this will continue as long as women are so unwise as to experiment with unknown, so-called hair removers.

DeMiracle

Has Stood the Test of Time

DeMiracle has been sold as DeMiracle for over eleven years, and its name has never been changed. It is acknowledged the world over by eminent authorities as the one safe, perfected hair remover, therefore, the only depilatory you can use without experimenting.

Leaves No Tell-Tale Smell

If you use DeMiracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because DeMiracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor, an offensive, tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours.

Avoid Permanent Disfigurement

by refusing substitutes. If your dealer will not supply you send $1.00 direct. Free information how to determine which depilatories are harmful and worthless sent in plain, sealed envelope.

Home Again From the Chert Road, COX College and Conservatory, College Park, Ga.

The hour before tea is one of the most pleasant memories the Cox College girl takes with her through life. Strenuous in work, strenuous in play, she relaxes at the winking hour and enjoys informal and careless chatter with her companions. The automobile has unloaded its last passengers, the tennis and basket-ball games are halted because of the growing dark, the walking parties are all in, and the play of the fountain forms a sweet accompaniment to the merry laughter and soft-voiced babble.

Salubrious climate, beautiful environment, strong and exacting courses of study, pleasant recreation make life at Cox College a joy and a never ending source of mental development and vigor.

Several car loads of material for the marble steps have been received and two fights have already been completed. The dormitory building is being renovated from bottom to top. New as well as former students will appreciate these improvements.

A certificate or diploma from this institution is valuable, since Cox College has stood for seventy years in the front rank of colleges for women. Today its equipment is modern, its faculty strong, its courses of study with its high standards of work are well adapted to the modern requirements of the education of young women.—(adv.)

Gossip of Georgians in the Metropolis

By H. S. Carraway, The Constitution's New York Bureau. New York, July 12 (Special).—Edward Rochie Hardy, Jr., a 5-year-old Georgia boy, began his college education early when he was enrolled one day this week as a regularly matriculated student of the New York university in its course on school gardens. He signed his name and then was questioned by Professor Henry Gelsom Parsons, who is the instructor in that course. "I found that while he was attending kindergarten in Georgia he was solving intricate problems in arithmetic, even in algebra," said Professor Parsons. "He is a prodigy that has found his way to one of the large centers of learning. Before the summer is ended he will be competent to direct any school principal or teacher in the successful building of school gardens." "Oh, no," the course will not be difficult for me," said the boy to the Constitution's correspondent. "I have already studied the values of fertilizers in close areas, the temperatures and the moisture. I now expect to learn what to do to banish germs and parasites and also I expect to learn something of grafting."

Eight Girls Make Merry Houseparty at Campbell Summer Home

Did you ever see a bunch of laughing, happy-faced girls on a merry house party at a summer home in the country? Ever watch them frolic over the lawn, or sit on the porch in a merry group, and talk and gossip, and gossip and talk—enjoying every minute of life? Then you know just what has been going on at "Lake Nelda," the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Campbell, near Stonewall, Ga. in Campbell county, during the past week. Eight young ladies from different parts of the state are gathered in the merry group and having the time of their lives on the Campbell place this week. They were just far enough away from the heat and rush of Atlanta to keep cool night and day and they're close enough to ride into the city to go shopping in a bunch when they want to. Mr. Campbell's summer home is in Campbell county, 22 miles from Atlanta, and 6 miles from Stonewall. So it's real country! But that's just what is most enjoyed by this merry group, for they get out and play just like little girls on the big farm that surrounds the Campbell home. In front of the home is a swimming pool more than one hundred feet long—shown in the foreground of the picture. The hosts at the house party are the three charming daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell—Misses Daisy, Nell and Inez Campbell. The entire group is presented in the accompanying photograph, the names of the young ladies, reading from left to right in the order in which they appear, being as follows: Miss Daisy

PARENTS ARE BLAMED FOR DAUGHTERS' FALL

Girls of Fourteen and Sixteen Tell Recorder Revolting Stories of Vice.

After relating a revolting tale of a career of vice on the streets and in the suburbs of Atlanta, Dora Rothstein and Corinne Wilson, two girls aged 14 and 16 years, stood unabashed in the recorder's court Saturday afternoon.

Recorder Pro Tom Preston, shocked by their testimony, called for the parents of the prisoners.

Two aged men and a woman stepped forward and stood before the judge. They were Mr. and Mrs. A. Rothstein, parents of the younger girl, and W. B. Engesser, father of the Wilson girl.

Parents Asked to Explain. "It is up to you," said the recorder, "to explain to this court why you have allowed your daughters to lead such shameful lives. It is a disgrace to the home of anyone. These girls are no more than children. And yet they have gone upon the streets. Why?"

Rothstein said that he and his wife had been unable to control the headstrong girl and that although they had done their best to restrain her, their efforts had been in vain. They were powerless, he said, to keep her at home and force her to abide by their orders.

Engesser said that the Wilson girl had married a youth of 26, less than six months ago, and after having been driven by her husband, turned to a wayward life. He had endeavored to raise her at home, and once went even so far as to send her to the House of the Good Shepherd in Cincinnati.

The two girls were arrested a night or so ago upon the request of A. Rothstein, who had been called to the scene by a neighbor. They told Chief Beavers a story of their criminal life that resulted in a number of arrests, two of whom, W. W. Suttles and C. A. Dollar, were tried in police court at the same time as their accusers.

They also implicated two other men, one of whom is a physician, and both of whom have disappeared. The police have been unable to find them to make the arrests ordered by Chief Beavers. For six days they pined their heads together, having become companions when the Rothstein girl left home this last time.

Without hesitating both girls told the judge their stories. Twice they had slept in the open in Ponce de Leon park, the first night near the skating rink and the second in the tennis court. Once they slept near an old mill in Campbell county, where they had gone in a surrey with Dollar and Suttles.

Much of their testimony was unprintable. Leavitt, an attorney, connected with the case, told the recorder that the home life of the girls was to a large degree directly responsible. "It can all be traced to the fireside," he said.

Mrs. Margaret Lang, a well-known settlement worker, offered to install both girls in some house of correction. The Rothstein girl was turned over to the juvenile courts, and the Wilson girl will probably be sent to the House of the Good Shepherd.

Dollar and Suttles were bound over under a charge of furnishing intoxicants to minors, it having developed during the trial that they had given beer to both girls while on the trip to Campbell county.

New activity was noted in the police vice war Saturday at noon, when policemen swooped down upon the lodging house of Lula Bell at 184 1-2 Peters street, arresting three women, Maud Wilson, Mrs. Lee Berkstein, the Bell woman and one man, L. W. Berkstein.

The prisoners were carried to police headquarters and will be tried Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. All later gave bond.

white satin and a cape of red satin. A novel feature is the use of suspender-like straps that are attached to the top of skirt on either side of back and front. These are made of the striped goods cut on the bias. Similar bands trim the sides of skirt to the slashes which are laced with red silk cord. The cape has a hood which may be worn over the head instead of the bathing cap. The cap here worn has a brim to protect the eyes. The middle figure is wearing a draped suit of waterproof faille, trimmed with fleur de soie having a white ground and a red flower. The surplice blouse has short kimono sleeves with turn-back cuffs. Loops and ends of the flowered goods are arranged at the left side. The trousers are shirred on cords and finished with narrow frills. They extend below the skirt.

The left hand figure wears a suit of Nile green taffeta with panel, collar, girdle, sash and sleeve revers of white taffeta. The skirt is knife-plated and has trousers extending below skirt. The front panel is ornamented with mixed

What Is New in Dress Accessories

By Marion Morris

If a woman is fastidious about the little details of her toilette it is quite certain that she ranks among the well-dressed women of her community. And even if a woman is naturally fastidious, she can overcome it to a great degree by dressing in a business way.

The accessories of dress should not be left to chance to the woman who cannot afford to get new gowns and hats every time. Fashion has a new idea for the clever woman can keep up a modish appearance by simply adopting the "trim" which catches the latest notes of the style dictator.

The Veil.

There is no accessory that is more important or that is more neglected than is the veil. On this side of the Atlantic, one frequently hears that the veil is not fashionable this season because the hats are small, but the ultra Parisienne does not agree with this opinion, because she knows that the well-dressed woman always wears a veil, whether her chin is small or large. As every woman knows that mesh veiling in the caboch, crepe and lay designs are in vogue, I shall tell about the unique veils that are newcomers.

The "Jewel" veil is really the Vanity style—a crepe mesh with a large embroidered black chenille vanity spot to be worn at the side of the mouth with a large rhinestone mounted in the center of the black spot. Although a bit extreme, this veil is perfectly appropriate for Summer wear.

The "Face Frame" veil is unique, but idea of the Paris modiste whose name it bears. It is nothing more than a hair veil of generous length mounted on a ribbon that is run through a casing made of the top of the crown; and it is finished in a similar way around the neck—the only difference is that the casing is set on a few inches from the edge to allow the border of the veil to form a neck ruche.

Speaking of lace veils, reminds me that in Paris black Chantilly lace veils are worn with leghorn hats.

Neckfixings.

The de Medici collar is the most ultra of the season, because it is beautiful and as it is too difficult to make it is not commonplace. However, it has been responsible for the de Medici ruche that is now the leading fashion in neckfixings. This ruche is merely a narrow floating of lace or tulle inset around the V-neck of a bodice and boned in the back to accentuate the de Medici idea. The effect of such a ruche can be easily attained by sewing a narrow pleating inside of one's coat collar; and then it matters not what kind of blouse one wears.

The dehu in its original draped form that is so quaint is much worn, but as the modified dehu with narrow shoulder collar and tapering cluster folds of tulle or lace that give the idea of a draping, is more becoming to the majority of women it is most favored. With either style, one can make a dress or blouse look quite new.

blouses will continue to be popular in the Autumn.

Shoes.

If there is one accessory of dress that is more important than the others this season, it is footwear, because the new costumes have made the feet so conspicuous. The long pointed French slippers of patent leather that resemble Colonial, as they are worn with large buckles, are becoming a little passé—especially those with cut steel buckles.

The Black and White Widow The Eugenie Veil

A rather startling idea for mourning has just been evolved in Paris. This is the Eugenie veil of black net with a deep border of crepe. The front is gathered so that it fastens around the throat with a heavy crepe stock, which brings it down tightly over the face, while the ends fall in points.

For deep mourning it is worn over a small black crepe turban, but at the end of six months the widow becomes black and white, as it is then thrown over a hat of pure white crepe and worn with a white suit.

High sandals are the latest fad of the Parisienne! These shoes, which are generally of black satin are designed with Louis XIV heels and in a pointed last, have very high toes, that are scalloped on both sides, tapering to about an inch width at the top in the back—at the point of each scallop there is an eyelet, so that they may be laced in the Greek fashion.

Patent leather shoes with biscuit color, light tan, pearl gray and white cloth tops, continue to be Fashion's favorite of wear with tailored suits and trottier dresses. This should not be surprising, for they give such a distinctive note to smart toiles.

Hosiery.

Many women have the mistaken idea that because shoes and stockings are so much in evidence with the new slashed skirt modes they should wear stockings that are nothing less than daring. Those thin light gray silks are positively vulgar, as they are so suggestive. Indeed, flesh-color stockings would be less objectionable—and, as a matter of fact, these are very pretty and dainty with Summer frocks. However, black stockings with black shoes, and white with white, still remain the most refined.

Parasols.

Not in many seasons have sun shades enjoyed such a general vogue! Those bright colors are particularly favored as they are mostly used to complete the artistic color harmonies of costumes. The parasols in Japanese and bell shapes are quite chic.

le and sever tailored wear. Fashion has decreed polka dotted four-in-hands to be worn with them when they have soft turnover collars. These cravats in blue or black with white dots are quite the coolest looking, but those in rich shades of gold, red and light green are smart, too.

Blouses.

As blouses are more frequently considered a part of the tailored suit than as an accessory, I shall briefly say that ecru embroidered blouses are now the craze, as they hold the same unique position among modes for practical wear, as blouses of tulle and shadow have for dressy occasions. The latest advice from Paris say that these

An Attractive Hat in White Crepe

A rather difficult style. This veil is generally in a lay weave with a large oval to cover the face of triangle or plain mesh, surrounded with an elaborately woven frame. Molding veils of chiffon are made in the same way, but the contrast between the chiffon and the mesh veiling is too severe to be effective.

The "Valette" is clever and chic, although not very practical. By some women, it is called the "bobby" veil as it extends to below the nose and curves to the side, as does the stripe of the English Bobby's helmet. This veil in a mesh weave, has a narrow scalloped edge in black, white or a contrasting color.

"The Rebeux" veil is the unique

THE LAUNDRY QUESTION

Until one has tried it when planning for an extended trip where economy must be closely considered, it is scarcely realized the extent to which laundry bills may be cut down without personal discomfort. Gauze underwear should be worn, as it can be laundered in one's lodging room. Take a little alcohol lamp, provided with a folding water vessel, some washing powder and a cake or two of soap expressly made to wash articles satisfactorily in cold water. Streetwalkers should be of wash silk, cotton crepe or light-weight wash flannel, and neckwear the kind that is easily laundered.

Mourning Novelties

CREPE FLOWERS A NEW IDEA

Mourning is no longer strictly conventional. All sorts of original ideas are being exploited by the Parisian milliners and their imitators in this country.

The hat shown is made of finely tucked black crepe trimmed with a band of white crepe on which are arranged clusters of crepe roses, black with white centers. At the back the trimming is extended in a fashionable rudder effect.

WHEN VISITING

Put into your suitcase or trunk a strong sun-umbrella extension rod and several long hat pins. If space is limited, stretch this rod upon the book-shelves of the closet. Hang waists and light skirts on this rod by passing the hatpin through one side of the collar band or skirt band, then over the rod, and through the other side.

The Amateur Dressmaker

Possibilities of Chiffon and Malines

WEVE just had a wardrobe windfall. Father, ever on the alert for our benefit, bought a piece each of white chiffon and malines at a merchandise auction and for the past week we've been busy making the materials into accessories. It's been such fascinating employment that it seemed not a bit like sewing. Probably Providence intends all kinds of work to be like that—a real delight—and doubtless when any sort of labor seems irksome it's merely because there's something wrong with the work. Anyhow, this time our fingers fairly ached to get at those sheer materials and I know that is why it seemed easy for us to fashion so many pretty things from them. All Summer Louise has been sighing for a gauzy blouse to wear with various skirts, and so, first of all, we cut off six yards of the chiffon and made it into a neatly tucked waist closing in front between double frillings of malines. Its neck is finished with a nautical collar, overlapped in front by the points of a Robespierre collar which at the back rolls so narrowly that the shape of the neck is covered, and on the three-quarter sleeves are turned-back cuffs that point toward the elbow. The two collars and the cuffs are in malines embroidered by Mildred whose hand-needle work is exquisite—if I do say so myself.

SINCE Commencement Day Louise has been so very gay and has had to wear her graduating frock to so many little dances that its upper part was almost in rags, so we made a new blouse of tucked maline and belted it with a high girde of rose silk, frilled with malines. Then, to wear with a white crepe de chine skirt—all that remained of Mildred's first party dress—we made Louise a white cotton tunic cut out across the shoulders in early Victorian style, but having long sleeves gathered at the wrist into full-finished, tight-fitting cuffs. Where the tunic stops several inches above the knees, its edge is caught under against the skirt, and about the hips its fullness is held down by a drop girde of the white crepe. It's going to be a useful little afternoon or informal evening frock. Half the girls of Louise's set are frankly talking about copying it in chiffon and whatever shades of crepe their mothers happen to have on hand. Louise didn't actually need another Summer hat, but having the materials in the house she covered a wire sulator frame with double layers of white chiffon, trimmed its crown with an inch wide band and a pump bow of malines and about the edge of its brim hung a biased thin band of the same transparency. Its effect is very flimsy and Frenchy and summery-looking. She says that later on she shall cover the same frame with silk and make it do for one of her Autumn hats.

TO wear with her tailored linen and serge suits, Mildred made a most artistic waistcoat, formed of widths of malines—starting from the shoulder seams and running their entire length—that cross at the top of the bust and disappear under a high girde of white

A Cachet for the Petticoat

The question of petticoats is a most important one just now, for with the narrow skirts and the lacy underslips required by fashion, one wonders how a girl is to acquire even that semi-clothed look that is rather expected of her, for her colored stockings will show at the knees, if she wears a lace petticoat and there is no room for her skirts—however, a band of ribbon about six or seven inches wide can be run on flat at the knees and will greatly add to the effect of her costume. Another wide ribbon may be worn straight around the bust under the arms and will bring out the lace brassiere on top of her princess slip, and in the uncorseted days, if the ribbon is boned right at front and back, may really be worn with a well made lace brassiere instead of a corset, if one be of the ultra slim figure that is now en vogue.

Veils for Summer

For the girl who has little color or whose skin loses some of its freshness during the hot day, the face veil of dotted design in single mesh, will be found intensely becoming if chosen in a deep tone of purple or dark blue. These shades seem to give a smooth look and also make the cheeks a bright pink, that not even the ever becoming black veil gives to hot weather.

Settling the Question of Outing Attire

WHAT do you think, Ellen?" Mabel exclaimed as she ran up the steps of my apartment a few days after my little talk on the careful management of clothes. "Esther has asked me to visit her for a week at her seashore cottage." "Oh, how lovely, Mabel!" I said, as I drew my arm through hers and we went out on my little piazza. "That is just what I thought the moment I opened the letter!" Mabel rattled on, "but ten minutes later when I asked myself 'what shall I take down?' I found I was really not as happy over the idea of this visit to the shore as I had at first imagined. So, here I am, to-night to ask your valuable assistance as to what to get or what not to get." I smiled, for well I knew the moment I heard of the contemplated visit that my little friend had come to me for counsel.

"Well, to begin with, Mabel," I said as I gave the couch a little swing, "I hope you are not going to buy a whole wardrobe of new things before looking over what you already have on hand. You know it is always wise at each season of the year to look over old things before purchasing anything new—so the same with this visit to the shore—don't go ahead and buy a whole lot of new dresses, only to find later on that you could have done very well with one or two new frocks and your old dresses fixed over."

"That sounds practical enough, Ellen," Mabel responded, "but I don't think my old things are good enough for this visit. You know, Esther dresses so well, and always has such a lot of well-dressed women around her all the time that I feel I must have good-looking clothes."

"But, my dear," I went on, "don't think you always have to buy new clothes in order to have good-looking ones. Remember, too, that the girls you are going to meet at the shore have never seen your wardrobe before—you know a man can't tell last year's dress from this, provided it is becoming—so they won't be the wiser, whether you have just bought your dresses for the occasion or fixed over old frocks. A dress bought last Summer, with a few of this year's touches, but stylish. Besides, if you spend all your evenings planning or making new gowns, by the time you reach Helen's cottage the sea air will feel more like a medicine to you than a real, true refreshing wave of Summer pleasure." "Perhaps you are right, Ellen," Mabel replied, "for last year when I went away I simply wore myself out planning and buying, up to almost the hour the train left. Surely, though, I will have to buy some new things?"

"Of course you will, goose," but do go about it carefully—and now to answer your first question as to what you will need for this visit, I should think for morning wear you would want two or three little frocks, a couple of white skirts and several shirtwaists. Get these in collarless design and more three-quarter sleeves, as they are more comfortable and look best for seashore wear. Then you will need two or three little afternoon dresses, but surely the ones you bought last year can be fixed up to look like new by merely adding one of the new collars or berthas, which are so attractive this Summer. Again, an old dress can be freshened up by means of a pretty new sash or one of the exquisite and dainty artificial flowers, which look so pretty when fastened at the waist line. Any little touches along these lines make an old dress look up-to-date in style and most attractive. Perhaps, too, by letting down the hem of one of your last year's frocks and facing it you may be able to drap the skirt at the front and sides in quite the latest fashion. By fixing over your old dresses in this way you will be able to keep most of your money toward purchasing one or two evening gowns and a cloak of some sort, or again you may need to get only one new dance frock if you freshen up your last year's one, along the lines I suggested before. You see, all this won't cost very much and how much happier you will be when the time comes than if you had bought a whole lot of new gowns. Often one doesn't need half as many things as one imagines, even when visiting at a wealthy girl's cottage.

"I wonder why you are always such a comfort, Ellen," Mabel said, as she picked up a leaf of my Boston fern. "But how about my shoes and gloves? I know you always love dainty footwear, spotless gloves and pretty neck fixings."

THAT is right, Mabel, I do, for I believe that these little touches often go further than anything else in making a girl look well groomed. You will need at least three pairs of shoes, one for morning wear and two pairs for afternoon and evening wear, and if you can afford still another pair so much the better, but don't buy anything the price of which you will have to worry over while away. About gloves, have as many pairs of either desklin or chamolis left as your pocketbook will allow, and, of course, plenty of pretty neckwear. Two hats will be needed and perhaps a duck or canvas one for boating. Your last year's hat, the one you are wearing now, even if a little faded in color, is such a becoming shape, why don't you get a bottle of one of those colored fluids and fresher it up?"

"Well, I guess I have told you all you will need in the way of clothes, except that a little cotton poplin dress would be very useful for damp rainy days. And speaking of rain, reminds me of the ocean and the almost priceless bathing suit. You can get such fascinating ones at low cost these days that it hardly pays to make one, and the caps this Summer are too bewitching for anything. So, there, my lady, I believe, you are figuratively patted out for your visit, but as a last piece of advice I would suggest that you spend in bed the two days previous to your going away, this giving yourself a nice little rest to help you the better enjoy your trip," and with this I tossed a pillow at my "troublesome" little friend.

silk that fastens in front with a row of tiny white crystal buttons. The neck of the waistcoat is finished with a malines Medici collar shaped into six sharp points, extended by fine wire. On one of her last Summer's suit frocks, Mildred put wide revers—the sort which are narrowest at the top—of solid tulle, edged with malines tulle, and a band of the chiffon having a shawl-sash of the malines whose uppermost end forms a little fan above the waist line and whose hanging end, falling to the knees in front, is heavily embroidered. Her front is gray and so the white accessories are pretty with it, but had it been of a decided color, only a black beanie trimming and sash would have been smart. She also repaired an old evening dress and brought it up to date by turning its worn sleeves and bodice into a high girde and building up the décolletage with strips of pearl-embroidered malines and folds of chiffon. And as she won't go with her arms wholly uncovered, she caught a three yard strip of malines just in front of the left arm-pit, carried it loosely backward, catching some of its folds to the shoulder and allowing the rest to fall toward the elbow, brought the other end over the top of the right arm and let both loose ends fall at either side of the figure. This treatment gives the effect of both a scarf and angel sleeves and it adds greatly to the dignity of a young woman's appearance.

EVER since the day that father returned from a week-end visit at the home of a multi-millionaire business friend, he's implored Mildred and I to have some of "those loose, lacy gowns that the fashionable women wear at teatime and at home dinners." To have told father that one month's wardrobe allowance would scarcely buy the least costly of such gowns would have been brutal and we've always made him evasive replies, meanwhile hoping that he'd forget about them. When he showed us the two auctioned pieces, however, Mildred exclaimed, "Pretty soon, Daddy, you'll see us floating about the house in tea-gowns!" And while it may seem absurd for a woman who invariably superintends the pulling on of dinner to step about the kitchen in what Ruth calls "apartment dress," father is pleased and so nothing else matters. Of course, Mildred and I used passe evening gowns for the foundation slips which we veiled with white chiffon and over which we wore on chiffon coats. Mildred's coat floated over her train and gradually shortened toward the fronts which turn back at the neck into a square Medici collar of wired malines. Her wide sleeves are a trifle caught in above the wrist to form a sort of flowing cuff but her sleeves barely cover the elbows and are sewed into the arm-eyes of a collarless three-quarter coat. Really, these furnished up tea-gowns look so pretty and are so comfortable, because corset need not be worn under them, that don't understand why more women of moderate means have not long ago adopted them for home evening use. I suspect also that a great many of my sister economists don't know how well chiffon washes and wears. Not how cheaply it may be purchased by the piece.

MY share of the malines thus far used up has furnished the trimming for what Louise frivolously terms my war-bonnet, a small, round hat enlarged by means of the finely plaited and firmly wired tulle frill standing upward and outward from the edge of its narrow black, velvet brim. When first tried on this hat, it seemed to me to be too extreme for a middle-aged matron but father likes it. It insists that I haven't changed since of marriage and he utterly refuses to see the gray hairs and the incipient wrinkles which I try to point out to him. In addition to the "war-bonnet," Mildred made for me a three yard cover of chiffon scarf, edged with a narrow frilling in malines and covered an of parasol frame to match it. Then Louise hand-painted the ends of the scarf with bordered the sunshade with a design in mauve clematis. These three new accessories are lovely with any of our Summer costumes.

THE first thing we made for Ruth was a malines hat with a large floppy brim all tiny frillings and a left side weighted down with a huge poupon in chiffon. Under this hat which could be seen of Ruth's little face too so sweet that Louise said she might have something specially to go with it and together we made a chiffon frock with a full length malines coat. As this flimsy costume is for the city to wear to church and to school, we don't consider it an extravagance.

WAISTS FOR THE TRAVELER. Crepe de Chine are popular and practical, as they clean easily. The English double frill is still used, as is also narrow frills which outline the front pleats, or follow the side fastenings. They have the button through collar and cuffs, with long shoulder line. Wash silks have broad or narrow stripes in purple, gray, blue, rose, yellow, brown. Then again any color may be found with a white stripe. All the silks are made in the mannish style. Unlined net and lace waists are also very practical, as they are easily laundered and cool.

TO MARK CLOTHING. To bring the letters up black, with marking clothing with indelible ink, press firmly against the chimney of a lighted lamp or gas globe for a moment. This will do when a hot iron is not convenient.

PRETTY BRASSIERE. A pretty brassiere is made of alternate strips of lace and beading, through which wide ribbon is threaded. Adjustable straps are used for evening wear.

THE IDEA FOR THIS NOVEL & PRACTICAL DESIGN WAS ORIGINATED BY "WINIFRED WORTH"

IN MY study of embroidery I have learned that one reason why Madeira embroidery is flowerlike and fragile is because in the land of its creation about the only beautiful objects to delight the eyes of the women are flowers which grow in lovely profusion. These the women imitate in embroidery, often working by a single light or by the side of a humble open grate fire.

If you wish to make a good imitation of their lovely work, I would suggest that you transfer this pattern to a very sheer white material. Work the leaves, and bowknots in solid embroidery, using a single thread. Make the long stems first, then the leaves. In making the leaves run the thread from the base to the tip, then begin whipping leaf over and over slanting the stitches slightly.

The floral portions are made in eyelet. Use one hundred thread and a very fine needle to outline every petal and center. A sewing stitch is used, yet fine enough to hold the edges firm. With a pair of embroidery scissors slit the middle of each petal, turn the slit edges under and back with the needle. Whip the edges over and over the line made with the sewing thread. Stitches should be of one size, closely placed and deep enough to hold the edge. Sincerely yours,
Winifred Worth

CARE OF THE SKIN

BY EDNA EGAN.

WHY have you "pimples," my dear maiden? Why is your skin "thick and dull"? Why "sallow" as a lemon or "with a blue tinge"? I will tell you. Because, first, you have never taken proper care of your health and next because you have never learned to wash your face properly.

"Wash my face properly!" cried some girl who is famed for her neatness and deservedly so up to a point. "Why, I wash my face every day. Three times—six!"

Maybe so, but since your complexion is marred by some one of the defects which assail neglectful youth it is plain you have left something undone. You do not use good soap, perhaps, and very hot water, both of which are necessary to clean pores properly, for all local trouble begins with dirty pores. You neglect the useful steam bath, whose occasional use is absolutely necessary to invigorate and cleanse. You eat piles of candy instead of wholesome food and drink doctored sodas instead of the right quantities of pure water. You study too hard, neglect exercise, are unacquainted with the life-giving properties of fresh air.

The skin is like the stomach. It must be fed, washed, aired and put to bed, as it were, under restful conditions. Anything that disturbs the stomach will mar the complexion; anything good for the stomach is good for the skin of the face, for every inch of skin on the human body. So begin with a wholesome diet, regular exercise, baths and the rest necessary. It is far easier to pass mental examinations with a body poised by the right regimen than it is to cram the mind every moment and stand up a bewildered and disgraced girl on the important day.

As to nourishing foods, one girl may need one thing and one another, but chicken and rice, salads, fruit and milk are accepted beautifiers the world over. A daily diet of sweet, juicy oranges is superb, these acting directly upon the liver and often doing away with the need of laxatives. For the bowels must be kept free even if it is necessary sometimes to take a course of calomel or castor oil. Gentler laxatives, and ones that may be relied upon if used when necessary, are sarsaparilla, rhubarb, licorice and water, senna tea or figs and senna stewed together.

A pleasant, and girlish way, to take the licorice, is to buy it in stick form, crack it up and eat a good big chunk on going to bed. For those who like the toothsome root, this precaution for regular habits will assume the aspect of a genuine spree. Then there will always be a licorice bite for the hungry girl—sallow or pimply, too, perhaps from the same cause—who creeps into your college bedchamber with a plaint of starvation. Licorice is wonderfully filling, and you have always the pleasant thought that it is a form of dissipation which does not hurt.

ODDS AND ENDS

IN purchasing a piece of linen, if in doubt about the material being genuine, dampen a finger in the mouth, put it on the material and if the dampness shows on the opposite side at the same time, the goods is linen. Cotton fabrics are slower to absorb moistures. The rule is infallible.

SOILED wallpaper can be cleaned upon the walls without injuring the most delicate or highly colored. Dip a whitewash brush in hot vinegar and brush all over it very quickly, but thoroughly. You will be surprised to see how dirty the vinegar becomes. When dry the paper will be fresh and clean as if newly hung.

IF a bag made of outing flannel or any soft material be drawn over a broom and moistened thoroughly with kerosene, it will be found effective in caring for linoleum, painted or hardwood floors, etc. Although the odor may be an objection, it serves as a good disinfectant.

A DIRTY sink pipe or the waste pipe of a lavatory basin will often become clogged. In this case take a handful each of salt and soda, and after mixing the two, put as much as possible down the pipe. Leave for about half an hour, then pour a couple of quarts of boiling water down the drain, following it with plenty of warm water, so as to remove every vestige of slime, soap or grease.

A HOUSEWIFE who turns off her little breakfast omelets has one that is her own invention. She cuts a quarter of a red pepper and a quarter of a green pepper into dice and mixes them and two or three tablespoonfuls of minced boiled ham with five slightly beaten eggs and then bakes it in the omelet pan as usual. For every egg she uses a tablespoonful of hot water in the mixture.

EVERY now and then, instead of allowing the carpet to remain in exactly the same position as first placed, the tread of the carpet should be moved a couple of inches or so either up or down. This has the effect of keeping the pile of the carpet in a uniform condition, and, besides, retaining the fresh appearance of the carpet, it helps it to last much longer than it would if left exactly as laid. It costs nothing to do this, yet saves much.

To remove the smell of onions, wash the pan thoroughly in the usual way and wipe dry with a dishcloth. Next sprinkle with salt, set on the stove and allow it to brown, shaking the pan well from time to time. Rinse again in clean warm water, to which a lump of washing soda has been added, when all taste and smell of onion will have disappeared. To take out rusty screws, heat a pok-

COURTEOUS CHILDREN

BY MRS. McCLURE.

A COURTEOUS gentleness to social inferiors, such as servants, is the sign manual of breeding. Therefore exact from the child a gentle deference for their feelings. He must be told to say "Please" when asking for a thing at table, told to say "Thank you" when it is given him. The men and women of the south are noted especially for marks of politeness and I am glad to be able to tell you that a deal of the training come through the need of being polite to one's black nurse. The deflection is not treated with spankings, for the black nurse has no right to spank. She only says, perhaps with the sorrowful dignity that is more biting than a dozen switches, "It seems terrible Ah got to be 'shamed of de chilo Ah done bring up!"

THE best way to freshen homemade bread so that it is as good as new is to dip the loaf in cold water, put it in a pan and bake it until it is heated through. Then wrap it in a damp cloth and when cold it is as good as when first baked.

It was the old black nurse of the south who taught imperative obedience to the father's and the mother's will, who inculcated love for them, who insisted upon every little shade of the ordinary behavior which stands for breeding. A good deal depends upon the character and bringing up of the nursemaid into whose hands a young child has been entrusted.

The primer for the general behavior or children contains rules so obvious that the average mother can only resent their repetition. Nevertheless, for a few who might care to freshen up their book, let us touch upon them.

To talk in a child's presence of its gifts or looks is to pave the way for vanity and arrogance. The slightest impertinence to superiors should be promptly and firmly checked.

"But who are my child's superiors?" some one thinks, indignantly. I will tell you. They are his father and mother, his grandparents, his uncles and aunts, his teachers, all brothers, sisters and schoolmates who are older and wiser than himself. He must take off his hat to his elders, be they men or women or girls four years older than himself. He must never remain seated when an old person is standing or be other than helpful, willing and gracious with age.

It is no longer the fashion to say, "Yes, ma'am," when a mother or grandmother speaks, but the reply must still be as deferential. "Yes, mother," "Yes, grandmother," is the way the reply should be put; and when a lady is introduced her name should be respectfully repeated as the child gives his hand. Thus, "Mrs. Brown," this single utterance delivered with a mark of pleasure at making the lady's acquaintance.

No forward child should be allowed to claim the attention of visitors. After being introduced he should remain standing until asked to seat himself. If he enters the room without invitation for some reason which seems imperative, let him say at the door, "May I come in, mother?" and then stand quietly at her elbow until given permission to state his requirements.

SINKS

WOMEN slightly above the average height, who find that the ordinary kitchen sink is set so low that it causes them to bend at their dishwashing, vegetable cleaning, etc., will find a new and most practical article in the shops that will help them greatly and allow of their standing perfectly upright at sink work. This new convenience is a round and very strong stand made of heavy crossed wires and having wire feet. It is made to fit in the regular sized sink and also to perfectly fit the bottom of the ordinary round dish pan. It is set in the sink and the dish pan rests on it and in this way water is allowed to run free, a thing that cannot be when the pan sets flat in the sink. It saves wear on the dish pan bottom and is also useful to use on the kitchen table to receive hot kettles, pans, etc., that might burn the table.

NEWEST COIFFURES FOR YOUNG GIRLS

FOR those who object to wire netting in the windows during the summer a new idea has been found to prevent flies and such annoying pests from entering the house. This new preventive is a window box of mignonette. It seems that the insects do not care to face the odor of this charming flower, so that it is an effectual barrier against their invasion. It sounds like a very pretty idea.

Fashions The Stage has Set

FOUR of the gowns shown here are worn in "Years of Discretion" and are extremely graceful. In the upper right-hand corner is a smart afternoon frock of all-over embroidery and lace, the peculiar mode of drapery is most artistic. Beneath is an evening coat of great elegance. This type

lines, and is most becoming to large figures. A charming negligee is shown next. It is composed of lace and

The large figure displays a quaint little frock of green voile, with a tunic of rose satin. This gown is worn in one of the new musical comedies.
