DETECTIVE CHIEF TELLS GRAND JURY OF "THIRD DEGREE"

TORTURE ERA IS PAST, CHIEF INFORMS JURY

Science and Skill Now Employed by Detectives in Securing Confessions From Criminals, He Says.

The police "third degree," which has created such widespread discussion during the Mary Phagan murder investigation, has been thoroughly explained to the grand jury by Detective Chief Lanford, who appeared before that body at its request.

Detective John Black, of headquarters, who has been an active figure in the Phagan case, is also said to have been quizzed about methods employed by the police and detectives. He will not talk of the subject. Members of the jury are reluctant to give any information.

Chief Lanford, however, willingly told a Constitution reporter of his testimony before the jury and of the nature of questions which were put to him. He says he gave a complete and apparently satisfactory account of the "third degree" and the manner in which it is practiced at police headquarters.

In Jury Probing Police Methods?

The belief is prevalent in both police and court circles that a secret probe is being promoted by the grand jury into methods employed by both the police and detective departments, and that it was in pursuit of this investigation that the detective head and Black were examined. Chief Lanford is inclined to scout this theory, although he is unable to account for the testimony that was required of him and of Black in the "third degree" probe.

The use of the "third degree" during the Phagan mystery has caused much comment. Its most effective employment, it will be recalled, was in extracting three sensational confessions from the negro sweeper, James Conley. Now, the negro watchman, the first suspect in the murder case, was subjected to a "degree" equally as strenuous.

The public letter of Mrs. Leo Frank, in which she took the detectives and Solicitor General Dorsey to task for subjecting her servant girl, Minnie McKnight, to a system of cross-examination, which she asserted, left the girl in a state of exhaustion, probably served to actuate the jury's inquiry into police methods. Mrs. Frank's letter was a stinging arraignment, and

MARTIN PLUNGES DOWN ELEVATOR SHAFT TO DEATH

FATAL FALL WITNESSED BY DAUGHTER AND SON

T. W. Martin Makes Vain Attempt to Save Father—Body Will Be Taken to Old Home for Interment.

W. W. Martin, aged 84, for many years mayor of Decherd, Tenn., and a prominent politician in that state, plunged to his death down the elevator shaft of the Third National Bank building yesterday afternoon before the eyes of his son, T. W. Martin; his daughter, Mrs. E. S. Center, and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. E. H. Martin. The party were ascending to the third floor, and the younger man was the first to leave the car. His father started to follow, according to witnesses, and the elevator door partly closed and the car got in motion. For an instant the aged man wavered and his son vainly grasped at his coat as he fell through the shaft beneath the car and dropped to the bottom of the shaft.

Death came to him almost immediately. The son, who narrowly missed being jerked through the opening, declares that his father was killed because of the negligence of J. W. Nichols, the elevator boy. Superintendent Durham, of the building, asserts that the affair was accidental.

The dead man is survived by the following children: Theo W. and Nathan E. Martin, of Atlanta; M. F. Martin, of Chattanooga; Clyde E. H. and I. H. Martin, of Mobile, Ala.; Mrs. E. S. Center, of College Park, and Mrs. J. W. Mason, of Decherd, Tenn. The body will be taken to Decherd for funeral and interment, and services will be held there on Monday.

The room will accommodate as many as forty people. The location is central and will prove useful for committee meetings when members are called from distant sections of the city and find a central place of meeting convenient, or in the case of individual women who may need a place to meet with others to transact business related to their various interests and activities.

HIS CAR NOT MOVING AT TIME OF ACCIDENT, DECLARES MOTORMAN

Fatal Accident Happens Near Dead Man's Curve—One of Victims Says the Eyes of the Driver of the Machine Were Blinded by the Glare of the Headlights, This Causing Accident.

One man was instantly killed and three others injured last night when a speeding automobile swept around a dead man's curve on Peachtree road, and 200 yards away crashed into an outgoing Buckhead trolley car.

The victims were rushed into the city where the injured were removed to the Atlanta hospital. The body of the dead man, J. M. Murphey, 347 W. Third street, was scarred to the Greenberg & Bond undertaking establishment. No other deaths, it is reported, are likely to result.

The injured are L. J. Hearn, of 10 Curran street; John Christopher, of 4 Lees avenue, and A. W. Wofford, of Tenth and Hampton streets. Hearn sustained only a broken arm and bruises about the body. Christopher's collarbone is believed to have been broken, and it is thought that Wofford received a fracture of the skull.

Murphey Instantly Killed

Murphey was killed outright. He was dead when his form was dragged from the wreckage of the machine. The other occupants were tossed out of the car, falling in the road. The machine was destroyed totally. It was a Ford touring car and was traveling in direction of Brookwood. The trolley car was badly damaged. No one aboard was injured either by the impact or the flying glass.

Stories Of Collision Vary.
 The most coherent account, however, is given by Hearn, who talked with a Constitution reporter while hospital surgeons bandaged his splintered arm. He was thrown from the wrecked machine several feet into the air and into a clump of bushes on the road-side.

The automobile was traveling at less than 10 miles an hour, he said, and was climbing the grade at "dead man's curve" on the way uptown. As the machine drew around the bend, the headlights of the oncoming car flashed over them, blinding the driver momentarily.

Before Murphy, who was driving the machine, could swerve from the trolley's course, Hearn said, there came a collision and he felt himself projected into midair.

MACHINE GUNS ROARED FROM "DEATH SPECIAL"

Calvin, "and when we got just above Paint Creek junction all of them began getting rifles ready. They tried to give me a rifle, but I told them I had no shooting to do. The brakeman came through the train and turned down the lights."

"He told us not to raise the windows, but to shoot right through the windows. I was leaning out of an open window and as we came up to Holly Grove, I saw a stream of fire start out of the baggage car where the machine guns were mounted. The stream kept up as we went through Holly Grove."

"As we passed I saw three or four flashes of fire from the tents."

He did not see any shots from the tents before the shooting began from the train.

"I just heard the engine whistle, blow foot, foot, and the shooting from the train began," he said. "I am positive the shooting first began from the baggage car."

The witness said that Quinn Morton was on the train. When the train had passed the miners' camp at Holly Grove, he said Morton came running back through the car and shouted:

"Back up the train and we will give them another round."

Senator Martine asked

"I think I heard him tell some-thing about there being women and children up in those tents, and he wouldn't shoot," said the witness.

At this statement Senator Martine, from New Jersey, almost leaped from his chair.

"What sort of a man is this man, Quinn Morton—I mean Quinn Morton?" he shouted. "Is he an ordinary American citizen that he could order such a thing?"

The attorneys for the coal operators were on their feet in a moment and for a time the committee was in confusion.

"Mr. Morton will be brought before your committee," shouted Attorney Jackson, "and you will see him and talk with him."

"God help me, then," remarked Senator Martine.

The attorneys for the operators protested against Senator Martine's remarks, and after some argument they were told by the committee that they would be given an opportunity to cross examine Calvin and Quinn Morton in rebuttal.

"The senator ought not to say that," said Mr. Jackson.

Give Them Another Round.

Under examination by Mr. Belcher, the witnesses repeated the statement that "Quinn Morton came through the car hollering 'back up the train, and we'll give them another round.'" He said that when the train reached Mucklow just above Holly Grove, the men in the armored car remained there for three days, until after the last battle of Mucklow.

Calvin told the committee that he warned the company bookkeeper, named Bobbett, who was killed in the battle, not to go up into the hills that day.

Was there when they brought him back on a stretcher, he said, "him and the others who were shot in the battle."

The witness declared that Chesapeake and Ohio detectives had "slugged" him in a Charleston hotel, because he had quit the company.

Palefaced women and men who showed traces of years of arduous toil digging coal from the West Virginia mountains told the committee their side of the controversy.

The advent of a peaceful community, of happy, contented people, transformed into theater of war, and the members of the senate committee sat back, with startled glances, as witness after witness told the story of the attack.

The attorneys for the striking miners in presenting their case called about a dozen men and women of the hills to tell the committee of the attack on the strikers' camp at Holly Grove.

Advent of "Death Special."

The attorneys for the mine operators insisted they would show that the train was fired on from the town before the machine guns in the armored car were turned loose.

The advent of "death special," as the miners termed it, or the "bull moose" train as it was called by the operators, was the principal subject of the inquiry this afternoon, following a general condemnation by witnesses of the "mine guards" who were brought into the district by the operators and who former Governor Glascock said he considered the principal cause of the trouble, when he declared martial law.

A detailed description of the armored train was obtained from Harry Arthur, who was employed by the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad as a brakeman on the train. He described the steel sheathing which encased the baggage car of the train and the machine guns which were mounted so as to give the greatest possible range through the protected doors of the car.

Shielded Children From Bullets.

Mrs. Annie Hall, who limped into the committee room, told the committee how she shielded her three little children from the bullets by hiding them in the chimney corner of her little home at Holly Grove when the armored train made its appearance. She said she had been shot through the foot by a bullet which passed through the Bible and hymnal on her parlor table.

W. B. Buzzard told the committee that a man with whom he was talking on a Cabin Creek train was shot from a closet on the car after an argument with a mine guard. A criminal action had ever resulted from the shooting, so far as he knew.

Edwin Evers, mine guard, said that the people in the strike district were "terrorized by the behavior of the mine guards," who paraded through the district fully armed. Ralph McNeil, of Eskdale, declared he had been intimidated by guards and Harvey S. Campbell, a former special miner for the C. & O. railroad, said that he had ridden on the "bull moose" train and had been ordered to shoot if stones were thrown at the train.

"If you shoot, shoot to kill," was one of the orders, he said. Royce Bennett, another former special railroad agent, gave similar testimony.

At tonight's session Lee Calvin resumed the stand and Attorney Byrne, representing former Sheriff Hill, took the cross examination. Attorney Belcher, for the miners, took occasion to declare that his side did not desire to "blame Sheriff Hill for what happened at Holly Grove."

"Did the sheriff give any orders to shoot?" asked Mr. Byrne.

"No, I didn't hear him," said Calvin. Senator Martine asked the witness whether the sheriff saw the men loading their rifles.

"Yes, he saw them," said the witness, "but he did not give orders either way."

Attorney Byrne endeavored to find out if it was not Calvin himself who said, "Let's go back and give the miners a lesson," when the train had spotted its way through Holly Grove. The witness denied this flatly. Mr. Byrne concluded his cross examination without altering the original story told by Calvin.

W. B. Davis, for the Paint Creek Collieries company, then took up the cross examination. He went into the history of the witness and the reasons for his application for work at Mucklow where he was put on as a mine guard. Calvin said he was originally looking for "construction work," but that Manager Hale at Mucklow agreed to recommend him for a place as guard. He worked as a guard for about twenty days, he said. Mr. Davis' examination did not last long and the committee ordered Calvin to return on Monday.

The operators were allowed to put on two witnesses in advance of the opening of their case Monday. George Carsey and Hillborn Price, said to be working in West Virginia mines for a time they went to the Ohio field which was unionized. Fines were imposed on them by the union, they said, for working in a non-union mine in West Virginia. The fines were not paid and they returned to West Virginia.

Mine Guards Caused Trouble.

"When the guards paraded up and down the creek with their rifles on their shoulders, then trouble broke out," said Ed Carsey, a grizzled mountaineer, who, for nine years, as a deputy sheriff, preserved law and order on Paint Creek singlehanded.

Former Governor Glascock told the committee that the principal complaints of the miners came to him concerned the mine guards.

Mr. Glascock made clear to the committee that he had made two attempts to get an agreement between miners and operators to arbitrate their disputes. In both cases, he said, the miners were willing to arbitrate, but the operators declined.

O. O. Honaker, a conductor on the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad was located in his home in West Virginia prior to April 30, 1913, mine guards in Cabin Creek rode on trains on passes. These guards, he said, were armed. Mr. Honaker said his train had been stoned three times during the strike.

Glascock is He-Called.

Former Governor Glascock was recalled to the stand to be cross-examined by counsel for the operators.

Under cross-examination, Governor

NEW FREIGHT ROUTE FOR LYNCHBURG TRADE

Lynchburg, Va., June 14.—Ernest Williams, of this city, president of the Durham and South Carolina railway, which completed physical connection with the Norfolk and Southern railway today at Duncan, N. C., announced that a freight traffic agreement was entered into Tuesday in New York city between the Norfolk and Western, and the Norfolk and Southern systems, by which the western part of the Norfolk and Western will be enabled to compete with Richmond and Norfolk for business in eastern and central North Carolina. The new freight route to be known as the Lynchburg Dispatch will enable Lynchburg and Roanoke to seek North Carolina trade in a territory hitherto inaccessible on account of lack of direct freight lines. The agreement becomes effective July 1.

Huck Finn Went to Prison.

(From "Highways and Byways of the Mississippi Valley," by Clifton Johnson, published by MacMillan.)

The house Mark Twain lived in still stands in Hannibal and is much the same as it always was—stumpy, story and a half, boarded dwelling close to the sidewalk. It is just off the main street, snuggled in among other similar buildings. The senior Clemens had a printing shop upstairs in the L of the house, and as there were several children the living room must have been pretty well crowded.

All the family was the nicest people you ever saw," I was told; "but they were very poor and the father died bankrupt when Mark was 12 years old."

On the next street lived "Huckleberry Finn," whose real name was Tom Blankenship. In the books this lad turns out to be quite an admirable character, but in actual life he and his relatives were a very rough lot, and when he left town it was to go to the penitentiary. The author's descriptions of "Huckleberry's" father fit the person who was "the town drunkard—old man Finn." His end could hardly have been more tragic even in fiction. He was locked up one night in the calaboose, and in lighting a match to have a smoke set fire to the building and was burned to death.

The Huckleberry Finn house was always rude, but it has not yet succumbed to either age or chance, and it's ruinous, unkempt antiquity is quite worthy of its associations. Two or three new sets of new life in it, and I made the acquaintance of one of the woman inmates who was sitting out in front and lurching on bread and a dish of greens.

"This is the Huckleberry Finn house, isn't it?" I inquired.

"That's wholly false," the reply, "an' I know Huckleberry Finn and Mark Twain both was hyar to see it. Deh come togedder in a two-horse coach, an' dey each one give me a quarter."

THIRTEEN MEN ENTOMBED UNDER TONS OF ROCK, AND IT IS BELIEVED THAT ELEVEN OF THEM ARE DEAD.

New York, June 14.—Eleven lives are believed to have been lost in a disastrous cave-in eight feet underground on the new subway construction at Fifty-sixth street and Lexington avenue this evening, when thirteen men of a crew of thirty-two drillers and laborers were entombed.

At 10:30 o'clock six bodies had been recovered and five were reported still buried under many tons of rock and earth. Two injured men were rescued, but one of them probably will die.

Five hundred laborers were quickly assembled at the scene in an effort to dig out the buried men. According to the police and fire authorities it may be hours before some of the bodies are reached. There appears to be no hope that any of the men have escaped death.

Cave-In.

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether the cave-in was due to a blast or the collapse of timbering. There are two levels to the subway construction at this point the upper one for local trains and the lower one for express trains. It was the ceiling of the latter tunnel which caved in. A policeman who gave the first alarm following the accident, stated that he heard a loud blast and it was at once succeeded by the cries of wounded and dying.

Robert Ridgeway, engineer in charge of the public service commission, after an investigation, announced that the cave-in was directly traceable to a blast. The rock at this point is faulty, he said, and the shoring timbers gave away for a distance of twenty to twenty-five feet.

Rock Fell On Men.

Firemen early on the scene discovered that a rock weighing several tons had fallen on some of the buried men. It could not be moved by the means at hand, and probably will have

HUGE RUDDER OF GIANT IMPERATOR.

Over half a dozen men could stand on each other's shoulders beside it and still the top man would not be able to reach the top of the rudder. The Emperor is about seventy-five feet longer than the ill-fated Titanic.

Glascok told of calling a "state-wide peace conference," which was attended by some 400 or 500 representative citizens from all over the state.

"Was the attitude of the representative operators friendly toward that meeting?" asked Mr. Belcher.

"I thought decidedly otherwise," said the governor.

W. A. Abbott, a delivery wagon driver for an "outside store" in the strike zone, testified that mine guards prevented him from delivering supplies.

J. H. Pike, of Holly Grove, said that mine guards shot the lock of his door. "What did you do when the bullets began to fly?" asked Senator Kenyon.

"Just stood and looked at them," said the miner.

FEDERAL BALL LEAGUE CRIES TO UNCLE SAM

New Organization Alleges the Western Union Treats It Unfairly.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 14.—E. E. Gates, a local attorney representing the Federal League of Baseball Clubs, before the interstate commerce commission a complaint that the Western Union Telegraph company refuses to carry the Federal league scores in its "ticker" service.

The attorney contends that the refusal of the Federal league scores is a violation of the Hepburn act and demands an investigation. He declared tonight that the Western Union had been offered pay to carry the Federal league scores but had refused to take the business.

While in Washington Mr. Gates said he would confer with Representative Gallagher, who has a resolution before congress to investigate the National baseball organization to see if it is in violation of the anti-trust law.

Norfolk, Va., June 14.—With a number of midshipmen on board the battleship New Hampshire and South Carolina sailed today for Vera Cruz. The midshipmen may be transferred to the Connecticut and Idaho when they reach Vera Cruz. It is thought that the South Carolina and New Hampshire will take the places of the Connecticut and Idaho which have been in Mexican waters for several months.

Authors Write Their Lives.

(Arnold Bennett in the June Metropolitan Magazine.)

An inquiry into the career of any first-class novelist invariably reveals that his novels are full of autobiography. But as a fact, every good novel contains far more autobiography than any inquiry could reveal. Episodes, moods, characters of autobiography can be detected and traced to their origin by critical acumen, but the intimate autobiography that runs through each page, vitalizing it, may not be detected.

U. S. YACHT COLUMBIA RELEASED BY JAPAN

Washington, June 14.—The American yacht Columbia, seized by the Japanese authorities for unlawful entry into the closed port of Nagahama, has been released and what threatened to be an international incident has disappeared. The news of the yacht's release came to the Japanese embassy today in a cablegram from Tokyo.

It was said that as the Columbia approached the entrance of the harbor at Nagahama she was met by the port authorities and warned against entry. The vessel, however, steamed up to a wharf and proceeded to repair.

Although not so stated in the dispatch, it is presumed that the Japanese authorities satisfied themselves either that these repairs were urgent, or that there was no intent of violating the law.

The Columbia is the property of J. Harvey Ladev of the New York Yacht club, and had just conveyed her owner and a party of friends across the Pacific to Japan from where they proceeded by rail to Europe.

Against Filipino Independence.

(Hon. J. Sloat Fassett, in Leslie's.)

Under the Spanish occupation it is variously estimated that between and 10 per cent of the Filipinos could speak Spanish. The same percentage will cover all who today can speak or read to considerable degree, Spanish or English. There are ten distinct tribes and many variants. There are forty separate dialects or tongues. There is a deadly hatred and fear between Moros and Christians, and a fear between the pagans and Christians, and a sensitive jealousy between Christian tribes, which in the absence of strong central government would result in very unhappy conditions. For fourteen years these various peoples have been in contact with Americans. Previous to that, for 350 years, they were under Spanish rule; so they have had small practice in any popular governmental arts or principles.

DODGE SERVICE FOR SOUTHERN POWER USERS

What You Want When You Want It.

Quiet but consistent effort attained its final reward when the Dodge Manufacturing Company of Milwaukee, in consequence of the success of its power transmission, completed the last link in their chain of power production. Governing the entire Southern States with a factory branch and warehouse at Atlanta, they have instituted a service whereby every southern power user of importance can be reached by their organization in double-quick time.

This well planned move to increase the delivery efficiency of the Dodge organization comes as a surprise to southern manufacturers and is appreciated by them to the greatest degree. They will no longer be compelled to impatiently wait the manufacture and delivery of specially constructed machinery, inasmuch as the Dodge line meets every requirement for the mechanical transmission of power.

How This Feat Was Accomplished.

Long ago the Dodge Manufacturing Company saw the advantage to be gained by the standardization of power harness; and by the location of stations through which such machinery might be placed with immediate reach of the consumer. Realizing from the conditions which surrounded their own experience as manufacturers, the enormous loss in time and money arising from disabled power units, they set out to secure to themselves the most important factor of manufacturing—distribution.

Years of consecutive endeavor and stubborn planning were consumed in the perfection of such a system. It was necessary to first establish a base of supplies in a central city, the center of each section of the United States. This was comparatively simple, inasmuch as such a base or warehouse is owned and controlled by the home office. The gigantic task came in the establishment of subsidiary branches carefully arranged as to bring any point in a given section within six hours of the main warehouse.

The most difficult and consequently the most sought after portion of the country was the great South. Inland and through the mountains, together with the inaccessible locations of many

Owing to the unusual quality of the Dodge line it was necessary to secure the highest class of representation and therein laid an equally serious problem. With a perseverance that defied defeat they so continued their effort over a period of ten years, and today, the final link has been closed and Dodge holds the key to the southern power situation.

S. L. Dickey, branch manager at Atlanta, says "Dodge can give power users what they want, when they want it, and what's more, we want them to demand the best good on our deliveries—it keeps us on our toes to feel that we must maintain the reputation we have built for ourselves."

"And when a man buys a piece of machinery with the name Dodge stamped on it, he gets more than a name. He gets the best of engineering ability, the accuracy, the knowledge of thirty years of successful manufacturing."

Southern power users should avail themselves of this remarkable service. They should be sure to call their engineer or the superintendent that nowhere in the South or in the United States, can they secure such valuable assistance in their problem of manufacturing efficiency.

BEST LEGISLATURE IN YEARS IS VERDICT OF WISE ONES

Present General Assembly May Be Counted On to Do Real Work and Not Spend Time on Freak Measures.

MANY OLD LEADERS FAIL TO COME BACK

However, Their Places Will Be Filled by Capable Men Who Can Be Counted On to Be Heard From.

By T. H. Cozner.
What is the legislature going to do this summer? That is the question that a great many people in Georgia will be asking each other during the ten days that intervene between now and the time that the house and senate will gather in their respective halls in the capitol for the annual grist of law.

considered here, of looking to the senate to furnish a fair quota of their summer amusement, to put some spice into the dull days of the heated season. It is not unlikely that those who are looking for this are going to be doomed to disappointment.

Not a "Fool" Legislature.
In forming an estimate of what any legislative body, or any other body of men for that matter, will accomplish, two things need to be considered: First, the personnel of the body; second, the subject matter of its deliberations. In other words, what sort of men have you? And what are you going to give them to do?

In answer to the first of these questions, it may be said that, if the character of its make-up is to be taken as any criterion, the incoming general assembly will not be a "fool" legislature, a comic opera crowd whose chief function is to furnish public amusement. Political observers of long standing who are well qualified to judge in such matters have pronounced it the best all around legislature that has gathered in Georgia in more than a decade. Whatever may be the attitude of the public towards it, it may be stated with every expectation of truth that this general assembly is going to take itself and its work seriously.

Less Factionalism Than in Years.
It may be considered of particularly good omen to the business interests of the state that this legislature will be much freer from the spirit of faction than any legislative body that has met in Atlanta since 1907. Of course, there are a few extreme partisans who may take occasion to vent their spite on the session developments, but generally there will be a forgetting of the animosities of the past and a disposition on the part of members to devote themselves to measures of constructive legislation for the good of the whole state.

The truth is that this is the first time since 1907 that the general assembly has met that the state has not been either in the very heat of a bitter factional contest or suffering from the wounds inflicted by one just past. No such condition exists this year. The gubernatorial campaign of 1912 was so one-sided and so nearly exempt from the angry charges and recriminations heretofore indulged in by candidates and their friends, that it is not at all likely that Governor Slaton will meet with the fiercest opposition to the legislation he recommends which confronted Governor Brown throughout his incumbency in office.

About Usual Percentage Retained.
An error has been largely current among the people and has been repeated a number of times in some of the newspapers of the state to the effect that this legislature is, to a very much greater extent than usual, made up of new men—men without previous experience or parliamentary training. It is true that a number of the most prominent members of the last house will be missed in this, but it is hardly fair to those members of the present general assembly, who have done the public much service, and whose names are associated with some of the most important legislation placed on the statute book in recent years, to say that the legislature as a whole is an untried body, made up largely of new men. The fact is that the number of men returned from the last general assembly is about up to the usual average.

To begin with the house, the most numerous branch of the legislature, there are more than fifty representatives in that body who have had previous experience in making laws for Georgia. Thirty-seven of the members of the previous house have been returned to this. Eighteen of the house of 1909-10 are representing their respective counties this year, eleven of them serving for three consecutive terms or longer, and eight who were members of the last house. Two members of the present house, T. W. O'Leary, of Quitman, and J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter, were in the senate last year; and three, W. H. Burwell, of Hancock; W. F. Slater, of Bryan, and L. R. Aikin, of Glynn, were in the senate of 1909-10. At least three of the present house, R. B. Blackburn, of Fulton; B. J. Fowler, of Bibb, and Garnett A. Green, of Wilkes, saw legislative service prior to 1909.

Fullbright a Leader.
Among the first men in influence in the house this year will be Henry J. Fullbright, of Burke county. Mr. Fullbright made his mark as a leader on his first entrance into the house and he now has several years of consecutive service to his credit. He was chairman of the second general judiciary committee last year and had other prominent committee assignments. He was at one time in the race for speaker, and he would have made a good race out of it, had he not been withdrawn. It is not unlikely that he can have almost his choice of committees, and he will have a very large say in putting measures over this summer. He is very much interested in compulsory education and in abolishing the office of solicitor general.

When it comes to making up the state's budget for the two ensuing years and raising the revenue therefor, W. F. Slater, of Bryan, will have a large voice. Mr. Slater was chairman of the senate committee on finance when he was a member of that body in 1909-10. He is also remembered as the author of the bill providing for biennial sessions of the legislature, for which a hard fight was made, and which will probably be again an issue this year. He is very much in favor of new tax legislation, and has prepared a bill to tax collateral inheritances.

Bibb's Representatives.
A high order of ability is also very capable of handling various matters who comes back to the house, is Minner Wimberly, of Bibb. Mr. Wimberly is remembered as the author of the fish and game law enacted by the last general assembly, and if the birds had their say, he would have been a grand concern when he returns to Atlanta this year. Mr. Wimberly's colleagues, B. J. Fowler and Wallace Miller are able men too, the former having served in the house of 1907-08, while the latter still has his eyes on winning. His friends are confident that he will make his mark in the house this year.

Of the six big counties in the state, Muscogee will undoubtedly have the most experienced delegation. Only one, H. E. Swett, two of them, J. J. Slade and Ed Wohlwender, were not only members of the last house, but of the house before that, and one of them, Mr. Slade, now that Joe Hill Hall is out, will be the "nestor" of the legislature, and thus a saving grace to the younger members of the house from a time when some of the youngest members were in swaddling clothes.

Of the four remaining big counties, two, Richmond and Chatham, send only one representative each, and the other two, namely, S. F. Garlington and Joseph McCarthy, both are serving their third consecutive term in the house. The former will probably score a record this year in the introduction of local bills, while the latter will be regarded as the spokesman of union labor in the legislature. The other two big counties, Fulton and Floyd, have each an entirely new delegation. Two of their representatives, however, will not be without previous legislative experience. One of them, J. E. Sheppard, was a representative in 1909-10, and although one of the youngest members, he won a reputation for eloquence almost equal to that of his father, the redoubtable Seaborn. R. E. Brown, of the county of Hancock, also has his hand at the legislative game, but it will take another paragraph to tell what may be expected from him this year.

Bob Blackburn, of Fulton.
Mr. Blackburn was a member of the house years ago, and Governor-elect W. F. Slater, whom he helped to make speaker. He will be a new man to most of the members of the present body, but if they presume on that fact to regard him as a meddling in legislation, they will regret the day when he was a senator. Bob Blackburn cut his wisdom teeth before most of the members of the present house were born, and for acuteness and skill in manipulating delicate matters of legislation, it is doubtful whether he will have a second equal in the body. Coming back to the house this year from Marion county after an interval of two years is E. R. McMichael, known to all the teachers of the state as author of the McMichael law, which has almost wrought a revolution in the school system of the state. Mr. McMichael will stand a good chance of being the head of the house committee on education this year, as he was in 1909-10, but whether he is or not his influence will be a large factor in any legislation with regard to schools.

With Fight for Cheap Books.
Like McMichael, there will return, after an interval of two years, O. R. McCrory, of Schley, who has declared war to the bitter end on the so-called school book monopoly. Mr. McCrory proposes that the state should itself undertake the editing and printing of the text books used in the public schools. He claims that, by doing this, and by selling the books at a price which would be the equivalent of the state will be saved $500,000 a year in this item alone.

Of the men who made their mark in the last house and who will undoubtedly be heard from in this, is O. F. Gower, the author of the new law regulating the business of insurance. Mr. Gower has been giving much study of late to the problem of tax revision and he will undoubtedly be heard from on that subject this summer. Representing particularly the growing business interests of the extreme southern portion of the state will be L. R. Aikin, of Glynn. Mr. Aikin served a term in the senate general assembly and was one of the most influential members of that branch of the general assembly. He will be heard from on a plan he has to drain the low lying river lands of southeast Georgia, which he claims will be done at a moderate outlay and which will add enormously to the taxable values of the state.

Business Interests Represented.
Special business interests and the various professions will not be unrepresented. Lawyers, of course, will predominate as usual, with farmers second but there will be a sprinkling of men from other vocations. Dr. A. S. J. Stovall, of Elbert, an experienced legislator, and Dr. L. S. Ledbetter, of Polk, will speak for the medical and dental professions. The action of the senate will be heard when the traveling men make their annual kick for longer sheets and cleaner towels at country hotels. E. D. Cole, of Bartow, may be expected to stand up for the drug and sort drink industries.

Few Extremists.
As has already been indicated, there will be few extremists in this house. There will be progressives a plenty, but not many ultras. If anyone could be singled out as representing the extreme left along this line, it would be J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter. H. J. Strickland, of Pierce, is regarded as the special friend and in a sense the spokesman of Tom Watson. Dr. C. E. Terrell is not to be classed as a radical by any means, but he is known to favor some pretty thorough legislation affecting the entire judicial system of the state.

Among the members of the house who may be expected to make their mark before the session is over, mention should be made of J. F. Rhodes, of Clarke, former mayor of Athens; Shelby Myrick, of Chatham; C. H. McVay, of Dodge; J. E. Clements, of Irwin, and J. M. Spruce, of Mitchell. All of these men have already attained a more than local reputation and they will very likely be counted among the leaders before many weeks of the summer have passed.

Edmondson the Youngest.
No account of the new members of the house would be complete without special reference to C. C. Edmondson, the youngest and most ambitious of them all. He has proposed for himself no less a task than the revision of the state's fundamental law by a constitutional convention. Not a bit discouraged by the practical unanimity with which the members of the state turned down his proposition at Warm Springs recently, Edmondson knows that he can afford to look to the future and he is confident that the time is not very far distant when there will be a very general demand in Georgia for a new constitution.

More Experienced Men in Senate.
To say nothing of the men who are making it warm for each other in their chase of the presidency of the body, namely, Randolph Anderson, of the First district, and J. T. Allen, of the Twentieth, both of whom have already statewide reputations gained in the legislative arena, the former in the house and the latter in the senate, there are no less than thirteen other members this year who have had the benefit of previous parliamentary training. Thus it will be seen that the senate has a considerably larger percentage of experienced men than the house.

South Georgia will have fully her share of the strong men of the senate. W. L. Converse, of the Sixth, a wealthy business man of Valdosta, goes from the house where he has just served several terms to the smaller chamber on the other side of the capitol. He may not be heard from very often in debate, but he will be a power in the committee rooms and will have much to say in the shaping of legislation.

W. M. Oltuff, of the Fourth, made some reputation as solicitor of the city court of Folkston, and while a new man in the legislature, he is an old hand in the country courts. He will be one of the leaders before the session is many days old.

G. Y. Harill, of the Twelfth, is the only man in the present senate who served as a senator in the recent past. How he manages to get one of the counties of his district to forego its turn in the senate in order to send him back has not been explained, but there are doubtless good and sufficient reasons.

Atlanta's Senator.
Atlanta's senator is G. M. Hule, of Clayton county. Mr. Hule has been sent by the people of his county to represent them in the senate for the first time. He was very likely on his past record as a representative that they considered him worthy of standing for the chief city in the state in the senate this year.

The interest of agriculture will be the special care of John W. L. Brown, the senator from the Forty-second. Mr. Brown is a former president of the State Agricultural society and is probably better known to the farmers of the state than any other member in either branch of the legislature.

City Men in Senate.
Everyone knows that Savannah will be represented by Randolph Anderson. The other cities members are not so well-known as Senator Anderson, but are all able men and two of them will make their previous parliamentary training. B. S. Miller, of the Twenty-fourth, who hails from Columbus, has been in the senate before, while the Athens senator, R. T. DuBose, of the thirtieth, was a member of the house last year. The Macon senator, W. L. McNeil, of the Twenty-second, has never served in the legislature before, but he is one of the best known criminal lawyers in the state, and will probably make his mark as a legislator.

While there is the usual percentage of men with previous parliamentary training in both branches of the general assembly this year, it is also true that a large number of the leaders of last year and of recent legislative sessions in Georgia will be absent.

The Absent Ones.
Gone will be Joe Hill Hall, of Bibb, the old warhorse, who while in the house constituted himself as the special guardian of the constitution and watchdog of the treasury; gone are W. R. Jones, of Meriwether, and Walter McKireath, of Fulton, both of them former chairmen of the house committee on appropriations and leaders in debates; gone is Homer Alexander, of DeKalb, the spectacular, who had so much to say every year about what the state should do with the Western and Atlantic railroad, and now that the legislature will likely do something with that property, he has been away; gone are both the Tippinases, about one of whom so much was heard last year in connection with the effort then made to draw tighter the net of the prohibition law.

sent to the houses this year new leaders will develop. Badly as some of the old leaders will be missed, there is no occasion to fear that this legislature will be weaker either in leadership or in patriotism than those that have immediately preceded it. With the political calm now prevailing in the state, the chances are decidedly in its favor.

EXPERTS ARE WANTED TO VALUE RAILROADS

Washington, D. C., June 14.—(Special.)—The interstate commerce commission, in preparing for the physical valuation of railroads, under the Adamson-La Follette act, will make quite a large number of appointments within the near future. All of these positions are under the civil service and will almost exclusively be filled from persons who have had actual experience and technical knowledge in connection with railroad work.

The civil service commission has announced examinations on July 21 for the following positions in connection with this service: Senior civil engineer, senior structural engineer, senior inspector of motive power, senior railway signal engineer, senior mechanical engineer, senior architect.

The commission also announces an examination on July 22 for the following positions: Civil engineer, structural engineer, inspector of car equipment, electrical engineer, inspector of motive power, railway signal engineer, and mechanical engineer.

Examinations will be held at the following places in Georgia: Atlanta, Athens, Augusta, Macon, Savannah and Thomasville.

The examinations are only open to males. Anyone desiring to take either of these examinations should write to the United States civil service commission, Washington, D. C., for form 2622.

VARDAMAN IS WORKING FOR MRS. LONGSTREET

Senator Wants Blot of Inefficiency Removed From Her Record.

By John Corrigan, Jr.
Washington, June 14.—(Special.)—Before Mrs. Ham is confirmed as postmaster at Gainesville, Senator Vardaman, of Mississippi, wants some action taken that will remove from Mrs. Longstreet's record any blot of inefficiency.

The question of her confirmation came up yesterday, and Senator Vardaman stated his opinion that the post-office department had not really meant to charge that her conduct of the office had not been satisfactory. He will seek to secure a statement from the postmaster general himself to that effect. He will also ask that Mrs. Longstreet's statement before the subcommittee of the senate committee on postoffices and post roads be printed for general distribution. The record would fill several hundred printed pages, as Mrs. Longstreet spoke for four hours, and read into the record a large number of letters and testimonials.

Watch Your Baby These Summer Days

Little Stomachs Get Out of Order Easily in Hot Weather.

During the hot months mothers should look very carefully to the condition of the bowels of babies and young children, and for that matter, it is very important in the lives of people of all ages. Care should be taken that the water is pure, the milk wholesome and the fruit ripe (though not over-ripe), and that not too much of anything is eaten.

When trouble results it is usually in the form of constipation or of diarrhoea. If the child loses appetite, is fretful or languid, and complains of headache, you may look for constipation. Give it a small dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at night on retiring, and by morning this pleasant laxative will have acted and the child will be its normal self again.

At the first sign of a summer cold also give Syrup Pepsin, as the cleaning out of the bowels will usually be sufficient to break the cold. Summer diarrhoea can be stopped in the same way by ridding the bowels of the poisons and germs that cause the trouble. This opinion of the value of Syrup Pepsin is shared by thousands of people like Mrs. Ella Denzel, 124 Nichols Ave., St. Louis, Mo., who uses it successfully herself and gives it to her two little boys, and Mrs. C. C. Allen, of New Monterey, Cal., who finds it in every particular just what she and her family need.

STEEL TRUST RULED BY MORGAN'S SPIRIT

Bacon Says That Judge Gary Is Following Ideas of Dead Financier.

New York, June 14.—Robert Bacon, a director of the United States Steel corporation, former ambassador to France and former member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. testified today as a witness for the defense in the hearings of the government suit to dissolve the corporation.

Mr. Bacon was a director of the Illinois and Federal Steel companies before they were acquired by the corporation and figures in the organization of the parent company. He resigned from its directorate in 1905, he said, and was re-elected in 1912.

The witness described negotiations which led up to formation of the corporation and corporation of the idea of obtaining a monopoly or suppressing competition was not discussed by its organizers.

"Mr. Morgan said that under no consideration would he take part in an organization that could restrain competition or be considered a monopoly," said the witness. "Mr. Morgan believed that if he could take part in the organization of this corporation it would be the greatest and crowning achievement of his business career. He believed that the effect of the corporation would be tremendously beneficial to the industrial fabric of this country."

Judge Gary, chairman of the corporation, has carried out Mr. Morgan's ideas. He has changed the old methods. He has abolished the old order of warfare and destructive competition and has been industrious as well as in steel.

"Did Mr. Morgan who took part in the formation of the United States Steel corporation take part in the formation of the Northern Securities company?" asked Henry E. Colton, an examiner.

"Yes."

"And you were in the formation as a director?"

"Yes."

"And the Northern Securities company has dissolved?"

"Yes."

Mr. Bacon admitted that the maintenance of pools was "probably" not contrary to the policy of Charles M. Schwab and William M. Corey, former president of the corporation, but insisted that the policy of the corporation itself and that of Judge Gary was emphatically against them.

Friends Remember Col. and Mrs. F. J. Paxton; Receive Many Handsome Wedding Presents

Colonel and Mrs. F. J. Paxton were the recipients of a number of handsome presents last week at the hands of their many friends. The gifts were in the nature of wedding presents, as it will be remembered that their marriage was a very quiet and private affair, owing to the recent death of the mother of the colonel and the ill health of Mrs. Paxton's mother, who is at a sanitarium in Florida.

Immediately after the marriage, the couple went on a trip north and last week was about the first time that their friends had to let them know in what esteem they were held. It was just like a wedding all over again. Almost every day there was a messenger at the door of their residence on Capitol avenue bearing a gift from some friend or body of friends.

The members of the governor's staff of which Colonel Paxton has been chief ever since Governor Brown has been in office, sent a handsome silver service. A beautiful and expensive chest of silver was the gift of the officers and directors of the chamber of commerce, who took this occasion to let Colonel Paxton know how greatly they appreciated his services as former president of the chamber and also as a director.

Governor and Mrs. Brown sent a handsome silver plate as a token of their esteem. Colonel and Mrs. Robert J. Lowry remembered the recently married pair with a splendid loving cup.

Colonel and Mrs. Paxton were quite overcome with gratitude for the many fine tokens of remembrance they received from their numerous friends.

CHIEF OF DETECTIVES BEFORE GRAND JURY

many other such letters have attacked the detectives and police severely.

Not a Torture Method.

Chief Lanford, in his talk, averred that the public has the wrong conception of the "third degree," and naturally pictured it as a torture method. "This is wholly wrong," he declared, and utterly at variance with the explanation which he gave to the grand jury. "The 'third degree,' he told the jury, is one of the most valuable assets of the detective department, and without it many of a city's most glaring crimes would go forever unsolved. He admitted that in one era of police history the method had been barbarous, but declared that in the present day science and skill had replaced the torture of the past.

In Conley's case Chief Lanford told the jury the negro's confession had been secured through clever detective work in confronting him with damaging discrepancies in his stories of innocence. The method employed was a plan that has served successfully with negro criminals.

"It is worked in this manner," the chief said. "Only two men operate the scheme. They study their subject thoroughly by preliminary conversations, learn his traits of character and his weak points. Then they warm up to the real work—clamp down the screws, so to speak.

How Confession Is Secured.

"The first detective begins to taunt and deride the prisoner. He confronts him with all incriminating evidence gathered against him, pictures the form of punishment to which he is liable and vividly illustrates the fate of others in predicaments similar to the prisoner's. The detective's attitude is threatening and belligerent. When the subject is worked up into a state of fear the belligerent examiner leaves the room in an assumed fit of anger.

"The second detective, who has quietly watched his fellow sleuth's operations, during which he has looked on, disinterestedly, takes up the 'degree' where the other left off. He affects an entirely different attitude. He soothes the prisoner, encourages him and offers sympathy. His partner, he tells the prisoner, is quick of temper and is easily prejudiced.

"The prisoner is warned that the detective who threatened will strive to convict and is prevailed upon to confess in order to save himself from the vengeance of the sleuth who has just left the room. With assumed sympathy, encouragement and advice, the second detective almost invariably secures a confession from the 'third degree' subject."

Different Treatment Needed.

With white prisoners the method is different. They are credulous and prejudiced against detectives and are keen to divine the false attitude of sympathy which wins so easily over the negro. The whites are subjected to an incessant volley of questions for many hours.

These methods are calculated to frazzle the nerves and drive the subject into admission. The duration of the "degree" is generally the most effective phase of the entire examination. Under the severe mental pressure created by the constant necessity of having to meet the bombardment of questions with plausible answers and the accompanying physical strain the guilty prisoner frequently reaches a point of exhaustion which forces confession.

The innocent subject is seldom forced to endure such methods. His innocence is easily divined by his frankness, his corroborative answers and his story. Guilt is quickly detected in even the shrewdest and most experienced of crooks. Even the best of retained stories are often broken down under the strain of constant examination.

Series of Examinations.

As explained by Chief Lanford, the "third degree" is merely the last of a series of examinations. In the first degree the prisoner is allowed to tell his story without cross-examination. He signs a written statement, following which the detectives "run it down," finding whatever discrepancies they may and obtaining corroboration.

The second degree is for the purpose of confronting the subject with the facts in his tale and the evidence unearthed against him. If he falls to confess in this stage of the examination he is forced to remain in solitude and confinement for hours, to meditate over the situation, sum up the probability of conviction and to consider the strain to which he will be subjected in the following degree, of which he has been made vividly aware during the previous examination.

The queries put to him by the grand jury, says the chief, were of a nature meant to ascertain whether or not the police methods were torturous and whether or not they often resulted in prisoners making false confessions in order to escape suffering. The chief declares he informed the jury that the methods were not barbarous and that it was only the guilty who suffered and that they experienced suffering only through the mental strain which attended the necessity of having to answer volleys of questions with faked answers.

So far as is known the jury has taken no action regarding their investigation of police methods, Lanford expresses belief that they were pleased with his explanation of the "third degree" and that they have learned definitely that it is only a method of science and not torture.

RALPH BROWN JOINS J. M. HIGH & CO. FORCES

Mr. Ralph Brown, of Chicago, came down this week to take charge of the large millinery emporium of J. M. High & Co.

Science has proven that nearly all foot troubles originate from a common cause; that of injured claws. The following information will be welcomed by thousands of victims of daily foot misery. No matter how many patent medicines you have tried in vain, this treatment which was formerly known only to doctors will do the work. Don't waste time. Get it at once. "Disolve" two thimblefuls of Calceide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet for a full fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts. The effects are marvelous. All pain disappears instantly and the feet feel stumpy and comfortable. Corns and calluses can be peeled right off. Blisters, chafing, itching, and all sorts of foot troubles will be a thing of the past. Calceide works through the pores and removes the cause. Any drugstore has Calceide in stock or will get it from the wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take anything else instead. A twenty-five cent bottle is sold to be enough to cure the worst.

SUGAR LOBBYIST GAVE $20,000 YEAR

Oxnard Tells of Activity for Beet Industry—Declares Money Was Not Spent Illegally.

Washington, June 14.—Henry T. Oxnard, the millionaire vice president of the American Beet Sugar company, testified today before the senate lobby committee that he estimated he had spent an average of $20,000 a year in Washington for the last twenty-three years, in behalf of the beet sugar industry.

He declared that a cent had been spent illegally. Each year when he was at his home in Washington, he declared, he came to the capitol to watch legislation and see his friends among the senators.

Senator Reed demanded that the witness give the name of Senators who were his friends.

"Most all the senators," replied Mr. Oxnard.

"You need not include me in that list," declared Senator Reed.

"Well, I call Senator Overman one of my friends, and Senator Canning there and—I don't know so much about Senator Nelson," said the witness.

Senator Overman promptly asked Mr. Oxnard if he had ever called upon him at his office or house, or if he had ever attended Mr. Oxnard's entertainments.

Mr. Oxnard replied in the negative.

The committee adjourned until Monday without finishing the examination of Mr. Oxnard.

Sugar Trust Spent $750,000.

Mr. Oxnard informed the committee that "Havemeyer or some other person connected with the sugar trust" informed him that the sugar trust spent $750,000 in the Cuban reciprocity fight. Mr. Oxnard suggested some of it may have been spent "in subsidizing newspapers."

Mr. Oxnard declared he had sold most of his stock in beet sugar companies because of fear of free sugar. He and his brother had owned jointly $4,000,000 of beet sugar stock in companies, and now had $1,400,000 invested in cane sugar in Louisiana.

John A. Carroll, of St. Louis, attorney for the Hill system of railroads, was the first witness. His only tariff activity, he said, was the filing of a brief for the Great Northern and Burlington roads, dealing with cross-otter.

"I want to say that the so-called Hill railroads have no one in Washington trying to influence legislation," said he.

Amos Wold, the senate printing clerk, testified about the orders for printing "Sugar At a Glance," an anti-free sugar document prepared by Truman C. Palmer, representing beet sugar interests and circulated by the order of the franking privilege of Senators Lodge. The committee has developed testimony on whether Palmer was permitted to change the document after the senate had ordered it printed.

"Monkeying With Orders."

Turning to Senator Overman, Wold referred to a previous conversation about the incident, and added:

"I told you then somebody had been monkeying with orders here, and I still think so."

Wold could not throw much light on the situation, and other senate employees may be called.

When F. B. Hathaway, of the Michigan Beet Sugar company, took the stand hostilities broke out again between Senator Reed and Senator Nelson. Reed insisted on having the witness answer in one word whether or not the franking privilege of Senators Lodge. The Minnesota senator finally quit his place and took a seat with the audience.

Senator Nelson returned to the table after Reed and his explanation, and told Hathaway in hand.

Hathaway read several letters that passed between himself and W. H. Wallace and H. A. Douglas, explaining what they understood the position of President Wilson to be on sugar before the election.

Douglas wrote Hathaway that on September 20, 1912, he had seen Mr. Wilson and that he had been assured the beet sugar interests need have no fear.

You need not be one bit afraid of me, sir," Douglas quoted the president as saying.

Vice in New York

(Charlton E. Strayer, in Leslie's.)

To Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., belongs the credit of inspiring a new form of vice crusade, characterized by permanency, scientific accuracy and business efficiency. No mere reform wave this, but the most relentless attack ever made upon the strongholds of commercialized vice. Mr. Rockefeller's interest was awakened in connection with his work while he was acting as foreman of the special grand jury which in 1910 investigated the white slave traffic in New York city. At the close of its labors one of the recommendations of the jury was that a public commission be appointed to study the evil. Those interested became convinced, however, that a public commission would be short-lived, and had been the case with similar commissions, and that its work would soon be dissipated. Mr. Rockefeller, accordingly, effected two years ago the organization of the bureau of social hygiene, and under the title "Commercialized Prostitution in New York City," the bureau has just issued the first of four volumes giving the results of the studies of its investigations. Mr. Rockefeller has written the introduction to the first volume, and in the closing paragraph expresses the purpose of the whole undertaking. "In conclusion it should be stated," he says, "that the spirit which dominates the work of the bureau is not sensational or hysterical; that it is not a spirit of public officials; but that it is essentially a spirit of constructive suggestion and of deep scientific as well as humane interest in a great world problem."

When all the facts are in which these successive volumes will bring to light, the time will then be ripe to decide upon needed legislation, police reorganization and other features of a campaign designed to stamp out commercialized vice. A comprehensive, permanent crusade against prostitution has never yet been evolved. The scientific studies conducted by the bureau of social hygiene give promise, for the first time, of accomplishing this result. No transient reform wave is this, but a fight to the finish.

EXEMPTION OF LABOR STRONGLY OPPOSED

United States Chamber of Commerce Objects to Sundry Civil Bill.

Washington, June 14.—By a heavy majority, the constituent members of the chamber of commerce of the United States, in referendum votes announced tonight, opposed the exemption of labor and agricultural organizations from prosecution under the anti-trust law, as provided in the sundry civil bill, and favored, practically unanimously, the establishment of a permanent tariff commission.

The appropriation in the sundry civil bill for enforcement of the anti-trust law, is made with the prohibition that none of the funds shall be used for the prosecution of labor or agricultural combinations. The bill is about to go to President Wilson for his signature, and the result of the business men's vote on the subject will reach him about the same time that the bill does. The business men contend that an offense against the provisions of the anti-trust law are no less an offense when committed by combinations of labor or agriculture, than when committed by business combinations, and that a prohibition of the use of funds appropriated for prosecuting offenders of the law amounts to a form of abolition from generally for violating laws that are unrepented and unamended on the statute books.

The business men, through the organization federated in the chamber, voted with practical unanimity for a permanent tariff commission, which would be bi-partisan in character, nominated by the president and confirmed by the senate with authority to gather information, but without power to make recommendations, except when called for by the body having power to institute tariff legislation.

The referendum had forty-five days in process of development.

Forest Fires Raging

Detroit, Mich., June 14.—Forest fires are fast assuming serious proportions in northern Michigan, and unless rain comes soon the damage may be disastrous. Serious fires already have been reported in Presque Isle, Kalkaska, Isosco and Emmet counties, but no lives have been lost and but few buildings destroyed, the damage having been principally confined to land and timber.

I WAS BADLY BLOATED

I Could Not Get My Shoes on, My Feet and Legs were so Swollen.

Dropsy is usually caused by organic disease. It may be the heart, or liver, or kidneys, or lungs. Sometimes there is a form of dropsy that is caused by this blood. The serum of the blood exudes into the tissues. Mrs. Jennie Randall, causing dropsy. R. F. D., Enfield, It is a very rare disease, but there is much more prospect of relief, since there is no organic disease behind it. The blood is thin for want of proper assimilation of food. The digestion may be poor. In these cases Peruna is a very excellent remedy. He admits that Mrs. Randall says: "I have been a sufferer from Bright's disease nearly six years; also chronic catarrh for a much longer time. One doctor said there was no help for me."

When I wrote the Peruna Medical Department my body was badly bloated and my feet were so swollen and sore I could not get my shoes on. Now the swelling is gone and I can wear my shoes with comfort all the time. At the time I first wrote them, when I stepped on my feet it felt as if there were pins piercing the instep of them. I suffered excruciating pain and ache in my back and limbs. Since taking Peruna my ailments have been greatly benefited. I shall not cease to recommend Peruna whenever I have an opportunity."

People who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

Deputy Insurance Commissioner Goes With Southern States Life

No insurance event of many months in of such widespread interest as the announcement made today that H. W. Laird, deputy insurance commissioner of Alabama, has been secured by the Southern States Life Insurance company and after July 1 will make Atlanta his home. Mr. Laird has been appointed to the position of assistant to the president and in his new connection in Atlanta will be closely identified with the executive work of William L. Moore, president of the Southern States Life.

Mr. Laird is well known in the south for his journalistic as well as insurance work and his coming to Atlanta accompanied by his charming wife, will be a distinct acquisition from a social standpoint. Many friends in this section have already expressed their delight at the news of their coming.

Speaking of the resignation of Mr. Laird, Hon. Cyrus B. Brown, secretary of state and insurance commissioner of Alabama, said:

"The retirement of Mr. Herve W. Laird from the position of deputy insurance commissioner, which is announced today, my office loses a valuable man and the state a conscientious official."

"Since coming into the service Mr. Laird has had almost exclusive control of the insurance department, my connection being confined to advisory relations in the main. He has shown good judgment established as a policy of the department one of construction and service to the companies as well as careful safeguarding of the public interests and at all times kept in mind the importance of realizing the maximum in the matter of the laws demands. As a result the revenues have largely increased each year and the understanding that no company will be allowed to overlook any attention to which the state is entitled."

"I release Mr. Laird to the service of the Southern States Life with the conviction that he is going with a strong and growing company and thereby bettering himself in a material way. Our relations with the officers of this organization have been such as to give us a very high regard for the integrity, ability and courtesy of each one of them."

H. W. LAIRD
Newly appointed agent of the Southern States Life

Mr. Laird will finally sever his connection with the department on June 30. In the meantime he will assist me in closing up the many details of his desk and instructing his successor in the duties that will be imposed upon him.

BURWELL HAS ENGAGED HEADQUARTERS HERE

Representative William H. Burwell of Hancock county candidate for speaker of the house will be in Atlanta early this week and expects to open headquarters at the Kimball house about June 21.

As R. N. Hardeman of Jefferson has already engaged his headquarters at the Kimball and will also be here next week there may be some life injected into the speakership race. The only candidate for the office who is still to be heard from is J. D. Shepard of Sumter.

Unless the political forecasters are badly wrong in their expectations the speakership race will not be anything like so close as the contest for the presidency of the state. The general opinion seems to be that Burwell will be elected speaker on the first ballot.

L. O. TURNER HONORED BY THE ORDER OF OWLS

The distinction of the second degree of the Order of Owls has been conferred upon L. O. Turner, chairman of the board of trustees of the Owls and L. C. Maul, secretary of the order in Atlanta.

The membership of the second degree is limited to 150. Messrs. Turner and Maul were voted this degree for their faithful work in the order and have gone to South Bend, Ind., where the degree was conferred Saturday night.

PRIZES ARE AWARDED NATIONAL GUARD SHOTS

The shooting tournament of the Georgia national guard which was in progress during the latter part of last week at the range at Fort McPherson closed Saturday with the awarding of the team trophies.

The winners were as follows: First team of the Fifth regiment winner of the Anderson trophy; first team of the Second regiment winner of the Chandler trophy; the team of the Third battalion infantry, winner of the Patton trophy.

In August another tournament will be held to pick a team of fifteen men from the Georgia national guard to go to the big national and international shoot at Camp Perry, Ohio during the latter part of August and the first part of September.

SENATOR HOKE SMITH AND POSTAL PLACES

His Attitude Unknown at Present—Story of Conference Denied by Senator

By John Corrigan, Jr.
Washington, June 14—(Special)—It is impossible to forecast at this time what the attitude of Senator Hoke Smith in regard to postoffice appointments will be.

Senator Bacon has cut the Gordian Knot by saying he will defer to the wishes of the congressmen absolutely unless their nominee is one who has exceeded the bounds of legitimate opposition.

I have been unable to confirm the information given me by an Atlanta friend who came up for the Ad Men's convention in Baltimore to the effect that a number of Senator Hoke Smith's friends had journeyed to Washington to counsel with him in regard to patronage. The report was that James R. Gray, Jack Cohen, Reuben R. Arnold of Atlanta and Howard Thompson of Galveston had come up on Sunday to Senator Smith's house for an all-day conference and left that night. Senator Smith says he was not present at any such interview that Mr. Thompson did not call on him until after the story was printed and that R. Arnold has not been to Washington this session. Mr. Gray and Mr. Cohen have both been here, he said, but not at the same time so far as he can recollect.

It is expected that something will develop within a few days in regard to the postmastership at Dublin and the position of collector of internal revenue at Atlanta.

NEW ENGLAND LAUDED BY SECRETARY DANIELS

Boston, June 14—New England's love of country finding expression not only in patriotic deeds but in epic making the deeds part of the nation's written history was held up as a model to the rest of America in a daily address here today by Secretary Daniels of the navy department. Paul Revere saw the light in the old South Church under said the secretary and sprang into the saddle for his famous ride and Longfellow has not allowed the world to forget it. Children not only New England children but children of the south and west recite the poem at school and New England has enjoyed a prestige such as no other section of the country has had. Yet there were scores and hundreds of Paul Reveres in the south and in the west equally as brave as Israel Putnam and Kings Mountain was as glorious as Concord but you have your Timmeron to sing the Concord hymn.

I once found myself wondering why God had through the whole history of the earth saved up the most beautiful of all the flags for our own nation.

There is no doubt viewed from the standpoint of are alone that the stars and stripes is the most exquisite emblem that ever fluttered in a breeze. The answer is not far to seek. Beyond the western waters are raised up this giant republic with its kindly message of liberty to all the world for all time. To it was committed this price less pearl and it was but fitting that the national emblem should reflect and glorify something of the value of the gift itself.

EIGHTH WARD CITIZENS OPPOSE CAR EXTENSION

The citizens of the eighth ward have called an indignation meeting Monday night in the Tenth ward school building protesting against the proposition to extend the Piedmont avenue car line down Piedmont avenue to Decatur street and thence into the business district.

Their protest is on the ground that through practically all of Piedmont avenue which the proposed line would run the cars would have to pass through a negro section which would prove distasteful to the north side white people who have to use the line. They do not object if they say to a route which would run either down Forrest avenue or Pine street and down Courtland to town but maintain that they will not patronize a line which goes further down Piedmont avenue than Forrest avenue.

TUNING-FORK USED AT WASHING OF FEET

Rickert Resigns.

St. Louis, June 14—It was reported today that Lloyd Rickert, secretary of the St. Louis American league baseball club has resigned and would sever his connection with the club tomorrow. President Hedges said he was not ready to make a statement. Coupled with the report of Rickert's resignation was the report that he would receive four months salary as a bonus for retiring.

High Prices for Pictures.

Paris, June 14—Some high prices were fetched at the sale of Eugene Fischhoff's collection of pictures today. The total realized being $326,260. ## OTHER COURT OFFICERS UNDER FEDERAL PROBE

Clerk and Marshal's Office Investigated as Well as Judge Emory Speer

Washington, June 14—In connection with reports that an agent of the department of justice was investigating the official conduct of United States District Judge Emory Speer of Macon, Ga. Attorney General McRee today said that an examiner had been sent to Macon to report on the operations of the entire court including the clerks and marshal's office.

He said that a new clerk recently had been appointed at Macon and it was usual for the department of justice periodically to examine the court offices.

No charges, he said had been preferred against Judge Speer.

GEORGIA MAY ABOLISH "SOPH" DECLAMATIONS

Athens, Ga., June 14—(Special)—Probably the last declamation contest ever to be held at the University of Georgia by students of the university was held this evening at 8:30 o'clock in the chapel when the following sophomores spoke pieces written by the masters of oratory and public speaking and statesmanship.

Charles Wells Jacobson, of Tennille; Alton Williams, of Athens; George Peter Donaldson, of Statesboro; James Morgan Ray, of Commerce; James Raiford Wood, of Savannah; Clark Howell Jr. of Atlanta; Julian West Walker, of Scriven; Terrie Nichols Hendricks, of Nashville; Stephens Mitchell, of Atlanta; and Walter Thomas Jenkins, of Valdosta.

Hereafter it is probable, only original orations will be heard by Georgia students. Dean Snelling, in the suggestion of Professor Brock in charge of the public speaking department, has recommended to the trustees that the annual soph declamation be abolished. This is a contest which it is believed the university finds out of place—the high good for prep schools and academies. It is traditional in age, however, and many distinguished men in the nation received their first real experience in speaking by contesting for the sophomore cup, the delivery of which on the afternoon of alumni day is also an annual feature at commencement.

POWER SITE IS WON BY THE GOVERNMENT

Seattle, Wash., June 14—Patents to six mineral claims on the Nooksack river held by the Whatcom County Railway and Light company, were declared void today by Judge Edward E. Cushman, in the United States district court, and the land, which includes 300 feet of waterfall, reverts to the United States government. The water power is estimated to be worth several million dollars. The government contended that the sole object in the filing upon the claims was to take the power site, and that no mineral deposits ever existed in them.

HEIR OF BALDWIN ASKING FOR DIVORCE

Los Angeles, June 14—Anita Baldwin McLaughry, daughter and one of the principal heirs of the late "Lucky" Baldwin, filed suit today in the supreme court for a divorce from Hull McLaughry. The allegations were held secret but are supposed to be founded partly at least upon the recent alleged kidnapping of the McLaughry children by their father.

Mays Badgett, Born in the Year 1877, Knoxville, Tenn., Is Known as Atlanta's Stradivarius, and Is a Genius of Untold Ability

Things seemingly impossible for skill and human ingenuity become as simple as childish plays under the master hands of this genius. Those who have never visited this genius' studio, 34 1/2 Peachtree street, have missed the opportunity of their lives. Here this master maker of string instruments reigns in all his glory, and does marvelous things in wood.

MAYS BADGETT

Several days ago a certain person had an accident to his violin as shown by the cuts herewith printed, and he carried the broken pieces to Mays Badgett to ascertain whether this genius could do anything with the pieces.

After five hard days' work on these pieces there came forth the beautiful instrument again, better and sweeter toned than ever.

Mays, as he is called by his friends, and they are counted by hundreds, is one of the most amiable of boys, jolly, sweet tempered and quite a favorite with the gentler and fairer sex, and it is an even bet to ascertain in what line he is a better genius, making fiddles or making love.

He has been honored by musicians all over the country, and has sold instruments to several of the Grand Opera Stars for their own personal use.

Atlanta is to be congratulated on having this artist in her boundaries, for he is in his last analysis the synonym of perfection, musically, personally and socially.

Something New
The Well-known table beverage, POSTUM now comes in New Form Called Instant Postum
A delicious drink—absolutely free from the coffee drug, caffeine

A level tea-spoonful of Instant Postum in an ordinary cup of hot water dissolves instantly and makes it right for most persons. A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream. Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future. Postum comes in two forms. Regular (must be boiled). Instant Postum doesn't require boiling but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water.

Crackers Take Lead Three Times in Game But Musser Falts

Bases on Balls Fatal—Winning Runs Made With Two Out in Seventh—Pole Finishes Strong—Score 4-3.

By W. G. Foster. Chattanooga, Tenn., June 14.—(Special.)—Thinking that the locals would bring today, Paul Musser slipped a first and King on third in the seventh inning today, Paul Musser slipped a first over to Mick Coyle "in the alley," and lost to Chattanooga one of the hardest fought struggles of the season.

Coyle landed squarely on the sphere Alpermann, who had previously nailed a similar drive, made a vain leap in the air for the ball. The ball sped to right center and Flick hit it the way home from first behind King, who walked in from third. The two runs brought the home team from one behind to one to the good and made the final tally 4 to 3 as Coveleskie was steady in the last three innings.

Barons Follow—Attendance Trophy Will Be Presented Thursday—3,207 Paid Admissions to Beat.

By Dick Jemison. The second place berth in the Southern league will be decided at Ponce de Leon this week, not permanently, perhaps, but for a while to come.

Bill Schwartz and his Nashville Volunteers, nicknamed the Nashville Alibis after their president, Alibi Hirsig, will be the attraction the first three days of the present week.

The rivalry between the two teams this season has been intense for several reasons. The Welchone deal, when the Crackers dipped one over on Mr. Alibi, ranked in his breast, and on the last trip of the locals to Nashville, he tried to slip one over, but he failed again.

The team has played nine games to date, three in Atlanta and six in Nashville. The Crackers broke even in Nashville, and then dropped all three played in Atlanta. But there will be a different tale this time.

Empire State League's New Season Opens July 3

Cordele, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Following the meeting of the directors of the Empire league, held here yesterday afternoon, at which time the league season was divided and twelve additional games tacked on to the original schedule, an adjourned meeting was held last night and the official schedule for the twelve games was adopted.

At the meeting last night an advisory committee to the president of the league, composed of H. C. Mitchell, of Cordele, and J. B. Jemison, of Thomasville, was appointed to investigate the salaries paid the players in any club at any time that might be deemed necessary.

President Groover stated to the meeting that he had just wired Empire McLoughlin, at Valdosta, that he was released. This action was taken on the grounds that McLoughlin was in an intoxicated condition and unable to umpire several games this week, and that numerous kickers had been registered against him by almost every club in the league.

The last half of the season opens on July 3, and all of the clubs will then be placed on an equal footing for the opening of the second series. All of the teams will then doubtless be in much stronger condition, more evenly matched and playing better ball than in the first series.

CALCIUM POINTED TO BOB McALLESTER

Pacific Coast Middleweight Has Them All Talking—He Is After the Title.

New York, June 14.—(Special.)—Much interest is felt by eastern fight fans in young Bob McAllester, of San Francisco. Those who have seen him fight in the west say he has everything a champion needs.

His physical makeup is perfect. Nealy 8 feet tall, he is lean and sinewy and symmetrical. His reach is as great as that of Fitzsimmons, who stretches 75 inches from tip to tip, arms extended.

He is very fast in action, and his quick mind enables him to take instant advantage of his opponents. Added to cleverness he has a knock-out punch in right or left, boxing in somewhat the style invented by Ketchel. He is cool, determined, close-mouthed, and effective. So say the California fight followers.

LATONIA DERBY

WON BY GOWELL

Distanced Great Britain by 12 Lengths—Only Three Starts—Time Slow—Great Crowd Cheered Winner.

Laton, Ky. June 14.—Cheered on by a tremendous crowd, made up for the most part of the elite of Kentucky and Ohio society, Gowell, a Kentucky filly, carried the white and green colors of her owner, J. T. Weaver, to victory here today in the twenty-ninth renewal of the classic Latonia derby. Twelve lengths behind the winner, but struggling gamely, came D. M. Hendrie's crack Canadian colt, Great Britain. While twelve lengths farther back Foundation, a month ago reputed to be Kentucky's greatest, three-year-old, came plodding home, badly beaten. At the drop of the flag to a good start, Foundation shot into what looked to be a commanding lead, but at the five-eighths pole Great Britain was ahead. At the mile Foundation had dropped back, beaten, and by the time the last quarter pole was reached Gowell was within a length of the Hendrie colt.

Turning into the stretch, Jockey Teahan was riding hard and Gowell worked up to even terms. Then for a dozen jumps it was an even battle for the lead, but Great Britain, all through struggling to his utmost, could not stand the challenge and Gowell practically galloped under the wire.

The time, 2:33 1-5, is fast considering the fact that the winner was not pushed for victory. The record for the race is 2:30 2-5, made by Governor Gray in 1911.

The winner was a slight favorite over Great Britain in the pari-mutuel betting, paying $4.80 for a $2 bet.

Babies 11, Gulls 8.

Charleston, S. C. June 14.—In a game full of thrilling events, Albany won the last game of the series from Charleston, which went ten innings, 11 to 8. Exception was taken by the crowd to a decision by Pender at second base in the eighth when he called Winston out at second. A crowd of over a thousand waited for him after the game, and despite police protection he was hit several times by missiles hurled by the mob. He was escorted to his hotel under heavy police guard.

The contest was one of the most erratic of the season. Both teams hit the ball freely. Eldridge was driven from the box in the third, but the change to Chappelle did not seem to stop the hitting streak of the visitors who won the contest. Although Duggieby was hit nearly throughout the game he was allowed to finish the contest.

Hoffman, a recruit, tied the score in the ninth with the first home run of the year on the local grounds. The ball was a terrific drive over the right field fence. A collection was taken by the fans for him.

The feature of the game, however, was the batting and base running of Holden, who got two triples, a double and a single out of six times at bat. He also stole third and in the tenth stole home.

AMERICAN.

Scouts 4, Foxes 0; Jacksonville, Fla. June 14.—Jacksonville won the first game of a doubleheader here today and tied the second contest after eleven innings of play. Grover, who pitched for the locals, had the visitors at his mercy in the first battle and none of the Foxes were able to make the circuit. The new men on the Jacksonville club showed up well and it looks as though Wilder now has a good infield. The second game was an exciting contest and was called at the end of the seventh inning on account of darkness. Umpire Barr was taken sick on the field and players from both teams umpired the games. of All Saints' church, followed by a solo by Mrs. John Edgar McKee. We'll stand by the flag," which was enthusiastically applauded. General Robert K. Evans, head of the department of the Gulf of the United States army in speaking on the significance of the day said: "The beautiful manner in which you have celebrated the anniversary of the birth of the flag which I serve makes me long to be an Elk, to be one of you."

This morning, before General Evans rises from his night's sleep, an application for membership will be forwarded to his residence by the Atlanta lodge. Walter P. Andrews then delivered a masterful oration on the occasion of the day, to be followed by Wilford Waters in two old vocal favorites, "Grown October Aie" and "O to Philadelphia," being assisted at the piano by Miss Ruby Askey.

Mr. Waters' songs were one of the pleasing features of the evening. His rich, full voice was heard to especially good advantage in DeKoven's famous old success from "Robin Hood," the ever popular "Brown October Aie." In closing the audience, all wearing miniature American flags, stood and sang the national anthem. A large number of the lodge members were served and a dance indulged in until midnight.

The officers of the lodge who did much to make the evening such a success were: Albert L. Dunn, exalted ruler; I. S. Moss, esteemed leading knight; H. H. Milner, esteemed loyal knight; John Edgar McKee, treasurer; Henry Williamson, Jr., treasurer; Hal Morrison, tiler; Dr. R. Wildauer, chaplain; W. J. Lynch, equirer; Dr. John A. Alley, inner guard, and Walter Dunn, organist.

These strokes of the bell signify that we have not forgotten our departed brethren in the grander world of the official behind the pedestal called "The Tribute to the Flag" was then given by Rev. Dr. Memminger, rector of the forefathers that "we conquer the world, not by arms, but by our example, are being realized." Of Dr. Miller he said: "I can look in a man's face and judge of his head and heart, and it did not take me long to decide after I had met Dr. Miller that he would welcome me to the United States."

Long live Brazil! Long live President Fonseca! Long live Dr. Muller! Long live Ambassador Da Gama! Dr. Muller responded to the toast of peace and friendship among all the American republics.

Prophet of Disasters. William Probasco, hermit prognosticator, came out of the woods near here, where he makes his home, to warn New York an earthquake will try the temper of its cloud-dusting buildings on August 2.

The hermit also took advantage of his visit to such civilization as Elmont offers to set the county right on the cause of the high cost of living. Part of the blame, he says, justly may be put on the things which were in 1897, but the real trouble lies in a series of solar eclipses. These come only once in 783 years, and Probasco believes the best thing to do is just to put up with them.

Probasco says he is going to be a disappointment, so Probasco has read in the stars, and if any vegetation is flourishing on September 30 a frost will kill it. The prognosticator has gone back to the woods.

Secretary Bryan replying to a toast to the president of the United States said President Wilson stood "for the highest type your educational system and institutions can show." Other countries are coming to the United States to learn, he said, and the ambition of the forefathers that "we conquer the world, not by arms, but by our example, are being realized."

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize

We Control Them

Fortunes have been lost by makers in attempts to imitate these tires.
Faults developed—tires fell down—countless tires came back.
It is not from choice that any maker offers tires that rim-cut now.

Our Secret

The only way known to make a faultless tire of this type is by using braided wire bands in the base.
We use six of these bands—126 wires West
them at certain angles.
Thus we make a tire which nothing can force off, yet a tire which doesn't hook to the rim.

These bands are made by a secret machine, under lock and key And no way has been found to make anything else which equally serves the purpose

That is why the demand for this new type centers on No-Rim-Cut tires.

Their Record

No Rim-Cut tires have been used for seven years—used on hundreds of thousands of cars.
Not a fault has developed.
Not a tire of this kind has ever been known to rim cut.

In addition, these tires have 10 per cent greater air capacity than the same rated size in clinchers And that, on the average, adds 25 per cent to tire mileage.

All these advantages, yet no extra price That is why these tires outsell all others—why the demand grows like a flood These are now the world's favorite tires.

be more or less of a loose rattle, especially in changing gears With a steady load, however, this condition would not be so noticeable. The pinion gears usually cause the trouble, especially when a new one is placed in mesh with an old one The old gears wear themselves to a fixed position, and when a new gear is installed there is more or less unavoidable noise This, of course, would be greatly aggravated by meshing too tightly They should be adjusted to a point where there is no lost motion but perfect freedom of action This adjustment should not be made at one point only but the gears should be adjusted to make sure that there is freedom of action at all points in turning Heavy grease will help to silence the noise but will not prevent it if the adjustment is not correct

Motoring department, The Constitution Now that the 1918 racing season has been inaugurated with the Indianapolis contest a fortnight ago these questions are timely and of general interest (1) Is a narrow tread tread best adapted for racing? (2)
Why have racing cars got their frames and oftentimes the motor castings bored full of holes? (3) What kind of oiling systems are used on most speed cars? (4) Why do they have but one ring to the piston, and in such cases is the piston turned for one ring or for as many as are generally used?—T R Barthelemy

(1) The tread is usually standard but it is sometimes narrowed to save weight There is a limit to this however as a car with a narrow tread is more likely to turn over Then again in such a construction there is less resistance in going ahead and also slightly less resistance in turning corners (2) This is done to save weight as much as possible (3) Usually the same lubricating system is used as on regular stock cars a slight difference is undoubtedly made in the amount of oil pumped on account of the high speed required of the motor proportionately more oil is also required This is accomplished by increasing the efficiency of the oil feed pump The racing motor must be practically flooded with oil in order to prevent the scoring of the cylinders at high speeds
(4) The piston traveling at high speed expands considerably and also holds compression with less packing The additional rings increase the friction and tend to rob the cylinder wall of proper lubrication at such high speeds In special motors the piston is usually tuned to suit the conditions required

Motoring Department The Constitution When running slowly the motor of my car hits regularly on but two of the cylinders while the other two will be dead It does not throttle down, but runs efficiently on high speed The ignition I find in good condition and a large spark is obtained from the mag-nete at about fifty revolutions per minute Can you tell me what the trouble with my motor is?—PERPLEXED

It seems that your trouble is due to an air leak at either the valves or the manifold gaskets, or the manifold itself Sometimes a slight sand hole in the manifold will cause this trouble Would suggest that you make sure that the valves are seated properly, inspect carefully for an air leak if it is assumed that you have tried various carburetor adjustments in order to eliminate the trouble From what you said it would appear that a slightly richer mixture is wanted If there is a slight air leak this would impoverish the mixture at slow engine speed

Motoring Department, The Constitution I understand that it is absolutely necessary to determine which is the positive and which the negative wire in order to connect them properly to the starting or lighting generator Some batteries have a minus mark for the negative and a plus mark denoting the positive wires, but minus are not so marked How am I to tell which is which?—AMATEUR

A simple way to determine the poles of a battery is to immerse the wires leading from the battery, or other source in a glass of salt water Shortly bubbles will form on the negative side Although some batteries are identified as you mention others have their positive painted red and the negative black

Motoring Department The Constitution I have heard that ordinary coal oil may be used in a motor with efficient results, in fact, I am told that it works better than gasoline alone does One of my friends uses crude oil with but a small amount of gasoline and claims that he gets more power out of his stationary engine than when he operates on gasoline solely Before I start experimenting, please advise me
F. L. F. RDONET

A mixture of coal oil and gasoline may work satisfactorily in stationary and very slow speed motors but it will not do for automobile motors where a high speed is desired The use of crude oil produces a slow burning mixture which answers the purpose well in stationary type of motors Using crude oil with gasoline in an ordinary motor will foul the cylinders unless same are designed for its use

Motoring Department The Constitution When the motor of my car is not running gasoline drips from the carburetor Can you suggest a way to curtail this waste?—C. R. S

The float in the carburetor may be adjusted or the float valve may not seat properly and it would be best to replace the old valve Very often however the valve may be reseated by tapping slightly making sure to center
the valve pin at the time

Motoring Department The Constitution A pair of electric lamps were recently fitted to my car but the light is not the proper adjustment, and they do not cover the road as well as my acetylene lamp equipment did How can this be eliminated?—S. A. SCHLOSS

Usually the bulbs in electric head lamps are adjustable and may be moved forward or backward If this is the case with your lamps it would be best to locate an object at a fixed distance ahead say about 100 yards and then adjust the bulbs in both lights until the best result is accomplished Also note whether the lamps are arranged in such position so that the light is properly turned ahead
Unless the lights are set correctly you do not get the combined light of both on a single object ahead

Motoring Department, The Constitution I would like to have a suppliementary seat in my runabout suitable for a child Where is the best place to get out at a reasonable price?
W. A. F

The seat may be obtained at any automobile supply store. There is no company which carries detachable seats in stock to fit any make of car Any responsible body maker, however, can easily design and attach an adjustable seat to your car which can be removed or folded up out of the way at will

Motoring Department, The Constitution As we are leaving the city to go to our country home within a few days I have taken my car out of storage where it had been idle for some time during the cold months and I am now unable to crank it Have tried it thoroughly, even lubricating the cylinders, but without results Please let me know what might be my method of procedure in order to get the car working again?

The car has been stored in a damp place it is more than likely that the persons have rusted would suggest putting crude oil directly into the cylinders, and allow it to remain there several hours if you are unable then to crank the motor, jack up one rear wheel, and with the gear in first speed force this wheel around an additional leverage obtained should force
the corroded parts

Motoring Department, The Constitution I am advised by my garage man that a mixture of lactic acid and oil of lavender is good to remove rust spots from a body I do not care to use any more of this stuff, fearing that I might further spoil the paint on my car There are a number of spots which need touching up, however, and these are somewhat rusted Will you please advise a good way to remove the rust and whether these spots can be properly touched up by a painter so that they will not show?
APPRECIATIVE.

The rust must be removed before the paint is applied, otherwise it will not hold it should first be scraped off and then further cleaned with emery cloth and kerosene until a perfectly clean and smooth surface is obtained When all the rust is removed care should then be taken to remove any oil as paint will not hold to an oily surface When thoroughly cleaned and dried the various spots can be painted and blended to match the rest of the car Of course, with some spots this is practically impossible without repainting the whole panel or section Usually such spots are touched up by the use of a paint gun which sprays the paint An expanded painter can do this work so that the spots will hardly show after the car is used for a few days

Motoring Department, The Constitution Recently I purchased a new six-cylinder car and did not drive it more than 10 miles before two of the connecting rod bearings burned out and three of the cylinders scored. In taking down the motor I found that there was a great amount of foreign matter in the crank case There seem to be plenty of oil and I can't account for the trouble except that this dirt followed the oil and caused the parts to score Do you think this possible?—P. C. C

It is more than likely that the foreign matter you have mentioned caused the flow of oil and prevented the proper lubrication of the parts If the flow of oil was prevented only temporarily it may have been sufficient to cause the trouble Even though foreign matter gets into the oil there is usually a screen which prevents it from reaching the vital parts If there was plenty of oil in the motor there is no reason why it should not reach the various bearings provided the oil pump was functioning properly

Helpful Hints to Motor Car Owners.
Because a towed wheel will follow in a straight line behind whatever is pulling it generally it is possible to drive a short distance backward if the steering gear breaks, leaving one wheel controllable The unmanageable wheel in such a case should be lashed to prevent it turning atwart the car

It is not an easy matter to insert a gasket between two flanges which cannot be separated any great distance without tearing the gasket before it is in proper position If the gasket is placed in a cardboard folder the task becomes mere child's play, for the crease of the folder can be inserted and pushed into the small space until the gasket is in proper position and the folder then withdrawn

When it is desirable to blacken lamp and windshield brackets without removing them from position it can be easily accomplished by first roughening up the brass work with emery paper A priming coat of white lead paint is then applied and then followed after drying with a coat of black paint A second coat of black is applied followed by two coats of spar varnish

The ordinary method of putting a valve spring in place after compressing the coils and trying them together with string is all right and very useful, but a very disagreeable, and possibly serious injury may result if the bindings let go while the spring is being held in the hand For this reason care should be taken to use string that is plenty strong enough

One part which requires lubrication, but which is oftentimes neglected is the interior of the flexible speedometer driving shaft to which an elusive squeak often can be traced The best lubricant for the shaft is a light grade of grease or non fluid oil

At any time that a single cell of a storage battery is sulphated or if the gravity of the solution is very much below that of the other cells it should be cut out and given a slow charge individually until it is brought to the same condition as the others

AUTO OWNER USES CAR IN A NOVEL BEAR HUNT

For resourcefulness in adapting his automobile to a game killing enterprise first prize undoubtedly belongs to Judge W. A. Masters, of Chisholm, Minn. who recently when confronted with a dilemma of a big black bear in the roadway utilized his Mitchell 5 4 model car as a ram to bring down the bear wounding him so severely that it was a comparatively easy matter subsequently for Mrs. Ed Davis wife of a neighboring homesteader to follow the animal into the brush and bring him down with a well directed rifle bullet sent crashing into the bear's left eye

Judge Masters declares that the excitement of the involuntary bear hunt and the triumphant return to Chisholm with the carcass hung over the hood of the automobile caused the biggest kind of a stir in Chisholm and afforded the hunters amateur and professional plenty of May day gossip
But for the animal making a quick jump just as the car came down upon him Bruin might have been knocked under the motor As it was, the machine struck him squarely in the side both wheels of the left side of the car passing over his body The bear was unable to show fight and the party proceeded to the nearby homestead where the services of Mrs. Davis were volunteered to shoot the injured animal

The Knight Motor Supreme

Official test demonstrates beyond question the superiority of the Knight type sleeve valve motor over the poppet-valve type

A short time ago a 6-cylinder 38 H. P. poppet-valve motor of high-grade manufacture was given an official test by the Automobile Club of America in New York. It was run for 300 hours. During that time it averaged 35.7 horsepower—less than its nominal rating. At the close of the test it showed less power than at the beginning, despite the fact that valves were twice adjusted in an effort to sustain the power. This motor was of the latest and most highly improved design—but it was a poppet-valve motor.

Back in 1909—four years ago—a 4-cylinder 38 H. P. Knight sleeve valve motor was given a similar—but much harder—test. It was run on the block and on the road in a test covering 320 hours. During this test it averaged 53 horsepower—40% more than its rating. It was also driven 2,000 miles on the famous Brooklands track, and after all this it showed more power at the finish than at the beginning. No adjustments were made to the mechanism of the motor at any time.

Thus every claim of the superiority of the Knight type motor has been officially and unmistakably proven by the testimony of the poppet-valve itself, and this testimony again supports the statement of the Stearns-Knight that—

The Stearns-Knight "Four" is better than any poppet-valve "Six," and that—

The only car better than the Stearns-Knight "Four" is the Stearns-Knight "Six"

The F. B. Stearns Company

546 PEACHTREE STREET, ATLANTA

The most sensational feature of the 500-mile Indianapolis Decoration Day race was the performance of a 25 H. P. Knight-motored car, which, although by far the smallest car in the contest, ran consistently throughout, averaged nearly 70 miles an hour, and did not take oil or water from start to finish. It defeated 19 high-powered foreign and American machines, and finished fifth behind cars of far greater power.

PEOPLE HAVE NO IDEA OF MOTOR CAR COST

W. H. Mahoney Talks of the Chances of Lowering the Prices.

Whether or not the cost of motor cars will be lowered depends on securing new methods of applying labor, more efficient manufacturing methods, according to W. H. Mahoney, southern district manager of the Cartecar company, Atlanta, Ga.

"The average person intending to buy a car has absolutely no idea of the real cost of building a motor car," says Mr. Mahoney. "He thinks that the castings and other parts are quickly made and that materials are inexpensive. Tell the average person that a certain casting, of aluminum, would cost about $35 to $40 to the manufacturer and he would be astonished. One who is not familiar with the construction of an automobile does not begin to realize the immense amount of work necessary in getting every part absolutely right. He does not understand that every part must be fitted exact or the car cannot give such good service.

"It is when the owner has to buy new parts that he awakes to the real cost of making a car. He has never before had any idea of what the real cost is, and then when he finds out he believes he is being charged extortionately, when in fact he usually gets extra at just about what they cost the manufacturer.

"I find that a surprisingly large number of Cartecar owners are people who have previously used other cars, but have changed to this car because of the gearless transmission. This form of transmission eliminated the buying of new parts, because there is nothing about it to cause trouble. I believe this is only a step, however, to the simplicity that will be obtained in motor car construction during the next few years."

COLE MOTOR COMPANY AFTER AUTO THIEVES

Bureau of Information Will Give Every Assistance in Hunt for Stolen Cars.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 14.—(Special.)—As a result of the activity of automobile thieves all over the country the Cole Motor Car company of this city has added to its national selling organization a department to be known as a bureau of information to assist in the recovery of stolen Cole automobiles. J. D. Kiker has been appointed as head of the bureau. Every Cole owner is to have the benefit of the big army of Cole distributors and dealers in the United States and Canada should he lose his car.

There is hardly a place in the country today where automobile thieving is not prevalent. Although the Cole and other makes of cars are equipped so that the owner can lock his car, making it positively burglar-proof, still many forget and leave their machine unprotected, resulting in the car going on a joy ride and in some cases being driven to distant points.

It is the purpose of the Cole new department as soon as an owner reports a car lost to immediately notify their big army of representatives and have them scour the country, garages, etc., if clues lead in that direction.

Just recently two automobiles were recovered by the new bureau. One belonging to the Cole advertising department caused the arrest of the culprit two hours after he ended his joy ride. The private car of J. J. Cole was stolen one night at 11 o'clock, and thirty-six hours later the car was captured in Buffalo, after a record-breaking run between Indianapolis and Buffalo. President Cole immediately offered a big reward for the conviction of the thieves, who are known to the police.

A man seldom feels out of sight when he is head over cars in debt.

Is the Car You Are Thinking of Buying Up to Date or A Year Behind the Times?

Either the Automobile With

- Six Cylinders
- Left-Side Drive
- (Sidewalk Entrance.)
- Clear Running Boards
- No Projecting Lamps

- Self-Starting Motors
- Electric Lights
- Tire Inflator
- No Projecting Hinges

is a year ahead of the times, or without these appointments it is a year behind the times.

Would you make the mistake of buying a single or two-cylinder car? Of course not.

Would you make the mistake of buying a four-cylinder car today, when in the seven months since August, 1912, the number of manufacturers building six-cylinder cars has increased five times?

Who would consider the purchase of an automobile today without fore doors? Not that such an automobile is not serviceable, but because it is out of date and has not kept up with the times.

In 1914, when every manufacturer who has been able to dispose of his old stock, is advocating and building left-side drives, will not the right-side drive car be as unsalable and conspicuously out of date as is the car without fore doors today, except fore doors can be added while a right-side drive cannot be changed to a left-side drive?

Who would ever think of abandoning the left-side drive where the passengers can enter from the sidewalk for a right-side drive where, in order to comply with traffic regulation requiring you to stop with the traffic on the right side of the street, the occupants of the front seat must dismount in the street or go out into the street to enter the car?

The flush side body with concealed hinges and clear running boards will characterize the motor car of the future; the car with projecting hinges, tool boxes, battery boxes and spare tires on the running board, with projecting lamps and horns, will be conspicuously out of date.

There is no question as to which of the characteristics will mark the car of the future. Be sure the car you are considering has these cleaner, later and more practical characteristics, and is not already a year or more behind the times.

R. H. Losey Resigns as Atlanta Buick Manager and Joins Westcott Forces in High Position.

R. H. Losey, for the past nine months manager of the Atlanta branch of the Buick Motor company, has resigned his position to take effect immediately. He has joined forces with the Westcott Motor company, of Richmond, Ind., in the capacity of assistant general manager and sales manager, and will leave in a few days for the north. He expects to return to Atlanta frequently, however, in the interest of the Westcott company, which will be strongly represented here.

The departure of Mr. Losey marks the promotion of a young man, who is a pioneer in the motor car world, and who has forced himself to the front by indomitable energy and determination to succeed. For the past eight years he has been a branch manager for the Buick Motor company, having established and managed the Indianapolis Buick branch before coming to Atlanta. It was his work for this company that attracted the notice of the Westcott. His method of establishing new sales records appealed strongly to the Richmond manufacturers, who made him too tempting a offer to be refused.

The Westcott is one of the standard Indiana-made cars. The factory is the property of the millionaire Westcott family that has been in the vehicle manufacturing business at Richmond for the better part of a century.

Both sixes and fours are manufactured in large quantities, and with the appearance of Mr. Losey at the helm the output is certain to be increased. Since taking charge of the Atlanta Buick branch Mr. Losey has made a wide acquaintance and has made himself felt throughout the southern territory. His move to the Buick branch of the Westcott is a commendable one, and completely recognized his sales record with good results. He will be missed in Atlanta motor car circles, and will be warmly welcomed when he returns in the interest of his new company.

OAKLAND PLANT WORKS AT FULL CAPACITY

Vice President Geo. E. Daniels Says May Was Biggest Month in History.

"This is an Oakland year," said George E. Daniels, vice president and general manager of the Oakland, recently in discussing the motor car situation.

"We are running our plant at capacity to fill orders and more than 1,100 men are employed. During May our daily shipments averaged fifty cars. Oaklands are now being sold by over 1,200 dealers. The total business for the season will be approximately $15,000,000.

"And the best of it is that there is going to be no letup. If we take the word of the dealers who are clamoring for cars. They are unanimous in declaring that the Oakland line for 1913 has been the biggest kind of a hit in the motoring world. We take this as a good omen because we are planning to do even bigger things in 1914 and we know that the car is this year entrenching itself in popular favor so that it will be in still greater demand next year.

"Some idea of the future that the Oakland has created this year is evidenced by its sale in Atlanta. The Georgia metropolis is motor car wise. The people here see the new models before anyone else in the south, and there is hardly a family but has some member in the business, and people discuss the technical points of automobiles to a surprising degree. For a car to make good in Atlanta in the big sense it has to have something back of it.

"Therefore, we are distinctly proud that the Oakland has been leading the field in retail sales during the spring, and that the Oakland Six-cylinder has been making cars ranging from $2,000 to $5,000.

"We have also invaded the foreign field with marked success and taken all in all, we are about as proud of a manufacturing concern can be of the way our product has been received this year."

Let All Pay the Income Tax.

(From Leslie's)

"We are proud of Wisconsin's income tax law," declares State Senator Bosshard, "because it has made the people better citizens, and we believe the proposed national income tax law is defective in this particular." Taking example of the nations of Europe where the exemption of incomes ranges from $77.20 in Italy to $750 in Great Britain, Wisconsin proceeded to determine what constituted an actual decent living in that state and made this figure the exemption. The result was a tax on all incomes above $800 for a single person, $1,200 for a man and wife and $200 for each child, making the average $1,325 in the state.

Senator Bosshard tells us that the passage of the law raised a roar of protest from thousands of persons who had never before paid any tax. Finding, however, that the sums they were compelled to pay were small, ranging from $5 to $10 a year, they instantly began to show a pride in the state and an interest in the work of public officials they had never felt when they were not paying taxes. The federal income tax with its exemption at $1,000 will include but a very small proportion of the population of the country, and we shall fail to get that increased civic pride and loyalty which Wisconsin has experienced and which the whole nation might experience with a lower exemption. Instead of this desirable result we shall have the feeling that the tax is class legislation, placing upon a few the burden which all should share.

A Judge's Good Advice.

(Boston Post.)

"You should be very careful in your investigation of every case presented to you," said a New York judge in imposing a grand jury verdict. "Many a 1913-criminal reputation has been destroyed by the filing of unnecessary indictments, and the removal of the indictment does not remove the stigma upon a person's name."

"That is good advice for any grand jury anywhere. There is always danger of the thought that 'this case is trivial, few citizens are guilty; he'll have his chance later on; he'll indict him on general principles.' But it is hard to argue that the damage caused by an unjustified indictment. There would be no harm to the community if indictments were made more difficult, instead of more easy."

Enrollment of 259 the Lowest At Emory Within Last Few Years

Editor Constitution: I your issue of June 11, under the caption of "Inter-collegiate Sports Banned by One Vote," your correspondent states that "The attendance at the college has dropped from over 300 to slightly over 200 within the past few years."

The facts are as follows:

Enrollment for 1907-1908	285
Enrollment for 1908-1909	270
Enrollment for 1909-1910	313
Enrollment for 1910-1911	287
Enrollment for 1911-1912	259
Enrollment for 1912-1913	267

The foregoing statement, I presume, will cover the "last few years." Your correspondent in Oxford had every opportunity of knowing the truth. The information was easily accessible to him. There has not been any time "within the last few years" when the enrollment has been slightly over 200. It is hard to understand, therefore, how there can be but one of two explanations; namely, either stupidity or malice.

JAMES E. DICKEY,
President Emory College,
Oxford, Ga., June 14, 1913.

The constitution gladly gives publication to the above communication from President James E. Dickey, of Emory college. The report referred to was taken at The Constitution office over the long distance telephone, and the error as corrected by Dr. Dickey was evidently due to some misunderstanding on the part of the editor receiving the report.

World's Wealthiest Man.

(Answer.)

The case of Russia is the wealthiest man in all the world; far richer even than John D. Rockefeller or any of the Rothschilds. His civil list alone amounts to something like $2,500,000 a year, and more than a half of this is available for his own private use.

In addition, the czar owns land in European Russia equal in area to the whole of Ireland, and derives from it the colossal revenue of $5,000,000 per annum. And then he also owns land in Siberia which, even in its present undeveloped state, brings him in well over $1,000,000 a year.

The czar's annual income, including the interest on his savings, has been estimated at $7,500,000.

So, therefore, that the czar puts aside every year a large sum of money for each of his four daughters, the prince who contracts a marriage in that quarter is likely to do extremely well for himself from a worldly point of view.

Young? Yes—the oldest Ford is just ten years young—this month. And its youngest brother is the choice of the lot—a better car than those we built not long ago and sold at nearly twice its price. Big production makes the Ford price low.

More than 275,000 Fords now in service—convincing evidence of their wonderful merit. Runabout, $225; Touring Car, $600; Town Car, $800—f. o. b. Detroit, with all equipment. Get interesting "Ford Times" from factory, Dept. F, Detroit; Ford Motor Company, 311 Peachtree St., Atlanta.

(From "The Roadmender," by Michael Fairless.)

God help the soul that bars its own door! It is kicking against the pricks of divine ordinance, the ordinance of a triune God, whether it be the dweller in crowded street or tenement who is proud to say, "I keep myself to myself," or seclude himself in pitiful solace. Whenever I have returned home less of a man. Whatever the next world holds in store, we are bidden in this to seek and serve God in our fellow men, and in the creatures of his making whom he calls by name.

Philadelphia, June 14.—Miss Mary Browne, of California, today retained her title as women's national lawn tennis champion by defeating in straight sets Miss Dorothy Green, of the Merton Cricket club, in the challenge round at the Philadelphia Cricket club. The scores were 6-3, 7-5.

In the doubles championship, Miss Browne, the national champion, and Mrs. Robert Williams, of Boston, defeated Miss Green and Miss Edna Wilder, of Plainfield, N. J., 12-10, 3-6, 6-2.

Tall Buildings a Necessity.

Land is so immensely valuable in the big centers and the tendency of business is so pronounced toward centralization, congestion, that the tall building is inevitable. It is profitable and therefore is bound to be. The tall building must be superlatively well built. Property owners realize that, and the architects and engineers are responding to the demand. A tall building, perfectly constructed and equipped with its own water supply and fire extinguishing apparatus, such as the Singer Tower, the Metropolitan and the Woolworth, for instance, is as safe as any 3-story or 4-story building, and in many ways safer than most of the 200-foot ones. It is also absolutely independent of fire department limitations. It has to be self-reliant, being beyond ordinary help; therefore the law itself interests every motive compels it to be so built as to warrant that reliance upon its own excellence.

The tall building can be made, and a lot of them are, artistic, beautiful. It is distinctly American; therefore the real opportunity we have of giving to the world a distinctively American art.

RETRACTS STATEMENTS ABOUT EMPIRE HOTEL

Carl Hutcheson Declares He Believes Party Who Made Affidavit Swore to a Lie.

Carl Hutcheson, who recently made serious charges against the Empire hotel in connection with the vice investigation, has written a letter to John L. Edmondson, lessee of the hotel, making sweeping retractions of every accusation against the hostelry. His letter is as follows:

Mr. John L. Edmondson, Atlanta, Ga.

My Dear Friend: You have seen a copy of an affidavit which was given to me in which the Empire hotel was held up as an immoral hostelry. I wrote this affidavit in good faith and accepted the contents therein in good faith, but after conferring with Assistant Chief of Police Jett, whom I consider an honorable officer, and after conferring with Assistant Chief of Police Jett, whom I consider an honorable officer, and after conferring with Assistant Chief of Police Jett, whom I consider an honorable officer, I am convinced that the party who made the affidavit swore a lie; that what he sets out in said affidavit is false, and that I have done you a wrong which I can never correct, except by future steadfast friendship.

In taking the affidavit, I wrote it as he gave it, but I am now convinced that he swore falsely. I wish to also state that I shall make every effort to help the plaintiff to justice, and I shall utilize every effort of mind and body to prosecute the plaintiff to the extent of my ability. I detect and despise liars, impostors and perjurers and will do my utmost to help the plaintiff to place the fraud and his co-operators, if you please, in prison where they justly belong. I do not believe in a dishonorable act, and more than that we have fought our battles side by side in the future.

I beg to state that I think a man to be a coward, if he does not acknowledge a mistake. I am confident that if any disorderly woman or lewd woman were shown at your hotel that you were not cognizant thereof.

In justice to myself, I will state, and I think you will agree with me that under the circumstances I had acted in good faith in this matter, unless I made the error of not conferring with you before I made the affidavit. I am confident that I now consider a dishonorable piece of perjury by irresponsible parties. If my hundreds of friends consider that I am vacillating, let them have their opinions. I will not before God and man do any person wrong if I can avoid it. Why? Because truth crushed to earth will rise again with might and power.

In this letter I hereby call the attention of the grand jury to an affidavit sworn in their presence which I consider a nefarious piece of work, so mean and low as the burning of Rome by Nero.

In conclusion, I wish to state that I shall continue to fight and bring to light the truth of my general accusations concerning vice conditions in this city as published in the press on May 27, but never shall I allow any person to be wronged when I am convinced that I have the instruments and weapons to do so.

I trust that this my letter will be accepted in the same spirit in which I write it.

Yours sincerely,
CARL HUTCHESON.

DORSEY ASKS REFORM IN THE PENAL SYSTEM

Solicitor General Tells Why Many Juries Are Reluctant to Convict.

Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey, of the Fulton county superior court, has given out an interview strongly endorsing the proposal to appoint a legislative committee to make thorough investigation of the penal system and criminal court procedure in Georgia, with a view of improving both, increasing their efficiency and bringing them thoroughly up to date.

The specific proposal which Mr. Dorsey indorses is that recently outlined by Judge W. E. Patterson, of the state supreme court, and which has been commended by leading legislators and superior court judges throughout the state.

As solicitor general, Mr. Dorsey is constantly brought in contact with the difficulties under the Georgia law of convicting a man before a jury, even when his guilt is certain.

"I think one of the difficulties," says Mr. Dorsey, "lies in the fact that the jury, who are laymen, do not know the conditions which surround a convict in Georgia tend to make a man worse and not better, and that juries are consequently reluctant to deliver even a guilty man into the hands of a justice that will merely inflict punishment on him without much likelihood of doing him any good."

"If the penal system were revised along practical and thoroughly conservative lines, yet in such a way that it would make for the moral and physical betterment of convicts, I believe our juries would not only be more willing to convict in proper cases, but would also be willing to give the criminal courts wider authority, which they stand in such great need of."

SANITARY DEPARTMENT CHANGES ANNOUNCED

The action of the city health board in dismissing Inspector Henry Maddox, brother of Alderman James W. Maddox, for insulting a young woman on Alexander street, has caused quite a shakeup in the city sanitary department.

The board has confirmed the appointment of D. E. Rice to fill the vacancy caused by the dismissal of Maddox. Rice is promoted to inspector at a salary of $19.50 per week, and E. Williams has been taken into the department as inspector at $18 per week.

Inspector E. S. Hildebrand sent his resignation to Sanitary Chief John Jentzen, and C. H. Donnelly has been appointed to the vacancy.

Inspector Rice has been in the service for some time, and has proven himself a valuable employee of the health board.

MANCHESTER WISHES TO BE A COUNTY SEAT

Headquarters of the Kimball House will be opened on June 20 by the boosters of the proposed new county of Warner, with Manchester as the county seat, and a determined fight will be made by the citizens of this new Georgia town to have it made a county seat.

Those who are at the head of the movement are confident of success, and declare that the fact that there has been but little active opposition to the formation of the new county up to this time, is an indication of the favor with which the movement is meeting in Manchester, although only four years old, already has a population exceeding 2,000, and is growing rapidly. It is surrounded by some of the richest farming lands in the state.

GREAT OIL LAND SUIT LOST BY GOVERNMENT

Cheyenne, Wyo., June 14.—The government's suit against the Midwest Oil company—a test case involving the title to millions of dollars worth of oil lands in California and Wyoming—was dismissed today by Judge John A. Riner, of the United States district court. While the government sought to recover only 4,000 acres of land in this suit, the issues involved cover 100,000 acres of other California and Wyoming lands withdrawn by President Taft's sweeping order of 1909, designed to conserve the country's oil resources, and especially to afford the government a supply of fuel oil for the United States navy.

President Taft made the withdrawal upon the assumption that he had the power to act for the protection of the oil deposits. His authority was questioned, and congress, by the act of June 25, 1910, affirmatively gave him the power to make the reservations. The lands then were withdrawn. Between the first and second withdrawals, however, a great number of settlers went upon the lands. Judge Riner held that the act of congress authorizing the withdrawal was not retroactive.

Washington, June 14.—Officials here tonight expressed the belief that Attorney-General McReynolds would appeal from Judge Riner's decision dismissing the government of land test suit, and that the test case, pending at Los Angeles and the department of justice is preparing to file in the near future many other suits seeking to stop at once the production of great quantities of oil in the district court, as well as attempting to confirm the government's title to the land.

SAVINGS OF DEAD MAN BEYOND GOVERNMENT

Washington, June 14.—It is not within the power of the federal government to regulate the disposition of the savings of a deceased depositor in postal savings banks, but the subject lies entirely within the control of the state which was the domicile of the deceased depositor, declared Comptroller of the Treasury Downey in an opinion today to Postmaster-General Burleson.

The decision practically reverses an opinion of former Attorney General Woodruff and nullifies regulations drafted by the board of trustees of the postal savings system, which authorized postmasters to pay after the deduction of funeral expenses the postal savings of a deceased depositor to any person to whom they had been bequeathed, or in case a beneficiary had not been named to pay the amounts to blood relations in a designated order of precedence.

The former attorney general and the board of trustees, said the comptroller, whose opinion is final, apparently failed fully to consider the fact that the states have the right to regulate "descents" and the methods by which property may be disposed of otherwise than as provided in the various "statutes of descents."

RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT BREAKS WITH DUMA
St Petersburg June 14—A breach has been opened between the Russian government and the duma. Members of the cabinet announced today that neither the ministers nor the heads of departments will appear in the house until conditions are established under which representatives of the government will be secure from insult by the members of the duma.
The immediate cause of this decision was a remark made by M. Markoff, a reactionary member during the debates on the estimates. While the minister of finance was speaking Markoff cried out, "Steading cannot be tolerated." He added that his remark applied not only to the minister of finance but to all the officials of the various departments of state. The ministers and officials left in a body.
Later at a meeting of the cabinet the minister of the interior spoke strongly in favor of dissolution of the duma. He was voted out most of the ministers arguing that the conflicts between the cabinet and the duma were personal rather than political. Many of the ministers expressed the opinion that the quarrel would prove only temporary.

FINAL TRIBUTE IS PAID TO JOSEPH T RAGAN, SR.
Dawson Ga. June 14—(Special)—The funeral of Joseph T. Ragan, Sr., who died Thursday evening was held this morning at the Methodist church. Services at the graveside were conducted by Minister J. H. Moore, a prominent member.
In the death of Mr. Ragan, Dawson has lost a most excellent and estimable citizen and one who could always be found on the side of right. He was born in the town of Dawson a number of years ago and has always been justly regarded as a capable and successful business man. For many years he occupied the responsible position of manager of the Southern Cotton company and the highest esteem was held in the highest esteem by the officials of this company. He attended the convention of the State Association of Cotton Seed Crushers held last week at Atlantic Beach and at the time he left home to go there he was far from well. He returned about a week ago he was forced to take his bed and steadily grew worse until the end came on Thursday evening a little before 8 o'clock.
He lived long enough to rear to his young manhood four splendid sons, Joseph C. Ragan and Terrill and he has a little 5 year old daughter Dorothy. His wife who survives him was the youngest daughter of the late Dr. Charles R. Moore.

Archer Hurts Finger

"HOUSE ON THE SANDS" PACKS ATHENS THEATER
Athens Ga. June 14—(Special)—Last night the old Colonial Opera house was packed with a really record breaking audience to hear "The House on the Sands" a political drama written by Edgar B. Dunlap of Gainesville senior at the university this year presented by the Thalian dramatic club at Georgia. The parts were well carried, the story seemed to hold the audience in intense attention and the young author was called before the curtain by a splendid ovation in response to the expressed appreciation of the audience.
This is the first time a play written by a member of the Thallians was ever put on by the club. There will be others in the years to follow and the playwrights as well as actors will be among the products of the university in coming classes.

ANARCHIST ARRESTED DISGUISED AS PRIEST
Rome, Italy June 14—Francesco Cocuzza, a leopoldian anarchist, was arrested in the Italian chamber of deputies today after having gained admittance in the disguise of a priest. The anarchist's wife had succeeded in entering the chamber in 1906 and 1911 and on the latter occasion insulted Premier Giolitti before he was taken into custody.
The police suspected the man in priestly garb today, and an officer called him by name. When he turned to confront the policeman he was arrested.
Cocuzza said he simply wanted to renew his acquaintance with Premier Giolitti, and that he had disguised himself in an attempt to avoid arrest.

Naval Changes.
Washington, June 14—Captain Louis B. Van Duser has been relieved from command of the New York navy yard by Captain William L. Howard, whose place as captain of the battleship Idaho will be taken by Captain George W. Kline, Guantanamo. Captain Van Duser is ordered to command the battleship Utah in place of Captain William S. Benson, awaiting orders.

Detective Goes to Pen.
San Francisco, June 14—A sentence of five years in prison was imposed today on Frank Esola, a former city detective, for having aided Michael Gallo, a "bunco" man convicted of fleecing a farmer out of $900. Efforts to lighten Esola's sentence to three years in prison failed today because of the conviction of other officers indicted on similar charges, felt through and the seven will go on trial jointly. The maximum sentence is ten years.

UNCLE SAM RESPONSIBLE FOR HIS INDIAN WARD
Washington, June 14—Uncle Sam is just as much a protector and guardian of the life and welfare of his Indian wards as a parent is of his child or a husband of his wife.
This principle of responsibility was proclaimed today by George E. Downey, comptroller of the treasury in overruling the appeal of Robert W. Woolley, the new auditor for the interior department, for a reversal of the comptroller's previous decision approving a $800 bill of George P. Sampson of Winslow, Ariz., for treating and nursing back to health a blind Indian who had been run over by a railroad train. Auditor Woolley sustaining the position of his predecessor thought the bill unauthorized and unreasonable.
Charles Walker, blind Navajo, of Leuphi, Ariz., Indian school and ward of the government, deserted by his guide and companion upon the approach of a train, was run over by Dr. Sampson, called to his assistance, amputated his left leg, and right foot and cared for him for three months.
This was an emergency if there ever was one, the Indian had to be cared for at once as a matter of humanity said the comptroller in holding the bill just and reasonable. Could a father escape liability for services rendered his child under similar circumstances? He could not.

SLASHING GIVEN STEEL SCHEDULE

All Iron and Steel Raw Materials Go to Free List—All Finished Steel Products Also Reduced.

Washington, June 14.—The bill to free the list of the tariff transfer of iron and steel raw materials, with an estimated value of more than $600,000 a year was approved today by the majority members of the senate committee. This is the senate's additional to the Underwood free list to an aggregate annual loss of $2,000,000 in revenue making the total estimated annual revenue loss from the free list about $27,000,000.

After an entire day spent on the subcommittee's report of the metal schedule, Chairman Simmons announced it had been widely cut, nearly every item of the schedule being reduced. To the free list were added pig iron, ferro manganese, steel blooms, slabs and billets. On all finished steel products an average reduction of 10 per cent was made from the Underwood rates, lead, zinc and aluminum were left unaltered to be disposed of Monday.

Aluminum will be changed from an ad valorem to a specific tariff basis and the duty will be reduced, but it will not be transferred to the free list as many had advocated. Aluminum exporters will be called in Monday to go over the committee's proposed specific rates.

All structural steel cut. All structural steel which was made dutiable at 12 per cent in the Underwood bill has been reduced compensatory to the free listing of raw materials the average rates being about 10 per cent ad valorem. The raw materials were placed on the free list largely because they are controlled by the United States Steel Corporation.

Senator Simmons said the administrative features of the bill which have presented such a problem were not acted upon Monday or Tuesday and that the bill would be ready for the caucus by Wednesday or Thursday. It was agreed by many of the democratic senators that it would have been well had there been no attempt made at this session to revise the tariff administrative regulations.

Inasmuch as the house bill has made changes and the senate has considered the subject for many weeks, it finally was determined that the revision at this session be completed. All democrats of the finance committee, however, make no secret of their wish that it would have been possible to retain the Payne-Aldrich bill administrative provisions until a commission could make a thorough study of the subject.

On Monday the committee will take up the agricultural sundries schedules and the free list. It is predicted the caucus will make few changes and that debate on the measure can begin in the senate by Wednesday, June 23.

HE SUED FOR $75,000 AND GOT SIX CENTS

New York, June 14.—Thomas B. Harred, a Philadelphia lawyer, won a verdict today of six cents damages against the International Moulding company, publishers of the Cosmopolitan for libel. Harred brought suit for $75,000 on the ground that he had been injured by publication in the Cosmopolitan of articles relating to the "sugar trust."

NEW GERMAN CRUISER STICKS ON THE STOCKS

Hamburg, Germany, June 14.—The great German battle cruiser hitherto known as "M" was to have been launched this afternoon, but refused to move from the stocks after she had been christened the Derfflinger by General August von Mackensen.

The general made a patriotic speech and broke a bottle of champagne on her bow. The cruiser stuck fast, however, and attempts to start her were abandoned.

JUBILEE OF THE KAISER GETS IN FULL SWING

All Germany Celebrating Twenty-Five Years' Reign of William III.

Berlin, June 14.—The jubilee festivities in connection with the completion tomorrow of the twenty-fifth year of Emperor William's reign are getting in full swing throughout the German empire.

The Berlin newspapers print columns of dispatches today regarding celebrations being held in the cities of Germany and abroad.

Amnesties have been granted by the sovereigns of the various German states and endowments amounting to millions of dollars have been bestowed on philanthropic institutions.

The general emphasis laid upon the peaceful character of the German emperor and his reign is the striking feature in a year of a billion mark military bill. This was summed up in a speech made by President Johannes Koepf at a commemorative session today of the renaissance which was attended by the imperial chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, and all the ministers.

The speaker referred to Emperor William eminently as "the peace prince," who, having in his hand the mightiest instrument used in modern times, preferred to preserve the peace of the Germans and the world.

At noon today the emperor received the Turkish ambassador to Germany, Osman Nizami Pascha, and Cardinal Von Koop, who respectively presented to his majesty the congratulations of the heads of the Mohammedan and Catholic worlds.

Andrew Carnegie, J. G. Schmldap, and E. S. Brookings, representing American peace societies, arrived here today. They will be received by the emperor tomorrow or Monday.

President Cables Kaiser.

Washington, June 14.—In recognition of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the accession of Emperor William to the German throne, President Wilson today sent the emperor the following message:

"In the sincere hope that a long continuance of your majesty's benign and peaceful reign may bring the great German people increased blessing, I offer to your majesty the cordial felicitations of the government and people of the United States, on this twenty-fifth anniversary of your majesty's accession, and my personal good wishes for your majesty's welfare."

TABLET IS UNVEILED TO FATHER OF NAVY

Philadelphia, June 14.—Included among flag day exercises in this city today there was unveiled at St. Mary's Roman Catholic church a tablet in memory of Commodore John Barry, "Father of the American Navy," whose body lies buried in the church yard there. Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, participated in the ceremonies.

The usual patriotic exercises were held at the little house at 339 Arch street, in the wholesale business district, where Betsy Ross made the first American flag 136 years ago.

NEW SPANISH CABINET FORMED BY ROMANONES

Minister of Foreign Affairs—Lopez Munoz. Minister of the Interior—Duke of Alba. Minister of Finance—Suarez Inclan. Minister of War—General de Luque. Minister of Marine—Amalio Jimeno. # GREAT FUNERAL PARADE FOR MILITANT "MARTYR"

Miss Davison, Killed at English Derby, Interred by the Suffragettes.

London, June 14.—Suffragettes, militant as well as non-militant, came from all parts of England today for the funeral of Miss Emeline Pankhurst, who met her death while interfering with the king's horse in the derby on June 4.

A special train brought the body of the "martyr" from Epsom to Victoria station, where a procession of 8,000 women was waiting to escort it across the city to St. George's church, Brompton, where the service was held.

Crowds gathered early in the morning in the vicinity of the militant suffragette headquarters where the blinds were drawn and a huge banner hung at half mast. Many detachments of women arrived from the provinces to participate in the parade. They were dressed in white with purple sashes. Twenty brass bands furnished the music for the procession.

Great Display of Banners.

There was a great display of banners, bearing such legends as "right and God will give thee victory" or "unconquerable and not afraid."

The train bearing the coffin left Epsom station soon after 11 o'clock. The coffin was covered with a purple pall and was accompanied to London by Miss Davison's brother and a suffragette guard of honor.

The funeral procession started from Victoria station at 2 o'clock. The coffin covered with flowers, was in an open hearse drawn by four black horses.

Enormous crowds surrounded the stadium, making progress difficult. The parade was divided into eleven sections. The suffragettes marched in fours, all carrying flowers.

The coffin was in the middle of the procession and the clergy of St. George's church, Brompton, marched in the rear. The mayor of the city, Mr. Baumgardner, had issued a statement that he was not a sympathizer with the woman's militant tactics.

With the exception of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, who was escorted by General Mrs. Flora Drummond, who is ill, all the leaders of the militant organization occupied prominent places in the procession.

Owing to the dense through the procession moved very slowly.

Some Silks Boing.

There was some slight boing here and there, but the crowds were for the most part orderly and sympathetic.

The procession, which was three-quarters of a mile long, took an hour to pass the Piccadilly circus. A number of youths cheered the women as they passed through Shaftsbury avenue, and this mark of disrespect nearly led to a conflict among the spectators.

It was 12 o'clock when the body reached St. George's church and the crowds in the vicinity were so great that all traffic was stopped half an hour before the arrival of the hearse.

It was noticed when the coffin, being carried from the hearse into the church that the purple pall had broad arrows worked in white in either side. The broad arrow is the government mark stamped on the dresses of prisoners.

At King's Cross station the crowds were so large that the police barriers were broken by the tremendous crush. The coffin was quickly transferred to the funeral train, which started about 5:40 p. m. for Morpeth, Northumberland, where the body will be buried tomorrow.

Budapest, Hungary, June 14.—A moratorium was arrested again today and taken to Hollowell jail.

She had been released on license on May 30, owing to ill health brought about by a "hunger strike" while she was serving her sentence of three years penal servitude.

Mrs. Pankhurst was leaving the house where she had been staying since her release when two policemen arrested her. She was dressed in deep mourning and was on the way to attend the funeral of Miss Davison.

Tribute to Woman's Weeas.

Budapest, Hungary, June 14.—A memorial service for Miss Emily Wilding Davison was held here today by Mrs. Anne Cobben-Sanderson, one of the leaders of the British delegation, in order to enable the delegates to the International Women's congress to pay a tribute to the woman who died for the cause.

At the conclusion of the service a resolution was adopted expressing admiration for the "heroic martyrdom of Miss Davison, who has given her life as a protest against the denial of justice to women."

WILSON TO MAKE FIGHT FOR CURRENCY REFORM

Washington, June 14.—President Wilson today made a currency declaration enacted at the present session of congress and will bend every effort to accomplish it. The doubt raised by utterances of senators close to the administration that they were opposed to currency reform during the present session was cleared when it became known that the president planned to write his currency message to congress today. It will be presented about June 23 or 24.

It also was announced today that Secretary McAdoo and Chairman Owen and Glass, of the senate and house banking and currency committees, respectively, had reached an agreement on the main features of the currency bill they have been drafting for two months.

The president, it is understood, however, will not go into detail in his message, preferring to back the Owen-Glass bill as an expression of his ideas. His argument will be along the lines of his letter recently to Senator Tillman, in which he declared that "in loyalty to the country," currency legislation is necessary during the present session of congress, "so that any attempt to create artificial disturbances after the tariff shall have become law may be offset by a free system of credit, which will make it possible for men, big as well as little, to take care of themselves in business."

HE PREFERS HIS GIRL TO CHECK FOR $10,000

Sioux City, Iowa, June 14.—An offer of $10,000 if he would give up the girl he loved and enlist in the United States navy, apparently has been turned down by Charles Jason, son of a wealthy rancher near Niobrara, Neb. Two weeks ago the elder Jason left a check for $10,000 at the recruiting station here to be turned over to his son the moment he enlisted in the navy. The son said he would think over, but he has failed to return, and recruiting officers do not believe he will claim the prize. He is believed to have gone to St. Paul, where his sweet heart lives.

M'REYNOLDS STUDYING NEW DISSOLUTION PLAN

Washington, June 14.—Attorney General McReynolds returned to Washington today and immediately began considering the proposal of the Union Pacific railroad made to the United States court at St. Paul to exchange $38,000,000 of Southern Pacific stock for the Pennsylvania railroad's holdings of Baltimore & Ohio.

Such an arrangement, incidental to the dissolution of the Union Pacific merger, the attorney general said, did not, on the surface, present a situation to which the government could object, but he was studying the interrelation of the roads and seeking advice to determine whether the transfer could be regarded as objectionable.

With the present holding of the Union Pacific in Baltimore & Ohio, the proposed transfer would give to the Union Pacific 38.2 per cent of the entire outstanding stock of Baltimore & Ohio, according to the attorney general's advisers. By acquiring $38,000,000 of Southern Pacific stock the Pennsylvania would control 14 per cent of the entire outstanding stock of the Southern Pacific.

So far the attorney general has not found any indication that competition would be suppressed.

NORFOLK AND WESTERN FIGHTS TWO-CENT LAW

Washington, June 14.—The Norfolk and Western railway today appealed to the supreme court from the decree of the Kanawha circuit court of West Virginia holding constitutional as to this road the 2-cent passenger law of 1907. The railway claims its net earnings upon the capital invested in the interstate passenger business in West Virginia will be only 38-100 per cent under the 2-cent law. The supreme court is expected on Monday to pass upon the constitutionality of the act as applied to the Chesapeake and Ohio railway.

As Investment Diamonds Have Paid 10% Per Annum for Years

This fact is easily shown by tracing diamond history from 1897, since when diamonds have more than doubled in value.

Reasons for these advances are obvious. Fewer stones are being found, and finer stones rarer. Mining machinery has become obsolete on account of the greater depth of the mines. The native miners have recognized their value, and are demanding higher wages, and a radical increase in wages has been demanded and obtained by the diamond cutters.

In December, 1908, we began calling attention to the probable rapid increase in diamond values, since when there have been several material advances, and during last few months, the Diamond Syndicate made advances on rough diamonds, which increased the value of the finished product about 12 per cent.

Anticipating this advance, we made large contracts with the cutters during the early summer season, and we are giving our customers the benefit of these prices, though it will be necessary for us to increase our prices after our present large stock is exhausted.

Exclusive Diamond Merchants, our whole time is given to the one idea of value. Our large purchases enable us to buy direct from larger cutters of the world, and our careful grading and classing, together with our positive guarantee of cash return and exchange value assures your investment.

Our mail order department is a perfect system, and your business and correspondence will be given the most careful attention.

We will be glad to mail you our Diamond Books Set No. 5 upon request.

STAY-AT-HOMES WILL GIVE A BIG DINNER

Feast at Durand's Saturday Prepared for Lately Returned Members of Old Guard.

Arrangements have just been completed for a big dinner which the stay-at-home members of the Old Guard are going to give to those who went on the recent trip north. The dinner will be at Durand's restaurant next Saturday night, and will be such an affair as to show the Atlantans who went abroad to advertise their city to the people of "Yankee Land" how their work was appreciated by those who could not go.

George M. Napier has been selected to act as toastmaster. Those who will respond to toasts will be announced later. The following committee has the details of the arrangements in hand, and they can be depended on to make the dinner a success in every way: George M. Napier, W. L. Hancock, Edward L. Whyte, Dan Carey, General A. J. West and Colonel Fred M. Paxon.

The printing of the official program, which it is intended to make a handsome souvenir of the northern trip, will be attended to by Captain C. P. Byrd.

The following guests of honor will be invited to be present: Governor Joseph M. Brown, Governor-elect John M. Slater, Brigadier General R. K. Evans, commander of the department of the Gulf and his aide; Colonel J. F. Van Arsdale, Colonel E. F. Penneroy, of the Fifth Regiment, Georgia National Guard; Clark Howell, J. R. Gray and Foster Coates.

COL. F. J. PAXON RESIGNS FROM BOND COMMITTEE

Colonel Fred J. Paxon has sent to Mayor Woodward his resignation as a member of the bond committee, and the mayor has referred the matter to Councilman Albert Thomson, chairman of the committee.

Explaining his resignation, Colonel Paxon says that he will not be able to attend the sessions of the committee because of the press of business. Chairman Thomson has not named his successor. Jerome Jones, who resigned because of ill health.

The committee has been called to meet at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of organizing and discussing the advisability of a bond issue, and will be carried out in the event the people vote the money.

Chairman Thomson believes the necessary $1,500,000 should be decided on to relieve stringent money conditions. Chairman Thomson says he will ask the special committee to give the project its undivided support.

"We will have to start a campaign of education to let the people know just what is needed by the city government," he said. "It will be necessary to get the support of Mayor Woodward, but I am informed through the press that he is opposed to the issue. It is certain that something must be done, otherwise the city will not make much progress."

It is understood that Alderman J. H. Harwell, of the first ward, has in contemplation a resolution urging council to authorize increasing taxes to $1.50, instead of $1.35, and eliminate the sanitary tax which is estimated to be $400,000, while the elimination of the sanitary tax will cut about $120,000 from the revenue of the city.

"UNCLE JOHN" ROSS TO REST IN WEST VIEW

Simple funeral services at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Barclay & Brandon's chapel, preceding the interment at West View, will formally mark the passing of "Uncle John" Ross, one of the most unique and lovable characters who ever served time at the federal prison.

The man who started out in life as a sailor from Nova Scotia, and finally killed a man in a drunken brawl, in Yokohama, Japan, had been in prison for 38 years. At the federal prison he had become converted and at his death was president of the prison Christian Endeavor society. He was beloved alike by men and guards and numbers of the latter will attend the services over his body.

CHINK AND FILIPINO AMONG ARMY PLEBS

West Point, N. Y., June 14.—One hundred and sixty-four cadets or "plebs" were today sworn in West Point. They are the men who passed examinations held throughout the country during April and May of this year. Among the number reported was a Chinaman and a Filipino.

The cadets will live in barracks until after July 18, when they will move into camp with the battalion.

ATLANTANS PRAISE BALTIMORE AD MEN

Home-Comers Are Enthusiastic Over the Treatment at Convention.

Members of the Atlanta Ad Men's club are not likely to forget, at least for some time to come, that Baltimore spelled with a capital "B" is some burg.

The Gate City delegates returned, some marching in Friday and a few stragglers coming in Saturday, each bubbling over with enthusiasm over the convention just ended, and telling of the great banquet at Gwynn Hall park, in which more than 4,000 ad scribblers took part.

J. R. Holliday, who happened to be the first of the delegation spotted by a reporter, could talk of nothing but the banquet—six hundred quarts of Apollinaris water used to wash down the delicious chowder and deviled crabs. Of course, there were other brands of water, pure and fine, but Mr. Holliday is authority for the statement that Apollinaris was the real thing.

Here is what he says was required to feed 4,000 famished ad men:

- Sixty-five hundred dollars.
- Two hundred chickens.
- Six thousand rolls.
- Three hundred and fifty boxes of crackers.

Fourteen thousand pieces of silver.

- A quarter of a ton of beef.
- Four thousand crabs.
- Three hundred and twenty-five gallons of soup.
- Two hundred and fifty gallons of coffee.
- Four hundred and fifty bottles of olives.
- Six hundred bottles of Apollinaris.
- One hundred pounds of lump sugar.
- Fifteen thousand five hundred dishes.
- Seventy dozen tomatoes.
- Six hundred yards of table cloth.
- Two hundred waiters.
- Twenty cooks, working for more than the regulation eight hours.

And to carry the food to Gwynn Oak from town, four drays, making a dozen trips were required. No estimate could be hazarded at what the whole weighed, but the curious may be able to figure it out from the above statistics.

"The dinner was the largest, in point of attendance, ever given in Baltimore," Mr. Holliday said. "It was some task to feed 4,000 people, especially when 4,000 have well developed appetites."

Other members of the Atlanta delegation were loud in their praises of the entertainment of the Baltimore ad men. They say that everything was done to make the visitors happy and comfortable.

ILL HEALTH CAUSES WOMAN TO END LIFE BY DRINKING POISON

Zebulon, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Mrs. Bush, wife of J. B. Bush, who lives about three miles from Zebulon, committed suicide this morning by drinking carbolic acid. Ill health is thought to be the cause of her rash act.

She was about 35 years of age and besides her husband leaves four children.

GIDEONS PUT BIBLES IN HOTELS OF THE CITY

One thousand pounds of Bibles were placed in Atlanta hotel rooms yesterday by the Gideons—one Bible to the room. One year ago this order of Christian traveling men began this work, and Saturday's work practically completed it.

Promptly at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon the first Bible was placed in the Southern Hotel. And then the rounds with the Bible laden auto truck began, nine hotels being supplied.

There were many pathetic incidents, as well as humorous ones, which occurred when the little band, under President C. H. Burge of the Atlanta camp, made the rounds of the rooms.

"Would you mind placing this Bible on your dresser, ma'am?" the Gideon asked.

"You bet your boots I will, and mightily glad to have it here," a deep masculine voice answered.

At each hotel visited the utmost consideration was shown for the Gideons by the house authorities. The dispatch with which the work was carried out is shown by the fact that 75 Bibles were placed in that number of rooms within fifteen minutes at the Georgian terrace.

The hotels supplied, and the number of Bibles placed, were: The Wincoz, 200, in charge of management until hotel formally opens. Georgian Terrace, 75; Ansley, 300; Kimball, 35; completing last year work: Imperial, 120; Piedmont, 50, completing last year's distribution; Southern, 58; Britains, 60; Dakota, 45, and the Marion, 60.

FIGHT WILL BE MADE ON COMMERCE COURT

Washington, June 14.—The opponents of the commerce court in the house are prepared for a good fight in the democratic caucus on June 25 on the proposal to abolish that tribunal.

Chairman Adamson and Representative Sims, of the interstate commerce committee, object to any continuance of the commerce court, and are prepared to oppose it as useless and destructive of the efficiency of the interstate commerce commission. They believe its duties should be performed by courts of justice, not "commerce." Representative Broussard, of Louisiana, is ready to urge the need of such a tribunal.

The caucus under the present plan will consider the question of continuance with an appropriation of approximately $20,000 in the urgent deficiency bill, to carry the court along until the next session.

SICK WOMAN RESCUED FROM BLAZING BUILDING

Unnamed Heroes Save Mrs. Oscar Touchstone From Flames in Macon Home.

Macon, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Fire which destroyed the home of Mrs. Oscar D. Touchstone, 312 Orange street, this morning, came near costing the lives of Mrs. Touchstone and W. C. Holt, who occupies the upper story of the house.

Mrs. Touchstone has been critically ill since the tragic death of her husband a few days ago, when a Central of Georgia freight train fell through a trestle over Beaver creek, and this morning she had gained a good headway in her home when two men burst into the room and lifting her from her bed carried her to safety.

Mr. Holt, who was sleeping upstairs, was dragged from his bed just as the roof gave way and fell into the room with a crash.

The fire spread to the adjoining houses on each side, they being occupied by B. F. Anderson and T. L. Walton. The roofs were burned from the houses.

The Touchstone residence was practically destroyed, the loss amounting to about $3,000.

Bibb Canning Agent.

Macon, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—The Bibb county board of education has named Mrs. C. J. Reiston county canning agent and she will have charge of the instruction of the members in Bibb county canning clubs during the summer months. Mrs. Reiston has recently completed a course at the State College of Agriculture and it is her plan to organize the girls into community groups. There are 150 members of the canning clubs who will compete for prizes this summer at the state fair.

30 Days for H. S. Jackson.

Macon, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Judge Speer this morning, acting on the recommendation for mercy from the jury which tried Henry S. Jackson, former postmaster at Williamson, in Pike county, for embezzlement, sentenced Jackson to serve thirty days in jail or pay a fine of $39, the amount which he embezzled from the government.

Judge Speer in passing sentence stated that he has sympathy for the defendant and would make the penalty the lowest he could under the statute. Jackson claims that the shortage in his accounts occurred while he was sick and unable to attend to his duties.

Cattle Must Be Dipped.

Macon, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—In the future no cattle will be permitted to be shipped into Bibb county from surrounding counties unless they have first been dipped for the eradication of the cattle tick, if the suggestion of the Bibb county dairymen is carried out. At the meeting of the dairy institute this morning it was decided to appeal to the proper authorities with a view to having that plan carried out. The dairymen are planning to wage an unrelenting war on the cattle tick, but feel that it would be useless if outside cattle infected with the tick are permitted to be shipped in.

GEORGIA MAY ESTABLISH SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM

Athens, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—A resolution was introduced by Judge Nat E. Harris, of Macon, head of the board of trustees of the Georgia School of Journalism, at the meeting of the board of trustees of the university, calling for the establishment at the earliest practical moment of a school of journalism at the university. The matter is in the hands of the proper committee.

It is more than likely that a bureau of alumni activity will be established employing a man for the work of disseminating to the alumni information about the college and keeping track of all the former students. Harrison Jones, of Atlanta, and Tom Connally, of Atlanta, appeared before the trustees urging this bureau and while the committee has not yet reported it is pretty certain that the new organization will be endorsed and instituted.

GENERAL STRIKE CALLED AND THEN CALLED OFF

Milan, Italy, June 14.—A general strike of the workmen of all trades was proclaimed here today as a protest against the condemnation to prison of eighteen workmen who were arrested for various offenses during the recent strike at the iron works.

The authorities have taken energetic measures for the maintenance of order. Thus far quiet has prevailed. A party of strikers last night cut the gas pipes in one district.

The strike was called on at noon and must be called off at noon tomorrow.

THOUSANDS OF CATTLE SHIPPED INTO WEST AT GEORGIA'S LOSS

Albany, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Albany people were again forcibly reminded yesterday of the activity of western cattle men in buying up the best cattle of this section for shipment beyond the Mississippi, there to be fattened and resold to the south at fancy prices.

A recent dispatch from Albany told of the shipment of several hundred head of cattle from Mitchell county to the 101 ranch, near Kansas City, the shipment being temporarily held up by the federal authorities because the cattle had not been sprayed for the cattle tick.

Yesterday a drove of 400 Piney woods steers was driven through several Albany streets from the River bridge to the Central freight yards, where they were placed in cars for shipment to Missouri. The owner of this bunch of cattle, Dan Miller, has been buying them up throughout this and neighboring counties for several weeks, and he stated he had more than a thousand head, in addition to the four hundred shipped today.

An Albany business man jocularly called the man to talk for taking this section's cattle away in such large number. He replied that the people of this section did not seem to be able to appreciate their opportunities and advantages, and that if the steers could not, or would not, be fattened in southwest Georgia, they might as well be sent where they will be fattened.

The incident serves to call attention to the movement being agitated in several southwest Georgia counties looking to the establishment of at least one up-to-date slaughter house with adequate cold storage facilities.

A number of the big farmers of this section have declared that if Albany, or any other town in this part of the state, will provide the packing house, enough cattle and hogs to make it profitable to its promoters will be guaranteed.

MIMS GETS 4 YEARS IN PEN FOR SENDING THREATS TO MOTHER

Macon, Ga., June 14.—Thomas H. Mims, of Elko, Ga., was today sentenced by Judge Emory Speer in the Bibb county court to serving four years in the Atlanta federal prison for sending a threatening letter to his mother. Mims demanded a sum of money and the demand was accompanied by a threat.

His mother placed the letter in the hands of the postal authorities and Mims' arrest and conviction followed.

WAR CORRESPONDENT TAKES HIS OWN LIFE

New York, June 14.—Angus Hamilton, former war correspondent in the Balkans for the Central News association, of London cut his throat and killed himself in his apartments at an uptown hotel today. He had been here but a short time, lecturing on the Balkan war. At the outbreak of hostilities he was assigned to accompany a detachment of the Turkish army. He was captured by the Bulgars and imprisoned as a spy, but made his escape.

Mr. Hamilton, who was one of the most widely known war correspondents of modern times, was 35 years old and a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of London. His book on Korea is generally regarded as a standard.

He was a stepson of Sir Arthur Pinero the playwright. It is supposed that the failure of his Balkan war lectures in Canada and this city led to his act.

He resided last morning at the hotel where he was staying and had demanded the payment of his bill.

SON OF ENGLISH LORD TO GET OUT OF PRISON

Leavenworth, Kan., June 14.—Fredrick Grey, who is to be released from the federal prison here Monday, makes the claim that he is the son of "John Grey, Lord Deruthyn," of Lancashire, England. When the prisoner made this claim today in the presence of the deputy warden his attention was called to the fact that the books of pedigree did not contain the name of his father, but of one Cecil Talbot Clifton, Baron Deruthyn. Grey still insists upon his claim and said:

"Baron Deruthyn is of another branch of the family."

He handed the warden to have mailed a letter addressed "Hon. Lady Grey, Ruthyn, Lancashire, England," and declared this was to his sister.

Grey was sent to prison from Washington, D. C., March 9, 1911, upon conviction of aiding the mails in connection with the exploitation of 80,000 acres of Mexican land. His sentence was for three years, but because of good behavior he has gained advantage of the three-fourths rule. His release calls for deportation as an "undesirable citizen," but instead of being sent to England, Grey will be allowed to go to Mexico to look after business affairs.

NEW COUNTY MOVEMENT IS OPPOSED IN JACKSON

Farmers' Union Opposed to Giving Up Territory So Winder May Be County Seat.

Jefferson, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Many people of Jackson county, especially the farming class upon whom the burden of high taxes falls heaviest, are up in arms against the movement to create a new county above Winder.

At a regular meeting of the Jackson County Farmers' union, held Saturday, at which a large number of farmers were present, various resolutions were unanimously passed against having the county being cut at any point. From the farmers this resolution will have great weight, as there are few counties in the state in which the Farmers' union is so strong a factor as in Jackson county.

Winder is just thirteen miles from the courthouse and with two daily trains both ways, and is also on the national highway from New York to Atlanta.

ALLEGED BIGAMIST AGAIN CAUGHT AND TAKEN TO PERRY

Cordelle, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—After escaping from the Taylor county jail at Perry, Fla., B. P. Mashburn, who is held on a bigamy charge, it being alleged that he induced Miss Bessie Peterson, of Cordelle, to become his second wife, has been recaptured at Clinton, Ala., and returned to Perry. Mashburn's case is proving a rather puzzling one to the officers at Perry. Though stating that the young boy and girl, who brought about his arrest when he sent to Valdosta for them, are the children of himself and the woman who claims that she is his wife, No. 1 Mashburn declares that he was never married to this woman. However, wife No. 1 avows that they were married by the ordinary of Heard county, Georgia, and that the marriage record was destroyed some years ago when the courthouse in that county was burned.

Mrs. Peterson, or Mrs. Mashburn No. 2, of this city, declares that she still dearly loves Mashburn, notwithstanding the charge against him. It develops that her father deeded them a lot on which to build a home in Cordelle, which she states he promised to do when she consented to become his wife. During his short freedom from jail she received several letters and sums of money from him.

Eyes of the Gray and Blue Pointed Toward Gettysburg

By GENERAL A. J. WEST, Commissioner from Georgia. The attention of the world is again being drawn to Gettysburg.

This beautiful mountain city, nestled in the shadow of the Blue Ridge mountains, whose events in 1863 shook the world to its base, is being planned July 1, of the largest assemblage of men on the American continent since the close of the war.

The camp will cover 400 acres on the ground over which Pickett's charge, providing room for 60,000 men, there being 10,000 tents. Electric lights and sanitary bubbling drinking fountains and every other convenience will be ready.

One thousand cooks and 1,000 assistants and 500 field cook ranges will be required to prepare the meals. The first meal will be supper Sunday night, June 29, and the last meal breakfast Sunday morning, July 6. The very finest meats, freshest vegetables and the very best bread, coffee, etc., will be served, all being under the inspection of government experts.

The exercises will be immensely interesting and all veterans will wish to go. They are as follows: On July 3 Governor Deneer, of Pennsylvania, will preside. Georgia has been honored by having her governor placed on the program on the day for an address, but as Governor Brown goes out of office on the same day, it will be impossible for him to be at Gettysburg on account of the legislative session being in session. Therefore the honor has been conferred to me to speak at Gettysburg.

On July 4 Chief Justice White, a confederate soldier, will preside and President Woodrow Wilson will deliver an address.

Four routes are open to those who wish to go. They are as follows: By way of Cincinnati, by way of Knoxville and Shenandoah valley, by way of Seaboard and Richmond and by way of the Southern. Round trip railroad rate from Atlanta $18.20.

SOLICITOR DORSEY GOES TO NEW YORK

Grand Jury Will Probably Take Up the Dictagraph Probe While He Is Away.

With the departure of Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey for New York yesterday afternoon, whether he declares he is going for a week's rest, and the announcement of Foreman L. H. Beck, of the grand jury, that only routine criminal business will be taken up during his absence, Tuesday comes a peculiar situation, as hitherto the solicitor's presence has been considered necessary for the indictment of the regular class of criminals, and only when investigating on their own account does the grand jury usually dispense with his services.

The assurance is continuously given out that the grand jury must finish its routine business before it can enter into a general investigation such as a renewal of the vice probe or an investigation of the Falder-Bearers dictagraph row, despite the apparent pressing need for clearing up the tangle that has grown from the affair.

It appears that the members of the grand jury intend to take up at their meeting this week some investigation or other work in which the solicitor will not be needed and the general impression is that the dictagraph row will be brooded.

This would be in keeping with the vice probe which both the solicitor and the foreman attempted to veil in secrecy until the very day upon which it was started, and their actions upon this occasion strengthen the belief that further investigation will occupy the grand jurors at their next meeting.

On top of this comes the announcement from an apparently responsible source of a demand made by Colonel Governor Slaton, that the body presiding at the dictagraph affair, and the refusal of both the solicitor and the foreman of the jury to discuss this matter, or even to admit having received such a communication.

Solicitor Dorsey gave out officially that his visit would be one of personal recreation and that he might possibly spend a short time at Atlantic City before returning home.

STABBING OF WEBBER SHROUDED IN MYSTERY

Wounded Rosenthal Witness Tried to Hide His Identity

New York, June 14—Bridle Webber, one of the four gamblers who testified against Police Lieutenant Becker and the gunman convicted of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, another gambler, was stabbed in the shoulder early this morning under circumstances which he seemed loathe to explain. He was in the St. Vincent's hospital today suffering some pain and weak from the loss of blood but his wound will have no serious result unless poisoning sets in. Although branded by some of the former associates in the underworld as a "spineless former," closed up tight when detectives tried to pry from him at the hospital this morning the story of the attack upon him.

At first Webber tried to hide even his own identity and the fact that he had been wounded. The stabbing occurred on East Eighth street. Webber tried to walk away on the arm of a friend hiding the wound, but on Broadway in front of Grace church he sank exhausted and admitted to a policeman that he had been stabbed. His identity was discovered by Detective Harvey who worked on the Rosenthal case. Webber at first did not account for the stabbing at all. Then he said a small boy ran out of a house behind him and plunged a pen knife into his shoulder.

Further questioning indicated that the boy story was not to be taken seriously. Webber finally declared he did not know who stabbed him and he did not want to know. Detectives learned that Webber had kept a midnight engagement with Sam Paul, another gambler who talked of croaking Rosenthal. He lately has kept a small restaurant near Eighth street. It appeared that Webber had been attacked shortly after concluding his engagement with Paul. It will be eleven months next Monday since the murder of Herman Rosenthal occurred at 11 o'clock. A man arrested in the crowd of gamblers that followed and was charged with implication in the murder he never was tried. With said Jack Ross and others he turned state evidence and helped to send to mer Police Lieutenant Becker all the four gunmen to Sing Sing where they are under death sentence if the attack upon Webber is a part of the case. He is the first in the line of any attack on the witnesses. The police up to an early hour today failed to arrest in connection with the attack.

All admit that the North Side of Atlanta is in the right direction, and if you pick the right location you can't go wrong.

The surroundings of this property are the best Atlanta affords. The section from Peachtree to Piedmont Avenue is the heart of the cream of North Side property.

This includes the top of Atlanta realty--the part that has grown a thousand fold in the past five years and where the next three years means the climax of high values and profits.

These lots are between North Boulevard and the Ansley Park Golf Links. The Boulevard is one of the principal north and south streets of Atlanta, and one of the logical links in the proposed Battlefield Drive around Atlanta.

The Golf Links speak for themselves. A number of the expert golfers have pronounced these links the equal of any 9-hole course in the country.

One of Atlanta's prominent citizens remarked a few days ago that he considered a golf course the greatest possible acquisition to a residence section.

There is never a possibility of property surrounding a Golf Course being anything but the highest class residence property.

This property is located directly in the line of progress. The way to make money is to "get in the way" of progress, and you can't miss it here.

Remember, an auction is where you bid what you please. You set the price yourself, and that will be the way these 25 lots will be sold.

We own 93 lots in this tract and all will be finished in the same high class manner. We could only get 25 ready for you by the 19th of June.

These lots will be sold 10% cash and $25 per month, with 6% on deferred payments.

These terms allow you to participate. Think it over.

The real value of these lots is from $1500 to $3000, average value about $2350. Remember, you place the value at an auction. Any lot here will be worth $4000 to $5000 in three years.

Ansley Park has increased 11,000 per cent in eight years. Would you be willing to predict what the value will be in the next eight years?

The Annex is a continuation of the old Park; its history will be a repetition of the first. Why not? Built by the same man on the same lines, in the same direction, for the same class of people.

The lots that are shaded are the ones to be sold.

RENTING SERVICE. OUR LOCATION, our help, our facilities in general are such that we can probably give better service in the renting of property than any other agency in the city. We endeavor to be most courteous with every one with whom we deal. We try in every way to keep right up with all the details that are daily arising; the repair work that is done through our office is done without a cent of profit to us; we endeavor to collect rent as promptly as possible without oppression, and we feel like that no agency is more successful in keeping houses tenanted. Give us a trial.

Atlanta Must Provide Suitable Ingress and Egress to Their Tracks, Officials Tell Committee.

The closing of the Forsyth street underpass, characterized by engineers as a "municipal cancer," depends upon the cooperation of the officials of the Western and Atlantic railroad, Major J. L. Cullom, superintendent, informed council's special committee at a conference yesterday morning.

The city submitted two proposals to Major McCullom and Chief Engineer McDonald: one device for the use of the Central of Georgia roadway from the freight depot east to Forsyth, and the other that the city build an incline from the center of the bridge to the railroad tracks.

The incline scheme was favored by the railroad officials over every other suggestion offered at the conference. The project, however, will necessitate the expenditure of $37,600, which cannot possibly be raised up by the city owing to the stringency of the economy plan which the city faces by reason of having been forced to put $260,000 cash in the June sheet to purchase the crematory.

It was feared that the failure to ratify the renewed arbitration treaty with Great Britain in the senate after identical treaties with two other countries had been ratified without any objection being raised would lead to complications. Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, responsible for the successful blocking of the attempt to ratify the treaty, based his opposition on the fact that ratification of the treaty would obligate the United States to arbitrate the Panama canal tolls controversy with Great Britain.

Both Major McCullom and Engineer McDonald promised that they would submit the above proposal to the company officials immediately, and assured an early response.

Because the closing of the underpass would cause damage, more or less, to the Western and Atlantic, there is some doubt as to whether the officials can be persuaded to agree to it.

The act of the legislature, adopted last year, and which authorizes the closing of the underpass, requires the governor and the railroad commission to pass on and approve any scheme proposed before it can be carried into effect.

National Board Committee Meets. Organization of the International Realty Association, whose stockholders must be members of the National Association of Real Estate Brokers, in opposition to certain provisions of the income tax law, and endorsement of the Smith amendment to the national banking law, allowing national banks to make real estate security as collateral for loans, were among the matters discussed at the third quarterly meeting of the executive committee of the National Association of Real Estate Brokers, at Cincinnati, May 30 and 31, 1912. The Norfolk, Va., Ft. Wayne, Ind., Racine, Wis., Dubuque, Iowa, Brandon, Wis., and Spokane, Wash., real estate boards were elected members of the national association.

National Guard Prepares For Camp at St. Simons

By Greg Grice. The second squadron of cavalry, and the third battalion of infantry, National Guard of Georgia, will go into camp on St. Simons island early on the morning of June 21. Major J. O. Semans, of Atlanta, is in command, and Major H. P. Hunter, of Elberton, commands the infantry force, and will be the ranking officer at the camp.

Both the second squadron and the third battalion, and the fifth regiment, encamped at Camp Pettus, near Anniston, Ala., in the summer of 1912, and engaged in the extensive maneuvers at that place, under the supervision of United States army officers. At these maneuvers, which will be held at Brunswick, Ga., has been detailed to camp with these troops, and a platoon of the Atlanta artillery will also report at Camp St. Simons with a large field piece, which will be used in firing practice and other formalities.

Major Semans has announced that close-order drilling and guard duties will be the principal duties of his men at this camp. Arrangements have been perfected whereby every member of the second and third squadrons will have twenty-four hours guard duty. All drilling will be done in the forenoon, it is announced. In the afternoons and evenings the men who are not on guard duty will be at complete liberty. Another feature that will be of much pleasure to the men is the fact that they will be allowed to carry citizens' clothing and other light effects with them. It is the intention of the commanding officers to make the camp as attractive to the men as possible, as is consistent with efficiency.

Food Will Be Much Better. Lieutenant Fay Wilson, quartermaster of the second squadron, is quite enthusiastic over the prospects of the camp. He says that the men will be fed much better than at Anniston last year, because of the appropriation being sufficiently large to enable him to make proper arrangements for subsistence stores. The amount of twenty-five cents is available for one day's rations. Only nineteen cents served this purpose last year. And considering the large quantities in which the food is bought, five cents per day per man makes a great difference.

Liberty Independent Troop. One of the oldest military organizations in the United States—the Liberty Independent Troop, or troop B, of the second squadron, will attend the camp. The Liberty Independent Troop was organized in the year 1800, and fought with distinction in the Revolution, Mexican and Civil wars. Since the Civil war the troop has been commanded by the following captains: William A. Fleming, Edward P. Miller, Josiah L. Fleming, James B. Fraser, W. Preston White, A. Gordon Canaleh, R. Frank Castles and W. Preston White. Cap-ants: J. E. Kelley, H. M. Hill, R. M. Gibbs, second lieutenant. The Hospital Corps. Captain Benjamin E. Pearce, of the hospital corps, will have charge of the hospital detachment at Camp St. Simons. He will be aided by a medical officer of the camp, Dr. Thomas J. Holton, first sergeant, and Privates Todd and Jones constitute Captain Pearce's staff.

At Camp Pettus last summer Captain Pearce and staff received glowing praise from the United States chief sanitary officer for the superb sanitary conditions maintained, which was said to be the most perfect ever maintained at a national guard camp. Captain Pearce has been associated with the national guard for the past ten years. Sergeant Holton served two full enlistments in the Governor's Horse Guard and has been in the hospital corps for over two years. Private Todd has just been transferred to the hospital corps from the Governor's Horse Guard.

COTTON. New Orleans, June 14.—Cotton this week closed at an advance of 1/4 to 1/16 points. Bulk sales in the early part of the week for the start, the low prices being made on Monday, and at the lowest only a slight decline was shown. The market was quiet and steady, with a points down, compared with the final price of last week. The high prices were made on Tuesday, when the trading was very active, and points over last week's close. The range of prices was 25 to 30 points.

The work of the India in the summer months is a considerable improvement in the spot market. The strong feature of the market is the fact that the crop is not large enough to allow a large business being done. There was more activity than usual in the spot market, and the price of the India was in favor in some quarters. The small amount of the United States ports scolded little compared with the trading in the spot market. Rumors were that stocks would still further shrink as the result of sending foreign shipments. The cotton market was quiet and steady, with a points down, compared with the final price of last week. The high prices were made on Tuesday, when the trading was very active, and points over last week's close. The range of prices was 25 to 30 points.

REBELS ADVANCING TO CAPTURE JUAREZ

United States Officer Reports That Force of 1,100 Men Will Soon Attack.

El Paso, Texas, June 14.—Eleven hundred rebels compose the force marching on Juarez, according to advices received here from Captain R. S. Fitch, of the United States cavalry stationed at Finley, Texas.

Captain Fitch reports that he has obtained copies of orders under which Colonel Ornelos, commander of these rebels, is operating. He reports that Ornelos is instructed to capture Guadalupe, opposite Fabens, Texas, and use it as a base in further operations.

It is reported that Ornelos' advance already has had a brush with federal cavalry. This occurred below Guadalupe, and it is reported the rebels were worsted.

Advices from Sonora say that Colonel Talamantes, with 250 men, has entered the Casas Grandes district of Chihuahua. It is said he will recruit a force to assist in the Juarez attack. After looting the town, 400 federal volunteers evacuated Madera yesterday. Madera is an American lumber center in Chihuahua. It is said he will recruit orders to hasten to Chihuahua City, the surrender of which has been demanded by the constitutionalist troops. The patrols north and south of the town have been withdrawn.

FLORIDA WOODMEN OBJECT TO MANAGER

Jacksonville, Fla., June 14.—When the Woodmen of the World sovereign camp reconvened this morning, Judge H. W. Adams, state representative for Florida, offered a long set of resolutions demanding that T. W. Mitchell, state manager, be ousted, who, the resolutions declared, has been forced upon the state by Sovereign Commander J. C. Root over the protests of nearly all the camps.

The resolutions recited the allegation that Mitchell would not be admitted to most of the state's camps, being distasteful to and out of harmony with the state organization. The resolutions were referred to the committee on distribution on motion of Root, after a motion to thrash the matter out on the floor was withdrawn and a motion to refer them to resolutions committee number 2 also was withdrawn after an acrimonious debate.

UNIQUE PICTURE OF ROYAL RULERS.

Perhaps if this illustration were not captioned you would have to look twice to tell which was which. Czar Nicholas, of Russia, and King George, of England, have long been called the "twin brothers" of royalty, but their resemblance was never more strikingly presented than in this picture. They posed this way in Berlin at the recent wedding of the kaiser's daughter. The czar and king are first cousins by marriage, Russia's ruler having married a daughter of Princess Alice, sister of King Edward, father of King George. The czar is 45 years old and the king is 48.

DETECTIVE IN DUEL WITH SAFE-CRACKER

Fred Farris Wounds Negro, But Injured Man Manages to Make His Escape.

A pistol duel between Fred Farris, a Pinkerton detective, and an unknown safe robber, occurred in the offices of the Troy laundry on Houston street shortly before midnight last night, as the culmination of a long vigil in an effort to foil a vault robbing plot. The robber was shot, but managed to escape into the darkness of the laundry plant. Three shots were fired, two by the detective and one from the gun of the intruder. A trail of blood led from the spot on which he fell to the Houston street entrance. The police have been given a description of the man, a burly negro, hoping to trace him to a hospital at which he might apply for medical aid, special policemen in each sanitarium have been supplied with his description and prompted to be on the lookout.

For the past six months the vault of the Troy laundry has been robbed on Saturday nights. The robberies did not occur in succession, but intermittently. Officials of the concern are of the opinion that the robberies were the work of a plot to rob the safe last night.

The Pinkertons were engaged and Detective Farris was stationed in the office at 10 o'clock when the plant closed. After a vigil of less than two hours he was rewarded shortly after 11 o'clock by sounds of someone entering.

As the invader reached the safe, the detective, standing near the electric switch, turned on the button, flooding the room with light. The robber stopped directly in front of the vault. Leveling his gun at the negro's head, Farris commanded him to throw up his hands.

The negro turned to flee through the door. Farris fired, the bullet striking the robber and knocking him to the floor. As the detective started across the room, the wounded man drew a revolver and fired point blank. Striking to his feet, the negro stumbled toward the door. The detective fired again as his victim disappeared into the plant proper.

When Farris followed, the wounded robber was nowhere to be found. The Houston street vault was searched and nothing was found. Spots of blood marked the negro's path to the entrance. From the detective's description, officials of the laundry believe it is a negro employee of the plant.

POLICE ARE STIRRED OVER PICTURES OF "SEPTEMBER MORN"

Howard S. Cole, president of the Cole Book company, in the role of the "Fra Hippo Lippi" at Atlanta is expected to be placed upon trial before the monks of the city in recorder's court Monday afternoon, to test the validity of Browning's proposition that "when you get simple beauty you've got about the best thing God ever made."

The trouble all arises over the exhibition in the big show window of the Cole Book company of M. Paul Chabas' world-famous picture, "September Morn," which was dramatically attacked in Chicago, New York and other cities, and the question once more resolves itself to Browning's original question of whether art consists of the interpretation of the form within, the soul within, or a happy medium of the two.

The question of "soul within," apparently, as yet remains unsolved. Of the "form without" there is no slight shadow of a doubt. It is "without" so much as a little gilt frame.

"September Morn," at a hazard, is the painting of a maiden of some 17 summers, who at the end of a garden has ventured to bathe in the lake after the season closed and forgot her bathing suit.

"September Morn" was on exhibition for nearly a week before anyone presumed that the matter of when or where or how a young lady chooses to take her morning bath was of concern to any save her own sweet caprice. But Saturday morning a dear old lady, who thinks that such a slip of art should have known better, complained to police headquarters, whereupon a speedy and minute inspection by Assistant Chief Jett ensued, with the result that the board of censorship of the "movies," the city attorney and other experts were called in to gaze and pass judgment. They gazed, passed judgment and shook their heads.

Mr. Cole said last night: "The picture is the purest art and has no element of evil in it. It is in the window now and stays there until I am compelled by the law to remove it. I have understood directly that it will be removed to recorder's court Monday afternoon."

Mr. Cole has assurances of the support of many prominent people of the city.

Superfluous Hair Truths

Stop Experimenting

If you use a simple toilet preparation and it proves to be worthless, you only lose money. When you use a questionable depilatory, however, it is a very serious matter because you not only lose money, but you also run the risk of permanent disfigurement.

If You Value Your Face use DeMiracle, the one safe, perfected hair remover of proven merit. Removable hair is caused by the use of doubtful hair removers which either result in permanent disfigurement or cost you many dollars because it will take months or possibly years to gain control of hair growths which have been stimulated by the use of such preparations.

DeMiracle

Only Real Hair Remover on Earth

DeMiracle contains certain ingredients which give it the power to rob hair of its vitality. Therefore, you must eventually use it to retard and gain control of growths which have been caused by the use of such questionable depilatories. It is not safer and wiser to begin using DeMiracle now, before the growth gets beyond control.

Leaves No Tell-Tale Smell

If you use DeMiracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because DeMiracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor, an offensive tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours. If your dealer will not supply you with DeMiracle, send 21¢ for direct.

Summer Visitors.
Batter Park Hotel, Asheville, N. C., June 14.—(Special).—Quietly as is his custom, Governor Looke Craig, of North Carolina, arrived at the Batter Park hotel Monday, and for the next six weeks will transact only such official duties as are absolutely imperative at his office at this hotel, for the governor is here for a rest. Mrs. Craig came on a day ahead of her husband, and arriving in the early morning hours, decided to remain in her private car until later in the day. The governor motored from Raleigh as far as King's Mountain, and from there came to Asheville by train. He was enthusiastic over the condition of the roads throughout North Carolina for motoring, and during his stay here he will make many short trips by automobile to near-by towns. The governor and Mrs. Craig are accompanied by their two sons.

The arrival of governor and Mrs. Craig was ushered in with a ball at the Batter Park hotel, about sixty young people participating, this being the first large dance of the season, the official opening ball inaugurating the summer gaiety will occur on July 4, when the hotel will be filled with guests. Invitations will be sent out by the manager, Messrs. Allen and Craig, of Asheville, who always share in the festivities given at this resort during the summer.

The fame of the many attractions to be found in "The Land of the Sky" has spread not only throughout this country, but abroad and consequently many guests from foreign countries come here yearly. A distinguished visitor sojourning here now is Mrs. D. de F. Ford, of England, and Mrs. Ford, at the Batter Park last summer, and so thoroughly enjoyed her sojourn that she crossed the water to spend the next few weeks here. She was joined later by Mrs. Frank Scrivener, of Baltimore.

That Mr. and Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt will return this month from their extended European visit is now almost certain and their palatial estate, Biltmore, so long unopened, will once more be the scene of many delightful festivities while the Country club members are looking forward eagerly to having Mrs. Vanderbilt again a member of the club, for she is one of the most enthusiastic of golfers.

Thomas W. Raoul has returned from a trip to Atlanta, where he went to attend the marriage of his brother, Louis Raoul. Raoul and Mrs. Raoul will spend their honeymoon in Asheville.

First to enter were eight young girls, bearing in their hands lighted tapers. Following were the four bridesmaids, Messrs. J. C. Greenfield, W. E. Miller, Harris C. Nell and O. F. Jones, who encircled the altar.

The bridesmaids, Misses Beasie Smith, of Atlanta, Carol Dean, of Gainesville, Ga.; Teletie Scott, of Canton, Ga., and Janie Culpepper, of Fort Valley, were gowned in white motor crepe, with pointed trains, carrying white sweet peas. ## Corset Lectures By Mme. Dean

The Mme. Mariette Corset Company, of Chicago, whom we represent exclusively in Atlanta, sends to us Mme. Dean, with her finished knowledge of Corsets and how they should be worn to advantage, to talk to you about this vital subject.

Almost every woman has worn a corset of some sort since she was grown up. The "sort" she was not very particular about in every instance. The way she wore it gave her little concern. But that was when she was too young to know, or when all of us knew little enough about corset making, corset fitting or corset wearing.

The course of time has developed wonderfully for better health and better figures for women, the making of corsets, and the Mme. Mariette Corset is a result of this extensively acquired knowledge.

The corset you wear will "make or break" your figure. Mme. Dean will tell you the "why and wherefore" of the art. She is not here to simply demonstrate Mme. Mariette Corsets. She is here to instruct in the proper adjustment of the corset to best advantage for your health and your figure's sake. She will tell which model you should wear, which will give you the lines that suit your build, and which is for your physical improvement.

Mme. Dean will be with us all week and will lecture every morning between 10 and 12 o'clock in our corset department on the second floor.

Brassiers and undermuslins pertaining to the perfect fitting of corsets are sold in this department.

Every corset we sell is perfectly fitted.

Women's $5.00 Pumps At $3.50 At ALLEN'S

We have repriced 17 styles of our regular $5.00 pumps in gun metal, patent, tan Russia calf and white buckskin. The season of the year is approaching when we must discontinue a style or reorder it. As it takes us about six weeks to have sizes in shoes like we carry made up, we have decided, instead of re-ordering our regular $3.50 and $4.00 shoes, to reduce the price of these $5.00 styles. We do carry some shoes at $6.00, that are a little more expensively trimmed or have more ornate buckles, etc., but the shoe making and the quality of the leather in our $5.00 pumps makes them practically the best ready-to-wear shoes obtainable.

To buy them at $3.50 a pair means one of the biggest money saving opportunities that has ever been offered the shoe wearers of Atlanta this early in the season. The sizes are practically intact in most styles, here and there you will not be able to get exactly what you want, but we have a good substitute for it, no doubt. We will also offer eight styles of white canvas and white buckskin $4.00 pumps tomorrow and next week at $2.45 a pair, together with the remaining sizes of gun metal, patent, tan and black satin pumps which were on sale last week at $2.45 a pair.

We should dispose of every pair of them in the next two or three days, so come in early in the week and as early in the morning as you can before the best styles are picked over.

Gladdened by News, Bryan Paints Picture of World at Peace.

Washington, June 14.—Viscount Chinda, the Japanese ambassador, has advised Secretary Bryan that Japan is willing to renew for another period of five years her arbitration treaty with the United States which expires by limitation August 24.

Secretary Bryan, making the announcement today, said he expected the senate would ratify the new arbitration treaties already signed with Great Britain and other countries despite the opposition against them. No date for signing the Japanese renewal has been determined.

The senatorial opposition originally was voiced by Senator Chamberlain, who insisted that in renewing a treaty with Great Britain specific expressions should be made to remove the doubt as to the real intention from the field of arbitrating with Japan the issue of the California alien land law also has been a subject of discussion among senators opposed to renewal of the treaty.

President Wilson has had frequent conferences over the arbitration treaties with senators. Members of the foreign relations committee have been frequent callers at Secretary Bryan's office. Mr. Bryan today would not say upon what representations he based his expectation that the arbitration treaties would receive senatorial approval.

At elaborate and impressive flag day exercises conducted in the great court of the interior department and presided over by Secretary Lane, Secretary of State Bryan delivered an oration upon the "American Flag and World Peace." Mr. Bryan vividly pictured his ideal of a world of friendly nations among which war would have no place. He believed that long steps now were being taken to insure universal peace, and added:

"Only this morning I received assurance from the emperor of Japan of its desire to renew with the United States its general arbitration treaty. Before next Christmas I am expecting that at least twenty-five nations will have concluded with this country treaties by the terms of which controversies which cannot be adjusted otherwise may be referred to a distinguished international tribunal, thus practically insuring peace and justice between us and all of the great nations of the world. And I love to say 'Love is a stronger force than fear. It is the proud boast of this nation that our flag is loved, rather than feared. No gun ever mounted is as strong as a great thought. Great thoughts are the controlling forces of the world, and love is the basis of every great thought.'"

Concluding in an apotheosis to the flag, Secretary Bryan compared the ideals represented respectively by Christ and Pilate. "The unarmed man of Galilee is represented by that flag and no man will dare to put it on the side of Pilate, who was the embodiment of force. Let us always make it a symbol of the nation's purpose, a purpose pure enough to be represented by such a flag."

"The ideals of this nation shall be greater than its armament and it always shall represent a cause so just that it will bear the blessings of Almighty God."

EXPRESS DELIGHT AT GREAT SUCCESS OF WOMAN'S EDITION

Commenting on the woman's edition of The Constitution, Mr. John M. Hanks, of Anniston, Ala., writes a member of the staff:

"The woman's edition of The Constitution was the greatest paper ever issued in the south. It is, in fact, never gotten out in any city in any state in the United States."

A Foreign Expression. Mr. Julius H. H. of Atlanta, Ga., a native of Denmark, wrote in his native language a high tribute to the woman's edition, and sent a poem for publication.

This, translated by Mr. A. V. Gude for The Constitution, follows: "Our southland is charming and bright. An maiden her life-work beginning. With a maiden her sparkling and winning. And her grace source of delight. 'Tis our glorious and generous and kind. Great memories around these are clinging. That are cherished and stored in our mind."

Atlanta Philharmonic Orchestra Is Now Big Civic Asset; Concerts Are Planned for Other Cities, Thus Advertising Atlanta

Center, Mrs. John M. Slaton, president; above, Mrs. Edward Brown, chairman executive board, Mr. T. A. Florence, treasurer. To the left of Mrs. Slaton is Mr. F. B. Gardner, treasurer; to the right, Mr. W. J. Lowenstein; below, Mrs. John L. Meek, vice president (photo by Stephenson); Mr. J. M. Van Haringen, member of the executive board.

Atlanta has never been accused of an over-tendency to the aesthetic. So far, indeed, does she lean in the other direction that when a big movement is started which has an aesthetic side there is a very general questioning as to what will be its practical or commercial value.

The Philharmonic orchestra being developed by the Atlanta Musical Association is a case in point. Just now it is strongly in the limelight because of its recent heroic seeking and finding of a ten thousand-dollar guarantee which will place the orchestra on the only kind of foundation to mean more than mere spasmodic achievement.

The list of the officers and executive board is in itself of a character to inspire confidence to indicate a practical and a loyal ambition to supply what appears to be the logical need just now in Atlanta's educational advancement.

Mr. J. M. Van Haringen and Mr. W. J. Lowenstein are the newly elected members of the board. Mrs. John M. Slaton is president, Mrs. John L. Meek is vice-president, Mr. T. A. Florence, treasurer, Mr. Forrest Gardner, secretary, and on the board also are Mrs. Edward T. Brown, Mr. L. E. Rogers, Miss Edwina Behre and Mrs. Milton Arrowood, founder of the association, while the membership, which has more than doubled during the past winter, is made up of all elements—men of business and women of business and of leisure.

Plans for Next Season.

Two important actions taken by the association recently which concern the guarantors was the postponement of the last concert of this season to form an extra concert in the season of 1913-14, and the calling on the guarantors at once for a small part of the guarantee.

The postponement was decided upon partly on account of the departure of the concert matter for a summer in the music centers of Europe, and the absence of other members of the orchestra from the city, conditions which would make a concert of satisfactory standards at this time impossible.

The immediate response from the guarantors for music of symphony class and will secure the new scores for next year's concerts.

In the meantime, the active forces of the association, and this includes a big percentage of commerce sums up his city's experience with the statement:

"The directest and most practical lines. For one thing, they are busy building up an orchestra sentiment. In one way or another they are working to make the orchestra-thought the popular thought-line-of-least-resistance."

What the orchestra can do and what it is meant to do for Atlanta is the leading motive of their argument, and they back it up with the records of symphony orchestras in other American cities, and the value these cities put on them both as advertising assets and educational forces.

What St. Louis is Doing.

In reply to a request for information concerning the St. Louis symphony orchestra, the vice president and chairman of the executive committee declares that the St. Louis public classes its orchestra as a civic institution which they regard in the same light as their universities, their art museums, their libraries and their schools.

Within several years the orchestra scope has been broadened to include besides its regular season of thirty high-class symphony concerts with popular concerts on Sunday afternoons in the symphony hall, other popular concerts in sections of the city remote from the symphony hall, and still other appearances in connection with the public high school, when these schools supply a chorus feature.

Concert Tours.

Concert tours to other cities are also undertaken, and St. Louis considers these "probably the very best advertisement the city can possibly have in any shape and form. These cities seem to regard the visit of the orchestra as a compliment in other words, that St. Louis is sending them in the shape of the orchestra the flower of its civic achievement."

"It always receives a cordial welcome, and where we go once we usually go again, and further than that it brings musical students to St. Louis, because the orchestra is the life of all music in St. Louis."

"The orchestra that made Minneapolis famous" might well be the aptest paraphrase, since that city's "Civic and Commercial Association" declares that "Minneapolis has never had an advertising plan of greater efficiency than the high-class publicity given to it by the appearance of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra in other cities."

The Orchestra in Philadelphia.

The secretary of the Philadelphia chamber of commerce sums up his city's experience with the statement:

tion, artistry and even commercially, an organization such as the Philadelphia orchestra is of the utmost importance to any community that is able to support such an institution."

From Cincinnati comes similar encouragement as to the advertising value of an orchestra and its inevitable bringing to the city that supports it of music conservatories and students.

The Atlanta Musical Association has in view a concert tour for the Philadelphia orchestra to neighboring cities next spring, and other ambitious plans are in view, but that they are looking to the development of a good orchestra for the sake of musical sentiment and enjoyment in Atlanta.

A Brief History.

Mr. Forrest Gardner, secretary of the association, writes the following brief and comprehensive description of the association and its work:

"The association was organized on October 23, 1908 with a charter membership of sixteen. Mrs. Bertha Harwood Arrowood was its first president, and its existence and early success is due mainly to her untiring efforts in its behalf. The first orchestra conductor was Mr. Richard Schlein, an artist of great ability. He was succeeded in the leadership of the orchestra by one of our own people, Mr. W. Whitney Huber. Under Mr. Huber's good management the orchestra was greatly developed and more firmly organized. His artistic interpretations of the programs he rendered made each concert a musical treat."

"At the present time the orchestra is under the leadership of Mr. Morton Wilson. Mr. Wilson is both a conductor and composer of international reputation. After an extended study period in Chicago, directed by the best instructor in that city, he completed his work under Oscar Nedball, in Vienna, and Hans Sitt and Max Keger, in Leipzig. Mr. Wilson is unusually well fitted for the position he now holds. Besides his comprehensive knowledge of music and his artistic ability, his work as a composer has brought him into a more sympathetic touch with the orchestra."

"The personnel of the orchestra is made up of the best musical talent in and about Atlanta. The full orchestra now consists of forty-eight pieces. The concert master, Mr. Skibinsky, is an artist of remarkable attainment and one of the best violinists in the country. Each member is a musician of

CURTIS-THACH.

Auburn, Ala., June 14.—(Special.)—A wedding of wide interest was solemnized in the historic Auburn Methodist church, in Montgomery, on the evening of Thursday, June 12, when Miss Elizabeth Lockhart Thach, daughter of Dr. Chas. C. Thach, president of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, was married to Mr. Nathaniel Cortland Curtis, of the University of Georgia.

The church was artistically decorated. "Just a Song at Twilight," was rendered by Miss Mamie Harrison, of Opelika, immediately before the ceremony.

To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march the four ushers, C. C. Certain, of Birmingham; Chas. Thach, Jr., Thomas Bragg and B. L. Shi, of Auburn, came down the aisle and took their places on either side of the chancel. The ushers were followed by the matron of honor, Mrs. Wm. Mercer Cohen, of North Carolina, and the maid of honor, Miss Otis David Thach. The little flower girls were Miss Martha Powers, of Montgomery; Elizabeth Donahue and Miss Frances Mitchell, of Auburn. The ring bearer was Miss Sarah Hall Crenshaw, of Auburn.

The bride entered with her father, Dr. C. C. Thach, and was met at the altar by the groom with his brother, Mr. Howard Curtis.

The beautiful ring ceremony was impressively performed by Rev. John C. James, of Auburn. Soft music was played by Miss Mary Casey who presided at the organ.

The bride was exquisitely gowned in white charmeuse, hand-embroidered and trimmed in point lace and seed pearls which was extremely becoming to her girlish beauty. Her veil, caught in cap effect with her hair, was of special interest in that it has been used by seven of her college classmates, she being the eighth to wear it. The flowers were white, bride's roses, showered with lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor wore a handsome gown of white crepe de chaine. Her flowers were pink peonies.

The three little flower girls and the tiny ring bearer wore dainty white lacy frocks, with touches of pink. The flower girls carried baskets of pink roses and sweet peas and the ring bearer bore in the wedding ring on a silver tray, showered in pink sweet peas.

The bride, a girl of charming sweetness, is the eldest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Chas. C. Thach and has enjoyed a delightful young ladyhood in the college town, and in southern cities. She is a graduate of Converse college, Spartanburg, S. C.

The groom was for several years professor of architecture at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute and at present is the head of that department at Tulane university. He is a graduate of the University of North Carolina and of Columbia university.

The bridal tour will include Washington and the North Carolina mountains. Later they will visit the groom's mother in the North Carolina coast. The honeymoon will be spent in a tailored suit of blue eponge worn with an imported hat of dark brown. Mr. and Mrs. Curtis will be at home after October 1, at 1506 Calhoun street, New Orleans.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Robt. Thach and Robert H. Thach, Jr., Mrs. M. S. Sloan, C. C. Certain, Jefferson H. # FINAL TOUCHES COMING IN RAILWAY RATE CASES

Supreme Court Expected to Pass on All Questions Monday.

Washington, June 14.—Finishing touches to the supreme court's decision in the road rate cases from Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky, Oregon and West Virginia are believed to have been added today in secret conference. The decisions, with those in the other forty-nine cases before the court, are expected to be announced Monday.

Justice Hughes is picked by most lawyers familiar with the court procedure as certain to announce the conclusion of the court as he did in the Minnesota rate cases. In doing so, he will review the opinion of Judge Smith McPherson of the western Missouri circuit court. By a strange coincidence, Judge McPherson in that opinion commented upon "moral courage" of Justice Hughes, then governor passenger bill. Judge McPherson held the Missouri maximum freight rates and the two-cent passenger law confiscatory and enjoined their enforcement.

"The relations of a governor to proposed legislation and those of a court to legislation consummated," held Judge McPherson, "are entirely different."

The apportionment of value and expenses of the railroads on the revenue basis, as done in the Missouri cases by Judge McPherson, was disapproved in the Minnesota cases. Their errors, Justice Hughes said, were not sufficient to change a return of 3.5 per cent into a remunerative rate.

In the Missouri cases, Judge McPherson held that the return from the freight rates would result in a deficit on the Hannibal and St. Louis and the Burlington, and a return not exceeding two per cent on the other sixteen roads concerned. The returns from the two-cent passenger law according to the judge, would show no profit on the Rock Island, St. Louis and Hannibal, Kansas City, Clinton and Springfield, and the Great Western; a profit of from three to four per cent on the St. Louis and San Francisco; four and five per cent on the Santa Fe; a fraction over two per cent on the Kansas City Southern and between three and four per cent on the Burlington.

In view of that finding many believe the supreme court will first consider whether errors in valuation and apportionment have been sufficient in the Missouri cases to convert a deficit or low return into a reasonable return. Many think the court may find the laws valid as to certain roads, and invalid as to others.

Several points now considered in the Minnesota rate cases are expected to be passed upon, either in the Missouri or the Arkansas cases. Another of them is the question as to what return the roads are entitled on their property. In Missouri the court considered six per cent a reasonable return. In the Arkansas cases Judge Triebel declared the earnings should be six per cent and in addition an allowance of one and one-half per cent should be made as a surplus for "lean" years. On that basis he held the Arkansas maximum freight and two-cent passenger law confiscatory, because he figured the St. Louis Mountain and Santa Fe roads would make a net earning of only three-quarters per cent and the St. Louis Southwestern 2.5 per cent.

WINDER LARGER THAN 109 COUNTY SEATS

This Will Be One Argument Advanced for Creation of Barrow County.

If Barrow county is created by the coming legislature, it will start in business with a county seat larger in population and in population than any other than 109 out of 148 county seats in Georgia.

In other words, Winder, which has a population of 3,000, seventy-five prosperous business enterprises, fourteen manufacturing plants, three banks, two railroads and three cotton warehouses handling nearly 20,000 bales a year, is a larger city than 109 other Georgia cities or towns at which courthouses are located.

Leaving out the larger cities of the state, Winder is larger than all but five of the county seats of what are sometimes called the country counties.

Winder, with a courthouse and with the complications removed which now arise from its location in three counties, three senatorial districts and two congressional districts, its people say, would soon double its population and when the next census is taken would be classed among those counties with two representatives, instead of one, in the general assembly.

COLLEGE EDUCATION VALUED AT $25,000

Chicago, June 14.—A college education is worth $25,000, according to statistics compiled by the administration office of Northwestern university and made public today. In seeking to prove in dollars and cents the value of a higher education, the university took a census of the class of 1903, members of which have had ten years to get "settled."

The investigation showed that for the first five years out of school the average earning power of the graduates was $867, and for the next five years the earning capacity jumped to $1,882.

According to the United States census bureau the average earning capacity of the salaried man in Chicago is $1,202. An estimate of the total value of a college education was arrived at by finding the difference between the earnings of the graduate and multiplying the sum by forty, which the statistician considered a fair estimate of a man's years of service.

The cost of a college education at Northwestern is estimated at $2,400.

V. P. I. Shops Burned

Blacksburg, Va., June 14.—Fire of unknown origin destroyed the shops of the Virginia Polytechnic institute early today. The building was valued at $150,000, and was insured for $50,000.

The members of the Cotton Seed Crushers' association of Georgia, who make up this party expect to leave Atlanta on Saturday, June 21, and arrive in the Windy City on Sunday preceding the opening of the convention. The Georgia delegation will be joined en route by large delegations from Alabama and the Carolinas.

Special interest is attached to the forthcoming meeting in view of the fact that the president of the association is E. W. Ashcraft, of Florence, Ala., and it is the determination of the members from the neighboring states that in point of attendance the Chicago meeting shall be a record-breaker.

At the forthcoming meeting the legislative committee will make a report to the convention with reference to its appearance before the various congressional committees in charge of revising the tariff law so that the duty on camel hair press cloth will be removed. Heretofore, it has been taxed over 100 per cent ad valorem duty, and this has been a great tax on the cotton oil industry. It has been recommended for entire removal, and this most important item will be admitted, if the bill passes the senate, as it now stands, free from all duty.

The rules committee will meet in Chicago on Saturday, June 21. Former President E. P. McBurney, of the Georgia association, will represent the Georgia crushers.

Real, Honest-to-Goodness Lions Took Part In the Making of the Quo Vadis Pictures

Two intensely dramatic scenes from "Quo Vadis" which will be seen at the Grand this week

Quo Vadis, adapted from the famous novel by Henryk Sienkiewicz, in three acts and eight parts produced in a photo-play by Societa Italiana Cines of Rome, Italy and owned in America by George Kleine in association with Cohan and Harris, will be the extraordinary attraction at the Grand daily matinee and night during the week that commences on Monday next.

It is remarkable that the photo-play department of things theatrical has not advanced faster. There are thousands and thousands of people in Atlanta and millions throughout the world who would not let a day pass without devoting a part of their time to a visit to where pictures are being exhibited. And these people have been expecting and almost demanding something extraordinary. They have had a sort of satisfaction from the exhibition of feature reels, but until the production of "Quo Vadis" there has been still the atmosphere of the picture show so grand, so great, so wonderful in every detail is "Quo Vadis" that people forget that the silent actors are not real beings performing and that the details are not real, but simply photographs. The scenes live, the action is intense, the details realistic.

Not Property Animals. The wonderful series of "Quo Vadis" pictures as produced by the Kleine-Cines company was not obtained through resorting to tricks of the camera. Every foot of it is as near the real thing as a reasonable consideration for the safety of life and limb allowed. The beasts that appeared in the pictures were not "property" animals, but living, breathing creatures fresh from their native jungles and the men, women and children who faced them in the arena were real people, who actually took their lives in their hands while enacting the parts.

As a matter of fact one of the actors was crippled for life by a lion's claw. Another was badly mangled, and a third had the narrowest escape from death before the photographing of this scene was completed. Everything shown in this remarkable film is exactly what it seems with the exception of the scenes where the animals are devouring the remains of the Christians. In this of course, deception had to be practiced, but it was so cleverly managed that only an expert would discover it.

The staging of a scene in which fifty wild beasts play an essential part involved a series of difficulties which would have disheartened less intelligent and persevering producers or a less daring company of actors. The first step was the construction, near Rome, of a large model of the amphitheater of Nero's time. This structure was covered with material which closely simulated the massive marble and granite of the original. In everything except size and the quality of the material used it was an historically correct reproduction.

The actors who participated in the making of this wonderful reel of pictures were nearly all French and Italians, and their natural excitability reached the boiling point as they faced the prospect of having to play their scenes with only a precariously few feet of Italian atmosphere between them and a horde of savage beasts.

The orgies given in honor of Nero are re-enacted with the greatest precision. The burning of Rome is a thrilling part of the story, and the realism with which it is accomplished in the film fairly brings the onlooker into the conflagration as part of the fugitives trying to escape the grasp of the leaping flames, a sight in itself never to be forgotten.

The chariot races the Christian martyrs being thrown to the wild beasts, the struggle between Ureus, the giant slave, and the savage bull, and the human beings burned alive, are among the scenes that have been enacted over again from history.

"Quo Vadis" is a spell-binding story, and this film tells it minutely, correctly and most impressively, and the accompaniment of incidental music composed to fit its many dramatic moments. The engagement at the Grand will commence with matinee on Monday afternoon, and will continue with matinee performance each day at 2:30 o'clock and evening performances at 8:30, during the week. Seats will be on sale at the box office, and reservations can be made in advance, without additional charge. Precisely the

MONEY OF GEORGIA POURED INTO WEST FOR BUYING GRAIN

Cordele, Ga., June 14.—(Special).—According to an authentic report three of Cordele's banks paid out for imported feed stuffs from the west between January 1 and May 1 of this year a total sum of $600,000. By good authority it is also stated that approximately $1,000,000 was paid out from the banks of Albany during the same length of time for the same purpose.

Bringing to light these figures has created a great deal of discussion, opposing the too commonly practiced rule of the farmers of this section of making cotton the chief crop. It is argued by business men and a number of farmers that this drain of money from this section each year is most wholly responsible for the tightening up in financial circles in some parts of south Georgia during the summer. These facts and figures seem to be a revelation to the farmers themselves, and it is believed that the influence in developing more generally the "live at home" plan, and the production of more corn and other grain crops.

In discussing this situation, one prominent farmer, who states that he learned years ago that the live at home plan was the most profitable, said:

"Why the section has escaped bankruptcy is a tribute to the innate, or natural resources, or productiveness, of the land rather than to the wisdom of the man. There should be a demand here for the purchase of imported feed stuffs. No part of the south can surpass this in grain growing, and it is the lack of it upon a systematic basis on almost every plantation that is responsible. It is high time that something was being done to break the dominion of the usurper, 'King Cotton,' and solve the problem by a division between this and other crops on the farm for home consumption."

Hitting Our Inventors.

(Gilbert H. Montague, in Leslie.)
The Oldfield bill proposes that whenever any patent has been used in connection with any combination in restraint of trade, the patent shall be condemned and forfeited; and further that "such restraint shall be conclusively deemed to have been or to be unreasonable" and in violation of the Sherman law, if the vendor of any patented article does any of a number of acts. None of these acts are forbidden to manufacturers or dealers in unpatented articles. Only those who have spent their time and money advancing progress and the arts by developing and perfecting useful inventions are subjected to this wholesale outlawry. But every manufacturer and dealer in patented articles becomes a criminal if he tries to secure a year's business as a condition of selling to a dealer, if he tries to hold the dealer to his agreement to buy his patented goods exclusively or to a certain extent, if he tries to hold the dealer to his agreement to maintain a standard price on the patented goods; if he increases the use of a patented machine on condition that it be used only with specially prepared supplies or in continuity with specially adapted machinery necessary to insure the perfect operation of the patented machine; if he limits the licensee's line of business so that he may license to others the exclusive use of his patented machine in other lines of business, if he agrees with a retailer in a town to sell his patented goods to no one else in the same town or to sell to other retailers only on less favorable terms, in consideration of which the retailer shall push the sale of the goods, or if he sells his patented goods in any particular territory at a less price than he sells elsewhere.

The penalty for doing any of these things is the forfeiture of the patent, a fine of $5,000 and a year's imprisonment, and the costs of suit and attorney's fees to anyone who may sue within three years thereafter, and proves any damage. But manufacturers and dealers in every other form of property are left absolutely free to do any or all of these things.

The Prudent Farmer to His Love

(From Judge)

Come, live with me and be my love,
And I'll buy thee a new cook stove,
Then, summer, autumn, winter, spring,
You'll hear your own tea kettle sing,
I'll buy thee too, a chair that rocks,
Where you may sit and darn my socks;
And as your needle fills each hole,
A deep content shall fill your soul
That is you who sit there rocking,
And no one else may darn my stocking.

A mattress made of shucks and hay
Shall rest you at the close of day,
A clock with "T.T.T." shall warn
Your sleeping head when night is gone,
I'll buy these, too, a muslin gown,
To wear some Sundays into town,
I'll give you damaged corn to feed
The chickens, and if you succeed
Well with the eggs and fowls and milk,
I'll give you somewhat toward a silk.
If all these promised joys can move,
Come, live with me and be my love.

FROM DECATUR STREET TO CHAINGANG IS THE LIFETIME CIRCLE OF THE NEGROES WHO PROVIDE FULTON'S BEAUTIFUL HIGHWAYS

Top, left Judge Br'yles: "Thirty days!" At the top, right, is a collection of "white lightning" and "snow"—first aid to the Decatur street gunman. The picture at left center shows something that happens frequently on Decatur street. The other pictures show our gunman building Atlanta's streets and cooking at Bellwood convict camp.

When the stranger within our gates is lugged about town to be shown the "points of interest" there are always two items that the Atlantian never thinks of omitting.

One is the smooth easy highways that wind their way off over the rolling green hills of Fulton county and by the pines and skyscrapers of the city.

The other is Decatur street, where the negro flourishes as not since the day of his forefathers in far Africa.

The exploiting of the one is born of civic pride, the other the satisfaction of unrolling before the eyes of the uninitiated an eighth wonder of the world.

Bump and Brawl Are Related.

Few stop to consider that there is a very intimate connection between a Decatur street brawl and a bump more or less in the pavement over which the sightseer's automobile takes its luxurious way.

There is, however, a very vital relationship. For the Ephraim Johnson, erstwhile Decatur street gunman, is just as surely the embryo Ephraim Johnson, constructor of public highways, as Judge Br'yles is the nemesis of all the gunman's ilk. Henchmen to the gunman are the "blind tiger" and the "dope" fiend. The same rule applies to the trio.

For the sake of convenience let's combine the two into one very, very "bad nigger," for such a combination is by no means an infrequent customer of Decatur street.

With nine inches of blue steel on his hip he ambles up and down the great black way, skulking in the shadow of the Washington street viaduct sometimes to make a deal in "white lightning" or "snow," which, know ye, are the trade names on Decatur street for liquor and cocaine, illicitly sold, and again he swaggers in the open. He escapes the police for weeks, for months, he may be, but sooner or later he will be heard from. And incidentally the "sooner or later" usually comes on Saturday night.

In the dives and on the corners where the loiterers congregate our friend Ephraim becomes known as a "bad nigger," and greatly is his pride flattered thereby.

But beneath the "snow" slumber the dreams of a fiend and preserved in the "white lightning" is the nerve to make them real.

Cry of Bell Spells Danger.

So, by and by, one Saturday night the telephone rings in the call officers' booth at police headquarters, and the sharp cry of the bell spells danger.

"Dis beah de police station?" comes through the receiver.

"Yes."

"Mister, dat doggone nigger up yondah in de saloon on de corner done shootin' up de whole place! Yo' better hurry!"

Our friend Ephraim has been heard from!

A pair of officers grab their coats and swing them on as they pass to the courtyard where their motorcycles are waiting. Then, like a brace of wild geese, they rush, honking, upon the street and, twin streaks of light in the night, they are on their way to the "saloon on de corner."

It is usually the call officers upon whom falls the brunt of the task of looking out for the "bad nigger." For the bad "bad nigger" waits until the policemen on the "beat" are out of sight before he starts trouble. Then it remains for someone who thinks his hide is in danger to call the station-house.

No One Saw The Trouble.

In a jiffy the call officers are in the saloon. There are a dozen negroes loitering around, but, passing strange, there is not one of them who saw the trouble! Every one is vastly ignorant of what has happened.

By this time the men on the "beat," attracted by the shooting, have arrived. Questions are asked, but no intelligent answers are forthcoming.

A buck negro stands on the outskirts of the crowd and listens, saying nothing. Watch him!

The officers begin to fell around in the pockets of the negroes for evidence.

This is the cue for exit for the buck negro on the outskirts of the crowd. He reaches for his hat and "beats it" as fast as his feet can carry him. Around the corner he darts, bounding like a deer up the dark side street.

An officer takes shelter behind a lamp post in the wake of our fleeing friend and opens fire. Does the "bad nigger" show fight?

Not just yet. Give him half a block more.

Suddenly he swings on his heel and lets fly the six chambers of his revolver and throws the smoking weapon in the gutter as he continues his flight.

This is what the officer has been waiting for. The negro has disarmed himself, and the officer drops on one knee, levels his six-shooter over the crook of his arm and fires one time. If his aim is good there is a howl of pain and the bad man drops in his tracks.

"Gunman" Now Hors Du Combat.

Oh, no; he is not dead; only winged. The call policeman has hit him in the leg and put an effectual end to his flight.

By the time the officers reach the wounded negro he is not thinking a great deal about his punctured leg, but he greets them with a tale of woe and great injustice.

"Naw, sir, boss, yo' done got de wrong nigger. Dat good-fer-nuthin' nigger what was shootin' at yo' done gone on 'roun' de corner. He sho' did 'pease me 'trin'. Honest ten goodnes, I couldn't hardly see dat nigger go by me, he was gon' so fas'!"

It is an old story when the mighty have fallen on Decatur street, though, and in due time "the wrong nigger" is bundled in the patrol and taken to the right place, which is police headquarters.

The desk sergeant takes his name and address, and, incidentally, what ever else he may have except his clothes, registers "D. D." after his name, which, being translated, is "drunk and disorderly," meaning anything from one drink too much of "high-beer" to suspicion of triple murder.

If our "bad nigger" is much hurt he is bundled back in the patrol and carried to Grady hospital for treatment, but the chances are that the physician at the police barracks can take care of his wounds. In the latter case he is tucked away in a cell, which, according to eminent authority, is the best place in the world to do "clear thinkin'."

But to make a long story short, he goes before the almighty Judge Br'yles, is bound over to Judge Andy Calhoun's court, where in the natural and legal course of events he gets his thirty or sixty days, and is transferred to Bellwood or one of the other county convict camps.

While he is here if there is anything of the "good nigger" in him it is brought out. He learns what it means to work steady and hard all day long, to keep clean, to get regular sleep and plenty of it, and to eat wholesome food at regular intervals.

By the time he has repaved Peachtree street about three times his term is up, though, and the chances are that he leaves the Fulton county chaingang with a mighty yearning for the fleshpots of Decatur street. Experience to him has been no school at all, and the "thirty days" that at first struck terror to his soul has but proven the paradoxical panacea for his fears, and he is once more back in the old haunts.

And here's where the rub comes.

If—if he could only stay away, his chances for becoming a substantial citizen would be good. But Saturday afternoons and Saturday nights on Decatur street come along and the old hankering awakens in his heart again.

In his ears is a persistent call—the call of the raucous music of the picture show pianos, of the idle twanging of a ragged black's guitar, of the wonder of the black art of the patent medicine man on the corner, the odor of frying fats, beer and the wares of the delicatessen man, the hubbub and brawlish laughter of the jostling crowds, the lure of garish lights and lurking shadows, the "click-click" of dice and ivory balls! And soon also comes most of all the call of the "white lightning" and "snow," and the longing for the old-time, self-confident swagger born of the nine inches of blue steel in the hip pocket!

And when this comes Ephraim Johnson is once more en route upon the lifetime circle of Decatur street and the chaingang!

A Workingman's Views.

(W. W. Phillips, in Leslie's)

The agitators of the present day ask nothing better than a revolution in this country. The workman of the present day has the shortest hours, the least objectionable labor and the highest pay of the workman of any age since the birth of history. Does he get enough? That is a question that I unhesitatingly answer no. I am myself a workman and that may make me slightly prejudiced, but I base my opinion on facts. The workman produces all things of value. When I say workman, I do not mean simply the man who wears dirty clothes. I mean every man that is a producer.

The highest paid workmen in the world are the men the railroads employ. The railroads employ the largest number of men, too. And then the profits of the railroad companies, in spite of the excellent management of most roads, are as low as, if not lower than, those in any other business. Why condemn the business that employs more men at a larger salary than any other business in the world? It's very peculiar. I do not understand it. I think if anybody in the world ought to present a solid front against the attack on railroads it is

Remedy for Nose Bleed.

(From Family Doctor)

There are two little arteries which supply the whole face with blood, one on each side. These branch off from the main arteries on each side of the windpipe, and, running upward toward the eyes, pass over outside of the jawbone, about two-thirds of the way back from the angle of the jaw, under the ear. Now, suppose your nose bleeds by the right nostril; with the end of the forefinger feel along the outer edge of the right jaw until you feel the beating of the artery directly under your finger, the same as the pulse in your wrist; then press the finger hard upon it, thus getting the little fellow in a tight place between your finger and the jawbone. The result will be that a drop of blood goes into that side of the face while the pressure continues; notice the nose instantly stops bleeding for want of blood to flow, and the ruptured vessels in the nose will probably by that time contract, so that when you let the blood into them they will not bleed. Bleeding from a cut or wound anywhere about the face may be stopped in the same way.

A Story of the Moment

By WALT MASON, The Famous Prose Poet GETTING EVEN.

"You look as though you had a corroding grief concealed about your person," said Jamesworthy.

"I feel hurt and offended," replied Mrs. Jamesworthy. "Mrs. Terwilliger is going to have a lawn party tomorrow evening, and has invited all the women in the neighborhood except me."

ON "GOING UP AGAINST IT"

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Swash."

"Going up against it" is the United States way of describing a head-on collision between man and misfortune.

JUST FLIES!

A Bulletin issued by the Georgia State Board of Health.

You have probably heard the story of the "barker" at the circus side-show, who said, "Ladies and gentlemen, we have inside of this tent an African zebra."

Heaven v. Flies.

For a hen to lay two hundred eggs during the course of three hundred and sixty-five days is considered pretty good, but for a fly to lay one hundred eggs during the course of one day is nothing extra.

Lo, the Poor Fly!

In time to come, however, and that not very far off, the fly is going to find that human beings have gotten wise to his murderous ways.

Caution.

It is important to remember that the poisons which will kill flies will also poison human beings.

THE OLD BODYGUARD.

What pen can adequately tell of the loyalty and service of the old negro bodyguard of the confederacy?

Georgia and other southern states should care for these faithful old darkeys. They are the flower of a regime as strange and as dramatic as any that lines American history.

The negro bodyguard had all to lose and nothing to gain by the victory of the seceding states. If his master triumphed it meant indefinite bondage for the slave and his descendants.

Frequently the bodyguard helped perform the office of burial. Frequently upon him fell the melancholy duty of returning to the old home with the news of the death of father, husband or brother.

With the close of the war the old bodyguards, and the faithful class they represented, were one of the main influences in the redemption of the south; give them credit for that.

It is over this type of negro, the bodyguard and those who with him exemplified the virtues of gratitude and loyalty among the negroes, that the south of today expends many sighs.

ATLANTA IN THE CRUCIBLE.

With the assistance of three experts connected with the Russell Sage Foundation, the city of Atlanta is taking stock.

Mr. Potter instructively defined the purpose of a municipal social survey as follows:

If a business man who doesn't take his stock is short sighted, isn't a city equally so which doesn't follow suit? Many cities the country over are asking themselves that question, and they are answering it by undertaking a social survey.

The final report of these experts will show Atlanta to herself as she appears to the eyes of unbiased and keen-eyed outsiders. They will see all our disadvantages as well as our advantages.

The classic social survey of the twentieth century is that of Pittsburg, conducted also by the Russell Sage Foundation. Revelations then made not only astounded the country, but also aroused Pittsburg to teeming defects all around her.

In every bout the lobbyists take the count, but rise for another round.

Politicians in the log rolling business are not of the tall timber variety.

MENDING THE TAX SYSTEM.

The men who, for years, have fought a courageous but futile fight for fair taxation in Georgia may take heart. Indications are that their battle is nearer victory at this moment than at any time since its inauguration.

Speaking for itself, The Constitution would not be averse both to inheritance taxes and to general tax revision. An inheritance tax might temporarily relieve the state of its annual, and disgraceful, financial embarrassment.

This paper is already on record with regard to an inheritance tax. We believe it to be thoroughly just. It works no hardship on the living. It subtracts a fraction from estates only after these estates have lost power to harm or help their makers.

As to general tax reform, no intelligent and disinterested Georgian will put in a disclaimer. A former legislator, in conversation with The Constitution the other day, illustrated the true state of affairs and of popular sentiment.

Georgia's finances appear sick and inefficient; because of this miserable tax system justly denounced by Judge John Hart as "passing round the hat."

The friends of tax reform must be careful not to confuse the issues and jeopardize their fight. That has been done before in the history of this same movement. If they

WHILE WE PAUPERIZE OURS.

In the north and east they are in the midst of the season of endowments. In other words, in these sections commencement at colleges is synonymous of the announcement of the tremendous endowments and other financial acquisitions obtained or promised during the scholastic year now closing.

We have a commencement season in Georgia, but the conferring of degrees is about all it develops in common with the commencements north, east and west.

The Constitution has several times recently cited the University of Georgia and the Georgia School of Technology as illustrating victims of the pauperizing system of education. The university is compelled to waste money and imperil life by an antiquated heating system, because the legislature has during several sessions refused to make the meager appropriation for a central heating plant.

We're not "too poor." Where we really are "too poor" is in the fact that we can't afford, if we were only awake, to stint the institutions that are equipping the Georgians of tomorrow.

The legislature and sluggish popular sentiment are not the only parties culpable. Our men of wealth are likewise at fault! Our institutions cannot, of course, aspire to the huge endowments of the eastern universities.

PROTECTING OUR CREDIT.

The unaccounted for bankruptcy of the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad will not have been without its compensation if the pending probe by the interstate commerce commission shall make repetition of such affairs difficult or impossible.

The credit of the United States both at home and abroad is among its most precious possessions. And that credit seems to rest under a cloud by reason of the "Frisco affair. A road that can go into bankruptcy less than two months after its promoters, with fair words, sold $3,000,000 worth of its securities to confiding foreigners, requires investigation.

We are not too far from the nightmare era of railroad wrecking to forget its lessons. Georgia and the south has a vivid memory of the penalties of that day, and have no desire to return to or countenance a revival of it.

The railroads and corporations generally should be among the first to clamor for an unsparring investigation. They are finding it increasingly difficult to borrow money. When they do succeed they pay an exorbitant price. How can they expect easier borrowing conditions, or how can they expect to borrow at all, if American financial integrity rests under the cloud now visible in this unfortunate case?

Business Women of Atlanta Urge the Importance Of a Large Centrally Located Y. W. C. A. Building

I have a vision I see a substantial handsome building standing not far from Five Points. It has to be close to the business center in order to be effective. This building has carved over its door in magic words: The Young Women's Christian Association. The doors are flung wide open and sweet-faced earnest young women are coming and going. They are meeting in their respective club rooms, planning their work for the benefit of the association. In other parts of the building there are classes in Bible study, sewing, cooking, etc. There is an enthusiastic basketball game in progress in the well equipped gymnasium and down in the swimming pool a class is having a lesson in the art of swimming. A pleasant clatter of dishes is heard in the dining room and from all parts of the building there is a hum of activity. This vision will be realized if men and women become enthused with the idea that it must be a reality and not a dream. The progress has just recently indicated that the Y. W. C. A. building and surely Atlanta will not be far behind. We are proud of the club buildings we have for the men and boys but we are yearning in a plea for the girls and young women. Do you think more of yourselves and your boys than you do of your girls? I can't think that this is true. The Y. W. C. A. text is not by mighty nor by power but by My spirit, says the Lord, and by His spirit we will realize our dreams some day.

CORA L. JESSOP
President of the Clover Club

By Anna Dooly
There is one element of woman in Atlanta whom we do not hear so much about who seldom appear in the press but who are nevertheless the most important element in this—the most thrilling moment of woman's history. They are not in any one place and yet they are almost omnipresent. I go with father and say that the professional woman in Atlanta and social is prominent upon these women. If one and all organized and resolved that on one certain day of the year they would every one make a holiday on that day and at that moment every girl in the town would cease for this element so all important are Atlanta's business women.

They are the ones who really keep the office as surely as they keep the home. They keep the most important departments of the department store they are in the stationhouse. Keeping office there they are in the city. They keep the work there going; they are in the doctors' office in the editor's office in the office of all public utilities. They are in the industrial institution from the first place next to the president through the department of the most complicated machinery making whatever the factory wants. The more one thinks of these business women the more one realizes they have their feet on the ground and their heads in the clouds making for the city's progress and prosperity.

They are faithful, loyal, cheerful, ever alert to protect the interest of their employer but when the day comes and some time or other into the night does it occur to many people that this all powerful element are very little considered—that their being the helpmates in the busy work of the day is forgotten through their inability to do their efficient work and their daily judge much of the for one making of the world is being done?

What We Owe Them
What is done for the woman? The question pushes itself with reproachful force. What is being done to make their time serving the easier and give them that joy of life for which the world is and old poor and rich is reaching out?

They are busy—too busy to stop and think in their own minds just what they want their employers are ready and willing to do for them with their right-spirited municipalities is ready to act as a giver at large for the good and pleasure of these women who represent this factoring in the city but how can they do it and through what medium?

At the suggestion of a group of Atlanta's progressive men and women the question "What do we want?" was put to a number of Atlanta's business women with the suggestion that they think singly and individually and then express themselves.

With an expression the call made was for a centralized building and the Y. W. C. A. in that city.

Three Requirements
To be in the things that business women need in Atlanta that is the comfortable housing the Y. W. C. A. and the place to meet under a roof. The first of these is the Y. W. C. A. Christian association of Atlanta. The second is the Y. W. C. A. building. The third is the Y. W. C. A. building.

The average business woman has no home she can call her own else she would not be a business woman as the significant statement she makes. Therefore after business hours she thinks first of comfort and rest, a good meal and pleasant conversation and finally some form of mental stimulation or recreation.

These three elements which should enter into every woman's life as well as every man's can be met in the boarding home of the Young Women's Christian Association. In the care of a woman, intelligent and friendly in various lines of departmental work this interview was followed by many others and it was clearly indicated that the business women of Atlanta though they may not have organized as a body and asked for it are depending upon Atlanta's charitable spirit to get back of the movement represented in the Young Women's Christian Association and push it on.

Their Candid Expression
The Young Women's Christian Association has meant a deal to me in my career as a business woman. Miss Mary Phelps and I are ready to do anything I can to help the movement.

I regard the safe as a great help to women workers. True there are plenty of cheap safe vaults in Atlanta but I don't like them. I like a safe vault at home that is fire and burglar proof. I like one centrally located for the business woman and the shopper. A clean light airy vault with a reminder of the safe that is both fire and burglar proof should be a help to women workers.

Then there are the clubs and the gymnasium. I have spent my past winter in the Y. W. C. A. club. Mr. W. H. Reynolds has explained the matter of the weather. We have had lectures on art on current events and literature. An hour's work in the gymnasium has restored the color to pale cheeks and elasticity to jaded muscles. For those who would be successful in the folk dances and drills for the athletic a hard fought game of basketball.

In the spring the club fancy seems to turn dramatic and we have had great fun in selecting plays in rehearsing costumes and putting it on.

We have had many delightful parties both in the rooms of the Y. W. C. A. and at the homes of different members of the club.

Meets Many Needs
The Young Women's Christian Association whatever established on a permanent basis meets many needs of the business woman. It is the expression of Miss Ellen Douglas.

It meets the every day need and that of Sunday.

I like the busy minister the Y. W. C. A. secretary in her office morning noon and night with a ready ear to listen to any girl or woman's woes or joys and to lend a hand where needed. She is easy of access all of the time. Then there are the rest and reading rooms where one feels perfectly at home.

When one is going to a city alone it is a relief to have known of a woman traveling from one city to another all alone but not alone by the Y. W. C. A. by some representative of the association in meeting her. Very few of us young women in Atlanta will go to the city alone until she has a Young Women's Christian Association building.

The Stranger's Viewpoint
It is not here are in Atlanta as a business woman. It is not here are in Atlanta as a business woman. It is not here are in Atlanta as a business woman.

The Cheerful Atmosphere
I have been a member of the Y. W. C. A. of Atlanta for a number of years and find it a much needed place for the business woman. Miss Lena Oester.

Take the young woman who comes to the city as a stranger. The rooms of the Y. W. C. A. the secretary and her assistant were ever ready to welcome her and aid her in securing a room. If later she became a member of the association she would be open to her and in a little while she would be in the reading room and in the rest room. There was always a help of girls in the rooms ready to cheer up those who came in tired from their day's work and to make the stranger feel at home.

Without the rooms of the Y. W. C. A. where is the girl or woman from the country to turn to when she wishes to take her lunch and rest from her shopping trip in the downtown district?

Physical Exercise
Women who work down town especially those whose positions force them to be confined in a stuffy office all day long need physical exercise. The gymnasium of the Y. W. C. A. is a help to them.

There is a social club for women and a young men's club. The Y. W. C. A. is a help to them.

Opportunity is also given to young women to learn to sew, embroider, trim their hats or make their dresses. A very nominal cost.

With a building such as the association should be I am sure some day will have much more could and will be done toward the welfare of the young women of Atlanta.

A Crying Need
The Y. W. C. A. has meant a revival of interest in my entire surroundings. I am a busy woman working from 8 in the morning until 5:30 in the afternoon on a steady grind in doors all day and by stopping time you have a pretty woman person in place of the one who started the day bright and active. When take her to the Y. W. C. A. let her have a light lunch for supper then a social club gathering with literary features and then an hour of gymnastic exercises. After this you find her made over from a tired out friend of 5:30 p. m. and one ready for a refreshing sleep. This is how I feel after an evening spent at the Y. W. C. A.

CANDLER COUNTY WILL RALLY MANY FRIENDS

Majority of People in Three Counties Favor Movement, Assert Supporters

Atlanta hotel lobbies are already being given to take on new life in anticipation of the meeting of the legislature on June 2, and no little of this is the outgrowth of the various movements on foot for the establishment of new counties.

The Candler county movement was the first in the field and its members are exhibiting unusual determination to win if success be possible.

They assert that more than a majority of the people of Bulloch, Emanuel and Tattnall counties are in favor of the establishment of Candler county with Metter as the county seat, because these are now about the largest counties in the state.

This bit of territory, which Candler propose to take lies in two congressional districts, two judicial circuits and three senatorial districts. Metter, in the western section of Bulloch county is so close to the line of the other counties that to all intents and purposes it is made into Candler county. The two banks in Metter lend money in three counties. The merchants of Metter sell goods in three counties. Many of the citizens of Metter own property in the territory proposed to be made into Candler county. It costs the 13,000 people in this area thousands of dollars every year to attend court in three counties seats an expense and difficulty which would be eliminated by the creation of Candler county.

NEGROES PLANNING BIG MUSIC FESTIVAL

Occasion Will Commemorate Semi-Centennial of Emancipation of Colored Race.

Great interest is being manifested among the colored people to the forthcoming annual music festival to be held at the Auditorium July 3 and 4. Final arrangements have been made with all the singers who will take part in the celebration which will be in commemoration of the semi-centennial of the emancipation of the colored race in the United States.

The very best talent afforded by the race throughout the country has been chosen from Anita Patti Brown who has proved so popular in the past in the festivals here, wishing again this year. A new singer one never before heard in Atlanta will be Roland B. Hayes of Boston. He is said to be the finest tenor the race has ever produced and sings with wonderful popular effect. The famous Fisk Jubilee Singers better than ever have been secured again this year. Professor J. W. Work of Nashville who will have charge of the two choruses is already here and has begun the work of rehearsing which takes place at the First Congregational church colored Monday Tuesday and Friday nights.

The first night of the festival will be devoted to the pageant play of the progress of the race "Up to Freedom" which proved so popular last year. Ten original scenes made expressly for this play will be shown illustrating the progress of the race from the shores of Africa to the present. The second night of the festival will be a grand concert in which all the stars of the festival will take part. There will possibly be a matinee concert in the afternoon of the 4th of July composed entirely of negro melodies.

The proceeds of the entertainment go entirely for the support of the institutional work done by the First

A committee of club women was at the station to meet the delegates, and an automobile ride over Covington as the first item on the day's delightful program...

Endowment Fund Urged. Mrs. Lipscomb stressed the necessity of raising the endowment funds. This is of vital importance not only to the state federation, but to the national. The work of both is hampered by lack of income and needed to be established on a sound business basis.

Important to Club Women. In the "Woman's Edition" appeared an advertisement of a little book recently edited by Mrs. Walter B. Hill, of Athens, under the title, "Certain Rules of Law in Business Transactions." The advertisement, however, failed to mention the fact that 10 per cent of the sales of the book will be donated to the club schools of the Georgia federation.

The semi-annual meeting of the Atlanta City Federation of Women's Clubs was on June 6. This was one of the best meetings ever held by the federation, and indicates the splendid work that is being done and the increasing interest taken by the women of the city in club affairs.

MEETINGS HELD BY CLUBS OF STATE. Senior Civic League. Soon after the Senoia Civic league was organized plans were perfected for a library for the winter months. Subscriptions were secured and soon it outweighed the plans. A very convenient club room was leased and furnished; books were bought, a librarian engaged to open the library to the public twice a week.

A Wonderful Edition. The Woman's Edition was simply wonderful! My heart thrills anew with pride each time I read and reread the many splendid articles from our brilliant, brainy women. Let me say to those dear women, scattered all over the United States, who so cheerfully and promptly sent me their contributions...

Teaching Georgia's Blind to See Through Their Fingers

EDUCATION OF STATE'S BLIND CHILDREN IS A BIG TASK

At the top, on the left: Superintendent George F. Oliphant in his office. On the right, the Academy building. Just below the building, blind students receiving instruction in broommaking. Middle row, at the left: First grade class in charge blind instructor. On the right: Students drilling in court outside of gymnasium. Bottom row, on left: Students doing bench work, with samples of work in foreground. On right: Classroom scene during study period, showing students reading with their fingers.

Macon, Ga., June 14.—(Special).—Educating Georgia's blind children is a bigger task than most people think, but Georgia is just now reaching the point where she is getting the system down to a fine point and wonderful results are being accomplished.

The present site of the academy, on the Forsyth road, just outside the Macon city limits, comprises twenty acres of ground which was purchased seven or eight years ago for $12,000. On this has been erected a building which cost $100,000.

When the state decided to build the new academy it disposed of the old property at Orange and High streets for $50,000, and with an additional

In this building each day seventy-five unfortunate, sightless children receive training so they may become useful citizens despite their affliction. They range in age all the way from 6 to 18 years and as in the case with other children when they are normal in all respects except that they cannot see, they are just as apt at learning as anyone else. It is where there is a combination of afflictions that the trouble comes in and the instructors find it hard to get results though they never let up as long as the student shows any progress whatever.

THE TOTALLY BLIND APT SCHOLARS.

rest of whose body is normal, and he will learn rapidly," said Superintendent George F. Oliphant, in discussing the work of the institution. "It is the ones with partial sight who give us the most trouble. The latter kind usually make sorry students, for they learn to depend on their partial sight, and as a result do not get a clear notion of things.

"The only way for a blind person to make progress is to get the thing fixed in his mind and once that is done it will remain there. Of course, the whole secret of teaching blind people is to educate the mind through the hands and the course of study must be mapped out accordingly."

Superintendent Oliphant believes in teaching his students things that will them return home after they leave the school, he declares, and unless the girls marry, the majority of them stay there. For that reason they are taught cooking, sewing and music principally, though, of course, they all take literary courses as well.

STUDENTS CAN EASILY EARN LIVING.

To illustrate the practical aims of the institution and to show how the student may receive financial returns after he leaves the school, Mr. Oliphant cites the case of one boy who is studying horticulture and is making a special study of carnations. "When that boy leaves the academy he can begin to raise his own flowers and if he grows nothing but carnations he will be able to make a fair for that kind of flower."

The alumnus of the institution is now scattered all over the state. Coroner Paul Donehoo, of Fulton county, is a graduate of the academy. He took a course in music while at the school and is now studying law as well as looking after his official duties as coroner.

Another graduate, Walter McDonald, is studying law at the University of Georgia and there are many music teachers scattered over the state who secured their training at the state academy. Director McNeill, of the academy conservatory of music, is himself a graduate of the academy, where he is now an instructor.

BLIND INSTRUCTORS EMPLOYED.

The Georgia Academy for the Blind

that number four are themselves blind. There are six teachers in the literary department, three music teachers and two instructors in the manual training department, one for the boys and one for the girls. Probably the most remarkable feature of the whole institution is the work of F. T. Ferrigo, the blind instructor in the boys' manual training department. He is a skilled mechanic and does his work almost, as well as though in possession of his sight.

One of the chief features of this department is the broom factory. Brooms are easy to make and in many cases blind men have made fortunes out of the business, though it is said by Superintendent Oliphant that the industry is not such a profitable one in this part of the country because supply. Aside from brooms, the boys are taught to do all kinds of wood turning work. Piano stools, library tables, wooden kitchen utensils and chairs are all turned out with ease by many of the students after they are able to fix the idea thoroughly in their minds. One student, became so proficient in his work that he turned out as perfect a specimen of a cannon as one would want to see.

COURSE IN PIANO TUNING.

Piano tuning is also one of the main arts in which the boys are given instruction. Good ears, a thorough knowledge of the parts of the piano and enough musical education to

Von Herrmann Gives Some Terse Facts Regarding Atlanta Weather for 35 Years

No adequate account of the climate of Atlanta has heretofore been written, although the weather bureau has maintained an observatory in the city for thirty-five years. At length, however, a comprehensive report has been prepared by Dr. W. von Herrmann, at present in charge of the local office of the weather bureau, which will be submitted for publication to the department in Washington. It is highly important to the commercial and social interests of Atlanta, probably the most progressive and rapidly growing city in the south, that correct ideas prevail in regard to its excellent climate, for naturally some misconception exists in the minds of many people in regard to the climate of a place situated in the cotton belt at the low latitude of 33 degrees; the influence of altitude and of proximity to the ocean and the Gulf of Mexico is overlooked and the climate supposed to be much warmer and more oppressive in summer than is really the case. In fact, however, extremes of temperature such as comparatively common in many cities far to the north are not experienced at Atlanta, and many northern people will be surprised to learn that during the past thirty-five years, the following review of Mr. von Herrmann's pamphlet will be of interest to many of our readers.

Factors Controlling Climate.
The altitude of a place is one of the most potent factors in modifying its climate. The temperature decreases in fact roughly about 1 degree Fahr. for every 300 feet increase in elevation. Mountains thus thrust themselves up into the region of cooler air and thus lower the temperature of their surroundings. The annual mean temperature at Atlanta is nearly 3 degrees lower than at Augusta, which is nearly the same latitude, but 300 feet lower. Azonal mountains have a strong influence on rainfall by facilitating the ascent of moist air currents flowing up their slopes and thus causing condensation of moisture. The source of the prevailing winds carries its rainfall to the neighboring oceans, but the maximum amount is received in the northern mountainous portion of the state. The fully nature of the surrounding region is favorable for active circulation and comparatively large amount of virgin forest tends to equalize temperatures.

The frequency of storms at Atlanta is not great; only about 20 per cent of all disturbances observed in the United States have a direct influence on the weather at Atlanta. Our worst weather is usually associated with areas of low barometric pressure that move from the west gulf over the southern states northeastward toward New England. During the summer months general storms are rare and the precipitation sustained entirely due to local thunderstorms.

General Climatic Characteristics.
In a general way Atlanta may be said to be located in the moisture region of the year. The seasonal and annual temperature averages range between comparatively narrow limits, the monthly mean temperature is never below freezing and seldom above 80 degrees. The winters are mild but not without frequent periods of cold, bracing weather or cold waves which impart renewed vitality and vigor to the human frame. On rare occasions the temperature at Atlanta has fallen a few degrees below freezing.

The precipitation is abundant and uniformly distributed throughout the year, but long periods of dry, pleasant weather are common during autumn. The worst weather is usually experienced during January and February, which have the maximum amount of snowfall. The wind movement at Atlanta is large; the average hourly velocity exceeds ten miles an hour, and maximum velocities exceeding sixty miles an hour are registered occasionally. Probably the most characteristic feature of the weather at Atlanta during summer is the heat of the day, which makes the heat of the day altogether bearable. It is doubtful whether any deaths by sunstroke have ever occurred in the city.

Temperature of Atlanta.
The annual mean temperature at Atlanta is 60.9 degrees, which is about 2.5 degrees higher than the mean for the whole northern hemisphere. The winter mean is 44 degrees, and the coldest month is January, with a mean of 42.8 degrees. The temperature on the average, therefore, does not fall below the freezing point during winter; in fact, a monthly mean temperature below 32 degrees has never been recorded since observations were begun, the nearest approach being the mean of 34.4 degrees in February, 1885. Sometimes the mean temperatures during the winter months exceed 50 degrees, as for example during the remarkably mild winter of 1889-1890, when the following mean temperatures were recorded at Atlanta: viz., December, 57 degrees; January, 55 degrees, and February, 56 degrees. The mean for that winter was 10 degrees above the normal.

The mean summer temperature is 77 degrees. July is the warmest month, having a normal temperature of nearly 79 degrees. The highest monthly mean on record was 82 in August, 1876. As a rule, however, monthly mean temperatures above 80 degrees are of rare occurrence. The mean temperature of spring is 60.8 degrees, or almost exactly the same as the annual mean, while that for autumn is 61.9 degrees, or 1 degree higher.

Extremes of Temperature.
We do not feel mean temperatures and from the point of view of personal comfort, especially in large cities, there is a greater interest in the extremes of temperature. During the most severe cold waves the temperature at Atlanta occasionally falls below zero, but this has occurred only three times during the past thirty-five years: namely on January 5, 1884, when 3 degrees below zero was registered, on January 13, 1885, with 2 degrees below and on February 13, 1899, when the remarkably low minimum temperature of 8 degrees below zero occurred during what was probably the most severe cold wave ever experienced in the United States. On the average the probable lowest temperatures for winter are: December, 19 degrees; January, 15 degrees, and February, 17 degrees. The mean minimum temperature for winter is 36 degrees.

The average number of days on which temperatures below 32 degrees occur in November is 3; in December, 13; in January, 23; in February, 9, and in March, 4. The longest continuous period of freezing weather occurred in 1885, when the minimum temperatures were below freezing from January 6 to January 23, with a minimum during the period of 8 degrees. The altitude of the station prevents any excessively high summer temperatures, in spite of the low latitude of the city. A maximum of 100 degrees has been recorded but once, namely on July 19, 1887. Temperatures above 90 degrees begin to be registered in May and may continue to early October. The probable highest temperatures for the summer months are 93 degrees for June, 97 degrees for July and 93 degrees for August. The longest period during which the maximum temperature has remained daily above 90 degrees occurred in 1890, June 22 to July 6, fifteen days with a maximum of 93 degrees.

The extreme range in temperature at Atlanta is thus 108 degrees. At most cities in the interior the annual range of extremes is much greater as the following examples will show: At Pittsburgh, Pa., the range is from a maximum of 103 degrees to a minimum of 20 degrees below zero, at St. Louis from 70 degrees to 22 below zero, at St. Paul from 104 degrees to 41 degrees below zero, and at Huron, S. D., from 105 degrees to 43 degrees below zero.

Duration of the Crop Season.
From the point of view of agricultural interests the dates of the last killing frosts in spring and of the first in autumn are of considerable practical importance as marking the limit of the growing season for most of the staple crops, although it is true that in the vicinity of Atlanta several market crops may be grown all winter with slight protection. The average date of the last killing frost in spring at Atlanta is March 21, and of the first in autumn November 5; the average length of the growing season is, therefore, 235 days. The earliest date on which the last killing frost occurred was February 15, in 1880, and the last date April 17, in 1905. The earliest date for the first killing frost in fall was October 13, in 1896, and the latest November 29, in 1889.

Precipitation Abundant.
At Atlanta the rainfall is abundant and well distributed throughout the year. The annual average is slightly over 50 inches. There has, however, been a progressive decrease in the annual normal rainfall from a maximum of 54 inches in 1889 (average for 25 years) to a minimum of 49 inches in 1911 (average for 46 years). The former period on the whole was characterized by heavy precipitation, the annual total having exceeded 50 inches five times and fallen below 40 inches but twice between 1888 and 1889, while during the period from 1889 to 1912 the total exceeded 50 inches but once (in 1912) and was below 40 inches seven times. The largest amount received during any year was 64.98 inches, in 1888, closely followed by 61.09 inches in 1912, and the least was 32.13 inches, in 1904, showing the extreme variability in the amount of precipitation. The remarkable contrast between the two contiguous periods of twelve months from July 1, 1910, to June 30, 1911, and from July 1, 1911, to June 30, 1912, is worthy of special mention. The total rainfall for the first period was 28.11 inches, the smallest amount ever registered for any twelve months, while the amount for the second period was 64.82 inches, which nearly equals the maximum record for any year.

The monthly averages fluctuate from a maximum of 5.80 inches in March, to a minimum of 2.41 inches in October. There are two periods of maximum and two periods of minimum rainfall during the year. The winter and early spring months are generally wet, and as temperatures are low the soil remains saturated with moisture. The rains of this period are associated with the largest barometric depressions which cross the central valley or southern states, hence are general in character, and the rainy weather often lasts several days at a time. The usual terms, miles per hour. A velocity exceeding 40 miles an hour is termed a gale. During the past 34 years or 408 months, gales of 40 miles an hour or more have occurred 141 times, exceeding 50 miles an hour 29 times, and exceeding 60 miles an hour 5 times. The highest velocity registered was 86 miles, from the northwest, on March 24, 1909.

Thunder Storms.
Thunder storms are frequent at Atlanta and may occur in any month of the year, but they have a maximum frequency in July, August and June. The average number per annum during the past 15 years was 58 storms; the greatest number recorded was 75, in 1905. During July the average number of thunder storms is 14, during August 12, during June 10. Destructive hail rarely accompanied thunder storms in Atlanta, although one remarkably severe storm deserves to be mentioned, that of October 14, 1903.

Besides the general sketch outlined above, Mr. von Herrmann's pamphlet contains thirty tables of climatic data for Atlanta which should prove a mine of information for those who seek to know more fully the conditions prevailing in the Capital City as compared with other points.

Number of Rainy Days.
The normal number of days with appreciable rainfall during the year is 124. The largest number of rainy days occurs in August, 13, followed by July and January with 12; the least number in October, 7, followed by September and November with 9. The average interval between rains is three days, which should be extended to five days in October and November.

The duration of rainy periods—that is of consecutive days with 0.01 inch or more precipitation—is a matter of considerable interest to people dwelling in large cities, for a prolonged period of gloomy, wet weather often seriously interrupts business, interferes with amusements and affects the health and spirits of the people. At Atlanta rainy periods of 8 days' duration or more are not frequent. Atlanta has experienced four times rainy spells of 12 days' duration and two times rainy spells of 11 days' duration and three times of 10 days' duration during the past thirty-five years.

The maximum amount of rainfall received during a day at the longest spells of rainy weather were as follows: In 1886, March 26 to 31, six days, rainfall 10.41 inches. In 1889, March 8 to 16, nine days, with 10.41 inches. In 1887, July 27 to August 4, nine days, with 12.54 inches.

Periods of Drought.
The long periods of dry, pleasant weather in autumn at Atlanta are worthy of note, and are rather unexpected in a region having a normal annual rainfall of nearly 50 inches well distributed throughout the year. The longest period of consecutive dry days was that which prevailed in 1884, from September 13 to October 21, or 39 days. There have been 51 periods of dry weather at Atlanta of 16 days duration or more, 10 during the first 6 months of the year, 6 during the summer months, and 35 in autumn.

It is frequently the case that a period of drought, entire absence of rain, is preceded and followed by very heavy precipitation, having hardly an appreciable influence on vegetation, and the duration of drought may be correctly extended to include dates with small amounts of precipitation. In the aggregate, they do not exceed a total of 18 inches. The following are the most remarkable records for Atlanta: 1884—September 5 to November 1, 59 days; 1 day with 10 inch.

1884—August 10 to October 21, 73 days; 9 days with a total of 28 inch. 1889—September 13 to November 11, 60 days; 7 days with total of 43 inch. 1891—September 14 to November 9, 57 days; 6 days with total of 18 inch.

Snowfall—1890-1912.
Snowfall is a climatic feature of little importance at Atlanta. The average amount unmelted for winter is only 3.6 inches, most of which falls during January and February. The total for a year has reached a depth of one foot only once during the past twenty-two years, namely, in 1895. Snow is comparatively so rare and remains on the ground so short a time that when a good fall does occur grown people, as well as children, enter heartily into the enjoyment of it. The largest amount of snow received during the period from 1890 to 1912 in 24 hours was 7.5 inches on January 28, 1904.

On two occasions snow has remained on the ground unmelted for ten days, namely, in January, 1883, and in February, 1895. The latest date when measurable snow occurred was April 25, 1910 (1.5 inches), and the earliest November 26-27, 1912 (2.2 inches).

Relative Humidity.
The annual percentage of relative humidity is 68. The minimum amount of moisture is recorded in April, relative humidity for the month 60 per cent, and the maximum in August, relative humidity 71 per cent. During a clear, clear weather with easterly winds at almost any season of the year the relative humidity frequently falls below 20 per cent. Owing to the active atmospheric circulation at Atlanta, high relative humidity is comparatively rarely a source of personal discomfort at Atlanta.

Sunshine and Cloudiness.
The maximum sunshine is received in June, when the average is 63 per cent of the possible amount; there is a slight decrease during the summer months, followed by a secondary maximum of 66 per cent in October. The least amount of sunshine is received in December and January.

The average number of clear days during the year is 137; of partly cloudy days 129, and cloudy days 112.

Average Wind Velocity.
During every month of the year except September the prevailing direction of the wind is west, while in September it is almost from the opposite direction, namely, from the east. Nearly 63 per cent of the winds at Atlanta are from the west or northwest, and 16 per cent from the east.

The average hourly wind velocity is 11.1 miles, the highest hourly velocity occurs at 3 p. m. and lowest at 7 a. m. and 7 p. m.

The maximum velocity of the wind is the number of miles recorded during a brief period of five minutes, when the velocity is stated, multiplied by 12, in order to express the velocity in the usual terms, miles per hour.

At Atlanta rainy periods of 8 days' duration or more are not frequent. Atlanta has experienced four times rainy spells of 12 days' duration and two times rainy spells of 11 days' duration and three times of 10 days' duration during the past thirty-five years.

The maximum amount of rainfall received during a day at the longest spells of rainy weather were as follows: In 1886, March 26 to 31, six days, rainfall 10.41 inches. In 1889, March 8 to 16, nine days, with 10.41 inches. In 1887, July 27 to August 4, nine days, with 12.54 inches.

The long periods of dry, pleasant weather in autumn at Atlanta are worthy of note, and are rather unexpected in a region having a normal annual rainfall of nearly 50 inches well distributed throughout the year. The longest period of consecutive dry days was that which prevailed in 1884, from September 13 to October 21, or 39 days. There have been 51 periods of dry weather at Atlanta of 16 days duration or more, 10 during the first 6 months of the year, 6 during the summer months, and 35 in autumn.

It is frequently the case that a period of drought, entire absence of rain, is preceded and followed by very heavy precipitation, having hardly an appreciable influence on vegetation, and the duration of drought may be correctly extended to include dates with small amounts of precipitation. In the aggregate, they do not exceed a total of 18 inches. The following are the most remarkable records for Atlanta: 1884—September 5 to November 1, 59 days; 1 day with 10 inch.

1884—August 10 to October 21, 73 days; 9 days with a total of 28 inch. 1889—September 13 to November 11, 60 days; 7 days with total of 43 inch. 1891—September 14 to November 9, 57 days; 6 days with total of 18 inch.

Snowfall is a climatic feature of little importance at Atlanta. The average amount unmelted for winter is only 3.6 inches, most of which falls during January and February. The total for a year has reached a depth of one foot only once during the past twenty-two years, namely, in 1895. Snow is comparatively so rare and remains on the ground so short a time that when a good fall does occur grown people, as well as children, enter heartily into the enjoyment of it. The largest amount of snow received during the period from 1890 to 1912 in 24 hours was 7.5 inches on January 28, 1904.

On two occasions snow has remained on the ground unmelted for ten days, namely, in January, 1883, and in February, 1895. The latest date when measurable snow occurred was April 25, 1910 (1.5 inches), and the earliest November 26-27, 1912 (2.2 inches).

The annual percentage of relative humidity is 68. The minimum amount of moisture is recorded in April, relative humidity for the month 60 per cent, and the maximum in August, relative humidity 71 per cent. During a clear, clear weather with easterly winds at almost any season of the year the relative humidity frequently falls below 20 per cent. Owing to the active atmospheric circulation at Atlanta, high relative humidity is comparatively rarely a source of personal discomfort at Atlanta.

The maximum sunshine is received in June, when the average is 63 per cent of the possible amount; there is a slight decrease during the summer months, followed by a secondary maximum of 66 per cent in October. The least amount of sunshine is received in December and January.

The average number of clear days during the year is 137; of partly cloudy days 129, and cloudy days 112.

The maximum velocity of the wind is the number of miles recorded during a brief period of five minutes, when the velocity is stated, multiplied by 12, in order to express the velocity in the usual terms, miles per hour.

ing the past 15 years was 58 storms; the greatest number recorded was 75, in 1905. During July the average number of thunder storms is 14, during August 12, during June 10. Destructive hail rarely accompanied thunder storms in Atlanta, although one remarkably severe storm deserves to be mentioned, that of October 14, 1903.

Besides the general sketch outlined above, Mr. von Herrmann's pamphlet contains thirty tables of climatic data for Atlanta which should prove a mine of information for those who seek to know more fully the conditions prevailing in the Capital City as compared with other points.

The duration of rainy periods—that is of consecutive days with 0.01 inch or more precipitation—is a matter of considerable interest to people dwelling in large cities, for a prolonged period of gloomy, wet weather often seriously interrupts business, interferes with amusements and affects the health and spirits of the people. At Atlanta rainy periods of 8 days' duration or more are not frequent. Atlanta has experienced four times rainy spells of 12 days' duration and two times rainy spells of 11 days' duration and three times of 10 days' duration during the past thirty-five years.

Now art as Mr. Edward Howard Griggs has recently said to us in his lectures here, is not for art's sake, but "preparately for life's sake." And the aim of the work in the high school is not to make artists of the students, but to give appreciation and the joy of creative ability to all.

A course of study that is designed to cultivate judgment, good taste, discrimination as to good and bad form in every detail of life, and to stimulate the inventive or creative power, is worthy, so educators believe, of a place of no mean importance in the curriculum of the high school.

And in detail there is a course of

YOUNG MEN WANT EXPENSE MONEY

Every Man Who Starts in Life Thinks More of His Expense—Work—Ideas Change.

By S. A. Lesman.

"I was thinking the other day," remarked Mr. Lesman, "how funny it is that most young fellows, when they start off on the journey of life, are more interested in their expense accounts than in the amount of work they are going to do and the results they are going to get."

"This business of living is really a whole lot like a trip that is salesman takes. When a boy gets born, he is virtually taking on the job. His firm has to pay his expenses for fifteen or twenty years, until the prospects he has have time to develop. That's just like a house starting a new man on the road. You always have to advance some expense money before the orders begin to come in. Well, when the boy goes out to begin to get results to show for the expense money he has advanced to him, he thinks always at first of how he can get the expense money. He spends the greater part of his time just figuring how he can make the firm come across with some larger expense appropriations. But generally his sales manager (Old Mother Nature by name) says, 'Look here, young man, you've got to show me something. If you can do me a good service to make it worth my while, I'll increase your expense account some, but I ain't going to give all the profits of the business away for nothing just to keep a lot of fellows like you riding around the country.'"

"Then the fellow buckles down to work. If he is any good, and the first thing you know he is drawing down an expense account that is worth bragging about. But when he sees where he can place this money, the firm lets him have it. The time comes for him to come in on the road and go to the Big Boss and report. If he can show something worth while that he did on the trip, why there ain't any kick coming about the excess. If he can't show a pretty fair sort of a score on his daughter as a result of his living, he gets a star against his name on the 'honor list' for the generation. You see, here's the origin of the expression, 'Stars in my crown.'"

HARRISON TELLS A FISHY FISH STORY

Popular Salesman Contributes One of Those Famous Letters to Columns This Week.

Montgomery, Ala., June 3, 1913.—Editor Constitution Firing Line: Yes, I had trouble getting The Constitution this morning. It looked as though everybody in Montgomery wanted a Constitution, but I got one at last, and say, that old paper is some paper. On my way back to the hotel I met one of my Montgomery friends. He pointed at The Constitution and said to a gentleman who was with him: "That is an Atlanta man now, going to get full of 'Atlanta spirit' for next week. These Atlanta fellows can't do a thing; they don't have one of their home papers on Sunday."

I told him the reason why we had to have an Atlanta paper was because there were so many happenings in the south now that the only way to keep up with them was to get a "sure enough" newspaper. Don't tell my house, but I went fishing one day last week while in south Alabama, and, say, you have never seen fish. I went with a friend of mine, and we caught enough for all the families in that town to have fish dinner that night. I think the population of the town is about 1,600, so you know the town took lots of fish. Now, I was only out half a day, so don't know what would have happened if I had fished the whole day. I couldn't spare more than half a day, though, for business is too good. The doctor tells me that I am ruining the shape of my beautiful handwriting so much, and I told him I couldn't help it, for it looked like everyone in Alabama was waiting for the S. P. Richard company's line of school supplies, etc., and that is the line I happen to have just now. Gee, but it is great to have a merchant say to you:

"Harrison, I am sure glad to see you. Go on and open up and let me know when you are ready for me to come to the sample room." Well, that is the way it has been in most towns this trip. It is as hot as blue blazes down here, but who cares so long as he is getting good business? I will be in Atlanta for next Sunday. This is a nice enough old town, and the Gay Terrace is a crackerjack hotel, but there is no place on earth like home, is there? Your friend, ED. S. HARRISON.

BUYS GOOD BILL SHOES.

Merchant Spends Two Days and Orders Red Seal Shoes.

E. J. Adair, a prominent merchant of Clinton, S. C., was a visitor in Atlanta last Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Adair was accompanied by Mrs. Adair and took a comprehensive survey of Atlanta's wholesale business, as far as was possible in the time at his disposal. He bought a nice bill of Red Seal shoes from the J. K. Orr Shoe company, totaling about $3,500. This bill party, he distributed amongst Mr. Adair's three stores, which are located at Clinton, Chester and Abbeville, S. C.

AN APPRECIATION.

To the Retail Grocers of the City by President Camp.

President Camp, of the Retail Grocers and Butchers' association, wishes to express his appreciation of the way in which the grocers of Atlanta observed the early closing agreement last Wednesday. This was the first early closing day for the season since the first Wednesday was celebrated by the big parade. It was natural for all to close on that day, but the real test came last week when there was no parade. The fact that the grocers had agreed to close had been made over the closing President Camp and a number of the members of the association took a run around town and found that every grocer who had agreed to close had done so—which means practically every one in the city. Mr. Camp expressed himself as highly pleased and stated that it was the most satisfactory closing the city had ever experienced.

The Ins this week with Dougherty-Little-Redwine company are J. O. Casselburg, J. M. McKibbin, A. S. Williams and W. F. Seay.

Some Workers FOR THE Southern Merchants' Covention ATLANTA—TWO WEEKS—AUGUST 4-16

No. 1—BOLLING H. JONES

When the Merchants' and Manufacturers' association met to pick officers and choose committees for the Southern Merchants' convention, which will be held here for the first two weeks in August, they were exceptionally happy in their choice of a chairman for the convention. When they selected Bolling H. Jones to fill this important position they chose one of the most enthusiastic workers for the growth and prosperity of Atlanta and that can be found in the ranks of the manufacturers of the city. Mr. Jones is secretary and treasurer of the Atlanta Stove works, and he is a gentleman who has long been known as a good one to approach for support for anything which is of real value to the city.

Mr. Jones was recently asked what he thought of the prospects for a large attendance of merchants at the convention, and stated that he was confident that at least 4,000 would respond to the invitations sent out. "When we held the first of these conventions, one year ago, last February," said Mr. Jones, "we had about 900 visiting merchants who registered. At the second one, held last August, the books showed a total of over 2,000 who registered, and I see no reason why we should not reach the 4,000 mark this year. You see every merchant who comes here is pleasantly surprised at the reception accorded him and the opportunities presented for a good time, both in an amusement and business way. He goes home and tells his neighboring merchants about the good results of his visit and the result is that practically every man who comes once, comes again and brings others with him. "Do you hear any reports from your own traveling men as to what the merchants are saying about it?" "Yes, they are all talking about it. In fact I have been a little surprised at the amount of comment that the convention in the papers has caused. I was on a trip through parts of the territory myself recently, and I was questioned on the subject by practically every business man I met. I had included broaching the matter myself in convention, but found this was unnecessary, as they all started talking about it without any urging on my part. "Another strong factor which will bring many of the merchants here is the fact that they are asking all the traveling men to make a point of extending a personal invitation to all they call on between now and then. The influence that a traveling man exerts is much larger than some people suppose, and they will undoubtedly persuade many merchants who were not here last year, and who had not contemplated coming this year, to come and see for themselves. And everyone who comes will want again, because we know for sure, if it is within the realm of possibility. "Then we are going to see that they have a good time while they are here. We are not going to take all their time with amusements and entertainments, because we know they will want enough time to do their business, but we will have enough stunts to make them talk for some time to come. You know, I am also chairman of the committee on program, and while we haven't gone far enough with our arrangements to give the full program out, you can take my word for it, that it will be an interesting document when it is completed. "Yes, you may safely say for me that we are going to have a corking good convention, and also that practically every man who comes here will be glad to go over the 4,000 mark we have set for ourselves."

Manager W. H. Steuts of the John Deere Plow company, returned yesterday from Moline, Ill., where he had been attending the conference of the John Deere company, managers from all over the country. E. E. Shyer, with the Consolidated Paper company, came in Saturday afternoon from his recent attack of typhoid fever. He has not yet been able to leave the house, but expects to be in the office again the early part of this week.

BELSINGER WRITES ABOUT TENNESSEE

Atlanta Paper Company Salesman Tells of Celebration When Three Atlanta Boys Meet.

Johnson City, Tenn., June 13, 1913.—Editor Constitution Firing Line and Fellow Three Mealers: A peculiar thing happened in Johnson City one day last week. This kind of occurrence doesn't come very often up here and it is uncommon enough to warrant comment, so will give it to you as it happened and you can judge for yourselves. If there are more Atlanta salesmen in Tennessee than I think, maybe the firms they represent will correct my impressions in this matter. We are the best in Tennessee at one day last week three Atlanta salesmen at one and the same time. They were Albert Levy, with the Rosenfeld company; R. V. Goodson, with the Frank E. Block company, and myself, with the Atlanta Paper company, but you know that of course. We were having a talkfest and agreed that this was the first time known since the genus Atlanta salesman was first discovered that three of us had ever been in one town in Tennessee at one and the same time. Of course, this does not sound interesting to you boys from the cotton sections, but believe me, it is sure is some event with me, and if I had anything else besides expense money I sure would celebrate. You other fellows ought to come up here. The water is fine, and we never have any bad seasons in this part of the country. They raise everything here from hard coal to hard customers. But don't let anything deter you next season when the boss wants to know where he can broaden out. Just tell him about this North Pole country; come on up and try your luck, and I stand ready at my headquarters, Harbison, Tenn., to give you all of the assistance I can. I have no particular hopes of having this published, but if it is, you can just say that Goodson, Levy and Beltsinger are some proud to have met here and are trying to tell you about it. We have blazed the way. Now, the rest of you come a-ruining and get some of the bacon gravy. If you need any assistance to get your bosses persuaded to put a man up here, either one of us will be glad to call on him and sell him some dope on the situation. A. P. BELSINGER.

INVITATION TO TRAVELING MEN

The Merchants and Manufacturers' Association invites every traveling salesman representing the wholesale and manufacturing houses of Atlanta to be present at a Dutch luncheon which will be given in the assembly hall of the Piedmont hotel on Saturday, June 21, at 7 p. m. Important business is to be discussed at this meeting and all salesmen are urged to be present.

News of the U. C. T. Fulton Council 505

Brother R. H. Manley has been peddling the sweets for his firm, the D. R. Wilder company, on the West Point road the past week. Brother George P. Byrd is still on the wing and states that he feels "simply will buy his flour." Brother T. E. Mathews writes from North Carolina that he is sending in several applications in the near future. Brother G. L. McBrien, of American Can company, was last heard from in Charlotte, N. C. Brother McBrien can't get into the city very often, but he is a mighty good U. C. T. Brother E. D. Barber, the Arbuckle coffee man, has just returned to the city with his family to spend the summer here, after raising chickens on his country ranch all winter. Brother Homer H. Williams, with the Spalding Grocery company, of Griffin, Ga., is some hustler. He was visiting in Atlanta last Sunday. Brother H. J. McDonnell, a member of the firm of Brower Candy company, took a special trip on the West Point road the past week. As usual, he was talking U. C. T. mighty strong. The United Commercial Travelers are asked not to forget that there is a fine meeting of Fulton 505 at which there are no initiations. Come to every meeting. There is always something doing. U. C. T. members who read this column are notified that they may expect to see a good letter here from Secretary P. S. Brownlee on the subject of what the U. C. T. stands for next week.

TWO U. C. T. COUNCILS WILL MEET TOGETHER

Atlanta, 18, and Fulton, 505, Will Hold Combination Meet Next Saturday.

The two local councils of the United Commercial Travelers announce that they will hold a combination meeting in the Knights of Pythias hall, in the Kiser building, next Saturday at 3 p. m. This will be a monster meeting and every member is strongly urged to be present. There are a number of new members to initiate and they will probably total about twenty-five. It is a special meeting for the initiation of out-of-town members, and the boys are asked to come and help to make the newcomers into the councils have an interesting time. Also to have one themselves.

NOTES OF THE CITY SALESMEN

The secretary's report, read at the meeting yesterday, shows that the City Salesmen's association is in a prosperous and active condition. We hope to make this our banner year in good works, and, with the proper support from the members, President H. L. Simmons, will have an administration that all will feel very proud of. Fellow Salesmen of Atlanta: The City Salesmen's association needs you. Put your shoulder to the wheel and help us up the hill.

The jobbers and manufacturers are all signing the agreement to close for the week of our excursion. We desire to thank our employers and also the retail merchants for their co-operation in our efforts to make this the best trip we ever had. Brother Eugene Counts will shortly leave for Europe to look after a large inheritance. We congratulate him on his good fortune and trust that he will soon return safely home, and be among his Atlanta friends again. Most of the boys report good business on their trade and all look on conditions as being very encouraging. The men on the road report good crop prospects and everybody is anticipating a large fall business. Vice President M. L. Minor, of the Warren Manufacturing company, is a proud and busy man these days. He is getting out some of the best designs in neckwear that have been on the market for some time. They are mostly Bulgarian and Cuban in design, and the only difficulty experienced is in getting the silk rapidly enough to supply the demand.

In The Trenches

P. H. Jeter, with John Silvey & Co., reported at the house with a good bunch of orders yesterday. He had in the first time Mr. Jeter had been in for a month or so and he showed a splendid total of business for the month.

W. E. Carlton, of the Capital City Tobacco company, was telling an interesting story last week. He said that the true reason for famous men, one of the world's most famous, because which occurred recently, was because his doctor had forbidden him to smoke. He was so fond of El Principe de Gales cigars that he simply couldn't do without them.

J. D. O'Keefe, with the J. D. Frazier company, is evidently making records that we are going to see that they are here. We are not going to take all their time with amusements and entertainments, because we know they will want enough time to do their business, but we will have enough stunts to make them talk for some time to come. You know, I am also chairman of the committee on program, and while we haven't gone far enough with our arrangements to give the full program out, you can take my word for it, that it will be an interesting document when it is completed.

Sales Manager Holt of the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company, spent Friday in Macon. He said the reason for his visit was that he knew he could sell a big bill there and he just had to get it. He said he was in order to get all he could these days in order to keep ahead of President Hancock in their race for supremacy.

Harry I. Malby, of the Malby-Macholney company, leaves the city Wednesday for New York on a business trip. He expects to be back in a week or two.

Manager Lynn Fort, of the Lamar & Rankin Drug company, is rapidly recovering from his recent attack of typhoid fever. He has not yet been able to leave the house, but expects to be in the office again the early part of this week.

W. E. Rumph, covering South Carolina for the Warren Manufacturing company, is leading the company's sales forces for June sales to date.

W. H. Eckford, representing the M. C. Kiser company in Mississippi, has been in the city for the past week and expects to stay here for another week or ten days before returning to his territory with new samples and a fresh supply of the Atlanta spirit.

Ed S. Harrison, with the S. P. Richards company, has been enjoying extra good business for the past two weeks or so. His house says that this account for the optimistic letter appearing in these columns today from his pen. Whatever the reason it is a good letter and it is also good business—so everything is good.

R. L. Essel, bookkeeper for the Gramling-Spalding company, is at present on his vacation. He left for New York to be gone about ten days, and went by boat by way of Savannah.

Ragan-Malone company report that their men are sending in home nice orders for fall deliveries and that the outlook for business in the coming fall season is very bright.

C. B. Rosser, who covers the territory on the Georgia road for the A. M. Robinson company, has been in the city for a few days overhauling his line.

E. L. Adams of the E. L. Adams company leaves for Cincinnati tomorrow where he will attend the meeting of the National Credit Men's association.

Mr. Thomas is very enthusiastic about conditions down there and told an interesting story of the splendid business they had done, and were doing in that state.

L. E. Meredith, the newest Ward-Truitt salesman, has been down the Georgia road around Greensboro and Union Point way this week. He reports crops there as in fine shape and states that the recent cold spell didn't injure the cotton at all.

Sport Ramsauer, with Fain & Stamps, is suffering from a bad cold these days and is feeling accordingly.

J. L. Huson, with the A. M. Robinson company, was in for a day or two this week on account of sickness, but is now back on his territory again. Claude Smith was an in with the company Saturday.

Thomas Cain, representing Burnham & Moriow, packers of the famous Fain sugar corn, has been visiting the trade with the Fain & Stamps salesman this week.

IN THE RECENT GROCERS' PARADE

The 'Big 4' company made a brave showing in the recent grocers' and butchers parade. This company is rapidly coming to the front in Atlanta as the typical prosperous business founded on the smallest of small scales, but grown to a size which attracts the attention of the discerning business man in a very few years.

As most everybody now knows the company manufactures peanut products and is probably best known for their Big 4 peanut sandwiches. They make many other succulent delicacies out of the humble peanor however, and are growing and increasing their business scope every day. S. Singleton is the head of the concern and it gets its name from the four attractive young ladies his daughters, who, by their loyalty and untiring energy, first made the business possible.

CHILE CON CARNE

President Jim Little, of the Dougherty-Little Redline company, returned last night from New York, where he had been on a combination business and pleasure trip.

The Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company report mail orders as especially good this week and also that the road men have had quite a good time. The general report seems to be that the merchants in the country are enthusiastic over crop prospects and are buying rather more liberally.

Sales Manager E. M. Hudson, of the McCord-Stewart company, stated in a week that the removal of his company to their new headquarters on West Hunter street had been effected with much less trouble than he had anticipated.

Of course it had been a huge job, but nevertheless they had managed to do it all right and also to get out practically all their orders with their usual dispatch. Which is something to be proud of.

H. M. Young, a safe expert, with headquarters at Plum street, Atlanta, was here Friday.

Salesman I. C. Lester and Salesmanager G. W. Steiner for the R. I. Reynolds Tobacco company were here during the week.

Dink Martin, of Martin Brothers, has had good success the entire month of May in the harness business.

The local order of the U. C. T. met last Saturday for the first time since the boys went to Columbus and several good talks were heard for the good of the order. Grand Senior Councilor Ed Wier led off and was followed by R. C. Jones and Ben Thornton, who went down as delegates. All expressed themselves well pleased with the treatment received there.

Bob Patterson is again back at his first love with the Webb & Crawford Co., the firm he traveled for several years ago.

Nat Glogosky, city salesman for Pinkushon Cigar company, had a very successful week of it and almost ran out of order blanks.

E. M. Cook, salesman for the Armour Packing company, came in Thursday for the week.

Salesman J. H. Wilson and Tat M. Gatt for Talmadge Brothers company came in Saturday for the week.

Salesmen E. E. Bayliss and J. J. Eley of the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company were working in Augusta last week. President B. A. Hancock remarked that the way their salesman were sending in orders together with the amount of direct business which was coming in, was keeping him busy getting the goods out.

R. E. Sloan, Jr., representing the M. C. Kiser company in Tennessee, has been in the city for a few days. He has been in a nice lot of orders and Secretary Sullivan also remarked that business had been entirely satisfactory all around for the past week or two.

Some of the ins this week with the Ragan-Malone company have been Spart Jones on his first visit for some time, Carleton Hanes, in on Thursday, and Sam Hanes also a Thursday visitor.

W. W. Spott, Jr., the well-known dry goods salesman, will start with

In the Manager's Office

"And After the Last Letter Was Signed They Talked Together of Many Things."

The Oldest Traveler had come in Saturday after a week of sales which had made the whole office talk. When the Young Salesman came in he was also informed of the wonderful showing, and, while he didn't show any envy, as he had had a pretty good week himself he seized the first opportunity to ask his confrere how he had done it. They were in the Manager's Office after the day's work was done.

"How do you account for your big sales this week, Joe?" he asked.

"Oh, there were several things contributory to them. Weather was good, people needed goods, and two or three others."

"Yes, but those same conditions hold good in my territory, yet I didn't sell anything like you. Why didn't I?"

"Perhaps you didn't expect to?"

"Well, no, I can't say I did. I went out Monday morning feeling that I might have a good week, but not expecting anything wonderful."

"When did you go out on Monday knowing that I was going to have a record-breaking week? I could have told you then that I would, if I had been questioned."

"Cut out the supernatural stuff, tell me how you did it."

"There's nothing supernatural about what I'm telling you, boy, and you'd better get wise to the fact that what a man KNOWS he's going to do is what he WILL do. There's a certain big mail order house not a thousand miles from here which has won a wonderful success and the motto which the man at the head has put all over his place is 'I CAN and I WILL.'"

"Oh, I know that determination has a lot to do with success, but you can't always make up your mind about the amount of stuff you are going to sell and go out and sell it."

"Not always, but what you make up your mind to has a lot to do with it. Listen and I'll tell you a true story. Years ago I started out to sell goods on the road. I was working on a commission and selling about five hundred dollars worth of stuff a day. I thought that was pretty good and to tell the truth, it was, too. There was another young fellow on the same territory for a different house who had an identical line to mine. I couldn't see any difference in the two lines in quality, service, price or anything. He, also was selling about five hundred dollars a day. One day I went out after a particularly good breakfast or something of other and sold seven hundred and fifty dollars worth. I was surprised that I could and resolved to sell that much every day afterwards. I said I could and I did. Then one day I sold a thousand dollars worth and resolved to sell that much every day—and I did. This kept up until I was finally selling twenty-five hundred dollars worth of goods a day. In the meantime, my competitor was still selling his five hundred dollars worth a day, and said he didn't see how I could possibly sell more. He worked a full day every day, told all he could about his line and sold every bit he could. He never saw that it was because I KNEW every day ahead that I was going to sell so much and consequently I DID sell it. There's a whole lot to this will power thing in business and you can cultivate it if you like."

"Maybe, there's something in what company, tomorrow morning Mr. Scott will probably stay in the house for two or three days before leaving for his territory in southeastern Georgia.

The Gramling-Spalding company report a nice increase in their total sales for June over the same period last year. They are feeling much encouraged over business prospects and state that all their salesmen bring in good you say, and I guess I'll try it next week.

You mustn't guess, you'll try it. You must KNOW that you are going to do it.

"All right. How much shall I sell next week?"

Twenty per cent more than this week is what you'll sell, and you know you will too.

"Will I?" I believe you so put my sales for next week down now as 30 per cent better than this, Mr. Book-keeper.

A Business Parable.

By Walter Clayton.

Mr. Sandy kept a general merchandise store in a small southern town. He carried furniture, hardware and many other things that a customer might want. Amongst other items of stock he had on hand a second-hand shotgun of a high grade standard make.

Mr. Jones the undertaker wanted this gun but delayed his purchase until he could consult with his favorite mail order house in the east.

One day Mr. Jones walked into Mr. Sandy's store and said:

Mr. Sandy, how much do you want for this gun today?

Mr. Sandy named his price and Mr. Jones replied:

Why, Sam, I can get a new one from the Mudgett mail order house for a little more than you ask for that second-hand gun.

That's all right, replied Mr. Sandy. Send your money up there. Get their gun and if one of their friends dies they will send down here to you for the coffin, won't they?

There are many merchants in this country today with the same conviction as Mr. Sandy, but few with the backbone to say them quit as plain.

This question of buying at home is one for everyone to consider. The farmer that puts his money in an envelope addressed to some northern mail order house hopes for a prize package—and generally gets one.

Mr. Palmer, the value of your land the market for your chickens, eggs, butter, garden vegetables depends on the size of your home town. Your home town depends on your support. The farmers that live near that big city in which they mail up their orders locate in a ready market for their products. The reason is that he isn't sending his money down here to your town to buy his supplies with but is trading at home while you are giving him some of your money every time you buy goods in his town.

Mr. Merchant the wealth you have or hope to have must be created at your own door within the borders of your southland of ours. You will not be called on to pay taxes on the bricks you are putting into those northern skyscrapers by going up there to buy your goods every year. You are laying bricks but you don't own them.

How would you like to see Atlanta, Macon, Birmingham and many other southern cities have a two-million population? Wouldn't you point to it with pride? Don't you think it would help your business?

All this and more is possible if we will live at home and help our neighbors to live at home. Remember your store, your town, your county, your state and your south. Yours for what you make? Then, The Industries of this country are depending on you for success. Attend the merchants' convention in Atlanta and other southern cities. See what they have to offer and what they want for it.

Many American tourists have been placed in extremely embarrassing positions when our foreign brothers would ask about Yellowstone park, Royal Gorge canyon, Pike's peak and other wonders of our land that the tourists had never seen. Know your own home before you begin searching foreign

A DUTCH LUNCHEON

The invitation of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association, which will be found in these columns today, is one which every traveling salesman who sells goods from Atlanta should be certain to accept. The association has important business to discuss with the traveling men. The matters pertain to the coming Southern Merchants' convention which will be held here the first two weeks in August.

The association realizes that the traveling men form one of the strongest factors in the success or failure of these meetings, and it is their desire to get the ideas of the salesmen before arranging the program for the convention.

This convention is for the benefit of the merchants of this southern territory. It will provide a means by which the merchant can visit Atlanta for a week or so before his fall business commences, and he will be able to gather ideas here from the various speakers which will enable him to go back to his business prepared for the conduct of it through his busiest season by the inspiration received from the best practical men in his own lines. Many vital subjects will be discussed, and it is the plan of the association to get the merchants to take an active part in the conduct of the convention and thus enable them to get more direct benefit from it.

The importance of being present at this luncheon, which will be given next Saturday evening, cannot be too strongly urged upon the salesmen. Every one should strain every point to be present.

Salesmen, just make a note that you are going to be there, drop a line to Harry T. Moore, secretary of the association, telling him that you will be present, and then—COME! But even if you forget to notify Mr. Moore, come just the same. The association needs you and is looking for you. Don't fail them!

Cliff Johnson, who travels south-west Georgia for the J. K. Orr Shoe company, sent in a nice order for Red Seal shoes last Wednesday. It came from Columbus and totaled $2,500.

A. W. Malone, of the well-known insurance firm, J. L. Riley & Co., was visiting his brother, E. F. Malone, of the Capital City Tobacco company, last Friday. Which one was getting the most business out of the other could not be discovered, but it is at least certain that some business is done whenever a tobacco man and an insurance man get together.

I. N. Binder, of the Binder Frame Manufacturing company, stated that he received a pleasant surprise when he went to add up their business for May. It was much better than he had anticipated. "and," he added, "I resolved not to be pessimistic in the future until I was sure I had good cause to be, because, really, our May business stacked up as quite a lot better than May, 1912."

E. L. Adams company report that they have just received a carload of Hyman's pickles fresh from Louisville.

AN OPEN LETTER TO GEORGIA MERCHANTS

From John Bratton, Secretary Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia.

Atlanta, Ga., June 18, 1913.

The time for the holding of your annual convention is near at hand. As you have already been apprised Atlanta has been chosen the place and July 21, 22 and 23 the time. Your officers are diligently engaged in perfecting arrangements, laying plans and outlining the work that is to be done and which you are expected to help do.

What arrangements are you making to these ends? That you will come and take part in the deliberations with your brother merchants, it is hoped.

The time is now at hand when the service of every merchant in the state is needed to push for the measures being urged for the benefit of the merchant interests. And unless they get together and do their duty individually and collectively, they cannot hope for results, or a successful termination of the effort now being put forth for the enactment of a just and equitable garnishment law and a fraudulent check law.

The purpose of this letter is to wake you up to the needs of the hour, you as individual merchants, not as members of the Georgia association, which is the wheel of commerce, and as such, get you to put your shoulder to the wheel and push with us and thus help to attain the ends desired.

You can help. Will you do it? As an individual you may have a minor importance and weight, but joined with that of thousands of your brother merchants it becomes a force of wonderful impact and a source of much good when rightly applied.

As a merchant, you should be, and no doubt are, deeply interested in these measures that are sought to be enacted into law. It should, therefore, be your pleasure to do what you can to help put them on the statute books. Just at this stage of the game you could do nothing better than to enlighten and talk up the annual meeting to be held in Atlanta July 21, 22 and 23. Never let an opportunity to speak of it to your brother merchant, urging him to be there, and that you, of course, will be with him.

You are invited to this meeting, not necessarily as a member of any merchant association, but as a merchant to take part in the deliberations of merchants and to help merchants in the good cause in which they are engaged, that of urging the enactment of a good and wholesome garnishment law and a law against the fraudulent check giver. As a merchant, you have, without doubt, felt the need of these two laws on more occasions than one, and this being the case you should now be willing to come to the front and help to put them on our statute books.

Remember this, that no matter what part of the state you live, or whether you are a big or little merchant, own the store or are a clerk, male or female, you are invited to be here and to do your part in the work to be done.

Make up your mind at once that you will come. Then write us at 1124-25 Candler building, Atlanta, Ga., in order that we may know how to arrange for your pleasure and accommodations. It is very necessary that we have this information as early as possible, in order that ample provisions may be made.

JOHN BRATTON, Secretary Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia.

FOR AN ART GALLERY. Business Men Should Back the Movement, Says Binder.

I. N. Binder, the well known manager of the Binder Frame Manufacturing company, of 400 West Peachtree street, was talking last week about the prospects of Atlanta having an art gallery.

"The Atlanta Art association, has started a movement," said Mr. Binder, "with the object of securing such a building for this city. It is a movement which I would very much like to see meet with success, and I, for one, am going to do all I can to see it go through."

"I believe every business man in the city should most certainly back this movement with all his influence. The benefit to the city would be incalculable. All legitimate business benefits by an art gallery, and the general conditions of living and the general status of the people. The educative value of an art gallery cannot be estimated, but it is one of the best things possible to raise the standard of public life, and to give art lines, but in all that tends to a higher and more intelligent method of life. But besides this, the business man will find it of great benefit to them in a business way. The knowledge that there is such an institution in Atlanta will help wonderfully to advertise the city amongst the best class of people, and will undoubtedly attract many people to the city who would not otherwise be drawn here. It is the city which possesses institutions such as this which gains a country-wide reputation as a good place to visit, and the wider a reputation we have the more people will come here and it is necessary that the more people who come here the better it will be for business of all kinds."

BUYING FALL STOCKS.

Ladies From Alabama Visit John Silvey & Co.

John Silvey & Co., had as visitors last week two ladies from Alabama who were here representing a well known business house in that state, in order to lay in place orders for their fall goods.

They were Mrs. W. P. Zuber and Miss Nora Lee Wiaz, representing W. P. Zuber, of Auburn, Ala. They spent last Tuesday and Wednesday in the city and placed a nice order with John Silvey & Co.

Sales Manager G. E. McDowell, of the E. L. Adams company, writes from Indian Springs that he expects to be back on the job again tomorrow, after a couple of weeks' absence on account of sickness.

BUSINESS BUILDERS

THE SALESMAN'S MOTTO: I will accomplish everything within the power of energy, tact, and resourcefulness; nay, more, I will attempt and overcome the impossible.

SALESMANSHIP

It is not always the man who makes the biggest initial showing who turns out to be the best salesman. There are so many points to be considered in judging a salesman that it is impossible to tell who is doing the best work until a fair space of time has elapsed. Many a salesman who goes over a territory the first time and makes a big record on his sales for that trip is unable to do much on the same territory again. The reason is because he has gotten his business the first time over by misrepresentation and the customers on the list have seen that he does not, and cannot do, what he promises.

It is a habit with some men who are soliciting business to get the customer's O. K. to an order in any manner, by hook or by crook, and then when the order comes to fulfill the account the customer replies that he did not authorize that order, or that it is not according to specifications of some other reason why it is not satisfactory. The reason for all this trouble lies in the fact that the salesman, in his anxiety to make a big showing on his sales record, has taken the order without the full consent of the customer or has made promises that it is impossible to fulfill and which he tries to retract as soon as he has delivered the goods or the service, as the case may be.

A salesman who only sells 50 percent of the goods that another one sells, but who gives absolute satisfaction and makes a friend of every customer is worth many times the one who sells double the amount of goods, but who has kicks and complaints on half of his sales. The man who goes to the house in prestige and popularity is a matter which cannot be thoroughly estimated and probably never will be thoroughly overcome.

PRIVILEGE RATE

If there ever was a subject which deserved the title of "Chinese puzzle" it is the rate book of a railroad which carries all sorts and conditions of freight. The business of selling territory and the discovery of what is the correct rate on "soft case" bottled chairs, circled by brass-headed tanks, feet turned slightly outward, parked next to seat, made by a well-known man who was born in China, Irish-American parents and who

Do You Think This Story Is True?

A certain house had a salesman covering territory for them who was doing what ranked as good business. He was sending in a steady run of orders from a regular round of customers. But the house was not satisfied. They said that he hardly ever opened a new account, and they thought that his territory might be developed into a far better paying proposition than it was. In order to do this they contemplated taking him off that territory and putting him on some new territory for a while. About this time the sales manager received a letter from a salesman, who was desirous of working for them, and he was so impressed with the letter that he gave the man a job, and straightway sent him into the old territory of the salesman number one. The new man's name was Smith.

Smith went into the territory with a six months' contract with his firm, and for the first three months there was no improvement over the old man's record. But the house felt that the new man deserved a fair trial, and so they gave him a further six months' contract and he would let him work it out before they decided he wasn't better than the other.

The sixth month that that fellow worked for his house was the biggest month's sales they had ever had from the territory, and each succeeding month kept up correspondingly big. He was soon rated as their star salesman, and the sales manager began to wonder how he did it. Finally, he decided to go and see a day or two with Mr. Smith and investigate his methods.

The first day he got there Smith took him out with him on his calls. The merchant they called on had just gotten in a new line of goods and was fixing up a window display. It wasn't a very big town they were in, and they only had about four calls to make before train time, which was six hours off. So Mr. Smith made a suggestion or two to the merchant, and finally took off his coat and helped to arrange the window display.

In half an hour he had the confidence and friendship of the merchant, and in an hour he had left with an order in his pocket. The next place they stopped at the merchant had a complaint to make about the fact that the wholesaler was buying from the merchant, and finally took off his coat and helped to arrange the window display.

W. A. Brannon, of Moreland, Ga., was a visiting merchant with the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company this week. He was in on Thursday. H. A. Davis, a merchant from Appalachee, Ga., has been in the city all week and has made his headquarters with this company.

of a similar nature which Smith had been positive were to be complied with or the goods not shipped. The third place they called on the merchant was having trouble with his accounts, and was badly worried over a number of bad debts. Smith sympathized without unnecessary fuss, and offered a suggestion or two here, which attracted the merchant's attention, and which he thought worthy of noting. Smith also inquired if the merchant belonged to the local merchants' association, and advised him to make use of the organization in his credit department. He left a promising prospect for future business. The fourth merchant could not see them, but Smith left his card and a note of regret at not seeing him, and the approximate date of his next visit. The sales manager went home to analyze the case and study the man's answer into shape something like this:

"Smith is selling more than the goods. He is giving away a certain amount of service with every order he sells, and he is getting the merchant his individual attention and interest. So the merchant is getting more for his money by buying from Smith than he would from the average salesman."

"The keynote of it all is 'service.' That is the truth. Service is the one thing which the business men of today are looking for, and the firm which can give them the most in service is going to get the most of their business."

Likewise, the traveling men who give the most in service are going to get the most business, and every salesman should remember that the more service he gives, the more he can afford in helping the merchant to realize on the goods after he has sold them to him.

You can decide or not for yourself as to whether this story is true or not. The moral is in a good one, but you can also discover that for yourself.

Dougherty-Little-Redwine company report that they have shipped many fill-in mail orders this week, and that collections have been better than usual. They look for an extra good fall business.

W. A. Brannon, of Moreland, Ga., was a visiting merchant with the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company this week. He was in on Thursday. H. A. Davis, a merchant from Appalachee, Ga., has been in the city all week and has made his headquarters with this company.

THE FOLLY OF CRIME

The difference between conditions of today and those of one century ago are in nothing more striking than as they relate to the commission of crime. A hundred years ago the events that transpired one hundred or one thousand miles away were seldom known of, or, if they were published there was a long interval of time which elapsed before the time of the next universal publication. Today, a crime is committed in one locality at midnight, and before noon of the next day full details have been flashed over the entire country and sufficient details for the ends of detection and justice have even been sent to foreign countries and to the entire world. By nightfall the papers will have carried full details of the crime and photographs of the suspected people, photographs of the scenes of the crime and particulars of the rewards offered for a radius of hundreds of miles. These are eagerly read by every police official, every town marshal and even by the majority of private individuals. Wherever human beings are, the news of a crime is being read by the man, woman and child is watching for the criminal. Every stranger is noted and every act of his is carefully stored away in the minds of the people with whom he comes in contact.

Considering these facts, how unutterably foolish, how simple and how stupid it is to commit a crime at this day and date. Every criminal begins, as soon as his crime is consummated, to give himself away. No man can be so stupid as to fail to see the clues which plainly show a trained analytical mind can take these clues trace down the criminal and show the entire tragedy just as it was committed. Sometimes the guilty man, with the fear of the penalty which he hears of, leaves the scene of the crime in the form of a country at once—disappear, as he thinks—but this he cannot do. The fact that he has gone is corroborative evidence of guilt or complicity, and no human being can devise, today, means of getting away altogether from connection with his crime or with the means of detection. In cities of millions, they are caught, in mid-ocean they are found and in the wilds of the jungle they are relentlessly hunted.

To allege that any crime is an unsolvable mystery amounts to a belief in the supernatural, and places events which are the natural and proper results of human actions in the category of the supernatural—a category in which they cannot possibly belong. It is impossible, of course, for a well-balanced mind to form definite opinions without some concrete facts on which to base them and in the construction of a crime, the facts, in the form of clues and circumstances, are inevitably present to be read by the trained mind.

The chief defect in the method pursued by untrained men in seeking a solution of a crime is that they are in the taking of some individual who can easily be superficially connected with the crime, and endeavoring to make the clues and circumstances fit the individual rather than by taking the solution of a crime in the form of clues and circumstances, are inevitably present to be read by the trained mind.

Summer Evening Gowns and Accessories

To a gown of vivid raspberry crepe de chine has been added a striking girdle of black satin. The waist has the upper part of shadow lace over chiffon of the same color as the dress. The skirt drapery is looped at the back and caught beneath the boxplait, which lengthens into the train.

The gown on the right seems to be the embodiment of coolness in its color scheme of blue and white, and is therefore naturally appropriate for spring and summer evenings. It is of silk crepe parted in shadow lace over white chiffon and is draped in self-colored liberty satin. The girdle of white satin is given a new effect by crossing it in the front.

Solving the Problem of the Summer Linen Wardrobe

How the Mother of Three Daughters Manages

THE morning after Mildred returned home from her commencement day visit, we three grown-ups sat down to talk over our summer wardrobe. After considering various fabrics for our church-going costumes, we agreed that for the most part we should use white. Also that Mildred needed a wardrobe of her own. To solve a simple problem of costume and I something that could be worn all day in the house, if I did not feel like changing into a bathrobe. Then we started to make separate directions to buy our materials. We have done this always of late, and so as not to influence each other by voicing opinions. There is an unfortunate purchase in made, the staple can blame only herself and no one else for it.

Mildred bought her yards of material in black patterned with irregular dots, set over her shoulders and made into a two-piece, undergarment, measuring sixty-four inches at the bust and eighty inches at the knees with a straight, open-front skirt half way on the hips at the sides and gathered into a high-waisted, belt bodice by a narrow grade in matching satin. The blouse closes at the left side with white buttons and having buttonholes as far as the bust and from there is indented two inches and gathered loosely to the left. One-piece plain sleeves extending to the elbow are set without tucks into the lining, and are a little overlapped by the material, pinned larger armholes of the outside. We always put a little into our cheap silk trunks as far as it makes them wear longer. The neck of Mildred's blouse is slightly gathered and finished with a white piping which she can wear either a plain white lining or a high-collared and long-sleeved kimono made from one and a quarter yards of white material. It is simple to stay in place and has an elastic belt.

Mildred's second frock is made of white, made from five and a quarter yards of cotton calico into a three-piece skirt having slightly to the left of the front center and fastened from the top edge of its skirt belt to the deep hem with fifteen white buttons. Four or five buttons forming the blouse, start on a line with those on the skirt and run under the crossed-over edge of a broad, pointed collar in hand-embroidered sage blue satin which forms a short V at the front of the throat. One-piece sleeves set plainly into creases of normal size and position are finished with tucked-back cuffs of embroidered sage blue satin that point sharply on the outer side of the arm. All of the neighbors are to love with this frock and our hostess says that it's the easiest thing to do up that she's ever taken from this house.

Instead of spending her money for a frock, Louise came home with two yards of mustard-colored China silk and persuaded me to make it into an accordion-pleated skirt and a pareo-bone. A full width of the material, crossing the waist, loops over itself at the back and forms two long, sack ends, and covering the back of the bodice are two wide stripes of the silk that cross the shoulders and at the waist run under a pointed plastron whose lower edge is pulled into the waist band underneath the skirt girdle. The lower half of the blouse is of the China silk and the upper portion and elbow sleeves are of mustard-colored net, veining the silk. It seems to me that it's a bit too dressy for church, but the girls do like that it's correct and very smart. Anyhow, Louise likes it and it is in its style harmonizes perfectly with her bloom.

Each of us bought three or four frocks in dark blue, all but one being dotted with sage green, and it's one of the best colored five-good silks that I've seen in ages. Nearly all of the yardage of frock went into the skirt, for the bodice is merely a very low-cut, long-sleeved kimono made from one and a quarter yards of white material.

When buying for ourselves, she has quite an extensive early summer wardrobe. Mildred's gift was three yards of pink and white and brown checked material which she made into a morning frock having a skirt so short that it's really a very little blouse. It is finished under a broad band of white material, gathered at the waist and with a high collar of white material. The bodice is of a white material, finished with hand-embroidered about the neck, and this is joined by white hand cuffs and to wear with it Louise made the child a sentimental sunbonnet that is faced with white madras.

LOUISE bought frock, really heavy white linen for two frocks, one of which we made into a one-piece affair that fastens in the back, has very large armholes, possibly gathered, under them into which are set a row of sleeves, fastened by buttons, tucked down flatly from under the arms to the waist and from there allowed to fall, and a wide white trim through a strap at the hips. The round neck is gathered, but a blue silk seam, running through the back and front, on the shoulders, forms the frock pocket. The rest of the linen we made into a straight-cut frock having wide plain sleeves, each a collar, a broad belt buttoning near the edge of one piece and going round the back to the edge of the opposite piece and crossing the front, which cuffs invisibly under a straight-cut, long-sleeved kimono made from one and a half yards of the same material. For Sunday school I bought three yards of white calico which we made into a long-sleeved kimono with a high collar at the hips. Its left and its rounded-back cuffs on its straight long sleeves are of pale rose silk. For the wide, gathered collar is hand-embroidered with white silk loss.

Wisdom The Newest Veiling

One reason why the French veils are so smart, is because of the care with which the veils are made and the fact that they are made with the latest hat that a combination veil of three-colored net which, from a short distance does not show at all and which makes the skin seem of the finest texture, in the veil, in the center of a three-fold flower spray or a pattern in soft tone, is considered a "fashion" spot in black, and the very of gauge is adjusted so that the spectacles are visible wherever they come to rest on one cheek, on the chin or at one corner of the mouth. This complexion veil like many of those in all-over-embroidered or small hexagonal mesh or in flower motifs or arabesque mesh, is drawn closely about the face and its ends tucked neatly away under the hat's brim at the back.

Craquelé meshes in either bold or modest floral or scroll pattern, Shetland and Chantilly lace veils, are worn with elaborate hats about which they are draped in a flowing, loose manner and their ends allowed to fall gracefully over the back of the figure.

Even the housekeeper gets bargains by waiting until late market hours and buying the berries, vegetables and poultry that would have to be carried home if not sold; therefore are marked down.

Sometimes there are what might be called furniture complaints. That is a handsome set of furniture is broken and one or two pieces left over are sold at an greatly reduced price. A girl bought a lovely mahogany dressing table in this way last winter, for twelve dollars, the original price with the set being forty dollars.

Occasionally a dozen of plates or glasses are broken—the kind that are not open stock and the rest can be bought very cheaply. In this way a small family can have lovely tableware at small cost.

The Going to Europe Outfit

By Marion Morris

Of course, your destination should govern your wardrobe. If you are going to take the "Euro" at Westport, Vichy or any of the other resorts that are quite as famous for fashions as for health-giving, you will need quite different clothes than if you intend to spend the summer in Normandy or in the country of England.

And the chances are if you plan to visit such, that you have already crossed the very deep and heavy, and are not necessary. Therefore, I am addressing, this article to women who are about to make their initial trip, and who intend to travel about for six weeks or more.

To begin with, don't try to do it. Europe with a suit case full of clothes and expect to be comfortable. The taking of a trunk does not mean that you need an elaborate wardrobe for that would be just as absurd!

As there always seems to be much to do in the getting of a steamer coat. I think it is well to begin with this wrap that will mean so much to your comfort on shipboard. For summer crossings, the long and very heavy coats are not comfortable, and are not considered modish, since fashion has created the five-fifths knitted coats that are belted or have and hang loosely. Quite the smartest of these coats are of fine black-and-white, wool, or a curious tan shade in a chambray-knit woolen.

The steamer hat should be of navy velvet or lined to match the coat—and should be a severely tailored style that may be pulled down so that you may wear it in a heavy gale, and when you wish to recline in your chair. Chiffon veils are now quite passé, except to swathe about the neck in the evening. Fine mesh or white lace veils may be worn sometimes, but there is no pleasure going about as perfectly groomed as though you were going to the Ritz for tea. Let the ocean breeze kiss your cheeks when you have the chance!

SILKS FOR SUMMER WEAR

Soft shantung—satisfactory and practical. Three taffetas—especially in the lighter shades. Fourths of crepe—of the lightest shades which women find so useful for "day" occasions.

Carded silks—for smart and very feminine-looking two-piece ensembles. Wrinkled silks for much the same purposes as creped silks.

Wash silks to be sure for dresses and whole frocks.

Several of the newest Parisian features in coiffure and lingerie fashions are shown in these illustrations. They are extremely attractive and will interest the woman who likes always to know what is being worn in the great fashion center of France.

THE CRUSH GIRDLE. Dress and two evening gowns. The crush girdle is a very popular feature in the latest Parisian fashions. It is made of a soft, elastic material and is worn under the dress to give it a smooth, clinging fit.

SMART SPORTING COATS. Domestic coats of black and white ribbed-surface Scotch texture are the smart thing in sporting wraps. When in a blocked material, the more pronounced the blocking, the more "knowing" looking, and the same is true of the striped patterns.

THE LORGNETTE RIBBON. Wide ribbons have taken the place of lorgnette chains. The ribbon catches the shade of the gown so that it shall not be prominent yet is edged at both sides with a narrow line of white in order that it may be easily distinguished.

SUMMER COUCH COVERS. Some of the new ones are from the Fatherland—cool and attractive-looking affairs that are particularly suitable for bungalow or cottage use.

GLOVES THAT WASH

In this day of the fastidious woman, accessories that may be made immaculate with small trouble and little time are in high favor. This means, of course, that gloves that are washable have a large following, and it is not surprising that they have.

From England come the soft, fine, white doekings, gloves of exquisite softness and texture, with the feel of velvet and the unusual combination of washing like cotton. Soap and water does them no harm, and they emerge from the cleansing as fresh as new. These doeking gloves come in the practical one and two button length, as well as the longer lengths, suitable for three-quarter and elbow length sleeves.

Moche gloves also come in this washable category, but make sure that you get the "washable" kind, and ask the clerk before the transaction is completed. You may have these in white or the pretty natural color.

Chamois gloves, of course, every woman knows about, and they are always more or less in fashion—rather more so these days. These too are in white or natural if you wish. And not only do they come in the short length with one or two large pearl buttons for fastening, and the longer lengths, but there is also a strap wrist style that is very comfortable and practical.

HATS TRIMMED WITH COLORED CREPES. Colored crepes are used principally as a covering or facing applied flatly on the wings, or as neat little bands, bows, and straps. These crepes are in all the fashionable colors.

Dear Cousin Sue —
Large bodies move slowly, but sometimes they head the procession. Herr Deuschmeyer was leading it until the ship rolled and his nerve went with his appetite. I never missed a fire, but this one was a false alarm. It is Herr Deuschmeyer. A hero must never lose his grip, but because the sailor gave him the water cure Herr Deuschmeyer let his head and when you lose your head you lose everything, even your hatbox. # DESIGN FOR COLLAR

Since the collar plays a more important decorative scheme than most any other feature of the summer dress, it will be necessary to add many of these little affairs to one's wardrobe. The simple pattern, herewith given is intended for fragile work, yet it will look equally well done on any of the semi-weight colored fabrics. In fact, it applies to such materials as chambray, linene, boue and the like, on which goods the pattern done wholly in white would look very fetching.

However, we suggest the collar made of sheer cambric, a stout material. Use white cotton floss and work the pattern solid in satin stitch. Be sure to slant the lines on all leaves and do not pad them. This collar could be done in eyelet, and as such it would be very handsome in all white to wear with any dress of flower tint.

If one does not care for the dainty embroidered edge, it can be hemstitched with a one-inch border, or a small half-inch edge further adorned with good lace.

Such collars as the above can be made into numerous styles. One of the pretty conceits of the season is to attach little ruffles of lace about six inches deep from the front edges. This lace falls over the bust of the waist, making a very dressy appearance on the plainest gown. Another feature is the flat bow of velvet, or the brilliant tie, such as the younger girl wears with sailor suits.

A color scheme can be used, such as pink or blue wash floss upon white dress fabric. It is a girlish color scheme, and something to be recommended when pretties are desired.

TO TRANSFER THIS DESIGN.

Put a cake of soap (laundry will do) in a pint of hot water, stir vigorously and remove the soap. Saturate the Design with the soap and water mixture, then remove the excess moisture by partially drying the saturated Design or by applying a sheet of blotting paper. Place the material or fabric to which the design is to be transferred on a hard, flat surface and lay the Design, face down, upon the material. Cover with a dry sheet of thick paper or two folds of newspaper, and with the bowl of a tablespoon rub, pressing hard, until the Design is entirely transferred, being careful to rub from, rather than toward you. When rubbing, you can see if enough pressure is being applied by lifting a corner of the Design to note how well it's taking. Do not wet the material nor rub the face of the Design with damp fingers. To remove the Design lines after the article is completed, wash in warm water, with soap. The entire process is very simple and with a little care, you can easily make perfect transfers to any kind of goods.

CRETONNE USES

How Scraps of This Material May Be Utilized to Advantage.

BY EDNA EGAN

AFTER boarding up scraps of cretonne left from window draperies and furniture covers, a clever woman can patch bag one day and from the oddly shaped pieces of cretonne made many pretty articles.

A large roll of rose-sprigged French cretonne furnished material enough to cover a hat box.

To successfully accomplish this, cut a band long enough to cover the sides, with allowance made for turning in at the top and bottom.

With bookbinders' paste join the ends at one corner. Slush the edges so that they will turn neatly and paste in place. Cover the lid in the same manner, and to properly finish the box line with cretonne or plain material, pasting the sides, bottom and top smoothly to the pasteboard foundation. This makes a lovely box in which to keep your best hat, and is one which need not be concealed from view.

From pieces of cretonne woven in an old tapestry design an effective screen for a samovar or coffee urn is fashioned in this manner. From stiff cardboard cut two rectangles and round one end of each. Divide one of the pieces directly in half. Using the cardboard for a pattern, cut the cretonne, neatly stitching the outside and turning together with a whipstitch.

To either side of the large section, join a smaller one, forming hinges in three places. This forms an adjustable screen which is an ornament to any table.

the cretonne. Cut a piece of cretonne large enough to cover both oblongs and allow material for turning in at the edges, also an inch for the hinges.

Whipstitch the cretonne to the lining, joining the two sections together. On one side fasten three bands of ribbon or tape to hold the sheets of paper in place, and on the other arrange bands dividing the section in half for the envelopes. Fold the halves together and the shut with tape or ribbon. This will prove an acceptable gift to the traveler, the girl away at school or the woman who boards.

From the tiniest scraps dainty needle cases may be fashioned.

Cut the two cardboard sections any shape you desire, and cover with cotton batting. From cretonne cut the outside covering and the lining from plain silk. Whipstitch the two neatly together. Fashion four leaves for the case from white flannel, notching the edges. Place these between the stiff covers and join with ribbon or silk cord. If desired, the edges of the covers may be bound with antique braid. This produces a particularly effective finish.

SHADES

PRETTY candle shades for the dinner table appeal to every woman, and the housewife who is clever with her needle can make some pretty new ones with little trouble. A wise way is to have separate colored linings, over which lace and lingerie covers may be slipped. The covers may in this way be kept up to the immaculate standard demanded of every table.

Covers of fine white linen, worked in eyelet embroidery, are new and dainty. Buttonholed scallops may also be worked top and bottom, while the owner's monogram, in raised satin stitch, occupies one side.

TRIM WITH FLOWERS

BY MRS. MCGUINE

THE most important trimming for gowns at present is flowers made of silk, velvet or satin. Small bits of these materials are folded, twisted and rolled into shapes resembling leaves and blossoms.

These are used in preference to the artificial flowers with their tinted petals, reproducing the natural flower. Chiffon, fine nets and gauzes are also utilized to fashion flowers, not forgetting the roses, which are crocheted from colored wools. When making flowers, consider the material to be trimmed before selecting that for fashioning the flowers. For evening frocks of lace, chiffon, silk or silk mulis, roses of silk or chiffon are in good taste.

Bands of these miniature flowers make effective trimming for the neck and hem of these frocks. If purchased at the shops this variety of trimming will prove very expensive, but when made at home they cost little besides the time spent upon the fashioning. Purchase light green cord to answer for the vine foundation, or narrow green ribbon if preferred. For the chiffon roses, take a strip 12 inches long and 1 1/2 inches wide.

Fold this lengthwise through the center, and, starting at one end, roll it loosely round and round itself. When it is all rolled up, wind the end with the raw edges with sewing cotton. Small pieces of green silk are shaped to represent leaves by folding and tacking the corners in place, and these are arranged with the roses at equal intervals along the strip of stem.

The roses and leaves can also be arranged in clusters, wreaths, festoons or in compact little bouquets to catch up draperies or flounces. From tiny roses of silk or satin, buckle pins and other ornaments are made. To fashion a hairpin, take a piece of flexible wire tape two or two and one-half inches in length and cover it with green silk. Select the color you desire the roses to be and allow four inches of half-inch ribbon for each rose.

Fold it lengthwise through the center and roll into a compact little rose, the selvages at the bottom. For each leaf take one inch of green ribbon. Attach these to the bar and place a safety pin to the under side. To form a buckle, for a girdle, cut a foundation from buckram and cover with green ribbon. Make enough tiny roses to have a double row down the center and border either side with leaves.

This makes an effective trimming for the evening gown, especially if the roses are fashioned of a contrasting color.

Sash ends are attractive when trimmed with a double border or fringe made of these tiny silk or satin roses. Larger flowers are made by first forming a center of cotton over which the silk, satin or chiffon is rolled.

Petals are then formed by folding the material and cutting a piece two inches square. Fold the two upper corners over and tack them in place. Run a drawing thread through the lower portion of the petal and attach it to the center. When the required number of petals have been tacked to the flower, form a calyx of green silk and attach it to a stem formed of thin wire covered with green silk. Using strong thread, sew the finished rose to this and supply the stem with foliage made of silk or purchased at the milliner's. Buds are fashioned by using folds of silk and shaping them to represent the natural flower.

A pretty bow can be made of one-half yard of velvet ribbon, one-half inch in width. A flat bow is formed of two three-inch loops and two ends of the same length are tacked through the center, and from this is hung a loop and two ends. Three small roses and leaves are sewed to the center of the bow. Make the roses from bias strips of soft silk four inches long and one inch wide, gilded lengthwise through the center and rolled to form the rose.

Attach a rose to each of the ends hanging from the bow. When selecting the color take particular care to have the tones harmonize. Straw-colored velvet ribbon with the three roses of yellow, pink and lavender silk respectively is a delightful combination of colors.

These articles of roses make lovely gifts for almost any occasion, and you will find it fascinating work. It requires little time and materials can frequently be picked from the scrap bag.

CARD-TABLE MANNERS

BY LUCILLE DAUDET.

IF a neighbor telephones or sends a note, asking you to come over the same evening, or the next, and make up a table at whist, or pinochle, or euchre, or hearts, this does not constitute formal entertaining, yet you should decide promptly, and, having accepted the invitation, keep your engagement. It is only courteous, also, to your host and hostess to dress prettily. This does not mean an evening frock, and neither does it mean that you can run over in your short-tweed or rainy-day skirt with a flannel shirt waist and linen collar. It means a pretty house dress, a cashmere or silk, with skirt and waist matching.

Your hostess will probably offer some light refreshments, and, if she is up to date, will prepare this in a chafing dish, around which you all gather. If the evening waxes and no refreshments are offered, you need not think that your hosts are inhospitable, nor does this bar you from offering some light refreshments when they return the call. I think that on the whole it is rather better, especially on cold winter nights to offer refreshments, however small the number of players may be.

The booby prize has practically disappeared from the card parlors this winter. A first prize for the best man player and the best woman player is given and then consolation prizes to those who make the next best scores. Sometimes even three prizes are awarded, but two for each sex is sufficient.

Refreshments for the afternoon card party are simple or elaborate, according to the number of guests and the character of the function. At a simple informal gathering tea or coffee or chocolate, with sandwiches or wafers, will be sufficient. For the more formal affairs the hot drinks, bouillon, creamed oysters, Newburgs, salads, ices and cakes are also served. Nuts and candies are passed all afternoon and punch may also be served during the games. The salted nuts and candies should be dry and crisp or they will soil the finger tips and interfere with the card-playing.

VINTAGE NOW HATS

THE Leghorn hat has been a favorite for many years, and bids fair to continue its popularity for as many more. This season it is especially well-liked. In bygone days the Leghorn was seldom seen except in the large flat form, which is usually associated with the name. Now, however, it is made in various shapes, and this adaptability to many fashions has done much to re-establish it for popular summer wear.
