The witness was excused and Helen Curran was called to the stand.

The defense claims it would have been utterly impossible for Frank to have murdered Mary Phagan and disposed of her body in the lapses in time in the alibi they have set up. They also contend that it proves Conley's story a tissue of falsehoods.

Frank and Forsyth at 12:47, while Montem entered the factory at 12:05. Proceeding further, the defense attacks Conley's story of the disposition of the body on the ground that Helen Curran saw Frank at Alabama and Whitehall at 1:10, and Conley says the disposing of the body began at 12:56.

STATEMENT BY CONLEY WILL BE THE CLIMACTIC FEATURE OF THE TRIAL

By JAMES B. NEVIN. The defense is nearing its end in the Frank case. A few more character witnesses...

The State will call in its witnesses in rebuttal of the defense's character witnesses, and along other lines. Not improbably, the State will endeavor to rebut in its own words the defendant's personal statement.

The entire case should go to the jury Monday or Tuesday—meaning that that the argument should begin then. The State has been all along much more sensational and spectacular than the defense.

Innuendo Plays Large Part. Aided from Conley's direct statement as to unresponsible conduct on the part of Frank, the most that has been said by way of the very offense has been said largely through innuendo and insinuation.

Unless the State comes forward in rebuttal with some direct allegations that there will be no further ultra-sensational testimony introduced.

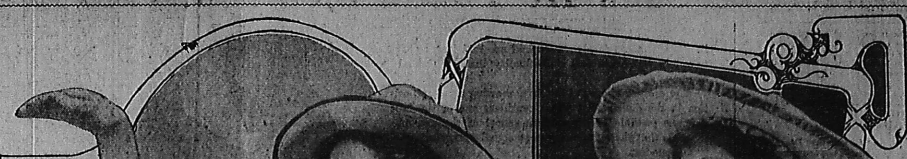

Both of these women have faced the long and trying ordeal with remarkable ability and patience, all things considered, and it probably is true that at no stage of the trial has there been less than genuine sympathy gone out to them from the crowds constantly on hand to witness the progress.

Mother a Dignified Figure. On Friday, however, when reading the somewhat remarkable and significant letter of her son to his mother, she was a most impressive and dignified figure. I have no doubt whatever that her testimony had a fine effect upon the jury.

Her heart is involved necessarily as the heart of no other person possibly can be. No human being would expect less of her than that she should have the courage and deliberation of the stand Friday showed that she appreciated the material value of the evidence she was then giving, and that it was necessary that her best and most discriminating intelligence be given full play no less than her heart had been.

I think the public now is looking forward to the defendant's statement, with far more interest than anything else—unless it be the forthcoming evidence of the more or less mysterious witnesses the State still has in reserve.

MANY TESTIFY TO FRANK'S GOOD CHARACTER

Nearly half a hundred witnesses testified in behalf of Leo M. Frank Friday. As a climax to the day's proceedings in Judge Roan's court...

They have chosen Mrs. W. M. Jeffries 'forewoman.'

Certainly the trial has been such a trial as men call fair. The case was not called until both sides had had ample time to prepare for it, and until both sides announced ready to go to the witness stand.

The jury has been taken care of in real human beings—nothing has been left undone to have the witness stand as for that reason the presiding judge has kept the courtroom clear of women and children as the case proceeded.

So far as human ingenuity and law can make it so, therefore, the trial of Leo Frank has been fair. I think as a lawyer, however, I can say that I mean fair to both the defense and the State.

There was no possible connection, real, between the two things, of course, for the judge did exactly the thing he thought was right in both instances. It merely is a fact that his two biggest rulings cut evenly but the State and the accused—and to that extent is noticeable, in that it makes an even break.

Whatever judicial error may have crept in, however, if any, it may be corrected upon review before a court higher up. Either way, the jury will redound to the defendant's benefit, or, once acquitted, he never can be tried again for the murder of Mary Phagan.

There is no advantage that is to be gained, as it is in the time it has given the public to weigh carefully the testimony of each witness, and to have as it has fallen from the lips of witnesses.

Atlanta has a brand new club. It is called 'The Club of Temporary Widows.' Its membership, as its name indicates, is made up entirely of women. There are just eleven of them. All were brought to their temporary widowhood by the trial of Leo M. Frank.

Every night the eleven widows may be seen at Alabama and South Tryon streets as the jurors file by under as close a guard as though they were prisoners, and very dangerous prisoners at that.

They are privileged only to wave their handkerchiefs—the young bride of the club threw kisses—as the men go by on their way to the Kimball House for the trial. This same young bride—or young widow—stashed up to the line the first day of the trial and tried to speak to the husband of whom she had been bereft.

Several times another young woman has been noticed on the edge of the little group making up the widow club. She has had eyes only for the bachelor of the jury. It has had eyes only for her. It is said that she is to be taken into associate membership in the club. Reports also have it that she will qualify for full membership soon after the trial.

Violence Not Expected--Impeach- ed Governor, Surrounded by Guards, Works at Capitol.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Neither drastic nor violent steps will be taken by Lieutenant Governor Martin H. Glynn to force William Sulzer, the impeached Governor of New York, from office—at least not to-day. Owing to the fact that this is a half-holiday at the state offices, Mr. Glynn spent but a few minutes at the Capitol, and while both Sulzer and Glynn refused to budge an inch, matters were at a deadlock.

Accompanied by his bodyguard, Governor Sulzer walked from the executive mansion to the Capitol, where he plunged into State business, just as though his right to exercise the gubernatorial prerogatives were not contested.

Lieutenant Governor Glynn, who claims the power of Acting Governor under the Constitution until Mr. Sulzer is brought to trial on September 15, went from the Capitol to the offices of his newspaper and announced he would spend the afternoon at an athletic meet. He denied that, like Napoleon, he would lift the power of Congress from the State of New York.

Start on First Lap to Birmingham To Be Made Early Monday Morning.

"Ready" for the start Monday was the final word sent out Saturday by the good roads and highway boosters who are conducting the campaign, inaugurated by Hearst's Sunday American, to bias a Southern transcontinental trail from Atlanta to San Francisco.

"Panhander" Ferguson was the first man to be heard from. He declared that every detail of the first lap of the long journey had been arranged; that his car was in excellent shape for the cross-country spin, and that he and his wife and two children were anxious to get on the way.

"There is nothing to do now," said Mr. Ferguson, "but to await the hour of the official start. Every detail of the first lap to Birmingham is complete. According to our present plans, we will leave Atlanta between 8 and 10 o'clock Monday.

THE WEATHER.

Forecast for Atlanta and Georgia—Occasional showers Saturday and Sunday.

Two factory girls, one of them defending Leo M. Frank with all the eloquence at her command, and the other admitting that she had known of the factory superintendent opening the door to the girls' dressing room on three different occasions and looking in, formed the center of interest among the score of witnesses who were called Saturday by the defense. They were Miss Irene Jackson and Miss Sarah Barnes.

Miss Jackson, daughter of County Policeman Jackson, testified on direct examination that she never had known of any improper conduct on the part of Frank, and that his character was good. Cross-questioned by Solicitor Dorsey she admitted that she had been in the room where the girls change from their street to their working clothes and had witnessed Frank open the door, look in and then turn around and leave. Once, she said, Miss Emmeline Mayfield was in the room with her. On another time her sister was there, and on a third occasion, she said Miss Mamie Kitchen was the other girl in the room.

She said that her sister had started to quit at the time Frank opened the door when she was in the dressing room. The witness also was asked if N. Y. Darley, general manager of the factory, ever had made the remark at the time several girls were thinking of quitting the factory directly after the murder that "if the girls stick by us through this, they won't lose anything by it." Miss Jackson said she had heard Darley say this. Miss Jackson quit work the day after the body was found.

Another long string of character witnesses occupied most of the session which was adjourned shortly after 1 o'clock for the day. Mrs. Rae Frank, the defendant's mother, was placed on the stand at the beginning of court, but remained there only long enough to be questioned somewhat in detail as to the plans of Frank's relatives.

One of the sensations of the day came during the testimony of W. D. McWorth, Pinkerton operative, who testified to the finding on the first floor of the pencil factory a pay envelope with Mary Phagan's initials and number on it, a bloody club, part of a whip, a piece of rope and spots near the trapdoor leading into the basement resembling bloodstains. Exactly the value of his finds did not develop either from the examination by the defense or the prosecution. Dorsey, however, sought to show that the Pinkertons' search in had faith with the city detective department by not reporting their discoveries as soon as made.

Court adjourned with the testimony of Harlee Branch, an Atlanta Journal reporter, who estimated the time it required Jim Conley to re-enact his version of the disposal of Mary Phagan's body, up to the writing of the notes as 47 minutes.

Miss Vehmemently Defends Frank.

Miss Sarah Barnes was Frank's vehement defender. The first question asked her was the signal for a torrent of words that neither Attorney Arnold nor the Solicitor was able to stop until she paused for breath.

"Do you know Leo M. Frank, the defendant in this case?" she asked.

She replied that she not only knew him, but that she knew he was a good man, a perfect gentleman, always good to the girls and everyone else in the factory, never attempting any familiarities or talking to the girls except in regard to their work and never being guilty of any of the charges that have been made against him by the State.

"I know Mr. Frank couldn't have committed that murder," she cried positively, emphasizing her words with a vigorous brandishing of her fan.

"I'd be willing to die in his place. I'd be willing to fight for him. I'd be willing they'd give me any sort of death they wanted to. I just wish I could make everybody believe in his innocence."

Judge Roan, just before court adjourned, made this statement to the jury:

"For a number of reasons we won't hold a session this afternoon. I am very sorry you have been had together so long, but I believe this will be the last Sabbath you will be kept

DROUGHT MAKES MIDDLE WEST BIG DESERT

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 16.—After twelve days of practically unmitigated heat, the Middle West is facing the most serious drought in the history of the weather bureau.

All dry records of recent years have been broken and the people of three States are praying for rain. The average temperatures yesterday were from 91 to 102, the latter at Leavenworth, Kans., with no signs of relief for to-day.

Many local showers gave slight relief in Oklahoma and there was a temporary cessation of the hot wind that has been parching the State for weeks. The temperatures dropped 10 to 20 degrees there.

Several rains were reported in Kansas, the heaviest at Fort Scott, where half an inch of rain fell, accompanied by heavy winds.

Northwest Missouri villagers and farmers are among those most seriously affected by the drought. There is no hope of saving such crops as have not yet matured and the stock raisers are seeking desperately for means to supply their cattle, hogs and horses with water.

Autos Block Fire Engines at Blaze Near Five Points

A lighted cigar or cigarette dropped from a room in the Empire Building set fire to the roof of Williams House No. 5, on Marietta street, near Five Points, about noon Saturday, and a crowd of several thousand people quickly gathered.

On account of the great number of automobiles and other vehicles parked in front of the building and all along Marietta street the fire department had some difficulty in getting the trucks near enough to be effective. Quick work of the firemen stopped the spread of the flames, virtually no damage being done.

Chief Cummings stated after the fire that it was only evidence that enabled the firemen to get near the fire before it gained dangerous proportions, and that if the practice of allowing automobiles to block the streets is continued, it is only a matter of time until a serious fire results.

Both sides fear trick. Both sides are taking elaborate precautions to guard against a trick. Throughout the night armed guards stood watch over each State document, while lawyers and legislators involved in the struggle were trailed by private detectives. Mr. Sulzer was in retirement, planning a new legal move with his counsel, Messinger boys with Washington and New York City telegram could not find the Governor, but members of the "inner circle" took charge of the dispatches, saying they would find the Governor. Leaders of the anti-Sulzer faction made the threat that Mr. Glynn, now having control of the State Military Department, would actually invade the executive chamber.

Some Fear Martial Law. Some residents of this city, realizing the intense seriousness of the situation, fear that conditions may become so grave that martial law will have to be declared.

It was assumed that Governor Sulzer to-day would reply by a record from Lieutenant Governor Glynn demanding the unconditional surrender of all representatives of the Sulzer and the abdication of the governor. It was reported that the Governor at the beginning of the official day, and that Mrs. T. O'Hara, has fled. They declared that her mission to Paris is to induce Chistobal to return to London.

"THE TUNNEL" Greatest Story of Its Kind Since Jules Verne BEGINS NEXT WEDNESDAY

This thrilling narrative has already created a sensation in Europe. Liberal installments will be printed daily on the Magazine Page of The Georgian.

STATEMENT BY FRANK WILL BE THE CLIMAX FEATURE OF THE TRIAL

The defense is nearing its end in the Frank trial.

A few more character witnesses, these seem to have been no difficulty whatever in securing character witnesses by the score to testify in behalf of the defendant—the statement of Frank, and the defense will rest.

The State will introduce its witnesses in rebuttal of the defense's character witnesses, and along other lines. Not improbably, the State will undertake to rebut in a measure the defendant's personal statement.

The entire case should go to the jury Monday or Tuesday—meaning that that the argument should begin then.

The State has been all along much more emotional and spectacular than the defense. That generally is the way these cases go, and in respect to this, the Frank case has not been particularly remarkable.

In the length of time required to develop fully both sides, however, the case is in a class by itself, so far as Georgia is concerned.

When the attorneys too and come to sum up the case, for the benefit and theoretical enlightenment of the jury, it will be found, I think, that both the State and the defense have made out cases remarkable in point of strength for and against the defendant.

In other words, I mean it will be found that the State has made the very best of the material it had on hand by way of outlining and establishing the charge against Frank, the white defense has been every bit as circumstantial and as in providing for the refutation of the charge.

Trial a Fair Fight.

Certainly the trial has been such a trial as men call fair. The case was not called until both sides had had ample time to prepare for it, and both sides announced their intentions as to what they would do. The State and the defense each is supplied with as able and intelligent counsel as might be secured. There has been no limit whatever upon the time taken up by either side when nothing more could be done. The witness wanted, and the witness under the rule while the case has proceeded. It has been held as they should be. Judge Ross, occupying not only a most responsible position, but certainly the most important one, has presided with a degree of official dignity and fair-mindedness that must have been a large degree in any public.

The jury has been taken care of like real human beings—nothing has been left undone for its comfort. Consideration has been shown to the defendant, the members of his family, and the warm and kindly sympathy attendant upon him.

The spectators have been orderly, the hours observed by the court have been adjusted to the accommodation of the lawyers, the defendant, and the jury.

The human ingenuity and law can make it so, therefore, the trial of Leo Frank has been fair. I think—no man could be asked. And when I say that I mean fair to both the defense and the State.

The presiding judge led in one big display of evidence in support of unfavorable to the defendant. It is so significant in the trial has been in another line supposedly as unfavorable to the State.

An Even Break.

There was no possible connection, really, between the two things, of course, for the judge did exactly the thing he thought was right in both instances. It really is a fact that his two biggest rulings cut evenly both ways. The State and the defense, and that is what is noticeable, in that it makes an even break.

I make the foregoing observation now because, looking at the advance of the present point of view, in case of the verdict, I feel that the observation is true—and whatever the outcome of the trial, I for one shall not feel that the case has been unfairly treated.

Judicial error may have crept in—certainly not for a moment to say as to that. It perhaps is not right and proper even to speculate upon such a thing, unless it is a matter of fact.

Whatever judicial error has crept in, however, if any, it has been corrected. It is not a matter to be thought of. Either that or the error will redound to the defendant's benefit—once acquitted, he never can be tried again for the murder of Mary Phagan.

There is no advantage that can be gained from the long drive out, battle, and that is in the little things. It has given the public to watch nearly as much as it has been possible to see. It has been a most interesting and instructive feature of the trial.

It looks as if the defendant has said about the last word that can be said in establishing his good character. Good character can be proved only the way he has done it.

If the State relies upon the de-

MANY TESTIFY TO FRANK'S GOOD CHARACTER

Nearly half a hundred witnesses testified in behalf of Leo M. Frank Friday. As a climax to the day's proceedings in Judge Ross's court, the defendant's mother, Mrs. Rae Frank, went on the stand to add her testimony to that which she hoped would save her son from the gallows.

Virtually all who were called were character witnesses. Near the close of the day, Mrs. Frank testified that she had been called to call every woman and girl employed on the fourth floor of the pencil factory, as well as many from the other floors, to testify to Frank's conduct about the factory and his attitude toward the girls in his employ.

He called three before the close of the day and explain to them in advance that he was going to ask them questions which he planned to direct at every girl employed called. He then asked them if they ever had had any contact with Leo Frank, and if so, what it was.

Miss Julia Foss testified that she had known Leo Frank as "an innocent as the angels in heaven."

Harry Goldheimer, a traveling salesman for Montez Bros. and the National Pencil Company, testified that he had an engagement with Frank for Saturday afternoon, Miss Phagan Hall, stenographer, swore two days previously that Frank tried to persuade her to work at the pencil factory during the afternoon.

Combats Premeditation Theory.

These two witnesses were produced by the defense to combat the State's announced theory that Frank deliberately planned on Friday, the day before the crime, the attack which the State says he made on Saturday.

Goldheimer testified that Frank asked him to come over to the factory during the day.

"I'm not sure that I can get over the forenoon," Goldheimer said to Leo Frank.

"Well, if you can't come this forenoon, he will come this afternoon," Frank replied, according to Goldheimer.

Interest was at fever heat throughout the day because of the report that Frank was about to make his statement.

It increased when Mrs. Rae Frank, mother of the defendant, was called to the stand late in the afternoon.

She was asked by Attorney Ross to identify a letter said to have been written by Frank the afternoon of April 26 to his uncle, Mr. Frank, who was in New York at the time. Mrs. Frank read the letter and identified it as the one which had been read in his presence April 28 in the Hotel Elgin, New York.

Letter to Show Frank Guilty.

The letter was another of the pieces of evidence submitted by the defense in an effort to show Frank's mental and nervous condition Saturday afternoon after the time the State claims Mrs. Phagan was attacked and killed.

The message was quoted like any letter that might be written in ordinary circumstances. The writing was regular and without any indications that the writer was laboring under mental excitement. The writing was the letter the word "only" occurred, which Mrs. Frank described as a pure and simple word.

The letter follows:

stories of immorality in regard to him.

She said that Conley's character was bad, and that he had a reputation for being shiftless and dishonest.

Mrs. E. H. Carson, mother of Miss Rebecca Carson, another of the witnesses, declared that Conley acted suspiciously after the crime.

Says Conley Cringed.

Miss Mary Pink said that she had accused Conley of the murder and that the negro slunk out of her sight and had not appeared around her again during the day. She was asked by the Solicitor if she ever had seen Frank struggling with Mary Phagan or ever had noticed Frank taking her to one side to talk with her during the weeks immediately preceding the tragedy.

She replied she had not. The Solicitor pressed the question, demanding if it was not true that Frank, about two weeks before the Phagan girl was murdered, had taken her to one side of the room and caught hold of her when she tried to get back to her room.

Miss Julia Foss testified that Conley had said Frank was "as innocent as the angels in heaven."

Harry Goldheimer, a traveling salesman for Montez Bros. and the National Pencil Company, testified that he had an engagement with Frank for Saturday afternoon, Miss Phagan Hall, stenographer, swore two days previously that Frank tried to persuade her to work at the pencil factory during the afternoon.

Combats Premeditation Theory.

These two witnesses were produced by the defense to combat the State's announced theory that Frank deliberately planned on Friday, the day before the crime, the attack which the State says he made on Saturday.

Goldheimer testified that Frank asked him to come over to the factory during the day.

"I'm not sure that I can get over the forenoon," Goldheimer said to Leo Frank.

"Well, if you can't come this forenoon, he will come this afternoon," Frank replied, according to Goldheimer.

Interest was at fever heat throughout the day because of the report that Frank was about to make his statement.

It increased when Mrs. Rae Frank, mother of the defendant, was called to the stand late in the afternoon.

There are eleven full-fledged members and "Associate" member, who waves at Bachelor.

Atlanta has a brand new club. It is called "The Club of Temporary Widows."

Membership, as its name indicates, is made up entirely of women. There are just eleven of them. All were brought to their temporary widowhood by the trial of Leo M. Frank. All are wives of jurors in the great murder case, of at least, they were before the trial began. All are thoroughly tired of the tedious process of the law which have kept them in their somber weeds for three long weeks.

Mrs. F. V. L. Smith, a real estate man, who is serving on the Frank jury, has been elected the "forewoman." They do not have a president in the club of the Temporary Widows.

They Meet Every Day.

Every night the eleven widows meet at Alabama and South Pryor streets as the jurors file by under a close guard as though they were prisoners, and very dangerous prisoners at that.

They are privileged only to wave to their husbands—the young bride of the club throws kisses—to the men go by on their way to the jail house for the night. This same young bride—or young widow—kissed up to the line the first day of the trial and tried to speak to the husband of whom she had been bereft.

A stern look from one of the deputies required her. Softening, the old lady explained that it would be worth as much as his job if he should let her or any of the widows say just one little word to one of those jurors.

There's An Associate Member.

Several times another young woman has been noticed on the edge of the little group making up the widows' club. She has had eyes only for the bachelor of the jury. He has had eyes only for her. It is said that she is to be taken into associate membership in the club. Report also has it that she will qualify for full membership soon after the trial.

None of the widows knew each other before the trial began. Now a number of strong friendships have been formed. In addition to the daily gatherings at Alabama and South Pryor streets, meetings are to be held each week during the life of the club, which its members hope to perpetuate for years. The meetings will be held at the members' homes, and the regaled husbands may be permitted to attend once in a while.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The harvest of crabs and blackberries at Torrington this year beats all records. Thousands of crabs are being caught in the Hudson daily. One man caught 150 in two hours.

Blackberries are so plentiful that half of the boys of the village are picking them. The favorite and best field is on John D. Rockefeller's estate. Mr. Rockefeller has not interfered with the picking and it is estimated that 200 quarts are picked from his bushes daily.

MOTHER'S LOVE GIVES TRIAL ITS GREAT SCENE

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

Every human emotion has been paraded during the long three weeks of the Frank trial.

There has been pathos, comedy has opposed tragedy. Science has met sympathy. Truth has been arrayed against fiction. Negro has conducted with white.

The erudite Arnold has matched wit with the thick-lipped, thick-skulled Conley. Luther Rosser, stern, dispassionate and skillful, had led us to meet the machinations of a brain of a Cornell neurot. New Leo. Stuart Dreyer, coarse and determined; Frank Hooper, smiling and ambitious, have been to meet encountered the ballroom of Rosser and a raster of Arnold.

There remained but one thing—the dramatic touch that sends the shudder, trembles a high crescendo, and the hearts of the audience beating a long roll in double time.

It was furnished during the past week.

The Mother's Part.

It was furnished during the past week. It was a blow added by the person to whom the trial means more than a seat in high heaven—a woman whose son is on trial for his life.

And all through this ordeal a mother's love has been the great force. Her eyes had faded his success. Her tears had faded their glory. Her heart was breaking.

But a straw will break a camel's back, the old saw declares. Frank's heart was the camel's back. A mother's love was the straw that broke it. A mother's love was the straw that broke it. A mother's love was the straw that broke it.

OUT, SULZER OUT, GLYNN IS URGED

Violence Feared In Fight to Oust
Impeached Governor—Cabinet
Deserts Him.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Violent scenes are apt to be taken today by Lieutenant Governor Martin H. Glynn to force William Sulzer, the impeached Governor, from possession of the executive chambers. Mr. Glynn's search efforts to get possession of the State having failed, he has been counseled to force the surrender of Governor Sulzer.

Mr. Sulzer now virtually stands alone, having been deserted by the members of his cabinet, who have allied themselves to the Glynn forces. Mr. Sulzer refused to abdicate, despite the fact that the ranks of his political enemies have been strengthened during the last 24 hours. Lieutenant Governor Glynn, who is now signing State documents with his signature, "Martin H. Glynn, Acting Governor, State of New York," announced that, in spite of any objections thrown in his way by the Sulzer legal forces, he would continue to administer gubernatorial affairs pending Mr. Sulzer's trial for alleged high crimes and misdemeanors September 18.

Cruel Day In Fight
This was expected to be the crucial day in the fight between Sulzer and Glynn for the control of the destinies of the Empire State, the "richest Commonwealth of the nation."

Both sides are taking elaborate precautions to guard against a trick throughout the night. Armed forces are on watch over each State department, while lawyers and legislators involved in the struggle were called by private detectives to the State capitol to retirement planning a new legal move with his counsel. Messenger boys with Washington and New York addresses could not find the Governor, but members of the "inner circle" took charge of the dispatches, saying they would find the Governor.

Leaders of the anti-Sulzer faction made the threat that Mr. Glynn, who has control of the State Military Department, would actually invade the executive chamber.

It was expected that Mr. Sulzer would get a mighty warm reception, and very dangerous prisoners at the capitol.

Some residents of this city, realizing the intense seriousness of the situation, fear that conditions may become so grave that martial law will have to be declared.

It was assumed that Governor Sulzer today would reply to the second goad from Lieutenant Governor Glynn, demanding the unconditional surrender of all prerogatives by Mr. Sulzer and the abolition of the Governor's Council were with the Governor at the beginning of the official day, and it was reported that the Governor was urged to take a line at Tammany Hall.

That the Legislature, when it convenes on Tuesday, will recognize Mr. Glynn as the constitutional Governor of the State was regarded as almost certain, but allowance was made for events which may transpire in the meantime.

Senator James J. Frawley, chairman of the committee which investigated Sulzer, and caused his impeachment by the Assembly, will arrive here tomorrow night or Monday for a conference with Mr. Glynn. It was expected that a truce would be declared over Sunday, as a number of Legislators planned to leave Albany during the night.

"CLUB OF TEMPORARY WIDOWS" GATHERS EACH DAY TO GREET THEIR HUSBANDS ON JURY

They meet every day. Every night the eleven widows may be seen at Alabama and South Fryer streets as the jurors file by under a close guard as though they were prisoners, and very dangerous prisoners at that.

They are privileged only to wave their handkerchiefs—the young bride of the club throws kisses—as the men go by on their way to the Ketchikan House for the night. Dried Cantaloupe Is California's Latest

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 16.—With the perfection of experiments now going on, California will give to the world another luscious dried fruit—the dried cantaloupe. They will turn into profit some of the millions of small cantaloupes left in the fields every year.

Thomas D. McCall, of El Centro, accidentally discovered the fine quality of the dried article. McCall had dumped a great heap of cantaloupes on one side, several breaking open. These dried and threw out such a fine aroma that McCall was attracted and tasted them. They were excellent, and now cantaloupe growers are drying all of their small melons. The dried variety is said to have a much finer flavor than the fresh fruit.

Moonshiners Shot in Fight With Officers

NASHVILLE, Aug. 16.—In a battle between seven moonshiners and revenue officers in Moore County, near the Alabama State line, in which more than 100 shots were fired, one moonshiner was mortally wounded, while two others, riddled with buckshot, will probably die.

The smoke nuisance which covers the building with dark soot is an aid to crime."

DEFENSE ALTERS ITS PLANS; PRISONER MAY NOT TELL TALE TO-DAY

Mrs. Rae Frank, mother of Leo M. Frank, accused of slaying Mary Phagan, who on Friday identified a letter he wrote on the day of the tragedy to his uncle in New York, took the stand again in his defense Saturday.

A hushed crowd leaned forward expectantly as the saddened woman, whose outburst of anger against Solicitor Dorsey was one of the sensations of the week, took her place in the witness chair.

The prisoner and his wife wore the same cool, unflinching demeanor. Frank kept his eyes on his mother. Luther Z. Rosser questioned Mrs. Frank.

Q. Mrs. Frank, you said you lived in Brooklyn? Has your son Leo Frank any rich relatives in Brooklyn?—A. He has not.

Q. This letter that was received by him from his uncle, were show you here?—(The small letters were in a long envelope)—A. Yes, a long paper. I don't know what it was.

Q. I show you a photograph letter. Is the writing similar to your son's?—He handed her the photograph of Frank's writing for the police which witness Kix could not identify yesterday)—A. That is my son's writing.

Mr. Rosser said he hardly expected Frank would be called to the stand to-day. Some of the testimony introduced he said, has forced the defense to change its plans, although it has nothing to do with the case in his opinion. He was referring to the attacks by the State on Frank's character.

Mother to Son's Aid.
Nearly half a hundred witnesses testified in behalf of Leo M. Frank Friday. As a climax to the day's proceedings in Judge Rosser's court the defendant's mother, Mrs. Rae Frank, went on the stand to add her testimony to that which she hoped would save her son from the gallows.

"Virtually all who were called were character witnesses. Near the close of the day Louis Arnold announced that he proposed to call every woman and girl employed on the fourth floor of the pencil factory, as well as many from the other floors, to testify to Frank's conduct about the factory and his attitude toward the girls in his employ.

He called three before the close of the day and explained to them in advance that he was going to ask them questions which he planned to direct at every girl employee called. He then asked them if they ever had had any part in the gay parties that the State has said took place in Frank's office either during or after factory hours. He asked them if they ever had drunk beer in Frank's office or ever were there for a questionable purpose. All of the witnesses denied knowing of or participating in any such parties.

Frank's lawyer said that he would continue this line of questioning with all of the women he called from the factory. The testimony was obtained to discredit the stories of some of the State's witnesses charging that Frank was in the habit of entertaining women in his office.

Employees Show Loyalty.
The factory employees called Friday displayed the utmost loyalty to their superintendent. They testified, although they could believe nothing wrong of Frank and appeared indignant at the suggestions of immorality made by Solicitor Dorsey.

When the day closed there were still many witnesses to be heard, it was problematical if the defense would finish during the day. The statement of Frank was being reserved until the last moment before the defense rested its case. His attorney announced that they did not know themselves whether it would be a formal written statement or whether Frank would make it informally from notes he had taken before and during the trial.

The first move by the State in rebuttal is awaited with the keenest interest. It generally is conceded that Solicitor Dorsey will occupy the major part of his time in attacking the character of the young factory superintendent. He is said to be willing to let the main theory of the crime, as suggested by the defense, to go practically unassailed except by the testimony already given by his witnesses. Jim Conley, principal girl witness.

Assail Frank.
Dawey Howell, a 14-year-old girl, recently sent from Atlanta to the Home of the Good Shepherd in Cincinnati, was returned to this city Friday for the express purpose of testifying against Frank. She was brought back under the Solicitor's direction, and is reported by persons connected with the prosecution to have testimony extremely damaging to Frank's moral character.

Many of Friday's witnesses who testified to the excellence of Frank's character, testified at the same time to the worthlessness of Conley's.

Mrs. Dora Small, a machine operator on the fourth floor, swore that she always had known Frank as a gentleman and never had heard any stories of immorality in regard to him.

She said that Conley's character was bad, and that he had a reputation for being selfish and dishonest. Mrs. E. H. Carson, mother of Miss Rebecca Carson, another of the witnesses, declared that Conley acted suspiciously after the crime.

Says Conley Cringed.
When She Accused Him.
Miss Mary Pirik said that she had accused Conley of the murder and that the negro slunk out of her sight and had not appeared around her again during the day. She was asked by the Solicitor if she ever had seen Frank struggling with Mary Phagan or ever had noticed Frank taking her on one side to talk with her during his weeks immediately preceding the tragedy.

She replied she had not. The Bo

FRANK'S MOTHER CALLED TO THE STAND AGAIN TO TESTIFY IN HIS DEFENSE

Continued from Page 1. Victor pressed this question, demanding if it was not true that Frank had been seen by the Phagan girl who was murdered, had taken her to one side of the room and caught hold of her when she tried to get back to work.

DIAGRAM SHOWING MAIN POINTS IN FRANK'S ALIBI

The defense claims it would have been utterly impossible for Frank to have murdered Mary Phagan and disposed of her body in the lapses in time in the alibi they have set up. They also contend that it proves Conley's story a tissue of falsehoods.

At 12:05 P.M. Monteen entered the factory at 12:05. Proceeding further, the defense attacks Conley's story of the disposition of the body on the ground that Helen Curran saw Frank at Alabama and Whitehall at 1:10, and Conley says the disposing of the body began at 12:56. The events Conley describes could not have occurred in the intervening 14 minutes, according to the defense, because Conley said he was in the wardrobe 8 minutes, and the writing of the notes must have taken at least 6 minutes, according to the State.

MRS. PANKHURST FLEES, FEARED 'DESEETER'

Famous Militant Leader Joins Daughter in France—England Breathes Easier.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian, LONDON, Aug. 16.—Mrs. Frank Emmeline Pankhurst forsaken the militant suffragette? This question arose here to-day following the receipt of a telegram from Paris to the effect that the famous leader has just joined her fugitive daughter, Christabel, in that city. At Scotland Yard it was said that detectives knew of Mrs. Pankhurst's departure from England, and had notified Christabel to return to London. One theory, based upon this contention, is that Mrs. Pankhurst fears her other daughter, Sylvia, who was released from Holloway jail the other day on account of serious illness induced by a hunger strike, is going to die, and she wants the daughters to meet again.

STATEMENT BY FRANK WILL BE THE CLIMACTIC FEATURE OF THE TRIAL

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The defense is nearing its end in the Frank case. A few more character witnesses have been called to testify in behalf of the defendant—the statements of Frank, and the defense will rest.

The State will introduce its witnesses in rebuttal of the defense's character witnesses, and also other things. Not improbably, the State will undertake to rebut in a measure the defendant's personal statement.

The entire case should go to the jury Monday or Tuesday—meaning that that the argument should begin then.

The State has been all along much more sensational and spectacular than the defense. That general fact has been true in every case, and in respect of that, therefore, the Frank case has not been particularly remarkable.

In the length of time required to develop fully both sides, however, the case is in a class by itself, so far as Georgia is concerned.

The Frank case has been noticeable, too, because of the fact that women have been excluded from the courtroom practically from the beginning of the trial—and yet in the main there hasn't been a great deal said in the courtroom that might be called particularly offensive, as those things go.

In view of Conley's direct statement as to unpeppable depravity upon the part of Frank, the most that has been said by way of the very offense has been said largely through suggestion and innuendo.

Unless the State comes forward in rebuttal with some direct allegations to bolster up Conley, the chances are that there will be no further sensational testimony introduced.

defendant's lack of character to hold together its other story—and that seems to be the way the State is fighting its case along. It must be down the defendant's exhibits completely, or the defendant's showing is bound to figure tremendously in shaping the verdict.

Can the State do it? That is a question Atlantans and Georgians have asked themselves continually for the past week or ten days. It is the question they still are asking themselves—and it is the question they will ask themselves until it is answered.

Upon the rebuttal of the Frank character witnesses much depends—and it has been pointed out already, at least, that this rebuttal will be complete and final. It must be, if the defense is to win out.

There is nothing now that goes so directly to the very core of the issue between Leo Frank and the State of Georgia as the question of the defendant's possession or lack of character.

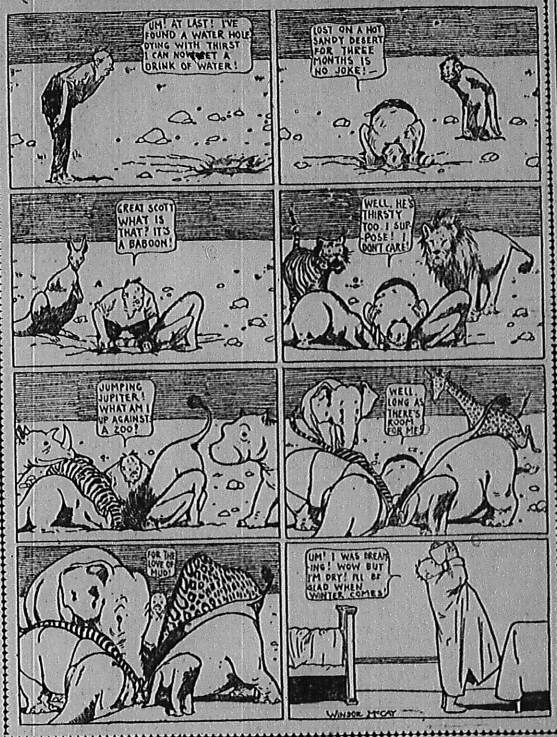

When the attorneys pro and con come to sum up the case, for the benefit and theoretical enlightenment of the jury, will be heard, I think, that both the State and the defense have made out cases remarkable in point of strength for and against the defendant.

In other words, I mean it will be found that the State has made the very best of the material it had on hand by way of outlining and establishing the charge against Frank, the while the defense has been every bit as circumspet and astute in providing for the refutation of the charge.

Trial a Fair Fight. Certainly the trial has been such a trial as no one could fault. It was not called until both sides had had ample time to prepare for it, and until both sides announced ready.

The State and the defense each is supplied with as able and intelligent counsel as might be secured. There has been no limit whatever upon the time taken up, court officials have left nothing undone to have the witnesses both ways on hand at the moment wanted, and the witnesses under the rule while the case has proceeded.

MIDSUMMER DAY DREAMS

Mother-Love Gives Trial Its One Heart-Stirring Scene

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

Every human emotion has been paraded during the long three weeks of the Frank trial. There has been pathos. There has been pathos. Comedy has opposed tragedy. Science has met sympathy. Truth has been arrayed against fiction. Negroes have conflicted with whites. The erudite Arnold has matched wit with the thick-lipped, thick-skulled Conley. Luther Rosser, stern, determined and skillful, has had to bear the machinations of a brain of a cornfield negro, New Lee. Hugh Rosser, young and determined, has been matched against the ambitious, have tried to break out against the breath of Rosser and the ruler of Arnold.

There remained but one thing—the dramatic touch that sends the violin trembling a high crescendo and the hearts of the audience beating a long roll in double time. It was furnished during the past week.

The Mother's Part. It was furnished by the person that a hater would have picked for the part. The touch was added by the person to whom the trial means more than a seat in high heaven—a woman whose son is on trial for his life.

The stage had been appropriately set for the dramatic effect. The audience had a man of unquestioned wealth back of him, with a little girl of the common masses of the common people called the victim of his degenerate lust.

Atlanta's most noted criminal lawyers confronted a young prosecutor and a young lawyer who is seeking the accolade of the bar. A cornfield "nigger" had told his simple story. There was even the air of martyrdom in his testimony, though it was as black as the charge against the man who looked on the minutes and hours in which he spoke words that begged the opposition in its desire to fasten a rope around his neck.

ARKANSAN LOSES EXTRADITION FIGHT

Governor Slaton Honors Papers for Young Man Released From Federal Prison.

Extradition papers for David J. Steinburg, wanted in Arkansas on charges of embezzlement, were honored by Governor Slaton late Friday, following a stubbornly contested hearing. Sheriff Sam D. Crawford, of an Arkansas county, left with the prisoner at midnight to forestall habeas corpus proceedings.

Steinburg, who is just 22 years of age, was released last Wednesday from the Federal Prison, where he was confined nine months upon conviction in New York. Hardly had he stepped from the prison door when he was arrested by a local deputy, who served a warrant sworn out in Arkansas. Steinburg retained counsel to fight the extradition. He was represented by the firm of Napier, Wright & Wood.

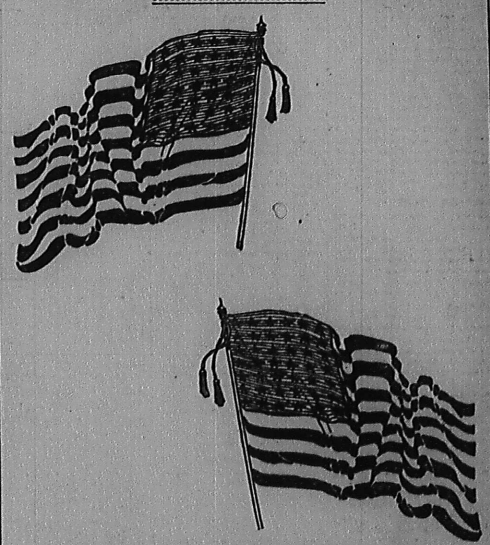

In rendering his opinion, Governor Slaton declared he had no opinion in the matter, as the defendant was clearly a fugitive from justice. According to Sheriff Crawford, Steinburg is wanted badly in Arkansas, and probably will get something like ten years on four separate charges.
