Vice Protection Charged to the Police

CHIEF IS TOLD OF TRAFFIC IN GIRLS

Business Man Gives Names of Five Places of Vice—Says Police Were Notified.

Chief of Police Beavers Wednesday was placed in possession of starting information of an organized plan for the ruin of young girls which is said to have been formed with the connivance of the police and by them encouraged and protected.

A prominent business man was the informant. He did not make a general accusation, but entered into specific details, giving in every instance names, streets and street numbers.

The story is the most sensational brought to the attention of Chief Beavers in the police scandal which already has resulted in the suspension of eight policemen.

Detectives Put on Case.

The Chief, on receiving the details of the alleged plot for the debauching of young girls, at once placed detectives on the case with instructions to verify every charge contained in the startling communication.

Five places are mentioned by the business man. Into one of them on a principal street, almost in the heart of the city, it is alleged that two notorious women daily have decoyed from ten to twelve girls ranging in age from 12 to 18 years.

The child victims, the information states, after a few minutes are led through the rear door of this building into another house, which is described as "a well-known assignation place."

Says He Told Police.

The business man represented to the Chief that he had made complaint of the conditions to the police, but that, significantly enough, the inmates of the house were "tipped off." His conclusion was that the police themselves warned those conducting the place.

The Chief's informant told also the names of clubs where, he said, policemen and detectives were in the habit of obtaining drinks.

Chief Beavers said Wednesday that the man's story was being thoroughly investigated and that if it were found to be true the officers involved would be suspended and charges filed against them before the Police Commission.

Grand Jury Lauds Chief's Vice Crusade.

The Grand Jury's findings on the vice situation, as announced at the close of the session Wednesday afternoon, warmly commended the police department for its vice crusade and advocated a continuance along the lines that are now being followed by Chief Beavers.

The expected criticisms of certain features of the police department work in its connection with the vice problems were not forthcoming. The jurors apparently were not able to verify sufficiently the "I accuse you" proclamation of Carl Hutcheson, who openly charged that immoral resorts were receiving protection and that Chief Beavers and Chief Lanford were responsible for the condition.

The other letters and affidavits submitted to the Grand Jury purporting to show protected vice also were not of sufficient weight to warrant action. The jurors are understood to have entertained the belief that many of the communications were written for the purpose of discrediting the police and not actually with a desire to better conditions.

GEORGIA MAN SHOOTS UP COURT

G. E. Green, of Sylvania, Attempts to Slay Prisoner on Trial in Tampa, Fla.

TAMPA, July 2.—The Hillsville tragedy on a small scale came near being enacted her to-day when G. E. Green, of Sylvania, Ga., tried to kill W. E. Mattox, on trial in the county court charged with having assaulted Green's niece. Green narrowly missed County Judge Whitaker, former Justice Parkhill, of the Supreme Court; Mattox, the prisoner, Attorney Bailey and several others. Three shots were fired before Dputy Sheriff Will Woodward could get hold of Green and choke him into submission. No one was hit, though Green was not ten feet from Mattox when the shots were fired. Green was taken to the county jail, where he has not as yet made a statement.

Mattox is charged with mistreating Hazel Otto, a fourteen-year-old niece of Green, and also related to Mattox's wife. Mattox is 52 years of age. Green is about 27.

The case was called for trial today. Mrs. Mattox and the girl were missing. This had been reported to the court, with the suspicion that perhaps Mrs. Mattox had spirited the girl away.

Green, Enraged, Shoots.

Judge Whitaker had just postponed the case to July 10 and was marking it on his calendar when Green turned loose.

"Damn you, I'll get you," he shouted.

With features contorted with rage until he looked like a wild man, he began to shoot. So excited was he that the first shot went into the ceiling. The second made a hole in the wall back of Mattox, and the third went through a law book on the table under which Mattox, by this time, was hiding. Deputy Woodward and others grabbed Green and prevented his firing other shots. They hurried him to jail.

Judge Whitaker hid behind the iron door of his safe, Attorney Bailey and the prisoner went under the table and Judge Parkhill dropped out of a convenient window.

Believed Threat Carried Out.

The courthouse is on the main corner of the city's most prominent business street and hundreds of people gathered. Threats or repeating the Hillsville affair had been made by Mitchell Anderson, now being tried in the circuit court for murder and many thought his friends were shooting up the courthouse.

Testimony as to the threats was given to-day by Percy Jones, a former lawyer, now in jail for shooting his sister-in-law at Fort Myers some time ago. Jones testified that Mitchell said to him in jail:

"If I am convicted I will repeat the Allen shooting at Hillsville. I have friends in the courtroom, who are armed and are prepared to go any length to help me. I shall escape, but before I go will kill Irwin Stewart. I'm not the man who killed old man Wread, but I know who did."

Anderson's brother and other kinsfolk have been in court since the opening of the trial several days ago. They have the reputation of being hot tempered. Sheriff Spencer and Judge Robles will see that no arms are brought into court. Stewart is the chief witness for the State.

Carl Hutcheson Is Indicted; Accused Of Libeling 2 Chiefs

Carl Hutcheson, the young attorney who came out with sensational charges of vice protection against the police department, was indicted for criminal libel on two counts by the Grand Jury Wednesday.

The two counts include his charges against Chief of Police Beavers and Chief of Detectives Lanford.

The Grand Jury's action was in line with its indictment of Colonel Thomas B. Felder and Chief Lanford last week on similar charges.

The Grand Jury based its indictment of Hutcheson on an article appearing in an afternoon paper on May 27, in which he accused the police officials of knowledge of the existence of vice in Atlanta and their failure to take steps to wipe it out.

Attempt by Colyar To Disbar Felder Is Halted; Tries Again

A petition filed Tuesday with the Clerk of the Superior Court by A. S. Colyar, Jr., asking for the disbarment of Colonel Thomas B. Felder from the practice of law in Georgia, has been withdrawn by Colyar on information that he first must submit his petition to the court for the determination of whether his grounds are sufficient to warrant an investigation and trial by jury.

Colyar said Wednesday he would apply for a rule nisi. Until this is done there can be no action on his petition. The petition includes as reasons for the disbarment of Colonel Felder the alleged irregular practices of which Colyar accused Colonel Felder in the sensational dictograph conversations furnished by Colyar to the police.

"Showers to-night or Thursday," is the official weather forecast.

Except for the temporary drop attendant upon the rain there will be no lessening of the temperature. The heat wave continues all over the country, Atlanta being less affected than most other cities.

Temperatures at noon Wednesday was 85, and at 1 o'clock, 87. The day's maximum will not exceed 89 or 90.

Temperatures during the day follow: 5 a. m., 72; 6 a. m., 72; 7 a. m., 74; 8 p. m., 77; 9 a. m., 78; 10 a. m., 80; 11 a. m., 83; noon, 85; 1 p. m., 87.

The sun rose at 4:31 a. m. and will set at 6.53 p. m.

Gov. Slaton and Staff To Visit Militia Camp

Governor John M. Slaton and his staff of colonels will pay their first official visit to the camp of the Fifth Regiment at St. Simons next week, if the new Governor is enabled to leave the Capitol for a day or two during the legislative sessions.

The Fifth Regiment Band, the leading military musical organization in Georgia, will accompany the troops.

Vacations have been arranged so nearly every officer and private will be in camp. The regiment will leave next Tuesday night and be at St. Simons eight days.

INVESTIGATE NEIGHBOR'S CHARGE

MACON, July 2.—Church people here are greatly agitated to-day over the investigation by the executive committee of the First Christian Church into the alleged intimacy of two of its most prominent members—Professor Frank M. Charlton, leader of the choir, and Mrs. Marvin Lee Lester, secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society.

The alleged improper conduct as charged by two neighbors of Mrs. Lester, Mrs. J. W. Jenkins and Mrs. Alma Armstrong, is said to have occurred on the night of June 5, when a telephone conversation between the professor and Mrs. Lester was overheard by Mrs. Jenkins, it is alleged.

According to Mrs. Jenkins, who is on the same telephone line with Mrs. Lester, Professor Charlton asked Mrs. Lester if Mr. Lester were in.

Pair Watch for Professor.

Upon the reply of Mrs. Lester that he was not in, Mrs. Jenkins says Professor Charlton said: "How about coming around, then?"

Mrs. Jenkins claims she called Mrs. Armstrong over and together the two watched for Professor Charlton's arrival. He came to the corner of the Lester house, she claims, and then went back and turned up the alley, where he started to enter the Lester side gate. Mrs. Jenkins says she screamed "burglar" and called Mrs. Lester, who replied that there wasn't any burglar there, and cut off.

Nothing further was heard of the "burglary" until June 21, when The Macon News published an anonymous story of the affair using the names A., B., C. Copies of the paper were then mailed anonymously to Mr. Lester and Mrs. Charlton, and the church investigation followed on Saturday last, when certain of the parties were summoned to appear.

Four Elders Make Inquiry.

Members of the committee, composed of four elders of the church, Lenoir M. Erwin, Orrin Erwin, H. W. Roper and A. M. Smith, said to-day that the investigation probably would

AUTO HITS GIRL; CHAUFFEUR FLEES

Child, 14, Probably Fatally Hurt by Motor Which Speeds From Scene.

Eva Kilpatrick, 14 years old, 174 Hampton Street, was probably fatally injured Wednesday afternoon when she was run down by an automobile in front of the home of Mrs. A. J. Hyback, 84 Mills Street.

The child was thrown from the center of the street to the sidewalk, a distance of about twenty-five feet, and was unconscious when picked up. She was rushed to Grady Hospital.

According to statements made to the police by eyewitnesses of the accident, the only person in the car was the chauffeur. The girl started to cross the street, and had reached the center of the thoroughfare when the automobile was seen.

Neighbors say the car was running at such a high rate of speed that it was impossible to see the number.

After striking the little girl and hurling her to the sidewalk, the driver of the machine looked back, and then increased the speed of his car and turned up Williams Street.

Prominent Women At Anniston Trial

ANNISTON, July 2.—The seating capacity of the Circuit Court room here was taxed to-day when G. H. Bailey, a well known merchant, was put on trial in preliminary hearing on the charge of murdering C. W. Saunders, whom he shot down more than a week ago.

Prominent women were in court as witnesses and spectators, among them being Miss Frances Coleman, daughter of Judge T. W. Coleman. Miss Marion Walsh, Mrs. Saunders, widow of the dead man, and Mrs. Martha Klein.

The defense will probably make a plea of self-defense.

Accused of Killing Brother as Revenge

MOBILE, July 2.—Caroline Blackman, a 17-year-old negro, was jailed to-day on the charge of murdering her half-brother, Henry Allen, aged 3 years, by cutting off his head with a butcher knife and throwing the body in the woods.

The girl on Tuesday attempted to poison her family with concentrated lye, and was given a beating for her action, and it is believed she killed the child for revenge.

Clubroom Discussion of Athletic Prowess Leads to Novel Challenge to Net Battle.

Members of the Atlanta Athletic Club are all agog over the greatest "goat-getting" contest ever staged in the history of the organization. The younger members are more excited than they have been over anything since it was announced that Annette Kellerman would swim in the Athletic Club pool.

Hold your breath! It is to be a game of tennis out at East Lake between J. K. Orr, Jr., and Roscius McMichael with a three-pound brickbat.

This unusual combat was brought to a climax by what in earlier times was known as repartee, but in our modern days of slang is universally known as "goat-getting." A party of friends gathered at the club down on Auburn Avenue for an hour of good fellowship. On one side of the table sat "Jake" Orr, lean and swarthy, crack pool shot, expert gunner and a "shark" at tennis.

On the other side at Roscius McMichael, round and rosy, though not renowned as a field athlete.

"Well, Jake," began McMichael, "I see that the Kid Wonder, Harry Hallman, only took one love set from you in the Georgia championship tennis tournament at the Driving Club?"

"Yes," answered Orr, as the laughter of the group increased, "he did. But I'll lay a bet with you that I can beat you two out of three sets with at hree-pound brickbat tied to my left foot."

All eyes and laughs turned on McMichael. He straightened up and hesitated. He realized he was about as handy with a tennis racquet as he was with Caruso's Sob Song. But there was no way out.

"I'll take you," he answered aggressively.

A forfeit has been arranged. Orr is to have a two-foot rope connecting his left foot with the brickbat. The match is to be played within 30 days.

Six Billion Nickels Go Yearly to Movies

NEW YORK, July 2.—Chairman Frank A. Tichenor, of the First International Exhibition of the Moving Picture Arts, to be held the week of July 7, completed tabulating moving picture statistics, which show that 6,380,000,000 nickels are paid yearly by 3,600,000 persons who love the "movie" shows.

The figures, the first official ones ever prepared in this country, show that $319,000,000 was received in quarters, dimes and nickels; $80,000,000 is invested in the industry; 200,000 persons are employed, and 10,000,000 feet of films produced weekly.

2 HELD FOR FRAUDS IN CONDUCT OF BANK

S. E. Smith and H. S. Miles Give $10,000 Bond Each—One Count Felony Charge.

S. E. Smith, president of the Guarantee Trust and Banking Company, and H. S. Miles, secretary and treasurer, were indicted by the Grand Jury Wednesday on charges of declaring false dividends, buying bck their own stock and doing business without a proper license.

Five indictments were drawn against each of the men. Only one is punishable as a felony, that of declaring false dividends.

Warrants for the arrest of the two men were served upon them by Deputy Sheriff Pienie Miner and they were taken into custody at 1:35 o'clock at the banking house in Alabama Street. Their bond has been fixed at $10,000 each.

Refuse to Talk of Case.

Neither man would make any comment on the action of the Grand Jury when seen by a reporter. They said they had received no official notice of the action and had not as yet been served with the papers in the case.

The action of the Grand Jury is in the nature of a sequel to Judge John T. Pendleton's appointment last week of John Robinson as receiver for the company. An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court by the company.

Attorney Frank A. Hooper has been designated as prosecutor in the case, owing to the disability of Solicitor General Dorsey. The Solicitor was disqualified from the fact that his law firm is acting as counsel for the petitioners in the case.

Long and Bitter Fight.

The return of the indictments is another chapter in one of the longest and most spirited fights in the recent history of the Fulton County Superior Court. The case was instituted by Matthew Delaney and others and the trial was entered for May 5 with the plaintiffs charging that the defendant company was insolvent as the result of fraud and mismanagement and the company contending htat it was amply solvent and able to meet all outstanding obligations.

The first important step of the plaintiffs, after the filing of their petition in court, was to serve the defendant with a notice to produce in court all its books, records and accounts and to cause the testimony of the president, secretary and chief bookkeeper to be taken under oath before a commissioner. The stenographer's transcript covered more than 600 typewritten pages.

Receiver Is Named.

On motion of the plaintiffs' counsel, the court appointed C. J. Metz as auditor of the books and records. Following the report of Mr. Metz, the plaintiffs contended that every allegation made by them had been sustained and that the business of the former Guarantee Redemption Company had, at a time when the company was insolvent, been sold to the Guarantee Trust and Banking Company for a bonus of $250,000, the greater part of which sum was paid to Smith and Miles.

The decision of Judge Pendleton declared that under the evidence, the officers of the company had been guilty of violating the trust relations imposed by its contracts and by the laws of Georgia and was unable to meet the measure of solvency fixed by the statutes of the State. The decision was formally concluded by the filing of an order granting all of the prayers of the plaintiffs and designating James D. Robinson receiver.

'PURE SHOE' BILL BEFORE STATE SENATORS

Another Measure Would Make the Sale or Exchange of Pistols Misdemeanor.

Among the measures introduced in the Georgia Senate Wednesday was a "pure shoe" bill and a bill to prevent the sale of pistols. The first was introduced by Senator J. T. Peyton, of the Thirty-first, and the last by Senator W. E. H. Searcy, Sr., of the Twenty-sixth.

Senator Peyton's "pure shoe" bill prohibits the sale of boots and shoes as of leather construction when other material is substituted, unless the substitution is placarded in plain print on the box. Violation is made a misdemeanor. The bill was referred to the committee on agriculture.

Senator Searcy's anti-pistol bill makes the sale or exchange of a pistol a misdemeanor. It was referred to the Committee on Special Judiciary.

Many Bills Offered.

Other bills introduced were:

By Senator Peyton—Providing for the appointment of a commission of five members to receive offers for the sale or exchange of the Executive Mansion, and for a new site, and to report to the present General Assembly; amending the act of 1911, regulating the sale of fertilizer; creating a department of public roads and highways, with a commissioner at $3,000 salary; amending the code to correct census figures rendered inaccurate by the creation of new counties.

By Senator Taylor—Constitutional amendment creating Atkinson County.

By Senator McNeil—Permitting solid trains of perishable freight or live stock to operate on Sunday.

By Senator Kea—Making it a misdemeanor for contract farm laborers to breach their agreement except for providential causes.

New County Asked.

By Senator Watts—Constitutional amendment creating Griggs County.

By Senator Elkins—Requiring publication in newspapers of monthly and quarterly itemized expenditures of county and municipal disbursing officers.

By Senator McNeil—Creating juvenile courts, regulating treatment and control of dependent and delinquent children and providing for separation of youthful from adult prisoners; preventing erection of tanks, bridges, mail cranes or other structures along railroad tracks with a clearance of less than eight feet.

The Senate will meet at 10 o'clock Thursday morning. After a short session it will adjourn until Monday.

Striker on Trial As Train Wrecker

JACKSON, MISS., July 2.—Harvey Farish, formerly employed by the Illinois Central Railroad as a car repairer, was placed on trial in the Hinds County Circuit Court to-day on a charge of attempting to wreck a train in September, 1911.

Walter Scott, a negro boy indicted jointly with Farish, entered a plea of guilty when arraigned to-day. In his confession he implicated Farish.

HOUSE UNSEATS TWO MEMBERS, 135 TO 37

The House of Representatives by a vote of 135 to 37 to-day unseated Representatives McArthur, of Wheeler, and Browning, of Bleckley.

The two were named in special elections to represent their two newly created counties. A special committee declared they were unconstitutionally elected, and could not be seated without endangering the entire proceedings of the General Assembly. The members under fire made a brave fight to hold on to their seats and for a time it looked as if there was a fair chance that the House might retain them.

The acts creating Wheeler and Bleckley ran the total membership of the House to 186. The Constitution says it must not exceed 184. This, together with the illegal manner of McArthur's and Browning's elections, turned the scale against them.

Hard Fight Made.

The fight to save McArthur and Browning was the first big fireworks display of the present session.

Olive of Richmond, Myrick of Chatham and Pickett of Terrell made forceful and eloquent speeches in behalf of the members whose seats were challenged. Slater of Bryan, Hardeman of Jefferson and Blackburn of Fulton were equally as insistent upon unseating them. For two hours Wednesday the debate raged.

This is the first case of the kind ever thrashed out in the Georgia Legislature, and it undoubtedly will affect the many new county propositions profoundly.

Such new ones as are admitted at the present session will be admitted under conditions radically different from those prescribed for Wheeler and Bleckley.

Will Remedy Defect.

The two counties denied representation in the present Legislature may send representatives to the next, as there will be time to remedy the present difficulty. At the present session they will be represented by the representatives from Montgomery and Pulaski, the two counties from which they were taken.

Personally the two ousted members have many friends, and the House undoubtedly would like to have seated them, if it might have seated them legally.

CHURCH SCANDAL STIRS MACON SOCIETY

be completed the latter part of this week. The committee will then report its findings in open meeting to the church congregation, which will vote on the guilt of the parties concerned.

If proved guilty, members of the committee say, both Professor Charlton and Mrs. Lester will be ousted from the church. On the other hand, if proved not guilty, the parties will be vindicated in open meeting and the church cleared of the charges which have been placed against two of its most prominent members.

Will Be No Whitewash.

Lenoir M. Erwin, member of the investigating committee and United States Commissioner here, and Rev. Leroy M. Anderson, pastor of the church, declared to-day that there would be no whitewash of the affair; that the charges were being sifted to the bottom, and the real truth would be brought out in open meeting, as is customary in the Christian Church.

"If the parties are guilty as charged," said Rev. Mr. Anderson, "they will be dealt with accordingly, but if they are not guilty of the charges the church will protect them. In neither case, however, will this be done secretly, for the laws of our church provide for action by the congregation as a whole in such cases.

Wanted Names Published.

"There will be no whitewash, and if any publication of the matter is made I demand that the names of the parties, the name of the church and the pastor be used."

Mr. Erwin, who is taking an active part in the investigation, made the same statements in substance. He said both sides of the matter were being investigated fully, and no stone would be left unturned to bring out the true facts in the case.

Professor Charlton and Mrs. Lester deny the charges vigorously, and in this they are supported by Mr. Lester and Mrs. Charlton. Each declares that a full investigation of the matter is courted.

Libel Suits Threatened.

Mr. Lester said Tuesday night he would consult with his attorney, Claud Estes, Wednesday, to consider filing suit against the parties who have made the charges against his wife for malicious slander.

Professor Charlton also is considering filing such a suit, according to his statement.

Professor Charlton has established what he claims is an alibi. When seen Tuesday night he declared that the charges were absolutely false; that he left the church on the night in question after 8:30 o'clock, met Miss Edith Howell, the church organist, at Oglethorpe Street, spoke to her, and then walked on to his home on Rembert Avenue. Mrs. Jenkins claims she saw Professor Charlton at the corner of the Lester home about 9 o'clock.

Mrs. Lester Charges Malice.

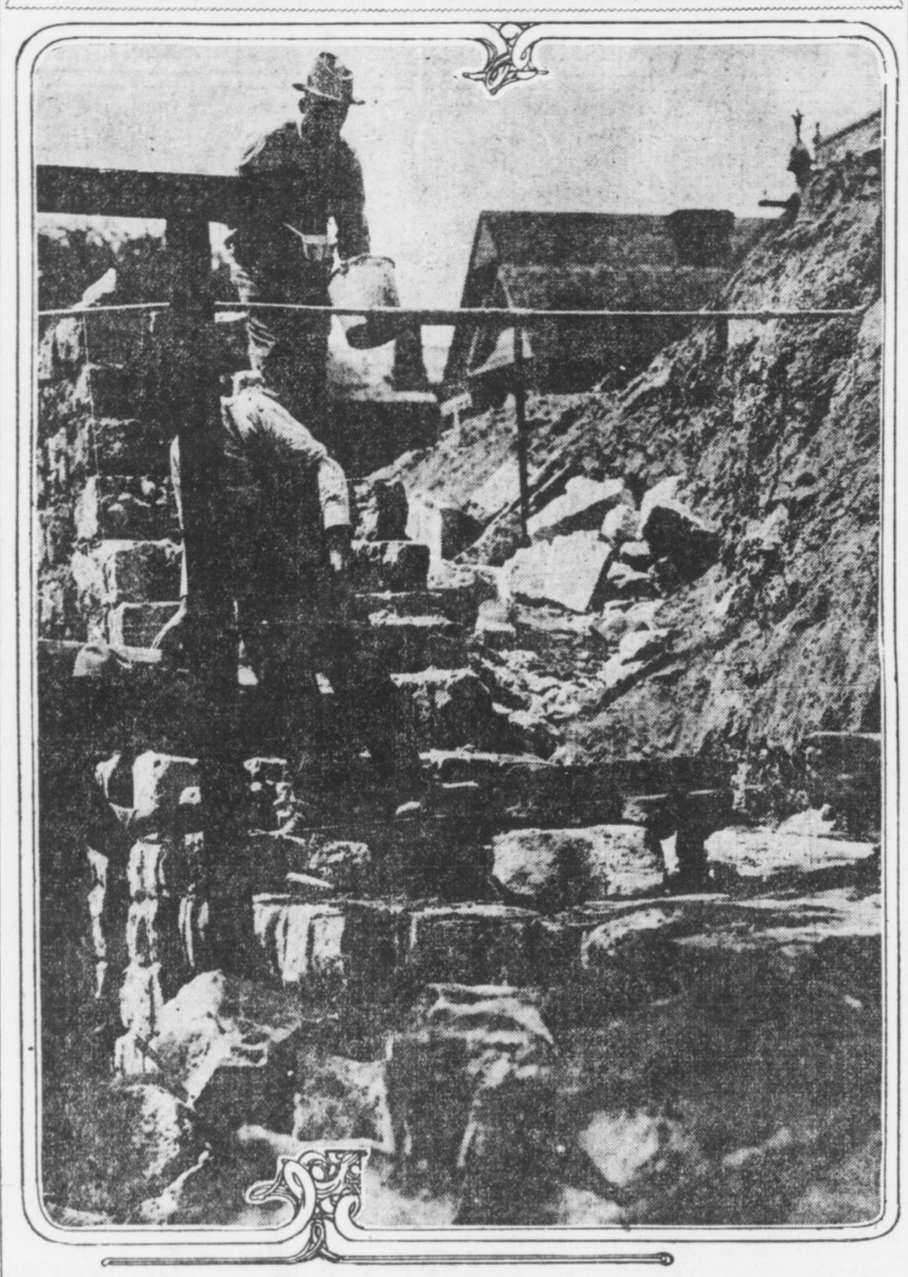

Mrs. Lester also denies the charges in most vigorous terms. She declared Tuesday night that she did not talk to Professor Charlton over the phone as alleged by Mrs. Jenkins, and did not see him at all.

The charge of Mrs. Jenkins and others, she says, is simply a case of malicious slander, as she has had nothing to do with Mrs. Jenkins for more than a year.

"My home life," declared Mrs. Lester, "has been one of the happiest on record, I suppose—there has never been anything, even bordering on scandal in my family. My husband has been kind to me and has been with me constantly almost since we were married. For four years he never left me alone at night.

"As for Professor Charlton and his family, we have simply been good friends. He often drops by to sing and play for us, and our relations have been just what the relations of members of the same church usually are. I love his wife dearly, and we all are the best of friends."

IVY STREET WORK IS DELAYED BY CONSTRUCTION ERRORS; CITY LAGS

Where workmen are repairing the Ivy Street retaining wall which crumbled because of faulty construction. It was necessary to remove all the earth which had been filled in, resulting in long delay in the completion of the city's part of the work.

So many complaints about the slow progress of the work on Ivy Street have come to The Georgian that an investigation has been made.

Nearly 400 feet of the retaining wall, averaging eight feet, proved to be faultily constructed and was torn down and is being rebuilt at a cost of several thousand dollars.

After six months on the work on this street the city construction department still is laying a sewer on the south end.

County Ready to Pave.

"The county has agreed to repave that street. We would have completed the work long ago if the city and the public utility corporations had turned it over to us. We are ready to begin the work at once if they will get out of our way."

Since the work of regrading Ivy Street was begun last January the residents of the street have been almost totally deprived of its use. They have been confronted with the same slow progress that marked the Peachtree Street regrading, the Marietta Street repaving, and various other municipal improvements.

One cause of delay on Ivy Street was obvious—the crumbling of about 400 feet of wall on the east side of the street between Harris and Peachtree Streets. Assistant Chief of Construction W. S. Hansel said of it:

"It is my opinion that the giving away of this wall was due to trying to be too economical. We did not go deep enough with our foundations."

Car Question in Dispute.

The fill of hundreds of wagonloads of dirt has had to be dug out that the wall might be rebuilt. Property owners on the street declare they can see no excuse for such an error.

A dispute has arisen over whether the Georgia Railway and Power Company shall relay the trolley car tracks on this street. Some of the property owners desire that it be made a boulevard for light conveyances only. But North Side residents have registered a forceful protest against the change. They declare it will send the Piedmont Avenue and Pine Street cars down through the negro section of the city, and this they do not want.

The residents of the street declare that they have to suffer enough inconvenience with efficient methods of construction, and they are bitter against any needless delays. Property owners paid into the City Treasury $30,000 to help defray the cost of the work. The county did the regrading.

AUGUSTA, July 2.—The first mortgage bondholders of the Perkins Manufacturing Company purchased the real estate, buildings and machinery at public outcry for $66,000, representing the amount of outstanding first mortgage bonds and accrued interest. The live stock, wagons, lumber, etc., were purchased by Jacob Phinizy for $11,000.

Court Witness Found After 11-Year Hunt

An eleven-year search for a negro whose absence has held up a case in Federal Court here came to an end at Little Rock, Ark., when Harrison M. Thomas was arrested. He probably will be brought to Atlanta Wednesday.

Thomas is a witness in the trial of Benjamin Davis, negro editor of The Atlanta Independent, charged with having stolen liquor when working as a Government gauger at the Stone Mountain Distillery eleven years ago. Davis has several times got a postponement on the grounds that Thomas was one of his material witnesses.

SLADE IS CAUSTIC IN CRITICISM OF STATE MILITIA

Law Needed to Prevent Cowardly Shooting of Innocent Persons, He Declares.

Threats of Atlanta officers to resign from the Georgia National Guard should the bill pending before the Legislature providing for placing that body under the control of the civil authorities be adopted, drew sarcastic remarks from Representative John J. Slade, of Muscogee County, father of the bill, Wednesday morning.

Officers declared such a law would convert them into a "suicide squad." Mr. Slade's comment was that he had no objection to such a squad.

"The military are welcome to commit suicide rather than go down to Augusta and again murder three innocent citizens, and in like cowardly manner shoot at a woman and child."

Thurs spoke Mr. Slade.

Calls Shooting Murder.

"They may talk all they want to. I do not know what the fate of my bill will be, but I shall fight strongly for its passage. The people of Georgia don't believe in the ruthless murder of innocent persons. And what else can we call the Augusta tragedy? The shooting at an innocent woman and child was cowardly in the extreme, and I believe in the curbing of the authority of any body of men to do such a thing."

Representative Slade is the oldest member of the Legislature, but is as active and healthy looking as any man in the house. The "18-karat tinhorn soldiery," which some of the military officers of the Fifth Regiment declare they will practically become with the passage of such a law, brought a smile to the face of Mr. Slade. "Quite a combination—18-karat tin-horn soldiery becomes a suicide squad," he said.

Slade Has Aid.

While the bill was introduced into the House by the Muscogee County delegation, Mr. Slade originated it. His colleagues, however, have joined with him in signing it and will assist in the fight for its passage.

Ten officers of the Fifth Regiment, Atlanta, are said to have expressed their determination to resign in the event the Slade bill is adopted.

City Sends Barges After Cheap Coal

MOBILE, July 2.—The barge J. H. Barnhard, the first of the fleet to be operated between New Orleans and the Tuscaloosa coal fields, with a view of reducing 50 per cent the cost of coal in New Orleans, will arrive here this afternoon.

The barge was met in the lower bay by a committee from the Chamber of Commerce and Business League on a special boat and escorted to the city, where a reception was held.

FRANK IS WILLING FOR STATE TO GRILL HIM

Accused Man Declares He's Anxious Even for Prosecution to Cross-Examine.

Surpassing in interest any of the other testimony at the trial of Leo M. Frank will be the story related on the stand by the accused man himself. That Frank will make a detailed statement of his movements on the day that Mary Phagan was murdered is regarded as one of the certainties of the trial.

It was learned Wednesday that Frank was desirous of going even further than this by being sworn and submitting to a cross-examination by the attorneys for the prosecution. He will request his lawyers, Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold, that the privilege of cross-examination be extended the State.

The defense consistently has refused to divulge any of the details of its plans for the trial and for this reason it is impossible to say positively that Frank will be cross-examined. That it is not at all improbable, however, is indicated by the readiness with which Mr. Rosser permitted Frank to go before the Coroner's inquest and answer every question that was propounded to him.

"I was so convinced of his innocence," said Mr. Rosser at that time, "that I didn't hesitate an instant in giving consent to any sort of an examination that they might give him."

As grueling and searching as was the inquisition before the Coroner's jury, the ordeal at the trial will be much more severe. At the inquest Frank was interrogated by a Coroner who was merely seeking enough evidence to warrant the holding of Frank, along with Newt Lee, to the Grand Jury.

At the trial Frank will be confronted by two trained and hostile lawyers who have announced their conviction that he is the man guilty of the murder of Mary Phagan.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—The mysterious impersonator who, it is alleged, has been trying to gold brick Wall Street operators into doing his bidding through the use of the names of prominent Representatives and Senators was discovered to-day by the Overman lobby investigating committee in the person of David Lamar, of New York.

Lamar swaggered to the witness stand and calmly admitted he had used Representative Riordan's name, without the Representative's consent, when endeavoring to have Judge Robert R. Lovett, chairman of the board of directors of the Union Pacific Railroad, engage his friend Edward Lauterbach as an attorney.

Lamar made his admission without a sign of hesitation. He seemed to think the matter a joke.

Used Name on Telephone.

"Yes, I used the name of Representative Riordan," said Lamar, "in trying to get into telephonic communication with Judge Lovett. The judge was not there, and so I did not talk with him. But I left a message with his secretary to the effect that Congressman Riordan, of New York, thought that Lauterbach could be of very considerable service to the Union Pacific in settling the suits growing out of the dissolution of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

"I stated that Lauterbach did not want money; he simply wanted to offer his services as a friend."

"How did you happen to select the name of Representative Riordan?" asked Chairman Overman.

"Oh, it just came to me," replied the witness carelessly.

On being pressed by Senator Nelson, Lamar admitted that he also had used Riordan's name in attempting to converse with Maxwell Evarts. Evarts was timid, he said, and his attempt was without success.

Felt Sorry for Lauterbach.

The committee wanted to know whether there were any other conversations in which the names of other Representatives and Senators were used.

"I do not remember any," replied Lamar, "but I dare say if there were someone will come forward and tell about them."

Lamar denied he had ever threatened or that he had ever sought to bribe those with whom he talked when impersonating a national legislator. He said he tried to get Lauterbach retained as a Union Pacific attorney because he was sorry for Lauterbach because of the enmity borne him by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Mortimer Schiff.

Impersonated A. Mitchell Palmer.

Lamar said he talked over the telephone with Lewis Cass Ledyard, representing himself to be Representative A. Mitchell Palmer, of Pennsylvania. He said he impersonated Palmer because that member was supposed to have great influence with the new Administration.

Lamar said he advised J. P. Morgan to settle the strike of 1908, but Morgan refused. Lamar went to work on his own initiative to settle it after the coal companies refused President Roosevelt's request to conclude the strike.

Lamar said that as a result of conferences with Senator Platt, Governor Odell and Senators Penrose and Quay, the mine presidents were told they must settle the strike or a special session of the New York Legislature would annul their charters. This angered the Morgan interests. J. P. Morgan told Lamar his business associates criticised him for meeting Lamar. The money king told Lamar to meet him at his library or house thereafter.

Calls Pacific Case a Farce.

Lamar denounced as a farce the change of securities in the Pacific dissolution case.

"Here is a Government conferring with representatives of corporations, no one knows what is being done, the Attorney General is uncertain and says that a tentative plan must be evolved to be discussed later, and while the experts of the corporations are engaged on their side the department sends an office boy to look after the Government's interest. They cut the poor booby to pieces in fifteen minutes."

Senator Cummins demanded the name of the representative of the Department of Justice, and Lamar said it was G. Harold Todd.

Senator Overman broke in with a question which led to the most dramatic incident of the day.

"How old are you?" he asked.

"I am modest about it, but I am 50," replied Lamar.

"Are you a Jew?"

"I am a Methodist," replied Lamar.

Withholds Real Name.

"Is David Lamar your original name?" continued Overman.

"No."

"What was your name?" demanded the chairman.

Lamar was silent a moment, then replied that while he did not wish to be discourteous, he wanted time to think it over.

"I have used many names," he said. "I have been known for more than twenty years as David Lamar."

Under this assumed name he enjoyed, according to his testimony, the personal friendship of J. P. Morgan, James R. Keene, Russell Sage and other powerful financial men.

"Did you ever at any time impersonate any other Congressman than you have mentioned?" asked Chairman Overman.

"Oh, Lord! I suppose so," replied Lamar. "I don't know."

Heard Himself Denounced.

Senator Nelson then said: "It seems to me that you regarded Lauterbach as a sort of John the Baptist who was to put J. P. Morgan & Company in touch with the Democratic party."

"That's it exactly," answered Lamar.

L. C. Ledyard, of New York, then asked permission to examine the witness. This being granted, Ledyard asked:

"Did I tell you what I thought of David Lamar when you impersonated Mitchell Palmer over the phone to me?"

"You certainly did. You said he was a bad lot and I agreed with you," laughingly repled the witness.

Lamar then was excused but was warned he would be recalled and examined to give his right name and history. He promised to remain in Washington.

GAINED FAME SWAYING COMMITTEE ON RULES

Representative Wohlwender.

Representative Ed Wohlwender, of Muscogee, who is not an Irishman, as some people may suspect, will be the chairman of the big and important General Judiciary Committee of the new House of Representatives.

Mr. Wohlwender is one of the veteran members of the House, and is the only man known to legislative fame who ever made a Committee on Rules perform as he wanted it to, despite its evident inclination to perform otherwise.

Last year Mr. Wohlwender had a bill about something or other that was about to get lost in the legislative shuffle, largely through a process of asphyxiation in the Rules Committee.

One day—a dark, dismal and dreary day for the Rules Committee and the haughty highbrows composing the same—Wohlwender got up and notified the Rules Committee that it would bring out his bill or he would make it wish it never had been born!

The Rules Committee was hardened to that line of talk, however, so it bid Wohlwender "go chase himself" and see how he liked it.

But Wohlwender wouldn't chase himself—he chased the Rules Committee instead!

For days upon days he "cussed" and abused that Rules Committee, right out loud on the floor of the House, for everything he could think of—and when he ran out of thinks, he got a choice few of his colleagues to help him along.

Finally, the Rules Committee decided that it would have to get rid of Wohlwender, or tack to the woods, so it brought his old bill out and permitted it to go to a vote.

From that day to this Wohlwender has been a hero.

He is to be rewarded by being placed at the head of the big Judiciary Committee this year—in order, no doubt, to keep him so busy that he will forget all about pestiferous Rules Committees and things!

NEED AID IN FIGHT FOR BABIES' LIVES

The campaign for the reduction of infant mortality being waged by the Atlanta Mothers' Congress is making great progress, but more contributions must be had if the hundreds of needy babies in the city are to be supplied with the free milk which is most necessary. Statistics show that infant mortality is greatest during the heated months of July, August and September.

Atlanta has generous people who can spare the small amount which would mean life and health to a baby, which, without proper nourishment, is fighting a hopeless fight against disease and death. Many have contributed, but more money is urgently needed, and every day's delay in turning in your contribution means that much less chance of a life being saved.

The Mothers' Congress has already distributed milk tickets to a number of needy mothers, but there are many more who can not buy milk necessary to nourish their babies.

Think of the little children suffering from lack of the food that a few pennies will buy, and send in a contribution to-day. Mrs. John Rowlett, 186 Pine Street, will gladly take care of your contribution for you.

MOB INDICTMENTS NEAR AT AMERICUS

AMERICUS, July 2.—The Sumter County Grand Jury assembled in special session to investigate the recent lynching of William Redding, negro slayer of Chief of Police W. C. Barrow, has already examined more than 100 witnesses, while there are about 25 more, it is said, to be summoned before the Grand Jury's work is completed.

It is said an indictment will be brought against one member of the mob for braining the negro, Will Redding, with a crowbar, before he was strung up, this indictment to be for murder. A general indictment against numerous members of the mob for mob violence is expected, while it is rumored Sheriff Fuller will be indicted for neglect of duty in allowing the mob to enter the jail with little effort to prevent it.

HEAT ROUTS VETERANS AT BIG GETTYSBURG REUNION; HUNDREDS GO BACK HOME

GETTYSBURG, July 2.—Intense heat caused great discomfort among the thousands of veterans assembled here to-day. Cooler weather had been forecasted, but the prophecy failed of fulfillment and there was not enough breeze to stir any of the hundreds of flags that drooped listless over the battlefield.

The anniversary of the second day of the battle found hundreds gone home. They had left their comrades because nights under canvas and days under a broiling hot sun were threatening to undermine health and cut short the few years remaining.

The places of those who left were taken to-day by several train loads who arrived late last night and a delegation of Confederate veterans who arrived here from Houston, Texas, on their own train to-day.

Plan Relief Measures.

Preparations were made to surround the big meeting tent with physicians and nurses for emergency action in the ceremonies scheduled to begin at 2 o'clock this afternoon and continue through the hottest hours of the day. The addresses by Major John R. Brooke, of Pennsylvania, and Sergeant John C. Scarborough, of North Carolina, promised to attract as many veterans as could crowd under the auditorium tent.

General John C. Black will deliver the closing address of the day and Barry Bulkley will read Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

A reunion of survivors will be held this afternoon on Little Round Top, the scene of the hottest fighting on the second day of the battle. The members of General G. K. Warren Post, G. A. R., of Brooklyn, will meet the Confederates who lived through the terrible charges up the face of the hill.

Will Find Stone Walls.

They will find the old stone wall defenses thrown up by the Federal soldiers as a shelter from the grilling fire of the Confederates still standing. A stone marks the point where the Confederates made their greatest inroads on the Union lines and where a little knot of yelling, fearless Southerners broke completely through the Blue's line and reached within 50 feet of the top of the hill.

The Blue and the Gray went across the fields to-day to Bloody Angle, where the Philadelphians sustained the brunt of Pickett's famous charge.

Veteran Drops Dead in Gettysburg.

GETTYSBURG, PA., July 2.—Landis L. Glavis, 68 years old, of West Moor, Pa., dropped dead here to-day in front of the Gettysburg Hotel. A crowd of veterans was in front of the hotel when the incident occurred and some excitement was created, the body lying in the street until the Coroner could be found. Glavis was a member of the Cunningham Post, 97, G. A. R.

Bank Cashiers Are Figuring Interest Under New Ruling

Cashiers of the Atlanta banks which carry Government deposits are busy figuring out just how much money they must remit to Uncle Sam under the new rule which requires 2 per cent interest on the average monthly balance of such funds, to be paid January 1 and July 1.

The rule went into effect by order of William McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, June 30. One month's interest had to be paid on July 1. One month's interest at 2 per cent per annum is one-sixth of 1 per cent.

Under the former construction the interest due to Uncle Sam Tuesday was about $2,500, according to the last published statement of the national banks.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Statistics relative to the automobile industry of the United States in 1909, to be issued by the Bureau of the Census to-morrow, will show that complete cars, parts and bodies to the value of $249,202,075 were manufactured in that year. The number of complete cars turned out was 126,593.

Michigan was the leading State in automobile manufacture in 1909, according to the report, turning out 38.8 per cent of the total value manufactured. Indiana and Ohio ranked second and third.

Kills Child Trying to Learn to Drive Auto

MACON, July 2.—Nine-year-old Mamie Helen Opry, daughter of E. H. Opry, a wealthy stableman, was run over and killed by an automobile driven by S. A. Crump, Jr., son of a prominent Macon attorney. The tragedy occurred on the Milledgeville road, while the young man was learning to run the machine.

Acquittal Predicted For Girl Strike Chief

PATERSON, N. J., July 2.—Miss Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, young, pretty and petite, dressed in a dainty white frock, was pictured as a violent agitator and a leader of mobs when the prosecutor summed up for the State to-day in the trial of Miss Flynn, charged with inciting riot in the silk mills strike.

Miss Flynn and her counsel predicted acquittal before midnight.

Specialists To See Man Who Lost Voice

Specialists at Grady Hospital Wednesday morning will examine James Lowe, the man who was arrested by the police Saturday morning and has not been able to speak since.

Just an hour before he was arrested on Whitehall Street because he was acting strangely, a policeman avers he saw him speaking to someone at the corner of Whitehall and Brotherton Streets. All efforts of the police to get him to talk some have failed.

Accuses Sheriff of 'Padding' His Bills

PENSACOLA, July 2.—The clerk of the Board of County Commissioners has made a sensational charge against the Sheriff of this county that he is receiving money from the county for "imaginary" services. He refused to sign a warrant for a bill rendered for servant hire at the jail. A heated argument between the clerk and the chief deputy sheriff followed. The matter will be taken into the courts.

Pensacola Election Fraud Probe Begins

PENSACOLA, July 2.—County Solicitor Loftin, to whom charges of fraud in the recent election of City Commissioners have been made, announces he will begin a probe to-morrow. He has summoned eleven witnesses, including two of the city's most prominent ministers.

The matter also has been reported to the Governor, and startling developments are expected.

Reward for Phone Girl's Assailant

ANNISTON, July 2.—The Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company to-day offered a reward of $250 for the apprehension of a negro who attacked Miss Belle Kirkpatrick, operator at Piedmont, Monday afternoon, gagging and robbing her of the day's telephone tolls.

The negro is said to have been seen near Rome, Ga.

LOSS OF GEORGIA FARM STATION IMMINENT

State, for Alleged Breach of Regulations, May Lose $30,000 Appropriation.

Georgia is in imminent danger of losing its State Experiment Station. Reliable information from Washington is to the effect that the Department of Agriculture is concerned over the question as to whether the annual appropriation of $30,000 to Georgia should be continued.

A knowledge of this situation has been in the hands of State officials at the Capitol during the past few days and it can be stated that there is some concern at this end of the line.

The rupture between the State of Georgia and the Office of Experiment Stations is an old story, which, however, is just reaching a climax. When the board of tructees of the Experiment Station meets in a few days, something is likely to be ak, as it is stated that a representative of the Office of Experiment Stations at Washington will appear before the board with an ultimatum.

Inefficiency Charge Expected.

It appears that the charges which the Office of Experiment Stations have made are to the effect that the station has been lacking in efficiency and has made questionable use of the funds appropriated by the Federal Government.

No shortage of accounts is alleged, but certain regulations as to how the appropriation must be used and what must be done with the proceeds of the experiment station farm, as provided in the Hatch and Adams acts, have been violated repeatedly and without respect to warnings of the department at Washington, according to report.

Last summer fire destroyed buildings at the Experiment Station, and about $11,000 of surplus or income from the Experiment Station was used to replace these buildings.

Considered Last Straw.

This seems to have been considered by the department at Washington as the last straw. All of this sum, it is claimed, has been spent for purposes that are contrary to the Federal law. The United States Department of Agriculture claims that according to the various experiment station appropriation acts that the Federal Government funds can be used only in carrying on experimental work, the supposition being that the State would furnish the buildings and the equipment. It seems that Georgia has not appropriated anything for this purpose for about 22 years.

In view of what has transpired, it seems that the present attitude of the Department of Agriculture is to insist upon a very lite al interpretation of the laws in the future use of Federal appropriations and to recommend suspension of such appropriations if the laws are not complied with.

Climax Due on July 9.

The query around the Capitol, among those who have a knowledge of the matter, is as to how far the literalness of the law, as the department at Washington may interpret it, may apply and what legislation the situation may call for, if any.

Probably not until the board of trustees of the station meets on July 9 will the proposition be clead up.

SALESMAN BANKRUPT.

Francis B. Arrington, a salesman, Wednesday filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, giving his liabilities as $652.39, with no assets.

CITY HALL FIGHT HAS POLITICAL AFTERMATH

Thomson-Donaldson Bout Is Expected to Clear Outlook as to County Improvements.

The fight in the City Hall between Captain T. J. Donaldson, County Superintendent of Construction, and Councilman Albert Thomson, of the Fourth Ward, promises some important political developments.

The trouble grew out of delay in the work of building the Highland Avenue and Butler Street sewer. Councilman Thomson had intimated in an interview that Captain Donaldson was not following instructions of the County Commission.

Citizens in various sections of the city and county are worried over delays in improvements, and they hope this affair will aid in clearing up county politics, that they may know what to expect.

Calls Thomson Outside.

At the meeting of the Council Sewer Committee and Bond Commission Tuesday afternoon Captain Donaldson said he would like to speak to Councilman Thomson in the hall. Outside he demanded authority for the interview.

Councilman Thomson had begun explaining, when Captain Donaldson struck him a glancing blow on the left side of the cheek, knocking off his glasses and shattering them against the marble floor.

Councilman Thomson countered with a forceful blow to the face. Then he grabbed the arms of Captain Donaldson.

It was but a matter of a second before County Commissioner S. B. Turman and others wrenched them apart. Mayor Woodward and a large number of officials and citizens were witnesses to the affair.

Denies Integrity Charge.

Councilman Thomson said the interview with him virtually was correct, but that Captain Donaldson had misunderstood it if he interpreted any reflection on his integrity.

"I am sorry I struck back, for I believe our differences could have been amicably settled," he said.

Captain Donaldson said he had no statement to make.

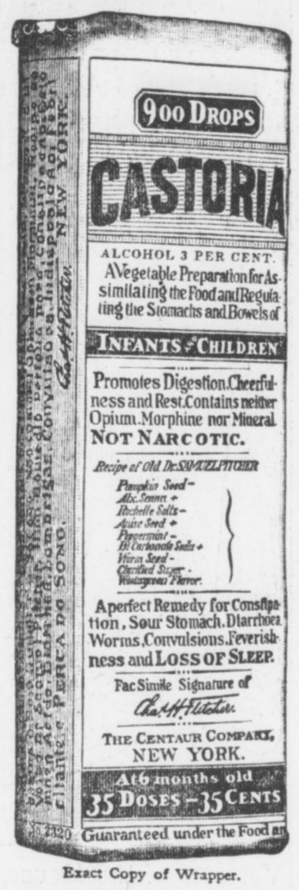

The men talked over the shoulders of the peacemakers several minutes, but no apologies were offered.

Prefers Death to Living on a Farm

EAST ORANGE, N. J., July 2.—Life on a farm did not appeal to Mrs. Max Walther, of this city, who left a note to her husband in which she declared she would rather die than go to Wisconsin.

Walther, who had bought a farm in the Western State, set out alone.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Letters from Prominent Druggists addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

S. J. Briggs & Co., of Providence, R. I., say: "We have sold Fletcher's Castoria in our three stores for the past twenty years and consider it one of the best preparations on the market."

E. W. Stucky, of Indianapolis, Ind., says: "To say that we have recommended and sold your Castoria for years is the best endorsement we can possibly give any preparation. It is surely full of merit and worthy of recommendation."

Henry R. Gray, of Montreal, Que., says: "I would say that your Castoria for children is in large demand and that it gives general satisfaction. Not being a secret nostrum many medical men order it when circumstances indicate the use of such a preparation."

W. G. Marshall, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "We have found your Castoria to be not only one of the best sellers in the medicine market, but a preparation that gives almost universal satisfaction; in fact we cannot recall having had a single complaint from any of our customers who have used it."

Owens & Minor Drug Co., of Richmond, Va., says: "It is with pleasure that we lend our endorsement to Castoria, a preparation of proven merit. During our long experience in the drug business we have had abundant occasion to note the popularity of the genuine Fletcher's Castoria, which we unhesitatingly recommend."

Brannen & Anthony of Atlanta, Ga., say: "No doubt if we were called upon to state positively what medicine we had sold for the greatest length of time, the greatest number of bottles sold, and the most satisfactory preparation to us and also to the customer, we feel that we could safely and conscientiously say Fletcher's Castoria."

TWO MADEROS ATTACKED AT SAN ANTONIO

Brothers of Slain President, Plotting New Mexican Revolt, Are Assaulted in Resort.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, July 2.—Police records to-day contain the names of Raoul and Julio Madero, victims of a murderous assault in a resort here Monday night. Julio Madero was said to be dying from a fractured skull, and Raoul Madero is in a serious condition. The police say the two have been identified as brothers of the slain President of Mexico, Francisco I. Madero, Jr.

Four men, supposed to be employed by the Huerta Government, attacked the brothers, who had arrived here to cross the line and join the latest revolution in Northern Mexico. The police said they had obtained evidence that the Maderos had spent the last three months assembling arms and ammunition and were preparing to move it across the border to aid General Carranza.

The four men are said to have been shadowing the Maderos for several weeks and recently followed them to New Orleans and back here. The four men started a quarrel with the brothers, which ended in a fight.

Minister Refuses To Wed Divorcees

JEFFERSONVILLE, IND., July 2. The Rev. A. Q. Bailey, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church here, who performs many marriage ceremonies for eloping couples, to-day announced that he would wed only couples who could prove:

That both had been baptized.

That neither has a divorced husband or wife living.

That each is provided with a health certificate.

FIRST BLOCK FOR WHITES ONLY DESIGNATED

Building Inspector Acts on Owners' Petition Under New Segregation Ordinance.

The first "white block" was officially designated under the new Ashley segregation ordinance Tuesday. It is that on Houston Street between Jackson Street and Boulevard, and has been designated by Building Inspector Ed R. Hays, whose duty it is to inspect petitions of property owners and pass them along to the chairman of the Police Board, who in turn has instructions issued to policemen through Chief Beavers.

The Houston Street petition set forth that over one-half of the frontage in the aforementioned block belongs to white people. It was signed by A. H. Neeson, George F. Glazener, Allen Rice, J. H. Ewing, executor; S. A. Swain, Mrs. O. S. Payne, by Raymond Robson; Mrs. M. J. VanDyke, by Forrest and George Adair, A. P. Herrington and August Denk.

Once declared "white" or "black," no blocks can be changed, and therein, says Mr. Hays, lies the importance of determining at once the character of blocks. All blocks, whether now occupied by negroes, should be put on record for future protection, since otherwise they can be invaded. Under the ordinance it is impossible to make either whites or negroes move out of any block they now occupy, but after they once move out, they can't move back again.

Old-Timers Meet To Form Society

Old-timers will gather at Grant Park Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock when the "old country society" will be formed by C. H. Burge. There will be ash cake and hominy and lots of old-time talk. Each old-timer attending is requested to bring along his old gourd, powder horn, or any other favorite article of the days of long ago.

The lecturer, Dr. A. E. Law, will make an address, while several other old-timers are expected to also talk.

Begs Thief to Bring Back Rubber Plant

CHICAGO, July 2.—"Please bring back my rubber plant" was the sign nailed on the porch of a residence at 1510 Turnbull Avenue that attracted much attention.

The sign was Mrs. C. H. Quirk's way of trying to get a thief to bring back a 15-year-old rubber plant which was stolen from the porch.

"The plant was a keepsake which my husband bought before he died," Mrs. Quirk said.

TEST IS ORDERED OF CITY PARK ICE CREAM

President Cochran Says Aldermen Have Complained Refreshments Are Unfit to Eat.

President J. O. Cochran, of the City Park Board, declared Wednesday that a rigid test of the ice cream and soft drinks sold in the city parks would be made immediately.

"An Alderman told me that the ice cream sold there was not fit to eat; and he said I could use his name in an investigation," explained Mr. Cochran. "A Councilman told me that his wife ate ice cream at Piedmont Park which made her ill.

"Because of the thousands of little children who buy ice cream and drinks in the parks we must know positively whether they are pure. It has been arranged to have Dr. Claude A. Smith, city bacteriologist, to make an immediate test."

Follows Piano Inquiry.

President Cochran's decaration followed the monthly meeting of the Park Board when an investigation of electric pianos in the parks, the property of Charles L. Chosewood, Park Commissioner, was ordered. It was charged that Mr. Chosewood had put the pianos in the parks without the city's consent.

President Cochran decared at the meeting that waste water ran around the refreshment stand in Piedmont Park through insanitary ditches. He told of statements made to him by the Alderman and the Councilman and asked that all the activties of Concessionaire Chosewood be investigated.

After an appeal from James L. Key, attorney for Mr. Chosewood, the board decided it would not have a formal investigation of the ice cream and drinks, but a committee was appointed to investigate the elecertc pianos.

Save 26 Lives at Park.

Mr. Key said it would be unfair to Mr. Chosewood to order an investigation without any charges being submitted, for the effect would be to frighten the people.

President Cochran announced it would be just as effective an investigation as though ordered by the board.

Mr. Carey read a report showing that the life-savers at Piedmont Park had rescued 26 people from drowning this season. Mr. Carey said he had the statements of the people rescued to substantiate this report.

Finest Negro Tenor Arrives for Jubilee

All is in readiness for the opening of the Jubilee Music Festival at the Auditorium Thursday night. All the singers are here, the last to arrive being Roland Hayes, of Boston, reputed to be the finest tenor the negro race has produced.

The last rehearsal of the big chorus takes place Wednesday night, when the final touches of the historic pageant play will be put on. Anita Patti Brown, of Chicago, takes the leading role in the play.

There will be three big features to the festival, the pageant Thursday night, the matinee of negro music Friday afternoon and the grand concert Friday night. The Fisk Jubilee Singers and a chorus of 250 will sing at every performance.

$4,494,000 Yerkes Bonds Worthless

NEW YORK, July 2.—Lawyers interested in the estates of Charles T. Yerkes and his wife, Mrs. Adelaide Yerkes, are of the opinion the estate may be insolvent as the result of a decision just handed down in Chicago by Chief Justice Harry Olson in the Municipal Court, who holds the $6,750,000 bond issue of the Consolidated Traction Company, of Chicago, is worthless.

Charles T. Yerkes, who made this issue, held $4,494,000 of the bonds. After his death the bonds were purchased from his estate at 30 cents on the dollar.

NEW YORK, July 2.—A verdict of $5'000 was obtained by Herman Schwartz, of this city, against David B. Blustein, a druggist, who, it is alleged, made an error in filling a prescription for an eye wash which cost Schwartz the sight of one eye.

ATLANTA GIRLS DENY SOUTHERN SWAINS OFFER 'CHIVALRY' ALONE

Score Tennessee Maid's Claim Northern Men Show Fair Ones Much Better Time.

Atlanta girls arose en masse Tuesday to deny the assertion of Miss Lillian Kyle Jones, of Knoxville, Tenn., that "chivalry is about the only thing with which the Southern man favors a girl."

"The idea! Why, of course, it's not true," they declared.

"Can't Live on Chivalry."

"You know," she further averred "chivalry is a very nice thing to have around the house, but you can't live on that."

Following this statement, Miss Jones expressed a high regard for the Northern men, especially those who hail from New York town.

Among the defenders of the Southern men is Miss Lucy Roberts, one of the prettiest of the younger society girls of Atlanta. Miss Roberts has just returned from finishing school at Washington.

Sees More Comradely Spirit.

"Of course, I like Northern men," she says, "but I think the Southern men are far more entertaining. Then, too, they treat a girl with a more comradely spirit and with a courtesy that you find only in the South."

Miss Dottie Cowles, another popular member of Atlanta's younger set, laughs at Miss Jones' statement.

"The idea," she exclaimed, when shown a clipping of the story. "Why, our Southern men not only have better manners, but they also are lots nicer to a girl than the Northern men.

"Perfectly Grand Time."

"You can't tell me that chivalry is all they give a girl. The Southern boys show you a perfectly grand time, and they are lots sweeter about it, too. I'll admit that the small Southern cities do not afford the opportunities for taking the girls about that New York does, but a Southern girl visiting in New York is shown a much better time by the Southern men there than by the New York men.

"All the nice men may not live in the South, but most of them do."

BARROW COUNTY PLANNERS FEAR PLOT BREWS

Is the proposed new county of Barrow, to be fashioned from slices of Walton, Gwinnett and Jackson, foredoomed to failure in the Senate because of an already hostile Committee on Constitutional Amendments?

That is what some of the boosters and boomers of Barrow are suspicious of, and they are expressing themselves accordingly.

One gentleman who has the proposed new county very much at heart, and who has been a persistent advocate of it for five or six years, has checked up the Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee, and gives it as his deliberate opinion that it is dead against Barrow in its majority make-up, and that Barrow may as well make up its mind to go to the floor of the Senate, if it ever gets through.

Powerful Influences at Work.

It is very well known that there are some potent and powerful influences at work against Barrow, and it is the impression of the Barrow boomers that the fight against this new county, which is agreed to have a fine outlook for success in the House, will be centered in the Senate, and they are shaping their plans to meet it there.

Last year this new county was passed in the Senate, but went to wreck in the House, and this year the program for its annihilation seems to have been reversed. At least, that is what the Barrow people are saying.

The Speaker of the last House, John N. Holder, is known to have been active against Barrow, and his part in the defeat of the county last year figured more or less strenuously in the campaign he then was making for Congress. The former Speaker, who has been in Atlanta of late, makes no secret of his hostility to Barrow County, and it is known that he is aggressively fighting the proposition.

Bitter Fight Not Unlikely.

Whether there is any real foundation for the suspicion in the minds of the Barrow boomers that the Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee already is loaded for their proposition is, of course, problematical, but they are openly voicing the suspicion, nevertheless.

It is believed, however, that even in the event of an adverse majority report from the Senate Committee on Constitutional Amendments, a minority report favoring the new county will be brought out, and the fight carried directly to the floor on the issue thus made within the committee.

If things fall out that way, one of the biggest, bitterest and most spectacular fights of the entire session is sure to follow.

After enjoying swimming the party was tendered a buffet supper at the home of Miss Peabody. Dancing followed. Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Adair, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Peabody, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gregg, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Adair, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Greene and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Walker chaperoned the party.

Guests were Misses Mary Stewart, Jessie Thompson, Mary Bowen, Mamie Kirkpatrick, Virginia Lipscomb, Evelyn Roane, Harriet Broyles, Thornton Clarke, Frances Wilkes, Grace Bloodworth; Messrs. John Stewart, Howard McCall, Jr., Douglas Mangum, William Campbell, Joel Hurt, Jr., Merritt Pope, Sam DuBose, John Peabody, John Goldthwaite, George Walker, Rhodes Haverty, Reuben Tidwell, Mark Cauble, James Roane, Fred Moore, Cuyler Montagne, Max Rahmer, Ward Wright, Vernon Stiles, Barnard Boykin, Frank Stephens, Cliff Bagsdale, Loomis Grant, John Mangum, Sam Mangum, Thomas Williams, Marion Seabrook, William Treadway, William Franklin, Harry Reese, Rockwell.

Dinner-Dance at Driving Club.

Reservations already are being made for the informal dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving Club Saturday evening. Dinner at 7:30 o'clock will be followed by dancing. Each Saturday many visitors are entertained at these dinner-dances, which form a very delightful part of the season's entertaining.

For Miss Lewis.

Chamber of Commerce Banquet.

Allen-Alexander.

The marriage of Miss Carrie Alexander and Mr. P. B. Allen, of Asheville, will take place Wednesday evening at 9 o'clock at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. James H. Alexander, 148 Juniper Street. Misses Eloise and Lucile Alexander, the bride's sisters, will be bridesmaids. Little Eloise Gaines will be flower girl. A reception will follow the ceremony.

Dr. and Mrs. Lewis Gaines entertained the bridal party at a buffet supper Tuesday evening at their home in Ansley Park, following a rehearsal for the wedding.

Festival at St. Mark Church.

The Young People's Missionary Society No. 2, Stil Mark Church, will give an ice cream festival Monday evening on the lawn of the church from 5 to 7 o'clock. Home-made ices, cakes, candies, etc., will be sold. Miss Annie Winship Bates is president of the society.

Williams-Lewis.

Miss Minnie Lewis and Mr. George Lewis were married Saturday at the home of the Rev. A. L. Flury. Mr. and Mrs. Williams are living at Kennedy and Strong Streets.

Segars-Horton.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Segars announce the marriage of their daughter, Dair, to Mr. Walker Horton on June 28, at the home of Rev. Mr. Flury, 54 Neal Street. Mr. and Mrs. Horton are at home to friends at 90 Newport.

Miss Andrews Hostess.

Miss Sadie Andrews gave a small tea Wednesday afternoon at her home in Peachtree Circle, in honor of her sister, Mrs. V. J. Adams, who leaves July 8 to make her home in Knoxville. The party suggested the Fourth of July, the decorations in the dining room being red and white roses in a large basket the handle tied with bows of blue tulle. Red, white and blue miniature guns filled with bonbons adorned the table and were given as souvenirs to the guests.

Frozen punch was served on the porch by Misses Mary Andrews, Annie Winship Bates and Sarah Eubanks.

Miss Flemister's House Party.

Miss Mary Frances Bowden left Monday for Tunnel Hill, Ga., where she went to attend a house party that Miss Frances Flemister will give. The other guests, who are Miss Agnes Bell, and Messrs. Julian Jackson, William Close and Leslie Law, of Atlanta, will join Miss Flemister and Miss Bowden next Monday and the party will spend several weeks in Tunnel Hill.

Independence Day Celebration.

Every member of the Atlanta Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, is urged to participate in a joint observance by all local chapters of the Fourth of July, at St. Philip's Cathedral, Friday morning at 10:30. A large attendance will indicate the sentiment of the Daughters for a sane celebration. Mrs. James Osgood Wynn is regent of this chapter.

NO HYPOCRISY IN PRISON, WRITES HAWTHORNE

Says Convicts Differ From Outsiders Therein—Do Their 'Bit' as Warning, He Asserts.

Julian Hawthorne, register 4435 at the Federal Penitentiary, in an article on penal systems in the current issue of "Good Words," the Federal prison publication, declares that the chief difference between the men inside the walls and those outside is that those wearing the convict clothes have been stripped of all their hypocrisy.

The convict is the scapegoat for the world, the distinguished writer maintains, and is "doing his bit vicariously," that the remainder of men may be warned.

Hawthorne says in part:

"The chief difference between us here and those outside is, that our hypocritical masks have been stripped from us; we have confessed our sins practically and effectively, instead of merely by a conventional form of words. There is not a pew-holder in church, of a Sunday morning, but stands up and admits himself a 'miserable sinner;' but if is left to us alone to have our sins entered on the jail record, and to wear actual (not metaphorical) sackcloth; there is no make-believe about us. We confess day by day and hour by hour that we are 'desperately wicked and there is no health in us;' and we do not afterward parade on the avenue in gala attire, and, when Monday comes round, cheerfully return to our business and our sins; but we continue to work out our salvation, or at least our sentences, in the stone-yard or the clothing shop, and to line up for the count under the eyes of the guards. No make-believe whatever!

"That is the chief difference between the man in jail and the man in his Sunday pew outside."

Church Cornerstone To Be Laid by Masons

Cornerstone of the new Gordon Street Presbyterian Church will be laid at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon under Masonic honors. Battle Hill Lodge No. 523, A. F. and A. M., will be in charge.

The Rev. D. H. Ogden, the Rev. A. A. Little, the Rev. F. D. Hunt, the Rev. W. J. Sechrest and the Rev. T. P. Cleveland will participate in the exercises.

A Bible record of the church and minutes of the Presbytery containing the union of the old Gordon and Wallace Churches also will be placed in the stone. The Rev. Arnold Hall, of Mayesville, S. C., has accepted a call to the pastorate and will take charge in August.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

The general impression among Legislators is that both President Anderson and Speaker Burwell acquitted themselves very well in the distribution of the committee assignments in the Senate and the House.

The matter of appointing committees in the Senate and House not only is a problem of perplexing ramifications, but takes much of the time and most astute analytical ability of the presiding officers in getting things adjusted.

Both the President and the Speaker broke all records in getting their committees framed up and published within a week. The rule heretofore has been ten days or more.

There are some members of the Senate who are dissatisfied with the committee assigements, however, and particularly is this so among the advocates of many of the various new counties proposed.

It is pointed out by some of these persons that, while the House Committee on Constitutional Amendments is composed of members who have taker no stand one way or the other in the creation of new counties, the Senate committee has on it several members who are openly against the creation of any new counties.

The Constitutional Amendment Committees will settle the fate of the new counties, and it, therefore, may readily be seen how this dissatisfaction arises.

It is evident that the present Legislature is to be on of thoroughly businesslike qualities.

The Hon. "Bart" Cox, "boss of Gilmer County," is in Atlanta. Mr. Cox, while not the least bit popular with those who do not admire his style of political beauty, is mighty popular among the members of the Legislature, not a few of whom know him very well.

He says he is not down here trying to put anything over in particular, but that he is a free citizen of grand old Gilmer, and he feels it his duty to look in on the Legislature and see hiw his Representatives are behaving themselves.

If they behave to suit him, all right; if not, they may hear from him the next time election day comes around.

And when the Honorable "Bart" is heard from there generally is some noise.

If John M. Slaton finds ample time nowadays to attend to the business of governing Georgia, he is a wonder—which some folks say he is, of course.

His offices are thronged with visitors every day, and those with real business are far outnumbered by those who simply wish to pay their respects to His Excellency.

Governor Slaton is one of the most genuinely popular men who ever occupied the Executive office in Georgia, and his friends are so used to walking in on him, any old time, any old place, any old fashion, that they evidently find it hard to realize that he is, at last, Governor, and that being Governor means being pretty busy most of the time.

The Governor has a hearty handshake and a pleasant word for all who do the honor to call, however, and so if he can shake hands as many times as he does and get away with the governing business, too, why—well, that his style, that's all.

Hon. W. A. Dodd, of Taylorsville, who represents Bartow County in the House, is one of the most practical men in the Legislature. There are no frills on him whatever. He is a plain farmer, who takes the business of farming no less seriously than he takes the business of being a member of the General Assembly.

He is sure to be a very useful member. He has made a success of farming, and he likely will make a success of legislating.

When the House adjourns Thursday it will adjourn to meet again on the following Monday morning at 11 o'clock, thus cutting out the Fourth of July and the Saturday following.

This, however, will result in no material loss of time, as the committees already have in hand more than sufficient business to keep them busy until long after the House catches up next week.

A great many members of the Legislature have been invited to participate in Fourth of July festivities here and there, and if the House did not adjourn it is doubtful whether a quorum would be present either on the Fourth or Saturday.

Before sailing for his diplomatic post in Switzerland on July 29, former Representative Pleasant A. Stovall of Chatham, will drop in on the Legislature and bid his many friends there good-by.

Mr. Stovall was elected a member of the present House, but resigned when named Minister to Switzerland.

SLATONS HOSTS TO LEGISLATORS

Preparations for the reception to the General Assembly of Georgia at 8 o'clock Wednesday night by Governor and Mrs. John Marshall Slaton are complete. The grounds of the executive mansion were turned over to the florists and decorators, and a veritable fairyland has resulted.

Governor and Mrs. Slaton will receive the guests from a Japanese pergola which has been built on the lawn. Standing with them will be President of the Senate Randolph Anderson, with Mrs. Anderson, and Speaker W. H. Burwell with Mrs. Burwell.

Captain Cochran, of the Fifth Regiment, Georgia National Guards, has tendered the services of the Fifth Regiment Band. Additional music will be furnished by the United States Band from Fort McPherson, by courtesy of General Evans, Commander-in-Chief of the Department of the Gulf.

Steals 1,000 Hearts; Jailed for the 1,001st

CHICAGO, July 2.—The love dream of Mrs. Martha Loewsky, Hoboken, N. J., and Bodo L. R. Ronnefeld, New York newspaper man, was rudely shattered here to-day. The couple in separate cells awaited the arrival of papers that would send them back East.

Mrs. Loewsky left a husband in Hoboken. Just before arriving here she remembered that July 1 was rent day. She felt sorry for her husband and sent him $50 to pay the rent.

Ronnefeld proudly wears the scars of seventeen duels. He admitted he had broken 1,000 hearts.

COUNTY GIVES AID TO YANCEY FAMILY

The County Board of Commissioners Tuesday morning voted unanimously to pay Mrs. Yancey $50 a month for six months, in recognition of the services of her husband, the late court deputy, David Yancey, and of the destitute circumstances in which the family was placed by his death.

This action was taken after the Grand Jury appeared in a body before the board and requested that something be done for the relief of the family.

Marion Jackson and John J. Eagan, representing the Men and Religion Forward Movement and the Atlanta Evangelical Association, appeared before the commissioners to protest against the resolution offered by Captain Thomas J. Donaldson, providing for the appointment of a chaplain for each convict camp in the county, with only one assistant. The board referred the matter to the Public Works Committee.

Dogs and the Tango Alike Are Outlawed By City Park Board

Dogs and the tango, turkey trot and the bunny hug have been placed in the same category by the Atlanta Park Board, and none of them will hereafter be permitted to roam at large in any of the city parks.

Orders forbidding the dancing of the turkey trot and its kin in all the parks, forbidding dogs the privilege of Grant Park, and the privileges of Piedmont Park unless held in leash, were promulgated.

"The private dancing parties," declared Mr. Cochran's motion, "have abused the privileges given them at the parks, and we have had many complaints about the way they dance."

JURY DEMANDS CLOSING OF ALL POOLROOMS

Characterizing automobile traffic on Peachtree Road as "heavy and dangerous," the report of the Grand Jury, made public Wednesday afternoon, recommends that the County Board of Commissioners take steps to safeguard the lives of pedestrians on the road between the city limits and Buckhead.

After calling attention to the frequency of accidents, the report says:

"We recommend that the County Commissioners take steps to arrange with abutting property owners for the construction of sidewalks on this stretch of Peachtree Road, which we believe will prevent many accidents in the future."

Other important portions of the report follow:

Recommendation is made that women convicted of immoral practices be sent to the farm instead of being given the punishment usually imposed.

Representatives of Fulton County in the State Legislature are urged to support a bill establishing municipal courts and abolishing justice courts.

Public poolrooms of the city are declared to be breeding places for vice and crime, and it is recommended that all licenses for public poolrooms be not renewed.

The Corn Club movement is indorsed and its continuance is urged.

City Seizes Plants To End Ice Famine

CINCINNATI, OHIO, July 2.—The Board of Health at noon to-day ordered the health officers of the city to seize and operate all ice plants in the city and use every means possible to distribute the product.

This action came after Mayor Hunt had sent a communication to the board stating that a public emergency exists as a result of the deadlock in the ice deliverymen's strike.

THOMPSON NAMED U. S. MARSHA.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—The President to-day nominated Howard Thompson, of Gainesville, to be United States Marshal for the Northern District of Georgia.

Militants Feared At Henley Regatta

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, ENG., July 2.—Fifty extra guards were employed to-day to guard the course of the Henley regatta from militant suffragettes.

The situation here resembles a siege with the Thames policed on both sides. It was reported to the authorities that the suffragettes had planned to stretch a cord across the water in front of the racing crews.

NEW AMERICUS CHIEF NAMED.

AMERICUS, July 2.—Lieutenant Olin Johnson, of the Americus police force, has been chosen to succeed Chief W. C. Barrow, slain by William Redding, a negro.

John Bragg was chosen lieutenant in place of oJhnson, and Pat Murphy was made a patrolman.

Dr. Stelzle Church Efficiency Engineer

NEW YORK, July 2.—The Rev. Charles Stelzle, who founded the Labor Temple, has resigned from social service work as a Presbyterian to become a consulting sociologist on an undenominational basis. It is his expressed intention to become the pioneer church efficiency expert.

Mr. Stelzle became a preacher after twelve years' service in a machine shop. He had charge of the social features of the Forward Movement of last year and has served as arbitrator in industrial disputes.

402-Pound Man Dies; Widow Weighs 300

AUGUSTA, July 2.—Augusta's largest man, John ("Baby") Adams, weighing 402 pounds, died at the city hospital after an illness of more than a year. Adams was 35 years of age and was married, his wife being only 100 pounds lighter than himself. He was a street car motorman and ran regularly until he became sick.

A specially constructed casket was required to inter his body, although he had fallen off considerably in weight during his illness. He was only five feet ten inches tall.

If your list includes all these articles, your savings will be so much the greater. We have done some effective work with that wondreful weapon, the blue pencil.

Reductions on Thermos and Vacuum Bottles average half—they are even greater on the cases for these bottles. On candle shades and gas burners the new prices are so small that we can hardly reckon on the reductions, but that part of the price that is left, sometimes it is a third, oftener it is a fourth and again it is even less.

On all sides the new prices are convincing! And the articles included are of general interest—there will be a crowd.

The comfort and convenience that come of owning a Thermos Bottle may be yours at little cost to-morrow.

The dainty and decorative little candle shades that add a charm to the richest dining table may be yours at little cost to-morrow.

Summer Cottons at Savings

Here are sheer and dainty dotted Swisses at, below or near half; here are Anderson's Scotch ginghams at 15c, instead of 25c and 29c; here are flaxons, lawns, crepes, voiles at various and healthy savings.

All point to the fact that now and here are the time and place to select the choicest and coolest summer dresses.

And note, too, the half-price sale of laces scheduled for to-day—the whole dress at a saving. An epitome of the savings—

25c Dotted Swisses, 27 inches wide	15c

THE GHOST BREAKER

By G. W. GODDARD and PAUL DICKEY

Adapted From the Big Broadway Success That Thrilled Thousands of New Yorkers

SERIALIZED

By J. W. McCONAUGHY

(Copyright, 1913, by Star Co.)

IN all the thousands of square feet of steep slate roof there is one loose nail. It thrusts its head up in that one-inch strip where it can catch and hold the bootheel of the steeplejack who is sliding to his death.

This grim, freakish humor of the Powers That Be, which is miscalled "coincidence," caused Warren Jarvis to mistake his right for his left hand as he was running for his life down a carpeted corridor of the Hotel Vanderlip far above the night roar of Broadway. Thus he turned, not into the room that led to the fire escape, but into the bed chamber of the Dona Maria Theresa of Segura, Princess of Aragon, who had a lot of other titles and innumerable privileges, none of which she needed at that moment nearly so much as she needed Warren Jarvis, fleeing the vengeance of the law.

Fevered and distraught the Princess had retired to rest, but not to sleep, an hour before. Her situation, the peril that menaced her, belonged to an age that lives to-day only in Scott and Froissart. Four or five centuries before her countryman Cervantes had slain with a laugh the type of man who would gladly have aided her, and would have seen nothing ridiculous about it. Her ancestral home, the ancient castle of the Seguras, was given over to bats and owls by night and crows by day.

Hidden somewhere among the deadly pitfalls and secret passages of the castle was a treasure of a million dollars in gold. It was guarded by a ghost, a true specter that men had scoffed at and braved—and then had promptly disappeared.

Now it was no longer scoffed at or braved. But she had just received a cable dispatch telling her that her brother had entered the castle and around her neck hung the solution to the hiding place of the treasure, the little chart found that day after a weary search.

A Duke's Offer.

It was a tale to tell a knight of Arthur's table, not to a Castilian dandy of the twentieth century, soft-handed and sophisticated. Her kinsman, the Duke of Alva, indeed, had offered to be her champion, but he bargained in advance, and the guerdon he asked was her hand. And, besides, lately she had had cause to distrust deeply the honor and honesty of her kinsman of Alva.

Dona Maria had never read the lines of Mr. Kipling's "Romance Is Dead!"—and all unseen, romance brought on the nine-fifteen, or she might have had more faith in a power still strong enough to run express trains. When the splendid, silly order of chivalry fell and died the winds of romance carried a few of the seeds across the seas to a broad and fertile valley and dropped them in the rich soil where the Ohio comes down to meet the Mississippi. There, as elsewhere, custom makes law, regardless of written statutes. And so it was that, following a custom that had grown from one of those seeds, as immutable as the Cumberland ridges, a young man in evening clothes, clean of heart, brave and good humored, with a 1912 model pistol gripped in his overcoat pocket, walked past Dona Maria's door in a New York hotel, seeking the head of the Markhams, to kill or be killed in a fair fight, for no other reason than that the man he sought was the head of the Markhams and had invited him to "shoot it out."

But Dona Maria did not know this. As simply as the distressed damosel of Arthur's time she prayed for help, and was sinking into the uncertain doze of the sorely troubled—when romance answered the prayer.

The silence of the cloistral corridor was blasted with a sharp double-crack—the reports of two pistols coming as closely together as you might snap the third and fourth fingers of your hand.

Dona Maria sat up with a start.

"Madre de Dios!" came a self-strangled scream from the maid's room. "What is it?"

There followed instantly a soft thudding of running feet and a hand violently shook her door. The Princess sprang up with a frightened cry, flung a dressing gown about her and switched on an alcove light. The brass slot in the door frame leaped out, a young man darted inside, closed and bolted the door, and stood crouched against it, panting. A pistol was clutched in his hand and a red trickle ran down and dripped off the barrel on to the red carpet.

The Hunt.

"Madre de Dios!" shrieked the maid again.

"Sh-h!" commanded the young man at the door in a stern whisper. "Keep quiet—don't make any noise!"

The first shock of the alarm past, the Princess stepped out into the dim light from the alcove, holding the dressing gown closely about her. She was a true daughter of romance, hot-blooded and courageous, with no more "nerves" than the mountains that guarded her castle home.

"What do you want?" she demanded, advancing upon the intruder.

For reply he waggled the pistol impatiently and pressed his ear more closely to the door. A confused sound of voices and a mighty running to and fro came from the hall.

"What's the bally row?"

"I heard him—he ran past my door!"

"Anybody killed?"

"What the ——'s loose now?"

"It was two shots—I heard 'em."

The coolness with which he ignored her presence and perfectly natural inquiries as to the cause of the intrusion banished what little trace of alarm was in the Princess' bosom and left only indignation.

"How dare you enter"——

"Sh—silence!" he interrupted, so sharply that she obeyed through sheer amazement. "Not a sound! Do you understand?"

Dona Maria opened her lips to blast him, to summon aid, but the hubbub without broke out anew and she listened. The steps and voices were passing the door.

"It was a pistol, I tell you."

"Well, where'd he go?"

"Look out on the fire escape, Jim!"

"No, he's on this floor."

"How could he get downstairs, you dunce!"

The hue and cry reached down the hall and the Princess swept down upon Mr. Jarvis, who finally straightened up and faced her.

A Man's Appeal.

"Now, what does this mean?" she demanded, grimly, in a swift glance taking account of the evening clothes and the trim, well set-up figure of the man who had wrenched the lock of a door out of its frame. But, though she was brave, she also took account of the pistol.

"Is it money you want?" she demanded, with a curl of her lip. She drew back against the bed. "Every cent I have is on the dressing table. Take it and go!"

The young man pushed his hat back and mopped his brow with the back of his hand.

She noticed that he was panting hard and was very much more agitated than she was. Even the pistol lost its terror.

"Well, then—what do you want?" she cried.

He was about to reply when the sound of the returning hunt reached his ears.

"Wait—wait!" he begged, swiftly. "They're coming here! They must not search this room—do you understand? You must put them off! For pity's sake," he pleaded, "you must put them off! I'm not what you think I am—I haven't done anything wrong—I'll explain afterward!" And he slipped behind the curtain of the alcove as there came an authoritative knock at the door and the maid ran into the room, crying "Madame, something dreadful has happened!"

Dona Maria silenced her. Her eyes were on the door, and she was thinking rapidly. According to those deeply versed in human affairs the truth has no particular accent of its own. But Dona Maria was not deeply versed in these matters—and she was a woman, with a woman's swift, subconscious reasoning. He had told the truth—he was a gentleman—he was hunted and in sore need of a friend, and so was she. A man would have considered only the fact of the shots, the pistol and the flight, and left it to a jury of men, a man-judge and man's law to sift out the rights of the case.

Bang—bang! A more violent assault on the door.

A Woman's Way.

The maid shivered, implored the Virgin to look out for her and turned a fearful questioning gaze on her mistress.

"Open it, Nita," was the quiet command. The maid moved gingerly up to the door and Dona Maria took a last quick glance at the curtains that hid the young man who fought with a pistol in a Broadway hotel, broke locks with his hands and had thrown himself on her mercy.

Nita opened the door part way and the house detective, a short, squat man about three feet thick, thrust himself in.

"You all right here?" he asked curtly.

"Si, senor," lisped Nita, timidly. The Princess came forward.

"What is it, Nita?" she asked with becoming dignity. The maid drew aside.

"My mistress," she bowed.

The detective half bowed. "Excuse me, madam," he said, with a slight abatement of his brusqueness. "I'm the house detective. You all right in here?"

For a bare instant Dona Maria hesitated. Then:

"Yes," she said.

"Sorry to bother you—looking for some one," apologized the detective, backing out. "Good night."

"Oh, madame," wailed the girl, after he had gone. "I am so frightened! What is it?—what is it?"

"Control yourself, Nita," the mistress reproved her. "Go to bed. I shall not need you until 6 o'clock."

Sniffling, but subdued, Nita returned to her bedroom and shut herself in. Jarvis emerged from the shelter of the alcove.

"Thank you," he said simply. "Would you mind bolting that door again?" The Princess stared at him, paralyzed by his assurance. With magnificent impudence, so it seemed to her, he did not understand why she did not obey. "He might return," he reminded her. And, undecided whether to laugh, cry or turn him over to the house detective, Princess Dona Maria of Aragon went and bolted the door.

As she turned back to him he pointed with his pistol to the door of the maid's room.

No Way Out.

"Is there no way out throught that door?" he asked.

She told him there was not.

"The fire escape—where is it?"

"In the hall opposite," replied Dona Maria, gazing at him in wonder and perplexity. She knew nothing about him, except that he was, unless appearances were very deceiving, a fugitive from justice. Yet he took it for granted that she was his ally. She was under 30 and considered one of the most beautiful women in Spain. Her kinsman of Alva, who had a discriminating taste in such matters, had made her beauty famous in five capitals, and those of his sex who had been fortunate enough to glimpse her, by accident, in the warmly colored and clinging gown of the boudoir that betrayed every exquisite line, declared that those who had seen Dona Maria only in the ballroom and at the dinner table would have to wait for the houris of Paradise to form some idea of her true loveliness. Yet she was certain that this young man could not have told at that moment if she had cross eyes and a hair lip. Indeed, if there had been any doubt about it his next utterance would have removed it.

"Across the hall? H——l!" he exclaimed, with energy. "I was certain that light was—oh, I beg pardon," he broke off suddenly, and was so boyishly embarrassed and contrite that Dona Maria was certain he had at last noticed the absence of the hair lip. But this did not mean forgiveness.

"Well, why don't you go?" she inquired, coldly.

His confusion increased. "But—but I can't go that way," he protested, waving the pistol hopelessly at the hall door. "They're waiting for me in the hall!"

"Well," the Princess gazed at him with an unusual iciness in her great dark eyes, "what do you expect me to do about it?"

Now this was a tactical blunder, for it summoned the young man's sense of the ridiculous to his aid—and he smiled. If he were not the hero of this narrative it would be a truthful recorder's duty to set down that he grinned. Dona Maria was piqued, but felt herself warm to a man who could smile—or grin—when a house full of police were looking for him. And then came the romantic thought that this was the type of man to be her champion. She surveyed him swiftly, but accurately.

A Modern Hero.

He was not the stuff that dream heroes are made of—at least not to look at, if his build were excepted. He was tall, with broad, slender shoulders and a certain lightness of step and frictionless ease of movement that explained the collapse of the brass lock, but his rumpled hair—he had just at that moment removed his opera hat and was nervously tapping his thigh with it—was a nondescript, plebeian sandy shade, and his good-humored face seemed to have borrowed some of the pigment of the hair. The nose was straight but generously flecked with freckles about the bridge. The mouth was liberally designed, and when he smiled—or grinned—showed rows of strong, white teeth. The eyes were of a kind of sandy gray, and, like Alan Breck's, had a sort of dancing madness in them.

It was a head that would have thrown a Gibson into convulsions, but a Holbein would have clapped a steel cap on it and made it immortal.

Dona Maria noted all of this, but took open note only of the smile—or grin.

"Is the situation so amusing?" she inquired, with increasing wintriness of tone and look.

He made a quick gesture of apology and was instantly serious.

"I'm not laughing at you—I beg your pardon. I blundered in here by mistake—but I'm in a tight place. I can't leave by that door. I must find some other way."

He threw open his overcoat as he spoke, and she saw the blood on his hand. This was the last needed touch. She was a woman.

"You're wounded!" she exclaimed, going to him and looking at the hand solicitously. "What's happened? Those shots I heard—"

He nodded and laughed silently. "I almost stopped one of the bullets. It just nudged me as it was going by."

"Your hand is bleeding dreadfully."

"Oh, not much," he assured her, and tried awkwardly to tie the wrist with his handkerchief, still holding the revolver. The Princess half raised her hands to assist him and drew back. He did not notice. He was gazing about the room with a troubled frown.

"I don't see how the devil——" he muttered, more to himself than to her, evidently trying to devise some means of escape. Dona Maria drew a little farther away.

"You have evidently shot some one and are trying to make me shield you from justice," she said sternly.

"No, not justice," he rejoined instantly, "from the law."

"I thought they were the same."

He shook his head gravely. "No, not always. There would be no justice for me at the hands of the law."

He looked into her eyes as he spoke, and for a few moments they stood thus in silence. The woman's eyes turned away first.

"That is not for me to decide," she declared.

"But I want you to decide," he urged gently. "At least, you must listen. And if you find me guilty I'll—well, I'll try the fire escape or anything—anything else you say."

The Princess raised her eyes to his and found them so full of earnest pleading that she dropped them once more.

"That is ridiculous," she said, but with such marked lack of conviction that he smiled.

"Hardly ridiculous," he objected; "when I'm arguing for my life."

Having fully made up her mind to listen, Dona Maria found another objection. Her eyes rested on the revolver.

"Can any decision be more unjust than mine," she asked coldly, "that must be made at the point of a pistol?"

He started, and flushed, and gazed down at his right hand. He had forgotten that he was still holding the revolver. Then he walked over to the dressing table and placed it within easy reach of her hand, and stood off some little distance, so that she was between him and the weapon.

"There is nothing to prevent your calling for help now," he said, hopelessly. "After all, it doesn't much matter whether the end comes now or to-morrow or the day after."

The Princess eyed him steadily until she was convinced that the despair was not a sham. There was no trace of the disarming smile.

His Explanation.

"The end?" she echoed, somewhat blankly. "Then why didn't you give yourself up?"

"That would have been the end," was the grim reply. Dona Maria's manner softened ever so slightly and she moved very slowly toward him. He correctly interpreted this as encouragement to proceed.

"Do you know what a feud is?" he asked abruptly. Her eyes opened wide and she pointed out in the general direction whence those shots had come.

"Feud!" sh exclaimed in a low voice. "Was that——?"

"Yes," he nodded. "That was the end of a feud. Do you know what a feud is?"

"Spain is the home of feuds," she replied, softly.

Jarvis started and his face lit with hope. "Spain!" he exclaimed. "Are you Spanish? Then you will understand! My grandmother was Spanish—one of the oldest families in Cuba. I was born in Kentucky, but they sent me East to be reared. I was called home suddenly by the death of my father—shot in a feud. They told me the ghastly history of our feud," he went on rapidly, his voice vibrant with emotion, "how our family had been assassinated, man after man, by the descendants of Daniel Markham. Then my father fell, leaving me—the last—to fight it out alone!"

He paused with a gulp and Dona Maria, leaning toward him, asked softly: "And your mother?"

"She has gone, too."

"She—she died?" The question was almost reverent.

"She died. God only knows what I've been through since then!"

He turned away and there was a little silence.

"But," said Dona Maria, as if gently arguing a point with an old friend, "why didn't you leave Kentucky?"

He jerked himself around impatiently.

"I did leave Kentucky—I was forced to leave!" he cried. "I had grown sick at heart and—and the odds were too great. I sent a negro servant to New York and followed soon after by another route; but it was no use. I was going to sail for Europe, longing for peace, but they wouldn't let me. Every move was watched! I had hardly been in New York five hours before I realized that the Markham clan was on my trail, eager to get me before I could get out of the country. They thought I was afraid, when I was only sick of it. A message reached me at my hotel—across the street—at 12 o'clock to-night. It was signed 'Jim Markham'—the head of the family—and proposed that as we were out of Kentucky we end the feud amicably. I knew the name, I knew what he meant, and I went to see him—prepared!"

Her Side of It.

He shrugged his shoulders half in resignation, half in despair.

"It was as I expected. He was stopping in this hotel—on this floor. I threw open the door of the room, unannounced. Nothing was said—we both fired." He looked down at his wounded hand, and his dramatic manner vanished.

"Now do you understand why the law would not give me justice?" he asked quietly.

The girl shuddered. "It's all so horrible," she murmured. "Did—did you kill him?"

Jarvis opened his hands and dropped them, limp.

"I don't know," he replied indifferently. "He dropped—I didn't wait."

He looked past, not at, her as he spoke. The lethargy, the mental and physical languor, that succeeds a terrible crisis was upon him—the time when a man feels that he is without strength, without friends, without hope.

The girl sensed the change in him and was surprised to feel a twinge of impatience.

"What are you going to do?" she asked crisply.

Jarvis shrugged his shoulders. "I don't know." The tone was dull and hopeless. "What's the use of going on? Do you know what it means," he went on bitterly, "to fight single-handed against fearful odds—to fight an endless fight alone?"

"Yes," she said, half audibly; "yes, I know."

"A barren, fruitless, hopeless fight—without even a single gleam of love or word of encouragement?"

"Yes," replied Dona Maria, slowly and with meaning, "I know what it means."

Jarvis stared at her. "You know?" he exclaimed, incredulously. "How could you know—how could any woman know?"

"Yes, I know," declared the Princess, somberly. "Because I, too, am fighting against fearful odds."

The young woman gazed at her in wonder that gave way to sympathy and more wonder as her loveliness came upon him.

"There is no man to fight for you?" he asked, betraying his thought in his question. Dona Maria understood.

"No man left who dares," she replied with bitterness.

As his gaze strayed from the soft, deep black eyes to the pile of soft black hair and down the curve of the soft, creamy cheek to the smooth red lips, he wondered, even in the depths of his misery, what manner of men she had about her.

"God!" he breathed, fervently, "if here had only been some woman to fight for in my fight!"

And if he had said all that was in his mind he would have inserted the words, "like you." Dona Maria must have understood that these words were implied, for she said softly:

"It seems as though Providence had thrown you in my path. You say there would be no justice for you at the hands of the law? If you are found here it means your life."

"Yes," he replied and waited curiously for what was to come. Dona Maria appeared to deliberate.

"Suppose I decide to help you," she suggested gravely, "and drive a hard bargain?"

Jarvis was relieved to find that he could smile again. So was Dona Maria, but she did not publish her feelings.

"What do you mean?" he inquired.

"Your life in Kentucky is finished—you can never go back to it."

A Short Story, Complete

"GRACIOUS!" said the girl in the lizard green gown. "You've got your hair pulled back! Why do you do it so plainly?"

"It isn't!" objected the young married woman, ungrammatically. "It's no plainer than yours or any one else—it's just that you've been used to seeing me with all my hair on—puffs, transformations, braid and Billie Burke curls! Oh, I stuck to them long after every one else had gone in for the new plain style, using just one's own hair. But I didn't have enough own hair to make a hit with, and, anyhow, I look better with my hair sort of elaborate. But I'm cured!"

"Who did it?"

"It wasn't a who, it was a what," explained the young married woman. "But I'll tell you, anyway.

"The other day I remembered that I was due at the Splurge wedding that evening, so I shampooned my own hair and washed my own hair once removed in gasoline. Now, if there is anything I dislike, it is to go by a building and think an Indian reservation has broken loose and is exhibiting scalplocks—for that is what I'm always reminded of when I see curls and puffs and things pinned to the lace curtains where they will get the breeze and sun and will lose their gasoliny perfume.

Hidden From View.

"So after my extra adornments were cleansed I pinned them inside the window curtains, where they were hidden from the view of the populace. Then, feeling safe and at peace, I sat on the sun porch and read a book and dried my truly hair. After a while, when it got to be luncheon time, I went to my bedroom for something and casually glanced at the curtains where modestly hung my other hair. Only it didn't hang there. The curtains flapped mockingly, and if you had seen me dive headforemost at that open window you would have been justified in the belief that suicide was the best thing I did.

"Down in the alley below was a lovely sea of mud. They are building on the next lot, and the heavy wagons with brick and cement and things have made a regular morass of the place. Probably my hair was in the mud. As I stared a particularly heavy wagon lumbered and squashed through, shaking off several pounds of brickdust. I shrieked madly for help, and Tilly, the baby's nurse, came running.

"'Those luffly puffs!' Tilly wailed and darted forthwith to the alley, while I directed operations from above. Tilly balanced on a brick and surveyed the mud with deep dislike, making little dabs at it tentatively. Finally, in one of the deep ruts she saw a whisp of hair projecting, and some tugging excavated my largest puff, a sodden, sticky lump. A puddle gave up another and she found a third under the imprint of a horse's hoof, but the fourth had vanished. Tilly came upstairs holding her muddy treasure trove at arm's length.

"'But where's my transformation?' I shrieked. 'That cost $15—and as for the braid—well, I might just as well go into bankruptcy if that switch isn't found!'"

"Tilly protested that the earth below would not yield up another bit of hair. I began to wonder how I could send regrets to a wedding after I had already accepted, and then Mary called me to luncheon. I was weeping real tears into my soup when Mary burst in and asked permission to go downstairs, which was unusual at a mealtime, of course. I inquired why, but she just waved her arms wildly and disappeared.

"In due time she reappeared breathless and triumphant with a weird-looking thing in one hand. It was my transformation! She said she had scoured the country roundabout with the opera glasses and had seen something hanging on a bridal wreath bush in the Harveys' front yard, three houses down, and it looked like hair to her, and it proved to be hair. She added that Mrs. Harvey on the front porch had seemed greatly interested in the proceedings. Mrs. Harvey has always exclaimed publicly about my 'wealth of beautiful hair,' so I could imagine how pleased she must have been.

A Ring.

"As I finished my strawberries there was a loud ring at the bell, and when Tilly went to the speaking tube I distinctly heard the wretch of a small boy who was in the vestibule two stories below yelling for the edification of the whole building: 'Say, yer switch is a-hanging just below your bedroom window ledge on the telephone wires!'

"Tilly got the switch while I hung on to her heels. Then, very much exhausted, I washed everything again—but somehow I kept smelling gasoline all evening and I distinctly heard a man back of me in the middle of the church say it was remarkable how the automobiles outside seemed to be leaking. It was too much of a strain, so I've abandoned the whole outfit."

"Well, I don't blame you!" said the girl in the lizard green gown.

Freaks of Fashion

Monstrosities From Paris Boulevards

In Paris extremes of costume are seen more frequently than they are here. These three were "snapped" by a foreign correspondent for the Hearst newspapers recently. When our fashion expert was asked to describe them she immediately complained of feeling faint and went home. Therefore any of our women readers who feel "freakish" will have to solve these fashion puzzles for themselves.

Time's Up! Did You Send in a Solution of "The Triple Tie"?

$250 in Cash Prizes for the Best "Final Chapter" of The Georgian's Great Mystery Story

The final chapters of "The Triple Tie" will be printed in The Georgian next Monday, July 7. Readers of "The Triple Tie" had until noon to-day to send in their conception of the conclusion of the story, containing their solution of the mystery in competition for prizes aggregating $250 offered by The Georgian. The problems for the reader to solve were these:

First—How does Kelly escape the mountaineers?

Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?

Third—How did Gordon Kelly, who confessed that he never saw a game of ball and never played a game of ball up to the time he asked Manager Smith of the Atlanta club for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to bat, catch and run bases in the marvelous manner he displayed at Atlanta that caused the Boston club to give the unheard-of price of $50,000 for Gordon Kelly's release?

Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the ninth inning of the final and deciding game?

Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

No contributions will be considered if they are delivered at The Georgian office later than to-day, July 3, noon, or bear a postmark later than that time.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian, will award the prizes.

The prizes for the best solutions are as follows:

First Prize	$100.00
Second Prize	50.00
Third Prize	25.00
Fourth Prize	15.00
Twelve Prizes, each	5.00
Total	$250.00

CUDDLING COTTAGES : A Charming Short Story, Complete

THERE were two red houses in Acraman's road which shouldered each other confidentially and seemed on such manifestly affectionate terms that the notion of their respective inhabitants being anything but bosom friends was simply ridiculous.

The thought struck Dollabella Powney quite forcibly when she bought one of these said houses, and made her more eager than was her wont (she was not curious by nature) to catch a glimpse of her next door neighbor. Oddly enough, it was quite a fortnight after she had moved in before she did so, and then the manner of her "catching" was sadly at variance with her customary traditions of dignity.

Consumed one May evening with a desire to know something of that neighbor's tastes and habits, she rose on an inverted blacking box which she had placed against her garden wall to take a furtive peep at the adjacent premises. The neighbor, curiously enough, chose that precise spot and moment for a similar maneuver. Result, their noses all but met. The neighbor said afterward that he was training a creeper, but the denouement was, in any case, absurd. Dollabella shrieked.

Her blacking box turned turtle at the start she gave, and she nearly sprained an ankle as she fell plump into a group of peonies. With a countenance the color of those flamboyant blossoms, and tears of mortification in her eyes, she scrambled up and went majestically indoors, banging the front door to ease her feelings. The neighbor—such is the depravity of man—laughed. After that there was only one course open to Dollabella—the next-door neighbor must be ignored—sent to Coventry—ostracized—crushed.

It was two months later, and the sultry glory of a July evening took the "Cuddling Cottagers"—as they were irreverently called—into an almost tropical embrace. Miss Powney was very busy—a garden hose in one hand and a little black volume, with a white whirligig on its cover, in the other. She appeared, between bouts of watering, to be committing something to memory.

The next door man was on a ladder. He was chronically on ladders. Dollabella had consulted her lawyer brother as to the possibility of a single woman getting an injunction against people who perpetually mounted heights and, under a pretext of pruning, commanded other people's domains. Moreover, he was whistling, and his whistling got upon Dollabella's nerves. Whenever she looked up she could see his straw hat and a pair of big brown hands busy among the young branches of a mulberry tree—and the sight annoyed her.

"Fractures," said Dollabella to herself, as she hosed a thirsty-looking clump of carnations, "are of six kinds: simple — compound — convex — concave (no, that sounds nonsense)—wait a minute."

She threw back her head and looked to the sky for inspiration.

"Wheou—whe-ou," went the man next door.

"Simple—compound — implicated—ocntex—ah!"

"Slither—scrape—crash—plomb!"

"Good heavens!" cried Dollabella, and the little black book with the white whirligig fell from her nerve-shaken hand to the ground.

A Crash.

Something had happened next door—something which included a splintering sound and the too sudden contact of a heavy body with Mother Earth.

The whistling had ceased abruptly in the middle of a bar; there was no longer any sign of a straw hat and clipping hands.

Dollabella, listening in cold horror, heard two or three groans, and then there was a ghastly silence.

"It's an accident of some sort," she said addressing the flower borders. "Now, what ought I to do?"

The hollyhocks and sweet-williams having no views on the subject she did what common sense prompted. The gardener, who came once a week to mow the grass and titivate the garden generally, had left a pair of short steps close at hand. She fetched them and placed them against the wall, and climbed to the top.

She was almost afraid to look, but common sense gave her another prod, and look she did; and, in looking beheld a prone figure which lay on its back, presenting a very white upturned face to the summer sky.

By its side, also prone, was a broken ladder.

At first she really thought that the whistling man next door was dead. Her heart seemed to turn a somersault and to stop before it got over. She scrambled down into his garden, dropping bang on to a choice lilium-auratum in the process, and hurried to his side. He was breathing, but seemed quite unconscious, and his right arm was bent in a curious way—and the hand looked swollen.

To the Rescue.

Dollabella knelt down and felt it gingerly; then she stared at it, and tried to marshal her recently acquired knowledge. "Pain—deformity—swelling," she muttered. "It's broken, of course it's broken. What shall I do? I must put it into splints before I call help."

Her eyes roved wildly around and discovered a golf putter lying on the lawn near a small hole. The whistling man practiced putting—when he was not in midair.

By means of his putter and a sturdy stick used for tying up dahlias, Dollabella made very serviceable splints which she tied on with her handkerchief and his. Just as she finished her patient moaned a little—and opened his eyes.

The pain in them lessened when he saw the apparition which bent over him.

"You will be quite all right now," Dollabella assured him, speaking very distinctly as if he were a child. "It's your arm, you know—broken. You know, I'm the girl from next door. I'm going to make you comfortable and send for your housekeeper to watch you while I fetch the doctor."

She looked around and seized a coat which she found near at hand, and arranged it beneath his head. The whistling man shut his eyes and moaned. The very slight movement had pained him.

"The beastly stem broke," he explained. "I was—ugh!"

"Yes—yes—don't try to talk; it will soon be better," Dollabella reassured him. "Now, lie quite still."

The caution was scarcely necessary as the man next door was in no condition to do anything else.

More Help.

He shut his eyes again. "Must you go?" he whispered.

"I must, really. You'll have to be bandaged properly, you see—besides, you're too big for me to move. I won't be long."

She sped indoors, big-eyed and white. After much unsuccessful knocking she dislodged a middle-aged housekeeper whom she almost pushed into the garden, explaining dramatically, and then she turned around again.

Up the country road she tore, and, after ten breathless minutes, she reached the doctor's house. Fortunately, he was in. He cast himself on a motor bicycle and flashed off almost before Dollabella had concluded the account of the accident.

The next day, after some debate with herself, she sent in her little maid to inquire after her neighbor. The answer came back: "Mr. Randall's compliments, and he was going on very nicely, and would like to see Miss Powney, if she could kindly find time to go in."

Dollabella, flushing very much at the message, decided she could not possibly find time to obey its request, and, to emphasize the truth of this, she sat idle for hours wondering whether she could or not. Mere civility demanded that she should go. She said this again and again. The man next door was lying on a couch, looking very forlorn.

"Please come in and sit down. Did you mind my asking you to come in like this?—I couldn't get to you—you see."

"I'm so glad you're better," Dollabella said primly, and she sat down obediently.

"It was slight concussion, you know, or I should be walking about," said the man next door. "I had to keep awfully quiet for 24 hours. How ever shall I thank you?"

Dollabella did not reply; she was staring very hard at the damaged arm in its splints.

Not the Arm.

"That isn't the arm I first aided," she suddenly burst out. "I—tied up your left—the one with the ring. I know I did."

The man next door got crimson right up to his nicely marked eyebrows. "It—it doesn't signify a bit," he said uncomfortably. "You did it beautifully—the doctor said so—and how could you know which arm it was if I wasn't up to telling you?"

"Pain—deformity—swelling," muttered Dollabella. "I am fated," she added distinctly, "to do idiotic things where you are concerned," and two big tears of sheer mortification rolled down her cheeks. And when she saw a smile on the face of her companion she could have killed him without compunction.

"What are you laughing at, please?" Dollabella dabbed her eyes defiantly.

"Because your 'idiotic things,' as you call them, don't hold a rushlight to mine. Confession's good for the soul. Look here—I never meant to tell you, but I—I threw myself off that ladder——"

"On purpose?"

"Yes."

"What on earth for?"

"Because I knew about the Red Cross classes, and I thought a smash-up would fetch you—but I never meant to break myself up like this."

Dollabella tried to keep her lips from twitching, but she couldn't.

Somehow the man next door got the unhurt arm around Dollabella's shoulders, and what he said when it was there does not matter to you or me. All that does matter is that the respective owners of the "Cuddling Cottages" behaved themselves quite appropriately from that day onward.

A couple of doors knocked through party walls later on made those houses one. The owners had been made one some weeks before.

Correct Words and How to Use Them

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.
Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

EVERY intelligent person is always progressing and is never indifferent in matters of culture. If careless habits of speech have been formed a determined effort to correct them will lead to good results.

Many persons who consider themselves well educated make the mistake of using the participle "got" in connection with the verb "to have." They say: "Have you got the key?" "Who has got my book?" instead of "Have you the key?" "Who has my book?"

Mistakes of everyday occurrence are, "Who did you give it to?" "Who is this for?" instead of the correct expressions, "To whom did you give it?" "For whom is this?"

Frequently one hears these errors in grammar: "I intended to have bought a pair of gloves," instead of "I intended to buy a pair of gloves;" "It was no use asking him," instead of "It was no use to ask him;" "Try and persuade her to go," instead of "Try to persuade her to go."

It would seem unnecessary to tell any one not to use the present tense instead of the past tense when mentioning what another has said, yet a careless person may be heard saying, "He says," instead of "He said."

Other faults are to say "A great ways," "Somewheres," "There's plenty of places."

The contraction "don't" for "do not" should never be used with a singular noun or pronoun. It is correct to say "He does not," and not "He don't." It is important to remember the objective form of the first person singular when a noun or pronoun or two pronouns follow a verb, and not to say "Ethel asked Mary and I to go," but "Ethel asked Mary and me to go." If one is confused about the use of pronouns in a sentence of this sort an easy rule is to separate them and use each one with the verb, thus: "Ethel asked Mary," and "Ethel asked me." In this way the grammatical form is seen.

It is correct to say "A summer day," not "A summer's day." "Cut the apple in two" or "in halves," not "Cut the apple in half." "I cut the ribbon off this piece," not "off of this piece." "The child threw it on the floor," not "onto the floor."

"Whether" is a word that indicates a choice of things and should not be placed at the head of each part of a sentence. For instance, it is incorrect to repeat it thus: "I have not decided whether I shall go to Boston or whether I shall stay at home."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ASK HER.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and in love with a girl of twenty-one. She also loves me. Last night I told a friend about it. He laughed and said: "That girl is married."

Now, how shall I find out the truth?

CONSTANT READER.

Ask her. If you find you can't take her word, then cease your attentions. No happiness was ever built on doubt or suspicion.

QUIT TELLING HER.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-three, and have had an acquaintance with a girl of eighteen for the past nine months. I am deeply in love with her, but, somehow, she does not seem to appreciate the same. Now, what I would like to know is there anyway I could bring her to understand the true feeling I have for her? G. F.

You have given her nine months' devotion that she doesn't seem to appreciate. The story of your love seems to have become old and stale. Quit telling it. Awaken her interest by giving her some reason to doubt you.

Who's tI Was.

A school teacher who was giving a lesson on "food" was interrupted by one of his pupils.

"Please, sir," he said, "Jimmy says he knew a baby that was brought up on elephant's milk, and it gained ten pounds in weight every day."

"Jimmy ought not to tell you such rubbish," said the teacher. "Whose baby was it that was brought up on elephant's milk?"

"Please, sir," answered Jimmy, "it was the elephant's."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I SHOWED Pa & Ma a peece in a boys' magazine that offerd a prize of ten dollars for the best short story of ad-venture wrote by a boy not oaver twelve yeers old. I toald Pa that I was going to try for the prize, & Pa sad rite away that he wud help me rite the story.

Why doant you let Bobble rite it hisself? sed Ma, I doant think it wud be fair to the other littel boys who will com-peet to have you cum along with yure wunderful, marvelous brain & win that ten dollars. Let the kids have thare own competishun, Ma sed.

So this is the story I rote. It had to be less than a hundred words & it is pritty hard to rite a story inside of a hundred words & have the whole plot in. This is how I rote it:

It was midnite in Mexico. A silvery moon smiled at the Rio Grande wich wound its way through the lonely desert.

One glanst was enuff for Sheriff Vane.

The Mexican was ded.

Bad Silvio and Bad Chico halted thare horses beefoar they cud trample on the body of the Sheriff.

One glanst was enuff for the two outlaws.

The Sheriff was ded.

That story won't win any prize, Bobbie, sed Pa. It ain't a good piece of work at all. I guess you better let me rite it all oaver for you.

Ma seen that I felt kind of bad. Every time wen I feel bad my lip gits kind of stiff. I can't help it & I can't grin wen I try. So Ma patted me on the cheek and sed Bobbie, that is a good story, & I bet you will win the prize. Yure father can't help you in this contest, excep, maybe, he can help you to spend the ten dollars wen you win it.

He will nevver win the prize, sed Pa. The story is vary crude.

I don't think you are a competent critick, sed Ma. You nevver rote any stories yourself that won any prizes, & now you are trying to tell littel Bobbie how to rite. You are always that way; Ma sed, trying to tell peepul how to do things that you can not do yureself. I will bet you a ten-dollar bathrobe aggenst a ten-dollar hat, Ma sed, that Bobbie wins the prize. I am giving you a even munny bet, Ma sed, & I am taiking Bobbie aggenst the whole field. That is the kind of a bettor I am, Ma sed.

Sure enuff, day beefoar yesterday I got a letter from the boys' magazeen & thare was a new ten-dollar bill in it.

"Well, sed Ma to Pa, cum acrost with that ten dollars for my hat.

I haven't the change now, sed Pa. Bobbie, let yure mother taik that ten dollars till payday.

That is the way Pa paid his bet & I wud be broak now only Ma gativ me the ten back & sed she wud wait till payday for her hat. Pa thinks he knows lots, but Ma is a better bettor.

Not Like Him.

The Academy exhibition, with its fine Sargent portraits, recalls a story of this famous artist. At a banquet a young lady whom he knew very well said to him:

"Oh, Mr. Sargent, I saw your latest painting, and kissed it because it was so much like you."

"And did it kiss you in return?"

"Why, no."

"Then," said Mr. Sargent, "it was not like me."

Competition.

A little girl had been the pet of the family. Every one made much of her, but when there was a new little baby brother she felt rather neglected.

"How are you, Mary?" a visitor asked of her one afternoon.

"Oh, I'm all right," she said, "except that I think there is too much competition in this world."

Do You Know That—

In the lunatic asylum at Nantes is an illiterate inmate who has been discovered by the chief doctor to be a remarkable "lightning calculator." Ask what would be the age of a person who had lived a milliard of seconds, he took only 48 seconds to reply correctly. In 23 seconds he supplied the correct answer to the question, what would be the age of a person who had lived 343,000,000 seconds. He required only 22 seconds to find out how many seconds there were in 39 years, three months, twelve hours. Having been told the square mileage of the globe, he was asked how many hectares that represents, and gave the correct reply in four seconds. Asked how many seconds there are in 30 years, he replied in fourteen seconds, and explained that his calculations had involved four multiplications and one addition by mental arithmetic.

Mr. Jeffrey Farnol, who so suddenly leaped into fame as the author of "The Broad Highway," of which more than 300,000 copies have been sold, comes of a stock somewhat remarkable for its longevity. His grandparents are still living, as also their ten sons and daughter, with numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Four generations of one family, with only one loss by death—and that the author's brother, who fell in action in the Boer war—may be considered almost phenomenal.

Eat This Food During Summer

Be careful what you eat during hot weather. What you need is food that nourishes but does not heat the body.

Faust Spaghetti fits right into that class. It is a high gluten food—a bone, muscle and flesh former—but contains practically no fat, therefore cannot heat the body.

FAUST

makes a savory, appetizing dish. It can be served in a great many ways that appeal to the palate. It is easily prepared—it makes a nutritious, non-heating meal during the summer. Write for free recipe book, "Spaghetti and Its Uses." Faust Spaghetti put up in air-tight, moisture-proof packages.

Every sufferer from itching piles should read these words from H. S. Hood, of Bellaire, Mich., who was

Cured by Tetterine

For sixteen years I had been a sufferer from Itching piles. I got a box of Tetterine and less than half a box made a complete cure.

Tetterine gives instant relief to all skin diseases, such as eczema, tetter, ringworm, ground itch, etc. It has the right medicinal qualities to get at the cause and to relieve the effect. Get it to-day—Tetterine.

GREAT CONTEST FOR POPULAR BALL PLAYER

"Goat" Holliday, of Waycross; Whitey Morse, of Valdosta; C. Eubanks, of Cordele; Otto Jordan, of Valdosta, and Bill Clark, of Waycross, are having a hot old race for the beautiful trophy offered by Hearst's Sunday American and The Atlanta Georgian for the most popular player in the Empire State League.

There are twenty other diamond stars entered so far in the contest, but the five named above are leading just at present.

The coupon appears daily on page 2 of The Georgian. Cut out this coupon, fill it in with the name of the player, and mail it at once to the Popular Player Editor, Georgian, Atlanta, Ga., and the vote will be duly recorded.

Handsome Cup to Winner.

When the contest ends the results will be totaled, the winner will be announced and the handsome trophy donated by The Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian will be given to the player receiving the most votes. The Empire State League has been singled out for this contest because of the wonderful enthusiasm over the national pastime that has been displayed around this circuit and the large number of popular players.

Start Now.

Fans are requested to start this contest at once, as the early starters will have a great advantage. Every day is valuable in this contest, as some good hustler is sure to get out and pile up an early lead for his favorite player. Remember, you can get your friends to help you. Gather in coupons, as many as you can, and keep right on voting. Watch the paper for the result of the contest and in a few days you will know where your player stands in the race.

Grab to-day's paper, cut out the coupon and get busy. Vote to-day.

BOXING FOR WISCONSIN; BILL PASSES, 65 TO 3

MADISON, WIS., July 2.—The lower House of the Wisconsin Legislature by a vote of 65 to 3 to-day concurred in the Senate amendment to the Hedding bill creating a State boxing commission and legalizing ten-round no-decision bouts.

The bill now goes to Governor McGovern for approval. As he is known to favor it, he is expected to sign it on his return from Gettysburg late this week.

FORMER BASEBALL STAR IS VIOLENTLY INSANE

SEWARD, ALASKA, July 2.—Thomas Menifee, formerly one of the best known baseball players in the National League, went violently insane at Homer, Alaska, a few days ago, and started out to kill off the village. He armed himself with a rifle and started firing at every man, woman or child who showed signs of moving.

One man ran up the main street of Homer and Menifee fired thirteen shot at him without hitting him.

A posse was organized and the demented baseball player was taken into custody.

FIGHTING TEAM NEEDED TO WIN DIXIE PENNANT

"Pep," "Gab" and Determination Pull Teams Through—Crackers Criticised for Lack of 'Noise.'

By Percy H. Whiting.

AW well, if you all insist, we'll just have to tell you what's the matter with the Crackers.

They lack "pep" and "fight."

No, we didn't work this out for ourselves, either. A former baseball writer dug up the idea and passed it over.

Said he: "I was in New York the other day and I went out to see the poor old Yankees play. I was surprised. They haven't a thing but gab and pep. But they are winning games on that alone.

"You know how quiet Ed Sweeney used to be—wouldn't open his face except to chew gum. Well, he's yelling and fighting like a terrier now. Russ Ford has become positively noisy and actually gets out on the coaching line and FIGHTS for the team. And Birdie Cree—well, he used to be the quietest ball player in the world. And now he's scrapping and yelping like a pup. The day I was there he came rushing in from left field to protest a strike decision. Any time an outfielder does that he is trying hard to get his team to win.

"What the Crackers need is just such a spirit as that. They need more fight, more pep, more gab. Fighting teams win pennants.

* * *

BY a "fighting team" is not meant a team of umpire-baiters, rowdies and rough necks, but a team that contests every point—an aggressive, noisy, two-fisted club that never knows it is beaten.

Look at the Crackers' two pennant winning teams. They were fighters from the clang of the gong.

In 1909, they had a great collection of scrapping players—Otto Jordan, Sid Smith, Hugh McMurray, Harry Johns, Red Fisher and Tommy Atkins. They weren't rowdies, but they were scrappers. Anytime a game got by them there had been a fight for it. They had pep, noise, fight—and they won a pennant.

Going back to the other pennant winner. It also had Jordan and Sid Smith, those champion scrappers, along with Castleton, Spade, Castro and Dyer. There was a team with life and "pep." They didn't kick themselves out of games, but they fought every inch of the way with their opponents, the umpires and the fates. They were scrappers.

* * *

THE best teams of baseball history had the pep and gab and fight in them. Look at the world's champion White Sox of 1906. All they had was pep and a line of talk. Look at McGraw's teams. They may be unnecessarily rowdyish, but anyhow, they fight for everything every step of the way. They never quit, they never stop making a racket, they are always trying. And these tactics make champions out of bum ball clubs. If ever a lemon club won a pennant it was last year when the Giants copped. Pep and speed, along with plenty of gab, pulled them through.

* * *

THE Crackers might make more noise without doing any harm. Of course it isn't a talkative team naturally. But it might develop a little artificial "gab." That stuff helps. I don't know why, but it does. A talkative team is always better than a quiet one. Anybody can talk and make a noise. That's easy enough. "Pep" is something that can be developed also.

If a little more pep and noise is what the Crackers need, by all means let's have it.

It's a shame to see a potential pennant winner hugging the .500 mark. That's a poor place for any team to be.

Western Clubs in National League Losing Big Money

NEW YORK, July 2.—Figures on the books of the National League show that only Eastern teams are making money this year, and that if the present rate keeps up the four Western clubs will be big losers.

New York has been the best money maker so far and has played to the great crowds at home. The Phillies have drawn huge crowds in their own ballwick and have proved quite a card on the road. For the first time in many years the Dodgers' coffers are bulging and even the Braves have operated so far at a nice profit.

However, the attendance has greatly fallen off in Chicago, Cincinnati and in Pittsburg. Early in the season the Smoky City fans liberally patronized the park, but since the Pirates began hitting the chutes only the "old guard" has been on hand. In St. Louis the turnstiles are getting rusty from such little use, and this gives promise of being one of the worst years in the Missouri city.

AMERICAN PROFESSIONALS DEFEATED BY FRENCHMEN

LA BOULIE, FRANCE, July 2.—France yesterday won the international golf match between teams of professionals representing France and the United States. The Frenchmen beat the American players in all of the four single matches, thus with yesterday's two wins in four-ball games, scoring 6 out of the possible 6 points.

Arnaud Massy beat Tom McNamara, the metropolitan open title holder, by 2 up and 1 to play. Louis Tellier beat Alec Smith, of Wykagyl, the American captain, by 6 up and 4 to play. Jean Gassiat beat Michael J. Brady, of Wollaston, by 5 up and 3 to play. Pierre Lafitte beat John J. McDermott, United States national champion, by 3 up and 2 to play.

McDermott was the only American player leading at the end of the morning round by two holes. Smith being 4 down and the other 3 down.

EPPY STOPS O'KEEFE.

PITTSBURG, July 2.—"Henry" Eppy, of Pittsburg, knocked out Willie O'Keefe, of Philadelphia, in the third round. The fight was fast and furious until the end came, when he dropped O'Keefe with a right to the jaw.

Rube Marquard Analyzes Work of Major Teams

"Cobb's Throne May Be Usurped by Jackson"

By Rube Marquard.

THERE must be some magic connected with this "thirteen" combination, after all. I never have been superstitious, but after watching this present 1913 campaign, as far as it has gone, I must confess that it has me wavering.

To date it has been a mighty funny year for both leagues. The dope has all gone topsy-turvy. We Giants were picked to run away from the field; and, truth to tell, I myself thought that by this time we would have a much greater lead than we enjoyed a year ago at this time. Then it was believed we would better the Cubs' record of 1906, when Chance's wrecking crew won 116 games in one campaign.

I am as confident as ever that the Giants will eventually triumph, though undoubtedly it will be a stiffer fight than we anticipated. Though why we haven't been and are not making better progress is more than I will venture to explain. There simply is no explanation.

Some sort of jinx seems hovering over organized baseball in general, as exemplified in the big leagues, save only in Philadelphia. Its blight has not affected Quaker Town—at least, not as yet. Connie Mack's Athletics are running wild toward another pennant. The Phillies refuse to be shaken in their purpose of having a little world's series all in Slumber Land. Players are not immune from the evil influences of the year, save only the very old timers.

Mathewson Still Great.

There has been, there is, and there will be only one Christy Mathewson. Who ever saw him better than against Brooklyn a few days ago? He pitched nine innings of shut-out ball, delivering only 70 balls, despite the fact that he used 14 pitches in one inning, the eighth. That more plainly than anything else points out the complete mastery he had over the ball and over the batsmen.

Other leading pitchers in both leagues are seasoned performers. Eddie Plank, the great southpaw who broke in about the same time as Matty, is Mack's main reliance. "Chief" Bender, the tried and true Indian, has won almost 80 per cent of his games.

Now this season may eventually adjust itself along safe and sane lines; but so far it surely has developed any number of unusual kinks. We will glance over several of the most startling instances as briefly as possible.

Cobb's Throne Tottering.

To begin with, Ty Cobb's throne has been usurped for the time by "Shoeless Joe" Jackson, of Cleveland. I do not see where Ty has much kick coming, for he is still away about the .350 notch, which is mighty fair batting for most any major league performer. But I readily understand the sentiments of the Georgian Peach as the result of his recent slump. To a .400 hitter like Cobb .350 appeals in the light of about .067 to the average pitcher.

Who this spring would have believed that Pittsburg would now be trailing in the second division, with just about one chance in a hundred for a look-in at the world's series prize? In a great many respects no team in the league can show as much strength, on paper, as can the Buccaneers. Clarke has a rattling good infield, a well-balanced outfield, hitting strength, defensive strength, speed, what was usually considered the best pitching staff in major company and a well-balanced catching department.

Yet two months after the season opened Fred Clarke was trailing the Boston Braves, a club that was the laughing stock of the league when the campaign began. It is true that Pittsburg's catching corps has suffered greatly from injuries; it is also true that the pitchers have never been in first-class shape. But almost without more than mediocre battery strength, this team might be expected to stay somewhere close to the leaders.

Champions Start Slowly.

The world's champion Boston Red Sox furnish another example. They finally have crawled up somewhere in the neighborhood of where they belong in the American League standings. But for the first six weeks of the season the team that last fall won from us the highest honors of baseball showed a little better form than the tailender of the Johnson circuit.

For some inexplainable reason the aggregation simply could not pull together properly. It is true that the full strength was not in the field. But Boston's showing was worse than should have been expected from the second string recruits in training camp.

George Stallings' Boston Braves are just as much an enigma as their rivals of the Hub. Stallings is chiefly responsible for many of Fred Clarke's tribulations. Twice now the habitual Tailenders have crossed the path of the Corsairs just about the time Pittsburg was showing evidences of pulling itself together.

The first time in Boston the Braves stopped the Pirates four straight. Again in Pittsburg, after the Corsairs had given some evidences of resuscitation, the Hub boys made it seven straight by taking the first three of a four-game series. Boston has been quite a tartar all season for all the supposedly good teams except Philadelphia. Stallings certainly has added a few to our worries.

LYNCH WILL SOON ACT ON CASE OF BRENNAN

PHILADELPHIA, July 2.—Although no complaint has been filed as yet, President Lynch will investigate the assault made upon John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, by Pitcher Brennan, of the Philadelphia team, after the game in Philadelphia Monday.

New York had a walkover in the game here yesterday, winning by 10 to 0 and increasing its lead in the National League race. There was no demonstration of any kind following the striking of McGraw by Brennan.

FRANK KLAUS DEFEATS GARDNER IN THREE ROUNDS

BOSTON—July 2.—Jimmy Gardner picked out the wrong man to try the "come-back" stunt on when he selected Frank Klaus, the Pittsburg "bear cat."

Gardner was scheduled to go 12 rounds with this sturdy boxer from the Smoke City, but Jimmy's seconds threw up the sponge in the third round to save him from a nockout.

COBB INJURES KNEE.

DETROIT, July 2.—Cobb injured his knee sliding to second in the eighth inning of yesterday's game. The hurt is not considered serious.

SMITH, POP-BOY PITCHER, SOLD TO LOCAL CLUB

CLARENCE SMITH, known to fans as "Pop-Boy" Smith, has been bought from the White Sox by the Cracker club. The papers have not changed hands, but terms have been accepted and Smith will join the Cracker club toward the end of this week.

Last year with Birmingham, Smith won eighteen and lost eight games. Only six pitchers in the league who took part in 20 games or more topped him. At the end of the season he was sold to the White Sox for a good sum. He has been carried with the team since then. He did not look quite good enough to make the team, but he showed such promise that Manager Callahan was reluctant to let him go.

Smith is practically a kid. His history is well known. He was born in Birmingham, and, being crazy about baseball, he broke into it by the "pop" route. For several years he sold "pop" at the Birmingham park, and worked around the field when they would let him. Finally he went to Molesworth and said he wanted to be a pitcher. Just to humor him Molesworth worked him out for a few minutes. To Carlton's surprise the boy had a lot of stuff. So "Moley" sent him to the Southeastern. With the Anniston team, under the direction of "Red" Fisher he proved himself a star and his work was so promising that Molesworth signed him for the Baron club. He made good in the Southern last year and did much to give the Barons their pennant.

Smith is a long, stringy kid. He has a lot of curve and a good, fast ball. Bill Smith believes he is destined to be a big league wonder in time.

HUGGINS WOULD TRADE ANY OF HIS CARDINALS

ST. LOUIS, July 2.—"I'm ready to trade any man on the club. I realize something must be done and I'm ready to do it."

So declares Miller Huggins, the Cardinal manager. Huggins is open for a trade or an outright sale and before many more days he may rid his team of some excess baggage.

"Hug" believes that a change of scenery may do some of his pitchers a deal of good. He has no explanation for the sad showing being made by Harmon, Sallee and Burk. However, he's worried so much over his present pitching problem that he's now ready to make wholesale swaps if anybody will barter with him.

SCHUYLER L. PARSONS TO BUY STRING OF RACERS

NEW YORK, July 2.—Schuyler L. Parsons, for years president of the Coney Island Jockey Club, will branch out as a racing owner before the present racing season is ended. Mr. Parsons paid $6,000 yesterday for Tranid, a black filly by Voter-True Love, which was supposed to have been sold to a woman at the sale of the Kohler horses on Saturday.

At the sale on Saturday Mr. Parsons bought Beethoven, by Broomstick-Sand Feur, and Dombra, by Hermis-Frederica, so that he already has the nucleus of a stable.

Here's J. Caesar's Affinity Sure Enough

Let Us Introduce to You Joe Julius Rivers

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 2.—It was Julius Caesar who wanted men around him who were fat and sleek, and who slept o' nights. The "lean and hungry" variety he figured was given to thinking too much.

This youngster, Joe Rivers, complies with the Caesarian requirements. The Los Angeles lad is as nuggety as an Imperial Valley cantaloupe and his dancing eyes and laughing face attest that if he is doing some thinking it is not disturbing his slumbers nor interfering with his peace of mind.

In a word, Rivers does not seem to be worrying over the outcome of the tilt with Willie Ritchie on Friday.

So far as brooding is concerned Ritchie does not seem to be as safely above suspicion. To begin with Willie has the lean look which Caesar associated with too much thinking.

Of course, it could be argued that Ritchie did not conjure up his present appearance for this particular occasion, for at the best of times he is positively sad faced when compared with the plump little Angelino.

It is the rapid manner in which the weight has fallen away from Ritchie that has caused speculation as to whether he is pondering too deeply over the possibilities of the coming week. Before articles were signed he stuck out for an extra pound. Soon after he began training it was discovered that he did not need it.

He reduced so readily that a halt was called on his exercises before he had been a few days in quarters and now instead of having to adopt heroic methods to get down to the fighting notch he has discarded his working flannels to prevent himself being at weight too soon.

* * *

THE old quotation reads "Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown," and the wisdom of it has been proved in pugilism as in other affairs of life. Many a ring man who was a rollicking, care-free fellow before he won his way to the top of the ladder developed nerves when he had a title to defend.

Jim Corbett was one of the strongest cases in point. The solar plexus smash was blamed for everything at Carson, but too much thinking had worn Jim to a frazzle days before a blow was struck.

* * *

IN the opinions of some people worry and fear are twin emotions, but after many years of observation of the men of the ring the writer refuses to subscribe to that view.

The two qualities have this in common. They both exercise a detrimental influence upon mental and physical condition, but I have known fighters who were game through and through who, nated to be left alone with their thoughts on the eve of important battles in which they were concerned.

An old sporting friend who has passed over to the majority used to describe such fellows as "Lions in conflict, but moral cowards before their fighting instincts were aroused."

* * *

THE writer does not know whether Ritchie is worrying or not, but he does know that Ritchie is a game lad, according to the standards by which courage in the prize ring is usually gauged. The San Franciscan has surely stood up against fierce buffetings without whimpering or flinching and has always evinced a disposition to fight back.

But if the suspicion that he is harrassed with thoughts of the loss of prestige that a defeat on the Fourth would entail is well founded it is a bad thing for him.

The experts of the game have figured that Ritchie has an odds-on chance of beating the Los Angelan, but to justify the faith reposed in him Ritchie will need to be at his very best. The Southerner has more fighting force than is generally allotted to a lightweight and he is extremely resourceful and lightning quick besides.

Above all, he is a quick fighter. Some fighters are slow to recognize when they have an opponent in trouble, but it's not that way with Rivers. If he gets a man going he keeps him going and does not give him a chance to recuperate.

EXMOOR WOMAN TEAM WINS HIGGINS TROPHY

CHICAGO, July 2.—The Exmoor Golf Club's woman's team yesterday won the Crafts W. Higgins trophy in the annual tournament of the Women's Western Golf Association by making a score of 8 up on par. The play is similar to that in the Tom Morris memorial. Woman's par for the Exmoor course is 80. The best score of the day was made by Mrs. J. G. Lattimer, of the Homewood Country Club, Chicago, who finished 8 up on par and set a new woman's record for the course.

HOLMER BESTS DINNING.

CARLISLE, ENGLAND, July 2.—Hans Holmer, the American long-distance runner, defeated George Dinning, of London, to-day in a ten-mile running match, by 40 yards. Holmer's time was 52 minutes 58 3-5 seconds.

VAISE OUTPOINTS BAYLEY.

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 2.—"French" Vaise, a Seattle boxer, was given the decision to-day over Joe Bayley, Canadian lightweight champion, at the end of their fifteen-round bout at Brighouse arena.

YOUNG CONTESTANTS ON LAST LAP OF RACE

SUBSCRIPTION HUSTLER IS THE ONE WHO WILL WIN PONIES IN CONTEST

I nominate, as a candidate in The Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian Pony Outfit Contest:

Name .....

Address .....

Nominated by .....

Address .....

GOOD FOR 1,000 VOTES.

BIG PARADE ON JULY 4.

The Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian's big pony parade will start at 10 a. m. at The Georgian office, 20 East Alabama Street, and continue to Grant Park, where a big afternoon awaits the contestants and their friends.

There the ponies will be at the disposal of the contestants for the afternoon. There will be plenty of caretakers to see that every one gets a ride.

All contestants' parents and friends are cordially invited. Remember the time, 10 a. m., July 4th.

Buggies used in the parade furnished by E. D. Craven & Co., but not the buggies to be given in contest.

GINGER FOR CONTESTANTS.

July 2, and the big bonus offer closes July 5.

Remember, there is not a contestant in any district who can not be passed—no one has a lien on a pony as yet.

All the world loves a lover—also a winner. Get out in front and your friends will be much more inclined to help you.

It is not the coupon clipper, but the subscription hustler who will get the pony in your district.

One six-months' subscription is worth more than two three-months' subscriptions, and a yearly subscription is worth more than two six-months' subscriptions. Direct your energies accordingly.

There are two slippery places for the boys and girls who are striving for The Georgian and The American ponies. One of them is delay. The other is credulity. The most dangerous is delay, for while the contestant delays his rival is busy.

Credulity is almost as bad. It cripples boys and girls like paralysis. If the contestant believes all he hears of the marvelous gains made by other candidates it will take the spirit out of him, and he will not be worth half as much as before.

Another danger is "taking a day off." There is not a day to lose! The big bonus offer closes July 5, and the contest itself will be over July 31. July 31 is not so far away.

There will be no sympathy for the boys and girls who might have won, but who "took it easy" after they thought they were "safe."

No one is safe.

The winner in any district is likely to come from the rear ranks.

Keeping everlastingly at it brings success.

Stork and Cupid Cunning Plotters

Many a New Home Will Have a Little Sunbeam to Brighten It.

There is usually a certain degree of dread in every woman's mind as to the probable pain, distress and danger of child-birth. But, thanks to a most remarkable remedy known as Mother's Friend, all fear is banished and the period is one of unbounded, joyful anticipation.

Mother's Friend is used externally. It is a most penetrating application, makes the muscles of the stomach and abdomen pliant so they expand easily and naturally without pain, without distress and with none of that peculiar nausea, nervousness and other symptoms that tend to weaken the prospective mother. Thus Cupid and the stork are held up to veneration, then are rated as cunning plotters to herald the coming of a little sunbeam to gladden the hearts and brighten the homes of a host of happy families.

There are thousands of women who have used Mother's Friend, and thus know from experience that it is one of our greatest contributions to healthy, happy motherhood. It is sold by all druggists at $1.00 per bottle, and is especially recommended as a preventive of caking breasts and all other such distresses.

Write to Bradfield Regulator Co., 131 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their very valuable book to expectant mothers. Get a bottle of Mother's Friend to-day.

THE

Ice-Kist Crankless Freezer

Be Wise! Make Your Own Ice Cream

Of course, you know that home-made ice creams, sherbets or ices are superior from every viewpoint. They are always sweet, pure and wholesome; there is a flavor and genuine goodness about them that is not found in the general run of factory products. Besides that, when you make your own preparations you know that the ingredients are always pure, and that the can is clean and sanitary. The main reason why ice cream is made in but comparatively few homes, is the work and bother connected with the old-fashioned crank freezer. That is one reason why the arrival of

will be hailed with delight by every one who is fond of ice creams, etc., because it eliminates the tedious turning of the crank entirely, and produces creams, sherbets and ices that will make your mouth water. That is one reason, but there are many others.

DON'T YOU KNOW that the enjoyment of a dish largely depends upon the manner in which it is served? Could you imagine a daintier and more appetizing manner of serving ice creams than provided for by the "Ice-Kist?"

Write us to-day for our beautifully illustrated booklet, telling all about the freezer; it is ABSOLUTELY FREE—and receive our free trial offer.

BULLISH REPORT PUTS COTTON UP

NEW YORK, July 2.—A heavy buying movement set in at the opening of the cotton market to-day and first prices were at a net advance of 7 to 13 points from last night's close. The market was strengthened by the bullish report of The Journal of Commerce on the cotton crop, which placed condition of the crop at 80.9, against 80.4 last month, compared with a ten-year average of 81 per cent.

There was a good deal of evening up preparatory to the Government report due at noon Thursday. The ring was short after the heavy selling of yesterday, and they purchased the old and new crops rather aggresively, resulting in prices gaining 1 to 4 points from the ininital level. There was good buying of the old crop by spot houses. Later the market shaded a few points, through scattered selling, which appeared to be profit-taking by longs.

The weather map was considered favorable, with indications pointing to further showers over the eastern and western belt.

The low percentage given the crop by The Journal of Commerce gave rise to the idea that the Government report to-morrow will show condition lower than generally expected. This frightened shorts, who covered considerable short lines and brought out active buying of August by spot people. The small stock here and the continued high rate of consumption is causing hesitation on the part of the average trader to curtail his holdings, regardless of several bearish factors that are shadowing the market at the moment.

During the afternoon session the market was stiff, August being steady around 12.15; October, 11.52; December, 11.48, and January, 11.45. July fluctuated narrowly.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net gain of 8 to 12 points from the closing quotations of Tuesday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 12.14; August, 12.15; October, 11.52; January, 1.46.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July, 12.53; August 12.16; October, 11.60; January, 11.61.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 21.—Liverpool advanced to-day under the influence of a low condition report by The Journal of Commerce, 80.9, against 80.5 last month and 81.3 last year. Futures were about 3 points better than due; spots 5 points higher; sales 12,000 bales.

Weather developments continue favorable. The map shows generally fair in the Atlantics; partly cloudy in the Western States, with good rains in northeast Texas; cloudy in Central States with a nice rainfall in Louisiana, Missisippi, Alabama and Tennessee. So far little rain in Arkansas, but the rain formation is moving on that State to-day, bringing the needed relief. Indications are for clearing in the Western States, part cloudy to fair in the Atlantics.

Our market opened about 8 points higher and was well sustained, largely by a demand to cover caused by the fear of a low Bureau to-morrow on the basis of The Journal of Commerce report, and the fact that two holidays follow.

New York wired: "Buying on belief that Bureau may be under 80, as Journal of Commerce gives only .4 improvement for the month." Trading here settled around 11.61 for October. Demand small but steady.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Morris H Rothschild & Co.: We believe any further break will find good trade support.

Logan & Bryan: We rather feel that conservative purchases on the weak spots are in order.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, July 2.—S. Tate says: "The Journal of Commerce crop report tends to confirm advices of statisticians like Turner and Miss Giles, and the report issued by Clement and Curtis of Chicago, that this crop has shown little, if any, improvement during the month of June. If The Journal of Commerce is a forecast of the Government, we may see higher prices temporarily, as the influence now will be weather conditions for the next two weeks.

Good generally soaking rains will tend to cause declines while a continuation of this dry weather on an already abnormally small plant, which is said to be two to four weeks late, will tend to strengthen bullish ideas. Our reports from Texas and Oklahoma are very fine, but Oklahoma is said to be suffering for want of rain now, though not seriously. I have just returned from a part of Alabama and Tennessee, where I saw a great deal of very small cotton and people whom I questioned from other sections, which I did not visit, generally reported the plant as small and backward, being two to four weeks late in growth, but stated there was good tap root. The question now is whether seasonable weather in July can restore the plant to its normal size and yielding quality."

NEW YORK, July 2.—The ring was short at the opening of the market today. The Journal of Commerce report being bullish, caused a wave of short covering.

* * *

Riordan was a good buyer of October, causing the rally. Shearson bought 10,000 bales of January around 11.47. Schill, Geran and O'Conner sold some. Riordan offered him 5,000 bales.

* * *

The position of August is regarded as acute and should our stock remain small, which is only about 22,000 bales, it might go to any price.

* * *

Around the close yesterday Mitchell, Mohr, Wulson, Cone, Geer, Orvis, McGhee, Rait, Riordan and Starr were the leading buyers. Clearman, Wiggin, Flinn, Schill, Watham, Black, Montgomery, Parrott and Rice were the principal sellers.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas, generally part cloudy to cloudy. Few local showers; Oklahoma, part cloudy to clear."

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, July 2.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map, very favorable, shows generally fair in the Atlantics, no rain, part cloudy in Texas and Oklahoma. Few scattered showers with good rains in Northeast Texas. Cloudy in Central belt, with fine rains in Louisiana and Mississippi and parts of Alabama. Little rain so far in Arkansas, but rain formation moving on that State to-day causing general rains. Indications are for clearing in the Western States; rain in the Central tSates; part cloudy to fair in the Atlantics.

The Democratic Senatorial caucus today adopted the Clark amendment to the tariff bill, imposing a tax of one-tenth of 1 cent a pound on contracts for the future delivery of cotton in all cases in which the delivery is not made. Only Senators Thornton and Ransdell of Louisiana voted against it.

Party in Central Texas says: "Crop prospects are the best in history. In Central Texas and West Texas where last year all was dried up; the plant is large and thrifty and fine reserve moisture in the ground. Cotton is growing well, about three feet high. I got some on our farm nearly four feet high, showing 12 to 15 near fully developed bolls already. On sandy land conditions are still better, as they show a large fully developed plant, strong and healthy."

SMALL CHANGE IN COTTON CONDITION

Crop Shows .4 Points Increase From May 23, According to Journal of Commerce.

NEW YORK, July 2.—The condition of the cotton crop on an average date of June 23, according to the replies of more than 1,900 special correspondents of The Journal of Commerce, was 80.9, against 80.5 a month ago, or an increase of .4 points. This compares with 81.3 a year ago and 85.9 in 1911 and a ten-year average of 81.

North Carolina	77.2	78	86
South Carolina	73.2	69.9	83
Georgia	76.4	75.3	74.9
Florida	80.6	79.9	75
Alabama	78.3	79.6	76.5
Mississippi	80	80.3	73
Louisiana	80.6	81.6	75
Texas	84	82.7	86.5
Arkansas	85.5	85.3	78.5
Tennessee	82.7	83.3	79
Missouri	82.7	83	73.2
Oklahoma	86.6	89.6	85.5
Average	80.9	80.5	81.3

As a rule, changes in condition are not marked. South Carolina gained 3.4 points; Georgia 1.1 and Texas 1.3. Otherwise, most other States showed a fractional decline, except Oklahoma, which lost 3 points. Since the average date of these reports rainfall has relieved nearly all districts needing moisture, causing general improvement.

The season is generally two weeks late, owing largely to a cold snap in the early part of June. For the same reason the plant is small, though strong and healthy. Fields are free from grass and well cultivated.

Up to around the third week of the month the need of rain was becoming urgent, but since then showers have been very general and most sections have had the needed relief. Stands as a rule are poor, being very irregular owing to replanting and cool weather and the crop is remarkably free from insects, except in Mississippi and Louisiana, where boll weevil is in such large numbers as to be a serious menace to the crop.

Up to the date of these mail reports, however, damage was not serious.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, July 2.—The cotton seed oil market was fairly active today, prices scoring a good advance on covering of shorts on the strength in lard and cotton and the scarcity of actual oil. The trade looked for scattered liquidation owing to calls for additional margin last night, but there was little oil for sale.

STOCKS RECOVER THE INITIAL LOSS

Balkan War News Causes Early Drop—Crop News Now Is Principal Factor.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 2.—Nearly all issues were lower in price at the opening of the stock market to-day and the tone was dull. Trade was practically all professional and the market was depressed by news of continued fighting in the Balkans. Canadian Pacific, which was lower in London on profit-taking, opened at 216 for the loss of a point and then went to 215¾.

Amalgamated Copper began at 64¾, which was ⅜ under Tuesday's final and later made a partial recovery. Among the other declines were United States Steel common ⅛, Union Pacific ½, Reading ½, Northern Pacific ¼, Lehigh Valley ½, Erie ⅝, St. Paul ⅜, American Can ⅛, Chesapeake and Ohio ⅛.

The curb was heavy.

There was a cautious tone in the London market due to pessimistic dispatches from the Balkans.

Americans were barely steady.

Canadian Pacific in London was off.

A slight improvement developed after th first hour and the early losses were regained with a bullish movement in Union Pacific helping along an advance of over 1 point to 148. Steel also rose ¾ to 53⅜. Reading advanced ⅝, Copper ⅜ and St. Paul ⅜. The tone in the late forenoon was active. Call money loaning at 2 per cent.

Stocks ruled around the opening price in the last hour. There were no developments and trading was without importance. The tone was quiet. Compared with the midday range of quotations the following changed were noted: Amalgamated Coper off ⅜, Canadian Pacific off ¾, Union Pacific off ½, Southern Pacific up ¼, Missouri Pacific up ⅜ and Erie off ¼.

The market closed dull. Governments unchanged; other bonds steady.

SNOW BEARISH ON GRAINS.

CHICAGO, July 2.—W. B. Snow says, in meaning, in bushels of reports on crop condition, it must be remembered that under the Government basis the equivalent in bushels per acre of a par condition of 100 advances each month. Spring wheat this month will be figured on the basis of 15.9 bushels per acre as equivalent to 100 in condition, against 14.4 bushels similarly figured last month and this will advance to 17.3 bushels on September 1. On oats the par this month will be 35.2 bushels, advancing to 37.5 on September 1.

"If the crop condition reported this month for these crops is maintained until harvest without further deterioration, the yield of spring wheat would be 1.4 bushels per acre more than now indicated; oats, 2.31; corn, 2 bushels more."

PRICE-CURRENT CROP REPORT.

CINCINNATI, July 2.—Last week developed high temperatures over the Central and Southwestern sections, which have been hurtful to oats and further reduced the prospects of this crop, of which less than the average can now be expected.

Corn has as yet not had sufficient moisture and in the dry areas of Illinois, Missouri and Kansas high temperatures accentuate the drouth conditions. As to winter wheat there is some complaint of light weight, but on the whole thrashing reports speak of good quality and good quantity being harvested.

SUPPLY OF HOGS LIGHT.

CHICAGO, July 2.—Evidently the generous hog run of the June trade is over. Supply was light everywhere on the market map to-day. Eleven markets had only 89,000, against 97,000 a week ago. Prices were 5 to 10c higher, with the bulk at 8.75 to 8.95 and the 9.00 hog is due to return.

Cattle: Receipts were light and the market steady to strong. In the sheep house prices were 10c higher. Oregon wethers making 4.90 to 4.95.

Wheat—No. 2 red ....87 @89½
Oats—No. 2 ....40½@41

CHICAGO, July 2.—The offerings in the wheat pit were small at the opening this morning, commission houses were good buyers and prices were ¼ to ½c higher. There were further rains in the Southwest and the weather in the Northwest was cool and favorable. Northwestern receipts were double those of a year ago, while Winnipeg receipts were much smaller.

Corn was up ¾ to 1c on shorts covering.

Oats were particularly strong and were ¾ to 1¼c higher.

Provisions were higher with hogs.

Wheat closed around the best prices of the day, showing net gains of ⅜ to ⅝ and reacting from the lowest levels of ⅝ to ¾c. The seaboard reported takings there of room for 150 loads of grain, largely for Antwerp. It was believed here that this room was taken for wheat and a message from New York said that exporters there secured the room in the hope of disposing of some wheat next month. A message from Kansas City said that one of the strongest grain concerns in the world was a buyer in that market.

Corn closed with advances of 1 to 1¼ and the feeling strong.

Oats were up ⅝ to ¾c.

Provisions were higher all around.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 2.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—Some scattered showers in the Northwest with considerable precipitation in the Southwest; also some rain in the Ohio Valley. There is nothing to encourage new outside buying, without which it will be difficult to sustain values.

Corn—The weather map is favorable. There has been considerable liquidation on the decline of 2 cents a bushel, which has taken place from the high point of a week ago. We are inclined to look for a rather steady market.

Oats—Generally firm undertone continues, this feeling being doubtless due to the belief in a very moderate crop.

Provisions—Receipts of hogs as estimated, prices strong; selling pressure is rather limited and the market looks very firm.

PATTEN BEARISH ON ALL GRAINS.

NEW YORK, July 2.—James A. Patten says: "They will have cut down spring wheat 75,000,000 bushels to bring the country's total yield under that of last year. Corn can stand almost any amount of heat, if it has a good, moist subsoil to draw from. This year the crop got a good start, has had a fair root growth, and is getting along nicely.

"In northern Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska conditions are superior and the general state of corn is promising outside of such localities as central Illinois, much of Missouri and portions of Kansas and Oklahoma. Now that the latter State is relieved by rains, the outlook is sure to brighten there."

WHEAT AVERAGE UNDER 1912.

CHICAGO, July 2.—King, of Toledo, makes a report on Oklahoma: "Wheat yield twelve bushels per acre, against fourteen bushels last year. On the Government acreage it suggests 19,600,000 bushels, against 20,000,000 harvested last year. Corn condition, 83; June, 87; July last year, 88; October, 67, and yield, 200,000,000. Oats yield, fifteen bushels per acre; 27.5 last year. On Government acreage it suggests 16,000,000 bushels, against 24,000,000 harvested last year."

LEGAL NOTICES.

A PROCLAMATION

By His Excellency John M. Slaton, Governor.

State of Georgia,
Executive Department
Atlanta

Whereas a vacancy will soon exist in the office of United States Senator from Georgia for the term beginning March 4, 1913, and

Whereas said vacancy can be filled by popular vote only, the General Assembly having provided by Act for holding a special election to fill said vacancy,

Therefore, I, John M. Slaton, Governor of said State, by authority of Act approved July 1, 1913, do issue this my proclamation ordering a special election for United States Senator to fill the vacancy above described, to be held on the 15th day of July, 1913, under the laws of this State governing elections and the Act above referred to.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed this the 1st day of July, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirteen. JOHN M. SLATON, Governor.

By the Governor:
PHILIP COOK, Secretary of State.
Attest: A. H. ULM,
Secretary Executive Department

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Thoroughbred Stock Is Gradually Taking The Entire Country

In This Age of Progress and Improvement There Are No Backward Steps.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Thoroughbred stock is gradually and surely taking this country. This is an age of progress and improvement, so that whenever an advance is made, and a stake set, it is held, for there is not such thing as go back. You will not find one person in a thousand that has tried good stock that is just willing to let it drop out and go back to the old-fashioned barnyard hens.

The writer has traveled during his judging trips from August 1, 1912, to February 1, 1913, when the season's work ended, over 11,000 miles, all in the South from Virginia to Texas, from the Ohio River to Central Florida, and during that time had a chance to observe a good deal that is going on in the poultry breeding world.

We find that the farmers are fast taking up the breeding of poultry as a strong and important side line. A paying line. They are adopting one of the leading pure breeds and pushing them for the best that is in them. Some are strictly for eggs, but the majority of them want a combination breed for eggs and meat both. The Rhode Island Reds seem to be the leading variety at this time. There are some sections in which they are pushing the business much stronger than they are in others. We found Tennessee, North Carolina, Texas and Florida leading in the order named.

Tennessee is making wonderful strides along the line of producing poultry and eggs, so much so that whole train loads of live poultry are seen going out of Eastern Tennessee in specially prepared cars for the expert handling of this product so that it may be put into New York and other Eastern markets in prime condition. Attendants travel with each two or three cars to look after the feeding and watering en route. Two or three poultry shows in Texas, in which we had a special farmers' exhibit separate from the regular prizes offered, were filled with fine thoroughbred specimens, not bred closely to points, but for purity and egg production. Eggs were also exhibited. This is getting along as it should be. The farmers should be encouraged to make displays of their poultry and eggs for the simple fact of the encouragement it gives them. Every time a wide-awake farmer's wife attends a poultry show she returns home with a lot of good ideas in her head, which means better results for the poultry on their ranch.

Texas farmers, while leaders in cotton raising, are not slow to see the money there is in other things upon the farm as there is in poultry, and as a consequence, many of them are making poultry one of their strongest side lines.

Turkeys are raised in great numbers out there and they are almost as good as gold about holiday times. One of the best displays of fine turkeys we have ever seen was at the Dallas show some six years ago. It is uncommon thing in that State to see fine Bronze turkeys boxed for shipment standing at the railway stations to go to some progressive farmer in another part of the country who the wise is enough, and we believe introducing a change of blood. In either case, it clearly indicates that there is something doing besides raising cotton. We think besides the wisel s enough, and we believe that those who read these lines and are not doing something toward supplying the great demand for eggs and poultry in this country will take the hint and lose no time in taking hold. Not so much to be patriotic and help the country along but for mere pecuniary reasons. Simply gain. But in the greed for gain, if so it must be called, you will also benefit your fellow man. This country is fast turning to good poultry, and it is time you all knew it and share in the benefits derived therefrom.

STOCKS MAY DROP BUT ATLANTA REAL ESTATE CONTINUES TO G-R-O-W

HAVE YOU WATCHED the stock market and noted the wide differences between the prices of one year ago and those of to-day?

Union Pacific	170	149
Lehigh Valley	172	147
Illinois Central	128	110
American Sugar Refining	130	107
United States Steel	71	53
New York Central	117	97

We might extend the list indefinitely, but these tell the story. A similar story might be told of the stocks traded in upon the Atlanta market. Where, outside of a few bank stocks which have held their own on account of an increased surplus, is there a single local stock that has not weakened in value?

Ever hear of a slump in Atlanta real estate? No, and you never will, it matters not what the condition of the money market.

On the other hand, Atlanta real estate has grown in value even during times of stringency, and PEACHTREE PROPERTY HAS LED ALL OTHERS IN STEADILY CLIMBING UP THE LADDER.

YOU CAN NOT MISS IT, AND PROFITS WILL BE AS SURE AS THE PROVERBIAL DEATH AND TAXES IF YOU BUY IN

JAS. H. REYNOLDS, Sales Manager.
1520 Candler Building. IVY 5213.

FOR SALE

ON PIEDMONT AVENUE, near school, on the car line, we have one of the best bungalows to be found in the city. Built by the present owner for a home out of the best material and workmanship. Never expected to sell it, but keep it for a home. The lot cost him $3,000 vacant. If vacant to-day could not be bought for $4,000.

The owner's work has called him to Florida, and he must sell by August 1.

We have had this place listed at $7,000, and cheap at that—but the owner says he must sell—therefore, he is putting the price down to $6,250. This should sell at once.

See this at once. We can make terms.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage. It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Income Tax Items Stricken From Bill

News Welcome to Atlanta Building Managers—Renting Agenst to Meet. Chamber Home Started.

Office building managers and others acting in the capacity of landlord will be interested to learn that the United States Senate committee considering the provisions of the Federal income tax amendment have decided to cut out the clause which provides that tenants withhold rents from landlords, and will probably also eliminate the clause which would cause a tax to be paid on mortgage overpluses.

Charles P. Glover, president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, who, with others, signed a resolution of protest sent to Washington recently in the name of the board, is in receipt of a communication from Senator Hoke Smith making these facts known. People to whom Mr. Glover mentioned the matter expressed a great deal of satisfaction, since the provisions referred to were considered unjust and hurtful.

Renting Agents to Meet.

A meeting of great importance to renting agents will be held Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the office of Charles P. Glover, to consider several matters which Mr. Glover and others will call to the attention of the members. It is understood that a rule which gives exclusive listing of houses to agencies for 30 days has frequently been broken, and an effort will be made to correct the abuse.

"Frequently," declared a renting agent Wednesday morning, "there are three or four signs on the same house, when the rules of the Atlanta Real Estate Board call for exclusive listing for a month. This matter will undoubtedly be brought up at the meeting."

The notices were sent out by Raymond Robson, of Foster & Robson, who is chairman of the committee on renting of the board.

Several Permits Issued.

Application was made Wednesday at Building Inspector Hays' office by the Georgia School of Technology to build at Tech Flats a concrete grand stand to cost $15,000, the idea being to convert it into a stadium in the future and extend around the enire park.

Permit was issued to the Chamber of Commerce to renovate the Y. M. C. A. building at the southeast corner of Auburn Avenue and North Pryor Street, at a cost of $50,000, and to the Atlanta Theological Seminary to erect a two-story brick building on Stewart Avenue at a cost of $12,000.

The first job will be done by R. M. Walker, the second by the Griffin Construction Company, and the last by day work.

Still Increasing Force.

George Anderson, formerly with the Williams-Hartsock Real Estate Agency; John D. Brazelton, formerly of Cedartown, and J. E. Pritchett, a local merchandise broker for ten or fifteen years, have joined the sales force of the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency.

Fast Work on Peachtree.

Although the county convicts have been but two days on the work of repairing Peachtree south of Buckhead, they have proceeded as far as James R. Gray's country place, having reached Governor John M. Slaton's Tuesday. Shelby Smith, chairman of the County Commissioners, declares the work will now be pushed as fast as possible.

The other section of this work—from Buckhead north to the DeKalb County line—is in fine shape. Automobilists who have used it since its completion pronounce it one of the best thoroughfares in the State.

Working Out Produce Row.

Foundation work is getting along satisfactorily on the $205,000 concrete structure which is being erected on Central Avenue for certain commission merchants of the city. The excavations are about completed and framework for the concrete material is under construction.

This building will be one of the largest concrete structures in the South, extending from Central Avenue to the Washington Street viaduct. A new street, Produce Row, has been cut through on the north side, and the produce establishments will have ample railroad facilities. Sixteen commission merchants have already agreed to go into the structure and others will probably follow. The effect of this move will be to clear up North and South Broad Streets, and some improvements will undoubtedly follow.

Keefer and Stepson Fined; Wife to Ask Divorce and Alimony

With David Keefer and his stepson, Jack Macy, being fined in Police Court late Tuesday, the curtain has been rung down on another act of the Keefer marital drama.

Mrs. Keefer has announced she will start the show going again in twelve months with a divorce suit, in which she will endeavor to obtain separation and alimony from her husband.

The trial of Keefer and young Macy in Police Court yesterday was the sequel to a fight at the Piedmont Driving Club last week over a $5,000 automobile, against which Keefer had instituted bail trover proceedings.

After Keefer had been fined $25.75 by Recorder Broyles, a case of disorderly conduct was entered against the stepson, who was fined $10.75.

Carload of Tomatoes Shipped From Georgia

TIFTON, July 2.—What is believed to be the first solid carload of tomatoes ever shipped out of Georgia left Tifton for New York. The car contained 365 crates, and it is estimated that the tomatoes will bring $700, judging by market quotations on the date of shipment.

If this is not the first carload of tomatoes ever shipped from Georgia it is certainly the first ever shipped from this section.

Champ Clark Proud of Friendship for Jews

NEW YORK, July 2.—Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives, has written to Bernard Nolan accepting enthusiastically the presidency of the American-Roumanian Jewish Emancipation Committee.

"I am very fond of the Jews," he writes. "The greatest puzzle in the world to me is why any country persecutes and maltreats them."

Ismay's Name in Shipping Passes

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 2.—The famous firm of Ismay, Imrie & Co., founders of the White Star Line, disappeared July 1 with the retirement of J. Bruce Ismay from the presidency of the International Marine Mercantile Company.

When Ismay accepted Mr. Morgan's offer to purchase the business he made it a condition that on his retirement the name of Ismay be no longer used.

Strawberries End Girl's Hunger Strike

PHILADELPHIA, July 2.—A plate of ice cream and strawberries ended the "hunger strike" of 17-year-old Julia Morgan, of Pottsville, Pa., who was held by the local police until her relatives could be found.

Miss Morgan had fasted more than two days.

$25 IS OFFERED FOR BOOSTER BUTTON

Georgian to Give Prize for Best Slogan for Atlanta's New Half Million Club.

Every good citizen is about to get a thrill of the real Atlanta spirit. The 500,000 Club idea that has taken such a hold on the city is crystallizing into a definite organization.

Just to show how strong the appeal is to Atlantans, The Georgian makes this proposal:

A prize of $25 will be given to the person suggesting the best caption for buttons to be distributed.

The phrase must express the spirit of the organization. It must tell in few words the story of the Atlanta spirit. And to insure that the suggestion best expressing this thought will be the one selected, a committee of three who typify the Atlanta spirit will be named as judges.

Show Your Civic Pride.

What a chance to display civic pride! Far less inspiration than Atlantans are famed for has produced great poems. Yet love for Atlanta is so simple and widespread that even children will be eligible contestants.

When the ad men went after their national convention once they had a contest for a motto. This one won: "Atlanta Always Ahead."

Do you get your cue? It is as simple as A B C if only you are imbued with the true Atlanta spirit.

Someone recently suggested that the name of Atlanta should be changed to Boostville, because everybody is always boosting the town. Wouldn't it be an honor to be the champion little booster of the town?

Think Up Caption.

The men who will compose the committee of judges will be men who have grown up with the Atlanta spirit, men who know it and feel it. Also they are men who declare Atlanta will have 500,000 people by 1920, and they are men who will stand high in the councils of the 500,000 Club, for the object of the club is to get the 500,000 people here.

Think up a caption for the buttons.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Talking Movies at the Grand.

Theatergoers and others have become decidedly interested in the Edison talking pictures at the Grand. There were more people in attendance at the matinee and night performances Tuesday than at the opening on Monday.

There is something almost weird about the talking pictures. It is a sensation to sit and see a picture on a screen and hear it sing and talk.

A lecture is delivered by a person on the sheet. His voice is clear and distinct and his talk interesting. He tells all about the invention and then follows comedy sketches, singing novelties and playlets. It addition to the talking pictures the management is presenting three reels of first run pictures at every three reels of first-run pictures at every night exhibition daily that runs about two hours.

Variety in Forsyth Bill.

There is variety in the vaudeville bill at the Forsyth this week. The seven acts are without anything that looks like confliction. There is comedy, music, sketch and novelty—a program far-away from that sameness that is found often in vaudeville.

Edward Abeles and Miss Charlotte Lander present a sketch that is simply the best that has been seen here. Mr. Abeles is an actor of real merit.

Billy McDermott, the tramp comedian, has become a real favorite. Misses Lietzel and Jeannette, aerial gymnasts, offer the best closing act that the Forsyth has presented in many months. Carlisle's Dog Circus is a treat and Violinsky, the musical wonder, has helped to make the bill a real drawing card.

"A Trip to Paris" Pleases.

The warm weather of the last few days seems to have had but little effect on the patronage of the Bijou, where an unusually clever offering is being given at bargain prices. "A Trip to Paris," with its twenty people, including some very clever comedians, nimble dancers, pretty chorus and varied changes of costume, is just the style of entertainment that appeals to amusement seekers during the heated term. There is no plot to worry over, but just a succession of pretty musical numbers interspersed with clever specialties, laughable parodies and comical situations.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Mary Gunter, sixty years old, died at a local sanitarium at 5 o'clock Wednesday morning. She is survived by four daughters, Misses Maggie and Nora Gunter, Mrs.

Gilbert B. Cheek, a Confederate veteran eighty-one years old, died at the Soldiers' Home Tuesday afternoon. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The funeral of Lois Raper, the two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Raper, who died Tuesday at a private sanitarium, was held at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning from the chapel of Greenberg & Bond. The body was interred at Casey's.

The funeral of Tom Papas, eighteen years old, who died at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning at a private sanitarium was held Wednesday morning from the Greek Church on Central Avenue. Interment at Westview.

The body of Allen Wood, who died Tuesday at Washington, will arrive in Atlanta at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Wood was seventy-nine years old and formerly lived in Atlanta. He is survived by three daughters, Miss Janie O. Wood, Mrs. George B. McGaughey and Mrs. J. B. Zachry. Funeral services will be held from the home of J. B. Zachry, 175 Angier Avenue, at 10 o'clock Thursday morning. Interment at Westview.

The Fundamental Pinciple Behind the New Currency Act

The fundamental principles of the Owen-Glass bill are, first, that the chief function of the banks of the country should be to foster commerce, trade and agriculture, and not speculation or underwriting syndicates; and, second, that the right to issue money is inherent in the Government, and that any association of private bankers vested with the power to issue money for general circulation, MUST be under the supervision and control of the Government; and, third, that all profits from such banking privileges in excess of 5 per cent return upon the capital furnished by the private bankers to such central association shall be paid over to the Government.

Under the new currency act, the entire operation of the national banks and the issue of "emergency currency" of the reserve banks shall be under the control of a Federal Board of seven members sitting at Washington. The Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture and the Comptroller of the Currency will be three of the members. The other four members, one of whom must be an experienced banker, are to be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Members of the Board are to serve for eight years, unless removed by the President.

This Federal Reserve Board will have complete veto power over, though not complete power to initiate action by, twelve Federal reserve banks distributed geographically according to the needs and volume of banking business in all parts of the country.

Every national bank shall be compelled to subscribe to the extent of 10 per cent of its own stock to the capital stock of the Federal Reserve Bank of its own district. Every bank shall be required, also, to keep at least 5 per cent of its reserve cash in the Federal Reserve Bank of its district.

None of the twelve Federal Reserve Banks shall accept deposits from individuals, but each shall represent all the banks in its district having Federal charters and shall also be Government depositories. In times of financial stringency any bank may take to the Federal Reserve Bank of its district merchants' acceptances or short-term notes ARISING OUT OF COMMERCIAL TRANSACTIONS for rediscount and obtain from the Federal Reserve Bank United States Treasury notes (currency) for 75 per cent of the face value of such notes.

The notes so rediscounted are to be limited solely to commercial bills payable within from forty-five to a hundred and twenty days, and no notes based upon stock or bond transactions shall be discounted. The notes so discounted will be backed by the entire assets of the bank pledging the notes, by the credit of the individual borrowers, and by the assets of the Federal Reserve Bank. The amount of paper which any individual bank may rediscount is limited to one-half its paid-in capital.

Each Federal Reserve Bank will be required at all times to keep on hand in actual gold 33 per cent of the aggregate amount of the commercial notes it rediscounts for the banks of its district.

The Federal Reserve Banks will obtain United States notes, or "emergency currency," to pay for these merchants' notes from the Federal Reserve Board at Washington at such rates of interest as the Federal Board shall fix from time to time.

The Owens-Glass bill in its present form does not provide specifically enough that the rate of discount shall be such that the "emergency currency" so issued shall automatically return to the Treasury and be canceled when the "emergency" is past. This emergency is usually a temporary panic, or the annual crop-moving in the autumn of every year when at least three hundred million dollars in currency is needed to pay the American farmer for his harvest.

The profits of the twelve district reserve banks will go to the national banks which contribute to its stock and reserve funds to the extent of a 5 per cent cumulative dividend annually, and no further. All profits in excess of 5 per cent will be used, first, to create a surplus fund equal to 20 per cent of the capital stock of each reserve bank, and after such reserve fund amounts to 20 per cent of such capital, all further profits go to the Government. Thereby all temptation to directors of the reserve banks to undertake undue risks or embark on unsafe financiering is removed.

The national banks who are stockholders elect six, and the President of the United States appoints three, of the nine directors of each district reserve bank. Three of the six directors elected by the banks must be men "fairly representative of the business and commercial interests of the district and not directors of any bank."

:: A Sermon for Many ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WHEN the long, hard day has vanished and you seek your waiting bed,
Try to live the dead hours over ere the pillow soothes your head.
Try to find some explanation for each thoughtless thing you've done;
Try to make some reparation for the trouble you've begun.
After all the petty gossip that you scattered through the day,
Think of how you knocked your neighbor, going calmly on his way.
Drag the unkind slings and arrows down from Memory's dusty shelf—
Then stand up before the mirror and begin to knock yourself.

Do not stand there smug and smirking, do not smooth your towsled hair!
Shake your fist at your reflection! Give yourself an icy glare!
Don't resolve that you are handsome when you ought to know you're not;
Rather tell the faithful mirror that it flatters you a lot.
Make wry faces by the dozen; try a cold, contemptuous sneer—
Such as you have tried on others. Give yourself a mocking leer.
Then the mirror will remind you, as all honest mirrors do,
That you're not one man in thousands—that you're only LITTLE YOU!

:: How to Deal With a Girl's Love Fancies ::

By DOROTHY DIX.

A FATHER who has a pretty, bright 18-year-old daughter for whom he has made many sacrifices to give advantages, is much distressed because she imagines herself in love with a callow youth of the same age, and he wants to know if there is any way in which he can keep her from wrecking her life by marrying this boy.

Surely. Here are a few simple home remedies for breaking up undesirable matches, that are guaranteed to work if applied with tact and discretion.

First, drop all opposition to the suitor. Quit abusing him. Just remember that romance thrives on difficulties, and that when you put a young man in the position of a poor, persecuted martyr, you simply crown him with a halo in the girl's sight. Also you make her his champion, and to back up her arguments in his favor she shuts her eyes to all of his faults, and not only magnifies his virtues but invents new ones for him.

Every novel represents the heroine as defying her parents, and her friends, and the general public, and being true to a noble, but misunderstood, young man, and as having her judgment justified by his turning out to be a duke in disguise, or getting elected President of the United States.

Cupid At His Worst.

When you oppose a silly young girl in a love affair, and read the riot act to her, you give her a chance to visualize herself in that poetic role, and it makes her do her clothes up in a bundle and sneak out of the house, and elope with the man that you have applied every opprobrious epithet to of which you could think. It is a matter of common knowledge that people never marry the nice, suitable individuals their families have picked out for them, and that nothing blights love's young dream like everybody smiling a blessing on it.

Yet in the face of this advanced information about how Cupid acts, parents persist in precipi-

Therefore, instead of forbidding Sam the house, invite him in. Have him around early and often, and give Mamie an overdose of his society, and before you know it they will have quarreled. And this nice hot weather, when nerves and temper are on edge, is a psychological moment in which to try the experiment. Ninety-nine in the shade is not propitious for growing sentiment. And I should casually remark to Mamie that, of course, if she was so fond of Sam and found her highest happiness in his company that there was no use in wasting any money on any other pleasure for her. Such as going off for a summer trip, for instance.

Don't abuse Sam. Don't discourse upon his weakness or his faults. Make fun of them. Point out his little eccentricities of manner or speech, and if you can enlist the assistance of some friend in this, all the better. A young girl can stand anything but ridicule.

She will defy you and marry a drunkard, or a gambler, or a man with a hectic past, but she will quail before the knowledge that people laugh at a man for eating peas with his knife, or using bad grammar, or being a cube.

Another effective way of breaking off an undesirable match is to send the girl away on a trip, or to make a good long visit. Propinquity is responsible for more marriages than anything else. At the love time of life a girl is sure to imagine that she cherishes a deathless passion for any good-looking man who happens to be in sight, but get her away from him and his spell is broken.

Cured Girl's Infatuation.

She sees other men. She gets a new standard of comparison, with the almost invariable result that in six months she wouldn't look at the man that she thought she was so crazy to marry. It's a case of counter irritation, and it works out as well in love as it does in medicine.

Still another way to deal with the situation is to quit theorizing and preaching about it, and give the girl a living picture of the way the marriage she proposes to make would work out in real life. I once knew a wise father who followed this course.

His daughter, a dainty, cultivated girl, who had been reared amidst the most refined surroundings, thought she was in love with a handsome young man who was himself coarse and vulgar, and came from a family far below the girl's in social status.

After every argument had been used in vain to prevail upon the girl not to make a match that was bound to bring her disillusion and unhappiness, her father said to her: "I want you to go and spend a month with this young man's family, who will be your family if you marry him. You will bear his name, his position will be yours, and he will have a right to expect you to live as his mother and sisters do."

Corned Beef and Cabbage.

Well, the girl went. She associated with his frowsy mother and sisters, and was bored to death by their ignorant conversation. She saw his father and his brothers sitting around the house in their stocking feet, and with their coats and collars off, smoking pipes.

She ate corned beef and cabbage dinners. She participated in parties where they rushed the growler, and sang rag-time to a pianola accompaniment, and at the end of a week she came back home cured.

Still another father that I knew kept his daughter from marrying a drunkard by taking her where she saw him in his cups. It was one thing to have the young man appear before her pale, poetic, wistful eyed, repentant, telling her that she could save him by marrying him, and another to behold him maudlin, nauseated, a thing of disgust that made her turn from him with loathing.

Oh, there are many ways to break up an undesirable match—absence, ridicule, the substitution of a new toy for the old, bumping a girl up against the reality, even dropping a sly hint to the man that he's throwing himself away on the girl, and that Mamie is delicate, or has ways, or that she has a temper concealed about her angelic person, or that she's extravagant. There are forty-seven different varieties of ways of turning the trick, and all of them work except forbidding the banns. That merely eggs on the wedding.

Garrett P. Serviss

Writes on

Education Will Banish Wars

A Very Remarkable Incident on the Bloody Field of Gettysburg Proves This Belief. Conscientious Soldiers Will Bring Peace.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

ONE of the most significant revelations of the mind of the soldier in battle that I have ever seen is in a letter from a Confederate soldier to General J. L. Chamberlain, which the general quotes in his dramatic story of the awful battle of Gettysburg in HEARST'S MAGAZINE for June.

The letter is too long to be inserted in this brief article, but you should read it in full, and in connection with the vivid picture of the scenes of that heroic contest (the mightiest battle ever fought on American soil), in order to understand its significance.

Impossible to Pull Trigger.

The incident to which the letter refers occurred during the struggle among the rocks for the possession of the famous "Round Tops." The writer, who was a member of an Alabama regiment, had placed himself in a secure position between two rocks, where, unseen himself, he had a clear view of the nearby Federal lines, and particularly of General Chamberlain, whose rank he recognized by his uniform.

He knew the importance of picking off officers, and he drew a bead on General Chamberlain, resting his gun on a rock to get a sure aim. But, as he was about to pull the trigger, a sudden qualm arrested him, and he did not fire. Then he grew ashamed of his weakness and drew a bead a second time.

"I had you, perfectly certain. But that same queer something shut right down on me. I couldn't pull the trigger, and I gave it up—that is, your life."

There are plenty of stories of the blind madness and of the unnatural calm that, at different times, possess the soldier in battle, making him, in one case, shoot and thrust and strike almost without volition, and, in the other case, perform similar acts with the cold, unsympathetic precision of a machine; but it is rare, outside of fiction, to hear of an incident like this, where conscience asserts its rights.

His Own Better Nature.

No doubt some persons would see, in the resistless impulse that restrained that shot, a mystic influence which, for some providential purpose, paralyzed the finger that was curved to press the trigger; but such ideas belong to the days when the Olympian gods were believed to guide the spear of Achilles or to throw a mantle of invisibility about Hector.

We should rather ascribe the incident to the personality of the soldier, whose hand was arrested by the expostulation of his own better nature. Viewed from that point, it becomes significant of the growth of moral sentiment, which, in the end, will banish war altogether. Perhaps that merciful Confederate at Gettysburg was, in a sense, faithless to his cause. Who can say that, if the shot had been fired, the result of the struggle might not have been different? The fall of a leader has lost many a battle. Very likely if that act of mercy had been witnessed by the commander of the Alabama regiment he would have cut the conscientious soldier down with his sword as a recreant from duty!

Yet the man who spared the general's life afterward declared that he was glad that he could not press the trigger, and every generous mind approves his act and his sentiment.

In former days, when most battles were fought hand to hand and foot to foot, the FUROR CERTAMINIS (fury of the fight) had no such interruptions. Moral sentiment counted for little on the battlefield. There was no time for it to assert itself, even if it existed then as widely as it exists to-day. The dreadful scenes of slaughter that attended Caesar's campaigns in Gaul, and the sacks of cities in the Thirty Years' War, would be impossible now among civilized people.

Education Will Bring Peace.

When a modern soldier, secure in his position, sights along his gun at an enemy, his mind is in a state for reflection upon the nature and consequences of his intended act of slaughter, and the mere fact that he can strike at a distance and unseen may restrain him, as it did in this case, from striking at all. He balances his public duty against his personal conscience, and unless the former overwhelmingly appeals to him, the latter may prevail. If he can see a chance for mercy he will exercise it.

All this shows plainly the direction which the advocates of universal peace (and we are all such advocates, though we may differ in our ideas about methods) should take in order to bring about the result they aim at. It is the direction of EDUCATION. A gun in the hands of a conscientious soldier is a moral force for peace, and so is a powerful battle fleet in the hands of a great, civilized nation.

The Treaty of Tien-Tsin

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE Treaty of Tien--tsin, concluded 55 years ago, will probably loom large in the history of the time to come, very much larger than it does to-day.

It was about the year 1517 (the year of the great Reformation) that China began to be vaguely known to Europeans. The Jesuits appeared among the Celestials about 1525, and in 1790 the English figure among the "Foreign Devils." The Englishman is nothing if not commercial, and, thinking that he saw a good thing in opium, began a quarrel with the Chinaman over that drug that lasted for years; of which, so far as the honor of England is concerned, the least said the better.

In 1857 took place the war between England and China, which ended with the total destruction of the Chinese fleet by Commodores Elliot and Seymour, and the perpetual establishment of John Bull in the island of Hongkong.

The Treaty of Tien-tsin, which clinched the war of 1857, created a new departure on the part of the quaint and ancient people of the Flowery Kingdom. Among its provisions were: The establishment of ambassadorships at both courts, a larger freedom of trade, the toleration of the Christian religion, a revision of the tariff, and the guarantee that the term "barbarian" should no longer be applied to Europeans.

With this Treaty of Tien-tsin begins Modern China. But a little more than half a century has elapsed—an insignificant period in the evolution of a great nation's life—and yet we already have some pretty strong intimations of the possibilities of the future. Beyond a doubt it behooves the white man the world over to prepare for those possibilities, if we may not say probabilities.

The yellow men number at least 500,000,000. From the Japanese we learn what 50,000,000 of yellow men are able to do; and from that we are in a position to guess with a fair degree of accuracy what 500,000,000 of yellow men can do if fully prepared. With thousands of miles of Pacific seacoast, does it not behoove the United States to look well to the ways and means of its supremacy on the great Western waters?

DRAGNET OUT FOR AUTOIST MAIMING GIRL

LEVEE AT EXECUTIVE MANSION SETS HIGH MARK FOR BRILLIANCY

Atlanta society is congratulating Mrs. John Marshall Slaton to-day on the success of her first formal entertainment as mistress of the Executive Mansion.

The reception, given by Governor and Mrs. Slaton at the mansion Wednesday night in honor of the General Assembly was, in addition to being the first of the new administration, one of the most brilliant official receptions in Georgia's history.

Several hundred people attended the affair. The United States Army was represented by General Evans and his staff, and Colonel Van Orsdale and the officers from Fort McPherson in full dress uniform.

Mansion and Grounds a Garden.

To accommodate the large crowd, the lawn of the Executive Mansion had been turned into a garden, with the sides inclosed by a hedge of small pine trees eight or ten feet in height. From the entrance on Cain Street a little avenue of bay trees led to the main entrance under the mansion.

Governor and Mrs. Slaton received their guests in a pergola of white columns, festooned with smilax. Standing with them were President of the Senate and Mrs. Randolph Anderson and Speaker of the House and Mrs. William Burwell. They were assisted in entertaining the guests by the members of the Governor's staff, members of the family, and a group of Mrs. Slaton's friends.

A party of society girls, including Misses Margaret Grant, Margaret Hawkins, Passie May Ottley, Harriet Calhoun, Marjorie Brown, Adgate Ellis and Virginia Lipscomb, served punch, lemonade and coffee.

Mrs. Slaton Gowned Exquisitely.

Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. Slaton's mother, who resides with her, assisted the new mistress of the Executive Mansion in presenting the guests. She has as her especial guests Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hunt, of Eatonton.

Mrs. Slaton wore a gown of white chiffon cloth, combined with delicate pattern of fillet lace and apricot satin. The lace was in long tunics on each side of the front panel of chiffon, which was embroidered in a flower design of tiny crystal sequins in pastel shades. A rhinestone sparkled in the center of each flower. Over the back of the gown was draped a long sash of apricot satin, and the narrow pointed train was bordered with the same. The chiffon sleeves were overlace, and met by long gloves. She wore a necklace of pearls and diamonds, and two corsage pieces of precious stones.

SERBS DECLARE WAR ON ALLY; BATTLE ON

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

USKUB, July 3.—Servia formally declared war against Bulgaria this afternoon.

The proclamation was issued by King Peter of Servia declaring Servia and Bulgaria to be in a state of war.

Reinforcements Are Sent to Greek Army.

ATHENS, July 3.—Heavy reinforcements were sent to-day to strengthen the Greek army advancing toward Ligovani in Albania. Military telegrams from headquarters in Salonika report the Greeks are meeting stout resistance, but driving all before them. There has been enormous loss of life.

Servian King Goes To Scene of Fighting.

BELGRADE, July 3.—King Peter and Premier Pasitch of Servia left to-day for Servian military headquarters at Uskub, where a formal declaration of war against Bulgaria probably will be made at once. Servia will charge Bulgaria with provoking hostilities.

Roumanians Ready To Join Servians.

BUCHAREST, ROUMANIA, July 3. Seventy-five thousand Roumanians are under arms awaiting any eventuality. King Charles is preparing to throw his forces against the Bulgarians because of Bulgaria's refusal to give certain territorial compensation to Roumania for remaining neutral in the Balkan war.

Great Battle in Progress; Many Slain.

VIENNA, July 3.—A great battle between Bulgarian and Servian troops is being fought at Veles, 50 miles southwest of Uskub. Heavy casualties are reported.

A Sofia dispatch, uncensored at Belgrade, got through this afternoon reporting a Bulgarian victory. Sixteen hundred Servian soldiers and thirty officers were captured.

A Bulgarian army had begun to march upon Salonika. King Constantine is rallying an army to deefnd the city. A Greek fleet is being concentrated in the Salonika harbor to bombard the Bulgarians if they get within artillery range.

Son of Rich Family Goes to Rock Pile

COLUMBUS, July 3.—The Columbus recorder has sent a member of a well-known family to the rock pile on a charge of vagrancy. The young man in question, while belonging to a family of ample means, has been depending for a number of years on his family for support, although warned by the police that he must go to work.

When brought before the recorder and given a fine of $15 or 30 days, he was compelled to go to the rock pile, because he did not have the money to pay his fine.

Almand said G. B. Cobb, vice president, and E. S. Vickery, a stock salesman, came to his home when he was unconscious, and, taking him to their office in an automobile, got his signature to a note for $2,000, secured by a mortgage on a house he owned. Suffragists Denied Senate Chamber

SAVIOR CITED AS ANTI IN REFUSAL

The Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association ran afoul of the Georgia Senate Thursday, when Senator W. W. Stark caused to be laid on the table a request that the suffragists have the use of the Senate chamber two days during their State convention.

When asked by Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, the president, and Mrs. Amelia R. Woodall, the treasurer of the suffragists, why he opposed them, Senator Stark replied: "Because Jesus Christ did not call a woman for one of His twelve disciples, and because He was not a suffragist."

The suffrage question was injected into the Senate proceedings by Senator G. M. Huie, of the Thirty-fifth, who introduced by request a resolution that the use of the Senate chamber be extended to Mrs. S. E. Cunningham, Mrs. William H. Felton, Miss H. Augusta Howard, Mrs. J. J. Ansley, Mrs. J. H. Sibley "and several gentlemen, all citizens of Georgia," at 8 p. m., July 9 and 10, for the purpose of delivering addresses on "The Scope of the Elective Franchise."

Stark Balks at "Enlighten."

Deputy Clerk Hansell had barely finished reading the resolution when Senator Stark arose and asked:

"Mr. President, do these ladies and gentlemen intend to enlighten the Senate on the question of woman's suffrage?"

"In so far as I undersant it, that is the purpose of the meeting," President J. Randolph Anderson replied.

"Then I move to lay that resolution on the table," said Mr. Stark.

Upon a rising vote, the resolution was tabled, 20 to 7.

Mrs. McLendon said the State woman's suffrage convention desired the use of the Senate chamber, because of its excellent accoustics, and that it heretofore had been freely extended them. She said she believed they would get it this time, too, because Senator J. N. Watts, of the Eleventh, had promised to call for reconsideration of the resolution next Monday.

Invites Farm Finance Expert.

Speakers on the two evenings for which the Senate chamber is wanted will be the women mentioned in the resolution and the following men: Leonard Grossman, T. J. Skellie, the Rev. George Beattie, of Atlanta, and Martin V. Calvin, of Decatur.

At the earnest request of Senator John T. Allen, of the Twentieth, who read a letter from President J. C. McAuliffe, of Milledgeville, president of the Interstate Corn Growers' Association, the Senate took from the table and concurred in a House resolution inviting Herbert Myrick, of Springfield, Mass., to address the House and Senate at noon July 15, on the subject of co-operative rural finance in the cotton belt. Mr. Myrick will return from a study of co-operative farm credits in Europe in a few days, and will immediately start a Southern tour.

A written invitation was received to the July 4 celebration at St. Phillips Cathedral at 10:30 o'clock o. m. It was not accepted, because most of the Senators will be out of the city.

Other Bills Introduced.

Bills were introduced in the Senate as follows:

J. T. Peyton—Creating Warner County.

W. M. Olliff—Excepting private ponds from the closed fishing season.

J. T. Hixon—Fixing the salaries of county treasurers, after January 1, 1915, at $200 a year, in lieu of all commissions.

J. L. Sweat—Compulsory education law.

J. L. Sweat—Amending the 1911 drainage law.

R. T. DuBose—Making the president of hte board of trustees of the South Georgia Normal College an ex-officio trustee of the University of Georgia.

ACQUITTAL IN CHURCH QUIZ EXPECTED

Macon Chirstian Elders to Report Verdict in Charlton-Lester Case Sunday.

MACON, July 3.—The elders of the First Christian Church will report to the congregation Sunday morning on their investigation into the alleged visit made by Professor Frank M. Charlton, the choir leader, to the home of Mrs. Marvin Lee Lester, secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, on the night of June 5.

It is very probable that the elders will declare to the church that their inquiry has failed to prove the charge against the two prominent members of the congregation who are now under suspicion. It will be left to the congregation whether there shall be an open trial.

The elders last night visited the home of Mrs. Lester on Carling Avenue to determine if Mrs. J. W. Jenkins could have recognized Professor Charlton from the porch of her home across the street from the Lester residence.

Test Women's Story.

One of the elders entered the alley and stood by the side gate of the Lester back yard and other elders got on the porch of the Jenkins home and endeavored to distinguish him. They were unsuccessful, they say, and for that reason they are dubious as to Mrs. Jenkins' and Mrs. Alma Armstrong's statement that they positively recognized Professor Charlton.

Professor Charlton has laid his case before the elders, and has nothing to add to it. He says he left the church at 8:30 o'clock, took the organist, Miss Edith Howell, to her home, and reached his own home at 9 o'clock. His wife is also sure as to the time of his arrival. Mrs. Lester, Miss Howell and Professor Charlton live within six blocks of one another, and their neighborhod is about twenty minutes' distant from the church.

Publication Causes Stir.

The exclusive publication in Macon yesterday by The Georgian of the fact of the investigation being in progress caused a genuine sensation.

"Now that the affair has gotten in the papers," says Rev. Leroy M. Anderson, the pastor, "I am more than ever determined that there shall be a thorough investigation."

Lenoir M. Erwin, one of the elders, says:

"We are not going to have any whitewashing in this matter. If Professor Charlton is conclusively proven guilty, he will be summarily dismissed from the church. If his innocence is established, we want his vindication to be just as thorough."

The elders have several more persons to examine to-night.

Militants Freed by Hunger Strike Jailed

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 3.—The Government to-day rearrasted many militant suffragettes who were out of jail on tickets of leave owing to illness brought on by hunger strike.

Before noon Miss Annie Kenney, organizer of the Women's Social and Political Union; Miss Rachel Barrett, assistant editor of The Suffragette, and Miss Harriet Rebecca Kerr, manager of the headquarters of the Women's Social and Political Union, had been rearrested under the "cat and mouse bill" and were remanded in Holloway jail.

Stabbed Boy Dies; Chum Exonerated

John Edgar, 16 years old, of 81 Kennedy Street, who was accidentally stabbed by his chum, Frank Barton, Wednesday afternoon, died at Grady Hospital Thursday morning.

Eyewitnesses of the stabbing, including the victim, said it was an accident. Barton was demonstrating to Edgar the proper method of using a knife in a fight and in excitedly swinging the blade in the air, he cut his comrade.

The Burton boy was not arrested.

Weather Man Sees No Prospects Now Of Cooler Weather

"There is no immediate prospect of much cooler weather. The temperature will hang around between 88 and 90 for quite awhile," was the answer given by the seer when asked when the hot spell would end.

Rain was general over Texas Thursday, and cool weather prevailed in the Rocky Mountain region, but Mr. VonHerrmann said there was no chance for the welcome effects of either to reach Atlanta.

The thermometer registered 80 at 9 o'clock Thursday morning, 84 at 10 o'clock and 86 at 11 o'clock. At noon the mercury had jumped to 88. The Weather Bureau predicted it would not go above 90.

Humans to Lose Teeth, Hair, Eyes, Doctor Predicts

A toothless, hairless, eyeless race!

That is the ultimate fate of humanity if the present rate of deterioration keeps up, according to Dr. L. C. Allen, chairman of the Committee on Hygiene and Sanitation of the Georgia House of Representatives.

"The human race is fast losing its teeth," declared Dr. Allen before the Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association Wednesday afternoon. "The child of to-day has not nearly as good teeth as its grandfather had, and the time will undoubtedly come when there won't be a human tooth on earth, except in the museums. Mankind is also losing its sight, and is becoming a race of baldheads.

"The loss of teeth, eyes and hair is due to the refusal of modern man to obey the simple rules of hygiene and sanitation."

10-inch Rain in Texas Hundreds Homeless

FORT SMITH, ARK., July 3.—More than ten inches of rain has fallen and a mile and a half of the Frisco Railway tracks has been washed away near Greenville, Texas, according to a bulletin at the Frisco headquarters here this morning.

Hundreds are homeless and the city light and water plants are out of commission. It still is raining.

U. S. Correspondent Expelled by Mexico

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, July 3.—Fitzgerald Slocum, Mexico City correspondent of The Los Angeles Times, was expelled from Mexico to-day under "law 33," which provides for the expulsion of "undesirable aliens."

It is understood that the Government holds Slocum responsible for the recent report that a receiver had been appointed for the national system.

45,930 Bathers At Piedmont Since May

Dan Carey, general manager of parks, gave out a report to-day showing that 45,930 baths have been taken in Piedmont Lake since its opening on May 22. Of this number 10,620 were women, 10,793 boys and 25,517 men. The total number last season was only 35,000.

A report of the life savers shows that 32 men and 2 women have been rescued from drowning this season.

Probe of Protected Vice Charge Likely

That Superior Judge W. D. Ellis would charge the Grand July for the July term to investigate vice from a standpoint of alleged protection was considered more than likely Thursday.

The jury was drawn Thursday morning. It will meet Monday morning to organize and receive the judge's charge.

5 CHILDREN DIE IN FIRE.

VALENCIA, PA., July 3.—Five children of W. A. Hays, a farmer near here, were burned to death in their home to-day. The parents were not at home.

POLICE CHIEF OPENS WAR ON SPEED FIENDS

War was declared Thursday by Chief of Police Beavers upon automobile speed fiends as the result of the conduct of the automobilist who ran down 14-year-old Eva Kilpatrick on Mills Street Wednesday and then raced on without stopping to learn the extent of the girl's injuries.

The car was going at express speed and was upon the terrified girl before she could make any effort to escape. She was hurled from the middle of the street to the sidewalk, where she lay unconscious. The large touring car dashed on and turned into Williams Street before its number could be taken.

The police dragnet is out for the driver of the car. Special men have been detailed to learn his identity. All of the police have instructions to assist in the crusade which has been started against reckless driving.

Mothers Aid Police.

Chief Beavers and Recorder Nash Broyles in strongest terms Thursday denounced the speed mania and proclaimed war upon the violators of the traffic ordinances. They were joined in their campaign by the mothers living in the vicinity of the Kilpatrick girl's home at 174 Hamilton Street. They have organized themselves into a vigilance committee to take the numbers of the cars that flash by and report them to the police.

Recorder Broyles was particularly bitter in his denunciation of the speeders who daily are defying the ordinances and endangering the lives of pedestrians. He would not discuss the Kilpatrick case, as the automobilist might be brought before him for trial, but he said, in discussing reckless driving generally:

"These speed maniacs who are brought before me are going to get the limit. This extremely dangerous practice must stop. If there is any way to lessen the number of victims of this speeding Juggernaut, which takes a frightful toll annually in all of the cities of the country, this court is going to support that plan with all its might.

"Atlanta automobilists show a wanton disregard for the lives of other people. Because prosecutions in the past have not been so frequent or so severe as they might, they have taken a ruthless license that daily puts lives in peril. The wonder is that more accidents are not reported.

Stockade Term Threatened.

"The drivers have become so lawless and careless of life that this court in the future may be relied upon to give the violators the limit. Whether or not the offending motorist is a member of a wealthy family, he will be sent to the stockade if it is proved that he is guilty of the brutal disregard for human life which has been evident on the streets of Atlanta since the summer season began this year."

Chief Beavers branded as an inhuman outrage the action of the automobilist who ran down the Kilpatrick girl.

"It is difficult," said the Chief, "to conceive of the inhumanity that will permit a man, after he has been the cause of an accident that has maimed or possibly killed an innocent little girl, to speed on out of sight, never even looking back nor returning to extend what aid he can.

"I have detailed men especially on this case. We are trying to learn the identity of the driver. The only woman who saw the accident tells us that the car was going so fast she could not be certain whether the driver was a white man or a negro."

Angry Mothers on Watch.

Mrs. A. J. Heyback, of 48 Mills Street, in front of whose home the accident occurred, was greatly aroused Thursday over the narrow escape from death of the Kilpatrick

THE GHOST BREAKER

By G. W. GODDARD and PAUL DICKEY

Adapted From the Big Broadway Success That Thrilled Thousands of New Yorkers

SERIALIZED

By J. W. McCONAUGHY

(Copyright, 1913, by Star Co.)

IN all the thousands of square feet of steep slate roof there is one loose nail. It thrusts its head up in that one-inch strip where it can catch and hold the bootheel of the steeplejack who is sliding to his death.

This grim, freakish humor of the Powers That Be, which is miscalled "coincidence," caused Warren Jarvis to mistake his right for his left hand as he was running for his life down a carpeted corridor of the Hotel Vanderlip far above the night roar of Broadway. Thus he turned, not into the room that led to the fire escape, but into the bed chamber of the Dona Maria Theresa of Segura, Princess of Aragon, who had a lot of other titles and innumerable privileges, none of which she needed at that moment nearly so much as she needed Warren Jarvis, fleeing the vengeance of the law.

Fevered and distraught the Princess had retired to rest, but not to sleep, an hour before. Her situation, the peril that menaced her, belonged to an age that lives to-day only in Scott and Froissart. Four or five centuries before her countryman Cervantes had slain with a laugh the type of man who would gladly have aided her, and would have seen nothing ridiculous about it. Her ancestral home, the ancient castle of the Seguras, was given over to bats and owls by night and crows by day.

Hidden somewhere among the deadly pitfalls and secret passages of the castle was a treasure of a million dollars in gold. It was guarded by a ghost, a true specter that men had scoffed at and braved—and then had promptly disappeared.

Now it was no longer scoffed at or braved. But she had just received a cable dispatch telling her that her brother had entered the castle and around her neck hung the solution to the hiding place of the treasure, the little chart found that day after a weary search.

A Duke's Offer.

It was a tale to tell a knight of Arthur's table, not to a Castilian dandy of the twentieth century, soft-handed and sophisticated. Her kinsman, the Duke of Alva, indeed, had offered to be her champion, but he bargained in advance, and the guerdon he asked was her hand. And, besides, lately she had had cause to distrust deeply the honor and honesty of her kinsman of Alva.

Dona Maria had never read the lines of Mr. Kipling's "Romance is Dead!"—and all unseen, romance brought on the nine-fifteen, or she might have had more faith in a power still strong enough to run express trains. When the splendid, silly order of chivalry fell and died the winds of romance carried a few of the seeds across the seas to a broad and fertile valley and dropped them in the rich soil where the Ohio comes down to meet the Mississippi. There, as elsewhere, custom makes law, regardless of written statutes. And so it was that, following a custom that had grown from one of those seeds, as immutable as the Cumberland ridges, a young man in evening clothes, clean of heart, brave and good humored, with a 1912 model pistol gripped in his overcoat pocket, walked past Dona Maria's door in a New York hotel, seeking the head of the Markhams, to kill or be killed in a fair fight, for no other reason than that the man he sought was the head of the Markhams and had invited him to "shoot it out."

But Dona Maria did not know this. As simply as the distressed damosel of Arthur's time she prayed for help, and was sinking into the uncertain doze of the sorely troubled—when romance answered the prayer.

The silence of the cloistral corridor was blasted with a sharp double-crack—the reports of two pistols coming as closely together as you might snap the third and fourth fingers of your hand.

Dona Maria sat up with a start.

"Madre de Dios!" came a self-strangled scream from the maid's room. "What is it?"

There followed instantly a soft thudding of running feet and a hand violently shook her door. The Princess sprang up with a frightened cry, flung a dressing gown about her and switched on an alcove light. The brass slot in the door frame leaped out, a young man darted inside, closed and bolted the door, and stood crouched against it, panting. A pistol was clutched in his hand and a red trickle ran down and dripped off the barrel on to the red carpet.

The Hunt.

"Madre de Dios!" shrieked the maid again.

"Sh-h!" commanded the young man at the door in a stern whisper. "Keep quiet—don't make any noise!"

The first shock of the alarm past, the Princess stepped out into the dim light from the alcove, holding the dressing gown closely about her. She was a true daughter of romance, hot-blooded and courageous, with no more "nerves" than the mountains that guarded her castle home.

"What do you want?" she demanded, advancing upon the intruder.

For reply he waggled the pistol impatiently and pressed his ear more closely to the door. A confused sound of voices and a mighty running to and fro came from the hall.

"What's the bally row?"

"I heard him—he ran past my door!"

"Anybody killed?"

"What the ——'s loose now?"

"It was two shots—I heard 'em."

The coolness with which he ignored her presence and perfectly natural injuries as to the cause of the intrusion banished what little trace of alarm was in the Princess' bosom and left only indignation.

"How dare you enter"——

"Sh—silence!" he interrupted, so sharply that she obeyed through sheer amazement. "Not a sound! Do you understand?"

Dona Maria opened her lips to blast him, to summon aid, but the hubbub without broke out anew and she listened. The steps and voices were passing the door.

"It was a pistol, I tell you."

"Well, where'd he go?"

"Look out on the fire escape, Jim!"

"No, he's on this floor."

"How could he get downstairs, you dunce!"

The hue and cry reached down the hall and the Princess swept down upon Mr. Jarvis, who finally straightened up and faced her.

A Man's Appeal.

"Now, what does this mean?" she demanded, grimly, in a swift glance taking account of the evening clothes and the trim, well set-up figure of the man who had wrenched the lock of a door out of its frame. But, though she was brave, she also took account of the pistol.

"Is it money you want?" she demanded, with a curl of her lip. She drew back against the bed. "Every cent I have is on the dressing table. Take it and go!"

The young man pushed his hat back and mopped his brow with the back of his hand.

She noticed that he was panting hard and was very much more agitated than she was. Even the pistol lost its terror.

"Well, then—what do you want?" she cried.

He was about to reply when the sound of the returning hunt reached his ears.

"Wait—wait!" he begged, swiftly. "They're coming here! They must not search this room—do you understand? You must put them off! For pity's sake," he pleaded, "you must put them off! I'm not what you think I am—I haven't done anything wrong—I'll explain afterward!" And he slipped behind the curtain of the alcove as there came an authoritative knock at the door and the maid ran into the room, crying "Madame, something dreadful has happened!"

Dona Maria silenced her. Her eyes were on the door, and she was thinking rapidly. According to those deeply versed in human affairs the truth has no particular accent of its own. But Dona Maria was not deeply versed in these matters—and she was a woman, with a woman's swift, subconscious reasoning. He had told the truth—he was a gentleman—he was hunted and in sore need of a friend, and so was she. A man would have considered only the fact of the shots, the pistol and the flight, and left it to a jury of men, a man-judge and man's law to sift out the rights of the case.

Bang—bang! A more violent assault on the door.

A Woman's Way.

"Open it, Nita," was the quiet command. The maid moved gingerly up to the door and Dona Maria took a last quick glance at the curtains that hid the young man who fought with a pistol in a Broadway hotel, broke locks with his hands and had thrown himself on her mercy.

Nita opened the door part way and the house detective, a short, squat man about three feet thick, thrust himself in.

"You all right here?" he asked curtly.

"Si, senor," lisped Nita, timidly. The Princess came forward.

"What is it, Nita?" she asked with becoming dignity. The maid drew aside.

"My mistress," she bowed.

The detective half bowed. "Excuse me, madam," he said, with a slight abatement of his brusqueness. "I'm the house detective. You all right in here?"

For a bare instant Dona Maria hesitated. Then:

"Yes," she said.

"Oh, madame," wailed the girl, after he had gone. "I am so frightened! What is it?—what is it?"

"Control yourself, Nita," the mistress reproved her. "Go to bed. I shall not need you until 6 o'clock."

Sniffling, but subdued, Nita returned to her bedroom and shut herself in. Jarvis emerged from the shelter of the alcove.

"Thank you," he said simply. "Would you mind bolting that door again?" The Princess stared at him, paralyzed by his assurance. With magnificent impudence, so it seemed to her, he did not understand why she did not obey. "He might return," he reminded her. And, undecided whether to laugh, cry or turn him over to the house detective, Princess Dona Maria of Aragon went and bolted the door.

As she turned back to him he pointed with his pistol to the door of the maid's room.

No Way Out.

"Is there no way out throught that door?" he asked.

She told him there was not.

"The fire escape—where is it?"

"In the hall opposite," replied Dona Maria, gazing at him in wonder and perplexity. She knew nothing about him, except that he was, unless appearances were very deceiving, a fugitive from justice. Yet he took it for granted that she was his ally. She was under 30 and considered one of the most beautiful women in Spain. Her kinsman of Alva, who had a discriminating taste in such matters, had made her beauty famous in five capitals, and those of his sex who had been fortunate enough to glimpse her, by accident, in the warmly colored and clinging gown of the boudoir that betrayed every exquisite line, declared that those who had seen Dona Maria only in the ballroom and at the dinner table would have to wait for the houris of Paradise to form some idea of her true loveliness. Yet she was certain that this young man could not have told at that moment if she had cross eyes and a hair lip. Indeed, if there had been any doubt about it his next utterance would have removed it.

"Across the hall? H——l!" he exclaimed, with energy. "I was certain that light was—oh, I beg pardon," he broke off suddenly, and was so boyishly embarrassed and contrite that Dona Maria was certain he had at last noticed the absence of the hair lip. But this did not mean forgiveness.

"Well, why don't you go?" she inquired, coldly.

His confusion increased. "But—but I can't go that way," he protested, waving the pistol hopelessly at the hall door. "They're waiting for me in the hall!"

"Well," the Princess gazed at him with an unusual iciness in her great dark eyes, "what do you expect me to do about it?"

Now this was a tactical blunder, for it summoned the young man's sense of the ridiculous to his aid—and he smiled. If he were not the hero of this narrative it would be a truthful recorder's duty to set down that he grinned. Dona Maria was piqued, but felt herself warm to a man who could smile—or grin—when a house full of police were looking for him. And then came the romantic thought that this was the type of man to be her champion. She surveyed him swiftly, but accurately.

The brass slot in the door frame leaped out, a young man darted inside, closed and bolted the door, and stood crouched against it, panting. A pistol was clutched in his hand and a red trickle ran down and dripped off the barrel on to the red carpet.

A Modern Hero.

He was not the stuff that dream heroes are made of—at least not to look at, if his build were excepted. He was tall, with broad, slender shoulders and a certain lightness of step and frictionless ease of movement that explained the collapse of the brass lock. But his rumpled hair—he had just at that moment removed his opera hat and was nervously tapping his thigh with it—was a nondescript, plebeian sandy shade, and his good-humored face seemed to have borrowed some of the pigment of the hair. The nose was straight but generously flecked with freckles about the bridge. The mouth was liberally designed, and when he smiled—or grinned—showed rows of strong, white teeth. The eyes were of a kind of sandy gray, and, like Alan Breck's, had a sort of dancing madness in them.

It was a head that would have thrown a Gibson into convulsions, but a Holbein would have clapped a steel cap on it and made it immortal.

Dona Maria noted all of this, but took open note only of the smile—or grin.

"Is the situation so amusing?" she inquired, with increasing wintriness of me and look.

He made a quick gesture of apology nd was instantly serious.

"I'm not laughing at you—I beg your pardon. I blundered in here by mistake—but I'm in a tight place. I can't leave by that door. I must find some other way."

He threw open his overcoat as he spoke and she saw the blood on his hand. This was the last needed touch. She was a woman.

"You're wounded!" she exclaimed, going to him and looking at the hand solicitously. "What's happened? Those shots I heard—"

He nodded and laughed silently. "I almost stopped one of the bullets. It just nudged me as it was going by."

"Your hand is bleeding dreadfully."

"Oh, not much," he assured her, and tried awkwardly to tie the wrist with his handkerchief, still holding the revolver. The Princess half raised her hands to assist him and drew back. He did not notice. He was gazing about the room with a troubled frown.

"I don't see how the devil——" he muttered, more to himself than to her, evidently trying to devise some means of escape. Dona Maria drew a little farther away.

"You have evidently shot some one and are trying to make me shield you from justice," she said sternly.

"No, not justnce," he rejoined instantly, "from the law."

"I thought they were the same."

He shook his head gravely. "No, not always. There would be no justice for me at the hands of the law."

He looked into her eyes as he spoke, and for a few moments they stood thus in silence. The woman's eyes turned away first.

"That is not for me to decide," she declared.

"But I want you to decide," he urged gently. "At least, you must listen. And if you find me guilty I'll—well, I'll try the fire escape or anything—anything else you say."

The Princess raised her eyes to his and found them so full of earnest pleading that she dropped them once more.

"That is ridiculous," she said, but with such marked lack of conviction that he smiled.

"Hardly ridiculous," he objected; "when I'm arguing for my life."

Having fully made up her mind to listen, Dona Maria found another objection. Her eyes rested on the revolver.

"Can any decision be more unjust than mine," she asked coldly, "that must be made at the point of a pistol?"

He started, and flushed, and gazed down at his right hand. He had forgotten that he was still holding the revolver. Then he walked over to the dressing table and placed it within easy reach of her hand, and stood off some little distance, so that she was between him and the weapon.

"There is nothing to prevent your calling for help now," he said, hopelessly. "After all, it doesn't much matter whether the end comes now or to-morrow or the day after."

The Princess eyed him steadily until she was convinced that the despair was not a sham. There was no trace of the disarming smile.

His Explanation.

"The end?" she echoed, somewhat blankly. "Then why didn't you give yourself up?"

"That would have been the end," was the grim reply. Dona Maria's manner softened ever so slightly and she moved very slowly toward him. He correctly interpreted this as encouragement to proceed.

"Do you know what a feud is?" he asked abruptly. Her eyes opened wide and she pointed out in the general direction whence those shots had come.

"Feud!" sh exclaimed in a low voice "Was that——?"

"Yes," he nodded. "That was the end of a feud. Do you know what a feud is?"

"Spain is the home of feuds," she replied, softly.

Jarvis started and his face lit with hope. "Spain!" he exclaimed. "Are you Spanish? Then you will understand! My grandmother was Spanish—one of the oldest families in Cuba. I was born in Kentucky, but they sent me East to be reared. I was called home suddenly by the death of my father—shot in a feud. They told me the ghastly history of our feud," he went on rapidly, his voice vibrant with emotion, "how our family had been assassinated, man after man, by the descendants of Daniel Markham. Then my father fell, leaving me—the last—to fight it out alone!"

He paused with a gulp and Dona Maria, leaning toward him, asked softly: "And your mother?"

"She has gone, too."

"She—she died?" The question was almost reverent.

"She died. God only knows what I've been through since then!"

He turned away and there was a little silence.

"But," said Dona Maria, as if gently arguing a point with an old friend, "why didn't you leave Kentucky?"

He jerked himself around impatiently.

"I did leave Kentucky—I was forced to leave!" he cried. "I had grown sick at heart and—and the odds were too great. I sent a negro servant to New York and followed soon after by another route; but it was no use. I was going to sail for Europe, longing for peace, but they wouldn't let me. Every move was watched! I had hardly been in New York five hours before I realized that the Markham clan was on my trail, eager to get me before I could get out of the country. They thought I was afraid, when I was only sick of it. A message reached me at my hotel—across the street—at 12 o'clock tonight. It was signed 'Jim Markham'—the head of the family—and proposed that as we were out of Kentucky we end the feud amicably. I knew the name, I knew what he meant, and I went to see him—prepared!"

Her Side of It.

He shrugged his shoulders half in resignation, half in despair.

"It was as I expected. He was stopping in this hotel—on this floor. I threw open the door of the room, unannounced. Nothing was said—we both fired." He looked down at his wounded and, and his dramatic manner vanished.

"Now do you understand why the law would not give me justice?" he asked quietly.

The girl shuddered. "It's all so horrible," she murmured. "Did—did you kill him?"

Jarvis opened his hands and dropped them, limp.

"I don't know," he replied indifferently. "He dropped—I didn't wait."

He looked past, not at, her as he spoke. The lethargy, the mental and physical languor, that succeeds a terrible crisis was upon him—the time when a man feels that he is without strength, without friends, without hope.

The girl sensed the change in him and was surprised to feel a twinge of impatience.

"What are you going to do?" she asked crisply.

Jarvis shrugged his shoulders. "I don't know." The tone was dull and hopeless. "What's the use of going on? Do you know what it means," he went on bitterly, "to fight single-handed against fearful odds—to fight an endless fight alone?"

"Yes," she said, half audibly; "yes, I know."

"A barren, fruitless, hopeless fight—without even a single gleam of love or word of encouragement?"

"Yes," replied Dona Maria, slowly and with meaning, "I know what it means."

Jarvis stared at her. "You know?" he exclaimed, incredulously. "How could you know—how could any woman know?"

"Yes, I know," declared the Princess, somberly. "Because I, too, am fighting against fearful odds."

The young woman gazed at her in wonder that gave way to sympathy and more wonder as her loveliness came upon him.

"There is no man to fight for you?" he asked, betraying his thought in his question. Dona Maria understood.

"No man left who dares," she replied with bitterness.

As his gaze strayed from the soft, deep black eyes to the pile of soft black hair and down the curve of the soft, creamy cheek to the smooth red lips, he wondered, even in the depths of his misery, what manner of men she had about her.

"God!" he breathed, fervently, "if here had only been some woman to fight for in my fight!"

And if he had said all that was in his mind he would have inserted the words, "like you." Dona Maria must have understood that these words were implied, for she said softly:

"It seems as though Providence had thrown you in my path. You say there would be no justice for you at the hands of the law? If you are found here it means your life."

"Yes," he replied and waited curiously for what was to come. Dona Maria appeared to deliberate.

"Suppose I decide to help you," she suggested gravely, "and drive a hard bargain?"

Jarvis was relieved to find that he could smile again. So was Dona Maria, but she did not publish her feelings.

"What do you mean?" he inquired.

"Your life in Kentucky is finished—you can never go back to it."

"GRACIOUS!" said the girl in the lizard green gown. "You've got your hair pulled back! Why do you do it so plainly?"

"It isn't!" objected the young married woman, ungrammatically. "It's no plainer than yours or any one else—it's just that you've been used to seeing me with all my hair on—puffs, transformations, braid and Billie Burke curls! Oh, I stuck to them long after every one else had gone in for the new plain style, using just one's own hair. But I didn't have enough own hair to make a hit with, and, anyhow, I look better with my hair sort of elaborate. But I'm cured!"

"Who did it?"

"It wasn't a who, it was a what," explained the young married woman. "But I'll tell you, anyway.

"The other day I remembered that I was due at the Splurge wedding that evening, so I shampooned my own hair and washed my own hair once removed in gasoline. Now, if there is anything I dislike, it is to go by a building and think an Indian reservation has broken loose and is exhibiting scalplocks—for that is what I'm always reminded of when I see curls and puffs and things pinned to the lace curtains where they will get the breeze and sun and will lose their gasoliny perfume.

Hidden From View.

"So after my extra adornments were cleansed I pinned them inside the window curtains, where they were hidden from the view of the populace. Then, feeling safe and at peace, I sat on the sun porch and read a book and dried my truly hair. After a while, when it got to be luncheon time, I went to my bedroom for something and casually glanced at the curtains where modestly hung my other hair. Only it didn't hang there. The curtains flapped mockingly, and if you had seen me dive headforemost at that open window you would have been justified in the belief that suicide was the best thing I did.

"Down in the alley below was a lovely sea of mud. They are building on the next lot, and the heavy wagons with brick and cement and things have made a regular morass of the place. Probably my hair was in the mud. As I stared a particularly heavy wagon lumbered and squashed through, shaking off several pounds of brickdust. I shrieked madly for help, and Tilly, the baby's nurse, came running.

"Those luffly puffs!' Tilly wailed and darted forthwith to the alley, while I directed operations from above. Tilly balanced on a brick and surveyed the mud with deep dislike, making little dabs at it tentatively. Finally, in one of the deep ruts she saw a whisp of hair projecting, and some tugging excavated my largest puff, a sodden, sticky lump. A puddle gave up another and she found a third under the imprint of a horse's hoof, but the fourth had vanished. Tilly came upstairs holding her muddy treasure trove at arm's length.

"'But where's my transformation?' I shrieked. 'That cost $15—and as for the braid—well, I might just as well go into bankruptcy if that switch isn't found!'"

"Tilly protested that the earth below would not yield up another bit of hair. I began to wonder how I could send regrets to a wedding after I had already accepted, and then Mary called me to luncheon. I was weeping real tears into my soup when Mary burst in and asked permission to go downstairs, which was unusual at a mealtime, of course. I inquired why, but she just waved her arms wildly and disappeared.

"In due time she reappeared breathless and triumphant with a weird-looking thing in one hand. It was my transformation! She said she had scoured the country roundabout with the opera glasses and had seen something hanging on a bridal wreath bush in the Harveys' front yard, three houses down, and it looked like hair to her, and it proved to be hair. She added that Mrs. Harvey on the front porch had seemed greatly interested in the proceedings. Mrs. Harvey has always exclaimed publicly about my 'wealth of beautiful hair,' so I could imagine how pleased she must have been.

A Ring.

"As I finished my strawberries there was a loud ring at the bell, and when Tilly went to the speaking tube I distinctly heard the wretch of a small boy who was in the vestibule two stories below yelling for the edification of the whole building: 'Say, yer switch is a-hanging just below your bedroom window ledge on the telephone wires!'

"Tilly got the switch while I hung on to her heels. Then, very much exhausted, I washed everything again—but somehow I kept smelling gasoline all evening and I distinctly heard a man back of me in the middle of the church say it was remarkable how the automobiles outside seemed to be leaking. It was too much of a strain, so I've abandoned the whole outfit."

"Well, I don't blame you!" said the girl in the lizard green gown.

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Hilbert Tells of Her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.

FLEETWOOD, PA.—"During the Change of Life I was hardly able to be around at all. I always had a headache and I was so dizzy and nervous that I had no rest at night. The flashes of heat were so bad sometimes that I did not know what to do.

"One day a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me a strong well woman. I am very thankful that I followed my friend's advice, and I shall recommend it as long as I live. Before I took the Compound I was always sickly and now I have not had medicine from a doctor for years. You may publish my letter."—MRS. EDWARD B. HILBERT, Fleetwood, Pa.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

Freaks of Fashion

Monstrosities From Paris Boulevards

In Paris extremes of costume are seen more frequently than they are here. These three were "snapped" by a foreign correspondent for the Hearst newspapers recently. When our fashion expert was asked to describe them she immediately complained of feeling faint and went home. Therefore any of our women readers who feel "freakish" will have to solve these fashion puzzles for themselves.

Time's Up! Did You Send in a Solution of "The Triple Tie"?

$250 in Cash Prizes for the Best "Final Chapter" of The Georgian's Great Mystery Story

The final chapters of "The Triple Tie" will be printed in The Georgian next Monday, July 7. Readers of "The Triple Tie" had until noon to-day to send in their conception of the conclusion of the story, containing their solution of the mystery in competition for prizes aggregating $250 offered by The Georgian. The problems for the reader to solve were these:

First—How does Kelly escape the mountaineers?

Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?

Third—How did Gordon Kelly, who confessed that he never saw a game of ball and never played a game of ball up to the time he asked Manager Smith of the Atlanta club for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to bat, catch and run bases in the marvelous manner he displayed at Atlanta that caused the Boston club to give the unheard-of price of $50,000 for Gordon Kelly's release?

Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the ninth inning of the final and deciding game?

Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

No contributions will be considered if they are delivered at The Georgian office later than to-day, July 3, noon, or bear a postmark later than that time.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian, will award the prizes.

The prizes for the best solutions are as follows:

First Prize	$100.00
Second Prize	50.00
Third Prize	25.00
Fourth Prize	15.00
Twelve Prizes, each	5.00
Total	$250.00

CUDDLING COTTAGES : A Charming Short Story, Complete

THERE were two red houses in Acraman's road which shouldered each other confidentially and seemed on such manifestly affectionate terms that the notion of their respective inhabitants being anything but bosom friends was simply ridiculous.

The thought struck Dollabella Powney quite forcibly when she bought one of these said houses, and made her more eager than was her wont (she was not curious by nature) to catch a glimpse of her next door neighbor. Oddly enough, it was quite a fortnight after she had moved in before she did so, and then the manner of her "catching" was sadly at variance with her customary traditions of dignity.

Consumed one May evening with a desire to know something of that neighbor's tastes and habits, she rose on an inverted blacking box which she had placed against her garden wall to take a furtive peep at the adjacent premises. The neighbor, curiously enough, chose that precise spot and moment for a similar maneuver. Result, their noses all but met. The neighbor said afterward that he was training a creeper, but the denouement was, in any case, absurd. Dollabella shrieked.

Her blacking box turned turtle at the start she gave, and she nearly sprained an ankle as she fell plump into a group of peonies. With a countenance the color of those flamboyant blossoms, and tears of mortification in her eyes, she scrambled up and went majestically indoors, banging the front door to ease her feelings. The neighbor—such is the depravity of man—laughed. After that there was only one course open to Dollabella—the next-door neighbor must be ignored—sent to Coventry—ostracized—crushed.

It was two months later, and the sultry glory of a July evening took the "Cuddling Cottagers"—as they were irreverently called—into an almost tropical embrace. Miss Powney was very busy—a garden hose in one hand and a little black volume, with a white whirligig on its cover, in the other. She appeared, between bouts of watering, to be committing something to memory.

The next door man was on a ladder. He was chronically on ladders. Dollabella had consulted her lawyer brother as to the possibility of a single woman getting an injunction against people who perpetually mounted heights and, under a pretext of pruning, commanded other people's domains. Moreover, he was whistling, and his whistling got upon Dollabella's nerves. Whenever she looked up she could see his straw hat and a pair of big brown hands busy among the young branches of a mulberry tree—and the sight annoyed her.

"Fractures," said Dollabella to herself, as she hosed a thirsty-looking clump of carnations, "are of six kinds: simple—compound—convex—concave (no, that sounds nonsense)—wait a minute."

She threw back her head and looked to the sky for inspiration.

"Wheeu—whe-ou," went the man next door.

"Simple—compound—implicated—ocntex—ah!"

"Slither—scrape—crash—plomb!"

"Good heavens!" cried Dollabella, and the little black book with the white whirligig fell from her nerve-shaken hand to the ground.

A Crash.

Something had happened next door—something which included a splintering sound and the too sudden contact of a heavy body with Mother Earth.

The whistling had ceased abruptly in the middle of a bar; there was no longer any sign of a straw hat and clipping hands.

Dollabella, listening in cold horror, heard two or three groans, and then there was a ghastly silence.

"It's an accident of some sort," she said addressing the flower borders. "Now, what ought I to do?"

The hollyhocks and sweet-williams having no views on the subject she did what common sense prompted. The gardener, who came once a week to mow the grass and titivate the garden generally, had left a pair of short steps close at hand. She fetched them and placed them against the wall, and climbed to the top.

She was almost afraid to look, but common sense gave her another prod, and look she did; and, in looking beheld a prone figure which lay on its back, presenting a very white upturned face to the summer sky.

By its side, also prone, was a broken ladder.

At first she really thought that the whistling man next door was dead. Her heart seemed to turn a somersault and to stop before it got over. She scrambled down into his garden, dropping bang on to a choice lilium-auratum in the process, and hurried to his side. He was breathing, but seemed quite unconscious, and his right arm was bent in a curious way—and the hand looked swollen.

To the Rescue.

Dollabella knelt down and felt it gingerly; then she stared at it, and tried to marshal her recently acquired knowledge. "Pain—deformity—swelling," she muttered. "It's broken, of course it's broken. What shall I do? I must put it into splints before I call help."

Her eyes roved wildly around and discovered a golf putter lying on the lawn near a small hole. The whistling man practiced putting—when he was not in midair.

By means of his putter and a sturdy stick used for tying up dahlias, Dollabella made very serviceable splints which she tied on with her handkerchief and his. Just as she finished her patient moaned a little—and opened his eyes.

The pain in them lessened when he saw the apparition which bent over him.

"You will be quite all right now," Dollabella assured him, speaking very distinctly as if he were a child. "It's your arm, you know—broken. You know, I'm the girl from next door. I'm going to make you comfortable and send for your housekeeper to watch you while I fetch the doctor."

She looked around and seized a coat which she found near at hand, and arranged it beneath his head. The whistling man shut his eyes and moaned. The very slight movement had pained him.

"The beastly stays broke," he explained. "I was—ugh!"

"Yes—yes—don't try to talk; it will soon be better," Dollabella reassured him. "Now, lie quite still."

The caution was scarcely necessary as the man next door was in no condition to do anything else.

More Help.

He shut his eyes again. "Must you go?" he whispered.

"I must, really. You'll have to be bandaged properly, you see—besides, you're too big for me to move. I won't be long."

She sped indoors, big-eyed and white. After much unsuccessful knocking she dislodged a middle-aged housekeeper whom she almost pushed into the garden, explaining dramatically, and then she turned around again.

Up the country road she tore, and, after ten breathless minutes, she reached the doctor's house. Fortunately, he was in. He cast himself on a motor bicycle and flashed off almost before Dollabella had concluded the account of the accident.

The next day, after some debate with herself, she sent in her little maid to inquire after her neighbor. The answer came back: "Mr. Randall's compliments, and he was going on very nicely, and would like to see Miss Powney, if she could kindly find time to go in."

Dollabella, flushing very much at the message, decided she could not possibly find time to obey its request, and, to emphasize the truth of this, she sat idle for hours wondering whether she could or not. Mere civility demanded that she should go. She said this again and again. The man next door was lying on a couch, looking very forlorn.

"Please come in and sit down. Did you mind my asking you to come in like this?—I couldn't get to you—you see."

"I'm so glad you're better," Dollabella said primly, and she sat down obediently.

"It was slight concussion, you know, or I should be walking about," said the man next door. "I had to keep awfully quiet for 24 hours. How ever shall I thank you?"

Dollabella did not reply; she was staring very hard at the damaged arm in its splints.

Not the Arm.

"That isn't the arm I first aided," she suddenly burst out. "I—tied up your left—the one with the ring. I know I did."

The man next door got crimson right up to his nicely marked eyebrows. "It—it doesn't signify a bit," he said uncomfortably. "You did it beautifully—the doctor said so—and how could you know which arm it was if I wasn't up to telling you?"

"Pain—deformity—swelling," muttered Dollabella. "I am fated," she added distinctly, "to do idiotic things where you are concerned," and two big tears of sheer mortification rolled down her cheeks. And when she saw a smile on the face of her companion she could have killed him without compunction.

"What are you laughing at, please?" Dollabella dabbed her eyes defiantly.

"Because your 'idiotic things,' as you call them, don't hold a rushlight to mine. Confession's good for the soul. Look here—I never meant to tell you, but I—I threw myself off that ladder——"

"On purpose?"

"Yes."

"What on earth for?"

"Because I knew about the Red Cross classes, and I thought a smash-up would fetch you—but I never meant to break myself up like this."

Dollabella tried to keep her lips from twitching, but she couldn't.

Somehow the man next door got the unhurt arm around Dollabella's shoulders, and what he said when it was there does not matter to you or me. All that does matter is that the respective owners of the "Cuddling Cottages" behaved themselves quite appropriately from that day onward.

A couple of doors knocked through party walls later on made those houses one. The owners had been made one some weeks before.

Correct Words and How to Use Them

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.
Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

EVERY intelligent person is always progressing and is never indifferent in matters of culture. If careless habits of speech have been formed a determined effort to correct them will lead to good results.

Many persons who consider themselves well educated make the mistake of using the participle "got" in connection with the verb "to have." They say: "Have you got the key?" "Who has got my book?" instead of "Have you the key?" "Who has my book?"

Mistakes of everyday occurrence are, "Who did you give it to?" "Who is this for?" instead of the correct expressions, "To whom did you give it?" "For whom is this?"

Frequently one hears these errors in grammar: "I intended to have bought a pair of gloves," instead of "I intended to buy a pair of gloves;" "It was no use asking him," instead of "It was no use to ask him;" "Try and persuade her to go," instead of "Try to persuade her to go."

It would seem unnecessary to tell any one not to use the present tense instead of the past tense when mentioning what another has said, yet a careless person may be heard saying, "He says," instead of "He said."

Other faults are to say "A great ways," "Somewheres," "There's plenty of places."

The contraction "don't" for "do not" should never be used with a singular noun or pronoun. It is correct to say "He does not," and not "He don't." It is important to remember the objective form of the first person singular when a noun or pronoun or two pronouns follow a verb, and not to say "Ethel asked Mary and I to go," but "Ethel asked Mary and me to go." If one is confused about the use of pronouns in a sentence of this sort an easy rule is to separate them and use each one with the verb, thus: "Ethel asked Mary," and "Ethel asked me." In this way the grammatical form is seen.

It is correct to say "A summer day," not "A summer's day." "Cut the apple in two" or "in halves," not "Cut the apple in half." "I cut the ribbon off this piece," not "off of this piece." "The child threw it on the floor," not "onto the floor."

"Whether" is a word that indicates a choice of things and should not be placed at the head of each part of a sentence. For instance, it is incorrect to repeat it thus: "I have not decided whether I shall go to Boston or whether I shall stay at home."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ASK HER.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and in love with a girl of twenty-one. She also loves me. Last night I told a friend about it. He laughed and said: "That girl is married." Now, how shall I find out the truth?

CONSTANT READER.

Ask her. If you find you can't take her word, then cease your attentions. No happiness was ever built on doubt or suspicion.

QUIT TELLING HER.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-three, and have had an acquaintance with a girl of eighteen for the past nine months. I am deeply in love with her, but, somehow, she does not seem to appreciate the same. Now, what I would like to know is there anyway I could bring her to understand the true feeling I have for her? G. F.

You have given her nine months' devotion that she doesn't seem to appreciate. The story of your love seems to have become old and stale. Quit telling it. Awaken her interest by giving her some reason to doubt you.

Who's tI Was.

A school teacher who was giving a lesson on "food" was interrupted by one of his pupils.

"Please, sir," he said, "Jimmy says he knew a baby that was brought up on elephant's milk, and it gained ten pounds in weight every day."

"Jimmy ought not to tell you such rubbish," said the teacher. "Whose baby was it that was brought up on elephant's milk?"

"Please, sir," answered Jimmy, "it was the elephant's."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I SHOWED Pa & Ma a peece in a boys' magazine that offerd a prize of ten dollars for the best short story of ad-venture wrote by a boy not oaver twelve yeers old. I toald Pa that I was going to try for the prize, & Pa sad rite away that he wud help me rite the story.

Why doant you let Bobbie rite it hisself? sed Ma. I doant think it wud be fair to the other littel boys who will com-peet to have you cum along with yure wunderful, marvelous brain & win that ten dollars. Let the kids have thare own competishun, Ma sed.

So this is the story I rote. It had to be less than a hundred words & it is pritty hard to rite a story inside of a hundred words & have the whole plot in. This is how I rote it:

It was midnite in Mexico. A silvery moon smiled at the Rio Grande wich wound its way through the lonely desert.

One glanst was enuff for Sheriff Vane.

The Mexican was ded.

Bad Silvio and Bad Chico halted thare horsee beefoar they cud trample on the body of the Sheriff.

One glanst was enuff for the two outlaws.

The Sheriff was ded.

That story won't win any prize, Bobbie, sed Pa. It ain't a good piece of work at all. I guess you better let me rite it all oaver for you.

Ma seen that I felt kind of bad. Every time wen I feel bad my lip gits kind of stiff. I can't help it & I can't grin wen I try. So Ma patted me on the cheek and sed Bobbie, that is a good story, & I bet you will win the prize. Yure father can't help you in this contest, excep, maybe, he can help you to spend the ten dollars wen you win it.

He will nevver win the prize, sed Pa. The story is vary crude.

I don't think you are a competent critick, sed Ma. You nevver rote any stories yourself that won any prizes, & now you are trying to tell littel Bobbie how to rite. You are always that way, Ma sed, trying to tell peepul how to do things that you can not do yureself. I will bet you a ten-dollar bathrobe aggenst a ten-dollar hat, Ma sed, that Bobbie wins the prize. I am giving you a even munny bet, Ma sed, & I am talking Bobbie aggenst the whole field. That is the kind of a bettor I am, Ma sed.

Sure enuff, day beefoar yesterday I got a letter from the boys' magazeen & thare was a new ten-dollar bill in it.

"Well, sed Ma to Pa, cum acrost with that ten dollars for my hat.

I haven't the change now, sed Pa. Bobbie, let yure mother talk that ten dollars till payday.

That is the way Pa paid his bet & I wud be broak now only Ma galv me the ten back & sed she wud wait till payday for her hat. Pa thinks he knows lots, but Ma is a better bettor.

Not Like Him.

The Academy exhibition, with its fine Sargent portraits, recalls a story of this famous artist. At a banquet a young lady whom he knew very well said to him:

"Oh, Mr. Sargent, I saw your latest painting, and kissed it because it was so much like you."

"And did it kiss you in return?"

"Why, no."

"Then," said Mr. Sargent, "it was not like me."

Competition.

A little girl had been the pet of the family. Every one made much of her, but when there was a new little baby brother she felt rather neglected.

"How are you, Mary?" a visitor asked of her one afternoon.

"Oh, I'm all right," she said, "except that I think there is too much competition in this world."

Do You Know That—

In the lunatic asylum at Nantes is an illiterate inmate who has been discovered by the chief doctor to be a remarkable "lightning calculator." Ask what would be the age of a person who had lived a milliard of seconds, he took only 48 seconds to reply correctly. In 23 seconds he supplied the correct answer to the question, what would be the age of a person who had lived 343,000,000 seconds. He required only 32 seconds to find out how many seconds there were in 39 years, three months, twelve hours. Having been told the square mileage of the globe, he was asked how many hectares that represents, and gave the correct reply in four seconds. Asked how many seconds there are in 30 years, he replied in fourteen seconds, and explained that his calculations had involved four multiplications and one addition by mental arithmetic.

Mr. Jeffrey Farnol, who so suddenly leaped into fame as the author of "The Broad Highway," of which more than 300,000 copies have been sold, comes of a stock somewhat remarkable for its longevity. His grandparents are still living, as also their ten sons and daughter, with numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Four generations of one family, with only one loss by death—and that the author's brother, who fell in action in the Boer war—may be considered almost phenomenal.

Dancing at German court functions is a serious business, for the Kaiser will allow no one to take the floor who is not an expert. When a ball is in progress the court dancing master sits in one of the galleries and carefully observes the dancers. Should he detect ungracefulness in any guest he communicates with the Emperor, and the offender is presently warned that he or she must become more proficient before again being invited to the palace.

The "Transactions" of the Cremation Society of England states that there were 1,134 cremations in Great Britain in 1912, compared with 1,023 in 1911. Among the well-known persons cremated during the year were the Bishop of Truro and the Rev. Charles Voysey. There are thirteen crematories in England, of which five are municipal.

Eat This Food During Summer

Be careful what you eat during hot weather. What you need is food that nourishes but does not heat the body.

Faust Spaghetti fits right into that class. It is a high gluten food—a bone, muscle and flesh former—but contains practically no fat, therefore cannot heat the body.

FAUST

makes a savory, appetizing dish. It can be served in a great many ways that appeal to the palate. It is easily prepared—it makes a nutritious, non-heating meal during the summer. Write for free recipe book, "Spaghetti and Its Uses." Faust Spaghetti put up in air-tight, moisture-proof packages.

GULLS FADING; RACE TIGHTENS UP NOW--AGLER

By Joe Agler.

PRICE AND CHAPMAN will do the haavy work for the Crackers in the opening game with the Pels to-day.

Paul Musser pitched a grand article of ball yesterday, and won the second and last game of the series from the Gulls. Paul was never in any great danger, and had everything his own way.

We scored in the first inning, and it looked like enough to win. We made sure, however, and scored two more in the seventh on clean hitting.

And that was enough.

They scored in the seventh, but could not find Musser for more than one run.

The Crackers certainly had a lot of life in both games, while Mobile was dead and never had a word to say.

The Gulls have left on a long trip around the circuit, and within a few more days there will be another leader in the league.

July will prove to be a great month for excitement in the pennant race in the Southern. Mobile, Chattanooga, Montgomery, Atlanta and perhaps Birmingham will be in a big scramble, and they will make some trouble before the season is over.

Now that we are on a winning streak and our twirlers going good again, and with our two weeks at home, we will start to climb and be up where we belong before long.

Price should win his game, as he is going good and has something on the Pels.

GIANTS MAKE 46 HITS IN THREE GAMES WITH PHILS

The Giants are a slob team, of course, as the last world's series showed. But they are surely the loud sound in the National League.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday they faced the Phillies in the "crucial series." The Phillies are supposed to have one of the greatest pitching staffs in the world. Yet in three games the Giants made 46 hits. On two occasions they made 17 hits. Once they got only 12. In the three games they scored 19 runs. Among the pitchers they drove to the woods were Chalmers twice, Moore, Killifer, Alexander twice, Rixey, Mayer and Seaton.

PLAYERS QUALIFY JULY 4 FOR PRESIDENT'S TROPHY

The qualifying round in the golf tournament for the trophy offered by the president of the Atlanta Athletic Club will be contested over the East Lake course July 4.

The first and second rounds of match play must be played by July 10, the semi-finals by July 17, and the finals, which will be at 36 holes, by July 20.

BRITTON AGREES TO 133 IN JULY 4 GO WITH WHITE

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 3.—Charlie White and Jack Britton are to fight at 133 pounds, weighing in three and one-half hour before their fight Friday afternoon. Britton agreed to this to-day when a conference of principals was held to settle final details. The meeting had waited the arrival of Nate Lewis from Chicago. The weight is quite satisfactory to White, who had expected he would be forced to make it 134, which would have been somewhat of an advantage to Britton. The boys will enter the ring at about 3:30 p. m.

"Charlie will surely continue his winning streak," said Lewis. "The next important match I am counting on is between White and the winner of the Ritchie-Rivers go."

CRACKERS OPEN SERIES TO-DAY WITH PELICANS

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Crackers return from a strenuous road trip to-day, bringing more victories than was expected, and open here this afternoon with the once famous Pelicans.

With the team back in something resembling its stride now, with a new and promising pitcher coming, with Price and Conzelman in good trim, there is nothing to keep the Crackers from showing some speed on their present home stay.

On July 4 games will be played in the morning and afternoon. Saturday one game will be played. All these contests will be with the well-known doormats of the league.

* * *

MEMPHIS and Mobile will furnish the opposition next week. The week after Montgomery comes for three games. And then the Crackers beat it southward.

As things stand now the Crackers are within comfortable striking distance of the lead. All needed is a good, brisk winning streak to get the Crackers up there fighting with the Gulls. The New Orleans and Memphis games should close up the gap somewhat. Then the Gulls come, and if the Crackers can sweep that series and trim Montgomery they will leave Atlanta for their Southern trip so close to first place that it will make it interesting.

Don't make the mistake of figuring the Crackers out of it yet. They aren't. A spurt will put them up in the running with a rush.

IT'S hard to figure why Carl Thompson isn't making a better showing. He looks like a great pitcher and he wins a few games. But somehow he couldn't stick with Birmingham.

Possibly by antagonizing the other players on every team of which he becomes a member Thompson hurts his own chances. It is certain that he did not stand high in the estimation of the other Barons and that they did not give him good support. Many a pitcher has been ruined because no team would play behind him.

CHARLEY FRANK has won more controversies and less ball games this season than any time in his history. He practically hasn't lost an argument or won a ball game. Of course that's an exaggerated statement but close to the real facts.

If this sort of thing keeps on Charley will give up managing and become a lawyer.

BY way of warning, all chicken owners on the route between Chicago and Montezuma the following item from Charley Dryden's pen is hereby published:

"Fred Toney is taking lessons lassoing chickens from the deck of a motorcycle. This fall he and Richie and Lavender will ride machines to Lavender's home at Montezuma, Ga., and Toney has promised to supply the grub en route."

* * *

CHARLEY HEMPHILL is not a great manager. That has been demonstrated. Probably Charley himself would hardly argue that he was. But he can still hit that old pellet. Up in the husky American Association where 20 men are batting over .300, Charley is next to the top, with a batting average of .353. R. Miller, of Columbus, is the only man who tops him.

TWO International League clubs are fighting over the services of Claude Derrick, ex-University of Georgia player, now with the Athletics. Both Baltimore and Rochester want him, with the chances fairly good that he will go back to Baltimore.

Derrick can not seem to stick in the big leagues but he is plenty good enough for the fastest of minor leagues and should have many good years in the International.

FINE REMEDY FOR ECZEMA

Also for Salt Rheum, Tetter, Psoriasis, Lupus and All Skin Afflictions.

Even a Microscope Won't Find a Blemish After S. S. S. Gets Through.

All skin troubles should be attacked from within by giving the blood circulation a good daily bath. This is accomplished with S. S. S., the best known and most highly recommended blood purifier ever discovered. Its action is very rapid. Its vegetable nature is such that it naturally goes right into the blood, saturates the entire circulation, bathes the tissues with an influence that enables the skin to heal quickly. The action of S. S. S. is that of an antidote, and this fact has been demonstrated time and time again in the most severe forms of weeping eczema.

Its influence in the tissues where the tiny arteries transfer the red blood for the worn-out blood to the veins is quite remarkable and goes on constantly with every tick of the clock—the beat of the heart.

And new skin is thus caused to form, while the germs of irritating influences that cause eczema are scattered and their harmful nature entirely suspended.

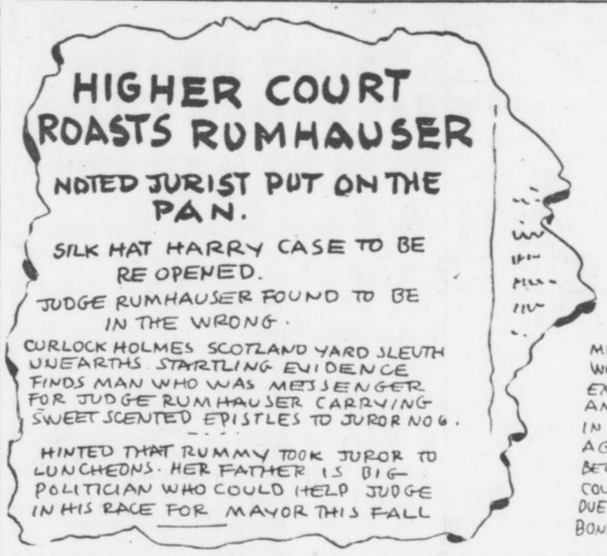

S. S. S. has a wonderful tonic influence in the blood because it contains no "dope," is not a "physic," is entirely free of any mineral drugs or any other drugs except the remarkable medicinal effect of the pure vegetable products of which it is made.

Few people realize how harmful are many of the strong, crude ointments that used to be in favor before they learned that S. S. S. is safe, speedy and sure. Ask at any drug store for a bottle of S. S. S. Give it a good trial and you will soon see a decided improvement in any form of skin trouble. Write to The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for special free advice on eczema and any other form of skin or blood trouble.

What Baseball Umps Should Do

Heisman Helps Amateur Arbiters

By J. W. Heisman

FIRST rattle out of the box, let me say this small package of umpiring tips is not intended for professional arbiters, albeit more than one of such could improve himself and give better satisfaction to players and public if he would take to heart one or more of the points I herein will discuss.

So far as the teams and their captains are concerned, it is naturally well for them to get, whenever possible, an umpire who has had some experience, who has some natural qualifications for the work, and most important of all, a man who has an unblemished reputation. This article will be of no assistance whatever to a prospective umpire in any one of these three considerations; but most any one is liable to be called upon at some time or other in his fortuitous career to umpire a game of ball, and perhaps a point or two herein touched upon may dwell in his memory and help him out of more than one dilemma during the progress of the riot.

* * *

IN THE first place, if there is only one umpire to the game, he should take his stand behind the catcher, and should remain there as long as no men get on bases. He should not think of taking up this station without a mask over his face; and if there is a protector to be had, he should also don that.

The umpire should be careful not to stand so close upon the catcher's heels as to crowd him, and he should ever be on the alert for a possible foul foul fly popping up. In such an event he should be quick to jump out of the catcher's way, for naturally the latter will be after it in a jiffy.

* * *

ABOUT the hardest thing connected with umpiring is to call balls and strikes to the satisfaction of both teams. Often enough pitchers come in complaining that the umpire always makes them split the plate. If true, this constitutes a just complaint, for it is the acme of good pitching never to give a batter a ball squarely over the middle. If the umpire will not give a strike when the pitcher has both head and control sufficient to just nick the corners, his good work is nullified by the umpire's limitations of sight or judgment.

And umpires often enough call a strike when the ball has passed the batter at the level of the latter's eyes or chin or neck. This is a big mistake. Merely because the batter is able to see over the top of the ball, or because many a batter likes to take a wallop at a ball that is winding snake-like around his neck is no reason why it should be called a strike. A judge of play should be guided strictly and entirely by what the rule says, and in this case the provision is that it must be between the knee and the shoulder.

* * *

MANY batters squat or crouch at the plate before the ball is delivered, and when it comes up they crouch a deal more. In this position the ball seems often to go away over their heads, when it would clearly be a satisfactory height for another man who did not have such a stooping attitude. An umpire should be careful not to let a batter get away with this crouching posture to such an extent as to compel the pitcher to put them all knee-high. The idea is that it is a strike if it passes at a height not greater than the shoulder when the batsman is in a natural hitting attitude.

Umpires often make the mistake of judging a pitched ball by where the catcher caught it. Often enough the catcher "pulls" the ball so cleverly as to deceive the umpire; and then again the mere effect of gravity or the curve of the ball, coming late and suddenly, distorts the umpire's judgment.

* * *

UMPIRES frequently make the mistake of calling a decision too quickly. They have it in their minds that this shows efficiency and executive capacity. Also it is sometimes intended as a species of bluffing, calculated to make the players believe that the decision must be correct because of the very snappishness with which it is given. To a certain extent this may be so; but only too often this lightning-like decision connotes the very opposite of accuracy.

It is well, though, for the umpire to be as quick as he can in calling the third strike on a batter when the latter has not swung at it. If the catcher holds this third strike it does not make any difference, as the batter is out of it anyway; but should the catcher drop this last strike it would look as though you were giving him a chance to recover the ball before the runner reached first if you delay notifying the runner at once that it is the third strike and he had best run.

* * *

IT is the tendency nowadays to call most every ball that is hit immediately down to the ground a foul ball, whether it afterward rolls foul or fair. I incline to think this is good practice; for unless one does call such a ball something without delay it puts the batter in an awkward position. This case should be carefully distinguished, however, from that where the batter hits a ball into the diamond that is manifestly fair, and has been from the start, and then in starting out for first base he runs himself into the bounding or rolling ball. Here the batter is out at once for touching a fair batted ball.

FODDER FOR FANS

Wilson, of the Pirates, made two home runs yesterday, but his efforts were wasted, for the Cubs scored six runs against four for the Pirates.

* * *

Eleven Tigers stepped to the plate in the fourth inning of the game against the White Sox yesterday, with the result that seven runs went across the finish line, giving the Tigers the game.

* * *

Wheat, of the Dodgers, made a triple and three singles out of four times up yesterday.

* * *

Larry Doyle, of the Giants, made a homer with two on bases yesterday. Several days ago he delivered a circuit swat with the bases crowded.

* * *

The Naps and Browns divided a double-header yesterday, the Browns taking the first game, an eleven-inning affair, and the Naps the second, with Falkenberg in the box. This is the first game Falkenberg has won since his winning streak of ten games was cut.

* * *

The Cardinals justly might be called the "rally boys." Yesterday they repeated the stunt which they have been practicing in the last month of coming from behind and winning out by scoring three runs in the eighth and one in the ninth, taking the game from the Reds.

* * *

Connie Mack has his eye focused on George Brickley, brother of Charles, the Harvard football star. It's a cinch that if George can bat anywhere as well as Charles can kick, Connie will be placing him in the slugger's position of the Athletics' line-up if he lands him.

* * *

For the third successive time the Giants tussled with the Phillies in the Quakertown ballwick yesterday and handed the third straight defeat, thus clinching the hold the Giants now have on the upper rung in the National League ladder.

* * *

Pitchers may come and pitchers may go, but it seems that Mathewson and his wonderful control and ability are to remain forever. In this, his thirteenth season, as a big league pitcher, Matty threatens to eclipse all his previous records for victories. In addition to establishing a world's record for control, he hurled against the Phillies yesterday and for the seventh or eighth time this season went the full nine innings without a base on balls.

* * *

The Dodgers, after suffering two defeats at the hands of the Braves, rose up in wrath yesterday and gave the Braves one of the worst beating handed any team this year. The Brooklynites garnered fifteen runs, scoring nine in the third.

* * *

Lajoie, the Naps' second sacker, was back in the game yesterday, and, despite rumors that he is to be benched or used as a pinch hitter in the future, it is a certainty that he will remain as a regular for the balance of this season and several more to come.

Boehling, the recruit pitcher of the Senators, is setting the American League afire. He has started seven games and won them all, the majority of them being shut-outs.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—From this point to the finish of the races in both big leagues, each game is going to count vitally. The strain of the going through July and August either makes or breaks the pennant contenders, and only the teams with the most class live to fight it out in September. It is from now until the first of September that the clubs which make the early going will have their hardest struggle to maintain the lead. The teams have found themselves by this time if they are to arrive at all.

"I would just as soon be trailing up to July," says McGraw. "After July, I want to make the going."

It has been just this way that McGraw has played the race this year. The Phillies jumped out in front and killed off their pitching staff and some of their players before they really reached the stretch where they will need their full strength. If they could have gotten out far enough ahead to afford a slump, that would have been a different matter, but the Giants managed to hang to their heels, which is the most exasperating and heart-breaking thing that can happen to a ball club.

* * *

THE race in the American League has assumed a very different aspect from the one in the National, for class told from the get-away in that argument. Even rival American Leaguers admit that the Athletics have shown all the class of the circuit so far, and they have opened up such a nice gap now they can afford a comfortable slump. At the beginning of the season, the outlook was for one of those nip and tuck affairs in both leagues, but the outlook was badly upset in the American. The Boston Red Sox and the Washington Club were to abound with class, while something was expected of the White Sox and little thought of Cleveland.

Boston has been a pitiable failure and disappointment. The team is going slightly better now, but there was plenty of room for improvement. Even should the club regain the old stride that carried it to a world's championship last year, it does not strike me it would have a chance with the Athletics now. It must be remembered that the Philadelphia club is playing much better ball than it did last summer when it slopped through its schedule, feeling confident that no team was ever created which could beat it to the pennant. There is a grave doubt in my mind whether the Red Sox could have defeated the Athletics last season if they had performed as they are going this year.

* * *

"THE Athletics have the class of this league," a player on a rival American League team told me the other day. "They are not overlooking any opportunities this summer, either. Mack has his pitching staff going as well, if not better, than any in the league, and it was supposed to be his weakness. It has been largely through clever handling that Mack has achieved these results with his pitchers.

In the first place, he fixed Bender so that he would work his best this season and he did this through one of the well-known Mack methods, a promised reward at the end of the season for delivering the goods. Then he worked his youngsters with great wisdom, getting them used to the big league ways, while the pitchers on the other clubs had not yet gotten the spring rust out of their arms and the going was easier. In this way they acquired confidence in themselves. Then Mack got to taking the squabs out of the games and putting in a veteran when his team acquired a lead of a couple of runs to make it sure.

"Connie fooled Griffith in Washington recently when he sent both Bender and Plank out in front of the bench to warm up before the game and hid Bush behind the grandstand where he worked his arm out. When the game began, he sat Plank and Bender down on the bench and sent Bush to the box, figuring on taking a chance with a youngster in the game with Johnson and working his veterans against the easier Washington pitchers. Bush got away with the game. Mack was always a great man to jockey his players."

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

A HUNDRED.

The shades of night were falling fast
When through a baseball field there passed
A youth who sadly shook his head,
And this is all the athlete said:
"$100."

He fain would swing a thousand thumps
Upon the guy they call the umps.
But if he hit the umps a crack
That little clout would set him back $100.

Oh, it is great to be a star
And give the umps an awful jar,
But if you act as white men do
To find that there accrues to you $100.

Nevertheless, when Mr. Coulon stalls off a conflict with Mr. Williams, he shows that he possesses considerable intellect.

We may thank the Athletics for the fact that no baseball writer will have the nerve to spring anything about a "crucial series" in the American League.

Frank Gotch says he will meet the winner o the Roler-Cutler match, showing that he still has faith in the one-per-minute theory.

Fuzzy Woodruff informs us with great confidence that Mr. Ritchie will encompass the downfall of Mr. Rivers. If Jim Corbett will only support Fuzzy in his contention we shall be glad to wager about 8,000 to 1 on Mr. Rivers.

One calamity connected with the Iceman's strike in Cincinnati is that the National Commission will have to drink it warm.

Answering a much discussed question, we take the liberty to say that the trouble with the Pirates is that they are not winning baseball games.

Speaking of nothing to worry about, there is Jack O'Connor, who is said to be suspended by the Federal League.

Star Athletes Will Perform on July 4

At 9:45 Fourth of July morning the first call will be sounded for the first heat of the first race of Atlanta's first big track and field meet at Piedmont Park under the auspices of the Department of Playgrounds.

Thanks to the untiring work of Joe Bean, manager of playgrounds, the affair needs only good weather to be a tremendous success. In the nine events that will be run there are 175 entries. Of course this does not mean 175 entrants, for there are many duplications, but any way you figure it, it will be the biggest meet ever held in Atlanta.

This steeplechase event will start at the top of the hill at Jackson and Tenth Streets, and the course will extend down the hill, through the lake and back to the judges' stand.

All contestants will be expected to furnish their own numbers.

On account of the large entry list two events will be called at a time. Here is the order of events:

100-yard dash. Trial heats.
Pole vault. Shot put.
100-yard dash. Final heat.
Running high jump. 880-yard run.
Running broad jump. 440-yard dash.
Hammer throw. Steeplechase.

JOURNEY TO EUROPE MAY COST JOHNSON $45,000

CHICAGO, July 3.—Argument was heard this morning on the motion entered by United States Dist... torney Wilkerson asking that the $30,000 bond given by Jack ... prize-fighter, on eleven indictments under the Mann white slave act for which he has not yet been tried, be forfeited. Appeal bonds for $15,000 also are pending against Johnson. In the bonds given in the untried indictments, there is a provision that the negro must not leave the jurisdiction of the District Court of Northern Illinois. It is because of this provision that Mr. Wilkerson has asked that the bonds be forfeited. Johnson is on a ship bound for Europe.

MRS. FELTON TO SPEAK HERE AS SUFFRAGIST

Vote Advocates Eagerly Awaiting Appearance of Noted Woman. Convention Next Week.

Mrs. William A. Felton, of Cartersville, one of Georgia's most noted women, will make her first public appearance as a suffragist in Atlanta next week, at the annual convention of the Georgia Equal Suffrage Association. The convention will be held July 9 and 10. Mrs. Felton will speak before one of the three sessions on "Getting Ready for the Ballot."

Atlanta suffragists are manifesting great interest in Mrs. Felton's address. She has been an active suffragist for only a few months and her acquisition to the ranks is regarded as of great importance to the movement in Georgia.

Other speakers at the convention will include Mrs. S. E. Cunningham, of Decatur, formerly president of the Alabama Equal Suffrage Association, and Mrs. H. Augusta Howard, of Columbus, who organized the Georgia State Association and was its president for six years.

Many to Attend.

Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, State president, said Wednesday afternoon that more than 100 suffragists from all over the State are expected to attend the convention. Only one day session will be held on the afternoon of July 10 at the Labor Temple, in Trinity Avenue. Efforts are being made to secure the Senate chamber in the State Capitol for the evening meetings.

Legislation now pending before the General Assembly was indorsed at the regular meeting of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association Wednesday afternoon. Included among these measures were the vital statistics bill, compulsory education, medical inspection in schools, county probation and pensions for women school teachers who have taught for more than 30 years.

Medical Inspection Urged.

Dr. L. C. Allen, of Jefferson, Ga., chairman of the House Committee on Hygiene, addressed the meeting on the need of medical inspection in the schools, declaring a permissive law is a necessity. He expressed the opinion that the State is not ready for a compulsory inspection law, but predicted that the time will come when every State in the Union will have compulsory medical inspection laws. Dr. Allen declared medical inspection should not stop at the school children, but should include teachers and janitors and other persons who work about the schools and come in contact with school children.

Representative C. R. McCrory, of Schley, spoke on his bill, which proposes that the State shall publish its own textbooks for the public schools. Judge Robert L. Rodgers addressed the meeting on the benefits of equal suffrage.

MISS JESSIE WILSON TO BE FIRST WHITE HOUSE BRIDE FROM GEORGIA

Marriage of President's Daughter to Francis Bowes Sayre Announced for November.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The first wedding of a Georgia girl in the White House will be that of Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of the President, to Frances Bowes Sayre, a New York attorney in the office of District Attorney Whitman. Miss Wilson, a native Georgian, was born in Gainesville 24 years ago.

President and Mrs. Wilson made formal announcement of the coming marriage last night at the White House. The wedding will be some time in November. While Washington society gasped at the sudden announcement, it recovered quickly, and everything now is all a-flutter over the pre-nuptial honors to be showered upon the President's daughter.

Called Prettiest of Sisters.

Miss Jessie Wilson has been declared by many persons to be the prettiest of the three Wilson sisters.

Much curiosity was expressed regarding the groom. He has been connected with District Attorney Whitman in New York, during which time he has won the esteem of the noted lawyer. He is 28 years of age, and will be admitted to the bar this month, when he will be placed on the list of assisting prosecuting attorneys.

He comes from a noted collegiate family, his father, the late Robert Heysham Sayre, being president of the board of trustees of Lehigh University. He was also a prominent railroad man, and built the Lehigh Valley Railroad. His mother was Martha Finley Nevin prior to her marriage. She was the daughter of John Williamson Nevin, theologian and president of Franklin and Marshall College, of Lancaster, Pa., and was descended from Hugh Williamson, of North Carolina, one of the framers of the constitution.

He is related to Robert J. Nevin, head of the American Church of Rome, Italy, and a cousin of Ethelbert Nevin, the noted composer.

U. S. Court Expects Rate Case Appeal

Frank H. Mortimer, clerk of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals of the Fifth District, with headquarters in New Orleans, arrived in Atlanta Wednesday to check over the work of the court for the past year and to arrange for the cases which are to come before Judge Don A. Pardee during the October session, beginning the first Monday in the month.

"There has been no appeal filed to date in the Alabama Rate Case," said Mr. Mortimer, "but I understand there will be just as soon as the testimony which is being compiled in the lower courts is complete."

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Talking Movies at the Grand.

Edison talking pictures have won! The skeptical who argued that such an entertainment would be nothing but the projection of a motion picture on a sheet and the operation of a phonograph behind stage have discovered that Mr. Edison has perfected machines and instruments that synchronize.

The attendance at the Grand on Monday was decidedly discouraging. On Tuesday more than double the number of people were present that were in the house on Monday, and on Wednesday the theater was nearly filled. There is every indication that the wonder of this invention will keep the big theater more than busy the balance of the week.

Starting with to-day there will be a change of program in the talking pictures that will be continued the rest of the week. The first-run straight pictures are changed every day, and three reels are used.

Violinsky Pleases Forsyth Audiences.

Keith vaudeville at the Forsyth has never been so popular as now. The bill this week is of exceptional value. There is that variety that makes things interesting, and there is novelty enough to make people forget the hot spell. The Forsyth is perhaps the coolest place in Fulton County now. The ventilating system and the cooling plant work perfectly, and every audience enjoys what is being offered on the stage in perfect comfort.

Violinsky, an expert with both violin and piano, has interested and entertained every audience that has assembled. The sketch of Edward Abeles has been voted to be the very best of this sort seen in Atlanta, and Carlisle's dog pantomime circus starts the show with the audiences in a particularly good humor.

Good Tabloid at the Bijou.

Few attractions that have played the Bijou this season have given such general satisfaction as "A Trip to Paris," this week's bill. The musical comedy is brimful of pretty music, good dancing and clever specialties, and the entire performance moves along smoothly and without a hitch.

A SURE REMEDY FOR LAZY LIVER

Go to Any Druggist for This Safe, Reliable Remedy and Get Your Money Back If It Fails.

There are very few remedies that gain the confidence of druggists as Dodson's Liver Tone does. All druggists sell it and back up the sale of every bottle with the money-back guarantee that the price will be refunded if it fails to give complete satisfaction.

Dodson's Liver Tone costs 50 cents a bottle. It is the safest and best remedy for torpid liver, constipation, biliousness, etc., that has ever been sold in this city. It takes the place of dangerous calomel and does not lay you up as a dose of calomel often does. A bottle in the house is as good as fifty cents in the bank. If you or your family need a liver tonic you have the medicine ready. If it fails you get your money back.

Be sure you get Dodson's Liver Tone when you ask for it. There are imitations of it that may disappoint you.

Lender Is Enjoined From Garnishment

Judge J. T. Pendleton, of the Superior Court, Wednesday afternoon granted H. S. Jones and G. R. Sayre a temporary injunction restraining D. H. Tolman, named as a money lender, from garnisheeing the wages of Jones, who is employed at the Atlanta Joint Terminals.

Superintendent G. N. Williams informed Jones that if his wages were attached he would be discharged. Sayre acted as security for Jones. The claim is made that the men are day laborers and that their wages are not subject to attachment. The case is set for hearing July 12.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

The acoustics of the hall of the House of Representatives of Georgia probably are the worst in the world.

Physically, the hall is one of the most beautiful, dignified and stately in the Union. It is a hall, so far as that is concerned, the State well may be proud of.

It is all but impossible to speak in it though, so miserably deficient is it in acoustic properties. So far this session two men only have been able to overcome its baffling and depressing difficulties—Speaker Burwell and Representative Olive.

By working like a Trojan and exhausting a good lung full of atmosphere on every sentence or so, Burwell makes himself clear—then, too, he generally has the attention of the House, to a reasonable degree.

Wednesday, Sam Olive of Richmond, went up against those honorable acoustics, and while he knocked them out, good and proper, he had a mighty struggle getting away with it, and when he had finished, his alabaster brow—which runs pretty far back, by the way—was bathed in honest sweat, and his lung equipment was much the worse for wear.

Olive really is a corking good orator. He enunciates distinctly and speaks with deliberation and carefully distributed emphasis. He evidently knows the rules of good speaking and if he makes many more speeches such as the one he delivered Wednesday he is sure to be known throughout this session as one of the genuinely effective floor leaders.

There is no question of Olive's ability to talk eloquently and convincingly.

Mr. Slater of Bryan trotted out that ancient and well-known legislative standby, Old Man Vox Populi and gave him his first legislative airing Wednesday.

Mr. Slater was making an impassioned plea for the ousting of Representatives McArthur and Browning—more in sorrow than in anger, however—and during the progress of the debate, Old Man Vox got in the game.

A broad smile flitted through the House when Old Man Vox made his first appearance, but as he is an ancient and approved friend, he got the glad hand on all side.

From this time forward he may be expected to make his appearance every day or so.

Speaker Burwell is a stickler for forms and ceremonies in legislative debate. Already he has demonstrated a wonderful ability to handle the House, no matter how acute the parliamentary situation it may get itself into.

Burwell, however, insists that every member toe the mark in observing the rules, not only as to procedure but as to courtesy.

One member Thursday entered an oral objection to a certain proposal, but he entered it without arising from his seat. Burwell, as he is required to do, ignored the honorable gentleman's objection thus entered, but stated immediately afterward that the rules required members to arise and address the Speaker when desiring to speak, no matter when, why or how, and that he would not recognize any gentleman so long as that gentleman remained seated.

Since then, members desiring to address the House have first taken the pains to arise and address the Speaker. And that is exactly what the rules requires of them.

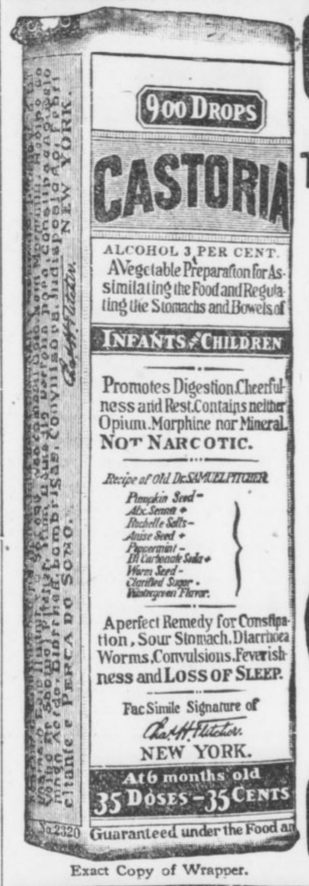

Charles S. Barrett, President of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Assistant Commission of Agriculture, will address by invitation the people of Bowl's Springs, in Fannin County, July 19. Both will confine themselves to agricultural topics.

Representative W. J. Nunnally of Floyd, a new member of the House, was highly honored by Speaker Burwell in committee distribution. He was named on the rules, general judiciary and constitutional amendments. Although he is a new member of the House, Representative Nunnally is well known through the State, having been Solicitor General of the Rome Circuit and Judge of the City Court of Rome.

Already he has grown to be one of the most popular members of the General Assembly.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, July 3.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day the tone was steady and prices were 1 to 3 points higher. This was a shade better than had been expected on cables. The upturn was due to local covering, chiefly in anticipation of the Government report due at noon.

The weather was considered favorble, as showery conditions prevailed throughout the western sections of the belt.

Slaton to Address R.F.D. Carriers Here In State Convention

Several hundred rural letter carriers of Georgia assembled at the Kimball House Thursday afternoon for the first session of the State convention, which will continue until Saturday.

The meeting was informal and in the nature of a fraternal and social gathering. Friday the delegates will go to the Senate chamber of the State Capitol, where welcome addresses will be delivered by Mayor James G. Woodward and Postmaster H. L. McKee. Clark Howell also will address the body.

Among the speakers Friday afternoon will be Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick, Governor Slaton and W. D. Brown, editor of The R. F. D. News, will speak Saturday. George C. Bond is master of ceremonies.

NewLowRecordPrice For Seat in 'Change

NEW YORK, July 3.—A Stock Exchange seat was sold last week for $40,000, a new low record price in the present movement. Previous to this a seat was sold for $42,000. Two other seats were sold during the spring for as low as $41,000. The seat sold last week was that of William Robison and the purchaser was Orme Wilson, Jr.

A few years ago a Stock Exchange seat sold as low as $38,000, but the price rebounded and went above $45,000 soon afterward.

Bill Removes Poll Tax Law Restriction

Making it possible for a citizen to pay his poll tax within 60 days of an election and become an eligible voter is what Representative Arnold of Henry County wishes to do. In this connection he has filed a bill in the House requiring tax collectors to keep their poll tax books open so that prospective voters may pay their tax.

The present law requires the payment of the poll tax at least six months prior to the election.

BOSTON BUYS 21,000-POUND LOT OF GEORGIA WOOL

SWAINSBORO, July 3.—The Emanuel Wool Growers' Association has just marketed and baled for shipment more than 21,000 pounds of wool.

Buyers from Macon, Savannah, Valdosta and elsewhere were here. J. N. Griffin, of Valdosta, bid 18 1-16, taking the crop. He represents the Eastern Woole Mills, of Boston. The shipment of two full carloads was carried from here over the Wadley Southern to Savannah and from there by steamer to Boston.

Last year only 5,000 pounds were marketed here. The average per year since the formation of this association has been about 16,000 pounds.

STOCK MARKET

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Following a dull, heavy opening of the stock market to-day, some of the issues rallied and made partial recoveries. At the outset practically all stocks were lower, the declines embracing the following: Utah Copper, ½; United States Steel common, ⅜; Amalgamated Copper, ⅜; American Smelting, ⅝; Atchison, ¼; Chino Copper, ⅝; Erie, ½; Union Pacific, ¼; Reading, ¼; St. Paul, ¼. Steel recovered and gained ⅛. Canadian Pacific was ⅛ up at the commencement, but later increased its advance. Northern Pacific, which began ¼ lower, recovered and made a fractional gain.

There was some covering for protection over the three-day holiday, beginning to-morrow.

The curb market was weak.

Americans and Canadian Pacific in the London market lacked stability.

There was little change in prices after the first fifteen minutes of depression. Union Pacific, Reading, Copper and St. Paul were up ¼. Steel advanced ⅜ to 52⅞. Smelter up ⅛. Other issues made slight gains and the tone in the last few minutes for the forenoon was firm.

Call money was loaning at 3 per cent.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—The map shows showery conditions in the Northwest again with moderate temperatures and little or no rain in the balance of the country. We look for a higher market today, as shorts will be nervous and likely to cover over the holidays.

Corn—We look for a steady market, based on a gradual strengthening of the cash position.

Oats—The market continues nervous but strong in tone. No betterment in crop conditions reported, with holders confident and short sellers timid.

Provisions—Hogs slightly under estimate with opening prices 5 cents higher on yesterday's advance, which was caused by foreign buying partly. Packers were the best sellers.

MINING STOCKS.

BAR SILVER.

The weather was considered favorable, as showery conditions prevailed

LONDON, July 3.—Bar silver steady at 26⅝d.

JAPANESE LINER LOST.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

YOKOHAMA, July 3.—The Japanese steamship Maru was wrecked today off Hokkaido Island. A meager wireless account of the disaster said the ship was a total loss.

STUNG TO DEATH BY BEES.

PITTSBURG PA., July 3.—Jeremiah Kramer, 72, a farmer, was stung to death by bees in his wagon shed here.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, July 3.—J. M. Anderson says: "A great deal of interest is manifested here in the tariff amendment to place a tax on contracts for future delivery, and it is to be hoped that every one who is interested as a producer or a consumer will realize the seriousness of such a measure, as there is nothing that could be more detrimental to the cotton trade of this country."

* * *

Should the Government report show conditions around 80, a further advance is looked for, as it would be considered as bullish.

* * *

The acreage report is expected to show 1 to 2 points increase, being around 35,225,000 acres planted, compared with 34,766,000 acres in 1912 and 36,631,000 acres in 1911. The condition report is expected between 80 and 81, compared with 79.1 last month, a June condition last year of 80.4, in 1911 88.2 and a ten-year average of 80.2.

* * *

* * *

The Cotton Exchange is refused a hearing in the proposed tax of one-tenth cent a pound on cotton future dealings.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, July 3.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows very favorable conditions, fair in Alabama and the Atlantics; no rain; cloudy in the rest of the belt, with fine general rains in the central States and Tennessee; also Arkansas. Little rain today. Indications are for partly cloudy weather, with a tendency to clear, although some scattered showers in central States likely.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "A bullish condition report, on the eve of the Government's condition and the acreage figures, which will be promulgated to-day, caused some covering, but the Senate's threat of prohibitive legislation stood as a barrier to enterprise, and the cotton market was a dull affair. Thus far the news from Washington has all tended to show a spirit of determination among the Senators to make the Clarke amendment, taxing future trading out of existence, a part of the tariff law, though some economists assume that, since such legislation is destructive and would very seriously injure the great industry on which the nation depends for the keeping of its international trade balance on the right side of the ledger, the Washington Government will not permit it to become a part of the law. With the exception of the larger concerns, spot buyers, merchants and exporters see practical annihilation to their business in the provisions of the Clarke amendment, and the consequent concentration of the spot business of the South into a very few hands.

"This would mean restricted competition among buyers, increased risk, and, consequently, a greater middleman's profit than is now realized. The producer would, of course, pay this increased charge. The trade as a whole says that under the workings of the Clarke amendment, spot cotton would cease to be first-class bank collateral in that lack of hedging facilities would cause the speculative risk to revert to the bale itself, which would necessitate a margin of many dollars a bale between spot value and bank value, and this would eliminate all merchants who could not command large cash resources. Another effect of the Clarke amendment would be the declaration by Congressional act that the very thing a series of Federal Grand Juries has labored hard to declare illegal is, in fact, the only legal procedure—that of forcing the man who has sold cotton he does not possess to deliver cotton on the contracts he has sold."

TIFTON SHIPS SECOND CAR OF TOMATOES TO NEW YORK

TIFTON, July 3.—The second carload of tomatoes from Tifton left last night for New York. The car contained about 350 crates and was loaded by a number of the largest truck growers of this section.

A telegram from New York announces that the first carload was sold at $2.25 per crate for the choice varieties. After selling agents' commission has been taken out and freight charges deducted, the car of 364 crates will net the truckers an average of $1.60 per crate.

LIVERPOOL GRAIN MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, July 3.—Wheat opened steady ⅛ to ¼d higher. At 1:30 p. m. the market was steady; July ¼d higher, while October and December were ⅝d higher; closed ¼ to ⅜d higher.

Corn opened unchanged. At 1:30 p. m. the market was steady, ¾d lower; closed ⅝ to ¾d higher.

WHEAT BEARS ARE NOT HAVING AN EASY TIME

CHICAGO, July 3.—The Inter Ocean says:

"With wheat absorbed every time it gets below 90c the last three days, the bears are not having an easy time. Those who watch the pit closely say they are unable to see evidence of extensive hedging sales. The situation at the moment is a little mixed. Conservative people are disposed to buy on breaks below 90c. Bears, however, stick to the belief that there will be more wheat raised this year than can be marketed above the present price level, and that hedging sales a little later will swamp the bulls.

"Corn traders said last night that the local short interest had been cut down and the outside trade was not heavy. The general disposition is to go slow today in making new commitments, as few care to carry trades open over the three holidays.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 3.—To-day's session in wheat was largely of an evening-up character over the three days of rest. The offerings were rather scant at the outset and prices were ¼@½c higher. Northwestern cars were smaller than a week ago. Cables were higher, although the crop prospects abroard and conditions surrounding the spring wheat crop in this country were favorable.

Corn was ¼@⅜c better.

Oats were unchanged to ⅛@¼c higher, mainly in sympathy with strength in corn and wheat.

Provisions were stronger with hogs.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Thoroughbred Stock Is Gradually Taking The Entire Country

In This Age of Progress and Improvement There Are No Backward Steps.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Thoroughbred stock is gradually and surely taking this country. This is an age of progress and improvement, so that whenever an advance is made, and a stake set, it is held, for there is not such thing as go back. You will not find one person in a thousand that has tried good stock that is just willing to let it drop out and go back to the old-fashioned barnyard hens.

The writer has traveled during his judging trips from August 1, 1912, to February 1, 1913, when the season's work ended, over 11,000 miles, all in the South from Virginia to Texas, from the Ohio River to Central Florida, and during that time had a chance to observe a good deal that is going on in the poultry breeding world.

We find that the farmers are fast taking up the breeding of poultry as a strong and important side line. A paying line. They are adopting one of the leading pure breeds and pushing them for the best that is in them. Some are strictly for eggs, but the majority of them want a combination breed for eggs and meat both. The Rhode Island Reds seem to be the leading variety at this time. There are some sections in which they are pushing the business much stronger than they are in others. We found Tennessee, North Carolina, Texas and Florida leading in the order named.

Tennessee is making wonderful strides along the line of producing poultry and eggs, so much so that whole train loads of live poultry are seen going out of Eastern Tennessee in specially prepared cars for the expert handling of this product so that it may be put into New York and other Eastern markets in prime condition. Attendants travel with each two or three cars to look after the feeding and watering en route. Two or three poultry shows in Texas, in which we had a special farmers' exhibit separate from the regular prizes offered, were filled with fine thoroughbred specimens, not bred closely to points, but for purity and egg production. Eggs were also exhibited. This is getting along as it should be. The farmers should be encouraged to make displays of their poultry and eggs for the simple fact of the encouragement it gives them. Every time a wide-awake farmer's wife attends a poultry show she returns home with a lot of good ideas in her head, which means better results for the poultry on their ranch.

Texas farmers, while leaders in cotton raising, are not slow to see the money there is in other things upon the farm as there is in poultry, and as a consequence, many of them are making poultry one of their strongest side lines.

Turkeys are raised in great numbers out there and they are almost as good as gold about holiday times. One of the best displays of fine turkeys we have ever seen was at the Dallas show some six years ago. It is uncommon thing in that State to see fine Bronze turkeys boxed for shipment standing at the railway stations to go to some progressive farmer in another part of the country who the wise is enough, and we believe introducing a change of blood. In either case, it clearly indicates that there is something doing besides raising cotton. We think besides the wisel s enough, and we believe that those who read these lines and are not doing something toward supplying the great demand for eggs and poultry in this country will take the hint and lose no time in taking hold. Not so much to be patriotic and help the country along but for mere pecuniary reasons. Simply gain. But in the greed for gain, if so it must be called, you will also benefit your fellow man. This country is fast turning to good poultry, and it is time you all knew it and share in the benefits derived therefrom.

STOCKS MAY DROP BUT ATLANTA REAL ESTATE CONTINUES TO G-R-O-W

HAVE YOU WATCHED the stock market and noted the wide differences between the prices of one year ago and those of to-day?

Union Pacific	170	149
Lehigh Valley	172	147
Illinois Central	128	110
American Sugar Refining	130	107
New York Central	117	97

We might extend the list indefinitely, but these tell the story. A similar story might be told of the stocks traded in upon the Atlanta market. Where, outside of a few bank stocks which have held their own on account of an increased surplus, is there a single local stock that has not weakened in value?

Ever hear of a slump in Atlanta real estate? No, and you never will, it matters not what the condition of the money market.

On the other hand, Atlanta real estate has grown in value even during times of stringency, and PEACHTREE PROPERTY HAS LED ALL OTHERS IN STEADILY CLIMBING UP THE LADDER.

YOU CAN NOT MISS IT, AND PROFITS WILL BE AS SURE AS THE PROVERBIAL DEATH AND TAXES IF YOU BUY IN

WE ARE in the market for good annual purchase money notes in any quantity. Local money and quick action. Can also handle some first mortgage loans.

FINCHER & MARRIOTT

JAS. H. REYNOLDS, Sales Manager.

1520 Candler Building. IVY 5213.

FOR SALE

ON PIEDMONT AVENUE, near school, on the car line, we have one of the best bungalows to be found in the city. Built by the present owner for a home out of the best material and workmanship. Never expected to sell it, but keep it for a home. The lot cost him $3,000 vacant. If vacant to-day could not be bought for $4,000.

The owner's work has called him to Florida, and he must sell by August 1.

We have had this place listed at $7,000, and cheap at that—but the owner says he must sell—therefore, he is putting the price down to $6,250. This should sell at once.

See this at once. We can make terms.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage.

It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Income Tax Items Stricken From Bill

News Welcome to Atlanta Building Managers—Renting Agenst to Meet. Chamber Home Started.

Office building managers and others acting in the capacity of landlord will be interested to learn that the United States Senate committee considering the provisions of the Federal income tax amendment have decided to cut out the clause which provides that tenants withhold rents from landlords, and will probably also eliminate the clause which would cause a tax to be paid on mortgage overpluses.

Charles P. Glover, president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, who, with others, signed a resolution of protest sent to Washington recently in the name of the board, is in receipt of a communication from Senator Hoke Smith making these facts known. People to whom Mr. Glover mentioned the matter expressed a great deal of satisfaction, since the provisions referred to were considered unjust and hurtful.

Renting Agents to Meet.

A meeting of great importance to renting agents will be held Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the office of Charles P. Glover, to consider several matters which Mr. Glover and others will call to the attention of the members. It is understood that a rule which gives exclusive listing of houses to agencies for 30 days has frequently been broken, and an effort will be made to correct the abuse.

"Frequently," declared a renting agent Wednesday morning, "there are three or four signs on the same house, when the rules of the Atlanta Real Estate Board call for exclusive listing for a month. This matter will undoubtedly be brought up at the meeting."

The notices were sent out by Raymond Robson, of Foster & Robson, who is chairman of the committee on renting of the board.

Several Permits Issued.

Application was made Wednesday at Building Inspector Hays' office by the Georgia School of Technology to build at Tech Flats a concrete grand stand to cost $15,000, the idea being to convert it into a stadium in the future and extend around the entre park.

Permit was issued to the Chamber of Commerce to renovate the Y. M. C. A. building at the southeast corner of Auburn Avenue and North Pryor Street, at a cost of $50,000, and to the Atlanta Theological Seminary to erect a two-story brick building on Stewart Avenue at a cost of $12,000.

The first job will be done by R. M. Walker, the second by the Griffin Construction Company, and the last by day work.

Still Increasing Force.

George Anderson, formerly with the Williams-Hartsock Real Estate Agency; John D. Brazelton, formerly of Cedartown, and J. E. Pritchett, a local merchandise broker for ten or fifteen years, have joined the sales force of the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency.

Fast Work on Peachtree.

Although the county convicts have been but two days on the work of repairing Peachtree south of Buckhead, they have proceeded as far as James R. Gray's country place, having reached Governor John M. Slaton's Tuesday. Shelby Smith, chairman of the County Commissioners, declares the work will now be pushed as fast as possible.

The other section of this work—from Buckhead north to the DeKalb County line—is in fine shape. Automobilists who have used it since its completion pronounce it one of the best thoroughfares in the State.

Working Out Produce Row.

Foundation work is getting along satisfactorily on the $205,000 concrete structure which is being erected on Central Avenue for certain commission merchants of the city. The excavations are about completed and framework for the concrete material is under construction.

This building will be one of the largest concrete structures in the South, extending from Central Avenue to the Washington Street viaduct. A new street, Produce Row, has been cut through on the north side, and the produce establishments will have ample railroad facilities. Sixteen commission merchants have already agreed to go into the structure and others will probably follow. The effect of this move will be to clear up North and South Broad Streets, and some improvements will undoubtedly follow.

Keefer and Stepson Fined; Wife to Ask Divorce and Alimony

With David Keefer and his stepson, Jack Macy, being fined in Police Court late Tuesday, the curtain has been rung down on another act of the Keefer marital drama.

Mrs. Keefer has announced she will start the show going again in twelve months with a divorce suit, in which she will endeavor to obtain separation and alimony from her husband.

The trial of Keefer and young Macy in Police Court yesterday was the sequel to a fight at the Piedmont Driving Club last week over a $5,000 automobile, against which Keefer had instituted bail trover proceedings.

After Keefer had been fined $25.75 by Recorder Broyles, a case of disorderly conduct was entered against the stepson, who was fined $10.75.

Carload of Tomatoes Shipped From Georgia

TIFTON, July 2.—What is believed to be the first solid carload of tomatoes ever shipped out of Georgia left Tifton for New York. The car contained 365 crates, and it is estimated that the tomatoes will bring $700, judging by market quotations on the date of shipment.

If this is not the first carload of tomatoes ever shipped from Georgia it is certainly the first ever shipped from this section.

Champ Clark Proud of Friendship for Jews

NEW YORK, July 2.—Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives, has written to Bernard Nolan accepting enthusiastically the presidency of the American-Roumanian Jewish Emancipation Committee.

"I am very fond of the Jews," he writes. "The greatest puzzle in the world to me is why any country persecutes and maltreats them."

Ismay's Name in Shipping Passes

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 2.—The famous firm of Ismay, Imrie & Co., founders of the White Star Line, disappeared July 1 with the retirement of J. Bruce Ismay from the presidency of the International Marine Mercantile Company.

When Ismay accepted Mr. Morgan's offer to purchase the business he made it a condition that on his retirement the name of Ismay be no longer used.

Strawberries End Girl's Hunger Strike

PHILADELPHIA, July 2.—A plate of ice cream and strawberries ended the "hunger strike" of 17-year-old Julia Morgan, of Pottsville, Pa., who was held by the local police until her relatives could be found.

Miss Morgan had fasted more than two days.

$25 IS OFFERED FOR BOOSTER BUTTON

Georgian to Give Prize for Best Slogan for Atlanta's New Half Million Club.

Every good citizen is about to get a thrill of the real Atlanta spirit. The 500,000 Club idea that has taken such a hold on the city is crystallizing into a definite organization.

Just to show how strong the appeal is to Atlantans, The Georgian makes this proposal:

A prize of $25 will be given to the person suggesting the best caption for buttons to be distributed.

The phrase must express the spirit of the organization. It must tell in few words the story of the Atlanta spirit. And to insure that the suggestion best expressing this thought will be the one selected, a committee of three who typify the Atlanta spirit will be named as judges.

Show Your Civic Pride.

What a chance to display civic pride! Far less inspiration than Atlantans are famed for has produced great poems. Yet love for Atlanta is so simple and widespread that even children will be eligible contestants.

When the ad men went after their national convention once they had a contest for a motto. This one won: "Atlanta Always Ahead."

Do you get your cue? It is as simple as A B C if only you are imbued with the true Atlanta spirit.

Someone recently suggested that the name of Atlanta should be changed to Boostville, because everybody is always boosting the town. Wouldn't it be an honor to be the champion little booster of the town?

Think Up Caption.

The men who will compose the committee of judges will be men who have grown up with the Atlanta spirit, men who know it and feel it. Also they are men who declare Atlanta will have 500,000 people by 1920, and they are men who will stand high in the councils of the 500,000 Club, for the object of the club is to get the 500,000 people here.

Think up a caption for the buttons.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Talking Movies at the Grand.

Theatergoers and others have become decidedly interested in the Edison talking pictures at the Grand. There were more people in attendance at the matinee and night performances Tuesday than at the opening on Monday.

There is something almost weird about the talking pictures. It is a sensation to sit and see a picture on a screen and hear it sing and talk.

A lecture is delivered by a person on the sheet. His voice is clear and distinct and his talk interesting. He tells all about the invention and then follows comedy sketches, singing novelties and playlets. In addition to the talking pictures the management is presenting three reels of first run pictures at every three reels of first-run pictures at every night exhibition daily that runs about two hours.

Variety in Forsyth Bill.

There is variety in the vaudeville bill at the Forsyth this week. The seven acts are without anything that looks like confliction. There is comedy, music, sketch and novelty—a program far-away from that sameness that is found often in vaudeville.

Edward Abeles and Miss Charlotte Lander present a sketch that is simply the best that has been seen here. Mr. Abeles is an actor of real merit.

Billy McDermott, the tramp comedian, has become a real favorite. Misses Lietzel and Jeannette, aerial gymnasts, offer the best closing act that the Forsyth has presented in many months. Carlisle's Dog Circus is a treat and Violinsky, the musical wonder, has helped to make the bill a real drawing card.

"A Trip to Paris" Pleases.

The warm weather of the last few days seems to have had but little effect on the patronage of the Bijou, where an unusually clever offering is being given at bargain prices. "A Trip to Paris," with its twenty people, including some very clever comedians, nimble dancers, pretty chorus and varied changes of costume, is just the style of entertainment that appeals to amusement seekers during the heated term. There is no plot to worry over, but just a succession of pretty musical numbers interspersed with clever specialties, laughable parodies and comical situations.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Mary Gunter, sixty years old, died at a local sanitarium at 5 o'clock Wednesday morning. She is survived by four daughters, Misses Maggie and Nora Gunter, Mrs.

Gilbert B. Cheek, a Confederate veteran eighty-one years old, died at the Soldiers' Home Tuesday afternoon. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The funeral of Lois Raper, the two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Raper, who died Tuesday at a private sanitarium, was held at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning from the chapel of Greenberg & Bond. The body was interred at Casey's.

The funeral of Tom Papas, eighteen years old, who died at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning at a private sanitarium, was held Wednesday morning from the Greek Church on Central Avenue. Interment at Westview.

The body of Allen Wood, who died Tuesday at Washington, will arrive in Atlanta at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Wood was seventy-nine years old and formerly lived in Atlanta. He is survived by three daughters, Miss Janie O. Wood, Mrs. George B. McGaughey and Mrs. J. B. Zachry. Funeral services will be held from the home of J. B. Zachry, 175 Angier Avenue, at 10 o'clock Thursday morning. Interment at Westview.

BROYLES TO GIVE SPEED FIENDS "THE LIMIT"

Recorder Declares He Will Aid Police in War on Careless Automobile Drivers.

have declared war on the speeders," she said. "We have formed ourselves into a vigilance committee to get the numbers of all the automobilists who race through this part of town."

Mrs. Heyback saw the auto which struck the Kilpatrick girl and knocked her from the middle of the street to the sidewalk, but she did not see the accident itself.

"The car was coming so fast," said Mrs. Heyback, "that it just seemed to appear from nowhere and then it dashed into Williams Street and disappeared from sight."

The only eye witness of the accident was a woman living on Mills Street, near Williams. Most of the residents in the neighborhood had gone inside for dinner. This woman was sitting on the porch of her home when she heard the whirring of the automobile. An instant later she saw it dash down the street, striking the Kilpatrick girl.

The car did not slacken its speed in the least, but raced on in a cloud of dust and turned into Williams Street, where it was lost to view. The horrified woman did not stop to go around by the gate, but vaulted the fence and picked up the limp form and carried it into her house, from where it was removed to Grady Hospital and then home.

The girl's left shoulder is dislocated and her ankle is thought to be broken.

"I was going to visit my brother, Homer, who lives on River Street," said Eva, in telling of the accident. "I got on the Luckie Street car two blocks from our house. I got off the car at Mills Street t trasfer to the River Street line.

"I started across the street, when all of a sudden—I woke up in Grady Hospital.

"No I did not even see the automoblie, and never heard a horn or any sound of warning.

Says Driver Was White.

Mrs. Kilpatrick, who had learned all the particulars from eye witnesses to the accident, state that the automobile came down Mills Street at a terrific rate of speed, driven by a white man. He never sounded a warning, she declared.

"The driver of the touring car after he had hit Eva," said Mrs. Kilpatrick, "put on even more speed and without looking around made his escape.

"I think this is one of the most cowardly and outrageous deeds ever committed in a civilized community. If the accident could have been avoided or was accidental I would feel diffrent about it. But when the chauffeur hit Eva he ran like a coward, and this shows that the deed was deliberate and that people in automobiles care nothing for the lives of people.

"Eva has not been to town but a few times in her life, for I do not allow any of my children to run the streets. She is not deaf, and had she been given any warning I am sure she could have got out of the way of the machine, even at the high speed it was traveling.

"We are poor people and though I don't for a minute begrudge the doctor bills for Eva, it does seem a shame to have my little daughter crippled for life and not to even know who is responsible for it."

The girl's father, W. R. Kilpatrick, is employed at the Atlanta Steel Hoop Mill.

The Kilpatricks have six children, only one of whom is working. Neighbors of the Kilpatricks are greatly aroused and some of them have expressed the opinion that pedestrians should take the law into their own hands.

FACE DISFIGURED WITH PIMPLES

Ruffin, N. C.—"My face became full of pimples and blackheads, and would itch, burn and smart. The skin was rough and red. I was really ashamed of my face. My arms and back were affected almost as badly. The pimples would fester and there would come a dry scab on top. The trouble caused my face to be disfigured badly and the itching would bother me so I could not sleep well nights, especially during warm weather.

"I used all kinds of ointments, cold creams, powders, soaps, medicine and all kinds of different remedies for my face and arms, but from none did I get any benefit. The trouble lasted me three long years without anything doing me any good until a friend told me about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and then I decided to try them. After the first application I could see some improvement. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment two weeks I did not look like the same person; most of the pimples had disappeared. At the end of four weeks I was completely cured." (Signed) Miss Mamie Mitchell, Jan. 9, 1913.

It costs nothing to learn how pure, sweet, effective and satisfying Cuticura Soap and Ointment are in the treatment of poor complexion, red, rough hands, itching scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, because you need not buy them until you try them. Cuticura Soap 25c and Cuticura Ointment 50c are sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

ARMOR TRUST'S LOBBY PLOT IS REVEALED

Witness at Senate's Inquiry Tells of Secret War Waged on Great Combines.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The lobby inquiring committee on Saturday will recommend an investigation embracing not only the Mulhall charges, but the lobbying activities of the New York Stock Exchange, financial institutions, tariff associations, liquor and anti-liquor, and labor and anti-labor organizations.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Henry B. Martin, secretary of the Anti-Trust League, testifying before the Senate Lobby Investigation Committee, today declared the league is concentrating its efforts in a fight against the Armor Plate Trust. The trust, he asserted, is robbing the people of millions of dollars each year.

Other activities of the league have been to prod the Government to activity against the Elevator, Coal, Transportation and other alleged trusts. He could not tell how much the fight had cost himself and his associates.

Martin said that A. B. Dickey, of the Carnegie Coal Company, Vice President Johnson, of the Bethlehem Steel Company, and an agent of the Midvale Steel Company formed a lobby in Washington last March to induce the Secretary of the Navy to sign contracts for armor plate at figures much higher than its value.

League Members Persecuted.

Martin declined to produce matter showing the methods employed by the league in influencing legislation. He especially did not want to make public a complete list of the members.

"We are engaged in a very serious fight against trusts," said Martin, "and it is dangerous to the business life of any man to be known to be a member of this organization. We held one open convention to our sorrow. Many of the members were injured by the truste when their relationship with the league was discovered."

Martin admitted that contributions of as high as $1,000 were made to the league. He refused to give the names of the contributors. He said he has known David Lamar five years and that Lamar is a member of the Anti-Trust League, although he is a member only because he is in sympathy with the league's purposes.

Lamar Gave Aid.

"He did more than any one man to point out vicious features of the Taft-Wickersham railroad bill which, if passed in its original form, would have given immunity to the railroad trust," said Martin.

Martin said he asked Lamar to give him a draft of a resolution for another investigation of the Steel Trust.

"You asked Lamar to prepare the resolution?" demanded Senator Cummins.

"Yes," replied Martin.

Martin did not remember where Lamar gave him the Steel Trust resolution. He did not recall how long he had the resolution in his possession before it was introduced.

"Did you tell the members to whom you gave the resolution that Lamar drew it?" demanded Senator Cummins.

"No," replied Martin.

Martin accused Chairman Lovett, of the Union Pacific board of directors, and Paul D. Cravath of lobbying at the Department of Justice by "trying to influence Attorney General McReynolds against doing what was in the interest of the public."

Martin admitted that David Lamar, "the wolf" of Wall Street, prepared the resolution fatheerd by Representative Stanley in the House for the investigation of the Steel Trust.

Marathon Race From Albany to Sylvester

SYLVESTER, July 3.—Much local interest is being manifested in the second annual Fourth of July Marathon Race under the auspices of the Worth County Local and the Albany Herald. The race will start in Albany at 5 o'clock Friday morning, and will end at Sylvester. Cash prizes amounting to $200 will be awarded the winners.

The local camp of the Woodmen of the World will give a barbecue to the citizens of Worth and Dougherty counties.

ASSEMBLY QUITS TO CELEBRATE 4TH OF JULY

Legislature Reconvenes Monday. Thirty-eight Days Left After Adjournment.

The Legislature adjourned in both branches to-day until July 7, the House to reassemble at 11 a. m. and the Senate at noon.

When the General Assembly meets Monday it will have before it exactly 38 days of life, as it will have used up twelve days by that time. It is limited to a total sitting of 50 days.

Today's proceedings in both branches were more or less perfunctory, and adjournment was effected in each before 11 o'clock.

The committees, however, are well ahead of the Senate and the House, and both will have full opportunity to catch up all time that will be lost between now and Monday, after the Assembly reconvenes. The Houses can not adjourn for more than three days at a time, except by joint resolution, passed by two-thirds of each.

An echo of the successful fight to unseat Representatives McArthur, of Wheeler, and Browning, of Bleckley, was heard to-day in a resolution proposed by Mr. Wheatley, of Sumter.

Powers of Delegates Asked.

This resolution, which went to the Committee on Rules, provides that both McArthur and Browning shall have seats in the House, with the right to consult and be consulted on local matters, but shall not be permitted to vote or serve on committees.

If this resolution goes through, Messrs. McArthur and Browning will occupy positions in the Georgia Legislature somewhat similar to that occupied by territorial delegates on the floor of the House of Representatives in the National Congress.

The resolution will have many supporters, provided it comes from the Committee on Rules with a favorable report, but a strong fight unquestionably will be made against its adoption, in any event.

New Enrollment Committee.

The House, by a special rule, created a new Committee on Enrollment to-day, as it already is evident that the crush of matter is growing far too heavy for the present Committee on Engrossing to handle.

Virtually the entire Legislative membership either left Atlanta this afternoon or will leave to-night, many of them going to various Fourth of July celebrations throughout the State.

The recent recommendatoin of Judge Roan that the office of public defender be instituted in Georgia in contradistinction to the office of public prosecutor, or Solicitor General, seems likely to bear fruit in the present Legislature.

Representative Blackburn, of Fulton, has introduced a bill seeking to set up this office, and it is now before the General Judiciary Committee for consideration.

Paid Like the Solicitor.

Blackburn's bill proposes that the lawyer assigned to the defense of a pauper or ignorant defendant shall be paid for his services from the county treasury, in the same manner that a Solicitor is compensated, except that his pay shall not arise from fees incident to the case at bar.

In this way it is figured that poor defendants may have their rights on trial safeguarded to the same extent that the State safeguards its own interests, which is exactly what the law, in theory, contemplates.

This bill has the indorsement of lawyers generally, and the judges of the State are said to favor it almost as a unit.

The outlook for its passage seems to be good.

Another bill that is attracting a good deal of attention among lawyers is the bill to reinstate William B. Kent, a member of the last Legislature, who recently was disbarred from the practice of law in Georgia. This bill was proposed by Mr. Edmondson, of Brooks, and will be pushed vigorously.

Mr. Kent was disbarred from the practice of law during the session of the last House, and his friends claim that there was much behind the action that was unwarranted and unjust.

Action Arouses Interest.

They will make a strong plea to have him reinstated this year.

Disbarments are rare in Georgia, and as Mr. Kent's was effected for alleged unworthy practice, the action of the Legislature, in the attempt that will be made therein to upset the findings of the court that put Mr. Kent off the list of practicing attorneys in Georgia, will be watched with keen interest.

LEVEE AT EXECUTIVE MANSION SETS RECORD FOR BRILLIANCY

Governor and Wife Congratulated on Most Successful Reception in History of Mansion.

Atlanta society is congratulating Mrs. John Marshall Slaton to-day on the success of her first formal entertainment as mistress of the Executive Mansion.

The reception, given by Governor and Mrs. Slaton at the mansion Wednesday night in honor of the General Assembly was, in addition to being the first of the new administration, one of the most brilliant official receptions in Georgia's history.

Several hundred people attended the affair. The United States Army was represented by General Evans and his staff, and Colonel Van Orsdale and the officers from Fort McPherson in full dress uniform.

Mansion and Grounds a Garden.

To accommodate the large crowd, the lawn of the Executive Mansion had been turned into a garden, with the sides inclosed by a hedge of small pine trees eight or ten feet in height. From the entrance on Cain Street a little avenue of bay trees led to the main entrance under the mansion.

Governor and Mrs. Slaton received their guests in a pergola of white columns, festooned with smilax. Standing with them were President of the Senate and Mrs. Randolph Anderson and Speaker of the House and Mrs. William Burwell. They were assisted in entertaining the guests by the members of the Governor's staff, members of the family, and a group of Mrs. Slaton's friends.

A party of society girls, including Misses Margaret Grant, Margaret Hawkins, Passie May Ottley, Harriet Calhoun, Marjorie Brown, Adgate Ellis and Virginia Lipscomb, served punch, lemonade and coffee.

Mrs. Slaton Gowned Exquisitely.

Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. Slaton's mother, who resides with her, assisted the new mistress of the Executive Mansion in presenting the guests. She has as her especial guests Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hunt, of Eatonton.

Mrs. Slaton wore a gown of white chiffon cloth, combined with delicate pattern of fillet lace and apricot satin. The lace was in long tunics on each side of the front panel of chiffon, which was embroidered in a flower design of tiny crystal sequins in pastel shades. A rhinestone sparkled in the center of each flower. Over the back of the gown was draped a long sash of apricot satin, and the narrow pointed train was bordered with the same. The chiffon sleeves were overlace, and met by long gloves. She wore a necklace of pearls and diamonds, and two corsage pieces of precious stones.

Man Sought 2 Years By U. S. Captured

Harrison M. Thomas, a former storeroom gauger, who for the past two years has successfully evaded the United States Government, sought as a material witness in the case of the Government vs. B. J. Davis, was taken into custody last week in Washington. He will be brought at once to Atlanta for trial.

In 1900 B. J. Davis, it is charged, removed certain distilled spirits from a bonded distilling warehouse which belonged to a man by the name of Fowler. Davis had charge of the warehouse and without authority to do so furnished to Harrison M. Thomas packages of corn whisky.

Athens Man Killed By Excessive Heat

ATHENS, July 3.—Otto Hubert, a harness maker, employed by Max Hubert & Co., a heavy built man, about 35 years old, was overcome by the heart on the street here this afternoon and died shortly afterward.

WRIT SOUGHT IN MOVE TO FREE NEGRO LEE

Attorney for Watchman Declares Client Knows Nothing of the Actual Crime.

Bernard L. Chappell, attorney for Newt Lee, negro night watchman at the pencile factory, held in the Phagan case, stated Thursday morning that he would swear out a writ of habeas corpus for the release of the negro.

Attorney Chappell stated that he had come to the conclusion that there was nothing the negro knew about the crime except finding the body, and that the State had no right to keep him without some charge or as a material witness.

Lee was the first suspect arrested in connection with Mary Phagan's murder. He was ordered held by the Coroner, but when a bill of indictment was offered the Grand Jury at the same time of the Frank indictment, no action was taken against the negro.

Weak Spots in Conley Tale.

Chappell said the writ of habeas corpus would compel the State either to order the negro held as a material witness or make some charge against him.

Conley, in relating his dramatic tale of carrying the body of Mary Phagan from the rear of the second floor and disposing of it at the direction of Frank in a dark corner of the gloomy basement, said that when he reached the elevator he had to wait until Frank went into his office for a key to the elevator door.

The defense will maintain, it is understood, that the elevator door had not been locked for some time. Witnesses will be called to testify that the door had remained unlocked in accordance with instructions from the firms with which the building was insured. From this alleged circumstance, it will be argued that the negro's story is a fabrication devised to shield himself from the charge of murder and to shift the responsibility onto another man.

To Assail Whole Story.

This is only one particular of at least a score which will be assailed by Attorneys Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold, who are representing Frank. They will say in the first place that the elevator was not running at all on the day of the crime, in spite of Conley's story that the body was carried down to the basement by this means. Harry Denham and Arthur White, who were working on the fourth floor of the factory, will be called to testify to this.

With the defense and prosecution awaiting the day when the great legal battle which will send Frank to the gallows or free him from the stigma of the murder charge shall begin, Frank's lawyers are occupying much of their time in making a critical analysis of the succession of weird statements credited to the negro from the time he said he wrote on the Friday before the murder at the dictation of Frank the notes that were found beside the body of the dead girl until he issued his last affidavit.

The negro admitted the story of writing the notes on Friday was false. He admitted that his first story of never having seen Mary Phagan, dead or alive, was a deliberate lie. He is reported to have further changed his story by admitting seeing the girl before she was killed. But, except for this, he maintains his last affidavit is the whole truth. The defense believes it is as false as the rest and is preparing to go into court and break down utterly the fabrication that the negro has erected.

Notes to Play Part.

Although the notes found by the body of the slain girl have received little attention from those working on the case lately, they are bound to have a most important part in the trial of Frank.

The defense will seek to show that there could have been no possibility of their being dictated by the factory superintendent; that if the negro had taken Frank's dictation, supposing that Frank had committed the crime, a much different sort of a note would have been the result.

Conley has shown since his arrest that he can follow dictation with a fair degree of accuracy. This being the case, it is reasonable to presume, the defense will hold, that he would have followed Frank's words closely. But the notes are an incoherent, jumbled mass of words that are only half intelligible after the detectives have placed weeks of study upon them. The defense will contend that such a note can not be imagined, by any process of reasoning, as the dictation of Frank.

Manufacturers to Hear Exhibit Plans

Definite plans for a permanent manufacturers' exhibit in Atlanta will be submitted by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce to more than 150 manufacturers at a dinner Thursday evening at the Hotel Ansley.

The Chamber also is raising money for the 1913 Georgia Corn Show. More than $3,500 has been pledged, exclusive of $2,000 by the fertilizer committee, of which H. C. Fisher is chairman, has promised to secure. The sum desired is $7,500.

Postal Receipts in Year Jump $116,000

"Atlanta Always Ahead" again is illustrated in the report of the Atlanta postoffice for the fiscal year ending June 30. Total receipts for the year were $1,328,011.24, an increase of $116,005.63 over the previous year.

Postmaster Hugh L. McKee believes Atlanta will be in the exclusive class of postoffices soon. This class is made up of postoffices with receipts totaling $150,000 a month.

BUTTON IDEA FOR 500,000 CLUB IS PRAISED

M. C. Maxwell, recently come to Atlanta from Charleston, S. C., where he was president of the Ad Men's Club, said Thursday that he wanted to get in as a charter member of the 500,000 club. He explained that he had been associated with a similar plan in Charleston and that he was glad to find such a definite means of expressing the Atlanta spirit.

"The Georgian's suggestion for a 500,000 club to get 500,000 people here by 1920 is a great thing," he said. "I have noticed the $25 prize offer for the best slogan to go on the buttons of this club.

Buttons Sold in Charleston.

"There's no doubt about every loyal citizen wearing these buttons. Why, I believe they even would be glad to pay for them.

"In Charleston we wanted to raise $5,000 to move the museum. We decided to sell buttons. This was the slogan adopted:

"'See Charleston first, always.'

"Then 50 men got to work on the streets and we sold 5,000 of these buttons at $1 each.

"So much for the button idea. Atlanta is too far ahead to be led by Charleston.

Urges Letter Head Slogan.

"With the Atlanta spirit what it is there is no telling to what extent the button idea will go.

"I think it would be good for all business firms to have '500,000 people in 1920' printed on their letter heads.

"One thing I'm sure about. I'm glad to get to Atlanta to live."

Mr. Maxwell is associated with the Rhodes-Wood Furniture Company.

ACQUITTAL SEEN IN CHURCH INQUIRY

Macon Christian Elders to Report Verdict in Charlton-Lester Case Sunday.

MACON, July 3.—The elders of the First Christian Church will report to the congregation Sunday morning on their investigation into the alleged visit made by Professor Frank M. Charlton, the choir leader, to the home of Mrs. Marvin Lee Lester, secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, on the night of June 5.

It is very probable that the elders will declare to the church that their inquiry has failed to prove the charge against the two prominent members of the congregation who are now under suspicion. It will be left to the congregation whether there shall be an open trial.

The elders last night visited the home of Mrs. Lester on Carling Avenue to determine if Mrs. J. W. Jenkins could have recognized Professor Charlton from the porch of her home across the street from the Lester residence.

One of the elders entered the alley and stood by the side gate of the Lester back yard and other elders got on the porch of the Jenkins home and endeavored to distinguish him. They were unsuccessful, they say, and for that reason they are dubious as to Mrs. Jenkins' and Mrs. Alma Armstrong's statement that they positively recognized Professor Charlton.

The exclusive publication in Macon yesterday by The Georgian of the fact of the investigation being in progress caused a genuine sensation.

"Now that the affair has gotten in the papers," says Rev. Leroy M. Anderson, the pastor, "I am more than ever determined that there shall be a thorough investigation."

The elders have several more persons to examine to-night.

Douglas Man, Insane, Hangs Himself in Jail

DOUGLASVILLE, July 3.—J. L. Dempsy, a well-known citizen of Douglas County, committed suicide by hanging himself in the County jail here. Dempsy, who had become temporarily deranged, had been placed in jail for safe-keeping.

Worry over family troubles and the possession of his eight-year-old son is supposed to have affected his mind. There was no other occupant of the jail and Dempsy had probably been dead several hours when found. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide.

New York Policeman Convicted Grafter

NEW YORK, July 3.—A verdict of guilty was returned early to-day against ex-Police Sergeant Peter J. Duffy, accused of collecting graft from illegal resorts in return for police protection.

Duffy showed no emotion when his guilt was pronounced. This was Duffy's second trial, the jury in the first having disagreed.

MANY ATLANTANS STUNG BY WILES OF A DAVID LAMAR

From photographs of David Lamar, "the Wolf of Wall Street," who Wednesday naively admitted before the Senate Lobby Committee at Washington that he had impersonated a number of public men in an effort to influence Wall Street, Atlantans have recognized an old acquaintance and the greatest "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" who ever operated in the Gate City.

Lamar, according to old-timers, came to Atlanta about 1892 and for a number of years was more or less successful in promoting various schemes which finally led to his arrest and departure to other fields. While here, however, he lived like a king, except when under indictment or in jail, and the known facts of his career reveal that he has not only had a greater supply of funds since, but that he has also escaped the tentacles of the law.

By all who remember him he is described as a man of wonderful personality and insight into human nature.

Soon after reaching Atlanta Lamar established close relations with a well known private banker. He rented the home of the late George W. Harrison, at the corner of Cone and Poplar Streets, then one of the fashionable houses of Atlanta, and proceeded to live in a lordly fashion. His wife is described as a beautiful woman and to her he gave every consideration.

His first scheme was to persuade Sam Hall, a former Atlantan who was a social leader and possessed of considerable money, to go in with him in the establishment of a weekly society paper. In a justice court, where Lamar was subsequently arraigned, Mr. Hall charged him with "cheating and swindling," stating that he had paid Lamar $500 to start the paper, but that the paper had failed to appear, and that he had seen nothing more of his $500.

Lamar, handsome and self-confident, arose in court and read a written defense of himself, of which the following are said to be verbatim extracts, remembered by a veteran reporter:

Eloquence Staggers Court.

"Mr. Hall did not want his name to be associated with the paper, but he promised that, from time to time, he would furnish me with choice and meaty bits of gossip and scandal.

"Later I called on Mr. Hall at his place of business and was surprised to find him a bookkeeper in a coffin factory. There, surrounded by the grewsome evidences of the mortality of man, we concluded our arrangements."

The record, from memory, is that Lamar's speech so staggered the court with its eloquence that he escaped on a technicality.

Next he organized a company to take over the street car advertising of Atlanta. He secured Dr. Joseph Jacoos as an investor to the extent of $7,500. When the company did not pan out, Dr. Jacobs "kissed" his money good-bye.

Finally Got His $7,500.

He decided the case was worth investigation, so he called at the Wall Street address of David Lamar. After an office boy had carried in his card the private office door of Lamar swung open and there stood the former Atlantan, surrounded by luxurious furnishings.

Lamar was gushing. He greeted Dr. Jacobs with an embrace, declaring that Dr. Jacobs had been his great benefactor in a time of grave need.

"You know," he said, "I was planning a little vacation. For that reason I have neglected to send you the money I owe you, for I was going to Atlanta to give it to you personally."

The story Dr. Jacobs told to his friends was that Lamar remembered the amount to be $1,000, but after a little argument he was convinced it was $7,500. He gave Dr. Jacobs New York exchange for the amount.

But back to the Atlanta end of the story. Unrebuffed by the failure of his two former projects, Lamar attempted to organize an accident insurance company for railroad employees. His banker friend stood him in good stead as chief backer.

He got $2,500 from a citizen, who soon regretted being persuaded. The result was another justice of the peace warrant.

Billy Crim, a city detective, started to serve the warrant on Lamar at his palatial home. On his way he met the star reporter of the city, whom he invited to go along. With the manners of a Chesterfield, Lamar met them at the door and was informed of the mission.

"Gentlemen," he said, "this is awkward. I am just eating my dinner, and I am sure you will not interrupt me and disturb my wife."

Billy Crim replied that he had a criminal warrant and that Lamar would have to go with him. Finally it was decided that the reporter should stand sponsor for Lamar until he finished his dinner.

The reporter recounts that Lamar finished his dinner with the ease and leisure of an Oriental king, explaining that the visitors were there on a business matter.

Here Appeared "Them Papers."

On his way to the old police station on Pryor Street, Lamar asked to stop and see an old friend in the Postal Telegraph office on Alabama Street. The request was granted, and Lamar held a short private conversation with a Mr. Close, the manager.

Once in the police station, Captain J. M. Wright, then Chief of Detectives, refused him the privilege of any visitors. A day of such solitude ruffled his nerves and in a very agitated state he appealed to his reporter friend.

He explained that he had never seen Mr. Close, of the telegraph office, but that he had some important papers in his pocket which he had to hide from the detectives and that he had given them to Mr. Close with the solemn request to hold them until they met again.

"I know by his eyes that that man will grant my request," said Lamar to the reporter. "Now, I want you to get that man and my wife down here so that the papers may be transferred to her."

The transfer was made that night. In the alley that divides The Georgian from the Atlanta National Bank Building Mrs. Lamar stole and, following the reporter's instructions, hid the papers in the bosom of her dress.

Mobile Greets Him Next.

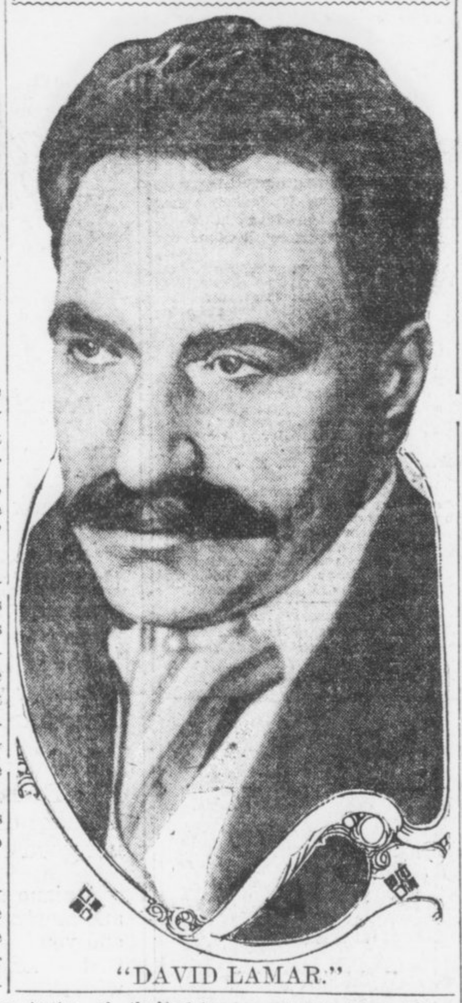

It was but a few days before Lamar was free again. The Atlantan who had made the $2,500 investment in the insurance company turned on the banker for redress and recovered his money after a fight through the Supreme Court.

Lamar announced that he would seek another clime. But before going he offered the reporter with whom he had been associated a job at $500 a month. It is really true that the reporter refused the offer.

Mobile then had a visit by the famous promoter. By the time he had shaken hands around once he had organized a company to take over the electric light plant and the street railway. He was played up in the papers as a New York capitalist.

It is said that when his associates woke up they did not know for certain whether they had anything left in Mobile but the bay.

KNOWN AS 'WOLF OF WALL STREET'

"DAVID LAMAR."

Lauterbach Ignorant of Lamar's Action, He Says.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Edward Lauterbach, the New York lawyer whom David Lamar, a Wall Street stock manipulator, tried to have appointed to represent the Union Pacific Railroad in the dissolution agreement proceedings, to-day denied that he knew Lamar was working in his behalf.

Mr. Lauterbach said he never suspected that Lamar was posing as a Congressman.

"I will have no statement to make until after I testify next Monday," Mr. Lauterbach said. "I will explain everything so far as my name is concerned."

Jury Deadlocked in Girl Strikers' Trial

PATERSON, N. J., July 3.—The jury in the case of Miss Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, member of the Industrial Workers of the World, charged with inciting riot in the silk mill strike, appeared to be hopelessly deadlocked to-day. The jurors have been out more than 24 hours.

Patrick Quinlan, I. W. W. leader, who was convicted of inciting riot, was sentenced to not less than two nor more than seven years in the State prison.

Reinforcements Are Sent to Greek Army.

ATHENS, July 3.—Heavy reinforcements were sent to-day to strengthen the Greek army advancing toward Ligovani in Albania. Military telegrams from headquarters in Salonika report the Greeks are meeting stout resistance, but driving all before them. There has been enormous loss of life.

Roumanians Ready To Join Servians.

BUCHAREST, ROUMANIA, July 3. Seventy-five thousand Roumanians are under arms awaiting any eventuality. King Charles is preparing to throw his forces against the Bulgarians because of Bulgaria's refusal to give certain territorial compensation to Roumania for remaining neutral in the Balkan war.

Great Battle in Progress; Many Slain.

VIENNA, July 3.—A great battle between Bulgarian and Servian troops is being fought at Veles, 50 miles southwest of Uskub. Heavy casualties are reported.

A Sofia dispatch, uncensored at Belgrade, got through this afternoon reporting a Bulgarian victory. Sixteen hundred Servian soldiers and thirty officers were captured.

A Bulgarian army had begun to march upon Salonika. King Constantine is rallying an army to deefnd the city. A Greek fleet is being concentrated in the Salonika harbor to bombard the Bulgarians if they get within artillery range.

Beavers Will Ask For Women Aides

Instead of asking for women detectives, as he announced after returning from the Washington convention, Chief of Police Beavers said Thursday he would ask the Police Board Tuesday for women probation officers and investigators. They would be more valuable, he said, in reclaiming girls who had gone astray and saving those just stepping over the line.

Accused Slayer of Youth Facing Trial

DOTHAN, ALA., July 3.—Charles Brackin, charged with the murder of James Lloyd, 16 years old, near Wicksburg, in the western end of Houston County, on March 17, is on trial at a special term of Houston County Circuit Court to-day.

Lloyd was found dead with his throat cut from ear to ear. Jason Robertson, Charles Homer and Brackin were implicated by the Coroner's jury. Trials of the other boys come up later this term. All the defendants are of prominent families.

U. S. Court Expects Rate Case Appeal

Frank H. Mortimer, clerk of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals of the Fifth District, with headquarters in New Orleans, arrived in Atlanta Wednesday to check over the work of the court for the past year and to arrange for the cases which are to come before Judge Don A. Pardee during the October session, beginning the first Monday in the month.

"There has been no appeal filed to date in the Alabama Rate Case," said Mr. Mortimer, "but I understand there will be just as soon as the testimony which is being compiled in the lower courts is complete."

U. S. Correspondent Expelled by Mexico

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, July 3.—Fitzgerald Slocum, Mexico City correspondent of The Los Angeles Times, was expelled from Mexico to-day under "law 33," which provides for the expulsion of "undesirable aliens."

It is understood that the Government holds Slocum responsible for the recent report that a receiver had been appointed for the national system.

Accused of Attack On 8-Year-Old Girl

DUBLIN, July 3.—Lee Keen was arrested near Dublin to-day charged with attempting to assault an 8-year-old white girl at Rockledge, Laurens County, Tuesday night. He was captured in a deserted barn, and lodged in jail by Deputy Sheriff Linder and several citizens of the neighborhood.

Keen already is under bond for being implicated in a murder in Montgomery County.

Probe of Protected Vice Charge Likely

LEAGUE CLAIMS IT SMASHED TRUSTS

Anti-Trust Organization Takes Credit for Results So Far Obtained.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Henry B. Martin, secretary of the Anti-Trust League, regaled members of the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee to-day with a story of the league's accomplishments in the past twenty years at the White House, in executive departments and in Congress.

Martin declared the league had a hand in nearly every important piece of legislation put through in that period.

Says He Was Cheated While Drugged; Sues

Declaring that while he was under the influence of an opiate, agents of the American Investment and Loan Company forced him to purchase $1,500 in stock, G. W. Almand filed suit for an injunction in the Superior Court Thursday.

Almand said G. B. Cobb, vice president, and E. S. Vickery, a stock salesman, came to his home when he was unconscious, and, taking him to their office in an automobile, got his signature to a note for $2,000, secured by a mortgage on a house he owned. He said the company had declined to redeem the stock or return the mortgage.

Hunger Strike Now Tried in Antipodes

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CHRISTCHURCH, N. Z., July 3.—The world-famous "hunger strike," so popular now in British jails, to-day made its appearance in New Zealand.

A number of Socialistic youths, arrested for refusing to undergo military training, went on a "hunger strike" and were sentenced to solitary confinement.

LANFORD PROBES DRINKING BY DETECTIVES

Chief Declares He Will Take Vigorous Action if Charges Are Found To Be True.

Chief of Detectives Newport Lnford announced Thursday morning that he had inaugurated a thorough probe of the detective department to determine the truth of reports, recently come to his notice, that city detectives drink liquor and kill time in the locker clubs.

He declared his investigation would be as thorough and far-reaching as possible, and that if he found any officers guilty, he would take prompt and vigorous action.

Chief Lanford's investigation followed the statement made to Chief Beavers Wednesday by an Atlanta physician, that both the uniformed officers and the detectives congregate at locker clubs and drink and loaf. He named two downtown clubs in which he said he several times had seen detectives loitering and drinking.

The physician who informed Chief of Police James L. Beavers that girls were lured to their ruin from a prominent downtown restaurant to a house operated by the cashier of the place and that the police were on the "inside" and giving protection was called before the Chief Thursday to make a personal statement.

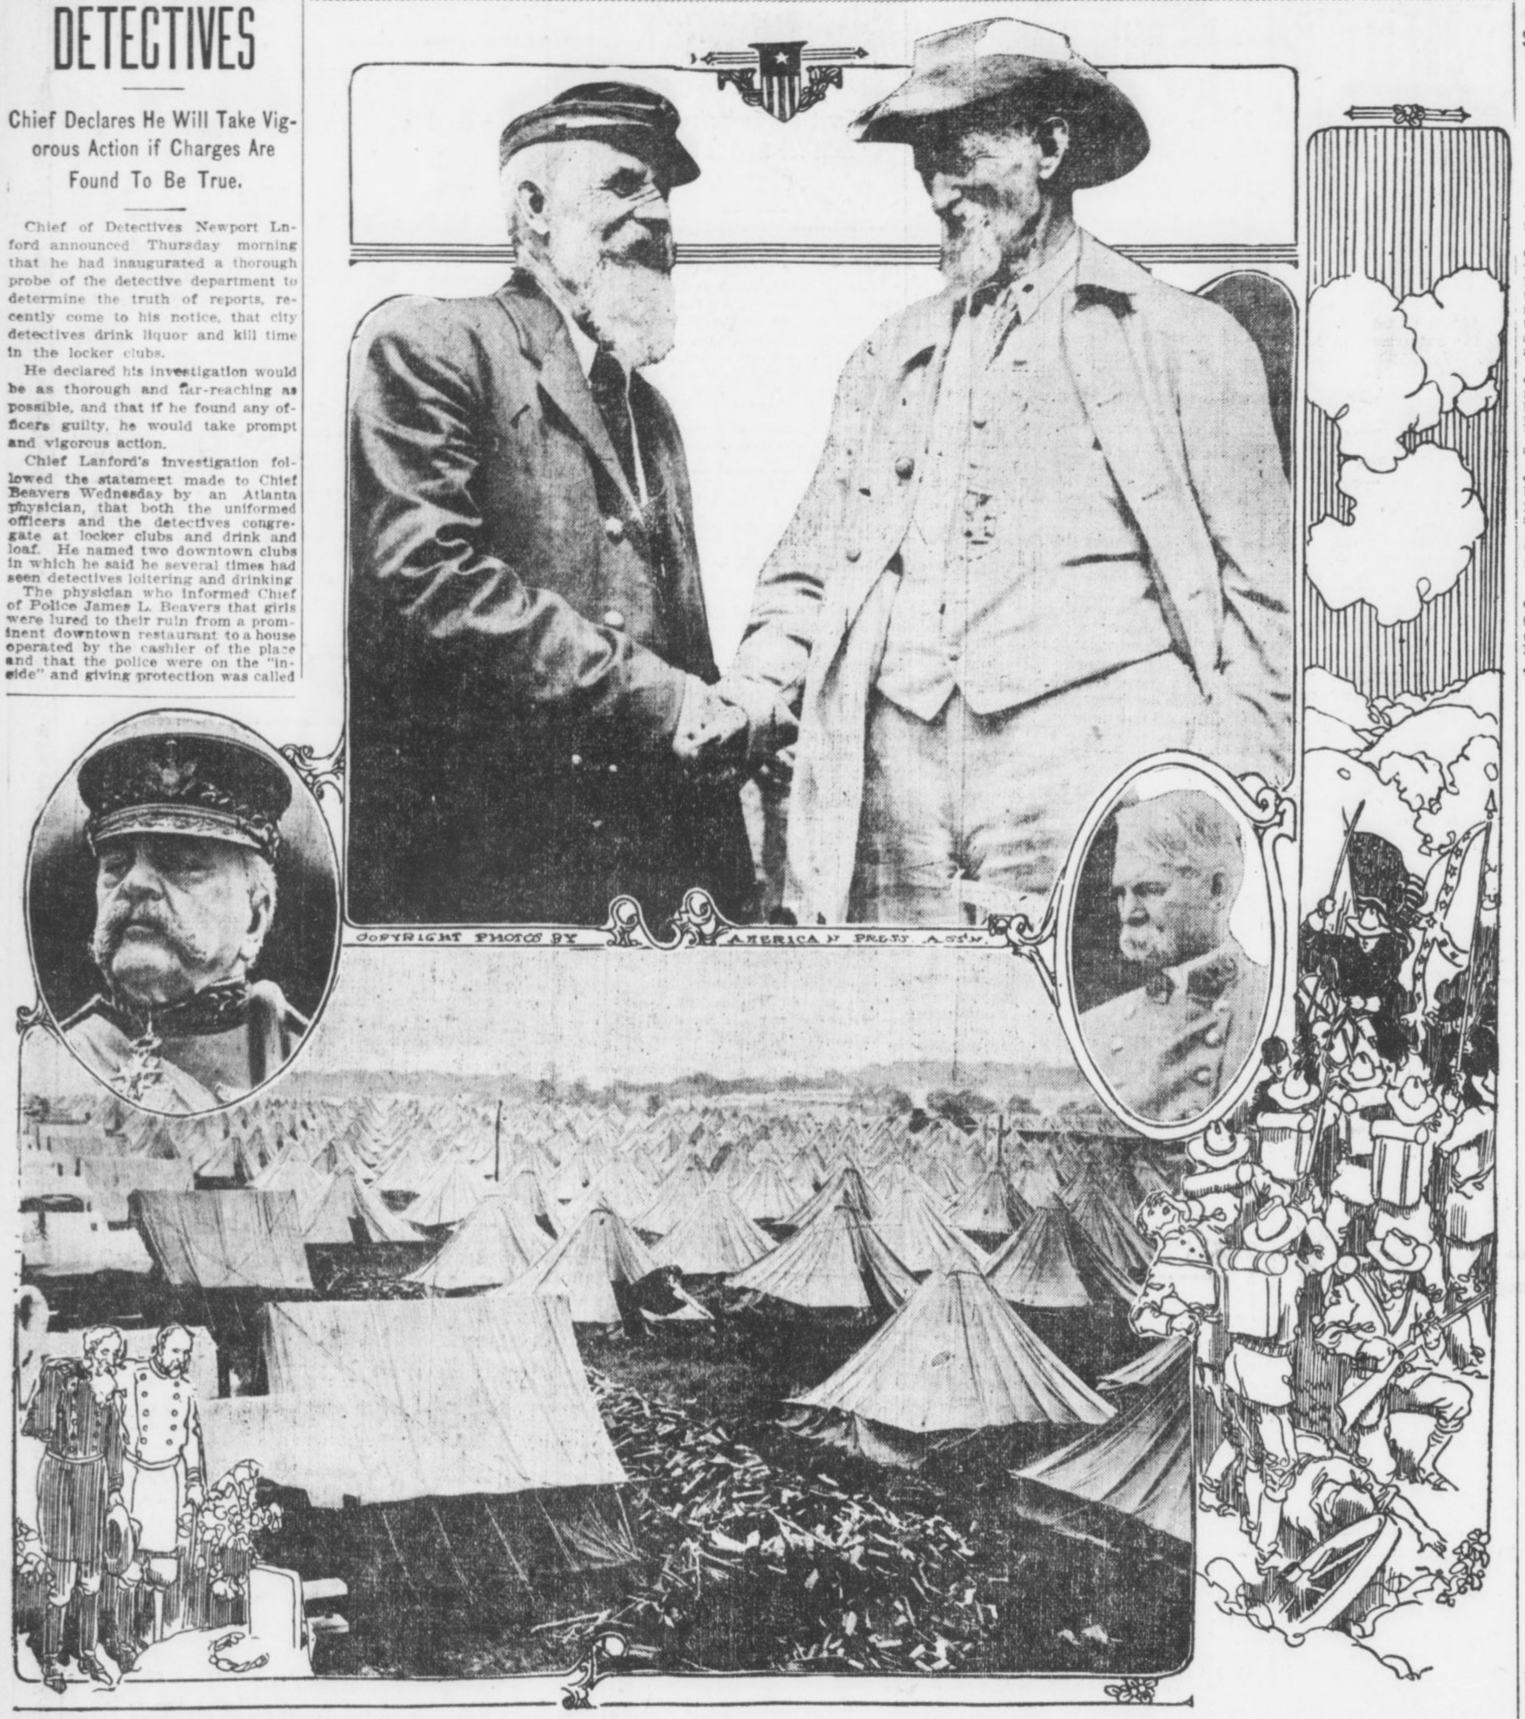

Chief Beavers said he would probe the physician's statement to the very bottom, and that if found true, he would take prompt action against the policemen involved.

"I am determined to put every man off the force who drinks," he said, "and I am determined to find if any of my men have been concerned in any such scheme as this physician tells of. I shall not stop until the matter has been probed to the bottom and the public knows the truth."

The Chief has tightened the net around the places mentioned in the letter.

Sergeant Dobbs, detailed to examine the membership register of the locker clubs, reported that he had been unable to find the name of a single officer on the membership list of a locker club.

Pageant Play Opens Festival by Negroes

A pageant play will open the Jubilee Festival of negro singers at the Auditorium Thursday night. The leading role will be taken by Patti Brown, the Chicago soprano. The Fisk Jubilee Singers, backed by a chorus of 250 trained voices, will be heard in old-time genuine negro music. The singing is illustrative of the progress of the negro race from the dawn of its history to the present.

Friday afternoon there will be a matinee and at night a concert, in which all the leading singers of the festival will take part.

Lid on Gambling Is Clamped at Newport

NEWPORT, July 3.—This is to be a closed season for gambling here. None of the regular places is open and none will be if Mayor MacLeod can help it.

The Mayor has hinted to those interested in the Nautilus Club, which for years has been exclusively used by summer residents, that they had better not open this year.

GETTYSBURG, PA., July 3.—Today has been set down on the program as Governor's Day, when most of the score or more of Governors now at the State headquarters at Gettysburg College are expected to attend the exercises in the auditorium tent. Governor Tener will preside and will make an address, as will Governor James B. McCreary, of Kentucky.

The reunion of Philadelphia brigade and the survivors of Pickett's division will be held this afternoon at Bloody Angle, the point where Pickett's charging Virginians and North Carolinans first struck the Union lines on Cemetery Ridge, 50 years ago this afternoon.

It was largely the Philadelphia brigade which stood the brunt of this attack, and thus the ancient enemies who fought hand to hand in that bitter struggle a half century ago will meet once more.

Great Fireworks Display.

What is expected to be one of the most spectacular features of the week will be the fireworks display on Little Top to-night. For weeks men have been engaged in preparing the apparatus and staging the display, which is expected to be one of the finest ever seen in this country.

Some of the historians of the camp to-day brought to headquarters the man who fired the first cannon at the battle of Gettysburg. He is Michael Hays, of Springfield, Ill., who served in Tidball's battery under General Buford. He found the gun he fired, which is standing to-day in the exact position it stood when first fired in the battle. General Liggett took him for a tour of the field in a motor car and manifested considerable interest in his narrative of the fight.

Vice President Marshall is expected here to-day and great preparations have been made for his reception. He will be escorted through the camp and will spend some time in the quarters of the Indiana delegation.

Seven Hurt in Fight.

A stabbing affray, in which seven men were hurt and which had its origin in a slurring reference to Abraham Lincoln, resulted in a scene of wild disorder in the crowded dining room of a hotel in Gettysburg last night and threatened to dissipate the spirit of peace and fraternalism which has hovered over the battleground since the great reunion began.

In the confusion which followed the stabbing, it was impossible to obtain the names of all the principals in the fight which sprang up so unexpectedly that everyone in the dining hall, except those near the table where the abusive remarks in regard to Lincoln were made, was taken by surprise.

The wounded men are:

Veteran Resents Remark.

The man whom the police say made the remark and did the stabbing gave his name as W. B. Henry, of Philadelphia. He told the officers of the State Constabulary that he was a son of R. R. Henry, of Tazewell, Va., a general in the Confederate Army.

Henry was seated at one of the tables in the hotel with several others. Animosities soon developed out of the war talk at the table. Henry is said to have championed the cause of the Confederacy, and did so without particular rebuke until he is said to have applied a vile epithet to Lincoln.

This was strongly resented by a veteran in blue, said to be H. H. Baker, of Pennsylvania. Baker seized a decanter of water and threw it at Henry. There was an immediate uproar. Tables were upset and chairs overturned.

Brandishes a Knife.

Henry jumped to his feet, brandishing a knife, according to the stories told the police. A half dozen men jumped to the defense of Baker, and the flashing of knives started a panic in the dining room.

The police have the knife of Henry, which was grabbed by C. A. Goldthwaite, of Salem, Mass., and turned over to the authorities. Henry, when locked up in the jail here, denied that he had done any of the actual stabbing, and said that he was in the fight only to aid Griffin, one of the wounded men.

Baker was uninjured. The others were hurt in coming to his defense. He disappeared after the fight.

The death of George W. Walls of acute uremia early this morning makes a total of eight deaths since the opening of the reunion. There were fifteen hospital cases, most of them due to the heat or minor illnesses.

13th Negro Failed On Friday, 13th, '13

DALTON, July 1.—Of the 34 white applicants for license in the recent Whitfield County examination, all stood the examination successfully, County Superintendent Sapp having finished grading the papers.

Thirteen negroes took the examination held on Friday, the 13th, 1913, and the thirteenth one failed, the other twelve passing.

NEW SLOGAN FOR ATLANTA AD MEN

Story of National Convention's Actions Told at "Back-From-Baltimore" Banquet.

Clear and truthful advertising was the slogan adopted Wednesday night by the Atlanta ad men in their "Back from Baltimore" banquet at the Hotel Ansley.

S. C. Dobbs, representing the Coca-Cola Company, in his speech on the "Declaration of Principles for the 1913 Convention," called attention to the motto, "Truth," adopted by the national convention, and declared that this was the end toward which all loyal and representative ad men are working.

Among other speakers at the banquet, which was the first held at the new Ansley, were Jack Lewis, Albert Adams, Ivey Allen, George H. Kohn, Evelyn Harris, W. J. Hubbard, W. S. Lounsbury, W. F. Parkhurst and L. D. Hicks.

The ad men unanimously voted to devote the excess of $234, as reported by Treasurer Ivey Allen, to next year's convention trip. The sum will serve as the nucleus of the fund of $5,000, following the suggestion of Charles A. Smith. Harry Goodhart, president of the Ad Club, presided.

KIMBALL PIANOS
The Artist's Ideal
Beyond a doubt the best way to get a genuine bargain in a piano is to go to a responsible house and pay a fair price for an instrument with a reputation back of it.
You should not consider for one moment that cheap pianos which are advertised in such convincing terms are worth spending money for. If you buy one, you are speculating with most of the chances against you. Whether you buy here or elsewhere, secure a standard make or save your money.
The cost of making a piano such as the KIMBALL is greater than the selling price of most cheap pianos, which are as a rule not good even when new.
A piano with excellent staying qualities of tone and construction is the only one worth considering and you had better pay a little more and know that as long as you have it you will be pleased with it.
By this we do not mean that you will have to spend an exorbitant sum to obtain a satisfactory instrument, but we do wish to caution you against ones sold at a price for which it is impossible to give you a piano of real merit.
We wish to caution you against buying a piano from a concern that has a sliding scale of prices. The one-price plan on which we operate is the only sure way of your securing full value. We have found in many years of experience that to be fair to ourselves and the customer is the only correct selling method.

COUNTY BOARD RENEWS FIGHT OVER PAVING

Commissioner Waters Meets With Defeat in Move to Obtain Competitive Bidding.

Open war again broke out in the County Board of Commissioners Wednesday afternoon over the awarding of contracts for asphalt paving.

Commissioner Tull C. Waters, who is leading the fight for competitive bidding, declared he would continue his fight, although he had small hopes of success.

Commissioner Waters has charged that the Committee on Public Works of the board lets the contracts on the discretion of its members and without consulting members of the board as a whole.

Waters' Move Blocked.

Despite Waters' vigorous protest the board sidetracked his resolution and introduced a resolution to buy 71 tons of Trinidad asphalt from the Barber Asphalt Company for $25 a ton.

The board passed a resolution accepting the dedication of the Andrews road, connecting Peachtree Street with Pace's Road. It ignored the resolution of the Mayor and General Council, requesting a conference with the County Commissioners and State tax receivers to obtain a proper basis for State and county tax returns.

Members Have Tilt.

Some spice was given the meeting by a tilt between Sheriff Mangum and members of the board when Sheriff Mangum, who refused to sign a contract with the county providing for the payment of 30 cents per capita for the feeding of the county prisoners, demanded 35 cents.

General Anderson answered that the board didn't care whether the Sheriff signed the contract or not, as this amount has been decided on. The incident was closed when the Sheriff threw the contract on the table and walked out of the room.

Bill Removes Poll Tax Law Restriction

Making it possible for a citizen to pay his poll tax within 60 days of an election and become an eligible voter is what Representative Arnold of Henry County wishes to do. In this connection he has filed a bill in the House requiring tax collectors to keep their poll tax books open so that prospective voters may pay their tax.

The present law requires the payment of the poll tax at least six months prior to the election.

NewLowRecordPrice For Seat in 'Change

NEW YORK, July 3.—A Stock Exchange seat was sold last week for $40,000, a new low record price in the present movement. Previous to this a seat was sold for $42,000. Two other seats were sold during the spring for as low as $41,000. The seat sold last week was that of William Robison and the purchaser was Orme Wilson, Jr.

A few years ago a Stock Exchange seat sold as low as $38,000, but the price rebounded and went above $45,000 soon afterward.

45,930 Bathers At Piedmont Since May

Dan Carey, general manager of parks, gave out a report to-day showing that 45,930 baths have been taken in Piedmont Lake since its opening on May 22. Of this number 10,620 were women, 10,793 boys and 25,517 men. The total number last season was only 35,000.

A report of the life savers shows that 32 men and 2 women have been rescued from drowning this season.

Son of Rich Family Goes to Rock Pile

COLUMBUS, July 3.—The Columbus recorder has sent a member of a well-known family to the rock pile on a charge of vagrancy. The young man in question, while belonging to a family of ample means, has been depending for a number of years on his family for support, although warned by the police that he must go to work.

When brought before the recorder and given a fine of $15 or 30 days, he was compelled to go to the rock pile, because he did not have the money to pay his fine.

FOOD BILL FOR LINERS UP TO MILLIONS

North German Lloyd Paid $4,920,000 for Provisions Last Year and $7,373,735 for Coal.

NEW YORK, July —In these days of the high cost of living it is interesting to know what it costs a steamship company to provide the necessities of life to its passengers.

The annual statement of the North German Lloyd for 1912 shows $4,920,000 for provisions and $7,373,735 for coal.

More potatoes were consumed than any other single article, the total amount having been 17,875,873 pounds. Flour ranked next, with 6,313,152 pounds, while bread was fourth, with 2,353,083 pounds.

The passengers consumed 7,098,560 eggs, 4,271,059 oranges and lemons, 707,625 pounds of onions and 983,802 pounds of salt. They used 465,340 pounds of coffee and 41,729 pounds of tea, and 529,619 cans of sterilized milk.

Of wines, Rhein and Mosel were most popular, heading the list with 112,211 bottles, as against 35,97 bottles having been consumed in addition to 1,720,634 quarts of beer in barrels.

Slaton to Address R.F.D. Carriers Here In State Convention

Several hundred rural letter carriers of Georgia assembled at the Kimball House Thursday afternoon for the first session of the State convention, which will continue until Saturday.

The meeting was informal and in the nature of a fraternal and social gathering. Friday the delegates will go to the Senate chamber of the State Capitol, where welcome addresses will be delivered by Mayor James G. Woodward and Postmaster H. L. McKee. Clark Howell also will address the body.

Among the speakers Friday afternoon will be Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick, Governor Slaton and W. D. Brown, editor of The R. F. D. News, will speak Saturday. George C. Bond is master of ceremonies.

COTTON TRADER FEARS CLARKE MEASURE

Tax on Futures Contracts Will Hurt Farmer and Help None, Says W. B. Thompson.

NEW ORLEANS, July 3.—Future trading will be wiped out, root and branch; producers will be at the mercy of combinations of purchasers; cotton exchanges will be put out of business, thus abolishing the forces which compel honest trading, and the total result will be chaos if the Clarke amendment to the tariff bill, taxing futures contracts, is adopted, says W. B. Thompson, of New Orleans, in a telegram to C. S. Barrett, President of the National Farmers' Union.

Furthermore, instead of decreasing speculation, the measure would increase it, by making even the spot business highly hazardous, Mr. Thompson says. His telegram follows:

"To Hon. C. S. Barrett, President of the National Farmers' Union, Union City, Ga.:

"The Clarke amendment to the tariff bill will not regulate future trading, but by destroying the future contract markets, will strike down all future trading, both good and bad. Hedges can not be bought or sold, hence the spot cotton business will be made speculative in the last degree. This will mean that the multitude of cotton buyers of small or limited means will be forced out of business and the producer will be under the necessity of carrying his cotton indefinitely, or else selling it at the price offered by spinners or by a few large operators, or a combination of the same, whose business it will be to speculate upon the producers' necessities.

Will Destroy Exchanges.

"Furthermore, the provision in the amendment limiting the tax and penalty to future contracts made on or under the rules of any cotton exchange or similar institution, will not only destroy the contract exchanges of New Orleans and New York, but will destroy all the local exchanges throughout the cotton belt, because no man will hold membership in an institution when such fact subjects his private contracts to an excessive tax and renders him liable to a penalty from $1,000 to $20,000 for conducting his business in accordance with the rules and regulations established by such exchanges for the protection and benefit of the trade.

"If all these exchanges were put out of business there would be no points for the collection and dissemination of information as to conditions, and the producer would be wholly in the dark as to the value of his cotton, and would be at the mercy of the buyer whose superior private facilities put him into possession of such information. Moreover, if there were no exchanges or similar organizations there could be no rules or standards of trade regulating and restraining individual conduct in business, which would result in disorderly conditions most prejudicial to all concerned.

Can Not Afford Experiments.

"In other words, the said tax amendment would not only destroy the futures markets of America, but also would disorganize the whole system by which our crops are moved, and place us in the hands of foreign organizations and local combinations of buyers.

"It is reported that in supporting said amendment, some Senators take the position that while they doubt the wisdom of the measure, or are of the positive opinion that it is unwise and will be injurious, still, as the farmers want it, they say, let them have it and take the consequences.

"We can not afford to experiment with such a vital matter. I am not connected with any exchange in an official capacity and I have no interest in any future business. You know that I have given much time and effort to the betterment of the producers' condition and to improvement in all legitimate trade. I think you will believe in the sincerity of my purpose. I say to you earnestly that in my opinion this measure is fraught with the most serious consequences to the interests you represent and with no intention of being officious, but animated only by a sincere desire to cooperate with you in your work for the Southern farmer, I beg you to give this vital matter your most serious consideration before using the power of your great organization to advance so dangerous a measure and before you accept responsibility therefor."

Bill Allows State To Cross-Examine

A decided change in the criminal law, making it possible for the defendant to testify under oath and thus be subject to cross-examination, is contained in a bill filed in the House by Representative Whitaker.

The bill allows the prisoner to testify under oath or not under oath, as he sees fit. But his testimony under oath will make him subject to the fire of the prosecuting attorneys through cross-examination.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

The acoustics of the hall of the House of Representatives of Georgia probably are the worst in the world.

Physically, the hall is one of the most beautiful, dignified and stately in the Union. It is a hall, so far as that is concerned, the State well may be proud of.

It is all but impossible to speak in it though, so miserably deficient is it in acoustic properties. So far this session two men only have been able to overcome its baffling and depressing difficulties—Speaker Burwell and Representative Olive.

By working like a Trojan and exhausting a good lung full of atmosphere on every sentence or so, Burwell makes himself clear—then, too, he generally has the attention of the House to a reasonable degree.

Wednesday, Sam Olive of Richmond, went up against those honorable acoustics, and while he knocked them out, good and proper, he had a mighty struggle getting away with it, and when he had finished, his alabaster brow—which runs pretty far back, by the way—was bathed in honest sweat, and his lung equipment was much the worse for wear.

Olive really is a corking good orator. He enunciates distinctly and speaks with deliberation and carefully distributed emphasis. He evidently knows the rules of good speaking and if he makes many more speeches such as the one he delivered Wednesday he is sure to be known throughout this session as one of the genuinely effective floor leaders.

There is no question of Olive's ability to talk eloquently and convincingly.

Mr. Slater of Bryan trotted out that ancient and well-known legislative standby, Old Man Vox Populi and gave him his first legislative airing Wednesday.

Mr. Slater was making an impassioned plea for the ousting of Representatives McArthur and Browning—more in sorrow than in anger, however—and during the progress of the debate, Old Man Vox got in the game.

A broad smile flitted through the House when Old Man Vox made his first appearance, but as he is an ancient and approved friend, he got the glad hand on all side.

From this time forward he may be expected to make his appearance every day or so.

Speaker Burwell is a stickler for forms and ceremonies in legislative debate. Already he has demonstrated a wonderful ability to handle the House, no matter how acute the parliamentary situation it may get itself into.

Burwell, however, insists that every member toe the mark in observing the rules, not only as to procedure but as to courtesy.

One member Thursday entered an oral objection to a certain proposal, but he entered it without arising from his seat. Burwell, as he is required to do, ignored the honorable gentleman's objection thus entered, but stated immediately afterward that the rules required members to arise and address the Speaker when desiring to speak, no matter when, why or how, and that he would not recognize any gentleman so long as that gentleman remained seated.

Since then, members desiring to address the House have first taken the pains to arise and address the Speaker. And that is exactly what the rules requires of them.

Charles S. Barrett, President of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Assistant Commission of Agriculture, will address by invitation the people of Bowl's Springs, in Fannin County, July 19. Both will confine themselves to agricultural topics.

Representative W. J. Nunnally of Floyd, a new member of the House, was highly honored by Speaker Burwell in committee distribution. He was named on the rules, general judiciary and constitutional amendments. Although he is a new member of the House, Representative Nunnally is well known through the State, having been Solicitor General of the Rome Circuit and Judge of the City Court of Rome.

Already he has grown to be one of the most popular members of the General Assembly.

It doubtless is true that the grand old county of Montgomery wishes folks would quick kicking its dog around! The last Legislature whacked it in two and created the new county of Wheeler, and now an honorable Legislator wishes to chop off some more of grand old Montgomery's territory to set up the noble young county of Treutelin.

After a bit, as one legislator put it, "there will not be so much as a greasy spot of grand old Montgomery left!"

Among the many charter changes in Georgia cities already proposed in the Legislature, the one of Waycross is the most novel and interesting.

There it is proposed to merge the county and city governments into one body.

The plan is to establish city and county tax zones, the city's taxes going into city improvements. A county council, acting with a similar body from the city, both under the direction of an elective head, is proposed, with the employment of a general superintendent who shall have direct charge of the work and be responsible for the execution of all orders of the joint board.

This change, it is argued, will cut down the administrative expenses and promote harmony throughout, besides giving better results than are obtained under separate administrations.

Athletic Events at Gainesville on 4th

GAINESVILLE, July 5.—Gainesville will celebrate the Fourth of July with a "safe and sane" athletic meet at Brenau Park.

Coach Frank Anderson, of Riverside, will have charge of the sports. Prizes have been offered by merchants. The Woodmen of the World band will furnish music and the Chamber of Commerce will serve free lemonade.

There will be a game of baseball between two picked teams—the Fats and the Leans. Such men as Fletcher M. Johnson and Sheriff W. M. Crow will play.

Fifth District Asks Agriculture School

An agricultural school for the Fifth District is the requirement of a bill introduced in the House by Representatives Smith and Fields of DeKalb County. When the State was redistricted, the Fifth District was left without an agricultural school, and there has been an active movement under way to have the Legislature making an appropriation for one.

Recently the business men and merchants of Decatur held a big rally in behalf of the movement. This was attended by several thousand farmers of the Fifth District.

Three Octogenarians To Vote at Columbus

COLUMBUS, July 3.—Among those registered for the Columbus hospital bond election of July 16 are three octogenarians. They are A. Illges, 83 years; A. O. Blackmar, Sr., 82 years, and W. H. Glaze, 81 years of age.

The two former are among the wealthiest men in the city, and notwithstanding their advanced age and the fact that their property would be taxed, they will vote for the bonds.

It Costs $450 to Kiss A Niece of Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The price of a kiss in the Government service is $450, as Frank D. Hester, an $1,800 a year section chief of the Pension Bureau, found out to-day when he kissed a temporary girl good-bye.

Someone saw the kissing and told Pension Commissioner Saltzgarber, who promptly suspended the offending chief for three months without pay.

As the kissee left the service today with the rest of the temporary clerks, she was not fined or suspended. In fact, there is reason to believe that the Commissioner thought she was more kissed against than kissing.

Lender Is Enjoined From Garnishment

Judge J. T. Pendleton, of the Superior Court, Wednesday afternoon granted H. S. Jones and G. R. Sayre a temporary injunction restraining D. H. Tolman, named as a money lender, from garnisheeing the wages of Jones, who is employed at the Atlanta Joint Terminals.

Superintendent G. N. Williams informed Jones that if his wages were attached he would be discharged. Sayre acted as security for Jones. The claim is made that the men are day laborers and that their wages are not subject to attachment. The case is set for hearing July 12.

CHILD LABOR BILL IS OPPOSED BY REFORMERS

Lack of Educational Clause Makes Proposed Law Objectionable to National Association.

A fight, under the leadership of Harvey P. Vaughn, of New York, representative of the National Child Labor Association, will be made against the adoption of the Sheppard child labor bill when it is taken up by the Labor and Labor Statistics Committee of the House. Assisting him will be Mrs. Margaret T. McWhorter, of Atlanta.

Objection to the Sheppard bill lies in the fact that it does not include an educational clause. The association has as a goal the adoption of a law which will prevent the employment of children under 14 years of age while the public schools are in session in the district in which the child resides.

Mr. Vaughn and Mrs. McWhorter will address the Labor and Labor Statistics Committee when the Sheppard bill is taken up, and will endeavor to substitute a bill with an educational clause inserted. Failure to do so with the committee will result in its being filed in the House.

At the same time in which the Sheppard bill was introduced in the House a similar bill was introduced in the Senate by Senator J. Randolph Anderson and Senator Fred Kea. The bill was thought to be scheduled for smooth sailing.

"It is the object of the National Child Labor Association and its sympathizers to give every child the inherent right of an education, and the fight for this will never cease until such laws are enforced, said Mrs. McWhorter.

Coburn Is 'Scolded' By Adjutant General

Characterizing as an "unfortunate, thoughtless and uncalled-for expression" the recent statement by Lieutenant William S. Coburn that fifteen officers of the Fifth Regiment, Georgia National Guard, would resign if the State Legislature amended the military act of 1912, Adjutant General J. VanHolt Nash has directed a letter to Colonel E. E. Pomeroy, of the Fifth, in which he takes Lieutenant Coburn sharply to task.

In his letter to Colonel Pomeroy, which it is understood has the indorsement of the latter, General Nash deplores such expressions coming from members of the National Guard, and advises Colonel Pomeroy to caution his officers against a recurrence of the affair.

Athens Bank Case To Jury Thursday

ATHENS, GA., July 3.—The case against J. W. Griffin for "wrecking" the Athens Bank and Trust Company will go to the jury for verdict this afternoon, after a hard-fought legal battle. The State put up a number of witnesses, while the defense relied on the statement of President Griffin. There will probably be a verdict to-night.

R. H. McCrary, who pleaded guilty in his case as cashier and who was given three years under the consideration of turning state's evidence, was not put on the stand.

Child Injured, Mother Would Give It Away

KENOSHA, WIS., July 3.—"I wish you would give him away to some one; we don't want him any more."

This statement was made by Mrs. Charles Pirosch to James H. Karnes, humane officer, as she stood beside a cot in the hospital where her little son lay suffering from serious burns received at a pre-Fourth of July celebration. The child may die.

Jacksonville Mayor Bars Peekaboo Skirt

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., July 3.—Mayor VanSwearing, newly elected executive, called upon the women of this city to stop wearing the split skirt and thin petticoatless attire.

He asked the newspapers to begin a crusade against "immoral dress."

Music Contest First At High School Meet

ATHENS, GA., July 3.—The first contest in the State High School meet being held here to-day and to-morrow takes place this afternoon when the Brenau scholarship in music will be awarded.

The woman suffrage question will be debated in the chapel of the University of Georgia to-night, and to-morrow there will be athletic events and oratory contest.

Big Apartment House Falls When Finished

CHICAGO, July 3.—A 42-apartment building, which was to be completed next week, collapsed here. A strip of steel girders 25 feet wide running the entire length of the building fell through to the ground. No one was hurt.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Talking Movies at the Grand.

Edison talking pictures have won! The skeptical who argued that such an entertainment would be nothing but the projection of a motion picture on a sheet and the operation of a phonograph behind stage have discovered that Mr. Edison has perfected machines and instruments that synchronize.

The attendance at the Grand on Monday was decidedly discouraging. On Tuesday more than double the number of people were present that were in the house on Monday, and on Wednesday the theater was nearly filled. There is every indication that the wonder of this invention will keep the big theater more than busy the balance of the week.

Starting with to-day there will be a change of program in the talking pictures that will be continued the rest of the week. The first-run straight pictures are changed every day, and three reels are used.

Violinsky Pleases Forsyth Audiences.

Keith vaudeville at the Forsyth has never been so popular as now. The bill this week is of exceptional value. There is that variety that makes things interesting, and there is novelty enough to make people forget the hot spell. The Forsyth is perhaps the coolest place in Fulton County now. The ventilating system and the cooling plant work perfectly, and every audience enjoys what is being offered on the stage in perfect comfort.

Violinsky, an expert with both violin and piano, has interested and entertained every audience that has assembled. The sketch of Edward Abeles has been voted to be the very best of this sort seen in Atlanta, and Carlisle's dog pantomime circus starts the show with the audiences in a particularly good humor.

Good Tabloid at the Bijou.

Few attractions that have played the Bijou this season have given such general satisfaction as "A Trip to Paris," this week's bill. The musical comedy is brimful of pretty music, good dancing and clever specialties, and the entire performance moves along smoothly and without a hitch.

MRS. FELTON TO SPEAK HERE AS SUFFRAGIST

Vote Advocates Eagerly Awaiting Appearance of Noted Woman. Convention Next Week.

Mrs. William A. Felton, of Cartersville, one of Georgia's most noted women, will make her first public appearance as a suffragist in Atlanta next week, at the annual convention of the Georgia Equal Suffrage Association. The convention will be held July 9 and 10. Mrs. Felton will speak before one of the three sessions on "Getting Ready for the Ballot."

Atlanta suffragists are manifesting great interest in Mrs. Felton's address. She has been an active suffragist for only a few months and her acquisition to the ranks is regarded as of great importance to the movement in Georgia.

Other speakers at the convention will include Mrs. S. E. Cunningham, of Decatur, formerly president of the Alabama Equal Suffrage Association, and Mrs. H. Augusta Howard, of Columbus, who organized the Georgia State Association and was its president for six years.

Many to Attend.

Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, State president, said Wednesday afternoon that more than 100 suffragists from all over the State are expected to attend the convention. Only one day session will be held on the afternoon of July 10 at the Labor Temple, in Trinity Avenue. Efforts are being made to secure the Senate chamber in the State Capitol for the evening meetings.

Legislation now pending before the General Assembly was indorsed at the regular meeting of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association Wednesday afternoon. Included among these measures were the vital statistics bill, compulsory education, medical inspection in schools, county probation and pensions for women school teachers who have taught for more than 30 years.

Dr. L. C. Allen, of Jefferson, Ga., chairman of the House Committee on Hygiene, addressed the meeting on the need of medical inspection in the schools, declaring a permissive law is a necessity. He expressed the opinion that the State is not ready for a compulsory inspection law, but predicted that the time will come when every State in the Union will have compulsory medical inspection laws. Dr. Allen declared medical inspection should not stop at the school children, but should include teachers and janitors and other persons who work about the schools and come in contact with school children.

Representative C. R. McCrory, of Schley, spoke on his bill, which proposes that the State shall publish its own textbooks for the public schools. Judge Robert L. Rodgers addressed the meeting on the benefits of equal suffrage.

Report To Be Made On Standard Bale

The report of the committee on standardization of the cotton bale will come before the House Thursday. The committee was appointed last year and has gone deeply into the subject which is of considerable importance to financial, farming and manufacturing interests.

Of the Senate and House members put on the commission, the only one to return to this year's Assembly is Representative Kimbrough, of Harris County, who will deliver the report.

Former Newnan Man Dies in Mississippi

NATCHEZ, MISS., July 3.—Henry C. Norman, member of a prominent Georgia family and for many years a prominent resident of Natchez, died to-day, after an illness of three months of hardening of the arteries. He was born in Newnan, Ga., October 22, 1850.

The funeral and burial will take place here to-morrow.

Job Needed to Free Young Ollie Taylor

Ollie Taylor, the 13-year-old lad who was granted a parole Wednesday from the Fulton County Reformatory, where he has been confined two years on the charge of stealing a soda pop, is to be an automobile mechanic—that is, if he can land a job.

And until Ollie does land the job he will remain at the reformatory, according to Superintendent Means. Mr. Means says Ollie has shown wonderful improvement since he has been at the reform school and has developed a knack for mechanics which should be very productive when Ollie has applied himself sufficiently long.

Marriage of President's Daughter to Francis Bowes Sayre Announced for November.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The first wedding of a Georgia girl in the White House will be that of Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of the President, to Frances Bowes Sayre, a New York attorney in the office of District Attorney Whitman. Miss Wilson, a native Georgian, was born in Gainesville 24 years ago.

President and Mrs. Wilson made formal announcement of the coming marriage last night at the White House. The wedding will be some time in November. While Washington society gasped at the sudden announcement, it recovered quickly, and everything now is all a-flutter over the pre-nuptial honors to be showered upon the President's daughter.

Called Prettiest of Sisters.

Miss Jessie Wilson has been declared by many persons to be the prettiest of the three Wilson sisters.

Much curiosity was expressed regarding the groom. He has been connected with District Attorney Whitman in New York, during which time he has won the esteem of the noted lawyer. He is 28 years of age, and will be admitted to the bar this month, when he will be placed on the list of assisting prosecuting attorneys.

He comes from a noted collegiate family, his father, the late Robert Heysham Sayre, being president of the board of trustees of Lehigh University. He was also a prominent railroad man, and built the Lehigh Valley Railroad. His mother was Martha Finley Nevin prior to her marriage. She was the daughter of John Williamson Nevin, theologian and president of Franklin and Marshall College, of Lancaster, Pa., and was descended from Hugh Williamson, of North Carolina, one of the framers of the constitution.

He is related to Robert J. Nevin, head of the American Church of Rome, Italy, and a cousin of Ethelbert Nevin, the noted composer.

Pura The Perfect Water Pura

Few people give the matter of drinking water the serious consideration which it deserves.

Physicians agree that many malignant maladies are communicated to the system directly through the drinking water---typhoid fever being one of them.

HOBBLES WRECK NERVES, SAYS DR. M'RAE

Noted Atlanta Physician Calls Tight Skirts an Abomination. 'Insanitary and Immodest.'

Women who wear the extremely tight skirt decreed by modern fashion are treading the road that leads to nervous prostration, according to Dr. Floyd McRae, one of Atlanta's most noted physicians. In this opinion Dr. McRae takes direct issue with prominent members of the Chicago Medical Society, who recently declared the tight skirt hygienic, artistic and comfortable.

"Women who wear the tight skirt —that is, one so tight it does not allow perfect freedom of the lower limbs," said Dr. McRae Tuesday morning, "are constantly under a strain which eventually will bring about nervous prostration. This condition is due to the fact that the muscles are cramped and do not get that perfect freedom which is necessary in walking. Some muscles are overdeveloped and others are not developed sufficiently to do their share of the work of walking.

"The tight skirt has not been in vogue long enough for the effects of this to show in the women as a whole, but if it is not abandoned the time undoubtedly will come when women virtually will be nervous wrecks.

Hobbles an Abomination.

"The tight skirt is an abomination, and one of the worst things women have taken to in years. It is immodest and unhygienic, and it is a source of continual danger to the wearer. With their freedom of movement restricted, they face danger every time they appear on the streets in a tight skirt.

"A woman wearing a tight skirt is in danger of spraining her ankle every time she gets on a street car or in an automobile, and many of the minor accidents sustained by women nowadays are due to the tight skirt and the restricted, hobbling walk which it necessitates."

Dr. McRae declared the old style of wide, flowing skirt which touched the ground was as bad as the modern skirt.

Old Styles as Bad.

"The kind of skirt that every woman should wear," he said, "should be wide enough to permit of perfect freedom in walking, and it should not touch the ground at any point. The old style skirts, plaited and flowing, picked up enormous quantities of germs in the streets and carried them into the home, which the sensible skirt would not do."

The opinion that the tight skirt is hygienic and the right thing for women was expressed by 26 doctors in Chicago, among them Drs. Maurice B. Wolff, Norman Curry and Arthur B. Reynolds. They declared the tight skirt is a splendid thing, and that, among other things, it corrects the tendency of the American woman to turn her toes out when walking.

12 Billion Postage Stamps Ordered

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Postmaster General Burleson has ordered 12,071,480,000 postage stamps for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Men Should Marry At 32, Women at 22, Declare Parisians

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, July 3.—The modern French attitude toward marriage will be shown in the results of a canvass conducted by a popular French journal for women.

The first question—"At what age should a young man marry?"—gave an average of 32 years from about 12,000 answers. The second question—"At what age should a young woman marry?"—gave an average of 22 years. To the third question—"What should be the difference in the ages between husband and wife?"—the majority answered five years.

Three hundred and seventy-five women declared that people should not marry at all.

Lillian Russell Wed; Mary Garden, Too

CHICAGO, July 3.—Municipal Judge Hopkins, sitting in the Morals Court, paid for the marriage license of Paul Corallo and Miss Lillian Russell, 28 years old, 1134 West Monroe Street, when they were arraigned before him. He performed a marriage ceremony and gave the bridegroom a present of 35.

According to the marriage license clerk, Mary Garden was also among the brides of yesterday, wedding one Atoni Kral. Mary is not an opera singer.

Cavalieri Principal In D'Annunzio Opera

PARIS, July 3.—Gabriele d'Annunzio, the librettist, and Riccardo Zandonai, the composer of the opera "Francesca da Rimini," will go to Boston to superintend its first production in February next which will take place before it is presented in Europe.

Henry Russell, director of the Boston Opera Company, completed arrangements to-day with Lina Cavalieri to take the principal part.

Women in Trousers Handicapped in Love

NEW YORK, July 3.—Miss Sharlee V. Wilmarth, who has returned from Paris on the Minnetonka, believes it is impossible for a woman to make love in trousers.

"I wouldn't wear 'em for a fortune," she said, "unless they were knickerbockers, and I wore a skirt just as well. Just imagine a man spooning with a girl wearing trousers."

Roosevelt Scored As Drinker By W. C. T. U.

CARDON, OHIO, July 3.—The W. C. T. U. of Middlefield, Ohio, has adopted resolutions denouncing Colonel Roosevelt as a temperance man, asserting that his libel suit proved him an habitual drinker, though a moderate one and that as such and because of his prominent position he is more harm to the temperance cause than a common drunkard.

MARQUIS' BALM TO CHORUS GIRL $250,000

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 3.—Damages of a quarter of a million dollars were awarded to Miss Violette Moss, a chorus girl, in her breach of promise suit against the Marquis of Northampton, who came into his title two weeks ago.

When the suit was called before the King's Bench, attorneys notified the court that a settlement had been reached by which Miss Moss was to receive $250,000. The action was withdrawn and the costs were put upon the defendant.

Miss Moss, whose stage name is Daisy Markham, set a high price upon her affections. She spurned two previous offers of settlement, one of $50,000 and the other $125,000.

The elder Marquis of Northampton, who tried vainly to break his son's love for the actress, died a fortnight ago in Italy of a broken heart. It was reliably reported that the young marquis had revealed intimate family secrets to Miss Moss and that she threatened to expose these to the public unless amply paid for silence.

In anticipation of hearing racy testimony the courtroom was thronged to-day when the case was called. The spectators were sorely disappointed when the settlement was announced.

THE GHOST BREAKER

By G. W. GODDARD and PAUL DICKEY

Adapted From the Big Broadway Success That Thrilled Thousands of New Yorkers

SERIALIZED

By J. W. McCONAUGHY

(Copyright, 1913, by Star Co.)

IN all the thousands of square feet of steep slate roof there is one loose nail. It thrusts its head up in that one-inch strip where it can catch and hold the bootheel of the steeplejack who is sliding to his death.

This grim, freakish humor of the Powers That Be, which is miscalled "coincidence," caused Warren Jarvis to mistake his right for his left hand as he was running for his life down a carpeted corridor of the Hotel Vanderlip far above the night roar of Broadway. Thus he turned, not into the room that led to the fire escape, but into the bed chamber of the Dona Maria Theresa of Segura, Princess of Aragon, who had a lot of other titles and innumerable privileges, none of which she needed at that moment nearly so much as she needed Warren Jarvis, fleeing the vengeance of the law.

Fevered and distraught the Princess had retired to rest, but not to sleep, an hour before. Her situation, the peril that menaced her, belonged to an age that lives to-day only in Scott and Froissart. Four or five centuries before her countryman Cervantes had slain with a laugh the type of man who would gladly have aided her, and would have seen nothing ridiculous about it. Her ancestral home, the ancient castle of the Seguras, was given over to bats and owls by night and crows by day.

Hidden somewhere among the deadly pitfalls and secret passages of the castle was a treasure of a million dollars in gold. It was guarded by a ghost, a true specter that men had scoffed at and braved—and then had promptly disappeared.

Now it was no longer scoffed at or braved. But she had just received a cable dispatch telling her that her brother had entered the castle and around her neck hung the solution to the hiding place of the treasure, the little chart found that day after a weary search.

A Duke's Offer.

It was a tale to tell a knight of Arthur's table, not to a Castilian dandy of the twentieth century, soft-handed and sophisticated. Her kinsman, the Duke of Alva, indeed, had offered to be her champion, but he bargained in advance, and the guerdon he asked was her hand. And, besides, lately she had had cause to distrust deeply the honor and honesty of her kinsman of Alva.

Dona Maria had never read the lines of Mr. Kipling's "Romance Is Dead!"—and all unseen, romance brought on the nine-fifteen, or she might have had more faith in a power still strong enough to run express trains. When the splendid, silly order of chivalry fell and died the winds of romance carried a few of the seeds across the seas to a broad and fertile valley and dropped them in the rich soil where the Ohio comes down to meet the Mississippi. There, as elsewhere, custom makes law, regardless of written statutes. And so it was that, following a custom that had grown from one of those seeds, as immutable as the Cumberland ridges, a young man in evening clothes, clean of heart, brave and good humored, with a 1912 model pistol gripped in his overcoat pocket, walked past Dona Maria's door in a New York hotel, seeking the head of the Markhams, to kill or be killed in a fair fight, for no other reason than that the man he sought was the head of the Markhams and had invited him to "shoot it out."

But Dona Maria did not know this. As simply as the distressed damosel of Arthur's time she prayed for help, and was sinking into the uncertain doze of the sorely troubled—when romance answered the prayer.

The silence of the cloistral corridor was blasted with a sharp double-crack—the reports of two pistols coming as closely together as you might snap the third and fourth fingers of your hand.

Dona Maria sat up with a start.

"Madre de Dios!" came a self-strangled scream from the maid's room. "What is it?"

There followed instantly a soft thudding of running feet and a hand violently shook her door. The Princess sprang up with a frightened cry, flung a dressing gown about her and switched on an alcove light. The brass slot in the door frame leaped out, a young man darted inside, closed and bolted the door, and stood crouched against it, panting. A pistol was clutched in his hand and a red trickle ran down and dripped off the barrel on to the red carpet.

The Hunt.

"Madre de Dios!" shrieked the maid again.

"Sh-h!" commanded the young man at the door in a stern whisper. "Keep quiet—don't make any noise!"

The first shock of the alarm past, the Princess stepped out into the dim light from the alcove, holding the dressing gown closely about her. She was a true daughter of romance, hot-blooded and courageous, with no more "nerves" than the mountains that guarded her castle home.

"What do you want?" she demanded, advancing upon the intruder.

For reply he waggled the pistol impatiently and pressed his ear more closely to the door. A confused sound of voices and a mighty running to and fro came from the hall.

"What's the bally row?"

"I heard him—he ran past my door!"

"Anybody killed?"

"What the ——'s loose now?"

"It was two shots—I heard 'em."

The coolness with which he ignored her presence and perfectly natural inquiries as to the cause of the intrusion banished what little trace of alarm was in the Princess' bosom and left only indignation.

"How dare you enter"——

"Sh—silence!" he interrupted, so sharply that she obeyed through sheer amazement. "Not a sound! Do you understand?"

Dona Maria opened her lips to blast him, to summon aid, but the hubbub without broke out anew and she listened. The steps and voices were passing the door.

"It was a pistol, I tell you."

"Well, where'd he go?"

"Look out on the fire escape, Jim!"

"No, he's on this floor."

"How could he get downstairs, you dunce!"

The hue and cry reached down the hall and the Princess swept down upon Mr. Jarvis, who finally straightened up and faced her.

A Man's Appeal.

"Now, what does this mean?" she demanded, grimly, in a swift glance taking account of the evening clothes and the trim, well set-up figure of the man who had wrenched the lock of a door out of its frame. But, though she was brave, she also took account of the pistol.

"Is it money you want?" she demanded, with a curl of her lip. She drew back against the bed. "Every cent I have is on the dressing table. Take it and go!"

The young man pushed his hat back and mopped his brow with the back of his hand.

She noticed that he was panting hard and was very much more agitated than she was. Even the pistol lost its terror.

"Well, then—what do you want?" she cried.

He was about to reply when the sound of the returning hunt reached his ears.

"Wait—wait!" he begged, swiftly. "They're coming here! They must not search this room—do you understand? You must put them off! For pity's sake," he pleaded, "you must put them off! I'm not what you think I am—I haven't done anything wrong—I'll explain afterward!" And he slipped behind the curtain of the alcove as there came an authoritative knock at the door and the maid ran into the room, crying "Madame, something dreadful has happened!"

Dona Maria silenced her. Her eyes were on the door, and she was thinking rapidly. According to those deeply versed in human affairs the truth has no particular accent of its own. But Dona Maria was not deeply versed in these matters—and she was a woman, with a woman's swift, subconscious reasoning. He had told the truth—he was a gentleman—he was hunted and in sore need of a friend, and so was she. A man would have considered only the fact of the shots, the pistol and the flight, and left it to a jury of men; a man-judge and man's law to sift out the rights of the case.

Bang—bang! A more violent assault on the door.

A Woman's Way.

"Open it, Nita," was the quiet command. The maid moved gingerly up to the door and Dona Maria took a last quick glance at the curtains that hid the young man who fought with a pistol in a Broadway hotel, broke locks with his hands and had thrown himself on her mercy.

Nita opened the door part way and the house detective, a short, squat man about three feet thick, thrust himself in.

"You all right here?" he asked curtly.

"Si, senor," lisped Nita, timidly. The Princess came forward.

"What is it, Nita?" she asked with becoming dignity. The maid drew aside.

"My mistress," she bowed.

The detective half bowed. "Excuse me, madam," he said, with a slight abatement of his brusqueness. "I'm the house detective. You all right in here?"

For a bare instant Dona Maria hesitated. Then:

"Yes," she said.

"Sorry to bother you—looking for some one," apologized the detective, backing out. "Good night."

"Oh, madame," wailed the girl, after he had gone. "I am so frightened! What is it?—what is it?"

"Control yourself, Nita," the mistress reproved her. "Go to bed. I shall not need you until 6 o'clock."

Sniffling, but subdued, Nita returned to her bedroom and shut herself in. Jarvis emerged from the shelter of the alcove.

"Thank you," he said simply. "Would you mind bolting that door again?" The Princess stared at him, paralyzed by his assurance. With magnificent impudence, so it seemed to her, he did not understand why she did not obey. "He might return," he reminded her. And, undecided whether to laugh, cry or turn him over to the house detective, Princess Dona Maria of Aragon went and bolted the door.

As she turned back to him he pointed with his pistol to the door of the maid's room.

No Way Out.

"Is there no way out throught that door?" he asked.

She told him there was not.

"The fire escape—where is it?"

"In the hall opposite," replied Dona Maria, gazing at him in wonder and perplexity. She knew nothing about him, except that he was, unless appearances were very deceiving, a fugitive from justice. Yet he took it for granted that she was his ally. She was under 30 and considered one of the most beautiful women in Spain. Her kinsman of Alva, who had a discriminating taste in such matters, had made her beauty famous in five capitals, and those of his sex who had been fortunate enough to glimpse her, by accident, in the warmly colored and clinging gown of the boudoir that betrayed every exquisite line, declared that those who had seen Dona Maria only in the ballroom and at the dinner table would have to wait for the houris of Paradise to form some idea of her true loveliness. Yet she was certain that this young man could not have told at that moment if she had cross eyes and a hair lip. Indeed, if there had been any doubt about it his next utterance would have removed it.

"Across the hall? H——l!" he exclaimed, with energy. "I was certain that light was—oh, I beg pardon," he broke off suddenly, and was so boyishly embarrassed and contrite that Dona Maria was certain he had at last noticed the absence of the hair lip. But this did not mean forgiveness.

"Well, why don't you go?" she inquired, coldly.

His confusion increased. "But—but I can't go that way," he protested, waving the pistol hopelessly at the hall door. "They're waiting for me in the hall!"

"Well," the Princess gazed at him with an unusual leiness in her great dark eyes, "what do you expect me to do about it?"

Now this was a tactical blunder, for it summoned the young man's sense of the ridiculous to his aid—and he smiled. If he were not the hero of this narrative it would be a truthful recorder's duty to set down that he grinned. Dona Maria was piqued, but felt herself warm to a man who could smile—or grin—when a house full of police were looking for him. And then came the romantic thought that this was the type of man to be her champion. She surveyed him swiftly, but accurately.

A Modern Hero.

He was not the stuff that dream heroes are made of—at least not to look at, if his build were excepted. He was tall, with broad, slender shoulders and a certain lightness of step and frictionless ease of movement that explained the collapse of the brass lock. But his rumpled hair—he had just at that moment removed his opera hat and was nervously tapping his thigh with it—was a nondescript, plebeian sandy shade, and his good-humored face seemed to have borrowed some of the pigment of the hair. The nose was straight but generously flecked with freckles about the bridge. The mouth was liberally designed, and when he smiled—or grinned—showed rows of strong, white teeth. The eyes were of a kind of sandy gray, and, like Alan Breck's, had a sort of dancing madness in them.

It was a head that would have thrown a Gibson into convulsions, but a Holbein would have clapped a steel cap on it and made it immortal.

Dona Maria noted all of this, but took open note only of the smile—or grin.

"Is the situation so amusing?" she inquired, with increasing wintriness of tone and look.

He made a quick gesture of apology and was instantly serious.

"I'm not laughing at you—I beg your pardon. I blundered in here by mistake—but I'm in a tight place. I can't leave by that door. I must find some other way."

He threw open his overcoat as he spoke and she saw the blood on his hand. This was the last needed touch. She was a woman.

"You're wounded!" she exclaimed, going to him and looking at the hand solicitously. "What's happened? Those shots I heard—"

He nodded and laughed silently. "I almost stopped one of the bullets. It just nudged me as it was going by."

"Your hand is bleeding dreadfully."

"Oh, not much," he assured her, and tried awkwardly to tie the wrist with his handkerchief, still holding the revolver. The Princess half raised her hands to assist him and drew back. He did not notice. He was gazing about the room with a troubled frown.

"I don't see how the devil——" he muttered, more to himself than to her, evidently trying to devise some means of escape. Dona Maria drew a little farther away.

"You have evidently shot some one and are trying to make me shield you from justice," she said sternly.

"No, not justnce," he rejoined instantly, "from the law."

"I thought they were the same."

He shook his head gravely. "No, not always. There would be no justice for me at the hands of the law."

He looked into her eyes as he spoke, and for a few moments they stood thus in silence. The woman's eyes turned away first.

"That is not for me to decide," she declared.

"But I want you to decide," he urged gently. "At least, you must listen. And if you find me guilty I'll—well, I'll try the fire escape or anything—anything else you say."

The Princess raised her eyes to his and found them so full of earnest pleading that she dropped them once more.

"That is ridiculous," she said, but with such marked lack of conviction that he smiled.

"Hardly ridiculous," he objected; "when I'm arguing for my life."

Having fully made up her mind to listen, Dona Maria found another objection. Her eyes rested on the revolver.

"Can any decision be more unjust than mine," she asked coldly, "that must be made at the point of a pistol?"

He started, and flushed, and gazed down at his right hand. He had forgotten that he was still holding the revolver. Then he walked over to the dressing table and placed it within easy reach of her hand, and stood off some little distance, so that she was between him and the weapon.

"There is nothing to prevent your calling for help now," he said, hopelessly. "After all, it doesn't much matter whether the end comes now or to-morrow or the day after."

The Princess eyed him steadily until she was convinced that the despair was not a sham. There was no trace of the disarming smile.

His Explanation.

"The end?" she echoed, somewhat blankly. "Then why didn't you give yourself up?"

"That would have been the end," was the grim reply. Dona Maria's manner softened ever so slightly and she moved very slowly toward him. He correctly interpreted this as encouragement to proceed.

"Do you know what a feud is?" he asked abruptly. Her eyes opened wide and she pointed out in the general direction whence those shots had come.

"Feud!" sh exclaimed in a low voice. "Was that——?"

"Yes," he nodded. "That was the end of a feud. Do you know what a feud is?"

"Spain is the home of feuds," she replied, softly.

Jarvis started and his face lit with hope. "Spain!" he exclaimed. "Are you Spanish? Then you will understand! My grandmother was Spanish—one of the oldest families in Cuba. I was born in Kentucky, but they sent me East to be reared. I was called home suddenly by the death of my father—shot in a feud. They told me the ghastly history of our feud," he went on rapidly, his voice vibrant with emotion, "how our family had been assassinated, man after man, by the descendants of Daniel Markham. Then my father fell, leaving me—the last—to fight it out alone!"

He paused with a gulp and Dona Maria, leaning toward him, asked softly: "And your mother?"

"She has gone, too."

"She—she died?" The question was almost reverent.

"She died. God only knows what I've been through since then!"

He turned away and there was a little silence.

"But," said Dona Maria, as if gently arguing a point with an old friend, "why didn't you leave Kentucky?"

He jerked himself around impatiently.

"I did leave Kentucky—I was forced to leave!" he cried. "I had grown sick at heart and—and the odds were too great. I sent a negro servant to New York and followed soon after by another route; but it was no use. I was going to sail for Europe, longing for peace, but they wouldn't let me. Every move was watched! I had hardly been in New York five hours before I realized that the Markham clan was on my trail, eager to get me before I could get out of the country. They thought I was afraid, when I was only sick of it. A message reached me at my hotel—across the street—at 12 o'clock tonight. It was signed 'Jim Markham'—the head of the family—and proposed that as we were out of Kentucky we end the feud amicably. I knew the name, I knew what he meant, and I went to see him—prepared!"

Her Side of It.

He shrugged his shoulders half in resignation, half in despair.

"It was as I expected. He was stopping in this hotel—on this floor. I threw open the door of the room, unannounced. Nothing was said—we both fired." He looked down at his wounded and, and his dramatic manner vanished.

"Now do you understand why the law would not give me justice?" he asked quietly.

The girl shuddered. "It's all so horrible," she murmured. "Did—did you kill him?"

Jarvis opened his hands and dropped them, limp.

"I don't know," he replied indifferently. "He dropped—I didn't wait."

He looked past, not at, her as he spoke. The lethargy, the mental and physical languor, that succeeds a terrible crisis was upon him—the time when a man feels that he is without strength, without friends, without hope.

The girl sensed the change in him and was surprised to feel a twinge of impatience.

"What are you going to do?" she asked crisply.

Jarvis shrugged his shoulders. "I don't know." The tone was dull and hopeless. "What's the use of going on? Do you know what it means," he went on bitterly, "to fight single-handed against fearful odds—to fight an endless fight alone?"

The girl turned her dark eyes on him with a strange expression.

"Yes," she said, half audibly; "yes, I know."

"A barren, fruitless, hopeless fight—without even a single gleam of love or word of encouragement?"

"Yes," replied Dona Maria, slowly and with meaning, "I know what it means."

Jarvis stared at her. "You know?" he exclaimed, incredulously. "How could you know—how could any woman know?"

"Yes, I know," declared the Princess, somberly. "Because I, too, am fighting against fearful odds."

The young woman gazed at her in wonder that gave way to sympathy and more wonder as her loveliness came upon him.

"There is no man to fight for you?" he asked, betraying his thought in his question. Dona Maria understood.

"No man left who dares," she replied with bitterness.

As his gaze strayed from the soft, deep black eyes to the pile of soft black hair and down the curve of the soft, creamy cheek to the smooth red lips, he wondered, even in the depths of his misery, what manner of men she had about her.

"God!" he breathed, fervently, "if here had only been some woman to fight for in my fight!"

And if he had said all that was in his mind he would have inserted the words, "like you." Dona Maria must have understood that these words were implied, for she said softly:

"It seems as though Providence had thrown you in my path. You say there would be no justice for you at the hands of the law? If you are found here it means your life."

"Yes," he replied and waited curiously for what was to come. Dona Maria appeared to deliberate.

"Suppose I decide to help you," she suggested gravely, "and drive a hard bargain?"

Jarvis was relieved to find that he could smile again. So was Dona Maria, but she did not publish her feelings.

"What do you mean?" he inquired.

"Your life in Kentucky is finished—you can never go back to it."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Hilbert Tells of Her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.

FLEETWOOD, PA.—"During the Change of Life I was hardly able to be around at all. I always had a headache and I was so dizzy and nervous that I had no rest at night. The flashes of heat were so bad sometimes that I did not know what to do.

"One day a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me a strong well woman. I am very thankful that I followed my friend's advice, and I shall recommend it as long as I live. Before I took the Compound I was always sickly and now I have not had medicine from a doctor for years. You may publish my letter."—MRS. EDWARD B. HILBERT, Fleetwood, Pa.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, bakaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. PinkHam's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

BACK TO SIMPLICITY

A Short Story, Complete

"GRACIOUS!" said the girl in the lizard green gown. "You've got your hair pulled back! Why do you do it so plainly?"

"It isn't!" objected the young married woman, ungrammatically. "It's no plainer than yours or any one else—it's just that you've been used to seeing me with all my hair on—puffs, transformations, braid and Billie Burke curls! Oh, I stuck to them long after every one else had gone in for the new plain style, using just one's own hair. But I didn't have enough own hair to make a hit with, and, anyhow, I look better with my hair sort of elaborate. But I'm cured!"

"Who did it?"

"It wasn't a who, it was a what," explained the young married woman. "But I'll tell you, anyway.

"The other day I remembered that I was due at the Splurge wedding that evening, so I shampooned my own hair and washed my own hair once removed in gasoline. Now, if there is anything I dislike, it is to go by a building and think an Indian reservation has broken loose and is exhibiting scalplocks—for that is what I'm always reminded of when I see curls and puffs and things pinned to the lace curtains where they will get the breeze and sun and will lose their gasoline perfume.

Hidden From View.

"So after my extra adornments were cleansed I pinned them inside the window curtains, where they were hidden from the view of the populace. Then, feeling safe and at peace, I sat on the sun porch and read a book and dried my truly hair. After a while, when it got to be luncheon time, I went to my bedroom for something and casually glanced at the curtains where modestly hung my other hair. Only it didn't hang there. The curtains flapped mockingly, and if you had seen me dive headforemost at that open window you would have been justified in the belief that suicide was the best thing I did.

"Down in the alley below was a lovely sea of mud. They are building on the next lot, and the heavy wagons with brick and cement and things have made a regular morass of the place. Probably my hair was in the mud. As I stared a particularly heavy wagon lumbered and squashed through, shaking off several pounds of brickdust. I shrieked madly for help, and Tilly, the baby's nurse, came running.

"'Those luffly puffs!' Tilly wailed and darted forthwith to the alley, while I directed operations from above. Tilly balanced on a brick and surveyed the mud with deep dislike, making little dabs at it tentatively. Finally, in one of the deep ruts she saw a whisp of hair projecting, and some tugging excavated my largest puff, a sodden, sticky lump. A puddle gave up another and she found a third under the imprint of a horse's hoof, but the fourth had vanished. Tilly came upstairs holding her muddy treasure trove at arm's length.

"'But where's my transformation?' I shrieked. 'That cost $15—and as for the braid—well, I might just as well go into bankruptcy if that switch isn't found!'"

"Tilly protested that the earth below would not yield up another bit of hair. I began to wonder how I could send regrets to a wedding after I had already accepted, and then Mary called me to luncheon. I was weeping real tears into my soup when Mary burst in and asked permission to go downstairs, which was unusual at a mealtime, of course. I inquired why, but she just waved her arms wildly and disappeared.

"In due time she reappeared breathless and triumphant with a weird-looking thing in one hand. It was my transformation! She said she had scoured the country roundabout with the opera glasses and had seen something hanging on a bridal wreath bush in the Harveys' front yard, three houses down, and it looked like hair to her, and it proved to be hair. She added that Mrs. Harvey on the front porch had seemed greatly interested in the proceedings. Mrs. Harvey has always exclaimed publicly about my 'wealth of beautiful hair,' so I could imagine how pleased she must have been.

A Ring.

"As I finished my strawberries there was a loud ring at the bell, and when Tilly went to the speaking tube I distinctly heard the wretch of a small boy who was in the vestibule two stories below yelling for the edification of the whole building: 'Say, yer switch is a-hanging just below your bedroom window ledge on the telephone wires!'

"Tilly got the switch while I hung on to her heels. Then, very much exhausted, I washed everything again—but somehow I kept smelling gasoline all evening and I distinctly heard a man back of me in the middle of the church say it was remarkable how the automobiles outside seemed to be leaking. It was too much of a strain, so I've abandoned the whole outfit."

"Well, I don't blame you!" said the girl in the lizard green gown.

Freaks of Fashion

Monstrosities From Paris Boulevards

In Paris extremes of costume are seen more frequently than they are here. These three were "snapped" by a foreign correspondent for the Hearst newspapers recently. When our fashion expert was asked to describe them she immediately complained of feeling faint and went home. Therefore any of our women readers who feel "freakish" will have to solve these fashion puzzles for themselves.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ASK HER.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and in love with a girl of twenty-one. She also loves me. Last night I told a friend about it. He laughed and said: "That girl is married."

Now, how shall I find out the truth?

CONSTANT READER.

Ask her. If you find you can't take her word, then cease your attentions. No happiness was ever built on doubt or suspicion.

QUIT TELLING HER.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-three, and have had an acquaintance with a girl of eighteen for the past nine months. I am deeply in love with her, but, somehow, she does not seem to appreciate the same. Now, what I would like to know is there anyway I could bring her to understand the true feeling I have for her? G. F.

You have given her nine months' devotion that she doesn't seem to appreciate. The story of your love seems to have become old and stale. Quit telling it. Awaken her interest by giving her some reason to doubt you.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I SHOWED Pa & Ma a peece in a boys' magazine that offerd a prize of ten dollars for the best short story of ad-venture wrote by a boy not oaver twelve yeers old. I toald Pa that I was going to try for the prize, & Pa sad rite away that he wud help me rite the story.

Why doant you let Bobbie rite it hisself? sed Ma. I doant think it wud be fair to the other littel boys who will com-peet to have you cum along with yure wunderful, marvelous brain & win that ten dollars. Let the kids have thare own competishun, Ma sed.

So this is the story I rote. It had to be less than a hundred words & it is pritty hard to rite a story inside of a hundred words & have the whole plot in. This is how I rote it:

It was midnite in Mexico. A silvery moon smiled at the Rio Grande wich wound its way through the lonely desert.

One gianst was enuff for Sheriff Vane.

The Mexican was ded.

Crack! Crack! Two pistol shots rang out thru the desert air, and Sheriff Vane pitched from his horse.

Bad Silvio and Bad Chico halted thare horses beefoar they cud trample on the body of the Sheriff.

One gianst was enuff for the two outlaws.

The Sheriff was ded.

That story won't win any prize, Bobbie, sed Pa. It ain't a good piece of work at all. I guess you better let me rite it all oaver for you.

Ma seen that I felt kind of bad. Every time wen I feel bad my lip gits kind of stiff. I can't help it & I can't grin wen I try. So Ma patted me on the cheek and sed Bobbie, that is a good story, & I bet you will win the prize. Yure father can't help you in this contest, excep, maybe, he can help you to spend the ten dollars wen you win it.

He will nevver win the prize, sed Pa. The story is vary crude.

I don't think you are a competent critick, sed Ma. You nevver rote any stories yourself that won any prizes, & now you are trying to tell littel Bobbie how to rite. You are always that way, Ma sed, trying to tell peepul how to do things that you can not do yureself. I will bet you a ten-dollar bathrobe aggenst a ten-dollar hat, Ma sed, that Bobbie wins the prize. I am giving you a even munny bet, Ma sed, & I am taiking Bobbie aggenst the whole field. That is the kind of a bettor I am, Ma sed.

Sure enuff, day beefoar yesterday I got a letter from the boys' magazeen & thare was a new ten-dollar bill in it.

"Well, sed Ma to Pa, cum acrost with that ten dollars for my hat.

I haven't the change now, sed Pa. Bobbie, let yure mother talk that ten dollars till payday.

That is the way Pa paid his bet & I wud be broak now only Ma galv me the ten back & sed she wud wait till payday for her hat. Pa thinks he knows lots, but Ma is a better bettor.

Not Like Him.

The Academy exhibition, with its fine Sargent portraits, recalls a story of this famous artist. At a banquet a young lady whom he knew very well said to him:

"Oh, Mr. Sargent, I saw your latest painting, and kissed it because it was so much like you."

"And did it kiss you in return?"

"Why, no."

"Then," said Mr. Sargent, "it was not like me."

Competition.

A little girl had been the pet of the family. Every one made much of her, but when there was a new little baby brother she felt rather neglected.

"How are you, Mary?" a visitor asked of her one afternoon.

"Oh, I'm all right," she said, "except that I think there is too much competition in this world."

In the lunatic asylum at Nantes is an illiterate inmate who has been discovered by the chief doctor to be a remarkable "lightning calculator." Ask what would be the age of a person who had lived a milliard of seconds, he took only 48 seconds to reply correctly. In 23 seconds he supplied the correct answer to the question, what would be the age of a person who had lived 343,000,000 seconds. He required only 32 seconds to find out how many seconds there were in 39 years, three months, twelve hours. Having been told the square mileage of the globe, he was asked how many hectares that represents, and gave the correct reply in four seconds. Asked how many seconds there are in 30 years, he replied in fourteen seconds, and explained that his calculations had involved four multiplications and one addition by mental arithmetic.

Mr. Jeffrey Farnol, who so suddenly leaped into fame as the author of "The Broad Highway," of which more than 300,000 copies have been sold, comes of a stock somewhat remarkable for its longevity. His grandparents are still living, as also their ten sons and daughter, with numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Four generations of one family, with only one loss by death—and that the author's brother, who fell in action in the Boer war—may be considered almost phenomenal.

Dancing at German court functions is a serious business, for the Kaiser will allow no one to take the floor who is not an expert. When a ball is in progress the court dancing master sits in one of the galleries and carefully observes the dancers. Should he detect ungracefulness in any guest he communicates with the Emperor, and the offender is presently warned that he or she must become more proficient before again being invited to the palace.

Time's Up! Did You Send in a Solution of "The Triple Tie"?

$250 in Cash Prizes for the Best "Final Chapter" of The Georgian's Great Mystery Story

The final chapters of "The Triple Tie" will be printed in The Georgian next Monday, July 7. Readers of "The Triple Tie" had until noon to-day to send in their conception of the conclusion of the story, containing their solution of the mystery in competition for prizes aggregating $250 offered by The Georgian. The problems for the reader to solve were these:

First—How does Kelly escape the mountaineers?

Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?

Third—How did Gordon Kelly, who confessed that he never saw a game of ball and never played a game of ball up to the time he asked Manager Smith of the Atlanta club for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to bat, catch and run bases in the marvelous manner he displayed at Atlanta that caused the Boston club to give the unheard-of price of $50,000 for Gordon Kelly's release?

Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the ninth inning of the final and deciding game?

Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

No contributions will be considered if they are delivered at The Georgian office later than to-day, July 3, noon, or bear a postmark later than that time.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian, will award the prizes.

The prizes for the best solutions are as follows:

First Prize	$100.00
Second Prize	50.00
Third Prize	25.00
Fourth Prize	15.00
Twelve Prizes, each	5.00
Total	$250.00

CUDDLING COTTAGES : A Charming Short Story, Complete

THERE were two red houses in Acraman's road which shouldered each other confidentially and seemed on such manifestly affectionate terms that the notion of their respective inhabitants being anything but bosom friends was simply ridiculous.

The thought struck Dollabella Powney quite forcibly when she bought one of these said houses, and made her more eager than was her wont (she was not curious by nature) to catch a glimpse of her next door neighbor. Oddly enough, it was quite a fortnight after she had moved in before she did so, and then the manner of her "catching" was sadly at variance with her customary traditions of dignity.

Consumed one May evening with a desire to know something of that neighbor's tastes and habits, she rose on an inverted blacking box which she had placed against her garden wall to take a furtive peep at the adjacent premises. The neighbor, curiously enough, chose that precise spot and moment for a similar maneuver. Result, their noses all but met. The neighbor said afterward that he was training a creeper, but the denouement was, in any case, absurd. Dollabella shrieked.

Her blacking box turned turtle at the start she gave, and she nearly sprained an ankle as she fell plump into a group of peonies. With a countenance the color of those flamboyant blossoms, and tears of mortification in her eyes, she scrambled up and went majestically indoors, banging the front door to ease her feelings. The neighbor—such is the depravity of man—laughed. After that there was only one course open to Dollabella—the next-door neighbor must be ignored—sent to Coventry—ostracized—crushed.

It was two months later, and the sultry glory of a July evening took the "Cuddling Cottagers"—as they were irreverently called—into an almost tropical embrace. Miss Powney was very busy—a garden hose in one hand and a little black volume, with a white whirligig on its cover, in the other. She appeared, between bouts of watering, to be committing something to memory.

The next door man was on a ladder. He was chronically on ladders. Dollabella had consulted her lawyer brother as to the possibility of a single woman getting an injunction against people who perpetually mounted heights and, under a pretext of pruning, commanded other people's domains. Moreover, he was whistling, and his whistling got upon Dollabella's nerves. Whenever she looked up she could see his straw hat and a pair of big brown hands busy among the young branches of a mulberry tree—and the sight annoyed her.

"Fractures," said Dollabella to herself, as she hosed a thirsty-looking clump of carnations, "are of six kinds: simple — compound — convex — concave (no, that sounds nonsense)—wait a minute."

She threw back her head and looked to the sky for inspiration.

"Wheough—whe-ou," went the man next door.

"Simple—compound — implicated—ocntex—ah!"

"Slither—scrape—crash—plomb!"

"Good heavens!" cried Dollabella, and the little black book with the white whirligig fell from her nerve-shaken hand to the ground.

A Crash.

Something had happened next door—something which included a splintering sound and the too sudden contact of a heavy body with Mother Earth.

The whistling had ceased abruptly in the middle of a bar; there was no longer any sign of a straw hat and clipping hands.

Dollabella, listening in cold horror, heard two or three groans, and then there was a ghastly silence.

Her heart thumped hard against her ribs—her breath came in little uncomfortable gasps.

"It's an accident of some sort," she said addressing the flower borders. "Now, what ought I to do?"

The hollyhocks and sweet-williams having no views on the subject she did what common sense prompted. The gardener, who came once a week to mow the grass and titivate the garden generally, had left a pair of short steps close at hand. She fetched them and placed them against the wall, and climbed to the top.

She was almost afraid to look, but common sense gave her another prod, and look she did; and, in looking beheld a prone figure which lay on its back, presenting a very white upturned face to the summer sky.

By its side, also prone, was a broken ladder.

At first she really thought that the whistling man next door was dead. Her heart seemed to turn a somersault and to stop before it got over. She scrambled down into his garden, dropping bang on to a choice lilium-auratum in the process, and hurried to his side. He was breathing, but seemed quite unconscious, and his right arm was bent in a curious way—and the hand looked swollen.

To the Rescue.

Dollabella knelt down and felt it gingerly; then she stared at it, and tried to marshal her recently acquired knowledge. "Pain—deformity—swelling," she muttered. "It's broken, of course it's broken. What shall I do? I must put it into splints before I call help."

Her eyes roved wildly around and discovered a golf putter lying on the lawn near a small hole. The whistling man practiced putting—when he was not in midair.

By means of his putter and a sturdy stick used for tying up dahlias, Dollabella made very serviceable splints which she tied on with her handkerchief and his. Just as she finished her patient moaned a little—and opened his eyes.

The pain in them lessened when he saw the apparition which bent over him.

"You will be quite all right now," Dollabella assured him, speaking very distinctly as if he were a child. "It's your arm, you know—broken. You know, I'm the girl from next door. I'm going to make you comfortable and send for your housekeeper to watch you while I fetch the doctor."

She looked around and seized a coat which she found near at hand, and arranged it beneath his head. The whistling man shut his eyes and moaned. The very slight movement had pained him.

"The beastly steps broke," he explained. "I was—ugh!"

"Yes—yes—don't try to talk; it will soon be better," Dollabella reassured him. "Now, lie quite still."

The caution was scarcely necessary as the man next door was in no condition to do anything else.

More Help.

He shut his eyes again. "Must you go?" he whispered.

"I must, really. You'll have to be bandaged properly, you see—besides, you're too big for me to move. I won't be long."

She sped indoors, big-eyed and white. After much unsuccessful knocking she dislodged a middle-aged housekeeper whom she almost pushed into the garden, explaining dramatically, and then she turned around again.

Up the country road she tore, and, after ten breathless minutes, she reached the doctor's house. Fortunately, he was in. He cast himself on a motor bicycle and flashed off almost before Dollabella had concluded the account of the accident.

The next day, after some debate with herself, she sent in her little maid to inquire after her neighbor. The answer came back: "Mr. Randall's compliments, and he was going on very nicely, and would like to see Miss Powney, if she could kindly find time to go in."

Dollabella, flushing very much at the message, decided she could not possibly find time to obey its request, and, to emphasize the truth of this, she sat idle for hours wondering whether she could or not. Mere civility demanded that she should go. She said this again and again. The man next door was lying on a couch, looking very forlorn.

"Please come in and sit down. Did you mind my asking you to come in like this?—I couldn't get to you—you see."

"I'm so glad you're better," Dollabella said primly, and she sat down obediently.

"It was slight concussion, you know, or I should be walking about," said the man next door. "I had to keep awfully quiet for 24 hours. How ever shall I thank you?"

Dollabella did not reply; she was staring very hard at the damaged arm in its splints.

Not the Arm.

"That isn't the arm I first aided," she suddenly burst out. "I—tied up your left—the one with the ring. I know I did."

The man next door got crimson right up to his nicely marked eyebrows. "It—it doesn't signify a bit," he said uncomfortably. "You did it beautifully—the doctor said so—and how could you know which arm it was if I wasn't up to telling you?"

"Pain—deformity—swelling," muttered Dollabella. "I am fated," she added distinctly, "to do idiotic things where you are concerned," and two big tears of sheer mortification rolled down her cheeks. And when she saw a smile on the face of her companion she could have killed him without compunction.

"What are you laughing at, please?" Dollabella dabbed her eyes defiantly.

"Because your 'idiotic things,' as you call them, don't hold a rushlight to mine. Confession's good for the soul. Look here—I never meant to tell you, but I—I threw myself off that ladder——"

"On purpose?"

"Yes."

"What on earth for?"

"Because I knew about the Red Cross classes, and I thought a smash-up would fetch you—but I never meant to break myself up like this."

Dollabella tried to keep her lips from twitching, but she couldn't.

Somehow the man next door got the unhurt arm around Dollabella's shoulders, and what he said when it was there does not matter to you or me. All that does matter is that the respective owners of the "Cuddling Cottages" behaved themselves quite appropriately from that day onward.

A couple of doors knocked through party walls later on made those houses one. The owners had been made one some weeks before.

Correct Words and How to Use Them

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.
Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

EVERY intelligent person is always progressing and is never indifferent in matters of culture. If careless habits of speech have been formed a determined effort to correct them will lead to good results.

Many persons who consider themselves well educated make the mistake of using the participle "got" in connection with the verb "to have." They say: "Have you got the key?" "Who has got my book?" instead of "Have you the key?" "Who has my book?"

Mistakes of everyday occurrence are, "Who did you give it to?" "Who is this for?" instead of the correct expressions, "To whom did you give it?" "For whom is this?"

Frequently one hears these errors in grammar: "I intended to have bought a pair of gloves," instead of "I intended to buy a pair of gloves;" "It was no use asking him," instead of "It was no use to ask him;" "Try and persuade her to go," instead of "Try to persuade her to go."

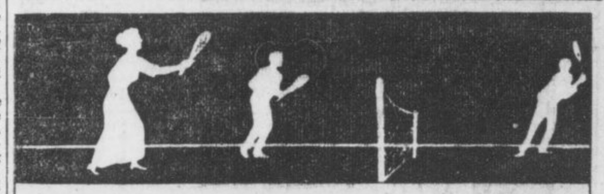

It would seem unnecessary to tell any one not to use the present tense instead of the past tense when mentioning what another has said, yet a careless person may be heard saying, "He says," instead of "He said."

Other faults are to say "A great ways," "Somewheres," "There's plenty of places."

The contraction "don't" for "do not" should never be used with a singular noun or pronoun. It is correct to say "He does not," and not "He don't." It is important to remember the objective form of the first person singular when a noun or pronoun or two pronouns follow a verb, and not to say "Ethel asked Mary and I to go," but "Ethel asked Mary and me to go." If one is confused about the use of pronouns in a sentence of this sort an easy rule is to separate them and use each one with the verb, thus: "Ethel asked Mary," and "Ethel asked me." In this way the grammatical form is seen.

It is correct to say "A summer day," not "A summer's day." "Cut the apple in two" or "in halves," not "Cut the apple in half." "I cut the ribbon off this piece," not "off of this piece." "The child threw it on the floor," not "onto the floor."

"Whether" is a word that indicates a choice of things and should not be placed at the head of each part of a sentence. For instance, it is incorrect to repeat it thus: "I have not decided whether I shall go to Boston or whether I shall stay at home."

Eat This Food During Summer

Be careful what you eat during hot weather. What you need is food that nourishes but does not heat the body.

Faust Spaghetti fits right into that class. It is a high gluten food—a bone, muscle and flesh former—but contains practically no fat, therefore cannot heat the body.

FAUST SPAGHETTI

makes a savory, appetizing dish. It can be served in a great many ways that appeal to the palate. It is easily prepared—it makes a nutritious, non-heating meal during the summer. Write for free recipe book, "Spaghetti and Its Uses." Faust Spaghetti put up in air-tight, moisture-proof packages.

GULLS FADING; RACE TIGHTENS UP NOW--AGLER

By Joe Agler.

PRICE AND CHAPMAN will do the haavy work for the Crackers in the opening game with the Pels to-day.

Paul Musser pitched a grand article of ball yesterday, and won the second and last game of the series from the Gulls. Paul was never in any great danger, and had everything his own way.

We scored in the first inning, and it looked like enough to win. We made sure, however, and scored two more in the seventh on clean hitting.

And that was enough.

They scored in the seventh, but could not find Musser for more than one run.

The Crackers certainly had a lot of life in both games, while Mobile was dead and never had a word to say.

The Gulls have left on a long trip around the circuit, and within a few more days there will be another leader in the league.

July will prove to be a great month for excitement in the pennant race in the Southern. Mobile, Chattanooga, Montgomery, Atlanta and perhaps Birmingham will be in a big scramble, and they will make some trouble before the season is over.

Now that we are on a winning streak and our twirlers going good again, and with our two weeks at home, we will start to climb and be up where we belong before long.

Price should win his game, as he is going good and has something on the Pels.

GIANTS MAKE 46 HITS IN THREE GAMES WITH PHILS

The Giants are a slob team, of course, as the last world's series showed. But they are surely the loud sound in the National League.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday they faced the Phillies in the "crucial series." The Phillies are supposed to have one of the greatest pitching staffs in the world. Yet in three games the Giants made 46 hits. On two occasions they made 17 hits. Once they got only 12. In the three games they scored 19 runs. Among the pitchers they drove to the woods were Chalmers twice, Moore, Killifer, Alexander twice, Rixey, Mayer and Seaton.

PLAYERS QUALIFY JULY 4 FOR PRESIDENT'S TROPHY

The qualifying round in the golf tournament for the trophy offered by the president of the Atlanta Athletic Club will be contested over the East Lake course July 4.

The first and second rounds of match play must be played by July 10, the semi-finals by July 17, and the finals, which will be at 36 holes, by July 20.

The star event of the day will be a team race, five men to the team, between the College Park Club and the Marietta Gun Club. It will be the second meet of a series between the clubs.

BRITTON AGREES TO 133 IN JULY 4 GO WITH WHITE

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 3.—Charlie White and Jack Britton are to fight at 133 pounds, weighing in three and one-half hour before their fight Friday afternoon. Britton agreed to this to-day when a conference of principals was held to settle final details. The meeting had waited the arrival of Nate Lewis from Chicago. The weight is quite satisfactory to White, who had expected he would be forced to make it 134, which would have been somewhat of an advantage to Britton. The boys will enter the ring at about 3:30 p. m.

"Charlie will surely continue his winning streak," said Lewis. "The next important match I am counting on is between White and the winner of the Ritchie-Rivers go."

MRS. M'CARTY ON COAST TO SETTLE LUTE'S ESTATE

LOS ANGELES, July 3.—Mrs. Rhoda McCarty, widowed by the blow of Arthur Pelky's fist that killed Luther McCarty in the arena at Calgary, Alberta, on May 24, is in Los Angeles to claim the $8,200 account her husband had with the German-American Savings Bank.

BUILDING PERMIT ISSUED FOR NEW STADIUM AT TECH

A building permit has just been issued for the erection of the concrete stadium on Grant Field at the Georgia Institute of Technology. The work will cost $15,000. This will pay only for the first stand. Later it is planned to surround the entire field with stands.

CRACKERS OPEN SERIES TO-DAY WITH PELICANS

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Crackers return from a strenuous road trip to-day, bringing more victories than was expected, and open here this afternoon with the once famous Pelicans.

With the team back in something resembling its stride now, with a new and promising pitcher coming, with Price and Conzelman in good trim, there is nothing to keep the Crackers from showing some speed on their present home stay.

On July 4 games will be played in the morning and afternoon. Saturday one game will be played. All these contests will be with the well-known doormats of the league.

* * *

MEMPHIS and Mobile will furnish the opposition next week. The week after Montgomery comes for three games. And then the Crackers beat it southward.

As things stand now the Crackers are within comfortable striking distance of the lead. All needed is a good, brisk winning streak to get the Crackers up there fighting with the Gulls. The New Orleans and Memphis games should close up the gap somewhat. Then the Gulls come, and if the Crackers can sweep that series and trim Montgomery they will leave Atlanta for their Southern trip so close to first place that it will make it interesting.

Don't make the mistake of figuring the Crackers out of it yet. They aren't. A spurt will put them up in the running with a rush.

IT'S hard to figure why Carl Thompson isn't making a better showing. He looks like a great pitcher and he wins a few games. But somehow he couldn't stick with Birmingham.

Possibly by antagonizing the other players on every team of which he becomes a member Thompson hurts his own chances. It is certain that he did not stand high in the estimation of the other Barons and that they did not give him good support. Many a pitcher has been ruined because no team would play behind him.

CHARLEY FRANK has won more controversies and less ball games this season than any time in his history. He practically hasn't lost an argument or won a ball game. Of course that's an exaggerated statement but close to the real facts.

If this sort of thing keeps on Charley will give up managing and become a lawyer.

BY way of warning, all chicken owners on the route between Chicago and Montezuma the following item from Charley Dryden's pen is hereby published:

"Fred Toney is taking lessons lassoing chickens from the deck of a motorcycle. This fall he and Richie and Lavender will ride machines to Lavender's home at Montezuma, Ga., and Toney has promised to supply the grub en route."

CHARLEY HEMPHILL is not a great manager. That has been demonstrated. Probably Charley himself would hardly argue that he was. But he can still hit that old pellet. Up in the husky American Association where 20 men are batting over .300, Charley is next to the top, with a batting average of .353. Ra Miller, of Columbus, is the only man who tops him.

TWO International League clubs are fighting over the services of Claude Derrick, ex-University of Georgia player, now with the Athletics. Both Baltimore and Rochester want him, with the chances fairly good that he will go back to Baltimore.

Derrick can not seem to stick in the big leagues but he is plenty good enough for the fastest of minor leagues and should have many good years in the International.

FINE REMEDY FOR ECZEMA

Also for Salt Rheum, Tetter, Psoriasis, Lupus, and All Skin Afflictions.

Even a Microscope Won't Find a Blemish After S. S. S. Gets Through.

All skin troubles should be attacked from within by giving the blood circulation a good daily bath. This is accomplished with S. S. S., the best known and most highly recommended blood purifier ever discovered. Its action is very rapid. Its vegetable nature is such that it naturally goes right into the blood, saturates the entire circulation, bathes the tissues with an influence that enables the skin to heal quickly. The action of S. S. S. is that of an antidote, and this fact has been demonstrated time and time again in the most severe forms of weeping eczema.

Its influence in the tissues where the tiny arteries transfer the red blood for the worn-out blood to the veins is quite remarkable and goes on constantly with every tick of the clock—the beat of the heart.

And new skin is thus caused to form, while the germs of irritating influences that cause eczema are scattered and their harmful nature entirely suspended.

S. S. S. has a wonderful tonic influence in the blood because it contains no "dope," is not a "physic," is entirely free of any mineral drugs or any other drugs except the remarkable medicinal effect of the pure vegetable products of which it is made.

Few people realize how harmful are many of the strong, crude ointments that used to be in favor before they learned that S. S. S. is safe, speedy and sure. Ask at any drug store for a bottle of S. S. S. Give it a good trial and you will soon see a decided improvement in any form of skin trouble. Write to The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for special free advice on eczema and any other form of skin or blood trouble.

What Baseball Umps Should Do

Heisman Helps Amateur Arbiters

By J. W. Heisman

FIRST rattle out of the box, let me say this small package of umpiring tips is not intended for professional arbiters, albeit more than one of such could improve himself and give better satisfaction to players and public if he would take to heart one or more of the points I herein will discuss.

So far as the teams and their captains are concerned, it is naturally well for them to get, whenever possible, an umpire who has had some experience, who has some natural qualifications for the work, and most important of all, a man who has an unblemished reputation. This article will be of no assistance whatever to a prospective umpire in any one of these three considerations; but most any one is liable to be called upon at some time or other in his forruitous career to umpire a game of ball, and perhaps a point or two herein touched upon may dwell in his memory and help him out of more than one dilemma during the progress of the riot.

* * *

IN THE first place, if there is only one umpire to the game, he should take his stand behind the catcher, and should remain there as long as no men get on bases. He should not think of taking up this station without a mask over his face; and if there is a protector to be had, he should also don that.

The umpire should be careful not to stand so close upon the catcher's heels as to crowd him, and he should ever be on the alert for a possible foul foul fly popping up. In such an event he should be quick to jump out of the catcher's way, for naturally the latter will be after it in a jiffy.

* * *

ABOUT the hardest thing connected with umpiring is to call balls and strikes to the satisfaction of both teams. Often enough pitchers come in complaining that the umpire always makes them split the plate. If true, this constitutes a just complaint, for it is the acme of good pitching never to give a batter a ball squarely over the middle. If the umpire will not give a strike when the pitcher has both head and control sufficient to just nick the corners, his good work is nullified by the umpire's limitations of sight or judgment.

And umpires often enough call a strike when the ball has passed the batter at the level of the batter's eyes or chin or neck. This is a big mistake. Merely because the batter is able to see over the top of the ball, or because many a batter likes to take a wallop at a ball that is winding snake-like around his neck is no reason why it should be called a strike. A judge of play should be guided strictly and entirely by what the rule says, and in this case the provision is that it must be between the knee and the shoulder.

* * *

MANY batters squat or crouch at the plate before the ball is delivered, and when it comes up they crouch a deal more. In this position the ball seems often to go away over their heads, when it would clearly be a satisfactory height for another man who did not have such a stooping attitude. An umpire should be careful not to let a batter get away with this crouching posture to such an extent as to compel the pitcher to put them all knee-high. The idea is that it is a strike if it passes at a height not greater than the shoulder when the batsman is in a natural hitting attitude.

Umpires often make the mistake of judging a pitched ball by where the catcher caught it. Often enough the catcher "pulls" the ball so cleverly as to deceive the umpire; and then again the mere effect of gravity or the curve of the ball, coming late and suddenly, distorts the umpire's judgment.

* * *

UMPIRES frequently make the mistake of calling a decision too quickly. They have it in their minds that this shows efficiency and executive capacity. Also it is sometimes intended as a species of bluffing, calculated to make the players believe that the decision must be correct because of the very snappishness with which it is given. To a certain extent this may be so; but only too often this lightning-like decision connotes the very opposite of accuracy.

It is well, though, for the umpire to be as quick as he can in calling the third strike on a batter when the latter has not swung at it. If the catcher holds this third strike it does not make any difference, as the batter is out of it anyway; but should the catcher drop this last strike it would look as though you were giving him a chance to recover the ball before the runner reached first if you delay notifying the runner at once that it is the third strike and he had best run.

* * *

IT is the tendency nowadays to call most every ball that is hit immediately down to the ground a foul ball, whether it afterward rolls foul or fair. I incline to think this is good practice; for unless one does call such a ball something without delay it puts the batter in an awkward position. This case should be carefully distinguished, however, from that where the batter hits a ball into the diamond that is manifestly fair, and has been from the start, and then in starting out for first base he runs himself into the bounding or rolling ball. Here the batter is out at once for touching a fair batted ball.

FODDER FOR FANS

Wilson, of the Pirates, made two home runs yesterday, but his efforts were wasted, for the Cubs scored six runs against four for the Pirates.

* * *

Eleven Tigers stepped to the plate in the fourth inning of the game against the White Sox yesterday, with the result that seven runs went across the finish line, giving the Tigers the game.

* * *

Wheat, of the Dodgers, made a triple and three singles out of four times up yesterday.

* * *

Larry Doyle, of the Giants, made a homer with two on bases yesterday. Several days ago he delivered a circuit swat with the bases crowded.

* * *

The Naps and Browns divided a double-header yesterday, the Browns taking the first game, an eleven-inning affair, and the Naps the second, with Falkenberg in the box. This is the first game Falkenberg has won since his winning streak of ten games was cut.

* * *

The Cardinals justly might be called the "rally boys" Yesterday they repeated the stunt which they have been practicing in the last month of coming from behind and winning out by scoring three runs in the eighth and one in the ninth, taking the game from the Reds.

* * *

Connie Mack has his eye focused on George Brickley, brother of Charles, the Harvard football star. It's a cinch that if George can bat anywhere as well as Charles can kick, Connie will be placing him in the slugger's position of the Athletics' line-up if he lands him.

* * *

For the thfrd successive time the Giants tussled with the Phillies in the Quakertown bailiwick yesterday and handed the third straight defeat, thus clinching the hold the Giants now have on the upper rung in the National League ladder.

* * *

Pitchers may come and pitchers may go, but it seems that Mathewson and his wonderful control and ability are to remain forever. In this, his thirteenth season, as a big league pitcher, Matty threatens to eclipse all his previous records for victories. In addition to establishing a world's record for control, he hurled against the Phillies yesterday and for the seventh or eighth time this season went the full nine innings without a base on balls.

* * *

The Dodgers, after suffering two defeats at the hands of the Braves, rose up in wrath yesterday and gave the Braves one of the worst beating handed any team this year. The Brooklynites garnered fifteen runs, scoring nine in the third.

* * *

Lajoie, the Naps' second sacker, was back in the game yesterday, and, despite rumors that he is to be benched or used as a pinch hitter in the future, it is a certainty that he will remain as a regular for the balance of this season and several more to come.

Boehling, the recruit pitcher of the Senators, is setting the American League afire. He has started seven games and won them all, the majority of them being shut-outs.

ROHE TO LEAD NEWNAN; HAS 2-YEAR CONTRACT

NEWNAN, GA., July 3.—George Rohe, former utility man for Atlanta, yesterday signed a two-year contract as manager of the Newnan Georgia-Alabama team. The directors of the Newnan Baseball Association have turned the affairs of the association over entirely to Rohe. Ball players are coming in on every train.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—From this point to the finish of the races in both big leagues, each game is going to count vitally. The strain of the going through July and August either makes or breaks the pennant contenders, and only the teams with the most class live to fight it out in September. It is from now until the first of September that the clubs which make the early going will have their hardest struggle to maintain the lead. The teams have found themselves by this time if they are to arrive at all.

"I would just as soon be trailing up to July," says McGraw. "After July, I want to make the going."

It has been just this way that McGraw has played the race this year. The Phillies jumped out in front and killed off their pitching staff and some of their players before they really reached the stretch where they will need their full strength. If they could have gotten out far enough ahead to afford a slump, that would have been a different matter, but the Giants managed to hang to their heels, which is the most exasperating and heart-breaking thing that can happen to a ball club.

* * *

THE race in the American League has assumed a very different aspect from the one in the National, for class told from the get-away in that argument. Even rival American Leaguers admit that the Athletics have shown all the class of the circuit so far, and they have opened up such a nice gap now they can afford a comfortable slump. At the beginning of the season, the outlook was for one of those nip and tuck affairs in both leagues, but the outlook was badly upset in the American. The Boston Red Sox and the Washington Club were to abound with class, while something was expected of the White Sox and little thought of Cleveland.

Boston has been a pitiable failure and disappointment. The team is going slightly better now, but there was plenty of room for improvement. Even should the club regain the old stride that carried it to a world's championship last year, it does not strike me it would have a chance with the Athletics now. It must be remembered that the Philadelphia club is playing much better ball than it did last summer when it slopped through its schedule, feeling confident that no team was ever created which could beat it to the pennant. There is a grave doubt in my mind whether the Red Sox could have defeated the Athletics last season if they had performed as they are going this year.

* * *

"THE Athletics have the class of this league," a player on a rival American League team told me the other day. "They are not overlooking any opportunities this summer, either. Mack has his pitching staff going as well, if not better, than any in the league, and it was supposed to be his weakness. It has been largely through clever handling that Mack has achieved these results with his pitchers.

In the first place, he fixed Bender so that he would work his best this season and he did this through one of the well-known Mack methods, a promised reward at the end of the season for delivering the goods. Then he worked his youngsters with great wisdom, getting them used to the big league ways, while the pitchers on the other clubs had not yet gotten the spring rust out of their arms and the going was easier. In this way they acquired confidence in themselves. Then Mack got to taking the squabs out of the games and putting in a veteran when his team acquired a lead of a couple of runs to make it sure.

"Connie fooled Griffith in Washington recently when he sent both Bender and Plank out in front of the bench to warm up before the game and hid Bush behind the grandstand where he worked his arm out. When the game began, he sat Plank and Bender down on the bench and sent Bush to the box, figuring on taking a chance with a youngster in the game with Johnson and working his veterans against the easier Washington pitchers. Bush got away with the game. Mack was always a great man to jockey his players."

A HUNDRED.

The shades of night were falling fast
When through a baseball field there passed
A youth who sadly shook his head,
And this is all the athlete said:
"$100."

He fain would swing a thousand thumps
Upon the guy they call the umps.
But if he hit the umps a crack
That little clout would set him back $100.

Oh, it is great to be a star
And give the umps an awful jar,
But if you act as white men do
To find that there accrues to you $100.

Nevertheless, when Mr. Coulon stalls off a conflict with Mr. Williams, he shows that he possesses considerable intellect.

We may thank the Athletics for the fact that no baseball writer will have the nerve to spring anything about a "crucial series" in the American League.

Frank Gotch says he will meet the winner o the Roler-Cutler match, showing that he still has faith in the one-per-minute theory.

Atlantans Still In at Augusta

Carter, Orr and Ramspeck Win

AUGUSTA, GA., July 3.—Ideal weather conditions prevailed and there was a large gallery on the third day of the South Atlantic tennis tournament here. The semi-finals in the ladies' singles were completed and the finals are being played to-day. In the lower frame of the semi-finals in ladies' singles Miss Adger defeated Miss Perry, 6-2, 6-2. The winner plays Mrs. Robert Johnson in the finals.

The following were the results Wednesday in the men's singles:

Erwin defeated Fletcher, 6-2, 6-1; Carter defeated E. S. Waring, 6-2, 6-2; Ramspeck defeated Garrett, 6-4, 7-5. Erwin and Orr had played two sets when darkness interrupted. Erwin won the first set, 6-4, and Orr won the second, 6-3.

The following were the results in the men's doubles:

Harper and White defeated Horkan and Nixon, 6-3, 6-2; Waring brothers defeated Nurnberger and Roseman, 6-0, 6-3; Brinson and Granch defeated Lee and T. Cumming, 6-2, 6-3; Ramspeck and Orr defeated Wilkins and Bussell, 6-1, 6-0; Kennedy and Capers defeated Barrett and Evans, 6-2, 6-4; Gary and Sims defeated Stratton and VonSprecken, 6-0, 6-0; Hall and Parks defeated Birkmire and Cully, 6-1, 6-1.

Consolations: A. W. Harper defeated Ransom, 6-1, 6-1; Stulb defeated Harris, 6-2, 6-4; Wilson defeated J. Cumming, 7-5, 2-6, 6-2. Sims defeated Purdy, 6-2, 6-3; Ferris defeated Schweers, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4; Capers defeated Bredenburg, 6-4, 6-3; Wright defeated Averill, 6-0, 6-4; Birkmire defeated Johnson, 6-1, 6-3.

Star Athletes Will Perform on July 4

At 9:45 Fourth of July morning the first call will be sounded for the first heat of the first race of Atlanta's first big track and field meet at Piedmont Park under the auspices of the Department of Playgrounds.

Thanks to the untiring work of Joe Bean, manager of playgrounds, the affair needs only good weather to be a tremendous success. In the nine events that will be run there are 175 entries. Of course this does not mean 175 entrants, for there are many duplications, but any way you figure it, it will be the biggest meet ever held in Atlanta.

This steeplechase event will start at the top of the hill at Jackson and Tenth Streets, and the course will extend down the hill, through the lake and back to the judges' stand.

All contestants will be expected to furnish their own numbers.

On account of the large entry list two events will be called at a time. Here is the order of events:

100-yard dash. Trial heats.
Pole vault. Shot put.
100-yard dash. Final heat.
Running high jump. 880-yard run.
Running broad jump. 440-yard dash.
Hammer throw. Steeplechase.

JOURNEY TO EUROPE MAY COST JOHNSON $45,000

CHICAGO, July 3.—Argument was heard this morning on the motion entered by United States District Attorney Wilkerson asking that the $30,000 bond given by [illegible] prize-fighter, on eleven indictments under the Mann white slave act for which he has not yet been tried, be forfeited.

Appeal bonds for $15,000 also are pending against Johnson. In the bonds given in the untried indictments, there is a provision that the negro must not leave the jurisdiction of the District Court of Northern Illinois. It is because of this provision that Mr. Wilkerson has asked that the bonds be forfeited. Johnson is on a ship bound for Europe.

U. S. FARM NEED CO-OPERATION ENVOY SAYS

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, July 3.—The co-operative principle in agriculture is simply the lesson learned from the practices of "big business," in which dollars have combined for efficiency and economy.

There is, however, this difference: Industrial combinations seek more than mere economy and add to their profits through monopolistic control. In agriculture there are too many producers scattered over too wide an area to permit an organization that could control the market.

American consumers need have no fear upon that score if co-operation is adopted among American farmers; rather may the consumers hope for freer competition through the influence of farmers' co-operative organizations upon existing middlemen and trusts.

The operations of even a highly developed type of Co-operative Sales Society among the farmers would be limited to reducing the cost of distribution and to eliminating the profits of the middlemen.

Protection for Consumers.

It would mean increased profits for the farmers without an increased price to consumers. Co-operation among the farmers for the sale of foodstuffs, however, can not, I believe, be brought about upon any considerable scale until the farmers are placed upon a better financial basis through the extension of their credit facilities. The basis of the agricultural credit system of Europe underlies all other forms of agricultural co-operation.

There are many objections raised against the adoption of co-operative credit societies of the European type among American farmers. In conversation with experts in the field during this trip I heard it pointed out that co-operative credit societies of the Raiffeisen type are unlikely to succeed in America because of the unwillingness of the American farmer to assume liability for his neighbor and because of the absence of "farming villages" in America.

Unfamiliarity of our farmers with each other's financial standing deters business transactions. I don't believe that snap judgment can be given upon these questions. Although I recognize the force of arguments, it does appear likely to the members of the American Commission that a land credit organization can be established in America whereby American farmers can secure mortgage loans upon better terms.

As to their short-time credit needs, their money for operating expenses, if the Raiffeisen banks can not be established, I believe something can be gained by forcing the consideration of farmers' needs as borrowers upon those who are to construct our currency banking reform legislation, but our farmers must interest themselves in the currency question to do this.

No Monopoly Is Intended.

With credit facilities improved, I believe, through co-operative organizations, our farmers can succeed in increasing their control over marketing their produce.

I don't mean control in the monopolistic sense, but control to effect economy in distribution and in order that they may receive a larger share of the profits of their sales.

Undoubtedly such a business organization among the farmers would quickly lead to an organization for the promotion of education for the stronger presentation of legislative needs of American farmers.

If American farmers could be reorganized along these lines there would be found a far closer link with the Federal Department of Agriculture than now exists.

The success attained along these lines by European farmers, especially those of Germany and Austria, has interested me greatly. The organizations of European farmers for co-operative purchasing are also of great benefit; they are very simple in principle, but to carry on the work of propagation necessary to spread the co-operative movement over so large a country as the United States will require an organization of great strength.

The American Commission should be encouraged to live and broaden its activities. Only the support of our farmers can do this.

PARADE AND RIDE FOR CONTESTANTS JULY 4

William Hamilton, 588 Woodward Avenue, one of the hustling contestants.

Promptly at 10 o'clock Friday morning, July 4, The Georgian and American ponies, which are to be awarded to the boys and girls in the contests, will start in parade formation from The Georgian and American offices in Alabama Street and proceed to Grant Park.

There will be a celebration at the park on the arrival of the parade. It is hoped that every contestant in the city and all those from out of town who can visit Atlanta for the day will forget rivalry for the day and enjoy the Fourth as the guests of The Georgian and American.

All of the features of entertainment can not now be announced. But one thing is sure, every contestant who so desires may enjoy a ride behind the ponies, and thus anticipate something of the pleasure which will belong to the winners after July 31. There will be plenty of caretakers to see that everyone gets a ride.

Although several times the contestants have been told where the ponies are kept, and while they have been invited to go and look at the little animals, not all have taken advantage of the offer. This time, however, the ponies will be on display, looking their best, and on their best behavior. There is no reason why each boy and girl in the contest should not see for himself or herself the handsome prizes so soon to be awarded.

Meanwhile, do not forget that Friday night ends the time when clubs of five subscriptions may be turned in for the big bonus offers.

A SURE REMEDY FOR LAZY LIVER

Go to Any Druggist for This Safe, Reliable Remedy and Get Your Money Back If It Fails.

There are very few remedies that gain the confidence of druggists as Dodson's Liver Tone does. All druggists sell it and back up the sale of every bottle with the money-back guarantee that the price will be refunded if it fails to give complete satisfaction.

Dodson's Liver Tone costs 50 cents a bottle. It is the safest and best remedy for torpid liver, constipation, biliousness, etc., that has ever been sold in this city. It takes the place of dangerous calomel and does not lay you up as a dose of calomel often does. A bottle in the house is as good as fifty cents in the bank. If you or your family need a liver tonic you have the medicine ready. If it fails you get your money back.

Be sure you get Dodson's Liver Tone when you ask for it. There are imitations of it that may disappoint you.

NEW SECURITIES $948,153,000 IN 6 MONTHS

World-Wide Scarcity of Capital Is Blamed for Decrease of $421,469,000.

By B. C. FORBES.

The Hearst papers' carefully compiled records show that the output of new securities by corporations for the half-year ended June 30 fell below one billion dollars.

The world-wide scarcity of capital has been wholly responsible for the falling off—companies, both railroad and industrial, would have borrowed nearer two billions had investors manifested a disposition to respond. The grand total for 1912 was $2,141,500,000, while for 1911 the figures was $1,740,000,000. The current 12 months will probably fall short of either as the demand for new issues is unlikely to become abnormal owing to the paucity of liquid capital and the very high income yields insisted upon by lenders.

The largest banking houses here and abroad are discouraging avoidable flotations in an effort to avert acute congestion. In England the half-year's applications have reached $600,000,000, an increase of $55,000,000 over a year ago, notwithstanding the unfavorable conditions that have obtained, while on the Continent the market has been so flooded that both Governmental and banking interests have taken rigid measures to stem the tide. Germany has virtually prohibited the offering of foreign issues there.

Enormous sums must still be raised by the nations that have been at war, but no big loans will be handled for any country until it has restored peace. How much France and England have quietly supplied to belligerants, however, is an interesting point upon which information is withheld.

At home a large proportion of this year's borrowing has been necessitated by the maturing of outstanding obligations.

Too often short-term notes have had to be resorted to.

Such strong roads as the Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and Baltimore & Ohio put out $20,000,000 each, while among the industrial companies, Consolidated Gas contributes $15,000,000 to the short-term total.

Notes come home to roost. Bonds stay sold, but notes return so quickly to plague their issuers. They simply, as a rule, postpone the evil day.

By next year the new currency system may facilitate the marketing of long-term bonds and also stocks, especially as latterly there has been some attempt at economy on the part of the people.

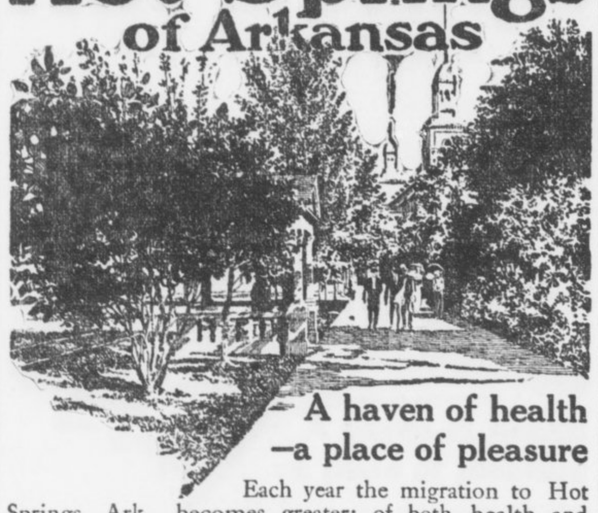

My opinion is that the security market will be able to weather the autumn without the upheaval that for months appeared inevitable. Quotations for both stocks and bonds are now on an attractive investment level and small investors will probably come forward in large numbers from now on.

June is the only month of the current year that shows an increase in offerings as compared with last year. The monthly record reads:

	Output.	Change.
January	$198,105,000	—$142,895,000
February	132,362,000	— 185,470,000
March	148,829,000	— 1,621,000
April	164,477,000	—. 53,788,000
May	123,140,000	— 81,577,000
June	181,240,000	* 43,888,000
	$48,153,000	—$421,469,000

The July total will be large, as underwriters are anxious to take advantage of the $125,000,000 "July disbursements," which are supposed to create a re-investment demand.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Drugged, Was He? He Surely Was!

One day a constable found a man lying beneath a tree. Knowing that a brand of rather prostrating corn juice was sold in that neighborhood, and thinking the man had been unwisely stacked up against it, he with considerable difficulty got him to the local jail.

Later in the day it was discovered that the victim was not reviving according to schedule and a doctor was called in.

"I thought so," mused the doctor, making a critical examination. "Officer, where did you find this man?"

"Down along the railroad track," answered the cop. "He was sleeping on a pile of railroad spikes."

"You should have called me at once," returned the doctor, continuing the diagnosis. "This man has been drugged."

"Of course he has, doc," was the prompt response of the officer. "I drug him all the way from the railroad to the jail, a matter of two hundred yards."

Forks Find the Way After Many Trials.

A Josh Whitcomb in real life was working in the fields one day when a salesman came along to sell him things to save labor. While talking to Uncle Josh the salesman noticed that he was cut and scratched all over the front of his face. In fact, he looked as if he had turned on a full head of steam and rushed through a barbed wire fence.

"You seem pretty well nicked up to-day," remarked the salesman, during the course of the conversation. "Have you been trying to shave yourself with a hay cutter?"

"No; 'twasn't thet," was the unemotional rejoinder of Uncle Josh. "My darter did it."

"Your daughter did it!" exclaimed the amazed salesman. "You don't really mean it?"

"Yaas," said Josh, with characteristic calmness, "ever since she been goin' ter thet derned boardin' school she has been makin' me eat with a fork."

Suffering Alone Far From Home.

A party of Atlanta campers took up their mountain abode in Gilmer County at nightfall in an old tumbledown hut. About 2 a. m. a polecat announced its presence in its own peculiar way. A German sat up and looked helplessly about him. The others were all sleeping peacefully.

"Mein gracious," he exclaimed, in tones of despair. "All the rest asleep und I've got to shmell it all!"

HARRIS FREED OF PERJURY CHARGE

Prosecutor Asks Verdict of "Not Guilty" for Macon Lawyer and Politician.

MACON, July 3.—Upon motion of the State a verdict of "not guilty" was directed to-day in the case of Jesse C. Harris, the Macon lawyer charged with perjury, in connection with the August, 1912, Bibb County primary.

Charles H. Hall, Jr., Congressman Bartlett's campaign manager, testified that Harris, chairman of the sub committee of the executive committee, asked him on the night of the election "How many votes Judge Bartlett needed," and that he told Harris Bartlett needed as many as he could get, this conversation taking place behind closed doors. Grand jurors testified that Harris denied under oath while a witness in the Grand Jury room that he asked Hall that q uestion.

After this and other evidence has been submitted to-day, Solicitor Ross asked the court to allow a verdict of "not guilty" to be directed.

COTTON DROPS ON BEARISH REPORT

Heavy Selling on U. S. Report. Short Interest Increased on Eve of Holiday.

AMERICAN EXCHANGES WILL CLOSE FRIDAY

It being the Fourth of July and a general holiday, all American exchanges will be closed Friday. All exchanges will observe an extra holiday Saturday.

NEW YORK, July 3.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day the tone was steady and prices were 1 to 3 points higher. This was a shade better than had been expected on cables. The upturn was due to local covering, chiefly in anticipation of the Government report due at noon.

The weather was considered favorble, as showery conditions prevailed throughout the western sections of the belt.

The Government report placed the cotton acreage of 1913 at 35,622,000, showing an increase of 2½ per cent over last year's acreage and a condition of 81.8, against 79.1 a month ago. The report was much better than expected. The average trader construed it as bearish and caused heavy selling by street and local traders. Spot houses also sold. Most of the selling is believed to be for short accounts. The buying was scattered, coming from commission houses and those who liquidated at a higher level.

July was depressed to 12.03, against an opening of 12.10; August fell 11 points. New crop positions were heavily sold and followed the downward movement by dropping some 12 to 15 points from the opening range.

The impression seemed to prevail that there has been some improvement in the crop since the report was made up and lower prices are inevitable. The bull element contend that a 15,000,000-bale crop is by no means assured, claiming that we have to go through two of the most critical months of the season and that much cotton will be required to satisfy the world's need.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net decline of 9 to 12 points from the final quotations of Wednesday.

Following are 1 p. m. bids in New York: July 12.04, August 12.06, October 11.41, January 11.33.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 3.—Political news was bad this morning. London reports all hope of peace abandoned. Serious battle raging in the Balkans. Liverpool came in about 2 points lower than due. Spots 1 point higher.

It is evidently thought that the general unfavorable outlook is some compensation for any bullish impression the Bureau reports may have.

Weather developments are again favorable. Generally fair weather prevails over Alabama and the Atlantics, while it is cloudy over rest of the belt. The Central States, including Arkansas and Tennessee, had a fine general rainfall. There was little rain in Texas, except in the eastern section. Indications are for partly cloudy weather with a tendency toward clearing, although some scattered showers are likely in the central belt.

Prior to the Bureau publication the market was steady around 11.37 for October. Selling is restricted, as the tendency is to look for a low Bureau condition, some views being under 80 on the ground that private authorities all give only a fraction of a point improvement during the month, and the May Government condition was 79.1.

The week-end statistics will not be given out until Monday.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: "The South appears to be bearish on its prospects of the new crop."

Logan & Bryan: "We favor a scalping position, inclining toward the long side on all easy periods."

Harris, Winthrop & Co.: "We deem it the more judicious policy to buy on setbacks."

IMPORTANT CHANGE OF SCHEDULE.

TIFTON SHIPS SECOND CAR OF TOMATOES TO NEW YORK

TIFTON, July 3.—The second carload of tomatoes from Tifton left last night for New York. The car contained about 350 crates and was loaded by a number of the largest truck growers of this section.

A telegram from New York announces that the first carload was sold at $2.25 per crate for the choice varieties. After selling agents' commission has been taken out and freight charges deducted, the car of 364 crates will net the truckers an average of $1.60 per crate.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—With the exception of local showers in the Upper Lake Region fair weather will prevail to-night and Friday over the Eastern half of the country with lower temperatures in the Northern Upper Lake region. It will be warmer Friday in the Middle Atlantic States and continue warm in the interior, except as above mentioned.

Forecast.

Forecast until 7 p. m. Friday:

Georgia—Generally fair to-night and Friday.

Virginia, North and South Carolina, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee—Generally fair to-night and Friday.

Mississipi—Local showers to-night or Friday.

Louisiana—Local showers to-night or Friday.

East Texas—Fair in west and south; showers in northeast portion to-night or Friday.

West Texas—Fair to-night or Friday.

HOGS IN BIG DEMAND.

CHICAGO, July 3.—With 60,000 less hogs at eleven markets this week than last, prices are going skyward, especially where quality is concerned. The 9c quotations was restored to-day, top hogs making 9.05, but the gap between shipping and packing grades is widening. There were only 67,000 at eleven points to-day, against 91,000 last week. Since January 1 these markets have received only 12,911,000, against 14,155,000 last year.

Cattle trade was nominally steady at the lowest basis of the week. In the sheep house, demand was active at strong prices.

STOCKS DULL ON EVE OF HOLIDAY

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Following a dull, heavy opening of the stock market to-day, some of the issues rallied and made partial recoveries. At the outset practically all stocks were lower, the declines embracing the following: Utah Copper, ½; United States Steel common, ⅜; Amalgamated Copper, ⅜; American Smelting, ⅜; Atchison, ¼; Chino Copper, ⅜; Erie, ½; Union Pacific, ¼; Reading, ¼; St. Paul, ¼. Steel recovered and gained ⅛. Canadian Pacific was ¼ up at the commencement, but later increased its advance. Northern Pacific, which began ⅛ lower, recovered and made a fractional gain.

There was some covering for protection over the three-day holiday, beginning to-morrow.

The curb market was weak.

Americans and Canadian Pacific in the London market lacked stability.

There was little change in prices after the first fifteen minutes of depression. Union Pacific, Reading, Copper and St. Paul were up ¼. Steel advanced ⅜ to 52⅞. Smelter up ⅛. Other issues made slight gains and the tone in the last few minutes for the forenoon was firm.

Call money was loaning at 3 per cent.

Wheat—No. 2 red ....87¼@88
Oats—No. 2 40

CHICAGO, July 3.—To-day's session in wheat was largely of an evening-up character over the three days of rest. The offerings were rather scant at the outset and prices were ¼@½c higher. Northwestern cars were smaller than a week ago. Cables were higher, although the crop prospects abroard and conditions surrounding the spring wheat crop in this country were favorable.

Corn was ¼@⅝c better.

Oats were unchanged to ⅛@¼c higher, mainly in sympathy with strength in corn and wheat.

Provisions were stronger with hogs.

MODERN MILLER CROP REPORT.

ST. LOUIS, July 3.—Winter wheat harvest is almost completed under favorable conditions. Nearly all wheat has been cut and is in the shock and thrashing is well under way. Soft winter wheat generally thrashing out well. Good yields and good quality are the rule. In some sections, however, returns from hard wheat belt are disappointing both as to yield and quality, the latter being irregular. A factor in the harvest situation is the scarcity of labor and this is causing delay.

A PROCLAMATION

By His Excellency John M. Slaton, Governor.

State of Georgia, Executive Department Atlanta

Whereas a vacancy will soon exist in the office of United States Senator from Georgia for the term beginning March 4, 1913, and

Whereas said vacancy can be filled by popular vote only, the General Assembly having provided by Act for holding a special election to fill said vacancy,

Therefore, I, John M. Slaton, Governor of said State, by authority of Act approved July 1, 1913, do issue this my proclamation ordering a special election for United States Senator to fill the vacancy above described, to be held on the 15th day of July, 1913, under the laws of this State governing elections and the Act above referred to.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed this the 1st day of July, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirteen. JOHN M. SLATON, Governor.

By the Governor:
PHILIP COOK, Secretary of State.
Attest: A. H. ULM, Secretary Executive Department 7-2-24

No Place for Papers

THE OFFICE DESK OR TABLE IS certainly not a safe place for such valuable papers as stocks, bonds, insurance policies, mortgages, deeds, notes, etc., and yet many a so-called "good" business man has sacrificed some such paper upon this altar of carelessness.

If you have been a victim, you know the price of your carelessness. If you have not yet suffered such a loss, don't take any more chances, but come in and let us assign you a Box in our fire-proof and burglar-proof Vault. The cost is very nominal and the protection absolute.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Feather-Eating Is Largely Caused By Crowded Runs

Soft-Shell Eggs Due to Various Things—Remember Value of Meat in Some Form.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Feather-eating is largely caused by crowded runs, with nothing to induce the fowls to exercise. They bolt their food and then stand around ready for mischief. The careless owner will usually let lice and mites get the start of him on the poultry; they lay eggs upon the stem of the feather around the vent. They irritate the parts and in their endeavors to rid themselves of them they get a taste of the sap, or at times, blood, in the stem of the new feathers; this causes them to continue their investigation. Other hens see what's going on and are soon helping in the removing of feathers, until it is soon a flock of feather eaters. The skin is bare and red, and sometimes the work is carried still further and they get to picking the raw flesh until it is raw and sore. The remedy is to feed lightly of a well-balanced ration and make them dig for every bit they get. Feed some fresh cut bone or raw meat, if possible. Clean them of all lice and mites and put them in the pink of condition, and there will be little excuse for such work. The leaders or worst ones at the business can be very materially checked by taking a sharp pocket knife and trimming the sharp point or curve of the upper madible or beak. They are then unable to pick so easily.

Many soft-shelled eggs are layed at this time of the year, due to various causes. Many of us are so eager for all the eggs that we can get that we push our hens for all they are worth, feeding rich mashes and adding egg producers at all times, most of which contain stimulants of various kinds. Heavy mash feeding tends to produce fat, especially on the two-year-old hens; over-fat hens often lay soft-shelled eggs.

Where your hens have this soft-egg tendency, let up on the soft feed to a certain extent at least and feed more of the dry grain with a good supply of green stuff, and do not forget to supply the oyster shell.

Bowel troubles of all kinds are usually caused by feeding sloppy or sour feed. Filthy quarters and exposure to sudden changes of the weather will affect the little ones very quickly. Often a lack of good clean grains, both in the shape of cracked grains and dry mashes. When the trouble has already appeared it is best handled by feeding well-cooked rice, dry bread or cracker crumbs soaked in hot milk. As soon as an improvement is noticed alternate the rice and bread and milk with other things. Keep the little ones warm when the weather changes to cold, and furnish shade for them in very hot times.

Remember the value of meat in some form for growing chicks, as well as to the laying hens. The cheapest shape to furnish it is in fresh cut green bone. Buy a good cutter, one that will do the work in a workmanlike manner, fasten it up somewhere so that it will be perfectly solid, and it will be but little trouble to operate. You can usually get the bones and scraps fresh from the market. They will save them for you by paying them a little each time, amounting to a quarter or a half-cent per pound. This will make the youngsters a month old grow up like weeds. Start them on it gradually a little at a time and increase it as they become accustomed to it. It should be fed at least twice a week, and a little every day is better, if you can have it. In the absence of this, use the dried beef scraps, by all means, which can be obtained at all poultry supply houses at from three and a half to five cents per pound, according to the quality purchased. It is really safer to feed to young chicks than the fresh bone, but does not supply so much nitriment, of course. In feeding it to young chicks it can be sifted through a coarse seive and the coarser particles given to the laying hens.

Do not neglect the dust bath for the laying hens, especially at this season when the weather is getting hot and lice and mites are multiplying by the millions. See that the dust is perfectly dry and the addition of some sulphur will help to make the dose more effectual. The roost poles and nest boxes should be movable so that they can be taken out and cleaned and given a dose of kerosene, or a mixture of kerosene and naphtholine flakes, about a half a pound to a gallon of oil, to which add a pint of gasoline. This should be applied with a small-spouted oil can to the roost poles, boxes and sides of the house where the poles rest. Prepare your mixture just as you are going to use it. To kill head lice that cling to the head of both young and old chickens, mix a little oil of tar with vaseline and rub onto the head occasionally.

The laying contests being conducted in different sections of the country will prove the benefits of the trap nest. They are bringing out some wonderful results. Some years ago a hen that would lay 125 to 150 eggs per year was counted a great layer, but now they are getting 200 and 250-egg hens.

FOR SALE

ON PIEDMONT AVENUE, near school, on the car line, we have one of the best bungalows to be found in the city. Built by the present owner for a home out of the best material and workmanship. Never expected to sell it, but keep it for a home. The lot cost him $3,000 vacant. If vacant to-day could not be bought for $4,000.

This bungalow has seven rooms—fine shaded east front lot—all conveniences, one year old.

The owner's work has called him to Florida, and he must sell by August 1.

We have had this place listed at $7,000, and cheap at that—but the owner says he must sell—therefore, he is putting the price down to $6,250. This should sell at once.

See this at once. We can make terms.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage. It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

Some details of considerable interest to building managers and tenants were given out Thursday in regard to the lease on the Silvey Building and plans for improving the same.

The Silvey Building Company leased the nine-story basement building from the John Silvey estate for 20 years, agreeing to pay $8,000 a year for the first three years and $12,000 a year for the remaining 17 years. This makes an aggregate rental for the 20 years of $228,000, or an average of $11,400 a year. The Silvey Building Company expects to sub-lease to various firms and individuals, several leases already having been made. The return under the sub-lease arrangement will be about $40,000 a year, the basement and ground floor netting $17,000, and the solid floors above $3,000 each.

Improvements now being put in will cost the company $67,000. These consist of a thorough renovation and the installation of two elevators and mahogany similar to that used in the Third National Bank Building. The structure will be fireproof, and a feature of the improvements will be the placing of windows in the wall that faces Peachtree. This wall was built 20 years ago under party arrangement between the late George W. Collier and the late John Silvey.

The construction work is in charge of W. E. Mashburn, who expects to have the upper stories ready October 1. Part of the work is done, and the business offices of The Georgian and Hearst's Sunday American are located on the ground floor, with frontage on both Decatur Street and Edgewood Avenue. Other tenants will be Chess Lagomarsino, E. C. Johnson and R. M. McRaney. These have already signed up for space.

Interest in Mr. Grant's Plans.

Much interest centered Thursday in the announcement that John W. Grant will build on Pace's Ferry Road, a short distance west of Buckhead and a few rods east of such property owners as Robert F. Maddox, James L. Dickey, Jr., M. C. Kiser, J. N. Goddard, Morris Brandon and others. Mr. Grant's handsome town house on the east side of Peachtree between Pine and Currier Streets has been crowded and he will soon build a fine country residence. He has extensive acreage and will lend his efforts toward making a handsome country estate similar to the others in the vicinity. W. T. Downing, the well-known architect, is drawing some plans for Mr. Grant and expects to have them out soon.

In this connection it was announced that a new roadway is to be cut through from Peachtree to a point fronting Mr. Grant's place. This will be known as Andrews Drive, being a continuation of the thoroughfare that now starts west of Colonel Walter P. Andrews' estate and joins Habersham Road in Peachtree Heights Park. Property owners will defray the expense of the road work. The plan has been laid before the County Commissioners and has their approval.

Pace's Ferry Road has attractions for still other residents. It is being talked that John D. Little will build close to the Grant place. He bought two years ago a large lot at the southeast corner of Habersham Road for about $25,000 and has since refused handsome profits and will fix no price to sell it.

Meeting of Renting Agents.

The matter of more signs than one on houses to be rented was discussed freely at a meeting in Charles P. Glover's office Wednesday afternoon. No action was taken, the desire of those present being to postpone the meeting until next Wednesday at the same hour.

Big Deals Pending.

Several large real estate deals are in contract stage and will be announced shortly. One of these has to do with an apartment house on the North Side, at a nice figure.

Change in Offices.

Galloway & Smith, real estate agents, have moved their office from 516 to 213 Empire Building, where they have acquired more floor space. The Lockridge-McClain-Moon Company are now located at 4 North Pryor Street, having moved from the old Y. M. C. A. Building on Auburn Avenue.

J. Frank Meador to Build.

J. Frank Meador will begin soon the erection of an attractive residence on the West Fourteenth Street lot which he purchased Saturday, according to information given out Thursday. The site is 50 by 175 feet, on the north side of the street, half a block from West Peachtree. The lot was bought from Lavender Ray for $3,000 cash, or at the rate of $60 a front foot. A few years ago lots on West Fourteenth, between the Peachtrees, could be bought for $20 a foot, while the ordinary time price to-day is $70 and $80 for elevated parcels.

Skyscraper Rentals Increase.

With the expiration of leases on offices in certain skyscrapers this fall new rates will prevail. This is made necessary, declare the office building men, by the increased cost scale in other lines essential to the skyscraper business. Recently the manager of a leading office building gave notice of an increase to the New York home office of a local branch. The manager replied by letter that ordinarily his concern was opposed to paying more rent this year, but that he would not contest the raise in Atlanta. This was taken by the skyscraper man to indicate that this firm enjoyed a good measure of prosperity in this section.

All tenants in office buildings need not be alarmed, however. Not all the buildings will raise rents, and where an increase is contemplated it concerns the lease which is about up, and not the one that has some time to run.

The fundamental principles of the Owen-Glass bill are, first, that the chief function of the banks of the country should be to foster commerce, trade and agriculture, and not speculation or underwriting syndicates; and, second, that the right to issue money is inherent in the Government, and that any association of private bankers vested with the power to issue money for general circulation, MUST be under the supervision and control of the Government; and, third, that all profits from such banking privileges in excess of 5 per cent return upon the capital furnished by the private bankers to such central association shall be paid over to the Government.

Under the new currency act, the entire operation of the national banks and the issue of "emergency currency" of the reserve banks shall be under the control of a Federal Board of seven members sitting at Washington. The Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture and the Comptroller of the Currency will be three of the members. The other four members, one of whom must be an experienced banker, are to be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Members of the Board are to serve for eight years, unless removed by the President.

This Federal Reserve Board will have complete veto power over, though not complete power to initiate action by, twelve Federal reserve banks distributed geographically according to the needs and volume of banking business in all parts of the country.

Every national bank shall be compelled to subscribe to the extent of 10 per cent of its own stock to the capital stock of the Federal Reserve Bank of its own district. Every bank shall be required, also, to keep at least 5 per cent of its reserve cash in the Federal Reserve Bank of its district.

None of the twelve Federal Reserve Banks shall accept deposits from individuals, but each shall represent all the banks in its district having Federal charters and shall also be Government depositories. In times of financial stringency any bank may take to the Federal Reserve Bank of its district merchants' acceptances or short-term notes ARISING OUT OF COMMERCIAL TRANSACTIONS for rediscount and obtain from the Federal Reserve Bank United States Treasury notes (currency) for 75 per cent of the face value of such notes.

The notes so rediscounted are to be limited solely to commercial bills payable within from forty-five to a hundred and twenty days, and no notes based upon stock or bond transactions shall be discounted. The notes so discounted will be backed by the entire assets of the bank pledging the notes, by the credit of the individual borrowers, and by the assets of the Federal Reserve Bank. The amount of paper which any individual bank may rediscount is limited to one-half its paid-in capital.

Each Federal Reserve Bank will be required at all times to keep on hand in actual gold 33 per cent of the aggregate amount of the commercial notes it rediscounts for the banks of its district.

The Federal Reserve Banks will obtain United States notes, or "emergency currency," to pay for these merchants' notes from the Federal Reserve Board at Washington at such rates of interest as the Federal Board shall fix from time to time.

The Owens-Glass bill in its present form does not provide specifically enough that the rate of discount shall be such that the "emergency currency" so issued shall automatically return to the Treasury and be canceled when the "emergency" is past. This emergency is usually a temporary panic, or the annual crop-moving in the autumn of every year when at least three hundred million dollars in currency is needed to pay the American farmer for his harvest.

The profits of the twelve district reserve banks will go to the national banks which contribute to its stock and reserve funds to the extent of a 5 per cent cumulative dividend annually, and no further. All profits in excess of 5 per cent will be used, first, to create a surplus fund equal to 20 per cent of the capital stock of each reserve bank, and after such reserve fund amounts to 20 per cent of such capital, all further profits go to the Government. Thereby all temptation to directors of the reserve banks to undertake undue risks or embark on unsafe financiering is removed.

The national banks who are stockholders elect six, and the President of the United States appoints three, of the nine directors of each district reserve bank. Three of the six directors elected by the banks must be men "fairly representative of the business and commercial interests of the district and not directors of any bank."

:: A Sermon for Many ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WHEN the long, hard day has vanished and you seek your waiting bed,
Try to live the dead hours over ere the pillow soothes your head.
Try to find some explanation for each thoughtless thing you've done;
Try to make some reparation for the trouble you've begun
After all the petty gossip that you scattered through the day,
Think of how you knocked your neighbor, going calmly on his way.
Drag the unkind slings and arrows down from Memory's dusty shelf—
Then stand up before the mirror and begin to knock yourself.

Do not stand there smug and smirking, do not smooth your towsled hair!
Shake your fist at your reflection! Give yourself an icy glare!
Don't resolve that you are handsome when you ought to know you're not;
Rather tell the faithful mirror that it flatters you a lot.
Make wry faces by the dozen; try a cold, contemptuous sneer—
Such as you have tried on others. Give yourself a mocking leer.
Then the mirror will remind you, as all honest mirrors do,
That you're not one man in thousands—that you're only LITTLE YOU!

:: How to Deal With a Girl's Love Fancies ::

By DOROTHY DIX.

A FATHER, who has a pretty, bright 18-year-old daughter for whom he has made many sacrifices to give advantages, is much distressed because she imagines herself in love with a callow youth of the same age, and he wants to know if there is any way in which he can keep her from wrecking her life by marrying this boy.

Surely. Here are a few simple home remedies for breaking up undesirable matches, that are guaranteed to work if applied with tact and discretion.

First, drop all opposition to the suitor. Quit abusing him. Just remember that romance thrives on difficulties, and that when you put a young man in the position of a poor, persecuted martyr, you simply crown him with a halo in the girl's sight. Also you make her his champion, and to back up her arguments in his favor she shuts her eyes to all of his faults, and not only magnifies his virtues but invents new ones for him.

Every novel represents the heroine as defying her parents, and her friends, and the general public, and being true to a noble, but misunderstood, young man, and as having her judgment justified by his turning out to be a duke in disguise, or getting elected President of the United States.

Cupid At His Worst.

When you oppose a silly young girl in a love affair, and read the riot act to her, you give her a chance to visualize herself in that poetic role, and it makes her do her clothes up in a bundle and sneak out of the house, and elope with the man that you have applied every opprobrious epithet to of which you could think. It is a matter of common knowledge that people never marry the nice, suitable individuals their families have picked out for them, and that nothing blights love's young dream like everybody smiling a blessing on it.

Yet in the face of this advanced information about how Cupid acts, parents persist in precipitating bad matches by frankly opposing them.

DOROTHY DIX.

Therefore, instead of forbidding Sam the house, invite him in. Have him around early and often, and give Mamie an overdose of his society, and before you know it they will have quarreled. And this nice hot weather, when nerves and temper are on edge, is a psychological moment in which to try the experiment. Ninety-nine in the shade is not propitious for growing sentiment. And I should casually remark to Mamie that, of course, if she was so fond of Sam and found her highest happiness in his company that there was no use in wasting any money on any other pleasure for her. Such as going off for a summer trip, for instance.

Don't abuse Sam. Don't discourse upon his weakness or his faults. Make fun of them. Point out his little eccentricities of manner or speech, and if you can enlist the assistance of some friend in this, all the better. A young girl can stand anything but ridicule.

She will defy you and marry a drunkard, or a gambler, or a man with a hectic past, but she will quail before the knowledge that people laugh at a man for eating peas with his knife, or using bad grammar, or being a rube.

Another effective way of breaking off an undesirable match is to send the girl away on a trip, or to make a good long visit. Propinquity is responsible for more marriages than anything else. At the love time of life a girl is sure to imagine that she cherishes a deathless passion for any good-looking man who happens to be in sight, but get her away from him and his spell is broken.

Cured Girl's Infatuation,

She sees other men. She gets a new standard of comparison, with the almost invariable result that in six months she wouldn't look at the man that she thought she was so crazy to marry. It's a case of counter irritation, and it works out as well in love as it does in medicine.

Still another way to deal with the situation is to quit theorizing and preaching about it, and give the girl a living picture of the way the marriage she proposes to make would work out in real life. I once knew a wise father who followed this course.

His daughter, a dainty, cultivated girl, who had been reared amidst the most refined surroundings, thought she was in love with a handsome young man who was himself coarse and vulgar, and came from a family far below the girl's in social status.

After every argument had been used in vain to prevail upon the girl not to make a match that was bound to bring her disillusion and unhappiness, her father said to her: "I want you to go and spend a month with this young man's family, who will be your family if you marry him. You will bear his name, his position will be yours, and he will have a right to expect you to live as his mother and sisters do."

Corned Beef and Cabbage.

Well, the girl went. She associated with his frowsy mother and sisters, and was bored to death by their ignorant conversation. She saw his father and his brothers sitting around the house in their stocking feet, and with their coats and collars off, smoking pipes.

She ate corned beef and cabbage dinners. She participated in parties where they rushed the growler, and sang rag-time to a pianola accompaniment, and at the end of a week she came back home cured.

Still another father that I knew kept his daughter from marrying a drunkard by taking her where she saw him in his cups. It was one thing to have the young man appear before her pale, poetic, wistful-eyed, repentant, telling her that she could save him by marrying him, and another to behold him maudlin, nauseated, a thing of disgust that made her turn from him with loathing.

Oh, there are many ways to break up an undesirable match—absence, ridicule, the substitution of a new toy for the old, bumping a girl up against the reality, even dropping a sly hint to the man that he's throwing himself away on the girl, and that Mamie is delicate, or has ways, or that she has a temper concealed about her angelic person, or that she's extravagant. There are forty-seven different varieties of ways of turning the trick, and all of them work except forbidding the banns. That merely eggs on the wedding.

Education Will Banish Wars

A Very Remarkable Incident on the Bloody Field of Gettysburg Proves This Belief. Conscientious Soldiers Will Bring Peace.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

ONE of the most significant revelations of the mind of the soldier in battle that I have ever seen is in a letter from a Confederate soldier to General J. L. Chamberlain, which the general quotes in his dramatic story of the awful battle of Gettysburg in HEARST'S MAGAZINE for June.

The letter is too long to be inserted in this brief article, but you should read it in full, and in connection with the vivid picture of the scenes of that heroic contest (the mightiest battle ever fought on American soil), in order to understand its significance.

Impossible to Pull Trigger.

The incident to which the letter refers occurred during the struggle among the rocks for the possession of the famous "Round Tops." The writer, who was a member of an Alabama regiment, had placed himself in a secure position between two rocks, where, unseen himself, he had a clear view of the nearby Federal lines, and particularly of General Chamberlain, whose rank he recognized by his uniform.

He knew the importance of picking off officers, and he drew a bead on General Chamberlain, resting his gun on a rock to get a sure aim. But, as he was about to pull the trigger, a sudden qualm arrested him, and he did not fire. Then he grew ashamed of his weakness and drew a bead a second time.

"I had you, perfectly certain. But that same queer something shut right down on me. I couldn't pull the trigger, and I gave it up—that is, your life."

There are plenty of stories of the blind madness and of the unnatural calm that, at different times, possess the soldier in battle, making him, in one case, shoot and thrust and strike almost without volition, and, in the other case, perform similar acts with the cold, unsympathetic precision of a machine; but it is rare, outside of fiction, to hear of an incident like this, where conscience asserts its rights.

His Own Better Nature.

No doubt some persons would see, in the resistless impulse that restrained that shot, a mystic influence which, for some providential purpose, paralyzed the finger that was curved to press the trigger; but such ideas belong to the days when the Olympian gods were believed to guide the spear of Achilles or to throw a mantle of invisibility about Hector.

We should rather ascribe the incident to the personality of the soldier, whose hand was arrested by the expostulation of his own better nature. Viewed from that point, it becomes significant of the growth of moral sentiment, which, in the end, will banish war altogether. Perhaps that merciful Confederate at Gettysburg was, in a sense, faithless to his cause. Who can say that, if the shot had been fired, the result of the struggle might not have been different? The fall of a leader has lost many a battle. Very likely if that act of mercy had been witnessed by the commander of the Alabama regiment he would have cut the conscientious soldier down with his sword as a recreant from duty!

Yet the man who spared the general's life afterward declared that he was glad that he could not press the trigger, and every generous mind approves his act and his sentiment.

In former days, when most battles were fought hand to hand and foot to foot, the FUROR CERTAMINIS (fury of the fight) had no such interruptions. Moral sentiment counted for little on the battlefield. There was no time for it to assert itself, even if it existed then as widely as it exists to-day. The dreadful scenes of slaughter that attended Caesar's campaigns in Gaul, and the sacks of cities in the Thirty Years' War, would be impossible now among civilized people.

Education Will Bring Peace.

When a modern soldier, secure in his position, sights along his gun at an enemy, his mind is in a state for reflection upon the nature and consequences of his intended act of slaughter, and the mere fact that he can strike at a distance and unseen may restrain him, as it did in this case, from striking at all. He balances his public duty against his personal conscience, and unless the former overwhelmingly appeals to him, the latter may prevail. If he can see a chance for mercy he will exercise it.

All this shows plainly the direction which the advocates of universal peace (and we are all such advocates, though we may differ in our ideas about methods) should take in order to bring about the result they aim at. It is the direction of EDUCATION. A gun in the hands of a conscientious soldier is a moral force for peace, and so is a powerful battle fleet in the hands of a great, civilized nation.

The Treaty of Tien-Tsin

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE Treaty of Tien--tsin, concluded 55 years ago, will probably loom large in the history of the time to come, very much larger than it does to-day.

It was about the year 1517 (the year of the great Reformation) that China began to be vaguely known to Europeans. The Jesuits appeared among the Celestials about 1525, and in 1790 the English figure among the "Foreign Devils." The Englishman is nothing if not commercial, and, thinking that he saw a good thing in opium, began a quarrel with the Chinaman over that drug that lasted for years; of which, so far as the honor of England is concerned, the least said the better.

In 1857 took place the war between England and China, which ended with the total destruction of the Chinese fleet by Commodores Elliot and Seymour, and the perpetual establishment of John Bull in the island of Hongkong.

The Treaty of Tien-tsin, which clinched the war of 1857, created a new departure on the part of the quaint and ancient people of the Flowery Kingdom. Among its provisions were: The establishment of ambassadorships at both courts, a larger freedom of trade, the toleration of the Christian religion, a revision of the tariff, and the guarantee that the term "barbarian" should no longer be applied to Europeans.

With this Treaty of Tien-tsin begins Modern China. But a little more than half a century has elapsed—an insignificant period in the evolution of a great nation's life—and yet we already have some pretty strong intimations of the possibilities of the future. Beyond a doubt it behooves the white man the world over to prepare for those possibilities, if we may not say probabilities.

The yellow men number at least 500,000,000. From the Japanese we learn what 50,000,000 of yellow men are able to do; and from that we are in a position to guess with a fair degree of accuracy what 500,000,000 of yellow men can do if fully prepared. With thousands of miles of Pacific seacoast, does it not behoove the United States to look well to the ways and means of its supremacy on the great Western waters?

SCIPLE CASE SETTLED OUT OF COURT

NEIGHBORS WITHDRAW CHARGE

Paper Signed by Mrs. Hall Agreeing Not to Prosecute for Slander.

Charge of disorderly conduct made against George W. Sciple, wealthy official of the Sciple Lime and Cement Company by William Bearden, Charles T. Turner and William L. Hancock, residents in the fashionable district of Ponce DeLeon Avenue was dismissed late Thursday afternoon when the case came up before Recorder Broyles.

Sciple, however, was fined $25.75 and costs for intoxication. When the case was called, General Clifford L. Anderson, representing Sciple, addressed the court and said that Sciple admitted to having been intoxicated on the night when the disturbance is said to have occurred in Ponce DeLeon Avenue and to have gone to the wrong house.

General Anderson said that his client had promised there would be no repetition of the exciting incidents of that night and pleaded for the mercy of the court.

Attorney E. W. Martin, representing the complaining residents, suggested that Sciple be placed on probation, but Anderson protested that his client was not a habitual drunkard and such procedure would be humiliating.

Recorder Broyles Agreed to This.

This action followed an agreement out of court in which Mrs. J. M. Hall, in whose home at 164 Ponce DeLeon Avenue, cause of the complaint is said to have arisen, signed two documents, one consenting to move out of the neighborhood and the other agreeing not to bring suit for slander against the complainants.

Mrs. Hall's lease on the residence was secured from Harris B. White. She agreed to vacate on July 15.

The charges grew out of the conduct of Sciple and a pretty young woman who had engaged apartments at the Hall home, giving her name as Miss Myrtle Gilmer. It was asserted by the complainants that after Miss Gilmer came to live at the Ponce DeLeon address, Sciple at once began visiting her there and taking her out for automobile rides and in other ways paying her marked attention.

Residents in the neighborhood became greatly incensed, especially following an altercation between Sciple and a young visitor on the veranda.

Since that time Miss Gilmer apparently has disappeared.

Pony Contestants To Be Guests on 4th Of Hearst Papers

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American pony contests, their parents, their relatives and their friends, are invited to celebrate the "Fourth" at Grant Park as the guests of the Hearst papers.

Promptly at 10 o'clock the parade will start from the Alabama Street offices of The Georgian and American, with nine of the ponies in line. Some of these will be hitched to buggies, and some will be saddled.

When the parade arrives at the park, all the contestants will have turns riding or driving the ponies. There will be lemonade and refreshments for all. Through the courtesy of Dan Carey, Superintendent of Parks, everything has been arranged for giving the children the full run of the great public playground.

For the information of those who view the parade to-morrow, the buggies used are not the ones to be given away as prizes, but are loaned through the courtesy of E. D. Crane & Co.

Dr. DeLamater Is Arrested on Wife's Complaint

Dr. Ira J. DeLamater, of the DeLamater-Lawrence Drug Company in the Equitable Building, was arrested Thursday afternoon by Mounted Policemen Nashburn and Pate on the complaint of Mrs. DeLamater, and was taken to the police station pending a hearing Friday morning in the court of Recorder Broyles.

Mrs. DeLamater, who has been separated from her husband for some time and who is said to be suing for divorce, called up the police and told them that DeLamater was at her home at 60 Currier Street in an intoxicated condition and that she feared him.

Policemen Nashburn and Pate responded to the call, finding DeLamater at the house as represented. They warned him not to molest Mrs. DeLamater and he left, apparently for good. The officers, however, returned in a few minutes and discovered that he had returned in their absence and that, according to Mrs. DeLamater, he was cursing and acting in a violent manner. They promptly put him under arrest.

At the police station, DeLamater said that he had just returned from a month's stay at Aikentown, Ga., and that Wednesday he went to his wife's home to see his children and try to persuade his wife to agree to a reconciliation. He admitted that he might have been drinking when he went back again Thursday afternoon.

Dr. DeLamater figured in an exciting incident three or four years ago when he barricaded his house on Capitol Avenue against the police and defied them to enter. He was secretary-treasurer of the big DeLamater-Lawrence drug firm and is supposed still to hold that office.

SUFFRAGISTS KEPT FROM CAPITOL

The Georgia Woman Suffrage Association ran afoul of the Georgia Senate Thursday, when Senator W. W. Stark caused to be laid on the table a request that the suffragists have the use of the Senate chamber two days during their State convention.

When asked by Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, the president, and Mrs. Amelia R. Woodall, the treasurer of the suffragists, why he opposed them, Senator Stark replied: "Because Jesus Christ did not call a woman for one of His twelve disciples, and because He was not a suffragist."

The suffrage question was injected into the Senate proceedings by Senator G. M. Hule, of the Thirty-fifth, who introduced by request a resolution that the use of the Senate chamber be extended to Mrs. S. E. Cunningham, Mrs. William H. Felton, Miss H. Augusta Howard, Mrs. J. J. Ansley, Mrs. J. H. Sibley "and several gentlemen, all citizens of Georgia," at 8 p. m., July 9 and 10, for the purpose of delivering addresses on "The Scope of the Elective Franchise."

Stark Balks at "Enlighten."

Deputy Clerk Hansell had barely finished reading the resolution when Senator Stark arose and asked:

"Mr. President, do these ladies and gentlemen intend to enlighten the Senate on the question of woman's suffrage?"

"In so far as I understand it, that is the purpose of the meeting," President J. Randolph Anderson replied.

"Then I move to lay that resolution on the table," said Mr. Stark.

Upon a rising vote, the resolution was tabled, 20 to 7.

Mrs. McLendon said the State woman's suffrage convention desired the use of the Senate chamber, because of its excellent acoustics, and that it heretofore had been freely extended them. She said she believed they would get it this time, too, because Senator J. N. Watts, of the Eleventh, had promised to call for reconsideration of the resolution next Monday.

Invites Farm Finance Expert.

Speakers on the two evenings for which the Senate chamber is wanted will be the women mentioned in the resolution and the following men: Leonard Grossman, T. J. Skellie, the Rev. George Beattie, of Atlanta, and Martin V. Calvin, of Decatur.

At the earnest request of Senator John T. Allen, of the Twentieth, who read a letter from President J. C. McAuliffe, of Milledgeville, president of the Interstate Corn Growers' Association, the Senate took from the table and concurred in a House resolution inviting Herbert Myrick, of Springfield, Mass., to address the House and Senate at noon July 15, on the subject of co-operative rural finance in the cotton belt. Mr. Myrick will return from a study of co-operative farm credits in Europe in a few days, and will immediately start a Southern tour.

A written invitation was received to the July 4 celebration at St. Phillips Cathedral at 10:30 o'clock o. m. It was not accepted, because most of the Senators will be out of the city.

BRENNAN FINED $100 FOR HITTING M'GRAW

NEW YORK, July 3.—Manager McGraw, of the Giants, and Pitcher Brennan, of the Phillies, this afternoon were ntified by President Lynch, of the National League, that each had drawn a five-day suspension for the mix-up that occurred Monday on the Philadelphia ball field. Brennan, who hit McGraw, also drew a $100 fine.

CHIEF WARS ON SPEED FIENDS

War was declared Thursday by Chief of Police Beavers upon automobile speed fiends as the result of the conduct of the automobilist who ran down 14-year-old Eva Kilpatrick on Mills Street Wednesday and then raced on without stopping to learn the extent of the girl's injuries.

The car was going at express speed and was upon the terrified girl before she could make any effort to escape. She was hurled from the middle of the street to the sidewalk, where she lay unconscious. The large touring car dashed on and turned into Williams Street before its number could be taken.

The police dragnet is out for the driver of the car. Special men have been detailed to learn his identity. All of the police have instructions to assist in the crusade which has been started against reckless driving.

Mothers Aid Police.

Chief Beavers and Recorder Nash Broyles in strongest terms Thursday denounced the speed mania and proclaimed war upon the violators of the traffic ordinances. They were joined in their campaign by the mothers living in the vicinity of the Kilpatrick girl's home at 174 Hamliton Street. They have organized themselves into a vigilance committee to take the numbers of the cars that flash by and report them to the police.

Recorder Broyles was particularly bitter in his denunciation of the speeders who daily are defying the ordinances and endangering the lives of pedestrians. He would not discuss the Kilpatrick case, as the automobilist might be brought before him for trial, but he said, in discussing reckless driving generally:

"These speed maniacs who are brought before me are going to get the limit. This extremely dangerous practice must stop. If there is any way to lessen the number of victims of this speeding Juggernaut, which takes a frightful toll annually in all of the cities of the country, this court is going to support that plan with all its might.

"Atlanta automobilists show a wanton disregard for the lives of other people. Because prosecutions in the past have not been so frequent or so severe as they might, they have taken a ruthless license that daily puts lives in peril. The wonder is that more accidents are not reported.

Stockade Term Threatened.

"The drivers have become so lawless and careless of life that this court in the future may be relied upon to give the violators the limit. Whether or not the offending motorist is a member of a wealthy family, he will be sent to the stockade if it is proved that he is guilty of the brutal disregard for human life which has been evident on the streets of Atlanta since the summer season began this year."

Chief Beavers branded as an inhuman outrage the action of the automobilist who ran down the Kilpatrick girl.

"It is difficult," said the Chief, "to conceive of the inhumanity that will permit a man, after he has been the cause of an accident that has maimed or possibly killed an innocent little girl, to speed on out of sight, never even looking back nor returning to extend what aid he can.

"I have detailed men especially on this case. We are trying to learn the identity of the driver. The only woman who saw the accident tells us that the car was going so fast she could not be certain whether the driver was a white man or a negro."

Mrs. A. J. Heyback, of 48 Mills Street, in front of whose home the accident occurred, was greatly aroused Thursday over the narrow escape from death of the Kilpatrick girl. Mrs. Heyback has six children of her own, two of whom are small, one a girl of 4 years and the other a boy of 2.

"We mothers in this neighborhood

Stabbed Boy Dies; Chum Exonerated

John Edgar, 16 years old, of 81 Kennedy Street, who was accidentally stabbed by his chum, Frank Barton, Wednesday afternoon, died at Grady Hospital Thursday morning.

Eyewitnesses of the stabbing, including the victim, said it was an accident. Barton was demonstrating to Edgar the proper method of using a knife in a fight and in excitedly swinging the blade in the air, he cut his comrade.

The Burton boy was not arrested.

'America Producing Short-Sighted Race'

CHICAGO, July 3.—"America is developing a race of short-sighted people," was the statement of Dr. C. G. Fellows, a Chicago eye specialist, before the twenty-sixth annual meeting of the American Homeopathic, Ophthalmological and Laryngological Society.

"The development of progressive myopia in adults, due to the manner in which they studied during their childhood, is astounding," said Dr. Fellows.

BROYLES TO GIVE SPEED FIENDS "THE LIMIT"

Recorder Declares He Will Aid Police in War on Careless Automobile Drivers.

havp declared war on the speeders," she said. "We have formed ourselves into a vigilance committee to get the numbers of all the automobilists who race through this part of town."

Mrs. Heyback saw the auto which struck the Kilpatrick girl and knocked her from the middle of the street to the sidewalk, but she did not see the accident itself.

"The car was coming so fast," said Mrs. Heyback, "that it just seemed to appear from nowhere and then it dashed into Williams Street and disappeared from sight."

The only eye witness of the accident was a woman living on Mills Street, near Williams. Most of the residents in the neighborhood had gone inside for dinner. This woman was sitting on the porch of her home when she heard the whirring of the automobile. An instant later she saw it dash down the street, striking the Kilpatrick girl.

The car did not slacken its speed in the least, but raced on in a cloud of dust and turned into Williams Street, where it was lost to view. The horrified woman did not stop to go around by the gate, but vaulted the fence and picked up the limp form and carried it into her house, from where it was removed to Grady Hospital and then home.

The girl's left shoulder is dislocated and her ankle is thought to be broken.

"I was going to visit my brother, Homer, who lives on River Street," said Eva, in telling of the accident. "I got on the Luckie Street car two blocks from our house. I got off the car at Mills Street t trasfer to the River Street line.

"I started across the street, when all of a sudden—I woke up in Grady Hospital.

"No I did not even see the automobile, and never heard a horn or any sound of warning.

Says Driver Was White.

Mrs. Kilpatrick, who had learned all the particulars from eye witnesses to the accident, state that the automobile came down Mills Street at a terrific rate of speed, driven by a white man. He never sounded a warning, she declared.

"The driver of the touring car after he had hit Eva," said Mrs. Kilpatrick, "put on even more speed and without looking around made his escape.

"I think this is one of the most cowardly and outrageous deeds ever committed in a civilized community. If the accident could have been avoided or was accidental I would feel diffrent about it. But when the chauffeur hit Eva he ran like a coward, and this shows that the deed was deliberate and that people in automobiles care nothing for the lives of people.

"Eva has not been to town but a few times in her life, for I do not allow any of my children to run the streets. She is not deaf, and had she been given any warning I am sure she could have got out of the way of the machine, even at the high speed it was traveling.

"We are poor people and though I don't for a minute begrudge the doctor bills for Eva, it does seem a shame to have my little daughter crippled for life and not to even know who is responsible for it."

The girl's father, W. R. Kilpatrick, is employed at the Atlanta Steel Hoop Mill.

The Kilpatricks have six children, only one of whom is working. Neighbors of the Kilpatricks are greatly aroused and some of them have expressed the opinion that pedestrians should take the law into their own hands.

FACE DISFIGURED WITH PIMPLES

Ruffin, N. C.—"My face became full of pimples and blackheads, and would itch, burn and smart. The skin was rough and red. I was really ashamed of my face. My arms and back were affected almost as badly. The pimples would fester and there would come a dry scab on top. The trouble caused my face to be disfigured badly and the itching would bother me so I could not sleep well nights, especially during warm weather.

"I used all kinds of ointments, cold creams, powders, soaps, medicine and all kinds of different remedies for my face and arms, but from none did I get any benefit. The trouble lasted me three long years without anything doing me any good until a friend told me about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and then I decided to try them. After the first application I could see some improvement. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment two weeks I did not look like the same person; most of the pimples had disappeared. At the end of four weeks I was completely cured." (Signed) Miss Mamie Mitchell, Jan. 9, 1913.

It costs nothing to learn how pure, sweet, effective and satisfying Cuticura Soap and Ointment are in the treatment of poor complexion, red, rough hands, itching scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, because you need not buy them until you try them. Cuticura Soap 25c and Cuticura Ointment 50c are sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

ARMOR TRUST'S LOBBY PLOT IS REVEALED

Witness at Senate's Inquiry Tells of Secret War Waged on Great Combines.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The lobby inquiring committee on Saturday will recommend an investigation embracing not only the Mulhall charges, but the lobbying activities of the New York Stock Exchange, financial institutions, tariff associations, liquor and anti-liquor, and labor and anti-labor organizations.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Henry B. Martin, secretary of the Anti-Trust League, testifying before the Senate Lobby Investigation Committee, today declared the league is concentrating its efforts in a fight against the Armor Plate Trust. The trust, he asserted, is robbing the people of millions of dollars each year.

Other activities of the league have been to prod the Government to activity against the Elevator, Coal, Transportation and other alleged trusts. He could not tell how much the fight had cost himself and his associates.

Martin said that A. B. Dickey, of the Carnegie Coal Company, Vice President Johnson, of the Bethlehem Steel Company, and an agent of the Midvale Steel Company formed a lobby in Washington last March to induce the Secretary of the Navy to sign contracts for armor plate at figures much higher than its value.

League Members Persecuted.

Martin declined to produce matter showing the methods employed by the league in influencing legislation. He especially did not want to make public a complete list of the members.

"We are engaged in a very serious fight against trusts," said Martin, "and it is dangerous to the business life of any man to be known to be a member of this organization. We held one open convention to our sorrow. Many of the members were injured by the trusts when their relationship with the league was discovered."

Martin admitted that contributions of as high as $1,000 were made to the league. He refused to give the names of the contributors. He said he has known David Lamar five years and that Lamar is a member of the Anti-Trust League, although he is a member only because he is in sympathy with the league's purposes.

Lamar Gave Aid.

"He did more than any one man to point out vicious features of the Taft-Wickersham railroad bill which, if passed in its original form, would have given immunity to the railroad trust," said Martin.

Martin said he asked Lamar to give him a draft of a resolution for another investigation of the Steel Trust.

"You asked Lamar to prepare the resolution?" demanded Senator Cummins.

"Yes," replied Martin.

Martin did not remember where Lamar gave him the Steel Trust resolution. He did not recall how long he had the resolution in his possession before it was introduced.

"Did you tell the members to whom you gave the resolution that Lamar drew it?" demanded Senator Cummins.

"No," replied Martin.

Martin accused Chairman Lovett, of the Union Pacific board of directors, and Paul D. Cravath of lobbying at the Department of Justice by "trying to influence Attorney General McReynolds against doing what was in the interest of the public."

Martin admitted that David Lamar, "the wolf" of Wall Street, prepared the resolution fatheerd by Representative Stanley in the House for the investigation of the Steel Trust.

Marathon Race From Albany to Sylvester

SYLVESTER, July 3.—Much local interest is being manifested in the second annual Fourth of July Marathon Race under the auspices of the Worth County Local and the Albany Herald. The race will start in Albany at 5 o'clocq Friday morning, and will end at Sylvester. Cash prizes amounting to $200 will be awarded the winners.

The local camp of the Woodmen of the World will give a barbecue to the citizens of Worth and Dougherty counties.

ASSEMBLY QUITS TO CELEBRATE 4TH OF JULY

Legislature Reconvenes Monday. Thirty-eight Days Left After Adjournment.

The Legislature adjourned in both branches to-day until July 7, the House to reassemble at 11 a. m. and the Senate at noon.

When the General Assembly meets Monday it will have before it exactly 38 days of life, as it will have used up twelve days by that time. It is limited to a total sitting of 50 days.

Today's proceedings in both branches were more or less perfunctory, and adjournment was effected in each before 11 o'clock.

The committees, however, are well ahead of the Senate and the House, and both will have full opportunity to catch up all time that will be lost between now and Monday, after the Assembly reconvenes. The Houses can not adjourn for more than three days at a time, except by joint resolution, passed by two-thirds of each.

An echo of the successful fight to unseat Representatives McArthur, of Wheeler, and Browning, of Bleckley, was heard to-day in a resolution proposed by Mr. Wheatley, of Sumter.

Powers of Delegates Asked.

This resolution, which went to the Committee on Rules, provides that both McArthur and Browning shall have seats in the House, with the right to consult and be consulted on local matters, but shall not be permitted to vote or serve on committees.

If this resolution goes through, Messrs. McArthur and Browning will occupy positions in the Georgia Legislature somewhat similar to that occupied by territorial delegates on the floor of the House of Representatives in the National Congress.

The resolution will have many supporters, provided it comes from the Committee on Rules with a favorable report, but a strong fight unquestionably will be made against its adoption, in any event.

New Enrollment Committee.

The House, by a special rule, created a new Committee on Enrollment to-day, as it already is evident that the crush of matter is growing far too heavy for the present Committee on Engrossing to handle.

Virtually the entire Legislative membership either left Atlanta this afternoon or will leave to-night, many of them going to various Fourth of July celebrations throughout the State.

The recent recommendatoin of Judge Roan that the office of public defender be instituted in Georgia in contradistinction to the office of public prosecutor, or Solicitor General, seems likely to bear fruit in the present Legislature.

Representative Blackburn, of Fulton, has introduced a bill seeking to set up this office, and it is now before the General Judiciary Committee for consideration.

Paid Like the Solicitor.

Blackburn's bill proposes that the lawyer assigned to the defense of a pauper or ignorant defendant shall be paid for his services from the county treasury, in the same manner that a Solicitor is compensated, except that his pay shall not arise from fees incident to the case at bar.

In this way it is figured that poor defendants may have their rights on trial safeguarded to the same extent that the State safeguards its own interests, which is exactly what the law, in theory, contemplates.

This bill has the indorsement of lawyers generally, and the judges of the State are said to favor it almost as a unit.

The outlook for its passage seems to be good.

Another bill that is attracting a good deal of attention among lawyers is the bill to reinstate William B. Kent, a member of the last Legislature, who recently was disbarred from the practice of law in Georgia. This bill was proposed by Mr. Edmondson, of Brooks, and will be pushed vigorously.

Mr. Kent was disbarred from the practice of law during the session of the last House, and his friends claim that there was much behind the action that was unwarranted and unjust.

Action Arouses Interest.

They will make a strong plea to have him reinstated this year.

Disbarments are rare in Georgia, and as Mr. Kent's was effected for alleged unworthy practice, the action of the Legislature, in the attempt that will be made therein to upset the findings of the court that put Mr. Kent off the list of practicing attorneys in Georgia, will be watched with keen interest.

LEVEE AT EXECUTIVE MANSION SETS RECORD FOR BRILLIANCY

Governor and Wife Congratulated on Most Successful Reception in History of Mansion.

Atlanta society is congratulating Mrs. John Marshall Slaton to-day on the success of her first formal entertainment as mistress of the Executive Mansion.

The reception, given by Governor and Mrs. Slaton at the mansion Wednesday night in honor of the General Assembly was, in addition to being the first of the new administration, one of the most brilliant official receptions in Georgia's history.

Several hundred people attended the affair. The United States Army was represented by General Evans and his staff, and Colonel Van Orsdale and the officers from Fort McPherson in full dress uniform.

Mansion and Grounds a Garden.

To accommodate the large crowd, the lawn of the Executive Mansion had been turned into a garden, with the sides inclosed by a hedge of small pine trees eight or ten feet in height. From the entrance on Cain Street a little avenue of bay trees led to the main entrance under the mansion.

Governor and Mrs. Slaton received their guests in a pergola of white columns, festooned with smilax. Standing with them were President of the Senate and Mrs. Randolph Anderson and Speaker of the House and Mrs. William Burwell. They were assisted in entertaining the guests by the members of the Governor's staff, members of the family, and a group of Mrs. Slaton's friends.

A party of society girls, including Misses Margaret Grant, Margaret Hawkins, Passie May Ottley, Harriet Calhoun, Marjorie Brown, Adgate Ellis and Virginia Lipscomb, served punch, lemonade and coffee.

Mrs. Slaton Gowned Exquisitely.

Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. Slaton's mother, who resides with her, assisted the new mistress of the Executive Mansion in presenting the guests. She has as her especial guests Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hunt, of Eatonton.

Mrs. Slaton wore a gown of white chiffon cloth, combined with delicate pattern of fillet lace and apricot satin. The lace was in long tunics on each side of the front panel of chiffon, which was embroidered in a flower design of tiny crystal sequins in pastel shades. A rhinestone sparkled in the center of each flower. Over the back of the gown was draped a long sash of apricot satin, and the narrow pointed train was bordered with the same. The chiffon sleeves were overlace, and met by long gloves. She wore a necklace of pearls and diamonds, and two corsage pieces of precious stones.

Man Sought 2 Years By U. S. Captured

Harrison M. Thomas, a former storeroom gauger, who for the past two years has successfully evaded the United States Government, sought as a material witness in the case of the Government vs. B. J. Davis, was taken into custody last week in Washington. He will be brought at once to Atlanta for trial.

In 1900 B. J. Davis, it is charged, removed certain distilled spirits from a bonded distilling warehouse which belonged to a man by the name of Fowler. Davis had charge of the warehouse and without authority to do so furnished to Harrison M. Thomas packages of corn whisky.

WRIT SOUGHT IN MOVE TO FREE NEGRO LEE

Attorney for Watchman Declares Client Knows Nothing of the Actual Crime.

Bernard L. Chappell, attorney for Newt Lee, negro night watchman at the pencile factory, held in the Phagan case, stated Thursday morning that he would swear out a writ of habeas corpus for the release of the negro.

Attorney Chappell stated that he had come to the conclusion that there was nothing the negro knew about the crime except finding the body, and that the State had no right to keep him without some charge or as a material witness.

Lee was the first suspect arrested in connection with Mary Phagan's murder. He was ordered held by the Coroner, but when a bill of indictment was offered the Grand Jury at the same time of the Frank indictment, no action was taken against the negro.

Weak Spots in Conley Tale.

Chappell said the writ of habeas corpus would compel the State either to order the negro held as a material witness or make some charge against him.

Conley, in relating his dramatic tale of carrying the body of Mary Phagan from the rear of the second floor and disposing of it at the direction of Frank in a dark corner of the gloomy basement, said that when he reached the elevator he had to wait until Frank went into his office for a key to the elevator door.

The defense will maintain, it is understood, that the elevator door had not been locked for some time. Witnesses will be called to testify that the door had remained unlocked in accordance with instructions from the firms with which the building was insured. From this alleged circumstance, it will be argued that the negro's story is a fabrication devised to shield himself from the charge of murder and to shift the responsibility onto another man.

To Assail Whole Story.

This is only one particular of at least a score which will be assailed by Attorneys Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold, who are representing Frank. They will say in the first place that the elevator was not running at all on the day of the crime, in spite of Conley's story that the body was carried down to the basement by this means. Harry Denham and Arthur White, who were working on the fourth floor of the factory, will be called to testify to this.

With the defense and prosecution awaiting the day when the great legal battle which will send Frank to the gallows or free him from the stigma of the murder charge shall begin, Frank's lawyers are occupying much of their time in making a critical analysis of the succession of weird statements credited to the negro from the time he said he wrote on the Friday before the murder at the dictation of Frank the notes that were found beside the body of the dead girl until he issued his last affidavit.

The negro admitted the story of writing the notes on Friday was false. He admitted that his first story of never having seen Mary Phagan, dead or alive, was a deliberate lie. He is reported to have further changed his story by admitting seeing the girl before she was killed. But, except for this, he maintains his last affidavit is the whole truth. The defense believes it is as false as the rest and is preparing to go into court and break down utterly the fabrication that the negro has erected.

Notes to Play Part.

Although the notes found by the body of the slain girl have received little attention from those working on the case lately, they are bound to have a most important part in the trial of Frank.

The defense will seek to show that there could have been no possibility of their being dictated by the factory superintendent; that if the negro had taken Frank's dictation, supposing that Frank had committed the crime, a much different sort of a note would have been the result.

Conley has shown since his arrest that he can follow dictation with a fair degree of accuracy. This being the case, it is reasonable to presume, the defense will hold, that he would have followed Frank's words closely. But the notes are an incoherent, jumbled mass of words that are only half intelligible after the detectives have placed weeks of study upon them. The defense will contend that such a note can not be imagined, by any process of reasoning, as the dictation of Frank.

Manufacturers to Hear Exhibit Plans

Definite plans for a permanent manufacturers' exhibit in Atlanta will be submitted by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce to more than 150 manufacturers at a dinner Thursday evening at the Hotel Ansley.

The Chamber also is raising money for the 1913 Georgia Corn Show. More than $3,500 has been pledged, exclusive of $2,000 by the fertilizer committee, of which H. C. Fisher is chairman, has promised to secure. The sum desired is $7,500.

Postal Receipts in Year Jump $116,000

"Atlanta Always Ahead" again is illustrated in the report of the Atlanta postoffice for the fiscal year ending June 30. Total receipts for the year were $1,328,011.24, an increase of $116,005.63 over the previous year.

Postmaster Hugh L. McKee believes Atlanta will be in the exclusive class of postoffices soon. This class is made up of postoffices with receipts totaling $150,000 a month.

BUTTON IDEA FOR 500,000 CLUB IS PRAISED

Advertising Expert, ex-Charleston Man, Tells of Plan's Success in Former Home.

M. C. Maxwell, recently come to Atlanta from Charleston, S. C., where he was president of the Ad Men's Club, said Thursday that he wanted to get in as a charter member of the 500,000 club. He explained that he had been associated with a similar plan in Charleston and that he was glad to find such a definite means of expressing the Atlanta spirit.

"The Georgian's suggestion for a 500,000 club to get 500,000 people here by 1920 is a great thing," he said. "I have noticed the $25 prize offer for the best slogan to go on the buttons of this club.

Buttons Sold in Charleston.

"There's no doubt about every loyal citizen wearing these buttons. Why, I believe they even would be glad to pay for them.

"In Charleston we wanted to raise $5,000 to move the museum. We decided to sell buttons. This was the slogan adopted:

"'See Charleston first, always.'

"Then 50 men got to work on the streets and we sold 5,000 of these buttons at $1 each.

"So much for the button idea. Atlanta is too far ahead to be led by Charleston.

Urges Letter Head Slogan.

"With the Atlanta spirit what it is there is no telling to what extent the button idea will go.

"I think it would be good for all business firms to have '500,000 people in 1920' printed on their letter heads.

"One thing I'm sure about. I'm glad to get to Atlanta to live."

Mr. Maxwell is associated with the Rhodes-Wood Furniture Company.

ACQUITTAL SEEN IN CHURCH INQUIRY

Macon Christian Elders to Report Verdict in Charlton-Lester Case Sunday.

MACON, July 3.—The elders of the First Christian Church will report to the congregation Sunday morning on their investigation into the alleged visit made by Professor Frank M. Charlton, the choir leader, to the home of Mrs. Marvin Lee Lester, secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, on the night of June 5.

It is very probable that the elders will declare to the church that their inquiry has failed to prove the charge against the two prominent members of the congregation who are now under suspicion. It will be left to the congregation whether there shall be an open trial.

The elders last night visited the home of Mrs. Lester on Carling Avenue to determine if Mrs. J. W. Jenkins could have recognized Professor Charlton from the porch of her home across the street from the Lester residence.

One of the elders entered the alley and stood by the side gate of the Lester back yard and other elders got on the porch of the Jenkins home and endeavored to distinguish him. They were unsuccessful, they say, and for that reason they are dubious as to Mrs. Jenkins' and Mrs. Alma Armstrong's statement that they positively recognized Professor Charlton.

The exclusive publication in Macon yesterday by The Georgian of the fact of the investigation being in progress caused a genuine sensation.

"Now that the affair has gotten in the papers," says Rev. Leroy M. Anderson, the pastor, "I am more than ever determined that there shall be a thorough investigation."

The elders have several more persons to examine to-night.

Douglas Man, Insane, Hangs Himself in Jail

DOUGLASVILLE, July 3.—J. L. Dempsy, a well-known citizen of Douglas County, committed suicide by hanging himself in the County jail here. Dempsy, who had become temporarily deranged, had been placed in jail for safe-keeping.

Worry over family troubles and the possession of his eight-year-old son is supposed to have affected his mind. There was no other occupant of the jail and Dempsy had probably been dead several hours when found. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide.

New York Policeman Convicted Grafter

NEW YORK, July 3.—A verdict of guilty was returned early to-day against ex-Police Sergeant Peter J. Duffy, accused of collecting graft from illegal resorts in return for police protection.

Duffy showed no emotion when his guilt was pronounced. This was Duffy's second trial, the jury in the first having disagreed.

MANY ATLANTANS STUNG BY WILES OF A DAVID LAMAR

From photographs of David Lamar, "the Wolf of Wall Street," who Wednesday naively admitted before the Senate Lobby Committee at Washington that he had impersonated a number of public men in an effort to influence Wall Street, Atlantans have recognized an old acquaintance and the greatest "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" who ever operated in the Gate City.

Lamar, according to old-timers, came to Atlanta about 1892 and for a number of years was more or less successful in promoting various schemes which finally led to his arrest and departure to other fields. While here, however, he lived like a king, except when under indictment or in jail, and the known facts of his career reveal that he has not only had a greater supply of funds since, but that he has also escaped the tentacles of the law.

By all who remember him he is described as a man of wonderful personality and insight into human nature.

Soon after reaching Atlanta Lamar established close relations with a well known private banker. He rented the home of the late George W. Harrison, at the corner of Cone and Poplar Streets, then one of the fashionable houses of Atlanta, and proceeded to live in a lordly fashion. His wife is described as a beautiful woman and to her he gave every consideration.

His first scheme was to persuade Sam Hall, a former Atlantan who was a social leader and possessed of considerable money, to go in with him in the establishment of a weekly society paper. In a justice court, where Lamar was subsequently arraigned, Mr. Hall charged him with "cheating and swindling," stating that he had paid Lamar $500 to start the paper, but that the paper had failed to appear, and that he had seen nothing more of his $500.

Lamar, handsome and self-confident, arose in court and read a written defense of himself, of which the following are said to be verbatim extracts, remembered by a veteran reporter:

Eloquence Staggers Court.

"Mr. Hall did not want his name to be associated with the paper, but he promised that, from time to time, he would furnish me with choice and meaty bits of gossip and scandal.

"Later I called on Mr. Hall at his place of business and was surprised to find him a bookkeeper in a coffin factory. There, surrounded by the grewsome evidences of the mortality of man, we concluded our arrangements."

The record, from memory, is that Lamar's speech so staggered the court with its eloquence that he escaped on a technicality.

Next he organized a company to take over the street car advertising of Atlanta. He secured Dr. Joseph Jacoos as an investor to the extent of $7,500. When the company did not pan out, Dr. Jacobs "kissed" his money good-bye.

Finally Got His $7,500.

He decided the case was worth investigation, so he called at the Wall Street address of David Lamar. After an office boy had carried in his card the private office door of Lamar swung open and there stood the former Atlantan, surrounded by luxurious furnishings.

Lamar was gushing. He greeted Dr. Jacobs with an embrace, declaring that Dr. Jacobs had been his great benefactor in a time of grave need.

"You know," he said, "I was planning a little vacation. For that reason I have neglected to send you the money I owe you, for I was going to Atlanta to give it to you personally."

The story Dr. Jacobs told to his friends was that Lamar remembered the amount to be $1,000, but after a little argument he was convinced it was $7,500. He gave Dr. Jacobs New York exchange for the amount.

But back to the Atlanta end of the story. Unrebuffed by the failure of his two former projects, Lamar attempted to organize an accident insurance company for railroad employees. His banker friend stood him in good stead as chief backer.

He got $2,500 from a citizen, who soon regretted being persuaded. The result was another justice of the peace warrant.

Billy Crim, a city detective, started to serve the warrant on Lamar at his palatial home. On his way he met the star reporter of the city, whom he invited to go along. With the manners of a Chesterfield, Lamar met them at the door and was informed of the mission.

"Gentlemen," he said, "this is awkward. I am just eating my dinner, and I am sure you will not interrupt me and disturb my wife."

Billy Crim replied that he had a criminal warrant and that Lamar would have to go with him. Finally it was decided that the reporter should stand sponsor for Lamar until he finished his dinner.

The reporter recounts that Lamar finished his dinner with the ease and leisure of an Oriental king, explaining that the visitors were there on a business matter.

Here Appeared "Them Papers."

On his way to the old police station on Pryor Street, Lamar asked to stop and see an old friend in the Postal Telegraph office on Alabama Street. The request was granted, and Lamar held a short private conversation with a Mr. Close, the manager.

Once in the police station, Captain J. M. Wright, then Chief of Detectives, refused him the privilege of any visitors. A day of such solitude ruffled his nerves and in a very agitated state he appealed to his reporter friend.

He explained that he had never seen Mr. Close, of the telegraph office, but that he had some important papers in his pocket which he had to hide from the detectives and that he had given them to Mr. Close with the solemn request to hold them until they met again.

"I know by his eyes that that man will grant my request," said Lamar to the reporter. "Now, I want you to get that man and my wife down here so that the papers may be transferred to her."

The transfer was made that night. In the alley that divides The Georgian from the Atlanta National Bank Building Mrs. Lamar stole and, following the reporter's instructions, hid the papers in the bosom of her dress.

Mobile Greets Him Next.

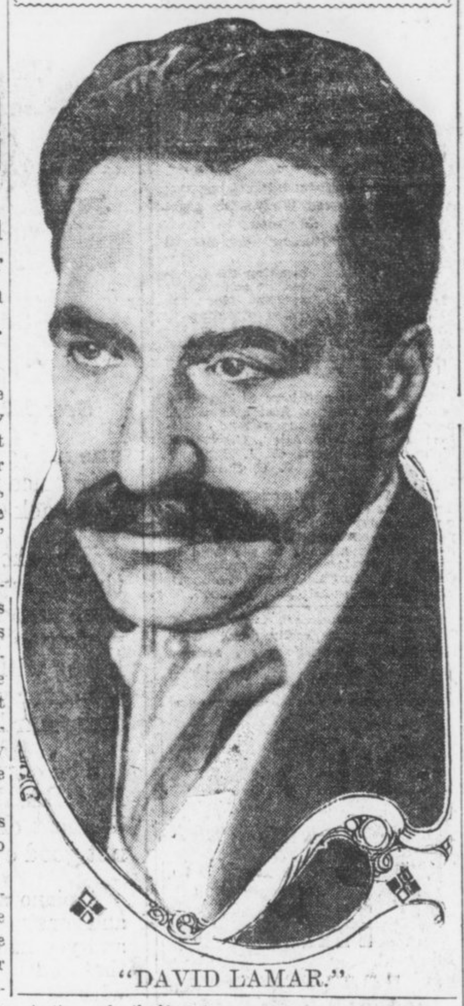

It was but a few days before Lamar was free again. The Atlantan who had made the $2,500 investment in the insurance company turned on the banker for redress and recovered his money after a fight through the Supreme Court.

Lamar announced that he would seek another clime. But before going he offered the reporter with whom he had been associated a job at $500 a month. It is really true that the reporter refused the offer.

Mobile then had a visit by the famous promoter. By the time he had shaken hands around once he had organized a company to take over the electric light plant and the street railway. He was played up in the papers as a New York capitalist.

It is said that when his associates woke up they did not know for certain whether they had anything left in Mobile but the bay.

KNOWN AS 'WOLF OF WALL STREET'

"DAVID LAMAR."

Lauterbach Ignorant of Lamar's Action, He Says.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Edward Lauterbach, the New York lawyer whom David Lamar, a Wall Street stock manipulator, tried to have appointed to represent the Union Pacific Railroad in the dissolution agreement proceedings, to-day denied that he knew Lamar was working in his behalf.

Mr. Lauterbach said he never suspected that Lamar was posing as a Congressman.

"I will have no statement to make until after I testify next Monday," Mr. Lauterbach said. "I will explain everything so far as my name is concerned."

Jury Deadlocked in Girl Strikers' Trial

PATERSON, N. J., July 3.—The jury in the case of Miss Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, member of the Industrial Workers of the World, charged with inciting riot in the silk mill strike, appeared to be hopelessly deadlocked to-day. The jurors have been out more than 24 hours.

Patrick Quinlan, I. W. W. leader, who was convicted of inciting riot, was sentenced to not less than two nor more than seven years in the State prison.

SERBS DECLARE WAR ON ALLY; BATTLE ON

Turkey Ready to Renew Fight in Balkans as States Clash. Kings in Field.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

USKUB, July 3.—Servia formally declared war against Bulgaria this afternoon.

The proclamation was issued by King Peter of Servia declaring Servia and Bulgaria to be in a state of war.

Reinforcements Are Sent to Greek Army.

ATHENS, July 3.—Heavy reinforcements were sent to-day to strengthen the Greek army advancing toward Ligovani in Albania. Military telegrams from headquarters in Salonika report the Greeks are meeting stout resistance, but driving all before them. There has been enormous loss of life.

Roumanians Ready To Join Servians.

BUCHAREST, ROUMANIA, July 3. Seventy-five thousand Roumanians are under arms awaiting any eventuality. King Charles is preparing to throw his forces against the Bulgarians because of Bulgaria's refusal to give certain territorial compensation to Roumania for remaining neutral in the Balkan war.

Great Battle in Progress; Many Slain.

VIENNA, July 3.—A great battle between Bulgarian and Servian troops is being fought at Veles, 50 miles southwest of Uskub. Heavy casualties are reported.

A Sofia dispatch, uncensored at Belgrade, got through this afternoon reporting a Bulgarian victory. Sixteen hundred Servian soldiers and thirty officers were captured.

A Bulgarian army had begun to march upon Salonika. King Constantine is rallying an army to deefnd the city. A Greek fleet is being concentrated in the Salonika harbor to bombard the Bulgarians if they get within artillery range.

Slaton Names 13 of His Staff Members

The names of thirteen of his staff have been announced by Governor Slaton. The appointment of Fred J. Paxon, of Atlanta, as chief of staff, already has been announced. Aides appointed were:

W. L. Peel, Robert F. Shedden, George M. Hope, W. B. Stovall, Steve R. Johnston, A. H. VanDyke and T. C. Erwin, Atlanta; Z. H. Clark, Moultrie; Shelby Myrick, Savannah; J. C. Woodward, College Park; H. P. Melkiehem, Lindale; Luther M. Heard, Elberton.

Beavers Will Ask For Women Aides

Instead of asking for women detectives, as he announced after returning from the Washington convention, Chief of Police Beavers said Thursday he would ask the Police Board Tuesday for women probation officers and investigators. They would be more valuable, he said, in reclaiming girls who had gone astray and saving those just stepping over the line.

Accused Slayer of Youth Facing Trial

DOTHAN, ALA., July 3.—Charles Brackin, charged with the murder of James Lloyd, 16 years old, near Wicksburg, in the western end of Houston County, on March 17, is on trial at a special term of Houston County Circuit Court to-day.

Lloyd was found dead with his throat cut from ear to ear. Jason Robertson, Charles Homer and Brackin were implicated by the Coroner's jury. Trials of the other boys come up later this term. All the defendants are of prominent families.

U. S. Court Expects Rate Case Appeal

Frank H. Mortimer, clerk of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals of the Fifth District, with headquarters in New Orleans, arrived in Atlanta Wednesday to check over the work of the court for the past year and to arrange for the cases which are to come before Judge Don A. Pardee during the October session, beginning the first Monday in the month.

"There has been no appeal filed to date in the Alabama Rate Case," said Mr. Mortimer, "but I understand there will be just as soon as the testimony which is being compiled in the lower courts is complete."

U. S. Correspondent Expelled by Mexico

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, July 3.—Fitzgerald Slocum, Mexico City correspondent of The Los Angeles Times, was expelled from Mexico to-day under "law 33," which provides for the expulsion of "undesirable aliens."

It is understood that the Government holds Slocum responsible for the recent report that a receiver had been appointed for the national system.

Accused of Attack On 8-Year-Old Girl

DUBLIN, July 3.—Lee Keen was arrested near Dublin to-day charged with attempting to assault an 8-year-old white girl at Rockledge, Laurens County, Tuesday night. He was captured in a deserted barn, and lodged in jail by Deputy Sheriff Linder and several citizens of the neighborhood.

Keen already is under bond for being implicated in a murder in Montgomery County.

Probe of Protected Vice Charge Likely

That Superior Judge W. D. Ellis would charge the Grand July for the July term to investigate vice from a standpoint of alleged protection was considered more than likely Thursday.

The jury was drawn Thursday morning. It will meet Monday morning to organize and receive the judge's charge.

LEAGUE CLAIMS IT SMASHED TRUSTS

Anti-Trust Organization Takes Credit for Results So Far Obtained.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Henry B. Martin, secretary of the Anti-Trust League, regaled members of the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee to-day with a story of the league's accomplishments in the past twenty years at the White House, in executive departments and in Congress.

Martin declared the league had a hand in nearly every important piece of legislation put through in that period.

Says He Was Cheated While Drugged; Sues

Declaring that while he was under the influence of an opiate, agents of the American Investment and Loan Company forced him to purchase $1,500 in stock, G. W. Almand filed suit for an injunction in the Superior Court Thursday.

Almand said G. B. Cobb, vice president, and E. S. Vickery, a stock salesman, came to his home when he was unconscious, and, taking him to their office in an automobile, got his signature to a note for $2,000, secured by a mortgage on a house he owned. He said the company had declined to redeem the stock or return the mortgage.

Hunger Strike Now Tried in Antipodes

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CHRISTCHURCH, N. Z., July 3.—The world-famous "hunger strike," so popular now in British jails, to-day made its appearance in New Zealand.

A number of Socialistic youths, arrested for refusing to undergo military training, went on a "hunger strike" and were sentenced to solitary confinement.

FORGET THE HEAT BY A VISIT TO THE BONITA

The hot weather has had no effect on the patronage of the Bonita Theater, for the house is so cool and the show so good that one doesn't realize the thermometer is up around the 100 mark. Electric and exhaust fans keep this little theater as cool as spring, and the show does the rest. Pretty girls galore, and not a dull moment is the record of this theater.

The pictures are strictly first-run and good. Every comfort, every convenience at the Bonita.

LANFORD PROBES DRINKING BY DETECTIVES

Chief Declares He Will Take Vigorous Action if Charges Are Found To Be True.

Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford announced Thursday morning that he had inaugurated a thorough probe of the detective department to determine the truth of reports, recently come to his notice, that city detectives drink liquor and kill time in the locker clubs.

He declared his investigation would be as thorough and far-reaching as possible, and that if he found any officers guilty, he would take prompt and vigorous action.

Chief Lanford's investigation followed the statement made to Chief Beavers Wednesday by an Atlanta physician, that both the uniformed officers and the detectives congregate at locker clubs and drink and loaf. He named two downtown clubs in which he said he several times had seen detectives loitering and drinking.

The physician who informed Chief of Police James L. Beavers that girls were lured to their ruin from a prominent downtown restaurant to a house operated by the cashier of the place and that the police were on the "inside" and giving protection was called before the Chief Thursday to make a personal statement.

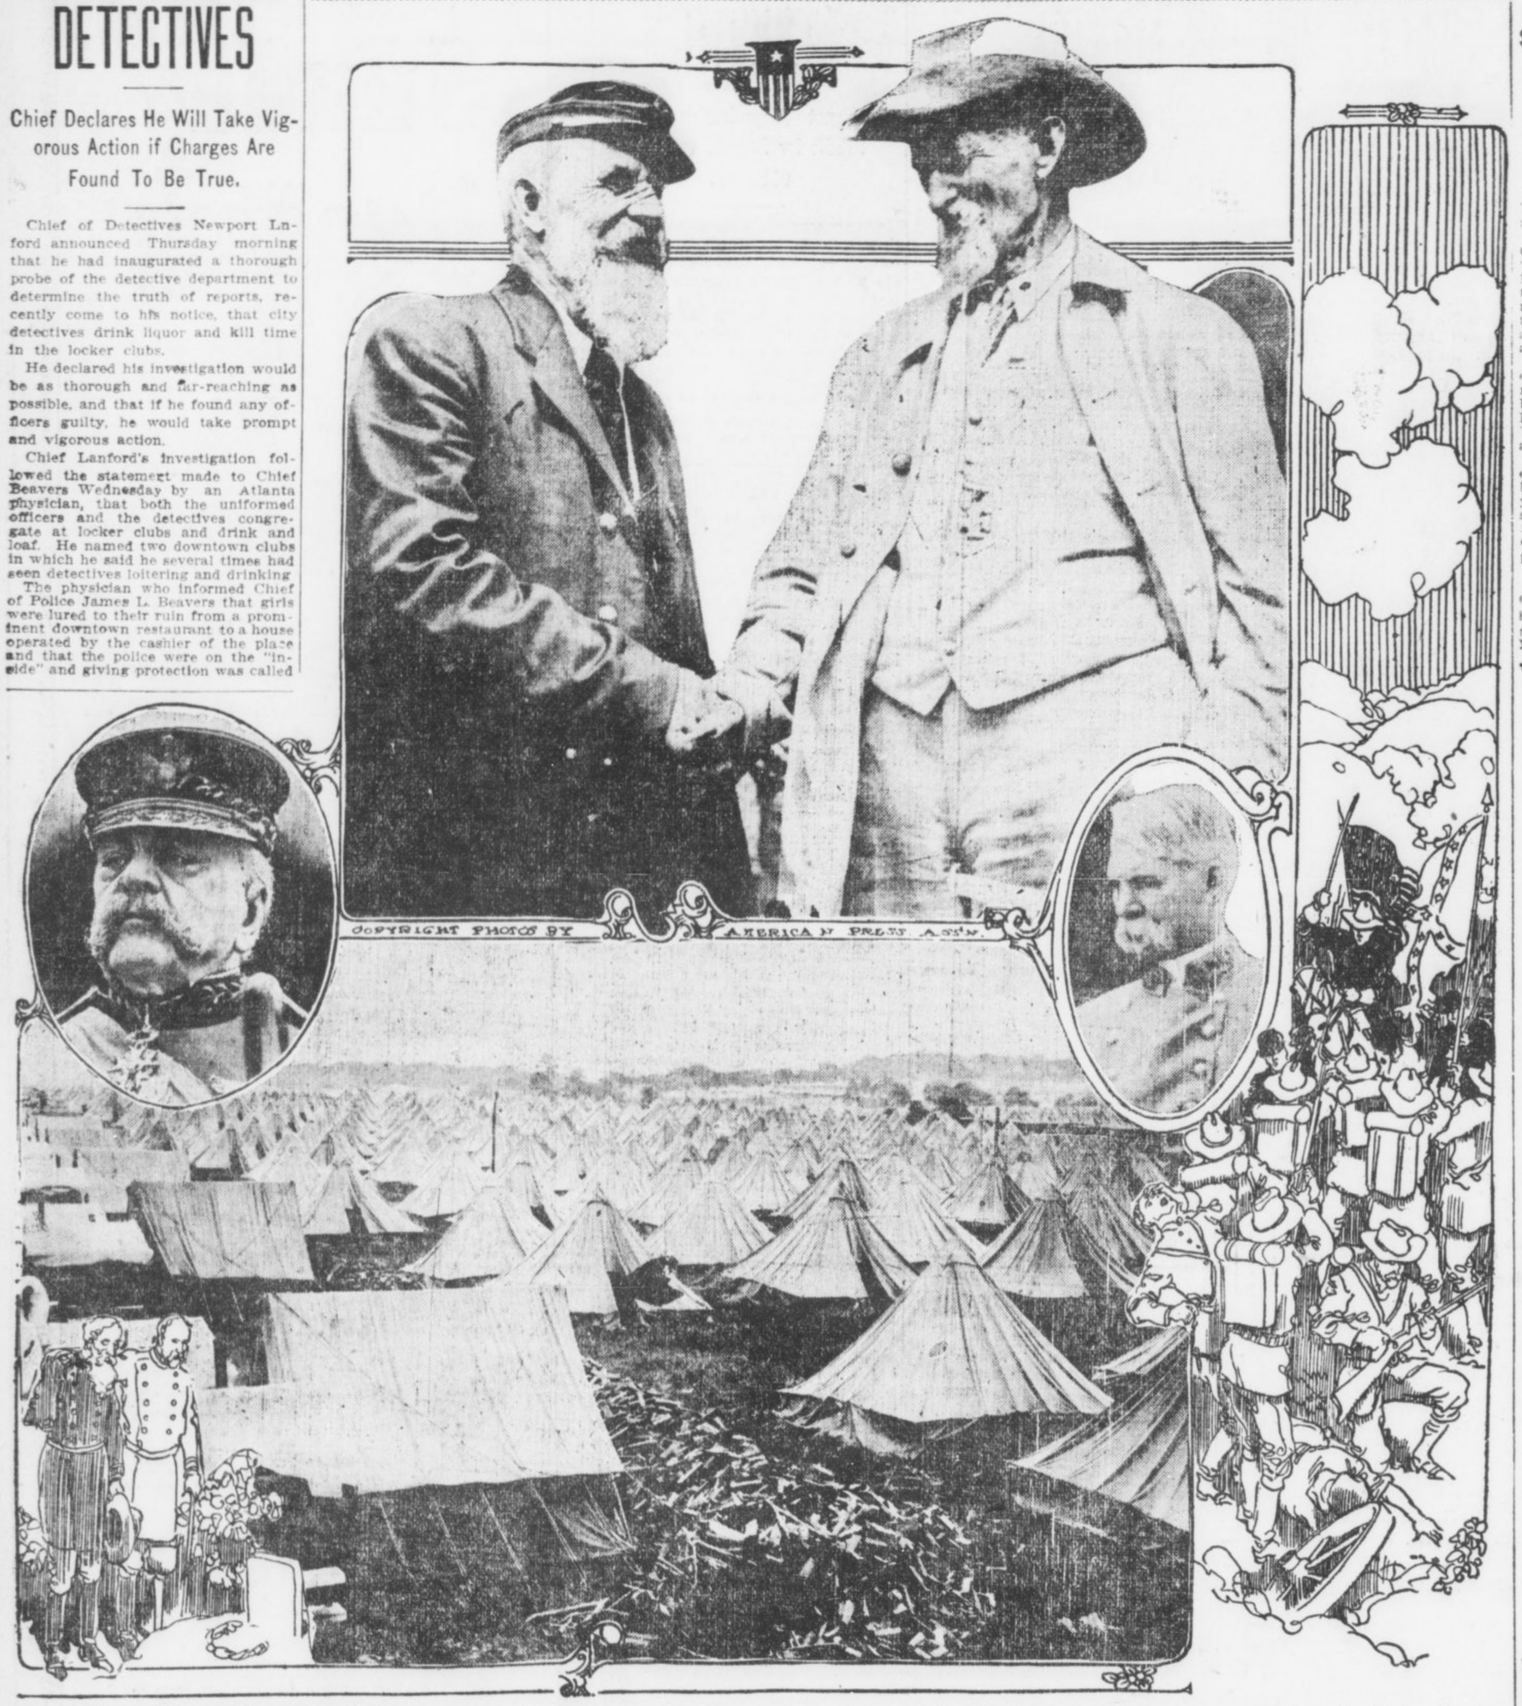

Chief Beavers said he would probe the physician's statement to the very bottom, and that if found true, he would take prompt action against the policemen involved.

"I am determined to put every man off the force who drinks," he said, "and I am determined to find if any of my men have been concerned in any such scheme as this physician tells of. I shall not stop until the matter has been probed to the bottom and the public knows the truth."

The Chief has tightened the net around the places mentioned in the letter.

Sergeant Dobbs, detailed to examine the membership register of the locker clubs, reported that he had been unable to find the name of a single officer on the membership list of a locker club.

Pageant Play Opens Festival by Negroes

A pageant play will open the Jubilee Festival of negro singers at the Auditorium Thursday night. The leading role will be taken by Patti Brown, the Chicago soprano. The Fisk Jubilee Singers, backed by a chorus of 250 trained voices, will be heard in old-time genuine negro music. The singing is illustrative of the progress of the negro race from the dawn of its history to the present.

Friday afternoon there will be a matinee and at night a concert, in which all the leading singers of the festival will take part.

Lid on Gambling Is Clamped at Newport

NEWPORT, July 3.—This is to be a closed season for gambling here. None of the regular places is open and none will be if Mayor MacLeod can help it.

The Mayor has hinted to those interested in the Nautilus Club, which for years has been exclusively used by summer residents, that they had better not open this year.

Peace Returns to Gettysburg Reunion Hosts After Stabbing Over Lincoln.

GETTYSBURG, PA., July 3.—Today has been set down on the program as Governor's Day, when most of the score or more of Governors now at the State headquarters at Gettysburg College are expected to attend the exercises in the auditorium tent. Governor Tener will preside and will make an address, as will Governor James B. McCreary, of Kentucky.

The reunion of Philadelphia brigade and the survivors of Pickett's division will be held this afternoon at Bloody Angle, the point where Pickett's charging Virginians and North Carolinans first struck the Union lines on Cemetery Ridge, 50 years ago this afternoon.

It was largely the Philadelphia brigade which stood the brunt of this attack, and thus the ancient enemies who fought hand to hand in that bitter struggle a half century ago will meet once more.

Great Fireworks Display.

What is expected to be one of the most spectacular features of the week will be the fireworks display on Little Top to-night. For weeks men have been engaged in preparing the apparatus and staging the display, which is expected to be one of the finest ever seen in this country.

Some of the historians of the camp to-day brought to headquarters the man who fired the first cannon at the battle of Gettysburg. He is Michael Hays, of Springfield, Ill., who served in Tidball's battery under General Buford. He found the gun he fired, which is standing to-day in the exact position it stood when first fired in the battle. General Liggett took him for a tour of the field in a motor car and manifested considerable interest in his narrative of the fight.

Vice President Marshall is expected here to-day and great preparations have been made for his reception. He will be escorted through the camp and will spend some time in the quarters of the Indiana delegation.

Seven Hurt in Fight.

A stabbing affray, in which seven men were hurt and which had its origin in a slurring reference to Abraham Lincoln, resulted in a scene of wild disorder in the crowded dining room of a hotel in Gettysburg last night and threatened to dissipate the spirit of peace and fraternalism which has hovered over the battleground since the great reunion began.

In the confusion which followed the stabbing, it was impossible to obtain the names of all the principals in the fight which sprang up so unexpectedly that everyone in the dining hall, except those near the table where the abusive remarks in regard to Lincoln were made, was taken by surprise.

The wounded men are:

Edward J. Carroll, sergeant of the Quartermasters' Corps, U. S. A.; David Farbor, of Butler, Pa., member of the State Constabulary; John D. Maugin, Harrisburg; Malcolm Griffin, of Budford City, Pa.; Charles Susler, of West Fairview, Pa.; Hayes Remise Becker, of Gettysburg, and Harry A. Root, Jr., of Harrisburg.

Veteran Resents Remark.

The man whom the police say made the remark and did the stabbing gave his name as W. B. Henry, of Philadelphia. He told the officers of the State Constabulary that he was a son of R. R. Henry, of Tazewell, Va., a general in the Confederate Army.

Henry was seated at one of the tables in the hotel with several others. Animosities soon developed out of the war talk at the table. Henry is said to have championed the cause of the Confederacy, and did so without particular rebuke until he is said to have applied a vile epithet to Lincoln.

This was strongly resented by a veteran in blue, said to be H. H. Baker, of Pennsylvania. Baker seized a decanter of water and threw it at Henry. There was an immediate uproar. Tables were upset and chairs overturned.

Brandishes a Knife.

Henry jumped to his feet, brandishing a knife, according to the stories told the police. A half dozen men jumped to the defense of Baker, and the flashing of knives started a panic in the dining room.

The police have the knife of Henry, which was grabbed by C. A. Goldthwaite, of Salem, Mass., and turned over to the authorities. Henry, when locked up in the jail here, denied that he had done any of the actual stabbing, and said that he was in the fight only to aid Griffin, one of the wounded men.

Baker was uninjured. The others were hurt in coming to his defense. He disappeared after the fight.

The death of George W. Walls of acute uremia early this morning makes a total of eight deaths since the opening of the reunion. There were fifteen hospital cases, most of them due to the heat or minor illnesses.

NEW SLOGAN FOR ATLANTA AD MEN

Story of National Convention's Actions Told at "Back-From-Baltimore" Banquet.

Clear and truthful advertising was the slogan adopted Wednesday night by the Atlanta ad men in their "Back from Baltimore" banquet at the Hotel Ansley.

S. C. Dobbs, representing the Coca-Cola Company, in his speech on the "Declaration of Principles for the 1913 Convention," called attention to the motto, "Truth," adopted by the national convention, and declared that this was the end toward which all loyal and representative ad men are working.

Among other speakers at the banquet, which was the first held at the new Ansley, were Jack Lewis, Albert Adams, Ivey Allen, George H. Kohn, Evelyn Harris, W. J. Hubbard, W. S. Lounsbury, W. F. Parkhurst and L. D. Hicks.

The ad men unanimously voted to devote the excess of $234, as reported by Treasurer Ivey Allen, to next year's convention trip. The sum will serve as the nucleus of the fund of $5,000, following the suggestion of Charles A. Smith. Harry Goodhart, president of the Ad Club, presided.

KIMBALL PIANOS

The Artist's Ideal

Beyond a doubt the best way to get a genuine bargain in a piano is to go to a responsible house and pay a fair price for an instrument with a reputation back of it.

You should not consider for one moment that cheap pianos which are advertised in such convincing terms are worth spending money for. If you buy one, you are speculating with most of the chances against you. Whether you buy here or elsewhere, secure a standard make or save your money.

The cost of making a piano such as the KIMBALL is greater than the selling price of most cheap pianos, which are as a rule not good even when new.

A piano with excellent staying qualities of tone and construction is the only one worth considering and you had better pay a little more and know that as long as you have it you will be pleased with it.

By this we do not mean that you will have to spend an exorbitant sum to obtain a satisfactory instrument, but we do wish to caution you against ones sold at a price for which it is impossible to give you a piano of real merit.

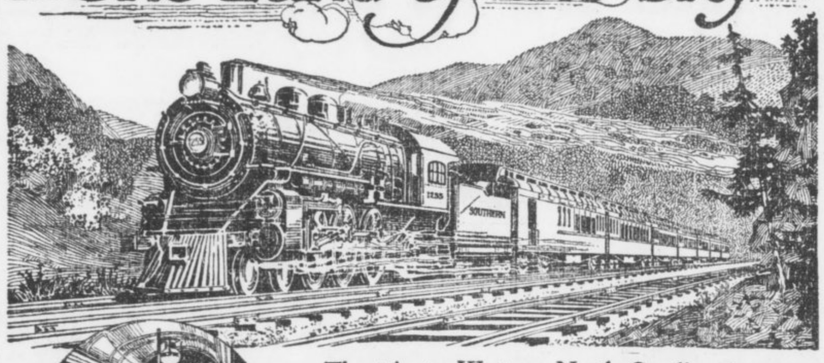

We wish to caution you against buying a piano from a concern that has a sliding scale of prices. The one-price plan on which we operate is the only sure way of your securing full value. We have found in many years of experience that to be fair to ourselves and the customer is the only correct selling method.

A few special bargains in used uprights and player-pianos.

COUNTY BOARD RENEWS FIGHT OVER PAVING

Commissioner Waters Meets With Defeat in Move to Obtain Competitive Bidding.

Open war again broke out in the County Board of Commissioners Wednesday afternoon over the awarding of contracts for asphalt paving.

Commissioner Tull C. Waters, who is leading the fight for competitive bidding, declared he would continue his fight, although he had small hopes of success.

Commissioner Waters has charged that the Committee on Public Works of the board lets the contracts on the discretion of its members and without consulting members of the board as a whole.

Waters' Move Blocked.

Despite Waters' vigorous protest the board sidetracked his resolution and introduced a resolution to buy 71 tons of Trinidad asphalt from the Barber Asphalt Company for $25 a ton.

The board passed a resolution accepting the dedication of the Andrews road, connecting Peachtree Street with Pace's Road. It ignored the resolution of the Mayor and General Council, requesting a conference with the County Commissioners and State tax receivers to obtain a proper basis for State and county tax returns.

Members Have Tilt.

Some spice was given the meeting by a tilt between Sheriff Mangum and members of the board when Sheriff Mangum, who refused to sign a contract with the county providing for the payment of 30 cents per capita for the feeding of the county prisoners, demanded 35 cents.

General Anderson answered that the board didn't care whether the Sheriff signed the contract or not, as this amount has been decided on. The incident was closed when the Sheriff threw the contract on the table and walked out of the room.

Bill Removes Poll Tax Law Restriction

Making it possible for a citizen to pay his poll tax within 60 days of an election and become an eligible voter is what Representative Arnold of Henry County wishes to do. In this connection he has filed a bill in the House requiring tax collectors to keep their poll tax books open so that prospective voters may pay their tax.

The present law requires the payment of the poll tax at least six months prior to the election.

NewLowRecordPrice For Seat in 'Change

NEW YORK, July 3.—A Stock Exchange seat was sold last week for $40,000, a new low record price in the present movement. Previous to this a seat was sold for $42,000. Two other seats were sold during the spring for as low as $41,000. The seat sold last week was that of William Robison and the purchaser was Orme Wilson, Jr.

A few years ago a Stock Exchange seat sold as low as $38,000, but the price rebounded and went above $45,000 soon afterward.

45,930 Bathers At Piedmont Since May

Dan Carey, general manager of parks, gave out a report to-day showing that 45,930 baths have been taken in Piedmont Lake since its opening on May 22. Of this number 10,620 were women, 10,793 boys and 25,517 men. The total number last season was only 35,000.

A report of the life savers shows that 32 men and 2 women have been rescued from drowning this season.

FOOD BILL FOR LINERS UP TO MILLIONS

North German Lloyd Paid $4,920,000 for Provisions Last Year and $7,373,735 for Coal.

NEW YORK, July —In these days of the high cost of living it is interesting to know what it costs a steamship company to provide the necessities of life to its passengers.

The annual statement of the North German Lloyd for 1912 shows $4,920,000 for provisions and $7,373,735 for coal.

More potatoes were consumed than any other single article, the total amount having been 17,875,873 pounds. Flour ranked next, with 6,313,152 pounds, while bread was fourth, with 2,353,083 pounds.

The passengers consumed 7,098,560 eggs, 4,271,059 oranges and lemons, 707,625 pounds of onions and 983,802 pounds of salt. They used 465,340 pounds of coffee and 41,729 pounds of tea, and 529,619 cans of sterilized milk.

Of wines, Rhein and Mosel were most popular, heading the list with 112,211 bottles, as against 35,97 bottles having been consumed in addition to 1,720,634 quarts of beer in barrels.

Slaton to Address R.F.D. Carriers Here In State Convention

Several hundred rural letter carriers of Georgia assembled at the Kimball House Thursday afternoon for the first session of the State convention, which will continue until Saturday.

The meeting was informal and in the nature of a fraternal and social gathering. Friday the delegates will go to the Senate chamber of the State Capitol, where welcome addresses will be delivered by Mayor James G. Woodward and Postmaster H. L. McKee. Clark Howell also will address the body.

Among the speakers Friday afternoon will be Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick, Governor Slaton and W. D. Brown, editor of The R. F. D. News, will speak Saturday. George C. Bond is master of ceremonies.

Girls Score Critic Of Southern Youths

MISS LILLIAN KYLE JONES.

Pretty Miss Lillian Kyle Jones, of Knoxville, Tenn., whose statement that the Southern youth does not show his sweetheart a good time aroused a storm of excited protest among the Atlanta girls, now finds herself in a "nice pickle."

Here is what Miss Jones said in New York that caused the protest:

"Chivalry is a nice thing to have around the house, but you can't live on it nor enjoy it day after day any more than you can caviar."

"It's very nice of Miss Jones to say that for the benefit of her masculine admirers in New York, but it just isn't so, that's all," the Atlanta girls declare.

BOSTON BUYS 21,000-POUND LOT OF GEORGIA WOOL

SWAINSBORO, July 3.—The Emanuel Wool Growers' Association has just marketed and baled for shipment more than 21,000 pounds of wool.

Buyers from Macon, Savannah, Valdosta and elsewhere were here. J. N. Griffin, of Valdosta, bid 18 1-16, taking the crop. He represents the Eastern Woole Mills, of Boston. The shipment of two full carloads was carried from here over the Wadley Southern to Savannah and from there by steamer to Boston.

Last year only 5,000 pounds were marketed here. The average per year since the formation of this association has

COTTON TRADER FEARS CLARKE MEASURE

Tax on Futures Contracts Will Hurt Farmer and Help None, Says W. B. Thompson.

NEW ORLEANS, July 3.—Future trading will be wiped out, root and branch; producers will be at the mercy of combinations of purchasers; cotton exchanges will be put out of business, thus abolishing the forces which compel honest trading, and the total result will be chaos if the Clarke amendment to the tariff bill, taxing futures contracts, is adopted, says W. B. Thompson, of New Orleans, in a telegram to C. S. Barrett, President of the National Farmers' Union.

Furthermore, instead of decreasing speculation, the measure would increase it, by making even the spot business highly hazardous, Mr. Thompson says. His telegram follows:

"To Hon. C. S Barrett, President of the National Farmers' Union, Union City, Ga.:

"The Clarke amendment to the tariff bill will not regulate future trading, but by destroying the future contract markets, will strike down all future trading, both good and bad. Hedges can not be bought or sold, hence the spot cotton business will be made speculative in the last degree. This will mean that the multitude of cotton buyers of small or limited means will be forced out of business and the producer will be under the necessity of carrying his cotton indefinitely, or else selling it at the price offered by spinners or by a few large operators, or a combination of the same, whose business it will be to speculate upon the producers' necessities.

Will Destroy Exchanges.

"Furthermore, the provision in the amendment limiting the tax and penalty to future contracts made on or under the rules of any cotton exchange or similar institution, will not only destroy the contract exchanges of New Orleans and New York, but will destroy all the local exchanges throughout the cotton belt, because no man will hold membership in an institution when such fact subjects his private contracts to an excessive tax and renders him liable to a penalty from $1,000 to $20,000 for conducting his business in accordance with the rules and regulations established by such exchanges for the protection and benefit of the trade.

"If all these exchanges were put out of business there would be no points for the collection and dissemination of information as to conditions, and the producer would be wholly in the dark as to the value of his cotton, and would be at the mercy of the buyer whose superior private facilities put him into possession of such information. Moreover, if there were no exchanges or similar organizations there could be no rules or standards of trade regulating and restraining individual conduct in business, which would result in disorderly conditions most prejudicial to all concerned.

Can Not Afford Experiments.

"In other words, the said tax amendment would not only destroy the futures markets of America, but also would disorganize the whole system by which our crops are moved, and place us in the hands of foreign organizations and local combinations of buyers.

"It is reported that in supporting said amendment, some Senators take the position that while they doubt the wisdom of the measure, or are of the positive opinion that it is unwise and will be injurious, still, as the farmers want it they say, let them have it and take the consequences.

"We can not afford to experiment with such a vital matter. I am not connected with any exchange in an official capacity and I have no interest in any future business. You know that I have given much time and effort to the betterment of the producers' condition and to improvement in all legitimate trade. I think you will believe in the sincerity of my purpose. I say to you earnestly that in my opinion this measure is fraught with the most serious consequences to the interests you represent and with no intention of being officious, but animated only by a sincere desire to cooperate with you in your work for the Southern farmer, I beg you to give this vital matter your most serious consideration before using the power of your great organization to advance so dangerous a measure and before you accept responsibility therefor."

Bill Allows State To Cross-Examine

A decided change in the criminal law, making it possible for the defendant to testify under oath and thus be subject to cross-examination, is contained in a bill filed in the House by Representative Whitaker.

The bill allows the prisoner to testify under oath or not under oath, as he sees fit. But his testimony under oath will make him subject to the fire of the prosecuting attorneys through cross-examination.

County Officials and Convicts Have 'Cue

County officials and invited guests ate at the same table with 600 convicts at noon Thursday when the county gave the annual chaingang barbecue.

None of the gangs went out on the road in the morning, but were kept at the central camps until time for them to be taken to Buckhead, where the 'cue was held.

Bride Takes Poison In View of Big Crowd

CHICAGO, July 3.—Mrs. Irene Skauby, a 17-year-old bride, swallowed bichloride of mercury tablets in the crowd at the Olympic games in Grant Park in an attempt to die. A. L. Skauby, whom she married less than four months ago, had deserted her.

Several hundred persons saw her swallow the mercury tablets. She has an even chance for her life.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

The acoustics of the hall of the House of Representatives of Georgia probably are the worst in the world.

Physically, the hall is one of the most beautiful, dignified and stately in the Union. It is a hall, so far as that is concerned, the State well may be proud of.

It is all but impossible to speak in it though, so miserably deficient is it in acoustic properties. So far this session two men only have been able to overcome its baffling and depressing difficulties—Speaker Burwell and Representative Olive.

By working like a Trojan and exhausting a good lung full of atmosphere on every sentence or so, Burwell makes himself clear—then, too, he generally has the attention of the House to a reasonable degree.

Wednesday, Sam Olive of Richmond, went up against those honorable acoustics, and while he knocked them out, good and proper, he had a mighty struggle getting away with it, and when he had finished, his alabaster brow—which runs pretty far back, by the way—was bathed in honest sweat, and his lung equipment was much the worse for wear.

Olive really is a corking good orator. He enunciates distinctly and speaks with deliberation and carefully distributed emphasis. He evidently knows the rules of good speaking and if he makes many more speeches such as the one he delivered Wednesday he is sure to be known throughout this session as one of the genuinely effective floor leaders.

There is no question of Olive's ability to talk eloquently and convincingly.

Mr. Slater of Bryan trotted out that ancient and well-known legislative standby, Old Man Vox Populi and gave him his first legislative airing Wednesday.

Mr. Slater was making an impassioned plea for the ousting of Representatives McArthur and Browning—more in sorrow than in anger, however—and during the progress of the debate, Old Man Vox got in the game.

A broad smile flitted through the House when Old Man Vox made his first appearance, but as he is an ancient and approved friend, he got the glad hand on all side.

From this time forward he may be expected to make his appearance every day or so.

Speaker Burwell is a stickler for forms and ceremonies in legislative debate. Already he has demonstrated a wonderful ability to handle the House, no matter how acute the parliamentary situation it may get itself into.

Burwell, however, insists that every member toe the mark in observing the rules, not only as to procedure but as to courtesy.

One member Thursday entered an oral objection to a certain proposal, but he entered it without arising from his seat. Burwell, as he is required to do, ignored the honorable gentleman's objection thus entered, but stated immediately afterward that the rules required members to arise and address the Speaker when desiring to speak, no matter when, why or how, and that he would not recognize any gentleman so long as that gentleman remained seated.

Since then, members desiring to address the House have first taken the pains to arise and address the Speaker. And that is exactly what the rules requires of them.

Charles S. Barrett, President of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Assistant Commission of Agriculture, will address by invitation the people of Bowl's Springs, in Fannin County, July 19. Both will confine themselves to agricultural topics.

Representative W. J. Nunnally of Floyd, a new member of the House, was highly honored by Speaker Burwell in committee distribution. He was named on the rules, general judiciary and constitutional amendments. Although he is a new member of the House, Representative Nunnally is well known through the State, having been Solicitor General of the Rome Circuit and Judge of the City Court of Rome.

Already he has grown to be one of the most popular members of the General Assembly.

It doubtless is true that the grand old county of Montgomery wishes folks would quick kicking its dog around! The last Legislature whacked it in two and created the new county of Wheeler, and now an honorable Legislator wishes to chop off some more of grand old Montgomery's territory to set up the noble young county of Treutelin.

After a bit, as one legislator put it, "there will not be so much as a greasy spot of grand old Montgomery left!"

Among the many charter changes in Georgia cities already proposed in the Legislature, the one of Waycross is the most novel and interesting.

There it is proposed to merge the county and city governments into one body.

The plan is to establish city and county tax zones, the city's taxes going into city improvements. A county council, acting with a similar body from the city, both under the direction of an elective head, is proposed, with the employment of a general superintendent who shall have direct charge of the work and be responsible for the execution of all orders of the joint board.

This change, it is argued, will cut down the administrative expenses and promote harmony throughout, besides giving better results than are obtained under separate administrations.

Athletic Events at Gainesville on 4th

GAINESVILLE, July 5.—Gainesville will celebrate the Fourth of July with a "safe and sane" athletic meet at Brenau Park.

Coach Frank Anderson, of Riverside, will have charge of the sports. Prizes have been offered by merchants. The Woodmen of the World band will furnish music and the Chamber of Commerce will serve free lemonade.

There will be a game of baseball between two picked teams—the Fats and the Leans. Such men as Fletcher M. Johnson and Sheriff W. M. Crow will play.

Fifth District Asks Agriculture School

An agricultural school for the Fifth District is the requirement of a bill introduced in the House by Representatives Smith and Fields of DeKalb County. When the State was redistricted, the Fifth District was left without an agricultural school, and there has been an active movement under way to have the Legislature making an appropriation for one.

Recently the business men and merchants of Decatur held a big rally in behalf of the movement. This was attended by several thousand farmers of the Fifth District.

Three Octogenarians To Vote at Columbus

COLUMBUS, July 3.—Among those registered for the Columbus hospital bond election of July 16 are three octogenarians. They are A. Illges, 83 years; A. O. Blackmar, Sr., 82 years, and W. H. Glaze, 81 years of age.

The two former are among the wealthiest men in the city, and notwithstanding their advanced age and the fact that their property would be taxed, they will vote for the bonds.

It Costs $450 to Kiss A Niece of Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The price of a kiss in the Government service is $450, as Frank D. Hester, an $1,800 a year section chief of the Pension Bureau, found out to-day when he kissed a temporary girl good-bye.

Someone saw the kissing and told Pension Commissioner Saltzgarber, who promptly suspended the offending chief for three months without pay.

As the kissee left the service to-day with the rest of the temporary clerks, she was not fined or suspended. In fact, there is reason to believe that the Commissioner thought she was more kissed against than kissing.

Lender Is Enjoined From Garnishment

Judge J. T. Pendleton, of the Superior Court, Wednesday afternoon granted H. S. Jones and G. R. Sayre a temporary injunction restraining D. H. Tolman, named as a money lender, from garnisheeing the wages of Jones, who is employed at the Atlanta Joint Terminals.

Superintendent G. N. Williams informed Jones that if his wages were attached he would be discharged. Sayre acted as security for Jones. The claim is made that the men are day laborers and that their wages are not subject to attachment. The case is set for hearing July 12.

CHILD LABOR BILL IS OPPOSED BY REFORMERS

Lack of Educational Clause Makes Proposed Law Objectionable to National Association.

A fight, under the leadership of Harvey P. Vaughn, of New York, representative of the National Child Labor Association, will be made against the adoption of the Sheppard child labor bill when it is taken up by the Labor and Labor Statistics Committee of the House. Assisting him will be Mrs. Margaret T. McWhorter, of Atlanta.

Objection to the Sheppard bill lies in the fact that it does not include an educational clause. The association has as a goal the adoption of a law which will prevent the employment of children under 14 years of age while the public schools are in session in the district in which the child resides.

Mr. Vaughn and Mrs. McWhorter will address the Labor and Labor Statistics Committee when the Sheppard bill is taken up, and will endeavor to substitute a bill with an educational clause inserted. Failure to do so with the committee will result in its being filed in the House.

At the same time in which the Sheppard bill was introduced in the House a similar bill was introduced in the Senate by Senator J. Randolph Anderson and Senator Fred Kea. The bill was thought to be scheduled for smooth sailing.

"It is the object of the National Child Labor Association and its sympathizers to give every child the inherent right of an education, and the fight for this will never cease until such laws are enforced, said Mrs. McWhorter.

Coburn Is 'Scolded' By Adjutant General

Characterizing as an "unfortunate, thoughtless and uncalled-for expression" the recent statement by Lieutenant William S. Coburn that fifteen officers of the Fifth Regiment, Georgia National Guard, would resign if the State Legislature amended the military act of 1912, Adjutant General J. VanHolt Nash has directed a letter to Colonel E. E. Pomeroy, of the Fifth, in which he takes Lieutenant Coburn sharply to task.

In his letter to Colonel Pomeroy, which it is understood has the indorsement of the latter, General Nash deplores such expressions coming from members of the National Guard, and advises Colonel Pomeroy to caution his officers against a recurrence of the affair.

Athens Bank Case To Jury Thursday

ATHENS, GA., July 3.—The case against J. W. Griffin for "wrecking" the Athens Bank and Trust Company will go to the jury for verdict this afternoon, after a hard-fought legal battle. The State put up a number of witnesses, while the defense relied on the statement of President Griffin. There will probably be a verdict to-night.

R. H. McCrary, who pleaded guilty in his case as cashier and who was given three years under the consideration of turning state's evidence, was not put on the stand.

Child Injured, Mother Would Give It Away

KENOSHA, WIS., July 3.—"I wish you would give him away to some one; we don't want him any more."

This statement was made by Mrs. Charles Pirosch to James H. Karnes, humane officer, as she stood beside a cot in the hospital where her little son lay suffering from serious burns received at a pre-Fourth of July celebration. The child may die.

Big Apartment House Falls When Finished

CHICAGO, July 3.—A 42-apartment building, which was to be completed next week, collapsed here. A strip of steel girders 25 feet wide running the entire length of the building fell through to the ground. No one was hurt.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Talking Movies at the Grand.

Edison talking pictures have won! The skeptical who argued that such an entertainment would be nothing but the projection of a motion picture on a sheet and the operation of a phonograph behind stage have discovered that Mr. Edison has perfected machines and instruments that synchronize.

The attendance at the Grand on Monday was decidedly discouraging. On Tuesday more than double the number of people were present that were in the house on Monday, and on Wednesday the theater was nearly filled. There is every indication that the wonder of this invention will keep the big theater more than busy the balance of the week.

Starting with to-day there will be a change of program in the talking pictures that will be continued the rest of the week. The first-run straight pictures are changed every day, and three reels are used.

Violinsky Pleases Forsyth Audiences.

Keith vaudeville at the Forsyth has never been so popular as now. The bill this week is of exceptional value. There is that variety that makes things interesting, and there is novelty enough to make people forget the hot spell. The Forsyth is perhaps the coolest place in Fulton County now. The ventilating system and the cooling plant work perfectly, and every audience enjoys what is being offered on the stage in perfect comfort.

Violinsky, an expert with both violin and piano, has interested and entertained every audience that has assembled. The sketch of Edward Abeles has been voted to be the very best of this sort seen in Atlanta, and Carlisle's dog pantomime circus starts the show with the audiences in a particularly good humor.

Good Tabloid at the Bijou.

Few attractions that have played the Bijou this season have given such general satisfaction as "A Trip to Paris," this week's bill. The musical comedy is brimful of pretty music, good dancing and clever specialties, and the entire performance moves along smoothly and without a hitch.

MRS. FELTON TO SPEAK HERE AS SUFFRAGIST

Vote Advocates Eagerly Awaiting Appearance of Noted Woman, Convention Next Week.

Mrs. William A. Felton, of Cartersville, one of Georgia's most noted women, will make her first public appearance as a suffragist in Atlanta next week, at the annual convention of the Georgia Equal Suffrage Association. The convention will be held July 9 and 10. Mrs. Felton will speak before one of the three sessions on "Getting Ready for the Ballot."

Atlanta suffragists are manifesting great interest in Mrs. Felton's address. She has been an active suffragist for only a few months and her acquisition to the ranks is regarded as of great importance to the movement in Georgia.

Other speakers at the convention will include Mrs. S. E. Cunningham, of Decatur, formerly president of the Alabama Equal Suffrage Association, and Mrs. H. Augusta Howard, of Columbus, who organized the Georgia State Association and was its president for six years.

Many to Attend.

Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, State president, said Wednesday afternoon that more than 100 suffragists from all over the State are expected to attend the convention. Only one day session will be held, on the afternoon of July 10 at the Labor Temple, in Trinity Avenue. Efforts are being made to secure the Senate chamber in the State Capitol for the evening meetings.

Legislation now pending before the General Assembly was indorsed at the regular meeting of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association Wednesday afternoon. Included among these measures were the vital statistics bill, compulsory education, medical inspection in schools, county probation and pensions for women school teachers who have taught for more than 30 years.

Dr. L. C. Allen, of Jefferson, Ga., chairman of the House Committee on Hygiene, addressed the meeting on the need of medical inspection in the schools, declaring a permissive law is a necessity. He expressed the opinion that the State is not ready for a compulsory inspection law, but predicted that the time will come when every State in the Union will have compulsory medical inspection laws. Dr. Allen declared medical inspection should not stop at the school children, but should include teachers and janitors and other persons who work about the schools and come in contact with school children.

Representative C. R. McCrory, of Schley, spoke on his bill, which proposes that the State shall publish its own textbooks for the public schools. Judge Robert L. Rodgers addressed the meeting on the benefits of equal suffrage.

Report To Be Made On Standard Bale

The report of the committee on standardization of the cotton bale will come before the House Thursday. The committee was appointed last year and has gone deeply into the subject which is of considerable importance to financial, farming and manufacturing interests.

Of the Senate and House members put on the commission, the only one to return to this year's Assembly is Representative Kimbrough, of Haris County, who will deliver the report.

Former Newnan Man Dies in Mississippi

NATCHEZ, MISS., July 3.—Henry C. Norman, member of a prominent Georgia family and for many years a prominent resident of Natchez, died to-day, after an illness of three months of hardening of the arteries. He was born in Newnan, Ga., October 22, 1850.

The funeral and burial will take place here to-morrow.

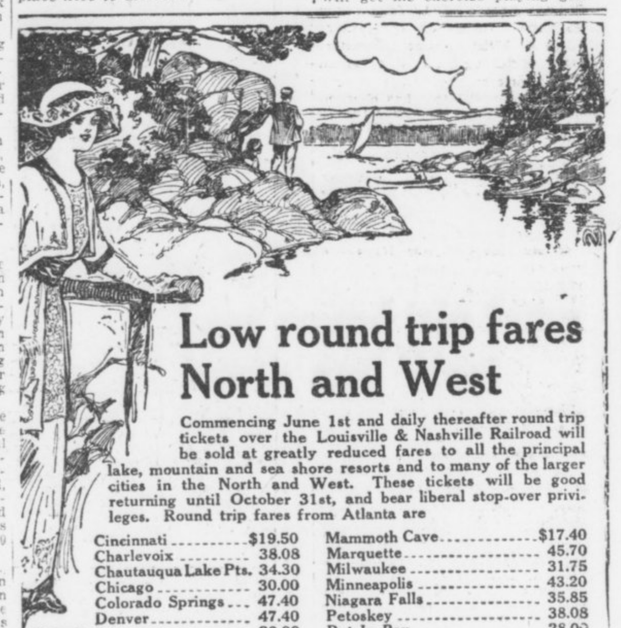

Job Needed to Free Young Ollie Taylor

Ollie Taylor, the 13-year-old lad who was granted a parole Wednesday from the Fulton County Reformatory, where he has been confined two years on the charge of stealing a soda pop, is to be an automobile mechanic—that is, if he can land a job.

And until Ollie does land the job he will remain at the reformatory, according to Superintendent Means. Mr. Means says Ollie has shown wonderful improvement since he has been at the reform school and has developed a knack for mechanics which should be very productive when Ollie has applied himself sufficiently long.

Hon. J. Ham Lewis Can't Find a Horse

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, unsuccessful in his efforts to get a riding horse to suit him, has joined the Chevy Chase Country Club and will get his exercise playing golf.

MISS JESSIE (at left) and MISS ELEANOR WILSON.

Marriage of President's Daughter to Francis Bowes Sayre Announced for November.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The first wedding of a Georgia girl in the White House will be that of Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of the President, to Frances Bowes Sayre, a New York attorney in the office of District Attorney Whitman. Miss Wilson, a native Georgian, was born in Gainesville 24 years ago.

President and Mrs. Wilson made formal announcement of the coming marriage last night at the White House. The wedding will be some time in November. While Washington society gasped at the sudden announcement, it recovered quickly, and everything now is all a-flutter over the pre-nuptial honors to be showered upon the President's daughter.

Called Prettiest of Sisters.

Miss Jessie Wilson has been declared by many persons to be the prettiest of the three Wilson sisters.

Much curiosity was expressed regarding the groom. He has been connected with District Attorney Whitman in New York, during which time he has won the esteem of the noted lawyer. He is 28 years of age, and will be admitted to the bar this month, when he will be placed on the list of assisting prosecuting attorneys.

He comes from a noted collegiate family, his father, the late Robert Heysham Sayre, being president of the board of trustees of Lehigh University. He was also a prominent railroad man, and built the Lehigh Valley Railroad. His mother was Martha Finley Nevin prior to her marriage. She was the daughter of John Williamson Nevin, theologian and president of Franklin and Marshall College, of Lancaster, Pa., and was descended from Hugh Williamson, of North Carolina, one of the framers of the constitution.

He is related to Robert J. Nevin, head of the American Church of Rome, Italy, and a cousin of Ethelbert Nevin, the noted composer.

Pura The Perfect Water Pura

Few people give the matter of drinking water the serious consideration which it deserves.

Physicians agree that many malignant maladies are communicated to the system directly through the drinking water---typhoid fever being one of them.

All raw water contains dangerous germs; filtering and boiling do not remove them.

Pura Water is distilled by improved, scientific methods. It is the PERFECT drinking water.

HOBBLES WRECK NERVES, SAYS DR. M'RAE

Noted Atlanta Physician Calls Tight Skirts an Abomination. 'Insanitary and Immodest.'

Women who wear the extremely tight skirt decreed by modern fashion are treading the road that leads to nervous prostration, according to Dr. Floyd McRae, one of Atlanta's most noted physicians. In this opinion Dr. McRae takes direct issue with prominent members of the Chicago Medical Society, who recently declared the tight skirt hygienic, artistic and comfortable.

"Women who wear the tight skirt—that is, one so tight it does not allow perfect freedom of the lower limbs," said Dr. McRae Tuesday morning, "are constantly under a strain which eventually will bring about nervous prostration. This condition is due to the fact that the muscles are cramped and do not get that perfect freedom which is necessary in walking. Some muscles are overdeveloped and others are not developed sufficiently to do their share of the work of walking.

"The tight skirt has not been in vogue long enough for the effects of this to show in the women as a whole, but if it is not abandoned the time undoubtedly will come when women virtually will be nervous wrecks.

Hobbles an Abomination.

"The tight skirt is an abomination, and one of the worst things women have taken to in years. It is immodest and unhygienic, and it is a source of continual danger to the wearer. With their freedom of movement restricted, they face danger every time they appear on the streets in a tight skirt.

"A woman wearing a tight skirt is in danger of spraining her ankle every time she gets on a street car or in an automobile, and many of the minor accidents sustained by women nowadays are due to the tight skirt and the restricted, hobbling walk which it necessitates."

Dr. McRae declared the old style of wide, flowing skirt which touched the ground was as bad as the modern skirt.

Old Styles as Bad.

"The kind of skirt that every woman should wear," he said, "should be wide enough to permit of perfect freedom in walking, and it should not touch the ground at any point. The old style skirts, plaited and flowing, picked up enormous quantities of germs in the streets and carried them into the home, which the sensible skirt would not do."

The opinion that the tight skirt is hygienic and the right thing for women was expressed by 25 doctors in Chicago, among them Drs. Maurice B. Wolff, Norman Curry and Arthur B. Reynolds. They declared the tight skirt is a splendid thing, and that, among other things, it corrects the tendency of the American woman to turn her toes out when walking.

Men Should Marry At 32, Women at 22, Declare Parisians

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, July 3.—The modern French attitude toward marriage will be shown in the results of a canvass conducted by a popular French journal for women.

The first question—"At what age should a young man marry?"—gave an average of 32 years from about 12,000 answers. The second question—"At what age should a young woman marry?"—gave an average of 22 years. To the third question—"What should be the difference in the ages between husband and wife?"—the majority answered five years.

Three hundred and seventy-five women declared that people should not marry at all.

Lillian Russell Wed; Mary Garden, Too

CHICAGO, July 3.—Municipal Judge Hopkins, sitting in the Morals Court, paid for the marriage license of Paul Corallo and Miss Lillian Russell, 28 years old, 1134 West Monroe Street, when they were arraigned before him. He performed a marriage ceremony and gave the bridegroom a present of $5.

According to the marriage license clerk, Mary Garden was also among the brides of yesterday, wedding one Atoni Kral. Mary is not an opera singer.

Cavalieri Principal In D'Annunzio Opera

PARIS, July 3.—Gabriele d'Annunzio, the librettist, and Riccardo Zandonai, the composer of the opera "Francesca da Rimini," will go to Boston to superintend its first production in February next which will take place before it is presented in Europe.

Henry Russell, director of the Boston Opera Company, completed arrangements to-day with Lina Cavalieri to take the principal part.

Women in Trousers Handicapped in Love

NEW YORK, July 3.—Miss Sharlee V. Wilmarth, who has returned from Paris on the Minnetonka, believes it is impossible for a woman to make love in trousers.

MARQUIS' BALM TO CHORUS GIRL $250,000

English Nobleman Settles Beauty's Breach of Promise Suit Out of Court.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 3.—Damages of a quarter of a million dollars were awarded to Miss Violette Moss, a chorus girl, in her breach of promise suit against the Marquis of Northampton, who came into his title two weeks ago.

When the suit was called before the King's Bench, attorneys notified the court that a settlement had been reached by which Miss Moss was to receive $250,000. The action was withdrawn and the costs were put upon the defendant.

Miss Moss, whose stage name is Daisy Markham, set a high price upon her affections. She spurned two previous offers of settlement, one of $50,000 and the other $125,000.

The elder Marquis of Northampton, who tried vainly to break his son's love for the actress, died a fortnight ago in Italy of a broken heart. It was reliably reported that the young marquis had revealed intimate family secrets to Miss Moss and that she threatened to expose these to the public unless amply paid for silence.

In anticipation of hearing racy testimony the courtroom was thronged to-day when the case was called. The spectators were sorely disappointed when the settlement was announced.

THE GHOST BREAKER

By G. W. GODDARD and PAUL DICKEY

Adapted From the Big Broadway Success That Thrilled Thousands of New Yorkers

SERIALIZED

By J. W. McCONAUGHY

(Copyright, 1913, by Star Co.)

IN all the thousands of square feet of steep slate roof there is one loose nail. It thrusts its head up in that one-inch strip where it can catch and hold the bootheel of the steeplejack who is sliding to his death.

This grim, freakish humor of the Powers That Be, which is miscalled "coincidence," caused Warren Jarvis to mistake his right for his left hand as he was running for his life down a carpeted corridor of the Hotel Vanderlip far above the night roar of Broadway. Thus he turned, not into the room that led to the fire escape, but into the bed chamber of the Dona Maria Theresa of Segura, Princess of Aragon, who had a lot of other titles and innumerable privileges, none of which she needed at that moment nearly so much as she needed Warren Jarvis, fleeing the vengeance of the law.

Fevered and distraught the Princess had retired to rest, but not to sleep, an hour before. Her situation, the peril that menaced her, belonged to an age that lives to-day only in Scott and Froissart. Four or five centuries before her countryman Cervantes had slain with a laugh the type of man who would gladly have aided her, and would have seen nothing ridiculous about it. Her ancestral home, the ancient castle of the Seguras, was given over to bats and owls by night and crows by day.

Hidden somewhere among the deadly pitfalls and secret passages of the castle was a treasure of a million dollars in gold. It was guarded by a ghost, a true specter that men had scoffed at and braved—and then had promptly disappeared.

Now it was no longer scoffed at or braved. But she had just received a cable dispatch telling her that her brother had entered the castle and around her neck hung the solution to the hiding place of the treasure, the little chart found that day after a weary search.

A Duke's Offer.

It was a tale to tell a knight of Arthur's table, not to a Castillian dandy of the twentieth century, soft-handed and sophisticated. Her kinsman, the Duke of Alva, indeed, had offered to be her champion, but he bargained in advance, and the guerdon he asked was her hand. And, besides, lately she had had cause to distrust deeply the honor and honesty of her kinsman of Alva.

Dona Maria had never read the lines of Mr. Kipling's "Romance Is Dead!"—and all unseen, romance brought on the nine-fifteen, or she might have had more faith in a power still strong enough to run express trains. When the splendid, silly order of chivalry fell and died the winds of romance carried a few of the seeds across the seas to a broad and fertile valley and dropped them in the rich soil where the Ohio comes down to meet the Mississippi. There, as elsewhere, custom makes law, regardless of written statutes. And so it was that, following a custom that had grown from one of those seeds, as immutable as the Cumberland ridges, a young man in evening clothes, clean of heart, brave and good humored, with a 1912 model pistol gripped in his overcoat pocket, walked past Dona Maria's door in a New York hotel, seeking the head of the Markhams, to kill or be killed in a fair fight, for no other reason than that the man he sought was the head of the Markhams and had invited him to "shoot it out."

But Dona Maria did not know this. As simply as the distressed damosel of Arthur's time she prayed for help, and was sinking into the uncertain doze of the sorely troubled—when romance answered the prayer.

The silence of the cloistral corridor was blasted with a sharp double-crack—the reports of two pistols coming as closely together as you might snap the third and fourth fingers of your hand.

Dona Maria sat up with a start.

"Madre de Dios!" came a self-strangled scream from the maid's room. "What is it?"

There followed instantly a soft thud ding of running feet and a hand violently shook her door. The Princess sprang up with a frightened cry, flung a dressing gown about her and switched on an alcove light. The brass slot in the door frame leaped out, a young man darted inside, closed and bolted the door, and stood crouched against it, panting. A pistol was clutched in his hand and a red trickle ran down and dripped off the barrel on to the red carpet.

The Hunt.

"Madre de Dios!" shrieked the maid again.

"Sh-h!" commanded the young man at the door in a stern whisper. "Keep quiet—don't make any noise!"

The first shock of the alarm past, the Princess stepped out into the dim light from the alcove, holding the dressing gown closely about her. She was a true daughter of romance, hot-blooded and courageous, with no more "nerves" than the mountains that guarded her castle home.

"What do you want?" she demanded, advancing upon the intruder.

For reply he waggled the pistol impatiently and pressed his ear more closely to the door. A confused sound of voices and a mighty running to and fro came from the hall.

"What's the bally row?"

"I heard him—he ran past my door!"

"Anybody killed?"

"What the ——'s loose now?"

"It was two shots—I heard 'em."

The coolness with which he ignored her presence and perfectly natural inquiries as to the cause of the intrusion banished what little trace of alarm was in the Princess' bosom and left only indignation.

"How dare you enter"——

"Sh—silence!" he interrupted, so sharply that she obeyed through sheer amazement. "Not a sound! Do you understand?"

Dona Maria opened her lips to blast him, to summon aid, but the hubbub without broke out anew and she listened. The steps and voices were passing the door.

"It was a pistol, I tell you."

"Well, where'd he go?"

"Look out on the fire escape, Jim!"

"No, he's on this floor."

"How could he get downstairs, you dunce!"

The hue and cry reached down the hall and the Princess swept down upon Mr. Jarvis, who finally straightened up and faced her.

A Man's Appeal.

"Now, what does this mean?" she demanded, grimly, in a swift glance taking account of the evening clothes and the trim, well set-up figure of the man who had wrenched the lock of a door out of its frame. But, though she was brave, she also took account of the pistol.

"Is it money you want?" she demanded, with a curl of her lip. She drew back against the bed. "Every cent I have is on the dressing table. Take it and go!"

The young man pushed his hat back and mopped his brow with the back of his hand.

"No—no!" he protested, raising his voice a little. "I'm not a burglar—I don't want your money."

She noticed that he was panting hard and was very much more agitated than she was. Even the pistol lost its terror.

"Well, then—what do you want?" she cried.

He was about to reply when the sound of the returning hunt reached his ears.

"Wait—wait!" he begged, swiftly. "They're coming here! They must not search this room—do you understand? You must put them off! For pity's sake," he pleaded, "you must put them off! I'm not what you think I am—I haven't done anything wrong—I'll explain afterward!" And he slipped behind the curtain of the alcove as there came an authoritative knock at the door and the maid ran into the room, crying "Madame, something dreadful has happened!"

Dona Maria silenced her. Her eyes were on the door, and she was thinking rapidly. According to those deeply versed in human affairs the truth has no particular accent of its own. But Dona Maria was not deeply versed in these matters—and she was a woman, with a woman's swift, subconscious reasoning. He had told the truth—he was a gentleman—he was hunted and in sore need of a friend, and so was she. A man would have considered only the fact of the shots, the pistol and the flight, and left it to a jury of men, a man-judge and man's law to sift out the rights of the case.

Bang—bang! A more violent assault on the door.

"Anybody in here?" demanded a deep voice. "Open the door!"

A Woman's Way.

The maid shivered, implored the Virgin to look out for her and turned a fearful questioning gaze on her mistress.

"Open it, Nita," was the quiet command. The maid moved gingerly up to the door and Dona Maria took a last quick glance at the curtains that hid the young man who fought with a pistol in a Broadway hotel, broke locks with his hands and had thrown himself on her mercy.

Nita opened the door part way and the house detective, a short, squat man about three feet thick, thrust himself in.

"You all right here?" he asked curtly.

"Si, senor," lisped Nita, timidly. The Princess came forward.

"What is it, Nita?" she asked with becoming dignity. The maid drew aside.

"My mistress," she bowed.

The detective half bowed. "Excuse me, madam," he said, with a slight abatement of his brusqueness. "I'm the house detective. You all right in here?"

For a bare instant Dona Maria hesitated. Then:

"Yes," she said.

"Sorry to bother you—looking for some one," apologized the detective, backing out. "Good night."

"Oh, madame," wailed the girl, after he had gone. "I am so frightened! What is it?—what is it?"

"Control yourself, Nita," the mistress reproved her. "Go to bed. I shall not need you until 6 o'clock."

Sniffling, but subdued, Nita returned to her bedroom and shut herself in. Jarvis emerged from the shelter of the alcove.

"Thank you," he said simply. "Would you mind bolting that door again?" The Princess stared at him, paralyzed by his assurance. With magnificent impudence, so it seemed to her, he did not understand why she did not obey. "He might return," he reminded her. And, undecided whether to laugh, cry or turn him over to the house detective, Princess Dona Maria of Aragon went and bolted the door.

As she turned back to him he pointed with his pistol to the door of the maid's room.

No Way Out.

"Is there no way out throught that door?" he asked.

She told him there was not.

"The fire escape—where is it?"

"In the hall opposite," replied Dona Maria, gazing at him in wonder and perplexity. She knew nothing about him, except that he was, unless appearances were very deceiving, a fugitive from justice. Yet he took it for granted that she was his ally. She was under 30 and considered one of the most beautiful women in Spain. Her kinsman of Alva, who had a discriminating taste in such matters, had made her beauty famous in five capitals, and those of his sex who had been fortunate enough to glimpse her, by accident, in the warmly colored and clinging gown of the boudoir that betrayed every exquisite line, declared that those who had seen Dona Maria only in the ballroom and at the dinner table would have to wait for the houris of Paradise to form some idea of her true loveliness. Yet she was certain that this young man could not have told at that moment if she had cross eyes and a hair lip. Indeed, if there had been any doubt about it his next utterance would have removed it.

"Across the hall? H——l!" he exclaimed, with energy. "I was certain that light was—oh, I beg pardon," he broke off suddenly, and was so boyishly embarrassed and contrite that Dona Maria was certain he had at last noticed the absence of the hair lip. But this did not mean forgiveness.

"Well, why don't you go?" she inquired, coldly.

His confusion increased. "But—but I can't go that way," he protested, waving the pistol hopelessly at the hall door. "They're waiting for me in the hall!"

"Well," the Princess gazed at him with an unusual iciness in her great dark eyes, "what do you expect me to do about it?"

Now this was a tactical blunder, for it summoned the young man's sense of the ridiculous to his aid—and he smiled. If he were not the hero of this narrative it would be a truthful recorder's duty to set down that he grinned. Dona Maria was piqued, but felt herself

The brass slot in the door frame leaped out, a young man darted inside, closed and bolted the door, and stood crouched against it, panting. A pistol was clutched in his hand and a red trickle ran down and dripped off the barrel on to the red carpet.

warm to a man who could smile—or grin—when a house full of police were looking for him. And then came the romantic thought that this was the type of man to be her champion. She surveyed him swiftly, but accurately.

A Modern Hero.

He was not the stuff that dream heroes are made of—at least not to look at, if his build were excepted. He was tall, with broad, slender shoulders and a certain lightness of step and frictionless ease of movement that explained the collapse of the brass lock. But his rumpled hair—he had just at that moment removed his opera hat and was nervously tapping his thigh with it—was a nondescript, plebeian sandy shade, and his good-humored face seemed to have borrowed some of the pigment of the hair. The nose was straight but generously flecked with freckles about the bridge. The mouth was liberally designed, and when he smiled—or grinned—showed rows of strong, white teeth. The eyes were of a kind of sandy gray, and, like Alan Breck's, had a sort of dancing madness in them.

It was a head that would have thrown a Gibson into convulsions, but a Holbein would have clapped a steel cap on it and made it immortal.

Dona Maria noted all of this, but took open note only of the smile—or grin.

"Is the situation so amusing?" she inquired, with increasing wintriness of one and look.

He made a quick gesture of apology nd was instantly serious.

"I'm not laughing at you—I beg your pardon. I blundered in here by mistake—but I'm in a tight place. I can't leave by that door. I must find some other way."

He threw open his overcoat as he spoke and she saw the blood on his hand. This was the last needed touch. She was a woman.

"You're wounded!" she exclaimed, going to him and looking at the hand solicitously. "What's happened? Those shots I heard—"

He nodded and laughed silently. "I almost stopped one of the bullets. It just nudged me as it was going by."

"Your hand is bleeding dreadfully."

"Oh, not much," he assured her, and tried awkwardly to tie the wrist with his handkerchief, still holding the revolver. The Princess half raised her hands to assist him and drew back. He did not notice. He was gazing about the room with a troubled frown.

"I don't see how the devil——" he muttered, more to himself than to her, evidently trying to devise some means of escape. Dona Maria drew a little farther away.

"You have evidently shot some one and are trying to make me shield you from justice," she said sternly.

"No, not justnce," he rejoined instantly, "from the law."

"I thought they were the same."

He shook his head gravely. "No, not always. There would be no justice for me at the hands of the law."

He looked into her eyes as he spoke, and for a few moments they stood thus in silence. The woman's eyes turned away first.

"That is not for me to decide," she declared.

"But I want you to decide," he urged gently. "At least, you must listen. And if you find me guilty I'll—well, I'll try the fire escape or anything—anything else you say."

The Princess raised her eyes to his and found them so full of earnest pleading that she dropped them once more.

"That is ridiculous," she said, but with such marked lack of conviction that he smiled.

"Hardly ridiculous," he objected; "when I'm arguing for my life."

Having fully made up her mind to listen, Dona Maria found another objection. Her eyes rested on the revolver.

"Can any decision be more unjust than mine," she asked coldly, "that must be made at the point of a pistol?"

He started, and flushed, and gazed down at his right hand. He had forgotten that he was still holding the revolver. Then he walked over to the dressing table and placed it within easy reach of her hand, and stood off some little distance, so that she was between him and the weapon.

"There is nothing to prevent your calling for help now," he said, hopelessly. "After all, it doesn't much matter whether the end comes now or tomorrow or the day after."

The Princess eyed him steadily until she was convinced that the despair was not a sham. There was no trace of the disarming smile.

His Explanation.

"The end?" she echoed, somewhat blankly. "Then why didn't you give yourself up?"

"That would have been the end," was the grim reply. Dona Maria's manner softened ever so slightly and she moved very slowly toward him. He correctly interpreted this as encouragement to proceed.

"Do you know what a feud is?" he asked abruptly. Her eyes opened wide and she pointed out in the general direction whence those shots had come.

"Feud!" sh exclaimed in a low voice. "Was that——?"

"Yes," he nodded. "That was the end of a feud. Do you know what a feud is?"

"Spain is the home of feuds," she replied, softly.

Jarvis started and his face lit with hope. "Spain!" he exclaimed. "Are you Spanish? Then you will understand! My grandmother was Spanish—one of the oldest families in Cuba. I was born in Kentucky, but they sent me East to be reared. I was called home suddenly by the death of my father—shot in a feud. They told me the ghastly history of our feud," he went on rapidly, his voice vibrant with emotion, "how our family had been assassinated, man after man, by the descendants of Daniel Markham. Then my father fell, leaving me—the last—to fight it out alone!"

He paused with a gulp and Dona Maria, leaning toward him, asked softly: "And your mother?"

"She has gone, too."

"She—she died?" The question was almost reverent.

"She died. God only knows what I've been through since then!"

He turned away and there was a little silence.

"But," said Dona Maria, as if gently arguing a point with an old friend, "why didn't you leave Kentucky?"

He jerked himself around impatiently.

"I did leave Kentucky—I was forced to leave!" he cried. "I had grown sick at heart and—and the odds were too great. I sent a negro servant to New York and followed soon after by another route; but it was no use. I was going to sail for Europe, longing for peace, but they wouldn't let me. Every move was watched! I had hardly been in New York five hours before I realized that the Markham clan was on my trail, eager to get me before I could get out of the country. They thought I was afraid, when I was only sick of it. A message reached me at my hotel—across the street—at 12 o'clock tonight. It was signed 'Jim Markham'—the head of the family—and proposed that as we were out of Kentucky we end the feud amicably. I knew the name, I knew what he meant, and I went to see him—prepared!"

Her Side of It.

He shrugged his shoulders half in resignation, half in despair.

"It was as I expected. He was stopping in this hotel—on this floor. I threw open the door of the room, unannounced. Nothing was said—we both fired." He looked down at his wounded and, and his dramatic manner vanished.

"Now do you understand why the law would not give me justice?" he asked quietly.

The girl shuddered. "It's all so horrible," she murmured. "Did—did you kill him?"

Jarvis opened his hands and dropped them, limp.

"I don't know," he replied indifferently. "He dropped—I didn't wait."

He looked past, not at, her as he spoke. The lethargy, the mental and physical languor, that succeeds a terrible crisis was upon him—the time when a man feels that he is without strength, without friends, without hope.

The girl sensed the change in him and was surprised to feel a twinge of impatience.

"What are you going to do?" she asked crisply.

Jarvis shrugged his shoulders. "I don't know." The tone was dull and hopeless. "What's the use of going on? Do you know what it means," he went on bitterly, "to fight single-handed against fearful odds—to fight an endless fight alone?"

The girl turned her dark eyes on him with a strange expression.

"Yes," she said, half audibly; "yes, I know."

"A barren, fruitless, hopeless fight—without even a single gleam of love or word of encouragement?"

"Yes," replied Dona Maria, slowly and with meaning, "I know what it means."

Jarvis stared at her. "You know?" he exclaimed, incredulously. "How could you know—how could any woman know?"

"Yes, I know," declared the Princess, somberly. "Because I, too, am fighting against fearful odds."

The young woman gazed at her in wonder that gave way to sympathy and more wonder as her loveliness came upon him.

"There is no man to fight for you?" he asked, betraying his thought in his question. Dona Maria understood.

"No man left who dares," she replied with bitterness.

As his gaze strayed from the soft, deep black eyes to the pile of soft black hair and down the curve of the soft, creamy cheek to the smooth red lips, he wondered, even in the depths of his misery, what manner of men she had about her.

"God!" he breathed, fervently, "if here had only been some woman to fight for in my fight!"

And if he had said all that was in his mind he would have inserted the words, "like you." Dona Maria must have understood that these words were implied, for she said softly:

"It seems as though Providence had thrown you in my path. You say there would be no justice for you at the hands of the law? If you are found here it means your life."

"Yes," he replied and waited curiously for what was to come. Dona Maria appeared to deliberate.

"Suppose I decide to help you," she suggested gravely, "and drive a hard bargain?"

Jarvis was relieved to find that he could smile again. So was Dona Maria, but she did not publish her feelings.

"What do you mean?" he inquired.

"Your life in Kentucky is finished—you can never go back to it."

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Hilbert Tells of Her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.

FLEETWOOD, PA.—"During the Change of Life I was hardly able to be around at all. I always had a headache and I was so dizzy and nervous that I had no rest at night. The flashes of heat were so bad sometimes that I did not know what to do.

"One day a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me a strong well woman. I am very thankful that I followed my friend's advice, and I shall recommend it as long as I live. Before I took the Compound I was always sickly and now I have not had medicine from a doctor for years. You may publish my letter."—MRS. EDWARD B. HILBERT, Fleetwood, Pa.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, bakaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

A Short Story, Complete

"GRACIOUS!" said the girl in the lizard green gown. "You've got your hair pulled back! Why do you do it so plainly?"

"It isn't!" objected the young married woman, ungrammatically. "It's no plainer than yours or any one else—it's just that you've been used to seeing me with all my hair on—puffs, transformations, braid and Billie Burke curls! Oh, I stuck to them long after every one else had gone in for the new plain style, using just one's own hair. But I didn't have enough own hair to make a bit with, and, anyhow, I look better with my hair sort of elaborate. But I'm cured!"

"Who did it?"

"It wasn't a who, it was a what," explained the young married woman. "But I'll tell you, anyway.

"The other day I remembered that I was due at the Splurge wedding that evening, so I shampooned my own hair and washed my own hair once removed in gasoline. Now, if there is anything I dislike, it is to go by a building and think an Indian reservation has broken loose and is exhibiting scalplocks—for that is what I'm always reminded of when I see curls and puffs and things pinned to the lace curtains where they will get the breeze and sun and will lose their gasoliny perfume.

Hidden From View.

"So after my extra adornments were cleansed I pinned them inside the window curtains, where they were hidden from the view of the populace. Then, feeling safe and at peace, I sat on the sun porch and read a book and dried my truly hair. After a while, when it got to be luncheon time, I went to my bedroom for something and casually glanced at the curtains where modestly hung my other hair. Only it didn't hang there. The curtains flapped mockingly, and if you had seen me dive headforemost at that open window you would have been justified in the belief that suicide was the best thing I did.

"Down in the alley below was a lovely sea of mud. They are building on the next lot, and the heavy wagons with brick and cement and things have made a regular morass of the place. Probably my hair was in the mud. As I stared a particularly heavy wagon, lumbered and squashed through, shaking off several pounds of brickdust. I shrieked madly for help, and Tilly, the baby's nurse, came running.

"'Those luffly puffs!' Tilly wailed and darted forthwith to the alley, while I directed operations from above. Tilly balanced on a brick and surveyed the mud with deep dislike, making little dabs at it tentatively. Finally, in one of the deep ruts she saw a whisp of hair projecting, and some tugging excavated my largest puff, a sodden, sticky lump. A puddle gave up another and she found a third under the imprint of a horse's hoof, but the fourth had vanished. Tilly came upstairs holding her muddy treasure trove at arm's length.

"'But where's my transformation?' I shrieked. 'That cost $15—and as for the braid—well, I might just as well go into bankruptcy if that switch isn't found!'"

"Tilly protested that the earth below would not yield up another bit of hair. I began to wonder how I could send regrets to a wedding after I had already accepted, and then Mary called me to luncheon. I was weeping real tears into my soup when Mary burst in and asked permission to go downstairs, which was unusual at a mealtime, of course. I inquired why, but she just waved her arms wildly and disappeared.

"In due time she reappeared breathless and triumphant with a weird-looking thing in one hand. It was my transformation! She said she had scoured the country roundabout with the opera glasses and had seen something hanging on a bridal wreath bush in the Harveys' front yard, three houses down, and it looked like hair to her, and it proved to be hair. She added that Mrs. Harvey on the front porch had seemed greatly interested in the proceedings. Mrs. Harvey has always exclaimed publicly about my 'wealth of beautiful hair,' so I could imagine how pleased she must have been.

A Ring.

"As I finished my strawberries there was a loud ring at the bell, and when Tilly went to the speaking tube I distinctly heard the wretch of a small boy who was in the vestibule two stories below yelling for the edification of the whole building: 'Say, yer switch is a-hanging just below your bedroom window ledge on the telephone wires!'

"Tilly got the switch while I hung on to her heels. Then, very much exhausted, I washed everything again—but somehow I kept smelling gasoline all evening and I distinctly heard a man back of me in the middle of the church say it was remarkable how the automobiles outside seemed to be leaking. It was too much of a strain, so I've abandoned the whole outfit."

"Well, I don't blame you!" said the girl in the lizard green gown.

Freaks of Fashion

Monstrosities From Paris Boulevards

In Paris extremes of costume are seen more frequently than they are here. These three were "snapped" by a foreign correspondent for the Hearst newspapers recently. When our fashion expert was asked to describe them she immediately complained of feeling faint and went home. Therefore any of our women readers who feel "freakish" will have to solve these fashion puzzles for themselves.

Time's Up! Did You Send in a Solution of "The Triple Tie"?

$250 in Cash Prizes for the Best "Final Chapter" of The Georgian's Great Mystery Story

The final chapters of "The Triple Tie" will be printed in The Georgian next Monday, July 7. Readers of "The Triple Tie" had until noon to-day to send in their conception of the conclusion of the story, containing their solution of the mystery in competition for prizes aggregating $250 offered by The Georgian. The problems for the reader to solve were these:

First—How does Kelly escape the mountaineers?

Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?

Third—How did Gordon Kelly, who confessed that he never saw a game of ball and never played a game of ball up to the time he asked Manager Smith of the Atlanta club for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to bat, catch and run bases in the marvelous manner he displayed at Atlanta that caused the Boston club to give the unheard-of price of $50,000 for Gordon Kelly's release?

Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the ninth inning of the final and deciding game?
Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

No contributions will be considered if they are delivered at The Georgian office later than to-day, July 3, noon, or bear a postmark later than that time.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian, will award the prizes.

The prizes for the best solutions are as follows:

First Prize	$100.00
Second Prize	50.00
Third Prize	25.00
Fourth Prize	15.00
Twelve Prizes, each	5.00
Total	$250.00

CUDDLING COTTAGES : A Charming Short Story, Complete

THERE were two red houses in Acraman's road which shouldered each other confidentially and seemed on such manifestly affectionate terms that the notion of their respective inhabitants being anything but bosom friends was simply ridiculous.

The thought struck Dollabella Powney quite forcibly when she bought one of these said houses, and made her more eager than was her wont (she was not curious by nature) to catch a glimpse of her next door neighbor. Oddly enough, it was quite a fortnight after she had moved in before she did so, and then the manner of her "catching" was sadly at variance with her customary traditions of dignity.

Consumed one May evening with a desire to know something of that neighbor's tastes and habits, she rose on an inverted blacking box which she had placed against her garden wall to take a furtive peep at the adjacent premises. The neighbor, curiously enough, chose that precise spot and moment for a similar maneuver. Result, their noses all but met. The neighbor said afterward that he was training a creeper, but the denouement was, in any case, absurd. Dollabella shrieked.

Her blacking box turned turtle at the start she gave, and she nearly sprained an ankle as she fell plump into a group of peonies. With a countenance the color of those flamboyant blossoms, and tears of mortification in her eyes, she scrambled up and went majestically indoors, banging the front door to ease her feelings. The neighbor—such is the depravity of man—laughed. After that there was only one course open to Dollabella—the next-door neighbor must be ignored—sent to Coventry—ostracized—crushed.

It was two months later, and the sultry glory of a July evening took the "Cuddling Cottagers"—as they were irreverently called—into an almost tropical embrace. Miss Powney was very busy—a garden hose in one hand and a little black volume, with a white whirligig on its cover, in the other. She appeared, between bouts of watering, to be committing something to memory.

The next door man was on a ladder. He was chronically on ladders. Dollabella had consulted her lawyer brother as to the possibility of a single woman getting an injunction against people who perpetually mounted heights and, under a pretext of pruning, commanded other people's domains. Moreover, he was whistling, and his whistling got upon Dollabella's nerves. Whenever she looked up she could see his straw hat and a pair of big brown hands busy among the young branches of a mulberry tree—and the sight annoyed her.

"Fractures," said Dollabella to herself, as she hosed a thirsty-looking clump of carnations, "are of six kinds: simple — compound — convex — concave (no, that sounds nonsense)—wait a minute."

She threw back her head and looked to the sky for inspiration.

"Wheou—whe-ou," went the man next door.

"Simple—compound — implicated—ocntex—ah!"

"Slither—scrape—crash—plomb!"

"Good heavens!" cried Dollabella, and the little black book with the white whirligig fell from her nerve-shaken hand to the ground.

A Crash.

Something had happened next door—something which included a splintering sound and the too sudden contact of a heavy body with Mother Earth.

The whistling had ceased abruptly in the middle of a bar; there was no longer any sign of a straw hat and clipping hands.

Dollabella, listening in cold horror, heard two or three groans, and then there was a ghastly silence.

Her heart thumped hard against her ribs—her breath came in little uncomfortable gasps.

"It's an accident of some sort," she said addressing the flower borders. "Now, what ought I to do?"

The hollyhocks and sweet-williams having no views on the subject she did what common sense prompted. The gardener, who came once a week to mow the grass and titivate the garden generally, had left a pair of short steps close at hand. She fetched them and placed them against the wall, and climbed to the top.

She was almost afraid to look, but common sense gave her another prod, and look she did; and, in looking beheld a prone figure which lay on its back, presenting a very white upturned face to the summer sky.

By its side, also prone, was a broken ladder.

At first she really thought that the whistling man next door was dead. Her heart seemed to turn a somersault and to stop before it got over. She scrambled down into his garden, dropping bang on to a choice lilium-auratum in the process, and hurried to his side. He was breathing, but seemed quite unconscious, and his right arm was bent in a curious way—and the hand looked swollen.

To the Rescue.

Dollabella knelt down and felt it gingerly; then she stared at it, and tried to marshal her recently acquired knowledge. "Pain—deformity—swelling," she muttered. "It's broken, of course it's broken. What shall I do? I must put it into splints before I call help."

Her eyes roved wildly around and discovered a golf putter lying on the lawn near a small hole. The whistling man practiced putting—when he was not in midair.

By means of his putter and a sturdy stick used for tying up dahlias, Dollabella made very serviceable splints which she tied on with her handkerchief and his. Just as she finished her patient moaned a little—and opened his eyes.

The pain in them lessened when he saw the apparition which bent over him.

"You will be quite all right now," Dollabella assured him, speaking very distinctly as if he were a child. "It's your arm, you know—broken. You know, I'm the girl from next door. I'm going to make you comfortable and send for your housekeeper to watch you while I fetch the doctor."

She looked around and seized a coat which she found near at hand, and arranged it beneath his head. The whistling man shut his eyes and moaned. The very slight movement had pained him.

"The beastly stem broke," he explained. "I was—ugh!"

"Yes—yes—don't try to talk; it will soon be better," Dollabella reassured him. "Now, lie quite still."

The caution was scarcely necessary as the man next door was in no condition to do anything else.

More Help.

He shut his eyes again. "Must you go?" he whispered.

"I must, really. You'll have to be bandaged properly, you see—besides, you're too big for me to move. I won't be long."

She sped indoors, big-eyed and white. After much unsuccessful knocking she dislodged a middle-aged housekeeper whom she almost pushed into the garden, explaining dramatically, and then she turned around again.

Up the country road she tore, and, after ten breathless minutes, she reached the doctor's house. Fortunately, he was in. He cast himself on a motor bicycle and flashed off almost before Dollabella had concluded the account of the accident.

The next day, after some debate with herself, she sent in her little maid to inquire after her neighbor. The answer came back: "Mr. Randall's compliments, and he was going on very nicely, and would like to see Miss Powney, if she could kindly find time to go in."

Dollabella, flushing very much at the message, decided she could not possibly find time to obey its request, and, to emphasize the truth of this, she sat idle for hours wondering whether she could or not. Mere civility demanded that she should go. She said this again and again. The man next door was lying on a couch, looking very forlorn.

"Please come in and sit down. Did you mind my asking you to come in like this?—I couldn't get to you—you see."

"I'm so glad you're better," Dollabella said primly, and she sat down obediently.

"It was slight concussion, you know, or I should be walking about," said the man next door. "I had to keep awfully quiet for 24 hours. How ever shall I thank you?"

Dollabella did not reply; she was staring very hard at the damaged arm in its splints.

Not the Arm.

"That isn't the arm I first aided," she suddenly burst out. "I—tied up your left—the one with the ring. I know I did."

The man next door got crimson right up to his nicely marked eyebrows. "It—it doesn't signify a bit," he said uncomfortably. "You did it beautifully—the doctor said so—and how could you know which arm it was if I wasn't up to telling you?"

"Pain—deformity—swelling," muttered Dollabella. "I am fated," she added distinctly, "to do idiotic things where you are concerned," and two big tears of sheer mortification rolled down her cheeks. And when she saw a smile on the face of her companion she could have killed him without compunction.

"What are you laughing at, please?" Dollabella dabbed her eyes defiantly.

"Because your 'idiotic things,' as you call them, don't hold a rushlight to mine. Confession's good for the soul. Look here—I never meant to tell you, but I—I threw myself off that ladder——"

"On purpose?"

"Yes."

"What on earth for?"

"Because I knew about the Red Cross classes, and I thought a smash-up would fetch you—but I never meant to break myself up like this."

Dollabella tried to keep her lips from twitching, but she couldn't.

Somehow the man next door got the unhurt arm around Dollabella's shoulders, and what he said when it was there does not matter to you or me. All that does matter is that the respective owners of the "Cuddling Cottages" behaved themselves quite appropriately from that day onward.

A couple of doors knocked through party walls later on made those houses one. The owners had been made one some weeks before.

Correct Words and How to Use Them

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.
Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

EVERY intelligent person is always progressing and is never indifferent in matters of culture. If careless habits of speech have been formed a determined effort to correct them will lead to good results.

Many persons who consider themselves well educated make the mistake of using the participle "got" in connection with the verb "to have." They say: "Have you got the key?" "Who has got my book?" instead of "Have you the key?" "Who has my book?"

Mistakes of everyday occurrence are, "Who did you give it to?" "Who is this for?" instead of the correct expressions, "To whom did you give it?" "For whom is this?"

Frequently one hears these errors in grammar: "I intended to have bought a pair of gloves," instead of "I intended to buy a pair of gloves;" "It was no use asking him," instead of "It was no use to ask him;" "Try and persuade her to go," instead of "Try to persuade her to go."

It would seem unnecessary to tell any one not to use the present tense instead of the past tense when mentioning what another has said, yet a careless person may be heard saying, "He says," instead of "He said."

Other faults are to say "A great ways," "Somewheres," "There's plenty of places."

The contraction "don't" for "do not" should never be used with a singular noun or pronoun. It is correct to say "He does not," and not "He don't." It is important to remember the objective form of the first person singular when a noun or pronoun or two pronouns follow a verb, and not to say "Ethel asked Mary and I to go," but "Ethel asked Mary and me to go." If one is confused about the use of pronouns in a sentence of this sort an easy rule is to separate them and use each one with the verb, thus: "Ethel asked Mary," and "Ethel asked me." In this way the grammatical form is seen.

It is correct to say "A summer day," not "A summer's day." "Cut the apple in two" or "in halves," not "Cut the apple in half." "I cut the ribbon off this piece," not "off of this piece." "The child threw it on the floor," not "onto the floor."

"Whether" is a word that indicates a choice of things and should not be placed at the head of each part of a sentence. For instance, it is incorrect to repeat it thus: "I have not decided whether I shall go to Boston or whether I shall stay at home."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ASK HER.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and in love with a girl of twenty-one. She also loves me. Last night I told a friend about it. He laughed and said: "That girl is married."

Now, how shall I find out the truth?

CONSTANT READER.

Ask her. If you find you can't take her word, then cease your attentions. No happiness was ever built on doubt or suspicion.

QUIT TELLING HER.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-three, and have had an acquaintance with a girl of eighteen for the past nine months. I am deeply in love with her, but, somehow, she does not seem to appreciate the same. Now, what I would like to know is there anyway I could bring her to understand the true feeling I have for her? G. F.

You have given her nine months' devotion that she doesn't seem to appreciate. The story of your love seems to have become old and stale. Quit telling it. Awaken her interest by giving her some reason to doubt you.

Who's tI Was.

A school teacher who was giving a lesson on "food" was interrupted by one of his pupils.

"Please, sir," he said, "Jimmy says he knew a baby that was brought up on elephant's milk, and it gained ten pounds in weight every day."

"Jimmy ought not to tell you such rubbish," said the teacher. "Whose baby was it that was brought up on elephant's milk?"

"Please, sir," answered Jimmy, "it was the elephant's."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I SHOWED Pa & Ma a peece in a boys' magazine that offerd a prize of ten dollars for the best short story of ad-venture wrote by a boy not oaver twelve yeers old. I toald Pa that I was going to try for the prize, & Pa sad rite away that he wud help me rite the story.

Why doant you let Bobbie rite it hisself? sed Ma. I doant think it wud be fair to the other littel boys who will com-peet to have you cum along with yure wunderful, marvelous brain & win that ten dollars. Let the kids have thare own competishun, Ma sed.

So this is the story I rote. It had to be less than a hundred words & it is pritty hard to rite a story inside of a hundred words & have the whole plot in. This is how I rote it:

It was midnite in Mexico. A silvery moon smiled at the Rio Grande wich wound its way through the lonely desert.

Crack! A pistol shot rang out & Bad Antonio pitched from his horse.

Sheriff Vane halted his horse before it cud trample on the body of the outlaw.

One glanst was enuff for Sheriff Vane.

The Mexican was ded.

Crack! Crack! Two pistol shots rang out thru the desert air, and Sheriff Vane pitched from his horse.

Bad Silvio and Bad Chico halted thare horses beefoar they cud trample on the body of the Sheriff.

One glanst was enuff for the two outlaws.

The Sheriff was ded.

That story won't win any prize, Bobbie, sed Pa. It ain't a good piece of work at all. I guess you better let me rite it all oaver for you.

Ma seen that I felt kind of bad. Every time wen I feel bad my lip gits kind of stiff. I can't help it & I can't grin wen I try. So Ma patted me on the cheek and sed Bobbie, that is a good story, & I bet you will win the prize. Yure father can't help you in this contest, excep, maybe, he can help you to spend the ten dollars wen you win it.

He will nevver win the prize, sed Pa. The story is vary crude.

I don't think you are a competent critick, sed Ma. You nevver rote any stories yourself that won any prizes, & now you are trying to tell littel Bobbie how to rite. You are always that way, Ma sed, trying to tell peepul how to do things that you can not do yureself. I will bet you a ten-dollar bathrobe aggenst a ten-dollar hat, Ma sed, that Bobbie wins the prize. I am giving you a even munny bet, Ma sed, & I am taiking Bobbie aggenst the whole field. That is the kind of a bettor I am, Ma sed.

Sure enuff, day beefoar yesterday I got a letter from the boys' magazeen & thare was a new ten-dollar bill in it.

"Well, sed Ma to Pa, cum acrost with that ten dollars for my hat.

I haven't the change now, sed Pa. Bobbie, let yure mother taik that ten dollars till payday.

That is the way Pa paid his bet & I wud be broak now only Ma galv me the ten back & sed she wud wait till payday for her hat. Pa thinks he knows lots, but Ma is a better bettor.

Not Like Him.

The Academy exhibition, with its fine Sargent portraits, recalls a story of this famous artist. At a banquet a young lady whom he knew very well said to him:

"Oh, Mr. Sargent, I saw your latest painting, and kissed it because it was so much like you."

"And did it kiss you in return?"

"Why, no."

"Then," said Mr. Sargent, "it was not like me."

Competition.

A little girl had been the pet of the family. Every one made much of her, but when there was a new little baby brother she felt rather neglected.

"How are you, Mary?" a visitor asked of her one afternoon.

"Oh, I'm all right," she said, "except that I think there is too much competition in this world."

In the lunatic asylum at Nantes is an illiterate inmate who has been discovered by the chief doctor to be a remarkable "lightning calculator." Ask what would be the age of a person who had lived a milliard of seconds, he took only 48 seconds to reply correctly. In 23 seconds he supplied the correct answer to the question, what would be the age of a person who had lived 343,000,000 seconds. He required only 32 seconds to find out how many seconds there were in 39 years, three months, twelve hours. Having been told the square mileage of the globe, he was asked how many hectares that represents, and gave the correct reply in four seconds. Asked how many seconds there are in 30 years, he replied in fourteen seconds, and explained that his calculations had involved four multiplications and one addition by mental arithmetic.

Mr. Jeffrey Farnol, who so suddenly leaped into fame as the author of "The Broad Highway," of which more than 300,000 copies have been sold, comes of a stock somewhat remarkable for its longevity. His grandparents are still living, as also their ten sons and daughter, with numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Four generations of one family, with only one loss by death—and that the author's brother, who fell in action in the Boer war—may be considered almost phenomenal.

Eat This Food During Summer

Be careful what you eat during hot weather. What you need is food that nourishes but does not heat the body.

Faust Spaghetti fits right into that class. It is a high gluten food—a bone, muscle and flesh former—but contains practically no fat, therefore cannot heat the body.

FAUST SPAGHETTI

makes a savory, appetizing dish. It can be served in a great many ways that appeal to the palate. It is easily prepared—it makes a nutritious, non-heating meal during the summer. Write for free recipe book, "Spaghetti and Its Uses." Faust Spaghetti put up in air-tight, moisture-proof packages.

GULLS FADING; RACE TIGHTENS UP NOW--AGLER

By Joe Agler.

PRICE AND CHAPMAN will do the haavy work for the Crackers in the opening game with the Pels to-day.

Paul Musser pitched a grand article of ball yesterday, and won the second and last game of the series from the Gulls. Paul was never in any great danger, and had everything his own way.

We scored in the first inning, and it looked like enough to win. We made sure, however, and scored two more in the seventh on clean hitting.

And that was enough.

They scored in the seventh, but could not find Musser for more than one run.

The Crackers certainly had a lot of life in both games, while Mobile was dead and never had a word to say.

The Gulls have left on a long trip around the circuit, and within a few more days there will be another leader in the league.

July will prove to be a great month for excitement in the pennant race in the Southern. Mobile, Chattanooga, Montgomery, Atlanta and perhaps Birmingham will be in a big scramble, and they will make some trouble before the season is over.

Now that we are on a winning streak and our twirlers going good again, and with our two weeks at home, we will start to climb and be up where we belong before long.

Price should win his game, as he is going good and has something on the Pels.

GIANTS MAKE 46 HITS IN THREE GAMES WITH PHILS

The Giants are a slob team, of course, as the last world's series showed. But they are surely the loud sound in the National League.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday they faced the Phillies in the "crucial series." The Phillies are supposed to have one of the greatest pitching staffs in the world. Yet in three games the Giants made 46 hits. On two occasions they made 17 hits. Once they got only 12. In the three games they scored 19 runs. Among the pitchers they drove to the woods were Chalmers twice, Moore, Killifer, Alexander twice, Rixey, Mayer and Seaton.

BRITTON AGREES TO 133 IN JULY 4 GO WITH WHITE

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 3.—Charlie White and Jack Britton are to fight at 133 pounds, weighing in three and one-half hour before their fight Friday afternoon. Britton agreed to this to-day when a conference of principals was held to settle final details. The meeting had waited the arrival of Nate Lewis from Chicago. The weight is quite satisfactory to White, who had expected he would be forced to make it 134, which would have been somewhat of an advantage to Britton. The boys will enter the ring at about 3:30 p. m.

"Charlie will surely continue his winning streak," said Lewis. "The next important match I am counting on is between White and the winner of the Ritchie-Rivers go."

CRACKERS OPEN SERIES TO-DAY WITH PELICANS

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Crackers return from a strenuous road trip to-day, bringing more victories than was expected, and open here this afternoon with the once famous Pelicans.

With the team back in something resembling its stride now, with a new and promising pitcher coming, with Price and Conzelman in good trim, there is nothing to keep the Crackers from showing some speed on their present home stay.

To-day's game is an extra affair, a transferred game from New Orleans.

On July 4 games will be played in the morning and afternoon. Saturday one game will be played. All these contests will be with the well-known doormats of the league.

* * *

MEMPHIS and Mobile will furnish the opposition next week. The week after Montgomery comes for three games. And then the Crackers beat it southward.

As things stand now the Crackers are within comfortable striking distance of the lead. All needed is a good, brisk winning streak to get the Crackers up there fighting with the Gulls. The New Orleans and Memphis games should close up the gap somewhat. Then the Gulls come, and if the Crackers can sweep that series and trim Montgomery they will leave Atlanta for their Southern trip so close to first place that it will make it interesting.

Don't make the mistake of figuring the Crackers out of it yet. They aren't. A spurt will put them up in the running with a rush.

* * *

IT'S hard to figure why Carl Thompson isn't making a better showing. He looks like a great pitcher and he wins a few games. But somehow he couldn't stick with Birmingham.

Possibly by antagonizing the other players on every team of which he becomes a member Thompson hurts his own chances. It is certain that he did not stand high in the estimation of the other Barons and that they did not give him good support. Many a pitcher has been ruined because no team would play behind him.

* * *

CHARLEY FRANK has won more controversies and less ball games this season than any time in his history. He practically hasn't lost an argument or won a ball game. Of course that's an exaggerated statement but close to the real facts.

If this sort of thing keeps on Charley will give up managing and become a lawyer.

CHARLEY HEMPHILL is not a great manager. That has been demonstrated. Probably Charley himself would hardly argue that he was. But he can still hit that old pellet. Up in the husky American Association where 20 men are batting over .300, Charley is next to the top, with a batting average of .353. R. Miller, of Columbus, is the only man who tops him.

TWO International League clubs are fighting over the services of Claude Derrick, ex-University of Georgia player, now with the Athletics. Both Baltimore and Rochester want him, with the chances fairly good that he will go back to Baltimore.

Derrick can not seem to stick in the big leagues but he is plenty good enough for the fastest of minor leagues and should have many good years in the International.

FINE REMEDY FOR ECZEMA

Also for Salt Rheum, Tetter, Psoriasis, Lupus, and All Skin Afflictions.

Even a Microscope Won't Find a Blemish After S. S. S. Gets Through.

All skin troubles should be attacked from within by giving the blood circulation a good daily bath. This is accomplished with S. S. S., the best known and most highly recommended blood purifier ever discovered. Its action is very rapid. Its vegetable nature is such that it naturally goes right into the blood, saturates the entire circulation, bathes the tissues with an influence that enables the skin to heal quickly. The action of S. S. S. is that of an antidote, and this fact has been demonstrated time and time again in the most severe forms of weeping eczema.

Its influence in the tissues where the tiny arteries transfer the red blood for the worn-out blood to the veins is quite remarkable and goes on constantly with every tick of the clock—the beat of the heart.

And new skin is thus caused to form, while the germs of irritating influences that cause eczema are scattered and their harmful nature entirely suspended.

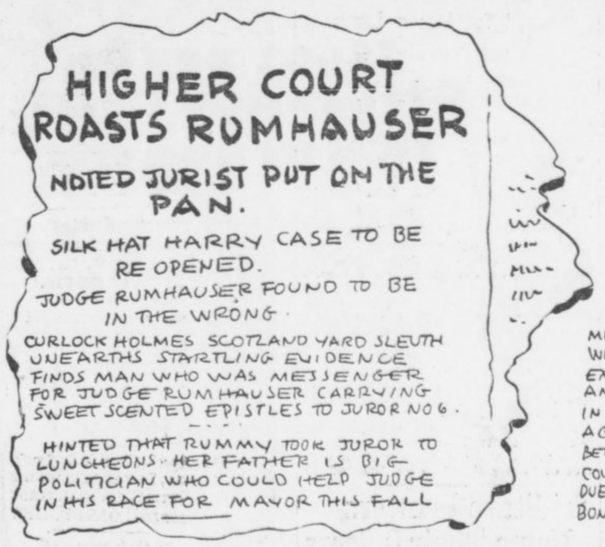

S. S. S. has a wonderful tonic influence in the blood because it contains no "dope," is not a "physic," is entirely free of any mineral drugs or any other drugs except the remarkable medicinal effect of the pure vegetable products of which it is made.

Few people realize how harmful are many of the strong, crude ointments that used to be in favor before they learned that S. S. S. is safe, speedy and sure. Ask at any drug store for a bottle of S. S. S. Give it a good trial and you will soon see a decided improvement in any form of skin trouble. Write to The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for special free advice on eczema and any other form of skin or blood trouble.

What Baseball Umps Should Do

Heisman Helps Amateur Arbiters

By J. W. Heisman

FIRST rattle out of the box, let me say this small package of umpiring tips is not intended for professional arbiters, albeit more than one of such could improve himself and give better satisfaction to players and public if he would take to heart one more of the points I herein will discuss.

So far as the teams and their captains are concerned, it is naturally well for them to get, whenever possible, an umpire who has had some experience, who has some natural qualifications for the work, and most important of all, a man who has an unblemished reputation. This article will be of no assistance whatever to a prospective umpire in any one of these three considerations; but most any one is liable to be called upon at some time or other in his fortuitous career to umpire a game of ball, and perhaps a point or two herein touched upon may dwell in his memory and help him out of more than one dilemma during the progress of the riot.

* * *

IN THE first place, if there is only one umpire to the game, he should take his stand behind the catcher, and should remain there as long as no men get on bases. He should not think of taking up this station without a mask over his face; and if there is a protector to be had, he should also don that.

The umpire should be careful not to stand so close upon the catcher's heels as to crowd him, and he should ever be on the alert for a possible foul foul fly popping up. In such an event he should be quick to jump out of the catcher's way, for naturally the latter will be after it in a jiffy.

* * *

ABOUT the hardest thing connected with umpiring is to call balls and strikes to the satisfaction of both teams. Often enough pitchers come in complaining that the umpire always makes them split the plate. If true, this constitutes a just complaint, for it is the acme of good pitching never to give a batter a ball squarely over the middle. If the umpire will not give a strike when the pitcher has both head and control sufficient to just nick the corners, his good work is nullified by the umpire's limitations of sight or judgment.

And umpires often enough call a strike when the ball has passed the batter at the level of the latter's eyes or chin or neck. This is a big mistake. Merely because the batter is able to see over the top of the ball, or because many a batter likes to take a wallop at a ball that is winding snake-like around his neck is no reason why it should be called a strike. A judge of play should be guided strictly and entirely by what the rule says, and in this case the provision is that it must be between the knee and the shoulder.

* * *

MANY batters squat or crouch at the plate before the ball is delivered, and when it comes up they crouch a deal more. In this position the ball seems often to go away over their heads, when it would clearly be a satisfactory height for another man who did not have such a stooping attitude. An umpire should be careful not to let a batter get away with this crouching posture to such an extent as to compel the pitcher to put them all knee-high. The idea is that it is a strike if it passes at a height not greater than the shoulder when the batsman is in a natural hitting attitude.

Umpires often make the mistake of judging a pitched ball by where the catcher caught it. Often enough the catcher "pulls" the ball so cleverly as to deceive the umpire; and then again the mere effect of gravity or the curve of the ball, coming late and suddenly, distorts the umpire's judgment.

* * *

UMPIRES frequently make the mistake of calling a decision too quickly. They have it in their minds that this shows efficiency and executive capacity. Also it is sometimes intended as a species of bluffing, calculated to make the players believe that the decision must be correct because of the very snappishness with which it is given. To a certain extent this may be so; but only too often this lightning-like decision connotes the very opposite of accuracy.

It is well, though, for the umpire to be as quick as he can in calling the third strike on a batter when the latter has not swung at it. If the catcher holds this third strike it does not make any difference, as the batter is out of it anyway; but should the catcher drop this last strike it would look as though you were giving him a chance to recover the ball before the runner reached first if you delay notifying the runner at once that it is the third strike and he had best run.

* * *

IT is the tendency nowadays to call most every ball that is hit immediately down to the ground a foul ball, whether it afterward rolls foul or fair. I incline to think this is good practice; for unless one does call such a ball something without delay it puts the batter in an awkward position. This case should be carefully distinguished, however, from that where the batter hits a ball into the diamond that is manifestly fair, and has been from the start, and then in starting out for first base he runs himself into the bounding or rolling ball. Here the batter is out at once for touching a fair batted ball.

FODDER FOR FANS

Wilson, of the Pirates, made two home runs yesterday, but his efforts were wasted, for the Cubs scored six runs against four for the Pirates.

* * *

Eleven Tigers stepped to the plate in the fourth inning of the game against the White Sox yesterday, with the result that seven runs went across the finish line, giving the Tigers the game.

* * *

Wheat, of the Dodgers, made a triple and three singles out of four times up yesterday.

* * *

Larry Doyle, of the Giants, made a homer with two on bases yesterday. Several days ago he delivered a circuit swat with the bases crowded.

* * *

The Naps and Browns divided a double-header yesterday, the Browns taking the first game, an eleven-inning affair, and the Naps the second, with Falkenberg in the box. This is the first game Falkenberg has won since his winning streak of ten games was cut.

* * *

The Cardinals justly might be called the "rally boys" Yesterday they repeated the stunt which they have been practicing in the last month of coming from behind and winning out by scoring three runs in the eighth and one in the ninth, taking the game from the Reds.

* * *

Connie Mack has his eye focused on George Brickley, brother of Charles, the Harvard football star. It's a cinch that if George can bat anywhere as well as Charles can kick, Connie will be placing him in the slugger's position of the Athletics' line-up if he lands him.

* * *

For the third successive time the Giants tussled with the Phillies in the Quaker town ballwick yesterday and handed the third straight defeat, thus clinching the hold the Giants now have on the upper rung in the National League ladder.

* * *

Pitchers may come and pitchers may go, but it seems that Matheweson and his wonderful control and ability are to remain forever. In this, his thirteenth season, as a big league pitcher, Matty threatens to eclipse all his previous records for victories. In addition to establishing a world's record for control, he hurled against the Phillies yesterday and for the seventh or eighth time this season went the full nine innings without a base on balls.

* * *

The Dodgers, after suffering two defeats at the hands of the Braves, rose up in wrath yesterday and gave the Braves one of the worst beating handed any team this year. The Brooklynites garnered fifteen runs, scoring nine in the third.

* * *

Lajoie, the Naps' second sacker, was back in the game yesterday, and, despite rumors that he is to be benched or used as a pinch hitter in the future, it is a certainty that he will remain as a regular for the balance of this season and several more to come.

* * *

Boehling, the recruit pitcher of the Senators, is setting the American League afire. He has started seven games and won them all, the majority of them being shut-outs.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—From this point to the finish of the races in both big leagues, each game is going to count vitally. The strain of the going through July and August either makes or breaks the pennant contenders, and only the teams with the most class live to fight it out in September. It is from now until the first of September that the clubs which make the early going will have their hardest struggle to maintain the lead. The teams have found themselves by this time if they are to arrive at all.

"I would just as soon be trailing up to July," says McGraw. "After July, I want to make the going."

It has been just this way that McGraw has played the race this year. The Phillies jumped out in front and killed off their pitching staff and some of their players before they really reached the stretch where they will need their full strength. If they could have gotten out far enough ahead to afford a slump, that would have been a different matter, but the Giants managed to hang to their heels, which is the most exasperating and heart-breaking thing that can happen to a ball club.

* * *

THE race in the American League has assumed a very different aspect from the one in the National, for class told from the get-away in that argument. Even rival American Leaguers admit that the Athletics have shown all the class of the circuit so far, and they have opened up such a nice gap now they can afford a comfortable slump. At the beginning of the season, the outlook was for one of those nip and tuck affairs in both leagues, but the outlook was badly upset in the American. The Boston Red Sox and the Washington Club were to abound with class, while something was expected of the White Sox and little thought of Cleveland.

Boston has been a pitiable failure and disappointment. The team is going slightly better now, but there was plenty of room for improvement. Even should the club regain the old stride that carried it to a world's championship last year, it does not strike me it would have a chance with the Athletics now. It must be remembered that the Philadelphia club is playing much better ball than it did last summer when it slopped through its schedule, feeling confident that no team was ever created which could beat it to the pennant. There is a grave doubt in my mind whether the Red Sox could have defeated the Athletics last season if they had performed as they are going this year.

* * *

"THE Athletics have the class of this league," a player on a rival American League team told me the other day. "They are not overlooking any opportunities this summer, either. Mack has his pitching staff going as well, if not better, than any in the league, and it was supposed to be his weakness. It has been largely through clever handling that Mack has achieved these results with his pitchers.

In the first place, he fixed Bender so that he would work his best this season and he did this through one of the well-known Mack methods, a promised reward at the end of the season for delivering the goods. Then he worked his youngsters with great wisdom, getting them used to the big league ways, while the pitchers on the other clubs had not yet gotten the spring rust out of their arms and the going was easier. In this way they acquired confidence in themselves. Then Mack got to taking the squabs out of the games and putting in a veteran when his team acquired a lead of a couple of runs to make it sure.

"Connie fooled Griffith in Washington recently when he sent both Bender and Plank out in front of the bench to warm up before the game and hid Bush behind the grandstand where he worked his arm out. When the game began, he sat Plank and Bender down on the bench and sent Bush to the box, figuring on taking a chance with a youngster in the game with Johnson and working his veterans against the easier Washington pitchers. Bush got away with the game. Mack was always a great man to jockey his players."

HOPPE LOADS CANNON; NOW THUMBS ARE GONE

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 3.—Willie Hoppe, at one time picked by Ad Wolgast to be the next lightweight champion pugilist, lost both thumbs and both index fingers yesterday by the explosion of a toy cannon, which he was helping a small boy to load.

A HUNDRED.

The shades of night were falling fast
When through a baseball field there passed
A youth who sadly shook his head,
And this is till the athlete said:
"$100."

He fain would swing a thousand thumps
Upon the guy they call the umps.
But if he hit the umps a crack
That little clout would set him back $100.

Oh, it is great to be a star
And give the umps an awful jar,
But if you act as white men do
To find that there accrues to you $100.

Johnny Coulon avers that he is suffering from a cold in his stomach, but a diagnosis might locate the malady in his feet.

Nevertheless, when Mr. Coulon stalls off a conflict with Mr. Williams, he shows that he possesses considerable intellect.

We may thank the Athletics for the fact that no baseball writer will have the nerve to spring anything about a "crucial series" in the American League.

Frank Gotch says he will meet the winner o the Roler-Cutler match, showing that he still has faith in the one-per-minute theory.

Atlantans Still In at Augusta

Carter, Orr and Ramspeck Win

AUGUSTA, GA., July 3.—Ideal weather conditions prevailed and there was a large gallery on the third day of the South Atlantic tennis tournament here. The semi-finals in the ladies' singles were completed and the finals are being played to-day. In the lower frame of the semi-finals in ladies' singles Miss Adger defeated Miss Perry, 6-2, 6-2. The winner plays Mrs. Robert Johnson in the finals.

The following were the results Wednesday in the men's singles:

Erwin defeated Fletcher, 6-2, 6-1; Carter defeated E. S. Waring, 6-2, 6-2; Ramspeck defeated Garrett, 6-4, 7-5. Erwin and Orr had played two sets when darkness interrupted. Erwin won the first set, 6-4, and Orr won the second, 6-3.

The following were the results in the men's doubles:

Harper and White defeated Horkan and Nixon, 6-3, 6-2; Waring brothers defeated Nurnberger and Roseman, 6-0, 6-3; Brinson and Granch defeated Lee and T. Cumming, 6-2, 6-3; Ramspeck and Orr defeated Wilkins and Bussell, 6-1, 6-0; Kennedy and Capers defeated Barrett and Evans, 6-2, 6-4; Gary and Sims defeated Stratton and VonSprecken, 6-0, 6-0; Hall and Parks defeated Birkmire and Cully, 6-1, 6-1.

Sims defeated Purdy, 6-2, 6-3; Ferris defeated Schweers, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4; Capers defeated Bredenburg, 6-4, 6-3; Wright defeated Averill, 6-0, 6-4; Birkmire defeated Johnson, 6-1, 6-3.

The following are the results of Wednesday morning's matches:

Men's Singles—Parks defeated J. C. Harper, 6-2, 6-2.

Ladies' Singles—Miss Perry defeated Mrs. Milam, 6-3, 6-4; Miss Adger defeated Miss Emily Thomas, 7-5, 6-2.

Men's Doubles—Garg and Garrett defeated Reynolds and Wilson, 6-3, 6-0; Kennedy and Kennedy defeated Mulherin and Hatch, 6-1, 6-4; Brand and Ferris defeated Cumming and Houston by default.

Consolations—Matthews defeated Branck, 1-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Star Athletes Will Perform on July 4

At 9:45 Fourth of July morning the first call will be sounded for the first heat of the first race of Atlanta's first big track and field meet at Piedmont Park under the auspices of the Department of Playgrounds.

Thanks to the untiring work of Joe Bean, manager of playgrounds, the affair needs only good weather to be a tremendous success. In the nine events that will be run there are 175 entries. Of course this does not mean 175 entrants, for there are many duplications, but any way you figure it, it will be the biggest meet ever held in Atlanta.

This steeplechase event will start at the top of the hill at Jackson and Tenth Streets, and the course will extend down the hill, through the lake and back to the judges' stand.

All contestants will be expected to furnish their own numbers.

On account of the large entry list two events will be called at a time. Here is the order of events:

100-yard dash. Trial heats.
Pole vault. Shot put.
100-yard dash. Final heat.
Running high jump. 880-yard run.
Running broad jump. 440-yard dash.
Hammer throw. Steeplechase.

JOURNEY TO EUROPE MAY COST JOHNSON $45,000

CHICAGO, July 3.—Argument was heard this morning on the motion entered by United States District Attorney Wilkerson asking that the $30,000 bond given by Jack Johnson, negro prize-fighter, on eleven indictments under the Mann white slave act for which he has not yet been tried, be forfeited.

Appeal bonds for $15,000 also are pending against Johnson. In the bonds given in the untried indictments, there is a provision that the negro must not leave the jurisdiction of the District Court of Northern Illinois. It is because of this provision that Mr. Wilkerson has asked that the bonds be forfeited. Johnson is on a ship bound for Europe.

U. S. FARM NEED CO-OPERATION ENVOY SAYS

By LIEUT. GOV. E. L. DAUTRIDGE, North Carolina Member of the Agricultural Commission.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, July 3.—The co-operative principle in agriculture is simply the lesson learned from the practices of "big business," in which dollars have combined for efficiency and economy.

Farmers can accomplish the same results by uniting themselves in societies.

There is, however, this difference: Industrial combinations seek more than mere economy and add to their profits through monopolistic control. In agriculture there are too many producers scattered over too wide an area to permit an organization that could control the market.

American consumers need have no fear upon that score if co-operation is adopted among American farmers; rather may the consumers hope for freer competition through the influence of farmers' co-operative organizations upon existing middlemen and trusts.

The operations of even a highly developed type of Co-operative Sales Society among the farmers would be limited to reducing the cost of distribution and to eliminating the profits of the middlemen.

Protection for Consumers.

It would mean increased profits for the farmers without an increased price to consumers. Co-operation among the farmers for the sale of foodstuffs, however, can not, I believe, be brought about upon any considerable scale until the farmers are placed upon a better financial basis through the extension of their credit facilities. The basis of the agricultural credit system of Europe underlies all other forms of agricultural co-operation.

There are many objections raised against the adoption of co-operative credit societies of the European type among American farmers. In conversation with experts in the field during this trip I heard it pointed out that co-operative credit societies of the Raiffeisen type are unlikely to succeed in America because of the unwillingness of the American farmer to assume liability for his neighbor and because of the absence of "farming villages" in America.

Unfamiliarity of our farmers with each other's financial standing deters business transactions. I don't believe that snap judgment can be given upon these questions. Although I recognize the force of arguments, it does appear likely to the members of the American Commission that a land credit organization can be established in America whereby American farmers can secure mortgage loans upon better terms.

As to their short-time credit needs, their money for operating expenses, if the Haiffeisen banks can not be established, I believe something can be gained by forcing the consideration of farmers' needs as borrowers upon those who are to construct our currency banking reform legislation, but our farmers must interest themselves in the currency question to do this.

No Monopoly Is Intended.

With credit facilities improved, I believe, through co-operative organizations, our farmers can succeed in increasing their control over marketing their produce.

I don't mean control in the monopolistic sense, but control to effect economy in distribution and in order that they may receive a larger share of the profits of their sales.

Undoubtedly such a business organization among the farmers would quickly lead to an organization for the promotion of education for the stronger presentation of legislative needs of American farmers.

If American farmers could be reorganized along these lines there would be found a far closer link with the Federal Department of Agriculture than now exists.

The success attained along these lines by European farmers, especially those of Germany and Austria, has interested me greatly. The organizations of European farmers for co-operative purchasing are also of great benefit; they are very simple in principle, but to carry on the work of propagation necessary to spread the co-operative movement over so large a country as the United States will require an organization of great strength.

The American Commission should be encouraged to live and broaden its activities. Only the support of our farmers can do this.

PARADE AND RIDE FOR CONTESTANTS JULY 4

William Hamilton, 588 Woodward Avenue, one of the hustling contestants.

Promptly at 10 o'clock Friday morning, July 4, The Georgian and American ponies, which are to be awarded to the boys and girls in the contests, will start in parade formation from The Georgian and American offices in Alabama Street and proceed to Grant Park.

There will be a celebration at the park on the arrival of the parade. It is hoped that every contestant in the city and all those from out of town who can visit Atlanta for the day will forget rivalry for the day and enjoy the Fourth as the guests of The Georgian and American.

All of the features of entertainment can not now be announced. But one thing is sure, every contestant who so desires may enjoy a ride behind the ponies, and thus anticipate something of the pleasure which will belong to the winners after July 31. There will be plenty of caretakers to see that everyone gets a ride.

Although several times the contestants have been told where the ponies are kept, and while they have been invited to go and look at the little animals, not all have taken advantage of the offer. This time, however, the ponies will be on display, looking their best, and on their best behavior. There is no reason why each boy and girl in the contest should not see for himself or herself the handsome prizes so soon to be awarded.

Meanwhile, do not forget that Friday night ends the time when clubs of five subscriptions may be turned in for the big bonus offers.

A SURE REMEDY FOR LAZY LIVER

Go to Any Druggist for This Safe, Reliable Remedy and Get Your Money Back If It Fails.

There are very few remedies that gain the confidence of druggists as Dodson's Liver Tone does. All druggists sell it and back up the sale of every bottle with the money-back guarantee that the price will be refunded if it fails to give complete satisfaction.

Dodson's Liver Tone costs 50 cents a bottle. It is the safest and best remedy for torpid liver, constipation, biliousness, etc., that has ever been sold in this city. It takes the place of dangerous calomel and does not lay you up as a dose of calomel often does. A bottle in the house is as good as fifty cents in the bank. If you or your family need a liver tonic you have the medicine ready. If it fails you get your money back.

Be sure you get Dodson's Liver Tone when you ask for it. There are imitations of it that may disappoint you.

NEW SECURITIES $948,153,000 IN 6 MONTHS

World-Wide Scarcity of Capital Is Blamed for Decrease of $421,469,000.

By B. C. FORBES.

The Hearst papers' carefully compiled records show that the output of new securities by corporations for the half-year ended June 30 fell below one billion dollars.

The total was $948,153,000, a decrease of no less than $421,469,000 from last year.

The world-wide scarcity of capital has been wholly responsible for the falling off—companies, both railroad and industrial, would have borrowed nearer two billions had investors manifested a disposition to respond.

The grand total for 1912 was $2,141,500,000, while for 1911 the figures was $1,740,000,000. The current 12 months will probably fall short of either, as the demand for new issues is unlikely to become abnormal owing to the paucity of liquid capital and the very high income yields insisted upon by lenders.

The largest banking houses here and abroad are discouraging avoidable flotations in an effort to avert acute congestion. In England the half-year's applications have reached $600,000,000, an increase of $55,000,000 over a year ago, notwithstanding the unfavorable conditions that have obtained, while on the Continent the market has been so flooded that both Governmental and banking interests have taken rigid measures to stem the tide. Germany has virtually prohibited the offering of foreign issues there.

Enormous sums must still be raised by the nations that have been at war, but no big loans will be handled for any country until it has restored peace. How much France and England have quietly supplied to belligerants, however, is an interesting point upon which information is withheld.

At home a large proportion of this year's borrowing has been necessitated by the maturing of outstanding obligations.

Too often short-term notes have had to be resorted to.

Such strong roads as the Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and Baltimore & Ohio put out $20,000,000 each, while among the industrial companies, Consolidated Gas contributes $15,000,000 to the short-term total.

Notes come home to roost. Bonds stay sold, but notes return so quickly to plague their issuers. They simply, as a rule, postpone the evil day.

By next year the new currency system may facilitate the marketing of long-term bonds and also stocks, especially as latterly there has been some attempt at economy on the part of the people.

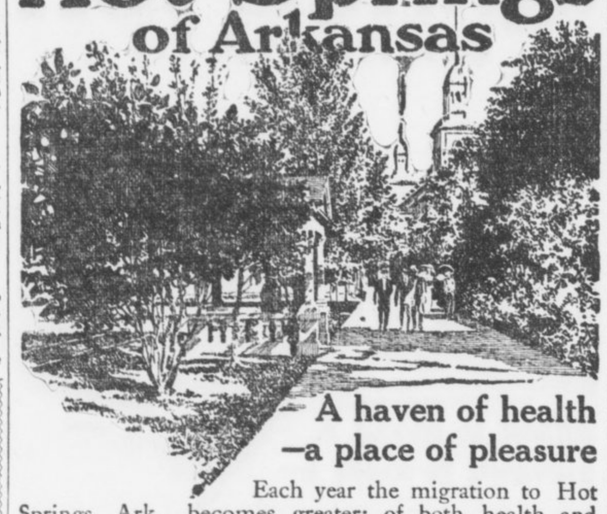

My opinion is that the security market will be able to weather the autumn without the upheaval that for months appeared inevitable. Quotations for both stocks and bonds are now on an attractive investment level and small investors will probably come forward in large numbers from now on.

June is the only month of the current year that shows an increase in offerings as compared with last year. The monthly record reads:

	Output.	Change.
January	$198,105,000—	$142,895,000
February ...	132,362,000—	185,470,000
March	148,829,000—	1,621,000
April	164,477,000—	53,788,000
May	123,140,000—	81,577,000
June	181,240,000 *	43,888,000
	$948,153,000—	$421,469,000

The July total will be large, as underwriters are anxious to take advantage of the $125,000,000 "July disbursements," which are supposed to create a re-investment demand.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Drugged, Was He? He Surely Was!

One day a constable found a man lying beneath a tree. Knowing that a brand of rather prostrating corn juice was sold in that neighborhood, and thinking the man had been unwisely stacked up against it, he with considerable difficulty got him to the local jail.

Later in the day it was discovered that the victim was not reviving according to schedule and a doctor was called in.

"I thought so," mused the doctor, making a critical examination. "Officer, where did you find this man?"

"Down along the railroad track," answered the cop. "He was sleeping on a pile of railroad spikes."

"You should have called me at once," returned the doctor, continuing the diagnosis. "This man has been drugged."

"Of course he has, doc," was the prompt response of the officer. "I drug him all the way from the railroad to the jail, a matter of two hundred yards."

Forks Find the Way After Many Trials.

A Josh Whitcomb in real life was working in the fields one day when a salesman came along to sell him things to save labor. While talking to Uncle Josh the salesman noticed that he was cut and scratched all over the front of his face. In fact, he looked as if he had turned on a full head of steam and rushed through a barbed wire fence.

"You seem pretty well nicked up to-day," remarked the salesman, during the course of the conversation. "Have you been trying to shave yourself with a hay cutter?"

"No; 'twasn't thet," was the unemotional rejoinder of Uncle Josh. "My darter did it."

"Your daughter did it!" exclaimed the amazed salesman. "You don't really mean it?"

"Yaas," said Josh, with characteristic calmness, "ever since she been goin' ter thet derned boardin' school she has been makin' me eat with a fork."

Suffering Alone Far From Home.

A party of Atlanta campers took up their mountain abode in Gilmer County at nightfall in an old tumbledown hut. About 2 a. m. a polecat announced its presence in its own peculiar way. A German sat up and looked helplessly about him. The others were all sleeping peacefully.

"Mein gracious," he exclaimed, in tones of despair. "All the rest asleep und I've got to shmell it all!"

HARRIS FREED OF PERJURY CHARGE

Prosecutor Asks Verdict of "Not Guilty" for Macon Lawyer and Politician.

MACON, July 3.—Upon motion of the State a verdict of "not guilty" was directed to-day in the case of Jesse C. Harris, the Macon lawyer charged with perjury, in connection with the August, 1912, Bibb County primary.

Charles H. Hall, Jr., Congressman Bartlett's campaign manager, testified that Harris, chairman of the sub committee of the executive committee, asked him on the night of the election "How many votes Judge Bartlett needed," and that he told Harris Bartlett needed as many as he could get, this conversation taking place behind closed doors. Grand jurors testified that Harris denied under oath while a witness in the Grand Jury room that he asked Hall that q uestion.

After this and other evidence has been submitted to-day, Solicitor Ross asked the court to allow a verdict of "not guilty" to be directed.

COTTON DROPS ON BEARISH REPORT

Heavy Selling on U. S. Report. Short Interest Increased on Eve of Holiday.

AMERICAN EXCHANGES WILL CLOSE FRIDAY

It being the Fourth of July and a general holiday, all American exchanges will be closed Friday. All exchanges will observe an extra holiday Saturday.

NEW YORK, July 3.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day the tone was steady and prices were 1 to 3 points higher. This was a shade better than had been expected on cables. The upturn was due to local covering, chiefly in anticipation of the Government report due at noon.

The weather was considered favorble, as showery conditions prevailed throughout the western sections of the belt.

The Government report placed the cotton acreage of 1913 at 35,622,000, showing an increase of 2½ per cent over last year's acreage and a condition of 81.8, against 79.1 a month ago. The report was much better than expected. The average trader construed it as bearish and caused heavy selling by street and local traders. Spot houses also sold. Most of the selling is believed to be for short accounts. The buying was scattered, coming from commission houses and those who liquidated at a higher level.

July was depressed to 12.03, against an opening of 12.10; August fell 11 points. New crop positions were heavily sold and followed the downward movement by dropping some 12 to 15 points from the opening range.

The impression seemed to prevail that there has been some improvement in the crop since the report was made up and lower prices are inevitable. The bull element contend that a 15,000,000-bale crop is by no means assured, claiming that we have to go through two of the most critical months of the season and that much cotton will be required to satisfy the world's need.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net decline of 9 to 12 points from the final quotations of Wednesday.

Following are 1 p. m. bids in New York: July 12.04, August 12.06, October 11.41, January 11.33.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 3.—Political news was bad this morning. London reports all hope of peace abandoned. Serious battle raging in the Balkans. Liverpool came in about 2 points lower than due. Spots 1 point higher.

It is evidently thought that the general unfavorable outlook is some compensation for any bullish impression the Bureau reports may have.

Weather developments are again favorable. Generally fair weather prevails over Alabama and the Atlantics, while it is cloudy over rest of the belt. The Central States, including Arkansas and Tennessee, had a fine general rainfall. There was little rain in Texas, except in the eastern section. Indications are for partly cloudy weather with a tendency toward clearing, although some scattered showers are likely in the central belt.

Prior to the Bureau publication the market was steady around 11.37 for October. Selling is restricted, as the tendency is to look for a low Bureau condition, some views being under 80 on the ground that private authorities all give only a fraction of a point improvement during the month, and the May Government condition was 79.1.

The into-sight for the week looks around 27,000, against 35,476 last year.

The week-end statistics will not be given out until Monday.

TIFTON SHIPS SECOND CAR OF TOMATOES TO NEW YORK

TIFTON, July 3.—The second carload of tomatoes from Tifton left last night for New York. The car contained about 350 crates and was loaded by a number of the largest truck growers of this section.

A telegram from New York announces that the first carload was sold at $2.25 per crate for the choice varieties. After selling agents' commission has been taken out and freight charges deducted, the car of 364 crates will net the truckers an average of $1.60 per crate.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—With the exception of local showers in the Upper Lake Region fair weather will prevail to-night and Friday over the Eastern half of the country with lower temperatures in the Northern Upper Lake region. It will be warmer Friday in the Middle Atlantic States and continue warm in the interior, except as above mentioned.

Forecast.

Forecast until 7 p. m. Friday:

Georgia—Generally fair to-night and Friday.

Virginia, North and South Carolina, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee—Generally fair to-night and Friday.

Mississipi—Local showers to-night or Friday.

Louisiana—Local showers to-night or Friday.

East Texas—Fair in west and south; showers in northeast portion to-night or Friday.

West Texas—Fair to-night or Friday.

HOGS IN BIG DEMAND.

CHICAGO, July 3.—With 60,000 less hogs at eleven markets this week than last, prices are going skyward, especially where quality is concerned. The 9c quotations was restored to-day, top hogs making 9.05, but the gap between shipping and packing grades is widening. There were only 67,000 at eleven points to-day, against 91,000 last week. Since January 1 these markets have received only 12,911,000, against 14,155,000 last year.

Cattle trade was nominally steady at the lowest basis of the week. In the sheep house, demand was active at strong prices.

STOCKS DULL ON EVE OF HOLIDAY

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Following a dull, heavy opening of the stock market to-day, some of the issues rallied and made partial recoveries. At the outset practically all stocks were lower, the declines embracing the following: Utah Copper, ½; United States Steel common, ⅜; Amalgamated Copper, ⅜; American Smelting, ⅜; Atchison, ¼; Chino Copper, ⅜; Erie, ½; Union Pacific, ¼; Reading, ¼; St. Paul, ¼. Steel recovered and gained ⅛. Canadian Pacific was ¼ up at the commencement, but later increased its advance. Northern Pacific, which began ⅛ lower, recovered and made a fractional gain.

There was some covering for protection over the three-day holiday, beginning to-morrow.

The curb market was weak.

Americans and Canadian Pacific in the London market lacked stability.

There was little change in prices after the first fifteen minutes of depression. Union Pacific, Reading, Copper and St. Paul were up ¼. Steel advanced ⅜ to 52⅞. Smelter up ⅛. Other issues made slight gains and the tone in the last few minutes for the forenoon was firm.

Call money was loaning at 3 per cent.

Wheat—No. 2 red ....87¼@88
Corn—No. 2 ....64 @64½
Oats—No. 2 40

CHICAGO, July 3.—To-day's session in wheat was largely of an evening-up character over the three days of rest. The offerings were rather scant at the outset and prices were ¼@½c higher. Northwestern cars were smaller than a week ago. Cables were higher, although the crop prospects abroard and conditions surrounding the spring wheat crop in this country were favorable.

Corn was ¼@⅜c better.

Oats were unchanged to ⅛@¼c higher, mainly in sympathy with strength in corn and wheat.

Provisions were stronger with hogs.

MODERN MILLER CROP REPORT.

ST. LOUIS, July 3.—Winter wheat harvest is almost completed under favorable conditions. Nearly all wheat has been cut and is in the shock and thrashing is well under way. Soft winter wheat generally thrashing out well. Good yields and good quality are the rule. In some sections, however, returns from hard wheat belt are disappointing both as to yield and quality, the latter being irregular. A factor in the harvest situation is the scarcity of labor and this is causing delay.

A PROCLAMATION

By His Excellency John M. Slaton, Governor.

State of Georgia
Executive Department
Atlanta

Whereas a vacancy will soon exist in the office of United States Senator from Georgia for the term beginning March 4, 1913, and

Whereas said vacancy can be filled by popular vote only, the General Assembly having provided by Act for holding a special election to fill said vacancy,

Therefore, I, John M. Slaton, Governor of said State, by authority of Act approved July 1, 1913, do issue this my proclamation ordering a special election for United States Senator to fill the vacancy above described, to be held on the 15th day of July, 1913, under the laws of this State governing elections and the Act above referred to.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed this the 1st day of July, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirteen.

JOHN M. SLATON, Governor.

By the Governor:
PHILIP COOK, Secretary of State.

No Place for Papers

THE OFFICE DESK OR TABLE IS certainly not a safe place for such valuable papers as stocks, bonds, insurance policies, mortgages, deeds, notes, etc., and yet many a so-called "good" business man has sacrificed some such paper upon this altar of carelessness.

If you have been a victim, you know the price of your carelessness. If you have not yet suffered such a loss, don't take any more chances, but come in and let us assign you a Box in our fire-proof and burglar-proof Vault. The cost is very nominal and the protection absolute.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Feather-Eating Is Largely Caused By Crowded Runs

Soft-Shell Eggs Due to Various Things—Remember Value of Meat in Some Form.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Feather-eating is largely caused by crowded runs, with nothing to induce the fowls to exercise. They bolt their food and then stand around ready for mischief. The careless owner will usually let lice and mites get the start of him on the poultry; they lay eggs upon the stem of the feather around the vent. They irritate the parts and in their endeavors to rid themselves of them they get a taste of the sap, or at times, blood, in the stem of the new feathers; this causes them to continue their investigation. Other hens see what's going on and are soon helping in the removing of feathers, until it is soon a flock of feather eaters. The skin is bare and red, and sometimes the work is carried still further and they get to picking the raw flesh until it is raw and sore. The remedy is to feed lightly of a well-balanced ration and make them dig for every bit they get. Feed some fresh cut bone or raw meat, if possible. Clean them of all lice and mites and put them in the pink of condition, and there will be little excuse for such work. The leaders or worst ones at the business can be very materially checked by taking a sharp pocket knife and trimming the sharp point or curve of the upper madible or beak. They are then unable to pick so easily.

Many soft-shelled eggs are layed at this time of the year, due to various causes. Many of us are so eager for all the eggs that we can get that we push our hens for all they are worth, feeding rich mashes and adding egg producers at all times, most of which contain stimulants of various kinds. Heavy mash feeding tends to produce fat, especially on the two-year-old hens; over-fat hens often lay soft-shelled eggs.

Where your hens have this soft-egg tendency, let up on the soft feed to a certain extent at least and feed more of the dry grain with a good supply of green stuff, and do not forget to supply the oyster shell.

Bowel troubles of all kinds are usually caused by feeding sloppy or sour feed. Filthy quarters and exposure to sudden changes of the weather will affect the little ones very quickly. Often a lack of good clean grains, both in the shape of cracked grains and dry mashes. When the trouble has already appeared it is best handled by feeding well-cooked rice, dry bread or cracker crumbs soaked in hot milk. As soon as an improvement is noticed alternate the rice and bread and milk with other things. Keep the little ones warm when the weather changes to cold, and furnish shade for them in very hot times.

Remember the value of meat in some form for growing chicks, as well as to the laying hens. The cheapest shape to furnish it is in fresh cut green bone. Buy a good cutter, one that will do the work in a workmanlike manner, fasten it up somewhere so that it will be perfectly solid, and it will be but little trouble to operate. You can usually get the bones and scraps fresh from the market. They will save them for you by paying them a little each time, amounting to a quarter or a half-cent per pound. This will make the youngsters a month old grow up like weeds. Start them on it gradually a little at a time and increase it as they become accustomed to it. It should be fed at least twice a week, and a little every day is better, if you can have it. In the absence of this, use the dried beef scraps, by all means, which can be obtained at all poultry supply houses at from three and a half to five cents per pound, according to the quality purchased. It is really safer to feed to young chicks than the fresh bone, but does not supply so much nitriment, of course. In feeding it to young chicks it can be sifted through a coarse seive and the coarser particles given to the laying hens.

Do not neglect the dust bath for the laying hens, especially at this season when the weather is getting hot and lice and mites are multiplying by the millions. See that the dust is perfectly dry and the addition of some sulphur will help to make the dose more effectual. The roost poles and nest boxes should be movable so that they can be taken out and cleaned and given a dose of kerosene, or a mixture of kerosene and naphtholine flakes, about a half a pound to a gallon of oil, to which add a pint of gasoline. This should be applied with a small-spouted oil can to the roost poles, boxes and sides of the house where the poles rest. Prepare your mixture just as you are going to use it. To kill head lice that cling to the head of both young and old chickens, mix a little oil of tar with vaseline and rub onto the head occasionally.

The laying contests being conducted in different sections of the country will prove the benefits of the trap nest. They are bringing out some wonderful results. Some years ago a hen that would lay 125 to 150 eggs per year was counted a great layer, but now they are getting 200 and 250-egg hens.

FOR SALE

ON PIEDMONT AVENUE, near school, on the car line, we have one of the best bungalows to be found in the city. Built by the present owner for a home out of the best material and workmanship. Never expected to sell it, but keep it for a home. The lot cost him $3,000 vacant. If vacant to-day could not be bought for $4,000.

This bungalow has seven rooms—fine shaded east front lot—all conveniences, one year old.

The owner's work has called him to Florida, and he must sell by August 1.

We have had this place listed at $7,000, and cheap at that—but the owner says he must sell—therefore, he is putting the price down to $6,250. This should sell at once.

See this at once. We can make terms.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage.
It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Details Given Out On $228,000 Lease

Silvey Building Work Rushed—John W. Grant to Build—Office Rent Going Up.

Some details of considerable interest to building managers and tenants were given out Thursday in regard to the lease on the Silvey Building and plans for improving the same.

The Silvey Building Company leased the nine-story basement building from the John Silvey estate for 20 years, agreeing to pay $8,000 a year for the first three years and $12,000 a year for the remaining 17 years. This makes an aggregate rental for the 20 years of $228,000, or an average of $11,400 a year. The Silvey Building Company expects to sub-lease to various firms and individuals, several leases already having been made. The return under the sub-lease arrangement will be about $40,000 a year, the basement and ground floor netting $17,000, and the solid floors above $3,000 each.

Improvements now being put in will cost the company $67,000. These consist of a thorough renovation and the installation of two elevators and mahogany similar to that used in the Third National Bank Building. The structure will be fireproof, and a feature of the improvements will be the placing of windows in the wall that faces Peachtree. This wall was built 20 years ago under party arrangement between the late George W. Collier and the late John Silvey.

The construction work is in charge of W. E. Mashburn, who expects to have the upper stories ready October 1. Part of the work is done, and the business offices of The Georgian and Hearst's Sunday American are located on the ground floor, with frontage on both Decatur Street and Edgewood Avenue. Other tenants will be Chess Lagomarsino, E. C. Johnson and R. M. McRaney. These have already signed up for space.

Interest in Mr. Grant's Plans.

Much interest centered Thursday in the announcement that John W. Grant will build on Pace's Ferry Road, a short distance west of Buckhead and a few rods east of such property owners as Robert F. Maddox, James L. Dickey, Jr., M. C. Kiser, J. N. Goddard, Morris Brandon and others. Mr. Grant's handsome town house on the east side of Peachtree between Pine and Currier Streets has been crowded and he will soon build a fine country residence. He has extensive acreage and will lend his efforts toward making a handsome country estate similar to the others in the vicinity. W. T. Downing, the well-known architect, is drawing some plans for Mr Grant and expects to have them out soon.

In this connection it was announced that a new roadway is to be cut through from Peachtree to a point fronting Mr. Grant's place. This will be known as Andrews Drive, being a continuation of the thoroughfare that now starts west of Colonel Walter P. Andrews' estate and joins Habersham Road in Peachtree Heights Park. Property owners will defray the expense of the road work. The plan has been laid before the County Commissioners and has their approval.

Pace's Ferry Road has attractions for still other residents. It is being talked that John D. Little will build close to the Grant place. He bought two years ago a large lot at the southeast corner of Habersham Road for about $25,000 and has since refused handsome profits and will fix no price to sell it.

Meeting of Renting Agents.

The matter of more signs than one on houses to be rented was discussed freely at a meeting in Charles P. Glover's office Wednesday afternoon. No action was taken, the desire of those present being to postpone the meeting until next Wednesday at the same hour.

Big Deals Pending.

Several large real estate deals are in contract stage and will be announced shortly. One of these has to do with an apartment house on the North Side, at a nice figure.

Change in Offices.

Galloway & Smith, real estate agents, have moved their office from 516 to 213 Empire Building, where they have acquired more floor space. The Lockridge-McClain-Moon Company are now located at 4 North Pryor Street, having moved from the old Y. M. C. A. Building on Auburn Avenue.

J. Frank Meador to Build.

J. Frank Meador will begin soon the erection of an attractive residence on the West Fourteenth Street lot which he purchased Saturday, according to information given out Thursday. The site is 50 by 175 feet, on the north side of the street, half a block from West Peachtree. The lot was bought from Lavender Ray for $3,000 cash, or at the rate of $60 a front foot. A few years ago lots on West Fourteenth, between the Peachtrees, could be bought for $20 a foot, while the ordinary time price to-day is $70 and $80 for elevated parcels.

Skyscraper Rentals Increase.

With the expiration of leases on offices in certain skyscrapers this fall new rates will prevail. This is made necessary, declare the office building men, by the increased cost scale in other lines essential to the skyscraper business. Recently the manager of a leading office building gave notice of an increase to the New York home office of a local branch. The manager replied by letter that ordinarily his concern was opposed to paying more rent this year, but that he would not contest the raise in Atlanta. This was taken by the skyscraper man to indicate that this firm enjoyed a good measure of prosperity in this section.

All tenants in office buildings need not be alarmed, however. Not all the buildings will raise rents, and where an increase is contemplated it concerns the lease which is about up, and not the one that has some time to run.

The Fundamental Pinciple Behind the New Currency Act

The fundamental principles of the Owen-Glass bill are, first, that the chief function of the banks of the country should be to foster commerce, trade and agriculture, and not speculation or underwriting syndicates; and, second, that the right to issue money is inherent in the Government, and that any association of private bankers vested with the power to issue money for general circulation, MUST be under the supervision and control of the Government; and, third, that all profits from such banking privileges in excess of 5 per cent return upon the capital furnished by the private bankers to such central association shall be paid over to the Government.

Under the new currency act, the entire operation of the national banks and the issue of "emergency currency" of the reserve banks shall be under the control of a Federal Board of seven members sitting at Washington. The Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture and the Comptroller of the Currency will be three of the members. The other four members, one of whom must be an experienced banker, are to be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Members of the Board are to serve for eight years, unless removed by the President.

This Federal Reserve Board will have complete veto power over, though not complete power to initiate action by, twelve Federal reserve banks distributed geographically according to the needs and volume of banking business in all parts of the country.

Every national bank shall be compelled to subscribe to the extent of 10 per cent of its own stock to the capital stock of the Federal Reserve Bank of its own district. Every bank shall be required, also, to keep at least 5 per cent of its reserve cash in the Federal Reserve Bank of its district.

None of the twelve Federal Reserve Banks shall accept deposits from individuals, but each shall represent all the banks in its district having Federal charters and shall also be Government depositories. In times of financial stringency any bank may take to the Federal Reserve Bank of its district merchants' acceptances or short-term notes ARISING OUT OF COMMERCIAL TRANSACTIONS for rediscount and obtain from the Federal Reserve Bank United States Treasury notes (currency) for 75 per cent of the face value of such notes.

The notes so rediscounted are to be limited solely to commercial bills payable within from forty-five to a hundred and twenty days, and no notes based upon stock or bond transactions shall be discounted. The notes so discounted will be backed by the entire assets of the bank pledging the notes, by the credit of the individual borrowers, and by the assets of the Federal Reserve Bank. The amount of paper which any individual bank may rediscount is limited to one-half its paid-in capital.

Each Federal Reserve Bank will be required at all times to keep on hand in actual gold 33 per cent of the aggregate amount of the commercial notes it rediscounts for the banks of its district.

The Federal Reserve Banks will obtain United States notes, or "emergency currency," to pay for these merchants' notes from the Federal Reserve Board at Washington at such rates of interest as the Federal Board shall fix from time to time.

The Owens-Glass bill in its present form does not provide specifically enough that the rate of discount shall be such that the "emergency currency" so issued shall automatically return to the Treasury and be canceled when the "emergency" is past. This emergency is usually a temporary panic, or the annual crop-moving in the autumn of every year when at least three hundred million dollars in currency is needed to pay the American farmer for his harvest.

The profits of the twelve district reserve banks will go to the national banks which contribute to its stock and reserve funds to the extent of a 5 per cent cumulative dividend annually, and no further. All profits in excess of 5 per cent will be used, first, to create a surplus fund equal to 20 per cent of the capital stock of each reserve bank, and after such reserve fund amounts to 20 per cent of such capital, all further profits go to the Government. Thereby all temptation to directors of the reserve banks to undertake undue risks or embark on unsafe financiering is removed.

The national banks who are stockholders elect six, and the President of the United States appoints three, of the nine directors of each district reserve bank. Three of the six directors elected by the banks must be men "fairly representative of the business and commercial interests of the district and not directors of any bank."

:: A Sermon for Many ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WHEN the long, hard day has vanished and you seek your waiting bed,
Try to live the dead hours over ere the pillow soothes your head.
Try to find some explanation for each thoughtless thing you've done;
Try to make some reparation for the trouble you've begun.
After all the petty gossip that you scattered through the day,
Think of how you knocked your neighbor, going calmly on his way.
Drag the unkind slings and arrows down from Memory's dusty shelf—
Then stand up before the mirror and begin to knock yourself.

Do not stand there smug and smirking, do not smooth your towsled hair!
Shake your fist at your reflection! Give yourself an icy glare!
Don't resolve that you are handsome when you ought to know you're not;
Rather tell the faithful mirror that it flatters you a lot.
Make wry faces by the dozen; try a cold, contemptuous sneer—
Such as you have tried on others. Give yourself a mocking leer.
Then the mirror will remind you, as all honest mirrors do,
That you're not one man in thousands—that you're only LITTLE YOU!

:: How to Deal With a Girl's Love Fancies ::

To Oppose Cupid's Call Is Always Fatal, as Experience Has Shown, Says Dorothy Dix

By DOROTHY DIX.

A FATHER, who has a pretty, bright 18-year-old daughter for whom he has made many sacrifices to give advantages, is much distressed because she imagines herself in love with a callow youth of the same age, and he wants to know if there is any way in which he can keep her from wrecking her life by marrying this boy.

Surely. Here are a few simple home remedies for breaking up undesirable matches, that are guaranteed to work if applied with tact and discretion.

First, drop all opposition to the suitor. Quit abusing him. Just remember that romance thrives on difficulties, and that when you put a young man in the position of a poor, persecuted martyr, you simply crown him with a halo in the girl's sight. Also you make her his champion, and to back up her arguments in his favor she shuts her eyes to all of his faults, and not only magnifies his virtues but invents new ones for him.

Every novel represents the heroine as defying her parents, and her friends, and the general public, and being true to a noble, but misunderstood, young man, and as having her judgment justified by his turning out to be a duke in disguise, or getting elected President of the United States.

Cupid At His Worst.

When you oppose a silly young girl in a love affair, and read the riot act to her, you give her a chance to visualize herself in that poetic role, and it makes her do her clothes up in a bundle and sneak out of the house, and elope with the man that you have applied every opprobrious epithet to of which you could think. It is a matter of common knowledge that people never marry the nice, suitable individuals their families have picked out for them, and that nothing blights love's young dream like everybody smiling a blessing on it.

Yet in the face of this advanced information about how Cupid acts, parents persist in precipi-

DOROTHY DIX.

tating bad matches by frankly opposing them.

Therefore, instead of forbidding Sam the house, invite him in. Have him around early and often, and give Mamie an overdose of his society, and before you know it they will have quarreled. And this nice hot weather, when nerves and temper are on edge, is a psychological moment in which to try the experiment. Ninety-nine in the shade is not propitious for growing sentiment. And I should casually remark to Mamie that, of course, if she was so fond of Sam and found her highest happiness in his company that there was no use in wasting any money on any other pleasure for her. Such as going off for a summer trip, for instance.

Don't abuse Sam. Don't discourse upon his weakness or his faults. Make fun of them. Point out his little eccentricities of manner or speech, and if you can enlist the assistance of some friend in this, all the better. A young girl can stand anything but ridicule.

She will defy you and marry a drunkard, or a gambler, or a man with a hectic past, but she will quail before the knowledge that people laugh at a man for eating peas with his knife, or using bad grammar, or being a rube.

Another effective way of breaking off an undesirable match is to send the girl away on a trip, or to make a good long visit. Propinquity is responsible for more marriages than anything else. At the love time of life a girl is sure to imagine that she cherishes a deathless passion for any good-looking man who happens to be in sight, but get her away from him and his spell is broken.

Cured Girl's Infatuation.

She sees other men. She gets a new standard of comparison, with the almost invariable result that in six months she wouldn't look at the man that she thought she was so crazy to marry. It's a case of counter irritation, and it works out as well in love as it does in medicine.

Still another way to deal with the situation is to quit theorizing and preaching about it, and give the girl a living picture of the way the marriage she proposes to make would work out in real life. I once knew a wise father who followed this course.

His daughter, a dainty, cultivated girl, who had been reared amidst the most refined surroundings, thought she was in love with a handsome young man who was himself coarse and vulgar, and came from a family far below the girl's in social status.

After every argument had been used in vain to prevail upon the girl not to make a match that was bound to bring her disillusion and unhappiness, her father said to her: "I want you to go and spend a month with this young man's family, who will be your family if you marry him. You will bear his name, his position will be yours, and he will have a right to expect you to live as his mother and sisters do."

Corned Beef and Cabbage.

Well, the girl went. She associated with his frowsy mother and sisters, and was bored to death by their ignorant conversation. She saw his father and his brothers sitting around the house in their stocking feet, and with their coats and collars off, smoking pipes.

She ate corned beef and cabbage dinners. She participated in parties where they rushed the growler, and sang rag-time to a pianola accompaniment, and at the end of a week she came back home cured.

Still another father that I knew kept his daughter from marrying a drunkard by taking her where she saw him in his cups. It was one thing to have the young man appear before her pale, poetic, wistful eyed, repentant, telling her that she could save him by marrying him, and another to behold him maudlin, nauseated, a thing of disgust that made her turn from him with loathing.

Oh, there are many ways to break up an undesirable match—absence, ridicule, the substitution of a new toy for the old, bumping a girl up against the reality, even dropping a sly hint to the man that he's throwing himself away on the girl, and that Mamie is delicate, or has ways, or that she has a temper concealed about her angelic person, or that she's extravagant. There are forty-seven different varieties of ways of turning the trick, and all of them work except forbidding the banns. That merely eggs on the wedding.

Education Will Banish Wars

A Very Remarkable Incident on the Bloody Field of Gettysburg Proves This Belief. Conscientious Soldiers Will Bring Peace.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

ONE of the most significant revelations of the mind of the soldier in battle that I have ever seen is in a letter from a Confederate soldier to General J. L. Chamberlain, which the general quotes in his dramatic story of the awful battle of Gettysburg in HEARST'S MAGAZINE for June.

The letter is too long to be inserted in this brief article, but you should read it in full, and in connection with the vivid picture of the scenes of that heroic contest (the mightiest battle ever fought on American soil), in order to understand its significance.

Impossible to Pull Trigger.

The incident to which the letter refers occurred during the struggle among the rocks for the possession of the famous "Round Tops." The writer, who was a member of an Alabama regiment, had placed himself in a secure position between two rocks, where, unseen himself, he had a clear view of the nearby Federal lines, and particularly of General Chamberlain, whose rank he recognized by his uniform.

He knew the importance of picking off officers, and he drew a bead on General Chamberlain, resting his gun on a rock to get a sure aim. But, as he was about to pull the trigger, a sudden qualm arrested him, and he did not fire. Then he grew ashamed of his weakness and drew a bead a second time.

"I had you, perfectly certain. But that same queer something shut right down on me. I couldn't pull the trigger, and I gave it up—that is, your life."

There are plenty of stories of the blind madness and of the unnatural calm that, at different times, possess the soldier in battle, making him, in one case, shoot and thrust and strike almost without volition, and, in the other case, perform similar acts with the cold, unsympathetic precision of a machine; but it is rare, outside of fiction, to hear of an incident like this, where conscience asserts its rights.

His Own Better Nature.

No doubt some persons would see, in the resistless impulse that restrained that shot, a mystic influence which, for some providential purpose, paralyzed the finger that was curved to press the trigger; but such ideas belong to the days when the Olympian gods were believed to guide the spear of Achilles or to throw a mantle of invisibility about Hector.

We should rather ascribe the incident to the personality of the soldier, whose hand was arrested by the expostulation of his own better nature. Viewed from that point, it becomes significant of the growth of moral sentiment, which, in the end, will banish war altogether. Perhaps that merciful Confederate at Gettysburg was, in a sense, faithless to his cause. Who can say that, if the shot had been fired, the result of the struggle might not have been different? The fall of a leader has lost many a battle. Very likely if that act of mercy had been witnessed by the commander of the Alabama regiment he would have cut the conscientious soldier down with his sword as a recreant from duty!

Yet the man who spared the general's life afterward declared that he was glad that he could not press the trigger, and every generous mind approves his act and his sentiment.

In former days, when most battles were fought hand to hand and foot to foot, the FUROR CERTAMINIS (fury of the fight) had no such interruptions. Moral sentiment counted for little on the battlefield. There was no time for it to assert itself, even if it existed then as widely as it exists to-day. The dreadful scenes of slaughter that attended Caesar's campaigns in Gaul, and the sacks of cities in the Thirty Years' War, would be impossible now among civilized people.

Education Will Bring Peace.

When a modern soldier, secure in his position, sights along his gun at an enemy, his mind is in a state for reflection upon the nature and consequences of his intended act of slaughter, and the mere fact that he can strike at a distance and unseen may restrain him, as it did in this case, from striking at all. He balances his public duty against his personal conscience, and unless the former overwhelmingly appeals to him, the latter may prevail. If he can see a chance for mercy he will exercise it.

All this shows plainly the direction which the advocates of universal peace (and we are all such advocates, though we may differ in our ideas about methods) should take in order to bring about the result they aim at. It is the direction of EDUCATION. A gun in the hands of a conscientious soldier is a moral force for peace, and so is a powerful battle fleet in the hands of a great, civilized nation.

The Treaty of Tien-Tsin

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE Treaty of Tien--tsin, concluded 55 years ago, will probably loom large in the history of the time to come, very much larger than it does to-day.

It was about the year 1517 (the year of the great Reformation) that China began to be vaguely known to Europeans. The Jesuits appeared among the Celestials about 1525, and in 1790 the English figure among the "Foreign Devils." The Englishman is nothing if not commercial, and, thinking that he saw a good thing in opium, began a quarrel with the Chinaman over that drug that lasted for years; of which, so far as the honor of England is concerned, the least said the better.

In 1857 took place the war between England and China, which ended with the total destruction of the Chinese fleet by Commodores Elliot and Seymour, and the perpetual establishment of John Bull in the island of Hongkong.

The Treaty of Tien-tsin, which clinched the war of 1857, created a new departure on the part of the quaint and ancient people of the Flowery Kingdom. Among its provisions were: The establishment of ambassadorships at both courts, a larger freedom of trade, the toleration of the Christian religion, a revision of the tariff, and the guarantee that the term "barbarian" should no longer be applied to Europeans.

With this Treaty of Tien-tsin begins Modern China. But a little more than half a century has elapsed—an insignificant period in the evolution of a great nation's life—and yet we already have some pretty strong intimations of the possibilities of the future. Beyond a doubt it behooves the white man the world over to prepare for those possibilities, if we may not say probabilities.

The yellow men number at least 500,000,000. From the Japanese we learn what 50,000,000 of yellow men are able to do; and from that we are in a position to guess with a fair degree of accuracy what 500,000,000 of yellow men can do if fully prepared. With thousands of miles of Pacific seacoast, does it not behoove the United States to look well to the ways and means of its supremacy on the great Western waters?

CRACKERS ROUT PELS

NEIGHBORS WITHDRAW CHARGE

Paper Signed by Mrs. Hall Agreeing Not to Prosecute for Slander.

Charge of disorderly conduct made against George W. Sciple, wealthy official of the Sciple Lime and Cement Company by William Bearden, Charles T. Turner and William L. Hancock, residents in the fashionable district of Ponce DeLeon Avenue was dismissed late Thursday afternoon when the case came up before Recorder Broyles.

Sciple, however, was fined $25.75 and costs for intoxication. When the case was called, General Clifford L. Anderson, representing Sciple, addressed the court and said that Sciple admitted to having been intoxicated on the night when the disturbance is said to have occurred in Ponce DeLeon Avenue and to have gone to the wrong house.

General Anderson said that his client had promised there would be no repetition of the exciting incidents of that night and pleaded for the mercy of the court.

Attorney E. W. Martin, representing the complaining residents, suggested that Sciple be placed on probation, but Anderson protested that his client was not a habitual drunkard and such procedure would be humiliating.

Recorder Broyles Agreed to This.

This action followed an agreement out of court in which Mrs. J. M. Hall in whose home at 164 Ponce DeLeon Avenue, cause of the complaint is said to have arisen, signed two documents, one consenting to move out of the neighborhood and the other agreeing not to bring suit for slander against the complainants.

Mrs. Hall's lease on the residence was secured from Harris B. White. She agreed to vacate on July 15.

The charges grew out of the conduct of Sciple and a pretty young woman who had engaged apartments at the Hall home, giving her name as Miss Myrtle Gilmer. It was asserted by the complainants that after Miss Gilmer came to live at the Ponce DeLeon address, Sciple at once began visiting her there and taking her out for automobile rides and in other ways paying her marked attention.

Residents in the neighborhood became greatly incensed, especially following an altercation between Sciple and a young visitor on the veranda.

Since that time Miss Gilmer apparently has disappeared.

Pony Contestants To Be Guests on 4th Of Hearst Papers

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American pony contests, their parents, their relatives and their friends, are invited to celebrate the "Fourth" at Grant Park as the guests of the Hearst papers.

Promptly at 10 o'clock the parade will start from the Alabama Street offices of The Georgian and American, with nine of the ponies in line. Some of these will be hitched to buggies, and some will be saddled.

When the parade arrives at the park, all the contestants will have turns riding or driving the ponies. There will be lemonade and refreshments for all. Through the courtesy of Dan Carey, Superintendent of Parks, everything has been arranged for giving the children the full run of the great public playground.

For the information of those who view the parade to-morrow, the buggies used are not the ones to be given away as prizes, but are loaned through the courtesy of E. D. Crane & Co.

CHIEF WARS ON SPEED FIENDS

War was declared Thursday by Chief of Police Beavers upon automobile speed fiends as the result of the conduct of the automobilist who ran down 14-year-old Eva Kilpatrick on Mills Street Wednesday and then raced on without stopping to learn the extent of the girl's injuries.

The car was going at express speed and was upon the terrified girl before she could make any effort to escape. She was hurled from the middle of the street to the sidewalk, where she lay unconscious. The large touring car dashed on and turned into Williams Street before its number could be taken.

The police dragnet is out for the driver of the car. Special men have been detailed to learn his identity. All of the police have instructions to assist in the crusade which has been started against reckless driving.

Mothers Aid Police.

Chief Beavers and Recorder Nash Broyles in strongest terms Thursday denounced the speed mania and proclaimed war upon the violators of the traffic ordinances. They were joined in their campaign by the mothers living in the vicinity of the Kilpatrick girl's home at 174 Hamilton Street. They have organized themselves into a vigilance committee to take the numbers of the cars that flash by and report them to the police.

Recorder Broyles was particularly bitter in his denunciation of the speeders who daily are defying the ordinances and endangering the lives of pedestrians. He would not discuss the Kilpatrick case, as the automobilist might be brought before him for trial, but he said, in discussing reckless driving generally:

"These speed maniacs who are brought before me are going to get the limit. This extremely dangerous practice must stop. If there is any way to lessen the number of victims of this speeding Juggernaut, which takes a frightful toll annually in all of the cities of the country, this court is going to support that plan with all its might.

"Atlanta automobilists show a wanton disregard for the lives of other people. Because prosecutions in the past have not been so frequent or so severe as they might, they have taken a ruthless license that daily puts lives in peril. The wonder is that more accidents are not reported.

Stockade Term Threatened.

"The drivers have become so lawless and careless of life that this court in the future may be relied upon to give the violators the limit. Whether or not the offending motorist is a member of a wealthy family, he will be sent to the stockade if it is proved that he is guilty of the brutal disregard for human life which has been evident on the streets of Atlanta since the summer season began this year."

Chief Beavers branded as an inhuman outrage the action of the automobilist who ran down the Kilpatrick girl.

"It is difficult," said the Chief, "to conceive of the inhumanity that will permit a man, after he has been the cause of an accident that has maimed or possibly killed an innocent little girl, to speed on out of sight, never even looking back nor returning to extend what aid he can.

"I have detailed men especially on this case. We are trying to learn the identity of the driver. The only woman who saw the accident tells us that the car was going so fast she could not be certain whether the driver was a white man or a negro."

Mrs. A. J. Heyback, of 48 Mills Street, in front of whose home the accident occurred, was greatly aroused Thursday over the narrow escape from death of the Kilpatrick girl. Mrs. Heyback has six children of her own, two of whom are small, one a girl of 4 years and the other a boy of 2.

"We mothers in this neighborhood

General Sickles at Gettysburg Refuses Harry Thaw's $1,000

GETTYSBURG, PA., July 3.—General Daniel E. Sickles, here attending the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg, to-day turned down the offer of financial aid made by Harry Thaw. Thaw sent ten $100 bills in a letter to Colonel G. M. Schoonmaker, chairman of the celebration committee, to be turned over to General Sickles because of the latter's financial difficulties.

Mrs. Longstreet, widow of the famous Confederate general, who is here, has offered to raise money from Confederate veterans to aid General Sickles, but no one has volunteered to start the subscription.

U. S. Prisoners Fail In Plea for Liberty

Judge Newman, in the United States District Court, Thursday decided against Ed F. Blake and Frank Howard, who some time ago instigated habeas corpus proceedings on the grounds that they were improperly sentenced. The two were remanded to the keeping of Warden W. H. Moyer, of the Federal prison, and will serve the remainder of their sentences.

Five years ago Blake and Howard entered postoffices at Morris and East Morris Conn. They were convicted on two counts. The penalty for each offense is five years. The court sentenced them to a straight sentence of ten years, instead of giving them two sentences of five years each.

DELAMATER, DRUG MAN, TAKEN TO PRISON

Police Called When He Goes to See Wife From Whom He Had Separated.

Dr. Ira J. DeLamater, of the DeLamater-Lawrence Drug Company in the Equitable Building, was arrested Thursday afternoon by Mounted Policemen Nashburn and Pate on the complaint of Mrs. DeLamater, and was taken to the police station pending a hearing Friday morning in the court of Recorder Broyles.

Mrs. DeLamater, who has been separated from her husband for some time and who is said to be suing for divorce, called up the police and told them that DeLamater was at her home at 60 Currier Street in an intoxicated condition and that she feared him.

Policemen Nashburn and Pate responded to the call, finding DeLamater at the house as represented. They warned him not to molest Mrs. DeLamater and he left, apparently for good. The officers, however, returned in a few minutes and discovered that he had returned in their absence and that, according to Mrs. DeLamater, he was cursing and acting in a violent manner. They promptly put him under arrest.

At the police station, DeLamater said that he had just returned from a month's stay at Aikentown, Ga., and that Wednesday he went to his wife's home to see his children and try to persuade his wife to agree to a reconciliation. He admitted that he might have been drinking when he went back again Thursday afternoon.

Dr. DeLamater figured in an exciting incident three or four years ago when he barricaded his house on Capitol Avenue against the police and defied them to enter. He was secretary-treasurer of the big DeLamater-Lawrence drug firm and is supposed still to hold that office.

Posse Kills Bandit; Wounds His Brother

WAYCROSS, GA., July 3.—Caught unawares at a house near Kirkland when they left the swamp in which they have been hiding for two weeks, Andrew Solomon and Randall Solomon, wanted for shooting up an Atlantic Coast Line freight train at Kirkland and implicated in numerous freight train and store burglaries, were late to-day surrounded by a posse of Coffee County men, headed by Deputy Sheriff J. E. Shaw, attempting to draw a pistol Andrew Solomon was shot and instantly killed and Randall Solomon badly wounded.

The body of the slain man and his wounded brother will be brought to Waycross to-night.

Mail Clerk Robbed Of Valuable Matter

Robert E. Barry, United States Postoffice Inspector, said Thursday that secret service men were hot on the trail of the three men who several weeks ago assaulted Garrett H. Ware, a railway mail clerk, and robbed him of six registered letters.

It was recently learned that the letters stolen were of great value and the robbers made a good haul.

BRENNAN FINED $100 FOR HITTING M'GRAW

NEW YORK, July 3.—Manager McGraw, of the Giants, and Pitcher Brennan, of the Phillies, this afternoon were ntified by President Lynch, of the National League, that each had drawn a five-day suspension for the mix-up that occurred Monday on the Philadelphia ball field. Brennan, who hit McGraw, also drew a $100 fine.

BROYLES TO GIVE SPEED FIENDS "THE LIMIT"

Recorder Declares He Will Aid Police in War on Careless Automobile Drivers.

have declared war on the speeders," she said. "We have formed ourselves into a vigilance committee to get the numbers of all the automobilists who race through this part of town."

Mrs. Heyback saw the auto which struck the Kilpatrick girl and knocked her from the middle of the street to the sidewalk, but she did not see the accident itself.

"The car was coming so fast," said Mrs. Heyback, "that it just seemed to appear from nowhere and then it dashed into Williams Street and disappeared from sight."

The only eye witness of the accident was a woman living on Mills Street, near Williams. Most of the residents in the neighborhood had gone inside for dinner. This woman was sitting on the porch of her home when she heard the whirring of the automobile. An instant later she saw it dash down the street, striking the Kilpatrick girl.

The car did not slacken its speed in the least, but raced on in a cloud of dust and turned into Williams Street, where it was lost to view. The horrified woman did not stop to go around by the gate, but vaulted the fence and picked up the limp form and carried it into her house, from where it was removed to Grady Hospital and then home.

The girl's left shoulder is dislocated and her ankle is thought to be broken.

"I was going to visit my brother, Homer, who lives on River Street," said Eva, in telling of the accident. "I got on the Luckie Street car two blocks from our house. I got off the car at Mills Street t trasfer to the River Street line.

"I started across the street, when all of a sudden—I woke up in Grady Hospital.

"No I did not even see the automobile, and never heard a horn or any sound of warning."

Says Driver Was White.

Mrs. Kilpatrick, who had learned all the particulars from eye witnesses to the accident, state that the automobile came down Mills Street at a terrific rate of speed, driven by a white man. He never sounded a warning, she declared.

"The driver of the touring car after he had hit Eva," said Mrs. Kilpatrick, "put on even more speed and without looking around made his escape.

"I think this is one of the most cowardly and outrageous deeds ever committed in a civilized community. If the accident could have been avoided or was accidental I would feel diffrent about it. But when the chauffeur hit Eva he ran like a coward, and this shows that the deed was deliberate and that people in automobiles care nothing for the lives of people.

"Eva has not been to town but a few times in her life, for I do not allow any of my children to run the streets. She is not deaf, and had she been given any warning I am sure she could have got out of the way of the machine, even at the high speed it was traveling.

"We are poor people and though I don't for a minute begrudge the doctor bills for Eva, it does seem a shame to have my little daughter crippled for life and not to even know who is responsible for it."

The girl's father, W. R. Kilpatrick, is employed at the Atlanta Steel Hoop Mill.

The Kilpatricks have six children, only one of whom is working. Neighbors of the Kilpatricks are greatly aroused and some of them have expressed the opinion that pedestrians should take the law into their own hands.

FACE DISFIGURED WITH PIMPLES

Ruffin, N. C.—"My face became full of pimples and blackheads, and would itch, burn and smart. The skin was rough and red. I was really ashamed of my face. My arms and back were affected almost as badly. The pimples would fester and there would come a dry scab on top. The trouble caused my face to be disfigured badly and the itching would bother me so I could not sleep well nights, especially during warm weather.

"I used all kinds of ointments, cold creams, powders, soaps, medicine and all kinds of different remedies for my face and arms, but from none did I get any benefit. The trouble lasted me three long years without anything doing me any good until a friend told me about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and then I decided to try them. After the first application I could see some improvement. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment two weeks I did not look like the same person; most of the pimples had disappeared. At the end of four weeks I was completely cured." (Signed) Miss Mamie Mitchell, Jan. 9, 1913.

It costs nothing to learn how pure, sweet, effective and satisfying Cuticura Soap and Ointment are in the treatment of poor complexion, red, rough hands, itching scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, because you need not buy them until you try them. Cuticura Soap 25c and Cuticura Ointment 50c are sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

ARMOR TRUST'S LOBBY PLOT IS REVEALED

Witness at Senate's Inquiry Tells of Secret War Waged on Great Combines.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The lobby inquiring committee on Saturday will recommend an investigation embracing not only the Mulhall charges, but the lobbying activities of the New York Stock Exchange, financial institutions, tariff associations, liquor and anti-liquor, and labor and anti-labor organizations.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Henry B. Martin, secretary of the Anti-Trust League, testifying before the Senate Lobby Investigation Committee, today declared the league is concentrating its efforts in a fight against the Armor Plate Trust. The trust, he asserted, is robbing the people of millions of dollars each year.

Other activities of the league have been to prod the Government to activity against the Elevator, Coal, Transportation and other alleged trusts. He could not tell how much the fight had cost himself and his associates.

Martin said that A. B. Dickey, of the Carnegie Coal Company, Vice President Johnson, of the Bethlehem Steel Company, and an agent of the Midvale Steel Company formed a lobby in Washington last March to induce the Secretary of the Navy to sign contracts for armor plate at figures much higher than its value.

League Members Persecuted.

Martin declined to produce matter showing the methods employed by the league in influencing legislation. He especially did not want to make public a complete list of the members.

"We are engaged in a very serious fight against trusts," said Martin, "and it is dangerous to the business life of any man to be known to be a member of this organization. We held one open convention to our sorrow. Many of the members were injured by the trusts when their relationship with the league was discovered."

Martin admitted that contributions of as high as $1,000 were made to the league. He refused to give the names of the contributors. He said he has known David Lamar five years and that Lamar is a member of the Anti-Trust League, although he is a member only because he is in sympathy with the league's purposes.

Lamar Gave Aid.

"He did more than any one man to point out vicious features of the Taft-Wickersham railroad bill which, if passed in its original form, would have given immunity to the railroad trust," said Martin.

Martin said he asked Lamar to give him a draft of a resolution for another investigation of the Steel Trust.

"You asked Lamar to prepare the resolution?" demanded Senator Cummins.

"Yes," replied Martin.

Martin did not remember where Lamar gave him the Steel Trust resolution. He did not recall how long he had the resolution in his possession before it was introduced.

"Did you tell the members to whom you gave the resolution that Lamar drew it?" demanded Senator Cummins.

"No," replied Martin.

Martin accused Chairman Lovett, of the Union Pacific board of directors, and Paul D. Cravath of lobbying at the Department of Justice by "trying to influence Attorney General McReynolds against doing what was in the interest of the public."

Martin admitted that David Lamar, "the wolf" of Wall Street, prepared the resolution fatheerd by Representative Stanley in the House for the investigation of the Steel Trust.

Marathon Race From Albany to Sylvester

SYLVESTER, July 3.—Much local interest is being manifested in the second annual Fourth of July Marathon Race under the auspices of the Worth County Local and the Albany Herald. The race will start in Albany at 5 o'clock Friday morning, and will end at Sylvester. Cash prizes amounting to $200 will be awarded the winners.

The local camp of the Woodmen of the World will give a barbecue to the citizens of Worth and Dougherty counties.

ASSEMBLY QUITS TO CELEBRATE 4TH OF JULY

Legislature Reconvenes Monday. Thirty-eight Days Left After Adjournment.

The Legislature adjourned in both branches to-day until July 7, the House to reassemble at 11 a. m. and the Senate at noon.

When the General Assembly meets Monday it will have before it exactly 38 days of life, as it will have used up twelve days by that time. It is limited to a total sitting of 50 days.

Today's proceedings in both branches were more or less perfunctory, and adjournment was effected in each before 11 o'clock.

The committees, however, are well ahead of the Senate and the House, and both will have full opportunity to catch up all time that will be lost between now and Monday, after the Assembly reconvenes. The Houses can not adjourn for more than three days at a time, except by joint resolution, passed by two-thirds of each.

An echo of the successful fight to unseat Representatives McArthur, of Wheeler, and Browning, of Bleckley, was heard to-day in a resolution proposed by Mr. Wheatley, of Sumter.

Powers of Delegates Asked.

This resolution, which went to the Committee on Rules, provides that both McArthur and Browning shall have seats in the House, with the right to consult and be consulted on local matters, but shall not be permitted to vote or serve on committees.

If this resolution goes through, Messrs. McArthur and Browning will occupy positions in the Georgia Legislature somewhat similar to that occupied by territorial delegates on the floor of the House of Representatives in the National Congress.

The resolution will have many supporters, provided it comes from the Committee on Rules with a favorable report, but a strong fight unquestionably will be made against its adoption, in any event.

New Enrollment Committee.

The House, by a special rule, created a new Committee on Enrollment to-day, as it already is evident that the crush of matter is growing far too heavy for the present Committee on Engrossing to handle.

Virtually the entire Legislative membership either left Atlanta this afternoon or will leave to-night, many of them going to various Fourth of July celebrations throughout the State.

The recent recommendatoin of Judge Roan that the office of public defender be instituted in Georgia in contradistinction to the office of public prosecutor, or Solicitor General, seems likely to bear fruit in the present Legislature.

Representative Blackburn, of Fulton, has introduced a bill seeking to set up this office, and it is now before the General Judiciary Committee for consideration.

Paid Like the Solicitor.

Blackburn's bill proposes that the lawyer assigned to the defense of a pauper or ignorant defendant shall be paid for his services from the county treasury, in the same manner that a Solicitor is compensated, except that his pay shall not arise from fees incident to the case at bar.

In this way it is figured that poor defendants may have their rights on trial safeguarded to the same extent that the State safeguards its own interests, which is exactly what the law, in theory, contemplates.

This bill has the indorsement of lawyers generally, and the judges of the State are said to favor it almost as a unit.

The outlook for its passage seems to be good.

Another bill that is attracting a good deal of attention among lawyers is the bill to reinstate William B. Kent, a member of the last Legislature, who recently was disbarred from the practice of law in Georgia.

This bill was proposed by Mr. Edmondson, of Brooks, and will be pushed vigorously.

Mr. Kent was disbarred from the practice of law during the session of the last House, and his friends claim that there was much behind the action that was unwarranted and unjust.

Action Arouses Interest.

They will make a strong plea to have him reinstated this year.

Disbarments are rare in Georgia, and as Mr. Kent's was effected for alleged unworthy practice, the action of the Legislature, in the attempt that will be made therein to upset the findings of the court that put Mr. Kent off the list of practicing attorneys in Georgia, will be watched with keen interest.

Governor and Wife Congratulated on Most Successful Reception in History of Mansion.

Atlanta society is congratulating Mrs. John Marshall Slaton to-day on the success of her first formal entertainment as mistress of the Executive Mansion.

The reception, given by Governor and Mrs. Slaton at the mansion Wednesday night in honor of the General Assembly was, in addition to being the first of the new administration, one of the most brilliant official receptions in Georgia's history.

Several hundred people attended the affair. The United States Army was represented by General Evans and his staff, and Colonel Van Orsdale and the officers from Fort McPherson in full dress uniform.

Mansion and Grounds a Garden.

To accommodate the large crowd, the lawn of the Executive Mansion had been turned into a garden, with the sides inclosed by a hedge of small pine trees eight or ten feet in height. From the entrance on Cain Street a little avenue of bay trees led to the main entrance under the mansion.

Governor and Mrs. Slaton received their guests in a pergola of white columns, festooned with smilax. Standing with them were President of the Senate and Mrs. Randolph Anderson and Speaker of the House and Mrs. William Burwell. They were assisted in entertaining the guests by the members of the Governor's staff, members of the family, and a group of Mrs. Slaton's friends.

A party of society girls, including Misses Margaret Grant, Margaret Hawkins, Passie May Ottley, Harriet Calhoun, Marjorie Brown, Adgate Ellis and Virginia Lipscomb, served punch, lemonade and coffee.

Mrs. Slaton Gowned Exquisitely.

Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. Slaton's mother, who resides with her, assisted the new mistress of the Executive Mansion in presenting the guests. She has as her especial guests Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hunt, of Eatonton.

Mrs. Slaton wore a gown of white chiffon cloth, combined with delicate pattern of fillet lace and apricot satin. The lace was in long tunics on each side of the front panel of chiffon, which was embroidered in a flower design of tiny crystal sequins in pastel shades. A rhinestone sparkled in the center of each flower. Over the back of the gown was draped a long sash of apricot satin, and the narrow pointed train was bordered with the same. The chiffon sleeves were overlace, and met by long gloves. She wore a necklace of pearls and diamonds, and two corsage pieces of precious stones.

Man Sought 2 Years By U. S. Captured

Harrison M. Thomas, a former storeroom gauger, who for the past two years has successfully evaded the United States Government, sought as a material witness in the case of the Government vs. B. J. Davis, was taken into custody last week in Washington. He will be brought at once to Atlanta for trial.

In 1900 B. J. Davis, it is charged, removed certain distilled spirits from a bonded distilling warehouse which belonged to a man by the name of Fowler. Davis had charge of the warehouse and without authority to do so furnished to Harrison M. Thomas packages of corn whisky.

Athens Man Killed By Excessive Heat

ATHENS, July 3.—Otto Hubert, a harness maker, employed by Max Hubert & Co., a heavy built man, about 35 years old, was overcome by the heat on the street here this afternoon and died shortly afterward.

WRIT SOUGHT IN MOVE TO FREE NEGRO LEE

Attorney for Watchman Declares Client Knows Nothing of the Actual Crime.

Bernard L. Chappell, attorney for Newt Lee, negro night watchman at the pencile factory, held in the Phagan case, stated Tuesday morning that he would swear out a writ of habeas corpus for the release of the negro.

Attorney Chappell stated that he had come to the conclusion that there was nothing the negro knew about the crime except finding the body, and that the State had no right to keep him without some charge or as a material witness.

Lee was the first suspect arrested in connection with Mary Phagan's murder. He was ordered held by the Coroner, but when a bill of indictment was offered the Grand Jury at the same time of the Frank indictment, no action was taken against the negro.

Weak Spots in Conley Tale.

Chappell said the writ of habeas corpus would compel the State either to order the negro held as a material witness or make some charge against him.

Conley, in relating his dramatic tale of carrying the body of Mary Phagan from the rear of the second floor and disposing of it at the direction of Frank in a dark corner of the gloomy basement, said that when he reached the elevator he had to wait until Frank went into his office for a key to the elevator door.

The defense will maintain, it is understood, that the elevator door had not been locked for some time. Witnesses will be called to testify that the door had remained unlocked in accordance with instructions from the firms with which the building was insured. From this alleged circumstance, it will be argued that the negro's story is a fabrication devised to shield himself from the charge of murder and to shift the responsibility onto another man.

To Assail Whole Story.

This is only one particular of at least a score which will be assailed by Attorneys Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold, who are representing Frank. They will say in the first place that the elevator was not running at all on the day of the crime, in spite of Conley's story that the body was carried down to the basement by this means. Harry Denham and Arthur White, who were working on the fourth floor of the factory, will be called to testify to this.

With the defense and prosecution awaiting the day when the great legal battle which will send Frank to the gallows or free him from the stigma of the murder charge shall begin, Frank's lawyers are occupying much of their time in making a critical analysis of the succession of weird statements credited to the negro from the time he said he wrote on the Friday before the murder at the dictation of Frank the notes that were found beside the body of the dead girl until he issued his last affidavit.

The negro admitted the story of writing the notes on Friday was false. He admitted that his first story of never having seen Mary Phagan, dead or alive, was a deliberate lie. He is reported to have further changed his story by admitting seeing the girl before she was killed. But, except for this, he maintains his last affidavit is the whole truth. The defense believes it is as false as the rest and is preparing to go into court and break down utterly the fabrication that the negro has erected.

Notes to Play Part.

Although the notes found by the body of the slain girl have received little attention from those working on the case lately, they are bound to have a most important part in the trial of Frank.

The defense will seek to show that there could have been no possibility of their being dictated by the factory superintendent; that if the negro had taken Frank's dictation, supposing that Frank had committed the crime, a much different sort of a note would have been the result.

Conley has shown since his arrest that he can follow dictation with a fair degree of accuracy. This being the case, it is reasonable to presume, the defense will hold, that he would have followed Frank's words closely. But the notes are an incoherent, jumbled mass of words that are only half intelligible after the detectives have placed weeks of study upon them. The defense will contend that such a note can not be imagined, by any process of reasoning, as the dictation of Frank.

Manufacturers to Hear Exhibit Plans

Definite plans for a permanent manufacturers' exhibit in Atlanta will be submitted by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce to more than 150 manufacturers at a dinner Thursday evening at the Hotel Ansley.

The Chamber also is raising money for the 1913 Georgia Corn Show. More than $3,500 has been pledged, exclusive of $2,000 by the fertilizer committee, of which H. C. Fisher is chairman, has promised to secure. The sum desired is $7,500.

Postal Receipts in Year Jump $116,000

"Atlanta Always Ahead" again is illustrated in the report of the Atlanta postoffice for the fiscal year ending June 30. Total receipts for the year were $1,328,011.24, an increase of $116,005.63 over the previous year.

Postmaster Hugh L. McKee believes Atlanta will be in the exclusive class of postoffices soon. This class is made up of postoffices with receipts totaling $150,000 a month.

BUTTON IDEA FOR 500,000 CLUB IS PRAISED

Advertising Expert, ex-Charleston Man, Tells of Plan's Success in Former Home.

M. C. Maxwell, recently come to Atlanta from Charleston, S. C., where he was president of the Ad Men's Club, said Thursday that he wanted to get in as a charter member of the 500,000 club. He explained that he had been associated with a similar plan in Charleston and that he was glad to find such a definite means of expressing the Atlanta spirit.

"The Georgian's suggestion for a 500,000 club to get 500,000 people here by 1920 is a great thing," he said. "I have noticed the $25 prize offer for the best slogan to go on the buttons of this club.

Buttons Sold in Charleston.

"There's no doubt about every loyal citizen wearing these buttons. Why, I believe they even would be glad to pay for them.

"In Charleston we wanted to raise $5,000 to move the museum. We decided to sell buttons. This was the slogan adopted:

"'See Charleston first, always.'

"Then 50 men got to work on the streets and we sold 5,000 of these buttons at $1 each.

"So much for the button idea. Atlanta is too far ahead to be led by Charleston.

Urges Letter Head Slogan.

"With the Atlanta spirit what it is there is no telling to what extent the button idea will go.

"I think it would be good for all business firms to have '500,000 people in 1920' printed on their letter heads.

"One thing I'm sure about. I'm glad to get to Atlanta to live."

Mr. Maxwell is associated with the Rhodes-Wood Furniture Company.

ACQUITTAL SEEN IN CHURCH INQUIRY

Macon Christian Elders to Report Verdict in Charlton-Lester Case Sunday.

MACON, July 3.—The elders of the First Christian Church will report to the congregation Sunday morning on their investigation into the alleged visit made by Professor Frank M. Charlton, the choir leader, to the home of Mrs. Marvin Lee Lester, secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, on the night of June 5.

It is very probable that the elders will declare to the church that their inquiry has failed to prove the charge against the two prominent members of the congregation who are now under suspicion. It will be left to the congregation whether there shall be an open trial.

The elders last night visited the home of Mrs. Lester on Carling Avenue to determine if Mrs. J. W. Jenkins could have recognized Professor Charlton from the porch of her home across the street from the Lester residence.

One of the elders entered the alley and stood by the side gate of the Lester back yard and other elders got on the porch of the Jenkins home and endeavored to distinguish him. They were unsuccessful, they say, and for that reason they are dubious as to Mrs. Jenkins' and Mrs. Alma Armstrong's statement that they positively recognized Professor Charlton.

The exclusive publication in Macon yesterday by The Georgian of the fact of the investigation being in progress caused a genuine sensation.

"Now that the affair has gotten in the papers," says Rev. Leroy M. Anderson, the pastor, "I am more than ever determined that there shall be a thorough investigation."

The elders have several more persons to examine to-night.

Douglas Man, Insane, Hangs Himself in Jail

DOUGLASVILLE, July 3.—J. L. Dempsy, a well-known citizen of Douglas County, committed suicide by hanging himself in the County jail here. Dempsy, who had become temporarily deranged, had been placed in jail for safe-keeping.

Worry over family troubles and the possession of his eight-year-old son is supposed to have affected his mind. There was no other occupant of the jail and Dempsy had probably been dead several hours when found. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide.

New York Policeman Convicted Grafter

NEW YORK, July 3.—A verdict of guilty was returned early to-day against ex-Police Sergeant Peter J. Duffy, accused of collecting graft from illegal resorts in return for police protection.

Duffy showed no emotion when his guilt was pronounced. This was Duffy's second trial, the jury in the first having disagreed.

MANY ATLANTANS STUNG BY WILES OF A DAVID LAMAR

From photographs of David Lamar, "the Wolf of Wall Street," who Wednesday naively admitted before the Senate Lobby Committee at Washington that he had impersonated a number of public men in an effort to influence Wall Street, Atlantans have recognized an old acquaintance and the greatest "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" who ever operated in the Gate City.

Lamar, according to old-timers, came to Atlanta about 1892 and for a number of years was more or less successful in promoting various schemes which finally led to his arrest and departure to other fields. While here, however, he lived like a king, except when under indictment or in jail, and the known facts of his career reveal that he has not only had a greater supply of funds since, but that he has also escaped the tentacles of the law.

By all who remember him he is described as a man of wonderful personality and insight into human nature.

Soon after reaching Atlanta Lamar established close relations with a well known private banker. He rented the home of the late George W. Harrison, at the corner of Cone and Poplar Streets, then one of the fashionable houses of Atlanta, and proceeded to live in a lordly fashion. His wife is described as a beautiful woman and to her he gave every consideration.

His first scheme was to persuade Sam Hall, a former Atlantan who was a social leader and possessed of considerable money, to go in with him in the establishment of a weekly society paper. In a justice court, where Lamar was subsequently arraigned, Mr. Hall charged him with "cheating and swindling," stating that he had paid Lamar $500 to start the paper, but that the paper had failed to appear, and that he had seen nothing more of his $500.

Lamar, handsome and self-confident, arose in court and read a written defense of himself, of which the following are said to be verbatim extracts, remembered by a veteran reporter:

Eloquence Staggers Court.

"Mr. Hall did not want his name to be associated with the paper, but he promised that, from time to time, he would furnish me with choice and meaty bits of gossip and scandal.

"Later I called on Mr. Hall at his place of business and was surprised to find him a bookkeeper in a coffin factory. There, surrounded by the grewsome evidences of the mortality of man, we concluded our arrangements."

The record, from memory, is that Lamar's speech so staggered the court with its eloquence that he escaped on a technicality.

Next he organized a company to take over the street car advertising of Atlanta. He secured Dr. Joseph Jacoos as an investor to the extent of $7,500. When the company did not pan out, Dr. Jacobs "kissed" his money good-bye.

Finally Got His $7,500.

He decided the case was worth investigation, so he called at the Wall Street address of David Lamar. After an office boy had carried in his card the private office door of Lamar swung open and there stood the former Atlantan, surrounded by luxurious furnishings.

Lamar was gushing. He greeted Dr. Jacobs with an embrace, declaring that Dr. Jacobs had been his great benefactor in a time of grave need.

"You know," he said, "I was planning a little vacation. For that reason I have neglected to send you the money I owe you, for I was going to Atlanta to give it to you personally."

The story Dr. Jacobs told to his friends was that Lamar remembered the amount to be $1,000, but after a little argument he was convinced it was $7,500. He gave Dr. Jacobs New York exchange for the amount.

But back to the Atlanta end of the story. Unrebuffed by the failure of his two former projects, Lamar attempted to organize an accident insurance company for railroad employees. His banker friend stood him in good stead as chief backer.

He got $2,500 from a citizen, who soon regretted being persuaded. The result was another justice of the peace warrant.

Billy Crim, a city detective, started to serve the warrant on Lamar at his palatial home. On his way he met the star reporter of the city, whom he invited to go along. With the manners of a Chesterfield, Lamar met them at the door and was informed of the mission.

"Gentlemen," he said, "this is awkward. I am just eating my dinner, and I am sure you will not interrupt me and disturb my wife."

Billy Crim replied that he had a criminal warrant and that Lamar would have to go with him. Finally it was decided that the reporter should stand sponsor for Lamar until he finished his dinner.

The reporter recounts that Lamar finished his dinner with the ease and leisure of an Oriental king, explaining that the visitors were there on a business matter.

Here Appeared "Them Papers."

On his way to the old police station on Pryor Street, Lamar asked to stop and see an old friend in the Postal Telegraph office on Alabama Street. The request was granted, and Lamar held a short private conversation with a Mr. Close, the manager.

Once in the police station, Captain J. M. Wright, then Chief of Detectives, refused him the privilege of any visitors. A day of such solitude ruffled his nerves and in a very agitated state he appealed to his reporter friend.

He explained that he had never seen Mr. Close, of the telegraph office, but that he had some important papers in his pocket which he had to hide from the detectives and that he had given them to Mr. Close with the solemn request to hold them until they met again.

"I know by his eyes that that man will grant my request," said Lamar to the reporter. "Now, I want you to get that man and my wife down here so that the papers may be transferred to her."

The transfer was made that night. In the alley that divides The Georgian from the Atlanta National Bank Building Mrs. Lamar stole and, following the reporter's instructions, hid the papers in the bosom of her dress.

Mobile Greets Him Next.

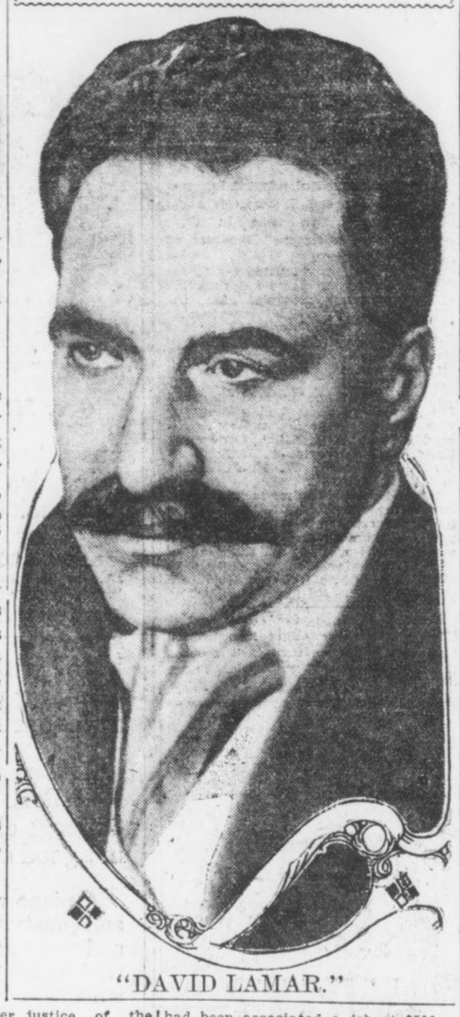

It was but a few days before Lamar was free again. The Atlantan who had made the $2,500 investment in the insurance company turned on the banker for redress and recovered his money after a fight through the Supreme Court.

Lamar announced that he would seek another clime. But before going he offered the reporter with whom he had been associated a job at $500 a month. It is really true that the reporter refused the offer.

Mobile then had a visit by the famous promoter. By the time he had shaken hands around once he had organized a company to take over the electric light plant and the street railway. He was played up in the papers as a New York capitalist.

It is said that when his associates woke up they did not know for certain whether they had anything left in Mobile but the bay.

KNOWN AS 'WOLF OF WALL STREET'

"DAVID LAMAR."

Lauterbach Ignorant of Lamar's Action, He Says.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Edward Lauterbach, the New York lawyer whom David Lamar, a Wall Street stock manipulator, tried to have appointed to represent the Union Pacific Railroad in the dissolution agreement proceedings, to-day denied that he knew Lamar was working in his behalf.

Mr. Lauterbach said he never suspected that Lamar was posing as a Congressman.

"I will have no statement to make until after I testify next Monday," Mr. Lauterbach said. "I will explain everything so far as my name is concerned."

Jury Deadlocked in Girl Strikers' Trial

PATERSON, N. J., July 3.—The jury in the case of Miss Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, member of the Industrial Workers of the World, charged with inciting riot in the silk mill strike, appeared to be hopelessly deadlocked to-day. The jurors have been out more than 24 hours.

Patrick Quinlan, I. W. W. leader, who was convicted of inciting riot, was sentenced to not less than two nor more than seven years in the State prison.

Beavers Will Ask For Women Aides

Instead of asking for women detectives, as he announced after returning from the Washington convention, Chief of Police Beavers said Thursday he would ask the Police Board Tuesday for women probation officers and investigators. They would be more valuable, he said, in reclaiming girls who had gone astray and saving those just stepping over the line.

Accused Slayer of Youth Facing Trial

DOTHAN, ALA., July 3.—Charles Brackin, charged with the murder of James Lloyd, 16 years old, near Wicksburg, in the western end of Houston County, on March 17, is on trial at a special term of Houston County Circuit Court to-day.

Lloyd was found dead with his throat cut from ear to ear. Jason Robertson, Charles Homer and Brackin were implicated by the Coroner's jury. Trials of the other boys come up later this term. All the defendants are of prominent families.

U. S. Court Expects Rate Case Appeal

Frank H. Mortimer, clerk of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals of the Fifth District, with headquarters in New Orleans, arrived in Atlanta Wednesday to check over the work of the court for the past year and to arrange for the cases which are to come before Judge Don A. Pardee during the October session, beginning the first Monday in the month.

"There has been no appeal filed to date in the Alabama Rate Case," said Mr. Mortimer, "but I understand there will be just as soon as the testimony which is being compiled in the lower courts is complete."

U. S. Correspondent Expelled by Mexico

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, July 3.—Fitzgerald Slocum, Mexico City correspondent of The Los Angeles Times, was expelled from Mexico to-day under "law 33," which provides for the expulsion of "undesirable aliens."

It is understood that the Government holds Slocum responsible for the recent report that a receiver had been appointed for the national system.

Accused of Attack On 8-Year-Old Girl

DUBLIN, July 3.—Lee Keen was arrested near Dublin to-day charged with attempting to assault an 8-year-old white girl at Rockledge, Laurens County, Tuesday night. He was captured in a deserted barn, and lodged in jail by Deputy Sheriff Linder and several citizens of the neighborhood.

Keen already is under bond for being implicated in a murder in Montgomery County.

Probe of Protected Vice Charge Likely

LEAGUE CLAIMS IT SMASHED TRUSTS

Anti-Trust Organization Takes Credit for Results So Far Obtained.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Henry B. Martin, secretary of the Anti-Trust League, regaled members of the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee to-day with a story of the league's accomplishments in the past twenty years at the White House, in executive departments and in Congress.

Martin declared the league had a hand in nearly every important piece of legislation put through in that period.

"The Bureau of Corporations was one of our main accomplishments," remarked Martin.

Says He Was Cheated While Drugged; Sues

Declaring that while he was under the influence of an opiate, agents of the American Investment and Loan Company forced him to purchase $1,500 in stock, G. W. Almand filed suit for an injunction in the Superior Court Thursday.

Almand said G. B. Cobb, vice president, and E. S. Vickery, a stock salesman, came to his home when he was unconscious, and, taking him to their office in an automobile, got his signature to a note for $2,000, secured by a mortgage on a house he owned. He said the company had declined to redeem the stock or return the mortgage.

Hunger Strike Now Tried in Antipodes

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CHRISTCHURCH, N. Z., July 3.—The world-famous "hunger strike," so popular now in British jails, to-day made its appearance in New Zealand.

A number of Socialistic youths, arrested for refusing to undergo military training, went on a "hunger strike" and were sentenced to solitary confinement.

LANFORD PROBES DRINKING BY DETECTIVES

Chief Declares He Will Take Vigorous Action if Charges Are Found To Be True.

Chief of Detectives Newport Lnford announced Thursday morning that he had inaugurated a thorough probe of the detective department to determine the truth of reports, recently come to his notice, that city detectives drink liquor and kill time in the locker clubs.

He declared his investigation would be as thorough and far-reaching as possible, and that if he found any officers guilty, he would take prompt and vigorous action.

Chief Lanford's investigation followed the statement made to Chief Beavers Wednesday by an Atlanta physician, that both the uniformed officers and the detectives congregate at locker clubs and drink and loaf. He named two downtown clubs in which he said he several times had seen detectives loitering and drinking.

The physician who informed Chief of Police James L. Beavers that girls were lured to their ruin from a prominent downtown restaurant to a house operated by the cashier of the place and that the police were on the "inside" and giving protection was called before the Chief Thursday to make a personal statement.

Chief Beavers said he would probe the physician's statement to the very bottom, and that if found true, he would take prompt action against the policemen involved.

"I am determined to put every man off the force who drinks," he said, "and I am determined to find if any of my men have been concerned in any such scheme as this physician tells of. I shall not stop until the matter has been probed to the bottom and the public knows the truth."

The Chief has tightened the net around the places mentioned in the letter.

Sergeant Dobbs, detailed to examine the membership register of the locker clubs, reported that he had been unable to find the name of a single officer on the membership list of a locker club.

PICKETT'S MEN AND OLD FOES MEET AGAIN AT FAMOUS 'BLOODY ANGLE'

Peace Returns to Gettysburg Reunion Hosts After Stabbing Over Lincoln.

GETTYSBURG, PA., July 3.—Today has been set down on the program as Governor's Day, when most of the score or more of Governors now at the State headquarters at Gettysburg College are expected to attend the exercises in the auditorium tent. Governor Tener will preside and will make an address, as will Governor James B. McCreary, of Kentucky.

The reunion of Philadelphia brigade and the survivors of Pickett's division will be held this afternoon at Bloody Angle, the point where Pickett's charging Virginians and North Carolinans first struck the Union lines on Cemetery Ridge, 50 years ago this afternoon.

It was largely the Philadelphia brigade which stood the brunt of this attack, and thus the ancient enemies who fought hand to hand in that bitter struggle a half century ago will meet once more.

Great Fireworks Display.

What is expected to be one of the most spectacular features of the week will be the fireworks display on Little Top to-night. For weeks men have been engaged in preparing the apparatus and staging the display, which is expected to be one of the finest ever seen in this country.

Some of the historians of the camp to-day brought to headquarters the man who fired the first cannon at the battle of Gettysburg. He is Michael Hays, of Springfield, Ill., who served in Tidball's battery under General Buford. He found the gun he fired, which is standing to-day in the exact position it stood when first fired in the battle. General Liggett took him for a tour of the field in a motor car and manifested considerable interest in his narrative of the fight.

Vice President Marshall is expected here to-day and great preparations have been made for his reception. He will be escorted through the camp and will spend some time in the quarters of the Indiana delegation.

Seven Hurt in Fight.

A stabbing affray, in which seven men were hurt and which had its origin in a slurring reference to Abraham Lincoln, resulted in a scene of wild disorder in the crowded dining room of a hotel in Gettysburg last night and threatened to dissipate the spirit of peace and fraternalism which has hovered over the battleground since the great reunion began.

In the confusion which followed the stabbing, it was impossible to obtain the names of all the principals in the fight which sprang up so unexpectedly that everyone in the dining hall, except those near the table where the abusive remarks in regard to Lincoln were made, was taken by surprise.

The wounded men are:

Edward J. Carroll, sergeant of the Quartermasters' Corps, U. S. A.; David Farbor, of Butler, Pa., member of the State Constabulary; John D. Maugin, Harrisburg; Malcolm Griffin, of Budford City, Pa.; Charles Susler, of West Fairview, Pa.; Hayes Remise Becker, of Gettysburg, and Harry A. Root, Jr., of Harrisburg.

Veteran Resents Remark.

The man whom the police say made the remark and did the stabbing gave his name as W. B. Henry, of Philadelphia. He told the officers of the State Constabulary that he was a son of R. R. Henry, of Tazewell, Va., a general in the Confederate Army.

Henry was seated at one of the tables in the hotel with several others. Animosities soon developed out of the war talk at the table. Henry is said to have championed the cause of the Confederacy, and did so without particular rebuke until he is said to have applied a vile epithet to Lincoln.

This was strongly resented by a veteran in blue, said to be H. H. Baker, of Pennsylvania. Baker seized a decanter of water and threw it at Henry. There was an immediate uproar. Tables were upset and chairs overturned.

Brandishes a Knife.

Henry jumped to his feet, brandishing a knife, according to the stories told the police. A half dozen men jumped to the defense of Baker, and the flashing of knives started a panic in the dining room.

The police have the knife of Henry, which was grabbed by C. A. Goldthwaite, of Salem, Mass., and turned over to the authorities. Henry, when locked up in the jail here, denied that he had done any of the actual stabbing, and said that he was in the fight only to aid Griffin, one of the wounded men.

Baker was uninjured. The others were hurt in coming to his defense. He disappeared after the fight.

The death of George W. Walls of acute uremia early this morning makes a total of eight deaths since the opening of the reunion. There were fifteen hospital cases, most of them due to the heat or minor illnesses.

Pageant Play Opens Festival by Negroes

A pageant play will open the Jubilee Festival of negro singers at the Auditorium Thursday night. The leading role will be taken by Patti Brown, the Chicago soprano. The Fisk Jubilee Singers, backed by a chorus of 250 trained voices, will be heard in old-time genuine negro music. The singing is illustrative of the progress of the negro race from the dawn of its history to the present.

Friday afternoon there will be a matinee and at night a concert, in which all the leading singers of the festival will take part.

Lid on Gambling Is Clamped at Newport

NEWPORT, July 3.—This is to be a closed season for gambling here. None of the regular places is open and none will be if Mayor MacLeod can help it.

The Mayor has hinted to those interested in the Nautilus Club, which for years has been exclusively used by summer residents, that they had better not open this year.

13th Negro Failed On Friday, 13th, '13

DALTON, July 1.—Of the 34 white applicants for license in the recent Whitfield County examination, all stood the examination successfully, County Superintendent Sapp having finished grading the papers.

Thirteen negroes took the examination held on Friday, the 13th, 1913, and the thirteenth one failed, the other twelve passing.

Gets a Reprieve Because of Mumps

NEW SLOGAN FOR ATLANTA AD MEN

Story of National Convention's Actions Told at "Back-From-Baltimore" Banquet.

Clear and truthful advertising was the slogan adopted Wednesday night by the Atlanta ad men in their "Back from Baltimore" banquet at the Hotel Ansley.

S. C. Dobbs, representing the Coca-Cola Company, in his speech on the "Declaration of Principles for the 1913 Convention," called attention to the motto, "Truth," adopted by the national convention, and declared that this was the end toward which all loyal and representative ad men are working.

Among other speakers at the banquet, which was the first held at the new Ansley, were Jack Lewis, Albert Adams, Ivey Allen, George H. Kohn, Evelyn Harris, W. J. Hubbard, W. S. Lounsbury, W. F. Parkhurst and L. D. Hicks.

The ad men unanimously voted to devote the excess of $234, as reported by Treasurer Ivey Allen, to next year's convention trip. The sum will serve as the nucleus of the fund of $5,000, following the suggestion of Charles A. Smith. Harry Goodhart, president of the Ad Club, presided.

KIMBALL PIANOS
The Artist's Ideal
Beyond a doubt the best way to get a genuine bargain in a piano is to go to a responsible house and pay a fair price for an instrument with a reputation back of it.
You should not consider for one moment that cheap pianos which are advertised in such convincing terms are worth spending money for. If you buy one, you are speculating with most of the chances against you. Whether you buy here or elsewhere, secure a standard make or save your money.
The cost of making a piano such as the KIMBALL is greater than the selling price of most cheap pianos, which are as a rule not good even when new.
A piano with excellent staying qualities of tone and construction is the only one worth considering and you had better pay a little more and know that as long as you have it you will be pleased with it.
By this we do not mean that you will have to spend an exorbitant sum to obtain a satisfactory instrument, but we do wish to caution you against ones sold at a price for which it is impossible to give you a piano of real merit.
We wish to caution you against buying a piano from a concern that has a sliding scale of prices. The one-price plan on which we operate is the only sure way of your securing full value. We have found in many years of experience that to be fair to ourselves and the customer is the only correct selling method.
A few special bargains in used uprights and player-pianos.

SUFFRAGETTES DENIED USE OF CAPITOL

Stark Recalls Absence of Women Among Disciples Before Moving Resolution Be Tabled.

The Georgia Woman Suffrage Association ran afoul of the Georgia Senate Thursday, when Senator W. W. Stark caused to be laid on the table a request that the suffragists have the use of the Senate chamber two days during their State convention.

When asked by Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, the president, and Mrs. Amelia R. Woodall, the treasurer of the suffragists, why he opposed them, Senator Stark replied: "Because Jesus Christ did not call a woman for one of His twelve disciples, and because He was not a suffragist."

The suffrage question was injected into the Senate proceedings by Senator G. M. Huie, of the Thirty-fifth, who introduced by request a resolution that the use of the Senate chamber be extended to Mrs. S. E. Cunningham, Mrs. William H. Felton, Miss H. Augusta Howard, Mrs. J. J. Ansley, Mrs. J. H. Sibley "and several gentlemen, all citizens of Georgia," at 8 p. m., July 9 and 10, for the purpose of delivering addresses on "The Scope of the Elective Franchise."

Stark Balks at "Enlighten."

Deputy Clerk Hansell had barely finished reading the resolution when Senator Stark arose and asked:

"Mr. President, do these ladies and gentlemen intend to enlighten the Senate on the question of woman's suffrage?"

"In so far as I understand it, that is the purpose of the meeting," President J. Randolph Anderson replied.

"Then I move to lay that resolution on the table," said Mr. Stark.

Upon a rising vote, the resolution was tabled, 20 to 7.

Mrs. McLendon said the State woman's suffrage convention desired the use of the Senate chamber, because of its excellent acoustics, and that it heretofore had been freely extended them. She said she believed they would get it this time, too, because Senator J. N. Watts, of the Eleventh, had promised to call for reconsideration of the resolution next Monday.

Invites Farm Finance Expert.

Speakers on the two evenings for which the Senate chamber is wanted will be the women mentioned in the resolution and the following men: Leonard Grossman, T. J. Skellie, the Rev. George Beattie, of Atlanta, and Martin V. Calvin, of Decatur.

At the earnest request of Senator John T. Allen, of the Twentieth, who read a letter from President J. C. McAuliffe, of Milledgeville, president of the Interstate Corn Growers' Association, the Senate took from the table and concurred in a House resolution inviting Herbert Myrick, of Springfield, Mass., to address the House and Senate at noon July 15, on the subject of co-operative rural finance in the cotton belt. Mr. Myrick will return from a study of co-operative farm credits in Europe in a few days, and will immediately start a Southern tour.

A written invitation was received to the July 4 celebration at St. Phillips Cathedral at 10:30 o'clock o. m. It was not accepted, because most of the Senators will be out of the city.

NEW YORK, July 3.—A Stock Exchange seat was sold last week for $40,000, a new low record price in the present movement. Previous to this a seat was sold for $42,000. Two other seats were sold during the spring for as low as $41,000. The seat sold last week was that of William Robison and the purchaser was Orme Wilson, Jr.

A few years ago a Stock Exchange seat sold as low as $38,000, but the price rebounded and went above $45,000 soon afterward.

Bill Removes Poll Tax Law Restriction

Making it possible for a citizen to pay his poll tax within 60 days of an election and become an eligible voter is what Representative Arnold of Henry County wishes to do. In this connection he has filed a bill in the House requiring tax collectors to keep their poll tax books open so that prospective voters may pay their tax.

The present law requires the payment of the poll tax at least six months prior to the election.

FOOD BILL FOR LINERS UP TO MILLIONS

North German Lloyd Paid $4,920,000 for Provisions Last Year and $7,373,735 for Coal.

NEW YORK, July —In these days of the high cost of living it is interesting to know what it costs a steamship company to provide the necessities of life to its passengers.

The annual statement of the North German Lloyd for 1912 shows $4,920,000 for provisions and $7,373,735 for coal.

More potatoes were consumed than any other single article, the total amount having been 17,875,873 pounds. Flour ranked next, with 6,313,152 pounds, while bread was fourth, with 2,353,083 pounds.

The passengers consumed 7,098,560 eggs, 4,271,059 oranges and lemons, 707,625 pounds of onions and 983,802 pounds of salt. They used 465,340 pounds of coffee and 41,729 pounds of tea, and 529,619 cans of sterilized milk.

Of wines, Rhein and Mosel were most popular, heading the list with 112,211 bottles, as against 35,97 bottles having been consumed in addition to 1,720,634 quarts of beer in barrels.

Slaton to Address R.F.D. Carriers Here In State Convention

Several hundred rural letter carriers of Georgia assembled at the Kimball House Thursday afternoon for the first session of the State convention, which will continue until Saturday.

The meeting was informal and in the nature of a fraternal and social gathering. Friday the delegates will go to the Senate chamber of the State Capitol, where welcome addresses will be delivered by Mayor James G. Woodward and Postmaster H. L. McKee. Clark Howell also will address the body.

Among the speakers Friday afternoon will be Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick, Governor Slaton and W. D. Brown, editor of The R. F. D. News, will speak Saturday. George C. Bond is master of ceremonies.

MISS LILLIAN KYLE JONES.

Pretty Miss Lillian Kyle Jones, of Knoxville, Tenn., whose statement that the Southern youth does not show his sweetheart a good time aroused a storm of excited protest among the Atlanta girls, now finds herself in a "nice pickle."

Here is what Miss Jones said in New York that caused the protest:

"Chivalry is a nice thing to have around the house, but you can't live on it nor enjoy it day after day any more than you can caviar."

"It's very nice of Miss Jones to say that for the benefit of her masculine admirers in New York, but it just isn't so, that's all," the Atlanta girls declare.

COTTON TRADER FEARS CLARKE MEASURE

Tax on Futures Contracts Will Hurt Farmer and Help None, Says W. B. Thompson.

NEW ORLEANS, July 3.—Future trading will be wiped out, root and branch; producers will be at the mercy of combinations of purchasers; cotton exchanges will be put out of business, thus abolishing the forces which compel honest trading, and the total result will be chaos if the Clarke amendment to the tariff bill, taxing futures contracts, is adopted, says W. B. Thompson, of New Orleans, in a telegram to C. S. Barrett, President of the National Farmers' Union.

Furthermore, instead of decreasing speculation, the measure would increase it, by making even the spot business highly hazardous, Mr. Thompson says. His telegram follows:

"To Hon. C. S. Barrett, President of the National Farmers' Union, Union City, Ga.:

"The Clarke amendment to the tariff bill will not regulate future trading, but by destroying the future contract markets, will strike down all future trading, both good and bad. Hedges can not be bought or sold, hence the spot cotton business will be made speculative in the last degree. This will mean that the multitude of cotton buyers of small or limited means will be forced out of business and the producer will be under the necessity of carrying his cotton indefinitely, or else selling it at the price offered by spinners or by a few large operators, or a combination of the same, whose business it will be to speculate upon the producers' necessities.

Will Destroy Exchanges.

"Furthermore, the provision in the amendment limiting the tax and penalty to future contracts made on or under the rules of any cotton exchange or similar institution, will not only destroy the contract exchanges of New Orleans and New York, but will destroy all the local exchanges throughout the cotton belt, because no man will hold membership in an institution when such fact subjects his private contracts to an excessive tax and renders him liable to a penalty from $1,000 to $20,000 for conducting his business in accordance with the rules and regulations established by such exchanges for the protection and benefit of the trade.

"If all these exchanges were put out of business there would be no points for the collection and dissemination of information as to conditions, and the producer would be wholly in the dark as to the value of his cotton, and would be at the mercy of the buyer whose superior private facilities put him into possession of such information. Moreover, if there were no exchanges or similar organizations there could be no rules or standards of trade regulating and restraining individual conduct in business, which would result in disorderly conditions most prejudicial to all concerned.

Can Not Afford Experiments.

"In other words, the said tax amendment would not only destroy the futures markets of America, but also would disorganize the whole system by which our crops are moved, and place us in the hands of foreign organizations and local combinations of buyers.

"It is reported that in supporting said amendment, some Senators take the position that while they doubt the wisdom of the measure, or are of the positive opinion that it is unwise and will be injurious, still, as the farmers want it, they say, let them have it and take the consequences.

"We can not afford to experiment with such a vital matter. I am not connected with any exchange in an official capacity and I have no interest in any future business. You know that I have given much time and effort to the betterment of the producers' condition and to improvement in all legitimate trade. I think you will believe in the sincerity of my purpose. I say to you earnestly that in my opinion this measure is fraught with the most serious consequences to the interests you represent and with no intention of being officious, but animated only by a sincere desire to cooperate with you in your work for the Southern farmer, I beg you to give this vital matter your most serious consideration before using the power of your great organization to advance so dangerous a measure and before you accept responsibility therefor."

Bill Allows State To Cross-Examine

A decided change in the criminal law, making it possible for the defendant to testify under oath and thus be subject to cross-examination, is contained in a bill filed in the House by Representative Whitaker.

The bill allows the prisoner to testify under oath or not under oath, as he sees fit. But his testimony under oath will make him subject to the fire of the prosecuting attorneys through cross-examination.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

The acoustics of the hall of the House of Representatives of Georgia probably are the worst in the world.

Physically, the hall is one of the most beautiful, dignified and stately in the Union. It is a hall, so far as that is concerned, the State well may be proud of.

It is all but impossible to speak in it though, so miserably deficient is it in acoustic properties. So far this session two men only have been able to overcome its baffling and depressing difficulties—Speaker Burwell and Representative Olive.

By working like a Trojan and exhausting a good lung full of atmosphere on every sentence or so, Burwell makes himself clear—then, too, he generally has the attention of the House to a reasonable degree.

Wednesday, Sam Olive of Richmond, went up against those honorable acoustics, and while he knocked them out, good and proper, he had a mighty struggle getting away with it, and when he had finished, his alabaster brow—which runs pretty far back, by the way—was bathed in honest sweat, and his lung equipment was much the worse for wear.

Olive really is a corking good orator. He enunciates distinctly and speaks with deliberation and carefully distributed emphasis. He evidently knows the rules of good speaking and if he makes many more speeches such as the one he delivered Wednesday he is sure to be known throughout this session as one of the genuinely effective floor leaders.

There is no question of Olive's ability to talk eloquently and convincingly.

Mr. Slater of Bryan trotted out that ancient and well-known legislative standby, Old Man Vox Populi and gave him his first legislative airing Wednesday.

Mr. Slater was making an impassioned plea for the ousting of Representatives McArthur and Browning—more in sorrow than in anger, however—and during the progress of the debate, Old Man Vox got in the game.

A broad smile flitted through the House when Old Man Vox made his first appearance, but as he is an ancient and approved friend, he got the glad hand on all side.

From this time forward he may be expected to make his appearance every day or so.

Speaker Burwell is a stickler for forms and ceremonies in legislative debate. Already he has demonstrated a wonderful ability to handle the House, no matter how acute the parliamentary situation it may get itself into.

Burwell, however, insists that every member toe the mark in observing the rules, not only as to procedure but as to courtesy.

One member Thursday entered an oral objection to a certain proposal, but he entered it without arising from his seat. Burwell, as he is required to do, ignored the honorable gentleman's objection thus entered, but stated immediately afterward that the rules required members to arise and address the Speaker when desiring to speak, no matter when, why or how, and that he would not recognize any gentleman so long as that gentleman remained seated.

Since then, members desiring to address the House have first taken the pains to arise and address the Speaker. And that is exactly what the rules requires of them.

Charles S. Barrett, President of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Assistant Commission of Agriculture, will address by invitation the people of Bowl's Springs, in Fannin County, July 19. Both will confine themselves to agricultural topics.

Representative W. J. Nunnally of Floyd, a new member of the House, was highly honored by Speaker Burwell in committee distribution. He was named on the rules, general judiciary and constitutional amendments. Although he is a new member of the House, Representative Nunnally is well known through the State, having been Solicitor General of the Rome Circuit and Judge of the City Court of Rome.

Already he has grown to be one of the most popular members of the General Assembly.

It doubtless is true that the grand old county of Montgomery wishes folks would quick kicking its dog around! The last Legislature whacked it in two and created the new county of Wheeler, and now an honorable Legislator wishes to chop off some more of grand old Montgomery's territory to set up the noble young county of Treutelin.

After a bit, as one legislator put it, "there will not be so much as a greasy spot of grand old Montgomery left!"

Among the many charter changes in Georgia cities already proposed in the Legislature, the one of Waycross is the most novel and interesting.

There it is proposed to merge the county and city governments into one body.

The plan is to establish city and county tax zones, the city's taxes going into city improvements. A county council, acting with a similar body from the city, both under the direction of an elective head, is proposed, with the employment of a general superintendent who shall have direct charge of the work and be responsible for the execution of all orders of the joint board.

This change, it is argued, will cut down the administrative expenses and promote harmony throughout, besides giving better results than are obtained under separate administrations.

Athletic Events at Gainesville on 4th

GAINESVILLE, July 5.—Gainesville will celebrate the Fourth of July with a "safe and sane" athletic meet at Brenau Park.

Coach Frank Anderson, of Riverside, will have charge of the sports. Prizes have been offered by merchants. The Woodmen of the World band will furnish music and the Chamber of Commerce will serve free lemonade.

There will be a game of baseball between two picked teams—the Fats and the Leans. Such men as Fletcher M. Johnson and Sheriff W. M. Crow will play.

Fifth District Asks Agriculture School

An agricultural school for the Fifth District is the requirement of a bill introduced in the House by Representatives Smith and Fields of DeKalb County. When the State was redistricted, the Fifth District was left without an agricultural school, and there has been an active movement under way to have the Legislature making an appropriation for one.

Recently the business men and merchants of Decatur held a big rally in behalf of the movement. This was attended by several thousand farmers of the Fifth District.

Three Octogenarians To Vote at Columbus

COLUMBUS, July 3.—Among those registered for the Columbus hospital bond election of July 16 are three octogenarians. They are A. Illges, 83 years; A. O. Blackmar, Sr., 82 years, and W. H. Glaze, 81 years of age.

The two former are among the wealthiest men in the city, and notwithstanding their advanced age and the fact that their property would be taxed, they will vote for the bonds.

It Costs $450 to Kiss A Niece of Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The price of a kiss in the Government service is $450, as Frank D. Hester, an $1,800 a year section chief of the Pension Bureau, found out to-day when he kissed a temporary girl good-bye.

Someone saw the kissing and told Pension Commissioner Saltzgarber, who promptly suspended the offending chief for three months without pay.

As the kissee left the service today with the rest of the temporary clerks, she was not fined or suspended. In fact, there is reason to believe that the Commissioner thought she was more kissed against than kissing.

Lender Is Enjoined From Garnishment

Judge J. T. Pendleton, of the Superior Court, Wednesday afternoon granted H. S. Jones and G. R. Sayre a temporary injunction restraining D. H. Tolman, named as a money lender, from garnisheeing the wages of Jones, who is employed at the Atlanta Joint Terminals.

Superintendent G. N. Williams informed Jones that if his wages were attached he would be discharged. Sayre acted as security for Jones. The claim is made that the men are day laborers and that their wages are not subject to attachment. The case is set for hearing July 12.

CHILD LABOR BILL IS OPPOSED BY REFORMERS

Lack of Educational Clause Makes Proposed Law Objectionable to National Association.

A fight, under the leadership of Harvey P. Vaughn, of New York, representative of the National Child Labor Association, will be made against the adoption of the Sheppard child labor bill when it is taken up by the Labor and Labor Statistics Committee of the House. Assisting him will be Mrs. Margaret T. McWhorter, of Atlanta.

Objection to the Sheppard bill lies in the fact that it does not include an educational clause. The association has as a goal the adoption of a law which will prevent the employment of children under 14 years of age while the public schools are in session in the district in which the child resides.

Mr. Vaughn and Mrs. McWhorter will address the Labor and Labor Statistics Committee when the Sheppard bill is taken up, and will endeavor to substitute a bill with an educational clause inserted. Failure to do so with the committee will result in its being filed in the House.

At the same time in which the Sheppard bill was introduced in the House a similar bill was introduced in the Senate by Senator J. Randolph Anderson and Senator Fred Kea. The bill was thought to be scheduled for smooth sailing.

"It is the object of the National Child Labor Association and its sympathizers to give every child the inherent right of an education, and the fight for this will never cease until such laws are enforced, said Mrs. McWhorter.

Coburn Is 'Scolded' By Adjutant General

Characterizing as an "unfortunate, thoughtless and uncalled-for expression" the recent statement by Lieutenant William S. Coburn that fifteen officers of the Fifth Regiment, Georgia National Guard, would resign if the State Legislature amended the military act of 1912, Adjutant General J. VanHolt Nash has directed a letter to Colonel E. E. Pomeroy, of the Fifth, in which he takes Lieutenant Coburn sharply to task.

In his letter to Colonel Pomeroy, which it is understood has the indorsement of the latter, General Nash deplores such expressions coming from members of the National Guard, and advises Colonel Pomeroy to caution his officers against a recurrence of the affair.

Athens Bank Case To Jury Thursday

ATHENS, GA., July 3.—The case against J. W. Griffin for "wrecking" the Athens Bank and Trust Company will go to the jury for verdict this afternoon, after a hard-fought legal battle. The State put up a number of witnesses, while the defense relied on the statement of President Griffin. There will probably be a verdict to-night.

R. H. McCrary, who pleaded guilty in his case as cashier and who was given three years under the consideration of turning state's evidence, was not put on the stand.

Child Injured, Mother Would Give It Away

KENOSHA, WIS., July 3.—"I wish you would give him away to some one; we don't want him any more."

This statement was made by Mrs. Charles Pirosch to James H. Karnes, humane officer, as she stood beside a cot in the hospital where her little son lay suffering from serious burns received at a pre-Fourth of July celebration. The child may die.

Music Contest First At High School Meet

ATHENS, GA., July 3.—The first contest in the State High School meet being held here to-day and to-morrow takes place this afternoon when the Brenau scholarship in music will be awarded.

The woman suffrage question will be debated in the chapel of the University of Georgia to-night, and to-morrow there will be athletic events and oratory contest.

Big Apartment House Falls When Finished

CHICAGO, July 3.—A 42-apartment building, which was to be completed next week, collapsed here. A strip of steel girders 25 feet wide running the entire length of the building fell through to the ground. No one was hurt.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Talking Movies at the Grand.

Edison talking pictures have won! The skeptical who argued that such an entertainment would be nothing but the projection of a motion picture on a sheet and the operation of a phonograph behind stage have discovered that Mr. Edison has perfected machines and instruments that synchronize.

The attendance at the Grand on Monday was decidedly discouraging. On Tuesday more than double the number of people were present that were in the house on Monday, and on Wednesday the theater was nearly filled. There is every indication that the wonder of this invention will keep the big theater more than busy the balance of the week.

Starting with to-day there will be a change of program in the talking pictures that will be continued the rest of the week. The first-run straight pictures are changed every day, and three reels are used.

Violinsky Pleases Forsyth Audiences.

Keith vaudeville at the Forsyth has never been so popular as now. The bill this week is of exceptional value. There is that variety that makes things interesting, and there is novelty enough to make people forget the hot spell. The Forsyth is perhaps the coolest place in Fulton County now. The ventilating system and the cooling plant work perfectly, and every audience enjoys what is being offered on the stage in perfect comfort.

Violinsky, an expert with both violin and piano, has interested and entertained every audience that has assembled. The sketch of Edward Abeles has been voted to be the very best of this sort seen in Atlanta, and Carlisle's dog pantomime circus starts the show with the audiences in a particularly good humor.

Good Tabloid at the Bijou.

Few attractions that have played the Bijou this season have given such general satisfaction as "A Trip to Paris," this week's bill. The musical comedy is brimful of pretty music, good dancing and clever specialties, and the entire performance moves along smoothly and without a hitch.

MRS. FELTON TO SPEAK HERE AS SUFFRAGIST

Vote Advocates Eagerly Awaiting Appearance of Noted Woman. Convention Next Week.

Mrs. William A. Felton, of Cartersville, one of Georgia's most noted women, will make her first public appearance as a suffragist in Atlanta next week, at the annual convention of the Georgia Equal Suffrage Association. The convention will be held July 9 and 10. Mrs. Felton will speak before one of the three sessions on "Getting Ready for the Ballot."

Atlanta suffragists are manifesting great interest in Mrs. Felton's address. She has been an active suffragist for only a few months and her acquisition to the ranks is regarded as of great importance to the movement in Georgia.

Other speakers at the convention will include Mrs. S. E. Cunningham, of Decatur, formerly president of the Alabama Equal Suffrage Association, and Mrs. H. Augusta Howard, of Columbus, who organized the Georgia State Association and was its president for six years.

Many to Attend.

Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, State president, said Wednesday afternoon that more than 100 suffragists from all over the State are expected to attend the convention. Only one day session will be held on the afternoon of July 10 at the Labor Temple, in Trinity Avenue. Efforts are being made to secure the Senate chamber in the State Capitol for the evening meetings.

Legislation now pending before the General Assembly was indorsed at the regular meeting of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association Wednesday afternoon. Included among these measures were the vital statistics bill, compulsory education, medical inspection in schools, county probation and pensions for women school teachers who have taught for more than 30 years.

Dr. L. C. Allen, of Jefferson, Ga., chairman of the House Committee on Hygiene, addressed the meeting on the need of medical inspection in the schools, declaring a permissive law is a necessity. He expressed the opinion that the State is not ready for a compulsory inspection law, but predicted that the time will come when every State in the Union will have compulsory medical inspection laws. Dr. Allen declared medical inspection should not stop at the school children, but should include teachers and janitors and other persons who work about the schools and come in contact with school children.

Representative C. R. McCrory, of Schley, spoke on his bill, which proposes that the State shall publish its own textbooks for the public schools. Judge Robert L. Rodgers addressed the meeting on the benefits of equal suffrage.

Report To Be Made On Standard Bale

The report of the committee on standardization of the cotton bale will come before the House Thursday. The committee was appointed last year and has gone deeply into the subject which is of considerable importance to financial, farming and manufacturing interests.

Of the Senate and House members put on the commission, the only one to return to this year's Assembly is Representative Kimbrough, of Haris County, who will deliver the report.

Former Newnan Man Dies in Mississippi

NATCHEZ, MISS., July 3.—Henry C. Norman, member of a prominent Georgia family and for many years a prominent resident of Natchez, died to-day, after an illness of three months of hardening of the arteries. He was born in Newnan, Ga., October 22, 1850.

The funeral and burial will take place here to-morrow.

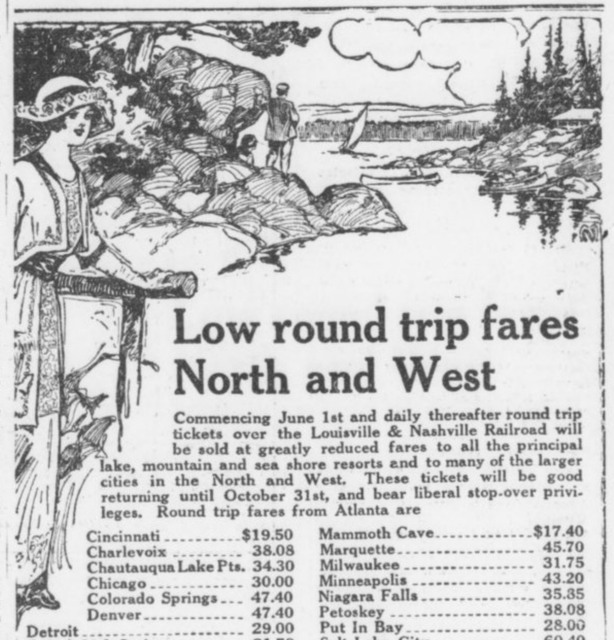

Job Needed to Free Young Ollie Taylor

Ollie Taylor, the 13-year-old lad who was granted a parole Wednesday from the Fulton County Reformatory, where he has been confined two years on the charge of stealing a soda pop, is to be an automobile mechanic—that is, if he can land a job.

And until Ollie does land the job he will remain at the reformatory, according to Superintendent Means. Mr. Means says Ollie has shown wonderful improvement since he has been at the reform school and has developed a knack for mechanics which should be very productive when Ollie has applied himself sufficiently long.

$1,500,000.00 in Dividends Paid in Atlanta

Monday, July 1, 1913

This enormous amount of money disbursed by banks, savings societies and other financial institutions represents the regular semi-annual interest due on savings accounts, loans, stocks, etc.

How Much Did You Get?

And what will you do with your share? Reflect a bit. Can you think of a better, a safer place to put it than in this strong old bank?

We'll safeguard your interests at all times with the modern means at our command. You, as a depositor with us, shall receive the sound advice and courteous assistance of our officers in all your financial transactions, large or small.

It shall be our constant endeavor to help you grow financially, as we have helped and are daily helping others, so that in January, 1914, when the next semi-annual interest is paid, your share will far exceed your expectations.

If you are one who did not share in the disbursement of this $1,500,000.00, we advise you to start a savings account with this sound old bank to-day, and to add to it at regular intervals so that next January you, too, will have a share with the others.

MISS JESSIE (at left) and MISS ELEANOR WILSON.

Marriage of President's Daughter to Francis Bowes Sayre Announced for November.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The first wedding of a Georgia girl in the White House will be that of Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of the President, to Frances Bowes Sayre, a New York attorney in the office of District Attorney Whitman. Miss Wilson, a native Georgian, was born in Gainesville 24 years ago.

President and Mrs. Wilson made formal announcement of the coming marriage last night at the White House. The wedding will be some time in November. While Washington society gasped at the sudden announcement, it recovered quickly, and everything now is all a-flutter over the pre-nuptial honors to be showered upon the President's daughter.

Called Prettiest of Sisters.

Miss Jessie Wilson has been declared by many persons to be the prettiest of the three Wilson sisters.

Much curiosity wag expressed regarding the groom. He has been connected with District Attorney Whitman in New York, during which time he has won the esteem of the noted lawyer. He is 28 years of age, and will be admitted to the bar this month, when he will be placed on the list of assisting prosecuting attorneys.

He comes from a noted collegiate family, his father, the late Robert Heysham Sayre, being president of the board of trustees of Lehigh University. He was also a prominent railroad man, and built the Lehigh Valley Railroad. His mother was Martha Finley Nevin prior to her marriage. She was the daughter of John Williamson Nevin, theologian and president of Franklin and Marshall College, of Lancaster, Pa., and was descended from Hugh Williamson, of North Carolina, one of the framers of the constitution.

He is related to Robert J. Nevin, head of the American Church of Rome, Italy, and a cousin of Ethelbert Nevin, the noted composer.

Pura The Perfect Water Pura

Few people give the matter of drinking water the serious consideration which it deserves.

Physicians agree that many malignant maladies are communicated to the system directly through the drinking water---typhoid fever being one of them.

All raw water contains dangerous germs; filtering and boiling do not remove them.

The only method by which water is rendered absolutely pure and germless is distillation.

Pura Water is distilled by improved, scientific methods. It is the PERFECT drinking water.

HOBBLES WRECK NERVES, SAYS DR. M'RAE

Noted Atlanta Physician Calls Tight Skirts an Abomination. 'Insanitary and Immodest.'

Women who wear the extremely tight skirt decreed by modern fashion are treading the road that leads to nervous prostration, according to Dr. Floyd McRae, one of Atlanta's most noted physicians. In this opinion Dr. McRae takes direct issue with prominent members of the Chicago Medical Society, who recently declared the tight skirt hygienic, artistic and comfortable.

"Women who wear the tight skirt—that is, one so tight it does not allow perfect freedom of the lower limbs," said Dr. McRae Tuesday morning, "are constantly under a strain which eventually will bring about nervous prostration. This condition is due to the fact that the muscles are cramped and do not get that perfect freedom which is necessary in walking. Some muscles are overdeveloped and others are not developed sufficiently to do their share of the work of walking.

"The tight skirt has not been in vogue long enough for the effects of this to show in the women as a whole, but if it is not abandoned the time undoubtedly will come when women virtually will be nervous wrecks.

Hobbles an Abomination.

"The tight skirt is an abomination, and one of the worst things women have taken to in years. It is immodest and unhygienic, and it is a source of continual danger to the wearer. With their freedom of movement restricted, they face danger every time they appear on the streets in a tight skirt.

"A woman wearing a tight skirt is in danger of spraining her ankle every time she gets on a street car or in an automobile, and many of the minor accidents sustained by women nowadays are due to the tight skirt and the restricted, hobbling walk which it necessitates."

Dr. McRae declared the old style of wide, flowing skirt which touched the ground was as bad as the modern skirt.

Old Styles as Bad.

"The kind of skirt that every woman should wear," he said, "should be wide enough to permit of perfect freedom in walking, and it should not touch the ground at any point. The old style skirts, plaited and flowing, picked up enormous quantities of germs in the streets and carried them into the home, which the sensible skirt would not do."

The opinion that the tight skirt is hygienic and the right thing for women was expressed by 25 doctors in Chicago, among them Drs. Maurice B. Wolff, Norman Curry and Arthur B. Reynolds. They declared the tight skirt is a splendid thing, and that, among other things, it corrects the tendency of the American woman to turn her toes out when walking.

12 Billion Postage Stamps Ordered

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Postmaster General Burleson has ordered 12,071,480,000 postage stamps for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Men Should Marry At 32, Women at 22, Declare Parisians

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, July 3.—The modern French attitude toward marriage will be shown in the results of a canvass conducted by a popular French journal for women.

The first question—"At what age should a young man marry?"—gave an average of 32 years from about 12,000 answers. The second question—"At what age should a young woman marry?"—gave an average of 22 years. To the third question—"What should be the difference in the ages between husband and wife?"—the majority answered five years.

Three hundred and seventy-five women declared that people should not marry at all.

Lillian Russell Wed; Mary Garden, Too

CHICAGO, July 3.—Municipal Judge Hopkins, sitting in the Morals Court, paid for the marriage license of Paul Corallo and Miss Lillian Russell, 28 years old, 1134 West Monroe Street, when they were arraigned before him. He performed a marriage ceremony and gave the bridegroom a present of $5.

According to the marriage license clerk, Mary Garden was also among the brides of yesterday, wedding one Atoni Kral. Mary is not an opera singer.

Cavalieri Principal In D'Annunzio Opera

PARIS, July 3.—Gabriels d'Annunzio, the librettist, and Riocardo Zandonai, the composer of the opera "Francesca da Rimini," will go to Boston to superintend its first production in February next which will take place before it is presented in Europe.

Henry Russell, director of the Boston Opera Company, completed arrangements to-day with Lina Cavalieri to take the principal part.

Women in Trousers Handicapped in Love

NEW YORK, July 3.—Miss Sharlee V. Wilmarth, who has returned from Paris on the Minnetonka, believes it is impossible for a woman to make love in trousers.

"I wouldn't wear 'em for a fortune," she said, "unless they were knickerbockers, and I wore a skirt just as well. Just imagine a man spooning with a girl wearing trousers."

Roosevelt Scored As Drinker By W. C. T. U.

CARDON, OHIO, July 3.—The W. C. T. U. of Middlefield, Ohio, has adopted resolutions denouncing Colonel Roosevelt as a temperance man, asserting that his libel suit proved him an habitual drinker, though a moderate one and that as such and because of his prominent position he is more harm to the temperance cause than a common drunkard.

MARQUIS' BALM TO CHORUS GIRL $250,000

English Nobleman Settles Beauty's Breach of Promise Suit Out of Court.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 3.—Damages of a quarter of a million dollars were awarded to Miss Violette Moss, a chorus girl, in her breach of promise suit against the Marquis of Northampton, who came into his title two weeks ago.

When the suit was called before the King's Bench, attorneys notified the court that a settlement had been reached by which Miss Moss was to receive $250,000. The action was withdrawn and the costs were put upon the defendant.

Miss Moss, whose stage name is Daisy Markham, set a high price upon her affections. She spurned two previous offers of settlement, one of $50,000 and the other $125,000.

The elder Marquis of Northampton, who tried vainly to break his son's love for the actress, died a fortnight ago in Italy of a broken heart. It was reliably reported that the young marquis had revealed intimate family secrets to Miss Moss and that she threatened to expose these to the public unless amply paid for silence.

In anticipation of hearing racy testimony the courtroom was thronged to-day when the case was called. The spectators were sorely disappointed when the settlement was announced.

THE GHOST BREAKER

By G. W. GODDARD and PAUL DICKEY

Adapted From the Big Broadway Success That Thrilled Thousands of New Yorkers

SERIALIZED

By J. W. McCONAUGHY

(Copyright, 1913, by Star Co.)

IN all the thousands of square feet of steep slate roof there is one loose nail. It thrusts its head up in that one-inch strip where it can catch and hold the bootheel of the steeplejack who is sliding to his death.

This grim, freakish humor of the Powers That Be, which is miscalled "coincidence," caused Warren Jarvis to mistake his right for his left hand as he was running for his life down a carpeted corridor of the Hotel Vanderlip far above the night roar of Broadway. Thus he turned, not into the room that led to the fire escape, but into the bed chamber of the Dona Maria Theresa of Segura, Princess of Aragon, who had a lot of other titles and innumerable privileges, none of which she needed at that moment nearly so much as she needed Warren Jarvis, fleeing the vengeance of the law.

Fevered and distraught the Princess had retired to rest, but not to sleep, an hour before. Her situation, the peril that menaced her, belonged to an age that lives to-day only in Scott and Froissart. Four or five centuries before her countryman Cervantes had slain with a laugh the type of man who would gladly have aided her, and would have seen nothing ridiculous about it. Her ancestral home, the ancient castle of the Seguras, was given over to bats and owls by night and crows by day.

Hidden somewhere among the deadly pitfalls and secret passages of the castle was a treasure of a million dollars in gold. It was guarded by a ghost, a true specter that men had scoffed at and braved—and then had promptly disappeared.

Now it was no longer scoffed at or braved. But she had just received a cable dispatch telling her that her brother had entered the castle and around her neck hung the solution to the hiding place of the treasure, the little chart found that day after a weary search.

A Duke's Offer.

It was a tale to tell a knight of Arthur's table, not to a Castilian dandy of the twentieth century, soft-handed and sophisticated. Her kinsman, the Duke of Alva, indeed, had offered to be her champion, but he bargained in advance, and the guerdon he asked was her hand. And, besides, lately she had had cause to distrust deeply the honor and honesty of her kinsman of Alva.

Dona Maria had never read the lines of Mr. Kipling's "Romance Is Dead!"—and all unseen, romance brought on the nine-fifteen, or she might have had more faith in a power still strong enough to run express trains. When the splendid, silly order of chivalry fell and died the winds of romance carried a few of the seeds across the seas to a broad and fertile valley and dropped them in the rich soil where the Ohio comes down to meet the Mississippi. There, as elsewhere, custom makes law, regardless of written statutes. And so it was that, following a custom that had grown from one of those seeds, as immutable as the Cumberland ridges, a young man in evening clothes, clean of heart, brave and good humored, with a 1912 model pistol gripped in his overcoat pocket, walked past Dona Maria's door in a New York hotel, seeking the head of the Markhams, to kill or be killed in a fair fight, for no other reason than that the man he sought was the head of the Markhams and had invited him to "shoot it out."

But Dona Maria did not know this. As simply as the distressed damosel of Arthur's time she prayed for help, and was sinking into the uncertain doze of the sorely troubled—when romance answered the prayer.

The silence of the cloistral corridor was blasted with a sharp double-crack—the reports of two pistols coming as closely together as you might snap the third and fourth fingers of your hand.

Dona Maria sat up with a start.

"Madre de Dios!" came a self-strangled scream from the maid's room. "What is it?"

There followed instantly a soft thudding of running feet and a hand violently shook her door. The Princess sprang up with a frightened cry, flung a dressing gown about her and switched on an alcove light. The brass slot in the door frame leaped out, a young man darted inside, closed and bolted the door, and stood crouched against it, panting. A pistol was clutched in his hand and a red trickle ran down and dripped off the barrel on to the red carpet.

The Hunt.

"Madre de Dios!" shrieked the maid again.

"Sh-h!" commanded the young man at the door in a stern whisper. "Keep quiet—don't make any noise!"

The first shock of the alarm past, the Princess stepped out into the dim light from the alcove, holding the dressing gown closely about her. She was a true daughter of romance, hot-blooded and courageous, with no more "nerves" than the mountains that guarded her castle home.

"What do you want?" she demanded, advancing upon the intruder.

For reply he waggled the pistol impatiently and pressed his ear more closely to the door. A confused sound of voices and a mighty running to and fro came from the hall.

"What's the baily row?"

"I heard him—he ran past my door!"

"Anybody killed?"

"What the ——'s loose now?"

"It was two shots—I heard 'em."

The coolness with which he ignored her presence and perfectly natural inquiries as to the cause of the intrusion banished what little trace of alarm was in the Princess' bosom and left only indignation.

"How dare you enter"——

"Sh—silence!" he interrupted, so sharply that she obeyed through sheer amazement. "Not a sound! Do you understand?"

Dona Maria opened her lips to blast him, to summon aid, but the hubbub without broke out anew and she listened. The steps and voices were passing the door.

"It was a pistol, I tell you."

"Well, where'd he go?"

"Look out on the fire escape, Jim!"

"No, he's on this floor."

"How could he get downstairs, you dunce!"

The hue and cry reached down the hall and the Princess swept down upon Mr. Jarvis, who finally straightened up and faced her.

A Man's Appeal.

"Now, what does this mean?" she demanded, grimly, in a swift glance taking account of the evening clothes and the trim, well set-up figure of the man who had wrenched the lock of a door out of its frame. But, though she was brave, she also took account of the pistol.

"Is it money you want?" she demanded, with a curl of her lip. She drew back against the bed. "Every cent I have is on the dressing table. Take it and go!"

The young man pushed his hat back and mopped his brow with the back of his hand.

"No—no!" he protested, raising his voice a little. "I'm not a burglar—I don't want your money."

She noticed that he was panting hard and was very much more agitated than she was. Even the pistol lost its terror.

"Well, then—what do you want?" she cried.

He was about to reply when the sound of the returning hunt reached his ears.

"Wait—wait!" he begged, swiftly. "They're coming here! They must not search this room—do you understand? You must put them off! For pity's sake," he pleaded, "you must put them off! I'm not what you think I am—I haven't done anything wrong—I'll explain afterward!" And he slipped behind the curtain of the alcove as there came an authoritative knock at the door and the maid ran into the room, crying "Madame, something dreadful has happened!"

Dona Maria silenced her. Her eyes were on the door, and she was thinking rapidly. According to those deeply versed in human affairs the truth has no particular accent of its own. But Dona Maria was not deeply versed in these matters—and she was a woman, with a woman's swift, subconscious reasoning. He had told the truth—he was a gentleman—he was hunted and in sore need of a friend, and so was she. A man would have considered only the fact of the shots, the pistol and the flight, and left it to a jury of men, a man-judge and man's law to sift out the rights of the case.

Bang—bang! A more violent assault on the door.

"Anybody in here?" demanded a deep voice. "Open the door!"

A Woman's Way.

The maid shivered, implored the Virgin to look out for her and turned a fearful questioning gaze on her mistress.

"Open it, Nita," was the quiet command. The maid moved gingerly up to the door and Dona Maria took a last quick glance at the curtains that hid the young man who fought with a pistol in a Broadway hotel, broke locks with his hands and had thrown himself on her mercy.

Nita opened the door part way and the house detective, a short, squat man about three feet thick, thrust himself in.

"You all right here?" he asked curtly.

"Si, senor," lisped Nita, timidly. The Princess came forward.

"What is it, Nita?" she asked with becoming dignity. The maid drew aside.

"My mistress," she bowed.

The detective half bowed. "Excuse me, madam," he said, with a slight abatement of his brusqueness. "I'm the house detective. You all right in here?"

For a bare instant Dona Maria hesitated. Then:

"Yes," she said.

"Sorry to bother you—looking for some one," apologized the detective, backing out. "Good night."

"Oh, madame," wailed the girl, after he had gone. "I am so frightened! What is it?—what is it?"

"Control yourself, Nita," the mistress reproved her. "Go to bed. I shall not need you until 6 o'clock."

Sniffling, but subdued, Nita returned to her bedroom and shut herself in. Jarvis emerged from the shelter of the alcove.

"Thank you," he said simply. "Would you mind bolting that door again?" The Princess stared at him, paralyzed by his assurance. With magnificent impudence, so it seemed to her, he did not understand why she did not obey. "He might return," he reminded her. And, undecided whether to laugh, cry or turn him over to the house detective, Princess Dona Maria of Aragon went and bolted the door.

As she turned back to him he pointed with his pistol to the door of the maid's room.

No Way Out.

"Is there no way out throught that door?" he asked.

She told him there was not.

"The fire escape—where is it?"

"In the hall opposite," replied Dona Maria, gazing at him in wonder and perplexity. She knew nothing about him, except that he was, unless appearances were very deceiving, a fugitive from justice. Yet he took it for granted that she was his ally. She was under 30 and considered one of the most beautiful women in Spain. Her kinsman of Alva, who had a discriminating taste in such matters, had made her beauty famous in five capitals, and those of his sex who had been fortunate enough to glimpse her, by accident, in the warmly colored and clinging gown of the boudoir that betrayed every exquisite line, declared that those who had seen Dona Maria only in the ballroom and at the dinner table would have to wait for the houris of Paradise to form some idea of her true loveliness. Yet she was certain that this young man could not have told at that moment if she had cross eyes and a hair lip. Indeed, if there had been any doubt about it his next utterance would have removed it.

"Across the hall? H——l!" he exclaimed, with energy. "I was certain that light was—oh, I beg pardon," he broke off suddenly, and was so boyishly embarrassed and contrite that Dona Maria was certain he had at last noticed the absence of the hair lip. But this did not mean forgiveness.

"Well, why don't you go?" she inquired, coldly.

His confusion increased. "But—but I can't go that way," he protested, waving the pistol hopelessly at the hall door. "They're waiting for me in the hall!"

"Well," the Princess gazed at him with an unusual iciness in her great dark eyes, "what do you expect me to do about it?"

Now this was a tactical blunder, for it summoned the young man's sense of the ridiculous to his aid—and he smiled. If he were not the hero of this narrative it would be a truthful recorder's duty to set down that he grinned. Dona Maria was piqued, but felt herself warm to a man who could smile—or grin—when a house full of police were looking for him. And then came the romantic thought that this was the type of man to be her champion. She surveyed him swiftly, but accurately.

The brass slot in the door frame leaped out, a young man darted inside, closed and bolted the door, and stood crouched against it, panting. A pistol was clutched in his hand and a red trickle ran down and dripped off the barrel on to the red carpet.

A Modern Hero.

He was not the stuff that dream heroes are made of—at least not to look at, if his build were excepted. He was tall, with broad, slender shoulders and a certain lightness of step and frictionless ease of movement that explained the collapse of the brass lock. But his rumpled hair—he had just at that moment removed his opera hat and was nervously tapping his thigh with it—was a nondescript, plebeian sandy shade, and his good-humored face seemed to have borrowed some of the pigment of the hair. The nose was straight but generously flecked with freckles about the bridge. The mouth was liberally designed, and when he smiled—or grinned—showed rows of strong, white teeth. The eyes were of a kind of sandy gray, and, like Alan Breck's, had a sort of dancing madness in them.

It was a head that would have thrown a Gibson into convulsions, but a Holbein would have clapped a steel cap on it and made it immortal.

Dona Maria noted all of this, but took open note only of the smile—or grin.

"Is the situation so amusing?" she inquired, with increasing wintriness of one and look.

He made a quick gesture of apology and was instantly serious.

"I'm not laughing at you—I beg your pardon. I blundered in here by mistake—but I'm in a tight place. I can't leave by that door. I must find some other way."

He threw open his overcoat as he spoke and she saw the blood on his hand. This was the last needed touch. She was a woman.

"You're wounded!" she exclaimed, going to him and looking at the hand solicitously. "What's happened? Those shots I heard—"

He nodded and laughed silently. "I almost stopped one of the bullets. It just nudged me as it was going by."

"Your hand is bleeding dreadfully."

"Oh, not much," he assured her, and tried awkwardly to tie the wrist with his handkerchief, still holding the revolver. The Princess half raised her hands to assist him and drew back. He did not notice. He was gazing about the room with a troubled frown.

"I don't see how the devil——" he muttered, more to himself than to her, evidently trying to devise some means of escape. Dona Maria drew a little farther away.

"You have evidently shot some one and are trying to make me shield you from justice," she said sternly.

"No, not justnce," he rejoined instantly, "from the law."

"I thought they were the same."

He shook his head gravely. "No, not always. There would be no justice for me at the hands of the law."

He looked into her eyes as he spoke, and for a few moments they stood thus in silence. The woman's eyes turned away first.

"That is not for me to decide," she declared.

"But I want you to decide," he urged gently. "At least, you must listen. And if you find me guilty I'll—well, I'll try the fire escape or anything—anything else you say."

The Princess raised her eyes to his and found them so full of earnest pleading that she dropped them once more.

"That is ridiculous," she said, but with such marked lack of conviction that he smiled.

"Hardly ridiculous," he objected: "when I'm arguing for my life."

Having fully made up her mind to listen, Dona Maria found another objection. Her eyes rested on the revolver.

"Can any decision be more unjust than mine," she asked coldly, "that must be made at the point of a pistol?"

He started, and flushed, and gazed down at his right hand. He had forgotten that he was still holding the revolver. Then he walked over to the dressing table and placed it within easy reach of her hand, and stood off some little distance, so that she was between him and the weapon.

"There is nothing to prevent your calling for help now," he said, hopelessly. "After all, it doesn't much matter whether the end comes now or to-morrow or the day after."

The Princess eyed him steadily until she was convinced that the despair was not a sham. There was no trace of the disarming smile.

His Explanation.

"The end?" she echoed, somewhat blankly. "Then why didn't you give yourself up?"

"That would have been the end," was the grim reply. Dona Maria's manner softened ever so slightly and she moved very slowly toward him. He correctly interpreted this as encouragement to proceed.

"Do you know what a feud is?" he asked abruptly. Her eyes opened wide and she pointed out in the general direction whence those shots had come.

"Feud!" sh exclaimed in a low voice. "Was that——?"

"Yes," he nodded. "That was the end of a feud. Do you know what a feud is?"

"Spain is the home of feuds," she replied, softly.

Jarvis started and his face lit with hope. "Spain!" he exclaimed. "Are you Spanish? Then you will understand! My grandmother was Spanish—one of the oldest families in Cuba. I was born in Kentucky, but they sent me East to be reared. I was called home suddenly by the death of my father—shot in a feud. They told me the ghastly history of our feud," he went on rapidly, his voice vibrant with emotion, "how our family had been assassinated, man after man, by the descendants of Daniel Markham. Then my father fell, leaving me—the last—to fight it out alone!"

He paused with a gulp and Dona Maria, leaning toward him, asked softly: "And your mother?"

"She has gone, too."

"She—she died?" The question was almost reverent.

"She died. God only knows what I've been through since then!"

He turned away and there was a little silence.

"But," said Dona Maria, as if gently arguing a point with an old friend, "why didn't you leave Kentucky?"

He jerked himself around impatiently.

"I did leave Kentucky—I was forced to leave!" he cried. "I had grown sick at heart and—and the odds were too great. I sent a negro servant to New York and followed soon after by another route; but it was no use. I was going to sail for Europe, longing for peace, but they wouldn't let me. Every move was watched! I had hardly been in New York five hours before I realized that the Markham clan was on my trail, eager to get me before I could get out of the country. They thought I was afraid, when I was only sick of it. A message reached me at my hotel—across the street—at 12 o'clock to-night. It was signed 'Jim Markham'—the head of the family—and proposed that as we were out of Kentucky we end the feud amicably. I knew the name, I knew what he meant, and I went to see him—prepared!"

Her Side of It.

He shrugged his shoulders half in resignation, half in despair.

"It was as I expected. He was stopping in this hotel—on this floor. I threw open the door of the room, unannounced. Nothing was said—we both fired." He looked down at his wounded and, and his dramatic manner vanished.

"Now do you understand why the law would not give me justice?" he asked quietly.

The girl shuddered. "It's all so horrible," she murmured. "Did—did you kill him?"

Jarvis opened his hands and dropped them, limp.

"I don't know," he replied indifferently. "He dropped—I didn't wait."

He looked past, not at, her as he spoke. The lethargy, the mental and physical languor, that succeeds a terrible crisis was upon him—the time when a man feels that he is without strength, without friends, without hope.

The girl sensed the change in him and was surprised to feel a twinge of impatience.

"What are you going to do?" she asked crisply.

Jarvis shrugged his shoulders. "I don't know." The tone was dull and hopeless. "What's the use of going on? Do you know what it means," he went on bitterly, "to fight single-handed against fearful odds—to fight an endless fight alone?"

The girl turned her dark eyes on him with a strange expression.

"Yes," she said, half audibly; "yes, I know."

"A barren, fruitless, hopeless fight—without even a single gleam of love or word of encouragement?"

"Yes," replied Dona Maria, slowly and with meaning, "I know what it means."

Jarvis stared at her. "You know?" he exclaimed, incredulously. "How could you know—how could any woman know?"

"Yes, I know," declared the Princess, somberly. "Because I, too, am fighting against fearful odds."

The young woman gazed at her in wonder that gave way to sympathy and more wonder as her loveliness came upon him.

"There is no man to fight for you?" he asked, betraying his thought in his question. Dona Maria understood.

"No man left who dares," she replied with bitterness.

As his gaze strayed from the soft, deep black eyes to the pile of soft black hair and down the curve of the soft, creamy cheek to the smooth red lips, he wondered, even in the depths of his misery, what manner of men she had about her.

"God!" he breathed, fervently, "if here had only been some woman to fight for in my fight!"

And if he had said all that was in his mind he would have inserted the words, "like you." Dona Maria must have understood that these words were implied, for she said softly:

"It seems as though Providence had thrown you in my path. You say there would be no justice for you at the hands of the law? If you are found here it means your life."

"Yes," he replied and waited curiously for what was to come. Dona Maria appeared to deliberate.

"Suppose I decide to help you," she suggested gravely, "and drive a hard bargain?"

Jarvis was relieved to find that he could smile again. So was Dona Maria, but she did not publish her feelings.

"What do you mean?" he inquired.

"Your life in Kentucky is finished—you can never go back to it."

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Hilbert Tells of Her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.

FLEETWOOD, PA.—"During the Change of Life I was hardly able to be around at all. I always had a headache and I was so dizzy and nervous that I had no rest at night. The flashes of heat were so bad sometimes that I did not know what to do.

"One day a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me a strong well woman. I am very thankful that I followed my friend's advice, and I shall recommend it as long as I live. Before I took the Compound I was always sickly and now I have not had medicine from a doctor for years. You may publish my letter."—MRS. EDWARD B. HILBERT, Fleetwood, Pa.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

BACK TO SIMPLICITY

A Short Story, Complete

"GRACIOUS!" said the girl in the lizard green gown. "You've got your hair pulled back! Why do you do it so plainly?"

"It isn't!" objected the young married woman, ungrammatically. "It's no plainer than yours or any one else—it's just that you've been used to seeing me with all my hair on—puffs, transformations, braid and Billie Burke curls! Oh, I stuck to them long after every one else had gone in for the new plain style, using just one's own hair. But I didn't have enough own hair to make a bit with, and, anyhow, I look better with my hair sort of elaborate. But I'm cured!"

"Who did it?"

"It wasn't a who, it was a what," explained the young married woman. "But I'll teil you, anyway.

"The other day I remembered that I was due at the Splurge wedding that evening, so I shampooned my own hair and washed my own hair once removed in gasoline. Now, if there is anything I dislike, it is to go by a building and think an Indian reservation has broken loose and is exhibiting scalplocks—for that is what I'm always reminded of when I see curls and puffs and things pinned to the lace curtains where they will get the breeze and sun and will lose their gasolmy perfume.

Hidden From View.

"So after my extra adornments were cleansed I pinned them inside the window curtains, where they were hidden from the view of the populace. Then, feeling safe and at peace, I sat on the sun porch and read a book and dried my truly hair. After a while, when it got to be luncheon time, I went to my bedroom for something and casually glanced at the curtains where modestly hung my other hair. Only it didn't hang there. The curtains flapped mockingly, and if you had seen me dive headforemost at that open window you would have been justified in the belief that suicide was the best thing I did.

"Down in the alley below was a lovely sea of mud. They are building on the next lot, and the heavy wagons with brick and cement and things have made a regular morass of the place. Probably my hair was in the mud. As I stared a particularly heavy wagon lumbered and squashed through, shaking off several pounds of brickdust. I shrieked madly for help, and Tilly, the baby's nurse, came running.

"Those luffly puffs!" Tilly wailed and darted forthwith to the alley, while I directed operations from above. Tilly balanced on a brick and surveyed the mud with deep dislike, making little dabs at it tentatively. Finally, in one of the deep ruts she saw a whisp of hair projecting, and some tugging excavated my largest puff, a sodden, sticky lump. A puddle gave up another and she found a third under the imprint of a horse's hoof, but the fourth had vanished. Tilly came upstairs holding her muddy treasure trove at arm's length.

"But where's my transformation?" I shrieked. That cost $15—and as for the braid—well, I might just as well go into bankruptcy if that switch isn't found?"

"Tilly protested that the earth below would not yield up another bit of hair. I began to wonder how I could send regrets to a wedding after I had already accepted, and then Mary called me to luncheon. I was weeping real tears into my soup when Mary burst in and asked permission to go downstairs, which was unusual at a mealtime, of course. I inquired why, but she just waved her arms wildly and disappeared.

"In due time she reappeared breathless and triumphant with a weird-looking thing in one hand. It was my transformation! She said she had scoured the country roundabout with the opera glasses and had seen something hanging on a bridal wreath bush in the Harveys' front yard, three houses down, and it looked like hair to her, and it proved to be hair. She added that Mrs. Harvey on the front porch had seemed greatly interested in the proceedings. Mrs. Harvey has always exclaimed publicly about my 'wealth of beautiful hair,' so I could imagine how pleased she must have been.

A Ring.

"As I finished my strawberries there was a loud ring at the bell, and when Tilly went to the speaking tube I distinctly heard the wretch of a small boy who was in the vestibule two stories below yelling for the edification of the whole building: 'Say, yer switch is a-hanging just below your bedroom window ledge on the telephone wires!'

"Tilly got the switch while I hung on to her heels. Then, very much exhausted, I washed everything again—but somehow I kept smelling gasoline all evening and I distinctly heard a man back of me in the middle of the church say it was remarkable how the automobiles outside seemed to be leaking. It was too much of a strain, so I've abandoned the whole outfit."

"Well, I don't blame you!" said the girl in the lizard green gown.

Freaks of Fashion

Monstrosities From Paris Boulevards

In Paris extremes of costume are seen more frequently than they are here. These three were "snapped" by a foreign correspondent for the Hearst newspapers recently. When our fashion expert was asked to describe them she immediately complained of feeling faint and went home. Therefore any of our women readers who feel "freakish" will have to solve these fashion puzzles for themselves.

Time's Up! Did You Send in a Solution of "The Triple Tie"?

$250 in Cash Prizes for the Best "Final Chapter" of The Georgian's Great Mystery Story

The final chapters of "The Triple Tie" will be printed in The Georgian next Monday, July 7. Readers of "The Triple Tie" had until noon to-day to send in their conception of the conclusion of the story, containing their solution of the mystery in competition for prizes aggregating $250 offered by The Georgian. The problems for the reader to solve were these:

First—How does Kelly escape the mountaineers?

Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?

Third—How did Gordon Kelly, who confessed that he never saw a game of ball and never played a game of ball up to the time he asked Manager Smith of the Atlanta club for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to bat, catch and run bases in the marvelous manner he displayed at Atlanta that caused the Boston club to give the unheard-of price of $50,000 for Gordon Kelly's release?

Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the ninth inning of the final and deciding game?
Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

No contributions will be considered if they are delivered at The Georgian office later than to-day, July 3, noon, or bear a postmark later than that time.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian, will award the prizes.

The prizes for the best solutions are as follows:

First Prize	$100.00
Second Prize	50.00
Third Prize	25.00
Fourth Prize	15.00
Twelve Prizes, each	5.00
Total	$250.00

CUDDLING COTTAGES : A Charming Short Story, Complete

THERE were two red houses in Acraman's road which shouldered each other confidentially and seemed on such manifestly affectionate terms that the notion of their respective inhabitants being anything but bosom friends was simply ridiculous.

The thought struck Dollabella Powney quite forcibly when she bought one of these said houses, and made her more eager than was her wont (she was not curious by nature) to catch a glimpse of her next door neighbor. Oddly enough, it was quite a fortnight after she had moved in before she did so, and then the manner of her "catching" was sadly at variance with her customary traditions of dignity.

Consumed one May evening with a desire to know something of that neighbor's tastes and habits, she rose on an inverted blacking box which she had placed against her garden wall to take a furtive peep at the adjacent premises. The neighbor, curiously enough, chose that precise spot and moment for a similar maneuver. Result, their noses all but met. The neighbor said afterward that he was training a creeper, but the denouement was, in any case, absurd. Dollabella shrieked.

Her blacking box turned turtle at the start she gave, and she nearly sprained an ankle as she fell plump into a group of peonies. With a countenance the color of those flamboyant blossoms, and tears of mortification in her eyes, she scrambled up and went majestically indoors, banging the front door to ease her feelings. The neighbor—such is the depravity of man—laughed. After that there was only one course open to Dollabella—the next-door neighbor must be ignored—sent to Coventry—ostracized—crushed.

It was two months later, and the sultry glory of a July evening took the "Cuddling Cottagers"—as they were irreverently called—into an almost tropical embrace. Miss Powney was very busy—a garden hose in one hand and a little black volume, with a white whirligig on its cover, in the other. She appeared, between bouts of watering, to be committing something to memory.

The next door man was on a ladder. He was chronically on ladders. Dollabella had consulted her lawyer brother as to the possibility of a single woman getting an injunction against people who perpetually mounted heights and, under a pretext of pruning, commanded other people's domains. Moreover, he was whistling, and his whistling got upon Dollabella's nerves. Whenever she looked up she could see his straw hat and a pair of big brown hands busy among the young branches of a mulberry tree—and the sight annoyed her.

"Fractures," said Dollabella to herself, as she hosed a thirsty-looking clump of carnations, "are of six kinds: simple — compound — convex — concave (no, that sounds nonsense)—wait a minute."

She threw back her head and looked to the sky for inspiration.

"Wheou—whe-ou," went the man next door.

"Simple—compound — implicated—ocntex—ah!"

"Slither—scrape—crash—plomb!"

"Good heavens!" cried Dollabella, and the little black book with the white whirligig fell from her nerve-shaken hand to the ground.

A Crash.

Something had happened next door—something which included a splintering sound and the too sudden contact of a heavy body with Mother Earth.

The whistling had ceased abruptly in the middle of a bar; there was no longer any sign of a straw hat and clipping hands.

Dollabella, listening in cold horror, heard two or three groans, and then there was a ghastly silence.

Her heart thumped hard against her ribs—her breath came in little uncomfortable gasps.

"It's an accident of some sort," she said addressing the flower borders. "Now, what ought I to do?"

The hollyhocks and sweet-williams having no views on the subject she did what common sense prompted. The gardener, who came once a week to mow the grass and titivate the garden generally, had left a pair of short steps close at hand. She fetched them and placed them against the wall, and climbed to the top.

She was almost afraid to look, but common sense gave her another prod, and look she did; and, in looking beheld a prone figure which lay on its back, presenting a very white upturned face to the summer sky.

By its side, also prone, was a broken ladder.

At first she really thought that the whistling man next door was dead. Her heart seemed to turn a somersault and to stop before it got over. She scrambled down into his garden, dropping bang on to a choice lilium-auratum in the process, and hurried to his side. He was breathing, but seemed quite unconscious, and his right arm was bent in a curious way—and the hand looked swollen.

To the Rescue.

Dollabella knelt down and felt it gingerly; then she stared at it, and tried to marshal her recently acquired knowledge. "Pain—deformity—swelling," she muttered. "It's broken, of course it's broken. What shall I do? I must put it into splints before I call help."

Her eyes roved wildly around and discovered a golf putter lying on the lawn near a small hole. The whistling man practiced putting—when he was not in midair.

By means of his putter and a sturdy stick used for tying up dahlias, Dollabella made very serviceable splints which she tied on with her handkerchief and his. Just as she finished her patient moaned a little—and opened his eyes.

The pain in them lessened when he saw the apparition which bent over him.

"You will be quite all right now," Dollabella assured him, speaking very distinctly as if he were a child. "It's your arm, you know—broken. You know, I'm the girl from next door. I'm going to make you comfortable and send for your housekeeper to watch you while I fetch the doctor."

She looked around and seized a coat which she found near at hand, and arranged it beneath his head. The whistling man shut his eyes and moaned. The very slight movement had pained him.

"The beastly ste-- broke," he explained. "I was—ugh!"

"Yes—yes—don't try to talk; it will soon be better," Dollabella reassured him. "Now, lie quite still."

The caution was scarcely necessary as the man next door was in no condition to do anything else.

More Help.

He shut his eyes again. "Must you go?" he whispered.

"I must, really. You'll have to be bandaged properly, you see—besides, you're too big for me to move. I won't be long."

She sped indoors, big-eyed and white. After much unsuccessful knocking she dislodged a middle-aged housekeeper whom she almost pushed into the garden, explaining dramatically, and then she turned around again.

Up the country road she tore, and, after ten breathless minutes, she reached the doctor's house. Fortunately, he was in. He cast himself on a motor bicycle and flashed off almost before Dollabella had concluded the account of the accident.

The next day, after some debate with herself, she sent in her little maid to inquire after her neighbor. The answer came back: "Mr. Randall's compliments, and he was going on very nicely, and would like to see Miss Powney, if she could kindly find time to go in."

Dollabella, flushing very much at the message, decided she could not possibly find time to obey its request, and, to emphasize the truth of this, she sat idle for hours wondering whether she could or not. Mere civility demanded that she should go. She said this again and again. The man next door was lying on a couch, looking very forlorn.

"Please come in and sit down. Did you mind my asking you to come in like this?—I couldn't get to you—you see."

"I'm so glad you're better," Dollabella said primly, and she sat down obediently.

"It was slight concussion, you know, or I should be walking about," said the man next door. "I had to keep awfully quiet for 24 hours. How ever shall I thank you?"

Dollabella did not reply; she was staring very hard at the damaged arm in its splints.

Not the Arm.

"That isn't the arm I first aided," she suddenly burst out. "I—tied up your left—the one with the ring. I know I did."

The man next door got crimson right up to his nicely marked eyebrows. "It—it doesn't signify a bit," he said uncomfortably. "You did it beautifully—the doctor said so—and how could you know which arm it was if I wasn't up to telling you?"

"Pain—deformity—swelling," muttered Dollabella. "I am fated," she added distinctly, "to do idiotic things where you are concerned," and two big tears of sheer mortification rolled down her cheeks. And when she saw a smile on the face of her companion she could have killed him without compunction.

"What are you laughing at, please?" Dollabella dabbed her eyes defiantly.

"Because your 'idiotic things,' as you call them, don't hold a rushlight to mine. Confession's good for the soul. Look here—I never meant to tell you, but I—I threw myself off that ladder——"

"On purpose?"

"Yes."

"What on earth for?"

"Because I knew about the Red Cross classes, and I thought a smash-up would fetch you—but I never meant to break myself up like this."

Dollabella tried to keep her lips from twitching, but she couldn't.

Somehow the man next door got the unhurt arm around Dollabella's shoulders, and what he said when it was there does not matter to you or me. All that does matter is that the respective owners of the "Cuddling Cottages" behaved themselves quite appropriately from that day onward.

A couple of doors knocked through party walls later on made those houses one. The owners had been made one some weeks before.

Correct Words and How to Use Them

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.
Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

EVERY intelligent person is always progressing and is never indifferent in matters of culture. If careless habits of speech have been formed a determined effort to correct them will lead to good results.

Many persons who consider themselves well educated make the mistake of using the participle "got" in connection with the verb "to have." They say: "Have you got the key?" "Who has got my book?" instead of "Have you the key?" "Who has my book?"

Mistakes of everyday occurrence are, "Who did you give it to?" "Who is this for?" instead of the correct expressions, "To whom did you give it?" "For whom is this?"

Frequently one hears these errors in grammar: "I intended to have bought a pair of gloves," instead of "I intended to buy a pair of gloves;" "It was no use asking him," instead of "It was no use to ask him;" "Try and persuade her to go," instead of "Try to persuade her to go."

It would seem unnecessary to tell any one not to use the present tense instead of the past tense when mentioning what another has said, yet a careless person may be heard saying, "He says," instead of "He said."

Other faults are to say "A great ways." "Somewheres." "There's plenty of places."

The contraction "don't" for "do not" should never be used with a singular noun or pronoun. It is correct to say "He does not," and not "He don't." It is important to remember the objective form of the first person singular when a noun or pronoun or two pronouns follow a verb, and not to say "Ethel asked Mary and I to go," but "Ethel asked Mary and me to go." If one is confused about the use of pronouns in a sentence of this sort an easy rule is to separate them and use each one with the verb, thus: "Ethel asked Mary," and "Ethel asked me." In this way the grammatical form is seen.

It is correct to say "A summer day," not "A summer's day." "Cut the apple in two" or "in halves," not "Cut the apple in half." "I cut the ribbon off this piece," not "off of this piece." "The child threw it on the floor," not "onto the floor."

"Whether" is a word that indicates a choice of things and should not be placed at the head of each part of a sentence. For instance, it is incorrect to repeat it thus: "I have not decided whether I shall go to Boston or whether I shall stay at home."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ASK HER.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and in love with a girl of twenty-one. She also loves me. Last night I told a friend about it. He laughed and said: "That girl is married."

Now, how shall I find out the truth?

CONSTANT READER.

Ask her. If you find you can't take her word, then cease your attentions. No happiness was ever built on doubt or suspicion.

QUIT TELLING HER.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-three, and have had an acquaintance with a girl of eighteen for the past nine months. I am deeply in love with her, but, somehow, she does not seem to appreciate the same. Now, what I would like to know is there anyway I could bring her to understand the true feeling I have for her? G. F.

You have given her nine months' devotion that she doesn't seem to appreciate. The story of your love seems to have become old and stale. Quit telling it. Awaken her interest by giving her some reason to doubt you.

Who's tI Was.

A school teacher who was giving a lesson on "food" was interrupted by one of his pupils.

"Please, sir," he said, "Jimmy says he knew a baby that was brought up on elephant's milk, and it gained ten pounds in weight every day."

"Jimmy ought not to tell you such rubbish," said the teacher. "Whose baby was it that was brought up on elephant's milk?"

"Please, sir," answered Jimmy, "it was the elephant's."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I SHOWED Pa & Ma a peece in a boys' magazine that offerd a prize of ten dollars for the best short story of ad-venture wrote by a boy not oaver twelve yeers old. I toald Pa that I was going to try for the prize, & Pa sad rite away that he wud help me rite the story.

Why doant you let Bobbie rite it hisself? sed Ma. I doant think it wud be fair to the other littel boys who will com-peet to have you cum along with yure wunderful, marvelous brain & win that ten dollars. Let the kids have thare own competishun, Ma sed.

So this is the story I rote. It had to be less than a hundred words & it is pritty hard to rite a story inside of a hundred words & have the whole plot in. This is how I rote it:

It was midnite in Mexico. A silvery moon smiled at the Rio Grande wich wound its way through the lonely desert.

Crack! A pistol shot rang out & Bad Antonio pitched from his horse.

Sheriff Vane halted his horse before it cud trample on the body of the outlaw.

One glanst was enuff for Sheriff Vane.

The Mexican was ded.

Crack! Crack! Two pistol shots rang out thru the desert air, and Sheriff Vane pitched from his horse.

Bad Silvio and Bad Chico halted thare horses beefoar they cud trample on the body of the Sheriff.

One glanst was enuff for the two outlaws.

The Sheriff was ded.

That story won't win any prize, Bobbie, sed Pa. It ain't a good piece of work at all. I guess you better let me rite it all oaver for you.

Ma seen that I felt kind of bad. Every time wen I feel bad my lip gits kind of stiff. I can't help it & I can't grin wen I try. So Ma patted me on the cheek and sed Bobbie, that is a good story, & I bet you will win the prize. Yure father can't help you in this contest, excep, maybe, he can help you to spend the ten dollars wen you win it.

He will nevver win the prize, sed Pa. The story is vary erude.

I don't think you are a competent critick, sed Ma. You nevver rote any stories yourself that won any prizes, & now you are trying to tell littel Bobbie how to rite. You are always that way, Ma sed, trying to tell peepul how to do things that you can not do yureself. I will bet you a ten-dollar bathrobe aggenst a ten-dollar hat, Ma sed, that Bobbie wins the prize. I am giving you a even munny bet, Ma sed, & I am taiking Bobbie aggenst the whole field. That is the kind of a bettor I am, Ma sed.

Sure enuff, day beefoar yesterday I got a letter from the boys' magazeen & thare was a new ten-dollar bill in it.

"Well, sed Ma to Pa, cum acrost with that ten dollars for my hat.

I haven't the change now, sed Pa. Bobbie, let yure mother taik that ten dollars till payday.

That is the way Pa paid his bet & I wud be broak now only Ma gaiv me the ten back & sed she wud wait till payday for her hat. Pa thinks he knows lots, but Ma is a better bettor.

Not Like Him.

The Academy exhibition, with its fine Sargent portraits, recalls a story of this famous artist. At a banquet a young lady whom he knew very well said to him:

"Oh, Mr. Sargent, I saw your latest painting, and kissed it because it was so much like you."

"And did it kiss you in return?"

"Why, no."

"Then," said Mr. Sargent, "it was not like me."

Competition.

A little girl had been the pet of the family. Every one made much of her, but when there was a new little baby brother she felt rather neglected.

"How are you, Mary?" a visitor asked of her one afternoon.

"Oh, I'm all right," she said, "except that I think there is too much competition in this world."

Do You Know That—

In the lunatic asylum at Nantes is an illiterate inmate who has been discovered by the chief doctor to be a remarkable "lightning calculator." Ask what would be the age of a person who had lived a milliard of seconds, he took only 48 seconds to reply correctly. In 23 seconds he supplied the correct answer to the question, what would be the age of a person who had lived 343,000,000 seconds. He required only 32 seconds to find out how many seconds there were in 39 years, three months, twelve hours. Having been told the square mileage of the globe, he was asked how many hectares that represents, and gave the correct reply in four seconds. Asked how many seconds there are in 30 years, he replied in fourteen seconds, and explained that his calculations had involved four multiplications and one addition by mental arithmetic.

Mr. Jeffrey Farnol, who so suddenly leaped into fame as the author of "The Broad Highway," of which more than 300,000 copies have been sold, comes of a stock somewhat remarkable for its longevity. His grandparents are still living, as also their ten sons and daughter, with numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Four generations of one family, with only one loss by death—and that the author's brother, who fell in action in the Boer war—may be considered almost phenomenal.

Dancing at German court functions is a serious business, for the Kaiser will allow no one to take the floor who is not an expert. When a ball is in progress the court dancing master sits in one of the galleries and carefully observes the dancers. Should he detect ungracefulness in any guest he communicates with the Emperor, and the offender is presently warned that he or she must become more proficient before again being invited to the palace.

The "Transactions" of the Cremation Society of England states that there were 1,134 cremations in Great Britain in 1912, compared with 1,023 in 1911. Among the well-known persons cremated during the year were the Bishop of Truro and the Rev. Charles Voysey. There are thirteen crematories in England, of which five are municipal.

Eat This Food During Summer

Be careful what you eat during hot weather. What you need is food that nourishes but does not heat the body.

Faust Spaghetti fits right into that class. It is a high gluten food—a bone, muscle and flesh former—but contains practically no fat, therefore cannot heat the body.

FAUST
SPAGHETTI

makes a savory, appetizing dish. It can be served in a great many ways that appeal to the palate. It is easily prepared—it makes a nutritious, non-heating meal during the summer. Write for free recipe book, "Spaghetti and Its Uses." Faust Spaghetti put up in air-tight, moisture-proof packages.

GULLS FADING; RACE TIGHTENS UP NOW--AGLER

By Joe Agler.

PRICE AND CHAPMAN will do the haavy work for the Crackers in the opening game with the Pels to-day.

Paul Musser pitched a grand article of ball yesterday, and won the second and last game of the series from the Gulls. Paul was never in any great danger, and had everything his own way.

We scored in the first inning, and it looked like enough to win. We made sure, however, and scored two more in the seventh on clean hitting.

And that was enough.

They scored in the seventh, but could not find Musser for more than one run.

The Crackers certainly had a lot of life in both games, while Mobile was dead and never had a word to say.

The Gulls have left on a long trip around the circuit, and within a few more days there will be another leader in the league.

July will prove to be a great month for excitement in the pennant race in the Southern. Mobile, Chattanooga, Montgomery, Atlanta and perhaps Birmingham will be in a big scramble, and they will make some trouble before the season is over.

Now that we are on a winning streak and our twirlers going good again, and with our two weeks at home, we will start to climb and be up where we belong before long.

Price should win his game, as he is going good and has something on the Pels.

GIANTS MAKE 46 HITS IN THREE GAMES WITH PHILS

The Giants are a slob team, of course, as the last world's series showed. But they are surely the loud sound in the National League.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday they faced the Phillies in the "crucial series." The Phillies are supposed to have one of the greatest pitching staffs in the world. Yet in three games the Giants made 46 hits. On two occasions they made 17 hits. Once they got only 12. In the three games they scored 19 runs. Among the pitchers they drove to the woods were Chalmers twice, Moore, Killifer, Alexander twice, Rixey, Mayer and Seaton.

BRITTON AGREES TO 133 IN JULY 4 GO WITH WHITE

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 3.—Charlie White and Jack Britton are to fight at 133 pounds, weighing in three and one-half hour before their fight Friday afternoon. Britton agreed to this to-day when a conference of principals was held to settle final details. The meeting had waited the arrival of Nate Lewis from Chicago. The weight is quite satisfactory to White, who had expected he would be forced to make it 134, which would have been somewhat of an advantage to Britton. The boys will enter the ring at about 2:50 p. m.

"Charlie will surely continue his winning streak," said Lewis. "The next important match I am counting on is between White and the winner of the Ritchie-Rivers go."

MRS. M'CARTY ON COAST TO SETTLE LUTE'S ESTATE

LOS ANGELES, July 3.—Mrs. Rhoda McCarty, widowed by the blow of Arthur Pelky's fist that killed Luther McCarty in the arena at Calgary, Alberta, on May 24, is in Los Angeles to claim the $8,200 account her husband had with the German-American Savings Bank.

BUILDING PERMIT ISSUED FOR NEW STADIUM AT TECH

A building permit has just been issued for the erection of the concrete stadium on Grant Field at the Georgia Institute of Technology. The work will cost $15,000. This will pay only for the first stand. Later it is planned to surround the entire field with stands.

CRACKERS OPEN SERIES TO-DAY WITH PELICANS

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Crackers return from a strenuous road trip to-day, bringing more victories than was expected, and open here this afternoon with the once famous Pelicans.

With the team back in something resembling its stride now, with a new and promising pitcher coming, with Price and Conzelman in good trim, there is nothing to keep the Crackers from showing some speed on their present home stay.

To-day's game is an extra affair, a transferred game from New Orleans.

On July 4 games will be played in the morning and afternoon. Saturday one game will be played. All these contests will be with the well-known doormats of the league.

* * *

MEMPHIS and Mobile will furnish the opposition next week. The week after Montgomery comes for three games. And then the Crackers beat it southward.

As things stand now the Crackers are within comfortable striking distance of the lead. All needed is a good, brisk winning streak to get the Crackers up there fighting with the Gulls. The New Orleans and Memphis games should close up the gap somewhat. Then the Gulls come, and if the Crackers can sweep that series and trim Montgomery they will leave Atlanta for their Southern trip so close to first place that it will make it interesting.

Don't make the mistake of figuring the Crackers out of it yet. They aren't. A spurt will put them up in the running with a rush.

IT'S hard to figure why Carl Thompson isn't making a better showing. He looks like a great pitcher and he wins a few games. But somehow he couldn't stick with Birmingham.

Possibly by antagonizing the other players on every team of which he becomes a member Thompson hurts his own chances. It is certain that he did not stand high in the estimation of the other Barons and that they did not give him good support. Many a pitcher has been ruined because no team would play behind him.

CHARLEY FRANK has won more controversies and less ball games this season than any time in his history. He practically hasn't lost an argument or won a ball game. Of course that's an exaggerated statement but close to the real facts.

If this sort of thing keeps on Charley will give up managing and become a lawyer.

BY way of warning, all chicken owners on the route between Chicago and Montezuma the following item from Charley Dryden's pen is hereby published:

"Fred Toney is taking lessons lassoing chickens from the deck of a motorcycle. This fall he and Richie and Lavender will ride machines to Lavender's home at Montezuma, Ga., and Toney has promised to supply the grub en route."

CHARLEY HEMPHILL is not a great manager. That has been demonstrated. Probably Charley himself would hardly argue that he was. But he can still hit that old pellet. Up in the husky American Association where 20 men are batting over .300, Charley is next to the top, with a batting average of .353. R. Miller, of Columbus, is the only man who tops him.

TWO International League clubs are fighting over the services of Claude Derrick, ex-University of Georgia player, now with the Athletics. Both Baltimore and Rochester want him, with the chances fairly good that he will go back to Baltimore.

Derrick can not seem to stick in the big leagues but he is plenty good enough for the fastest of minor leagues and should have many good years in the International.

FINE REMEDY FOR ECZEMA

Also for Salt Rheum, Tetter, Psoriasis, Lupus, and All Skin Afflictions.

Even a Microscope Won't Find a Blemish After S. S. S. Gets Through.

All skin troubles should be attacked from within by giving the blood circulation a good daily bath. This is accomplished with S. S. S., the best known and most highly recommended blood purifier ever discovered. Its action is very rapid. Its vegetable nature is such that it naturally goes right into the blood, saturates the entire circulation, bathes the tissues with an influence that enables the skin to heal quickly. The action of S. S. S. is that of an antidote, and this fact has been demonstrated time and time again in the most severe forms of weeping eczema.

Its influence in the tissues where the tiny arteries transfer the red blood for the worn-out blood to the veins is quite remarkable and goes on constantly with every tick of the clock—the beat of the heart.

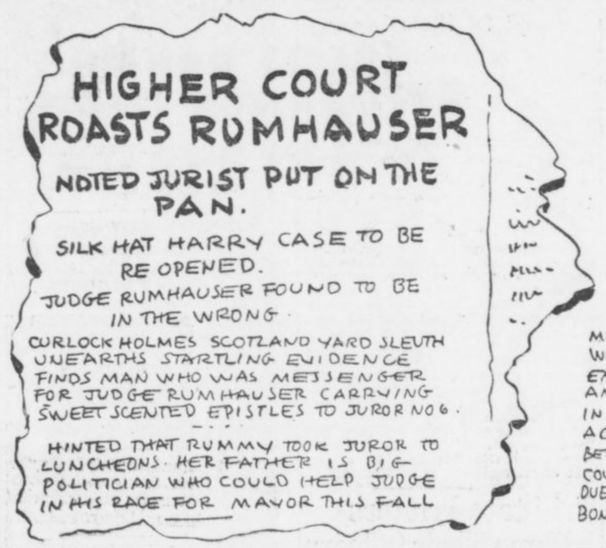

And new skin is thus caused to form, while the germs of irritating influences that cause eczema are scattered and their harmful nature entirely suspended.

S. S. S. has a wonderful tonic influence in the blood because it contains no "dope," is not a "physic," is entirely free of any mineral drugs or any other drugs except the remarkable medicinal effect of the pure vegetable products of which it is made.

Few people realize how harmful are many of the strong, crude ointments that used to be in favor before they learned that S. S. S. is safe, speedy and sure. Ask at any drug store for a bottle of S. S. S. Give it a good trial and you will soon see a decided improvement in any form of skin trouble. Write to The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for special free advice on eczema and any other form of skin or blood trouble.

What Baseball Umps Should Do

Heisman Helps Amateur Arbiters

By J. W. Heisman

FIRST rattle out of the box, let me say this small package of umpiring tips is not intended for professional arbiters, albeit more than one of such could improve himself and give better satisfaction to players and public if he would take to heart, for more of the points I herein will discuss.

So far as the teams and their captains are concerned, it is naturally well for them to get, whenever possible, an umpire who has had some experience, who has some natural qualifications for the work, and most important of all, a man who has an unblemished reputation. This article will be of no assistance whatever to a prospective umpire in any one of these three considerations; but most any one is liable to be called upon at some time or other in his fortuitous career to umpire a game of ball, and perhaps a point or two herein touched upon may dwell in his memory and help him out of more than one dilemma during the progress of the riot.

* * *

IN THE first place, if there is only one umpire to the game, he should take his stand behind the catcher, and should remain there as long as no men get on bases. He should not think of taking up this station without a mask over his face; and if there is a protector to be had, he should also don that.

The umpire should be careful not to stand so close upon the catcher's heels as to crowd him, and he should ever be on the alert for a possible foul foul fly popping up. In such an event he should be quick to jump out of the catcher's way, for naturally the latter will be after it in a jiffy.

* * *

ABOUT the hardest thing connected with umpiring is to call balls and strikes to the satisfaction of both teams. Often enough pitchers come in complaining that the umpire always makes them split the plate. If true, this constitutes a just complaint, for it is the acme of good pitching never to give a batter a ball squarely over the middle. If the umpire will not give a strike when the pitcher has both head and control sufficient to just nick the corners, his good work is nullified by the umpire's limitations of sight or judgment.

And umpires often enough call a strike when the ball has passed the batter at the level of the latter's eyes or chin or neck. This is a big mistake. Merely because the batter is able to see over the top of the ball, or because many a batter likes to take a wallop at a ball that is winding snake-like around his neck is no reason why it should be called a strike. A judge of play should be guided strictly and entirely by what the rule says, and in this case the provision is that it must be between the knee and the shoulder.

* * *

MANY batters squat or crouch at the plate before the ball is delivered, and when it comes up they crouch a deal more. In this position the ball seems often to go away over their heads, when it would clearly be a satisfactory height for another man who did not have such a stooping attitude. An umpire should be careful not to let a batter get away with this crouching posture to such an extent as to compel the pitcher to put them all knee-high. The idea is that it is a strike if it passes at a height not greater than the shoulder when the batsman is in a natural hitting attitude.

Umpires often make the mistake of judging a pitched ball by where the catcher caught it. Often enough the catcher "pulls" the ball so cleverly as to deceive the umpire; and then again the mere effect of gravity or the curve of the ball, coming late and suddenly, distorts the umpire's judgment.

* * *

UMPIRES frequently make the mistake of calling a decision too quickly. They have it in their minds that this shows efficiency and executive capacity. Also it is sometimes intended as a species of bluffing, calculated to make the players believe that the decision must be correct because of the very snappishness with which it is given. To a certain extent this may be so; but only too often this lightning-like decision connotes the very opposite of accuracy.

It is well, though, for the umpire to be as quick as he can in calling the third strike on a batter when the latter has not swung at it. If the catcher holds this third strike it does not make any difference, as the batter is out of it anyway; but should the catcher drop this last strike it would look as though you were giving him a chance to recover the ball before the runner reached first if you delay notifying the runner at once that it is the third strike and he had best run.

* * *

IT is the tendency nowadays to call most every ball that is hit immediately down to the ground a foul ball, whether it afterward rolls foul or fair. I incline to think this is good practice; for unless one does call such a ball something without delay it puts the batter in an awkward position. This case should be carefully distinguished, however, from that where the batter hits a ball into the diamond that is manifestly fair, and has been from the start, and then in starting out for first base he runs himself into the bounding or rolling ball. Here the batter is out at once for touching a fair batted ball.

FODDER FOR FANS

Wilson, of the Pirates, made two home runs yesterday, but his efforts were wasted, for the Cubs scored six runs against four for the Pirates.

* * *

Eleven Tigers stepped to the plate in the fourth inning of the game against the White Sox yesterday, with the result that seven runs went across the finish line, giving the Tigers the game.

* * *

Wheat, of the Dodgers, made a triple and three singles out of four times up yesterday.

* * *

Larry Doyle, of the Giants, made a homer with two on bases yesterday. Several days ago he delivered a circuit swat with the bases crowded.

* * *

The Naps and Browns divided a double-header yesterday, the Browns taking the first game, an eleven-inning affair, and the Naps the second, with Falkenberg in the box. This is the first game Falkenberg has won since his winning streak of ten games was cut.

* * *

The Cardinals justly might be called the "rally boys" Yesterday they repeated the stunt which they have been practicing in the last month of coming from behind and winning out by scoring three runs in the eighth and one in the ninth, taking the game from the Reds.

* * *

Connie Mack has his eye focused on George Brickley, brother of Charles, the Harvard football star. It's a cinch that if George can bat anywhere as well as Charles can kick, Connie will be placing him in the slugger's position of the Athletics' line-up if he lands him.

* * *

For the third successive time the Giants tussled with the Phillies in the Quakertown ballwick yesterday and handed the third straight defeat, thus clinching the hold the Giants now have on the upper rung in the National League ladder.

* * *

Pitchers may come and pitchers may go, but it seems that Mathewson and his wonderful control and ability are to remain forever. In this, his thirteenth season, as a big league pitcher, Matty threatens to eclipse all his previous records for victories. In addition to establishing a world's record for control, he hurled against the Phillies yesterday and for the seventh or eighth time this season went the full nine innings without a base on balls.

* * *

The Dodgers, after suffering two defeats at the hands of the Braves, rose up in wrath yesterday and gave the Braves one of the worst beating handed any team this year. The Brooklynites garnered fifteen runs, scoring nine in the third.

* * *

Lajoie, the Naps' second sacker, was back in the game yesterday, and, despite rumors that he is to be benched or used as a pinch hitter in the future, it is a certainty that he will remain as a regular for the balance of this season and several more to come.

Boehling, the recruit pitcher of the Senators, is setting the American League afire. He has started seven games and won them all, the majority of them being shut-outs.

ROHE TO LEAD NEWNAN; HAS 2-YEAR CONTRACT

NEWNAN, GA., July 3.—George Rohe, former utility man for Atlanta, yesterday signed a two-year contract as manager of the Newnan Georgia-Alabama team. CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—From this point to the finish of the races in both big leagues, each game is going to count vitally. The strain of the going through July and August either makes or breaks the pennant contenders, and only the teams with the most class live to fight it out in September. It is from now until the first of September that the clubs which make the early going will have their hardest struggle to maintain the lead. The teams have found themselves by this time if they are to arrive at all.

"I would just as soon be trailing up to July," says McGraw. "After July, I want to make the going."

It has been just this way that McGraw has played the race this year. The Phillies jumped out in front and killed off their pitching staff and some of their players before they really reached the stretch where they will need their full strength. If they could have gotten out far enough ahead to afford a slump, that would have been a different matter, but the Giants managed to hang to their heels, which is the most exasperating and heart-breaking thing that can happen to a ball club.

* * *

THE race in the American League has assumed a very different aspect from the one in the National, for class told from the get-away in that argument. Even rival American Leaguers admit that the Athletics have shown all the class of the circuit so far, and they have opened up such a nice gap now they can afford a comfortable slump. At the beginning of the season, the outlook was for one of those nip and tuck affairs in both leagues, but the outlook was badly upset in the American. The Boston Red Sox and the Washington Club were to abound with class, while something was expected of the White Sox and little thought of Cleveland.

Boston has been a pitiable failure and disappointment. The team is going slightly better now, but there was plenty of room for improvement. Even should the club regain the old stride that carried it to a world's championship last year, it does not strike me it would have a chance with the Athletics now. It must be remembered that the Philadelphia club is playing much better ball than it did last summer when it slopped through its schedule, feeling confident that no team was ever created which could beat it to the pennant. There is a grave doubt in my mind whether the Red Sox could have defeated the Athletics last season if they had performed as they are going this year.

* * *

"THE Athletics have the class of this league," a player on a rival American League team told me the other day. "They are not overlooking any opportunities this summer, either. Mack has his pitching staff going as well, if not better, than any in the league, and it was supposed to be his weakness. It has been largely through clever handling that Mack has achieved these results with his pitchers.

In the first place, he fixed Bender so that he would work his best this season and he did this through one of the well-known Mack methods, a promised reward at the end of the season for delivering the goods. Then he worked his youngsters with great wisdom, getting them used to the big league ways, while the pitchers on the other clubs had not yet gotten the spring rust out of their arms and the going was easier. In this way they acquired confidence in themselves. Then Mack got to taking the squabs out of the games and putting in a veteran when his team acquired a lead of a couple of runs to make it sure.

"Connie fooled Griffith in Washington recently when he sent both Bender and Plank out in front of the bench to warm up before the game and hid Bush behind the grandstand where he worked his arm out. When the game began, he sat Plank and Bender down on the bench and sent Bush to the box, figuring on taking a chance with a youngster in the game with Johnson and working his veterans against the easier Washington pitchers. Bush got away with the game. Mack was always a great man to jockey his players."

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

A HUNDRED.

The shades of night were falling fast
When through a baseball field there passed
A youth who sadly shook his head,
And this is all the athlete said:
"$100."

He fain would swing a thousand thumps
Upon the guy they call the umps.
But if he hit the umps a crack
That little clout would set him back $100.

Oh, it is great to be a star
And give the umps an awful jar,
But if you act as white men do
To find that there accrues to you $100.

Johnny Coulon avers that he is suffering from a cold in his stomach, but a diagnosis might locate the malady in his feet.

Nevertheless, when Mr. Coulon stalls off a conflict with Mr. Williams, he shows that he possesses considerable intellect.

We may thank the Athletics for the fact that no baseball writer will have the nerve to spring anything about a "crucial series" in the American League.

Frank Gotch says he will meet the winner o the Roler-Cutler match, showing that he still has faith in the one-per-minute theory.

Atlantans Still In at Augusta

Carter, Orr and Ramspeck Win

AUGUSTA, GA., July 3.—Ideal weather conditions prevailed and there was a large gallery on the third day of the South Atlantic tennis tournament here. The semi-finals in the ladies' singles were completed and the finals are being played to-day. In the lower frame of the semi-finals in ladies' singles Miss Adger defeated Miss Perry, 6-2, 6-2. The winner plays Mrs. Robert Johnson in the finals.

The following were the results Wednesday in the men's singles:

Erwin defeated Fletcher, 6-2, 6-1; Carter defeated E. S. Waring, 6-2, 6-2; Ramspeck defeated Garrett, 6-4, 7-5. Erwin and Orr had played two sets when darkness interrupted. Erwin won the first set, 6-4, and Orr won the second, 6-3.

The following were the results in the men's doubles:

Harper and White defeated Horkan and Nixon, 6-3, 6-2; Waring brothers defeated Nurnberger and Roseman, 6-0, 6-3; Brinson and Granch defeated Lee and T. Cumming, 6-2, 6-3; Ramspeck and Orr defeated Wilkins and Bussell, 6-1, 6-0; Kennedy and Capers defeated Barrett and Evans, 6-2, 6-4; Gary and Sims defeated Stratton and VonSprecken, 6-0, 6-0; Hall and Parks defeated Birkmire and Cully, 6-1, 6-1.

Consolations: A. W. Harper defeated Ransom, 6-1, 6-1; Stulb defeated Harris, 6-2, 6-4; Wilson defeated J. Cumming, 7-5, 2-6, 6-2. Sims defeated Purdy, 6-2, 6-3; Ferris defeated Schweers, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4; Capers defeated Bredenburg, 6-4, 6-3; Wright defeated Averill, 6-0, 6-4; Birkmire defeated Johnson, 6-1, 6-3.

The following are the results of Wednesday morning's matches:

Star Athletes Will Perform on July 4

At 9:45 Fourth of July morning the first call will be sounded for the first heat of the first race of Atlanta's first big track and field meet at Piedmont Park under the auspices of the Department of Playgrounds.

Thanks to the untiring work of Joe Bean, manager of playgrounds, the affair needs only good weather to be a tremendous success. In the nine events that will be run there are 175 entries. Of course this does not mean 175 entrants, for there are many duplications, but any way you figure it, it will be the biggest meet ever held in Atlanta.

This steeplechase event will start at the top of the hill at Jackson and Tenth Streets, and the course will extend down the hill, through the lake and back to the judges' stand.

All contestants will be expected to furnish their own numbers.

On account of the large entry list two events will be called at a time. Here is the order of events:

100-yard dash. Trial heats.
Pole vault. Shot put.
100-yard dash. Final heat.
Running high jump. 880-yard run.
Running broad jump. 440-yard dash.
Hammer throw. Steeplechase.

JOURNEY TO EUROPE MAY COST JOHNSON $45,000

CHICAGO, July 3.—Argument was heard this morning on the motion entered by United States District Attorney Wilkerson asking that the $30,000 bond given by Jack Johnson, negro prize-fighter, on eleven indictments under the Mann white slave act for which he has not yet been tried be forfeited. Appeal bonds for $15,000 also are pending against Johnson. In the bonds given in the untried indictments, there is a provision that the negro must not leave the jurisdiction of the District Court of Northern Illinois. It is because of this provision that Mr. Wilkerson has asked that the bonds be forfeited. Johnson is on a ship bound for Europe.

U. S. FARM NEED CO-OPERATION ENVOY SAYS

By LIEUT. GOV. E. L. DAUTRIDGE, North Carolina Member of the Agricultural Commission.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, July 3.—The co-operative principle in agriculture is simply the lesson learned from the practices of "big business," in which dollars have combined for efficiency and economy.

Farmers can accomplish the same results by uniting themselves in societies.

There is, however, this difference: Industrial combinations seek more than mere economy and add to their profits through monopolistic control. In agriculture there are too many producers scattered over too wide an area to permit an organization that could control the market.

American consumers need have no fear upon that score if co-operation is adopted among American farmers; rather may the consumers hope for freer competition through the influence of farmers' co-operative organizations upon existing middlemen and trusts.

The operations of even a highly developed type of Co-operative Sales Society among the farmers would be limited to reducing the cost of distribution and to eliminating the profits of the middlemen.

Protection for Consumers.

It would mean increased profits for the farmers without an increased price to consumers. Co-operation among the farmers for the sale of foodstuffs, however, can not, I believe, be brought about upon any considerable scale until the farmers are placed upon a better financial basis through the extension of their credit facilities. The basis of the agricultural credit system of Europe underlies all other forms of agricultural co-operation.

There are many objections raised against the adoption of co-operative credit societies of the European type among American farmers. In conversation with experts in the field during this trip I heard it pointed out that co-operative credit societies of the Raiffeleen type are unlikely to succeed in America because of the unwillingness of the American farmer to assume liability for his neighbor and because of the absence of "farming villages" in America.

Unfamiliarity of our farmers with each other's financial standing deters business transactions. I don't believe that snap judgment can be given upon these questions. Although I recognize the force of arguments, it does appear likely to the members of the American Commission that a land credit organization can be established in America whereby American farmers can secure mortgage loans upon better terms.

As to their short-time credit needs, their money for operating expenses, if the Raiffeisen banks can not be established, I believe something can be gained by forcing the consideration of farmers' needs as borrowers upon those who are to construct our currency banking reform legislation, but our farmers must interest themselves in the currency question to do this.

No Monopoly Is Intended.

With credit facilities improved, I believe, through co-operative organizations, our farmers can succeed in increasing their control over marketing their produce.

I don't mean control in the monopolistic sense, but control to effect economy in distribution and in order that they may receive a larger share of the profits of their sales.

Undoubtedly such a business organization among the farmers would quickly lead to an organization for the promotion of education for the stronger presentation of legislative needs of American farmers.

If American farmers could be reorganized along these lines there would be found a far closer link with the Federal Department of Agriculture than now exists.

The success attained along these lines by European farmers, especially those of Germany and Austria, has interested me greatly. The organizations of European farmers for co-operative purchasing are also of great benefit; they are very simple in principle, but to carry on the work of propagation necessary to spread the co-operative movement over so large a country as the United States will require an organization of great strength.

The American Commission should be encouraged to live and broaden its activities. Only the support of our farmers can do this.

PARADE AND RIDE FOR CONTESTANTS JULY 4

William Hamilton, 588 Woodward Avenue, one of the hustling contestants.

Promptly at 10 o'clock Friday morning, July 4, The Georgian and American ponies, which are to be awarded to the boys and girls in the contests, will start in parade formation from The Georgian and American offices in Alabama Street and proceed to Grant Park.

There will be a celebration at the park on the arrival of the parade. It is hoped that every contestant in the city and all those from out of town who can visit Atlanta for the day will forget rivalry for the day and enjoy the Fourth as the guests of The Georgian and American.

All of the features of entertainment can not now be announced. But one thing is sure, every contestant who so desires may enjoy a ride behind the ponies, and thus anticipate something of the pleasure which will belong to the winners after July 31. There will be plenty of caretakers to see that everyone gets a ride.

Although several times the contestants have been told where the ponies are kept, and while they have been invited to go and look at the little animals, not all have taken advantage of the offer. This time, however, the ponies will be on display, looking their best, and on their best behavior. There is no reason why each boy and girl in the contest should not see for himself or herself the handsome prizes so soon to be awarded.

Meanwhile, do not forget that Friday night ends the time when clubs of five subscriptions may be turned in for the big bonus offers.

A SURE REMEDY FOR LAZY LIVER

Go to Any Druggist for This Safe, Reliable Remedy and Get Your Money Back If It Fails.

There are very few remedies that gain the confidence of druggists as Dodson's Liver Tone does. All druggists sell it and back up the sale of every bottle with the money-back guarantee that the price will be refunded if it fails to give complete satisfaction.

Dodson's Liver Tone costs 50 cents a bottle. It is the safest and best remedy for torpid liver, constipation, biliousness, etc., that has ever been sold in this city. It takes the place of dangerous calomel and does not lay you up as a dose of calomel often does. A bottle in the house is as good as fifty cents in the bank. If you or your family need a liver tonic you have the medicine ready. If it fails you get your money back.

Be sure you get Dodson's Liver Tone when you ask for it. There are imitations of it that may disappoint you.

NEW SECURITIES $948,153,000 IN 6 MONTHS

World-Wide Scarcity of Capital Is Blamed for Decrease of $421,469,000.

By B. C. FORBES.

The Hearst papers' carefully compiled records show that the output of new securities by corporations for the half-year ended June 30 fell below one billion dollars.

The total was $948,153,000, a decrease of no less than $421,469,000 from last year.

The world-wide scarcity of capital has been wholly responsible for the falling off—companies, both railroad and industrial, would have borrowed nearer two billions had investors manifested a disposition to respond.

The grand total for 1912 was $2,141,500,000, while for 1911 the figures was $1,740,000,000. The current 12 months will probably fall short of either, as the demand for new issues is unlikely to become abnormal owing to the paucity of liquid capital and the very high income yields insisted upon by lenders.

The largest banking houses here and abroad are discouraging avoidable flotations in an effort to avert acute congestion. In England the half-year's applications have reached $600,000,000, an increase of $55,000,000 over a year ago, notwithstanding the unfavorable conditions that have obtained, while on the Continent the market has been so flooded that both Governmental and banking interests have taken rigid measures to stem the tide. Germany has virtually prohibited the offering of foreign issues there.

Enormous sums must still be raised by the nations that have been at war, but no big loans will be handled for any country until it has restored peace. How much France and England have quietly supplied to belligerants, however, is an interesting point upon which information is withheld.

At home a large proportion of this year's borrowing has been necessitated by the maturing of outstanding obligations.

Too often short-term notes have had to be resorted to.

Such strong roads as the Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and Baltimore & Ohio put out $20,000,000 each, while among the industrial companies, Consolidated Gas contributes $15,000,000 to the short-term total.

Notes come home to roost. Bonds stay sold, but notes return so quickly to plague their issuers. They simply, as a rule, postpone the evil day.

By next year the new currency system may facilitate the marketing of long-term bonds and also stocks, especially as latterly there has been some attempt at economy on the part of the people.

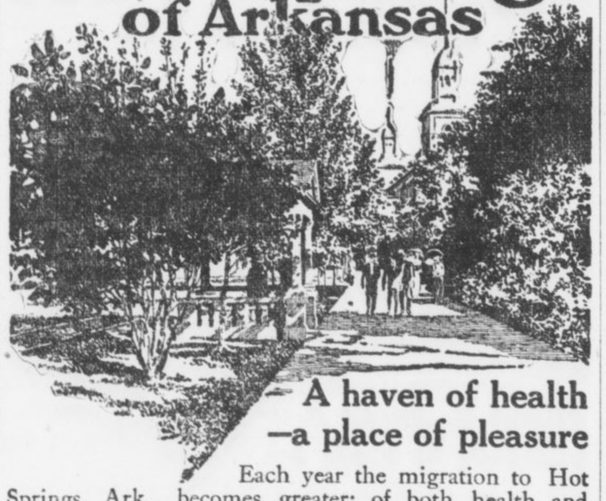

My opinion is that the security market will be able to weather the autumn without the upheaval that for months appeared inevitable. Quotations for both stocks and bonds are now on an attractive investment level and small investors will probably come forward in large numbers from now on.

June is the only month of the current year that shows an increase in offerings as compared with last year. The monthly record reads;

	Output.	Change.
January	$198,105,000	—$142,895,000
February	132,362,000	— 185,470,000
March	148,829,000	— 1,621,000
April	164,477,000	— 53,788,000
May	123,140,000	— 81,577,000
June	181,240,000	* 43,888,000
	$948,153,000	—$421,469,000

The July total will be large, as underwriters are anxious to take advantage of the $125,000,000 "July disbursements," which are supposed to create a re-investment demand.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Drugged, Was He? He Surely Was!

One day a constable found a man lying beneath a tree. Knowing that a brand of rather prostrating corn juice was sold in that neighborhood, and thinking the man had been unwisely stacked up against it, he with considerable difficulty got him to the local jail.

Later in the day it was discovered that the victim was not reviving according to schedule and a doctor was called in.

"I thought so," mused the doctor, making a critical examination. "Officer, where did you find this man?"

"Down along the railroad track," answered the cop. "He was sleeping on a pile of railroad spikes."

"You should have called me at once," returned the doctor, continuing the diagnosis. "This man has been drugged."

"Of course he has, doc," was the prompt response of the officer. "I drug him all the way from the railroad to the jail, a matter of two hundred yards."

Forks Find the Way After Many Trials.

A Josh Whitcomb in real life was working in the fields one day when a salesman came along to sell him things to save labor. While talking to Uncle Josh the salesman noticed that he was cut and scratched all over the front of his face. In fact, he looked as if he had turned on a full head of steam and rushed through a barbed wire fence.

"You seem pretty well nicked up to-day," remarked the salesman, during the course of the conversation. "Have you been trying to shave yourself with a hay cutter?"

"No; 'twasn't thet," was the unemotional rejoinder of Uncle Josh. "My darter did it."

"Your daughter did it!" exclaimed the amazed salesman. "You don't really mean it?"

"Yaas," said Josh, with characteristic calmness, "ever since she been goin' ter thet derned boardin' school she has been makin' me eat with a fork."

Suffering Alone Far From Home.

A party of Atlanta campers took up their mountain abode in Gilmer County at nightfall in an old tumbledown hut. About 2 a. m. a polecat announced its presence in its own peculiar way. A German sat up and looked helplessly about him. The others were all sleeping peacefully.

"Mein gracious," he exclaimed, in tones of despair. "All the vest asleep und I've got to shmell it all!"

HARRIS FREED OF PERJURY CHARGE

Prosecutor Asks Verdict of "Not Guilty" for Macon Lawyer and Politician.

MACON, July 3.—Upon motion of the State a verdict of "not guilty" was directed to-day in the case of Jesse C. Harris, the Macon lawyer charged with perjury, in connection with the August, 1912, Bibb County primary.

Charles H. Hall, Jr., Congressman Bartlett's campaign manager, testified that Harris, chairman of the sub committee of the executive committee, asked him on the night of the election "How many votes Judge Bartlett needed," and that he told Harris Bartlett needed as many as he could get, this conversation taking place behind closed doors. Grand jurors testified that Harris denied under oath while a witness in the Grand Jury room that he asked Hall that q uestion.

After this and other evidence has been submitted to-day, Solicitor Ross asked the court to allow a verdict of "not guilty" to be directed.

COTTON DROPS ON BEARISH REPORT

Heavy Selling on U. S. Report. Short Interest Increased on Eve of Holiday.

AMERICAN EXCHANGES WILL CLOSE FRIDAY

It being the Fourth of July and a general holiday, all American exchanges will be closed Friday. All exchanges will observe an extra holiday Saturday.

NEW YORK, July 3.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day the tone was steady and prices were 1 to 3 points higher. This was a shade better than had been expected on cables. The upturn was due to local covering, chiefly in anticipation of the Government report due at noon.

The weather was considered favorble, as showery conditions prevailed throughout the western sections of the belt.

The Government report placed the cotton acreage of 1913 at 35,622,000, showing an increase of 2½ per cent over last year's acreage and a condition of 81.8, against 79.1 a month ago. The report was much better than expected. The average trader construed it as bearish and caused heavy selling by street and local traders. Spot houses also sold. Most of the selling is believed to be for short accounts. The buying was scattered, coming from commission houses and those who liquidated at a higher level.

July was depressed to 12.03, against an opening of 12.10; August fell 11 points. New crop positions were heavily sold and followed the downward movement by dropping some 12 to 15 points from the opening range.

The impression seemed to prevail that there has been some improvement in the crop since the report was made up and lower prices are inevitable. The bull element contend that a 15,000,000-bale crop is by no means assured, claiming that we have to go through two of the most critical months of the season and that much cotton will be required to satisfy the world's need.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net decline of 9 to 12 points from the final quotations of Wednesday.

Following are 1 p. m. bids in New York: July 12.04 August 12.06, October 11.41, January 11.33.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 3.—Political news was bad this morning. London reports all hope of peace abandoned. Serious battle raging in the Balkans. Liverpool came in about 2 points lower than due. Spots 1 point higher.

It is evidently thought that the general unfavorable outlook is some compensation for any bullish impression the Bureau reports may have.

Weather developments are again favorable. Generally fair weather prevails over Alabama and the Atlantics, while it is cloudy over rest of the belt. The Central States, including Arkansas and Tennessee, had a fine general rainfall. There was little rain in Texas, except in the eastern section. Indications are for partly cloudy weather with a tendency toward clearing, although some scattered showers are likely in the central belt.

Prior to the Bureau publication the market was steady around 11.37 for October. Selling is restricted, as the tendency is to look for a low Bureau condition, some views being under 80 on the ground that private authorities all give only a fraction of a point improvement during the month, and the May Government condition was 79.1.

The into-sight for the week looks around 27,000, against 35,476 last year.

The week-end statistics will not be given out until Monday.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: "The South appears to be bearish on its prospects of the new crop."

Logan & Bryan: "We favor a scalping position, inclining toward the long side on all easy periods."

Harris, Winthrop & Co.: "We deem it the more judicious policy to buy on setbacks."

IMPORTANT CHANGE OF SCHEDULE.

Atlanta and West Point R. R. Co.

Effective Sunday, July 6, 1913, train No. 17 for Columbus (via Newnan) will leave Atlanta at 4:05 p. m. instead of 4:10 p. m. Train No. 36 from Montgomery will arrive Atlanta 11:35 p. m. instead of 11:40 p. m.

TIFTON SHIPS SECOND CAR OF TOMATOES TO NEW YORK

TIFTON, July 3.—The second carload of tomatoes from Tifton left last night for New York. The car contained about 350 crates and was loaded by a number of the largest truck growers of this section.

A telegram from New York announces that the first carload was sold at $2.25 per crate for the choice varieties. After selling agents' commission has been taken out and freight charges deducted, the car of 364 crates will net the truckers an average of $1.60 per crate.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—With the exception of local showers in the Upper Lake Region fair weather will prevail to-night and Friday over the Eastern half of the country with lower temperatures in the Northern Upper Lake region. It will be warmer Friday in the Middle Atlantic States and continue warm in the interior, except as above mentioned.

Forecast.

Forecast until 7 p. m. Friday:

Georgia—Generally fair to-night and Friday.

Virginia, North and South Carolina, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee—Generally fair to-night and Friday.

Mississipi—Local showers to-night or Friday.

Louisiana—Local showers to-night or Friday.

East Texas—Fair in west and south; showers in northeast portion to-night or Friday.

West Texas—Fair to-night or Friday.

HOGS IN BIG DEMAND.

CHICAGO, July 3.—With 60,000 less hogs at eleven markets this week than last, prices are going skyward, especially where quality is concerned. The 9c quotations was restored to-day, top hogs making 9.05, but the gap between shipping and packing grades is widening. There were only 67,000 at eleven points to-day, against 91,000 last week. Since January 1 these markets have received only 12,911,000, against 14,155,000 last year.

Cattle trade was nominally steady at the lowest basis of the week. In the sheep house, demand was active at strong prices.

STOCKS DULL ON EVE OF HOLIDAY

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Following a dull, heavy opening of the stock market to-day, some of the issues rallied and made partial recoveries. At the outset practically all stocks were lower, the declines embracing the following: Utah Copper, ½; United States Steel common, ⅜; Amalgamated Copper, ⅜; American Smelting, ⅜; Atchison, ¼; Chino Copper, ⅜; Erie, ½; Union Pacific, ¼; Reading, ¼; St. Paul, ¼. Steel recovered and gained ⅛. Canadian Pacific was ¼ up at the commencement, but later increased its advance. Northern Pacific, which began ⅛ lower, recovered and made a fractional gain.

There was some covering for protection over the three-day holiday, beginning to-morrow.

The curb market was weak.

Americans and Canadian Pacific in the London market lacked stability.

There was little change in prices after the first fifteen minutes of depression. Union Pacific, Reading, Copper and St. Paul were up ¼. Steel advanced ⅜ to 52⅞. Smelter up ⅛. Other issues made slight gains and the tone in the last few minutes for the forenoon was firm.

Call money was loaning at 3 per cent.

Wheat—No. 2 red ....87¼@88
Corn—No. 2 ....64 @64½
Oats—No. 2 40

CHICAGO, July 3.—To-day's session in wheat was largely of an evening-up character over the three days of rest. The offerings were rather scant at the outset and prices were ¼@½c higher. Northwestern cars were smaller than a week ago. Cables were higher, although the crop prospects abroad and conditions surrounding the spring wheat crop in this country were favorable.

Corn was ¼@⅜c better.

Oats were unchanged to ⅛@¼c higher, mainly in sympathy with strength in corn and wheat.

Provisions were stronger with hogs.

MODERN MILLER CROP REPORT.

ST. LOUIS, July 3.—Winter wheat harvest is almost completed under favorable conditions. Nearly all wheat has been cut and is in the shock and thrashing is well under way. Soft winter wheat generally thrashing out well. Good yields and good quality are the rule. In some sections, however, returns from hard wheat belt are disappointing both as to yield and quality, the latter being irregular. A factor in the harvest situation is the scarcity of labor and this is causing delay.

No Place for Papers

THE OFFICE DESK OR TABLE IS certainly not a safe place for such valuable papers as stocks, bonds, insurance policies, mortgages, deeds, notes, etc., and yet many a so-called "good" business man has sacrificed some such paper upon this altar of carelessness.

If you have been a victim, you know the price of your carelessness. If you have not yet suffered such a loss, don't take any more chances, but come in and let us assign you a Box in our fire-proof and burglar-proof Vault. The cost is very nominal and the protection absolute.

A PROCLAMATION

By His Excellency John M. Slaton, Governor.

State of Georgia
Executive Department
Atlanta

Whereas a vacancy will soon exist in the office of United States Senator from Georgia for the term beginning March 4, 1913, and

Whereas said vacancy can be filled by popular vote only, the General Assembly having provided by Act for holding a special election to fill said vacancy,

Therefore, I, John M. Slaton, Governor of said State, by authority of Act approved July 1, 1913, do issue this my proclamation ordering a special election for United States Senator to fill the vacancy above described, to be held on the 15th day of July, 1913, under the laws of this State governing elections and the Act above referred to.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed this the 1st day of July, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirteen.

JOHN M. SLATON, Governor.

By the Governor:
PHILIP COOK, Secretary of State.
Attest: A. H. ULM,

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Feather-Eating Is Largely Caused By Crowded Runs

Soft-Shell Eggs Due to Various Things—Remember Value of Meat in Some Form.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Feather-eating is largely caused by crowded runs, with nothing to induce the fowls to exercise. They bolt their food and then stand around ready for mischief. The careless owner will usually let lice and mites get the start of him on the poultry; they lay eggs upon the stem of the feather around the vent. They irritate the parts and in their endeavors to rid themselves of them they get a taste of the sap, or at times, blood, in the stem of the new feathers; this causes them to continue their investigation. Other hens see what's going on and are soon helping in the removing of feathers, until it is soon a flock of feather eaters. The skin is bare and red, and sometimes the work is carried still further and they get to picking the raw flesh until it is raw and sore. The remedy is to feed lightly of a well-balanced ration and make them dig for every bit they get. Feed some fresh cut bone or raw meat, if possible. Clean them of all lice and mites and put them in the pink of condition, and there will be little excuse for such work. The leaders or worst ones at the business can be very materially checked by taking a sharp pocket knife and trimming the sharp point or curve of the upper madible or beak. They are then unable to pick so easily.

Many soft-shelled eggs are layed at this time of the year, due to various causes. Many of us are so eager for all the eggs that we can get that we push our hens for all they are worth, feeding rich mashes and adding egg producers at all times, most of which contain stimulants of various kinds. Heavy mash feeding tends to produce fat, especially on the two-year-old hens; over-fat hens often lay soft-shelled eggs.

Where your hens have this soft-egg tendency, let up on the soft feed to a certain extent at least and feed more of the dry grain with a good supply of green stuff, and do not forget to supply the oyster shell.

Bowel troubles of all kinds are usually caused by feeding sloppy or sour feed. Filthy quarters and exposure to sudden changes of the weather will affect the little ones very quickly. Often a lack of good clean grains, both in the shape of cracked grains and dry mashes. When the trouble has already appeared it is best handled by feeding well-cooked rice, dry bread or cracker crumbs soaked in hot milk. As soon as an improvement is noticed alternate the rice and bread and milk with other things. Keep the little ones warm when the weather changes to cold, and furnish shade for them in very hot times.

Remember the value of meat in some form for growing chicks, as well as to the laying hens. The cheapest shape to furnish it is in fresh cut green bone. Buy a good cutter, one that will do the work in a workman-like manner, fasten it up somewhere so that it will be perfectly solid, and it will be but little trouble to operate. You can usually get the bones and scraps fresh from the market. They will save them for you by paying them a little each time, amounting to a quarter or a half-cent per pound. This will make the youngsters a month old grow up like weeds. Start them on it gradually a little at a time and increase it as they become accustomed to it. It should be fed at least twice a week, and a little every day is better, if you can have it. In the absence of this, use the dried beef scraps, by all means, which can be obtained at all poultry supply houses at from three and a half to five cents per pound, according to the quality purchased. It is really safer to feed to young chicks than the fresh bone, but does not supply so much nitriment, of course. In feeding it to young chicks it can be sifted through a coarse seive and the coarser particles given to the laying hens.

Do not neglect the dust bath for the laying hens, especially at this season when the weather is getting hot and lice and mites are multiplying by the millions. See that the dust is perfectly dry and the addition of some sulphur will help to make the dose more effectual. The roost poles and nest boxes should be movable so that they can be taken out and cleaned and given a dose of kerosene, or a mixture of kerosene and naphtholine flakes, about a half a pound to a gallon of oil, to which add a pint of gasoline. This should be applied with a small-spouted oil can to the roost poles, boxes and sides of the house where the poles rest. Prepare your mixture just as you are going to use it. To kill head lice that cling to the head of both young and old chickens, mix a little oil of tar with vaseline and rub onto the head occasionally.

The laying contests being conducted in different sections of the country will prove the benefits of the trap nest. They are bringing out some wonderful results. Some years ago a hen that would lay 125 to 150 eggs per year was counted a great layer, but now they are getting 200 and 250-egg hens.

FOR SALE

ON PIEDMONT AVENUE, near school, on the car line, we have one of the best bungalows to be found in the city. Built by the present owner for a home out of the best material and workmanship. Never expected to sell it, but keep it for a home. The lot cost him $3,000 vacant. If vacant to-day could not be bought for $4,000.

This bungalow has seven rooms—fine shaded east front lot—all conveniences, one year old.

The owner's work has called him to Florida, and he must sell by August 1.

We have had this place listed at $7,000, and cheap at that—but the owner says he must sell—therefore, he is putting the price down to $6,250. This should sell at once.

See this at once. We can make terms.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage. It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

Silvey Building Work Rushed—John W. Grant to Build—Office Rent Going Up.

Some details of considerable interest to building managers and tenants were given out Thursday in regard to the lease on the Silvey Building and plans for improving the same.

The Silvey Building Company leased the nine-story basement building from the John Silvey estate for 20 years, agreeing to pay $8,000 a year for the first three years and $12,000 a year for the remaining 17 years. This makes an aggregate rental for the 20 years of $228,000, or an average of $11,400 a year. The Silvey Building Company expects to sub-lease to various firms and individuals, several leases already having been made. The return under the sub-lease arrangement will be about $40,000 a year, the basement and ground floor netting $17,000, and the solid floors above $3,000 each.

Improvements now being put in will cost the company $67,000. These consist of a thorough renovation and the installation of two elevators and mahogany similar to that used in the Third National Bank Building. The structure will be fireproof, and a feature of the improvements will be the placing of windows in the wall that faces Peachtree. This wall was built 20 years ago under party arrangement between the late George W. Collier and the late John Silvey.

The construction work is in charge of W. E. Mashburn, who expects to have the upper stories ready October 1. Part of the work is done, and the business offices of The Georgian and Hearst's Sunday American are located on the ground floor, with frontage on both Decatur Street and Edgewood Avenue. Other tenants will be Chess Lagomarsino, E. C. Johnson and R. M. McRaney. These have already signed up for space.

Interest in Mr. Grant's Plans.

Much interest centered Thursday in the announcement that John W. Grant will build on Pace's Ferry Road, a short distance west of Buckhead and a few rods east of such property owners as Robert F. Maddox, James L. Dickey, Jr., M. C. Kiser, J. N. Goddard, Morris Brandon and others. Mr. Grant's handsome town house on the east side of Peachtree between Pine and Currier Streets has been crowded and he will soon build a fine country residence. He has extensive acreage and will lend his efforts toward making a handsome country estate similar to the others in the vicinity. W. T. Downing, the well-known architect, is drawing some plans for Mr Grant and expects to have them out soon.

In this connection it was announced that a new roadway is to be cut through from Peachtree to a point fronting Mr. Grant's place. This will be known as Andrews Drive, being a continuation of the thoroughfare that now starts west of Colonel Walter P. Andrews' estate and joins Habersham Road in Peachtree Heights Park. Property owners will defray the expense of the road work. The plan has been laid before the County Commissioners and has their approval.

Pace's Ferry Road has attractions for still other residents. It is being talked that John D. Little will build close to the Grant place. He bought two years ago a large lot at the southeast corner of Habersham Road for about $25,000 and has since refused handsome profits and will fix no price to sell it.

Meeting of Renting Agents.

The matter of more signs than one on houses to be rented was discussed freely at a meeting in Charles P. Glover's office Wednesday afternoon. No action was taken, the desire of those present being to postpone the meeting until next Wednesday at the same hour.

Big Deals Pending.

Several large real estate deals are in contract stage and will be announced shortly. One of these has to do with an apartment house on the North Side, at a nice figure.

Change In Offices.

Galloway & Smith, real estate agents, have moved their office from 516 to 213 Empire Building, where they have acquired more floor space. The Lockridge-McClain-Moon Company are now located at 4 North Pryor Street, having moved from the old Y. M. C. A. Building on Auburn Avenue.

J. Frank Meador to Build.

J. Frank Meador will begin soon the erection of an attractive residence on the West Fourteenth Street lot which he purchased Saturday, according to information given out Thursday. The site is 50 by 175 feet, on the north side of the street, half a block from West Peachtree. The lot was bought from Lavender Ray for $3,000 cash, or at the rate of $60 a front foot. A few years ago lots on West Fourteenth, between the Peachtrees, could be bought for $20 a foot, while the ordinary time price to-day is $70 and $80 for elevated parcels.

Skyscraper Rentals Increase.

With the expiration of leases on offices in certain skyscrapers this fall new rates will prevail. This is made necessary, declare the office building men, by the increased cost scale in other lines essential to the skyscraper business. Recently the manager of a leading office building gave notice of an increase to the New York home office of a local branch. The manager replied by letter that ordinarily his concern was opposed to paying more rent this year, but that he would not contest the raise in Atlanta. This was taken by the skyscraper man to indicate that this firm enjoyed a good measure of prosperity in this section.

All tenants in office buildings need not be alarmed, however. Not all the buildings will raise rents, and where an increase is contemplated it concerns the lease which is about up, and not the one that has some time to run.

The Fundamental Pinciple Behind the New Currency Act

The fundamental principles of the Owen-Glass bill are, first, that the chief function of the banks of the country should be to foster commerce, trade and agriculture, and not speculation or underwriting syndicates; and, second, that the right to issue money is inherent in the Government, and that any association of private bankers vested with the power to issue money for general circulation, MUST be under the supervision and control of the Government; and, third, that all profits from such banking privileges in excess of 5 per cent return upon the capital furnished by the private bankers to such central association shall be paid over to the Government.

Under the new currency act, the entire operation of the national banks and the issue of "emergency currency" of the reserve banks shall be under the control of a Federal Board of seven members sitting at Washington. The Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture and the Comptroller of the Currency will be three of the members. The other four members, one of whom must be an experienced banker, are to be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Members of the Board are to serve for eight years, unless removed by the President.

This Federal Reserve Board will have complete veto power over, though not complete power to initiate action by, twelve Federal reserve banks distributed geographically according to the needs and volume of banking business in all parts of the country.

Every national bank shall be compelled to subscribe to the extent of 10 per cent of its own stock to the capital stock of the Federal Reserve Bank of its own district. Every bank shall be required, also, to keep at least 5 per cent of its reserve cash in the Federal Reserve Bank of its district.

None of the twelve Federal Reserve Banks shall accept deposits from individuals, but each shall represent all the banks in its district having Federal charters and shall also be Government depositories. In times of financial stringency any bank may take to the Federal Reserve Bank of its district merchants' acceptances or short-term notes ARISING OUT OF COMMERCIAL TRANSACTIONS for rediscount and obtain from the Federal Reserve Bank United States Treasury notes (currency) for 75 per cent of the face value of such notes.

The notes so rediscounted are to be limited solely to commercial bills payable within from forty-five to a hundred and twenty days, and no notes based upon stock or bond transactions shall be discounted. The notes so discounted will be backed by the entire assets of the bank pledging the notes, by the credit of the individual borrowers, and by the assets of the Federal Reserve Bank. The amount of paper which any individual bank may rediscount is limited to one-half its paid-in capital.

Each Federal Reserve Bank will be required at all times to keep on hand in actual gold 33 per cent of the aggregate amount of the commercial notes it rediscounts for the banks of its district.

The Federal Reserve Banks will obtain United States notes, or "emergency currency," to pay for these merchants' notes from the Federal Reserve Board at Washington at such rates of interest as the Federal Board shall fix from time to time.

The Owens-Glass bill in its present form does not provide specifically enough that the rate of discount shall be such that the "emergency currency" so issued shall automatically return to the Treasury and be canceled when the "emergency" is past. This emergency is usually a temporary panic, or the annual crop-moving in the autumn of every year when at least three hundred million dollars in currency is needed to pay the American farmer for his harvest.

The profits of the twelve district reserve banks will go to the national banks which contribute to its stock and reserve funds to the extent of a 5 per cent cumulative dividend annually, and no further. All profits in excess of 5 per cent will be used, first, to create a surplus fund equal to 20 per cent of the capital stock of each reserve bank, and after such reserve fund amounts to 20 per cent of such capital, all further profits go to the Government. Thereby all temptation to directors of the reserve banks to undertake undue risks or embark on unsafe financiering is removed.

The national banks who are stockholders elect six, and the President of the United States appoints three, of the nine directors of each district reserve bank. Three of the six directors elected by the banks must be men "fairly representative of the business and commercial interests of the district and not directors of any bank."

:: A Sermon for Many ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WHEN the long, hard day has vanished and you seek your waiting bed,
Try to live the dead hours over ere the pillow soothes your head.
Try to find some explanation for each thoughtless thing you've done;
Try to make some reparation for the trouble you've begun
After all the petty gossip that you scattered through the day,
Think of how you knocked your neighbor, going calmly on his way.
Drag the unkind slings and arrows down from Memory's dusty shelf—
Then stand up before the mirror and begin to knock yourself.

Do not stand there smug and smirking, do not smooth your towsled hair!
Shake your fist at your reflection! Give yourself an icy glare!
Don't resolve that you are handsome when you ought to know you're not;
Rather tell the faithful mirror that it flatters you a lot.
Make wry faces by the dozen; try a cold, contemptuous sneer—
Such as you have tried on others. Give yourself a mocking leer.
Then the mirror will remind you, as all honest mirrors do,
That you're not one man in thousands—that you're only LITTLE YOU!

:: How to Deal With a Girl's Love Fancies ::

To Oppose Cupid's Call Is Always Fatal, as Experience Has Shown, Says Dorothy Dix

By DOROTHY DIX.

A FATHER, who has a pretty, bright 18-year-old daughter for whom he has made many sacrifices to give advantages, is much distressed because she imagines herself in love with a callow youth of the same age, and he wants to know if there is any way in which he can keep her from wrecking her life by marrying this boy.

Surely. Here are a few simple home remedies for breaking up undesirable matches, that are guaranteed to work if applied with tact and discretion.

First, drop all opposition to the suitor. Quit abusing him. Just remember that romance thrives on difficulties, and that when you put a young man in the position of a poor, persecuted martyr, you simply crown him with a halo in the girl's sight. Also you make her his champion, and to back up her arguments in his favor she shuts her eyes to all of his faults, and not only magnifies his virtues but invents new ones for him.

Every novel represents the heroine as defying her parents, and her friends, and the general public, and being true to a noble, but misunderstood, young man, and as having her judgment justified by his turning out to be a duke in disguise, or getting elected President of the United States.

Cupid At His Worst.

When you oppose a silly young girl in a love affair, and read the riot act to her, you give her a chance to visualize herself in that poetic role, and it makes her do her clothes up in a bundle and sneak out of the house, and elope with the man that you have applied every opprobrious epithet to of which you could think. It is a matter of common knowledge that people never marry the nice, suitable individuals their families have picked out for them, and that nothing blights love's young dream like everybody smiling a blessing on it.

Yet in the face of this advanced information about how Cupid acts, parents persist in precipi-

DOROTHY DIX.

tating bad matches by frankly opposing them.

Therefore, instead of forbidding Sam the house, invite him in. Have him around early and often, and give Mamie an overdose of his society, and before you know it they will have quarreled. And this nice hot weather, when nerves and temper are on edge, is a psychological moment in which to try the experiment. Ninety-nine in the shade is not propitious for growing sentiment. And I should casually remark to Mamie that, of course, if she was so fond of Sam and found her highest happiness in his company that there was no use in wasting any money on any other pleasure for her. Such as going off for a summer trip, for instance.

Don't abuse Sam. Don't discourse upon his weakness or his faults. Make fun of them. Point out his little eccentricities of manner or speech, and if you can enlist the assistance of some friend in this, all the better. A young girl can stand anything but ridicule.

She will defy you and marry a drunkard, or a gambler, or a man with a hectic past, but she will quail before the knowledge that people laugh at a man for eating peas with his knife, or using bad grammar, or being a rube.

Another effective way of breaking off an undesirable match is to send the girl away on a trip, or to make a good long visit. Propinquity is responsible for more marriages than anything else. At the love time of life a girl is sure to imagine that she cherishes a deathless passion for any good-looking man who happens to be in sight, but get her away from him and his spell is broken.

Cured Girl's Infatuation.

She sees other men. She gets a new standard of comparison, with the almost invariable result that in six months she wouldn't look at the man that she thought she was so crazy to marry. It's a case of counter irritation, and it works out as well in love as it does in medicine.

Still another way to deal with the situation is to quit theorizing and preaching about it, and give the girl a living picture of the way the marriage she proposes to make would work out in real life. I once knew a wise father who followed this course.

His daughter, a dainty, cultivated girl, who had been reared amidst the most refined surroundings, thought she was in love with a handsome young man who was himself coarse and vulgar, and came from a family far below the girl's in social status.

After every argument had been used in vain to prevail upon the girl not to make a match that was bound to bring her disillusion and unhappiness, her father said to her: "I want you to go and spend a month with this young man's family, who will be your family if you marry him. You will bear his name, his position will be yours, and he will have a right to expect you to live as his mother and sisters do."

Corned Beef and Cabbage.

Well, the girl went. She associated with his frowsy mother and sisters, and was bored to death by their ignorant conversation. She saw his father and his brothers sitting around the house in their stocking feet, and with their coats and collars off, smoking pipes.

She ate corned beef and cabbage dinners. She participated in parties where they rushed the growler, and sang rag-time to a pianola accompaniment, and at the end of a week she came back home cured.

Still another father that I knew kept his daughter from marrying a drunkard by taking her where she saw him in his cups. It was one thing to have the young man appear before her pale, poetic, wistful eyed, repentant, telling her that she could save him by marrying him, and another to behold him maudlin, nauseated, a thing of disgust that made her turn from him with loathing.

Oh, there are many ways to break up an undesirable match—absence, ridicule, the substitution of a new toy for the old, bumping a girl up against the reality, even dropping a sly hint to the man that he's throwing himself away on the girl, and that Mamie is delicate, or has ways, or that she has a temper concealed about her angelic person, or that she's extravagant. There are forty-seven different varieties of ways of turning the trick, and all of them work except forbidding the banns. That merely eggs on the wedding.

Education Will Banish Wars

A Very Remarkable Incident on the Bloody Field of Gettysburg Proves This Belief. Conscientious Soldiers Will Bring Peace.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

ONE of the most significant revelations of the mind of the soldier in battle that I have ever seen is in a letter from a Confederate soldier to General J. L. Chamberlain, which the general quotes in his dramatic story of the awful battle of Gettysburg in HEARST'S MAGAZINE for June.

The letter is too long to be inserted in this brief article, but you should read it in full, and in connection with the vivid picture of the scenes of that heroic contest (the mightiest battle ever fought on American soil), in order to understand its significance.

Impossible to Pull Trigger.

The incident to which the letter refers occurred during the struggle among the rocks for the possession of the famous "Round Tops." The writer, who was a member of an Alabama regiment, had placed himself in a secure position between two rocks, where, unseen himself, he had a clear view of the nearby Federal lines, and particularly of General Chamberlain, whose rank he recognized by his uniform.

He knew the importance of picking off officers, and he drew a bead on General Chamberlain, resting his gun on a rock to get a sure aim. But, as he was about to pull the trigger, a sudden qualm arrested him, and he did not fire. Then he grew ashamed of his weakness and drew a bead a second time.

"I had you, perfectly certain. But that same queer something shut right down on me. I couldn't pull the trigger, and I gave it up—that is, your life."

There are plenty of stories of the blind madness and of the unnatural calm that, at different times, possess the soldier in battle, making him, in one case, shoot and thrust and strike almost without volition, and, in the other case, perform similar acts with the cold, unsympathetic precision of a machine; but it is rare, outside of fiction, to hear of an incident like this, where conscience asserts its rights.

His Own Better Nature.

No doubt some persons would see, in the resistless impulse that restrained that shot, a mystic influence which, for some providential purpose, paralyzed the finger that was curved to press the trigger; but such ideas belong to the days when the Olympian gods were believed to guide the spear of Achilles or to throw a mantle of invisibility about Hector.

We should rather ascribe the incident to the personality of the soldier, whose hand was arrested by the expostulation of his own better nature. Viewed from that point, it becomes significant of the growth of moral sentiment, which, in the end, will banish war altogether. Perhaps that merciful Confederate at Gettysburg was, in a sense, faithless to his cause. Who can say that, if the shot had been fired, the result of the struggle might not have been different? The fall of a leader has lost many a battle. Very likely if that act of mercy had been witnessed by the commander of the Alabama regiment he would have cut the conscientious soldier down with his sword as a recreant from duty!

Yet the man who spared the general's life afterward declared that he was glad that he could not press the trigger, and every generous mind approves his act and his sentiment.

In former days, when most battles were fought hand to hand and foot to foot, the FUROR CERTAMINIS (fury of the fight) had no such interruptions. Moral sentiment counted for little on the battlefield. There was no time for it to assert itself, even if it existed then as widely as it exists to-day. The dreadful scenes of slaughter that attended Caesar's campaigns in Gaul, and the sacks of cities in the Thirty Years' War, would be impossible now among civilized people.

Education Will Bring Peace.

When a modern soldier, secure in his position, sights along his gun at an enemy, his mind is in a state for reflection upon the nature and consequences of his intended act of slaughter, and the mere fact that he can strike at a distance and unseen may restrain him, as it did in this case, from striking at all. He balances his public duty against his personal conscience, and unless the former overwhelmingly appeals to him, the latter may prevail. If he can see a chance for mercy he will exercise it.

All this shows plainly the direction which the advocates of universal peace (and we are all such advocates, though we may differ in our ideas about methods) should take in order to bring about the result they aim at. It is the direction of EDUCATION. A gun in the hands of a conscientious soldier is a moral force for peace, and so is a powerful battle fleet in the hands of a great, civilized nation.

The Treaty of Tien-Tsin

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE Treaty of Tien--tsin, concluded 55 years ago, will probably loom large in the history of the time to come, very much larger than it does to-day.

It was about the year 1517 (the year of the great Reformation) that China began to be vaguely known to Europeans. The Jesuits appeared among the Celestials about 1525, and in 1790 the English figure among the "Foreign Devils." The Englishman is nothing if not commercial, and, thinking that he saw a good thing in opium, began a quarrel with the Chinaman over that drug that lasted for years; of which, so far as the honor of England is concerned, the least said the better.

In 1857 took place the war between England and China, which ended with the total destruction of the Chinese fleet by Commodores Elliot and Seymour, and the perpetual establishment of John Bull in the island of Hongkong.

The Treaty of Tien-tsin, which clinched the war of 1857, created a new departure on the part of the quaint and ancient people of the Flowery Kingdom. Among its provisions were: The establishment of ambassadorships at both courts, a larger freedom of trade, the toleration of the Christian religion, a revision of the tariff, and the guarantee that the term "barbarian" should no longer be applied to Europeans.

With this Treaty of Tien-tsin begins Modern China. But a little more than half a century has elapsed—an insignificant period in the evolution of a great nation's life—and yet we already have some pretty strong intimations of the possibilities of the future. Beyond a doubt it behooves the white man the world over to prepare for those possibilities, if we may not say probabilities.

The yellow men number at least 500,000,000. From the Japanese we learn what 50,000,000 of yellow men are able to do; and from that we are in a position to guess with a fair degree of accuracy what 500,000,000 of yellow men can do if fully prepared. With thousands of miles of Pacific seacoast, does it not behoove the United States to look well to the ways and means of its supremacy on the great Western waters?

'I Will Send Reckless Auto Drivers to the Stockade,' Says Recorder Broyles

"Atlanta automobilists show a wanton disregard for the lives of other people. The drivers have become so lawless and careless of life that this court in the future may be relied upon to give the violators the extreme penalty. Whether or not the offending motorist is a member of a wealthy family, he will be sent to the stockade if it is proved that he is guilty of the brutal disregard for human life which has been evident on the streets of Atlanta."—Recorder Nash Broyles.

Suffragists Denied Use of the Senate Chamber

SAVIOR CITED AS ANTI IN REFUSAL

Stark Recalls Absence of Women Among Disciples Before Moving Resolution Be Tabled.

The Georgia Woman Suffrage Association ran afoul of the Georgia Senate Thursday, when Senator W. W. Stark caused to be laid on the table a request that the suffragists have the use of the Senate chamber two days during their State convention.

When asked by Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, the president, and Mrs. Amelia R. Woodall, the treasurer of the suffragists, why he opposed them, Senator Stark replied: "Because Jesus Christ did not call a woman for one of His twelve disciples, and because He was not a suffragist."

The suffrage question was injected into the Senate proceedings by Senator G. M. Hule, of the Thirty-fifth, who introduced by request a resolution that the use of the Senate chamber be extended to Mrs. S. E. Cunningham, Mrs. William H. Felton, Miss H. Augusta Howard, Mrs. J. J. Ansley, Mrs. J. H. Sibley "and several gentlemen, all citizens of Georgia," at 8 p. m., July 9 and 10, for the purpose of delivering addresses on "The Scope of the Elective Franchise."

Stark Balks at "Enlighten."

Deputy Clerk Hansell had barely finished reading the resolution when Senator Stark arose and asked:

"Mr. President, do these ladies and gentlemen intend to enlighten the Senate on the question of woman's suffrage?"

"In so far as I understand it, that is the purpose of the meeting," President J. Randolph Anderson replied.

"Then I move to lay that resolution on the table," said Mr. Stark.

Upon a rising vote, the resolution was tabled, 20 to 7.

Mrs. McLendon said the State woman's suffrage convention desired the use of the Senate chamber, because of its excellent acoustics, and that it heretofore had been freely extended them. She said she believed they would bet it this time, too, because Senator J. N. Watts, of the Eleventh, had promised to call for reconsideration of the resolution next Monday.

Invites Farm Finance Expert.

Speakers on the two evenings for which the Senate chamber is wanted will be the women mentioned in the resolution and the following men: Leonard Grossman, T. J. Skellie, the Rev. George Beattie, of Atlanta, and Martin V. Calvin, of Decatur.

At the earnest request of Senator John T. Allen, of the Twentieth, who read a letter from President J. C. McAuliffe, of Milledgeville, president of the Interstate Corn Growers' Association, the Senate took from the table and concurred in a House resolution inviting Herbert Myrick, of Springfield, Mass., to address the House and Senate at noon July 15, on the subject of co-operative rural finance in the cotton belt. Mr. Myrick will return from a study of co-operative farm credits in Europe in a few days, and will immediately start a Southern tour.

A written invitation was received to the July 4 celebration at St. Phillips Cathedral at 10:30 o'clock o. m. It was not accepted, because most of the Senators will be out of the city.

Weather Man Sees No Prospects Now Of Cooler Weather

"Continued warm, with thundershowers late Friday afternoon," is the forecast handed out by C. F. Von-Herrmann, of the United States Weather Bureau.

"There is no immediate prospect of much cooler weather. The temperature will hang around between 88 and 90 for quite awhile," was the answer given by the seer when asked when the hot spell would end.

Rain was general over Texas Thursday, and cool weather prevailed in the Rocky Mountain region, but Mr. Von-Herrmann said there was no chance for the welcome effects of either to reach Atlanta.

The thermometer registered 80 at 9 o'clock Thursday morning, 84 at 10 o'clock and 86 at 11 o'clock. At noon the mercury had jumped to 88. The Weather Bureau predicted it would not go above 90.

Say 'Shucks,' Not 'Damn,' Lanford's Order to His Men

The word "damn" and similar strenuous soul-relieving expressions have been barred from the Atlanta detective department.

Chief Newport Lanford issued an order Thursday morning, in which he deplored the tendency of his detectives to express themselves in "cuss" words. He impressed upon them that hereafter, when they want to use a forceful word, it must be "shucks" or something like that. The word "damn" is gone forever from the third floor of the police barracks.

Chief Lanford's order came after he had heard two detectives using naughty words in conversation Thursday morning, in the detective office.

Killing Heat Wave Continues in North

PITTSBURG, PA., July 3.—Nine deaths and two prostrations were caused in Pittsburg and vicinity yesterday by the heat wave. To-day sees but little relief.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Another torrid wave was in Chicago to-day. The temperature was expected to reach 95 degrees this afternoon.

ACQUITTAL IN CHURCH QUIZ EXPECTED

Macon Christian Elders to Report Verdict in Charlton-Lester Case Sunday.

MACON, July 3.—The elders of the First Christian Church will report to the congregation Sunday morning on their investigation into the alleged visit made by Professor Frank M. Charlton, the choir leader, to the home of Mrs. Marvin Lee Lester, secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, on the night of June 5.

It is very probable that the elders will declare to the church that their inquiry has failed to prove the charge against the two prominent members of the congregation who are now under suspicion. It will be left to the congregation whether there shall be an open trial.

The elders last night visited the home of Mrs. Lester on Carling Avenue to determine if Mrs. J. W Jenkins could have recognized Professor Charlton from the porch of her home across the street from the Lester residence.

One of the elders entered the alley and stood by the side gate of the Lester back yard and other elders got on the porch of the Jenkins home and endeavored to distinguish him. They were unsuccessful, they say, and for that reason they are dubious as to Mrs. Jenkins' and Mrs. Alma Armstrong's statement that they positively recognized Professor Charlton.

The exclusive publication in Macon yesterday by The Georgian of the fact of the investigation being in progress caused a genuine sensation.

"Now that the affair has gotten in the papers," says Rev. Leroy M. Anderson, the pastor, "I am more than ever determined that there shall be a thorough investigation."

The elders have several more persons to examine to-night.

Pony Contestants To Be Guests on 4th Of Hearst Papers

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American pony contests, their parents, their relatives and their friends, are invited to celebrate the "Fourth" at Grant Park as the guests of the Hearst papers.

Promptly at 10 o'clock the parade will start from the Alabama Street offices of The Georgian and American, with nine of the ponies in line. Some of these will be hitched to buggies, and some will be saddled.

When the parade arrives at the park, all the contestants will have turns riding or driving the ponies. There will be lemonade and refreshments for all. Through the courtesy of Dan Carey, Superintendent of Parks, everything has been arranged for giving the children the full run of the great public playground.

For the information of those who view the parade to-morrow, the buggies used are not the ones to be given away as prizes, but are loaned through the courtesy of E. D. Crane & Co.

Humans to Lose Teeth, Hair, Eyes, Doctor Predicts

A toothless, hairless, eyeless race!

That is the ultimate fate of humanity if the present rate of deterioration keeps up, according to Dr. L. C. Allen, chairman of the Committee on Hygiene and Sanitation of the Georgia House of Representatives.

"The human race is fast losing its teeth," declared Dr. Allen before the Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association Wednesday afternoon. "The child of to-day has not nearly as good teeth as its grandfather had, and the time will undoubtedly come when there won't be a human tooth on earth, except in the museums. Mankind is also losing its sight, and is becoming a race of baldheads.

"The loss of teeth, eyes and hair is due to the refusal of modern man to obey the simple rules of hygiene and sanitation."

Militants Freed by Hunger Strike Jailed

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 3.—The Government to-day rearrasted many militant suffragettes who were out of jail on tickets of leave owing to illness brought on by hunger strike.

Before noon Miss Annie Kenney, organizer of the Women's Social and Political Union; Miss Rachel Barrett, assistant editor of The Suffragette, and Miss Harriet Rebecca Kerr, manager of the headquarters of the Women's Social and Political Union, had been rearrested under the "cat and mouse bill" and were remanded in Holloway jail.

Stabbed Boy Dies; Chum Exonerated

John Edgar, 16 years old, of 81 Kennedy Street, who was accidentally stabbed by his chum, Frank Barton, Wednesday afternoon, died at Grady Hospital Thursday morning.

Eyewitnesses of the stabbing, including the victim, said it was an accident. Barton was demonstrating to Edgar the proper method of using a knife in a fight and in excitedly swinging the blade in the air, he cut his comrade.

The Burton boy was not arrested.

10-inch Rain in Texas Hundreds Homeless

FORT SMITH, ARK., July 3.—More than ten inches of rain has fallen and a mile and a half of the Frisco Railway tracks has been washed away near Greenville, Texas, according to a bulletin at the Frisco headquarters here this morning.

Hundreds are homeless and the city light and water plants are out of commission. It still is raining.

SECRET WAR ON TRUSTS BARED

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Henry B. Martin, secretary of the Anti-Trust League, testifying before the Senate Lobby Investigation Committee, today declared the league is concentrating its efforts in a fight against the Armor Plate Trust. The trust, he asserted, is robbing the people of millions of dollars each year.

Other activities of the league have been to prod the Government to activity against the Elevator, Coal, Transportation and other alleged trusts. He could not tell how much the fight had cost himself and his associates.

Martin said that A. B. Dickey, of the Carnegie Coal Company, Vice President Johnson, of the Bethlehem Steel Company, and an agent of the Midvale Steel Company formed a lobby in Washington last March to induce the Secretary of the Navy to sign contracts for armor plate at figures much higher than its value.

League Members Persecuted.

Martin declined to produce matter showing the methods employed by the league in influencing legislation. He especially did not want to make public a complete list of the members.

"We are engaged in a very serious fight against trusts," said Martin,

DESTITUTE MOTHER'S CHILD IS KEPT ALIVE BY FREE PURE MILK

This baby is one of many in need of pure food in hot months.

Here's the little miss who was given the first free milk from the Mothers' Congress fund. She is Dora May Whitten.

Mothers' Congress Inaugurates Noble Work in Home Where Direst Poverty Obtains.

Little Dora May Whitten, 8 months old, 69 Gartrell Street, is the first baby to receive milk from the Atlanta Mothers' Congress, whose slogan is, "If a baby is worth having, it is worth saving."

The good work of the Mothers' Congress is just being started in Atlanta, and a strong campaign is being waged to obtain funds to supply pure milk for infants whose parents are too poor to purchase it.

Few realize conditions in Atlanta and the number of poor little babies who cry all through the hot months for pure, sweet milk.

Mrs. Whitten, mother of Dora May, has lain in bed for the past four weeks. Two weeks ago she was operated on for appendicitis. She was married to Will Whitten seven years ago when she was only 12 years of age. A series of separations and reunions followed. Whitten never has seen his little girl, and Mrs. Whitten says he never shall, for she says, "He is a drunkard."

So far this summer little Dora May only has been half cared for, not that willing hands would not hold the baby, but it takes money to buy milk, and this is what the baby lacked.

It is planned by the Mothers' Congress to establish milk-distributing stations in various parts of the city, where the need is most urgent.

All persons willing to help in this noble work should send either milk or money to Mrs. John Rowlett, 186 East Pine Street.

General Sickles at Gettysburg Refuses Harry Thaw's $1,000

GETTYSBURG, PA., July 3.—General Daniel E. Sickles, here attending the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg, to-day turned down the offer of financial aid made by Harry Thaw. Thaw sent ten $100 bills in a letter to Colonel G. M. Schoonmaker, chairman of the celebration committee, to be turned over to General Sickles because of the latter's financial difficulties.

Mrs. Longstreet, widow of the famous Confederate general, who is here, has offered to raise money from Confederate veterans to aid General Sickles, but no one has volunteered to start the subscription.

DRAGNET OUT FOR AUTOIST WHO HIT CHILD

Injury of Little Eva Kilpatrick by Motorist Who Fled Scene Stirs Beavers.

War was declared Thursday by Chief of Police Beavers upon automobile speed fiends as the result of the conduct of the automobilist who ran down 14-year-old Eva Kilpatrick on Mills Street Wednesday and then raced on without stopping to learn the extent of the girl's injuries.

The car was going at express speed and was upon the terrified girl before she could make any effort to escape. She was hurled from the middle of the street to the sidewalk, where she lay unconscious. The large touring car dashed on and turned into Williams Street before its number could be taken.

The police dragnet is out for the driver of the car. Special men have been detailed to learn his identity. All of the police have instructions to assist in the crusade which has been started against reckless driving.

Mothers Aid Police.

Chief Beavers and Recorder Nash Broyles in strongest terms Thursday denounced the speed mania and proclaimed war upon the violators of the traffic ordinances. They were joined in their campaign by the mothers living in the vicinity of the Kilpatrick girl's home at 174 Hamilton Street. They have organized themselves into a vigilance committee to take the numbers of the cars that flash by and report them to the police.

Recorder Broyles was particularly bitter in his denunciation of the speeders who daily are defying the ordinances and endangering the lives of pedestrians. He would not discuss the Kilpatrick case, as the automobilist might be brought before him for trial, but he said, in discussing reckless driving generally:

"These speed maniacs who are brought before me are going to get the limit. This extremely dangerous practice must stop. If there is any way to lessen the number of victims of this speeding Juggernaut, which takes a frightful toll annually in all of the cities of the country, this court is going to support that plan with all its might.

"Atlanta automobilists show a wanton disregard for the lives of other people. Because prosecutions in the past have not been so frequent or so severe as they might, they have taken a ruthless license that daily puts lives in peril. The wonder is that more accidents are not reported.

Stockade Term Threatened.

"The drivers have become so lawless and careless of life that this court in the future may be relied upon to give the violators the limit. Whether or not the offending motorist is a member of a wealthy family, he will be sent to the stockade if it is proved that he is guilty of the brutal disregard for human life which has been evident on the streets of Atlanta since the summer season began this year."

Chief Beavers branded as an inhuman outrage the action of the automobilist who ran down the Kilpatrick girl.

"It is difficult," said the Chief, "to conceive of the inhumanity that will permit a man, after he has been the cause of an accident that has maimed or possibly killed an innocent little girl, to speed on out of sight, never even looking back nor returning to extend what aid he can.

"I have detailed men especially on this case. We are trying to learn the identity of the driver. The only woman who saw the accident tells us that the car was going so fast she could not be certain whether the driver was a white man or a negro."

Mrs. A. J. Heyback, of 48 Mills Street, in front of whose home the accident occurred, was greatly aroused Thursday over the narrow escape from death of the Kilpatrick girl. Mrs. Heyback has six children of her own, two of whom are small, one a girl of 4 years and the other a boy of 2.

"We mothers in this neighborhood have declared war on the speeders," she said. "We have formed ourselves into a vigilance committee to get the numbers of all the automobilists who race through this part of town."

Mrs. Heyback saw the auto which struck the Kilpatrick girl and knocked her from the middle of the street to the sidewalk, but she did not see the accident itself.

"The car was coming so fast," said Mrs. Heyback, "that it just seemed to appear from nowhere and then it dashed into Williams Street and disappeared from sight."

The only eye witness of the accident was a woman living on Mills Street, near Williams. Most of the residents in the neighborhood had gone inside for dinner. This woman was sitting on the porch of her home when she heard the whirring of the automobile. An instant later she saw it dash down the street, striking the Kilpatrick girl.

The car did not slacken its speed in the least, but raced on in a cloud of dust and turned into Williams Street, where it was lost to view. The horrified woman did not stop to go around by the gate, but vaulted the fence and picked up the limp form and carried it into her house, from where it was removed to Grady Hospital and then home.

The girl's left shoulder is dislocated and her ankle is thought to be broken.

"I was going to visit my brother, Homer, who lives on River Street," said Eva, in telling of the accident. "I got on the Luckie Street car two blocks from our house. I got off the car at Mills Street t trasfer to the River Street line.

"I started across the street, when all of a sudden—I woke up in Grady Hospital.

"No I did not even see the automobile, and never heard a horn or any sound of warning.

Says Driver Was White.

Mrs. Kilpatrick, who had learned all the particulars from eye witnesses to the accident, state that the automobile came down Mills Street at a terrific rate of speed, driven by a white man. He never sounded a warning, she declared.

"The driver of the touring car after he had hit Eva," said Mrs. Kilpatrick, "put on even more speed and without looking around made his escape.

"I think this is one of the most cowardly and outrageous deeds ever committed in a civilized community. If the accident could have been avoided or was accidental I would feel diffrent about it. But when the chauffeur hit Eva he ran like a coward, and this shows that the deed was deliberate and that people in automobiles care nothing for the lives of people.

"Eva has not been to town but a few times in her life, for I do not allow any of my children to run the streets. She is not deaf, and had she been given any warning I am sure she could have got out of the way of the machine, even at the high speed it was traveling.

"We are poor people and though I don't for a minute begrudge the doctor bills for Eva, it does seem a shame to have my little daughter crippled for life and not to even know who is responsible for it."

The girl's father, W. R. Kilpatrick, is employed at the Atlanta Steel Hoop Mill.

The Kilpatricks have six children, only one of whom is working. Neighbors of the Kilpatricks are greatly aroused and some of them have expressed the opinion that pedestrians should take the law into their own hands.

FACE DISFIGURED WITH PIMPLES

Ruffin, N. C.—"My face became full of pimples and blackheads, and would itch, burn and smart. The skin was rough and red. I was really ashamed of my face. My arms and back were affected almost as badly. The pimples would fester and there would come a dry scab on top. The trouble caused my face to be disfigured badly and the itching would bother me so I could not sleep well nights, especially during warm weather.

"I used all kinds of ointments, cold creams, powders, soaps, medicine and all kinds of different remedies for my face and arms, but from none did I get any benefit. The trouble lasted me three long years without anything doing me any good until a friend told me about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and then I decided to try them. After the first application I could see some improvement. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment two weeks I did not look like the same person; most of the pimples had disappeared, and at the end of four weeks I was completely cured." (Signed) Miss Mamie Mitchell, Jan. 9, 1913.

It costs nothing to learn how pure, sweet, effective and satisfying Cuticura Soap and Ointment are in the treatment of poor complexion, red, rough hands, itching scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, because you need not buy them until you try them. Cuticura Soap 25c and Cuticura Ointment 50c are sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

ARMOR TRUST'S LOBBY PLOT IS REVEALED

"and it is dangerous to the business life of any man to be known to be a member of this organization. We held one open convention to our sorrow. Many of the members were injured by the truste when their relationship with the league was discovered."

Martin admitted that contributions of as high as $1,000 were made to the league. He refused to give the names of the contributors. He said he has known David Lamar five years and that Lamar is a member of the Anti-Trust League, although he is a member only because he is in sympathy with the league's purposes.

Lamar Gave Aid.

"He did more than any one man to point out vicious features of the Taft-Wickersham railroad bill which, if passed in its original form, would have given immunity to the railroad trust," said Martin.

Martin said he asked Lamar to give him a draft of a resolution for another investigation of the Steel Trust.

"You asked Lamar to prepare the resolution?" demanded Senator Cummins.

"Yes," replied Martin.

Martin did not remember where Lamar gave him the Steel Trust resolution. He did not recall how long he had the resolution in his possession before it was introduced.

"Did you tell the members to whom you gave the resolution that Lamar drew it?" demanded Senator Cummins.

"No," replied Martin.

Martin accused Chairman Lovett, of the Union Pacific board of directors, and Paul D. Cravath of lobbying at the Department of Justice by "trying to influence Attorney General McReynolds against doing what was in the interest of the public."

Martin admitted that David Lamar, "the wolf" of Wall Street, prepared the resolution fatheerd by Representative Stanley in the House for the investigation of the Steel Trust.

ASSEMBLY QUITS TO CELEBRATE 4TH OF JULY

Legislature Reconvenes Monday, Thirty-eight Days Left After Adjournment.

The Legislature adjourned in both branches to-day until July 7, the House to reassemble at 11 a. m. and the Senate at noon.

When the General Assembly meets Monday it will have before it exactly 38 days of life, as it will have used up twelve days by that time. It is limited to a total sitting of 50 days.

Today's proceedings in both branches were more or less perfunctory, and adjournment was effected in each before 11 o'clock.

The committees, however, are well ahead of the Senate and the House, and both will have full opportunity to catch up all time that will be lost between now and Monday, after the Assembly reconvenes. The Houses can not adjourn for more than three days at a time, except by joint resolution, passed by two-thirds of each.

An echo of the successful fight to unseat Representatives McArthur, of Wheeler, and Browning, of Bleckley, was heard to-day in a resolution proposed by Mr. Wheatley, of Sumter.

Powers of Delegates Asked.

This resolution, which went to the Committee on Rules, provides that both McArthur and Browning shall have seats in the House, with the right to consult and be consulted on local matters, but shall not be permitted to vote or serve on committees.

If this resolution goes through, Messrs. McArthur and Browning will occupy positions in the Georgia Legislature somewhat similar to that occupied by territorial delegates on the floor of the House of Representatives in the National Congress.

The resolution will have many supporters, provided it comes from the Committee on Rules with a favorable report, but a strong fight unquestionably will be made against its adoption, in any event.

New Enrollment Committee.

The House, by a special rule, created a new Committee on Enrollment to-day, as it already is evident that the crush of matter is growing far too heavy for the present Committee on Engrossing to handle.

Virtually the entire Legislative membership either left Atlanta this afternoon or will leave to-night, many of them going to various Fourth of July celebrations throughout the State.

The recent recommendatoin of Judge Roan that the office of public defender be instituted in Georgia in contradistinction to the office of public prosecutor, or Solicitor General, seems likely to bear fruit in the present Legislature.

Representative Blackburn, of Fulton, has introduced a bill seeking to set up this office, and it is now before the General Judiciary Committee for consideration.

Paid Like the Solicitor.

Blackburn's bill proposes that the lawyer assigned to the defense of a pauper or ignorant defendant shall be paid for his services from the county treasury, in the same manner that a Solicitor is compensated, except that his pay shall not arise from fees incident to the case at bar.

In this way it is figured that poor defendants may have their rights on trial safeguarded to the same extent that the State safeguards its own interests, which is exactly what the law, in theory, contemplates.

This bill has the indorsement of lawyers generally, and the judges of the State are said to favor it almost as a unit.

The outlook for its passage seems to be good.

Another bill that is attracting a good deal of attention among lawyers is the bill to reinstate William B. Kent, a member of the last Legislature, who recently was disbarred from the practice of law in Georgia.

This bill was proposed by Mr. Edmondson, of Brooks, and will be pushed vigorously.

Mr. Kent was disbarred from the practice of law during the session of the last House, and his friends claim that there was much behind the action that was unwarranted and unjust.

Action Arouses Interest.

They will make a strong plea to have him reinstated this year.

Disbarments are rare in Georgia, and as Mr. Kent's was effected for alleged unworthy practice, the action of the Legislature, in the attempt that will be made therein to upset the findings of the court that put Mr. Kent off the list of practicing attorneys in Georgia, will be watched with keen interest.

LEVEE AT EXECUTIVE MANSION SETS RECORD FOR BRILLIANCY

Governor Slaton at the punch bowl, presided over by Miss Irene Austin and Miss Elizabeth Morgan.

Governor and Wife Congratulated on Most Successful Reception in History of Mansion.

Atlanta society is congratulating Mrs. John Marshall Slaton to-day on the success of her first formal entertainment as mistress of the Executive Mansion.

The reception, given by Governor and Mrs. Slaton at the mansion Wednesday night in honor of the General Assembly was, in addition to being the first of the new administration, one of the most brilliant official receptions in Georgia's history.

Several hundred people attended the affair. The United States Army was represented by General Evans and his staff, and Colonel Van Orsdale and the officers from Fort McPherson in full dress uniform.

Mansion and Grounds a Garden.

To accommodate the large crowd, the lawn of the Executive Mansion had been turned into a garden, with the sides inclosed by a hedge of small pine trees eight or ten feet in height. From the entrance on Cain Street a little avenue of bay trees led to the main entrance under the mansion.

Governor and Mrs. Slaton received their guests in a pergola of white columns, festooned with smilax. Standing with them were President of the Senate and Mrs. Randolph Anderson and Speaker of the House and Mrs. William Burwell. They were assisted in entertaining the guests by the members of the Governor's staff, members of the family, and a group of Mrs. Slaton's friends.

A party of society girls, including Misses Margaret Grant, Margaret Hawkins, Passie May Ottley, Harriet Calhoun, Marjorie Brown, Adgate Ellis and Virginia Lipscomb, served punch, lemonade and coffee.

Mrs. Slaton Gowned Exquisitely.

Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. Slaton's mother, who resides with her, assisted the new mistress of the Executive Mansion in presenting the guests. She has as her especial guests Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hunt, of Eatonton.

Mrs. Slaton wore a gown of white chiffon cloth, combined with delicate pattern of fillet lace and apricot satin. The lace was in long tunics on each side of the front panel of chiffon, which was embroidered in a flower design of tiny crystal sequins in pastel shades. A rhinestone sparkled in the center of each flower. Over the back of the gown was draped a long sash of apricot satin, and the narrow pointed train was bordered with the same. The chiffon sleeves were overlace, and met by long gloves. She wore a necklace of pearls and diamonds, and two corsage pieces of precious stones.

It Costs $450 to Kiss A Niece of Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The price of a kiss in the Government service is $450, as Frank D. Hester, an $1,800 a year section chief of the Pension Bureau, found out to-day when he kissed a temporary girl good-bye.

Someone saw the kissing and told Pension Commissioner Saltzgarber, who promptly suspended the offending chief for three months without pay.

As the kissee left the service today with the rest of the temporary clerks, she was not fined or suspended. In fact, there is reason to believe that the Commissioner thought she was more kissed against than kissing.

'America Producing Short-Sighted Race'

CHICAGO, July 3.—"America is developing a race of short-sighted people," was the statement of Dr. C. G. Fellows, a Chicago eye specialist, before the twenty-sixth annual meeting of the American Homeopathic, Ophthalmological and Laryngological Society.

"The development of progressive myopia in adults, due to the manner in which they studied during their childhood, is astounding," said Dr. Fellows.

WRIT SOUGHT IN MOVE TO FREE NEGRO LEE

Attorney for Watchman Declares Client Knows Nothing of the Actual Crime.

Bernard L. Chappell, attorney for Newt Lee, negro night watchman at the pencile factory, held in the Phagan case, stated Thursday morning that he would swear out a writ of habeas corpus for the release of the negro.

Attorney Chappell stated that he had come to the conclusion that there was nothing the negro knew about the crime except finding the body, and that the State had no right to keep him without some charge or as a material witness.

Lee was the first suspect arrested in connection with Mary Phagan's murder. He was ordered held by the Coroner, but when a bill of indictment was offered the Grand Jury at the same time of the Frank indictment, no action was taken against the negro.

Weak Spots in Conley Tale.

Chappell said the writ of habeas corpus would compel the State either to order the negro held as a material witness or make some charge against him.

Conley, in relating his dramatic tale of carrying the body of Mary Phagan from the rear of the second floor and disposing of it at the direction of Frank in a dark corner of the gloomy basement, said that when he reached the elevator he had to wait until Frank went into his office for a key to the elevator door.

The defense will maintain, it is understood, that the elevator door had not been locked for some time. Witnesses will be called to testify that the door had remained unlocked in accordance with instructions from the firms with which the building was insured. From this alleged circumstance, it will be argued that the negro's story is a fabrication devised to shield himself from the charge of murder and to shift the responsibility onto another man.

To Assail Whole Story.

This is only one particular of at least a score which will be assailed by Attorneys Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold, who are representing Frank. They will say in the first place that the elevator was not running at all on the day of the crime, in spite of Conley's story that the body was carried down to the basement by this means. Harry Denham and Arthur White, who were working on the fourth floor of the factory, will be called to testify to this.

With the defense and prosecution awaiting the day when the great legal battle which will send Frank to the gallows or free him from the stigma of the murder charge shall begin, Frank's lawyers are occupying much of their time in making a critical analysis of the succession of weird statements credited to the negro from the time he said he wrote on the Friday before the murder at the dictation of Frank the notes that were found beside the body of the dead girl until he issued his last affidavit.

The negro admitted the story of writing the notes on Friday was false. He admitted that his first story of never having seen Mary Phagan, dead or alive, was a deliberate lie. He is reported to have further changed his story by admitting seeing the girl before she was killed. But, except for this, he maintains his last affidavit is the whole truth. The defense believes it is as false as the rest and is preparing to go into court and break down utterly the fabrication that the negro has erected.

Notes to Play Part.

Although the notes found by the body of the slain girl have received little attention from those working on the case lately, they are bound to have a most important part in the trial of Frank.

The defense will seek to show that there could have been no possibility of their being dictated by the factory superintendent; that if the negro had taken Frank's dictation, supposing that Frank had committed the crime, a much different sort of a note would have been the result.

Conley has shown since his arrest that he can follow dictation with a fair degree of accuracy. This being the case, it is reasonable to presume, the defense will hold, that he would have followed Frank's words closely. But the notes are an incoherent, jumbled mass of words that are only half intelligible after the detectives have placed weeks of study upon them. The defense will contend that such a note can not be imagined, by any process of reasoning, as the dictation of Frank.

Manufacturers to Hear Exhibit Plans

Definite plans for a permanent manufacturers' exhibit in Atlanta will be submitted by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce to more than 150 manufacturers at a dinner Thursday evening at the Hotel Ansley.

The Chamber also is raising money for the 1913 Georgia Corn Show. More than $3,500 has been pledged, exclusive of $2,000 by the fertilizer committee, of which H. C. Fisher is chairman, has promised to secure. The sum desired is $7,500.

Postal Receipts in Year Jump $116,000

"Atlanta Always Ahead" again is illustrated in the report of the Atlanta postoffice for the fiscal year ending June 30. Total receipts for the year were $1,328,011.24, an increase of $116,005.63 over the previous year.

Postmaster Hugh L. McKee believes Atlanta will be in the exclusive class of postoffices soon. This class is made up of postoffices with receipts totaling $150,000 a month.

BUTTON IDEA FOR 500,000 CLUB IS PRAISED

Advertising Expert, ex-Charleston Man, Tells of Plan's Success in Former Home.

M. C. Maxwell, recently come to Atlanta from Charleston, S. C., where he was president of the Ad Men's Club, said Thursday that he wanted to get in as a charter member of the 500,000 club. He explained that he had been associated with a similar plan in Charleston and that he was glad to find such a definite means of expressing the Atlanta spirit.

"The Georgian's suggestion for a 500,000 club to get 500,000 people here by 1920 is a great thing," he said. "I have noticed the $25 prize offer for the best slogan to go on the buttons of this club.

Buttons Sold in Charleston.

"There's no doubt about every loyal citizen wearing these buttons. Why, I believe they even would be glad to pay for them.

"In Charleston we wanted to raise $5,000 to move the museum. We decided to sell buttons. This was the slogan adopted:

"'See Charleston first, always.'

"Then 50 men got to work on the streets and we sold 5,000 of these buttons at $1 each.

"So much for the button idea. Atlanta is too far ahead to be led by Charleston.

Urges Letter Head Slogan.

"With the Atlanta spirit what it is there is no telling to what extent the button idea will go.

"I think it would be good for all business firms to have '500,000 people in 1920' printed on their letter heads.

"One thing I'm sure about. I'm glad to get to Atlanta to live."

Mr. Maxwell is associated with the Rhodes-Wood Furniture Company.

CURRENCY BILL SURE TO PASS, SAYS CRISP

Georgia Congressman Believes Wilson Measure Will Not Be Altered by Senate or House.

Congressman Charles R. Crisp of the Third Congressional District, who is spending a few days in Atlanta, believes that the Wilson currency bill will pass Congress without particular amendment, and that it will be the law before the summer is over.

Mr. Crisp said:

"The House, I feel sure, will pass the measure promptly, and I think the Senate will follow suit, although of that I am not so certain.

"The House has it in committee now, but my understanding is that the committee is inclined to bring it out as it was sent in, and as the President desires. It generally is regarded in the House as an admirable measure, and the President is given credit for genuine statesmanship in framing it.

"Senator Owens, who will have it in charge in the Senate, believes that it will pass the Senate pretty much as it comes from the House, although it seems reasonably sure that a fight will be made on it there.

"The bill is looked upon by a majority of Congressmen as necessary, following the tariff legislation, and I think it will pass largely on that understanding.

"President Wilson's personal appeal to Congress in this matter undoubtedly had a tremendous effect in hastening things."

Mr. Crisp will remain in Georgia a week or so, as the House is doing nothing now, awaiting the coming of the currency bill from the House Committee and the action of the Senate on the Underwood tariff bill.

Douglas Man, Insane, Hangs Himself in Jail

DOUGLASVILLE, July 3.—J. L. Dempsy, a well-known citizen of Douglas County, committed suicide by hanging himself in the County jail here. Dempsy, who had become temporarily deranged, had been placed in jail for safe-keeping.

Worry over family troubles and the possession of his eight-year-old son is supposed to have affected his mind. There was no other occupant of the jail and Dempsy had probably been dead several hours when found. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide.

New York Policeman Convicted Grafter

NEW YORK, July 3.—A verdict of guilty was returned early to-day against ex-Police Sergeant Peter J. Duffy, accused of collecting graft from illegal resorts in return for police protection.

Duffy showed no emotion when his guilt was pronounced. This was Duffy's second trial, the jury in the first having disagreed.

MANY ATLANTANS STUNG BY WILES OF A DAVID LAMAR

From photographs of David Lamar, "the Wolf of Wall Street," who Wednesday naively admitted before the Senate Lobby Committee at Washington that he had impersonated a number of public men in an effort to influence Wall Street, Atlantans have recognized an old acquaintance and the greatest "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" who ever operated in the Gate City.

Lamar, according to old-timers, came to Atlanta about 1892 and for a number of years was more or less successful in promoting various schemes which finally led to his arrest and departure to other fields. While here, however, he lived like a king, except when under indictment or in jail, and the known facts of his career reveal that he has not only had a greater supply of funds since, but that he has also escaped the tentacles of the law.

By all who remember him he is described as a man of wonderful personality and insight into human nature.

Soon after reaching Atlanta Lamar established close relations with a well known private banker. He rented the home of the late George W. Harrison, at the corner of Cone and Poplar Streets, then one of the fashionable houses of Atlanta, and proceeded to live in a lordly fashion. His wife is described as a beautiful woman and to her he gave every consideration.

His first scheme was to persuade Sam Hall, a former Atlantan who was a social leader and possessed of considerable money, to go in with him in the establishment of a weekly society paper. In a justice court, where Lamar was subsequently arraigned, Mr. Hall charged him with "cheating and swindling" stating that he had paid Lamar $500 to start the paper, but that the paper had failed to appear, and that he had seen nothing more of his $500.

Lamar, handsome and self-confident, arose in court and read a written defense of himself, of which the following are said to be verbatim extracts, remembered by a veteran reporter:

Eloquence Staggers Court.

"Mr. Hall did not want his name to be associated with the paper, but he promised that, from time to time, he would furnish me with choice and meaty bits of gossip and scandal.

"Later I called on Mr. Hall at his place of business and was surprised to find him a bookkeeper in a coffin factory. There, surrounded by the grewsome evidences of the mortality of man, we concluded our arrangements."

The record, from memory, is that Lamar's speech so staggered the court with its eloquence that he escaped on a technicality.

Next he organized a company to take over the street car advertising of Atlanta. He secured Dr. Joseph Jacoos as an investor to the extent of $7,500. When the company did not pan out, Dr. Jacobs "kissed" his money good-bye.

Finally Got His $7,500.

He decided the case was worth investigation, so he called at the Wall Street address of David Lamar. After an office boy had carried in his card the private office door of Lamar swung open and there stood the former Atlantan, surrounded by luxurious furnishings.

Lamar was gushing. He greeted Dr. Jacobs with an embrace, declaring that Dr. Jacobs had been his great benefactor in a time of grave need.

"You know," he said, "I was planning a little vacation. For that reason I have neglected to send you the money I owe you, for I was going to Atlanta to give it to you personally."

The story Dr. Jacobs told to his friends was that Lamar remembered the amount to be $1,000, but after a little argument he was convinced it was $7,500. He gave Dr. Jacobs New York exchange for the amount.

But back to the Atlanta end of the story. Unrebuffed by the failure of his two former projects, Lamar attempted to organize an accident insurance company for railroad employees. His banker friend stood him in good stead as chief backer.

He got $2,500 from a citizen, who soon regretted being persuaded. The result was another justice of the peace warrant.

Billy Crim, a city detective, started to serve the warrant on Lamar at his palatial home. On his way he met the star reporter of the city, whom he invited to go along. With the manners of a Chesterfield, Lamar met them at the door and was informed of the mission.

"Gentlemen," he said, "this is awkward. I am just eating my dinner, and I am sure you will not interrupt me and disturb my wife."

Billy Crim replied that he had a criminal warrant and that Lamar would have to go with him. Finally it was decided that the reporter should stand sponsor for Lamar until he finished his dinner.

The reporter recounts that Lamar finished his dinner with the ease and leisure of an Oriental king, explaining that the visitors were there on a business matter.

Here Appeared "Them Papers."

On his way to the old police station on Pryor Street, Lamar asked to stop and see an old friend in the Postal Telegraph office on Alabama Street. The request was granted, and Lamar held a short private conversation with a Mr. Close, the manager.

Once in the police station, Captain J. M. Wright, then Chief of Detectives, refused him the privilege of any visitors. A day of such solitude ruffled his nerves and in a very agitated state he appealed to his reporter friend.

He explained that he had never seen Mr. Close, of the telegraph office, but that he had some important papers in his pocket which he had to hide from the detectives and that he had given them to Mr. Close with the solemn request to hold them until they met again.

"I know by his eyes that that man will grant my request," said Lamar to the reporter. "Now, I want you to get that man and my wife down here so that the papers may be transferred to her."

The transfer was made that night. In the alley that divides The Georgian from the Atlanta National Bank Building Mrs. Lamar stole and, following the reporter's instructions, hid the papers in the bosom of her dress.

Mobile Greets Him Next.

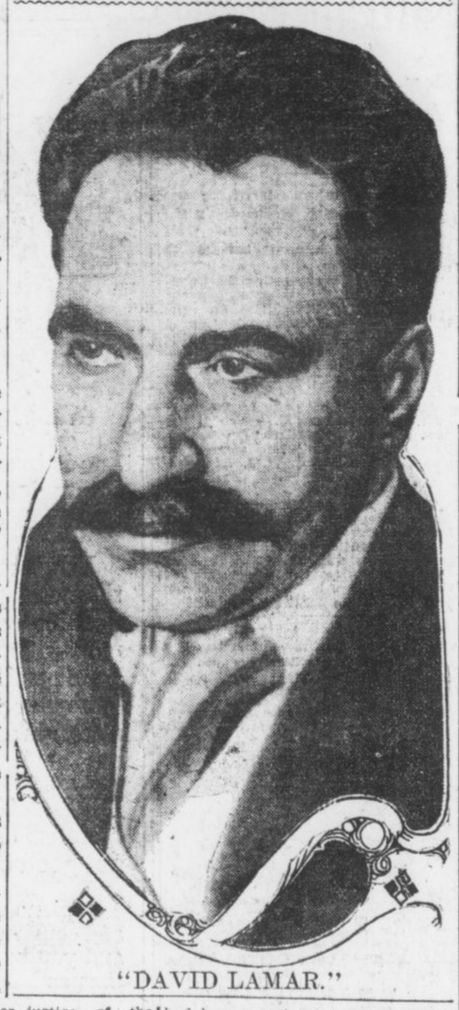

It was but a few days before Lamar was free again. The Atlantan who had made the $2,500 investment in the insurance company turned on the banker for redress and recovered his money after a fight through the Supreme Court.

Lamar announced that he would seek another clime. But before going he offered the reporter with whom he had been associated a job at $500 a month. It is really true that the reporter refused the offer.

Mobile then had a visit by the famous promoter. By the time he had shaken hands around once he had organized a company to take over the electric light plant and the street railway. He was played up in the papers as a New York capitalist.

It is said that when his associates woke up they did not know for certain whether they had anything left in Mobile but the bay.

KNOWN AS 'WOLF OF WALL STREET'

"DAVID LAMAR."

Lauterbach Ignorant of Lamar's Action, He Says.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Edward Lauterbach, the New York lawyer whom David Lamar, a Wall Street stock manipulator, tried to have appointed to represent the Union Pacific Railroad in the dissolution agreement proceedings, to-day denied that he knew Lamar was working in his behalf.

Mr. Lauterbach said he never suspected that Lamar was posing as a Congressman.

"I will have no statement to make until after I testify next Monday," Mr. Lauterbach said. "I will explain everything so far as my name is concerned."

Jury Deadlocked in Girl Strikers' Trial

PATERSON, N. J., July 3.—The jury in the case of Miss Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, member of the Industrial Workers of the World, charged with inciting riot in the silk mill strike, appeared to be hopelessly deadlocked to-day. The jurors have been out more than 24 hours.

Patrick Quinlan, I. W. W. leader, who was convicted of inciting riot, was sentenced to not less than two nor more than seven years in the State prison.

Reinforcements Are Sent to Greek Army.

ATHENS, July 3.—Heavy reinforcements were sent to-day to strengthen the Greek army advancing toward Ligovani in Albania. Military telegrams from headquarters in Salonika report the Greeks are meeting stout resistance, but driving all before them. There has been enormous loss of life.

Roumanians Ready To Join Servians.

BUCHAREST, ROUMANIA, July 3. Seventy-five thousand Roumanians are under arms awaiting any eventuality. King Charles is preparing to throw his forces against the Bulgarians because of Bulgaria's refusal to give certain territorial compensation to Roumania for remaining neutral in the Balkan war.

Great Battle in Progress; Many Slain.

VIENNA, July 3.—A great battle between Bulgarian and Servian troops is being fought at Veles, 50 miles southwest of Uskub. Heavy casualties are reported.

A Sofia dispatch, uncensored at Belgrade, got through this afternoon reporting a Bulgarian victory. Sixteen hundred Servian soldiers and thirty officers were captured.

A Bulgarian army had begun to march upon Salonika. King Constantine is rallying an army to deefnd the city. A Greek fleet is being concentrated in the Salonika harbor to bombard the Bulgarians if they get within artillery range.

Beavers Will Ask For Women Aides

Instead of asking for women detectives, as he announced after returning from the Washington convention, Chief of Police Beavers said Thursday he would ask the Police Board Tuesday for women probation officers and investigators. They would be more valuable, he said, in reclaiming girls who had gone astray and saving those just stepping over the line.

Accused Slayer of Youth Facing Trial

DOTHAN, ALA., July 3.—Charles Brackin, charged with the murder of James Lloyd, 16 years old, near Wicksburg, in the western end of Houston County, on March 17, is on trial at a special term of Houston County Circuit Court to-day.

Lloyd was found dead with his throat cut from ear to ear. Jason Robertson, Charles Homer and Brackin were implicated by the Coroner's jury. Trials of the other boys come up later this term. All the defendants are of prominent families.

U. S. Court Expects Rate Case Appeal

Frank H. Mortimer, clerk of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals of the Fifth District, with headquarters in New Orleans, arrived in Atlanta Wednesday to check over the work of the court for the past year and to arrange for the cases which are to come before Judge Don A. Pardee during the October session, beginning the first Monday in the month.

"There has been no appeal filed to date in the Alabama Rate Case," said Mr. Mortimer, "but I understand there will be just as soon as the testimony which is being compiled in the lower courts is complete."

U. S. Correspondent Expelled by Mexico

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, July 3.—Fitzgerald Slocum, Mexico City correspondent of The Los Angeles Times, was expelled from Mexico to-day under "law 33," which provides for the expulsion of "undesirable aliens."

It is understood that the Government holds Slocum responsible for the recent report that a receiver had been appointed for the national system.

Accused of Attack On 8-Year-Old Girl

DUBLIN, July 3.—Lee Keen was arrested near Dublin to-day charged with attempting to assault an 8-year-old white girl at Rockledge, Laurens County, Tuesday night. He was captured in a deserted barn, and lodged in jail by Deputy Sheriff Linder and several citizens of the neighborhood.

Keen already is under bond for being implicated in a murder in Montgomery County.

Probe of Protected Vice Charge Likely

That Superior Judge W. D. Ellis would charge the Grand July for the July term to investigate vice from a standpoint of alleged protection was considered more than likely Thursday.

LEAGUE CLAIMS IT SMASHED TRUSTS

Anti-Trust Organization Takes Credit for Results So Far Obtained.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Henry B. Martin, secretary of the Anti-Trust League, regaled members of the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee to-day with a story of the league's accomplishments in the past twenty years at the White House, in executive departments and in Congress.

Martin declared the league had a hand in nearly every important piece of legislation put through in that period.

"The Bureau of Corporations was one of our main accomplishments," remarked Martin.

Says He Was Cheated While Drugged; Sues

Declaring that while he was under the influence of an opiate, agents of the American Investment and Loan Company forced him to purchase $1,500 in stock, G. W. Almand filed suit for an injunction in the Superior Court Thursday.

Almand said G. B. Cobb, vice president, and E. S. Vickery, a stock salesman, came to his home when he was unconscious, and, taking him to their office in an automobile, got his signature to a note for $2,000, secured by a mortgage on a house he owned. He said the company had declined to redeem the stock or return the mortgage.

Hunger Strike Now Tried in Antipodes

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CHRISTCHURCH, N. Z., July 3.—The world-famous "hunger strike," so popular now in British jails, to-day made its appearance in New Zealand.

A number of Socialistic youths, arrested for refusing to undergo military training, went on a "hunger strike" and were sentenced to solitary confinement.

LANFORD PROBES DRINKING BY DETECTIVES

Chief Declares He Will Take Vigorous Action if Charges Are Found To Be True.

Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford announced Thursday morning that he had inaugurated a thorough probe of the detective department to determine the truth of reports, recently come to his notice, that city detectives drink liquor and kill time in the locker clubs.

He declared his investigation would be as thorough and far-reaching as possible, and that if he found any officers guilty, he would take prompt and vigorous action.

Chief Lanford's investigation followed the statement made to Chief Beavers Wednesday by an Atlanta physician, that both the uniformed officers and the detectives congregate at locker clubs and drink and loaf. He named two downtown clubs in which he said he several times had seen detectives loitering and drinking.

The physician who informed Chief of Police James L. Beavers that girls were lured to their ruin from a prominent downtown restaurant to a house operated by the cashier of the place and that the police were on the "inside" and giving protection was called before the Chief Thursday to make a personal statement.

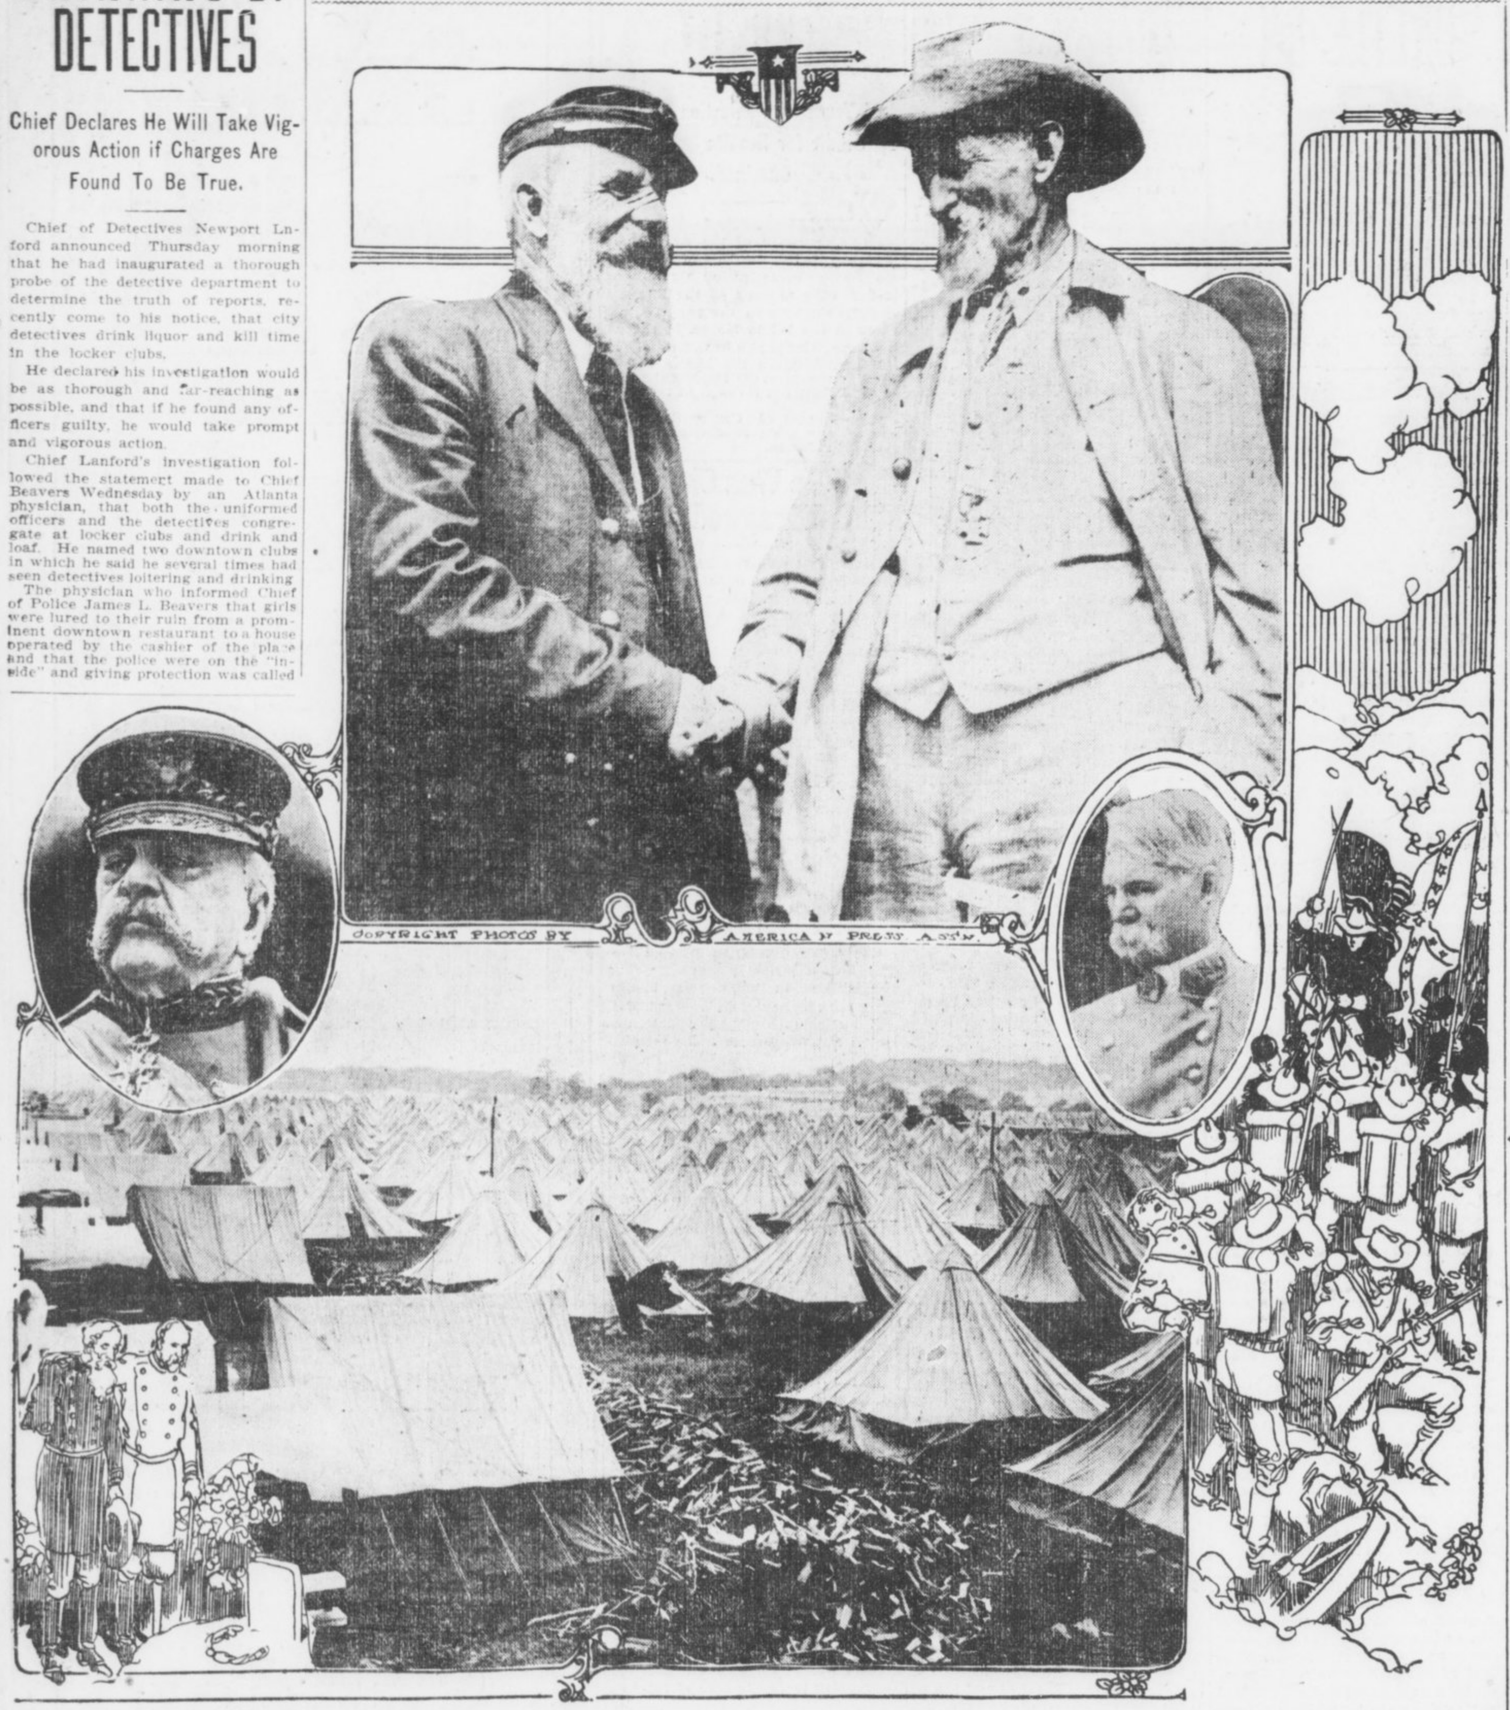

Chief Beavers said he would probe the physician's statement to the very bottom, and that if found true, he would take prompt action against the policemen involved.

"I am determined to put every man off the force who drinks," he said, "and I am determined to find if any of my men have been concerned in any such scheme as this physician tells of. I shall not stop until the matter has been probed to the bottom and the public knows the truth."

The Chief has tightened the net around the places mentioned in the letter.

Sergeant Dobbs, detailed to examine the membership register of the locker clubs, reported that he had been unable to find the name of a single officer on the membership list of a locker club.

Pageant Play Opens Festival by Negroes

A pageant play will open the Jubilee Festival of negro singers at the Auditorium Thursday night. The leading role will be taken by Patti Brown, the Chicago soprano. The Fisk Jubilee Singers, backed by a chorus of 250 trained voices, will be heard in old-time genuine negro music. The singing is illustrative of the progress of the negro race from the dawn of its history to the present.

Friday afternoon there will be a matinee and at night a concert, in which all the leading singers of the festival will take part.

Lid on Gambling Is Clamped at Newport

NEWPORT, July 3.—This is to be a closed season for gambling here. None of the regular places is open and none will be if Mayor MacLeod can help it.

The Mayor has hinted to those interested in the Nautilus Club, which for years has been exclusively used by summer residents, that they had better not open this year.

Peace Returns to Gettysburg Reunion Hosts After Stabbing Over Lincoln.

GETTYSBURG, PA., July 3.—Today has been set down on the program as Governor's Day, when most of the score or more of Governors now at the State headquarters at Gettysburg College are expected to attend the exercises in the auditorium tent. Governor Tener will preside and will make an address, as will Governor James B. McCreary, of Kentucky.

The reunion of Philadelphia brigade and the survivors of Pickett's division will be held this afternoon at Bloody Angle, the point where Pickett's charging Virginians and North Carolinans first struck the Union lines on Cemetery Ridge, 50 years ago this afternoon.

It was largely the Philadelphia brigade which stood the brunt of this attack, and thus the ancient enemies who fought hand to hand in that bitter struggle a half century ago will meet once more.

Great Fireworks Display.

What is expected to be one of the most spectacular features of the week will be the fireworks display on Little Top to-night. For weeks men have been engaged in preparing the apparatus and staging the display, which is expected to be one of the finest ever seen in this country.

Some of the historians of the camp to-day brought to headquarters the man who fired the first cannon at the battle of Gettysburg. He is Michael Hays, of Springfield, Ill., who served in Tidball's battery under General Buford. He found the gun he fired, which is standing to-day in the exact position it stood when first fired in the battle. General Liggett took him for a tour of the field in a motor car and manifested considerable interest in his narrative of the fight.

Vice President Marshall is expected here to-day and great preparations have been made for his reception. He will be escorted through the camp and will spend some time in the quarters of the Indiana delegation.

Seven Hurt in Fight.

A stabbing affray, in which seven men were hurt and which had its origin in a slurring reference to Abraham Lincoln, resulted in a scene of wild disorder in the crowded dining room of a hotel in Gettysburg last night and threatened to dissipate the spirit of peace and fraternalism which has hovered over the battleground since the great reunion began.

In the confusion which followed the stabbing, it was impossible to obtain the names of all the principals in the fight which sprang up so unexpectedly that everyone in the dining hall, except those near the table where the abusive remarks in regard to Lincoln were made, was taken by surprise.

The wounded men are:

Edward J. Carroll, sergeant of the Quartermasters' Corps, U. S. A.; David Farbor, of Butler, Pa., member of the State Constabulary; John D. Maugin, Harrisburg; Malcolm Griffin, of Budford City, Pa.; Charles Susler, of West Fairview, Pa.; Hayes Remise Becker, of Gettysburg, and Harry A. Root, Jr., of Harrisburg.

Veteran Resents Remark.

The man whom the police say made the remark and did the stabbing gave his name as W. B. Henry, of Philadelphia. He told the officers of the State Constabulary that he was a son of R. R. Henry, of Tazewell, Va., a general in the Confederate Army.

Henry was seated at one of the tables in the hotel with several others. Animosities soon developed out of the war talk at the table. Henry is said to have championed the cause of the Confederacy, and did so without particular rebuke until he is said to have applied a vile epithet to Lincoln.

This was strongly resented by a veteran in blue, said to be H. H. Baker, of Pennsylvania. Baker seized a decanter of water and threw it at Henry. There was an immediate uproar. Tables were upset and chairs overturned.

Brandishes a Knife.

Henry jumped to his feet, brandishing a knife, according to the stories told the police. A half dozen men jumped to the defense of Baker, and the flashing of knives started a panic in the dining room.

The police have the knife of Henry, which was grabbed by C. A. Goldthwaite, of Salem, Mass., and turned over to the authorities. Henry, when locked up in the jail here, denied that he had done any of the actual stabbing, and said that he was in the fight only to aid Griffin, one of the wounded men.

Baker was uninjured. The others were hurt in coming to his defense. He disappeared after the fight.

The death of George W. Walls of acute uremia early this morning makes a total of eight deaths since the opening of the reunion. There were fifteen hospital cases, most of them due to the heat or minor illnesses.

13th Negro Failed On Friday, 13th, '13

DALTON, July 1.—Of the 34 white applicants for license in the recent Whitfield County examination, all stood the examination successfully, County Superintendent Sapp having finished grading the papers.

Thirteen negroes took the examination held on Friday, the 13th, 1913, and the thirteenth one failed, the other twelve passing.

NEW SLOGAN FOR ATLANTA AD MEN

Story of National Convention's Actions Told at "Back-From-Baltimore" Banquet.

Clear and truthful advertising was the slogan adopted Wednesday night by the Atlanta ad men in their "Back from Baltimore" banquet at the Hotel Ansley.

S. C. Dobbs, representing the Coca-Cola Company, in his speech on the "Declaration of Principles for the 1913 Convention," called attention to the motto, "Truth," adopted by the national convention, and declared that this was the end toward which all loyal and representative ad men are working.

Among other speakers at the banquet, which was the first held at the new Ansley, were Jack Lewis, Albert Adams, Ivey Allen, George H. Kohn, Evelyn Harris, W. J. Hubbard, W. S. Lounsbury, W. F. Parkhurst and L. D. Hicks.

The ad men unanimously voted to devote the excess of $234, as reported by Treasurer Ivey Allen, to next year's convention trip. The sum will serve as the nucleus of the fund of $5,000, following the suggestion of Charles A. Smith. Harry Goodhart, president of the Ad Club, presided.

KIMBALL PIANOS

The Artist's Ideal

Beyond a doubt the best way to get a genuine bargain in a piano is to go to a responsible house and pay a fair price for an instrument with a reputation back of it.

You should not consider for one moment that cheap pianos which are advertised in such convincing terms are worth spending money for. If you buy one, you are speculating with most of the chances against you. Whether you buy here or elsewhere, secure a standard make or save your money.

The cost of making a piano such as the KIMBALL is greater than the selling price of most cheap pianos, which are as a rule not good even when new.

A piano with excellent staying qualities of tone and construction is the only one worth considering and you had better pay a little more and know that as long as you have it you will be pleased with it.

By this we do not mean that you will have to spend an exorbitant sum to obtain a satisfactory instrument, but we do wish to caution you against ones sold at a price for which it is impossible to give you a piano of real merit.

We wish to caution you against buying a piano from a concern that has a sliding scale of prices. The one-price plan on which we operate is the only sure way of your securing full value. We have found in many years of experience that to be fair to ourselves and the customer is the only correct selling method.

COUNTY BOARD RENEWS FIGHT OVER PAVING

Commissioner Waters Meets With Defeat in Move to Obtain Competitive Bidding.

Open war again broke out in the County Board of Commissioners Wednesday afternoon over the awarding of contracts for asphalt paving.

Commissioner Tull C. Waters, who is leading the fight for competitive bidding, declared he would continue his fight, although he had small hopes of success.

Commissioner Waters has charged that the Committee on Public Works of the board lets the contracts on the discretion of its members and without consulting members of the board as a whole.

Waters' Move Blocked.

Despite Waters' vigorous protest the board sidetracked his resolution and introduced a resolution to buy 11 tons of Trinidad asphalt from the Barber Asphalt Company for $25 a ton.

The board passed a resolution accepting the dedication of the Andrews road, connecting Peachtree Street with Pace's Road. It ignored the resolution of the Mayor and General Council, requesting a conference with the County Commissioners and State tax receivers to obtain a proper basis for State and county tax returns.

Members Have Tilt.

Some spice was given the meeting by a tilt between Sheriff Mangum and members of the board when Sheriff Mangum, who refused to sign a contract with the county providing for the payment of 30 cents per capita for the feeding of the county prisoners, demanded 35 cents.

General Anderson answered that the board didn't care whether the Sheriff signed the contract or not, as this amount has been decided on. The incident was closed when the Sheriff threw the contract on the table and walked out of the room.

Bill Removes Poll Tax Law Restriction

Making it possible for a citizen to pay his poll tax within 60 days of an election and become an eligible voter is what Representative Arnold of Henry County wishes to do. In this connection he has filed a bill in the House requiring tax collectors to keep their poll tax books open so that prospective voters may pay their tax.

The present law requires the payment of the poll tax at least six months prior to the election.

NewLowRecordPrice For Seat in 'Change

NEW YORK, July 3.—A Stock Exchange seat was sold last week for $40,000, a new low record price in the present movement. Previous to this a seat was sold for $42,000. Two other seats were sold during the spring for as low as $41,000. The seat sold last week was that of William Robison and the purchaser was Orme Wilson, Jr.

A few years ago a Stock Exchange seat sold as low as $38,000, but the price rebounded and went above $45,000 soon afterward.

45,930 Bathers At Piedmont Since May

FOOD BILL FOR LINERS UP TO MILLIONS

North German Lloyd Paid $4,920,000 for Provisions Last Year and $7,373,735 for Coal.

NEW YORK, July —In these days of the high cost of living it is interesting to know what it costs a steamship company to provide the necessities of life to its passengers.

The annual statement of the North German Lloyd for 1912 shows $4,920,000 for provisions and $7,373,735 for coal.

More potatoes were consumed than any other single article, the total amount having been 17,875,873 pounds. Flour ranked next, with 6,313,152 pounds, while bread was fourth, with 2,353,083 pounds.

The passengers consumed 7,098,560 eggs, 4,271,059 oranges and lemons, 707,625 pounds of onions and 983,802 pounds of salt. They used 465,340 pounds of coffee and 41,729 pounds of tea, and 529,619 cans of sterilized milk.

Of wines, Rhein and Mosel were most popular, heading the list with 112,211 bottles, as against 35,97 bottles having been consumed in addition to 1,720,634 quarts of beer in barrels.

Slaton to Address R.F.D. Carriers Here In State Convention

Several hundred rural letter carriers of Georgia assembled at the Kimball House Thursday afternoon for the first session of the State convention, which will continue until Saturday.

The meeting was informal and in the nature of a fraternal and social gathering. Friday the delegates will go to the Senate chamber of the State Capitol, where welcome addresses will be delivered by Mayor James G. Woodward and Postmaster H. L. McKee. Clark Howell also will address the body.

Among the speakers Friday afternoon will be Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick, Governor Slaton and W. D. Brown, editor of The R. F. D. News, will speak Saturday. George C. Bond is master of ceremonies.

MISS LILLIAN KYLE JONES.

Pretty Miss Lillian Kyle Jones, of Knoxville, Tenn., whose statement that the Southern youth does not show his sweetheart a good time aroused a storm of excited protest among the Atlanta girls, now finds herself in a "nice pickle."

Here is what Miss Jones said in New York that caused the protest:

"Chivalry is a nice thing to have around the house, but you can't live on it nor enjoy it day after day any more than you can caviar."

"It's very nice of Miss Jones to say that for the benefit of her masculine admirers in New York, but it just isn't so, that's all," the Atlanta girls declare.

COTTON TRADER FEARS CLARKE MEASURE

Tax on Futures Contracts Will Hurt Farmer and Help None, Says W. B. Thompson.

NEW ORLEANS, July 3.—Future trading will be wiped out, root and branch; producers will be at the mercy of combinations of purchasers; cotton exchanges will be put out of business, thus abolishing the forces which compel honest trading, and the total result will be chaos if the Clarke amendment to the tariff bill, taxing futures contracts, is adopted, says W. B. Thompson, of New Orleans, in a telegram to C. S. Barrett, President of the National Farmers' Union.

Furthermore, instead of decreasing speculation, the measure would increase it, by making even the spot business highly hazardous, Mr. Thompson says. His telegram follows:

"To Hon. C. S. Barrett, President of the National Farmers' Union, Union City, Ga.:

"The Clarke amendment to the tariff bill will not regulate future trading, but by destroying the future contract markets, will strike down all future trading, both good and bad. Hedges can not be bought or sold, hence the spot cotton business will be made speculative in the last degree. This will mean that the multitude of cotton buyers of small or limited means will be forced out of business and the producer will be under the necessity of carrying his cotton indefinitely, or else selling it at the price offered by spinners or by a few large operators, or a combination of the same, whose business it will be to speculate upon the producer's necessities.

Will Destroy Exchanges.

"Furthermore, the provision in the amendment limiting the tax and penalty to future contracts made on or under the rules of any cotton exchange or similar institution, will not only destroy the contract exchanges of New Orleans and New York, but will destroy all the local exchanges throughout the cotton belt, because no man will hold membership in an institution when such fact subjects his private contracts to an excessive tax and renders him liable to a penalty from $1,000 to $20,000 for conducting his business in accordance with the rules and regulations established by such exchanges for the protection and benefit of the trade.

"If all these exchanges were put out of business there would be no points for the collection and dissemination of information as to conditions, and the producer would be wholly in the dark as to the value of his cotton, and would be at the mercy of the buyer whose superior private facilities put him into possession of such information. Moreover, if there were no exchanges or similar organizations there could be no rules or standards of trade regulating and restraining individual conduct in business, which would result in disorderly conditions most prejudicial to all concerned.

Can Not Afford Experiments.

"In other words, the said tax amendment would not only destroy the futures markets of America, but also would disorganize the whole system by which our crops are moved, and place us in the hands of foreign organizations and local combinations of buyers.

"It is reported that in supporting said amendment, some Senators take the position that while they doubt the wisdom of the measure, or are of the positive opinion that it is unwise and will be injurious, still, as the farmers want it, they say, let them have it and take the consequences.

"We can not afford to experiment with such a vital matter. I am not connected with any exchange in an official capacity and I have no interest in any future business. You know that I have given much time and effort to the betterment of the producers' condition and to improvement in all legitimate trade. I think you will believe in the sincerity of my purpose. I say to you earnestly that in my opinion this measure is fraught with the most serious consequences to the interests you represent and with no intention of being officious, but animated only by a sincere desire to cooperate with you in your work for the Southern farmer, I beg you to give this vital matter your most serious consideration before using the power of your great organization to advance so dangerous a measure and before you accept responsibility therefor."

Bill Allows State To Cross-Examine

A decided change in the criminal law, making it possible for the defendant to testify under oath and thus be subject to cross-examination, is contained in a bill filed in the House by Representative Whitaker.

The bill allows the prisoner to testify under oath or not under oath, as he sees fit. But his testimony under oath will make him subject to the fire of the prosecuting attorneys through cross-examination.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

The acoustics of the hall of the House of Representatives of Georgia probably are the worst in the world.

Physically, the hall is one of the most beautiful, dignified and stately in the Union. It is a hall, so far as that is concerned, the State well may be proud of.

It is all but impossible to speak in it though, so miserably deficient is it in acoustic properties. So far this session two men only have been able to overcome its baffling and depressing difficulties—Speaker Burwell and Representative Olive.

By working like a Trojan and exhausting a good lung full of atmosphere on every sentence or so, Burwell makes himself clear—then, too, he generally has the attention of the House, to a reasonable degree.

Wednesday, Sam Olive of Richmond, went up against those honorable acoustics, and while he knocked them out, good and proper, he had a mighty struggle getting away with it, and when he had finished, his alabaster brow—which runs pretty far back, by the way—was bathed in honest sweat, and his lung equipment was much the worse for wear.

Olive really is a corking good orator. He enunciates distinctly and speaks with deliberation and carefully distributed emphasis. He evidently knows the rules of good speaking and if he makes many more speeches such as the one he delivered Wednesday he is sure to be known throughout this session as one of the genuinely effective floor leaders.

There is no question of Olive's ability to talk eloquently and convincingly.

Mr. Slater of Bryan trotted out that ancient and well-known legislative standby, Old Man Vox Populi and gave him his first legislative airing Wednesday.

Mr. Slater was making an impassioned plea for the ousting of Representatives McArthur and Browning—more in sorrow than in anger, however—and during the progress of the debate, Old Man Vox got in the game.

A broad smile flitted through the House when Old Man Vox made his first appearance, but as he is an ancient and approved friend, he got the glad hand on all side.

From this time forward he may be expected to make his appearance every day or so.

Speaker Burwell is a stickler for forms and ceremonies in legislative debate. Already he has demonstrated a wonderful ability to handle the House, no matter how acute the parliamentary situation it may get itself into.

Burwell, however, insists that every member toe the mark in observing the rules, not only as to procedure but as to courtesy.

One member Thursday entered an oral objection to a certain proposal, but he entered it without arising from his seat. Burwell, as he is required to do, ignored the honorable gentleman's objection thus entered, but stated immediately afterward that the rules required members to arise and address the Speaker when desiring to speak, no matter when, why or how, and that he would not recognize any gentleman so long as that gentleman remained seated.

Since then, members desiring to address the House have first taken the pains to arise and address the Speaker. And that is exactly what the rules requires of them.

Charles S. Barrett, President of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Assistant Commission of Agriculture, will address by invitation the people of Bowl's Springs, in Fannin County, July 19. Both will confine themselves to agricultural topics.

Representative W. J. Nunnally of Floyd, a new member of the House, was highly honored by Speaker Burwell in committee distribution. He was named on the rules, general judiciary and constitutional amendments. Although he is a new member of the House, Representative Nunnally is well known through the State, having been Solicitor General of the Rome Circuit and Judge of the City Court of Rome.

Already he has grown to be one of the most popular members of the General Assembly.

It doubtless is true that the grand old county of Montgomery wishes folks would quick kicking its dog around! The last Legislature whacked it in two and created the new county of Wheeler, and now an honorable Legislator wishes to chop off some more of grand old Montgomery's territory to set up the noble young county of Treutelin.

After a bit, as one legislator put it, "there will not be so much as a greasy spot of grand old Montgomery left!"

Among the many charter changes in Georgia cities already proposed in the Legislature, the one of Waycross is the most novel and interesting.

There it is proposed to merge the county and city governments into one body.

The plan is to establish city and county tax zones, the city's taxes going into city improvements. A county council, acting with a similar body from the city, both under the direction of an elective head, is proposed, with the employment of a general superintendent who shall have direct charge of the work and be responsible for the execution of all orders of the joint board.

This change, it is argued, will cut down the administrative expenses and promote harmony throughout, besides giving better results than are obtained under separate administrations.

Athletic Events at Gainesville on 4th

GAINESVILLE, July 5.—Gainesville will celebrate the Fourth of July with a "safe and sane" athletic meet at Brenau Park.

Coach Frank Anderson, of Riverside, will have charge of the sports. Prizes have been offered by merchants. The Woodmen of the World band will furnish music and the Chamber of Commerce will serve free lemonade.

There will be a game of baseball between two picked teams—the Fats and the Leans. Such men as Fletcher M. Johnson and Sheriff W. M. Crow will play.

Fifth District Asks Agriculture School

An agricultural school for the Fifth District is the requirement of a bill introduced in the House by Representatives Smith and Fields of DeKalb County. When the State was redistricted, the Fifth District was left without an agricultural school, and there has been an active movement under way to have the Legislature making an appropriation for one.

Recently the business men and merchants of Decatur held a big rally in behalf of the movement. This was attended by several thousand farmers of the Fifth District.

Three Octogenarians To Vote at Columbus

COLUMBUS, July 3.—Among those registered for the Columbus hospital bond election of July 16 are three octogenarians. They are A. Illges, 83 years; A. O. Blackmar, Sr., 82 years, and W. H. Glaze, 81 years of age.

The two former are among the wealthiest men in the city, and notwithstanding their advanced age and the fact that their property would be taxed, they will vote for the bonds.

Cotton Bale Report Puzzler to Farmers

Speaker of the House William H. Burwell and President of the Senate J. Randolph Anderson conferred Thursday on a plan by which the report of the joint commission appointed by the House and Senate last year on the standardization of the cotton bale may be conveyed to the Senate. The difficulty has arisen over the fact that but one member of the commission, Representative Kimbrough, was returned to the Legislature. This leaves the Senate with no one who may submit the report to the upper chamber.

The report, which goes much into detail, was expected to be submitted to the House Thursday morning, but owing to the short session and rush of other business it was not filed.

Lender Is Enjoined From Garnishment

Judge J. T. Pendleton, of the Superior Court, Wednesday afternoon granted H. S. Jones and G. R. Sayre a temporary injunction restraining D. H. Tolman, named as a money lender, from garnisheeing the wages of Jones, who is employed at the Atlanta Joint Terminals.

Superintendent G. N. Williams informed Jones that if his wages were attached he would be discharged. Sayre acted as security for Jones. The claim is made that the men are day laborers and that their wages are not subject to attachment. The case is set for hearing July 12.

CHILD LABOR BILL IS OPPOSED BY REFORMERS

Lack of Educational Clause Makes Proposed Law Objectionable to National Association.

A fight, under the leadership of Harvey P. Vaughn, of New York, representative of the National Child Labor Association, will be made against the adoption of the Sheppard child labor bill when it is taken up by the Labor and Labor Statistics Committee of the House. Assisting him will be Mrs. Margaret T. McWhorter, of Atlanta.

Objection to the Sheppard bill lies in the fact that it does not include an educational clause. The association has as a goal the adoption of a law which will prevent the employment of children under 14 years of age while the public schools are in session in the district in which the child resides.

Mr. Vaughn and Mrs. McWhorter will address the Labor and Labor Statistics Committee when the Sheppard bill is taken up, and will endeavor to substitute a bill with an educational clause inserted. Failure to do so with the committee will result in its being filed in the House.

At the same time in which the Sheppard bill was introduced in the House a similar bill was introduced in the Senate by Senator J. Randolph Anderson and Senator Fred Kea. The bill was thought to be scheduled for smooth sailing.

"It is the object of the National Child Labor Association and its sympathizers to give every child the inherent right of an education, and the fight for this will never cease until such laws are enforced," said Mrs. McWhorter.

Coburn Is 'Scolded' By Adjutant General

Characterizing as an "unfortunate, thoughtless and uncalled-for expression" the recent statement by Lieutenant William S. Coburn that fifteen officers of the Fifth Regiment, Georgia National Guard, would resign if the State Legislature amended the military act of 1912, Adjutant General J. VanHolt Nash has directed a letter to Colonel E. E. Pomeroy, of the Fifth, in which he takes Lieutenant Coburn sharply to task.

In his letter to Colonel Pomeroy, which is is understood has the indorsement of the latter, General Nash deplores such expressions coming from members of the National Guard, and advises Colonel Pomeroy to caution his officers against a recurrence of the affair.

Athens Bank Case To Jury Thursday

ATHENS, GA., July 3.—The case against J. W. Griffin for "wrecking" the Athens Bank and Trust Company will go to the jury for verdict this afternoon, after a hard-fought legal battle. The State put up a number of witnesses, while the defense relied on the statement of President Griffin. There will probably be a verdict to-night.

R. H. McCrary, who pleaded guilty in his case as cashier and who was given three years under the consideration of turning state's evidence, was not put on the stand.

Child Injured, Mother Would Give It Away

KENOSHA, WIS., July 3.—"I wish you would give him away to some one; we don't want him any more."

This statement was made by Mrs. Charles Pirosch to James H. Karnes, humane officer, as she stood beside a cot in the hospital where her little son lay suffering from serious burns received at a pre-Fourth of July celebration. The child may die.

Jacksonville Mayor Bars Peekaboo Skirt

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., July 3.—Mayor VanSwearing, newly elected executive, called upon the women of this city to stop wearing the split skirt and thin petticoatless attire.

He asked the newspapers to begin a crusade against "immoral dress."

Music Contest First At High School Meet

ATHENS, GA., July 3.—The first contest in the State High School meet being held here to-day and to-morrow takes place this afternoon when the Brenau scholarship in music will be awarded.

The woman suffrage question will be debated in the chapel of the University of Georgia to-night, and to-morrow there will be athletic events and oratory contest.

Big Apartment House Falls When Finished

CHICAGO, July 3.—A 42-apartment building, which was to be completed next week, collapsed here. A strip of steel girders 25 feet wide running the entire length of the building fell through to the ground. No one was hurt.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Talking Movies at the Grand.

Edison talking pictures have won! The skeptical who argued that such an entertainment would be nothing but the projection of a motion picture on a sheet and the operation of a phonograph behind stage have discovered that Mr. Edison has perfected machines and instruments that synchronize.

The attendance at the Grand on Monday was decidedly discouraging. On Tuesday more than double the number of people were present that were in the house on Monday, and on Wednesday the theater was nearly filled. There is every indication that the wonder of this invention will keep the big theater more than busy the balance of the week.

Starting with to-day there will be a change of program in the talking pictures that will be continued the rest of the week. The first-run straight pictures are changed every day, and three reels are used.

Violinsky Pleases Forsyth Audiences.

Keith vaudeville at the Forsyth has never been so popular as now. The bill this week is of exceptional value. There is that variety that makes things interesting, and there is novelty enough to make people forget the hot spell. The Forsyth is perhaps the coolest place in Fulton County now. The ventilating system and the cooling plant work perfectly, and every audience enjoys what is being offered on the stage in perfect comfort.

Violinsky, an expert with both violin and piano, has interested and entertained every audience that has assembled. The sketch of Edward Abeles has been voted to be the very best of this sort seen in Atlanta, and Carlisle's dog pantomime circus starts the show with the audiences in a particularly good humor.

Good Tabloid at the Bijou.

Few attractions that have played the Bijou this season have given such general satisfaction as "A Trip to Paris," this week's bill. The musical comedy is brimful of pretty music, good dancing and clever specialties, and the entire performance moves along smoothly and without a hitch.

MRS. FELTON TO SPEAK HERE AS SUFFRAGIST

Vote Advocates Eagerly Awaiting Appearance of Noted Woman. Convention Next Week.

Mrs. William A. Felton, of Cartersville, one of Georgia's most noted women, will make her first public appearance as a suffragist in Atlanta next week, at the annual convention of the Georgia Equal Suffrage Association. The convention will be held July 9 and 10. Mrs. Felton will speak before one of the three sessions on "Getting Ready for the Ballot."

Atlanta suffragists are manifesting great interest in Mrs. Felton's address. She has been an active suffragist for only a few months and her acquisition to the ranks is regarded as of great importance to the movement in Georgia.

Other speakers at the convention will include Mrs. S. E. Cunningham, of Decatur, formerly president of the Alabama Equal Suffrage Association, and Mrs. H. Augusta Howard, of Columbus, who organized the Georgia State Association and was its president for six years.

Many to Attend.

Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, State president, said Wednesday afternoon that more than 100 suffragists from all over the State are expected to attend the convention. Only one day session will be held on the afternoon of July 10 at the Labor Temple, in Trinity Avenue. Efforts are being made to secure the Senate chamber in the State Capitol for the evening meetings.

Legislation now pending before the General Assembly was indorsed at the regular meeting of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association Wednesday afternoon. Included among these measures were the vital statistics bill, compulsory education, medical inspection in schools, county probation and pensions for women, school teachers who have taught for more than 30 years.

Dr. L. C. Allen, of Jefferson, Ga., chairman of the House Committee on Hygiene, addressed the meeting on the need of medical inspection in the schools, declaring a permissive law is a necessity. He expressed the opinion that the State is not ready for a compulsory inspection law, but predicted that the time will come when every State in the Union will have compulsory medical inspection laws. Dr. Allen declared medical inspection should not stop at the school children, but should include teachers and janitors and other persons who work about the schools and come in contact with school children.

Representative C. R. McCrory, of Schley, spoke on his bill, which proposes that the State shall publish its own textbooks for the public schools. Judge Robert L. Rodgers addressed the meeting on the benefits of equal suffrage.

Report To Be Made On Standard Bale

The report of the committee on standardization of the cotton bale will come before the House Thursday. The committee was appointed last year and has gone deeply into the subject which is of considerable importance to financial, farming and manufacturing interests.

Of the Senate and House members put on the commission, the only one to return to this year's Assembly is Representative Kimbrough, of Haris County, who will deliver the report.

Former Newnan Man Dies in Mississippi

NATCHEZ, MISS., July 3.—Henry C. Norman, member of a prominent Georgia family and for many years a prominent resident of Natchez, died to-day, after an illness of three months of hardening of the arteries. He was born in Newnan, Ga., October 22, 1850.

The funeral and burial will take place here to-morrow.

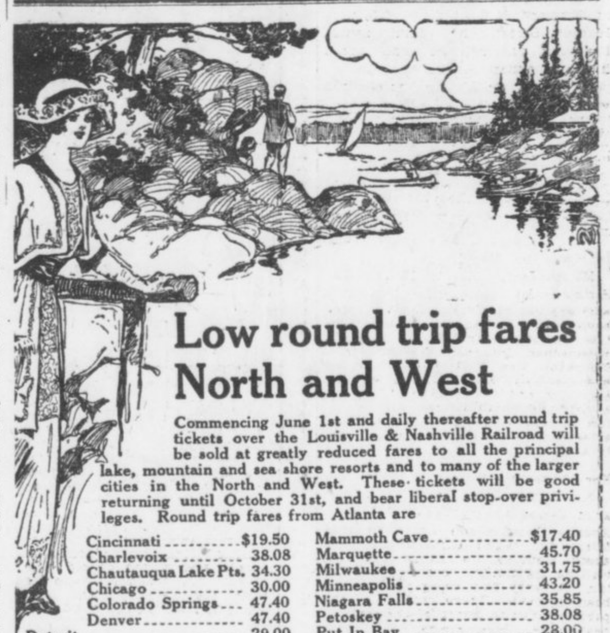

Job Needed to Free Young Ollie Taylor

Ollie Taylor, the 12-year-old lad who was granted a parole Wednesday from the Fulton County Reformatory, where he has been confined two years on the charge of stealing a soda pop, is to be an automobile mechanic —that is, if he can land a job.

And until Ollie does land the job he will remain at the reformatory, according to Superintendent Means. Mr. Means says Ollie has shown wonderful improvement since he has been at the reform school and has developed a knack for mechanics which should be very productive when Ollie has applied himself sufficiently long.

MISS JESSIE (at left) and MISS ELEANOR WILSON.

Marriage of President's Daughter to Francis Bowes Sayre Announced for November.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The first wedding of a Georgia girl in the White House will be that of Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of the President, to Frances Bowes Sayre, a New York attorney in the office of District Attorney Whitman. Miss Wilson, a native Georgian, was born in Gainesville 24 years ago.

President and Mrs. Wilson made formal announcement of the coming marriage last night at the White House. The wedding will be some time in November. While Washington society gasped at the sudden announcement, it recovered quickly, and everything now is all a-flutter over the pre-nuptial honors to be showered upon the President's daughter.

Called Prettiest of Sisters.

Miss Jessie Wilson has been declared by many persons to be the prettiest of the three Wilson sisters.

Much curiosity was expressed regarding the groom. He has been connected with District Attorney Whitman in New York, during which time he has won the esteem of the noted lawyer. He is 28 years of age, and will be admitted to the bar this month, when he will be placed on the list of assisting prosecuting attorneys.

He comes from a noted collegiate family, his father, the late Robert Heysham Sayre, being president of the board of trustees of Lehigh University. He was also a prominent railroad man, and built the Lehigh Valley Railroad. His mother was Martha Finley Nevin prior to her marriage. She was the daughter of John Williamson Nevin, theologian and president of Franklin and Marshall College, of Lancaster, Pa., and was descended from Hugh Williamson, of North Carolina, one of the framers of the constitution.

He is related to Robert J. Nevin, head of the American Church of Rome, Italy, and a cousin of Ethelbert Nevin, the noted composer.

Pura The Perfect Water Pura

Few people give the matter of drinking water the serious consideration which it deserves.

Physicians agree that many malignant maladies are communicated to the system directly through the drinking water---typhoid fever being one of them.

All raw water contains dangerous germs; filtering and boiling do not remove them.

The only method by which water is rendered absolutely pure and germless is distillation.

Pura Water is distilled by improved, scientific methods. It is the PERFECT drinking water.

HOBBLES WRECK NERVES, SAYS DR. M'RAE

Noted Atlanta Physician Calls Tight Skirts an Abomination. 'Insanitary and Immodest.'

Women who wear the extremely tight skirt decreed by modern fashion are treading the road that leads to nervous prostration, according to Dr. Floyd McRae, one of Atlanta's most noted physicians. In this opinion Dr. McRae takes direct issue with prominent members of the Chicago Medical Society, who recently declared the tight skirt hygienic, artistic and comfortable.

"Women who wear the tight skirt—that is, one so tight it does not allow perfect freedom of the lower limbs," said Dr. McRae Tuesday morning, "are constantly under a strain which eventually will bring about nervous prostration. This condition is due to the fact that the muscles are cramped and do not get that perfect freedom which is necessary in walking. Some muscles are overdeveloped and others are not developed sufficiently to do their share of the work of walking.

"The tight skirt has not been in vogue long enough for the effects of this to show in the women as a whole, but if it is not abandoned the time undoubtedly will come when women virtually will be nervous wrecks.

Hobbles an Abomination.

"The tight skirt is an abomination, and one of the worst things women have taken to in years. It is immodest and unhygienic, and it is a source of continual danger to the wearer. With their freedom of movement restricted, they face danger every time they appear on the streets in a tight skirt.

"A woman wearing a tight skirt is in danger of spraining her ankle every time she gets on a street car or in an automobile, and many of the minor accidents sustained by women nowadays are due to the tight skirt and the restricted, hobbling walk which it necessitates."

Dr. McRae declared the old style of wide, flowing skirt which touched the ground was as bad as the modern skirt.

Old Styles as Bad.

"The kind of skirt that every woman should wear," he said, "should be wide enough to permit of perfect freedom in walking, and it should not touch the ground at any point. The old style skirts, plaited and flowing, picked up enormous quantities of germs in the streets and carried them into the home, which the sensible skirt would not do."

The opinion that the tight skirt is hygienic and the right thing for women was expressed by 25 doctors in Chicago, among them Drs. Maurice B. Wolff, Norman Curry and Arthur B. Reynolds. They declared the tight skirt is a splendid thing, and that, among other things, it corrects the tendency of the American woman to turn her toes out when walking.

12 Billion Postage Stamps Ordered

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Postmaster General Burleson has ordered 12,071,480,000 postage stamps for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Men Should Marry At 32, Women at 22, Declare Parisians

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, July 3.—The modern French attitude toward marriage will be shown in the results of a canvass conducted by a popular French journal for women.

The first question—"At what age should a young man marry?"—gave an average of 32 years from about 12,000 answers. The second question—"At what age should a young woman marry?"—gave an average of 22 years. To the third question—"What should be the difference in the ages between husband and wife?"—the majority answered five years.

Three hundred and seventy-five women declared that people should not marry at all.

Lillian Russell Wed; Mary Garden, Too

CHICAGO, July 3.—Municipal Judge Hopkins, sitting in the Morals Court, paid for the marriage license of Paul Corallo and Miss Lillian Russell, 28 years old, 1134 West Monroe Street, when they were arraigned before him. He performed a marriage ceremony and gave the bridegroom a present of $5.

According to the marriage license clerk, Mary Garden was also among the brides of yesterday, wedding one Atoni Kral. Mary is not an opera singer.

Cavalieri Principal In D'Annunzio Opera

PARIS, July 3.—Gabriels d'Annunzio, the librettist, and Riccardo Zandonai, the composer of the opera "Francesca da Rimini," will go to Boston to superintend its first production in February next which will take place before it is presented in Europe.

Henry Russell, director of the Boston Opera Company, completed arrangements to-day with Lina Cavalieri to take the principal part.

Women in Trousers Handicapped in Love

NEW YORK, July 3.—Miss Sharlee V. Wilmarth, who has returned from Paris on the Minnetonka, believes it is impossible for a woman to make love in trousers.

"I wouldn't wear 'em for a fortune," she said, "unless they were knickerbockers, and I wore a skirt just as well. Just imagine a man spooning with a girl wearing trousers."

Roosevelt Scored As Drinker By W. C. T. U.

CARDON, OHIO, July 3.—The W. C. T. U. of Middlefield, Ohio, has adopted resolutions denouncing Colonel Roosevelt as a temperance man, asserting that his libel suit proved him an habitual drinker, though a moderate one and that as such and because of his prominent position he is more harm to the temperance cause than a common drunkard.

MARQUIS' BALM TO CHORUS GIRL $250,000

English Nobleman Settles Beauty's Breach of Promise Suit Out of Court.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 3.—Damages of a quarter of a million dollars were awarded to Miss Violette Moss, a chorus girl, in her breach of promise suit against the Marquis of Northampton, who came into his title two weeks ago.

When the suit was called before the King's Bench, attorneys notified the court that a settlement had been reached by which Miss Moss was to receive $250,000. The action was withdrawn and the costs were put upon the defendant.

Miss Moss, whose stage name is Daisy Markham, set a high price upon her affections. She spurned two previous offers of settlement, one of $50,000 and the other $125,000.

The elder Marquis of Northampton, who tried vainly to break his son's love for the actress, died a fortnight ago in Italy of a broken heart. It was reliably reported that the young marquis had revealed intimate family secrets to Miss Moss and that she threatened to expose these to the public unless amply paid for silence.

In anticipation of hearing racy testimony the courtroom was thronged to-day when the case was called. The spectators were sorely disappointed when the settlement was announced.

THE GHOST BREAKER

By G. W. GODDARD and PAUL DICKEY

Adapted From the Big Broadway Success That Thrilled Thousands of New Yorkers

SERIALIZED

By J. W. McCONAUGHY

(Copyright, 1913, by Star Co.)

IN all the thousands of square feet of steep slate roof there is one loose nail. It thrusts its head up in that one-inch strip where it can catch and hold the bootheel of the steeplejack who is sliding to his death.

This grim, freakish humor of the Powers That Be, which is miscalled "coincidence," caused Warren Jarvis to mistake his right for his left hand as he was running for his life down a carpeted corridor of the Hotel Vanderlip far above the night roar of Broadway. Thus he turned, not into the room that led to the fire escape, but into the bed chamber of the Dona Maria Theresa of Segura, Princess of Aragon, who had a lot of other titles and innumerable privileges, none of which she needed at that moment nearly so much as she needed Warren Jarvis, fleeing the vengeance of the law.

Fevered and distraught the Princess had retired to rest, but not to sleep, an hour before. Her situation, the peril that menaced her, belonged to an age that lives to-day only in Scott and Froissart. Four or five centuries before her countryman Cervantes had slain with a laugh the type of man who would gladly have aided her, and would have seen nothing ridiculous about it. Her ancestral home, the ancient castle of the Seguras, was given over to bats and owls by night and crows by day.

Hidden somewhere among the deadly pitfalls and secret passages of the castle was a treasure of a million dollars in gold. It was guarded by a ghost, a true specter that men had scoffed at and braved—and then had promptly disappeared.

Now it was no longer scoffed at or braved. But she had just received a cable dispatch telling her that her brother had entered the castle and around her neck hung the solution to the hiding place of the treasure, the little chart found that day after a weary search.

A Duke's Offer.

It was a tale to tell a knight of Arthur's table, not to a Castilian dandy of the twentieth century, soft-handed and sophisticated. Her kinsman, the Duke of Alva, indeed, had offered to be her champion, but he bargained in advance, and the guerdon he asked was her hand. And, besides, lately she had had cause to distrust deeply the honor and honesty of her kinsman of Alva.

Dona Maria had never read the lines of Mr. Kipling's "Romance Is Dead!"—and all unseen, romance brought on the nine-fifteen, or she might have had more faith in a power still strong enough to run express trains. When the splendid, silly order of chivalry fell and died the winds of romance carried a few of the seeds across the seas to a broad and fertile valley and dropped them in the rich soil where the Ohio comes down to meet the Mississippi. There, as elsewhere, custom makes law, regardless of written statutes. And so it was that, following a custom that had grown from one of those seeds, as immutable as the Cumberland ridges, a young man in evening clothes, clean of heart, brave and good humored, with a 1912 model pistol gripped in his overcoat pocket, walked past Dona Maria's door in a New York hotel, seeking the head of the Markhams, to kill or be killed in a fair fight, for no other reason than that the man he sought was the head of the Markhams and had invited him to "shoot it out."

But Dona Maria did not know this. As simply as the distressed damosel of Arthur's time she prayed for help, and was sinking into the uncertain doze of the sorely troubled—when romance answered the prayer.

The silence of the cloistral corridor was blasted with a sharp double-crack—the reports of two pistols coming as closely together as you might snap the third and fourth fingers of your hand.

Dona Maria sat up with a start.

"Madre de Dios!" came a self-strangled scream from the maid's room. "What is it?"

There followed instantly a soft thudding of running feet and a hand violently shook her door. The Princess sprang up with a frightened cry, flung a dressing gown about her and switched on an alcove light. The brass slot in the door frame leaped out, a young man darted inside, closed and bolted the door, and stood crouched against it, panting. A pistol was clutched in his hand and a red trickle ran down and dripped off the barrel on to the red carpet.

The Hunt.

"Madre de Dios!" shrieked the maid again.

"Sh-h!" commanded the young man at the door in a stern whisper. "Keep quiet—don't make any noise!"

The first shock of the alarm past, the Princess stepped out into the dim light from the alcove, holding the dressing gown closely about her. She was a true daughter of romance, hot-blooded and courageous, with no more "nerves" than the mountains that guarded her castle home.

"What do you want?" she demanded, advancing upon the intruder.

For reply he waggled the pistol impatiently and pressed his ear more closely to the door. A confused sound of voices and a mighty running to and fro came from the hall.

"What's the bally row?"

"I heard him—he ran past my door!"

"Anybody killed?"

"What the ——'s loose now?"

"It was two shots—I heard 'em."

The coolness with which he ignored her presence and perfectly natural inquiries as to the cause of the intrusion banished what little trace of alarm was in the Princess' bosom and left only indignation.

"How dare you enter"——

"Sh—silence!" he interrupted, so sharply that she obeyed through sheer amazement. "Not a sound! Do you understand?"

Dona Maria opened her lips to blast him, to summon aid, but the hubbub without broke out anew and she listened. The steps and voices were passing the door.

"It was a pistol, I tell you."

"Well, where'd he go?"

"Look out on the fire escape, Jim!"

"No, he's on this floor."

"How could he get downstairs, you dunce!"

The hue and cry reached down the hall and the Princess swept down upon Mr. Jarvis, who finally straightened up and faced her.

A Man's Appeal.

"Now, what does this mean?" she demanded, grimly, in a swift glance taking account of the evening clothes and the trim, well set-up figure of the man who had wrenched the lock of a door out of its frame. But, though she was brave, she also took account of the pistol.

"Is it money you want?" she demanded, with a curl of her lip. She drew back against the bed. "Every cent I have is on the dressing table. Take it and go!"

The young man pushed his hat back and mopped his brow with the back of his hand.

"No—no!" he protested, raising his voice a little. "I'm not a burglar—I don't want your money."

She noticed that he was panting hard and was very much more agitated than she was. Even the pistol lost its terror.

"Well, then—what do you want?" she cried.

He was about to reply when the sound of the returning hunt reached his ears.

"Wait—wait!" he begged, swiftly. "They're coming here! They must not search this room—do you understand? You must put them off! For pity's sake," he pleaded, "you must put them off! I'm not what you think I am—I haven't done anything wrong—I'll explain afterward!" And he slipped behind the curtain of the alcove as there came an authoritative knock at the door and the maid ran into the room, crying "Madame, something dreadful has happened!"

Dona Maria silenced her. Her eyes were on the door, and she was thinking rapidly. According to those deeply versed in human affairs the truth has no particular accent of its own. But Dona Maria was not deeply versed in these matters—and she was a woman, with a woman's swift, subconscious reasoning. He had told the truth—he was a gentleman—he was hunted and in sore need of a friend, and so was she. A man would have considered only the fact of the shots, the pistol and the flight, and left it to a jury of men, a man-judge and man's law to sift out the rights of the case.

Bang—bang! A more violent assault on the door.

"Anybody in here?" demanded a deep voice. "Open the door!"

A Woman's Way.

The maid shivered, implored the Virgin to look out for her and turned a fearful questioning gaze on her mistress.

"Open it, Nita," was the quiet command. The maid moved gingerly up to the door and Dona Maria took a last quick glance at the curtains that hid the young man who fought with a pistol in a Broadway hotel, broke locks with his hands and had thrown himself on her mercy.

Nita opened the door part way and the house detective, a short, squat man about three feet thick, thrust himself in.

"You all right here?" he asked curtly.

"Si, senor," lisped Nita, timidly. The Princess came forward.

"What is it, Nita?" she asked with becoming dignity. The maid drew aside.

"My mistress," she bowed.

The detective half bowed. "Excuse me, madam," he said, with a slight abatement of his brusqueness. "I'm the house detective. You all right in here?"

For a bare instant Dona Maria hesitated. Then:

"Yes," she said.

"Sorry to bother you—looking for some one," apologized the detective, backing out. "Good night."

"Oh, madame," wailed the girl, after he had gone. "I am so frightened! What is it?—what is it?"

"Control yourself, Nita," the mistress reproved her. "Go to bed. I shall not need you until 6 o'clock."

Sniffling, but subdued, Nita returned to her bedroom and shut herself in. Jarvis emerged from the shelter of the alcove.

"Thank you," he said simply. "Would you mind bolting that door again?" The Princess stared at him, paralyzed by his assurance. With magnificent impudence, so it seemed to her, he did not understand why she did not obey. "He might return," he reminded her. And, undecided whether to laugh, cry or turn him over to the house detective, Princess Dona Maria of Aragon went and bolted the door.

As she turned back to him he pointed with his pistol to the door of the maid's room.

No Way Out.

"Is there no way out throught that door?" he asked.

She told him there was not.

"The fire escape—where is it?"

"In the hall opposite," replied Dona Maria, gazing at him in wonder and perplexity. She knew nothing about him, except that he was, unless appearances were very deceiving, a fugitive from justice. Yet he took it for granted that she was his ally. She was under 30 and considered one of the most beautiful women in Spain. Her kinsman of Alva, who had a discriminating taste in such matters, had made her beauty famous in five capitals, and those of his sex who had been fortunate enough to glimpse her, by accident, in the warmly colored and clinging gown of the boudoir that betrayed every exquisite line, declared that those who had seen Dona Maria only in the ballroom and at the dinner table would have to wait for the houris of Paradise to form some idea of her true loveliness. Yet she was certain that this young man could not have told at that moment if she had cross eyes and a hair lip. Indeed, if there had been any doubt about it his next utterance would have removed it.

"Across the hall? H——l!" he exclaimed, with energy. "I was certain that light was—oh, I beg pardon," he broke off suddenly, and was so boyishly embarrassed and contrite that Dona Maria was certain he had at last noticed the absence of the hair lip. But this did not mean forgiveness.

"Well, why don't you go?" she inquired, coldly.

His confusion increased. "But—but I can't go that way," he protested, waving the pistol hopelessly at the hall door. "They're waiting for me in the hall!"

"Well," the Princess gazed at him with an unusual leiness in her great dark eyes, "what do you expect me to do about it?"

Now this was a tactical blunder, for it summoned the young man's sense of the ridiculous to his aid—and he smiled. If he were not the hero of this narrative it would be a truthful recorder's duty to set down that he grinned. Dona Maria was piqued, but felt herself warm to a man who could smile—or grin—when a house full of police were looking for him. And then came the romantic thought that this was the type of man to be her champion. She surveyed him swiftly, but accurately.

The brass slot in the door frame leaped out, a young man darted inside, closed and bolted the door, and stood crouched against it, panting. A pistol was clutched in his hand and a red trickle ran down and dripped off the barrel on to the red carpet.

A Modern Hero.

He was not the stuff that dream heroes are made of—at least not to look at, if his build were excepted. He was tall, with broad, slender shoulders and a certain lightness of step and frictionless ease of movement that explained the collapse of the brass lock. But his rumpled hair—he had just at that moment removed his opera hat and was nervously tapping his thigh with it—was a nondescript, plebeian sandy shade, and his good-humored face seemed to have borrowed some of the pigment of the hair. The nose was straight but generously flecked with freckles about the bridge. The mouth was liberally designed, and when he smiled—or grinned—showed rows of strong, white teeth. The eyes were of a kind of sandy gray, and, like Alan Breck's, had a sort of dancing madness in them.

It was a head that would have thrown a Gibson into convulsions, but a Holbein would have clapped a steel cap on it and made it immortal.

Dona Maria noted all of this, but took open note only of the smile—or grin.

"Is the situation so amusing?" she inquired, with increasing wintriness of one and look.

He made a quick gesture of apology nd was instantly serious.

"I'm not laughing at you—I beg your pardon. I blundered in here by mistake—but I'm in a tight place. I can't leave by that door. I must find some other way."

He threw open his overcoat as he spoke and she saw the blood on his hand. This was the last needed touch. She was a woman.

"You're wounded!" she exclaimed, going to him and looking at the hand solicitously. "What's happened? Those shots I heard—"

He nodded and laughed silently. "I almost stopped one of the bullets. It just nudged me as it was going by."

"Your hand is bleeding dreadfully."

"Oh, not much," he assured her, and tried awkwardly to tie the wrist with his handkerchief, still holding the revolver. The Princess half raised her hands to assist him and drew back. He did not notice. He was gazing about the room with a troubled frown.

"I don't see how the devil——" he muttered, more to himself than to her, evidently trying to devise some means of escape. Dona Maria drew a little farther away.

"You have evidently shot some one and are trying to make me shield you from justice," she said sternly.

"No, not justnce," he rejoined instantly, "from the law."

"I thought they were the same."

He shook his head gravely. "No, not always. There would be no justice for me at the hands of the law."

He looked into her eyes as he spoke, and for a few moments they stood thus in silence. The woman's eyes turned away first.

"That is not for me to decide," she declared.

"But I want you to decide," he urged gently. "At least, you must listen. And if you find me guilty I'll—well, I'll try the fire escape or anything—anything else you say."

The Princess raised her eyes to his and found them so full of earnest pleading that she dropped them once more.

"That is ridiculous," she said, but with such marked lack of conviction that he smiled.

"Hardly ridiculous," he objected: "when I'm arguing for my life."

Having fully made up her mind to listen, Dona Maria found another objection. Her eyes rested on the revolver.

"Can any decision be more unjust than mine," she asked coldly, "that must be made at the point of a pistol?"

He started, and flushed, and gazed down at his right hand. He had forgotten that he was still holding the revolver. Then he walked over to the dressing table and placed it within easy reach of her hand, and stood off some little distance, so that she was between him and the weapon.

"There is nothing to prevent your calling for help now," he said, hopelessly. "After all, it doesn't much matter whether the end comes now or tomorrow or the day after."

The Princess eyed him steadily until she was convinced that the despair was not a sham. There was no trace of the disarming smile.

His Explanation.

"The end?" she echoed, somewhat blankly. "Then why didn't you give yourself up?"

"That would have been the end," was the grim reply. Dona Maria's manner softened ever so slightly and she moved very slowly toward him. He correctly interpreted this as encouragement to proceed.

"Do you know what a feud is?" he asked abruptly. Her eyes opened wide and she pointed out in the general direction whence those shots had come.

"Feud!" sh exclaimed in a low voice. "Was that——?"

"Yes," he nodded. "That was the end of a feud. Do you know what a feud is?"

"Spain is the home of feuds," she replied, softly.

Jarvis started and his face lit with hope. "Spain!" he exclaimed. "Are you Spanish? Then you will understand! My grandmother was Spanish—one of the oldest families in Cuba. I was born in Kentucky, but they sent me East to be reared. I was called home suddenly by the death of my father—shot in a feud. They told me the ghastly history of our feud," he went on rapidly, his voice vibrant with emotion, "how our family had been assassinated, man after man, by the descendants of Daniel Markham. Then my father fell, leaving me—the last—to fight it out alone!"

He paused with a gulp and Dona Maria, leaning toward him, asked softly: "And your mother?"

"She has gone, too."

"She—she died?" The question was almost reverent.

"She died. God only knows what I've been through since then!"

He turned away and there was a little silence.

"But," said Dona Maria, as if gently arguing a point with an old friend, "why didn't you leave Kentucky?"

He jerked himself around impatiently.

"I did leave Kentucky—I was forced to leave!" he cried, "I had grown sick at heart and—and the odds were too great. I sent a negro servant to New York and followed soon after by another route; but it was no use. I was going to sail for Europe, longing for peace, but they wouldn't let me. Every move was watched! I had hardly been in New York five hours before I realized that the Markham clan was on my trail, eager to get me before I could get out of the country. They thought I was afraid, when I was only sick of it. A message reached me at my hotel—across the street—at 12 o'clock tonight. It was signed 'Jim Markham'—the head of the family—and proposed that as we were out of Kentucky we end the feud amicably. I knew the name, I knew what he meant, and I went to see him—prepared!"

Her Side of It.

He shrugged his shoulders half in resignation, half in despair.

"It was as I expected. He was stopping in this hotel—on this floor. I threw open the door of the room, unannounced. Nothing was said—we both fired." He looked down at his wounded and, and his dramatic manner vanished.

"Now do you understand why the law would not give me justice?" he asked quietly.

The girl shuddered. "It's all so horrible," she murmured. "Did—did you kill him?"

Jarvis opened his hands and dropped them, limp.

"I don't know," he replied indifferently. "He dropped—I didn't wait."

He looked past, not at, her as he spoke. The lethargy, the mental and physical languor, that succeeds a terrible crisis was upon him—the time when a man feels that he is without strength, without friends, without hope.

The girl sensed the change in him and was surprised to feel a twinge of impatience.

"What are you going to do?" she asked crisply.

Jarvis shrugged his shoulders. "I don't know." The tone was dull and hopeless. "What's the use of going on? Do you know what it means," he went on bitterly, "to fight single-handed against fearful odds—to fight an endless fight alone?"

The girl turned her dark eyes on him with a strange expression.

"Yes," she said, half audibly; "yes, I know."

"A barren, fruitless, hopeless fight—without even a single gleam of love or word of encouragement?"

"Yes," replied Dona Maria, slowly and with meaning, "I know what it means."

Jarvis stared at her. "You know?" he exclaimed, incredulously. "How could you know—how could any woman know?"

"Yes, I know," declared the Princess, somberly. "Because I, too, am fighting against fearful odds."

The young woman gazed at her in wonder that gave way to sympathy and more wonder as her loveliness came upon him.

"There is no man to fight for you?" he asked, betraying his thought in his question. Dona Maria understood.

"No man left who dares," she replied with bitterness.

As his gaze strayed from the soft, deep black eyes to the pile of soft black hair and down the curve of the soft, creamy cheek to the smooth red lips, he wondered, even in the depths of his misery, what manner of men she had about her.

"God!" he breathed, fervently, "if here had only been some woman to fight for in my fight!"

And if he had said all that was in his mind he would have inserted the words, "like you." Dona Maria must have understood that these words were implied, for she said softly:

"It seems as though Providence had thrown you in my path. You say there would be no justice for you at the hands of the law? If you are found here it means your life."

"Yes," he replied and waited curiously for what was to come. Dona Maria appeared to deliberate.

"Suppose I decide to help you," she suggested gravely, "and drive a hard bargain?"

Jarvis was relieved to find that he could smile again. So was Dona Maria, but she did not publish her feelings.

"What do you mean?" he inquired.

"Your life in Kentucky is finished—you can never go back to it."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Hilbert Tells of Her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.

FLEETWOOD, PA.—"During the Change of Life I was hardly able to be around at all. I always had a headache and I was so dizzy and nervous that I had no rest at night. The flashes of heat were so bad sometimes that I did not know what to do.

"One day a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me a strong well woman. I am very thankful that I followed my friend's advice, and I shall recommend it as long as I live. Before I took the Compound I was always sickly and now I have not had medicine from a doctor for years. You may publish my letter."—MRS. EDWARD B. HILBERT, Fleetwood, Pa.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, bakaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

BACK TO SIMPLICITY

A Short Story, Complete

"GRACIOUS!" said the girl in the lizard green gown. "You've got your hair pulled back! Why do you do it so plainly?"

"It isn't!" objected the young married woman, ungrammatically. "It's no plainer than yours or any one else—it's just that you've been used to seeing me with all my hair on—puffs, transformations, braid and Billie Burke curls! Oh, I stuck to them long after every one else had gone in for the new plain style, using just one's own hair. But I didn't have enough own hair to make a bit with, and, anyhow, I look better with my hair sort of elaborate. But I'm cured!"

"Who did it?"

"It wasn't a who, it was a what," explained the young married woman. "But I'll tell you, anyway.

"The other day I remembered that I was due at the Splurge wedding that evening, so I shampooned my own hair and washed my own hair once removed in gasoline. Now, if there is anything I dislike, it is to go by a building and think an Indian reservation has broken loose and is exhibiting scalplocks—for that is what I'm always reminded of when I see curls and puffs and things pinned to the lace curtains where they will get the breeze and sun and will lose their gasoline perfume.

Hidden From View.

"So after my extra adornments were cleansed I pinned them inside the window curtains, where they were hidden from the view of the populace. Then, feeling safe and at peace, I sat on the sun porch and read a book and dried my truly hair. After a while, when it got to be luncheon time, I went to my bedroom for something and casually glanced at the curtains where modestly hung my other hair. Only it didn't hang there. The curtains flapped mockingly, and if you had seen me dive headforemost at that open window you would have been justified in the belief that suicide was the best thing I did.

"Down in the alley below was a lovely sea of mud. They are building on the next lot, and the heavy wagons with brick and cement and things have made a regular morass of the place. Probably my hair was in the mud. As I stared a particularly heavy wagon lumbered and squashed through, shaking off several pounds of brickdust. I shrieked madly for help, and Tilly, the baby's nurse, came running.

"'Those luffly puffs!' Tilly wailed and darted forthwith to the alley, while I directed operations from above. Tilly balanced on a brick and surveyed the mud with deep dislike, making little dabs at it tentatively. Finally, in one of the deep ruts she saw a whisp of hair projecting, and some tugging excavated my largest puff, a sodden, sticky lump. A puddle gave up another and she found a third under the imprint of a horse's hoof, but the fourth had vanished. Tilly came upstairs holding her muddy treasure trove at arm's length.

"'But where's my transformation?' I shrieked. 'That cost $15—and as for the braid—well, I might just as well go into bankruptcy if that switch isn't found!'"

"Tilly protested that the earth below would not yield up another bit of hair. I began to wonder how I could send regrets to a wedding after I had already accepted, and then Mary called me to luncheon. I was weeping real tears into my soup when Mary burst in and asked permission to go downstairs, which was unusual at a mealtime, of course. I inquired why, but she just waved her arms wildly and disappeared.

"In due time she reappeared breathless and triumphant with a weird-looking thing in one hand. It was my transformation! She said she had scoured the country roundabout with the opera glasses and had seen something hanging on a bridal wreath bush in the Harveys' front yard, three houses down, and it looked like hair to her, and it proved to be hair. She added that Mrs. Harvey on the front porch had seemed greatly interested in the proceedings. Mrs. Harvey has always exclaimed publicly about my 'wealth of beautiful hair,' so I could imagine how pleased she must have been.

A Ring.

"As I finished my strawberries there was a loud ring at the bell, and when Tilly went to the speaking tube I distinctly heard the wretch of a small boy who was in the vestibule two stories below yelling for the edification of the whole building: 'Say, yer switch is a-hanging just below your bedroom window ledge on the telephone wires!'

"Tilly got the switch while I hung on to her heels. Then, very much exhausted, I washed everything again—but somehow I kept smelling gasoline all evening and I distinctly heard a man back of me in the middle of the church say it was remarkable how the automobiles outside seemed to be leaking. It was too much of a strain, so I've abandoned the whole outfit."

"Well, I don't blame you!" said the girl in the lizard green gown.

Freaks of Fashion

Monstrosities From Paris Boulevards

In Paris extremes of costume are seen more frequently than they are here. These three were "snapped" by a foreign correspondent for the Hearst newspapers recently. When our fashion expert was asked to describe them she immediately complained of feeling faint and went home. Therefore any of our women readers who feel "freakish" will have to solve these fashion puzzles for themselves.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ASK HER.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and in love with a girl of twenty-one. She also loves me. Last night I told a friend about it. He laughed and said: "That girl is married."

Now, how shall I find out the truth?

CONSTANT READER.

Ask her. If you find you can't take her word, then cease your attentions. No happiness was ever built on doubt or suspicion.

QUIT TELLING HER.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-three, and have had an acquaintance with a girl of eighteen for the past nine months. I am deeply in love with her, but, somehow, she does not seem to appreciate the same. Now, what I would like to know is there anyway I could bring her to understand the true feeling I have for her? G. F.

You have given her nine months' devotion that she doesn't seem to appreciate. The story of your love seems to have become old and stale. Quit telling it. Awaken her interest by giving her some reason to doubt you.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I SHOWED Pa & Ma a peece in a boys' magazine that offerd a prize of ten dollars for the best short story of ad-venture wrote by a boy not oaver twelve yeers old. I toald Pa that I was going to try for the prize, & Pa sad rite away that he wud help me rite the story.

Why doant you let Bobbie rite it hisself? sed Ma. I doant think it wud be fair to the other littel boys who will com-peet to have you cum along with yure wunderful, marvelous brain & win that ten dollars. Let the kids have thare own competishun, Ma sed.

So this is the story I rote. It had to be less than a hundred words & it is pritty hard to rite a story inside of a hundred words & have the whole plot in. This is how I rote it:

It was midnite in Mexico. A silvery moon smiled at the Rio Grande wich wound its way through the lonely desert.

Crack! A pistol shot rang out & Bad Antonio pitched from his horse.

Sheriff Vane halted his horse before it cud trample on the body of the outlaw.

One glanst was enuff for Sheriff Vane.

The Mexican was ded.

Crack! Crack! Two pistol shots rang out thru the desert air, and Sheriff Vane pitched from his horse.

Bad Silvio and Bad Chico halted thare horses beefoar they cud trample on the body of the Sheriff.

One glanst was enuff for the two outlaws.

The Sheriff was ded.

That story won't win any prize, Bobbie, sed Pa. It ain't a good piece of work at all. I guess you better let me rite it all oaver for you.

Ma seen that I felt kind of bad. Every time wen I feel bad my lip gits kind of stiff. I can't help it & I can't grin wen I try. So Ma patted me on the cheek and sed Bobbie, that is a good story, & I bet you will win the prize. Yure father can't help you in this contest, excep, maybe, he can help you to spend the ten dollars wen you win it.

He will nevver win the prize, sed Pa. The story is vary crude.

I don't think you are a competent critick, sed Ma. You nevver rote any stories yourself that won any prizes, & now you are trying to tell littel Bobbie how to rite. You are always that way, Ma sed, trying to tell peepul how to do things that you can not do yureself. I will bet you a ten-dollar bathrobe aggenst a ten-dollar hat, Ma sed, that Bobbie wins the prize. I am giving you a even munny bet, Ma sed, & I am talking Bobbie aggenst the whole field. That is the kind of a bettor I am, Ma sed.

Sure enuff, day beefoar yesterday I got a letter from the boys' magazeen & thare was a new ten-dollar bill in it.

"Well, sed Ma to Pa, cum acrost with that ten dollars for my hat.

I haven't the change now, sed Pa. Bobbie, let yure mother taik that ten dollars till payday.

That is the way Pa paid his bet & I wud be broak now only Ma gaiv me the ten back & sed she wud wait till payday for her hat. Pa thinks he knows lots, but Ma is a better bettor.

Not Like Him.

The Academy exhibition, with its fine Sargent portraits, recalls a story of this famous artist. At a banquet a young lady whom he knew very well said to him:

"Oh, Mr. Sargent, I saw your latest painting, and kissed it because it was so much like you."

"And did it kiss you in return?"

"Why, no."

"Then," said Mr. Sargent, "it was not like me."

Competition.

A little girl had been the pet of the family. Every one made much of her, but when there was a new little baby brother she felt rather neglected.

"How are you, Mary?" a visitor asked of her one afternoon.

"Oh, I'm all right," she said, "except that I think there is too much competition in this world."

Do You Know That—

In the lunatic asylum at Nantes is an illiterate inmate who has been discovered by the chief doctor to be a remarkable "lightning calculator." Ask what would be the age of a person who had lived a milliard of seconds, he took only 48 seconds to reply correctly. In 23 seconds he supplied the correct answer to the question, what would be the age of a person who had lived 343,000,000 seconds. He required only 32 seconds to find out how many seconds there were in 39 years, three months, twelve hours. Having been told the square mileage of the globe, he was asked how many hectares that represents, and gave the correct reply in four seconds. Asked how many seconds there are in 30 years, he replied in fourteen seconds, and explained that his calculations had involved four multiplications and one addition by mental arithmetic.

Mr. Jeffrey Farnol, who so suddenly leaped into fame as the author of "The Broad Highway," of which more than 300,000 copies have been sold, comes of a stock somewhat remarkable for its longevity. His grandparents are still living, as also their ten sons and daughter, with numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Four generations of one family, with only one loss by death—and that the author's brother, who fell in action in the Boer war—may be considered almost phenomenal.

Dancing at German court functions is a serious business, for the Kaiser will allow no one to take the floor who is not an expert. When a ball is in progress the court dancing master sits in one of the galleries and carefully observes the dancers. Should he detect ungracefulness in any guest he communicates with the Emperor, and the offender is presently warned that he or she must become more proficient before again being invited to the palace.

Time's Up! Did You Send in a Solution of "The Triple Tie"?

$250 in Cash Prizes for the Best "Final Chapter" of The Georgian's Great Mystery Story

The final chapters of "The Triple Tie" will be printed in The Georgian next Monday, July 7. Readers of "The Triple Tie" had until noon to-day to send in their conception of the conclusion of the story, containing their solution of the mystery in competition for prizes aggregating $250 offered by The Georgian. The problems for the reader to solve were these:

First—How does Kelly escape the mountaineers?

Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?

Third—How did Gordon Kelly, who confessed that he never saw a game of ball and never played a game of ball up to the time he asked Manager Smith of the Atlanta club for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to bat, catch and run bases in the marvelous manner he displayed at Atlanta that caused the Boston club to give the unheard-of price of $50,000 for Gordon Kelly's release?

Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the ninth inning of the final and deciding game?

Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

No contributions will be considered if they are delivered at The Georgian office later than to-day, July 3, noon, or bear a postmark later than that time.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian, will award the prizes.

The prizes for the best solutions are as follows:

First Prize	$100.00
Second Prize	50.00
Third Prize	25.00
Fourth Prize	15.00
Twelve Prizes, each	5.00
Total	$250.00

CUDDLING COTTAGES : A Charming Short Story, Complete

THERE were two red houses in Acraman's road which shouldered each other confidentially and seemed on such manifestly affectionate terms that the notion of their respective inhabitants being anything but bosom friends was simply ridiculous.

The thought struck Dollabella Powney quite forcibly when she bought one of these said houses, and made her more eager than was her wont (she was not curious by nature) to catch a glimpse of her next door neighbor. Oddly enough, it was quite a fortnight after she had moved in before she did so, and then the manner of her "catching" was sadly at variance with her customary traditions of dignity.

Consumed one May evening with a desire to know something of that neighbor's tastes and habits, she rose on an inverted blacking box which she had placed against her garden wall to take a furtive peep at the adjacent premises. The neighbor, curiously enough, chose that precise spot and moment for a similar maneuver. Result, their noses all but met. The neighbor said afterward that he was training a creeper, but the denouement was, in any case, absurd. Dollabella shrieked.

Her blacking box turned turtle at the start she gave, and she nearly sprained an ankle as she fell plump into a group of peonies. With a countenance the color of those flamboyant blossoms, and tears of mortification in her eyes, she scrambled up and went majestically indoors, banging the front door to ease her feelings. The neighbor—such is the depravity of man—laughed. After that there was only one course open to Dollabella—the next-door neighbor must be ignored—sent to Coventry—ostracized—crushed.

It was two months later, and the sultry glory of a July evening took the "Cuddling Cottagers"—as they were irreverently called—into an almost tropical embrace. Miss Powney was very busy—a garden hose in one hand and a little black volume, with a white whirligig on its cover, in the other. She appeared, between bouts of watering, to be committing something to memory.

The next door man was on a ladder. He was chronically on ladders. Dollabella had consulted her lawyer brother as to the possibility of a single woman getting an injunction against people who perpetually mounted heights and, under a pretext of pruning, commanded other people's domains. Moreover, he was whistling, and his whistling got upon Dollabella's nerves. Whenever she looked up she could see his straw hat and a pair of big brown hands busy among the young branches of a mulberry tree—and the sight annoyed her.

"Fractures," said Dollabella to herself, as she hosed a thirsty-looking clump of carnations, "are of six kinds: simple — compound — convex — concave (no, that sounds nonsense)—wait a minute."

She threw back her head and looked to the sky for inspiration.

"Wheou—whe-ou," went the man next door.

"Simple—compound — implicated—ocntex—ah!"

"Slither—scrape—crash—plomb!"

"Good heavens!" cried Dollabella, and the little black book with the white whirligig fell from her nerve-shaken hand to the ground.

A Crash.

Something had happened next door—something which included a splintering sound and the too sudden contact of a heavy body with Mother Earth.

The whistling had ceased abruptly in the middle of a bar; there was no longer any sign of a straw hat and clipping hands.

Dollabella, listening in cold horror, heard two or three groans, and then there was a ghastly silence.

Her heart thumped bard against her ribs—her breath came in little uncomfortable gasps.

"It's an accident of some sort," she said addressing the flower borders. "Now, what ought I to do?"

The hollyhocks and sweet-williams having no views on the subject she did what common sense prompted. The gardener, who came once a week to mow the grass and titivate the garden generally, had left a pair of short steps close at hand. She fetched them and placed them against the wall, and climbed to the top.

She was almost afraid to look, but common sense gave her another prod, and look she did; and, in looking beheld a prone figure which lay on its back, presenting a very white upturned face to the summer sky.

By its side, also prone, was a broken ladder.

At first she really thought that the whistling man next door was dead. Her heart seemed to turn a somersault and to stop before it got over. She scrambled down into his garden, dropping bang on to a choice lilium-auratum in the process, and hurried to his side. He was breathing, but seemed quite unconscious, and his right arm was bent in a curious way—and the hand looked swollen.

To the Rescue.

Dollabella knelt down and felt it gingerly; then she stared at it, and tried to marshal her recently acquired knowledge. "Pain—deformity—swelling," she muttered. "It's broken, of course it's broken. What shall I do? I must put it into splints before I call help."

Her eyes roved wildly around and discovered a golf putter lying on the lawn near a small hole. The whistling man practiced putting—when he was not in midair.

By means of his putter and a sturdy stick used for tying up dahlias, Dollabella made very serviceable splints which she tied on with her handkerchief and his. Just as she finished her patient moaned a little—and opened his eyes.

The pain in them lessened when he saw the apparition which bent over him.

"You will be quite all right now," Dollabella assured him, speaking very distinctly as if he were a child. "It's your arm, you know—broken. You know, I'm the girl from next door. I'm going to make you comfortable and send for your housekeeper to watch you while I fetch the doctor."

She looked around and seized a coat which she found near at hand, and arranged it beneath his head. The whistling man shut his eyes and moaned. The very slight movement had pained him.

"The beastly stem broke," he explained. "I was—ugh!"

"Yes—yes—don't try to talk; it will soon be better." Dollabella reassured him. "Now, lie quite still."

The caution was scarcely necessary as the man next door was in no condition to do anything else.

More Help.

He shut his eyes again. "Must you go?" he whispered.

"I must, really. You'll have to be bandaged properly, you see—besides, you're too big for me to move. I won't be long."

She sped indoors, big-eyed and white. After much unsuccessful knocking she dislodged a middle-aged housekeeper whom she almost pushed into the garden, explaining dramatically, and then she turned around again.

Up the country road she tore, and, after ten breathless minutes, she reached the doctor's house. Fortunately, he was in. He cast himself on a motor bicycle and flashed off almost before Dollabella had concluded the account of the accident.

The next day, after some debate with herself, she sent in her little maid to inquire after her neighbor. The answer came back: "Mr. Randall's compliments, and he was going on very nicely, and would like to see Miss Powney, if she could kindly find time to go in."

Dollabella, flushing very much at the message, decided she could not possibly find time to obey its request, and, to emphasize the truth of this, she sat idle for hours wondering whether she could or not. Mere civility demanded that she should go. She said this again and again. The man next door was lying on a couch, looking very forlorn.

"Please come in and sit down. Did you mind my asking you to come in like this?—I couldn't get to you—you see."

"I'm so glad you're better," Dollabella said primly, and she sat down obediently.

"It was slight concussion, you know, or I should be walking about," said the man next door. "I had to keep awfully quiet for 24 hours. How ever shall I thank you?"

Dollabella did not reply; she was staring very hard at the damaged arm in its splints.

Not the Arm.

"That isn't the arm I first aided," she suddenly burst out. "I—tied up your left—the one with the ring. I know I did."

The man next door got crimson right up to his nicely marked eyebrows. "It—it doesn't signify a bit," he said uncomfortably. "You did it beautifully—the doctor said so—and how could you know which arm it was if I wasn't up to telling you?"

"Pain—deformity—swelling," muttered Dollabella. "I am fated," she added distinctly, "to do idiotic things where you are concerned," and two big tears of sheer mortification rolled down her cheeks. And when she saw a smile on the face of her companion she could have killed him without compunction.

"What are you laughing at, please?" Dollabella dabbed her eyes defiantly.

"Because your 'idiotic things,' as you call them, don't hold a rushlight to mine. Confession's good for the soul. Look here—I never meant to tell you, but I—I threw myself off that ladder——"

"On purpose?"

"Yes."

"What on earth for?"

"Because I knew about the Red Cross classes, and I thought a smash-up would fetch you—but I never meant to break myself up like this."

Dollabella tried to keep her lips from twitching, but she couldn't.

Somehow the man next door got the unhurt arm around Dollabella's shoulders, and what he said when it was there does not matter to you or me. All that does matter is that the respective owners of the "Cuddling Cottages" behaved themselves quite appropriately from that day onward.

A couple of doors knocked through party walls later on made those houses one. The owners had been made one some weeks before.

Correct Words and How to Use Them

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.
Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

EVERY intelligent person is always progressing and is never indifferent in matters of culture. If careless habits of speech have been formed a determined effort to correct them will lead to good results.

Many persons who consider themselves well educated make the mistake of using the participle "got" in connection with the verb "to have." They say: "Have you got the key?" "Who has got my book?" instead of "Have you the key?" "Who has my book?"

Mistakes of everyday occurrence are, "Who did you give it to?" "Who is this for?" instead of the correct expressions, "To whom did you give it?" "For whom is this?"

Frequently one hears these errors in grammar: "I intended to have bought a pair of gloves," instead of "I intended to buy a pair of gloves;" "It was no use asking him," instead of "It was no use to ask him;" "Try and persuade her to go," instead of "Try to persuade her to go."

It would seem unnecessary to tell any one not to use the present tense instead of the past tense when mentioning what another has said, yet a careless person may be heard saying, "He says," instead of "He said."

Other faults are to say "A great ways," "Somewheres," "There's plenty of places."

The contraction "don't" for "do not" should never be used with a singular noun or pronoun. It is correct to say "He does not," and not "He don't." It is important to remember the objective form of the first person singular when a noun or pronoun or two pronouns follow a verb, and not to say "Ethel asked Mary and I to go," but "Ethel asked Mary and me to go." If one is confused about the use of pronouns in a sentence of this sort an easy rule is to separate them and use each one with the verb, thus: "Ethel asked Mary," and "Ethel asked me." In this way the grammatical form is seen.

It is correct to say "A summer day," not "A summer's day." "Cut the apple in two" or "in halves," not "Cut the apple in half." "I cut the ribbon off this piece," not "off of this piece." "The child threw it on the floor," not "onto the floor."

"Whether" is a word that indicates a choice of things and should not be placed at the head of each part of a sentence. For instance, it is incorrect to repeat it thus: "I have not decided whether I shall go to Boston or whether I shall stay at home."

Eat This Food During Summer

Be careful what you eat during hot weather. What you need is food that nourishes but does not heat the body.

Faust Spaghetti fits right into that class. It is a high gluten food—a bone, muscle and flesh former—but contains practically no fat, therefore cannot heat the body.

FAUST SPAGHETTI

makes a savory, appetizing dish. It can be served in a great many ways that appeal to the palate. It is easily prepared—it makes a nutritious, non-heating meal during the summer. Write for free recipe book, "Spaghetti and Its Uses." Faust Spaghetti put up in air-tight, moisture-proof packages.

GULLS FADING; RACE TIGHTENS UP NOW--AGLER

By Joe Agler.

PRICE AND CHAPMAN will do the haavy work for the Crackers in the opening game with the Pels to-day.

Paul Musser pitched a grand article of ball yesterday, and won the second and last game of the series from the Gulls. Paul was never in any great danger, and had everything his own way.

We scored in the first inning, and it looked like enough to win. We made sure, however, and scored two more in the seventh on clean hitting.

And that was enough.

They scored in the seventh, but could not find Musser for more than one run.

The Crackers certainly had a lot of life in both games, while Mobile was dead and never had a word to say.

The Gulls have left on a long trip around the circuit, and within a few more days there will be another leader in the league.

July will prove to be a great month for excitement in the pennant race in the Southern. Mobile, Chattanooga, Montgomery, Atlanta and perhaps Birmingham will be in a big scramble, and they will make some trouble before the season is over.

Now that we are on a winning streak and our twirlers going good again, and with our two weeks at home, we will start to climb and be up where we belong before long.

Price should win his game, as he is going good and has something on the Pels.

GIANTS MAKE 46 HITS IN THREE GAMES WITH PHILS

The Giants are a slob team, of course, as the last world's series showed. But they are surely the loud sound in the National League.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday they faced the Phillies in the "crucial series." The Phillies are supposed to have one of the greatest pitching staffs in the world. Yet in three games the Giants made 46 hits. On two occasions they made 17 hits. Once they got only 12. In the three games they scored 19 runs. Among the pitchers they drove to the woods were Chalmers twice, Moore, Killifer, Alexander twice, Rixey, Mayer and Seaton.

PLAYERS QUALIFY JULY 4 FOR PRESIDENT'S TROPHY

The qualifying round in the golf tournament for the trophy offered by the president of the Atlanta Athletic Club will be contested over the East Lake course July 4.

The first and second rounds of match play must be played by July 10, the semi-finals by July 17, and the finals, which will be at 36 holes, by July 20.

The star event of the day will be a team race, five men to the team, between the College Park Club and the Marietta Gun Club. It will be the second meet of a series between the clubs.

BRITTON AGREES TO 133 IN JULY 4 GO WITH WHITE

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 3.—Charlie White and Jack Britton are to fight at 133 pounds, weighing in three and one-half hour before their fight Friday afternoon. Britton agreed to this to-day when a conference of principals was held to settle final details. The meeting had waited the arrival of Nate Lewis from Chicago. The weight is quite satisfactory to White, who had expected he would be forced to make it 134, which would have been somewhat of an advantage to Britton. The boys will enter the ring at about 3:30 p. m.

"Charlie will surely continue his winning streak," said Lewis. "The next important match I am counting on is between White and the winner of the Ritchie-Rivers go."

MRS. M'CARTY ON COAST TO SETTLE LUTE'S ESTATE

LOS ANGELES, July 3.—Mrs. Rhoda McCarty, widowed by the blow of Arthur Pelky's fist that killed Luther McCarty in the arena at Calgary, Alberta, on May 24, is in Los Angeles to claim the $8,200 account her husband had with the German-American Savings Bank.

BUILDING PERMIT ISSUED FOR NEW STADIUM AT TECH

A building permit has just been issued for the erection of the concrete stadium on Grant Field at the Georgia Institute of Technology. The work will cost $15,000. This will pay only for the first stand. Later it is planned to surround the entire field with stands.

CRACKERS OPEN SERIES TO-DAY WITH PELICANS

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Crackers return from a strenuous road trip to-day, bringing more victories than was expected, and open here this afternoon with the once famous Pelicans.

With the team back in something resembling its stride now, with a new and promising pitcher coming, with Price and Conzelman in good trim, there is nothing to keep the Crackers from showing some speed on their present home stay.

To-day's game is an extra affair, a transferred game from New Orleans.

On July 4 games will be played in the morning and afternoon. Saturday one game will be played. All these contests will be with the well-known doormats of the league.

* * *

MEMPHIS and Mobile will furnish the opposition next week. The week after Montgomery comes for three games. And then the Crackers beat it southward.

As things stand now the Crackers are within comfortable striking distance of the lead. All needed is a good, brisk winning streak to get the Crackers up there fighting with the Gulls. The New Orleans and Memphis games should close up the gap somewhat. Then the Gulls come, and if the Crackers can sweep that series and trim Montgomery they will leave Atlanta for their Southern trip so close to first place that it will make it interesting.

Don't make the mistake of figuring the Crackers out of it yet. They aren't. A spurt will put them up in the running with a rush.

IT'S hard to figure why Carl Thompson isn't making a better showing. He looks like a great pitcher and he wins a few games. But somehow he couldn't stick with Birmingham.

Possibly by antagonizing the other players on every team of which he becomes a member Thompson hurts his own chances. It is certain that he did not stand high in the estimation of the other Barons and that they did not give him good support. Many a pitcher has been ruined because no team would play behind him.

CHARLEY FRANK has won more controversies and less ball games this season than any time in his history. He practically hasn't lost an argument or won a ball game. Of course that's an exaggerated statement but close to the real facts.

If this sort of thing keeps on Charley will give up managing and become a lawyer.

BY way of warning, all chicken owners on the route between Chicago and Montezuma the following item from Charley Dryden's pen is hereby published:

"Fred Toney is taking lessons lassoing chickens from the deck of a motorcycle. This fall he and Richie and Lavender will ride machines to Lavender's home at Montezuma, Ga., and Toney has promised to supply the grub en route."

CHARLEY HEMPHILL is not a great manager. That has been demonstrated. Probably Charley himself would hardly argue that he was. But he can still hit that old pellet. Up in the husky American Association where 20 men are batting over .300, Charley is next to the top, with a batting average of .353. R. Miller, of Columbus, is the only man who tops him.

TWO International League clubs are fighting over the services of Claude Derrick, ex-University of Georgia player, now with the Athletics. Both Baltimore and Rochester want him, with the chances fairly good that he will go back to Baltimore.

Derrick can not seem to stick in the big leagues but he is plenty good enough for the fastest of minor leagues and should have many good years in the International.

FINE REMEDY FOR ECZEMA

Also for Salt Rheum, Tetter, Psoriasis, Lupus, and All Skin Afflictions.

Even a Microscope Won't Find a Blemish After S. S. S. Gets Through.

All skin troubles should be attacked from within by giving the blood circulation a good daily bath. This is accomplished with S. S. S., the best known and most highly recommended blood purifier ever discovered. Its action is very rapid. Its vegetable nature is such that it naturally goes right into the blood, saturates the entire circulation, bathes the tissues with an influence that enables the skin to heal quickly. The action of S. S. S. is that of an antidote, and this fact has been demonstrated time and time again in the most severe forms of weeping eczema.

Its influence in the tissues where the tiny arteries transfer the red blood for the worn-out blood to the veins is quite remarkable and goes on constantly with every tick of the clock—the beat of the heart.

And new skin is thus caused to form, while the germs of irritating influences that cause eczema are scattered and their harmful nature entirely suspended.

S. S. S. has a wonderful tonic influence in the blood because it contains no "dope," is not a "physic," is entirely free of any mineral drugs or any other drugs except the remarkable medicinal effect of the pure vegetable products of which it is made.

Few people realize how harmful are many of the strong, crude ointments that used to be in favor before they learned that S. S. S. is safe, speedy and sure. Ask at any drug store for a bottle of S. S. S. Give it a good trial and you will soon see a decided improvement in any form of skin trouble. Write to The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for special free advice on eczema and any other form of skin or blood trouble.

What Baseball Umps Should Do

Heisman Helps Amateur Arbiters

By J. W. Heisman

FIRST rattle out of the box, let me say this small package of umpiring tips is not intended for professional arbiters, albeit more than one of such could improve himself and give better satisfaction to players and public if he would take to heart one or more of the points I herein will discuss.

So far as the teams and their captains are concerned, it is naturally well for them to get, whenever possible, an umpire who has had some experience, who has some natural qualifications for the work, and most important of all, a man who has an unblemished reputation. This article will be of no assistance whatever to a prospective umpire in any one of these three considerations; but most any one is liable to be called upon at some time or other in his fortuitous career to umpire a game of ball, and perhaps a point or two herein touched upon may dwell in his memory and help him out of more than one dilemma during the progress of the riot.

* * *

IN THE first place, if there is only one umpire to the game, he should take his stand behind the catcher, and should remain there as long as no men get on bases. He should not think of taking up this station without a mask over his face; and if there is a protector to be had, he should also don that.

The umpire should be careful not to stand so close upon the catcher's heels as to crowd him, and he should ever be on the alert for a possible foul foul fly popping up. In such an event he should be quick to jump out of the catcher's way, for naturally the latter will be after it in a jiffy.

* * *

ABOUT the hardest thing connected with umpiring is to call balls and strikes to the satisfaction of both teams. Often enough pitchers come in complaining that the umpire always makes them split the plate. If true, this constitutes a just complaint, for it is the acme of good pitching never to give a batter a ball squarely over the middle. If the umpire will not give a strike when the pitcher has both head and control sufficient to just nick the corners, his good work is nullified by the umpire's limitations of sight or judgment.

And umpires often enough call a strike when the ball has passed the batter at the level of the latter's eyes or chin or neck. This is a big mistake. Merely because the batter is able to see over the top of the ball, or because many a batter likes to take a wallop at a ball that is winding snake-like around his neck is no reason why it should be called a strike. A judge of play should be guided strictly and entirely by what the rule says, and in this case the provision is that it must be between the knee and the shoulder.

* * *

MANY batters squat or crouch at the plate before the ball is delivered, and when it comes up they crouch a deal more. In this position the ball seems often to go away over their heads, when it would clearly be a satisfactory height for another man who did not have such a stooping attitude. An umpire should be careful not to let a batter get away with this crouching posture to such an extent as to compel the pitcher to put them all knee-high. The idea is that it is a strike if it passes at a height not greater than the shoulder when the batsman is in a natural hitting attitude.

Umpires often make the mistake of judging a pitched ball by where the catcher caught it. Often enough the catcher "pulls" the ball so cleverly as to deceive the umpire; and then again the mere effect of gravity or the curve of the ball, coming late and suddenly, distorts the umpire's judgment.

* * *

UMPIRES frequently make the mistake of calling a decision too quickly. They have it in their minds that this shows efficiency and executive capacity. Also it is sometimes intended as a species of bluffing, calculated to make the players believe that the decision must be correct because of the very snappishness with which it is given. To a certain extent this may be so; but only too often this lightning-like decision connotes the very opposite of accuracy.

It is well, though, for the umpire to be as quick as he can in calling the third strike on a batter when the latter has not swung at it. If the catcher holds this third strike it does not make any difference, as the batter is out of it anyway; but should the catcher drop this last strike it would look as though you were giving him a chance to recover the ball before the runner reached first if you delay notifying the runner at once that it is the third strike and he had best run.

* * *

IT is the tendency nowadays to call most every ball that is hit immediately down to the ground a foul ball, whether it afterward rolls foul or fair. I incline to think this is good practice; for unless one does call such a ball something without delay it puts the batter in an awkward position. This case should be carefully distinguished, however, from that where the batter hits a ball into the diamond that is manifestly fair, and has been from the start, and then in starting out for first base he runs himself into the bounding or rolling ball. Here the batter is out at once for touching a fair batted ball.

FODDER FOR FANS

Wilson, of the Pirates, made two home runs yesterday, but his efforts were wasted, for the Cubs scored six runs against four for the Pirates.

* * *

Eleven Tigers stepped to the plate in the fourth inning of the game against the White Sox yesterday, with the result that seven runs went across the finish line, giving the Tigers the game.

* * *

Wheat, of the Dodgers, made a triple and three singles out of four times up yesterday.

* * *

Larry Doyle, of the Giants, made a homer with two on bases yesterday. Several days ago he delivered a circuit swat with the bases crowded.

* * *

The Naps and Browns divided a double-header yesterday, the Browns taking the first game, an eleven-inning affair, and the Naps the second, with Falkenberg in the box. This is the first game Falkenburg has won since his winning streak of ten games was cut.

* * *

The Cardinals justly might be called the "rally boys" Yesterday they repeated the stunt which they have been practicing in the last month of coming from behind and winning out by scoring three runs in the eighth and one in the ninth, taking the game from the Reds.

* * *

Connie Mack has his eye focused on George Brickley, brother of Charles, the Harvard football star. It's a cinch that if George can bat anywhere as well as Charles can kick, Connie will be placing him in the slugger's position of the Athletics' line-up if he lands him.

* * *

For the third successive time the Giants tussled with the Phillies in the Quakertown ballwick yesterday and handed the third straight defeat, thus clinching the hold the Giants now have on the upper rung in the National League ladder.

* * *

Pitchers may come and pitchers may go, but it seems that Mathewson and his wonderful control and ability are to remain forever. In this, his thirteenth season, as a big league pitcher, Matty threatens to eclipse all his previous records for victories. In addition to establishing a world's record for control, he hurled against the Phillies yesterday and for the seventh or eighth time this season went the full nine innings without a base on balls.

* * *

The Dodgers, after suffering two defeats at the hands of the Braves, rose up in wrath yesterday and gave the Braves one of the worst beating handed any team this year. The Brooklynites garnered fifteen runs, scoring nine in the third.

* * *

Lajoie, the Naps' second sacker, was back in the game yesterday, and, despite rumors that he is to be benched or used as a pinch hitter in the future, it is a certainty that he will remain as a regular for the balance of this season and several more to come.

Boehling, the recruit pitcher of the Senators, is setting the American League afire. He has started seven games and won them all, the majority of them being shut-outs.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—From this point to the finish of the races in both big leagues, each game is going to count vitally. The strain of the going through July and August either makes or breaks the pennant contenders, and only the teams with the most class live to fight it out in September. It is from now until the first of September that the clubs which make the early going will have their hardest struggle to maintain the lead. The teams have found themselves by this time if they are to arrive at all.

"I would just as soon be trailing up to July," says McGraw. "After July, I want to make the going."

It has been just this way that McGraw has played the race this year. The Phillies jumped out in front and killed off their pitching staff and some of their players before they really reached the stretch where they will need their full strength. If they could have gotten out far enough ahead to afford a slump, that would have been a different matter, but the Giants managed to hang to their heels, which is the most exasperating and heart-breaking thing that can happen to a ball club.

* * *

THE race in the American League has assumed a very different aspect from the one in the National, for class told from the get-away in that argument. Even rival American Leaguers admit that the Athletics have shown all the class of the circuit so far, and they have opened up such a nice gap now they can afford a comfortable slump. At the beginning of the season, the outlook was for one of those nip and tuck affairs in both leagues, but the outlook was badly upset in the American. The Boston Red Sox and the Washington Club were to abound with class, while something was expected of the White Sox and little thought of Cleveland.

Boston has been a pitiable failure and disappointment. The team is going slightly better now, but there was plenty of room for improvement. Even should the club regain the old stride that carried it to a world's championship last year, it does not strike me it would have a chance with the Athletics now. It must be remembered that the Philadelphia club is playing much better ball than it did last summer when it slopped through its schedule, feeling confident that no team was ever created which could beat it to the pennant. There is a grave doubt in my mind whether the Red Sox could have defeated the Athletics last season if they had performed as they are going this year.

* * *

"THE Athletics have the class of this league," a player on a rival American League team told me the other day. "They are not overlooking any opportunities this summer, either. Mack has his pitching staff going as well, if not better, than any in the league, and it was supposed to be his weakness. It has been largely through clever handling that Mack has achieved these results with his pitchers.

In the first place, he fixed Bender so that he would work his best this season and he did this through one of the well-known Mack methods, a promised reward at the end of the season for delivering the goods. Then he worked his youngsters with great wisdom, getting them used to the big league ways, while the pitchers on the other clubs had not yet gotten the spring rust out of their arms and the going was easier. In this way they acquired confidence in themselves. Then Mack got to taking the squabs out of the games and putting in a veteran when his team acquired a lead of a couple of runs to make it sure.

"Connie fooled Griffith in Washington recently when he sent both Bender and Plank out in front of the bench to warm up before the game and hid Bush behind the grandstand where he worked his arm out. When the game began, he sat Plank and Bender down on the bench and sent Bush to the box, figuring on taking a chance with a youngster in the game with Johnson and working his veterans against the easier Washington pitchers. Bush got away with the game. Mack was always a great man to jockey his players."

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

A HUNDRED.

The shades of night were falling fast
When through a baseball field there passed
A youth who sadly shook his head,
And this is all the athlete said:
"$100."

He fain would swing a thousand thumps
Upon the guy they call the umps.
But if he hit the umps a crack
That little clout would set him back $100.

Oh, it is great to be a star
And give the umps an awful jar,
But if you act as white men do
To find that there accrues to you $100.

Johnny Coulon avers that he is suffering from a cold in his stomach, but a diagnosis might locate the malady in his feet.

Nevertheless, when Mr. Coulon stalls off a conflict with Mr. Williams, he shows that he possesses considerable intellect.

We may thank the Athletics for the fact that no baseball writer will have the nerve to spring anything about a "crucial series" in the American League.

Frank Gotch says he will meet the winner o the Roler-Cutler match, showing that he still has faith in the one-per-minute theory.

Fuzzy Woodruff informs us with great confidence that Mr. Ritchie will encompass the downfall of Mr. Rivers. If Jim Corbett will only support Fuzzy in his contention we shall be glad to wager about 8,000 to 1 on Mr. Rivers.

One calamity connected with the ice-men's strike in Cincinnati is that the National Commission will have to drink it warm.

Answering a much discussed question, we take the liberty to say that the trouble with the Pirates is that they are not winning baseball games.

Speaking of nothing to worry about, there is Jack O'Connor, who is said to be suspended by the Federal League.

Atlantans Still In at Augusta

Carter, Orr and Ramspeck Win

AUGUSTA, GA., July 3.—Ideal weather conditions prevailed and there was a large gallery on the third day of the South Atlantic tennis tournament here. The semi-finals in the ladies' singles were completed and the finals are being played to-day. In the lower frame of the semi-finals in ladies' singles Miss Adger defeated Miss Perry, 6-2, 6-2. The winner plays Mrs. Robert Johnson in the finals.

The following were the results Wednesday in the men's singles:

Erwin defeated Fletcher, 6-2, 6-1; Carter defeated E. S. Waring, 6-2, 6-2; Ramspeck defeated Garrett, 6-4, 7-5. Erwin and Orr had played two sets when darkness interrupted. Erwin won the first set, 6-4, and Orr won the second, 6-3.

The following were the results in the men's doubles:

Harper and White defeated Horkan and Nixon, 6-3, 6-2; Waring brothers defeated Nurnberger and Roseman, 6-0, 6-3; Brinson and Granch defeated Lee and T. Cumming, 6-2, 6-3; Ramspeck and Orr defeated Wilkins and Bussell, 6-4, 6-0; Kennedy and Capers defeated Barrett and Evans, 6-2, 6-4; Gary and Sims defeated Stratton and VonSprecken, 6-0, 6-0; Hall and Parks defeated Birkmire and Cully, 6-1, 6-1.

Consolations: A. W. Harper defeated Ransom, 6-1, 6-1; Stulb defeated Harris, 6-2, 6-4; Wilson defeated J. Cumming, 7-5, 2-6, 6-2. Sims defeated Purdy, 6-2, 6-3; Ferris defeated Schweers, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4; Capers defeated Bredenburg, 6-4, 6-3; Wright defeated Averill, 6-0, 6-4; Birkmire defeated Johnson, 6-1, 6-3.

The following are the results of Wednesday morning's matches:

Men's Singles—Parks defeated J. C. Harper, 6-2, 6-2.

Ladies' Singles—Miss Perry defeated Mrs. Milam, 6-3, 6-4; Miss Adger defeated Miss Emily Thomas, 7-5, 6-2.

Men's Doubles—Garg and Garrett defeated Reynolds and Wilson, 6-3, 6-0; Kennedy and Kennedy defeated Mulherin and Hatch, 6-1, 6-1; Brand and Ferris defeated Cumming and Houston by default.

Consolations—Matthews defeated Branck, 1-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Star Athletes Will Perform on July 4

At 9:45 Fourth of July morning the first call will be sounded for the first heat of the first race of Atlanta's first big track and field meet at Piedmont Park under the auspices of the Department of Playgrounds.

Thanks to the untiring work of Joe Bean, manager of playgrounds, the affair needs only good weather to be a tremendous success. In the nine events that will be run there are 175 entries. Of course this does not mean 175 entrants, for there are many duplications, but any way you figure it, it will be the biggest meet ever held in Atlanta.

This steeplechase event will start at the top of the hill at Jackson and Tenth Streets, and the course will extend down the hill, through the lake and back to the judges' stand.

All contestants will be expected to furnish their own numbers.

On account of the large entry list two events will be called at a time. Here is the order of events:

100-yard dash. Trial heats.
Pole vault. Shot put.
100-yard dash. Final heat.
Running high jump. 880-yard run.
Running broad jump. 440-yard dash.
Hammer throw. Steeplechase.

JOURNEY TO EUROPE MAY COST JOHNSON $45,000

CHICAGO, July 3.—Argument was heard this morning on the motion entered by United States Attorney Wilkerson asking that the $30,000 bond given by Jack Johnson, prize-fighter, on eleven indictments under the Mann white slave act for which he has not yet been tried, be forfeited. Appeal bonds for $15,000 also are pending against Johnson. In the bonds given in the untried indictments, there is a provision that the negro must not leave the jurisdiction of the District Court of Northern Illinois. It is because of this provision that Mr. Wilkerson has asked that the bonds be forfeited. Johnson is on a ship bound for Europe.

U. S. FARM NEED CO-OPERATION ENVOY SAYS

By LIEUT. GOV. E. L. DAUTRIDGE, North Carolina Member of the Agricultural Commission.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, July 3.—The co-operative principle in agriculture is simply the lesson learned from the practices of "big business," in which dollars have combined for efficiency and economy.

Farmers can accomplish the same results by uniting themselves in societies.

There is, however, this difference: Industrial combinations seek more than mere economy and add to their profits through monopolistic control. In agriculture there are too many producers scattered over too wide an area to permit an organization that could control the market.

American consumers need have no fear upon that score if co-operation is adopted among American farmers; rather may the consumers hope for freer competition through the influence of farmers' co-operative organizations upon existing middlemen and trusts.

The operations of even a highly developed type of Co-operative Sales Society among the farmers would be limited to reducing the cost of distribution and to eliminating the profits of the middlemen.

Protection for Consumers.

It would mean increased profits for the farmers without an increased price to consumers. Co-operation among the farmers for the sale of foodstuffs, however, can not, I believe, be brought about upon any considerable scale until the farmers are placed upon a better financial basis through the extension of their credit facilities. The basis of the agricultural credit system of Europe underlies all other forms of agricultural co-operation.

There are many objections raised against the adoption of co-operative credit societies of the European type among American farmers. In conversation with experts in the field during this trip I heard it pointed out that co-operative credit societies of the Raiffeisen type are unlikely to succeed in America because of the unwillingness of the American farmer to assume liability for his neighbor and because of the absence of "farming villages" in America.

Unfamiliarity of our farmers with each other's financial standing deters business transactions. I don't believe that snap judgment can be given upon these questions. Although I recognize the force of arguments, it does appear likely to the members of the American Commission that a land credit organization can be established in America whereby American farmers can secure mortgage loans upon better terms.

As to their short-time credit needs, their money for operating expenses, if the Raiffeisen banks can not be established, I believe something can be gained by forcing the consideration of farmers' needs as borrowers upon those who are to construct our currency banking reform legislation, but our farmers must interest themselves in the currency question to do this.

No Monopoly Is Intended.

With credit facilities improved, I believe, through co-operative organizations, our farmers can succeed in increasing their control over marketing their produce.

I don't mean control in the monopolistic sense, but control to effect economy in distribution and in order that they may receive a larger share of the profits of their sales.

Undoubtedly such a business organization among the farmers would quickly lead to an organization for the promotion of education for the stronger presentation of legislative needs of American farmers.

If American farmers could be reorganized along these lines there would be found a far closer link with the Federal Department of Agriculture than now exists.

The success attained along these lines by European farmers, especially those of Germany and Austria, has interested me greatly. The organizations of European farmers for co-operative purchasing are also of great benefit; they are very simple in principle, but to carry on the work of propagation necessary to spread the co-operative movement over so large a country as the United States will require an organization of great strength.

The American Commission should be encouraged to live and broaden its activities. Only the support of our farmers can do this.

Attorneys To Feast Judges At Barbecue

Attorneys of Atlanta will be hosts to the judges at a barbecue, at Woodward Springs, Saturday afternoon, July 5. Final arrangements were made at a meeting Wednesday morning, in Howell C. Erwin's office, of the committee of which Mr. Erwin is chairman.

The crowd will leave the interurban station on Marietta Street at 12 o'clock.

Dr. Smullyan Dead; Funeral in Atlanta

Dr. I. Clarence Smullyan, formerly of Atlanta and more recently a prominent physician of Salt Lake City, Utah, died there Monday night.

Dr. Smullyan was 35 years old. He is survived by a wife, one son, Jack C., and a daughter, Eleanor. He was a graduate of the Boys' High School of Atlanta and of the Medical College of Baltimore. Five years ago he removed to Salt Lake City.

The body will be brought to Atlanta for funeral and interment, and is expected to reach here Saturday night. Funeral announcements will be made later.

OBITUARY.

The funeral of Robert R. Willard, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Willard, who died at the family home, 27 Racine Street, at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, was held from the residence at 10 o'clock Thursday morning. Interment at Westview

PARADE AND RIDE FOR CONTESTANTS JULY 4

William Hamilton, 588 Woodward Avenue, one of the hustling contestants.

Louise Thompson, 19 East Cain Street, who is making a spirited race.

Promptly at 10 o'clock Friday morning, July 4, The Georgian and American ponies, which are to be awarded to the boys and girls in the contests, will start in parade formation from The Georgian and American offices in Alabama Street and proceed to Grant Park.

There will be a celebration at the park on the arrival of the parade. It is hoped that every contestant in the city and all those from out of town who can visit Atlanta for the day will forget rivalry for the day and enjoy the Fourth as the guests of The Georgian and American.

All of the features of entertainment can not now be announced. But one thing is sure, every contestant who so desires may enjoy a ride behind the ponies, and thus anticipate something of the pleasure which will belong to the winners after July 31. There will be plenty of caretakers to see that everyone gets a ride.

Although several times the contestants have been told where the ponies are kept, and while they have been invited to go and look at the little animals, not all have taken advantage of the offer. This time, however, the ponies will be on display, looking their best, and on their best behavior. There is no reason why each boy and girl in the contest should not see for himself or herself the handsome prizes so soon to be awarded.

Meanwhile, do not forget that Friday night ends the time when clubs of five subscriptions may be turned in for the big bonus offers.

A SURE REMEDY FOR LAZY LIVER

Go to Any Druggist for This Safe, Reliable Remedy and Get Your Money Back If It Fails.

There are very few remedies that gain the confidence of druggists as Dodson's Liver Tone does. All druggists sell it and back up the sale of every bottle with the money-back guarantee that the price will be refunded if it fails to give complete satisfaction.

Dodson's Liver Tone costs 50 cents a bottle. It is the safest and best remedy for torpid liver, constipation, biliousness, etc., that has ever been sold in this city. It takes the place of dangerous calomel and does not lay you up as a dose of calomel often does. A bottle in the house is as good as fifty cents in the bank. If you or your family need a liver tonic you have the medicine ready. If it fails you get your money back.

Be sure you get Dodson's Liver Tone when you ask for it. There are imitations of it that may disappoint you.

NEW SECURITIES $948,153,000 IN 6 MONTHS

World-Wide Scarcity of Capital Is Blamed for Decrease of $421,469,000.

By B. C. FORBES.

The Hearst papers' carefully compiled records show that the output of new securities by corporations for the half-year ended June 30 fell below one billion dollars.

The total was $948,153,000, a decrease of no less than $421,469,000 from last year.

The world-wide scarcity of capital has been wholly responsible for the falling off—companies, both railroad and industrial, would have borrowed nearer two billions had investors manifested a disposition to respond.

The grand total for 1912 was $2,141,500,000, while for 1911 the figures was $1,740,000,000. The current 12 months will probably fall short of either, as the demand for new issues is unlikely to become abnormal owing to the paucity of liquid capital and the very high income yields insisted upon by lenders.

The largest banking houses here and abroad are discouraging avoidable flotations in an effort to avert acute congestion. In England the half-year's applications have reached $600,000,000, an increase of $55,000,000 over a year ago, notwithstanding the unfavorable conditions that have obtained, while on the Continent the market has been so flooded that both Governmental and banking interests have taken rigid measures to stem the tide. Germany has virtually prohibited the offering of foreign issues there.

Enormous sums must still be raised by the nations that have been at war, but no big loans will be handled for any country until it has restored peace. How much France and England have quietly supplied to belligerants, however, is an interesting point upon which information is withheld.

At home a large proportion of this year's borrowing has been necessitated by the maturing of outstanding obligations.

Too often short-term notes have had to be resorted to.

Such strong roads as the Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and Baltimore & Ohio put out $20,000,000 each, while among the industrial companies, Consolidated Gas contributes $15,000,000 to the short-term total.

Notes come home to roost. Bonds stay sold, but notes return so quickly to plague their issuers. They simply, as a rule, postpone the evil day.

By next year the new currency system may facilitate the marketing of long-term bonds and also stocks, especially as latterly there has been some attempt at economy on the part of the people.

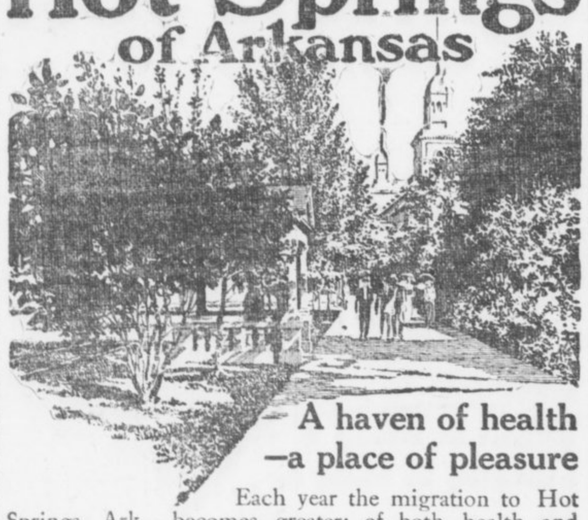

My opinion is that the security market will be able to weather the autumn without the upheaval that for months appeared inevitable. Quotations for both stocks and bonds are now on an attractive investment level and small investors will probably come forward in large numbers from now on.

June is the only month of the current year that shows an increase in offerings as compared with last year. The monthly record reads:

	Output.	Change.
January	$198,105,000	—$142,895,000
February ...	132,362,000	— 185,470,000
March	148,829,000	— 1,621,000
April	164,477,000	— 53,788,000
May	123,140,000	— 81,577,000
June	181,240,000	* 43,888,000
	$48,153,000	—$421,469,000

The July total will be large, as underwriters are anxious to take advantage of the $125,000,000 "July disbursements," which are supposed to create a re-investment demand.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Drugged, Was He? He Surely Was!

One day a constable found a man lying beneath a tree. Knowing that a brand of rather prostrating corn juice was sold in that neighborhood, and thinking the man had been unwisely stacked up against it, he with considerable difficulty got him to the local jail.

Later in the day it was discovered that the victim was not reviving according to schedule and a doctor was called in.

"I thought so," mused the doctor, making a critical examination. "Officer, where did you find this man?"

"Down along the railroad track," answered the cop. "He was sleeping on a pile of railroad spikes."

"You should have called me at once," returned the doctor, continuing the diagnosis. "This man has been drugged."

"Of course he has, doc," was the prompt response of the officer. "I drug him all the way from the railroad to the jail, a matter of two hundred yards."

Forks Find the Way After Many Trials.

A Josh Whitcomb in real life was working in the fields one day when a salesman came along to sell him things to save labor. While talking to Uncle Josh the salesman noticed that he was cut and scratched all over the front of his face. In fact, he looked as if he had turned on a full head of steam and rushed through a barbed wire fence.

"You seem pretty well nicked up to-day," remarked the salesman, during the course of the conversation. "Have you been trying to shave yourself with a hay cutter?"

"No; 'twasn't thet," was the unemotional rejoinder of Uncle Josh. "My darter did it."

"Your daughter did it!" exclaimed the amazed salesman. "You don't really mean it?"

"Yaas," said Josh, with characteristic calmness, "ever since she been goin' ter thet derned boardin' school she has been makin' me eat with a fork."

Suffering Alone Far From Home.

A party of Atlanta campers took up their mountain abode in Gilmer County at nightfall in an old tumbledown hut. About 2 a. m. a polecat announced its presence in its own peculiar way. A German sat up and looked helplessly about him. The others were all sleeping peacefully.

"Mein gracious," he exclaimed, in tones of despair. "All the rest asleep und I've got to shmell it all!"

HARRIS FREED OF PERJURY CHARGE

Prosecutor Asks Verdict of "Not Guilty" for Macon Lawyer and Politician.

MACON, July 3.—Upon motion of the State a verdict of "not guilty" was directed to-day in the case of Jesse C. Harris, the Macon lawyer charged with perjury, in connection with the August, 1912, Bibb County primary.

Charles H. Hall, Jr., Congressman Bartlett's campaign manager, testified that Harris, chairman of the sub committee of the executive committee, asked him on the night of the election "How many votes Judge Bartlett needed," and that he told Harris Bartlett needed as many as he could get, this conversation taking place behind closed doors. Grand jurors testified that Harris denied under oath while a witness in the Grand Jury room that he asked Hall that q uestion.

After this and other evidence has been submitted to-day, Solicitor Ross asked the court to allow a verdict of "not guilty" to be directed.

COTTON DROPS ON BEARISH REPORT

Heavy Selling on U. S. Report. Short Interest Increased on Eve of Holiday.

NEW YORK, July 3.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day the tone was steady and prices were 1 to 3 points higher. This was a shade better than had been expected on cables. The upturn was due to local covering, chiefly in anticipation of the Government report due at noon.

The weather was considered favorble, as showery conditions prevailed throughout the western sections of the belt.

The Government report placed the cotton acreage of 1913 at 35,622,000, showing an increase of 2½ per cent over last year's acreage and a condition of 81.8, against 79.1 a month ago. The report was much better than expected. The average trader construed it as bearish and caused heavy selling by street and local traders. Spot houses also sold. Most of the selling is believed to be for short accounts. The buying was scattered, coming from commission houses and those who liquidated at a higher level.

July was depressed to 12.03, against an opening of 12.10; August fell 11 points. New crop positions were heavily sold and followed the downward movement by dropping some 12 to 15 points from the opening range.

The impression seemed to prevail that there has been some improvement in the crop since the report was made up and lower prices are inevitable. The bull element contend that a 15,000,000-bale crop is by no means assured, claiming that we have to go through two of the most critical months of the season and that much cotton will be required to satisfy the world's need.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 3.—Political news was bad this morning. London reports all hope of peace abandoned. Serious battle raging in the Balkans. Liverpool came in about 2 points lower than due. Spots 1 point higher.

It is evidently thought that the general unfavorable outlook is some compensation for any bullish impression the Bureau reports may have.

Weather developments are again favorable. Generally fair weather prevails over Alabama and the Atlantics, while it is cloudy over rest of the belt. The Central States, including Arkansas and Tennessee, had a fine general rainfall. There was little rain in Texas, except in the eastern section. Indications are for partly cloudy weather with a tendency toward clearing, although some scattered showers are likely in the central belt.

Prior to the Bureau publication the market was steady around 11.37 for October. Selling is restricted, as the tendency is to look for a low Bureau condition, some views being under 80 on the ground that private authorities all give only a fraction of a point improvement during the month, and the May Government condition was 79.1.

The week-end statistics will not be given out until Monday.

U. S. SAYS COTTON ACREAGE FOR 1914 IS 35,622,000

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The crop reporting board, Department of Agriculture, to-day estimated that the area of cotton in cultivation this year in the United States is about 35,622,000 acres, compared with 34,766,000 acres, the revised estimate of acreage in cultivation a year ago, being an increase of 2.5 per cent, or 856,000 acres.

The condition of the growing crop on June 25 was 81.8 per cent of a normal condition, as compared with 79.1 on May 25, 1913, 80.4 on June 25, 1912, and 80.2 the average condition for the past ten years.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, July 3.—J. M. Anderson says: "A great deal of interest is manifested here in the tariff amendment to place a tax on contracts for future delivery, and it is to be hoped that every one who is interested as a producer or a consumer will realize the seriousness of such a measure, as there is nothing that could be more detrimental to the cotton trade of this country."

* * *

Should the Government report show conditions around 80, a further advance is looked for, as it would be considered as bullish.

* * *

The acreage report is expected to show 1 to 2 points increase, being around 35,225,000 acres planted, compared with 34,766,000 acres in 1912 and 36,631,000 acres in 1911. The condition report is expected between 80 and 81, compared with 79.1 last month, a June condition last year of 80.4, in 1911 88.2 and a ten-year average of 80.2.

* * *

* * *

The Cotton Exchange is refused a hearing in the proposed tax of one-tenth cent a pound on cotton future dealings.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, July 3.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows very favorable conditions, fair in Alabama and the Atlantics; no rain; cloudy in the rest of the belt, with fine general rains in the central States and Tennessee; also Arkansas. Little rain today. Indications are for partly cloudy weather, with a tendency to clear, although some scattered showers in central States likely.

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "A bullish condition report, on the eve of the Government's condition and the acreage figures, which will be promulgated to-day, caused some covering, but the Senate's threat of prohibitive legislation stood as a barrier to enterprise, and the cotton market was a dull affair. Thus far the news from Washington has all tended to show a spirit of determination among the Senators to make the Clarke amendment, taxing future trading out of existence, a part of the tariff law, though some economists assume that, since such legislation is destructive and would very seriously injure the great industry on which the nation depends for the keeping of its international trade balance on the right side of the ledger, the Washington Government will not permit it to become a part of the law. With the exception of the larger concerns, spot buyers, merchants and exporters see practical annihilation to their business in the provisions of the Clarke amendment, and the consequent concentration of the spot business of the South into a very few hands.

"This would mean restricted competition among buyers, increased risk, and, consequently, a greater middleman's profit than is now realized. The producer would, of course, pay this increased charge. The trade as a whole says that under the workings of the Clarke amendment, spot cotton would cease to be first-class bank collateral in that lack of hedging facilities would cause the speculative risk to revert to the bale itself, which would necessitate a margin of many dollars a bale between spot value and bank value, and this would eliminate all merchants who could not command large cash resources. Another effect of the Clarke amendment would be the declaration by Congressional act that the very thing a series of Federal Grand Juries has labored hard to declare illegal is, in fact, the only legal procedure—that of forcing the man who has sold cotton he does not possess to deliver cotton on the contracts he has sold."

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—With the exception of local showers in the Upper Lake Region fair weather will prevail to-night and Friday over the Eastern half of the country with lower temperatures in the Northern Upper Lake region. STOCKS DULL ON EVE OF HOLIDAY

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Following a dull, heavy opening of the stock market to-day, some of the issues rallied and made partial recoveries. At the outset practically all stocks were lower, the declines embracing the following: Utah Copper, ½; United States Steel common, ⅜; Amalgamated Copper, ⅜; American Smelting, ⅜; Atchison, ¼; Chino Copper, ⅜; Erie, ½; Union Pacific, ¼; Reading, ¼; St. Paul, ¼. Steel recovered and gained ¼. Canadian Pacific was ¼ up at the commencement, but later increased its advance. Northern Pacific, which began ⅛ lower, recovered and made a fractional gain.

There was some covering for protection over the three-day holiday, beginning to-morrow.

The curb market was weak.

Americans and Canadian Pacific in the London market lacked stability.

There was little change in prices after the first fifteen minutes of depression. Union Pacific, Reading, Copper and St. Paul were up ¼. Steel advanced ⅜ to 52⅞. Smelter up ⅛. Other issues made slight gains and the tone in the last few minutes for the forenoon was firm.

Call money was loaning at 3 per cent.

WHEAT BEARS ARE NOT HAVING AN EASY TIME

CHICAGO, July 3.—The Inter Ocean says:

"With wheat absorbed every time it gets below 90c the last three days, the bears are not having an easy time. Those who watch the pit closely say they are unable to see evidence of extensive hedging sales. The situation at the moment is a little mixed. Conservative people are disposed to buy on breaks below 90c. Bears, however, stick to the belief that there will be more wheat raised this year than can be marketed above the present price level, and that hedging sales a little later will swamp the bulls.

"Corn traders said last night that the local short interest had been cut down and the outside trade was not heavy. The general disposition is to go slow today in making new commitments, as few care to carry trades open over the three holidays.

TIFTON SHIPS SECOND CAR OF TOMATOES TO NEW YORK

TIFTON, July 3.—The second carload of tomatoes from Tifton left last night for New York. The car contained about 350 crates and was loaded by a number of the largest truck growers of this section.

A telegram from New York announces that the first carload was sold at $2.25 per crate for the choice varieties. After selling agents' commission has been taken out and freight charges deducted, the car of 364 crates will net the truckers an average of $1.60 per crate.

Wheat—No. 2 red ....87¼@88
Corn—No. 2 ....64 @64½
Oats—No. 2 40

CHICAGO, July 3.—To-day's session in wheat was largely of an evening-up character over the three days of rest. The offerings were rather scant at the outset and prices were ¼@½c higher. Northwestern cars were smaller than a week ago. Cables were higher, although the crop prospects abroad and conditions surrounding the spring wheat crop in this country were favorable.

Corn was ¼@⅜c better.

Oats were unchanged to ⅛@¼c higher, mainly in sympathy with strength in corn and wheat.

Provisions were stronger with hogs.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—The map shows showery conditions in the Northwest again with moderate temperatures and little or no rain in the balance of the country. We look for a higher market today, as shorts will be nervous and likely to cover over the holidays.

Corn—We look for a steady market, based on a gradual strengthening of the cash position.

Oats—The market continues nervous but strong in tone. No betterment in crop conditions reported, with holders confident and short sellers timid.

Provisions—Hogs slightly under estimate with opening prices 5 cents higher on yesterday's advance, which was caused by foreign buying partly. Packers were the best sellers.

MODERN MILLER CROP REPORT.

ST. LOUIS, July 3.—Winter wheat harvest is almost completed under favorable conditions. Nearly all wheat has been cut and is in the shock and thrashing is well under way. Soft winter wheat generally thrashing out well. Good yields and good quality are the rule. In some sections, however, returns from hard wheat belt are disappointing both as to yield and quality, the latter being irregular. A factor in the harvest situation is the scarcity of labor and this is causing delay.

No Place for Papers

THE OFFICE DESK OR TABLE IS certainly not a safe place for such valuable papers as stocks, bonds, insurance policies, mortgages, deeds, notes, etc., and yet many a so-called "good" business man has sacrificed some such paper upon this altar of carelessness.

If you have been a victim, you know the price of your carelessness. If you have not yet suffered such a loss, don't take any more chances, but come in and let us assign you a Box in our fire-proof and burglar-proof Vault. The cost is very nominal and the protection absolute.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Feather-Eating Is Largely Caused By Crowded Runs

Soft-Shell Eggs Due to Various Things—Remember Value of Meat in Some Form.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Feather-eating is largely caused by crowded runs, with nothing to induce the fowls to exercise. They bolt their food and then stand around ready for mischief. The careless owner will usually let lice and mites get the start of him on the poultry; they lay eggs upon the stem of the feather around the vent. They irritate the parts and in their endeavors to rid themselves of them they get a taste of the sap, or at times, blood, in the stem of the new feathers; this causes them to continue their investigation. Other hens see what's going on and are soon helping in the removing of feathers, until it is soon a flock of feather eaters. The skin is bare and red, and sometimes the work is carried still further and they get to picking the raw flesh until it is raw and sore. The remedy is to feed lightly of a well-balanced ration and make them dig for every bit they get. Feed some fresh cut bone or raw meat, if possible. Clean them of all lice and mites and put them in the pink of condition, and there will be little excuse for such work. The leaders or worst ones at the business can be very materially checked by taking a sharp pocket knife and trimming the sharp point or curve of the upper madible or beak. They are then unable to pick so easily.

Many soft-shelled eggs are layed at this time of the year, due to various causes. Many of us are so eager for all the eggs that we can get that we push our hens for all they are worth, feeding rich mashes and adding egg producers at all times, most of which contain stimulants of various kinds. Heavy mash feeding tends to produce fat, especially on the two-year-old hens; over-fat hens often lay soft-shelled eggs.

Where your hens have this soft-egg tendency, let up on the soft feed to a certain extent at least and feed more of the dry grain with a good supply of green stuff, and do not forget to supply the oyster shell.

Bowel troubles of all kinds are usually caused by feeding sloppy or sour feed. Filthy quarters and exposure to sudden changes of the weather will affect the little ones very quickly. Often a lack of good clean grains, both in the shape of cracked grains and dry mashes. When the trouble has already appeared it is best handled by feeding well-cooked rice, dry bread or cracker crumbs soaked in hot milk. As soon as an improvement is noticed alternate the rice and bread and milk with other things. Keep the little ones warm when the weather changes to cold, and furnish shade for them in very hot times.

Remember the value of meat in some form for growing chicks, as well as to the laying hens. The cheapest shape to furnish it is in fresh cut green bone. Buy a good cutter, one that will do the work in a workmanlike manner, fasten it up somewhere so that it will be perfectly solid, and it will be but little trouble to operate. You can usually get the bones and scraps fresh from the market. They will save them for you by paying them a little each time, amounting to a quarter or a half-cent per pound. This will make the youngsters a month old grow up like weeds. Start them on it gradually a little at a time and increase it as they become accustomed to it. It should be fed at least twice a week, and a little every day is better, if you can have it. In the absence of this, use the dried beef scraps, by all means, which can be obtained at all poultry supply houses at from three and a half to five cents per pound, according to the quality purchased. It is really safer to feed to young chicks than the fresh bone, but does not supply so much nitriment, of course. In feeding it to young chicks it can be sifted through a coarse seive and the coarser particles given to the laying hens.

Do not neglect the dust bath for the laying hens, especially at this season when the weather is getting hot and lice and mites are multiplying by the millions. See that the dust is perfectly dry and the addition of some sulphur will help to make the dose more effectual. The roost poles and nest boxes should be movable so that they can be taken out and cleaned and given a dose of kerosene, or a mixture of kerosene and naphtholine flakes, about a half a pound to a gallon of oil, to which add a pint of gasoline. This should be applied with a small-spouted oil can to the roost poles, boxes and sides of the house where the poles rest. Prepare your mixture just as you are going to use it. To kill head lice that cling to the head of both young and old chickens, mix a little oil of tar with vaseline and rub onto the head occasionally.

The laying contests being conducted in different sections of the country will prove the benefits of the trap nest. They are bringing out some wonderful results. Some years ago a hen that would lay 125 to 150 eggs per year was counted a great layer, but now they are getting 200 and 250-egg hens.

FOR SALE

ON PIEDMONT AVENUE, near school, on the car line, we have one of the best bungalows to be found in the city. Built by the present owner for a home out of the best material and workmanship. Never expected to sell it, but keep it for a home. The lot cost him $3,000 vacant. If vacant to-day could not be bought for $4,000.

This bungalow has seven rooms—fine shaded east front lot—all conveniences, one year old.

The owner's work has called him to Florida, and he must sell by August 1.

We have had this place listed at $7,000, and cheap at that—but the owner says he must sell—therefore, he is putting the price down to $6,250. This should sell at once.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage. It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Details Given Out On $228,000 Lease

Silvey Building Work Rushed—John W. Grant to Build—Office Rent Going Up.

Some details of considerable interest to building managers and tenants were given out Thursday in regard to the lease on the Silvey Building and plans for improving the same.

The Silvey Building Company leased the nine-story basement building from the John Silvey estate for 20 years, agreeing to pay $8,000 a year for the first three years and $12,000 a year for the remaining 17 years. This makes an aggregate rental for the 20 years of $228,000, or an average of $11,400 a year. The Silvey Building Company expects to sub-lease to various firms and individuals, several leases already having been made. The return under the sub-lease arrangement will be about $40,000 a year, the basement and ground floor netting $17,000, and the solid floors above $3,000 each.

Improvements now being put in will cost the company $67,000. These consist of a thorough renovation and the installation of two elevators and mahogany similar to that used in the Third National Bank Building. The structure will be fireproof, and a feature of the improvements will be the placing of windows in the wall that faces Peachtree. This wall was built 20 years ago under party arrangement between the late George W. Collier and the late John Silvey.

The construction work is in charge of W. E. Mashburn, who expects to have the upper stories ready October 1. Part of the work is done, and the business offices of The Georgian and Hearst's Sunday American are located on the ground floor, with frontage on both Decatur Street and Edgewood Avenue. Other tenants will be Chess Lagomarsino, E. C. Johnson and R. M. McRaney. These have already signed up for space.

Interest in Mr. Grant's Plans.

Much interest centered Thursday in the announcement that John W. Grant will build on Pace's Ferry Road, a short distance west of Buckhead and a few rods east of such property owners as Robert F. Maddox, James L. Dickey, Jr., M. C. Kiser, J. N. Goddard, Morris Brandon and others. Mr. Grant's handsome town house on the east side of Peachtree between Pine and Currier Streets has been crowded and he will soon build a fine country residence. He has extensive acreage and will lend his efforts toward making a handsome country estate similar to the others in the vicinity. W. T. Downing, the well-known architect, is drawing some plans for Mr. Grant and expects to have them out soon.

In this connection it was announced that a new roadway is to be cut through from Peachtree to a point fronting Mr. Grant's place. This will be known as Andrews Drive, being a continuation of the thoroughfare that now starts west of Colonel Walter P. Andrews' estate and joins Habersham Road in Peachtree Heights Park. Property owners will defray the expense of the road work. The plan has been laid before the County Commissioners and has their approval.

Pace's Ferry Road has attractions for still other residents. It is being talked that John D. Little will build close to the Grant place. He bought two years ago a large lot at the southeast corner of Habersham Road for about $25,000 and has since refused handsome profits and will fix no price to sell it.

Meeting of Renting Agents.

The matter of more signs than one on houses to be rented was discussed freely at a meeting in Charles P. Glover's office Wednesday afternoon. No action was taken, the desire of those present being to postpone the meeting until next Wednesday at the same hour.

Big Deals Pending.

Several large real estate deals are in contract stage and will be announced shortly. One of these has to do with an apartment house on the North Side, at a nice figure.

Change in Offices.

Galloway & Smith, real estate agents, have moved their office from 516 to 213 Empire Building, where they have acquired more floor space. The Lockridge-McClain-Moon Company are now located at 4 North Pryor Street, having moved from the old Y. M. C. A. Building on Auburn Avenue.

J. Frank Meador to Build.

J. Frank Meador will begin soon the erection of an attractive residence on the West Fourteenth Street lot which he purchased Saturday, according to information given out Thursday. The site is 50 by 175 feet, on the north side of the street, half a block from West Peachtree. The lot was bought from Lavender Ray for $3,000 cash, or at the rate of $60 a front foot. A few years ago lots on West Fourteenth, between the Peachtrees, could be bought for $20 a foot, while the ordinary time price to-day is $70 and $80 for elevated parcels.

Skyscraper Rentals Increase.

With the expiration of leases on offices in certain skyscrapers this fall new rates will prevail. This is made necessary, declare the office building men, by the increased cost scale in other lines essential to the skyscraper business. Recently the manager of a leading office building gave notice of an increase to the New York home office of a local branch. The manager replied by letter that ordinarily his concern was opposed to paying more rent this year, but that he would not contest the raise in Atlanta. This was taken by the skyscraper man to indicate that this firm enjoyed a good measure of prosperity in this section.

All tenants in office buildings need not be alarmed, however. Not all the buildings will raise rents, and where an increase is contemplated it concerns the lease which is about up, and not the one that has some time to run.

The Fundamental Pinciple Behind the New Currency Act

The fundamental principles of the Owen-Glass bill are, first, that the chief function of the banks of the country should be to foster commerce, trade and agriculture, and not speculation or underwriting syndicates; and, second, that the right to issue money is inherent in the Government, and that any association of private bankers vested with the power to issue money for general circulation, MUST be under the supervision and control of the Government; and, third, that all profits from such banking privileges in excess of 5 per cent return upon the capital furnished by the private bankers to such central association shall be paid over to the Government.

Under the new currency act, the entire operation of the national banks and the issue of "emergency currency" of the reserve banks shall be under the control of a Federal Board of seven members sitting at Washington. The Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture and the Comptroller of the Currency will be three of the members. The other four members, one of whom must be an experienced banker, are to be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Members of the Board are to serve for eight years, unless removed by the President.

This Federal Reserve Board will have complete veto power over, though not complete power to initiate action by, twelve Federal reserve banks distributed geographically according to the needs and volume of banking business in all parts of the country.

Every national bank shall be compelled to subscribe to the extent of 10 per cent of its own stock to the capital stock of the Federal Reserve Bank of its own district. Every bank shall be required, also, to keep at least 5 per cent of its reserve cash in the Federal Reserve Bank of its district.

None of the twelve Federal Reserve Banks shall accept deposits from individuals, but each shall represent all the banks in its district having Federal charters and shall also be Government depositories. In times of financial stringency any bank may take to the Federal Reserve Bank of its district merchants' acceptances or short-term notes ARISING OUT OF COMMERCIAL TRANSACTIONS for rediscount and obtain from the Federal Reserve Bank United States Treasury notes (currency) for 75 per cent of the face value of such notes.

The notes so rediscounted are to be limited solely to commercial bills payable within from forty-five to a hundred and twenty days, and no notes based upon stock or bond transactions shall be discounted. The notes so discounted will be backed by the entire assets of the bank pledging the notes, by the credit of the individual borrowers, and by the assets of the Federal Reserve Bank. The amount of paper which any individual bank may rediscount is limited to one-half its paid-in capital.

Each Federal Reserve Bank will be required at all times to keep on hand in actual gold 33 per cent of the aggregate amount of the commercial notes it rediscounts for the banks of its district.

The Federal Reserve Banks will obtain United States notes, or "emergency currency," to pay for these merchants' notes from the Federal Reserve Board at Washington at such rates of interest as the Federal Board shall fix from time to time.

The Owens-Glass bill in its present form does not provide specifically enough that the rate of discount shall be such that the "emergency currency" so issued shall automatically return to the Treasury and be canceled when the "emergency" is past. This emergency is usually a temporary panic, or the annual crop-moving in the autumn of every year when at least three hundred million dollars in currency is needed to pay the American farmer for his harvest.

The profits of the twelve district reserve banks will go to the national banks which contribute to its stock and reserve funds to the extent of a 5 per cent cumulative dividend annually, and no further. All profits in excess of 5 per cent will be used, first, to create a surplus fund equal to 20 per cent of the capital stock of each reserve bank, and after such reserve fund amounts to 20 per cent of such capital, all further profits go to the Government. Thereby all temptation to directors of the reserve banks to undertake undue risks or embark on unsafe financiering is removed.

The national banks who are stockholders elect six, and the President of the United States appoints three, of the nine directors of each district reserve bank. Three of the six directors elected by the banks must be men "fairly representative of the business and commercial interests of the district and not directors of any bank."

:: A Sermon for Many ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WHEN the long, hard day has vanished and you seek your waiting bed,
Try to live the dead hours over ere the pillow soothes your head.
Try to find some explanation for each thoughtless thing you've done;
Try to make some reparation for the trouble you've begun
After all the petty gossip that you scattered through the day,
Think of how you knocked your neighbor, going calmly on his way.
Drag the unkind slings and arrows down from Memory's dusty shelf—
Then stand up before the mirror and begin to knock yourself.

Do not stand there smug and smirking, do not smooth your towsled hair!
Shake your fist at your reflection! Give yourself an icy glare!
Don't resolve that you are handsome when you ought to know you're not;
Rather tell the faithful mirror that it flatters you a lot.
Make wry faces by the dozen; try a cold, contemptuous sneer—
Such as you have tried on others. Give yourself a mocking leer.
Then the mirror will remind you, as all honest mirrors do,
That you're not one man in thousands—that you're only LITTLE YOU!

:: How to Deal With a Girl's Love Fancies ::

To Oppose Cupid's Call Is Always Fatal, as Experience Has Shown, Says Dorothy Dix

By DOROTHY DIX.

A FATHER who has a pretty, bright 18-year-old daughter for whom he has made many sacrifices to give advantages, is much distressed because she imagines herself in love with a callow youth of the same age, and he wants to know if there is any way in which he can keep her from wrecking her life by marrying this boy.

Surely. Here are a few simple home remedies for breaking up undesirable matches, that are guaranteed to work if applied with tact and discretion.

First, drop all opposition to the suitor. Quit abusing him. Just remember that romance thrives on difficulties, and that when you put a young man in the position of a poor, persecuted martyr, you simply crown him with a halo in the girl's sight. Also you make her his champion, and to back up her arguments in his favor she shuts her eyes to all of his faults, and not only magnifies his virtues but invents new ones for him.

Every novel represents the heroine as defying her parents, and her friends, and the general public, and being true to a noble, but misunderstood, young man, and as having her judgment justified by his turning out to be a duke in disguise, or getting elected President of the United States.

Cupid At His Worst.

When you oppose a silly young girl in a love affair, and read the riot act to her, you give her a chance to visualize herself in that poetic role, and it makes her do her clothes up in a bundle and sneak out of the house, and elope with the man that you have applied every opprobrious epithet to of which you could think. It is a matter of common knowledge that people never marry the nice, suitable individuals their families have picked out for them, and that nothing blights love's young dream like everybody smiling a blessing on it.

Yet in the face of this advanced information about how Cupid acts, parents persist in precipitating bad matches by frankly opposing them.

DOROTHY DIX.

Therefore, instead of forbidding Sam the house, invite him in. Have him around early and often, and give Mamie an overdose of his society, and before you know it they will have quarreled. And this nice hot weather, when nerves and temper are on edge, is a psychological moment in which to try the experiment. Ninety-nine in the shade is not propitious for growing sentiment. And I should casually remark to Mamie that, of course, if she was so fond of Sam and found her highest happiness in his company that there was no use in wasting any money on any other pleasure for her. Such as going off for a summer trip, for instance.

Don't abuse Sam. Don't discourse upon his weakness or his faults. Make fun of them. Point out his little eccentricities of manner or speech, and if you can enlist the assistance of some friend in this, all the better. A young girl can stand anything but ridicule.

She will defy you and marry a drunkard, or a gambler, or a man with a hectic past, but she will quail before the knowledge that people laugh at a man for eating peas with his knife, or using bad grammar, or being a rube.

Another effective way of breaking off an undesirable match is to send the girl away on a trip, or to make a good long visit. Propinquity is responsible for more marriages than anything else. At the love time of life a girl is sure to imagine that she cherishes a deathless passion for any good-looking man who happens to be in sight, but get her away from him and his spell is broken.

Cured Girl's Infatuation.

She sees other men. She gets a new standard of comparison, with the almost invariable result that in six months she wouldn't look at the man that she thought she was so crazy to marry. It's a case of counter irritation, and it works out as well in love as it does in medicine.

Still another way to deal with the situation is to quit theorizing and preaching about it, and give the girl a living picture of the way the marriage she proposes to make would work out in real life. I once knew a wise father who followed this course.

His daughter, a dainty, cultivated girl, who had been reared amidst the most refined surroundings, thought she was in love with a handsome young man who was himself coarse and vulgar, and came from a family far below the girl's in social status.

After every argument had been used in vain to prevail upon the girl not to make a match that was bound to bring her disillusion and unhappiness, her father said to her: "I want you to go and spend a month with this young man's family, who will be your family if you marry him. You will bear his name, his position will be yours, and he will have a right to expect you to live as his mother and sisters do."

Corned Beef and Cabbage.

Well, the girl went. She associated with his frowsy mother and sisters, and was bored to death by their ignorant conversation. She saw his father and his brothers sitting around the house in their stocking feet, and with their coats and collars off, smoking pipes.

She ate corned beef and cabbage dinners. She participated in parties where they rushed the growler, and sang rag-time to a pianola accompaniment, and at the end of a week she came back home cured.

Still another father that I knew kept his daughter from marrying a drunkard by taking her where she saw him in his cups. It was one thing to have the young man appear before her pale, poetic, wistful eyed, repentant, telling her that she could save him by marrying him, and another to behold him maudlin, nauseated, a thing of disgust that made her turn from him with loathing.

Oh, there are many ways to break up an undesirable match—absence, ridicule, the substitution of a new toy for the old, bumping a girl up against the reality, even dropping a sly hint to the man that he's throwing himself away on the girl, and that Mamie is delicate, or has ways, or that she has a temper concealed about her angelic person, or that she's extravagant. There are forty-seven different varieties of ways of turning the trick, and all of them work except forbidding the banns. That merely eggs on the wedding.

Education Will Banish Wars

A Very Remarkable Incident on the Bloody Field of Gettysburg Proves This Belief. Conscientious Soldiers Will Bring Peace.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

ONE of the most significant revelations of the mind of the soldier in battle that I have ever seen is in a letter from a Confederate soldier to General J. L. Chamberlain, which the general quotes in his dramatic story of the awful battle of Gettysburg in HEARST'S MAGAZINE for June.

The letter is too long to be inserted in this brief article, but you should read it in full, and in connection with the vivid picture of the scenes of that heroic contest (the mightiest battle ever fought on American soil), in order to understand its significance.

Impossible to Pull Trigger.

The incident to which the letter refers occurred during the struggle among the rocks for the possession of the famous "Round Tops." The writer, who was a member of an Alabama regiment, had placed himself in a secure position between two rocks, where, unseen himself, he had a clear view of the nearby Federal lines, and particularly of General Chamberlain, whose rank he recognized by his uniform.

He knew the importance of picking off officers, and he drew a bead on General Chamberlain, resting his gun on a rock to get a sure aim. But, as he was about to pull the trigger, a sudden qualm arrested him, and he did not fire. Then he grew ashamed of his weakness and drew a bead a second time.

"I had you, perfectly certain. But that same queer something shut right down on me. I couldn't pull the trigger, and I gave it up—that is, your life."

There are plenty of stories of the blind madness and of the unnatural calm that, at different times, possess the soldier in battle, making him, in one case, shoot and thrust and strike almost without volition, and, in the other case, perform similar acts with the cold, unsympathetic precision of a machine; but it is rare, outside of fiction, to hear of an incident like this, where conscience asserts its rights.

His Own Better Nature.

No doubt some persons would see, in the resistless impulse that restrained that shot, a mystic influence which, for some providential purpose, paralyzed the finger that was curved to press the trigger; but such ideas belong to the days when the Olympian gods were believed to guide the spear of Achilles or to throw a mantle of invisibility about Hector.

We should rather ascribe the incident to the personality of the soldier, whose hand was arrested by the expostulation of his own better nature. Viewed from that point, it becomes significant of the growth of moral sentiment, which, in the end, will banish war altogether. Perhaps that merciful Confederate at Gettysburg was, in a sense, faithless to his cause. Who can say that, if the shot had been fired, the result of the struggle might not have been different? The fall of a leader has lost many a battle. Very likely if that act of mercy had been witnessed by the commander of the Alabama regiment he would have cut the conscientious soldier down with his sword as a recreant from duty!

Yet the man who spared the general's life afterward declared that he was glad that he could not press the trigger, and every generous mind approves his act and his sentiment.

In former days, when most battles were fought hand to hand and foot to foot, the FUROR CERTAMINIS (fury of the fight) had no such interruptions. Moral sentiment counted for little on the battlefield. There was no time for it to assert itself, even if it existed then as widely as it exists to-day. The dreadful scenes of slaughter that attended Caesar's campaigns in Gaul, and the sacks of cities in the Thirty Years' War, would be impossible now among civilized people.

Education Will Bring Peace.

When a modern soldier, secure in his position, sights along his gun at an enemy, his mind is in a state for reflection upon the nature and consequences of his intended act of slaughter, and the mere fact that he can strike at a distance and unseen may restrain him, as it did in this case, from striking at all. He balances his public duty against his personal conscience, and unless the former overwhelmingly appeals to him, the latter may prevail. If he can see a chance for mercy he will exercise it.

All this shows plainly the direction which the advocates of universal peace (and we are all such advocates, though we may differ in our ideas about methods) should take in order to bring about the result they aim at. It is the direction of EDUCATION. A gun in the hands of a conscientious soldier is a moral force for peace, and so is a powerful battle fleet in the hands of a great, civilized nation.

The Treaty of Tien-Tsin

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE Treaty of Tien--tsin, concluded 55 years ago, will probably loom large in the history of the time to come, very much larger than it does to-day.

It was about the year 1517 (the year of the great Reformation) that China began to be vaguely known to Europeans. The Jesuits appeared among the Celestials about 1525, and in 1790 the English figure among the "Foreign Devils." The Englishman is nothing if not commercial, and, thinking that he saw a good thing in opium, began a quarrel with the Chinaman over that drug that lasted for years; of which, so far as the honor of England is concerned, the least said the better.

In 1857 took place the war between England and China, which ended with the total destruction of the Chinese fleet by Commodores Elliot and Seymour, and the perpetual establishment of John Bull in the island of Hongkong.

The Treaty of Tien-tsin, which clinched the war of 1857, created a new departure on the part of the quaint and ancient people of the Flowery Kingdom. Among its provisions were: The establishment of ambassadorships at both courts, a larger freedom of trade, the toleration of the Christian religion, a revision of the tariff, and the guarantee that the term "barbarian" should no longer be applied to Europeans.

With this Treaty of Tien-tsin begins Modern China. But a little more than half a century has elapsed—an insignificant period in the evolution of a great nation's life—and yet we already have some pretty strong intimations of the possibilities of the future. Beyond a doubt it behooves the white man the world over to prepare for those possibilities, if we may not say probabilities.

The yellow men number at least 500,000,000. From the Japanese we learn what 50,000,000 of yellow men are able to do; and from that we are in a position to guess with a fair degree of accuracy what 500,000,000 of yellow men can do if fully prepared. With thousands of miles of Pacific seacoast, does it not behoove the United States to look well to the ways and means of its supremacy on the great Western waters?
