WOMEN OF FACTORY DECLARE LEO FRANK'S CHARACTER IS GOOD

Mrs. Rae Frank, mother of Leo Frank, was called to the stand late Friday afternoon to testify in behalf of her son, who is on trial for his life.

A letter written by Leo Frank April 26 to his uncle, M. Frank, Who was in New York at the time, was produced by Luther Rosser for Mrs. Frank to identify as being read in her presence April 28.

A bitter legal wrangle immediately ensued, Attorney Hooper protesting its admission on the ground that it was self-serving and might have been written for the very purpose of shifting suspicion from himself.

The letter is said to be dated 4 p. m., April 26, and in it Frank is said to have described the Memorial Day parade.

A stir was created when Mrs. Frank took the stand. She was called at 5:30, just at the time an adjournment was expected. She was entirely composed.

Judge Roan, after both sides had argued at length, ruled that the letter was admissible.

Women Workers Defend Frank.

Attorney Reuben Arnold announced Friday afternoon that he was going to call every woman on the fourth floor of the National Pencil Factory and many on the other floors to testify to Frank's conduct about the factory and to the nature of his relations with his employees.

Mrs. E. H. Carson was the first woman to be asked in regard to Frank's attitude to her, and Miss Mary Pirk the next. Both said Frank had acted as a gentleman. Miss Pirk said she accused Conley of the crime, and that he immediately disappeared.

Two weeks before Mary Phagan was killed Leo Frank had her at one side of the factory away from her machine while she was endeavoring to get back to work, according to the intimation carried in a question by Solicitor Dorsey to Miss Pirk. The Solicitor asked the witness if she had not known this to occur. Miss Pirk said she had never observed it. Dorsey asked if she had not seen Frank frequently call Mary to one side and at other times take liberties with the other girls. She denied all of this.

Tells of Conley's Suspicious Actions.

Mrs. Carson, who is the mother of Miss Rebecca Carson, one of Thursday's witnesses, told Friday afternoon of actions of Jim Conley after the murder of Mary Phagan which she regarded as highly suspicious.

She said she saw Conley Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings after the crime, and each time said to him, in a joking way:

"Well, they haven't got you yet, Jim."

Mrs. Carson said that on Thursday Conley answered angrily:

"No; I ain't done nothing."

"Neither has Mr. Frank, but they've got him," Mrs. Carson replied, and then added:

"When they get the real murderer, it will be the negro Mrs. Arthur White saw when she entered the factory Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Carson said that the negro dropped his broom and that she did not see him again that day.

Negro Helper Testifies for Frank.

Walter Pride, a negro helper at the pencil factory, testified that he had worked many Saturday afternoons at the factory and that he never had seen women in Frank's office at these times, as Jim Conley had testified. Pride also swore that he never saw Conley watching at the front door. Conley said on the witness stand that he frequently stayed at the front door to prevent persons going upstairs while Frank had women visitors. Pride said he would not believe Conley on oath.

The State's theory of premeditation in the murder of Mary Phagan was vigorously opposed Friday afternoon in the Frank trial by the testimony of Harry Gottheimer, a traveling salesman for Montag Bros. and the National Pencil Factory.

Gottheimer testified that he was at Montag Bros.' Saturday forenoon, April 26, and that he talked to Frank there shortly after 10 o'clock. The witness said Frank asked him to come over to the pencil factory for a short while. Gottheimer was not certain that

Man Who Deserted Wife in Atlanta Is Caught in Alabama

Chif of Polic Beavers was notified Friday afternoon that Charles L. Smith is under arrest at Seale, Ala., and was asked if the Atlanta authorities wanted him returned here for prosecution after he ahd been tried in the Alabama town.

The local police have been searching for Smith several weeks on complaint of S. M. Wilson, of No. 331 Courtland street, who asserts Smith married his daughter July 19 and deserted her the next week, when she learned that he had another wife living at Opelika. Wilson conferred with Chief Beavers this afternoon, but it has not yet been decided whether Smith will be brough back here or the charge dropped.

According to Wilson's story, Smith came to Atlanta and represented himself as a Methodist minister. He married Miss Wilson, and a week later she heard that he had been married in Columbus, Ga., the previous February, and that the former wife was residing at Opelika.

She asked Smith about it. He offered to go with her to Opelika and disprove it. They started, and when almost there Smith leaped from the train. She caught hi mand brought him back, and they went on to Opelika. Once in the town, however, Smith gave her the slip, and nothing had been heard of him until his arrest in Seale.

COVELESKIE AND PRICE ON SLAB

Crackers Score Two Runs in First Inning of Second Game; Smith Hits Triple.

PONCE DE LEON PARK, Aug. 15.—Coveleskie was sent to the mound to face the Crackers in the second game. Price opposed the big left-hander.

Smith's men managed to put two runs over in the first inning. Smith pounded out a triple and Bisland a double in this session.

FIRST INNING.

Walsh walked. On a passed ball he moved up to second. Flick sacrificed Walsh to third, Holland to Agler. Coyle was a fan victim. Elberfeld walked. Johnson flied to Manush in deep left. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Covaleskie tossed out Agler. Manush fanned weakly. Welchonce walked and stole second. Smith tripled to center, scoring Welchonce. Bisland doubled to left, scoring Smith. Holland out, Coveleskie to Coyle. TWO HITS, TWO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Graff flied to Agler. Williams singled to right. Street sent a high fly to Welchonce. Coveleskie fanned. Dunn dropped the last strike, but threw to Agler in time. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

Calvo was easy for Coveleskie. Dunn out, Graff to Coyle. Dunn was as slow as an ice-wagon or he would have beaten it out. Price whiffed. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

Walsh doubled down the left field line. Flick threw to Bisland and Walsh was doubled off second, to Smith. Coyle walked. Elberfeld singled to center. Johnson singled to left and Coyle scored, Elberfeld took third. Graff walked and the bases are crowded. Williams walked, forcing Elberfeld over the counting station with the tying run. Street grounded to Holland and on his error was safe. Johnson registered on the fumble. Coveskie forced Street at second, Bisland to Smith. THREE HITS, THREE RUNS.

Agler popped out to Elberfeld. Manush lofted to Elberfeld. Welchonce beat out a grounder to Walsh. When the Chattanooga shortstop threw wild to first Welchance beat it to second. Smith grounded to Graff and Welchonce was out in a chase, Graff to Flick to Walsh. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

FOURTH INNING.

Voss replaced Price on the slab for Atlanta. Walsh flied to Manush. Flick doubled to left. Coyle grounded to Bisland and when the ball hit Flick running to third he was out. Elberfeld walked. Johnson grounded to Bisland and beat it to first. When Bisland threw wild to first Coyle tallied. On a double steal Elberfeld scored and Johnson took second. On Dunn's wild throw to third trying to catch Johnson in an attempt to pilfer third he also scored. Walsh fanned. THREE HITS, THREE RUNS.

Slit Uniforms for Chicago Policewomen

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Malefactors' scorn of the "lady cops" turned to real fear to-day when the "Catch 'em Skirts" was announced. The "Catch 'em" is a skirt of the usual narrow proportions, but equipped with a long slit and a drawstring. The "lady cop" can't run fast when the slit is closed for ordinary gait. But if speed is necessary, the wearer pulls a mysterious string, and—lo! a long slit, reaching up to the knee, appears.

Only policewomen, of course, will be allowed to wear the new skirt.

DYNAMITE EXPLODED; NO RAIN.

FRANK, WIFE AND MOTHER CALM AS END OF TRIAL NEARS

Paint Used in Pencil Factory Made Blood-Like Stains, Employee Says

COURTROOM THRONGED AGAIN AT PROSPECT OF DEFENDANT TESTIFYING

he could get over to the factory during the forenoon and told Frank so.

"Well, if you can't get over this forenoon, be sure to come over this afternoon," Frank replied, according to Gottheimer. The witness said that Miss Hattie Hall, the office stenographer, overheard the conversation.

The defense brought out the salesman's testimony to raise the question in the minds of the jurors if Frank, contemplating an attack on Mary Phagan when she arrived, would ask Gottheimer to come to the factory in the afternoon. Miss Hall previously testified that Frank had asked her to stay at the factory to work in the afternoon.

State Strongly Objects.

Attorney Hooper objected strongly to this line of testimony, characterizing it as self-serving and improper. Attorneys Rosser and Arnold defended it on the ground that it was the record of an actual engagement which Frank had made for the afternoon, something he would have been unlikely to do had he been planning any crime or wrongdoing.

Truman McCreary, a negro drayman, testified that he frequently was at the factory Saturday afternoons and that he never sw Jim Conley watching at the entrance on the lower floor.

That Dewey Hewell, a 16-year-old girl who has been brought from the Home of the Good Shepherd in Cincinnati especially to testify against the young factory superintendent, will be one of the State's most important witnesses, was learned Friday after the girl's arrival in Atlanta, where she formerly lived.

Exactly the nature of her testimony was not revealed. Mrs. Mary Bohnefeld, police matron, who returned with the girl Friday noon, said that she had not talked with her charge in regard to the matter.

The Solicitor is known to have about twenty other witnesses whom he may call in the rebuttal.

Friday's witnesses were drawn from many walks in life. Most of them were well known in Atlanta. Some of them had met the defendant in a business way, others socially. Some had known him from their associations with him at the National Pencil Factory and at Montag Bros. Others formed their opinion of his character from knowing him in the work of the N'Nai Brith, of which Frank is the president.

Solicitor Dorsey for the most part seemed content until the time when he should be able to call his own witnesses in rebuttal. He questioned a few of Frank's acquaintances briefly to determine exactly the ground they had for their conviction of the defendant's good character, but seldom went further than that.

The State, if the defense rests Saturday noon, will finish with its rebuttal Monday night or Tuesday forenoon, it is expected.

One of the character witnesses, Ray Bauer, went through a severe grilling at the hands of Solicitor Dorsey. After he had testified to the general good character of Frank, he told Attorney Arnold that he had been at the pencil factory on Saturday afternoons last January, times when Frank was said to have had women in his office.

Solicitor Dorsey inquired of the witness how he happened to be sure of the days he was at the factory and the time in the afternoon when he visited there. Bauer said there were special reasons why he recalled the time on the first occasion in January, but could not give an explanation that satisfied the Solicitor about the other times he was there.

Girl Witness Closely Guarded.

The Hewell girl formerly lived in Atlanta before her commitment to the reform institution in Cincinnati. Chief Beavers stated shortly after the arrival of the girl that he does not know what her testimony will be. He intimated that the girl's connection with the case had developed since the trial began, and that the Solicitor is the only person who knows just what she will testify. Mrs. Bohnefeld also denied knowledge of what the girl's evidence is to be, declaring that during the trip from Atlanta to Cincinnati the Frank trial was not mentioned.

The Hewell girl was taken to the matron's ward at police headquarters immediately upon her arrival in the city and will be kept there until she is called to the witness stand. Chief Beavers has issued orders that no one is to be allowed to see her but himself and Mrs. Bohnefeld.

As the last witnesses were being called by the defense, Frank, his wife and his mother viewed the proceedings with the same calmness that has marked their demeanor since the trial began, with the exception of the outburst of the mother two days before. On Friday she looked steadfastly downward and slightly toward the judge's bench as though she might be having some difficulty in maintaining her attitude of confidence and calmness.

As the defense neared the close of its case, the probability of the calling of W. H. Mincey diminished. Mincey is the insurance solicitor who swore that he talked to Conley the afternoon of the murder of Mary Phagan, and that Conley boasted to him of killing a girl. The attorneys for Frank would not announce definitely their intentions in respect to Mincey or with what credence they looked upon his story.

Solicitor Dorsey brought before the jury for the first time Friday the intimation that Frank might have sought to have disguised his handwriting when he was asked to write the test notes by the police and detectives.

M. O. Nix, a credit man at Montag Bros., was called to the stand to identify Frank's handwriting on the financial sheet. When Dorsey took the witness over for cross-examination, he showed photographic copies of the notes Frank wrote and asked Nix if it was Frank's writing. The witness was unable to say. The Solicitor did not suggest any motive in disguising his hand.

The Solicitor endeavored to get Joseph Stelker, one of the factory foremen, to testify that Frank did not go in to view the body of Mary Phagan when he was taken to identify the girl. Stelker testified for the defense that some of the red varnish used in the factory made stains very much like the supposed blood spots found on the factory floor.

The defense continued calling character witnesses at intervals throughout the forenoon. None was cross-questioned yesterday, and all said Frank's character was good.

Frank's Statement To Be Big Feature.

Frank's statement on the stand unquestionably will be one of the striking features of the trial. He has studied the State's case carefully, and it is said will not content himself with merely denying his guilt and explaining his movements on the fatal day, but will go somewhat into what he believes are the weaknesses of the State's chain of circumstances.

According to Frank's friends, the prisoner has been anxious for his attorneys to allow him to be cross-questioned, but they have doubted the wisdom of allowing him to go through the ordeal after the strain of the last few months.

Dr. J. E. Summerfield, No. 300 Washington street, who said he had lived in Atlanta for nineteen years and F. Schiff, No. 38 Fair street, who has lived here for fifty years, were the first witnesses called Friday and both responded favorably to the usual questions about Frank's character put by Attorney Arnold.

No attempt at cross-examination was made by Solicitor Dorsey. The State had an equally imposing army of witnesses—most of them women—ready to go on the stand in rebuttal of the evidence upholding the prisoner's character.

A curious problem will arise when they are summoned. The State can only ask its witnesses as to the general character of the defendant, just as the defense has done, and it will be up to the defense to ask about particular incidents on the cross-examination or rest content with allowing the opinions of the State's witnesses to go unchallenged. In that event it would be merely one group saying Frank's character is good against another saying it is bad, with the jury to decide which it prefers to believe.

Another Former Office Boy Called.

B. J. Nix, of Marietta, an office boy for the National Pencil Company from April to October, 1912, was the third witness of the morning.

Q. What days were you off?—A. I was off nearly every Saturday until September.

Q. What time did you leave on the Saturdays you worked?—A. Usually I worked until 4 or 6 o'clock.

Q. Do you recall missing any Saturdays when you were supposed to work?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever know Frank to have any women there drinking with him?—A. No.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. When they were working on that building on Forsyth street, what time did you leave?—A. About 4 o'clock.

Q. You don't know whether Frank had those women there when you were off or not, do you?—A. No.

The witness was excused and R. D. Greenfield was called.

Q. Are you one of the owners of the Venable Building in which the pencil company has its factory?—A. Yes.

Q. Who leased it?—A. Montag Bros., for a period of ten years.

Q. Do you know where the metal room is?—A. No.

Q. Where is the Clark Woodenware Company?—A. They occupied part of the building known as No. 37 Forsyth street.

Q. Since Montags have had that building has any new flooring been put down?—A. No.

Q. Do you know Leo M. Frank?—A. Yes.

Q. Is his character good or bad?—A. It is very good.

Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Are you closely connected with the defendant?—A. As landlord and tenant.

Q. Did you contribute to the fund for Frank's defense?—A. No.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. Have you ever heard of any such fund?—A. No.

Arnold, aside, said:

"I wish there was one."

Montag's Credit Man on Stand.

The witness was excused and N. O. Nix, credit man for Montag Brothers, was called to the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Have you come in contact with the handwriting of Leo Frank?—A. Yes, I saw many of his reports to Montag Brothers.

Q. Have you a fairly good acquaintance with him?—A. Yes, fairly good.

Mr. Arnold showed the witness a number of financial sheets of the National Pencil Company, including the one of April 26.

Q. Whose handwriting were these made in?—A. All are in the handwriting of Mr. Frank.

Q. Whose handwriting is that below those orders?—A. Miss Hattie Hall, our stenographer.

Q. Did you employ her?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know anything about her getting a raise in salary recently?—A. Yes, I gave her one August 1.

Q. Why?—A. Because I promised it to her when she first came to work.

The witness identified Frank's handwriting on requisitions said to have been made out April 26.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. How do you know it was Frank's handwriting on those slips and reports?—A. By these reports coming to me.

Q. You never did see him write one of these, did you?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see him write?—A. Yes.

Q. Doesn't this order show that it came in on April 22?—A. Yes.

Q. They would not have waited until April 26 to make a requisition for it, would they?

Arnold objected and Judge Roan sustained him.

Q. Are you the brother of the office boy who has just testified?—A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been with Montag Brothers?—A. Seven or eight years.

Q. Whose handwriting is this (the witness was handed the phtograph of a letter)?—A. I can not say. It looks something like Mr. Frank's.

Q. Won't you say whether it is or is not?—A. I can not say.

Q. Then how can you identify that other handwriting?—A. The other is mostly figures. It is different from this.

Unable to Identify Frank's Writing.

Q. Will you say this is not Frank's handwriting?—A. I can not identify this writing.

Q. Give the jury some reason.—A. The writing of Frank's which I have seen has been mostly figures.

The photograph which Dorsey showed the witness was of the note which Frank wrote to the police for comparison with the murder notes found beside the body of Mary Phagan.

On redirect examination the witness said he was not familiar with Frank's style of letter writing. The witness was excused and Joseph Stelker, in charge of the polishing and varnishing department at the pencil factory, was called to the stand. Arnold examined him.

Q. Did you see the blood spots which Barrett found?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see the white stuff over these spots?—A. Yes; it looked like it might have been a substance was used on the machine, or face powder.

Q. Is there any red varnish used in the factory? If so, how would it compare with this?—A. some varnish looks like blood.

Q. Do you know what that substance was?—A. I do not.

Q. Would it have been possible for the red varnish to have been splashed out of a bottle to this point?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see these spots on the floor?—A. Yes, all the time.

Q. You never would have noticed this particular spot if Christopher Columbus Barrett had not pointed it out to you?—A. I don't think I would.

Q. Were you at the undertaking establishment Sunday afternoon?—A. Yes.

Q. What impression were you and Frank under about the Coroner's inquest?

Dorsey objected and was sustained.

Q. Do you know whether Frank saw the body of little Mary Phagan?—A. No.

Q. Did you understand the Coroner's inquest was to be held there?—A. I heard it was there.

The witness was offered as a character witness and declared that Frank's character was good. He further said that Jim Conley's character was bad and that he would not believe the negro under oath.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. What wages do you get?—A. $20 a week.

Q. How long have you been getting that?—A. A year and a half.

Q. Where are you from?—A. New York.

Q. Did you know Frank there?—A. No.

Q. Whom did you discuss Conley's character with?—A. No one.

Q. Then you don't mean to tell me that you are giving just an opinion?—A. I was talking about what he had done to me.

"Then I move to rule it out," said Dorsey. "It is nothing but this man's personal opinion."

Judge Roan—I sustain you under those circumstances.

Q. Did you ever hear anyone say anything about Conley's character?—A. I heard he was in the chaingang.

Q. Who said it?—A. I saw him myself.

Q. Frank took him back when he came out of the chaingang, didn't he?—A. Don't you know that a negro is much better when he comes out of the chaingang than he was before?

Q. Well, what did Conley do to you?—A. I sent him out for 25 cents' worth of beer, and when he brought it back it was half water. I said, "Didn't you put water in here?" and he said, "No; I wouldn't do anything like that."

Q. How do you know he put water in the beer?—A. By the taste.

Q. When was this?—A. Last summer.

Q. What time was it?—A. At 10:30.

Q. How do you know the time? Was it your habit to get that bucket full every day at this time?—A. Yes.

Q. What did you do with this beer?—A. I threw it out.

Q. Did you send him again?—A. No.

Q. What time did Frank come to the undertaker's?—A. A little after 2 o'clock.

Q. How was he dressed?—A. In a blue or brown suit.

Q. Who came with Frank?—A. He came alone.

Q. How big was the room in which the body was?—Fifteen by fifteen.

Q. It was a great big room?—A. Not very.

Q. What kind of a room?—A. I never noticed it. I just looked at the body and walked out.

Q. How was the door located?—A. On the right side of the passageway.

Q. How far did you go into this room?—A. Just to the door.

Q. Describe the body?—One eye was badly discolored. There was a scar on the right of the face. The hair was hanging loose.

Q. Well, go on.—A. I didn't look so close.

Q. Who suggested you going to look at the body?—A. Fritz Yankee.

Q. Didn't you say a while ago that you sat there two minutes and got up and looked at the body, and that Frank arrived three minutes later?—A. Yes.

Q. Well, explain that to the jury.—A. I don't know what time it was, I was so nervous. It might have been twenty minutes.

Q. How long did it take you to get yourself together?—A. I haven't gotten myself together yet.

Q. When did Frank go in to view the body?—A. Later.

Q. How much later?—A. It might have been twenty minutes.

Q. How far did you have to go back to see the body?—A. You could stand in the door.

Q. Did the seeing of that body have any effect on Frank's appearance?—A. No, he looked just like he does now.

Q. You don't know whether Frank went into that room or not?—A. No.

Q. You felt nauseated?—A. Yes.

Went to Morgue To See Bruises.

Q. Was there anybody connected with the factory who went back to the undertaking establishment with Frank?—A. No.

Q. Can you name anyone else from the factory who was there?—A. Lemmie Quinn.

Q. Now, why did you go there?—A. I wanted to see who she was.

Q. Didn't you know it was Mary Phagan?—A. I heard it when I got there.

Q. Well, why did you go there when it would tear you all to pieces?—A. I wanted to see the bruises.

Arnold—He has already gone into that.

Dorsey—Your honor, I want to test this witness' recollection.

Arnold's objection was sustained, and he took the witness.

Q. You are a German, aren't you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You like to drink your beer, don't you?—A. Yes.

Q. You sent Jim Conley after beer and he brought it back half water, didn't he?—A. Yes, and I asked him if he had put his black mouth where a white man was to drink. He said no, and I cussed him.

The witness was excused and P. D. McCorley, of No. 24 Hampton street, who has charge of the cotton seed oil business of M. Frank, the wealthy uncle of Leo M. Frank, was placed on the stand.

McCorley testified to Frank's character as being good.

Mrs. M. W. Meyer, followed McCorley, and said she had known Leo Frank for five years and that his character was good.

Mrs. David Marx, No. 354 Washington street, the wife of Rabbi Marx, followed Mrs. Meyer. Mrs. Marx said that Frank's character was very good.

Mrs. Arthur I. Harris, A. L. Guthman, No. 479 Washington street, and M. S. Rice, of No. 14 Washington street, followed each other in rapid succession on the witness stand as character witnesses for Frank. They each declared that they knew the defendant very well, and that his character was good.

Mrs. B. Glogowski, who has a boarding house at No. 499 Washington street, testified that Frank boarded with her for several months prior to his marriage and that his character was very good.

Mrs. J. E. Summerfield, a physician; Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Moss, Mrs. Joseph G. Brown, William Bauer, No. 52 Washington street; Miss Helen Loeb and Emil Dittler took the stand as character witnesses in behalf of Frank.

E. E. Fitzpatrick, of 105 Sinclair avenue, Inman Park, foreman of the shipping department of Montag Bros., testified that he had known Frank for several years and that his character was good.

Saw Frank At Montag's.

J. C. Matthews, a clerk at Montag Brothers, residing at No. 82 Sinclair avenue, was called to the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Do you recall Memorial Day?—A. Yes.

Q. Where were you?—A. At Montag's.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank?—A. Yes, while I was there.

Q. Do you know the time?—A. No.

The witness also testified as to Frank's good character. He was then excused and Alfred Fox, a furniture manufacturer, was called. He testified as a character witness in behalf of Frank.

Mrs. Aloph Montag was the next character witness. She declared she had known Frank for some time and that his character was very good. Dorsey cross-exanimed her.

Q. When did you hear Frank's character discussed?—A. I have heard women, as well as my husband, speak of what a fine gentleman he was.

The witness was excused and F. F. Hilburn, No. 22 Inman street, West End, was called. He testified in Frank's behalf as a character witness. When asked if he knew Frank's general character, the witness said: "I will have to answer no. I only know him in a business way."

Dorsey—I object, your honor. He is not acquainted with the general character of the defendant.

Judge Roan—The witness does not qualify.

The witness was excused and Mrs. Martin May, Julian Boehm, No. 332 Myrtle street; M. H. Sliverman, a lawyer; Mrs. Mollie Rosenberg, a trained nurse; Mrs. M. A. Sterne, Charles Adler, Mrs. R. A. Sonn, wife of the superintendent of the Hebrew Orphans' Home; O. J. Jones, of West End, an employee of Montag Brothers; Mrs. Dan Klein, Nathan Copeland, an attorney, and Miss Ray Klein testified in rapid succession as to Frank's good character.

Hadn't Heard of Immorality at Factory.

L. Finstein testified that he had been in Frank's employ for more than a year and that his general character was good. M. J. Barnard, of the Atlas Paper Company, testified also as to Frank's good character. Barnard declared that he had never heard of any immoral actions within the pencil factory.

Mrs. John O. Parmelee, No. 417 Spring street, the wife of a stockholder in the pencil company, said Frank's character and reputation were excellent. Dorsey cross-examined her.

Q. How many times have you seen Frank?—A. I have known him about four years. I saw him when I went to the factory with my husband about four years ago.

Q. How many times have you seen him since?—A. I saw him on the street and visited him in jail.

Q. Who ever discussed him with you?—A. I am a member of the board of directors of the Sheltering Arms. In that way I have heard of Mr. Frank and I have also heard a number of Jewish people speak highly of him.

The witness was excused.

Jacob Fox, manager of the children's department of Eiseman's, next took the stand and said he had boarded at the same place with Frank and testified as to Frank's good character.

Marcus Loeb, a manufacturer, testified next to Frank's good character.

Roy Bauer, a youth, who formerly worked at the pencil factory, was the next witness. Arnold questioned him.

Went to Plant Often on Saturdays.

Q. Have you ever worked at the National Pencil Company with Mr. Frank on Saturday?—A. Yes; during the summers of 1909 and 1910.

Q. Have you worked there in the last twelve months?—A. No.

Q. Have you been there since you quit working there?—A. During the Ohio flood I went there often on Saturdays.

Q. Did you find anybody there?—A. Mr. Holloway, Mr. Darley and Mrs. Frank.

Q. Did you ever see any women there?—A. No.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. You saw Mr. Schiff there?—A. Until January. He was in the flood district then and I went there to find whether there was any news of him.

Q. Do you remember the time?—A.

DOZENS OF WITNESSES TELL OF LEO FRANK'S GOOD STANDING

Defense Paves Way for Placing the Accused Superintendent on the Stand

MINCEY LIKELY NOT TO TESTIFY ABOUT ALLEGED CONFESSION OF CONLEY

Yes; it was about 3 o'clock the first Saturday.

Q. How do you know?—A. I just bathed and dressed.

Q. What time was it then?—A. About 2 o'clock.

Q. Did you see the office boy that Saturday?—A. Yes.

Q. Who else?—A. Mr. Frank.

Q. What time did you leave?—A. About 4 o'clock.

Q. Do you recall the conversation while you were there?—A. No.

Q. Did you go there often?—A. I made a practice of going there every Saturday and talking to them.

Q. Most of the time that particular Saturday was Frank working?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you talk to him while he was working?—A. Not much.

Court then adjourned until 2 o'clock.

Sheriff Warns Crowd To Be Quiet.

Just before court convened for the afternoon session, Sheriff Mangum warned the crowd that if he heard any more laughter or hisses that he would bring the offenders before Judge Roan and also clear the courtroom of the balance of the crowd.

Solicitor Dorsey continued the cross-examination of Roy Bauer.

Q. Who have you talked to since you left the stand?—A. Mr. Leo Gottheimer, Mr. Sig Montag, Jim Gorst, Mr. Arnold and Mr. Rosser.

Q. Where did you see them?—A. In Mr. Arnold's office.

Q. Why did you go to Mr. Arnold's office?—A. I drove Mr. Sig Montag over in his car.

Q. Do you drive for him?—A. I have been since his wife has been away.

Q. What did they talk to you about?—A. About my visits to the National Pencil Factory on Saturdays.

Q. What did you tell them?—A. Nothing except what I told you.

Q. Now tell me about the third Saturday in January. What time did you get to the National Pencil Factory?—A. I don't remember.

Q. How do you remember the first Saturday?—A. I don't know.

Q. Did you look at any samples of pencils that third Saturday?—A. No.

Q. What Saturday was it, then?—A. The second.

Q. You coul not remember who was up there the fourth Saturday, except Mr. Frank?—A. No one that I remember.

Q. Who did you see there the fourth Saturday?—A. I don't know, except the people who were usually there.

Q. Do you recall what time he left?—A. No.

Q. Did you see Mr. Holloway?—A. I don't remember.

The witness was excused and Harry Gottheimer, who resides at the Imperial Hotel, and who is a traveling salesman for Montag Brothers and the National Pencil Company, was called. Attorney Arnold questioned him.

Q. Did you see Leo M. Frank Memorial Day?—A. Yes. At Montag Brothers about 10 o'clock.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Frank?—A. Yes. He asked me if I could come over that morning and I told him no. Then he asked me if I could not come over that afternoon.

Q. Had you seen him before that time in April?—A. Yes.

Q. When?—A. Two weeks before that; I was at his office. His wife was there writing on the typewriter.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. You say you work for Montag?—A. I do.

Member of Society To Which Frank Belonged.

Q. You are also a member of the Bnai Brith, Frank's society, are you not?—A. I am.

Q. What did Frank say when you saw him at Montag's?—A. He said he would see me that morning, or that afternoon, if I preferred.

Q. He didn't say anything about having a baseball engagement with his brother-in-law, did he?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Emma Hibbs, a negro servant for Herbert Schiff, was called. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Do you recollect anyone calling up Mr. Schiff on Memorial Day?—A. Yes, sir. It sounded like a boy's voice. I didn't ask who it was.

Q. What time was it?—A. About 10 o'clock.

Q. Did you call Mr. Schiff?—A. Yes, sir. He is hard to wake. He said he would go, but he went back to sleep.

Q. What time was it they called again?—A. About 11 o'clock. Mr. Schiff said to tell them he would come as soon as he dressed.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Emma, how long has Mr. Schiff been living there?—A. More than 40 years, I guess.

Q. Forty years?—A. I was talking about the old man.

Q. Did you always wake him up on holidays?—A. I don't remember. Sometimes I would wake him up. He never would get up unless I waked him.

Thanksgiving and Memorial Day Same.

Q. How do you remember so well about Memorial Day?—Everyone remembers Memorial Day.

Q. How about Thanksgiving Day?—A. Memorial Day and Thanksgiving Day are the same.

Q. Who was the first one you told about this?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you talk it over with anyone?—A. With the lawyer, Mr. Herbert Haas.

Q. When?—A. Since the trial began.

Q. Did he take you into the sitting room before the family and they all talked to you?—A. No, sir. Nobody talked to me but him.

Q. What did he do? Take you off to himself and ask you about it?—A. No, sir, he didn't do nothing but give me my "suspena."

The witness was excused and Annie Hicks, cook for Mrs. Ursenbach, sister of Mrs. Frank, was called. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Did you ket a telephone message last Memorial Day?—A. Yes.

Q. What time?—A. About 1:30.

Q. What was it?—A. Some one called up and asked for Mr. Ursenbach. I said he was not in and he told me to tell him he could not go to the ball game with him. He stopped for a minute and then said: "Hush up honey" to someone and then said into the telephone, "All right." I reckon he was talking to his wife.

Q. Did you deliver the message?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know who it was talking?—A. Yes, it was Mr. Frank.

Tells of Seeing Frank on Sunday.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Were you at the same place the following Sunday afternoon?—A. No, sir, I don't work anywhere Sunday afternoons.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank Sunday morning?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you let him in?—A. No.

Q. Where were you, then?—A. In the dining room.

Q. Was he nervous?—A. No.

Q. What were they doing?—A. Just standing around, laughing.

Q. Did you know what you were going to swear?—A. No. If I had I planned to go to see my mother.

Q. Did you ever talk to Minola McKnight?—A. Yes.

Q. What did she say?—A. She said she was locked up.

Q. What did she say she did?—A. Just prayed.

Attorney Rosser objected to this question and answer and was sustained.

The witness was excused and Truman McCrary, a negro drayman, was called. Arnold questioned him. McCrary said that up to May 1 he had worked every Saturday at the National Pencil Factory.

Q. From July 1, 1912, to January 1, 1913, how many Saturday afternoons did you miss working there?—A. I wouldn't say more than one.

Q. How late did you work there?—A. Usually until about 5 o'clock.

Q. On any Saturday, did you see the front door locked?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Jim Conley watching around the front door?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever find Mr. Frank's outer office or inner office door locked?—AA. No, sir.

Q. What sort of substance are the doors to his office made of?—A. Glass.

Doesn't Know Which Saturday He Missed.

Q. Who did you find with Mr. Frank?—A. Sometimes Mr. Schiff.

Q. Did you see Jim Conley around the factory April 26, Memorial Day?—A. I did not.

Q. You were there that day?—A. Yes, sir. I went there first about 7:30 o'clock and I went up to see Mr. Frank a little before 12 o'clock.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. What Saturday was it you missed between July and January?—A. I don't remember.

Q. What time did you arrive at the factory on your first trip?—A. About 7:30 o'clock.

Q. How do you know?—A. I just come from Mr. Schiff's.

Q. What had you been doing there?—A. Taking him his clothes.

Q. What time did you get your pay Saturday?—A. I don't remember, exactly. Some time before 12 o'clock.

Q. You never saw that peglegged drayman there that morning, did you?—A. No.

Q. You do remember putting your hat down at the door?A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you never saw Jim Conley there on Saturday afternoons?—A. No.

Q. Were you ever there yourself on Saturday afternoons?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you went there for your bills, would you go up to the office to get them or would they bring them down to you?—A. Some times I went up to the office for them and sometimes they brought them down.

The witness was excused and Isaac Haas, 479 Washington street, was called. Arnold questioned him. Haas testified to the general good character of Frank.

Q. Mr. Haas, did your telephone wake you up on Sunday, April 27? A. No, it woke my wife and she woke me.

The witness was excused and Arthur Pride, a negro, was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Is your name Arthur, or Walker?—A. Both. Some calls me Walker and some the other.

Q. Where do you work?—A. Second floor of the pencil factory.

Q. Do you work on a machine? A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall missing a Saturday since June of last year?—A. No.

Q. Do you just work on the second floor?—A. No, I work from the basement to the roof.

Q. On any of the Saturdays you worked did you ever see any women in the office of Mr. Frank?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Jim Conley standing guard on the first floor?—A. No.

Q. Were you at the factory Memorial Day?—A. No.

Q. What kind of work did Jim Conley do?—A. Sweeper and elevator man.

Q. Do the employees use the back stairway that leads from the second to the third and fourth floors?—A. Yes.

Q. When the machinery is not running, can you hear the elevator? A. Very plainly.

Q. Is there any difficulty in hearing the elevator run on any floor?—A. No.

Q. Would you believe Jim Conley under oath?—A. No.

Hooper took the witness or cross-examination.

Q. When did you make up your mind you would not believe Jim?—A. About four months ago.

Q. Why?—A. He and his whole family told a lie on me.

Q. What was it?—A. He got me into trouble.

Q. You are a better negro than Jim?—A. No, but I am a better grade negro.

Q. Well what did he do?—A. He brought me a watch that was marked "paid in full" and sold it to me. He got arrested for it and his family promised to pay for it if I got him out. I got it fixed and they would not pay me.

Q. Where was the elevator key kept?—A. I don't know.

Q. Did you hear that elevator when the wind was blowing the blinds?—A. Yes. But the wind wasn't blowing the blinds.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. You say Conley forged a receipt and sold you the watch? A. Yes.

Woman Says She Saw Bloodspots.

The witness was excused and Mrs. E. H. Carson, No. 61 McIntire street, was called. Arnold questioned her. Mrs. Carson said she worked at the pencil factory.

Q. Have you at any time seen blood spots around the ladies' toilet?—A. Yes; very often.

Q. Were you at the factory April 25?—A. Yes.

Q. What time did you leave?—A. 12:30.

Q. When were you there again?—A. Monday.

Q. When did you first see Jim Conley after the crime?—A. Tuesday.

Q. What time did you see him again?—A. Thursday.

Q. Did you say anything to him?—A. I said: "Well, I see they haven't got you yet. He said: "I ain't done nothing." I told him that Mr. Frank hadn't done anything, but they had him in jail. That when they found the negro that was on the first floor that day, that they would have the murderer of Mary Phagan. He put down his broom and walked away.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Frank?—A. For three years, the first of last April.

Q. Was his character good or bad?—A. It was always good.

Q. How long have you known Jim Conley?—A. I don't know how long.

Q. What was his character for truth and honesty?—A. Bad.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. No, I would not.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Do you know Miss Daisy Hopkins? (Miss Hopkins was brought into the courtroom)—A. No, I don't know her. There are lots of them I don't know.

Jury Goes Out for Usual Soft Drink.

Q. What time was it Tuesday after the murder that you talked to Conley?—A. It was something after 9 o'clock.

Q. Don't you know you talked to Frank and Conley both on the fourth floor that day?—A. I think I did.

Q. Didn't you see Frank whisper to Conley?—A. No, I did not.

Q. What did Frank say?—A. He said he was sorry about the little girl being killed.

Q. Do you hear anyone else say they were sorry about the girl being murdered?—A. Well, to tell you the truth, I was so stirred up and upset I don't remember just what was said. I have been upset ever since, and I am not right now. I was awful sorry about the little girl.

At this point Mr. Dorsey asked for the records of the National Pencil Company. The defense did not have them.

Dorsey: "I served a duces tecum on you. I need those records."

Rosser: "We have called on you for papers several times when you did not have them. You just quarrel like an old she-cat."

Arnold: "Let's quit this quarreling, Hugh. eLt's all quit it. It is disgusting."

The jurors were excused for a few minutes to taek their usual afternoon soft drink.

Q. Did you see those blood spots on the second floor near the ladies' dressing room?—A. Yes.

Q. And you say you have seen such blood spots before?—A. Yes.

Where, in the basement?—A. No, I have never been in the basement. I saw it around the sink, in the toilet on the second floor and on the steps.

Says Conley Declared Frank Was Innocent.

Q. Did you know who had been hurt?—A. No.

Q. Did you see anyone around there?—A. There were lots of girls around there.

Q. With their fingers cut?—A. Oh, no.

Q. Did you see Frank Monday?—A. No.

Q. You did not see him until Tuesday?—A. No.

Q. When did you see Jim Conley again?—A. I saw him Thursday. I said "Jim, I see they haven't got you yet." He said, "No, Missis, I ain't done nothing." And he looked like he was scared. I said, "No, Mr. Frank hasn't done anything either, but they got him." He said, "No, Missis, he is as innocent as you, and I know you is." I answered, "When they find the one who [illegible] Mary Phagan it will be the negro Mrs. Wade says [illegible]

WHAT 'THEY SAY' WON'T HURT LEO FRANK; STATE MUST 'PROVE' DEPRAVITY

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

There is nothing apparently so plain to outside observation as character—just character—and there is, strange to say, nothing so difficult at times to prove.

"They say" and "but" are the two most notorious scandalmongers in the universe—"they say" so and so; and he or she is all right, "but!"

Character, upon which so much depends in this world, upon which civilization itself and decency and right is founded, is, nevertheless, the most elusive of all things when it comes right down to brass tacks of proving it beyond the shadow of a doubt.

Human nature, too, for some curious and vague reason, seems rather to relish the downfall of character and the undermining of reputation—and that, moreover, the while it is vehemently and rather piously assuring itself that it does nothing of the kind!

Kind words travel on leaden feet—gossip gallops in seven-league boots!

Pessimist?

Not at all—just truthimist, that's all!

You stop me to tell me that Jones is the best man you ever knew, that his wife loves him immensely and that his children and all the neighbors' children fairly dote upon him, and I am mildly, but not rampantly interested. I am a pretty good fellow myself, you know, and so are you—who are telling me about Jones—and while I am glad that Jones is a fine fellow—like I am and like you are—I can not see why I should throw any fits about it.

And I—being the average sort of fellow, really—proceed not to throw any fits whatever in re the good Jones.

BUT——

Scandal? That's Different.

You stop me and tell me Jones is a grafter, despite his churchgoing proclivities, and that, besides, he turns Jack habitually from the bottom of the deck—and up go my hands in holy horror!

Sakes alive! I always DID think there was SOMETHING out of whack with Jones—and so forth and so on!

And you can bet your sweet life I stop to listen while you unwind all "they say" of Jones, and how he's a good fellow, "but!"

If Jones is pulling his freight uphill, Jones interests me indifferently in a way—but if Jones and his freight are involuntarily on the toboggan, it's due to stand along the edge of the slideway and watch the fun and make note of the wreckage at the bottom!

I feel sorry for Jones—just as I used to feel sorry always for the teacher beneath whom I had dexterously set up a pin, when said teacher innocently sat down upon it. And after Jones has gone to smash down the old toboggan, I may experience an attack of sorrow for Jones, and next Sunday when I go to church it may so happen that I even pray for Jones—after I have prayed carefully for myself!

Now these broken observations are not altruistic, of course—they may be out of order, and all that.

Preface to Character Sketch.

They are submitted merely by way of prefacing the citation just here of an ancient quat running thuswise:

"There's so much good in the worst of us,
And so much bad in the best of us,
That it hardly behooves any of us
To talk about the rest of us."

Now, then, having brought ourselves to the point where we can give even such persons as Frank and Conley the benefit of the doubt in an argument adverse to the character of either—you know, good and well, gentle reader, we always hand ourselves ALL the doubts, and some!—let us proceed in order to a consideration of the status of the Frank case involved in the character or lack of character in the defendant.

Contemplating the matter of Frank's character as a thing apart from the murder charge against him, the attack upon it thus far dwells within Conley, and Conley's isolated word.

Conley's charge against Leo Frank has not been corroborated by one witness worthy of belief—and it has not been corroborated even by that one in anything save relatively inconsequential detail.

One just as well believe what "they say" and ask no questions, as to believe anything such persons as Dalton say—and probably better.

I am sure I do not know whether Frank's character is good or bad. In respect of a conclusion either way, I am "from Missouri."

My mind is entirely open as to that—and I hope to keep it so until the last precinct has been heard from.

Issues Challenge to State.

I hope I shall know the TRUTH of the matter eventually—I should like to know beyond a reasonable doubt. The law has put Frank's character in issue. It thereby challenges the State to break it down, if the State can.

If the State can break it down, it should proceed to the breaking with all the vigor it fairly and honorably can command. If Frank is a wolf in sheep's clothing, the public is entitled to know it, and it is the duty of the Solicitor General to make it known, if he can.

A wolf in sheep's clothing is a highly undesirable and dangerous thing to have at large in any peaceful, orderly and law-abiding community.

Far from quarreling with the Solicitor General for showing that Frank is a depraved character, I for one shall thank him if he makes his charge unmistakably plain. Maybe he can make it plain, and maybe he can not. He hasn't had his opportunity yet, and I am willing to be patient as he goes forward.

The defense is seeking to establish Frank's good character by the testimony of many admittedly good citizens. To the best of their knowledge and belief these good people are speaking the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

Hard to Back Up "the Daltons."

People generally will be inclined to accept their statements as conclusive, unless the evidence combating the same is overwhelming.

It isn't going to do, I think, for the State to bring more Daltons into the case for the purpose of corroborating Conley. The trouble about the Daltons as corroborators is that one never can find anybody to corroborate the Daltons—as sadly in need of corroborating, apparently, as even the Conleys.

Frank, by putting his character in evidence, has gained some ground in public estimation, I believe. At least, this action seems to show that he is willing to risk his all on the contention that the State can find nothing vile in him, save in so far as the word of Conley can establish such an allegation.

Conley is not to be corroborated by innuendo, by suggestion, or by roundabout methods.

He must be corroborated by people of some degree of decency and standing themselves, or not very many people will take unquestioned the sinister charge of the negro.

One Good Witness a Peril.

If the State comes forward, after Frank has made his showing as to good character, with a number of witnesses that the defense is able to impeach beyond question, as fast as they are introduced, I do not believe Frank will suffer irreparable injury from the Conley charge, in the long run.

On the contrary, if the State comes forward with even so few as one reputable and believable witness as to Frank's evil character, there will remain in the minds of the jury, I suspect, an impression most dangerously unfavorable to the defendant.

One honorable and upright witness against Frank in the matter of his character can do him far greater harm than a hundred impeachable witnesses.

The State, having been confronted with the issue of Frank's character—challenged in the gate, so to speak—must make brave, categorial, and complete answer, or the State's case necessarily will be weakened markedly and, perhaps, fatally.

I believe the public, however prone to rush to conclusions primarily, and to make up its mind upon surface indications all too readily at times, nevertheless is fair and just in the end.

I think it likely there are few extremists either way—for or against Frank—who really wish to see him convicted or acquitted, regardless.

I think it is altogether likely, indeed, that hundreds of people, even inclined to side against Frank now, will gather a measure of satisfaction eventually, if he comes through the fire unscorched.

Jumping at Conclusions.

So the reader will observe that the things I said in the beginning of this article, like Bill Nye's definition of classical music, are not so bad as they sound. They referred merely to the forming of opinion upon incompleted and disconnected evidence, brought to light one way or another in the very beginning of shocking stories.

Evil is, and always has been, in a way more entertaining to man than goodness—otherwise, Mother Eve never would have bitten the apple, and so on.

The defense has thrown a mighty challenge to the State in tendering Leo Frank's character as an issue—particularly in that the defense alone could do that.

Unless the State meets that issue fairly and squarely, candidly and without quibble or faltering, Frank must profit immensely by the move.

If, on the other hand, the State does meet the issue successfully and completely, Frank's case is undone, and Frank is lost.

ATLANTAN DEAD IN WEST POINT ROUTE CRASH

Hugh W. Pennington Is Killed When Freight Train Is Derailed at Hogansville, Ga.

Hugh W. Pennington, No. 165 South Pryor street, was killed when a through freight on the Atlanta and West Point Railroad between Atlanta and Montgomery was ditched at Hogansville, Ga., early Friday morning.

According to officials of the road, the wreck was caused by a spreading of the rails. Eleven cars of merchandise and three cars of baggage were derailed, the engine remaining on the track. None of the train crew was injured.

As a result of the wreck passenger trains on the Atlanta and West Point are being detoured over the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic by way of Union City and LaGrange, Ga.

SLATON DELUGED WITH BILLS AS SESSION ENDS

Tax Reform Act Only Important Measure Signed—Assembly Musically Adjourns.

With the Legislature adjourned after 50 days of hard work, in which some of the best laws in the history of the State were enacted, the work of transmitting the measures to Governor Slaton for his signature will begin to-day, and the Executive Office will be swamped with the bills. More than 100 have already been engrossed and sent to the Governor, but there still remain between 200 and 300 local and general bills.

Of the 100 or more that are already in the Governor's office, but one of general importance has been signed. That is the tax reform bill, which was signed by the Governor and became a law at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The pen with which Governor Slaton signed the measure that is expected to revolutionize the taxation system of the State was given to Representative Lipscomb, of Clarke, who introduced the original tax equalization bill, and who has been one of the reform leaders throughout the session.

Though the Governor has signed several local bills which Representatives and Senators wished to have become operative immediately, it is hardly probable that many of the general bills will receive his signature until next week, when they will all be in his office.

Adjourns at 10:12 o'Clock.

The Legislature adjourned shortly after 10 o'clock last night. Speaker Burwell brought his gavel down for the last time this year at 10:12 o'clock, and President Anderson, of the Senate, adjourned that body three minutes later. Two minutes after the gavel rang out the House was in the throes of song. Representative Blackburn climbed upon a seat and led the Representatives in singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Practically the only work the House had to do at the night session, which convened at 8 o'clock, was to wait for the Senate to send over bills that had already passed the House and which the upper branch desired to amend. The only changes of importance made in the measures were the following, all of which were concurred in by the House: Appropriating $7,500 to the Chemical Bureau of the Department of Agriculture, $15,000 to the Department of Entomology to fight the boll weevil, and a bill increasing the salary of the State Oil Inspector to $1,800. A bill appropriating $5,000 to the Department of Agriculture was killed, because the wording of the bill was vague.

During the wait on the Senate the House took a recess and the members proceeded to kill the time by putting on stunts that eclipsed the usual jollification with which sessions of the Legislature are brought to a close. Every member of the House was determined to have as much fun as he could, and witty speeches, mock attempts to rush through wild appropriations and gay singing was the order of the hour.

James Keeps Songs Going.

Representatives James of Gilmer, official "song-hister," kept the songs going, and was surrounded by a group of vocalists and near-vocalists all evening, singing all the old favorites and a few that were not so old. Henderson of Jones made speeches in every corner of the hall, and got along all right until he began one about this being the hour of the wild-eyed reformer. Olive of Richmond then moved that he be given a bale of hay, which was carried, amid much rejoicing, and Henderson was removed from the desk onto which he had climbed.

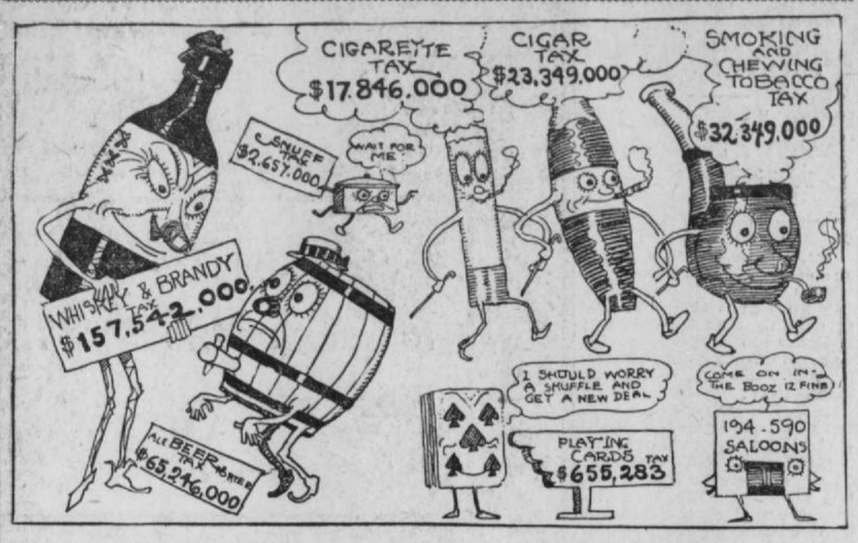

Representative Picquet of Richmond, the smallest man in the House, was called to the chair by the crowd, and interrupted a turkey trot which Greene of Houston and Smith of Fulton were doing down the middle aisle by recognizing Ed Wohlwender, of filibuster fame. Wohlwender brought down the House by jokingly moving that all prohibitionists be excluded from the hall.

Burwell Thanks Members.

Ennis of Baldwin jumped to his feet and gave it as his solemn opinion that the members were children. He therefore moved that $25,000 be appropriated to build a sanitarium to take care of them. Picquet declared the motion carried without putting the question. The fun continued for more than two hours, until the singers became hoarse and the speech-makers had used up their supply of words.

When the House convened at 9:30 o'clock, Speaker Burwell delivered a short address, in which he thanked the House for the honor it had conferred upon him, and expressed his appreciation of the work of each member. He declared that the people of Georgia should be proud of the membership of the House, and said this session had been a productive of more remedial legislation than any he had seen in his ten years' legislative experience.

ROAN LEADS ALL IN JUDICIAL RACE

Even in Atlanta Sentiment Turns Toward Jurist of the Stone Mountain Circuit.

Notwithstanding the fact that several members of the Atlanta bar have committed themselves to "an Atlanta lawyer," unnamed, for the newly created Atlanta Superior Court judgeship, and that this movement is considered generally to be directed against Judge L. S. Roan as the probable appointee, the impression prevails that Governor Slaton unquestionably will name Judge Roan for the place.

Judge Roan, although nominally the judge of the Stone Mountain Circuit, has presided for several years as judge of the criminal division of the Atlanta Circuit, and has given very great satisfaction. Inasmuch as the new judgeship is to be a criminal judgeship, many members of the Atlanta bar think Judge Roan is the logical man for the honor, and they are backing him accordingly.

During his service as judge of the criminal division in Atlanta, he has tried many noted criminal cases—the Grace and the Appelbaum cases being two of the most noted—and his reputation for fairness and justice is well established.

Already a large number of Atlanta attorneys have indorsed Judge Roan to Governor Slaton, and it is thought more than likely that his appointment will be announced within a few days.

Doctor Gives Hope To Childless Women

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 15. — Hope for childless women was held out in a remarkable statement by Dr. Veronoff, of Nice, before the International Medical Congress. He said that in his experiments of transplanting vital organs of one animal to another he had enable a barren ewe to give birth to a lamb.

"I hold," he asserted, "that my experiments can be applied to human beings—indeed, it's easier to graft certain parts with human beings than with animals. The only thing necessary is affinity of the blood of the two persons of the same race—or better still, of one family.

Cleanest Faced Boy Falls From Grace

GARY, IND., Aug 16.—"Andy" Hatrack, the 13-year-old Italian boy who won the red necktie and world-wide fame in the clean-face contest in the Gary schools, has fallen from grace. Neither "Andy's" former shining face nor his bright necktie would be recognized since school let out for the summer vacation and Miss Laura Knaggs, his teacher, left Gary.

He has played all summer with other Italian boys, and his face and necktie resemble theirs.

John Drew Studied This Part 18 Years

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—John Drew, knowing his lines perfectly, appeared at the first rehearsal of "As You Like It" that Charles Frohman is to present shortly. Mr. Frohman asked Drew how long he had been studying the part.

"Eighteen years," he replied.

"What do you mean?" asked the manager

"It was eighteen years ago that you first promised me the part of Benedict, and I began studying it then."

This Big Sum Went for Liquor, Tobacco and Cards, Says Government Report.

Uncle Sam collected $344,424,453 from vice during the year which ended June 30, according to figures just made public.

If you play a friendly game of cards, if you drink, if you smoke, if you chew or if you use snuff, you contributed to this enormous sum. This amount which wa scollected in internal revenue taxes, is the greatest in the history of the country.

The report submitted to Secretary McAdoor by William H. Osborne, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, shows that the heaviest tax was paid on whisky and brandy. The amount collected on the 143,200,000 gallons consumed during the fiscal year was $157,542,000. For the 65,246,000 barrels of beer, porter and ales, a tax of $65,246,000 was paid.

The 14,276,771,000 cigarettes which were smoked brought in $17,846,000 in taxes and $23,097,000 was collected on 7,699,038,000 cigars. The tax on the chewing and smoking of 404,363,000 pounds of tobacco was $32,349,000. Snuff users paid $2,657,000 on 33,208,000 pounds. During the year, 32,764,155 packs of cards were sold, an increase of 1,952,475. The tax was $655,283.

The report showed that the number of saloons decreased 21,554 to 194,590, despite the increased consumption of intoxicants.

10,000 Women Join Strike in Barcelona

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BARCELONA, SPAIN, Aug. 15.—The strike situation here is becoming revolutionary in character. Clashes between idle mobs and soldiers maintaining martial law are continuous. More than 300,000 men and women were idle to-day. Of this number it is estimated between 8,000 and 10,000 are women.

General Weyler, Military Governor of Catalonia, who is directing the soldiers, has prohibited mass meetings. But in spite of this strikers attempted to hold a meeting to protest against the despotic methods of Weyler.

'Cue for Light Men Cooked by Electricity

MACON, Aug. 15.—Barbecue cooked by electricity was served to-day to the 250 delegates from five Southern States attending the first annual convention of the Southeastern section of the National Electric Light Association. This is said to be the first time meats have been barbecued other than over a slow wood fire.

The electric light men will elect officers and choose the next place of meeting Saturday. Mr. Arkwright, of Atlanta, is in line for the presidency to succeed E. C. Deal, of Augusta. Birmingham, Atlanta and Savannah are seeking the next convention.

Cost of Living Up in Britain 14 Per Cent

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—Striking figures showing the increased cost of living are contained in a voluminous report issued by the British Board of Trade, according to which present prices are the highest in 25 years.

Retail prices of food have risen 14 per cent since 1900, while wages have increased only 3 per cent.

SLEW FRIEND TO GET AUTOMOBILE

Youth Confesses Mania to Own Car Led Him to Murder His Chum.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., Aug. 15.—After his first night's sleep since last Friday Gust Penman, son of a wealthy farmer, to-day told the Champaign County jail officials that he was ready to make a sworn confession of the murder of his chum, Harold A. Shaw. Penman was brought here last night from Danville, where he was caught by Amos Milholland, 80, a veteran of the Civil War and the Indian campaign in the West, who is a mail carrier and justice of the peace at Ridge Farm, near Danville.

After a weak denial of his identity the young man, a nervous wreck, flayed by conscience, starved to the point of collapse and in high fever from exposure and fatigue, broke down and made a most extraordinary confession of his crime.

He killed his friend in a drunken delirium to get Shaw's automobile, he said.

Penman told how after he eluded the vigilantes who swarmed the countryside and had virtually made good his escape from the environs of the killing, his conscience would not let him carry out his plans to evade justice in a flight to South America.

SENATE CLOSES IN FIERY BURST OF ORATORY

Kea Reiterates Charges Against Anderson, but President Gets Vote of Thanks.

Weary from their efforts in the final all-day siege, but happy over the fact that the Senate calendar had been cleared of its most important measure, the appropriation bill, Georgia Senators at 10:15 o'clock Thursday night welcomed the fiat rap of the President's gavel which rang down the curtain on the 1913 session. The Speaker of the House preceded President Anderson just three minutes in the call for adjournment sine die.

The end in the Senate, where the appropriations bill with its $280,000 excess of disbursement over revenue, was pending, came after a day of hard work and a dash of excitement. During the morning every attempt was made to clean up the calendar which had become clogged at the last moment. The forenoon session was extended to 1:30 to get the "mother's custody" bill through, following the passage of the inheritance tax bill.

Excitement Begins.

Then came the first excitement. Senator Fred Kea, of the Sixteenth District, arose to a point of personal privilege to substantiate his charges against President Anderson, published exclusively in The Georgian. Never during the session has the Senate been the scene of such intense interest.

Senator McNeill, of the Twenty-second district, started the ball rolling when he got possession of the floor and bitterly denounced Senator Kea for his charges against the presiding officer of the Senate. He moved that the Senate extend a rising vote of thanks to President Anderson for his fair and excellent services. It was at this juncture that Senator Kea rose to his point of personal privilege.

Reiterates His Charges.

He charged President Anderson had deliberately blocked the passage of bills. He charged further that the Senate Rules Committee was the "whole cheese in the Senate, as sure as there was a God in high Heaven."

At the conclusion of the fiery speech the Senate extended to President Anderson a rising vote of thanks, Senator Kea alone voting in the negative.

As predicted in The Georgian on Thursday, the Senate receded from its action in cutting the House appropriation, thereby restoring the $280,000 excess of disbursements over revenues. This was in accordance with the Governor's wishes. The Senate also passed the amended bill allowing freight trains to run on Sunday and confirmed the nomination of John Hart as State Tax Collector.

Wilson Is not Guarded Safely at White House

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Major Richard Sylvester, Superintendent of Police, has learned that the president is not safely guarded at the White House.

The major made an unexpected visit and succeeded in getting into the White House and some distance down the main corridor before his presence was detected. Previously he had rambled through the White House grounds without sighting one of his men.

FORMER COUNTY CLERK DEAD.

VIDALIA.—J. D. Collins is dead at his home in Lyons, Toombs County. He was a native of Tattnall County and served several terms as Clerk of the Superior Court. He was about 65 years of age. Mr. Collins was the father of Judge E. C. Collins, of Reidsville, and leaves several other children.

ALABAMA PLANS TO GREET AUTO PATHFINDER

President of Good Roads Association Will Meet Trail Blazer Ferguson at State Line.

Another indication of the widespread interest in the campaign for an All-Southern transcontinental highway, which will be inaugurated by Hearst's Sunday American next Monday, was received in Atlanta Friday in the form of a communication from John Craft, president of the Alabama Good Roads Association, who will join Pathfinder Ferguson at the Alabama-Georgia line.

President Craft, who is known all over the country as a good roads booster, accompanied by State Highway Engineer Keller, will accompany Mr. Ferguson throughout Alabama.

Details Virtually Arranged.

Mr. Ferguson now has arranged virtually every detail of the trip. His big touring car has been repaired and made shipshape for the long journey, and instruments which will be used along the route have also been received and installed.

Plans for the parade, the official send-off next Monday, also are complete, and everyone is on the qui vive in anticipation.

In the line of march will be the Fire Chief, the Chief of Police, city officials, including Mayor Woodward, and other prominent citizens. If the weather man hands out a good brand of ozone next Monday, the people of Atlanta will be treated to one of the most unique parades in the history of the city.

Birmingham Plans Send-Off.

Mr. Ferguson, accompanied by his wife and two children and a special American man, will go direct to Anniston, Ala., and thence to Birmingham, the end of the first lap of the long journey. At Birmingham the party will be the recipients of a big send-off, led by The Birmingham News, one of the chain of newspapers promoting the monster project.

Leaving Birmingham, the party will proceed to Montgomery, thence to Mobile, New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, El Paso, San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco. Mr. Ferguson hopes to reach the Pacific Coast before October 1.

Gainesville Assists In Hookworm Fight

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 15.—Through the efforts of the health and sanitary committee of the Gainesville Chamber of Commerce the County Commissioners have set aside $100 for the expenses of the physician under the State Board of Health to visit the county in the fight being waged against the hookworm.

This is the Rockefeller Hookworm Association work.

W. S. Elkin Goes After World Rexall Meet For Atlanta in 1914

With the avowed intention of bringing the next annual Rexall convention to Atlanta, W. S. Elkin, Jr., president of the International Rexall Clubs, will leave for Boston at 11 o'clock Saturday morning. Mr. Elkin will be in charge of a special train of Rexall members who are going to Boston from the South.

The convention will open August 18 and will last four days. Fully 3,000 members are expected to attend.

The International Rexall Clubs is an organization comprising more than 7,000 druggists all over the world. Mr. Elkin's election to the presidency last year was by unanimous vote. He expresses himself well satisfied that Atlanta has an excellent chance of winning the next convention.

Europe Sees Kaiser In Peacemaker Role

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 15.—In his new role as "peace lord of Europe" Emperor William of Germany has launched a diplomatic campaign to prevent another war in the Balkans. Telegrams from Berlin and Constantinople indicated to-day that the German Emperor and his Foreign Office have drafted proposals which soon will be sent to Russia, Austria, England, France and Italy.

While Germany has been looked upon as the friend of Turkey, on account of the commercial relations of the two countries, it is reported now that William favors the surrender of Adrianople to Czar Ferdinand.

WEDNESDAYS WILL BE 'BOOSTER' DAYS

Retail Grocers Plan to Make Specialty of Atlanta-Made Commodities Each Week.

Wednesday will be "Real Atlanta Day" if the plans of the Retail Grocers' Association are carried out. The plan is to have every retail merchant in the city push Atlanta-made articles every Wednesday, the campaign to begin in September. Grocers have closed their shops Wednesday afternoons during June, July and August, but they propose to use that day for pushing Atlanta-made goods during autumn and winter.

The movement is being worked up by the Chamber of Commerce in connection with the permanent exhibit of Atlanta manufacturers.

Space for the exposition is being taken rapidly. The committee in charge meets every day at 1 o'clock at Hotel Ansley.

Father and Son in Fatal Duel for Girl

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 15.—A fatal duel between a father and son named Blanchard, living near Aubusson, began in rivalry for the heart of a pretty farmhand. The son, Jean Lelong, was jealous of his father, who had won the girl's affection, so the two men agreed to fight.

Six revolver shots were exchanged without result. They resumed the fight with kitchen knives, while the girl watched the duel without interfering.

The father received terrible wounds, dying soon afterward.

France Trains Eagles To Fight Aeroplanes

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, Aug. 15.—The French War Office will use eagles to harass possible enemies in aeroplanes, according to Pastor Schuster, well-known ornithologist, who declares birds are being trained to attack models of aeroplanes, destroying them with their beaks and claws.

DEFENSE HITS AT STATE'S THEORY THAT CRIME WAS PREMEDITATED BY FRANK

first floor." Jim dropped his broom. Later in the day my daughter said to me: "They've got old Jim."

Arnold took the witness.

Q. Mrs. Carson, we're going to ask every woman who worked on the fourth floor whether or not she has ever been down into Mr. Frank's office to drink beer or anything like that. I want to ask you that.—A. No.

The witness was excused and Miss Mary Burke, an employee of the National Pencil Company, was called.

Q. Are you one of the forewomen? A. Yes, head of the metal department.

The witness then testified to the defendant's good character.

Q. Where did you get your pay, and when?—A. Friday at the pay window.

Q. Dir you have any conversation with Conley Monday?—A. Yes.

Q. What was it?—A. I accused him of the murder and he walked on off.

The witness said Conley's general character was bad and she would not believe him under oath.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Woman Says Conley Acted as if Guilty.

Q. Why did you suspect Conley? A. He looked and acted guilty.

Q. When did you report it?—A. I don't know.

Q. To Whom?—A. Mr. Rosser.

Q. Was it before or after he was arrested?—A. After, I think.

Q. Didn't you know Monday that Gantt and Newt Lee were arrested? A. Yes.

Q. On Tuesday didn't you know Frank was arrested?—A. Yes.

Q. You didn't mention it to those detectives that Frank had brought there, did you?—A. No.

Q. Why?—A. I thought it best not to.

Q. Did anybody hear you accuse him?—A. Yes. Mrs. Denham and Mrs. Johns.

Q. Was this before or after you saw the blood on the second floor?—A. Before.

Q. How did the blood look?—A. It was all smeared over.

Q. Did you report it before or after the inquest?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you ever see a spot there that looked like that spot?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. Right there at the girls' dressing room.

Q. Did you ever tell anybody about that spot?—A. No.

Q. In the five years you were there, did you ever hear of his immorality with girls?—A. He was a perfect gentleman so far as I know.

Q. You never heard of his slapping the girls as they went by?—A. No.

Q. You never heard of him going into the girls' dressing room?—A. No.

Dorsey's Questions Are Objected To.

Q. You never heard of him getting Mary Phagan there in that corner about two weeks before the murder and trying to hold her when she was trying to get back to her work?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Frank around there during the day?—A. I never saw him back in the working room.

Rosser interrupted: "Some of the questions that Mr. Dorsey has asked I object to," he said. "I just didn't want to reepat the objection since you have ruled that it is not necessary."

Judge Roan: "No."

The witness was excused and Mrs. Dora Small, another employee of the pencil factory, who works on the fourth flood, was called to the stand. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Do you know this negro, Jim Conley?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you see him after the murder?—A. I saw him Tuesday.

Q. Did you see him reading the newspapers?—A. Yes. He kept worrying me for money to buy extras When I bought them he would come around to borrow them before I had finished reading them.

Q. Did he say anything about Mr. Frank being innocent?—A. He said Mr. Frank was no more guilty than he was, or I was.

Answering questions of Frank's character, the witness said: "I never met a finer gentleman in my life than Mr. Frank."

Q. Do you know Jim Conley?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him on oath? A. I wouldn't believe any negro I ever saw on oath.

The crowd laughed, as did the witness, and even Frank and his wife and mother smiled.

Dorsey (looking at Arnold): "I don't suppose you will kick on the laughter this time."

Got 50c Raise In Five Years.

Q. What salary do you get?—A. $6.50.

Q. How long have you been getting that?—A. About four months.

Q. When did you get your raise? A. About four months ago. I have been working there five years and I got a fifty cent raise.

Q. How long after Frank was arrested did you get your raise?—A. Oh, my, I haven't got a raise since he was arrested."

Q. What did you do yesterday afternoon?—A. I worked until 5:30 o'clock.

Q. Where wer you last night?—A. I was at home.

Q. When was the last conversation you had with the attorneys about this testimony?—A. I don't remember.

Q. How many conferences did you have?—A. One.

Q. Were you at the factory when they called you all together and asked for affidavits?—A. Yes.

Q. Who else was there besides the people who worked in the factory?—A. I don't know.

Q. Did you see the blood?—A. I saw where it had been chipped up.

Q. What made you go look at it?—A. Mrs. Carson and several of us went down to look at it through curiosity.

Q. Are you sure Mrs. Carson was there?—A. Yes.

Another Woman Gives Frank Good Record.

The witness was excused and Miss Julia Fuss, an employee on the fourth floor of the pencil factory, was the next witness. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Have you ever been down to Mr. Frank's office after hours when anything wrong was done or for any immoral purpose?—A. Never.

The witness then testified to Frank's general good character.

Q. Do you know Jim Conley?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you talk to him after the murder?—A. Yes, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Q. What was said?—A. I had a paper by me Tuesday morning. He asked me to let him read it. When he read it he crinved.

Q. What else?—A. The next day he asked me for a paper. I didn't have one and asked him what he thought about it. He said he thought Mr. Frank was as innocent as an angel in heaven.

The witness also stated that she would not believe Conley on oath.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Did you go down to the second floor Tuesday?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see the blood?—A. I saw something that looked like blood.

Q. Do you think it was blood?—A. No. I think it was paint.

Q. How soon after this were you asked about Frank's character?—A. About a week.

Q. They just asked you if you knew anything bad about him?—A. Yes.

Q. What did you say?—A. I said I understood it to be generally good.

Q. You said "generally?"—A. I said always.

Q. You caught yourself mighty quick.

Arnold: "Your honor, I object. He has insulted every lady we have put on the stand."

Dorsey: "I want your honor to rule."

Court Upholds Rosser's Obection.

Judge Roan: "You can question the witness."

Q. You never heard of any immoral practices?—A. No.

Q. Now about those papers—Conley always stuck up for Frank, didn't he? He was loyal to him?—A. Yes.

Rosser:—"I object to that, your honor. It is nothing but a dirty suggestion. The evidence can speak for itself."

Judge Roan: "You are right, Mr. Rosser."

Q. Now, what did Conley say when he read those papers?—A. That Frank was as innocent as an angel in heaven.

Q. Were you up there when Frank came up to the fourth floor Tuesday?—A. Yes.

Q. What did he come for?—A. Just to see if everything was all right.

Q. Was Conley there then?—A. No.

Q. You are sure of that?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he come back a second time?—A. Yes.

Q. How long after?—A. About fifteen minutes.

Q. Was Conley there then?—A. No.

Q. You are sure of that?—A. Yes.

Q. Then if Conley saw Frank on the fourth floor that day he made another trip?—A. Yes.

The witness was excused and Fred Helbron, No. 371 Washington street, was called to the stand. He testified that Frank's character was unusually good, and that he had always held him in the highest esteem.

Defendant's Mother Is Called to Stand.

Helbron was excused and Mrs. Rea Frank, mother of the defendant, was put on the stand. Attorney Rosser questioned her.

Q. Mrs. Frank, where do you live? A. In Brooklyn.

Q. How long have you lived there? —A. Twenty-six years.

Q. Where did you live before that? —A. In New York.

Q. Have you lived anywhere else? —A. Yes, in Texas.

Q. What years?—A. 1882 to 1884.

Q. Where was Leo born?—A. In Texas.

Q. Who is Mr. M. Frank?—A. He is a brother of my husband.

Q. Did you see him in New York? —A. Yes. I saw him on Sunday, April 27, and on Monday, April 28, just before he sailed for Europe.

Rosser: "Your Honor, I want to read a letter."

Dorsey: "I object."

The letter developed to have been one written by Leo Frank to his uncle. Mr. Rosser said he wanted to read it to identify it, as it had been read in the presence of Mrs. Rae Frank.

Judge Roan Rules Letter Is Admissable.

Mr. Arnold argued that it was admissable, as it would help to acount for Frank's acts of Saturday of the murder.

Dorsey: "The letter speaks for itself. Let the witness read it. If its contents are important, you can rule on it later."

Judge Roan: "I rule that it is admissable."

Mrs. Frank identified the handwriting.

"It is the handwriting of my son," she said.

Rosser: "Read it. I will comply with the first objection."

Q. Did you ever hear the contents of that letter?—A. I did.

Q. Tell me the circumstances.

A. On Monday, April 28, I was invited to lunch at the Hotel McAlpin. My sister read it to her husband. He could not see very well. There is one word that needs explanation. It is "Yontif," which is a Hebrew word meaning holiday. (The letter started using the word in explanation of Memorial Day.)

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. You saw this Monday, April 28? —A. Yes.

Q. You also saw a telegram that Monday?—A. Yes.

Q. Were there two?—A. I don't remember but one. I will bring it tomorrow.

Q. What time was it Monday?—A. Sometime between 10 and 10:30 o'clock.

The witness was excused and Rosser put the letter in as evidence.

Court was then adjourned until 9 o'clock Saturday morning.

Letter Frank Wrote to Uncle.

Here is the letter:

Atlanta, Ga., April 26, 1913.

Dear Uncle:

I trust that this finds you and dear tante (aunt) well after arriving safely in New York. I hope that you found all the dear ones well in Brooklyn, and I await a letter from you telling me how you find things there. Lucile and I are well.

It is too short a time since you left for anything startling to have

Official's Son, Indicted As Robber, Kills Negro

GRIFFIN, Aug. 15.—Tom Hammond, son of County Commissioner C. M. Hammond, accidentally killed one negro and wounded another Thursday afternoon. The young man was indicted Wednesday on charges of highway robbery and gambling.

The negro killed was sitting in a buggy. Hammond claims the shooting was accidental, his shotgun exploding when he placed it in the buggy. Witnesses corroborated this, and the Coroner released him.

The second negro was hit on the head by a bullet from Hammond's revolver. The shot glanced off. Hammond says this negro cursed him.

Fat Women vs. Lean In Government Suit

DENVER, COL., Aug. 15.—Fat women and lean women will be arrayed against each other in a battle royal when the case of the Government against Marjorie Hamilton and her husband, Walter C. Cunningham, is called.

The defendants are charged with wrongful use of the mails in the sale of an "obesity cure."

"For every fat woman who goes on that stand and testifies that she couldn't lose her flesh there'll be two slender ones who'll tell of the benefits of our treatment," said Cunningham.

14 Feud Trials Go Over to September

LEXINGTON, Aug. 15.—When the trail of "Red Tom" Davidson ends today at Winchester, Ky., the case against fourteen others charged with the assassination of Ed Callahan, feud Sheriff of Breathitt County, will go over until the September term of court.

Three have been given life terms for Callahan's murder. Andrew Johnson, accused of firing two shots at Callahan, is only 18 years old and the youngest murderer ever convicted in a Kentucky feud trial.

3 Brothers Operated On for Appendicitis

ST. JOSEPH, MO., Aug. 15.—Three brothers, Frank, Henry and M. A. Matheny, of Blockton, Iowa, were operated on at a hospital here to-day for appendicitis. The operations, one after the other, were performed by the same physician, and all the patients are doing well.

Another brother died of appendicitis several months ago without an operation.

Rich Youth Weds In Tennis Romance

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—William Weightman III, a member of the widely-known Philadelphia family, and grandson of the "Quinine King of America," married Miss Mary Healy Powers, of Shelby, Iowa. They are now on a trip around the world.

It was across a tennis net that Weightman carried on his courtship.

1 Killed, 4 Hurt, in Copper Strike Riot

CALUMET, MICH., Aug. 15.—Martial law virtually was in force in the Calumet mining region to-day following the fight between deputies and idle miners at Painesdale, in which one man was killed and four others hurt, two of them probably fatally.

Reinforcements of deputies were sent to the mouth of every mine shaft to-day and extra precautions were taken to prevent anyone passing the military lines without credentials.

developed down here. The opera has Atlanta in its grip, but that ends to-day. I've heard a rumor that opera will not be given again in a hurry here. To-day was Yontif (holiday) here and the thin gray line of veterans, smaller each year, braved the rather chilly weather to do honor to their fallen comrades.

Inclosed you will find last week's report. The shipments still keep up well, though the result is not what one would wish. There is nothing new in the factory, etc., to report. Inclosed please find the price list you desired.

The next letter from me you should get on board ship. After that I will write to the address you gave me in Frankfurt.

With much love to you both, in which Lucile joins me, I am,

Your affectionate nephew,

CONGRESS OBEYS WILSON; GETS BACK ON JOB

President's Demand for Currency Act Means Republicans Will Delay Vote on Tariff.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—Senators came to the Capitol to-day prepared to remain on the job until November, following the indorsement by the Democratic caucus last night of President Wilson's demand for currency legislation at this session of Congress.

Republican Senators have publicly refused to agree to a date on which to vote on the tariff bill. The sole condition on which they have agreed heretofore, in cloakroom talk, to vote on the tariff bill before September 1 has been that the specter of currency legislation be driven away.

But the Senate majority has knuckled down to President Wilson on this question, and the Republicans will be able to dictate the speed with which legislation will be handled.

Progressive Republicans will have an inning, urging the adoption of the inheritance tax and tariff commission amendments to the tariff bill. The discussion of these will require a week or more. Extended discussion of the income tax section is promised also.

The informal agreement to go ahead with currency legislation means, it is predicted, that the tariff bill will not be disposed of before October 1. Currency legislation will require, according to Senate prophets, at least a month after.

Tariff Bill Attacked By Senator Dillingham.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—A defailed defense of the protective policy was made in the Senate to-day by Senator Dillingham, of Vermont. He showed that under this protective system since 1860 the production of American mills has increased from two billion dollars a year to twenty billion dollars in 1910. He said the increase in the value of the farm products since 1870 shows a jump from $1,958,000,000 to $8,417,000,000, an increase of 330 per cent.

"The most serious disaster which has ever come to American industries came during the last administration of President Cleveland, when the Wilson-Gorman tariff act became a law," said Senator Dillingham, "immediately following the return of the Republican party to power and under the provisions of the Dingley law, the country entered on a period of prosperity unequaled in the history of this or any other nation."

Senator Dillingham declared the pending tariff bill discriminated against the New England division of States in favor of the Southern States, particularly with relation to their textile industries.

Works Not to Return For Prolonged Session.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—The announcement in Los Angeles by Senator Works, of California, that he had made his fight on the tariff and did not expect to return to Washington to take part in the rest of the debate, drew from Republican members an admission that Senator Works had told them of his determination to take no further part in the present tariff session.

He told several of his colleagues that in his opinion Republican votes would not be able to change the Democratic tariff bill.

WANT AD RACE IS ON AMID MUCH ENTHUSIASM

Manager Wants to See Every Contestant at Once—Complete Details Appear Sunday.

They're off to-day in the Want Ad Contest, organizations, individuals, churches, lodges, men and women, boys and girls. The contest opened formally to-day.

Contestants who have not called upon the Want Ad Man this week should see him as soon as possible, for he has something worth while for them. It is important that they see him at once.

Numerous organizations are making plans to enter the contest and win the $1,000 in gold offered as first prize or the $500 worth of furniture for second. Two grand prizes have been offered individuals, the first a five-passenger automobile, the second a trip to California and return for two persons, all expenses paid. Then there are five prizes in each of four classes—men, women, boys and girls.

The Want Ad Man has engaged the fourth floor of the new Foote & Davies Building, Edgewood avenue and North Pryor street, for contest offices. He wants to see every contestant.

Complete rules and regulations, method of awarding the prizes and all other details will be announced in The Sunday American.

Farley on Sick Bed Sees His Horse Lose

NEW YORK, Aug. 15. — After watching from a cot at the side of the Empire City Racetrack, the race in which his horse, Bill Miller came in fifth, James Farley, leader of the strike-breakers, has suffered a relapse and must remain at the track until he regains his strength.

He is suffering from tuberculosis and had expressed a desire to see the race. At the track he was attended by two physicians and two nurses.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

At the Forsyth.

The bill this week at the Forsyth is one of the most thoroughly entertaining of the season. It is just the kind of show that wins approval and just the kind of a show that makes friends for vaudeville. The bill for next week is crowded with genuine features. The headline attraction comes direct from Hammerstein's and is conceded to be one of the big sensations of vaudeville; it is the "Dance of Fortune," as presented by Bert French and Alice Eis.

New Motion Picture.

The wonderful motion picture, "Victory," in five perfect reels, will be the attraction matinee and night at the Grand next week. The matinee price of admission will be 10 cents and the night scale will be 10, 15 and 25 cents. "Victory" is a story of love and war and was taken in Cuba a few weeks ago with the aid and permission of the United States Navy.

MEN OF GEORGIA

"For the Son of Man Is Come to Seek and to Save That Which Was Lost."

Luke 19:10

The House gave $30,000 to the reformatory for girls by House Bill No. 4

The committee on Appropriations of the Senate, of which SENATOR W. W. STARK is Chairman, offered two amendments to the Bill. Each was designed to cut off $10,000 from the already slender appropriation. The Bill had originally provided $75,000.

The Senate agreed to one amendment—the other it killed—leaving the appropriation $20,000, which will enable the State to make a good beginning.

But SENATOR STARK fought even this. He sent an amendment to the desk. The clerk read it.

NONE LAUGHED. FEW SMILED.

The Senate's President ruled the amendment out of order.

The purpose of it was only to ridicule the idea of the Bill.

SENATOR STARK said further that if the measure were made the law, next year would come committees urging the State to take care of CATS AND DOGS as well as GIRLS.

Again none laughed. Few smiled.

But many thanked God for the MANHOOD OF THE MAJORITY of Georgia.

Men were thinking, not of ribald salaciousness—but of the girl—the pitiable child whose life and soul depend upon such an home—

They were recalling the thousands of dollars given to the care of hogs and cattle, and to the killing of bugs. They resented the sneer at helping children— even though the children be girls.

SENATOR TARVER demonstrated that Georgia does not believe in damning children.

Likewise did SENATOR FOSTER.

As did SENATOR HUIE.

And SENATOR ELKIN by his words revealed the unutterable emptiness of the sneering amendment.

SENATORS JONES and DUBOSE spoke for suffering humanity.

But SENATOR M'GREGOR opposed the measure. Economy—the saving of a dollar—was his cry—

Nevertheless, the call of the "Ayes" and "Nays" disclosed that thirty-two Senators of Georgia believe in protecting and saving girls. Only ten voted against the Bill. And it was passed.

Friends rushed it across the Capitol to the House.

SPEAKER BURWELL called the House to order. JOHN Y. SMITH, of Fulton, moved that the House concur in the action of the Senate.

PICQUET, of Richmond, obtained the floor.

He attacked the Bill. He tried to amend it.

WIMBERLY, of Bibb, replied to him in words that burned.

SHUPTRINE, a friend of the measure, interrupted WIMBERLY to ask:

"Do you think there is a chance of this House accepting that amendment?"

"No," he thundered. "Not if there are any men with red blood in their veins on the floor of this House."

"Then don't let's argue. Vote," said SHUPTRINE.

And SPEAKER BURWELL put the question.

The hall reverberated with a chorus of "Ayes"—the one hundred and fifteen who originally voted for the measure had gathered other men —the House was almost a unit for HOUSE BILL NO. 4.

Thank God for this!

A list of the men who have helped in this—AND TO MAKE PROBATION A PART OF THE LAW OF GEORGIA—would include two-thirds of the members of both houses.

Doing notable work were Olive, Myrick, Wright, Blackburn, Nunnally, Culpepper, Jones of Coweta, Hollberg, Davidson, Mills and Gower, as well as those named above.

But Georgia owes not only these—she owes every member of the House and Senate who voted for these measures a debt of gratitude.

God will reward.

And the saved boy and girl will call them blessed.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT.

The Social World

A delightful event of Thursday evening was the dinner dance at the Capital City Club, when about 100 guests were entertained. Dinner was served at tables placed on the porch and decorated with old-fashioned flowers.

The Joy of Coming Motherhood

A Wonderful Remedy That is a Natural Aid and Relieves the Tension.

Mother's Friend, a famous external remedy, is the only one known that is able to reach all the different parts involved. It is a penetrating application after the formula of a noted family doctor, and lubricates every muscle, nerve, tissue or tendon affected. It goes directly to the strained portions and gently but surely relieves all tendency to soreness or strain.

By its daily use there will be no pain, no distress, no nausea, no danger of laceration or other accident, and the period will be one of supreme comfort and joyful anticipation.

To all young women Mother's Friend is one of the greatest of all helpful influences, for it robs childbirth of all its agonies and dangers, dispels all the doubt and dread, all sense of fear, and thus enables the mind and body to await the greatest event in a woman's life with untrammeled gladness.

Mother's Friend is a most cherished remedy in thousands of homes, and is of such peculiar merit and value as to make it essentially one to be recommended by all women.

You will find it on sale at all drug stores at $1 a bottle, or the druggist will gladly get it for you if you insist upon it. Mother's Friend is prepared only by the Bradfield Regulator Company, 137 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., who will send you by mail, sealed, a very instructive book to expectant mothers. Write for it to-day.

WIFE SHOOTS AT HUSBAND WHO SPILT COFFEE

Seeing Tablecloth Soiled by Careless Spouse Makes Mrs. Gray "Awfully Mad."

Losing her temper when her husband spilled some coffee on the tablecloth while eating lunch about 12 o'clock Friday, Mrs. L. P. Gray, 24 years old, No. 12 Hull street, Edgewood, secured a revolver and fired three shots at him, according to charges made by the police. None of the shots took effect.

Before his wife could fire the remaining cartridges in the revolver, Gray ran into a room and locked the door. Mrs. Gray then telephoned the police and asked them to come out and arrest her husband. Call Officer O. R. Jones answered the call, and after investigating the attempted shooting, made a case against Mrs. Gray and served her with a copy of charges. She was not arrested, because she has a 6-weks-old child. Her hearing has been set for next Friday morning in police court.

According to the story the Grays told the police, Gray, who is a railroad man, came home about 11:30 and found his wife in a bad humor. While they were eating lunch Gray became nervous and spilled some coffee on the table cloth. Mrs. Gray, he told the police, hit him. Gray then grabbed his wife and pushed her into a room, shutting the door.

There was a revolver in a dresser drawer in the room in which Gray had pushed his wife, and Mrs. Gray got it. She threw the door open and ran out into the hallway, where Gray was standing. Without saying a word, according to the story told the police, she raised the weapon and fired three shots at her husband. Gray then ran into a room and locked the door. He remained there until the police came.

Grace Church Plans A Record Revival

What is expected to be the greatest revival in the history of the church will begin Sunday at the Grace Methodist Church, corner of Boulevard and Highland avenue. Dr. Charles O. Jones has arranged the revival and will be assisted by O. W. Stapleton and the Rev. J. M. Bass, of the South Georgia conference. Mr. Stapleton will conduct the choir with the assistance of J. Gordon Moore and Miss Ruth Chapman.

A feature of the revival will be the holding of cottage prayer meetings, sixteen of which have already been arranged. These cottage prayer meetings will be held daily, while there will be services at the church morning, afternoon and evening.

Judge Tells Husband To Procure Divorce

C. C. Allen, of 378 East Hunter street, and his young wife both agreed Friday that their matrimonial voyage of the last four years has been anything but smooth.

Advised by Recorder Pro Tem Preston in police court to get a divorce, Allen announced that he would. Mrs. Allen, not satisfied with the police case against her husband, swore out a warrant for him in a justice of the peace court, and when Judge Preston dismissed the cases of both, the husband immediately was taken into custody by a bailiff.

The Allens appeared in court as the result of a lively fight in their home.

Moose Order Sends Envoy to Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 15.—The Loyal Order of Moose has sent Clarence B. Roberson, a national organizer, to Birmingham to remain several months in the interest of the order. Since the accident at the initiation on the night of July 24, when two candidates received too much electricity and died, there has been considerable apprehension felt by many men being approached to join fraternal orders in Brimingham, and it is intended to have the organizer remain here for several months in the hope of allaying all fears.

Mr. Roberson announces that all side degree work has been abandoned and that future initiations will be without any chances of accident.

Auto Wreck Victims Slightly Improved

DOTHAN, Aug. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. Homer Williams and three children and Miss Hutto, of Ashford, ten miles east of Dothan, all of whom were injured in an automobile accident eight miles east of Dothan Wednesday night, are slightly improved to-day. Miss Hutto is thought to have a dislocated hip and severe bruises. The Williams baby, who received flesh, scalp and internal injuries and a broken leg, is still in a precarious condition. Injuries of two other Williams children are not serious.

Williams is Chief of Police of Ashford.

JUDGE ATTACKS 'THIRD DEGREE' IN DECISION

Chief Justice Hill Reverses Underwood Liquor Verdict in Favor of Defendant.

Sharply scoring "third degree" methods of extracting testimony from witnesses and rebuking officers of the law who illegally deprive suspected persons of their liberty, Chief Justice Hill, of the Court of Appeals of Georgia, Friday handed down a decision, concurred in, reversing the decision of Underwood against the State.

The case has attracted widespread attention throughout the State. Underwood, a groceryman, was arrested, tried and convicted for keeping intoxicating liquors in his place of business, the arrest, the court states, being made without a warrant.

Upon conviction, the defendant appealed the case, but later the decision was upheld by the City Court of Americus. It was then taken to the Court of Appeals, which reversed the decision Friday.

In his opinion Judge Hill declares that the "officers illegally deprived Underwood of his liberty, searched his premises illegally, made an assault and battery upon his person and in so doing violently pulled down the constitutional bulwarks which protected him as a citizen."

"Any compulsory discovery of self-incriminating evidence," the judge says, "is abhorrent to a proper sense of justice and is intolerable to American manhood."

What is commonly known as the methods of "third degree," he says, frequently used by zealous officials, has no place in the jurisprudence which holds that every man is innocent until proved guilty.

BEAUTIFUL HAIR MAKES A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN

LOOK in your mirror, and look without seeing those white hairs. Instead, your hair is soft and full of color and beautiful luster, and your eyes sparkle and your cheeks dimple with laughing pleasure. What a difference the hair can make! The most beautiful features would be ruined with coarse, straggly, gray hair, and great masses of soft, beautiful hair will make any face beautiful.

If you have dandruff, you try to cure it. Then if your hair is fading and losing its vitality, why not stop it? Robinnaire Hair Dye is a pure restorative tonic preparation made in our own laboratory, and we guarantee that it can not injure either scalp or hair. It is for faded or gray hair, not to bleach or change the original color, but to restore the hair to its own natural color and make it soft, lustrous and beautiful once more. Thousands are using it, women and men, with best results, and as it does not stain the scalp no one can detect it. Don't pull out the white hairs; instead use Robinnaire's Hair Dye, this splendid and marvelously successful restorative. For light, medium and dark brown and black hair. STATE BORROWS $475,000 FROM BANKS HERE

Institutions Show Confidence in Georgia's Finances by Lending Money at Loss.

A striking demonstration of the soundness of Georgia's finances is furnished in Governor Slaton's message to the Legislature on the $500,000 loan recently authorized. Here is the message:

To the General Assembly:

By resolution you have authorized me to borrow not exceeding $500,000, in accordance with the constitutional provisions upon the subject.

I have the honor to report to you that, in accordance with the authority given and the desire implied by the passage of the resolution, I have made arrangement to borrow the sum of $475,000, at 3 per cent interest.

The banks agreeing to make the loans are as follows:

Atlanta, National Bank, Atlanta	$200,000
Fourth National Bank, Atlanta	100,000
American National Bank, Atlanta	75,000
Fulton National Bank, Atlanta	50,000
Third National Bank, Atlanta	25,000
Lowry National Bank, Atlanta	25,000

Banks Must Suffer Loss.

The banks making these loans will be compelled to borrow the money in New York at a rate approximating 6 per cent, and their action in coming to the help of the State at this time, during a severe stringency, and their willingness to suffer financial loss to aid the State entitles them to the gratitude of the people of the State of Georgia.

Their action is a further tribute to your body, in that it expresses their confidence in the financial responsibility of the State.

The money so borrowed will be immediately utilized for the paymen of the public school teachers, who have not received one dollar from the State up to this time. This confidence in the business methods of the State and the patriotism of these financiers will result in enhancing the financial reputation of the State of Georgia, and will contribute to the disposition of its bonds on more advantageous terms.

It shows that the banks of the city of Atlanta, at the seat of government, have unlimited confidence in the financial responsibility of Georgia and are willing to evidence it in a practical way.

Two Not State Banks.

It is appropriate to say that two of the banks—the Lowry National Bank and the Third National Bank—are not State depositories and are therefore under no special obligation to loan the money, but have done so purely from patriotic motives and principally to aid Georgia in the solution of her financial problems.

I desire to express my thanks to Hon. W. J. Speer, the State Treasurer, for invaluable aid and co-operation in obtaining this loan.

In my judgment, the ability of the State at this time to make the best financial arrangement that has been made in the United States is an approval of your course and may be taken home to your constituents as a marked tribute to your services.

Bankers Condemn State Deposit Law

HATTIESBURG, MISS., Aug. 15.—Mississippi bankers in session here to-day condemned the State guarantee of bank deposits.

J. H. Henry, an Oklahoma banker, presented his views as to how the guarantee of deposits has worked a hardship on the banks of the States in which it is operated.

Kansans Urge Days Of Prayer for Rain

He Won His Raise

REARRESTED AS HE STEPS OUT OF PRISON

Man in Penitentiary Nine Months Wanted in Arkansas—Fights Extradition Before Slaton.

Released Wednesday from the Federal prison where he was confined the last nine months, and immediately rearrested on a warrant sworn out in Arkansas David J. Steinburg, 22, of New York, Friday afternoon prepared to fight his extradition in a hearing before Governor Slaton.

Steinburg will be represented by Napier, Wright & Wood, while Sheriff Crawford, of Arkansas, who arrived in Atlanta Friday morning, will present the claims of his State.

Steinburg, according to his own story, was arrested in New York City in 1909 on charges growing out of the presentation of drafts on the New York firm which he represented in Arkansas. The drafts were given in payment for furs the young salesman purchased for his firm, which went to pieces while he was still in Arkansas, thereby making the drafts valueless, it is claimed.

Immediately following the arrest Governor Donaghey, of Arkansas, issued requisition papers for Steinburg which were turned down by Governor Hughes, of New York on two different occasions, it is said.

It was after this that the trouble which landed Steinburg in the Federal prison in Atlanta took place. And in this connection Steinburg told a pathetic story.

He declared Friday afternoon that he was the victim of circumstances; that he was a member of a firm which went to pieces in New York; that when he returned to New York he found it was too late to take out a petition in bankruptcy and that he assumed the responsibility for the firm and took his choice between Blackwell's Island and Atlanta. Upon the advice of the District Attorney Steinburg says he came to serve his term in Atlanta.

Ever since his confinement in Atlanta the Arkansas authorities have had their eyes on him and the very minute he was released last Wednesday he was nabbed by a deputy acting under orders from Arkansas.

Police Head Stranger To Tango and Trots

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 16.—When Chief of Police George H. Bodeker, who has been on the police department of Birmingham for nearly a quarter of a century, announced to Judge A. O. Lane, Commissioner of Justice of Birmingham, that he did not know the tango and turkey trot dances and would hardly recognize them if he saw them danced, it was decided to pick one of the young detectives of the city to make investigations.

Complaint had been made to Judge Lane that the tango and trot were being indulged in at public dance halls.

Bet Costs Expert Swimmer His Life

HAMMOND, IND., Aug. 15.—A bet that he could swim across Cedar Lake and back without getting out of the water cost John Vachle, an expert swimmer, his life to-day.

Vachle had made the trip across a distance of a mile and a half, and was completing the last stage of the three-mile swim when he threw up his hands and disappeared.

SULZER REFUSES TO GIVE WAY TO GLYNN

Impeached Governor Prepares for Bitter Battle to Retain Office. Asks Early Trial.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Governor William Sulzer, impeached by the State Assembly, absolutely refused to give up the reins of government or recognize Lieutenant Governor Martin H. Glynn as acting Governor, pending the impeachment trial on September 18.

Mr. Glynn delivered his ultimatum to the Governor, and insisted on Sulzer vacating the office. His letter was as follows:

Hon. William Sulzer, Albany:

Sir—In the performance of the duty which has devolved upon me by article 4, section 6, of the Constitution, I officially demand that you deliver and surrender to me as Acting Governor, during the period of your constitutional disability to act as Governor, the use, possession and occupancy of the executive chamber and offices; and that you likewise deliver and surrender to me the executive privy seal of State of New York, and also all books, papers, records and documents in said chamber or offices or elwhere in your charge, possession or custody relating to or in any wise connected with or pertaining to the executive department.

Respectfully,
MARTIN H. GLYNN,
Acting Governor.

Governor's Reply to Glynn.

In his reply, the Governor said:

Executive Chamber, Aug. 15, 1913.
To Hon. Martin H. Glynn, Lieutenant Governor.

Sir—Yours of August 15 demanding that I deliver and surrender to you as Acting Governor the use, possession and occupancy of the executive chamber and offices, and that I likewise deliver and surrender to you the executive privy seal of the State of New York, and also documents, papers records in said chamber or offices or elsewhere in my charge, possession or custody, relating to or in any way connected with or pertaining to executive department received.

In response thereto I decline to recognize you as Acting Governor of the State, and decline to deliver to you the use, possession and occupancy of the executive chamber and offices, or in any way comply with the demands and requests in your letter.

I shall continue to exercise and discharge the legislational duties of the Governor of the State of New York; first among other reasons because I am advised that the Assembly at its present extraordinary session possessed and possesses no power or authority to prefer articles of impeachment; and secondly, because the Lieutenant Governor of the State is not authorized to act as Governor in case of the impeachment of the Governor unless such impeachment is sustained.

Proposes Hasty Trial.

For the purpose of preventing an unseemly struggle I suggest that counsel for the Lieutenant Governor and myself agree upon a method of submitting the question to the courts for decision; and for that purpose that an extraordinary session of the courts be forthwith called in order that a speedy determination may be had.

Respectfully,
WILLIAM SULZER, Governor.

Glynn's letter was handed to Mr. Sulzer in the Capitol shortly after noon by Glynn's private secretary, who had to run the gantlet of the guards before he could get to see the Governor. This development followed the formal recognition of Mr. Glynn as Acting Governor by Secretary of State Mitchell May.

Mr. Sulzer and his counsel conferred upon the Glynn letter and took steps for the next move in the bitter warfare between the pro-Sulzer and anti-Sulzer forces of the reins of State power in New York.

If Governor Sulzer is able to retain gubernatorial control next week he will probably demand a Grand Jury investigation of the impeachment proceedings in the Assembly. Political friends have told him that there are rumors that money was used to secure adoption of the resolution of impeachment.

Scores Foes for Wife's Illness.

On account of the illness of Mrs. Sulzer, who suffered a nervous collapse over the attack upon her husband, Governor Sulzer did not reach the Capitol until noon. Accompanied by a cordon of guards he went straight to his office, not entering the audience chamber. He was pale, his face was lined with worry and he was white with anger.

"I could fight on unworried if those scallywags hadn't brought my wife into this case," he cried.

Colonel T. F. Symons, advisory engineer of the new State barge canal, has been delegated to go to Washington on a political mission in behalf of the Governor. Thus the fight may be extended beyond the boundaries of this Commonwealth and become, to some extent, a national affair.

A big new lock has been placed upon the door of the executive chamber where the State privy seal is held by Governor Sulzer.

Give Legal Aid Free.

The following lawyers have consented to represent Governor Sulzer without charge: Irving G. Vann, of Syracuse; Harvey D. Hinman, of Binghamton; A. G. Fox, of New York, and Louis Marshall, of New York.

Thomas W. Lawson, of Boston, may get into the fight, as he has offered Governor Sulzer $100,000 with which to fight Tammany if Mr. Lawson is allowed to direct the campaign. Friends of the Governor urged him to accept.

Mr. Glynn has retained Attorney Edwin Countryman, Patrick C. Dugan and several other well-known lawyers. Although 75 years old, Mr. Countryman is regarded as one of the best lawyers in this city.

Mrs. Sulzer, who suffered a nervous breakdown, showed signs of improvement to-day. She had a good night's rest and was much refreshed this morning. She still is confined to her bed.

EIGHT STUDENTS OF THE SOUTHERN BUSINESS COLLEGE SECURED POSITIONS THIS WEEK

As the Fall Term Approaches, Applications for Admission Are Coming in From All Quarters of the Country.

The fall term is nearing!

Have you sent in your application for admission to Southern Shorthand and Business University?

If not, you had better write at once and secure a seat in the South's most popular business training school, for the indications point to the largest fall term enrollment in the history of this long-established institution.

"I am glad that I attended the Southern Shorthand and Business University," writes Miss Eva Barrett, one of the industrious and worthy students who recently left the school to accept a position as stenographer for the law firm of J. H. Lovett.

"No mistaking the fact that the Southern is a live and up-to-date business school," she writes, "because every member of its large and efficient faculty seems to have the interest always of the pupils at heart.

"The managers were continually calling the advanced students from the classrooms and sending them out into positions, which fact proved an incentive to me, as well as to others, to get right down to work and master the courses taught, for we knew that if we should, positions would be awaiting us."

Since Miss Barrett left the Southern, quite a number of others have secured good positions, and letters they have recently written about their success will be published shortly.

Eight of the students have been placed this week!

Among them a Mr. Meigs, who receives $60 a month from the start!

If you are going to attend a business school and want to go to the best, be sure and call upon Atlanta's prominent business men for advice.

It's a significant fact that the Southern's attendance is always double that of any other business college in this section. There's a reason for this.

The Southern's quarters have just been beautifully renovated.

Call, phone or write for catalog.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. Alexander E. Mintie, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria and have found it a reliable and pleasant remedy for children."

Dr. Agnes V. Swetland, of Omaha, Nebr., says: "Your Castoria is the best remedy in the world for children and the only one I use and recommend."

Dr. J. A. McClellan, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria for children and always got good results. In fact I use Castoria for my own children."

Dr. J. W. Allen, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I heartily endorse your Castoria. I have frequently prescribed it in my medical practice, and have always found it to do all that is claimed for it."

Dr. C. H. Glidden, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "My experience as a practitioner with your Castoria has been highly satisfactory, and I consider it an excellent remedy for the young."

Dr. H. D. Benner, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria as a purgative in the cases of children for years past with the most happy effect, and fully endorse it as a safe remedy."

Dr. J. A. Boarman, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria is a splendid remedy for children, known the world over. I use it in my practice and have no hesitancy in recommending it for the complaints of infants and children."

Dr. J. J. Mackey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I consider your Castoria an excellent preparation for children, being composed of reliable medicines and pleasant to the taste. A good remedy for all disturbances of the digestive organs."

EFFORT TO PAWN ROADS ROUSES MEXICANS

Huerta's Reported Attempt to Raise Funds Stirs Protest. U. S. Capital Affected.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 15.—Bitter protests were made here to-day by prominent Mexicans following public allegations that President Huerta is attempting to place the vast railway resources of Mexico virtually in pawn to raise funds for the Government. Agents said to represent Huerta have approached foreign financial groups for loans, the collateral of which will be blanket mortgages on Government railway lines.

That the present disagreeable relations between Mexico and the United States would be heightened by such action is apparent, as Americans have heavy financial holdings in railways and other Mexican securities which would be bound to be affected by the mortgaging of railway properties.

Gets Rid of Popular Men.

There is a feeling that if the peace mission of Special Envoy John Lind fails the present condition of affairs will be stretched out indefinitely. President Huerta has begun to prepare for the October election by taking steps to secure his own re-election. He is sending the strong, popular men out of the country.

Senor de la Barra, who has the confidence of the people, is now in New York en route for France, where he will act as the Mexican Ambassador; Colonel Felix Diaz, whose name carries magic power and who has a big following, is en route to Japan and can not possibly return here before the election if it is held on scheduled time.

Future Full of Menace.

As fast as one section of the country is pacified Huerta fills it with soldiers to control the election machinery. All the President's appointees are army men. It is believed here that so long as Huerta is in the chair the United States will not recognize this Government. Thus the end is probably far off and filled with menace.

A Mexican newspaper printed the rumor that Henry Lane Wilson, former United States Ambassador to Mexico, will probably return here and engage in business.

Wilson Will Reply to Censure by President.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—"I do not know what the next step will be. I do not expect to take any action to-day, but I shall make an answer to the President's censure at the proper time."

This was the statement made to-day by Henry Lane Wilson, Ambassador to Mexico on leave.

Reports are current that Ambassador Wilson will not submit tamely to the rebuke administered to him last night by the President; that he confidently expected to be dismissed when he issued his statement, and that he welcomed the opportunity to sever his connection with the diplomatic service, so that he could air his views regarding Mexico.

Attack Made in Senate on Dr. Hale.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—A demand that vigorous steps be taken by the Government in behalf of Sherley C. Hulse, son-in-law of Lieutenant Governor John M. Reynolds, of Pennsylvania, was made in the Senate to-day by Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania. The Senator had read dispatches published in the newspapers showing that Mr. Hulse, his wife and daughter are threatened with death in camp at Oquilla, Mexico, 100 miles south of the city of Chihuahua.

Senator Penrose then offered a resolution calling upon the President to inform the Senate whether Dr. W. Bayard Hale has been employed recently by any of the executive departments. Dr. Hale, it is believed, is unofficially representing the President in Mexico. Senator Bacon, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, refused to consent to immediate consideration of the resolution. Senator Penrose said that Dr. Hale had left Ardmore, Pa., thirteen years ago under conditions which he did not care to discuss at present. He said that Dr. Hale was representing himself as a representative of the President in Mexico, and that at the same time he was exploiting a publishing concern.

Millions Hinge on Kodak Case Verdict

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Millions of dollars may hinge upon the decision of Judge John R. Hazel here, in which he finds the Eastman Kodak Company guilty of having infringed upon eleven out of the twelve claims of the Goodwin Film and Camera Company on a process for manufacturing transparent, flexible photographic film pellicles, and declares the complainant is "entitled to an accounting."

As the kodak company is alleged to have been infringing upon this patent for years, the "accounting" for the billions of film rolls it has sold will be tremendous.

Mr. Wyatt, who has been the organist at the Crystal Palace, London; Royal Albert Hall, and musical director of All Hallows Cathedral, is one of the world's eminent organists.

He has frequently played in London to more than 12,000 people at a time. His Atlanta program will be of a nature to give full play to his brilliant ability and technique.

Antis Fight Special Suffrage Committee

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—On the ground that the woman suffragists were wasting the time of members of Congress, and that such waste was "politically immoral," anti-suffragists appealed to the Rules Committee of the House to-day against the creation of a special committee on woman suffrage.

Mrs. William Force Scott, of New York, attacked Miss Jane Addams, saying there was no good reason for the latter's suggestion that the present committees of the House were unable to deal fairly with the suffrage question.

University Club to Widen Its Influence

A non-resident board of advisers for the University Club has been suggested by Thomas W. Connally, secretary, and others, and to sound the sentiment of the members a letter has been sent out to them. Mr. Connally said Thursday he had had a stack of replies, and that most of the correspondents favored the idea.

The plan is to make the University Club more of a social and educational organization and to extend its influence over the State. To accomplish this the officials of the club feel that it is necessary to name an advisory board of non-resident members. At present the club is run by a governing board of Council in conjunction with the executive committee.

NOW YOU SEE AN' NOW YOU DON'T THRU' SKIRTS

Changing Fashions Provide Shadown Gowns Minus View and Regulated Slits.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Hamlet without Hamlet, or you can have your cake and eat it, will be the motif of madame's garb next fall. There will be slits without any opening, shadow skirts without any view. It will be a season of compromises.

These things are all evident at the annual style review of the Chicago Garment Manufacturers' Association, which formally opened to-night in Orchestra Hall. And the decrees are authoritative, for it is the assertion of the Chicago garment manufacturers that the fashions for a majority of American women are created in this city.

Skirts will be just as tight and just as thin and just as slit. It is only that they won't look that way. The sensible American woman, according to one leading designer, wants the graceful, smart effect of the narrow, slit skirt, but she wants it less sensational.

The I-Don't-See-You Gown.

For which reason ingenious designers have advised a gown with rows of ruffles or flounces running around the bottom. The skirt is slit and of the transparent texture that the dictates of fashion demand, but the thick circles of flouncing fill up the gap and make the whole thing as impregnable to vision as a Chinese wall. Smartness—and modesty. What more will any woman ask?

Beyond this, there won't be much change. The narrow skirt with straight lines will prevail. There will be much more fullness around the hips, however, and skirts will be somewhat longer. Drapings also will be popular.

Freedom is allowed in the choice of colors, and no one shade will be much more popular than any other. If there is any preference it is in various shades of green. The same freedom is noticed in materials. If there is any preference in the latter it is toward sobriety, the Bulgarians being somewhat more subdued and the combinations of cloth less hectic.

Among the novelties is what is called a tango skirt. This is built along the architectural lines of a coat skirt—that is, it buttons around instead of going on over the head. It has the advantage of providing an elastic slit, a sliding scale or frankness. The wearer can leave as many of the lower buttons unbuttoned as she chooses.

Wrote a Poem for The Judge; Is Freed

CHICAGO, Aug. 15. — James J. Ahearn, who claims to be a poet, was found in a prosaic stupor by the South Chicago police. When arraigned he defended himself before Judge Sullivan. He was asked to prove his occupation, and retired to another room with a pencil and an inspired look. This is what he did:

"I hope, Mr. Judge, the day never comes
When you, like myself, will have to write poems.
And may you and your wife
Live a happy life."

"It wouldn't be right to send you to jail," said the Judge. "You'd be writing poems for all the other prisoners. Discharged."

Here's Your Chance To Get $2,500 Dog

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—The $20,000 collection of Airedale Terrace American and English bulldogs, owned by Franz Porter, was offered for sale to-day by Frank L. Wean, referee in bankruptcy.

The Porter kennels were reputed to be the finest in the West. Several dogs in Porter's collection cost him as much as $2,500 each.

Granted Insurance After Lung Trouble

As many cases of Lung Trouble start with a cold or a cough, the best advice that can be given is to get rid of the cold or cough as quickly as possible. Otherwise more serious troubles are likely to follow. If the medicines you are now taking do not bring relief, try Eckman's Alterative, the remedy for Throat and Lung Troubles, which has stood the test of time. Investigate this case:

237 Dean St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Dear Sirs: About a year and a half ago my health rapidly failed until at the end of six months my weight had fallen to 129 pounds. I was troubled with night sweats, a severe cough and was very weak. About this time I consulted a physician, who told me my lungs were affected. Not satisfied, I went to another doctor, who, after examining me, said that I was in the first stages of consumption. At this point I started to take Eckman's Alterative. The night sweats stopped almost immediately, my cough became looser and gradually disappeared. My weight is now 142 pounds and my physician has pronounced me perfectly sound—which, together with the fact that I have been accepted by two different insurance companies for insurance, makes me sure of my entire recovery by Eckman's Alterative."

(Affidavit) W. E. GEE.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in case of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all of Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

Onions and Cabbage Offend Boston Noses

BOSTON, Aug. 15.—There may be robust ones of stout sensibilities to whom the odors arising from the cooking of onions and cabbage and such things bring sensations of pleasure. 'Tis otherwise with certain esthetic Bostonians who live or do business in the neighborhood of No. 20 Hawley street. Beans and codfish—aye; but onions and cabbage—nay.

Frank Enger, who has a restaurant at that address, was before the bar in the Municipal Criminal Court on complaint of several neighbors who asserted that the activities of his kitchen perfumed the atmosphere all around, much to their discomfort.

Here's Latest; 'Cans' His Funeral Sermon

Mr. Morrill's last act before his departure was to visit the store of a talking machine dealer where he preached his own funeral sermon into a machine to be used in case of his death.

Miller Given Boost For Macon Mayoralty

MACON, Aug. 15.—In the clash over the naming of a new City Executive Committee by a mass meeting at the Auditorium last night, the Mayoralty boom for Representative Wallace Miller received pronounced impetus.

While the present candidates, A. L. Dasher and Bridges Smith, through their friends, sought to name the new committee and Mr. Smith practically triumphed in this respect, yet the nominations were all put by former Representative Walter DeFore, who announced that he was present to protect Mr. Miller's interests. The charge was made on the floor that the administration had corraled eleven unnaturalized Assyrians and was voting them.

His Sweetheart's Hair

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

By Nell Brinkley

HERE is some lover's glorification, the song of his ensnarement, his "Beata Mea Domina," in praise of his sweetheart's hair. I do not even know who wrote it. It was sent to me.

Lovers have always longed and yearned over the skeins of silk on the heads of the women they loved. Sometimes her hair is short, gypsy-dark, tangled in curls, metallic and crisp.

Sometimes it is brown and fine and long and sleek.

Sometimes it is velvet-black and Indian-straight, shadowy as a night-cloud and dusty-fine to the touch.

Sometimes it is red, glittering hair by hair in the sun, plenteous, stiff to touch, thick and deeply waved.

Sometimes it is deep-gold, like an autumn leaf, heavy and silky and ripply.

Sometimes it is pale-gold, fine as thistle-down, like a veil of sunshine, spreading wide and generous when shaken out, but crushing to nothing in the hands.

Whatever of these sorts it is, some lover twists in its sure snare and sends up his praiseful chant.

Here I think it must have been the deep-gold sort, heavy and silky and ripply, and colored like an autumn leaf: Listen:

I

SHE braids it in two heavy braids
That reach the carpet nigh,
And winds them crosswise, nape to crown,
To cross again and then come down,
And cross again on high.
I watch with joy that never fades;
A fortunate man am I.

II.

"She twists it from a silken twist
Into a coil instead;
Each side rests against her ear;
Its weight is on her collar clear,
Heavy it seems as lead;
A rope thick as her good wrist,
She fastens it to her head.

III.

"To styles not blind,
She can not bind, as other women do,
That scented mass, that smells of wheat,
And lavender and apples sweet.
She plies the great combs through,
More lovely than all maiden kind,
A woman twenty ——?"

About Introducing People

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.
Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

THERE are many sorts of introductions, the ceremonious and the unceremonious, the premeditated and unpremeditated introductions, but under all circumstances there is one rule to be remembered, and it is that indiscriminate introductions should not be made. There should be some knowledge on the part of anyone making an introduction that it will be agreeable to the persons concerned. Discretion and good judgment must be used in deciding the question of introducing people or the propriety of not doing so.

The general rule to be remembered is that when an introduction is premeditated the wishes of both persons should be consulted. A man should not be introduced to a woman when the introduction is premeditated, unless her consent is asked. The custom is for a man to ask a friend in common to introduce him to a lady at any social gathering. It is then proper for the person making the introduction to say, unobtrusively, "May I introduce Mr. C.?" Thus a woman has the option of declining, but a request of the sort is not refused unless there is some very good reason for a refusal. The formula used in introducing is: "Miss B., allow me to introduce Mr. C." In a very informal introduction the mention of the names is sufficient, thus, "Mr. C., Miss B." It will be observed that the positive rule of propriety is that a man is introduced to a woman, never the reverse.

A hostess has much responsibility in bringing people together. It is her duty to ascertain, for instance, how a new acquaintance will be received—whether it is the wish of everyone concerned to know each other before she invites them to a luncheon or a card party or any other small and intimate affair. Her own good nature in wishing that those whom she knows well should meet each other is not a sufficient cause for bringing them together.

The general conditions of society should be known to a hostess. Even if enemies are introduced to each other, they can not let their hostess know of the mistake. An instance of the ignorance of a hostess as to conditions and the distress caused by her lack of knowledge and experience was in the case of two persons whom she had included in dinner invitations and whose engagement had been broken off. Unfortunately, she sent them in to dinner together. Bravely they made the best of it, but at the close of the evening the girl's distant bow indicated to the man that there could never be a renewal of former conditions.

At a dance or a general entertainment a hostess has the privilege of introducing young people to each other, and she should see that shy people are introduced and that all have opportunities for enjoyment.

Tart Sauce.

Two women who had not seen each other for many years met unexpectedly in the street.

"How do you do?" exclaimed one, effusively.

"Now, this is delightful," said the older. "You haven't seen me for eleven years and yet you know me at once! I can not have changed so dreadfully in all that time. It flatters me!"

"Oh, I recognized your bonnet," said the first.

I heard a young mother talking to her little son about his teeth—telling him how important it is that the teeth be kept clean.

"If you want to be a big, strong boy," she said, "and then a big, strong man, you must have good teeth. And to keep your teeth sound you must remember now, while you are a little boy, to brush them twice every day."

The young mother told me that the youngster liked the taste of Ribbon Dental Cream and that this had helped her in inducing him to form the important daily habit. Of course, she talked with him about it now and then to impress on him the great advantage to his health and comfort that comes with this daily care. "Then twice a year," she added, "I have the dentist look him over."

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Dr. Cameron's courtesy had by this time returned. He pushed forward a chair and invited his visitor to sit down.

"I shall be happy to hear," said he, and lent his full attention, while Genevieve, turning with chill dignity, withdrew into a window recess near by.

"I am Julius Molesworth. If you do not remember me as your former classmate and fellow-practitioner, you probably will as one of the leading witnesses in an inquest which has aroused considerable attention of late."

Dr. Cameron's countenance changed. For reasons that we know, he had taken a great interest in this inquest, although he had said nothing about it to his wife.

"Pardon me," he replied, "I do recollect. I read of the death of your affianced wife with the utmost sympathy, for——"

"For she died upon the same night that you were married," broke in Dr. Molesworth, completing the other's sentence.

Dr. Cameron bowed.

"It is of Miss Farley and her unaccountable death that I have first to speak," continued the intruder calmly. "If you have read the proceedings, you know what the verdict was and what general credence was given me at the inquest. You will therefore be surprised to hear that for some reason unknown to me the police authorities have seen fit to discredit the evidence given by me at that time, and that I stand before you now in the character of an accused man, with the prospect of arrest before me."

A Conundrum.

"I—am sure——" Dr. Cameron stammered, glancing with some embarrassment at the tall and immovable figure of his wife, outlined against the faint yellow of the evening sky.

"Do not think you must express surprise or sympathy," interpolated Dr. Molesworth coldly; "I am innocent. But," he continued, with less dignity but more fervor, "that has nothing to do with the fact that my prospects are ruined by this suspicion and my career at an end. Whether I am committed to trial or not, my name must suffer and my practice receive a shock from which it will be long in recovering. It is a great misfortune to me, I acknowledge, but you may make it a less serious one if you will."

"I?"

"It is a conundrum which I have propounded to you," he observed, in calm allusion to what he had before said. "As you seem to possess no key to it—" He paused and one would have said he held his breath for a moment—"I shall have to produce my own. I—" he paused. "Did your wife speak?" he suddenly asked, rising with every appearance of respect.

"I think not," returned the other somewhat haughtily.

Dr. Molesworth bowed and again sat down. "Excuse me," he cried and Dr. Cameron was sure he heard him sigh; "I would not wish to weary the lady." Then with recurrence to his businesslike tones, "I asserted that you could help me. It was not lightly said, for you are a bold man and an ambitious one. "If a complicated and dangerous case were given you that demanded unusual measures, you would take them, I am sure. If that case belonged to another man and he were sick and disabled from attending to his duties, you would listen to his diagnosis and make yourself acquainted with his theory of cure, and if it met with your approval, accept it as your own and treat that case with all the interest and attention which you would have bestowed upon it if the method of treatment had been your own."

"I think so," returned the other, simply.

"Well, such a case I have," proceeded Dr. Molesworth, with steady impressiveness. "The patient is Bridget Halloran; you have doubtless heard of her and how she has been given up by Drs. S—— and B——. But I am certain that she can be cured. That this line of treatment" (he looked toward the detective, who thereupon handed him a slip of paper) "will prove startlingly efficacious and give to the man bold and determined enough to use it an enviable notoriety."

"Let me see," exclaimed the other, his professional interest aroused in spite of himself.

The paper was handed to him, and the doctors' two heads, so dissimilar in appearance and yet so like in their expression of intellectual superiority, came together over it.

The consultation which followed will not interest the reader. It was purely professional and had enough technical terms in it to awe me from any attempt to reproduce it. Enough that as they proceeded Dr. Cameron's look of reserve and possible prejudice gave way to one of undisguised admiration, and he asked, without any tone of envy in his voice:

"How did you come by this, Molesworth? It has the appearance of a positive discovery to me."

"I got it by hard thought," was the other's reply. "I get nothing by intuition, as you do.

"So much the more credit to you," observed Dr. Cameron, folding up the paper and putting it in his pocket.

"And you will take the case?"

"On the condition that if successful the entire credit shall be yours."

A look hard to fathom flashed in the dark eye of Julius Molesworth for an instant. It seemed as if he longed to hold out his hand; but he did not do it, and an instant's silence fell upon the group.

"There seems to be no further reason for our remaining here," Dr. Molesworth at length observed. "I have finished my business, and," turning toward the detective, "am now at your service." And yet he seemed in no hurry to go.

As for Mr. Gryce, he showed no signs of having heard the doctor. His glance had fallen upon a strip of passementerie on Mrs. Cameron's silken skirts. From his puckered brows it looked as though he were studying a problem.

The detective tore his gaze from the strip of passementerie which had so engaged his attention and followed him. The stern and solemn picture which they both carried away with them was that of a woman's tall and rigid form stretched as it were on a cross against a sky, down which were slowly fluttering the first flakes of a coming snowstorm.

Curiosity or Interest?

THAT evening there was a great ball in Washington, and the woman who shone the most resplendent and received the most homage was our young bride, Genevieve Cameron. Even her husband, who had begun to expect everything from her, was amazed. Words in which she was sometimes lacking came freely from her lips, and the wit which in her case took the place of knowledge, glittered in all she said with just enough keenness to fascinate. Her white hair made her conspicuous, and her beaming eyes and dimpling mouth, amid whose smiles just the hint of smothered feeling showed itself at times, caused the gaze which fell upon her to linger till happy jealousy had laughingly whispered in her ear:

"It is fortunate this is our last ball here, or I should soon be ordering coffee and pistols for myself and some of these fierce-looking ambassadors."

Mrs. General F—— approached her in the dressing room, and after looking at her with the greatest delight for a moment, exclaimed rapturously:

"I never did see any one with such costumes as you wear. Who is your modiste? Tell me, that is a good girl."

The lady was elderly and her manner was caressing rather than impertinent, but Mrs. Cameron was much displeased, and showed it by the angry flush that crimsoned her brow and neck. Her words nevertheless were gracious, though she did not answer the other's question.

"I am really much obliged to you for your appreciation," she cried; "but I really can not give such a weighty secret away so lightly. I have gnomes and fairies to do my work, and have sworn never to reveal their whereabouts."

Back to Mother.

It was a trifling incident—almost too trifling to record—but it wearied her, and it was not long before she testified her wish to return home. In the early morning they started for New York.

It had been Dr. Cameron's intention to carry his wife direct to the home he had prepared for her. But their unexpected return made this inadvisable, and he accordingly took her to St. Nicholas place. She had not wished to go there, but she did not know how to make objection, so she said nothing, and by 6 o'clock of that same day she found herself in her mother's arms.

"My dearest!" was that mother's grateful salutation as she turned her cold cheek formally to her daughter's lips. "What a delightful surprise! And your father—how pleased he will be! But what an undutiful child you have been not to write to me! I don't believe a word about the rheumatism which Dr. Cameron says is your sole excuse. You never had the rheumatism before you were married. You have simply been lazy or anxious to show your power over your good husband. He has written quite regularly, good for nothing girl that you are!"

No More Bleeding Corns

No more knives, no more scissors, no more razors, no more blood poisoning. Away with the instruments of barbarous butchery! Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid will take out any corn, hard or soft, whole and positively without pain or danger. Never pare or cut a corn, for if the blade slips, as it frequently does, the corn bleeds, there is serious danger of blood poisoning and many deaths have been caused in this way.

The first application of Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid gives instant relief from pain, and if a soft corn of new growth, will remove it. Hard, deep, stubborn corns require several applications, but are just as completely removed, root and all, and there is no possibility of danger, nor pain. Tampering with a corn causes irritation and makes it harder to remove. Use Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid, we guarantee it to be successful and painless. 20c, by mail 22c.—(Advt.)

Art

The wonderful career of Frances Cranmer, who painted Mrs. Wilcox's Portrait.

AMONG the artists who have painted the portrait of Ella Wheeler Wilcox, it has remained for a young girl of little more than a score of years to make a remarkable success.

Miss Frances Cranmer is the artist, and in three sittings of four hours each she produced a portrait which is pronounced by all Mrs. Wilcox's near family and friends to be a wonderfully correct likeness; and by all critics who have seen the portrait to be an exceptionally fine piece of art work.

Miss Cranmer has already distinguished herself in portraiture work, and has received medals and praise from high sources.

Born in South Dakota.

Frances Cranmer was born in Aberdeen, S. Dak., in 1890, spending her early years there. After finishing her high-school studies at a private academy in Madison, Wis., she went to Washington, D. C., at the age of sixteen, where she entered the Corcoran School of Art, under the instruction of E. C. Messer.

After spending three years there she studied at the Art Students' League in New York City for a year. From there she went to Boston, entering the portrait class at the Museum School of Art.

After a winter's study there she went to Paris, attending classes at the Academie de la Grande Chaumiere, also spending some time in Holland, copying in the galleries.

Since returning, Miss Cranmer's studio has been in Washington, D. C., until going to Minneapolis last fall, when she opened a studio in the Handicraft Guild. Miss Cranmer is a pupil of William M. Chase, Frank Benson, Rubert Henri and the Spanish painter, Casteluccio, and was awarded the gold medal at the Corcoran Gallery of Art at Washington, D. C., in 1908.

Miss Cranmer is a young woman of striking beauty, great personal charm and unusual mental attainments.

She feels that her portrait of Mrs. Wilcox has been the most gratifying success of her brilliant, if brief, career as an artist.

Miss Cranmer was called to Tuxedo Park immediately after finishing this work to paint the portrait of Miss Margaret, the winsome and attractive young daughter of George Grant Mason.

Miss Margaret has taken many cups and ribbons in her sportsmanship and was painted in riding habit.

To Give Exhibition.

The portrait of Mrs. Wilcox was painted in a sunset yellow gown and mantle against a dark green background, and is most effective. When asked for her own opinion of her portrait Mrs. Wilcox said:

"I think it is such a decided work of art that long after my name is forgotten it will live in some great gallery as 'A Portrait of an Unknown Lady, by Frances Cranmer.'

"It's art value will survive temporary personality."

Miss Cranmer is to give an exhibition of her work in New York in November.

CHAPTER XXI.

MRS. DANFORTH turned as Mary entered the kitchen, then started in surprise when she saw that the girl still wore her hat and jacket.

"My dear!" she exclaimed, "I thought you were getting ready for supper?"

"Mother," said Mary, hurriedly, "I happen to remember a telegram I have to send, just a little matter of business about which I can not tell you just now. I must run around to the telegraph office before supper. I will be back in a quarter of an hour."

She paused long enough to put her arms about her mother and to kiss her with a tenderness that was almost passionate. And, at the demonstration of affection, the older woman's wounded feelings were healed.

Felt For the Card.

As Mary hurried toward Columbus avenue she felt in her hand bag for a card that Bert Fletcher had given her, a card bearing his name and address. In handing it to her, he had explained awkwardly, "If you should care to see me at any time, you can send me word there, where I live with my mother. Anything sent there gets me."

By the time the girl had reached the telegraph office she knew by heart the address on the bit of pasteboard. Seizing a telegraph blank and a pen she wrote quickly, as if fearful that her resolution would fail, the name of Herbert Fletcher, with the street and number of his home. Then, without faltering, she penned her ten-word message.

"Have changed mind. Home to-night if you care to call."

Signing her initials, she handed the slip to the waiting clerk, gave him the money for the message, and added:

"See that this gets off at once, please."

The clerk grinned. It was evident that he considered this a pretty girl sending a summons to an admirer.

"Oh, yes, Miss," he began pertly. "Don't worry, I'll——"

He stopped abruptly as he met Mary's stern and surprised gaze, and had the grace to mutter, "Excuse me!" flushing to the roots of his red hair.

Mary had forgotten the incident and her own displeasure by the time she turned again into Eighty-fourth street, and walked westward. The glow that, such a short time before, had seemed prophetic to her happy heart, had died entirely from the western sky, and in its place was a bank of fog rising slowly from the river.

She Sighed Again.

"The whole world has changed once more," she muttered, wretchedly. "If it were not for mother, I would like to die! But she needs me. I almost wish she didn't."

Yet when she opened the door of the Danforth apartment, she forced herself to call out cheerily:

"Here I am, mother dear! As soon as I can make myself presentable I will come out to supper. Forgive me for keeping you waiting."

At the bright tone the mother, vaguely uneasy by her daughter's recent reticence, breathed a sigh of relief. After all, things must be all right or Mary would not seem so like herself again. Girls were queer creatures, anyhow, with their varying moods, and Mary had been a different girl since her father's death. Which thought made the elderly woman sigh again.

As the two women sat over their simple evening meal the daughter chatted lightly, pleasantly. She tried to remember the little gossip of the office and several mild jokes that Mr. Pearson had told her to-day when he happened to stop at her desk for a few minutes' chat. The girl laughed more heartily in telling these than her mother thought natural. At last the widow asked a question that had trembled on her lips when Mary had come out to supper, but which she had checked, moved to do this by an impulse which she did not understand.

"Dearie," she said timidly, "are you feeling badly to-night, or are you worried?"

Mary shook her head. "Only tired, mother dear," she replied. "You know at this time of year the work seems hard."

The mother looked distressed and breathed her customary sigh. At the sound Mary felt vaguely annoyed. Her mother sighed most of the time nowadays, she reflected. It was getting to be a confirmed habit.

What is the matter, mother?" she asked, trying to speak gently.

"I was only thinking," said the widow, "that I wish you did not have to work so hard."

"So do I," returned the daughter. "Let's hope I won't have to much longer."

"You Frighten Me!"

The mother looked at her hopefully and inquiringly: "Do you mean that, Mary?" she asked eagerly. "Do you mean that there's a chance that soon you can stop all this toil, and that all we've hoped for will happen?"

Her voice broke and the tears came to her eyes.

"Oh," she exclaimed, "if so, thank heaven! Thank heaven! It has driven me wild to see you so tired, dear, and I am so lonely, and I have hoped that you had had news from Gordon, but I didn't like to ask about him so often. Do you mean now that he——"

Mary had risen to her feet and stood pale, but calm, gazing at her mother. Her expression caused the older woman to catch her breath sharply.

"Why—Mary—what is the matter?" she asked tremulously. "Don't look like that! You frighten me!"

"There is nothing to be frightened about, dear," the daughter said slowly, "only I would rather you did not talk to me again about Gordon Craig. For I shall never marry him."

Although the widow burst into hysterical sobs, the girl's calmness did not desert her, nor did her voice quaver when, after having soothed the agitated woman, she gave the brief explanation:

"It is all for the best, mother. Gordon and I do not love each other any longer. And I would not marry him if he were the only man in the world!

SELECT big, firm, unspotted potatoes. Wash and brush them thoroughly so no sod of Ould Erin will cling and interfere with the joy of the earnest potato eater who partakes of meal and skin alike. Bake them until they are mealy and within about five minutes of absolute done-ness. Remove from the oven, cut off the tops and stir into the crumbled inside which you have mashed in a bowl with a silver fork butter, pepper, salt and finely minced ham. Return a generous filling to each shell. Break over the top of each an entire egg (yolk and white). Over this grate cheese, and return to the oven until the savory smell of the melted and browned cheese makes it impossible to longer postpone meal time.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T HUMBLE YOURSELF.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 and in love with a young man two years my senior. Recently he saw me going to a ball with another man, and he got angry. He did not go. Since that time he does not speak to me and goes with other girls to make me jealous. I don't take any notice of him, but I really love him. He has told a friend of mine that if I apologized he would speak to me. I am not engaged to him and am too proud to think of apologizing for such a foolish thing. ANXIOUS.

You have done nothing for which an apology is necessary, and a girl who begins by being humble has to keep it up.

Continue in your present attitude, and if he loves you enough to be worth loving he will be the one to apologize. If not, then do not spoil your pretty eyes by worrying, for the right man will some day come along.

DON'T TAKE EITHER.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 21 and have two boy friends who are very much in love with me. One is eight months younger than I, and the other is four years older. My parents are very much opposed to my marriage with the former, as his family connections are not what could be called good. The other boy has a very good reputation; he cares a lot for me, but I do not care half as much for him. My parents think everything of him. But he does not appeal to me. PERPLEXED.

Your parents object to one suitor and you don't love the other. Good reasons why you should not take either. Wait a while and perhaps time will make your way clear for you. But under no conditions must you marry a man you do not love. Always remember that.

Taken at His Word.

Old Johnson had realized the dream of his life, and taken his only son into partnership in the business he had worked up himself. There was great pride in the old man's heart the first day they were installed in the office together, and he was looking forward to the projects they would work out, and how the young blood would stimulate the firm.

As the days went on, however, all did not work as old Johnson had expected, and the youngster's overbearing manner annoyed him considerably.

"Look here, young man," said he one morning, "let's have a little less of the 'I,' and a little more of the 'we' in this business. Remember I'm still here, and that you're only junior partner."

The youngster "lay low" for a week, and the father thought his few words had struck home. A few days later, however, his son appeared looking just a trifle anxious.

"I say, dad, we've been and done it now," he remarked.

"Done what?" asked his alarmed parent.

"Well—er—we've been and married the typist!"

Got His Number.

The aged motor van was somehow always getting out of repair, and it usually indulged in a little breakdown about once a week, in order to vary an otherwise monotonous existence.

Slowly it snorted its 'way into the broad stream of traffic, when there was a sudden whirring of wheels, a loud snap, and the weary and worn framework came to a dead stop.

"Look here," said the policeman to the driver, "this kind of thing is occurring too often. Let's see, what's your number? Yes, 1588!"

"Go on!" said the precocious youth who was in charge of the cart immediately behind. "That ain't its number. That's the year it was built!"

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was a yung man & his wife up to the house last nite & I felt sorry for the yung man. He dident know that I felt sorry for him, because he talked to me as if I were about two years old, but I know moar than he does.

His naim was Ralph, that is the only naim I herd. His wife called him Ralph all the time, & he called hisself Ralph. This is the way he talked:

"Sum peepul doesnt know enuff to cum in out of the rain, but littel old Ralph is different. Thare is a lot of men that thinks thay are wise, but littel Ralph knows he is wise."

Pa was telling sumthing about a married man that found out his wife had been a shoftlifter for years. It is funny he dident find it out sooner, Pa sed.

Not at all, sed Ralph. Thare is a lot of simpletons like him. He did not know wimmen. I know them like a book. Thay can fool sum men, but thay never put one over on littel old Ralph, he sed.

& so you understand wimmen, sed Ma.

Deer me, yes, sed Ralph. For yeers & yeers I studied them. Thay always liked me, & used to tell me a lot of things that thay wud keep from other men. Like Tom Moore, my only books were women's looks.

How vary interesting, sed Ma. I feel kind of creepy wen I am near a yung man who knows wimmen so well, sed Ma. What if you shuld see sum of my faults that my husband dosent see, & tell him about them.

Sum men mite be that way, sed Ralph, but littel old Ralph is a close mouthed man. Thare are sum things in this hed of mine that will go to the grave with me wen I die, sed Ralph.

It must be yure teeth, sed Pa. I doant think you will carry many other things to the grave with you. But tell us about yure wild days with the ladies.

Oh, Ralph never talks of those days, sed his wife. He is satisfied to let them be buried in the past. He is a true, tender husband now, & is living all his best years for me, aren't you, Ralph?

, sed Ralph, all the wild yeers are gone. I do not suppose a quiet, hoamluving man like you evver had much chanst to study wimmen, sed Ralph to Pa.

I used to have a lot of chanst to study them, sed Pa, but after I got my wisdom teeth cut I stopped trying to dope them out. There isent any nurrishment in studying wimmen, my deer boy, sed Pa. You are at the age now wen you think you know a lot about the fair sex, & the fair se xis jest fair enuff to let you think so. History is full of cases jest like yures, sed Pa. I have known a lot of deeper students of wimmen than you, Pa sed, that thought they had it all at thare tongue's end. Then they wud marry a simpel, innocent gurl & start to educate her, & she wud run away with a life saver jest out of the high school that cuddent say anything except "I shud worry."

Doant try to tell me, sed Ralph.

No, Ralph, I will not try to tell you, sed Pa. You are one of those "Doant tell me" boys, & I will not try to ruffle yure feelings. Now, let us all talk about sumthing that the rest of us understand as well as you.

What He Meant.

"That last thing you sent in was good," said the editor. "We all enjoyed reading it very much."

"Well in that case," said the youthful poet, "I take back what I said in the letter I wrote to you yesterday about my determination never to send you any of my work again."

The editor slowly shook his head. "Don't do that," he murmured. "Why, that letter is what I referred to."

A lady with a wasp-like waist fainted in a city street the other day and was carried into the nearest shop. An Irishman, who had observed the occurrence, looked into the shop after a few minutes and inquired:

"How is she now?"

"Oh," said the shopman, "she's coming to."

"Ah," replied Pat, "come in two has she? Poor thing! Bedad, it's just what I was afraid of."

.:. BLUFF .:. .:. By Leslie Thomas .:.

THE young man in the opposite corner of the compartment possessed, obviously, a simple and confiding nature, and Mr. Leverton spent a good deal of his time in searching for such truthful souls. His means of livelihood were mysterious—he confessed to a disinclination for monotonous labor.

"'Bluff' is Archie Leverton's motto," he would admit to his intimates. "It never fails, my boys—never!"

He eyes the vacant-looking youth in the manner of a spider with an unsuspicious fly. On this occasion, it was evident, a likely subject for his wiles had approached of his own accord.

The youth caught his eye and wriggled confusedly.

"I s'pose you know the city pretty well, please, sir."

"Some of it," Mr. Leverton ventured.

"Then, p'r'aps you can tell me whereabouts Axland street is—the best way to er—get them from the station?"

With a pleasant smile, Mr. Leverton changed his seat, and bent down to follow the young man's forefinger. He read the "personal" announcement curiously.

"Regent Street, January 2.

"Will the person who rescued an elderly lady from being run over by a taxicab kindly apply to Messrs. Collingham & Tremlow, solicitors, of Imperial House, Axland street, E. C., when a suitable recompense will be offered."

"Don't mean to say it was you that saved the old girl?"

"Pulled her on to the curb," stammered the young man, modestly.

"You—in town?"

"I was just visiting Aunt Martha—coming home then I mean; but I had half an hour to spare; so I took a stroll, too—to see things."

His Name.

"Why, bravo! You're a regular hero, Mr ——. What name, by the by?"

"Greenhill sir. How much d'you think they'll give me? What's 'recompense'?"

Same as reward, explained Mr. Leverton, hurriedly. He was engaged in concocting a scheme. "Greenhill! The 'green' part's right enough!" he thought amusedly.

"Dare say it might run to a good bit o' money, eh?"

"Not very likely, Mr. Greenhill, I'm afraid."

"Oh!" said the youth disappointedly.

"Not if you go there for it yourself. You see, you're not used to talking to solicitors, are you?"

"No-no."

"Thought not. You aren't good at bargaining and haggling with 'em. You aren't up to their artful ways. Don't blame you for that. But, as likely as not they'd offer you some mis'rable amount, and you ought to laugh in their faces. But you'd take it."

"I—I shouldn't! Don't see why you should think I'm——"

"You'd take it," repeated Mr. Leverton firmly. "A man who's had no dealings with 'em hasn't got a fair chance. They'd persuade him to anything and they'd get you to sign some paper or other——"

"The question is, how much ought—"

"Ah," returned Mr. Leverton, admiringly, "you've hit the nail on the head. All depends on what sort of old girl it was. Did she look well off?"

Mr. Greenhill began to describe the lady. Unostentatiously, his new friend made notes.

"Whereabouts were you standing at the time? H'm! Just near the circus? And how did the accident happen exactly? Best tell me all about it; then I'll be able to—ahem!—be in a position to advise you."

A Plan.

Mr. Greenhill added voluminous details. When his memory failed, a hint from Mr. Leverton would start him off again.

"Good!" declared the latter gentleman, patting his shoulder. "Now, let me think."

He started up presently.

"You take me with you," he suggested blandly. "I'll manage the talking. I'll see you aren't put upon."

"But it ud be wasting a lot o' your time, sir."

"No, no; I'm very interested in the matter."

"And I reckon," added the youth, wisely, "you'd be expecting something for your trouble."

"Smart, I see," cried Mr. Leverton, beaming, "and cautious, too! You're wrong, though. Of course, if you care to stand me a drink afterward, I won't say 'No!' But otherwise—you see, you remind me of a favorite nephew of mine, and I wouldn't accept even 5 per cent—even 2½. No!"

"Very kind, I'm sure."

"Good-hearted, I am; it always was my failing. I'll show you Axland street. Here's the train stopping. We'll go straight there. When we come to Imperial House, in we go—or, rather," he appeared to reflect—"you better wait outside, if you've no objection. Understand? I'll send for you if you're wanted. But I'll get more money out of those lawyers than you would. I expect the old girl's said to 'em: 'See what he's satisfied with. Give the good, brave fellow what he think's right. I leave it to you entirely.'"

Mr. Greenhill was pondering deeply.

"I thought of catching the next train back," he observed, "to tell 'em at home all about it. They're waiting very anxious."

"Well, it won't take us much over three-quarters of an hour."

"Then I'd manage it all right. Only I wanted to buy Rosie a—present."

No Money.

"Your young lady?"

"Ye-s," agreed Mr. Greenhill, giggling in discomfort. "Buy it out of what I get from the lawyers, you see, sir. Still if I wait till you meet me with that money——"

"Haven't you got any with you?"

"Only sevenpence and my 'return half,' sir."

"I'll lend you five shillings. Do your bit of shopping while I'm inside."

Outside the Imperial House the coin changed hands.

"If you're not out when I come back, sir, I'll stand just here."

"Righto!" Mr. Leverton nodded.

Once out of sight, moving toward the lift, he gave vent to his restrained mirth.

"Aha, Bluff!" he gasped, exhaustedly. "Heads I win, tails you lose. Now, then, for Messrs. Collingham and Tremlow. Saved the old girl's life. I should think I did. Rather! I remember the whole thrilling scene. And if she happened to describe me as younger and more stupid-looking—well, she made a mistake in the excitement of the moment. More bluff!"

A clerk inquired his business. In due course he sailed jauntily into an inner room. But five minutes later he burst out and stumbled down the stairs.

"A woman, it was—been rewarded already," he babbled. "He told me everything wrong—wrong side o' the road even—wrong sort of old girl—'obtaining money by false pretenses'—what did the old josser say I could get for that? Where's that Greenhill fellow? I'll—I'll—see if I don't——"

The simple young man was not waiting at the door; neither did he return.

"O' course not," lamented Mr. Leverton, bitterly. "He's got a quid of mine. Bluff—sheer bluff!" he moaned in anguish. "Oh, I'll have to take to short frocks and pinafores again, and have a nurse to look after me!"

PADDY RYAN CLIMBED TO TOP EASILY

Ryan Beat Joe Goss When Joe Was Hardly Able to Hold Up His Hands.

RYAN AND SULLIVAN MEET

Circumstances Sometimes Force Championship on a Boxer.

By Otto C. Floto.

THE days when names minus ability cut a figure in the prize ring have passed. Time was when reputations were built upon mediocre performances, when clever boosting and shrewd manipulation did the rest. Once a great reputation had been earned it was easy work to gather the kale from the idol-worshiping public. Some may doubt the accuracy of these statements, but I can recall where a certain fighter earned the title of heavyweight champion of the world and yet he never could fight. Any of our welterweights of the present could have beaten him. But in some mysterious manner he managed to get on top, and once there he remained in the position in which fate had placed him and lived on his reputation. I mean Paddy Ryan.

Ryan Beats Joe Goss.

Ryan managed to beat old Joce Goss when the latter could hardly hold his hands up. The match was made through Richard K. Fox, who really believed Ryan a great fighter; in fact, it was Fox who furnished the $10,000 for Paddy when the latter fought John L. at Mississippi City in 1882. After defeating Goss, Ryan was a great attraction, and all who dared challenge him were hooted. In fact, when Parson Davies, who had secured backing for Sullivan from Mike McDonald in Chicago, went to New York to deposit the money the crowd became so angry at Sullivan for his presumption in challenging the champion that both John L. and Davies had to make their exit by the rear door of The Police Gazette office.

Sullivan Wins Easily.

Of course, when Ryan and Sullivan met the latter won so easily that it was a joke, and Ryan was for all time exposed as to his class. Then, when they were to battle again in Frisco, Ryan got as far as Ogden and "took it on the run" back to Chicago. He was finally induced to try again, and Sullivan knocked him out as easily as he did on the first occasion. Between times, however, Ryan was matched to meet Frank Glover on a boat near Chicago. Of course, the police prevented the meeting, and whispers told us that "friends of Paddy's had seen the chief."

Pleasant Manner Won Following.

Personally, Ryan was one of the finest men you could meet and it was his pleasant manner that enabled him to be numbered among the great fighters and not his ability as a pugilist that ranked him there. It would be almost impossible to build up one of those "hothouse" champions at the present age. The dear public that has been buffeted about and handed the hot end of so many propositions has become "wised" and knows as much about the fight game as those who follow it for a livelihood. Consequently, no attempts are made to pass the papier mache champion as the bona fide article any more.

TINKER STILL ON JOB; DENIES HE HAS RESIGNED

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 15.—Joe Tinker denied to-day that he had resigned as manager of the Cincinnati Reds. According to a report, Tinker and President Herrmann are at outs because of the running of the team, and the latter requested Tinker to quit.

Tinker declares he would not resign unless requested to do so by Herrmann, and as the latter has made no such request he is still on the job and intended to remain.

Lookouts Are Fighting Savagely

Tabasco Kid Tries Hard to Win

By O. B. Keeler.

ONE thing seems to be pretty well established by yesterday's terrific, if indecisive, struggle.

The Tabasco Kid is going to whip us out of a pennant if he can.

The T. K. has no chance to win a pennant himself, this year. But all the animosity and all the rivalry existing between the Atlanta and Chattanooga ball clubs is right at the top now.

And this crool war is going to be crool, for fair.

* * *

THERE was the sixth inning of yesterday's game.

The Lookouts caught Conzelman wobbling and tied up the count. Howell, pitching for the visitors, was going fairly well. Darkness was gathering.

Out went Mr. Howell. In went Mr. Street. Joe wobbled some more and Gabby was winged, dancing on first, his yells of encouragement reaching to heaven.

Bloole! That was the miserable Walsh, and the Lookouts were one up.

Bloole! That was the recent edition of E. Flick. And the bases were full.

Bloof! That was the wretched Coyle, blowing up a foul for Joe Dunn.

* * *

AND now look who's here!

The Kid had several other hurlers he could have inserted to hold that single run lead.

But no. Out wanders the giant Pole.

The crowd lifts up its voice and weeps, or words to that effect. It is evident that the Kid wants that game, and wants it blamed bad. Wants it cinched, in fact.

* * *

BUT the Crackers' backs are up, and furious at that slender lead wrenched from under their eye-teeth, no ordinary Pole—not even the well-known Thaddeus of Warsaw—is going to make them lie down, roll over and play dead.

Tommy Long waits the big fork-hander out; makes him be good, and hooks one just inside third for two bases. Welchonce slashes a bounder toward second that Flick knocks down in a great play. Wally Smith cuts one on the off-side of Mr. Flick, and he performs another dive while the author of the double rode home.

Score tied.

* * *

AND now, friends, you'll just have to come through and hand it to that to-headed expatriate.

Maybe the old soup-bone was chilled when he went in. Maybe the wet pill bothered him. Maybe whatever you please. But right here, with nobody down, and Crackers on third and first, Mr. Coveleskie gave a sincere imitation of an actual pitcher.

Bisland was next, and the Pole whiffed him. The infield was close on the grass, and Wally Smith was permitted to swipe second. One hit would settle it. But Holland's swing faded into a feeble bounder to Walsh and Welchonce was out at the plate. Then Calvo, the Cuban, hit to Flick and the inning was over.

Just hand something to the Pole. He looked like the goods just then.

And the Tabasco Kid? Well, he skinned over his hand and he led trumps. And if he didn't win, he didn't lose.

* * *

OF course, a double-header was arranged for the home-coming of the Crackers, and a whale of a crowd was about to be on hand, and the Royal Rooters were there, and all.

So the bottom fell out. And one abbreviated game had the very dickens of a time getting itself played to a draw.

At that, there were 2,500 of the faithful there, plus the R. R. Club, with megaphones. And in the damp and dreary interval betwixt 2:15 and 4:10 o'clock, there was a crop-saving deluge to watch, and (this was only a rumor) a flock of snipe in the swamp in left field; and, later, Billy Smith with a broom, sweeping the flood heroically off his ball park.

That alone was worth the price of admission.

* * *

JACINTO CALVO is the entire name of the debutante, and he looks as if he might reflect honor on his native Cuba Libre, or clear Havana, or whatever it is. He is a small, sprightly gentleman with a pleasing smile, a powerful left wing, and a bewildering habit of flopping his arms while preparing for a dash to second.

Also, Jack appears to possess the small and expressive word indicating viscera.

In the sixth inning the new hand came up and fouled off a fast one that shot hot off the bat into his right eye. The youngster was stunned and blinded, but he didn't flop on the ground or stall. He sluiced the damaged optic with some ice water, collected his bat from an admiring small boy, and singled viciously over second.

* * *

THOMAS JEFFERSON LONG was the batting hero. In four times up he got two bases on balls and two hits, one of them the only extra-baser of the melee. Welchonce batted only .500 in the fracas, and Harry Holland fell down to .333, which is a very lowly mark, in the light of his recent doings.

* * *

JOE CONZELMAN began to hate himself after he got h. b. p. b. in the fifth. He tried to go all the way to third on Agler's single through Walsh, which Kid Elberfeld-ed to Graff in time to nip Joe by about fourteen yards.

* * *

THE Lookouts' first run was a gift. Bases full and two down in the sixth, Coyle hit sharply to Holland. The runner from second was past Harry, so his logical play was at second. But Smith was a bit slow in covering, and Harry, trying to check his throw, cut loose a peg into the dirt for one run.

* * *

IF there is any way to charge a catcher with a balk, Joe Dunn ought to have it. With a Lookout on second, Joe started a peg designed to nip him off. Nobody was covering, and Joe squeezed the pill, but not tightly enough. It slipped out of Joe's ample fist and rolled nearly to third, with Joe in close pursuit. Nobody advanced, so we suppose it is impossible to mark a balk against him.

DENT AND PRICE THE PITCHERS FOR TO-DAY

The Crackers will make another attempt this afternoon to play two games with their pet enemies, the Lookouts, and that will leave only two games to be played to-morrow, by way of cleaning up the series. Only one more engagement with Chattanooga remains for the local club after the present series—September 6, when the season ends.

Manager Smith said this morning that Gilbert Price and Elliott Dent would work this afternoon, opposed, to the best of Manager Elberfeld's information, by Harry Coveleskie and Rudy Sommers. But the Peppery Kid never is certain of his selection until the umpire announces it.

The manager said Harry Chapman's wrenched ankle would keep him out of the game until Monday, at the earliest.

EAST MACON WINS.

VIDALIA, GA., Aug. 15.—The East Macon team easily defeated Vidalia yesterday in the second game of a series of three. Errors of the local outfield lost the game for the home boys. The score was 10 to 1.

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

O, YOU AUGUST!

How sweet are the August days,
With the Macks and McGraws ahead,
And the other teams are but faded dreams
And their hopes of a flag are dead.

How sweet are the August days
As the end of the fight draws near,
And the managers say, as they draw their pay,
"Look out for the team next year!"

Aside from chess there is only one pastime that thrills us more than to watch two ball teams dragging out their salary after the fight is over. The said pastime is rogue.

In America the keynote of sport is to win. In England—well, they cawn't do it, don't you know.

It is estimated by geographers that the trip of the Sox and Giants around the world will consume more time than it takes Joe Dunn to hike around the bases.

Speaking of baseball and English, what language do the umpires speak when they announce the batteries?

TO THE CLUBHOUSE.

John, John, old Evers' son,
Bawled the umps and away he run.

Cy Pieh is now a member of the Yanks. Not that it makes any difference in the pennant race, but it shows that Hugh Jennings is loafing on the job.

While we are on the subject of names we might say without fear of successful contradiction that Oscar Gutter is not an inappropriate name for a fight manager.

The report that Mr. Whitney is trying to dispose of his American racing stable reveals the fact that in spite of his wealth, Mr. Whitney is no rummy.

It is said that Marquard and McLean form the tallest battery in baseball. It might be said that they form the nuttiest battery in baseball, but, considering their collective size, we refuse to say it.

The report that Jack Prince's Los Angeles motordrome was destroyed by fire fails to move us to tears. But it might if we were an undertaker.

Speaking of football, the real victims of that vicious game are the scribes who are forced to learn the new rules under pain of being amputated from the pay roll.

SMOKY JOE.

Gone are the days when his arm was up to snuff;
Gone are games when he showed his oldtime stuff.
Gone are the days, the days of long ago,
When Red Sox rooters up and yelled for Smokey Joe.

LAPORTE GIVES UP FRANCHISE.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Laporte, Ind., the best semi-professional team in Indiana, now that the Gary club has surrendered its franchise, will play the Gunthers at Gunther Park to-morrow. The team has cleaned up practically every strong team in its own State and has been forced to travel to get a strong enough opponent.

Three-Cornered Race Feature

Good Card at Saucer To-night

IT'S a great night for "13" at the Motordrome; "13" meets have been postponed, and to-night is the "13th" meet to be held, barring, of course, that Jack Prince's old sidekick, J. Pluv, doesn't kick in with some of his wet assortment.

The feature event to-night will be a three-cornered match race of three heats between Morty Graves, Harry Swartz and George Lockner. These lads have their machines tuned up top speed right now and it wouldn't be surprising if Kid Record was given an awful kick in the ribs.

The first heat of the match race will be one mile, the second two miles, and the third three miles.

* * *

THE Motordrome Purse is the opening event of the card. There will be two trial heats of one mile and a final of two miles. The first and second men in each heat will qualify. In the first heat the starters will be Swartz, Graves, Richards and Glenn. In the other, Lewis, Luther, Renel and Lockner will fight it out.

And then there is a classy affair scheduled, the Veledrome de Buffalo Sweepstakes. We will leave it to the kind reader to figure out for himself what all that name means.

* * *

BUT said race is to be run in three heats of three, five and seven miles. It is to be scored on a point system of ten points for a first, six for a second and three for a third.

Altogether, this card sizes up as the best ever staged at the Saucer.

Morty Graves' eye, which was bunged up by a flying piece of metal Tuesday night, is O. K. now and he promises to have his new 8-cylinder machine tearing up the track.

Following is the complete program:

MOTORDROME PURSE.
(One Mile to Qualify; Two-mile Final, Two Men in Each Heat to Qualify for Final.)
First Heat—Swartz, Graves, Richards and Glenn.
Second Heat—Lewis, Luther, Renel and Lockner.

SPECIAL MATCH RACE.
(One, Two and Three Mile Heats—Best Two Out of Three Heats.)
First Heat—Swartz, Lockner and Graves.
Final of Motordrome Purse—Two miles.
Veledrome de Buffalo Sweepstakes. French point system. Ten points for first, six for second, and three for third. Distance, three, five and seven miles.
First Heat, Three Miles—Richards, Renel, Glenn, Luther and Lewis.
Second Heat of Special Match Race, Two Miles—Swartz, Lockner and Graves.
Second Heat of Sweepstakes, Five Miles—Richards, Renel, Glenn, Luther and Lewis.
Third Heat of Special Match Race, Three Miles—Swartz, Lockner and Graves.
Third Heat of Sweepstakes, Seven Miles—Richards, Renel, Glenn, Luther and Lewis.

BROWNS LOSE SERVICES OF MITCHELL AND HAMILTON

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 15.—The local American League club will be without the services of two of its best pitchers for some time as the result of an injury to one and the suspension of the other.

Roy Mitchell, who alleges he was insulted by Umpire O'Loughlin in New York Tuesday, received notice from President B. B. Johnson, of the American League, that he had been suspended. Hamilton will be out for about ten days as the result of an injury to his pitching arm.

REDS PURCHASE MORGAN.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 15.—The Reds have purchased Pitcher Cy Morgan, now with the Kansas City team. Morgan will join the team in the East on Monday.

Windy City Lad Has Everything Needed to Annex the Title

CHARLEY WHITE LOOKS LIKE COMING CHAMP

By W. S. Farnsworth.

CHARLEY WHITE is going to come mighty close to annexing the lightweight championship within the next year or eighteen months.

There are only two obstacles in the way. One is that he will have to add about five pounds to his present weight. The other, chilled pedals on the part of Messrs. Ritchie, Cross, Wolgast, Murphy, Rivers, etc.

If any one of the quintet had seen Charley in action against Frank Whitney at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night I doubt very much if the young Chicagoan would ever be furnished the opportunity of entering a ring at the same time said ring was decorated with their presence.

Charley is a top-notch boxer, a hard and sure hitter, a wonderful judge of distance, a marvel at just escaping punches, either by side-stepping or blocking, and an expert in sizing up just what his opponent's stock in trade amounts to.

I have seen Cross, Murphy, Britton, Wolgast and all the other claimants of the title, including the titleholder himself, excepting Rivers, and White, in my opinion, has it on them in all lines of the game that go toward making a champion.

• • •

DESPITE the respect I hold for the judgment of my fellow scribes, Dick Jemison, Julian Murphey and Fuzzy Woodruff, I can not agree with their opinions as to the outcome. All three of my pals agreed that White won, but none of them thought his victory was as impressive as did yours truly.

I thought White had every round in a walk, excepting the second and fourth. While I gave White the edge in these two, it was very close. The other eight were Charley's by a mile, in my opinion.

But the vanquished came in for a heap of credit. There isn't another man of his weight who would have taken the beating that Frank did and still fight back. Just because a man takes a beating without flopping doesn't show that he is stout-hearted. It is the man who will fight back when he is being beaten that is really possessed of a stout heart.

In the seventh round Whitney was given an unmerciful walloping. With legs sagging, head bobbling, glassy-eyed, sick and weak, he never once thought of anything but fight. And the harder White smashed his tottering frame and his clouded head, the harder did Whitney try to fight back.

He is the gamest, grittiest, nerviest fighter in the game to-day.

• • •

HEARD an argument last night on Peachtree about the fight. One fan claimed it wasn't a good one because there wasn't a knock-out. Well, if that scrap wasn't a good one then there never was a good one.

Next to the Ketchel-O'Brien fight in New York about five years ago, it was the fastest young affair I have ever been fortunate enough to witness.

The fact that there wasn't a K.O. landed, like the one poor Jake Abel suffered in no time against White, doesn't show that the fight was slow. If anything, it points just the other way.

White fought at top speed all the way. So did Whitney, but Frank has a wonderful defense and White was unable to land as he did on Abel, Thomas and the many others that he has floored for a "ten."

To get right down to facts, there is only one punch that Frank has trouble blocking and that is a straight left jab. And nobody was ever knocked out with a jab yet. It is a stinging punch that discourages and wears down a man, but it very seldom topples him over.

• • •

WHITNEY and White are two grand little fellows. And both praised the other as soon as the scrap was over.

Said White: "Whitney is the toughest, gamest fellow of his weight in the world. And, believe me, he can beat a lot of these fellows who are claiming a right to fight for the title."

Said Whitney: "White is a wonderful fighter and has a grand chance of being champion some day. Jack Britton is the only boy I know of who might beat him."

All of which shows that Frank Whitney and Charley White are mighty high-class persons.

BEHAVE OR FACE RELEASE WHIPS CUBS INTO LINE

BOSTON, MASS., Aug. 15.—Look for the best there is in the Cub team all through this Eastern invasion, and for that matter from now on until the close of the season, and also look for the Chicago Nationals to climb. There is quite a gap between the Cubs and the Phillies, but Manager Evers says that will not only be closed, but it will be overrun, meaning that his organization will finish second in the big race. The word has been passed to the various members of the Cubs that Evers is manager, will remain manager and that his word is law and must be obeyed, even at the cost of a wholesale shift.

Advised to Make Trades.

More, the players have been given the tip that President Murphy has advised Evers to trade or sell any member of the team he thinks isn't doing his best, or who disregards John's orders, no matter who it might be, and this has thrown the scare into the boys. The recent shifting of Reulbach, Richie and Overall has shown that Murphy means business. True, the three named had lost much of their effectiveness to the team, but there was more than just that back of the changes.

Evers Will Have Order.

"I'll have discipline and order on the team, even if I have to get rid of the disturbers," was a recent statement of John's, and he certainly has taken the whip in hand. It is known that John was a bit lenient with his men and some took advantage by disregarding his say.

Murphy is back of John in every move he makes. The Cub boss is pleased with the manager's work and says only those scribes who wish to run his baseball club are finding fault with John.

Calvo Looks Like Regular Player

Some Notes on the Cuban Star

GENTLEMEN, meet Senor Jacinto Calvo, clear Habana, perfecto shape, rising 21, and some left-handed outfielder from Washington.

When first visible to the admiring populace, our brand-new right fielder was engaged in batting practice under the grandstand, the universe having sprung a leak to the tune of bull-frogs croaking in the marshes around second base. About six hundred damp but appreciative fans were looking over Senor Calvo with a steady cascade from the eaves of the smoker coasting down their spines.

It was an heroic sight.

• • •

SENOR CALVO still is a few chips shy on the United States language, but he is popularly reputed to be death on a fly ball. And it generally is taken for granted that a 10-second clip on the old towpath more than makes up for a split infinitive.

At that, Senor Jack's conversational powers are fully equal to the narrative of his brief but entertaining career. He let it out somewhat as follows:

Jacky is 20 years and a pair of months old. He was born in Havana and has an abiding dislike for Spaniards. When a mere boy he used to put in days and days just hating our o. f., Butch Weyler.

Jacky was started to school quite early and kept at it until he had a good education. Along about his sixteenth year, however, his digestion or something—the Spanish of which is obscure—got out of whack and somebody suggested that he let up on the school and take up some more outdoorish pursuit.

• • •

THAT spelled baseball with a large B for Jacky, who was a bear-cat on the town lots and would rather watch the Almandares team play ball than to hear "Cubanola" by a full orchestra of guitars.

In fact, the youngster wasn't long breaking into the most select company on the tight little island—the Almandares club, which boasts one of the world's greatest pitchers, Mendez. The only thing that has kept Mendez outside the Big Top in the Land of the Free and the H. O. T. B. is the fact that he is a couple of shades too brunette even for a Cuban.

Well, Jacinto showed speed on the bases and in the field, and more particularly did he wallop that old pill.

And so—Jacky can't explain just how this part of it happened—some scout or othe rgot a line on him and tipped off Clark Griffith, and pretty nearly the next thing the Little Perfecto knew he was in a large, white city, with the streets running skewgee and everybody talking about somebody named Walter Johnson.

He played in twenty games for the Senators and then he busted an ankle. By the time the transportation facilities were in shape again the Washington outfield was going along at top speed, and Jacky had to sit on a hard bench and swear in Spanish at Eddie Plank and other enemies of the Senators.

• • •

JACKY says all the baseball talk on the field in Cuba is done in the American terms of the game, there being no exact Spanish equivalent for "foul tip," "fair ball," "threebagger," or even "hit the dirt" and "take a lead."

When the Cuban teams are playing American clubs they use Spanish for coaching purposes, so their opponents won't know what is supposed to be coming off. When two Cuban teams are playing, the classic Castilian is employed mainly to tell the umpire what manner of burglar he is. That innovation might be recommended for use in this country, as Spanish is said to contain a number of highly explosive phrases and decorative expressions.

• • •

IN person, Calvo is a good-looking little chap, 5 feet 6 in height, well set up, and desperately quick on his feet. He made an excellent impression in his first game with the Crackers, getting a clean hit and showing a strong whip when he winged the ball in from deep right, attempting to get a runner from third. The hit looked all the better in that the little Cuban got it after being beaned by a foul tip from his own bat, from which he came back with an evident courage that won the crowd.

Baseball runs in the Calvo family. Jacinto has seven brothers, two older and the rest younger, and they all play ball.

BASEBALL
Diamond News and Gossip

The annual meeting of the American League will be held in Chicago in October instead of December, according to an announcement from Ban Johnson.

• • •

William H. Locke, president of the Phillies, who died yesterday at Ventnor, N. J., will be buried in Pittsburg, his old home.

• • •

Double-headers were thick in the National League. The Giants won both games with the Cardinals and the Phillies defeated the Reds twice. The Cubs paid the Boston Braves back in their own coin by drubbing them twice, thus breaking the deadlock with the Pirates. The Dodgers went down to defeat before the Pirates.

• • •

First Baseman Konetchy of the Cardinals nearly got three home runs. Two of his four-baggers were counted as such, but Umpire Quigley ruled that the third drive was a blocked ball and sent Konetchy back in spite of the protests of the Cardinals. The ball went into the left field bleachers then bounded out.

• • •

The Yankees began their Western trip by beating the White Sox right handily. The Red Sox shut out the St. Louis Browns, while the Athletics lost ground by being deefated by the Naps. The Tigers celebrated their return to Navin field by walloping the Senators.

Sports and Such

THE EASE WITH WHICH "Muggsy" McGraw is able to make a trade for any player he desires just now has nothing to do with the fact that all players used in the world's series must be under contract before September 1, and that the National League doesn't want a world's championship team in New York.

• • •

WE OBSERVE THAT A bantamweight boxer won a two-mile run the other day, but then there were no White Hopes in against him.

• • •

OUT OF HIS LAST PURSE of $40,000 the inculcators of manliness and fair play who had charge of Luther McCarty's affairs announce that $26 remains, "all expenses being paid." This, gentle reader, is the reason that inculcating is such a popular business.

• • •

HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY'S race horses are being sold. It is given out that the official handicapping makes it impossible for Trainer Rowe to improve the breed as rapidly as he would like.

• • •

MUCH TROUBLE AND railroad travel would be saved if matters were so arranged that the California State championship carried with it all other tennis titles.

• • •

SPEAKING OF MEXICO WE observe that in athletic games recently long runs in full accouterments are growing popular among the citizen-soldiery.

Detailed Description of This Wonderful Machine

Body metal, one passenger, wheel base 56 inches, 16-inch steel wheels, with 3-4-inch rubber tires; tread of wheel, 21 1-2 inches, made of material that gives spring and strength. This is a real vehicle—not a toy—and will uphold the weight of a grown man. The big racing hood is sheet steel and slanting seat, giving the driver real racing position; one big feature is the steering knuckle gear. The front wheels turn in response to the steering wheel, just as the front wheels of a real automobile, the axle being stationary. This eliminates danger of upsetting on curves.

These cars are carefully finished and beautifully painted. This model can be used with pleasure and safety by girls as well as boys. Remember, this machine is not a toy or plaything. It is a real miniature race car, according to the skill and endurance of the driver.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Trinity Property Sold for $60,000

Building at $35,000 in Friday Deal. Big Trades Pending—Monthly Luncheon—Alterations $15,000.

A third sale in the $150,000 total of the Smith & Ewing Real Estate Agency was announced Friday concerning the conveyance of a three-story and basement building at 12, 14 and 16 Trinity avenue to J. R. Smith & Co. from the Georgia Realty Trust Company for $60,000.

This lot is 64 1-2 by 105 feet, and the front foot price was, accordingly, $911. The building cost $35,000 and was formerly occupied by the Southern Book Concern, and is now under lease to Sterchi Bros. & Barnes, a furniture concern. It is known as the Hillyer property. The location is on the north side of Trinity avenue, between Whitehall and Forsyth streets. The deal was handled by Roe Price, of the Trust company, and Dr. J. T. Daves and John H. Maddox, of Smith & Ewing.

Big Projects Brewing.

Pople who think the local real estate market is quiet will be interested to learn that some of the biggest deals in the city's history are under way and are expected to be announced soon. These will come within a month or 60 days, according to the real estate men who are interested in them. Big improvements go with some.

A dealer who trades a good part of the time in private properties has a trade on which will make past cash transactions look small in comparison. There are other arrangements which are being kept exceedingly quiet.

Many Heating Plants.

The Moncrief Furnace Company has applied to Building Inspector Ed R. Hays for permits to install nine furnaces at an aggregate of $1,445.

Demand for Healey Space.

Demand for office building space seems never to cease in Atlanta. The Third National Bank Building was filled, it will be recalled, before the sixth elevator had been installed, and so with many other structures. The Hurt Building is all practically under lease and the Healey Building has had applications from nearly 100 business concerns.

The Healey applications are about sufficient to fill the structure, although the leases have not yet been signed. A. F. and Milton Liebman are the agents for the building.

Realty Board Dinner.

Members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board gathered early Friday afternoon in the Georgia Pine Room of the Hotel Ansley for their regular monthly luncheon. Delegates to the convention at Winnipeg were present and told interesting stories of experiences in the Canadian Northwest.

The question of the convention for 1916 was discussed informally, and the opinion seemed to be that Atlanta would win out.

It now develops that Memphis did not carry a formal invitation to Winnipeg, although the intention to do this was expressed two weeks before the meeting opened. Local dealers take this to mean that Atlanta will have no opposition from the Tennessee city, although no chances are being taken. President White, ex-President Glover, Fitzhugh Knox and S. B. Turman are confident that Atlanta will win.

"Atlanta will get the convention if she wants it," declared Mr. White.

Alterations to Cost $15,000.

Luther Z. Rosser and J. H. Porter have filed an application with Building Inspector Ed R. Hays for a permit to make additions and alterations to their building at 63 and 65 North Pryor street, the same to cost $15,000. Gude & Co. have the contract.

This structure was formerly occupied by the Dougherty-Little-Redwine Company, wholesale dry goods merchants, and was bought in February for $184,550. There are six stories and about 70,000 square feet of floor space, practically all of which has been leased by the Forest & George Adair Real Estate Agency. The lot is on the east side of the street, between Auburn avenue and Edgewood avenue.

The building will be converted into offices, with elevators and other modern conveniences. The dry goods merchants are now at 90 and 92 South Pryor street.

Building Permits.

$15,000—L. Z. Rosser and J. W. Porter, 63-65 N. Pryor street, alterations and additions. Gude & Co.

$400—John D. Patterson, 911 Peachtree street, install furnace. Moncrief Furnace Co.

$150—Peters Land Co., 401 Williams street, same.

$160—McKenzie Trust Co., St. Charles ave, same.

$185—J. B. Daniel, 247 Prado, same.

$850—L. J. Nolan, N. Ashby street, one-story frame dwelling. Day work.

$500—Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company, S. Pryor and Mitchell streets, alterations. F. B. Crowell.

$1,300—Lee Washington, 308 Fort street, one story frame dwelling. R. H. Jones.

A. D. Thomson on Trip.

Albert D. Thomson, of the real estate firm of Thomson & Lynes, has left for New York and other points on his vacation. Mr. Thomson will inquire into the Eastern real estate and money situations.

Aid of State Chamber.

Immigrants coming into Georgia and settling on farms are expected to find a great deal of help through the newly created State Chamber of Commerce, which will supply them with accurate and detailed information. Heretofore the facilities for this service have been very limited, the State Department of Agriculture and the various local chambers of commerce and real estate men attempting to supply the want.

Thousands of thrifty immigrants from the Middle West are seeking Georgia farms for trucking and general farm purposes, and the State Chamber will attempt to locate them profitably. This class of immigrants is educated and desirable. Many of them have attended the State institutions of the Northwest and learned scientific farming methods. The impossibility of getting land where individuals own so much acreage drives them southward, and the comparative sparse settling of South Georgia presents unusually good opportunities.

PARENTS IGNORE ELOPING DAUGHTER

Girl Marries Man Father Discharged From His Employ Because He Courted Her.

A romance which began more than a year ago when Lear Galanter, of Lollisville, was employed by the father of Miss Hannah Wolfe, of Capitol avenue, and which reached its climax Friday, when the couple ran away and were married, was given a jolt a few hours after the wedding when the bride's parents located them at the Aragon Hotel.

After a conference with their daughter and new son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Wolfe left the hotel, declaring their daughter had married against their wishes, and that the young people "could go where they pleased."

It is said by friends of the bride that Galanter was discharged from Mr. Wolfe's employ a year ago because he persisted in paying attentions to Miss Wolfe. He went to Louisville to work, but the spark kindled while he was in Atlanta developed into the flame of love. A few days ago he returned to claim his bride.

After the wedding the couple told some of their friends, it is said, who told her parents of the wedding.

Girl in Diggs Case Withstands Grill

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 15.—The trial of former State Architect Maury I. Diggs on a charge of violating the white slave law was resumed to-day with Lola Norris, one of the principals in the flight to Reno, on the stand.

The self-possessed, confident bearing that marked Miss Norris' first appearance on the witness stand yesterday had not deserted her and she answered the questions flung at her by the defense in a frank, firm manner.

Miss Norris testified that she was a good girl until she arrived in Reno, and the defense made unavailing efforts to discredit this statement.

'Flea' Castro Leads Bryan Merry Chase

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—Once more: "Has anybody seen Castro—General Cipriano?"

If anybody has yet located that State Department pest, please inform Secretary Bryan, because he is looking for Cipriano and has a United States warship doing the same thing. He doesn't want Castor, but he is anxious to know where the General is.

If Castro isn't found pretty soon, he will be not only the flea of South America, but the flea in the Seate Department. Already there is much itching.

Another Big Jewel Theft Stirs England

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BIRMINGHAM, ENG., Aug. 15.—Another sensational jewel robbery was reported to-day. The police were informed that a packet containing "thousands of pounds worth of jewels" had been stolen from the mails between London and Birmingham.

Recently a necklace valued at $750,000 was stolen between Paris and London. The same thieves are suspected in both cases.

Mercury Falls to 69 in Cool Wave

Light showers Thursday night and early Friday morning drove the mercury in the Government thermometer down to 69 at daybreak Friday, the first time it had been below 70 in several weeks. At 1 o'clock Friday afternoon the temperature was only 85 degrees, although the absence of breezes made the heat rather oppressive downtown.

The local bureau forecasts fair weather Friday night and Saturday.

REALTY MEN'S LUNCHEON.

The Atlanta Real Estate Board, represented by about twenty prominent real estate dealers, lunched Friday in the Georgia pine room of the Hotel Ansley.

ABSENCE OF RAINS SENDS COTTON UP

Giles Report and Unfavorable Crop Advices Drive Shorts to Cover—Cables Firm.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Conditions reflecting the cotton market at the opening to-day were a little more bullish than yesterday and first prices were 5 to 10 points higher than the closing quotations of Thursday. The Giles report was regarded as moderately bullish, but weather conditions in the Southwest proved another factor, which encouraged an active buying, which was attributed chiefly to local short covering. Brokers, representing spot interests, also bought.

While there was no rains shown on the map for Texas and Oklahoma, still reports from Dallas state that there were scattered showers in several localities, and New Orleans wires that indications point for further rains over Sunday. However, the market failed to bulge from the initial high point, except the most remote positions were lowered about 2 points, but soon retrieved the decline.

During the forenoon offerings became stiff and considerably scattered, resulting in the entire list rallying 5 to 7 points from the beginning range, except August, which held steady at 12 points advance over the previous close.

There was a decided change in sentiment late yesterday and there was considerable late buying which was reflected in Liverpool markets this morning. While Kofler, of New Orleans, is predicting rain over Sunday for the West, the Government forecast says hot and dry.

Wall Street and the uptown crowd have been among the leading sellers today. There was also a good deal of speculative buying. In theabsence of rains over Sunday it is very probable that the market will sell considerably higher. On the other hand, should rains come it will undoubtedly have a depressing effect.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net advance of 19@22 points from the closing quotations of Thursday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 15.—Liverpool continues the same. Futures firmer than spots, which are quoted 1 point lower to-day; sales of only 4,000 bales, while futures are 2 to 3 better than due, probably on reports of crop deterioration from the Western States.

The map shows fair weather in Oklahoma; partly cloudy in the rest of the belt, the only precipitation at Abilene and Brownsville, whereas private reports show scattered showers overnight over a large area in Texas. Good showers in Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee and the Atlantics. Indications are for unsettled and showery weather over practically the entire belt.

Our market opened about 5 higher and advanced further to 11.12 for October. Trade quiet, and in spite of attempts toward a short scare (on reports of drouth damage), the market showed a lack of confidence.

The fact is that Texas has had showery weather for the past four days and indications continue favorable to more extensive rains over Oklahoma also. The Central and Eastern States are doing very well and interest in forward shipments by the trade is disappointingly slow. There is, however, a short interest of minor strength in the market, and, as sentiment has been so much worked up by the dry spell in the West, attempts at a reaction might become more successful should rains fail to appear over Sunday.

COTTON GOSSIP

Miss Giles gives county returns from the cotton belt as of August 10, making conditions 78.4, as compared with 81.8 July 25, and 83.4 one month ago, and 76.7 per cent last year as of August 10. The States showing deterioration are: Alabama, 3 per cent; Mississippi, 2; Louisiana, 1; Texas, 7; Arkansas, 6; Tenessee, 3; Oklahoma, 9. Those showing improvement are: North Carolina, 2 per cent; South Carolina, 3; Georgia, 2; Florida, 1. She further states that the deterioration of 4.4 per cent is due mainly to drouth and severe heat west of the Mississippi River.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Limited forward demand on one hand and trade belief the crop is rapidly deteriorating in the West on the other, were the conflicting features in yesterday's cotton market, around which were grouped several smaller issues of more or less moment. The trade as a whole can see no logic in bulling a market that is not accumulating forward demand, even though the pause in buying be known to be caused by something other than lack of general requirement. Manchester has been such a busy buyer during the past two months that indifference there, even for a short while, looms large in trade eyes.

"Meanwhile, there is much controlo is pending a little below the market, which would begin to figure should general rains not come to the West in the near future, should Washington, some fine morning announce that the 'Clarke rider' had been kicked off the tariff bill.

"Mean while, there is much controversy over the weather in the West and feeling among the talent runs rather high. One school of thought contends that drouth has done very serious and irreparable damage in Oklahoma and is causing severe deterioration in Texas every day. These people contend that drouth is acute in all save a few of the more favored sections. Another school of thought asserts that moderate but slightly beneficial rains have fallen over most of the dry area, that the deficit in moisture is not so great as it was last year, that the damage done is more imaginary than real, and that general rains are now on the way."

The market steadied after the call on the forecast, which pointed for dry weather in the western belt. Riordan, Lee, Cone and Cardoza were the leading buyers. Hicks, Shearson and Schley were the leading sellers.

Early advices by telegraph companies show extensive showers overnight in parts of east, central, north and west Texas. Western Union reports showers from Abilene to Big Springs, covering large tract in west Texas. Omaha, Cairo, Cushing, Frankton in east Texas; Ballinger in central west Texas.—Kafter.

Enormous Trade in Wool; Mills Buying

BOSTON, Aug. 15.—More wool has been sold during the past week than any similar period since the first of the year. Conservative estimates give the total sales as above 3,000,000 pounds; some run as high as 5,000,000. Prices are not materially changed, though holders are disposed to ask a little more for good lots of unwashed fleeces.

Large sales are noted of territory wools, graded and in the original bags, both cloth mills and yarns spinners having been among the recent buyers. Local holders of washed fleeces are still asking too much for their wool. Considerable foreign wool has recently been withdrawn from bond by manufacturers. Receipts in pounds for the week ended and including Wednesday were as follows:

	1913	1912
Domestic	8,498,600	9,994,531
Foreign	599,880	5,574,076
Totals	9,098,570	15,739,607

Total receipts of 9,098,570 pounds compare with 11,088,938 the preceding week, of which 10,576,292 were domestic.

Receipts in pounds from and including January 1, 1913, as compared with the corresponding period in 1912, were as follows:

	1913	1912
Domestic	100,156,258	155,590,404
Foreign	43,293,761	91,117,263
Totals	143,449,013	246,707,667

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—The weather will be generally fair to-night and Saturday in most of the region east of the Mississippi River. Showers will probably occur late to-night or Saturday in the upper Lake region and there will be local showers during the next 36 hours in the South Atlantic States.

The temperature will rise slowly during the next 36 hours in the Northeastern districts and will begin falling late Saturday in the upper Lake region. In the Middle and Southern States east of the Mississippi River the changes will not be important.

General Forecast.

Forecast till 7 p. m. Saturday:

Georgia—Unsettled, local showers in east portion to-night or Saturday.

Gasoline Is a Necessity of Life Because---

Industry and Farming Are Necessary to Life, and GASOLINE Is Necessary to Industry and Farming---When Will Government Investigate the Gasoline Extortion?

(Copyright, 1913.)

Every day in some part of the country the price of gasoline is increased.

Men that used to buy it for six and seven cents a gallon now buy it for twenty cents, twenty-five cents, and even more.

The gentlemen that control the gasoline supply need not worry about business or prosperity.

They simply make up their minds just how much robbery the public will stand—and raise the price of gasoline accordingly.

They can say to themselves, "With gasoline at eighteen cents we were getting so many millions. Let us sell gasoline at twenty cents and make so many millions more. Then gasoline at twenty-two cents, and make still more millions."

Only this question interests them: "Had we better take it all in a lump and run the risk of trouble, or take it slowly and cautiously?"

How many farmers after buying agricultural implements requiring the use of gasoline find themselves unable to use them economically because of the excessive price?

One trouble with the big Rumley Company, maker of agricultural implements, was the fact that not allowing for the thievish inclination of those that control the price of gasoline, the company built a great number of gasoline tractors—and has them on its hands unable to sell them, BECAUSE THE FARMERS FIND THAT THEY CAN'T AFFORD TO USE THE GASOLINE TRACTORS BECAUSE OF THE PRESENT PRICE OF GASOLINE.

What is this gasoline that gives tens of millions a year to a few, through extortion from many?

It is a product very simply made of crude oil pumped out of the earth.

If this country had been properly managed from the start that oil WOULD BE THE PROPERTY OF THE PEOPLE, PAYING REVENUE AND PROFIT ONLY TO THE PEOPLE.

This gasoline is part of the wealth stored up in the earth millions of years ago, now monopolized for a few and used as a means of extortion.

This country pays out millions annually to prevent robbery on a SMALL scale.

Woe to the man who takes a pair of shoes, a loaf of bread or an overcoat.

We are willing to spend millions to catch and punish him.

Why shouldn't we have a national police to stop thievery on a big scale, as well as the municipal police to stop the thievery on a small scale?

Why worry so much about the poor devil who steals ten dollars occasionally, and ignore calmly the very rich devil who steals ten millions or more at regular intervals?

The necessities of life, the necessities of industry, should not be agents of extortion.

The prices of necessities should be investigated by government, regulated by government.

And the gigantic organizations that are able to produce cheaply by combination and are permitted to rob wholesale should be compelled to give to the public their fair share of the economies and to sell AT A FAIR PRICE that which costs them nothing in comparison to the price asked.

The gasoline stealing has gone on about long enough.

Government should do something more drastic about it than, loudly with the beating of drums, bring about so-called "dissolution" of the trust, which has simply put up the price of stocks, put up the price of gasoline and increased the prosperity of the smiling individuals who laugh at government and laugh at law.

: The City's Children :

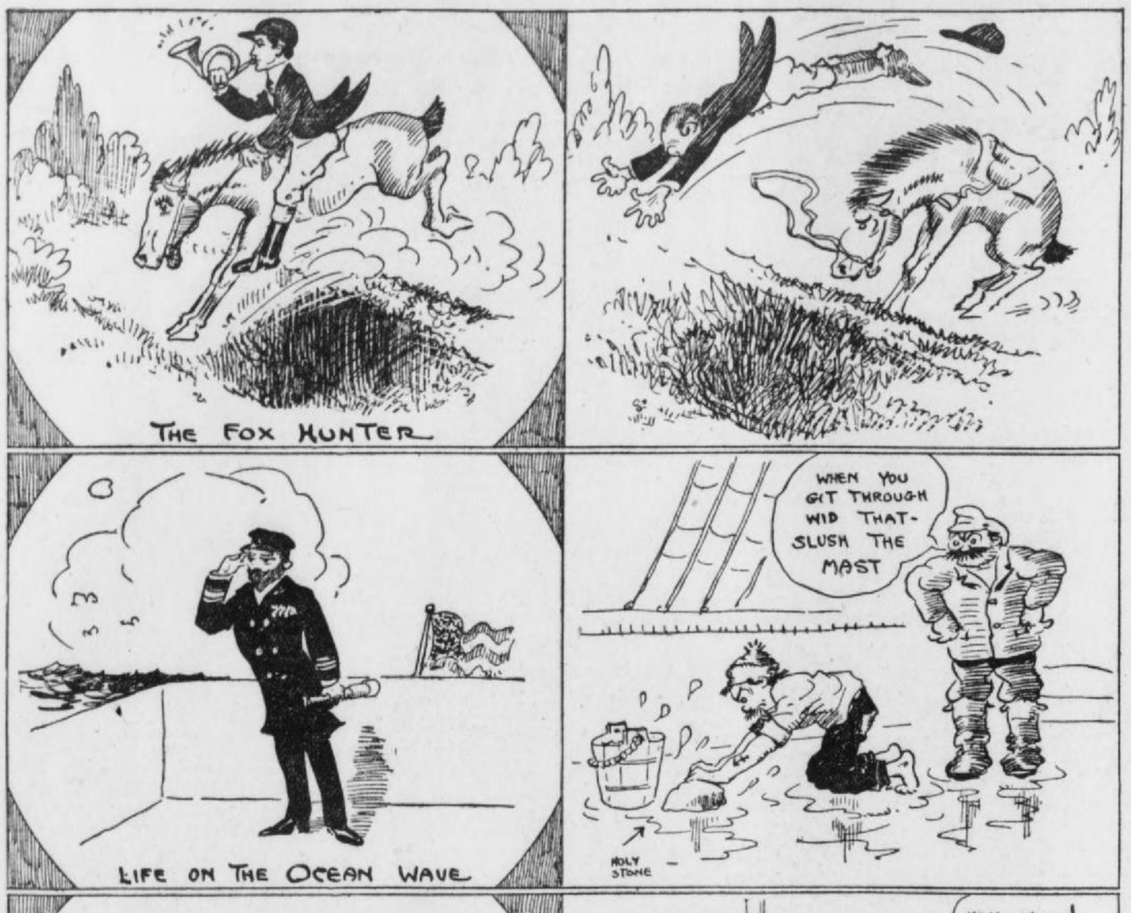

By PERCY F. MONTGOMERY.

I WISH that all the children of the city's grimy street
Were out here with these wild flowers beneath this sky of blue;
I'd like to see their faces as they scampered o'er these hills—
I'd like to see them happy, wouldn't you?

They're stunted, maimed and weary, and their eyes are far away;
The sunshine never sees them and they never know 'tis true.
There's no flower in the alley and no perfume in the air—
Oh, I'd like to see them happy, wouldn't you?

Sorry jest to sing on Sunday, "Ye did it unto me,"
With the children all in prison and the green fields far away,
Nodding flowers wait their handclasp, where the sunshine cleaves the blue—
Oh, I'd like to see them happy, wouldn't you?

Laziness Is the Root of Most Misery

Unhappy, Are You? Do You Enjoy It (Many Do) or Are You Too Lazy To Be Otherwise? This Is Especially the Case With Women.

By DOROTHY DIX.

AMONG my acquaintances is a young woman who, ten years ago, was an extraordinarily brilliant and beautiful girl, talented in half a dozen different directions. This girl had the misfortune to marry a drunkard, or, to tell the simple truth, she did marry a drunkard in spite of all that her family and friends could do to prevent her.

It Turned Out as Such Marriages Nearly Always Do.

The marriage turned out as such marriages almost invariably do, and after enduring seven or eight years of untold misery she divorced her husband, and went back home to live with her two little children.

This woman is still young. She is only 32, and in all probability has thirty or forty years more of life left to her, and that's a long time in which to be happy or miserable, and to make yourself a blessing or a curse to those about you.

And she has accepted her misery. She has enrolled herself among the human tragedies. She is the most haggard figure of woe that you ever saw. She has permitted herself to turn into one of those cynical, bitter, disgruntled women, with a tongue with a razor edge, from which the boldest flee.

Her family are in very moderate circumstances, not able to support her and her children, though they willingly divide what they have with her. Her poverty is another goad in her side, but she accepts this, as she does her other sorrow, as just another drop of bitter in her cup, and another thing to wail over.

This woman has just one pleasure in life, and that is that she lives in a perfect debauch of self pity. She keeps herself drunk on her own tears, and drugged with the thought of her own troubles until she is just as dulled and lethargic as any man that ever wallowed in a gutter, or lay stupefied in an opium joint.

None of her friends ever speaks of her except as "poor Sadie," but for my part, I always feel like screeching "Coward! Quitter! Deserter!" at her, for in my eyes there is no more contemptible figure in the world than that of the man or woman who refuses to fight the battle of life, who surrenders in the very first skirmish, and before the fight is really on.

Of course, it's a terrible thing to make a mistake in marriage. I am not minimizing that sorrow, though it has always seemed to me that a woman who married a man knowing that he drank, was in honor bound to stand for a drunken husband, but in this enlightened age people are not bound forever to the cross of their matrimonial mistakes.

Divorce Is Unpleasant; So Is the Knife of the Surgeon.

Divorce is also unpleasant, but it is like a surgeon's knife that cuts away a festering sore, and the clean wound it leaves is a thousandfold more endurable than the daily nagging and gnawing of a sorrow that feeds on your heart like a worm on a rose.

At any rate, having made an unfortunate marriage and having divorced an unworthy husband, the incident is closed so far as the woman is concerned, and she should put the affair out of her life. She certainly does herself no good by sitting up and brooding over what might have been. That is with the past, and her business is with the future.

She can't change what has been one iota by thinking about it, or weeping over it, or regretting it, but she can make what is to be full of happiness and content, and brightness, if she will.

No One Need Be Miserable Unless He or She Enjoys It.

Nobody need be perpetually miserable unless they really enjoy it and unless they get more fun out of crying than they do out of laughing. Plenty of people do. They are built that way, especially women who are most naturally of a sort of half mourning complexion.

This woman of whom I am writing—and there are thousands like her—has accepted misery, and dependence, and poverty as her lot in life. And she needn't endure this melancholy existence for another hour if she has the backbone of a fishing worm. She's strong, and healthy, and young. She is intelligent enough to learn how to do anything on earth if she'd put as much energy into it as she does to mourning over her fate, and as much thought as she does in dwelling on her troubles.

All that she needs is to say to herself, "I am not going to be miserable. I am not going to have my life wrecked by one mistake that I made when I was a foolish young girl. I am not going to be a dependent. I am not going to be poor. I am going to roll up my sleeves and go to work, and fill my life so full of fresh interests and occupation that I won't even have time to remember that I've got a past. I'm going to make money to buy the things I want, and to give my children the advantages they would have had if they had had the right sort of a father, and I am going to be happy because I am going to be of some use to my fellow creatures."

Just the grit to make the fight is all that stands between this woman and happiness, and between every other woman of the weeping willow type and the sunshine. The time was when there was nothing for the unhappy woman to do but to sit down and weep and lament, but that time has gone by, thank God. If a woman misses the trail to contentment in one direction now, she can face about and go the other way and arrive at the same goal.

The reason most people are miserable is because they are lazy. They are too indolent to make an effort to secure happiness for themselves, and this is especially the case with women.

Happiness Is for Us All If We Have the Energy to Get It.

Women are sick because they are too lazy to take enough exercise to keep them healthy; they are dependent because they are too lazy to get up and hustle for themselves; they are poor because they are too lazy to do the hard work that it takes to earn money.

Happiness is for us all if we have only the energy and determination to reach out and take it, and for us to succumb to misery is a confession of weakness for which we deserve to be ostracized by our friends instead of being pitied by them.

Ways of Living

The City and Country Are in Constant Warfare, He Says. The Trend Always Toward Large Centers of Population.

Written For The Georgian

By the Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

DR. JOSIAH STRONG'S new book, "Our World," the first of a projected series of three volumes, commends itself to the attention of those who are interested in the trend of present events and in the social crisis which we all somehow suspect to be approaching.

The general purpose of the book is to show that the current of the general life, here and abroad, is reaching the point where it can no longer be held within the channel that it has worn for itself, nor restrained by the barriers with which it has been artificially dammed.

The author is temperate in his statement of the situation and thoroughly optimistic in his anticipations, but puts the case strongly and illustrates his position clearly and in terms in which hesitation finds no part.

The closing chapter occupies itself with the new problem of the city. The author has no faith in, and little patience with, the cry of "Back to the Land." There has always been a drift cityward. Somewhat of the urban impulse came to its expression as early in human history as the building of the Tower of Babel in the plain of Shinar, as recorded in the Old Testament narrative. Men are gregarious, like sheep, and tend to live in herds.

Obstacles To City Life Have Been Overcome.

This disposition was formerly somewhat discouraged by the great mortality incident to condensed population because of unsanitary conditions, an obstacle which has now been largely overcome by improved methods. Formerly, also, the size of a city was limited by imperfect means of transporting, a sufficient supply of water and of food material.

Steam and civil engineering have now gotten the better of these difficulties also, so that under those changed conditions there is no necessary limit set to aggregations of population. Consequently the gregarious impulse can now have allowed to it perfectly free scope.

So that, although the constant effort is being made to get people out of the city into the country, and although the Government has brought pressure to bear in the same direction, and during the 50 years following 1850 had put nearly half a billion acres of land at the free disposition of the people, the urban population continued to increase more rapidly than the rural—three times as rapidly between 1880 and 1900, as is reported on the basis of the national census.

All of this seems sufficient evidence of the fact that there is a current setting in the direction of the city, having its source in the very nature of things, and moving with a momentum which neither humanitarian effort nor governmental discouragement will suffice to resist.

Opposing the Cityward Trend Like Trying to Bottle the Wind.

That this drift cityward has its origin in other than local and transient causes and inheres in economic conditions and in man's native disposition, is proved by the fact that for hundreds of years fruitless efforts have been made to prevent people from leaving the fields for the town. Dr. Strong quotes the appeals made by Aristotle, Cicero and Virgil and the legal measures to the same end adopted by Justinian and Queen Elizabeth.

Opposing the tendency would, therefore, seem to be very much like trying to imprison the wind or like taking up arms against the tide. If this movement is to continue, and at its present rapid rate of increase, and if our population is going to bulk itself at urban centers, the prospect is fraught with practical and serious consequences.

We have to think what will be its effect upon human physique and human character. We look to the country for physical sturdiness. It is by recruits from the country that the city maintains a certain moral determination and strenuousness that seem not to germinate and thrive so readily in urban soil. Whatever may be the reason for it, such undoubtedly remains the fact. Perhaps it is because the country furnished more that is real, the city more that is ficticious.

Christian Science and Other Subjects

Editor The Georgian:

In The Georgian of August 9, Ella Wheeler Wilcox has an article, "Live First—Talk Afterwards," in which she classes Universal Life Principle, Vibration, Mental Science, New Thought and Christian Science as kindred subjects. The writer being a student of Christian Science desires to dissociate Christian Science from these so-called relations and show that it has nothing in common with any of these doctrines. In Science and Health, page 111, Mrs. Eddy says, "The principle of divine metaphysics is God; the practice of divine metaphysics is the utilization of the power of Truth over error; its rules demonstrate its Science." The method of applying this rule in Christian Science is to yield thought to the divine will or influence, in trust and confidence. This is the faith or understanding which the Apostle Paul designates as "the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Jesus proved this rule in all of His wonderful works. He said, "Of Myself I do nothing; not My will but thine be done; as the Father worketh hitherto, I work."

Mental Science, New Thought, Mental Suggestion, and Kindred Subjects, confuse the action of the human will or carnal mind with the divine will or law, hence their failure. Out of this confusion, or lack of misunderstanding, comes the inability of certain types to illustrate by "their faces," their manner, "their work," that they have found a panacea for human ills.

"How to control Destiny," "How to grow success," "How to attain self-mastery," "How to be well and prosperous" are subjects not one of which appear in any of Mrs. Eddy's writings or in any of the periodicals published by the Christian Science Association. These subjects indicate and suggest the effort of the human will.

Christian Science follows the admonition of Jesus: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and all these things shall be added unto you."

The human will, impelled by its own force or volition, consumes its vitality and is self-destructive. This destruction manifests itself in physical and nervous breakdown; hence its weakness and failure to heal either itself or another. Christian Science relies on its divine principle, speaks the word, as Jesus did, and trusts this word to fully accomplish that whereunto it is sent. "The Word of God is quick and powerful." It demonstrates itself in health, harmony, joy, peace, love and good will to those who rely on it. On page 446 "Science and Health," by Mrs. Eddy, are these words: "The exercise of will brings on a hypnotic state detrimental to health and integrity of thought." Mrs. Wilcox says, "Wait until you succeed before preaching success." If those who have achieved great success in any department of life had followed this line of thinking, the world would have known little success. "Seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you," are spiritual admonitions coming down the ages from Him whom the world recognizes as the greatest success. Seek under divine guidance and the way to success is already open.

Christian Science opens wide its arms of love to all "dissatisfied souls," and they come to it from all classes of society, seeking solace for their wounds, heartaches and disappointments. Some are "unkempt, nervous and erratic;" for this reason they need the tender sympathy, the patient instruction offered in this haven of rest by those who have gained through this great revelation some understanding of how to love our neighbor as ourself.

STATE PREPARES NEW SENSATION

Girl Brought From Cincinnati to Testify Against Leo Frank

SULZER, IN DEFI, SAYS HE WON'T VACATE

Refuses to Recognize Glynn as Acting Governor and Keeps Seal Under Lock.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Governor William Sulzer, impeached by the State Assembly, absolutely refused to give up the reins of government or recognize Lieutenant Governor Martin H. Glynn as acting Governor, pending the impeachment trial on September 18.

Mr. Glynn delivered his ultimatum to the Governor, and insisted on Sulzer vacating the office. His letter was as follows:

Hon. William Sulzer, Albany:

Sir—In the performance of the duty which has devolved upon me by article 4, section 6, of the Constitution, I officially demand that you deliver and surrender to me as Acting Governor, during the period of your constitutional disability to act as Governor, the use, possession and occupancy of the executive chamber and offices; and that you likewise deliver and surrender to me the executive privy seal of State of New York, and also all books, papers, records and documents in said chamber or offices or elwhere in your charge, possession or custody relating to or in any wise connected with or pertaining to the executive department.

Respectfully,

MARTIN H. GLYNN,
Acting Governor.

Governor's Reply to Glynn.

In his reply, the Governor said:

Executive Chamber, Aug. 15, 1913.

To Hon. Martin H. Glynn, Lieutenant Governor.

Sir—Yours of August 15 demanding that I deliver and surrender to you as Acting Governor the use, possession and occupancy of the executive chamber and offices, and that I likewise deliver and surrender to you the executive privy seal of the State of New York, and also documents, papers records in said chamber or offices or elsewhere in my charge, possession or custody, relating to or in any way connected with or pertaining to executive department received.

In response thereto I decline to recognize you as Acting Governor of the State, and decline to deliver to you the use, possession and occupancy of the executive chamber and offices, or in any way comply with the demands and requests in your letter.

I shall continue to exercise and discharge the legislational duties of the Governor of the State of New York; first among other reasons because I am advised that the Assembly at its present extraordinary session possessed and possesses no power or authority to prefer articles of impeachment; and secondly, because the Lieutenant Governor of the State is not authorized to act as Governor in case of the impeachment of the Governor unless such impeachment is sustained.

Proposes Hasty Trial.

For the purpose of preventing an unseemly struggle I suggest that counsel for the Lieutenant Governor and myself agree upon a method of submitting the question to the courts for decision; and for that purpose that an extraordinary session of the courts be forthwith called in order that a speedy determination may be had.

Respectfully,

WILLIAM SULZER, Governor.

Glynn's letter was handed to Mr. Sulzer in the Capitol shortly after noon by Glynn's private secretary, who had to run the gantlet of the guards before he could get to see the Governor. This development followed the formal recognition of Mr. Glynn as Acting Governor by Secretary of State Mitchell May.

Mr. Sulzer and his counsel conferred upon the Glynn letter and took steps for the next move in the bitter warfare between the pro-Sulzer

GIRLS CALLED TO TESTIFY FOR THE DEFENSE

These young women have been summoned as witnesses.

MISS O. VICKERY. MISS L. HAYES.

MRS. J. W. WARDLAW.

WIFE SHOOTS AT HUSBAND WHO SPILT COFFEE

Seeing Tablecloth Soiled by Careless Spouse Makes Mrs. Gray "Awfully Mad."

Losing her temper when her husband spilled some coffee on the table cloth while eating lunch about 12 o'clock Friday, Mrs. L. P. Gray, No. 24 years old, No. 12 Hull street, Edgewood, secured a revolver and gred three shots at him, according to charges made by the police. None of the shots took effect.

Before his wife could fire the remaining cartridges in the revolver, Gray ran into a room and locked the door. Mrs. Gray then telephoned the police and asked them to come out and arrest her husband. Call Officer O. R. Jones answered the call, and after investigating the attempted shotting, made a case against Mrs. Gray and served her with a copy of charges. She was not arrested, because she has a 6-week-old child. Her hearing has been set for next Friday morning in police court.

According to the story the Grays told the police, Gray who is a railroad man, came home about 11:30 and found his wife in a bad humor. While they were eating lunch Gray became nervous and spilled some coffee on the table cloth. Mrs. Gray, he told the police, hit him. Gray then grabbed his wife and pushed her into a room, shutting the door.

There was a revolver in a dresser drawer in the room in which Gray had pushed his wife, and Mrs. Gray got it. She threw the door open and ran out into the hallway, where Gray was standing. Without saying a word, according to the story told the police, she raised the weapon and fired three shots at her husband. Gray then ran into a room and locked the door. He remained there until the police came.

Poor Woman! She's Losing Figure and Getting Horse Feet

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 15.—"In a few generations American women will have feet like horses," said Miss Clara Houston, of Chicago, owner of the most perfect feet in the world, "unless they stop wearing slippers and shoes that throw the feet out of shape and squeeze the toes so that they overlap." According to Miss Houston, dancing is extremely harmful for the feet. She declares that the tango and the turkey trot have made a number of chiropodists prosperous this year.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 15.—The wife of the American farmer is losing her figure. This is due to water—its handling, not its use—according to President Joseph Cook, of the Mississippi Normal College. "The water for the kitchen has to be lifted so many times after it is drawn from the well," said Mr. Cook, "that the lift a day will be brought up to a ton, and the lifting of a ton a day will take the elasticity out of a woman's step, the bloom out of her cheek and enjoyment from her soul."

Picnicker Falls Into Burgoo Pot; Stewed

LEXINGTON, KY., Aug. 15.—Nat Gist is near death to-day after being boiled in a kettle of burgoo at the Blue Grass Fair last night.

He was tending the fire under the tuge caldron, which was buried so that the top of the kettle was level with the ground. His foot slipped and he tumbled head first into the boiling food.

Slit Uniforms for Chicago Policewomen

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Malefactors' scorn of the "lady cops" turned to real fear to-day when the "Catch 'em Skirts" was announced. The "Catch 'em" is a skirt of the usual narrow proportions, but equipped with a long slit and a drawstring. The "lady cop" can't run fast when the slit is closed for ordinary gait. But if speed is necessary, the wearer pulls a mysterious string, and—lo! a long slit, reaching up to the knee, appears.

Only policewomen, of course, will be allowed to wear the new skirt.

When Is Boarding House Not One, Is Riddle for Mayson

Recorder Pro Tem. Preston has requested City Attorney Mayson to be present in Police Court Friday afternoon to construe the city boarding house ordinance and tax ordinances, which apparently are in conflict.

The question was raised in the case of Mrs. B. E. Carroll, of No. 15 Houston street, accused of conducting a boarding house without a license. A recently enacted city ordinance provides that all boarding houses must have a license. The tax ordinance provides that all boarding houses of as many as fifteen rooms must pay a license fee and specifies the amount.

Mrs. Carroll's house contains less than fifteen rooms and she contends that she does not need a license.

PARALYZED BY DIVE.

MOBILE, Aug. 15.—By diving in two feet of water near Shubuta, Miss., C. B. Wyatt, a prosperous farmer, injured his spinal cord and is paralyzed from his waist down. His head hit the bottom.

JUDGE ATTACKS 'THIRD DEGREE' IN DECISION

Chief Justice Hill Reverses Underwood Liquor Verdict in Favor of Defendant.

Sharply scoring "third degree" methods of extracting testimony from witnesses and rebuking officers of the law who illegally deprive suspected persons of their liberty, Chief Justice Hill, of the Court of Appeals of Georgia, Friday handed down a decision, concurred in, reversing the decision of Underwood against the State.

The case has attracted widespread attention throughout the State. Underwood, a groceryman, was arrested, tried and convicted for keeping intoxicating liquors in his place of business, the arrest, the court states, being made without a warrant.

Upon conviction, the defendant appealed the case, but later the decision was upheld by the City Court of Americus. It was then taken to the Court of Appeals, which reversed the decision Friday.

In his opinion Judge Hill declares that the "officers illegally deprived Underwood of his liberty, searched his premises illegally, made an assault and battery upon his person and in so doing violently pulled down the constitutional bulwarks which protected him as a citizen."

"Any compulsory discovery of self-incriminating evidence," the judge says, "is abhorrent to a proper sense of justice and is intolerable to American manhood."

What is commonly known as the methods of "third degree," he says, frequently used by zealous officials, has no place in the jurisprudence which holds that every man is innocent until proved guilty.

PRISONER'S NAME IS DEFENDED BY MANY; CLIMAX IN CASE NEAR

One after another in rapid succession men and women went to the stand Friday as character witnesses in the closing stages of the battle for the life of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan.

Startling disclosures inimical to Frank were promised by Solicitor Dorsey in rebuttal of the scores of witnesses called by the defense.

That Dewey Hewell, a 16-year-old girl who has been brought from the Home of the Good Shepherd in Cincinnati especially to testify against the young factory superintendent, will be one of the State's most important witnesses, was learned Friday after the girl's arrival in Atlanta, where she formerly lived.

Exactly the nature of her testimony was not revealed. Mrs. Mary Bohnefeld, police matron, who returned with the girl Friday noon, said that she had not talked with her charge in regard to the matter.

The Solicitor is known to have about twenty other witnesses whom he may call in the rebuttal.

Friday's witnesses were drawn from many walks in life. Most of them were well known in Atlanta. Some of them had met the defendant in a business way, others socially. Some had known him from their associations with him at the National Pencil Factory and at Montag Bros. Others formed their opinion of his character from knowing him in the work of the N'Nai Brith, of which Frank is the president.

Persons Who Knew Him at Home Called.

Previous days had introduced men who had known him in his college days at Pratt Institute and Cornell University and, later at his home in Brooklyn. Friday narrowed the character witnesses down to those who had known him during the five years he had been in Atlanta.

If numbers count for anything, Frank's case will be helped by the number and character of people who have been called to swear to his good character up to the time of the tragedy of April 26. The court attaches were kept busy directing the witnesses into the courtroom. Few of them were cross-questioned. The majority were asked only the formal questions as to their acquaintance with Frank and their knowledge of his character and were then excused.

Solicitor Dorsey for the most part seemed content until the time when he should be able to call his own witnesses in rebuttal. He questioned a few of Frank's acquaintances briefly to determine exactly the ground they had for their conviction of the defendant's good character, but seldom went further than that.

Defense Near End of Case.

When court reconvened in the afternoon Attorneys Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold announced that the defense probably would not rest until some time Saturday, although there remained a possibility that they would close their case with the statement of Frank Friday afternoon.

The State, if the defense rests Saturday noon, will finish with its rebuttal Monday night or Tuesday forenoon, it is expected.

One of the character witnesses, Ray Bauer, went through a severe grilling at the hands of Solicitor Dorsey. After he had testified to the general good character of Frank, he told Attorney Arnold that he had been at the pencil factory on Saturday afternoons last January, times when Frank was said to have had women in his office.

Solicitor Dorsey inquired of the witness how he happened to be sure of the days he was at the factory and the time in the afternoon when he visited there. Bauer said there were special reasons why he recalled the time on the first occasion in January, but could not give an explanation that satisfied the Solicitor about the other times he was there.

Girl Witness Closely Guarded.

The Hewell girl formerly lived in Atlanta before her commitment to the reform institution in Cincinnati. Chief Beavers stated shortly after the arrival of the girl that he does not know what he rtestimony will be. He intimated that the girl's connection with the case had developed since the trial began, and that the Solicitor is the only person who knows just what she will testify. Mrs. Bohnefeld also denied knowledge of what the girl's evidence is to be, declaring that during the trip from Atlanta to Cincinnati the Frank trial was not mentioned.

The Hewell girl was taken to the matron's ward at police headquarters immediately upon her arrival in the city, and will be kept there until she is called to the witnesse stand. Chief Beavers has issued orders that no one is to be allowed to se her but himslf and Mrs. Bohnefeld.

As the last witnesses were being called by the defense, Frank, his wife and his mother viewed the proceedings with the same calmness that has marked their demeanor since the trial began, with the exception of the outburst of the mother two days before. On Friday she looked steadfastly downward and slightly toward the judge's bench as though she might be having some difficulty in maintaining her attitude of confidence and calmness.

Likely Not to Call Mincey.

As the defense neared the close of its case, the probability of the calling of W. H. Mincey diminished. Mincey is the insurance solicitor who swore that he talked to Conley the afternoon of the murder of Mary Phagan, and that Conley boasted to him of killing a girl. The attorneys for Frank would not announce definitely their intentions in respect to Mincey or with what credence they looked upon his story.

Solicitor Dorsey brought before the jury for the first time, Friday the intimation that Frank might have sought to have disguised his handwriting when he was asked to write the test notes by the police and detectives.

M. O. Nix, a credit man at Montag Bros., was called to the stand to identify Frank's handwriting on the financial sheet. When Dorsey took the witness over for cross-examination he showed photographic copies of the notes Frank wrote and asked Nix if it was Frank's writing. The witness was unable to say. The Solicitor did not suggest any motive in disguising his hand.

The Solicitor endeavored to get Joseph Stelker, one of the factory foremen, to testify that Frank did not go in to view the body of Mary Phagan when he was taken down to identify the girl. Stelker testified for the defense that some of the red varnish used in the factory made stains very much like the supposed blood spots found on the factory floor.

The defense continued calling character witnesses at intervals throughout the forenoon. None was cross-questioned yesterday and all said Frank's character was good.

When the case was resumed Friday it was very problematical when the defense would finish. According to Luther Rosser, the defense may rest before evening with Leo Frank having told his story on the stand, but Reuben Arnold was of the opinion that the defense still would be putting in evidence to-morrow.

Frank's statement on the stand unquestionably will be one of the striking features of the trial. He has studied the State's case carefully, and it is said will not content himself with merely denying his guilt and explaining his movements on the fatal day, but will go somewhat into what he believes are the weaknesses of the State's chain of circumstances.

According to Frank's friends, the prisoner has been anxious for his attorneys to allow him to be cross-questioned, but they have doubted the wisdom of allowing him to go through the ordeal after the strain of the last few months.

Dr. J. E. Summerfield, No. 309 Washington street, who said he had lived in Atlanta for nineteen years and F. Schiff, No. 38 Fair street, who has lived here for fifty years, were the first witnesses called Friday and both responded favorably to the usual questions about Frank's character put by Attorney Arnold.

No attempt at cross-examination was made by Solicitor Dorsey. The State had an equally imposing army of witnesses—most of them women—ready to go on the stand in rebuttal of the evidence upholding the prisoner's character.

A curious problem will arise when they are summoned. The State can only ask its witnesses as to the general character of the defendant, just as the defense has done, and it will be up to the defense to ask about particular incidents on the cross-examination or rest content with allowing the opinions of the State's witnesses to go unchallenged. In that event it would be merely one group saying Frank's character is good against another saying it is bad, with the jury to decide which it prefers to believe.

Another Former Office Boy Called.

B. J. Nix, of Marietta, an office boy for the National Pencil Company from April to October, 1912, was the third witness of the morning.

Q. What days were you off?—A. I was off nearly every Saturday until September.

Q. What time did you leave on the Saturdays you worked?—A. Usually I worked until 4 or 6 o'clock.

Q. Do you recall missing any Saturdays when you were supposed to work?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever know Frank to have any women there drinking with him?—A. No.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. When they were working on that building on Forsyth street, what time did you leave?—A. About 4 o'clock.

Q. You don't know whether Frank had those women there when you were off or not, do you?—A. No.

The witness was excused and R. D. Greenfield was called.

Q. Are you one of the owners of the Venable Building in which the pencil company has its factory?—A. Yes.

Q. Who leased it?—A. Montag Bros., for a period of ten years.

Q. Do you know where the metal room is?—A. No.

Q. Where is the Clark Woodenware Company?—A. They occupied part of the building known as No. 37 Forsyth street.

Q. Since Montags have had that building has any new flooring been put down?—A. No.

Q. Do you know Leo M. Frank?—A. Yes.

Q. Is his character good or bad?—A. It is very good.

Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Are you closely connected with the defendant?—A. As landlord and tenant.

Q. Did you contribute to the fund for Frank's defense?—A. No.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. Have you ever heard of any such fund?—A. No.

Arnold, aside, said:

"I wish there was one."

Montag's Credit Man on Stand.

The witness was excused and N. O. Nix, credit man for Montag Brothers, was called to the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Have you come in contact with the handwriting of Leo Frank?—A. Yes, I saw many of his reports to Montag Brothers.

Q. Have you a fairly good acquaintance with him?—A. Yes, fairly good.

Mr. Arnold showed the witness a number of financial sheets of the National Pencil Company, including the one of April 26.

Q. Whose handwriting were these made in?—A. All are in the handwriting of Mr. Frank.

Q. Whose handwriting is that below those orders?—A. Miss Hattie Hall, our stenographer.

Q. Did you employ her?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know anything about her getting a raise in salary recently?—A. Yes, I gave her one August 1.

Q. Why?—A. Because I promised it to her when she first came to work.

The witness identified Frank's handwriting on requisitions said to have been made out April 26.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. How do you know it was Frank's handwriting on those slips and reports?—A. By these reports coming to me.

Q. You never did see him write one of these, did you?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see him write?—A. Yes.

Q. Doesn't this order show that it came in on April 22?—A. Yes.

Q. They would not have waited until April 26 to make a requisition for it, would they?

Arnold objected and Judge Roan sustained him.

Q. Are you the brother of the office boy who has just testified?—A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been with Montag Brothers?—A. Seven or eight years.

Q. Whose handwriting is this (the witness was handed the phtograph of a letter)?—A. I can not say. It looks something like Mr. Frank's.

Q. Won't you say whether it is or is not?—A. I can not say.

Q. Then how can you identify that other handwriting?—A. The other is mostly figures. It is different from this.

Unable to Identify Frank's Writing.

Q. Will you say this is not Frank's handwriting?—A. I can not identify this writing.

Q. Give the jury some reason.—A. The writing of Frank's which I have seen has been mostly figures.

The photograph which Dorsey showed the witness was of the note which Frank wrote to the police for comparison with the murder notes found beside the body of Mary Phagan.

On redirect examination the witness said he was not familiar with Frank's style of letter writing. The witness was excused and Joseph Stelker, in charge of the polishing and varnishing department at the pencil factory, was called to the stand. Arnold examined him.

Q. Did you see the blood spots which Barrett found?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see the white stuff over these spots?—A. Yes; it looked like it might have been a substance we used on the machine, or face powder.

Q. Is there any red varnish used in the factory? If so, how would it compare with this?—A. Some varnish looks like blood.

Q. Do you know what that substance was?—A. I do not.

Q. Would it have been possible for the red varnish to have been splashed out of a bottle to this point?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see these spots on the floor?—A. Yes, all the time.

Q. You never would have noticed

Girl's Testimony Mainstay Of Defense Alibi for Frank

In the presentation of its alibi for Leo M. Frank, the defense probably accomplished more Thursday than it had in all of previous time since the prosecution rested its case. Frank's lawyers had promised that they would show where Frank was practically every minute on the day the murder of little Mary Phagan was committed and would demonstrate that it would have been impossible to carry out the disposal of the slain girl's body and the writing of the notes as the negro, Jim Conley, described them.

If their alibi witnesses are to be believed, the lawyers appear to have fairly well accomplished this. On the credibility of one young witness, pretty Helen Curran, of No. 160 Ashby street, the whole alibi may stand or fall. She could, of course, be proved mistaken in her statement that she saw Frank at 1:10 o'clock standing at Jacobs' Pharmacy, Whitehall and Alabama streets, awaiting a car home from the factory on the afternoon of the murder, and the remainder of the alibi witnesses remain unimpeached, but it would serve to weaken the alibi materially.

Apparently Disinterested.

She is at once the most important and the most disinterested of the witnesses who have testified to seeing Frank immediately after the State says the crime was committed. If Frank was at Whitehall and Alabama streets at 1:10 o'clock, it would have been almost beyond human possibility for him to have taken part in the disposal of the girl's body, which Conley said was undertaken at 12:56 and finished about 1:30, together with the writing of the notes in Frank's office.

Frank's father-in-law and mother-in-law testified that he arrived home that day about 1:20 o'clock, but their testimony, because they are most vitally interested in the outcome of the case from their ties of relationship, will in all probability have far less weight with the jurors than the apparently straightforward statement of the girl.

The establishing of the alibi for Frank, which was begun early in the week through the testimony of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Selig, was practically completed Thursday, although there were several more witnesses to be called on Friday who had seen him the day of the crime.

Times in the Alibi.

Thursday's testimony began with the time he went to Montag Bros., Nelson and Forsyth streets, Saturday forenoon. Sig Montag, one of the firm and also treasurer of the National Pencil Company, testified that Frank came to his plant about 10 o'clock and left about 11.

Miss Corinthia Hall, Mrs. Emma Freeman, Miss Hattie Hall, Alonzo Mann and others had testified to seeing him in the factory between 11 o'clock and noon. Lemmie Quinn, metal department foreman, the day before declared that he visited Frank in his office at 12:20 o'clock. Mrs. Arthur White, a witness for the State, saw him in his office at 12:30. He went to the fourth floor at 12:50, according to Mrs. White, Harry Denham and Arthur White.

This brought the defense down to the time someone saw him after he left the factory.

Miss Curran was called to the stand and declared she saw the factory superintendent at 1:10 at Whitehall and Alabama streets apparently waiting for a street car. This made an interval of but eighteen minutes from the time he was seen by the three persons on the fourth floor of the factory, allowing two minutes for him to walk to his car, and an interval of but twelve minutes from the time that Conley said they started to carry the body to the basement.

Eight of the twelve minutes were spent by Conley in a closet in Frank's office, according to the negro's testimony. Of the remaining four, part were occupied in disposing of the body and part in writing the notes.

Witness Who Helped Build Alibi.

Mrs. Albert P. Levy, No. 69 East Georgia avenue, swore she saw Frank get off a car at about 1:20 o'clock and walk to the Selig home, No. 68 East Georgia avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Selig already had testified he arrived home at 1:20 and ate luncheon.

Mrs. M. G. Michael, of Athens, Ga., said she saw Frank at about 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. C. Wolfsheimer, No. 387 Washington street, where she was visiting. She said he walked on to Glenn street and caught his car for town.

Jerome Michael, son of the former witness, saw Frank at the same time.

Mrs. Wolfsheimer was another witness who saw Frank just before he caught his car. She said he was not nervous and bore no scratches or other marks.

Julian Loeb, No. 380 Washington street, said that from across the street he saw Frank stop at No. 387 Washington and then go on to his car.

J. C. Loeb, No. 445 Washington street, testified that he caught the Washington street car for town at Georgia avenue at about 2 o'clock. Frank got on, he said, at Glenn street. The car was stalled near the Capitol, and Frank, according to Loeb, got off the car and walked down Hunter street toward town.

Miss Rebecca Carson, a forelady on the fourth floor at the pencil factory, told the jury that she saw Frank in front of Rich Bros. between 2:20 and 2:25 and that she saw him going into Jacobs' Pharmacy at about 2:50.

Harry Denham, who was in the factory the day of the murder, testified that Frank came to the fourth floor about 3 o'clock and told him and Arthur White they could leave.

Emil Selig and Minola McKnight had testified previously that Frank came home Saturday night about 6:30.

Mrs. M. Marcus, Mrs. A. E. Marcus, M. J. Goldstein and others told of seeing Frank at home Saturday evening. They said there was nothing unusual in his demeanor and that he bore no scratches or marks of any sort. He was reading a magazine, they said, and laughed heartily over a story in regard to a baseball umpire. They testified that he retired about 1:30 o'clock.

The defense also made good its promise that it would not hesitate to put Frank's character in issue. Following its action of the day before, when the first of the character witnesses were put on the stand, nearly a score of Frank's acquaintances, some of them his classmates and instructors at Pratt Institute and Cornell University, were called to testify to Frank's good character.

These witnesses for the most part were excused without cross-examination. Prominent citizens of Atlanta also declared Frank to be of good character. Among these witnesses were Rabbi David Marx, V. H. Krieghaber, Milton Klein and R. A. Sohn.

A peculiar situation arose through the calling of Max F. Goldstein and Arthur Heyman as character witnesses by the defense. Goldstein is a law partner of Frank A. Hooper and Heyman of Solicitor Dorsey, the two attorneys who are prosecuting Frank.

Says Conley Told Her He Was Drunk

One of the startling statements of the day came from Miss Rebecca Carson. She declared Conley had sworn to her that he was not in the factory the day of the murder—in fact, that he was so drunk he did not know where he was or what he did.

Solicitor Dorsey obtained an admission from J. R. Leach that cars frequently run ahead of time on practically all lines. This serves to lessen in value the testimony of the crew of the car on which Mary Phagan came to town. They swore they never ran ahead of time and that the Phagan girl could not have arrived in town before 12:07 o'clock the day she was slain.

Judge Roan threatened Thursday afternoon to clear the courtroom if disorder did not cease. V. H. Krieghaber was on the stand testifying to the character of Frank when laughter at some of the testimony disturbed the courtroom.

Attorney Arnold protested.

"This is not a side show," he said. "Must we put up with such disorder?"

"Find the man that laughed and put him out, ordered the judge. "If there is any further disorder, no one will be admitted to the trial to-morrow."

Fifteen Tons of Bad Chicken Confiscated

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—The Government to-day was holding 32,000 pounds of cold storage chicken and 66 bottles of imitation champagne. Libels ordering the seizure were issued after the poultry was traced from Kansas City to Philadelphia and back to Chicago.

The report of a Government inspector said 95 per cent of the fowls were diseased and unfit for food. The imitation champagne was labeled "Extra Dry Champain."

DOZENS OF WITNESSES TELL OF LEO FRANK'S GOOD STANDING

Defense Paves Way for Placing the Accused Superintendent on the Stand

this particular spot if Christopher Columbus Barrett had not pointed it out to you?—A. I don't think I would.

Q. Were you at the undertaking establishment Sunday afternoon?—A. Yes.

Q. What impression were you and Frank under about the Coroner's inquest?

Dorsey objected and was sustained.

Q. Do you know whether Frank saw the body of little Mary Phagan?—A. No.

Q. Did you understand the Coroner's inquest was to be held there?—A. I heard it was there.

The witness was offered as a character witness and declared that Frank's character was good. He further said that Jim Conley's character was bad and that he would not believe the negro under oath.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. What wages do you get?—A. $20 a week.

Q. How long have you been getting that?—A. A year and a half.

Q. Where are you from?—A. New York.

Q. Did you know Frank there?—A. No.

Q. Whom did you discuss Conley's character with?—A. No one.

Q. Then you don't mean to tell me that you are giving just an opinion?—A. I was talking about what he had done to me.

"Then I move to rule it out," said Dorsey. "It is nothing but this man's personal opinion."

Judge Roan—I sustain you under those circumstances.

Q. Did you ever hear anyone say anything about Conley's character?—A. I heard he was in the chaingang.

Q. Who said it?—A. I saw him myself.

Q. Frank took him back when he came out of the chaingang, didn't he?—A. Don't you know that a negro is much better when he comes out of the chaingang than he was before?

Q. Well, what did Conley do to you?—A. I sent him out for 25 cents' worth of beer, and when he brought it back it was half water. I said, "Didn't you put water in here?" and he said, "No; I wouldn't do anything like that."

Q. How do you know he put water in the beer?—A. By the taste.

Q. When was this?—A. Last summer.

Q. What time was it?—A. At 10:30.

Q. How do you know the time? Was it your habit to get that bucket full every day at this time?—A. Yes.

Q. What did you do with this beer?—A. I threw it out.

Q. Did you send him again?—A. No.

Q. What time did Frank come to the undertaker's?—A. A little after 2 o'clock.

Q. How was he dressed?—A. In a blue or brown suit.

Q. Who came with Frank?—A. He came alone.

Q. How big was the room in which the body was?—Fifteen by fifteen.

Q. It was a great big room?—A. Not very.

Q. What kind of a room?—A. I never noticed it. I just looked at the body and walked out.

Q. How was the door located?—A. On the right side of the passageway.

Q. How far did you go into this room?—A. Just to the door.

Q. Describe the body?—One eye was badly discolored. There was a scar on the right of the face. The hair was hanging loose.

Q. Well, go on.—A. I didn't look so close.

Q. Who suggested you going to look at the body?—A. Fritz Yankee.

Q. Didn't you say a while ago that you sat there two minutes and got up and looked at the body, and that Frank arrived three minutes later?—A. Yes.

Q. Well, explain that to the jury.—A. I don't know what time it was, I was so nervous. It might have been twenty minutes.

Q. How long did it take you to get yourself together?—A. I haven't gotten myself together yet.

Q. When did Frank go in to view the body?—A. Later.

Q. How much later?—A. It might have been twenty minutes.

Q. How far did you have to go back to see the body?—A. You could stand in the door.

Q. Did the seeing of that body have any effect on Frank's appearance?—A. No, he looked just like he does now.

Q. You don't know whether Frank went into that room or not?—A. No.

Q. You felt nauseated?—A. Yes.

Went to Morgue To See Bruises.

Q. Was there anybody connected with the factory who went back to the undertaking establishment with Frank?—A. No.

Q. Can you name anyone else from the factory who was there?—A. Lemmie Quinn.

Q. Now, why did you go there?—A. I wanted to see who she was.

Q. Didn't you know it was Mary Phagan?—A. I heard it when I got there.

Q. Well, why did you go there when it would tear you all to pieces?—A. I wanted to see the bruises.

Arnold—He has already gone into that.

Dorsey—Your honor, I want to test this witness' recollection.

Arnold's objection was sustained, and he took the witness.

Q. You are a German, aren't you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You like to drink your beer, don't you?—A. Yes.

Q. You sent Jim Conley after beer and he brought it back half water, didn't he?—A. Yes, and I asked him if he had put his black mouth where a white man was to drink. He said no, and I cussed him.

The witness was excused and P. D. McCorley, of No. 24 Hampton street, who has charge of the cotton seed oil business of M. Frank, the wealthy uncle of Leo M. Frank, was placed on the stand.

McCorley testified to Frank's character as being good.

Mrs. M. W. Meyer, followed McCorley, and said she had known Leo Frank for five years and that his character was good.

Mrs. David Marx, No. 354 Washington street, the wife of Rabbi Marx, followed Mrs. Meyer. Mrs. Marx said that Frank's character was very good.

Mrs. Arthur I. Harris, A. L. Guthman, No. 479 Washington street, and M. S. Rice, of No. 14 Washington street, followed each other in rapid succession on the witness stand as character witnesses for Frank. They each declared that they knew the defendant very well, and that his character was good.

Mrs. B. Glogowski, who has a boarding house at No. 499 Washington street, testified that Frank boarded with her for several months prior to his marriage and that his character was very good.

Mrs. J. E. Summerfield, a physician; Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Moss, Mrs. Joseph G. Brown, William Bauer, No. 52 Washington street; Miss Helen Loeb and Emil Dittler took the stand as character witnesses in behalf of Frank.

E. E. Fitzpatrick, of 105 Sinclair avenue, Inman Park, foreman of the shipping department of Montag Bros., testified that he had known Frank for several years, and that his character was good.

Saw Frank At Montag's.

J. C. Matthews, a clerk at Montag Brothers, residing at No. 52 Sinclair avenue, was called to the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Do you recall Memorial Day?—A. Yes.

Q. Where were you?—A. At Montag's.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank?—A. Yes, while I was there.

Q. Do you know the time?—A. No.

The witness also testified as to Frank's good character. He was then excused and Alfred Fox, a furniture manufacturer, was called. He testified as a character witness in behalf of Frank.

Mrs. Aloph Montag was the next character witness. She declared she had known Frank for some time and that his character was very good. Dorsey cross-examined her.

Q. When did you hear Frank's character discussed?—A. I have heard women, as well as my husband, speak of what a fine gentleman he was.

The witness was excused and F. F. Hilburn, No. 22 Inman street, West End, was called. He testified in Frank's behalf as a character witness. When asked if he knew Frank's general character, the witness said: "I will have to answer no. I only know him in a business way."

Dorsey—I object, your honor. He is not acquainted with the general character of the defendant.

Judge Roan—The witness does not qualify.

The witness was excused and Mrs. Martin May, Julian Boehm, No. 332 Myrtle street; M. H. Silverman, a lawyer; Mrs. Mollie Rosenberg, a trained nurse; Mrs. M. A. Sterne, Charles Adler, Mrs. R. A. Sonn, wife of the superintendent of the Hebrew Orphans' Home; O. J. Jones, of West End, an employee of Montag Brothers; Mrs. Dan Klein, Nathan Copeland, an attorney, and Miss Ray Klein testified in rapid succession as to Frank's good character.

Hadn't Heard of Immorality at Factory.

L. Finstein testified that he had been in Frank's employ for more than a year and that his general character was good. M. J. Barnard, of the Atlas Paper Company, testified also as to Frank's good character. Barnard declared that he had never heard of any immoral actions within the pencil factory.

Mrs. John O. Parmelee, No. 417 Spring street, the wife of a stockholder in the pencil company, said Frank's character and reputation were excellent. Dorsey cross-examined her.

Q. How many times have you seen Frank?—A. I have known him about four years. I saw him when I went to the factory with my husband about four years ago.

Q. How many times have you seen him since?—A. I saw him on the street and visited him in jail.

Q. Who ever discussed him with you?—A. I am a member of the board of directors of the Sheltering Arms. In that way I have heard of Mr. Frank and I have also heard a number of Jewish people speak highly of him.

The witness was excused.

Jacob Fox, manager of the children's department of Eiseman's, next took the stand and said he had boarded at the same place with Frank and testified as to Frank's good character.

Marcus Loeb, a manufacturer, testified next to Frank's good character.

Roy Bauer, a youth, who formerly worked at the pencil factory, was the next witness. Arnold questioned him.

Went to Plant Often on Saturdays.

Q. Have you ever worked at the National Pencil Company with Mr. Frank on Saturday?—A. Yes; during the summers of 1909 and 1910.

Q. Have you worked there in the last twelve months?—A. No.

Q. Have you been there since you quit working there?—A. During the Ohio flood I went there often on Saturdays.

Q. Did you find anybody there?—A. Mr. Holloway, Mr. Darley and Mrs. Frank.

Q. Did you ever see any women there?—A. No.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. You saw Mr. Schiff there?—A. Until January. He was in the flood district then and I went there to find whether there was any news of him.

Q. Do you remember the time?—A. Yes; it was about 3 o'clock the first Saturday.

Q. How do you know?—A. I just bathed and dressed.

Q. What time was it then?—A. About 2 o'clock.

Q. Did you see the office boy that Saturday?—A. Yes.

Q. Who else?—A. Mr. Frank.

Q. What time did you leave?—A. About 4 o'clock.

Q. Do you recall the conversation while you were there?—A. No.

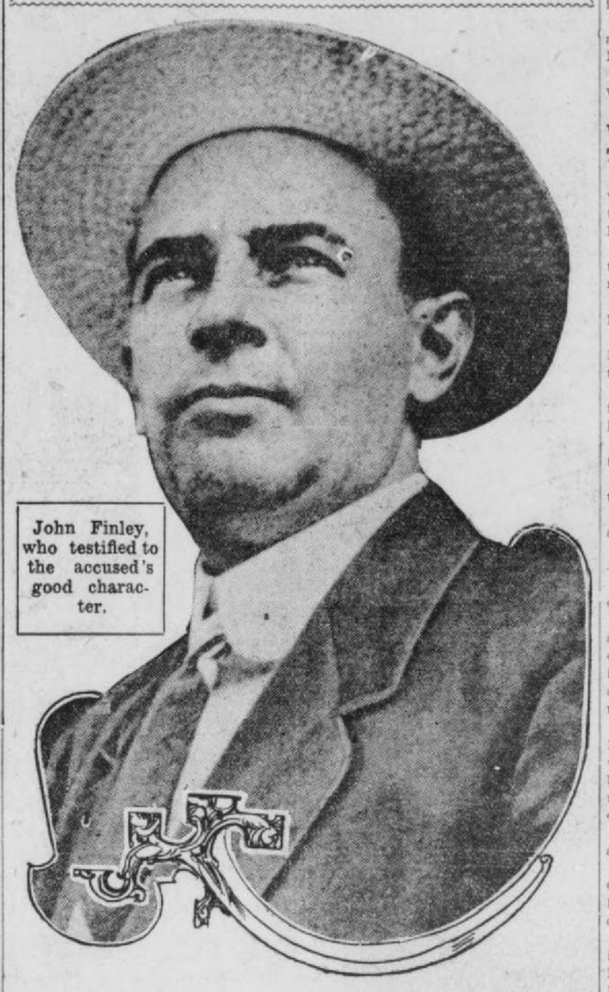

Q. Did you go there often?—A. I made a practice of going there every Saturday and talking to them.

Q. Most of the time that particular Saturday was Frank working?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you talk to him while he was working?—A. Not much.

Court then adjourned until 2 o'clock.

Mrs. George Brown Given Pen That Made Mothers' Bill a Law

Mrs. George Brown, wife of the doctor who has been working hard in behalf of reform measures in the Legislature, received her reward for her vigorous fight for the mothers' custody bill Friday morning when Governor Slaton presented her with the pen with which he signed the bill.

Mrs. Brown was visibly affected when she walked into the Governor's private office. She carried the "precious" bill giving mothers equal rights to children in her own hands, and in person she presented it to the Governor to sign.

"Governor, just one request," she said. "Please sign this bill and thereby help the mothers."

The Governor scanned the bill for a moment, then reached for the pen which Mrs. Brown handed him.

"There, it's a law," said the Governor as he put the finishing touches on his signature.

WHAT 'THEY SAY' WON'T HURT LEO FRANK; STATE MUST 'PROVE' DEPRAVITY

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

There is nothing apparently so plain to outside observation as character—just character—and there is, strange to say, nothing so difficult at times to prove.

"They say" and "but" are the two most notorious scandalmongers in the universe—"they say" so and so; and he or she is all right, "but!"

Character, upon which so much depends in this world, upon which civilization itself and decency and right is founded, is, nevertheless, the most elusive of all things when it comes right down to brass tacks of proving it beyond the shadow of a doubt.

Human nature, too, for some curious and vague reason, seems rather to relish the downfall of character and the undermining of reputation—and that, moreover, the while it is vehemently and rather piously assuring itself that it does nothing of the kind!

Kind words travel on leaden feet—gossip gallops in seven-league boots!

Pessimist?

Not at all—just truthimist, that's all!

You stop me to tell me that Jones is the best man you ever knew, that his wife loves him immensely and that his children and all the neighbors' children fairly dote upon him, and I am mildly, but not rampantly, interested. I am a pretty good fellow myself, you know, and so are you—who are telling me about Jones—and while I am glad that Jones is a fine fellow—like I am and like you are—I can not see why I should throw any fits about it.

And I—being the average sort of fellow, really—proceed not to throw any fits whatever in re the good Jones.

BUT——

Scandal? That's Different.

You stop me and tell me Jones is a grafter, despite his churchgoing proclivities, and that, besides, he turns Jack habitually from the bottom of the deck—and up go my hands in holy horror!

Sakes alive! I always DID think there was SOMETHING out of [illegible]ck with Jones—and so forth and so on!

And you can bet your sweet life I stop to listen while you unwind all "they say" of Jones, and how he's a good fellow, "but!"

If Jones is pulling his freight uphill, Jones interests me indifferently in a way—but if Jones and his freight are involuntarily on the toboggan, it's me to stand along the edge of the slideway and watch the fun and make note of the wreckage at the bottom!

I feel sorry for Jones—just as I used to feel sorry always for the teacher beneath whom I had dexterously set up a pin, when said teacher innocently sat down upon it. And after Jones has gone to smash down the old toboggan, I may experience an attack of sorrow for Jones, and next Sunday when I go to church it may so happen that I even pray for Jones—after I have prayed carefully for myself!

Now these broken observations are not altruistic, of course—they may be out of order, and all that.

Preface to Character Sketch.

They are submitted merely by way of prefacing the citation just here of an ancient quat! ... running thuswise:

"There's so much good in the worst of us,
And so much bad in the best of us,
That it hardly behooves any of us
To talk about the rest of us."

Now, then, having brought ourselves to the point where we can give even such persons as Frank and Conley the benefit of the doubt in an argument adverse to the character of either—you know, good and well, gentle reader, we always hand ourselves ALL the doubts, and some!—let us proceed in order to a consideration of the status of the Frank case involved in the character or lack of character in the defendant.

Contemplating the matter of Frank's character as a thing apart from the murder charge against him, the attack upon it thus far dwells within Conley, and Conley's isolated word.

Conley's charge against Leo Frank has not been corroborated by one witness worthy of belief—and it has not been corroborated even by that one in anything save relatively inconsequential detail.

One just as well believe what "they say" and ask no questions, as to believe anything such persons as Dalton say—and probably better.

I am sure I do not know whether Frank's character is good or bad. In respect of a conclusion either way, I am "from Missouri."

My mind is entirely open as to that—and I hope to keep it so until the last precinct has been heard from.

Issues Challenge to State.

I hope I shall know the TRUTH of the matter eventually—I should like to know, beyond a reasonable doubt. The defense has put Frank's character in issue. It thereby challenges the State to break it down, if the State can.

If the State can break it down, it should proceed to the breaking with all the vigor it fairly and honorably can command. If Frank is a wolf in sheep's clothing, the public is entitled to know it, and it is the duty of the Solicitor General to make it known, if he can.

A wolf in sheep's clothing is a highly undesirable and dangerous thing to have at large in any peaceful, orderly and law-abiding community.

Far from quarreling with the Solicitor General for showing that Frank is a depraved character, I for one shall thank him if he makes his charge unmistakably plain. Maybe he can make it plain, and maybe he can not. He hasn't had his opportunity yet, and I am willing to be patient as he goes forward.

The defense is seeking to establish Frank's good character by the testimony of many admittedly good citizens. To the best of their knowledge and belief these good people are speaking the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

Hard to Back Up "the Daltons."

People generally will be inclined to accept their statements as conclusive, unless the evidence combating the same is overwhelming.

It isn't going to do, I think, for the State to bring more Daltons into the case for the purpose of corroborating Conley. The trouble about the Daltons as corroborators is that one never can find anybody to corroborate the Daltons—as sadly in need of corroborating, apparently, as even the Conleys.

Frank, by putting his character in evidence, has gained some ground in public estimation, I believe. At least, this action seems to show that he is willing to risk his all on the contention that the State can find nothing vile in him, save in so far as the word of Conley can establish such an allegation.

Conley is not to be corroborated by innuendo, by suggestion, or by roundabout methods.

He must be corroborated by people of some degree of decency and standing themselves, or not very many people will take unquestioned the sinister charge of the negro.

One Good Witness a Peril.

If the State comes forward, after Frank has made his showing as to good character, with a number of witnesses that the defense is able to impeach beyond question, as fast as they are introduced, I do not believe Frank will suffer irreparable injury from the Conley charge, in the long run.

On the contrary, if the State comes forward with even so few as one reputable and believable witness as to Frank's evil character, there will remain in the minds of the jury, I suspect, an impression most dangerously unfavorable to the defendant.

One honorable and upright witness against Frank in the matter of his character can do him far greater harm than a hundred impeachable witnesses.

The State, having been confronted with the issue of Frank's character—challenged in the gate, so to speak—must make brave, categorial, and complete answer, or the State's case necessarily will be weakened markedly and, perhaps, fatally.

I believe the public, however prone to rush to conclusions primarily, and to make up its mind upon surface indications all too readily at times, nevertheless is fair and just in the end.

I think it likely there are few extremists either way—for or against Frank—who really wish to see him convicted or acquitted, regardless.

I think it is altogether likely, indeed, that hundreds of people, even inclined to side against Frank now, will gather a measure of satisfaction eventually, if he comes through the fire unscorched.

Jumping at Conclusions.

So the reader will observe that the things I said in the beginning of this article, like Bill Nye's definition of classical music, are not so bad as they sound. They referred merely to the forming of opinion upon incompleted and disconnected evidence, brought to light one way or another in the very beginning of shocking stories.

Evil is, and always has been, in a way more entertaining to man than goodness—otherwise, Mother Eve never would have bitten the apple, and so on.

The defense has thrown a mighty challenge to the State in tendering Leo Frank's character as an issue—particularly in that the defense alone could do that.

Unless the State meets that issue fairly and squarely, candidly and without quibble or faltering, Frank must profit immensely by the move.

If, on the other hand, the State does meet the issue successfully and completely, Frank's case is undone, and Frank is lost.

ATLANTAN DEAD IN WEST POINT ROUTE CRASH

Hugh W. Pennington Is Killed When Freight Train Is Derailed at Hogansville, Ga.

Hugh W. Pennington, No. 165 South Pryor street, was killed when a through freight on the Atlanta and West Point Railroad between Atlanta and Montgomery was ditched at Hogansville, Ga., early Friday morning.

According to officials of the road, the wreck was caused by a spreading of the rails. Eleven cars of merchandise and three cars of baggage were derailed, the engine remaining on the track. None of the train crew was injured.

As a result of the wreck passenger trains on the Atlanta and West Point are being detoured over the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic by way of Union City and LaGrange, Ga.

SLATON DELUGED WITH BILLS AS SESSION ENDS

Tax Reform Act Only Important Measure Signed—Assembly Musically Adjourns.

With the Legislature adjourned after 50 days of hard work, in which some of the best laws in the history of the State were enacted, the work of transmitting the measures to Governor Slaton for his signature will begin to-day, and the Executive Office will be swamped with the bills. More than 100 have already been engrossed and sent to the Governor, but there still remain between 200 and 300 local and general bills.

Of the 100 or more that are already in the Governor's office, but one of general importance has been signed. That is the tax reform bill, which was signed by the Governor and became a law at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The pen with which Governor Slaton signed the measure that is expected to revolutionize the taxation system of the State was given to Representative Lipscomb, of Clarke, who introduced the original tax equalization bill, and who has been one of the reform leaders throughout the session.

Though the Governor has signed several local bills which Representatives and Senators wished to have become operative immediately, it is hardly probable that many of the general bills will receive his signature until next week, when they will all be in his office.

Adjourns at 10:12 o'Clock.

The Legislature adjourned shortly after 10 o'clock last night. Speaker Burwell brought his gavel down for the last time this year at 10:12 o'clock, and President Anderson, of the Senate, adjourned that body three minutes later. Two minutes after the gavel rang out the House was in the throes of song. Representative Blackburn climbed upon a seat and led the Representatives in singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Practically the only work the House had to do at the night session, which convened at 8 o'clock, was to wait for the Senate to send over bills that had already passed the House and which the upper branch desired to amend. The only changes of importance made in the measures were the following, all of which were concurred in by the House: Appropriating $7,500 to the Chemical Bureau of the Department of Agriculture, $15,000 to the Department of Entomology to fight the boll weevil, and a bill increasing the salary of the State Oil Inspector to $1,800. A bill appropriating $5,000 to the Department of Agriculture was killed, because the wording of the bill was vague.

During the wait on the Senate the House took a recess and the members proceeded to kill the time by putting on stunts that eclipsed the usual jollification with which sessions of the Legislature are brought to a close. Every member of the House was determined to have as much fun as he could, and witty speeches, mock attempts to rush through wild appropriations and gay singing was the order of the hour.

James Keeps Songs Going.

Representatives James of Gilmer, official "song-h'ister," kept the songs going, and was surrounded by a group of vocalists and near-vocalists all evening, singing all the old favorites and a few that were not so old. Henderson of Jones made speeches in every corner of the hall, and got along all right until he began one about this being the hour of the wild-eyed reformer. Olive of Richmond then moved that he be given a bale of hay, which was carried, amid much rejoicing, and Henderson was removed from the desk onto which he had climbed.

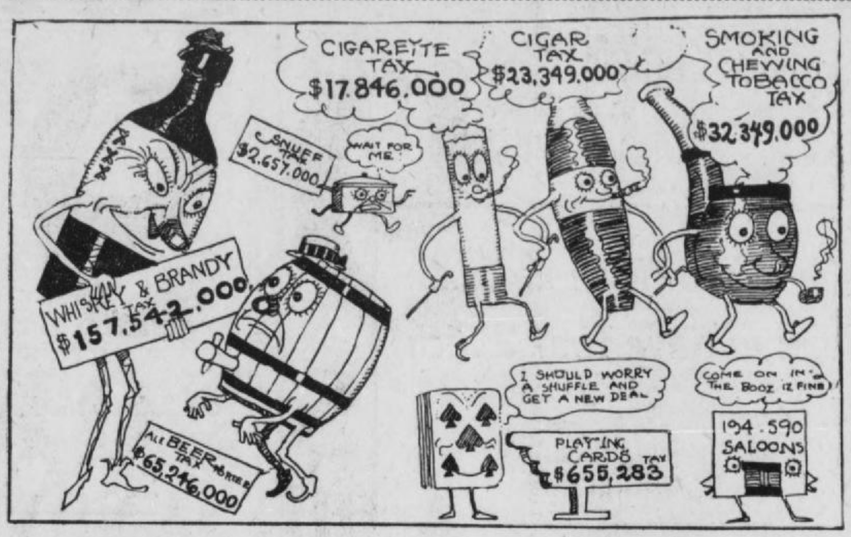

Representative Picquet of Richmond, the smallest man in the House, was called to the chair by the crowd, and interrupted a turkey trot which Greene of Houston and Smith of Fulton were doing down the middle aisle by recognizing Ed Wohlwender, of filibuster fame. Wohlwender brought down the House by jokingly moving that all prohibitionists be excluded from the hall.

Burwell Thanks Members.

Ennis of Baldwin jumped to his feet and gave it as his solemn opinion that the members were children. He therefore moved that $25,000 be appropriated to build a sanitarium to take care of them. Picquet declared the motion carried without putting the question. The fun continued for more than two hours, until the singers became hoarse and the speechmakers had used up their supply of words.

When the House convened at 9:30 o'clock, Speaker Burwell delivered a short address, in which he thanked the House for the honor it had conferred upon him, and expressed his appreciation of the work of each member. He declared that the people of Georgia should be proud of the membership of the House, and said this session had been productive of more remedial legislation than any he had seen in his ten years' legislative experience.

ROAN LEADS ALL IN JUDICIAL RACE

Even in Atlanta Sentiment Turns Toward Jurist of the Stone Mountain Circuit.

Notwithstanding the fact that several members of the Atlanta bar have committed themselves to "an Atlanta lawyer," unnamed, for the newly created Atlanta Superior Court judgeship, and that this movement is considered generally to be directed against Judge L. S. Roan as the probable appointee, the impression prevails that Governor Slaton unquestionably will name Judge Roan for the place.

Judge Roan, although nominally the judge of the Stone Mountain Circuit, has presided for several years as judge of the criminal division of the Atlanta Circuit, and has given very great satisfaction. Inasmuch as the new judgeship is to be a criminal judgeship, many members of the Atlanta bar think Judge Roan is the logical man for the honor, and they are backing him accordingly.

During his service as judge of the criminal division in Atlanta, he has tried many noted criminal cases—the Grace and the Appelbaum cases being two of the most noted—and his reputation for fairness and justice is well established.

Already a large number of Atlanta attorneys have indorsed Judge Roan to Governor Slaton, and it is thought more than likely that his appointment will be announced within a few days.

Doctor Gives Hope To Childless Women

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 15. — Hope for childless women was held out in a remarkable statement by Dr. Veronoff, of Nice, before the International Medical Congress. He said that in his experiments of transplanting vital organs of one animal to another he had enable a barren ewe to give birth to a lamb.

"I hold," he asserted, "that my experiments can be applied to human beings—indeed, it's easier to graft certain parts with human beings than with animals. The only thing necessary is affinity of the blood of the two persons of the same race—or better still, of one family.

Cleanest Faced Boy Falls From Grace

GARY, IND., Aug 16.—"Andy" Hat rack, the 13-year-old Italian boy who won the red necktie and world-wide fame in the clean-face contest in the Gary schools, has fallen from grace. Neither "Andy's" former shining face nor his bright necktie would be recognized since school let out for the summer vacation and Miss Laura Knaggs, his teacher, left Gary.

He has played all summer with other Italian boys, and his face and necktie resemble theirs.

John Drew Studied This Part 18 Years

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—John Drew, knowing his lines perfectly, appeared at the first rehearsal of "As You Like It" that Charles Frohman is to present shortly. Mr. Frohman asked Drew how long he had been studying the part.

"Eighteen years," he replied.

"What do you mean?" asked the manager.

"It was eighteen years ago that you first promised me the part of Benedict, and I began studying it then."

This Big Sum Went for Liquor, Tobacco and Cards, Says Government Report.

Uncle Sam collected $344,424,453 from vice during the year which ended June 30, according to figures just made public.

If you play a friendly game of cards, if you drink, if you smoke, if you chew or if you use snuff, you contributed to this enormous sum. This amount which wa scollected in internal revenue taxes, is the greatest in the history of the country.

The report submitted to Secretary McAdoor by William H. Osborne, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, shows that the heaviest tax was paid on whisky and brandy. The amount collected on the 143,200,000 gallons consumed during the fiscal year was $157,542,000. For the 65,246,000 barrels of beer, porter and ales, a tax of $65,246,000 was paid.

The 14,276,771,000 cigarettes which were smoked brought in $17,846,000 in taxes and $23,097,000 was collected on 7,699,038,000 cigars. The tax on the chewing and smoking of 404,363,000 pounds of tobacco was $32,349,000. Snuff users paid $2,657,000 on 33,209,000 pounds. During the year, 32,764,155 packs of cards were sold, an increase of 1,952,475. The tax was $655,283.

The report showed that the number of saloons decreased 21,554 to 194,590, despite the increased consumption of intoxicants.

10,000 Women Join Strike in Barcelona

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BARCELONA, SPAIN, Aug. 15.—The strike situation here is becoming revolutionary in character. Clashes between idle mobs and soldiers maintaining martial law are continuous. More than 300,000 men and women were idle to-day. Of this number it is estimated between 8,000 and 10,000 are women.

General Weyler, Military Governor of Catalonia, who is directing the soldiers, has prohibited mass meetings. But in spite of this strikers attempted to hold a meeting to protest against the despotic methods of Weyler.

'Cue for Light Men Cooked by Electricity

MACON, Aug. 15.—Barbecue cooked by electricity was served to-day to the 250 delegates from five Southern States attending the first annual convention of the Southeastern section of the National Electric Light Association. This is said to be the first time meats have been barbecued other than over a slow wood fire.

The electric light men will elect officers and choose the next place of meeting Saturday. Mr. Arkwright, of Atlanta, is in line for the presidency to succeed E. C. Deal, of Augusta. Birmingham, Atlanta and Savannah are seeking the next convention.

Cost of Living Up in Britain 14 Per Cent

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—Striking figures showing the increased cost of living are contained in a voluminous report issued by the British Board of Trade, according to which present prices are the highest in 25 years.

Retail prices of food have risen 14 per cent since 1900, while wages have increased only 3 per cent.

SLEW FRIEND TO GET AUTOMOBILE

Youth Confesses Mania to Own Car Led Him to Murder His Chum.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., Aug. 15.—After his first night's sleep since last Friday Gust Penman, son of a wealthy farmer, to-day told the Champaign County jail officials that he was ready to make a sworn confession of the murder of his chum, Harold A. Shaw. Penman was brought here last night from Danville, where he was caught by Amos Milholland, 80, a veteran of the Civil War and the Indian campaign in the West, who is a mail carrier and justice of the peace at Ridge Farm near Danville.

After a weak denial of his identity the young man, a nervous wreck, flayed by conscience, starved to the point of collapse and in high fever from exposure and fatigue, broke down and made a most extraordinary confession of his crime.

He killed his friend in a drunken delirium to get Shaw's automobile, he said.

Penman told how after he eluded the vigilantes who swarmed the countryside and had virtually made good his escape from the environs of the killing, his conscience would not let him carry out his plans to evade justice in a flight to South America.

SENATE CLOSES IN FIERY BURST OF ORATORY

Kea Reiterates Charges Against Anderson, but President Gets Vote of Thanks.

Weary from their efforts in the final all-day siege, but happy over the fact that the Senate calendar had been cleared of its most important measure, the appropriation bill, Georgia Senators at 10:15 o'clock Thursday night welcomed the last rap of the President's gavel which rang down the curtain on the 1913 session. The Speaker of the House preceded President Anderson just three minutes in the call for adjournment sine die.

The end in the Senate, where the appropriations bill with its $280,000 excess of disbursement over revenue, was pending, came after a day of hard work and a dash of excitement. During the morning every attempt was made to clean up the calendar which had become clogged at the last moment. The forenoon session was extended to 1:30 to get the "mother's custody" bill through, following the passage of the inheritance tax bill.

Excitement Begins.

Then came the first excitement. Senator Fred Kea, of the Sixteenth District, arose to a point of personal privilege to substantiate his charges against President Anderson, published exclusively in The Georgian. Never during the session has the Senate been the scene of such intense interest.

Senator McNeill, of the Twenty-second district, started the ball rolling when he got possession of the floor and bitterly denounced Senator Kea for his charges against the presiding officer of the Senate. He moved that the Senate extend a rising vote of thanks to President Anderson for his fair and excellent services. It was at this juncture that Senator Kea rose to his point of personal privilege.

Reiterates His Charges.

He charged President Anderson had deliberately blocked the passage of bills. He charged further that the Senate Rules Committee was the "whole cheese in the Senate, as sure as there was a God in high Heaven."

At the conclusion of the fiery speech the Senate extended to President Anderson a rising vote of thanks, Senator Kea alone voting in the negative.

As predicted in The Georgian on Thursday, the Senate receded from its action in cutting the House appropriation, thereby restoring the $28,000 excess of disbursements over revenues. This was in accordance with the Governor's wishes. The Senate also passed the amended bill allowing freight trains to run on Sunday and confirmed the nominations of John Hart as State Tax Collector.

Wilson Is not Guarded Safely at White House

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. — Major Richard Sylvester, Superintendent of Police, has learned that the president is not safely guarded at the White House.

The major made an unexpected visit and succeeded in getting into the White House and some distance down the main corridor before his presence was detected. Previously he had rambled through the White House grounds without sighting one of his men.

FORMER COUNTY CLERK DEAD.

VIDALIA.—J. D. Collins is dead at his home in Lyons, Toombs County. He was a native of Tattnall County and served several terms as Clerk of the Superior Court. He was about 65 years of age. Mr. Collins was the father of Judge E. C. Collins, of Reidsville, and leaves several other children.

ALABAMA PLANS TO GREET AUTO PATHFINDER

President of Good Roads Association Will Meet Trail Blazer Ferguson at State Line.

Another indication of the widespread interest in the campaign for an All-Southern transcontinental highway, which will be inaugurated by Hearst's Sunday American next Monday, was received in Atlanta Friday in the form of a communication from John Craft, president of the Alabama Good Roads Association, who will join Pathfinder Ferguson at the Alabama-Georgia line.

President Craft, who is known all over the country as a good roads booster, accompanied by State Highway Engineer Keller, will accompany Mr. Ferguson throughout Alabama.

Details Virtually Arranged.

Mr. Ferguson now has arranged virtually every detail of the trip. His big touring car has been repaired and made shipshape for the long journey, and instruments which will be used along the route have also been received and installed.

Plans for the parade, the official send-off next Monday, also are complete, and everyone is on the qui vive in anticipation.

In the line of march will be the Fire Chief, the Chief of Police, city officials, including Mayor Woodward, and other prominent citizens. If the weather man hands out a good brand of ozone next Monday, the people of Atlanta will be treated to one of the most unique parades in the history of the city.

Birmingham Plans Send-Off.

Mr. Ferguson, accompanied by his wife and two children and a special American man, will go direct to Anniston, Ala., and thence to Birmingham, the end of the first lap of the long journey. At Birmingham the party will be the recipients of a big send-off, led by The Birmingham News, one of the chain of newspapers promoting the monster project.

Leaving Birmingham, the party will proceed to Montgomery, thence to Mobile, New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, El Paso, San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco. Mr. Ferguson hopes to reach the Pacific Coast before October 1.

Gainesville Assists In Hookworm Fight

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 15.—Through the efforts of the health and sanitary committee of the Gainesville Chamber of Commerce the County Commissioners have set aside $100 for the expenses of the physician under the State Board of Health to visit the county in the fight being waged against the hookworm.

This is the Rockefeller Hookworm Association work.

Turkey Trot Leads To Jail in Louisiana

FRANKLIN, LA., Aug. 15.—At a meeting of the police jury an ordinance was passed making it an offense punishable by fine and imprisonment for anyone to dance the tango, one-step and turkey trot dances at public halls and other gatherings in this parish.

PILGRIM SHAFT UNVEILED.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOUTHAMPTON, ENG., Aug. 15. A monument to the memory of the Pilgrim fathers, who settled in New England, was unveiled here to-day by United States Ambassador Page. A number of Americans were present.

W. S. Elkin Goes After World Rexall Meet For Atlanta in 1914

With the avowed intention of bringing the next annual Rexall convention to Atlanta, W. S. Elkin, Jr., president of the International Rexall Clubs, will leave for Boston at 11 o'clock Saturday morning. Mr. Elkin will be in charge of a special train of Rexall members who are going to Boston from the South.

The convention will open August 18 and will last four days. Fully 3,000 members are expected to attend.

The International Rexall Clubs is an organization comprising more than 7,000 druggists all over the world. Mr. Elkin's election to the presidency last year was by unanimous vote. He expresses himself well satisfied that Atlanta has an excellent chance of winning the next convention.

Europe Sees Kaiser In Peacemaker Role

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 15.—In his new role as "peace lord of Europe" Emperor William of Germany has launched a diplomatic campaign to prevent another war in the Balkans. Telegrams from Berlin and Constantinople indicated to-day that the German Emperor and his Foreign Office have drafted proposals which soon will be sent to Russia, Austria, England, France and Italy.

While Germany has been looked upon as the friend of Turkey, on account of the commercial relations of the two countries, it is reported now that William favors the surrender of Adrianople to Czar Ferdinand.

Child Physical Marvel In Feat of Swimming

WEDNESDAYS WILL BE 'BOOSTER' DAYS

Retail Grocers Plan to Make Specialty of Atlanta-Made Commodities Each Week.

Wednesday will be "Real Atlanta Day" if the plans of the Retail Grocers' Association are carried out. The plan is to have every retail merchant in the city push Atlanta-made articles every Wednesday, the campaign to begin in September. Grocers have closed their shops Wednesday afternoons during June, July and August, but they propose to use that day for pushing Atlanta-made goods during autumn and winter.

The movement is being worked up by the Chamber of Commerce in connection with the permanent exhibit of Atlanta manufacturers.

Space for the exposition is being taken rapidly. The committee in charge meets every day at 1 o'clock at Hotel Ansley.

Father and Son in Fatal Duel for Girl

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 15.—A fatal duel between a father and son named Blanchard, living near Aubusson, began in rivalry for the heart of a pretty farmhand. The son, Jean Lelong, was jealous of his father, who had won the girl's affection, so the two men agreed to fight.

Six revolver shots were exchanged without result. They resumed the fight with kitchen knives, while the girl watched the duel without interfering.

The father received terrible wounds, dying soon afterward.

France Trains Eagles To Fight Aeroplanes

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, Aug. 15.—The French War Office will use eagles to harass possible enemies in aeroplanes, according to Pastor Schuster, well-known ornithologist, who declares birds are being trained to attack models of aeroplanes, destroying them with their beaks and claws.

CONGRESS OBEYS WILSON; GETS BACK ON JOB

President's Demand for Currency Act Means Republicans Will Delay Vote on Tariff.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—Senators came to the Capitol to-day prepared to remain on the job until November, following the indorsement by the Democratic caucus last night of President Wilson's demand for currency legislation at this session of Congress.

Republican Senators have publicly refused to agree to a date on which to vote on the tariff bill. The sole condition on which they have agreed heretofore, in cloakroom talk, to vote on the tariff bill before September 1 has been that the specter of currency legislation be driven away.

But the Senate majority has knuckled down to President Wilson on this question, and the Republicans will be able to dictate the speed with which legislation will be handled.

Progressive Republicans will have an inning, urging the adoption of the inheritance tax and tariff commission amendments to the tariff bill. The discussion of these will require a week or more. Extended discussion of the income tax section is promised also.

The informal agreement to go ahead with currency legislation means, it is predicted, that the tariff bill will not be disposed of before October 1. Currency legislation will require, according to Senate prophets, at least a month after.

Tariff Bill Attacked By Senator Dillingham.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—A detailed defense of the protective policy was made in the Senate to-day by Senator Dillingham, of Vermont. He showed that under this protective system since 1860 the production of American mills has increased from two billion dollars a year to twenty billion dollars in 1910. He said the increase in the value of the farm products since 1870 shows a jump from $1,958,000,000 to $8,417,000,000, an increase of 330 per cent.

"The most serious disaster which has ever come to American industries came during the last administration of President Cleveland, when the Wilson-Gorman tariff act became a law," said Senator Dillingham. "Immediately following the return of the Republican party to power and under the provisions of the Dingley law, the country entered on a period of prosperity unequaled in the history of this or any other nation."

Senator Dillingham declared the pending tariff bill discriminated against the New England division of States in favor of the Southern States, particularly with relation to their textile industries.

Works Not to Return For Prolonged Session.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—The announcement in Los Angeles by Senator Works, of California, that he had made his fight on the tariff and did not expect to return to Washington to take part in the rest of the debate, drew from Republican members an admission that Senator Works had told them of his determination to take no further part in the present tariff session.

He told several of his colleagues that in his opinion Republican votes would not be able to change the Democratic tariff bill.

1 Killed, 4 Hurt, in Copper Strike Riot

CALUMET, MICH., Aug. 15.—Martial law virtually was in force in the Calumet mining region to-day following the fight between deputies and idle miners at Painesdale, in which one man was killed and four others hurt, two of them probably fatally.

Reinforcements of deputies were sent to the mouth of every mine shaft to-day and extra precautions were taken to prevent anyone passing the military lines without credentials.

Official's Son, Indicted As Robber, Kills Negro

GRIFFIN, Aug. 15.—Tom Hammond, son of County Commissioner C. M. Hammond, accidentally killed one negro and wounded another Thursday afternoon. The young man was indicted Wednesday on charges of highway robbery and gambling.

The negro killed was sitting in a buggy. Hammond claims the shooting was accidental, his shotgun exploding when he placed it in the buggy. Witnesses corroborated this, and the Coroner released him.

The second negro was hit on the head by a bullet from Hammond's revolver. The shot glanced off. Hammond says this negro cursed him.

Fat Women vs. Lean In Government Suit

DENVER, COL., Aug. 15.—Fat women and lean women will be arrayed against each other in a battle royal when the case of the Government against Marjorie Hamilton and her husband, Walter C. Cunningham, is called.

The defendants are charged with wrongful use of the mails in the sale of an "obesity cure."

"For every fat woman who goes on that stand and testifies that she couldn't lose her flesh there'll be two slender ones who'll tell of the benefits of our treatment," said Cunningham.

14 Feud Trials Go Over to September

LEXINGTON, Aug. 15.—When the trail of "Red Tom" Davidson ends today at Winchester, Ky., the case against fourteen others charged with the assassination of Ed Callahan, feud Sheriff of Breathitt County, will go over until the September term of court.

Three have been given life terms for Callahan's murder, Andrew Johnson, accused of firing two shots at Callahan, is only 18 years old and the youngest murderer ever convicted in a Kentucky feud trial.

3 Brothers Operated On for Appendicitis

ST. JOSEPH, MO., Aug. 15.—Three brothers, Frank, Henry and M. A. Matheny, of Blockton, Iowa, were operated on at a hospital here to-day for appendicitis. The operations, one after the other, were performed by the same physician, and all the patients are doing well.

Another brother died of appendicitis several months ago without an operation.

WANT AD RACE IS ON AMID MUCH ENTHUSIASM

Manager Wants to See Every Contestant at Once—Complete Details Appear Sunday.

They're off to-day in the Want Ad Contest, organizations, individuals, churches, lodges, men and women, boys and girls. The contest opened formally to-day.

Contestants who have not called upon the Want Ad Man this week should see him as soon as possible, for he has something worth while for them. It is important that they see him at once.

Numerous organizations are making plans to enter the contest and win the $1,000 in gold offered as first prize or the $500 worth of furniture for second. Two grand prizes have been offered individuals, the first a five-passenger automobile, the second a trip to California and return for two persons, all expenses paid. Then there are five prizes in each of four classes—men, women, boys and girls.

The Want Ad Man has engaged the fourth floor of the new Foote & Davies Building, Edgewood avenue and North Pryor street, for contest offices. He wants to see every contestant.

Complete rules and regulations, method of awarding the prizes and all other details will be announced in The Sunday American.

Farley on Sick Bed Sees His Horse Lose

NEW YORK, Aug. 15. — After watching from a cot at the side of the Empire City Racetrack, the race in which his horse, Bill Miller came in fifth, James Farley, leader of the strike-breakers, has suffered a relapse and must remain at the track until he regains his strength.

He is suffering from tuberculosis and had expressed a desire to see the race. At the track he was attended by two physicians and two nurses.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

At the Forsyth.

The bill this week at the Forsyth is one of the most thoroughly entertaining of the season. It is just the kind of show that wins approval and just the kind of a show that makes friends for vaudeville. The bill for next week is crowded with genuine features. The headline attraction comes direct from Hammerstein's and is conceded to be one of the big sensations of vaudeville; it is the "Dance of Fortune," as presented by Bert French and Alice Eis.

New Motion Picture.

The wonderful motion picture, "Victory," in five perfect reels, will be the attraction matinee and night at the Grand next week. The matinee price of admission will be 10 cents and the night scale will be 10, 15 and 25 cents. "Victory" is a story of love and war and was taken in Cuba a few weeks ago with the aid and permission of the United States Navy.

MEN OF GEORGIA

"For the Son of Man Is Come to Seek and to Save That Which Was Lost."

Luke 19:10

The House gave $30,000 to the reformatory for girls by House Bill No. 4

The committee on Appropriations of the Senate, of which SENATOR W. W. STARK is Chairman, offered two amendments to the Bill. Each was designed to cut off $10,000 from the already slender appropriation. The Bill had originally provided $75,000.

The Senate agreed to one amendment—the other it killed—leaving the appropriation $20,000, which will enable the State to make a good beginning.

But SENATOR STARK fought even this. He sent an amendment to the desk. The clerk read it.

NONE LAUGHED. FEW SMILED.

The Senate's President ruled the amendment out of order.

The purpose of it was only to ridicule the idea of the Bill.

SENATOR STARK said further that if the measure were made the law, next year would come committees urging the State to take care of CATS AND DOGS as well as GIRLS.

Again none laughed. Few smiled.

But many thanked God for the MANHOOD OF THE MAJORITY of Georgia.

Men were thinking, not of ribald salaciousness—but of the girl—the pitiable child whose life and soul depend upon such an home—

They were recalling the thousands of dollars given to the care of hogs and cattle, and to the killing of bugs. They resented the sneer at helping children—even though the children be girls.

SENATOR TARVER demonstrated that Georgia does not believe in damning children.

Likewise did SENATOR FOSTER.

As did SENATOR HUIE.

And SENATOR ELKIN by his words revealed the unutterable emptiness of the sneering amendment.

SENATORS JONES and DUBOSE spoke for suffering humanity.

But SENATOR M'GREGOR opposed the measure. Economy—the saving of a dollar—was his cry—

Nevertheless, the call of the "Ayes" and "Nays" disclosed that thirty-two Senators of Georgia believe in protecting and saving girls. Only ten voted against the Bill. And it was passed.

Friends rushed it across the Capitol to the House.

SPEAKER BURWELL called the House to order. JOHN Y. SMITH, of Fulton, moved that the House concur in the action of the Senate.

PICQUET, of Richmond, obtained the floor.

He attacked the Bill. He tried to amend it.

WIMBERLY, of Bibb, replied to him in words that burned.

SHUPTRINE, a friend of the measure, interrupted WIMBERLY to ask:

"Do you think there is a chance of this House accepting that amendment?"

"No," he thundered. "Not if there are any men with red blood in their veins on the floor of this House."

"Then don't let's argue. Vote," said SHUPTRINE.

And SPEAKER BURWELL put the question.

The hall reverberated with a chorus of "Ayes"—the one hundred and fifteen who originally voted for the measure had gathered other men—the House was almost a unit for HOUSE BILL NO. 4.

Thank God for this!

A list of the men who have helped in this—AND TO MAKE PROBATION A PART OF THE LAW OF GEORGIA—would include two-thirds of the members of both houses.

Doing notable work were Olive, Myrick, Wright, Blackburn, Nunnally, Culpepper, Jones of Coweta, Hollberg, Davidson, Mills and Gower, as well as those named above.

But Georgia owes not only these—she owes every member of the House and Senate who voted for these measures a debt of gratitude.

God will reward.

And the saved boy and girl will call them blessed.

The Joy of Coming Motherhood

A Wonderful Remedy That is a Natural Aid and Relieves the Tension.

Mother's Friend, a famous external remedy, is the only one known that is able to reach all the different parts involved. It is a penetrating application after the formula of a noted family doctor, and lubricates every muscle, nerve, tissue or tendon affected. It goes directly to the strained portions and gently but surely relieves all tendency to soreness or strain.

By its daily use there will be no pain, no distress, no nausea, no danger of laceration or other accident, and the period will be one of supreme comfort and joyful anticipation.

To all young women Mother's Friend is one of the greatest of all helpful influences, for it robs childbirth of all its agonies and dangers, dispels all the doubt and dread, all sense of fear, and thus enables the mind and body to await the greatest event in a woman's life with untrammeled gladness.

Mother's Friend is a most cherished remedy in thousands of homes, and is of such peculiar merit and value as to make it essentially one to be recommended by all women.

You will find it on sale at all drug stores at $1 a bottle, or the druggist will gladly get it for you if you insist upon it. Mother's Friend is prepared only by the Bradfield Regulator Company, 137 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., who will send you by mail, sealed, a very instructive book to expectant mothers. Write for it to-day.

BEAUTIFUL HAIR MAKES A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN

LOOK in your mirror, and look without seeing those white hairs. Instead, your hair is soft and full of color and beautiful luster, and your eyes sparkle and your cheeks dimple with laughing pleasure. What a difference the hair can make! The most beautiful features would be ruined with coarse, straggly, gray hair, and great masses of soft, beautiful hair will make any face beautiful.

If you have dandruff, you try to cure it. Then if your hair is fading and losing its vitality, why not stop it? Robinnaire Hair Dye is a pure restorative tonic preparation made in our own laboratory, and we guarantee that it can not injure either scalp or hair. It is for faded or gray hair, not to bleach or change the original color, but to restore the hair to its own natural color and make it soft, lustrous and beautiful once more. Thousands are using it, women and men, with best results, and as it does not stain the scalp no one can detect it. Don't pull out the white hairs; instead use Robinnaire's Hair Dye, this splendid and marvelously successful restorative. For light, medium and dark brown and black hair. Druggists and toilet goods departments, 75c; by parcel post, 83c.

Send us the name of your druggist if he can not supply you and we will send you FREE large samples of the famous Robinnaire Face Powder and Cold Cream of Roses. Jacobs' Pharmacy Company, Atlanta, Ga.

$3.45 Is The New Price

On Fifty $7.95 and $11.75 Dresses

The disposal will probably be complete before half of the half-day is over—the dresses are so attractive, the price is so remarkably low. They are white dresses, crepes, voiles and batistes, pretty and smart by virtue of laces—Valenciennes and imitation Irish crochet—and fine Swiss embroideries put into yokes, sleeves and skirts.

A happy solution of the "another dress" problem for the about-to-be vacationer, and at $3.45; the cost of the laces would total more.

At 55c

75c and $1.00 White Skirts

Women's white linene skirts, plain, tailored style with pearl buttons at the side opening, and a side pocket that she who plays golf and tennis will be glad to find.

At 95c

$2.45 and $2.75 Princess Slips

A quick clearaway. Prineess Slips of soft sheer tissue, white, lavender and blue, are 95c, instead of $2.45 and $2.75, because they are a bit soiled. Lace edged yokes and lace edged and tucked flounces.

All the women's bathing suits---silks, satins and mohairs--- regardless of how new they are or how smartly styled---are now HALF-PRICE.

At 39c

75c Brassieres

Sturdily made brassieres trimmed with linen laces and with embroideries, some have inserts of embroidery through the yokes. With these are 25c and 29c brassieres at 19c, trimmed with lacs and embroideries.

At 48c

$1.00 and $1.50 Corsets

A clearaway of a small surplus lot, too few and too fine to delay your visit. Coutils mostly, low and medium low busts, four and six hose supporters. Not all sizes in every style.

In the Junior Department---3d Floor

Children's $2.00 and $3.50 Dresses at 89c

Sizes six to fourteen years, wash dresses of figured and flowered lawns, ginghams and percales. And since they were $2 and $3.50 dresses you may know that they are smartly fashioned and trimmed, and that they will not remain here long at this new price—89c.

A day of savings for mothers of school-going children.

At $3.75

Children's $5.00 to $9.50 Dresses

White linen and lingerie dresses in sizes six to fourteen years. Materials, trimmings and the styles all betray their worth and the splendid opportunity that the new pricing makes. Many of these are little dresses that children will wear for "nice" for months to come; these show yokes and sleeves (low neck and short sleeves), trimmed with Cluny laces, some are even hand embroidered.

At $1.59

Children's $8.50 to $15.00 Hats

There are eight in all, and every one is a style that daughter may wear during the early fall season—straws of dark shades trimmed with ribbons and feathers.

STATE BORROWS $475,000 FROM BANKS HERE

Institutions Show Confidence in Georgia's Finances by Lending Money at Loss.

A striking demonstration of the soundness of Georgia's finances is furnished in Governor Slaton's message to the Legislature on the $500,000 loan recently authorized. Here is the message:

To the General Assembly:

By resolution you have authorized me to borrow not exceeding $500,000, in accordance with the constitutional provisions upon the subject.

I have the honor to report to you that, in accordance with the authority given and the desire implied by the passage of the resolution, I have made arrangement to borrow the sum of $475,000, at 3 per cent interest.

The banks agreeing to make the loans are as follows:

Atlanta, National Bank, Atlanta	$200,000
Fourth National Bank, Atlanta	100,000
American National Bank, Atlanta	75,000
Fulton National Bank, Atlanta	50,000
Third National Bank, Atlanta	25,000
Lowry National Bank, Atlanta	25,000

Banks Must Suffer Loss.

The banks making these loans will be compelled to borrow the money in New York at a rate approximating 6 per cent, and their action in coming to the help of the State at this time, during a severe stringency, and their willingness to suffer financial loss to aid the State entitles them to the gratitude of the people of the State of Georgia.

Their action is a further tribute to your body, in that it expresses their confidence in the financial responsibility of the State.

The money so borrowed will be immediately utilized for the paymen of the public school teachers, who have not received one dollar from the State up to this time. This confidence in the business methods of the State and the patriotism of these financiers will result in enhancing the financial reputation of the State of Georgia, and will contribute to the disposition of its bonds on more advantageous terms.

It shows that the banks of the city of Atlanta, at the seat of government, have unlimited confidence in the financial responsibility of Georgia and are willing to evidence it in a practical way.

Two Not State Banks.

It is appropriate to say that two of the banks—the Lowry National Bank and the Third National Bank—are not State depositories and are therefore under no special obligation to loan the money, but have done so purely from patriotic motives and principally to aid Georgia in the solution of her financial problems.

I desire to express my thanks to Hon. W. J. Speer, the State Treasurer, for invaluable aid and co-operation in obtaining this loan.

In my judgment, the ability of the State at this time to make the best financial arrangement that has been made in the United States is an approval of your course and may be taken home to your constituents as a marked tribute to your services.

REARRESTED AS HE STEPS OUT OF PRISON

Man in Penitentiary Nine Months Wanted in Arkansas—Fights Extradition Before Slaton.

Released Wednesday from the Federal prison where he was confined the last nine months, and immediately rearrested on a warrant sworn out in Arkansas David J. Steinburg, 22, of New York, Friday afternoon prepared to fight his extradition in a hearing before Governor Slaton.

Steinburg will be represented by Napier, Wright & Wood, while Sheriff Crawford, of Arkansas, who arrived in Atlanta Friday morning, will present the claims of his State.

Steinburg, according to his own story, was arrested in New York City in 1909 on charges growing out of the presentation of drafts on the New York firm which he represented in Arkansas. The drafts were given in payment for furs the young salesman purchased for his firm, which went to pieces while he was still in Arkansas, thereby making the drafts valueless, it is claimed.

Immediately following the arrest Governor Donaghey, of Arkansas, issued requisition papers for Steinburg which were turned down by Governor Hughes, of New York on two different occasions, it is said.

It was after this that the trouble which landed Steinburg in the Federal prison in Atlanta took place. And in this connection Steinburg told a pathetic story.

He declared Friday afternoon that he was the victim of circumstances; that he was a member of a firm which went to pieces in New York; that when he returned to New York he found it was too late to take out a petition in bankruptcy and that he assumed the responsibility for the firm and took his choice between Blackwell's Island and Atlanta. Upon the advice of the District Attorney Steinburg says he came to serve his term in Atlanta.

Ever since his confinement in Atlanta the Arkansas authorities have had their eyes on him and the very minute he was released last Wednesday he was nabbed by a deputy acting under orders from Arkansas.

Police Head Stranger To Tango and Trots

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 16.—When Chief of Police George H. Bodeker, who has been on the police department of Birmingham for nearly a quarter of a century, announced to Judge A. O. Lane, Commissioner of Justice of Birmingham, that he did not know the tango and turkey trot dances and would hardly recognize them if he saw them danced, it was decided to pick one of the young detectives of the city to make investigations.

Complaint had been made to Judge Lane that the tango and trot were being indulged in at public dance halls.

Judge Tells Husband To Procure Divorce

C. C. Allen, of 378 East Hunter street, and his young wife both agreed Friday that their matrimonial voyage of the last four years has been anything but smooth.

Advised by Recorder Pro Tem Preston in police court to get a divorce, Allen announced that he would. Mrs. Allen, not satisfied with the police case against her husband, swore out a warrant for him in a justice of the peace court, and when Judge Preston dismissed the cases of both, the husband immediately was taken into custody by a bailiff.

The Allens appeared in court as the result of a lively fight in their home.

Moose Order Sends Envoy to Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 15.—The Loyal Order of Moose has sent Clarence B. Roberson, a national organizer, to Birmingham to remain several months in the interest of the order. Slce the accident at the initiation on the night of July 24 when two candidates received too much electricity and died, there has been considerable apprehension felt by many men being approached to join fraternal orders in Birmingham ad it is intended to have the organizer remain here for several months in the hope of allaying all fears.

Mr. Roberson announces that all side degree work has been abandoned and that future initiations will be without ay chances of accident.

Auto Wreck Victims Slightly Improved

DOTHAN, Aug. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. Homer Williams and three children and Miss Hutto, of Ashford, ten miles east of Dothan, all of whom were injured in an automobile accident eight miles east of Dothan Wednesday night, are slightly improved to-day. Miss Hutto is thought to have a dislocated hip and severe bruises. The Williams baby, who received cuts, scalp and internal injuries and a broken leg, is still in a precarious condition. Injuries of two other Williams children are not serious.

Williams is Chief of Police of Ashford.

Alabama Prepared to Send Troops to War

MOBILE, Aug. 15.—Alabama is prepared to supply its full quota of militiamen in the event a call is made for troops to mobilize on the Mexican border," said Adjutant General J. B. Scully, who is attending the encampment of the First Alabama Regiment in this city.

Governor Emmet O'Neal to-day inspected the regiment.

Anniston to Renovate Condemned City Jail

ANNISTON, Aug. 15.—Plans are being made here by Mayor J. L. Wikle for the renovation of the city prison, which was recently condemned by Dr. W. H. Oates, State Mine and Prison Inspector.

Thirty prisoners are now being kept in the county jail, where they are fed by the city, which pays the Sheriff for their lodgment.

and anti-Sulzer forces of the reins of State power in New York.

If Governor Sulzer is able to retain gubernatorial control next week he will probably demand a Grand Jury investigation of the impeachment proceedings in the Assembly. Political friends have told him that there are rumors that money was used to secure adoption of the resolution of impeachment.

Scores Foes for Wife's Illness.

On account of the illness of Mrs. Sulzer, who suffered a nervous collapse over the attack upon her husband, Governor Sulzer did not reach the Capitol until noon. Accompanied by a cordon of guards he went straight to his office, not entering the audience chamber. He was pale, his face was lined with worry and he was white with anger.

"I could fight on unworried if those scallywags hadn't brought my wife into this case," he cried.

Colonel T. F. Symons, advisory engineer of the new State barge canal, has been delegated to go to Washington on a political mission in behalf of the Governor. Thus the fight may be extended beyond the boundaries of this Commonwealth and become, to some extent, a national affair.

A big new lock has been placed upon the door of the executive chamber where the State privy seal is held by Governor Sulzer.

Give Legal Aid Free.

The following lawyers have consented to represent Governor Sulzer without charge: Irving G. Vann, of Syracuse; Harvey D. Hinman, of Binghamton; A. G. Fox, of New York, and Louis Marshall, of New York.

Thomas W. Lawson, of Boston, may get into the fight, as he has offered Governor Sulzer $100,000 with which to fight Tammany if Mr. Lawson is allowed to direct the campaign. Friends of the Governor urged him to accept.

Mr. Glynn has retained Attorney Edwin Countryman, Patrick C. Dugan and several other well-known lawyers. Although 75 years old, Mr. Countryman is regarded as one of the best lawyers in this city.

Mrs. Sulzer, who suffered a nervous breakdown, showed signs of improvement to-day. She had a good night's rest and was much refreshed this morning. She still is confined to her bed.

EIGHT STUDENTS OF THE SOUTHERN BUSINESS COLLEGE SECURED POSITIONS THIS WEEK

As the Fall Term Approaches, Applications for Admission Are Coming in From All Quarters of the Country.

The fall term is nearing!

Have you sent in your application for admission to Southern Shorthand and Business University?

If not, you had better write at once and secure a seat in the South's most popular business training school, for the indications point to the largest fall term, enrollment in the history of this long-established institution.

"I am glad that I attended the Southern Shorthand and Business University," writes Miss Eva Barrett, one of the industrious and worthy students who recently left the school to accept a position as stenographer for the law firm of J. H. Lovett.

"No mistaking the fact that the Southern is a live and up-to-date business school," she writes, "because every member of its large and efficient faculty seems to have the interest always of the pupils at heart.

"The managers were continually calling the advanced students from the classrooms and sending them out into positions, which fact proved an incentive to me, as well as to others, to get right down to work and master the courses taught, for we knew that if we should, positions would be awaiting us."

Since Miss Barrett left the Southern, quite a number of others have secured good positions, and letters they have recently written about their success will be published shortly.

Eight of the students have been placed this week!

Among them a Mr. Meigs, who receives $60 a month from the start!

If you are going to attend a business school and want to go to the best, be sure and call upon Atlanta's prominent business men for advice.

It's a significant fact that the Southern's attendance is always double that of any other business college in this section. There's a reason for this.

The Southern's quarters have just been beautifully renovated.

Call, phone or write for catalog.

Address A. C. Briscoe, president, or L. W. Arnold, vice president, 10 West Mitchell street, Atlanta, Ga.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. J. W. Dinsdale, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I use your Castoria and advise its use in all families where there are children."

Dr. Alexander E. Mintie, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria and have found it a reliable and pleasant remedy for children."

Dr. Agnes V. Swetland, of Omaha, Nebr., says: "Your Castoria is the best remedy in the world for children and the only one I use and recommend."

Dr. J. A. McClellan, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria for children and always got good results. In fact I use Castoria for my own children."

Dr. J. W. Allen, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I heartily endorse your Castoria. I have frequently prescribed it in my medical practice, and have always found it to do all that is claimed for it."

Dr. C. H. Glidden, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "My experience as a practitioner with your Castoria has been highly satisfactory, and I consider it an excellent remedy for the young."

Dr. H. D. Benner, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria as a purgative in the cases of children for years past with the most happy effect, and fully endorse it as a safe remedy."

Dr. J. A. Boarman, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria is a splendid remedy for children, known the world over. I use it in my practice and have no hesitancy in recommending it for the complaints of infants and children."

Dr. J. J. Mackey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I consider your Castoria an excellent preparation for children, being composed of reliable medicines and pleasant to the taste. A good remedy for all disturbances of the digestive organs."

Huerta's Reported Attempt to Raise Funds Stirs Protest. U. S. Capital Affected.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 15.—Bitter protests were made here to-day by prominent Mexicans following public allegations that President Huerta is attempting to place the vast railway resources of Mexico virtually in pawn to raise funds for the Government. Agents said to represent Huerta have approached foreign financial groups for loans, the collateral of which will be blanket mortgages on Government railway lines.

That the present disagreeable relations between Mexico and the United States would be heightened by such action is apparent, as Americans have heavy financial holdings in railways and other Mexican securities which would be bound to be affected by the mortgaging of railway properties.

Gets Rid of Popular Men.

There is a feeling that if the peace mission of Special Envoy John Lind fails the present condition of affairs will be stretched out indefinitely. President Huerta has begun to prepare for the October election by taking steps to secure his own re-election. He is sending the strong, popular men out of the country.

Senor de la Barra, who has the confidence of the people, is now in New York en route for France, where he will act as the Mexican Ambassador; Colonel Felix Diaz, whose name carries magic power and who has a big following, is en route to Japan and can not possibly return here before the election if it is held on scheduled time.

Future Full of Menace.

As fast as one section of the country is pacified Huerta fills it with soldiers to control the election machinery. All the President's appointees are army men. It is believed here that so long as Huerta is in the chair the United States will not recognize this Government. Thus the end is probably far off and filled with menace.

A Mexican newspaper printed the rumor that Henry Lane Wilson, former United States Ambassador to Mexico, will probably return here and engage in business.

Wilson Will Reply to Censure by President.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—"I do not know what the next step will be. I do not expect to take any action to-day, but I shall make an answer to the President's censure at the proper time."

This was the statement made to-day by Henry Lane Wilson, Ambassador to Mexico on leave.

Reports are current that Ambassador Wilson will not submit tamely to the rebuke administered to him last night by the President; that he confidently expected to be dismissed when he issued his statement, and that he welcomed the opportunity to sever his connection with the diplomatic service, so that he could air his views regarding Mexico.

Attack Made in Senate on Dr. Hale.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—A demand that vigorous steps be taken by the Government in behalf of Sherley C. Hulse, son-in-law of Lieutenant Governor John M. Reynolds, of Pennsylvania, was made in the Senate to-day by Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania. The Senator had read dispatches published in the newspapers showing that Mr. Hulse, his wife and daughter are threatened with death in camp at Oquilla, Mexico, 100 miles south of the city of Chihuahua.

Senator Penrose then offered a resolution calling upon the President to inform the Senate whether Dr. W. Bayard Hale has been employed recently by any of the executive departments. Dr. Hale, it is believed, is unofficially representing the President in Mexico. Senator Bacon, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, refused to consent to immediate consideration of the resolution. Senator Penrose said that Dr. Hale had left Ardmore, Pa., thirteen years ago under conditions which he did not care to discuss at present. He said that Dr. Hale was representing himself as a representative of the President in Mexico, and that at the same time he was exploiting a publishing concern.

Millions Hinge on Kodak Case Verdict

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Millions of dollars may hinge upon the decision of Judge John R. Hazel here, in which he finds the Eastman Kodak Company guilty of having infringed upon eleven out of the twelve claims of the Goodwin Film and Camera Company on a process for manufacturing transparent, flexible photographic film pellicles and declares the complainant is "entitled to an accounting."

As the kodak company is alleged to have been infringing upon this patent for years, the "accounting" for the billions of film rolls it has sold will be tremendous.

Col. Peel Praises English Organist

Colonel W. L. Peel, of the Atlanta Music Festival Association, who has heard Eugene Wyatt play, declared Friday that music lovers here will be given a rare treat Sunday afternoon when the famous English organist appears at the free concert in the Auditorium. Mr. Wyatt, who has been the organist at the Crystal Palace, London; Royal Albert Hall, and musical director of All Hallows Cathedral, is one of the world's eminent organists.

He has frequently played in London to more than 12,000 people at a time. His Atlanta program will be of a nature to give full play to his brilliant ability and technique.

Antis Fight Special Suffrage Committee

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—On the ground that the woman suffragists were wasting the time of members of Congress, and that such waste was "politically immoral," anti-suffragists appealed to the Rules Committee of the House to-day against the creation of a special committee on woman suffrage.

Mrs. William Force Scott, of New York, attacked Miss Jane Addams, saying there was no good reason for the latter's suggestion that the present committees of the House were unable to deal fairly with the suffrage question.

University Club to Widen Its Influence

A non-resident board of advisers for the University Club has been suggested by Thomas W. Connally, secretary, and others, and to sound the sentiment of the members a letter has been sent out to them. Mr. Connally said Thursday he had had a stack of replies, and that most of the correspondents favored the idea.

The plan is to make the University Club more of a social and educational organization and to extend its influence over the State. To accomplish this the officials of the club feel that it is necessary to name an advisory board of non-resident members. At present the club is run by a governing board of Council in conjunction with the executive committee.

NOW YOU SEE AN' NOW YOU DON'T THRU' SKIRTS

Changing Fashions Provide Shadown Gowns Minus View and Regulated Slits.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Hamlet without Hamlet, or you can have your cake and eat it, will be the motif of madame's garb next fall. There will be slits without any opening, shadow skirts without any view. It will be a season of compromises.

These things are all evident at the annual style review of the Chicago Garment Manufacturers' Association, which formally opened to-night in Orchestra Hall. And the decrees are authoritative, for it is the assertion of the Chicago garment manufacturers that the fashions for a majority of American women are created in this city.

Skirts will be just as tight and just as thin and just as slit. It is only that they won't look that way. The sensible American woman, according to one leading designer, wants the graceful, smart effect of the narrow, slit skirt, but she wants it less sensational.

The I-Don't-See-You Gown.

For which reason ingenious designers have advised a gown with rows of ruffles or flounces running around the bottom. The skirt is slit and of the transparent texture that the dictates of fashion demand, but the thick circles of flouncing fill up the gap and make the whole thing as impregnable to vision as a Chinese wall. Smartness—and modesty. What more will any woman ask?

Beyond this, there won't be much change. The narrow skirt with straight lines will prevail. There will be much more fullness around the hips, however, and skirts will be somewhat longer. Drapings also will be popular.

Freedom is allowed in the choice of colors, and no one shade will be much more popular than any other. If there is any preference it is in various shades of green. The same freedom is noticed in materials. If there is any preference in the latter it is toward sobriety, the Bulgarians being somewhat more subdued and the combinations of cloth less hectic.

Among the novelties is what is called a tango skirt. This is built along the architectural lines of a coat skirt—that is, it buttons around instead of going on over the head. It has the advantage of providing an elastic slit, a sliding scale or frankness. The wearer can leave as many of the lower buttons unbuttoned as she chooses.

Vincent Astor Heads Fire Protection Body

POUGHKEEPSIE, Aug. 16.—Vincent Astor is leading a movement of wealthy residents of Rhinebeck and vicinity to buy fire apparatus to check fires on their estates, which have recently caused heavy damage and which are laid to a firebug.

A Poughkeepsie fire auto is to be sent to Mr. Astor's estate, Ferncliffe, for a demonstration, and similar machines, combining chemical engine and hose wagon, may be maintained by the Rhinebeck millionaires.

Wrote a Poem for The Judge; Is Freed

CHICAGO, Aug. 15. — James J. Ahearn, who claims to be a poet, was found in a prosaic stupor by the South Chicago police. When arraigned he defended himself before Judge Sullivan. He was asked to prove his occupation, and retired to another room with a pencil and an inspired look. This is what he did:

"I hope, Mr. Judge, the day never comes
When you, like myself, will have to write poems.
And may you and your wife
Live a happy life."

"It wouldn't be right to send you to jail," said the Judge. "You'd be writing poems for all the other prisoners. Discharged."

Granted Insurance After Lung Trouble

As many cases of Lung Trouble start with a cold or a cough, the best advice that can be given is to get rid of the cold or cough as quickly as possible. Otherwise more serious troubles are likely to follow. If the medicines you are now taking do not bring relief, try Eckman's Alterative, the remedy for Throat and Lung Troubles, which has stood the test of time. Investigate this case:

237 Dean St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Dear Sirs: About a year and a half ago my health rapidly failed until at the end of six months my weight had fallen to 129 pounds. I was troubled with night sweats, a severe cough and was very weak. About this time I consulted a physician, who told me my lungs were affected. Not satisfied, I went to another doctor, who, after examining me, said that I was in the first stages of consumption. At this point I started to take Eckman's Alterative. The night sweats stopped almost immediately, my cough became looser and gradually disappeared. My weight is now 142 pounds and my physician has pronounced me perfectly sound—which, together with the fact that I have been accepted by two different insurance companies for insurance, makes me sure of my entire recovery by Eckman's Alterative."

(Affidavit) W. E. GEE.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in case of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all of Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

Onions and Cabbage Offend Boston Noses

BOSTON, Aug. 15.—There may be robust ones of stout sensibilities to whom the odors arising from the cooking of onions and cabbage and such things bring sensations of pleasure. 'Tis otherwise with certain esthetic Bostonians who live or do business in the neighborhood of No. 20 Hawley street. Beans and codfish—aye; but onions and cabbage—nay.

Here's Latest; 'Cans' His Funeral Sermon

Mr. Morrill's last act before his departure was to visit the store of a talking machine dealer where he preached his own funeral sermon into a machine to be used in case of his death.

Miller Given Boost For Macon Mayoralty

MACON, Aug. 15.—In the clash over the naming of a new City Executive Committee by a mass meeting at the Auditorium last night, the Mayoralty boom for Representative Wallace Miller received pronounced impetus.

While the present candidates, A. L. Dasher and Bridges Smith, through their friends, sought to name the new committee and Mr. Smith practically triumphed in this respect, yet the nominations were all put by former Representative Walter DeFore, who announced that he was present to protect Mr. Miller's interests. The charge was made on the floor that the administration had corraled eleven unnaturalized Assyrians and was voting them.

His Sweetheart's Hair

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

By Nell Brinkley

HERE is some lover's glorification, the song of his ensnarement, his "Beata Mea Domina," in praise of his sweetheart's hair. I do not even know who wrote it. It was sent to me.

Lovers have always longed and yearned over the skeins of silk on the heads of the women they loved. Sometimes her hair is short, gypsy-dark, tangled in curls, metallic and crisp.

Sometimes it is brown and fine and long and sleek.

Sometimes it is velvet-black and Indian-straight, shadowy as a night-cloud and dusty-fine to the touch.

Sometimes it is red, glittering hair by hair in the sun, plenteous, stiff to touch, thick and deeply waved.

Sometimes it is deep-gold, like an autumn leaf, heavy and silky and ripply.

Sometimes it is pale-gold, fine as thistle-down, like a veil of sunshine, spreading wide and generous when shaken out, but crushing to nothing in the hands.

Whatever of these sorts it is, some lover twists in its sure snare and sends up his praiseful chant.

Here I think it must have been the deep-gold sort, heavy and silky and ripply, and colored like an autumn leaf: Listen:

I

SHE braids it in two heavy braids
That reach the carpet nigh,
And winds them crosswise, nape to crown,
To cross again and then come down,
And cross again on high.
I watch with joy that never fades;
A fortunate man am I.

II.

"She twists it from a silken twist
Into a coil instead;
Each side rests against her ear;
Its weight is on her collar clear,
Heavy it seems as lead;
A rope thick as her good wrist,
She fastens it to her head.

III.

"To styles not blind,
She can not bind, as other women do,
That scented mass, that smells of wheat,
And lavender and apples sweet.
She plies the great combs through,
More lovely than all maiden kind,
A woman twenty ——?"

About Introducing People

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.
Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

THERE are many sorts of introductions, the ceremonious and the unceremonious, the premeditated and unpremeditated introductions, but under all circumstances there is one rule to be remembered, and it is that indiscriminate introductions should not be made. There should be some knowledge on the part of anyone making an introduction that it will be agreeable to the persons concerned. Discretion and good judgment must be used in deciding the question of introducing people or the propriety of not doing so.

The general rule to be remembered is that when an introduction is premeditated the wishes of both persons should be consulted. A man should not be introduced to a woman when the introduction is premeditated, unless her consent is asked. The custom is for a man to ask a friend in common to introduce him to a lady at any social gathering. It is then proper for the person making the introduction to say, unobtrusively, "May I introduce Mr. C.?" Thus a woman has the option of declining, but a request of the sort is not refused unless there is some very good reason for a refusal. The formula used in introducing is: "Miss B., allow me to introduce Mr. C." In a very informal introduction the mention of the names is sufficient, thus, "Mr. C., Miss B." It will be observed that the positive rule of propriety is that a man is introduced to a woman, never the reverse.

A hostess has much responsibility in bringing people together. It is her duty to ascertain, for instance, how a new acquaintance will be received—whether it is the wish of everyone concerned to know each other before she invites them to a luncheon or a card party or any other small and intimate affair. Her own good nature in wishing that those whom she knows well should meet each other is not a sufficient cause for bringing them together.

The general conditions of society should be known to a hostess. Even if enemies are introduced to each other, they can not let their hostess know of the mistake. An instance of the ignorance of a hostess as to conditions and the distress caused by her lack of knowledge and experience was in the case of two persons whom she had included in dinner invitations and whose engagement had been broken off. Unfortunately, she sent them in to dinner together. Bravely they made the best of it, but at the close of the evening the girl's distant bow indicated to the man that there could never be a renewal of former conditions.

At a dance or a general entertainment a hostess has the privilege of introducing young people to each other, and she should see that shy people are introduced and that all have opportunities for enjoyment.

Tart Sauce.

Two women who had not seen each other for many years met unexpectedly in the street.

"How do you do?" exclaimed one, effusively.

"Now, this is delightful," said the older. "You haven't seen me for eleven years and yet you know me at once! I can not have changed so dreadfully in all that time. It flatters me!"

"Oh, I recognized your bonnet," said the first.

I heard a young mother talking to her little son about his teeth—telling him how important it is that the teeth be kept clean.

"If you want to be a big, strong boy," she said, "and then a big, strong man, you must have good teeth. And to keep your teeth sound you must remember how, while you are a little boy, to brush them twice every day."

The young mother told me that the youngster liked the taste of Ribbon Dental Cream and that this had helped her in inducing him to form the important daily habit. Of course, she talked with him about it now and then to impress on him the great advantage to his health and comfort that comes with this daily care. "Then twice a year," she added, "I have the dentist look him over."

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Dr. Cameron's courtesy had by this time returned. He pushed forward a chair and invited his visitor to sit down.

"I shall be happy to hear," said he, and lent his full attention, while Genevieve, turning with chill dignity, withdrew into a window recess near by.

"I am Julius Molesworth. If you do not remember me as your former classmate and fellow-practitioner, you probably will as one of the leading witnesses in an inquest which has aroused considerable attention of late."

Dr. Cameron's countenance changed. For reasons that we know, he had taken a great interest in this inquest, although he had said nothing about it to his wife.

"Pardon me," he replied, "I do recollect. I read of the death of your affianced wife with the utmost sympathy, for——"

"For she died upon the same night that you were married," broke in Dr. Molesworth, completing the other's sentence.

Dr. Cameron bowed.

"It is of Miss Farley and her unaccountable death that I have first to speak," continued the intruder calmly. "If you have read the proceedings, you know what the verdict was and what general credence was given me at the inquest. You will therefore be surprised to hear that for some reason unknown to me the police authorities have seen fit to discredit the evidence given by me at that time, and that I stand before you now in the character of an accused man, with the prospect of arrest before me."

A Conundrum.

"I—am sure——" Dr. Cameron stammered, glancing with some embarrassment at the tall and immovable figure of his wife, outlined against the faint yellow of the evening sky.

"Do not think you must express surprise or sympathy," interpolated Dr. Molesworth coldly; "I am innocent. But," he continued, with less dignity but more fervor, "that has nothing to do with the fact that my prospects are ruined by this suspicion and my career at an end. Whether I am committed to trial or not, my name must suffer and my practice receive a shock from which it will be long in recovering. It is a great misfortune to me, I acknowledge, but you may make it a less serious one if you will."

"I?"

"It is a conundrum which I have propounded to you," he observed, in calm allusion to what he had before said. "As you seem to possess no key to it—" He paused and one would have said he held his breath for a moment—"I shall have to produce my own. I—" he paused. "Did your wife speak?" he suddenly asked, rising with every appearance of respect.

"I think not," returned the other somewhat haughtily.

Dr. Molesworth bowed and again sat down. "Excuse me," he cried and Dr. Cameron was sure he heard him sigh; "I would not wish to weary the lady." Then with recurrence to his businesslike tones, "I asserted that you could help me. It was not lightly said, for you are a bold man and an ambitious one. "If a complicated and dangerous case were given you that demanded unusual measures, you would take them, I am sure. If that case belonged to another man and he were sick and disabled from attending to his duties, you would listen to his diagnosis and make yourself acquainted with his theory of cure, and if it met with your approval, accept it as your own and treat that case with all the interest and attention which you would have bestowed upon it if the method of treatment had been your own."

"I think so," returned the other, simply.

"Well, such a case I have," proceeded Dr. Molesworth, with steady impressiveness. "The patient is Bridget Halloran; you have doubtless heard of her and how she has been given up by Drs. S.—— and B——. But I am certain that she can be cured. That this line of treatment" (he looked toward the detective, who thereupon handed him a slip of paper) "will prove startingly efficacious and give to the man bold and determined enough to use it an enviable notoriety."

"Let me see," exclaimed the other, his professional interest aroused in spite of himself.

The paper was handed to him, and the doctors' two heads, so dissimilar in appearance and yet so like in their expression of intellectual superiority, came together over it.

The consultation which followed will not interest the reader. It was purely professional and had enough technical terms in it to awe me from any attempt to reproduce it. Enough that as they proceeded Dr. Cameron's look of reserve and possible prejudice gave way to one of undisguised admiration, and he asked, without any tone of envy in his voice:

"How did you come by this, Molesworth? It has the appearance of a positive discovery to me."

"I got it by hard thought," was the other's reply. "I get nothing by intuition, as you do.

"So much the more credit to you," observed Dr. Cameron, folding up the paper and putting it in his pocket.

"And you will take the case?"

"On the condition that if successful the entire credit shall be yours."

A look hard to fathom flashed in the dark eye of Julius Molesworth for an instant. It seemed as if he longed to hold out his hand; but he did not do it, and an instant's silence fell upon the group.

"There seems to be no further reason for our remaining here," Dr. Molesworth at length observed. "I have finished my business, and," turning toward the detective, "am now at your service." And yet he seemed in no hurry to go.

As for Mr. Gryce, he showed no signs of having heard the doctor. His glance had fallen upon a strip of passementerie on Mrs. Cameron's silken skirts. From his puckered brows it looked as though he were studying a problem.

The detective tore his gaze from the strip of passementerie which had so engaged his attention and followed him. The stern and solemn picture which they both carried away with them was that of a woman's tall and rigid form stretched as it were on a cross against a sky, down which were slowly fluttering the first flakes of a coming snowstorm.

Curiosity or Interest?

THAT evening there was a great ball in Washington, and the woman who shone the most resplendent and received the most homage was our young bride, Genevieve Cameron. Even her husband, who had begun to expect everything from her, was amazed. Words in which she was sometimes lacking came freely from her lips, and the wit which in her case took the place of knowledge, glittered in all she said with just enough keenness to fascinate. Her white hair made her conspicuous, and her beaming eyes and dimpling mouth, amid whose smiles just the hitn of smothered feeling showed itself at times, caused the gaze which fell upon her to linger till happy jealousy had laughingly whispered in her ear:

"It is fortunate this is our last ball here, or I should soon be ordering coffee and pistols for myself and some of these fierce-looking ambassadors."

Mrs. General F—— approached her in the dressing room, and after looking at her with the greatest delight for a moment, exclaimed rapturously:

"I never did see any one with such costumes as you wear. Who is your modiste? Tell me, that is a good girl."

The lady was elderly and her manner was caressing rather than impertinent, but Mrs. Cameron was much displeased, and showed it by the angry flush that crimsoned her brow and neck. Her words nevertheless were gracious, though she did not answer the other's question.

"I am really much obliged to you for your appreciation," she cried; "but I really can not give such a weighty secret away so lightly. I have gnomes and fairies to do my work, and have sworn never to reveal their whereabouts."

Back to Mother.

It was a trifling incident—almost too trifling to record—but it wearied her, and it was not long before she testified her wish to return home. In the early morning they started for New York.

It had been Dr. Cameron's intention to carry his wife direct to the home he had prepared for her. But their unexpected return made this inadvisable, and he accordingly took her to St. Nicholas place. She had not wished to go there, but she did not know how to make objection, so she said nothing, and by 6 o'clock of that same day she found herself in her mother's arms.

"My dearest!" was that mother's grateful salutation as she turned her cold cheek formally to her daughter's lips. "What a delightful surprise! And your father—how pleased he will be! But what an undutiful child you have been not to write to me! I don't believe a word about the rheumatism which Dr. Cameron says is your sole excuse. You never had the rheumatism before you were married. You have simply been lazy or anxious to show your power over your good husband. He has written quite regularly, good for nothing girl that you are!"

No More Bleeding Corns

No more knives, no more scissors, no more razors, no more blood poisoning. Away with the instruments of barbarous butchery! Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid will take out any corn, hard or soft, whole and positively without pain or danger. Never pare or cut a corn, for if the blade slips, as it frequently does, the corn bleeds, there is serious danger of blood poisoning and many deaths have been caused in this way.

The first application of Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid gives instant relief from pain, and if a soft corn of new growth, will remove it. Hard, deep, stubborn corns require several applications, but are just as completely removed, root and all, and there is no possibility of danger, nor pain. Tampering with a corn causes irritation and makes it harder to remove. Use Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid. We guarantee it to be successful and painless. 20c, by mail 22c.—(Advt.)

Art

The wonderful career of Frances Cranmer, who painted Mrs. Wilcox's Portrait.

AMONG the artists who have painted the portrait of Ella Wheeler Wilcox, it has remained for a young girl of little more than a score of years to make a remarkable success.

Miss Frances Cranmer is the artist, and in three sittings of four hours each she produced a portrait which is pronounced by all Mrs. Wilcox's near family and friends to be a wonderfully correct likeness; and by all critics who have seen the portrait to be an exceptionally fine piece of art work.

Miss Cranmer has already distinguished herself in portraiture work, and has received medals and praise from high sources.

Born in South Dakota.

Frances Cranmer was born in Aberdeen, S. Dak., in 1890, spending her early years there. After finishing her high-school studies at a private academy in Madison, Wis., she went to Washington, D. C., at the age of sixteen, where she entered the Corcoran School of Art, under the instruction of E. C. Messer.

After spending three years there she studied at the Art Students' League in New York City for a year. From there she went to Boston, entering the portrait class at the Museum School of Art.

After a winter's study there she went to Paris, attending classes at the Academie de la Grande Chaumiere, also spending some time in Holland, copying in the galleries.

Since returning, Miss Cranmer's studio has been in Washington, D. C., until going to Minneapolis last fall, when she opened a studio in the Handicraft Guild. Miss Cranmer is a pupil of William M. Chase, Frank Benson, Rubert Henri and the Spanish painter, Casteluccio, and was awarded the gold medal at the Corcoran Gallery of Art at Washington, D. C., in 1908.

Miss Cranmer is a young woman of striking beauty, great personal charm and unusual mental attainments.

She feels that her portrait of Mrs. Wilcox has been the most gratifying success of her brilliant, if brief, career as an artist.

Miss Cranmer was called to Tuxedo Park immediately after finishing this work to paint the portrait of Miss Margaret, the winsome and attractive young daughter of George Grant Mason.

Miss Margaret has taken many cups and ribbons in her sportsmanship and was painted in riding habit.

To Give Exhibition.

The portrait of Mrs. Wilcox was painted in a sunset yellow gown and mantle against a dark green background, and is most effective. When asked for her own opinion of her portrait Mrs. Wilcox said:

"I think it is such a decided work of art that long after my name is forgotten it will live in some great gallery as 'A Portrait of an Unknown Lady, by Frances Cranmer.'

"It's art value will survive temporary personality."

Miss Cranmer is to give an exhibition of her work in New York in November.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XXI.

MRS. DANFORTH turned as Mary entered the kitchen, then started in surprise when she saw that the girl still wore her hat and jacket.

"My dear!" she exclaimed. "I thought you were getting ready for supper?"

"Mother," said Mary, hurriedly, "I happen to remember a telegram I have to send, just a little matter of business about which I can not tell you just now. I must run around to the telegraph office before supper. I will be back in a quarter of an hour."

She paused long enough to put her arms about her mother and to kiss her with a tenderness that was almost passionate. And, at the demonstration of affection, the older woman's wounded feelings were healed.

Felt For the Card.

As Mary hurried toward Columbus avenue she felt in her hand bag for a card that Bert Fletcher had given her, a card bearing his name and address. In handing it to her, he had explained awkwardly, "If you should care to see me at any time, you can send me word there, where I live with my mother. Anything sent there gets me."

By the time the girl had reached the telegraph office she knew by heart the address on the bit of pasteboard. Seizing a telegraph blank and a pen she wrote quickly, as if fearful that her resolution would fail, the name of Herbert Fletcher, with the street and number of his home. Then, without faltering, she penned her ten-word message.

"Have changed mind. Home to night if you care to call."

Signing her initials, she handed the slip to the waiting clerk, gave him the money for the message, and added:

"See that this gets off at once, please."

The clerk grinned. It was evident that he considered this a pretty girl sending a summons to an admirer.

"Oh, yes, Miss," he began pertly. "Don't worry, I'll——"

He stopped abruptly as he met Mary's stern and surprised gaze, and had the grace to mutter, "Excuse me!" flushing to the roots of his red hair.

Mary had forgotten the incident and her own displeasure by the time she turned again into Eighty-fourth street, and walked westward. The glow that, such a short time before, had seemed prophetic to her happy heart, had died entirely from the western sky, and in its place was a bank of fog rising slowly from the river.

She Sighed Again.

"The whole world has changed once more," she muttered, wretchedly. "If it were not for mother, I would like to die! But she needs me. I almost wish she didn't."

Yet when she opened the door of the Danforth apartment, she forced herself to call out cheerily:

"Here I am, mother dear! As soon as I can make myself presentable I will come out to supper. Forgive me for keeping you waiting."

At the bright tone the mother, vaguely uneasy by her daughter's recent reticence, breathed a sigh of relief. After all, things must be all right or Mary would not seem so like herself again. Girls were queer creatures, anyhow, with their varying moods, and Mary had been a different girl since her father's death. Which thought made the elderly woman sigh again.

As the two women sat over their simple evening meal the daughter chatted lightly, pleasantly. She tried to remember the little gossip of the office and several mild jokes that Mr. Pearson had told her to-day when he happened to stop at her desk for a few minutes' chat. The girl laughed more heartily in telling these than her mother thought natural. At last the widow asked a question that had trembled on her lips when Mary had come out to supper, but which she had checked, moved to do this by an impulse which she did not understand.

"Dearie," she said timidly, "are you feeling badly to-night, or are you worried?"

Mary shook her head. "Only tired, mother dear," she replied. "You know at this time of year the work seems hard."

The mother looked distressed and breathed her customary sigh. At the sound Mary felt vaguely annoyed. Her mother sighed most of the time nowadays, she reflected. It was getting to be a confirmed habit.

What is the matter, mother?" she asked, trying to speak gently.

"I was only thinking," said the widow, "that I wish you did not have to work so hard."

"So do I," returned the daughter. "Let's hope I won't have to much longer."

"You Frighten Me!"

The mother looked at her hopefully and inquiringly: "Do you mean that, Mary?" she asked eagerly. "Do you mean that there's a chance that soon you can stop all this toil, and that all we've hoped for will happen?"

Her voice broke and the tears came to her eyes.

"Oh," she exclaimed, "if so, thank heaven! Thank heaven! It has driven me wild to see you so tired, dear, and I am so lonely, and I have hoped that you had had news from Gordon, but I didn't like to ask about him so often. Do you mean now that he——"

Mary had risen to her feet and stood pale, but calm, gazing at her mother. Her expression caused the older woman to catch her breath sharply.

"Why—Mary—what is the matter?" she asked tremulously. "Don't look like that! You frighten me!"

"There is nothing to be frightened about, dear," the daughter said slowly, "only I would rather you did not talk to me again about Gordon Craig. For I shall never marry him."

Although the widow burst into hysterical sobs, the girl's calmness did not desert her, nor did her voice quaver when, after having soothed the agitated woman, she gave the brief explanation:

"It is all for the best, mother. Gordon and I do not love each other any longer. And I would not marry him if he were the only man in the world!

SELECT big, firm, unspotted potatoes. Wash and brush them thoroughly so no sod of Ould Erin will cling and interfere with the joy of the earnest potato eater who partakes of meal and skin alike. Bake them until they are mealy and within about five minutes of absolute done-ness. Remove from the oven, cut off the tops and stir into the crumbled inside which you have mashed in a bowl with a silver fork butter, pepper, salt and finely minced ham. Return a generous filling to each shell. Break over the top of each an entire egg (yolk and white). Over this grate cheese, and return to the oven until the savory smell of the melted and browned cheese makes it impossible to longer postpone meal time.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T HUMBLE YOURSELF.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 and in love with a young man two years my senior. Recently he saw me going to a ball with another man, and he got angry. He did not go. Since that time he does not speak to me and goes with other girls to make me jealous. I don't take any notice of him, but I really love him. He has told a friend of mine that if I apologized he would speak to me. I am not engaged to him and am too proud to think of apologizing for such a foolish thing. ANXIOUS.

You have done nothing for which an apology is necessary, and a girl who begins by being humble has to keep it up.

Continue in your present attitude, and if he loves you enough to be worth loving he will be the one to apologize. If not, then do not spoil your pretty eyes by worrying, for the right man will some day come along.

DON'T TAKE EITHER.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 21 and have two boy friends who are very much in love with me. One is eight months younger than I, and the other is four years older. My parents are very much opposed to my marriage with the former, as his family connections are not what could be called good. The other boy has a very good reputation; he cares a lot for me, but I do not care half as much for him. My parents think everything of him. But he does not appeal to me. PERPLEXED.

Your parents object to one suitor and you don't love the other. Good reasons why you should not take either. Wait a while and perhaps time will make your way clear for you. But under no conditions must you marry a man you do not love. Always remember that.

Taken at His Word.

Old Johnson had realized the dream of his life, and taken his only son into partnership in the business he had worked up himself. There was great pride in the old man's heart the first day they were installed in the office together, and he was looking forward to the projects they would work out, and how the young blood would stimulate the firm.

As the days went on, however, all did not work as old Johnson had expected, and the youngster's overbearing manner annoyed him considerably.

"Look here, young man," said he one morning, "let's have a little less of the 'I,' and a little more of the 'we' in this business. Remember I'm still here, and that you're only junior partner."

The youngster "lay low" for a week, and the father thought his few words had struck home. A few days later, however, his son appeared looking just a trifle anxious.

"I say, dad, we've been and done it now," he remarked.

"Done what?" asked his alarmed parent.

"Well—er—we've been and married the typist!"

BLUFF

By Leslie Thomas

THE young man in the opposite corner of the compartment possessed, obviously, a simple and confiding nature, and Mr. Leverton spent a good deal of his time in searching for such truthful souls. His means of livelihood were mysterious—he confessed to a disinclination for monotonous labor.

"'Bluff' is Archie Leverton's motto," he would admit to his intimates. "It never fails, my boys—never!"

He eyes the vacant-looking youth in the manner of a spider with an unsuspicious fly. On this occasion, it was evident, a likely subject for his wiles had approached of his own accord.

The youth caught his eye and wriggled confusedly.

"I s'pose you know the city pretty well, please, sir."

"Some of it," Mr. Leverton ventured.

"Then, p'r'aps you can tell me whereabouts Axland street is—the best way to er—get them from the station?"

With a pleasant smile, Mr. Leverton changed his seat, and bent down to follow the young man's forefinger. He read the "personal" announcement curiously.

"Regent Street, January 2.

"Will the person who rescued an elderly lady from being run over by a taxicab kindly apply to Messrs. Collingham & Tremlow, solicitors, of Imperial House, Axland street, E. C., when a suitable recompense will be offered."

"Don't mean to say it was you that saved the old girl?"

"Pulled her on to the curb," stammered the young man, modestly.

"You—in town?"

"I was just visiting Aunt Martha—coming home then I mean; but I had half an hour to spare; so I took a stroll, too—to see things."

His Name.

"Why, bravo! You're a regular hero, Mr ——. What name, by the by?"

"Greenhill, sir. How much d'you think they'll give me? What's 'recompense'?"

Same as reward, explained Mr. Leverton, hurriedly. He was engaged in concocting a scheme. "Greenhill! The 'green' part's right enough!" he thought amusedly.

"Dare say it might run to a good bit o' money, eh?"

"Not very likely, Mr. Greenhill, I'm afraid."

"Oh!" said the youth disappointedly.

"Not if you go there for it yourself. You see, you're not used to talking to solicitors, are you?"

"No-no."

"Thought not. You aren't good at bargaining and haggling with 'em. You aren't up to their artful ways. Don't blame you for that. But, as likely as not they'd offer you some mis'rable amount, and you ought to laugh in their faces. But you'd take it."

"I—I shouldn't!' Don't see why you should think I'm——"

"You'd take it," repeated Mr. Leverton firmly. "A man who's had no dealings with 'em hasn't got a fair chance. They'd persuade him to anything and they'd get you to sign some paper or other——"

"The question is, how much ought—"

"Ah," returned Mr. Leverton, admiringly, "you've hit the nail on the head. All depends on what sort of old girl it was. Did she look well off?"

Mr. Greenhill began to describe the lady. Unostentatiously, his new friend made notes.

"Whereabouts were you standing at the time? H'm! Just near the circus? And how did the accident happen exactly? Best tell me all about it; then I'll be able to—ahem!—be in a position to advise you."

A Plan.

Mr. Greenhill added voluminous details. When his memory failed, a hint from Mr. Leverton would start him off again.

"Good!" declared the latter gentleman, patting his shoulder. "Now, let me think."

He started up presently.

"You take me with you," he suggested blandly. "I'll manage the talking. I'll see you aren't put upon."

"But it ud be wasting a lot o' your time, sir."

"No, no; I'm very interested in the matter."

"And I reckon," added the youth, wisely, "you'd be expecting something for your trouble."

"Smart, I see," cried Mr. Leverton, beaming, "and cautious, too! You're wrong, though. Of course, if you care to stand me a drink afterward, I won't say 'No!' But otherwise—you see, you remind me of a favorite nephew of mine, and I wouldn't accept even 5 per cent—even 2½. No!"

"Very kind, I'm sure."

"Good-hearted, I am; it always was my failing. I'll show you Axland street. Here's the train stopping. We'll go straight there. When we come to Imperial House, in we go—or, rather," he appeared to reflect—"you better wait outside, if you've no objection. Understand? I'll send for you if you're wanted. But I'll get more money out of those lawyers than you would. I expect the old girl's said to em: 'See what he's satisfied with. Give the good, brave fellow what he think's right. I leave it to you entirely.'"

Mr. Greenhill was pondering deeply.

"I thought of catching the next train back," he observed, "to tell 'em at home all about it. They're waiting very anxious."

"Well, it won't take us much over three-quarters of an hour."

"Then I'd manage it all right. Only I wanted to buy Rosie a—present."

No Money.

"Your young lady?"

"Ye-s," agreed Mr. Greenhill, giggling in discomfort. "Buy it out of what I get from the lawyers, you see, sir. Still if I wait till you meet me with that money——"

"Haven't you got any with you?"

"Only sevenpence and my 'return half,' sir."

"I'll lend you five shillings. Do your bit of shopping while I'm inside."

Outside the Imperial House the coin changed hands.

"If you're not out when I come back, sir, I'll stand just here."

"Righto!" Mr. Leverton nodded.

Once out of sight, moving toward the lift, he gave vent to his restrained mirth.

"Aha, Bluff!" he gasped, exhaustedly. "Heads I win, tails you lose. Now, then, for Messrs. Collingham and Tremlow. Saved the old girl's life. I should think I did. Rather! I remember the whole thrilling scene. And if she happened to describe me as younger and more stupid-looking—well, she made a mistake in the excitement of the moment. More bluff!"

A clerk inquired his business. In due course he sailed jauntily into an inner room. But five minutes later he burst out and stumbled down the stairs.

"A woman, it was—been rewarded already," he babbled. "He told me everything wrong—wrong side o' the road even—wrong sort of old girl—'obtaining money by false pretenses'—what did the old josser say I could get for that? Where's that Greenhill fellow? I'll—I'll—see if I don't——"

The simple young man was not waiting at the door; neither did he return.

"O' course not," lamented Mr. Leverton, bitterly. "He's got a quid of mine. Bluff—sheer bluff!" he moaned in anguish. "Oh, I'll have to take to short frocks and pinafores again, and have a nurse to look after me!"

Got His Number.

The aged motor van was somehow always getting out of repair, and it usually indulged in a little breakdown about once a week, in order to vary an otherwise monotonous existence.

Slowly it snorted its way into the broad stream of traffic, when there was a sudden whirring of wheels, a loud snap, and the weary and worn framework came to a dead stop.

"Look here," said the policeman to the driver, "this kind of thing is occurring too often. Let's see, what's your number? Yes, 1588!"

"Go on!" said the precocious youth who was in charge of the cart immediately behind. "That ain't its number. That's the year it was built!"

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was a yung man & his wife up to the house last nite & I felt sorry for the yung man. He dident know that I felt sorry for him, because he talked to me as if I were about two years old, but I know moar than he does.

His naim was Ralph, that is the only naim I herd. His wife called him Ralph all the time, & he called hisself Ralph. This is the way he talked:

"Sum peepul doesnt know enuff to cum in out of the rain, but littel old Ralph is different. Thare is a lot of men that thinks thay are wise, but littel Ralph knows he is wise."

Pa was telling sumthing about a married man that found out his wife had been a shoftlifter for years. It is funny he dident find it out sooner, Pa sed.

Not at all, sed Ralph. Thare is a lot of simpletons like him. He did not know wimmen. I know them like a book. Thay can fool sum men, but thay never put one over on littel old Ralph, he sed.

& so you understand wimmen, sed Ma.

Deer me, yes, sed Ralph. For yeers & yeers I studied them. Thay always liked me, & used to tell me a lot of things that thay wud keep from other men. Like Tom Moore, my only books were women's looks.

How vary interesting, sed Ma. I feel kind of creepy wen I am near a yung man who knows wimmen so well, sed Ma. What if you shuld see sum of my faults that my husband dosent see, & tell him about them.

Sum men mite be that way, sed Ralph, but littel old Ralph is a close mouthed man. Thare are sum things in this hed of mine that will go to the grave with me wen I die, sed Ralph.

It must be yure teeth, sed Pa. I doant think you will carry many other things to the grave with you. But tell us about yure wild days with the ladies.

Oh, Ralph never talks of those days, sed his wife. He is satisfied to let them be buried in the past. He is a true, tender husband now, & is living all his best years for me, aren't you, Ralph?

, sed Ralph, all the wild yeers are gone. I do not suppose a quiet, hoam-luving man like you ever had much chanst to study wimmen, sed Ralph to Pa.

I used to have a lot of chanst to study them, sed Pa, but after I got my wisdom teeth cut I stopped trying to dope them out. There isent any nurrishment in studying wimmen, my deer boy, sed Pa. You are at the age now wen you think you know a lot about the fair sex, & the fair se xis jest fair enuff to let you think so. History is full of cases jest like yures, sed Pa. I have known a lot of deeper students of wimmen than you, Pa sed, that thought they had it all at thare tongue's end. Then they wud marry a simpel, innocent gurl & start to educate her, & she wud run away with a life saver jest out of the high school that cuddent say anything except "I shud worry."

Doant try to tell me, sed Ralph.

No, Ralph, I will not try to tell you, sed Pa. You are one of those "Doant tell me" boys, & I will not try to ruffle yure feelings. Now, let us all talk about sumthing that the rest of us understand as well as you.

What He Meant.

"That last thing you sent in was good," said the editor. "We all enjoyed reading it very much."

"Well in that case," said the youthful poet, "I take back what I said in the letter I wrote to you yesterday about my determination never to send you any of my work again."

The editor slowly shook his head. "Don't do that," he murmured. "Why, that letter is what I referred to."

PADDY RYAN CLIMBED TO TOP EASILY

Ryan Beat Joe Goss When Joe Was Hardly Able to Hold Up His Hands.

RYAN AND SULLIVAN MEET

Circumstances Sometimes Force Championship on a Boxer.

By Otto C. Floto.

THE days when names minus ability cut a figure in the prize ring have passed. Time was when reputations were built upon mediocre performances, when clever boosting and shrewd manipulation did the rest. Once a great reputation had been earned it was easy work to gather the kale from the idol-worshiping public. Some may doubt the accuracy of these statements, but I can recall where a certain fighter earned the title of heavyweight champion of the world and yet he never could fight. Any of our welterweights of the present could have beaten him. But in some mysterious manner he managed to get on top, and once there he remained in the position in which fate had placed him and lived on his reputation. I mean Paddy Ryan.

Ryan Beats Joe Goss.

Ryan managed to beat old Joce Goss when the latter could hardly hold his hands up. The match was made through Richard K. Fox, who really believed Ryan a great fighter; in fact it was Fox who furnished the $10,000 for Paddy when the latter fought John L. at Mississippi City in 1882. After defeating Goss, Ryan was a great attraction, and all who dared challenge him were hooted. In fact, when Parson Davies, who had secured backing for Sullivan from Mike McDonald in Chicago, went to New York to deposit the money the crowd became so angry at Sullivan for his presumption in challenging the champion that both John L. and Davies had to make their exit by the rear door of The Police Gazette office.

Sullivan Wins Easily.

Of course, when Ryan and Sullivan met the latter won so easily that it was a joke, and Ryan was for all time exposed as to his class. Then, when they were to battle again in Frisco, Ryan got as far as Ogden and "took it on the run" back to Chicago. He was finally induced to try again, and Sullivan knocked him out as easily as he did on the first occasion. Between times, however, Ryan was matched to meet Frank Glover on a boat near Chicago. Of course, the police prevented the meeting, and whispers told us that "friends of Paddy's had seen the chief."

Pleasant Manner Won Following.

Personally, Ryan was one of the finest men you could meet and it was his pleasant manner that enabled him to be numbered among the great fighters and not his ability as a pugilist that ranked him there. It would be almost impossible to build up one of those "bothouse" champions at the present age. The dear public that has been buffeted about and handed the hot end of so many propositions has become "wised" and knows as much about the fight game as those who follow it for a livelihood. Consequently, no attempts are made to pass the papier mache champion as the bona fide article any more.

TINKER STILL ON JOB; DENIES HE HAS RESIGNED

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 15.—Joe Tinker denied to-day that he had resigned as manager of the Cincinnati Reds. According to a report, Tinker and President Herrmann are at outs because of the running of the team, and the latter requested Tinker to quit.

Tinker declares he would not resign unless requested to do so by Herrmann, and as the latter has made no such request he is still on the job and intended to remain.

HARRY CHAPMAN OUT OF GAME UNTIL MONDAY

Harry Chapman hurt his ankle in sliding back into first base in the final game in Birmingham and will not be able to don the windpad and the mask until Monday.

The entire weight of the backstopping in the series with the Lookouts will fall on Joseph Dunn.

Lookouts Are Fighting Savagely

Tabasco Kid Tries Hard to Win

By O. B. Keeler.

ONE thing seems to be pretty well established by yesterday's terrific, if indecisive, struggle.

The Tabasco Kid is going to whip us out of a pennant if he can.

The T. K. has no chance to win a pennant himself, this year. But all the animosity and all the rivalry existing between the Atlanta and Chattanooga ball clubs is right at the top now.

And this crool war is going to be crool, for fair.

* * *

THERE was the sixth inning of yesterday's game.

The Lookouts caught Conzelman wobbling and tied up the count. Howell, pitching for the visitors, was going fairly well. Darkness was gathering.

Out went Mr. Howell. In went Mr. Street. Joe wobbled some more and Gabby was winged, dancing on first, his yells of encouragement reaching to heaven.

Blooie! That was the miserable Walsh, and the Lookouts were one up.

Blooie! That was the recent edition of E. Flick. And the bases were full.

Bloof! That was the wretched Coyle, blowing up a foul for Joe Dunn.

* * *

AND now look who's here!

The Kid had several other hurlers he could have inserted to hold that single run lead.

But no. Out wanders the giant Pole.

The crowd lifts up its voice and weeps, or words to that effect. It is evident that the Kid wants that game, and wants it blamed bad. Wants it cinched, in fact.

* * *

BUT the Crackers' backs are up, and furious at that slender lead wrenched from under their eye-teeth, no ordinary Pole—not even the well-known Thaddeus of Warsaw—is going to make them lie down, roll over and play dead.

Tommy Long waits the big fork-hander out; makes him be good, and hooks one just inside third for two bases. Welchonce slashes a bounder toward second that Flick knocks down in a great play. Wally Smith cuts one on the off-side of Mr. Flick, and he performs another dive while the author of the double rode home.

Score tied.

* * *

AND now, friends, you'll just have to come through and hand it to that to-headed expatriate.

Maybe the old soup-bone was chilled when he went in. Maybe the wet pill bothered him. Maybe whatever you please. But right here, with nobody down, and Crackers on third and first, Mr. Coveleskie gave a sincere imitation of an actual pitcher.

Bisland was next, and the Pole whiffed him. The infield was close on the grass, and Wally Smith was permitted to swipe second. One bit would settle it. But Holland's swing faded into a feeble bounder to Walsh at Welchonce was out at the plate. Then Calvo, the Cuban, hit to Flick and the inning was over.

Just hand something to the Pole. He looked like the goods just then.

And the Tabasco Kid? Well, he skinned over his hand and he led trumps. And if he didn't win, he didn't lose.

* * *

OF course, a double-header was arranged for the home-coming of the Crackers, and a whale of a crowd was about to be on hand, and the Royal Rooters were there, and all.

So the bottom fell out. And one abbreviated game had the very dickens of a time getting itself played to a draw.

At that, there were 2,500 of the faithful there, plus the R. R. Club, with megaphones. And in the damp and dreary interval betwixt 2:15 and 4:10 o'clock, there was a crop-saving deluge to watch, and (this was only a rumor) a flock of snipe in the swamp in left field; and, later, Billy Smith with a broom, sweeping the flood heroically off his ball park.

That alone was worth the price of admission.

* * *

JACINTO CALVO is the entire name of the debutante, and he looks as if he might reflect honor on his native Cuba Libre, or clear Havana, or whatever it is. He is a small, sprightly gentleman with a pleasing smile, a powerful left wing, and a bewildering habit of flopping his arms while preparing for a dash to second.

Also, Jack appears to possess the small and expressive word indicating viscera.

In the sixth inning the new hand came up and fouled off a fast one that shot hot off the bat into his right eye. The youngster was stunned and blinded, but he didn't flop on the ground or stall. He sluiced the damaged optic with some ice water, collected his bat from an admiring small boy, and singled viciously over second.

* * *

THOMAS JEFFERSON LONG was the batting hero. In four times up he got two bases on balls and two hits, one of them the only extra-baser of the melee. Welchonce batted only .500 in the fracas, and Harry Holland fell down to .333, which is a very lowly mark, in the light of his recent doings.

* * *

JOE CONZELMAN began to hate himself after he got h. b. p. b. in the fifth. He tried to go all the way to third on Agler's single through Walsh, which Kid Elberfeld-ed to Graff in time to nip Joe by about fourteen yards.

* * *

THE Lookouts' first run was a gift. Bases full and two down in the sixth, Coyle hit sharply to Holland. The runner from second was past Harry, so his logical play was at second. But Smith was a bit slow in covering, and Harry, trying to check his throw, cut loose a peg into the dirt for one run.

* * *

IF there is any way to charge a catcher with a balk, Joe Dunn ought to have it. With a Lookout on second, Joe started a peg designed to nip him off. Nobody was covering, and Joe squeezed the pill, but not tightly enough. It slipped out of Joe's ample fist and rolled nearly to third, with Joe in close pursuit. Nobody advanced, so we suppose it is impossible to mark a balk against him.

DENT AND PRICE THE PITCHERS FOR TO-DAY

The Crackers will make another attempt this afternoon to play two games with their pet enemies, the Lookouts, and that will leave only two games to be played to-morrow, by way of cleaning up the series. Only one more engagement with Chattanooga remains for the local club after the present series—September 6, when the season ends.

Manager Smith said this morning that Gilbert Price and Elliott Dent would work this afternoon, opposed, to the best of Manager Elberfeld's information, by Harry Coveleskie and Rudy Sommers. But the Peppery Kid never is certain of his selection until the umpire announces it.

The manager said Harry Chapman's wrenched ankle would keep him out of the game until Monday, at the earliest.

EAST MACON WINS.

VIDALIA, GA., Aug. 15.—The East Macon team easily defeated Vidalia yesterday in the second game of a series of three. Errors of the local outfield lost the game for the home boys. The score was 10 to 1.

Sporting Food

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

O, YOU AUGUST!

How sweet are the August days,
With the Macks and McGraws ahead,
And the other teams are but faded dreams
And their hopes of a flag are dead.

How sweet are the August days
As the end of the fight draws near,
And the managers say, as they draw their pay,
"Look out for the team next year!"

Aside from chess there is only one pastime that thrills us more than to watch two ball teams dragging out their salary after the fight is over. The said pastime is rogue.

In America the keynote of sport is to win. In England—well, they cawn't do it, don't you know.

It is estimated by geographers that the trip of the Sox and Giants around the world will consume more time than it takes Joe Dunn to hike around the bases.

Speaking of baseball and English, what language do the umpires speak when they announce the batteries?

TO THE CLUBHOUSE.

John, John, old Evers' son,
Bawled the umps and away he run.

Cy Pieh is now a member of the Yanks. Not that it makes any difference in the pennant race, but it shows that Hugh Jennings is loafing on the job.

While we are on the subject of names we might say without fear of successful contradiction that Oscar Gutter is not an inappropriate name for a fight manager.

The report that Mr. Whitney is trying to dispose of his American racing stable reveals the fact that in spite of his wealth, Mr. Whitney is no rummy.

It is said that Marquard and McLean form the tallest battery in baseball. It might be said that they form the nuttiest battery in baseball, but, considering their collective size, we refuse to say it.

The report that Jack Prince's Los Angeles motordrome was destroyed by fire fails to move us to tears. But it might if we were an undertaker.

Speaking of football, the real victims of that vicious game are the scribes who are forced to learn the new rules under pain of being amputated from the pay roll.

SMOKY JOE.

Gone are the days when his arm was up to snuff;
Gone are games when he showed his oldtime stuff.
Gone are the days, the days of long ago,
When Red Sox rooters up and yelled for Smokey Joe.

LAPORTE GIVES UP FRANCHISE.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Laporte, Ind., the best semi-professional team in Indiana, now that the Gary club has surrendered its franchise, will play the Gunthers at Gunther Park tomorrow. The team has cleaned up practically every strong team in its own State and has been forced to travel to get a strong enough opponent.

Three-Cornered Race Feature

Good Card at Saucer To-night

IT'S a great night for "13" at the Motordrome; "13" meets have been postponed, and to-night is the "13th" meet to be held, barring, of course, that Jack Prince's old sidekick, J. Pluv, doesn't kick in with some of his wet assortment.

The feature event to-night will be a three-cornered match race of three heats between Morty Graves, Harry Swartz and George Lockner. These lads have their machines tuned up top speed right now and it wouldn't be surprising if Kid Record was given an awful kick in the ribs.

The first heat of the match race will be one mile, the second two miles, and the third three miles.

* * *

THE Motordrome Purse is the opening event of the card. There will be two trial heats of one mile and a final of two miles. The first and second men in each heat will qualify. In the first heat the starters will be Swartz, Graves, Richards and Glenn. In the other, Lewis, Luther, Renel and Lockner will fight it out.

And then there is a classy affair scheduled, the Veledrome de Buffalo Sweepstakes. We will leave it to the kind reader to figure out for himself what all that name means.

* * *

BUT said race is to be run in three heats of three, five and seven miles. It is to be scored on a point system of ten points for a first, six for a second and three for a third.

Altogether, this card sizes up as the best ever staged at the Saucer.

Morty Graves' eye, which was bunged up by a flying piece of metal Tuesday night, is O. K. now and he promises to have his new 8-cylinder machine tearing up the track.

Following is the complete program:

MOTORDROME PURSE.
(One Mile to Qualify; Two-mile Final, Two Men in Each Heat to Qualify for Final.)

First Heat—Swartz, Graves, Richards and Glenn.

Second Heat—Lewis, Luther, Renel and Lockner.

SPECIAL MATCH RACE.
(One, Two and Three Mile Heats—Best Two Out of Three Heats.)

First Heat—Swartz, Lockner and Graves.

Final of Motordrome Purse—Two miles.

Veledrome de Buffalo Sweepstakes. French point system. Ten points for first, six for second, and three for third. Distance, three, five and seven miles.

First Heat, Three Miles—Richards, Renel, Glenn, Luther and Lewis.

Second Heat of Special Match Race, Two Miles—Swartz, Lockner and Graves.

Second Heat of Sweepstakes, Five Miles—Richards, Renel, Glenn, Luther and Lewis.

Third Heat of Special Match Race, Three Miles—Swartz, Lockner and Graves.

Third Heat of Sweepstakes, Seven Miles—Richards, Renel, Glenn, Luther and Lewis.

BROWNS LOSE SERVICES OF MITCHELL AND HAMILTON

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 15.—The local American League club will be without the services of two of its best pitchers for some time as the result of an injury to one and the suspension of the other.

Roy Mitchell, who alleges he was insulted by Umpire O'Loughlin in New York Tuesday, received notice from President B. B. Johnson, of the American League, that he had been suspended. Hamilton will be out for about ten days as the result of an injury to his pitching arm.

REDS PURCHASE MORGAN.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 15.—The Reds have purchased Pitcher Cy Morgan, now with the Kansas City team. Morgan will join the team in the East on Monday.

Windy City Lad Has Everything Needed to Annex the Title

CHARLEY WHITE LOOKS LIKE COMING CHAMP

By W. S. Farnsworth.

CHARLEY WHITE is going to come mighty close to annexing the lightweight championship within the next year or eighteen months.

There are only two obstacles in the way. One is that he will have to add about five pounds to his present weight. The other, chilled pedals on the part of Messrs. Ritchie, Cross, Wolgast, Murphy, Rivers, etc.

If any one of the quintet had seen Charley in action against Frank Whitney at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night I doubt very much if the young Chicagoan would ever be furnished the opportunity of entering a ring at the same time said ring was decorated with their presence.

Charley is a top-notch boxer, a hard and sure hitter, a wonderful judge of distance, a marvel at just escaping punches either by side-stepping or blocking, and an expert in sizing up just what his opponent's stock in trade amounts to.

I have seen Cross, Murphy, Britton, Wolgast and all the other claimants of the title, including the titleholder himself, excepting Rivers, and White, in my opinion, has it on them in all lines of the game that go toward making a champion.

* * *

DESPITE the respect I hold for the judgment of my fellow scribes, Dick Jemison, Julian Murphey and Fuzzy Woodruff, I can not agree with their opinions as to the outcome. All three of my pals agreed that White won, but none of them thought his victory was as impressive as did yours truly.

I thought White had every round in a walk, excepting the second and fourth. While I gave White the edge in these two, it was very close. The other eight were Charley's by a mile, in my opinion.

But the vanquished came in for a heap of credit. There isn't another man of his weight who would have taken the beating that Frank did and still fight back. Just because a man takes a beating without flopping doesn't show that he is stout-hearted. It is the man who will fight back when he is being beaten that is really possessed of a stout heart.

In the seventh round Whitney was given an unmerciful walloping. With legs sagging, head bobbling, glassy-eyed, sick and weak, he never once thought of anything but fight. And the harder White smashed his tottering frame and his clouded head, the harder did Whitney try to fight back.

He is the gamest, grittiest, nerviest fighter in the game to-day.

* * *

HEARD an argument last night on Peachtree about the fight. One fan claimed it wasn't a good one because there wasn't a knock-out. Well, if that scrap wasn't a good one then there never was a good one.

Next to the Ketchel-O'Brien fight in New York about five years ago, it was the fastest young affair I have ever been fortunate enough to witness.

The fact that there wasn't a K.O. landed, like the one poor Jake Abel suffered in no time against White, doesn't show that the fight was slow. If anything, it points just the other way.

White fought at top speed all the way. So did Whitney, but Frank has a wonderful defense and White was unable to land as he did on Abel, Thomas and the many others that he has floored for a "ten."

To get right down to facts, there is only one punch that Frank has trouble blocking and that is a straight left jab. And nobody was ever knocked out with a jab yet. It is a stinging punch that discourages and wears down a man, but it very seldom topples him over.

* * *

WHITNEY and White are two grand little fellows. And both praised the other as soon as the scrap was over.

Said White: "Whitney is the toughest, gamest fellow of his weight in the world. And, believe me, he can beat a lot of these fellows who are claiming a right to fight for the title."

Said Whitney: "White is a wonderful fighter and has a grand chance of being champion some day. Jack Britton is the only boy I know of who might beat him."

All of which shows that Frank Whitney and Charley White are mighty high-class persons.

BEHAVE OR FACE RELEASE WHIPS CUBS INTO LINE

BOSTON, MASS., Aug. 15.—Look for the best there is in the Cub team all through this Eastern invasion, and for that matter from now on until the close of the season, and also look for the Chicago Nationals to climb. There is quite a gap between the Cubs and the Phillies, but Manager Evers says that will not only be closed, but it will be overrun, meaning that his organization will finish second in the big race. The word has been passed to the various members of the Cubs that Evers is manager, will remain manager and that his word is law and must be obeyed, even at the cost of a wholesale shift.

Advised to Make Trades.

More, the players have been given the tip that President Murphy has advised Evers to trade or sell any member of the team he thinks isn't doing his best, or who disregards John's orders, no matter who it might be, and this has thrown the scare into the boys. The recent shifting of Reulbach, Richie and Overall has shown that Murphy means business. True, the three named had lost much of their effectiveness to the team, but there was more than just that back of the changes.

Evers Will Have Order.

"I'll have discipline and order on the team, even if I have to get rid of the disturbers," was a recent statement of John's, and he certainly has taken the whip in hand. It is known that John was a bit lenient with his men and somo took advantage by disregarding his say.

Murphy is back of John in every move he makes. The Cub boss is pleased with the manager's work and says only those scribes who wish to run his baseball club are finding fault with John.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Local fans are still talking about Charley White's clean-cut victory over Frank Whitney at the Auditorium-Armory. White left with his manager, Nate Lewis, for Chicago yesterday and says he would gladly come back here later to meet some worthy foe.

* * *

Before leaving, Charley said he was particularly anxious to get on with Johnny Dundee, who recently defeated his brother, Jack White. Charley, already, has beaten Dundee in a ten-round go at New York and is positive he can repeat the dose.

* * *

Ah Cheng, the only Chinese boxer in the game, scored a clean knock-out over Paddy McCarty in the sixth round of a scheduled ten-round set-to yesterday. In another ten-round battle Barney Williams outpointed Tim Logan, of Philadelphia.

* * *

Jess Willard, the cowboy white hope, and Bull Young, the promising Western heavyweight, have signed articles to meet in a twenty-round mill at Vernon, Cal., on August 22.

* * *

Charley White will make his next fight against Johnny Griffiths at Akron, Ohio, on Labor Day. Griffiths is a big card in the Ohio city, where he has won 50 fights without a defeat. They are scheduled to go ten rounds.

* * *

Snowy Baker, the Australian promoter, is seriously thinking of matching Owen Moran and Matt Wells for a twenty-round bout. Moran has been guaranteed three fights by Baker.

* * *

Joe Rivers is so certain that he will win over Leach Cross when they meet in their twenty-round engagement at Vernon, Cal., on Labor Day afternoon that he has already made the announcement that he intends to wager $2,000 on his chances of receiving the referee's decision. "I have already beaten Cross," said Rivers in Los Angeles, "and I am sure that I can repeat the trick in our twenty-round go."

* * *

Dundee and Ad Wolgast will clash in a twenty-round engagement on the coast September 9. These battlers should put up a great mill, as both are great mixers.

Calvo Looks Like Regular Player
Some Notes on the Cuban Star

GENTLEMEN, meet Senor Jacinto Calvo, clear Habana, perfecto shape, rising 21, and some left-handed outfielder from Washington.

When first visible to the admiring populace, our brand-new right fielder was engaged in batting practice under the grandstand, the universe having sprung a leak to the tune of bull-frogs croaking in the marshes around second base. About six hundred damp but appreciative fans were looking over Senor Calvo with a steady cascade from the eaves of the smoker roasting down their spines.

It was an heroic sight.

* * *

SENOR CALVO still is a few chips shy on the United States language, but he is popularly reputed to be death on a fly ball. And it generally is taken for granted that a 10-second clip on the old towpath more than makes up for a split infinitive.

At that, Senor Jack's conversational powers are fully equal to the narrative of his brief but entertaining career. He let it out somewhat as follows:

Jacky is 20 years and a pair of months old. He was born in Havana and has an abiding dislike for Spaniards. When a mere boy he used to put in days and days just hating our o. f., Butch Weyler.

Jacky was started to school quite early and kept at it until he had a good education. Along about his sixteenth year, however, his digestion or something—the Spanish of which is obscure—got out of whack and somebody suggested that he let up on the school and take up some more outdoorish pursuit.

* * *

THAT spelled baseball with a large B for Jacky, who was a bear-cat on the town lots and would rather watch the Almandares team play ball than to hear "Cubanola" by a full orchestra of guitars.

In fact, the youngster wasn't long breaking into the most select company on the tight little island—the Almandares club, which boasts one of the world's greatest pitchers, Mendez. The only thing that has kept Mendez outside the Big Top in the Land of the Free and the H. O. T. is the fact that he is a couple of shades too brunette even for a Cuban.

Well, Jacinto showed speed on the bases and in the field, and more particularly did he wallop that old pill.

And so—Jacky can't explain just how this part of it happened—some scout or othe rgot a line on him and tipped off Clark Griffith, and pretty nearly the next thing the Little Perfecto knew he was in a large, white city, with the streets running skewgee and everybody talking about somebody named Walter Johnson.

He played in twenty games for the Senators and then he busted an ankle. By the time the transportation facilities were in shape again the Washington outfield was going along at top speed, and Jacky had to sit on a hard bench and swear in Spanish at Eddie Plank and other enemies of the Senators.

* * *

JACKY says all the baseball talk on the field in Cuba is done in the American terms of the game, there being no exact Spanish equivalent for "foul tip," "fair ball," "threebagger," or even "hit the dirt" and "take a lead."

When the Cuban teams are playing American clubs they use Spanish for coaching purposes, so their opponents won't know what is supposed to be coming off. When two Cuban teams are playing, the classic Castilian is employed mainly to tell the umpire what manner of burglar he is. That innovation might be recommended for use in this country, as Spanish is said to contain a number of highly explosive phrases and decorative expressions.

* * *

IN person, Calvo is a good-looking little chap, 5 feet 6 in height, well set up, and desperately quick on his feet. He made an excellent impression in his first game with the Crackers, getting a clean hit and showing a strong whip when he winged the ball in from deep right, attempting to get a runner from third. The hit looked all the better in that the little Cuban got it after being beaned by a foul tip from his own bat, from which he came back with an evident courage that won the crowd.

Baseball runs in the Calvo family. Jacinto has seven brothers, two older and the rest younger, and they all play ball.

Sports and Such

THE EASE WITH WHICH "Muggsy" McGraw is able to make a trade for any player he desires just now has nothing to do with the fact that all players used in the world's series must be under contract before September 1, and that the National League doesn't want a world's championship team in New York.

* * *

WE OBSERVE THAT A bantamweight boxer won a two-mile run the other day, but then there were no White Hopes in against him.

* * *

OUT OF HIS LAST PURSE of $40,000 the inculcators of manliness and fair play who had charge of Luther McCarty's affairs announce that $26 remains, "all expenses being paid." This, gentle reader, is the reason that inculcating is such a popular business.

* * *

HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY'S race horses are being sold. It is given out that the official handicapping makes it impossible for Trainer Rowe to improve the breed as rapidly as he would like.

* * *

MUCH TROUBLE AND railroad travel would be saved if matters were so arranged that the California State championship carried with it all other tennis titles.

* * *

SPEAKING OF MEXICO WE observe that in athletic games recently long runs in full accoutrements are growing popular among the citizen-soldiery.

BASEBALL
Diamond News and Gossip

The annual meeting of the American League will be held in Chicago in October instead of December, according to an announcement from Ban Johnson.

* * *

William H. Locke, president of the Phillies, who died yesterday at Ventnor, N. J., will be buried in Pittsburg, his old home.

* * *

Double-headers were thick in the National League. The Giants won both games with the Cardinals and the Phillies defeated the Reds twice. The Cubs paid the Boston Braves back in their own coin by drubbing them twice, thus breaking the deadlock with the Pirates. The Dodgers went down to defeat before the Pirates.

* * *

First Baseman Konetchy of the Cardinals nearly got three home runs. Two of his four-baggers were counted as such, but Umpire Quigley ruled that the third drive was a blocked ball and sent Konetchy back in spite of the protests of the Cardinals. The ball went into the left field bleachers then bounded out.

* * *

The Yankees began their Western trip by beating the White Sox right handily. The Red Sox shut out the St. Louis Browns, while the Athletics lost ground by being deefated by the Naps. The Tigers celebrated their return to Navin field by walloping the Senators.

Detailed Description of This Wonderful Machine

Body metal, one passenger, wheel base 56 inches, 16-inch steel wheels, with 3-4-inch rubber tires; tread of wheel, 21 1-2 inches, made of material that gives spring and strength. This is a real vehicle—not a toy—and will uphold the weight of a grown man. The big racing hood is sheet steel and slanting seat, giving the driver real racing position; one big feature is the steering knuckle gear. The front wheels turn in response to the steering wheel, just as the front wheels of a real automobile, the axle being stationary. This eliminates danger of upsetting on curves.

These cars are carefully finished and beautifully painted. This model can be used with pleasure and safety by girls as well as boys. Remember, this machine is not a toy or plaything. It is a real miniature race car, according to the skill and endurance of the driver.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Trinity Property Sold for $60,000

Building at $35,000 in Friday Deal. Big Trades Pending—Monthly Luncheon—Alterations $15,000.

A third sale in the $150,000 total of the Smith & Ewing Real Estate Agency was announced Friday concerning the conveyance of a three-story and basement building at 12, 14 and 16 Trinity avenue to J. R. Smith & Co. from the Georgia Realty Trust Company for $60,000.

This lot is 64 1-2 by 105 feet, and the front foot price was, accordingly, $911. The building cost $35,000 and was formerly occupied by the Southern Book Concern, and is now under lease to Sterchi Bros. & Barnes, a furniture concern. It is known as the Hillyer property. The location is on the north side of Trinity avenue, between Whitehall and Forsyth streets. The deal was handled by Roe Price, of the Trust company, and Dr. J. T. Daves and John H. Maddox, of Smith & Ewing.

Big Projects Brewing.

Pople who think the local real estate market is quiet will be interested to learn that some of the biggest deals in the city's history are under way and are expected to be announced soon. These will come within a month or 60 days, according to the real estate men who are interested in them. Big improvements go with some.

A dealer who trades a good part of the time in private properties has a trade on which will make past cash transactions look small in comparison. There are other arrangements which are being kept exceedingly quiet.

Many Heating Plants.

The Moncrief Furnace Company has applied to Building Inspector Ed R. Hays for permits to install nine furnaces at an aggregate of $1,445.

Demand for Healey Space.

Demand for office building space seems never to cease in Atlanta. The Third National Bank Building was filled, it will be recalled, before the sixth elevator had been installed, and so with many other structures. The Hurt Building is all practically under lease and the Healey Building has had applications from nearly 100 business concerns.

The Healey applications are about sufficient to fill the structure, although the leases have not yet been signed. A. F. and Milton Liebman are the agents for the building.

Realty Board Dinner.

Members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board gathered early Friday afternoon in the Georgia Pine Room of the Hotel Ansley for their regular monthly luncheon. Delegates to the convention at Winnipeg were present and told interesting stories of experiences in the Canadian Northwest.

The question of the convention for 1916 was discussed informally, and the opinion seemed to be that Atlanta would win out.

It now develops that Memphis did not carry a formal invitation to Winnipeg, although the intention to do this was expressed two weeks before the meeting opened. Local dealers take this to mean that Atlanta will have no opposition from the Tennessee city, although no chances are being taken. President White, ex-President Glover, Fitzhugh Knox and S. B. Turman are confident that Atlanta will win.

"Atlanta will get the convention if she wants it," declared Mr. White.

Alterations to Cost $15,000.

Luther Z. Rosser and J. H. Porter have filed an application with Building Inspector Ed R. Hays for a permit to make additions and alterations to their building at 63 and 65 North Pryor street, the same to cost $15,000. Gude & Co. have the contract.

This structure was formerly occupied by the Dougherty-Little-Redwine Company, a wholesale dry goods merchants, and was bought in February for $184,550. There are six stories and about 70,000 square feet of floor space, practically all of which has been leased by the Forest & George Adair Real Estate Agency. The lot is on the east side of the street, between Auburn avenue and Edgewood avenue.

The building will be converted into offices, with elevators and other modern conveniences. The dry goods merchants are now at 90 and 92 South Pryor street.

A. D. Thomson on Trip.

Albert D. Thomson, of the real estate firm of Thomson & Lynes, has left for New York and other points on his vacation. Mr. Thomson will inquire into the Eastern real estate and money situations.

Aid of State Chamber.

Immigrants coming into Georgia and settling on farms are expected to find a great deal of help through the newly created State Chamber of Commerce, which will supply them with accurate and detailed information. Heretofore the facilities for this service have been very limited, the State Department of Agriculture and the various local chambers of commerce and real estate men attempting to supply the want.

Thousands of thrifty immigrants from the Middle West are seeking Georgia farms for trucking and general farm purposes, and the State Chamber will attempt to locate them profitably. This class of immigrants is educated and desirable. Many of them have attended the State institutions of the Northwest and learned scientific farming methods. The impossibility of getting land where individuals own so much acreage drives them southward, and the comparative sparse settling of South Georgia presents unusually good opportunities.

ABSENCE OF RAINS SENDS COTTON UP

Giles Report and Unfavorable Crop Advices Drive Shorts to Cover—Cables Firm.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Conditions reflecting the cotton market at the opening to-day were a little more bullish than yesterday and first prices were 5 to 10 points higher than the closing quotations of Thursday. The Giles report was regarded as moderately bullish, but weather conditions in the Southwest proved another factor, which encouraged an active buying, which was attributed chiefly to local short covering. Brokers, representing spot interests, also bought.

While there was no rains shown on the map for Texas and Oklahoma, still reports from Dallas state that there were scattered showers in several localities, and New Orleans wires that indications point for further rains over Sunday. However, the market failed to bulge from the initial high point, except the most remote positions were lowered about 2 points, but soon retrieved the decline.

During the forenoon offerings became stiff and considerably scattered, resulting in the entire list rallying 5 to 7 points from the beginning range, except August, which held steady at 12 points advance over the previous close.

There was a decided change in sentiment late yesterday and there was considerable late buying which was reflected in Liverpool markets this morning. While Kofler, of New Orleans, is predicting rain over Sunday for the West, the Government forecast says hot and dry.

Wall Street and the uptown crowd have been among the leading sellers today. There was also a good deal of speculative buying. In theabsence of rains over Sunday it is very probable that the market will sell considerably higher. On the other hand, should rains some it will undoubtedly have a depressing effect.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: August, 11.58; October, 11.05; December, 10.98; January, 10.88; March, 10.96.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: August, 11.52; October, 11.07; January, 11.05; March, 11.15.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 15.—Liverpool continues the same. Futures firmer than spots, which are quoted 1 point lower to-day; sales of only 4,000 bales, while futures are 2 to 3 better than due, probably on reports of crop deterioration from the Western States.

The map shows fair weather in Oklahoma; partly cloudy in the rest of the belt, the only precipitation at Abilene and Brownsville, whereas private reports show scattered showers overnight over a large area in Texas. Good showers in Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee and the Atlantics. Indications are for unsettled and showery weather over practically the entire belt.

Our market opened about 5 higher and advanced further to 11.12 for October. Trade quiet, and in spite of attempts toward a short scare (on reports of drouth damage), the market showed a lack of confidence.

The fact is that Texas has had showery weather for the past four days and indications continue favorable to more extensive rains over Oklahoma also. The Central and Eastern States are doing very well and interest in forward shipments by the trade is disappointingly slow. There is, however, a short interest of minor strength in the market, and, as sentiment has been so much worked up by the dry spell in the West, attempts at a reaction might become more successful should rains fail to appear over Sunday.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Miller & Co.: We ultimately look for lower prices.

Shearson, Hammill & Co.: The damage in the southwest should be reflected in somewhat higher prices.

Logan & Bryant: We believe the selling side presents the greatest attractions at present.

Miss Giles gives county returns from the cotton belt as of August 10, making conditions 78.4, as compared with 81.8 July 25, and 83.4 one month ago, and 76.7 per cent last year as of August 10. The States showing deterioration are: Alabama, 3 per cent; Mississippi, 2; Louisiana, 1; Texas, 7; Arkansas, 6; Tenessee, 3; Oklahoma, 9. Those showing improvement are; North Carolina, 2 per cent; South Carolina, 3; Georgia, 2; Florida, 1. She further states that the deterioration of 4.4 per cent is due mainly to drouth and severe heat west of the Mississippi River.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Limited forward demand on one hand and trade belief the crop is rapidly deteriorating in the West on the other, were the conflicting features in Yesterday's cotton market, around which were grouped several smaller issues of more or less moment. The trade as a whole can see no logic in bulling a market that is not accumulating forward demand, even though the pause in buying be known to be caused by something other than lack of general requirement. Manchester has been such a busy buyer during the past two months that indifference there, even for a short while, looms large in trade eyes.

"Meanwhile, there is much controversy is pending a little below the market, which would begin to figure should general rains not come to the West in the near future, should Washington, some fine morning announce that the 'Clarke rider' had been kicked off the tariff bill.

"Mean while, there is much controversy over the weather in the West and feeling among the talent runs rather high. One school of thought contends that drouth has done very serious and irreparable damage in Oklahoma and is causing severe deterioration in Texas every day. These people contend that drouth is acute in all save a few of the more favored sections. Another school of thought asserts that moderate but slightly beneficial rains have fallen over most of the dry area, that the deficit in moisture is not so great as it was last year, that the damage done is more imaginary than real, and that general rains are now on the way."

The market steadied after the call on the forecast, which pointed for dry weather in the western belt. Riordan, Lee, Cone and Cardoza were the leading buyers. Hicks, Shearson and Schley were the leading sellers.

Early advices by telegraph companies show extensive showers overnight in parts of east, central, north and west Texas. Western Union reports showers from Abilene to Big Springs, covering large tract in west Texas, Omaha, Cairo, Cushing, Frankton in east Texas; Ballinger in central west Texas.—Kafter.

Enormous Trade in Wool; Mills Buying

BOSTON, Aug. 15.—More wool has been sold during the past week than any similar period since the first of the year. Conservative estimates give the total sales as above 3,000,000 pounds; some run as high as 5,000,000. Prices are not materially changed, though holders are disposed to ask a little more for good lots of unwashed fleeces.

Large sales are noted of territory woods, graded and in the original bags, both cloth mills and yarns spinners having been among the recent buyers. Local holders of washed fleeces are still asking too much for their wool. Considerable foreign wool has recently been withdrawn from bond by manufacturers. Receipts in pounds for the week ended and including Wednesday were as follows:

	1913	1912
Domestic	8,498,690	9,994,531
Foreign	599,880	5,574,076
Totals	9,098,570	15,739,607

Total receipts of 9,098,570 pounds compare with 11,088,928 the preceding week, of which 10,676,202 were domestic.

Receipts in pounds from and including January 1, 1913, as compared with the corresponding period in 1912, were as follows:

	1913	1912
Domestic	100,156,258	155,590,404
Foreign	43,293,761	91,117,263

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—The weather will be generally fair to-night and Saturday in most of the region east of the Mississippi River. Showers will probably occur late to-night or Saturday in the upper Lake region and there will be local showers during the next 36 hours in the South Atlantic States.

The temperature will rise slowly during the next 36 hours in the Northeastern districts and will begin falling late Saturday in the upper Lake region. In the Middle and Southern States east of the Mississippi River the changes will not be important.

General Forecast.

Forecast till 7 p. m. Saturday:

Georgia—Unsettled, local showers in east portion to-night or Saturday.

Virginia and North Carolina—Generally fair to-night and Saturday.

South Carolina—Unsettled, local showers in east portion to-night or Saturday.

Florida—Local showers to-night or Saturday.

Alabama and Mississippi—Generally fair to-night and Saturday.

Tennessee—Fair to-night and Saturday.

VISIBLE SUPPLY OF COTTON.

The visible supply of American cotton during the past week shows a decrease of 105,012 bales, according to Secretary Hester, of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, and during the same period last year the supply decreased 102,999 bales, as compared with an increase of 760 bales during the corresponding period the year before. Other kinds decreased 99,099 bales, against a decrease of 56,000 bales during the corresponding week last year and a decrease of 37,000 bales for the same week in 1911.

The total visible supply of American cotton for the week decreased 166,012 bales, with a decrease of 157,999 bales the same week last year and a decrease of 36,240 bales for the same week in 1911.

WEAK CABLES HIT CANADIAN PACIFIC

High Price of Corn Causes Hesitation in Street—Range Narrow and Business Light.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Canadian Pacific showed the sharpest decline at the opening of the stock market to-day, falling 1½ to 218¾ on European weakness. Within half an hour it increased this decline, but later rallied.

The list showed irregularity. Mexican Petroleum showed unexpected strength and advanced 1 point.

Stocks which were up included Texas Company, ¾; Great Northern Ore, ⅛; St. Paul, ⅜, and American Car and Foundry, ½.

The declines included Westinghouse, ⅛; Utah Copper, ⅛; Steel Common, ⅜; United States Rubber, common, ⅜; Union Pacific, ¼; Southern Pacific, ⅜; Rock Island, ⅜; Reading, ¼; Chesapeake and Ohio, ¾; and Amalagamated Copper, ⅛.

New Haven again dropped below par, selling at 99⅝ for the loss of ⅜.

Reading recovered and made a fractional gain before 11 o'clock.

The curb was irregular. Americans in London were lower. Mexican Railway bonds are being sold both here and in London on reports that President Huerta is trying to mortgage the roads to get government funds.

The tone in the late forenoon was firm. A number of the leading issues were in fairly good demand moving up fractionally. Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Steel common led the list in a slight upward movement. Rock Island was an exception, however, declining a point under heavy selling by Western houses. Call money is loaning and renewing at 2¼.

Gasoline Is a Necessity of Life Because---

Industry and Farming Are Necessary to Life, and GASOLINE Is Necessary to Industry and Farming---When Will Government Investigate the Gasoline Extortion?

(Copyright, 1913.)

Every day in some part of the country the price of gasoline is increased.

Men that used to buy it for six and seven cents a gallon now buy it for twenty cents, twenty-five cents, and even more.

The gentlemen that control the gasoline supply need not worry about business or prosperity.

They simply make up their minds just how much robbery the public will stand—and raise the price of gasoline accordingly.

They can say to themselves, "With gasoline at eighteen cents we were getting so many millions. Let us sell gasoline at twenty cents and make so many millions more. Then gasoline at twenty-two cents, and make still more millions."

Only this question interests them: "Had we better take it all in a lump and run the risk of trouble, or take it slowly and cautiously?"

How many farmers after buying agricultural implements requiring the use of gasoline find themselves unable to use them economically because of the excessive price?

One trouble with the big Rumley Company, maker of agricultural implements, was the fact that not allowing for the thievish inclination of those that control the price of gasoline, the company built a great number of gasoline tractors—and has them on its hands unable to sell them, BECAUSE THE FARMERS FIND THAT THEY CAN'T AFFORD TO USE THE GASOLINE TRACTORS BECAUSE OF THE PRESENT PRICE OF GASOLINE.

What is this gasoline that gives tens of millions a year to a few, through extortion from many?

It is a product very simply made of crude oil pumped out of the earth.

If this country had been properly managed from the start that oil WOULD BE THE PROPERTY OF THE PEOPLE, PAYING REVENUE AND PROFIT ONLY TO THE PEOPLE.

This gasoline is part of the wealth stored up in the earth millions of years ago, now monopolized for a few and used as a means of extortion.

This country pays out millions annually to prevent robbery on a SMALL scale.

Woe to the man who takes a pair of shoes, a loaf of bread or an overcoat.

We are willing to spend millions to catch and punish him.

Why shouldn't we have a national police to stop thievery on a big scale, as well as the municipal police to stop the thievery on a small scale?

Why worry so much about the poor devil who steals ten dollars occasionally, and ignore calmly the very rich devil who steals ten millions or more at regular intervals?

The necessities of life, the necessities of industry, should not be agents of extortion.

The prices of necessities should be investigated by government, regulated by government.

And the gigantic organizations that are able to produce cheaply by combination and are permitted to rob wholesale should be compelled to give to the public their fair share of the economies and to sell AT A FAIR PRICE that which costs them nothing in comparison to the price asked.

The gasoline stealing has gone on about long enough.

Government should do something more drastic about it than, loudly with the beating of drums, bring about so-called "dissolution" of the trust, which has simply put up the price of stocks, put up the price of gasoline and increased the prosperity of the smiling individuals who laugh at government and laugh at law.

: The City's Children :

By PERCY F. MONTGOMERY.

I WISH that all the children of the city's grimy street
Were out here with these wild flowers beneath this sky of blue;
I'd like to see their faces as they scampered o'er these hills—
I'd like to see them happy, wouldn't you?

They're stunted, maimed and weary, and their eyes are far away;
The sunshine never sees them and they never know 'tis true.
There's no flower in the alley and no perfume in the air—
Oh, I'd like to see them happy, wouldn't you?

Sorry jest to sing on Sunday, "Ye did it unto me,"
With the children all in prison and the green fields far away,
Nodding flowers wait their handclasp, where the sunshine cleaves the blue—
Oh, I'd like to see them happy, wouldn't you?

In the Movies & In Real Life

Laziness Is the Root of Most Misery

Unhappy, Are You? Do You Enjoy It (Many Do) or Are You Too Lazy To Be Otherwise? This Is Especially the Case With Women.

By DOROTHY DIX.

AMONG my acquaintances is a young woman who, ten years ago, was an extraordinarily brilliant and beautiful girl, talented in half a dozen different directions. This girl had the misfortune to marry a drunkard, or, to tell the simple truth, she did marry a drunkard in spite of all that her family and friends could do to prevent her.

It Turned Out as Such Marriages Nearly Always Do.

The marriage turned out as such marriages almost invariably do, and after enduring seven or eight years of untold misery she divorced her husband, and went back home to live with her two little children.

This woman is still young. She is only 32, and in all probability has thirty or forty years more of life left to her, and that's a long time in which to be happy or miserable, and to make yourself a blessing or a curse to those about you.

And she has accepted her misery. She has enrolled herself among the human tragedies. She is the most haggard figure of woe that you ever saw. She has permitted herself to turn into one of those cynical, bitter, disgruntled women, with a tongue with a razor edge, from which the boldest flee.

Her family are in very moderate circumstances, not able to support her and her children, though they willingly divide what they have with her. Her poverty is another goad in her side, but she accepts this, as she does her other sorrow, as just another drop of bitter in her cup, and another thing to wail over.

This woman has just one pleasure in life, and that is that she lives in a perfect debauch of self pity. She keeps herself drunk on her own tears, and drugged with the thought of her own troubles until she is just as dulled and lethargic as any man that ever wallowed in a gutter, or lay stupefied in an opium joint.

None of her friends ever speaks of her except as "poor Sadie," but for my part, I always feel like screeching "Coward! Quitter! Deserter!" at her, for in my eyes there is no more contemptible figure in the world than that of the man or woman who refuses to fight the battle of life, who surrenders in the very first skirmish, and before the fight is really on.

Of course, it's a terrible thing to make a mistake in marriage. I am not minimizing that sorrow, though it has always seemed to me that a woman who married a man knowing that he drank, was in honor bound to stand for a drunken husband, but in this enlightened age people are not bound forever to the cross of their matrimonial mistakes.

Divorce Is Unpleasant; So Is the Knife of the Surgeon.

Divorce is also unpleasant, but it is like a surgeon's knife that cuts away a festering sore, and the clean wound it leaves is a thousandfold more endurable than the daily nagging and gnawing of a sorrow that feeds on your heart like a worm on a rose.

At any rate, having made an unfortunate marriage and having divorced an unworthy husband, the incident is closed so far as the woman is concerned, and she should put the affair out of her life. She certainly does herself no good by sitting up and brooding over what might have been. That is with the past, and her business is with the future.

She can't change what has been one iota by thinking about it, or weeping over it, or regretting it, but she can make what is to be full of happiness and content, and brightness, if she will.

No One Need Be Miserable Unless He or She Enjoys It.

Nobody need be perpetually miserable unless they really enjoy it and unless they get more fun out of crying than they do out of laughing. Plenty of people do. They are built that way, especially women who are most naturally of a sort of half mourning complexion.

This woman of whom I am writing—and there are thousands like her—has accepted misery, and dependence, and poverty as her lot in life. And she needn't endure this melancholy existence for another hour if she has the backbone of a fishing worm. She's strong, and healthy, and young. She is intelligent enough to learn how to do anything on earth if she'd put as much energy into it as she does to mourning over her fate, and as much thought as she does in dwelling on her troubles.

All that she needs is to say to herself, "I am not going to be miserable. I am not going to have my life wrecked by one mistake that I made when I was a foolish young girl. I am not going to be a dependent. I am not going to be poor. I am going to roll up my sleeves and go to work, and fill my life so full of fresh interests and occupation that I won't even have time to remember that I've got a past. I'm going to make money to buy the things I want, and to give my children the advantages they would have had if they had had the right sort of a father, and I am going to be happy because I am going to be of some use to my fellow creatures."

Just the grit to make the fight is all that stands between this woman and happiness, and between every other woman of the weeping willow type and the sunshine. The time was when there was nothing for the unhappy woman to do but to sit down and weep and lament, but that time has gone by, thank God. If a woman misses the trail to contentment in one direction now, she can face about and go the other way and arrive at the same goal.

The reason most people are miserable is because they are lazy. They are too indolent to make an effort to secure happiness for themselves, and this is especially the case with women.

Happiness Is for Us All If We Have the Energy to Get It.

Women are sick because they are too lazy to take enough exercise to keep them healthy; they are dependent because they are too lazy to get up and hustle for themselves; they are poor because they are too lazy to do the hard work that it takes to earn money.

Happiness is for us all if we have only the energy and determination to reach out and take it, and for us to succumb to misery is a confession of weakness for which we deserve to be ostracized by our friends instead of being pitied by them.

Ways of Living

The City and Country Are in Constant Warfare, He Says. The Trend Always Toward Large Centers of Population.

Written For The Georgian

By the Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

DR. JOSIAH STRONG'S new book, "Our World," the first of a projected series of three volumes, commends itself to the attention of those who are interested in the trend of present events and in the social crisis which we all somehow suspect to be approaching.

The general purpose of the book is to show that the current of the general life, here and abroad, is reaching the point where it can no longer be held within the channel that it has worn for itself, nor restrained by the barriers with which it has been artificially dammed.

The author is temperate in his statement of the situation and thoroughly optimistic in his anticipations, but puts the case strongly and illustrates his position clearly and in terms in which hesitation finds no part.

The closing chapter occupies itself with the new problem of the city. The author has no faith in, and little patience with, the cry of "Back to the Land." There has always been a drift cityward. Somewhat of the urban impulse came to its expression as early in human history as the building of the Tower of Babel in the plain of Shinar, as recorded in the Old Testament narrative. Men are gregarious, like sheep, and tend to live in herds.

Obstacles To City Life Have Been Overcome.

This disposition was formerly somewhat discouraged by the great mortality incident to condensed population because of unsanitary conditions, an obstacle which has now been largely overcome by improved methods. Formerly, also, the size of a city was limited by imperfect means of transporting a sufficient supply of water and of food material.

Steam and civil engineering have now gotten the better of these difficulties also, so that under those changed conditions there is no necessary limit set to aggregations of population. Consequently the gregarious impulse can now have allowed to it perfectly free scope.

So that, although the constant effort is being made to get people out of the city into the country, and although the Government has brought pressure to bear in the same direction, and during the 50 years following 1850 had put nearly half a billion acres of land at the free disposition of the people, the urban population continued to increase more rapidly than the rural—three times as rapidly between 1880 and 1900, as is reported on the basis of the national census.

All of this seems sufficient evidence of the fact that there is a current setting in the direction of the city, having its source in the very nature of things, and moving with a momentum which neither humanitarian effort nor governmental discouragement will suffice to resist.

Opposing the Cityward Trend Like Trying to Bottle the Wind.

That this drift cityward has its origin in other than local and transient causes and inheres in economic conditions and in man's native disposition, is proved by the fact that for hundreds of years fruitless efforts have been made to prevent people from leaving the fields for the town. Dr. Strong quotes the appeals made by Aristotle, Cicero and Virgil and the legal measures to the same end adopted by Justinian and Queen Elizabeth.

Opposing the tendency would, therefore, seem to be very much like trying to imprison the wind or like taking up arms against the tide. If this movement is to continue, and at its present rapid rate of increase, and if our population is going to bulk itself at urban centers, the prospect is fraught with practical and serious consequences.

We have to think what will be its effect upon human physique and human character. We look to the country for physical sturdiness. It is by recruits from the country that the city maintains a certain moral determination and strenuousness that seem not to germinate and thrive so readily in urban soil. Whatever may be the reason for it, such undoubtedly remains the fact. Perhaps it is because the country furnished more that is real, the city more that is ficticious.

Christian Science and Other Subjects

Editor The Georgian:

In The Georgian of August 9, Ella Wheeler Wilcox has an article, "Live First—Talk Afterwards," in which she classes Universal Life Principle, Vibration, Mental Science, New Thought and Christian Science as kindred subjects. The writer being a student of Christian Science desires to dissociate Christian Science from these so-called relations and show that it has nothing in common with any of these doctrines. In Science and Health, page 111, Mrs. Eddy says, "The principle of divine metaphysics is God; the practice of divine metaphysics is the utilization of the power of Truth over error; its rules demonstrate its Science." The method of applying this rule in Christian Science is to yield thought to the divine will or influence, in trust and confidence. This is the faith or understanding which the Apostle Paul designates as "the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Jesus proved this rule in all of His wonderful works. He said, "Of Myself I do nothing; not My will but thine be done; as the Father worketh hitherto, I work."

Mental Science, New Thought, Mental Suggestion, and Kindred Subjects, confuse the action of the human will or carnal mind with the divine will or law, hence their failure. Out of this confusion, or lack of misunderstanding, comes the inability of certain types to illustrate by "their faces," their manner, "their work," that they have found a panacea for human ills.

"How to control Destiny," "How to grow success," "How to attain self-mastery," "How to be well and prosperous" are subjects not one of which appear in any of Mrs. Eddy's writings or in any of the periodicals published by the Christian Science Association. These subjects indicate and suggest the effort of the human will.

Christian Science follows the admonition of Jesus: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and all these things shall be added unto you."

The human will, impelled by its own force or volition, consumes its vitality and is self-destructive. This destruction manifests itself in physical and nervous breakdown; hence its weakness and failure to heal either itself or another. Christian Science relies on its divine principle, speaks the word, as Jesus did, and trusts this word to fully accomplish that whereunto it is sent. "The Word of God is quick and powerful." It demonstrates itself in health, harmony, joy, peace, love and good will to those who rely on it. On page 446 "Science and Health," by Mrs. Eddy, are these words: "The exercise of will brings on a hypnotic state detrimental to health and integrity of thought." Mrs. Wilcox says, "Wait until you succeed before preaching success." If those who have achieved great success in any department of life had followed this line of thinking, the world would have known little success. "Seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you," are spiritual admonitions coming down the ages from Him whom the world recognizes as the greatest success. Seek under divine guidance and the way to success is already open.

Christian Science opens wide its arms of love to all "dissatisfied souls," and they come to it from all classes of society, seeking solace for their wounds, heartaches and disappointments. Some are "unkempt, nervous and erratic;" for this reason they need the tender sympathy, the patient instruction offered in this haven of rest by those who have gained through this great revelation some understanding of how to love our neighbor as ourself.

GUARD OVER SULZER IN MANSION

Impeached Governor Posts Sentries and Defies Foes—Attack on Murphy Planned.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 15.—While Albany swarmed to-day with scores of private detectives who kept every State officer under close surveillance, the stage was set for a fight in court to determine whether William Sulzer, who was impeached by the Assembly for high crimes and misdemeanors, or Martin H. Glynn, the Lieutenant Governor, shall exercise the prerogatives of the office of State executive until the Court of Impeachment sits on September 18.

Surrounded by strong guards, Mr. Sulzer, the impeached executive, held the official gubernatorial residence with the privy seal of the Commonwealth in his possession. The Great Seal of the State, however, was chained to a pedestal in the office of Secretary of State May.

It was learned to-day that Lieutenant Governor Glynn will resort to the power of his office to force Sulzer to relinquish his claim as Governor in case he elects to ignore a formal letter informing him that Mr. Glynn is the executive.

State Secretary for Glynn.

The letter, which is a brief one, contains the statement that the Assembly has impeached William Sulzer and calls upon him to turn over the possession of the office, State documents and the custody of the executive chamber forthwith.

"I recognize Mr. Glynn as Governor, and shall officially honor no commands of Mr. Sulzer," said Secretary of State May to-day. "If he takes exceptions to my position, I shall ask the Attorney General for an opinion and abide by it."

It is understood that Mr. Glynn is to make a request in the form of an official order to-day, which the Secretary of State will honor. Thus two moves will be made to secure at once an opinion from the Attorney General.

Street Gatherings Banned.

All the reserve police are on duty with instructions to prevent street gatherings which may culminate in political riots. Never before, even during Senatorial investigations, have so many private detectives swarmed the State capital. Every man in public life is being watched.

It has become known that Judge D. H. Cady Herrick and other of Mr. Sulzer's counselors are casting about to find if they can bring criminal charges against Charles F. Murphy, State leader of Tammany, on the ground that Mr. Murphy had conspired with other Democrats to cause the downfall of the government.

Friends of the Governor declare that the executive could have forestalled impeachment in the Assembly if he had consented to relinquish his fight for certain State measures. This he refused to do in the full belief that the Assembly vote would show a majority against the impeachment resolution.

Fresh complications have been added by the fact that Aaron J. Levy, majority leader in the Assembly, has become overcome by the excitement and is confined to his bed, suffering from nervous prostration.

Give Legal Aid Free.

The following lawyers have consented to represent Governor Sulzer without charge: Irving G. Vann of Syracuse; Harvey D. Hinman, of Binghamton; A. G. Fox, of New York, and Louis Marshall, of New York.

Thomas W. Lawson, of Boston, may get into the fight, as he has offered Governor Sulzer $100,000 with which to fight Tammany if Mr. Lawson is allowed to direct the campaign. Friends of the Governor urged him to accept.

Mr. Glynn has retained Attorney Edwin Countryman, Patrick C. Dugan and several other well-known lawyers. Although 75 years old, Mr. Countryman is regarded as one of the best lawyers in this city.

Poor Woman! She's Losing Figure and Getting Horse Feet

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 15.—"In a few generations American women will have feet like horses," said Miss Clara Houston, of Chicago, owner of the most perfect feet in the world, "unless they stop wearing slippers and shoes that throw the feet out of shape and squeeze the toes so that they overlap." According to Miss Houston, dancing is extremely harmful for the feet. She declares that the tango and the turkey trot have made a number of chiropodists prosperous this year.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 15.—The wife of the American farmer is losing her figure. This is due to water—its handling, not its use—according to President Joseph Cook, of the Mississippi Normal College. "The water for the kitchen has to be lifted so many times after it is drawn from the well," said Mr. Cook, "that the lift a day will be brought up to a ton, and the lifting of a ton a day will take the elasticity out of a woman's step, the bloom out of her cheek and enjoyment from her soul."

Miller Given Boost For Macon Mayoralty

MACON, Aug. 15.—In the clash over the naming of a new City Executive Committee by a mass meeting at the Auditorium last night, the Mayoralty boom for Representative Wallace Miller received pronounced impetus.

While the present candidates, A. L. Dasher and Bridges Smith, through their friends, sought to name the new committee and Mr. Smith practically triumphed in this respect, yet the nominations were all put by former Representative Walter DeFore, who announced that he was present to protect Mr. Miller's interests. The charge was made on the floor that the administration had corraled eleven unnaturalized Assyrians and was voting them.

Col. Peel Praises English Organist

Colonel W. L. Peel, of the Atlanta Music Festival Association, who has heard Eugene Wyatt play, declared Friday that music lovers here will be given a rare treat Sunday afternoon when the famous English organist appears at the free concert in the Auditorium. Mr. Wyatt, who has been the organist at the Crystal Palace, London; Royal Albert Hall, and musical director of All Hallows Cathedral, is one of the world's eminent organists.

He has frequently played in London to more than 12,000 people at a time. His Atlanta program will be of a nature to give full play to his brilliant ability and technique.

Antis Fight Special Suffrage Committee

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—On the ground that the womansuffragists were wasting the time of members of Congress, and that such waste was "politically immoral," anti-suffragists appealed to the Rules Committee of the House to-day against the creation of a special committee on woman suffrage.

Mrs. William Force Scott, of New York, attacked Miss Jane Adams, saying there was no good reason for the latter's suggestion that the present committees of the House were unable to deal fairly with the suffrage question.

Picnicker Falls Into Burgoo Pot; Stewed

LEXINGTON, KY., Aug. 15.—Nat Gist is near death to-day after being boiled in a kettle of burgoo at the Blue Grass Fair last night.

He was tending the fire under the huge caldron which was buried so that the top of the kettle was level with the ground. His foot slipped and he tumbled head first into the boiling food.

Wife Given 63 Cents A Week Asks Divorce

CINCINNATI, Aug. 15.—Because her husband insisted that 63 cents a week was enough to support herself and baby, Mrs. Bessie Horowitz has asked for a divorce.

ATLANTAN IS KILLED IN WRECK

Hugh W. Pennington Meets Death in West Point Route Crash Near Hogansville, Ga

Hugh W. Pennington, No. 165 South Pryor street, was killed when a through freight on the Atlanta and West Point Railroad between Atlanta and Montgomery was ditched at Hogansville, Ga., early Friday morning.

According to officials of the road, the wreck was caused by a spreading of the rails. Eleven cars of merchandise and three cars of baggage were derailed, the engine remaining on the track. None of the train crew was injured.

As a result of the wreck passenger trains on the Atlanta and West Point are being detoured over the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic by way of Union City and LaGrange, Ga.

Wrote a Poem for The Judge; Is Freed

CHICAGO, Aug. 15. — James J. Ahearn, who claims to be a poet, was found in a prosaic stupor by the South Chicago police. When arraigned he defended himself before Judge Sullivan. He was asked to prove his occupation, and retired to another room with a pencil and an inspired look. This is what he did:

"I hope, Mr. Judge, the day never comes
When you, like myself, will have to write poems.
And may you and your wife
Live a happy life."

"It wouldn't be right to send you to jail," said the Judge. "You'd be writing poems for all the other prisoners. Discharged."

University Club to Widen Its Influence

A non-resident board of advisers for the University Club has been suggested by Thomas W. Connally, secretary, and others, and to sound the sentiment of the members a letter has been sent out to them. Mr. Connally said Thursday he had had a stack of replies, and that most of the correspondents favored the idea.

The plan is to make the University Club more of a social and educational organization and to extend its influence over the State. To accomplish this the officials of the club feel that it is necessary to name an advisory board of non-resident members. At present the club is run by a governing board of Council in conjunction with the executive committee.

Girl in Diggs Case Withstands Grill

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 15.—The trial of former State Architect Maury I. Diggs on a charge of violating the white slave law was resumed to-day with Lola Norris, one of the principals in the flight to Reno, on the stand.

The self-possessed, confident bearing that marked Miss Norris' first appearance on the witness stand yesterday had not deserted her and she answered the questions flung at her by the defense in a frank, firm manner.

Miss Norris testified that she was a good girl until she arrived in Reno, and the defense made unavailing efforts to discredit this statement.

France Trains Eagles To Fight Aeroplanes

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, Aug. 15.—The French War Office will use eagles to harass possible enemies in aeroplanes, according to Pastor Schuster, well-known ornithologist, who declares birds are being trained to attack models of aeroplanes, destroying them with their beaks and claws.

When Is Boarding House Not One, Is Riddle for Mayson

Recorder Pro Tem. Preston has requested City Attorney Mayson to be present in police court Friday afternoon to construe the city boarding house ordinance and tax ordinances, which are apparently in conflict.

The question was raised in the case of Mrs. B. E. Carroll, of No. 15 Houston street, accused of conducting a boarding house without a license. A vides that all boarding houses must recently enacted city ordinance prohave a license. The tax ordinance provides that all boarding houses of as many as fifteen rooms must pay a license fee and specifies the amount.

Mrs. Carroll's house contains less than fifteen rooms, and she contends that she does not need a license.

Grace Church Plans A Record Revival

What is expected to be the greatest revival in the history of the church will begin Sunday at the Grace Methodist Church, corner of Boulevard and Highland avenue. Dr. Charles O. Jones has arranged the revival and will be assisted by O. W. Stapleton and the Rev. J. M. Bass, of the South Georgia conference. Mr. Stapleton will conduct the choir with the assistance of J. Gordon Moore and Miss Ruth Chapman.

A feature of the revival will be the holding of cottage prayer meetings sixteen of which have already been arranged. These cottage prayer meetings will be held daily, while there will be services at the church morning, afternoon and evening.

3 Brothers Operated On for Appendicitis

ST. JOSEPH, MO. Aug. 15.—Three brothers, Frank, Henry and M. A. Matheny, of Blockton, Iowa, were operated on at a hospital here to-day for appendicitis. The operations, one after the other, were performed by the same physician, and all the patients are doing well.

Another brother died of appendicitis several months ago without an operation.

CLIMAX NEAR IN GREAT COURT FIGHT; CROWDS AGAIN FLOCK TO TRIAL

Interest in the trial of Leo M. Frank surged upward magically Friday when it was reported about the courtroom that the defense was nearing the close of its case, and that the defendant himself would be placed on the stand within a short time to make his only statement before his fate was placed in the hands of the twelve jurors.

The rumor spread outside the court house mysteriously and an unusual number sought admittance early in the day, although it was regarded as most unlikely that Frank would go to the stand until afternoon. Luther Rosser said he thought he would call the defendant about the middle of the afternoon. Attorney Arnold announced the defense probably would rest by night.

As the last witnesses were being called by the defense, Frank, his wife and his mother viewed the proceedings with the same calmness that has marked their demeanor since the trial began, with the exception of the outburst of the mother two days before. On Friday she looked steadfastly downward and slightly toward the judge's bench as though she might be having some difficulty in maintaining her attitude of confidence and calmness.

Likely Not to Call Mincey.

As the defense neared the close of its case, the probability of the calling of W. H. Mincey diminished. Mincey is the insurance solicitor who swore that he talked to Conley the afternoon of the murder of Mary Phagan, and that Conley boasted to him of killing a girl. The attorneys for Frank would not announce definitely their intentions in respect to Mincey or with what credence they looked upon his story.

Solicitor Dorsey brought before the jury for the first time Friday the intimation that Frank might have sought to have disquised hsi handwriting when he was asked to write the test notes by the police and detectives.

M. O. Nix, a credit man at Montag Bros., was called to the stand to identify Frank's handwriting on the financial sheet. When Dorsey took the witness over for cross-examination he showed photographic copies of the notes Frank write and asked, Nix if it was Frank's writing. The witness was unable to say. The Solicitor did not suggest any motive in disguising his hand.

The Solicitor endeavored to get Joseph Stelker, one of the factory foremen, to testify that Frank did not go in to view the body of Mary Phagan when he was taken down to identify the girl. Stelker testified for the defense that some of the red varnish used in the factory made stains very much like the supposed blood spots found on the factory floor.

The defense continued calling character witnesses at intervals throughout the forenoon. Nnoe was cross-questioned yesterday and all said Frank's character was good.

When the case was resumed Friday it was very problematical when the defense would finish. According to Luther Rosser, the defense may rest before evening with Leo Frank having told his story on the stand, but Reuben Arnold was of the opinion that the defense still would be putting in evidence to-morrow.

Frank's statement on the stand unquestionably will be one of the striking features of the trial. He has studied the State's case carefully, and it is said will not content himself with merely denying his guilt and explaining his movements on the fatal day, but will go somewhat into what he believes are the weaknesses of the State's chain of circumstances.

According to Frank's friends, the prisoner has been anxious for his attorneys to allow him to be cross-questioned, but they have doubted the wisdom of allowing him to go through the ordeal after the strain of the last few months.

Dr. J. E. Summerfield, No. 309 Washington street, who said he had lived in Atlanta for nineteen years and F. Schiff, No. 38 Fair street, who has lived here for fifty years, were the first witnesses called Friday and both responded favorably to the usual questions about Frank's character put by Attorney Arnold.

No attempt at cross-examination was made by Solicitor Dorsey. The State had an equally imposing army of witnesses—most of them women—ready to go on the stand in rebuttal of the evidence upholding the prisoner's character.

A curious problem will arise when they are summoned. The State can only ask its witnesses as to the general character of the defendant, just as the defense has done, and it will be up to the defense to ask about particular incidents on the cross-examination or rest content with allowing the opinions of the State's witnesses to go unchallenged. In that event it would be merely one group saying Frank's character is good against another saying it is bad, with the jury to decide which it prefers to believe.

B. J. Nix, of Marietta, an office boy for the National Pencil Company from April to October, 1912, was the third witness of the morning.

Q. What days were you off?—A. I was off nearly every Saturday until September.

Q. What time did you leave on the Saturdays you worked?—A. Usually I worked until 4 or 6 o'clock.

Q. Do you recall missing any Saturdays when you were supposed to work?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever know Frank to have any women there drinking with him?—A. No.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. When they were working on that building on Forsyth street, what time

Slit Uniforms for Chicago Policewomen

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Malefactors' scorn of the "lady cops" turned to real fear to-day when the "Catch 'em Skirts" was announced. The "Catch 'em" is a skirt of the usual narrow proportions, but equipped with a long slit and a drawstring. The "lady cop" can't run fast when the slit is closed for ordinary gait. But if speed is necessary, the wearer pulls a mysterious string, and—lo! a long slit, reaching up to the knee, appears.

Only policewomen, of course, will be allowed to wear the new skirt.

Fifteen Tons of Bad Chicken Confiscated

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—The Government to-day was holding 32,000 pounds of cold storage chicken and 66 bottles of imitation champagne. Libels ordering the seizure were issued after the poultry was traced from Kansas City to Philadelphia and back to Chicago.

The report of a Government inspector said 95 per cent of the fowls were diseased and unfit for food. The imitation champagne was labeled "Extra Dry Champain."

Another Big Jewel Theft Stirs England

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BIRMINGHAM, ENG., Aug. 15.—Another sensational jewel robbery was reported to-day. The police were informed that a packet containing "thousands of pounds worth of jewels" had been stolen from the mails between London and Birmingham.

Recently a necklace valued at $750,000 was stolen between Paris and London. The same thieves are suspected in both cases.

Here's Your Chance To Get $2,500 Dog

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—The $20,000 collection of Airedale Terrace American and English bulldogs, owned by Franz Porter, was offered for sale to-day by Frank L. Wean, referee in bankruptcy.

The Porter kennels were reputed to be the finest in the West. Several dogs in Porter's collection cost him as much as $2,500 each.

Paint Used in Pencil Factory Made Blood-Like Stains, Employee Says

did you leave?—A. About 4 o'clock.

Q. You don't know whether Frank had those women there when you were off or not, do you?—A. No.

The witness was excused and R. D. Greenfield was called.

Q. Are you one of the owners of the Venable Building in which the pencil company has its factory?—A. Yes.

Q. Who leased it?—A. Montag Bros., for a period of ten years.

Q. Do you know where the metal room is?—A. No.

Q. Where is the Clark Woodenware Company?—A. They occupied part of the building known as No. 37 Forsyth street.

Q. Since Montags have had that building has any new flooring been put down?—A. No.

Q. Do you know Leo M. Frank?—A. Yes.

Q. Is his character good or bad?—A. It is very good.

Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Are you closely connected with the defendant?—A. As landlord and tenant.

Q. Did you contribute to the fund for Frank's defense?—A. No.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. Have you ever heard of any such fund?—A. No.

Arnold, aside, said:

"I wish there was one."

Montag's Credit Man on Stand.

The witness was excused and N. O. Nix, credit man for Montag Brothers, was called to the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Have you come in contact with the handwriting of Leo Frank?—A. Yes, I saw many of his reports to Montag Brothers.

Q. Have you a fairly good acquaintance with him?—A. Yes, fairly good.

Mr. Arnold showed the witness a number of financial sheets of the National Pencil Company, including the one of April 26.

Q. Whose handwriting were these made in?—A. All are in the handwriting of Mr. Frank.

Q. Whose handwriting is that below those orders?—A. Miss Hattie Hall, our stenographer.

Q. Did you employ her?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know anything about her getting a raise in salary recently?—A. Yes, I gave her one August 1.

Q. Why?—A. Because I promised it to her when she first came to work.

The witness identified Frank's handwriting on requisitions said to have been made out April 26.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. How do you know it was Frank's handwriting on those slips and reports?—A. By these reports coming to me.

Q. You never did see him write one of these, did you?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see him write?—A. Yes.

Q. Doesn't this order show that it came in on April 22?—A. Yes.

Q. They would not have waited until April 26 to make a requisition for it, would they?

Arnold objected and Judge Roan sustained him.

Q. Are you the brother of the office boy who has just testified?—A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been with Montag Brothers?—A. Seven or eight years.

Q. Whose handwriting is this (the witness was handed the phtograph of a letter)?—A. I can not say. It looks something like Mr. Frank's.

Q. Won't you say whether it is or is not?—A. I can not say.

Q. Then how can you identify that other handwriting?—A. The other is mostly figures. It is different from this.

Unable to Identify Frank's Writing.

Q. Will you say this is not Frank's handwriting?—A. I can not identify this writing.

Q. Give the jury some reason.—A. The writing of Frank's which I have seen has been mostly figures.

The photograph which Dorsey showed the witness was of the note which Frank wrote to the police for comparison with the murder notes found beside the body of Mary Phagan.

On redirect examination the witness said he was not familiar with Frank's style of letter writing. The witness was excused and Joseph Stelker, in charge of the polishing and varnishing department at the pencil factory, was called to the stand. Arnold examined him.

Q. Did you see the blood spots which Barrett found?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see the white stuff over these spots?—A. Yes; it looked like it might have been a substance we used on the machine, or face powder.

Q. Is there any red varnish used in the factory? If so, how would it compare with this?—A. Some varnish looks like blood.

Q. Do you know what that substance was?—A. I do not.

Q. Would it have been possible for the red varnish to have been splashed out of a bottle to this point?—A. Yes.

Saw Spots on the Floor All the Time.

Q. Did you ever see these spots on the floor?—A. Yes, all the time.

Q. You never would have noticed this particular spot if Christopher Columbus Barrett had not pointed it out to you?—A. I don't think I would.

Q. Were you at the undertaking establishment Sunday afternoon?—A. Yes.

Q. What impression were you and Frank under about the Coroner's inquest?

Dorsey objected and was sustained.

Q. Do you know whether Frank saw the body of little Mary Phagan?—A. No.

Q. Did you understand the Coroner's inquest was to be held there?—A. I heard it was there.

The witness was offered as a character witness and declared that Frank's character was good. He further said that Jim Conley's character was bad and that he would not believe the negro under oath.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. What wages do you get?—A. $20 a week.

Q. How long have you been getting that?—A. A year and a half.

Q. Where are you from?—A. New York.

Q. Did you know Frank there?—A. No.

Q. Whom did you discuss Conley's character with?—A. No one.

Q. Then you don't mean to tell me that you are giving just an opinion?—A. I was talking about what he had done to me.

"Then I move to rule it out," said Dorsey. "It is nothing but this man's personal opinion."

Says Conley Mixed Water With Beer.

Judge Roan—I sustain you under those circumstances.

Q. Did you ever hear anyone say anything about Conley's character?—A. I heard he was in the chaingang.

Q. Who said it?—A. I saw him myself.

Q. Frank took him back when he came out of the chaingang, didn't he?—A. Don't you know that a negro is much better when he comes out of the chaingang than he was before?

Q. Well, what did Conley do to you?—A. I sent him out for 25 cents' worth of beer, and when he brought it back it was half water. I said, "Didn't you put water in here?" and he said, "No; I wouldn't do anything like that."

Q. How do you know he put water in the beer?—A. By the taste.

Q. When was this?—A. Last summer.

Q. What time was it?—A. At 10:30.

Q. How do you know the time? Was it your habit to get that bucket full every day at this time?—A. Yes.

Q. What did you do with this beer?—A. I threw it out.

Q. Did you send him again?—A. No.

Q. What time did Frank come to the undertaker's?—A. A little after 2 o'clock.

Q. How was he dressed?—A. In a blue or brown suit.

Q. Who came with Frank?—A. He came alone.

Q. How big was the room in which the body was?—Fifteen by fifteen.

Q. It was a great big room?—A. Not very.

Q. What kind of a room?—A. I never noticed it. I just looked at the body and walked out.

Q. How was the door located?—A. On the right side of the passageway.

Q. How far did you go into this room?—A. Just to the door.

Q. Describe the body?—One eye was badly discolored. There was a scar on the right of the face. The hair was hanging loose.

Q. Well, go on.—A. I didn't look so close.

Q. Who suggested you going to look at the body?—A. Fritz Yankee.

Q. Didn't you say a while ago that you sat there two minutes and got up and looked at the body, and that Frank arrived three minutes later?—A. Yes.

Q. Well, explain that to the jury.—A. I don't know what time it was, I was so nervous. It might have been twenty minutes.

Q. How long did it take you to get yourself together?—A. I haven't gotten myself together yet.

Q. When did Frank go in to view the body?—A. Later.

Q. How much later?—A. It might have been twenty minutes.

Q. How far did you have to go back to see the body?—A. You could stand in the door.

Q. Did the seeing of that body have any effect on Frank's appearance?—A. No, he looked just like he does now.

Q. You don't know whether Frank went into that room or not?—A. No.

Q. You felt nauseated?—A. Yes.

Went to Morgue To See Bruises.

Q. Was there anybody connected with the factory who went back to the undertaking establishment with Frank?—A. No.

Q. Can you name anyone else from the factory who was there?—A. Lemmie Quinn.

Q. Now, why did you go there?—A. I wanted to see who she was.

Q. Didn't you know it was Mary Phagan?—A. I heard it when I got there.

Q. Well, why did you go there when it would tear you all to pieces?—A. I wanted to see the bruises.

Arnold—He has already gone into that.

Dorsey—Your honor, Want to test this witness' recollection.

Arnold's objection was sustained and he took the witness.

Q. You are a German, aren't you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You like to drink your beer don't you?—A. Yes.

Q. You sent Jim Conley after beer didn't he?—A. Yes, and I asked him and he brought it back half water. If he had put his black mouth where a white man was to drink. He said no, and I cussed him.

The witness was excused and P. D. McCorley, of No. 24 Hampton street, who has charge of the cotton seed oil business of M. Frank, the wealthy uncle of Leo M. Frank, was placed on the stand.

McCorley testified to Frank's character as being good.

Mrs. M. W. Meyer, followed McCorley, and said she had known Leo Frank for five years and that his character was good.

Mrs. David Marx, No. 354 Washington street, the wife of Rabbi Marx, followed Mrs. Meyer. Mrs. Marx said that Frank's character was very good.

Mrs. Arthur I. Harris, A. L. Guthman, No. 479 Washington street, and M. S. Rice, of No. 14 Washington street, followed each other in rapid succession on the witness stand as character witnesses for Frank. They each declared that they knew the defendant very well, and that his character was good.

Mrs. B. Glogowski, who has a boarding house at No. 499 Washington street, testified that Frank boarded with her for several months prior to his marriage and that his character was very good.

Mrs. J. E. Summerfield, a physician; Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Moss, Mrs. Joseph G. Brown, William Bauer, No. 52 Washington street; Miss Helen Loeb and Emil Dittler took the stand as character witnesses in behalf of Frank.

E. E. Fitzpatrick, of 105 Sinclair avenue, Inman Park, foreman of the shipping department of Montag Bros., testified that he had known Frank for several years and that his character was good.

The Joy of Coming Motherhood

A Wonderful Remedy That is a Natural Aid and Relieves the Tension.

Mother's Friend, a famous external remedy, is the only one known that is able to reach all the different parts involved. It is a penetrating application after the formula of a noted family doctor, and lubricates every muscle, nerve, tissue or tendon affected. It goes directly to the strained portions and gently but surely relieves all tendency to soreness or strain.

By its daily use there will be no pain, no distress, no nausea, no danger of laceration or other accident, and the period will be one of supreme comfort and joyful anticipation

To all young women Mother's Friend is one of the greatest of all helpful influences, for it robs childbirth of all its agonies and dangers, dispels all the doubt and dread, all sense of fear, and thus enables the mind and body to await the greatest event in a woman's life with untrammeled gladness.

Mother's Friend is a most cherished remedy in thousands of homes, and is of such peculiar merit and value as to make it essentially one to be recommended by all women.

You will find it on sale at all drug stores at $1 a bottle, or the druggist will gladly get it for you if you insist upon it. Mother's Friend is prepared only by the Bradfield Regulator Company, 137 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., who will send you by mail, sealed, a very instructive book to expectant mothers. Write for it to-day.

WHAT 'THEY SAY' WON'T HURT LEO FRANK; STATE MUST 'PROVE' DEPRAVITY

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

There is nothing apparently so plain to outside observation as character—just character—and there is, strange to say, nothing so difficult at times to prove.

"They say" and "but" are the two most notorious scandalmongers in the universe—"they say" so and so; and he or she is all right, "but!"

Character, upon which so much depends in this world, upon which civilization itself and decency and right is founded, is, nevertheless, the most elusive of all things when it comes right down to brass tacks of proving it beyond the shadow of a doubt.

Human nature, too, for some curious and vague reason, seems rather to relish the downfall of character and the undermining of reputation—and that, moreover, the while it is vehemently and rather piously assuring itself that it does nothing of the kind!

Kind words travel on leaden feet—gossip gallops in seven-league boots!

Pessimist?

Not at all—just truthimist, that's all!

You stop me to tell me that Jones is the best man you ever knew, that his wife loves him immensely and that his children and all the neighbors' children fairly dote upon him, and I am mildly, but not rampantly, interested. I am a pretty good fellow myself, you know, and so are you—who are telling me about Jones—and while I am glad that Jones is a fine fellow—like I am and like you are—I can not see why I should throw any fits about it.

And I—being the average sort of fellow, really—proceed not to throw any fits whatever in re the good Jones.

BUT—

Scandal? That's Different.

You stop me and tell me Jones is a grafter, despite his churchgoing proclivities, and that, besides, he turns Jack habitually from the bottom of the deck—and up go my hands in holy horror!

Sakes alive! I always DID think there was SOMETHING out of whack with Jones—and so forth and so on!

And you can bet your sweet life I stop to listen while you unwind all "they say" of Jones, and how he's a good fellow, "but!"

If Jones is pulling his freight uphill, Jones interests me indifferently in a way—but if Jones and his freight are involuntarily on the toboggan, it's me to stand along the edge of the slideway and watch the fun and make note of the wreckage at the bottom!

I feel sorry for Jones—just as I used to feel sorry always for the teacher beneath whom I had dexterously set up a pin, when said teacher innocently sat down upon it. And after Jones has gone to smash down the old toboggan, I may experience an attack of sorrow for Jones, and next Sunday when I go to church it may so happen that I even pray for Jones—after I have prayed carefully for myself!

Now these broken observations are not altruistic, of course—they may be out of order, and all that.

Preface to Character Sketch.

They are submitted merely by way of prefacing the citation just here of an ancient quatrain running thuswise:

"There's so much good in the worst of us,
And so much bad in the best of us,
That it hardly behooves any of us
To talk about the rest of us."

Now, then, having brought ourselves to the point where we can give even such persons as Frank and Conley the benefit of the doubt in an argument adverse to the character of either—you know, good and well, gentle reader, we always hand ourselves ALL the doubts, and some!—let us proceed in order to a consideration of the status of the Frank case involved in the character or lack of character in the defendant.

Contemplating the matter of Frank's character as a thing apart from the murder charge against him, the attack upon it thus far dwells within Conley, and Conley's isolated word.

Conley's charge against Leo Frank has not been corroborated by one witness worthy of belief—and it has not been corroborated even by that one in anything save relatively inconsequential detail.

One just as well believe what "they say" and ask no questions, as to believe anything such persons as Dalton say—and probably better.

I am sure I do not know whether Frank's character is good or bad. In respect of a conclusion either way, I am "from Missouri."

My mind is entirely open as to that—and I hope to keep it so until the last precinct has been heard from.

Issues Challenge to State.

I hope I shall know the TRUTH of the matter eventually—I should like to know, beyond a reasonable doubt.

The defense has put Frank's character in issue. It thereby challenges the State to break it down, if the State can.

If the State can break it down, it should proceed to the breaking with all the vigor it fairly and honorably can command. If Frank is a wolf in sheep's clothing, the public is entitled to know it, and it is the duty of the Solicitor General to make it known, if he can.

A wolf in sheep's clothing is a highly undesirable and dangerous thing to have at large in any peaceful, orderly and law-abiding community.

Far from quarreling with the Solicitor General for showing that Frank is a depraved character, I for one shall thank him if he makes his charge unmistakably plain. Maybe he can make it plain, and maybe he can not. He hasn't had his opportunity yet, and I am willing to be patient as he goes forward.

The defense is seeking to establish Frank's good character by the testimony of many admittedly good citizens. To the best of their knowledge and belief these good people are speaking the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

Hard to Back Up "the Daltons."

People generally will be inclined to accept their statements as conclusive, unless the evidence combating the same is overwhelming.

It isn't going to do, I think, for the State to bring more Daltons into the case for the purpose of corroborating Conley. The trouble about the Daltons as corroborators is that one never can find anybody to corroborate the Daltons—as sadly in need of corroborating, apparently, as even the Conleys.

Frank, by putting his character in evidence, has gained some ground in public estimation, I believe. At least, this action seems to show that he is willing to risk his all on the contention that the State can find nothing vile in him, save in so far as the word of Conley can establish such an allegation.

Conley is not to be corroborated by innuendo, by suggestion, or by roundabout methods.

He must be corroborated by people of some degree of decency and standing themselves, or not very many people will take unquestioned the sinister charge of the negro.

One Good Witness a Peril.

If the State comes forward, after Frank has made his showing as to good character, with a number of witnesses that the defense is able to impeach beyond question, as fast as they are introduced, I do not believe Frank will suffer irreparable injury from the Conley charge, in the long run.

On the contrary, if the State comes forward with even so few as one reputable and believable witness as to Frank's evil character, there will remain in the minds of the jury, I suspect, an impression most dangerously unfavorable to the defendant.

One honorable and upright witness against Frank in the matter of his character can do him far greater harm than a hundred impeachable witnesses.

The State, having been confronted with the issue of Frank's character—challenged in the gate, so to speak—must make brave, categorial, and complete answer, or the State's case necessarily will be weakened markedly and, perhaps, fatally.

I believe the public, however prone to rush to conclusions primarily, and to make up its mind upon surface indications all too readily at times, nevertheless is fair and just in the end.

I think it likely there are few extremists either way—for or against Frank—who really wish to see him convicted or acquitted, regardless.

I think it is altogether likely, indeed, that hundreds of people, even inclined to side against Frank now, will gather a measure of satisfaction eventually, if he comes through the fire unscorched.

Jumping at Conclusions.

So the reader will observe that the things I said in the beginning of this article, like Bill Nye's definition of classical music, are not so bad as they sound. They referred merely to the forming of opinion upon incompleted and disconnected evidence, brought to light one way or another in the very beginning of shocking stories.

Evil is, and always has been, in a way more entertaining to man than goodness—otherwise, Mother Eve never would have bitten the apple, and so on.

The defense has thrown a mighty challenge to the State in tendering Leo Frank's character as an issue—particularly in that the defense alone could do that.

Unless the State meets that issue fairly and squarely, candidly and without quibble or faltering, Frank must profit immensely by the move.

If, on the other hand, the State does meet the issue successfully and completely, Frank's case is undone, and Frank is lost.

GIRLS CALLED TO TESTIFY FOR THE DEFENSE

These young women have been summoned as witnesses.

MISS O. VICKERY. MISS L. HAYES.

MRS. J. W. WARDLAW.

TESTIMONY OF GIRLS HELP TO LEO M. FRANK

In the presentation of its alibi for Leo M. Frank, the defense probably accomplished more Thursday than it had in all of previous time since the prosecution rested its case. Frank's lawyers had promised that they would show where Frank was practically every minute on the day the murder of little Mary Phagan was committed and would demonstrate that it would have been impossible to carry out the disposal of the slain girl's body and the writing of the notes as the negro, Jim Conley, described them.

If their alibi witnesses are to be believed, the lawyers appear to have fairly well accomplished this. On the credibility of one young witness, pretty Helen Curran, of No. 160 Ashby street, the whole alibi may stand or fall. She could, of course, be proved mistaken in her statement that she saw Frank at 1:10 o'clock standing at Jacobs' Pharmacy, Whitehall and Alabama streets, awaiting a car home from the factory on the afternoon of the murder, and the remainder of the alibi witnesses remain unimpeached, but it would serve to weaken the alibi materially.

Apparently Disinterested.

She is at once the most important and the most disinterested of the witnesses who have testified to seeing Frank immediately after the State says the crime was committed. If Frank was at Whitehall and Alabama streets at 1:10 o'clock, it would have been almost beyond human possibility for him to have taken part in the disposal of the girl's body, which Conley said was undertaken at 12:56 and finished about 1:30, together with the writing of the notes in Frank's office.

Frank's father-in-law and mother-in-law testified that he arrived home that day about 1:20 o'clock, but their testimony, because they are most vitally interested in the outcome of the case from their ties of relationship, will in all probability have far less weight with the jurors than the apparently straightforward statement of the girl.

The establishing of the alibi for Frank, which was begun early in the week through the testimony of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Selig, was practically completed Thursday, although there were several more witnesses to be called on Friday who had seen him the day of the crime.

Times in the Alibi.

Thursday's testimony began with the time he went to Montag Bros., Nelson and Forsyth streets, Saturday forenoon. Sig Montag, one of the firm and also treasurer of the National Pencil Company, testified that Frank came to his plant about 10 o'clock and left about 11.

Miss Corinthia Hall, Mrs. Emma Freeman, Miss Hattie Hall, Alonzo Mann and others had testified to seeing him in the factory between 11 o'clock and noon. Lemmie Quinn, metal department foreman, the day before declared that he visited Frank in his office at 12:20 o'clock. Mrs. Arthur White, a witness for the State, saw him in his office at 12:30. He went to the fourth floor at 12:50, according to Mrs. White, Harry Denham and Arthur White.

This brought the defense down to the time someone saw him after he left the factory.

Miss Curran was called to the stand and declared she saw the factory superintendent at 1:10 at Whitehall and Alabama streets apparently waiting for a street car. This made an interval of but eighteen minutes from the time he was seen by the three persons on the fourth floor of the factory, allowing two minutes for him to walk to his car, and an interval of but twelve minutes from the time that Conley said they started to carry the body to the basement.

Eight of the twelve minutes were spent by Conley in a closet in Frank's office, according to the negro's testimony. Of the remaining four, part were occupied in disposing of the body and part in writing the notes.

Witness Who Helped Build Alibi.

Mrs. Albert P. Levy, No. 69 East Georgia avenue, swore she saw Frank get off a car at about 1:20 o'clock and walk to the Selig home, No. 68 East Georgia avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Selig already had testified he arrived home at 1:20 and ate luncheon.

Mrs. M. G. Michael, of Athens, Ga., said she saw Frank at about 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. C. Wolfsheimer, No. 387 Washington street, where she was visiting. She said he walked on to Glenn street and caught his car for town.

Jerome Michael, son of the former witness, saw Frank at the same time.

Mrs. Wolfsheimer was another witness who saw Frank just before he caught his car. She said he was not nervous and bore no scratches or other marks.

Julian Loeb, No. 380 Washington street, said that from across the street he saw Frank stop at No. 387 Washington and then go on to his car.

J. C. Loeb, No. 445 Washington street, testified that he caught the Washington street car for town at Georgia avenue at about 2 o'clock. Frank got on, he said, at Glenn street. The car was stalled near the Capitol, and Frank, according to Loeb, got off the car and walked down Hunter street toward town.

Miss Rebecca Carson, a forelady on the fourth floor at the pencil factory, told the jury that she saw Frank in front of Rich. Bros. between 2:20 and 2:25 and that she saw him going into Jacobs' Pharmacy at about 2:50.

Harry Denham, who was in the factory the day of the murder, testified that Frank came to the fourth floor about 3 o'clock and told him and Arthur White they could leave.

Emil Selig and Minola McKnight had testified previously that Frank came home Saturday night about 6:30.

Mrs. M. Marcus, Mrs. A. E. Marcus, M. J. Goldstein and others told of seeing Frank at home Saturday evening. They said there was nothing unusual in his demeanor and that he bore no scratches or marks of any sort. He was reading a magazine, they said, and laughed heartily over a story in regard to a baseball umpire. They testified that he retired about 1:30 o'clock.

The defense also made good its promise that it would not hesitate to put Frank's character in issue. Following its action of the day before, when the first of the character witnesses were put on the stand, nearly a score of Frank's acquaintances, some of them his classmates and instructors at Pratt Institute and Cornell University, were called to testify to Frank's good character.

These witnesses for the most part were excused without cross-examination. Prominent citizens of Atlanta also declared Frank to be of good character. Among these witnesses were Rabbi David Marx, V. H. Kriegshaber, Milton Klein and R. A. Sohn.

A peculiar situation arose through the calling of Max F. Goldstein and Arthur Heyman as character witnesses by the defense. Goldstein is a law partner of Frank A. Hooper and Heyman of Solicitor Dorsey, the two attorneys who are prosecuting Frank.

Says Conley Told Her He Was Drunk

One of the startling statements of the day came from Miss Rebecca Carson. She declared Conley had sworn to her that he was not in the factory the day of the murder—in fact, that he was so drunk he did not know where he was or what he did.

Solicitor Dorsey obtained an admission from J. R. Leach that cars frequently run ahead of time on practically all lines. This serves to lessen in value the testimony of the crew of the car on which Mary Phagan came to town. They swore they never ran ahead of time and that the Phagan girl could not have arrived in town before 12:07 o'clock the day she was slain.

Judge Roan threatened Thursday afternoon to clear the courtroom if disorder did not cease. V. H. Kriegshaber was on the stand testifying to the character of Frank when laughter at some of the testimony disturbed the courtroom.

Attorney Arnold protested.

"This is not a side show," he said. "Must we put up with such disorder?"

"Find the man that laughed and put him out, ordered the judge. "If there is any further disorder, no one will be admitted to the trial to-morrow."

Father and Son in Fatal Duel for Girl

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 15.—A fatal duel between a father and son named Blanchard, living near Aubusson, began in rivalry for the heart of a pretty farmhand. The son, Jean Lelong, was jealous of his father, who had won the girl's affection, so the two men agreed to fight.

Six revolver shots were exchanged without result. They resumed the fight with kitchen knives, while the girl watched the duel without interfering.

The father received terrible wounds dying soon afterward.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—Striking figures showing the increased cost of living are contained in a voluminous report issued by the British Board of Trade, according to which present prices are the highest in 25 years.

Retail prices of food have risen 14 per cent since 1900, while wages have increased only 3 per cent.

NOW YOU SEE AN' NOW YOU DON'T THRU' SKIRTS

Changing Fashions Provide Shadown Gowns Minus View and Regulated Slits.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Hamlet without Hamlet, or you can have your cake and eat it, will be the motif of madame's garb next fall. There will be slits without any opening, shadow skirts without any view. It will be a season of compromises.

These things are all evident at the annual style review of the Chicago Garment Manufacturers' Association, which formally opened to-night in Orchestra Hall. And the decrees are authoritative, for it is the assertion of the Chicago garment manufacturers that the fashions for a majority of American women are created in this city.

Skirts will be just as tight and just as thin and just as slit. It is only that they won't look that way. The sensible American woman, according to one leading designer, wants the graceful, smart effect of the narrow, slit skirt, but she wants it less sensational.

The I-Don't-See-You Gown.

For which reason ingenious designers have advised a gown with rows of ruffles or flounces running around the bottom. The skirt is slit and of the transparent texture that the dictates of fashion demand, but the thick circles of flouncing fill up the gap and make the whole thing as impregnable to vision as a Chinese wall. Smartness—and modesty. What more will any woman ask?

Beyond this, there won't be much change. The narrow skirt with straight lines will prevail. There will be much more fullness around the hips, however, and skirts will be somewhat longer. Drapings also will be popular.

Freedom is allowed in the choice of colors, and no one shade will be much more popular than any other. If there is any preference it is in various shades of green. The same freedom is noticed in materials. If there is any preference in the latter it is toward sobriety, the Bulgarians being somewhat more subdued and the combinations of cloth less hectic.

Among the novelties is what is called a tango skirt. This is built along the architectural lines of a coat skirt—that is, it buttons around instead of going on over the head. It has the advantage of providing an elastic slit, a sliding scale or frankness. The wearer can leave as many of the lower buttons unbuttoned as she chooses.

SLATON DELUGED WITH BILLS AS SESSION ENDS

Tax Reform Act Only Important Measure Signed—Assembly Musically Adjourns.

With the Legislature adjourned after 50 days of hard work, in which some of the best laws in the history of the State were enacted, the work of transmitting the measures to Governor Slaton for his signature will begin to-day, and the Executive Office will be swamped with the bills. More than 100 have already been engrossed and sent to the Governor, but there still remain between 200 and 300 local and general bills.

Of the 100 or more that are already in the Governor's office, but one of general importance has been signed. That is the tax reform bill, which was signed by the Governor and became a law at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The pen with which Governor Slaton signed the measure that is expected to revolutionize the taxation system of the State was given to Representative Lipscomb, of Clarke, who introduced the original tax equalization bill, and who has been one of the reform leaders throughout the session.

Though the Governor has signed several local bills which Representatives and Senators wished to have become operative immediately, it is hardly probable that many of the general bills will receive his signature until next week, when they will all be in his office.

Adjourns at 10:12 o'Clock.

The Legislature adjourned shortly after 10 o'clock last night. Speaker Burwell brought his gavel down for the last time this year at 10:12 o'clock, and President Anderson, of the Senate, adjourned that body three minutes later. Two minutes after the gavel rang out the House was in the throes of song. Representative Blackburn climbed upon a seat and led the Representatives in singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Practically the only work the House had to do at the night session, which convened at 8 o'clock, was to wait for the Senate to send over bills that had already passed the House and which the upper branch desired to amend. The only changes of importance made in the measures were the following, all of which were concurred in by the House: Appropriating $7,500 to the Chemical Bureau of the Department of Agriculture, $15,000 to the Department of Entomology to fight the boll weevil, and a bill increasing the salary of the State Oil Inspector to $1,800. A bill appropriating $5,000 to the Department of Agriculture was killed, because the wording of the bill was vague.

During the wait on the Senate the House took a recess and the members proceeded to kill the time by putting on stunts that eclipsed the usual jollification with which sessions of the Legislature are brought to a close. Every member of the House was determined to have as much fun as he could, and witty speeches, mock attempts to rush through wild appropriations and gay singing was the order of the hour.

James Keeps Songs Going.

Representatives James of Gilmer, official "song-hister," kept the songs going, and was surrounded by a group of vocalists and near-vocalists all evening, singing all the old favorites and a few that were not so old. Henderson of Jones made speeches in every corner of the hall, and got along all right until he began one about this being the hour of the wild-eyed reformer. Olive of Richmond then moved that he be given a bale of hay, which was carried, amid much rejoicing, and Henderson was removed from the desk onto which he had climbed.

Representative Picquet of Richmond, the smallest man in the House, was called to the chair by the crowd, and interrupted a turkey trot which Greene of Houston and Smith of Fulton were doing down the middle aisle by recognizing Ed Wohlwender, of filibuster fame. Wohlwender brought down the House by jokingly moving that all prohibitionists be excluded from the hall.

Burwell Thanks Members.

Ennis of Baldwin jumped to his feet and gave it as his solemn opinion that the members were children. He therefore moved that $25,000 be appropriated to build a sanitarium to take care of them. Picquet declared the motion carried without putting the question. The fun continued for more than two hours, until the singers became hoarse and the speech-makers had used up their supply of words.

When the House convened at 9:30 o'clock, Speaker Burwell delivered a short address, in which he thanked the House for the honor it had conferred upon him, and expressed his appreciation of the work of each member. He declared that the people of Georgia should be proud of the membership of the House, and said this session had been productive of more remedial legislation than any he had seen in his ten years' legislative experience.

SENATE CLOSES IN FIERY BURST OF ORATORY

Kea Reiterates Charges Against Anderson, but President Gets Vote of Thanks.

Weary from their efforts in the final all-day siege, but happy over the fact that the Senate calendar had been cleared of its most important measure, the appropriation bill, Georgia Senators at 10:15 o'clock Thursday night welcomed the last rap of the President's gavel which rang down the curtain on the 1913 session. The Speaker of the House preceded President Anderson just three minutes in the call for adjournment sine die.

The end in the Senate, where the appropriations bill with its $280,000 excess of disbursement over revenue, was pending, came after a day of hard work and a dash of excitement. During the morning every attempt was made to clean up the calendar which had become clogged at the last moment. The forenoon session was extended to 1:30 to get the "mother's custody" bill through, following the passage of the inheritance tax bill.

Excitement Begins.

Then came the first excitement, Senator Fred Kea, of the Sixteenth District, arose to a point of personal privilege to substantiate his charges against President Anderson, published exclusively in The Georgian. Never during the session has the Senate been the scene of such intense interest.

Senator McNeill, of the Twenty-second district, started the ball rolling when he got possession of the floor and bitterly denounced Senator Kea for his charges against the presiding officer of the Senate. He moved that the Senate extend a rising vote of thanks to President Anderson for his fair and excellent services. It was at this juncture that Senator Kea rose to his point of personal privilege.

Reiterates His Charges.

He charged President Anderson had deliberately blocked the passage of bills. He charged further that the Senate Rules Committee was the "whole cheese in the Senate, as sure as there was a God in high Heaven."

At the conclusion of the fiery speech the Senate extended to President Anderson a rising vote of thanks, Senator Kea alone voting in the negative.

As predicted in The Georgian on Thursday, the Senate receded from its action in cutting the House appropriation, thereby restoring the $280,000 excess of disbursements over revenues. This was in accordance with the Governor's wishes. The Senate also passed the amended bill allowing freight trains to run on Sunday and confirmed the nomination of John Hart as State Tax Collector.

Fat Women vs. Lean In Government Suit

DENVER, COL., Aug. 15.—Fat women and lean women will be arrayed against each other in a battle royal when the case of the Government against Marjorie Hamilton and her husband, Walter C. Cunningham, is called.

The defendants are charged with wrongful use of the mails in the sale of an "obesity cure."

"For every fat woman who goes on that stand and testifies that she couldn't lose her flesh there'll be two slender ones who'll tell of the benefits of our treatment," said Cunningham.

Here's Latest; 'Cans' His Funeral Sermon

Mr. Morrill's last act before his departure was to visit the store of a talking machine dealer where he preached his own funeral sermon into a machine to be used in case of his death.

Farley on Sick Bed Sees His Horse Lose

NEW YORK, Aug. 15. — After watching from a cot at the side of the Empire City Racetrack, the race in which his horse, Bill Miller came in fifth, James Farley, leader of the strike-breakers, has suffered a relapse and must remain at the track until he regains his strength.

He is suffering from tuberculosis and had expressed a desire to see the race. At the track he was attended by two physicians and two nurses.

Railway Must Ship Liquors, Court Rules

ST. PAUL, MINN., Aug 15.—Rock Island Railroad must accept beer and other liquors for shipment from Minnesota to Iowa, according to a decision of Federal Judge Charles A. Willard.

'CUE CELEBRATES BIG CROPS.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 15.—Jefferson County folk met here yesterday to enjoy a barbecue given by the town people in celebration of the good crops in the county. Several hundred attended.

Addresses of welcome were delivered by former State Senator William Little and ex-Representative John Robert Phillips.

W. S. Elkin Goes After World Rexall Meet For Atlanta in 1914

With the avowed intention of bringing the next annual Rexall convention to Atlata, W. S. Elki, Jr., president of the International Rexall Clubs, will leave for Boston at 11 o'clock Saturday morning. Mr. Elkin will be in charge of a special train of Rexall members who are going to Boston from the South.

The convention will open August 18 and will last four days. Fully 3,000 members are expected to attend.

The International Rexall Clubs is an organization comprising more than 7,000 druggists all over the world. Mr. Elkin's election to the presidency last year was by unanimous vote. He expresses himself well satisfied that Atlanta has an excellent chance of winning the next convention.

Europe Sees Kaiser In Peacemaker Role

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 15.—In his new role as "peace lord of Europe" Emperor William of Germany has launched a diplomatic campaign to prevent another war in the Balkans. Telegrams from Berlin and Constantinople indicated to-day that the German Emperor and his Foreign Office have drafted proposals which soon will be sent to Russia, Austria, England, France and Italy.

While Germany has been looked upon as the friend of Turkey, on account of the commercial relations of the two countries, it is reported now that William favors the surrender of Adrianople to Czar Ferdinand.

10,000 Women Join Strike in Barcelona

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BARCELONA, SPAIN, Aug. 15.—The strike situation here is becoming revolutionary in character. Clashes between idle mobs and soldiers maintaining martial law are continuous. More than 300,000 men and women were idle to-day. Of this number it is estimated between 8,000 and 10,000 are women.

General Weyler, Military Governor of Catalonia, who is directing the soldiers, has prohibited mass meetings. But in spite of this strikers attempted to hold a meeting to protest against the despotic methods of Weyler.

'Cue for Light Men Cooked by Electricity

MACON, Aug. 15.—Barbecue cooked by electricity was served to-day to the 250 delegates from five Southern States attending the first annual convention of the Southeastern section of the National Electric Light Association. This is said to be the first time meats have been barbecued other than over a slow wood fire.

The electric light men will elect officers and choose the next place of meeting Saturday. Mr. Arkwright, of Atlanta, is in line for the presidency to succeed E. C. Deal, of Augusta. Birmingham, Atlanta and Savannah are seeking the next convention.

Idaho Wins Pennant As Best Battleship

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels announces that the battleship pennant for all-round efficiency has been awarded to the Idaho, which finished her tests with 100 per cent for gunnery and 87 per cent for engineering.

The Utah, which finished second, had 80 per cent for gunnery and 100 for engineering.

MILITANTS IN WALES.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CARDIFF, WALES, Aug. 15.—Suffrage activity is on the increase in Wales. Agents of the Women's Social and Political Union are going through Wales establishing branches and inciting dissatisfied women to violence.

ALABAMA PLANS TO GREET AUTO PATHFINDER

President of Good Roads Association Will Meet Trail Blazer Ferguson at State Line.

Another indication of the widespread interest in the campaign for an All-Southern transcontinental highway, which will be inaugurated by Hearst's Sunday American next Monday, was received in Atlanta Friday in the form of a communication from John Craft, president of the Alabama Good Roads Association, who will join Pathfinder Ferguson at the Alabama-Georgia line.

President Craft, who is known all over the country as a good roads booster, accompanied by State Highway Engineer Keller, will accompany Mr. Ferguson throughout Alabama.

Details Virtually Arranged.

Mr. Ferguson now has arranged virtually every detail of the trip. His big touring car has been repaired and made shipshape for the long journey, and instruments which will be used along the route have also been received and installed.

Plans for the parade, the official send-off next Monday, also are complete, and everyone is on the qui vive in anticipation.

In the line of march will be the Fire Chief, the Chief of Police, city officials, including Mayor Woodward, and other prominent citizens. If the weather man hands out a good brand of ozone next Monday, the people of Atlanta will be treated to one of the most unique parades in the history of the city.

Birmingham Plans Send-Off.

Mr. Ferguson, accompanied by his wife and two children and a special American man, will go direct to Anniston, Ala., and thence to Birmingham, the end of the first lap of the long journey. At Birmingham the party will be the recipients of a big send-off, led by The Birmingham News, one of the chain of newspapers promoting the monster project.

Leaving Birmingham, the party will proceed to Montgomery, thence to Mobile, New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, El Paso, San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco. Mr. Ferguson hopes to reach the Pacific Coast before October 1.

Onions and Cabbage Offend Boston Noses

BOSTON, Aug. 15.—There may be robust ones of stout sensibilities to whom the odors arising from the cooking of onions and cabbage and such things bring sensations of pleasure. 'Tis otherwise with certain esthetic Bostonians who live or do business in the neighborhood of No. 20 Hawley street. Beans and codfish—aye; but onions and cabbage—nay.

Frank Enger, who has a restaurant at that address, was before the bar in the Municipal Criminal Court on complaint of several neighbors who asserted that the activities of his kitchen perfumed the atmosphere all around, much to their discomfort.

Name Trees After All Cabinet Members

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—In addition to the "Wilson elm" to be dedicated by President Wilson, fifteen other trees, named after members of the cabinet and the diplomatic corps, will be planted in the White House lawn to fill gaps left by the recent storm.

BIG CANNERY IN HALL.

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 15.—A cannery, whose output daily is now 100 bushels of okra and tomatoes, is a new industry in Hall County. J. J. Adams, of Klondyke, is owner and operator. During the season he will put up 2,400 cases, or 48,000 cans.

It is one thing to make soda crackers that are occasionally good.

It is quite another thing to make them so that they are always better than all other soda crackers, always of unvarying goodness.

The name "Uneeda"—stamped on every biscuit—means that if a million packages of Uneeda Biscuit were placed before you, you could choose any one of them, confident that every soda cracker in that package would be as good as the best Uneeda Biscuit ever baked. Five cents.

CONGRESS OBEYS WILSON; GETS BACK ON JOB

President's Demand for Currency Act Means Republicans Will Delay Vote on Tariff.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—Senators came to the Capitol to-day prepared to remain on the job until November, following the indorsement by the Democratic caucus last night of President Wilson's demand for currency legislation at this session of Congress.

Republican Senators have publicly refused to agree to a date on which to vote on the tariff bill. The sole condition on which they have agreed heretofore, in cloakroom talk, to vote on the tariff bill before September 1 has been that the specter of currency legislation be driven away.

But the Senate majority has knuckled down to President Wilson on this question, and the Republicans will be able to dictate the speed with which legislation will be handled.

Progressive Republicans will have an inning, urging the adoption of the inheritance tax and tariff commission amendments to the tariff bill. The discussion of these will require a week or more. Extended discussion of the income tax section is promised also.

The informal agreement to go ahead with currency legislation means, it is predicted, that the tariff bill will not be disposed of before October 1. Currency legislation will require, according to Senate prophets, at least a month after.

Doctor Gives Hope To Childless Women

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 15. — Hope for childless women was held out in a remarkable statement by Dr. Veronoff, of Nice, before the International Medical Congress. He said that in his experiments of transplanting vital organs of one animal to another he had enable a barren ewe to give birth to a lamb.

"I hold," he asserted, "that my experiments can be applied to human beings—indeed, it's easier to graft certain parts with human beings than with animals. The only thing necessary is affinity of the blood of the two persons of the same race—or better still, of one family.

Cleanest Faced Boy Falls From Grace

GARY, IND., Aug 16.—"Andy" Harrack, the 13-year-old Italian boy who won the red necktie and world-wide fame in the clean-face contest in the Gary schools, has fallen from grace. Neither "Andy's" former shining face nor his bright necktie would be recognized since school let out for the summer vacation and Miss Laura Knaggs, his teacher, left Gary.

He has played all summer with other Italian boys, and his face and necktie resemble theirs.

John Drew Studied This Part 18 Years

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—John Drew, knowing his lines perfectly, appeared at the first rehearsal of "As You Like It" that Charles Frohman is to present shortly. Mr. Frohman asked Drew how long he had been studying the part.

"Eighteen years," he replied.

"What do you mean?" asked the manager

"It was eighteen years ago that you first promised me the part of Benedict, and I began studying it then."

ROAN LEADS ALL IN JUDICIAL RACE

Even in Atlanta Sentiment Turns Toward Jurist of the Stone Mountain Circuit.

Notwithstanding the fact that several members of the Atlanta bar have committed themselves to "an Atlanta lawyer," unnamed, for the newly created Atlanta Superior Court judgeship, and that this movement is considered generally to be directed against Judge L. S. Roan as the probable appointee, the impression prevails that Governor Slaton unquestionably will name Judge Roan for the place.

Judge Roan, although nominally the judge of the Stone Mountain Circuit, has presided for several years as judge of the criminal division of the Atlanta Circuit, and has given very great satisfaction. Inasmuch as the new judgeship is to be a criminal judgeship, many members of the Atlanta bar think Judge Roan is the logical man for the honor, and they are backing him accordingly.

During his service as judge of the criminal division in Atlanta, he has tried many noted criminal cases—the Grace and the Appelbaum cases being two of the most noted—and his reputation for fairness and justice is well established.

Already a large number of Atlanta attorneys have indorsed Judge Roan to Governor Slaton, and it is thought more than likely that his appointment will be announced within a few days.

Wilson Is not Guarded Safely at White House

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Major Richard Sylvester, Superintendent of Police, has learned that the president is not safely guarded at the White House.

The major made an unexpected visit and succeeded in getting into the White House and some distance down the main corridor before his presence was detected. Previously he had rambled through the White House grounds without sighting one of his men.

This Big Sum Went for Liquor, Tobacco and Cards, Says Government Report.

Uncle Sam collected $344,424,453 from vice during the year which ended June 30, according to figures just made public.

If you play a friendly game of cards, if you drink, if you smoke, if you chew or if you use snuff, you contributed to this enormous sum. This amount which was scollected in internal revenue taxes, is the greatest in the history of the country.

The report submitted to Secretary McAdoor by William H. Osborne, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, shows that the heaviest tax was paid on whisky and brandy. The amount collected on the 143,200,000 gallons consumed during the fiscal year was $157,542,000. For the 65,246,000 barrels of beer, porter and ales, a tax of $65,246,000 was paid.

The 14,276,771,000 cigarettes which were smoked brought in $17,846,000 in taxes and $23,097,000 was collected on 7,689,038,000 cigars. The tax on the chewing and smoking of 404,363,000 pounds of tobacco was $32,349,000. Snuff users paid $2,657,000 on 33,209,000 pounds. During the year, 32,764,155 packs of cards were sold, an increase of 1,952,475. The tax was $655,283.

The report showed that the number of saloons decreased 21,554 to 194,590, despite the increased consumption of intoxicants.

FORMER COUNTY CLERK DEAD.

VIDALIA.—J. D. Collins is dead at his home in Lyons, Toombs County. He was a native of Tattnall County and served several terms as Clerk of the Superior Court. He was about 65 years of age. Mr. Collins was the father of Judge E. C. Collins, of Reidsville, and leaves several other children.

SLEW FRIEND TO GET AUTOMOBILE

Youth Confesses Mania to Own Car Led Him to Murder His Chum.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., Aug. 15.—After his first night's sleep since last Friday Gust Penman, son of a wealthy farmer, to-day told the Champaign County jail officials that he was ready to make a sworn confession of the murder of his chum, Harold A. Shaw. Penman was brought here last night from Danville, where he was caught by Amos Milholland, 80, a veteran of the Civil War and the Indian campaign in the West, who is a mail carrier and justice of the peace at Ridge Farm, near Danville.

After a weak denial of his identity the young man, a nervous wreck, flayed by conscience, starved to the point of collapse and in high fever from exposure and fatigue, broke down and made a most extraordinary confession of his crime.

He killed his friend in a drunken delirium to get Shaw's automobile, he said.

Penman told how after he eluded the vigilantes who swarmed the countryside and had virtually made good his escape from the environs of the killing, his conscience would not let him carry out his plans to evade justice in a flight to South America.

Gainesville Assists In Hookworm Fight

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 15.—Through the efforts of the health and sanitary committee of the Gainesville Chamber of Commerce the County Commissioners have set aside $100 for the expenses of the physician under the State Board of Health to visit the county in the fight being waged against the hookworm.

This is the Rockefeller Hookworm Association work.

PILGRIM SHAFT UNVEILED.

SOUTHAMPTON, ENG., Aug. 15.—A monument to the memory of the Pilgrim fathers, who settled in New England, was unveiled here to-day by United States Ambassador Page. A number of Americans were present.

EFFORT TO PAWN ROADS ROUSES MEXICANS

Huerta's Reported Attempt to Raise Funds Stirs Protest. U. S. Capital Affected.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 15.—Bitter protests were made here to-day by prominent Mexicans following public allegations that President Huerta is attempting to place the vast railway resources of Mexico virtually in pawn to raise funds for the Government. Agents said to represent Huerta nave approached foreign financial groups for loans, the collateral of which will be blanket mortgages on Government railway lines.

That the present disagreeable relations between Mexico and the United States would be heightened by such action is apparent, as Americans have heavy financial holdings in railways and other Mexican securities which would be bound to be affected by the mortgaging of railway properties.

Gets Rid of Popular Men.

There is a feeling that if the peace mission of Special Envoy John Lind fails the present condition of affairs will be stretched out indefinitely. President Huerta has begun to prepare for the October election by taking steps to secure his own re-election. He is sending the strong, popular men out of the country.

Senor de la Barra, who has the confidence of the people, is now in New York en route for France, where he will act as the Mexican Ambassador; Colonel Felix Diaz, whose name carries magic power and who has a big following, is en route to Japan, and can not possibly return here before the election if it is held on scheduled time.

Future Full of Menace.

As fast as one section of the country is pacified Huerta fills it with soldiers to control the election machinery. All the President's appointees are army men. It is believed here that so long as Huerta is in the chair the United States will not recognize this Government. Thus the end is probably far off and filled with menace.

A Mexican newspaper printed the rumor that Henry Lane Wilson, former United States Ambassador to Mexico, will probably return here and engage in business.

Wilson Will Reply to Censure by President.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—"I do not know what the next step will be. I do not expect to take any action today, but I shall make an answer to the President's censure at the proper time."

This was the statement made today by Henry Lane Wilson, Ambassador to Mexico on leave.

Reports are current that Ambassador Wilson will not submit tamely to the rebuke administered to him last night by the President; that he confidently expected to be dismissed when he issued his statement, and that he welcomed the opportunity to sever his connection with the diplomatic service, so that he could air his views regarding Mexico.

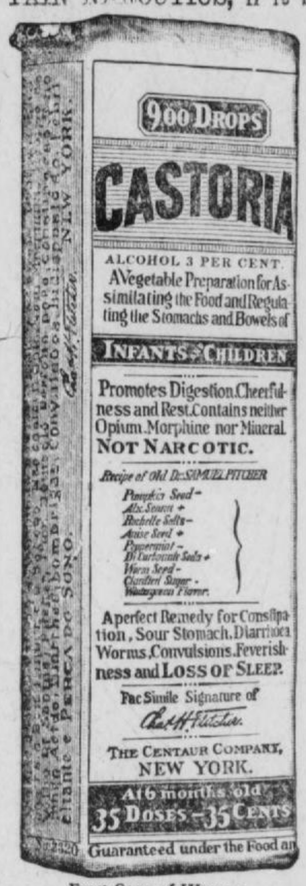

Millions Hinge on Kodak Case Verdict

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Millions of dollars may hinge upon the decision of Judge John R. Hazel here, in which he finds the Eastman Kodak Company guilty of having infringed upon eleven out of the twelve claims of the Goodwin Film and Camera Company on a process for manufacturing transparent, flexible photographic film pellicles and declares the complainant is "entitled to an accounting."

As the kodak company is alleged to have been infringing upon this patent for years, the "accounting" for the billions of film rolls it has sold will be tremendous.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. J. W. Dinsdale, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I use your Castoria and advise its use in all families where there are children."

Dr. Alexander E. Mintie, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria and have found it a reliable and pleasant remedy for children."

Dr. Agnes V. Swetland, of Omaha, Nebr., says: "Your Castoria is the best remedy in the world for children and the only one I use and recommend."

Dr. J. A. McClellan, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria for children and always got good results. In fact I use Castoria for my own children."

Dr. J. W. Allen, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I heartily endorse your Castoria. I have frequently prescribed it in my medical practice, and have always found it to do all that is claimed for it."

Dr. C. H. Glidden, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "My experience as a practitioner with your Castoria has been highly satisfactory, and I consider it an excellent remedy for the young."

Dr. H. D. Benner, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria as a purgative in the cases of children for years past with the most happy effect, and fully endorse it as a safe remedy."

Dr. J. A. Boarman, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria is a splendid remedy for children, known the world over. I use it in my practice and have no hesitancy in recommending it for the complaints of infants and children."

Dr. J. J. Mackey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I consider your Castoria an excellent preparation for children, being composed of reliable medicines and pleasant to the taste. A good remedy for all disturbances of the digestive organs."

His Sweetheart's Hair

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

By Nell Brinkley

HERE is some lover's glorification, the song of his ensnarement, his "Beata Mea Domina," in praise of his sweetheart's hair. I do not even know who wrote it. It was sent to me.

Lovers have always longed and yearned over the skeins of silk on the heads of the women they loved. Sometimes her hair is short, gypsy-dark, tangled in curls, metallic and crisp.

Sometimes it is brown and fine and long and sleek.

Sometimes it is velvet-black and Indian-straight, shadowy as a night-cloud and dusty-fine to the touch.

Sometimes it is red, glittering hair by hair in the sun, plenteous, stiff to touch, thick and deeply waved.

Sometimes it is deep-gold, like an autumn leaf, heavy and silky and ripply.

Sometimes it is pale-gold, fine as thistle-down, like a veil of sunshine, spreading wide and generous when shaken out, but crushing to nothing in the hands.

Whatever of these sorts it is, some lover twists in its sure snare and sends up his praiseful chant.

Here I think it must have been the deep-gold sort, heavy and silky and ripply, and colored like an autumn leaf: Listen:

I

SHE braids it in two heavy braids
That reach the carpet nigh,
And winds them crosswise, nape to crown,
To cross again and then come down,
And cross again on high.
I watch with joy that never fades;
A fortunate man am I.

II.

"She twists it from a silken twist
Into a coil instead;
Each side rests against her ear;
Its weight is on her collar clear,
Heavy it seems as lead;
A rope thick as her good wrist,
She fastens it to her head.

III.

"Tó styles not blind,
She can not bind, as other women do,
That scented mass, that smells of wheat,
And lavender and apples sweet.
She plies the great combs through,
More lovely than all maiden kind,
A woman twenty ——?"

About Introducing People

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.
Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

THERE are many sorts of introductions, the ceremonious and the unceremonious, the premeditated and unpremeditated introductions, but under all circumstances there is one rule to be remembered, and it is that indiscriminate introductions should not be made. There should be some knowledge on the part of anyone making an introduction that it will be agreeable to the persons concerned. Discretion and good judgment must be used in deciding the question of introducing people or the propriety of not doing so.

The general rule to be remembered is that when an introduction is premeditated the wishes of both persons should be consulted. A man should not be introduced to a woman when the introduction is premeditated, unless her consent is asked. The custom is for a man to ask a friend in common to introduce him to a lady at any social gathering. It is then proper for the person making the introduction to say, unobtrusively, "May I introduce Mr. C.?" Thus a woman has the option of declining, but a request of the sort is not refused unless there is some very good reason for a refusal. The formula used in introducing is: "Miss B., allow me to introduce Mr. C." In a very informal introduction the mention of the names is sufficient, thus, "Mr. C., Miss B." It will be observed that the positive rule of propriety is that a man is introduced to a woman, never the reverse.

A hostess has much responsibility in bringing people together. It is her duty to ascertain, for instance, how a new acquaintance will be received—whether it is the wish of everyone concerned to know each other before she invites them to a luncheon or a card party or any other small and intimate affair. Her own good nature in wishing that those whom she knows well should meet each other is not a sufficient cause for bringing them together.

The general conditions of society should be known to a hostess. Even if enemies are introduced to each other, they can not let their hostess know of the mistake. An instance of the ignorance of a hostess as to conditions and the distress caused by her lack of knowledge and experience was in the case of two persons whom she had included in dinner invitations and whose engagement had been broken off. Unfortunately, she sent them in to dinner together. Bravely they made the best of it, but at the close of the evening the girl's distant bow indicated to the man that there could never be a renewal of former conditions.

At a dance or a general entertainment a hostess has the privilege of introducing young people to each other, and she should see that shy people are introduced and that all have opportunities for enjoyment.

Tart Sauce.

Two women who had not seen each other for many years met unexpectedly in the street.

"How do you do?" exclaimed one, effusively.

"Now, this is delightful," said the older. "You haven't seen me for eleven years and yet you know me at once! I can not have changed so dreadfully in all that time. It flatters me!"

"Oh, I recognized your bonnet," said the first.

I heard a young mother talking to her little son about his teeth—telling him how important it is that the teeth be kept clean.

"If you want to be a big, strong boy," she said, "and then a big, strong man, you must have good teeth. And to keep your teeth sound you must remember now, while you are a little boy, to brush them twice every day."

The young mother told me that the youngster liked the taste of Ribbon Dental Cream and that this had helped her in inducing him to form the important daily habit. Of course, she talked with him about it now and then to impress on him the great advantage to his health and comfort that comes with this daily care. "Then twice a year," she added, "I have the dentist look him over."

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Dr. Cameron's courtesy had by this time returned. He pushed forward a chair and invited his visitor to sit down.

"I shall be happy to hear," said he, and lent his full attention, while Genevieve, turning with chill dignity, withdrew into a window recess near by.

"I am Julius Molesworth. If you do not remember me as your former classmate and fellow-practitioner, you probably will as one of the leading witnesses in an inquest which has aroused considerable attention of late."

Dr. Cameron's countenance changed. For reasons that we know, he had taken a great interest in this inquest, although he had said nothing about it to his wife.

"Pardon me," he replied, "I do recollect. I read of the death of your affianced wife with the utmost sympathy, for——"

"For she died upon the same night that you were married," broke in Dr. Molesworth, completing the other's sentence.

Dr. Cameron bowed.

"It is of Miss Farley and her unaccountable death that I have first to speak," continued the intruder calmly. "If you have read the proceedings, you know what the verdict was and what general credence was given me at the inquest. You will therefore be surprised to hear that for some reason unknown to me the police authorities have seen fit to discredit the evidence given by me at that time, and that I stand before you now in the character of an accused man, with the prospect of arrest before me."

A Conundrum.

"I—am sure——" Dr. Cameron stammered, glancing with some embarrassment at the tall and immovable figure of his wife, outlined against the faint yellow of the evening sky.

"Do not think you must express surprise or sympathy," interpolated Dr. Molesworth coldly; "I am innocent. But," he continued, with less dignity but more fervor, "that has nothing to do with the fact that my prospects are ruined by this suspicion and my career at an end. Whether I am committed to trial or not, my name must suffer and my practice receive a shock from which it will be long in recovering. It is a great misfortune to me, I acknowledge, but you may make it a less serious one if you will."

"I?"

"It is a conundrum which I have propounded to you," he observed, in calm allusion to what he had before said. "As you seem to possess no key to it—" He paused and one would have said he held his breath for a moment—"I shall have to produce my own. I—" he paused. "Did your wife speak?" he suddenly asked, rising with every appearance of respect.

"I think not," returned the other somewhat haughtily.

Dr. Molesworth bowed and again sat down. "Excuse me," he cried and Dr. Cameron was sure he heard him sigh; "I would not wish to weary the lady." Then with recurrence to his businesslike tones, "I asserted that you could help me. It was not lightly said, for you are a bold man and an ambitious one. "If a complicated and dangerous case were given you that demanded unusual measures, you would take them, I am sure. If that case belonged to another man and he were sick and disabled from attending to his duties, you would listen to his diagnosis and make yourself acquainted with his theory of cure, and if it met with your approval, accept it as your own and treat that case with all the interest and attention which you would have bestowed upon it if the method of treatment had been your own."

"I think so," returned the other, simply.

"Well, such a case I have," proceeded Dr. Molesworth, with steady impressiveness. "The patient is Bridget Halloran; you have doubtless heard of her and how she has been given up by Drs. S.—— and B——. But I am certain that she can be cured. That this line of treatment" (he looked toward the detective, who thereupon handed him a slip of paper) "will prove startlingly efficacious and give to the man bold and determined enough to use it an enviable notoriety."

"Let me see," exclaimed the other, his professional interest aroused in spite of himself.

The paper was handed to him, and the doctors' two heads, so dissimilar in appearance and yet so like in their expression of intellectual superiority, came together over it.

The consultation which followed will not interest the reader. It was purely professional and had enough technical terms in it to awe me from any attempt to reproduce it. Enough that as they proceeded Dr. Cameron's look of reserve and possible prejudice gave way to one of undisguised admiration, and he asked, without any tone of envy in his voice:

"How did you come by this, Molesworth? It has the appearance of a positive discovery to me."

"I got it by hard thought," was the other's reply. "I get nothing by intuition, as you do.

"So much the more credit to you," observed Dr. Cameron, folding up the paper and putting it in his pocket.

"And you will take the case?"

"On the condition that if successful the entire credit shall be yours."

A look hard to fathom flashed in the dark eye of Julius Molesworth for an instant. It seemed as if he longed to hold out his hand; but he did not do it, and an instant's silence fell upon the group.

"There seems to be no further reason for our remaining here," Dr. Molesworth at length observed. "I have finished my business, and," turning toward the detective, "am now at your service." And yet he seemed in no hurry to go.

As for Mr. Gryce, he showed no signs of having heard the doctor. His glance had fallen upon a strip of passementerie on Mrs. Cameron's silken skirts. From his puckered brows it looked as though he were studying a problem.

The detective tore his gaze from the strip of passementerie which had so engaged his attention and followed him. The stern and solemn picture which they both carried away with them was that of a woman's tall and rigid form stretched as it were on a cross against a sky, down which were slowly fluttering the first flakes of a coming snowstorm.

Curiosity or Interest?

THAT evening there was a great ball in Washington, and the woman who shone the most resplendent and received the most homage was our young bride, Genevieve Cameron. Even her husband, who had begun to expect everything from her, was amazed. Words in which she was sometimes lacking came freely from her lips, and the wit which in her case took the place of knowledge, glittered in all she said with just enough keenness to fascinate. Her white hair made her conspicuous, and her beaming eyes and dimpling mouth, amid whose smiles just the hint of smothered feeling showed itself at times, caused the gaze which fell upon her to linger till happy jealousy had laughingly whispered in her ear:

"It is fortunate this is our last ball here, or I should soon be ordering coffee and pistols for myself and some of these fierce-looking ambassadors."

Mrs. General F—— approached her in the dressing room, and after looking at her with the greatest delight for a moment, exclaimed rapturously:

"I never did see any one with such costumes as you wear. Who is your modiste? Tell me, that is a good girl."

The lady was elderly and her manner was caressing rather than impertinent, but Mrs. Cameron was much displeased, and showed it by the angry flush that crimsoned her brow and neck. Her words nevertheless were gracious, though she did not answer the other's question.

"I am really much obliged to you for your appreciation," she cried; "but I really can not give such a weighty secret away so lightly. I have gnomes and fairies to do my work, and have sworn never to reveal their whereabouts."

Back to Mother.

It was a trifling incident—almost too trifling to record—but it wearied her, and it was not long before she testified her wish to return home. In the early morning they started for New York.

It had been Dr. Cameron's intention to carry his wife direct to the home he had prepared for her. But their unexpected return made this inadvisable, and he accordingly took her to St. Nicholas place. She had not wished to go there, but she did not know how to make objection, so she said nothing, and by 6 o'clock of that same day she found herself in her mother's arms.

"My dearest!" was that mother's grateful salutation as she turned her cold cheek formally to her daughter's lips. "What a delightful surprise! And your father—how pleased he will be! But what an undutiful child you have been not to write to me! I don't believe a word about the rheumatism which Dr. Cameron says is your sole excuse. You never had the rheumatism before you were married. You have simply been lazy or anxious to show your power over your good husband. He has written quite regularly, good for nothing girl that you are!"

Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid will take out any corn, hard or soft, whole and positively without pain or danger. Never pare or cut a corn, for if the blade slips, as it frequently does, the corn bleeds, there is serious danger of blood poisoning and many deaths have been caused in this way.

The first application of Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid gives instant relief from pain, and if a soft corn of new growth, will remove it. Hard, deep, stubborn corns require several applications, but are just as completely removed, root and all, and there is no possibility of danger, nor pain. Tampering with a corn causes irritation and makes it harder to remove. Use Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid, we guarantee it to be successful and painless. 20c, by mail 22c.—(Advt.)

Art

The wonderful career of Frances Cranmer, who painted Mrs. Wilcox's Portrait.

AMONG the artists who have painted the portrait of Ella Wheeler Wilcox, it has remained for a young girl of little more than a score of years to make a remarkable success.

Miss Frances Cranmer is the artist, and in three sittings of four hours each she produced a portrait which is pronounced by all Mrs. Wilcox's near family and friends to be a wonderfully correct likeness; and by all critics who have seen the portrait to be an exceptionally fine piece of art work.

Miss Cranmer has already distinguished herself in portraiture work, and has received medals and praise from high sources.

Born in South Dakota.

Frances Cranmer was born in Aberdeen, S. Dak., in 1890, spending her early years there. After finishing her high-school studies at a private academy in Madison, Wis., she went to Washington, D. C., at the age of sixteen, where she entered the Corcoran School of Art, under the instruction of E. C. Messer.

After spending three years there she studied at the Art Students' League in New York City for a year. From there she went to Boston, entering the portrait class at the Museum School of Art.

After a winter's study there she went to Paris, attending classes at the Academie de la Grande Chaumiere, also spending some time in Holland, copying in the galleries.

Since returning, Miss Cranmer's studio has been in Washington, D. C., until going to Minneapolis last fall, when she opened a studio in the Handicraft Guild. Miss Cranmer is a pupil of William M. Chase, Frank Benson, Rubert Henri and the Spanish painter, Castelucclo, and was awarded the gold medal at the Corcoran Gallery of Art at Washington, D. C., in 1908.

Miss Cranmer is a young woman of striking beauty, great personal charm and unusual mental attainments.

She feels that her portrait of Mrs. Wilcox has been the most gratifying success of her brilliant, if brief, career as an artist.

Miss Cranmer was called to Tuxedo Park immediately after finishing this work to paint the portrait of Miss Margaret, the winsome and attractive young daughter of George Grant Mason.

Miss Margaret has taken many cups and ribbons in her sportsmanship and was painted in riding habit.

To Give Exhibition.

The portrait of Mrs. Wilcox was painted in a sunset yellow gown and mantle against a dark green background, and is most effective. When asked for her own opinion of her portrait Mrs. Wilcox said:

"I think it is such a decided work of art that long after my name is forgotten it will live in some great gallery as 'A Portrait of an Unknown Lady, by Frances Cranmer.'

"It's art value will survive temporary personality."

Miss Cranmer is to give an exhibition of her work in New York in November.

CHAPTER XXI.

MRS. DANFORTH turned as Mary entered the kitchen, then started in surprise when she saw that the girl still wore her hat and jacket.

"My dear!" she exclaimed. "I thought you were getting ready for supper?"

"Mother," said Mary, hurriedly, "I happen to remember a telegram I have to send, just a little matter of business about which I can not tell you just now. I must run around to the telegraph office before supper. I will be back in a quarter of an hour."

She paused long enough to put her arms about her mother and to kiss her with a tenderness that was almost passionate. And, at the demonstration of affection, the older woman's wounded feelings were healed.

Felt For the Card.

As Mary hurried toward Columbus avenue she felt in her hand bag for a card that Bert Fletcher had given her, a card bearing his name and address. In handing it to her, he had explained awkwardly, "If you should care to see me at any time, you can send me word there, where I live with my mother. Anything sent there gets me."

By the time the girl had reached the telegraph office she knew by heart the address on the bit of pasteboard. Seizing a telegraph blank and a pen she wrote quickly, as if fearful that her resolution would fail, the name of Herbert Fletcher, with the street and number of his home. Then, without faltering, she penned her ten-word message.

"Have changed mind. Home to night if you care to call."

Signing her initials, she handed the slip to the waiting clerk, gave him the money for the message, and added:

"See that this gets off at once, please."

The clerk grinned. It was evident that he considered this a pretty girl sending a summons to an admirer.

"Oh, yes, Miss," he began pertly. "Don't worry, I'll——"

He stopped abruptly as he met Mary's stern and surprised gaze, and had the grace to mutter, "Excuse me!" flushing to the roots of his red hair.

Mary had forgotten the incident and her own displeasure by the time she turned again into Eighty-fourth street, and walked westward. The glow that, such a short time before, had seemed prophetic to her happy heart, had died entirely from the western sky, and in its place was a bank of fog rising slowly from the river.

She Sighed Again.

"The whole world has changed once more," she muttered, wretchedly. "If it were not for mother, I would like to die! But she needs me. I almost wish she didn't."

Yet when she opened the door of the Danforth apartment, she forced herself to call out cheerily:

"Here I am, mother dear! As soon as I can make myself presentable I will come out to supper. Forgive me for keeping you waiting."

At the bright tone the mother, vaguely uneasy by her daughter's recent reticence, breathed a sigh of relief. After all, things must be all right or Mary would not seem so like herself again. Girls were queer creatures, anyhow, with their varying moods, and Mary had been a different girl since her father's death. Which thought made the elderly woman sigh again.

As the two women sat over their simple evening meal the daughter chatted lightly, pleasantly. She tried to remember the little gossip of the office and several mild jokes that Mr. Pearson had told her to-day when he happened to stop at her desk for a few minutes' chat. The girl laughed more heartily in telling these than her mother thought natural. At last the widow asked a question that had trembled on her lips when Mary had come out to supper, but which she had checked, moved to do this by an impulse which she did not understand.

"Dearie," she said timidly, "are you feeling badly to-night, or are you worried?"

Mary shook her head. "Only tired, mother dear," she replied. "You know at this time of year the work seems hard."

The mother looked distressed and breathed her customary sigh. At the sound Mary felt vaguely annoyed. Her mother sighed most of the time nowadays, she reflected. It was getting to be a confirmed habit.

What is the matter, mother?" she asked, trying to speak gently.

"I was only thinking," said the widow, "that I wish you did not have to work so hard."

"So do I," returned the daughter. "Let's hope I won't have to much longer."

"You Frighten Me!"

The mother looked at her hopefully and inquiringly: "Do you mean that, Mary?" she asked eagerly. "Do you mean that there's a chance that soon you can stop all this toil, and that all we've hoped for will happen?"

Her voice broke and the tears came to her eyes.

"Oh," she exclaimed, "if so, thank heaven! Thank heaven! It has driven me wild to see you so tired, dear, and I am so lonely, and I have hoped that you had had news from Gordon, but I didn't like to ask about him so often. Do you mean now that he——"

Mary had risen to her feet and stood pale, but calm, gazing at her mother. Her expression caused the older woman to catch her breath sharply.

"Why—Mary—what is the matter?" she asked tremulously. "Don't look like that! You frighten me!"

"There is nothing to be frightened about, dear," the daughter said slowly, "only I would rather you did not talk to me again about Gordon Craig. For I shall never marry him."

Although the widow burst into hysterical sobs, the girl's calmness did not desert her, nor did her voice quaver when, after having soothed the agitated woman, she gave the brief explanation:

"It is all for the best, mother. Gordon and I do not love each other any longer. And I would not marry him if he were the only man in the world!

Bake them until they are mealy and within about five minutes of absolute done-ness. Remove from the oven, cut off the tops and stir into the crumbled inside which you have mashed in a bowl with a silver fork butter, pepper, salt and finely minced ham. Return a generous filling to each shell. Break over the top of each an entire egg (yolk and white). Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T HUMBLE YOURSELF.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 and in love with a young man two years my senior. Recently he saw me going to a ball with another man, and he got angry. He did not go. Since that time he does not speak to me and goes with other girls to make me jealous. I don't take any notice of him, but I really love him. He has told a friend of mine that if I apologized he would speak to me. I am not engaged to him and am too proud to think of apologizing for such a foolish thing. ANXIOUS.

You have done nothing for which an apology is necessary, and a girl who begins by being humble has to keep it up.

Continue in your present attitude, and if he loves you enough to be worth loving he will be the one to apologize. If not, then do not spoil your pretty eyes by worrying, for the right man will some day come along.

DON'T TAKE EITHER.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 21 and have two boy friends who are very much in love with me. One is eight months younger than I, and the other is four years older. My parents are very much opposed to my marriage with the former, as his family connections are not what could be called good. The other boy has a very good reputation; he cares a lot for me, but I do not care half as much for him. My parents think everything of him. But he does not appeal to me. PERPLEXED.

Your parents object to one suitor and you don't love the other. Good reasons why you should not take either. Wait a while and perhaps time will make your way clear for you. But under no conditions must you marry a man you do not love. Always remember that.

Taken at His Word.

Old Johnson had realized the dream of his life, and taken his only son into partnership in the business he had worked up himself. There was great pride in the old man's heart the first day they were installed in the office together, and he was looking forward to the projects they would work out, and how the young blood would stimulate the firm.

As the days went on, however, all did not work as old Johnson had expected, and the youngster's overbearing manner annoyed him considerably.

"Look here, young man," said he one morning, "let's have a little less of the 'I,' and a little more of the 'we' in this business. Remember I'm still here, and that you're only junior partner."

The youngster "lay low" for a week, and the father thought his few words had struck home. A few days later, however, his son appeared looking just a trifle anxious.

"I say, dad, we've been and done it now," he remarked.

"Done what?" asked his alarmed parent.

"Well—er—we've been and married the typist!"

.:. BLUFF .:. .:. By Leslie Thomas .:.

THE young man in the opposite corner of the compartment possessed, obviously, a simple and confiding nature, and Mr. Leverton spent a good deal of his time in searching for such truthful souls. His means of livelihood were mysterious—he confessed to a disinclination for monotonous labor.

"'Bluff' is Archie Leverton's motto," he would admit to his intimates. "It never fails, my boys—never!"

He eyed the vacant-looking youth in the manner of a spider with an unsuspicious fly. On this occasion, it was evident, a likely subject for his wiles had approached of his own accord.

The youth caught his eye and wriggled confusedly.

"I s'pose you know the city pretty well, please, sir."

"Some of it," Mr. Leverton ventured.

"Then, p'r'aps you can tell me whereabouts Axland street is—the best way to er—get them from the station?"

With a pleasant smile, Mr. Leverton changed his seat, and bent down to follow the young man's forefinger. He read the "personal" announcement curiously.

"Regent Street, January 2.

"Will the person who rescued an elderly lady from being run over by a taxicab kindly apply to Messrs. Collingham & Tremlow, solicitors, of Imperial House, Axland street, E. C., when a suitable recompense will be offered."

"Don't mean to say it was you that saved the old girl?"

"Pulled her on to the curb," stammered the young man, modestly.

"You—in town?"

"I was just visiting Aunt Martha—coming home then I mean; but I had half an hour to spare; so I took a stroll, too—to see things."

His Name.

"Why, brave! You're a regular hero, Mr ——. What name, by the by?"

"Greenhill, sir. How much d'you think they'll give me? What's 'recompense'?"

Same as reward, explained Mr. Leverton, hurriedly. He was engaged in concocting a scheme. "Greenhill! The 'green' part's right enough!" he thought amusedly.

"Dare say it might run to a good bit o' money, eh?"

"Not very likely, Mr. Greenhill, I'm afraid."

"Oh!" said the youth disappointedly.

"Not if you go there for it yourself. You see, you're not used to talking to solicitors, are you?"

"No-no."

"Thought not. You aren't good at bargaining and haggling with 'em. You aren't up to their artful ways. Don't blame you for that. But, as likely as not they'd offer you some mis'rable amount, and you ought to laugh in their faces. But you'd take it."

"I—I shouldn't! Don't see why you should think I'm——"

"You'd take it," repeated Mr. Leverton firmly. "A man who's had no dealings with 'em hasn't got a fair chance. They'd persuade him to anything and they'd get you to sign some paper or other——"

"The question is, how much ought——"

"Ah," returned Mr. Leverton, admiringly, "you've hit the nail on the head. All depends on what sort of old girl it was. Did she look well off?"

Mr. Greenhill began to describe the lady. Unostentatiously, his new friend made notes.

"Whereabouts were you standing at the time? H'm! Just near the circus? And how did the accident happen exactly? Best tell me all about it; then I'll be able to—ahem!—be in a position to advise you."

A Plan.

Mr. Greenhill added voluminous details. When his memory failed, a hint from Mr. Leverton would start him off again.

"Good!" declared the latter gentleman, patting his shoulder. "Now, let me think."

He started up presently.

"You take me with you," he suggested blandly. "I'll manage the talking. I'll see you aren't put upon."

"But it ud be wasting a lot o' your time, sir."

"No, no; I'm very interested in the matter."

"And I reckon," added the youth, wisely, "you'd be expecting something for your trouble."

"Smart, I see," cried Mr. Leverton, beaming, "and cautious, too! You're wrong, though. Of course, if you care to stand me a drink afterward, I won't say 'No!' But otherwise—you see, you remind me of a favorite nephew of mine, and I wouldn't accept even 5 per cent—even 2½. No!"

"Very kind, I'm sure."

"Good-hearted, I am; it always was my failing. I'll show you Axland street. Here's the train stopping. We'll go straight there. When we come to Imperial House, in we go—or, rather," he appeared to reflect—"you better wait outside, if you've no objection. Understand, if you've no objection. Understand?"

"Yes, sir. I'll send for you if you're wanted. But I'll get more money out of those lawyers than you would. I expect the old girl's said to em: 'See what he's satisfied with. Give the good, brave fellow what he think's right. I leave it to you entirely.'"

Mr. Greenhill was pondering deeply.

"I thought of catching the next train back," he observed, "to tell 'em at home all about it. They're waiting very anxious."

"Well, it won't take us much over three-quarters of an hour."

"Then I'd manage it all right. Only I wanted to buy Rosie a—present."

No Money.

"Your young lady?"

"Ye-s," agreed Mr. Greenhill, giggling in discomfort. "Buy it out of what I get from the lawyers, you see, sir. Still if I wait till you meet me with that money——"

"Haven't you got any with you?"

"Only sevenpence and my 'return half,' sir."

"I'll lend you five shillings. Do your bit of shopping while I'm inside."

Outside the Imperial House the coin changed hands.

"If you're not out when I come back, sir, I'll stand just here."

"Right-o!" Mr. Leverton nodded.

Once out of sight, moving toward the lift, he gave vent to his restrained mirth.

"Aha, Bluff!" he gasped, exhaustedly. "Heads I win, tails you lose. Now, then, for Messrs. Collingham and Tremlow. Saved the old girl's life. I should think I did. Rather! I remember the whole thrilling scene. And if she happened to describe me as younger and more stupid-looking—well, she made a mistake in the excitement of the moment. More bluff!"

A clerk inquired his business. In due course he sailed jauntily into an inner room. But five minutes later he burst out and stumbled down the stairs.

"A woman, it was—been rewarded already," he babbled. "He told me everything wrong—wrong side o' the road even—wrong sort of old girl—'obtaining money by false pretenses'—what did the old josser say I could get for that? Where's that Greenhill fellow? I'll—I'll—see if I don't——"

The simple young man was not waiting at the door; neither did he return.

"O' course not," lamented Mr. Leverton, bitterly. "He's got a quid of mine. Bluff—sheer bluff!" he moaned in anguish. "Oh, I'll have to take to short frocks and pinafores again, and have a nurse to look after me!"

Got His Number.

The aged motor van was somehow always getting out of repair, and it usually indulged in a little breakdown about once a week, in order to vary an otherwise monotonous existence.

Slowly it snorted its way into the broad stream of traffic, when there was a sudden whirring of wheels, a loud snap, and the weary and worn framework came to a dead stop.

"Look here," said the policeman to the driver, "this kind of thing is occurring too often. Let's see, what's your number? Yes, 1588!"

"Go on!" said the precocious youth who was in charge of the cart immediately behind. "That ain't its number. That's the year it was built!"

"At a card party which I attended one afternoon last week all but two of the ladies present had been divorced."

"What was the matter with the two?"

"They were old maids."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was a yung man & his wife up to the house last nite & I felt sorry for the yung man. He dident know that I felt sorry for him, because he talked to me as if I were about two years old, but I know moar than he does.

His naim was Ralph, that is the only naim I herd. His wife called him Ralph all the time, & he called hisself Ralph. This is the way he talked:

"Sum peepul doesnt know enuff to cum in out of the rain, but littel old Ralph is different. Thare is a lot of men that thinks thay are wise, but littel Ralph knows he is wise."

Pa was telling sumthing about a married man that found out his wife had been a shoftlifter for years. It is funny he dident find it out sooner, Pa sed.

Not at all, sed Ralph. Thare is a lot of simpletons like him. He did not know wimmen. I know them like a book. Thay can fool sum men, but thay never put one over on littel old Ralph, he sed.

& so you understand wimmen, sed Ma.

Deer me, yes, sed Ralph. For yeers & yeers I studied them. Thay always liked me, & used to tell me a lot of things that thay wud keep from other men. Like Tom Moore, my only books were women's looks.

How vary interesting, sed Ma. I feel kind of creepy wen I am near a yung man who knows wimmen so well, sed Ma. What if you shuld see sum of my faults that my husband dosent see, & tell him about them.

Sum men mite be that way, sed Ralph, but littel old Ralph is a close mouthed man. Thare are sum things in this hed of mine that will go to the grave with me wen I die, sed Ralph.

It must be yure teeth, sed Pa. I doant think you will carry many other things to the grave with you. But tell us about yure wild days with the ladies.

Oh, Ralph never talks of those days, sed his wife. He is satisfied to let them be buried in the past. He is a true, tender husband now, & is living all his best years for me, aren't you, Ralph?

Yes, sed Ralph, all the wild yeers are gone. I do not suppose a quiet, hoam-luving man like you evver had much chanst to study wimmen, sed Ralph to Pa.

I used to have a lot of chanst to study them, sed Pa, but after I got my wisdom teeth cut I stopped trying to dope them out. There isent any nurrishment in studying wimmen, my deer boy, sed Pa. You are at the age now wen you think you know a lot about the fair sex, & the fair se xis jest fair enuff to let you think so. History is full of cases jest like yures, sed Pa. I have known a lot of deeper students of wimmen than you, Pa sed, that thought they had it all at thare tongue's end. Then they wud marry a simpel, innocent gurl & start to educate her, & she wud run away with a life saver jest out of the high school that cuddent say anything except "I shud worry."

Doant try to tell me, sed Ralph.

No, Ralph, I will not try to tell you, sed Pa. You are one of those "Doant tell me" boys, & I will not try to ruffle yure feelings. Now let us all talk about sumthing that the rest of us understand as well as you.

What He Meant.

"That last thing you sent in was good," said the editor. "We all enjoyed reading it very much."

"Well in that case," said the youthful poet, "I take back what I said in the letter I wrote to you yesterday about my determination never to send you any of my work again."

The editor slowly shook his head. "Don't do that," he murmured. "Why, that letter is what I referred to."

Up-to-Date Jokes

A lady with a wasp-like waist fainted in a city street the other day and was carried into the nearest shop. An Irishman, who had observed the occurrence, looked into the shop after a few minutes and inquired:

"How is she now?"

"Oh," said the shopman, "she's coming to."

"Ah," replied Pat, "come in two has she? Poor thing! Bedad, it's just what I was afraid of."

A veteran, talking to his great-grandson, a little lad of eight or nine years, remarked:

"Nearly a generation and a half ago my head was grazed by a bullet at the battle of Chickamauga."

The little boy looked at the old man's head thoughtfully and said:

"There isn't much grazing there now, is there, grandad?"

PADDY RYAN CLIMBED TO TOP EASILY

Ryan Beat Joe Goss When Joe Was Hardly Able to Hold Up His Hands.

RYAN AND SULLIVAN MEET

Circumstances Sometimes Force Championship on a Boxer.

By Otto C. Floto.

THE days when names minus ability cut a figure in the prize ring have passed. Time was when reputations were built upon mediocre performances, when clever boosting and shrewd manipulation did the rest. Once a great reputation had been earned it was easy work to gather the kale from the idol-worshiping public. Some may doubt the accuracy of these statements, but I can recall where a certain fighter earned the title of heavyweight champion of the world and yet he never could fight. Any of our welterweights of the present could have beaten him. But in some mysterious manner he managed to get on top, and once there he remained in the position in which fate had placed him and lived on his reputation. I mean Paddy Ryan.

Ryan Beats Joe Goss.

Ryan managed to beat old Joce Goss when the latter could hardly hold his hands up. The match was made through Richard K. Fox, who really believed Ryan a great fighter; in fact, it was Fox who furnished the $10,000 for Paddy when the latter fought John L. at Mississippi City in 1882. After defeating Goss, Ryan was a great attraction, and all who dared challenge him were hooted. In fact, when Parson Davies, who had secured backing for Sullivan from Mike McDonald in Chicago, went to New York to deposit the money the crowd became so angry at Sullivan for his presumption in challenging the champion that both John L. and Davies had to make their exit by the rear door of The Police Gazette office.

Sullivan Wins Easily.

Of course, when Ryan and Sullivan met the latter won so easily that it was a joke, and Ryan was for all time exposed as to his class. Then, when they were to battle again in Frisco, Ryan got as far as Ogden and "took it on the run" back to Chicago. He was finally induced to try again, and Sullivan knocked him out as easily as he did on the first occasion. Between times, however, Ryan was matched to meet Frank Glover on a boat near Chicago. Of course, the police prevented the meeting, and whispers told us that "friends of Paddy's had seen the chief."

Pleasant Manner Won Following.

Personally, Ryan was one of the finest men you could meet and it was his pleasant manner that enabled him to be numbered among the great fighters and not his ability as a pugilist that ranked him there. It would be almost impossible to build up one of those "hothouse" champions at the present age. The dear public that has been buffeted about and handed the hot end of so many propositions has become "wised" and knows as much about the fight game as those who follow it for a livelihood. Consequently, no attempts are made to pass the papier mache champion as the bona fide article any more.

TINKER STILL ON JOB; DENIES HE HAS RESIGNED

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 15.—Joe Tinker denied to-day that he had resigned as manager of the Cincinnati Reds. According to a report, Tinker and President Herrmann are at outs because of the running of the team, and the latter requested Tinker to quit.

Tinker declares he would not resign unless requested to do so by Herrmann, and as the latter has made no such request he is still on the job and intended to remain.

Lookouts Are Fighting Savagely

Tabasco Kid Tries Hard to Win

By O. B. Keeler.

ONE thing seems to be pretty well established by yesterday's terrific, if indecisive, struggle.

The Tabasco Kid is going to whip us out of a pennant if he can.

The T. K. has no chance to win a pennant himself, this year. But all the animosity and all the rivalry existing between the Atlanta and Chattanooga ball clubs is right at the top now.

And this crool war is going to be crool, for fair.

* * *

THERE was the sixth inning of yesterday's game.

The Lookouts caught Conzelman wobbling and tied up the count. Howell, pitching for the visitors, was going fairly well. Darkness was gathering.

Out went Mr. Howell. In went Mr. Street. Joe wobbled some more and Gabby was winged, dancing on first, his yells of encouragement reaching to heaven.

Bloole! That was the miserable Walsh and the Lookouts were one up.

Bloole! That was the recent edition of E. Flick. And the bases were full.

Bloof! That was the wretched Covie, blowing up a foul for Joe Dunn.

* * *

AND now look who's here!

The Kid had several other hurlers he could have inserted to hoi! that single run lead.

But no. Out wanders the giant Pole.

The crowd lifts up its voice and weeps, or words to that effect. It is evident that the Kid wants that game, and wants it blamed bad. Wants it cinched, in fact.

* * *

BUT the Crackers' backs are up, and furious at that slender lead wrenched from under their eye-teeth, no ordinary Pole—not even the well-known Thaddeus of Warsaw—is going to make them lie down, roll over and play dead.

Tommy Long waits the big fork-hander out; makes him be good, and hooks one just inside third for two bases. Welchonce slashes a bounder toward second that Flick knocks down in a great play. Wally Smith cuts one on the off-side of Mr. Flick, and he performs another dive while the author of the double rode home.

Score tied.

* * *

AND now, friends, you'll just have to come through and hand it to that to-headed expatriate.

Maybe the old soup-bone was chilled when he went in. Maybe the wet pill bothered him. Maybe whatever you please. But right here, with nobody down, and Crackers on third and first, Mr. Coveleskie gave a sincere imitation of an actual pitcher.

Bisland was next, and the Pole whiffed him. The infield was close on the grass, and Wally Smith was permitted to swipe second. One hit would settle it. But Holland's swing faded into a feeble bounder to Walsh and Welchonce was out at the plate. Then Calvo, the Cuban, hit to Flick and the inning was over.

Just hand something to the Pole. He looked like the goods just then.

And the Tabasco Kid? Well, he skinned over his hand and he led trumps. And if he didn't win, he didn't lose.

* * *

OF course, a double-header was arranged for the home-coming of the Crackers, and a whale of a crowd was about to be on hand, and the Royal Rooters were there, and all.

So the bottom fell out. And one abbreviated game had the very dickens of a time getting itself played to a draw.

At that, there were 2,500 of the faithful there, plus the R. R. Club, with megaphones. And in the damp and drear interval betwixt 2:15 and 4:10 o'clock there was a crop-saving deluge to watch, and (this was only a rumor) a flock of snipe in the swamp in left field; and, later, Billy Smith with a broom, sweeping the flood heroically off his ball park.

That alone was worth the price of admission.

* * *

JACINTO CALVO is the entire name of the debutante, and he looks as if he might reflect honor on his native Cuba Libre, or clear Havana, or whatever it is. He is a small, sprightly gentleman with a pleasing smile, a powerful left wing, and a bewildering habit of flopping his arms while preparing for a dash to second.

Also, Jack appears to possess the small and expressive word indicating viscera.

In the sixth inning the new hand came up and fouled off a fast one that shot hot off the bat into his right eye. The youngster was stunned and blinded, but he didn't flop on the ground or stall. He sluiced the damaged optic with some ice water, collected his bat from an admiring small boy, and singled viciously over second.

* * *

THOMAS JEFFERSON LONG was the batting hero. In four times up he got two bases on balls and two hits, one of them the only extra-baser of the melee. Welchonce batted only .500 in the fracas, and Harry Holland fell down to .333, which is a very lowly mark, in the light of his recent doings.

* * *

JOE CONZELMAN began to hate himself after he got h. b. p. b. in the fifth. He tried to go all the way to third on Agler's single through Walsh, which Kid Elberfeld-ed to Graff in time to nip Joe by about fourteen yards.

* * *

THE Lookouts' first run was a gift. Bases full and two down in the sixth, Coyle hit sharply to Holland. The runner from second was past Harry, so his logical play was at second. But Smith was a bit slow in covering, and Harry, trying to check his throw, cut loose a peg into the dirt for one run.

* * *

IF there is any way to charge a catcher with a balk, Joe Dunn ought to have it. With a Lookout on second, Joe started a peg designed to nip him off. Nobody was covering, and Joe squeezed the pill, but not tightly enough. It slipped out of Joe's amole fist and rolled nearly to third, with Joe in close pursuit. Nobody advanced, so we suppose it is impossible to mark a balk against him.

DENT AND PRICE THE PITCHERS FOR TO-DAY

The Crackers will make another attempt this afternoon to play two games with their pet enemies, the Lookouts, and that will leave only two games to be played to-morrow, by way of cleaning up the series. Only one more engagement with Chattanooga remains for the local club after the present series—September 6, when the season ends.

Manager Smith said this morning that Gilbert Price and Elliott Dent would work this afternoon, opposed, to the best of Manager Elberfeld's information, by Harry Coveleskie and Rudy Sommers. But the Peppery Kid never is certain of his selection until the umpire announces it.

The manager said Harry Chapman's wrenched ankle would keep him out of the game until Monday, at the earliest.

EAST MACON WINS.

VIDALIA, GA., Aug. 15.—The East Macon team easily defeated Vidalia yesterday in the second game of a series of three. Errors of the local outfield lost the game for the home boys. The score was 10 to 1.

O, YOU AUGUST!

How sweet are the August days,
With the Macks and McGraws ahead,
And the other teams are but faded dreams
And their hopes of a flag are dead.

How sweet are the August days
As the end of the fight draws near,
And the managers say, as they draw their pay,
"Look out for the team next year!"

Aside from chess there is only one pastime that thrills us more than to watch two ball teams dragging out their salary after the fight is over. The said pastime is rogue.

In America the keynote of sport is to win. In England—well, they cawn't do it, don't you know.

It is estimated by geographers that the trip of the Sox and Giants around the world will consume more time than it takes Joe Dunn to hike around the bases.

Speaking of baseball and English, what language do the umpires speak when they announce the batteries?

TO THE CLUBHOUSE.

John, John, old Evers' son,
Bawled the umps and away he run.

Cy Pieh is now a member of the Yanks. Not that it makes any difference in the pennant race, but it shows that Hugh Jennings is loafing on the job.

While we are on the subject of names we might say without fear of successful contradiction that Oscar Gutter is not an inappropriate name for a fight manager.

The report that Mr. Whitney is trying to dispose of his American racing stable reveals the fact that in spite of his wealth, Mr. Whitney is no rummy.

It is said that Marquard and McLean form the tallest battery in baseball. It might be said that they form the nuttiest battery in baseball, but, considering their collective size, we refuse to say it.

The report that Jack Prince's Los Angeles motordrome was destroyed by fire fails to move us to tears. But it might if we were an undertaker.

Speaking of football, the real victims of that vicious game are the scribes who are forced to learn the new rules under pain of being amputated from the pay roll.

SMOKY JOE.

Gone are the days when his arm was up to snuff;
Gone are games when he showed his oldtime stuff.
Gone are the days, the days of long ago,
When Red Sox rooters up and yelled for Smokey Joe.

LAPORTE GIVES UP FRANCHISE.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Laporte, Ind., the best semi-professional team in Indiana, now that the Gary club has surrendered its franchise, will play the Gunthers at Gunther Park tomorrow. The team has cleaned up practically every strong team in its own State and has been forced to travel to get a strong enough opponent.

Three-Cornered Race Feature

Good Card at Saucer To-night

IT'S a great night for "13" at the Motordrome; "13" meets have been postponed, and to-night is the "13th" meet to be held, barring, of course, that Jack Prince's old sidekick, J. Pluv, doesn't kick in with some of his wet assortment.

The feature event to-night will be a three-cornered match race of three heats between Morty Graves, Harry Swartz and George Lockner. These lads have their machines tuned up top speed right now and it wouldn't be surprising if Kid Record was given an awful kick in the ribs.

The first heat of the match race will be one mile, the second two miles, and the third three miles.

* * *

THE Motordrome Purse is the opening event of the card. There will be two trial heats of one mile and a final of two miles. The first and second men in each heat will qualify. In the first heat the starters will be Swartz, Graves, Richards and Glenn. In the other, Lewis, Luther, Renel and Lockner will fight it out.

And then there is a classy affair scheduled, the Veledrome de Buffalo Sweepstakes. We will leave it to the kind reader to figure out for himself what all that name means.

* * *

BUT said race is to be run in three heats of three, five and seven miles. It is to be scored on a point system of ten points for a first, six for a second and three for a third.

Altogether, this card sizes up as the best ever staged at the Saucer.

Morty Graves' eye, which was bunged up by a flying piece of metal Tuesday night, is O. K. now and he promises to have his new 8-cylinder machine tearing up the track.

Following is the complete program:

MOTORDROME PURSE.
(One Mile to Qualify; Two-mile Final, Two Men in Each Heat to Qualify for Final.)

First Heat—Swartz, Graves, Richards and Glenn.

Second Heat—Lewis, Luther, Renel and Lockner.

SPECIAL MATCH RACE.
(One, Two and Three Mile Heats—Best Two Out of Three Heats.)

First Heat—Swartz, Lockner and Graves.

Final of Motordrome Purse—Two miles.

Veledrome de Buffalo Sweepstakes. French point system. Ten points for first, six for second, and three for third. Distance, three, five and seven miles.

First Heat, Three Miles—Richards, Renel, Glenn, Luther and Lewis.

Second Heat of Special Match Race, Two Miles—Swartz, Lockner and Graves.

Second Heat of Sweepstakes, Five Miles—Richards, Renel, Glenn, Luther and Lewis.

Third Heat of Special Match Race, Three Miles—Swartz, Lockner and Graves.

Third Heat of Sweepstakes, Seven Miles—Richards, Renel, Glenn, Luther and Lewis.

Windy City Lad Has Everything Needed to Annex the Title

CHARLEY WHITE LOOKS LIKE COMING CHAMP

By W. S. Farnsworth.

CHARLEY WHITE is going to come mighty close to annexing the lightweight championship within the next year or eighteen months.

There are only two obstacles in the way. One is that he will have to add about five pounds to his present weight. The other, chilled pedals on the part of Messrs. Ritchie, Cross, Wolgast, Murphy, Rivers, etc.

If any one of the quintet had seen Charley in action against Frank Whitney at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night I doubt very much if the young Chicagoan would ever be furnished the opportunity of entering a ring at the same time said ring was decorated with their presence.

Charley is a top-notch boxer, a hard and sure hitter, a wonderful judge of distance, a marvel at just escaping punches, either by side-stepping or blocking, and an expert in sizing up just what his opponent's stock in trade amounts to.

I have seen Cross, Murphy, Britton, Wolgast and all the other claimants of the title, including the titleholder himself, excepting Rivers, and White, in my opinion, has it on them in all lines of the game that go toward making a champion.

* * *

DESPITE the respect I hold for the judgment of my fellow scribes, Dick Jemison, Julian Murphey and Fuzzy Woodruff, I can not agree with their opinions as to the outcome. All three of my pals agreed that White won, but none of them thought his victory was as impressive as did yours truly.

I thought White had every round in a walk, excepting the second and fourth. While I gave White the edge in these two, it was very close. The other eight were Charley's by a mile, in my opinion.

But the vanquished came in for a heap of credit. There isn't another man of his weight who would have taken the beating that Frank did and still fight back. Just because a man takes a beating without flopping doesn't show that he is stout-hearted. It is the man who will fight back when he is being beaten that is really possessed of a stout heart.

In the seventh round Whitney was given an unmerciful walloping. With legs sagging, head bobbling, glassy-eyed, sick and weak, he never once thought of anything but fight. And the harder White smashed his tottering frame and his clouded head, the harder did Whitney try to fight back.

He is the gamest, grittiest, nerviest fighter in the game to-day.

* * *

HEARD an argument last night on Peachtree about the fight. One fan claimed it wasn't a good one because there wasn't a knock-out. Well, if that scrap wasn't a good one then there never was a good one.

Next to the Ketchel-O'Brien fight in New York about five years ago, it was the fastest young affair I have ever been fortunate enough to witness.

The fact that there wasn't a K.O. landed, like the one poor Jake Abel suffered in no time against White, doesn't show that the fight was slow. If anything, it points just the other way.

White fought at top speed all the way. So did Whitney, but Frank has a wonderful defense and White was unable to land as he did on Abel, Thomas and the many others that he has floored for a "ten."

To get right down to facts, there is only one punch that Frank has trouble blocking and that is a straight left jab. And nobody was ever knocked out with a jab yet. It is a stinging punch that discourages and wears down a man, but it very seldom topples him over.

* * *

WHITNEY and White are two grand little fellows. And both praised the other as soon as the scrap was over.

Said White: "Whitney is the toughest, gamest fellow of his weight in the world. And, believe me, he can beat a lot of these fellows who are claiming a right to fight for the title."

Said Whitney: "White is a wonderful fighter and has a grand chance of being champion some day. Jack Britton is the only boy I know of who might beat him."

All of which shows that Frank Whitney and Charley White are mighty high-class persons.

BEHAVE OR FACE RELEASE WHIPS CUBS INTO LINE

BOSTON, MASS., Aug. 15.—Look for the best there is in the Cub team all through this Eastern invasion, and for that matter from now on until the close of the season, and also look for the Chicago Nationals to climb. There is quite a gap between the Cubs and the Phillies, but Manager Evers says that will not only be closed, but it will be overrun, meaning that his organization will finish second in the big race. The word has been passed to the various members of the Cubs that Evers is manager, will remain manager and that his word is law and must be obeyed, even at the cost of a wholesale shift.

Advised to Make Trades.

More, the players have been given the tip that President Murphy has advised Evers to trade or sell any member of the team he thinks isn't doing his best, or who disregards John's orders, no matter who it might be, and this has thrown the scare into the boys. The recent shifting of Reulbach, Richie and Overall has shown that Murphy means business. True, the three named had lost much of their effectiveness to the team, but there was more than just that back of the changes.

Evers Will Have Order.

"I'll have discipline and order on the team, even if I have to get rid of the disturbers," was a recent statement of John's, and he certainly has taken the whip in hand. It is known that John was a bit lenient with his men and some took advantage by disregarding his say.

Murphy is back of John in every move he makes. The Cub boss is pleased with the manager's work and says only those scribes who wish to run his baseball club are finding fault with John.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Local fans are still talking about Charley White's clean-cut victory over Frank Whitney at the Auditorium-Armory. White left with his manager, Nate Lewis, for Chicago yesterday and says he would gladly come back here later to meet some worthy foe.

* * *

Before leaving, Charley said he was particularly anxious to get on with Johnny Dundee, who recently defeated his brother, Jack White. Charley, already, has beaten Dundee in a ten-round go at New York and is positive he can repeat the dose.

* * *

Ah Cheng, the only Chinese boxer in the game, scored a clean knock-out over Paddy McCarty in the sixth round of a scheduled ten-round set-to yesterday. In another ten-round battle Barney Williams outpointed Tim Logan, of Philadelphia.

* * *

Jess Willard, the cowboy white hope, and Bull Young, the promising Western heavyweight, have signed articles to meet in a twenty-round mill at Vernon, Cal., on August 22.

* * *

Charley White will make his next fight against Johnny Griffiths at Akron, Ohio, on Labor Day. Griffiths is a big card in the Ohio city, where he has won 50 fights without a defeat. They are scheduled to go ten rounds.

* * *

Snowy Baker, the Australian promoter, is seriously thinking of matching Owen Moran and Matt Wells for a twenty-round bout. Moran has been guaranteed three fights by Baker.

* * *

Joe Rivers is so certain that he will win over Leach Cross when they meet in their twenty-round engagement at Vernon, Cal., on Labor Day afternoon that he has already made the announcement that he intends to wager $2,000 on his chances of receiving the referee's decision. "I have already beaten Cross," said Rivers in Los Angeles, "and I am sure that I can repeat the trick in our twenty-round go."

* * *

Dundee and Ad Wolgast will clash in a twenty-round engagement on the coast September 9. These battlers should put up a great mill, as both are great mixers.

WARES SOLD TO BROWNS.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Aug. 15.—The Montgomery baseball management announced to-day that Clyde Wares, second baseman of the Montgomery team, has been sold to the St. Louis Americans. Wares has been playing sensational ball for the Billikens this season.

RADER IS LET OUT.

LINCOLN, NEBR., Aug. 15.—President Jones, of the Lincoln Western League Club, announced the acquisition of Infielder Donald Rader, of the Chicago Americans. Rader was recently purchased by Chicago from the Pendleton, Oreg., club.

DONAHUE LEAVES FOR HOME.

MOBILE, ALA., Aug. 15.—Catcher Donahue, of the Montgomery club, who has been out of condition on account of malarial fever, did not go to Memphis with the team, but left last night for his home in Ohio to remain until next season. It is reported that Dobbs will get two new payers.

Calvo Looks Like Regular Player
Some Notes on the Cuban Star

GENTLEMEN, meet Senor Jacinto Calvo, clear Habana, perfecto shape, rising 21, and some left-handed outfielder from Washington.

When first visible to the admiring populace, our brand-new right fielder was engaged in batting practice under the grandstand, the universe having sprung a leak to the tune of bull-frogs croaking in the marshes around second base. About six hundred damp but appreciative fans were looking over Senor Calvo with a steady cascade from the eaves of the smoker coasting down their spines.

It was an heroic sight.

* * *

SENOR CALVO still is a few chips shy on the United States language, but he is popularly reputed to be death on a fly ball. And it generally is taken for granted that a 10-second clip on the old towpath more than makes up for a split infinitive.

At that, Senor Jack's conversational powers are fully equal to the narrative of his brief but entertaining career. He let it out somewhat as follows:

Jacky is 20 years and a pair of months old. He was born in Havana and has an abiding dislike for Spaniards. When a mere boy he used to put in days and days just hating our o. f., Butch Weyler.

Jacky was started to school quite early and kept at it until he had a good education. Along about his sixteenth year, however, his digestion or something—the Spanish of which is obscure—got out of whack and somebody suggested that he let up on the school and take up some more outdoorish pursuit.

* * *

THAT spelled baseball with a large B for Jacky, who was a bear-cat on the town lots and would rather watch the Almandares team play ball than to hear "Cubanola" by a full orchestra of guitars.

In fact, the youngster wasn't long breaking into the most select company on the tight little island—the Almandares club, which boasts one of the world's greatest pitchers, Mendez. The only thing that has kept Mendez outside the Big Top in the Land of the Free and the H. O. T. B. is the fact that he is a couple of shades too brunette even for a Cuban.

Well, Jacinto showed speed on the bases and in the field, and more particularly did he wallop that old pill.

And so—Jacky can't explain just how this part of it happened—some scout or othe rgot a line on him and tipped off Clark Griffith, and pretty nearly the next thing the Little Perfecto knew he was in a large, white city, with the streets running skewgee and everybody talking about somebody named Walter Johnson.

He played in twenty games for the Senators and then he busted an ankle. By the time the transportation facilities were in shape again the Washington outfield was going along at top speed, and Jacky had to sit on a hard bench and swear in Spanish at Eddie Plank and other enemies of the Senators.

* * *

JACKY says all the baseball talk on the field in Cuba is done in the American terms of the game, there being no exact Spanish equivalent for "foul tip," "fair ball," "threebagger," or even "hit the dirt" and "take a lead."

When the Cuban teams are playing American clubs they use Spanish for coaching purposes, so their opponents won't know what is supposed to be coming off. When two Cuban teams are playing, the classic Castilian is employed mainly to tell the umpire what manner of burglar he is. That innovation might be recommended for use in this country, as Spanish is said to contain a number of highly explosive phrases and decorative expressions.

* * *

IN person, Calvo is a good-looking little chap, 5 feet 6 in height, well set up, and desperately quick on his feet. He made an excellent impression in his first game with the Crackers, getting a clean hit and showing a strong whip when he winged the ball in from deep right, attempting to get a runner from third. The hit looked all the better in that the little Cuban got it after being beaned by a foul tip from his own bat, from which he came back with an evident courage that won the crowd.

Baseball runs in the Calvo family. Jacinto has seven brothers, two older and the rest younger, and they all play ball.

BASEBALL
Diamond News and Gossip

The annual meeting of the American League will be held in Chicago in October instead of December, according to an announcement from Ban Johnson.

* * *

William H. Locke, president of the Phillies, who died yesterday at Ventnor, N. J., will be buried in Pittsburg, his old home.

* * *

Double-headers were thick in the National League. The Giants won both games with the Cardinals and the Phillies defeated the Reds twice. The Cubs paid the Boston Braves back in their own coin by drubbing them twice, thus breaking the deadlock with the Pirates. The Dodgers went down to defeat before the Pirates.

* * *

First Baseman Konetchy of the Cardinals nearly got three home runs. Two of his four-baggers were counted as such, but Umpire Quigley ruled that the third drive was a blocked ball and sent Konetchy back in spite of the protests of the Cardinals. The ball went into the left field bleachers then bounded out.

* * *

The Yankees began their Western trip by beating the White Sox right handily. The Red Sox shut out the St. Louis Browns, while the Athletics lost ground by being deefated by the Naps. The Tigers celebrated their return to Navin field by walloping the Senators.

Sports and Such

THE EASE WITH WHICH "Muggsy" McGraw is able to make a trade for any player he desires just now has nothing to do with the fact that all players used in the world's series must be under contract before September 1, and that the National League doesn't want a world's championship team in New York.

* * *

WE OBSERVE THAT A bantamweight boxer won a two-mile run the other day, but then there were no White Hopes in against him.

* * *

OUT OF HIS LAST PURSE of $40,000 the inculcators of manliness and fair play who had charge of Luther McCarty's affairs announce that $26 remains, "all expenses being paid." This, gentle reader, is the reason that inculcating is such a popular business.

* * *

HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY'S race horses are being sold. It is given out that the official handicapping makes it impossible for Trainer Rowe to improve the breed as rapidly as he would like.

* * *

MUCH TROUBLE AND railroad travel would be saved if matters were so arranged that the California State championship carried with it all other tennis titles.

* * *

SPEAKING OF MEXICO WE observe that in athletic games recently long runs in full accouterments are growing popular among the citizen-soldiery.

Detailed Description of This Wonderful Machine

Body metal, one passenger, wheel base 56 inches, 16-inch steel wheels, with 3-4-inch rubber tires; tread of wheel, 21 1-2 inches, made of material that gives spring and strength. This is a real vehicle—not a toy—and will uphold the weight of a grown man. The big racing hood is sheet steel and slanting seat, giving the driver real racing position; one big feature is the steering knuckle gear. The front wheels turn in response to the steering wheel, just as the front wheels of a real automobile, the axle being stationary. This eliminates danger of upsetting on curves.

These cars are carefully finished and beautifully painted. This model can be used with pleasure and safety by girls as well as boys. Remember, this machine is not a toy or plaything. It is a real miniature race car, according to the skill and endurance of the driver.

WEDNESDAYS WILL BE SPECIAL DAYS

Retail Grocers Plan to Boost Atlanta-Made Commodities Each Week.

Wednesday will be "Real Atlanta Day" if the plans of the Retail Grocers' Association are carried out. The plan is to have every retail merchant in the city push Atlanta-made articles every Wednesday, the campaign to begin in September. Grocers have closed their shops Wednesday afternoons during June, July and August, but they propose to use that day for pushing Atlanta-made goods during autumn and winter.

The movement is being worked up by the Chamber of Commerce in connection with the permanent exhibit of Atlanta manufacturers.

Space for the exposition is being taken rapidly. The committee in charge meets every day at 1 o'clock at Hotel Ansley.

COTTON GOSSIP

Miss Giles gives county returns from the cotton belt as of August 10, making conditions 78.4, as compared with 81.8 July 25, and 83.4 one month ago, and 76.7 per cent last year as of August 10. The States showing deterioration are: Alabama, 3 per cent; Mississippi, 2; Louisiana, 1; Texas, 7; Arkansas, 6; Tenessee, 3; Oklahoma, 9. Those showing improvement are: North Carolina, 2 per cent; South Carolina, 2; Georgia, 2; Florida, 1. She further states that the deterioration of 4.4 per cent is due mainly to drouth and severe heat west of the Mississippi River.

Dallas wires: "Texas, generally part cloudy to clear; showers at Abilene, Big Springs, Merkele, Naples, Omaha, Caro, Cushing, Frankston, Ballinger, Oklahoma, generally clear and hot."

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Limited forward demand on one hand and trade belief the crop is rapidly deteriorating in the West on the other, were the conflicting features in yesterday's cotton market, around which were grouped several smaller issues of more or less moment. The trade as a whole can see no logic in bulling a market that is not accumulating forward demand, even though the pause in buying be known to be caused by something other than lack of general requirement. Manchester has been such a busy buyer during the past two months that indifference there, even for a short while, looms large in trade eyes.

"Meanwhile, there is much controversy pending a little below the market, which would begin to figure should general rains not come to the West in the near future, should Washington, some fine morning announce that the 'Clarke rider' had been kicked off the tariff bill.

"Mean while, there is much controversy over the weather in the West and feeling among the talent runs rather high. One school of thought contends that drouth has done very serious and irreparable damage in Oklahoma and is causing severe deterioration in Texas every day. These people contend that drouth is acute in all save a few of the more favored sections. Another school of thought asserts that moderate but slightly beneficial rains have fallen over most of the dry area, that the deficit in moisture is not so great as it was last year, that the damage done is more imaginary than real, and that general rains are now on the way."

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "There are many sharp traders who look for prices to work several cents higher in wheat. The winter wheat movement is believed to have run its maximum for the present, and it is expected there will be no great pressure from hedges until spring wheat begins to arrive freely. It was the general belief last night that local professionals have less long corn than for several days, their holdings having been taken by a new set of buyers. The country has taken profits on moderate lines, but is still heavily long with big profits and a great deal of faith in higher prices."

Chicago and Omaha corn and wheat bulletins show no precipitation in Nebraska; maximum temperatures 107 at Fairbury. Kansas City corn and wheat bulletin shows no rain in Kansas and Missouri, nor Oklahoma. Maximum temperatures in Kansas 98 to 106; Oklahoma, 98 to 102; Missouri, 98 to 104 degrees; Bismack clear, 70; Duluth cloudy, 55; Glenwood, Minn., clear, 75.

The Pioneer Press of St. Paul says: "Professor Moore, of the University of Wisconsin, an authority of corn, says Wisconsin's 1913 corn crop will be worth from $30,000,000 to $75,000,000. The 1913 product is the greatest corn crop in years in this State. Flour stocks in the United States and Canada, August 1, as compiled by The Daily Trade Bulletin, were 2,081,000 barrels, against 2,126,000 barrels July 1, and 1,963,000 August 1 last year."

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Conditions reflecting the cotton market at the opening to-day were a little more bullish than yesterday and first prices were 5 to 10 points higher than the closing quotations of Thursday. The Giels report was regarded as moderately bullish, but weather conditions in the Southwest proved another factor which encouraged an active buying, which was attributed chiefly to local short covering. Brokers, representing spot interests, also bought.

While there was no rains shown on the map for Texas and Oklahoma, still reports from Dallas state that there were scattered showers in several localities, and New Orleans wires that indications point for further rains ever Sunday. However, the market failed to bulge from the initial high point, except the most remote positions were lowered about 2 points, but soon retrieved the decline.

During the forenoon offerings became stiff and considerably scattered, resulting in the entire list rallying 5 to 7 points from the beginning range, except August which led steady at 12 points advance over the previous close.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: August, 11.58; October, 11.05; December, 10.98; January, 10.88; March, 10.96.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: August, 11.52; October, 11.07; January, 11.05; March, 11.15.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Miller & Co.: We ultimately look for lower prices.

Shearson, Hammill & Co.: The damage in the southwest should be reflected in somewhat higher prices.

Logan & Bryant: We believe the selling side presents the greatest attractions at present.

LIVERPOOL GRAIN MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 15.—Wheat opened unchanged; at 1:30 p. m. the market was ⅛ to ¼d lower. Closed unchanged, ¼d.

Corn opened unchanged; at 1:30 p. m. the market was unchanged to ¼d higher. Closed unchanged.

Enormous Trade in Wool; Mills Buying

BOSTON, Aug. 15.—More wool has been sold during the past week than any similar period since the first of the year. Conservative estimates give the total sales as above 3,000,000 pounds; some run as high as 5,000,000. Prices are not materially changed, though holders are disposed to ask a little more for good lots of unwashed fleeces.

Large sales are noted of territory wools, graded and in the original bags, both cloth mills and yarns spinners having been among the recent buyers. Local holders of washed fleeces are still asking too much for their wool. Considerable foreign wool has recently been withdrawn from bond by manufacturers. Receipts in pounds for the week ended and including Wednesday were as follows:

	1913	1912
Domestic	8,498,690	9,994,531
Foreign	599,880	5,574,076
Totals	9,098,570	15,739,607

Total receipts of 9,098,570 pounds compare with 11,088,328 the preceding week, of which 10,576,202 were domestic.

Receipts in pounds from and including January 1, 1913, as compared with the corresponding period in 1912, were as follows:

	1913	1912
Domestic	100,156,258	155,590,404
Foreign	43,293,761	91,117,263
Totals	143,449,019	246,707,667

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Corn was ½ to 1c higher to-day on continued dry weather in Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska and the promise of continued drouth. The top prices were shaded ⅛ to ⅜c later. Some of the largest longs were anxious to secure their profits in September corn, and in case of rains where it is needed it was expected there will be a general unloading of that month.

Wheat was fractionally better, but the best strength at the opening failed to hold. Argentina shipments were larger than were looked for, and it was expected the world's shipments on Monday will be more liberal.

Oats were ⅛ to ⅜c higher, but showed some irregularity.

Provisions were higher.

STOCK MARKET

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Canadian Pacific showed the sharpest decline at the opening of thes tock market to-day, falling 1½ to 218⅜ on European weakness. Within half and hour it increased this decline, but later rallied.

The list showed irregularity. Mexican Petroleum showed unexpected strength and advanced 1 point.

Stocks which were up included Texas Company, ¾; Great Northern Ore, ¼; St. Paul, ⅝, and American Car and Foundry, ⅛.

The declines included: Westinghouse, ½; Utah Copper, ½; Steel Common, ⅝; United States Rubber, common, ⅝; Union Pacific, ¼; Southern Pacific, ⅛; Rock Island, ⅝; Reading, ¼; Chesapeake and Ohio, ⅝; and Amalagamated Copper, ⅛.

New Haven again dropper below par, selling at 99⅜ for the loss of ⅝.

Reading recovered and made a fractional gain before 11 o'clock.

The curb was irregular. Americans in London were lower. Mexican Railway bonds are being sold both here and in London on reports that President Huerta is trying t mortgage the roads to get government funds.

Gasoline Is a Necessity of Life Because---

Industry and Farming Are Necessary to Life, and GASOLINE Is Necessary to Industry and Farming—When Will Government Investigate the Gasoline Extortion?

(Copyright, 1913.)

Every day in some part of the country the price of gasoline is increased.

Men that used to buy it for six and seven cents a gallon now buy it for twenty cents, twenty-five cents, and even more.

The gentlemen that control the gasoline supply need not worry about business or prosperity.

They simply make up their minds just how much robbery the public will stand—and raise the price of gasoline accordingly.

They can say to themselves, "With gasoline at eighteen cents we were getting so many millions. Let us sell gasoline at twenty cents and make so many millions more. Then gasoline at twenty-two cents, and make still more millions."

Only this question interests them: "Had we better take it all in a lump and run the risk of trouble, or take it slowly and cautiously?"

How many farmers after buying agricultural implements requiring the use of gasoline find themselves unable to use them economically because of the excessive price?

One trouble with the big Rumley Company, maker of agricultural implements, was the fact that not allowing for the thievish inclination of those that control the price of gasoline, the company built a great number of gasoline tractors—and has them on its hands unable to sell them, BECAUSE THE FARMERS FIND THAT THEY CAN'T AFFORD TO USE THE GASOLINE TRACTORS BECAUSE OF THE PRESENT PRICE OF GASOLINE.

What is this gasoline that gives tens of millions a year to a few, through extortion from many?

It is a product very simply made of crude oil pumped out of the earth.

If this country had been properly managed from the start that oil WOULD BE THE PROPERTY OF THE PEOPLE, PAYING REVENUE AND PROFIT ONLY TO THE PEOPLE.

This gasoline is part of the wealth stored up in the earth millions of years ago, now monopolized for a few and used as a means of extortion.

This country pays out millions annually to prevent robbery on a SMALL scale.

Woe to the man who takes a pair of shoes, a loaf of bread or an overcoat.

We are willing to spend millions to catch and punish him.

Why shouldn't we have a national police to stop thievery on a big scale, as well as the municipal police to stop the thievery on a small scale?

Why worry so much about the poor devil who steals ten dollars occasionally, and ignore calmly the very rich devil who steals ten millions or more at regular intervals?

The necessities of life, the necessities of industry, should not be agents of extortion.

The prices of necessities should be investigated by government, regulated by government.

And the gigantic organizations that are able to produce cheaply by combination and are permitted to rob wholesale should be compelled to give to the public their fair share of the economies and to sell AT A FAIR PRICE that which costs them nothing in comparison to the price asked.

The gasoline stealing has gone on about long enough.

Government should do something more drastic about it than, loudly with the beating of drums, bring about so-called "dissolution" of the trust, which has simply put up the price of stocks, put up the price of gasoline and increased the prosperity of the smiling individuals who laugh at government and laugh at law.

: The City's Children :

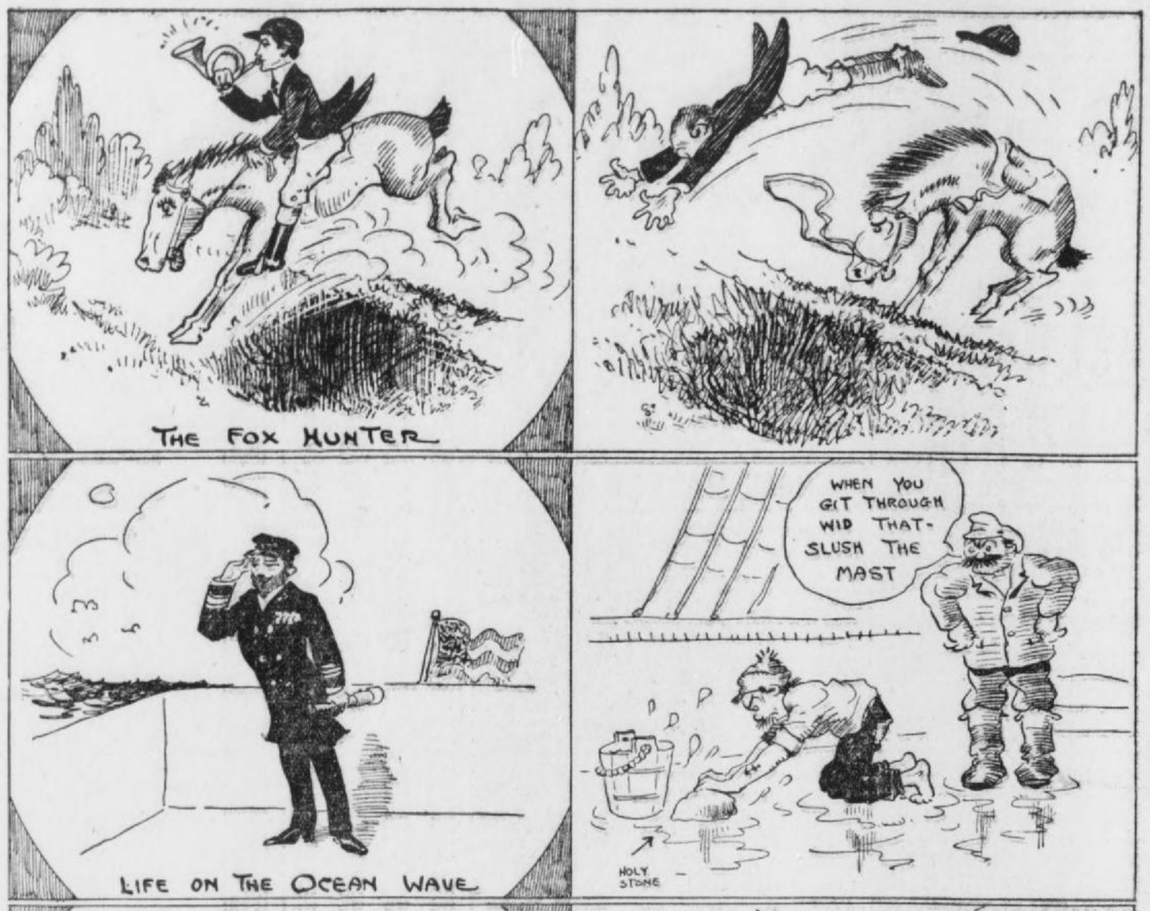

By PERCY F. MONTGOMERY.

I WISH that all the children of the city's grimy street
Were out here with these wild flowers beneath this sky of blue;
I'd like to see their faces as they scampered o'er these hills—
I'd like to see them happy, wouldn't you?

They're stunted, maimed and weary, and their eyes are far away;
The sunshine never sees them and they never know 'tis true.
There's no flower in the alley and no perfume in the air—
Oh, I'd like to see them happy, wouldn't you?

Sorry jest to sing on Sunday, "Ye did it unto me,"
With the children all in prison and the green fields far away,
Nodding flowers wait their handclasp, where the sunshine cleaves the blue—
Oh, I'd like to see them happy, wouldn't you?

In the Movies ❧ In Real Life

Laziness Is the Root of Most Misery

Unhappy, Are You? Do You Enjoy It (Many Do) or Are You Too Lazy To Be Otherwise? This Is Especially the Case With Women.

By DOROTHY DIX.

AMONG my acquaintances is a young woman who, ten years ago, was an extraordinarily brilliant and beautiful girl, talented in half a dozen different directions. This girl had the misfortune to marry a drunkard, or, to tell the simple truth, she did marry a drunkard in spite of all that her family and friends could do to prevent her.

It Turned Out as Such Marriages Nearly Always Do.

The marriage turned out as such marriages almost invariably do, and after enduring seven or eight years of untold misery she divorced her husband, and went back home to live with her two little children.

This woman is still young. She is only 32, and in all probability has thirty or forty years more of life left to her, and that's a long time in which to be happy or miserable, and to make yourself a blessing or a curse to those about you.

And she has accepted her misery. She has enrolled herself among the human tragedies. She is the most haggard figure of woe that you ever saw. She has permitted herself to turn into one of those cynical, bitter, disgruntled women, with a tongue with a razor edge, from which the boldest flee.

Her family are in very moderate circumstances, not able to support her and her children, though they willingly divide what they have with her. Her poverty is another goad in her side, but she accepts this, as she does her other sorrow, as just another drop of bitter in her cup, and another thing to wail over.

This woman has just one pleasure in life, and that is that she lives in a perfect debauch of self pity. She keeps herself drunk on her own tears, and drugged with the thought of her own troubles until she is just as dulled and lethargic as any man that ever wallowed in a gutter, or lay stupefied in an opium joint.

None of her friends ever speaks of her except as "poor Sadie," but for my part, I always feel like screeching "Coward! Quitter! Deserter!" at her, for in my eyes there is no more contemptible figure in the world than that of the man or woman who refuses to fight the battle of life, who surrenders in the very first skirmish, and before the fight is really on.

Of course, it's a terrible thing to make a mistake in marriage. I am not minimizing that sorrow, though it has always seemed to me that a woman who married a man knowing that he drank, was in honor bound to stand for a drunken husband, but in this enlightened age people are not bound forever to the cross of their matrimonial mistakes.

Divorce Is Unpleasant; So Is the Knife of the Surgeon.

Divorce is also unpleasant, but it is like a surgeon's knife that cuts away a festering sore, and the clean wound it leaves is a thousandfold more endurable than the daily nagging and gnawing of a sorrow that feeds on your heart like a worm on a rose.

At any rate, having made an unfortunate marriage and having divorced an unworthy husband, the incident is closed so far as the woman is concerned, and she should put the affair out of her life. She certainly does herself no good by sitting up and brooding over what might have been. That is with the past, and her business is with the future.

She can't change what has been one iota by thinking about it, or weeping over it, or regretting it, but she can make what is to be full of happiness and content, and brightness, if she will.

No One Need Be Miserable Unless He or She Enjoys It.

Nobody need be perpetually miserable unless they really enjoy it and unless they get more fun out of crying than they do out of laughing. Plenty of people do. They are built that way, especially women who are most naturally of a sort of half mourning complexion.

This woman of whom I am writing—and there are thousands like her—has accepted misery, and dependence, and poverty as her lot in life. And she needn't endure this melancholy existence for another hour if she has the backbone of a fishing worm. She's strong, and healthy, and young. She is intelligent enough to learn how to do anything on earth if she'd put as much energy into it as she does to mourning over her fate, and as much thought as she does in dwelling on her troubles.

All that she needs is to say to herself, "I am not going to be miserable. I am not going to have my life wrecked by one mistake that I made when I was a foolish young girl. I am not going to be a dependent. I am not going to be poor. I am going to roll up my sleeves and go to work, and fill my life so full of fresh interests and occupation that I won't even have time to remember that I've got a past. I'm going to make money to buy the things I want, and to give my children the advantages they would have had if they had had the right sort of a father, and I am going to be happy because I am going to be of some use to my fellow creatures."

Just the grit to make the fight is all that stands between this woman and happiness, and between every other woman of the weeping willow type and the sunshine. The time was when there was nothing for the unhappy woman to do but to sit down and weep and lament, but that time has gone by, thank God. If a woman misses the trail to contentment in one direction now, she can face about and go the other way and arrive at the same goal.

The reason most people are miserable is because they are lazy. They are too indolent to make an effort to secure happiness for themselves, and this is especially the case with women.

Happiness Is for Us All If We Have the Energy to Get It.

Women are sick because they are too lazy to take enough exercise to keep them healthy; they are dependent because they are too lazy to get up and hustle for themselves; they are poor because they are too lazy to do the hard work that it takes to earn money.

Happiness is for us all if we have only the energy and determination to reach out and take it, and for us to succumb to misery is a confession of weakness for which we deserve to be ostracized by our friends instead of being pitied by them.

Ways of Living

The City and Country Are in Constant Warfare, He Says. The Trend Always Toward Large Centers of Population.

Written For The Georgian

By the Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

DR. JOSIAH STRONG'S new book, "Our World," the first of a projected series of three volumes, commends itself to the attention of those who are interested in the trend of present events and in the social crisis which we all somehow suspect to be approaching.

The general purpose of the book is to show that the current of the general life, here and abroad, is reaching the point where it can no longer be held within the channel that it has worn for itself, nor restrained by the barriers with which it has been artificially dammed.

The author is temperate in his statement of the situation and thoroughly optimistic in his anticipations, but puts the case strongly and illustrates his position clearly and in terms in which hesitation finds no part.

The closing chapter occupies itself with the new problem of the city. The author has no faith in, and little patience with, the cry of "Back to the Land." There has always been a drift cityward. Somewhat of the urban impulse came to its expression as early in human history as the building of the Tower of Babel in the plain of Shinar, as recorded in the Old Testament narrative. Men are gregarious, like sheep, and tend to live in herds.

Obstacles To City Life Have Been Overcome.

This disposition was formerly somewhat discouraged by the great mortality incident to condensed population because of unsanitary conditions, an obstacle which has now been largely overcome by improved methods. Formerly, also, the size of a city was limited by imperfect means of transporting a sufficient supply of water and of food material.

Steam and civil engineering have now gotten the better of these difficulties also, so that under those changed conditions there is no necessary limit set to aggregations of population. Consequently the gregarious impulse can now have allowed to it perfectly free scope.

So that, although the constant effort is being made to get people out of the city into the country, and although the Government has brought pressure to bear in the same direction, and during the 50 years following 1850 had put nearly half a billion acres of land at the free disposition of the people, the urban population continued to increase more rapidly than the rural—three times as rapidly between 1880 and 1900, as is reported on the basis of the national census.

All of this seems sufficient evidence of the fact that there is a current setting in the direction of the city, having its source in the very nature of things, and moving with a momentum which neither humanitarian effort nor governmental discouragement will suffice to resist.

Opposing the Cityward Trend Like Trying to Bottle the Wind.

That this drift cityward has its origin in other than local and transient causes and inheres in economic conditions and in man's native disposition, is proved by the fact that for hundreds of years fruitless efforts have been made to prevent people from leaving the fields for the town. Dr. Strong quotes the appeals made by Aristotle, Cicero and Virgil and the legal measures to the same end adopted by Justinian and Queen Elizabeth.

Opposing the tendency would, therefore, seem to be very much like trying to imprison the wind or like taking up arms against the tide. If this movement is to continue, and at its present rapid rate of increase, and if our population is going to bulk itself at urban centers, the prospect is fraught with practical and serious consequences.

We have to think what will be its effect upon human physique and human character. We look to the country for physical sturdiness. It is by recruits from the country that the city maintains a certain moral determination and strenuousness that seem not to germinate and thrive so readily in urban soil. Whatever may be the reason for it, such undoubtedly remains the fact. Perhaps it is because the country furnished more that is real, the city more that is ficticious.

Christian Science and Other Subjects

Editor The Georgian:

In The Georgian of August 9, Ella Wheeler Wilcox has an article, "Live First—Talk Afterwards," in which she classes Universal Life Principle, Vibration, Mental Science, New Thought and Christian Science as kindred subjects. The writer being a student of Christian Science desires to dissociate Christian Science from these so-called relations and show that it has nothing in common with any of these doctrines. In Science and Health, page 111, Mrs. Eddy says, "The principle of divine metaphysics is God; the practice of divine metaphysics is the utilization of the power of Truth over error; its rules demonstrate its Science." The method of applying this rule in Christian Science is to yield thought to the divine will or influence, in trust and confidence. This is the faith or understanding which the Apostle Paul designates as "the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Jesus proved this rule in all of His wonderful works. He said, "Of Myself I do nothing; not My will but thine be done; as the Father worketh hitherto, I work."

Mental Science, New Thought, Mental Suggestion, and Kindred Subjects, confuse the action of the human will or carnal mind with the divine will or law, hence their failure. Out of this confusion, or lack of misunderstanding, comes the inability of certain types to illustrate by "their faces," their manner, "their work," that they have found a panacea for human ills.

"How to control Destiny," "How to grow success," "How to attain self-mastery," "How to be well and prosperous" are subjects not one of which appear in any of Mrs. Eddy's writings or in any of the periodicals published by the Christian Science Association. These subjects indicate and suggest the effort of the human will.

Christian Science follows the admonition of Jesus: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and all these things shall be added unto you."

The human will, impelled by its own force or volition, consumes its vitality and is self-destructive. This destruction manifests itself in physical and nervous breakdown; hence its weakness and failure to heal either itself or another. Christian Science relies on its divine principle, speaks the word, as Jesus did, and trusts this word to fully accomplish that whereunto it is sent. "The Word of God is quick and powerful." It demonstrates itself in health, harmony, joy, peace, love and good will to those who rely on it. On page 446 "Science and Health," by Mrs. Eddy, are these words: "The exercise of will brings on a hypnotic state detrimental to health and integrity of thought." Mrs. Wilcox says, "Wait until you succeed before preaching success." If those who have achieved great success in any department of life had followed this line of thinking, the world would have known little success. "Seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you," are spiritual admonitions coming down the ages from Him whom the world recognizes as the greatest success. Seek under divine guidance and the way to success is already open.

Christian Science opens wide its arms of love to all "dissatisfied souls," and they come to it from all classes of society, seeking solace for their wounds, heartaches and disappointments. Some are "unkempt, nervous and erratic;" for this reason they need the tender sympathy, the patient instruction offered in this haven of rest by those who have gained through this great revelation some understanding of how to love our neighbor as ourself.

ATLANTAN IS KILLED IN WRECK

Hugh W. Pennington Meets Deat in West Point Route Crash Near Hogansville, Ga

Hugh W. Pennington, No. 165 Sou[th] Pryor street, was killed when a through freight on the Atlanta and West Point Railroad between Atlanta and Montgomery was ditched at Hogansville, Ga., early Friday morning. Pennington was riding the bumpers, it is supposed.

According to officials of the road, the wreck was caused by a spreading of the rails. Eleven cars of merchandise and three cars of baggage were derailed, the engine remaining on the track. None of the train crew was injured.

As a result of the wreck passenger trains on the Atlanta and West Point are being detoured over the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic by way of Union City and LaGrange, Ga.

Grace Church Plans A Record Revival

What is expected to be the greatest revival in the hi[story] of the church will begin Sund[ay] [at] the Grace Methodist Church, [corner] Boulevard and Highland avenu[e]. Rev. Charles O. Jones has arranged the revival and will be assisted by O. W. Stapleton and the Rev. J. M. Bass, of the South Georgia conference. Mr. Stapleton will conduct the choir with the assistance of J. Gordon Moore and Miss Ruth Chapman.

A feature of the revival will be the holding of cottage prayer meetings, sixteen of which have already been arranged. These cottage prayer meetings will be held daily, while there will be services at the church morning, afternoon and evening.

Slit Uniforms for Chicago Policewomen

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Malefactors' scorn of the "lady cops" turned to real fear to-day when the "Catch 'em Skirts" was announced. The "Catch 'em" is a skirt of the usual narrow proportions, but equipped with a long slit and a drawstring. The "lady cop" can't run fast when the slit is closed for ordinary gait. But if speed is necessary, the wearer pulls a mysterious string, and—lo! a long slit, reaching up to the knee, appears.

Only policewomen, of course, will be allowed to wear the new skirt.

France Trains Eagles To Fight Aeroplanes

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, Aug. 15.—The French War Office will use eagles to harass possible enemies in aeroplanes, according to Pastor Schuster, well-known ornithologist, who declares birds are being trained to attack models of aeroplanes, destroying them with their beaks and claws.

Poor Woman! She's Losing Figure and Getting Horse Feet

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 15.—"In a few generations American women will have feet like horses," said Miss Clara Houston, of Chicago, owner of the most perfect feet in the world, "unless they stop [wearing] shoes that [narrow] the feet [out] of shape and squeeze the toes [so] that they overlap." According to Miss Houston, dancing is extremely harmful for the feet. She declares that the tango and the turkey trot have made a number of chiropodists prosperous this year.

Washington, D. [C.]—The wife of the American farmer is losing her figure. This is due to water—its handling, not its use—according to President Joseph Cook, of the Mississippi Normal College. "The water for the kitchen has to be lifted so many times after it is drawn from the well," said Mr. Cook, "that the lift a day will be brought up to a ton, and the lifting of a ton a day will take the elacticity out of a woman's step, the bloom out of her cheek and enjoyment from her soul."

Girl in Diggs Case Withstands Grill

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 15.—The trial of former State Architect Maury I. Diggs on a charge of violating the white slave law was resumed to-day with Lola Norris, one of the principals in the flight to Reno, on the stand.

The self-possessed, confident bearing that marked Miss Norris' first appearance on the witness stand yesterday had not deserted her and she answered the questions flung at her by the defense in a frank, firm manner.

Miss Norris testified that she was a good girl until she arrived in Reno, and the defense made unavailing efforts to discredit this statement.

University Club to Widen Its Influence

A non-resident board of advisers for the University Club has been suggested by Thomas W. Connally, secretary, and others, and to sound the sentiment of the members a letter has been sent out to them. Mr. Connally said Thursday he had had a stack of replies, and that most of the correspondents favored the idea.

The plan is to make the University Club more of a social and educational organization and to extend its influence over the State. To accomplish this the officials of the club feel that it is necessary to name an advisory board of non-resident members. At present the club is run by a governing board of Council in conjunction with the executive committee.

Wrote a Poem for The Judge; Is Freed

CHICAGO, Aug. 15. — James J. Ahearn, who claims to be a poet, was found in a prosaic stupor by the South Chicago police. When arraigned he defended himself before Judge Sullivan. He was asked to prove his occupation, and retired to another room with a pencil and an inspired look. This is what he did:

"I hope, Mr. Judge, the day never .....comes
When you, like myself, will have to .....write poems.
And may you and your wife
Live a happy life."

"It wouldn't be right to send you to jail," said the Judge. "You'd be writing poems for all the other prisoners. Discharged."

GUARD OVER SULZER IN MANSION

Impeached Governor Posts Sentries and Defies Foes—Attack on Murphy Planned.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 15.—While Albany swarmed to-day with scores of private detectives who kept every State officer under close surveillance, the stage was set for a fight in court to determine whether William Sulzer, who was impeached by the Assembly for high crimes and misdemeanors, or Martin H. Glynn, the Lieutenant Governor, shall exercise the prerogatives of the office of State executive until the Court of Impeachment sits on September 18.

Surrounded by strong guards, Mr. Sulzer, the impeached executive, held the official gubernatorial residence with the privy seal of the Commonwealth in his possession. The great seal of the State, however, was chained to a pedestal in the office of Secretary of State May.

Governor Sulzer is contemplating the removal of Adjutant General Hamilton, saying that he recognized Mr. Glynn as the Governor.

Sulzer also revealed that his defense will be an attack against the records of a number of Democratic Senators who are opposing him. Mr. Sulzer hopes thus to discredit them.

Street Gatherings Banned.

All the reserve police are on duty with instructions to prevent street gatherings which may culminate in political riots. Never before, even during Senatorial investigations, have so many private detectives swarmed the State capital. Every man in public life is being watched. The movements are duly recorded and turned over to counsel representing the Sulzer and anti-Sulzer forces.

It has become known that Judge D. Cady Herrick and other of Mr. Sulzer's counsellors are casting about to find if they can bring criminal charges against Charles F. Murphy, State leader of Tammany, on the ground that Mr. Murphy had conspired with other Democrats to cause the downfall of the Government.

Friends of the Governor declare that the executive could have forestalled impeachment in the Assembly if he had consented to relinquish his fight for certain State measures. This he refused to do in the full belief that the assembly vote would show a majority against the impeachment resolution.

Fresh complications have been added by the fact that Aaron J. Levy, majority leader in the Assembly, has become overcome by the excitement and is confined to his bed, suffering from nervous prostration. He is the second victim, Mrs. Sulzer being ill from the shock of the bitter attack against her husband.

Telegrams have been sent to Associate Justice of the United States Court Charles E. Hughes to use his influence to straighten out the tangle and prevent the bitter conflict from growing into actual civil war. Mr. Hughes, although a Republican, has a big following among the independent Democrats in the State. He formerly was Governor of New York.

Give Legal Aid Free.

The following lawyers have consented to represent the Governor without charge: Irving G. Vann, of Syracuse; Harvey D. Hinman, of Binghampton; A. G. Fox, of New York, and Louis Marshall, of New York.

Thomas W. Lawson, of Boston, may get into the fight, as he has offered Governor Sulzer $100,000 with which to fight Tammany if Mr. Lawson is allowed to direct the campaign. Friends of the Governor urged him to accept.

Mr. Glynn has retained Attorney Edwin Countryman, Patrick C. Dugan and several other well-known lawyers. Although 75 years old, Mr. Countryman is regarded as one of the best lawyers in this city.

The Governor said he would spend at least eight hours at the Capital to-day unless the condition of his wife prevented. He further declared that he would transact State business of any nature that came before him.

Father and Son in Fatal Duel for Girl

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 15.—A fatal duel between a father and son named Blanchard, living near Aubusson, began in rivalry for the heart of a pretty farmhand. The son, Jean Lelong, was jealous of his father, who had won the girl's affection, so the two men agreed to fight.

Six revolver shots were exchanged without result. They resumed the [fight] with kitchen knives, while the girl watched the duel without interfering.

The father received terrible wounds dying soon afterward.

Vincent Astor Heads Fire Protection Body

POUGHKEEPSIE, Aug. 16.—Vincent Astor is leading a movement of wealthy residents of Rhinebeck and vicinity to buy fire apparatus to check fires on their estates, which have recently caused heavy damage and which are laid to a firebug.

A Poughkeepsie fire auto is to be sent to Mr. Astor's estate, Ferncliffe, for a demonstration, and similar machines, combining chemical engine and hose wagon, may be maintained by the Rhinebeck millionaires.

Cost of Living Up in Britain 14 Per Cent

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—Striking figures showing the increased cost of living are contained in a voluminous report issued by the British Board of Trade, according to which present prices are the highest in 25 years.

Retail prices of food have risen 14 per cent since 1900, while wages have increased only 3 per cent.

Wednesdays To Be Special Boost Days For Atlanta Goods

Wednesday will be "Real Atlanta Day" if the plans of the Retail Grocers' Association are carried out. The plan is to have every retail merchant in the city push Atlanta-made articles every Wednesday, the campaign to begin in September. Grocers have closed their shops Wednesday afternoons during June, July and August, but they propose to use that day for pushing Atlanta-made goods during autumn and winter.

The movement is being worked up by the Chamber of Commerce in connection with the permanent exhibit of Atlanta manufacturers.

Space for the exposition is being taken rapidly. The committee in charge meets every day at 1 o'clock at Hotel Ansley.

Miller Gets Boost For Macon Mayoralty

MACON, Aug. 15.—In the clash over the naming of a new City Executive Committee by a mass meeting at the Auditorium last night, the Mayoralty boom for Representative Wallace Miller received pronounced impetus.

While the present candidates, A. L. Dasher and Bridges Smith, through their friends, sought to name the new committee and Mr. Smith practically triumphed in this respect, yet the nominations were all put by former Representative Walter DeFore, who announced that he was present to protect Mr. Miller's interests. The charge was made on the floor that the administration had corraled eleven unnaturalized Assyrians and was voting them.

LEO FRANK MAY GO ON STAND AS CLIMAX OF DEFENSE'S BATTLE

With the last stage of the most noted criminal trial in the history of Georgia at hand the attorneys defending Leo M. Frank, factory superintendent accused of the slaying of Mary Phagan, continued to uphold his character Friday with a strong array of witnesses.

As on Thursday each of the men summoned testified that they knew the defendant and that his character was good. Dr. J. E. Summerfield, 300 Washington street, who said he had lived in Atlanta for nineteen years and F. Schiff, 38 Fair street, who has lived here for fifty years, were the first witnesses called Friday and both responded favorably to the usual questions about Frank's character put by Attorney Arnold.

No attempt at cross-examination was made by Solicitor Dorsey. The State had an equally imposing array of witnesses—most o fthem women—ready to go on the stand in rebuttal of the evidence upholding the prisoner's character.

A curious problem will arise when they are summoned. The State can only ask its witnesses as to the general character of the defendant, just as the defense has done, and it will be up to the defense to ask about particular incidents on the cross-examination or rest content with allowing the opinions of the State's witnesses to go unchallenged. In that event it would be merely one group saying Frank's character is good against another saying it is bad, with the jury to decide which it prefers to believe.

Frank Likely to Take Stand.

When the case was resumed Friday it was very problematical when the defense would finish. According to Luther Rosser, the defense may rest before evening with Leo Frank having told his story on the stand, but Reuben Arnold was of the opinion that the defense still would be putting in evidence to-morrow.

Frank's statement on the stand unquestionably will be one of the striking features of the trial. He has studied the State's case carefully, and it is said will not content himself with merely denying his guilt and explaining his movements on the fatal day, but will go somewhat into what he believes are the weaknesses of the State's chain of circumstances.

According to Frank's friends, the prisoner has been anxious for his attorneys to allow him to be cross-questioned, but they have doubted the wisdom of allowing him to go through the ordeal after the strain of the alst few months.

B. J. Nix, of Marietta, an office boy in the National Pencil Company from April to October, 1912, was the third witness of the morning.

Q. What days were you off?—A. I was off nearly every Saturday until September.

Q. What time did you leave on the Saturdays you worked?—A. Usually I worked until 4 or 6 o'clock.

Doesn't Know of Drinking Parties.

Q. Do you recall missing any Saturdays when you were supposed to work?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever know Frank to have any women there drinking with him?—A. No.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. When they were working on that building on Forsyth street, what time did you leave?—A. About 4 o'clock.

Q. You don't know whether Frank had those women there when you were off or not, do you?—A. No.

The witness was excused and R. D. Greenfield was called.

Q. Are you one of the owners of the Venable Building in which the pencil company has its factory?—A. Yes.

Q. Who leased it?—A. Montag Bros., for a period of ten years.

Q. Do you know where the metal room is?—A. No.

Q. Where is the Clark Woodenware Company?—A. They occupied part of the building known as No. 37 Forsyth street.

Q. Since Montags have had that building has any new flooring been put down?—A. No.

Q. Do you know Leo M. Frank?—A. Yes.

Q. Is his character good or bad?—A. It is very good.

Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Are you closely connected with the defendant?—A. As landlord and tenant.

Q. Did you contribute to the fund for Frank's defense?—A. No.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. Have you ever heard of any such fund?—A. No.

Arnold, aside, said:

"I wish there was one."

Girl's Testimony Is Pivot of Alibi.

In the presentation of its alibi for Leo M. Frank, the defense probably accomplished more Thursday than it had in all of previous time since the prosecution rested its case. Frank's lawyers had promised that they would show where Frank was practically every minute on the day the murder of little Mary Phagan was committed and would demonstrate that it would have been impossible to carry out the disposal of the slain girl's body and the writing of the notes as the negro, Jim Conley, described them.

If their alibi witnesses are to be believed, the lawyers appear to have fairly well accomplished this. On the credibility of one young witness, pretty Helen Curran, of No. 160 Ashby street, the whole alibi may stand or fall. She could, of course, be proved mistaken in her statement that she saw Frank at 1:10 o'clock standing at Jacobs' Pharmacy, Whitehall and Alabama streets, a[waiting] a car home from the factor[y] [after]noon of the murder. [The] remainder of the alibi w[ill] unimpeached, but it [may] weaken the alibi mat[erially].

She is at once the [most important] and the most dis[puted] witnesses who have [appeared]. Frank immediately [after] says the crime w[as committed]. Frank was at Wh[itehall] streets at 1:10 o['clock] been almost [directly] ity for h[im] the dis[covery] Conley [and] and [Frank] with [Conley] Fra[nk].

THE WEATHER.

DEFENSE IS NEAR COMPLETION OF FRANK ALIBI

Girl's Testimony Big Help to the Accused Man—Many Testify to His Good Character.

were several more witnesses to be called on Friday who had seen him the day of the crime.

Thursday's testimony began with the time he went to Montag Bros., Nelson and Forsyth streets, Saturday forenoon. Sig Montag, one of the firm and also treasurer of the National Pencil Company, testified that Frank came to his plant about 10 o'clock and left about 11.

Miss Corinthia Hall, Mrs. Emma Freeman, Miss Hattie Hall, Alonzo Mann and others had testified to seeing him in the factory between 11 o'clock and noon. Lemmie Quinn, metal department foreman, the day before declared that he visited Frank in his office at 12:20 o'clock. Mrs. Arthur White, a witness for the State, saw him in his office at 12:30. He went to the fourth floor at 12:50, according to Mrs. White, Harry Denham and Arthur White.

This brought the defense down to the time someone saw him after he left the factory.

Miss Curran was called to the stand and declared she saw the factory superintendent at 1:10 at Whitehall and Alabama streets apparently waiting for a street car. This made an interval of but eighteen minutes from the time he was seen by the three persons on the fourth floor of the factory, allowing two minutes for him to walk to his car, and an interval of but twelve minutes from the time that Conley said they started to carry the body to the basement.

Eight of the twelve minutes were spent by Conley in a closet in Frank's office, according to the negro's testimony. Of the remaining four, part were occupied in disposing of the body and part in writing the notes.

Witness Who Helped Build Alibi.

Mrs. Albert P. Levy, No. 69 East Georgia avenue, swore she saw Frank get off a car at about 1:20 o'clock and walk to the Selig home, No. 68 East Georgia avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Selig already had testified he arrived home at 1:20 and ate luncheon.

Mrs. M. G. Michael, of Athens, Ga., said she saw Frank at about 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. C. Wolfsheimer, No. 387 Washington street, where she was visiting. She said he walked on to Glenn street and caught his car for town.

Jerome Michael, son of the former witness, saw Frank at the same time.

Mrs. Wolfsheimer was another witness who saw Frank just before he caught his car. She said he was not nervous and bore no scratches or other marks.

Julian Loeb, No. 380 Washington street, said that from across the street he saw Frank stop at No. 387 Washington and then go on to his car.

J. C. Loeb, No. 445 Washington street, testified that he caught the Washington street car for town at Georgia avenue at about 2 o'clock. Frank got on, he said, at Glenn street. The car was stalled near the Capitol, and Frank, according to Loeb, got off the car and walked down Hunter street toward town.

Miss Rebecca Carson, a forelady on the fourth floor at the pencil factory, told the jury that she saw Frank in front of Rich. Bros. between 2:20 and 2:25 and that she saw him going into Jacobs' Pharmacy at about 2:50.

Harry Denham, who was in the factory the day of the murder, testified that Frank came to the fourth floor about 3 o'clock and told him and Arthur White they could leave.

Saw Nothing Unusual In His Actions.

Emil Selig and Minola McKnight had testified previously that Frank came home Saturday night about 6:30.

Mrs. M. Marcus, Mrs. A. E. Marcus, M. J. Goldstein and others told of seeing Frank at home Saturday evening. They said there was nothing unusual in his demeanor and that he bore no scratches or marks of any sort. He was reading a magazine, they said, and laughed heartily over a story in regard to a baseball umpire. They testified that he retired about 1:30 o'clock.

The defense also made good its promise that it would not hesitate to put Frank's character in issue. Following its action of the day before, when the first of the character witnesses were put on the stand, nearly a score of Frank's acquaintances, some of them his classmates and instructors at Pratt Institute and Cornell University, were called to testify to Frank's good character.

These witnesses for the most part were excused without cross-examination. Prominent citizens of Atlanta also declared Frank to be of good character. Among these witnesses were Rabbi David Marx, V. H. Kriegshaber, Milton Klein and R. A. Sohn.

A peculiar situation arose through the calling of Max F. Goldstein and Arthur Heyman as character witnesses by the defense. Goldstein is a law partner of Frank A. Hooper and Heyman of Solicitor Dorsey, the two attorneys who are prosecuting Frank.

Says Conley Told Her He was Drunk.

One of the startling statements of the day came from Miss Rebecca Carson. She declared Conley had sworn to her that he was not in the factory the day of the murder—in fact, that he was so drunk he did not know where he was or what he did.

Solicitor Dorsey obtained an admission from J. R. Leach that cars frequently run ahead of time on practically all lines. This serves to lessen in value the testimony of the crew of the car on which Mary Phagan came to town. They swore they never ran ahead of time and that the Phagan girl could not have arrived in town before 12:07 o'clock the day she was slain.

Judge Roan threatened Thursday afternoon to clear the courtroom if disorder did not cease. V. H. Kriegshaber was on the stand testifying to the character of Frank when laughter at some of the testimony disturbed the courtroom.

Attorney Arnold protested.

"This is not a sideshow," he said. "Must we put up with such disorder?"

"Find the man that laughed and put him out, ordered the judge. "If there is any further disorder, no one will be admitted to the trial to-morrow."

ALABAMA PLANS TO GREET AUTO PATHFINDER

President of Good Roads Association Will Meet Trail Blazer Ferguson at State Line.

Another indication of the widespread interest in the campaign for an All-Southern transcontinental highway, which will be inaugurated by Hearst's Sunday American next Monday, was received in Atlanta Friday in the form of a communication from John Craft, president of the Alabama Good Roads Association, who will join Pathfinder Ferguson at the Alabama-Georgia line.

President Craft, who is known all over the country as a good roads booster, accompanied by State Highway Engineer Keller, will accompany Mr. Ferguson throughout Alabama.

Details Virtually Arranged.

Mr. Ferguson now has arranged virtually every detail of the trip. His big touring car has been repaired and made shipshape for the long journey, and instruments which will be used along the route have also been received and installed.

Plans for the parade, the official send-off next Monday, also are complete, and everyone is on the qui vive in anticipation.

In the line of march will be the Fire Chief, the Chief of Police, city officials, including Mayor Woodward, and other prominent citizens. If the weather man hands out a good brand of ozone next Monday, the people of Atlanta will be treated to one of the most unique parades in the history of the city.

Birmingham Plans Send-Off.

Mr. Ferguson, accompanied by his wife and two children and a special American man, will go direct to Anniston, Ala., and thence to Birmingham, the end of the first lap of the long journey. At Birmingham the party will be the recipients of a big send-off, led by The Birmingham News, one of the chain of newspapers promoting the monster project.

Leaving Birmingham, the party will proceed to Montgomery, thence to Mobile, New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, El Paso, San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco. Mr. Ferguson hopes to reach the Pacific Coast before October 1.

Europe Sees Kaiser In Peacemaker Role

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 15.—In his new role as "peace lord of Europe" Emperor William of Germany has launched a diplomatic campaign to prevent another war in the Balkans. Telegrams from Berlin and Constantinople indicated to-day that the German Emperor and his Foreign Office have drafted proposals which soon will be sent to Russia, Austria, England, France and Italy.

While Germany has been looked upon as the friend of Turkey, on account of the commercial relations of the two countries, it is reported now that William favors the surrender of Adrianople to Czar Ferdinand.

'Cue for Light Men Cooked by Electricity

MACON, Aug. 15.—Barbecue cooked by electricity was served to-day to the 250 delegates from five Southern States attending the first annual convention of the Southeastern section of the National Electric Light Association. This is said to be the first time meats have been barbecued other than over a slow wood fire.

The electric light men will elect officers and choose the next place of meeting Saturday. Mr. Arkwright, of Atlanta, is in line for the presidency to succeed E. C. Deal, of Augusta. Birmingham, Atlanta and Savannah are seeking the next convention.

SENATE CLOSES IN FIERY BURST OF ORATORY

Kea Reiterates Charges Against Anderson, but President Gets Vote of Thanks.

Weary from their efforts in the final all-day siege, but happy over the fact that the Senate calendar had been cleared of its most important measure, the appropriation bill, Georgia Senators at 10:15 o'clock Thursday night welcomed the last rap of the President's gavel which rang down the curtain on the 1913 session. The Speaker of the House preceded President Anderson just three minutes in the call for adjournment sine die.

The end in the Senate, where the appropriations bill with its $280,000 excess of disbursement over revenue, was pending, came after a day of hard work and a dash of excitement. During the morning every attempt was made to clean up the calendar which had become clogged at the last moment. The forenoon session was extended to 1:30 to get the "mother's custody" bill through, following the passage of the inheritance tax bill.

Excitement Begins.

Then came the first excitement. Senator Fred Kea, of the Sixteenth District, arose to a point of personal privilege to substantiate his charges against President Anderson, published exclusively in The Georgian. Never during the session has the Senate been the scene of such intense interest.

Senator McNeill, of the Twenty-second district, started the ball rolling when he got possession of the floor and bitterly denounced Senator Kea for his charges against the presiding officer of the Senate. He moved that the Senate extend a rising vote of thanks to President Anderson for his fair and excellent services. It was at this juncture that Senator Kea rose to his point of personal privilege.

Reiterates His Charges.

He charged President Anderson had deliberately blocked the passage of bills. He charged further that the Senate Rules Committee was the "whole cheese in the Senate, as sure as there was a God in high Heaven."

At the conclusion of the fiery speech the Senate extended to President Anderson a rising vote of thanks, Senator Kea alone voting in the negative.

As predicted in The Georgian on Thursday, the Senate receded from its action in cutting the House appropriation, thereby restoring the $280,000 excess of disbursements over revenues. This was in accordance with the Governor's wishes. The Senate also passed the amended bill allowing freight trains to run on Sunday and confirmed the nomination of Joh Hart as State Tax Collector.

SLATON DELUGED WITH BILLS AS SESSION ENDS

Tax Reform Act Only Important Measure Signed—Assembly Musically Adjourns.

With the Legislature adjourned after 50 days of hard work, in which some of the best laws in the history of the State were enacted, the work of transmitting the measures to Governor Slaton for his signature will begin to-day, and the Executive Office will be swamped with the bills. More than 100 have already been engrossed and sent to the Governor, but there still remain between 200 and 300 local and general bills.

Of the 100 or more that are already in the Governor's office, but one of general importance has been signed. That is the tax reform bill, which was signed by the Governor and became a law at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The pen with which Governor Slaton signed the measure that is expected to revolutionize the taxation system of the State was given to Representative Lipscomb, of Clarke, who introduced the original tax equalization bill, and who has been one of the reform leaders throughout the session.

Though the Governor has signed several local bills which Representatives and Senators wished to have become operative immediately, it is hardly probable that many of the general bills will receive his signature until next week, when they will all be in his office.

Adjourns at 10:12 o'Clock.

The Legislature adjourned shortly after 10 o'clock last night. Speaker Burwell brought his gavel down for the last time this year at 10:12 o'clock, and President Anderson, of the Senate, adjourned that body three minutes later. Two minutes after the gavel rang out the House was in the throes of song. Representative Blackburn climbed upon a seat and led the Representatives in singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Practically the only work the House had to do at the night session, which convened at 8 o'clock, was to wait for the Senate to send over bills that had already passed the House and which the upper branch desired to amend. The only changes of importance made in the measures were the following, all of which were concurred in by the House: Appropriating $7,500 to the Chemical Bureau of the Department of Agriculture, $15,000 to the Department of Entomology to fight the boll weevil, and a bill increasing the salary of the State Oil Inspector to $1,800. A bill appropriating $5,000 to the Department of Agriculture was killed, because the wording of the bill was vague.

During the wait on the Senate the House took a recess and the members proceeded to kill the time by putting on stunts that eclipsed the usual jollification with which sessions of the Legislature are brought to a close. Every member of the House was determined to have as much fun as he could, and witty speeches, mock attempts to rush through wild appropriations and gay singing was the order of the hour.

James Keeps Songs Going.

Representatives James of Gilmer, official "song-h'ister," kept the songs going, and was surrounded by a group of vocalists and near-vocalists all evening, singing all the old favorites and a few that were not so old. Henderson of Jones made speeches in every corner of the hall, and got along all right until he began one about the being the hour of the wild-eyed reformer. Olive of Richmond then moved that he be given a bale of hay, which was carried, amid much rejoicing, and Henderson was removed from the desk onto which he had climbed.

Representative Picquet of Richmond, the smallest man in the House, was called to the chair by the crowd, and interrupted a turkey trot which Greene of Houston and Smith of Fulton were doing down the middle aisle by recognizing Ed Wohlwender, of filibuster fame. Wohlwender brought down the House by jokingly moving that all prohibitionists be excluded from the hall.

Burwell Thanks Members.

Ennis of Baldwin jumped to his feet and gave it as his solemn opinion that the members were children. He therefore moved that $25,000 be appropriated to build a sanitarium to take care of them. Picquet declared the motion carried without putting the question. The fun continued for more than two hours, until the singers became hoarse and the speech-makers had used up their supply of words.

When the House convened at 9:30 o'clock, Speaker Burwell delivered a short address, in which he thanked the House for the honor it had conferred upon him, and expressed his appreciation of the work of each member. He declared that the people of Georgia should be proud of the membership of the House, and said this session had been productive of more remedial legislation than any he had seen in his ten years' legislative experience.
