WAR MOVE BY HUERTA IS DENIED

U. S. Charge at Mexico City Says He Has Not Been Given Passports—Situation Acute.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The White House to-day received a dispatch from Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy absolutely denying press dispatches to the effect that he had been given his passports by the Mexican Government or that an ultimatum of any kind had been given to him by Huerta.

The telegram from O'Shaughnessy is explicit on both of these points, and indicates that the situation has not been changed in any way except that a formal and diplomatic reply to the Lind proposals was transmitted to O'Shaughnessy yesterday by the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, Frederic Gambos. The tenor of this reply probably will be made public at the White House later in the day.

Huerta Rejects Peace Proposals.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 19.—By rejecting President Wilson's Mexican proposals brought here by Special Envoy John Lind and by issuing an ultimatum demanding the immediate recognition of the Mexican regime, President Huerta has brought the Mexican situation to a crisis.

An El Paso dispatch to-day declared that advices there, said to have come direct from Mexico City, asserted that Huerta had decided to expel John Lind and William Bayard Hale from Mexico within 24 hours. This action will be taken under Article 33 of the Mexican Constitution, which applies to "pernicious foreigners."

Underneath the bluster of the Mexican Government, however, it is realized here that Prsident Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan will go to any length to avert a conflict or even intervene in this republic. Secretary Bryan is an international peace enthusiast, and President Wilson largely shares his views.

The startling developments came suddenly and without warning following a long conference between President Huerta, Minister of War Blanquet and the bellicose Secretary of the Interior Urrutia.

All indications had been that Huerta had adopted a peaceful course and was on the point of acceding to President Wilson's pacification proposals to-day. It had even been announced from an official source that the Government would adopt conciliatory measures.

Press Lauds Huerta for Defi.

Government organs among the Mexican press were loud to-day in their praises of Huerta and his aggressive action. They declared that the United States must act now and show its hand. President Wilson must come out either as the friend or foe of Mexico.

By a majority of the populace, however, the startling developments were taken apathetically. A few military students marched to the National Palace and cheered, but no hostile movements were made toward Mr. Lind, Charge O'Shaughnessy or any others who are here as representatives of the United States Government.

There is a big conservative party of wealthy Mexicans who are opposed to Huerta's policies and who do not want war with the United States. They make no secret of their opinion that war can have but one result—the establishment of an armed protectorate over Mexico by the United States.

Followers of President Huerta and Secretary Urrutia have sent a cablegram to ex-President Diaz asking him to return to lead the loyal citizens. It is believed, however, that the elder Diaz has not much sympathy for the aggressive course adopted by Huerta toward the United States.

Mr. Lind denies that the note from President Wilson, which was handed to the Mexican Government through the regular diplomatic machinery, involved the question of recognition in any way. He declared that the situation was not so grave as the jingoes were trying to make it appear.

Anniston White Way Called Best in Dixie

ANNISTON, Aug. 19.—Anniston, which has become widely known as the "Electric City," has again forged ahead of all Southern communities in the installation of the ornamental boulevard lighting system, using the same style lamp and posts as were recently installed in Washington by the Union Foundry Company of this city. The posts were made in Anniston, by Anniston workmen, out of Alabama raw material, a part of which came from the Anniston district.

Anniston was the first city in Alagama to have a great white way, and it also bears the mark "Made in Anniston."

Lunatic Says He Is Pat Crowe, Kidnaper

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—A man who says he is Pat Crowe, kidnaper of Eddie Cudahy, Jr., son of the wealthy Omaha packer, is held in the Washington Insane Asylum for observation.

The patient told the police and physicians that he had come to Washington to forward his claim on a patent for an invention preventing the spreadig of rails.

He said Secretary of State Bryan was his personal friend, and that through the Secretary he hoped to secure his papers from the patent office.

Augusta-Columbus Railroad Proposed

COLUMBUS, Aug. 19.—A movement which had its origin in Macon, with a strong second by the Columbus Board of Trade, has come to light which proposes a direct railroad line between Columbus and Augusta, passing through Macon and the county seat of every county which it would touch.

The distance would be about 240 miles, and would not parallel any other road. Those who have begun the movement express confidence in the project and believe that it can be financed and that it will become a reality.

Laborer En Route for Fortune Dies at Sea

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—While en route to Australia to get $1,000,000 which was left to him by his father-in-law, William Lunstall, a laborer, died at sea, according to a wireless telegram received here to-day. The father of Lunstall's wife died in Australia leaving a vast fortune, and Lunstall proved the only heir. He was a penniless laborer and had difficulty getting passage money to buy a ticket.

Bulgar Plot to Slay All Turks Reported

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 19.—Evidence of a conspiracy of Bulgarians to rise up in Adrianople and massacre all the Turks has been discovered, it was declared in a telegram received here to-day by the Grand Vizier. The contents of the message were turned over to the foreign diplomats to support Turkey's contention that an army is necessary at Adrianople to protect the Turkish civilians from Bulgarian outrages.

He Feared His 'Girl' More Than Gallows

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Robert Cade, 18, who surrendered to the police because he feared the scorn of his sweetheart more than he did the possibility of the gallows, was released to-day. He was suspected of the murder of Bennie Holstein, 13. Circumstances pointed strongly to his guilt. He was being sought over the country.

"My girl would have nothing to do with me when she learned that I was under suspicion," he told the police "I would gladly risk my neck to keep her respect"

PATHFINDER GETS GREAT WELCOME

By HUGH GRANT.

TALLAPOOSA, Aug. 19.—E. L. Ferguson, official "pathfinder" for the All-Southern Transcontinental Highway, and party ended a triumphant tour through Georgia here Monday night. The party, consisting of Mr. Ferguson, Mrs. Ferguson and the Ferguson children, arrived on schedule time at 5:45 o'clock. The tourists left early Tuesday morning for Anniston. They will be joined en route by President John Craft, of the Alabama Good Roads Association, and State Highway Engineer Keller, who will accompany them through Alabama.

That Tallapoosa is keenly awake to the importance of the monster project to blaze a trail from Atlanta to San Francisco was clearly indicated Monday night when a score of Tallapoosans, including Mayor C. E. Pearce, L. E. Chandler, editor of The Tallapoosa Journal, and other prominent citizens, held a conference with Mr. Ferguson at the Tallapoosa Hotel in regard to the formulation of plans for the development of better roads in this vicinity.

The Tallapoosa good roads boosters were very enthusiastic over the campaign inaugurated by The Sunday American, and pledged their hearty support.

All Towns Give Welcome.

Tallapoosa's warm reception, however, was only one of many between here and Atlanta. All along the 68-mile route the good roads boosters turned out to give the transcontinentalists a rousing send-off.

At Austell Mayor L. C. Upshaw and Editor Dake, of The Douglasville New Era, heading a delegation of Douglasville boosters, met the tourists and escorted them to Douglasville. Here good roads and highways were talked of, and a typical old-time Georgia dinner was served at the Douglasville Hotel, with Mayor Upshaw and Mr. Dake acting as hosts.

Other Douglasville citizens who acted as official escorts were R. E. Edwards, J. F. Long, superintendent of the cotton mill; J. M. Banks, and Douglas County Commissioners J. T. Lee and A. S. Gresham.

According to Mr. Gresham, the Douglas County authorities are preparing now to spend several thousand dollars on the development of the old Tallapoosa road. The largest work will be the construction of a new steel bridge over Sweetwater Creek costing approximately $2,000.

The improvement in Douglas County of the Tallapoosa highway which was traversed by the Ferguson party and which has been selected as the official route will make this one of the best roads in the entire State.

Find Roads Excellent.

Pathfinder Ferguson declared Monday night that the road between Austell and Douglasville was excellent, and that he remaining sections were good and could be put in fine shape by the expenditure of moderate sums in each county.

Leaving Douglasville Monday afternoon, Mr. Ferguson and party made a bee line for Villa Rica, arriving there on schedule at 3:40. Temple, Ga., was reached shortly after 4 o'clock, Bremen at 5, Waco at 5:15 and Tallapoosa at 5:45. Members of the party reported a most delightful trip, with not a single mishap to mar the journey.

A wire from Heflin, Ala., Tuesday morning told of elaborate preparations there for the reception of Mr. Ferguson and party. From Heflin the tourists will proceed to Anniston, Ala., where a monster good roads celebration will be held a a greeting ebration will be held as a greeting guson expects to reach Birmingham Thursday at noon.

Envoy Page Called An Enemy to Labor

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Walter H. Page, Ambassador to Great Britain was denounced as unfit to represent the United States in England at a meeting of the Central Federated Union, because of his alleged enmity to trades unions and as a result of the strike in the plant of the Doubleday, Page Publishinging Company.

The pressmen, feeders, printers, photo-engravers and foundry workers are now on strike.

"The wages paid are far below the prevailing rate," said Secretary Shahams, "and everything is done to thwart organized labor."

THAW UNCAUGHT; BORDER WATCHED

COLEBROOK, N. H., Aug. 19.—A persistent rumor is in circulation here that Harry K. Thaw, who escaped from Mattewan Sunday morning, was arrested and taken from a train at Coaticook, Quebec. The report says that a deputy sheriff, who also was a passenger on the train, recognized Thaw.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—While a wide search was being made of New England, New York and Pennsylvania to-day, Harry Kendall Thaw, who escaped Sunday morning from the Matteawan Asylum, was believed either to be hiding in or near New York city or else is on his way to Canada in an automobile.

The police at Montreal and other cities on the border were telegraphed a description of Thaw by the central office and were asked to apprehend him as a warrant for Thaw's arrest exists in this State.

Although more than 50 hours have elapsed since Thaw made his dramatic exit from teh gates at Matteawan while Keeper H. H. Barnum was getting in the morning milk supply, yet he has disappeared as completely as though the earth had swallowed him up. The slayer of Stanford White had laid his plans so carefully that his pursuers were baffled from the minute the search began.

Mother Thinks He Is Near.

Dr. Britton D. Evans, after a call upon Mrs. William Thaw, mother of the fugitive, at the Gotham Hotel, intimated that Mrs. Thaw believes her son is not far away resting after the labors of his escape.

On the other hand, from the evidence picked up at Lennox, Mass., and other northeast points, the theory was founded that Thaw may have planned to go to Canada by automobile and skirt the northern end of this State before striking into Pennsylvania to meet his mother at Elmhurst, the Thaw country estate at Cresson, Pa.

Former Assemblyman Richard J. Butler, a West Side politician and former henchman of Chief of Police "Big Bill" Devery, who was reported to have been implicated in the plot by which Thaw escaped, denied today that he had been mixed up in the escape of the Pittsburger.

Denies He Had Part in Plot.

"I know nothing about this, and I certainly had no part in it," declared Butler. "It is certain, though, that if any man was about to be mixed up in an affair of this kind he would not use his own name. I believe that some gangster who was paid to help Thaw out used my name. In fact, I believe that I know the man."

Butler admitted that he had been away from home for several days, but denied that he had been in Matteawan.

One of the men for whom a warrant was issued in Dutchess County yesterday used the name of Richard J. Butler, of New York, while waiting at the Holland Hotel in Beacon for the Thaw getaway to come off.

Sheriff Hornbeck and District Attorney Conger, of Dutchess County, armed with warrants for the arrest of Thaw, Thomas Flood, Roger Thompson, Michael O'Keefe, Eugene Duffy and Butler, came to this city to-day.

DORSEY ADMITS HE MADE ERASURE ON FACTORY TIME SLIP

With the State determined to make a desperate fight to break down the impressive story told by Leo M. Frank in his own behalf, the trial of the man accused of Mary Phagan's murder was resumed Tuesday morning.

The defense added a few finishing touches to its case calling Mrs. Emil Selig, the prisoner's mother-in-law to identify a suit of brown clothes worn by Frank on Memorial day.

Wiley Roberts, assistant jailer at the Tower was called but did not answer to his name and proceedings were held up for a few moments.

In the wait Solicitor Dorsey arose and made the unexpected announcement that he himself had erased the identification "Taken out at 8:26" on the time slip taken from the clock in the factory. Frank had made the charge he had written words as an identification of the slip and that they had been erased. The Solicitor declared that he thought the detectives had made the identification.

"Frank did not know who made the erasure," said Attorney Reuben Arnold.

Solicitor Prepares To Uphold Dalton.

The Solicitor had announced earlier that his first witnesses in rebuttal would be called to support C. B. Dalton and impeach Daisy Hopkins, who declared she had never visited the factory with Dalton or that he had ever introduced Dalton to the factory superintendent.

Wiley Roberts was asked:

Q. Has Jim Conley been in your custody during this trial?—A. Yes.

Q. Has he ever asked for newspapers?—A. Yes.

Dorsey interrupted.

"Your honor," he said, "I think the witness, Jim Conley, ought to have the privilege of denying or affirming that before he can be impeached."

"Conley said that h could only read certain words," said Arnold, "but probably Mr. Dorsey is right. I will have to call Jim Conley back again. Mr. Rosser will be back in a minute and we will close."

Frank Proves His Own Best Witness.

Frank had demonstrated that he was better than his lawyers and that he was his own best witness when he came down from the witness chair Monday night after talking almost continuously for four hours.

It is doubtful, as shrewd and eloquent as his attorneys are known to be, if anything more impressive, more convincing and more logical will be presented to the jury in his behalf before his fate is placed in the hands of the twelve men.

The young factory superintendent made no attempt at oratory or dramatics. He did not attempt an appeal to the emotions of the jurors. He probably was wise in this, as the memory of what he said and the manner in which he said it will remain with the jurors long after an emotion of pity would have passed away.

Although Franak seldom raised his voice above a conversational tone, his address was deeply impressive from start to finish. Its truth or falsity, of course, is problematical. But it had all the characteristics that are commonly accepted as accompanying the truth.

He did not ask for pity or mercy. He did not take the attitude of demanding anything to which he was not entitled. His mein throughout was that of a man seeking merely justice, and that alone. He was an innocent man or a consummate actor as he stood before the jury. These are the only two conclusions possible.

The matter-of-fact manner in which he delivered his long address only added to its impressiveness and eloquence. That a man with the burden of a foul murder on his conscience could talk easily, freely, fearlessly for four hours before the men whose word can send him to the gallows was hardly to be conceived.

As he stod before the jurors mak-

ATTORNEYS HIRED BY MRS. GODBEE

Statement Issued for Woman Who Slew Divorced Husband and Wounded Second Wife.

MILLEN, Aug. 19.—Mrs. Edna Godbee, divorced wife of Judge W. S. Godbee, who shot and killed her former husband and seriously wounded his second wife, has employed Attorneys G. C. Dekle and J. A. Dixon to defend her. The following statement has been issued by them:

"We have no apprehension as to the outcome of this case. We do not propose to try it on the streets or in the newspapers, but in the courtroom. There we expect the truth as regards this case to convince the jury and the country at large of the innocence of Mrs. Godbee. There has been already an effort on the part of some people to distort the facts in this case, and we ask in simple justice that the public withhold their judgment until they shall have taken a calm and dispassionate survey of the evidence in the case, after which we do not fear their verdict."

Mrs. Godbee, who was so seriously wounded by the divorced wife, is in a serious condition, physicians not giving much hope of her recovery.

Mrs. Edna Godbee is in the Jenkins County jail awaiting the preliminary trial, which will be held as soon as the condition of the wounded woman is such as to insure recovery, or until death has claimed the victim.

Duchess Who Rules Luxembourg to Wed

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LUXEMBOURG, Aug. 19.—Te betrothal of Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide, aged 19, ruler of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, to Prince Henry of Bavaria, was announced today.

Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide ascended the throne on her eighteenth birthday, from which time German and French plots have been directed at her, for both big neighbors have long looked at the little Grand Duchess with covetous eyes.

Aged Fat Man in Furs With Mercury at 100

BOSTON, Aug. 19.—While the street thermometers registered 100 here, a man aged and fat, wearing a heavy winter suit, a heavy ulster that reached the ground, heavy shoes and a fur cap, with the laps turned down over the ears, was seen wandering about the streets, seemingly cool.

Newport Will See Relative of Czar

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—The Grand Duke Alexander Michanovitch, brother-in-law of the Czar, who is here, will be the guest of Barclay Warburton and later will go to Newport.

He may take a trip West to shoot big game.

FRANK PROVES OWN BEST WITNESS, SAY LAWYERS

ing minute explanations of the intricate work involved in the financial sheets, the reports and the hundred and one details of his work, the impression that he gave was that of a fluent classroom lecturer thoroughly at home with his subject. He was not disturbed by interruptions. He spoke easily and with unconscious gestures.

He spoke more than two hours on the complexity of the work he was compelled to do Saturday forenoon and afternoon the day that Mary Phagan came to her death. He accounted for every moment of his time on the day of the murder.

The latter part of his address was given over to his experience with the detectives, for whom he did not appear to have great respect or admiration, and to a categorical denial of all the charges made against him.

One of his most startling statements was in reference to the supposed blood spots near the ladies' dressing room on the fourth floor which have figured so prominently in the case since their discovery by R. P. Barrett, a machinist at the pencil factory.

Frank said that he had made an examination of the spots of which the detectives and Solicitor General have made a great deal.

"I did not depend on the light from the windows for my inspection," said the defendant. "I crouched right down on the floor and made the closest sort of an inspection. I discovered a curious thing. I scraped away with my finger and I found that there was an accumulation of dirt and grease over the dark spots. The accumulation was not that of three days. It was not that of three weeks. It was an accumulation of three months or more.

"Another thing which has been overloowed in connection with these spots is the effect that the Haskoline compound would have had had it been smeared over real blood spots when the blood is fresh. The Haskoline, which is simply a lubricating mixture, is applied in a liquid condition. Had the blood been fresh, as the dectectves have presumed, it would have mixed with the Haskoline which would have turned a pink or red color instead of remaining white as has happened to be the case."

Admits His Nervousness.

Frank admitted readily that he had been nervous when he was routed from bed and taken without his breakfast to the undertaking rooms to view the body of the murdered girl.

"I was nervous; I admit it," he said. "I was extremely nervous. I was distracted. But what man would not have been under the circumstances? It would have been a man of stone who would not have been affected by the tragedy of this little girl killed on the dawn of womanhood.

He made a sensational charge intimating that an attempt had been made to "frame" against him by the detectives in connection with the time slip taken from the clock the morning after the tragedy.

He declared that on the slip he took from the clock he wrote: "Taken out at 8:26 a. am.," underscoring the words with two heavy lines. He said that he handed this slip at once to Chief Lanford.

That an attempt had been made at the erasure of this means he had taken to identify the slip was the accusation he made. He held the slip up to the jurors and told them that the words were still faintly visible as well as the two lines with which he underscored the words.

He added that such a vigorous attempt had been made to rub out his writing that the red lines on the time slip also had been partly obliterated.

Toward the beginning of his address he referred to his home life, which the detectives at various times have sought to show was unhappy. He drew an affectionate smile to the lips of his pretty wife when he said that his married life had been exceptionally happy, the happiest period of his career.

Denies He Ever Had Seen Dalton.

He referred only briefly to the testimony of C. B. Dalton, who said on the stand that he had seen women in Frank's office and had been introduced to Frank by Miss Daisy Hopkins. Frank denied he ever had met Dalton. He denied flatly any intimacy with women in his office or anywhere else, and denounced as unspeakable slanders the charges of other acts of immorality.

His account of the visit of Mary Phagan to his office was simple and direct. He said she came and asked for her pay and was given it. As she passed from his sight she called back to ask him if the metal had come. He answered, "No," and then heard her footsteps retreating. He thought that he heard a female voice an instant later, but paid little attention to it.

That, he said, was all he knew of Mary Phagan's movements on the day she met her death. He did not even know her name at the time, identifying her by the number on her envelope. That he had any part in her death or in the disposal of her body he denied absolutely. He branded the story of Jim Conley, the negro, as a tissue of lies from start to finish.

"I have told the truth and the whole truth," he said as he left the stand at 6:05 o'clock. He had been talking almost continuously for four hours.

LIE DIRECT IS GIVEN TO CONLEY'S STORY

Gentlemen, I know nothing whatever of the death of little Mary Phagan, I had no part in causing her death, nor do I know ho wshe came to her death after she took her money and left my office. I never even saw Conley in the factory or anywhere else on that date, April 26, 1913.

The statement of the negro Conley is a tissue of lies from first to last. I know nothing whatever of the cause of the death of Mary Phagan, and Conley's statement as to his coming up and helping me dispose of the body, or that I had anything to do with her or to do with him is a monstrous lie.—From Frank's Statement.

Frank's Story in Complete Form as Told to the Jury

Leo M. Frank, in his remarkable statement to the jury, had little to say of the charges made against him until the latter part of his address, which on this account became the most interesting and most impressive portion of his talk. After going into close detail in respect to his work at the factory office the afternoon of Mary Phagan's murder, he took up the principal evidence and the principal charges against him.

He explained why he did not talk to Conley. He asserted that it was he who gave the information that Conley could write, in spite of the assertions that he had withheld this information. He made complete denial of seeing Conley on the day of the crime or of having any personal knowledge of how Mary Phagan came to ed all he desired.

Here is Frank's story as it was told with its various interruptions:

Mr. Arnold: "Now Mr. Frank, such papers as you want to use you can come down here at any time or from time to time and get them on this table right here.

The Court: "Before you commence your statement I want to read the law. In criminal procedure, the prisoner will have the right to make to the Court and jury such statement in the case as he may deem proper in his defense. It shall not be under oath and shall have such force as the jury shall think right to give it. They may believe it in preference to the sworn testimony in the case. The prisoner shall not be compelled to answer any questions on cross-examination. He should feel free to decline to answer them. Now you can make such statement as you see fit."

The defendant said: "Gentlemen of the jury, in 1884, the 17th day of April, I was born in Terrell, Tex. At the age of three months my parents took me to Brooklyn, N. Y., which became my home until I came South, to Atlanta, to make my home here. I attended the public schools of Brooklyn and prepared for college in Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"In the fall of 1902 I entered Cornell University, where I took the course of mechanical engineering, graduating after four years, in June, 1906. I then accepted a position as draughtsman with the B. F. Sturdevant Company, of Hyde Park, Mass. After remaining with this firm for about six months I returned once more to my home in Brooklyn, where I accepted a position as testing engineer and draughtsman with the National Meter Company of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"I remained with these parties until about the middle of October, 1907, when at the invitation of some citizens of Atlanta, I came South to confer with them with reference to the starting and operation of a pencil factory to be located in Atlanta. After remaining here for about two weeks I returned once more to New York, where I engaged passage and went to Europe. I remained in Europe nine months. During my sojourn abroad I studied the pencil business and looked after the erection and testing of machinery which had been previously traded for.

Looked After the Purchase of Mateials.

"In the first part of August, 1908, I returned once more to America, and immediately came South, to Atlanta, which has remained my home ever since. I married in Atlanta an Atlanta girl, Miss Lucille Selig. The major portion of my married life has been spent in the home of my parents-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. Selig, at No. 68 East Georgia avenue. My married life has been exceptionally happy, indeed—it has been the happiest days of my life.

"My duties as superintendent of the National Pencil Company were in general as follows: I took charge of the technical and mechanical end of the factory, looking after the processes and seeing that the product was turned out in quality equal to the standard which was set by our competitors. I looked after the installation of new machinery, and the purchasing of any machinery, and in addition I had charge of the office work at the Forsyth street plant, and the lead plant on Bell street.

"I looked after the purchasing of the raw material.' I saw after the manufacture of pencils and kept up with the market of these materials and when the prices fluctuated so that the purchase could be made to the best possible advantage.

"On Friday, April 25, I arrived at the pencil factory on Forsyth street at about 7 o'clock, my usual time. I immediately started in on my regular routine work, looking over the papers I had laid out the evening before, and attending to any work that needed my special attention that morning.

"At about 9:30 I went over to the office of the general manager and treasurer, Mr. Sigmund Montag, whose office is at Montag Brothers on Nelson street. I stayed over there a short time, and got what papers had arrived in the mail—all the mail of the pencil factory comes over to their office. I got that mail and brought it back to the Forsyth street office. I then separated the mail and continued in my usual routine duties in the office on Forsyth street.

"At about 11 o'clock Mr. Schiff handed me the payrool book, covering the plants at Forsyth street and Bell street, for me to check over and see if the amounts and extensions were correct. Of course, this work has to be very carefully done, so that the proper amount of money is drawn from the bank. This checking took me until about 12:20 p. m.

Went to Bank To Get Pay Money.

"I then went over to Montag Brothers, took the checks drawn and had them signed by Mr. Sig Montag, after which I returned to Forsyth street and got the leather bag in which I usually carried the money and the coin from the bank, and got the payroll slip, on which the various demoniations which I desired to have on the payroll were made out, and went, accompanied by Mr. Herbert Schiff, my assistant, to the Atlanta National Bank, where I had the checks cashed.

"Returning to the factory in company with Mr. Schiff, I placed this bag containing the money for the payroll, in the safe and locked it. At this time my wife called for me and in her company and that of Mr. Schiff I went over to the car, and went with my wife home to lunch. After lunch I returned to the factory and took a tour for about an hour through the factory, after which I then assisted Mr. Schiff in checking over the amounts on the pay envelopes, checking the money against the duplicate slips that we had got from the bank to see that the correct amount had been given us, and helped Mr. Schiff in checking over the money and in filling the envelopes.

"This took us approximately until a quarter to six to fill the envelopes and seal them, and place them in a box we have there with two hundred pigeon holes in it, that we call our payoff box.

Paid One Man Check in Cash.

"While I was so occupied with Mr. Schiff in filling the envelopes, a young man named Wright who had helped us out in the office as clerk during the past week came in and I paid him in cash, as Mr. Schiff had neglected to put his name on the payroll. I just made out a ticket and put it in the payroll box, not the cash box, and continued in the office with Mr. Schiff, taking all the envelopes that were due the help that had worked from April 18 to April 24, inclusive, to pay them through the window in one side of the office. There is a little window built in the hall. I had stayed in my office, checking over the amount of money which had been left there.

"This amount should have been equal to the amount loaned out in advance to the help. I took a ticket out when we were filling the envelopes in checking this amount there. As near as I recollect it, it was about $35.

"I noticed a shortage of about $1.20, or something over a dollar, at any rate, and I kept checking to see if I could find the shortage shortage in the various deductions which had been made. I could not locate it that evening, after the help had been paid off, during which time I stayed in my office. No one came into my office and asked me for the envelope or for an envelope of any other party.

"After the paying off of the help had taken place, Mr. Schiff returned and handed me the envelopes which were left over, bound with an elastic band, and I put them in the cash compartment, which is different from the the cash box, the key to which is kept in my cash box, and placed them in the safe, and Mr. Schiff placed the amounts in the box, and placed the box in the safe and left them.

Tells of Puting Slips in Time Clock.

"I placed the time clock slips which were to be used the next day. I took the two time slips dated April 25, which had been used by the help on Friday, April 25—these are the two that I put in the slot" exhibiting the same to the jury.)

Mr. Dorsey thereupon vigorously protested that Mr. Frank should be allowed to exhibit these slips to the jury, because they had not been offered in evidence, on the grounds that they were immaterial and irrelevant, and on the second ground that he could not put them in evidence on his own statement.

Consel for the defendant insisted, however, that they should be allowed to offer these slips in evidence, as they had been testified to by Mr. Darley and others. The testimony, however, was not produced, and Judge Roan ruled that Mr. Frank might make any statement concerning the same, but that he would withhold his ruling until further investigation. Mr. Frank thereupon proceeded to explain to the jury.

"Gentlemen, as I was saying, these two slips that have April 26, 1913, written at the bottom are the two slips I put in the clock on the evening of Friday, April 25, to be used on the day following, which, of course, was April 26.

Darley's Duty to Employ All Help.

'I neglected to mention also, in going over my duties at the factory, that Mr. Darley was superintendent of labor and manufacture, and it fell to his duty to engage the help and distribute the help throughout the plant, and to discharge the help in case it was necessary. It was also due to him whether the wages were raised or not. In other words, he was the man that came directly in contact with the help. Moreover, he saw that the goods progressed through the plant without stopping, speedily and economically for their manufacture.

'On Friday evening I got home at about 6:30, had my supper, washed up, and with my wife played a game of auction bridge at a friend's home in the evening. My wife and I returned home and retired about 11 o'clock.

"On Saturday, April 26, I rose between 7 and 7:30 and leisurely washed and dressed and ate my breakfast, and caught a Washington Street or Georgia Avenue car. I don't really remember which, at the corner of Washington and Georgia avenue, and arrived at the factory, Forsyth street plant, at about 8:20.

"Upon my arrival at the factory I found Mr. Holloway, the day watchman, at his usual place, and I greeted him in my usual way, and found Alonzo Mann, the office boy, in the office.

"I took off my coat and hat and opened my desk and opened the safe, and removed the various books and files and wire trays containing the various imporant papers which were placed there the evening before and distributing them in their proper places about the office. I then went out to the shipping room and conversed a few minutes with Mr. Irby, who was at that time shipping clerk, about the work he was going to do that morning.

"According to my recollection, we did no shipping that day, owing to the fact that the freight offices were not receiving any shipments, due to the fact that it was a holiday.

"I returned to my office and looked through the papers and sorted out those which I was going to take over on my usual trip to the general manager's office that morning.

"I then turned to the invoice covering shipments which were made by the pencil factory on Thursday, April 24, and which were typewritten on Friday, April 25, by Miss Eubanks, who was the stenographer who stayed at my office. She had hurried through with the office work on the day previous, so that she could go home and spend the holiday in the country where she lived. But I didn't get to check over the invoices on the shipments on Friday, due to the fact that Mr. Schiff and myself were completely occupied the entire day. So we left the factory with the payroll. So that naturally, these invoices covering shipments which were made on April 24, ought to have been sent to the customers, and I got right to work checking them.

Shows Invoices to Jury First Time.

"Now I have these invoices here (taking up the papers and exhibiting them to the jury). These papers have not been exhibited to you before, but I will explain them. You have seen some similar to these.

"Of all the mathematical work in the office of a pencil factory, this very operation, this very piece of work that I have now before me is the most important. It is the invoices covering shipments and is sent to the customer, and it is very important that the prices are correct, that the amount of goods shipped agrees with the amount which is on the invoices, that the terms are correct, and that the price is correct. Also, in some cases, ther were freight deductions, all of which has to be very carefully checked over and looked into, because I know of nothing else that exasperates a customer more than to receive invoices which are incorrect.

"Now, with reference to the work I did on these orders—that is not such an easy job as you might be led to believe. Here are initials. They represent the salesman who took the order. Sometimes I have to go through a world of papers to find out to whom to credit these orders.

"I notice that one of the orders to R. B. Kindele calls for a specialty. That has to be carefully noted and recorded. One column represents the shipping point, another the date, etc.

"The next step is to fill in the orders on this sheet. On this sheet I must separate the orders into price groups. Evidently no work has been done on this sheet since he went away. The reason this is done —in the pencil business as in all manufacturing businesses—it is advantageous to sell as much of the high-proiced goods as possible.

"This sheet is the only means of telling how much of the various goods we are selling. It is the barometer of our business and requires most careful work.

Declares He Wrote Financial Sheet.

"After I have finished that work I have had to do this, and notwithstanding any insinuations that have been made, I wrote these requisitions."

Frank read the name on each requisition, which were the same as the names on the orders.

"Now that is all my handwriting, except what as written at a subsequent date to April 26."

"Well, moreover, this operation this morning took me longer than it usually takes the ordinary person to check invoices because usually one calls out and the other checks, but I had this work all myself that morning. As I did this work this morning I saw that Miss Eubanks had evidently sacrificed accuracy to speed, and everyone of them was wrong. I went over the invoices to make the corrections, figure them out, correct them, and make deductions, if any were to be made, and then get the total shipments, because since these shipments were made on April 24, which was Thursday and the last day of our fiscal week, and it was on this week which the financial report which I make out every Saturday afternoon, which has been my custom, so that the total shipments could be figured out, and therefore I could not let it go out at that, so I had to figure every invoice in its entirety, so I could get a figure I would be able to use.

"The first order here is to Hilton, Hart & Kern Co., Detroit, Mich. Here is the original order, which exists in our files in our office. Here is the original transaction which was made March 18, but it was not to be shipped until April 24. This is a small order, 100 gross of Number 2; and here is an order of the Packard Motor Car Company for 125 gross of No. 3, and 150 gross of No. 4. Those figures represent the grade of hardness of the lead in the pencil."

Explains How Orders are Filled.

Frank thereupon explained how such orders were usually filled, whether in part or in whole, and how the shipments were made, and continuing, said:

"In investigating shipments made by the pencil company our method is as follows: We make them in triplicate. Our first original is a white sheet that goes to the customer; the second is a pink sheet that goes over to the general manager's office and is filed serially, that is chronologically, that is, one date after the other, nad from that the charges are made on the ledger, and the last sheet, the third sheet, or yellow sheet, which is here (exhibiting it) and those are placed in the files in my office, and are filed alphabetically. These yellow sheets that I have here are not the yellow sheets I had that day, because they have since been corrected, and I am just taking the corrected sheets I made the corrections and Miss Eubanks corrected them on Monday by the corrections I had on the white sheet from the corrections I made and I presume at that time made that correct."

Mr. Frank exhibited to the jury various orders similarly written, to H. W. Williams and Company, of Fort Worth, Tex.; The Fort Smith Paper Comoany, of Fort Smith, Ark.; S. O. Barnum & Sons, of Buffalo, N. Y.; F. L. Schmidt and Company, of Chicago, and H. S. Kress and Company, of New York.

"Now, there is an order that takes a great deal of study (referring t othe Kress order) because in common with these five and ten cent syndicates, there is a great deal of red tape. These are invoices that were typed on April 25, Friday, and were shipped on April 24. It was the date on which the shipment was made irrespective of the date there, (referring to the date on the letter) and these were typewritten. In other words, shipments took place April 24, and that date was at the top, typewritten and stamped by the office at the bottom, April 24. Among other things that the S. H. Kress Company demand on their orders, we must state whether or not it is complete, must give the case number, and must tell by which railroad the shipment goes.

Checking Made Hard By Much Red Tape.

"Here is one for F. W. Woolworth and Company, Fort Wayne, Ind., which shows 35 pounds, less 86 cents per 100 pounds credit. In other words, we had to find out what was the weight of that was on a basis of 86 cents for every 100 pounds shipped. Then here is another one of our large distributors in New York. They have a freight allowance of 86 cents a 100 pounds also, and their shipments amounted to 618 pounds on Thursday, April 24.

"I started on this work. As I said, I have gone into it in some detail, to show you the carefulness with which the work must be carried out, and I was at work on this until about 9 o'clock, as near as I remember.

"Mr. Darley and Wade Campbell, the inspector of the factory, came into the outer office and I stopped what work I was doing, which was this work, and went to the outer office and chatted with Mr. Campbell for ten or fifteen minutes, conversed with them, joked with them and while I was talking with them, I think about 9:15, or a quarter after 9, Miss Mattie Smith came in and asked me for her pay envelope, and the envelope of her sister-in-law. I went to the safe and got out the package of envelopes that Mr. Schiff had given me the evening before, and placed the two remaining envelopes in my cash bax, as I considered they might come in and I wanted to have them near at hand so that I could pay them off when they came in. I keep my cash box on the lower side of my desk. After Miss Smith had gone away with the envelopes, in a few minutes Mr. Darley came back with one of the envelopes, and pointed out an error in one of them, the one of the sister-in-law of Miss Mattie Smith, who had gotten too much money.

"When I took the amount which was too much, that amount balanced the error in the payroll that I had noticed the night before, and left about five or ten cents. Those things generally right themselves, anyhow. I continued to work on these invoices when I was interrupted by Mr. Lyon, the superintendent of Montag Brothers, and he brought me a pencil display box. He seemed to be in a hurry, and I told him if he would wait a minute I would go over with him, but he passed out of the office, and then I found a stopping place in the work i was working on, and I put on my coat and when I got to the outer office I found that Mr. Lyon had already left.

"Mr. Darley and I left about 9:35 or 9:40, and we got out of the factory and stopped at the corner of Hunter and Forsyth streets, where we each had a drink at Cruickshank's soda fountain, and I bought a package of my favorite cigarettes.

"After that conversation there I left him and went alone to Montag Brothers, where I arrived about 10 o'clock or maybe a little after. I entered Montag Brothers and spoke to Mr. Sig Montag, general manager, on business, and he brought the papers which I collect and laid them on his desk, and I then took the papers out, thrust them in the folder and took the other papers which I had in my folder, and then distributed them at the proper places in the Montag plant. I don't know just which ones they were.

Conversation With Miss Hall Recalled.

"In chatting with Mr. Montag I spoke to Mr. Montag and Mr. Korse, after that I spoke to Miss Hattie Hall, the pencil company's stenographer, who stays at Montag Brothers, and asked her to come over and help me that morning, as I have already told you, that these invoices were wrong, and I wanted her to help me on that work, and could not take it up to-morrow. In fact, I told her I had enough work to keep her busy that whole afternoon if she would stay. She said she didn't want to do that; she wanted to have at least a half holiday.

"I then spoke to members of the Montag Brothers force, on business matters. Alsuo I then spoke to Mr. Guttenheim, who was sales manager of the Montag Brothers and of the pencil factory, and then spoke to him about several of his orders that were in the factory. There were two of his orders that he paid special stress on that were desired to be shipped right away. I said, 'I don't know how una far along in the process of manufacture the orders have proceeded, but if you can come back I can look it up and tell you when they can be shipped.' He said he could not come then, but he would come a little later. I told him I would be glad if he would come up a little later on in the afternoon; that I would be there until about 1 o'clock in the morning, and then about half past three. I then took the folder and returned.

Arrived at Factory At About 11 o'Clock.

"Upon arrival at the pencil factory I went up to the second or office floor, and then I noticed that the clock was perhaps five minutes after 11 o'clock, and I saw Mr. Holloway there, and I told him he could go as soon as he got ready. He told me he had some work to do for Harry Denham and Arthur White, who wanted to do some repairing on the top floor, and that he would do the work first.

"I then went to the office, and found Miss Hattie Hall, who had preceded me from Montag Brothers, and another young lady, who introduced herself to me as Mrs. Arthur White. Mrs. White wanted to see her husband. I went into the inner office, and took off my hat and coat and removed the papers which I had brought back from Montag Brothers and put the folder away.

Week's Sheet Left In Incomplete Form.

"It was about this time that I first heard the elevator motor start up, and the circular saw in the carpenter shop which was near to it, and I heard it sawing through some boards and thought it was evidently the work that Mr. Holloway had referred to.

"I seperated the orders from the letters which required answers, and took from them the letters that did not need immediate attention and laid them in the various places, and it was about this time I had an idea I would like to see how far along the report sheets were which I used in getting up the financial report every Saturday afternoon. To my surprise I found that the sheet contains the records of the pencils packed for the week had been entered for Thursday. The last day of the fiscal week was omitted, and Mr. Schiff, evidently in the stress of figuring out and filling the envelopes for the ayroll for Friday instead of Saturday, had evidently not had enough time. I told Alonzo Mann, the office boy, to call up Mr. Schiff and find out when he was coming down, and Alonzo said that the answer came back over the telephone that Mr. Schiff would be right down, so I didn't pay any more attention to that part of the work, because I expected Mr. Schiff to come down any minute.

Mrs. Freeman and Corinthia Hall Came In.

"It was about this time that Mrs. Emma Clark Freeman and Miss Corinthia Hall, two of the girls that worked on the fourth floor, came upstairs and asked to go upstairs and get Mrs. Freeman's coat, which permission I gave them. I told them at the same time to tell Arthur White that his wife was downstairs. A few minutes after they left my office two gentlemen came in, one of them Mr. Graham, and another gentleman, fathers of two boys who had gotten into some trouble during the noon recess and were taken down to police headquarters, and, of course, could not get their pay envelopes the night before. I gave the required envelopes to the two fathers, and chatted with them at some length in reference to the trouble that their boys had gotten into on the day previous.

"Just before they left the office Mrs. Emma Clark Freeman and Mrs. Corinthia Hall came into my office and asked my permission to use the telephone, and started using the telephone during the time these two gentlemen left my office. Previous to the time these two gentlemen came in I had called Miss Mattie Hall in and dictated what mail I had to give her, and she went out and was typewriting the mail.

Frank went back to the stand. He was handed a glass of water as he resumed his seat, but declined it.

"Miss Hall left my office" he continued, "on her way home at this time. There were then in the building Arthur White, Harry Denham and Mrs. White. It must have been from ten to fifteen minutes after that this little girl whom I afterwards found to be Mary Phagan came in. She asked asked for her pay. I got my cash box, referred to the number and gave her the envelope.

"As she went out, she stopped near my outer office door and said:

"'Has the metal come?'

Sound of Voice Made Little Impression.

"The safe door was open and I could not see her, but I answered 'No.' The last I heard was the sound of her footsteps going down the hall. But a few moments after she asked me, I had the impression of a voice saying something, but it made no impression on me.

"The little girl had hardly left the office when Lemmie Quinn came in. He said something to me about working on a holiday and went out. A few minutes before 1 o'clock, I called up my wife and told her I was coming to lunch at 1:15. I then went upstairs to where Denham and White were working and found they had a bit of the floor taken up and were sawing.

"I explained to them that I was going to lunch and would lock the door when I left. Mrs. White left at this time. Some lady said that at 12:35 o'clock she found me in front of the safe. It is barely possible that she did. I don't recall her being there. Her memory probably is fresher than mine on this point.

'When I went up stairs I asked Mr. White if his wife was going to stay there with him. She said no, that she would go. She left and then I got my hat and coat and left, locking the outer door.

"Now, gentlemen, to the best of my recollection from the time the whistle blew until I went up-

3 WOUNDED WHEN MOB STORMS JAIL

Spartanburg Sheriff and Deputy Rout Would-Be Lynchers of Negro Assailant.

SPARTANBURG, Aug. 19.—Sheriff White and one deputy fought off a mob of several hundred who attempted to enter Spartanburg County jail and lynch a negro. Frank Eppley, J. C. Owensby and John Turner were wounded by the Sheriff and his deputy before they drove the mob from the jail.

The mob attempted to blow up the jail with dynamite, but failing, tried to batter down the doors. It was then the three men were wounded and the mob was forced to recognize the courage and determination of Sheriff White and his deputy.

Threats were made by the mob that they would secure nitroglycerin and destroy the entire building, but they did not return.

The negro had attacked a young white woman earlier in the day. He was later captured and landed in jail. The mob formed after nightfall and attacked the jail.

A call was made to Governor Blease to send a company of the State militia, but he declined. It appears today that the Sheriff is able to cope with the situation.

Find Missing Banker Led Gay Lobster Life

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 19.—In tracing the career of Raymond E. Smith, secretary-treasurer of the Roseville Trust Company, who is being sought to clear up mysteries surrounding a shortage of over $500,000 in the bank, the searchers found evidences of lobster suppers, joy rides and gay parties.

They failer to find the object of their search, but they got traces of a young woman to whom Smith is alleged to have paid marked attention.

Another woman gave a clew that leads the company's officials to believe that the banker has sailed on one of the trans-Atlantic liners from New York.

LEO M. FRANK'S COMPLETE STORY AS TOLD TO THE JURY

Accused Makes Statement Remarkable for Clarity and Wealth of Detail

DIAGRAM ILLUSTRATING FRANK'S ALIBI

'TIME TO TALK IS NOW AND I HAVE TOLD YOU WHOLE TRUTH,' HE SAYS

stairs to see Mr. White, I did not stir out of my office. I went on home.

"I called up my brother-in-law, Mr. Ursenbach, to tell him I was unable to keep the engagement to go to the ball game. The cook answered the phone.

"My wife and mother-in-law were going to the opera. My father-in-law and I ate lunch. He went into the backyard while I lit a cigarette and lay down for a moment.

"I left and while passing the home of Mrs. Wolfsheimer, saw Mrs. Michael on the porch. I went in to see her and saw Mrs. Wolfsheimer, Mr. Loeb and others.

Watched Parade When Street Cars Stopped.

"To catch the next car I ran down to Glenn street. On the car I met my wife's cousin, Mr. Loeb. The car was blocked at the corner of Washington and Hunter streets. I walked up to Whitehall street and stood there possibly for fifteen minutes watching the Memorial Day parade.

"As I walked down Whitehall street I met Miss Rebecca Carson. This was probably 3:10 or 3:15 o'clock. I greeted her and walked on. I stopped at Jacobs' Pharmacy and walked on. I went from there to the factory.

"When I reached there I went upstairs and let the boys know I had returned. A minute later, I returned to my office and started to work on the financial sheet.

"In a few minutes the clock bell rang and Arthur White came into the office to borrow two dollars. It was while I was at work on the sheet at probably 4 o'clock that I went to the toilet.

"As i returned toward the office, Inoticed Newt Lee coming toward me from the head of the stairs. I told him he could go on off but to be sure and be back at 6 o'clock. I told him I was very sorry I could not let him know about the half holiday but that he was at liberty to enjoy himself as he saw fit, but that he must not fail to return at 6 o'clock.

"The first night that Newt Lee came to work at the factory, I took him over the building, and stressed the fact that he must go into the basement, especially the dust bin, every half hour.

"I told him it would be part of his duties to watch the back door. He was to make a complete tour every half hour and punch the clock.

"Now, I will return to the work of the financial sheet. This sheet contains the cost of all the pencils made that week. There are no names but this sample case will show you."

Evidence Excluded But Jury Sees It.

Frank unfolded a sample case.

Dorsey: "We object to this being used as evidence."

Judge Roan: "I sustain you."

Frank placed the sample case to one side.

"Well," he said, "you got a sufficient glance at those pencils to see there were a great many."

"In making up this sheet it was necessary to go through the list of all that were packed. Specials, of course, have to be figured separately.

"For instance, there is a special 60-60-x pencil known as 'Crackerjack.' Now I notice that the two expert accountants reported two errors. While they were unimportant, I wish to explain that those errors were not mine. They were made by Mr. Schiff. I never checked his figures. I checked over mine, but not his.

"Now the next is 'jobs.' The accountant found the only error in my financial sheet there in the item 'jobs.' It was not an error, as I will show you. He did not know my method of figuring.

"Two items here are totals. The total gross amount is 791 gross, the total value amount $396.75. In figuring the average I obtained $50.01. In that average he discovered an error. It was not an error. I simply did not go as far into the decimals as he did. One-tenth of a cent was close enough for my purpose.

"Now some of the items in here are taken from the reports of the foremen of the different departments."

Frank then exhibited a report from the foreman or forewoman of each department and explained it.

"Then there is the report of Mr. Schiff, showing the gross of pencils shipped each day of that week —that week was an exceptionally heavy one.

"Now there is a little report here that constitutes one of the most difficult calculations. It is from the packing room. We have a trick of the trade to put the pencils that do not sell very fast into fancy packages to make them go.

"Now, very often these pencils are taken from the shelf, where they have laid for more than a year, and repacked in the fancy cases. I made all the calculations on this that afternoon, despite everything that has been said here to the contrary.

"Now here is a little sheet that deals with the grades of the pencils. It shows the totals for each class of pencils shipped that week. This data sheet—we have had very few clerks at the Forsyth street office capable of keeping it, because it requires rather advanced mathematics to reach the totals."

"Now I will have to get all my thoughts on this sheet. I isn't a hard job but it is a very tedious one and requires much care and accuracy. Here is rubber—cheap rubber and good rubber. Now it has been intimated that some of these items—this one in particular, if I am not mistaken—that I could take two that were already figured and subtract them from the total and get the cost of the third.

"That is not so. Some of the pencils haven't any rubber in them at all. I have to go through the same tedious operation on each item. There are various sorts of packing boxes used. Then there are the skeletons in the boxes. Some pencils don't have skeletons at all.

"All these items must be gone through accurately to get correct results of this sheet. Then there is no section on this data sheet showing the cost of tips. You can5t use rubbers without tips, so, after figuring them, I just added them to the rubbers.

"Some pencils take wrappers and some don't. The very cheap pencils are tied with a cord, so we have the same tedious figuring again.

"The slat item is not worked out because I could not find the data. I just put it off until Monday.

"Here are the jobs—the payroll at Forsyth street and the payroll at Bell street.

"Now the shipments were figured for the week. I did part of that work in the morning and I explained to you about the invoices being wrong. Well, here are the items on this financial sheet. Then, as to the orders received. Entering the orders received that day involved no more work than transferring.

Has Own Method of Figuring Cost Data.

"Here they are in comparison to the amount shipped.

"One of the most intricate things in making out this financial sheet is figuring the cost data. This sheet I may say is a child of my own brain. The first one gotten out was gotten out by myself.

"This item here gives us the net value and the net amount of money the pencil factory received for its pencils. The burden that a business has to carry is its fixed charges—rent, insurance, certain salaries, etc.—the charges that are the same whether great or few pencils are made.

"The machine shop is variable. We did make many machines at first, but later the machine shop was used solely for upkeep. The slats are figured at 22 a gross. That cost was simple multiplication.

"The figuring of that price is not done in making out the financial sheet Saturday afternoon. Mr. Montag and myself figure that in advance, making allowance for profit, breakage, etc.

"I have here on the report of April 26 'Slats, not complete;' that was because Schiff had not made out the slat report, and I planned to complete it Monday morning before taking it to Montag.

"Now, beside the making this large sheet here and the financial sheet, there aer three other sheets that I made out. Now, I want to call your attention to this. I did not typewrite it. I merely filled in the blanks. I have several of them typewritten and keep them in my desk.

"In addition to that I make out two condensed financial sheets, showing the principal figures. They are sufficient for a director or stockholder to see what the factory is doing.

Mailed Statements To Stockholders.

"One of these statements I mailed to my uncle, Mr. M. Frank, who is president of the company, and the other to Oscar Papenheimer, who was a director.

"I put one in an envelope and addressed i tto Mr. Oscar Papenheimer; the other I sent to my uncle along with a price list, and I wrote him this letter.

"This price list is too long for an ordinary envelope, hence the large envelope.

"After finishing the financial sheet, I folded the large sheet and addressed it to Mr. Selig Montag. I then took up the checking up of the cash and balancing of the cash book. I did that work as near as I remember, between 5:30 and 5 minutes to 6 o'clock. It did not take me an hour and a half. I did it in about 25 minutes. There was $30.54. There couldn't have been any more. It was mostly in small change. There was one loan to Mr. White, making the total amount of cash $28.50.

"Beginning that week, we had $39.25 as a balance. We drew two checks of $15 each—I mean by that that we went to Mr. Montag's office and had him draw the checks. The total amount of money we had to account for was 69.25. What it was spent for, of course, is shown on the debit side."

Frank explained each of those items, including drayage, parcel post, etc.

"I found at the end a shortage of $4.34 coming about in payrolls within the last three months."

At this juncture Frank paused to take a drink of water having been talking for 2 hours and 30 minutes.

"I finished this work I have just outlined," he continued, "at 5 minutes to 6 o'clock. I took those slips—I won't show them to you—stamped April 28. They were put into the clock because no one was coming into the office until Monday.

"Newt Lee's punches on Monday night, would appear on the strip placed on the clock Monday night. Just before I left I put a new tape in the clock and made Newt Lee punch it. Then he went on down stairs to wait and let me out.

"As I started out of the factory, I saw Newt Lee talking to a man named Gantt, who had been released about two weeks before. I gave them permission to go into the factory and get Gant's shoes which he said were left there and I told Newt Lee to go with him.

"I reached home at about 6:25 o'clock and at 6:30, thinking Newt Lee would be near the clock, I called him over the phone to see if everything was all right. I could not get him. I called again at 7 o'clock and again at 7:30. At that time I got him and he told me everything was all right.

"That night my parents-in-law had company at the home. Those present were Mr .and Mrs. Marcus, Mrs. Goldstein, ..rs. M. Marx, Mrs. A. B. Marx, Mr. Ike Strauss—who came in at about 10 o'clock. I read a magazine until about 10:30 and then retired."

Told Officer He Did Not Know Girl.

At this juncture the jury retired for five minutes.

Frank conferred with his attorneys while the jury was out. Upon its return he resumed:

"I believe I have taken in every move Saturday night. I retired Saturday night. Sunday morning about 7 o'clock I was awakened by the telephone ringing and a man's voice which I afterwards found out to be Detective Starnes, said: "I want you to come down to the factory.' 'What is the trouble?' I asked. 'Has there been a fire?' 'No,' he said. 'A tragedy has occurred.' I said, 'All right,' and he said he would send an auto.

"They came before I finished dressing. At this point I differ with the detectives, Black and Starnes, about where the conversation took place. They say it was after we were in the machine. I say it was before we left the house, before my wife. At any rate, here is what was said:

"They asked me if I knew Mary Phagan. I answered that I did not. They asked me if I did not pay off a little girl with long hair down her back the afternoon before. I said I did. They said they wanted me to go to the undertaking establishment to see if I could identify the boyd. They made the trip to the undertaking establishment very quickly. I went in and stood in the doorway. The attendant removed the sheet from the little girl's face and turned the head toward me. His finger was right by the cut on the head. I noticed her nostrils were filled with dirt and cinders and there were several discolorations. I noticed a piece of cord around her neck, the kind we used in the pencil factory. I said it looked like a little girl that came to the factory the day before. They had already told me it was Mary Phagan. We went to the factory and by examining the payroll I found that Mary Phagan had drawn her pay the day before and that the amount was $1.20.

"As we went into the factory I noticed Mr. Darley going in. We went to the office and I found Newt Lee in the custody of the officers. They told me they wanted to go down into the basement. I got the elevator key, but when I tried to start the elevator machinery I found I could not and I told Mr. Darley to see if he could start it.

Admits Nervousness And Defends Himself.

"He started the car, and when we got further down I found that one of the chains had slipped. They showed me where the body was found, where the shoe was found and pointed out every thing that was at that time known. After looking about the basement we got some nails and a hammer, and Mr. Darley nailed up the back door. Back upstairs Mr. Darley, Chief Lanford and myself went on a tour of inspection of the three upper floors. We went through the metal room, the same metal room that has figured so prominently in this trial, and neither Mr. Darley nor myself noticed anything particular on that floor. Nor did Sergeant Lanford, chief of the Atlanta detective force.

"We went to the time clock. I took out the sli and a casual note of this ship would indicate nothing was on it. There was something on it. It had been partially rubbed out. It could not be rubbed out altogether without rubbing out the printed lines. I did write with a pencil across the face of it, '8:26 a. m.' We noticed a slip but overlooked any skips. I folded the time slip as it is now and handed it to Chief Lanford. Now, gentlemen, I have heard a great deal during this trial about nervousness.

"I was nervous. I was completely unstrung. Imagine yourself called from sound slumber in the early hours of the morning, whisked through the chill morning air without breakfast, to go into that undertaking establishment and ave the light suddenly flashed on a scene like that. To see that little girl on the dawn of womanhood so cruelly murdered—it was a scene that would have melted stone. Is it any wonder I was nervous?"

"I got in an automobile and sat on Mr. Darley's knee. I was trembling, perhaps. Later Sunday morning, I went to the home of Mr. Sig Montag and told him what had occurred. I got home about 11 o'clock. My wife and I went over to my sister-in-law's, Mrs. Ursenbach's, and with a number of friends we discussed the tragedy.

"We went back home to dinner and mentioned there the terrible crime. After dinner I read a short time and about 10 minutes to 3o'clock caught a car downtown.

"The conversation on the car was about the little girl that had been found dead in the factory. At 3:10 o'clock I went back to the undertaking establishment and found Joe Stelka there.

"On Monday I went to the police station with Darley and he said he would like to talk to Newt Lee alone. We were shown the two notes found by the side of the slain girl."

Frank then described the notes.

"Now, on one of the notes there was an erasure, but the tracing was still discernable. It was January 11, 1912. The order number was very indistinct, but it was evidently an o.d serial number.

"Returning to my home at 4:15 I met Mr. Haas and he asked me about the murder. Several people on the street also asked me.

"I remained at home until 5 o'clock, then I went to Mr. Montag's home and made a report of the tragedy to him. From there I went to the home of Mr. Marcus where I had received a telephone message from my wife, and I went by there to get her.

"At supper that night the conversation was again about the murder. After supper I read the paper. I called up Mr. Marcus and asked him if he would come down. He said he could not.

"Mr. and Mrs. Selig had a party that night. About 10 o'clock, my wife and I went up to bed. Next morning before I had finished dressing, the door bell rang. It was Detectives Black and Hazelett. They said they wanted me to go to the police station with them.

Kept in Ignorance of Charge Against Hmi.

"I went and on the way I asked them what was the trouble. They said Chief Lanford would tell me.

"I arrived at the police station and sat in an outer office for probably an hour without seeing Chief Lanford. Near 9 o'clock, Mr. Sal Montag and Mr. Herbert Haas came down. Near 10 o'clock I saw Mr. Rosser. He came in and said, "Hello boys, what's the trouble.'

"Mr. Haas took him off to one side. Chief Lanford came out and said to me: 'Come in here.'

"I went into his office. He handed me the time slips and if I am not mistaken this same time slip had the figures still unerased: '8:26 a. m.'

"I took the slip and examined it closely, discovering the slips. There seemed to be some altercation about Mr. Rosser getting into the room with me. I heard him say: 'I am going into that room. That man is my client.' Chief Beavers asked me if I would give him a statement.

"I heard Mr. Rosser say: "Why, it's preposterous. The man who did that would have signs on his body." I jumped up and, opening my clothes, let the detectives see for themselves.

"I then gave them a statement, willingly and freely and without any reluctance. Then one of them said something about examining my linen at my home. I knew that none of it had gone to the laundry at that time and invited the detectives to make a search, which they did. Mr. Herbert Schiff went with them. They were very well satisfied with the search, or rather, they found nothing.

Employed Pinkertons To Aid the Police.

"That afternoon I telephoned Mr. Schiff to get Mr. Montag's permission to employ the Pinkertons to aid the police. I told him I would be down about 3 o'clock.

"I went around to Mr. Wolfsheimers, got into his automobile and went down town. I saw Mr. Schiff, Mr. Darley and a number of others, including Mr. Quinn.

"Mr. Quinn said he wanted to take me back to the metal room where it was claimed blood spots had been discovered and where the hair on the lathe was discovered by Mr. Barrett.

"I examined them closely, particularly the spots. I did not examine them standing up. I got down on my knees and examined them with a strong electric flashlight and I arrived at certain conclusions.

"That floor is grease, soap and dirt covered to a thickness varying from a quarter to half an inch.

"To return to that spot. I don't claim it was not blood. The space where these spots were adjoins the ladies' dressing room. There have been accidents which may not have been brought out in this trial. We do not report every time one of the employees cuts his finger.

"There are all sorts of paints around the factor I have seen girls drop bottles in the hall, not exactly at that point, but near there. But the point about those spots is that when I examined them there was over them an accumulation of dirt not of days or weeks, but of at least three months.

Phoned to Prevent Alarm of Family.

"The white stuff was not fresh. It was dry. And another thing: if that compound had been put on the blood fresh, it would have been pink and not the white that it was.

'Now, when the Atlanta papers containing the statement that I was detained were published, I telegraphed Mr. A. R. Montag to communicate with my uncle that I was no longer; that I had been released. I did this because I knew they would be alarmed if they saw the sensational stories in the papers.

"Harry Scott of the Pinkertons came in and spoke to me in the presence of Mr. Darley. He said he had not read the newspapers. I told him all that had been published and in addition the statement that Mrs. White had seen a negro about 1 o'clock on the first floor.

"After I had told him all I knew, I took him over the factory. On the second floor, I noticed him put several articles in his pocket. One Inoticed was a piece of cord such as I learned had been found around Mary Phagan's neck. I asked him as to the rates of the Pinkertons. He told me and I informed Mr. Montag, who approved them.

"Mr. Scott said that at it was the usual custom of the Pinkertons, he would work hand in hand with the police. I went home and found my family there and sat up until about 10 o'clock, when I went to bed.

Gave Officers All Information Wanted.

"Tuesday a. m. I arose between 7 and 7:30 and caught the 8:10 car. I remember I got to the factory at 8:30. I went right into my routine work and at 9:30 o'clock went on my regular trip to Montag's. I then went back to the factory and to work again.

"After a while Detectives Black and Scott came and told me they wanted me to go to the station house. I went and I have been incarcerated since then.

"I went down in an automobile. They took me to Chief Lanford's office. I answered all the questions they asked. In a few minutes Detectives Scott and Black came in with a bundle.

"They me showed me a piece of material and asked me if I had a shirt like that. I told them I never had. They showed it to Newt Lee and they said he admitted having a shirt like that but declared he had never worn it.

"They then unfolded a bloody shirt.

"About 10 o'clock Mr. Rosser came down and said Chief Beavers thought it best for me to remain at the station, and they thought I might employ a supernumerary to avoid being locked up. I assented, because, of course, I could not do anything else.

"They wanted a sample of my handwriting. I told them I was willing. They dictated it word for word, spelling the unusual words. Detectives Starnes took me down to the desk sergeant and searched me.

"I was locked up in a cell while my father-in-law was providing a supernumerary.

"The detectives came to me and said: 'Mr. Frank, we would like to talk to you a little bit.' We went into a little room and they stressed the possibility of a couple being let in the pencil factory at night. Then they said: 'You talk to Lee. You are his boss. He will talk to you.'

"The detectives told me to go after him strong and tell him we would both go to hell. Detective Black said that.

"I went in and talked to Lee. I tried to get him to talk. I said: 'Newt, you had better tell everything you know or ou will get us both into trouble.' He stuck to his statement that he had told the whole truth.

"Then the detectives came in and I was initiated to the Atlanta police department third degree for the first time. Detective Black went after that poor negro. He called him every vile name he could think of. He fairly streamed with profanity.

"I want to touch upon a few accusations that have been leveled against me, besides this crime. The first is that I would not talk to the detectives. Let us look into that and see if there is any truth in that. I went there Sunday, Monday and Tuesday and discussed the matter freely and openly. I gave them a written statement. I talked to them at midnight. I talked to Newt Lee at their instance. What did they do? They grilled him. They twisted my words. They put words into his mouth he never heard. After that I said I washed my hands of them. They came to me again—Scott and Black. Black said: 'We are suspicious of that man Darley. Now, open up and tell us all you know about him.'

"I said: 'He is the soul of honor.'

"'Come on, Scott; nothing doing,' said Black.

"Then I knew I couldn't trust even our own Pinkerton detectives. After that I treated them with silence. That is why I would not see Conley surrounded by a bevy of city detectives. They would distort; they would falsify. That is the reason I kept my silence.

"Now this second charge that I knew Conley could write.

Tells of Showing Conley Could Write,

"Let's look into that.

"On May 1 I was taken to the Tower. On the same date, as I understand it, the negro Conley was arrested. I didn't know anybody had any suspicions about him. His name was not in the papers. He was an unknown quantity. The police were not looking out for him; they were looking out for me. They didn't want him, and I had no inkling that he ever said he couldn't write.

"I was sitting in that cell in the Fulton County Jail—it was along about April 12, April 13 or April 14 that Mr. Leo Gottheimer, a salesman for the National Pencil Company, came running over, any says: 'Leo, the Pinkerton detectives have suspicions of Conley. He keeps saying he can't write; these fellows over at the factory know well enough that he can write, can't he?'

"I said: 'Sure he can write.'

"We can't prove it. The nigger says he can't write and we feel that he can write.'

"I said, 'I know he can write. I have received many notes from him asking me to loan him money. I have received too many notes from him not to know that he can not write. In other words, I have received notes signed with his name, purporting to have been written by him, though I have never seen him to this date use a pencil.'

"I thought a while and then I said: 'Now, I tell you. If you will look into a drawer in the safe you will find the card of a jeweler from whom Conley bought a watch on the installment plan. Now, perhaps if you go to that jeweler you may find some sort of a receipt that Conley had to give and be able to prove that Conley can write.'

Pinkertons Found Conley's Contracts.

"Well, Gottheimer took that information back to the Pinkertons. They did just as I said; they got the contract with Conley's name on it, got back evidently to Scott, and then he told the negro to write. Gentlemen, the man who found out or paved the way to find out that Jim Conley could write is sitting right here in this chair. That is the truth about it.

"Then that other insinuation, an insinuation that is so dastardly that it is beyond the appreciation of a human being, that is, that my wife didn't visit me. Now the truth of the matter is this, that on April 29, the date I was taken in custody at police headquarters, my wife was there to see me. She was downstairs on the first floor. I was up on the top floor. She was there almost in hysterics, having been brought there by her two brothers-in-law and her father.

"Rabbi Marx was with me at the time. I consulted with him as to the advisability of allowing my dear wife to come up to the top floor to see me in those surroundings with city detectives, reporters and snap-shotters. I thought I would save her that humiliation and that harsh sight, because I expected any day to be turned loose and be returned once more to her side at home.

"Gentlemen, we did all we could do to restrain her in the first days when I was down at the jail from coming on alone down to the jail, but she was perfectly willing even to be locked up with me and share my incarceration.

Says He Knows Nothing of Crime.

"Gentlemen, I know nothing whatever of the death of little Mary Phagan. I had no part in causing her death nor do I know how she came to her death after she took her money and left my office. I never even saw Conley in the factory or anywhere else on that date, April 26, 1913.

"The statement of the witness Dalton is utterly false as far as coming to my office and being introduced to me by the woman, Daisy Hopkins, is concerned. If Dalton was ever in the factory building with any woman, I didn't know it. I never saw Dalton in my life to know him until this crime.

"In reply to the statement of Miss Irene Jackson, she is wholly mistaken in supposing that I ever went to a ladies' dressing room for the purpose of making improper gaze into the girls room. I have no recollection of occasions of which she speaks, but I do know that that ladies' dressing room on the fourth floor is a mere room in which the girls change their outer clothing.

"There was no bath or toilet in that room, and it had windows opening onto the street. There was no lock on the door, and I know I never went into that room at any hour when the girls were dressing. These girls were supposed to be at their work at 7 o'clock. Occasionally I have had reports that the girls were flirting from this dressing room through the windows with men.

"It is also true that sometimes the grls would loiter in this room when they ought to have been doing their work. It is possible that on some occasions I looked into this room to see if the girls were doing their duty and were not using this room as a place for loitering and for flirting.

Says Negro's Story Is Tissue of Lies.

"These girls were not supposed to be dressing in that room after 7 o'clock, and I know that I never looked into that room at any hour when I had any reason to suppose that there were girls dressing therein.

"The statement of the negro Conley is a tissue of ilies from first to last. I know nothing whatever of the cause of the death of Mary Phagan, and Conley's statement as to his coming up and helping me dispose of the body, or that I had anything to do with her or to do with him that day, is a monstrous lie.

"The story as to women coming into the factory with me for immoral purposes is a base lie, and the few occasions that he claims to have seen me in indecent positions with women is a lie so vile that I have no language with which fitly to denounce it.

"I have no rich relatives in Brooklyn, N. Y. My father is an invalid. My father and mother together are people of very limited means, who have barely enough upon which to live. My father is not able to work. I have no relative who has any means at all, except Mr. M. Frank, who lives in Atlanta. Nobody has raised a fund to pay the fees of my attorneys. These fees have been paid by the sacrifice in part of the small property which my parents posses.

"Gentlemen, some newspaper men have called me 'the silent man in the tower.' I kept my silence and my counsel advisedly until the proper time and place. The time is now, the place is here, and I have told you the truth, the whole truth."

Frank bowed slightly to the twelve men to whom he had addressed this remarkable statement and then stepped down from the stand. Court adjourned until 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The Saddest Word and the Gladdest Word---"Good-bye" and "Hello"

By NELL BRINKLEY

Nell Brinkley Says

I KNOW lots of folks who won't say it—that saddest word—"good-bye." "Adieu," they say, and "addio," "farewell" and "so-long," "auf Wiedersehen" and "aloha," "until the next time" and "be good"—but not "good-bye."

Under the word "good-bye" the sun seems dim. Birds droop and do not sing. The heart beats slow and heavy and the temples ache and tighten. The blue sky films with gray. Every face that turns our way and passes on seems to hide tragedy. Everybody else in the world, seems like, is saying good-bye, too.

And we watch them with tenderer eyes since we are bidding some one farewell. After good-bye there is nothing to do, no place to go, no one to see. The world seems bigger and suddenly wiped bare of beauty. We are afraid!

But EVERYBODY will say "HELLO!" They don't go hunting round for another word, any other word, so they can sort of slide by the plain, potent English. Under the short, keen, gladdest word, the sun and the sky are gold and blue. If it rains, why then we suddenly like rain. Under our tight jackets the heart beats high and fast and bursting big. Every face that turns our way seems like it had good news and blinds us.

If, maybe, a sad one lifts out of the glad ones, we forget it soon. Because we are saying "Hello." And if there's a bird singing anywhere we hear it. There is so much to do, so much to see, so many folks to like. The world seems suddenly like a rose and "full," as sweet-tempered R. L. S. says, "of a number of things."

And we are not afraid.

Had the Advantage.

Second Man—Beg pardon, but you have the advantage of me.

First Man—Yes, I suppose I have. We were engaged to the same girl, but you have married her.

Delaying the Torture.

Harry—Do you believe in long engagements?

Tom—Of course. The longer a man is engaged the less time he has to be married.

Like Champagne.

At a meeting presided over by a burly country squire the chief speaker was a budding orator with a seat in the upper house.

Said the chairman, grasping the nervous speaker by the arm on the conclusion of his lordship's address:

"Your speech was like a glass of good champagne"—here the noble lord smiled pleasantly—"lots of froth and very dry."

Then the smile came off.

His Guide Book.

An English bishop who was an extremely busy man, and had to travel a good deal, was addressing the children of a school. He said:

"My dear children, I have been all this week traveling hither and thither through my diocese, and what book do you think has guided me? Come, now, it's a book beginning with 'B.'"

"The Bible, sir," cried a chorus of youthful voices.

"Ah, no," said the Bishop, with a twinkle in his eye. "It's Bradshaw."

Do You Know---

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reason to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms, and underground passages—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet.

Clocks without hands or faces are now common in Switzerland. The timepiece stands in the hall, and when a button is pressed by means of phonographic arrangements it calls out "Half-past five," or "Five minutes to nine," as the case may be.

The greatest number of runners ever contesting in a single race ran through the streets of New York recently in a twelve and three-eighths-mile marathon. The runners taking part were 1,500 in number, and there were 300 prizes.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

PERHAPS HE IS SHY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am working in a place of business with a man of whom I think a great deal. Any time I write him to call to see me he appears to be quite delighted and calls, but never makes any effort to call unless I ask him. Don't you think he should ask me if he can call? PUZZLED.

Such a request from him would show an interest in you which he now seems to lack. You say he always accepts and is delighted. That encourages me in the belief that he thinks a great deal of you, but is bashful.

Don't ask him for a time. I have an idea he will speedily ask you.

LET IT BE NO.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young lady of sixteen and keeping company with a young man of eighteen for one year. This young man has asked me to marry him, but I would like for him to change his position. He promised me he would in the spring. Kindly let me know if I shall give any decided answer. ANXIOUS.

You are sixteen and can well afford to wait. You do not state what the man's position is, so my advice is based only on your years. I want love to come to you, but, believe me, my dear, it will be all the sweeter if your judgment is more mature.

MAKE THE OVERTURES.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a girl and she is in love with me. We had been keeping steady company, but lately we got mad, and we do not speak to each other. I would like a reconciliation and so would she. B. S. L.

You are a man, and stronger to bear the burden. Take on your shoulders the burden of the blame, persuading yourself that you offended and deserve it. Tell her you alone are to blame, beg forgiveness, and promise never to offend again. If you are not willing to say "I was wrong," then you are not fitted to say "I love you."

He Wasn't Shy.

Old Lady (to cabman)—Does your horse ever shy at motors?

Cabby—Lor' bless you, no, lady; 'e didn't even shy when railway trains fust come in.

HOW ARE YOU FEEDING YOUR CHILDREN?

Are you giving them nourishing food—food that will develop their muscles, bones and flesh—food that is easily digested and cheap?

Ever thought about Spaghetti—Faust Spaghetti? Do you know that a 10c package of Faust Spaghetti contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef? Your doctor will tell you it does. And Faust Spaghetti costs one-tenth the price of meat. Doesn't that solve a big item in the high cost of living?

You probably haven't served Faust Spaghetti as often as you should because you don't know how many different ways it can be cooked—write for free recipe book to-day and you'll be surprised at the big variety of dishes you can make from this nutritious food. In 5c and 10c packages.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Dancing.

BEAUTY must be a harmonious whole. In the figures of the dance one ungraceful step can mar the perfection of the rhythmical charm one is trying to produce. In the physical rhythm of the human body an ugly arm or hand can spoil the spell of loveliness.

The question I always ask myself is: Why, in a world where we are all under the sway of physical lure, do we so calmly accept our own imperfections and those of our children?

We work intelligently for evolution and growth in health and strength and brain power; but beauty and grace we accept in the old superstitious fairy-tale fashion as the gift of the good fairies—and we fold our hands in the supposedly philosophical decision that either we have it or we have it not. Not at all! Either we have beauty or we set about getting it—if we have brains enough to acquire anything!

It is a simple thing to train the human body in the right way—the way it should go—in the beginning, but it is hard to alter bodily faults once they have come. However, if you have come to maturity without proper training in bodily grace, and the health and ease and beauty it brings, do not despair—instead, dedicate 30 minutes morning and evening—(one hour out of your day) to the beautiful art of the dance, and soon your reward will be great not only in terms of the pleasure of pleasant, graceful movement, but in health, beauty and a gloriously symmetrical figure, too.

Proper Training.

And make sure that your little children, and the dear young things all about you, have the proper beginnings to insure for them healthy and beautiful and graceful bodily growth.

Since an ugly arm or hand can so easily spoil the perfection of beauty, suppose, to-day, I show you how beautiful arms and hands may be evolved through proper training. It seems a far cry from dancing to beautiful arms and hands, but I shall try to show you how they may be gained in the rhythmical movement and exercise of the classical dance.

As most of the movements of the classical dance are executed with high-flexed arch and, the body's weight falling on the ball of the foot, while the instep is held in a firm high curve, they give of themselves a slender grace and power to the too-much-neglected foot. In both of the exercises I give you to-day the body must be poised lightly and springily upon the ball of the foot, inclining forward toward the toes. Walking and dancing thus will banish the flat-foot that seems to be a foe of modern high-heeled civilization.

The first picture shows one stage of a very wonderful arm exercise. Poise the weight on the balls of the feet, swaying slightly back and forward from toes to heels as the arms are raised with drooping wrists to shoulder height. When the arms are straight lines from shoulder sockets, raise the wrists and arms simultaneously until the backs of the hands just touch above the head.

A Dancing Step.

Now drop the arms slowly, with rhythmical muscular control, to the shoulder height again and turn the arms so the palms are alternately up and down parallel to the floor. Then, with palms down, sink the arms gradually to the sides, at the same time inclining the weight gradually to the entire foot. Practice this with gradually receding and increasing tempo, and finally do it as you walk forward on tiptoe, or as near as you can manage to this toe position.

The second picture is a little dancing step that can be practiced at a walking tempo until enough facility is gained to do it merrily and lightly as a dance. Advance on the ball of the feet with toes pointing outward. Incline the body forward, and keep the head a bit forward in the line of the slight curve of the back. The arms swing up in gentle curves until the elbow is about at waist height.

As the weight is swaying to the forward left foot, swing the left arm out with its line a slight droop from elbow to wrist, and the right arm in, with the forearm curving up almost perpendicular to the ground, and the wrist drooping. Swing the arms in and out thus from side to side as the weight of the body springs from foot to foot. In all these arm exercises hold the hand relaxed from the wrist, with light, pliant fingers, middle fingers fairly close together, small and index fingers gently curved and relaxed with the index finger pointing up ever so slightly.

The faithful practice of these two exercises will register for you a distinct step toward the acquisition of poetically graceful arms and hands.

The figure to the left shows the culmination of the exercise for developing beautiful arms through rhythmic motion.

To the right is shown a classical dancing step in which the hands and arms are also exercised.

HOW THIS WOMAN FOUND HEALTH

Would Not Give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for All Rest of Medicine in the World.

Utica, Ohio.—"I suffered everything from a female weakness after baby came. I had numb spells and was dizzy, had black spots before my eyes, my back ached and I was so weak I could hardly stand up. My face was yellow, even my finger nails were colorless and I had displacement. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am stout, well and healthy. I can do all my own work and can walk to town and back and not get tired. I would not give your Vegetable Compound for all the rest of the medicines in the world. I tried doctor's medicines and they did me no good."—Mrs. Mary Earlewine, R. F. D. No. 3, Utica, Ohio.

Another Case.

Nebo, Ill.—"I was bothered for ten years with female troubles and the doctors did not help me. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and every month I had to spend a few days in bed. I read so many letters about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound curing female troubles that I got a bottle of it. It did me more good than anything else I ever took and now it has cured me. I feel better than I have for years, and tell everybody what the Compound has done for me. I believe I would not be living to-day but for that."—Mrs. Hettie Green-street, Nebo, Illinois.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

OH, husband, sed Ma to Pa last nite, I have the cutest thing to tell you. Our deer littel son has a littel sweetheart. He met her to-day. She is a littel city gurl that lives neer our city hoam, & Bobbie rowed her all oaver the lake this morning. How perfeckly cunning, Ma sed. To think of our gallant littel son beeing a Romeo.

I aint no Romeo, I toald Ma. I wish you wuddent say that.

The littel deers looked so cute out thare on the lake, Ma sed. Bobbie helped her into the boat & out of it jest like a prince helping out a princess, Ma sed. Did you enjoy yure day, Bobbie, you and littel Grayce?

No I diddent, I toald Ma, & she aint any sweetheart of mine, eether. It was her father's bote & she didn't know how to row it & I wanted to row, so I got in & rowed the bote. I dident like her vary much, I toald Ma, beekaus she laffed at me wen I spelled her naim rong. I spelled it without a Y, I sed, & that is the way to spell Grace.

Bobbie, Pa sed, I tell you what to do. If you want to win littel Grayce, you must rite her a poem. I will rite her a poem for you to reed to her, sed Pa, & you can say you rote it.

Bobbie will lose her sure if he tries that, sed Ma. He has a littel boy frend that rites good poetry, littel Georgie Crowley, & he can git him to rite the poem.

No, sed Pa, I will rite the poem. So Pa went & got a sheet of paper and rote this poem for me to show to Grace:

Littel Grayce, charming Grayce,
I luv yure voice, I luv your fayce.
Thou art the idol of my hart,
& from thy side I'll never part.
Sum day wen I am grown to manhood
& deeside to marry, as every man shood,
I'll cum to you, deer, with a smile,
And ask to lead you up the aisle.
Thou art the sweetest gurl in this place,
My darling Grayce.

I aint going to show her that, I toald Pa. I doant luv her & she aint my sweethart. I aint going to start in so yung telling gurls that I luv them wen I doant luv them at all, I sed.

You have got to do that, sed Pa, to git along. Why, wen I was yure age I toald all the gurl I luved them, Pa I toald all the gurls I luved them, Pa me, but I could see thay did. I was vary hansum as a boy, sed Pa, & I had a grate way with the ladies. I used to write them verses & thay threw down all thare other beaus for me. I will give you a quarter, Bobbie, if you show this poem to littel Grayce, & if she doesnt call you a darling boy I will give you a dollar beesides.

So I showed Grayce the poem & sed I rote it, & she laffed & sed it sounded jest like sumthing that a green kid rote, so I made a dollar and a quarter from Pa.

Clever Hostess.

A German band happened to play under the windows of a house in a fashionable neighborhood the other afternoon, when Mrs. B. was "at home." They were a fair specimen of their kind—blaring and noisy, yet correct in their time and altogether in movement from long practice. The butler started out to drive them away, for they interrupted the music within, but Mrs. B. ordered him to invite them in. A happy thought struck her.

"Ladies and gentlemen," she said, five minutes later, "a party of our friends have consented to give an imitation of a street band. I now have the pleasure of introducing them."

Then the six members of the organization filed awkwardly into place and played a piece. The audience delightedly declared that the mimicry was perfect, especially the make-up of the players, who were recalled half a dozen times.

"Would you take them for anything but genuine street stragglers?" was asked of a belle.

"Indeed, yes," she confidently replied; "they're clever in their mimicry, but one can always tell gentlemen, no matter how disguised. I'm dying to find out who they are."

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX.

AUGUST 10.—I have wondered ever since the accident why Sally did not come to me, and learned this morning. She had sailed for Europe the day before and was on the ocean the day Richards received Mrs. Allen's telegram to come at once.

I am glad she is away. If she were here and did not come I would suffer all the pangs of an abused and neglected boy, and if she came, goodness alone knows what I would say or do in my weakness. I am sure I would demand the rights of a sick man to her devotion, or fret myself into a fever if she refused.

I had a note from her to-day, written in Paris.

"My dear big brother," she wrote, "I can't tell you how alarmed I was at reading in the cable news in a Paris paper of your accident. I hope that the charge of exaggeration always made against the press is true this time. I receive daily cables regarding your condition from the doctor, and he assures me you are getting along all right. You know, my dear big brother, I need you. You are more than all the world to me.

"SALLY."

Isn't that just like a woman? She puts in that word "brother" twice to make me realize that I am no more than a brother to her, and then adds "You are more than all the world to me" to keep me crazy about her.

She has a husband, and can't have me, but she likes to be loved, and intends to keep me loving her.

Past Proofs.

In looking backward I find every reason for believing that her opposition to the widow was not actuated entirely by sisterly feelings. The look of warnings she sent me, and many, many telegrams to beware of the woman who was pursuing me, are proof to me that Sally loved me then, and I did not know it.

"You are so stupid," she said to me once, "that if a woman were in love with you and tried her best to show it you would never see it. Now, suppose, for instance, that I loved you and had been trying to tell you for more than a year."

"But you don't," I added, "you love Jack."

"Yes," she repeated, dully, "I love Jack. He is my husband, and, of course, I love him. The law many centuries ago ordained that a wife should love her husband, and I wouldn't presume to question the law."

She laughed a little bitterly. "But suppose," she repeated, "that I loved you, and told you so."

Sally is a very handsome woman. I recall that on this occasion, she was lying in a hammock, and I sat in a chair near her. We were on her porch, waiting, I believe, for Jack to return from town.

"If you loved me," I said, "I think I would make you realize as you have never realized what it is to have a man's love. But this is nonsense, for, of course, there is Jack."

"Yes," she said, "there is Jack. Max go home! You are so good-looking to-night you are dangerous."

I laughed, for I thought it was only more of her nonsense.

"Go home," she repeated. I got up and started for the steps rather sulky to be treated so, and she caught up with me when I had descended the second step and threw both arms around my neck. "You are just two steps taller than I," she laughed. Then she pressed my face against hers and whispered that I was a dear, big stupid.

And do you know, Diary, I wonder now what it was that made me so stupid. I had been so sure for years that she belonged to Jack, not because her marriage ties bound her, but because she loved him and had no room in her thoughts for any other man, that it never entered my head that she cared for me.

I know she suffered and grew thin and haggard when Jack was gone with the widow, but if I had had any sense I believe I could have made those ten days the happiest of her life.

And now, instead of being grateful that I have been saved from wrong-doing, I look at myself with disgust because I didn't recognize my opportunities. She was humiliated because of the manner in which her husband slighted her; her heart was mine all the time, and she couldn't tell me, and I was too big a dolt to see.

When I get well, if I get well—— "You know, Max," the doctor said to me very frankly this morning, "something went wrong with your spine in that fall, and we have a fight ahead of us."

So there is an "if" connected with my future that is the biggest "if" I have met in my troubled existence. It is all right. If I win I will fight for Sally. Right or wrong, that is my intention. If I lose, I hope I will have ample warning that the struggle is going against me, so that they may get Sally here and I can slide out into the nowhere from her arms.

Takes Her Nap.

August 12—I do not suffer any great pain, only the pain of weariness, and the nurse is so patient and tender I am ashamed to complain of that.

I am bolstered up in bed a few hours every morning and write these lines at long intervals apart. It is a comfort to me to write that which I can not speak about and it shortens the long days.

Manette always takes her nap at this time of the day, the nurse is gone for her morning walk, and Richards sits beside me—patient, faithful Richards.

"If anything happens to me, Richards," I said this morning, turning to her, "you must never leave Manette. You—" I had never told anyone this before—"will find yourself a rich woman."

"I will never leave Manette under any circumstances," she said somewhat brokenly, "and I don't want to be a rich woman. I only want you to get well so that we may all go back home, and be happy there again. I am so thankful every day, Mr. Max, that I work for the kindest and best man that ever breathed."

It was a tribute that pleased me. I tried to tell her so, and the next moment she was on her knees beside my bed, sobbing with her face in the bed covers.

THE TUNNEL

Greatest Story of Its Kind Since Jules Verne

Read what the New York Times said about this great story---The Times printed an extract of it---We give you the story itself---You can begin it by reading the first installment to-morrow in The Georgian!

8 THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, AUGUST 3, 1913.

GERMANY READS OF A TUNNEL FROM AMERICA TO EUROPE

"Best Seller" in Berlin Is Bernhard Kellermann's "Der Tunnel," a Daring Flight of Fancy in Which Is Told How the Two Hemispheres Were Connected by an Oceanic Subway.

SCENE: the roof garden above the thirty-sixth floor of a colossal hotel in New York—New York of the future. There are gathered the richest magnates in the country, men who among them possess billion upon billion of dollars. One of them arrives in his aeroplane, from which he lands on the very roof garden itself. One of them is Lloyd, a veritable J. P. Morgan, renowned throughout the world as the most daring and formidable and successful of financiers.

They are gathered to learn about a plan evolved by an engineer, a man comparatively young, comparatively unknown, who needs their financial backing. Allan is his name—Mac Allan.

Rising modestly from his place, amid breathless attention from all these men, the money kings of the day, whom he scarcely hoped to meet, much less to interest in his project, Allan takes from his trousers pocket a piece of chalk, goes to a blackboard, and draws two lines. One, he says, is America, the other Europe.

"Between these two," he adds, "I bind myself to build, within the space of fifteen years, a submarine tunnel and to send trains through it from one continent to the other in twenty-four hours!"

The flashlights of the photographers gathered on the roof burst forth and thousands of people packed in the streets thirty-six stories below knew that the first act in the great drama has begun, and roar their excitement.

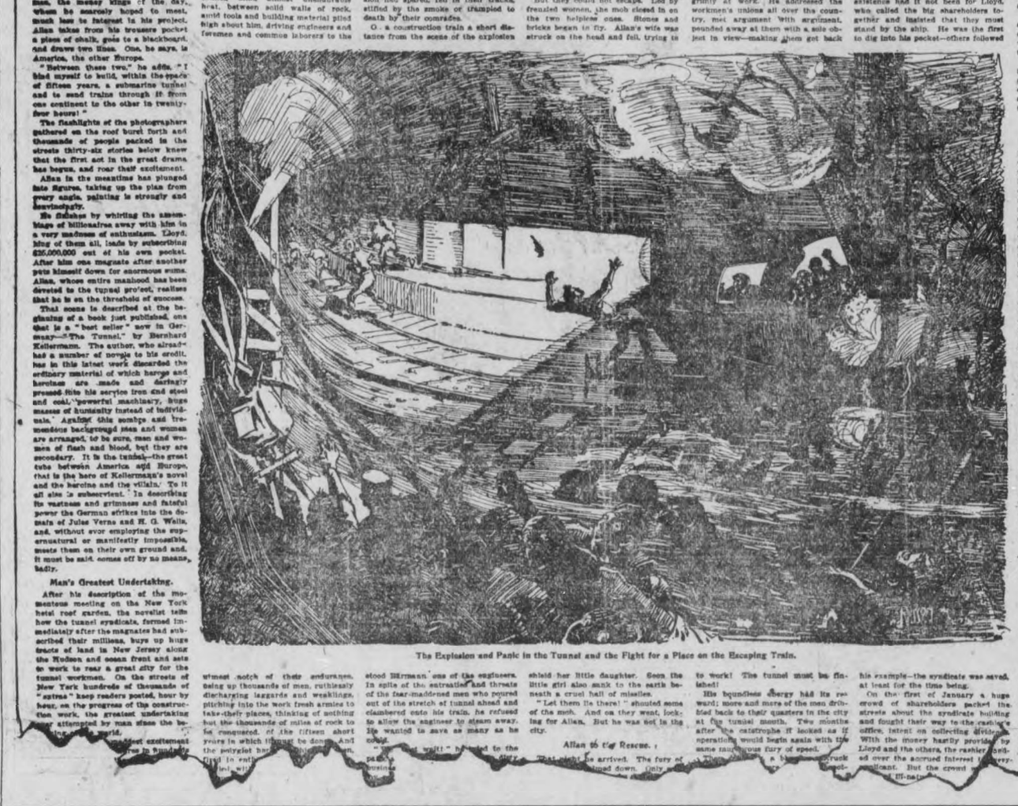

Allan in the meantime has plunged into figures, taking up the plan from every angle, painting it strongly and convincingly.

He finishes by whirling the assemblage of billionaires away with him in a very madness of enthusiasm. Lloyd, king of them all, leads by subscribing $50,000,000 out of his own pocket. After him one magnate after another puts himself down for enormous sums. Allan, whose entire manhood has been devoted to the typed project, realizes that he is on the threshold of success.

That scene is described at the beginning of a book just published, one that is a "best seller" now in Germany—"The Tunnel," by Bernhard Kellermann. The author, who already had a number of novels to his credit, has in this latest work discarded the ordinary material of which heroes and heroines are made and daringly pressed into his service iron and steel and coal, "powerful machinery, huge masses of humanity instead of individuals." Against this motley and tremendous background men and women are arranged, to be sure, men and women of flesh and blood, but they are secondary. It is the tunnel—the great tube between America and Europe, that is the hero of Kellermann's novel and the heroine and the villain. To it all else is subservient. In describing its wantons and grimaces and fateful power the German strikes into the domain of Jules Verne and H. G. Wells, and, without ever employing the supernatural or manifestly impossible, musts them on their own ground and, it must be said, comes off by no means badly.

Man's Greatest Undertaking.

After his description of the momentous meeting on the New York hotel roof garden, the novelist tells how the tunnel syndicate, formed immediately after the magnates had subscribed their millions, buys up huge tracts of land in New Jersey along the Hudson and soons [sic] front and sets to work to rear a great city for the tunnel workmen. On the streets of New York hundreds of thousands of "extras" keep readers posted, hour by hour, on the progress of the construction work, the greatest undertaking ever attempted by man since the beginning of the world.

The Explosion and Panic in the Tunnel and the Fight for a Place on the Escaping Train.

Great excitement [illegible] stood Hermann, one of the engineers. In spite of the entreaties and threats of the fear-maddened men who poured out of the stretch of tunnel ahead and clambered onto his train, he refused to allow the engineer to steam away. He wanted to save as many as he could.

[illegible] shield her little daughter. Soon the little girl also sank to the earth beneath a cruel hail of missiles.

"Let them in there!" shouted some of the men. And on they went, looking for Allan. But he was not in the city.

Allan to the Rescue.

[illegible] to work! The tunnel must be finished!

His boundless energy had its reward; more and more of the men drifted back to their quarters in the city at the tunnel mouth. Two months after the catastrophe it looked as if operations would begin again with the same tumultuous fury of speed.

Fresh cause—genuine panic. Compared with it the panic of 1907, that shook the American money market, was a passing flurry. Hardly a day passed without the failure of some business house. Suicides like Woolf's became more and more common. A banker shot himself in Chinan; a New York broker poisoned himself and his entire family. As for the tunnel syndicate, it would have gone out of existence had it not been for Lloyd, who called the big shareholders together and insisted that they must stand by the ship. He was the first to dig into his pocket—others followed his example—the syndicate was saved, at least for the time being.

On the first of January a huge crowd of shareholders packed the streets about the syndicate building and fought their way to the cashier's office, intent on collecting dividends. With the money hastily provided by Lloyd and the others, the rashest period over the accrued interest [illegible] payment. But the crowd [illegible] ill-nature.

stillness. The great tunnel was dead.

Even Allan despaired. He locked himself in his house, refusing to see anybody. In vain Ethel Lloyd, the one person who still seemed to believe in him, sought to see him. She could not.

But she persisted. Finally, one day, she actually waylaid him as he was walking, with downcast eyes, from the tunnel mouth to his house. He could not decently refuse to speak to her. He asked her to come in. And, once she had his ear, Ethel plunged into her task with flashing eyes and eloquent words.

"You must save the tunnel!" she cried. And for the first time in months he woke to life and his eyes kissed.

"But we have no money," he objected.

"Have you seen my father?" she asked.

She had struck home. Soon Allan and the great Lloyd were in a conference, from the news flew over the world: "Lloyd has agreed to back the tunnel—signed."

The work started up again with a fury of energy that left all that had gone before in the shade. One hundred thousand men went at it again and labored with a murderous concentration of energy.

America Linked to Europe.

The dead tunnel cities awoke. With Lloyd as leader, multi-millionaires who had been afraid to risk a cent in the undertaking poured their millions into it. In the tubes the boring machines thundered against the walls of rock, surrounded again by armies of naked workers, dripping with sweat, shining in the red glow of the lanterns. And behind all stood Allan, whipping them into a hell of speed; once more, as his trolls rolled past, they swung their hats and cheered—but now they called him "old gray Mac."

Years went by—fifteen, twenty, since the beginning of the work. Nearer and nearer the tunnel heads drew to each other, one, where Strom was commander, stretching out from Jersey eastward, the other from the Azores westward, driven forward by an engineer known as "fat Mueller."

At last the two were so close that engineers glued their eyes on the dull-plate registering machines by the hour together, hoping to detect the sound of the work in the other tunnel. No sign—and yet the others must be almost within reach!

Had the calculations failed? Had the two tunnels missed each other? The newspapers were filled with alarming rumors.

Allan ordered side tunnels dug, that groped in the dark for the men digging toward America from Europe. At last one day the noise of a blast in Mueller's tunnel was heard in Strom's. Feverishly the men dug toward the sound. At last, breaking down a wall of earth and rock, they saw, through a narrow hole, other men—Mueller's men!

Hours of enthusiasm burst forth at both ends of the hole; Pat Mueller, poking his head into the opening, asked:

"Where is Mac?"

"Here," answered Allan, sticking his head into the other opening—the one nearest America.

"How do you do, Mac?" said Mueller, with a laugh.

"We are all right," said Mac.

That was all. In the evening the newspapers on both sides of the ocean printed this conversation, held thousands of feet under the sea. The workmen had soon dug the hole big enough to allow of Mueller's sending Mac a bottle of Munich beer.

Twenty-four years had elapsed since the tunnel work had been begun.

From then on the world was in a fever of excitement. Every [illegible] the tunnel work was resumed.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"You are an observing man," he remarked to Peter, "and seem to have noticed this girl closely. Was this bag she carried a small, yellow one?"

"It was not, thin," that person emphatically replied, while the butler shook his head. "It was small, that it was, but not a mark of yellow about it at all. I see it manys the time. It's black it was."

"And would you know it if you saw it again?"

"I'll not say that, sur; but I could tell if it wur the same kind of one."

Mr. Gryce smiled and produced from his capacious pocket the bag which had been found by him in the doctor's phaeton.

"Was it like this one?" he asked, holding it up between the two men, with the initials toward Peter, and the blank side toward the butler.

"No," was the former's reply, and "Oui," that of the latter.

He whirled the bag about.

"I never have seen ze filigree on him like zat!" now exclaimed the butler.

"By the powers that's it," was, on the contrary, Peter's response.

Mr. Gryce laughed and put the bag back in his pocket.

Another Clew.

"You don't agree," he said.

"We do that," returned Peter.

But Mr. Gryce would not be convinced. He saw that if this was the bag that they had been in the habit of seeing on the arm of the girl who had visited Miss Gretorex, that it had always been carried with the initial-side in, and this again seemed a great improbability. He was about convinced that he was on a false trail. Disappointed and dissatisfied, he therefore cut the conversation short, and in a few minutes was about to leave this house for the second time in anything but a happy frame of mind. But this time he did not go out by the side door. He was in the kitchen, and he naturally sought the kitchen exit. In doing this, his eyes fell upon the gravel walk that ran about the house. "Humph!" was his mental ejaculation.

But he saw something the next moment—having by this time stepped into the yard—which called from him something more than an exclamation. This was a small piazza, built one or two steps from the ground, for the use, as it appeared, of the servants of the house. It was square in shape and had a high balustrade about it, terminating in pillars that supported the roof. It was the color of this balustrade which drew his attention. It was of a bright and peculiar brown and had seemed to have been but lately painted.

"Can it be that I have here found what I have so long been searching for?" he queried. And stepping upon the piazza he ran his eye along the balustrade with the most careful scrutiny. Suddenly he paused, looked closer, and gave utterance to a sound expressive of satisfaction and keen wonder. From the supporting pillar nearest the steps a portion of paint had been rubbed, of the size and shape of the smudge on Mildred Farley's dress, and dried into the thin coating yet remaining was a woolly fuzz so evidently blue in color that even this old and experienced worker among marvels was taken aback, and thought he had never seen anything finer nor more conclusive.

It was with a very grave face he stepped back into the kitchen.

"Excuse me," said he, "but what a fine porch you have outside. I think I will come and visit you some evening next summer. Fun out there, eh?"

"Well, now," do you hear that?" laughed good-natured Peter.

"And how prettily it is painted; looks fresher than the rest of the house."

"Yes, the master intended using it at the time o' the wedding—what for I don't know—and it being well used up by that same fun ye wur axin about, the count there bought a pot o' paint and wint over it on his own account. It didn't dry good like, and the master thanked the count, so he did, but didn't use the porch. 'I'm thinkin' he gave the count foive dollars for disa'pintin' him do ye moind?"

And Peter, evidently thinking he has got the laugh on the butler this time, laughed himself, long and loud.

But Mr. Gryce did not laugh. A problem dark with mysteries was before him, and he had no disposition to mirth, and but little patience with those who had.

Tests and Surprises.

IT was indeed a serious discovery he had made; how serious he could not yet determine. That the girl who had brought home Miss Gretorex's dresses, and who had been with her on the very evening she was married, was the same one who had been carried dead into Mrs. Olney's parlor at or near midnight of that same day, there could be no doubt.

But had she died here? It did not follow, though the fact that Miss Gretorex, or as she was now called, Mrs. Cameron, showed such a disposition to deny acquaintanceship with the girl, seemed to argue the existence of something strangely unpleasant between them. Yet it need not have been anything connected with the tragic end of the girl. Ladies of Mrs. Cameron's stamp are invariably cowards when it comes to appearing in a police court, or before a magistrate as a witness. Even men sometimes shrink from this ordeal, and resort to every subterfuge to hide the fact that they know anything about a crime of the party suspected of it. And she had this excuse, that she was a bride and naturally hated any such unpleasant publicity in connection with her marriage.

A Puzzle.

Yet the desire of Molesworth to communicate his position to the Camerons! Was it purely on account of the medical case he mentioned? Mr. Gryce felt himself at liberty to doubt it. And the scream which had arisen from this house during the marriage ceremony! Whence did it come and what did it mean? He had not realized its importance at the time, but now he felt that he must make every effort to discover both its source and occasion. Turning to the two men, he remarked in his off-hand way:

"By the way, I heard something curious about the wedding here. A friend of mine told me that there was a big scream in the house right in the middle of the ceremony. Was that so?"

"Oui, monsieur," quoth Jean, "zat Marguerite scream all ze time, and she scream zen."

Peter smiled indulgently.

"Is it Margaret, ye say? Whin will yez git over talkin' about her screamin' like a fool. Sure she wasn't in the house at all. Every one of us knows that, and it's time ye did, too."

Jean shrugged his shoulders disdainfully.

"It was ze voice of Marguerite, I know him very well. I hear him many times, and I hear him zat time of ze wedding and always ze same."

"How the devil could she scream if she wasn't in the house?

"Do Marguerite say she was not in ze house?"

"No, but don't we know she wasn't? Jim Dolan says she was in his little back room when the scream you spake of was heard. Haven't I told ye that over an' over again, ye spalpeen?"

"When Jeem Doling say me zat, zen I must hear him." And so the obstinate man had the last word.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

A naval officer I know canceled a lot of engagements last week in order to devote the time to his dentist.

"I am going on a long cruise," he said, "and I know the value of good teeth. Good teeth mean good health afloat or ashore and a man can't do his work well unless he has good health."

In the army and the navy, and in all great industrial spheres the value of good teeth is being recognized. Statistics prove that sound, clean teeth, preserve health and promote business efficiency.

The twice-a-year visit to the dentist and the twice-a-day use of Colgate's Ribbon Dental Cream, the efficient, deliciously flavored dentifrice, insure sound clean teeth, better health and better looks.

You too should use COLGATE'S RIBBON DENTAL CREAM

ELLIOTT DENT FACES MOLES IN 2ND GAME

ELLIOTT DENT is carded as Manager Smith's pitching entry against the Barons in the second game of the series, which starts at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. Harry Chapman will be back of the wood, and the manager said this morning that he fully expected Tommy Long to be in his regular place in left field.

Tommy was out in uniform yesterday, but Manush was going so well that it was not considered necessary to try out the convalescent one. Frank had a great day with the stick yesterday and aided materially in the battering of the unfortunate Howell.

Manager Molesworth was not positive of his choice in the matter of slabman. Pitcher Ery, the recruit, got in yesterday and may get a chance to-morrow. Big Bill Prough, absent from the club by reason of a sister's illness, hadn't arrived at noon today.

There is a lot of talk around town about the prospective "birthday party" to be tendered Bill Smith at the ball park to-morrow, when "Bill Smith Day" will be observed, with a band and other trimmings, and the thousands of Atlanta fans who have pulled for the hard-working manager and rejoiced in his success will have an opportunity to show by their attendance the appreciation they feel for his efforts. Preparations are being made to handle a big crowd, as it seems everybody is going.

BOBBY GILKS, CLEVELAND SCOUT, IS IN ATLANTA

We have with us this week, or part of it, one Bobby Gilks, erstwhile popular manager of the Shreveport club in the Southern League, and now a trusted scout for the Cleveland ball club.

Bobby looks the same as ever; a quiet, alert, sun-burned man, preserving an athletic build with no tendencies to a bay window effect, and with very keen eyes set in the deep puckers that come from years of peering over a blazing diamond.

"Just looking around," said Mr. Gilks yesterday a she sat on the back of a bench in the smoker, looking over the Crackers at practice. "I can't say anything more specific—except," he added, reflectively, "I will say they're awfully scarce."

Mr. Gilks also was of the opinion that the desperately fine coming the minor leagues were receiving this year would result more in bursting than broken batting and base-stealing records. He expects to remain here nearly all week, by the end of which his scouting will be over for the present season.

STARTS ON LONG SWIM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Harry Elionsky, 19, of New London, Conn., started at 12:48 a. m. to-day on the swim from Battery Park to Sady Hook, a distance of about 21 miles. Elionsky attempted the swim some time ago, but was forced to quit the water when within a mile of his goal.

"Society Night" at Motordrome

Maddox Sweepstake Feature

REALIZING that society folk will wear thousands of dollars worth of diamonds and jewelry tonight at the motorcycle races, Manager Noon Hudson has hired 50 plainclothes men to protect his patrons. Chief of Police Beavers and Chief of Detectives Lanford will both be on hand to assist.

It is "Society Night;" at least that is the way the program is captioned And it is expected that all of Atlanta's "400" will be on hand.

Owing to the accident to Jock McNeil late Wednesday afternoon it has been decided to keep everybody away from the paddock and nobody but officials and the riders themselves will be allowed within the sacred portals of the danger lines.

The new machines that the riders have secured can be speeded up to such an extent that a blow-out or any other accident to a machine is likely to cause a spill, and, of course, danger threatens all who may be in the way of the flying "boats." Therefore, everybody will be forced to remain behind the railings.

THE feature to-night will be the Robert Maddox Sweepstakes. This is the real "sassiety" event of the season at the Saucer. It will be run in three heats. The first will be over a two-mile course, the next, four miles, and the third, six miles.

The winner will be found by the point system. The winner of each heat will secure ten points; second man, six; third, three.

The riders in this race will be Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

ANOTHER interesting event will be the special match race between Harry Glenn, the local favorite, and Harry Swartz, whose machine right now is one of the fastest at the track.

There will be two heats and maybe three. The winner will have to capture two heats. The first heat will be one mile, the second two miles, and if necessary there will be a third heat of three miles.

THE other event carded is the first of the Southern championships. It is the intention of the management to run a title race every night until the latter part of September. The riders will be scored by points. The winner of each heat each night will be credited with 25 points, the second man, 15, and the third, 5.

There will be three trial heats of one mile and the final will be two miles. The winner of each heat and the second man in the fastest heat to qualify.

FOLLOWING is the complete program:

First Event.

First Heat: Special Match Race (one mile)—Glenn and Swartz.

Second Event.

First Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Graves, Swartz and Lockner.

Third Event.

Second Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Richards, Luther and Renel.

Fourth Event.

Third Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Lewis and Glenn.

Fifth Event.

Final Heat: Southern Championships (two miles. Winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat. Twenty-five points for winner, 15 for second man and 5 for third man.)

Sixth Event.

First Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (two miles; ten points for winner, six points for second man, three for third man.)—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Seventh Event.

Second Heat: Special Match Race (two miles)—Glenn and Swartz.

Eighth Event.

Second Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (four miles)—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Ninth Event.

Third Heat: Special Match Race. (If necessary.)

Tenth Event.

Third Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (six miles)—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Big Aquatic Meet at Lakewood Wednesday

There will be a big aquatic meet at Lakewood Wednesday afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock. Atlanta's fastest and strongest swimmers will take part. The meet will be held under the supervision of the United States Life Saving Corps.

The events carded are: One-mile relay race, 440-yard race, 100-yard race, 50-yard race and 25-yard race for girls. Beautiful silver cups will be the prizes offered in all of the events except the girls' race. The winner of that event will be given a cutglass powder jar.

The one-mile relay race will probably be the big feature. Porter Enslow and C. R. McDermott, of Piedmont lake, will battle Captain B. H. Schlomberg and Lieut. Tait Walthour of Lakewood. This struggle should be a hard-fought one from start to finish.

There will also be a life-saving demonstration, given by Captain Schlomberg.

COMPANY M WINS GAME.

CAMP PERRY, OHIO, Aug. 19.—Company M, Seventeenth Infantry, defeated the Marine baseball team here by the score of 11 to 3.

The feature of the game was the heavy hitting of Company M.

DODGERS BUY PITCHER.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Aug. 18.—The Brooklyn club to-day purchased Pitcher Brady from the Oshkosh club of the Wisconsin-Illinois League, but the price was not given.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—George "Knockout" Brown and Jack Dillon will meet in a ten-round no-decision bout at Terre Haute on Labor Day afternoon.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

Terry Nelson was offered $200 to "take a dive" in his recent fight with Mike Saul. And we know the young man who tried to bribe the Greek.

Get busy with the shears and paste, G. W. Krick, here are some more notes for you to place your J. Hancock above.

Dan McKetrick, the dapper little fight manager, is going to take another trip to Europe. He has been across the big pond so often that he forgets the number of times. On his next journey to the other side he'll take with him the largest string of fighters that any manager ever piloted to a foreign country.

The boxers that little Dan will take abroad are Joe Jeannette, Frank Moran, both heavyweights; Barney Williams, a middleweight; Young Ahearn, a welterweight, and Mickey Dunn, a bantam.

Ad Wolgast has evidently thought better of another meeting with Harlem Tommy Murphy, and has decided he doesn't want any more of the Harlem boy's game. Anyway, Ad called off a proposed meeting with Tommy set for Labor Day and will, instead, take on Johnny Dundee on September 9.

Curley Jordan writes from Jacksonville, Fla., that he would dearly love to exchange wallops with Terry Nelson. When informed of Jordan's challenge, Nelson informed the writer that Jordan can have some of his game if he will post a $50 side bet. Ever since Terry stopped Mike Saul he has become one confident kid.

Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette have been practically matched by Billy Gibson to box at Madison Square Garden the latter part of September. The heavyweights are scheduled to go ten rounds.

Jess Willard, the cowboy white hope, and John "Bull" Young, promising California heavyweight, have signed articles to meet in a twenty-round go at Vernon, Cal., on August 22.

Frank Moran is down to hard training for his ten-round engagement with Al Palzer at New York next month. If Moran meets with success in his encounter with Palzer he will be entitled to a crack at Gunboat Smith.

Boston fans are showing much interest in the coming Frank Klaus-Jack Dillon set-to on August 26. These men have been recognized generally as the best of the middleweights during the last two years.

Spider Britt, the local bantamweight, is wondering when some boy around these parts will muster up enough courage to meet him in the ring. Britt cares not who it may be, just as long as he tips the beam at 116 pounds. Spider says he will wager $100 on his chances against any of them.

M'CAREY SURE JEFFRIES WAS DOPED AT RENO

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19.—Promoter T. J. McCarey, for the past ten years president of the Pacific A. C., is positive in his belief that Jeffries was "doped" when he fought Jack Johnson.

"Jeffries could walk right into the ring to-day and make a 100 per cent better showing than he did at Reno," said McCarey to-day.

"I was watching Jeffries when he came into the Reno arena. He lurched down the aisle like a drunken man, bumping his shoulder against the moving picture stand. At the ringside one of his best friends, Clarence Berry, reached out to shake hands, but Jim didn't appear to recognize him.

"I AM suspicious of one man who posed as an intimate friend of Jim's prior to the fight. He bet heavily on Johnson and after the thing was over he never even went to Jeffries to speak to him, and to my knowledge has never seen Jim since.

"This fellow used to coax Jeffries away from the Monoa Springs training camp to go fishing. For hours he would keep Jim standing knee deep in the mountain streams and cause him to neglect his training.

"I believe that Jeffries was the victim of a widespread plot. The man never had a chance. He was whipped before he could put up his hands. This was one of the worst blows ever dealt the boxing game and I would pay a good sum out of my own pocket to see the mystery cleared up."

TOM JONES, manager for Ad Wolgast and Jess Willard, is another who believes that Jeffries was "doped."

"Jeffries was drugged. There is no other way to account for his reeling about in the ring before the contest," says Jones. "Jeffries doesn't care much about the matter now, but his friends would like to see the thing explained."

OUTFIELDER LET OUT.

KEOKUK, IOWA, Aug. 19.—Outfielder Corkhill was released by Keokuk and Outfielder Bromley, formerly with Mussatine, was signed.

"BATTLING" NELSON DISPOSED OF.

ROCKFORD, ILL., Aug. 19.—The Rockford (Wisconsin-Illinois League) team to-day ordered the release of Catcher "Battling" Nelson.

Jock McNeil Still Unconscious

Daring Motor Racer Is Dying

JOCK M'NEIL, the daring motorcycle racer, who was thrown from his machine while traveling at a speed of 80 miles an hour, is still unconscious at the Grady Hospital. The attending physicians have little hope for his recovery.

It was McNeil's own carelessness that caused his fall. He reported at the track yesterday afternoon under the influence of liquor, and after much wrangling with the other riders he insisted on taking a whirl.

He borrowed Morty Graves' stock machine and immediately after starting ascended to the white boards at the top of the track. The white boards are perpendicular and it takes a speed of at least 80 miles an hour to hold the machine.

The first time around his motor broke through the boards in two places, but McNeil refused to come down. The next time around he rode right into one of the holes that he had smashed on his first trip, and was thrown 50 feet in the air. He came down face first.

An ambulance was called and he was rushed to Grady Hospital. The extent of his injuries are:

The skin was peeled from the right side of his face.

A glaring hole in his skull that may affect the brain.

Right shoulder dislocated and badly torn.

Right leg broken just above the knee.

Internal injuries, the exact nature of which has not been fully determined.

ST. LOUIS BOWLING TOURNEY TO START ON NOVEMBER 29

ST. LOUIS, MO., Aug. 19.—The Middle West Tournament Company was incorporated here to promote the annual Mid-West bowling tournament scheduled to begin in this city November 29.

The following officers were elected:

President, Edmond C. Koeln; vice president, Wooster Lambert; treasurer, H. C. Menne, and secretary, Morris D. Clay.

The fact that the tournament this year is open to bowlers from all parts of the United States is expected to result in a large entry list.

VARDON AND RAY WILL HAVE HARD BATTLE--EVANS

By "Chick" Evans.

HARRY VARDON and Edward Ray, two of the foremost golfers in the world, are now on the ocean on their way to America. Wilfred Reid, another high-class British professional, is with them. It has been thirteen years since Vardon came to this country and made an almost clean sweep of everything. Then came Duncan in 1911, and he, too, made an excellent showing. It is my prediction, however, that Vardon and Ray will find a country of golfers vastly superior to anything that they have pictured. Since 1900, the year of the previous invasion, our country has taken tremendous strides in golf. Progress has been made not only in the addition of thousands of new clubs, but also in the standard of the game. A few years ago 80 was considered very good indeed, but now it is merely fair and the 80 golfer takes no special credit to himself.

Will Arrive This Week.

Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, our two most distinguished professional visitors, will be over here this week. Previous to the open championship, which will take place during the third week of September at Brookline, near Boston, they will play exhibition matches all over the East, and after the open they will journey Westward.

Fine players as they are, I think that they will have a difficult road to travel, for not only will our professionals give them a run, but there are some of our amateurs who may be able to quicken their pace a little. I hope they will like our courses and our golfers. Truly, we have a country-wide array of courses on which much money and time have been spent.

Our golfers are fine players, and good sportsmen, and the coming of the British visitors will do us a tremendous amount of good. Thousands will watch their play and be benefited by many an idea caught as they watch the execution of difficult shots by these masters of the game. Their scores will serve as an indicator by which we can know exactly what progress we have made in our own game.

Exhibitions to Benefit All.

Their coming will introduce into this country professional exhibition matches—a prominent element of British golf of which we know but little. We have not much of this now and there is no doubt we need more. It is something of which a country can easily have too much, but it can be of the greatest benefit to all players who wish to improve their game. It will give to them throughout the country an opportunity to see the best shots played by the best players, and this practical exposition is of more value than all the lessons and books of instruction in the world.

Of course, all professional golf is a money-making affair. For an exhibition match of 36 holes, occupying a day, I understand Vardon and Ray are asking $600. This seems an enormous amount of money to ask for the privilege of seeing a golf game, and it is difficult to see how they will be able to get many clubs to stage such an expensive exhibition. The best way would be to charge, say, a dollar for admission, and let the club stand for the rest. Most people would gladly give up that much to see these world masters of the links. They are like the musicians who have spent a lifetime in practice.

Grand Defense Aids Gil Price Mates Star in Field and at Bat

By O. B. Keeler.

THE value of co-operation stuck out all over the opening game with the Moles Monday. There were so many points that to the Moles the Cracker club must have resembled a hedgehog.

There was no chance for Gil Price to lose that game. So he won, 7 to 2.

But Gil had as his three assistants luck, stuff and beautiful fielding.

And that is pretty nearly good enough to win for anybody.

DON'T take this as meaning that Gil was saved against his will from a beating. The southpaw had something on the ball all the time, up to the ninth inning. And whenever he got it over the platter, the problem was simple.

The Moles simply couldn't hit.

But Gil was having one of his famous struggles with the control lever, which persisted in jamming on him, usually after two men were out.

In other words, Gil's marksmanship was somewhat to the fritz. But, supported by the class of fielding his mates put up, and his own stuff on the ball, his erratic periods merely served to liven up a long game that certainly was in need of livening.

THERE was some hitting, too.

The way the Cracker attack was working, Gil could have beer quite a bit more to the Carnegie with his passes, and still got by with it.

MR. WELCHONCE was excessively prominent in the attack. Four runs came riding in on his two blows, one for three and the other for two sacks. Harry also scored a run himself. Messrs. Agler, Manush, Smith and Bisland also deserve special mention in the list of sluggers, the first pair getting three hits apiece and the others being content with a couple each.

BUT savage as was the artillery, the real clubby spirit was shown in the way Gil Price's help came through with the defense. The help behaved as if it liked Gil fine.

And it must be said that Gil seemed to think pretty well of himself, too. He pulled as pretty a pair of fielding stunts as one would care to see. Once he raced toward first on a slow hit, bounding high, scooped the pill in his meat hand and sprinted over the bag—and there were Moles digging for home, with two out, at the time. And once he made a grand play on a difficult trap-bounder, following the pick-up with a fine peg.

GIL wasn't lonely in his display of defensive power.

Chapman nipped Mayer off first by a peach peg in the second; Agler and Smith made runaway circus catches of short flies—particularly Joe's catch of Marcan's foul in the seventh—and Calvo starred with a brilliant running catch of a low line drive in the fifth, and a rifle-shot peg to the plate in the ninth, cutting down the speedy Marcan, who was trying to score from second on a sharp hit to the Cuban's territory.

BY the way, there was a moral force acting hand in glove with Calvo in the matter of outfield pegging.

In the third inning Carroll, first up, flied to the Cuban, deep in right. Calvo took the ball easily and whipped it to third, low and fast, and with wonderful accuracy.

It looked a bit like showing off. But later in the game, when the Cuban nipped Marcan's line drive with McDonald on third, McDonald stuck right there, not caring to try out the little fellow's whip. His throw on McBride's single in the ninth, when the Moles were beginning to bite us, was a beauty, and it nipped Marcan for the last out as he came in from second.

AND in the meantime, Mique Finn's wrecking crew was resting.

The margin of safety for the Gulls, therefore, stuck at seven full games this morning.

The Billikens, who also rested, retained second place by a margin of two games.

Neither Billies nor Gulls are scheduled to-day.

Chance to pick up a little honest change in the percentage column—what?

WILLIE LEWIS DEVOTED TO THE BOXING GAME

PARIS, Aug. 19.—Willie Lewis, the white American pugilist, who is now attracting as much attention at the Follies Bergeres as Jack Johnson did, said to-day:

"Boxing is not merely my profession, but my devotion. I believe that it develops any sound individual's muscular and mental faculties more than any other athletic sport."

Regarding the rumors that he intended divorcing his wife in order to marry Comtesse De Villenueve, Lewis said:

"Though I greatly admire her free dances, I never have spoken to her and you can contradict those rumors."

DANNY GOODMAN ROUNDING INTO SHAPE FOR BOUTS

SOX YOUNGSTER THROWS WITH EITHER HAND

By Bill Bailey.

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 19.—The White Sox have a young outfielder who is destined to become one of the curiosities of the American League.

Edward Rausch is his name and the thing that makes him wonderful is the fact that he heaves the ball from deep right with his left hand and from deep left field with his right.

We've all heard about the ambidextrous ball players. Away back when Anson was a recruit there were a couple of fellows who pitched with either hand. But it is doubtful whether there is one fan in a hundred who ever gazed upon a youngster who could throw as well with one hand as with the other.

Manager Callahan didn't know that he was getting a curiosity as well as a ball player when he purchased Rausch from the Evansville club of the Central League. The youngster reported on Friday. The Sox were at morning practice when the youth reported. You thought it was too late in the season for morning practice? Manager Callahan is still in the hunt for whatever he can obtain and is determined to finish just as high as possible. Which accounts for the fact that the men were being drilled in everything pertaining to baseball.

Sent to Right Field.

As was remarked, the Sox were at morning practice when the youngster reported. He was handed a suit and told to go out and chase fly balls. He did. He went to right.

"Who's the youngster?" went the query.

"Oh, that's young Rausch," from Kid Gleason. It's the duty of the assistant manager to work with the men, and especially the youngsters, at the a. m. drill.

"Left hand thrower?" it was queried.

"It would seem so," was the answer of Gleason. It also was apparent, for the youngster was shooting the balls in on a line from right field and he was employing his left hand.

Pretty soon he went to left field and played there awhile. One of the fellows shot a line drive out there. And then everybody stood about in amazement. For the youngster returned the ball with his right hand. And he shot it in on a line, too.

"Hey!" howled Gleason. He didn't want any mistake about it, and he did want some information. In trotted the youngster.

"Are you a right or left hand thrower?" queried the assistant coach.

"Don't make any difference to me," answered the youngster. "When I play right field I throw with my left hand. When I'm in left I throw with my right."

"Don't make any difference to you, eh?" queried Gleason.

"None at all. Why?"

"Oh, I just wanted to know." It takes a lot to keep the assistant manager from retorting, but there was none on his tongue this time.

Youngster Gives Promise.

The youngster is twenty years of age and if he can hit he will be there. There is no question about his speed. He worked out in left field before the second game against the Highlanders. He was going back as fast as the ordinary outfielder comes in. And he was grabbing the balls which is more to the point. They tried him out in the preliminary batting practice and he slammed said sphere to several parts of the lot. Here another surprise awaited the Sox. They naturally supposed that a fellow who could throw with either hand would bat from either side of the plate. Nothing doing. Rausch is a left-hand hitter and he doesn't swing from the right side under any condition.

Rausch was one of the first men purchased by the South Siders and cost $3,000. He hit in the neighborhood of .315 in the Central League. From the way he handled himself in the field it looks a certainty that he possesses the speed necessary to beat out many infield hits.

No question but that Rausch comes well fortified, so far as fielding is concerned. Many managers have an idea that a right fielder should be a left-hand thrower, upon the same theory that a southpaw thrower is supposed to have it on a right-hander at first base.

"Rausch throws equally well with either hand," said Manager Callahan. "It's my opinion, however, that he would do better if he decided to throw with either his right or left hand and then stick to it."

KETCHEL VS. JOHNSON.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Steve Ketchel and Eddie Johnson, of Denver, are scheduled to meet in a twenty-round battle in Pueblo, Colo., September 15, at 133 pounds.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

HOW SWEET.
(By Joe Tinker.)

How sweet to be a manager and lose a lot of sleep
To pull a bunch of boneheads from the bottom of the heap—
To patch a broken-down machine and get it running fit
And then to see the owner throw a monkey wrench in it!
It's bad enough to run a team that plays in Cincinnati,
But this here interference stuff would drive a fellow batty.

In other words, Mr. Tinker insists that he is the only man who has a right to tinker with his team.

Those who know Sherwood Magee aver that Mr. Tincup is not the only Indian on Dooin's team.

Not that we desire to discourage a promising young athlete, but a Tincup is a first cousin to a can.

It is rumored that John Evers thinks as much of Mike Mitchell as Mike Mitchell thinks of John Evers.

SOMETHING LIKE THE CUB OWNER.

There was a young magnate named Farrell
With money stacked up by the barrel.
He said: "I will win
Though it costs all my tin
And they force me to pawn my apparel." V. S. B.

Conundrum: If it costs $10 to call Bill Klem a catfish, how much would it cost to call him a sardine?

Paul Westerlund, a Californian, won a medal by running a 31-mile marathon race up the side of a mountain range. Up to date Paul has not won any medals for consecutive thought.

If Frank Navin were to accept that $100,000 offer for Ty Cobb we fear that Clark Griffith would break all existing sprinting records on his way to the cyclone cellar.

Arthur Pelky announces that he will do his training in Calgary. This shows that even a rude and uncultured pugilist often clings to the fond recollections of former days.

Mr. Pelky is the youth who swore that he had retired from the fight game forever and forever. But he changed his mind when he learned that the only other way he could earn a living was to work.

Mr. Mitchell, athlete, accuses Mr. O'Loughlin, umpire, of having used vulgar language on the field. And yet, the fact that a man is an umpire is sufficient cause to swear.

England feels as badly over the departure of Mrs. Pankhurst as a pitcher who has just recovered from a losing streak.

In a way, Ralph Comstock, whom the Sox have bought from the Minneapolis team, is one of the most remarkable athletes extant. It is said that he is the only member of the team whose grandchildren are not voting.

THE WHITE HOPE.

He had a fist as hard as a rock, likewise an iron jaw.
Without a doubt he was the hardest man I ever saw.
Quoth he: "I got my training as a player with McGraw."

THE WORM.

"The worm will turn," a lad once spoke.
He was a wise old guy.
He was an educated bloke
And what he said got by.
"The worm will turn," he said, and men
Spoke lightly of his name,
But all interred the hammer when
The Pelicans won a game.

Not that we desire to inflame the thoughts of our yellow brethren, but the report that Ah Chung whipped Pat McCarty reveals the fact that the Boxer outrages have not ceased.

The 100-mile marathon race at Bellingham, Wash., reminds us that some men are nuttier than others.

Joe Boehling is now engaged at the unpleasant task of demonstrating that whatever goes up must come down.

Reading Mike Mitchell's tale of his recent job, one is led to suspect that being a Cub is like being in jail—only more so.

Charlie Ebbets announced yesterday morn that he would spend $60,000 to strengthen his team. We have not any inside information, but we have heard a well grounded rumor that to-day he will dedicate the $60,000.

Looking over Mr. Griffith's statement, one is led to suspect that Messrs. Altrock and Schaefer are not the only comedians on the Washington payroll.

The report that Hap Myers stole four bases off Jimmy Archer in one afternoon reminds us that several persons could have outsprinted Arthur Duffey if Arthur had sustained a broken leg.

Ben Tincup, the Indian pitcher who has been purchased by the Phillies, is on the wrong team. Imagine what a receiver Larry McLean would be for Tincup.

Not that it is any of our business, but the gent who picks out the names for country clubs must be related to the citizen who perpetrates the monickers for sleeping cars and motor boats.

Joe Tinker is not dissatisfied with his job or anything like that, but he has a hunch that as a baseball magnate Garry Merrmann is a good judge of wine.

NOT O'LOUGHLIN.

There was an ump in our town
And he was wondrous wise.
He spoke his words in such a way
That men could recognize.

STARRVILLE WINS.

PORTERDALE, GA., Aug. 19.—Porterdale lost to Starrsville yesterday 4 to 3. The feature of the game was the sensational work of "Kid" Harwell, who caught a grand game for the visitors. L. Cook also featured by his batting. Rocquemore fanned fourteen batters.

NO-HIT, NO-RUN GAME.

SUJERIOR, WIS., Aug. 19.—In yesterday's Northern Leagues game at Superior, Cy Dahlgren, of Superior, blanked Grand Forks without a hit or a run. Dahlgren was with the Cincinnati Reds this spring and was given an unconditional release after the training trip.

MAKE MONEY WITH POULTRY.

AMERICAN POULTRY is a magazine devoted entirely to helping earnest men and women make a financial success of poultry raising. Its staff of writers is composed entirely of those who have made a practical, instead of theoretical, success of poultry raising, and who are glad to pass on the results of their hard-earned experience to AMERICAN POULTRY readers. There are many pitfalls in the path of the novice which may be entirely avoided by those who will follow the teachings set forth in this magazine. It fully explains how to make a start, how to construct houses, coops, and other devices, how to get a large egg yield, how to cure and prevent disease, how to exhibit, how to get the top price for eggs, how to use incubators and hundreds of other points which every one's wishes to know. It explains the famous secret system through which poultrymen have become rich and afterwards solid for hundreds of dollars. AMERICAN POULTRY is a large, handsomely illustrated, monthly journal, well printed on fine paper, and should be found on file in the home of every poultry lover. No beginner in the poultry business should think of being without it. It will save him many times the small subscription price. The advanced poultryman will also find it of great value; the articles being varied in their scope.

SPECIAL OFFER. The regular price of AMERICAN POULTRY is 50c per year, but in order to introduce it to several thousand new readers, we will, for a short time, give a large 200-page poultry book, which is a complete guide in the poultry business, absolutely free to every one sending 50c for a yearly subscription or $1.00 for a three-year-subscription to AMERICAN POULTRY. A trial six months' subscription (without book) will be sent for 25c. Never has so much been offered for so small a sum. Advantage of this offer should be taken at once.

BOTH PHONES 2568.

IF OUR CUSTOMERS living on the North and South Sides place their orders before 9 o'clock and the ones in Inman Park and West End before 2 o'clock, they will be delivered the same day the orders are given. We are trying to give the very best service possible, and if our customers will bear in mind the hours that our deliveries leave the store it will insure prompt service.

IT IS ABSOLUTELY necessary for chickens to have green food during the winter. This can easily be supplied if you will plant out a small patch of rye and rape. They both grow very rapidly and will furnish an abundance of green food all the winter. Now is the time to plant.

THIS IS THE MOULTING SEASON, and that means that the hens should be fed a good tonic. Pratt's Poultry Regulator and Conkey's Laying Tonic insure a quick and complete moult, and that means plenty of eggs during the fall and winter, when they bring the high prices; 25c, 50c and $1 package.

Occasionally "Capital" Discovers That "Labor" Really Is a Factor in National Life.

One Big City, Looking Around for 8,000 Vanished Mechanics, Makes the Discovery Just at Present.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Chicago had a lockout of workmen in the building trades.

It was decided by those engaged in building that something must be done, and so all building was stopped for a while, builders agreeing to stand the loss in order to carry their point.

Finally building was resumed and something strange and surprising happened. IT WAS DISCOVERED THAT 8,000 BUILDING MECHANICS WERE MISSING IN CHICAGO.

And the builders, anxious to rush through the work that had been delayed during the lockout, did not know exactly WHERE to get the eight thousand mechanics.

Those eight thousand mechanics had not been sitting around waiting for the lockout to end, but had gone to other cities and engaged in other occupations.

This discovery is useful, since it makes clear the fact that in this country and in its enterprises organized labor actually plays a part that is not to be disregarded.

The builders discover that their architects, their draftsmen, their enterprise and their MONEY amount to very little if they haven't got THE WORKERS TO MAKE REALITIES OF THE IDEAS, THE PLANS, THE ENTERPRISE AND THE MONEY.

Perhaps it is a good thing to have the eight thousand mechanics missing for a little while, just to teach the gentlemen who occasionally imagine that they are the entire nation that they wouldn't be very much more important than Robinson Crusoe on his island if they didn't have the workmen with them.

The absence of these mechanics is also interesting as demonstrating the value of labor unions that keep an organized body of workers ready to do the skilled work of the country upon demand.

The country has grown too big for the old system under which both labor and capital were disorganized, with the capitalist, when the mood seized him, deciding to build something, going out looking for isolated workers, gathering them together and putting them to building.

To-day capital is organized AND OUGHT TO BE ORGANIZED UNDER PUBLIC CONTROL AND REASONABLE CONDITIONS.

And labor is organized and ought to be organized, also under public control and reasonable conditions.

The Chicago lesson teaches that if labor were NOT organized, if the unions did not, by demanding fair wages and fair hours, limiting apprentices and preventing oversupply, regulate conditions, the labor market would be chaotic and the great operations of this day impossible.

If the lack of mechanics in Chicago teaches capital the importance of labor and teaches also the important fact that organized labor makes great building and manufacturing possible, the hardship of the Chicago lockout will not have been endured entirely in vain.

I.

WE cannot choose our sorrows. One there was,
Who, reverent of soul, and strong with trust,
Cried, "God, though Thou shouldst bow me to the dust,
Yet will I praise thy everlasting laws.
Beggared, my faith would never halt or pause;
But sing thy glory, feasting on a crust.
Only one boon, one precious boon I must
Demand of Thee, oh, opulent great Cause.
Let Love stay with me, Constant to the end,
Though fame pass by and poverty pursue.
With freighted hold, her life ship onward sailed;
The world gave wealth, and pleasure, and a friend,
Unmarred by envy, and whose heart was true.
But ere the sun reached midday, Love had failed."

II.

Then from the depths, in bitterness she cried,
"Hell is on earth, and heaven is but a dream;
And human life a troubled aimless stream;
And God is nowhere. Would God so deride
A loving creature's faith?" A voice replied,
"The stream flows onward to the Source Supreme;
Where things that ARE replace the things that SEEM;
And where the deeds of all past lives abide.
Once at thy door, Love languished and was spurned,
Who sorrow plants, must garner sorrow's sheaf.
No prayers can change the seedling in the sod.
By thine own heart, Love's anguish must be learned.
Pass on, and know, as one made wise by grief,
That in thyself dwells heaven and hell and God."

Winifred Black Writes on Elderly Flirts

They Haunt the Summer Resorts, She Says, Like Some Kind of Ghosts and They Are Dreadfully Silly.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

THEY'RE here—in full force—the elderly flirts. I met two of them down at the Springs just now.

The first elderly flirt was a man, forty-five if he was a day; straggling along behind his good, comfy, kindly, middle-aged wife—making eyes at every girl of twenty or so he met.

I walked behind him and heard the girls—after they had passed.

I really wish he could have heard them; he would have been edified.

The Girls Know Him.

"Here's father again," said one pretty thing in pink. "Oh, do look, he'll get cross-eyed, he ogles so."

"I heard him calling the telephone girl 'honey' at the hotel this morning," said a sweet sister in blue, "and you should have seen the face she made when he turned the other way."

"Father certainly is a giddy old thing," said the prettiest of all, in mauve. "I saw him holding hands with teacher, the one with the glasses, out on the porch just at sunset.

"Quoting poetry, too; and his wife came round the corner. I felt so sorry for her, I couldn't bear to look at her."

"Here he is," said the sportive widow to her escort. "Grandpa Googoo Eyes. I met him with his little girl this morning and he stopped talking to her and made an excuse to ask me the way somewhere. You ought to see the way he takes off his hat, ugh—he makes me shudder."

"Grandpa Googoo Eyes."

"Grandpa Googoo Eyes"—not a pretty name, is it, Mr. Elderly Flirt? Yet that is what they call you, the young things you try so hard to impress.

"Grandpa Googoo Eyes," and yet you are not a grandpa at all, only a pa—and not a day over forty-five at the most—but, oh, you do look so elderly to the girls you so much admire—and your jokes are so elderly, too, and your compliments and the sweet, clever things you try so hard to say—can't you see how they laugh at you, all but those who want you to give them something—something that costs more money than young Romeo can afford.

Can't you see how sorry they are for the good, sweet woman who gave up everything else in the world to be your wife—poor silly elderly flirt, you—and the wife—do you think she doesn't know? Do you imagine that she is so used to your artless little ways by this time that it doesn't stab her to the faithful heart to hear the girls make fun of you? Oh, yes, she hears them—trust her for that. She hears everything, sees everything that concerns you—for she loved you once and she never can get over that.

Your First Flirtation.

Now she looks upon you with a kind of contemptuous pity, a sort of kindly forgiveness now; what else can she do?

She looks older than you—she knows that; knows it in every beat of her heart, in every line of her tired face. She has borne you children. See that line by the sensitive mouth—that came when the boy was so ill. That wrinkle there by the eyes—that was when you were ill and she worried so about you.

The hair there on the temples—it was your first flirtation, that you thought she never even heard of, brought that. Don't you remember that summer when the second baby was so little and so delicate, she couldn't go out much, and you—but rest assured she heard. There is always someone to tell. You have cut those lines on a sensitive face—you and no other—none but you—and everyone who sees you together sees it and pities her for being married to one so shallow-hearted, so cruelly light of mind as you, Mr. Elderly Flirt.

There's your sister there—in the shadows behind you—painted, made up, bedizened. How old is the boy she has in tow? Not an hour over twenty-two, if faces tell anything like the truth. She'll get him out into the moonlight and make a fool of him and the nice girl will cry her eyes out about it.

Poorly elderly flirt—what a sorry thing she is—even when she is married and makes a fool of her husband as well as of herself.

Tries to Look Young.

She tries so pitifully hard to look young—hark, what an imitation giggle it is that she gives. Be careful, those high heels were never meant for a charmer over forty. You'll slip, beautiful lady, you'll slip, and what a time you'll have getting up again. Oh, why don't you give it all up once and for all, Elderly Flirt, in petticoats too short and slippers too tight for elderly comfort—let it all slip, the silly game you have played so long.

The girls there behind you—they do the thing much better; they do really—and how about the decent, kindly, honest man who pays your bills and sends you away to have a good time? It isn't fair; honestly it isn't—it isn't the square deal. He works so hard and is so proud of you—why can't you pretend to be halfway decent—just for his sake—at your age?

The Elderly Flirts—they haunt the summer resorts like some kind of forlorn ghosts.

An Opportunity for Women

There Never Was a Time, He Says, When the Need for Women to Become Wise Was So Great as It Is Now.

By ELBERT HUBBARD

A CERTAIN California Bishop was at first opposed to woman suffrage.

Next he investigated it.

Then he saw it was coming.

It came.

Now he gives instruction to the women of his bishopric. It is something like this:

"Inform yourselves thoroughly on all questions of state. You are entering into grave responsibilities, that of free citizens. Inform yourselves, be wise in what you do."

This is advice that a wise father should give to his children.

There was never a time when the need for women to become wise was so great as it is now. Their rights, personal, political, commercial, involve a concomitant responsibility.

When we were children we used to think how glorious it would be when we were grown up. Then we would have the privilege of staying out at night as long as we chose, and of doing what we pleased all day long.

Self-Control.

But when we became men we realized that there was a limit to the hours of the night, also to our capacity to keep awake, that in order to be able to "have a good time," a man must control himself.

Every privilege is bounded by responsibilities which have to be carried in order to make the privilege possible.

That is all any human being has—opportunity.

The opportunity for suffrage and personal rights has not come easily to women. They have worked until they have quite an understanding of the rights that they want and the privileges that have been denied them.

Civic Research Clubs.

In most of the States where suffrage has been granted, the Woman Suffrage clubs have been turned into Civic Research clubs. Women are bringing politically unprejudiced minds to bear on political situations and their new privileges. Their actions, as a rule, are decided by this test, "Is it right or is it wrong." Women whose actions are not influenced by right and wrong are taking very little interest in the woman suffrage movement.

The Reverend Mabel M. Irwin, a Universalist minister, gives out a well-timed warning to women. She urges them to make no mistakes in using the newly acquired privilege of their natural rights. She eloquently urges them to use their power to develop a better, nobler race.

Mabel M. Irwin affirms that women have not been shirking the burden of motherhood, but the bondage of motherhood. When women have the rights of free citizens this bondage will be removed. Then there will be the joyous laughter, the patter of little feet that makes perennial youth.

English Women's Demands.

Beatrice Harraden, the English author, in a recent number of Votes for Women, expresses a clear understanding of how vital to the Englishwomen is the cause of woman suffrage.

If there were only a few women engaged in this movement we might think it was only a dream of fair women. But when fishwives, tinplate workers, weavers, tailoresses, upholsteresses, laundresses, charwomen, ropemakers, shop assistants, nurses, teachers and sweatshop workers unite in the demand for suffrage as equals with the women of nobility, there is something very vital in the movement. It means that these women are stirred into action by a primitive instinct.

Women and Statesmen.

Recently a deputation of women from every walk in life spoke eloquently to Mr. Lloyd George and his colleagues. Many of them had never before made a speech. They were unlettered, hard-working women, moved to eloquence by a cause.

Miss Harraden says the women impressed the statesmen though the statesmen did not impress the women. Their cloaks and trappings of office meant nothing to these women, demanding the privilege to exercise their inherent right of freedom.

When women who toil with their hands join with nobility, and all are made equal by the cause which is moving them, it is time that the Englishmen recognized that it is an inherent, natural right that women are demanding.

The Battle of the Nile

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE Battle of the Nile, Nelson's greatest victory, and one of the most remarkable naval fights known to history, came off one hundred and fifteen years ago—August 1, 1798.

In May, 1798, Nelson, now in independent command, was dispatched by his Government to intercept the great French armament which was intended to reach Egypt and threaten India. Napoleon had vast ideas in his head, and he hoped by means of this armament to materialize them in the shape of a great Oriental Empire.

Coming up with the French fleet in the roads of Aboukir, Nelson lost no time in getting ready for action. With sublime audacity, and in defiance of all the then recognized rules of sea fighting, he ordered part of his fleet to get in between the French ships and the shore, while with the other part he attached from the side of the open sea. Assailed from front and rear, the French were taken at a great disadvantage, and though they fought with a splendid courage, there was never a moment when the issue of the battle was in doubt. The genius, audacity, quickness of the little English Admiral were too much for them, and of the thirteen French battleships only two escaped.

The French ought to have won the day. Their vessels were equal in number to those of the English (13 on each side), and were in size and caliber much superior to them, the British "seventy-fours" being no match for the new and magnificent French "eighties." But the French had no Nelson, and that fact explains it all.

Two or three very important things were settled by Nelson's brilliant victory at the Battle of the Nile. It settled the fact that England's navy was supreme, invincible. It settled the fact that the long cherished idea of a French invasion of England was never to be realized. And finally it settled the fact that Napoleon's visions of a mighty empire in Egypt and Syria, and possibly in India, were to go up in smoke. There was nothing to hinder Napoleon from making himself Emperor of France, and, for a time, dictator of Continental Europe, but the way in which Nelson smashed the great armament off the roads of Aboukir convinced every sensible man in France that the First Consul could never become master of the East. To do that he needed, first, the mastery of the Mediterranean, and the little Admiral had demonstrated such mastery was out of the question.

WITNESS SAYS HE SAW MARY PHAGAN ABOUT NOON OF TRAGIC DAY

Here are the important developments Tuesday in the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan:

Judge Roan rules out all testimony bearing on particular acts of immorality which the State has been endeavoring to prove against the defendant.

Will Turner, former pencil factory employee, testifies he entered the metal room shortly before noon one day near the middle of March and saw Frank seeking to engage Mary Phagan in conversation. He says he cannot recall any other person he (Turner) knew in the factory.

Solicitor Dorsey devotes large part of forenoon in an endeavor to bolster the character of C. B. Dalton, a State's witness, and tear down that of Miss Daisy Hopkins, who was called by the defense.

George Gordon, called by the Solicitor, swears that the sensational affidavit of Minola McKnight, negro cook at the Selig home, was signed in his absence and that Solicitor Dorsey refused to order her release, saying he "would get in bad with the detectives" if he did.

Roy Craven and E. H. Pickett, hardware store employees, testified Minola McKnight, cook in the Selig home, made the affidavit revealing incriminating remarks and actions of Frank without reserve.

Miss Nellie Wood says she does not know Frank's general character after the Judge has barred sensational questions which the Solicitor proposed to put. The Solicitor says the witness "entrapped" him.

M. E. McCoy, a painter, created a stir in the courtroom Tuesday afternoon by testifying that he saw Mary Phagan on Forsyth street at about three or four minutes after 12 o'clock on the Saturday she was killed.

Attorney Rosser made McCoy admit that he had not told of this circumstanceuntil about a week and a half ago, although the time element had been a vital factor for several months and the city had been scoured for persons who saw the girl on the fatal day.

Leo Frank's mother and his wife left the courtroom Tuesday afternoon as Solicitor Dorsey was outlining to the court what he proposed to prove by Miss Nellie Wood, the witness on the stand.

The Solicitor made a determined effort to get into the record and before hte jury testimony against Frank's character, but, as was the case at the morning session, he was overruled.

"We wish to show by the witness, your honor," said Dorsey, "the general character of this defendant, as well as to get before the jury a specific instance in which this young woman, who worked two days on the fourth floor of the Naitonal Pencil Factory, figured."

When Judge Roan overruled this line of questioning, the Solicitor declared he had another witness to testify to an occasion when he saw Frank with a woman in the factory. The judge said the law plainly barred the questions.

Miss Wood was asked if she knew Frank's general character. She replied that she did not. Dorsey claimed he had been trapped, as his talk with the witness was exactly to the contrary.

Charges Sideboard Was Moved.

Attorney Frank A. Hooper made the charge Tuesday afternoon that the mirror in the dining room at the Selig home had been moved for the express purpose of discrediting the testimony of Albert McKnight, who swore that he was in the Selig home the afternoon of April 26 and saw Frank hurriedly enter the dining room, go to the sideboard and then leave the house without stopping to eat.

McKnight was on the stand at the time, having been recalled to testify as to the place he was sitting when he saw Frank through the mirror. He designated the place and then corroborated Hooper's charge by his declaration that the mirror had been moved around several feet.

Roy Craven, one of the Beck & Gregg Hardware employees, who assisted the police in obtaining the sensational affidavit from Minola McKnight, negro cook at the Selig home, declared on the stand in the Frank trial Tuesday afternoon that the McKnight woman made her statements against Frank of her own accord and without reserve, once she had been persuaded it was best to tell what the State says is the whole truth.

Craven said the McKnight woman told him that she had heard conversations at the Selig home Sunday morning following the murder of Mary Phagan, indicating that Frank had rested poorly and had come home intoxicated, making his wife sleep on the floor. He had asked his wife for a revolver to shoot himself, the McKnight woman said, according to Craven. Frank also was

Find Missing Banker Led Gay Lobster Life

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 19.—In tracing the career of Raymond E. Smith, secretary-treasurer of the Roseville Trust Company, who is being sought to clear up mysteries surrounding a shortage of over $500,000 in the bank, the searchers found evidences of lobster suppers, joy rides and gay parties.

They failer to find the object of their search, but they got traces of a young woman to whom Smith is alleged to have paid marked attention.

PONCE DELEON BALL PARK, Aug. 19.—The Crackers took an uphill battle from the Barons, 7 to 3, here this afternoon. Molesworth's men held the lead until the sixth when the locals scored two runs and tied the score.

Wallie Smith cinched the game in the seventh inning by smashing out a home run with two on bases.

Dent and Foxen were on the hurling hill. The former had all the best of the argument.

FIRST INNING.

Marcan hit in front of the plate and beat it out for a hit. When Dent threw wild to first Marcan reached second. Messenger bunted to Dent and Marcan was caught at third to Holland. Messenger stole second. McDonald drew four wide ones and ambled to the initial sack. Kniseley slambed a one-timer to center and Messenger tallied. McBride fanned. Mayer also was set down on strikes. TWO HITS, ONE RUN.

Agler hoisted a long fly to Kniseley. Long was disposed of by Ellam and McGilvray. Welchonce was easy for Foxen and McGilvray. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

McGilvray lofted a tall one to Long. Ellam drew free transportation to first. Foxen did the Casey act. Ellam stole second and when Chapman heaved the ball to center field Ellam reached third. Smith scooped up Marcan's grass-cutter and threw the Birmingham second-sacker out at first. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Smith popped to Ellam. Bisland found one to his liking and poled it to the left garden for a single. Holland's short fly was easy for Kniseley. Calvo forced Bisland at second, Ellam to Marcan. ONE HIT, ONE RUN.

THIRD INNING.

Messenger went out over the Bisland-Agler route. McDonald out, Dent to Agler. Kniseley struck out. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Chapman ballooned to Kniseley. Dent walked. Agler singled to center and Dent took second. Long was patient and was awarded with a free pass, and the bases were intoxicated. Harry Welchonce's best was a grounder to Ellam and Dent was forced at the home plate to Mayer. Smith ended the inning by striking out. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

FOURTH INNING.

McBride went out, Bisland to Agler. Mayer lined to Bisland, who let the ball go through him for an error. McGilvray drew four wide ones and beat it to Agler's cushion. Ellam walked, filling the bases. Foxen hit a sacrifice fly to Calvo and Mayer scored. Marcan filed to Calvo. NO HITS, ONE RUN.

Bisland fouled to Mayer. Holland out, Ellam to McGilvray. Calvo out, Mayer to McGilvray. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

FIFTH INNING.

Messenger fouled to Holland. McDonald grounded to Bisland and went to second when he threw wild to first. Kniseley singled to left and McDonald tallied. McBride out, Bisland to Agler. Mayer out, Dent to Agler. NO HITS, ONE RUN.

Chapman singled to center. Dent singled through McBride, and Chapman took second. Agler followed with a single to center, and the bases were crowded. Long hit into a double play, Ellam to Marcan to McGilvray. Chapman scored on the play. Welchonce filed to McBride. THREE HITS, ONE RUN.

SIXTH INNING.

McGilvray filed to Long. Ellam filed to Calvo. Foxen fanned. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Smith popped to Ellam. Bisland singled to center. Holland smashed a single to left and when McBride let the ball roll to the fence Bisland and Holland crossed the counting station. This tied the score. Calvo filed to Messenger. Chapman out, Ellam to McGilvray. TWO HITS, TWO RUNS.

SEVENTH INNING.

Marcan fanned. Messenger out, Smith to Agler. McDonald out, Smith to Agler. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Dent popped to Ellam. Agler singled through Ellam. Long walked. Welchonce singled to center and Agler registered. Smith hit a home run to deep center, scoring Long and Welchonce ahead of him. Bisland filed to McBride. Holland popped to Kniseley. THREE HITS, FOUR RUNS.

EIGHTH INNING.

Kniseley singled to right. McBride filed to Long. Mayer hit into a double play, Bisland to Smith to Agler. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

Calva fanned. Chapman singled to center. Dent popped to Marcan. Oln a wild pitch Chapman went to second. Agler fanned. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

NINTH INNING.

DENY REPORT OF MEXICAN WAR MOVE

American Charge Wires State Department That He Has Not Been Given Passports.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The White House to-day received a dispatch from Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy absolutely denying press dispatches to the effect that he had been given his passports by the Mexican Government or that an ultimatum of any kind had been given to him by Huerta.

The telegram from O'Shaughnessy is explicit on both of these points, and indicates that the situation has not been changed in any way except that a formal and diplomatic reply to the Lind proposals was transmitted to O'Shaughnessy yesterday by the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, Frederic Gamboa. The tenor of this reply probably will be made public at the White House later in the day.

In his telegram to Secretary Bryan, Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy relates the circumstances leading up to the transmission of the Huerta reply to the mediation proposals, which Lind carried from President Wilson to Mexico, and declares that nothing had indicated that they were in any way offensive to the Mexican Government.

Found Reports Were False.

He made a trip to the Mexican Foreign Office late last night to ascertain the truth of rumors that he was about to be given his passports, and that Mexico had demanded recognition from the American Government by last midnight.

He found these reports unfounded and spread the news among the members of the American colony in Mexico City. The population seemed to take it for granted that Huerta was about to make the desperate play which he long had threatened.

Secretary Bryan to-day denied that the State Department had received any ultimatum from Mexico concerning recognition of the Huerta government by any stated time, or that Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy had been given his passports and told to leave Mexico.

The State Department was informed to-day by Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy that Senor Gamboa, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has denied the statement made by Senor Urrutia, Minister of the Interior, concerning the reported ultimatum, and it is believed here that the outlook for a peaceful settlement of the troubles between the two nations is more promising at the present time than it has been in the past fortnight.

Wild Rumor Laid to Cabinet.

Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy, in his telegram to the State Department to-day, reported that President Huerta and Envoy Lind were conferring concerning the final settlement of the difficulties between the two countries. While he did not comment on the situation beyond giving a bare report of the fact, Mr. O'Shaughnessy strongly indicated that he hoped for a peaceful settlement and that the next 48 hours probably would bring developments leading to a compact between the United States and Mexico.

It is believed at the State Department that the sensational reports emanating from Mexico City last night were inspired by the Huerta Cabinet.

Kentuckians Fight Duel; One Is Dead

HENDERSON, KY., Aug. 19.—Coleman Davis to-day was believed to be dying from two bullet wounds, and William Steinwach was slightly hurt as the result of a revolver duel. The two men quarreled and arranged a peaceful meeting to settle their difficulties. As soon as they met each man drew his revolver and began firing.

LEO FRANK SKETCHED AS HE TOLD HIS OWN STORY TO JURY

During the greater part of his story Frank was as calm and statistical as an accountant discussing an audit.

In telling of his dealings with the police and Chief of Detectives Lanford, Frank waxed sarcastic in a quiet yet bitter way. But he never let loose his emotion or lost his poise.

At times Frank would lose his air of complete repression and his face for a moment would take on an aspect of deep feeling. He would, however, quickly resume his normal expression of stoicism.

NEGRO M'KNIGHT SAYS SIDEBOARD WAS MOVED

reported to have remarked that he "didn't know why he would murder."

E. H. Pickett, a fellow employee of Craven's, corroborated the latter's story and added that the McKnight woman had admitted getting more money after the murder than she had before.

Both Pickett and Craven were sharply questioned by Attorney Rosser, who sought to show that Minola signed the statement to obtain her freedom from jail.

Dr. S. C. Benedict, president of the State Board of Health, was called at the opening of the afternoon to show that charges of scientific dishonesty against Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the board, never were found to be well founded. Dr. W. F. Westmoreland asserted on the stand that Dr. Harris had been found guilty of the charges.

By far the most damaging testimony brought out against Frank was that of Will Turner, who testified that he had entered the metal room and come upon Frank seeking to press his attentions upon the Phagan girl only a few weeks before the crime.

When Turner was put under the raking fire of Luther Rosser's cross-examination, the weight of his testimony suffered considerably. The youth, who admitted he had worked at the factory only a brief time, was unable to describe Mary Phagan and was unable to tell the name of any other girl in the entire factory.

"I went into the rear room on the second floor one day with some pencils," said Turner. "It was about the middle of March. Frank was walking from his office toward the rear of the factory. Mary Phagan was coming toward her machine. He told her to wait a minute, that he wanted to talk to her. She said she had to go to work.

"He said: 'I'm superintendent of the pencil factory and I want to talk to you.' She repeated that she had to go to work and he followed her as she backed away from him. A couple of girls came into the room and I asked them where to put the pencils and then I left. I didn't see any more."

On cross-examination young Turner admitted he did not know whether there were other girls around at the time or not. He did not know the names of the two girls, he said, who entered the room while Frank was trying to talk to Mary Phagan. The extent of his description of Mary Phagan was that she had light hair. The question of the admissibility of this evidence caused a long wrangle between the attorneys.

Rosser and Arnold objected on the ground that it was not at all material, proving absolutely nothing. They denied Dorsey's contention that it established that Frank had known Mary Phagan, in spite of his declarations that he did not know her. The lawyers said that it did not show that he knew her by name or that he was conversing with her on any other subject than her work.

"We contend that Mary Phagan was killed right on that second floor," retorted the Solicitor. "We contend that Mary Phagan and Frank were the only persons in the metal department at the time that this incident took place, and that she was backing away and protesting that she had to go back to work. We contend that it was the beginning of the transaction which ended in the little girl's death. It should go in as contradicting Frank's statement that he did not know her."

Turner was allowed to tell his story.

That Solicitor Dorsey refused to take any step toward the liberation of Minola McKnight, cook at the Selig home, who was imprisoned until she made her sensational affidavit against Frank, on the ground that it would "get him in bad with the detectives," was the unexpected and highly interesting statement made by Attorney George Gordon late in the forenoon session.

Gordon was called by the State, but proved as good a witness for the defense. He declared that the affidavit made by the cook was signed in his absence, although the last paragraph stated that it was signed in his presence.

He said that he had told Solicitor Dorsey that the negro woman was being held illegally, but that the Solicitor had replied that it was necessary sometimes to do things of this sort in order to get the information wanted. He told of going to the police station and finding Minola crying and hysterical in her cell.

The attorney for the colored woman said that he had not been permitted to enter the room where his client was being interrogated by the detectives and Ray Pickett and Arthur Craven, the latter two being employees of the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company. He was present, he said, when part of the notes were being read by G. C. Febuary, but was not there when the affidavit was signed.

The McKnight affidavit told of alleged conversations at the Selig home of a nature very incriminating to Frank. The McKnight woman denied all of the statements in the affidavit to a Georgian reporter the night that she was liberated.

A crushing blow was dealt the State by the refusal of Judge Roan to admit, either while the defense was completing its case or after the State had taken up the rebuttal, any evidence not directly and at first hand bearing upon the specific acts charged against the factory superintendent.

The ruling was a sweeping victory for the defense. It gave Frank's case, which had been aided materially the day before by the defendant's own statement, an added strength and heightened the prospects in Frank's favor.

Solicitor Dorsey tried first to cross-question Daisy Hopkins, one of the defense's witnesses, as to conversations she was supposed to have had in regard to incidents at the pencil factory in which she and a man undesignated except as her "foreman" were involved. Frank's name was not mentioned in the indicated charges. The conversation was about a "foreman."

The Hopkins woman denied again that she ever had made visits to the factory for improper purposes or that she had had the conversations referred to by the Solicitor.

Dorsey encountered the same stone wall when he tried to draw testimony against the moral character of Frank from his own witnesses. From W. P. Merck and J. P. Floyd the Solicitor had expected to obtain a recital of the stories of happenings which they said had been related to them.

Merck, however, had mysteriously disappeared from the courthouse when his name was called, and Floyd was not permitted to go into the details of the testimony the Solicitor had hoped to bring out.

The Solicitor thereafter confined his efforts to bolstering up the character of C. B. Dalton, the State's witness who testified to seeing women in Frank's office, and attacking that of Daisy Hopkins. He called a number of witnesses, one of them a cousin of the Hopkins woman, who swore that her character for truth and veracity was bad and that they wouldn't believe her on oath.

Swear Dalton's Character Is Good.

Other witnesses testified that Dalton's character was good. They were asked by Attorney Rosser if they were acquainted with his court and chain-gang record. They replied, for the most part, that they were not.

The brown suit worn by Frank April 26 was identified by Mrs. Emil Selig, his mother-in-law, at the opening of court in the forenoon and the suit was placed in evidence.

The defense prepared to show by Wiley Roberts, inside jailer at the Tower, that Jim Conley had been reading since his incarceration there, but the Solicitor objected on the ground that no basis had been laid for the testimony.

Daisy Hopkins then was called and questioned, after which the State began its rebuttal, the defense having closed its case.

While waiting for a witness Solicitor Dorsey arose and made the unexpected announcement that he himself had erased the identification "Taken out at 8:26" on the time slip taken from the clock in the factory. Frank had made the charge he had written words as an identification of the slip and that they had been erased. The Solicitor declared that he thought the detectives had made the identification.

"Frank did not know who made the erasure," said Attorney Reuben Arnold.

The Solicitor had announced earlier that his first witnesses in rebuttal would be called to support C. B. Dalton and impeach Daisy Hopkins, who declared she had never visited the factory with Dalton or that he had ever introduced Dalton to the factory superintendent.

Wiley Roberts was asked:

Q. Has Jim Conley been in your custody during this trial?—A. Yes.

Q. Has he ever asked for newspapers?—A. Yes.

Dorsey interrupted.

"Your honor," he said, "I think the witness, Jim Conley, ought to have the privilege of denying or affirming that before he can be impeached."

"Conley said that h could only read certain words," said Arnold, "but probably Mr. Dorsey is right. I will have to call Jim Conley back again. Mr. Rosser will be back in a minute and we will close."

Daisy Hopkins Is Recalled by Dorsey.

The witness was excused and Dorsey made the announcement that four doctors of the following five would be called by the prosecution:

Drs. G. C. Mizell, F. L. Eskridge, Clarence Johnson, John Funke, S. E. Benedict of Athens, and J. C. Cramer, of Macon, the latter two president and vice president of the State Board of Health.

Solicitor Dorsey asked that Daisy Hopkins be returned to the stand so that he might continue his cross-examination of her.

The witness took the stand.

Q. You say you knew nothing of the cot in the basement of the National Pencil Factory?—A. No.

Q. Do you know anything at all of the basement?—A. No.

Q. Are you acquainted with A. R. Floyd, of Redan, Ga.?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you known him for a long time?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you had a conversation with Floyd since the murder?—A. No.

Q. Haven't you been to his house to get milk?—A. I don't think I have since the murder.

Q. Didn't you go to the home of Floyd to get milk and tell him about that cot in the basement of the National Pencil Factory?—A. No.

Q. Do you know Bob Goddard?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Dr. R. S. Pound, of Redan?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Mr. Smith, superintendent of the Nunnally-McRae Company?—A. On Mitchell street?

Q. Yes.—A. Yes, I know him.

Q. Do you know Walter P. Merck?—A. Where does he live?

Met Merck on Peachtree Street.

Q. You met him first at Stone Mountain, then you met him on Walker street?—A. I met him at Redan. They used to live down there.

Q. You said something about being married. Have you two living husbands?—A. No; only one.

Q. Have you seen him since the murder?—A. Yes; at Redan.

Q. Do you remember meeting Walter P. Merck one Saturday afternoon on Whitehall street?—A. I met him on Peachtree.

Q. Didn't you tell him that afternoon that you were going to the National Pencil Factory?—A. No; I told him I had just left the factory.

Q. Didn't he make an engagement with you to go to the factory?—A. No.

Rosser objected, declaring that a female witness could not be attacked in that way.

"Your honor," said Dorsey, "I want to show by Merck that this woman did make an engagement with him that afternoon."

"I understand," replied Rosser, "that when an argument of this kind is to be made the jury is to retire."

"It would be better to have the ladies retire also," said Dorsey. "I don't want to embarrass them."

Jury and Women Retire From Room.

The jury retired, and after a hurried conference, Frank's wife and mother also left the courtroom at the request of Attorney Arnold.

"This is their witness," said Dorsey. "We want to show that this man Merck had her Saturday afternoon, and she said she was going to the National Pencil Factory. It was cold weather. We want to show that he saw her that night and what she told him."

The witness interrupted:

"It was summer time," she said pertly.

"She has denied," said Dorsey, "in the impeachment of Dalton that she ever went to the pencil factory for any improper purpose."

"We object," said Rosser.

"I want to show that she told Merck about meeting her foreman at the factory," said Dorsey.

Then the Solicitor repeated a conversation involving the "foreman," which is unprintable, which he wanted to get before the jury.

"He does not mean to charge Frank is the foreman," said Arnold. "He is frank enough to state that."

"Merck in an affidavit," said Dorsey, "said foreman. He didn't say Mrs. Hopkins said her superintendent or that she named any names. I mean to let the jury draw its own conclusions."

"I knew when your honor refused to rule out the charges of Conley and Dalton," said Arnold, taking up the argument, "that you were opening the doors for new issues that would obscure the charge of murder. I knew it would lead to a situation in impeachments bringing us to the point where we would hardly know who we were trying. This woman never would have been put up as an original witness except for the aspersions cast on her by Conley and Dalton. Look how far afield we have wandered. Now, he wants to impeach this witness on something with which the defendant has no connection."

"You can rebut any of their direct testimony," said Judge Roan. "You can not bring any new criminal charge against this defendant. If it is against someone else, it is irrelevant."

"Your honor," said Dorsey, "I want to ask a question to let the jury hear that you rule it out."

"No; we object," said Rosser "That's just why the jury was sent out."

"I'll let you assume that you ask it," said the court to Dorsey.

"Why, your honor," replied Dorsey, "it puts us in the position of not even trying to prove what we have indicated we would."

"I can not permit the question," said Judge Roan.

"Very well," said Dorsey, adding, in an undertone, "That shuts me off; that shuts me off."

Dorsey continued the examination:

Q. Didn't you meet Merck during the afternoon after working hours and tell him you were going to the pencil factory?—A. No.

Q. Didn't he come to see you that night?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you had been to the factory that afternoon?—A. No.

Men Say Woman's Character Is Bad.

Miss Hopkins was excused, and J. R. Floyd, of Redan, Ga., was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Do you know Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how many husbands she has?

Rosser: "I object, your honor. I don't care if she has three hundred husbands."

The objection was sustained.

Q. Would you believe her under oath?—A. I would not.

Q. Did you ever hear her say anything about a cot in the basement of the pencil factory?—A. Yes.

The witness was excused. Bob Goddard, brother of C. M. Goddard, who was shot to death a few months ago by Elmer F. Darden, was the next witness called in rebuttal. Goddard resides near Redan. Dorsey questioned him.

Goddard testified to the bad character of Daisy Hopkins, and declared he would not believe her under oath.

Henry Carr, of Stone Mountain; N. J. Ballard, a second cousin of Daisy Hopkins, and J. L. Rice all followed each other in rapid succession and testified that they would not believe the Hopkins girl under oath.

Dorsey then addressed the court.

"Your honor," he said, "we want to offer indictments against Daisy Hopkins and also a bond forfeiture."

Rosser: "Your honor, they objected to the introduction of an indictment against Dalton and they objected rightly. An indictment is nothing against one's character."

Dorsey: "Dalton denied any knowledge of an indictment. This is a bond forfeiture."

Judge Roan: "I rule it out."

Dalton's Recent Past Good, Says J. T. Hearn.

Glenn Smith, superintendent of the Nunnally-McRae Company, testified that Daisy Hopkins' character was bad and that he would not believe her on oath.

J. T. Hearn, of Walton County, said he had known C. B. Dalton since 1890. Dorsey questioned him

Q. Is his character good or bad?—A. The first part of his life was bad. The last part has been good.

Q. Would you believe him on oath?—A. Yes.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. When was the last time you knew Dalton?—A. 1903 or 1904.

Q. Did you hear about him being indicted for selling whisky in 1906?—A. Yes, but he had joined the church about 1904 and I understood was leading a good life.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Do you know the instance of his being indicted for stealing years ago?—A. Yes.

Rosser: "We object. He can't go into that."

Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Dorsey: "When they go into specific acts, can't I?"

Judge Roan: "No."

R. V. Johnston, another Walton County citizen, was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. When were you approached in regard to testifying to the character of C. B. Dalton?

Rosser interposed with an objection, but was overruled.

A. Last Friday, a week ago.

Q. Who approached you?—A. Harry Gottheimer.

Rosser again objected, and was sustained.

Q. Are you acquainted with the character of C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him on oath?—A. I would.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. You never heard that he was indicted for stealing and selling whiskey?—A. No.

The witness was excused, and W. M. Cook, of Social Circle, Ga., a dairyman and farmer, testified as to Dalton's good character, and declared that he would believe him on oath.

W. J. Elder, of Decatur, followed Cook on the stand, and said that Dalton came to Decatur about five years ago and worked for him as a carpenter. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Are you acquainted with Dalton's general character?—A. I don't know as I am.

Q. That means what people say about him?—A. Yes.

Q. Is his character good or bad?—A. Good.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. Why did you say just now that you didn't know?—A. I didn't know as I did.

Q. You said you didn't know because you didn't know yourself?—A. Yes.

The witness was excused, and A. B. Houston, of Decatur a farmer, who has lived there 41 years, was called. The witness said that he had known Dalton for eight years and that his character was good and that he would believe him under oath.

J. T. Borne, who formerly lived at Ingleside, in DeKalb County, and who now operates a cigar and soda fountain at Decatur, said he knew Dalton and would believe him on oath.

W. M. Wright, of Atlanta, general manager of the Independent Transfer Company, testified in behalf of Dalton's good character and declared that he would believe him on oath.

W. C. Hale, of No. 88 Kirkwood avenue, Atlanta, formerly of Walton County, testified to Dalton's good character and said he would believe him under oath.

L. L. Boyce, a city policeman, formerly of Walton County, testified that eighteen or twenty years ago Dalton's character was bad, but that now it was better and that he had heard nothing bad about him recently.

M. Gordon Caldwell, of Atlanta; J. W. Hunt, of No. 18 Trinity avenue, and W. P. Patrick, of tlanta, a member of the police force, testified to Dalton's good character and said that they would believe him under oath.

J. E. Dudley, a former employee of the pencil company, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Were you working at the National Pencil Factory about October, 1912?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember a machinist named Charley Lee?—A. Yes, he was working there.

Q. Were you hurt there?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. On the second floor, the office floor.

Q. Just where were you hurt?—A. On a metal machine. I hurt the forefinger of my left hand.

Mashed Finger But Kept Blood Off Floor.

Q. How were you hurt?—A. This fellow Lee had put the metal on the machine. It dropped off. I picked it up and in putting it back I mashed my finger.

Q. What did you do then?—A. There was some cotton waste there, which I put around my hand.

Q. Did any blood drop on the floor?—A. A few drops.

Q. Did any blood drop near the ladies' dressing room?—A. None.

Q. How long after this accident did you work?—A. I quit then.

Q. What does this fellow Lee do besides working at his trade?—A. I don't know.

Q. What did you do then?—A. I went to the office to get it dressed, then went to the Atlanta Hospital.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. How badly were you hurt?—A. Not very bad.

Q. You bled pretty freely?—A. Yes, but I had my hand in the cotton waste.

&. You didn't notice whether any blood was on the floor or not?—A. Yes; none of it dropped except at the machine where I was working.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Was your finger outside of the coton waste until you got to the office?—A. No.

The witness was excused, and the witness Merck was called, but failed to answer. Willie Turner, of Sandy Springs, the 16-year-old son of E. M.

FRANK'S STATEMENT IS BEST PLEA PRESENTED IN HIS DEFENSE SO FAR

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

So far, unquestionably, to my way of thinking Leo Frank himself has made the best and most appealing plea in behalf of Leo Frank.

His statement in the recital thereof was as clean cut, as dignified, as dispassionate and as convincing as any statement I ever heard from the witness stand, and I have heard hundreds.

Regardless of its merits—or, at least, aside from that—the defendant acquitted himself with credit, and that much may be said of him ungrudgingly and in the frankest fairness to all parties concerned.

Of course, had Frank been nervous, hesitating, "fidgety," or seemingly in any wise disconcerted, there would be those, perhaps, who would have seen in that great evidence of his guilt—and by the same token, in that he was calm, poised, self-possessed, even smiling at intervals, there will be those who see in that evidence of a monstrous coldness and unfeeling design.

The vast majority of those who heard that remarkable statement, however, must have been impressed by, at least, the apparent sincerity of it and the seeming inclination in the defendant to hold back nothing.

In its recital the statement of Leo Frank was wonderful—in its written form, stripped of the man's personality, it still is a human document of intense and absorbing interest.

It impressed me, too, as being in many ways characteristic of Frank as I have come to know him of late—and I never spoke one word to him in all my life.

I have come to know him as the prisoner sitting over there between the two women in the courtroom—the slight, spectacled party, a seat or two beyond Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold.

I have come to know him, in my way of knowing persons charged with grave crimes, not by way of personal touch so much as by constant observation of him under fire.

Repression Makes the Story.

All that was dramatic in Frank's statement was repressed—the dramatic touch was there, to be sure, but the red fire and the usual accompanying stage tricks were not.

If Frank should undertake to sell me a gross of pencils, I should expect him to tell me the truth about the pencils, and nothing but the truth—but I should expect him nevertheless to sell me the pencils at a profit.

His statement of Monday seemed to me a recital much after the fashion I should expect from him in the pencil transaction.

To me, it seemed that Frank was undertaking to tell the truth and nothing but the truth of the Mary Phagan murder, as he knows the truth—and to tell it at a profit to himself.

That is the best and the worst that I can say of Leo Frank's statement, as it appealed to me.

True, in a transaction involving a mere gross of pencils, there would be lacking all the great elements that entered into the statement Frank made on Monday—and yet, at that, neither subject matter is, in its final analysis, anything more or less than something about which the simple truth should be told.

Frank looked the jury fairly and squarely in the eye when he was making his statement—and not once did he hesitate or falter in stating his plea.

Contrast the statement of the defendant with the statement of the negro—the star witness summoned against him.

Frank's Day in Court.

Now, Monday was Frank's day in court, and it is square and right that Frank's showing should be criticised freely and frankly—it is right that his statement should be praised, if it seemed to deserve praise, just as it should be condemned, if it seemed to merit that melancholy fate.

Contrast it, therefore, with the statement of Conley!

Argue the matter with yourself.

Certainly, Frank has behind him a long period of decent life, good reputation, business integrity, and home happiness—and Conley has, what?

Take the two stories—and upon these two stories the verdict in the Frank case must turn eventually—and weigh them, side by side, honestly, without prejudice, and in the light of a clean conscience.

What is your answer?

What will be the jury's answer?

The field of speculation thus opened is most engaging, and it will, if one but undertake to enter it seriously and with open mind, be well worth the entering.

In the matter of his character, Frank said little. He entered simple denials to some few things cited against him.

He was willing to be cross-examined on his statement. He himself insisted that his general character be put in issue. He furnished the State with the first information it ever had that Conley could write.

All the way through, his statement rang with confident challenge, and a dare to the State to prove anything vile in him whatever!

Now, then, people will differ as to the EFFECT Frank's statement will and ought to have on the jury.

Maybe it is a clever evasion of a grave issue—maybe it is possible of rebuttal, and maybe it will be broken down.

Impressively Delivered.

The fact remains that it was most impressively delivered, and carried with it every emphasis of apparent truth and straightforwardness!

It is my opinion now that the State has in Frank's statement the hardest thing to get away from that yet has been tendered to it.

It contradicts the State at points that the defense has been able to fortify abundantly with facts.

It makes more necessary than ever before the complete success of the State's efforts to break down Frank's good name.

For I think it safe to predict that unless the State DOES demolish Frank utterly, the wonderful statement he made on Monday more than likely will serve in connection with the other things set up—to clear him of the charge of murdering Mary Phagan!

It matters not, so far as this article is concerned, moreover, whether the statement ought to clear him—the prospect is that it WILL clear him unless the State can batter it down and collapse it entirely!

The defendant touched upon every phase of the State's case against him—the happiness of his home, his nervousness on the morning of the murder, his movements on the day of the crime, and the day before, and the day after, his family's financial resources, his disinclination to talk to Conley, although he at first talked freely to the police officers, his alleged peeping into the girls' dressing room, his lack of knowledge of or acquaintance with the impeached Dalton, his non-association with loose characters, male and female.

There was not a point he failed to touch, even though he seemed to touch points now and then with a measure of fine scorn!

Is there a gap that Frank MIGHT let down that he has FAILED to let down?

Is there a point involved that Frank has not invited investigation of?

Hard to Find Gaps.

It is rather hard to locate any such gaps or points, if they are there.

And yet they may be there! That is for the State yet to demonstrate!

The State has the full right of rebuttal, as applied to Frank's statement, that it enjoys in respect of other evidence. There may be weak points in his story—just as there were weak points in Conley's.

The point is that they are not nearly so apparent upon the surface of things in the Frank statement.

For one thing, Conley made four sworn statements, all contradictory, before he got one finally landed, and Conley admitted freely from the stand that he had lied time and again.

On the other hand, Frank's statement is the first and only sustained and sequenced utterance as to the details of his story yet falling from his lips.

It must stand in its entirety or fall in its entirety.

Whatever may be the effect of that statement in the end, it will go down in the criminal history of Georgia as one of the most remarkably clear and apparently convincing statements ever falling from a defendant's lips.

When the State gets through with it, the statement may be shot to pieces and rendered utterly ineffective.

As it stands to-day, however, I hardly think a dozen people who heard it will deny the profound impression it made, and the present probability of its determining effect upon the minds of the jury.

The defense has played its best card in Leo Frank's statement.

It remains yet to be seen, however, whether that card is sufficient to win the case!

MOTHER OF LEO FRANK

Mrs. Rea Frank.

Wife at Last Breaks Down, Overcome by Frank's Story

After having braved every trying courtroom ordeal and faced every horrible charge hurled at her husband with a stoicism almost as unflinching and imperturbable as his, Mrs. Leo Frank gave away completely to her emotions and sobbed unrestrainedly as Frank said the last words of his wonderful and most impressive address to the jury Monday.

It was the final dramatic touch to a situation that had held a courtroom full of spectators in an irresistible thrall through four long hours of the afternoon.

The spell that had been cast over the room by the quiet but earnest words of the slight young factory superintendent was broken by the tones of the deputies, who shouted the moment Frank rose to leave the witness chair:

"Keep your seats, gentlemen, while the jury passes out."

Frank Rushes to Wife.

In the confusion that followed some did not notice that Frank rushed right to the side of his wife, who had thrown her head in her arms and was shaking with pitiful sobs as she moaned his name again and again.

The woman who had steeled herself against the accusations and innuendoes of the Solicitor General during the three long weeks of the trial collapsed when her husband himself took the stand to declare his innocence.

Many who had rushed into the inclosure to give their congratulations to Frank paused as they observed the piteous figure.

The jurors, already deeply impressed by the talk of Frank, were freshly touched by this exhibition of emotion. They had arisen to file over to the Kimball House. Juror Johenning, at the head of the line, stood for several minutes with tears running down his cheeks, oblivious of the fact that he was blocking the rest of the jurors and that three deputies were waiting to take them on their way.

Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner leaned against the railing of the inclosure. There was a suspicious moisture in his eyes, which have grown accustomed to many tragic and affecting spectacles.

Troublesome Lump Rises.

Very few in the courtroom had much to say until they had managed to subdue that troublesome lump that persisted in rising in their throats.

"Rube, that boy put it all over you and me," muttered massive Luther Rosser, huskily, to Reuben Arnold, his partner in the case.

For many minutes after the packed courtroom had emptied itself a little group of persons remained in front of the judge's bench. Mrs. Frank, the wife of the man accused of the revolting murder, and the elder Mrs. Frank, his mother, were weeping hysterically, overcome by the appeal that had been made. Relatives surrounded them. Frank talked comfortingly to them for several minutes, and then, feeling in danger of breaking down himself, signaled Sheriff Mangum and returned to his cell in the Tower.

Suffragettes Want Baby Booth at Fairs

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Among the things that the suffragettes, headed by Harriet Stanton Blatch, want is a pocket in their skirts and a place at fairs where women can check their babies.

Mrs. Blatch visited a number of fairs throughout the State and declares it a crying shame that at not one of them did she find a place where mothers could leave their babies while they rambled around the park.

Moonshiner Slays Man in Pistol Duel

LEXINGTON, Aug. 19.—In a pistol duel at Burnside, Ky., between Joshua Carter, a moonshiner, and John Fitzgerald and Town Marshal John Coomer, Fitzgerald was killed and Coomer wounded by Carter. The slayer forced a ferryman to row him across a river when pursued by a posse. Officers wounded him as he escaped to the mountains. A posse is in pursuit.

Gives Up Bad Checks, Admitting Forgery

MOBILE, Aug. 19.—When arrested on the charge of passing forged checks last night in a Royal street restaurant and taken before Chief of Police F. W. Crenshaw, J. A. Ball, a bookkeeper claiming Laurel, Miss., where he says his mother resides, as his home, admitted his guilt.

Ball, when seached at the police station, had a total of $315 in forged checks in his pockets.

Bulgar Plot to Slay All Turks Reported

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 19.—Evidence of a conspiracy of Bulgarians to rise up in Adrianople and massacre all the Turks has been discovered, it was declared in a telegram received here to-day by the Grand Vizier. The contents of the message were turned over to the foreign diplomats to support Turkey's contention that an army is necessary at Adrianople to protect the Turkish civilians from Bulgarian outrages.

DIGGS, ON STAND, TELLS OF TRIP WITH GIRL

Declares That Marsha Warrington Would Not Let Him Leave City Without Her.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 19.—Maury I. Diggs, defendant in the white slavery action brought by the Government, took the stand in his own defense shortly after court was reconvened to-day.

Diggs looked straight ahead as he answered questions put by Attorney Robert Delvin, for the defense. He spoke his answers in a loud, firm voice.

Diggs was attired in a fashionable blue serge suit, and wore a black tie. As he answered questions slowly, he glanced down at his clothes, and sometimes let his eyes rest for a few seconds on his recently-manicured nails. He leaned forward as he talked, one elbow resting on his knee.

He told of meeting the Warrington girl and informing her that he was compelled to leave Sacramento on business and that he intended going to Los Angeles.

"I told her, too," he said, "that I wanted to get away before there was a scandal and things got embarrassing for me. I thought it would be best for me to go away. She said she didn't want me to leave. I told her that I had my business and my future to think of and also my family.

Says Girl Wept.

"She cried a little bit and said that I must not go. I said to her that I thought we had better break off our relations. I left her that evening, and she went by me. She thought I was going away for two weeks, and she was surprised the next day when she rang up and found that I was still in town. I told her that I had stayed to arrange things in my office."

Miss Warrington had testified last week that she did not tell Diggs she wanted him to stay in Sacramento.

Diggs said that a Sacramento theatrical man had warned him that his escapades had attracted the attention of juvenile court officers. He said the theatrical man warned him that if he continued his present habits he would be compelled to move his office from the building which the theatrical man controlled.

Questioned about an automobile ride on week before the trip to Reno, Diggs said: "Marsha and I were riding in the front seat of the machine and Caminetti was on the running board. We saw a machine behind us. It kept right on our trail and I discovered that it was following us purposely. After we got out of the city a ways I turned to one side of the road and put out the light. The car passed without its occupants seeing us. I said:

Wife Knew of Escapades.

"'They are after me. I'm going to get out of town for a few days. I've got my family to think of.'

"Marsha said: 'Well, I'm going, too. You are not going to leave me behind.'

"Caminetti asked what we were going to do about Lola, and Marsha said: 'She'll go, too, and if she doesn't want to go I'll make her.'"

During a conversation with his uncle, Diggs said he told his relative that he was going to "cut out all his foolishness" and get out of Sacramento for a few days until the trouble on account of his association with Marsha Warrington blew over. Lola Morris, he said, was present at this conversation and she agreed with him that he should leave. At the same time his uncle told him that Mrs. Diggs knew of his relations with Miss Warrington.

BAILIFF SHOT AS WRIT IS SERVED ON MERCHANT

Officer's Wounds Are Serious Following Attempt to Close Store in East Point.

Bailiff J. P. Gaddy is lying seriously wounded at his home in East Point Tuesday morning, with bullet wounds in his breast, shoulder and right arm, following a pistol battle with J. J. Willis, an East Point storekeeper, late Monday afternoon.

Willis fired six shots at Gaddy when the officer attempted to place him under arrest on a warrant charging contempt of court. A few minutes after the shooting Willis was arrested by Policeman Creel, of College Park, while trying to make his escape into the open country.

Gaddy was taken to his home at No. 4 Pine street, in East Point, and his wounds dressed by Dr. E. C. Suggs. Four of the shots fired by Willis took effect, the first entering the right breast and ranging downward under the left arm, the second shattered the bones of the right elbow, and the last two striking the officer in the shoulder. Dr. Suggs stated last night that Gaddy will live.

The warrant for Willis' arrest was issued because he had opened his store in violation of a writ of attachment served upon him several weeks ago, after George Harris, a cotton mill worker, had obtained a judgment for $1,000 against Willis for false imprisonment. Willis had previously had Harris arrested on a charge of obtaining goods under false pretenses, and had lost the case.

"When I went after Willis I was accompanied by my brother-in-law, John Wynn," said Sheriff Gaddy in telling of the shooting. "We found Willis sitting on the steps of his store. When he saw us he ran into the building. When I got inside he covered me with a gun. I told him not to shoot and started for him. He fired, the bullet striknq me in the breast. I then drew my gun, but before I could shoot another bullet struck me in the elbow. I was helpless, and staggered out of the front door. As I did so Willis fired four times and two of the bullets struck me in the back."

Special Session Idea In Alabama Growing

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 19.—That Governor O'Neal may call a special session of the Legislature in order to straighten out the United States Senatorial muddle appears more likely to-day.

The anti-fee system advocates in Jefferson County, the largest county in the State, are working hard to have included in the call for the special session the anti-fee system bill. It is pointed out that the Sheriff of Jefferson County gets in fees almost as much per annum as did the President of the United States before the last increase in salary of the latter.

Aged Fat Man in Furs With Mercury at 100

BOSTON, Aug. 19.—While the street thermometers registered 100 here, a man aged and fat, wearing a heavy winter suit, a heavy ulster that reached the ground, heavy shoes and a fur cap, with the laps turned down over the ears, was seen wandering about the streets, seemingly cool.

3 Years in Prison For Selling Liquor

MERIDIAN, MISS., Aug. 19.—Probably the heaviest sentence ever imposed for the illegal sale of liquor in this State was given when Trayant Johnson, a cripple, to-day was given three years in the penitentiary.

The law makes the third sale of liquor a penitentiary offense.

FACTORY BOY SWEARS HE SAW FRANK ACCOST MARY PHAGAN

Dorsey Feared He'd 'Get in Bad' With Detectives, State Witness Says

INDIRECT TESTIMONY AGAINST PRISONER IS FORBIDDEN BY JUDGE

Turner, a farmer, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. About March, of this year, where did you work?—A. At the pencil factory.

Q. Do you know this man? (pointing to Frank)—A. Yes.

Q. Did you know Mary Phagan?—A. When I saw her.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank talking to Mary Phagan?—A. Yes; on the second floor.

Q. What time was it and how long before the murder?—A. About the middle of March.

Q. Where was it?—A. In the back part of the building.

Q. What time of day was it?—A. Just before dinner.

Q. Who was in the room besides them?—A. No one else. Two girls came down after I did.

Q. What was said?—A. I heard her say she had to go to work.

Q. What did he say?—A. He said he was the superintendent of the factory—"

Rosser: "We object and we want to argue this without the jury."

The jury was sent out.

Dorsey—Let the witness tell what it is.

Turner—Mr. Frank told the girl he was superintendent of the factory and wanted to talk to her. She told him she had to go back to work. Mr. Frank then went off.

Mary Backed Away From Frank.

Q. How was she acting?—A. She backed off from him and he walked toward her.

Q. How far did she back?—A. Three or four feet. That was all I heard. Mr. Frank turned away.

Judge Roan—You can go into this to this extent. You can show whether he knew Mary Phagan.

Rosser—This other has nothing to do with it.

Hooper—If my brother will just keep still a little bit, we may be able to proceed further. This has another value. It shows familiarity or a desire for familiarity.

Rosser—If your honor is with us, I don't want to argue.

Judge Roan—The question is whether it can be shown just how this conversation took place.

Rosser—That is not the purpose of this evidence——

Hooper—Your honor——

Judge Roan—Sit down, Mr. Hooper. The question is whether this will show whether he knew her well enough to know her name.

Rosser—This evidence doesn't show that.

Dorsey—Your honor, this witness says this meeting occurred in the same place and near the same spot where we have contended the murder occurred. It is the basis for further evidence.

Arnold—That last statement let the cat out of the bag. They want to bring out another charge. This whole case has been beclouded with every charge that could be imagined. We have gotten away from the charge of murder and have been made to answer every conceivable charge.

Hooper—I object to that, first because it is not true and second because it is not the point at issue.

There was smothered applause.

"There is another disturbance of some sort," shouted Arnold.

Judge Roan rapped for order and directed that the jury be brought in. He addressed Solicitor Dorsey.

"You may put your question and let him tell what he knows," said Judge Roan.

Q. What did you see? Tell it in your own way, telling everything that you saw.—A. They were back in the rear of the building near the entrance. She was coming to her work just before dinner. Mr. Frank met her and said: 'I want to speak to you.' She said: 'I have got to go to work.' He said: "I am the superintendent of the pencil factory and I want to speak to you.' She backed off and he walked toward her.

Q. Is that all?—A. Yes.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. What time was it?—A. Just before dinner.

Q. How was it she was just going to work?—A. She was returning to her work at the machine. It was just before the whistle blew.

Q. Lemmie Quinn's office was there, wasn't it?—A. Yes.

Q. There were ten or twelve women there in the polishing department?—A. I don't know.

Q. Well, what about those two girls in there?—A. They came back and told me where to put the pencils.

Q. Do you know who they were?—A. No.

Motorman Hits Daisy Hopkins' Character.

Q. They came back at the time this thing was going on?—A. Yes.

Q. What kind of a looking girl was Mary Phagan?—A. She had light hair.

Q. What else?—A. I can't describe her.

Q. Do you really know her?—A. Yes.

Q. How?—A. Some boy who worked on the fourth floor pointed her out to me one morning when she came to work.

Q. Do you know any one else at the factory?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Walter T. Merck was called.

Dorsey questioned him.

Q. What is your business?—A. A street car motorman.

Q. Do you know Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever meet her on Saturday afternoons at the corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets?—A. Yes.

Q. What did she say?—A. I asked her where she was going and she said she was going to the pencil factory.

Q. Did you see her any more?—A. Yes. I made an engagement to go to her room.

Q. Did you see her?—A. Yes, about 8:30 o'clock in a room upstairs at the corner of Walker and Peters streets.

Q. Did she say where she had been?—A. To the National Pencil Factory.

Q. Do you know her character?—A. Yes.

Q. Is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Does the company know your character? It's a beauty according to your own admission, isn't it?

Dorsey interposed with an objection and was sustained.

Rosser: "Come down, come down, come down."

McKnight Woman's Lawyer Called.

The witness was excused, and George Gordon, who said he had practiced law for thirteen years, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Were you present at the police station when Minola McKnight was brought there?—A. Yes; or, rather, I was on the outside a part of the time. I went there in connection with getting a habeas corpus proceedings for her release. The detectives told me I could not go in just then. I decided to make a demand to see her, and it was granted. I went in and Stenographer Febuary read a statement to her from his notes, then went out to write it. Detectives Starnes, Campbell and Lanford, Chief Beavers and two men from Beck & Greggs were there when the stenographer went out. I said that I didn't think that she ought to be held. They told me they could do nothing unless I got your (Dorsey's) permission. So I went to see you, and you told me that you could not let the woman go, because it would put you in bad with the detectives.

Q. Didn't I say that I had no right to hold her?—A. No; you said you would not release her without a habeas corpus.

Q. Why did you not wait until she signed that paper?—A. I went up to see you.

Q. Did you hear her say anything about the statement? Read over the notes and then answer the question.—A. That is the substance of the notes that Febuary read over to her.

Q. What did she say? Did she deny or admit them?—A. She said she believed that was about right.

Dorsey Feared He'd "Get in Bad."

Q. I told you I didn't have anything to do with locking her up, and that it would be meddling for me to order her release.—A. You said you would not interfere because you would get in bad with the detectives. That is what my recollection is, Mr. Dorsey.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. You knew that she had been to Mr. Dorsey's office and had been taken away screaming?—A. Yes; I heard that.

Q. That Mr. Dorsey, an officer of the peace, let the police take that woman away screaming?

Dorsey interrupted. "You say you know that?" he asked the witness.

Rosser: "Wait until I get through." Then he continued his question.

Q. Did you ever find out what charge they had against her?—A. I had a habeas corpus to get her release, but could not get to her.

Q. They just held her because she would not give a statement to the police that Mr. Dorsey wanted?

Dorsey interposed an objection.

Rosser—I submit to this jury that the evidence in this case proves it is true.

Dorsey—I submit it is not true, I don't care what you argue to this jury.

Rosser—And you didn't care what you did to that poor negro woman.

Dorsey—I didn't do anything to that negro woman.

Judge Sustains Dorsey's Objection.

Judge Roan sustained Dorsey's objection. Rosser asked Dorsey for the affidavit that Minola made in Dorsey's office. He asked the witness if he had ever seen it before, and the witness answered, "No."

Q. Who was guilty of false imprisonment—was it Starnes or Beavers?—A. Beavers said he knew about it, but that he could not let her out unless Dorsey ordered it.

Q. Did he have a warrant?—A. No.

Q. Then they let her out the next day?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see her?—A. I saw her that first evening. She was in a cell and crying hysterically. I asked Chief Beavers to let her out in the corridor and I guess he did.

Dorsey took the witness again.

Q. Didn't I tell you that I had absolutely no rights in the matter?—A. Something like that, but if you will pardon me, Hugh, I will tell you exactly what was done. I went to you when the police told me they could not let the woman go without an order from you. You told me you had not had the woman arrested and was not having her held.

Q. Now, didn't Febuary read over to you a portion of that affidavit?—A. Yes, he read something.

Q. Now, didn't he read a part of the statement, and she added to it the part about the money?—A. She said something about money.

Q. Now, what else did she say?—A. I don't recall.

Q. Didn't you question her yourself?—A. I asked one or two little questions.

Q. What about?—A. She said something about a bucket of water that was not very plain, and I questioned her about it.

Rosser took the witness again.

Q. You don't know what happened behind those doors?—A. No.

At this point court adjourned until 2 o'clock.

President of State Board of Health Testifies.

When the afternoon session started Solicitor Dorsey announced that on account of some of the State's witnesses being out of the city he would vary his program. He called Dr. S. E. Benedict, of Athens, president of the State Board of Health, and a member of the faculty of the University of Georgia for 32 years, to the stand.

On the first question asked him, Attorney Arnold made strenuous objection and precipitated a long argument. The question was:

"Were you present at the meeting of the State Board of Health when Dr. Westmoreland preferred charges against Dr. Harris?"

"Weo bject to going into that," said Mr. Arnold. "We would have to get the minutes of the board and all of that."

"I am not going into the matter further than to disprove Dr. Westmoreland's statement," said Mr. Dorsey, "that the State board found Dr. Harris guilty of scientific dishonesty."

"You can go into the question of the feeling of the witness," said Judge Roan.

"Suppose," said Rosser, sarcastically, "Mary had a little lamb, it's fleece was white as snow, would that have anything to do with this case?"

"I am not going into iit further than to disprove Dr. Westmoreland's statement," insisted Dorsey.

"Well, I am going into it," said Arnold, "if you don't. I am going to ask him about a letter he wrote Dr. Westmoreland."

"Go ahead, Mr. Dorsey," said Judge Roan.

Q. Were you present when Dr. Westmoreland preferred charges against Dr. Harris?—A. Yes.

Q. Were those charges substantiated?

Arnold—Your honor, the minutes are the best evidence.

Dorsey—All right; take the minutes.

The minute book of the State Board of Health was handed the witness.

Q. Look at page 128 and tell me if that is a correct report of that meeting?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, doctor, I want to know whether those charges were found to be true.

Arnold—The minutes are the best evidence.

Judge Roan—Are those charges on the minutes?

A. I don't see them.

Q. Well, what was the vote?—A. I think it was unanimous.

Arnold—Doctor, where are the charges?—A. I suppose they are in the possession of the secretary, somewhere in his office.

Arnold—Dr. Harris, then, has the charges preferred against him? And while the defense is on the minutes, charges are not?—A. You misunderstood me. Neither the charges nor the defense are on the minutes. Only the action of the board.

Judge Roan—Didn't Dr. Westmoreland in his testimony say that he preferred charges of scientific dishonesty against Dr. Harris and because the board would not dismiss Dr. Harris that he resigned?

Rosser Says Record Speaks for Itself.

Arnold: "No; Dr. Westmoreland's version was that the board found him guilty but refused to dismiss him, and he (Dr. Westmoreland) resigned."

Dr. Benedict: "That is not true."

Rosser: "Never mind; the record speaks for itself."

Arnold and Rosser then examined the minutes.

Dorsey: "I will ask you iwf you are familiar with the business and professional life of Dr. Harris?"

"We object," said Rosser, and the objection was sustained.

"Dorsey: "Doctor, what is the condition of the board now?"

Rosser objected again, and was sustained.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. Doctor, I want to ask you about a letter you wrote Dr. Westmoreland.

Dorsey: "We object to that. It is irrelevant."

Arnold: "I haven't the letter here, but will have it long before the doctor's train leaves."

Judge Roan: "I will wait until I see the letter."

Dorsey offered part of the minutes of the State Board of Health as documentary evidence.

Arnold: "I don't think any of this should go in on the ground that it is irrevelant, immaterial and incompetent."

Judge Roan: "I will let it in for what it is worth."

The defense asked that their objection be recorded.

Dorsey: "I would like to kown if the letter of the fourth to the Governor on the subject was admissable."

Rosser: "It is as admissible as any of the other minutes, but we object to it all."

Judge Roan: "I will rule the letter out."

Recalls Examination Of Minola McKnight.

Roy Craven, salesman at the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company, was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Did you know Minola McKnight?—A. Yes.

Q. When idd you see her last?—A. At the police station.

Q. Are you connected with the police?—A. No.

Q. How did you come to be there?—A. Her husband worked at the same place I do and asked me if I would not go down to the police station and try to get her out.

Q. Were you there when this statement was signed?—A. Yes.

Q. Previous to that statement, did you see her at her home?—A. Yes.

Q. Who was with you?—A. Pickett and her husband.

Q. Why did you go there?

Rosser interposed an objection and was sustained.

Q. Did you go either at the request of the Police Department or myself?—A. No.

Q. Now, give me the best recollection of the time, if you can?

Rosser objected, but was overruled.

Q. Give me the day?—A. It was the middle part of May.

Q. Now, tell what tihs woman, Minola McKnight, said when she made that affidavit at the police station?—A. Well, she would not talke at first, but we told her what Albert had said.

Q. What was it that Albert had said?

The witness gave the substance of the Minola McKnight affidavit.

Q. Then what did Minola say?—A. She was somewhat reluctant to talk at first, but when we told her what Ibert had said she gave us the affidavit without stopping.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Didn't you know that she was in jail because she would not give the sort of a statement they wanted?—A. I did not.

Rosser Objects to Servant's Affidavit.

Q. Why did you think they had her in jail?

Dorsey: "We object to what he thinks. Stick to the statements."

Q. Did you go to Mr. Darsey's office before you heard Minola make her statemtns?—A. Yes.

Q. Why did you go there?—A. To try to get her out.

Q. It wasn't any trouble to get her out after she made a good statement, was it?—A. I wasn't thre when she got out.

Q. Why didn't you stay there?—A. I didn't want to.

Q. You got a statement agreeing with what her husband had told you, then you left her in jail?—A. I went on out and left her with her husband.

Q. Didn't you try to get Mr. Dorsey to get her out?—A. I went to see what I could do.

Q. What did he say?—A. He said he would dow hat he could. He said for me to ga to see Mr. Starnes or Mr. Campbell.

Q. Did you go?—A. Yes.

Q. How long did you stay?—A. Abotu three hours.

Q. Did you ask them to let her out? A. No.

Q. You don't konw what happened before you got there, do you?—A. No, I am not a mind reader.

Dorsey: "Now I want to tender this affidavit of Minola McKnight is evidence."

Rosser: "All in the world that affidavit san show is the treatment that poor woman received at the hands of the police. It is inadmissable."

Crowd Roars When Sheriff Sits on Floor.

Dorsey: "Every word of it is admissable, because it is a flat and positive repudiation of Minola's sworn statements on the stand."

Judge Roan: "Let me read it. I will rule on it later."

The witness was excused, and E. H. Pickett, also an employee of Beck & Greggs Hardware Company, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him. He was given the Minola McKnight affidavit to read. Sheriff Mangum, in an attempt to stop talking in the courtroom, met with a little accident that sent a ripple of merriment throughout the room. While Pickett was reading the affidavit, the Sheriff arose from his seat beside the witness stand.

"You people over to the right are talking too much, and if you don't stop I will have to put you out," he said. When he turned to resume his seat he missed the chair and sat down upon the floor with a sad expression on his face. The crowd in the courtroom fairly roared.

Pickett read the affidavit, then Dorsey questioned him.

Q. You were present when that paper was signed, were you not?—A. Yes; that is, immediately before Minola signed it.

Q. Who else was there?—A. Minola's lawyer, Roy Craven, one or two detectives and myself.

Q. What statement was made before she signed it?—A. Albert McKnight said she had made certain statements. She then admitted it a little bit at a time.

Q. What did she say first?—A. That she had been cautioned not to talk.

Q. Then what?—A. She admitted she got a little more money.

Q. Did she say everything shown in this affidavit?—A. Not the first part. She didn't make those statements in my presence.

Didn't Appear Willing To Talk Then.

Q. Was she willing to talk?—A. No. She said she would talk to me, but she would not talk to the detectives. Before the detectives left she said her husband was a liar.

Q. Did the detectives leave?—A. Yes.

Q. Then you questioned her?—A. Yes; but we, Craven and myself, could not write shorthand, and sent for the stenographer.

Q. Who was there when she made the statement about Mrs. Frank making certain remarks to her mother?—A. Starnes, Campbell, her lawyer, the stenographer, Lanford, Craven and myself.

Q. Well, tell the jury what she said.

Rosser: "The affidavit is the best evidence."

Dorsey: "But you are objecting to the affidavit."

Judge Roan: "I am going to let in that affidavit with the exception of the part that could not be put in regularly. For instance, that part where she quotes the conversation she overheard."

Dorsey: "May I or not, without considering the affidavid, ask him all relevant point of Minola McKnight's statement?"

Judge Roan: "You can take the affidavit and ask him about all relevant points."

Dorsey: Mr. Pickeht, what did the woman say about Frank eating dinner?—A. First she said he ate dinner. Finally she haid he did not.

Q. What did she say first about her husband, Albert, being there?—A. At first she said he was not there, finally she said he was.

Q. What did she say about the Seligs and Frank discussin the ragedy Sunday?—A. At first she said she did not hear anything. At last she said she did hear something.

Q What did she say about being told to keep her mouth shut?—

Rosser: "Unless he wants to show that Frank told her that, it is irrelevant."

Counsel in Another Wrangle.

Dorsey: "It is relevant to impeach the negro."

Roan: "It is relevant, I think."

Rosser: "You could not impeach Mr. Selig on such a statement. Certainly it is inadmissable to impeach Minola McKnight."

Rosser dictated his objections to the court stenographer.

Dorsey: "Answer the question, Mr. Pickett."

A. At first she denied it, then she said Mrs. Selig told her to keep quiet.

Rosser continued to object.

Hooper: "This witness can be put on the stand and impeach half a dozen witnesses."

Roan: "You understand it must be relevant to some issue in this case."

Hooper continued to argue that the question should be admitted.

"Judge Roan: "If you insist, I will let it in."

Q. What did Minola say with reference to what was said to her about talking?—A. She said she was cautioned not to talk.

Q. What did she say at last about receiving a higher or lower wage?—A. She said her wages were increased after the crime.

Q. What did she say first about that hat?—A. She only made one reference to it.

Q. Did anybody suggest anything about the hat, before anyone asked her about it?—A. Yes.

Q. Now who was in there before you went to the door and called the detectives?—A. Alfred McKnight, Craven and myself.

Offered to Free Her If She Made Statement.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Now, why didn't you believe her first statement?—A. Because we thought different.

Q. You kept her there two or three hours, didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you give her the third degree?—A. We didn't call it that.

Q. Did you see Dorsey?—A. Yes; we saw hom before we went to the police station, and he told us he would arrange for us to see her, and that we might arrange to get her out.

Q. Did you tell Minola that you had come down to get her out?—A. We did tell her we wanted to get her out if we got a statement.

Q. Well, why didn't you get her out?—A. She left the station house before we did.

Q. After she gave that statement they let her out?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know she left there before you did?—A. No, but the detectives said she had.

Q. You didn't know she had been there twelve hours when you got there?—A. Yes.

Q. You knew she was there because she would not give the statement the detectives wanted, didn't you?—A. No.

Q. You went there to make her give the statement the detectives wanted?—A. Not that. I thought it was my duty as a good citizen to aid in getting at the truth.

Rosser (very angrily and with contempt in his voice)—Let him come down; let him come down.

Negro McKnight Called to Stand.

The witness was excused, and Albert McKnight, husband of Minola McKnight, was called to the stand. Hooper questioned him, and had the negro step down from the witness chair and stand before the jury while he displayed a blueprint of the Selig home and a diagram of the dining room and the sideboard mirror, through which Albert said he observed Frank during lunch at the Selig home on Saturday, April 26.

Q. Where were you sitting in the kitchen on that day?

Rosser—I object; you went over all this on the direct examination.

Hooper—We had no diagram then; that was brought in by the defense.

Judge Roan—The witness may explain the diagram.

Hooper—I want ta show by this witness that the sideboard has been moved so as to change the angle of vision.

Q. How is the location of the sideboard to what it was when you saw it?—A. It has been pushed around.

The witness pointed out the change to the jury on the diagram.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. How do you know this has been changed? Were you there when it was changed?—A. No, sir; but I can tell by looking at the diagram.

Girl Called to Stand by Dorsey.

Miss Nellie Wood, a former employee of the National Pencil Factory, was called to the stand by Solicitor Dorsey. Attorney Rosser, anticipating the character of her testimony, announced that he would like a definite ruling at once regarding the introduction of certain character evidence. The jury retired.

Frank's wife and mother left the courtroom by request. Dorsey addressed the court. "We want to show by this witness actual specific misconduct on the part of this defendant. We want to show that Frank made an indecent proposal to this lady. It shows his conduct and his character; and I submit that it is material."

Rosser: "Your honor, they have no right in the world to put that testimony in. We have never put any evidence in that would allow the introduction of this testimony in rebuttal. We insist that you rule definitely. All the evidence we have put in to show Frank's conduct was in rebuttal to the statements of Conley."

Judge Roan: "Mr. Dorsey, tell me how you can get around the statutes, that you can not ask specific instances on one's character except on cross-examination."

Dorsey: "What about the questions of Mr. Arnold to the women who worked on the fourth floor of the National Pencil Factory?"

Judge Roan: "To my mind it is not debaatble."

Dorsey: "Then we are shut out."

"Judge Roan: "The law shuts you out. On the principle you advance you could put a man on trial at this time for everything he ever did in his life."

Dorsey: "I don't want to send the jury out any more. I have witnesses to prove other things. Can I prove

Boils Are a Bad Indication

With S. S. S. You Can Tell Poisoned Blood to Be Gone.

The appearance of boils leads many people to consider them a sign of robust constitution. They are more apt to signify a condition of sick blood.

It sounds queer to take a blood bath, but that is precisely the effect when you use that remarkable remedy, S. S. S. It has the peculiar action of soaking through the intestines directly into the blood. In a few minutes its influence is at work in every artery, vein and tiny capillary. Every membrane, every organ of the body, every emunctory becomes in effect a filter to strain the blood of impurities.

And best of all, this remarkable remedy is welcome to the weakest stomach.

You can get S. S. S. at any drug store. It is a standard remedy, recognized everywhere as the greatest blood antidote ever discovered. PATHFINDER GIVEN BIG WELCOMES ALL ALONG ROUTE TO BIRMINGHAM

By HUGH GRANT.
(Sunday American Representative With Pathfinder.)

TALLAPOOSA, Aug. 19.—E. L. Ferguson, official "pathfinder" for the All-Southern Transcontinental Highway, and party ended a triumphant tour through Georgia here Monday night. The party, consisting of Mr. Ferguson, Mrs. Ferguson and the Ferguson children, arrived on schedule time at 5:45 o'clock. The tourists left early Tuesday morning for Anniston. They will be joined en route by President John Craft, of the Alabama Good Roads Association, and State Highway Engineer Keller, who will accompany them through Alabama.

That Tallapoosa is keenly awake to the importance of the monster project to blaze a trail from Atlanta to San Francisco was clearly indicated Monday night when a score of Tallapoosans, including Mayor C. E. Pearce, L. E. Chandler, editor of The Tallapoosa Journal, and other prominent citizens, held a conference with Mr. Ferguson at the Tallapoosa Hotel in regard to the formulation of plans for the development of better roads in this vicinity.

The Tallapoosa good roads boosters were very enthusiastic over the campaign inaugurated by The Sunday American, and pledged their hearty support.

All Towns Give Welcome.

Tallapoosa's warm reception, however, was only one of many between here and Atlanta. All along the 63-mile route the good roads boosters turned out to give the transcontinentalists a rousing send-off.

At Austell Mayor L. C. Upshaw and Editor Dake, of The Douglasville New Era, heading a delegation of Douglasville boosters, met the tourists and escorted them to Douglasville. Here good roads and highways were talked of, and a typical old-time Georgia dinner was served at the Douglasville Hotel, with Mayor Upshaw and Mr. Dake acting as hosts.

Other Douglasville citizens who acted as official escorts were R. E. Edwards, J. F. Long, superintendent of the cotton mill; J. M. Banks, and Douglas County Commissioners J. T. Lee and A. S. Gresham.

According to Mr. Gresham, the Douglas County authorities are preparing now to spend several thousand dollars on the development of the old Tallapoosa road. The largest work will be the construction of a new steel bridge over Sweetwater Creek costing approximately $2,000.

The improvement in Douglas County of the Tallapoosa highway which was traversed by the Ferguson party and which has been selected as the official route will make this one of the best roads in the entire State.

Pathfinder Ferguson declared Monday night that the road between Austell and Douglasville was excellent, and that he remaining sections were good and could be put in fine shape by the expenditure of moderate sums in each county.

Leaving Douglasville Monday afternoon, Mr. Ferguson and party made a bee line for Villa Rica, arriving there on schedule at 3:40. Temple, Ga., was reached shortly after 4 o'clock, Bremen at 5, Waco at 5:15 and Tallapoosa at 5:45. Members of the party reported a most delightful trip, with not a single mishap to mar the journey.

A wire from Heflin, Ala., Tuesday morning told of elaborate preparations there for the reception of Mr. Ferguson and party. From Heflin the tourists will proceed to Anniston, Ala., where a monster good roads celebration will be held a a greeting ebration will be held as a greeting guson expects to reach Birmingham Thursday at noon.

St. Clair Boosters Guide Pathfinders.

ANNISTON, Aug. 19.—A party from St. Clair County, including John W. Inzer, probate judge; J. L. Herring, Dr. W. B. Johnson and Uranus Pickette, all of Asheville, arrived here to-day to join the Ferguson transcontinental pathfinding party. They will pilot the scouts to St. Clair, whence they go to Birmingham.

WITNESSES GIVE DALTON GOOD REPUTATION

that a girl saw Frank with another woman in the dark?"

Judge Roan: "No."

Dorsey: "Can I show his conduct—slapping girls as he passed through the factory?"

Judge Roan—You can show a bad character by this woman or any other; but you can't show a specific act.

The jury was recalled.

Dorsey Says Witness Mislead Him.

Dorsey questioned the witness.

Q. Do you know the character of Leo M. Frank?—A. No, I only knew him two days.

Q. I mean what people said about him; say yes or no.

Rosser—She has answered the question; that should end it.

Judge Roan—Do you know his character; answer yes or no—A. No.

Dorsey addresed the court.

"Your honor, I have been mislead by this witness."

Rosser—I don't care anything about that.

Judge Roan—She hasn't said anything to hurt you, and you can not proceed as though you were entrapped.

Dorsey—Miss Wood, do you remember a conversation with me—(Rosser interrupted.)

Rosser—Now that is absolutely inadmissable.

Judge Roan—I sutain you.

Dorsey—Come down.

J. H. Kendircks, a street car motorman, followed Miss Wood on the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Were you running a street car on April 26?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know a man named Matthews?—A. No.

Q. What route were you on April 26?—A. Marietta street to the stock yards.

Q. Is that a portion of the English avenue and Cooper street line?—A. Yes.

Declares Cars Run Ahead of Time Often.

Q. What time did you get to town that day about noon?—A. I can not remember exactly, but I never get there any later than 12:06.

Q. Did the English avenue car with Matthews and Hollis running it ever get to that corner ahead of time?—A. It certainly did.

Q. Do you know what time they got relieved for dinner at Marietta and Broad streets?—A. At 12:07.

Q. About April 26, and prior to that time, did Matthews and Hollis ever get to that corner ahead of time, and if so how much?—A. Two to three minutes.

Q. When Hollis would be at the corner of Broad and Marietta, and your car was on time, what would Hollis do about going to dinner?—A. He would go on my car.

The witness was excused and J. C. McEwen, another motorman was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Did you run on the Cooper street line prior to April 26?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall what time the Cooper street car would arrive at Broad and Marietta streets with reference to your car?—A. My car got there at 12:10.

Q. What time would the car Matthews and Hollis were on get there, if the car was on time?—A. 12:07.

Q. What time does the White City car get there?—A. At 12:05.

Q. Did the English avenue or Cooper ever cut off the White City care and come in ahead of it?—A. Very often.

Q. Do you know the car that Matthews and Hollis run?—A. I know their schedule.

Q. Has their car ever cut off the White City car?—A. Their schedule has. I don't know who was on it.

Q. Have you ever come in ahead of time?—A. Yes.

Q. Frequently?—A. Yes; when coming in on a relief trip.

Q. How much was the most you ever came in ahead of time?

Rosser objected and was sustained.

Q. How much is the most you ever knew the English avenue line car to come in ahead of time—A. Three or four minutes.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. When was that?—A. I don't remember the exact date.

Q. You don't know whether Matthews and Hollis were on schedule on April 26 or not, do you?—A. No.

Witness Says He Saw Girl at About 12 O'Clock.

Q. Isn't it as feasible for the White City car to be blocked by the English avenue car becaus the White City car is late as because the English avenue car is ahead of time?—A. Yes.

The witness was excused.

M. E. McCoy, a painter and farmer of Bolton, Ga., was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Did you know Mary Phagan?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see her on April 26?—A. Yes; I saw her in front of No. 12 Forsyth street going toward Alabama street.

Q. What time was it?—A. About 12 o'clock.

Q. How near 12 o'clock?—A. Well, I left Walton and Forsyth streets at 12 o'clock.

Q. How long afterward was this?—A. Three or four minutes.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. When was the first time you told this?—A. I think it was a week ago, last Saturday.

Q. Was that the first time you ever told it?—A. It was the first time I ever told an officer. I don't konw about anybody else.

Q. You didn't know everything was being done to find out about her?—A. Well, I didn't know it was very important, and I didnt' want to get mixed up in it. Then I saw the statement of the motorman that she got off the car at Broad and Hunter streets and I knew that was wrong.

Q. You saw by the shrdlcmfwyshrl

Q. You saw by George Epps' statement too, didn't you?—A. I don't remember abuot that.

Q. How do you know it was 12 o'clock?—A. I looked at my watch.

Q. Where were you yesterday at 12 o'clock?—A. At Buckhead.

Q. Did you look at your watch?—A. Yes.

The witness was excused and Geo. Henley, a street car motorman, was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Did you know Mary Phagan?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see her on April 26?—A. Yes.

Q. What time was it?—A. About 12 o'clock.

Q. Which way was she going?—A. Going south on Forsyth street. She had just stepped off the viaduct.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. What time did you get off that day?—A. At 11:40 O'clock.

Q. What had you done between that time and noon?—A. I went down to Hastings' seed store on Mitchell street and then caught a car back.

Q. What time did the car get back? A. Its schedule is 12 o'clock.

Q. Who else did you see that you knew that day?—A. I saw lots of people.

Q. Name one?—I can't say. When I saw in the papers about this girl I remembered seeing her.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. You are not mistaken about seeing Mary Phagan?—A. No.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. Haven't you been villifying this defendant on the street cars until you have made yourself a nuisance?

Dorsey objected and Judge Roan overruled him.

A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell Mr. Brent that you knew Frank was guilty?—A. No.

Q. When did you tell this first?—A. About the day after.

Q. Who did you tell?—A. Lots of ople.

Q. Name one?—A. Mr. Means, for ne.

Q. Why didn't you go down and tell the Coroner's jury about this?—A. No one asked me to.

Q. You are a good citizen? Why did you keep this secret locked up in your bosom?—A. I did not.

Q. Didn't you tell Mr. Brent that Frank's children told your children?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you, in the presence of Mrs. Haas on the College Park car, vilify Frank?—A. No.

Q. Haven't you just been blowing and making yourself a nuisance on the cars? And didn't you say that if he was released, you would join a party to lynch him?—A. No; let me explain.

Q. No; answer my question.—A. No.

Dorsey—Is it right, your honor, to ask this man that question without first putting the witnesses on the stand?

Judge Roan—He is your witness—he is only trying to show interest.

Rosser—Answer my question, then.—A. No.

Q. When did you first tell the detectives about all of this?—A. About a week ago, when the detectives came to me.

Q. Now, when did you tell that fellow Means about it?—A. It was right after the first day.

Q. What did you tell me right at the first?—A. That it was about 12 o'clock.

Q. You didn't look at your watch, did you?—A. No.

Q. Well, it might have been 12:10?

A. No, it was very near 12 o'clock.

Q. Starting from Lindsay street at 10 minutes to 12, what is the earliest time she could have got to town? A. 12:50.

Q. Will you swear it was as early 12:05 o'clock that you saw her?—A. Yes.

Q. Give me the number of your car. A. 1465.

The witness was excused and Dr. Clarence Johnson, a specialist on the stomach and intestines, was called.

Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Doctor, what is pathology?—A. A pahtologist is one who makes a special research of diseased conditions

Q. What are the subjects?—A. The dead or fluids supposed to be dead.

Q. What is a physiologist?

Rosser: "We must object to all of this. We think we know grammar, yet you might entrap us. I may know what a participle is, but I coudn't swear it to save my life."

"There isn't a branch of business, profession or trade in the world that hasn't got cranks or fools in it," added Rosser.

Hits Evidence Of Dr. Hancock.

Judge Roan: "It is a matter for the jury."

A. A physician of the actions of the human body and health.

Q. What position have you ever held with local colleges?—A. I was once professor of physiology and pathology. Now I hold the chair of stomach and intestine diseases.

Q. Who succeeded you?—A. Dr. Harris, as head of the department of pathology.

Q. When did Dr. Bachman come in?—A. Several years ago.

Dorsey showed the witness specimens of the cabbage taken from the stomach of Mary Phagan; also specimens taken from the stomachs of other persons.

Q. If you gave a person cabbage three or four hours after they had drank a chocolate milk, and if the cabbage was taken out of the stomach 40 minutes later and showed chocolate coloring, was it a normal stomach?—A. That quantity of stuff taken from a stomach 30 minutes after eating would show an abnormal stomach.

This was a sample that had been exhibited by Dr. Hancock, a witness for the defense. The witness also said that another of Dr. Hancock's specimens of tomato was taken from an abnormal stomach. To a hypothetical question from Solicitor Dorsey as to the time a specimen of cabbage was in Mary Phagan's stomach before death, Attorney Arnold objected.

Arnold—If this is allowed, we will bring back all our experts.

Dorsey—That is not so terrifying to Us. It is now almost 6 o'clock. This is very important to the State. Will the court allow me to cite some authorities to-morrow?

Judge Roan—I will.

Court then adjourned until 9 o'clock Wednesday morning.

'I'm a Blacksmith,' Says Harding Davis

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—A young newspaper reporter, paper and pencil in hand, darted briskly among the crowd at Healy's Restaurant during the process of ejecting the diners. He saw a man continually in the shadow of District Attorney Whitman.

"Will you give me your name, please?" asked the young news gatherer.

"Davis!" replied the other.

"May I have your first name?" questioned the youth.

"Richard Harding—Richard Harding Davis."

"What is your occupation?"

"Oh I'm a blacksmith."

Two Killed at Camp Meeting Dice Games

LEXINGTON, Aug. 19.—Two men were killed and several badly wounded in a general fight during crap games at Wichita camp meeting in Mason County, Kentucky. Benjamin Timberlake and Henry Queen are dead.

William Queen, William and Thomas Timberlake and Daniel Sanders are alleged to have taken part in the battle.

Laborer En Route for Fortune Dies at Sea

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—While en route to Australia to get $1,000,000 which was left to him by his father-in-law, William Lunstall, a laborer, died at sea, according to a wireless telegram received here to-day. The father of Lunstall's wife died in Australia leaving a vast fortune, and Lunstall proved the only heir. He was a penniless laborer and had difficulty getting passage money to buy a ticket.

Blind Tiger Taken From Water Wagon

TIFTON, Aug. 19.—When the man on the water wagon sells liquor, the town that owns the water wagon is up against it to keep in line with prohibition.

Henry Wade, negro driver of the city sprinkling cart, has been arrested by Chief of Police Thrasher for using the city sprinkling cart as a blind tiger.

KELLY IS PUT ON ALDERMANIC BODY

Second Ward Water Commissioner Gets McClelland's Place. Pure Vaudeville Law Pends.

C. H. Kelly, water commissioner from the Second Ward, has been chosen to fill the vacancy on the Aldermanic Board from the Second Ward, occasioned by the resignation of Alderman J. E. McClelland. The selection was made by the City Council Monday afternoon.

Mr. Kelly served as Alderman from the Second Ward prior to the election of Mr. McClelland, and when Commissioner George Walker moved out of the ward and left a vacancy on the Water Board, Mr. Kelly was elected to fill his place. The vacancy on the board caused by the resignation of Mr. Kelly will be filled at the next meeting.

No action was taken on the "pure vaudeville" ordinance. It was introduced too late for consideration. The amendment tacked on the ordinance by the Ordinance Committee, according to Acting Chairman Wood, prohibits any person appearing on the stage in an "indecent or immodest costume." The original ordinance prohibited tights and short skirts.

Dr. W. D. Vinson, of the Fifth Ward, was chosen to succeed Dr. R. N. Weaver as a Grady Hospital trustee.

The report of the Street Committee adverse to changing the name of Murphy avenue was adopted. The report favoring the change in name of McDaniel Street to Oxford terrace was referred back.

Councilman Ashley's resolution providing for an appropriation of $600 to employ an engineering expert to represent the city when the evaporation test is made at the crematory, was adopted.

Lunatic Says He Is Pat Crowe, Kidnaper

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—A man who says he is Pat Crowe, kidnaper of Eddie Cudahy, Jr., son of the wealthy Omaha packer, is held in the Washington Insane Asylum for observation.

The patient told the police and physicians that he had come to Washington to forward his claim on a patent for an invention preventing the spreadig of rails.

He said Secretary of State Bryan was his personal friend, and that through the Secretary he hoped to secure his papers from the patent office.

Surgeon General Studies Pellagra

SAVANNAH, Aug. 19.—Dr. Robert Blue, Surgeon General of the Public Health Service of the United States, is in Savannah to inspect pellagra cases in the Marine Hospital and the Quarantine Station at the mouth of the Savannah River. The visit is a part of the tour of inspection throughout the South.

Dr. Blue is especially interested in hook worm and pellagra conditions in the South, and will stop on his way back to Washington at the hookworm camp of the Rockefeller Commission at Wilmington, N. C.

Fresh Appeal for Exhibit To Be Made

Three hundred Atlanta manufacturers will gather at Hotel Ansley for a luncheon at 1 o'clock Tuesday. They will discuss the manufacturers' exposition which the Chamber of Commerce has been endeavoring to establish in its building.

While many manufacturers have signed for space in the exhibit, there still is a large amount which has not been taken. Unless this is arranged for immediately, the proposition is likely to fail through.

Enthusiasm has been displayed, however, and around the Chamber of Commerce the belief is that the exposition is assured.

3 WOUNDED WHEN MOB STORMS JAIL

Spartanburg Sheriff and Deputy Rout Would-Be Lynchers of Negro Assailant.

SPARTANBURG, Aug. 19.—Sheriff White and one deputy fought off a mob of several hundred who attempted to enter Spartanburg County jail and lynch a negro. Frank Eppley, J. C. Owensby and John Turner were wounded by the Sheriff and his deputy before they drove the mob from the jail.

The mob attempted to blow up the jail with dynamite, but failing, tried to batter down the doors. It was then the three men were wounded and the mob was forced to recognize the courage and determination of Sheriff White and his deputy.

Threats were made by the mob that they would secure nitroglycerin and destroy the entire building, but they did not return.

The negro had attacked a young white woman earlier in the day. He was later captured and landed in jail. The mob formed after nightfall and attacked the jail.

ATLANTA NEW YORK PARIS

A Great Waist Sale Starts Here At 8:30 in the Morning

A doubly fine Waist Sale because it is made up of waists from our own stocks and others that our buyer just captured in New York—in one instance we are clearing out stock in true Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. fashion, in the other we are passing on a fortunate purchase, this, also, in true Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose fashion.

Many kinds of waists are included, batistes, voiles, crepes, linens, crepe de chines and wash silks, and in every instance the savings are more than half.

We doubt if the woman who "never has enough waists" ever had a better opportunity to supply herself—and the waists will be those she will choose for their charm and chic and—savings.

But here—

49c
For $1.00 and $1.50 Waists
White linen waists in plain tailored styles, tucked and plaited; also lingerie waists trimmed with neatly patterned embroideries and with laces—in the regular way $1.00 and $1.50 never bought prettier—low neck, short sleeves, high neck, long sleeves.

79c
For $1.50 and $2.45 Waists
Some of these are just out of their boxes and the laces, the embroideries, batistes, voiles and styles are as fresh as can be, others are those $1.50 and $2.45 values from our own stocks that are a hit mussed. All white, low neck, short sleeves, high neck, long sleeves.

For $2.50 to $4.00 Waists
One particularly attractive and new style is of white voile with a low round collar edged with net frilling, short sleeves, embroidered front, others of batiste and voiles with crochet buttons, a few show Dresden colorings—one hundred to choose from.

For $4.00 and $4.50 Waists
One hundred in all, made in many pretty ways. Voiles, batistes and French crepes, with low flat collars and lace collars, linen laces trim a number of these and crystal buttons and embroidery that looks much like hand work.

For $5.00 to $8.75 Waists
Fine choice here—sixty-five waists of white and striped crepe de chine, of China silk and wash silks, Irish lace collars are prominent, and little vest effects worked out in sheer laces and heavy plaited double ruffles. They will go quickly.

For $1.50 to $3.75 House Dresses
Eighty-six house dresses to add zest to the selling. They are lawns, daintily striped and flowered and figured and fashioned, light colors, low collars trimmed with Swiss embroideries and folds, plain skirts with panels in front and back.

SUFFRAGE CRAZE WILL RUIN U. S., SAYS TILLMAN

South Carolina Senator Also Deplores "Swapping of Wives Among the Rich Class."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—"I, looking at the growing craze for women suffrage and the rapid increase in the number of divorces granted in this country, sadly think, if I do not say, 'America, thy race is almost run unless something is done to check thy headlong speed,'" declared Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, in the Senate to-day, while discussing the woman's suffrage question.

Senator Tillman declared he is strongly opposed to granting the ballot to women.

"The customs of our people inherited from our forefathers," said the Senator, "make it dangerous to 'monkey' with womankind. If the California men had our customs, Diggs and Caminetti would not be allowed to go to trial now because they would have been shot like dogs.

"Among our very rich people in America the geenration has gone so far that swapping wives is a common practice. The women are just as bad as the men."

SLATON APPROVES 3 ATLANTA BILLS

With more than 200 bills on Governor Slaton's desk which had to be signed immediately, the doors of the executive offices were closed to visitors Tuesday while the Governor delved into the mass of work in an effort to get the bills signed and out of the way before the next batch came from the engrossing clerks of the House and Senate.

The Governor expects to sign all the bills that reach him Tuesday before the day is over, in order to forestall any discussion as to whether Sunday shall be counted as one of the five days in which he is allowed to sign bills passed by the Legislature.

Up to Tuesday morning Governor Slaton had signed only one of the three local bills affecting Atlanta. This was the measure creating a new judge for the Atlanta Circuit, which he approved Monday afternoon. The other two, the bill creating a new charter for the city and the bill creating municipal courts, probably will be signed Tuesday.

It is understood the Governor will defer appointing the new Atlanta judge until he returns from the conference of Governors at Colorado Springs, Colo., next week. Governor Slaton will leave Saturday, to be gone about ten days.

THAW FAMILY IS READY TO FIGHT EXTRADITION

Escaped Slayer, Arrested in Canadian Village, Defies Captors. Admits Identity Readily.

SHERBROOK, Que., Aug. 19.—Harry K. Thaw, who escaped from Matteawan asylum Sunday and was arred in Coaticook to-day, was transrested in Coaticook to-day, was transternoon.

Thaw has retained W. L. Shurtleff, one of the best known lawyers in Eastern Canada and one of the most sensational international legal fights in Canadian history is expected.

The United States Government will be represented by Heeter Verret, K. C.

Thaw may be deported as a maniac upon request of the New York authorities, according to the opinions of Canadian official.

No sooner was Thaw brought here than he began to realize the seriousness of his predicament, and he began to bombard various sections of the United State with messages. He notified his family at Cresson, Pa., of his arrest and received word that representatives of the family were starting at once for Sherbrooke. It is understood that Mrs. Mary Thaw, the aged mother of the fugutive, will come here.

Thaw will not discuss his movements since he got away from the New York institution Sunday morning, except to say that he boarded a train east of Boston. He said he was making for the coast and planned to sail for Europe.

Thaw was accompanied here by two men, one heavily built and the other slight and both smooth shaven.

Recognized on Train.

Deputy Sheriff Burleigh Kelsey, of Colebrook, recognized Thaw on a train bound for Canada. Kelsey got off at Colebrook, got an automobile and after a chase of almost 20 miles overtook Thaw with two companions in Coaticook. They had left the train at Beecher Falls and driven across the border into Canada.

Kelsey notified the Coaticook police and kept on their trail. Thaw, when arrested, made no resistance and to-day will be lodged in the jail at Sherbrooke, Quebec.

Kelsey was on his way home to Colebrook after a trip South and was reading a paper when a stranger came from a few seats down the aisle in the smoking car and asked for a match. The Deputy Sheriff was reading the story of Thaw's escaping in the paper and a picture of Thaw stared up from the paper. He looked at the stranger and saw that the likeness at once resembled the stranger.

The stranger at once noticed the stare and said: "What's the matter? Do you think you know who I am?"

"I could make a pretty good guess," said Kelsey.

"Well, who am I then?" the stranger demanded.

"I think you are Harry K. Thaw."

Kelsey said the stranger laughed uneasily and then said blandly, "Well, you are right. I am Thaw. But you don't want me. You couldn't do anything to me if you wanted to. They have acquitted me of murder and you can't extradite me."

"Where are you bound for?" Kelsey asked.

"Canada," the man answered.

Pursues Him in Auto.

Kelsey picked up his paper again and the man who had declared he was Thaw went back to his seat with the match he had come to get. Deputy Sheriff Kelsey got off the train here. Then he found L. W. Barbour and Warner Drew and they decided to chase the party.

They got an automobile and made a quick run to Beecher Falls, the next station, just south of the Canadian line. There Kelsey made inquiries and found that three men answering the description of the three he had seen on the train had alighted and hired a man named Brooks to take them for a drive.

Kelsey got the direction and, by asking along the road, traced the carriage driven by Brooks across the line into the Canadian woods. The three men had evidently persuaded Brooks to drive them by a wood road, and Kelsey traced them easily. They overtook Brooks, but his carriage was empty.

"I would not drive them any farther," said Brooks. "I have got to get back to the falls. They offered me $20 to go on, but I couldn't do it."

"Where did they go?" Kelsey asked.

"They got a farmer to drive them to Coaticook," Brooks replied.

Thaw Admits Identity.

Kelsey and his two companions put on speed, and on the edge of Coaticook they saw the team ahead with three men and the driver in it.

Kelsey stopped at a house and telephoned to the Coaticook police, then went ahead in his automobile and followed the vehicle. A policeman stopped the carriage. "Which of you is Harry K. Thaw?" he demanded.

The three men each made denials, and said the police had made a mistake. Then Kelsey came up, and when the man who had previously admitted he was Thaw saw Kelsey, he refused to talk.

Later Kelsey, who went to the police station with the officers and the man he had identified as Thaw, telephoned to his family in Colebrook that Thaw had again admitted his identity to the Coaticook police.

Deputy Sheriff Kelsey then telephoned to New York and told them he had a man thought to be Thaw under arrest.

LIND AND HUERTA REACH PEACE AGREEMENT

Report of War Move Against the United States Is Denied by Charge O'Shaughnessy.

It is thought that the Mexican newspapers were instructed to print only this story and that they will not carry the denial of this ultimatum issued by Senor Gamboa early to-day.

In this way, it is believed, the Huerta government will be enabled to "save its face" before the Mexican people without at the same time bringing on war with the United States.

Mexico City Shaken By Arsenal Explosion.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 19.—A heavy explosion shook the southwestern section of Mexico City to-day, causing great alarm. All the windows in the suburb of Tubacay were broken. It was at first believed to have been an earthquake, but later it was said to have been caused by an explosion of the powder magazine and arsenal at Santa Fe.

There was a heavy troop movement to-day. Large bodies of infantry, cavalry and artillery passed through the streets.

President Huerta experienced a sudden change of heart last night, summoned Envoy Lind to him and spent two hours in discussion of possible measures that would lead to peace in Mexico.

Cablegrams reaching the White House to-day show clearly that Huerta yesterday afternoon turned down Mr. Lind with great emphasis, and that the latter reported the failure of his mission to the State Department. Some hours later General Huerta summoned Mr. Lind to the National Palace and discussed with him the very points he previously had refused to consider. The result of this discussion the White House has not yet made public.

The change of front on Huerta's part is puzzling President Wilson and State Department officials, and they are wondering what change of attitude will come next.

No final point in the negotiations between Envoy Lind and President Huerta has been reached, and official information coming to Washington to-day shows they are progressing satisfactorily. That the official American note to Huerta was rejected in one instance and that this rejection was withdrawn is established. The full text of the Huerta reply to the note is being cabled to the State Department, and probably will be laid before President Wilson late to-day.

Lind and Huerta Patch Up a Truce.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 19.—After the Mexican Government had served a note upon the United States rejecting President Wilson's Mexican proposals and demanding recognition—an action which might have resulted in war—John Lind, special envoy from President Wilson, and President Huerta got together in the National Palace early to-day and patched up a truce.

Detectives Hunt for Missing Bridegroom

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 19.—Mystery surrounds the disappearance of Reuben Rowe, an express messenger on the Southern Railway, from his home in Birmingham.

Rowe was married only a few weeks ago. He had been ill for several days at his home, when Monday morning he left home. He has not been heard of since. His wife is prostrated with grief. Railroad detectives are making a search for him.

Rome is said to have left a note a few days ago stating, "I'm gone; won't ever come back," but on seeing his wife's grief he pretended it was a joke.

U. S. to Aid Japs In Land Law Test

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—It is understood that in its efforts to deal fairly with the Japanese Government the State Department has indicated a purpose to facilitate any court proceedings that may be brought to test the alien land law legislation in California.

Issue Warrants For Japanese and Wife

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The Bureau of Immigration has issued warrants for the arrest of Hidekuni Iwata, a wealthy Japanese, and his wife, Norae Iwata, on charges of harboring women for immoral purposes in Fresno, Cal.

Iwata and his wife, immigration officers declare, were proprietors of property which housed 27 women arrested in a recent raid by the Fresno police.

Birmingham to Need Wire Workers Soon

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 19.—By December it is figured there will be need for no less than 1,500 men who are skilled in steel wire and cast iron pipe-making in Birmingham, the plants of the American Steel and Wire Company and the National Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry Company being rushed to completion.

Wages of steel wire workers are above the average.

Liquor Question Is Issue in Alabama

ANNISTON, Aug. 19.—With the hope of keeping the liquor question out of the next session of the Alabama Legislature, a proposed compromise between prohibitionists and local optionists in this county is being discussed, the object being to insure men of high moral and mental ability, men with business experience, to represent the county at the next session.

Mystery in Death Of Woman on Train

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Mrs. May Bacharach, 43, wife of Herschel Bacharach, superintendent of the City Club at Boston, Mass., died to-day, poisoned by food or water on a train en route from St. Louis to Chicago.

Coroner Hoffman of this city, began a searching investigation of the cause of her death.

RICH DENOUNCED IN BOOK BY CHEF

Leon Pescheret, in Socialistic Treatise, Calls Them Ill-Bred Hogs and Immorality Producers.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—In a booklet published under the title of "Gluttony and Lucre," Leon Pescheret, famous over Europe as a chef, and now directing the commissary of a large Chicago hotel, says the wealthy patrons of eating places in America are "gilded, mixed breed, perverted calves, who have more money than sense, and who become criminals through indulgence in their rattish and doggish pastimes."

Three of Pescheret's most pointed paragraphs say:

"Many servants would experience a great deal more satisfaction and be rewarded by much more gratitude attending real swine than at feeding the ill-bred hogs that are disorganizers and producers of immorality and the present-day social order of things."

"In no class have I found more hypocrisy and false devotion, false morals, deceitfulness—even among themselves—than among snobbish, wealthy people."

"Clothes and jewelry do not make the lady or gentleman. Any good experienced and traveled waiter realizes that people finely dressed and with plenty of money to spend show about as much ignorance about a daily menu as a mule dressed up in silks would show."

JUDGE STAYS EXECUTION.

TIFTON.—Pending an appeal to the State Supreme Court, Judge W. E. Thomas has indefinitely postponed the execution of I. B. Hall, convicted of the killing of Dennis W. Hall and sentenced to hang on August 22.

Augusta-Columbus Railroad Proposed

COLUMBUS, Aug. 19.—A movement which had its origin in Macon, with a strong second by the Columbus Board of Trade, has come to light which proposes a direct railroad line between Columbus and Augusta, passing through Macon and the county seat of every county which it would touch.

The distance would be about 240 miles, and would not parallel any other road. Those who have begun the movement express confidence in the project and believe that it can be financed and that it will become a reality.

CURED ITCHING HUMOR ON FACE

Very Embarrassing. Could Not Sleep. Used Resinol—Well in a Week.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 3, 1913.—"I had a ringworm on the side of my face. It began like a cold blister—a small red mark. Each day it became larger until it was a round ring about the size of a quarter. It burned and itched me terribly, and was very sore. It was also swollen and caused me a great deal of discomfort, as I could not sleep at night. It was very embarrassing and I didn't want any of my friends to see me. I used several remedies such as — and some kind of a powder, but they did no good. I used Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment for one week and cured it." (Signed) Eleanore D. Shekels, 308 North Sheridan Ave.

The Saddest Word and the Gladdest Word---"Good-bye" and "Hello"

By NELL BRINKLEY

Nell Brinkley Says

I KNOW lots of folks who won't say it—that saddest word—"good-bye." "Adieu," they say, and "addio," "farewell" and "so-long," "auf Wiedersehen" and "aloha," "until the next time" and "be good"—but not "good-bye."

Under the word "good-bye" the sun seems dim. Birds droop and do not sing. The heart beats slow and heavy and the temples ache and tighten. The blue sky films with gray. Every face that turns our way and passes on seems to hide tragedy. Everybody else in the world, seems like, is saying good-bye, too.

And we watch them with tenderer eyes since we are bidding some one farewell. After good-bye there is nothing to do, no place to go, no one to see. The world seems bigger and suddenly wiped bare of beauty. We are afraid!

But EVERYBODY will say "HELLO!" They don't go hunting round for another word, any other word, so they can sort of slide by the plain, potent English. Under the short, keen, gladdest word, the sun and the sky are gold and blue. If it rains, why then we suddenly like rain. Under our tight jackets the heart beats high and fast and bursting big. Every face that turns our way seems like it had good news and blinds us.

If, maybe, a sad one lifts out of the glad ones, we forget it soon. Because we are saying "Hello." And if there's a bird singing anywhere we hear it. There is so much to do, so much to see, so many folks to like. The world seems suddenly like a rose and "full," as sweet-tempered R. L. S. says, "of a number of things."

And we are not afraid.

Had the Advantage.

Second Man—Beg pardon, but you have the advantage of me.

First Man—Yes, I suppose I have. We were engaged to the same girl, but you have married her.

Delaying the Torture.

Harry—Do you believe in long engagements?

Tom—Of course. The longer a man is engaged the less time he has to be married.

Do You Know---

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reason to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms, and underground passages—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet.

Clocks without hands or faces are now common in Switzerland. The timepiece stands in the hall, and when a button is pressed by means of phonographic arrangements it calls out "Half-past five," or "Five minutes to nine," as the case may be.

The greatest number of runners ever contesting in a single race ran through the streets of New York recently in a twelve and three-eighths-mile marathon. The runners taking part were 1,500 in number, and there were 300 prizes.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

PERHAPS HE IS SHY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am working in a place of business with a man of whom I think a great deal. Any time I write him to call to see me he appears to be quite delighted and calls, but never makes any effort to call unless I ask him. Don't you think he should ask me if he can call? PUZZLED.

Such a request from him would show an interest in you which he now seems to lack. You say he always accepts and is delighted. That encourages me in the belief that he thinks a great deal of you, but is bashful.

Don't ask him for a time. I have an idea he will speedily ask you.

LET IT BE NO.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young lady of sixteen and keeping company with a young man of eighteen for one year. This young man has asked me to marry him, but I would like for him to change his position He promised me he would in the spring. Kindly let me know if I shall give any decided answer. ANXIOUS.

You are sixteen and can well afford to wait. You do not state what the man's position is, so my advice is based only on your years. I want love to come to you, but, believe me, my dear, it will be all the sweeter if your judgment is more mature.

MAKE THE OVERTURES.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a girl and she is in love with me. We had been keeping steady company, but lately we got mad, and we do not speak to each other. I would like a reconciliation and so would she. B. S. L.

You are a man, and stronger to bear the burden. Take on your shoulders the burden of the blame, persuading yourself that you offended and deserve it. Tell her you alone are to blame, beg forgiveness, and promise never to offend again. If you are not willing to say "I was wrong," then you are not fitted to say "I love you."

He Wasn't Shy.

Old Lady (to cabman)—Does your horse ever shy at motors?

Cabby—Lor' bless you, no, lady; 'e didn't even shy when railway trains fust come in.

HOW ARE YOU FEEDING YOUR CHILDREN?

Are you giving them nourishing food—food that will develop their muscles, bones and flesh—food that is easily digested and cheap?

Ever thought about Spaghetti—Faust Spaghetti? Do you know that a 10c package of Faust Spaghetti contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef? Your doctor will tell you it does. And Faust Spaghetti costs one-tenth the price of meat. Doesn't that solve a big item in the high cost of living?

You probably haven't served Faust Spaghetti as often as you should because you don't know how many different ways it can be cooked—write for free recipe book to-day and you'll be surprised at the big variety of dishes you can make from this nutritious food. In 5c and 10c packages.

MAULL BROS., St. Louis, Mo.

Like Champagne.

At a meeting presided over by a burly country squire the chief speaker was a budding orator with a seat in the upper house.

Said the chairman, grasping the nervous speaker by the arm on the conclusion of his lordship's address:

"Your speech was like a glass of good champagne"—here the noble lord smiled pleasantly—"lots of froth and very dry."

Then the smile came off.

His Guide Book.

An English bishop who was an extremely busy man, and had to travel a good deal, was addressing the children of a school. He said:

"My dear children, I have been all this week traveling hither and thither through my diocese, and what book do you think has guided me? Come, now, it's a book beginning with 'B.'"

"The Bible, sir," cried a chorus of youthful voices.

"Ah, no," said the Bishop, with a twinkle in his eye. "It's Bradshaw."

Lady Constance Stewart Richardson
on
How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Dancing.

BEAUTY must be a harmonious whole. In the figures of the dance one ungraceful step can mar the perfection of the rhythmical charm one is trying to produce. In the physical rhythm of the human body an ugly arm or hand can spoil the spell of loveliness.

The question I always ask myself is: Why, in a world where we are all under the sway of physical lure, do we so calmly accept our own imperfections and those of our children?

We work intelligently for evolution and growth in health and strength and brain power; but beauty and grace we accept in the old superstitious fairy-tale fashion as the gift of the good fairies—and we fold our hands in the supposedly philosophical decision that either we have it or we have it not. Not at all! Either we have beauty or we set about getting it—if we have brains enough to acquire anything!

It is a simple thing to train the human body in the right way—the way it should go—in the beginning, but it is hard to alter bodily faults once they have come. However, if you have come to maturity without proper training in bodily grace, and the health and ease and beauty it brings, do not despair—instead, dedicate 30 minutes morning and evening—(one hour out of your day) to the beautiful art of the dance, and soon your reward will be great not only in terms of the pleasure of pleasant, graceful movement, but in health, beauty and a gloriously symmetrical figure, too.

Proper Training.

And make sure that your little children, and the dear young things all about you, have the proper beginnings to insure for them healthy and beautiful and graceful bodily growth.

Since an ugly arm or hand can so easily spoil the perfection of beauty, suppose, to-day, I show you how beautiful arms and hands may be evolved through proper training. It seems a far cry from dancing to beautiful arms and hands, but I shall try to show you how they may be gained in the rhythmical movement and exercise of the classical dance.

As most of the movements of the classical dance are executed with high-flexed arch and the body's weight falling on the ball of the foot, while the instep is held in a firm high curve, they give of themselves a slender grace and power to the too-much-neglected foot. In both of the exercises I give you to-day the body must be poised lightly and springily upon the ball of the foot, inclining forward toward the toes. Walking and dancing thus will banish the flat-foot that seems to be a foe of modern high-heeled civilization.

The first picture shows one stage of a very wonderful arm exercise. Poise the weight on the balls of the feet, swaying slightly back and forward from toes to heels as the arms are raised with drooping wrists to shoulder height. When the arms are straight lines from shoulder sockets, raise the wrists, and arms simultaneously until the backs of the hands just touch above the head.

A Dancing Step.

Now drop the arms slowly, with rhythmical muscular control, to the shoulder height again and turn the arms so the palms are alternately up and down parallel to the floor. Then, with palms down, sink the arms gradually to the sides, at the same time inclining the weight gradually to the entire foot. Practice this with gradually receding and increasing tempo, and finally do it as you walk forward on tiptoe, or as near as you can manage to this toe position.

The second picture is a little dancing step that can be practiced at a walking tempo until enough facility is gained to do it merrily and lightly as a dance. Advance on the ball of the feet with toes pointing outward. Incline the body forward, and keep the head a bit forward in the line of the slight curve of the back. The arms swing up in gentle curves until the elbow is about at waist height.

As the weight is swaying to the forward left foot, swing the left arm out with its line a slight droop from elbow to wrist, and the right arm in, with the forearm curving up almost perpendicular to the ground, and the wrist drooping. Swing the arms in and out thus from side to side as the weight of the body springs from foot to foot. In all these arm exercises hold the hand relaxed from the wrist, with light, pliant fingers, middle fingers fairly close together, small and index fingers gently curved and relaxed with the index finger pointing up ever so slightly.

The faithful practice of these two exercises will register for you a distinct step toward the acquisition of poetically graceful arms and hands.

The figure to the left shows the culmination of the exercise for developing beautiful arms through rhythmic motion.

To the right is shown a classical dancing step in which the hands and arms are also exercised.

HOW THIS WOMAN FOUND HEALTH

Would Not Give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for All Rest of Medicine in the World.

Utica, Ohio.—"I suffered everything from a female weakness after baby came. I had numb spells and was dizzy, had black spots before my eyes, my back ached and I was so weak I could hardly stand up. My face was yellow, even my finger nails were colorless and I had displacement. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am stout, well and healthy. I can do all my own work and can walk to town and back and not get tired. I would not give your Vegetable Compound for all the rest of the medicines in the world. I tried doctor's medicines and they did me no good."—Mrs. Mary Earlewine, R. F. D. No. 3, Utica, Ohio.

Another Case.

Nebo, Ill.—"I was bothered for ten years with female troubles and the doctors did not help me. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and every month I had to spend a few days in bed. I read so many letters about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound curing female troubles that I got a bottle of it. It did me more good than anything else I ever took and now it has cured me. I feel better than I have for years, and tell everybody what the Compound has done for me. I believe I would not be living to-day but for that."—Mrs. Hettie Greenstreet, Nebo, Illinois.

She is a littel city gurl that lives neer our city hoam, & Bobbie rowed her all oaver the lake this morning. How perfeckly cunning, Ma sed. To think of our gallant littel son beeing a Romeo.

I aint no Romeo, I toald Ma. I wish you wuddent say that.

The littel deers looked so cute out thare on the lake, Ma sed. Bobbie helped her into the boat & out of it jest like a prince helping out a princess, Ma sed. Did you enjoy yure day, Bobbie, you and littel Grayce?

No I diddent, I toald Ma. & she aint any sweetheart of mine, eether. It was her father's bote & she diden't know how to row it & I wanted to row, so I got in & rowed the bote. I dident like her vary much, I toald Ma, beekaus she laffed at me wen I spelled her naim rong. I spelled it without a Y, I sed, & that is the way to speli Grace.

Bobbie, Pa sed, I tell you what to do. If you want to win littel Grayce, you must rite her a poem. I will rite her a poem for you to reed to her, sed Pa, & you can say you rote it.

Bobbie will lose her sure if he tries that, sed Ma. He has a littel boy frend that rites good poetry, littel Georgie Crowley, & he can git him to rite the poem.

No, sed Pa, I will rite the poem. So Pa went & got a sheet of paper and rote this poem for me to show to Grace:

Littel Grayce, charming Grayce,
I luv yure voice, I luv your fayce.
Thou art the idol of my hart,
& from thy side I'll never part.
Sum day wen I am grown to manhood
& deceide to marry, as every man shood,
I'll cum to you, deer, with a smile,
And ask to lead you up the aisle.
Thou art the sweetest gurl in this place,
My darling Grayce.

I aint going to show her that, I toald Pa. I doant luv her & she aint my sweethart. I aint going to start in so yung telling gurls that I luv them wen I doant luv them at all, I sed.

You have got to do that, sed Pa, to git along. Why, wen I was yure age I toald all the gurl I luved them. Pa I toald all the gurls I luved them, Pa me, but I could see thay did. I was vary hansum as a boy, sed Pa, & I had a grate way with the ladies. I used to write them verses & thay threw down all thare other beaus for me. I will give you a quarter, Bobbie, if you show this poem to littel Grayce, & if she doesnt call you a darling boy I will give you a dollar beesides.

So I showed Grayce the poem & sed I rote it, & she laffed & sed it sounded jest like sumthing that a green kid rote, so I made a dollar and a quarter from Pa.

Clever Hostess.

A German band happened to play under the windows of a house in a fashionable neighborhood the other afternoon, when Mrs. B. was "at home." They were a fair specimen of their kind—blaring and noisy, yet correct in their time and altogether in movement from long practice. The butler started out to drive them away, for they interrupted the music within, but Mrs. B. ordered him to invite them in. A happy thought struck her.

"Ladies and gentlemen," she said, five minutes later, "a party of our friends have consented to give an imitation of a street band. I now have the pleasure of introducing them."

Then the six members of the organization filed awkwardly into place and played a piece. The audience delightedly declared that the mimicry was perfect, especially the make-up of the players, who were recalled half a dozen times.

"Would you take them for anything but genuine street stragglers?" was asked of a belle.

"Indeed, yes," she confidently replied; "they're clever in their mimicry, but one can always tell gentlemen, no matter how disguised. I'm dying to find out who they are."

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX.

AUGUST 10.—I have wondered ever since the accident why Sally did not come to me, and learned this morning. She had sailed for Europe the day before and was on the ocean the day Richards received Mrs. Allen's telegram to come at once.

I am glad she is away. If she were here and did not come I would suffer all the pangs of an abused and neglected boy, and if she came, goodness alone knows what I would say or do in my weakness. I am sure I would demand the rights of a sick man to her devotion, or fret myself into a fever if she refused.

I had a note from her to-day, written in Paris.

"My dear big brother," she wrote, "I can't tell you how alarmed I was at reading in the cable news in a Paris paper of your accident. I hope that the charge of exaggeration always made against the press is true this time. I receive daily cables regarding your condition from the doctor, and he assures me you are getting along all right. You know, my dear big brother, I need you. You are more than all the world to me.

"SALLY."

Isn't that just like a woman? She puts in that word "brother" twice to make me realize that I am no more than a brother to her, and then adds "You are more than all the world to me" to keep me crazy about her.

She has a husband, and can't have me, but she likes to be loved, and intends to keep me loving her.

Past Proofs.

In looking backward I find every reason for believing that her opposition to the widow was not actuated entirely by sisterly feelings. The look of warnings she sent me, and many, many telegrams to beware of the woman who was pursuing me, are proof to me that Sally loved me then, and I did not know it.

"You are so stupid," she said to me once, "that if a woman were in love with you and tried her best to show it you would never see it. Now, suppose, for instance, that I loved you and had been trying to tell you for more than a year."

"But you don't," I added, "you love Jack."

"Yes," she repeated, dully, "I love Jack. He is my husband, and, of course, I love him. The law many centuries ago ordained that a wife should love her husband, and I wouldn't presume to question the law."

She laughed a little bitterly. "But suppose," she repeated, "that I loved you, and told you so."

Sally is a very handsome woman. I recall that on this occasion, she was lying in a hammock, and I sat in a chair near her. We were on her porch, waiting, I believe, for Jack to return from town.

"If you loved me," I said, "I think I would make you realize as you have never realized what it is to have a man's love. But this is nonsense, for, of course, there is Jack."

"Yes," she said, "there is Jack. Max, go home! You are so good-looking to-night you are dangerous."

I laughed, for I thought it was only more of her nonsense.

"Go home," she repeated. I got up and started for the steps, rather sulky to be treated so, and she caught up with me when I had descended the second step and threw both arms around my neck. "You are just two steps taller than I," she laughed. Then she pressed my face against hers and whispered that I was a dear, big stupid.

And do you know, Diary, I wonder now what it was that made me so stupid. I had been so sure for years that she belonged to Jack, not because her marriage ties bound her, but because she loved him and had no room in her thoughts for any other man, that it never entered my head that she cared for me.

I know she suffered and grew thin and haggard when Jack was gone with the widow, but if I had had any sense I believe I could have made those ten days the happiest of her life.

And now, instead of being grateful that I have been saved from wrong-doing, I look at myself with disgust because I didn't recognize my opportunities. She was humiliated because of the manner in which her husband slighted her; her heart was mine all the time, and she couldn't tell me, and I was too big a dolt to see.

When I get well, if I get well—"You know, Max," the doctor said to me very frankly this morning, "something went wrong with your spine in that fall, and we have a fight ahead of us."

So there is an "if" connected with my future that is the biggest "if" I have met in my troubled existence. It is all right. If I win I will fight for Sally. Right or wrong, that is my intention. If I lose, I hope I will have ample warning that the struggle is going against me, so that they may get Sally here and I can slide out into the nowhere from her arms.

Takes Her Nap.

August 12—I do not suffer any great pain, only the pain of weariness, and the nurse is so patient and tender I am ashamed to complain of that.

I am bolstered up in bed a few hours every morning and write these lines at long intervals apart. It is a comfort to me to write that which I can not speak about and it shortens the long days.

Manette always takes her nap at this time of the day, the nurse is gone for her morning walk, and Richards sits beside me—patient, faithful Richards.

"If anything happens to me, Richards," I said this morning, turning to her, "you must never leave Manette. You—" I had never told anyone this before—"will find yourself a rich woman."

"I will never leave Manette under any circumstances," she said somewhat brokenly, "and I don't want to be a rich woman. I only want you to get well so that we may all go back home, and be happy there again. I am so thankful every day, Mr. Max, that I work for the kindest and best man that ever breathed."

It was a tribute that pleased me. I tried to tell her so, and the next moment she was on her knees beside my bed, sobbing with her face in the bed covers.

THE TUNNEL
Greatest Story of Its Kind Since Jules Verne

Read what the New York Times said about this great story---The Times printed an extract of it---We give you the story itself---You can begin it by reading the first installment to-morrow in The Georgian!

8 THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, AUGUST 3, 1913.

GERMANY READS OF A TUNNEL FROM AMERICA TO EUROPE

"Best Seller" in Berlin Is Bernhard Kellermann's "Der Tunnel," a Daring Flight of Fancy in Which Is Told How the Two Hemispheres Were Connected by an Oceanic Subway.

SCENE: the roof garden above the thirty-sixth floor of a colossal hotel in New York—New York of the future. There are gathered the richest magnates in the country, men who among them possess billion upon billion of dollars. One of them arrives in his aeroplane, from which he lands on the very roof garden itself. One of them is Lloyd, a veritable J. P. Morgan, renowned throughout the world as the most daring and formidable and successful of financiers.

They are gathered to learn about a plan evolved by an engineer, a man comparatively young, comparatively unknown, who needs their financial backing. Allan is his name—"Mac" Allan.

Rising modestly from his place, amid breathless attention from all these men, the money kings of the day, whom he scarcely hoped to meet, much less to interest in his project, Allan takes from his trousers pocket a piece of chalk, goes to a blackboard, and draws two lines. One, he says, is America, the other Europe.

"Between these two," he adds, "I shall myself to build, within the space of fifteen years, a submarine tunnel and to send trains through it from one continent to the other in twenty-four hours!"

The flashlights of the photographers gathered on the roof burst forth and thousands of people packed in the streets thirty-six stories below knew that the first act in the great drama has begun, and roar their excitement.

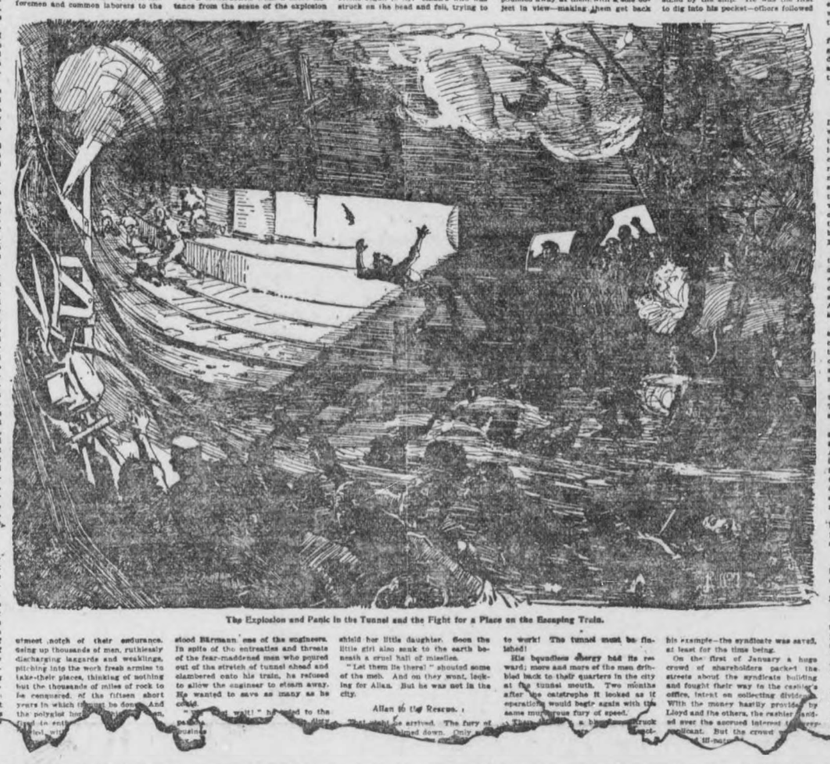

Allan in the meantime has plunged into figures, taking up the plan from every angle, painting it strongly and convincingly.

He finishes by whirling the assemblage of billionaires away with him in a very madness of enthusiasm. Lloyd, after of them all, leads by subscribing $25,000,000 out of his own pocket. After him one magnate after another puts himself down for enormous sums. Allan, whose entire manhood has been devoted to the tunnel project, realizes that he is on the threshold of success.

That scene is described at the beginning of a book just published, one that is a "best seller" now in Germany—"The Tunnel," by Bernhard Kellermann. The author, who already has a number of novels to his credit, has in this latest work discarded the ordinary material of which heroes and heroines are made and daringly pressed into his service iron and steel and coal, powerful machinery, huge masses of humanity instead of individuals. Against this sombre and tremendous background men and women are arranged, to be sure, men and women of flesh and blood, but they are secondary. It is the tunnel—the great tube between America and Europe—that is the hero of Kellermann's novel and the heroine and the villain. To it all else is subservient. In describing its vastness and grimness and fateful power the German strikes into the domain of Jules Verne and H. G. Wells, and, without ever employing the supernatural or manifestly impossible, meets them on their own ground and, it must be said, comes off by no means badly.

Man's Greatest Undertaking.

After his description of the momentous meeting on the New York hotel roof garden, the novelist tells how the tunnel syndicate, formed immediately after the magnates had subscribed their millions, buys up huge tracts of land in New Jersey along the Hudson and ocean front and sets to work to rear a great city for the tunnel workmen. On the streets of New York hundreds of thousands of "extras" keep readers posted, hour by hour, on the progress of the construction work, the greatest undertaking ever attempted by man since the beginning of the world.

The Explosion and Panic in the Tunnel and the Fight for a Place on the Escaping Train.

Excitement mounts to fever heat. Everywhere—Americans, Frenchmen, Englishmen, Germans, Italians, Spaniards, Scandinavians, Chinamen, negroes. In the stifling caverns under the ocean every language was heard from the blackened negroes, working in frenzied haste, stark naked, dripping with sweat, driven to superhuman achievement by the indomitable energy of "Mac" Allan.

Allan spent days at a time in the tunnel, amid almost unendurable heat, between solid walls of rock, amid tools and boiling material piled high about him, driving engineers and foremen and common laborers to the utmost notch of their endurance. Going up thousands of men, ruthlessly discharging laggards and weaklings, pitching into the work fresh armies to take their places, thinking of nothing but the thousands of miles of rock to be conquered, of the fifteen short years in which it must be done. And the colossal undertaking is finished.

Then the rock and iron, which buried men beneath it or tore them to pieces.

In wild panic they stumbled and fought their way through blinding, suffocating smoke, hurled themselves into the construction trains lined up along the track, or, too mad with fear to reason, plunged forward on foot as if thus they could ever reach the shore of New Jersey, over 200 miles away. Hundreds of them, whom the explosion had spared, fell in their tracks, stifled by the smoke or trampled to death by their comrades.

Of a reconstruction train a short distance from the scene of the explosion they poured through the streets of the improvised city toward Allan's residence.

On the way they met the engineer's young wife and his little daughter, who, hearing the noise about the tunnel mouth, had ventured forth to find out what was the matter. Both fell in upon each other as they caught sight of the outposts of the advancing multitude and heard their shouts.

But they could not escape. Led by frenzied women, the mob closed in on the two helpless ones. Stones and bricks began to fly. Allan's wife was struck on the head and fell, trying to stand before her little daughter. Soon the little girl also sank to the earth beneath a cruel hail of missiles.

"Let them lie there!" shouted some of the mob. And on they went, looking for Allan. But he was not in the city.

Allan to the Rescue.

Allan, in the meantime, had heard the workmen's unions all over the country, riot argument with argument, stood by the ship. He was the first to dig into his pocket—others followed suit. He bought up a huge crowd of shareholders packed the streets about the syndicate building and fought their way to the ratings office, intent on collecting dividends. With the money hastily provided by Lloyd and the others, the ratings stood over the accrued interest [illegible] bis example—the syndicate was saved, at least for the time being.

On the first of January a huge crowd of shareholders packed the streets about the syndicate building and fought their way to the ratings office, intent on collecting dividends. With the money hastily provided by Lloyd and the others, the ratings stood over the accrued interest [illegible] bis example—the syndicate was saved, at least for the time being.

Panic came—genuine panic. Compared with it the panic of 1907, that shook the American money market, was a passing flurry. Hardly a day passed without the failure of some business house. Suicides like Woolf's became more and more common. A banker shot himself in Chicago, a New York broker poisoned himself and his entire family. As for the tunnel syndicate, it would have gone out of existence had it not been for Lloyd, who called the big shareholders together and insisted that they must stand by the ship. He was the first to dig into his pocket—others followed suit.

The great tunnel was dead.

Even Allan despaired. He locked himself in his house, refusing to see anybody. In vain Ethel Lloyd, the one person who still seemed to believe in him, sought to see him. She could not.

But she persisted. Finally, one day, she actually waylaid him as he was walking with downcast eyes from the tunnel mouth to his house. He could not decently refuse to speak to her. He asked her to come in. And, once she had his ear, Ethel plunged into her task with flashing eyes and eloquent words.

"You must save the tunnel!" she cried. And for the first time in months he woke to life and his eyes blazed.

"But we have no money," he objected.

"Have you seen my father?" she asked.

She had struck home. Soon Allan and the great Lloyd were in a conference. Soon the news flew over the world: "Lloyd has agreed to back the tunnel—alone!"

The work started up again with a fury of energy that left all that had gone before in the shade. One hundred thousand men went at it again and labored with a murderous concentration of energy.

America Linked to Europe.

The dead tunnel ofttimes cracks. With Lloyd as leader, multi-millionaires who had been afraid to risk a cent in the undertaking poured their millions into it. In the tubes the boring machines thundered against the walls of rock, surrounded again by armies of naked workers, dripping with sweat, shining in the red glow of the lanterns. And behind all stood Allan, whipping them into a hell of speed—once more, as his train rolled past, they swung their hats and cheered—but now they called him "old great Mac."

Years went by—fifteen, twenty, since the beginning of the work. Nearer and nearer the tunnel heads drew to each other, one, where Simon was commander, stretching out from Jersey eastward, the other from the Azores Westward, driven forward by an engineer known as "fat Mueller."

At last the two were so close that engineers placed their eyes on the delicate registering machines by the hour together, hoping to detect the sound of the work in the other tunnel. No sign—and yet the others must be almost within reach!

Had the calculations failed? Had the two tunnels missed each other? The newspapers were filled with alarming rumors.

Allan ordered side tunnels dug, that groped in the dark for the men digging toward America from Europe. At last one day the noise of a blast in Mueller's tunnel was heard in Simon's. Feverishly the men dug toward the sound. At last, breaking down a wall of earth and rock, they saw, through a narrow hole, other men—Mueller's men!

Roars of enthusiasm burst forth at both ends of the hole. Fat Mueller, poking his head into the opening, asked:

"Where is Mac?"

"Here," answered Allan, sticking his head into the other opening—the one nearest Arnerica.

"How do you do, Mac?" said Mueller, with a laugh.

"We are all right," said Mac.

That was all. In the evening the newspapers on both sides of the ocean printed this conversation, held thousands of feet under the sea. The workmen had soon dug the hole big enough to allow of Mueller's sending Mac a bottle of Munich beer.

Twenty-four years had elapsed since the tunnel work had been begun.

From then on the world was in a fever of excitement. "Very soon the tunnel work was over.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

You are an observing man," he remarked to Peter, "and seem to have noticed this girl closely. Was this bag she carried a small, yellow one?"

"It was not, thin," that person emphatically replied, while the butler shook his head. "It was small, that it was, but not a mark of yellow about it at all. I see it manys the time. It's black it was."

"And would you know it if you saw it again?"

"I'll hot say that, sur; but I could tell if it wur the same kind of one."

Mr. Gryce smiled and produced from his capacious pocket the bag which had been found by him in the doctor's phaeton.

"Was it like this one?" he asked, holding it up between the two men, with the initials toward Peter, and the blank side toward the butler.

"No," was the former's reply, and "Out," that of the latter.

He whirled the bag about.

"I never have seen ze filigree on him like zat!" now exclaimed the butler.

"By the powers that's it," was, on the contrary, Peter's response.

Mr. Gryce laughed and put the bag back in his pocket.

Another Clew.

"You don't agree," he said.

"We do that," returned Peter.

But Mr. Gryce would not be convinced. He saw that if this was the bag that they had been in the habit of seeing on the arm of the girl who had visited Miss Gretorex, that it had always been carried with the initial-side in, and this again seemed a great improbability. He was about convinced that he was on a false trail. Disappointed and dissatisfied, he therefore cut the conversation short, and in a few minutes was about to leave this house for the second time in anything but a happy frame of mind. But this time he did not go out by the side door. He was in the kitchen, and he naturally sought the kitchen exit. In doing this, his eyes fell upon the gravel walk that ran about the house. "Humph!" was his mental ejaculation.

But he saw something the next moment—having by this time stepped into the yard—which called from him something more than an exclamation. This was a small piazza, built one or two steps from the ground, for the use, as it appeared, of the servants of the house. It was square in shape and had a high balustrade about it, terminating in pillars that supported the roof. It was the color of this balustrade which drew his attention. It was of a bright and peculiar brown and seemed to have been but lately painted.

"Can it be that I have here found what I have so long been searching for?" he queried. And stepping upon the piazza he ran his eye along the balustrade with the most careful scrutiny. Suddenly he paused, looked closer, and gave utterance to a sound expressive of satisfaction and keen wonder. From the supporting pillar nearest the steps a portion of paint had been rubbed, of the size and shape of the smudge on Mildred Farley's dress, and dried into the thin coating yet remaining was a woolly fuzz so evidently blue in color that even this old and experienced worker among marvels was taken aback, and thought he had never seen anything finer nor more conclusive.

It was with a very grave face he stepped back into the kitchen.

"Excuse me," said he, "but what a fine porch you have outside. I think I will come and visit you some evening next summer. Fun out there, eh?"

"Well, now, do you hear that?" laughed good-natured Peter.

"And how prettily it is painted; looks fresher than the rest of the house."

"Yes, the master intended using it at the time o' the wedding—what for I don't know—and it being well used up by that same fun ye wur axin about, the count there bought a pot o' paint and wint over it on his own account. It didn't dry good like, and the master thanked the count, so he did, but didn't use the porch. I'm thinkin' he gave the count folve dollars for disappointin' him do ye moind?"

And Peter, evidently thinking he had got the laugh on the butler this time, laughed himself, long and loud.

But Mr. Gryce did not laugh. A problem dark with mysteries was before him, and he had no disposition to mirth, and but little patience with those who had.

Tests and Surprises.

IT was indeed a serious discovery he had made; how serious he could not yet determine. That the girl who had brought home Miss Gretorex's dresses, and who had been with her on the very evening she was married, was the same one who had been carried dead into Mrs. Olney's parlor at or near midnight of that same day, there could be no doubt.

But had she died here? It did not follow, though the fact that Miss Gretorex, or as she was now called, Mrs. Cameron, showed such a disposition to deny acquaintanceship with the girl, seemed to argue the existence of something strangely unpleasant between them. Yet it need not have been anything connected with the tragic end of the girl. Ladies of Mrs. Cameron's stamp are invariably cowards when it comes to appearing in a police court, or before a magistrate as a witness. Even men sometimes shrink from this ordeal, and resort to every subterfuge to hide the fact that they know anything about a crime of the party suspected of it. And she had this excuse, that she was a bride and naturally hated any such unpleasant publicity in connection with her marriage.

A Puzzle.

Yet the desire of Molesworth to communicate his position to the Camerons! Was it purely on account of the medical case he mentioned? Mr. Gryce felt himself at liberty to doubt it. And the scream which had arisen from this house during the marriage ceremony! Whence did it come and what did it mean? He had not realized its importance at the time, but now he felt that he must make every effort to discover both its source and occasion. Turning to the two men, he remarked in his off-hand way:

"By the way, I heard something curious about the wedding here. A friend of mine told me that there was a big scream in the house right in the middle of the ceremony. Was that so?"

"Oui, monsieur," quoth Jean, "zat Marguerite scream all ze time, and she scream zen."

Peter smiled indulgently.

"Is it Margaret, ye say? Whin will yez git over talkin' about her screamin' like a fool. Sure she wasn't in the house at all. Every one of us knows that, and it's time ye did, too."

Jean shrugged his shoulders disdainfully.

"It was ze voice of Marguerite, I know him very well. I hear him many times, and I hear him zat time of ze wedding and always ze same."

"How the devil could she scream if she wasn't in the house?

"Do Marguerite say she was not in ze house?"

"No, but don't we know she wasn't? Jim Dolan says she was in his little back room when the scream you spake of was heard. Haven't I told ye that over an' over again, ye spalpeen?"

"When Jeem Doling say me zat, zen I must hear him." And so the obstinate man had the last word.

A naval officer I know canceled a lot of engagements last week in order to devote the time to his dentist.

"I am going on a long cruise," he said, "and I know the value of good teeth. Good teeth mean good health afloat or ashore and a man can't do his work well unless he has good health."

In the army and the navy, and in all great industrial spheres the value of good teeth is being recognized. Statistics prove that sound, clean teeth, preserve health and promote business efficiency.

The twice-a-year visit to the dentist and the twice-a-day use of Colgate's Ribbon Dental Cream, the efficient, deliciously flavored dentifrice, insure sound clean teeth, better health and better looks.

ELLIOTT DENT FACES MOLES IN 2ND GAME

ELLIOTT DENT is carded as Manager Smith's pitching entry against the Barons in the second game of the series, which starts at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. Harry Chapman will be back of the wood, and the manager said this morning that he fully expected Tommy Long to be in his regular place in left field.

Tommy was out in uniform yesterday, but Manush was going so well that it was not considered necessary to try out the convalescent one. Frank had a great day with the stick yesterday and aided materially in the battering of the unfortunate Howell.

Manager Molesworth was not positive of his choice in the matter of slabman. Pitcher Ery, the recruit, got in yesterday and may get a chance to-morrow. Big Bill Prough, absent from the club by reason of a sister's illness, hadn't arrived at noon today.

There is a lot of talk around town about the prospective "birthday party" to be tendered Bill Smith at the ball park to-morrow, when "Bill Smith Day" will be observed, with a band and other trimmings, and the thousands of Atlanta fans who have pulled for the hard-working manager and rejoiced in his success will have an opportunity to show by their attendance the appreciation they feel for his efforts. Preparations are being made to handle a big crowd, as it seems everybody is going.

BOBBY GILKS, CLEVELAND SCOUT, IS IN ATLANTA

We have with us this week, or part of it, one Bobby Gilks, erstwhile popular manager of the Shreveport club in the Southern League, and now a trusted scout for the Cleveland ball club.

Bobby looks the same as ever; a quiet, alert, sun-burned man, preserving an athletic build with no tendencies to a bay window effect, and with very keen eyes set in the deep puckers that come from years of peering over a blazing diamond.

"Just looking around," said Mr. Gilks yesterday as he sat on the back of a bench in the smoker, looking over the Crackers at practice. "I can't say anything more specific—except," he added reflectively, "I will say they're awfully scarce."

Mr. Gilks also was of the opinion that the desperately fine coming the minor leagues were receiving this year would result more in bursting bubbles than broken batting and base-stealing records. He expects to remain here nearly all week by the end of which his scouting will be over for the present season.

STARTS ON LONG SWIM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Harry Ellonsky, 19, of New London, Conn., sared at 12:48 a. m. to-day on the swim from Battery Park to Sady Hook, a distance of about 21 miles. Ellonsky attempted the swim some time ago, but was forced to quit the water when within a mile of his goal.

"Society Night" at Motordrome

Maddox Sweepstake Feature

REALIZING that society folk will wear thousands of dollars worth of diamonds and jewelry tonight at the motorcycle races, Manager Noon Hudson has hired 50 plainclothes men to protect his patrons. Chief of Police Beavers and Chief of Detectives Lanford will both be on hand to assist.

It is "Society Night;" at least that is the way the program is captioned And it is expected that all of Atlanta's "400" will be on hand.

Owing to the accident to Jock McNeil late Wednesday afternoon it has been decided to keep everybody away from the paddock and nobody but officials and the riders themselves will be allowed within the sacred portals of the danger lines.

The new machines that the riders have secured can be speeded up to such an extent that a blow-out or any other accident to a machine is likely to cause a spill, and, of course, danger threatens all who may be in the way of the flying "boats." Therefore, everybody will be forced to remain behind the railings.

THE feature to-night will be the Robert Maddox Sweepstakes. This is the real "sassiety" event of the season at the Saucer. It will be run in three heats. The first will be over a two-mile course, the next, four miles, and the third, six miles.

The winner will be found by the point system. The winner of each heat will secure ten points; second man, six; third, three.

The riders in this race will be Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

ANOTHER interesting event will be the special match race between Harry Glenn, the local favorite, and Harry Swartz, whose machine right now is one of the fastest at the track.

There will be two heats and maybe three. The winner will have to capture two heats. The first heat will be one mile, the second two miles, and if necessary there will be a third heat of three miles.

THE other event carded is the first of the Southern championships. It is the intention of the management to run a title race every night until the latter part of September. The riders will be scored by points. The winner of each heat each night will be credited with 25 points, the second man, 15, and the third, 5.

There will be three trial heats of one mile and the final will be two miles. The winner of each heat and the second man in the fastest heat to qualify.

* * *

FOLLOWING is the complete program:

First Event.

First Heat: Special Match Race (one mile)—Glenn and Swartz.

Second Event.

First Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Graves, Swartz and Lockner.

Third Event.

Second Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Richards, Luther and Renel.

Fourth Event.

Third Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Lewis and Glenn.

Fifth Event.

Final Heat: Southern Championships (two miles. Winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat. Twenty-five points for winner, 15 for second man and 5 for third man.)

Sixth Event.

Eighth Event.

Second Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (four miles)—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Ninth Event.

Third Heat: Special Match Race. (If necessary.)

Tenth Event.

Third Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (six miles)—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Big Aquatic Meet at Lakewood Wednesday

There will be a big aquatic meet at Lakewood Wednesday afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock. Atlanta's fastest and strongest swimmers will take part. The meet will be held under the supervision of the United States Life Saving Corps.

The events carded are: One-mile relay race, 440-yard race, 100-yard race, 50-yard race and 25-yard race for girls. Beautiful silver cups will be the prizes offered in all of the events except the girls' race. The winner of that event will be given a cutglass powder jar.

The one-mile relay race will probably be the big feature. Porter Enslow and C. R. McDermott, of Piedmont lake, will battle Captain B. H. Schlomberg and Lieut. Tatt Walthour, of Lakewood. This struggle should be a hard-fought one from start to finish.

There will also be a life-saving demonstration, given by Captain Schlomberg.

COMPANY M WINS GAME.

CAMP PERRY, OHIO, Aug. 19.—Company M, Seventeenth Infantry, defeated the Marine baseball team here by the score of 11 to 3.

The feature of the game was the heavy hitting of Company M.

DODGERS BUY PITCHER.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Aug. 18.—The Brooklyn club to-day purchased Pitcher Brady from the Oshkosh club of the Wisconsin-Illinois League, but the price was not given.

BROWN TO MEET DILLON.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—George "Knockout" Brown and Jack Dillon will meet in a ten-round no-decision bout at Terre Haute on Labor Day afternoon.

M'CAREY SURE JEFFRIES WAS DOPED AT RENO

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19.—Promoter T. J. McCarey, for the past ten years president of the Pacific A. C., is positive in his belief that Jeffries was "doped" when he fought Jack Johnson.

"Jeffries could walk right into the ring to-day and make a 100 per cent better showing than he did at Reno," said McCarey to-day.

"I was watching Jeffries when he came into the Reno arena. He lurched down the aisle like a drunken man, bumping his shoulder against the moving picture stand. At the ringside one of his best friends, Clarence Berry, reached out to shake hands, but Jim didn't appear to recognize him.

"I AM suspicious of one man who posed as an intimate friend of Jim's prior to the fight. He bet heavily on Johnson and after the thing was over he never even went to Jeffries to speak to him, and to my knowledge has never seen Jim since.

"This fellow used to coax Jeffries away from the Monoa Springs training camp to go fishing. For hours he would keep Jim standing knee deep in the mountain streams and cause him to neglect his training.

"I believe that Jeffries was the victim of a widespread plot. The man never had a chance. He was whipped before he could put up his hands. This was one of the worst blows ever dealt the boxing game and I would pay a good sum out of my own pocket to see the mystery cleared up."

TOM JONES, manager for Ad Wolgast and Jess Willard, is another who believes that Jeffries was "doped."

"Jeffries was drugged. There is no other way to account for his reeling about in the ring before the contest," says Jones. "Jeffries doesn't care much about the matter now, but his friends would like to see the thing explained."

OUTFIELDER LET OUT.

KEOKUK, IOWA, Aug. 19.—Outfielder Corkhill was released by Keokuk and Outfielder Bromley, formerly with Mussatine, was signed.

"BATTLING" NELSON DISPOSED OF.

ROCKFORD, ILL., Aug. 19.—The Rockford (Wisconsin-Illinois League) team to-day ordered the release of Catcher "Battling" Nelson.

Jock McNeil Still Unconscious

Daring Motor Racer Is Dying

JOCK M'NEIL, the daring motorcycle racer, who was thrown from his machine while traveling at a speed of 80 miles an hour, is still unconscious at the Grady Hospital. The attending physicians have little hope for his recovery.

It was McNeil's own carelessness that caused his fall. He reported at the track yesterday afternoon under the influence of liquor, and after much wrangling with the other riders he insisted on taking a whirl.

He borrowed Morty Graves' stock machine and immediately after starting ascended to the white boards at the top of the track. The white boards are perpendicular and it takes a speed of at least 80 miles an hour to hold the machine.

The first time around his motor broke through the boards in two places, but McNeil refused to come down. The next time around he rode right into one of the holes that he had smashed on his first trip, and was thrown 50 feet in the air. He came down face first.

An ambulance was called and he was rushed to Grady Hospital. The extent of his injuries are:

The skin was peeled from the right side of his face.

A glaring hole in his skull that may affect the brain.

Right shoulder dislocated and badly torn.

Right leg broken just above the knee.

Internal injuries, the exact nature of which has not been fully determined.

VARDON AND RAY WILL HAVE HARD BATTLE--EVANS

By "Chick" Evans.

HARRY VARDON and Edward Ray, two of the foremost golfers in the world, are now on the ocean on their way to America. Wilfred Reid, another high-class British professional, is with them. It has been thirteen years since Vardon came to this country and made an almost clean sweep of everything. Then came Duncan in 1911, and he, too, made an excellent showing. It is my prediction, however, that Vardon and Ray will find a country of golfers vastly superior to anything that they have pictured. Since 1900, the year of the previous invasion, our country has taken tremendous strides in golf. Progress has been made not only in the addition of thousands of new clubs, but also in the standard of the game. A few years ago 80 was considered very good indeed, but now it is merely fair and the 80 golfer takes no special credit to himself.

Will Arrive This Week.

Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, our two most distinguished professional visitors, will be over here this week. Previous to the open championship, which will take place during the third week of September at Brookline, near Boston, they will play exhibition matches all over the East, and after the open they will journey Westward.

Fine players as they are, I think that they will have a difficult road to travel, for not only will our professionals give them a run, but there are some of our amateurs who may be able to quicken their pace a little. I hope they will like our courses and our golfers. Truly, we have a country-wide array of courses on which much money and time have been spent.

Our golfers are fine players, and good sportsmen, and the coming of the British visitors will do us a tremendous amount of good. Thousands will watch their play and be benefited by many an idea caught as they watch the execution of difficult shots by these masters of the game. Their scores will serve as an indicator by which we can know exactly what progress we have made in our own game.

Exhibitions to Benefit All.

Their coming will introduce into this country professional exhibition matches—a prominent element of British golf of which we know but little. We have not much of this now and there is no doubt we need more. It is something of which a country can easily have too much, but it can be of the greatest benefit to all players who wish to improve their game. It will give to them throughout the country an opportunity to see the best shots played by the best players, and this practical exposition is of more value than all the lessons and books of instruction in the world.

Of course, all professional golf is a money-making affair. For an exhibition match of 36 holes, occupying a day, I understand Vardon and Ray are asking $600. This seems an enormous amount of money to ask for the privilege of seeing a golf game, and it is difficult to see how they will be able to get many clubs to stage such an expensive exhibition. The best way would be to charge, say, a dollar for admission, and let the club stand for the rest. Most people would gladly give up that much to see these world masters of the links. They are like the musicians who have spent a lifetime in practice.

Grand Defense Aids Gil Price

Mates Star in Field and at Bat

By O. B. Keeler.

THE value of co-operation stuck out all over the opening game with the Moles Monday. There were so many points that to the Moles the Cracker club must have resembled a hedgehog.

There was no chance for Gil Price to lose that game. So he won, 7 to 2.

But Gil had as his three assistants luck, stuff and beautiful fielding.

And that is pretty nearly good enough to win for anybody.

DON'T take this as meaning that Gil was saved against his will from a beating. The southpaw had something on the ball all the time, up to the ninth inning. And whenever he got it over the platter, the problem was simple.

The Moles simply couldn't hit.

But Gil was having one of his famous struggles with the control lever, which persisted in jamming on him, usually after two men were out.

In other words, Gil's marksmanship was somewhat to the fritz. But, supported by the class of fielding his mates put up, and his own stuff on the ball, his erratic periods merely served to liven up a long game that certainly was in need of livening.

THERE was some hitting, too. The way the Cracker attack was working, Gil could have been quite a bit more to the Carnegie with his passes, and still got by with it.

* * *

MR. WELCHONCE was excessively prominent in the attack. Four runs came riding in on his two blows, one for three and the other for two sacks. Harry also scored a run himself. Messrs. Agler, Manush, Smith and Bisland also deserve special mention in the list of sluggers, the first pair getting three hits apiece and the others being content with a couple each.

BUT savage as was the artillery, the real clubby spirit was shown in the way Gil Price's help came through with the defense. The help behaved as if it liked Gil fine.

And it must be said that Gil seemed to think pretty well of himself, too. He pulled as pretty a pair of fielding stunts as one would care to see. Once he raced toward first on a slow hit, bounding high, scooped the pill in his meat hand and sprinted over the bag—and there were Moles digging for home, with two out, at the time. And once he made a grand play on a difficult trap-bounder, following the pick-up with a fine peg.

GIL wasn't lonely in his display of defensive power.

Chapman nipped Mayer off first by a peach peg in the second; Agler and Smith made runaway circus catches of short flies—particularly Joe's catch of Marcan's foul in the seventh—and Calvo starred with a brilliant running catch of a low line drive in the fifth, and a rifle-shot peg to the [illegible] in the ninth, cutting down the speedy Marcan, who was trying to score from second on a sharp hit to the Cuban's territory.

* * *

BY the way, there was a moral force acting hand in glove with Calvo in the matter of outfield pegging.

In the third inning Carroll, first up, filed to the Cuban deep in right. Calvo took the ball easily and whipped it to third, low and fast, and with wonderful accuracy.

It looked a bit like showing off. But later in the game, when the Cuban nipped Marcan's line drive with McDonald on third, McDonald stuck right there, not caring to try out the little fellow's whip. His throw on McBride's single in the ninth, when the Moles were beginning to bite us, was a beauty, and it nipped Marcan for the last out as he came in from second.

AND in the meantime, Mique Finn's wrecking crew was resting.

The margin of safety for the Gulls, therefore, stuck at seven full games this morning.

The Billikens, who also rested, retained second place by a margin of two games.

Neither Billies nor Gulls are scheduled to-day.

Chance to pick up a little honest change in the percentage column—what?

Ivory baseball by the Cardinals in the first game in Brooklyn had Manager Huggins on the point of apoplexy yesterday. With Smith on first base, Fisher pushed a bunt. Mowrey picked up the ball and threw it to Konetchy. As Whitted failed to cover third, Smith the situation at third, and Mowrey raced with him. Konetchy threw the leather across the diamond regardless of the situation and third, and Mowrey, beaten to the bag by Smith, could not turn in time to catch the ball, so took it on the seat of his trousers.

WILLIE LEWIS DEVOTED TO THE BOXING GAME

PARIS, Aug. 19.—Willie Lewis, the white American pugilist, who is now attracting as much attention at the Follies Bergeres as Jack Johnson did, said to-day:

"Boxing is not merely my profession, but my devotion. I believe that it develops any sound individual's muscular and mental faculties more than any other athletic sport."

Regarding the rumors that he intended divorcing his wife in order to marry Comtesse De Villenueve, Lewis said:

"Though I greatly admire her fine dances, I never have spoken to her and you can contradict those rumors."

DANNY GOODMAN ROUNDING INTO SHAPE FOR BOUTS

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 19.—Danny Goodman, local battler, who is training for two ring contests, is rapidly rounding into grand shape and predicts a double win. Danny is down to 130 pounds and says he never felt better.

On August 28, at Hibbing, Minn., Goodman meets Y Tognuoahsm- eta Goodman meets Young Thomas, and on September 1, at Superior, Wis., Johnny Tillman is to be his foe.

BOSTON, Aug. 19.—The Boston Nationals to-day sold Catcher Brown and released Catcher Mitchell.

SOX YOUNGSTER THROWS WITH EITHER HAND

By Bill Bailey.

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 19.—The White Sox have a young outfielder who is destined to become one of the curiosities of the American League.

Edward Rausch is his name and the thing that makes him wonderful is the fact that he heaves the ball from deep right with his left hand and from deep left field with his right.

We've all heard about the ambidextrous ball players. Away back when Anson was a recruit there were a couple of fellows who pitched with either hand. But it is doubtful whether there is one fan in a hundred who ever gazed upon a youngster who could throw as well with one hand as with the other.

Manager Callahan didn't know that he was getting a curiosity as well as a ball player when he purchased Rausch from the Evansville club of the Central League. The youngster reported on Friday. The Sox were at morning practice when the youth reported. You thought it was too late in the season for morning practice? Manager Callahan is still in the hunt for whatever he can obtain and is determined to finish just as high as possible. Which accounts for the fact that the men were being drilled in everything pertaining to baseball.

Sent to Right Field.

As was remarked, the Sox were at morning practice when the youngster reported. He was handed a suit and told to go out and chase fly balls. He did. He went to right.

"Who's the youngster?" went the query.

"Oh, that's young Rausch," from Kid Gleason. It's the duty of the assistant manager to work with the men, and especially the youngsters, at the a. m. drill.

"Left hand thrower?" it was queried.

"It would seem so," was the answer of Gleason. It also was apparent, for the youngster was shooting the balls in on a line from right field and he was employing his left hand.

Pretty soon he went to left field and played there awhile. One of the fellows shot a line drive out there. And then everybody stood about in amazement. For the youngster returned the ball with his right hand. And he shot it in on a line, too.

"Hey!" howled Gleason. He didn't want any mistake about it, and he did want some information. In trotted the youngster.

"Are you a right or left hand thrower?" queried the assistant coach.

"Don't make any difference to me," answered the youngster. "When I play right field I throw with my left hand. When I'm in left I throw with my right."

"Don't make any difference to you, eh?" queried Gleason.

"None at all. Why?"

"Oh, I just wanted to know." It takes a lot to keep the assistant manager from retorting, but there was none on his tongue this time.

Youngster Gives Promise.

The youngster is twenty years of age and if he can hit he will be there. There is no question about his speed. He worked out in left field before the second game against the Highlanders. He was going back as fast as the ordinary outfielder comes in. And he was grabbing the balls, which is more to the point. They tried him out in the preliminary batting practice and he slammed said sphere to several parts of the lot. Here another surprise awaited the Sox. They naturally supposed that a fellow who could throw with either hand would bat from either side of the plate. Nothing doing. Rausch is a left-hand hitter and he doesn't swing from the right side under any condition.

Rausch was one of the first men purchased by the South Siders and cost $3,000. He hit in the neighborhood of .315 in the Central League. From the way he handled himself in the field it looks a certainty that he possesses the speed necessary to beat out many infield hits.

No question but that Rausch comes well fortified, so far as fielding is concerned. Many managers have an idea that a right fielder should be a left-hand thrower, upon the same theory that a southpaw thrower is supposed to have it on a right-hander at first base.

"Rausch throws equally well with either hand," said Manager Callahan. "It's my opinion, however, that he would do better if he decided to throw with either his right or left hand and then stick to it."

KETCHEL VS. JOHNSON.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Steve Ketchel and Eddie Johnson, of Denver, are scheduled to meet in a twenty-round battle in Pueblo, Colo., September 15, at 133 pounds.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

HOW SWEET.
(By Joe Tinker.)

How sweet to be a manager and lose a lot of sleep
To pull a bunch of boneheads from the bottom of the heap—
To patch a broken-down machine and get it running fit
And then to see the owner throw a monkey wrench in it!
It's bad enough to run a team that plays in Cincinnati,
But this here interference stuff would drive a fellow batty.

In other words, Mr. Tinker insists that he is the only man who has a right to tinker with his team.

Those who know Sherwood Magee aver that Mr. Tincup is not the only Indian on Dooin's team.

Not that we desire to discourage a promising young athlete, but a Tincup is a first cousin to a can.

It is rumored that John Evers thinks as much of Mike Mitchell as Mike Mitchell thinks of John Evers.

SOMETHING LIKE THE CUB OWNER.

There was a young magnate named Farrell
With money stacked up by the barrel.
He said: "I will win
Though it costs all my tin
And they force me to pawn my apparel." V. S. B.

Conundrum: If it costs $10 to call Bill Klem a catfish, how much would it cost to call him a sardine?

Paul Westerlund, a Californian, won a medal by running a 31-mile marathon race up the side of a mountain range. Up to date Paul has not won any medals for consecutive thought.

If Frank Navin were to accept that $100,000 offer for Ty Cobb we fear that Clark Griffith would break all existing sprinting records on his way to the cyclone cellar.

Arthur Pelky announces that he will do his training in Calgary. This shows that even a rude and uncultured pugilist often clings to the fond recollections of former days.

Mr. Pelky is the youth who swore that he had retired from the fight game forever and forever. But he changed his mind when he learned that the only other way he could earn a living was to work.

Mr. Mitchell, athlete, accuses Mr. O'Loughlin, umpire, of having used vulgar language on the field. And yet, the fact that a man is an umpire is sufficient cause to swear.

England feels as badly over the departure of Mrs. Pankhurst as a pitcher who has just recovered from a losing streak.

In a way, Ralph Comstock, whom the Sox have bought from the Minneapolis team, is one of the most remarkable athletes extant. It is said that he is the only member of the team whose grandchildren are not voting.

THE WHITE HOPE.

He had a fist as hard as a rock, likewise an iron jaw.
Without a doubt he was the hardest man I ever saw.
Quoth he: "I got my training as a player with McGraw."

THE WORM.

"The worm will turn," a lad once spoke.
He was a wise old guy.
He was an educated bloke
And what he said got by.
"The worm will turn," he said, and men
Spoke lightly of his name,
But all interred the hammer when
The Pelicans won a game.

Not that we desire to inflame the thoughts of our yellow brethren, but the report that Ah Chung whipped Pat McCarty reveals the fact that the Boxer outrages have not ceased.

The 100-mile marathon race at Bellingham, Wash., reminds us that some men are nuttier than others.

Joe Boehling is now engaged at the unpleasant task of demonstrating that whatever goes up must come down.

Reading Mike Mitchell's tale of his recent job, one is led to suspect that being a Cub is like being in jail—only more so.

Charlie Ebbets announced yesterday morn that he would spend $60,000 to strengthen his team. We have not any inside information, but we have heard a well grounded rumor that to-day he will dedicate the $60,000.

Looking over Mr. Griffith's statement, one is led to suspect that Messrs. Altrock and Schaefer are not the only comedians on the Washington payroll.

The report that Hap Myers stole four bases off Jimmy Archer in one afternoon reminds us that several persons could have outsprinted Arthur Duffey if Arthur had sustained a broken leg.

Ben Tincup, the Indian pitcher who has been purchased by the Phillies, is on the wrong team. Imagine what a receiver Larry McLean would be for Tincup.

Not that it is any of our business, but the gent who picks out the names for country clubs must be related to the citizen who perpetrates the monickers for sleeping cars and motor boats.

Joe Tinker is not dissatisfied with his job or anything like that, but he has a hunch that as a baseball magnate Garry Herrmann is a good judge of wine.

NOT O'LOUGHLIN.

There was an ump in our town
And he was wondrous wise.
He spoke his words in such a way
That men could recognize.

STARRVILLE WINS.

PORTERDALE, GA., Aug. 19.—Porterdale lost to Starrsville yesterday 4 to 3. The feature of the game was the sensational work of "Kid" Harwell, who caught a grand game for the visitors. L. Cook also featured by his batting. Rocquemore fanned fourteen batters.

NO-HIT, NO-RUN GAME.

SUPERIOR, WIS., Aug. 19.—In yesterday's Northern Leagues game at Superior, Cy Dahlgren, of Superior, blanked Grand Forks without a hit or a run. Dahlgren was with the Cincinnati Reds this spring and was given an unconditional release after the training trip.

AUTOMOBILE OWNERS, ATTENTION!

No more worry about punctures. PUNCTURE SEALO solves the trouble. PUNCTURE SEALO injected into your tubes will seal any puncture up to a twenty-penny nail, will preserve and lengthen the life of your tubes and lessen blow-outs by eliminating rim cuts. It will not stick the tubes to the casing, will not gum, become hard or evaporate, is not affected by heat or cold weather, does not interfere with the removal of tubes or with vulcanizing.

PUNCTURE SEALO pays for itself many times a season by preventing punctures and rim cuts.

We charge less for PUNCTURE SEALO than any of our imitators. Good territory open to agents who write at once. We are in business to stay.

SAVE TEMPER, TROUBLE, TIME AND TIRES BY USING PUNCTURE SEALO.

Motorcycles $2.50
Automobiles, 30 by 3, 34 by 4 ..... $7.00 per car
Other sizes in proportion.

Atlanta, Ga., 7, 17, '13.

Puncture Sealo Co., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gentlemen—I have examined your preparation for the stoppage of punctures in rubber, "PUNCTURE SEALO," and have found that it contains no substance injurious to rubber. It has a decided advantage in that it may be used in the coldest weather without freezing.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) EDGAR EVERHART, Chemist.

MAKE MONEY WITH POULTRY.
AMERICAN POULTRY is a magazine devoted entirely to helping earnest men and women make a financial success of poultry raising. Its staff of writers is composed entirely of those who have made a practical, instead of theoretical, success of poultry farming, and who are glad to pass on the results of their hard-earned experience to AMERICAN POULTRY readers. There are many pitfalls in the path of the novice which may be entirely avoided by those who will follow the teachings set forth in this magazine. It fully explains how to make a start, how to construct houses, coops, and other devices, how to get a large egg yield, how to cure and prevent disease, how to exhibit, how to get the top price for eggs, how to use incubators and hundreds of other points which every one wishes to know. It explains the famous secret system through which poultrymen have become rich and afterwards sold for hundreds of dollars. AMERICAN POULTRY is a large, handsomely illustrated, monthly journal, well printed on fine paper, and should be found on file in the home of every poultry lover. No beginner in the poultry business should think of being without it. It will save him many times the small subscription price. The advanced poultryman will also find it of great value; the articles being varied in their scope.

SPECIAL OFFER. The regular price of AMERICAN POULTRY is 50c per year, but in order to introduce it to several thousand new readers, we will, for a short time, give a large 200-page poultry book, which is a complete guide in the poultry business, absolutely free to every one sending 50c for a yearly subscription or $1.00 for a three-year-subscription to AMERICAN POULTRY. A trial six months' subscription (without book) will be sent for 25c. Never has so much been offered for so small a sum. Advantage of this offer should be taken at once.

SEEDS AND POULTRY SUPPLIES.
BOTH PHONES 2568.

IF OUR CUSTOMERS living on the North and South Sides place their orders before 9 o'clock and the ones in Inman Park and West End before 2 o'clock, they will be delivered the same day the orders are given. We are trying to give the very best service possible, and if our customers will bear in mind the hours that our deliveries leave the store it will insure prompt service.

IT IS ABSOLUTELY necessary for chickens to have green food during the winter. This can easily be supplied if you will plant out a small patch of rye and rape. They both grow very rapidly and will furnish an abundance of green food all the winter. Now is the time to plant.

THIS IS THE MOULTING SEASON, and that means that the hens should be fed a good tonic. Pratt's Poultry Regulator and Conkey's Laying Tonic insure a quick and complete moult, and that means plenty of eggs during the fall and winter, when they bring the high prices; 25c, 50c and $1 package.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage.
It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen-acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Lease on Peachtree Four Years, $26,250

Change in Elite Theater—Big Loan Deed—Spring Street Record. Hugh Richardson Sells.

Announcement of a central Peachtree lease at $26,250 for four years proved interesting in real estate circles Tuesday. Thomas L. Cooper, owner, has leased through William A. Fuller, trustee of the estate of O. A. Farrar, bankrupt, 36 Peachtree, the location of the Elite motion picture theater, on a sliding scale. The rental for the first year from September 1 it at the rate of $512.50 a month; for the second year, $525 a month; for the third year, $550 a month, and for the fourth year, $600 a month.

The lessee is A. O. T. Briers, who has bought out the picture show equipment and the privilege of leasing for $7,900. The terms on the same were one-third cash and the balance in three and six months, at 7 per cent.

Loan Deed $30,000.

Mrs. Ethel Toy Lamar has given the State Mutual Life Assurance Company, of Worcester, Mass., a loan deed on No. 5 Decatur street, 36 feet southeasterly of Peachtree street, for $30,000. The term is five years at 6 per cent. This property is occupied by and adjoins the north wall of the Kimball House. The frontage is about 25 1-2 feet, and the depth about 76.

Loans continue to be made on Atlanta property. The Life Insurance Company of Connecticut was also represented in Tuesday's loan column.

$150—T. Bearden, 16 Echo street, add room. Day work.

Record for Spring Street.

A record price has been established for Spring street between Harris and Baker streets. Jesse Ward has sold to relatives his one-third interest in a parcel on the east side of the street, 45 by 150 feet, for $600 a front foot, making $27,000 for the whole parcel. The buyers already owned the other two-thirds. The transaction was handled direct.

Hugh Richardson Sells.

Hugh Richardson has sold to J. B. Frost the stone bungalow at the southwest corner of Eleventh and Cypress streets, east of the Frank D. Holland apartments, for $22,500. As security for $5,000 Mr. Richardson took a mortgage on the place.

Peachtree Road Sale.

Peachtree road north of Buckhead continues to bring good prices. The northwest corner of Piedmont avenue, for instance, has been transferred from Mrs. M. C. Johnson to a client of Homer McAfee, of the Haas & McIntyre Agency, for $18,000, or at the rate of $75 a front foot.

The frontage on Peachtree is 240 feet and on Piedmont avenue 485 feet.

Preparing Church Plans.

W. T. Downing, the well-known architect, is preparing plans for the new First Presbyterian Church and manse at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Seventeenth streets, the total cost to be about $110,000. It is probable that work will be started within the next few weeks, since the Presbyterians will not wait to sell their old property on the south side of Marietta street, between Spring and Forsyth streets.

The Peachtree lot is 200 by 261 feet and cost approximately $47,000. Numerous people have tried to buy it at a great advance. The Marietta street lot is about 90 feet wide and is held for $180,000. This lot was given to the church by the late William Lowry, father of Colonel Robert J. Lowry, and W. A. Moore.

Small Sales Total $30,700.

The L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency has reported the following sales during the past week:

Six lots in the Clairemont Park sub-division at Decatur, $6,250; eight in Peachtree Highlands, $8,450; three in Woodlawn Park, $2,250; one in Oakwood Terrace, $850.

Mrs. Gussie May Bridges bought one of the corners of Moreland and North avenues, 50 by 150 feet, for $2,850; Mrs. Ella C. Freeman bought one of the corners of Moreland avenue and Hume street, 50 1-2 by 130, for $2,600 cash, and F. C. and R. C. Wilkerson bought one of the corners of Ira street and West Georgia avenue, 27 by 115, for $550, all through J. E. Pritchett.

Dixon Andrews bought 130 Tift avenue, 50 by 150, for $2,400, and J. T. Gardner the house and lot at No. 125 Bryant street, 50 by 100, for $2,750, through E. F. Culpepper.

Mrs. J. O. Hipp bought through Miss Maud Hampton from Lounsford & Bumbaugh, lot 4, block C of the Peachtree Highlands sub-division for $1,750, and will build a $4,000 bungalow. The sellers made $150, having bought 30 days ago.

The total of the above sales is $30,700.

Enhancement in Lot.

A lot that a few years ago was used for pasturage purposes and that could have been bought for $100 a front foot has just changed hands at $300. This is on the north side of East Linden street, across from the Davis-Fischer Sanitarium, and also across from the James R. Gray property which fronts on Howard and Linden streets. It was bought by John W. Zuber from Daniel Brothers for $25,000. The lot is 85 by 260 feet, cornering on an alley which runs northward to North avenue.

Mr. Zuber may build a house on the location, according to report.

PHYSICIAN SLAIN IN HOME HE INVADED

Unwritten Law Plea of Alabama Man Who Killed Masonic Brother.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 19.—Dr. Frank Walton, well known and prominent physician employed by the Woodward Iron Company at Mulga, a mining camp in the western part of the county, is dead as a result of three pistol bullets fired by Gid T. Weaver, a young electrician employed by the same company.

The shooting took place at the home of Weaver when the latter returned unexpectedly. The accused fired three shots, one striking Dr. Walton in the breast and the other two in the side of the back. The wife of Weaver grabbed hold of the weapon and the fourth shot went wild.

Weaver surrendered and was brought to the county jail here today. His preliminary trial is set for Saturday before a justice at Mulga. The unwritten law will be the plea.

The body of Dr. Walton was brought to Birmingham for interment.

Both deceased and accused were members of the same Masonic lodge.

Smoot Sees Gloomy Outlook for Sugar

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—A prediction that the price of sugar will be reduced by the sugar refineries until the domestic cane and beet sugar producers have been destroyed, and that the refiners then will boost the price of sugar higher than it has been for years and reap the benefit, was made by Senator Smoot of Utah, during the debate on the sugar schedule in the Senate to-day.

Senator Smoot declared that the American sugar refiner had the entire business in this country concentrated within his grasp, that it was in the hands of a few men.

Thousands Bet by Millionaires on Race

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Heavy betting by millionaire sportsmen on the speed boat contests being held in connection with the second annual water carnival to-day caused activity in the offices of First Deputy Police Chief Schuettler and Sheriff Zimmer.

Thousands of dollars are said to have changed hands during yesterday's races. One wager was declared to have been for $15,000.

"I have issued orders to my men to arrest any one who may be involved, regardless of who they are, in case they see money change hands," said Schuettler.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Splendid Bill at Forsyth.

Willie Weston, Grace DeMar and Toots Paka and her Hawaiian musicians are running a dead heat for first honors in the fine vaudeville offering at the Forsyth this week. First-nighters found it hard to pick the winner.

The Hawaiian musicians repeat the big hit they made on their previous visit to Atlanta. The guitar playing of one of the men brings down the house and Miss Paka's "hula hula" dance wins a big hand. The weird native songs are exceptionally pleasing.

Willie Weston, in a class by himself as a character singer, has new songs this year, and his act goes big. He was assisted at the piano by Howard Winburn, the Atlanta pianist; Mike Bernard, Weston's regular partner, being ill.

Miss DeMar, who sings well some songs that are full of "pep" to say the least, and captures the gallery in her last number when she exhibits a very shapely figure in tights.

The other acts on the bill are above the average in quality. Kennedy and Rooney have a skit that keeps the audience chuckling; Foster and Lovell win favor with songs and nonsense; the Nikko troupe of acrobats have a Japanese who walks up and down stairs on his head as an added feature, and the Pathe pictures are unusually interesting.

War Picture at the Grand.

Interesting light is thrown on the threatening Mexican situation by a remarkable motion picture, "Victory," at the Grand Theater this week. While the scene would fit any Spanish-American country, the acute conditions in Mexico immediately suggest that country, and the analogy is stronger still when the President of the Republic is assassinated and the crux of the drama develops with an attack on the United States battleship Utah.

Woven through the play is the love drama of a young United States naval lieutenant and the daughter of the United States Ambassador. All modern implements of warfare, including the hydroplane and the wireless, are demonstrated in action, and stirring battles are fought. The picture was made through a special permission and cooperation of the United States Navy Department.

Policeman Sews Up Slit in Skirt

AYDEN, N. C., Aug. 19.—A pretty 19-year-old girl appeared in the streets here wearing a generously slit skirt. She did it on a wager. A crowd of hooting men and boys followed her.

A policeman escorted the girl to a nearby millinery shop and ordered the slit sewed up. He called a carriage and sent the girl home. Then he chased the crowd away.

Summary of Weekly Weather Is Bullish

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—There were small areas with more than 2 inches of rainfall in some of the central and eastern cotton-growing States. The greatest weekly precipitation, 4.43 inches, occurred at New Orleans, and there was 4.20 inches at Rome, Ga. Mean temperatures were above normal, except that there was a deficiency in the central and eastern portions of North Carolina, Northeastern South Carolina, Southern Georgia, the central portion of Northern Florida, the greater portion of Louisiana and the extreme southeastern portion of Eastern Texas.

The greatest excess in temperatures was 7 to 9 degrees in Oklahoma and Northwestern Arkansas. The deficiencies in temperatures were slight.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 72 to 82 degrees over the eastern, from 80 to 84 degrees over the central, and from 82 to 86 degrees over the western portion of the cotton region. The lowest mean temperature, 72 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 86, occurred in Oklahoma, Northwestern Arkansas and Northern and Western Texas. The precipitation was light over the greater portion of the cotton region, and there was considerable areas in the western portion and small areas in other portions where there was no precipitation.

By states:

Georgia — Temperatures continued above the normal, but weather was cooler toward the close of the week. Light showers occurred from the 14th to 16th, but the amounts were irregularly distributed and below normal. The sunshine was ample and conditions were generally favorable.

Mississippi—The mean temperature averaged slightly above normal. Showers occurred every day except Sunday, but mostly in the southern portion. The rainfall is still insufficient at many points in the northern and central portions of the State. Sunshine was ample.

Arkansas—Weather was moderately warm in the eastern, but unusually hot in the western district. Sunshine was above normal. Light, scattered and beneficial showers occurred over 50 per cent of the State, but rain is needed in some localities.

Texas—Temperatures were moderate along the coast, but exceeded the normal elsewhere. Local showers occurred on several days, three-fifths of the reporting stations receiving moisture. Good amounts of precipitation occurred in several of the central and southern counties, but elsewhere the amounts were too light to be of much benefit, and more rain is needed. The sunshine was abundant.

Oklahoma—Weather was intensely hot during the week. Scattered thundershowers which occurred did not relieve the serious drouth.

Alabama—The temperature averaged 2 to 5 degrees above normal during the first and middle parts of the week and was nearly normal at the close of the week. Widely scattered showers occurred, but the precipitation was unevenly distributed and generally there was a considerable deficiency. There was no rain at many stations. Sunshine was abundant.

South Carolina—Nearly normal temperature and sunshine prevailed. More rain over the greater portion of the State would be beneficial.

North Carolina—The temperature was below normal in the eastern and slightly above in the western portion of the State. Day temperatures were moderate and the nights were cloudy and showery weather prevailed in the first three days, followed by clear the remainder of the week, except that light showers occurred throughout the week in the extreme western portion of the Stat. Sun ample.

Tennessee—High temperatures continued. The weather was generally fair, except that scattered showers relieved drouthy conditions in a few localities. Rain is needed generally.

Florida—Showers occurred almost daily, being locally heavy in portions of the peninsula. The rainfall was fairly well distributed, except in some of the east coast counties, where drouth prevailed. Temperature was near normal.

BULLS IN CONTROL OF COTTON REINS

Liverpool and Shorts Big Buyers on Western Weather Conditions—Bears Cautious.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Cables from Liverpool were surprisingly strong today, with the result that prices were 5 to 15 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. The Mexican "war scare" did not result in any pressure. This, coupled with the absence of rains in the western belt of any consequence and the Dallas wire of hot and clear weather, encouraged sufficient buying to send prices still higher. Trading was active and shorts appeared to be nervous over prospects for a bullish weekly crop report covering Texas and Oklahoma.

The feeling is still more bullish in the absence of rains in the western belt and the bull forces were inclined to predict higher prices. Liverpool was said to be a good buyer in this market; also spot interests.

During the forenoon the market displayed an inflexible tone. Offerings were extremely light and scattered, resulting in prices increasing the advance 12 to 16 points from the previous close. August at the opening showed the largest gain, but later settled around 11.67, against an opening of 11.70.

The detailed weather for Texas and the weekly weather report, which was construed as bullish brought out buying and a few points rally followed. Those who are advocating the bull side are advising friends to buy at the present level.

The bearish element are awaiting further developments in the western belt and as soon as there are signs of good rains it is very likely there will be some good selling.

At the close the market was steady, with prices at a net advance of 5 to 20 points from the closing quotations of Monday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: August, 11.66; October, 11.17; December, 11.10; January, 10.99; March, 11.08.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 19.—The map shows a rather general rainfall over the southern half of Texas during the past 24 hours, but generally light, except at Beeville and Luling. None in the northern half or in Oklahoma; part cloudy in southern Arkansas, west Tennessee and the Texas coast. Generally fair elsewhere; no rain. Indications are for part cloudy with probably some scattered showers in the Western States; cooler in the northern half of the belt; generally fair weather with moderate temperatures over the eastern half of the belt is favorable, as an excess of rain was feared.

Liverpool came in stronger than expected and quoted spots 4 points higher; sales, 8,000 bales. Cables report Russia and the continent buying. Political news is less favorable. London says that a third war in the Balkans seems near, as Turkey is apparently making preparations to move against Bulgaria.

Galveston freight people report an excess of steamer room over cotton, and room engaged during the summer being relet, offered or to let as the demand is not up to anticipations. This is confirmed in a way by the Galveston and Houston receipts being lighter than last year, particularly to-day, although picking and ginning are known to be in active operation over a large part of Texas.

Our market opened about 10 points higher and ruled quiet but steady at the advance, waiting for the weekly weather report, which is expected will be unfavorable on the Western States. Unfavorable reports on north Texas and Oklahoma, owing to insufficient rainfall, are also expected in the next few days from parties who are now traveling in that section to inspect the crop, and the opinion has generally settled to the anticipation of a bullish September bureau showing 4 to 6 points decline in conditions.

BETTER TRADE IN DRY GOODS THIS YEAR THAN YEAR AGO

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

Buyers have been in the dry goods market this week in much larger numbers than during the same period a year ago. Merchants are ordering forward their fall lines and filling in their stocks thoughout all departments. Buying has proceeded with precaution in individual cases, but retailers generally are so much in need of merchandise for immediate requirements that the total volume of shipments is keeping up remarkably well.

"Much needed rains have brightened the prospects for a good fall business in a large portion of the territory that was feeling the drouth.

"Silks are a big item of the trade at present and practically all buyers in the market are placing orders for this class of merchandise in liberal quantities.

"Judging from the extraordinary demand that has developed and in view of the serious labor troubles that have prevailed for some time in the silk industry, there will be a scarcity of all kinds of silks before the season is far advanced.

"The sale of black silks has improved greatly within the last few weeks.

COTTON GOSSIP

Liverpool is said to be a good buyer. Mitchell, Riordan and Cone were probably the best buyers on the call. Cone is said to be buying for McFadden. There was no rains shown on the map in the western belt of any consequence.

* * *

New Orleans wires: "Freight people report more room at Galveston than there is demand for."

Greenwod, Miss., reports first new cotton bale of the season, to-day, coming from LaFlore County.

Beeville, Texas, says good rains fell there yesterday, the best since the drouth started.

Texas rainfall: Austin, .30; Beeville, .82; Brownwood, .10; Columbus, .06; Guero, .04; Galveston, .08; Houston, .01; Kerrville, .04; Luling, 1.64; Pierce, .06; San Antonio, .10; Taylor, .28.

Liverpool cables: "Advanced on buying by complaint, chiefly Russian account. Small market and poor demand for spots."

* * *

Dallas wires; "Texas and Oklahoma, clear and hot."

Rains: Taylor, Texas, .28; San Antonio, .10; Galveston, .08; Houston, .01, past twenty-four hours.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 19.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows partly cloudy in Southern Arkansas, West Tennessee and Texas coast. Generally fair elsewhere. Lighter but rather general precipitation over southern half of Texas. None shown by the map in the northern half, or Oklahoma. Indications are for partly cloudy to further showers over the western States; also Arkansas and Tennessee. Cooler weather generally in northern half of the belt.

Report here from Galveston freight agents says freight room engaged during summer is being relet, owing to demand for shipments not being up to expectations.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Showers fell in Texas and Oklahoma Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and while general good rains are needed, the talent is now convinced that some relief has come to the drouth-affected areas. This, in conjunction with the favorable crop reports received from Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and the Carolinas, caused the cotton market to ease off a bit. Oklahoma now seems to be in worse condition than any of the cotton-growing States, as a result of long continued dry weather.

"Texas, on the other hand, has suffered in part only, and certain sections there seem to be doing very well. Texans themselves say the boll weevil has done some damage in the southwestern portion of the State, but the recent dry weather has put an end to the progress of such damage on the west. The chronic cry seems to have failed in his attempts to reduce the crop promise to relatively small provisions, and for this reason the talent is now talking big crop and moderate trade prospects with a great deal of energy. In all of which demand for distant delivery and the causes thereof are playing a leading role. No general rains are in sight, but the weather bureau promises normal temperatures and showers during the next six days, from which the west may derive some further relief in the near future."

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: We favor sales on all moderate advances under existing conditions.

A. Norden & Co: We believe that higher prices will be seen in due course.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: While so large a crop seems assured, few are willing to attempt a bull speculation when the whole crop is soon to be for sale.

Miller & Co.: We continue our advices to sell December cotton.

Florida—Generally fair in north, showers in south portion to-night or Wednesday.

WAR SCARE NOT FELT IN STREET

Market Ruled Dull but Steady. Early Reaction Retrieved by Good Absorption.

By CHAS. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—As a result of the report from Mexico City that President Huerta had delivered an ultimatum to the United States which might result in war, the stock market was very weak at the opening to-day and prices were lower.

United States common declined 1¼. Canadian Pacific slumped to 217½ for a loss of 2½ points. Reading declined to 159¾ for the loss of 1¼. Mexican Petroleum was under pressure, yielding 1 point. Union Pacific lost 1⅝. Northern Pacific shed 1.

The selling at the start was general. Investors as well as speculators seemed to be dumping their holdings. At the end of 45 minutes a better tone prevailed, as Washington dispatches seemed to put a more optimistic complexion on the Mexican situation.

Among the other losses were Amalgamated Copper ¾, Chesapeake and Ohio ¾, Chino Copper ⅝, Erie ½, Pennsylvania Railroad ⅝.

Americans in London were under pressure properties on the Mexican border, sold off 2 points.

The curb was weak.

American in London were under pressure and were weak and irregular. American dispatches received in London before the opening of the New York market causer heavy selling of United States securities.

The situation between Mexico and this government attracted attention and for a time exercised a disturbing influence with many of the important stocks sustaining further losses.

Copper declined ⅝, selling at 73¼. Union Pacific also declined ¾, and the other railways were on the declining side. Reading unchanged; other issues down from a fraction to over a point. At the close of the forenoon the tone became steadier. Call money loaned at 2¼.

Stocks in the last hour generally sold under the opening. Amalgamated Copper lost 1⅛ on the day, while Steel was 1¼ under Monday's final. Reading held comparatively firm, selling around 160. Pennsylvania Railroad was under pressure, falling to 111 for the loss of 2¼ on the day. Southern Pacific sold at 91⅝, where it had ruled nearly all day. The tone was depressed.

The market closed dull.

Government bonds unchanged. Other bonds firm.

Occasionally "Capital" Discovers That "Labor" Really Is a Factor in National Life.

One Big City, Looking Around for 8,000 Vanished Mechanics, Makes the Discovery Just at Present.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Chicago had a lockout of workmen in the building trades.

It was decided by those engaged in building that something must be done, and so all building was stopped for a while, builders agreeing to stand the loss in order to carry their point.

Finally building was resumed and something strange and surprising happened. IT WAS DISCOVERED THAT 8,000 BUILDING MECHANICS WERE MISSING IN CHICAGO.

And the builders, anxious to rush through the work that had been delayed during the lockout, did not know exactly WHERE to get the eight thousand mechanics.

Those eight thousand mechanics had not been sitting around waiting for the lockout to end, but had gone to other cities and engaged in other occupations.

This discovery is useful, since it makes clear the fact that in this country and in its enterprises organized labor actually plays a part that is not to be disregarded.

The builders discover that their architects, their draftsmen, their enterprise and their MONEY amount to very little if they haven't got THE WORKERS TO MAKE REALITIES OF THE IDEAS, THE PLANS, THE ENTERPRISE AND THE MONEY.

Perhaps it is a good thing to have the eight thousand mechanics missing for a little while, just to teach the gentlemen who occasionally imagine that they are the entire nation that they wouldn't be very much more important than Robinson Crusoe on his island if they didn't have the workmen with them.

The absence of these mechanics is also interesting as demonstrating the value of labor unions that keep an organized body of workers ready to do the skilled work of the country upon demand.

The country has grown too big for the old system under which both labor and capital were disorganized, with the capitalist, when the mood seized him, deciding to build something, going out looking for isolated workers, gathering them together and putting them to building.

To-day capital is organized AND OUGHT TO BE ORGANIZED UNDER PUBLIC CONTROL AND REASONABLE CONDITIONS.

And labor is organized and ought to be organized, also under public control and reasonable conditions.

The Chicago lesson teaches that if labor were NOT organized, if the unions did not, by demanding fair wages and fair hours, limiting apprentices and preventing oversupply, regulate conditions, the labor market would be chaotic and the great operations of this day impossible.

If the lack of mechanics in Chicago teaches capital the importance of labor and teaches also the important fact that organized labor makes great building and manufacturing possible, the hardship of the Chicago lockout will not have been endured entirely in vain.

I.

WE cannot choose our sorrows. One there was,
Who, reverent of soul, and strong with trust,
Cried, "God, though Thou shouldst bow me to the dust,
Yet will I praise thy everlasting laws.
Beggared, my faith would never halt or pause;
But sing thy glory, feasting on a crust.
Only one boon, one precious boon I must
Demand of Thee, oh, opulent great Cause.
Let Love stay with me, Constant to the end,
Though fame pass by and poverty pursue.
With freighted hold, her life ship onward sailed;
The world gave wealth, and pleasure, and a friend,
Unmarred by envy, and whose heart was true.
But ere the sun reached midday, Love had failed."

II.

Then from the depths, in bitterness she cried,
"Hell is on earth, and heaven is but a dream;
And human life a troubled aimless stream;
And God is nowhere. Would God so deride
A loving creature's faith?" A voice replied,
"The stream flows onward to the Source Supreme;
Where things that ARE replace the things that SEEM;
And where the deeds of all past lives abide.
Once at thy door, Love languished and was spurned,
Who sorrow plants, must garner sorrow's sheaf.
No prayers can change the seedling in the sod.
By thine own heart, Love's anguish must be learned.
Pass on, and know, as one made wise by grief,
That in thyself dwells heaven and hell and God."

Winifred Black Writes on Elderly Flirts

They Haunt the Summer Resorts, She Says, Like Some Kind of Ghosts and They Are Dreadfully Silly.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

THEY'RE here—in full force—the elderly flirts. I met two of them down at the Springs just now.

The first elderly flirt was a man, forty-five if he was a day; straggling along behind his good, comfy, kindly, middle-aged wife—making eyes at every girl of twenty or so he met.

I walked behind him and heard the girls—after they had passed.

I really wish he could have heard them; he would have been edified.

The Girls Know Him.

"Here's father again," said one pretty thing in pink. "Oh, do look, he'll get cross-eyed, he ogles so."

"I heard him calling the telephone girl 'honey' at the hotel this morning," said a sweet sister in blue, "and you should have seen the face she made when he turned the other way."

"Father certainly is a giddy old thing," said the prettiest of all, in mauve. "I saw him holding hands with teacher, the one with the glasses, out on the porch just at sunset.

"Quoting poetry, too; and his wife came round the corner. I felt so sorry for her, I couldn't bear to look at her."

"Here he is," said the sportive widow to her escort. "Grandpa Googoo Eyes. I met him with his little girl this morning and he stopped talking to her and made an excuse to ask me the way somewhere. You ought to see the way he takes off his hat, ugh—he makes me shudder."

"Grandpa Googoo Eyes."

"Grandpa Googoo Eyes"—not a pretty name, is it, Mr. Elderly Flirt? Yet that is what they call you, the young things you try so hard to impress.

"Grandpa Googoo Eyes," and yet you are not a grandpa at all, only a pa—and not a day over forty-five at the most—but, oh, you do look so elderly to the girls you so much admire—and your jokes are so elderly, too, and your compliments and the sweet, clever things you try so hard to say—can't you see how they laugh at you, all but those who want you to give them something—something that costs more money than young Romeo can afford.

Can't you see how sorry they are for the good, sweet woman who gave up everything else in the world to be your wife—poor silly elderly flirt, you—and the wife—do you think she doesn't know? Do you imagine that she is so used to your artless little ways by this time that it doesn't stab her to the faithful heart to hear the girls make fun of you? Oh, yes, she hears them—trust her for that. She hears everything, sees everything that concerns you—for she loved you once and she never can get over that.

Your First Flirtation.

Now she looks upon you with a kind of contemptuous pity, a sort of kindly forgiveness now; what else can she do?

She looks older than you—she knows that; knows it in every beat of her heart, in every line of her tired face. She has borne you children. See that line by the sensitive mouth—that came when the boy was so ill. That wrinkle there by the eyes—that was when you were ill and she worried so about you.

The hair there on the temples—it was your first flirtation, that you thought she never even heard of, brought that. Don't you remember that summer when the second baby was so little and so delicate, she couldn't go out much, and you—but rest assured she heard. There is always someone to tell. You have cut those lines on a sensitive face—you and no other—none but you—and everyone who sees you together sees it and pities her for being married to one so shallow-hearted, so cruelly light of mind as you, Mr. Elderly Flirt.

There's your sister there—in the shadows behind you—painted, made up, bedizened. How old is the boy she has in tow? Not an hour over twenty-two, if faces tell anything like the truth. She'll get him out into the moonlight and make a fool of him and the nice girl will cry her eyes out about it.

Poorly elderly flirt—what a sorry thing she is—even when she is married and makes a fool of her husband as well as of herself.

Tries to Look Young.

She tries so pitifully hard to look young—hark, what an imitation giggle it is that she gives. Be careful, those high heels were never meant for a charmer over forty. You'll slip, beautiful lady, you'll slip, and what a time you'll have getting up again. Oh, why don't you give it all up once and for all, Elderly Flirt, in petticoats too short and slippers too tight for elderly comfort—let it all slip, the silly game you have played so long.

The girls there behind you—they do the thing much better; they do really—and how about the decent, kindly, honest man who pays your bills and sends you away to have a good time? It isn't fair; honestly it isn't—it isn't the square deal. He works so hard and is so proud of you—why can't you pretend to be halfway decent—just for his sake—at your age?

The Elderly Flirts—they haunt the summer resorts like some kind of forlorn ghosts.

An Opportunity for Women

There Never Was a Time, He Says, When the Need for Women to Become Wise Was So Great as It Is Now.

By ELBERT HUBBARD

A CERTAIN California Bishop was at first opposed to woman suffrage.

Next he investigated it.

Then he saw it was coming.

It came.

Now he gives instruction to the women of his bishopric. It is something like this:

"Inform yourselves thoroughly on all questions of state. You are entering into grave responsibilities, that of free citizens. Inform yourselves, be wise in what you do."

This is advice that a wise father should give to his children.

There was never a time when the need for women to become wise was so great as it is now. Their rights, personal, political, commercial, involve a concomitant responsibility.

When we were children we used to think how glorious it would be when we were grown up. Then we would have the privilege of staying out at night as long as we chose, and of doing what we pleased all day long.

Self-Control.

But when we became men we realized that there was a limit to the hours of the night, also to our capacity to keep awake, that in order to be able to "have a good time," a man must control himself.

Every privilege is bounded by responsibilities which have to be carried in order to make the privilege possible.

That is all any human being has—opportunity.

The opportunity for suffrage and personal rights has not come easily to women. They have worked until they have quite an understanding of the rights that they want and the privileges that have been denied them.

Civic Research Clubs.

In most of the States where suffrage has been granted, the Woman Suffrage clubs have been turned into Civic Research clubs. Women are bringing politically unprejudiced minds to bear on political situations and their new privileges. Their actions, as a rule, are decided by this test, "Is it right or is it wrong." Women whose actions are not influenced by right and wrong are taking very little interest in the woman suffrage movement.

The Reverend Mabel M. Irwin, a Universalist minister, gives out a well-timed warning to women. She urges them to make no mistakes in using the newly acquired privilege of their natural rights. She eloquently urges them to use their power to develop a better, nobler race.

Mabel M. Irwin affirms that women have not been shirking the burden of motherhood, but the bondage of motherhood. When women have the rights of free citizens this bondage will be removed. Then there will be the joyous laughter, the patter of little feet that makes perennial youth.

English Women's Demands.

Beatrice Harraden, the English author, in a recent number of Votes for Women, expresses a clear understanding of how vital to the Englishwomen is the cause of woman suffrage.

If there were only a few women engaged in this movement we might think it was only a dream of fair women. But when fishwives, tinplate workers, weavers, tailoresses, upholsteresses, laundresses, charwomen, ropemakers, shop assistants, nurses, teachers and sweatshop workers unite in the demand for suffrage as equals with the women of nobility, there is something very vital in the movement. It means that these women are stirred into action by a primitive instinct.

Women and Statesmen.

Recently a deputation of women from every walk in life spoke eloquently to Mr. Lloyd George and his colleagues. Many of them had never before made a speech. They were unlettered, hard-working women, moved to eloquence by a cause.

Miss Harraden says the women impressed the statesmen though the statesmen did not impress the women. Their cloaks and trappings of office meant nothing to these women, demanding the privilege to exercise their inherent right of freedom.

When women who toil with their hands join with nobility, and all are made equal by the cause which is moving them, it is time that the Englishmen recognized that it is an inherent, natural right that women are demanding.

The Battle of the Nile

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE Battle of the Nile, Nelson's greatest victory, and one of the most remarkable naval fights known to history, came off one hundred and fifteen years ago—August 1, 1798.

In May, 1798, Nelson, now in independent command, was dispatched by his Government to intercept the great French armament which was intended to reach Egypt and threaten India. Napoleon had vast ideas in his head, and he hoped by means of this armament to materialize them in the shape of a great Oriental Empire.

Coming up with the French fleet in the roads of Aboukir, Nelson lost no time in getting ready for action. With sublime audacity, and in defiance of all the then recognized rules of sea fighting, he ordered part of his fleet to get in between the French ships and the shore, while with the other part he attached from the side of the open sea. Assailed from front and rear, the French were taken at a great disadvantage, and though they fought with a splendid courage, there was never a moment when the issue of the battle was in doubt. The genius, audacity, quickness of the little English Admiral were too much for them, and of the thirteen French battleships only two escaped.

The French ought to have won the day. Their vessels were equal in number to those of the English (13 on each side), and were in size and caliber much superior to them, the British "seventy-fours" being no match for the new and magnificent French "eighties." But the French had no Nelson, and that fact explains it all.

Two or three very important things were settled by Nelson's brilliant victory at the Battle of the Nile. It settled the fact that England's navy was supreme, invincible. It settled the fact that the long cherished idea of a French invasion of England was never to be realized. And finally it settled the fact that Napoleon's visions of a mighty empire in Egypt and Syria, and possibly in India, were to go up in smoke. There was nothing to hinder Napoleon from making himself Emperor of France, and, for a time, dictator of Continental Europe, but the way in which Nelson smashed the great armament off the roads of Aboukir convinced every sensible man in France that the First Consul could never become master of the East. To do that he needed, first, the mastery of the Mediterranean, and the little Admiral had demonstrated such mastery was out of the question.

NEGRESS' DENIAL OF AFFIDAVIT, DAMAGING TO THE ACCUSED, HIT

Here are the important developments Tuesday in the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan:

Judge Roan rules out all testimony bearing on particular acts of immorality which the State has been endeavoring to prove against the defendant.

Will Turner, former pencil factory employee, testifies he entered the metal room shortly before noon one day near the middle of March and saw Frank seeking to engage Mary Phagan in conversation. He says he cannot recall any other person he (Turner) knew in the factory.

Solicitor Dorsey devotes large part of forenoon in an endeavor to bolster the character of C. B. Dalton, a State's witness, and tear down that of Miss Daisy Hopkins, who was called by the defense.

George Gordon, called by the Solicitor, swears that the sensational affidavit of Minola McKnight, negro cook at the Selig home, was signed in his absence and that Solicitor Dorsey refused to order her release, saying he "would get in bad with the detectives" if he did.

Roy Craven and E. H. Pickett, hardware store employees, testified Minola McKnight, cook in the Selig home, made the affidavit revealing incriminating remarks and actions of Frank without reserve.

Miss Nellie Wood says she does not know Frank's general character after the Judge has barred sensational questions which the Solicitor proposed to put. The Solicitor says the witness "entrapped" him.

Leo Frank's mother and his wife left the courtroom Tuesday afternoon as Solicitor Dorsey was outlining to the court what he proposed to prove by Miss Nellie Wood, the witness on the stand.

The Solicitor made a determined effort to get into the record and before hte jury testimony against Frank's character, but, as was the case at the morning session, he was overruled.

"We wish to show by the witness, your honor," said Dorsey, "the general character of this defendant, as well as to get before the jury a specific instance in which this young woman, who worked two days on the fourth floor of the Naitonal Pencil Factory, figured."

When Judge Roan overruled this line of questioning, the Solicitor declared he had another witness to testify to an occasion when he saw Frank with a woman in the factory. The judge said the law plainly barred the questions.

Miss Wood was asked if she knew Frank's general character. She replied that she did not. Dorsey claimed he had been trapped, as his talk with the witness was exactly to the contrary.

Charges Sideboard Was Moved.

Attorney Frank A. Hooper made the charge Tuesday afternoon that the mirror in the dining room at the Selig home had been moved for the express purpose of discrediting the testimony of Albert McKnight, who swore that he was in the Selig home the afternoon of April 26 and saw Frank hurriedly enter the dining room, go to the sideboard and then leave the house without stopping to eat.

McKnight was on the stand at the time, having been recalled to testify as to the place he was sitting when he saw Frank through the mirror. He designated the place and then corroborated Hooper's charge by his declaration that the mirror had been moved around several feet.

Roy Craven, one of the Beck & Gregg Hardware employees, who assisted the police in obtaining the sensational affidavit from Minola McKnight, negro cook at the Selig home, declared on the stand in the Frank trial Tuesday afternoon that the McKnight woman made her statements against Frank of her own accord and without reserve, once she had been persuaded it was best to tell what the State says is the whole truth.

Craven said the McKnight woman told him that she had heard conversations at the Selig home Sunday morning following the murder of Mary Phagan, indicating that Frank had rested poorly and had come home intoxicated, making his wife sleep on the floor. He had asked his wife for a revolver to shoot himself, the McKnight woman said, according to Craven. Frank also was reported to have remarked that he "didn't know why he would murder."

Health Board President Testifies.

E. H. Pickett, a fellow employee of Craven's, corroborated the latter's story and added that the McKnight woman had admitted getting more money after the murder than she had before.

Both Pickett and Craven were sharply questioned by Attor-

$10,823,080 IS GAIN IN FULTON TAXABLES

The Fulton County tax digest, just completed by County Tax Receiver T. M. Armistead, was made public Tuesday, and it shows the tremendous net increase in taxables of $10,823,080. The total returns for the fiscal year amounted to $122,198,115, as compared with $111,375,035 for 1912.

The largest increase in any one item was that of city real estate, which showed an increase over last year of $9,043,235. The returns from city real estate this year amounted to $81,023,490. Increases in other items were not so noticeable, and in many instances a decided decrease was noted.

Poll tax returns amounted to $13,849, as compared with $13,967 for last year. The returns from bank shares amounted to $6,817,075, compared with $6,800,650 for 1912. Stocks and bonds returns showed an increase of $539,535. Money, notes and accounts returns were $10,358,175, as compared with $9,322,610 in 1912.

Merchandise returns were $8,915,400, compared with $8,727,770 last year. The automobile returns, as expected, showed a gain, going up to $522,160, compared with $501,090. Tax returns in the county from manufacturers, cotton and wool plants, etc., were $4,262,745, compared with $4,309,795 for 1912, showing a decrease of $47,050.

County real estate returns amounted to $4,708,462, compared with $4,731,375 for 1912, a decrease of $22,913. Capital in mining property returns were $3,350, as compared with $100 in 1912. Returns from furniture totaled $2,934,525, compared with $2,987,445 for 1912. Jewelry returns amounted to $224,430, compared with $232,380 last year, a decrease of $12,040.

Live stock returns were $309,890, compared with $347,535, a decrease of $37,645, showing that Fulton County is not raising as much cattle as last year. The return from professional taxes was $5,990, compared with $5,640 last year. The returns from vehicles totaled $77,185, compared with $99,545 last year, showing a decrease in this source of revenue of $22,360. Returns from other sources were $941,680, as compared with $872,255 for 1912.

Those who assisted Mr. Armistead in making out the digest were W. F. Dykes, Earnest Armistead, W. C. Love and Zach Castleberry.

DENY REPORT OF MEXICAN WAR MOVE

American Charge Wires State Department That He Has Not Been Given Passports.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The White House to-day received a dispatch from Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy absolutely denying press dispatches to the effect that he had been given his passports by the Mexican Government or that an ultimatum of any kind had been given to him by Huerta.

The telegram from O'Shaughnessy is explicit on both of these points, and indicates that the situation has not been changed in any way except that a formal and diplomatic reply to the Lind proposals was transmitted to O'Shaughnessy yesterday by the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, Frederic Gamboa. The tenor of this reply probably will be made public at the White House later in the day.

In his telegram to Secretary Bryan, Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy relates the circumstances leading up to the transmission of the Huerta reply to the mediation proposals, which Lind carried from President Wilson to Mexico, and declares that nothing had indicated that they were in any way offensive to the Mexican Government.

Found Reports Were False.

He made a trip to the Mexican Foreign Office late last night to ascertain the truth of rumors that he was about to be given his passports, and that Mexico had demanded recognition from the American Government by last midnight.

He found these reports unfounded and spread the news among the members of the American colony in Mexico City. The population seemed to take it for granted that Huerta was about to make the desperate play which he long had threatened.

Secretary Bryan to-day denied that the State Department had received any ultimatum from Mexico concerning recognition of the Huerta government by any stated time, or that Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy had been given his passports and told to leave Mexico.

The State Department was informed to-day by Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy that Senor Gamboa, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has denied the statement made by Senor Urrutia, Minister of the Interior, concerning the reported ultimatum, and it is believed here that the outlook for a peaceful settlement of the troubles between the two nations is more promising at the present time than it has been in the past fortnight.

Wild Rumor Laid to Cabinet.

Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy, in his telegram to the State Department to-day, reported that President Huerta and Envoy Lind were conferring concerning the final settlement of the difficulties between the two countries. While he did not comment on the situation beyond giving a bare report of the fact, Mr. O'Shaughnessy strongly indicated that he hoped for a peaceful settlement and that the next 48 hours probably would bring developments leading to a compact between the United States and Mexico.

It is believed at the State Department that the sensational reports emanating from Mexico City last night were inspired by the Huerta Cabinet.

SMITH MEN TIE SCORE IN SIXTH

McBride's Costly Error Lets Two Runs Cross Plate—Dent and Foxen on Slab.

PONCE DELEON BALL PARK, Aug. 19.—Dent's wild throw in the first inning helped the Barons to one run. Foxen was Molesworth's selection to oppose the locals. Tommy Long was back in left field.

The Crackers tied the score in the sixth inning, when McBride let Holland's single roll to the fence. Bisland and Holland both scored on the error.

FIRST INNING.

Marcan hit in front of the plate and beat it out for a hit. When Dent threw wild to first Marcan reached second. Messenger bunted to Dent and Marcan was caught at third to Holland. Messenger stole second. McDonald drew four wide ones and ambled to the initial sack. Kniseley slambed a one-timer to center and Messenger tallied. McBride fanned. Mayer also was set down on strikes. TWO HITS, ONE RUN.

Agler hoisted a long fly to Kniseley. Long was disposed of by Ellam and McGilvray. Welchonce was easy for Foxen and McGilvray. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

McGilvray lofted a tall one to Long. Ellam drew free transportation to first. Foxen did the Casey act. Ellam stole second and when Chapman heaved the ball to center field Ellam reached third. Smith scooped up Marcan's grass-cutter and threw the Birmingham second-sacker out at first. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Smith popped to Ellam. Bisland found one to his liking and poled it to the left garden for a single. Holland's short fly was easy for Kniseley. Calvo forced Bisland at second, Ellam to Marcan. ONE HIT, ONE RUN.

THIRD INNING.

Messenger went out over the Bisland-Agler route. McDonald out, Dent to Agler. Kniseley struck out. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Chapman ballooned to Kniseley. Dent walked. Agler singled to center and Dent took second. Long was patient and was awarded with a free pass, and the bases were intoxicated. Harry Welchonce's best was a grounder to Ellam and Dent was forced at the home plate to Mayer. Smith ended the inning by striking out. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

FOURTH INNING.

McBride went out, Bisland to Agler. Mayer lined to Bisland, who let the ball go through him for an error. McGilvray drew four wide ones and beat it to Agler's cushion. Ellam walked, filling the bases. Foxen hit a sacrifice fly to Calvo and Mayer scored. Marcan filed to Calvo. NO HITS, ONE RUN.

Bisland fouled to Mayer. Holland out, Ellam to McGilvray. Calvo out, Mayer to McGilvray. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

FIFTH INNING.

Messenger fouled to Holland. McDonald grounded to Bisland and went to second when he threw wild to first. Kniseley singled to left and McDonald tallied. McBride out, Bisland to Agler. Mayer out, Dent to Agler. NO HITS, ONE RUN.

Chapman singled to center. Dent singled through McBride, and Chapman took second. Agler followed with a single to center, and the bases were crowded. Long hit into a double play, Ellam to Marcan to McGilvray. Chapman scored on the play. Welchonce flied to McBride. THREE HITS, ONE RUN.

SIXTH INNING.

McGilvray flied to Long. Ellam flied to Calvo. Foxen fanned. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Smith popped to Ellam. Bisland singled to center. Holland smashed a single to left and when McBride let the ball roll to the fence Bisland and Holland crossed the counting station. This tied the score. Calvo flied to Messenger. Chapman out, Ellam to McGilvray. TWO HITS, TWO RUNS.

SEVENTH INNING.

Marcan fanned. Messenger out, Smith to Agler. McDonald out, Smith to Agler. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Dent popped to Ellam. Agler singled through Ellam. Long walked. Welchonce singled to center and Agler registered. Smith hit a home run to deep center, scoring Long and Welchonce ahead of him. Bisland flied to McBride. Holland popped to Kniseley. THREE HITS, FOUR RUNS.

LEO FRANK SKETCHED AS HE TOLD HIS OWN STORY TO JURY

During the greater part of his story Frank was as calm and statistical as an accountant discussing an audit.

In telling of his dealings with the police and Chief of Detectives Lanford, Frank waxed sarcastic in a quiet yet bitter way. But he never let loose his emotion or lost his poise.

At times Frank would lose his air of complete repression and his face for a moment would take on an aspect of deep feeling. He would, however, quickly resume his normal expression of stoicism.

NEGRO M'KNIGHT SAYS SIDEBOARD IN HOME OF SELIGS HAS BEEN MOVED

ney Rosser, who sought to show that Minola signed the statement to obtain her freedom from jail.

Dr. S. C. Benedict, president of the State Board of Health, was called at the opening of the afternoon to show that charges of scientific dishonesty against Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the board, never were found to be well founded. Dr. W. F. Westmoreland asserted on the stand that Dr. Harris had been found guilty of the charges.

By far the most damaging testimony brought out against Frank was that of Will Turner, who testified that he had entered the metal room and come upon Frank seeking to press his attentions upon the Phagan girl only a few weeks before the crime.

When Turner was put under the raking fire of Luther Rosser's cross-examination, the weight of his testimony suffered considerably. The youth, who admitted he had worked at the factory only a brief time, was unable to describe Mary Phagan and was unable to tell the name of any other girl in the entire factory.

"I went into the rear room on the second floor one day with some pencils," said Turner. "It was about the middle of March. Frank was walking from his office toward the rear of the factory. Mary Phagan was coming toward her machine. He told her to wait a minute, that he wanted to talk to her. She said she had to go to work.

"He said: 'I'm superintendent of the pencil factory and I want to talk to you.' She repeated that she had to go to work and he followed her as she backed away from him. A couple of girls came into the room and I asked them where to put the pencils and then I left. I didn't see any more."

On cross-examination young Turner admitted he did not know whether there were other girls around at the time or not. He did not know the names of the two girls, he said, who entered the room while Frank was trying to talk to Mary Phagan. The extent of his description of Mary Phagan was that she had light hair. The question of the admissibility of this evidence caused a long wrangle between the attorneys.

Rosser and Arnold objected on the ground that it was not at all material, proving absolutely nothing. They denied Dorsey's contention that it established that Frank had known Mary Phagan, in spite of his declarations that he did not know her. The lawyers said that it did not show that he knew her by name or that he was conversing with her on any other subject than her work.

To contend that Mary Phagan was killed right on that second floor," retorted the Solicitor. "We contend that Mary Phagan and Frank were the only persons in the metal department at the time that this incident took place, and that she was backing away and protesting that she had to go back to work. We contend that it was the beginning of the transaction which ended in the little girl's death. It should go in as contradicting Frank's statement that he did not know her."

Turner was allowed to tell his story.

That Solicitor Dorsey refused to take any step toward the liberation of Minola McKnight, cook at the Selig home, who was imprisoned until she made her sensational affidavit against Frank, on the ground that it would "get him in bad with the detectives," was the unexpected and highly interesting statement made by Attorney George Gordon late in the forenoon session.

Gordon was called by the State, but proved as good a witness for the defense. He declared that the affidavit made by the cook was signed in his absence, although the last paragraph stated that it was signed in his presence.

He said that he had told Solicitor Dorsey that the negro woman was being held illegally, but that the Solicitor had replied that it was necessary sometimes to do things of this sort in order to get the information wanted. He told of going to the police station and finding Minola crying and hysterical in her cell.

The attorney for the colored woman said that he had not been permitted to enter the room where his client was being interrogated by the detectives and Ray Pickett and Arthur Craven, the latter two being employees of the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company. He was present, he said, when part of the notes were being read by G. C. Febuary, but was not there when the affidavit was signed.

The McKnight affidavit told of alleged conversations at the Selig home of a nature very incriminating to Frank. The McKnight woman denied all of the statements in the affidavit to a Georgian reporter the night that she was liberated.

A crushing blow was dealt the State by the refusal of Judge Roan to admit, either while the defense was completing its case or after the State had taken up the rebuttal, any evidence not directly and at first hand bearing upon the specific acts charged against the factory superintendent.

The ruling was a sweeping victory for the defense. It gave Frank's case, which had been aided materially the day before by the defendant's own statement, an added strength and heightened the prospects in Frank's favor.

Solicitor Dorsey tried first to cross-question Daisy Hopkins, one of the defense's witnesses, as to conversations she was supposed to have had in regard to incidents at the pencil factory in which she and a man undesignated except as her "foreman" were involved. Frank's name was not mentioned in the indicated charges. The conversation was about a "foreman."

The Hopkins woman denied again that she ever had made visits to the factory for improper purposes or that she had had the conversations referred to by the Solicitor.

Dorsey encountered the same stone wall when he tried to draw testimony against the moral character of Frank from his own witnesses. From W. P. Merck and J. P. Floyd the Solicitor had expected to obtain a recital of the stories of happenings which they said had been related to them.

Merck, however, had m ysteriously disappeared from the courthouse when his name was called, and Floyd was not permitted to go into the details of the testimony the Solicitor had hoped to bring out.

The Solicitor thereafter confined his efforts to bolstering up the character of C. B. Dalton, the State's witness who testified to seeing women in Frank's office, and attacking that of Daisy Hopkins. He called a number of witnesses, one of them a cousin of the Hopkins woman, who swore that her character for truth and veracity was bad and that they wouldn't believe her on oath.

Swear Dalton's Character Is Good.

Other witnesses testified that Dalton's character was good. They were asked by Attorney Rosser if they were acquainted with his court and chaingang record. They replied, for the most part, that they were not.

The brown suit worn by Frank April 26 was identified by Mrs. Emil Selig, his mother-in-law, at the opening of court in the forenoon and the suit was placed in evidence.

The defense prepared to show by Wiley Roberts, inside jailer at the Tower, that Jim Conley had been reading since his incarceration there, but the Solicitor objected on the ground that no basis had been laid for the testimony.

Daisy Hopkins then was called and questioned, after which the State began its rebuttal, the defense having closed its case.

While waiting for a witness Solicitor Dorsey arose and made the unexpected announcement that he himself had erased the identification "Taken out at 8:26" on the time slip taken from the clock in the factory. Frank had made the charge he had written words as an identification of the slip and that they had been erased. The Solicitor declared that he thought the detectives had made the identification.

"Frank did not know who made the erasure," said Attorney Reuben Arnold.

The Solicitor had announced earlier that his first witnesses in rebuttal would be called to support C. B. Dalton and impeach Daisy Hopkins, who declared she had never visited the factory with Dalton or that he had ever introduced Dalton to the factory superintendent.

Wiley Roberts was asked:

Q. Has Jim Conley been in your custody during this trial?—A. Yes.

Q. Has he ever asked for newspapers?—A. Yes.

Dorsey interrupted.

"Your honor," he said, "I think the witness, Jim Conley, ought to have the privilege of denying or affirming that before he can be impeached."

"Conley said that h could only read certain words," said Arnold, "but probably Mr. Dorsey is right. I will have to call Jim Conley back again. Mr. Rosser will be back in a minute and we will close."

Daisey Hopkins Is Recalled by Dorsey.

The witness was excused and Dorsey made the announcement that four doctors of the following five would be called by the prosecution:

Drs. G. C. Mizell, F. L. Eskridge, Clarence Johnson, John Funke, S. E. Benedict, of Athens, and J. C. Cramer, of Macon, the latter two president and vice president of the State Board of Health.

Solicitor Dorsey asked that Daisy Hopkins be returned to the stand so that he might continue his cross-examination of her.

The witness took the stand.

Q. You say you knew nothing of the cot in the basement of the National Pencil Factory?—A. No.

Q. Do you know anything at all of the basement?—A. No.

Q. Are you acquainted with A. R. Floyd, of Redan, Ga.?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you known him for a long time?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you had a conversation with Floyd since the murder?—A. No.

Q. Haven't you been to his house to get milk?—A. I don't think I have since the murder.

Q. Didn't you go to the home of Floyd to get milk and tell him about that cot in the basement of the National Pencil Factory?—A. No.

Q. Do you know Bob Goddard?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Dr. R. S. Pound, of Redan?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Mr. Smith, superintendent of the Nunnally-McRae Company?—A. On Mitchell street?

Q. Yes.—A. Yes, I know him.

Q. Do you know Walter P. Merck?—A. Where does he live?

Met Merck on Peachtree Street.

Q. You met him first at Stone Mountain, then you met him on Walker street?—A. I met him at Redan. They used to live down there.

Q. You said something about being married. Have you two living husbands?—A. No; only one.

Q. Have you seen him since the murder?—A. Yes; at Redan.

Q. Do you remember meeting Walter P. Merck one Saturday afternoon on Whitehall street?—A. I met him on Peachtree.

Q. Didn't you tell him that afternoon that you were going to the National Pencil Factory?—A. No; I told him I had just left the factory.

Q. Didn't he make an engagement with you to go to the factory?—A. No.

Rosser objected, declaring that a female witness could not be attacked in that way.

"Your honor," said Dorsey, "I want to show by Merck that this woman did make an engagement with him that afternoon."

"I understand," replied Rosser, "that when an argument of this kind is to be made the jury is to retire."

"It would be better to have the ladies retire also," said Dorsey. "I don't want to embarrass them."

Jury and Women Retire From Room.

The jury retired, and after a hurried conference, Frank's wife and mother also left the courtroom at the request of Attorney Arnold.

"This is their witness," said Dorsey. "We want to show that this man Merck had her Saturday afternoon, and she said she was going to the National Pencil Factory. It was cold weather. We want to show that he saw her that night and what she told him."

The witness interrupted:

"It was summer time," she said pertly.

"She has denied," said Dorsey, "in the impeachment of Dalton that she ever went to the pencil factory for any improper purpose."

"We object," said Rosser.

"I want to show that she told Merck about meeting her foreman at the factory," said Dorsey.

Then the Solicitor repeated a conversation involving the "foreman," which is unprintable, which he wanted to get before the jury.

"He does not mean to charge Frank is the foreman," said Arnold. "He is frank enough to state that."

"Merck in an affidavit," said Dorsey, "said foreman. He didn't say Mrs. Hopkins said her superintendent or that she named any names. I mean to let the jury draw its own conclusions."

"I knew when your honor refused to rule out the charges of Conley and Dalton," said Arnold, taking up the argument, "that you were opening the doors for new issues that would obscure the charge of murder. I knew it would lead to a situation in impeachments bringing us to the point where we would hardly know who we were trying. This woman never would have been put up as an original witness except for the aspersions cast on her by Conley and Dalton. Look how far afield we have wandered. Now, he wants to impeach this witness on something with which the defendant has no connection."

"You can rebut any of their direct testimony," said Judge Roan. "You can not bring any new criminal charge against this defendant. If it is against someone else, it is irrelevant."

"Your honor," said Dorsey, "I want to ask a question to let the jury hear that you rule it out."

"No; we object," said Rosser "That's just why the jury was sent out."

"I'll let you assume that you ask it," said the court to Dorsey.

"Why, your honor," replied Dorsey, "it puts us in the position of not even trying to prove what we have indicated we would."

"I can not permit the question," said Judge Roan.

"Very well," said Dorsey, adding, in an undertone, "That shuts me off; that shuts me off."

Dorsey continued the examination:

Q. Didn't you meet Merck during the afternoon after working hours and tell him you were going to the pencil factory?—A. No.

Q. Didn't he come to see you that night?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you had been to the factory that afternoon?—A. No.

Men Say Woman's Character Is Bad.

Miss Hopkins was excused, and J. R. Floyd, of Redan, Ga., was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Do you know Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how many husbands she has?

Rosser: "I object, your honor. I don't care if she has three hundred husbands."

The objection was sustained.

Q. Would you believe her under oath?—A. I would not.

Q. Did you ever hear her say anything about a cot in the basement of the pencil factory?—A. Yes.

The witness was excused. Bob Goddard, brother of C. M. Goddard, who was shot to death a few months ago by Elmer F. Darden, was the next witness called in rebuttal. Goddard resides near Redan. Dorsey questioned him.

Goddard testified to the bad character of Daisy Hopkins, and declared he would not believe her under oath.

Henry Carr, of Stone Mountain; N. J. Ballard, a second cousin of Daisy Hopkins, and J. L. Rice all followed each other in rapid succession and testified that they would not believe the Hopkins girl under oath.

Dorsey then addressed the court.

"Your honor," he said, "we want to offer indictments against Daisy Hopkins and also a bond forfeiture."

Rosser: "Your honor, they objected to the introduction of an indictment against Dalton and they objected rightly. An indictment is nothing against one's character."

Dorsey: "Dalton denied any knowledge of an indictment. This is a bond forfeiture."

Judge Roan: "I rule it out."

Dalton's Recent Past Good, Says J. T. Hearn.

Glenn Smith, superintendent of the Nunnally-McRae Company, testified that Daisy Hopkins' character was bad and that he would not believe her on oath.

J. T. Hearn, of Walton County, said he had known C. B. Dalton since 1890. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Is his character good or bad?—A. The first part of his life was bad. The last part has been good.

Q. Would you believe him on oath?—A. Yes.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. When was the last time you knew Dalton?—A. 1903 or 1904.

Q. Did you hear about him being indicted for selling whisky in 1906?—A. Yes, but he had joined the church about 1904 and I understood was leading a good life.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Do you know the instance of his being indicted for stealing years ago?—A. Yes.

Rosser: "We object. He can't go into that."

Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Dorsey: "When they go into specific acts, can't I?"

Judge Roan: "No."

R. V. Johnston, another Walton County citizen, was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. When were you approached in regard to testifying to the character of C. B. Dalton?

Rosser interposed with an objection, but was overruled.

A. Last Friday, a week ago.

Q. Who approached you?—A. Harry Gottheimer.

Rosser again objected, and was sustained.

Q. Are you acquainted with the character of C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him on oath?—A. I would.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. You never heard that he was indicted for stealing and selling whiskey?—A. No.

The witness was excused, and W. M. Cook, of Social Circle, Ga., a dairyman and farmer, testified as to Dalton's good character, and declared that he would believe him on oath.

W. J. Elder, of Decatur, followed Cook on the stand, and said that Dalton came to Decatur about five years ago and worked for him as a carpenter. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Are you acquainted with Dalton's general character?—A. I don't know as I am.

Q. That means what people say about him?—A. Yes.

Q. Is his character good or bad?—A. Good.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. Why did you say just now that you didn't know?—A. I didn't know as I did.

Q. You said you didn't know because you didn't know yourself?—A. Yes.

The witness was excused, and A. B. Houston, of Decatur a farmer, who has lived there 1 years, was called. The witness said that he had known Dalton for eight years and that his character was good and that he would believe him under oath.

J. T. Borne, who formerly lived at Ingleside, in DeKalb County, and who now operates a cigar and soda fountain at Decatur, said he knew Dalton and would believe him on oath.

W. M. Wright, of Atlanta, general manager of the Independent Transfer Company, testified in behalf of Dalton's good character and declared that he would believe him on oath.

W. C. Hale, of No. 88 Kirkwood avenue, Atlanta, formerly of Walton County, testified to Dalton's good character and said he would believe him under oath.

L. L. Boyce, a city policeman, formerly of Walton County, testified that eighteen or twenty years ago Dalton's character was bad, but that now it was better and that he had heard nothing bad about him recently.

M. Gordon Caldwell, of Atlanta; J. W. Hunt, of No. 18 Trinity avenue, and W. P. Patrick, of tlanta, a member of the police force, testified to Dalton's good character and said that they would believe him under oath.

J. E. Dudley, a former employee of the pencil company, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Were you working at the National Pencil Factory about October, 1912?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember a machinist named Charley Lee?—A. Yes, he was working there.

Q. Were you hurt there?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. On the second floor, the office floor.

Q. Just where were you hurt?—A. On a metal machine. I hurt the forefinger of my left hand.

Mashed Finger But Kept Blood Off Floor.

Q. How were you hurt?—A. This fellow Lee had put the metal on the machine. It dropped off. I picked it up and in putting it back I mashed my finger.

Q. What did you do then?—A. There was some cotton waste there, which I put around my hand.

Q. Did any blood drop on the floor?—A. A few drops.

Q. Did any blood drop near the ladies' dressing room?—A. None.

Q. How long after this accident did you work?—A. I quit then.

Q. What does this fellow Lee do besides working at his trade?—A. I don't know.

Q. What did you do then?—A. I went to the office to get it dressed, then went to the Atlanta Hospital.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. How badly were you hurt?—A. Not very bad.

Q. You bled pretty freely?—A. Yes, but I had my hand in the cotton waste.

Q. You didn't notice whether any blood was on the floor or not?—A. Yes; none of it dropped except at the machine where I was working.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Was your finger outside of the coton waste until you got to the office?—A. No.

The witness was excused, and the witness Merck was called, but failed to answer. Willie Turner, of Sandy Springs, the 16-year-old son of E. M.

FRANK'S STATEMENT IS BEST PLEA PRESENTED IN HIS DEFENSE SO FAR

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

So far, unquestionably, to my way of thinking Leo Frank himself has made the best and most appealing plea in behalf of Leo Frank.

His statement in the recital thereof was as clean cut, as dignified, as dispassionate and as convincing as any statement I ever heard from the witness stand, and I have heard hundreds.

Regardless of its merits—or, at least, aside from that—the defendant acquitted himself with credit, and that much may be said of him ungrudgingly and in the frankest fairness to all parties concerned.

Of course, had Frank been nervous, hesitating, "fidgety," or seemingly in any wise disconcerted, there would be those, perhaps, who would have seen in that great evidence of his guilt—and by the same token, in that he was calm, poised, self-possessed, even smiling at intervals, there will be those who see in that evidence of a monstrous coldness and unfeeling design.

The vast majority of those who heard that remarkable statement, however, must have been impressed by, at least, the apparent sincerity of it and the seeming inclination in the defendant to hold back nothing.

In its recital the statement of Leo Frank was wonderful—in its written form, stripped of the man's personality, it still is a human document of intense and absorbing interest.

It impressed me, too, as being in many ways characteristic of Frank as I have come to know him of late—and I never spoke one word to him in all my life.

I have come to know him as the prisoner sitting over there between the two women in the courtroom—the slight, spectacled party, a seat or two beyond Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold.

I have come to know him, in my way of knowing persons charged with grave crimes, not by way of personal touch so much as by constant observation of him under fire.

Repression Makes the Story.

All that was dramatic in Frank's statement was repressed—the dramatic touch was there, to be sure, but the red fire and the usual accompanying stage tricks were not.

If Frank should undertake to sell me a gross of pencils, I should expect him to tell me the truth about the pencils, and nothing but the truth—but I should expect him nevertheless to sell me the pencils at a profit.

His statement of Monday seemed to me a recital much after the fashion I should expect from him in the pencil transaction.

To me, it seemed that Frank was undertaking to tell the truth and nothing but the truth of the Mary Phagan murder, as he knows the truth—and to tell it at a profit to himself.

That is the best and the worst that I can say of Leo Frank's statement, as it appealed to me.

True, in a transaction involving a mere gross of pencils, there would be lacking all the great elements that entered into the statement Frank made on Monday—and yet, at that, neither subject matter is, in its final analysis, anything more or less than something about which the simple truth should be told.

Frank looked the jury fairly and squarely in the eye when he was making his statement—and not once did he hesitate or falter in stating his plea.

Contrast the statement of the defendant with the statement of the negro—the star witness summoned against him.

Frank's Day in Court.

Now, Monday was Frank's day in court, and it is square and right that Frank's showing should be criticised freely and frankly—it is right that his statement should be praised, if it seemed to deserve praise, just as it should be condemned, if it seemed to merit that melancholy fate.

Contrast it, therefore, with the statement of Conley!

Argue the matter with yourself.

Certainly, Frank has behind him a long period of decent life, good reputation, business integrity, and home happiness—and Conley has, what?

Take the two stories—and upon these two stories the verdict in the Frank case must turn eventually—and weigh them, side by side, honestly, without prejudice, and in the light of a clean conscience.

What is your answer?

What will be the jury's answer?

The field of speculation thus opened is most engaging, and it will, if one but undertake to enter it seriously and with open mind, be well worth the entering.

In the matter of his character, Frank said little. He entered simple denials to some few things cited against him.

He was willing to be cross-examined on his statement. He himself insisted that his general character be put in issue. He furnished the State with the first information it ever had that Conley could write.

All the way through, his statement rang with confident challenge, and a dare to the State to prove anything vile in him whatever!

Now, then, people will differ as to the EFFECT Frank's statement will and ought to have on the jury.

Maybe it is a clever evasion of a grave issue—maybe it is possible of rebuttal, and maybe it will be broken down.

Impressively Delivered.

The fact remains that it was most impressively delivered, and carried with it every emphasis of apparent truth and straightforwardness!

It is my opinion now that the State has in Frank's statement the hardest thing to get away from that yet has been tendered to it.

It contradicts the State at points that the defense has been able to fortify abundantly with facts.

It makes more necessary than ever before the complete success of the State's efforts to break down Frank's good name.

For I think it safe to predict that unless the State DOES demolish Frank utterly, the wonderful statement he made on Monday more than likely will serve in connection with the other things set up—to clear him of the charge of murdering Mary Phagan!

It matters not, so far as this article is concerned, moreover, whether the statement ought to clear him—the prospect is that it WILL clear him unless the State can batter it down and collapse it entirely!

The defendant touched upon every phase of the State's case against him—the happiness of his home, his nervousness on the morning of the murder, his movements on the day of the crime, and the day before, and the day after, his family's financial resources, his disinclination to talk to Conley, although he at first talked freely to the police officers, his alleged peeping into the girls' dressing room, his lack of knowledge of or acquaintance with the impeached Dalton, his non-association with loose characters, male and female.

There was not a point he failed to touch, even though he seemed to touch points now and then with a measure of fine scorn!

Is there a gap that Frank MIGHT let down that he has FAILED to let down?

Is there a point involved that Frank has not invited investigation of?

Hard to Find Gaps.

It is rather hard to locate any such gaps or points, if they are there.

And yet they may be there! That is for the State yet to demonstrate!

The State has the full right of rebuttal, as applied to Frank's statement, that it enjoys in respect of other evidence. There may be weak points in his story—just as there were weak points in Conley's.

The point is that they are not nearly so apparent upon the surface of things in the Frank statement.

For one thing, Conley made four sworn statements, all contradictory, before he got one finally landed, and Conley admitted freely from the stand that he had lied time and again.

On the other hand, Frank's statement is the first and only sustained and sequenced utterance as to the details of his story yet falling from his lips.

It must stand in its entirety or fall in its entirety.

Whatever may be the effect of that statement in the end, it will go down in the criminal history of Georgia as one of the most remarkably clear and apparently convincing statements ever falling from a defendant's lips.

When the State gets through with it, the statement may be shot to pieces and rendered utterly ineffective.

As it stands to-day, however, I hardly think a dozen people who heard it will deny the profound impression it made, and the present probability of its determining effect upon the minds of the jury.

The defense has played its best card in Leo Frank's statement.

It remains yet to be seen, however, whether that card is sufficient to win the case!

MOTHER OF LEO FRANK

Mrs. Rea Frank.

Wife at Last Breaks Down, Overcome by Frank's Story

After having braved every trying courtroom ordeal and faced every horrible charge hurled at her husband with a stoicism almost as unflinching and imperturbable as his, Mrs. Leo Frank gave away completely to her emotions and sobbed unrestrainedly as Frank said the last words of his wonderful and most impressive address to the jury Monday.

It was the final dramatic touch to a situation that had held a courtroom full of spectators in an irresistible thrall through four long hours of the afternoon.

The spell that had been cast over the room by the quiet but earnest words of the slight young factory superintendent was broken by the tones of the deputies, who shouted the moment Frank rose to leave the witness chair:

"Keep your seats, gentlemen, while the jury passes out."

Frank Rushes to Wife.

In the confusion that followed some did not notice that Frank rushed right to the side of his wife, who had thrown her head in her arms and was shaking with pitiful sobs as she moaned his name again and again.

The woman who had steeled herself against the accusations and innuendoes of the Solicitor General during the three long weeks of the trial collapsed when her husband himself took the stand to declare his innocence.

Many who had rushed into the inclosure to give their congratulations to Frank paused as they observed the piteous figure.

The jurors, already deeply impressed by the talk of Frank, were freshly touched by this exhibition of emotion. They had arisen to file over to the Kimball House. Juror Johenning, at the head of the line, stood for several minutes with tears running down his cheeks, oblivious of the fact that he was blocking the rest of the jurors and that three deputies were waiting to take them on their way.

Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner leaned against the railing of the inclosure. There was a suspicious moisture in his eyes, which have grown accustomed to many tragic and affecting spectacles.

Troublesome Lump Rises.

Very few in the courtroom had much to say until they had managed to subdue that troublesome lump that persisted in rising in their throats.

"Rube, that boy put it all over you and me," muttered massive Luther Rosser, huskily, to Reuben Arnold, his partner in the case.

For many minutes after the packed courtroom had emptied itself a little group of persons remained in front of the judge's bench. Mrs. Frank, the wife of the man accused of the revolting murder, and the elder Mrs. Frank, his mother, were weeping hysterically, overcome by the appeal that had been made. Relatives surrounded them. Frank talked comfortingly to them for several minutes, and then, feeling in danger of breaking down himself, signaled Sheriff Mangum and returned to his cell in the Tower.

Suffragettes Want Baby Booth at Fairs

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Among the things that the suffragettes, headed by Harriet Stanton Blatch, want is a pocket in their skirts and a place at fairs where women can check their babies.

Mrs. Blatch visited a number of fairs throughout the State and declares it a crying shame that at not one of them did she find a place where mothers could leave their babies while they rambled around the park.

Moonshiner Slays Man in Pistol Duel

LEXINGTON, Aug. 19.—In a pistol duel at Burnside, Ky., between Joshua Carter, a moonshiner, and John Fitzgerald and Town Marshal John Coomer, Fitzgerald was killed and Coomer wounded by Carter. The slayer forced a ferryman to row him across a river when pursued by a posse. Officers wounded him as he escaped to the mountains. A posse is in pursuit.

Gives Up Bad Checks, Admitting Forgery

MOBILE, Aug. 19.—When arrested on the charge of passing forged checks last night in a Royal street restaurant and taken before Chief of Police F. W. Crenshaw, J. A. Ball, a bookkeeper claiming Laurel, Miss., where he says his mother resides, as his home, admitted his guilt.

Ball, when seached at the police station, had a total of $315 in forged checks in his pockets.

Bulgar Plot to Slay All Turks Reported

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 19.—Evidence of a conspiracy of Bulgarians to rise up in Adrianople and massacre all the Turks has been discovered, it was declared in a telegram received here to-day by the Grand Vizier. The contents of the message were turned over to the foreign diplomats to support Turkey's contention that an army is necessary at Adrianople to protect the Turkish civilians from Bulgarian outrages.

DIGGS, ON STAND, TELLS OF TRIP WITH GIRL

Declares That Marsha Warrington Would Not Let Him Leave City Without Her.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 19.—Maury I. Diggs, defendant in the white slavery action brought by the Government, took the stand in his own defense shortly after court was reconvened to-day.

Diggs looked straight ahead as he answered questions put by Attorney Robert Delvin, for the defense. He spoke his answers in a loud, firm voice.

Diggs was attired in a fashionable blue serge suit, and wore a black tie. As he answered questions slowly, he glanced down at his clothes, and sometimes let his eyes rest for a few seconds on his recently-manicured nails. He leaned forward as he talked, one elbow resting on his knee.

He told of meeting the Warrington girl and informing her that he was compelled to leave Sacramento on business and that he intended going to Los Angeles.

"I told her, too," he said, "that I wanted to get away before there was a scandal and things got embarrassing for me. I thought it would be best for me to go away. She said she didn't want me to leave. I told her that I had my business and my future to think of and also my family.

Says Girl Wept.

"She cried a little bit and said that I must not go. I said to her that I thought we had better break off our relations. I left her that evening, and she went home. She thought I was going away for two weeks, and she was surprised the next day when she rang up and found that I was still in town. I told her that I had stayed to arrange things in my office."

Miss Warrington had testified last week that she did not tell Diggs she wanted him to stay in Sacramento.

Diggs said that a Sacramento theatrical man had warned him that his escapades had attracted the attention of juvenile court officers. He said the theatrical man warned him that if he continued his present habits he would be compelled to move his office from the building which the theatrical man controlled.

Questioned about an automobile ride on week before the trip to Reno, Diggs said: "Marsha and I were riding in the front seat of the machine and Caminetti was on the running board. We saw a machine behind us. It kept right on our trail and I discovered that it was following us purposely. After we got out of the city a ways I turned to one side of the road and put out the light. The car passed without its occupants seeing us. I said:

Wife Knew of Escapades.

"'They are after me. I'm going to get out of town for a few days. I've got my family to think of.'

"Marsha said: 'Well, I'm going, too. You are not going to leave me behind.'

"Caminetti asked what we were going to do about Lola, and Marsha said: 'She'll go, too, and if she doesn't want to go I'll make her.'"

During a conversation with his uncle, Diggs said he told his relative that he was going to "cut out all his foolishness" and get out of Sacramento for a few days until the trouble on account of his association with Marsha Warrington blew over. Lola Morris, he said, was present at this conversation and she agreed with him that he should leave. At the same time his uncle told him that Mrs. Diggs knew of his relations with Miss Warrington.

BAILIFF SHOT AS WRIT IS SERVED ON MERCHANT

Officer's Wounds Are Serious Following Attempt to Close Store in East Point.

Bailiff J. P. Gaddy is lying seriously wounded at his home in East Point Tuesday morning, with bullet wounds in his breast, shoulder and right arm, following a pistol battle with J. J. Willis, an East Point storekeeper, late Monday afternoon.

Willis fired six shots at Gaddy when the officer attempted to place him under arrest on a warrant charging contempt of court. A few minutes after the shooting Willis was arrested by Policeman Creel, of College Park, while trying to make his escape into the open country.

Gaddy was taken to his home at No. 4 Pine street, in East Point, and his wounds dressed by Dr. E. C. Suggs. Four of the shots fired by Willis took effect, the first entering the right breast and ranging downward under the left arm, the second shattered the bones of the right elbow, and the last two striking the officer in the shoulder. Dr. Suggs stated last night that Gaddy will live.

The warrant for Willis' arrest was issued because he had opened his store in violation of a writ of attachment served upon him several weeks ago, after George Harris, a cotton mill worker, had obtained a judgment for $1,000 against Willis for false imprisonment. Willis had previously had Harris arrested on a charge of obtaining goods under false pretenses, and had lost the case.

"When I went after Willis I was accompanied by my brother-in-law, John Wynn," said Sheriff Gaddy in telling of the shooting. "We found Willis sitting on the steps of his store. When he saw us he ran into the building. When I got inside he covered me with a gun. I told him not to shoot and started for him. He fired, the bullet striking me in the breast. I then drew my gun, but before I could shoot another bullet struck me in the elbow. I was helpless, and staggered out of the front door. As I did so Willis fired four times and two of the bullets struck me in the back."

Special Session Idea In Alabama Growing

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 19.—That Governor O'Neal may call a special session of the Legislature in order to straighten out the United States Senatorial muddle appears more likely to-day.

The anti-fee system advocates in Jefferson County, the largest county in the State, are working hard to have included in the call for the special session the anti-fee system bill. It is pointed out that the Sheriff of Jefferson County gets in fees almost as much per annum as did the President of the United States before the last increase in salary of the latter.

Aged Fat Man in Furs With Mercury at 100

BOSTON, Aug. 19.—While the street thermometers registered 100 here, a man aged and fat, wearing a heavy winter suit, a heavy ulster that reached the ground, heavy shoes and a fur cap, with the laps turned down over the ears, was seen wandering about the streets, seemingly cool.

3 Years in Prison For Selling Liquor

MERIDIAN, MISS., Aug. 19.—Probably the heaviest sentence ever imposed for the illegal sale of liquor in this State was given when Trayant Johnson, a cripple, to-day was given three years in the penitentiary.

The law makes the third sale of liquor a penitentiary offense.

FACTORY BOY SWEARS HE SAW FRANK ACCOST MARY PHAGAN

Dorsey Feared He'd 'Get in Bad' With Detectives, State Witness Says

Turner, a farmer, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. About March, of this year, where did you work?—A. At the pencil factory.

Q. Do you know this man? (pointing to Frank)—A. Yes.

Q. Did you know Mary Phagan?—A. When I saw her.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank talking to Mary Phagan?—A. Yes; on the second floor.

Q. What time was it and how long before the murder?—A. About the middle of March.

Q. Where was it?—A. In the back part of the building.

Q. What time of day was it?—A. Just before dinner.

Q. Who was in the room besides them?—A. No one else. Two girls came down after I did.

Q. What was said?—A. I heard her say she had to go to work.

Q. What did he say?—A. He said he was the superintendent of the factory—"

Rosser: "We object and we want to argue this without the jury."

The jury was sent out.

Dorsey—Let the witness tell what it is.

Turner—Mr. Frank told the girl he was superintendent of the factory and wanted to talk to her. She told him she had to go back to work. Mr. Frank then went off.

Mary Backed Away From Frank.

Q. How was she acting?—A. She backed off from him and he walked toward her.

Q. How far did she back?—A. Three or four feet. That was all I heard. Mr. Frank turned away.

Judge Roan—You can go into this to this extent. You can show whether he knew Mary Phagan.

Rosser—This other has nothing to do with it.

Hooper—If my brother will just keep still a little bit, we may be able to proceed further. This has another value. It shows familiarity or a desire for familiarity.

Rosser—If your honor is with us, I don't want to argue.

Judge Roan—The question is whether it can be shown just how this conversation took place.

Rosser—That is not the purpose of this evidence——

Hooper—Your honor——

Judge Roan—Sit down, Mr. Hooper. The question is whether this will show whether he knew her well enough to know her name.

Rosser—This evidence doesn't show that.

Dorsey—Your honor, this witness says this meeting occurred in the same place and near the same spot where we have contended the murder occurred. It is the basis for further evidence.

Arnold—That last statement let the cat out of the bag. They want to bring out another charge. This whole case has been beclouded with every charge that could be imagined. We have gotten away from the charge of murder and have been made to answer every conceivable charge.

Hooper—I object to that, first because it is not true and second because it is not the point at issue.

There was smothered applause.

"There is another disturbance of some sort," shouted Arnold.

Judge Roan rapped for order and directed that the jury be brought in. He addressed Solicitor Dorsey.

"You may put your question and let him tell what he knows," said Judge Roan.

Q. What did you see? Tell it in your own way, telling everything that you saw.—A. They were back in the rear of the building near the entrance. She was coming to her work just before dinner. Mr. Frank met her and said: 'I want to speak to you.' She said: 'I have got to go to work.' He said: "I am the superintendent of the pencil factory and I want to speak to you.' She backed off and he walked toward her.

Q. Is that all?—A. Yes.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. What time was it?—A. Just before dinner.

Q. How was it she was just going to work?—A. She was returning to her work at the machine. It was just before the whistle blew.

Q. Lemmie Quinn's office was there, wasn't it?—A. Yes.

Q. There were ten or twelve women there in the polishing department?—A. I don't know.

Q. Well, what about those two girls in there?—A. They came back and told me where to put the pencils.

Q. Do you know who they were?—A. No.

Motorman Hits Daisy Hopkins' Character.

Q. They came back at the time this thing was going on?—A. Yes.

Q. What kind of a looking girl was Mary Phagan?—A. She had light hair.

Q. What else?—A. I can't describe her.

Q. Do you really know her?—A. Yes.

Q. How?—A. Some boy who worked on the fourth floor pointed her out to me one morning when she came to work.

Q. Do you know any one else at the factory?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Walter T. Merck was called.

Dorsey questioned him.

Q. What is your business?—A. A street car motorman.

Q. Do you know Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever meet her on Saturday afternoons at the corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets?—A. Yes.

Q. What did she say?—A. I asked her where she was going and she said she was going to the pencil factory.

Q. Did you see her any more?—A. Yes. I made an engagement to go to her room.

Q. Did you see her?—A. Yes, about 8:30 o'clock in a room upstairs at the corner of Walker and Peters streets.

Q. Did she say where she had been?—A. To the National Pencil Factory.

Q. Do you know her character?—A. Yes.

Q. Is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Does the company know your character? It's a beauty according to your own admission, isn't it?

Dorsey interposed with an objection and was sustained.

Rosser: "Come down, come down, come down."

McKnight Woman's Lawyer Called.

The witness was excused, and George Gordon, who said he had practiced law for thirteen years, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Were you present at the police station when Minola McKnight was brought there?—A. Yes; or, rather, I was on the outside a part of the time. I went there in connection with getting a habeas corpus proceedings for her release. The detectives told me I could not go in just then. I decided to make a demand to see her, and it was granted. I went in and Stenographer Febuary read a statement to her from his notes, then went out to write it. Detectives Starnes, Campbell and Lanford, Chief Beavers and two men from Beck & Greggs' were there when the stenographer went out. I said that I didn't think that she ought to be held. They told me they could do nothing unless I got your (Dorsey's) permission. So I went to see you, and you told me that you could not let the woman go, because it would put you in bad with the detectives.

Q. Didn't I say that I had no right to hold her?—A. No; you said you would not release her without a habeas corpus.

Q. Why did you not wait until she signed that paper?—A. I went up to see you.

Q. Did you hear her say anything about the statement? Read over the notes and then answer the question.—A. That is the substance of the notes that Febuary read over to her.

Q. What did she say? Did she deny or admit them?—A. She said she believed that was about right.

Dorsey Feared He'd "Get in Bad."

Q. I told you I didn't have anything to do with locking her up, and that it would be meddling for me to order her release.—A. You said you would not interfere because you would get in bad with the detectives. That is what my recollection is, Mr. Dorsey.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. You knew that she had been to Mr. Dorsey's office and had been taken away screaming?—A. Yes; I heard that.

Q. That Mr. Dorsey, an officer of the peace, let the police take that woman away screaming?

Dorsey interrupted. "You say you know that?" he asked the witness.

Rosser: "Wait until I get through." Then he continued his question.

Q. Did you ever find out what charge they had against her?—A. I had a habeas corpus to get her release, but could not get to her.

Q. They just held her because she would not give a statement to the police that Mr. Dorsey wanted?

Dorsey interposed an objection.

Rosser—I submit to this jury that the evidence in this case proves it is true.

Dorsey—I submit it is not true, I don't care what you argue to this jury.

Rosser—And you didn't care what you did to that poor negro woman.

Dorsey—I didn't do anything to that negro woman.

Judge Sustains Dorsey's Objection.

Judge Roan sustained Dorsey's objection. Rosser asked Dorsey for the affidavit that Minola made in Dorsey's office. He asked the witness if he had ever seen it before, and the witness answered, "No."

Q. Who was guilty of false imprisonment—was it Starnes or Beavers?—A. Beavers said he knew about it, but that he could not let her out unless Dorsey ordered it.

Q. Did he have a warrant?—A. No.

Q. Then they let her out the next day?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see her?—A. I saw her that first evening. She was in a cell and crying hysterically. I asked Chief Beavers to let her out in the corridor and I guess he did.

Dorsey took the witness again.

Q. Didn't I tell you that I had absolutely no rights in the matter?—A. Something like that, but if you will pardon me, Hugh, I will tell you exactly what was done. I went to you when the police told me they could not let the woman go without an order from you. You told me you had not had the woman arrested and was not having her held.

Q. Now, didn't Febuary read over to you a portion of that affidavit?—A. Yes, he read something.

Q. Now, didn't he read a part of the statement, and she added to it the part about the money?—A. She said something about money.

Q. Now, what else did she say?—A. I don't recall.

Q. Didn't you question her yourself?—A. I asked one or two little questions.

Q. What about?—A. She said something about a bucket of water that was not very plain, and I questioned her about it.

Rosser took the witness again.

Q. You don't know what happened behind those doors?—A. No.

At this point court adjourned until 2 o'clock.

President of State Board of Health Testifies.

When the afternoon session started Solicitor Dorsey announced that on account of some of the State's witnesses being out of the city he would vary his program. He called Dr. S. E. Benedict, of Athens, president of the State Board of Health, and a member of the faculty of the University of Georgia for 32 years, to the stand.

On the first question asked him, Attorney Arnold made strenuous objection and precipitated a long argument. The question was:

"Were you present at the meeting of the State Board of Health when Dr. Westmoreland preferred charges against Dr. Harris?"

"Weo bject to going into that," said Mr. Arnold. "We would have to get the minutes of the board and all of that."

"I am not going into the matter further than to disprove Dr. Westmoreland's statement," said Mr. Dorsey, "that the State board found Dr. Harris guilty of scientific dishonesty."

"You can go into the question of the feeling of the witness," said Judge Roan.

"Suppose," said Rosser, sarcastically, "Mary had a little lamb, it's fleece was white as snow, would that have anything to do with this case?"

"I am not going into it further than to disprove Dr. Westmoreland's statement," insisted Dorsey.

"Well, I am going into it," said Arnold, "if you don't. I am going to ask him about a letter he wrote Dr. Westmoreland."

"Go ahead, Mr. Dorsey," said Judge Roan.

Q. Were you present when Dr. Westmoreland preferred charges against Dr. Harris?—A. Yes.

Q. Were those charges substantiated?

Arnold—Your honor, the minutes are the best evidence.

Dorsey—All right; take the minutes.

The minute book of the State Board of Health was handed the witness.

Q. Look at page 128 and tell me if that is a correct report of that meeting?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, doctor, I want to know whether those charges were found to be true.

Arnold—The minutes are the best evidence.

Judge Roan—Are those charges on the minutes?

A. I don't see them.

Q. Well, what was the vote?—A. I think it was unanimous.

Arnold—Doctor, where are the charges?—A. I suppose they are in the possession of the secretary, somewhere in his office.

Arnold—Dr. Harris, then, has the charges preferred against him? And while the defense is on the minutes, charges are not?—A. You misunderstood me. Neither the charges nor the defense are on the minutes. Only the action of the board.

Judge Roan—Didn't Dr. Westmoreland in his testimony say that he preferred charges of scientific dishonesty against Dr. Harris and because the board would not dismiss Dr. Harris that he resigned?

Rosser Says Record Speaks for Itself.

Arnold: "No; Dr. Westmoreland's version was that the board found him guilty but refused to dismiss him, and he (Dr. Westmoreland) resigned."

Dr. Benedict: "That is not true."

Rosser: "Never mind; the record speaks for itself."

Arnold and Rosser then examined the minutes.

Dorsey: "I will ask you iwf you are familiar with the business and professional life of Dr. Harris?"

"We object," said Rosser, and the objection was sustained.

"Dorsey: "Doctor, what is the condition of the board now?"

Rosser objected again, and was sustained.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. Doctor, I want to ask you about a letter you wrote Dr. Westmoreland.

Dorsey: "We object to that. It is irrelevant."

Arnold: "I haven't the letter here, but will have it long before the doctor's train leaves."

Judge Roan: "I will wait until I see the letter."

Dorsey offered part of the minutes of the State Board of Health as documentary evidence.

Arnold: "I don't think any of this should go in on the ground that it is irrevelant, immaterial and incompetent."

Judge Roan: "I will let it in for what it is worth."

The defense asked that their objection be recorded.

Dorsey: "I would like to kown if the letter of the fourth to the Governor on the subject was admissable."

Rosser: "It is as admissible as any of the other minutes, but we object to it all."

Judge Roan: "I will rule the letter out."

Recalls Examination Of Minola McKnight.

Roy Craven, salesman at the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company, was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Did you know Minola McKnight?—A. Yes.

Q. When idd you see her last?—A. At the police station.

Q. Are you connected with the police?—A. No.

Q. How did you come to be there?—A. Her husband worked at the same place I do and asked me if I would not go down to the police station and try to get her out.

Q. Were you there when this statement was signed?—A. Yes.

Q. Previous to that statement, did you see her at her home?—A. Yes.

Q. Who was with you?—A. Pickett and her husband.

Q. Why did you go there?

Rosser interposed an objection and was sustained.

Q. Did you go either at the request of the Police Department or myself?—A. No.

Q. Now, give me the best recollection of the time, if you can?

Rosser objected, but was overruled.

Q. Give me the day?—A. It was the middle part of May.

Q. Now, tell what this woman, Minola McKnight, said when she made that affidavit at the police station?—A. Well, she would not talke at first, but we told her what Albert had said.

Q. What was it that Albert had said?

The witness gave the substance of the Minola McKnight affidavit.

Q. Then what did Minola say?—A. She was somewhat reluctant to talk at first, but when we told her what Ibert had said she gave us the affidavit without stopping.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Didn't you know that she was in jail because she would not give the sort of a statement they wanted?—A. I did not.

Rosser Objects to Servant's Affidavit.

Q. Why did you think they had her in jail?

Dorsey: "We object to what he thinks. Stick to the statements."

Q. Did you go to Mr. Darsey's office before you heard Minola make her statemtns?—A. Yes.

Q. Why did you go there?—A. To try to get her out.

Q. It wasn't any trouble to get her out after she made a good statement, was it?—A. I wasn't thre when she got out.

Q. Why didn't you stay there?—A. I didn't want to.

Q. You got a statement agreeing with what her husband had told you, then you left her in jail?—A. I went on out and left her with her husband.

Q. Didn't you try to get Mr. Dorsey to get her out?—A. I went to see what I could do.

Q. What did he say?—A. He said he would dow hat he could. He said for me to ga to see Mr. Starnes or Mr. Campbell.

Q. Did you go?—A. Yes.

Q. How long did you stay?—A. Abotu three hours.

Q. Did you ask them to let her out? A. No.

Q. You don't konw what happend before you got there, do you?—A. No, I am not a mind reader.

Dorsey: "Now I want to tender this affidavit of Minola McKnight as evidence."

Rosser: "All in the world that affidavit san show is the treatment that poor woman received at the hands of the police. It is inadmissable."

Crowd Roars When Sheriff Sits on Floor.

Dorsey: "Every word of it is admissable, because it is a flat and positive repudiation of Minola's sworn statements on the stand."

Judge Roan: "Let me read it. I will rule on it later."

The witness was excused, and E. H. Pickett, also an employee of Beck & Greggs Hardware Company, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him. He was given the Minola McKnight affidavit to read. Sheriff Mangum, in an attempt to stop talking in the courtroom, met with a little accident that sent a ripple of merriment throughout the room. While Pickett was reading the affidavit, the Sheriff arose from his seat beside the witness stand.

"You people over to the right are talking too much, and if you don't stop I will have to put you out," he said. When he turned to resume his seat he missed the chair and sat down upon the floor with a sad expression on his face. The crowd in the courtroom fairly roared.

Pickett read the affidavit, then Dorsey questioned him.

Q. You were present when that paper was signed, were you not?—A. Yes; that is, immediately before Minola signed it.

Q. Who else was there?—A. Minola's lawyer, Roy Craven, one or two detectives and myself.

Q. What statement was made before she signed it?—A. Albert McKnight said she had made certain statements. She then admitted it a little bit at a time.

Q. What did she say first?—A. That she had been cautioned not to talk.

Q. Then what?—A. She admitted she got a little more money.

Q. Did she say everything shown in this affidavit?—A. Not the first part. She didn't make those statements in my presence.

Didn't Appear Willing To Talk Then.

Q. Was she willing to talk?—A. No. She said she would talk to me, but she would not talk to the detectives. Before the detectives left she said her husband was a liar.

Q. Did the detectives leave?—A. Yes.

Q. Then you questioned her?—A. Yes; but we, Craven and myself, could not write shorthand, and sent for the stenographer.

Q. Who was there when she made the statement about Mrs. Frank making certain remarks to her mother?—A. Starnes, Campbell, her lawyer, the stenographer, Lanford, Craven and myself.

Q. Well, tell the jury what she said.

Rosser: "The affidavit is the best evidence."

Dorsey: "But you are objecting to the affidavit."

Judge Roan: "I am going to let in that affidavit with the exception of the part that could not be put in regularly. For instance, that part where she quotes the conversation she overheard."

Dorsey: "May I or not, without considering the affidavid, ask him all relevant point of Minola McKnight's statement?"

Judge Roan: "You can take the affidavit and ask him about all relevant points."

Dorsey: Mr. Pickeht, what did the woman say about Frank eating dinner?—A. First she said he ate dinner. Finally she haid he did not.

Q. What did she say first about her husband, Albert, being there?—A. At first she said he was not there, finally she said he was.

Q. What did she say about the Sellgs and Frank discussin the ragedy Sunday?—A. At first she said she did not hear anything. At last she said she did hear something.

Q. What did she say about being told to keep her mouth shut?—

Rosser: "Unless he wants to show that Frank told her that, it is irrelevant."

Counsel in Another Wrangle.

Dorsey: "It is relevant to impeach the negro."

Roan: "It is relevant, I think."

Rosser: "You could not impeach Mr. Selig on such a statement. Certainly it is inadmissable to impeach Minola McKnight."

Rosser dictated his objections to the court stenographer.

Dorsey: "Answer the question, Mr. Pickett."

A. At first she denied it, then she said Mrs. Selig told her to keep quiet.

Rosser continued to object.

Hooper: "This witness can be put on the stand and impeach half a dozen witnesses."

Roan: "You understand it must be relevant to some issue in this case."

Hooper continued to argue that the question should be admitted.

"Judge Roan: "If you insist, I will let it in."

Q. What did Minola say with reference to what was said to her about talking?—A. She said she was cautioned not to talk.

Q. What did she say at last about receiving a higher or lower wage?—A. She said her wages were increased after the crime.

Q. What did she say first about that hat?—A. She only made one reference to it.

Q. Did anybody suggest anything about the hat, before anyone asked her about it?—A. Yes.

Q. Now who was in there before you went to the door and called the detectives?—A. Alfred McKnight, Craven and myself.

Offered to Free Her If She Made Statement.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Now why didn't you believe her first statement?—A. Because we thought different.

Q. You kept her there two or three hours, didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you give her the third degree?—A. We didn't call it that.

Q. Did you see Dorsey?—A. Yes; we saw hom before we went to the police station, and he told us he would arrange for us to see her, and that we might arrange to get her out.

Q. Did you tell Minola that you had come down to get her out?—A. We did tell her we wanted to get her out if we got a statement.

Q. Well, why didn't you get her out?—A. She left the station house before we did.

Q. After she gave that statement they let her out?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know she left there before you did?—A. No, but the detectives said she had.

Q. You didn't know she had been there twelve hours when you got there?—A. Yes.

Q. You knew she was there because she would not give the statement the detectives wanted, didn't you?—A. No.

Q. You went there to make her give the statement the detectives wanted?—A. Not that. I thought it was my duty as a good citizen to aid in getting at the truth.

Rosser (very angrily and with contempt in his voice)—Let him come down; let him come down.

Negro McKnight Called to Stand.

The witness was excused, and Albert McKnight, husband of Minola McKnight, was called to the stand. Hooper questioned him, and had the negro step down from the witness chair and stand before the jury while he displayed a blueprint of the Selig home and a diagram of the dining room and the sideboard mirror, through which Albert said he observed Frank during lunch at the Selig home on Saturday, April 26.

Q. Where were you sitting in the kitchen on that day?

Rosser—I object; you went over all this on the direct examination.

Hooper—We had no diagram then; that was brought in by the defense.

Judge Roan—The witness may explain the diagram.

Hooper—I want ta show by this witness that the sideboard has been moved so as to change the angle of vision.

Q. How is the location of the sideboard to what it was when you saw it?—A. It has been pushed around.

The witness pointed out the change to the jury on the diagram.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. How do you know this has been changed? Were you there when it was changed?—A. No, sir; but I can tell by looking at the diagram.

Girl Called to Stand by Dorsey.

Miss Nellie Wood, a former employee of the National Pencil Factory, was called to the stand by Solicitor Dorsey. Attorney Rosser, anticipating the character of her testimony, announced that he would like a definite ruling at once regarding the introduction of certain character evidence. The jury retired.

Frank's wife and mother left the courtroom by request. Dorsey addressed the court. "We want to show by this witness actual specific misconduct on the part of this defendant. We want to show that Frank made an indecent proposal to this lady. It shows his conduct and his character; and I submit that it is material."

Rosser: "Your honor, they have no right in the world to put that testimony in. We have never put any evidence in that would allow the introduction of this testimony in rebuttal. We insist that you rule definitely. All the evidence we have put in to show Frank's conduct was in rebuttal to the statements of Conley."

Judge Roan: "Mr. Dorsey, tell me how you can get around the statutes, that you can not ask specific instances on one's character except on cross-examination."

Dorsey: "What about the questions of Mr. Arnold to the women who worked on the fourth floor of the National Pencil Factory?"

Judge Roan: "To my mind it is not debaatble."

Dorsey: "Then we are shut out."

"Judge Roan: "The law shuts you out. On the principle you advance you could put a man on trial at this time for everything he ever did in his life."

Dorsey: "I don't want to send the jury out any more. I have witnesses to prove other things. Can I prove

Boils Are a Bad Indication

With S. S. S. You Can Tell Poisoned Blood to Be Gone.

The appearance of boils leads many people to consider them a sign of robust constitution. They are more apt to signify a condition of sick blood.

It sounds queer to take a blood bath, but that is precisely the effect when you use that remarkable remedy, S. S. S. It has the peculiar action of soaking through the intestines directly into the blood. In a few minutes its influence is at work in every artery, vein and tiny capillary. Every membrane, every organ of the body, every emunctory becomes in effect a filter to strain the blood of impurities.

And best of all, this remarkable remedy is welcome to the weakest stomach.

You can get S. S. S. at any drug store. It is a standard remedy recognized everywhere as the greatest blood antidote ever discovered. Beware of any effort to sell you something claimed to be "just as good." If yours is a peculiar case and you desire expert advice, write to The Swift Specific Co., 185 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

PATHFINDER GIVEN BIG WELCOMES ALL ALONG ROUTE TO BIRMINGHAM

By HUGH GRANT.
(Sunday American Representative With Pathfinder.)

TALLAPOOSA, Aug. 19.—E. L. Ferguson, official "pathfinder" for the All-Southern Transcontinental Highway, and party ended a triumphant tour through Georgia here Monday night. The party, consisting of Mr. Ferguson, Mrs. Ferguson and the Ferguson children, arrived on schedule time at 5:45 o'clock. The tourists left early Tuesday morning for Anniston. They will be joined en route by President John Craft, of the Alabama Good Roads Association, and State Highway Engineer Keller, who will accompany them through Alabama.

That Tallapoosa is keenly awake to the importance of the monster project to blaze a trail from Atlanta to San Francisco was clearly indicated Monday night when a score of Tallapoosans, including Mayor C. E. Pearce, L. E. Chandler, editor of The Tallapoosa Journal, and other prominent citizens, held a conference with Mr. Ferguson at the Tallapoosa Hotel in regard to the formulation of plans for the development of better roads in this vicinity.

The Tallapoosa good roads boosters were very enthusiastic over the campaign inaugurated by The Sunday American, and pledged their hearty support.

All Towns Give Welcome.

Tallapoosa's warm reception, however, was only one of many between here and Atlanta. All along the 63-mile route the good roads boosters turned out to give the transcontinentalists a rousing send-off.

At Austell Mayor L. C. Upshaw and Editor Dake, of The Douglasville New Era, heading a delegation of Douglasville boosters, met the tourists and escorted them to Douglasville. Here good roads and highways were talked of, and a typical old-time Georgia dinner was served at the Douglasville Hotel, with Mayor Upshaw and Mr. Dake acting as hosts.

Other Douglasville citizens who acted as official escorts were R. E. Edwards, J. F. Long, superintendent of the cotton mill; J. M. Banks, and Douglas County Commissioners J. T. Lee and A. S. Gresham.

According to Mr. Gresham, the Douglas County authorities are preparing now to spend several thousand dollars on the development of the old Tallapoosa road. The largest work will be the construction of a new steel bridge over Sweetwater Creek costing approximately $2,000.

The improvement in Douglas County of the Tallapoosa highway which was traversed by the Ferguson party and which has been selected as the official route will make this one of the best roads in the entire State.

Pathfinder Ferguson declared Monday night that the road between Austell and Douglasville was excellent, and that he remaining sections were good and could be put in fine shape by the expenditure of moderate sums in each county.

Leaving Douglasville Monday afternoon, Mr. Ferguson and party made a bee line for Villa Rica, arriving there on schedule at 3:40. Temple, Ga., was reached shortly after 4 o'clock, Bremen at 5, Waco at 5:15 and Tallapoosa at 5:45. Members of the party reported a most delightful trip, with not a single mishap to mar the journey.

A wire from Heflin, Ala., Tuesday morning told of elaborate preparations there for the reception of Mr. Ferguson and party. From Heflin the tourists will proceed to Anniston, Ala., where a monster good roads celebration will be held a a greeting ebration will be held as a greeting guson expects to reach Birmingham Thursday at noon.

St. Clair Boosters Guide Pathfinders.

ANNISTON, Aug. 19.—A party from St. Clair County, including John W. Inzer, probate judge; J. L. Herring, Dr. W. B. Johnson and Uranus Pickette, all of Asheville, arrived here to-day to join the Ferguson transcontinental pathfinding party. They will pilot the scouts to St. Clair, whence they go to Birmingham.

Duchess Who Rules Luxembourg to Wed

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LUXEMBOURG, Aug. 19.—Te betrothal of Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide, aged 19, ruler of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, to Prince Henry of Bavaria, was announced today.

Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide ascended the throne on her eighteenth birthday, from which time German and French plots have been directed at her, for both big neighbors have long looked at the little Grand Duchess with covetous eyes.

The Grand Duchess is one of the most beautiful girls in Europe.

Prelate Against Sex Equality Idea

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 19.—"I do not believe the Creator intended the position of woman in the world should be the same as that of man," Archbishop Sebastian G. Messmer, of the Milwaukee diocese, told the Catholic Press Association, in speaking against woman suffrage.

"However," he added, "I would not dare to come out with a positive statement that agitation for woman suffrage is against the rules of the church. The church has not taken any definite stand, and until it does, each individual has a right to think, talk and act as he sees fit."

He Feared His 'Girl' More Than Gallows

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Robert Cade, 18, who surrendered to the police because he feared the scorn of his sweetheart more than he did the possibility of the gallows, was released to-day. He was suspected of the murder of Bennie Holstein, 13. Circumstances pointed strongly to his guilt. He was being sought over the country.

"My girl would have nothing to do with me when she learned that I was under suspicion," he told the police "I would gladly risk my neck to keep her respect"

Auto Searchlights Hit X-Ray Gowns

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—If an automobilist in sportive mood feels inclined to shoot his searchlights through the X-ray skirts worn by passing women, he may do so with impunity anywhere in Judge Breen's Yorkville district. "It is the skirts, and not the lights," declares the Judge, "that need reforming."

Breen discharged John Carey, a merchant, charged with causing embarrassment with his auto lights to women attired in the fashionable "X-rays."

Envoy Page Called An Enemy to Labor

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Walter H. Page, Ambassador to Great Britain was denounced as unfit to represent the United States in England at a meeting of the Central Federated Union, because of his alleged enmity to trades unions and as a result of the strike in the plant of the Doubleday, Page Publishinging Company.

The pressmen, feeders, printers, photo-engravers and foundry workers are now on strike.

"The wages paid are far below the prevailing rate," said Secretary Shahams, "and everything is done to thwart organized labor."

Blind Tiger Taken From Water Wagon

TIFTON, Aug. 19.—When the man on the water wagon sells liquor, the town that owns the water wagon is up against it to keep in line with prohibition.

Henry Wade, negro driver of the city sprinkling cart, has been arrested by Chief of Police Thrasher for using the city sprinkling cart as a blind tiger.

JUDGE GODBEE'S SLAYER PLANS COURT FIGHT

Attorneys for Woman Make Statement—Slain Man Buried at Waynesboro, Ga.

MILLEN, Aug. 19.—Mrs. Edna Godbee, divorced wife of Judge W. S. Godbee, who shot and killed her former husband and seriously wounded his second wife, has employed Attorneys G. C. Dekle and J. A. Dixon to defend her. The following statement has been issued by them:

"We have no apprehension as to the outcome of this case. We do not propose to try it on the streets or in the newspapers, but in the courtroom. There we expect the truth as regards this case to convince the jury and the country at large of the innocence of Mrs. Godbee. There has been already an effort on the part of some people to distort the facts in this case, and we ask in simple justice that the public withhold their judgment until they shall have taken a calm and dispassionate survey of the evidence in the case, after which we do not fear their verdict."

Mrs. Godbee, who was so seriously wounded by the divorced wife, is in a serious condition, physicians not giving much hope of her recovery.

Mrs. Edna Godbee is in the Jenkins County jail awaiting the preliminary trial, which will be held as soon as the condition of the wounded woman is such as to insure recovery, or until death has claimed the victim.

Judge Godbee Is Buried at Waynesboro.

WAYNESBORO, Aug. 19.—Funeral services over the remains of Judge Walter S. Godbee, who was shot to death by his divorced wife in Millen yesterday morning, were held here today at 11 o'clock, with Masonic ceremonies.

Quite a number of the lodge members accompanied the body to Waynesboro, where they were met by the Waynesboro Masons, and both lodges escorted the remains to the last resting place.

Mr. Godbee was a native of Burke County and was 56 years old. He was one of the best known and honored citizens of Jenkins County, which he so materially assisted in forming.

The funeral was largely attended by friends in Waynesboro and his children, besides many relatives from this and Jenkins County. It was his request that he be buried in Waynesboro.

'I'm a Blacksmith,' Says Harding Davis

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—A young newspaper reporter, paper and pencil in hand, darted briskly among the crowd at Healy's Restaurant during the process of ejecting the diners. He saw a man continually in the shadow of District Attorney Whitman.

"Will you give me your name, please?" asked the young news gatherer.

"Davis!" replied the other.

"May I have your first name?" questioned the youth.

"Richard Harding—Richard Harding Davis."

"What is your occupation?"

"Oh, I'm a blacksmith."

Two Killed at Camp Meeting Dice Games

LEXINGTON, Aug. 19.—Two men were killed and several badly wounded in a general fight during crap games at Wichita camp meeting in Mason County, Kentucky. Benjamin Timberlake and Henry Queen are dead.

KELLY IS PUT ON ALDERMANIC BODY

Second Ward Water Commissioner Gets McClelland's Place. Pure Vaudeville Law Pends.

C. H. Kelly, water commissioner from the Second Ward, has been chosen to fill the vacancy on the Aldermanic Board from the Second Ward, occasioned by the resignation of Alderman J. E. McClelland. The selection was made by the City Council Monday afternoon.

Mr. Kelly served as Alderman from the Second Ward prior to the election of Mr. McClelland, and when Commissioner George Walker moved out of the ward and left a vacancy on the Water Board, Mr. Kelly was elected to fill his place. The vacancy on the board caused by the resignation of Mr. Kelly will be filled at the next meeting.

No action was taken on the "pure vaudeville" ordinance. It was introduced too late for consideration. The amendment tacked on the ordinance by the Ordinance Committee, according to Acting Chairman Wood prohibits any person appearing on the stage in an "indecent or immodest costume." The original ordinance prohibited tights and short skirts.

Dr. W. D. Vinson, of the Fifth Ward, was chosen to succeed Dr. R. N. Weaver as a Grady Hospital trustee.

The report of the Street Committee adverse to changing the name of Murphy avenue was adopted. The report favoring the change in name of McDaniel Street to Oxford terrace was referred back.

Councilman Ashley's resolution providing for an appropriation of $600 to employ an engineering expert to represent the city when the evaporation test is made at the crematory, was adopted.

He may take a trip West to shoot big game.

Lunatic Says He Is Pat Crowe, Kidnaper

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—A man who says he is Pat Crowe, kidnaper of Eddie Cudahy, Jr., son of the wealthy Omaha packer, is held in the Washington Insane Asylum for observation.

The patient told the police and physicians that he had come to Washington to forward his claim on a patent for an invention preventing the spreading of rails.

He said Secretary of State Bryan was his personal friend, and that through the Secretary he hoped to secure his papers from the patent office.

Surgeon General Studies Pellagra

SAVANNAH, Aug. 19.—Dr. Robert Blue, Surgeon General of the Public Health Service of the United States, is in Savannah to inspect pellagra cases in the Marine Hospital and the Quarantine Station at the mouth of the Savannah River. The visit is a part of the tour of inspection throughout the South.

Dr. Blue is especially interested in hook worm and pellagra conditions in the South, and will stop on his way back to Washington at the hookworm camp of the Rockefeller Commission at Wilmington, N. C.

Fresh Appeal for Exhibit To Be Made

Three hundred Atlanta manufacturers will gather at Hotel Ansley for a luncheon at 1 o'clock Tuesday. They will discuss the manufacturers' exposition which the Chamber of Commerce has been endeavoring to establish in its building.

While many manufacturers have signed for space in the exhibit, there still is a large amount which has not been taken. Unless this is arranged for immediately, the proposition is likely to fall through.

Enthusiasm has been displayed, however, and around the Chamber of Commerce the belief is that the exposition is assured.

3 WOUNDED WHEN MOB STORMS JAIL

Spartanburg Sheriff and Deputy Rout Would-Be Lynchers of Negro Assailant.

SPARTANBURG, Aug. 19.—Sheriff White and one deputy fought off a mob of several hundred who attempted to enter Spartanburg County jail and lynch a negro. Frank Eppley, J. C. Owensby and John Turner were wounded by the Sheriff and his deputy before tney drove the mob from the jail.

The mob attempted to blow up the jail with dynamite, but failing, tried to batter down the doors. It was then the three men were wounded and the mob was forced to recognize the courage and determination of Sheriff White and his deputy.

Threats were made by the mob that they would secure nitroglycerin and destroy the entire building, but they did not return.

The negro had attacked a young white woman earlier in the day. He was later captured and landed in jail. The mob formed after nightfall and attacked the jail.

WITNESSES GIVE DALTON GOOD REPUTATION

that a girl saw Frank with another woman in the dark?"

Judge Roan: "No."

Dorsey: "Can I show his conduct—slapping girls as he passed through the factory?"

Judge Roan—You can show a bad character by this woman or any other; but you can't show a specific act.

The jury was recalled.

Dorsey Says Witness Mislead Him.

Dorsey questioned the witness.

Q. Do you know the character of Leo M. Frank?—A. No, I only knew him two days.

Q. I mean what people said about him; say yes or no.

Rosser—She has answered the question; that should end it.

Judge Roan—Do you know his character; answer yes or no—A. No.

Dorsey addresed the court.

"Your honor, I have been mislead by this witness."

Rosser—I don't care anything about that.

Judge Roan—She hasn't said anything to hurt you, and you can not proceed as though you were entrapped.

Dorsey—Miss Wood, do you remember a conversation with me—(Rosser interrupted.)

Rosser—Now that is absolutely inadmissable.

Judge Roan—I sutain you.

Dorsey—Come down.

J. H. Kendircks, a street car motorman, followed Miss Wood on the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Were you running a street car on April 26?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know a man named Matthews?—A. No.

Q. What route were you on April 26?—A. Marietta street to the stock yards.

Q. Is that a portion of the English avenue and Cooper street line?—A. Yes.

Declares Cars Run Ahead of Time Often.

Q. What time did you get to town that day about noon?—A. I can not remember exactly, but I never get there any later than 12:06.

Q. Did the English avenue car with Matthews and Hollis running it ever get to that corner ahead of time?—A. It certainly did.

Q. Do you know what time they got relieved for dinner at Marietta and Broad streets?—A. At 12:07.

Q. About April 26, and prior to that time, did Matthews and Hollis ever get to that corner ahead of time, and if so how much?—A. Two to three minutes.

Q. When Hollis would be at the corner of Broad and Marietta, and your car was on time, what would Hollis do about going to dinner?—A. He would go on my car.

The witness was excused and J. C. McEwen, another motorman was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Did you run on the Cooper street line prior to April 26?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall what time the Cooper street car would arrive at Broad and Marietta streets with reference to your car?—A. My car got there at 12:10.

Q. What time would the car Matthews and Hollis were on get there, if the car was on time?—A. 12:07.

Q. What time does the White City car get there?—A. At 12:05.

Q. Did the English avenue or Cooper ever cut off the White City care and come in ahead of it?—A. Very often.

Q. Do you know the car that Matthews and Hollis run?—A. I know their schedule.

Q. Has their car ever cut off the White City car?—A. Their schedule has. I don't know who was on it.

Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company
ATLANTA NEW YORK PARIS

A Great Waist Sale Starts Here At 8:30 in the Morning

A doubly fine Waist Sale because it is made up of waists from our own stocks and others that our buyer just captured in New York—in one instance we are clearing out stock in true Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. fashion, in the other we are passing on a fortunate purchase, this, also, in true Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose fashion.

Many kinds of waists are included, batistes, voiles, crepes, linens, crepe de chines and wash silks, and in every instance the savings are more than half.

We doubt if the woman who "never has enough waists" ever had a better opportunity to supply herself—and the waists will be those she will choose for their charm and chic and—savings.

But here—

49c
For $1.00 and $1.50 Waists

White linen waists in plain tailored styles, tucked and plaited; also lingerie waists trimmed with neatly patterned embroideries and with laces—in the regular way $1.00 and $1.50 never bought prettier—low neck, short sleeves, high neck, long sleeves.

79c
For $1.50 and $2.45 Waists

Some of these are just out of their boxes and the laces, the embroideries, batistes, voiles and styles are as fresh as can be, others are those $1.50 and $2.45 values from our own stocks that are a hit mussed. All white, low neck, short sleeves. high neck, long sleeves.

For $2.50 to $4.00 Waists

One particularly attractive and new style is of white voile with a low round collar edged with net frilling, short sleeves, embroidered front, others of batiste and voiles with crochet buttons, a few show Dresden colorings — one hundred to choose from.

For $4.00 and $4.50 Waists

One hundred in all, made in many pretty ways. Voiles, batistes and French crepes, with low flat collars and lace collars, linen laces trim a number of these and crystal buttons and embroidery that looks much like hand work.

For $5.00 to $8.75 Waists

Fine choice here—sixty-five waists of white and striped crepe de chine, of China silk and wash silks, Irish lace collars are prominent, and little vest effects worked out in sheer laces and heavy plaited double ruffles. They will go quickly.

$1.19
For $1.50 to $3.75 House Dresses

Eighty-six house dresses to add zest to the selling. They are lawns, daintily striped and flowered and figured and fashioned, light colors, low collars trimmed with Swiss embroideries and folds, plain skirts with panels in front and back.

SUFFRAGE CRAZE WILL RUIN U. S., SAYS TILLMAN

South Carolina Senator Also Deplores "Swapping of Wives Among the Rich Class."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—"I, looking at the growing craze for women suffrage and the rapid increase in the number of divorces granted in this country, sadly think, if I do not say, 'America, thy race is almost run unless something is done to check thy headlong speed,'" declared Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, in the Senate to-day, while discussing the woman's suffrage question.

Senator Tillman declared he is strongly opposed to granting the ballot to women.

"The customs of our people inherited from our forefathers," said the Senator, "make it dangerous to 'monkey' with womankind. If the California men had our customs, Diggs and Caminetti would not be allowed to go to trial now because they would have been shot like dogs.

"Among our very rich people in America the geenration has gone so far that swapping wives is a common practice. The women are just as bad as the men."

SLATON APPROVES 3 ATLANTA BILLS

With more than 200 bills on Governor Slaton's desk which had to be signed immediately, the doors of the executive offices were closed to visitors Tuesday while the Governor delved into the mass of work in an effort to get the bills signed and out of the way before the next batch came from the engrossing clerks of the House and Senate.

The Governor expects to sign all the bills that reach him Tuesday before the day is over, in order to forestall any discussion as to whether Sunday shall be counted as one of the five days in which he is allowed to sign bills passed by the Legislature.

Up to Tuesday morning Governor Slaton had signed only one of the three local bills affecting Atlanta. This was the measure creating a new judge for the Atlanta Circuit, which he approved Monday afternoon. The other two, the bill creating a new charter for the city and the bill creating municipal courts, probably will be signed Tuesday.

It is understood the Governor will defer appointing the new Atlanta judge until he returns from the conference of Governors at Colorado Springs, Colo., next week. Governor Slaton will leave Saturday, to be gone about ten days.

THAW FAMILY IS READY TO FIGHT EXTRADITION

Escaped Slayer, Arrested in Canadian Village, Defies Captors. Admits Identity Readily.

seen on the train had alighted and hired a man named Brooks to take them for a drive.

Kelsey got the direction and, by asking along the road, traced the carriage driven by Brooks across the line into the Canadian woods. The three men had evidently persuaded Brooks to drive them by a wood road, and Kelsey traced them easily. They overtook Brooks, but his carriage was empty.

"I would not drive them any farther," said Brooks. "I have got to get back to the falls. They offered me $20 to go on, but I couldn't do it."

"Where did they go?" Kelsey asked.

"They got a farmer to drive them to Coaticook," Brooks replied.

Thaw Admits Identity.

Kelsey and his two companions put on speed, and on the edge of Coaticook they saw the team ahead with three men and the driver in it.

Kelsey stopped at a house and telephoned to the Coaticook police, then went ahead in his automobile and followed the vehicle. A policeman stopped the carriage. "Which of you is Harry K. Thaw?" he demanded.

The three men each made denials, and said the police had made a mistake. Then Kelsey came up, and when the man who had previously admitted he was Thaw saw Kelsey, he refused to talk.

Later Kelsey, who went to the police station with the officers and the man he had identified as Thaw, telephoned to his family in Colebrook that Thaw had again admitted his identity to the Coaticook police.

Deputy Sheriff Kelsey then telephoned to New York and told them he had a man thought to be Thaw under arrest.

"Hold him," said the New York authorities, and the Coaticook authorities at once entered a charge of being a fugitive from justice against Thaw and released the other two.

Preparations were made for taking the man held to Sherbrooke this afternoon. The object of the party in leaving the train at Beecher Falls is believed to have been a desire to avoid the immigration and customs officers who board the train at the border and scrutinize each passenger.

Wife Still in Fear Of Thaw, She Says.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Former Assemblyman Richard J. Butler, a West Side politician and former henchman of Chief of Police "Big Bill" Devery, who was reported to have been implicated in the plot by which Thaw escaped, denied today that he had been mixed up in the escape of the Pittsburger.

"I know nothing about this, and I certainly had no part in it," declared Butler. "It is certain, though, that if any man was about to be mixed up in an affair of this kind he would not use his own name. I believe that some gangster who was paid to help Thaw out used my name. In fact, I believe that I know the man."

Butler admitted that he had been away from home for several days, but denied that he had been in Matteawan.

One of the men for whom a warrant was issued in Dutchess County yesterday used the name of Richard J. Butler, of New York, while waiting at the Holland Hotel in Beacon for the Thaw getaway to come off.

Sheriff Hornbeck and District Attorney Conger, of Dutchess County, armed with warrants for the arrest of Thaw, Thomas Flood, Roger Thompson, Michael O'Keefe, Eugene Duffy and Butler, came to this city to-day.

Family to Fight Extradition.

Evelyn Thaw, the estranged wife of the slayer, cowers in this city, afraid of her life. She declared that she would keep a bodyguard about her until Thaw's actual whereabouts became known.

It is evident that Thaw and his family will make a determined fight against extradition to this State if an attempt is made to bring him back. Thaw's defense, in all probability, will be that his escape was providential.

Detectives in the employ of Acting Governor Martin H. Glynn, who is taking unusual interest in the case, reported the discovery of two of the alleged conspirators and said that arrests were imminent. It was reported Mr. Glynn would convene the Dutchess County Grand Jury in extraordinary session to probe the escape of Thaw. Burns detectives have been brought into the case and are helping in the search for Thaw.

Accompanied by Miss Mary Copely, her sister and traveling companion, Mrs. William Thaw left to-day for Cresson, Pa.

Mrs. Thaw refused to discuss the escape of her son further than to say:

"I have positively not heard from Harry since my letter yesterday, but hope he is safe and well."

LIND AND HUERTA REACH PEACE AGREEMENT

Report of War Move Against the United States Is Denied by Charge O'Shaughnessy.

SHERBROOK, Que., Aug. 19.—Harry K. Thaw, wha escaped from Matteawan assylum Sunday and was arrested in Coaticook to-day, was transferred to the Sherbrooke jail this afternoon.

Thaw has retained W. L. Shurtleff, one of the best known lawyers in Eastern Canada and one of the most sensational international legal fights in Canadian history is expected.

The United States Government will be represented by Hester Verret, K. C.

Thaw may be deported as a maniac upon request of the New York authorities, according to the opinions of Canadian official.

No sooner was Thaw brought here than he began to realize the seriousness of his predicament, and he began to bombard various sections of the United State with messages. He notified his family at Cresson, Pa., of his arrest and received word that representatives of the family were starting at once for Sherbrooke. It is understood that Mrs. Mary Thaw, the aged mother of the fugutive, will come here.

Thaw will not discuss his movements since he got away from the New York institution Sunday morning, except to say that he boarded a train east of Boston. He said he was making for the coast and planned to sail for Europe.

Thaw was accompanied here by two men, one heavily built and the other slight and both smooth shaven.

Recognized on Train.

Deputy Sheriff Burleigh Kelsey, of Colebrook, recognized Thaw on a train bound for Canada. Kelsey got off at Colebrook, got an automobile and after a chase of almost 20 miles overtook Thaw with two companions in Coaticook. They had left the train at Beecher Falls and driven across the border into Canada.

Kelsey notified the Coaticook police and kept on their trail. Thaw, when arrested, made no resistance and to-day will be lodged in the jail at Sherbrooke, Quebec.

Kelsey was on his way home to Colebrook after a trip South and was reading a paper when a stranger came from a few seats down the aisle in the smoking car and asked for a match. The Deputy Sheriff was reading the story of Thaw's escaping in the paper and a picture of Thaw stared up from the paper. He looked at the stranger and saw that the likeness at once resembled the stranger.

The stranger at once noticed the stare and said: "What's the matter? Do you think you know who I am?"

"I could make a pretty good guess," said Kelsey.

"Well, who am I then?" the stranger demanded.

"I think you are Harry K. Thaw."

Kelsey said the stranger laughed uneasily and then said blandly, "Well, you are right. I am Thaw. But you don't want me. You couldn't do anything to me if you wanted to. They have acquitted me of murder and you can't extradite me."

"Where are you bound for?" Kelsey asked.

"Canada," the man answered.

Pursues Him in Auto.

Kelsey picked up his paper again and the man who had declared he was Thaw went back to his seat with the match he had come to get. Deputy Sheriff Kelsey got off the train here. Then he found L. W. Barbour and Warner Drew and they decided to chase the party.

They got an automobile and made a quick run to Beecher Falls, the next station, just south of the Canadian line. There Kelsey made inquiries and found that three men answering the description of the three he had It is thought that the Mexican newspapers were instructed to print only this story and that they will not carry the denial of this ultimatum issued by Senor Gamboa early to-day.

In this way, it is believed, the Huerta government will be enabled to "save its face" before the Mexican people without at the same time bringing on war with the United States.

Lind and Huerta Patch Up a Truce.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 19.—After the Mexican Government had served a note upon the United States rejecting President Wilson's Mexican proposals and demanding recognition—an action which might have resulted in war—John Lind, special envoy from President Wilson, and President Huerta got together in the National Palace early to-day and patched up a truce.

Issue Warrants For Japanese and Wife

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The Bureau of Immigration has issued warrants for the arrest of Hidekunt Iwata, a wealthy Japanese, and his wife, Norae Iwata, on charges of harboring women for immoral purposes in Fresno, Cal.

Iwata and his wife, immigration officers declare, were proprietors of property which housed 27 women arrested in a recent raid by the Fresno police.

Birmingham to Need Wire Workers Soon

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 19.—By December it is figured there will be need for no less than 1,500 men who are skilled in steel wire and cast iron pipe-making in Birmingham, the plants of the American Steel and Wire Company and the National Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry Company being rushed to completion.

Wages of steel wire workers are above the average.

Liquor Question Is Issue in Alabama

ANNISTON, Aug. 19.—With the hope of keeping the liquor question out of the next session of the Alabama Legislature, a proposed compromise between prohibitionists and local optionists in this county is being discussed, the object being to insure men of high moral and mental ability, men with business experience, to represent the county at the next session.

Mystery in Death Of Woman on Train

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Mrs. May Bacharach, 43, wife of Herschel Bacharach, superintendent of the City Club at Boston, Mass., died to-day, poisoned by food or water on a train en route from St. Louis to Chicago.

Coroner Hoffman of this city, began a searching investigation of the cause of her death.

RICH DENOUNCED IN BOOK BY CHEF

Leon Pescheret, in Socialistic Treatise, Calls Them Ill-Bred Hogs and Immorality Producers.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—In a booklet published under the title of "Gluttony and Lucre," Leon Pescheret, famous over Europe as a chef, and now directing the commissary of a large Chicago hotel, says the wealthy patrons of eating places in America are "gilded, mixed breed, perverted calves, who have more money than sense, and who become criminals through indulgence in their rattish and doggish pastimes."

Three of Pescheret's most pointed paragraphs say:

"Many servants would experience a great deal more satisfaction and be rewarded by much more gratitude attending real swine than at feeding the ill-bred hogs that are disorganizers and producers of immorality and the present-day social order of things."

"In no class have I found more hypocrisy and false devotion, false morals, deceitfulness—even among themselves—than among snobbish, wealthy people."

"Clothes and jewelry do not make the lady or gentleman. Any good experienced and traveled waiter realizes that people finely dressed and with plenty of money to spend show about as much ignorance about a daily menu as a mule dressed up in silks would show."

JUDGE STAYS EXECUTION.

TIFTON.—Pending an appeal to the State Supreme Court, Judge W. E. Thomas has indefinitely postponed the execution of I. B. Hall, convicted of the killing of Dennis W. Hall and sentenced to hang on August 22.

Augusta-Columbus Railroad Proposed

COLUMBUS, Aug. 19.—A movement which had its origin in Macon, with a strong second by the Columbus Board of Trade, has come to light which proposes a direct railroad line between Columbus and Augusta, passing through Macon and the county seat of every county which it would touch.

The distance would be about 240 miles, and would not parallel any other road. Those who have begun the movement express confidence in the project and believe that it can be financed and that it will become a reality.

CURED ITCHING HUMOR ON FACE

Very Embarrassing. Could Not Sleep. Used Resinol—Well in a Week.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 3, 1913.—"I had a ringworm on the side of my face. It began like a cold blister—a small red mark. Each day it became larger until it was a round ring about the size of a quarter. It burned and itched me terribly, and was very sore. It was also swollen and caused me a great deal of discomfort, as I could not sleep at night. It was very embarrassing and I didn't want any of my friends to see me. I used several remedies such as —— and some kind of a powder, but they did no good. I used Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment for one week and cured it." (Signed) Eleanore D. Shekels, 308 North Sheridan Ave.

Resinol Soap and Ointment are speedily effective for eczema and other itching, burning eruptions, pimples, dandruff, burns, old sores and piles. Prescribed by doctors for eighteen years. Sold by all druggists. For free samples write to Dept. 6-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

INSIST ON ODOR-O-NO—THERE'S NOTHING "JUST AS GOOD."

Nell Brinkley Says

I KNOW lots of folks who won't say it—that saddest word—"good-bye." "Adieu," they say, and "addio," "farewell" and "so-long," "auf Wiedersehen" and "aloha," "until the next time" and "be good"—but not "good-bye."

Under the word "good-bye" the sun seems dim. Birds droop and do not sing. The heart beats slow and heavy and the temples ache and tighten. The blue sky films with gray. Every face that turns our way and passes on seems to hide tragedy. Everybody else in the world, seems like, is saying good-bye, too.

And we watch them with tenderer eyes since we are bidding some one farewell. After good-bye there is nothing to do, no place to go, no one to see. The world seems bigger and suddenly wiped bare of beauty. We are afraid!

But EVERYBODY will say "HELLO!" They don't go hunting round for another word, any other word, so they can sort of slide by the plain, potent English. Under the short, keen, gladdest word, the sun and the sky are gold and blue. If it rains, why then we suddenly like rain. Under our tight jackets the heart beats high and fast and bursting big. Every face that turns our way seems like it had good news and blinds us.

If, maybe, a sad one lifts out of the glad ones, we forget it soon. Because we are saying "Hello." And if there's a bird singing anywhere we hear it. There is so much to do, so much to see, so many folks to like. The world seems suddenly like a rose and "full," as sweet-tempered R. L. S. says, "of a number of things."

And we are not afraid.

Like Champagne.

At a meeting presided over by a burly country squire the chief speaker was a budding orator with a seat in the upper house.

Said the chairman, grasping the nervous speaker by the arm on the conclusion of his lordship's address:

"Your speech was like a glass of good champagne"—here the noble lord smiled pleasantly—"lots of froth and very dry."

Then the smile came off.

His Guide Book.

An English bishop who was an extremely busy man, and had to travel a good deal, was addressing the children of a school. He said:

"My dear children, I have been all this week traveling hither and thither through my diocese, and what book do you think has guided me? Come, now, it's a book beginning with 'B.'"

"The Bible, sir," cried a chorus of youthful voices.

"Ah, no," said the Bishop, with a twinkle in his eye. "It's Bradshaw."

Do You Know---

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reason to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms, and underground passages—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet.

Clocks without hands or faces are now common in Switzerland. The timepiece stands in the hall, and when a button is pressed by means of phonographic arrangements it calls out "Half-past five," or "Five minutes to nine," as the case may be.

The greatest number of runners ever contesting in a single race ran through the streets of New York recently in a twelve and three-eighths-mile marathon. The runners taking part were 1,500 in number, and there were 300 prizes.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

PERHAPS HE IS SHY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am working in a place of business with a man of whom I think a great deal. Any time I write him to call to see me he appears to be quite delighted and calls, but never makes any effort to call unless I ask him. Don't you think he should ask me if he can call? PUZZLED.

Such a request from him would show an interest in you which he now seems to lack. You say he always accepts and is delighted. That encourages me in the belief that he thinks a great deal of you, but is bashful.

Don't ask him for a time. I have an idea he will speedily ask you.

LET IT BE NO.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young lady of sixteen and keeping company with a young man of eighteen for one year. This young man has asked me to marry him, but I would like for him to change his position. He promised me he would in the spring. Kindly let me know if I shall give any decided answer. ANXIOUS.

You are sixteen and can well afford to wait. You do not state what the man's position is, so my advice is based only on your years. I want love to come to you, but, believe me, my dear, it will be all the sweeter if your judgment is more mature.

MAKE THE OVERTURES.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a girl and she is in love with me. We had been keeping steady company, but lately we got mad, and we do not speak to each other. I would like a reconciliation and so would she. B. S. L.

You are a man, and stronger to bear the burden. Take on your shoulders the burden of the blame, persuading yourself that you offended and deserve it. Tell her you alone are to blame, beg forgiveness, and promise never to offend again. If you are not willing to say "I was wrong," then you are not fitted to say "I love you."

He Wasn't Shy.

Old Lady (to cabman)—Does your horse ever shy at motors?

Cabby—Lor' bless you, no, lady; 'e didn't even shy when railway trains fust come in.

HOW ARE YOU FEEDING YOUR CHILDREN?

Are you giving them nourishing food—food that will develop their muscles, bones and flesh—food that is easily digested and cheap?

Ever thought about Spaghetti—Faust Spaghetti? Do you know that a 10c package of Faust Spaghetti contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef? Your doctor will tell you it does. And Faust Spaghetti costs one-tenth the price of meat. Doesn't that solve a big item in the high cost of living?

You probably haven't served Faust Spaghetti as often as you should because you don't know how many different ways it can be cooked—write for free recipe book to-day and you'll be surprised at the big variety of dishes you can make from this nutritious food. In 5c and 10c packages.

Lady Constance Stewart Richardson
on
How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Dancing.

BEAUTY must be a harmonious whole. In the figures of the dance one ungraceful step can mar the perfection of the rhythmical charm one is trying to produce. In the physical rhythm of the human body an ugly arm or hand can spoil the spell of loveliness.

The question I always ask myself is: Why, in a world where we are all under the sway of physical lure, do we so calmly accept our own imperfections and those of our children?

We work intelligently for evolution and growth in health and strength and brain power; but beauty and grace we accept in the old superstitious fairy-tale fashion as the gift of the good fairies—and we fold our hands in the supposedly philosophical decision that either we have it or we have it not. Not at all! Either we have beauty or we set about getting it—if we have brains enough to acquire anything!

It is a simple thing to train the human body in the right way—the way it should go—in the beginning, but it is hard to alter bodily faults once they have come. However, if you have come to maturity without proper training in bodily grace, and the health and ease and beauty it brings, do not despair—instead, dedicate 30 minutes morning and evening—(one hour out of your day) to the beautiful art of the dance, and soon your reward will be great not only in terms of the pleasure of pleasant, graceful movement, but in health, beauty and a gloriously symmetrical figure, too.

Proper Training.

And make sure that your little children, and the dear young things all about you, have the proper beginnings to insure for them healthy and beautiful and graceful bodily growth.

Since an ugly arm or hand can so easily spoil the perfection of beauty, suppose, to-day, I show you how beautiful arms and hands may be evolved through proper training. It seems a far cry from dancing to beautiful arms and hands, but I shall try to show you how they may be gained in the rhythmical movement and exercise of the classical dance.

As most of the movements of the classical dance are executed with high-flexed arch and, the body's weight falling on the ball of the foot, while the instep is held in a firm high curve, they give of themselves a slender grace and power to the too-much-neglected foot. In both of the exercises I give you to-day the body must be poised lightly and springily upon the ball of the foot, inclining forward toward the toes. Walking and dancing thus will banish the flat-foot that seems to be a foe of modern high-heeled civilization.

The first picture shows one stage of a very wonderful arm exercise. Poise the weight on the balls of the feet, swaying slightly back and forward from toes to heels as the arms are raised with drooping wrists to shoulder height. When the arms are straight lines from shoulder sockets, raise the wrists and arms simultaneously until the backs of the hands just touch above the head.

A Dancing Step.

Now drop the arms slowly, with rhythmical muscular control, to the shoulder height again and turn the arms so the palms are alternately up and down parallel to the floor. Then, with palms down, sink the arms gradually to the sides, at the same time inclining the weight gradually to the entire foot. Practice this with gradually receding and increasing tempo, and finally do it as you walk forward on tiptoe, or as near as you can manage to this toe position.

The second picture is a little dancing step that can be practiced at a walking tempo until enough facility is gained to do it merrily and lightly as a dance. Advance on the ball of the feet with toes pointing outward. Incline the body forward, and keep the head a bit forward in the line of the slight curve of the back. The arms swing up in gentle curves until the elbow is about at waist height.

As the weight is swaying to the forward left foot, swing the left arm out with its line a slight droop from elbow to wrist, and the right arm in, with the forearm curving up almost perpendicular to the ground, and the wrist drooping. Swing the arms in and out thus from side to side as the weight of the body springs from foot to foot. In all these arm exercises hold the hand relaxed from the wrist, with light, pliant fingers, middle fingers fairly close together, small and index fingers gently curved and relaxed with the index finger pointing up ever so slightly.

The faithful practice of these two exercises will register for you a distinct step toward the acquisition of poetically graceful arms and hands.

The figure to the left shows the culmination of the exercise for developing beautiful arms through rhythmic motion.

To the right is shown a classical dancing step in which the hands and arms are also exercised.

HOW THIS WOMAN FOUND HEALTH

Would Not Give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for All Rest of Medicine in the World.

Utica, Ohio.—"I suffered everything from a female weakness after baby came. I had numb spells and was dizzy, had black spots before my eyes, my back ached and I was so weak I could hardly stand up. My face was yellow, even my finger nails were colorless and I had displacement. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am stout, well and healthy. I can do all my own work and can walk to town and back and not get tired. I would not give your Vegetable Compound for all the rest of the medicines in the world. I tried doctor's medicines and they did me no good."—Mrs. Mary Barlewine, R. F. D. No. 8, Utica, Ohio.

Another Case.

Nebo, Ill.—"I was bothered for ten years with female troubles and the doctors did not help me. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and every month I had to spend a few days in bed. I read so many letters about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound curing female troubles that I got a bottle of it. It did me more good than anything else I ever took and now it has cured me. I feel better than I have for years, and tell everybody what the Compound has done for me. I believe I would not be living to-day but for that."—Mrs. Hettie Green-street, Nebo, Illinois.

Little Bobbie's Pa
By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

OH, husband, sed Ma to Pa last nite, I have the cutest thing to tell you. Our deer littel son has a littel sweetheart. He met her to-day. She is a littel city gurl that lives neer our city hoam, & Bobbie rowed her all oaver the lake this morning. How perfeckly cunning, Ma sed. To think of our gallant littel son beeing a Romeo.

I aint no Romeo, I toald Ma. I wish you wudden say that.

The littel deers looked so cute out thare on the lake, Ma sed. Bobbie helped her into the boat & out of it jest like a prince helping out a princess, Ma sed. Did you enjoy yure day, Bobbie, you and littel Grayce?

No I diddent, I toald Ma. & she aint any sweetheart of mine, eether. It was her father's bote & she diden't know how to row it & I wanted to row, so I got in & rowed the bote. I diden't like her vary much, I toald Ma, beekaus she laffed at me wen I spelled her naim rong. I spelled it without a Y, I sed, & that is the way to spell Grace.

Bobbie, Pa sed, I tell you what to do. If you want to win littel Grayce, you must rite her a poem. I will rite her a poem for you to reed to her, sed Pa, & you can say you rote it.

Bobbie will lose her sure if he tries that, sed Ma. He has a littel boy frend that rites good poetry, littel Georgie Crowley, & he can git him to rite the poem.

No, sed Pa, I will rite the poem. So Pa went & got a sheet of paper and rote this poem for me to show to Grace:

Littel Grayce, charming Grayce,
I luv yure voice, I luv your fayce.
Thou art the idol of my hart,
& from thy side I'll never part.
Sum day wen I am grown to manhood
& deeside to marry, as every man shood,
I'll cum to you, deer, with a smile,
And ask to lead you up the aisle.
Thou art the sweetest gurl in this place,
My darling Grayce.

I aint going to show her that, I toald Pa. I doant luv her & she aint my sweetheart. I aint going to start in so yung telling gurls that I luv them wen I doant luv them at all, I sed.

You have got to do that, sed Pa, to git along. Why, wen I was yure age I toald all the gurl I luved them. Pa I toald all the gurls I luved them, Pa me, but I could see thay did. I was vary hansum as a boy, sed Pa, & I had a grate way with the ladies. I used to write them verses & thay threw down all thare other beaus for me. I will give you a quarter, Bobbie, if you show this poem to littel Grayce, & if she doesnt call you a darling boy I will give you a dollar beesides.

So I showed Grayce the poem & sed I rote it, & she laffed & sed it sounded jest like sumthing that a green kid rote, so I made a dollar and a quarter from Pa.

Clever Hostess.

A German band happened to play under the windows of a house in a fashionable neighborhood the other afternoon, when Mrs. B. was "at home." They were a fair specimen of their kind—blaring and noisy, yet correct in their time and altogether in movement from long practice. The butler started out to drive them away, for they interrupted the music within, but Mrs. B. ordered him to invite them in. A happy thought struck her.

"Ladies and gentlemen," she said, five minutes later, "a party of our friends have consented to give an imitation of a street band. I now have the pleasure of introducing them."

Then the six members of the organization filed awkwardly into place and played a piece. The audience delightedly declared that the mimicry was perfect, especially the make-up of the players, who were recalled half a dozen times.

"Would you take them for anything but genuine street stragglers?" was asked of a belle.

"Indeed, yes," she confidently replied; "they're clever in their mimicry, but one can always tell gentlemen, no matter how disguised. I'm dying to find out who they are."

A Bachelor's Diary
By MAX.

AUGUST 10.—I have wondered ever since the accident why Sally did not come to me, and learned this morning. She had sailed for Europe the day before and was on the ocean the day Richards received Mrs. Allen's telegram to come at once.

I am glad she is away. If she were here and did not come I would suffer all the pangs of an abused and neglected boy, and if she came, goodness alone knows what I would say or do in my weakness. I am sure I would demand the rights of a sick man to her devotion, or fret myself into a fever if she refused.

I had a note from her to-day, written in Paris.

"My dear big brother," she wrote, "I can't tell you how alarmed I was at reading in the cable news in a Paris paper of your accident. I hope that the charge of exaggeration always made against the press is true this time. I receive daily cables regarding your condition from the doctor, and he assures me you are getting along all right. You know, my dear big brother, I need you. You are more than all the world to me.

"SALLY."

Isn't that just like a woman? She puts in that word "brother" twice to make me realize that I am no more than a brother to her, and then adds "You are more than all the world to me" to keep me crazy about her.

She has a husband, and can't have me, but she likes to be loved, and intends to keep me loving her.

Past Proofs.

In looking backward I find every reason for believing that her opposition to the widow was not actuated entirely by sisterly feelings. The look of warnings she sent me, and many, many telegrams to beware of the woman who was pursuing me, are proof to me that Sally loved me then, and I did not know it.

"You are so stupid," she said to me once, "that if a woman were in love with you and tried her best to show it you would never see it. Now, suppose, for instance, that I loved you and had been trying to tell you for more than a year."

"But you don't," I added, "you love Jack."

"Yes," she repeated, dully, "I love Jack. He is my husband, and, of course, I love him. The law many centuries ago ordained that a wife should love her husband, and I wouldn't presume to question the law."

She laughed a little bitterly. "But suppose," she repeated, "that I loved you, and told you so."

Sally is a very handsome woman. I recall that on this occasion, she was lying in a hammock, and I sat in a chair near her. We were on her porch, waiting, I believe, for Jack to return from town.

"If you loved me," I said, "I think I would make you realize as you have never realized what it is to have a man's love. But this is nonsense, for, of course, there is Jack."

"Yes," she said, "there is Jack. Max, go home! You are so good-looking to-night you are dangerous."

I laughed, for I thought it was only more of her nonsense.

"Go home," she repeated. I got up and started for the steps, rather sulky to be treated so, and she caught up with me when I had descended the second step and threw both arms around my neck. "You are just two steps taller than I," she laughed. Then she pressed my face against hers and whispered that I was a dear, big stupid.

And do you know, Diary, I wonder now what it was that made me so stupid. I had been so sure for years that she belonged to Jack, not because her marriage ties bound her, but because she loved him and had no room in her thoughts for any other man, that it never entered my head that she cared for me.

I know she suffered and grew thin and haggard when Jack was gone with the widow, but if I had had any sense I believe I could have made those ten days the happiest of her life.

And now, instead of being grateful that I have been saved from wrongdoing, I look at myself with disgust because I didn't recognize my opportunities. She was humiliated because of the manner in which her husband slighted her; her heart was mine all the time, and she couldn't tell me, and I was too big a dolt to see.

When I get well, if I get well—— "You know, Max," the doctor said to me very frankly this morning, "something went wrong with your spine in that fall, and we have a fight ahead of us."

So there is an "if" connected with my future that is the biggest "if" I have met in my troubled existence. It is all right. If I win I will fight for Sally. Right or wrong, that is my intention. If I lose, I hope I will have ample warning that the struggle is going against me, so that they may get Sally here and I can slide out into the nowhere from her arms.

Takes Her Nap.

August 12—I do not suffer any great pain, only the pain of weariness, and the nurse is so patient and tender I am ashamed to complain of that.

I am bolstered up in bed a few hours every morning and write these lines at long intervals apart. It is a comfort to me to write that which I can not speak about and it shortens the long days.

Manette always takes her nap at this time of the day, the nurse is gone for her morning walk, and Richards sits beside me—patient, faithful Richards.

"If anything happens to me, Richards," I said this morning, turning to her, "you must never leave Manette. You—" I had never told anyone this before—"will find yourself a rich woman."

"I will never leave Manette under any circumstances," she said somewhat brokenly, "and I don't want to be a rich woman. I only want you to get well so that we may all go back home, and be happy there again. I am so thankful every day, Mr. Max, that I work for the kindest and best man that ever breathed."

It was a tribute that pleased me. I tried to tell her so, and the next moment she was on her knees beside my bed, sobbing with her face in the bed covers.

THE TUNNEL
Greatest Story of Its Kind Since Jules Verne

Read what the New York Times said about this great story---The Times printed an extract of it---We give you the story itself---You can begin it by reading the first installment to-morrow in The Georgian!

8 THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, AUGUST 3, 1913.

GERMANY READS OF A TUNNEL FROM AMERICA TO EUROPE

"Best Seller" in Berlin Is Bernhard Kellermann's "Der Tunnel," a Daring Flight of Fancy in Which Is Told How the Two Hemispheres Were Connected by an Oceanic Subway.

SCENE: the roof garden above (it's thirty-sixth floor of a colossal hotel in New York—New York of the future. There are gathered the richest magnates in the country, men who among them possess billion upon billion of dollars. One of them arrives in his aeroplane, from which he lands on the very roof garden itself. One of these is Lloyd, a veritable J. P. Morgan, renowned throughout the world as the most daring and formidable and successful of financiers.

They are gathered to learn about a plan evolved by an engineer, a man comparatively young, comparatively unknown, who needs their financial backing. Allan is his name—"Mac" Allan.

Rising modestly from his place, amid breathless attention from all these men, the money kings of the day, whom he scarcely hoped to meet, much less to interest in his project, Allan talks from his sketches and a piece of chalk, goes to a blackboard, and draws two lines. One, he says, is America, the other Europe.

"Between these two," he adds, "I bind myself to build, within the space of fifteen years, a submarine tunnel and to send trains through it from one continent to the other in twenty-four hours!"

The flashlights of the photographers gathered on the roof burst forth and thousands of people packed in the streets thirty-six stories below knew that the first act in the great drama has begun, and roar their excitement.

Allen in the meantime has plunged into figures, taking up the plan from every angle, painting it strongly and convincingly.

He finishes by whirling the astonished of billionaires away with him in a very madness of enthusiasm. Lloyd, king of them all, leads by subscribing $25,000,000 out of his own pocket. After him one magnate after another puts himself down for enormous sums. Allan, whose entire manhood has been devoted to the tunnel project, realizes that he is on the threshold of success.

That scene is described at the beginning of a book just published, one that is a "best seller" now in Germany—"The Tunnel," by Bernhard Kellermann. The author, who already has a number of novels to his credit, has in this latest work discarded the ordinary material of which heroes and heroines are made and daringly pressed into his service iron and steel and coal, powerful machinery, huge masses of humanity instead of individuals. Amidst this nonsense and tremendous background men and women are arranged, to be sure, men and women of flesh and blood, but they are secondary. It is the tunnel—the great tube between America and Europe, that is the hero of Kellermann's novel and the heroine and the villain. To it all else is subservient. In describing its vastness and grimness and fateful power the German strikes into the domain of Jules Verne and H. G. Wells, and, without ever employing the supernatural or manifestly impossible, meets them on their own ground and, it must be said, comes off by no means, lady.

Man's Greatest Undertaking.

After his description of the momentous meeting on the New York hotel roof garden, the novelist tells how the tunnel syndicate, formed immediately after the magnates had subscribed their millions, buys up huge tracts of land in New Jersey along the Hudson and ocean front and sets to work to rear a great city for the tunnel workmen. On the streets of New York hundreds of thousands of "extras" keep readers posted, hour by hour, on the progress of the construction work, the greatest undertaking ever attempted by man since the be-

"Let them fix them!" shouted some of the men. And on they went, looking for Allan. But he was not in the

Allan to the Rescue.

[illegible] to work! The tunnel must be finished!

His boundless energy had its reward; more and more of the men drifted back to their quarters in the city at the tunnel mouth. Two months after the catastrophe it looked as if operations would begin again with the same [illegible] fury of speed.

Panic came—gentle panic. Compared with it the panic of 1907, that shook the American money market, was a passing flurry. Hardly a day passed without the failure of some business house. Suicides like Woolf's became more and more common. A banker shot himself in Chicago; a New York broker poisoned himself and his entire family. As for the tunnel syndicate, it would have gone out of existence had it not been for Lloyd, who called the big shareholders together and insisted that they must stand by the ship. He was the first to dig into his pocket—others followed his example—the syndicate was saved, at least for the time being.

On the first of January a huge crowd of shareholders packed the streets about the syndicate building and fought their way to the cashier's office. Intent on collecting dividends. With the money hastily provided by Lloyd and the others, the cashier handed over the accrued interest [illegible] the tunnel work was re-stillness. The great tunnel was dead.

Even Allan despaired. He locked himself in his house, refusing to see anybody, in vain Ethel Lloyd, the one person who still seemed to believe in him, sought to see him. She could not.

But she persisted. Finally, one day, she actually waylaid him as he was walking, with downcast eyes, from the tunnel mouth to his house. He could not decently refuse to speak to her. He asked her to come in. And, once she had his ear, Ethel plunged into her task with flashing eyes and eloquent words.

"You must save the tunnel!" she ordered. And for the first time in months he woke to life and his eyes blazed.

"But we have no money," he objected.

"Have you seen my father?" she asked.

She had struck home. Even Allan and the great Lloyd were in a confidence. Soon the news flew over the world: "Lloyd has agreed to back the tunnel—alone!"

The work started up again with a fury of energy that left all that had gone before in the shade. One hundred thousand men went at it again and labored with a murderous concentration of energy.

America Linked to Europe.

The dead tunnel cities awoke. With Lloyd as leader, multi-millionaires who had been afraid to risk a cent in the undertaking poured their millions into it. In the tubes the boring machines thundered against the walls of rock, surrounded again by armies of naked workers, dripping with sweat, shining in the red glow of the lantern. And behind all stood Allan, whipping them into a hail of speed; once more, as his truth rolled past, they swung their hats and cheered—but now they called him "old grey Mac."

Years went by—fifteen, twenty, since the beginning of the work. Nearer and nearer the tunnel heads drew to each other, one, where Strom was commander, stretching out from Jersey eastward, the other from the Azores westward, driven forward by an engineer known as "Pat Mosher."

At last the two were so close that engineers glued their eyes on the telltale registering machines by the hour together, hoping to detect the sound of the work in the other tunnel. No eight—said yet the others must be almost within reach!

Had the calculations failed? Had the two tunnels missed each other? The newspapers were filled with alarming rumors.

Allan ordered side tunnels dug, that groped in the dark for the men digging toward America from Europe. At last one day the noise of a blast in Mosher's tunnel was heard in Strom's. Feverishly the men dug toward the sound. At last, breaking down a wall of earth and rock, they saw, through a narrow hole, other men—Mosher's men!

Roars of enthusiasm burst forth at both ends of the hole. Pat Mosher, poking his head into the opening, asked:

"Where is Mac?"

"Here," answered Allen, sticking his head into the other opening—the one nearest America.

"How do you do, Mac?" said Mosher, with a laugh.

"We are all right," said Mac. That was all. In the evening the newspapers on both sides of the ocean printed this conversation, held themselves of fast under the sea. The workmen had soon dug the hole big enough to allow of Mosher's sending Mac a bottle of Munich beer.

Twenty-four years had elapsed since the tunnel work had been begun.

From then on the world was in a fever of excitement. Every [illegible] of the tunnel work was re-

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"You are an observing man," he remarked to Peter, "and seem to have noticed this girl closely. Was this bag she carried a small, yellow one?"

"It was not, thin," that person emphatically replied, while the butler shook his head. "It was small, that it was, but not a mark of yellow about it at all. I see it manys the time. It's black it was."

"And would you know it if you saw it again?"

"I'll not say that, sur; but I could tell if it wur the same kind of one."

Mr. Gryce smiled and produced from his capacious pocket the bag which had been found by him in the doctor's phaeton.

"Was it like this one?" he asked, holding it up between the two men, with the initials toward Peter, and the blank side toward the butler.

"No," was the former's reply, and "Oui," that of the latter.

He whirled the bag about.

"I never have seen ze fillgree on him like zat!" now exclaimed the butler.

"By the powers that's it," was, on the contrary, Peter's response.

Mr. Gryce laughed and put the bag back in his pocket.

Another Clew.

"You don't agree," he said.

"We do that," returned Peter.

But Mr. Gryce would not be convinced. He saw that if this was the bag that they had been in the habit of seeing on the arm of the girl who had visited Miss Gretorex, that it had always been carried with the initial-side in, and this again seemed a great improbability. He was about convinced that he was on a false trail. Disappointed and dissatisfied, he therefore cut the conversation short, and in a few minutes was about to leave this house for the second time in anything but a happy frame of mind. But this time he did not go out by the side door. He was in the kitchen, and he naturally sought the kitchen exit. In doing this, his eyes fell upon the gravel walk that ran about the house. "Humph!" was his mental ejaculation.

But he saw something the next moment—having by this time stepped into the yard—which called from him something more than an exclamation. This was a small piazza, built one or two steps from the ground, for the use, as it appeared, of the servants of the house. It was square in shape and had a high balustrade about it, terminating in pillars that supported the roof. It was the color of this balustrade which drew his attention. It was of a bright and peculiar brown and had seemed to have been but lately painted.

"Can it be that I have here found what I have so long been searching for?" he queried. And stepping upon the piazza he ran his eye along the balustrade with the most careful scrutiny. Suddenly he paused, looked closer, and gave utterance to a sound expressive of satisfaction and keen wonder. From the supporting pillar nearest the steps a portion of paint had been rubbed, of the size and shape of the smudge on Mildred Farley's dress, and dried into the thin coating yet remaining was a woolly fuzz so evidently blue in color that even this old and experienced worker among marvels was taken aback, and thought he had never seen anything finer nor more conclusive.

It was with a very grave face he stepped back into the kitchen.

"Excuse me," said he, "but what a fine porch you have outside. I think I will come and visit you some evening next summer. Fun out there, eh?"

"Well, now, do you hear that?" laughed good-natured Peter.

"And how prettily it is painted; looks fresher than the rest of the house."

"Yes, the master intended using it at the time o' the wedding—what for I don't know—and it being well used up by that same fun ye wur axin about, the count there bought a pot o' paint and wint over it on his own account. It didn't dry good like, and the master thanked the count, so he did, but didn't use the porch. I'm thinkin' he gave the count foive dollars for disappointin' him do ye moind?"

And Peter, evidently thinking he had got the laugh on the butler this time, laughed himself, long and loud.

But Mr. Gryce did not laugh. A problem dark with mysteries was before him, and he had no disposition to mirth, and but little patience with those who had

Tests and Surprises.

IT was indeed a serious discovery he had made; how serious he could not yet determine. That the girl who had brought home Miss Gretorex's dresses, and who had been with her on the very evening she was married, was the same one who had been carried dead into Mrs. Olney's parlor at or near midnight of that same day, there could be no doubt.

But had she died here? It did not follow, though the fact that Miss Gretorex, or as she was now called, Mrs. Cameron, showed such a disposition to deny acquaintanceship with the girl, seemed to argue the existence of something strangely unpleasant between them. Yet it need not have been anything connected with the tragic end of the girl. Ladies of Mrs. Cameron's stamp are invariably cowards when it comes to appearing in a police court, or before a magistrate as a witness. Even men sometimes shrink from this ordeal, and resort to every subterfuge to hide the fact that they know anything about a crime of the party suspected of it. And she had this excuse, that she was a bride and naturally hated any such unpleasant publicity in connection with her marriage.

A Puzzle.

Yet the desire of Molesworth to communicate his position to the Camerons! Was it purely on account of the medical case he mentioned? Mr. Gryce felt himself at liberty to doubt it. And the scream which had arisen from this house during the marriage ceremony! Whence did it come and what did it mean? He had not realized its importance at the time, but now he felt that he must make every effort to discover both its source and occasion. Turning to the two men, he remarked in his off-hand way:

"By the way, I heard something curious about the wedding here. A friend of mine told me that there was a big scream in the house right in the middle of the ceremony. Was that so?"

"Oui, monsieur," quoth Jean, "zat Marguerite scream all ze time, and she scream zen."

Peter smiled indulgently.

"Is it Margaret, ye say? Whin will yez git over talkin' about her screamin' like a fool. Sure she wasn't in the house at all. Every one of us knows that, and it's time ye did, too."

Jean shrugged his shoulders disdainfully.

"It was ze voice of Marguerite, I know him very well. I hear him many times, and I hear him zat time of ze wedding and always ze same."

"How the devil could she scream if she wasn't in the house?

"Do Marguerite say she was not in ze house?"

"No, but don't we know she wasn't? Jim Dolan says she was in his little back room when the scream you spake of was heard. Haven't I told ye that over an' over again, ye spalpeen?"

"When Jeem Doling say me zat, zen I must hear him." And so the obstinate man had the last word.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

A naval officer I know canceled a lot of engagements last week in order to devote the time to his dentist.

"I am going on a long cruise," he said, "and I know the value of good teeth. Good teeth mean good health afloat or ashore and a man can't do his work well unless he has good health."

In the army and the navy, and in all great industrial spheres the value of good teeth is being recognized. Statistics prove that sound, clean teeth, preserve health and promote business efficiency.

The twice-a-year visit to the dentist and the twice-a-day use of Colgate's Ribbon Dental Cream, the efficient, deliciously flavored dentifrice, insure sound clean teeth, better health and better looks.

ELLIOTT DENT FACES MOLES IN 2ND GAME

ELLIOTT DENT is carded as Manager Smith's pitching entry against the Barons in the second game of the series, which starts at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. Harry Chapman will be back of the wood, and the manager said this morning that he fully expected Tommy Long to be in his regular place in left field.

Tommy was out in uniform yesterday, but Manush was going so well that it was not considered necessary to try out the convalescent one. Frank had a great day with the stick yesterday and aided materially in the battering of the unfortunate Howell.

Manager Molesworth was not positive of his choice in the matter of slabman. Pitcher Ery, the recruit, got in yesterday and may get a chance to-morrow. Big Bill Prough, absent from the club by reason of a sister's illness, hadn't arrived at noon today.

There is a lot of talk around town about the prospective "birthday party" to be tendered Bill Smith at the ball park to-morrow, when "Bill Smith Day" will be observed, with a band and other trimmings, and the thousands of Atlanta fans who have pulled for the hard-working manager and rejoiced in his success will have an opportunity to show by their attendance the appreciation they feel for his efforts. Preparations are being made to handle a big crowd, as it seems everybody is going.

BOBBY GILKS, CLEVELAND SCOUT, IS IN ATLANTA

We have with us this week, or part of it, one Bobby Gilks, erstwhile popular manager of the Shreveport club in the Southern League, and now a trusted scout for the Cleveland ball club.

Bobby looks the same as ever; a quiet, alert, sun-burned man, preserving an athletic build with no tendencies to a bay window effect, and with very keen eyes set in the deep puckers that come from years of peering over a blazing diamond.

"Just looking around," said Mr. Gilks yesterday as he sat on the back of a bench in the smoker, looking over the Crackers at practice. "I can't say anything more specific—except," he added, reflectively, "I will say they're awfully scarce."

Mr. Gilks also was of the opinion that the desperately fine coming the minor leagues were receiving this year would result more in bursting bubbles than broken batting and base-stealing records. He expects to remain here nearly all week by the end of which his scouting will be over for the present season.

STARTS ON LONG SWIM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Harry Ellonby, 19, of New London, Conn., sared at 12:48 a. m. to-day on the swim from Battery Park to Sady Hook, a distance of about 21 miles. Ellonsky attempted the swim some time ago, but was forced to quit the water when within a mile of his goal.

"Society Night" at Motordrome

Maddox Sweepstake Feature

REALIZING that society folk will wear thousands of dollars worth of diamonds and jewelry tonight at the motorcycle races, Manager Noon Hudson has hired 50 plain-clothes men to protect his patrons. Chief of Police Beavers and Chief of Detectives Lanford will both be on hand to assist.

It is "Society Night;" at least that is the way the program is captioned And it is expected that all of Atlanta's "400" will be on hand.

Owing to the accident to Jock McNeil late Wednesday afternoon it has been decided to keep everybody away from the paddock and nobody but officials and the riders themselves will be allowed within the sacred portals of the danger lines.

The new machines that the riders have secured can be speeded up to such an extent that a blow-out or any other accident to a machine is likely to cause a spill, and, of course, danger threatens all who may be in the way of the flying "boats." Therefore, everybody will be forced to remain behind the railings.

* * *

THE feature to-night will be the Robert Maddox Sweepstakes. This is the real "sassiety" event of the season at the Saucer. It will be run in three heats. The first will be over a two-mile course, the next, four miles, and the third, six miles.

The winner will be found by the point system. The winner of each heat will secure ten points; second man, six; third, three.

The riders in this race will be Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

ANOTHER interesting event will be the special match race between Harry Glenn, the local favorite, and Harry Swartz, whose machine right now is one of the fastest at the track.

There will be two heats and maybe three. The winner will have to capture two heats. The first heat will be one mile, the second two miles, and if necessary, there will be a third heat of three miles.

* * *

THE other event carded is the first of the Southern championships. It is the intention of the management to run a title race every night until the latter part of September. The riders will be scored by points. The winner of each heat each night will be credited with 25 points, the second man, 15, and the third, 5.

There will be three trial heats of one mile and the final will be two miles. The winner of each heat and the second man in the fastest heat to qualify.

* * *

FOLLOWING is the complete program:

First Event.

First Heat: Special Match Race (one mile)—Glenn and Swartz.

Second Event.

First Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Graves, Swartz and Lockner.

Third Event.

Second Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Richards, Luther and Renel.

Fourth Event.

Third Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Lewis and Glenn.

Fifth Event.

Final Heat: Southern Championships (two miles. Winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat. Twenty-five points for winner, 15 for second man and 5 for third man.)

Sixth Event.

First Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (two miles; ten points for winner, six points for second man, three for third man).—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Seventh Event.

Second Heat: Special Match Race (two miles)—Glenn and Swartz.

Eighth Event.

Second Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (four miles)—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Ninth Event.

Third Heat: Special Match Race. (If necessary.)

Tenth Event.

Third Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (six miles)—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Big Aquatic Meet at Lakewood Wednesday

There will be a big aquatic meet at Lakewood Wednesday afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock. Atlanta's fastest and strongest swimmers will take part. The meet will be held under the supervision of the United States Life Saving Corps.

The events carded are: One-mile relay race, 440-yard race, 100-yard race, 50-yard race and 25-yard race for girls. Beautiful silver cups will be the prizes offered in all of the events except the girls' race. The winner of that event will be given a cutglass powder jar.

The one-mile relay race will probably be the big feature. Porter Enslow and C. R. McDermott, of Piedmont lake, will battle Captain B. H. Schlomberg and Lieut. Tatt Walthour of Lakewood. This struggle should be a hard-fought one from start to finish.

There will also be a life-saving demonstration, given by Captain Schlomberg.

COMPANY M WINS GAME.

CAMP PERRY, OHIO, Aug. 19.—Company M, Seventeenth Infantry, defeated the Marine baseball team here by the score of 11 to 3.

The feature of the game was the heavy hitting of Company M.

DODGERS BUY PITCHER.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Aug. 18.—The Brooklyn club to-day purchased Pitcher Brady from the Oshkosh club of the Wisconsin-Illinois League, but the price was not given.

BROWN TO MEET DILLON.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—George "Knockout" Brown and Jack Dillon will meet in a ten-round no-decision bout at Terre Haute on Labor Day afternoon.

M'CAREY SURE JEFFRIES WAS DOPED AT RENO

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19.—Promoter T. J. McCarey, for the past ten years president of the Pacific A. C., is positive in his belief that Jeffries was "doped" when he fought Jack Johnson.

"Jeffries could walk right into the ring to-day and make a 100 per cent better showing than he did at Reno," said McCarey to-day.

"I was watching Jeffries when he came into the Reno arena. He lurched down the aisle like a drunken man, bumping his shoulder against the moving picture stand. At the ringside one of his best friends, Clarence Berry, reached out to shake hands, but Jim didn't appear to recognize him.

"I AM suspicious of one man who posed as an intimate friend of Jim's prior to the fight. He bet heavily on Johnson and after the thing was over he never even went to Jeffries to speak to him, and to my knowledge has never seen Jim since.

"This fellow used to coax Jeffries away from the Monoa Springs training camp to go fishing. For hours he would keep Jim standing knee deep in the mountain streams and cause him to neglect his training.

"I believe that Jeffries was the victim of a widespread plot. The man never had a chance. He was whipped before he could put up his hands. This was one of the worst blows ever dealt the boxing game and I would pay a good sum out of my own pocket to see the mystery cleared up."

TOM JONES, manager for Ad Wolgast and Jess Willard, is another who believes that Jeffries was "doped."

"Jeffries was drugged. There is no other way to account for his reeling about in the ring before the contest," says Jones. "Jeffries doesn't care much about the matter now, but his friends would like to see the thing explained."

OUTFIELDER LET OUT.

KEOKUK, IOWA, Aug. 19.—Outfielder Corkhill was released by Keokuk and Outfielder Bromley, formerly with Mussatine, was signed.

"BATTLING" NELSON DISPOSED OF.

ROCKFORD, ILL., Aug. 19.—The Rockford (Wisconsin-Illinois League) team to-day ordered the release of Catcher "Battling" Nelson.

Jock McNeil Still Unconscious

Daring Motor Racer Is Dying

JOCK M'NEIL, the daring motorcycle racer, who was thrown from his machine while traveling at a speed of 80 miles an hour, is still unconscious at the Grady Hospital. The attending physicians have little hope for his recovery.

It was McNeil's own carelessness that caused his fall. He reported at the track yesterday afternoon under the influence of liquor, and after much wrangling with the other riders he insisted on taking a whirl.

He borrowed Morty Graves' stock machine and immediately after starting ascended to the white boards at the top of the track. The white boards are perpendicular and it takes a speed of at least 80 miles an hour to hold the machine.

The first time around his motor broke through the boards in two places, but McNeil refused to come down. The next time around he rode right into one of the holes that he had smashed on his first trip, and was thrown 50 feet in the air. He came down face first.

An ambulance was called and he was rushed to Grady Hospital. The extent of his injuries are:

The skin was peeled from the right side of his face.

A glaring hole in his skull that may affect the brain.

Right shoulder dislocated and badly torn.

Deep gash in right thigh, just above the hip.

Right leg broken just above the knee.

Internal injuries, the exact nature of which has not been fully determined.

VARDON AND RAY WILL HAVE HARD BATTLE--EVANS

By "Chick" Evans.

HARRY VARDON and Edward Ray, two of the foremost golfers in the world, are now on the ocean on their way to America. Wilfred Reid, another high-class British professional, is with them. It has been thirteen years since Vardon came to this country and made an almost clean sweep of everything. Then came Duncan in 1911, and he, too, made an excellent showing. It is my prediction, however, that Vardon and Ray will find a country of golfers vastly superior to anything that they have pictured. Since 1900, the year of the previous invasion, our country has taken tremendous strides in golf. Progress has been made not only in the addition of thousands of new clubs, but also in the standard of the game. A few years ago 80 was considered very good indeed, but now it is merely fair and the 80 golfer takes no special credit to himself.

Will Arrive This Week.

Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, our two most distinguished professional visitors, will be over here this week. Previous to the open championship, which will take place during the third week of September at Brookline, near Boston, they will play exhibition matches all over the East, and after the open they will journey Westward.

Fine players as they are, I think that they will have a difficult road to travel, for not only will our professionals give them a run, but there are some of our amateurs who may be able to quicken their pace a little. I hope they will like our courses and our golfers. Truly, we have a country-wide array of courses on which much money and time have been spent.

Our golfers are fine players, and good sportsmen, and the coming of the British visitors will do us a tremendous amount of good. Thousands will watch their play and be benefited by many an idea caught as they watch the execution of difficult shots by these masters of the game. Their scores will serve as an indicator by which we can know exactly what progress we have made in our own game.

Exhibitions to Benefit All.

Their coming will introduce into this country professional exhibition matches—a prominent element of British golf of which we know but little. We have not much of this now and there is no doubt we need more. It is something of which a country can easily have too much, but it can be of the greatest benefit to all players who wish to improve their game. It will give to them throughout the country an opportunity to see the best shots played by the best players, and this practical exposition is of more value than all the lessons and books of instruction in the world.

Of course, all professional golf is a money-making affair. For an exhibition match of 36 holes, occupying a day, I understand Vardon and Ray are asking $600. This seems an enormous amount of money to ask for the privilege of seeing a golf game, and it is difficult to see how they will be able to get many clubs to stage such an expensive exhibition. The best way would be to charge, say, a dollar for admission, and let the club stand for the rest. Most people would gladly give up that much to see these world masters of the links. They are like the musicians who have spent a lifetime in practice.

Grand Defense Aids Gil Price

Mates Star in Field and at Bat

By O. B. Keeler.

THE value of co-operation stuck out all over the opening game with the Moles Monday. There were so many points that to the Moles the Cracker club must have resembled a hedgehog.

There was no chance for Gil Price to lose that game. So he won, 7 to 2.

But Gil had as his three assistants luck, stuff and beautiful fielding.

And that is pretty nearly good enough to win for anybody.

* * *

DON'T take this as meaning that Gil was saved against his will from a beating. The southpaw had something on the ball all the time, up to the ninth inning. And whenever he got it over the platter, the problem was simple.

The Moles simply couldn't hit.

But Gil was having one of his famous struggles with the control lever, which persisted in jamming on him, usually after two men were out.

In other words, Gil's marksmanship was somewhat to the fritz. But, supported by the class of fielding his mates put up, and his own stuff on the ball, his erratic periods merely served to liven up a long game that certainly was in need of livening.

* * *

THERE was some hitting, too.

The way the Cracker attack was working, Gil could have been quite a bit more to the Carnegie with his passes, and still got by with it.

MR. WELCHONCE was excessively prominent in the attack. Four runs came riding in on his two blows, one for three and the other for two sacks. Harry also scored a run himself. Messrs. Agler, Manush, Smith and Bisland also deserve special mention in the list of sluggers, the first pair getting three hits apiece and the others being content with a couple each.

* * *

BUT savage as was the artillery, the real clubby spirit was shown in the way Gil Price's help came through with the defense. The help behaved as if it liked Gil fine.

And it must be said that Gil seemed to think pretty well of himself, too. He pulled as pretty a pair of fielding stunts as one would care to see. Once he raced toward first on a slow hit, bounding high, scooped the pill in his meat hand and sprinted over the bag—and there were Moles digging for home, with two out, at the time. And once he made a grand play on a difficult trap-bounder, following the pick-up with a fine peg.

GIL wasn't lonely in his display of defensive power.

Chapman nipped Mayer off first by a peach peg in the second; Agler and Smith made runaway circus catches of short flies—particularly Joe's catch of Marcan's foul in the seventh—and Calvo starred with a brilliant running catch of a low line drive in the fifth, and a rifle-shot peg to the [illegible] in the ninth, cutting down the speedy Marcan, who was trying to score from second on a sharp hit to the Cuban's territory.

* * *

BY the way, there was a moral force acting hand in glove with Calvo in the matter of outfield pegging.

In the third inning Carroll, first up, flied to the Cuban deep in right. Calvo took the ball easily and whipped it to third, low and fast, and with wonderful accuracy.

It looked a bit like showing off. But later in the game, when the Cuban nipped Marcan's line drive with McDonald on third, McDonald stuck right there, not caring to try out the little fellow's whip. His throw on McBride's single in the ninth, when the Moles were beginning to bite us, was a beauty, and it nipped Marcan for the last out as he came in from second.

* * *

AND in the meantime, Mique Finn's wrecking crew was resting.

The margin of safety for the Gulls, therefore, stuck at seven full games this morning.

The Billikens who also rested, retained second place by a margin of two games.

Neither Billies nor Gulls are scheduled to-day.

Chance to pick up a little honest change in the percentage column—what?

SOX YOUNGSTER THROWS WITH EITHER HAND

By Bill Bailey.

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 19.—The White Sox have a young outfielder who is destined to become one of the curiosities of the American League.

Edward Rausch is his name and the thing that makes him wonderful is the fact that he heaves the ball from deep right with his left hand and from deep left field with his right.

We've all heard about the ambidextrous ball players. Away back when Anson was a recruit there were a couple of fellows who pitched with either hand. But it is doubtful whether there is one fan in a hundred who ever gazed upon a youngster who could throw as well with one hand as with the other.

Manager Callahan didn't know that he was getting a curiosity as well as a ball player when he purchased Rausch from the Evansville club of the Central League. The youngster reported on Friday. The Sox were at morning practice when the youth reported. You thought it was too late in the season for morning practice? Manager Callahan is still in the hunt for whatever he can obtain and is determined to finish just as high as possible. Which accounts for the fact that the men were being drilled in everything pertaining to baseball.

Sent to Right Field.

As was remarked, the Sox were at morning practice when the youngster reported. He was handed a suit and told to go out and chase fly balls. He did. He went to right.

"Who's the youngster?" went the query.

"Oh, that's young Rausch," from Kid Gleason. It's the duty of the assistant manager to work with the men, and especially the youngsters, at the a. m. drill.

"Left hand thrower?" it was queried.

"It would seem so," was the answer of Gleason. It also was apparent, for the youngster was shooting the balls in on a line from right field and he was employing his left hand.

Pretty soon he went to left field and played there awhile. One of the fellows shot a line drive out there. And then everybody stood about in amazement. For the youngster returned the ball with his right hand. And he shot it in on a line, too.

"Hey!" howled Gleason. He didn't want any mistake about it, and he did want some information. In trotted the youngster.

"Are you a right or left hand thrower?" queried the assistant coach.

"Don't make any difference to me," answered the youngster. "When I play right field I throw with my left hand. When I'm in left I throw with my right."

"Don't make any difference to you, eh?" queried Gleason.

"None at all. Why?"

"Oh, I just wanted to know." It takes a lot to keep the assistant manager from retorting, but there was none on his tongue this time.

Youngster Gives Promise.

The youngster is twenty years of age and if he can hit he will be there. There is no question about his speed. He worked out in left field before the second game against the Highlanders. He was going back as fast as the ordinary outfielder comes in. And he was grabbing the balls, which is more to the point. They tried him out in the preliminary batting practice and he slammed said sphere to several parts of the lot. Here another surprise awaited the Sox. They naturally supposed that a fellow who could throw with either hand would bat from either side of the plate. Nothing doing. Rausch is a left-hand hitter and he doesn't swing from the right side under any condition.

Rausch was one of the first men purchased by the South Siders and cost $3,000. He hit in the neighborhood of .315 in the Central League. From the way he handled himself in the field it looks a certainty that he possesses the speed necessary to beat out many infield hits.

No question but that Rausch comes well fortified, so far as fielding is concerned. Many managers have an idea that a right fielder should be a left-hand thrower, upon the same theory that a southpaw thrower is supposed to have it on a right-hander at first base.

"Rausch throws equally well with either hand," said Manager Callahan. "It's my opinion, however, that he would do better if he decided to throw with either his right or left hand and then stick to it."

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

HOW SWEET.
(By Joe Tinker.)

How sweet to be a manager and lose
a lot of sleep
To pull a bunch of boneheads from
the bottom of the heap—
To patch a broken-down machine and get it running fit
And then to see the owner throw a
monkey wrench in it!
It's bad enough to run a team that
plays in Cincinnati,
But this here interference stuff
would drive a fellow batty.

In other words, Mr. Tinker insists that he is the only man who has a right to tinker with his team.

Those who know Sherwood Magee aver that Mr. Tincup is not the only Indian on Dooin's team.

Not that we desire to discourage a promising young athlete, but a Tincup is a first cousin to a can.

It is rumored that John Evers thinks as much of Mike Mitchell as Mike Mitchell thinks of John Evers.

SOMETHING LIKE THE CUB OWNER.

There was a young magnate named
Farrell
With money stacked up by the barrel.
He said: "I will win
Though it costs all my tin
And they force me to pawn my ap-
parel." V. S. B.

Conundrum: If it costs $10 to call Bill Klem a catfish, how much would it cost to call him a sardine?

Paul Westerlund, a Californian, won a medal by running a 31-mile marathon race up the side of a mountain range. Up to date Paul has not won any medals for consecutive thought.

If Frank Navin were to accept that $100,000 offer for Ty Cobb we fear that Clark Griffith would break all existing sprinting records on his way to the cyclone cellar.

Arthur Pelky announces that he will do his training in Calgary. This shows that even a rude and uncultured pugilist often clings to the fond recollections of former days.

Mr. Pelky is the youth who swore that he had retired from the fight game forever and forever. But he changed his mind when he learned that the only other way he could earn a living was to work.

Mr. Mitchell, athlete, accuses Mr. O'Loughlin, umpire, of having used vulgar language on the field. And yet the fact that a man is an umpire is sufficient cause to swear.

England feels as badly over the departure of Mrs. Pankhurst as a pitcher who has just recovered from a losing streak.

In a way, Ralph Comstock, whom the Sox have bought from the Minneapolis team, is one of the most remarkable athletes extant. It is said that he is the only member of the team whose grandchildren are not voting.

THE WHITE HOPE.

He had a fist as hard as a rock, like-
wise an iron jaw.
Without a doubt he was the hardest
man I ever saw.
Quoth he: "I got my training as a player with McGraw."

THE WORM.

"The worm will turn," a lad once
spoke.
He was a wise old guy.
He was an educated bloke
And what he said got by.
"The worm will turn," he said, and
men
Spoke lightly of his name,
But all interred the hammer when
The Pelicans won a game.

Not that we desire to inflame the thoughts of our yellow brethren, but the report that Ah Chung whipped Pat McCarty reveals the fact that the Boxer outrages have not ceased.

The 100-mile marathon race at Bellingham, Wash., reminds us that some men are nuttier than others.

Joe Boehling is now engaged at the unpleasant task of demonstrating that whatever goes up must come down.

Reading Mike Mitchell's tale of his recent job, one is led to suspect that being a Cub is like being in jail—only more so.

Charlie Ebbets announced yester morn that he would spend $60,000 to strengthen his team. We have not any inside information, but we have heard a well grounded rumor that to-day he will dedicate the $60,000.

Looking over Mr. Griffith's statement, one is led to suspect that Messrs. Altrock and Schaefer are not the only comedians on the Washington payroll.

The report that Hap Myers stole four bases off Jimmy Archer in one afternoon reminds us that several persons could have outsprinted Arthur Duffey if Arthur had sustained a broken leg.

Ben Tincup, the Indian pitcher who has been purchased by the Phillies, is on the wrong team. Imagine what a receiver Larry McLean would be for Tincup.

Not that it is any of our business, but the gent who picks out the names for country clubs must be related to the citizen who perpetrates the monickers for sleeping cars and motor boats.

Joe Tinker is not dissatisfied with his job or anything like that, but he has a hunch that as a baseball magnate Garry Merrmann is a good judge of wine.

NOT O'LOUGHLIN.

There was an ump in our town
And he was wondrous wise.
He spoke his words in such a way
That men could recognize.

STARRVILLE WINS.

PORTERDALE, GA., Aug. 19.—Porterdale lost to Starrsville yesterday 4 to 3. The feature of the game was the sensational work of "Kid" Harwell, who caught a grand game for the visitors. L. Cook also featured by his batting. Rocquemore fanned fourteen batters.

NO-HIT, NO-RUN GAME.

SUJERIOR, WIS., Aug. 19.—In yesterday's Northern Leagues game at Superior, Cy Dahlgren, of Superior, blanked Grand Forks without a hit or a run. Dahlgren was with the Cincinnati Reds this spring and was given an unconditional release after the training trip.

WILLIE LEWIS DEVOTED TO THE BOXING GAME

PARIS, Aug. 19.—Willie Lewis, the white American pugilist, who is now attracting as much attention at the Follies Bergeres as Jack Johnson did, said to-day:

"Boxing is not merely my profession, but my devotion. I believe that it develops any sound individual's muscular and mental faculties more than any other athletic sport."

Regarding the rumors that he intended divorcing his wife in order to marry Comtesse De Villeneuve, Lewis said:

"Though I greatly admire her free dances, I never have spoken to her and you can contradict those rumors."

AUTOMOBILE OWNERS, ATTENTION!

No more worry about punctures. PUNCTURE SEALO solves the trouble. PUNCTURE SEALO injected into your tubes will seal any puncture up to a twenty-penny nail, will preserve and lengthen the life of your tubes and lessen blow-outs by eliminating rim cuts. It will not stick the tubes to the casing, will not gum, becomes hard or evaporate, is not affected by heat or cold weather, does not interfere with the removal of tubes or with vulcanizing.

PUNCTURE SEALO pays for itself many times a season by preventing punctures and rim cuts.

We charge less for PUNCTURE SEALO than any of our imitators. Good territory open to agents who write at once. We are in business to stay.

SAVE TEMPER, TROUBLE, TIME AND TIRES BY USING PUNCTURE SEALO.

Motorcycles $2.50
Automobiles, 30 by 3, 34 by 4.....$7.00 per car
Other sizes in proportion.

Atlanta, Ga., 7, 17, '13.

Puncture Sealo Co., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gentlemen—I have examined your preparation for the stoppage of punctures in rubber, "PUNCTURE SEALO," and have found that it contains no substance injurious to rubber. It has a decided advantage in that it may be used in the coldest weather without freezing.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) EDGAR EVERHART,
Chemist.

MAKE MONEY WITH POULTRY.
AMERICAN POULTRY is a magazine devoted entirely to helping earnest men and women make a financial success of poultry raising. Its staff of writers is composed entirely of those who have made a practical, instead of theoretical, success of poultry farming, and who are glad to pass on the results of their hard earned experience to AMERICAN POULTRY readers. There are many pitfalls in the path of the novice which may be entirely avoided by those who will follow the teachings set forth in this magazine. It fully explains how to make a start, how to construct houses, coops, and other devices, how to get a large egg yield, how to cure and prevent disease, how to exhibit, how to get the top price for eggs, how to use incubators and hundreds of other points which every one wishes to know. It explains the famous secret system through which poultrymen have become rich and afterwards solid for hundreds of dollars. AMERICAN POULTRY is a large, handsomely illustrated, monthly journal, well printed on fine paper, and should be found on file in the home of every poultry lover. No beginner in the poultry business should think of being without it. It will save him many times the small subscription price. The advanced poultryman will also find it of great value; the articles being varied in their scope.

SPECIAL OFFER. The regular price of AMERICAN POULTRY is 50c per year, but in order to introduce it to several thousand new readers, we will, for a short time, give a large 200-page poultry book, which is a complete guide in the poultry business, absolutely free to every one sending 50c for a yearly subscription or $1.00 for a three-year-subscription to AMERICAN POULTRY. A trial six months' subscription (without book) will be sent for 25c. Never has so much been offered for so small a sum. Advantage of this offer should be taken at once.

SEEDS AND POULTRY SUPPLIES.
BOTH PHONES 2568.

IF OUR CUSTOMERS living on the North and South Sides place their orders before 9 o'clock and the ones in Inman Park and West End before 2 o'clock, they will be delivered the same day the orders are given. We are trying to give the very best service possible, and if our customers will bear in mind the hours that our deliveries leave the store it will insure prompt service.

IT IS ABSOLUTELY necessary for chickens to have green food during the winter. This can easily be supplied if you will plant out a small patch of rye and rape. They both grow very rapidly and will furnish an abundance of green food all the winter. Now is the time to plant.

THIS IS THE MOULTING SEASON, and that means that the hens should be fed a good tonic. Pratt's Poultry Regulator and Conkey's Laying Tonic insure a quick and complete moult, and that means plenty of eggs during the fall and winter, when they bring the high prices; 25c, 50c and $1 package.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage.

It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen-acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Lease on Peachtree Four Years, $26,250

Change in Elite Theater—Big Loan Deed—Spring Street Record. Hugh Richardson Sells.

Announcement of a central Peachtree lease at $26,250 for four years proved interesting in real estate circles Tuesday. Thomas L. Cooper, owner, has leased through William A. Fuller, trustee of the estate of O. A. Farrar, bankrupt, 36 Peachtree, the location of the Elite motion picture theater, on a sliding scale. The rental for the first year from September 1 it at the rate of $512.50 a month; for the second year, $525 a month; for the third year, $550 a month, and for the fourth year, $600 a month.

The lessee is A. O. T. Briers, who has bought out the picture show equipment and the privilege of leasing for $7,900. The terms on the same were one-third cash and the balance in three and six months, at 7 per cent.

Loan Deed $30,000.

Mrs. Ethel Toy Lamar has given the State Mutual Life Assurance Company, of Worcester, Mass., a loan deed on No. 5 Decatur street, 36 feet southeasterly of Peachtree street, for $30,000. The term is five years at 6 per cent. This property is occupied by and adjoins the north wall of the Kimball House. The frontage is about 25 1-2 feet, and the depth about 76.

Loans continue to be made on Atlanta property. The Life Insurance Company of Connecticut was also represented in Tuesday's loan column.

Cottage Changes Hands.

I. B. Williamson has sold to a client of the Green Realty Company a six-room cottage at the southeast corner of Woodward avenue and Hardin street, 50 by 50, for $1,800 cash.

Bellwood Avenue Auction.

Properties at Nos. 161, 215, 217, 219 and 221 Bellwood avenue, consisting of four cottages and a storehouse, will be sold at auction Wednesday by the T. B. Lumpkin Realty Company, through O. G. Clark, auctioneer. The sale will start at No. 215 Bellwood at 3:30 p. m.

Building Permits.

$2,000—C. B. McDaniel, Jr., 260 S. Moreland avenue, one-story frame dwelling. J. F. Howell.

$250—Fred Garrow, 38 Marietta street, alterations. Day work.

$250—C. P. Hill, 189 Windsor street, repairs. V. M. Barrett Construction Company.

$1,350—A. G. Rhodes, 471-475 Houston street, build two one-story frame dwellings. Day work.

$420—Woodward Avenue Baptist Church, Woodward and Cherokee avenues, additions. D. M. Argo.

$225—B. B. Broswell, 89 Inman circle, additions. V. M. Barrett Construction Company.

$150—T. Bearden, 16 Echo street, add room. Day work.

Record for Spring Street.

A record price has been established for Spring street between Harris and Baker streets. Jesse Ward has sold to relatives his one-third interest in a parcel on the east side of the street, 45 by 150 feet, for $600 a front foot, making $27,000 for the whole parcel. The buyers already owned the other two-thirds. The transaction was handled direct.

Hugh Richardson Sells.

Hugh Richardson has sold to J. B. Frost the stone bungalow at the southwest corner of Eleventh and Cypress streets, east of the Frank D. Holland apartments, for $22,500. As security for $5,000 Mr. Richardson took a mortgage on the place.

Peachtree Road Sale.

Peachtree road north of Buckhead continues to bring good prices. The northwest corner of Piedmont avenue, for instance, has been transferred from Mrs. M. C. Johnson to a client of Homer McAfee, of the Haas & McIntyre Agency, for $18,000, or at the rate of $75 a front foot.

The frontage on Peachtree is 240 feet and on Piedmont avenue 485 feet.

Preparing Church Plans.

W. T. Downing, the well-known architect, is preparing plans for the new First Presbyterian Church and manse at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Seventeenth streets, the total cost to be about $110,000. It is probable that work will be started within the next few weeks, since the Presbyterians will not wait to sell their old property on the south side of Marietta street, between Spring and Forsyth streets.

The Peachtree lot is 200 by 261 feet and cost approximately $47,000. Numerous people have tried to buy it at a great advance. The Marietta street lot is about 90 feet wide and is held for $180,000. This lot was given to the church by the late William Lowry, father of Colonel Robert J. Lowry, and W. A. Moore.

Small Sales Total $30,700.

The L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency has reported the following sales during the past week:

Six lots in the Clairemont Park sub-division at Decatur, $6,250; eight in Peachtree Highlands, $8,450; three in Woodlawn Park, $2,250; one in Oakwood Terrace, $850.

Mrs. Gussie May Bridges bought one of the corners of Moreland and North avenues, 50 by 150 feet, for $2,850; Mrs. Ella C. Freeman bought one of the corners of Moreland avenue and Hume street, 50 1-2 by 130, for $2,600 cash, and F. C. and B. C. Wilkerson bought one of the corners of Ira street and West Georgia avenue, 27 by 115, for $550, all through J. E. Pritchett.

Dixon Andrews bought 130 Tift avenue, 50 by 150, for $2,400, and J. T. Gardner the house and lot at No. 125 Bryant street, 50 by 100, for $2,750, through E. F. Culpepper.

Mrs. J. O. Hipp bought through Miss Maud Hampton from Lounsford & Bumbaugh, lot 4, block C of the Peachtreet Highlands sub-division for $1,750, and will build a $4,000 bungalow. The sellers made $150, having bought 30 days ago.

The total of the above sales is $30,700.

Enhancement in Lot.

A lot that a few years ago was used for pasturage purposes and that could have been bought for $100 a front foot has just changed hands at $300. This is on the north side of East Linden street, across from the Davis-Fischer Sanitarium, and also across from the James R. Gray property which fronts on Howard and Linden streets. It was bought by John W. Zuber from Daniel Brothers for $25,000. The lot is 85 by 260 feet, cornering on an alley which runs northward to North avenue.

Mr. Zuber may build a house on the location, according to report.

PROPERTY TRANSFERS.

PHYSICIAN SLAIN IN HOME HE INVADED

Unwritten Law Plea of Alabama Man Who Killed Masonic Brother.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 19.—Dr. Frank Walton, well known and prominent physician employed by the Woodward Iron Company at Mulga, a mining camp in the western part of the county, is dead as a result of three pistol bullets fired by Gid T. Weaver, a young electrician employed by the same company.

The shooting took place at the home of Weaver when the latter returned unexpectedly. The accused fired three shots, one striking Dr. Walton in the breast and the other two in the side of the back. The wife of Weaver grabbed hold of the weapon and the fourth shot went wild.

Weaver surrendered and was brought to the county jail here today. His preliminary trial is set for Saturday before a justice at Mulga. The unwritten law will be the plea.

The body of Dr. Walton was brought to Birmingham for interment.

Both deceased and accused were members of the same Masonic lodge.

Smoot Sees Gloomy Outlook for Sugar

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—A prediction that the price of sugar will be reduced by the sugar refineries until the domestic cane and beet sugar producers have been destroyed, and that the refiners then will boost the price of sugar higher than it has been for years and reap the benefit, was made by Senator Smoot of Utah, during the debate on the sugar schedule in the Senate to-day.

Senator Smoot declared that the American sugar refiner had the entire business in this country concentrated within his grasp, that it was in the hands of a few men.

Thousands Bet by Millionaires on Race

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Heavy betting by millionaire sportsmen on the speed boat contests being held in connection with the second anual water carnival to-day caused activity in the offices of First Deputy Police Chief Schuettler and Sheriff Zimmer.

Thousands of dollars are said to have changed hands during yesterday's races. One wager was declared to have been for $15,000.

"I have issued orders to my men to arrest any one who may be involved, regardless of who they are, in case they see money change hands," said Schuettler.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Splendid Bill at Forsyth.

Willie Weston, Grace DeMar and Toots Paka and her Hawaiian musicians are running a dead heat for first honors in the fine vaudeville offering at the Forsyth this week. First-nighters found it hard to pick the winner.

The Hawaiian musicians repeat the big hit they made on their previous visit to Atlanta. The guitar playing of one of the men brings down the house and Miss Paka's "hula hula" dance wins a big hand. The weird native songs are exceptionally pleasing.

Willie Weston, in a class by himself as a character singer, has new songs this year, and his act goes big. He was assisted at the piano by Howard Winburn, the Atlanta pianist; Mike Bernard, Weston's regular partner, being ill.

Miss DeMar, who sings well some songs that are full of "pep" to say the least, and captures the gallery in her last number when she exhibits a very shapely figure in tights.

The other acts on the bill are above the average in quality. Kennedy and Rooney have a skit that keeps the audience chuckling; Foster and Lovell win favor with songs and nonsense; the Nikko troupe of acrobats have a Japanese who walks up and down stairs on his head as an added feature, and the Pathe pictures are unusually interesting.

War Picture at the Grand.

Interesting light is thrown on the threatening Mexican situation by a remarkable motion picture, "Victory," at the Grand Theater this week. While the scene would fit any Spanish-American country, the acute conditions in Mexico immediately suggest that country, and the analogy is strongest still when the President of the Republic is assassinated and the crux of the drama develops with an attack on the United States battleship Utah.

Woven through the play is the love drama of a young United States naval lieutenant and the daughter of the United States Ambassador. All modern implements of warfare, including the hydroplane and the wireless, are demonstrated in action, and stirring battles are fought. The picture was made through a special permission and cooperation of the United States Navy Department.

Policeman Sews Up Slit in Skirt

AYDEN, N. C., Aug. 19.—A pretty 19-year-old girl appeared in the streets here wearing a generously slit skirt. She did it on a wager. A crowd of hooting men and boys followed her.

A policeman escorted the girl to a nearby millinery shop and ordered the slit sewed up. He called a carriage and sent the girl home. Then he chased the crowd away.

Summary of Weekly Weather Is Bullish

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—There were small areas with more than 2 inches of rainfall in some of the central and eastern cotton-growing States. The greatest weekly precipitation, 4.43 inches, occurred at New Orleans, and there was 4.20 inches at Rome, Ga. Mean temperatures were above normal, except that there was a deficiency in the central and eastern portions of North Carolina, Northeastern South Carolina, Southern Georgia, the central portion of Northern Florida, the greater portion of Louisiana and the extreme southeastern portion of Eastern Texas.

The greatest excess in temperatures was 7 to 9 degrees in Oklahoma and Northwestern Arkansas. The deficiencies in temperatures were slight.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 72 to 82 degrees over the eastern, from 80 to 84 degrees over the central, and from 82 to 86 degrees over the western portion of the cotton region. The lowest mean temperature, 72 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 86, occurred in Oklahoma, Northwestern Arkansas and Northern and Western Texas. The precipitation was light over the greater portion of the cotton region, and there was considerable areas in the western portion and small areas in other portions where there was no precipitation.

By states:

Georgia — Temperatures continued above the normal, but weather was cooler toward the close of the week. Light showers occurred from the 14th to 16th, but the amounts were irregularly distributed and below normal. The sunshine was ample and conditions were generally favorable.

Mississippi—The mean temperature averaged slightly above normal. Showers occurred every day except Sunday, but mostly in the southern portion. The rainfall is still insufficient at many points in the northern and central portions of the State. Sunshine was ample.

Arkansas—Weather was moderately warm in the eastern, but unusually hot in the western district. Sunshine was above normal. Light, scattered and beneficial showers occurred over 50 per cent of the State, but rain is needed in some localities.

Texas—Temperatures were moderate along the coast, but exceeded the normal elsewhere. Local showers occurred on several days, three-fifths of the reporting stations receiving moisture. Good amounts of precipitation occurred in several of the central and southern counties, but elsewhere the amounts were too light to be of much benefit, and more rain is needed. The sunshine was abundant.

Oklahoma—Weather was intensely hot during the week. Scattered thundershowers which occurred did not relieve the serious drouth.

Alabama—The temperature averaged 2 to 5 degrees above normal during the first and middle parts of the week and was nearly normal at the close of the week. Widely scattered showers occurred, but the precipitation was unevenly distributed and generally there was a considerable deficiency. There was no rain at many stations. Sunshine was abundant.

South Carolina—Nearly normal temperature and sunshine prevailed. More rain over the greater portion of the State would be beneficial.

North Carolina—The temperature was below normal in the eastern and slightly above in the western portion of the State. Day temperatures were moderate and the nights cool. Cloudy and showery weather prevailed in the first three days, followed by clear the remainder of the week, except that light showers occurred throughout the week in the extreme western portion of the Stat. Sun ample.

Tennessee—High temperatures continued. The weather was generally fair, except that scattered showers relieved drouthy conditions in a few localities. Rain is needed generally.

Florida—Showers occurred almost daily, being locally heavy in portions of the peninsula. The rainfall was fairly well distributed, except in some of the east coast counties, where drouth prevailed. Temperature was near normal.

BULLS IN CONTROL OF COTTON REINS

Liverpool and Shorts Big Buyers on Western Weather Conditions—Bears Cautious.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Cables from Liverpool were surprisingly strong today, with the result that prices were 5 to 15 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. The Mexican "war scare" did not result in any pressure. This, coupled with the absence of rains in the western belt of any consequence and the Dallas wire of hot and clear weather, encouraged sufficient buying to send prices still higher. Trading was active and shorts appeared to be nervous over prospects for a bullish weekly crop report covering Texas and Oklahoma.

The feeling is still more bullish in the absence of rains in the western belt and the bull forces were inclined to predict higher prices. Liverpool was said to be a good buyer in this market; also spot interests.

During the forenoon the market displayed an inflexible tone. Offerings were extremely light and scattered, resulting in prices increasing the advance 12 to 16 points from the previous close. August at the opening showed the largest gain, but later settled around 11.67, against an opening of 11.70.

The detailed weather for Texas and the weekly weather report, which was construed as bullish brought out buying and a few points rally followed. Those who are advocating the bull side are advising friends to buy at the present level.

The bearish element are awaiting further developments in the western belt and as soon as there are signs of good rains it is very likely there will be some good selling.

At the close the market was steady, with prices at a net advance of 5 to 20 points from the closing quotations of Monday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: August, 11.66; October, 11.17; December, 11.10; January, 10.99; March, 11.06.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: August, 11.67; October, 11.18; December, 11.16; January, 11.17; March, 11.24.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 19.—The map shows a rather general rainfall over the southern half of Texas during the past 24 hours, but generally light, except at Beeville and Luling. None in the northern half or in Oklahoma; part cloudy in southern Arkansas, west Tennessee and the Texas coast. Generally fair elsewhere; no rain. Indications are for part cloudy with probably some scattered showers in the Western States; cooler in the northern half of the belt; generally fair weather with moderate temperatures over the eastern half of the belt is favorable, as an excess of rain was feared.

Liverpool came in stronger than expected and quoted spots 4 points higher; sales, 8,000 bales. Cables report Russia and the continent buying. Political news is less favorable. London says that a third war in the Balkans seems near, as Turkey is apparently making preparations to move against Bulgaria.

Galveston freight people report an excess of steamer room over the demand, and room engaged during the summer being relet, offered or to let as the demand is not up to anticipations. This is confirmed in a way by the Galveston and Houston receipts being lighter than last year, particularly to-day, although picking and ginning are known to be in active operation over a large part of Texas.

Our market opened about 10 points higher and ruled quiet but steady at the advance, waiting for the weekly weather reports, which is epected will be unfavorable on the Western States. Unfavorable reports on north Texas and Oklahoma, owing to insufficient rainfall, are also expected in the next few days from parties who are now traveling in that section to inspect the crop, and the opinion has generally settled to the anticipation of a bullish September bureau showing 4 to 6 points decline in conditions.

BETTER TRADE IN DRY GOODS THIS YEAR THAN YEAR AGO

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

Buyers have been in the dry goods market this week in much larger numbers than during the same period a year ago. Merchants are ordering forward their fall lines and filling in their stocks thoughout all departments. Buying has proceeded with precaution in individual cases, but retailers generally are so much in need of merchandise for immediate requirements, that the total volume of shipments is keeping up remarkably well.

"Much needed rains have brightened the prospects for a good fall business in a large portion of the territory that was feeling the drouth.

"Silks are a big item of the trade at present and practically all buyers in the market are placing orders for this class of merchandise in liberal quantities.

"Judging from the extraordinary demand that has developed and in view of the serious labor troubles that have prevailed for some time in the silk industry, there will be a scarcity of all kinds of silks before the season is far advanced.

"The sale of black silks has improved greatly within the last few weeks.

COTTON GOSSIP

Liverpool is said to be a good buyer. Mitchell, Riordan and Cone were probably the best buyers on the call. Cone is said to be buying for McFadden. There was no rains shown on the map in the western belt of any consequence.

* * *

New Orleans wires: "Freight people report more room at Galveston than there is demand for."

* * *

Greenwod, Miss., reports first new cotton bale of the season to-day, coming from LaFlore County.

* * *

Beeville, Texas, says good rains fell there yesterday, the best since the drouth started.

* * *

Texas rainfall: Austin, .30; Beeville, .82; Brownwood, .10; Columbus, .06; Guero, .04; Galveston, .08; Houston, .01; Kerrville, .04; Luling, 1.64; Pierce, .06; San Antonio, .10; Taylor, .28.

Liverpool cables: "Advanced on buying by complaint, chiefly Russian account. Small market and poor demand for spots."

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma, clear and hot."

* * *

Rains: Taylor, Texas, .28; San Antonio, .10; Galveston, .08; Houston, .01, past twenty-four hours.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 19.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows partly cloudy in Southern Arkansas, West Tennessee and Texas coast. Generally fair elsewhere. Lighter but rather general precipitation over southern half of Texas. None shown by the map in the Northern half, or Oklahoma. Indications are for partly cloudy to further showers over the western States; also Arkansas and Tennessee. Cooler weather generally in northern half of the belt.

* * *

Report here from Galveston freight agents says freight room engaged during summer is being relet, owing to demand for shipments not being up to expectations.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Showers fell in Texas and Oklahoma Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and while general good rains are needed, the general sentiment now conceived that some relief has come to the drouth-affected areas. This, in conjunction with the favorable crop reports received from Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and the Carolinas, caused the cotton market to ease off a bit. Oklahoma now seems to be in worse condition than any of the cotton-growing States, as a result of long continued dry weather.

"Texas, on the other hand, has suffered in part only, and certain sections there seem to be doing very well. Texans themselves say the boll weevil has done some damage in the southwestern portion of the State, but the recent dry weather has put an end to the progress of such damage on the west. The chronic crop killer seems to have failed in his attempts to reduce the crop promise to relatively small provisions, and for this reason the talk is now talking big crop and moderate trade prospects with a great deal of energy. In all of which demand for distant delivery and the causes thereof are playing a leading role. No general rains are in sight, but the weather bureau promises normal temperatures and showers during the next six days, from which the west may derive some further relief in the near future."

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: We favor sales on all moderate advances under existing conditions.

A. Norden & Co.: We believe that higher prices will be seen in due course.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: While so large a crop seems assured, few are willing to attempt a bull speculation when the whole crop is soon to be for sale.

Miller & Co.: We continue our advices to sell December cotton.

Georgia—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Virginia—Unsettled, local showers to-night or Wednesday; cooler in north portion to-night.

North Carolina and South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Florida—Generally fair in north, showers in south portion to-night or Wednesday.

WAR SCARE NOT FELT IN STREET

Market Ruled Dull but Steady. Early Reaction Retrieved by Good Absorption.

By CHAS. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—As a result of the report from Mexico City that President Huerta had delivered an ultimatum to the United States which might result in war, the stock market was very weak at the opening to-day and prices were lower.

United States common declined 1¼. Canadian Pacific slumped to 217½ for a loss of 2½ points. Reading declined to 153¾, for the loss of 1⅛. Mexican Petroleum was under pressure, yielding 1 point. Union Pacific lost 1⅛. Northern Pacific shaded 1.

The selling at the start was general. Investors as well as speculators seemed to be dumping their holdings. At the end of 45 minutes a better tone prevailed, as Washington dispatches seemed to put a more optimistic complexion on the Mexican situation.

Among the other losses were Amalgamated Copper ¾, Chesapeake and Ohio ⅝, Chino Copper ⅝, Erie ½, Pennsylvania Railroad ⅝.

Americans in London were under pressure and were weak and irregular. American dispatches received in London before the opening of the New York market causer heavy selling of United States securities.

The situation between Mexico and this government attracted attention and for a time exercised a disturbing influence with many of the important stocks sustaining further losses.

Copper declined ⅝, selling at 73¼. Union Pacific also declined ¾, and the other railways were on the declining side. Reading unchanged; other issues down from a fraction to over a point At the close of the forenoon the tone became steadier. Call money loaned at 2¼.

Stocks in the last hour generally sold under the opening. Amalgamated Copper lost 2⅛ on the day, while Steel was 1¼ under Monday's final. Reading held comparatively firm, selling around 160. Pennsylvania Railroad was under pressure, falling to 111 for the loss of 2¼ on the day. Southern Pacific sold at 91⅝, where it had ruled nearly all day. The tone was depressed.

The market closed dull.

Government bonds unchanged. Other bonds firm.

Occasionally "Capital" Discovers That "Labor" Really Is a Factor in National Life.

One Big City, Looking Around for 8,000 Vanished Mechanics, Makes the Discovery Just at Present.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Chicago had a lockout of workmen in the building trades.

It was decided by those engaged in building that something must be done, and so all building was stopped for a while, builders agreeing to stand the loss in order to carry their point.

Finally building was resumed and something strange and surprising happened. IT WAS DISCOVERED THAT 8,000 BUILDING MECHANICS WERE MISSING IN CHICAGO.

And the builders, anxious to rush through the work that had been delayed during the lockout, did not know exactly WHERE to get the eight thousand mechanics.

Those eight thousand mechanics had not been sitting around waiting for the lockout to end, but had gone to other cities and engaged in other occupations.

This discovery is useful, since it makes clear the fact that in this country and in its enterprises organized labor actually plays a part that is not to be disregarded.

The builders discover that their architects, their draftsmen, their enterprise and their MONEY amount to very little if they haven't got THE WORKERS TO MAKE REALITIES OF THE IDEAS, THE PLANS, THE ENTERPRISE AND THE MONEY.

Perhaps it is a good thing to have the eight thousand mechanics missing for a little while, just to teach the gentlemen who occasionally imagine that they are the entire nation that they wouldn't be very much more important than Robinson Crusoe on his island if they didn't have the workmen with them.

The absence of these mechanics is also interesting as demonstrating the value of labor unions that keep an organized body of workers ready to do the skilled work of the country upon demand.

The country has grown too big for the old system under which both labor and capital were disorganized, with the capitalist, when the mood seized him, deciding to build something, going out looking for isolated workers, gathering them together and putting them to building.

To-day capital is organized AND OUGHT TO BE ORGANIZED UNDER PUBLIC CONTROL AND REASONABLE CONDITIONS.

And labor is organized and ought to be organized, also under public control and reasonable conditions.

The Chicago lesson teaches that if labor were NOT organized, if the unions did not, by demanding fair wages and fair hours, limiting apprentices and preventing oversupply, regulate conditions, the labor market would be chaotic and the great operations of this day impossible.

If the lack of mechanics in Chicago teaches capital the importance of labor and teaches also the important fact that organized labor makes great building and manufacturing possible, the hardship of the Chicago lockout will not have been endured entirely in vain.

I.

WE cannot choose our sorrows. One there was,
Who, reverent of soul, and strong with trust,
Cried, "God, though Thou shouldst bow me to the dust,
Yet will I praise thy everlasting laws.
Beggared, my faith would never halt or pause;
But sing thy glory, feasting on a crust.
Only one boon, one precious boon I must
Demand of Thee, oh, opulent great Cause.
Let Love stay with me, Constant to the end,
Though fame pass by and poverty pursue.
With freighted hold, her life ship onward sailed;
The world gave wealth, and pleasure, and a friend,
Unmarred by envy, and whose heart was true.
But ere the sun reached midday, Love had failed."

II.

Then from the depths, in bitterness she cried,
"Hell is on earth, and heaven is but a dream:
And human life a troubled aimless stream;
And God is nowhere. Would God so deride
A loving creature's faith?" A voice replied,
"The stream flows onward to the Source Supreme;
Where things that ARE replace the things that SEEM;
And where the deeds of all past lives abide.
Once at thy door, Love languished and was spurned,
Who sorrow plants, must garner sorrow's sheaf.
No prayers can change the seedling in the sod.
By thine own heart, Love's anguish must be learned.
Pass on, and know, as one made wise by grief,
That in thyself dwells heaven and hell and God."

Winifred Black Writes on Elderly Flirts

They Haunt the Summer Resorts, She Says, Like Some Kind of Ghosts and They Are Dreadfully Silly.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

THEY'RE here—in full force—the elderly flirts. I met two of them down at the Springs just now.

The first elderly flirt was a man, forty-five if he was a day; straggling along behind his good, comfy, kindly, middle-aged wife—making eyes at every girl of twenty or so he met.

I walked behind him and heard the girls—after they had passed.

I really wish he could have heard them; he would have been edified.

The Girls Know Him.

"Here's father again," said one pretty thing in pink. "Oh, do look, he'll get cross-eyed, he ogles so."

"I heard him calling the telephone girl 'honey' at the hotel this morning," said a sweet sister in blue, "and you should have seen the face she made when he turned the other way."

"Father certainly is a giddy old thing," said the prettiest of all, in mauve. "I saw him holding hands with teacher, the one with the glasses, out on the porch just at sunset.

"Quoting poetry, too; and his wife came round the corner. I felt so sorry for her, I couldn't bear to look at her."

"Here he is," said the sportive widow to her escort. "Grandpa Googoo Eyes. I met him with his little girl this morning and he stopped talking to her and made an excuse to ask me the way somewhere. You ought to see the way he takes off his hat, ugh—he makes me shudder."

"Grandpa Googoo Eyes."

"Grandpa Googoo Eyes"—not a pretty name, is it, Mr. Elderly Flirt? Yet that is what they call you, the young things you try so hard to impress.

"Grandpa Googoo Eyes," and yet you are not a grandpa at all, only a pa—and not a day over forty-five at the most—but, oh, you do look so elderly to the girls you so much admire—and your jokes are so elderly, too, and your compliments and the sweet, clever things you try so hard to say—can't you see how they laugh at you, all but those who want you to give them something—something that costs more money than young Romeo can afford.

Can't you see how sorry they are for the good, sweet woman who gave up everything else in the world to be your wife—poor silly elderly flirt, you—and the wife—do you think she doesn't know? Do you imagine that she is so used to your artless little ways by this time that it doesn't stab her to the faithful heart to hear the girls make fun of you? Oh, yes, she hears them—trust her for that. She hears everything, sees everything that concerns you—for she loved you once and she never can get over that.

Your First Flirtation.

Now she looks upon you with a kind of contemptuous pity, a sort of kindly forgiveness now; what else can she do?

She looks older than you—she knows that; knows it in every beat of her heart, in every line of her tired face. She has borne you children. See that line by the sensitive mouth—that came when the boy was so ill. That wrinkle there by the eyes—that was when you were ill and she worried so about you.

The hair there on the temples—it was your first flirtation, that you thought she never even heard of, brought that. Don't you remember that summer when the second baby was so little and so delicate, she couldn't go out much, and you—but rest assured she heard. There is always someone to tell. You have cut those lines on a sensitive face—you and no other—none but you—and everyone who sees you together sees it and pities her for being married to one so shallow-hearted, so cruelly light of mind as you, Mr. Elderly Flirt.

There's your sister there—in the shadows behind you—painted, made up, bedizened. How old is the boy she has in tow? Not an hour over twenty-two, if faces tell anything like the truth. She'll get him out into the moonlight and make a fool of him and the nice girl will cry her eyes out about it.

Poorly elderly flirt—what a sorry thing she is—even when she is married and makes a fool of her husband as well as of herself.

Tries to Look Young.

She tries so pitifully hard to look young—hark, what an imitation giggle it is that she gives. Be careful, those high heels were never meant for a charmer over forty. You'll slip, beautiful lady, you'll slip, and what a time you'll have getting up again. Oh, why don't you give it all up once and for all, Elderly Flirt, in petticoats too short and slippers too tight for elderly comfort—let it all slip, the silly game you have played so long.

The girls there behind you—they do the thing much better; they do really—and how about the decent, kindly, honest man who pays your bills and sends you away to have a good time? It isn't fair; honestly it isn't—it isn't the square deal. He works so hard and is so proud of you—why can't you pretend to be halfway decent—just for his sake—at your age?

The Elderly Flirts—they haunt the summer resorts like some kind of forlorn ghosts.

An Opportunity for Women

There Never Was a Time, He Says, When the Need for Women to Become Wise Was So Great as It Is Now.

By ELBERT HUBBARD

A CERTAIN California Bishop was at first opposed to woman suffrage.

Next he investigated it.

Then he saw it was coming.

It came.

Now he gives instruction to the women of his bishopric. It is something like this:

"Inform yourselves thoroughly on all questions of state. You are entering into grave responsibilities, that of free citizens. Inform yourselves, be wise in what you do."

This is advice that a wise father should give to his children.

There was never a time when the need for women to become wise was so great as it is now. Their rights, personal, political, commercial, involve a concomitant responsibility.

When we were children we used to think how glorious it would be when we were grown up. Then we would have the privilege of staying out at night as long as we chose, and of doing what we pleased all day long.

Self-Control.

But when we became men we realized that there was a limit to the hours of the night, also to our capacity to keep awake, that in order to be able to "have a good time," a man must control himself.

Every privilege is bounded by responsibilities which have to be carried in order to make the privilege possible.

That is all any human being has—opportunity.

The opportunity for suffrage and personal rights has not come easily to women. They have worked until they have quite an understanding of the rights that they want and the privileges that have been denied them.

Civic Research Clubs.

In most of the States where suffrage has been granted, the Woman Suffrage clubs have been turned into Civic Research clubs. Women are bringing politically unprejudiced minds to bear on political situations and their new privileges. Their actions, as a rule, are decided by this test, "Is it right or is it wrong." Women whose actions are not influenced by right and wrong are taking very little interest in the woman suffrage movement.

The Reverend Mabel M. Irwin, a Universalist minister, gives out a well-timed warning to women. She urges them to make no mistakes in using the newly acquired privilege of their natural rights. She eloquently urges them to use their power to develop a better, nobler race.

Mabel M. Irwin affirms that women have not been shirking the burden of motherhood, but the bondage of motherhood. When women have the rights of free citizens this bondage will be removed. Then there will be the joyous laughter, the patter of little feet that makes perennial youth.

English Women's Demands.

Beatrice Harraden, the English author, in a recent number of Votes for Women, expresses a clear understanding of how vital to the Englishwomen is the cause of woman suffrage.

If there were only a few women engaged in this movement we might think it was only a dream of fair women. But when fishwives, tinplate workers, weavers, tailoresses, upholsteresses, laundresses, charwomen, ropemakers, shop assistants, nurses, teachers and sweatshop workers unite in the demand for suffrage as equals with the women of nobility, there is something very vital in the movement. It means that these women are stirred into action by a primitive instinct.

Women and Statesmen.

Recently a deputation of women from every walk in life spoke eloquently to Mr. Lloyd George and his colleagues. Many of them had never before made a speech. They were unlettered, hard-working women, moved to eloquence by a cause.

Miss Harraden says the women impressed the statesmen though the statesmen did not impress the women. Their cloaks and trappings of office meant nothing to these women, demanding the privilege to exercise their inherent right of freedom.

When women who toil with their hands join with nobility, and all are made equal by the cause which is moving them, it is time that the Englishmen recognized that it is an inherent, natural right that women are demanding.

The Battle of the Nile

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE Battle of the Nile, Nelson's greatest victory, and one of the most remarkable naval fights known to history, came off one hundred and fifteen years ago—August 1, 1798.

In May, 1798, Nelson, now in independent command, was dispatched by his Government to intercept the great French armament which was intended to reach Egypt and threaten India. Napoleon had vast ideas in his head, and he hoped by means of this armament to materialize them in the shape of a great Oriental Empire.

Coming up with the French fleet in the roads of Aboukir, Nelson lost no time in getting ready for action. With sublime audacity, and in defiance of all the then recognized rules of sea fighting, he ordered part of his fleet to get in between the French ships and the shore, while with the other part he attached from the side of the open sea. Assailed from front and rear, the French were taken at a great disadvantage, and though they fought with a splendid courage, there was never a moment when the issue of the battle was in doubt. The genius, audacity, quickness of the little English Admiral were too much for them, and of the thirteen French battleships only two escaped.

The French ought to have won the day. Their vessels were equal in number to those of the English (13 on each side), and were in size and caliber much superior to them, the British "seventy-fours" being no match for the new and magnificent French "eighties." But the French had no Nelson, and that fact explains it all.

Two or three very important things were settled by Nelson's brilliant victory at the Battle of the Nile. It settled the fact that England's navy was supreme, invincible. It settled the fact that the long cherished idea of a French invasion of England was never to be realized. And finally it settled the fact that Napoleon's visions of a mighty empire in Egypt and Syria, and possibly in India, were to go up in smoke. There was nothing to hinder Napoleon from making himself Emperor of France, and, for a time, dictator of Continental Europe, but the way in which Nelson smashed the great armament off the roads of Aboukir convinced every sensible man in France that the First Consul could never become master of the East. To do that he needed, first, the mastery of the Mediterranean, and the little Admiral had demonstrated such mastery was out of the question.

DORSEY HAMMERS AWAY AT DEFENSE

Hits Cook's Denial of Affidavit Against Frank

THAW HELD IN CANADA; TO FIGHT

Admits His Identity and Asks "Now, What Are You Going to Do About It?"

SHERBROOK, Que., Aug. 19.—Harry K. Thaw, wha escaped from Matteawan assylum Sunday and was arrested in Coaticook to-day, was transferred to the Sherbrooke jail this afternoon.

Thaw has retained W. L. Shurtleff, one of the best known lawyers in Eastern Canada and one of the most sensational international legal fights in Canadian history is expected.

The United States Government will be represented by Heeter Verret, K. C.

Thaw may be deported as a maniac upon request of the New York authorities, according to the opinions of Canadian official.

No sooner was Thaw brought here than he began to realize the seriousness of his predicament, and he began to bombard various sections of the United State with messages. He notified his family at Cresson, Pa., of his arrest and received word that representatives of the family were starting at once for Sherbrooke. It is understood that Mrs. Mary Thaw, the aged mother of the fugutive, will come here.

Thaw will not discuss his movements since he got away from the New York institution Sunday morning, except to say that he boarded a train east of Boston. He said he was making for the coast and planned to sail for Europe.

Thaw was accompanied here by two men, one heavily built and the other slight and both smooth shaven.

Recognized on Train.

Deputy Sheriff Burleigh Kelsey, of Colebrook, recognized Thaw on a train bound for Canada. Kelsey got off at Colebrook, got an automobile and after a chase of almost 20 miles overtook Thaw with two companions in Coaticook. They had left the train at Beecher Falls and driven across the border into Canada.

Kelsey notified the Coaticook police and kept on their trail. Thaw, when arrested, made no resistance and to-day will be lodged in the jail at Sherbrooke, Quebec.

Kelsey was on his way home to Colebrook after a trip South and was reading a paper when a stranger came from a few seats down the aisle in the smoking car and asked for a match. The Deputy Sheriff was reading the story of Thaw's escaping in the paper and a picture of Thaw stared up from the paper. He looked at the stranger and saw that the likeness at once resembled the stranger.

The stranger at once noticed the stare and said: "What's the matter? Do you think you know who I am?"

"I could make a pretty good guess," said Kelsey.

"Well, who am I then?" the stranger demanded.

"I think you are Harry K. Thaw."

Kelsey said the stranger laughed uneasily and then said blandly, "Well, you are right. I am Thaw. But you don't want me. You couldn't do anything to me if you wanted to. They have acquitted me of murder and you can't extradite me."

"Where are you bound for?" Kelsey asked.

"Canada," the man answered.

Pursues Him in Auto.

Kelsey picked up his paper again and the man who had declared he was Thaw went back to his seat with the match he had come to get. Deputy Sheriff Kelsey got off the train here. Then he found L. W. Barbour and Warner Drew and they decided to chase the party.

They got an automobile and made a quick run to Beecher Falls, the next station, just south of the Canadian line. There Kelsey made inquiries and found that three men answering the description of the three he had

Sulzer Holds Fort, Ignoring Ruling of Attorney General

ALBANY, Aug. 19.—Unaffected by the opinion of Attorney General Carmody who held that Martin Glynn legally is Governor of New York, William Sulzer occupied his office in the executive chamber this morning as usual. He came to the capitol at the usual time and took up the morning mail.

Chester C. Platt, his private secretary, announced that Mr. Sulzer still regarded himself as the legal Governor.

"We knew what the opinion of the Attorney General would be before it came out," he said

Lieutenant Governor Glynn prepared to take his fight into the halls of the Legislature to-day.

Blackjack Wielder Held for Grand Jury

W. K. Dunn, arrested for drawing a blackjack on a newsboy, was held in $500 bond Tuesday for Grand Jury action by Acting Recorder Preston. Dunn was held for assault and battery and assault with intent to murder.

Dunn got into a fight with little Isadore Kulbersh, 12 years old, and Bill Krell, another newsie, who went to his small partner's aid. "Kid" Young, who has appeared in the local prize ring, tried to act as peacemaker after Dunn had pulled a blackjack, and all four were served with charges. The cases against the youths were dismissed.

DENY REPORT OF MEXICAN WAR MOVE

American Charge Wires State Department That He Has Not Been Given Passports.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The White House to-day received a dispatch from Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy absolutely denying press dispatches to the effect that he had been given his passports by the Mexican Government or that an ultimatum of any kind had been given to him by Huerta.

The telegram from O'Shaughnessy is explicit on both of these points, and indicates that the situation has not been changed in any way except that a formal and diplomatic reply to the Lind proposals was transmitted to O'Shaughnessy yesterday by the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, Frederic Gamboa. The tenor of this reply probably will be made public at the White House later in the day.

In his telegram to Secretary Bryan, Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy relates the circumstances leading up to the transmission of the Huerta reply to the mediation proposals, which Lind carried from President Wilson to Mexico, and declares that nothing had indicated that they were in any way offensive to the Mexican Government.

Found Reports Were False.

He made a trip to the Mexican Foreign Office late last night to ascertain the truth of rumors that he was about to be given his passports, and that Mexico had demanded recognition from the American Government by last midnight.

He found these reports unfounded and spread the news among the members of the American colony in Mexico City. The population seemed to take it for granted that Huerta was about to make the desperate play which he long had threatened.

Secretary Bryan to-day denied that the State Department had received any ultimatum from Mexico concerning recognition of the Huerta government by any stated time, or that Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy had been given his passports and told to leave Mexico.

The State Department was informed to-day by Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy that Senor Gamboa, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has denied the statement made by Senor Urrutia, Minister of the Interior, concerning the reported ultimatum, and it is believed here that the outlook for a peaceful settlement of the troubles between the two nations is more promising at the present time than it has been in the past fortnight.

Wild Rumor Laid to Cabinet.

Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy, in his telegram to the State Department to-day, reported that President Huerta and Envoy Lind were conferring concerning the final settlement of the difficulties between the two countries. While he did not comment on the situation beyond giving a bare report of the fact, Mr. O'Shaughnessy strongly indicated that he hoped for a peaceful settlement and that the next 48 hours probably would bring developments leading to a compact between the United States and Mexico.

It is believed at the State Department that the sensational reports emanating from Mexico City last night were inspired by the Huerta Cabinet.

Kentuckians Fight Duel; One Is Dead

HENDERSON, KY., Aug. 19.—Coleman Davis to-day was believed to be dying from two bullet wounds, and William Steinwach was slightly hurt as the result of a revolver duel. The two men quarreled and arranged a peaceful meeting to settle their difficulties. As soon as they met each man drew his revolver and began firing.

PONCE DELEON BALL PARK, Aug. 19.—Dent's wild throw in the first inning helped the Barons to one run. The Cracker hurler then settled down and pitched good ball.

Foxen was Molesworth's selection to oppose the locals. Tommy Long was back in left field.

FIRST INNING.

Marcan hit in front of the plate and beat it out for a hit. When Dent threw wild to first Marcan reached second. Messenger bunted to Dent and Marcan was caught at third to Holland. Messenger stole second. McDonald drew four wide ones and ambled to the initial sack. Kniseley slambed a one-timer to center and Messenger tallied. McBride fanned. Mayer also was set down on strikes. TWO HITS, ONE RUN.

Agler hoisted a long fly to Kniseley. Long was disposed of by Ellam and McGilvray. Welchonce was easy for Foxen and McGilvray. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

McGilvray lofted a tall one to Long. Ellam drew free transportation to first. Foxen did the Casey act. Ellam stole second and when Chapman heaved the ball to center field Ellam reached third. Smith scooped up Marcan's grass-cutter and threw the Birmingham second-sacker out at first. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Smith popped to Ellam. Bisland found one to his liking and poled it to the left garden for a single. Holland's short fly was easy for Kniseley. Calvo forced Bisland at second, Ellam to Marcan. ONE HIT, ONE RUN.

THIRD INNING.

Messenger went out over the Bisland-Agler route. McDonald out, Dent to Agler. Kniseley struck out. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Chapman ballooned to Kniseley. Dent walked. Agler singled to center and Dent took second. Long was patient and was awarded with a free pass, and the bases were intoxicated. Harry Welchonce's best was a grounder to Ellam and Dent was forced at the home plate to Mayer. Smith ended the inning by striking out. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

FOURTH INNING.

McBride went out, Bisland to Agler. Mayer lined to Bisland, who let the ball go through him for an error. McGilvray drew four wide ones and beat it to Agler's cushion. Ellam walked, filling the bases. Foxen hit a sacrifice fly to Calvo and Mayer scored. Marcan filed to Calvo. NO HITS, ONE RUN.

GOVERNOR WILL SIGN BILL FOR GIRLS' HOME

Governor John M. Slaton said Tuesday afternoon that he will sign the bill providing for a home for wayward girls, which carries with it an appropriation of $20,000.

A rumor that Governor Slaton intended to veto the bill, not because he opposed the proposed home, but because it meant an additional drain upon the meager revenues of the State, had been in circulation since the last night of the General Assembly.

Leaders in the House and Senate told newspaper men at that time, fifteen minutes after the measure had been passed as amended by the Senate, that they had it on good authority that Governor Slaton would veto the bill.

Advocates Were Aroused.

The report gained strength the last few days and aroused those eager for the establishment of the home.

No less than 75 telegrams came to Governor Slaton's office Tuesday morning from individuals and organizations all over the State asking him to affix his signature and make the measure a law.

Originally the bill establishing the home carried an appropriation of $30,000, and in that shape it passed the House. The Senate, however, cut $10,000 from the amount, and in the final night session the House concurred in the Senate amendment.

Lack of Revenue Cited.

An increase in the tax returns of $4,000,000 would be necessary to pay the appropriation embodied in the bill. This increase, it appears, is not to be forthcoming. That was advanced as the basis of the report that Governor Slaton would veto the bill.

$10,823,080 IS GAIN IN FULTON TAXABLES

The Fulton County tax digest, just completed by County Tax Receiver T. M. Armistead, was made public Tuesday, and it shows the tremendous net increase in taxables of $10,823,080. The total returns for the fiscal year amounted to $122,198,115, as compared with $111,375,035 for 1912.

The largest increase in any one item was that of city real estate, which showed an increase over last year of $9,043,235. The returns from city real estate this year amounted to $81,023,490. Increases in other items were not so noticeable, and in many instances a decided decrease was noted.

Poll tax returns amounted to $13,849, as compared with $13,967 for last year. The returns from bank shares amounted to $6,817,075, compared with $6,800,650 for 1912. Stocks and bonds returns showed an increase of $539,535. Money, notes and accounts returns were $10,358,175, as compared with $9,322,610 in 1912.

Merchandise returns were $8,915,400, compared with $8,727,770 last year. The automobile returns, as expected, showed a gain, going up to $522,160, compared with $501,090. Tax returns in the county from manufacturers, cotton and wool plants, etc., were $4,262,745, compared with $4,309,795 for 1912, showing a decrease of $47,050.

County real estate returns amounted to $4,708,462, compared with $4,731,375 for 1912, a decrease of $22,913. Capital in mining property returns were $3,350, as compared with $100 in 1912. Returns from furniture totaled $2,934,525, compared with $2,987,445 for 1912. Jewelry returns amounted to $224,430, compared with $232,380 last year, a decrease of $12,040.

2 WITNESSES SWEAR NEGRESS' STATEMENT WAS MADE WILLINGLY

Here are the important developments Tuesday in the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan:

Judge Roan rules out all testimony bearing on particular acts of immorality which the State has been endeavoring to prove against the defendant.

Will Turner, former pencil factory employee, testifies he entered the metal room shortly before noon one day near the middle of March and saw Frank seeking to engage Mary Phagan in conversation. He says he cannot recall any other person he (Turner) knew in the factory.

Solicitor Dorsey devotes large part of forenoon in an endeavor to bolster the character of C. B. Dalton, a State's witness, and tear down that of Miss Daisy Hopkins, who was called by the defense.

George Gordon, called by the Solicitor, swears that the sensational affidavit of Minola McKnight, negro cook at the Selig home, was signed in his absence and that Solicitor Dorsey refused to order her release, saying he "would get in bad with the detectives" if he did.

Roy Craven and E. H. Pickett, hardware store employees, testified Minola McKnight, cook in nthe Selig home, made the affidavit revealing incriminating remarks and actions of Frank without reserve.

Roy Craven, one of the Beck & Gregg Hardware employees, who assisted the police in obtaining the sensational affidavit from Minola McKnight, negro cook at the Selig home, declared on the stand in the Frank trial Tuesday afternoon that the McKnight woman made her statements against Frank of her own accord and without reserve, once she had been persuaded it was best to tell what the State says is the whole truth.

Craven said the McKnight woman told him that she had heard conversations at the Selig home Sunday morning following the murder of Mary Phagan, indicating that Frank had rested poorly and had come home intoxicated, making his wife sleep on the floor. He had asked his wife for a revolver to shoot himself, the McKnight woman said, according to Craven. Frank also was reported to have remarked that he "didn't know why he would murder."

E. H. Pickett, a fellow employee of Craven's, corroborated the latter's story and added that the McKnight woman had admitted getting more money after the murder than she had before.

Both Pickett and Craven were sharply questioned by Attorney Rosser, who sought to show that Minola signed the statement to obtain her freedom from jail.

Dr. S. C. Benedict, president of the State Board of Health, was called at the opening of the afternoon to show that charges of scientific dishonesty against Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the board, never were found to be well founded. Dr. W. F. Westmoreland asserted on the stand that Dr. Harris had been found guilty of the charges.

By far the most damaging testimony brought out against Frank was that of Will Turner, who testified that he had entered the metal room and come upon Frank seeking to press his attentions upon the Phagan girl only a few weeks before the crime.

When Turner was put under the raking fire of Luther Rosser's cross-examination, the weight of his testimony suffered considerably. The youth, who admitted he had worked at the factory only a brief time, was unable to describe Mary Phagan and was unable to tell the name of any other girl in the entire factory.

"I went into the rear room on the second floor one day with some pencils," said Turner. "It was about the middle of March. Frank was walking from his office toward the rear of the factory. Mary Phagan was coming toward her machine. He told her to wait a minute, that he wanted to talk to her. She said she had to go to work.

"He said: 'I'm superintendent of the pencil factory and I want to talk to you.' She repeated that she had to go to work and he followed her as she backed away from him. A couple of girls came into the room and I asked them where to put the pencils and then I left. I didn't see any more."

On cross-examination young Turner admitted he did not know whether there were other girls around at the time or not. He did not know the names of the two girls, he said, who entered the room while Frank was trying to talk to Mary Phagan. The extent of his description of Mary Phagan was that she had light hair. The question of the admissibility of this evidence caused a long wrangle between the attorneys.

Rosser and Arnold objected on the ground that it was not at all material, proving absolutely nothing. They denied Dorsey's contention that it established that Frank had known Mary Phagan, in spite of his declarations that he did not know her. The lawyers said that it did not show that he knew her by name or that he was conversing with her on any other subject than her work.

Charges It Was First Step to Murder.

"We contend that Mary Phagan was killed right on that second floor," retorted the Solicitor. "We contend that Mary Phagan and Frank were the only persons in the metal department at the time that this incident took

LEO FRANK SKETCHED AS HE TOLD HIS OWN STORY TO JURY

During the greater part of his story Frank was as calm and statistical as an accountant discussing an audit.

In telling of his dealings with the police and Chief of Detectives Lanford, Frank waxed sarcastic in a quiet yet bitter way. But he never let loose his emotion or lost his poise.

At times Frank would lose his air of complete repression and his face for a moment would take on an aspect of deep feeling. He would, however, quickly resume his normal expression of stoicism.

place, and that she was backing away and protesting that she had to go back to work. We contend that it was the beginning of the transaction which ended in the little girl's death. It should go in as contradicting Frank's statement that he did not know her."

Turner was allowed to tell his story.

That Solicitor Dorsey refused to take any step toward the liberation of Minola McKnight, cook at the Selig home, who was imprisoned until she made her sensational affidavit against Frank, on the ground that it would "get him in bad with the detectives," was the unexpected and highly interesting statement made by Attorney George Gordon late in the forenoon session.

Gordon was called by the State, but proved as good a witness for the defense. He declared that the affidavit made by the cook was signed in his absence, although the last paragraph stated that it was signed in his presence.

He said that he had told Solicitor Dorsey that the negro woman was being held illegally, but that the Solicitor had replied that it was necessary sometimes to do things of this sort in order to get the information wanted. He told of going to the police station and finding Minola crying and hysterical in her cell.

The attorney for the colored woman said that he had not been permitted to enter the room where his client was being interrogated by the detectives and Ray Pickett and Arthur Craven, the latter two being employees of the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company. He was present, he said, when part of the notes were being read by G. C. Febuary, but was not there when the affidavit was signed.

The McKnight affidavit told of alleged conversations at the Selig home of a nature very incriminating to Frank. The McKnight woman denied all of the statements in the affidavit to a Georgian reporter the night that she was liberated.

A crushing blow was dealt the State by the refusal of Judge Roan to admit, either while the defense was completing its case or after the State had taken up the rebuttal, any evidence not directly and at first hand bearing upon the specific acts charged against the factory superintendent.

The ruling was a sweeping victory for the defense. It gave Frank's case, which had been aided materially the day before by the defendant's own statement, an added strength and heightened the prospects in Frank's favor.

Solicitor Dorsey tried first to cross-question Daisy Hopkins, one of the defense's witnesses, as to conversations she was supposed to have had in regard to incidents at the pencil factory in which she and a man undesignated except as her "foreman" were involved. Frank's name was not mentioned in the indicated charges. The conversation was about a "foreman."

The Hopkins woman denied again that she ever had made visits to the factory for improper purposes or that she had had the conversations referred to by the Solicitor.

Dorsey encountered the same stone wall when he tried to draw testimony against the moral character of Frank from his own witnesses. From W. P. Merck and J. P. Floyd the Solicitor had expected to obtain a recital of the stories of happenings which they said had been related to them

Merck, however, had m ysteriously disappeared from the courthouse when his name was called, and Floyd was not permitted to go into the details of the testimony the Solicitor had hoped to bring out.

The Solicitor thereafter confined his efforts to bolstering up the character of C. B. Dalton, the State's witness who testified to seeing women in Frank's office, and attacking that of Daisy Hopkins. He called a number of witnesses, one of them a cousin of the Hopkins woman, who swore that her character for truth and veracity was bad and that they wouldn't believe her on oath.

Swear Dalton's Character Is Good.

Other witnesses testified that Dalton's character was good. They were asked by Attorney Rosser if they were acquainted with his court and chain-gang record. They replied, for the most part, that they were not.

The brown suit worn by Frank April 26 was identified by Mrs. Emil Selig, his mother-in-law, at the opening of court in the forenoon and the suit was placed in evidence.

The defense prepared to show by Wiley Roberts, inside jailer at the Tower, that Jim Conley had been reading since his incarceration there, but the Solicitor objected on the ground that no basis had been laid for the testimony.

Daisy Hopkins then was called and questioned, after which the State began its rebuttal, the defense having closed its case.

While waiting for a witness Solicitor Dorsey arose and made the unexpected announcement that he himself had erased the identification "Taken out at 8:26" on the time slip taken from the clock in the factory. Frank had made the charge he had written words as an identification of the slip and that they had been erased. The Solicitor declared that he thought the detectives had made the identification.

"Frank did not know who made the erasure," said Attorney Reuben Arnold.

The Solicitor had announced earlier that his first witnesses in rebuttal would be called to support C. B. Dalton and impeach Daisy Hopkins, who declared she had never visited the factory with Dalton or that he had ever introduced Dalton to the factory superintendent.

Wiley Roberts was asked:

Q. Has Jim Conley been in your custody during this trial?—A. Yes.

Q. Has he ever asked for newspapers?—A. Yes.

Dorsey interrupted.

"Your honor," he said, "I think the witness, Jim Conley, ought to have the privilege of denying or affirming that before he can be impeached."

"Conley said that h could only read certain words," said Arnold, "but probably Mr. Dorsey is right. I will have to call Jim Conley back again. Mr. Rosser will be back in a minute and we will close."

Daisey Hopkins Is Recalled by Dorsey.

The witness was excused and Dorsey made the announcement that four doctors of the following five would be called by the prosecution:

Drs. G. C. Mizell, F. L. Eskridge, Clarence Johnson, John Funke, S. E. Benedict, of Athens, and J. C. Cramer, of Macon, the latter two president and vice president of the State Board of Health.

Solicitor Dorsey asked that Daisy Hopkins be returned to the stand so that he might continue his cross-examination of her.

The witness took the stand.

Q. You say you knew nothing of the cot in the basement of the National Pencil Factory?—A. No.

Q. Do you know anything at all of the basement?—A. No.

Q. Are you acquainted with A. R. Floyd, of Redan, Ga.?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you known him for a long time?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you had a conversation with Floyd since the murder?—A. No.

Q. Haven't you been to his house to get milk?—A. I don't think I have since the murder.

Q. Didn't you go to the home of Floyd to get milk and tell him about that cot in the basement of the National Pencil Factory?—A. No.

Q. Do you know Bob Goddard?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Dr. R. S. Pound, of Redan?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Mr. Smith, superintendent of the Nunnally-McRae Company?—A. On Mitchell street?

Q. Yes.—A. Yes, I know him.

Q. Do you know Walter P. Merck?—A. Where does he live?

Met Merck on Peachtree Street.

Q. You met him first at Stone Mountain, then you met him on Walker street?—A. I met him at Redan. They used to live down there.

Q. You said something about being married. Have you two living husbands?—A. No; only one.

Q. Have you seen him since the murder?—A. Yes; at Redan.

Q. Do you remember meeting Walter P. Merck one Saturday afternoon on Whitehall street?—A. I met him on Peachtree.

Q. Didn't you tell him that afternoon that you were going to the National Pencil Factory?—A. No; I told him I had just left the factory.

Q. Didn't he make an engagement with you to go to the factory?—A. No.

Rosser objected, declaring that a female witness could not be attacked in that way.

"Your honor," said Dorsey, "I want to show by Merck that this woman did make an engagement with him that afternoon."

"I understand," replied Rosser, "that when an argument of this kind is to be made the jury is to retire."

"It would be better to have the ladies retire also," said Dorsey. "I don't want to embarrass them."

Jury and Women Retire From Room.

The jury retired, and after a hurried conference, Frank's wife and mother also left the courtroom at the request of Attorney Arnold.

"This is their witness," said Dorsey. "We want to show that this man Merck had her Saturday afternoon, and she said she was going to the National Pencil Factory. It was cold weather. We want to show that he saw her that night and what she told him."

The witness interrupted:

"It was summer time," she said pertly.

"She has denied," said Dorsey, "in the impeachment of Dalton that she ever went to the pencil factory for any improper purpose."

"We object," said Rosser.

"I want to show that she told Merck about meeting her foreman at the factory," said Dorsey.

Then the Solicitor repeated a conversation involving the "foreman," which is unprintable, which he wanted to get before the jury.

"He does not mean to charge Frank is the foreman," said Arnold. "He is frank enough to state that."

"Merck in an affidavit," said Dorsey, "said foreman. He didn't say Mrs. Hopkins said her superintendent or that she named any names. I mean to let the jury draw its own conclusions."

"I knew when your honor refused to rule out the charges of Conley and Dalton," said Arnold, taking up the argument, "that you were opening the doors for new issues that would obscure the charge of murder. I knew it would lead to a situation in impeachments bringing us to the point where we would hardly know who we were trying. This woman never would have been put up as an original witness except for the aspersions cast on her by Conley and Dalton. Look how far afield we have wandered. Now, he wants to impeach this witness on something with which the defendant has no connection."

"You can rebut any of their direct testimony," said Judge Roan. "You can not bring any new criminal charge against this defendant. If it is against someone else, it is irrelevant."

"Your honor," said Dorsey, "I want to ask a question to let the jury hear that you rule it out."

"No; we object," said Rosser "That's just why the jury was sent out."

"I'll let you assume that you ask it," said the court to Dorsey.

"Why, your honor," replied Dorsey, "it puts us in the position of not even trying to prove what we have indicated we would."

"I can not permit the question," said Judge Roan.

"Very well," said Dorsey, adding, in an undertone, "That shuts me off; that shuts me off."

Dorsey continued the examination:

Q. Didn't you meet Merck during the afternoon after working hours and tell him you were going to the pencil factory?—A. No.

Q. Didn't he come to see you that night?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you had been to the factory that afternoon?—A. No.

Men Say Woman's Character Is Bad.

Miss Hopkins was excused, and J. R. Floyd, of Redan, Ga., was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Do you know Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how many husbands she has?

Rosser: "I object, your honor. I don't care if she has three hundred husbands."

The objection was sustained.

Q. Would you believe her under oath?—A. I would not.

Q. Did you ever hear her say anything about a cot in the basement of the pencil factory?—A. Yes.

The witness was excused. Bob Goddard, brother of C. M. Goddard, who was shot to death a few months ago by Elmer F. Darden, was the next witness called in rebuttal. Goddard resides near Redan. Dorsey questioned him.

Goddard testified to the bad character of Daisy Hopkins, and declared he would not believe her under oath.

Henry Carr, of Stone Mountain; N. J. Ballard, a second cousin of Daisy Hopkins, and J. L. Rice all followed each other in rapid succession and testified that they would not believe the Hopkins girl under oath.

Dorsey then addressed the court.

"Your honor," he said, "we want to offer indictments against Daisy Hopkins and also a bond forfeiture."

Rosser: "Your honor, they objected to the introduction of an indictment against Dalton and they objected rightly. An indictment is nothing against one's character."

Dorsey: "Dalton denied any knowledge of an indictment. This is a bond forfeiture."

Judge Roan: "I rule it out."

Dalton's Recent Past Good, Says J. T. Hearn.

Glenn Smith, superintendent of the Nunnally-McRae Company, testified that Daisy Hopkins' character was bad and that he would not believe her on oath.

J. T. Hearn, of Walton County, said he had known C. B. Dalton since 1890. Dorsey questioned him

Q. Is his character good or bad?—A. The first part of his life was bad. The last part has been good.

Q. Would you believe him on oath?—A. Yes.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. When was the last time you knew Dalton?—A. 1903 or 1904.

Q. Did you hear about him being indicted for selling whisky in 1906?—A. Yes, but he had joined the church about 1904 and I understood was leading a good life.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Do you know the instance of his being indicted for stealing years ago?—A. Yes.

Rosser: "We object. He can't go into that."

Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Dorsey: "When they go into specific acts, can't I?"

Judge Roan: "No."

R. V. Johnston, another Walton County citizen, was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. When were you approached in regard to testifying to the character of C. B. Dalton?

Rosser interposed with an objection, but was overruled.

A. Last Friday, a week ago.

Q. Who approached you?—A. Harry Gottheimer.

Rosser again objected, and was sustained.

Q. Are you acquainted with the character of C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him on oath?—A. I would.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. You never heard that he was indicted for stealing and selling whiskey?—A. No.

The witness was excused, and W. M. Cook, of Social Circle, Ga., a dairyman and farmer, testified as to Dalton's good character, and declared that he would believe him on oath.

W. J. Elder, of Decatur, followed Cook on the stand, and said that Dalton came to Decatur about five years ago and worked for him as a carpenter. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Are you acquainted with Dalton's general character?—A. I don't know as I am.

Q. That means what people say about him?—A. Yes.

Q. Is his character good or bad?—A. Good.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. Why did you say just now that you didn't know?—A. I didn't know as I did.

Q. You said you didn't know because you didn't know yourself?—A. Yes.

The witness was excused, and A. B. Houston, of Decatur a farmer, who has lived there 41 years, was called. The witness said that he had known Dalton for eight years and that his character was good and that he would believe him under oath.

J. T. Borne, who formerly lived at Ingleside, in DeKalb County, and who now operates a cigar and soda fountain at Decatur, said he knew Dalton and would believe him on oath.

W. M. Wright, of Atlanta, general manager of the Independent Transfer Company, testified in behalf of Dalton's good character and declared that he would believe him on oath.

W. C. Hale, of No. 88 Kirkwood avenue, Atlanta, formerly of Walton County, testified to Dalton's good character and said he would believe him under oath.

L. L. Boyce, a city policeman, formerly of Walton County, testified that eighteen or twenty years ago Dalton's character was bad, but that now it was better and that he had heard nothing bad about him recently.

M. Gordon Caldwell, of Atlanta; J. W. Hunt, of No. 18 Trinity avenue, and W. P. Patrick, of tlanta, a member of the police force, testified to Dalton's good character and said that they would believe him under oath.

J. E. Dudley, a former employee of the pencil company, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Were you working at the National Pencil Factory about October 1912?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember a machinist named Charley Lee?—A. Yes, he was working there.

Q. Were you hurt there?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. On the second floor, the office floor.

Q. Just where were you hurt?—A. On a metal machine. I hurt the forefinger of my left hand.

Mashed Finger But Kept Blood Off Floor.

Q. How were you hurt?—A. This fellow Lee had put the metal on the machine. It dropped off. I picked it up and in putting it back I mashed my finger.

Q. What did you do then?—A. There was some cotton waste there, which I put around my hand.

Q. Did any blood drop on the floor?—A. A few drops.

Q. Did any blood drop near the ladies' dressing room?—A. None.

Q. How long after this accident did you work?—A. I quit then.

Q. What does this fellow Lee do besides working at his trade?—A. I don't know.

Q. What did you do then?—A. I went to the office to get it dressed, then went to the Atlanta Hospital.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. How badly were you hurt?—A. Not very bad.

Q. You bled pretty freely?—A. Yes, but I had my hand in the cotton waste.

&. You didn't notice whether any blood was on the floor or not?—A. Yes, none of it dropped except at the machine where I was working.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Was your finger outside of the coton waste until you got to the office?—A. No.

The witness was excused, and the witness Merck was called, but failed to answer. Willie Turner, of Sandy Springs, the 16-year-old son of E. M.

FRANK'S STATEMENT IS BEST PLEA PRESENTED IN HIS DEFENSE SO FAR

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

So far, unquestionably, to my way of thinking Leo Frank himself has made the best and most appealing plea in behalf of Leo Frank.

His statement in the recital thereof was as clean cut, as dignified, as dispassionate and as convincing as any statement I ever heard from the witness stand, and I have heard hundreds.

Regardless of its merits—or, at least, aside from that—the defendant acquitted himself with credit, and that much may be said of him ungrudgingly and in the frankest fairness to all parties concerned.

Of course, had Frank been nervous, hesitating, "fidgety," or seemingly in any wise disconcerted, there would be those, perhaps, who would have seen in that great evidence of his guilt—and by the same token, in that he was calm, poised, self-possessed, even smiling at intervals, there will be those who see in that evidence of a monstrous coldness and unfeeling design.

The vast majority of those who heard that remarkable statement, however, must have been impressed by, at least, the apparent sincerity of it and the seeming inclination in the defendant to hold back nothing.

In its recital the statement of Leo Frank was wonderful—in its written form, stripped of the man's personality, it still is a human document of intense and absorbing interest.

It impressed me, too, as being in many ways characteristic of Frank as I have come to know him of late—and I never spoke one word to him in all my life.

I have come to know him as the prisoner sitting over there between the two women in the courtroom—the slight, spectacled party, a seat or two beyond Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold.

I have come to know him, in my way of knowing persons charged with grave crimes, not by way of personal touch so much as by constant observation of him under fire.

Repression Makes the Story.

All that was dramatic in Frank's statement was repressed—the dramatic touch was there, to be sure, but the red fire and the usual accompanying stage tricks were not.

If Frank should undertake to sell me a gross of pencils, I should expect him to tell me the truth about the pencils, and nothing but the truth—but I should expect him nevertheless to sell me the pencils at a profit.

His statement of Monday seemed to me a recital much after the fashion I should expect from him in the pencil transaction.

To me, it seemed that Frank was undertaking to tell the truth and nothing but the truth of the Mary Phagan murder, as he knows the truth—and to tell it at a profit to himself.

That is the best and the worst that I can say of Leo Frank's statement, as it appealed to me.

True, in a transaction involving a mere gross of pencils, there would be lacking all the great elements that entered into the statement Frank made on Monday—and yet, at that, neither subject matter is, in its final analysis, anything more or less than something about which the simple truth should be told.

Frank looked the jury fairly and squarely in the eye when he was making his statement—and not once did he hesitate or falter in stating his plea.

Contrast the statement of the defendant with the statement of the negro—the star witness summoned against him.

Frank's Day in Court.

Now, Monday was Frank's day in court, and it is square and right that Frank's showing should be criticised freely and frankly—it is right that his statement should be praised, if it seemed to deserve praise, just as it should be condemned, if it seemed to merit that melancholy fate.

Contrast it, therefore, with the statement of Conley!

Argue the matter with yourself.

Certainly, Frank has behind him a long period of decent life, good reputation, business integrity, and home happiness—and Conley has, what?

Take the two stories—and upon these two stories the verdict in the Frank case must turn eventually—and weigh them, side by side, honestly, without prejudice, and in the light of a clean conscience.

What is your answer?

What will be the jury's answer?

The field of speculation thus opened is most engaging, and it will, if one but undertake to enter it seriously and with open mind, be well worth the entering.

In the matter of his character, Frank said little. He entered simple denials to some few things cited against him.

He was willing to be cross-examined on his statement. He himself insisted that his general character be put in issue. He furnished the State with the first information it ever had that Conley could write.

All the way through, his statement rang with confident challenge, and a dare to the State to prove anything vile in him whatever!

Now, then, people will differ as to the EFFECT Frank's statement will and ought to have on the jury.

Maybe it is a clever evasion of a grave issue—maybe it is possible of rebuttal, and maybe it will be broken down.

Impressively Delivered.

The fact remains that it was most impressively delivered, and carried with it every emphasis of apparent truth and straightforwardness!

It is my opinion now that the State has in Frank's statement the hardest thing to get away from that yet has been tendered to it.

It contradicts the State at points that the defense has been able to fortify abundantly with facts.

It makes more necessary than ever before the complete success of the State's efforts to break down Frank's good name.

For I think it safe to predict that unless the State DOES demolish Frank utterly, the wonderful statement he made on Monday more than likely will serve in connection with the other things set up—to clear him of the charge of murdering Mary Phagan!

It matters not, so far as this article is concerned, moreover, whether the statement ought to clear him—the prospect is that it WILL clear him unless the State can batter it down and collapse it entirely!

The defendant touched upon every phase of the State's case against him—the happiness of his home, his nervousness on the morning of the murder, his movements on the day of the crime, and the day before, and the day after, his family's financial resources, his disinclination to talk to Conley, although he at first talked freely to the police officers, his alleged peeping into the girls' dressing room, his lack of knowledge of or acquaintance with the impeached Dalton, his non-association with loose characters, male and female.

There was not a point he failed to touch, even though he seemed to touch points now and then with a measure of fine scorn!

Is there a gap that Frank MIGHT let down that he has FAILED to let down?

Is there a point involved that Frank has not invited investigation of?

Hard to Find Gaps.

It is rather hard to locate any such gaps or points, if they are there.

And yet they may be there! That is for the State yet to demonstrate!

The State has the full right of rebuttal, as applied to Frank's statement, that it enjoys in respect of other evidence. There may be weak points in his story—just as there were weak points in Conley's.

The point is that they are not nearly so apparent upon the surface of things in the Frank statement.

For one thing, Conley made four sworn statements, all contradictory, before he got one finally landed, and Conley admitted freely from the stand that he had lied time and again.

On the other hand, Frank's statement is the first and only sustained and sequenced utterance as to the details of his story yet falling from his lips.

It must stand in its entirety or fall in its entirety.

Whatever may be the effect of that statement in the end, it will go down in the criminal history of Georgia as one of the most remarkably clear and apparently convincing statements ever falling from a defendant's lips.

When the State gets through with it, the statement may be shot to pieces and rendered utterly ineffective.

As it stands to-day, however, I hardly think a dozen people who heard it will deny the profound impression it made, and the present probability of its determining effect upon the minds of the jury.

The defense has played its best card in Leo Frank's statement.

It remains yet to be seen, however, whether that card is sufficient to win the case!

MOTHER OF LEO FRANK

Mrs. Rea Frank.

Wife at Last Breaks Down, Overcome by Frank's Story

After having braved every trying courtroom ordeal and faced every horrible charge hurled at her husband with a stoicism almost as unflinching and imperturbable as his, Mrs. Leo Frank gave away completely to her emotions and sobbed unrestrainedly as Frank said the last words of his wonderful and most impressive address to the jury Monday.

It was the final dramatic touch to a situation that had held a courtroom full of spectators in an irresistible thrall through four long hours of the afternoon.

The spell that had been cast over the room by the quiet but earnest words of the slight young factory superintendent was broken by the tones of the deputies, who shouted the moment Frank rose to leave the witness chair:

"Keep your seats, gentlemen, while the jury passes out."

Frank Rushes to Wife.

In the confusion that followed some did not notice that Frank rushed right to the side of his wife, who had thrown her head in her arms and was shaking with pitiful sobs as she moaned his name again and again.

The woman who had steeled herself against the accusations and innuendoes of the Solicitor General during the three long weeks of the trial collapsed when her husband himself took the stand to declare his innocence.

Many who had rushed into the inclosure to give their congratulations to Frank paused as they observed the piteous figure.

The jurors, already deeply impressed by the talk of Frank, were freshly touched by this exhibition of emotion. They had arisen to file over to the Kimball House. Juror Johenning, at the head of the line, stood for several minutes with tears running down his cheeks, oblivious of the fact that he was blocking the rest of the jurors and that three deputies were waiting to take them on their way.

Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner leaned against the railing of the inclosure. There was a suspicious moisture in his eyes, which have grown accustomed to many tragic and affecting spectacles.

Troublesome Lump Rises.

Very few in the courtroom had much to say until they had managed to subdue that troublesome lump that persisted in rising in their throats.

"Rube, that boy put it all over you and me," muttered massive Luther Rosser, huskily, to Reuben Arnold, his partner in the case.

For many minutes after the packed courtroom had emptied itself a little group of persons remained in front of the judge's bench. Mrs. Frank, the wife of the man accused of the revolting murder, and the elder Mrs. Frank, his mother, were weeping hysterically, overcome by the appeal that had been made. Relatives surrounded them. Frank talked comfortingly to them for several minutes, and then, feeling in danger of breaking down himself, signaled Sheriff Mangum and returned to his cell in the Tower.

Suffragettes Want Baby Booth at Fairs

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Among the things that the suffragettes, headed by Harriet Stanton Blatch, want is a pocket in their skirts and a place at fairs where women can check their babies.

Mrs. Blatch visited a number of fairs throughout the State and declares it a crying shame that at not one of them did she find a place where mothers could leave their babies while they rambled around the park.

Moonshiner Slays Man in Pistol Duel

LEXINGTON, Aug. 19.—In a pistol duel at Burnside, Ky., between Joshua Carter, a moonshiner, and John Fitzgerald and Town Marshal John Coomer, Fitzgerald was killed and Coomer wounded by Carter. The slayer forced a ferryman to row him across a river when pursued by a posse. Officers wounded him as he escaped to the mountains. A posse is in pursuit.

Gives Up Bad Checks, Admitting Forgery

MOBILE, Aug. 19.—When arrested on the charge of passing forged checks last night in a Royal street restaurant and taken before Chief of Police F. W. Crenshaw, J. A. Ball, a bookkeeper claiming Laurel, Miss., where he says his mother resides, as his home, admitted his guilt.

Ball, when seached at the police station, had a total of $315 in forged checks in his pockets.

Bulgar Plot to Slay All Turks Reported

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 19.—Evidence of a conspiracy of Bulgarians to rise up in Adrianople and massacre all the Turks has been discovered, it was declared in a telegram received here to-day by the Grand Vizier. The contents of the message were turned over to the foreign diplomats to support Turkey's contention that an army is necessary at Adrianople to protect the Turkish civilians from Bulgarian outrages.

DIGGS, ON STAND, TELLS OF TRIP WITH GIRL

Declares That Marsha Warrington Would Not Let Him Leave City Without Her.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 19.—Maury I. Diggs, defendant in the white slavery action brought by the Government, took the stand in his own defense shortly after court was reconvened to-day.

Diggs looked straight ahead as he answered questions put by Attorney Robert Delvin, for the defense. He spoke his answers in a loud, firm voice.

Diggs was attired in a fashionable blue serge suit, and wore a black tie. As he answered questions slowly, he glanced down at his clothes, and sometimes let his eyes rest for a few seconds on his recently-manicured nails. He leaned forward as he talked, one elbow resting on his knee.

He told of meeting the Warrington girl and informing her that he was compelled to leave Sacramento on business and that he intended going to Los Angeles.

"I told her, too," he said, "that I wanted to get away before there was a scandal and things got embarrassing for me. I thought it would be best for me to go away. She said she didn't want me to leave. I told her that I had my business and my future to think of and also my family.

Says Girl Wept.

"She cried a little bit and said that I must not go. I said to her that I thought we had better break off our relations. I left her that evening, and she went home. She thought I was going away for two weeks, and she was surprised the next day when she rang up and found that I was still in town. I told her that I had stayed to arrange things in my office."

Miss Warrington had testified last week that she did not tell Diggs she wanted him to stay in Sacramento.

Diggs said that a Sacramento theatrical man had warned him that his escapades had attracted the attention of juvenile court officers. He said the theatrical man warned him that if he continued his present habits he would be compelled to move his office from the building which the theatrical man controlled.

Questioned about an automobile ride on week before the trip to Reno, Diggs said: "Marsha and I were riding in the front seat of the machine and Caminetti was on the running board. We saw a machine behind us. It kept right on our trail and I discovered that it was following us purposely. After we got out of the city a ways I turned to one side of the road and put out the light. The car passed without its occupants seeing us. I said:

Wife Knew of Escapades.

"'They are after me. I'm going to get out of town for a few days. I've got my family to think of.'

"Marsha said: 'Well, I'm going, too. You are not going to leave me behind.'

"Caminetti asked what we were going to do about Lola, and Marsha said: 'She'll go, too, and if she doesn't want to go I'll make her.'"

During a conversation with his uncle, Diggs said he told his relative that he was going to "cut out all his foolishness" and get out of Sacramento for a few days until the trouble on account of his association with Marsha Warrington blew over. Lola Morris, he said, was present at this conversation and she agreed with him that he should leave. At the same time his uncle told him that Mrs. Diggs knew of his relations with Miss Warrington.

BAILIFF SHOT AS WRIT IS SERVED ON MERCHANT

Officer's Wounds Are Serious Following Attempt to Close Store in East Point.

Bailiff J. P. Gaddy is lying seriously wounded at his home in East Point Tuesday morning, with bullet wounds in his breast, shoulder and right arm, following a pistol battle with J. J. Willis, an East Point storekeeper, late Monday afternoon.

Willis fired six shots at Gaddy when the officer attempted to place him under arrest on a warrant charging contempt of court. A few minutes after the shooting Willis was arrested by Policeman Creel, of College Park, while trying to make his escape into the open country.

Gaddy was taken to his home at No. 4 Pine street, in East Point, and his wounds dressed by Dr. E. C. Suggs. Four of the shots fired by Willis took effect, the first entering the right breast and ranging downward under the left arm, the second shattered the bones of the right elbow, and the last two striking the officer in the shoulder. Dr. Suggs stated last night that Gaddy will live.

The warrant for Willis' arrest was issued because he had opened his store in violation of a writ of attachment served upon him several weeks ago, after George Harris, a cotton mill worker, had obtained a judgment for $1,000 against Willis for false imprisonment. Willis had previously had Harris arrested on a charge of obtaining goods under false pretenses, and had lost the case.

"When I went after Willis I was accompanied by my brother-in-law, John Wynn," said Sheriff Gaddy in telling of the shooting. "We found Willis sitting on the steps of his store. When he saw us he ran into the building. When I got inside he covered me with a gun. I told him not to shoot and started for him. He fired, the bullet striking me in the breast. I then drew my gun, but before I could shoot another bullet struck me in the elbow. I was helpless, and staggered out of the front door. As I did so Willis fired four times and two of the bullets struck me in the back."

Special Session Idea In Alabama Growing

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 19.—That Governor O'Neal may call a special session of the Legislature in order to straighten out the United States Senatorial muddle appears more likely to-day.

The anti-fee system advocates in Jefferson County, the largest county in the State, are working hard to have included in the call for the special session the anti-fee system bill. It is pointed out that the Sheriff of Jefferson County gets in fees almost as much per annum as did the President of the United States before the last increase in salary of the latter.

Aged Fat Man in Furs With Mercury at 100

BOSTON, Aug. 19.—While the street thermometers registered 100 here, a man aged and fat, wearing a heavy winter suit, a heavy ulster that reached the ground, heavy shoes and a fur cap, with the laps turned down over the ears, was seen wandering about the streets, seemingly cool.

3 Years in Prison For Selling Liquor

MERIDIAN, MISS., Aug. 19.—Probably the heaviest sentence ever imposed for the illegal sale of liquor in this State was given when Trayant Johnson, a cripple, to-day was given three years in the penitentiary.

The law makes the third sale of liquor a penitentiary offense.

FACTORY BOY SWEARS HE SAW FRANK ACCOST MARY PHAGAN

Dorsey Feared He'd 'Get in Bad' With Detectives, State Witness Says

Turner, a farmer, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. About March, of this year, where did you work?—A. At the pencil factory.

Q. Do you know this man? (pointing to Frank)—A. Yes.

Q. Did you know Mary Phagan?—A. When I saw her.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank talking to Mary Phagan?—A. Yes; on the second floor.

Q. What time was it and how long before the murder?—A. About the middle of March.

Q. Where was it?—A. In the back part of the building.

Q. What time of day was it?—A. Just before dinner.

Q. Who was in the room besides them?—A. No one else. Two girls came down after I did.

Q. What was said?—A. I heard her say she had to go to work.

Q. What did he say?—A. He said he was the superintendent of the factory—"

Rosser: "We object and we want to argue this without the jury."

The jury was sent out.

Dorsey—Let the witness tell what it is.

Turner—Mr. Frank told the girl he was superintendent of the factory and wanted to talk to her. She told him she had to go back to work. Mr. Frank then went off.

Mary Backed Away From Frank.

Q. How was she acting?—A. She backed off from him and he walked toward her.

Q. How far did she back?—A. Three or four feet. That was all I heard. Mr. Frank turned away.

Judge Roan—You can go into this to this extent. You can show whether he knew Mary Phagan.

Rosser—This other has nothing to do with it.

Hooper—If my brother will just keep still a little bit, we may be able to proceed further. This has another value. It shows familiarity or a desire for familiarity.

Rosser—If your honor is with us, I don't want to argue.

Judge Roan—The question is whether it can be shown just how this conversation took place.

Rosser—That is not the purpose of this evidence——

Hooper—Your honor——

Judge Roan—Sit down, Mr. Hooper. The question is whether this will show whether he knew her well enough to know her name.

Rosser—This evidence doesn't show that.

Dorsey—Your honor, this witness says this meeting occurred in the same place and near the same spot where we have contended the murder occurred. It is the basis for further evidence.

Arnold—That last statement let the cat out of the bag. They want to bring out another charge. This whole case has been beclouded with every charge that could be imagined. We have gotten away from the charge of murder and have been made to answer every conceivable charge!

Hooper—I object to that, first because it is not the point at issue.

There was smothered applause.

"There is another disturbance of some sort," shouted Arnold.

Judge Roan rapped for order and directed that the jury be brought in. He addressed Solicitor Dorsey.

"You may put your question and let him tell what he knows," said Judge Roan.

Q. What did you see? Tell it in your own way, telling everything that you saw.—A. They were back in the rear of the building near the entrance. She was coming to her work just before dinner. Mr. Frank met her and said: 'I want to speak to you.' She said: 'I have got to go to work.' He said: "I am the superintendent of the pencil factory and I want to speak to you.' She backed off and he walked toward her.

Q. Is that all?—A. Yes.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. What time was it?—A. Just before dinner.

Q. How was it she was just going to work?—A. She was returning to her work at the machine. It was just before the whistle blew.

Q. Lemmie Quinn's office was there, wasn't it?—A. Yes.

Q. There were ten or twelve women there in the polishing department?—A. I don't know.

Q. Well, what about those two girls in there?—A. They came back and told me where to put the pencils.

Q. Do you know who they were?—A. No.

Motorman Hits Daisy Hopkins' Character.

Q. They came back at the time this thing was going on?—A. Yes.

Q. What kind of a looking girl was Mary Phagan?—A. She had light hair.

Q. What else?—A. I can't describe her.

Q. Do you really know her?—A. Yes.

Q. How?—A. Some boy who worked on the fourth floor pointed her out to me one morning when she came to work.

Q. Do you know any one else at the factory?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Walter T. Merck was called.

Dorsey questioned him.

Q. What is your business?—A. A street car motorman.

Q. Do you know Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever meet her on Saturday afternoons at the corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets?—A. Yes.

Q. What did she say?—A. I asked her where she was going and she said she was going to the pencil factory.

Q. Did you see her any more?—A. Yes. I made an engagement to go to her room.

Q. Did you see her?—A. Yes, about 8:30 o'clock in a room upstairs at the corner of Walker and Peters streets.

Q. Did she say where she had been?—A. To the National Pencil Factory.

Q. Do you know her character?—A. Yes.

Q. Is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Does the company know your character? It's a beauty according to your own admission, isn't it?

Dorsey interposed with an objection and was sustained.

Rosser: "Come down, come down, come down."

McKnight Woman's Lawyer Called.

The witness was excused, and George Gordon, who said he had practiced law for thirteen years, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Were you present at the police station when Minola McKnight was brought there?—A. Yes; or, rather, I was on the outside a part of the time. I went there in connection with getting a habeas corpus proceedings for her release. The detectives told me I could not go in just then. I decided to make a demand to see her, and it was granted. I went in and Stenographer Febuary read a statement to her from his notes, then went out to write it. Detectives Starnes, Campbell and Lanford, Chief Beavers and two men from Beck & Greggs' were there when the stenographer went out. I said that I didn't think that she ought to be held. They told me they could do nothing unless I got your (Dorsey's) permission. So I went to see you, and you told me that you could not let the woman go, because it would put you in bad with the detectives.

Q. Didn't I say that I had no right to hold her?—A. No; you said you would not release her without a habeas corpus.

Q. Why did you not wait until she signed that paper?—A. I went up to see you.

Q. Did you hear her say anything about the statement? Read over the notes and then answer the question.—A. That is the substance of the notes that Febuary read over to her.

Q. What did she say? Did she deny or admit them?—A. She said she believed that was about right.

Dorsey Feared He'd "Get in Bad."

Q. I told you I didn't have anything to do with locking her up, and that it would be meddling for me to order her release.—A. You said you would not interfere because you would get in bad with the detectives. That is what my recollection is, Mr. Dorsey.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. You knew that she had been to Mr. Dorsey's office and had been taken away screaming?—A. Yes; I heard that.

Q. That Mr. Dorsey, an officer of the peace, let the police take that woman away screaming?

Dorsey interrupted. "You say you know that?" he asked the witness.

Rosser: "Wait until I get through." Then he continued his question.

Q. Did you ever find out what charge they had against her?—A. I had a habeas corpus to get her release, but could not get to her.

Q. They just held her because she would not give a statement to the police that Mr. Dorsey wanted?

Dorsey interposed an objection.

Rosser—I submit to this jury that the evidence in this case proves it is true.

Dorsey—I submit it is not true, I don't care what you argue to this jury.

Rosser—And you didn't care what you did to that poor negro woman.

Dorsey—I didn't do anything to that negro woman.

Judge Sustains Dorsey's Objection.

Judge Roan sustained Dorsey's objection. Rosser asked Dorsey for the affidavit that Minola made in Dorsey's office. He asked the witness if he had ever seen it before, and the witness answered, "No."

Q. Who was guilty of false imprisonment—was it Starnes or Beavers?—A. Beavers said he knew about it, but that he could not let her out unless Dorsey ordered it.

Q. Did he have a warrant?—A. No.

Q. Then they let her out the next day?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see her?—A. I saw her that first evening. She was in a cell and crying hysterically. I asked Chief Beavers to let her out in the corridor and I guess he did.

Dorsey took the witness again.

Q. Didn't I tell you that I had absolutely no rights in the matter?—A. Something like that, but if you will pardon me, Hugh, I will tell you exactly what was done. I went to you when the police told me they could not let the woman go without an order from you. You told me you had not had the woman arrested and was not having her held.

Q. Now, didn't Febuary read over to you a portion of that affidavit?—A. Yes, he read something.

Q. Now, didn't he read a part of the statement, and she added to it the part about the money?—A. She said something about money.

Q. Now, what else did she say?—A. I don't recall.

Q. Didn't you question her yourself?—A. I asked one or two little questions.

Q. What about?—A. She said something about a bucket of water that was not very plain, and I questioned her about it.

Rosser took the witness again.

Q. You don't know what happened behind those doors?—A. No.

At this point court adjourned until 2 o'clock.

President of State Board of Health Testifies.

When the afternoon session started Solicitor Dorsey announced that on account of some of the State's witnesses being out of the city he would vary his program. He called Dr. S. E. Benedict, of Athens, president of the State Board of Health, and a member of the faculty of the University of Georgia for 32 years, to the stand.

On the first question asked him, Attorney Arnold made strenuous objection and precipitated a long argument. The question was:

"Were you present at the meeting of the State Board of Health when Dr. Westmoreland preferred charges against Dr. Harris?"

"Weo bject to going into that," said Mr. Arnold. "We would have to get the minutes of the board and all of that."

"I am not going into the matter further than to disprove Dr. Westmoreland's statement," said Mr. Dorsey, "that the State board found Dr. Harris guilty of scientific dishonesty."

"You can go into the question of the feeling of the witness," said Judge Roan.

"Suppose," said Rosser, sarcastically, "Mary had a little lamb, it's fleece was white as snow, would that have anything to do with this case?"

"I am not going into it further than to disprove Dr. Westmoreland's statement," insisted Dorsey.

"Well, I am going into it," said Arnold, "if you don't. I am going to ask him about a letter he wrote Dr. Westmoreland."

"Go ahead, Mr. Dorsey," said Judge Roan.

Q. Were you present when Dr. Westmoreland preferred charges against Dr. Harris?—A. Yes.

Q. Were those charges substantiated?

Arnold—Your honor, the minutes are the best evidence.

Dorsey—All right; take the minutes.

The minute book of the State Board of Health was handed the witness.

Q. Look at page 128 and tell me if that is a correct report of that meeting?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, doctor, I want to know whether those charges were found to be true.

Arnold—The minutes are the best evidence.

Judge Roan—Are those charges on the minutes?

A. I don't see them.

Q. Well, what was the vote?—A. I think it was unanimous.

Arnold—Doctor, where are the charges?—A. I suppose they are in the possession of the secretary, somewhere in his office.

Arnold—Dr. Harris, then, has the charges preferred against him? And while the defense is on the minutes, charges are not?—A. You misunderstood me. Neither the charges nor the defense are on the minutes. Only the action of the board.

Judge Roan—Didn't Dr. Westmoreland in his testimony say that he preferred charges of scientific dishonesty against Dr. Harris and because the board would not dismiss Dr. Harris that he resigned?

Rosser Says Record Speaks for Itself.

Arnold: "No; Dr. Westmoreland's version was that the board found him guilty but refused to dismiss him, and he (Dr. Westmoreland) resigned."

Dr. Benedict: "That is not true."

Rosser: "Never mind; the record speaks for itself."

Arnold and Rosser then examined the minutes.

Dorsey: "I will ask you iwf you are familiar with the business and professional life of Dr. Harris?"

"We object," said Rosser, and the objection was sustained.

"Dorsey: "Doctor, what is the condition of the board now?"

Rosser objected again, and was sustained.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. Doctor, I want to ask you about a letter you wrote Dr. Westmoreland.

Dorsey: "We object to that. It is irrelevant."

Arnold: "I haven't the letter here, but will have it long before the doctor's train leaves."

Judge Roan: "I will wait until I see the letter."

Dorsey offered part of the minutes of the State Board of Health as documentary evidence.

Arnold: "I don't think any of this should go in on the ground that it is irrevelant, immaterial and incompetent."

Judge Roan: "I will let it in for what it is worth."

The defense asked that their objection be recorded.

Dorsey: "I would like to kown if the letter of the fourth to the Governor on the subject was admissable."

Rosser: "It is as admissible as any of the other minutes, but we object to it all."

Judge Roan: "I will rule the letter out."

Recalls Examination Of Minola McKnight.

Roy Craven, salesman at the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company, was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Did you know Minola McKnight?—A. Yes.

Q. When idd you see her last?—A. At the police station.

Q. Are you connected with the police?—A. No.

Q. How did you come to be there?—A. Her husband worked at the same place I do and asked me if I would not go down to the police station and try to get her out.

Q. Were you there when this statement was signed?—A. Yes.

Q. Previous to that statement, did you see her at her home?—A. Yes.

Q. Who was with you?—A. Pickett and her husband.

Q. Why did you go there?

Rosser interposed an objection and was sustained.

Q. Did you go either at the request of the Police Department or myself?—A. No.

Q. Now, give me the best recollection of the time, if you can?

Rosser objected, but was overruled.

Q. Give me the day?—A. It was the middle part of May.

Q. Now, tell what this woman, Minola McKnight, said when she made that affidavit at the police station?—A. Well, she would not talke at first, but we told her what Albert had said.

Q. What was it that Albert had said?

The witness gave the substance of the Minola McKnight affidavit.

Q. Then what did Minola say?—A. She was somewhat reluctant to talk at first, but when we told her what Albert had said she gave us the affidavit without stopping.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Didn't you know that she was in jail because she would not give the sort of a statement they wanted?—A. I did not.

Rosser Objects to Servant's Affidavit.

Q. Why did you think they had her in jail?

Dorsey: "We object to what he thinks. Stick to the statements."

Q. Did you go to Mr. Darsey's office before you heard Minola make her statemtns?—A. Yes.

Q. Why did you go there?—A. To try to get her out.

Q. It wasn't any trouble to get her out after she made a good statement, was it?—A. I wasn't thre when she got out.

Q. Why didn't you stay there?—A. I didn't want to.

Q. You got a statement agreeing with what her husband had told you, then you left her in jail?—A. I went on out and left her with her husband.

Q. Didn't you try to get Mr. Dorsey to get her out?—A. I went to see what I could do.

Q. What did he say?—A. He said he would dow hat he could. He said for me to ga to see Mr. Starnes or Mr. Campbell.

Q. Did you go?—A. Yes.

Q. How long did you stay?—A. Abotu three hours.

Q. Did you ask them to let her out? A. No.

Q. You don't konw what happend before you got there, do you?—A. No, I am not a mind reader.

Dorsey: "Now I want to tender this affidavit of Minola McKnight as evidence."

Rosser: "All in the world that affidavit san show is the treatment that poor woman received at the hands of the police. It is inadmissable."

Crowd Roars When Sheriff Sits on Floor.

Dorsey: "Every word of it is admissable, because it is a flat and positive repudiation of Minola's sworn statements on the stand."

Judge Roan: "Let me read it. I will rule on it later."

The witness was excused, and E. H. Pickett, also an employee of Beck & Greggs Hardware Company, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him. He was given the Minola McKnight affidavit to read. Sheriff Mangum, in an attempt to stop talking in the courtroom, met with a little accident that sent a ripple of merriment throughout the room. While Pickett was reading the affidavit, the Sheriff arose from his seat beside the witness stand.

"You people over to the right are talking too much, and if you don't stop I will have to put you out," he said. When he turned to resume his seat he missed the chair and sat down upon the floor with a sad expression on his face. The crowd in the courtroom fairly roared.

Pickett read the affidavit, then Dorsey questioned him.

Q. You were present when that paper was signed, were you not?—A. Yes; that is, immediately before Minola signed it.

Q. Who else was there?—A. Minola's lawyer, Roy Craven, one or two detectives and myself.

Q. What statement was made before she signed it?—A. Albert McKnight said she had made certain statements. She then admitted it a little bit at a time.

Q. What did she say first?—A. That she had been cautioned not to talk.

Q. Then what?—A. She admitted she got a little more money.

Q. Did she say everything shown in this affidavit?—A. Not the first part. She didn't make those statements in my presence.

Didn't Appear Willing To Talk Then.

Q. Was she willing to talk?—A. No. She said she would talk to me, but she would not talk to the detectives. Before the detectives left she said her husband was a liar.

Q. Did the detectives leave?—A. Yes.

Q. Then you questioned her?—A. Yes; but we, Craven and myself, could not write shorthand, and sent for the stenographer.

Q. Who was there when she made the statement about Mrs. Frank making certain remarks to her mother?—A. Starnes, Campbell, her lawyer, the stenographer, Lanford, Craven and myself.

Q. Well, tell the jury what she said.

Rosser: "The affidavit is the best evidence."

Dorsey: "But you are objecting to the affidavit."

Judge Roan: "I am going to let in that affidavit with the exception of the part that could not be put in regularly. For instance, that part where she quotes the conversation she overheard."

Dorsey: "May I or not, without considering the affidavid, ask him all relevant point of Minola McKnight's statement?"

Judge Roan: "You can take the affidavit and ask him about all relevant points."

Dorsey: Mr. Pickeht, what did the woman say about Frank eating dinner?—A. First she said he ate dinner. Finally she haid he did not.

Q. What did she say first about her husband, Albert, being there?—A. At first she said he was not there, finally she said he was.

Q. What did she say about the Sellgs and Frank discussin the ragedy Sunday?—A. At first she said she did not hear anything. At last she said she did hear something.

Q What did she say about being told to keep her mouth shut?—

Rosser: "Unless he wants to show that Frank told her that, it is irrelevant."

Counsel in Another Wrangle.

Dorsey: "It is relevant to impeach the negro."

Roan: "It is relevant, I think."

Rosser: "You could not impeach Mr. Selig on such a statement. Certainly it is inadmissable to impeach Minola McKnight."

Rosser dictated his objections to the court stenographer.

Dorsey: "Answer the question, Mr. Pickett."

A. At first she denied it, then she said Mrs. Selig told her to keep quiet.

Rosser continued to object.

Hooper: "This witness can be put on the stand and impeach half a dozen witnesses."

Roan: "You understand it must be relevant to some issue in this case."

Hooper continued to argue that the question should be admitted.

"Judge Roan: "If you insist, I will let it in."

Q. What did Minola say with reference to what was said to her about talking?—A. She said she was cautioned not to talk.

Q. What did she say at last about receiving a higher or lower wage?—A. She said her wages were increased after the crime.

Q. What did she say first about that hat?—A. She only made one reference to it.

Q. Did anybody suggest anything about the hat, before anyone asked her about it?—A. Yes.

Q. Now who was in there before you went to the door and called the detectives?—A. Alfred McKnight, Craven and myself.

Offered to Free Her If She Made Statement.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Now why didn't you believe her first statement?—A. Because we thought different.

Q. You kept her there two or three hours, didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you give her the third degree?—A. We didn't call it that.

Q. Did you see Dorsey?—A. Yes; we saw hom before we went to the police station, and he told us he would arrange for us to see her, and that we might arrange to get her out.

Q. Did you tell Minola that you had come down to get her out?—A. We did tell her we wanted to get her out if we got a statement.

Q. Well, why didn't you get her out?—A. She left the station house before we did.

Q. After she gave that statement they let her out?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know she left there before you did?—A. No, but the detectives said she had.

Q. You didn't know she had been there twelve hours when you got there?—. Yes.

Q. You knew she was there because she would not give the statement the detectives wanted, didn't you?—A. No.

Q. You went there to make her give the statement the detectives wanted?—A. Not that. I thought it was my duty as a good citizen to aid in getting at the truth.

Rosser (very angrily and with contempt in his voice)—Let him come, down; let him come down.

Negro McKnight Called to Stand.

The witness was excused, and Albert McKnight, husband of Minola McKnight, was called to the stand. Hooper questioned him, and had the negro step down from the witness chair and stand before the jury while he displayed a blueprint of the Selig home and a diagram of the dining room and the sideboard mirror, through which Albert said he observed Frank during lunch at the Selig home on Saturday, April 26.

New Molasses Rate Of M. & O. Causes Kick

MOBILE, ALA., Aug. 19.—The molasses men of New Orleans and Louisiana are disturbed over the new rate on blackstrap molasses made by the Mobile and Ohio Railroad out of this city of 15 cents per 100 pounds.

The Louisiana dealers will probably ask the Interstate Commerce Commission to enjoin the proposed rate as discriminatory.

The local railroad men have appealed to Freight Traffic Manager Haiden Miller, of the Mobile and Ohio at St. Louis, asking that the rate be suspended.

Conscience-Stricken Bigamist Surrenders

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 19.—Asserting that he was a bigamist and his conscience hurt him because he had married a good woman, Walter H. Fensler walked into police headquarters here and gave himself up.

Fensler said he had a wife and baby in Pascagoula, Miss., and was not sure that he was divorced from his other two wives. He said he had married women in Lima, Ohio, and Oneato, Ala. His last wife was Miss Ima Beckham, of Pascagoula. They married in June, 1912.

Seek Atlanta Woman Who Gave Away Baby

CHATTANOOGA, Aug. 19.—The local police have been unable to discover any clews that will lead to the identity of the parents of the child given Mrs. Alice Maynard by an unknown woman as Mrs. Maynard was boarding a train in Atlanta for Chattanooga. The infant, a girl apparently not more than two months old, is now at Erlanger Hospital. She was plainly dressed and had no jewelry which would aid identification.

The woman who asked her to care for the child, Mrs. Maynard said, assured her the baby's mother would meet her at Chattanooga. When she arrived here, no one claimed the baby.

Boils Are a Bad Indication

With S. S. S. You Can Tell Poisoned Blood to Be Gone.

The appearance of boils leads many people to consider them a sign of robust constitution. They are more apt to signify a condition of sick blood.

It sounds queer to take a blood bath, but that is precisely the effect when you use that remarkable remedy, S. S. S. It has the peculiar action of soaking through the intestines directly into the blood. In a few minutes its influence is at work in every artery, vein and tiny capilliary. Every membrane, every organ of the body, every emunctory becomes in effect a filter to strain the blood of impurities.

And best of all, this remarkable remedy is welcome to the weakest stomach.

You can get S. S. S. at any drug store. It is a standard remedy, recognized everywhere as the greatest blood antidote ever discovered. Beware of any effort to sell you something claimed to be "just as good." If yours is a peculiar case and you desire expert advice, write to The Swift Specific Co., 185 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

PATHFINDER GIVEN BIG WELCOMES ALL ALONG ROUTE TO BIRMINGHAM

By HUGH GRANT.
(Sunday American Representative With Pathfinder.)

TALLAPOOSA, Aug. 19.—E. L. Ferguson, official "pathfinder" for the All-Southern Transcontinental Highway, and party ended a triumphant tour through Georgia here Monday night. The party, consisting of Mr. Ferguson, Mrs. Ferguson and the Ferguson children, arrived on schedule time at 5:45 o'clock. The tourists left early Tuesday morning for Anniston. They will be joined en route by President John Craft, of the Alabama Good Roads Association, and State Highway Engineer Keller, who will accompany them through Alabama.

That Tallapoosa is keenly awake to the importance of the monster project to blaze a trail from Atlanta to San Francisco was clearly indicated Monday night when a score of Tallapoosans, including Mayor C. E. Pearce, L. E. Chandler, editor of The Tallapoosa Journal, and other prominent citizens, held a conference with Mr. Ferguson at the Tallapoosa Hotel in regard to the formulation of plans for the development of better roads in this vicinity.

The Tallapoosa good roads boosters were very enthusiastic over the campaign inaugurated by The Sunday American, and pledged their hearty support.

All Towns Giv. Welcome.

Tallapoosa's warm reception, however, was only one of many between here and Atlanta. All along the 63-mile route the good roads boosters turned out to give the transcontinentalists a rousing send-off.

At Austell Mayor L. C. Upshaw and Editor Dake, of The Douglasville New Era, heading a delegation of Douglasville boosters, met the tourists and escorted them to Douglasville. Here good roads and highways were talked of, and a typical old-time Georgia dinner was served at the Douglasville Hotel, with Mayor Upshaw and Mr. Dake acting as hosts.

Other Douglasville citizens who acted as official escorts were R. E. Edwards, J. F. Long, superintendent of the cotton mill; J. M. Banks, and Douglas County Commissioners J. T. Lee and A. S. Gresham.

According to Mr. Gresham, the Douglas County authorities are preparing now to spend several thousand dollars on the development of the old Tallapoosa road. The largest work will be the construction of a new steel bridge over Sweetwater Creek costing approximately $2,000.

The improvement in Douglas County of the Tallapoosa highway which was traversed by the Ferguson party and which has been selected as the official route will make this one of the best roads in the entire State.

Pathfinder Ferguson declared Monday night that the road between Austell and Douglasville was excellent, and that he remaining sections were good and could be put in fine shape by the expenditure of moderate sums in each county.

Leaving Douglasville Monday afternoon, Mr. Ferguson and party made a bee line for Villa Rica, arriving there on schedule at 3:40. Temple, Ga., was reached shortly after 4 o'clock, Bremen at 5, Waco at 5:15 and Tallapoosa at 5:45. Members of the party reported a most delightful trip, with not a single mishap to mar the journey.

A wire from Heflin, Ala., Tuesday morning told of elaborate preparations there for the reception of Mr. Ferguson and party. From Heflin the tourists will proceed to Anniston, Ala., where a monster good roads celebration will be held a a greeting ebration will be held as a greeting guson expects to reach Birmingham Thursday at noon.

St. Clair Boosters Guide Pathfinders.

ANNISTON, Aug. 19.—A party from St. Clair County, including John W. Inzer, probate judge; J. L. Herring, Dr. W. B. Johnson and Uranus Pickette, all of Asheville, arrived here to-day to join the Ferguson transcontinental pathfinding party. They will pilot the scouts to St. Clair, whence they go to Birmingham.

Duchess Who Rules Luxembourg to Wed

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LUXEMBOURG, Aug. 19.—Te betrothal of Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide, aged 19, ruler of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, to Prince Henry of Bavaria, was announced today.

Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide ascended the throne on her eighteenth birthday, from which time German and French plots have been directed at her, for both big neighbors have long looked at the little Grand Duchess with covetous eyes.

The Grand Duchess is one of the most beautiful girls in Europe.

Prelate Against Sex Equality Idea

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 19.—"I do not believe the Creator intended the position of woman in the world should be the same as that of man," Archbishop Sebastian G. Messmer, of the Milwaukee diocese, told the Catholic Press Association, in speaking against woman suffrage.

"However," he added, "I would not dare to come out with a positive statement that agitation for woman suffrage is against the rules of the church. The church has not taken any definite stand, and until it does, each individual has a right to think, talk and act as he sees fit."

He Feared His 'Girl' More Than Gallows

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Robert Cade, 18, who surrendered to the police because he feared the scorn of his sweetheart more than he did the possibility of the gallows, was released to-day. He was suspected of the murder of Bennie Holstein, 13. Circumstances pointed strongly to his guilt. He was being sought over the country.

"My girl would have nothing to do with me when she learned that I was under suspicion," he told the police "I would gladly risk my neck to keep her respect"

Auto Searchlights Hit X-Ray Gowns

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—If an automobilist in sportive mood feels inclined to shoot his searchlights through the X-ray skirts worn by passing women, he may do so with impunity anywhere in Judge Breen's Yorkville district. "It is the skirts, and not the lights," declares the Judge, "that need reforming."

Breen discharged John Carey, a merchant, charged with causing embarrassment with his auto lights to women attired in the fashionable "X-rays."

Envoy Page Called An Enemy to Labor

NEW YORK, Aug 19.—Walter H. Page, Ambassador to Great Britain was denounced as unfit to represent the United States in England at a meeting of the Central Federated Union, because of his alleged enmity to trades unions and as a result of the strike in the plant of the Doubleday, Page Publishingilg Company.

The pressmen, feeders, printers, photo-engravers and foundry workers are now on strike.

"The wages paid are far below the prevailing rate," said Secretary Shahams, "and everything is done to thwart organized labor."

Blind Tiger Taken From Water Wagon

TIFTON, Aug. 19.—When the man on the water wagon sells liquor, the town that owns the water wagon is up against it to keep in line with prohibition.

Henry Wade, negro driver of the city sprinkling cart, has been arrested by Chief of Police Thrasher for using the city sprinkling cart as a blind tiger.

JUDGE GODBEE'S SLAYER PLANS COURT FIGHT

Attorneys for Woman Make Statement—Slain Man Buried at Waynesboro, Ga.

MILLEN, Aug. 19.—Mrs. Edna Godbee, divorced wife of Judge W. S. Godbee, who shot and killed her former husband and seriously wounded his second wife, has employed Attorneys G. C. Dekle and J. A. Dixon to defend her. The following statement has been issued by them:

"We have no apprehension as to the outcome of this case. We do not propose to try it on the streets or in the newspapers, but in the courtroom. There we expect the truth as regards this case to convince the jury and the country at large of the innocence of Mrs. Godbee. There has been already an effort on the part of some people to distort the facts in this case, and we ask in simple justice that the public withhold their judgment until they shall have taken a calm and dispassionate survey of the evidence in the case, after which we do not fear their verdict."

Mrs. Godbee, who was so seriously wounded by the divorced wife, is in a serious condition, physicians not giving much hope of her recovery.

Mrs. Edna Godbee is in the Jenkins County jail awaiting the preliminary trial, which will be held as soon as the condition of the wounded woman is such as to insure recovery, or until death has claimed the victim.

Judge Godbee Is Buried at Waynesboro.

WAYNESBORO, Aug. 19.—Funeral services over the remains of Judge Walter S. Godbee, who was shot to death by his divorced wife in Millen yesterday morning, were held here today at 11 o'clock, with Masonic ceremonies.

Quite a number of the lodge members accompanied the body to Waynesboro, where they were met by the Waynesboro Masons, and both lodges escorted the remains to the last resting place.

Mr. Godbee was a native of Burke County and was 56 years old. He was one of the best known and honored citizens of Jenkins County, which he so materially assisted in forming.

The funeral was largely attended by friends in Waynesboro and his children, besides many relatives from this and Jenkins County. It was his request that he be buried in Waynesboro.

'I'm a Blacksmith,' Says Harding Davis

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—A young newspaper reporter, paper and pencil in hand, darted briskly among the crowd at Healy's Restaurant during the process of ejecting the diners. He saw a man continually in the shadow of District Attorney Whitman.

"Will you give me your name, please?" asked the young news gatherer.

"Davis!" replied the other.

"May I have your first name?" questioned the youth.

"Richard Harding—Richard Harding Davis."

"What is your occupation?"

"Oh, I'm a blacksmith."

Two Killed at Camp Meeting Dice Games

Laborer En Route for Fortune Dies at Sea

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—While en route to Australia to get $1,000,000 which was left to him by his father-in-law, William Lunstall, a laborer, died at sea, according to a wireless telegram received here to-day. The father of Lunstall's wife died in Australia leaving a vast fortune, and Lunstall proved the only heir. He was a penniless laborer and had difficulty getting passage money to buy a ticket.

KELLY IS PUT ON ALDERMANIC BODY

Second Ward Water Commissioner Gets McClelland's Place. Pure Vaudeville Law Pends.

C. H. Kelly, water commissioner from the Second Ward, has been chosen to fill the vacancy on the Aldermanic Board from the Second Ward, occasioned by the resignation of Alderman J. E. McClelland. The selection was made by the City Council Monday afternoon.

Mr. Kelly served as Alderman from the Second Ward prior to the election of Mr. McClelland, and when Commissioner George Walker moved out of the ward and left a vacancy on the Water Board, Mr. Kelly was elected to fill his place. The vacancy on the board caused by the resignation of Mr. Kelly will be filled at the next meeting.

No action was taken on the "pure vaudeville" ordinance. It was introduced too late for consideration. The amendment tacked on the ordinance by the Ordinance Committee, according to Acting Chairman Wood prohibits any person appearing on the stage in an "indecent or immodest costume." The original ordinance prohibited tights and short skirts.

Dr. W. D. Vinson, of the Fifth Ward, was chosen to succeed Dr. R. N. Weaver as a Grady Hospital trustee.

The report of the Street Committee adverse to changing the name of Murphy avenue was adopted. The report favorable the change in name of McDaniel Street to Oxford terrace was referred back.

Councilman Ashley's resolution providing for an appropriation of $600 to employ an engineering expert to represent the city when the evaporation test is made at the crematory, was adopted.

Newport Will See Relative of Czar

He may take a trip West to shoot big game.

Lunatic Says He Is Pat Crowe, Kidnaper

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—A man who says he is Pat Crowe, kidnaper of Eddie Cudahy, Jr., son of the wealthy Omaha packer, is held in the Washington Insane Asylum for observation.

The patient told the police and physicians that he had come to Washington to forward his claim on a patent for an invention preventing the spreading of rails.

He said Secretary of State Bryan was his personal friend, and that through the Secretary he hoped to secure his papers from the patent office.

Surgeon General Studies Pellagra

SAVANNAH, Aug. 19.—Dr. Robert Blue, Surgeon General of the Public Health Service of the United States, is in Savannah to inspect pellagra cases in the Marine Hospital and the Quarantine Station at the mouth of the Savannah River. The visit is a part of the tour of inspection throughout the South.

Dr. Blue is especially interested in hook worm and pellagra conditions in the South, and will stop on his way back to Washington at the hookworm camp of the Rockefeller Commission at Wilmington, N. C.

Fresh Appeal for Exhibit To Be Made

Three hundred Atlanta manufacturers will gather at Hotel Ansley for a luncheon at 1 o'clock Tuesday. They will discuss the manufacturers' exposition which the Chamber of Commerce has been endeavoring to establish in its building.

While many manufacturers have signed for space in the exhibit, there still is a large amount which has not been taken. Unless this is arranged for immediately, the proposition is likely to fall through.

Enthusiasm has been displayed, however, and around the Chamber of Commerce the belief is that the exposition is assured.

3 WOUNDED WHEN MOB STORMS JAIL

Spartanburg Sheriff and Deputy Rout Would-Be Lynchers of Negro Assailant.

SPARTANBURG, Aug. 19.—Sheriff White and one deputy fought off a mob of several hundred who attempted to enter Spartanburg County jail and lynch a negro. Frank Eppley, J. C. Owensby and John Turner were wounded by the Sheriff and his deputy before they drove the mob from the jail.

The mob attempted to blow up the jail with dynamite, but failing, tried to batter down the doors. It was then the three men were wounded and the mob was forced to recognize the courage and determination of Sheriff White and his deputy.

Threats were made by the mob that they would secure nitroglycerin and destroy the entire building, but they did not return.

The negro had attacked a young white woman earlier in the day. He was later captured and landed in jail. The mob formed after nightfall and attacked the jail.

Grace Revival Draws Large Crowds Daily

Revival services which started at Grace Methodist Church Sunday are being largely attended both morning and evening. "The Purpose of God" and "Giving the Other Man a Chance" were the subjects dwelt on by the Rev. J. M. Bass Monday. Both addresses were forcefully delivered and made a deep impression on the audience.

O. W. Stapleton, the singing evangelist, rendered several solos and directed the large chorus. H. K. Chapman, a prominent architect of Atlanta, is issuing daily a bulletin on the revival.

Italy Makes Divorce An Issue in Election

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, Aug. 19.—The divorce question, it was made evident to-day, will be the main plank in the coming parliamentary elections in Italy. One set of candidates proposes to make divorce easier; the other to make it harder.

"Let a poor man have a chance at divorce," is the slogan of the pro-divorce party, while the leaders of the other says: "Make the country better by making divorce impossible."

Man Cashing $45,000 U. S. Draft Arrested

Special Cable to The Georgian.

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—A Kerke bank clerk was arrested to-day just as he was in the act of cashing two New York drafts for $45,000, which he had obtained by the fraudulent use of the secret code of the Deutscher Bank of Leipsic.

Melodrama Comes Back to Own at Bijou

Throughout the entire country there has been a great demand for the old plays that stirred the heart, quickened the pulse, brought tears that no one was ashamed of, rewarded the hero and sent the villain to his doom.

Melodrama is undoubtedly coming back good and hard and the announcement that the Bijou will re-open its doors next Monday with a first-class company presenting the most successful comedy dramas and melodramas is being received with unusual interest.

The Jewell Kelley Company has been engaged for an indefinite run to put on big scenic plays with all the stage accessories and special scenery that could be secured at higher prices.

The opening bill for next week will be "Her Fatal Shadow," a comedy drama full of action, wholesome comedy, stirring climaxes and with a heart story that will appeal to everyone.

The company has been selected with great care and includes some of the greatest favorites that have played the city. The roster of names includes Jewell Kelley, Richard Mandell, Thomas McDonough, Eddie Black, Miss Rose Morris, Miss Grace Webber, Clare Summers, Marie Claire, Earl Higley and others well known in the dramatic profession.

Yacht Being Built To Meet Lipton Boat

PHILADELPHIA, Aug 19—A yacht that will meet the other American sloops in the race that is to determine the boat that is to meet Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger in September, 1914, is being designed here by Bowes & Mower. The ship will be built in this city with funds subscribed by members of the Corinthian Yacht Club who are said to have pledged $100,000 for the purpose.

Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company

ATLANTA NEW YORK PARIS

A Great Waist Sale Starts Here At 8:30 in the Morning

A doubly fine Waist Sale because it is made up of waists from our own stocks and others that our buyer just captured in New York—in one instance we are clearing out stock in true Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. fashion, in the other we are passing on a fortunate purchase, this, also, in true Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose fashion.

Many kinds of waists are included, batistes, voiles, crepes, linens, crepe de chines and wash silks, and in every instance the savings are more than half.

We doubt if the woman who "never has enough waists" ever had a better opportunity to supply herself—and the waists will be those she will choose for their charm and chic and—savings.

But here—

49c

For $1.00 and $1.50 Waists

White linen waists in plain tailored styles, tucked and plaited; also lingerie waists trimmed with neatly patterned embroideries and with laces—in the regular way $1.00 and $1.50 never bought prettier—low neck, short sleeves, high neck, long sleeves.

79c

For $1.50 and $2.45 Waists

Some of these are just out of their boxes and the laces, the embroideries, batistes, voiles and styles are as fresh as can be, others are those $1.50 and $2.45 values from our own stocks that are a bit mussed. All white, low neck, short sleeves, high neck, long sleeves.

$1.19

For $2.50 to $4.00 Waists

One particularly attractive and new style is of white voile with a low round collar edged with net frilling, short sleeves, embroidered front, others of batiste and voiles with crochet buttons, a few show Dresden colorings—one hundred to choose from.

For $4.00 and $4.50 Waists

One hundred in all, made in many pretty ways. Voiles, batistes and French crepes, with low flat collars and lace collars, linen laces trim a number of these and crystal buttons and embroidery that looks much like hand work.

For $5.00 to $8.75 Waists

Fine choice here—sixty-five waists of white and striped crepe de chine, of China silk and wash silks, Irish lace collars are prominent, and little vest effects worked out in sheer laces and heavy plaited double ruffles. They will go quickly.

$1.19

For $1.50 to $3.75 House Dresses

Eighty-six house dresses to add zest to the selling. They are lawns, daintily striped and flowered and figured and fashioned, light colors, low collars trimmed with Swiss embroideries and folds, plain skirts with panels in front and back.

SUFFRAGE CRAZE WILL RUIN U. S., SAYS TILLMAN

South Carolina Senator Also Deplores "Swapping of Wives Among the Rich Class."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—"I, looking at the growing craze for women suffrage and the rapid increase in the number of divorces granted in this country, sadly think, if I do not say, 'America, thy race is almost run unless something is done to check thy headlong speed,'" declared Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, in the Senate to-day, while discussing the woman's suffrage question.

Senator Tillman declared he is strongly opposed to granting the ballot to women.

"The customs of our people inherited from our forefathers," said the Senator, "make it dangerous to 'monkey' with womankind. If the California men had our customs, Diggs and Caminetti would not be allowed to go to trial now because they would have been shot like dogs.

"Among our very rich people in America the geenration has gone so far that swapping wives is a common practice. The women are just as bad as the men."

Tamer Dying After Battle With Lion

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SLATON APPROVES 3 ATLANTA BILLS

With more than 200 bills on Governor Slaton's desk which had to be signed immediately, the doors of the executive offices were closed to visitors Tuesday while the Governor delved into the mass of work in an effort to get the bills signed and out of the way before the next batch came from the engrossing clerks of the House and Senate.

The Governor expects to sign all the bills that reach him Tuesday before the day is over, in order to forestall any discussion as to whether Sunday shall be counted as one of the five days in which he is allowed to sign bills passed by the Legislature.

Up to Tuesday morning Governor Slaton had signed only one of the three local bills affecting Atlanta. This was the measure creating a new judge for the Atlanta Circuit, which he approved Monday afternoon. The other two, the bill creating a new charter for the city and the bill creating municipal courts, probably will be signed Tuesday.

It is understood the Governor will defer appointing the new Atlanta judge until he returns from the conference of Governors at Colorado Springs, Colo., next week. Governor Slaton will leave Saturday, to be gone about ten days.

THAW FAMILY IS READY TO FIGHT EXTRADITION

Escaped Slayer, Arrested in Canadian Village, Defies Captors. Admits Identity Readily.

seen on the train had alighted and hired a man named Brooks to take them for a drive.

Kelsey got the direction and, by asking along the road, traced the carriage driven by Brooks across the line into the Canadian woods. The three men had evidently persuaded Brooks to drive them by a wood road, and Kelsey traced them easily. They overtook Brooks, but his carriage was empty.

"I would not drive them any farther," said Brooks. "I have got to get back to the falls. They offered me $20 to go on, but I couldn't do it."

"Where did they go?" Kelsey asked.

"They got a farmer to drive them to Coaticook," Brooks replied.

Thaw Admits Identity.

Kelsey and his two companions put on speed, and on the edge of Coaticook they saw the team ahead with three men and the driver in it.

Kelsey stopped at a house and telephoned to the Coaticook police, then went ahead in his automobile and followed the vehicle. A policeman stopped the carriage. "Which of you is Harry K. Thaw?" he demanded.

The three men each made denials, and said the police had made a mistake. Then Kelsey came up, and when the man who had previously admitted he was Thaw saw Kelsey, he refused to talk.

Later Kelsey, who went to the police station with the officers and the man he had identified as Thaw, telephoned to his family in Colebrook that Thaw had again admitted his identity to the Coaticook police.

Deputy Sheriff Kelsey then telephoned to New York and told them he had a man thought to be Thaw under arrest.

"Hold him," said the New York authorities, and the Coaticook authorities at once entered a charge of being a fugitive from justice against Thaw and released the other two.

Preparations were made for taking the man held to Sherbrooke this afternoon. The object of the party in leaving the train at Beecher Falls is believed to have been a desire to avoid the immigration and customs officers who board the train at the border and scrutinize each passenger.

Wife Still in Fear Of Thaw, She Says.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Former Assemblyman Richard J. Butler, a West Side politician and former henchman of Chief of Police "Big Bill" Devery, who was reported to have been implicated in the plot by which Thaw escaped, denied today that he had been mixed up in the escape of the Pittsburger.

"I know nothing about this, and I certainly had no part in it," declared Butler. "It is certain, though, that if any man was about to be mixed up in an affair of this kind he would not use his own name. I believe that some gangster who was paid to help Thaw out used my name. In fact, I believe that I know the man."

Butler admitted that he had been away from home for several days, but denied that he had been in Matteawan.

One of the men for whom a warrant was issued in Dutchess County yesterday used the name of Richard J. Butler, of New York, while waiting at the Holland Hotel in Beacon for the Thaw getaway to come off.

Sheriff Hornbeck and District Attorney Conger, of Dutchess County, armed with warrants for the arrest of Thaw, Thomas Flood, Roger Thompson, Michael O'Keefe, Eugene Duffy and Butler, came to this city to-day.

Family to Fight Extradition.

Evelyn Thaw, the estranged wife of the slayer, cowers in this city, afraid of her life. She declared that she would keep a bodyguard about her until Thaw's actual whereabouts became known.

It is evident that Thaw and his family will make a determined fight against extradition to this State if an attempt is made to bring him back. Thaw's defense, in all probability, will be that his escape was providential.

Detectives in the employ of Acting Governor Martin H. Glynn, who is taking unusual interest in the case, reported the discovery of two of the alleged conspirators and said that arrests were imminent. It was reported Mr. Glynn would convene the Dutchess County Grand Jury in extraordinary session to probe the escape of Thaw. Burns detectives have been brought into the case and are helping in the search for Thaw.

Accompanied by Miss Mary Copely, her sister and traveling companion, Mrs. William Thaw left to-day for Cresson, Pa.

Mrs. Thaw refused to discuss the escape of her son further than to say:

"I have positively not heard from Harry since my letter yesterday, but hope he is safe and well."

LIND AND HUERTA REACH PEACE AGREEMENT

Report of War Move Against the United States Is Denied by Charge O'Shaughnessy.

It is thought that the Mexican newspapers were instructed to print only this story and that they will not carry the denial of this ultimatum issued by Senor Gamboa early to-day.

In this way, it is believed, the Huerta government will be enabled to "save its face" before the Mexican people without at the same time bringing on war with the United States.

Lind and Huerta Patch Up a Truce.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 19.—After the Mexican Government had served a note upon the United States rejecting President Wilson's Mexican proposals and demanding recognition—an action which might have resulted in war—John Lind, special envoy from President Wilson, and President Huerta got together in the National Palace early to-day and patched up a truce.

President Huerta experienced a sudden change of heart last night, summoned Envoy Lind to him and spent two hours in discussion of possible measures that would lead to peace in Mexico.

Cablegrams reaching the White House to-day show clearly that Huerta yesterday afternoon turned down Mr. Lind with great emphasis, and that the latter reported the failure of his mission to the State Department. Some hours later General Huerta summoned Mr. Lind to the National Palace and discussed with him the very points he previously had refused to consider. The result of this discussion the White House has not yet made public.

The change of front on Huerta's part is puzzling President Wilson and State Department officials, and they are wondering what change of attitude will come next.

No final point in the negotiations between Envoy Lind and President Huerta has been reached, and official information coming to Washington to-day shows they are progressing satisfactorily. That the official American note to Huerta was rejected in one instance and that this rejection was withdrawn is established. The full text of the Huerta reply to the note is being cabled to the State Department, and probably will be laid before President Wilson late to-day.

Mexico City Shaken By Arsenal Explosion.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 19.—A heavy explosion shook the southwestern section of Mexico City to-day, causing great alarm. All the windows in the suburb of Tubacay were broken. It was at first believed to have been an earthquake, but later it was said to have been caused by an explosion of the powder magazine and arsenal at Santa Fe.

There was a heavy troop movement to-day. Large bodies of infantry, cavalry, and artillery passed through the streets.

Teachers' Vouchers To Go Out at Once

Vouchers to pay salaries of country school teachers who have been forced by the State to wait eight months for their money will be mailed out Tuesday afternoon, according to statements made in the office of State Superintendent M. L. Brittain.

The amount necessary to pay the teachers is $486,000, of which $58,000 goes to the cities and small towns, and $428,000 to the counties.

U. S. to Aid Japs In Land Law Test

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—It is understood that in its efforts to deal fairly with the Japanese Government the State Department has indicated a purpose to facilitate any court proceedings that may be brought to test the alien land law legislation in California.

Issue Warrants For Japanese and Wife

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The Bureau of Immigration has issued warrants for the arrest of Hidekuni Iwata, a wealthy Japanese, and his wife, Norae Iwata, on charges of harboring women for immoral purposes in Fresno, Cal.

Iwata and his wife, immigration officers declare, were proprietors of property which housed 27 women arrested in a recent raid by the Fresno police.

Birmingham to Need Wire Workers Soon

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 19.—By December it is figured there will be need for no less than 1,500 men who are skilled in steel wire and cast iron pipe-making in Birmingham, the plants of the American Steel and Wire Company and the National Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry Company being rushed to completion.

Wages of steel wire workers are above the average.

Liquor Question Is Issue in Alabama

ANNISTON, Aug. 19.—With the hope of keeping the liquor question out of the next session of the Alabama Legislature, a proposed compromise between prohibitionists and local optionists in this county is being discussed, the object being to insure men of high moral and mental ability, men with business experience, to represent the county at the next session.

Mystery in Death Of Woman on Train

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Mrs. May Bacharach, 43, wife of Herschel Bacharach, superintendent of the City Club at Boston, Mass., died to-day, poisoned by food or water on a train en route from St. Louis to Chicago.

Coroner Hoffman of this city, began a searching investigation of the cause of her death.

RICH DENOUNCED IN BOOK BY CHEF

Leon Pescheret, in Socialistic Treatise, Calls Them Ill-Bred Hogs and Immorality Producers.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—In a booklet published under the title of "Gluttony and Lucre," Leon Pescheret, famous over Europe as a chef, and now directing the commissary of a large Chicago hotel, says the wealthy patrons of eating places in America are "gilded, mixed breed, perverted calves, who have more money than sense, and who become criminals through indulgence in their rattish and doggish pastimes."

Three of Pescheret's most pointed paragraphs say:

"Many servants would experience a great deal more satisfaction and be rewarded by much more gratitude attending real swine than at feeding the ill-bred hogs that are disorganizers and producers of immorality and the present-day social order of things."

"In no class have I found more hypocrisy and false devotion, false morals, deceitfulness—even among themselves—than among snobbish, wealthy people."

"Clothes and jewelry do not make the lady or gentleman. Any good experienced and traveled waiter realizes that people finely dressed and with plenty of money to spend show about as much ignorance about a daily menu as a mule dressed up in silks would show."

JUDGE STAYS EXECUTION.

TIFTON.—Pending an appeal to the State Supreme Court, Judge W. E. Thomas has indefinitely postponed the execution of I. B. Hall, convicted of the killing of Dennis W. Hall and sentenced to hang on August 22.

Augusta-Columbus Railroad Proposed

COLUMBUS, Aug. 19.—A movement which had its origin in Macon, with a strong second by the Columbus Board of Trade, has come to light which proposes a direct railroad line between Columbus and Augusta, passing through Macon and the county seat of every county which it would touch.

The distance would be about 240 miles, and would not parallel any other road. Those who have begun the movement express confidence in the project and believe that it can be financed and that it will become a reality.

CURED ITCHING HUMOR ON FACE

Very Embarrassing. Could Not Sleep. Used Resinol—Well in a Week.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 3, 1913.—"I had a ringworm on the side of my face. It began like a cold blister—a small red mark. Each day it became larger until it was a round ring about the size of a quarter. It burned and itched me terribly, and was very sore. It was also swollen and caused me a great deal of discomfort, as I could not sleep at night. It was very embarrassing and I didn't want any of my friends to see me. I used several remedies such as —— and some kind of a powder, but they did no good. I used Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment for one week and cured it." (Signed) Eleanore D. Shekels, 308 North Sheridan Ave.

Resinol Soap and Ointment are speedily effective for eczema and other itching, burning eruptions, pimples, dandruff, burns, old sores and piles. Prescribed by doctors for eighteen years. Sold by all druggists. For free samples write to Dept. 6-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

INSIST ON ODOR-O-NO—THERE'S NOTHING "JUST AS GOOD."

Nell Brinkley Says

I KNOW lots of folks who won't say it—that saddest word—"good-bye." "Adieu," they say, and "addio," "farewell" and "so-long," "auf Wiedersehen" and "aloha," "until the next time" and "be good"—but not "good-bye."

Under the word "good-bye" the sun seems dim. Birds droop and do not sing. The heart beats slow and heavy and the temples ache and tighten. The blue sky films with gray. Every face that turns our way and passes on seems to hide tragedy. Everybody else in the world, seems like, is saying good-bye, too.

And we watch them with tenderer eyes since we are bidding some one farewell. After good-bye there is nothing to do, no place to go, no one to see. The world seems bigger and suddenly wiped bare of beauty. We are afraid!

But EVERYBODY will say "HELLO!" They don't go hunting round for another word, any other word, so they can sort of slide by the plain, potent English. Under the short, keen, gladdest word, the sun and the sky are gold and blue. If it rains, why then we suddenly like rain. Under our tight jackets the heart beats high and fast and bursting big. Every face that turns our way seems like it had good news and blinds us.

If, maybe, a sad one lifts out of the glad ones, we forget it soon. Because we are saying "Hello." And if there's a bird singing anywhere we hear it. There is so much to do, so much to see, so many folks to like. The world seems suddenly like a rose and "full," as sweet-tempered R. L. S. says, "of a number of things."

And we are not afraid.

Like Champagne.

At a meeting presided over by a burly country squire the chief speaker was a budding orator with a seat in the upper house.

Said the chairman, grasping the nervous speaker by the arm on the conclusion of his lordship's address:

"Your speech was like a glass of good champagne"—here the noble lord smiled pleasantly—"lots of froth and very dry."

Then the smile came off.

His Guide Book.

An English bishop who was an extremely busy man, and had to travel a good deal, was addressing the children of a school. He said:

"My dear children, I have been all this week traveling hither and thither through my diocese, and what book do you think has guided me? Come, now, it's a book beginning with 'B.'"

"The Bible, sir," cried a chorus of youthful voices.

"Ah, no," said the Bishop, with a twinkle in his eye. "It's Bradshaw."

Do You Know---

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reason to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms, and underground passages—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet.

Clocks without hands or faces are now common in Switzerland. The timepiece stands in the hall, and when a button is pressed by means of phonographic arrangements it calls out "Half-past five," or "Five minutes to nine," as the case may be.

The greatest number of runners ever contesting in a single race ran through the streets of New York recently in a twelve and three-eighths-mile marathon. The runners taking part were 1,500 in number, and there were 300 prizes.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

PERHAPS HE IS SHY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am working in a place of business with a man of whom I think a great deal. Any time I write him to call to see me he appears to be quite delighted and calls, but never makes any effort to call unless I ask him. Don't you think he should ask me if he can call? PUZZLED.

Such a request from him would show an interest in you which he now seems to lack. You say he always accepts and is delighted. That encourages me in the belief that he thinks a great deal of you, but is bashful.

Don't ask him for a time. I have an idea he will speedily ask you.

LET IT BE NO.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young lady of sixteen and keeping company with a young man of eighteen for one year. This young man has asked me to marry him, but I would like for him to change his position. He promised me he would in the spring. Kindly let me know if I shall give any decided answer. ANXIOUS.

You are sixteen and can well afford to wait. You do not state what the man's position is, so my advice is based only on your years. I want love to come to you, but, believe me, my dear, it will be all the sweeter if your judgment is more mature.

MAKE THE OVERTURES.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a girl and she is in love with me. We had been keeping steady company, but lately we got mad, and we do not speak to each other. I would like a reconciliation and so would she. B. S. L.

You are a man, and stronger to bear the burden. Take on your shoulders the burden of the blame, persuading yourself that you offended and deserve it. Tell her you alone are to blame, beg forgiveness, and promise never to offend again. If you are not willing to say "I was wrong," then you are not fitted to say "I love you."

He Wasn't Shy.

Old Lady (to cabman)—Does your horse ever shy at motors?

Cabby—Lor' bless you, no, lady; 'e didn't even shy when railway trains fust come in.

HOW ARE YOU FEEDING YOUR CHILDREN?

Are you giving them nourishing food—food that will develop their muscles, bones and flesh—food that is easily digested and cheap?

Ever thought about Spaghetti—Faust Spaghetti? Do you know that a 10c package of Faust Spaghetti contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef? Your doctor will tell you it does. And Faust Spaghetti costs one-tenth the price of meat. Doesn't that solve a big item in the high cost of living?

You probably haven't served Faust Spaghetti as often as you should because you don't know how many different ways it can be cooked—write for free recipe book to-day and you'll be surprised at the big variety of dishes you can make from this nutritious food. In 5c and 10c packages.

Lady Constance Stewart Richardson
on
How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Dancing.

BEAUTY must be a harmonious whole. In the figures of the dance one ungraceful step can mar the perfection of the rhythmical charm one is trying to produce. In the physical rhythm of the human body an ugly arm or hand can spoil the spell of loveliness.

The question I always ask myself is: Why, in a world where we are all under the sway of physical lure, do we so calmly accept our own imperfections and those of our children?

We work intelligently for evolution and growth in health and strength and brain power; but beauty and grace we accept in the old superstitious fairy-tale fashion as the gift of the good fairies—and we fold our hands in the supposedly philosophical decision that either we have it or we have it not. Not at all! Either we have beauty or we set about getting it—if we have brains enough to acquire anything!

It is a simple thing to train the human body in the right way—the way it should go—in the beginning, but it is hard to alter bodily faults once they have come. However, if you have come to maturity without proper training in bodily grace, and the health and ease and beauty it brings, do not despair—instead, dedicate 30 minutes morning and evening—(one hour out of your day) to the beautiful art of the dance, and soon your reward will be great not only in terms of the pleasure of pleasant, graceful movement, but in health, beauty and a gloriously symmetrical figure, too.

Proper Training.

And make sure that your little children, and the dear young things all about you, have the proper beginnings to insure for them healthy and beautiful and graceful bodily growth.

Since an ugly arm or hand can so easily spoil the perfection of beauty, suppose, to-day, I show you how beautiful arms and hands may be evolved through proper training. It seems a far cry from dancing to beautiful arms and hands, but I shall try to show you how they may be gained in the rhythmical movement and exercise of the classical dance.

As most of the movements of the classical dance are executed with high-flexed arch and the body's weight falling on the ball of the foot, while the instep is held in a firm high curve, they give of themselves a slender grace and power to the too-much-neglected foot. In both of the exercises I give you to-day the body must be poised lightly and springily upon the ball of the foot, inclining forward toward the toes. Walking and dancing thus will banish the flat-foot that seems to be a foe of modern high-heeled civilization.

The first picture shows one stage of a very wonderful arm exercise. Poise the weight on the balls of the feet, swaying slightly back and forward from toes to heels as the arms are raised with drooping wrists to shoulder height. When the arms are straight lines from shoulder sockets, raise the wrists and arms simultaneously until the backs of the hands just touch above the head.

A Dancing Step.

Now drop the arms slowly, with rhythmical muscular control, to the shoulder height again and turn the arms so the palms are alternately up and down parallel to the floor. Then, with palms down, sink the arms gradually to the sides, at the same time inclining the weight gradually to the entire foot. Practice this with gradually receding and increasing tempo, and finally do it as you walk forward on tiptoe, or as near as you can manage to this toe position.

The second picture is a little dancing step that can be practiced at a walking tempo until enough facility is gained to do it merrily and lightly as a dance. Advance on the ball of the feet with toes pointing outward. Incline the body forward, and keep the head a bit forward in the line of the slight curve of the back. The arms swing up in gentle curves until the elbow is about at waist height.

As the weight is swaying to the forward left foot, swing the left arm out with its line a slight droop from elbow to wrist, and the right arm in, with the forearm curving up almost perpendicular to the ground, and the wrist drooping. Swing the arms in and out thus from side to side as the weight of the body springs from foot to foot. In all these arm exercises hold the hand relaxed from the wrist, with light, pliant fingers, middle fingers fairly close together, small and index fingers gently curved and relaxed with the index finger pointing up ever so slightly.

The faithful practice of these two exercises will register for you a distinct step toward the acquisition of poetically graceful arms and hands.

The figure to the left shows the culmination of the exercise for developing beautiful arms through rhythmic motion.

To the right is shown a classical dancing step in which the hands and arms are also exercised.

HOW THIS WOMAN FOUND HEALTH

Would Not Give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for All Rest of Medicine in the World.

Utica, Ohio.—"I suffered everything from a female weakness after baby came. I had numb spells and was dizzy, had black spots before my eyes, my back ached and I was so weak I could hardly stand up. My face was yellow, even my finger nails were colorless and I had displacement. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am stout, well and healthy. I can do all my own work and can walk to town and back and not get tired. I would not give your Vegetable Compound for all the rest of the medicines in the world. I tried doctor's medicines and they did me no good."—Mrs. Mary Earlewine, R. F. D. No. 8, Utica, Ohio.

Another Case.

Nebo, Ill.—"I was bothered for ten years with female troubles and the doctors did not help me. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and every month I had to spend a few days in bed. I read so many letters about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound curing female troubles that I got a bottle of it. It did me more good than anything else I ever took and now it has cured me. I feel better than I have for years, and tell everybody what the Compound has done for me. I believe I would not be living to-day but for that."—Mrs. Hettie Green-street, Nebo, Illinois.

Little Bobbie's Pa
By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

OH, husband, sed Ma to Pa last nite, I have the cutest thing to tell you. Our deer littel son has a littel sweetheart. He met her to-day. She is a littel city gurl that lives neer our city hoam, & Bobbie rowed her all oaver the lake this morning. How perfeckly cunning, Ma sed. To think of our gallant littel son beeing a Romeo.

I aint no Romeo, I toald Ma. I wish you wuddent say that.

The littel deers looked so cute out thare on the lake, Ma sed. Bobbie helped her into the boat & out of it jest like a prince helping out a princess, Ma sed. Did you enjoy yure day, Bobbie, you and littel Grayce?

No I diddent, I toald Ma. & she aint any sweetheart of mine, eether. It was her father's bote & she dident know how to row it & I wanted to row, so I got in & rowed the bote. I dident like her vary much, I toald Ma, beekaus she laffed at me wen I spelled her naim rong. I spelled it without a Y, I sed, & that is the way to spell Grace.

Bobbie, Pa sed, I tell you what to do. If you want to win littel Grayce, you must rite her a poem. I will rite her a poem for you to reed to her, sed Pa, & you can say you rote it.

Bobbie will lose her sure if he tries that, sed Ma. He has a littel boy frend that rites good poetry, littel Georgie Crowley, & he can git him to rite the poem.

No, sed Pa, I will rite the poem. So Pa went & got a sheet of paper and rote this poem for me to show to Grace:

Littel Grayce, charming Grayce,
I luv yure voice, I luv your fayce.
Thou art the idol of my hart,
& from thy side I'll never part.
Sum day wen I am grown to manhood
& deeside to marry, as every man shood,
I'll cum to you, deer, with a smile,
And ask to lead you up the aisle.
Thou art the sweetest gurl in this place,
My darling Grayce.

I aint going to show her that, I toald Pa. I doant luv her & she aint my sweethart. I aint going to start in so yung telling gurls that I luv them wen I doant luv them at all, I sed.

You have got to do that, sed Pa, to git along. Why, wen I was yure age I toald all the gurl I luved them, Pa I toald all the gurls I luved them, Pa me, but I could see thay did. I was vary hansum as a boy, sed Pa, & I had a grate way with the ladies. I used to write them verses & thay threw down all thare other beaus for me. I will give you a quarter, Bobbie, if you show this poem to littel Grayce, & if she doesnt call you a darling boy I will give you a dollar beesides.

So I showed Grayce the poem & sed I rote it, & she laffed & sed it sounded jest like sumthing that a green kid rote, so I made a dollar and a quarter from Pa.

Clever Hostess.

A German band happened to play under the windows of a house in a fashionable neighborhood the other afternoon, when Mrs. B. was "at home." They were a fair specimen of their kind—blaring and noisy, yet correct in their time and altogether in movement from long practice. The butler started out to drive them away, for they interrupted the music within, but Mrs. B. ordered him to invite them in. A happy thought struck her.

"Ladies and gentlemen," she said, five minutes later, "a party of our friends have consented to give an imitation of a street band. I now have the pleasure of introducing them."

Then the six members of the organization filed awkwardly into place and played a piece. The audience delightedly declared that the mimicry was perfect, especially the make-up of the players, who were recalled half a dozen times.

"Would you take them for anything but genuine street stragglers?" was asked of a belle.

"Indeed, yes," she confidently replied; "they're clever in their mimicry, but one can always tell gentlemen, no matter how disguised. I'm dying to find out who they are."

A Bachelor's Diary
By MAX.

AUGUST 10.—I have wondered ever since the accident why Sally did not come to me, and learned this morning. She had sailed for Europe the day before and was on the ocean the day Richards received Mrs. Allen's telegram to come at once.

I am glad she is away. If she were here and did not come I would suffer all the pangs of an abused and neglected boy, and if she came, goodness alone knows what I would say or do in my weakness. I am sure I would demand the rights of a sick man to her devotion, or fret myself into a fever if she refused.

I had a note from her to-day, written in Paris.

"My dear big brother," she wrote, "I can't tell you how alarmed I was at reading in the cable news in a Paris paper of your accident. I hope that the charge of exaggeration always made against the press is true this time. I receive daily cables regarding your condition from the doctor, and he assures me you are getting along all right. You know, my dear big brother, I need you. You are more than all the world to me.

"SALLY."

Isn't that just like a woman? She puts in that word "brother" twice to make me realize that I am no more than a brother to her, and then adds "You are more than all the world to me" to keep me crazy about her.

She has a husband, and can't have me, but she likes to be loved, and intends to keep me loving her.

Past Proofs.

In looking backward I find every reason for believing that her opposition to the widow was not actuated entirely by sisterly feelings. The look of warnings she sent me, and many, many telegrams to beware of the woman who was pursuing me, are proof to me that Sally loved me then, and I did not know it.

"You are so stupid," she said to me once, "that if a woman were in love with you and tried her best to show it you would never see it. Now, suppose, for instance, that I loved you and had been trying to tell you for more than a year."

"But you don't," I added, "you love Jack."

"Yes," she repeated, dully, "I love Jack. He is my husband, and, of course, I love him. The law many centuries ago ordained that a wife should love her husband, and I wouldn't presume to question the law."

She laughed a little bitterly. "But suppose," she repeated, "that I loved you, and told you so."

Sally is a very handsome woman. I recall that on this occasion, she was lying in a hammock, and I sat in a chair near her. We were on her porch, waiting, I believe, for Jack to return from town.

"If you loved me," I said, "I think I would make you realize as you have never realized what it is to have a man's love. But this is nonsense, for, of course, there is Jack."

"Yes," she said, "there is Jack. Max, go home! You are so good-looking to-night you are dangerous."

I laughed, for I thought it was only more of her nonsense.

"Go home," she repeated. I got up and started for the steps rather sulky to be treated so, and she caught up with me when I had descended the second step and threw both arms around my neck. "You are just two steps taller than I," she laughed. Then she pressed my face against hers and whispered that I was a dear, big stupid.

And do you know, Diary, I wonder now what it was that made me so stupid. I had been so sure for years that she belonged to Jack, not because her marriage ties bound her, but because she loved him and had no room in her thoughts for any other man, that it never entered my head that she cared for me.

I know she suffered and grew thin and haggard when Jack was gone with the widow, but if I had had any sense I believe I could have made those ten days the happiest of her life.

And now, instead of being grateful that I have been saved from wrong-doing, I look at myself with disgust because I didn't recognize my opportunities. She was humiliated because of the manner in which her husband slighted her; her heart was mine all the time, and she couldn't tell me, and I was too big a dolt to see.

When I get well, if I get well—"You know, Max," the doctor said to me very frankly this morning, "something went wrong with your spine in that fall, and we have a fight ahead of us."

So there is an "if" connected with my future that is the biggest "if" I have met in my troubled existence. It is all right. If I win I will fight for Sally. Right or wrong, that is my intention. If I lose, I hope I will have ample warning that the struggle is going against me, so that they may get Sally here and I can slide out into the nowhere from her arms.

Takes Her Nap.

August 12—I do not suffer any great pain, only the pain of weariness, and the nurse is so patient and tender I am ashamed to complain of that.

I am bolstered up in bed a few hours every morning and write these lines at long intervals apart. It is a comfort to me to write that which I can not speak about and it shortens the long days.

Manette always takes her nap at this time of the day, the nurse is gone for her morning walk, and Richards sits beside me—patient, faithful Richards.

"If anything happens to me, Richards," I said this morning, turning to her, "you must never leave Manette. You—" I had never told anyone this before—"will find yourself a rich woman."

"I will never leave Manette under any circumstances," she said somewhat brokenly, "and I don't want to be a rich woman. I only want you to get well so that we may all go back home, and be happy there again. I am so thankful every day, Mr. Max, that I work for the kindest and best man that ever breathed."

It was a tribute that pleased me. I tried to tell her so, and the next moment she was on her knees beside my bed, sobbing with her face in the bed covers.

THE TUNNEL
Greatest Story of Its Kind Since Jules Verne

Read what the New York Times said about this great story---The Times printed an extract of it---We give you the story itself---You can begin it by reading the first installment to-morrow in The Georgian!

8 THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, AUGUST 3, 1913.

GERMANY READS OF A TUNNEL FROM AMERICA TO EUROPE

"Best Seller" in Berlin Is Bernhard Kellermann's "Der Tunnel," a Daring Flight of Fancy in Which Is Told How the Two Hemispheres Were Connected by an Oceanic Subway.

SCENE: the roof garden above the thirty-sixth floor of a colossal hotel in New York—New York of the future. There are, gathered the richest magnates in the country, men who among them possess billion upon billion of dollars. One of them arrives in his aeroplane, from which he lands on the very roof garden itself. One of them is Lloyd, a veritable J. P. Morgan, renowned throughout the world as the most daring and formidable and successful of financiers.

They are gathered to learn about a plan evolved by an engineer, a man comparatively young, comparatively unknown, who needs their financial backing. Allan is his name—"Mac" Allan.

Rising modestly from his place, amid breathless attention from all those men, the money kings of the day, whom he scarcely hoped to meet, much less to interest in his project, Allan takes from his breast pocket a piece of chalk, goes to a blackboard, and draws two lines. One, he says, is America, the other Europe.

"Between these two," he adds, "I bind myself to build, within the space of fifteen years, a submarine tunnel and to send trains through it from one continent to the other in twenty-four hours!"

The flashlights of the photographers gathered on the roof burst forth and thousands of people packed in the streets thirty-six stories below knew that the first act in the great drama has begun, and roar their excitement.

Allan in the meantime has plunged into figures, taking up the plan from every angle, painting it strongly and convincingly.

He finishes by whirling the assemblage of billionaires away with him in a very madness of enthusiasm. Lloyd, king of them all, leads by subscribing $25,000,000 out of his own pocket. After him one magnate after another puts himself down for enormous sums. Allan, whose entire manhood has been devoted to the tunnel project, realizes that he is on the threshold of success.

That scene is described at the beginning of a book just published, one that is a "best seller" now in Germany—"The Tunnel," by Bernhard Kellermann. The author, who already has a number of novels to his credit, has in this latest work discarded the ordinary material of which heroes and heroines are made and daringly grounded into his service iron and steel and coal, powerful machinery, huge masses of humanity instead of individuals. Against this complex and tremendous background men and women are arranged, to be sure, men and women of flesh and blood, but they are secondary. It is the tunnel—the great tube between America and Europe, that is the hero of Kellermann's novel and the heroine and the villain. To it all else is subservient. In describing its vastness and grimness and baleful power the German strikes into the domain of Jules Verne and H. G. Wells, and, without ever employing the supernatural or manifestly impossible, masts them on their own ground and, it must be said, comes off by no means badly.

Man's Greatest Undertaking.

After his description of the momentous meeting on the New York hotel roof garden, the novelist tells how the tunnel syndicate, formed immediately after the magnates had subscribed their millions, buys up huge tracts of land in New Jersey along the Hudson and ocean front and sets to work to rear a great city for the tunnel workmen. On the streets of New York hundreds of thousands of "extras" keep readers posted, hour by hour, on the progress of the construction work, the greatest undertaking ever attempted by man since the be[illegible]

[illegible] excitement [illegible] the [illegible] to enlist [illegible]

[illegible] workers—Americans, Frenchmen, Englishmen, Germans, Italians, Spaniards, Scandinavians, Chinamen, negroes. In the stifling caverns under the ocean every language was heard from the blackened diggers, working in frenzied haste, stark naked, dripping with sweat, driven to superhuman achievement by the indomitable energy of "Mac" Allan.

Allan spent days at a time in the tunnel, amid almost unendurable heat, between solid walks of rock, amid tools and building material piled high about him, driving engineers and foremen and common laborers to the rock and iron, which buried men beneath it or tore them to pieces.

In wild panic they stumbled and fought their way through blinding, suffocating smoke, hurled themselves into the construction trains lined up along the track, or, too mad with fear to reason, plunged forward on foot as if thus they could ever reach the shore of New Jersey, over 250 miles away. Hundreds of them, whom the explosion had spared, fell in their tracks, stifled by the smoke or trampled to death by their comrades.

Of a construction train a short distance from the scene of the explosion they poured through the streets of the improvised city toward Allan's residence.

On the way they met the engineer's young wife and his little daughter, who, hearing the noise about the tunnel mouth, had ventured forth to find out what was the matter. Both fell back in approbation as they caught sight of the outposts of the advancing multitude and heard their shouts.

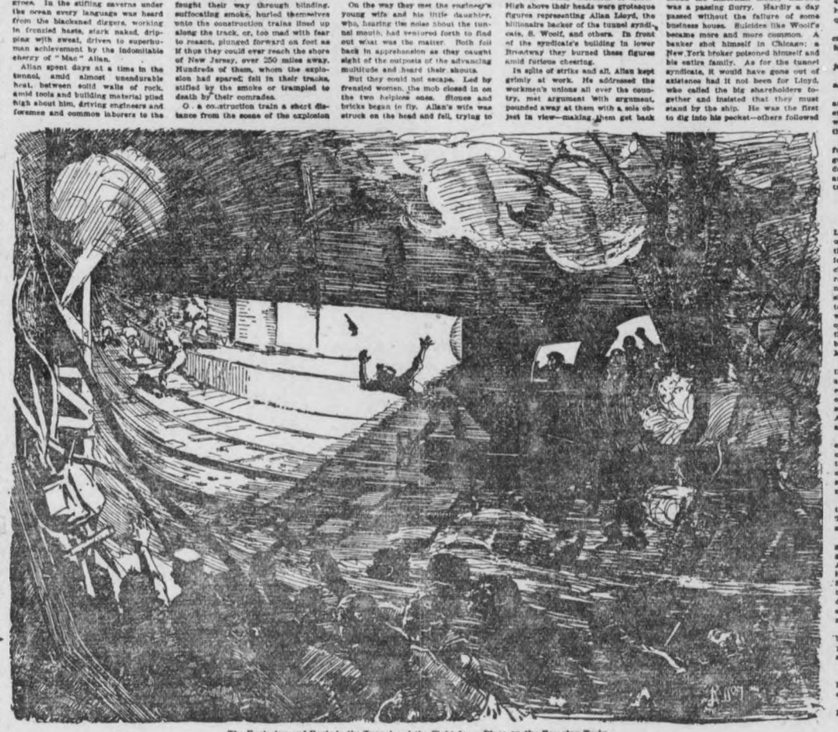

But they could not escape. Led by frenzied women, the mob closed in on the two helpless ones. Stones and bricks began to fly. Allan's wife was struck on the head and fell, trying to shield her little daughter. Soon the little girl also sank to the earth beneath a cruel hail of missiles.

"Let them its there!" shouted some of the mob. And on they went, looking for Allan. But he was not in the city.

Allan to the Rescue.

[illegible] stood Herman, one of the engineers. In spite of the entreaties and threats of the four-maddened men who poured out of the stretch of tunnel ahead and clambered onto his train, he refused to allow the engineer to steam away. He wanted to save as many as he could.

to work! The tunnel must be finished!

His bpunfless forgy had its reward; more and more of the men drifted back to their quarters in the city at the tunnel mouth. Two months after the catastrophe it looked as if operations would begin again with the same mighty fury of speed.

[illegible] his example—the syndicate was saved, at least for the time being.

On the first of January a huge crowd of shareholders packed the streets about the syndicate building and fought their way to the cashiers' offices, intent on collecting dividends. With the money hastily provided by Lloyd and the others, the cashiers handed over the accrued interest [illegible] But the crowd [illegible]

Panic came—genuine panic. Compared with it the panic of 1907, that shook the American money market, was a passing flurry. Hardly a day passed without the failure of some business house. Suicides like Woolf's became more and more common. A banker shot himself in Chicago; a New York broker poisoned himself and his entire family. As for the tunnel syndicate, it would have gone out of existence had it not been for Lloyd, who called the big shareholders together and insisted that they must stand by his ship. He was the first to dig into his pocket—others followed suit.

The great tunnel was dead.

Even Allan despaired. He locked himself in his house, refusing to see anybody. In vain Ethel Lloyd, the one person who still seemed to believe in him, sought to see him. She could not.

But she persisted. Finally, one day, she actually warbled him as he was walking, with downcast eyes, from the tunnel mouth to his house. He could not decently refuse to speak to her. He never her to come in. And, once she had his ear, Ethel plunged into her task with flashing eyes and eloquent words.

"You must save the tunnel!" she cried. And for the first time in months he woke to life and his eyes blazed.

"But we have no money," he sheepishly.

"Have you been MY father?" she asked.

She had struck home. Soon Allan and the great Lloyd were in a conference. Soon the news flew over the world: "Lloyd has agreed to back the tunnel—alone!"

The work started up again with a fury of energy that left all that had gone before in the shade. One hundred thousand men went at it again and labored with a murderous concentration of energy.

America Linked to Europe.

The dead tunnel cities awoke. With Lloyd as leader, multi-millionaires who had been afraid to risk a cent in the undertaking poured their millions into it. In the tubes the boring machines thundered against the walls of rock, surrounded again by armies of naked workers, dripping with sweat, shining in the red glow of the lanterns. And behind all stood Allan, whipping them into a hell of speed; once more, as his trains rolled past, they swung their hats and cheered—but now they called him "old gray Mac."

Years went by—fifteen, twenty, since the beginning of the work. Nearer and nearer the tunnel heads drew to each other, one, where Strom was commander, stretching out from Jersey eastward, the other from the Azores westward, driven forward by an engineer known as "Pat Mueller."

At last the two were so close that engineers glued their eyes on the delicate registering machines by the hour together, hoping to detect the sound of the work in the other tunnel. No sign—and yet the others must be almost within reach!

Had the calculations failed? Had the two tunnels missed each other? The newspapers were filled with alarming rumors.

Allan ordered side tunnels dug, that groped in the dark for the men digging toward America from Europe. At last one day the notes of a blast in Mueller's tunnel was heard in Strom's. Feverishly the men dug toward the sound. At last, breaking down a wall of earth and rock, they saw, through a narrow hole, other men—Mueller's men!

Roars of enthusiasm burst forth at both ends of the hole: Pat Mueller, poking his head into the opening, asked:

"Where is Mac?"

"Here," answered Allan, sticking his head into the other opening—the one nearest America.

"How do you do, Mac?" said Mueller, with a laugh.

"We are all right," said Mac.

That was all. In the evening the newspapers on both sides of the ocean printed this conversation, held thousands of feet under the sea. The workmen had seen dug the hole big enough to allow of Mueller's sending Mac a bottle of Munich beer.

Twenty-four years had elapsed since the tunnel work had been begun.

From then on the world was in a fever of excitement. Twenty months the tunnel work was re[illegible]

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"You are an observing man," he remarked to Peter, "and seem to have noticed this girl closely. Was this bag she carried a small, yellow one?"

"It was not, thin," that person emphatically replied, while the butler shook his head. "It was small, that it was, but not a mark of yellow about it at all. I see it manys the time. It's black it was."

"And would you know it if you saw it again?"

"I'll hot say that, sur; but I could tell if it wur the same kind of one."

Mr. Gryce smiled and produced from his capacious pocket the bag which had been found by him in the doctor's phaeton.

"Was it like this one?" he asked, holding it up between the two men, with the initials toward Peter, and the blank side toward the butler.

"No," was the former's reply, and "Oui," that of the latter.

He whirled the bag about.

"I never have seen ze filigree on him like zat!" now exclaimed the butler.

"By the powers that's it," was, on the contrary, Peter's response.

Mr. Gryce laughed and put the bag back in his pocket.

Another Clew.

"You don't agree," he said.

"We do that," returned Peter.

But Mr. Gryce would not be convinced. He saw that if this was the bag that they had been in the habit of seeing on the arm of the girl who had visited Miss Gretorex, that it had always been carried with the initial-side in, and this again seemed a great improbability. He was about convinced that he was on a false trail. Disappointed and dissatisfied, he therefore cut the conversation short, and in a few minutes was about to leave this house for the second time in anything but a happy frame of mind. But this time he did not go out by the side door. He was in the kitchen, and he naturally sought the kitchen exit. In doing this, his eyes fell upon the gravel walk that ran about the house.

"Humph!" was his mental ejaculation.

But he saw something the next moment—having by this time stepped into the yard—which called from him something more than an exclamation. This was a small piazza, built one or two steps from the ground, for the use, as it appeared, of the servants of the house. It was square in shape and had a high balustrade about it, terminating in pillars that supported the roof. It was the color of this balustrade which drew his attention. It was of a bright and peculiar brown and and seemed to have been but lately painted.

"Can it be that I have here found what I have so long been searching for?" he queried. And stepping upon the plazza he ran his eye along the balustrade with the most careful scrutiny. Suddenly he paused, looked closer, and gave utterance to a sound expressive of satisfaction and keen wonder. From the supporting pillar nearest the steps a portion of paint had been rubbed, of the size and shape of the smudge on Mildred Farley's dress, and dried into the thin coating yet remaining was a woolly fuzz so evidently blue in color that even this old and experienced worker among marvels was taken aback, and thought he had never seen anything finer nor more conclusive.

It was with a very grave face he stepped back into the kitchen.

"Excuse me," said he, "but what a fine porch you have outside. I think I will come and visit you some evening next summer. Fun out there, eh?"

"Well, now, do you hear that?" laughed good-natured Peter.

"And how prettily it is painted; looks fresher than the rest of the house."

"Yes, the master intended using it at the time o' the wedding—what for I don't know—and it being well used up by that same fun ye wur axin about, the count there bought a pot o' paint and wint over it on his own account. It didn't dry good like, and the master thanked the count, so he did, but didn't use the porch. I'm thinkin' he gave the count folve dollars for disappointin' him do ye moind?"

And Peter, evidently thinking he had got the laugh on the butler this time, laughed himself, long and loud.

But Mr. Gryce did not laugh. A problem dark with mysteries was before him, and he had no disposition to mirth, and but little patience with those who had.

Tests and Surprises.

IT was indeed a serious discovery he had made; how serious he could not yet determine. That the girl who had brought home Miss Gretorex's dresses, and who had been with her on the very evening she was married, was the same one who had been carried dead into Mrs. Olney's parlor at or near midnight of that same day, there could be no doubt.

But had she died here? It did not follow, though the fact that Miss Gretorex, or as she was now called, Mrs. Cameron, showed such a disposition to deny acquaintanceship with the girl, seemed to argue the existence of something strangely unpleasant between them. Yet it need not have been anything connected with the tragic end of the girl. Ladies of Mrs. Cameron's stamp are invariably cowards when it comes to appearing in a police court, or before a magistrate as a witness. Even men sometimes shrink from this ordeal, and resort to every subterfuge to hide the fact that they know anything about a crime of the party suspected of it. And she had this excuse, that she was a bride and naturally hated any such unpleasant publicity in connection with her marriage.

A Puzzle.

Yet the desire of Molesworth to communicate his position to the Camerons! Was it purely on account of the medical case he mentioned? Mr. Gryce felt himself at liberty to doubt it. And the scream which had arisen from this house during the marriage ceremony! Whence did it come and what did it mean? He had not realized its importance at the time, but now he felt that he must make every effort to discover both its source and occasion. Turning to the two men, he remarked in his off-hand way:

"By the way, I heard something curious about the wedding here. A friend of mine told me that there was a big scream in the house right in the middle of the ceremony. Was that so?"

"Oui, monsieur," quoth Jean, "zat Marguerite scream all ze time, and she scream zen."

Peter smiled indulgently.

"Is it Margaret, ye say? Whin will yez git over talkin' about her screamin' like a fool. Sure she wasn't in the house at all. Every one of us knows that, and it's time ye did, too."

Jean shrugged his shoulders disdainfully.

"It was ze voice of Marguerite, I know him very well. I hear him many times, and I hear him zat time of ze wedding and always ze same."

"How the devil could she scream if she wasn't in the house?

"Do Marguerite say she was not in ze house?"

"No, but don't we know she wasn't? Jim Dolan says she was in his little back room when the scream you spake of was heard. Haven't I told ye that over an' over again, ye spalpeen?"

"When Jeem Doling say me zat, zen I must hear him." And so the obstinate man had the last word.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

A naval officer I know canceled a lot of engagements last week in order to devote the time to his dentist.

"I am going on a long cruise," he said, "and I know the value of good teeth. Good teeth mean good health afloat or ashore and a man can't do his work well unless he has good health."

In the army and the navy, and in all great industrial spheres the value of good teeth is being recognized. Statistics prove that sound, clean teeth, preserve health and promote business efficiency.

The twice-a-year visit to the dentist and the twice-a-day use of Colgate's Ribbon Dental Cream, the efficient, deliciously flavored dentifrice, insure sound clean teeth, better health and better looks.

ELLIOTT DENT FACES MOLES IN 2ND GAME

ELLIOTT DENT is carded as Manager Smith's pitching entry against the Barons in the second game of the series, which starts at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. Harry Chapman will be back of the wood, and the manager said this morning that he fully expected Tommy Long to be in his regular place in left field.

Tommy was out in uniform yesterday, but Manush was going so well that it was not considered necessary to try out the convalescent one. Frank had a great day with the stick yesterday and aided materially in the battering of the unfortunate Howell.

Manager Molesworth was not positive of his choice in the matter of slabman. Pitcher Ery, the recruit, got in yesterday and may get a chance to-morrow. Big Bill Prough, absent from the club by reason of a sister's illness, hadn't arrived at noon today.

There is a lot of talk around town about the prospective "birthday party" to be tendered Bill Smith at the ball park to-morrow, when "Bill Smith Day" will be observed, with a band and other trimmings, and the thousands of Atlanta fans who have pulled for the hard-working manager and rejoiced in his success will have an opportunity to show by their attendance the appreciation they feel for his efforts. Preparations are being made to handle a big crowd, as it seems everybody is going.

BOBBY GILKS, CLEVELAND SCOUT, IS IN ATLANTA

We have with us this week, or part of it, one Bobby Gilks, erstwhile popular manager of the Shreveport club in the Southern League, and now a trusted scout for the Cleveland ball club.

Bobby looks the same as ever; a quiet, alert, sun-burned man, preserving an athletic build with no tendencies to a bay window effect, and with very keen eyes set in the deep puckers that come from years of peering over a blazing diamond.

"Just looking around," said Mr. Gilks yesterday as he sat on the back of a bench in the smoker, looking over the Crackers at practice. "I can't say anything more specific—except," he added, reflectively, "I will say they're awfully scarce."

Mr. Gilks also was of the opinion that the desperately fine coming the minor leagues were receiving this year would result more in bursting bubbles than broken batting and base-stealing records. He expects to remain here nearly all week, by the end of which his scouting will be over for the present season.

STARTS ON LONG SWIM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Harry Elionsky, 19, of New London, Conn., sared at 12:48 a. m. to-day on the swim from Battery Park to Sady Hook, a distance of about 21 miles. Elionsky attempted to swim some time ago, but was forced to quit the water when within a mile of goal.

"Society Night" at Motordrome

Maddox Sweepstake Feature

REALIZING that society folk will wear thousands of dollars worth of diamonds and jewelry tonight at the motorcycle races, Manager Noon Hudson has hired 50 plain-clothes men to protect his patrons. Chief of Police Beavers and Chief of Detectives Lanford will both be on hand to assist.

It is "Society Night;" at least that is the way the program is captioned And it is expected that all of Atlanta's "400" will be on hand.

Owing to the accident to Jock McNeil late Wednesday afternoon it has been decided to keep everybody away from the paddock and nobody but officials and the riders themselves will be allowed within the sacred portals of the danger lines.

The new machines that the riders have secured can be speeded up to such an extent that a blow-out or any other accident to a machine is likely to cause a spill, and, of course, danger threatens all who may be in the way of the flying "boats." Therefore, everybody will be forced to remain behind the railings.

* * *

THE feature to-night will be the Robert Maddox Sweepstakes. This is the real "sassiety" event of the season at the Saucer. It will be run in three heats. The first will be over a two-mile course, the next, four miles, and the third, six miles.

The winner will be found by the point system. The winner of each heat will secure ten points; second man, six; third, three.

The riders in this race will be Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

ANOTHER interesting event will be the special match race between Harry Glenn, the local favorite, and Harry Swartz, whose machine right now is one of the fastest at the track.

There will be two heats and maybe three. The winner will have to capture two heats. The first heat will be one mile, the second two miles, and if necessary, there will be a third heat of three miles.

* * *

THE other event carded is the first of the Southern championships. It is the intention of the management to run a title race every night until the latter part of September. The riders will be scored by points. The winner of each heat each night will be credited with 25 points, the second man, 15, and the third, 5.

There will be three trial heats of one mile and the final will be two miles. The winner of each heat and the second man in the fastest heat to qualify.

* * *

FOLLOWING is the complete program:

First Event.

First Heat: Special Match Race (one mile)—Glenn and Swartz.

Second Event.

First Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Graves, Swartz and Lockner.

Third Event.

Second Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Richards, Luther and Renel.

Fourth Event.

Third Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Lewis and Glenn.

Fifth Event.

Final Heat: Southern Championships (two miles. Winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat. Twenty-five points for winner, 15 for second man and 5 for third man.)

Sixth Event.

First Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (two miles; ten points for winner, six points for second man, three for third man).—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Seventh Event.

Second Heat: Special Match Race (two miles)—Glenn and Swartz.

Eighth Event.

Second Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (four miles)—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Ninth Event.

Third Heat: Special Match Race. (If necessary.)

Tenth Event.

Third Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (six miles)—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Big Aquatic Meet at Lakewood Wednesday

There will be a big aquatic meet at Lakewood Wednesday afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock. Atlanta's fastest and strongest swimmers will take part. The meet will be held under the supervision of the United States Life Saving Corps.

The events carded are: One-mile relay race, 440-yard race, 100-yard race, 50-yard race and 25-yard race for girls. Beautiful silver cups will be the prizes offered in all of the events except the girls' race. The winner of that event will be given a cutglass powder jar.

The one-mile relay race will probably be the big feature. Porter Enslow and C. R. McDermott, of Piedmont lake, will battle Captain B. H. Schlomberg and Lieut. Tatt Walthour of Lakewood. This struggle should be a hard-fought one from start to finish.

There will also be a life-saving demonstration, given by Captain Schlomberg.

COMPANY M WINS GAME.

CAMP PERRY, OHIO, Aug. 19.—Company M, Seventeenth Infantry, defeated the Marine baseball team here by the score of 11 to 3.

The feature of the game was the heavy hitting of Company M.

DODGERS BUY PITCHER.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Aug. 18.—The Brooklyn club to-day purchased Pitcher Brady from the Oshkosh club of the Wisconsin-Illinois League, but the price was not given.

BROWN TO MEET DILLON.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—George "Knockout" Brown and Jack Dillon will meet in a ten-round no-decision bout at Terre Haute on Labor Day afternoon.

M'CAREY SURE JEFFRIES WAS DOPED AT RENO

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19.—Promoter T. J. McCarey, for the past ten years president of the Pacific A. C., is positive in his belief that Jeffries was "doped" when he fought Jack Johnson.

"Jeffries could walk right into the ring to-day and make a 100 per cent better showing than he did at Reno," said McCarey to-day.

"I was watching Jeffries when he came into the Reno arena. He lurched down the aisle like a drunken man, bumping his shoulder against the moving picture stand. At the ringside one of his best friends, Clarence Berry, reached out to shake hands, but Jim didn't appear to recognize him.

"I AM suspicious of one man who posed as an intimate friend of Jim's prior to the fight. He bet heavily on Johnson and after the thing was over he never even went to Jeffries to speak to him, and to my knowledge has never seen Jim since. "This fellow used to coax Jeffries away from the Monoa Springs training camp to go fishing. For hours he would keep Jim standing knee deep in the mountain streams and cause him to neglect his training.

"I believe that Jeffries was the victim of a widespread plot. The man never had a chance. He was whipped before he could put up his hands. This was one of the worst blows ever dealt the boxing game and I would pay a good sum out of my own pocket to see the mystery cleared up."

TOM JONES, manager for Ad Wolgast and Jess Willard, is another who believes that Jeffries was "doped."

"Jeffries was drugged. There is no other way to account for his reeling about in the ring before the contest," says Jones. "Jeffries doesn't care much about the matter now, but his friends would like to see the thing explained."

OUTFIELDER LET OUT.

KEOKUK, IOWA, Aug. 19.—Outfielder Corkhill was released by Keokuk and Outfielder Bromley, formerly with Mussatine, was signed.

"BATTLING" NELSON DISPOSED OF.

ROCKFORD, ILL., Aug. 19.—The Rockford (Wisconsin-Illinois League) team to-day ordered the release of Catcher "Battling" Nelson.

Jock McNeil Still Unconscious

Daring Motor Racer Is Dying

JOCK M'NEIL, the daring motorcycle racer, who was thrown from his machine while traveling at a speed of 80 miles an hour, is still unconscious at the Grady Hospital. The attending physicians have little hope for his recovery.

It was McNeil's own carelessness that caused his fall. He reported at the track yesterday afternoon under the influence of liquor, and after much wrangling with the other riders he insisted on taking a whirl.

He borrowed Morty Graves' stock machine and immediately after starting ascended to the white boards at the top of the track. The white boards are perpendicular and it takes a speed of at least 80 miles an hour to hold the machine.

The first time around his motor broke through the boards in two places, but McNeil refused to come down. The next time around he rode right into one of the holes that he had smashed on his first trip, and was thrown 50 feet in the air. He came down face first.

An ambulance was called and he was rushed to Grady Hospital. The extent of his injuries are:

The skin was peeled from the right side of his face.

A glaring hole in his skull that may affect the brain.

Right shoulder dislocated and badly torn.

Deep gash in right thigh, just above the hip.

Right leg broken just above the knee.

Internal injuries, the exact nature of which has not been fully determined.

VARDON AND RAY WILL HAVE HARD BATTLE--EVANS

By "Chick" Evans.

HARRY VARDON and Edward Ray, two of the foremost golfers in the world, are now on the ocean on their way to America. Wilfred Reid, another high-class British professional, is with them. It has been thirteen years since Vardon came to this country and made an almost clean sweep of everything. Then came Duncan in 1911, and he, too, made an excellent showing. It is my prediction, however, that Vardon and Ray will find a country of golfers vastly superior to anything that they have pictured. Since 1900, the year of the previous invasion, our country has taken tremendous strides in golf. Progress has been made not only in the addition of thousands of new clubs, but also in the standard of the game. A few years ago 80 was considered very good indeed, but now it is merely fair and the 80 golfer takes no special credit to himself.

Will Arrive This Week.

Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, our two most distinguished professional visitors, will be over here this week. Previous to the open championship, which will take place during the third week of September at Brookline, near Boston, they will play exhibition matches all over the East, and after the open they will journey Westward.

Fine players as they are, I think that they will have a difficult road to travel, for not only will our professionals give them a run, but there are some of our amateurs who may be able to quicken their pace a little. I hope they will like our courses and our golfers. Truly, we have a country-wide array of courses on which much money and time have been spent.

Our golfers are fine players, and good sportsmen, and the coming of the British visitors will do us a tremendous amount of good. Thousands will watch their play and be benefited by many an idea caught as they watch the execution of difficult shots by these masters of the game. Their scores will serve as an indicator by which we can know exactly what progress we have made in our own game.

Exhibitions to Benefit All.

Their coming will introduce into this country professional exhibition matches—a prominent element of British golf of which we know but little. We have not much of this now and there is no doubt we need more. It is something of which a country can easily have too much, but it can be of the greatest benefit to all players who wish to improve their game. It will give to them throughout the country an opportunity to see the best shots played by the best players, and this practical exposition is of more value than all the lessons and books of instruction in the world.

Of course, all professional golf is a money-making affair. For an exhibition match of 36 holes, occupying a day, I understand Vardon and Ray are asking $600. This seems an enormous amount of money to ask for the privilege of seeing a golf game, and it is difficult to see how they will be able to get many clubs to stage such an expensive exhibition. The best way would be to charge, say, a dollar for admission, and let the club stand for the rest. Most people would gladly give up that much to see these world masters of the links. They are like the musicians who have spent a lifetime in practice.

Grand Defense Aids Gil Price Mates Star in Field and at Bat

By O. B. Keeler.

THE value of co-operation stuck out all over the opening game with the Moles Monday. There were so many points that to the Moles the Cracker club must have resembled a hedgehog.

There was no chance for Gil Price to lose that game. So he won, 7 to 2.

But Gil had as his assistants luck, stuff and beautiful fielding.

And that is pretty nearly good enough to win for anybody.

* * *

DON'T take this as meaning that Gil was saved against his will from a beating. The southpaw had something on the ball all the time, up to the ninth inning. And whenever he got it over the platter, the problem was simple.

The Moles simply couldn't hit.

But Gil was having one of his famous struggles with the control lever, which persisted in jamming on him, usually after two men were out.

In other words, Gil's marksmanship was somewhat to the fritz. But, supported by the class of fielding his mates put up, and his own stuff on the ball, his erratic periods merely served to liven up a long game that certainly was in need of livening.

* * *

THERE was some hitting, too.

The way the Cracker attack was working, Gil could have been quite a bit more to the Carnegie with his passes, and still got by with it.

* * *

MR. WELCHONCE was excessively prominent in the attack. Four runs came riding in on his two blows, one for three and the other for two sacks. Harry also scored a run himself. Messrs. Agler, Manush, Smith and Bisland also deserve special mention in the list of sluggers, the first pair getting three hits apiece and the others being content with a couple each.

* * *

BUT savage as was the artillery, the real clubby spirit was shown in the way Gil Price's help came through with the defense. The help behaved as if it liked Gil fine.

And it must be said that Gil seemed to think pretty well of himself, too. He pulled as pretty a pair of fielding stunts as one would care to see. Once he raced toward first on a slow hit, bounding high, scooped the pill in his meat hand and sprinted over the bag—and there were Moles digging for home, with two out, at the time. And once he made a grand play on a difficult trap-bounder, following the pick-up with a fine peg.

GIL wasn't lonely in his display of defensive power.

Chapman nipped Mayer off first by a peach peg in the second; Agler and Smith made runaway circus catches of short flies—particularly Joe's catch of Marcan's foul in the seventh—and Calvo starred with a brilliant running catch of a low line drive in the fifth, and a rifle-shot peg to the plate in the ninth, cutting down the speedy Marcan, who was trying to score from second on a sharp hit to the Cuban's territory.

* * *

BY the way, there was a moral force acting hand in glove with Calvo in the matter of outfield pegging.

In the third inning Carroll, first up, flied to the Cuban, deep in right. Calvo took the ball easily and whipped it to third, low and fast, and with wonderful accuracy.

It looked a bit like showing off. But later in the game, when the Cuban nipped Marcan's line drive with McDonald on third, McDonald stuck right there, not caring to try out the little fellow's whip. His throw on McBride's single in the ninth, when the Moles were beginning to bite us, was a beauty, and it nipped Marcan for the last out as he came in from second.

* * *

AND in the meantime, Mique Finn's wrecking crew was resting.

The margin of safety for the Gulls, therefore, stuck at seven full games this morning.

The Billikens, who also rested, retained second place by a margin of two games.

Neither Billies nor Gulls are scheduled to-day.

Chance to pick up a little honest change in the percentage column—what?

SOX YOUNGSTER THROWS WITH EITHER HAND

By Bill Bailey.

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 19.—The White Sox have a young outfielder who is destined to become one of the curiosities of the American League.

Edward Rausch is his name and the thing that makes him wonderful is the fact that he heaves the ball from deep right with his left hand and, from deep left field with his right.

We've all heard about the ambidextrous ball players. Away back when Anson was a recruit there were a couple of fellows who pitched with either hand. But it is doubtful whether there is one fan in a hundred who ever gazed upon a youngster who could throw as well with one hand as with the other.

Manager Callahan didn't know that he was getting a curiosity as well as a ball player when he purchased Rausch from the Evansville club of the Central League. The youngster reported on Friday. The Sox were at morning practice when the youth reported. You thought it was too late in the season for morning practice? Manager Callahan is still in the hunt for whatever he can obtain and is determined to finish just as high as possible. Which accounts for the fact that the men were being drilled in everything pertaining to baseball.

Sent to Right Field.

As was remarked, the Sox were at morning practice when the youngster reported. He was handed a suit and told to go out and chase fly balls. He did. He went to right.

"Who's the youngster?" went the query.

"Oh, that's young Rausch," from Kid Gleason. It's the duty of the assistant manager to work with the men, and especially the youngsters, at the a. m. drill.

"Left hand thrower?" it was queried.

"It would seem so," was the answer of Gleason. It also was apparent, for the youngster was shooting the balls in on a line from right field and he was employing his left hand.

Pretty soon he went to left field and played there awhile. One of the fellows shot a line drive out there. And then everybody stood about in amazement. For the youngster returned the ball with his right hand. And he shot it in on a line, too.

"Hey!" howled Gleason. He didn't want any mistake about it, and he did want some information. In trotted the youngster.

"Are you a right or left hand thrower?" queried the assistant coach.

"Don't make any difference to me," answered the youngster. "When I play right field I throw with my left hand. When I'm in left I throw with my right."

"Don't make any difference to you, eh?" queried Gleason.

"None at all. Why?"

"Oh, I just wanted to know." It takes a lot to keep the assistant manager from retorting, but there was none on his tongue this time.

Youngster Gives Promise.

The youngster is twenty years of age and if he can hit he will be there. There is no question about his speed. He worked out in left field before the second game against the Highlanders. He was going back as fast as the ordinary outfielder comes in. And he was grabbing the balls, which is more to the point. They tried him out in the preliminary batting practice and he slammed said sphere to several parts of the lot. Here another surprise awaited the Sox. They naturally supposed that a fellow who could throw with either hand would bat from either side of the plate. Nothing doing. Rausch is a left-hand hitter and he doesn't swing from the right side under any condition.

Rausch was one of the first men purchased by the South Siders and cost $3,000. He hit in the neighborhood of .315 in the Central League. From the way he handled himself in the field it looks a certainty that he possesses the speed necessary to beat out many infield hits.

No question but that Rausch comes well fortified, so far as fielding is concerned. Many managers have an idea that a right fielder should be a left-hand thrower, upon the same theory that a southpaw thrower is supposed to have it on a right-hander at first base.

"Rausch throws equally well with either hand," said Manager Callahan. "It's my opinion, however, that he would do better if he decided to throw with either his right or left hand and then stick to it."

KETCHEL VS. JOHNSON.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Steve Ketchel and Eddie Johnson, of Denver, are scheduled to meet in a twenty-round battle in Pueblo, Colo., September 15, at 133 pounds.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

HOW SWEET.

(By Joe Tinker.)

How sweet to be a manager and lose a lot of sleep
To pull a bunch of boneheads from the bottom of the heap—
To patch a broken-down machine and get it running fit
And then to see the owner throw a monkey wrench in it!
It's bad enough to run a team that plays in Cincinnati,
But this here interference stuff would drive a fellow batty.

In other words, Mr. Tinker insists that he is the only man who has a right to tinker with his team.

Those who know Sherwood Magee aver that Mr. Tincup is not the only Indian on Dooin's team.

Not that we desire to discourage a promising young athlete, but a Tincup is a first cousin to a can.

It is rumored that John Evers thinks as much of Mike Mitchell as Mike Mitchell thinks of John Evers.

SOMETHING LIKE THE CUB OWNER.

There was a young magnate named Farrell
With money stacked up by the barrel.
He said: "I will win
Though it costs all my tin
And they force me to pawn my apparel." V. S. B.

Conundrum: If it costs $10 to call Bill Klem a catfish, how much would it cost to call him a sardine?

Paul Westerlund, a Californian, won a medal by running a 31-mile marathon race up the side of a mountain range. Up to date Paul has not won any medals for consecutive thought.

If Frank Navin were to accept that $100,000 offer for Ty Cobb we fear that Clark Griffith would break all existing sprinting records on his way to the cyclone cellar.

Arthur Pelky announces that he will do his training in Calgary. This shows that even a rude and uncultured pugilist often clings to the fond recollections of former days.

Mr. Pelky is the youth who swore that he had retired from the fight game forever and forever. But he changed his mind when he learned that the only other way he could earn a living was to work.

Mr. Mitchell, athlete, accuses Mr. O'Loughlin, umpire, of having used vulgar language on the field. And yet, the fact that a man is an umpire is sufficient cause to swear.

England feels as badly over the departure of Mrs. Pankhurst as a pitcher who has just recovered from a losing streak.

In a way, Ralph Comstock, whom the Sox have bought from the Minneapolis team, is one of the most remarkable athletes extant. It is said that he is the only member of the team whose grandchildren are not voting.

THE WHITE HOPE.

He had a fist as hard as a rock, likewise an iron jaw.
Without a doubt he was the hardest man I ever saw.
Quoth he: "I got my training as a player with McGraw."

THE WORM.

"The worm will turn," a lad once spoke.
He was a wise old guy.
He was an educated bloke
And what he said got by.
"The worm will turn," he said, and men
Spoke lightly of his name,
But all interred the hammer when
The Pelicans won a game.

Not that we desire to inflame the thoughts of our yellow brethren, but the report that Ah Chung whipped Pat McCarty reveals the fact that the Boxer outrages have not ceased.

The 100-mile marathon race at Bellingham, Wash., reminds us that some men are nuttier than others.

Joe Boehling is now engaged at the unpleasant task of demonstrating that whatever goes up must come down.

Reading Mike Mitchell's tale of his recent job, one is led to suspect that being a Cub is like being in jail—only more so.

Charlie Ebbets announced yesterday morn that he would spend $60,000 to strengthen his team. We have not any inside information, but we have heard a well grounded rumor that to-day he will dedicate the $60,000.

Looking over Mr. Griffith's statement, one is led to suspect that Messrs. Altrock and Schaefer are not the only comedians on the Washington payroll.

The report that Hap Myers stole four bases off Jimmy Archer in one afternoon reminds us that several persons could have outsprinted Arthur Duffey if Arthur had sustained a broken leg.

Ben Tincup, the Indian pitcher who has been purchased by the Phillies, is on the wrong team. Imagine what a receiver Larry McLean would be for Tincup.

Not that it is any of our business, but the gent who picks out the names for country clubs must be related to the citizen who perpetrates the monickers for sleeping cars and motor boats.

Joe Tinker is not dissatisfied with his job or anything like that, but he has a hunch that as a baseball magnate Garry Merrmann is a good judge of wine.

NOT O'LOUGHLIN.

There was an ump in our town
And he was wondrous wise.
He spoke his words in such a way
That men could recognize.

STARRVILLE WINS.

PORTERDALE, GA., Aug. 19.—Porterdale lost to Starrville yesterday 4 to 3. The feature of the game was the sensational work of "Kid" Harwell, who caught a grand game for the visitors. L. Cook also featured by his batting. Rocquemore fanned fourteen batters.

NO-HIT, NO-RUN GAME.

SUPERIOR, WIS., Aug. 19.—In yesterday's Northern Leagues game at Superior, Cy Dahlgren, of Superior, blanked Grand Forks without a hit or a run. Dahlgren was with the Cincinnati Reds this spring and was given an unconditional release after the training trip.

WILLIE LEWIS DEVOTED TO THE BOXING GAME

PARIS, Aug. 19.—Willie Lewis, the white American pugilist, who is now attracting as much attention at the Follies Bergeres as Jack Johnson did, said to-day:

"Boxing is not merely my profession, but my devotion. I believe that it develops any sound individual's muscular and mental faculties more than any other athletic sport."

Regarding the rumors that he intended divorcing his wife in order to marry Comtesse De Villenueve, Lewis said:

"Though I greatly admire her fine dances, I never have spoken to her and you can contradict those rumors."

AUTOMOBILE OWNERS, ATTENTION!

No more worry about punctures. PUNCTURE SEALO solves the trouble. PUNCTURE SEALO injected into your tubes will seal any puncture up to a twenty-penny nail, will preserve and lengthen the life of your tubes and lessen blow-outs by eliminating rim cuts. It will not stick the tubes to the casing, will not gum, become hard or evaporate, is not affected by heat or cold weather, does not interfere with the removal of tubes or with vulcanizing.

PUNCTURE SEALO pays for itself many times a season by preventing punctures and rim cuts.

We charge less for PUNCTURE SEALO than any of our imitators. Good territory open to agents who write at once. We are in business to stay.

SAVE TEMPER, TROUBLE, TIME AND TIRES BY USING PUNCTURE SEALO.

Motorcycles $2.50
Automobiles, 30 by 3, 34 by 4.....$7.00 per car
Other sizes in proportion.

Atlanta, Ga., 7, 17, '13.

Puncture Sealo Co., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gentlemen—I have examined your preparation for the stoppage of punctures in rubber, "PUNCTURE SEALO," and have found that it contains no substance injurious to rubber. It has a decided advantage in that it may be used in the coldest weather without freezing.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) EDGAR EVERHART, Chemist.

MAKE MONEY WITH POULTRY.
AMERICAN POULTRY is a magazine devoted entirely to helping earnest men and women make a financial success of poultry raising. Its staff of writers is composed entirely of those who have made a practical, instead of theoretical, success of poultry farming, and who are glad to pass on the results of their hard-earned experience to AMERICAN POULTRY readers. There are many pitfalls in the path of the novice which may be entirely avoided by those who will follow the teachings set forth in this magazine. It fully explains how to make a start, how to construct houses, coops, and other devices how to get a large egg yield, how to cure and prevent disease, how to exhibit, how to get the top price for eggs, how to use incubators and hundreds of other points which every one wishes to know. It explains the famous secret system through which poultrymen have become rich and afterwards sold for hundreds of dollars. AMERICAN POULTRY is a large, handsomely illustrated, monthly journal, well printed on fine paper, and should be found on file in the home of every poultry lover. No beginner in the poultry business should think of being without it. It will save him many times the small subscription price. The advanced poultryman will also find it of great value; the articles being varied in their scope.

SPECIAL OFFER. The regular price of AMERICAN POULTRY is 50c per year, but in order to introduce it to several thousand new readers, we will, for a short time, give a large 200-page poultry book, which is a complete guide in the poultry business, absolutely free to every one sending 50c for a yearly subscription or $1.00 for a three-year-subscription to AMERICAN POULTRY. A trial six months' subscription (without book) will be sent for 25c. Never has so much been offered for so small a sum. Advantage of this offer should be taken at once.

IF OUR CUSTOMERS living on the North and South Sides place their orders before 9 o'clock and the ones in Inman Park and West End before 2 o'clock, they will be delivered the same day the orders are given. We are trying to give the very best service possible, and if our customers will bear in mind the hours that our deliveries leave the store it will insure prompt service.

IT IS ABSOLUTELY necessary for chickens to have green food during the winter. This can easily be supplied if you will plant out a small patch of rye and rape. They both grow very rapidly and will furnish an abundance of green food all the winter. Now is the time to plant.

THIS IS THE MOULTING SEASON and that means that the hens should be fed a good tonic. Pratt's Poultry Regulator and Conkey's Laying Tonic insure a quick and complete moult, and that means plenty of eggs during the fall and winter, when they bring the high prices; 25c, 50c and $1 package.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage.

It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen-acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Lease on Peachtree Four Years, $26,250

Change in Elite Theater—Big Loan Deed—Spring Street Record. Hugh Richardson Sells.

Announcement of a central Peachtree lease at $26,250 for four years proved interesting in real estate circles Tuesday. Thomas L. Cooper, owner, has leased through William A. Fuller, trustee of the estate of O. A. Farrar, bankrupt, 36 Peachtree, the location of the Elite motion picture theater, on a sliding scale. The rental for the first year from September 1 it at the rate of $512.50 a month; for the second year, $525 a month; for the third year, $550 a month, and for the fourth year, $600 a month.

The lessee is A. O. T. Briers, who has bought out the picture show equipment and the privilege of leasing for $7,900. The terms on the same were one-third cash and the balance in three and six months, at 7 per cent.

Loan Deed $30,000.

Mrs. Ethel Toy Lamar has given the State Mutual Life Assurance Company, of Worcester, Mass., a loan deed on No. 5 Decatur street, 36 feet southeasterly of Peachtree street, for $30,000. The term is five years at 6 per cent. This property is occupied by and adjoins the north wall of the Kimball House. The frontage is about 25 1-2 feet, and the depth about 76.

Loans continue to be made on Atlanta property. The Life Insurance Company of Connecticut was also represented in Tuesday's loan column.

Cottage Changes Hands.

L. B. Williamson has sold to a client of the Green Realty Company a six-room cottage at the southeast corner of Woodward avenue and Hardin street, 50 by 50, for $1,800 cash.

Bellwood Avenue Auction.

Properties at Nos. 161, 215, 217, 219 and 221 Bellwood avenue, consisting of four cottages and a storehouse, will be sold at auction Wednesday by the T. B. Lumpkin Realty Company, through O. G. Clark, auctioneer. The sale will start at No. 215 Bellwood at 3:30 p. m.

Building Permits.

$2,000—C. B. McDaniel, Jr., 260 S. Moreland avenue, one-story frame dwelling. J. F. Howell.

$250—Fred Garrow, 38 Marietta street, alterations. Day work.

$250—C. P. Hill, 189 Windsor street, repairs. V. M. Barrett Construction Company.

$1,350—A. G. Rhodes, 471-475 Houston street, build two one-story frame dwellings. Day work.

$420—Woodward Avenue Baptist Church, Woodward and Cherokee avenues, additions. D. M. Argo.

$225—B. B. Broswell, 89 Inman circle, additions. V. M. Barrett Construction Company.

$150—T. Bearden, 16 Echo street, add room. Day work.

Record for Spring Street.

A record price has been established for Spring street between Harris and Baker streets. Jesse Ward has sold to relatives his one-third interest in a parcel on the east side of the street, 45 by 150 feet, for $600 a front foot, making $27,000 for the whole parcel. The buyers already owned the other two-thirds. The transaction was handled direct.

Hugh Richardson Sells.

Hugh Richardson has sold to J. B. Frost the stone bungalow at the southwest corner of Eleventh and Cypress streets, east of the Frank D. Holland apartments, for $22,500. As security for $5,000 Mr. Richardson took a mortgage on the place.

Peachtree Road Sale.

Peachtree road north of Buckhead continues to bring good prices. The northwest corner of Piedmont avenue, for instance, has been transferred from Mrs. M. C. Johnson to a client of Homer McAfee, of the Haas & McIntyre Agency, for $18,000, or at the rate of $75 a front foot.

The frontage on Peachtree is 240 feet and on Piedmont avenue 485 feet.

Preparing Church Plans.

W. T. Downing, the well-known architect, is preparing plans for the new First Presbyterian Church and manse at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Seventeenth streets, the total cost to be about $110,000. It is probable that work will be started within the next few weeks, since the Presbyterians will not wait to sell their old property on the south side of Marietta street, between Spring and Forsyth streets.

The Peachtree lot is 200 by 261 feet and cost approximately $47,000. Numerous people have tried to buy it at a great advance. The Marietta street lot is about 90 feet wide and is held for $180,000. This lot was given to the church by the late William Lowry, father of Colonel Robert J. Lowry, and W. A. Moore.

Small Sales Total $30,700.

The L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency has reported the following sales during the past week:

Six lots in the Clairemont Park sub-division at Decatur, $6,250; eight in Peachtree Highlands, $8,450; three in Woodlawn Park, $2,250; one in Oakwood Terrace, $850.

Mrs. Gussie May Bridges bought one of the corners of Moreland and North avenues, 50 by 150 feet, for $2,850; Mrs. Ella C. Freeman bought one of the corners of Moreland avenue and Hume street, 50 1-2 by 130, for $2,600 cash, and F. C. and B. C. Wilkerson bought one of the corners of Ira street and West Georgia avenue, 27 by 115, for $550, all through J. E. Pritchett.

Dixon Andrews bought 180 Tift avenue, 50 by 150, for $2,400, and J. T. Gardner the house and lot at No. 125 Bryant street, 50 by 100, for $2,750, through E. F. Culpepper.

Mrs. J. O. Hipp bought through Miss Maud Hampton from Lounsford & Bumbaugh, lot 4, block C of the Peachtreet Highlands sub-division for $1,750, and will build a $4,000 bungalow. The sellers made $150, having bought 30 days ago.

The total of the above sales is $30,700.

Enhancement in Lot.

A lot that a few years ago was used for pasturage purposes and that could have been bought for $100 a front foot has just changed hands at $300. This is on the north side of East Linden street, across from the Davis-Fischer Sanitarium, and also across from the James R. Gray property which fronts on Howard and Linden streets. It was bought by John W. Zuber from Daniel Brothers for $25,000. The lot is 85 by 260 feet, cornering on an alley which runs northward to North avenue.

Mr. Zuber may build a house on the location, according to report.

PHYSICIAN SLAIN IN HOME HE INVADED

Unwritten Law Plea of Alabama Man Who Killed Masonic Brother.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 19.—Dr. Frank Walton, well known and prominent physician employed by the Woodward Iron Company at Mulga, a mining camp in the western part of the county, is dead as a result of three pistol bullets fired by Gid T. Weaver, a young electrician employed by the same company.

The shooting took place at the home of Weaver when the latter returned unexpectedly. The accused fired three shots, one striking Dr. Walton in the breast and the other two in the side of the back. The wife of Weaver grabbed hold of the weapon and the fourth shot went wild.

Weaver surrendered and was brought to the county jail here today. His preliminary trial is set for Saturday before a justice at Mulga. The unwritten law will be the plea.

The body of Dr. Walton was brought to Birmingham for interment.

Both deceased and accused were members of the same Masonic lodge.

Smoot Sees Gloomy Outlook for Sugar

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—A prediction that the price of sugar will be reduced by the sugar refineries until the domestic cane and beet sugar producers have been destroyed, and that the refiners then will boost the price of sugar higher than it has been for years and reap the benefit, was made by Senator Smoot of Utah, during the debate on the sugar schedule in the Senate to-day.

Senator Smoot declared that the American sugar refiner had the entire business in this country concentrated within his grasp, "that it was in the hands of a few men.

Thousands Bet by Millionaires on Race

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Heavy betting by millionaire sportsmen on the speed boat contests being held in connection with the second anual water carnival to-day caused activity in the offices of First Deputy Police Chief Schuettler and Sheriff Zimmer.

Thousands of dollars are said to have changed hands during yesterday's races. One wager was declared to have been for $15,000.

"I have issued orders to my men to arrest any one who may be involved, regardless of who they are, in case they see money change hands," said Schuettler.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Splendid Bill at Forsyth.

Willie Weston, Grace DeMar and Toots Paka and her Hawaiian musicians are running a dead heat for first honors in the fine vaudeville offering at the Forsyth this week. First-nighters found it hard to pick the winner.

The Hawaiian musicians repeat the big hit they made on their previous visit to Atlanta. The guitar playing of one of the men brings down the house and Miss Paka's "hula hula" dance wins a big hand. The weird native songs are exceptionally pleasing.

Willie Weston, in a class by himself as a character singer, has new songs this year, and his act goes big. He was assisted at the piano by Howard Winburn, the Atlanta pianist; Mike Bernard, Weston's regular partner, being ill.

Miss DeMar, who sings well some songs that are full of "pep" to say the least, and captures the gallery in her last number when she exhibits a very shapely figure in tights.

The other acts on the bill are above the average in quality. Kennedy and Rooney have a skit that keeps the audience chuckling; Foster and Lovell win favor with songs and nonsense; the Nikko troupe of acrobats have a Japanese who walks up and down stairs on his head as an added feature, and the Pathe pictures are unusually interesting.

War Picture at the Grand.

Interesting light is thrown on the threatening Mexican situation by a remarkable motion picture, "Victory," at the Grand Theater this week. While the scene would fit any Spanish-American country, the acute conditions in Mexico immediately suggest that country, and the analogy is stronger still when the President of the Republic is assassinated and the crux of the drama develops with an attack on the United States battleship Utah.

Woven through the play is the love drama of a young United States naval lieutenant and the daughter of the United States Ambassador. All modern implements of warfare, including the hydroplane and the wireless, are demonstrated in action, and stirring battles are fought. The picture was made through a special permission and cooperation of the United States Navy Department.

Policeman Sews Up Slit in Skirt

AYDEN, N. C., Aug. 19.—A pretty 19-year-old girl appeared in the streets here wearing a generously slit skirt. She did it on a wager. A crowd of hooting men and boys followed her.

A policeman escorted the girl to a nearby millinery shop and ordered the slit sewed up. He called a carriage and sent the girl home. Then he chased the crowd away.

Summary of Weekly Weather Is Bullish

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—There were small areas with more than 2 inches of rainfall in some of the central and eastern cotton-growing States. The greatest weekly precipitation, 4.43 inches, occurred at New Orleans, and there was 4.20 inches at Rome, Ga. Mean temperatures were above normal, except that there was a deficiency in the central and eastern portions of North Carolina, Northeastern South Carolina, Southern Georgia, the central portion of Northern Florida, the greater portion of Louisiana and the extreme southeastern portion of Eastern Texas.

The greatest excess in temperatures was 7 to 9 degrees in Oklahoma and Northwestern Arkansas. The deficiencies in temperatures were slight.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 72 to 82 degrees over the eastern, and from 80 to 84 degrees over the central, and from 82 to 86 degrees over the western portion of the cotton region. The lowest mean temperature, 72 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 86, occurred in Oklahoma, Northwestern Arkansas and Northern and Western Texas. The precipitation was light over the greater portion of the cotton region, and there was considerable areas in the western portion and small areas in other portions where there was no precipitation.

By states:

Georgia — Temperatures continued above the normal, but weather was cooler toward the close of the week. Light showers occurred from the 14th to 16th, but the amounts were irregularly distributed and below normal. The sunshine was ample and conditions were generally favorable.

Mississippi—The mean temperature averaged slightly above normal. Showers occurred every day except Sunday, but mostly in the southern portion. The rainfall is still insufficient at many points in the northern and central portions of the State. Sunshine was ample.

Arkansas—Weather was moderately warm in the eastern, but unusually hot in the western district. Sunshine was above normal. Light, scattered and beneficial showers occurred over 50 per cent of the State, but rain is needed in some localities.

Texas—Temperatures were moderate along the coast, but exceeded the normal elsewhere. Local showers occurred on several days, three-fifths of the reporting stations receiving moisture. Good amounts of precipitation occurred in several of the central and southern counties, but elsewhere the amounts were too light to be of much benefit, and more rain is needed. The sunshine was abundant.

Oklahoma—Weather was intensely hot during the week. Scattered thundershowers which occurred did not relieve the serious drouth.

Alabama—The temperature averaged 2 to 5 degrees above normal during the first and middle parts of the week, and was nearly normal at the close of the week. Widely scattered showers occurred, but the precipitation was unevenly distributed and generally there was a considerable deficiency. There was no rain at many stations. Sunshine was abundant.

South Carolina—Nearly normal temperature and sunshine prevailed. More rain over the greater portion of the State would be beneficial.

North Carolina—The temperature was below normal in the eastern and slightly above in the western portion of the State. The temperatures were moderate and the nights cool. Cloudy and showery weather prevailed in the first three days, followed by clear the remainder of the week, except that light showers occurred throughout the week in the extreme western portion of the State. Sun ample.

Tennessee—High temperatures continued. The weather was generally fair, except that scattered showers relieved drouthy conditions in a few localities. Rain is needed generally.

Florida—Showers occurred almost daily, being locally heavy in portions of the peninsula. The rainfall was fairly well distributed, except in some of the east coast counties, where drouth prevailed. Temperature was near normal.

BULLS IN CONTROL OF COTTON REINS

Liverpool and Shorts Big Buyers on Western Weather Conditions—Bears Cautious.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Cables from Liverpool were surprisingly strong today, with the result that prices were 5 to 15 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. The Mexican "war scare" did not result in any pressure. This, coupled with the absence of rains in the western belt of any consequence and the Dallas wire of hot and clear weather, encouraged sufficient buying to send prices still higher. Trading was active and shorts appeared to be nervous over prospects for a bullish weekly crop report covering Texas and Oklahoma.

The feeling is still more bullish in the absence of rains in the western belt and the bull forces were inclined to predict higher prices. Liverpool was said to be a good buyer in this market; also spot interests.

During the forenoon the market displayed an inflexible tone. Offerings were extremely light and scattered, resulting in prices increasing the advance 12 to 16 points from the previous close. August at the opening showed the largest gain, but later settled around 11.67, against an opening of 11.70.

The detailed weather for Texas and the weekly weather report, which was construed as bullish brought out buying and a few points rally followed. Those who are advocating the bull side are advising friends to buy at the present level.

The bearish element are awaiting further developments in the western belt and as soon as there are signs of good rains it is very likely there will be some good selling.

At the close the market was steady, with prices at a net advance of 5 to 20 points from the closing quotations of Monday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: August, 11.66; October, 11.17; December, 11.10; January, 10.99; March, 11.08.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 19.—The map shows a rather general rainfall over the southern half of Texas during the past 24 hours, but generally light, except at Beeville and Luling. None in the northern half or in Oklahoma; part cloudy in southern Arkansas, west Tennessee and the Texas coast. Generally fair elsewhere; no rain. Indications are for part cloudy with probably some scattered showers in the Western States; cooler in the northern half of the belt; generally fair weather with moderate temperatures over the eastern half of the belt is favorable, as an excess of rain was feared.

Liverpool came in stronger than expected and quoted spots 4 points higher; sales, 8,000 bales. Cables report Russia and the continent buying. Political news is less favorable. London says that a third war in the Balkans seems near, as Turkey is apparently making preparations to move against Bulgaria.

Galveston freight people report an excess of steamer room over offerings, and room engaged during the summer being relet, offered or to let as the demand is not up to anticipations. This is confirmed in a way by the Galveston and Houston receipts being lighter than last year, particularly to-day, although picking and ginning are known to be in active operation over a large part of Texas.

Our market opened about 10 points higher and ruled quiet but steady at the advance, waiting for the weekly weather report, which is expected will be unfavorable on the Western States. Unfavorable reports on north Texas and Oklahoma, owing to insufficient rainfall, are also expected in the next few days from parties who are now traveling in that section to inspect the crop, and the opinion has generally settled to the anticipation of a bullish September bureau showing 4 to 6 points decline in conditions.

BETTER TRADE IN DRY GOODS THIS YEAR THAN YEAR AGO

Marshall Field & Co, in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

Buyers have been in the dry goods market this week in much larger numbers than during the same period a year ago. Merchants are ordering forward their fall lines and filling in their stocks thoughout all departments. Buying has proceeded with precaution in individual cases, but retailers generally are so much in need of merchandise for immediate requirements that the total volume of shipments is keeping up remarkably well.

"Much needed rains have brightened the prospects for a good fall business in a large portion of the territory that was feeling the drouth.

"Silks are a big item of the trade at present and practically all buyers in the market are placing orders for this class of merchandise in liberal quantities.

"Judging from the extraordinary demand that has developed and in view of the serious labor troubles that have prevailed for some time in the silk industry, there will be a scarcity of all kinds of silks before the season is far advanced.

"The sale of black silks has improved greatly within the last few weeks.

COTTON GOSSIP

Liverpool is said to be a good buyer. Mitchell, Riordan and Cone were probably the best buyers on the call. Cone is said to be buying for McFadden. There was no rains shown on the map in the western belt of any consequence.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 19.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows partly cloudy in Southern Arkansas, West Tennessee and Texas coast. Generally fair elsewhere. Lighter but rather general precipitation over southern half of Texas. None shown by the map in the northern half, or Oklahoma. Indications are for partly cloudy to further showers over the western States; also Arkansas and Tennessee. Cooler weather generally in northern half of the belt.

Report here from Galveston freight agents says freight room engaged during summer is being relet, owing to demand for shipments not being up to expectations.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Showers fell in Texas and Oklahoma Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and while general good rains are needed, the talent is now convinced that some relief has come to the drouth-affected areas. This, in conjunction with the favorable crop reports received from Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and the Carolinas, caused the cotton market to ease off a bit. Oklahoma now seems to be in worse condition than any of the cotton-growing States, as a result of long continued dry weather.

"Texas, on the other hand, has suffered in part only, and certain sections there seem to be doing very well. Texans themselves say the boll weevil has done some damage in the southwestern portion of the State, but the recent dry weather has put an end to the progress of such damage on the west. The chronic crop killer seems to have failed in his attempts to reduce the crop promise to relatively small provisions, and for this reason the talent is now talking big crop and moderate trade prospects with a great deal of energy. In all of which demand for distant delivery and the causes thereof are playing a leading role. No general rains are in sight, but the weather bureau promises normal temperatures and showers during the next six days, from which the west may derive some further relief in the near future."

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: We favor sales on all moderate advances under existing conditions.

A. Norden & Co.: We believe that higher prices will be seen in due course.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: While so large a crop seems assured, few are willing to attempt a bull speculation when the whole crop is soon to be for sale.

Miller & Co.: We continue our advices to sell December cotton.

WAR SCARE NOT FELT IN STREET

Market Ruled Dull but Steady. Early Reaction Retrieved by Good Absorption.

By CHAS. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—As a result of the report from Mexico City that President Huerta had delivered an ultimatum to the United States which might result in war, the stock market was very weak at the opening to-day and prices were lower.

United States common declined 1¼. Canadian Pacific slumped to 217½ for a loss of 2½ points. Reading declined to 159¾ for the loss of 1¼. Mexican Petroleum was under pressure, yielding 1 point. Union Pacific lost 1⅜. Northern Pacific shaded 1.

The selling at the start was general. Investors as well as speculators seemed to be dumping their holdings. At the end of 45 minutes a better tone prevailed, as Washington dispatches seemed to put a more optimistic complexion on the Mexican situation.

Among the other losses were Amalgamated Copper ¾, Chesapeake and Ohio ¾, Chino Copper ⅝, Erie ½, Pennsylvania Railroad ⅝.

Americans in London were under pressure and were weak and irregular. American dispatches received in London before the opening of the New York market causer heavy selling of United States securities.

The situation between Mexico and this government attracted attention and for a time exercised a disturbing influence with many of the important stocks sustaining further losses.

Copper declined ⅞, selling at 73¼. Union Pacific also declined ¾, and the other railways were on the declining side. Reading unchanged; other issues down from a fraction to over a point. At the close of the forenoon the tone became steadier. Call money loaned at 2¼.

Stocks in the last hour generally sold under the opening. Amalgamated Copper lost ⅝ on the day, while Steel was 1¾ under Monday's final. Reading held comparatively firm, selling around 160. Pennsylvania Railroad was under pressure, falling to 111 for the loss of 2¼ on the day. Southern Pacific sold at 91⅝, where it had ruled nearly all day. The tone was depressed.

The market closed dull.

Government bonds unchanged. Other bonds firm.

Occasionally "Capital" Discovers That "Labor" Really Is a Factor in National Life.

One Big City, Looking Around for 8,000 Vanished Mechanics, Makes the Discovery Just at Present.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Chicago had a lockout of workmen in the building trades.

It was decided by those engaged in building that something must be done, and so all building was stopped for a while, builders agreeing to stand the loss in order to carry their point.

Finally building was resumed and something strange and surprising happened. IT WAS DISCOVERED THAT 8,000 BUILDING MECHANICS WERE MISSING IN CHICAGO.

And the builders, anxious to rush through the work that had been delayed during the lockout, did not know exactly WHERE to get the eight thousand mechanics.

Those eight thousand mechanics had not been sitting around waiting for the lockout to end, but had gone to other cities and engaged in other occupations.

This discovery is useful, since it makes clear the fact that in this country and in its enterprises organized labor actually plays a part that is not to be disregarded.

The builders discover that their architects, their draftsmen, their enterprise and their MONEY amount to very little if they haven't got THE WORKERS TO MAKE REALITIES OF THE IDEAS, THE PLANS, THE ENTERPRISE AND THE MONEY.

Perhaps it is a good thing to have the eight thousand mechanics missing for a little while, just to teach the gentlemen who occasionally imagine that they are the entire nation that they wouldn't be very much more important than Robinson Crusoe on his island if they didn't have the workmen with them.

The absence of these mechanics is also interesting as demonstrating the value of labor unions that keep an organized body of workers ready to do the skilled work of the country upon demand.

The country has grown too big for the old system under which both labor and capital were disorganized, with the capitalist, when the mood seized him, deciding to build something, going out looking for isolated workers, gathering them together and putting them to building.

To-day capital is organized AND OUGHT TO BE ORGANIZED UNDER PUBLIC CONTROL AND REASONABLE CONDITIONS.

And labor is organized and ought to be organized, also under public control and reasonable conditions.

The Chicago lesson teaches that if labor were NOT organized, if the unions did not, by demanding fair wages and fair hours, limiting apprentices and preventing oversupply, regulate conditions, the labor market would be chaotic and the great operations of this day impossible.

If the lack of mechanics in Chicago teaches capital the importance of labor and teaches also the important fact that organized labor makes great building and manufacturing possible, the hardship of the Chicago lockout will not have been endured entirely in vain.

Winifred Black Writes on Elderly Flirts

They Haunt the Summer Resorts, She Says, Like Some Kind of Ghosts and They Are Dreadfully Silly.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

THEY'RE here—in full force—the elderly flirts. I met two of them down at the Springs just now.

The first elderly flirt was a man, forty-five if he was a day; straggling along behind his good, comfy, kindly, middle-aged wife—making eyes at every girl of twenty or so he met.

I walked behind him and heard the girls—after they had passed.

I really wish he could have heard them; he would have been edified.

The Girls Know Him.

"Here's father again," said one pretty thing in pink. "Oh, do look, he'll get cross-eyed, he ogles so."

"I heard him calling the telephone girl 'honey' at the hotel this morning," said a sweet sister in blue, "and you should have seen the face she made when he turned the other way."

"Father certainly is a giddy old thing," said the prettiest of all, in mauve. "I saw him holding hands with teacher, the one with the glasses, out on the porch just at sunset.

"Quoting poetry, too; and his wife came round the corner. I felt so sorry for her, I couldn't bear to look at her."

"Here he is," said the sportive widow to her escort. "Grandpa Googoo Eyes. I met him with his little girl this morning and he stopped talking to her and made an excuse to ask me the way somewhere. You ought to see the way he takes off his hat, ugh—he makes me shudder."

"Grandpa Googoo Eyes."

"Grandpa Googoo Eyes"—not a pretty name, is it, Mr. Elderly Flirt? Yet that is what they call you, the young things you try so hard to impress.

"Grandpa Googoo Eyes," and yet you are not a grandpa at all, only a pa—and not a day over forty-five at the most—but, oh, you do look so elderly to the girls you so much admire—and your jokes are so elderly, too, and your compliments and the sweet, clever things you try so hard to say—can't you see how they laugh at you, all but those who want you to give them something—something that costs more money than young Romeo can afford.

Can't you see how sorry they are for the good, sweet woman who gave up everything else in the world to be your wife—poor silly elderly flirt, you—and the wife—do you think she doesn't know? Do you imagine that she is so used to your artless little ways by this time that it doesn't stab her to the faithful heart to hear the girls make fun of you? Oh, yes, she hears them—trust her for that. She hears everything, sees everything that concerns you—for she loved you once and she never can get over that.

Your First Flirtation.

Now she looks upon you with a kind of contemptuous pity, a sort of kindly forgiveness now; what else can she do?

She looks older than you—she knows that; knows it in every beat of her heart, in every line of her tired face. She has borne you children. See that line by the sensitive mouth—that came when the boy was so ill. That wrinkle there by the eyes—that was when you were ill and she worried so about you.

The hair there on the temples—it was your first flirtation, that you thought she never even heard of, brought that. Don't you remember that summer when the second baby was so little and so delicate, she couldn't go out much, and you—but rest assured she heard. There is always someone to tell. You have cut those lines on a sensitive face—you and no other—none but you—and everyone who sees you together sees it and pities her for being married to one so shallow-hearted, so cruelly light of mind as you, Mr. Elderly Flirt.

There's your sister there—in the shadows behind you—painted, made up, bedizened. How old is the boy she has in tow? Not an hour over twenty-two, if faces tell anything like the truth. She'll get him out into the moonlight and make a fool of him and the nice girl will cry her eyes out about it.

Poorly elderly flirt—what a sorry thing she is—even when she is married and makes a fool of her husband as well as of herself.

Tries to Look Young.

She tries so pitifully hard to look young—hark, what an imitation giggle it is that she gives. Be careful, those high heels were never meant for a charmer over forty. You'll slip, beautiful lady, you'll slip, and what a time you'll have getting up again. Oh, why don't you give it all up once and for all, Elderly Flirt, in petticoats too short and slippers too tight for elderly comfort—let it all slip, the silly game you have played so long.

The girls there behind you—they do the thing much better; they do really—and how about the decent, kindly, honest man who pays your bills and sends you away to have a good time? It isn't fair; honestly it isn't—it isn't the square deal. He works so hard and is so proud of you—why can't you pretend to be halfway decent—just for his sake—at your age?

The Elderly Flirts—they haunt the summer resorts like some kind of forlorn ghosts.

An Opportunity for Women

There Never Was a Time, He Says, When the Need for Women to Become Wise Was So Great as It Is Now.

By ELBERT HUBBARD

A CERTAIN California Bishop was at first opposed to woman suffrage.

Next he investigated it.

Then he saw it was coming.

It came.

Now he gives instruction to the women of his bishopric. It is something like this:

"Inform yourselves thoroughly on all questions of state. You are entering into grave responsibilities, that of free citizens. Inform yourselves, be wise in what you do."

This is advice that a wise father should give to his children.

There was never a time when the need for women to become wise was so great as it is now. Their rights, personal, political, commercial, involve a concomitant responsibility.

When we were children we used to think how glorious it would be when we were grown up. Then we would have the privilege of staying out at night as long as we chose, and of doing what we pleased, all day long.

Self-Control.

But when we became men we realized that there was a limit to the hours of the night, also to our capacity to keep awake, that in order to be able to "have a good time," a man must control himself.

Every privilege is bounded by responsibilities which have to be carried in order to make the privilege possible.

That is all any human being has—opportunity.

The opportunity for suffrage and personal rights has not come easily to women. They have worked until they have quite an understanding of the rights that they want and the privileges that have been denied them.

Civic Research Clubs.

In most of the States where suffrage has been granted, the Woman Suffrage clubs have been turned into Civic Research clubs. Women are bringing politically unprejudiced minds to bear on political situations and their new privileges. Their actions, as a rule, are decided by this test, "Is it right or is it wrong." Women whose actions are not influenced by right and wrong are taking very little interest in the woman suffrage movement.

The Reverend Mabel M. Irwin, a Universalist minister, gives out a well-timed warning to women. She urges them to make no mistakes in using the newly acquired privilege of their natural rights. She eloquently urges them to use their power to develop a better, nobler race.

Mabel M. Irwin affirms that women have not been shirking the burden of motherhood, but the bondage of motherhood. When women have the rights of free citizens this bondage will be removed. Then there will be the joyous laughter, the patter of little feet that makes perennial youth.

English Women's Demands.

Beatrice Harraden, the English author, in a recent number of Votes for Women, expresses a clear understanding of how vital to the Englishwomen is the cause of woman suffrage.

If there were only a few women engaged in this movement we might think it was only a dream of fair women. But when fishwives, tinplate workers, weavers, tailoresses, upholsteresses, laundresses, charwomen, ropemakers, shop assistants, nurses, teachers and sweatshop workers unite in the demand for suffrage as equals with the women of nobility, there is something very vital in the movement. It means that these women are stirred into action by a primitive instinct.

Women and Statesmen.

Recently a deputation of women from every walk in life spoke eloquently to Mr. Lloyd George and his colleagues. Many of them had never before made a speech. They were unlettered, hard-working women, moved to eloquence by a cause.

Miss Harraden says the women impressed the statesmen though the statesmen did not impress the women. Their cloaks and trappings of office meant nothing to these women, demanding the privilege to exercise their inherent right of freedom.

When women who toil with their hands join with nobility, and all are made equal by the cause which is moving them, it is time that the Englishmen recognized that it is an inherent, natural right that women are demanding.

The Battle of the Nile

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE Battle of the Nile, Nelson's greatest victory, and one of the most remarkable naval fights known to history, came off one hundred and fifteen years ago—August 1, 1798.

In May, 1798, Nelson, now in independent command, was dispatched by his Government to intercept the great French armament which was intended to reach Egypt and threaten India. Napoleon had vast ideas in his head, and he hoped by means of this armament to materialize them in the shape of a great Oriental Empire.

Coming up with the French fleet in the roads of Aboukir, Nelson lost no time in getting ready for action. With sublime audacity, and in defiance of all the then recognized rules of sea fighting, he ordered part of his fleet to get in between the French ships and the shore, while with the other part he attached from the side of the open sea. Assailed from front and rear, the French were taken at a great disadvantage, and though they fought with a splendid courage, there was never a moment when the issue of the battle was in doubt. The genius, audacity, quickness of the little English Admiral were too much for them, and of the thirteen French battleships only two escaped.

The French ought to have won the day. Their vessels were equal in number to those of the English (13 on each side), and were in size and caliber much superior to them, the British "seventy-fours" being no match for the new and magnificent French "eighties." But the French had no Nelson, and that fact explains it all.

Two or three very important things were settled by Nelson's brilliant victory at the Battle of the Nile. It settled the fact that England's navy was supreme, invincible. It settled the fact that the long cherished idea of a French invasion of England was never to be realized. And finally it settled the fact that Napoleon's visions of a mighty empire in Egypt and Syria, and possibly in India, were to go up in smoke. There was nothing to hinder Napoleon from making himself Emperor of France, and, for a time, dictator of Continental Europe, but the way in which Nelson smashed the great armament off the roads of Aboukir convinced every sensible man in France that the First Consul could never become master of the East. To do that he needed, first, the mastery of the Mediterranean, and the little Admiral had demonstrated such mastery was out of the question.

KARMA

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.

I.

WE cannot choose our sorrows. One there was,
Who, reverent of soul, and strong with trust,
Cried, "God, though Thou shouldst bow me to the dust,
Yet will I praise thy everlasting laws.
Beggared, my faith would never halt or pause;
But sing thy glory, feasting on a crust.
Only one boon, one precious boon I must
Demand of Thee, oh, opulent great Cause.
Let Love stay with me, Constant to the end,
Though fame pass by and poverty pursue.
With freighted hold, her life ship onward sailed;
The world gave wealth, and pleasure, and a friend,
Unmarred by envy, and whose heart was true.
But ere the sun reached midday, Love had failed."

II.

Then from the depths, in bitterness she cried,
"Hell is on earth, and heaven is but a dream;
And human life a troubled aimless stream;
And God is nowhere. Would God so deride
A loving creature's faith?" A voice replied,
"The stream flows onward to the Source Supreme;
Where things that ARE replace the things that SEEM;
And where the deeds of all past lives abide.
Once at thy door, Love languished and was spurned,
Who sorrow plants, must garner sorrow's sheaf.
No prayers can change the seedling in the sod.
By thine own heart, Love's anguish must be learned.
Pass on, and know, as one made wise by grief,
That in thyself dwells heaven and hell and God."

NEW WITNESSES CALLED AGAINST FRANK

Former Employee Testifies Accused Knew Mary Phagan

THAW HELD; TO BE SENT BACK BY CANADA

Admits His Identity and Asks "Now, What Are You Going to Do About It?"

OTTAWA, ONT., Aug. 19.—The Canadian immigration authorities announced this afternoon that Harry K. Thaw would be deported from Canada. Officials of the justice department here do not believe Thaw can be detained.

This would mean that Thaw would be sent back over the border to New Hampshire.

COATICOOK, QUEBEC, Aug. 19.—Harry K. Thaw is under arrest here, according to the police authorities, and he will be held until the Dominion Government decides what can be done in his case.

The police are positive that their prisoner is Thaw. They said he admitted his identity.

Thaw said the authorities had no right to hold him and that there was nothing for which he could be extradited and sent back to New York State.

Thaw was arrested at the instance of Deputy Sheriff Kelsey, of New Hampshire, who saw him on a train on the Maine Central Railway as he was headed for Canada, and followed him here in an automobile.

One reason given by his captors for holding him is the $500 reward offered by Dr. Keib, head of Matteawan Asylum, from which Thaw made his escape.

Thaw will not discuss his movements since he got away from the New York institution Sunday morning, except to say that he boarded a train east of Boston. He said he was making for the coast and planned to sail for Europe.

Thaw was accompanied here by two men, one heavily built and the other slight and both smooth shaven.'

Recognized on Train.

Deputy Sheriff Burleigh Kelsey, of Colebrook, recognized Thaw on a train bound for Canada. Kelsey got off at Colebrook, got an automobile and after a chase of almost 20 miles overtook Thaw with two companions in Coaticook. They had left the train at Beecher Falls and driven across the border into Canada.

Kelsey notified the Coaticook police and kept on their trail. Thaw, when arrested, made no resistance and to-day will be lodged in the jail at Sherbrooke, Quebec.

Kelsey was on his way home to Colebrook after a trip South and was reading a paper when a stranger came from a few seats down the aisle in the smoking car and asked for a match. The Deputy Sheriff was reading the story of Thaw's escaping in the paper and a picture of Thaw stared up from the paper. He looked at the stranger and saw that the likeness at once resembled the stranger.

The stranger at once noticed the stare and said: "What's the matter? Do you think you know who I am?"

"I could make a pretty good guess," said Kelsey.

"Well, who am I then?" the stranger demanded.

"I think you are Harry K. Thaw."

Kelsey said the stranger laughed uneasily and then said blandly, "Well, you are right. I am Thaw. But you don't want me. You couldn't do anything to me if you wanted to. They have acquitted me of murder and you can't extradite me."

"Where are you bound for?" Kelsey asked.

"Canada," the man answered.

Pursues Him in Auto.

Kelsey picked up his paper again and the man who had declared he was Thaw went back to his seat with the match he had come to get. Deputy Sheriff Kelsey got off the train here. Then he found L. W. Barbour and Warner Drew and they decided to chase the party.

They got an automobile and made a quick run to Beecher Falls, the next station, just south of the Canadian line. There Kelsey made inquiries and found that three men answering the description of the three he had

$10,823,080 IS GAIN IN FULTON TAXABLES

The Fulton County tax digest, just completed by County Tax Receiver T. M. Armistead, was made public Tuesday, and it shows the tremendous net increase in taxables of $10,823,080. The total returns for the fiscal year amounted to $122,198,115, as compared with $111,375,035 for 1912.

The largest increase in any one item was that of city real estate, which showed an increase over last year of $9,043,235. The returns from city real estate this year amounted to $81,023,490. Increases in other items were not so noticeable, and in many instances a decided decrease was noted.

Poll tax returns amounted to $13,849, as compared with $13,967 for last year. The returns from bank shares amounted to $6,817,075, compared with $6,800,650 for 1912. Stocks and bonds returns showed an increase of $539,535. Money, notes and accounts returns were $10,358,175, as compared with $9,322,610 in 1912.

Merchandise returns were $8,915,400, compared with $8,727,770 last year. The automobile returns, as expected, showed a gain, going up to $522,160, compared with $501,090. Tax returns in the county from manufacturers, cotton and wool plants, etc., were $4,262,745, compared with $4,309,795 for 1912, showing a decrease of $47,050.

County real estate returns amounted to $4,708,462, compared with $4,731,375 for 1912, a decrease of $22,913. Capital in mining property returns were $3,350, as compared with $100 in 1912. Returns from furniture totaled $2,934,525, compared with $2,987,445 for 1912. Jewelry returns amounted to $224,430, compared with $232,380 last year, a decrease of $12,040.

Live stock returns were $309,890, compared with $347,535, a decrease of $37,645, showing that Fulton County is not raising as much catle as last year. The return from professional taxes was $5,990, compared with $5,640 last year. The returns from vehicles totaled $77,185, compared with $99,545 last year, showing a decrease in this source of revenue of $22,360. Returns from other sources were $941,680, as compared with $872,255 for 1912.

Girl's 'Soul Mate' Love Quenched by Week in Stockade

Two weeks in the city stockade has cured 19-year-old Beatrice Renfroe of certain ideas about "soul mate love."

Miss Renfroe is the young typist for whom A. M. Trippe, a salesman, deserted his wife and three young children. Trippe and the young woman are serving a term of 50 days in the stockade to which they were sentenced by Recorder Pro Tem Preston.

The young woman has written a letter to Probation Officer Coogler, in which she declares she is forever done with Trippe, and pleads that she be removed from the stockade and placed on probation that she may have a chance to resume her work as a stenographer and redeem herself.

She places all blame on Trippe, asserting that he pursued her to Macon after she had fled from the Martha Home, to which place she had been sent when she and Trippe were haled before the court the first time.

Kentuckians Fight Duel; One Is Dead

HENDERSON, KY., Aug. 19.—Coleman Davis to-day was believed to be dying from two bullet wounds, and William Steinwach was slightly hurt as the result of a revolver duel. The two men quarreled and arranged a peaceful meeting to settle their difficulties. As soon as they met each man drew his revolver and began firing.

Sulzer Holds Fort, Ignoring Ruling of Attorney General

ALBANY, Aug. 19.—Unaffected by the opinion of Attorney General Carmody who held that Martin Glynn legally is Governor of New York, William Sulzer occupied his office in the executive chamber this morning as usual. He came to the capitol at the usual time and took up the morning mail.

Chester C. Platt, his private secretary, announced that Mr. Sulzer still regarded himself as the legal Governor.

"We knew what the opinion of the Attorney General would be before it came out," he said

Lieutenant Governor Glynn prepared to take his fight into the halls of the Legislature to-day.

Blackjack Wielder Held for Grand Jury

W. K. Dunn, arrested for drawing a blackjack on a newsboy, was held in $500 bond Tuesday for Grand Jury action by Acting Recorder Preston. Dunn was held for assault and battery and assault with intent to murder.

Dunn got into a fight with little Isadore Kulbersh, 12 years old, and Bill Krell, another newsie, who went to his small partner's aid. "Kid" Young, who has appeared in the local prize ring, tried to act as peacemaker after Dunn had pulled a blackjack, and all four were served with charges. The cases against the youths were dismissed.

WAR MOVE ON U. S. BY HUERTA DENIED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The White House to-day received a dispatch from Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy absolutely denying press dispatches to the effect that he had been given his passports by the Mexican Government or that an ultimatum of any kind had been given to him by Huerta.

The telegram from O'Shaughnessy is explicit on both of these points, and indicates that the situation has not been changed in any way except that a formal and diplomatic reply to the Lind proposals was transmitted to O'Shaughnessy yesterday by the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, Frederic Gamboa. The tenor of this reply probably will be made public at the White House later in the day.

In his telegram to Secretary Bryan, Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy relates the circumstances leading up to the transmission of the Huerta reply to the mediation proposals, which Lind carried from President Wilson to Mexico, and declares that nothing had indicated that they were in any way offensive to the Mexican Government.

Found Reports Were False.

He made a trip to the Mexican Foreign Office late last night to ascertain the truth of rumors that he was about to be given his passports, and that Mexico had demanded recognition from the American Government by last midnight.

He found these reports unfounded and spread the news among the members of the American colony in Mexico City. The population seemed to take it for granted that Huerta was about to make the desperate play which he long had threatened.

Secretary Bryan to-day denied that the State Department had received any ultimatum from Mexico concerning recognition of the Huerta government by any stated time, or that Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy had been given his passports and told to leave Mexico.

The State Department was informed to-day by Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy that Senor Gamboa, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has denied the statement made by Senor Urrutia, Minister of the Interior, concerning the reported ultimatum, and it is believed here that the outlook for a peaceful settlement of the troubles between the two nations is more promising at the present time than it has been in the past fortnight.

Wild Rumor Laid to Cabinet.

Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy, in his telegram to the State Department to-day, reported that President Huerta and Envoy Lind were conferring concerning the final settlement of the difficulties between the two countries. While he did not comment on the situation beyond giving a bare report of the fact, Mr. O'Shaughnessy strongly indicated that he hoped for a peaceful settlement and that the next 48 hours probably would bring developments leading to a compact between the United States and Mexico.

It is believed at the State Department that the sensational reports emanating from Mexico City last night were inspired by the Huerta Cabinet.

INDIRECT TESTIMONY AGAINST PRISONER IS FORBIDDEN BY JUDGE

Here are the important developments Tuesday in the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan:

Judge Roan rules out all testimony bearing on particular acts of immorality which the State has been endeavoring to prove against the defendant.

Will Turner, former pencil factory employee, testifies he entered the metal room shortly before noon one day near the middle of March and saw Frank seeking to engage Mary Phagan in conversation. He says he cannot recall any other person he (Turner) knew in the factory.

Solicitor Dorsey devotes large part of forenoon in an endeavor to bolster the character of C. B. Dalton, a State's witness, and tear down that of Miss Daisy Hopkins, who was called by the defense.

George Gordon, called by the Solicitor, swears that the sensational affidavit of Minola McKnight, negro cook at the Selig home, was signed in his absence and that Solicitor Dorsey refused to order her release, saying he "would get in bad with the detectives" if he did.

Leo Frank found himself again the target for the attacks of Solicitor General Dorsey when the State took up its rebuttal Tuesday in the trial of the National Pencil Factory superintendent, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan.

By far the most damaging testimony brought out against Frank was that of Will Turner, who testified that he had entered the metal room and come upon Frank seeking to press his attentions upon the Phagan girl only a few weeks before the crime.

When Turner was put under the raking fire of Luther Rosser's cross-examination, the weight of his testimony suffered considerably. The youth, who admitted he had worked at the factory only a brief time, was unable to describe Mary Phagan and was unable to tell the name of any other girl in the entire factory.

Tells of Frank Speaking to Girl.

"I went into the rear room on the second floor one day with some pencils," said Turner. "It was about the middle of March. Frank was walking from his office toward the rear of the factory. Mary Phagan was coming toward her machine. He told her to wait a minute, that he wanted to talk to her. She said she had to go to work.

"He said: 'I'm superintendent of the pencil factory and I want to talk to you.' She repeated that she had to go to work and he followed her as she backed away from him. A couple of girls came into the room and I asked them where to put the pencils and then I left. I didn't see any more."

On cross-examination young Turner admitted he did not know whether there were other girls around at the time or not. He did not know the names of the two girls, he said, who entered the room while Frank was trying to talk to Mary Phagan. The extent of his description of Mary Phagan was that she had light hair. The question of the admissibility of this evidence caused a long wrangle between the attorneys.

Rosser and Arnold objected on the ground that it was not at all material, proving absolutely nothing. They denied Dorsey's contention that it established that Frank had known Mary Phagan, in spite of his declarations that he did not know her. The lawyers said that it did not show that he knew her by name or that he was conversing with her on any other subject than her work.

Charges It Was First Step to Murder.

"We contend that Mary Phagan was killed right on that second floor," retorted the Solicitor. "We contend that Mary Phagan and Frank were the only persons in the metal department at the time that this incident took place, and that she was backing away and protesting that she had to go back to work. We contend that it was the beginning of the transaction which ended in the little girl's death. It should go in as contradicting Frank's statement that he did not know her."

Turner was allowed to tell his story.

That Solicitor Dorsey refused to take any step toward the liberation of Minola McKnight, cook at the Selig home, who was imprisoned until she made her sensational affidavit against Frank, on the ground that it would "get him in bad with the detectives," was the unexpected and highly interesting statement made by Attorney George Gordon late in the forenoon session.

Gordon was called by the State, but proved as good a witness for the defense. He declared that the affidavit made by the cook was signed in his absence, although the last paragraph stated that

LEO FRANK SKETCHED AS HE TOLD HIS OWN STORY TO JURY

During the greater part of his story Frank was as calm and statistical as an accountant discussing an audit.

In telling of his dealings with the police and Chief of Detectives Lanford, Frank waxed sarcastic in a quiet yet bitter way. But he never let loose his emotion or lost his poise.

At times Frank would lose his air of complete repression and his face for a moment would take on an aspect of deep feeling. He would, however, quickly resume his normal expression of stoicism.

WITNESSES GIVE DALTON GOOD REPUTATION

Once Bad Man, but He Has Reformed, Old Acquaintances Testify for State.

it was signed in his presence.

He said that he had told Solicitor Dorsey that the negro woman was being held illegally, but that the Solicitor had replied that it was necessary sometimes to do things of this sort in order to get the information wanted. He told of going to the police statin nad finding Minola crying and hysterical in her cell.

The attorney for the colored woman said that he had not been permitted to enter the room where his client was being interrogated by the detectives and Ray Pickett and Arthur Sraven, the latter two men being employees of the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company. He was present, he said, when part of the notes were being read by G. C. Febuary, but was not there when the affidavit was signed.

The McKnight affidavit told of alleged conversations at the Selig home of a nature very incriminating to Frank. The McKnight woman denied all of the statements in the affidavit to a Georgian reporter the night that she was liberated.

Indirect Evidence Against Frank Is Ruled Out.

A crushing blow was dealt the State by the refusal of Judge Roan to admit, either while the defense was completing its case or after the State had taken up the rebuttal, any evidence not directly and at first hand bearing upon the specific acts charged against the factory superintendent.

The ruling was a sweeping victory for the defense. It gave Frank's case, which had been aided materially the day before by the defendant's own statement, an added strength and heightened the prospects in Frank's favor.

Solicitor Dorsey tried first to cross-question Daisy Hopkins, one of the defense's witnesses, as to conversations she was supposed to have had in regard to incidents at the pencil factory in which she and a man undesignated except as her "foreman" were involved. Frank's name was not mentioned in the indicated charges. The conversation was about a "foreman."

The Hopkins woman denied again that she ever had made visits to the factory for improper purposes or that she had had the conversations referred to by the Solicitor.

Dorsey encountered the same stone wall when he tried to draw testimony against the moral character of Frank from his own witnesses. From W. P. Merck and J. P. Floyd the Solicitor had expected to obtain a recital of the stories of happenings which they said had been related to them

Merck, however, had m ysteriously disappeared from the courthouse when his name was called, and Floyd was not permitted to go into the details of the testimony the Solicitor had hoped to bring out.

The Solicitor thereafter confined his efforts to bolstering up the character of C. B. Dalton, the State's witness who testified to seeing women in Frank's office, and attacking that of Daisy Hopkins. He called a number of witnesses, one of them a cousin of the Hopkins woman, who swore that her character for truth and veracity was bad and that they wouldn't believe her on oath.

Swear Dalton's Character Is Good.

Other witnesses testified that Dalton's character was good. They were asked by Attorney Rosser if they were acquainted with his court and chain-gang record. They replied, for the most part, that they were not.

The brown suit worn by Frank April 26 was identified by Mrs. Emil Selig, his mother-in-law, at the opening of court in the forenoon and the suit was placed in evidence.

The defense prepared to show by Wiley Roberts, inside jailer at the Tower, that Jim Conley had been reading since his incarceration there, but the Solicitor objected on the ground that no basis had been laid for the testimony.

Daisy Hopkins then was called and questioned, after which the State began its rebuttal, the defense having closed its case.

While waiting for a witness Solicitor Dorsey arose and made the unexpected announcement that he himself had erased the identification "Taken out at 8:26" on the time slip taken from the clock in the factory. Frank had made the charge he had writteen words as an identification of the slip and that they had been erased. The Solicitor declared that he thought the detectives had made the identification.

"Frank did not know who made the erasure," said Attorney Reuben Arnold.

The Solicitor had announced earlier that his first witnesses in rebuttal would be called to support C. B. Dalton and impeach Daisy Hopkins, who declared she had never visited the factory with Dalton or that he had ever introduced Dalton to the factory superintendent.

Wiley Roberts was asked:

Q. Has Jim Conley been in your custody during this trial?—A. Yes.

Q. Has he ever asked for newspapers?—A. Yes.

Dorsey interrupted.

"Your honor," he said, "I think the witness, Jim Conley, ought to have the privilege of denying or affirming that before he can be impeached."

"Conley said that h could only read certain words," said Arnold, "but probably Mr. Dorsey is right. I will have to call Jim Conley back again. Mr. Rosser will be back in a minute and we will close."

Daisey Hopkins Is Recalled by Dorsey.

The witness was excused and Dorsey made the announcement that four doctors of the following five would be called by the prosecution:

Drs. G. C. Mizell, F. L. Eskridge, Clarence Johnson, John Funke, S. E. Benedict of Athens, and J. C. Cramer, of Macon, the latter two president and vice president of the State Board of Health.

Solicitor Dorsey asked that Daisy Hopkins be returned to the stand so that he might continue his cross-examination of her.

The witness took the stand.

Q. You say you knew nothing of the cot in the basement of the National Pencil Factory?—A. No.

Q. Do you know anything at all of the basement?—A. No.

Q. Are you acquainted with A. R. Floyd, of Redan, Ga.?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you known him for a long time?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you had a conversation with Floyd since the murder?—A. No.

Q. Haven't you been to his house to get milk?—A. I don't think I have since the murder.

Q. Didn't you go to the home of Floyd to get milk and tell him about that cot in the basement of the National Pencil Factory?—A. No.

Q. Do you know Bob Goddard?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Dr. R. S. Pound, of Redan?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Mr. Smith, superintendent of the Nunnally-McRae Company?—A. On Mitchell street?

Q. Yes.—A. Yes, I know him.

Q. Do you know Walter P. Merck?—A. Where does he live?

Met Merck on Peachtree Street.

Q. You met him first at Stone Mountain, then you met him on Walker street?—A. I met him at Redan. They used to live down there.

Q. You said something about being married. Have you two living husbands?—A. No; only one.

Q. Have you seen him since the murder?—A. Yes; at Redan.

Q. Do you remember meeting Walter P. Merck one Saturday afternoon on Whitehall street?—A. I met him on Peachtree.

Q. Didn't you tell him that afternoon that you were going to the National Pencil Factory?—A. No; I told him I had just left the factory.

Q. Didn't he make an engagement with you to go to the factory?—A. No.

Rosser objected, declaring that a female witness could not be attacked in that way.

"Your honor," said Dorsey, "I want to show by Merck that this woman did make an engagement with him that afternoon."

"I understand," replied Rosser, "that when an argument of this kind is to be made the jury is to retire."

"It would be better to have the ladies retire also," said Dorsey. "I don't want to embarrass them."

Jury and Women Retire From Room.

The jury retired, and after a hurried conference, Frank's wife and mother also left the courtroom at the request of Attorney Arnold.

"This is their witness," said Dorsey. "We want to show that this man Merck had her Saturday afternoon, and she said she was going to the National Pencil Factory. It was cold weather. We want to show that he saw her that night and what she told him."

The witness interrupted:

"It was summer time," she said pertly.

"She has denied," said Dorsey, "in the impeachment of Dalton that she ever went to the pencil factory for any improper purpose."

"We object," said Rosser.

"I want to show that she told Merck about meeting her foreman at the factory," said Dorsey.

Then the Solicitor repeated a conversation involving the "foreman," which is unprintable, which he wanted to get before the jury.

"He does not mean to charge Frank is the foreman," said Arnold. "He is frank enough to state that."

"Merck in an affidavit," said Dorsey, "said foreman. He didn't say Mrs. Hopkins said her superintendent or that she named any names. I mean to let the jury draw its own conclusions."

"I knew when your honor refused to rule out the charges of Conley and Dalton," said Arnold, taking up the argument, "that you were opening the doors for new issues that would obscure the charge of murder. I knew it would lead to a situation in impeachments bringing us to the point where we would hardly know who we were trying. This woman never would have been put up as an original witness except for the aspersions cast on her by Conley and Dalton. Look how far afield we have wandered. Now, he wants to impeach this witness on something with which the defendant has no connection."

"You can rebut any of their direct testimony," said Judge Roan. "You can not bring any new criminal charge against this defendant. If it is against someone else, it is irrelevant."

"Your honor," said Dorsey, "I want to ask a question to let the jury hear that you rule it out."

"No; we object," said Rosser "That's just why the jury was sent out."

"I'll let you assume that you ask it," said the court to Dorsey.

"Why, your honor," replied Dorsey, "it puts us in the position of not even trying to prove what we have indicated we would."

"I can not permit the question," said Judge Roan.

"Very well," said Dorsey, adding, in an undertone, "That shuts me off; that shuts me off."

Dorsey continued the examination:

Q. Didn't you meet Merck during the afternoon after working hours and tell him you were going to the pencil factory?—A. No.

Q. Didn't he come to see you that night?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you had been to the factory that afternoon?—A. No.

Men Say Woman's Character Is Bad.

Miss Hopkins was excused, and J. R. Floyd, of Redan, Ga., was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Do you know Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how many husbands she has?

Rosser: "I object, your honor. I don't care if she has three hundred husbands."

The objection was sustained.

Q. Would you believe her under oath?—A. I would not.

Q. Did you ever hear her say anything about a cot in the basement of the pencil factory?—A. Yes.

The witness was excused. Bob Goddard, brother of C. M. Goddard, who was shot to death a few months ago by Elmer F. Darden, was the next witness called in rebuttal. Goddard resides near Redan. Dorsey questioned him.

Goddard testified to the bad character of Daisy Hopkins, and declared he would not believe her under oath.

Henry Carr, of Stone Mountain; N. J. Ballard, a second cousin of Daisy Hopkins, and J. L. Rice all followed each other in rapid succession and testified that they would not believe the Hopkins girl under oath.

Dorsey then addressed the court.

"Your honor," he said, "we want to offer indictments against Daisy Hopkins and also a bond forfeiture."

Rosser: "Your honor, they objected to the introduction of an indictment against Dalton and they objected rightly. An indictment is nothing against one's character."

Dorsey: "Dalton denied any knowledge of an indictment. This is a bond forfeiture."

Judge Roan: "I rule it out."

Dalton's Recent Past Good, Says J. T. Hearn.

Glenn Smith, superintendent of the Nunnally-McRae Company, testified that Daisy Hopkins' character was bad and that he would not believe her on oath.

J. T. Hearn, of Walton County, said he had known C. B. Dalton since 1890. Dorsey questioned him

Q. Is his character good or bad?—A. The first part of his life was bad. The last part has been good.

Q. Would you believe him on oath?—A. Yes.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. When was the last time you knew Dalton?—A. 1903 or 1904.

Q. Did you hear about him being indicted for selling whisky in 1906?—A. Yes, but he had joined the church about 1904 and I understood was leading a good life.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Do you know the instance of his being indicted for stealing years ago?—A. Yes.

Rosser: "We object. He can't go into that."

Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Dorsey: "When they go into specific acts, can't I?"

Judge Roan: "No."

R. V. Johnston, another Walton County citizen, was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. When were you approached in regard to testifying to the character of C. B. Dalton?

Rosser interposed with an objection, but was overruled.

A. Last Friday, a week ago.

Q. Who approached you?—A. Harry Gottheimer.

Rosser again objected, and was sustained.

Q. Are you acquainted with the character of C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him on oath?—A. I would.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. You never heard that he was indicted for stealing and selling whiskey?—A. No.

The witness was excused, and W. M. Cook, of Social Circle, Ga., a dairyman and farmer, testified as to Dalton's good character, and declared that he would believe him on oath.

W. J. Elder, of Decatur, followed Cook on the stand, and said that Dalton came to Decatur about five years ago and worked for him as a carpenter. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Are you acquainted with Dalton's general character?—A. I don't know as I am.

Q. That means what people say about him?—A. Yes.

Q. Is his character good or bad?—A. Good.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. Why did you say just now that you didn't know?—A. I didn't know as I did.

Q. You said you didn't know because you didn't know yourself?—A. Yes.

The witness was excused, and A. B. Houston, of Decatur a farmer, who has lived there 41 years, was called. The witness said that he had known Dalton for eight years and that his character was good and that he would believe him under oath.

J. T. Borne, who formerly lived at Ingleside, in DeKalb County, and who now operates a cigar and soda fountain at Decatur, said he knew Dalton and would believe him on oath.

W. M. Wright, of Atlanta, general manager of the Independent Transfer Company, testified in behalf of Dalton's good character and declared that he would believe him on oath.

W. C. Hale, of No. 88 Kirkwood avenue, Atlanta, formerly of Walton County, testified to Dalton's good character and said he would believe him under oath.

L. L. Boyce, a city policeman, formerly of Walton County, testified that eighteen or twenty years ago Dalton's character was bad, but that now it was better and that he had heard nothing bad about him recently.

M. Gordon Caldwell, of Atlanta; J. W. Hunt, of No. 18 Trinity avenue, and W. P. Patrick, of tlanta, a member of the police force, testified to Dalton's good character and said that they would believe him under oath.

J. E. Dudley, a former employee of the pencil company, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Were you working at the National Pencil Factory about October, 1912?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember a machinist named Charley Lee?—A. Yes, he was working there.

Q. Were you hurt there?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. On the second floor, the office floor.

Q. Just where were you hurt?—A. On a metal machine. I hurt the forefinger of my left hand.

Mashed Finger But Kept Blood Off Floor.

Q. How were you hurt?—A. This fellow Lee had put the metal on the machine. It dropped off. I picked it up and in putting it back I mashed my finger.

Q. What did you do then?—A. There was some cotton waste there, which I put around my hand.

Q. Did any blood drop on the floor?—A. A few drops.

Q. Did any blood drop near the ladies' dressing room?—A. None.

Q. How long after this accident did you work?—A. I quit then.

Q. What does this fellow Lee do besides working at his trade?—A. I don't know.

Q. What did you do then?—A. I went to the office to get it dressed, then went to the Atlanta Hospital.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. How badly were you hurt?—A. Not very bad.

Q. You bled pretty freely?—A. Yes, but I had my hand in the cotton waste.

&. You didn't notice whether any blood was on the floor or not?—A. Yes; none of it dropped except at the machine where I was working.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Was your finger outside of the coton waste until you got to the office?—A. No.

The witness was excused, and the witness Merck was called, but failed to answer. Willie Turner, of Sandy Springs, the 16-year-old son of E. M.

FRANK'S STATEMENT IS BEST PLEA PRESENTED IN HIS DEFENSE SO FAR

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

So far, unquestionably, to my way of thinking Leo Frank himself has made the best and most appealing plea in behalf of Leo Frank.

His statement in the recital thereof was as clean cut, as dignified, as dispassionate and as convincing as any statement I ever heard from the witness stand, and I have heard hundreds.

Regardless of its merits—or, at least, aside from that—the defendant acquitted himself with credit, and that much may be said of him ungrudgingly and in the frankest fairness to all parties concerned.

Of course, had Frank been nervous, hesitating, "fidgety," or seemingly in any wise disconcerted, there would be those, perhaps, who would have seen in that great evidence of his guilt—and by the same token, in that he was calm, poised, self-possessed, even smiling at intervals, there will be those who see in that evidence of a monstrous coldness and unfeeling design.

The vast majority of those who heard that remarkable statement, however, must have been impressed by, at least, the apparent sincerity of it and the seeming inclination in the defendant to hold back nothing.

In its recital the statement of Leo Frank was wonderful—in its written form, stripped of the man's personality, it still is a human document of intense and absorbing interest.

It impressed me, too, as being in many ways characteristic of Frank as I have come to know him of late—and I never spoke one word to him in all my life.

I have come to know him as the prisoner sitting over there between the two women in the courtroom—the slight, spectacled party, a seat or two beyond Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold.

I have come to know him, in my way of knowing persons charged with grave crimes, not by way of personal touch so much as by constant observation of him under fire.

Repression Makes the Story.

All that was dramatic in Frank's statement was repressed—the dramatic touch was there, to be sure, but the red fire and the usual accompanying stage tricks were not.

If Frank should undertake to sell me a gross of pencils, I should expect him to tell me the truth about the pencils, and nothing but the truth—but I should expect him nevertheless to sell me the pencils at a profit.

His statement of Monday seemed to me a recital much after the fashion I should expect from him in the pencil transaction.

To me, it seemed that Frank was undertaking to tell the truth and nothing but the truth of the Mary Phagan murder, as he knows the truth—and to tell it at a profit to himself.

That is the best and the worst that I can say of Leo Frank's statement, as it appealed to me.

True, in a transaction involving a mere gross of pencils, there would be lacking all the great elements that entered into the statement Frank made on Monday—and yet, at that, neither subject matter is, in its final analysis, anything more or less than something about which the simple truth should be told.

Frank looked the jury fairly and squarely in the eye when he was making his statement—and not once did he hesitate or falter in stating his plea.

Contrast the statement of the defendant with the statement of the negro—the star witness summoned against him.

Frank's Day in Court.

Now, Monday was Frank's day in court, and it is square and right that Frank's showing should be criticised freely and frankly—it is right that his statement should be praised, if it seemed to deserve praise, just as it should be condemned, if it seemed to merit that melancholy fate.

Contrast it, therefore, with the statement of Conley!

Argue the matter with yourself.

Certainly, Frank has behind him a long period of decent life, good reputation, business integrity, and home happiness—and Conley has, what?

Take the two stories—and upon these two stories the verdict in the Frank case must turn eventually—and weigh them, side by side, honestly, without prejudice, and in the light of a clean conscience.

What is your answer?

What will be the jury's answer?

The field of speculation thus opened is most engaging, and it will, if one but undertake to enter it seriously and with open mind, be well worth the entering.

In the matter of his character, Frank said little. He entered simple denials to some few things cited against him.

He was willing to be cross-examined on his statement. He himself insisted that his general character be put in issue. He furnished the State with the first information it ever had that Conley could write.

All the way through, his statement rang with confident challenge, and a dare to the State to prove anything vile in him whatever!

Now, then, people will differ as to the EFFECT Frank's statement will and ought to have on the jury.

Maybe it is a clever evasion of a grave issue—maybe it is possible of rebuttal, and maybe it will be broken down.

Impressively Delivered.

The fact remains that it was most impressively delivered, and carried with it every emphasis of apparent truth and straightforwardness!

It is my opinion now that the State has in Frank's statement the hardest thing to get away from that yet has been tendered to it.

It contradicts the State at points that the defense has been able to fortify abundantly with facts.

It makes more necessary than ever before the complete success of the State's efforts to break down Frank's good name.

For I think it safe to predict that unless the State DOES demolish Frank utterly, the wonderful statement he made on Monday more than likely will serve in connection with the other things set up—to clear him of the charge of murdering Mary Phagan!

It matters not, so far as this article is concerned, moreover, whether the statement ought to clear him—the prospect is that it WILL clear him unless the State can batter it down and collapse it entirely!

The defendant touched upon every phase of the State's case against him—the happiness of his home, his nervousness on the morning of the murder, his movements on the day of the crime, and the day before, and the day after, his family's financial resources, his disinclination to talk to Conley, although he at first talked freely to the police officers, his alleged peeping into the girls' dressing room, his lack of knowledge of or acquaintance with the impeached Dalton, his non-association with loose characters, male and female.

There was not a point he failed to touch, even though he seemed to touch points now and then with a measure of fine scorn!

Is there a gap that Frank MIGHT let down that he has FAILED to let down?

Is there a point involved that Frank has not invited investigation of?

Hard to Find Gaps.

It is rather hard to locate any such gaps or points, if they are there.

And yet they may be there! That is for the State yet to demonstrate!

The State has the full right of rebuttal, as applied to Frank's statement, that it enjoys in respect of other evidence. There may be weak points in his story—just as there were weak points in Conley's.

The point is that they are not nearly so apparent upon the surface of things in the Frank statement.

For one thing, Conley made four sworn statements, all contradictory, before he got one finally landed, and Conley admitted freely from the stand that he had lied time and again.

On the other hand, Frank's statement is the first and only sustained and sequenced utterance as to the details of his story yet falling from his lips.

It must stand in its entirety or fall in its entirety.

Whatever may be the effect of that statement in the end, it will go down in the criminal history of Georgia as one of the most remarkably clear and apparently convincing statements ever falling from a defendant's lips.

When the State gets through with it, the statement may be shot to pieces and rendered utterly ineffective.

As it stands to-day, however, I hardly think a dozen people who heard it will deny the profound impression it made, and the present probability of its determining effect upon the minds of the jury.

The defense has played its best card in Leo Frank's statement.

It remains yet to be seen, however, whether that card is sufficient to win the case!

MOTHER OF LEO FRANK

Mrs. Rea Frank.

Wife at Last Breaks Down, Overcome by Frank's Story

After having braved every trying courtroom ordeal and faced every horrible charge hurled at her husband with a stoicism almost as unflinching and imperturbable as his, Mrs. Leo Frank gave away completely to her emotions and sobbed unrestrainedly as Frank said the last words of his wonderful and most impressive address to the jury Monday.

It was the final dramatic touch to a situation that had held a courtroom full of spectators in an irresistible thrall through four long hours of the afternoon.

The spell that had been cast over the room by the quiet but earnest words of the slight young factory superintendent was broken by the tones of the deputies, who shouted the moment Frank rose to leave the witness chair:

"Keep your seats, gentlemen, while the jury passes out."

Frank Rushes to Wife.

In the confusion that followed some did not notice that Frank rushed right to the side of his wife, who had thrown her head in her arms and was shaking with pitiful sobs as she moaned his name again and again.

The woman who had steeled herself against the accusations and innuendoes of the Solicitor General during the three long weeks of the trial collapsed when her husband himself took the stand to declare his innocence.

Many who had rushed into the inclosure to give their congratulations to Frank paused as they observed the piteous figure.

The jurors, already deeply impressed by the talk of Frank, were freshly touched by this exhibition of emotion. They had arisen to file over to the Kimball House. Juror Johenning, at the head of the line, stood for several minutes with tears running down his cheeks, oblivious of the fact that he was blocking the rest of the jurors and that three deputies were waiting to take them on their way.

Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner leaned against the railing of the inclosure. There was a suspicious moisture in his eyes, which have grown accustomed to many tragic and affecting spectacles.

Troublesome Lump Rises.

Very few in the courtroom had much to say until they had managed to subdue that troublesome lump that persisted in rising in their throats.

"Rube, that boy put it all over you and me," muttered massive Luther Rosser, huskily, to Reuben Arnold, his partner in the case.

For many minutes after the packed courtroom had emptied itself a little group of persons remained in front of the judge's bench. Mrs. Frank, the wife of the man accused of the revolting murder, and the elder Mrs. Frank, his mother, were weeping hysterically, overcome by the appeal that had been made. Relatives surrounded them. Frank talked comfortingly to them for several minutes, and then, feeling in danger of breaking down himself, signaled Sheriff Mangum and returned to his cell in the Tower.

Suffragettes Want Baby Booth at Fairs

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Among the things that the suffragettes, headed by Harriet Stanton Blatch, want is a pocket in their skirts and a place at fairs where women can check their babies.

Mrs. Blatch visited a number of fairs throughout the State and declares it a crying shame that at not one of them did she find a place where mothers could leave their babies while they rambled around the park.

Moonshiner Slays Man in Pistol Duel

LEXINGTON, Aug. 19.—In a pistol duel at Burnside, Ky., between Joshua Carter, a moonshiner, and John Fitzgerald and Town Marshal John Coomer, Fitzgerald was killed and Coomer wounded by Carter. The slayer forced a ferryman to row him across a river when pursued by a posse. Officers wounded him as he escaped to the mountains. A posse is in pursuit.

MOBILE, Aug. 19.—When arrested on the charge of passing forged checks last night in a Royal street restaurant and taken before Chief of Police F. W. Crenshaw, J. A. Ball, a bookkeeper claiming Laurel, Miss., where he says his mother resides, as his home, admitted his guilt.

Ball, when seached at the police station, had a total of $315 in forged checks in his pockets.

Bulgar Plot to Slay All Turks Reported

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 19.—Evidence of a conspiracy of Bulgarians to rise up in Adrianople and massacre all the Turks has been discovered, it was declared in a telegram received here to-day by the Grand Vizier. The contents of the message were turned over to the foreign diplomats to support Turkey's contention that an army is necessary at Adrianople to protect the Turkish civilians from Bulgarian outrages.

DIGGS ON STAND TO DENY GUILT AS SLAVER

Accused Will Attempt to Put Part of the Blame at the Door of Another Man.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 19.—When his trial was resumed before Federal Judge Van Fleet to-day Maury I. Diggs was the first witness called to deny that he was guilty of violating the white slavery law in eloping to Reno with Marsha Warrington, Drew Caminetti and Lola Norris.

It was contended by counsel for the defense that Diggs and Caminetti did not take the two girls to Reno for immoral purposes, but to escape arrest and prosecution by their wives.

That Diggs will attempt to make a Sacramento man share responsibility for the downfall of Marsha Warrington was one of the things hinted at to-day by persons in his confidence. Whether Judge Van Fleet will allow testimony of this character, however, was problematical.

Diggs will be followed on the stand by his wife and Mrs. Caminetti. Caminetti will also be a witness.

The appearance of the wives of the young men at the trial promised to invest it with renewed interest today. Mrs. Diggs, a handsome brunette, was in court with her young daughter, Evelyn, several days last week.

Both Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti will testify that they had threatened their husbands and their girl affinities with prosecution by the Juvenile Court of Sacramento and that these threats primarily were responsible for their flight to Reno.

Marshall Woodworth, one of the attorneys associated in the defense, said that the outcome of the Diggs trial would have no effect on the plans for the trial of Caminetti. According to Woodworth, Caminetti intends to adhere to his plea of not guilty and stand trial whether Diggs is convicted or freed.

New Insurance Firm Open for Business

Announcement of the establishment of the French & Lochridge Insurance Agency was made Tuesday morning by T. B. French and Clifford L. Lochridge. The new agency takes its place among the business enterprises of Atlanta with every prospect of success. Mr. French and Mr. Lochridge were with The Atlanta Constitution for several years and have made an extensive study of all forms of insurance.

They have obtained the local agency for two of the leading companies of the United States and a German company. Associated with them is John R. ("Jake") Rauschenberg, a widely known insurance man. The offices of the new agency are in the Candler Building.

Anniston Has World's Biggest Casting Pits

ANNISTON, Aug. 19.—Anniston's latest world-beater comes in the form of the largest casting pits in existence, it is said, at the new plant of the Lynchburg Foundry Company, which is nearing completion. The plant will make pressure pipe.

Although there are labor-saving devices on every hand at the new plant, it is said that it will employ 200 men when it is put into blast, and when the other two ptts are completed this number will be doubled.

ALABAMA MILITIA CAMP.

MOBILE, Aug. 19.—The artillery encampment and that of the officers' school of the Alabama National Guard will be held here September 15 to 23, according to announcement of Adjutant General J. B. Scully.

BAILIFF SHOT AS WRIT IS SERVED ON MERCHANT

Officer's Wounds Are Serious Following Attempt to Close Store in East Point.

Bailiff J. P. Gaddy is lying seriously wounded at his home in East Point Tuesday morning, with bullet wounds in his breast, shoulder and right arm, following a pistol battle with J. J. Willis, an East Point storekeeper, late Monday afternoon.

Willis fired six shots at Gaddy when the officer attempted to place him under arrest on a warrant charging contempt of court. A few minutes after the shooting Willis was arrested by Policeman Creel, of College Park, while trying to make his escape into the open country.

Gaddy was taken to his home at No. 4 Pine street, in East Point, and his wounds dressed by Dr. E. C. Suggs. Four of the shots fired by Willis took effect, the first entering the right breast and ranging downward under the left arm, the second shattered the bones of the right elbow, and the last two striking the officer in the shoulder. Dr. Suggs stated last night that Gaddy will live.

The warrant for Willis' arrest was issued because he had opened his store in violation of a writ of attachment served upon him several weeks ago, after George Harris, a cotton mill worker, had obtained a judgment for $1,000 against Willis for false imprisonment. Willis had previously had Harris arrested on a charge of obtaining goods under false pretenses, and had lost the case.

"When I went after Willis I was accompanied by my brother-in-law, John Wynn," said Sheriff Gaddy in telling of the shooting. "We found Willis sitting on the steps of his store. When he saw us he ran into the building. When I got inside he covered me with a gun. I told him not to shoot and started for him. He fired, the bullet strikng me in the breast. I then drew my gun, but before I could shoot another bullet struck me in the elbow. I was helpless, and staggered out of the front door. As I did so Willis fired four times and two of the bullets struck me in the back."

Special Session Idea In Alabama Growing

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 19.—That Governor O'Neal may call a special session of the Legislature in order to straighten out the United States Senatorial muddle appears more likely to-day.

The anti-fee system advocates in Jefferson County, the largest county in the State, are working hard to have included in the call for the special session the anti-fee system bill. It is pointed out that the Sheriff of Jefferson County gets in fees almost as much per annum as did the President of the United States before the last increase in salary of the latter.

Aged Fat Man in Furs With Mercury at 100

BOSTON, Aug. 19.—While the street thermometers registered 100 here, a man aged and fat, wearing a heavy winter suit, a heavy ulster that reached the ground, heavy shoes and a fur cap, with the laps turned down over the ears, was seen wandering about the streets, seemingly cool.

3 Years in Prison For Selling Liquor

MERIDIAN, MISS., Aug. 19.—Probably the heaviest sentence ever imposed for the illegal sale of liquor in this State was given when Trayant Johnson, a cripple, to-day was given three years in the penitentiary.

The law makes the third sale of liquor a penitentiary offense.

LEO M. FRANK'S COMPLETE STORY AS TOLD TO THE JURY

Accused Makes Statement Remarkable for Clarity and Wealth of Detail

'TIME TO TALK IS NOW AND I HAVE TOLD YOU WHOLE TRUTH,' HE SAYS

Leo M. Frank, in his remarkable statement to the jury, had little to say of the charges made against him until the latter part of his address, which on this account became the most interesting and most impressive portion of his talk. After going into close detail in respect to his work at the factory office the afternoon of Mary Phagan's murder, he took up the principal evidence and the principal charges against him.

He explained why he did not talk to Conley. He asserted that it was he who gave the information that Conley could write, in spite of the assertions that he had withheld this information. He made complete denial of seeing Conley on the day of the crime or of having any personal knowledge of how Mary Phagan came to her death.

Here is Frank's story as it was told with its various interruptions:

Mr. Arnold: "Now Mr. Frank, such papers as you want to use you can come down here at any time or from time to time and get them on this table right here.

The Court: "Before you commence your statement I want to read the law. In criminal procedure, the prisoner will have the right to make to the Court and jury such statement in the case as he may deem proper in his defense. It shall not be under oath and shall have such force as the jury shall think right to give it. They may believe it in preference to the sworn testimony in the case. The prisoner shall not be compelled to answer any questions on cross-examination. He should feel free to decline to answer them. Now you can make such statement as you see fit."

The defendant said: "Gentlemen of the jury, in 1884, the 17th day of April, I was born in Terrell, Tex. At the age of three months my parents took me to Brooklyn, N. Y., which became my home until I came South, to Atlanta, to make my home here. I attended the public schools of Brooklyn and prepared for college in Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"In the fall of 1902 I entered Cornell University, where I took the course of mechanical engineering, graduating after four years, in June, 1906. I then accepted a position as draughtsman with the B. F. Sturdevant Company, of Hyde Park, Mass. After remaining with this firm for about six months I returned once more to my home in Brooklyn, where I accepted a position as testing engineer and draughtsman with the National Meter Company of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"I remained with these parties until about the middle of October, 1907, when at the invitation of some citizens of Atlanta, I came South to confer with them with reference to the starting and operation of a pencil factory to be located in Atlanta. After remaining here for about two weeks I returned once more to New York, where I engaged passage and went to Europe. I remained in Europe nine months. During my sojourn abroad I studied the pencil business and looked after the erection and testing of machinery which had been previously traded for.

Looked After the Purchase of Mateials.

"In the first part of August, 1908, I returned once more to America, and immediately came South, to Atlanta, which has remained my home ever since. I married in Atlanta an Atlanta girl, Miss Lucille Selig. The major portion of my married life has been spent in the home of my parents-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. Selig, at No. 68 East Georgia avenue. My married life has been exceptionally happy, indeed—it has been the happiest days of my life.

"My duties as superintendent of the National Pencil Company were in general as follows: I took charge of the technical and mechanical end of the factory, looking after the processes and seeing that the product was turned out in quality equal to the standard which was set by our competitors. I looked after the installation of new machinery, and the purchasing of any machinery, and in addition I had charge of the office work at the Forsyth street plant, and the lead plant on Bell street.

"I looked after the purchasing of the raw material.' I saw after the manufacture of pencils and kept up with the market of these materials and when the prices fluctuated so that the purchases could be made to the best possible advantage.

"On Friday, April 25, I arrived at the pencil factory on Forsyth street at about 7 o'clock, my usual time. I immediately started in on my regular routine work, looking over the papers I had laid out the evening before, and attending to any work that needed my special attention that morning.

"At about 9:30 I went over to the office of the general manager and treasurer, Mr. Sigmund Montag, whose office is at Montag Brothers on Nelson street. I stayed over there a short time, and got what papers had arrived in the mail—all the mail of the pencil factory comes over to their office. I got that mail and brought it back to the Forsyth street office. I then separated the mail and continued in my usual routine duties in the office on Forsyth street.

"At about 11 o'clock Mr. Schiff handed me the payrool book, covering the plants at Forsyth street and Bell street, for me to check over and see if the amounts and extensions were correct. Of course, this work has to be very carefully done, so that the proper amount of money is drawn from the bank. This checking took me until about 12:20 p. m.

Went to Bank To Get Pay Money.

"I then went over to Montag Brothers, took the checks drawn and had them signed by Mr. Sig Montag, after which I returned to Forsyth street and got the leather bag in which I usually carried the money and the coin from the bank, and got the payroll slip, on which the various demoniations which I desired to have on the payroll were made out, and went, accompanied by Mr. Herbert Schiff, my assistant, to the Atlanta National Bank, where I had the checks cashed.

"Returning to the factory in company with Mr. Schiff, I placed this bag containing the money for the payroll, in the safe and locked it. At this time my wife called for me and in her company and that of Mr. Schiff I went over to the car, and went with my wife home to lunch. After lunch I returned to the factory and took a tour for about an hour through the factory, after which I then assisted Mr. Schiff in checking over the amounts on the pay envelopes, checking the money against the duplicate slips that we had got from the bank to see that the correct amount had been given us, and helped Mr. Schiff in checking over the money and in filling the envelopes.

"This took us approximately until a quarter to six to fill the envelopes and seal them, and place them in a box we have there with two hundred pigeon holes in it, that we call our payoff box.

Paid One Man Check in Cash.

"While I was so occupied with Mr. Schiff in filling the envelopes, a young man named Wright who had helped us out in the office as clerk during the past week came in and I paid him in cash, as Mr. Schiff had neglected to put his name on the payroll. I just made out a ticket and put it in the payroll box, not the cash box, and continued in the office with Mr. Schiff, taking all the envelopes that were due the help that had worked from April 18 to April 24, inclusive, to pay them through the window in one side of the office. There is a little window built in the hall. I had stayed in my office, checking over the amount of money which had been left there.

"This amount should have been equal to the amount loaned out in advance to the help. I took a ticket out when we were filling the envelopes in checking this amount there. As near as I recollect it, it was about $15.

"I noticed a shortage of about $1.20, or something over a dollar, at any rate, and I kept checking to see if I could find the shortage shortage in the various deductions which had been made. I could not locate it that evening, after the help had been paid off, during which time I stayed in my office. No one came into my office and asked me for the envelope or for an envelope of any other party.

"After the paying off of the help had taken place, Mr. Schiff returned and handed me the envelopes which were left over, bound with an elastic band, and I put them in the cash compartment, which is different from the the cash box, the key to which is kept in my cash box, and placed them in the safe, and Mr. Schiff placed the amounts in the box, and placed the box in the safe and left them.

Tells of Puting Slips in Time Clock.

"I placed the time clock slips which were to be used the next day. I took the two time slips dated April 25, which had been used by the help on Friday, April 25—these are the two that I put in the slot" exhibiting the same to the jury.)

Mr. Dorsey thereupon vigorously protested that Mr. Frank should be allowed to exhibit these slips to the jury, because they had not been offered in evidence, on the grounds that they were immaterial and irrelevant, and on the second ground that he could not put them in evidence on his own statement.

Consel for the defendant insisted, however, that they should be allowed to offer these slips in evidence, as they had been testified to by Mr. Darley and others. The testimony, however, was not produced, and Judge Roan ruled that Mr. Frank might make any statement concerning the same, but that he would withhold his ruling until further investigation. Mr. Frank thereupon proceeded to explain to the jury.

"Gentlemen, as I was saying, these two slips that have April 26, 1913, written at the bottom are the two slips I put in the clock on the evening of Friday, April 25, to be used on the day following, which, of course, was April 26.

Darley's Duty to Employ All Help.

'I neglected to mention also, in going over my duties at the factory, that Mr. Darley was superintendent of labor and manufacture, and it fell to his duty to engage the help and distribute the help throughout the plant, and to discharge the help in case it was necessary. It was also due to him whether the wages were raised or not. In other words, he was the man that came directly in contact with the help. Moreover, he saw that the goods progressed through the plant without stopping, speedily and economically for their manufacture.

'On Friday evening I got home at about 6:30, had my supper, washed up, and with my wife played a game of auction bridge at a friend's home in the evening. My wife and I returned home and retired about 11 o'clock.

"On Saturday, April 26, I rose between 7 and 7:30 and leisurely washed and dressed and ate my breakfast, and caught a Washington Street or Georgia Avenue car. I don't really remember which, at the corner of Washington and Georgia avenue, and arrived at the factory, Forsyth street plant, at about 8:20.

"Upon my arrival at the factory I found Mr. Holloway, the day watchman, at his usual place, and I greeted him in my usual way, and found Alonzo Mann, the office boy, in the office.

"I took off my coat and hat and opened my desk and opened the safe, and removed the various books and files and wire trays containing the various imporant papers which were placed there the evening before and distributing them in their proper places about the office. I then went out to the shipping room and conversed a few minutes with Mr. Irby, who was at that time shipping clerk, about the work he was going to do that morning.

"According to my recollection, we did no shipping that day, owing to the fact that the freight offices were not receiving any shipments, due to the fact that it was a holiday.

"I returned to my office and looked through the papers and sorted out those which I was going to take over on my usual trip to the general manager's office that morning.

"I then turned to the invoice covering shipments which were made by the pencil factory on Thursday, April 24, and which were typewritten on Friday, April 25, by Miss Eubanks, who was the stenographer who stayed at my office. She had hurried through with the office work on the day previous, so that she could go home and spend the holiday in the country where she lived. But I didn't get to check over the invoices on the shipments on Friday, due to the fact that Mr. Schiff and myself were completely occupied the entire day. So we left the factory with the payroll. So that naturally, these invoices covering shipments which were made on April 24, ought to have been sent to the customers, and I got right to work checking them.

Shows Invoices to Jury First Time.

"Now I have these invoices here (taking up the papers and exhibiting them to the jury). These papers have not been exhibited to you before, but I will explain them. You have seen some similar to these.

"Of all the mathematical work in the office of a pencil factory, this very operation, this very piece of work that I have now before me is the most important. It is the invoices covering shipments and is sent to the customer, and it is very important that the prices are correct, that the amount of goods shipped agrees with the amount which is on the invoices, that the terms are correct, and that the price is correct. Also, in some cases, ther were freight deductions, all of which has to be very carefully checked over and looked into, because I know of nothing else that exasperates a customer more than to receive invoices which are incorrect.

"Now, with reference to the work I did on these orders—that is not such an easy job as you might be led to believe. Here are initials. They represent the salesman who took the order. Sometimes I have to go through a world of papers to find out to whom to credit these orders.

"I notice that one of the orders to R. B. Kindele calls for a specialty. That has to be carefully noted and recorded. One column represents the shipping point, another the date, etc.

"The next step is to fill in the orders on this sheet. On this sheet I must separate the orders into price groups. Evidently no work has been done on this sheet since he went away. The reason this is done —in the pencil business as in all manufacturing businesses—it is advantageous to sell as much of the high-proiced goods as possible.

"This sheet is the only means of telling how much of the various goods we are selling. It is the barometer of our business and requires most careful work.

Declares He Wrote Financial Sheet.

"After I have finished that work I have had to do this, and notwithstanding any insinuations that have been made, I wrote these requisitions."

Frank read the name on each requisition, which were the same as the names on the orders.

"Now that is all my handwriting, except what as written at a subsequent date to April 26."

"Well, moreover, this operation this morning took me longer than it usually takes the ordinary person to check invoices because usually one calls out and the other checks, but I had this work all myself that morning. As I did this work this morning I saw that Miss Eubanks had evidently sacrificed accuracy to speed, and everyone of them was wrong. I went over the invoices to make the corrections, figure them out, correct them, and make deductions, if any were to be made, and then get the total shipments, because since these shipments were made on April 24, which was Thursday and the last day of our fiscal week, and it was on this week which the financial report which I make out every Saturday afternoon, which has been my custom, so that the total shipments could be figured out, and therefore I could not let it go out at that, so I had to figure every invoice in its entirety, so I could get a figure I would be able to use.

"The first order here is to Hilton, Hart & Kern Co., Detroit, Mich. Here is the original order, which exists in our files in our office. Here is the original transaction which was made March 18, but it was not to be shipped until April 24. This is a small order, 100 gross of Number 2; and here is an order of the Packard Motor Car Company for 125 gross of No. 3, and 150 gross of No. 4. Those figures represent the grade of hardness of the lead in the pencil."

Explains How Orders are Filled.

Frank thereupon explained how such orders were usually filled, whether in part or in whole, and how the shipments were made, and continuing, said:

"In investigating shipments made by the pencil company our method is as follows: We make them in triplicate. Our first original is a white sheet that goes to the customer; the second is a pink sheet that goes over to the general manager's office and is filed serially, that is chronologically, that is, one date after the other, nad from that the charges are made on the ledger, and the last sheet, the third sheet, or yellow sheet, which is here (exhibiting it) and those are placed in the files in my office, and are filed alphabetically. These yellow sheets that I have here are not the yellow sheets I had that day, because they have since been corrected, and I am just taking the corrected sheets I made the corrections and Miss Eubanks corrected them on Monday by the corrections I had on the white sheet from the corrections I made and I presume at that time made that correct."

Mr. Frank exhibited to the jury various orders similarly written, to H. W. Williams and Company, of Fort Worth, Tex.; The Fort Smith Paper Company, of Fort Smith, Ark.; S. O. Barnum & Sons, of Buffalo, N. Y.; F. L. Schmidt and Company, of Chicago, and H. S. Kress and Company, of New York.

"Now, there is an order that takes a great deal of study (referring t othe Kress order) because in common with these five and ten cent syndicates, there is a great deal of red tape. These are invoices that were typed on April 25, Friday, and were shipped on April 24. It was the date on which the shipment was made irrespective of the date there, (referring to the date on the letter) and these were typewritten. In other words, shipments took place April 24, and that date was at the top, typewritten and stamped by the office at the bottom, April 24. Among other things that the S. H. Kress Company demand on their orders, we must state whether or not it is complete, must give the case number, and must tell by which railroad the shipment goes.

Checking Made Hard By Much Red Tape.

"Here is one for F. W. Woolworth and Company, Fort Wayne, Ind., which shows 35 pounds, less 86 cents per 100 pounds credit. In other words, we had to find out what was the weight of that was on a basis of 86 cents for every 100 pounds shipped. Then here is another one of our large distributors in New York. They have a freight allowance of 86 cents a 100 pounds also, and their shipments amounted to 618 pounds on Thursday, April 24.

"I started on this work. As I said, I have gone into it in some detail, to show you the carefulness with which the work must be carried out, and I was at work on this until about 9 o'clock, as near as I remember.

"Mr. Darley and Wade Campbell, the inspector of the factory, came into the outer office and I stopped what work I was doing, which was this work, and went to the outer office and chatted with Mr. Campbell for ten or fifteen minutes, conversed with them, joked with them and while I was talking with them, I think about 9:15, or a quarter after 9, Miss Mattie Smith came in and asked me for her pay envelope, and the envelope of her sister-in-law. I went to the safe and got out the package of envelopes that Mr. Schiff had given me the evening before, and placed the two remaining envelopes in my cash bax, as I considered they might come in and I wanted to have them near at hand so that I could pay them off when they came in. I keep my cash box on the lower side of my desk. After Miss Smith had gone away with the envelopes, in a few minutes Mr. Darley came back with one of the envelopes, and pointed out an error in one of them, the one of the sister-in-law of Miss Mattie Smith, who had gotten too much money.

"When I took the amount which was too much, that amount balanced the error in the payroll that I had noticed the night before, and left about five or ten cents. Those things generally right themselves, anyhow. I continued to work on these invoices when I was interrupted by Mr. Lyon, the superintendent of Montag Brothers, and he brought me a pencil display box. He seemed to be in a hurry, and I told him if he would wait a minute I would go over with him, but he passed out of the office, and then I found a stopping place in the work I was working on, and I put on my coat and when I got to the outer office I found that Mr. Lyon had already left.

"Mr. Darley and I left about 9:35 or 9:40, and we got out of the factory and stopped at the corner of Hunter and Forsyth streets, where we each had a drink at Cruickshank's soda fountain, and I bought a package of my favorite cigarettes.

"After that conversation there I left him and went alone to Montag Brothers, where I arrived about 10 o'clock or maybe a little after. I entered Montag Brothers and spoke to Mr. Sig Montag, general manager, on business, and he brought the papers which I collect and laid them on his desk, and I then took the papers out, thrust them in the folder and took the other papers which I had in my folder, and then distributed them at the proper places in the Montag plant. I don't know just which ones they were.

Conversation With Miss Hall Recalled.

"In chatting with Mr. Montag I spoke to Mr. Montag and Mr. Korse, after that I spoke to Miss Hattie Hall, the pencil company's stenographer, who stays at Montag Brothers, and asked her to come over and help me that morning, as I have already told you, that these invoices were wrong, and I wanted her to help me on that work, and could not take it up to-morrow. In fact, I told her I had enough work to keep her busy that whole afternoon if she would stay. She said she didn't want to do that; she wanted to have at least a half holiday.

"I then spoke to members of the Montag Brothers force, on business matters, and then other matters. Alsuo I then spoke to Mr. Guttenheim, who was sales manager of the Montag Brothers and of the pencil factory, and then spoke to him about several of his orders that were in the factory. There were two of his orders that he paid special stress on that were desired to be shipped right away. I said, 'I don't know how una far along the process of manufacture the orders have proceeded, but if you can come back I can look it up and tell you when they can be shipped.' He said he could not come then, but he would come a little later. I told him I would be glad if he would come up a little later on in the afternoon; that I would be there until about 1 o'clock in the morning, and then about half past three. I then took the folder and returned.

Arrived at Factory At About 11 o'Clock.

"Upon arrival at the pencil factory I went up to the second or office floor, and then I noticed that the clock was perhaps five minutes after 11 o'clock, and I saw Mr. Holloway there, and I told him he could go as soon as he got ready. He told me he had some work to do for Harry Denham and Arthur White, who wanted to do some repairing on the top floor, and that he would do the work first.

"I then went to the office, and found Miss Hattie Hall, who had preceded me from Montag Brothers, and another young lady, who introduced herself to me as Mrs. Arthur White. Mrs. White wanted to see her husband. I went into the inner office, and took off my hat and coat and removed the papers which I had brought back from Montag Brothers and put the folder away.

Week's Sheet Left In Incomplete Form.

"It was about this time that I first heard the elevator motor start up, and the circular saw in the carpenter shop which was near to it, and I heard it sawing through some boards and thought it was evidently the work that Mr. Holloway had referred to.

"I seperated the orders from the letters which required answers, and took from them the letters that did not need immediate attention and laid them in the various places, and it was about this time I had an idea I would like to see how far along the report sheets were which I used in getting up the financial report every Saturday afternoon. To my surprise I found that the sheet contains the records of the pencils packed for the week had been entered for Thursday. The last day of the fiscal week was omitted, and Mr. Schiff, evidently in the stress of figuring out and filling the envelopes for the ayroll for Friday instead of Saturday, had evidently not had enough time. I told Alonzo Mann, the office boy, to call up Mr. Schiff and find out when he was coming down, and Alonzo said that the answer came back over the telephone that Mr. Schiff would be right down, so I didn't pay any more attention to that part of the work, because I expected Mr. Schiff to come down any minute.

Mrs. Freeman and Corinthia Hall Came In.

"It was about this time that Mrs. Emma Clark Freeman and Miss Corinthia Hall, two of the girls that worked on the fourth floor, came upstairs and asked to go upstairs and get Mrs. Freeman's coat, which permission I gave them. I told them at the same time to tell Arthur White that his wife was downstairs. A few minutes after they left my office two gentlemen came in, one of them Mr. Graham, and another gentleman, fathers of two boys who had gotten into some trouble during the noon recess and were taken down to police headquarters, and, of course, could not get their pay envelopes the night before. I gave the required envelopes to the two fathers, and chatted with them at some length in reference to the trouble that their boys had gotten into on the day previous.

"Just before they left the office Mrs. Emma Clark Freeman and Mrs. Corinthia Hall came into my office and asked my permission to use the telephone, and started using the telephone during the time these two gentlemen left my office. Previous to the time these two gentlemen came in I had called Miss Mattie Hall in and dictated what mail I had to give her, and she went out and was typewriting the mail.

Frank went back to the stand. He was handed a glass of water as he resumed his seat, but declined it.

"Miss Hall left my office" he continued, "on her way home at this time. There were then in the building Arthur White, Harry Denham and Mrs. White. It must have been from ten to fifteen minutes after that this little girl whom I afterwards found to be Mary Phagan came in. She asked asked for her pay. I got my cash box, referred to the number and gave her the envelope.

"As she went out, she stopped near my outer office door and said:

"'Has the metal come?'

Sound of Voice Made Little Impression.

"The safe door was open and I could not see her, but I answered 'No.' The last I heard was the sound of her footsteps going down the hall. But a few moments after she asked me, I had the impression of a voice saying something, but it made no impression on me.

"The little girl had hardly left the office when Lemmie Quinn came in. He said something to me about working on a holiday and went out. A few minutes before 1 o'clock, I called up my wife and told her I was coming to lunch at 1:15. I then went upstairs to where Denham and White were working and found they had a bit of the floor taken up and were sawing.

"I explained to them that I was going to lunch and would lock the door when I left. Mrs. White left at this time. Some lady said that at 12:35 o'clock she found me in front of the safe. It is barely possible that she did. I don't recall her being there. Her memory probably is fresher than mine on this point.

'When I went up stairs I asked Mr. White if his wife was going to stay there with him. She said no, that she would go. She left and then I got my hat and coat and left, locking the outer door.

"Now, gentlemen, to the best of my recollection from the time the whistle blew until I went upstairs to see Mr. White, I did not stir out of my office. I went on home.

"I called up my brother-in-law, Mr. Ursenbach, to tell him I was unable to keep the engagement to go to the ball game. The cook answered the phone.

"My wife and mother-in-law were going to the opera. My father-in-law and I ate lunch. He went into the backyard while I lit a cigarette and lay down for a moment.

"I left and while passing the home of Mrs. Wolfsheimer, saw Mrs. Michael on the porch. I went in to see her and saw Mrs. Wolfsheimer, Mr. Loeb and others.

Watched Parade When Street Cars Stopped.

"To catch the next car I ran down to Glenn street. On the car I met my wife's cousin, Mr. Loeb. The car was blocked at the corner of Washington and Hunter streets. I walked up to Whitehall street and stood there possibly for fifteen minutes watching the Memorial Day parade.

"As I walked down Whitehall street I met Miss Rebecca Carson. This was probably 3:10 or 3:15 o'clock. I greeted her and walked on. I stopped at Jacobs' Pharmacy and walked on. I went from there to the factory.

"When I reached there I went upstairs and let the boys know I had returned. A minute later, I returned to my office and started to work on the financial sheet.

"In a few minutes the clock bell rang and Arthur White came into the office to borrow two dollars. It was while I was at work on the sheet at probably 4 o'clock that I went to the toilet.

"As I returned toward the office, Inoticed Newt Lee coming toward me from the head of the stairs. I told him he could go on off but to be sure and be back at 6 o'clock. I told him I was very sorry I could not let him know about the half holiday but that he was at liberty to enjoy himself as he saw fit, but that he must not fail to return at 6 o'clock.

"The first night that Newt Lee came to work at the factory, I took him over the building, and stressed the fact that he must go into the basement, especially the dust bin, every half hour.

"I told him it would be part of his duties to watch the back door. He was to make a complete tour every half hour and punch the clock.

"Now, I will return to the work of the financial sheet. This sheet contains the cost of all the pencils made that week. There are no names but this sample case will show you."

Evidence Excluded But Jury Sees It.

Frank unfolded a sample case.

Dorsey: "We object to this being used as evidence."

Judge Roan: "I sustain you."

Frank placed the sample case to one side.

"Well," he said, "you got a sufficient glance at those pencils to see there were a great many."

"In making up this sheet it was necessary to go through the list of all that were packed. Specials, of course, have to be figured separately.

"For instance, there is a special 60-60-x pencil known as 'Crackerjack.' Now I notice that the two expert accountants reported two errors. While they were unimportant, I wish to explain that those errors were not mine. They were made by Mr. Schiff. I never checked his figures. I checked over mine, but not his.

"Now the next is 'jobs.' The accountant found the only error in my financial sheet there in the item 'jobs.' It was not an error, as I will show you. He did not know my method of figuring.

"Two items here are totals. The total gross amount is 791 gross, the total value amount $396.75. In figuring the average I obtained $50.01. In that average he discovered an error. It was not an error. I simply did not go as far into the decimals as he did. One-tenth of a cent was close enough for my purpose.

"Now some of the items in here are taken from the reports of the foremen of the different departments."

Frank then exhibited a report from the foreman or forewoman of each department and explained it.

"Then there is the report of Mr. Schiff, showing the gross of pencils shipped each day of that week—that week was an exceptionally heavy one.

"Now there is a little report here that constitutes one of the most difficult calculations. It is from the packing room. We have a trick of the trade to put the pencils that do not sell very fast into fancy packages to make them go.

"Now, very often these pencils are taken from the shelf, where they have laid for more than a year, and repacked in the fancy cases. I made all the calculations on this that afternoon, despite everything that has been said here to the contrary.

"Now here is a little sheet that deals with the grades of the pencils. It shows the totals for each class of pencils shipped that week. This data sheet—we have had very few clerks at the Forsyth street office capable of keeping it, because it requires rather advanced mathematics to reach the totals."

"Now I will have to get all my thoughts on this sheet. I isn't a hard job but it is a very tedious one and requires much care and accuracy. Here is rubber—cheap rubber and good rubber. Now it has been intimated that some of these items—this one in particular, if I am not mistaken—that I could take two that were already figured and subtract them from the total and get the cost of the third.

"That is not so. Some of the pencils haven't any rubber in them at all. I have to go through the same tedious operation on each item. There are various sorts of packing boxes used. Then there are the skeletons in the boxes. Some pencils don't have skeletons at all.

"All these items must be gone through accurately to get correct results of this sheet. Then there is no section on this data sheet showing the cost of tips. You can5t use rubbers without tips, so, after figuring them, I just added them to the rubbers.

"Some pencils take wrappers and some don't. The very cheap pencils are tied with a cord, so we have the same tedious figuring again.

"The slat item is not worked out because I could not find the data. I just put it off until Monday.

"Here are the jobs—the payroll at Forsyth street and the payroll at Bell street.

"Now the shipments were figured for the week. I did part of that work in the morning and I explained to you about the invoices being wrong. Well, here are the items on this financial sheet. Then, as to the orders received. Entering the orders received that day involved no more work than transferring.

Has Own Method of Figuring Cost Data.

"Here they are in comparison to the amount shipped.

"One of the most intricate things in making out this financial sheet is figuring the cost data. This sheet I may say is a child of my own brain. The first one gotten out was gotten out by myself.

"This item here gives us the net value and the net amount of money the pencil factory received for its pencils. The burden that a business has to carry is its fixed charges—rent, insurance, certain salaries, etc.—the charges that are the same whether great or few pencils are made.

"The machine shop is variable. We did make many machines at first, but later the machine shop was used solely for upkeep. The slats are figured at 22 a gross. That cost was simple multiplication.

"The figuring of that price is not done in making out the financial sheet Saturday afternoon. Mr. Montag and myself figure that in advance, making allowance for profit, breakage, etc.

"I have here on the report of April 26 'Slats, not complete;' that was because Schiff had not made out the slat report, and I planned to complete it Monday morning before taking it to Montag.

"Now, beside the making this large sheet here and the financial sheet, there aer three other sheets that I made out. Now, I want to call your attention to this. I did not typewrite it. I merely filled in the blanks. I have several of them typewritten and keep them in my desk.

"In addition to that I make out two condensed financial sheets, showing the principal figures. They are sufficient for a director or stockholder to see what the factory is doing.

Mailed Statements To Stockholders.

"One of these statements I mailed to my uncle, Mr. M. Frank, who is president of the company, and the other to Oscar Papenheimer, who was a director.

"I put one in an envelope and addressed i tto Mr. Oscar Papenheimer; the other I sent to my uncle along with a price list, and I wrote him this letter.

"This price list is too long for an ordinary envelope, hence the large envelope.

"After finishing the financial sheet, I folded the large sheet and addressed it to Mr. Selig Montag. I then took up the checking up of the cash and balancing of the cash book. I did that work as near as I remember, between 5:30 and 5 minutes to 6 o'clock. It did not take me an hour and a half. I did it in about 25 minutes. There was $30.54. There couldn't have been any more. It was mostly in small change. There was one loan to Mr. White, making the total amount of cash $28.50.

"Beginning that week, we had $39.25 as a balance. We drew two checks of $15 each—I mean by that that we went to Mr. Montag's office and had him draw the checks. The total amount of money we had to accou[illegible]

LIE DIRECT IS GIVEN TO CONLEY'S STORY

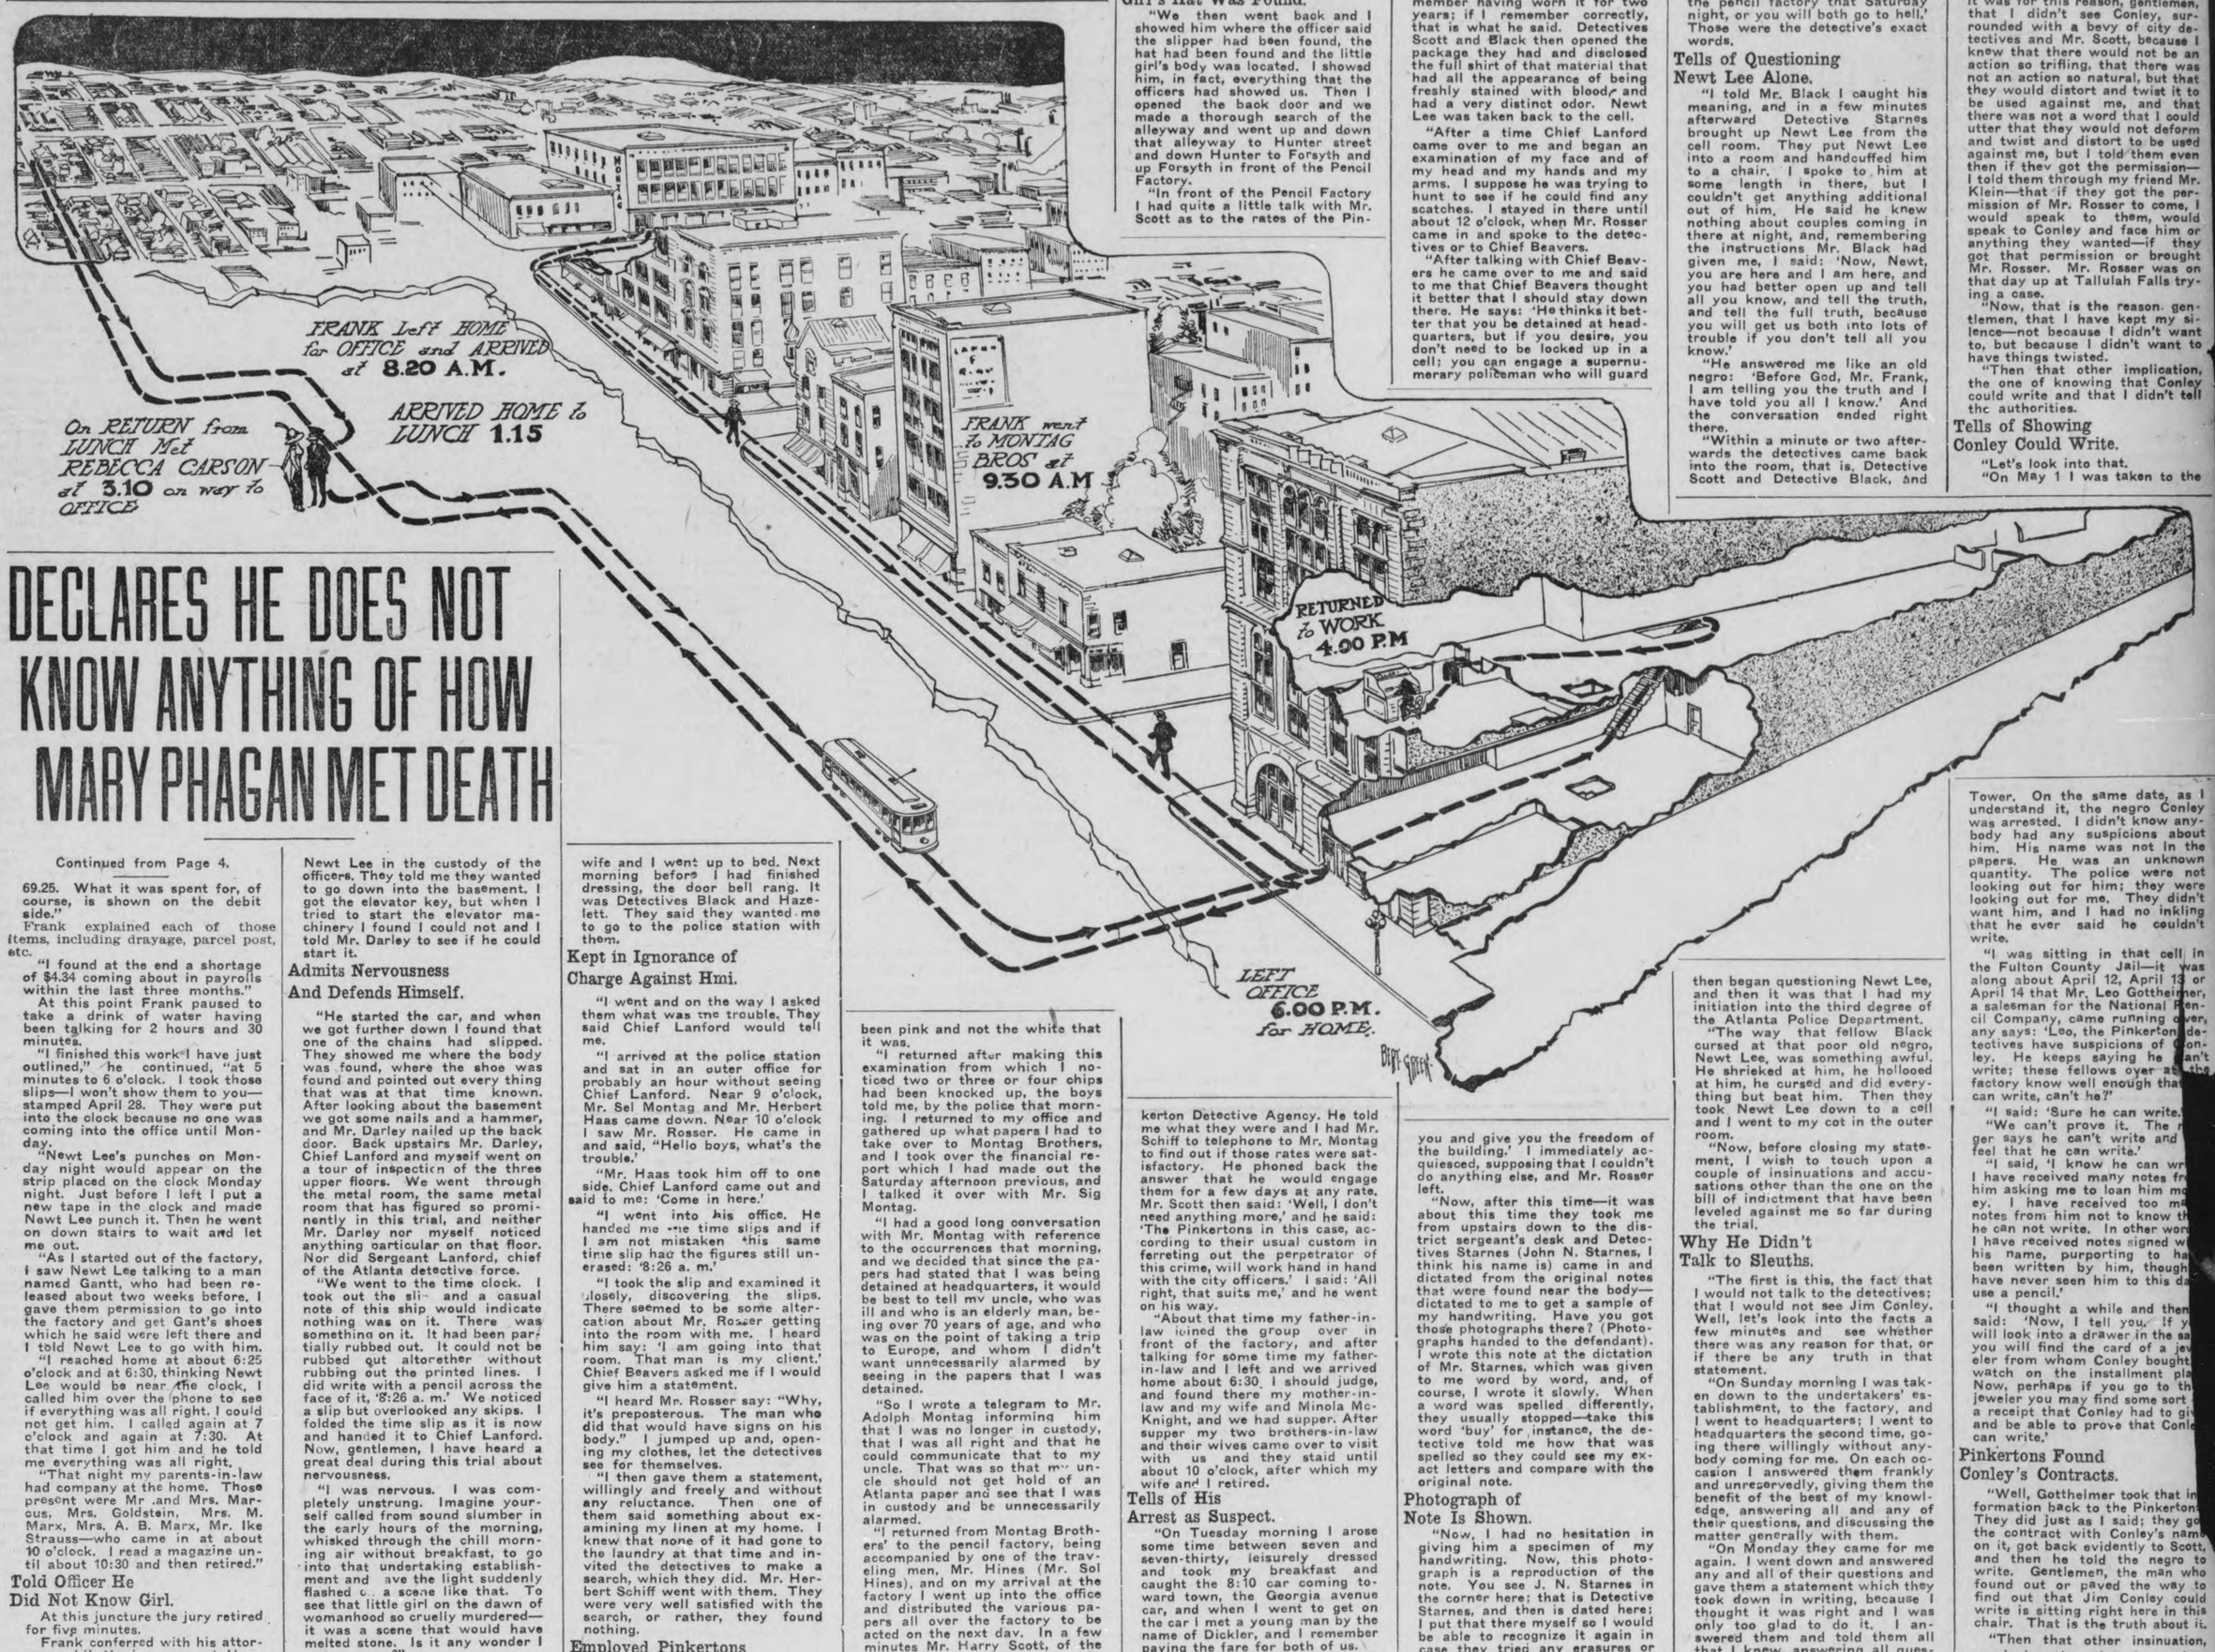

Gentlemen, I know nothing whatever of the death of little Mary Phagan, I had no part in causing her death, nor do I know ho wshe came to her death after she took her money and left my office. I never even saw Conley in the factory or anywhere else on that date, April 26, 1913.

The statement of the negro Conley is a tissue of lies from first to last. I know nothing whatever of the cause of the death of Mary Phagan, and Conley's statement as to his coming up and helping me dispose of the body, or that I had anything to do with her or to do with him is a monstrous lie.—From Frank's Statement.

69.25. What it was spent for, of course, is shown on the debit side."

Frank explained each of those items, including drayage, parcel post, etc.

"I found at the end a shortage of $4.34 coming about in payrolls within the last three months."

At this point Frank paused to take a drink of water having been talking for 2 hours and 30 minutes.

"I finished this work I have just outlined," he continued, "at 5 minutes to 6 o'clock. I took those slips—I won't show them to you—stamped April 28. They were put into the clock because no one was coming into the office until Monday.

"Newt Lee's punches on Monday night would appear on the strip placed on the clock Monday night. Just before I left I put a new tape in the clock and made Newt Lee punch it. Then he went on down stairs to wait and let me out.

"As I started out of the factory, I saw Newt Lee talking to a man named Gantt, who had been released about two weeks before. I gave them permission to go into the factory and get Gant's shoes which he said were left there and I told Newt Lee to go with him.

"I reached home at about 6:25 o'clock and at 6:30, thinking Newt Lee would be near the clock, I called him over the phone to see if everything was all right. I could not get him. I called again at 7 o'clock and again at 7:30. At that time I got him and he told me everything was all right.

"That night my parents-in-law had company at the home. Those present were Mr .and Mrs. Marcus, Mrs. Goldstein, Mrs. M. Marx, Mrs. A. B. Marx, Mr. Ike Strauss—who came in at about 10 o'clock. I read a magazine until about 10:30 and then retired."

Told Officer He Did Not Know Girl.

At this juncture the jury retired for five minutes.

Frank conferred with his attorneys while the jury was out. Upon its return he resumed:

"I believe I have taken in every move Saturday night. I retired Saturday night. Sunday morning about 7 o'clock I was awakened by the telephone ringing and a man's voice which I afterwards found out to be Detective Starnes, said: 'I want you to come down to the factory.' 'What is the trouble?' I asked. 'Has there been a fire?' 'No,' he said. 'A tragedy has occurred.' I said, 'All right,' and he said he would send an auto.

"They came before I finished dressing. At this point I differ with the detectives, Black and Starnes, about where the conversation took place. They say it was after we were in the machine. I say it was before we left the house, before my wife. At any rate, here is what was said:

"They asked me if I knew Mary Phagan. I answered that I did not. They asked me if I did not pay off a little girl with long hair down her back the afternoon before. I said I did. They said they wanted me to go to the undertaking establishment to see if I could identify the boyd. They made the trip to the undertaking establishment very quickly. I went in and stood in the doorway. The attendant removed the sheet from the little girl's face and turned the head toward me. His finger was right by the cut on the head. I noticed her nostrils were filled with dirt and cinders and there were several discolorations. I noticed a piece of cord around her neck, the kind we used in the pencil factory. I said it looked like a little girl that came to the factory the day before. They had already told me it was Mary Phagan. We went to the factory and by examining the payroll I found that Mary Phagan had drawn her pay the day before and that the amount was $1.20.

"As we went into the factory I noticed Mr. Darley going in. We went to the office and I found Newt Lee in the custody of the officers. They told me they wanted to go down into the basement. I got the elevator key, but when I tried to start the elevator machinery I found I could not and I told Mr. Darley to see if he could start it.

Admits Nervousness And Defends Himself.

"He started the car, and when we got further down I found that one of the chains had slipped. They showed me where the body was found, where the shoe was found and pointed out every thing that was at that time known. After looking about the basement we got some nails and a hammer, and Mr. Darley nailed up the back door. Back upstairs Mr. Darley, Chief Lanford and myself went on a tour of inspection of the three upper floors. We went through the metal room, the same metal room that has figured so prominently in this trial, and neither Mr. Darley nor myself noticed anything particular on that floor. Nor did Sergeant Lanford, chief of the Atlanta detective force.

"We went to the time clock. I took out the slip and a casual note of this ship would indicate nothing was on it. There was something on it. It had been partially rubbed out. It could not be rubbed out altogether without rubbing out the printed lines. I did write with a pencil across the face of it, '8:26 a. m.' We noticed a slip but overlooked any skips. I folded the time slip as it is now and handed it to Chief Lanford. Now, gentlemen, I have heard a great deal during this trial about nervousness.

"I was nervous. I was completely unstrung. Imagine yourself called from sound slumber in the early hours of the morning, whisked through the chill morning air without breakfast, to go into that undertaking establishment and see the light suddenly flashed on a scene like that. To see that little girl on the dawn of womanhood so cruelly murdered—it was a scene that would have melted stone. Is it any wonder I was nervous?"

'i got in an automobile and sat on Mr. Darley's knee. I was trembling, perhaps. Later Sunday morning, I went to the home of Mr. Sig Montag and told him what had occurred. I got home about 11 o'clock. My wife and I went over to my sister-in-law's, Mrs. Ursenbach's, and with a number of friends we discussed the tragedy.

"We went back home to dinner and mentioned there the terrible crime. After dinner I read a short time and about 10 minutes to 3o'clock caught a car downtown.

"The conversation on the car was about the little girl that had been found dead in the factory. At 3:10 o'clock I went back to the undertaking establishment and found Joe Stelka there.

"On Monday I went to the police station with Darley and he said he would like to talk to Newt Lee alone. We were shown the two notes found by the side of the slain girl."

Frank then described the notes.

"Now, on one of the notes there was an erasure, but the tracing was still discernable. It was January 11, 1912. The order number was very indistinct, but it was evidently an old serial number.

"Returning to my home at 4:15 I met Mr. Haas and he asked me about the murder. Severay people on the street also asked me.

"I remained at home until 5 o'clock, then I went to Mr. Montag's home and made a report of the tragedy to him. From there I went to the home of Mr. Marcus where I had received a telephone message from my wife, and I went by there to get her.

"At supper that night the conversation was again about the murder. After supper I read the paper. I called up Mr. Marcus and asked him if he would come down. He said he could not.

"Mr. and Mrs. Selig had a party that night. About 10 o'clock, my wife and I went up to bed. Next morning before I had finished dressing, the door bell rang. It was Detectives Black and Hazelett. They said they wanted me to go to the police station with them.

Kept in Ignorance of Charge Against Hmi.

"I went and on the way I asked them what was the trouble. They said Chief Lanford would tell me.

"I arrived at the police station and sat in an outer office for probably an hour without seeing Chief Lanford. Near 9 o'clock, Mr. Sel Montag and Mr. Herbert Haas came down. Near 10 o'clock I saw Mr. Rosser. He came in and said, "Hello boys, what's the trouble.'

"Mr. Haas took him off to one side. Chief Lanford came out and said to me: 'Come in here.'

"I went into his office. He handed me the time slips and if I am not mistaken this same time slip had the figures still unerased: '8:26 a. m.'

"I took the slip and examined it closely, discovering the slips. There seemed to be some altercation about Mr. Rosser getting into the room with me. I heard him say: 'I am going into that room. That man is my client.' Chief Beavers asked me if I would give him a statement.

"I heard Mr. Rosser say: "Why, it's preposterous. The man who did that would have signs on his body." I jumped up and, opening my clothes, let the detectives see for themselves.

"I then gave them a statement, willingly and freely and without any reluctance. Then one of them said something about examining my linen at my home. I knew that none of it had gone to the laundry at that time and invited the detectives to make a search, which they did. Mr. Herbert Schiff went with them. They were very well satisfied with the search, or rather, they found nothing.

Employed Pinkertons To Aid the Police.

"That afternoon I telephoned Mr. Schiff to get Mr. Montag's permission to employ the Pinkertons to aid the police. I told him I would be down about 3 o'clock.

"I went around to Mr. Wolfsheimers, got into his automobile and went down town. I saw Mr. Schiff, Mr. Darley and a number of others, including Mr. Quinn.

"Mr. Quinn said he wanted to take me back to the metal room where it was claimed blood spots had been discovered and where the hair on the lathe was discovered by Mr. Barrett.

"I examined them closely, particularly the spots. I did not examine them standing up. I got down on my knees and examined them with a strong electric flashlight and I arrived at certain conclusions.

"That floor is grease, soap and dirt covered to a thickness varying from a quarter to half an inch.

"To return to that spot. I don't claim it was not blood. The space where these spots were adjoins the ladies' dressing room. There have been accidents which may not have been brought out in this trial. We do not report every time one of the employees cuts his finger.

"There are all sorts of paints around the factory. I have seen girls drop bottles in the hall, not exactly at that point, but near there. But the point about those spots is that when I examined them there was over them an accumulation of dirt not of days or weeks, but of at least three months.

Phoned to Prevent Alarm of Family.

"The white stuff was not fresh. It was dry . And another thing: if that compound had been put on the blood fresh, it would have been pink and not the white that it was.

"I returned after making this examination from which I noticed two or three or four chips had been knocked up, the boys told me, by the police that morning. I returned to my office and gathered up what papers I had to take over to Montag Brothers, and I took over the financial report which I had made out the Saturday afternoon previous, and I talked it over with Mr. Sig Montag.

"I had a good long conversation with Mr. Montag with reference to the occurrences that morning, and we decided that since the papers had stated that I was being detained at headquarters, it would be best to tell my uncle, who was ill and who is an elderly man, being over 70 years of age, and who was on the point of taking a trip to Europe, and whom I didn't want unnecessarily alarmed by seeing in the papers that I was detained.

"So I wrote a telegram to Mr. Adolph Montag informing him that I was no longer in custody, that I was all right and that he could communicate that to my uncle. That was so that my uncle should not get hold of an Atlanta paper and see that I was in custody and be unnecessarily alarmed.

"I returned from Montag Brothers' to the pencil factory, being accompanied by one of the traveling men, Mr. Hines (Mr. Sol Hines), and on my arrival at the factory I went up into the office and distributed the various papers all over the factory to be acted on the next day. In a few minutes Mr. Harry Scott, of the Pinkerton detectives, came in and I took him aside into my office, my private office, and spoke to him in the presence of Mr. M. V. Darley and Mr. Herbert Schiff.

Told of Mrs. White Seeing a Negro.

"I told him that I expected that he had seen what had happened at the pencil factory by reading the newspapers and knew all the details. He said he didn't read the newspapers and didn't know the details, so I sat down and gave him all the details that I could, and in addition I told him something which Mr. Darley had that afternoon communicated to me, viz, that Mrs. White had told him that on going into the factory at about 12 o'clock noon on Saturday, April 26, she had seen some negro down by the elevator shaft. Mr. Darley had told me this and I just told this to Mr. Scott.

"After I told Mr. Scott all that I could, I took him around the building, took him first back to the metal room and showed him the place where the hair had been found, looked at the machinery and at the lathe, looked at the table on which the lathe stands, and the lathe bed and the floor underneath the lathe, and there wasn't a spot, much less a blood spot underneath. I showed him the other spot in front of the dressing room, and I took him to the fourth floor and showed him where I had seen White and Denham a little before 1 the first time and about 3 the second time.

"Then I took him down into the basement and made a thorough search of the basement, and that included an examination of the elevator well which was at the bottom of the elevator shaft.

"I noticed Mr. Scott was foraging around down there and he picked up two or three or maybe four articles and put them in his pocket and one of them I specially noticed was a piece of cord exactly like that which had been found around the little girl's neck.

Showed Where Girl's Hat Was Found.

"We then went back and I showed him where the officer said the slipper had been found, the hat had been found and the little girl's body was located. I showed him, in fact, everything that the officers had showed us. Then I opened the baok door and we made a thorough search of the alleyway and went up and down that alleyway to Hunter street and down Hunter to Forsyth and up Forsyth in front of the Pencil Factory.

"In front of the Pencil Factory I had quite a little talk with Mr. Scott as to the rates of the Pinkerton Detective Agency. He told me what they were and I had Mr. Schiff to telephone to Mr. Montag to find out if those rates were satisfactory. He phoned back the answer that he would engage them for a few days at any rate. Mr. Scott then said: 'Well, I don't need anything more,' and he said: 'The Pinkertons in this case, according to their usual custom in ferreting out the perpetrator of this crime, will work hand in hand with the city officers.' I said: 'All right, that suits me,' and he went on his way.

"About that time my father-in-law joined the group over in front of the factory, and after talking for some time my father-in-law and I left and we arrived home about 6:30. I should judge, and found there my mother-in-law and my wife and Minola McKnight, and we had supper. After supper my two brothers-in-law and their wives came over to visit with us and they staid until about 10 o'clock, after which my wife and I retired.

Tells of His Arrest as Suspect.

"On Tuesday morning I arose some time between seven and seven-thirty, leisurely dressed and took my breakfast and caught the 8:10 car coming toward town, the Georgia avenue car, and when I went to get on the car I met a young man by the name of Dickler, and I remember paying the fare for both of us.

"When I arrived at the pencil factory, about 8:30, I immediately entered upon my routine work, sending the various orders to the various places in the factory where they were due to go, and about 9:30 I went on my usual trip over to Montag Brothers to see the general manager. After staying over there a short while I returned, in company with another one of their traveling men, Mr. Jordan. At the corner of Forsyth and Hunter street I met up with a cousin of my wife's, a Mr. Selig, and we had a drink in Cruickshank's soda fount, at the corner of Hunter and Forsyth.

"Then I went up into the factory and separated the papers I had brought back with me from Montag Brothers, putting them in the proper places, and sending the proper papers to the different places. I was working along in the regular routine of my work, in the factory and about the office, and a little later Detectives Scott and Black came up to the factory and said: 'Mr. Frank, we want you to go down to headquarters with us,' and I went with them.

"We went down to headquarters, and I have been incarcerated ever since. We went down to headquarters in an automobile, and they took me up to Chief Lanford's office.

"I sat up there and answered any questions that he desired, and I had been sitting there sometime when Detective Scott and Detective Black came back with a bundle under their arm. They showed me a little piece of material of some shirt, and asked me if I had a shirt of that material. I looked at it, and told them I didn't think I ever had a shirt of that description.

Lee Said He Had Had Shirt Like It.

"In the meantime they brought in Newt Lee, the night watchman, brought him up from a cell and showed him the same sample. He looked at it and immediately recognized it. He said he had a shirt like that, but he didn't remember having worn it for two years; if I remember correctly, that is what he said. Detectives Scott and Black then opened the package they had and disclosed the full shirt of that material that had all the appearance of being freshly stained with blood, and had a very distinct odor. Newt Lee was taken back to the cell.

"After a time Chief Lanford came over to me and began an examination of my face and of my head and my hands and my arms. I suppose he was trying to hunt to see if he could find any scatches. I stayed in there until about 12 o'clock, when Mr. Rosser came in and spoke to the detectives or to Chief Beavers.

"After talking with Chief Beavers he came over to me and said to me that Chief Beavers thought it better that I should stay down there. He says: 'He thinks it better that you be detained at headquarters, but if you desire, you don't need to be locked up in a cell; you can engage a supernumerary policeman who will guard you and give you the freedom of the building.' I immediately acquiesced, supposing that I couldn't do anything else, and Mr. Rosser left.

"Now, after this time—it was about this time they took me from upstairs down to the district sergeant's desk and Detectives Starnes (John N. Starnes, I think his name is) came in and dictated from the original notes that were found near the body—dictated to me to get a sample of my handwriting. Have you got those photographs there? (Photographs handed to the defendant). I wrote this note at the dictation of Mr. Starnes, which was given to me word by word, and, of course, I wrote it slowly. When a word was spelled differently, they usually stopped—take this word 'buy' for instance, the detective told me how that was spelled so they could see my exact letters and compare with the original note.

Photograph of Note Is Shown.

"Now, I had no hesitation in giving him a specimen of my handwriting. Now, this photograph is a reproduction of the note. You see J. N. Starnes in the corner here; that is Detective Starnes, and then is dated here; I put that there myself so I would be able to recognize it again in case they tried any erasures or anything like that. It is a photographic reproduction of something that was written in pencil, as near as one can judge—a photographic reproduction of the note that I wrote. Detective Starnes then took me down to the desk sergeant, where they searched me and entered my name on the book under a charge of suspicion.

"Then they took me back into a small room, and I sat there for a while while my father-in-law was arranging for a supernumerary policeman to guard me for the night. They took me then to a room on the top of the building, and I sat in the room there and either read magazines or newspapers and talked to my friends who came to see me until I was about to retire at midnight.

"I had the cover of my cot turned back and I was going to bed when Detective Scott and Detective Black, at midnight, Tuesday, April 29, came in and said: 'Mr. Frank, we would like to talk to you a little bit. Come in and talk to us.' I says: 'Sure, I will be only too glad to.' I went with them to a little room on the top floor of the headquarters. In that room were Detective Scott, Detective Black and myself. They stressed the possibility of couples having been let into the factory by the night watchman, Newt Lee.

"I told them that I didn't know anything about it; that if I had, I certainly would have put a stop to it long ago. They said: 'Mr. Frank, you have never talked alone with Newt Lee. You are his boss and he respects you. See what you can do with him. We can't get anything more out of him. See if you can.' I says: 'All right; I understand what you mean. I will do my best,' because I was only too willing to help.

"Black says: 'Now, put it strong to him, put it up strong to him, and tell him to cough up and tell all he knows. Tell him that you are here and that he is here, and that he better open up and tell all he knows about happenings at the pencil factory that Saturday night, or you will both go to hell.' Those were the detective's exact words.

Tells of Questioning Newt Lee Alone.

"I told Mr. Black I caught his meaning, and in a few minutes afterward Detective Starnes brought up Newt Lee from the cell room. They put Newt Lee into a room and handcuffed him to a chair. I spoke to him at some length in there, but I couldn't get anything additional out of him. He said he knew nothing about couples coming in there at night, and, remembering the instructions Mr. Black had given me, I said: 'Now, Newt, you are here and I am here, and you had better open up and tell all you know, and tell the truth, and tell the full truth, because you will get us both into lots of trouble if you don't tell all you know.'

"He answered me like an old negro: 'Before God, Mr. Frank, I am telling you the truth and I have told you all I know.' And the conversation ended right there.

"Within a minute or two afterwards the detectives came back into the room, that is, Detective Scott and Detective Black, and then began questioning Newt Lee, and then it was that I had my initiation into the third degree of the Atlanta Police Department.

"The way that fellow Black cursed at that poor old negro, Newt Lee, was something awful. He shrieked at him, he hollooed at him, he cursed and did everything but beat him. Then they took Newt Lee down to a cell and I went to my cot in the outer room.

"Now, before closing my statement, I wish to touch upon a couple of insinuations and accusations other than the one on the bill of indictment that have been leveled against me so far during the trial.

Why He Didn't Talk to Sleuths.

"The first is this, the fact that I would not talk to the detectives; that I would not see Jim Conley. Well, let's look into the facts a few minutes and see whether there was any reason for that, or if there be any truth in that statement.

"On Sunday morning I was taken down to the undertakers' establishment, to the factory, and I went to headquarters; I went to headquarters the second time, going there willingly without anybody coming for me. On each occasion I answered them frankly and unreservedly, giving them the benefit of the best of my knowledge, answering all and any of their questions, and discussing the matter generally with them.

"On Monday they came for me again. I went down and answered any and all of their questions and gave them a statement which they took down in writing, because I thought it was right and I was only too glad to do it. I answered them and told them all that I knew, answering all questions.

"Tuesday I was down at police station again, and answered every question and discussed the matter freely and openly with them, not only with the police, but with the reporters who were around there; talked to anybody who wanted to talk with me about it, and i have even talked with them at midnight when I was just about to go to bed. Midnight was the time they chose to talk to me, but even at such an outlandish hour I was still willing to help them, and at their instigation I spoke to Newt Lee alone, but what was the result? They commenced and they grilled that poor negro and put words into his mouth that I never said, and twisted not alone the English, but distorted my meaning.

"I just decided then and there that if that was the line of conduct they were going to pursue I would wash my hands of them. I didn't want to have anything to do with them. On the afternoon of May 1 I was taken to the Fulton County Tower.

How Detectives Drove Him to Silence.

"On May 3 Detectives Black and Scott came up to my cell in the Tower and wanted to speak to me alone without any of my friends around. I said all right, I wanted to hear what they had to say that time. Then Black tore off something like this: 'Mr. Frank, we are suspicious of that man Darley. We are watching him; we have been shadowing him. Now, open up and tell us what you know about him.' I said: 'Gentlemen, you have come to the wrong man, because Mr. Darley is the soul of honor and is as true as steel. He would not do a crime like that; he couldn't do it.' And Black chirped up: 'Come on, Scott, nothing doing,' and off they go.

"That showed me how much reliance could be placed in either the city detectives or our own Pinkerton detectives, and I treated such conduct with silence, and it was for this reason, gentlemen, that I didn't see Conley, surrounded with a bevy of city detectives and Mr. Scott, because I knew that there would not be an action so trifling, that there was not an action so natural, but that they would distort and twist it to be used against me, and that there was not a word that I could utter that they would not deform and twist and distort to be used against me, but I told them even then if they got the permission—I told them through my friend Mr. Klein—that if they got the permission of Mr. Rosser to come, I would speak to them, would speak to Conley and face him or anything they wanted—if they got that permission or brought Mr. Rosser. Mr. Rosser was on that day up at Tallulah Falls trying a case.

"Now, that is the reason, gentlemen, that I have kept my silence—not because I didn't want to, but because I didn't want to have things twisted.

"Then that other implication, the one of knowing that Conley could write and that I didn't tell the authorities.

Tells of Showing Conley Could Write.

"Let's look into that.

"On May 1 I was taken to the Tower. On the same date, as I understand it, the negro Conley was arrested. I didn't know anybody had any suspicions about him. His name was not in the papers. He was an unknown quantity. The police were not looking out for him; they were looking out for me. They didn't want him, and I had no inkling that he ever said he couldn't write.

"I was sitting in that cell in the Fulton County Jail—it was along about April 12, April 13 or April 14 that Mr. Leo Gottheimer, a salesman for the National Pencil Company, came running over, any says: 'Leo, the Pinkerton detectives have suspicions of Conley. He keeps saying he can't write; these fellows over at the factory know well enough that he can write, can't he?'

"I said: 'Sure he can write.'

"We can't prove it. The manager says he can't write and I feel that he can write.'

"I said, 'I know he can write. I have received many notes from him asking me to loan him money. I have received too many notes from him not to know that he can not write. In other words I have received notes signed with his name, purporting to have been written by him, though I have never seen him to this day use a pencil.'

"I thought a while and then said: 'Now, I tell you. If you will look into a drawer in the safe you will find the card of a jeweler from whom Conley bought a watch on the installment plan. Now, perhaps if you go to the jeweler you may find some sort of a receipt that Conley had to give and be able to prove that Conley can write.'

Pinkertons Found Conley's Contracts.

"Well, Gottheimer took that information back to the Pinkertons. They did just as I said; they got the contract with Conley's name on it, got back evidently to Scott, and then he told the negro to write. Gentlemen, the man who found out or paved the way to find out that Jim Conley could write is sitting right here in this chair. That is the truth about it.

"Then that other insinuation, an insinuation that is so dastardly that it is beyond the appreciation of a human being, that is, that my wife didn't visit me. Now the truth of the matter is this, that on April 29, the date I was taken in custody at police headquarters, my wife was there to see me. She was downstairs on the first floor. I was up on the top floor. She was there almost in hysterics, having been brought there by her two brothers-in-law and her father.

"Rabbi Marx was with me at the time. I consulted with him as to the advisability of allowing my dear wife to come up to the top floor to see me in those surroundings with city detectives, reporters and snap-shotters. I thought I would save her that humiliation and that harsh sight, because I expected any day to be turned loose and be returned once more to her side at home.

"Gentlemen, we did all we could do to restrain her in the first days when I was down at the jail from coming on alone down to the jail, but she was perfectly willing even to be locked up with me and share my incarceration.

Says He Knows Nothing of Crime.

"Gentlemen, I know nothing whatever of the death of little Mary Phagan. I had no part in causing her death nor do I know how she came to her death after she took her money and left my office. I never even saw Conley in the factory or anywhere else on that date, April 26, 1913.

"The statement of the witness Dalton is utterly false as far as coming to my office and being introduced to me by the woman, Daisy Hopkins, is concerned. If Dalton was ever in the factory building with any woman, I didn't know it. I never saw Dalton in

FACTORY BOY SWEARS HE SAW FRANK ACCOST MARY PHAGAN

Dorsey Feared He'd 'Get in Bad' With Detectives, State Witness Says

Turner, a farmer, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. About March, of this year, where did you work?—A. At the pencil factory.

Q. Do you know this man? (pointing to Frank)—A. Yes.

Q. Did you know Mary Phagan?—A. When I saw her.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank talking to Mary Phagan?—A. Yes; on the second floor.

Q. What time was it and how long before the murder?—A. About the middle of March.

Q. Where was it?—A. In the back part of the building.

Q. What time of day was it?—A. Just before dinner.

Q. Who was in the room besides them?—A. No one else. Two girls came down after I did.

Q. What was said?—A. I heard her say she had to go to work.

Q. What did he say?—A. He said he was the superintendent of the factory—"

Rosser: "We object and we want to argue this without the jury."

The jury was sent out.

Dorsey—Let the witness tell what it is.

Turner—Mr. Frank told the girl he was superintendent of the factory and wanted to talk to her. She told him she had to go back to work. Mr. Frank then went off.

Mary Backed Away From Frank.

Q. How was she acting?—A. She backed off from him and he walked toward her.

Q. How far did she back?—A. Three or four feet. That was all I heard. Mr. Frank turned away.

Judge Roan—You can go into this to this extent. You can show whether he knew Mary Phagan.

Rosser—This other has nothing to with it.

Hooper—If my brother will just a still a little bit, we may be able proceed further. This has another e. It shows familiarity or a de- for familiarity.

Rosser—If your honor is with us, I 't want to argue.

Judge Roan—The question is ether it can be shown just how conversation took place.

Rosser—That is not the purpose of evidence——

Hooper—Your honor——

Judge Roan—Sit down, Mr. Hooper. The question is whether this will ow whether he knew her well ough to know her name.

Rosser—This evidence doesn't show t.

Dorsey—Your honor, this witness ys this meeting occurred in the me place and near the same spot here we have contended the murder curred It is the basis for further idence.

Arnold—That last statement let the at out of the bag. They want to bring out another charge. This whole case has been beclouded with every charge that could be imagined. We have gotten away from the charge of murder and have been made to answer every conceivable charge.

Hooper—I object to that, first because it is not true and second because it is not the point at issue.

There was smothered applause.

"There is another disturbance of some sort," shouted Arnold.

Judge Roan rapped for order and directed that the jury be brought in. He addressed Solicitor Dorsey.

"You may put your question and let him tell what he knows," said Judge Roan.

Q. What did you see? Tell it in your own way, telling everything that you saw.—A. They were back in the rear of the building near the entrance. She was coming to her work just before dinner. Mr. Frank met her and said: 'I want to speak to you.' She said: 'I have got to go to work.' He said: "I am the superintendent of the pencil factory and I want to speak to you.' She backed off and he walked toward her.

Q. Is that all?—A. Yes.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. What time was it?—A. Just before dinner.

Q. How was it she was just going to work?—A. She was returning to her work at the machine. It was just before the whistle blew.

Q. Lemmie Quinn's office was there, wasn't it?—A. Yes.

Q. There were ten or twelve women there in the polishing department?—A. I don't know.

Q. Well, what about those two girls in there?—A. They came back and told me where to put the pencils.

Q. Do you know who they were?—A. No.

Motorman Hits Daisy Hopkins' Character.

Q. They came back at the time this thing was going on?—A. Yes.

Q. What kind of a looking girl was Mary Phagan?—A. She had light hair.

Q. What else?—A. I can't describe her.

Q. Do you really know her?—A. Yes.

Q. How?—A. Some boy who worked on the fourth floor pointed her out to me one morning when she came to work.

Q. Do you know any one else at the factory?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Walter T. Merck was called.

Dorsey questioned him.

Q. What is your business?—A. A street car motorman.

Q. Do you know Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever meet her on Saturday afternoons at the corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets?—A. Yes.

Q. What did she say?—A. I asked her where she was going and she said she was going to the pencil factory.

Q. Did you see her any more?—A. Yes. I made an engagement to go to her room.

Q. Did you see her?—A. Yes, about 8:30 o'clock in a room upstairs at the corner of Walker and Peters streets.

Q. Did she say where she had been?—A. To the National Pencil Factory.

Q. Do you know her character?—A. Yes.

Q. Is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Does the company know your character? It's a beauty according to your own admission, isn't it?

Dorsey interposed with an objection and was sustained.

Rosser: "Come down, come down, come down."

McKnight Woman's Lawyer Called.

The witness was excused, and George Gordon, who said he had practiced law for thirteen years, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Were you present at the police station when Minola McKnight was brought there?—A. Yes; or, rather, I was on the outside a part of the time. I went there in connection with getting a habeas corpus proceedings for her release. The detectives told me I could not go in just then. I decided to make a demand to see her, and it was granted. I went in and Stenographer Febuary read a statement to her from his notes, then went out to write it. Detectives Starnes, Campbell and Lanford, Chief Beavers and two men from Beck & Greggs' were there when the stenographer went out. I said that I didn't think that she ought to be held. They told me they could do nothing unless I got your (Dorsey's) permission. So I went to see you, and you told me that you could not let the woman go, because it would put you in bad with the detectives.

Q. Didn't I say that I had no right to hold her?—A. No; you said you would not release her without a habeas corpus.

Q. Why did you not wait until she signed that paper?—A. I went up to see you.

Q. Did you hear her say anything about the statement? Read over the notes and then answer the question.—A. That is the substance of the notes that Febuary read over to her.

Q. What did she say? Did she deny or admit them?—A. She said she believed that was about right.

Dorsey Feared He'd "Get in Bad."

Q. I told you I didn't have anything to do with locking her up, and that it would be meddling for me to order her release.—A. You said you would not interfere because you would get in bad with the detectives. That is what my recollection is, Mr. Dorsey.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. You knew that she had been to Mr. Dorsey's office and had been taken away screaming?—A. Yes; I heard that.

Q. That Mr. Dorsey, an officer of the peace, let the police take that woman away screaming?

Dorsey interrupted. "You say you know that?" he asked the witness.

Rosser: "Wait until I get through." Then he continued his question.

Q. Did you ever find out what charge they had against her?—A. I had a habeas corpus to get her release, but could not get to her.

Q. They just held her because she would not give a statement to the police that Mr. Dorsey wanted?

Dorsey interposed an objection.

Rosser—I submit to this jury that the evidence in this case proves it is true.

Dorsey—I submit it is not true, I don't care what you argue to this jury.

Rosser—And you didn't care what you did to that poor negro woman.

Dorsey—I didn't do anything to that negro woman.

Judge Sustains Dorsey's Objection.

Judge Roan sustained Dorsey's objection. Rosser asked Dorsey for the affidavit that Minola made in Dorsey's office. He asked the witness if he had ever seen it before, and the witness answered, "No."

Q. Who was guilty of false imprisonment—was it Starnes or Beavers?—A. Beavers said he knew about it, but that he could not let her out unless Dorsey ordered it.

Q. Did he have a warrant?—A. No.

Q. Then they let her out the next day?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see her?—A. I saw her that first evening. She was in a cell and crying hysterically. I asked Chief Beavers to let her out in the corridor and I guess he did.

Dorsey took the witness again.

Q. Didn't I tell you that I had absolutely no rights in the matter?—A. Something like that, but if you will pardon me, Hugh, I will tell you exactly what was done. I went to you when the police told me they could not let the woman go without an order from you. You told me you had not had the woman arrested and was not having her held.

Q. Now, didn't Febuary read over to you a portion of that affidavit?—A. Yes, he read something.

Q. Now, didn't he read a part of the statement, and she added to it the part about the money?—A. She said something about money.

Q. Now, what else did she say?—A. I don't recall.

Q. Didn't you question her yourself?—A. I asked one or two little questions.

Q. What about?—A. She said something about a bucket of water that was not very plain, and I questioned her about it.

Rosser took the witness again.

Q. You don't know what happened behind those doors?—A. No.

At this point court adjourned until 2 o'clock.

President of State Board of Health Testifies.

When the afternoon session started Solicitor Dorsey announced that on account of some of the State's witnesses being out of the city he would vary his program. He called Dr. S. E. Benedict, of Athens, president of the State Board of Health, and a member of the faculty of the University of Georgia for 32 years, to the stand.

On the first question asked him, Attorney Arnold made strenuous objection and precipitated a long argument. The question was:

"Were you present at the meeting of the State Board of Health when Dr. Westmoreland preferred charges against Dr. Harris?"

"Weo bject to going into that," said Mr. Arnold. "We would have to get the minutes of the board and all of that."

"I am not going into the matter further than to disprove Dr. Westmoreland's statement," said Mr. Dorsey, "that the State board found Dr. Harris guilty of scientific dishonesty."

"You can go into the question of the feeling of the witness," said Judge Roan.

"Suppose," said Rosser, sarcastically, "Mary had a little lamb, it's fleece was white as snow, would that have anything to do with this case?"

"I am not going into iit further than to disprove Dr. Westmoreland's statement," insisted Dorsey.

"Well, I am going into it," said Arnold, "if you don't. I am going to ask him about a letter he wrote Dr. Westmoreland."

"Go ahead, Mr. Dorsey," said Judge Roan.

Frank Proves His Own Best Witness.

Frank had demonstrated that he was better than his lawyers and that he was his own best witness when he came down from the witness chair Monday night after talking almost continuously for four hours.

It is doubtful, as shrewd and eloquent as his attorneys are known to be, if anything more impressive, more convincing and more logical will be presented to the jury in his behalf before his fate is placed in the hands of the twelve men.

The young factory superintendent made no attempt at oratery or dramatics. He did not attempt an appeal to the emotions of the jurors. He probably was wise in this, as the memory of what he said and the manner in which he said it will remain with the jurors long after an emotion of pity would have passed away.

Although Frank seldom raised his voice above a conversational tone, his address was deeply impressive from start to finish. Its truth or falsity, of course, is problematical. But it had all the characteristics that are commonly accepted as accompanying the truth.

He did not ask for pity or mercy. He did not take the attitude of demanding anything to which he was not entitled. His mien throughout was that of a man seeking merely justice, and that alone. He was an innocent man or a consummate actor as he stood before the jury. These are the only two conclusions possible.

The matter-of-fact manner in which he delivered his long address only added to its impressiveness and eloquence. That a man with the burden of a foul murder on his conscience could talk easily, freely, fearlessly for four hours before the men whose word can send him to the gallows my life to know him until this crime.

"In reply to the statement of Miss Irene Jackson, she is wholly mistaken in supposing that I ever went to a ladies' dressing room for the purpose of making improper gaze into the girls' room. I have no recollection of occasions of which she speaks, but I do know that that ladies' dressing room on the fourth floor is a mere room in which the girls change their outer clothing.

"There was no bath or toilet in that room, and it had windows opening onto the street. There was no lock on the door, and I know I never went into that room at any hour when the girls were dressing. These girls were supposed to be at their work at 7 o'clock. Occasionally I have had reports that the girls were flirting from this dressing room through the windows with men.

"It is also true that sometimes the gris would loiter in this room when they ought to have been doing their work. It is possible that on some occasions I looked into this room to see if the girls were doing their duty and were not using this room as a place for loitering and for flirting.

Says Negro's Story Is Tissue of Lies.

"These girls were not supposed to be dressing in that room after 7 o'clock, and I know that I never looked into that room at any hour when I had any reason to suppose that there were girls dressing therein.

"The statement of the negro Conley is a tissue of iles from first to last. I know nothing whatever of the cause of the death of Mary Phagan, and Conley's statement as to his coming up and helping me dispose of the body, or that I had anything to do with her or to do with him that day, is a monstrous lie.

"The story as to women coming into the factory with me for immoral purposes is a base lie, and the few occasions that he claims to have seen me in indecent positions with women is a lie so vile that I have no language with which fitly to denounce it.

"I have no rich relatives in Brooklyn, N. Y. My father is an invalid. My father and mother together are people of very limited means, who have barely enough upon which to live. My father is not able to work. I have no relative who has any means at all, except Mr. M. Frank, who lives in Atlanta. Nobody has raised a fund to pay the fees of my attorneys. These fees have been paid by the sacrifice in part of the small property which my parents possess.

"Gentlemen, some newspaper men have called me 'the silent man in the tower.' I kept my silence and my counsel advisedly until the proper time and place. The time is now, the place is here, and I have told you the truth, the whole truth."

Frank bowed slightly to the twelve men to whom he had addressed this remarkable statement and then stepped down from the stand. Court adjourned until 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Find Missing Banker Led Gay Lobster Life

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 19.—In tracing the career of Raymond E. Smith, secretary-treasurer of the Roseville Trust Company, who is being sought to clear up mysteries surrounding a shortage of over $500,000 in the bank, the searchers found evidences of lobster suppers, joy rides and gay parties.

They failer to find the object of their search, but they got traces of a young woman to whom Smith is alleged to have paid marked attention.

Another woman gave a clew that leads the company's officials to believe that the banker has sailed on one of the trans-Atlantic liners from New York.

New Molasses Rate Of M. & O. Causes Kick

MOBILE, ALA., Aug. 19.—The molasses men of New Orleans and Louisiana are disturbed over the new rate on blackstrap molasses made by the Mobile and Ohio Railroad out of this city of 15 cents per 100 pounds.

The Louisiana dealers will probably ask the Interstate Commerce Commission to enjoin the proposed rate as discriminatory.

The local railroad men have appealed to Freight Traffic Manager Haiden Miller, of the Mobile and Ohio at St. Louis, asking that the rate be suspended.

Conscience-Stricken Bigamist Surrenders

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 19.—Asserting that he was a bigamist and his conscience hurt him because he had married a good woman, Walter H. Fensler walked into police headquarters here and gave himself up.

Fensler said he had a wife and baby in Pascagoula, Miss., and was not sure that he was divorced from his other two wives. He said he had married women in Lima, Ohio, and Oneato, Ala. His last wife was Miss Ima Beckham, of Pascagoula. They married in June, 1912.

Customs Man Noses Out Big Cheese Plot

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Nicola Romelli, a shoemaker, went to the Custom House to explain why he tried to smuggle two trunks filled with Parmesan cheese into this country. His mission failed and the cheese was sent to public stores.

When the shoemaker arrived from Europe he declared he had nothing dutiable. Customs Inspector Piper has an acute sense of smell and suggested opening the trunks.

GOVERNOR WILL SIGN BILL FOR GIRLS' HOME

Rumor That He Would Veto the Measure on Plea of Lack of Funds Proves Groundless.

Governor John M. Slaton said Tuesday afternoon that he will sign the bill providing for a home for wayward girls, which carries with it an appropriation of $20,000.

A rumor that Governor Slaton intended to veto the bill, not because he opposed the proposed home, but because it meant an additional drain upon the meager revnues of the State, had been in circulation since the last night of the General Assembly.

Leaders in the House and Senate told newspaper men at that time, fifteen minutes after the measure had been passed as amended by the Senate, that they had it on good authority that Governor Slaton would veto the bill.

Advocates Were Aroused.

The report gained strength the last few days and aroused those eager for the establishment of the home.

No less than 75 telegrams came to Governor Slaton's office Tuesday morning from individuals and organizations all over the State asking him to affix his signature and make the measure a law.

Originally the bill establishing the home carried an appropriation of $30,000, and in that shape it passed the House. The Senate, however, cut $10,000 from the amount, and in the final night session the House concurred in the Senate amendment.

Lack of Revenue Cited.

An increase in the tax returns of $4,000,000 would be necessary to pay the appropriation embodied in the bill. This increase, it appears, is not to be forthcoming. That was advanced as the basis of the report that Governor Slaton would veto the bill.

Prominent among the workers in behalf of the bill were the members of the Georgia branch of the Southern Association of College Women. This organization is in reality the originator of the bill. The movement was started at a meeting of the Georgia branch last fall, soon after which the Prison Reform Association was interested and took up the plan. Later the Men and Religion Forward Movement enlisted in the movement.

Governor Slaton spent Tuesday morning considering the measures passed by the General Assembly, with the exception of an hour or more that was spent in consultation with Judge John C. Hart, the new State Tax Commissioner.

Seek Atlanta Woman Who Gave Away Baby

CHATTANOOGA, Aug. 19.—The local police have been unable to discover any clews that will lead to the identity of the parents of the child given Mrs. Alice Maynard by an unknown woman as Mrs. Maynard was boarding a train in Atlanta for Chattanooga. The infant, a girl apparently not more than two months old, is now at Erlanger Hospital. She was plainly dressed and had no jewelry which would aid identification.

The woman who asked her to care for the child, Mrs. Maynard said, assured her the baby's mother would meet her at Chattanooga. When she arrived here, no one claimed the baby.

Boils Are a Bad Indication

With S. S. S. You Can Tell Poisoned Blood to Be Gone.

The appearance of boils leads many people to consider them a sign of robust constitution. They are more apt to signify a condition of sick blood.

It sounds queer to take a blood bath, but that is precisely the effect when you use that remarkable remedy, S. S. S. It has the peculiar action of soaking through the intestines directly into the blood. In a few minutes its influence is at work in every artery, vein and tiny capilliary. Every membrane, every organ of the body, every emunctory becomes in effect a filter to strain the blood of impurities.

And best of all, this remarkable remedy is welcome to the weakest stomach.

You can get S. S. S. at any drug store. It is a standard remedy, recognized everywhere as the greatest blood antidote ever discovered. PATHFINDER GIVEN BIG WELCOMES ALL ALONG ROUTE TO BIRMINGHAM

By HUGH GRANT.
(Sunday American Representative With Pathfinder.)

TALLAPOOSA, Aug. 19.—E. L. Ferguson, official "pathfinder" for the All-Southern Transcontinental Highway, and party ended a triumphant tour through Georgia here Monday night. The party, consisting of Mr. Ferguson, Mrs. Ferguson and the Ferguson children, arrived on schedule time at 5:45 o'clock. The tourists left early Tuesday morning for Anniston. They will be joined en route by President John Craft, of the Alabama Good Roads Association, and State Highway Engineer Keller, who will accompany them through Alabama.

That Tallapoosa is keenly awake to the importance of the monster project to blaze a trail from Atlanta to San Francisco was clearly indicated Monday night when a score of Tallapoosans, including Mayor C. E. Pearce, L. E. Chandler, editor of The Tallapoosa Journal, and other prominent citizens, held a conference with Mr. Ferguson at the Tallapoosa Hotel in regard to the formulation of plans for the development of better roads in this vicinity.

The Tallapoosa good roads boosters were very enthusiastic over the campaign inaugurated by The Sunday American, and pledged their hearty support.

All Towns Give Welcome.

Tallapoosa's warm reception, however, was only one of many between here and Atlanta. All along the 63-mile route the good roads boosters turned out to give the transcontinentalists a rousing send-off.

At Austell Mayor L. C. Upshaw and Editor Dake, of The Douglasville New Era, heading a delegation of Douglasville boosters, met the tourists and escorted them to Douglasville. Here good roads and highways were talked of, and a typical old-time Georgia dinner was served at the Douglasville Hotel, with Mayor Upshaw and Mr. Dake acting as hosts.

Other Douglasville citizens who acted as official escorts were R. E. Edwards, J. F. Long, superintendent of the cotton mill; J. M. Banks, and Douglas County Commissioners J. T. Lee and A. S. Gresham.

According to Mr. Gresham, the Douglas County authorities are preparing now to spend several thousand dollars on the development of the old Tallapoosa road. The largest work will be the construction of a new steel bridge over Sweetwater Creek costing approximately $2,000.

The improvement in Douglas County of the Tallapoosa highway which was traversed by the Ferguson party and which has been selected as the official route will make this one of the best roads in the entire State.

Pathfinder Ferguson declared Monday night that the road between Austell and Douglasville was excellent, and that he remaining sections were good and could be put in fine shape by the expenditure of moderate sums in each county.

Leaving Douglasville Monday afternoon, Mr. Ferguson and party made a bee line for Villa Rica, arriving there on schedule at 3:40. Temple, Ga., was reached shortly after 4 o'clock, Bremen at 5, Waco at 5:15 and Tallapoosa at 5:45. Members of the party reported a most delightful trip, with not a single mishap to mar the journey.

A wire from Heflin, Ala., Tuesday morning told of elaborate preparations there for the reception of Mr. Ferguson and party. From Heflin the tourists will proceed to Anniston, Ala., where a monster good roads celebration will be held a a greeting gbration will be held as a greeting guson expects to reach Birmingham Thursday at noon.

St. Clair Boosters Guide Pathfinders.

ANNISTON, Aug. 19.—A party from St. Clair County, including John W. Inzer, probate judge; J. L. Herring, Dr. W. B. Johnson and Uranus Pickette, all of Asheville, arrived here to-day to join the Ferguson transcontinental pathfinding party. They will pilot the scouts to St. Clair, whence they go to Birmingham.

Duchess Who Rules Luxembourg to Wed

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LUXEMBOURG, Aug. 19.—Te betrothal of Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide, aged 19, ruler of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, to Prince Henry of Bavaria, was announced to-day.

Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide ascended the throne on her eighteenth birthday, from which time German and French plots have been directed at her, for both big neighbors have long looked at the little Grand Duchess with covetous eyes.

The Grand Duchess is one of the most beautiful girls in Europe.

Prelate Against Sex Equality Idea

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 19.—"I do not believe the Creator intended the position of woman in the world should be the same as that of man," Archbishop Sebastian G. Messmer, of the Milwaukee diocese, told the Catholic Press Association, in speaking against woman suffrage.

"However," he added, "I would not dare to come out with a positive statement that agitation for woman suffrage is against the rules of the church. The church has not taken any definite stand, and until it does, each individual has a right to think, talk and act as he sees fit."

He Feared His 'Girl' More Than Gallows

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Robert Cade, 18, who surrendered to the police because he feared the scorn of his sweetheart more than he did the possibility of the gallows, was released to-day. He was suspected of the murder of Bennie Holstein, 13. Circumstances pointed strongly to his guilt. He was being sought over the country.

"My girl would have nothing to do with me when she learned that I was under suspicion," he told the police. "I would gladly risk my neck to keep her respect"

Auto Searchlights Hit X-Ray Gowns

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—If an automobilist in sportive mood feels inclined to shoot his searchlights through the X-ray skirts worn by passing women, he may do so with impunity anywhere in Judge Breen's Yorkville district. "It is the skirts, and not the lights," declares the Judge, "that need reforming."

Breen discharged John Carey, a merchant, charged with causing embarrassment with his auto lights to women attired in the fashionable "X-rays."

Envoy Page Called An Enemy to Labor

NEW YORK, Aug 19.—Walter H. Page, Ambassador to Great Britain was denounced as unfit to represent the United States in England at a meeting of the Central Federated Union, because of his alleged enmity to trades unions and as a result of the strike in the plant of the Doubleday, Page Publishinging Company.

The pressmen, feeders, printers, photo-engravers and foundry workers are now on strike.

"The wages paid are far below the prevailing rate," said Secretary Shahams, "and everything is done to thwart organized labor."

JUDGE GODBEE'S SLAYER PLANS COURT FIGHT

Attorneys for Woman Make Statement—Slain Man Buried at Waynesboro, Ga.

MILLEN, Aug. 19.—Mrs. Edna Godbee, divorced wife of Judge W. S. Godbee, who shot and killed her former husband and seriously wounded his second wife, has employed Attorneys G. C. Dekle and J. A. Dixon to defend her. The following statement has been issued by them:

"We have no apprehension as to the outcome of this case. We do not propose to try it on the streets or in the newspapers, but in the courtroom. There we expect the truth as regards this case to convince the jury and the country at large of the innocence of Mrs. Godbee. There has been already an effort on the part of some people to distort the facts in this case, and we ask in simple justice that the public withhold their judgment until they shall have taken a calm and dispassionate survey of the evidence in the case, after which we do not fear their verdict."

Mrs. Godbee, who was so seriously wounded by the divorced wife, is in a serious condition, physicians not giving much hope of her recovery.

Mrs. Edna Godbee is in the Jenkins County jail awaiting the preliminary trial, which will be held as soon as the condition of the wounded woman is such as to insure recovery, or until death has claimed the victim.

Judge Godbee Is Buried at Waynesboro.

WAYNESBORO, Aug. 19.—Funeral services over the remains of Judge Walter S. Godbee, who was shot to death by his divorced wife in Millen yesterday morning, were held here today at 11 o'clock, with Masonic ceremonies.

Quite a number of the lodge members accompanied the body to Waynesboro, where they were met by the Waynesboro Masons, and both lodges escorted the remains to the last resting place.

Mr. Godbee was a native of Burke County and was 56 years old. He was one of the best known and honored citizens of Jenkins County, which he so materially assisted in forming.

The funeral was largely attended by friends in Waynesboro and his children, besides many relatives from this and Jenkins County. It was his request that he be buried in Waynesboro.

'I'm a Blacksmith,' Says Harding Davis

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—A young newspaper reporter, paper and pencil in hand, darted briskly among the crowd at Healy's Restaurant during the process of ejecting the diners. He saw a man continually in the shadow of District Attorney Whitman.

"Will you give me your name, please?" asked the young news gatherer.

"Davis!" replied the other.

"May I have your first name?" questioned the youth.

"Richard Harding—Richard Harding Davis."

"What is your occupation?"

"Oh, I'm a blacksmith."

Two Killed at Camp Meeting Dice Games

LEXINGTON, Aug. 19.—Two men were killed and several badly wounded in a general fight during crap games at Wichita camp meeting in Mason County, Kentucky. Benjamin Timberlake and Henry Queen are dead.

William Queen, William and Thomas Timberlake and Daniel Sanders are alleged to have taken part in the battle.

Laborer En Route for Fortune Dies at Sea

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—While en route to Australia to get $1,000,000 which was left to him by his father-in-law, William Lunstall, a laborer, died at sea, according to a wireless telegram received here to-day. The father of Lunstall's wife died in Australia leaving a vast fortune, and Lunstall proved the only heir. He was a penniless laborer and had difficulty getting passage money to buy a ticket.

KELLY IS PUT ON ALDERMANIC BODY

Second Ward Water Commissioner Gets McClelland's Place. Pure Vaudeville Law Pends.

C. H. Kelly, water commissioner from the Second Ward, has been chosen to fill the vacancy on the Aldermanic Board from the Second Ward, occasioned by the resignation of Alderman J. E. McClelland. The selection was made by the City Council Monday afternoon.

Mr. Kelly served as Alderman from the Second Ward prior to the election of Mr. McClelland, and when Commissioner George Walker moved out of the ward and left a vacancy on the Water Board, Mr. Kelly was elected to fill his place. The vacancy on the board caused by the resignation of Mr. Kelly will be filled at the next meeting.

No action was taken on the "pure vaudeville" ordinance. It was introduced too late for consideration. The amendment tacked on the ordinance by the Ordinance Committee, according to Acting Chairman Wood, prohibits any person appearing on the stage in an "indecent or immodest costume." The original ordinance prohibited tights and short skirts.

Dr. W. D. Vinson, of the Fifth Ward, was chosen to succeed Dr. R. N. Weaver as a Grady Hospital trustee.

The report of the Street Committee adverse to changing the name of Murphy avenue was adopted. The report favoring the change in name of McDaniel Street to Oxford terrace was referred back.

Councilman Ashley's resolution providing for an appropriation of $600 to employ an engineering expert to represent the city when the evaporation test is made at the crematory, was adopted.

Lunatic Says He Is Pat Crowe, Kidnaper

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—A man who says he is Pat Crowe, kidnaper of Eddie Cudahy, Jr., son of the wealthy Omaha packer, is held in the Washington Insane Asylum for observation.

The patient told the police and physicians that he had come to Washington to forward his claim on a patent for an invention preventing the spreading of rails.

He said Secretary of State Bryan was his personal friend, and that through the Secretary he hoped to secure his papers from the patent office.

Surgeon General Studies Pellagra

SAVANNAH, Aug. 19.—Dr. Robert Blue, Surgeon General of the Public Health Service of the United States, is in Savannah to inspect pellagra cases in the Marine Hospital and the Quarantine Station at the mouth of the Savannah River. The visit is a part of the tour of inspection throughout the South.

Dr. Blue is especially interested in hook worm and pellagra conditions in the South, and will stop on his way back to Washington at the hookworm camp of the Rockefeller Commission at Wilmington, N. C.

Fresh Appeal for Exhibit To Be Made

Three hundred Atlanta manufacturers will gather at Hotel Ansley for a luncheon at 1 o'clock Tuesday. They will discuss the manufacturers' exposition which the Chamber of Commerce has been endeavoring to establish in its building.

While many manufacturers have signed for space in the exhibit, there still is a large amount which has not been taken. Unless this is arranged for immediately, the proposition is likely to fall through.

Enthusiasm has been displayed, however, and around the Chamber of Commerce the belief is that the exposition is assured.

3 WOUNDED WHEN MOB STORMS JAIL

Spartanburg Sheriff and Deputy Rout Would-Be Lynchers of Negro Assailant.

SPARTANBURG, Aug. 19.—Sheriff White and one deputy fought off a mob of several hundred who attempted to enter Spartanburg County jail and lynch a negro. Frank Eppley. J. C. Owensby and John Turner were wounded by the Sheriff and his deputy before they drove the mob from the jail.

The mob attempted to blow up the jail with dynamite, but failing, tried to batter down the doors. It was then the three men were wounded and the mob was forced to recognize the courage and determination of Sheriff White and his deputy.

Threats were made by the mob that they would secure nitroglycerin and destroy the entire building, but they did not return.

The negro had attacked a young white woman earlier in the day. He was later captured and landed in jail. The mob formed after nightfall and attacked the jail.

Grace Revival Draws Large Crowds Daily

Revival services which started at Grace Methodist Church Sunday are being largely attended both morning and evening. "The Purpose of God" and "Giving the Other Man a Chance" were the subjects dwelt on by the Rev. J. M. Bass Monday. Both addresses were forcefully delivered and made a deep impression on the audience.

O. W. Stapleton, the singing evangelist, rendered several solos and directed the large chorus. H. K. Chapman, a prominent architect of Atlanta, is issuing daily a bulletin on the revival.

Italy Makes Divorce An Issue in Election

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, Aug. 19.—The divorce question, it was made evident to-day, will be the main plank in the coming parliamentary elections in Italy. One set of candidates proposes to make divorce easier; the other to make it harder.

"Let a poor man have a chance at divorce," is the slogan of the prodivorce party, while the leaders of the other says: "Make the country better by making divorce impossible."

Man Cashing $45,000 U. S. Draft Arrested

Special Cable to The Georgian.

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—A Kerke bank clerk was arrested to-day just as he was in the act of cashing two New York drafts for $45,000, which he had obtained by the fraudulent use of the secret code of the Deutscher Bank of Leipsic.

Melodrama Comes Back to Own at Bijou

Throughout the entire country there has been a great demand for the old plays that stirred the heart, quickened the pulse, brought tears that no one was ashamed of, rewarded the hero and sent the villain to his doom.

Melodrama is undoubtedly coming back good and hard and the announcement that the Bijou will re-open its doors next Monday with a first-class company presenting the most successful comedy dramas and melodramas is being received with unusual interest.

The Jewell Kelley Company has been engaged for an indefinite run to put on big scenic plays with all the stage accessories and special scenery that could be secured at higher prices.

The opening bill for next week will be "Her Fatal Shadow," a comedy drama full of action, wholesome comedy, stirring climaxes and with a heart story that will appeal to everyone.

The company has been selected with great care and includes some of the greatest favorites that have played the city. The roster of names includes Jewell Kelley, Richard Mandell, Thomas McDonough, Eddie Black, Miss Rose Morris, Miss Grace Webber, Clare Summers, Marie Claire, Earl Higley and others well known in the dramatic profession.

Yacht Being Built To Meet Lipton Boat

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 19—A yacht that will meet the other American sloops in the race that is to determine the boat that is to meet Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger in September, 1914, is being designed here by Bowes & Mower. The ship will be built in this city with funds subscribed by members of the Corinthian Yacht Club who are said to have pledged $100,000 for the purpose.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address "Cuticura," Dept. 8G, Boston.

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company
ATLANTA NEW YORK PARIS

A Great Waist Sale Starts Here At 8:30 in the Morning

A doubly fine Waist Sale because it is made up of waists from our own stocks and others that our buyer just captured in New York—in one instance we are clearing out stock in true Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. fashion, in the other we are passing on a fortunate purchase, this, also, in true Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose fashion.

Many kinds of waists are included, batistes, voiles, crepes, linens, crepe de chines and wash silks, and in every instance the savings are more than half.

We doubt if the woman who "never has enough waists" ever had a better opportunity to supply herself—and the waists will be those she will choose for their charm and chic and—savings.

But here—

49c
For $1.00 and $1.50 Waists

White linen waists in plain tailored styles, tucked and plaited; also lingerie waists trimmed with neatly patterned embroideries and with laces—in the regular way $1.00 and $1.50 never bought prettier—low neck, short sleeves, high neck, long sleeves.

79c
For $1.50 and $2.45 Waists

Some of these are just out of their boxes and the laces, the embroideries, batistes, voiles and styles are as fresh as can be, others are those $1.50 and $2.45 values from our own stocks that are a hit mussed. All white, low neck, short sleeves, high neck, long sleeves.

$1.19
For $2.50 to $4.00 Waists

One particularly attractive and new style is of white voile with a low round collar edged with net frilling, short sleeves, embroidered front, others of batiste and voiles with crochet buttons, a few show Dresden colorings—one hundred to choose from.

$1.69
For $4.00 and $4.50 Waists

One hundred in all, made in many pretty ways. Voiles, batistes and French crepes, with low flat collars and lace collars, linen laces trim a number of these and crystal buttons and embroidery that looks much like hand work.

$2.45
For $5.00 to $8.75 Waists

Fine choice here—sixty-five waists of white and striped crepe de chine, of China silk and wash silks, Irish lace collars are prominent, and little vest effects worked out in sheer laces and heavy plaited double ruffles. They will go quickly.

$1.19
For $1.50 to $3.75 House Dresses

Eighty-six house dresses to add zest to the selling. They are lawns, daintily striped and flowered and figured and fashioned, light colors, low collars trimmed with Swiss embroideries and folds, plain skirts with panels in front and back.

SUFFRAGE CRAZE WILL RUIN U. S., SAYS TILLMAN

South Carolina Senator Also Deplores "Swapping of Wives Among the Rich Class."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—"I, looking at the growing craze for women suffrage and the rapid increase in the number of divorces granted in this country, sadly think, if I do not say, 'America, thy race is almost run unless something is done to check thy headlong speed,'" declared Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, in the Senate to-day, while discussing the woman's suffrage question.

Senator Tillman declared he is strongly opposed to granting the ballot to women.

"The customs of our people inherited from our forefathers," said the Senator, "make it dangerous to 'monkey' with womankind. If the California men had our customs, Diggs and Caminetti would not be allowed to go to trial now because they would have been shot like dogs.

"Among our very rich people in America the geenration has gone so far that swapping wives is a common practice. The women are just as bad as the men."

SLATON APPROVES 3 ATLANTA BILLS

With more than 200 bills on Governor Slaton's desk which had to be signed immediately, the doors of the executive offices were closed to visitors Tuesday while the Governor delved into the mass of work in an effort to get the bills signed and out of the way before the next batch came from the engrossing clerks of the House and Senate.

The Governor expects to sign all the bills that reach him Tuesday before the day is over, in order to forestall any discussion as to whether Sunday shall be counted as one of the five days in which he is allowed to sign bills passed by the Legislature.

Up to Tuesday morning Governor Slaton had signed only one of the three local bills affecting Atlanta. This was the measure creating a new judge for the Atlanta Circuit, which he approved Monday afternoon. The other two, the bill creating a new charter for the city and the bill creating municipal courts, probably will be signed Tuesday.

It is understood the Governor will defer appointing the new Atlanta judge until he returns from the conference of Governors at Colorado Springs, Colo., next week. Governor Slaton will leave Saturday, to be gone about ten days.

JUDGE MATTHEWS HOLDS COURT

JACKSON.—Judge H. A. Matthews, of Macon, is holding court here this week for Judge Robert T. Daniel, of the Flint Circuit, who is ill. The criminal calendar will be reached about the middle of the week, civil business having been taken up Monday.

SHADOGRAPHS PLEASE OLD AND YOUNG ALIKE AT BONITA THEATER

Vaudeville, especially the Shadograph act, at the Bonita is a revelation to the patrons of this beautiful little theater.

A bill of four good, clean, amusing acts is given, and the older ones, as well as the children, enjoy the fine Shadographs of grotesque and amusing subjects.

The bill is high class and pleasing.

Tech Commercial Course Endowment Is Growing Rapidly

More than 25 of the 100 required guarantors for the new commercial course at Tech, to be launched at the opening of the 1913-14 term September 15, have been obtained, and an active campaign is being waged to complete the list by Saturday.

Each of the 100 guarantors is to give the sum of $25, making an endowment of $2,500. The sum may be increased later.

Classes in practical accounting, commercial law, business economics, auditing, banking and similar subjects will be taught. Afternoon classes from 4 to 6 o'clock will be conducted to give business men of Atlanta an opportunity to attend.

Professor E. C. Green, formerly of New York City, but for the past year an instructor at Tech, will be at the head of the department. Four other Tech professors will assist him. Edgar Watkins will be counsel for the law department, and Joel Hunter for the accounting.

THAW FAMILY IS READY TO FIGHT EXTRADITION

Escaped Slayer, Arrested in Canadian Village, Defies Captors. Admits Identity Readily.

seen on the train had alighted and hired a man named Brooks to take them for a drive.

Kelsey got the direction and, by asking along the road, traced the carriage driven by Brooks across the line into the Canadian woods. The three men had evidently persuaded Brooks to drive them by a wood road, and Kelsey traced them easily. They overtook Brooks, but his carriage was empty.

"I would not drive them any farther," said Brooks. "I have got to get back to the falls. They offered me $20 to go on, but I couldn't do it."

"Where did they go?" Kelsey asked.

"They got a farmer to drive them to Coaticook," Brooks replied.

Thaw Admits Identity.

Kelsey and his two companions put on speed, and on the edge of Coaticook they saw the team ahead with three men and the driver in it.

Kelsey stopped at a house and telephoned to the Coaticook police, then went ahead in his automobile and followed the vehicle. A policeman stopped the carriage. "Which of you is Harry K. Thaw?" he demanded.

The three men each made denials, and said the police had made a mistake. Then Kelsey came up, and when the man who had previously admitted he was Thaw saw Kelsey, he refused to talk.

Later Kelsey, who went to the police station with the officers and the man he had identified as Thaw, telephoned to his family in Colebrook that Thaw had again admitted his identity to the Coaticook police.

Deputy Sheriff Kelsey then telephoned to New York and told them he had a man thought to be Thaw under arrest.

"Hold him," said the New York authorities, and the Coaticook authorities at once entered a charge of being a fugitive from justice against Thaw and released the other two.

Preparations were made for taking the man held to Sherbrooke this afternoon. The object of the party in leaving the train at Beecher Falls is believed to have been a desire to avoid the immigration and customs officers who board the train at the border and scrutinize each passenger.

Wife Still in Fear Of Thaw, She Says.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Former Assemblyman Richard J. Butler, a West Side politician and former henchman of Chief of Police "Big Bill" Devery, who was reported to have been implicated in the plot by which Thaw escaped, denied today that he had been mixed up in the escape of the Pittsburger.

"I know nothing about this, and I certainly had no part in it," declared Butler. "It is certain, though, that if any man was about to be mixed up in an affair of this kind he would not use his own name. I believe that some gangster who was paid to help Thaw out used my name. In fact, I believe that I know the man."

Butler admitted that he had been away from home for several days, but denied that he had been in Matteawan.

One of the men for whom a warrant was issued in Dutchess County yesterday used the name of Richard J. Butler, of New York, while waiting at the Holland Hotel in Beacon for the Thaw getaway to come off.

Sheriff Hornbeck and District Attorney Conger, of Dutchess County, armed with warrants for the arrest of Thaw, Thomas Flood, Roger Thompson, Michael O'Keefe, Eugene Duffy and Butler, came to this city to-day.

Family to Fight Extradition.

Evelyn Thaw, the estranged wife of the slayer, cowers in this city, afraid of her life. She declared that she would keep a bodyguard about her until Thaw's actual whereabouts became known.

It is evident that Thaw and his family will make a determined fight against extradition to this State if an attempt is made to bring him back. Thaw's defense, in all probability, will be that his escape was providential.

Detectives in the employ of Acting Governor Martin H. Glynn, who is taking unusual interest in the case, reported the discovery of two of the alleged conspirators and said that arrests were imminent. It was reported Mr. Glynn would convene the Dutchess County Grand Jury in extraordinary session to probe the escape of Thaw. Burns detectives have been brought into the case and are helping in the search for Thaw.

Accompanied by Miss Mary Copely, her sister and traveling companion, Mrs. William Thaw left to-day for Cresson, Pa.

Mrs. Thaw refused to discuss the escape of her son further than to say:

"I have positively not heard from Harry since my letter yesterday, but hope he is safe and well."

LIND AND HUERTA REACH PEACE AGREEMENT

Report of War Move Against the United States Is Denied by Charge O'Shaughnessy.

It is thought that the Mexican newspapers were instructed to print only this story and that they will not carry the denial of this ultimatum issued by Senor Gamboa early to-day.

In this way, it is believed, the Huerta government will be enabled to "save its face" before the Mexican people without at the same time bringing on war with the United States.

Lind and Huerta Patch Up a Truce.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 19.—After the Mexican Government had served a note upon the United States rejecting President Wilson's Mexican proposals and demanding recognition—an action which might have resulted in war—John Lind, special envoy from President Wilson, and President Huerta got together in the National Palace early to-day and patched up a truce.

President Huerta experienced a sudden change of heart last night, summoned Envoy Lind to him and spent two hours in discussion of possible measures that would lead to peace in Mexico.

Cablegrams reaching the White House to-day show clearly that Huerta yesterday afternoon turned down Mr. Lind with great emphasis, and that the latter reported the failure of his mission to the State Department. Some hours later General Huerta summoned Mr. Lind to the National Palace and discussed with him the very points he previously had refused to consider. The result of this discussion the White House has not yet made public.

The change of front on Huerta's part is puzzling President Wilson and State Department officials, and they are wondering what change of attitude will come next.

No final point in the negotiations between Envoy Lind and President Huerta has been reached, and official information coming to Washington to-day shows they are progressing satisfactorily. That the official American note to Huerta was rejected in one instance and that this rejection was withdrawn is established. The full text of the Huerta reply to the note is being cabled to the State Department, and probably will be laid before President Wilson late to-day.

Mexico City Shaken By Arsenal Explosion.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 19.—A heavy explosion shook the southwestern section of Mexico City to-day, causing great alarm. All the windows in the suburb of Tubacay were broken. It was at first believed to have been an earthquake, but later it was said to have been caused by an explosion of the powder magazine and arsenal at Santa Fe.

There was a heavy troop movement to-day. Large bodies of infantry, cavalry and artillery passed through the streets.

Teachers' Vouchers To Go Out at Once

Vouchers to pay salaries of country school teachers who have been forced by the State to wait eight months for their money will be mailed out Tuesday afternoon, according to statements made in the office of State Superintendent M. L. Brittain.

The amount necessary to pay the teachers is $486,000, of which $58,000 goes to the cities and small towns, and $428,000 to the counties.

U. S. to Aid Japs In Land Law Test

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—It is understood that in its efforts to deal fairly with the Japanese Government the State Department has indicated a purpose to facilitate any court proceedings that may be brought to test the alien land law legislation in California.

Issue Warrants For Japanese and Wife

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The Bureau of Immigration has issued warrants for the arrest of Hidekuni Iwata, a wealthy Japanese, and his wife, Norae Iwata, on charges of harboring women for immoral purposes in Fresno, Cal.

Iwata and his wife, immigration officers declare, were proprietors of property which housed 27 women arrested in a recent raid by the Fresno police.

Birmingham to Need Wire Workers Soon

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 19.—By December it is figured there will be need for no less than 1,500 men who are skilled in steel wire and cast iron pipe-making in Birmingham, the plants of the American Steel and Wire Company and the National Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry Company being rushed to completion.

Wages of steel wire workers are above the average.

Liquor Question Is Issue in Alabama

ANNISTON, Aug. 19.—With the hope of keeping the liquor question out of the next session of the Alabama Legislature, a proposed compromise between prohibitionists and local optionists in this county is being discussed, the object being to insure men of high moral and mental ability, men with business experience, to represent the county at the next session.

Mystery in Death Of Woman on Train

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Mrs. May Bacharach, 43, wife of Herschel Bacharach, superintendent of the City Club at Boston, Mass., died to-day, poisoned by food or water on a train en route from St. Louis to Chicago.

Coroner Hoffman, of this city, began a searching investigation of the cause of her death.

RICH DENOUNCED IN BOOK BY CHEF

Leon Pescheret, in Socialistic Treatise, Calls Them Ill-Bred Hogs and Immorality Producers.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—In a booklet published under the title of "Gluttony and Lucre," Leon Pescheret, famous over Europe as a chef, and now directing the commissary of a large Chicago hotel, says the wealthy patrons of eating places in America are "gilded, mixed breed, perverted calves, who have more money than sense, and who become criminals through indulgence in their rattish and doggish pastimes."

Three of Pescheret's most pointed paragraphs say:

"Many servants would experience a great deal more satisfaction and be rewarded by much more gratitude attending real swine than at feeding the ill-bred hogs that are disorganizers and producers of immorality and the present-day social order of things."

"In no class have I found more hypocrisy and false devotion, false morals, deceitfulness—even among themselves—than among snobbish, wealthy people."

"Clothes and jewelry do not make the lady or gentleman. Any good experienced and traveled waiter realizes that people finely dressed and with plenty of money to spend show about as much ignorance about a daily menu as a mule dressed up in silks would show."

JUDGE STAYS EXECUTION.

TIFTON.—Pending an appeal to the State Supreme Court, Judge W. E. Thomas has indefinitely postponed the execution of I. B. Hall, convicted of the killing of Dennis W. Hall and sentenced to hang on August 22.

Augusta-Columbus Railroad Proposed

COLUMBUS, Aug. 19.—A movement which had its origin in Macon, with a strong second by the Columbus Board of Trade, has come to light which proposes a direct railroad line between Columbus and Augusta, passing through Macon and the county seat of every county which it would touch.

The distance would be about 240 miles, and would not parallel any other road. Those who have begun the movement express confidence in the project and believe that it can be financed and that it will become a reality.

CURED ITCHING HUMOR ON FACE

Very Embarrassing. Could Not Sleep. Used Resinol—Well in a Week.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 3, 1913.—"I had a ringworm on the side of my face. It began like a cold blister—a small red mark. Each day it became larger until it was a round ring about the size of a quarter. It burned and itched me terribly, and was very sore. It was also swollen and caused me a great deal of discomfort, as I could not sleep at night. It was very embarrassing and I didn't want any of my friends to see me. I used several remedies such as —— and some kind of a powder, but they did no good. I used Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment for one week and cured it." (Signed) Eleanore D. Shekels, 308 North Sheridan Ave.

INSIST ON ODOR-O-NO—THERE'S NOTHING "JUST AS GOOD."

Nell Brinkley Says

I KNOW lots of folks who won't say it—that saddest word—"good-bye." "Adieu," they say, and "addio," "farewell" and "so-long," "auf Wiedersehen" and "aloha," "until the next time" and "be good"—but not "good-bye."

Under the word "good-bye" the sun seems dim. Birds droop and do not sing. The heart beats slow and heavy and the temples ache and tighten. The blue sky films with gray. Every face that turns our way and passes on seems to hide tragedy. Everybody else in the world, seems like, is saying good-bye, too.

And we watch them with tenderer eyes since we are bidding some one farewell. After good-bye there is nothing to do, no place to go, no one to see. The world seems bigger and suddenly wiped bare of beauty. We are afraid!

But EVERYBODY will say "HELLO!" They don't go hunting round for another word, any other word, so they can sort of slide by the plain, potent English. Under the short, keen, gladdest word, the sun and the sky are gold and blue. If it rains, why then we suddenly like rain. Under our tight jackets the heart beats high and fast and bursting big. Every face that turns our way seems like it had good news and blinds us.

If, maybe, a sad one lifts out of the glad ones, we forget it soon. Because we are saying "Hello." And if there's a bird singing anywhere we hear it. There is so much to do, so much to see, so many folks to like. The world seems suddenly like a rose and "full," as sweet-tempered R. L. S. says, "of a number of things."

And we are not afraid.

Do You Know---

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reason to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms, and underground passages—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet.

Clocks without hands or faces are now common in Switzerland. The timepiece stands in the hall, and when a button is pressed by means of phonographic arrangements it calls out "Half-past five," or "Five minutes to nine," as the case may be.

The greatest number of runners ever contesting in a single race ran through the streets of New York recently in a twelve and three-eighths-mile marathon. The runners taking part were 1,500 in number, and there were 300 prizes.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

PERHAPS HE IS SHY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am working in a place of business with a man of whom I think a great deal. Any time I write him to call to see me he appears to be quite delighted and calls, but never makes any effort to call unless I ask him. Don't you think he should ask me if he can call? PUZZLED.

Such a request from him would show an interest in you which he now seems to lack. You say he always accepts and is delighted. That encourages me in the belief that he thinks a great deal of you, but is bashful.

Don't ask him for a time. I have an idea he will speedily ask you.

LET IT BE NO.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young lady of sixteen and keeping company with a young man of eighteen for one year. This young man has asked me to marry him, but I would like for him to change his position He promised me he would in the spring. Kindly let me know if I shall give any decided answer. ANXIOUS.

You are sixteen and can well afford to wait. You do not state what the man's position is, so my advice is based only on your years. I want love to come to you, but, believe me, my dear, it will be all the sweeter if your judgment is more mature.

MAKE THE OVERTURES.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a girl and she is in love with me. We had been keeping steady company, but lately we got mad, and we do not speak to each other. I would like a reconciliation and so would she. B. S. L.

You are a man, and stronger to bear the burden. Take on your shoulders the burden of the blame, persuading yourself that you offended and deserve it. Tell her you alone are to blame, beg forgiveness, and promise never to offend again. If you are not willing to say "I was wrong," then you are not fitted to say "I love you."

He Wasn't Shy.

Old Lady (to cabman)—Does your horse ever shy at motors?

Cabby—Lor' bless you, no, lady; 'e didn't even shy when railway trains fust come in.

HOW ARE YOU FEEDING YOUR CHILDREN?

Are you giving them nourishing food—food that will develop their muscles, bones and flesh—food that is easily digested and cheap?

Ever thought about Spaghetti—Faust Spaghetti? Do you know that a 10c package of Faust Spaghetti contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef? Your doctor will tell you it does. And Faust Spaghetti costs one-tenth the price of meat. Doesn't that solve a big item in the high cost of living?

You probably haven't served Faust Spaghetti as often as you should because you don't know how many different ways it can be cooked—write for free recipe book to-day and you'll be surprised at the big variety of dishes you can make from this nutritious food. In 5c and 10c packages.

MAULL BROS., St. Louis, Mo.

Like Champagne.

At a meeting presided over by a burly country squire the chief speaker was a budding orator with a seat in the upper house.

Said the chairman, grasping the nervous speaker by the arm on the conclusion of his lordship's address:

"Your speech was like a glass of good champagne"—here the noble lord smiled pleasantly—"lots of froth and very dry."

Then the smile came off.

His Guide Book.

An English bishop who was an extremely busy man, and had to travel a good deal, was addressing the children of a school. He said:

"My dear children, I have been all this week traveling hither and thither through my diocese, and what book do you think has guided me? Come, now, it's a book beginning with 'B.'"

"The Bible, sir," cried a chorus of youthful voices.

"Ah, no," said the Bishop, with a twinkle in his eye. "It's Bradshaw."

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Dancing.

BEAUTY must be a harmonious whole. In the figures of the dance one ungraceful step can mar the perfection of the rhythmical charm one is trying to produce. In the physical rhythm of the human body an ugly arm or hand can spoil the spell of loveliness.

The question I always ask myself is: Why, in a world where we are all under the sway of physical lure, do we so calmly accept our own imperfections and those of our children?

We work intelligently for evolution and growth in health and strength and brain power; but beauty and grace we accept in the old superstitious fairy-tale fashion as the gift of the good fairies—and we fold our hands in the supposedly philosophical decision that either we have it or we have it not. Not at all! Either we have beauty or we set about getting it—if we have brains enough to acquire anything!

It is a simple thing to train the human body in the right way—the way it should go—in the beginning, but it is hard to alter bodily faults once they have come. However, if you have come to maturity without proper training in bodily grace, and the health and ease and beauty it brings, do not despair—instead, dedicate 30 mutes morning and evening—(one hour out of your day) to the beautiful art of the dance, and soon your reward will be great not only in terms of the pleasure of pleasant, graceful movement, but in health, beauty and a gloriously symmetrical figure, too.

Proper Training.

And make sure that your little children, and the dear young things all about you, have the proper beginnings to insure for them healthy and beautiful and graceful bodily growth.

Since an ugly arm or hand can so easily spoil the perfection of beauty, suppose, to-day, I show you how beautiful arms and hands may be evolved through proper training. It seems a far cry from dancing to beautiful arms and hands, but I shall try to show you how they may be gained in the rhythmical movement and exercise of the classical dance.

As most of the movements of the classical dance are executed with high-flexed arch and, the body's weight falling on the ball of the foot, while the instep is held in a firm high curve, they give of themselves a slender grace and power to the too-much-neglected foot. In both of the exercises I give you to-day the body must be poised lightly and springily upon the ball of the foot, inclining forward toward the toes. Walking and dancing thus will banish the flat-foot that seems to be a foe of modern high-heeled civilization.

The first picture shows one stage of a very wonderful arm exercise. Poise the weight on the balls of the feet, swaying slightly back and forward from toes to heels as the arms are raised with drooping wrists to shoulder height. When the arms are straight lines from shoulder sockets, raise the wrists and arms simultaneously until the backs of the hands just touch above the head.

A Dancing Step.

Now drop the arms slowly, with rhythmical muscular control, to the shoulder height again and turn the arms so the palms are alternately up and down parallel to the floor. Then, with palms down, sink the arms gradually to the sides, at the same time inclining the weight gradually to the entire foot. Practice this with gradually receding and increasing tempo, and finally do it as you walk forward on tiptoe, or as near as you can manage to this toe position.

The second picture is a little dancing step that can be practiced at a walking tempo until enough facility is gained to do it merrily and lightly as a dance. Advance on the ball of the feet with toes pointing outward. Incline the body forward, and keep the head a bit forward in the line of the slight curve of the back. The arms swing up in gentle curves until the elbow is about at waist height.

As the weight is swaying to the forward left foot, swing the left arm out with its line a slight droop from elbow to wrist, and the right arm in, with the forearm curving up almost perpendicular to the ground, and the wrist drooping. Swing the arms in and out thus from side to side as the weight of the body springs from foot to foot. In all these arm exercises hold the hand relaxed from the wrist, with light, pliant fingers, middle fingers fairly close together, small and index fingers gently curved and relaxed with the index finger pointing up ever so slightly.

The faithful practice of these two exercises will register for you a distinct step toward the acquisition of poetically graceful arms and hands.

The figure to the left shows the culmination of the exercise for developing beautiful arms through rhythmic motion.

To the right is shown a classical dancing step in which the hands and arms are also exercised.

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX.

AUGUST 10.—I have wondered ever since the accident why Sally did not come to me, and learned this morning. She had sailed for Europe the day before and was on the ocean the day Richards received Mrs. Allen's telegram to come at once.

I am glad she is away. If she were here and did not come I would suffer all the pangs of an abused and neglected boy, and if she came, goodness alone knows what I would say or do in my weakness. I am sure I would demand the rights of a sick man to her devotion, or fret myself into a fever if she refused.

I had a note from her to-day, written in Paris.

"My dear big brother," she wrote, "I can't tell you how alarmed I was at reading in the cable news in a Paris paper of your accident. I hope that the charge of exaggeration always made against the press is true this time. I receive daily cables regarding your condition from the doctor, and he assures me you are getting along all right. You know, my dear big brother, I need you. You are more than all the world to me.

"SALLY."

Isn't that just like a woman? She puts in that word "brother" twice to make me realize that I am no more than a brother to her, and then adds "You are more than all the world to me" to keep me crazy about her.

She has a husband, and can't have me, but she likes to be loved, and intends to keep me loving her.

Past Proofs.

In looking backward I find every reason for believing that her opposition to the widow was not actuated entirely by sisterly feelings. The look of warnings she sent me, and many, many telegrams to beware of the woman who was pursuing me, are proof to me that Sally loved me then, and I did not know it.

"You are so stupid," she said to me once, "that if a woman were in love with you and tried her best to show it you would never see it. Now, suppose, for instance, that I loved you and had been trying to tell you for more than a year."

"But you don't," I added, "you love Jack."

"Yes," she repeated, dully, "I love Jack. He is my husband, and, of course, I love him. The law many centuries ago ordained that a wife should love her husband, and I wouldn't presume to question the law."

She laughed a little bitterly. "But suppose," she repeated, "that I loved you, and told you so."

Sally is a very handsome woman. I recall that on this occasion, she was lying in a hammock, and I sat in a chair near her. We were on her porch, waiting, I believe, for Jack to return from town.

"If you loved me," I said, "I think I would make you realize as you have never realized what it is to have a man's love. But this is nonsense, for, of course, there is Jack."

"Yes," she said, "there is Jack. Max go home! You are so good-looking to-night you are dangerous."

I laughed, for I thought it was only more of her nonsense.

"Go home," she repeated. I got up and started for the steps, rather sulky to be treated so, and she caught up with me when I had descended the second step and threw both arms around my neck. "You are just two steps taller than I," she laughed. Then she pressed my face against hers and whispered that I was a dear, big stupid.

And do you know, Diary, I wonder now what it was that made me so stupid. I had been so sure for years that she belonged to Jack, not because her marriage ties bound her, but because she loved him and had no room in her thoughts for any other man, that it never entered my head that she cared for me.

I know she suffered and grew thin and haggard when Jack was gone with the widow, but if I had had any sense I believe I could have made those ten days the happiest of her life.

And now, instead of being grateful that I have been saved from wrong-doing, I look at myself with disgust because I didn't recognize my opportunities. She was humiliated because of the manner in which her husband slighted her; her heart was mine all the time, and she couldn't tell me, and I was too big a dolt to see.

When I get well, if I get well—— "You know, Max," the doctor said to me very frankly this morning, "something went wrong with your spine in that fall, and we have a fight ahead of us."

So there is an "if" connected with my future that is the biggest "if" I have met in my troubled existence. It is all right. If I win I will fight for Sally. Right or wrong, that is my intention. If I lose, I hope I will have ample warning that the struggle is going against me, so that they may get Sally here and I can slide out into the nowhere from her arms.

Takes Her Nap.

August 12—I do not suffer any great pain, only the pain of weariness, and the nurse is so patient and tender I am ashamed to complain of that.

I am bolstered up in bed a few hours every morning and write these lines at long intervals apart. It is a comfort to me to write that which I can not speak about and it shortens the long days.

Manette always takes her nap at this time of the day, the nurse is gone for her morning walk, and Richards sits beside me—patient, faithful Richards.

"If anything happens to me, Richards," I said this morning, turning to her, "you must never leave Manette. You—" I had never told anyone this before—"will find yourself a rich woman."

"I will never leave Manette under any circumstances," she said somewhat brokenly, "and I don't want to be a rich woman. I only want you to get well so that we may all go back home, and be happy there again. I am so thankful every day, Mr. Max, that I work for the kindest and best man that ever breathed."

It was a tribute that pleased me. I tried to tell her so, and the next moment she was on her knees beside my bed, sobbing with her face in the bed covers.

THE TUNNEL

Greatest Story of Its Kind Since Jules Verne

Read what the New York Times said about this great story---The Times printed an extract of it---We give you the story itself---You can begin it by reading the first installment to-morrow in The Georgian!

8 THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, AUGUST 3, 1913.

GERMANY READS OF A TUNNEL FROM AMERICA TO EUROPE

"Best Seller" in Berlin Is Bernhard Kellermann's "Der Tunnel," a Daring Flight of Fancy in Which Is Told How the Two Hemispheres Were Connected by an Oceanic Subway.

SCENE: the roof garden above the thirty-sixth floor of a colossal hotel in New York—New York of the future. There are gathered the richest magnates in the country, men who among them possess billion upon billion of dollars. One of them arrives in his aeroplane, from which he lands on the very roof garden itself. One of them is Lloyd, a veritable J. P. Morgan, renowned throughout the world as the most daring and formidable and successful of financiers.

They are gathered to learn about a plan evolved by an engineer, a man comparatively young, comparatively unknown, who needs their financial backing, Allan is his name—"Mac" Allan.

Rising modestly from his place, amid breathless attention from all those men, the money kings of the day, whom he scarcely hoped to meet, much less to interest in his project, Allan takes from his trousers pocket a piece of chalk, goes to a blackboard, and draws two lines. One, he says, is America, the other Europe.

"Between these two," he adds, "I bind myself to build, within the space of fifteen years, a submarine tunnel and to send trains through it from one continent to the other in twenty-four hours!"

The flashlights of the photographers gathered on the roof burst forth and thousands of people packed in the streets thirty-six stories below know that the first act in the great drama has begun, and roar their excitement.

Allan in the meantime has plunged into figures, taking up the plan from every angle, painting it strongly and convincingly.

He finishes by whirling the assemblage of billionaires away with him in a very madness of enthusiasm. Lloyd, king of them all, leads by subscribing $35,000,000 out of his own pocket. After him one magnate after another puts himself down for enormous sums. Allan, whose entire manhood has been devoted to the tunnel project, realizes that he is on the threshold of success.

That scene is described at the beginning of a book just published, one that is a "best seller" now in Germany—"The Tunnel," by Bernhard Kellermann. The author, who already had a number of novels to his credit, has in this latest work discarded the ordinary material of which heroes and heroines are made and daringly pressed into his service iron and steel and coal, powerful machinery, huge masses of humanity instead of individuals. Against this sombre and tremendous background men and women are arranged, to be sure, men and women of flesh and blood, but they are secondary. It is the tunnel—the great echo between America and Europe—that is the hero of Kellermann's novel and the heroine and the villain. To it all else is subservient. In describing its vastness and grimness and baleful power the German strikes into the domain of Jules Verne and H. G. Wells, and, without ever employing the supernatural or manifestly impossible, meets them on their own ground and, it must be said, comes off by no means badly.

Man's Greatest Undertaking.

After his description of the momentous meeting on the New York hotel roof garden, the novelist tells how the tunnel syndicate, formed immediately after the magnates had subscribed their millions, buys up huge tracts of land in New Jersey along the Hudson and ocean front and sets to work to rear a great city for the tunnel workmen. On the streets of New York hundreds of thousands of "extras" keep vendors posted, hour by hour, on the progress of the construction work, the greatest undertaking ever attempted by man since the beginning of the world.

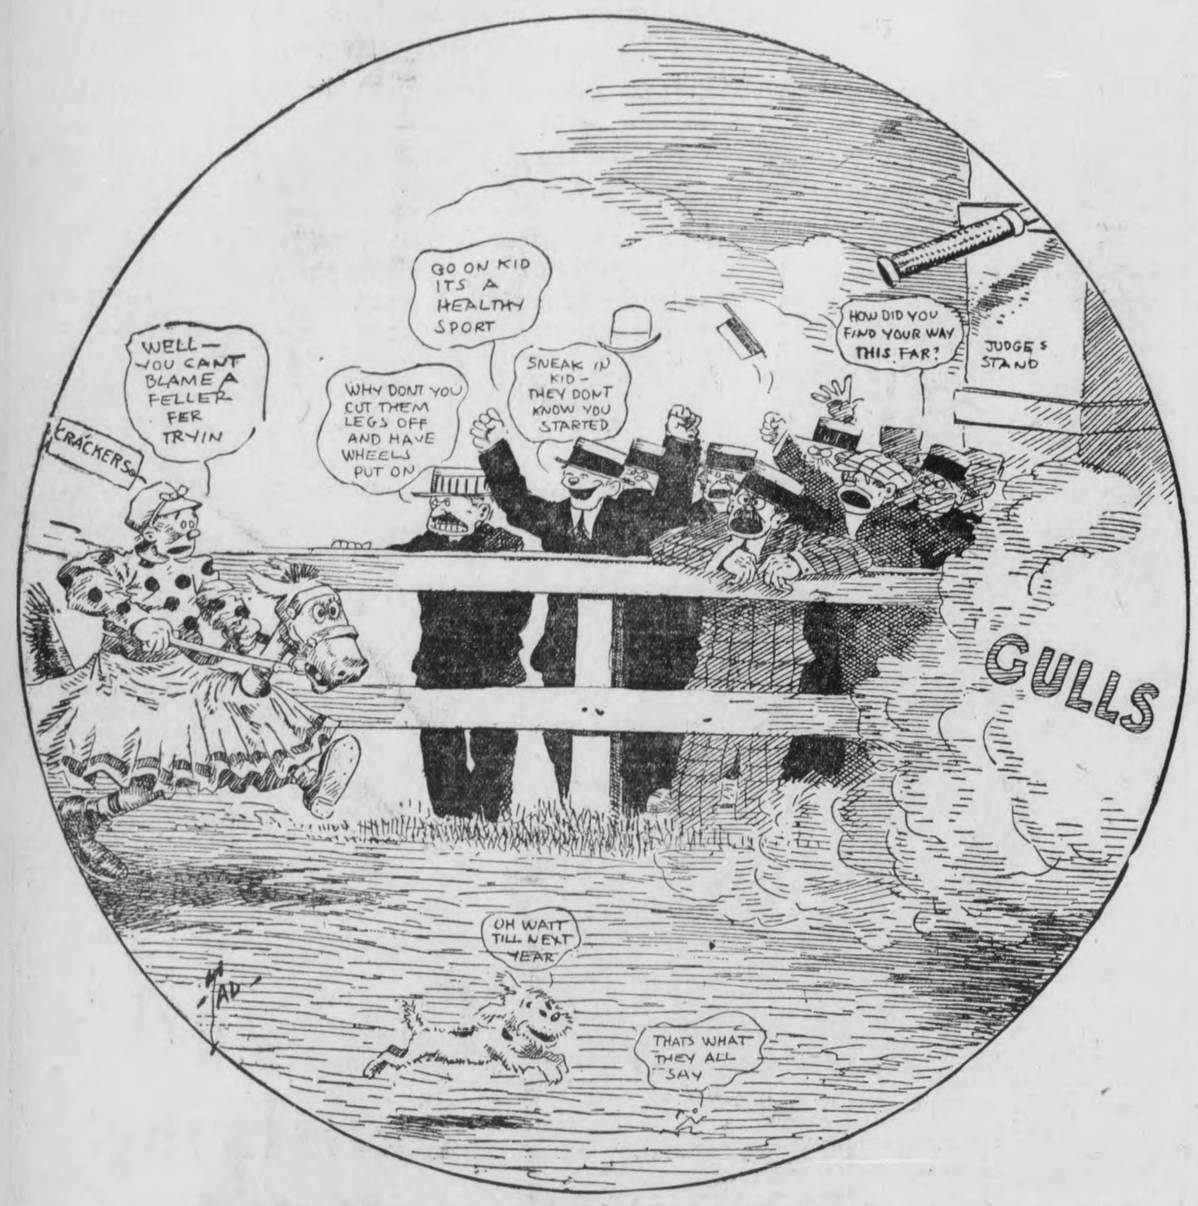

[illegible] excitement [illegible] in Europe [illegible] the tunnel workmen. ELLIOTT DENT FACES MOLES IN 2ND GAME

ELLIOTT DENT is carded as Manager Smith's pitching entry against the Barons in the second game of the series, which starts at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. Harry Chapman will be back of the wood, and the manager said this morning that he fully expected Tommy Long to be in his regular place in left field.

Tommy was out in uniform yesterday, but Manush was going so well that it was not considered necessary to try out the convalescent one. Frank had a great day with the stick yesterday and aided materially in the battering of the unfortunate Howell.

Manager Molesworth was not positive of his choice in the matter of shabman. Pitcher Ery, the recruit, got in yesterday and may get a chance to-morrow. Big Bill Prough, absent from the club by reason of a sister's illness, hadn't arrived at noon today.

There is a lot of talk around town about the prospective "birthday party" to be tendered Bill Smith at the ball park to-morrow, when "Bill Smith Day" will be observed, with a band and other trimmings, and the thousands of Atlanta fans who have pulled for the hard-working manager and rejoiced in his success will have an opportunity to show by their attendance the appreciation they feel for his efforts. Preparations are being made to handle a big crowd, as it seems everybody is going.

BOBBY GILKS, CLEVELAND SCOUT, IS IN ATLANTA

We have with us this week, or part of it, one Bobby Gilks, erstwhile popular manager of the Shreveport club in the Southern League, and now a trusted scout for the Cleveland ball club.

Bobby looks the same as ever; a quiet, alert, sun-burned man, preserving an athletic build, with no tendencies to a bay window effect, and with very keen eyes set in the deep puckers that come from years of peering over a blazing diamond.

"Just looking around," said Mr. Gilks yesterday a she sat on the back of a bench in the smoker, looking over the Crackers at practice. "I can't say anything more specific—except," he added, reflectively, "I will say they're awfully scarce."

Mr. Gilks also was of the opinion that the desperately fine coming the minor leagues were receiving this year would result more in bursting than broken batting and base-stealing records. He expects to remain here nearly all week, by the end of which his scouting will be over for the present season.

STARTS ON LONG SWIM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Harry Ellonsky, 19, of New London, Conn., sared at 12:48 a. m. to-day on the swim from Battery Park to Sady Hook, a distance of about 21 miles. Ellonsky attempted the swim some time ago, but was forced to quit the water when within a mile of his goal.

"Society Night" at Motordrome

Maddox Sweepstake Feature

REALIZING that society folk will wear thousands of dollars worth of diamonds and jewelry tonight at the motorcycle races, Manager Noon Hudson has hired 50 plainclothes men to protect his patrons. Chief of Police Beavers and Chief of Detectives Lanford will both be on hand to assist.

It is "Society Night;" at least that is the way the program is captioned And it is expected that all of Atlanta's "400" will be on hand.

Owing to the accident to Jock McNeil late Wednesday afternoon it has been decided to keep everybody away from the paddock and nobody but officials and the riders themselves will be allowed within the sacred portals of the danger lines.

The new machines that the riders have secured can be speeded up to such an extent that a blow-out or any other accident to a machine is likely to cause a spill, and, of course, danger threatens all who may be in the way of the flying "boats." Therefore, everybody will be forced to remain behind the railings.

* * *

THE feature to-night will be the Robert Maddox Sweepstakes. This is the real "sassiety" event of the season at the Saucer. It will be run in three heats. The first will be over a two-mile course, the next, four miles, and the third, six miles.

The winner will be found by the point system. The winner of each heat will secure ten points; second man, six; third, three.

The riders in this race will be Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

ANOTHER interesting event will be the special match race between Harry Glenn, the local favorite, and Harry Swartz, whose machine right now is one of the fastest at the track.

There will be two heats and maybe three. The winner will have to capture two heats. The first heat will be one mile, the second two miles, and if necessary there will be a third heat of three miles.

* * *

THE other event carded is the first of the Southern championships. It is the intention of the management to run a title race every night until the latter part of September. The riders will be scored by points. The winner of each heat each night will be credited with 25 points, the second man, 15, and the third, 5.

There will be three trial heats of one mile and the final will be two miles. The winner of each heat and the second man in the fastest heat to qualify.

* * *

FOLLOWING is the complete program:

First Event.

First Heat: Special Match Race (one mile)—Glenn and Swartz.

Second Event.

First Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Graves, Swartz and Lockner.

Third Event.

Second Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Richards, Luther and Renel.

Fourth Event.

Third Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Lewis and Glenn.

Fifth Event.

Final Heat: Southern Championships (two miles. Winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat. Twenty-five points for winner, 15 for second man and 5 for third man.)

Sixth Event.

First Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (two miles; ten points for winner, six points for second man, three for third man).—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Seventh Event.

Second Heat: Special Match Race (two miles)—Glenn and Swartz.

Eighth Event.

Second Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (four miles)—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Ninth Event.

Third Heat: Special Match Race. (If necessary.)

Tenth Event.

Third Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (six miles)—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Big Aquatic Meet at Lakewood Wednesday

There will be a big aquatic meet at Lakewood Wednesday afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock. Atlanta's fastest and strongest swimmers will take part. The meet will be held under the supervision of the United States Life Saving Corps.

The events carded are: One-mile relay race, 440-yard race, 100-yard race, 50-yard race and 25-yard race for girls. Beautiful silver cups will be the prizes offered in all of the events except the girls' race. The winner of that event will be given a cutglass powder jar.

The one-mile relay race will probably be the big feature. Porter Enslow and C. R. McDermott, of Piedmont lake, will battle Captain B. H. Schlomberg and Lieut. Tatt Walthour, of Lakewood. This struggle should be a hard-fought one from start to finish.

There will also be a life-saving demonstration, given by Captain Schlomberg.

COMPANY M WINS GAME.

CAMP PERRY, OHIO, Aug. 19.—Company M, Seventeenth Infantry, defeated the Marine baseball team here by the score of 11 to 3.

The feature of the game was the heavy hitting of Company M.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

Terry Nelson was offered $200 to "take a dive" in his recent fight with Mike Saul. And we know the young man who tried to bribe the Greek.

* * *

Get busy with the shears and paste, G. W. Krick, here are some more notes for you to place your J. Hancock above.

Dan McKetrick, the dapper litle fight manager, is going to take another trip to Europe. He has been across the big pond so often that he forgets the number of times. On his next journey to the other side he'll take with him the largest string of fighters that any manager ever piloted to a foreign country.

* * *

The boxers that little Dan will take abroad are Joe Jeannette, Frank Moran, both heavyweights; Barney Williams, a middleweight; Young Ahearn, a welterweight, and Mickey Dunn, a bantam.

* * *

Ad Wolgast has evidently thought better of another meeting with Harlem Tommy Murphy, and has decided he doesn't want any more of the Harlem boy's game. Anyway, Ad called off a proposed meeting with Tommy set for Labor Day and will, instead, take on Johnny Dundee on September 9.

* * *

Curley Jordan writes from Jacksonville, Fla., that he would dearly love to exchange wallops with Terry Nelson. When informed of Jordan's challenge, Nelson informed the writer that Jordan can have some of his game if he will post a $50 side bet. Ever since Terry stopped Mike Saul he has become one confident kid.

* * *

Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette have been practically matched by Billy Gibson to box at Madison Square Garden the latter part of September. The heavyweights are scheduled to go ten rounds.

* * *

Jess Willard, the cowboy white hope, and John "Bull" Young, promising California heavyweight, have signed articles to meet in a twenty-round go at Vernon, Cal., on August 22.

* * *

Frank Moran is down to hard training for his ten-round engagement with Al Palzer at New York next month. If Moran meets with success in his encounter with Palzer he will be entitled to a crack at Gunboat Smith.

* * *

Boston fans are showing much interest in the coming Frank Klaus-Jack Dillon set-to on August 26. These men have been recognized generally as the best of the middleweights during the last two years.

* * *

Spider Britt, the local bantamweight, is wondering when some boy around these parts will muster up enough courage to meet him in the ring. Britt cares not who it may be, just as long as he tips the beam at 116 pounds. Spider says he will wager $100 on his chances against any of them.

Tetterine Cures Eczema

I suffered agony with severe eczema. Tried six different remedies and was in despair when a neighbor told me to try Tetterine. After using $3 worth I am completely cured.

Why should you suffer when you can so easily get a remedy that cures all skin troubles—eczema, itching piles, erysipelas, ground itch, ringworm, etc. Get it to-day—Tetterine. 50c at druggists, or by mail. SHUPTRINE CO., SAVANNAH, GA.

M'CAREY SURE JEFFRIES WAS DOPED AT RENO

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19.—Promoter T. J. McCarey, for the past ten years president of the Pacific A. C., is positive in his belief that Jeffries was "doped" when he fought Jack Johnson.

"Jeffries could walk right into the ring to-day and make a 100 per cent better showing than he did at Reno," said McCarey to-day.

"I was watching Jeffries when he came into the Reno arena. He lurched down the aisle like a drunken man, bumping his shoulder against the moving picture stand. At the ringside one of his best friends, Clarence Berry, reached out to shake hands, but Jim didn't appear to recognize him.

"I AM suspicious of one man who posed as an intimate friend of Jim's prior to the fight. He bet heavily on Johnson and after the thing was over he never even went to Jeffries to speak to him, and to my knowledge has never seen Jim since.

"This fellow used to coax Jeffries away from the Monoa Springs training camp to go fishing. For hours he would keep Jim standing knee deep in the mountain streams and cause him to neglect his training.

"I believe that Jeffries was the victim of a widespread plot. The man never had a chance. He was whipped before he could put up his hands. This was one of the worst blows ever dealt the boxing game and I would pay a good sum out of my own pocket to see the mystery cleared up."

TOM JONES, manager for Ad Wolgast and Jess Willard, is another who believes that Jeffries was "doped."

"Jeffries was drugged. There is no other way to account for his reeling about in the ring before the contest," says Jones. "Jeffries doesn't care much about the matter now, but his friends would like to see the thing explained."

OUTFIELDER LET OUT.

KEOKUK, IOWA, Aug. 19.—Outfielder Corkhill was released by Keokuk and Outfielder Bromley, formerly with Mussatine, was signed.

"BATTLING" NELSON DISPOSED OF.

ROCKFORD, ILL., Aug. 19.—The Rockford (Wisconsin-Illinois League) team to-day ordered the release of Catcher "Battling" Nelson.

Jock McNeil Still Unconscious

Daring Motor Racer Is Dying

JOCK M'NEIL, the daring motorcycle racer, who was thrown from his machine while traveling at a speed of 80 miles an hour, is still unconscious at the Grady Hospital. The attending physicians have little hope for his recovery.

It was McNeil's own carelessness that caused his fall. He reported at the track yesterday afternoon under the influence of liquor, and after much wrangling with the other riders he insisted on taking a whirl.

He borrowed Morty Graves' stock machine and immediately after starting ascended to the white boards at the top of the track. The white boards are perpendicular and it takes a speed of at least 80 miles an hour to hold the machine.

The first time around his motor broke through the boards in two places, but McNeil refused to come down. The next time around he rode right into one of the holes that he had smashed on his first trip, and was thrown 50 feet in the air. He came down face first.

An ambulance was called and he was rushed to Grady Hospital. The extent of his injuries are:

The skin was peeled from the right side of his face.

A glaring hole in his skull that may affect the brain.

Right shoulder dislocated and badly torn.

Deep gash in right thigh, just above the hip.

Right leg broken just above the knee.

Internal injuries, the exact nature of which has not been fully determined.

ST. LOUIS BOWLING TOURNEY TO START ON NOVEMBER 29

ST. LOUIS, MO., Aug. 19.—The Middle West Tournament Company was incorporated here to promote the annual Mid-West bowling tournament scheduled to begin in this city November 29.

The following officers were elected:

President, Edmond C. Koeln; vice president, Wooster Lambert; treasurer, H. C. Menne, and secretary, Morris D. Clay.

The fact that the tournament this year is open to bowlers from all parts of the United States is expected to result in a large entry list.

VARDON AND RAY WILL HAVE HARD BATTLE--EVANS

By "Chick" Evans.

HARRY VARDON and Edward Ray, two of the foremost golfers in the world, are now on the ocean on their way to America. Wilfred Reid, another high-class British professional, is with them. It has been thirteen years since Vardon came to this country and made an almost clean sweep of everything. Then came Duncan in 1911, and he, too, made an excellent showing. It is my prediction, however, that Vardon and Ray will find a country of golfers vastly superior to anything that they have pictured. Since 1900, the year of the previous invasion, our country has taken tremendous strides in golf. Progress has been made not only in the addition of thousands of new clubs, but also in the standard of the game. A few years ago 80 was considered very good indeed, but now it is merely fair and the 80 golfer takes no special credit to himself.

Will Arrive This Week.

Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, our two most distinguished professional visitors, will be over here this week. Previous to the open championship, which will take place during the third week of September at Brookline, near Boston, they will play exhibition matches all over the East, and after the open they will journey Westward.

Fine players as they are, I think that they will have a difficult road to travel, for not only will our professionals give them a run, but there are some of our amateurs who may be able to quicken their pace a little. I hope they will like our courses and our golfers. Truly, we have a country-wide array of courses on which much money and time have been spent.

Our golfers are fine players, and good sportsmen, and the coming of the British visitors will do us a tremendous amount of good. Thousands will watch their play and be benefited by many an idea caught as they watch the execution of difficult shots by these masters of the game. Their scores will serve as an indicator by which we can know exactly what progress we have made in our own game.

Exhibitions to Benefit All.

Their coming will introduce into this country professional exhibition matches—a prominent element of British golf of which we know but little. We have not much of this now and there is no doubt we need more. It is something of which a country can easily have too much, but it can be of the greatest benefit to all players who wish to improve their game. It will give to them throughout the country an opportunity to see the best shots played by the best players, and this practical exposition is of more value than all the lessons and books of instruction in the world.

Of course, all professional golf is a money-making affair. For an exhibition match of 36 holes, occupying a day, I understand Vardon and Ray are asking $600. This seems an enormous amount of money to ask for the privilege of seeing a golf game, and it is difficult to see how they will be able to get many clubs to stage such an expensive exhibition. The best way would be to charge, say, a dollar for admission, and let the club stand for the rest. Most people would gladly give up that much to see these world masters of the links. They are like the musicians who have spent a lifetime in practice.

Grand Defense Aids Gil Price

Mates Star in Field and at Bat

By O. B. Keeler.

THE value of co-operation stuck out all over the opening game with the Moles Monday. There were so many points that to the Moles the Cracker club must have resembled a hedgehog.

There was no chance for Gil Price to lose that game. So he won, 7 to 2.

But Gil had as his three assistants luck, stuff and beautiful fielding.

And that is pretty nearly good enough to win for anybody.

* * *

DON'T take this as meaning that Gil was saved against his will from a beating. The southpaw had something on the ball all the time, up to the ninth inning. And whenever he got it over the platter, the problem was simple.

The Moles simply couldn't hit.

But Gil was having one of his famous struggles with the control lever, which persisted in jamming on him, usually after two men were out.

In other words, Gil's marksmanship was somewhat to the fritz. But, supported by the class of fielding his mates put up, and his own stuff on the ball, his erratic periods merely served to liven up a long game that certainly was in need of livening.

* * *

THERE was some hitting, too.

The way the Cracker attack was working, Gil could have been quite a bit more to the Carnegie with his passes, and still got by with it.

* * *

MR. WELCHONCE was excessively prominent in the attack. Four runs came riding in on his two blows, one for three and the other for two sacks. Harry also scored a run himself. Messrs. Agler, Manush, Smith and Bisland also deserve special mention in the list of sluggers, the first pair getting three hits apiece and the others being content with a couple each.

* * *

BUT savage as was the artillery, the real clubby spirit was shown in the way Gil Price's help came through with the defense. The help behaved as if it liked Gil fine.

And it must be said that Gil seemed to think pretty well of himself, too. He pulled as pretty a pair of fielding stunts as one would care to see. Once he raced toward first on a slow hit, bounding high, scooped the pill in his meat hand and sprinted over the bag—and there were Moles digging for home, with two out, at the time. And once he made a grand play on a difficult trap-bounder, following the pick-up with a fine peg.

GIL wasn't lonely in his display of defensive power.

Chapman nipped Mayer off first by a peach peg in the second; Agler and Smith made runaway circus catches of short flies—particularly Joe's catch of Marcan's foul in the seventh—and Calvo starred with a brilliant running catch of a low line drive in the fifth, and a rifle-shot peg to the plate in the ninth, cutting down the speedy Marcan, who was trying to score from second on a sharp hit to the Cuban's territory.

* * *

BY the way, there was a moral force acting hand in glove with Calvo in the matter of outfield pegging.

In the third inning Carroll, first up, filed to the Cuban deep in right. Calvo took the ball easily and whipped it to third, low and fast, and with wonderful accuracy.

It looked a bit like showing off. But later in the game, when the Cuban nipped Marcan's line drive with McDonald on third, McDonald stuck right there, not caring to try out the little fellow's whip. His throw on McBride's single in the ninth, when the Moles were beginning to bite us, was a beauty, and it nipped Marcan for the last out as he came in from second.

* * *

AND in the meantime, Mique Finn's wrecking crew was resting.

The margin of safety for the Gulls, therefore, stuck at seven full games this morning.

The Billikens, who also rested, retained second place by a margin of two games.

Neither Billies nor Gulls are scheduled to-day.

Chance to pick up a little honest change in the percentage column—what?

The troubles of the Athletics were augmented in Detroit, where the champions lost. But the Quakers found hope in the fact that the Naps were beaten by the Senators.

The battle of the two Sox resulted in the White shutting out the Red in a 1 to 0 contest.

* * *

Ivory baseball by the Cardinals in the first game in Brooklyn had Manager Huggins on the point of apoplexy yesterday. With Smith on first base, Fisher pushed a bunt. Mowrey picked up the ball and threw it to Konetchy. Konetchy fitted failed to cover third, Smith the situation at third, and Mowrey, raced with him. Konetchy threw the leather across the diamond regardless of the situation and third, and Mowrey, beaten to the bag by Smith, could not turn in time to catch the ball, so took it on the seat of his trousers.

WILLIE LEWIS DEVOTED TO THE BOXING GAME

PARIS, Aug. 19.—Willie Lewis, the white American pugilist, who is now attracting as much attention at the Follies Bergeres as Jack Johnson did, said to-day:

"Boxing is not merely my profession, but my devotion. I believe that it develops any sound individual's muscular and mental faculties more than any other athletic sport."

Regarding the rumors that he intended divorcing his wife in order to marry Comtesse De Villeneuve, Lewis said:

"Though I greatly admire her frankness, I never have spoken to her and you can contradict these rumors."

DANNY GOODMAN ROUNDING INTO SHAPE FOR BOUTS

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 19.—Danny Goodman, local battler, who is training for two ring contests, is rapidly rounding into grand shape and predicts a double win. Danny is down to 130 pounds and says he never felt better.

On August 28, at Hibbing, Minn., Goodman meets Y Tognuoahsm- eta Goodman meets Young Thomas, and on September 1, at Superior, Wis., Johnny Tillman is to be his foe.

SOX YOUNGSTER THROWS WITH EITHER HAND

By Bill Bailey.

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 19.—The White Sox have a young outfielder who is destined to become one of the curiosities of the American League.

Edward Rausch is his name and the thing that makes him wonderful is the fact that he heaves the ball from deep right with his left hand and from deep left field with his right.

We've all heard about the ambidextrous ball players. Away back when Anson was a recruit there were a couple of fellows who pitched with either hand. But it is doubtful whether there is one fan in a hundred who ever gazed upon a youngster who could throw as well with one hand as with the other.

Manager Callahan didn't know that he was getting a curiosity as well as a ball player when he purchased Rausch from the Evansville club of the Central League. The youngster reported on Friday. The Sox were at morning practice when the youth reported. You thought it was too late in the season for morning practice? Manager Callahan is still in the hunt for whatever he can obtain and is determined to finish just as high as possible. Which accounts for the fact that the men were being drilled in everything pertaining to baseball.

Sent to Right Field.

As was remarked, the Sox were at morning practice when the youngster reported. He was handed a suit and told to go out and chase fly balls. He did. He went to right.

"Who's the youngster?" went the query.

"Oh, that's young Rausch," from Kid Gleason. It's the duty of the assistant manager to work with the men, and especially the youngsters, at the a. m. drill.

"Left hand thrower?" it was queried.

"It would seem so," was the answer of Gleason. It also was apparent, for the youngster was shooting the balls in on a line from right field and he was employing his left hand.

Pretty soon he went to left field and played there awhile. One of the fellows shot a line drive out there. And then everybody stood about in amazement. For the youngster returned the ball with his right hand. And he shot it in on a line, too.

"Hey!" howled Gleason. He didn't want any mistake about it, and he did want some information. In trotted the youngster.

"Are you a right or left hand thrower?" queried the assistant coach.

"Don't make any difference to me," answered the youngster. "When I play right field I throw with my left hand. When I'm in left I throw with my right."

"Don't make any difference to you, eh?" queried Gleason.

"None at all. Why?".

"Oh, I just wanted to know." It takes a lot to keep the assistant manager from retorting, but there was none on his tongue this time.

Youngster Gives Promise.

The youngster is twenty years of age and if he can hit he will be there. There is no question about his speed. He worked out in left field before the second game against the Highlanders. He was going back as fast as the ordinary outfielder comes in. And he was grabbing the balls, which is more to the point. They tried him out in the preliminary batting practice and he slammed said sphere to several parts of the lot. Here another surprise awaited the Sox. They naturally supposed that a fellow who could throw with either hand would bat from either side of the plate. Nothing doing. Rausch is a left-hand hitter and he doesn't swing from the right side under any condition.

Rausch was one of the first men purchased by the South Siders and cost $3,000. He hit in the neighborhood of .315 in the Central League. From the way he handled himself in the field it looks a certainty that he possesses the speed necessary to beat out many infield hits.

No question but that Rausch comes well fortified, so far as fielding is concerned. Many managers have an idea that a right fielder should be a left-hand thrower, upon the same theory that a southpaw thrower is supposed to have it on a right-hander at first base.

"Rausch throws equally well with either hand," said Manager Callahan. "It's my opinion, however, that he would do better if he decided to throw with either his right or left hand and then stick to it."

KETCHEL VS. JOHNSON.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Steve Ketchel and Eddie Johnson, of Denver, are scheduled to meet in a twenty-round battle in Pueblo, Colo., September 15, at 133 pounds.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

HOW SWEET.
(By Joe Tinker.)

How sweet to be a manager and lose
a lot of sleep
To pull a bunch of boneheads from
the bottom of the heap—
To patch a broken-down machine and
get it running fit
And then to see the owner throw a
monkey wrench in it!
It's bad enough to run a team that
plays in Cincinnati,
But this here interference stuff
would drive a fellow batty.

In other words, Mr. Tinker insists that he is the only man who has a right to tinker with his team.

Those who know Sherwood Magee aver that Mr. Tincup is not the only Indian on Dooin's team.

Not that we desire to discourage a promising young athlete, but a Tincup is a first cousin to a can.

It is rumored that John Evers thinks as much of Mike Mitchell as Mike Mitchell thinks of John Evers.

SOMETHING LIKE THE CUB OWNER.

There was a young magnate named
Farrell
With money stacked up by the barrel.
He said: "I will win
Though it costs all my tin
And they force me to pawn my ap-
parel." V. S. B.

Conundrum: If it costs $10 to call Bill Klem a catfish, how much would it cost to call him a sardine?

Paul Westerlund, a Californian, won a medal by running a 31-mile marathon race up the side of a mountain range. Up to date Paul has not won any medals for consecutive thought.

If Frank Navin were to accept that $100,000 offer for Ty Cobb we fear that Clark Griffith would break all existing sprinting records on his way to the cyclone cellar.

Arthur Pelky announces that he will do his training in Calgary. This shows that even a rude and uncultured pugilist often clings to the fond recollections of former days.

Mr. Pelky is the youth who swore that he had retired from the fight game forever and forever. But he changed his mind when he learned that the only other way he could earn a living was to work.

Mr. Mitchell, athlete, accuses Mr. O'Loughlin, umpire, of having used vulgar language on the field. And yet, the fact that a man is an umpire is sufficient cause to swear.

England feels as badly over the departure of Mrs. Pankhurst as a pitcher who has just recovered from a losing streak.

In a way, Ralph Comstock, whom the Sox have bought from the Minneapolis team, is one of the most remarkable athletes extant. It is said that he is the only member of the team whose grandchildren are not voting.

THE WHITE HOPE.

He had a fist as hard as a rock, like-
wise an iron jaw.
Without a doubt he was the hardest
man I ever saw.
Quoth he: "I got my training as a player with McGraw."

THE WORM.

"The worm will turn," a lad once
spoke.
He was a wise old guy.
He was an educated bloke
And what he said got by.
"The worm will turn," he said, and
men
Spoke lightly of his name,
But all interred the hammer when
The Pelicans won a game.

Not that we desire to inflame the thoughts of our yellow brethren, but the report that Ah Chung whipped Pat McCarty reveals the fact that the Boxer outrages have not ceased.

The 100-mile marathon race at Bellingham, Wash., reminds us that some men are nuttier than others.

Joe Boehling is now engaged at the unpleasant task of demonstrating that whatever goes up must come down.

Reading Mike Mitchell's tale of his recent job, one is led to suspect that being a Cub is like being in jail—only more so.

Charlie Ebbets announced yesterday morn that he would spend $60,000 to strengthen his team. We have not any inside information, but we have heard a well grounded rumor that to-day he will dedicate the $60,000.

Looking over Mr. Griffith's statement, one is led to suspect that Messrs. Altrock and Schaefer are not the only comedians on the Washington payroll.

The report that Hap Myers stole four bases off Jimmy Archer in one afternoon reminds us that several persons could have outsprinted Arthur Duffey if Arthur had sustained a broken leg.

Ben Tincup, the Indian pitcher who has been purchased by the Phillies, is on the wrong team. Imagine what a receiver Larry McLean would be for Tincup.

Not that it is any of our business, but the gent who picks out the names for country clubs must be related to the citizen who perpetrates the monickers for sleeping cars and motor boats.

Joe Tinker is not dissatisfied with his job or anything like that, but he has a hunch that as a baseball magnate Garry Merrmann is a good judge of wine.

NOT O'LOUGHLIN.

There was an ump in our town
And he was wondrous wise.
He spoke his words in such a way
That men could recognize.

STARRVILLE WINS.

PORTERDALE, GA., Aug. 19.—Porterdale lost to Starrsville yesterday 4 to 3. The feature of the game was the sensational work of "Kid" Harwell, who caught a grand game for the visitors. L. Cook also featured by his batting. Rocquemore fanned fourteen batters.

NO-HIT, NO-RUN GAME.

SUJERIOR, WIS., Aug. 19.—In yesterday's Northern Leagues game at Superior, Cy Dahlgren, of Superior, blanked Grand Forks without a hit or a run. Dahlgren was with the Cincinnati Reds this spring and was given an unconditional release after the training trip.

AUTOMOBILE OWNERS, ATTENTION!

No more worry about punctures. PUNCTURE SEALO solves the trouble. PUNCTURE SEALO injected into your tubes will seal any puncture up to a twenty-penny nail, will preserve and lengthen the life of your tubes and lessen blow-outs by eliminating rim cuts. It will not stick the tubes to the casing, will not gum, become hard or evaporate, is not affected by heat or cold weather, does not interfere with the removal of tubes or with vulcanizing.

PUNCTURE SEALO pays for itself many times a season by preventing punctures and rim cuts.

We charge less for PUNCTURE SEALO than any of our imitators. Good territory open to agents who write at once. We are in business to stay.

SAVE TEMPER, TROUBLE, TIME AND TIRES BY USING PUNCTURE SEALO.

Motorcycles $2.50
Automobiles, 30 by 3, 34 by 4.....$7.00 per car
Other sizes in proportion.

Atlanta, Ga., 7, 17, '13.

Puncture Sealo Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Gentlemen—I have examined your preparation for the stoppage of punctures in rubber, "PUNCTURE SEALO," and have found that it contains no substance injurious to rubber. It has a decided advantage in that it may be used in the coldest weather without freezing.

Yours very truly,

MAKE MONEY WITH POULTRY.

AMERICAN POULTRY is a magazine devoted entirely to helping earnest men and women make a financial success of poultry raising. Its staff of writers is composed entirely of those who have made a practical, instead of theoretical, success of poultry farming, and who are glad to pass on the results of their hard-earned experience to AMERICAN POULTRY readers. There are many pitfalls in the path of the novice which may be entirely avoided by those who will follow the teachings set forth in this magazine. It fully explains how to make a start, how to construct houses, coops, and other devices, how to get a large egg yield, how to cure and prevent disease, how to exhibit, how to get the top price for eggs, how to use incubators and hundreds of other points which every one wishes to know. It explains the famous secret system through which poultrymen have become rich and afterwards solid for hundreds of dollars. AMERICAN POULTRY is a large, handsomely illustrated, monthly journal, well printed on fine paper, and should be found on file in the home of every poultry lover. No beginner in the poultry business should think of being without it. It will save him many times the small subscription price. The advanced poultryman will also find it of great value; the articles being varied in their scope.

SPECIAL OFFER. The regular price of AMERICAN POULTRY is 50c per year, but in order to introduce it to several thousand new readers, we will, for a short time, give a large 200-page poultry book, which is a complete guide in the poultry business, absolutely free to every one sending 50c for a yearly subscription or $1.00 for a three-year-subscription to AMERICAN POULTRY. A trial six months' subscription (without book) will be sent for 25c. Never has so much been offered for so small a sum. Advantage of this offer should be taken at once.

BOTH PHONES 2568.

IF OUR CUSTOMERS living on the North and South Sides place their orders before 9 o'clock and the ones in Inman Park and West End before 2 o'clock, they will be delivered the same day the orders are given. We are trying to give the very best service possible, and if our customers will bear in mind the hours that our deliveries leave the store it will insure prompt service.

IT IS ABSOLUTELY necessary for chickens to have green food during the winter. This can easily be supplied if you will plant out a small patch of rye and rape. They both grow very rapidly and will furnish an abundance of green food all the winter. Now is the time to plant.

THIS IS THE MOULTING SEASON, and that means that the hens should be fed a good tonic. Pratt's Poultry Regulator and Conkey's Laying Tonic insure a quick and complete moult, and that means plenty of eggs during the fall and winter, when they bring the high prices; 25c, 50c and $1 package.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage.
It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen-acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Lease on Peachtree Four Years, $26,250

Change in Elite Theater—Big Loan Deed—Spring Street Record. Hugh Richardson Sells.

Announcement of a central Peachtree lease at $26,250 for four years proved interesting in real estate circles Tuesday. Thomas L. Cooper, owner, has leased through William A. Fuller, trustee of the estate of O. A. Farrar, bankrupt, 36 Peachtree, the location of the Elite motion picture theater, on a sliding scale. The rental for the first year from September 1 it at the rate of $512.50 a month; for the second year, $525 a month; for the third year, $550 a month, and for the fourth year, $600 a month.

The lessee is A. O. T. Briers, who has bought out the picture show equipment and the privilege of leasing for $7,900. The terms on the same were one-third cash and the balance in three and six months, at 7 per cent.

Loan Deed $30,000.

Mrs. Ethel Toy Lamar has given the State Mutual Life Assurance Company, of Worcester, Mass., a loan deed on No. 5 Decatur street, 36 feet southeasterly of Peachtree street, for $30,000. The term is five years at 6 per cent. This property is occupied by and adjoins the north wall of the Kimball House. The frontage is about 25 1-2 feet, and the depth about 76.

Loans continue to be made on Atlanta property. The Life Insurance Company of Connecticut was also represented in Tuesday's loan column.

Cottage Changes Hands.

I. B. Williamson has sold to a client of the Green Realty Company a six-room cottage at the southeast corner of Woodward avenue and Hardin street, 50 by 50, for $1,800 cash.

Bellwood Avenue Auction.

Properties at Nos. 161, 215, 217, 219 and 221 Bellwood avenue, consisting of four cottages and a storehouse, will be sold at auction Wednesday by the T. B. Lumpkin Realty Company, through O. G. Clark, auctioneer. The sale will start at No. 215 Bellwood at 3:30 p. m.

Building Permits.

$2,000—C. B. McDaniel, Jr., 260 S. Moreland avenue, one-story frame dwelling. J. F. Howell.

$250—Fred Garrow, 38 Marietta street, alterations. Day work.

$250—C. P. Hill, 189 Windsor street, repairs. V. M. Barrett Construction Company.

$1,350—A. G. Rhodes, 471-475 Houston street, build two one-story frame dwellings. Day work.

$420—Woodward Avenue Baptist Church, Woodward and Cherokee avenues, additions. D. M. Argo.

$225—B. B. Broswell, 89 Inman circle, additions. V. M. Barrett Construction Company.

$150—T. Bearden, 16 Echo street, add room. Day work.

Record for Spring Street.

A record price has been established for Spring street between Harris and Baker streets. Jesse Ward has sold to relatives his one-third interest in a parcel on the east side of the street, 45 by 150 feet, for $600 a front foot, making $27,000 for the whole parcel. The buyers already owned the other two-thirds. The transaction was handled direct.

Hugh Richardson Sells.

Hugh Richardson has sold to J. B. Frost the stone bungalow at the southwest corner of Eleventh and Cypress streets, east of the Frank D. Holland apartments, for $22,500. As security for $5,000 Mr. Richardson took a mortgage on the place.

Peachtree Road Sale.

Peachtree road north of Buckhead continues to bring good prices. The northwest corner of Piedmont avenue, for instance, has been transferred from Mrs. M. C. Johnson to a client of Homer McAfee, of the Haas & McIntyre Agency, for $18,000, or at the rate of $75 a front foot.

The frontage on Peachtree is 240 feet and on Piedmont avenue 485 feet.

Preparing Church Plans.

W. T. Downing, the well-known architect, is preparing plans for the new First Presbyterian Church and manse at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Seventeenth streets, the total cost to be about $110,000. It is probable that work will be started within the next few weeks, since the Presbyterians will not wait to sell their old property on the south side of Marietta street, between Spring and Forsyth streets.

The Peachtree lot is 200 by 261 feet and cost approximately $47,000. Numerous people have tried to buy it at a great advance. The Marietta street lot is about 90 feet wide and is held for $180,000. This lot was given to the church by the late William Lowry, father of Colonel Robert J. Lowry, and W. A. Moore.

Small Sales Total $30,700.

The L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency has reported the following sales during the past week:

Six lots in the Clairemont Park sub-division at Decatur, $6,250; eight in Peachtree Highlands, $8,450; three in Woodlawn Park, $2,250; one in Oakwood Terrace, $850.

Mrs. Gussie May Bridges bought one of the corners of Moreland and North avenues, 50 by 150 feet, for $2,850; Mrs. Ella C. Freeman bought one of the corners of Moreland avenue and Hume street, 50 1-2 by 130, for $2,600 cash, and F. C. and B. C. Wilkerson bought one of the corners of Ira street and West Georgia avenue, 27 by 115, for $550, all through J. E. Pritchett.

Dixon Andrews bought 130 Tift avenue, 50 by 150, for $2,400, and J. T. Gardner the house and lot at No. 125 Bryant street, 50 by 100, for $2,750, through E. F. Culpepper.

Mrs. J. O. Hipp bought through Miss Maud Hampton from Lounsford & Bumbaugh, lot 4, block C of the Peachtree Highlands sub-division for $1,750, and will build a $4,000 bungalow. The sellers made $150, having bought 30 days ago.

The total of the above sales is $30,700.

Enhancement in Lot.

A lot that a few years ago was used for pasturage purposes and that could have been bought for $100 a front foot has just changed hands at $300. This is on the north side of East Linden street, across from the Davis-Fischer Sanitarium, and also across from the James R. Gray property which fronts on Howard and Linden streets. It was bought by John W. Zuber from Daniel Brothers for $25,000. The lot is 85 by 260 feet, cornering on an alley which runs northward to North avenue.

Mr. Zuber may build a house on the location, according to report.

PHYSICIAN SLAIN IN HOME HE INVADED

Unwritten Law Plea of Alabama Man Who Killed Masonic Brother.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 19.—Dr. Frank Walton, well known and prominent physician employed by the Woodward Iron Company at Mulga, a mining camp in the western part of the county, is dead as a result of three pistol bullets fired by Gid T. Weaver, a young electrician employed by the same company.

The shooting took place at the home of Weaver when the latter returned unexpectedly. The accused fired three shots, one striking Dr. Walton in the breast and the other two in the side of the back. The wife of Weaver grabbed hold of the weapon and the fourth shot went wild.

Weaver surrendered and was brought to the county jail here today. His preliminary trial is set for Saturday before a justice at Mulga. The unwritten law will be the plea.

The body of Dr. Walton was brought to Birmingham for interment.

Both deceased and accused were members of the same Masonic lodge.

THE WEATHER.
Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The indications are that the weather will be generally fair to-night and Wednesday in the States east of the Mississippi River, except of a narrow region in the middle districts, where local thundershowers are probable.

The temperatures will fall in the North and Middle Atlantic States and the weather will be moderately cool in all the northeastern sections on Wednesday.

General Forecast.

General forecast until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Georgia—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Virginia—Unsettled, local showers to-night or Wednesday; cooler in north portion to-night.

North Carolina and South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Florida—Generally fair in north, showers in south portion to-night or Wednesday.

South Carolina—Nearly normal temperature and sunshine prevailed. More rain over the greater portion of the State would be beneficial.

North Carolina—The temperature was below normal in the eastern and slightly above in the western portion of the State. Day temperatures were moderate and the nights cool. Cloudy and showery weather prevailed in the first three days, followed by clear the remainder of the week, except that light showers occurred throughout the week in the extreme western portion of the Stat. Sun ample.

Tennessee—High temperatures continued. The weather was generally fair, except that scattered showers relieved drouthy conditions in a few localities. Rain is needed generally.

Florida—Showers occurred almost daily, being locally heavy in portions of the peninsula. The rainfall was fairly well distributed, except in some of the east coast counties, where drouth prevailed. Temperature was near normal.

Summary of Weekly Weather Is Bullish

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—There were small areas with more than 2 inches of rainfall in some of the central and eastern cotton-growing States. The greatest weekly precipitation, 4.43 inches, occurred at New Orleans, and there was 4.20 inches at Rome, Ga. Mean temperatures were above normal, except that there was a deficiency in the central and eastern portions of North Carolina, Northeastern South Carolina, Southern Georgia, the central portion of Northern Florida, the greater portion of Louisiana and the extreme southeastern portion of Eastern Texas.

The greatest excess in temperatures was 7 to 9 degrees in Oklahoma and Northwestern Arkansas. The deficiencies in temperatures were slight.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 72 to 82 degrees over the eastern, from 80 to 84 degrees over the central, and from 82 to 86 degrees over the western portion of the cotton region. The lowest mean temperature, 72 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 86, occurred in Oklahoma, Northwestern Arkansas and Northern and Western Texas. The precipitation was light over the greater portion of the cotton region, and there was considerable areas in the western portion and small areas in other portions where there was no precipitation.

By states:

Georgia — Temperatures continued above the normal, but weather was cooler toward the close of the week. Light showers occurred from the 14th to 16th, but the amounts were irregularly distributed and below normal. The sunshine was ample and conditions were generally favorable.

Mississippi—The mean temperature averaged slightly above normal. Showers occurred every day except Sunday, but mostly in the southern portion. The rainfall is still insufficient at many points in the northern and central portions of the State. Sunshine was ample.

Arkansas—Weather was moderately warm in the eastern, but unusually hot in the western district. Sunshine was above normal. Light, scattered and beneficial showers occurred over 50 per cent of the State, but rain is needed in some localities.

Texas—Temperatures were moderate along the coast, but exceeded the normal elsewhere. Local showers occurred on several days, three-fifths of the reporting stations receiving moisture. Good amounts of precipitation occurred in several of the central and southern counties, but elsewhere the amounts were too light to be of much benefit, and more rain is needed. The sunshine was abundant.

Oklahoma—Weather was intensely hot during the week. Scattered thundershowers which occurred did not relieve the serious drouth.

Alabama—The temperature averaged 2 to 5 degrees above normal during the first and middle parts of the week and was nearly normal at the close of the week. Widely scattered showers occurred, but the precipitation was unevenly distributed and generally there was a considerable deficiency. There was no rain at many stations. Sunshine was abundant.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Splendid Bill at Forsyth.

Willie Weston, Grace DeMar and Toots Paka and her Hawaiian musicians are running a dead heat for first honors in the fine vaudeville offering at the Forsyth this week. First-nighters found it hard to pick the winner.

The Hawaiian musicians repeat the big hit they made on their previous visit to Atlanta. The guitar playing of one of the men brings down the house and Miss Paka's "hula hula" dance wins a big hand. The weird native songs are exceptionally pleasing.

Willie Weston, in a class by himself as a character singer, has new songs this year, and his act goes big. He was assisted at the piano by Howard Winburn, the Atlanta pianist; Mike Bernard, Weston's regular partner, being ill.

Miss DeMar, who sings well some songs that are full of "pep" to say the least, and captures the gallery in her last number when she exhibits a very shapely figure in tights.

The other acts on the bill are above the average in quality. Kennedy and Rooney have a skit that keeps the audience chuckling; Foster and Lovell win favor with songs and nonsense; the Nikko troupe of acrobats have a Japanese who walks up and down stairs on his head as an added feature, and the Pathe pictures are unusually interesting.

War Picture at the Grand.

Interesting light is thrown on the threatening Mexican situation by a remarkable motion picture, "Victory," at the Grand Theater this week. While the scene would fit any Spanish-American country, the acute conditions in Mexico immediately suggest that country, and the analogy is stronger still when the President of the Republic is assassinated and the crux of the drama develops with an attack on the United States battleship Utah.

Woven through the play is the love drama of a young United States naval lieutenant and the daughter of the United States Ambassador. All modern implements of warfare, including the hydroplane and the wireless, are demonstrated in action, and stirring battles are fought. The picture was made through a special permission and cooperation of the United States Navy Department.

Policeman Sews Up Slit in Skirt

AYDEN, N. C., Aug. 19.—A pretty 19-year-old girl appeared in the streets here wearing a generously slit skirt. She did it on a wager. A crowd of hooting men and boys followed her.

A policeman escorted the girl to a nearby millinery shop and ordered the slit sewed up. He called a carriage and sent the girl home. Then he chased the crowd away.

40 Perish as Alaska Steamship Founders

SEATTLE, Aug. 19.—Reports from Juneau, Alaska, where the steamer State of California sank to-day, estimated that 33 passengers and 7 members of the crew of the boat were dead. Forty-three passengers have been accounted for following the rescue by the steamer Jefferson.

The Jefferson will arrive here Thursday, bringing the rescued passengers and the bodies of ten victims of the steamer wreck.

BULLS IN CONTROL OF COTTON REINS

Liverpool and Shorts Big Buyers on Western Weather Conditions—Bears Cautious.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Cables from Liverpool were surprisingly strong today, with the result that prices were 5 to 15 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. The Mexican "war scare" did not result in any pressure. This, coupled with the absence of rains in the western belt of any consequence and the Dallas wire of hot and clear weather, encouraged sufficient buying to send prices still higher. Trading was active and shorts appeared to be nervous over prospects for a bullish weekly crop report covering Texas and Oklahoma.

The feeling is still more bullish in the absence of rains in the western belt and the bull forces were inclined to predict higher prices. Liverpool was said to be a good buyer in this market; also spot interests.

During the forenoon the market displayed an inflexible tone. Offerings were extremely light and scattered, resulting in prices increasing the advance 12 to 16 points from the previous close. August at the opening showed the largest gain, but later settled around 11.67, against an opening of 11.70.

The detailed weather for Texas and the weekly weather report, which was construed as bullish brought out buying and a few points rally followed. Those who are advocating the bull side are advising friends to buy at the present level.

The bearish element are awaiting further developments in the western belt and as soon as there are signs of good rains it is very likely there will be some good selling.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: August, 11.66; October, 11.17; December, 11.10; January, 10.99; March, 11.08.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: August, 11.67; October, 11.18; December, 11.16; January, 11.17; March, 11.24.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 19.—The map shows a rather general rainfall over the southern half of Texas during the past 24 hours, but generally light, except at Beeville and Lulling. None in the southern half or Oklahoma; part cloudy in southern Arkansas, west Tennessee and the Texas coast. Generally fair elsewhere; no rain. Indications are for part cloudy with probably some scattered showers in the Western States; cooler in the northern half of the belt; generally fair weather with moderate temperatures over the eastrn half of the belt is favorable, as an excess of rain was feared.

Liverpool came in stronger than expected and quoted spots 4 points higher; sales, 8,000 bales. Cables report Russia and the continent buying. Political news is less favorable. London says that a third war in the Balkans seems near, as Turkey is apparently making preparations to move against Bulgaria.

Galveston freight people report an excess of steamer room over the demand, and room engaged during the summer being relet, offered or to let as the demand is not up to anticipations. This is confirmed in a way by the Galveston and Houston receipts being lighter than last year, particularly to-day, although picking and ginning are known to be in active operation over a large part of Texas.

Our market opened about 10 points higher and ruled quiet, which is expected will be unfavorable on the Western States. Unfavorable reports on north Texas and Oklahoma, owing to insufficient rainfall, are also expected in the next few days from parties who are now traveling in that section to inspect the crop, and the opinion has generally settled to the anticipation of a bullish September bureau showing 4 to 6 points decline in conditions.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: We favor sales on all moderate advances under existing conditions.

A. Norden & Co.: We believe that higher prices will be seen in due course.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: While so large a crop seems assured, few are willing to attempt a bull speculation when the whole crop is soon to be for sale.

Miller & Co.: We continue our advices to sell December cotton.

BETTER TRADE IN DRY GOODS THIS YEAR THAN YEAR AGO

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

Buyers have been in the dry goods market this week in much larger numbers than during the same period a year ago. Merchants are ordering forward their fall lines and filling in their stocks thoughout all departments. Buying has proceeded with precaution in individual cases, but retailers generally are so much in need of merchandise for immediate requirements that the total volume of shipments is keeping up remarkably well.

"Much needed rains have brightened the prospects for a good fall business in a large portion of the territory that was feeling the drouth.

"Silks are a big item of the trade at present and practically all buyers in the market are placing orders for this class of merchandise in liberal quantities.

"Judging from the extraordinary demand that has developed and in view of the serious labor troubles that have prevailed for some time in the silk industry, there will be a scarcity of all kinds of silks before the season is far advanced.

"The sale of black silks has improved greatly within the last few weeks.

COTTON GOSSIP

Liverpool is said to be a good buyer. Mitchell, Riordan and Cone were probably the best buyers on the call. Cone is said to be buying for McFadden. There was no rains shown on the map in the western belt of any consequence.

* * *

New Orleans wires: "Freight people report more room at Galveston than there is demand for."

* * *

Greenwod, Miss., reports first new cotton bale of the season to-day, coming from LaFlore County.

* * *

Beeville, Texas, says good rains fell there yesterday, the best since the drouth started.

* * *

Texas rainfall: Austin, .30; Beeville, .82; Brownwood, .10; Columbus, .06; Guero, .04; Galveston, .08; Houston, .01; Kerrville, .04; Luling, 1.64; Pierce, .06; San Antonio, .10; Taylor, .28.

Liverpool cables: "Advanced on buying by complaint, chiefly Russian account. Small market and poor demand for spots."

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma, clear and hot."

* * *

Rains: Taylor, Texas, .28; San Antonio, .10; Galveston, .08; Houston, .01, past twenty-four hours.

The volume of retail buying in the local cotton goods market last week in most houses was substantially ahead of a year ago, according to The New York Journal of Commerce. There is an absence of speculative buying and a great caution is being exercised, yet total requirements for merchandise are becoming formidable, and it seems as if the retail trade has liquidated in the past six months more than in any recent similar selling period. Any broad buying for future account in the cotton goods market would bring on a sharp advance.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 19.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows partly cloudy in southern Arkansas, west Tennessee and Texas coast. Generally fair elsewhere. Lighter but rather general precipitation over southern half of Texas. None shown by the map in the northern half, or Oklahoma. Indications are for partly cloudy to further showers over the western States; also Arkansas and Tennessee. Cooler weather generally in northern half of the belt.

Report here from Galveston freight agents says freight room engaged during summer is being relet, owing to demand for shipments not being up to expectations.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Showers fell in Texas and Oklahoma Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and while general good rains are needed, the talent is now convinced that some relief has come to the drouth-affected areas. This, in conjunction with the favorable crop reports received from Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and the Carolinas, caused the cotton market to ease off a bit. Oklahoma now seems to be in worse condition than any of the cotton-growing States, as a result of long continued dry weather.

"Texas, on the other hand, has suffered in part only, and certain sections there seem to be doing very well. Texans themselves say the boll weevil has done some damage in the southwestern portion of the State, but the recent dry weather has put an end to the progress of such damage on the west. The chinch bug killer seems to have failed in his attempts to reduce the crop promise to relatively small provisions, and for this reason the talent is now talking big crop and moderate trade prospects with a great deal of energy. In all of which demand for distant delivery and the causes thereof are playing a leading role. No general rains are in sight, but the weather bureau promises normal temperatures and showers during the next six days, from which the west may derive some further relief in the near future."

WAR SCARE NOT FELT IN STREET

Market Ruled Dull but Steady, Early Reaction Retrieved by Good Absorption.

By CHAS. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—As a result of the report from Mexico City that President Huerta had delivered an ultimatum to the United States which might result in war, the stock market was very weak at the opening to-day and prices were lower.

United States common declined 1¼. Canadian Pacific slumped to 217½ for a loss of 2½ points. Reading declined to 159¾ for the loss of 1⅛. Mexican Petroleum was under pressure, yielding 1 point. Union Pacific lost 1⅜. Northern Pacific shaded 1.

The selling at the start was general. Investors as well as speculators seemed to be dumping their holdings. At the end of 45 minutes a better tone prevailed, as Washington dispatches seemed to put a more optimistic complexion on the Mexican situation.

Among the other losses were Amalgamated Copper ¾, Chesapeake and Ohio ¾, Chino Copper ⅝, Erie ½, Pennsylvania Railroad ⅝.

Americans in London were under pressure and were weak and irregular. American dispatches received in London before the opening of the New York market causer heavy selling of United States securities.

Smoot Sees Gloomy Outlook for Sugar

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—A prediction that the price of sugar will be reduced by the sugar refineries until the domestic cane and beet sugar producers have been destroyed, and that the refiners then will boost the price of sugar higher than it has been for years and reap the benefit, was made by Senator Smoot of Utah, during the debate on the sugar schedule in the Senate to-day.

Senator Smoot declared that the American sugar refiner had the entire business in this country concentrated within his grasp, that it was in the hands of a few men.

Thousands Bet by Millionaires on Race

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Heavy betting by millionaire sportsmen on the speed boat contests being held in connection with the second anual water carnival to-day caused activity in the offices of First Deputy Police Chief Schuettler and Sheriff Zimmer.

Thousands of dollars are said to have changed hands during yesterday's races. One wager was declared to have been for $15,000.

"I have issued orders to my men to arrest any one who may be involved, regardless of who they are, in case they see money change hands," said Schuettler.

Occasionally "Capital" Discovers That "Labor" Really Is a Factor in National Life.

One Big City, Looking Around for 8,000 Vanished Mechanics, Makes the Discovery Just at Present.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Chicago had a lockout of workmen in the building trades.

It was decided by those engaged in building that something must be done, and so all building was stopped for a while, builders agreeing to stand the loss in order to carry their point.

Finally building was resumed and something strange and surprising happened. IT WAS DISCOVERED THAT 8,000 BUILDING MECHANICS WERE MISSING IN CHICAGO.

And the builders, anxious to rush through the work that had been delayed during the lockout, did not know exactly WHERE to get the eight thousand mechanics.

Those eight thousand mechanics had not been sitting around waiting for the lockout to end, but had gone to other cities and engaged in other occupations.

This discovery is useful, since it makes clear the fact that in this country and in its enterprises organized labor actually plays a part that is not to be disregarded.

The builders discover that their architects, their draftsmen, their enterprise and their MONEY amount to very little if they haven't got THE WORKERS TO MAKE REALITIES OF THE IDEAS, THE PLANS, THE ENTERPRISE AND THE MONEY.

Perhaps it is a good thing to have the eight thousand mechanics missing for a little while, just to teach the gentlemen who occasionally imagine that they are the entire nation that they wouldn't be very much more important than Robinson Crusoe on his island if they didn't have the workmen with them.

The absence of these mechanics is also interesting as demonstrating the value of labor unions that keep an organized body of workers ready to do the skilled work of the country upon demand.

The country has grown too big for the old system under which both labor and capital were disorganized, with the capitalist, when the mood seized him, deciding to build something, going out looking for isolated workers, gathering them together and putting them to building.

To-day capital is organized AND OUGHT TO BE ORGANIZED UNDER PUBLIC CONTROL AND REASONABLE CONDITIONS.

And labor is organized and ought to be organized, also under public control and reasonable conditions.

The Chicago lesson teaches that if labor were NOT organized, if the unions did not, by demanding fair wages and fair hours, limiting apprentices and preventing oversupply, regulate conditions, the labor market would be chaotic and the great operations of this day impossible.

If the lack of mechanics in Chicago teaches capital the importance of labor and teaches also the important fact that organized labor makes great building and manufacturing possible, the hardship of the Chicago lockout will not have been endured entirely in vain.

KARMA

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.

I.

WE cannot choose our sorrows. One there was,
Who, reverent of soul, and strong with trust,
Cried, "God, though Thou shouldst bow me to the dust,
Yet will I praise thy everlasting laws.
Beggared, my faith would never halt or pause;
But sing thy glory, feasting on a crust.
Only one boon, one precious boon I must
Demand of Thee, oh, opulent great Cause.
Let Love stay with me, Constant to the end,
Though fame pass by and poverty pursue.
With freighted hold, her life ship onward sailed:
The world gave wealth, and pleasure, and a friend,
Unmarred by envy, and whose heart was true.
But ere the sun reached midday, Love had failed."

II.

Then from the depths, in bitterness she cried,
"Hell is on earth, and heaven is but a dream:
And human life a troubled aimless stream:
And God is nowhere. Would God so deride
A loving creature's faith?" A voice replied.
"The stream flows onward to the Source Supreme:
Where things that ARE replace the things that SEEM:
And where the deeds of all past lives abide.
Once at thy door, Love languished and was spurned,
Who sorrow plants, must garner sorrow's sheaf.
No prayers can change the seedling in the sod.
By thine own heart, Love's anguish must be learned.
Pass on, and know, as one made wise by grief,
That in thyself dwells heaven and hell and God."

Winifred Black Writes on Elderly Flirts

They Haunt the Summer Resorts, She Says, Like Some Kind of Ghosts and They Are Dreadfully Silly.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

THEY'RE here—in full force—the elderly flirts. I met two of them down at the Springs just now.

The first elderly flirt was a man, forty-five if he was a day; straggling along behind his good, comfy, kindly, middle-aged wife—making eyes at every girl of twenty or so he met.

I walked behind him and heard the girls—after they had passed.

I really wish he could have heard them; he would have been edified.

The Girls Know Him.

"Here's father again," said one pretty thing in pink. "Oh, do look, he'll get cross-eyed, he ogles so."

"I heard him calling the telephone girl 'honey' at the hotel this morning," said a sweet sister in blue, "and you should have seen the face she made when he turned the other way."

"Father certainly is a giddy old thing," said the prettiest of all, in mauve. "I saw him holding hands with teacher, the one with the glasses, out on the porch just at sunset.

"Quoting poetry, too; and his wife came round the corner. I felt so sorry for her, I couldn't bear to look at her."

"Here he is," said the sportive widow to her escort. "Grandpa Googoo Eyes. I met him with his little girl this morning and he stopped talking to her and made an excuse to ask me the way somewhere. You ought to see the way he takes off his hat, ugh—he makes me shudder."

"Grandpa Googoo Eyes."

"Grandpa Googoo Eyes"—not a pretty name, is it, Mr. Elderly Flirt? Yet that is what they call you, the young things you try so hard to impress.

"Grandpa Googoo Eyes," and yet you are not a grandpa at all, only a pa—and not a day over forty-five at the most—but, oh, you do look so elderly to the girls you so much admire—and your jokes are so elderly, too, and your compliments and the sweet, clever things you try so hard to say—can't you see how they laugh at you, all but those who want you to give them something—something that costs more money than young Romeo can afford.

Can't you see how sorry they are for the good, sweet woman who gave up everything else in the world to be your wife—poor silly elderly flirt, you—and the wife—do you think she doesn't know? Do you imagine that she is so used to your artless little ways by this time that it doesn't stab her to the faithful heart to hear the girls make fun of you? Oh, yes, she hears them—trust her for that. She hears everything, sees everything that concerns you—for she loved you once and she never can get over that.

Your First Flirtation.

Now she looks upon you with a kind of contemptuous pity, a sort of kindly forgiveness now; what else can she do?

She looks older than you—she knows that; knows it in every beat of her heart, in every line of her tired face. She has borne you children. See that line by the sensitive mouth—that came when the boy was so ill. That wrinkle there by the eyes—that was when you were ill and she worried so about you.

The hair there on the temples—it was your first flirtation, that you thought she never even heard of, brought that. Don't you remember that summer when the second baby was so little and so delicate, she couldn't go out much, and you—but rest assured she heard. There is always someone to tell. You have cut those lines on a sensitive face—you and no other—none but you—and everyone who sees you together sees it and pities her for being married to one so shallow-hearted, so cruelly light of mind as you, Mr. Elderly Flirt.

There's your sister there—in the shadows behind you—painted, made up, bedizened. How old is the boy she has in tow? Not an hour over twenty-two, if faces tell anything like the truth. She'll get him out into the moonlight and make a fool of him and the nice girl will cry her eyes out about it.

Poorly elderly flirt—what a sorry thing she is—even when she is married and makes a fool of her husband as well as of herself.

Tries to Look Young.

She tries so pitifully hard to look young—hark, what an imitation giggle it is that she gives. Be careful, those high heels were never meant for a charmer over forty. You'll slip, beautiful lady, you'll slip, and what a time you'll have getting up again. Oh, why don't you give it all up once and for all, Elderly Flirt, in petticoats too short and slippers too tight for elderly comfort—let it all slip, the silly game you have played so long.

The girls there behind you—they do the thing much better; they do really—and how about the decent, kindly, honest man who pays your bills and sends you away to have a good time? It isn't fair; honestly it isn't—it isn't the square deal. He works so hard and is so proud of you—why can't you pretend to be halfway decent—just for his sake—at your age?

The Elderly Flirts—they haunt the summer resorts like some kind of forlorn ghosts.

An Opportunity for Women

There Never Was a Time, He Says, When the Need for Women to Become Wise Was So Great as It Is Now.

By ELBERT HUBBARD

A CERTAIN California Bishop was at first opposed to woman suffrage.

Next he investigated it.

Then he saw it was coming.

It came.

Now he gives instruction to the women of his bishopric. It is something like this:

"Inform yourselves thoroughly on all questions of state. You are entering into grave responsibilities, that of free citizens. Inform yourselves, be wise in what you do."

This is advice that a wise father should give to his children.

There was never a time when the need for women to become wise was so great as it is now. Their rights, personal, political, commercial, involve a concomitant responsibility.

When we were children we used to think how glorious it would be when we were grown up. Then we would have the privilege of staying out at night as long as we chose, and of doing what we pleased all day long.

Self-Control.

But when we became men we realized that there was a limit to the hours of the night, also to our capacity to keep awake, that in order to be able to "have a good time," a man must control himself.

Every privilege is bounded by responsibilities which have to be carried in order to make the privilege possible.

That is all any human being has—opportunity.

The opportunity for suffrage and personal rights has not come easily to women. They have worked until they have quite an understanding of the rights that they want and the privileges that have been denied them.

Civic Research Clubs.

In most of the States where suffrage has been granted, the Woman Suffrage clubs have been turned into Civic Research clubs. Women are bringing politically unprejudiced minds to bear on political situations and their new privileges. Their actions, as a rule, are decided by this test, "Is it right or is it wrong." Women whose actions are not influenced by right and wrong are taking very little interest in the woman suffrage movement.

The Reverend Mabel M. Irwin, a Universalist minister, gives out a well-timed warning to women. She urges them to make no mistakes in using the newly acquired privilege of their natural rights. She eloquently urges them to use their power to develop a better, nobler race.

Mabel M. Irwin affirms that women have not been shirking the burden of motherhood, but the bondage of motherhood. When women have the rights of free citizens this bondage will be removed. Then there will be the joyous laughter, the patter of little feet that makes perennial youth.

English Women's Demands.

Beatrice Harraden, the English author, in a recent number of Votes for Women, expresses a clear understanding of how vital to the Englishwomen is the cause of woman suffrage.

If there were only a few women engaged in this movement we might think it was only a dream of fair women. But when fishwives, tinplate workers, weavers, tailoresses, upholsteresses, laundresses, charwomen, ropemakers, shop assistants, nurses, teachers and sweatshop workers unite in the demand for suffrage as equals with the women of nobility, there is something very vital in the movement. It means that these women are stirred into action by a primitive instinct.

Women and Statesmen.

Recently a deputation of women from every walk in life spoke eloquently to Mr. Lloyd George and his colleagues. Many of them had never before made a speech. They were unlettered, hard-working women, moved to eloquence by a cause.

Miss Harraden says the women impressed the statesmen though the statesmen did not impress the women. Their cloaks and trappings of office meant nothing to these women, demanding the privilege to exercise their inherent right of freedom.

When women who toil with their hands join with nobility, and all are made equal by the cause which is moving them, it is time that the Englishmen recognized that it is an inherent, natural right that women are demanding.

The Battle of the Nile

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE Battle of the Nile, Nelson's greatest victory, and one of the most remarkable naval fights known to history, came off one hundred and fifteen years ago—August 1, 1798.

In May, 1798, Nelson, now in independent command, was dispatched by his Government to intercept the great French armament which was intended to reach Egypt and threaten India. Napoleon had vast ideas in his head, and he hoped by means of this armament to materialize them in the shape of a great Oriental Empire.

Coming up with the French fleet in the roads of Aboukir, Nelson lost no time in getting ready for action. With sublime audacity, and in defiance of all the then recognized rules of sea fighting, he ordered part of his fleet to get in between the French ships and the shore, while with the other part he attached from the side of the open sea. Assailed from front and rear, the French were taken at a great disadvantage, and though they fought with a splendid courage, there was never a moment when the issue of the battle was in doubt. The genius, audacity, quickness of the little English Admiral were too much for them, and of the thirteen French battleships only two escaped.

The French ought to have won the day. Their vessels were equal in number to those of the English (13 on each side), and were in size and caliber much superior to them, the British "seventy-fours" being no match for the new and magnificent French "eighties." But the French had no Nelson, and that fact explains it all.

Two or three very important things were settled by Nelson's brilliant victory at the Battle of the Nile. It settled the fact that England's navy was supreme, invincible. It settled the fact that the long cherished idea of a French invasion of England was never to be realized. And finally it settled the fact that Napoleon's visions of a mighty empire in Egypt and Syria, and possibly in India, were to go up in smoke. There was nothing to hinder Napoleon from making himself Emperor of France, and, for a time, dictator of Continental Europe, but the way in which Nelson smashed the great armament off the roads of Aboukir convinced every sensible man in France that the First Consul could never become master of the East. To do that he needed, first, the mastery of the Mediterranean, and the little Admiral had demonstrated such mastery as put it out of the question.

DECLARES FRANK KNEW MARY PHAGAN

LEO FRANK SKETCHED AS HE TOLD HIS OWN STORY TO JURY

During the greater part of his story Frank was as calm and statistical as an accountant discussing an audit.

In telling of his dealings with the police and Chief of Detectives Lanford, Frank waxed sarcastic in a quiet yet bitter way. But he never let loose his emotion or lost his poise.

At times Frank would lose his air of complete repression and his face for a moment would take on an aspect of deep feeling. He would, however, quickly resume his normal expression of stoicism.

THAW TAKEN IN CANADA; DEFIES HIS CAPTORS

Admits Identity, but Declares the Police Have No Right to Hold Him.

COATICOOK, QUEBEC, Aug. 19.—Harry K. Thaw is under arrest here, according to the police authorities, and he will be held until the Dominion Government decides what can be done in his case.

The police are positive that their prisoner is Thaw. They said he admitted his identity.

Thaw said the authorities had no right to hold him and that there was nothing for which he could be extradited and sent back to New York State.

Thaw was arrested at the instance of Deputy Sheriff Kelsey, of New Hampshire, who saw him on a train on the Maine Central Railway as he was headed for Canada, and followed him here in an automobile.

One reason given by his captors for holding him is the $500 reward offered by Dr. Keib, head of Matteawan Asylum, from which Thaw made his escape.

Thaw will not discuss his movements since he got away from the New York institution Sunday morning, except to say that he boarded a train east of Boston. He said he was making for the coast and planned to sail for Europe.

Thaw was accompanied here by two men, one heavily built and the other slight and both smooth shaven.

Family to Fight Extradition.

Evelyn Thaw, the estranged wife of the slayer, cowers in this city, afraid of her life. She declared that she would keep a bodyguard about her until Thaw's actual whereabouts became known.

It is evident that Thaw and his family will make a determined fight against extradition to this State if an attempt is made to bring him back. Thaw's defense, in all probability, will be that his escape was providential.

Detectives in the employ of Acting Governor Martin H. Glynn, who is taking unusual interest in the case, reported the discovery of two of the alleged conspirators and said that arrests were imminent. It was reported Mr. Glynn would convene the Dutchess County Grand Jury in extraordinary session to probe the escape of Thaw. Burns detectives have been brought into the case and are helping in the search for Thaw.

Accompanied by Miss Mary Copely, her sister and traveling companion, Mrs. William Thaw left to-day for Cresson, Pa.

Mrs. Thaw refused to discuss the escape of her son further than to say:

"I have positively not heard from Harry since my letter yesterday, but hope he is safe and well."

Wife Still in Fear Of Thaw, She Says.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Former Assemblyman Richard J. Butler, a West Side politician and former henchman of Chief of Police "Big Bill" Devery, who was reported to have been implicated in the plot by which Thaw escaped, denied today that he had been mixed up in the escape of the Pittsburger.

"I know nothing about this, and I certainly had no part in it," declared Butler. "It is certain, though, that if any man was about to be mixed up in an affair of this kind he would not use his own name, I believe that some gangster who was paid to help Thaw out used my name. In fact, I believe that I know the man."

Butler admitted that he had been away from home for several days, but denied that he had been in Matteawan.

REPORT OF WAR MOVE AGAINST U. S. DENIED

American Charge at Mexico City Not Given His Passports—Situation Is Clearing.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The White House to-day received a dispatch from Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy absolutely denying press dispatches to the effect that he had been given his passports by the Mexican Government or that an ultimatum of any kind had been given to him by Huerta.

The telegram from O'Shaughnessy is explicit on both of these points, and indicates that the situation has not been changed in any way except that a formal and diplomatic reply to the Lind proposals was transmitted to O'Shaughnessy yesterday by the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, Frederic Gamboa. The tenor of this reply probably will be made public at the White House later in the day.

In his telegram to Secretary Bryan, Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy relates the circumstances leading up to the transmission of the Huerta reply to the mediation proposals, which Lind carried from President Wilson to Mexico, and declares that nothing had indicated that they were in any way offensive to the Mexican Government.

Found Reports Were False.

He made a trip to the Mexican Foreign Office late last night to ascertain the truth of rumors that he was about to be given his passports, and that Mexico had demanded recogni-

Policeman Sews Up Slit in Skirt

AYDEN, N. C., Aug. 19.—A pretty 19-year-old girl appeared in the streets here wearing a generously slit skirt. She did it on a wager. A crowd of hooting men and boys followed her.

A policeman escorted the girl to a nearby millinery shop and ordered the slit sewed up. He called a carriage and sent the girl home. Then he chased the crowd away.

Good Food Secret of 100 Per Cent Baby

PASSAIC, N. J., Aug. 19.—"Good substantial food, well cooked, is what I feed him," said Mrs. Thomas Watterson, of Passaic, when asked how she reared her son, Leslie, the only 100 per cent baby in the "better babies" contest.

He gets soups, fruits, vegetables, puddings and cereals.

U. S. to Aid Japs In Land Law Test

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—It is understood that in its efforts to deal fairly with the Japanese Government the State Department has indicated a purpose to facilitate any court proceedings that may be brought to test the alien land law legislation in California.

Customs Man Noses Out Big Cheese Plot

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Nicola Romelli, a shoemaker, went to the Custom House to explain why he tried to smuggle two trunks filled with Parmesan cheese into this country. His mission failed and the cheese was sent to public stores.

When the shoemaker arrived from Europe he declared he had nothing dutiable. Customs Inspector Piper has an acute sense of smell and suggested opening the trunks.

Issue Warrants For Japanese and Wife

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The Bureau of Immigration has issued warrants for the arrest of Hidekuni Iwata, a wealthy Japanese, and his wife, Norae Iwata, on charges of harboring women for immoral purposes in Fresno, Cal.

Iwata and his wife, immigration officers declare, were proprietors of property which housed 27 women arrested in a recent raid by the Fresno police.

Man Cashing $45,000 U. S. Draft Arrested

Special Cable to The Georgian.

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—A Kerke bank clerk was arrested to-day just as he was in the act of cashing two New York drafts for $45,000, which he had obtained by the fraudulent use of the secret code of the Deutscher Bank of Leipsic.

JUDGE STAYS EXECUTION.

TIFTON.—Pending an appeal to the State Supreme Court, Judge W. E. Thomas has indefinitely postponed the execution of I. B. Hall, convicted of the killing of Dennis W. Hall and sentenced to hang on August 22.

JUDGE FORBIDS INDIRECT EVIDENCE AGAINST FRANK

Will Turner, formerly employed at the National Pencil Factory, testified Tuesday that he saw Leo Frank talking to Mary Phagan about the middle of March in the rear of the second floor and that the girl apparently tried to evade him.

Rosser objected to the testimony and the jury was sent out while the point was argued.

A crushing blow was dealt the State in the trial of Leo M. Frank Tuesday by the refusal of Judge L. S. Roan to admit, either while the defense was completing its case or after the State had taken up the rebuttal, any evidence not directly and at first hand bearing upon the specific acts charged against the factory superintendent.

The ruling was a sweeping victory for the defense. It gave Frank's case, which had been aided materially the day before by the defendant's own statement, an added strength and heightened the prospects in Frank's favor.

Solicitor Dorsey tried first to cross-question Miss Daisy Hopkins, one of the defense's witnesses, as to conversations she was supposed to have had in regard to incidents at the pencil factory in which she and a man undesignated except as her "foreman" were involved. Frank's name was not mentioned in the indicated charges. The conversation was about a "foreman."

The Hopkins woman denied again that she ever had made visits to the factory for improper purposes or that she had had the conversations referred to by the Solicitor.

Dorsey encountered the same stone wall when he tried to draw testimony against the moral character of Frank from his own witnesses. From W. P. Murk and J. P. Floyd the Solicitor had expected to obtain a recital of the stories of happenings which they said had been related to them.

Murk, however, had mysteriously disappeared from the courthouse when his name was called, and Floyd was not permitted to go into the details of the testimony the Solicitor had hoped to bring out.

The Solicitor thereafter confined his efforts to bolstering up the character of C. B. Dalton, the State's witness who testified to seeing women in Frank's office, and attacking that of Daisy Hopkins. He called a number of witnesses, one of them a cousin of the Hopkins woman, who swore that her character for truth and veracity was bad and that they wouldn't believe her on oath.

Swear Dalton's Character Is Good.

Other witnesses testified that Dalton's character was good. They were asked by Attorney Rosser if they were acquainted with his court and chain-gang record. They replied, for the most part, that they were not.

The brown suit worn by Frank April 26 was identified by Mrs. Emil Selig, his mother-in-law, at the opening of court in the forenoon and the suit was placed in evidence.

The defense prepared to show by Wiley Roberts, inside jailer at the Tower, that Jim Conley had been reading since his incarceration there, but the Solicitor objected on the ground that no basis had been laid for the testimony.

Daisy Hopkins then was called and questioned, after which the State began its rebuttal, the defense having closed its case.

While waiting for a witness Solicitor Dorsey arose and made the unexpected announcement that he himself had erased the identification "Taken out at 8:26" on the time slip taken from the clock in the factory. Frank had made the charge he had written words as an identification of the slip and that they had been erased. The Solicitor declared that he thought the detectives had made the identification.

"Frank did not know who made the erasure," said Attorney Reuben Arnold.

Solicitor Prepares To Uphold Dalton.

The Solicitor had announced earlier that his first witnesses in rebuttal would be called to support C. B. Dalton and impeach Daisy Hopkins, who declared she had never visited the factory with Dalton or that he had ever introduced Dalton to the factory superintendent.

Wiley Roberts was asked:

Q. Has Jim Conley been in your custody during this trial?—A. Yes.

Q. Has he ever asked for newspapers?—A. Yes.

Dorsey interrupted.

"Your honor," he said, "I think the witness, Jim Conley, ought to have the privilege of denying or affirming that before he can be impeached."

"Conley said that h could only read certain words," said Arnold, "but probably Mr. Dorsey is right. I will have to call Jim Conley back again. Mr. Rosser will be back in a minute and we will close."

Daisey Hopkins Is Recalled by Dorsey.

The witness was excused and Dorsey made the announcement that four doctors of the following five would be called by the prosecution:

Drs. G. C. Mizell, F. L. Eskridge, Clarence Johnson, John Funke, S. E. Benedict, of Athens, and J. C. Cramer, of Macon, the latter two president and vice president of the State Board of Health.

Solicitor Dorsey asked that Daisy Hopkins be returned to the stand so that he might continue his cross-examination of her.

The witness took the stand.

Q. You say you knew nothing of the cot in the basement of the National Pencil Factory?—A. No.

Q. Do you know anything at all of the basement?—A. No.

Q. Are you acquainted with A. R. Floyd, of Redan, Ga.?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you known him for a long time?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you had a conversation with Floyd since the murder?—A. No.

Q. Haven't you been to his house to get milk?—A. I don't think I have since the murder.

Q. Didn't you go to the home of Floyd to get milk and tell him about that cot in the basement of the National Pencil Factory?—A. No.

Q. Do you know Bob Goddard?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Dr. R. S. Pound, of Redan?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Mr. Smith, superintendent of the Nunnally-McRae Company?—A. On Mitchell street?

Q. Yes.—A. Yes, I know him.

Q. Do you know Walter P. Murk?—A. Where does he live?

Met Murk On Peachtree Street.

Q. You met him first at Stone Mountain, then you met him on Walker street?—A. I met him at Redan. They used to live down there.

Q. You said something about being married. Have you two living husbands?—A. No; only one.

Q. Have you seen him since the murder?—A. Yes; at Redan.

Q. Do you remember meeting Walter P. Murk one Saturday afternoon on Whitehall street?—A. I met him on Peachtree.

Q. Didn't you tell him that afternoon that you were going to the National Pencil Factory?—A. No; I told him I had just left the factory.

Q. Didn't he make an engagement with you to go to the factory?—A. No.

Rosser objected, declaring that a female witness could not be attacked in that way.

"Your honor," said Dorsey, "I want to show by Murk that this woman did make an engagement with him that afternoon."

"I understand," replied Rosser, "that when an argument of this kind is to be made the jury is to retire."

"It would be better to have the ladies retire also," said Dorsey. "I don't want to embarrass them."

Jury and Women Retire From Room.

The jury retired, and after a hurried conference, Frank's wife and mother also left the courtroom at the request of Attorney Arnold.

"This is their witness," said Dorsey. "We want to show that this man Murk had her Saturday afternoon, and she said she was going to the National Pencil Factory. It was cold weather. We want to show that he saw her that night and what she told him."

The witness interrupted:

"It was summer time," she said pertly.

"She has denied," said Dorsey, "in the impeachment of Dalton that she ever went to the pencil factory for any improper purpose."

"We object," said Rosser.

"I want to show that she told Murk about meeting her foreman at the factory," said Dorsey.

Then the Solicitor repeated a conversation involving the "foreman," which is unprintable, which he wanted to get before the jury.

"He does not mean to charge Frank is the foreman," said Arnold. "He is frank enough to state that."

"Murk in an affidavit," said Dorsey, "said foreman. He didn't say Mrs. Hopkins said her superintendent or that she named any names. I mean to let the jury draw its own conclusions."

"I knew when your honor refused to rule out the charges of Conley and Dalton," said Arnold, taking up the argument, "that you were opening the doors for new issues that would obscure the charge of murder. I knew it would lead to a situation in impeachments bringing us to the point where we would hardly know who we were trying. This woman never would have been put up as an original witness except for the aspersions cast on her by Conley and Dalton. Look how far afield we have wandered. Now, he wants to impeach this witness on something with which the defendant has no connection."

Defense's Objection Is Sustained By Roan.

"You can rebut any of their direct testimony," said Judge Roan. "You can not bring any new criminal charge against this defendant. If it is against someone else, it is irrelevant."

"Your honor," said Dorsey, "I want to ask a question to let the jury hear that you rule it out."

"No; we object," said Rosser "That's just why the jury was sent out."

"I'll let you assume that you ask it," said the court to Dorsey.

"Why, your honor," replied Dorsey, "it puts us in the position of not even trying to prove what we have indicated we would."

"I can not permit the question," said Judge Roan.

"Very well," said Dorsey, adding, in an undertone, "That shuts me off; that shuts me off."

Dorsey continued the examination:

Q. Didn't you meet Murk during the afternoon after working hours and tell him you were going to the pencil factory?—A. No.

Q. Didn't he come to see you that night?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you had been to the factory that afternoon?—A. No.

Men Say Woman's Character Is Bad.

Miss Hopkins was excused, and J. R. Floyd, of Redan, Ga., was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Do you know Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how many husbands she has?

Rosser: "I object, your honor. I don't care if she has three hundred husbands."

The objection was sustained.

Q. Would you believe her under oath?—A. I would not.

Q. Did you ever hear her say anything about a cot in the basement of the pencil factory?—A. Yes.

The witness was excused. Bob Goddard, brother of C. M. Goddard, who was shot to death a few months ago by Elmer F. Darden, was the next witness called in rebuttal. Goddard resides near Redan. Dorsey questioned him.

Goddard testified to the bad character of Daisy Hopkins, and declared he would not believe her under oath.

Henry Carr, of Stone Mountain; N. J. Ballard, a second cousin of Daisy Hopkins, and J. L. Rice all followed each other in rapid succession and testified that they would not believe the Hopkins girl under oath.

Dorsey then addressed the court.

"Your honor," he said, "we want to offer indictments against Daisy Hopkins and also a bond forfeiture."

Rosser: "Your honor, they objected to the introduction of an indictment against Dalton and they objected rightly. An indictment is nothing against one's character."

Dorsey: "Dalton denied any knowledge of an indictment. This is a bond forfeiture."

Judge Roan: "I rule it out."

Dalton's Recent Past Good, Says J. T. Hearn.

Glenn Smith, superintendent of the Nunnally-McRae Company, testified that Daisy Hopkins' character was bad and that he would not believe her on oath.

J. T. Hearn, of Walton County, said he had known C. B. Dalton since 1890. Dorsey questioned him

Q. Is his character good or bad?—A. The first part of his life was bad. The last part has been good.

Q. Would you believe him on oath?—A. Yes.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. When was the last time you knew Dalton?—A. 1903 or 1904.

Q. Did you hear about him being indicted for selling whisky in 1906?—A. Yes, but he had joined the church about 1904 and I understood was leading a good life.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Do you know the instance of his being indicted for stealing years ago?—A. Yes.

Rosser: "We object. He can't go into that."

Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Dorsey: "When they go into specific acts, can't I?"

Judge Roan: "No."

R. V. Johnston, another Walton County citizen, was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. When were you approached in regard to testifying to the character of C. B. Dalton?

Rosser interposed with an objection, but was overruled.

A. Last Friday, a week ago.

Q. Who approached you?—A. Harry Gottheimer.

Rosser again objected, and was sustained.

Q. Are you acquainted with the character of C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him on oath?—A. I would.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. You never heard that he was indicted for stealing and selling whiskey?—A. No.

The witness was excused, and W. M. Cook, of Social Circle, Ga., a dairyman and farmer, testified as to Dalton's good character, and declared that he would believe him on oath.

W. J. Elder, of Decatur, followed Cook on the stand, and said that Dalton came to Decatur about five years ago and worked for him as a carpenter. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Are you acquainted with Dalton's general character?—A. I don't know as I am.

Q. That means what people say about him?—A. Yes.

Q. Is his character good or bad?—A. Good.

Rosser took the witness.

Q. Why did you say just now that you didn't know?—A. I didn't know as I did.

Q. You said you didn't know because you didn't know yourself?—A. Yes.

The witness was excused, and A. B. Houston, of Decatur, a farmer, who has lived there 41 years, was called. The witness said that he had known Dalton for eight years and that his character was good and that he would believe him under oath.

J. T. Borne, who formerly lived at Ingleside, in DeKalb County, and who now operates a cigar and soda fountain at Decatur, said he knew Dalton and would believe him on oath.

W. M. Wright, of Atlanta, general manager of the Independent Transfer Company, testified in behalf of Dalton's good character and declared that he would believe him on oath.

W. C. Hale, of No. 88 Kirkwood avenue, Atlanta, formerly of Walton County, testified to Dalton's good character and said he would believe him under oath.

L. L. Boyce, a city policeman, formerly of Walton County, testified that eighteen or twenty years ago Dalton's character was bad, but that now it was better and that he had heard nothing bad about him recently.

M. Gordon Caldwell, of Atlanta; J. W. Hunt, of No. 18 Trinity avenue, and W. P. Patrick, of Atlanta, a member of the police force, testified to Dalton's good character and said that they would believe him under oath.

J. E. Dudley, a former employee of the pencil company, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Were you working at the National Pencil Factory about October, 1912?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember a machinist named Charley Lee?—A. Yes, he was working there.

Q. Were you hurt there?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. On the second floor, the office floor.

Q. Just where were you hurt?—A. On a metal machine. I hurt the forefinger of my left hand.

Mashed Finger But Kept Blood Off Floor.

Q. How were you hurt?—A. This fellow Lee had put the metal on the machine. It dropped off. I picked it up and in putting it back I mashed my finger.

Q. What did you do then?—A. There was some cotton waste there, which I put around my hand.

Q. Did any blood drop on the floor?—A. A few drops.

Q. Did any blood drop near the ladies' dressing room?—A. None.

Q. How long after this accident did you work?—A. I quit then.

Q. What does this fellow Lee do besides working at his trade?—A. I don't know.

Q. What did you do then?—A. I went to the office to get it dressed, then went to the Atlanta Hospital.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. How badly were you hurt?—A. Not very bad.

Q. You bled pretty freely?—A. Yes, but I had my hand in the cotton waste.

&. You didn't notice whether any blood was on the floor or not?—A. Yes; none of it dropped except at the machine where I was working.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Was your finger outside of the coton waste until you got to the office?—A. No.

The witness was excused, and the witness Murk was called, but failed to answer. Willie Turner, of Sandy Springs, the 16-year-old son of E. M. Turner, a farmer, was called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. About March, of this year, where did you work?—A. At the pencil factory.

Q. Do you know this man? (pointing to Frank)—A. Yes.

Q. Did you know Mary Phagan?—A. When I saw her.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank talking to Mary Phagan?—A. Yes; on the second floor.

Q. What time was it and how long before the murder?—A. About the middle of March.

Q. Where was it?—A. In the back part of the building.

Q. What time of day was it?—A. Just before dinner.

Q. Who was in the room besides them?—A. No one else. Two girls came down after I did.

Q. What was said?—A. I heard her say she had to go to work.

Q. What did he say?—A. He said he was the superintendent of the factory—"

Rosser: "We object and we want to argue this without the jury."

The jury was sent out.

Frank Proves His Own Best Witness.

Frank had demonstrated that he was better than his lawyers and that he was his own best witness when he came down from the witness chair Monday night after talking almost continuously for four hours.

It is doubtful, as shrewd and eloquent as his attorneys are known to be, if anything more impressive, more convincing and more logical will be presented to the jury in his behalf before his fate is placed in the hands of the twelve men.

The young factory superintendent made no attempt at oratory or dramatics. He did not attempt an appeal to the emotions of the jurors. He probably was wise in this, as the memory of what he said and the manner in which he said it will remain with the jurors long after an emotion of pity would have passed away.

Although Frank seldom raised his voice above a conversational tone, his address was deeply impressive from start to finish. Its truth or falsity, of course, is problematical. But it had all the characteristics that are commonly accepted as accompanying the truth.

He did not ask for pity or mercy. He did not take the attitude of demanding anything to which he was not entitled. His mien throughout was that of a man seeking merely justice, and that alone. He was an innocent man or a consummate actor as he stood before the jury. These are the only two conclusions possible.

The matter-of-fact manner in which he delivered his long address only added to its impressiveness and eloquence. That a man with the burden of a foul murder on his conscience could talk easily, freely, fearlessly for four hours before the men whose word can send him to the gallows was hardly to be conceived.

As he stod before the jurors making minute explanations of the intricate work involved in the financial sheets, the reports and the hundred and one details of his work, the impression that he gave was that of a fluent classroom lecturer thoroughly at home with his subject. He was not disturbed by interruptions. He spoke easily and with unconscious gestures.

He spoke more than two hours on the complexity of the work he was compelled to do Saturday forenoon and afternoon the day that Mary Phagan came to her death. He accounted for every moment of his time on the day of the murder.

The latter part of his address was given over to his experience with the detectives, for whom he did not appear to have great respect or admiration, and to a categorical denial of all the charges made against him.

One of his most startling statements was in reference to the supposed blood spots near the ladies' dressing room on the fourth floor which have figured so prominently in the case since their discovery by R. P. Barrett, a machinist at the pencil factory.

Frank said that he had made an examination of the spots of which the detectives and Solicitor General have made a great deal.

"I did not depend on the light from the windows for my inspection," said the defendant. "I crouched right down on the floor and made the closest sort of an inspection. I discovered a curious thing. I scraped away with my finger and I found that there was an accumulation of dirt and grease over the dark spots. The accumulation was not that of three days. It was not that of three weeks. It was an accumulation of three months or more.

"Another thing which has been overlooked in connection with these spots is the effect that the Haskoline compound would have had had it been smeared over real blood spots when the blood is fresh. The Haskoline, which is simply a lubricating mixture, is applied in a liquid condition. Had the blood been fresh, as the detectives have presumed, it would have mixed with the Haskoline, which would have turned a pink or red color instead of remaining white as has happened to be the case."

Admits His Nervousness.

Frank admitted readily that he had been nervous when he was routed from bed and taken without his breakfast to the undertaking rooms to view the body of the murdered girl.

"I was nervous; I admit it," he said. "I was extremely nervous. I was distracted. But what man would not have been under the circumstances? It would have been a man of stone who would not have been affected by the tragedy of this little girl killed on the dawn of womanhood."

He made a sensational charge, intimating that an attempt had been made to "frame" against him by the detectives in connection with the time slip taken from the clock the morning after the tragedy.

He declared that on the slip he took from the clock he wrote: "Taken out at 8:26 a. am.," underscoring the words with two heavy lines. He said that he handed this slip at once to Chief Lanford.

That an attempt had been made at the erasure of this means he had taken to identify the slip was the accusation he made. He held the slip up to the jurors and told them that the words were still faintly visible as well as the two lines with which he underscored the words.

He added that such a vigorous attempt had been made to rub out his writing that the red lines on the time slip also had been partly obliterated.

Toward the beginning of his address he referred to his home life, which the detectives at various times have sought to show was unhappy. He drew an affectionate smile to the lips of his pretty wife when he said that his married life had been exceptionally happy, the happiest period of his career.

He referred only briefly to the testimony of C. B. Dalton, who said on the stand that he had seen women in Frank's office and had been introduced to Frank by Miss Daisy Hopkins. Frank denied he ever had met Dalton. He denied flatly any intimacy with women in his office or anywhere else, and denounced as unspeakable slanders the charges of other acts of immorality.

His account of the visit of Mary Phagan to his office was simple and direct. He said she came and asked for her pay and was given it. As she passed from his sight she called back to ask him if the metal had come. He answered, "No," and then heard her footsteps retreating. He thought that he heard a female voice an instant later, but paid little attention to it.

That, he said, was all he knew of Mary Phagan's movements on the day she met her death. He did not even know her name at the time, identifying her by the number on her envelope. That he had any part in her death or in the disposal of her body he denied absolutely. He branded the story of Jim Conley, the negro, as a tissue of lies from start to finish.

"I have told the truth and the whole truth," he said as he left the stand at 6:05 o'clock. He had been talking almost continuously for four hours.

MOTHER OF LEO FRANK

Mrs. Rea Frank.

Wife at Last Breaks Down, Overcome by Frank's Story

After having braved every trying courtroom ordeal and faced every horrible charge hurled at her husband with a stoicism almost as unflinching and imperturbable as his, Mrs. Leo Frank gave away completely to her emotions and sobbed unrestrainedly as Frank said the last words of his wonderful and most impressive address to the jury Monday.

It was the final dramatic touch to a situation that had held a courtroom full of spectators in an irresistible thrall through four long hours of the afternoon.

The spell that had been cast over the room by the quiet but earnest words of the slight young factory superintendent was broken by the tones of the deputies, who shouted the moment Frank rose to leave the witness chair:

"Keep your seats, gentlemen, while the jury passes out."

Frank Rushes to Wife.

In the confusion that followed some did not notice that Frank rushed right to the side of his wife, who had thrown her head in her arms and was shaking with pitiful sobs as she moaned his name again and again.

The woman who had steeled herself against the accusations and innuendoes of the Solicitor General during the three long weeks of the trial collapsed when her husband himself took the stand to declare his innocence.

Many who had rushed into the inclosure to give their congratulations to Frank paused as they observed the piteous figure.

The jurors, already deeply impressed by the talk of Frank, were freshly touched by this exhibition of emotion. They had arisen to file over to the Kimball House. Juror Johenning, at the head of the line, stood for several minutes with tears running down his cheeks, oblivious of the fact that he was blocking the rest of the jurors and that three deputies were waiting to take them on their way.

Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner leaned against the railing of the inclosure. There was a suspicious moisture in his eyes, which have grown accustomed to many tragic and affecting spectacles.

Troublesome Lump Rises.

Very few in the courtroom had much to say until they had managed to subdue that troublesome lump that persisted in rising in their throats.

"Rube, that boy put it all over you and me," muttered massive Luther Rosser, huskily, to Reuben Arnold, his partner in the case.

For many minutes after the packed courtroom had emptied itself a little group of persons remained in front of the judge's bench. Mrs. Frank, the wife of the man accused of the revolting murder, and the elder Mrs. Frank, his mother, were weeping hysterically, overcome by the appeal that had been made. Relatives surrounded them. Frank talked comfortingly to them for several minutes, and then, feeling in danger of breaking down himself, signaled Sheriff Mangum and returned to his cell in the Tower.

Sulzer Holds Fort, Ignoring Ruling of Attorney General

ALBANY, Aug. 19.—Unaffected by the opinion of Attorney General Carmody who held that Martin Glynn legally is Governor of New York, William Sulzer occupied his office in the executive chamber this morning as usual. He came to the capitol at the usual time and took up the morning mail.

Chester C. Platt, his private secretary, announced that Mr. Sulzer still regarded himself as the legal Governor.

"We knew what the opinion of the Attorney General would be before it came out," he said.

Grace Revival Draws Large Crowds Daily

Revival services which started at Grace Methodist Church Sunday are being largely attended both morning and evening. "The Purpose of God" and "Giving the Other Man a Chance" were the subjects dwelt on by the Rev. J. M. Bass Monday. Both addresses were forcefully delivered and made a deep impression on the audience.

O. W. Stapleton, the singing evangelist, rendered several solos and directed the large chorus. H. K. Chapman, a prominent architect of Atlanta, is issuing daily a bulletin on the revival.

FRANK'S STATEMENT IS BEST PLEA PRESENTED IN HIS DEFENSE SO FAR

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

So far, unquestionably, to my way of thinking Leo Frank himself has made the best and most appealing plea in behalf of Leo Frank.

His statement in the recital thereof was as clean cut, as dignified, as dispassionate and as convincing as any statement I ever heard from the witness stand, and I have heard hundreds.

Regardless of its merits—or, at least, aside from that—the defendant acquitted himself with credit, and that much may be said of him ungrudgingly and in the frankest fairness to all parties concerned.

Of course, had Frank been nervous, hesitating, "fidgety," or seemingly in any wise disconcerted, there would be those, perhaps, who would have seen in that great evidence of his guilt—and by the same token, in that he was calm, poised, self-possessed, even smiling at intervals, there will be those who see in that evidence of a monstrous coldness and unfeeling design.

The vast majority of those who heard that remarkable statement, however, must have been impressed by, at least, the apparent sincerity of it and the seeming inclination in the defendant to hold back nothing.

In its recital the statement of Leo Frank was wonderful—in its written form, stripped of the man's personality, it still is a human document of intense and absorbing interest.

It impressed me, too, as being in many ways characteristic of Frank as I have come to know him of late—and I never spoke one word to him in all my life.

I have come to know him as the prisoner sitting over there between the two women in the courtroom—the slight, spectacled party, a seat or two beyond Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold.

I have come to know him, in my way of knowing persons charged with grave crimes, not by way of personal touch so much as by constant observation of him under fire.

Repression Makes the Story.

All that was dramatic in Frank's statement was repressed—the dramatic touch was there, to be sure, but the red fire and the usual accompanying stage tricks were not.

If Frank should undertake to sell me a gross of pencils, I should expect him to tell me the truth about the pencils, and nothing but the truth—but I should expect him nevertheless to sell me the pencils at a profit.

His statement of Monday seemed to me a recital much after the fashion I should expect from him in the pencil transaction.

To me, it seemed that Frank was undertaking to tell the truth and nothing but the truth of the Mary Phagan murder, as he knows the truth—and to tell it at a profit to himself.

That is the best and the worst that I can say of Leo Frank's statement, as it appealed to me.

True, in a transaction involving a mere gross of pencils, there would be lacking all the great elements that entered into the statement Frank made on Monday—and yet, at that, neither subject matter is, in its final analysis, anything more or less than something about which the simple truth should be told.

Frank looked the jury fairly and squarely in the eye when he was making his statement—and not once did he hesitate or falter in stating his plea.

Contrast the statement of the defendant with the statement of the negro—the star witness summoned against him.

Frank's Day in Court.

Now, Monday was Frank's day in court, and it is square and right that Frank's showing should be criticised freely and frankly—it is right that his statement should be praised, if it seemed to deserve praise, just as it should be condemned, if it seemed to merit that melancholy fate.

Contrast it, therefore, with the statement of Conley!

Argue the matter with yourself.

Certainly, Frank has behind him a long period of decent life, good reputation, business integrity, and home happiness—and Conley has, what?

Take the two stories—and upon these two stories the verdict in the Frank case must turn eventually—and weigh them, side by side, honestly, without prejudice, and in the light of a clean conscience.

What is your answer?

What will be the jury's answer?

The field of speculation thus opened is most engaging, and it will, if one but undertake to enter it seriously and with open mind, be well worth the entering.

In the matter of his character, Frank said little. He entered simple denials to some few things cited against him.

He was willing to be cross-examined on his statement. He himself insisted that his general character be put in issue. He furnished the State with the first information it ever had that Conley could write.

All the way through, his statement rang with confident challenge, and a dare to the State to prove anything vile in him whatever!

Now, then, people will differ as to the EFFECT Frank's statement will and ought to have on the jury.

Maybe it is a clever evasion of a grave issue—maybe it is possible of rebuttal, and maybe it will be broken down.

Impressively Delivered.

The fact remains that it was most impressively delivered, and carried with it every emphasis of apparent truth and straightforwardness!

It is my opinion now that the State has in Frank's statement the hardest thing to get away from that yet has been tendered to it.

It contradicts the State at points that the defense has been able to fortify abundantly with facts.

It makes more necessary than ever before the complete success of the State's efforts to break down Frank's good name.

For I think it safe to predict that unless the State DOES demolish Frank utterly, the wonderful statement he made on Monday more than likely will serve in connection with the other things set up—to clear him of the charge of murdering Mary Phagan!

It matters not, so far as this article is concerned, moreover, whether the statement ought to clear him—the prospect is that it WILL clear him unless the State can batter it down and collapse it entirely!

The defendant touched upon every phase of the State's case against him—the happiness of his home, his nervousness on the morning of the murder, his movements on the day of the crime, and the day before, and the day after, his family's financial resources, his disinclination to talk to Conley, although he at first talked freely to the police officers, his alleged peeping into the girls' dressing room, his lack of knowledge of or acquaintance with the impeached Dalton, his non-association with loose characters, male and female.

There was not a point he failed to touch, even though he seemed to touch points now and then with a measure of fine scorn!

Is there a gap that Frank MIGHT let down that he has FAILED to let down?

Is there a point involved that Frank has not invited investigation of?

Hard to Find Gaps.

It is rather hard to locate any such gaps or points, if they are there.

And yet they may be there! That is for the State yet to demonstrate!

The State has the full right of rebuttal, as applied to Frank's statement, that it enjoys in respect of other evidence. There may be weak points in his story—just as there were weak points in Conley's.

The point is that they are not nearly so apparent upon the surface of things in the Frank statement.

For one thing, Conley made four sworn statements, all contradictory, before he got one finally landed, and Conley admitted freely from the stand that he had lied time and again.

On the other hand, Frank's statement is the first and only sustained and sequenced utterance as to the details of his story yet falling from his lips.

It must stand in its entirety or fall in its entirety.

Whatever may be the effect of that statement in the end, it will go down in the criminal history of Georgia as one of the most remarkably clear and apparently convincing statements ever falling from a defendant's lips.

When the State gets through with it, the statement may be shot to pieces and rendered utterly ineffective.

As it stands to-day, however, I hardly think a dozen people who heard it will deny the profound impression it made, and the present probability of its determining effect upon the minds of the jury.

The defense has played its best card in Leo Frank's statement.

It remains yet to be seen, however, whether that card is sufficient to win the case!

Fresh Appeal for Exhibit To Be Made

Three hundred Atlanta manufacturers will gather at Hotel Ansley for a luncheon at 1 o'clock Tuesday. They will discuss the manufacturers' exposition which the Chamber of Commerce has been endeavoring to establish in its building.

While many manufacturers have signed for space in the exhibit, there still is a large amount which has not been taken. Unless this is arranged for immediately, the proposition is likely to fall through.

Enthusiasm has been displayed, however, and around the Chamber of Commerce the belief is that the exposition is assured.

LIND AND HUERTA REACH PEACE AGREEMENT

Report of War Move Against the United States Is Denied by Charge O'Shaughnessy.

tion from the American Government by last midnight.

He found these reports unfounded and spread the news among the members of the American colony in Mexico City. The population seemed to take it for granted that Huerta was about to make the desperate play which he long had threatened.

Secretary Bryan to-day denied that the State Department had received any ultimatum from Mexico concerning recognition of the Huerta government by any stated time, or that Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy had been given his passports and told to leave Mexico.

The State Department was informed to-day by Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy that Senor Gamboa, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has denied the statement made by Senor Urrutia, Minister of the Interior, concerning the reported ultimatum, and it is believed here that the outlook for a peaceful settlement of the troubles between the two nations is more promising at the present time than it has been in the past fortnight.

Wild Rumor Laid to Cabinet.

Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy, in his telegram to the State Department to-day, reported that President Huerta and Envoy Lind were conferring concerning the final settlement of the difficulties between the two countries. While he did not comment on the situation beyond giving a bare report of the fact, Mr. O'Shaughnessy strongly indicated that he hoped for a peaceful settlement and that the next 48 hours probably would bring developments leading to a compact between the United States and Mexico.

It is believed at the State Department that the sensational reports emanating from Mexico City last night were inspired by the Huerta Cabinet. It is thought that the Mexican newspapers were instructed to print only this story and that they will not carry the denial of this ultimatum issued by Senor Gamboa early to-day.

In this way, it is believed, the Huerta government will be enabled to "save its face" before the Mexican people without at the same time bringing on war with the United States.

New Insurance Firm Open for Business

Announcement of the establishment of the French & Lochridge Insurance Agency was made Tuesday morning by T. B. French and Clifford L. Lochridge. The new agency takes its place among the business enterprises of Atlanta with every prospect of success. Mr. French and Mr. Lochridge were with The Atlanta Constitution for several years and have made an extensive study of all forms of insurance.

They have obtained the local agency for two of the leading companies of the United States and a German company. Associated with them is John R. ("Jake") Rauschenberg, a widely known insurance man. The offices of the new agency are in the Candler Building.

PATHFINDER CAR GIVEN ROUSING WELCOMES

Sunday American's Trail-Blazing Car Reaches Tallapoosa on First Day's Run.

By HUGH GRANT.

(Sunday American Representative With Pathfinder.)

TALLAPOOSA, Aug. 19.—E. L. Ferguson, official "pathfinder" for the All-Southern Transcontinental Highway, and party ended a triumphant tour through Georgia here Monday night. The party, consisting of Mr. Ferguson, Mrs. Ferguson and the Ferguson children, arrived on schedule time at 5:45 o'clock. The tourists left early Tuesday morning for Anniston. They will be joined en route by President John Craft, of the Alabama Good Roads Association, and State Highway Engineer Keller, who will accompany them through Alabama.

That Tallapoosa is keenly awake to the importance of the monster project to blaze a trail from Atlanta to San Francisco was clearly indicated Monday night when a score of Tallapoosans, including Mayor C. E. Pearce, L. E. Chandler, editor of The Tallapoosa Journal, and other prominent citizens, held a conference with Mr. Ferguson at the Tallapoosa Hotel in regard to the formulation of plans for the development of better roads in this vicinity.

The Tallapoosa good roads boosters were very enthusiastic over the campaign inaugurated by The Sunday American, and pledged their hearty support.

All Towns Give Welcome.

Tallapoosa's warm reception, however, was only one of many between here and Atlanta. All along the 63-mile route the good roads boosters turned out to give the transcontinentalists a rousing send-off.

At Austell Mayor L. C. Upshaw and Editor Dake, of The Douglasville New Era, heading a delegation of Douglasville boosters, met the tourists and escorted them to Douglasville. Here good roads and highways were talked of, and a typical old-time Georgia dinner was served at the Douglasville Hotel, with Mayor Upshaw and Mr. Dake acting as hosts.

Other Douglasville citizens who acted as official escorts were R. E. Edwards, J. F. Long, superintendent of the cotton mill; J. M. Banks, and Douglas County Commissioners J. T. Lee and A. S. Gresham.

According to Mr. Gresham, the Douglas County authorities are preparing now to spend several thousand dollars on the development of the old Tallapoosa road. The largest work will be the construction of a new steel bridge over Sweetwater Creek costing approximately $2,000.

The improvement in Douglas County of the Tallapoosa highway which was traversed by the Ferguson party and which has been selected as the official route will make this one of the best roads in the entire State.

Pathfinder Ferguson declared Monday night that the road between Austell and Douglasville was excellent, and that he remaining sections were good and could be put in fine shape by the expenditure of moderate sums in each county.

Leaving Douglasville Monday afternoon, Mr. Ferguson and party made a bee line for Villa Rica, arriving there on schedule at 3:40. Temple, Ga., was reached shortly after 4 o'clock, Bremen at 5, Waco at 5:15 and Tallapoosa at 5:45. Members of the party reported a most delightful trip, with not a single mishap to mar the journey.

A wire from Heflin, Ala., Tuesday morning told of elaborate preparations there for the reception of Mr. Ferguson and party. From Heflin the tourists will proceed to Anniston, Ala., where a monster good roads celebration will be held a a greeting ebration will be held as a greeting guson expects to reach Birmingham Thursday at noon.

Tech Commercial Course Endowment Is Growing Rapidly

More than 25 of the 100 required guarantors for the new commercial course at Tech, to be launched at the opening of the 1913-14 term September 15, have been obtained, and an active campaign is being waged to complete the list by Saturday.

Each of the 100 guarantors is to give the sum of $25, making an endowment of $2,500. The sum may be increased later.

Classes in practical accounting, commercial law, business economics, auditing, banking and similar subjects will be taught. Afternoon classes from 4 to 6 o'clock will be conducted to give business men of Atlanta an opportunity to attend.

Professor E. C. Green, formerly of New York City, but for the past year an instructor at Tech, will be at the head of the department. Four other Tech professors will assist him. Edgar Watkins will be counsel for the law department, and Joel Hunter for the accounting.

Anniston Has World's Biggest Casting Pits

ANNISTON, Aug. 19.—Anniston's latest world-beater comes in the form of the largest casting pits in existence, it is said, at the new plant of the Lynchburg Foundry Company, which is nearing completion. The plant will make pressure pipe.

Although there are labor-saving devices on every hand at the new plant, it is said that it will employ 200 men when it is put into blast, and when the other two pits are completed this number will be doubled.

Aged Fat Man in Furs With Mercury at 100

BOSTON, Aug. 19.—While the street thermometers registered 100 here, a man aged and fat, wearing a heavy winter suit, a heavy ulster that reached the ground, heavy shoes and a fur cap, with the laps turned down over the ears, was seen wandering about the streets, seemingly cool.

SLATON APPROVES 3 ATLANTA BILLS

With more than 200 bills on Governor Slaton's desk which had to be signed immediately, the doors of the executive offices were closed to visitors Tuesday while the Governor delved into the mass of work in an effort to get the bills signed and out of the way before the next batch came from the engrossing clerks of the House and Senate.

The Governor expects to sign all the bills that reach him Tuesday before the day is over, in order to forestall any discussion as to whether Sunday shall be counted as one of the five days in which he is allowed to sign bills passed by the Legislature.

Up to Tuesday morning Governor Slaton had signed only one of the three local bills affecting Atlanta. This was the measure creating a new judge for the Atlanta Circuit, which he approved Monday afternoon. The other two, the bill creating a new charter for the city and the bill creating municipal courts, probably will be signed Tuesday.

It is understood the Governor will defer appointing the new Atlanta judge until he returns from the conference of Governors at Colorado Springs, Colo., next week. Governor Slaton will leave Saturday, to be gone about ten days.

Special Session Idea In Alabama Growing

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 19.—That Governor O'Neal may call a special session of the Legislature in order to straighten out the United States Senatorial muddle appears more likely to-day.

The anti-fee system advocates in Jefferson County, the largest county in the State, are working hard to have included in the call for the special session the anti-fee system bill. It is pointed out that the Sheriff of Jefferson County gets in fees almost as much per annum as did the President of the United States before the last increase in salary of the latter.

Suffragettes Want Baby Booth at Fairs

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Among the things that the suffragettes, headed by Harriet Stanton Blatch, want is a pocket in their skirts and a place at fairs where women can check their babies.

Mrs. Blatch visited a number of fairs throughout the State and declares it a crying shame that at not one of them did she find a place where mothers could leave their babies while they rambled around the park.

LEO M. FRANK'S COMPLETE STORY AS TOLD TO THE JURY

Accused Makes Statement Remarkable for Clarity and Wealth of Detail

'TIME TO TALK IS NOW AND I HAVE TOLD YOU WHOLE TRUTH,' HE SAYS

Leo M. Frank, in his remarkable statement to the jury, had little to say of the charges made against him until the latter part of his address, which on this account became the most interesting and most impressive portion of his talk. After going into close detail in respect to his work at the factory office the afternoon of Mary Phagan's murder, he took up the principal evidence and the principal charges against him.

He explained why he did not talk to Conley. He asserted that it was he who gave the information that Conley could write, in spite of the assertions that he had withheld this information. He made complete denial of seeing Conley on the day of the crime or of having any personal knowledge of how Mary Phagan came to her death.

Here is Frank's story as it was told with its various interruptions:

Mr. Arnold: "Now Mr. Frank, such papers as you want to use you can come down here at any time or from time to time and get them on this table right here.

The Court: "Before you commence your statement I want to read the law. In criminal procedure, the prisoner will have the right to make to the Court and jury such statement in the case as he may deem proper in his defense. It shall not be under oath and shall have such force as the jury shall think right to give it. They may believe it in preference to the sworn testimony in the case. The prisoner shall not be compelled to answer any questions on cross-examination. He should feel free to decline to answer them. Now you can make such statement as you see fit."

The defendant said: "Gentlemen of the jury, in 1884, the 17th day of April, I was born in Terrell, Tex. At the age of three months my parents took me to Brooklyn, N. Y., which became my home until I came South, to Atlanta, to make my home here. I attended the public schools of Brooklyn and prepared for college in Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"In the fall of 1902 I entered Cornell University, where I took the course of mechanical engineering, graduating after four years, in June, 1906. I then accepted a position as draughtsman with the B. F. Sturdevent Company, of Hyde Park, Mass. After remaining with this firm for about six months I returned once more to my home in Brooklyn, where I accepted a position as testing engineer and draughtsman with the National Meter Company of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"I remained with these parties until about the middle of October, 1907, when at the invitation of some citizens of Atlanta, I came South to confer with them with reference to the starting and operation of a pencil factory to be located in Atlanta. After remaining here for about two weeks I returned once more to New York, where I engaged passage and went to Europe. I remained in Europe nine months. During my sojourn abroad I studied the pencil business and looked after the erection and testing of machinery which had been previously traded for.

Looked After the Purchase of Mateials.

"In the first part of August, 1908, I returned once more to America, and immediately came South, to Atlanta, which has remained my home ever since. I married in Atlanta an Atlanta girl, Miss Lucille Selig. The major portion of my married life has been spent in the home of my parents-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. Selig, at No. 68 East Georgia avenue. My married life has been exceptionally happy, indeed—it has been the happiest days of my life.

"My duties as superintendent of the National Pencil Company were in general as follows: I took charge of the technical and mechanical end of the factory, looking after the processes and seeing that the product was turned out in quality equal to the standard which was set by our competitors. I looked after the installation of new machinery, and the purchasing of any machinery, and in addition I had charge of the office work at the Forsyth street plant, and the lead plant on Bell street.

"I looked after the purchasing of the raw material. I saw after the manufacture of pencils and kept up with the market of these materials and when the prices fluctuated so that the purchases could be made to the best possible advantage.

"On Friday, April 25, I arrived at the pencil factory on Forsyth street at about 7 o'clock, my usual time. I immediately started in on my regular routine work, looking over the papers I had laid out the evening before, and attending to any work that needed my special attention that morning.

"At about 9:30 I went over to the office of the general manager and treasurer, Mr. Sigmund Montag, whose office is at Montag Brothers on Nelson street. I stayed over there a short time, and got what papers had arrived in the mail—all the mail of the pencil factory comes over to their office. I got that mail and brought it back to the Forsyth street office. I then separated the mail and continued in my usual routine duties in the office on Forsyth street.

"At about 11 o'clock Mr. Schiff handed me the payrool book, covering the plants at Forsyth street and Bell street, for me to check over and see if the amounts and extensions were correct. Of course, this work has to be very carefully done, so that the proper amount of money is drawn from the bank. This checking took me until about 12:20 p. m.

Went to Bank To Get Pay Money.

"I then went over to Montag Brothers, took the checks drawn and had them signed by Mr. Sig-Montag, after which I returned to Forsyth street and got the leather bag in which I usually carried the money and the coin from the bank, and got the payroll slip, on which the various demoniations which I desired to have on the payroll were made out, and went, accompanied by Mr. Herbert Schiff, my assistant, to the Atlanta National Bank, where I had the checks cashed.

"Returning to the factory in company with Mr. Schiff, I placed this bag containing the money for the payroll, in the safe and locked it. At this time my wife called for me and in her company and that of Mr. Schiff I went over to the car, and went with my wife home to lunch. After lunch I returned to the factory and took a tour for about an hour through the factory, after which I then assisted Mr. Schiff in checking over the amounts on the pay envelopes, checking the money against the duplicate slips that we had got from the bank to see that the correct amount had been given us, and helped Mr. Schiff in checking over the money and in filling the envelopes.

"This took us approximately until a quarter to six to fill the envelopes and seal them, and place them in a box we have there with two hundred pigeon holes in it, that we call our payoff box.

Paid One Man Check in Cash.

"While I was so occupied with Mr. Schiff in filling the envelopes, a young man named Wright who had helped us out in the office as clerk during the past week came in and I paid him in cash, as Mr. Schiff had neglected to put his name on the payroll. I just made out a ticket and put it in the payroll box, not the cash box, and continued in the office with Mr. Schiff, taking all the envelopes that were due the help that had worked from April 18 to April 24, inclusive, to pay them through the window in one side of the office. There is a little window built in the hall. I had stayed in my office, checking over the amount of money which had been left there.

"This amount should have been equal to the amount loaned out in advance to the help. I took a ticket out when we were filling the envelopes in checking this amount there. As near as I recollect it, it was about $15.

"I noticed a shortage of about $1.20, or something over a dollar, at any rate, and I kept checking to see if I could find the shortage shortage in the various deductions which had been made. I could not locate it that evening, after the help had been paid off, during which time I stayed in my office. No one came into my office and asked me for the envelope or for an envelope of any other party.

"After the paying off of the help had taken place, Mr. Schiff returned and handed me the envelopes which were left over, bound with an elastic band, and I put them in the cash compartment, which is different from the the cash box, the key to which is kept in my cash box, and placed them in the safe, and Mr. Schiff placed the amounts in the box, and placed the box in the safe and left them.

Tells of Puting Slips in Time Clock.

"I placed the time clock slips which were to be used the next day. I took the two time slips dated April 25, which had been used by the help on Friday, April 25—these are the two that I put in the slot" exhibiting the same to the jury.)

Mr. Dor thereupon vigorously protested that Mr. Frank should be allowed to exhibit these slips to the jury, because they had not been offered in evidence, on the grounds that they were immaterial and irrelevant, and on the second ground that he could not put them in evidence on his own statement.

Consel for the defendant insisted, however, that they should be allowed to offer these slips in evidence, as they had been testified to by Mr. Darley and others. The testimony, however, was not produced, and Judge Roan ruled that Mr. Frank might make any statement concerning the same, but that he would withhold his ruling until fur er investigation. Mr. Frank thereupon proceeded to explain to the jury.

"Gentlemen, as I was saying, these two slips that have April 26, 1913, written at the bottom are the two slips I put in the clock on the evening of Friday, April 25, to be used on the day following, which, of course, was April 26.

Darley's Duty to Employ All Help.

"I neglected to mention also, in going over my duties at the factory, that Mr. Darley was superintendent of labor and manufacture, and it fell to his duty to engage the help and distribute the help throughout the plant, and to discharge the help in case it was necessary. It was also due to him whether the wages were raised or not. In other words, he was the man that came directly in contact with the help. Moreover, he saw that the goods progressed through the plant without stopping, speedily and economically for their manufacture.

'On Friday evening I got home at about 6:30, had my supper, washed up, and with my wife played a game of auction bridge at a friend's home in the evening. My wife and I returned home and retired about 11 o'clock.

"On Saturday, April 26, I rose between 7 and 7:30 and leisurely washed and dressed and ate my breakfast, and caught a Washington Street or Georgia Avenue car. I don't really remember which, at the corner of Washington and Georgia avenue, and arrived at the factory, Forsyth street plant, at about 8:20.

"Upon my arrival at the factory I found Mr. Holloway, the day watchman, at his usual place, and I greeted him in my usual way, and found Alonzo Mann, the office boy, in the office.

"I took off my coat and hat and opened my desk and opened the safe, and removed the various books and files and wire trays containing the v ious imporant papers which were placed there the evening before and distributing them in their proper places about the office. I then went out to the shipping room and conversed a few minutes with Mr. Irby, who was at that time shipping clerk, about the work he was going to do that morning.

"According to my recollection, we did no shipping that day, owing to the fact that the freight offices were not receiving any shipments, due to the fact that it was a holiday.

"I returned to my office and looked through the papers and sorted out those which I was going to take over on my usual trip to the general manager's office that morning.

"I then turned to the invoice covering shipments which were made by the pencil factory on Thursday, April 24, and which were typewritten on Friday, April 25, by Miss Eubanks, who was the stenographer who stayed at my office. She had hurried through with the office work on the day previous, so that she could go home and spend the holiday in the country where she lived. But I didn't get to check over the invoices on the shipments on Friday, due to the fact that Mr. Schiff and myself were completely occupied the entire day. So we left the factory with the payroll. So that naturally, these invoices covering shipments which were made on April 24, ought to have been sent to the customers, and I got right to work checking them.

Shows Invoices to Jury First Time.

"Now I have these invoices here (taking up the papers and exhibiting them to the jury). These papers have not been exhibited to you before, but I will explain them. You have seen some similar to these.

"Of all the mathematical work in the office of a pencil factory, this very operation, this very piece of work that I have now before me is the most important. It is the invoices covering shipments and is sent to the customer, and it is very important that the prices are correct, that the amount of goods shipped agrees with the amount which is on the invoices, that the terms are correct, and that the price is correct. Also, in some cases, ther were freight deductions, all of which has to be very carefully checked over and looked into, because I know of nothing else that exasperates a customer more than to receive invoices which are incorrect.

"Now, with reference to the work I did on these orders—that is not such an easy job as you might be led to believe. Here are initials. They represent the salesman who took the order. Sometimes I have to go through a world of papers to find out to whom to credit these orders.

"I notice that one of the orders to R. B. Kindele calls for a specialty. That has to be carefully noted and recorded. One column represents the shipping point, another the date, etc.

"The next step is to fill in the orders on this sheet. On this sheet I must separate the orders into price groups. Evidently no work has been done on this sheet since he went away. The reason this is done —in the pencil business as in all manufacturing businesses—it is advantageous to sell as much of the high-proiced goods as possible.

"This sheet is the only means of telling how much of the various goods we are selling. It is the barometer of our business and requires most careful work.

Declares He Wrote Financial Sheet.

"After I have finished that work I have had to do this, and notwithstanding any insinuations that have been made, I wrote these requisitions."

Frank read the name on each requisition, which were the same as the names on the orders.

"Now that is all my handwriting, except what as written at a subsequent date to April 26."

"Well, moreover, this operation this morning took me longer than it usually takes the ordinary person to check invoices because usually one calls out and the other checks, but I had this work all myself that morning. As I did this work this morning I saw that Miss Eubanks had evidently sacrificed accuracy to speed, and everyone of them was wrong. I went over the invoices to make the corrections, figure them out, correct them, and make deductions, if any were to be made, and then get the total shipments, because since these shipments were made on April 24, which was Thursday and the last day of our fiscal week, and it was on this week which the financial report which I make out every Saturday afternoon, which has been my custom, so that the total shipments could be figured out, and therefore I could not let it go out at that, so I had to figure every invoice in its entirety, so I could get a figure I would be able to use.

"The first order here is to Hilton, Hart & Kern Co., Detroit, Mich. Here is the original order, which exists in our files in our office. Here is the original transaction which was made March 18, but it was not to be shipped until April 24. This is a small order, 100 gross of Number 2; and here is an order of the Packard Motor Car Company for 125 gross of No. 3, and 150 gross of No. 4. Those figures represent the grade of hardness of the lead in the pencil."

Explains How Orders are Filled.

Frank thereupon explained how such orders were usually filled, whether in part or in whole, and how the shipments were made, and continuing, said:

"In investigating shipments made by the pencil company our method is as follows: We make them in triplicate. Our first original is a white sheet that goes to the customer; the second is a pink sheet that goes over to the general manager's office and is filed serially, that is, one date after the other, nad from that the charges are made on the ledger, and the last sheet, the third sheet, or yellow sheet, which is here (exhibiting it) and those are placed in the files in my office, and are filed alphabetically. These yellow sheets that I have here are not the yellow sheets I had that day, because they have since been corrected, and I am just taking the corrected sheets I made the corrections and Miss Eubanks corrected them on Monday by the corrections I had on the white sheet from the corrections I made and I presume at that time made that correct."

Mr. Frank exhibited to the jury various orders similarly written, to H. W. Williams and Company, of Fort Worth, Tex.; The Fort Smith Paper Company, of Fort Smith, Ark.; S. O. Barnum & Sons, of Buffalo, N. Y.; F. L. Schmidt and Company, of Chicago, and H. S. Kress and Company, of New York.

"Now, there is an order that takes a great deal of study (referring t othe Kress order) because in common with these five and ten cent syndicates, there is a great deal of red tape. These are invoices that were typed on April 25, Friday, and were shipped on April 24. It was the date on which the shipment was made irrespective of the date there, (referring to the date on the letter) and these were typewritten. In other words, shipments took place April 24, and that date was at the top, typewritten and stamped by the office at the bottom, April 24. Among other things that the S. H. Kress Company demand on their orders, we must state whether or not it is complete, must give the case number, and must tell by which railroad the shipment goes.

Checking Made Hard By Much Red Tape.

"Here is one for F. W. Woolworth and Company, Fort Wayne, Ind., which shows 35 pounds, less 86 cents per 100 pounds credit. In other words, we had to find out what was the weight of that was on a basis of 86 cents for every 100 pounds shipped. Then here is another one of our large distributors in New York. They have a freight allowance of 86 cents a 100 pounds also, and their shipments amounted to 618 pounds on Thursday, April 24.

"I started on this work. As I said, I have gone into it in some detail, to show you the carefulness with which the work must be carried out, and I was at work on this until about 9 o'clock, as near as I remember.

"Mr. Darley and Wade Campbell, the inspector of the factory, came into the outer office and I stopped what work I was doing, which was this work, and went to the outer office and chatted with Mr. Campbell for ten or fifteen minutes, conversed with them, joked with them and while I was talking with them, I think about 9:15, or a quarter after 9, Miss Mattie Smith came in and asked me for her pay envelope, and the envelope of her sister-in-law. I went to the safe and got out the package of envelopes that Mr. Schiff had given me the evening before, and placed the two remaining envelopes in my cash box, as I considered they might come in and I wanted to have them near at hand so that I could pay them off when they came in. I keep my cash box on the lower side of my desk. After Miss Smith had gone away with the envelopes, in a few minutes Mr. Darley came back with one of the envelopes, and pointed out an error in one of them, the one of the sister-in-law of Miss Mattie Smith, who had gotten too much money.

"When I took the amount which was too much, that amount balanced the error in the payroll that I had noticed the night before, and left about five or ten cents. Those things generally right themselves, anyhow. I continued to work on these invoices when I was interrupted by Mr. Lyon, the superintendent of Montag Brothers, and he brought me a pencil display box. He seemed to be in a hurry, and I told him if he would wait a minute I would go over with him, but he passed out of the office, and then I found a stopping place in the work I was working on, and I put on my coat and when I got to the outer office I found that Mr. Lyon had already left.

"Mr. Darley and I left about 9:35 or 9:40, and we got out of the factory and stopped at the corner of Hunter and Forsyth streets, where we each had a drink at Cruickshank's soda fountain, and I bought a package of my favorite cigarettes.

"After that conversation there I left him and went alone to Montag Brothers, where I arrived about 10 o'clock or maybe a little after. I entered Montag Brothers and spoke to Mr. Sig Montag, general manager, on business, and he brought the papers which I collect and laid them on his desk, and I then took the papers out, thrust them in the folder and took the other papers which I had in my folder, and then distributed them at the proper places in the Montag plant. I don't know just which ones they were.

Conversation With Miss Hall Recalled.

"In chatting with Mr. Montag I spoke to Mr. Montag and Mr. Korse, after that I spoke to Miss Hattie Hall, the pencil company's stenograpaher, who stays at Montag Brothers, and asked her to come over and help me that morning, as I have already told you, that these invoices were wrong, and I wanted her to help me on that work, and could not take it up to-morrow. In fact, I told her I had enough work to keep her busy that whole afternoon if she would stay. She said she didn't want to do that; she wanted to have at least a half holiday.

"I then spoke to members of the Montag Brothers force, on business matters, and then other matters. Alsuo I then spoke to Mr. Guttenheim, who was sales manager of the Montag Brothers and of the pencil factory, and then spoke to him about several of his orders that were in the factory. There were two of his orders that he paid special stress on that were desired to be shipped right away. I said, 'I don't know how una far along in the process of manufacture the orders have proceeded, but if you can come back I can look it up and tell you when they can be shipped.' He said he could not come then, but he would come a little later. I told him I would be glad if he would come up a little later on in the afternoon; that I would be there until about 1 o'clock in the morning, and then about half past three. I then took the folder and returned.

Arrived at Factory At About 11 o'Clock.

"Upon arrival at the pencil factory I went up to the second or office floor, and then I noticed that the clock was perhaps five minutes after 11 o'clock, and I saw Mr. Holloway there, and I told him he could go as soon as he got ready. He told me he had some work to do for Harry Denham and Arthur White, who wanted to do some repairing on the top floor, and that he would do the work first.

"I then went to the office, and found Miss Hattie Hall, who had preceded me from Montag Brothers, and another young lady, who introduced herself to me as Mrs. Arthur White. Mrs. White wanted to see her husband. I went into the inner office, and took off my hat and coat and removed the papers which I had brought back from Montag Brothers and put the folder away.

Week's Sheet Left In Incomplete Form.

"It was about this time that I first heard the elevator motor start up, and the circular saw in the carpenter shop which was near to it, and I heard it sawing through some boards and thought it was evidently the work that Mr. Holloway had referred to.

"I seperated the orders from the letters which required answers, and took from them the letters that did not need immediate attention and laid them in the various places, and it was about this time I had an idea I would like to see how far along the report sheets were which I used in getting up the financial report every Saturday afternoon. To my surprise I found that the sheet contains the records of the pencils packed for the week had been entered for Thursday. The last day of the fiscal week was omitted, and Mr. Schiff, evidently in the stress of figuring out and filling the envelopes for the ayroll for Friday instead of Saturday, had evidently not had enough time. I told Alonzo Mann, the office boy, to call up Mr. Schiff and find out when he was coming down, and Alonzo said that the answer came back over the telephone that Mr. Schiff would be right down, so I didn't pay any more attention to that part of the work, because I expected Mr. Schiff to come down any minute.

Mrs. Freeman and Corinthia Hall Came In.

"It was about this time that Mrs. Emma Clark Freeman and Miss Corinthia Hall, two of the girls that worked on the fourth floor, came upstairs and asked to go upstairs and get Mrs. Freeman's coat, which permission I gave them. I told them at the same time to tell Arthur White that his wife was downstairs. A few minutes after they left my office two gentlemen came in, one of them Mr. Graham, and another gentleman, fathers of two boys who had gotten into some trouble during the noon recess and were taken down to police headquarters, and, of course, could not get their pay envelopes the night before. I gave the required envelopes to the two fathers, and chatted with them at some length in reference to the trouble that their boys had gotten into on the day previous.

"Just before they left the office Mrs. Emma Clark Freeman and Mrs. Corinthia Hall came into my office and asked my permission to use the telephone, and started using the telephone during the time these two gentlemen left my office. Previous to the time these two gentlemen came in I had called Miss Mattie Hall in and dictated what mail I had to give her, and she went out and was typewriting the mail.

Frank went back to the stand. He was handed a glass of water as he resumed his seat, but declined it.

"Miss Hall left my office" he continued, "on her way home at this time. There were then in the building Arthur White, Harry Denham and Mrs. White. It must have been from ten to fifteen minutes after that this little girl whom I afterwards found to be Mary Phagan came in. She asked asked for her pay. I got my cash box, referred to the number and gave her the envelope.

"As she went out, she stopped near my outer office door and said:

"'Has the metal come?'

Sound of Voice Made Little Impression.

"The safe door was open and I could not see her, but I answered 'No.' The last I heard was the sound of her footsteps going down the hall. But a few moments after she asked me, I had the impression of a voice saying something, but it made no impression on me.

"The little girl had hardly left the office when Lemmie Quinn came in. He said something to me about working on a holiday and went out. A few minutes before 1 o'clock, I called up my wife and told her I was coming to lunch at 1:15. I then went upstairs to where Denham and White were working and found they had a bit of the floor taken up and were sawing.

"I explained to them that I was going to lunch and would lock the door when I left. Mrs. White left at this time. Some lady said that at 12:35 o'clock she found me in front of the safe. It is barely possible that she did. I don't recall her being there. Her memory probably is fresher than mine on this point.

'When I went up stairs I asked Mr. White if his wife was going to stay there with him. She said no, that she would go. She left and then I got my hat and coat and left, locking the outer door.

"Now, gentlemen, to the best of my recollection from the time the whistle blew until I went upstairs to see Mr. White, I did not stir out of my office. I went on home.

"I called up my brother-in-law, Mr. Ursenbach, to tell him I was unable to keep the engagement to go to the ball game. The cook answered the phone.

"My wife and mother-in-law were going to the opera. My father-in-law and I ate lunch. He went into the backyard while I lit a cigarette and lay down for a moment.

"I left and while passing the home of Mrs. Wolfsheimer, saw Mrs. Michael on the porch. I went in to see her and saw Mrs. Wolfsheimer, Mr. Loeb and others.

Watched Parade When Street Cars Stopped.

"To catch the next car I ran down to Glenn street. On the car I met my wife's cousin, Mr. Loeb. The car was blocked at the corner of Washington and Hunter streets. I walked up to Whitehall street and stood there possibly for fifteen minutes watching the Memorial Day parade.

"As I walked down Whitehall street I met Miss Rebecca Carson. This was probably 3:10 or 3:15 o'clock. I greeted her and walked on. I stopped at Jacobs' Pharmacy and walked on. I went from there to the factory.

"When I reached there I went upstairs and let the boys know I had returned. A minute later, I returned to my office and started to work on the financial sheet.

"In a few minutes the clock bell rang and Arthur White came into the office to borrow two dollars. It was while I was at work on the sheet at probably 4 o'clock that I went to the toilet.

"As I returned toward the office, Inoticed Newt Lee coming toward me from the head of the stairs. I told him he could go on off but to be sure and be back at 6 o'clock. I told him I was very sorry I could not let him know about the half holiday but that he was at liberty to enjoy himself as he saw fit, but that he must not fail to return at 6 o'clock.

"The first night that Newt Lee came to work at the factory, I took him over the building, and stressed the fact that he must go into the basement, especially the dust bin, every half hour.

"I told him it would be part of his duties to watch the back door. He was to make a complete tour every half hour and punch the clock.

"Now, I will return to the work of the financial sheet. This sheet contains the cost of all the pencils made that week. There are no names but this sample case will show you."

Evidence Excluded But Jury Sees It.

Frank unfolded a sample case.

Dorsey: "We object to this being used as evidence."

Judge Roan: "I sustain you."

Frank placed the sample case to one side.

"Well," he said, "you got a sufficient glance at those pencils to see there were a great many."

"In making up this sheet it was necessary to go through the list of all that were packed. Specials, of course, have to be figured separately.

"For instance, there is a special 60-60-x pencil known as 'Crackerjack.' Now I notice that the two expert accountants reported two errors. While they were unimportant, I wish to explain that those errors were not mine. They were made by Mr. Schiff. I never checked his figures. I checked over mine, but not his.

"Now the next is 'jobs.' The accountant found the only error in my financial sheet there in the item 'jobs.' It was not an error, as I will show you. He did not know my method of figuring.

"Two items here are totals. The total gross amount is 791 gross, the total value amount $396.75. In figuring the average I obtained $50.01. In that average he discovered an error. It was not an error. I simply did not go as far into the decimals as he did. One-tenth of a cent was close enough for my purpose.

"Now some of the items in here are taken from the reports of the foremen of the different departments."

Frank then exhibited a report from the foreman or forewoman of each department and explained it.

"Then there is the report of Mr. Schiff, showing the gross of pencils shipped each day of that week—that week was an exceptionally heavy one.

"Now there is a little report here that constitutes one of the most difficult calculations. It is from the packing room. We have a trick of the trade to put the pencils that do not sell very fast into fancy packages to make them go.

"Now, very often these pencils are taken from the shelf, where they have laid for more than a year, and repacked in the fancy cases. I made all the calculations on this that afternoon, despite everything that has been said here to the contrary.

"Now here is a little sheet that deals with the grades of the pencils. It shows the totals for each class of pencils shipped that week. This data sheet—we have had very few clerks at the Forsyth street office capable of keeping it, because it requires rather advanced mathematics to reach the totals."

"Now I will have to get all my thoughts on this sheet. I isn't a hard job but it is a very tedious one and requires much care and accuracy. Here is rubber—cheap rubber and good rubber. Now it has been intimated that some of these items—this one in particular, if I am not mistaken—that I could take two that were already figured and subtract them from the total and get the cost of the third.

"That is not so. Some of the pencils haven't any rubber in them at all. I have to go through the same tedious operation on each item. There are various sorts of packing boxes used. Then there are the skeletons in the boxes. Some pencils don't have skeletons at all.

"All these items must be gone through accurately to get correct results of this sheet. Then there is no section on this data sheet showing the cost of tips. You can5t use rubbers without tips, so, after figuring them, I just added them to the rubbers.

"Some pencils take wrappers and some don't. The very cheap pencils are tied with a cord, so we have the same tedious figuring again.

"The slat item is not worked out because I could not find the data. I just put it off until Monday.

"Here are the jobs—the payroll at Forsyth street and the payroll at Bell street.

"Now the shipments were figured for the week. I did part of that work in the morning and I explained to you about the invoices being wrong. Well, here are the items on this financial sheet. Then, as to the orders received. Entering the orders received that day involved no more work than transferring.

Has Own Method of Figuring Cost Data.

"Here they are in comparison to the amount shipped.

"One of the most intricate things in making out this financial sheet is figuring the cost data. This sheet I may say is a child of my own brain. The first one gotten out was gotten out by myself.

"This item here gives us the net value and the net amount of money the pencil factory received for its pencils. The burden that a business has to carry is its fixed charges—rent, insurance, certain salaries, etc.—the charges that are the same whether great or few pencils are made.

"The machine shop is variable. We did make many machines at first, but later the machine shop was used solely for upkeep. The slats are figured at 22 a gross. That cost was simple multiplication.

"The figuring of that price is not done in making out the financial sheet Saturday afternoon. Mr. Montag and myself figure that in advance, making allowance for profit, breakage, etc.

"I have here on the report of April 26 'Slats, not complete;' that was because Schiff had not made out the slat report, and I planned to complete it Monday morning before taking it to Montag.

"Now, beside the making this large sheet here and the financial sheet, there aer three other sheets that I made out. Now, I want to call your attention to this. I did not typewrite it. I merely filled in the blanks. I have several of them typewritten and keep them in my desk.

"In addition to that I make out two condensed financial sheets, showing the principal figures. They are sufficient for a director or stockholder to see what the factory is doing.

Mailed Statements To Stockholders.

"One of these statements I mailed to my uncle, Mr. M. Frank, who is president of the company, and the other to Oscar Papenheimer, who was a director.

"I put one in an envelope and addressed i tto Mr. Oscar Papenheimer; the other I sent to my uncle along with a price list, and I wrote him this letter.

"This price list is too long for an ordinary envelope, hence the large envelope.

"After finishing the financial sheet, I folded the large sheet and addressed it to Mr. Selig Montag. I then took up the checking up of the cash and balancing of the cash book. I did that work as near as I remember, between 5:30 and 5 minutes to 6 o'clock. It did not take me an hour and a half. I did it in about 25 minutes. There was $30.54. There couldn't have been any more. It was mostly in small change. There was one loan to Mr. White, making the total amount of cash $28.50.

"Beginning that week, we had $39.25 as a balance. We drew two checks of $15 each—I mean by that that we went to Mr. Montag's office and had him draw the checks. The total amount of money we had to account for was

LIE DIRECT IS GIVEN TO CONLEY'S STORY

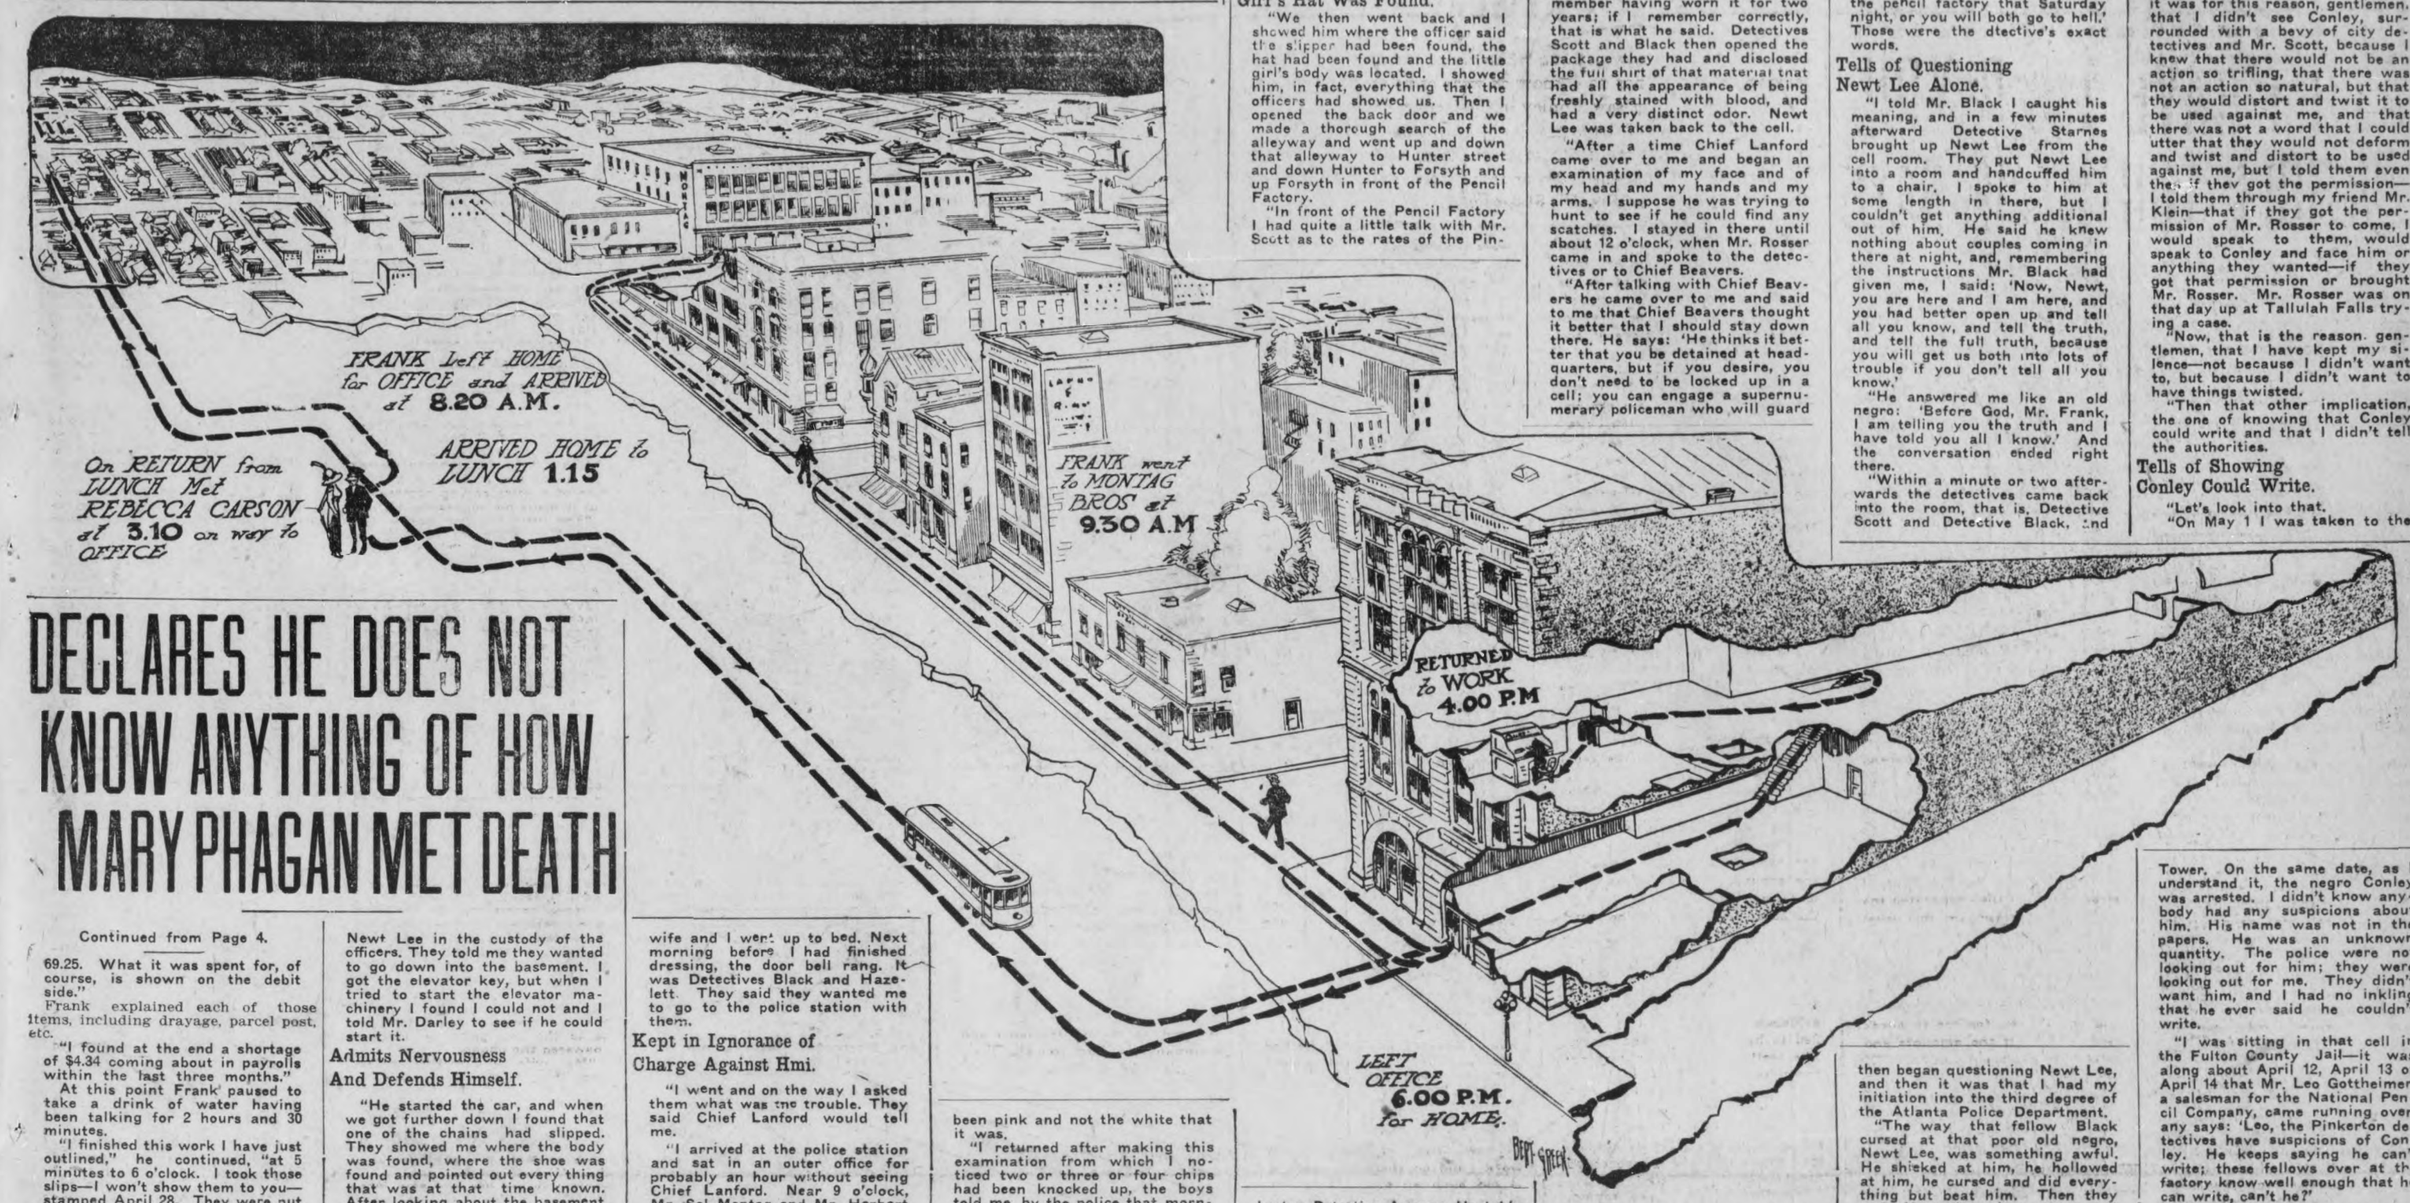

Gentlemen, I know nothing whatever of the death of little Mary Phagan, I had no part in causing her death, nor do I know ho wshe came to her death after she took her money and left my office. I never even saw Conley in the factory or anywhere else on that date, April 26, 1913.

The statement of the negro Conley is a tissue of lies from first to last. I know nothing whatever of the cause of the death of Mary Phagan, and Conley's statement as to his coming up and helping me dispose of the body, or that I had anything to do with her or to do with him is a monstrous lie.—From Frank's Statement.

69.25. What it was spent for, of course, is shown on the debit side."

Frank explained each of those items, including drayage, parcel post, etc.

"I found at the end a shortage of $4.34 coming about in payrolls within the last three months."

At this point Frank paused to take a drink of water having been talking for 2 hours and 30 minutes.

"I finished this work I have just outlined," he continued, "at 5 minutes to 6 o'clock. I took those slips—I won't show them to you—stamped April 28. They were put into the clock because no one was coming into the office until Monday.

"Newt Lee's punches on Monday night would appear on the strip placed on the clock Monday night. Just before I left I put a new tape in the clock and made Newt Lee punch it. Then he went on down stairs to wait and let me out.

"As I started out of the factory, I saw Newt Lee talking to a man named Gantt, who had been released about two weeks before. I gave them permission to go into the factory and get Gant's shoes which he said were left there and I told Newt Lee to go with him.

"I reached home at about 6:25 o'clock and at 6:30, thinking Newt Lee would be near the clock, I called him over the phone to see if everything was all right. I could not get him. I called again at 7 o'clock and again at 7:30. At that time I got him and he told me everything was all right.

"That night my parents-in-law had company at the home. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Marcus, Mrs. Goldstein, Mrs. M. Marx, Mrs. A. B. Marx, Mr. Ike Strauss—who came in at about 10 o'clock. I read a magazine until about 10:30 and then retired."

Told Officer He Did Not Know Girl.

At this juncture the jury retired for five minutes.

Frank conferred with his attorneys while the jury was out. Upon its return he resumed:

"I believe I have taken in every move Saturday night. I retired Saturday night. Sunday morning about 7 o'clock I was awakened by the telephone ringing and a man's voice which I afterwards found out to be Detective Starnes, said: "I want you to come down to the factory.' 'What is the trouble?' I asked. 'Has there been a fire?' 'No,' he said. 'A tragedy has occurred.' I said, 'All right,' and he said he would send an auto.

"They came before I finished dressing. At this point I differ with the detectives, Black and Starnes, about where the conversation took place. They say it was after we were in the machine. I say it was before we left the house, before my wife. At any rate, here is what was said:

"They asked me if I knew Mary Phagan. I answered that I did not. They asked me if I did not pay off a little girl with long hair down her back the afternoon before. I said I did. They said they wanted me to go to the undertaking establishment to see if I could identify the boyd. They made the trip to the undertaking establishment very quickly. I went in and stood in the doorway. The attendant removed the sheet from the little girl's face and turned the head toward me. His finger was right by the cut on the head. I noticed her nostrils were filled with dirt and cinders and there were several discolorations. I noticed a piece of cord around her neck, the kind we used in the pencil factory. I said it looked like a little girl that came to the factory the day before. They had already told me it was Mary Phagan. We went to the factory and by examining the payroll I found that Mary Phagan had drawn her pay the day before and that the amount was $1.20.

"As we went into the factory I noticed Mr. Darley going in. We went to the office and I found Newt Lee in the custody of the officers. They told me they wanted to go down into the basement. I got the elevator key, but when I tried to start the elevator machinery I found I could not and I told Mr. Darley to see if he could start it.

Admits Nervousness And Defends Himself.

"He started the car, and when we got further down I found that one of the chains had slipped. They showed me where the body was found, where the shoe was found and pointed out every thing that was at that time known. After looking about the basement we got some nails and a hammer, and Mr. Darley nailed up the back door. Back upstairs Mr. Darley, Chief Lanford ana myself went on a tour of inspection of the three upper floors. We went through the metal room, the same metal room that has figured so prominently in this trial, and neither Mr. Darley nor myself noticed anything particular on that floor. Nor did Sergeant Lanford, chief of the Atlanta detective force.

"We went to the time clock. I took out the slip and a casual note of this ship would indicate nothing was on it. There was something on it. It had been partially rubbed out. It could not be rubbed out altogether without rubbing out the printed lines. I did write with a pencil across the face of it, '8:26 a. m.' We noticed a slip but overlooked any skips. I folded the time slip as it is now and handed it to Chief Lanford. Now, gentlemen, I have heard a great deal during this trial about nervousness.

"I was nervous. I was completely unstrung. Imagine yourself called from sound slumber in the early hours of the morning, whisked through the chill morning air without breakfast, to go into that undertaking establishment and see the light suddenly flashed on a scene like that. To see that little girl on the dawn of womanhood so cruelly murdered—it was a scene that would have melted stone. Is it any wonder I was nervous?"

"I got in an automobile and sat on Mr. Darley's knee. I was trembling, perhaps. Later Sunday morning, I went to the home of Mr. Sig Montag and told him what had occurred. I got home about 11 o'clock. My wife and I went over to my sister-in-law's, Mrs. Ursenbach's, and with a number of friends we discussed the tragedy.

"We went back home to dinner and mentioned there the terrible crime. After dinner I read a short time and about 10 minutes to 3o'clock caught a car downtown.

"The conversation on the car was about the little girl that had been found dead in the factory. At 3:10 o'clock I went back to the undertaking establishment and found Joe Stelka there.

"On Monday I went to the police station with Darley and he said he would like to talk to Newt Lee alone. We were shown the two notes found by the side of the slain girl."

Frank then described the notes.

"Now, on one of the notes there was an erasure, but the tracing was still discernable. It was January 11, 1912. The order number was very indistinct, but it was evidently an old serial number.

"Returning to my home at 4:15 I met Mr. Haas and he asked me about the murder. Seveay people on the street also asked me.

"I remained at home until 5 o'clock, then I went to Mr. Montag's home and made a report of the tragedy to him. From there I went to the home of Mr. Marcus where I had reecived a telephone message from my wife, and I went by there to get her.

"At supper that night the conversation was again about the murder. After supper I read the paper. I called up Mr. Marcus and asked him if he would come down. He said he could not.

"Mr. and Mrs. Selig had a party that night. About 10 o'clock, my wife and I went up to bed. Next morning before I had finished dressing, the door bell rang. It was Detectives Black and Hazelett. They said they wanted me to go to the police station with them.

Kept in Ignorance of Charge Against Hmi.

"I went and on the way I asked them what was the trouble. They said Chief Lanford would tell me.

"I arrived at the police station and sat in an outer office for probably an hour without seeing Chief Lanford. Near 9 o'clock, Mr. Sel Montag and Mr. Herbert Haas came down. Near 10 o'clock I saw Mr. Rosser. He came in and said, "Hello boys, what's the trouble.'

"Mr. Haas took him off to one side. Chief Lanford came out and said to me: 'Come in here.'

"I went into his office. He handed me the time slips and if I am not mistaken this same time slip had the figures still unerased: '8:26 a. m.'

"I took the slip and examined it closely, discovering the slips. There seemed to be some altercation about Mr. Rosser getting into the room with me. I heard him say: 'I am going into that room. That man is my client.' Chief Beavers asked me if I would give him a statement.

"I heard Mr. Rosser say: "Why, it's preposterous. The man who did that would have signs on his body." I jumped up and, opening my clothes, let the detectives see for themselves.

"I then gave them a statement, willingly and freely and without any reluctance. Then one of them said something about examining my linen at my home. I knew that none of it had gone to the laundry at that time and invited the detectives to make a search, which they did. Mr. Herbert Schiff went with them. They were very well satisfied with the search, or rather, they found nothing.

Employed Pinkertons To Aid the Police.

"That afternoon I telephoned Mr. Schiff to get Mr. Montag's permission to employ the Pinkertons to aid the police. I told him I would be down about 3 o'clock.

"I went around to Mr. Wolfsheimers, got into his automobile and went down town. I saw Mr. Schiff, Mr. Darley and a number of others, including Mr. Quinn.

"Mr. Quinn said he wanted to take me back to the metal room where it was claimed blood spots had been discovered and where the hair on the lathe was discovered by Mr. Barrett.

"I examined them closely, particularly the spots. I did not examine them standing up. I got down on my knees and examined them with a strong electric flashlight and I arrived at certain conclusions.

"That floor is grease, soap and dirt covered to a thickness varying from a quarter to half an inch.

"To return to that spot. I don't claim it was not blood. The space where these spots were adjoins the ladies' dressing room. There have been accidents which may not have been brought out in this trial. We do not report every time one of the employees cuts his finger.

"There are all sorts of paints around the factor I have seen girls drop bottles in the hall, not exactly at that point, but near there. But the point about those spots is that when I examined them there was over them an accumulation of dirt not of days or weeks, but of at least three months.

Phoned to Prevent Alarm of Family.

"The white stuff was not fresh. It was dry. And another thing: if that compound had been put on the blood fresh, it would have been pink and not the white that it was.

"I returned after making this examination from which I noticed two or three or four chips had been knocked up, the boys told me, by the police that morning. I returned to my office and gathered up what papers I had to take over to Montag Brothers, and I took over the financial report which I had made out the Saturday afternoon previous, and I talked it over with Mr. Sig Montag.

"I had a good long conversation with Mr. Montag with reference to the occurrences that morning, and we decided that since the papers had stated that I was being detained at headquarters, it would be best to tell my uncle, who was ill and who is an elderly man, being over 70 years of age, and who was on the point of taking a trip to Europe, and whom I didn't want unnecessarily alarmed by seeing in the papers that I was detained.

"So I wrote a telegram to Mr. Adolph Montag informing him that I was no longer in custody, that I was all right and that he could communicate that to my uncle. That was so that my uncle should not get hold of an Atlanta paper and see that I was in custody and be unnecessarily alarmed.

"I returned from Montag Brothers' to the pencil factory, being accompanied by one of the traveling men, Mr. Hines (Mr. Sol Hines), and on my arrival at the factory I went up into the office and distributed the various papers all over the factory to be acted on the next day. In a few minutes Mr. Harry Scott, of the Pinkerton detectives, came in and I took him aside into my office, my private office, and spoke to him in the presence of Mr. M. V. Darley and Mr. Herbert Schiff.

Told of Mrs. White Seeing a Negro.

"I told him that I expected that he had seen what had happened at the pencil factory by readinn the newspapers and knew all the details. He said he didn't read the newspapers and didn't know the details, so I sat down and gave him all the details that I could, and in addition I told him something which Mr. Darley had that afternoon communicated to me, viz, that Mrs. White had told him that on going into the factory at about 12 o'clock noon on Saturday, April 26, she had seen some negro down by the elevator shaft. Mr. Darley had told me this and I just told this to Mr. Scott.

"After I told Mr. Scott all that I could, I took him around the building, took him first back to the metal room and showed him the place where the hair had been found, looked at the machinery and at the lathe, looked at the table on which the lathe stands, and the lathe bed and the floor underneath the lathe, and there wasn't a spot, much less a blood spot underneath. I showed him the other spot in front of the dressing room, and I took him to the fourth floor and showed him where I had seen White and Denham a little before 1 the first time and about 3 the second time.

"Then I took him down into the basement and made a thorough search of the basement, and that included an examination of the elevator well which was at the bottom of the elevator shaft.

"I noticed Mr. Scott was foraging around down there and he picked up two or three or maybe four articles and put them in his pocket and one of them I specially noticed was a piece of cord exactly like that which had been found around the little girl's neck.

Showed Where Girl's Hat Was Found.

"We then went back and I showed him where the officer said the slipper had been found, the hat had been found and the little girl's body was located. I showed him, in fact, everything that the officers had showed us. Then I opened the back door and we made a thorough search of the alleyway and went up and down that alleyway to Hunter street and down Hunter to Forsyth and up Forsyth in front of the Pencil Factory.

"In front of the Pencil Factory I had quite a little talk with Mr. Scott as to the rates of the Pinkerton Detective Agency. He told me what they were and I had Mr. Schiff to telephone to Mr. Montag to find out if those rates were satisfactory. He phoned back the answer that he would engage them for a few days at any rate. Mr. Scott then said: 'Well, I don't need anything more,' and he said: 'The Pinkertons in this case, according to their usual custom in ferreting out the perpetrator of this crime, will work hand in hand with the city officers.' I said: 'All right, that suits me,' and he went on his way.

"About that time my father-in-law joined the group over in front of the factory, and after talking for some time my father-in-law and I left and we arrived home about 6:30. I should judge, and found there my mother-in-law and my wife and Minola McKnight, and we had supper. After supper my two brothers-in-law and their wives came over to visit with us and they staid until about 10 o'clock, after which my wife and I retired.

Tells of His Arrest as Suspect.

"On Tuesday morning I arose some time between seven and seven-thirty, leisurely dressed and took my breakfast and caught the 8:10 car coming toward town, the Georgia avenue car, and when I went to get on the car I met a young man by the name of Dickler, and I remember paying the fare for both of us.

"When I arrived at the pencil factory, about 8:30, I immediately entered upon my routine work, sending the various orders to the various places in the factory where they were due to go, and about 9:30 I went on my usual trip over to Montag Brothers to see the general manager. After staying over there a short while I returned, in company with another one of their traveling men, Mr. Jordan. At the corner of Forsyth and Hunter street I met up with a cousin of my wife's, a Mr. Selig, and we had a drink in Cruickshank's soda fount, at the corner of Hunter and Forsyth.

"Then I went up into the factory and separated the papers I had brought back with me from Montag Brothers, putting them in the proper places, and sending the proper papers to the different places. I was working along in the regular routine of my work, in the factory and about the office, and a little later Detectives Scott and Black came up to the factory and said: 'Mr. Frank, we want you to go down to headquarters with us,' and I went with them.

"We went down to headquarters, and I have been incarcerated ever since. We went down to headquarters in an automobile, and they took me up to Chief Lanford's office.

"I sat up there and answered any questions that he desired, and I had been sitting there sometime when Detective Scott and Detective Black came back with a bundle under their arm. They showed me a little piece of material of some shirt, and asked me if I had a shirt of that material. I looked at it, and told them I didn't think I ever had a shirt of that description.

Lee Said He Had Had Shirt Like It.

"In the meantime they brought in Newt Lee, the night watchman, brought him up from a cell and showed him the same sample. He looked at it and immediately recognized it. He said he had a shirt like that, but he didn't remember having worn it for two years; if I remember correctly, that is what he said. Detectives Scott and Black then opened the package they had and disclosed the full shirt of that material that had all the appearance of being freshly stained with blood, and had a very distinct odor. Newt Lee was taken back to the cell.

"After a time Chief Lanford came over to me and began an examination of my face and of my head and my hands and my arms. I suppose he was trying to hunt to see if he could find any scatches. I stayed in there until about 12 o'clock, when Mr. Rosser came in and spoke to the detectives or to Chief Beavers.

"After talking with Chief Beavers he came over to me and said to me that Chief Beavers thought it better that I should stay down there. He says: 'He thinks it better that you be detained at headquarters, but if you desire, you don't need to be locked up in a cell; you can engage a supernumerary policeman who will guard you and give you the freedom of the building.' I immediately acquiesced, supposing that I couldn't do anything else, and Mr. Rosser left.

"Now, after this time—it was about this time they took me from upstairs down to the district sergeant's desk and Detectives Starnes (John N. Starnes, I think his name is) came in and dictated from the original notes that were found near the body—dictated to me to get a sample of my handwriting. Have you got those photographs there? (Photographs handed to the defendant). I wrote this note at the dictation of Mr. Starnes, which was given to me word by word, and, of course, I wrote it slowly. When a word was spelled differently, they usually stopped—take this word 'buy' for instance, the detective told me how that was spelled so they could see my exact letters and compare with the original note.

Photograph of Note Is Shown.

"Now, I had no hesitation in giving him a specimen of my handwriting. Now, this photograph is a reproduction of the note. You see J. N. Starnes in the corner here; that is Detective Starnes, and then is dated here: I put that there myself so I would be able to recognize it again in case they tried any erasures or anything like that. It is a photographic reproduction of something that was written in pencil, as near as one can judge—a photographic reproduction of the note that I wrote. Detective Starnes then took me down to the desk sergeant, where they searched me and entered my name on the book under a charge of suspicion.

"Then they took me back into a small room, and I sat there for a while while my father-in-law was arranging for a supernumerary police to guard me for the night. They took me then to a roomon the top of the building, and I sat in the room there and either read magazines or newspapers and talked to my friends who came to see me until—I was about to retire at midnight.

"I had the cover of my cot turned back and I was going to bed when Detective Scott and Detective Black, at midnight, Tuesday, April 29, came in and said: 'Mr. Frank, we would like to talk to you a little bit. Come in and talk to us.' I says: 'Sure, I will be only too glad to.' I went with them to a little room on the top floor of the headquarters. In that room was Detective Scott, Detective Black and myself. They stressed the possibility of couples having been let into the factory by the night watchman, Newt Lee.

"I told them that I didn't know anything about it; that if I had, I certainly would have put a stop to it long ago. They said: 'Mr. Frank, you have never talked along with Newt Lee. You are his boss and he respects you. See what you can do with him. We can't get anything more out of him. See if you can.' I says: 'All right; I understand what you mean. I will do my best,' because I was only too willing to help.

"Black says: 'Now, put it strong to him, put it up strong to him, and tell him to cough up and tell all he knows. Tell him that you are here and that he is here, and that he better open up and tell all he knows about happenings at the pencil factory that Saturday night, or you will both go to hell.' Those were the dtective's exact words.

Tells of Questioning Newt Lee Alone.

"I told Mr. Black I caught his meaning, and in a few minutes afterward Detective Starnes brought up Newt Lee from the cell room. They put Newt Lee into a room and handcuffed him to a chair. I spoke to him at some length in there, but I couldn't get anything additional out of him. He said he knew nothing about couples coming in there at night, and, remembering the instructions Mr. Black had given me, I said: 'Now, Newt, you are here and I am here, and you had better open up and tell all you know, and tell the truth, and tell the full truth, because you will get us both into lots of trouble if you don't tell all you know.'

"He answered me like an old negro: 'Before God, Mr. Frank, I am telling you the truth and I have told you all I know.' And the conversation ended right there.

"Within a minute or two afterwards the detectives came back into the room, that is, Detective Scott and Detective Black, and then began questioning Newt Lee, and then it was that I had my initiation into the third degree of the Atlanta Police Department.

"The way that fellow Black cursed at that poor old negro, Newt Lee, was something awful. He shicked at him, he hollowed at him, he cursed and did everything but beat him. Then they took Newt Lee down to a cell and I went to my cot in the outer room.

"Now, before closing my statement, I wish to touch upon a couple of insinuations and accusations other than the one on the bill of indictment, that have been leveled against me so far during the trial.

Wh He Didn't Talk to Sleuths.

"The first is this, the fact that I would not talk to the detectives; that I would not see Jim Conley. Well, let's look into the facts a few minutes and see whether there was any reason for that, or if there be any truth in that statement.

"On Sunday morning I was taken down to the undertakers' establishment, to the factory, and I went to headquarters; I went to headquarters the second time, going there willingly without anybody coming for me. On each occasion I answered them frankly and unreservedly, giving them the benefit of the best of my knowledge, answering all and any of their questions, and discussing the matter generally with them.

"On Monday they came for me again. I went down and answered any and all of their questions and gave them a statement which they took down in writing, because I thought it was right and I was only too glad to do it. I answered them and told them all that I knew, answering all questions.

"Tuesday I was down at police station again, and answered every question and discussed the matter freely and openly with them, not only with the police, but with the reporters who were around there; talked to anybody who wanted to talk with me about it, and I have even talked with them at midnight when I was just about to go to bed. Midnight was the time they chose to talk to me, but even at such an outlandish hour I was still willing to help them, and at their instigation I spoke to Newt Lee alone, but what was the result? They commenced and they grilled that poor negro and put words into his mouth that I never said, and twisted not alone the English, but distorted my meaning.

"I just decided then and there that if that was the line of conduct they were going to pursue I would wash my hands of them. I didn't want to have anything to do with them. On the afternoon of May 1 I was taken to the Fulton County Tower.

How Detectives Drove Him to Silence.

"On May 3 Detectives Black and Scott came up to my cell in the Tower and wanted to speak to me alone without any of my friends around. I said all right, I wanted to hear what they had to say that time. Then Black tore off something like this: 'Mr. Frank, we are suspicious of that man Darley. We are watching him; we have been shadowing him. Now, open up and tell us what you know about him.' I said: 'Gentlemen, you have come to the wrong man, because Mr. Darley is the soul of honor and is as true as steel. He would not do a crime like that; he couldn't do it.' And Black chirped up: 'Come on, Scott, nothing doing,' and off they go.

"That showed me how much reliance could be placed in either the city detectives or our own Pinkerton detectives, and I treated such conduct with silence, and it was for this reason, gentlemen, that I didn't see Conley, surrounded with a bevy of city detectives and Mr. Scott, because I knew that there would not be an action so trifling, that there was not an action so natural, but that they would distort and twist it to be used against me, and that there was not a word that I could utter that they would not deform and twist and distort to be used against me, but I told them even then if they got the permission—I told them through my friend Mr. Klein—that if they got the permission of Mr. Rosser to come, I would speak to them, would speak to Conley and face him or anything they wanted—if they got that permission or brought Mr. Rosser. Mr. Rosser was on that day up at Tallulah Falls trying a case.

"Now, that is the reason, gentlemen, that I have kept my silence—not because I didn't want to, but because I didn't want to have things twisted.

"Then that other implication, the one of knowing that Conley could write and that I didn't tell the authorities.

Tells of Showing Conley Could Write.

"Let's look into that.

"On May 1 I was taken to the Tower. On the same date, as I understand it, the negro Conley was arrested. I didn't know anybody had any suspicions about him. His name was not in the papers. He was an unknown quantity. The police were not looking out for him; they were looking out for me. They didn't want him, and I had no inkling that he ever said he couldn't write.

"I was sitting in that cell in the Fulton County Jail—it was along about April 12, April 13 or April 14 that Mr. Leo Gottheimer, a salesman for the National Pencil Company, came running over, any says: 'Leo, the Pinkerton detectives have suspicions of Conley. He keeps saying he can't write; these fellows over at the factory know well enough that he can write, can't he?'

"I said: 'Sure he can write.'

"We can't prove it. The nigger says he can't write and we feel that he can write.'

"I said, 'I know he can write. I have received many notes from him asking me to loan him money. I have received too many notes from him not to know that he can not write. In other words, I have received notes signed with his name, purporting to have been written by him, though I have never seen him to this date use a pencil.'

"I thought a while and then I said: 'Now, I tell you. If you will look into a drawer in the safe you will find the card of a jeweler from whom Conley bought a watch on the installment plan. Now, perhaps if you go to that jeweler you may find some sort of a receipt that Conley had to give and be able to prove that Conley can write.'

Pinkertons Found Conley's Contracts.

"Well, Gottheimer took that information back to the Pinkertons. They did just as I said; they got the contract with Conley's name on it, got back evidently to Scott, and then he told the negro to write. Gentlemen, the man who found out or paved the way to find out that Jim Conley could write is sitting right here in this chair. That is the truth about it.

"Then that other insinuation, an insinuation that is so dastardly that it is beyond the appreciation of a human being, that is, that my wife didn't visit me. Now the truth of the matter is this, that on April 29, the date I was taken in custody at police headquarters, my wife was there to see me. She was downstairs on the first floor. I was up on the top floor. She was there almost in hysterics, having been brought there by her two brothers-in-law and her father.

"Rabbi Marx was with me at the time. I consulted with him as to the advisability of allowing my dear wife to come up to the top floor to see me in those surroundings with city detectives, reporters and snap-shotters. I thought I would save her that humiliation and that harsh sight, because I expected any day to be turned loose and be returned once more to her side at home.

"Gentlemen, we did all we could do to restrain her in the first days when I was down at the jail from coming on alone down to the jail, but she was perfectly willing even to be locked up with me and share my incarceration.

Says He Knows Nothing of Crime.

"Gentlemen, I know nothing whatever of the death of little Mary Phagan. I had no part in causing her death nor do I know how she came to her death after she took her money and left my office. I never even saw Conley in the factory or anywhere else on that date, April 26, 1913.

"The statement of the witness Dalton is utterly false as far as coming to my office and being introduced to me by the woman, Daisy Hopkins, is concerned. If Dalton was ever in the factory building with any woman, I didn't know it. I never saw Dalton in

The Saddest Word and the Gladdest Word---"Good-bye" and "Hello"

By NELL BRINKLEY

Nell Brinkley Says

I KNOW lots of folks who won't say it—that saddest word—"good-bye." "Adieu," they say, and "addio," "farewell" and "so-long," "auf Wiedersehen" and "aloha," "until the next time" and "be good"—but not "good-bye."

Under the word "good-bye" the sun seems dim. Birds droop and do not sing. The heart beats slow and heavy and the temples ache and tighten. The blue sky films with gray. Every face that turns our way and passes on seems to hide tragedy. Everybody else in the world, seems like, is saying good-bye, too.

And we watch them with tenderer eyes since we are bidding some one farewell. After good-bye there is nothing to do, no place to go, no one to see. The world seems bigger and suddenly wiped bare of beauty. We are afraid!

But EVERYBODY will say "HELLO!" They don't go hunting round for another word, any other word, so they can sort of slide by the plain, potent English. Under the short, keen, gladdest word, the sun and the sky are gold and blue. If it rains, why then we suddenly like rain. Under our tight jackets the heart beats high and fast and bursting big. Every face that turns our way seems like it had good news and blinds us.

If, maybe, a sad one lifts out of the glad ones, we forget it soon. Because we are saying "Hello." And if there's a bird singing anywhere we hear it. There is so much to do, so much to see, so many folks to like. The world seems suddenly like a rose and "full," as sweet-tempered R. L. S. says, "of a number of things."

And we are not afraid.

Had the Advantage.

Second Man—Beg pardon, but you have the advantage of me.

First Man—Yes, I suppose I have. We were engaged to the same girl, but you have married her.

Delaying the Torture.

Harry—Do you believe in long engagements?

Tom—Of course. The longer a man is engaged the less time he has to be married.

Like Champagne.

At a meeting presided over by a burly country squire the chief speaker was a budding orator with a seat in the upper house.

Said the chairman, grasping the nervous speaker by the arm on the conclusion of his lordship's address:

"Your speech was like a glass of good champagne"—here the noble lord smiled pleasantly—"lots of froth and very dry."

Then the smile came off.

His Guide Book.

An English bishop who was an extremely busy man, and had to travel a good deal, was addressing the children of a school. He said:

"My dear children, I have been all this week traveling hither and thither through my diocese, and what book do you think has guided me? Come, now, it's a book beginning with 'B.'"

"The Bible, sir," cried a chorus of youthful voices.

"Ah, no," said the Bishop, with a twinkle in his eye. "It's Bradshaw."

Do You Know---

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reason to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms, and underground passages—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet.

Clocks without hands or faces are now common in Switzerland. The timepiece stands in the hall, and when a button is pressed by means of phonographic arrangements it calls out "Half-past five," or "Five minutes to nine," as the case may be.

The greatest number of runners ever contesting in a single race ran through the streets of New York recently in a twelve and three-eighths-mile marathon. The runners taking part were 1,500 in number, and there were 300 prizes.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

PERHAPS HE IS SHY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am working in a place of business with a man of whom I think a great deal. Any time I write him to call to see me he appears to be quite delighted and calls, but never makes any effort to call unless I ask him. Don't you think he should ask me if he can call?

PUZZLED.

Such a request from him would show an interest in you which he now seems to lack. You say he always accepts and is delighted. That encourages me in the belief that he thinks a great deal of you, but is bashful.

Don't ask him for a time. I have an idea he will speedily ask you.

LET IT BE NO.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young lady of sixteen and keeping company with a young man of eighteen for one year. This young man has asked me to marry him, but I would like for him to change his position. He promised me he would in the spring. Kindly let me know if I shall give any decided answer.

ANXIOUS.

You are sixteen and can well afford to wait. You do not state what the man's position is, so my advice is based only on your years. I want love to come to you, but, believe me, my dear, it will be all the sweeter if your judgment is more mature.

MAKE THE OVERTURES.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a girl and she is in love with me. We had been keeping steady company, but lately we got mad, and we do not speak to each other. I would like a reconciliation and so would she.

B. S. L.

You are a man, and stronger to bear the burden. Take on your shoulders the burden of the blame, persuading yourself that you offended and deserve it. Tell her you alone are to blame, beg forgiveness, and promise never to offend again. If you are not willing to say "I was wrong," then you are not fitted to say "I love you."

He Wasn't Shy.

Old Lady (to cabman)—Does your horse ever shy at motors?

Cabby—Lor' bless you, no, lady; 'e didn't even shy when railway trains fust come in.

HOW ARE YOU FEEDING YOUR CHILDREN?

Are you giving them nourishing food—food that will develop their muscles, bones and flesh—food that is easily digested and cheap?

Ever thought about Spaghetti—Faust Spaghetti? Do you know that a 10c package of Faust Spaghetti contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef? Your doctor will tell you it does. And Faust Spaghetti costs one-tenth the price of meat. Doesn't that solve a big item in the high cost of living?

You probably haven't served Faust Spaghetti as often as you should because you don't know how many different ways it can be cooked—write for free recipe book to-day and you'll be surprised at the big variety of dishes you can make from this nutritious food. In 5c and 10c packages.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Dancing.

BEAUTY must be a harmonious whole. In the figures of the dance one ungraceful step can mar the perfection of the rhythmical charm one is trying to produce. In the physical rhythm of the human body an ugly arm or hand can spoil the spell of loveliness.

The question I always ask myself is: Why, in a world where we are all under the sway of physical lure, do we so calmly accept our own imperfections and those of our children?

We work intelligently for evolution and growth in health and strength and brain power; but beauty and grace we accept in the old superstitious fairy-tale fashion as the gift of the good fairies—and we fold our hands in the supposedly philosophical decision that either we have it or we have it not. Not at all! Either we have beauty or we set about getting it—if we have brains enough to acquire anything!

It is a simple thing to train the human body in the right way—the way it should go—in the beginning, but it is hard to alter bodily faults once they have come. However, if you have come to maturity without proper training in bodily grace, and the health and ease and beauty it brings, do not despair—instead, dedicate 30 minutes morning and evening—(one hour out of your day) to the beautiful art of the dance, and soon your reward will be great not only in terms of the pleasure of pleasant, graceful movement, but in health, beauty and a gloriously symmetrical figure, too.

Proper Training.

And make sure that your little children, and the dear young things all about you, have the proper beginnings to insure for them healthy and beautiful and graceful bodily growth.

Since an ugly arm or hand can so easily spoil the perfection of beauty, suppose, to-day, I show you how beautiful arms and hands may be evolved through proper training. It seems a far cry from dancing to beautiful arms and hands, but I shall try to show you how they may be gained in the rhythmical movement and exercise of the classical dance.

As most of the movements of the classical dance are executed with high-flexed arch and, the body's weight falling on the ball of the foot, while the instep is held in a firm high curve, they give of themselves a slender grace and power to the too-much-neglected foot. In both of the exercises I give you to-day the body must be poised lightly and springily upon the ball of the foot, inclining forward toward the toes. Walking and dancing thus will banish the flat-foot that seems to be a foe of modern high-heeled civilization.

The first picture shows one stage of a very wonderful arm exercise. Poise the weight on the balls of the feet, swaying slightly back and forward from toes to heels as the arms are raised with drooping wrists to shoulder height. When the arms are straight lines from shoulder sockets, raise the wrists and arms simultaneously until the backs of the hands just touch above the head.

A Dancing Step.

Now drop the arms slowly, with rhythmical muscular control, to the shoulder height again and turn the arms so the palms are alternately up and down parallel to the floor. Then, with palms down, sink the arms gradually to the sides, at the same time inclining the weight gradually to the entire foot. Practice this with gradually receding and increasing tempo, and finally do it as you walk forward on tiptoe, or as near as you can manage to this toe position.

The second picture is a little dancing step that can be practiced at a walking tempo until enough facility is gained to do it merrily and lightly as a dance. Advance on the ball of the feet with toes pointing outward. Incline the body forward, and keep the head a bit forward in the line of the slight curve of the back. The arms swing up in gentle curves until the elbow is about at waist height.

As the weight is swaying to the forward left foot, swing the left arm out with its line a slight droop from elbow to wrist, and the right arm in, with the forearm curving up almost perpendicular to the ground, and the wrist drooping. Swing the arms in and out thus from side to side as the weight of the body springs from foot to foot. In all these arm exercises hold the hand relaxed from the wrist, with light, pliant fingers, middle fingers fairly close together, small and index fingers gently curved and relaxed with the index finger pointing up ever so slightly.

The faithful practice of these two exercises will register for you a distinct step toward the acquisition of poetically graceful arms and hands.

The figure to the left shows the culmination of the exercise for developing beautiful arms through rhythmic motion.

To the right is shown a classical dancing step in which the hands and arms are also exercised.

HOW THIS WOMAN FOUND HEALTH

Would Not Give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for All Rest of Medicine in the World.

Utica, Ohio.—"I suffered everything from a female weakness after baby came. I had numb spells and was dizzy, had black spots before my eyes, my back ached and I was so weak I could hardly stand up. My face was yellow, even my finger nails were colorless and I had displacement. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am stout, well and healthy. I can do all my own work and can walk to town and back and not get tired. I would not give your Vegetable Compound for all the rest of the medicines in the world. I tried doctor's medicines and they did me no good."—Mrs. Mary Earlewine, R. F. D. No. 3, Utica, Ohio.

Another Case.

Nebo, Ill.—"I was bothered for ten years with female troubles and the doctors did not help me. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and every month I had to spend a few days in bed. I read so many letters about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound curing female troubles that I got a bottle of it. It did me more good than anything else I ever took and now it has cured me. I feel better than I have for years, and tell everybody what the Compound has done for me. I believe I would not be living to-day but for that."—Mrs. Hettie Greenstreet, Nebo, Illinois.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

OH, husband, sed Ma to Pa last nite, I have the cutest thing to tell you. Our deer littel son has a littel sweetheart. He met her to-day. She is a littel city gurl that lives neer our city hoam, & Bobbie rowed her all oaver the lake this morning. How perfeckly cunning, Ma sed. To think of our gallant littel son beeing a Romeo.

I aint no Romeo, I toald Ma. I wish you wuddent say that.

The littel deers looked so cute out thare on the lake, Ma sed. Bobbie helped her into the boat & out of it jest like a prince helping out a princess, Ma sed. Did you enjoy yure day, Bobbie, you and littel Grayce?

No I diddent, I toald Ma. & she aint any sweetheart of mine, eether. It was her father's bote & she diden't know how to row it & I wanted to row, so I got in & rowed the bote. I dident like her vary much, I toald Ma, beekaus she laffed at me wen I spelled her naim rong. I spelled it without a Y, I sed, & that is the way to spell Grace.

Bobbie, Pa sed, I tell you what to do. If you want to win littel Grayce, you must rite her a poem. I will rite her a poem for you to reed to her, sed Pa, & you can say you rote it.

Bobbie will lose her sure if he tries that, sed Ma. He has a littel boy frend that rites good poetry, littel Georgie Crowley, & he can git him to rite the poem.

No, sed Pa, I will rite the poem. So Pa went & got a sheet of paper and rote this poem for me to show to Grace:

Littel Grayce, charming Grayce,
I luv yure voice, I luv your fayce.
Thou art the idol of my hart,
& from thy side I'll never part.
Sum day wen I am grown to manhood
& deeside to marry, as every man shood,
I'll cum to you, deer, with a smile,
And ask to lead you up the aisle.
Thou art the sweetest gurl in this place,
My darling Grayce.

I aint going to show her that, I toald Pa. I doant luv her & she aint my sweethart. I aint going to start in so yung telling gurls that I luv them wen I doant luv them at all, I sed.

You have got to do that, sed Pa, to git along. Why, wen I was yure age I toald all the gurl I luved them, Pa I toald all the gurls I luved them, Pa me, but I could see thay did. I was vary hansum as a boy, sed Pa, & I had a grate way with the ladies. I used to write them verses & thay threw down all thare other beaus for me. I will give you a quarter, Bobbie, if you show this poem to littel Grayce, & if she doesnt call you a darling boy I will give you a dollar beesides.

So I showed Grayce the poem & sed I rote it, & she laffed & sed it sounded jest like sumthing that a green kid rote, so I made a dollar and a quarter from Pa.

Clever Hostess.

A German band happened to play under the windows of a house in a fashionable neighborhood the other afternoon, when Mrs. B. was "at home." They were a fair specimen of their kind—blaring and noisy, yet correct in their time and altogether in movement from long practice. The butler started out to drive them away, for they interrupted the music within, but Mrs. B. ordered him to invite them in. A happy thought struck her.

"Ladies and gentlemen," she said, five minutes later, "a party of our friends have consented to give an imitation of a street band. I now have the pleasure of introducing them."

Then the six members of the organization filed awkwardly into place and played a piece. The audience delightedly declared that the mimicry was perfect, especially the make-up of the players, who were recalled half a dozen times.

"Would you take them for anything but genuine street stragglers?" was asked of a belle.

"Indeed, yes," she confidently replied; "they're clever in their mimicry, but one can always tell gentlemen, no matter how disguised. I'm dying to find out who they are."

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX.

AUGUST 10.—I have wondered ever since the accident why Sally did not come to me, and learned this morning. She had sailed for Europe the day before and was on the ocean the day Richards received Mrs. Allen's telegram to come at once.

I am glad she is away. If she were here and did not come I would suffer all the pangs of an abused and neglected boy, and if she came, goodness alone knows what I would say or do in my weakness. I am sure I would demand the rights of a sick man to her devotion, or fret myself into a fever if she refused.

I had a note from her to-day, written in Paris.

"My dear big brother," she wrote, "I can't tell you how alarmed I was at reading in the cable news in a Paris paper of your accident. I hope that the charge of exaggeration always made against the press is true this time. I receive daily cables regarding your condition from the doctor, and he assures me you are getting along all right. You know, my dear big brother, I need you. You are more than all the world to me.

"SALLY."

Isn't that just like a woman? She puts in that word "brother" twice to make me realize that I am no more than a brother to her, and then adds "You are more than all the world to me" to keep me crazy about her.

She has a husband, and can't have me, but she likes to be loved, and intends to keep me loving her.

Past Proofs.

In looking backward I find every reason for believing that her opposition to the widow was not actuated entirely by sisterly feelings. The look of warnings she sent me, and many, many telegrams to beware of the woman who was pursuing me, are proof to me that Sally loved me then, and I did not know it.

"You are so stupid," she said to me once, "that if a woman were in love with you and tried her best to show it you would never see it. Now, suppose, for instance, that I loved you and had been trying to tell you for more than a year."

"But you don't," I added, "you love Jack."

"Yes," she repeated, dully, "I love Jack. He is my husband, and, of course, I love him. The law many centuries ago ordained that a wife should love her husband, and I wouldn't presume to question the law."

She laughed a little bitterly. "But suppose," she repeated, "that I loved you, and told you so."

Sally is a very handsome woman. I recall that on this occasion, she was lying in a hammock, and I sat in a chair near her. We were on her porch, waiting, I believe, for Jack to return from town.

"If you loved me," I said, "I think I would make you realize as you have never realized what it is to have a man's love. But this is nonsense, for, of course, there is Jack."

"Yes," she said, "there is Jack. Max go home! You are so good-looking to-night you are dangerous."

I laughed, for I thought it was only more of her nonsense.

"Go home," she repeated. I got up and started for the steps, rather sulky to be treated so, and she caught up with me when I had descended the second step and threw both arms around my neck. "You are just two steps taller than I," she laughed. Then she pressed my face against hers and whispered that I was a dear, big stupid.

And do you know, Diary, I wonder now what it was that made me so stupid. I had been so sure for years that she belonged to Jack, not because her marriage ties bound her, but because she loved him and had no room in her thoughts for any other man, that it never entered my head that she cared for me.

I know she suffered and grew thin and haggard when Jack was gone with the widow, but if I had had any sense I believe I could have made those ten days the happiest of her life.

And now, instead of being grateful that I have been saved from wrong-doing, I look at myself with disgust because I didn't recognize my opportunities. She was humiliated because of the manner in which her husband slighted her; her heart was mine all the time, and she couldn't tell me, and I was too big a dolt to see.

When I get well, if I get well—— "You know, Max," the doctor said to me very frankly this morning, "something went wrong with your spine in that fall, and we have a fight ahead of us."

So there is an "if" connected with my future that is the biggest "if" I have met in my troubled existence. It is all right. If I win I will fight for Sally. Right or wrong, that is my intention. If I lose, I hope I will have ample warning that the struggle is going against me, so that they may get Sally here and I can slide out into the nowhere from her arms.

Takes Her Nap.

August 12—I do not suffer any great pain, only the pain of weariness, and the nurse is so patient and tender I am ashamed to complain of that.

I am bolstered up in bed a few hours every morning and write these lines at long intervals apart. It is a comfort to me to write that which I can not speak about and it shortens the long days.

Manette always takes her nap at this time of the day, the nurse is gone for her morning walk, and Richards sits beside me—patient, faithful Richards.

"If anything happens to me, Richards," I said this morning, turning to her, "you must never leave Manette. You—" I had never told anyone this before—"will find yourself a rich woman."

"I will never leave Manette under any circumstances," she said somewhat brokenly, "and I don't want to be a rich woman. I only want you to get well so that we may all go back home, and be happy there again. I am so thankful every day, Mr. Max, that I work for the kindest and best man that ever breathed."

It was a tribute that pleased me. I tried to tell her so, and the next moment she was on her knees beside my bed, sobbing with her face in the bed covers.

THE TUNNEL

Greatest Story of Its Kind Since Jules Verne

Read what the New York Times said about this great story---The Times printed an extract of it---We give you the story itself---You can begin it by reading the first installment to-morrow in The Georgian!

B THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, AUGUST 3, 1913.

GERMANY READS OF A TUNNEL FROM AMERICA TO EUROPE

"Best Seller" in Berlin Is Bernhard Kellermann's "Der Tunnel," a Daring Flight of Fancy in Which Is Told How the Two Hemispheres Were Connected by an Oceanic Subway.

SCENE: the roof garden above the thirty-sixth floor of a colossal hotel in New York—New York of the future. There are gathered the richest magnates in the country, men who among them possess billion upon billion of dollars. One of them arrives in his aeroplane, from which he lands on the very roof garden itself. One of them is Lloyd, a veritable J. P. Morgan, renowned throughout the world as the most daring and formidable and successful of financiers.

They are gathered to learn about a plan evolved by an engineer, a man comparatively young, comparatively unknown, who needs their financial backing. Allan is his name—"Mac" Allan.

Rising modestly from his place, amid breathless attention from all those men, the money kings of the world, whom he scarcely hoped to meet, much less to interest in his project, Allan takes from his wearer's pocket a piece of chalk, goes to a blackboard, and draws two lines. One, he says, is America, the other Europe.

"Between these two," he adds, "I bind myself to build, within the space of fifteen years, a subterrene tunnel and to send trains through it from one continent to the other in twenty-four hours!"

The flashlights of the photographers gathered on the roof burst forth and thousands of people packed in the streets thirty-six stories below knew that the first act in the great drama has begun, and roar their sanctionment.

Allan in the meantime has plunged into figures, talking up the plan from every angle, painting it surely and convincingly.

He finishes by whirling the assemblage of billionaires away with him in a very madness of enthusiasm. Lloyd, one of them all, leads by subscribing $50,000,000 out of his own pocket. After him one magnate after another puts himself down for enormous sums. Allan, whose entire manhood has been devoted to the tunnel project, realizes that he is on the threshold of success.

That scene is described at the beginning of a book just published, one that is a "best seller" now in Germany—"The Tunnel," by Bernhard Kellermann. The author, who already has a number of novels to his credit, has in this latest work discarded the ordinary material of which heroes and heroines are made and fearlessly pressed into his service iron and steel and coal, powerful machinery, huge masses of humanity instead of individuals. Against this settings and backgrounds he has brought men and women are arranged, to be sure, men and women of flesh and blood, but they are secondary. It is the tunnel—the great tube between America and Europe, that is the hero of Kellermann's novel and its heroine and the villain. It is all else is subservient. In describing its vastness and grandeur and fateful power the German writer has the formula of Jules Verne and H. G. Wells, and, without ever employing the supernatural or manifestly impossible, meets them on their own ground and, it must be said, comes off by no means badly.

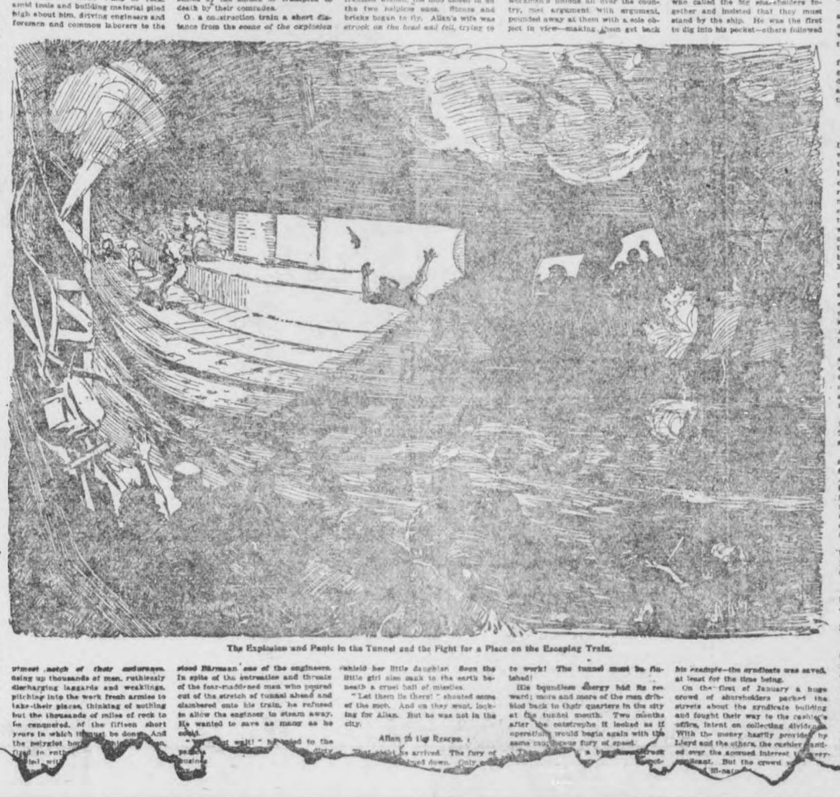

Man's Greatest Undertaking.

After his description of the momentous meeting on the New York hotel roof garden, the novelist tells how the tunnel syndicate, formed immediately after the magnates had subscribed their millions, buys up huge tracts of land in New Jersey along the Hudson and ocean front and sets to work to raise a great city for the tunnel workmen. On the streets of New York hundreds of thousands of "extras" hawk readers posted, hour by hour, on the progress of the construction work, the greatest undertaking ever attempted by man since the building of the world.

Greatest excitement [illegible] in Europe.

[illegible] Englishmen, Germans, Chinamen, negroes. In the stifling caverns under the ocean every language was heard from the blackened diggers, working in frenzied haste, stark naked, dripping with sweat, driven to superhuman achievement by the indomitable energy of "Mac" Allan.

Allan spent days at a time in the tunnel, amid almost unendurable heat, between solid walls of rock, amid tools and building material piled high about him, driving engineers and foremen and common laborers to the utmost notch of their endurance. Going up thousands of men, ruthlessly discharging laggards and weaklings, pitching into the work fresh armies to take their places, thinking of nothing but the thousands of miles of rock to be conquered, of the fifteen short years in which it must be done. And the relentless taskmaster of the engineers.

The Explosion and Panic in the Tunnel and the Fight for a Place on the Escaping Train.

In spite of the entreaties and threats of the four-mustached man who inspired out of the stretch of tunnel ahead and clambered onto his train, he refused to allow the engineer to steam away. He wanted to save as many as he could.

[illegible] night—followed to the [illegible] arrived. The fury of [illegible] down. [illegible] stood Hermann [illegible] beside her little daughter. Soon the little girl also sank to the earth beneath a cruel ball of missiles.

"Let them lie there!" shouted some of the men. And on they went, looking for Allan. But he was not in the city.

Allan to the Rescue.

They poured through the streets of the improvised city toward Allan's residence.

On the way they met the engineer's young wife and his little daughter, who, hearing the cries about the tunnel mouth, had ventured forth to find out what was the matter. Both fell back in approximation as they caught sight of the outposts of the advancing multitude and heard their shouts.

But they could not escape. Led by frenzied women, the mob closed in on the two helpless ones. Stones and bricks began to fly. Allan's wife was struck on the head and fell, trying to [illegible] her little daughter from the [illegible] Death to "Mac!" They bore red flags and huge placards on which was written, "Mac," murderer of 5,000." High above their heads were grotesque figures representing Allan Lloyd, the billionaire backer of the tunnel syndicate, S. Woolf, and others. In front of the syndicate's building in lower Broadway they burned these figures amid furious cheering.

In spite of strike and all, Allan kept grimly at work. He addressed the workmen's unions all over the country, met argument with argument, pointed away to them with a sole object in view—making them get back to work! The tunnel must be finished!

His [illegible] energy had its reward; more and more of the men drifted back to their quarters in the city at the tunnel mouth. Two months after the catastrophe it looked as if operations would begin again with the same tremendous fury of speed.

Panic came—gnawing panic. Compared with it the panic of 1907 that shook the American money market was a passing flurry. Hardly a day passed without the failure of some business house. Suicides like Woolf's became more and more common. A banker shot himself in Chicago; a New York broker poisoned himself and his entire family. As for the tunnel syndicate, it would have gone out of existence had it not been for Lloyd, who called the big shareholders together and insisted that they must stand by the ship. He was the first to dig into his pocket—others followed his example—the syndicate was saved, at least for the time being.

On the first of January a huge crowd of shareholders packed the streets about the syndicate building and fought their way to the cashier's office, intent on collecting dividends. With the money hastily provided by Lloyd and the others, the earliest [illegible] over the accrued interest [illegible] But the crowd [illegible] to-day.

Panic-stricken [illegible] stillness. The great tunnel was dead.

Even Allan despaired. He locked himself in his house, refusing to see anybody. In vain Ethel Lloyd, the one person who still seemed to believe in him, sought to see him. She could not.

But she persisted. Finally, one day, she actually waylaid him as he was walking, with downcast eyes, from the tunnel mouth to his house. He could not fiercely refuse to speak to her. He asked her to come in. And, once she had his ear, Ethel plunged into her task with flashing eyes and eloquent words.

"You must save the tunnel!" she cried. And for the first time in months he woke to life and his eyes blazed.

"But we have no money," he objected.

"Have you seen my father?" she asked.

She had struck home. Soon Allan and the great Lloyd were in a conference. Soon the news flew over the world: "Lloyd has agreed to back the tunnel—alone!"

The work started up again with a fury of energy that left all that had gone before in the shade. One hundred thousand men went at it again and labored with a murderous concentration of energy.

America Linked to Europe.

The deep tunnel cities awoke. With Lloyd to lead, multi-millionaires who had been afraid to risk a cent in the undertaking poured their millions into it. In the tubes the boring machines thundered against the walls of rock, surrounded again by armies of naked workers, dripping with sweat, shining in the red glow of the lanterns. And behind all stood Allan, whipping them into a hell of speed; once more, as his truth rolled past, they swung their hats and cheered—but now they called him "old grey Mac."

Years went by—fifteen, twenty, since the beginning of the work. Nearer and nearer the tunnel heads drew to each other, one, where Stroom was commander, stretching out from Jersey eastward, the other from the Azores westward, driven forward by an engineer known as "fat Mueller."

At last the two were so close that engineers glued their eyes on the delicate registering machines by the hour together, hoping to detect the sound of the work to the other tunnel. No sign had yet the others must be almost within reach!

Had the calculations failed? Had the two tunnels missed each other? The newspapers were filled with alarming rumors.

Allan ordered side tunnels out, that surged in the dark for the men digging toward America from Europe. At last one day the noise of a blast in Mueller's tunnel was heard in Stroom's. Feverishly the men dug toward the sound. At last, breaking down a wall of earth and rock, they saw, through a narrow hole, other men—Mueller's men!

Roars of enthusiasm burst forth at both ends of the hole. Fat Mueller, poking his head into the opening, asked:

"Where is Mac?"

"Here," answered Allan, sticking his head into the other opening—the one nearest America.

"How do you do, Mac?" said Mueller, with a laugh.

"We are all right," said Mac.

That was all. In the evening the newspapers on both sides of the ocean printed this conversation, told thousands of feet under the sea. The workmen had soon dug the hole big enough to allow of Mueller's sending Mac a bottle of Munich beer.

Twenty-four years had elapsed since the tunnel work had been begun.

From then on the world was in a fever of excitement. "Very soon the tunnel work was resumed.

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"You are an observing man," he remarked to Peter, "and seem to have noticed this girl closely. Was this bag she carried a small, yellow one?"

"It was not, thin," that [illegible] emphatically replied, while the butler shook his head. "It was small, that it was, but not a mark of yellow about it at all. I see it manys the time. It's black it was."

"And would you know it if you saw it again?"

"I'll hot say that, sur; but I could tell if it wur the same kind of one."

Mr. Gryce smiled and produced from his capacious pocket the bag which had been found by him in the doctor's phaeton.

"Was it like this one?" he asked, holding it up between the two men, with the initials toward Peter, and the blank side toward the butler.

"No," was the former's reply, and "Oui," that of the latter.

He whirled the bag about.

"I never have seen ze filigree on him like zat!" now exclaimed the butler.

"By the powers that's it," was, on the contrary, Peter's response.

Mr. Gryce laughed and put the bag back in his pocket.

Another Clew.

"You don't agree," he said.

"We do that," returned Peter.

But Mr. Gryce would not be convinced. He saw that if this was the bag that they had been in the habit of seeing on the arm of the girl who had visited Miss Gretorex, that it had always been carried with the initial-side in, and this again seemed a great improbability. He was about convinced that he was on a false trail. Disappointed and dissatisfied, he therefore cut the conversation short, and in a few minutes was about to leave this house for the second time in anything but a happy frame of mind. But this time he did not go out by the side door. He was in the kitchen, and he naturally sought the kitchen exit. In doing this, his eyes fell upon the gravel walk that ran about the house. "Humph!" was his mental ejaculation.

But he saw something the next moment—having by this time stepped into the yard—which called from him something more than an exclamation. This was a small piazza, built one or two steps from the ground, for the use, as it appeared, of the servants of the house. It was square in shape and had a high balustrade about it, terminating in pillars that supported the roof. It was the color of this balustrade which drew his attention. It was of a bright and peculiar brown and and seemed to have been but lately painted.

"Can it be that I have here found what I have so long been searching for?" he queried. And stepping upon the piazza he ran his eye along the balustrade with the most careful scrutiny. Suddenly he paused, looked closer, and gave utterance to a sound expressive of satisfaction and keen wonder. From the supporting pillar nearest the steps a portion of paint had been rubbed, of the size and shape of the smudge on Mildred Farley's dress, and dried into the thin coating yet remaining was a woolly fuzz so evidently blue in color that even this old and experienced worker among marvels was taken aback, and thought he had never seen anything finer nor more conclusive.

It was with a very grave face he stepped back into the kitchen.

"Excuse me," said he, "but what a fine porch you have outside. I think I will come and visit you some evening next summer. Fun out there, eh?"

"Well, now, do you hear that?" laughed good-natured Peter.

"And how prettily it is painted; looks fresher than the rest of the house."

"Yes, the master intended using it at the time o' the wedding—what for I don't know—and it being well used up by that same fun ye wur axin about, the count there bought a pot o' paint and wint over it on his own account. It didn't dry good like, and the master thanked the count, so he did, but didn't use the porch. I'm thinkin' he gave the count folve dollars for disappointin' him do ye moind?"

And Peter, evidently thinking he had got the laugh on the butler this time, laughed himself, long and loud.

But Mr. Gryce did not laugh. A problem dark with mysteries was before him, and he had no disposition to mirth, and but little patience with those who had.

Tests and Surprises.

IT was indeed a serious discovery he had made; how serious he could not yet determine. That the girl who had brought home Miss Gretorex's dresses, and who had been with her on the very evening she was married, was the same one who had been carried dead into Mrs. Olney's parlor at or near midnight of that same day, there could be no doubt.

But had she died here? It did not follow, though the fact that Miss Gretorex, or as she was now called, Mrs. Cameron, showed such a disposition to deny acquaintanceship with the girl, seemed to argue the existence of something strangely unpleasant between them. Yet it need not have been anything connected with the tragic end of the girl. Ladies of Mrs. Cameron's stamp are invariably cowards when it comes to appearing in a police court, or before a magistrate as a witness. Even men sometimes shrink from this ordeal, and resort to every subterfuge to hide the fact that they know anything about a crime of the party suspected of it. And she had this excuse, that she was a bride and naturally hated any such unpleasant publicity in connection with her marriage.

A Puzzle.

Yet the desire of Molesworth to communicate his position to the Camerons! Was it purely on account of the medical case he mentioned? Mr. Gryce felt himself at liberty to doubt it. And the scream which had arisen from this house during the marriage ceremony! Whence did it come and what did it mean? He had not realized its importance at the time, but now he felt that he must make every effort to discover both its source and occasion. Turning to the two men, he remarked in his off-hand way:

"By the way, I heard something curious about the wedding here. A friend of mine told me that there was a big scream in the house right in the middle of the ceremony. Was that so?"

"Oui, monsieur," quoth Jean, "zat Marguerite scream all ze time, and she scream zen."

Peter smiled indulgently.

"Is it Margaret, ye say? Whin will yez git over talkin' about her screamin' like a fool. Sure she wasn't in the house at all. Every one of us knows that, and it's time ye did, too."

Jean shrugged his shoulders disdainfully.

"It was ze voice of Marguerite, I know him very well. I hear him many times, and I hear him zat time of ze wedding and always ze same."

"How the devil could she scream if she wasn't in the house?

"Do Marguerite say she was not in ze house?"

"No, but don't we know she wasn't? Jim Dolan says she was in his little back room when the scream you spake of was heard. Haven't I told ye that over an' over again, ye spalpeen?"

"When Jeem Doling say me zat, zen I must hear him." And so the obstinate man had the last word.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

A naval officer I know canceled a lot of engagements last week in order to devote the time to his dentist.

"I am going on a long cruise," he said, "and I know the value of good teeth. Good teeth mean good health afloat or ashore and a man can't do his work well unless he has good health."

In the army and the navy, and in all great industrial spheres the value of good teeth is being recognized. Statistics prove that sound, clean teeth, preserve health and promote business efficiency.

The twice-a-year visit to the dentist and the twice-a-day use of Colgate's Ribbon Dental Cream, the efficient, deliciously flavored dentifrice, insure sound clean teeth, better health and better looks.

You too should use COLGATE'S RIBBON DENTAL CREAM

ELLIOTT DENT FACES MOLES IN 2ND GAME

ELLIOTT DENT is carded as Manager Smith's pitching entry against the Barons in the second game of the series, which starts at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. Harry Chapman will be back of the wood, and the manager said this morning that he fully expected Tommy Long to be in his regular place in left field.

Tommy was out in uniform yesterday, but Manush was going so well that it was not considered necessary to try out the convalescent one. Frank had a great day with the stick yesterday and aided materially in the battering of the unfortunate Howell.

Manager Molesworth was not positive of his choice in the matter of slabman. Pitcher Ery, the recruit, got in yesterday and may get a chance to-morrow. Big Bill Prough, absent from the club by reason of a sister's illness, hadn't arrived at noon today.

There is a lot of talk around town about the prospective "birthday party" to be tendered Bill Smith at the ball park to-morrow, when "Bill Smith Day" will be observed, with a band and other trimmings, and the thousands of Atlanta fans who have pulled for the hard-working manager and rejoiced in his success will have an opportunity to show by their attendance the appreciation they feel for his efforts. Preparations are being made to handle a big crowd, as it seems everybody is going.

BOBBY GILKS, CLEVELAND SCOUT, IS IN ATLANTA

We have with us this week, or part of it, one Bobby Gilks, erstwhile popular manager of the Shreveport club in the Southern League, and now a trusted scout for the Cleveland ball club.

Bobby looks the same as ever; a quiet, alert, sun-burned man, preserving an athletic build with no tendencies to a bay window effect, and with very keen eyes set in the deep puckers that come from years of peering over a blazing diamond.

"Just looking around," said Mr. Gilks yesterday a she sat on the back of a bench in the smoker, looking over the Crackers at practice. "I can't say anything more specific—except," he added, reflectively, "I will say they're awfully scarce."

Mr. Gilks also was of the opinion that the desperately fine coming the minor leagues were receiving this year would result more in bursting than broken batting and base-stealing records. He expects to remain here nearly all week, by the end of which his scouting will be over for the present season.

STARTS ON LONG SWIM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Harry Ellonsky, 19, of New London, Conn., sared at 12:48 a. m. to-day on the swim from Battery Park to Sady Hook, a distance of about 21 miles. Ellonsky attempted the swim some time ago, but was forced to quit the water when within a mile of his goal.

"Society Night" at Motordrome

Maddox Sweepstake Feature

REALIZING that society folk will wear thousands of dollars worth of diamonds and jewelry tonight at the motorcycle races, Manager Noon Hudson has hired 50 plainclothes men to protect his patrons. Chief of Police Beavers and Chief of Detectives Lanford will both be on hand to assist.

It is "Society Night;" at least that is the way the program is captioned And it is expected that all of Atlanta's "400" will be on hand.

Owing to the accident to Jock McNeil late Wednesday afternoon it has been decided to keep everybody away from the paddock and nobody but officials and the riders themselves will be allowed within the sacred portals of the danger lines.

The new machines that the riders have secured can be speeded up to such an extent that a blow-out or any other accident to a machine is likely to cause a spill, and, of course, danger threatens all who may be in the way of the flying "boats." Therefore, everybody will be forced to remain behind the railings.

* * *

THE feature to-night will be the Robert Maddox Sweepstakes. This is the real "sassiety" event of the season at the Saucer. It will be run in three heats. The first will be over a two-mile course, the next, four miles, and the third, six miles.

The winner will be found by the point system. The winner of each heat will secure ten points; second man, six; third, three.

The riders in this race will be Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

ANOTHER interesting event will be the special match race between Harry Glenn, the local favorite, and Harry Swartz, whose machine right now is one of the fastest at the track.

There will be two heats and maybe three. The winner will have to capture two heats. The first heat will be one mile, the second two miles, and if necessary, there will be a third heat of three miles.

* * *

THE other event carded is the first of the Southern championships. It is the intention of the management to run a title race every night until the latter part of September. The riders will be scored by points. The winner of each heat each night will be credited with 25 points, the second man, 15, and the third, 5.

There will be three trial heats of one mile and the final will be two miles. The winner of each heat and the second man in the fastest heat to qualify.

* * *

FOLLOWING is the complete program:

First Event.

First Heat: Special Match Race (one mile)—Glenn and Swartz.

Second Event.

First Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Graves, Swartz and Lockner.

Third Event.

Second Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Richards, Luther and Renel.

Fourth Event.

Third Heat: Southern Championships (one mile)—Lewis and Glenn.

Fifth Event.

Final Heat: Southern Championships (two miles. Winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat. Twenty-five points for winner, 15 for second man and 5 for third man.)

Sixth Event.

First Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (two miles; ten points for winner, six points for second man, three for third man).—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Seventh Event.

Second Heat: Special Match Race (two miles)—Glenn and Swartz.

Eighth Event.

Second Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (four miles)—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Ninth Event.

Third Heat: Special Match Race. (If necessary.)

Tenth Event.

Third Heat: Robert Maddox Sweepstakes (six miles)—Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Big Aquatic Meet at Lakewood Wednesday

There will be a big aquatic meet at Lakewood Wednesday afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock. Atlanta's fastest and strongest swimmers will take part. The meet will be held under the supervision of the United States Life Saving Corps.

The events carded are: One-mile relay race, 440-yard race, 100-yard race, 50-yard race and 25-yard race for girls. Beautiful silver cups will be the prizes offered in all of the events except the girls' race. The winner of that event will be given a cutglass powder jar.

The one-mile relay race will probably be the big feature. Porter Enslow and C. R. McDermott, of Piedmont lake, will battle Captain B. H. Schlomberg and Lieut. Tatt Walthour of Lakewood. This struggle should be a hard-fought one from start to finish.

There will also be a life-saving demonstration, given by Captain Schlomberg.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

Terry Nelson was offered $200 to "take a dive" in his recent fight with Mike Saul. And we know the young man who tried to bribe the Greek.

* * *

Get busy with the shears and paste, G. W. Krick, here are some more notes for you to place your J. Hancock above.

Dan McKetrick, the dapper litle fight manager, is going to take another trip to Europe. He has been across the big pond so often that he forgets the number of times. On his next journey to the other side he'll take with him the largest string of fighters that any manager ever piloted to a foreign country.

* * *

The boxers that little Dan will take abroad are Joe Jeannette, Frank Moran, both heavyweights; Barney Williams, a middleweight; Young Ahearn, a welterweight, and Mickey Dunn, a bantam.

* * *

Ad Wolgast has evidently thought better of another meeting with Harlem Tommy Murphy, and has decided he doesn't want any more of the Harlem boy's game. Anyway, Ad called off a proposed meeting with Tommy set for Labor Day and will, instead, take on Johnny Dundee on September 9.

* * *

Curley Jordan writes from Jacksonville, Fla., that he would dearly love to exchange wallops with Terry Nelson. When informed of Jordan's challenge, Nelson informed the writer that Jordan can have some of his game if he will post a $50 side bet. Ever since Terry stopped Mike Saul he has become one confident kid.

* * *

Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette have been practically matched by Billy Gibson to box at Madison Square Garden the latter part of September. The heavyweights are scheduled to go ten rounds.

* * *

Jess Willard, the cowboy white hope, and John "Bull" Young, promising California heavyweight, have signed articles to meet in a twenty-round go at Vernon, Cal., on August 22.

* * *

Frank Moran is down to hard training for his ten-round engagement with Al Palzer at New York next month. If Moran meets with success in his encounter with Palzer he will be entitled to a crack at Gunboat Smith.

* * *

Boston fans are showing much interest in the coming Frank Klaus-Jack Dillon set-to on August 26. These men have been recognized generally as the best of the middleweights during the last two years.

* * *

Spider Britt, the local bantamweight, is wondering when some boy around these parts will muster up enough courage to meet him in the ring. Britt cares not who it may be, just as long as he tips the beam at 116 pounds. Spider says he will wager $100 on his chances against any of them.

M'CAREY SURE JEFFRIES WAS DOPED AT RENO

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19.—Promoter T. J. McCarey, for the past ten years president of the Pacific A. C., is positive in his belief that Jeffries was "doped" when he fought Jack Johnson.

"Jeffries could walk right into the ring to-day and make a 100 per cent better showing than he did at Reno," said McCarey to-day.

"I was watching Jeffries when he came into the Reno arena. He lurched down the aisle like a drunken man, bumping his shoulder against the moving picture stand. At the ringside one of his best friends, Clarence Berry, reached out to shake hands, but Jim didn't appear to recognize him.

"I AM suspicious of one man who posed as an intimate friend of Jim's prior to the fight. He bet heavily on Johnson and after the thing was over he never even went to Jeffries to speak to him, and to my knowledge has never seen Jim since.

"This fellow used to coax Jeffries away from the Monoa Springs training camp to go fishing. For hours he would keep Jim standing knee deep in the mountain streams, and cause him to neglect his training.

"I believe that Jeffries was the victim of a widespread plot. The man never had a chance. He was whipped before he could put up his hands. This was one of the worst blows ever dealt the boxing game and I would pay a good sum out of my own pocket to see the mystery cleared up."

TOM JONES, manager for Ad Wolgast and Jess Willard, is another who believes that Jeffries was "doped."

"Jeffries was drugged. There is no other way to account for his reeling about in the ring before the contest," says Jones. "Jeffries doesn't care much about the matter now, but his friends would like to see the thing explained."

OUTFIELDER LET OUT.

KEOKUK, IOWA, Aug. 19.—Outfielder Corkhill was released by Keokuk and Outfielder Bromley, formerly with Mussatine, was signed.

"BATTLING" NELSON DISPOSED OF.

ROCKFORD, ILL., Aug. 19.—The Rockford (Wisconsin-Illinois League) team to-day ordered the release of Catcher "Battling" Nelson.

Jock McNeil Still Unconscious

Daring Motor Racer Is Dying

JOCK M'NEIL, the daring motorcycle racer, who was thrown from his machine while traveling at a speed of 80 miles an hour, is still unconscious at the Grady Hospital. The attending physicians have little hope for his recovery.

It was McNeil's own carelessness that caused his fall. He reported at the track yesterday afternoon under the influence of liquor, and after much wrangling with the other riders he insisted on taking a whirl.

He borrowed Morty Graves' stock machine and immediately after starting ascended to the white boards at the top of the track. The white boards are perpendicular and it takes a speed of at least 80 miles an hour to hold the machine.

The first time around his motor broke through the boards in two places, but McNeil refused to come down. The next time around he rode right into one of the holes that he had smashed on his first trip, and was thrown 50 feet in the air. He came down face first.

An ambulance was called and he was rushed to Grady Hospital. The extent of his injuries are:

The skin was peeled from the right side of his face.

A gaping hole in his skull that may affect the brain.

Right shoulder dislocated and badly torn.

Deep gash in right thigh, just above the hip.

Right leg broken just above the knee.

Internal injuries, the exact nature of which has not been fully determined.

ST. LOUIS BOWLING TOURNEY TO START ON NOVEMBER 29

ST. LOUIS, MO., Aug. 19.—The Middle West Tournament Company was incorporated here to promote the annual Mid-West bowling tournament scheduled to begin in this city November 29.

VARDON AND RAY WILL HAVE HARD BATTLE--EVANS

By "Chick" Evans.

HARRY VARDON and Edward Ray, two of the foremost golfers in the world, are now on the ocean on their way to America. Wilfred Reid, another high-class British professional, is with them. It has been thirteen years since Vardon came to this country and made an almost clean sweep of everything. Then came Duncan in 1911, and he, too, made an excellent showing. It is my prediction, however, that Vardon and Ray will find a country of golfers vastly superior to anything that they have pictured. Since 1900, the year of the previous invasion, our country has taken tremendous strides in golf. Progress has been made not only in the addition of thousands of new clubs, but also in the standard of the game. A few years ago 80 was considered very good indeed, but now it is merely fair and the 80 golfer takes no special credit to himself.

Will Arrive This Week.

Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, our two most distinguished professional visitors, will be over here this week. Previous to the open championship, which will take place during the third week of September at Brookline, near Boston, they will play exhibition matches all over the East, and after the open they will journey Westward.

Fine players as they are, I think that they will have a difficult road to travel, for not only will our professionals give them a run, but there are some of our amateurs who may be able to quicken their pace a little. I hope they will like our courses and our golfers. Truly, we have a country-wide array of courses on which much money and time have been spent.

Our golfers are fine players, and good sportsmen, and the coming of the British visitors will do us a tremendous amount of good. Thousands will watch their play and be benefited by many an idea caught as they watch the execution of difficult shots by these masters of the game. Their scores will serve as an indicator by which we can know exactly what progress we have made in our own game.

Exhibitions to Benefit All.

Their coming will introduce into this country professional exhibition matches—a prominent element of British golf of which we know but little. We have not much of this now and there is no doubt we need more. It is something of which a country can easily have too much, but it can be of the greatest benefit to all players who wish to improve their game. It will give to them throughout the country an opportunity to see the best shots played by the best players, and this practical exposition is of more value than all the lessons and books of instruction in the world.

Of course, all professional golf is a money-making affair. For an exhibition match of 36 holes, occupying a day, I understand Vardon and Ray are asking $600. This seems an enormous amount of money to ask for the privilege of seeing a golf game, and it is difficult to see how they will be able to get many clubs to stage such an expensive exhibition. The best way would be to charge, say, a dollar for admission, and let the club stand for the rest. Most people would gladly give up that much to see these world masters of the links. They are like the musicians who have spent a lifetime in practice.

Jeff May Be a Poor Gambler, but He's a Good Investor :: :: :: By "Bud" Fisher

Grand Defense Aids Gil Price

Mates Star in Field and at Bat

By O. B. Keeler.

THE value of co-operation stuck out all over the opening game with the Moles Monday. There were so many points that to the Moles the Cracker club must have resembled a hedgehog.

There was no chance for Gil Price to lose that game. So he won, 7 to 2.

But Gil had as his third assistants luck, stuff and beautiful ling.

And that is pretty nearly good enough to win for anybody.

* * *

DON'T take this as meaning that Gil was saved against his will from a beating. The southpaw had something on the ball all the time, up to the ninth inning. And whenever he got it over the platter, the problem was simple.

The Moles simply couldn't hit.

But Gil was having one of his famous struggles with the control lever, which persisted in jamming on him, usually after two men were out.

In other words, Gil's marksmanship was somewhat to the fritz. But, supported by the class of fielding his mates put up, and his own stuff on the ball, his erratic periods merely served to liven up a long game that certainly was in need of livening.

* * *

THERE was some hitting, too.

The way the Cracker attack was working, Gil could have been quite a bit more to the Carnegie with his passes, and still got by with it.

* * *

MR. WELCHONCE was excessively prominent in the attack. Four runs came riding in on his two blows, one for three and the other for two sacks. Harry also scored a run himself. Messrs. Agler, Manush, Smith and Bisland also deserve special mention in the list of sluggers, the first pair getting three hits apiece and the others being content with a couple each.

* * *

BUT savage as was the artillery, the real clubby spirit was shown in the way Gil Price's help came through with the defense. The help behaved as if it liked Gil fine.

And it must be said that Gil seemed to think pretty well of himself, too. He pulled as pretty a pair of fielding stunts as one would care to see. Once he raced toward first on a slow hit, bounding high, scooped the pill in his meat hand and sprinted over the bag—and there were Moles digging for home, with two out, at the time. And once he made a grand play on a difficult trap-bounder, following the pick-up with a fine peg.

GIL wasn't lonely in his display of defensive power.

Chapman nipped Mayer off first by a peach peg in the second; Agler and Smith made runaway circus catches of short flies—particularly Joe's catch of Marcan's foul in the seventh—and Calvo starred with a brilliant running catch of a low line drive in the fifth, and a rifle-shot peg to the plate in the ninth, cutting down the speedy Marcan, who was trying to score from second on a sharp hit to the Cuban's territory.

* * *

BY the way, there was a moral force acting hand in glove with Calvo in the matter of outfield pegging.

In the third inning Carroll, first up, filed to the Cuban deep in right. Calvo took the ball easily and whipped it to third, low and fast, and with wonderful accuracy.

It looked a bit like showing off. But later in the game, when the Cuban nipped Marcan's line drive with McDonald on third, McDonald stuck right there, not caring to try out the little fellow's whip. His throw on McBride's single in the ninth, when the Moles were beginning to bite us, was a beauty, and it nipped Marcan for the last out as he came in from second.

* * *

AND in the meantime, Mique Finn's wrecking crew was resting.

The margin of safety for the Gulls, therefore, stuck at seven full games this morning.

The Billikens who also rested, retained second place by a margin of two games.

Neither Billies nor Gulls are scheduled to-day.

Chance to pick up a little honest change in the percentage column—what?

SOX YOUNGSTER THROWS WITH EITHER HAND

By Bill Bailey.

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 19.—The White Sox have a young outfielder who is destined to become one of the curiosities of the American League.

Edward Rausch is his name and the thing that makes him wonderful is the fact that he heaves the ball from deep right with his left hand and from deep left field with his right.

We've all heard about the ambidextrous ball players. Away back when Anson was a recruit there were a couple of fellows who pitched with either hand. But it is doubtful whether there is one fan in a hundred who ever gazed upon a youngster who could throw as well with one hand as with the other.

Manager Callahan didn't know that he was getting a curiosity as well as a ball player when he purchased Rausch from the Evansville club of the Central League. The youngster reported on Friday. The Sox were at morning practice when the youth reported. You thought it was too late in the season for morning practice? Manager Callahan is still in the hunt for whatever he can obtain and is determined to finish just as high as possible. Which accounts for the fact that the men were being drilled in everything pertaining to baseball.

Sent to Right Field.

As was remarked, the Sox were at morning practice when the youngster reported. He was handed a suit and told to go out and chase fly balls. He did. He went to right.

"Who's the youngster?" went the query.

"Oh, that's young Rausch," from Kid Gleason. It's the duty of the assistant manager to work with the men, and especially the youngsters, at the a. m. drill.

"Left hand thrower?" it was queried.

"It would seem so," was the answer of Gleason. It also was apparent, for the youngster was shooting the balls in on a line from right field and he was employing his left hand.

Pretty soon he went to left field and played there awhile. One of the fellows shot a line drive out there. And then everybody stood about in amazement. For the youngster returned the ball with his right hand. And he shot it in on a line, too.

"Hey!" howled Gleason. He didn't want any mistake about it, and he did want some information. In trotted the youngster.

"Are you a right or left hand thrower?" queried the assistant coach.

"Don't make any difference to me," answered the youngster. "When I play right field I throw with my left hand. When I'm in left I throw with my right."

"Don't make any difference to you, eh?" queried Gleason.

"None at all. Why?"

"Oh, I just wanted to know." It takes a lot to keep the assistant manager from retorting, but there was none on his tongue this time.

Youngster Gives Promise.

The youngster is twenty years of age and if he can hit he will be there. There is no question about his speed. He worked out in left field before the second game against the Highlanders. He was going back as fast as the ordinary outfielder comes in. And he was grabbing the balls which is more to the point. They tried him out in the preliminary batting practice and he slammed said sphere to several parts of the lot. Here another surprise awaited the Sox. They naturally supposed that a fellow who could throw with either hand would bat from either side of the plate. Nothing doing. Rausch is a left-hand hitter and he doesn't swing from the right side under any condition.

Rausch was one of the first men purchased by the South Siders and cost $3,000. He hit in the neighborhood of .315 in the Central League. From the way he handled himself in the field it looks a certainty that he possesses the speed necessary to beat out many infield hits.

No question but that Rausch comes well fortified, so far as fielding is concerned. Many managers have an idea that a right fielder should be a left-hand thrower, upon the same theory that a southpaw thrower is supposed to have it on a right-hander at first base.

"Rausch throws equally well with either hand," said Manager Callahan. "It's my opinion, however, that he would do better if he decided to throw with either his right or left hand and then stick to it."

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

HOW SWEET.
(By Joe Tinker.)

How sweet to be a manager and lose
a lot of sleep
To pull a bunch of boneheads from
the bottom of the heap—
To patch a broken-down machine and
get it running fit
And then to see the owner throw a
monkey wrench in it!
It's bad enough to run a team that
plays in Cincinnati,
But this here interference stuff
would drive a fellow batty.

In other words, Mr. Tinker insists that he is the only man who has a right to tinker with his team.

Those who know Sherwood Magee aver that Mr. Tincup is not the only Indian on Dooin's team.

Not that we desire to discourage a promising young athlete, but a Tincup is a first cousin to a can.

It is rumored that John Evers thinks as much of Mike Mitchell as Mike Mitchell thinks of John Evers.

SOMETHING LIKE THE CUB OWNER.

There was a young magnate named
Farrell
With money stacked up by the barrel.
He said: "I will win
Though it costs all my tin
And they force me to pawn my ap-
parel." V. S. B.

Conundrum: If it costs $10 to call Bill Klem a catfish, how much would it cost to call him a sardine?

Paul Westerlund, a Californian, won a medal by running a 31-mile marathon race up the side of a mountain range. Up to date Paul has not won any medals for consecutive thought.

If Frank Navin were to accept that $100,000 offer for Ty Cobb we fear that Clark Griffith would break all existing sprinting records on his way to the cyclone cellar.

Arthur Pelky announces that he will do his training in Calgary. This shows that even a rude and uncultured pugilist often clings to the fond recollections of former days.

Mr. Pelky is the youth who swore that he had retired from the fight game forever and forever. But he changed his mind when he learned that the only other way he could earn a living was to work.

Mr. Mitchell, athlete, accuses Mr. O'Loughlin, umpire, of having used vulgar language on the field. And yet, the fact that a man is an umpire is sufficient cause to swear.

England feels as badly over the departure of Mrs. Pankhurst as a pitcher who has just recovered from a losing streak.

In a way, Ralph Comstock, whom the Sox have bought from the Minneapolis team, is one of the most remarkable athletes extant. It is said that he is the only member of the team whose grandchildren are not voting.

THE WHITE HOPE.

He had a fist as hard as a rock, like-
wise an iron jaw.
Without a doubt he was the hardest
man I ever saw.
Quoth he: "I got my training as a player with McGraw."

THE WORM.

"The worm will turn," a lad once
spoke.
He was a wise old guy.
He was an educated bloke
And what he said got by.
"The worm will turn," he said, and
men
Spoke lightly of his name,
But all interred the hammer when
The Pelicans won a game.

Not that we desire to inflame the thoughts of our yellow brethren, but the report that Ah Chung whipped Pat McCarty reveals the fact that the Boxer outrages have not ceased.

The 100-mile marathon race at Bellingham, Wash., reminds us that some men are nuttier than others.

Joe Boehling is now engaged at the unpleasant task of demonstrating that whatever goes up must come down.

Reading Mike Mitchell's tale of his recent job, one is led to suspect that being a Cub is like being in jail—only more so.

Charlie Ebbets announced yester morn that he would spend $60,000 to strengthen his team. We have not any inside information, but we have heard a well grounded rumor that to-day he will dedicate the $60,000.

Looking over Mr. Griffith's statement, one is led to suspect that Messrs. Altrock and Schaefer are not the only comedians on the Washington payroll.

The report that Hap Myers stole four bases off Jimmy Archer in one afternoon reminds us that several persons could have outsprinted Arthur Duffey if Arthur had sustained a broken leg.

Ben Tincup, the Indian pitcher who has been purchased by the Phillies, is on the wrong team. Imagine what a receiver Larry McLean would be for Tincup.

Not that it is any of our business, but the gent who picks out the names for country clubs must be related to the citizen who perpetrates the monickers for sleeping cars and motor boats.

Joe Tinker is not dissatisfied with his job or anything like that, but he has a hunch that as a baseball magnate Garry Merrmann is a good judge of wine.

NOT O'LOUGHLIN.

There was an ump in our town
And he was wondrous wise.
He spoke his words in such a way
That men could recognize.

STARRVILLE WINS.

PORTERDALE, GA., Aug. 19.—Porterdale lost to Starrsville yesterday 4 to 3. The feature of the game was the sensational work of "Kid" Harwell, who caught a grand game for the visitors. L. Cook also featured by his batting. Rocquemore fanned fourteen batters.

NO-HIT, NO-RUN GAME.

SUJERIOR, WIS., Aug. 19.—In yesterday's Northern Leagues game at Superior, Cy Dahlgren, of Superior, blanked Grand Forks without a hit or a run. Dahlgren was with the Cincinnati Reds this spring and was given an unconditional release after the training trip.

WILLIE LEWIS DEVOTED TO THE BOXING GAME

PARIS, Aug. 19.—Willie Lewis, the white American pugilist, who is now attracting as much attention at the Follies Bergeres as Jack Johnson did, said to-day:

"Boxing is not merely my profession, but my devotion. I believe that it develops any sound individual's muscular and mental faculties more than any other athletic sport."

Regarding the rumors that he intended divorcing his wife in order to marry Comtesse De Villenueve, Lewis said:

"Though I greatly admire her free dances, I never have spoken to her and you can contradict those rumors."

DIGGS ON STAND TO DENY GUILT AS SLAVER

Accused Will Attempt to Put Part of the Blame at the Door of Another Man.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 19.—When his trial was resumed before Federal Judge Van Fleet to-day Maury I. Diggs was the first witness called to deny that he was guilty of violating the white slavery law in eloping to Reno with Marsha Warrington, Drew Caminetti and Lola Norris.

It was contended by counsel for the defense that Diggs and Caminetti did not take the two girls to Reno for immoral purposes, but to escape arrest and prosecution by their wives.

That Diggs will attempt to make a Sacramento man share responsibility for the downfall of Marsha Warrington was one of the things hinted at to-day by persons in his confidence. Whether Judge Van Fleet will allow testimony of this character, however, was problematical.

Diggs will be followed on the stand by his wife and Mrs. Caminetti. Caminetti will also be a witness.

The appearance of the wives of the young men at the trial promised to invest it with renewed interest today. Mrs. Diggs, a handsome brunette, was in court with her young daughter, Evelyn, several days last week.

Both Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti will testify that they had threatened their husbands and their girl affinities with prosecution by the Juvenile Court of Sacramento and that these threats primarily were responsible for their flight to Reno.

Marshall Woodworth, one of the attorneys associated in the defense, said that the outcome of the Diggs trial would have no effect on the plans for the trial of Caminetti. According to Woodworth, Caminetti intends to adhere to his plea of not guilty and stand trial whether Diggs is convicted or freed.

Prelate Against Sex Equality Idea

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 19.—"I do not believe the Creator intended the position of woman in the world should be the same as that of man," Archbishop Sebastian G. Messmer, of the Milwaukee diocese, told the Catholic Press Association, in speaking against woman suffrage.

"However," he added, "I would not dare to come out with a positive statement that agitation for woman suffrage is against the rules of the church. The church has not taken any definite stand, and until it does, each individual has a right to think, talk and act as he sees fit."

'I'm a Blacksmith,' Says Harding Davis

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—A young newspaper reporter, paper and pencil in hand, darted briskly among the crowd at Healy's Restaurant during the process of ejecting the diners. He saw a man continually in the shadow of District Attorney Whitman.

"Will you give me your name, please?" asked the young news gatherer.

"Davis!" replied the other.

"May I have your first name?" questioned the youth.

"Richard Harding—Richard Harding Davis."

"What is your occupation?"

"Oh, I'm a blacksmith."

Two Killed at Camp Meeting Dice Games

LEXINGTON, Aug. 19.—Two men were killed and several badly wounded in a general fight during crap games at Wichita camp meeting in Mason County, Kentucky. Benjamin Timberlake and Henry Queen are dead.

Liquor Question Is Issue in Alabama

ANNISTON, Aug. 19.—With the hope of keeping the liquor question out of the next session of the Alabama Legislature, a proposed compromise between prohibitionists and local optionists in this county is being discussed, the object being to insure men of high moral and mental ability, men with business experience, to represent the county at the next session.

Laborer En Route for Fortune Dies at Sea

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—While en route to Australia to get $1,000,000 which was left to him by his father-in-law, William Lunstall, a laborer, died at sea, according to a wireless telegram received here to-day. The father of Lunstall's wife died in Australia leaving a vast fortune, and Lunstall proved the only heir. He was a penniless laborer and had difficulty getting passage money to buy a ticket.

Blind Tiger Taken From Water Wagon

TIFTON, Aug. 19.—When the man on the water wagon sells liquor, the town that owns the water wagon is up against it to keep in line with prohibition.

Henry Wade, negro driver of the city sprinkling cart, has been arrested by Chief of Police Thrasher for using the city sprinkling cart as a blind tiger.

Envoy Page Called An Enemy to Labor

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Walter H. Page, Ambassador to Great Britain, was denounced as unfit to represent the United States in England at a meeting of the Central Federated Union, because of his alleged enmity to trades unions and as a result of the strike in the plant of the Doubleday, Page Publishinging Company.

The pressmen, feeders, printers, photo-engravers and foundry workers are now on strike.

"The wages paid are far below the prevailing rate," said Secretary Shahams, "and everything is done to thwart organized labor."

Lunatic Says He Is Pat Crowe, Kidnaper

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—A man who says he is Pat Crowe, kidnaper of Eddie Cudahy, Jr., son of the wealthy Omaha packer, is held in the Washington Insane Asylum for observation.

The patient told the police and physicians that he had come to Washington to forward his claim on a patent for an invention preventing the spreadig of rails.

He said Secretary of State Bryan was his personal friend, and that through the Secretary he hoped to secure his papers from the patent office.

He Feared His 'Girl' More Than Gallows

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Robert Cade, 18, who surrendered to the police because he feared the scorn of his sweetheart more than he did the possobility of the gallows, was released to-day. He was suspected of the murder of Bennie Holstein, 13. Circumstances pointed strongly to his guilt. He was being sought over the country.

"My girl would have nothing to do with me when she learned that I was under suspicion," he told the police. "I would gladly risk my neck to keep her respect"

Bulgar Plot to Slay All Turks Reported

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 19.—Evidence of a conspiracy of Bulgarians to rise up in Adrianople and massacre all the Turks has been discovered, it was declared in a telegram received here to-day by the Grand Vizier. The contents of the message were turned over to the foreign diplomats to support Turkey's contention that an army is necessary at Adrianople to protect the Turkish civilians from Bulgarian outrages.

BAILIFF SHOT AS WRIT IS SERVED ON MERCHANT

Officer's Wounds Are Serious Following Attempt to Close Store in East Point.

Bailiff J. P. Gaddy is lying seriously wounded at his home in East Point Tuesday morning, with bullet wounds in his breast, shoulder and right arm, following a pistol battle with J. J. Willis, an East Point storekeeper, late Monday afternoon.

Willis fired six shots at Gaddy when the officer attempted to place him under arrest on a warrant charging contempt of court. A few minutes after the shooting Willis was arrested by Policeman Creel, of College Park, while trying to make his escape into the open country.

Gaddy was taken to his home at No. 1 Pine street, in East Point, and his wounds dressed by Dr. E. C. Suggs. Four of the shots fired by Willis took effect, the first entering the right breast and ranging downward under the left arm, the second shattered the bones of the right elbow, and the last two striking the officer in the shoulder. Dr. Suggs stated last night that Gaddy will live.

The warrant for Willis' arrest was issued because he had opened his store in violation of a writ of attachment served upon him several weeks ago, after George Harris, a cotton mill worker, had obtained a judgment for $1,000 against Willis for false imprisonment. Willis had previously had Harris arrested on a charge of obtaining goods under false pretenses, and had lost the case.

"When I went after Willis I was accompanied by my brother-in-law, John Wynn," said Sheriff Gaddy in telling of the shooting. "We found Willis sitting on the steps of his store. When he saw us he ran into the building. When I got inside he covered me with a gun. I told him not to shoot and started for him. He fired, the bullet strikng me in the breast. I then drew my gun, but before I could shoot another bullet struck me in the elbow. I was helpless, and staggered out of the front door. As I did so Willis fired four times and two of the bullets struck me in the back."

Gives Up Bad Checks, Admitting Forgery

MOBILE, Aug. 19.—When arrested on the charge of passing forged checks last night in a Royal street restaurant and taken before Chief of Police F. W. Crenshaw, J. A. Ball, a bookkeeper claiming Laurel, Miss., where he says his mother resides, as his home, admitted his guilt.

Ball, when seached at the police station, had a total of $315 in forged checks in his pockets.

NEW CONSUL AT MOBILE.

MOBILE, Aug. 19.—J. Nelson Polhamus, Cuban Consul at Canton, China, has been appointed Consul for Cuba at this port, succeeding Leopold Dolz, who goes to New York as Cuban Consul General.

Augusta-Columbus Railroad Proposed

COLUMBUS, Aug. 19.—A movement which had its origin in Macon, with a strong second by the Columbus Board of Trade, has come to light which proposes a direct railroad line between Columbus and Augusta, passing through Macon and the county seat of every county which it would touch.

The distance would be about 240 miles, and would not parallel any other road. Those who have begun the movement express confidence in the project and believe that it can be financed and that it will become a reality.

Surgeon General Studies Pellagra

SAVANNAH, Aug. 19.—Dr. Robert Blue, Surgeon General of the Public Health Service of the United States, is in Savannah to inspect pellagra cases in the Marine Hospital and the Quarantine Station at the mouth of the Savannah River. The visit is a part of the tour of inspection throughout the South.

Dr. Blue is especially interested in hook worm and pellagra conditions in the South, and will stop on his way back to Washington at the hookworm camp of the Rockefeller Commission at Wilmington, N. C.

Yacht Being Built To Meet Lipton Boat

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 19—A yacht that will meet the other American sloops in the race that is to determine the boat that is to meet Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger in September, 1914, is being designed here by Bowes & Mower. The ship will be built in this city with funds subscribed by members of the Corinthian Yacht Club who are said to have pledged $100,000 for the purpose.

Italy Makes Divorce An Issue in Election

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, Aug. 19.—The divorce question, it was made evident to-day, will be the main plank in the coming parliamentary elections in Italy. One set of candidates proposes to make divorce easier; the other to make it harder.

"Let a poor man have a chance at divorce," is the slogan of the pro-divorce party, while the leaders of the other says: "Make the country better by making divorce impossible."

CHAGED WITH ARSON.

CHATTANOOGA, Aug. 19.—Sam Lovell, County Court Clerk in James County, was bound over to the grand jury under bond of $1,000 at Ooltewah, charged with burning the courthouse there last March.

MAKE MONEY WITH POULTRY.

AMERICAN POULTRY is a magazine devoted entirely to helping earnest men and women make a financial success of poultry raising. Its staff of writers is composed entirely of those who have made a practical, instead of theoretical, success of poultry farming, and who are glad to pass on the results of their hard-earned experience to AMERICAN POULTRY readers. There are many pitfalls in the path of the novice which may be entirely avoided by those who will follow the teachings set forth in this magazine. It fully explains how to make a start, how to construct houses, coops, and other devices, how to get a large egg yield, how to cure and prevent disease, how to exhibit, how to get the top price for eggs, how to use incubators and hundreds of other points which every one wishes to know. It explains the famous secret system through which poultrymen have become rich and afterwards solid for hundreds of dollars. AMERICAN POULTRY is a large, handsomely illustrated, monthly journal, well printed on fine paper, and should be found on file in the home of every poultry lover. No beginner in the poultry business should think of being without it. It will save him many times the small subscription price. The advanced poultryman will also find it of great value; the articles being varied in their scope.

SPECIAL OFFER. The regular price of AMERICAN POULTRY is 50c per year, but in order to introduce it to several thousand new readers, we will, for a short time, give a large 200-page poultry book, which is a complete guide in the poultry business, absolutely free to every one sending 50c for a yearly subscription or $1.00 for a three-year-subscription to AMERICAN POULTRY. A trial six months' subscription (without book) will be sent for 25c. Never has so much been offered for so small a sum. Advantage of this offer should be taken at once.

IF OUR CUSTOMERS living on the North and South Sides place their orders before 9 o'clock and the ones in Inman Park and West End before 2 o'clock, they will be delivered the same day the orders are given. We are trying to give the very best service possible, and if our customers will bear in mind the hours that our deliveries leave the store it will insure prompt service.

IT IS ABSOLUTELY necessary for chickens to have green food during the winter. This can easily be supplied if you will plant out a small patch of rye and rape. They both grow very rapidly and will furnish an abundance of green food all the winter. Now is the time to plant.

THIS IS THE MOULTING SEASON, and that means that the hens should be fed a good tonic. Pratt's Poultry Regulator and Conkey's Laying Tonic insure a quick and complete moult, and that means plenty of eggs during the fall and winter, when they bring the high prices; 25c, 50c and $1 package.

FRANK HIS OWN BEST WITNESS, SAYS COUNSEL

State Fights Hard to Overcome Impression Accused Made by Calm Statement.

my life to know him until this crime.

"In reply to the statement of Miss Irene Jackson, she is wholly mistaken in supposing that I ever went to a ladies' dressing room for the purpose of making improper gaze into the girls' room. I have no recollection of occasions of which she speaks, but I do know that that ladies' dressing room on the fourth floor is a mere room in which the girls change their outer clothing.

"There was no bath or toilet in that room, and it had windows opening onto the street. There was no lock on the door, and I know I never went into that room at any hour when the girls were dressing. These girls were supposed to be at their work at 7 o'clock. Occasionally I have had reports that the girls were flirting from this dressing room through the windows with men.

"It is also true that sometimes the grls would loiter in this room when they ought to have been doing their work. It is possible that on some occasions I looked into this room to see if the girls were doing their duty and were not using this room as a place for loitering and for flirting.

Says Negro's Story Is Tissue of Lies.

"These girls were not supposed to be dressing in that room after 7 o'clock, and I know that I never looked into that room at any hour when I had any reason to suppose that there were girls dressing therein.

"The statement of the negro Conley is a tissue of iles from first to last. I know nothing whatever of the cause of the death of Mary Phagan, and Conley's statement as to his coming up and helping me dispose of the body, or that I had anything to do with her or to do with him that day, is a monstrous lie.

"The story as to women coming into the factory with me for immoral purposes is a base lie, and the few occasions that he claims to have seen me in indecent positions with women is a lie so vile that I have no language with which fitly to denounce it.

"I have no rich relatives in Brooklyn, N. Y. My father is an invalid. My father and mother together are people of very limited means, who have barely enough upon which to live. My father is not able to work. I have no relative who has any means at all, except Mr. M. Frank, who lives in Atlanta. Nobody has raised a fund to pay the fees of my attorneys. These fees have been paid by the sacrifice in part of the small property which my parents possess.

"Gentlemen, some newspaper men have called me 'the silent man in the tower.' I kept my silence and my counsel advisedly until the proper time and place. The time is now, the place is here, and I have told you the truth, the whole truth."

Frank bowed slightly to the twelve men to whom he had addressed this remarkable statement and then stepped down from the stand. Court adjourned until 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Cables from Liverpool were surprisingly strong today, with the result that prices were 5 to 15 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. The Mexican "war scare" did not result in any pressure. This, coupled with the absence of rains in the western belt of any consequence and the Dallas wire of hot and clear weather, encouraged sufficient buying to send prices still higher. Trading was active and shorts appeared to be nervous over prospects for a bullish weekly crop report covering Texas and Oklahoma.

The feeling is still more bullish in the absence of rains in the western belt and the bull forces were inclined to predict higher prices. Liverpool was said to be a good buyer in this market; also spot interests.

During the forenoon the market displayed an inflexible tone. Offerings were extremely light and scattered, resulting in prices increasing the advance 12 to 16 points from the previous close. August at the opening showed the largest gain, but later settled around 11.67, against an opening of 11.70.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: August, 11.66; October, 11.17; December, 11.10; January, 10.99; March, 11.08.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: August, 11.67; October, 11.18; December, 11.16; January, 11.17; March, 11.24.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: We favor sales on all moderate advances under existing conditions.

A. Norden & Co.: We believe that higher prices will be seen in due course.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: While so large a crop seems assured, few are willing to attempt a bull speculation when the whole crop is soon to be for sale.

Miller & Co.: We continue our advices to sell December cotton.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Splendid Bill at Forsyth.

Willie Weston, Grace DeMar and Toots Paka and her Hawaiian musicians are running a dead heat for first honors in the fine vaudeville offering at the Forsyth this week. First-nighters found it hard to pick the winner.

The Hawaiian musicians repeat the big hit they made on their previous visit to Atlanta. The guitar playing of one of the men brings down the house and Miss Paka's "hula hula" dance wins a big hand. The weird native songs are exceptionally pleasing.

Willie Weston, in a class by himself as a character singer, has new songs this year, and his act goes big. He was assisted at the piano by Howard Winburn, the Atlanta pianist; Mike Bernard, Weston's regular partner, being ill.

Miss DeMar, who sings well some songs that are full of "pep" to say the least, and captures the gallery in her last number when she exhibits a very shapely figure in tights.

The other acts on the bill are above the average in quality. Kennedy and Rooney have a skit that keeps the audience chuckling; Foster and Lovell win favor with songs and nonsense; the Nikko troupe of acrobats have a Japanese who walks up and down stairs on his head as an added feature, and the Pathe pictures are unusually interesting.

War Picture at the Grand.

Interesting light is thrown on the threatening Mexican situation by a remarkable motion picture, "Victory," at the Grand Theater this week. While the scene would fit any Spanish-American country, the acute conditions in Mexico immediately suggest that country, and the analogy is stronger still when the President of the Republic is assassinated and the crux of the drama develops with an attack on the United States battleship Utah.

Woven through the play is the love drama of a young United States naval lieutenant and the daughter of the United States Ambassador. All modern implements of warfare, including the hydroplane and the wireless, are demonstrated in action, and stirring battles are fought. The picture was made through a special permission and cooperation of the United States Navy Department.

BETTER TRADE IN DRY GOODS THIS YEAR THAN YEAR AGO

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

Buyers have been in the dry goods market this week in much larger numbers than during the same period a year ago. Merchants are ordering forward their fall lines and filling in their stocks thoughout all departments. Buying has proceeded with precaution in individual cases, but retailers generally are so much in need of merchandise for immediate requirements, that the total volume of shipments is keeping up remarkably well.

"Much needed rains have brightened the prospects for a good fall business in a large portion of the territory that was feeling the drouth.

"Silks are a big item of the trade at present, where practically all buyers in the market are placing orders for this class of merchandise in liberal quantities.

"Judging from the extraordinary demand that has developed and in view of the serious labor troubles that have prevailed for some time in the silk industry, there will be a scarcity of all kinds of silks before the season is far advanced.

"The sale of black silks has improved greatly within the last few weeks.

Liverpool cables: "Advanced on buying by complaint, chiefly Russian account. Small market and poor demand for spots."

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma, clear and hot."

The volume of retail buying in the local cotton goods market last week in most houses was substantially ahead of a year ago, according to The New York Journal of Commerce. There is an absence of speculative buying and a great caution is being exercised, yet total requirements for merchandise are becoming formidable, and it seems as if the retail trade has liquidated in the past six months more than in any recent similar selling period. Any broad buying for future account in the cotton goods market would bring on a sharp advance.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 19.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows partly cloudy in Southern Arkansas, West Tennessee and Texas coast. Generally fair elsewhere. Lighter but rather general precipitation over southern half of Texas. None shown by the map in the northern half, or Oklahoma. Indications are for partly cloudy to further showers over the western States; also Arkansas and Tennessee. Cooler weather generally in northern half of the belt.

Report here from Galveston freight agents says freight room engaged during summer is being relet, owing to demand for shipments not being up to expectations.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Showers fell in Texas and Oklahoma Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and while general good rains are needed, the talent is now convinced that some relief has come to the drouth-affected areas. This, in conjunction with the favorable crop reports received from Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and the Carolinas, caused the cotton market to ease off a bit. Oklahoma now seems to be in worse condition than any of the cotton-growing States, as a result of long continued dry weather.

"Texas, on the other hand, has suffered in part only, and certain sections there seem to be doing very well. Texans themselves say the boll weevil has done some damage in the southwestern portion of the State, but the recent dry weather has put an end to the progress of such damage on the west. The chronic crop killer seems to have failed in his attempts to reduce the crop promise to relatively small provisions, and for this reason the talent is now talking big crop and moderate trade prospects with a great deal of energy. In all of which demand for distant delivery and the causes thereof are playing a leading role. No general rains are in sight, but the weather bureau promises normal temperatures and showers during the next six days, from which the west may derive some further relief in the near future."

New Record Is Set For Spring Street

$600 Between Harris and Baker. Hugh Richardson's Sale—DeGive Denies Lease Rumor.

A record price has been established for Spring street between Harris and Baker streets. Jesse Ward has sold to relatives his one-third interest in a parcel on the east side of the street, 45 by 150 feet, for $600 a front foot, making $27,000 for the whole parcel. The buyers already owned the other two-thirds. The transaction was handled direct.

Hugh Richardson Sells.

Hugh Richardson has sold to J. B. Frost the stone bungalow at the southwest corner of Eleventh and Cypress streets, east of the Frank D. Holland apartments, for $22,500. As security for $5,000 Mr. Richardson took a mortgage on the place.

Peachtree Road Sale.

Peachtree road north of Buckhead continues to bring good prices. The northwest corner of Piedmont avenue, for instance, has been transferred from Mrs. M. C. Johnson to a client of Homer McAfee, of the Haas & McIntyre Agency, for $18,000, or at the rate of $75 a front foot.

The frontage on Peachtree is 240 feet and on Piedmont avenue 485 feet.

Small Sales Total $30,700.

The L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency has reported the following sales during the past week:

Six lots in the Clairemont Park sub-division at Decatur, $6,250; eight in Peachtree Highlands, $8,450; three in Woodlawn Park, $2,250; one in Oakwood Terrace, $850.

Mrs. Gussie May Bridges bought one of the corners of Moreland and North avenues, 50 by 150 feet, for $2,850; Mrs. Ella C. Freeman bought one of the corners of Moreland avenue and Hume street, 50 1-2 by 130, for $2,600 cash, and F. C. and B. C. Wilkerson bought one of the corners of Ira street and West Georgia avenue, 27 by 115, for $550, all through J. E. Pritchett.

Dixon Andrews bought 130 Tift avenue, 50 by 150, for $2,400, and J. T. Gardner the house and lot at No. 125 Bryant street, 50 by 100, for $2,750, through E. F. Culpepper.

Mrs. J. O. Hipp bought through Miss Maud Hampton from Lounsford & Bumbaugh, lot 4, block C of the Peachtree Highlands sub-division for $1,750, and will build a $4,000 bungalow. The sellers made $150, having bought 30 days ago.

The total of the above sales is $30,700.

STOCKS

By CHAS. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—As a result of the report from Mexico City that President Huerta had delivered an ultimatum to the United States which might result in war, the stock market was very weak at the opening to-day and prices were lower.

United States common declined 1¼. Canadian Pacific slumped to 217½ for a loss of 2½ points. Reading declined to 159¾ for the loss of 1¼. Mexican Petroleum was under pressure, yielding 1 point. Union Pacific lost 1⅜. Northern Pacific shaded 1

The selling at the start was general. Investors as well as speculators seemed to be dumping their holdings. At the end of 45 minutes a better tone prevailed, as Washington dispatches seemed to put a more optimistic complexion on the Mexican situation.

Among the other losses were Amalgamated Coper ¾, Chesapeake and Ohio ¾, Chino Coper ⅝, Erie ½, Pennsylvania Railroad ⅜.

American Smelting, which has extensive properties on the Mexican border, sold off 2 points.

The curb was weak.

American in London were under pressure and were weak and irregular. American dispatches received in London before the opening of the New York market, caused heavy selling of United States securities.

STOCK GOSSIP

"The Mexican and foreign situation may unsettle the market temporarily, but it is generally believed that the Mexican affair will be adjusted without any serious trouble. On weak spots think stocks like Union Pacific, Copper, Steel and St. Paul should be accumulated conservatively."—G. D. Potter.

The New York Financial Bureau says: "Foreign news indicates that the situation between Turkey and Bulgaria is critical. Fears are entertained that an advance upon the whole of Bulgaria is about to begin. On this news the London market is disposed to realize on stocks.

"Information channels continue to be conservatively friendly on the stock market, according to the outgivings from various well informed sources. We would look for fair buying opportunities with the intention to accept moderate profits."

The application made by the Texas Company to the New York Stock Exchange for the listing of its $3,000,000 additional stock and $2,000,000 6% convertible debenture bonds, is the final step in the transfer of the Producers Oil Company to the Texas Company. Under the terms of the exchange the stockholders of the Producers Company received one share of Texas Company stock for each share held; and one debenture bond for each Producers bond held.

The application to list $2,000,000 bonds explains the increase in the company's debentures from $12,000,000 to $14,000,000, as shown in the balance sheet as of June 30, 1913.

GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Corn was off ⅜ this morning on additional scattered showers throughout corn belt, which caused increased offerings in the pit.

Wheat was ⅛@¼ lower on favorable weather in the spring wheat belt and increased receipts from the Northwestern markets with the new wheat grading very high.

Oats were ½ lower in sympathy with the wheat and other grains.

Provisions were higher.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "It looks as if a good part of the export business in wheat was of the speculative order and to fill freight engagements for carrying charge purposes. Supplies are piling up, and while prices hold well in the fact of adverse conditions the market is not acting in a way that would bring in much fresh buying, but at the same time the market has many friends. It is the belief of the trade that while corn values are to remain high throughout the season, there will be numerous breaks following the bulges. Traders say that any let-up in the buying would encourage a lot of selling."

FRANK HIS OWN BEST WITNESS, SAYS COUNSEL

State Fights Hard to Overcome Impression Accused Made by Calm Statement.

my life to know him until this crime.

"In reply to the statement of Miss Irene Jackson, she is wholly mistaken in supposing that I ever went to a ladies' dressing room for the purpose of making improper gaze into the girls' room. I have no recollection of occasions of which she speaks, but I do know that that ladies' dressing room on the fourth floor is a mere room in which the girls change their outer clothing.

"There was no bath or toilet in that room, and it had windows opening onto the street. There was no lock on the door, and I know I never went into that room at any hour when the girls were dressing. These girls were supposed to be at their work at 7 o'clock. Occasionally I have had reports that the girls were flirting from this dressing room through the windows with men.

"It is also true that sometimes the grls would loiter in this room when they ought to have been doing their work. It is possible that on some occasions I looked into this room to see if the girls were doing their duty and were not using this room as a place for loitering and for flirting.

Says Negro's Story Is Tissue of Lies.

"These girls were not supposed to be dressing in that room after 7 o'clock, and I know that I never looked into that room at any hour when I had any reason to suppose that there were girls dressing therein.

"The statement of the negro Conley is a tissue of iles from first to last. I know nothing whatever of the cause of the death of Mary Phagan, and Conley's statement as to his coming up and helping me dispose of the body, or that I had anything to do with her or to do with him that day, is a monstrous lie.

"The story as to women coming into the factory with me for immoral purposes is a base lie, and the few occasions that he claims to have seen me in indecent positions with women is a lie so vile that I have no language with which fitly to denounce it.

"I have no rich relatives in Brooklyn, N. Y. My father is an invalid. My father and mother together are people of very limited means, who have barely enough upon which to live. My father is not able to work. I have no relative who has any means at all, except Mr. M. Frank, who lives in Atlanta. Nobody has raised a fund to pay the fees of my attorneys. These fees have been paid by the sacrifice in part of the small property which my parents possess.

"Gentlemen, some newspaper men have called me 'the silent man in the tower.' I kept my silence and my counsel advisedly until the proper time and place. The time is now, the place is here, and I have told you the truth, the whole truth."

Frank bowed slightly to the twelve men to whom he had addressed this remarkable statement and then stepped down from the stand. Court adjourned until 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Cables from Liverpool were surprisingly strong today, with the result that prices were 5 to 15 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. The Mexican "war scare" did not result in any pressure. This, coupled with the absence of rains in the western belt of any consequence and the Dallas wire of hot and clear weather, encouraged sufficient buying to send prices still higher. Trading was active and shorts appeared to be nervous over prospects for a bullish weekly crop report covering Texas and Oklahoma.

The feeling is still more bullish in the absence of rains in the western belt and the bull forces were inclined to predict higher prices. Liverpool was said to be a good buyer in this market; also spot interests.

During the forenoon the market displayed an inflexible tone. Offerings were extremely light and scattered, resulting in prices increasing the advance 12 to 16 points from the previous close. August at the opening showed the largest gain, but later settled around 11.67, against an opening of 11.70.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: August, 11.66; October, 11.17; December, 11.10; January, 10.99; March, 11.08.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: August, 11.67; October, 11.18; December, 11.16; January, 11.17; March, 11.24.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: We favor sales on all moderate advances under existing conditions.

A. Norden & Co.: We believe that higher prices will be seen in due course.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: While so large a crop seems assured, few are willing to attempt a bull speculation when the whole crop is soon to be for sale.

Miller & Co.: We continue our advices to sell December cotton.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Splendid Bill at Forsyth.

Willie Weston, Grace DeMar and Toots Paka and her Hawaiian musicians are running a dead heat for first honors in the fine vaudeville offering at the Forsyth this week. First-nighters found it hard to pick the winner.

The Hawaiian musicians repeat the big hit they made on their previous visit to Atlanta. The guitar playing of one of the men brings down the house and Miss Paka's "hula hula" dance wins a big hand. The weird native songs are exceptionally pleasing.

Willie Weston, in a class by himself as a character singer, has new songs this year, and his act goes big. He was assisted at the piano by Howard Winburn, the Atlanta pianist; Mike Bernard, Weston's regular partner, being ill.

Miss DeMar, who sings well some songs that are full of "pep" to say the least, and captures the gallery in her last number when she exhibits a very shapely figure in tights.

The other acts on the bill are above the average in quality. Kennedy and Rooney have a skit that keeps the audience chuckling; Foster and Lovell win favor with songs and nonsense; the Nikko troupe of acrobats have a Japanese who walks up and down stairs on his head as an added feature, and the Pathe pictures are unusually interesting.

War Picture at the Grand.

Interesting light is thrown on the threatening Mexican situation by a remarkable motion picture, "Victory," at the Grand Theater this week. While the scene would fit any Spanish-American country, the acute conditions in Mexico immediately suggest that country, and the analogy is stronger still when the President of the Republic is assassinated and the crux of the drama develops with an attack on the United States battleship Utah.

Woven through the play is the love drama of a young United States naval lieutenant and the daughter of the United States Ambassador. All modern implements of warfare, including the hydroplane and the wireless, are demonstrated in action, and stirring battles are fought. The picture was made through a special permission and cooperation of the United States Navy Department.

BETTER TRADE IN DRY GOODS THIS YEAR THAN YEAR AGO

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

Buyers have been in the dry goods market this week in much larger numbers than during the same period a year ago. Merchants are ordering forward their fall lines and filling in their stocks thoughout all departments. Buying has proceeded with precaution in individual cases, but retailers generally are so much in need of merchandise for immediate requirements, that the total volume of shipments is keeping up remarkably well.

"Much needed rains have brightened the prospects for a good fall business in a large portion of the territory that was feeling the drouth.

"Silks are a big item of the trade at present, where practically all buyers in the market are placing orders for this class of merchandise in liberal quantities.

"Judging from the extraordinary demand that has developed and in view of the serious labor troubles that have prevailed for some time in the silk industry, there will be a scarcity of all kinds of silks before the season is far advanced.

"The sale of black silks has improved greatly within the last few weeks.

Liverpool cables: "Advanced on buying by complaint, chiefly Russian account. Small market and poor demand for spots."

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma, clear and hot."

Rains: Taylor, Texas, .28; San Antonio, .10; Galveston, .08; Houston, .01, past twenty-four hours.

The volume of retail buying in the local cotton goods market last week in most houses was substantially ahead of a year ago, according to The New York Journal of Commerce. There is an absence of speculative buying and a great caution is being exercised, yet total requirements for merchandise are becoming formidable, and it seems as if the retail trade has liquidated in the past six months more than in any recent similar selling period. Any broad buying for future account in the cotton goods market would bring on a sharp advance.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 19.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows partly cloudy in Southern Arkansas, West Tennessee and Texas coast. Generally fair elsewhere. Lighter but rather general precipitation over southern half of Texas. None shown by the map in the northern half, or Oklahoma. Indications are for partly cloudy to further showers over the western States; also Arkansas and Tennessee. Cooler weather generally in northern half of the belt.

Report here from Galveston freight agents says freight room engaged during summer is being relet, owing to demand for shipments not being up to expectations.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Showers fell in Texas and Oklahoma Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and while general good rains are needed, the talent is now convinced that some relief has come to the drouth-affected areas. This, in conjunction with the favorable crop reports received from Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and the Carolinas, caused the cotton market to ease off a bit. Oklahoma now seems to be in worse condition than any of the cotton-growing States, as a result of long continued dry weather.

"Texas, on the other hand, has suffered in part only, and certain sections there seem to be doing very well. Texans themselves say the boll weevil has done some damage in the southwestern portion of the State, but the recent dry weather has put an end to the progress of such damage on the west. The chronic crop killer seems to have failed in his attempts to reduce the crop promise to relatively small provisions, and for this reason the talent is now talking big crop and moderate trade prospects with a great deal of energy. In all of which demand for distant delivery and the causes thereof are playing a leading role. No general rains are in sight, but the weather bureau promises normal temperatures and showers during the next six days, from which the west may derive some further relief in the near future."

New Record Is Set For Spring Street

$600 Between Harris and Baker. Hugh Richardson's Sale—DeGive Denies Lease Rumor.

A record price has been established for Spring street between Harris and Baker streets. Jesse Ward has sold to relatives his one-third interest in a parcel on the east side of the street, 45 by 150 feet, for $600 a front foot, making $27,000 for the whole parcel. The buyers already owned the other two-thirds. The transaction was handled direct.

Hugh Richardson Sells.

Hugh Richardson has sold to J. B. Frost the stone bungalow at the southwest corner of Eleventh and Cypress streets, east of the Frank D. Holland apartments, for $22,500. As security for $5,000 Mr. Richardson took a mortgage on the place.

Peachtree Road Sale.

Peachtree road north of Buckhead continues to bring good prices. The northwest corner of Piedmont avenue, for instance, has been transferred from Mrs. M. C. Johnson to a client of Homer McAfee, of the Haas & McIntyre Agency, for $18,000, or at the rate of $75 a front foot.

The frontage on Peachtree is 240 feet and on Piedmont avenue 485 feet.

Small Sales Total $30,700.

The L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency has reported the following sales during the past week:

Six lots in the Clairemont Park sub-division at Decatur, $6,250; eight in Peachtree Highlands, $8,450; three in Woodlawn Park, $2,250; one in Oakwood Terrace, $850.

Mrs. Gussie May Bridges bought one of the corners of Moreland and North avenues, 50 by 150 feet, for $2,850; Mrs. Ella C. Freeman bought one of the corners of Moreland avenue and Hume street, 50 1-2 by 130, for $2,600 cash, and F. C. and B. C. Wilkerson bought one of the corners of Ira street and West Georgia avenue, 27 by 115, for $550, all through J. E. Pritchett.

Dixon Andrews bought 130 Tift avenue, 50 by 150, for $2,400, and J. T. Gardner the house and lot at No. 125 Bryant street, 50 by 100, for $2,750, through E. F. Culpepper.

Mrs. J. O. Hipp bought through Miss Maud Hampton from Lounsford & Bumbaugh, lot 4, block C of the Peachtree Highlands sub-division for $1,750, and will build a $4,000 bungalow. The sellers made $150, having bought 30 days ago.

The total of the above sales is $30,700.

STOCKS

By CHAS. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—As a result of the report from Mexico City that President Huerta had delivered an ultimatum to the United States which might result in war, the stock market was very weak at the opening to-day and prices were lower.

United States common declined 1¼. Canadian Pacific slumped to 217½ for a loss of 2½ points. Reading declined to 159¾ for the loss of 1¼. Mexican Petroleum was under pressure, yielding 1 point. Union Pacific lost 1⅜. Northern Pacific shaded 1

The selling at the start was general. Investors as well as speculators seemed to be dumping their holdings. At the end of 45 minutes a better tone prevailed, as Washington dispatches seemed to put a more optimistic complexion on the Mexican situation.

Among the other losses were Amalgamated Coper ¾, Chesapeake and Ohio ¾, Chino Coper ⅝, Erie ½, Pennsylvania Railroad ⅜.

American Smelting, which has extensive properties on the Mexican border, sold off 2 points.

The curb was weak.

American in London were under pressure and were weak and irregular. American dispatches received in London before the opening of the New York market, caused heavy selling of United States securities.

STOCK GOSSIP

"The Mexican and foreign situation may unsettle the market temporarily, but it is generally believed that the Mexican affair will be adjusted without any serious trouble. On weak spots think stocks like Union Pacific, Copper, Steel and St. Paul should be accumulated conservatively."—G. D. Potter.

The New York Financial Bureau says: "Foreign news indicates that the situation between Turkey and Bulgaria is critical. Fears are entertained that an advance upon the whole of Bulgaria is about to begin. On this news the London market is disposed to realize on stocks.

"Information channels continue to be conservatively friendly on the stock market, according to the outgivings from various well informed sources. We would look for fair buying opportunities with the intention to accept moderate profits."

The application made by the Texas Company to the New York Stock Exchange for the listing of its $3,000,000 additional stock and $2,000,000 6% convertible debenture bonds, is the final step in the transfer of the Producers Oil Company to the Texas Company. Under the terms of the exchange the stockholders of the Producers Company received one share of Texas Company stock for each share held; and one debenture bond for each Producers bond held.

The application to list $2,000,000 bonds explains the increase in the company's debentures from $12,000,000 to $14,000,000, as shown in the balance sheet as of June 30, 1913.

GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Corn was off ⅜ this morning on additional scattered showers throughout corn belt, which caused increased offerings in the pit.

Wheat was ⅛@¼ lower on favorable weather in the spring wheat belt and increased receipts from the Northwestern markets with the new wheat grading very high.

Oats were ½ lower in sympathy with the wheat and other grains.

Provisions were higher.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "It looks as if a good part of the export business in wheat was of the speculative order and to fill freight engagements for carrying charge purposes. Supplies are piling up, and while prices hold well in the fact of adverse conditions the market is not acting in a way that would bring in much fresh buying, but at the same time the market has many friends. It is the belief of the trade that while corn values are to remain high throughout the season, there will be numerous breaks following the bulges. Traders say that any let-up in the buying would encourage a lot of selling."
