When the coroner's jury reconvenes Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock the city detectives will endeavor to eliminate all testimony which tends to refute the theory that Mary Phagan never left the National Pencil company's factory after she went there to collect her two days' wages last Saturday about noon.

The testimony of Edgar L. Sentell, employe of the Kamper's grocery company, has been a stumbling block in the way of the case from the very first. The detectives have never believed that Mary Phagan left the factory, yet they were confronted with Sentell's positive statement that he saw and spoke to her between 11:30 and 1 :30 o'clock Saurday night.

At Wdnesday's inquest he said that he was positive that he saw the girl, and said that he believed her companion was Arthur Mullinax. SALS SENTELL WAS IN DOUBT. Thursday, lowever, D. W. Adams, a trolley car motorman, came to Chief Beavers and told him that he heard Sentell say shortly after he had testified at the inquest, that he was not certain that the woman he saw was Mary Phagan. "It might have been Miss Pearl Robinson," Adams quotes Sentell as saying just a short time after he swore positively that he saw and spoke to Mary Phagan. Miss Robinson, who was at the inquet, was wearing on Saturday evening a dress very much like the one Mary Phagan wore, and earlier in the evening she and Mullinax says they were together.

The Journal's call, published Wednesday afternoon, that Atlanta arouse to the need of the moment and meet it without further ado, had found a responsive echo in practically every home in the city where there is accommodation for a visitor. This made the task of the ladies one of filling out their lists merely.

At headquarters of the committee, in room 513 Empire building, where Rev. Jere A. Moore is in charge, it was stated shortly after noon Thursday that the ladies were meeting with uninterrupted success and that the indications were the whole list of accomodations would be secured with a minimum of exertion upon their part.

UNCLE TO AID HIM.

It was learned Thursday that Moses Frank, one of the city's most substantial citizens, is returning to Atlanta today to assist his nephew, L. M. Frank, in establishing his innocence of the crime with which his name has been linked by the charge of suspicion. Mr. Frank had staried to York and immediately started back here, giving up his ourney. L. M.

Frank is said to be a favorite nephew and the probable heir to his fortune. The coroner's investigation of the murred of little Mary Phagan at the National Pencil factory Saturday or Sunday, will be resumed at police headquarters at 4:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, and the principal witness is expected to be L. M. Frank, superintendent of the factory, who is being detained by the police.

When the inquest, which had been in session from 2 o'clock in the morning adjourned for the day Wednesday at @ o'clock, the mystery of Mary Phagan's death had not been solved, and the crime was far from fixed on any individual.

Coroner · Paul Donehoo expects to hold a long night session Thursday. He fixed the hour for the re-convening of the inquest at 4:30 o'clock in order that the city detectives might utilize the entire day in their hunt for evidence which may tend to throw additional light on the factory tragedy.

ACCUSED ALDERMEN

The probe of Alderman McClelland's charges against Aldermen Maddox, Ragsdale and Spratling was finished Wednesday night about 11:30 o'clock, and while the committee will not make up its decision until it goes over the stenographer's report of the testimony, it was more or less evident to all present when the probe concluded that the

MANY MOURN DEATH OF

MH. EDWARD H. ROBERTS

Surrounded by his loved ones, he passed away quietly, Thursday morning shortly after 10 o'clock at the old family residence, 7 Baltimore place. One of his last requests was that his friends all be requested not to send flowers.

Mr. Roberts, a son of the late Elijah H. and Emily M. Roberts, of Middleton, Conn., was born in New York City, De cember 18, 1831, and was in his eightysecond year at the time of his death. At the age of seventeen he went to Ashtabula, Ohio, where he entered business. While a resident of that place he married Miss Catherine D. L. Carlisle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Carlisle.

In 1861, Mr. and Mrs. Roberts moved to New York where they remained until 1870, when Mr. Roberts became a partner in the lumber firm of Simpson & Co., at Bagdad, Fla. Sixteen years later he came to Atlanta with his wife and family, going into business with the late "Wadsworth, on the other hand, re- Edwin F. May. Alderman Ragsdale does not deny that that the city has bought some stock from J. R. Lawhon & Co. He claims the partnership was formed before he became a member of council and that his only participation in the affairs of the firm is that of financial backer. In other words. Lawhon does all the buying and selling, without consulting him.

The probe has shown that Alderman Ragsdale more than once requested Lawhen not to sell the city, to which Lawhon replied that under the terms of the partnership agreement he could sell to whom he pleased.

The probe has shown that Alderman Ragsdale, so far as the committee could learn, never used his official position to influence the purchase of stock from J. R. Russia would not be slow to protest, and as forcibly as circumstances might demand. It is at just this point that the peril of a serious clash between the Triple Alliance and the Triple Entente arises; just here that Austria, Germany and Italy on the one hand and Russia, England and France on the other might came into conflict.

If the six great Powers stand together, it seems inevitable that Montenegro will retire from its present defiant stand. But should there come a break among the big nations, should Austria proceed upon an expedition of conquest contrary to the wishes of Russia, the outcome might be dangerous beyond prediction.

The conference of the ambassadors in London today may lead to a safe and harmonious adjustment of these real and potential difficulties. Certain it is that European diplomacy. realizing the vast interests at stake, will do all within its power to settle the vexed question of Montenegro as speedily as possible.

California seems to feel that the peril is altogether too yellow.

The Hero Fund.

It is doubtful that a truly heroic act was ever inspired by any hope of material reward or even by any thought of fame. Noble and sacrificial deeds are often done on a moment's impulse and sometimes almost unconsciously. There are few souls in which a spark of patriotism is not somewhere hidden away, ready to flash forth at pity's or honor's call The humblest and plainest persons may bear a se cret gift of knighthood but if it is ever revealed it will be through the medium of unpremeditated cir cumstance, it will be naturally and unselfishly.

May Day and Modern Paly By Frederic J. Haskin

The revival of the old folk games so much enjoyed by the children of former generations is being demonstrated today by the number of large outdoor play festivals held in so many parts of the country. In some of these the old-fashioned Maypole plays a prominent part. Usually the festival terminates with a graceful dance, during which the flower-decked pole is covered with a web of bright hued ribbons interlaced by the youthful dancers in the way immortalized by Tennyson and other English poets.

In some of the festivals, however, the Maypole does not appear. The festival consists merely of outdoor games played by the children, usually with musical accompaniment. The most important of these play festivals and the one having the greatest influence in the country will be the one held in Washington today as one of the events of the program of the annual convention of the International Kindergarten union now in session in the capital city. This festival represents the only one of its kind conducted in any country. It is really a revival of the children's games used by Froebel at the beginning of his work in Germany, and Miss Catherine Watkins, the head of the kindergartens in the Washington public schools, is entitled to the credit of putting the idea, into effect in this country. Over 1,500 children will take part in this play festival which will be held upon the grounds of the Smithsonian Institution. In this natural setting the children will play their games to music furnished by the United States Marine band.

Modern educators deplore the fact that the children of the present generation do not know how to play. The lack of space and the artificial conditions of modern life are largely to blame for this loss, and a strong effort to increase the attention given to children's play is an important feature of the recreation movement so well under way. During the past decade the playground movement has added greatly to the amount of space given to the children for recreation purposes. But in every city the opening of a new playground serves only to demonstrate the fact that the children do not know how to use it. The play festivals which are being held will help the little folks to acquire the pleasure which should come to each of them from the simple bodily exercise developed by the old-fashioned outdoor games. When the kindergarten children learn it they will carry the blessing with them through the later grades. In most of the cities the play festivals include children of all ages. In Kansas City over 2,000 children took part in the last one. In New York a number of play festivals are being held under the auspices of the park commission, which not only encourages outdoor play, but furnishes music to accompany it. This play has to be under supervision, of course, and the number of persons training as recreation or play directors is increasing each year. The qualifications for such work are varied and not easily acquired. It is not enough that one should really love children and possess sufficient education to instruct them in the ordinary branches. These two things are taken for granted. There must also be a keen perception of the characteristics in the individual child in order that the especial needs of his nature may be met so far as possible by the play. The stolid, phlegmatic child should be stimulated by some of the games calling forth his imagination, such as those imitating the animals or birds in simple action. The child with the active imagination will be helped most by games which tend to make him accurate, and methodical. Each game or play must have a distinct purpose. This may be either in the development of the physical, mental or moral nature of the child and the wise supervisor knows how to present these in sugar-coated form as children naturally object to being continually kept at noticeable improving pursuits. In many towns the May day festival, whether it represent the old English features which are being so much enjoyed in many cities, or the folk games gathered from all nations, especially those of the German kindergartens, marks the beginning of the supervised play season for the children. Their interest is engaged before the closing of school so that by the time vacation comes they have developed many new tastes and are better able to appreciate the advantages of the public playground and the friendship of the man or woman in charge who helps them to the fullest erjoyment of it. It is claimed that supervised play will also tend to develop the natural faculties of the child to a degree which will materially improve his school progress. The advantages of supervised play, of which these May day festivals demonstrate only one feature, are becoming recognized by school authorities in a number of cities. In order that the ordinary school recess may be of the greatest physical benefit to the children a supervisor of games is now being employed. Instead of the entire school being dismissed for recoss at the same hour, the grades are given their recess at different periods which gives more space for play in the school yards and also permits the supervisor to give the play best suited to the size of the children. This could not be possible if all the children had recess at the same time. -With all the vaunted advance of modern education, the games most used in the modern play festivals under the supervision of a play director are those that the children of former centuries played of their own volition. In having lost the power of natural play, some educators clair, that the modern child has also lost the intellectual vigor of former generations. While a century ago fewer children were educated than now, it remains undisputed that thos who had educational advantages made greater progress, at an early age. The average child does not now begin to study languages or higher mathematics until after he has completed his elementary work, which,' according to modern standards requires him to be approximately fourteen years old. A century ago it was not unusual to find a boy of ten reading Caesar or working out the intricacies of a geometrical problem with the absorption a modern child would only be permitted to expend upon a play puzzle. The college graduate of today completes his course at an age averaging three years older than did the graduate of fifty years ago. The enthusiasts for supervised play believe that every bit of play should have some direct effect upon the children which will fit them for better future work. In the towns where the play festivals have already been held it is claimed that those who take part in them represent the highest intelligence of the school children. The simplest play contains some sort of wisdom which the children absorb unconsciously but thoroughly. Few teachers or play directors will be able secure the results attained by Mrs. J. B. Stoner, of Pittsburg, who educated her own little daughter along lines distinctly original, but at least the example she has set will be helpful to every one interested in the education of children. Little Winifred Sackville Stoner is now ten years old and has just passed her college entrance examination. She speaks five languages fluently and has written several children's books. She is a graceful dancer and also a musician. Her mother has taught her entirely through play. Their study games last two hours each morning and most of the remainder of the day, in pleasant weather, is spent in outdoor play. Winifred is skillful in athletics and has unusually well developed senses of sound, touch and sight. From her babyhood her play has been directed by her watchful mother who devoted herself to the highest development of every talent. When the child began to talk the spelling of her words she used was taught to her as a nursery game. Her mother read aloud and recited poetry to her before she could speak a word. Winifred has never been required to study beyond her natural inclination and her mother regards her as an example of what can be secured by education through ploy- ----

OUR UP-SIDE DOWN PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM BY DE. FRANK CRANE.

THURSDAY EVENING MAY 1, 1913.

(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.) idea that the blacksmith, mechanic, farmer, merchant or sailor needed an education was preposterous. That notion still subtly grips us. It is an aristocratic, class theory carried over into a democracy. The only theory of a public school for which a democracy has any mortal use is that children are to be trained and equipped for life-that is to say; that they be taught so as to make them capable of selfsupport, to render them intelligent men and women and good citizens.

The school teacher class unconsciously assume that all pupils are to be prepared to become school teachers.

The popular supposition is that children are sent to school ... learn to read, write and "figger." This is wholly erroneous. They should go to school to develop their whole character and faculties, to learn to use their hands, eyes and tongue, to strengthen their moral fiber, to learn how to do team-work with other human beings and thus become useful members of society. Information, knowledge and "book learning" they can easily pick up as they go along.

The state has no more right to pay money for schools that specialize on "scholarship" than to support institutions that specialize on woodwork or electrical engineering.

Scholars up has its place; but it is citizenship and manhood that should be the aim of state supported schools.

In education he things that should be in the main circus have been relegated to the side shows. For instance, moral training is of the first importance, absolutely essential. Honesty, integrity, industry, cleanliness, skill and such matters outweigh all Euclid and Caesar.

Our educational system is upside down, an inverted pyramid. It rests upon preconceived "standards." It should rest upon the careful study of the individual child, and its purpose should be to train him for the fullest manual, mental and moral efficiency.

John Haynes Holmes is not only a good preacher, but he has horse sense, which is possibly a greater compliment.

to Atlanta is beyond prediction; at a conservative reckoning, however, there should be between four and five thousand of them and the city will come into vital touch with every corner of the nation. Considered merely as a means to Atlanta's publicity and prestige, the fact is of inestimable importance.

The circumstance to be noted particularly, how ever, is that among all these visitors there will be fifteen hundred official delegates. It is to these that Atlanta is asked to extend an especially cordial and homelike welcome. They are the city's invited guests, the municipal authorities and the Chamber of Commerce having joined with the local Presbyte rian churches in bidding them come.

Provision has already been made for the entertainment of about a thousand of the delegates. Hundreds of Atlanta homes have graciously responded. But there are some five hundred delegates who must yet be provided for. Let the representative people of Atlanta rise forthwith to the needs and the op portunities of this occasion and, without another day's delay, prove how worthy they are of their city's renown for hospitality. 🤟

These delegates, half of whom are laymen and -half ministers, are among the leaders in their respective home communities. They are men of rare distinction and attainment. Their presence will be an honor to this city and a delight to every home in which they are guests. They must be greeted not as strangers but in a spirit of genuinely homelike welcome.

Thursday has been set aside as a day in which to complete in every detail the plan to secure homes for the five hundred official visitors not yet provided for.

Let all good Atlantians do their part in this gracious task.

For an undertaking such as this, a day should apply suffice and so it will if our people are true to their traditions and their ideals.

We cannot create or quicken heroism by holding aloft a prize, however precious; yet, it is truth long recognized that heroism should be more substantially rewarded than it often is and that injury or loss suffered in the performance of a brave deed should be compensated. That no doubt was the prime purpose in the establishment of the Carnegie Hero Fund nine years ago, so that the recent annual report of the commission in charge of that fund be comes deeply interesting.

It appears that since 1904 the pecuniary awards to heroes, or to those left dependent by them, have amounted to six hundred and seventy-one thousand dollars. Something more than one hundred and seventy-four thousand dollars has been allotted to sufferers. It is thus evident that the major portion of the money thus far expended has gone to the relief of urgent needs or at least to highly worthy purposes. The commission reports that up to January the thirty-first, 1913, it had made awards in seven hundred and twenty-three cases and had refused them in eight thousand cases; about a thousand additional cases are now under investigation. Fifteen medals of gold, two hundred and seventy-four of silver and four hundred and thirty-four of bronze have been awarded. The pensions now in force aggregate some fifty-three thousand dollars. The original hero fund amounted to five million dollars. The fact that only a little more than a million has been expended ind: cates that it is being administered with due discre-

The Mexican Triangle.

With Felix Diaz massing artillery on his private estate, a short distance from the capital, and with Provisional President Huerta surrounding the palace with troops, the Mexican situation seems far from reassuring.

Weeks ago it was hinted that Diaz and Huerta were at enmity and, though they both asserted their mutual goodwill, signs of a sharp break have been steadily multiplying.

In a speech the other day he declared that, though a graduate of Harvard college, he was forced to say that all he had learned in school had been almost worthless to him in the struggle for life. "The trouble with the common school system," he proceeded to say, "is that it is designed for the benefit of the few. Talk about special privilege! The whole machine is geared to the limited number who intend to go to college."

Mr. Holmes has put his finger squarely upon the weak spot in modern education.

Our public schools lie under the dead hand of the past. The fundamental spirit of them is wrong. Time was when schools were only mills to grind out "scholars." The great mass of the people were not supposed to have any interest in them. Boys were sent to'school to become preachers, physicians, lawyers or scriveners of one sort or another. The

The Top-Hat's Centenary

(New York World.)

Since centenary celebrations of every sort are the fashion, the top-hat is certainly entitled to formal honors on its one-hundredth birthday, and very properly England is to be the scene of special rites. Nowhere else in the world has it held the same place as an object of national worship. Nowhere else has it had the same social standing.

Sad to say, some observers of the changing dress of the times have noted that of recent years the tophat has suffered a decline. Since a Labor member- of parliament broke over all rules of etiquette and began to attend sessions of the house of commons in a common cloth cap, many patriots have felt that England was doomed. In large sections of this country the cylindrical hat of ceremony has never had more than a precarious existence, and there are mining camps in the west whose stocks are dealt in on Broad street where it was rarely to be seen except on the head of a professional gambler or rash eastern visitor. But perhaps what has most shaken the hold of the "cylinder of civilization" upon popular taste is the growing influence of outdoor sports upon men's dress and the tendency of the day to more rational clothing. When the soft hat with evening dress was countenanced in police society, the hat makers were given warning that it was time to make special efforts to stay the advance of revolution.

. It is appropriate that something should be done worthy of the occasion of the top-hat's centenery. It has a place in history that deserves to be preserved by a fitting memorial. If a monument seems too much to undertake," at least a bronze tablet should record its virtues, lest another generation discard it and let its memory fall into neglect.

"Commencement" Is Coming

(Boston Transcript.)

The visits of the dressmaker to the next door neighbor; student lamps burning at upstairs windows through the warm spring evenings and a rummaging for reference works in the branch libraries are the tokens whereby the commencement season begins first to manifest itself. These are the pleasures and pains of high school graduation. In the life of a girl, getting graduated is only second best to getting married. With the boy, the occasion is more complex. It is mixed up with doubts of whether, after all, getting through with high school is a compensation for getting through with school baseball which has been his first taste of the sweets of importance and personal glory. When it comes time to write an "oration," the thing is settled in his mind: graduating is not worth the midnight ofl. But the midnight oil must be burned, all the same, and the thing written. There is the bitter sweet of the last days; (they fly all too, fast); when nothing so endeared this life as the leaving of it. Forgotten are the girlish tears shed over. incomprehensible theorems; forgotten the angry hammerings of boyish fists on the pages of De Bello Gallico and the anxious consultation of the notes which always fail you at the hard places. Ahead loom the dubious prospects of college-an undiscovered country; one is sure to like it in the end, but the preliminaries may be painful; or the grim necessity of getting out and earning a living, of which, on a larger scale, the same is true. But, meanwhile, two months of glory and bliss. Who can blame these youngsters for living in the present?

How the metaphor fashions change! Ten years ago hardheadedness was the symbol of wisdom and ability. We recall an ild vaudeville wheeze about a man getting a soft hat to match his head. And now the thesauri are being combed for synonyms for bone ivory, wood and other non-resilient substances. Phil ologists may begin explaining.

The Most Difficult of The Balkan Problems.

The ambassadors of the European Powers, who meet in London today, face the most difficult and the most delicate problem to which the Balkan war has yet given rise. Montenegro persists in its refusal to evacuate Scutari, though commanded to do so by the six great nations. Austria is equally determined to enforce this command with or without the cooperation of the other Powers. The baffling task of diplomacy is to reconcile these differences, to persuade Montenegro to come to peaceful terms or to find means by which the desired end can be accomplished without independent action on Austria's part.

It is commonly suspected that should Austria once enter Albania on a coercive campaign she would never withdraw until her virtual ownership f that territory was established. Her ambitions - greater power in Southeastern Europe have long n known. Indeed, it is because of such ambiis that she so hotly protests against little Montegro gaining a foothold in Albania through the accupation of Scutari. It is at Austria's insistence that the Powers have decided to make Albania an autonomous State, setting it apart from the territorials spoils which the Balkan conquerors are to divide.

Russia has been acquiescent, outwardly so at least, in this plan. But should it appear that Austria was about to seize Albania for her own uses, Conditions have at length reached a stage where further pretense is impossible. It is manifest that each of these dictators is seeking the other's undoing; and since Huerta is nominally in the saddle, it would seem, according to Mexican custom, that it will be his turn to fall.

Whether Diaz will succeed in mustering the discontened element to his own faction, however, is rather doubtful. His alliance with Huerta in the treacherous overthrow of Madero has served to blot the popularity and confidence in which he was once so widely held.

A new and aggressive faction has risen in Mexican politics-the "Constitutionalists," as they call themselves. This party insists that Huerta withdraw from the provisional presidency on the ground that that office should, according to law, be held by the minister of foreign affairs in the late Madero's cabinet. "Regularity" and "order" are their watchwords, though they would probably not hesitate to employ violent means to carry their theory into effect.

The followers of this program are, perhaps, as ill disposed to Diaz as to Huerta, so that if another serious struggle should develop it would doubtless be waged under three standards.

A Bryan Lunch

(Montreal Star.)

While political economists are advocating the solving of the problems of the high cost of living by putting more gold in the dollar or more bread crumbs in the sausage, Mr. Bryan, President Wilson's secretary of state, has gone out and solved it without the aid of political economy or gold. He used silver, of course, and only a little of it, coupled with one or two of the fundamental principles of the simple life. The other day Mr. Bryan and his wife found themselves at the noon hour sont distance from home, but near a market. He also found 7 cents in his pocket. How many more were in his pocket is not stated, but at least there were seven, because Mr. Bryan went into the market and bought two buns for 1 cent each and 5 cents' worth of cheese. On these purchases the secretary of state and his wife lunched satisfactority-if not sumptuously. 1.20 and the bearing of the second of the second

NEW YORK COTTON LETTER

NEW YORK, May 1 .- The market opened with a short scare on in July due to a strong Liverpoool and the knowledge that through the control of the local stock the foreign interest might easily run a squeeze in the active sum- Smith, the druggist. They will return mer month. On the bulge, however, the market met free selling by straddlers, and there was profit-taking by operators who bought July for a turn early in the week. Reports by Miss Giles and Journal of Commerce were more bullish than expected. This added to bullish circular issued by Price yesterday, had a further stimulating effect. Sentiment is friendly to further upward reaction, but it is doubtful if a rally can be sustained if weather conditions continue favorable .-- Anders

Read What James J. Hill Says About Women Shoppers

Every woman tries to get the best value for her money. That is natural and proper, but the indiscriminate hunt for bargains spells trouble.

"The tendency of the average woman," says James J. Hill, "is to buy everything as cheaply as possible. That is the worst kind of economy. It is difficult to convince a housewife of this fact; but when she once realizes it she is on the true road to making money. The same principle that governs a railway in buying steel rails ought to govern the housewife in her purchase of beefsteak-not how cheap, but how good."

DIAMONDS A SPLENDID INVESTMENT

The fact that their price has advanced more than 100 per cent in the last few years has caused them to be regarded as an ideal investment. The yearly advance in their value is very much more than can be obtained on your money from a savings bank, or is to be had from putting it into stocks and bonds.

When buying diamonds the cash outlay need not be large. Our terms are one-fifth cash and the balance extended over a number of months best suited to the customer, making it possible to buy and feel absolutely no inconvenience in paying for them. This plan has many features of merit, chief of which is the requisition of a splendid property and the manner in which it is acquired.

We are showing some splendid values in solitaires, ranging in sizes from one-half carat to two carats that we would like for you to examine. These stones are absolutely perfeet, of fine color, and are cut in a manner to give them brilliancy that is not excelled.

The arrival of Bisland caused the release of Jack Kernan, the popular little infielder, who has been with the club since the start of the training season.

George Basuewein has been showing a bunch of stuff in the warming up practice and will get a chance to show his worth in the game today. Joe Dunn will again do the catching with .Pat Graham in right and Tomy Long in left. This shift in the line up is due to Bailey's injury. When Bailey gets back in the game he will bat in fifth place, where the name of Graham now appears.

Bisland the new shortfielder, is to be started at short rigt off the reel. He arrived here at 11 o'clock Thursday morning and reported as being fit to jump right into the game and turn out his best services.

The loss of Wednesday's game has not disheartened the club in the least. all realizing that the best must expetience a batting slump once in a while. Local amateurs will in all probability have the use this summer of two of the best diamonds in the city of Atlanta, the duo which are being laid out and colled down at the new Grant field at Tech Flats

The Tech team will, of course, not have any use for the Flats after school is out until next fall. The diamonds have been offered to the amateur ball players of the city, who are badly in need of grounds on which to play. In the Tech field they will procure fine

By the Sewance game they should probably be in either the best or the worst shape they have been this year. FEATHERS TO SCRAP AGAIN

LOS ANGELES, May 1 .- Negotiations were begun today for a return match between Johnny Kilbane, the featherweight champion, and Johnny Dundee, who fought a twenty-round draw with him at Vernon Tuesday night. The contest was unsatisfactory in every way, according to the newspaper comment. Although Kilbane led easily on points the draw decision was commended on the ground that Dundee was the aggressor and coming in at all times. albeit usually covered up. Tom McCarey and "Scotty" Monteith, manager of Dundee, expressed the hope of putting on the return match in two or three months, preferably July 4. It was the consensus, of opinion among fight frequenters today that neither boy would make good against a lightweight-the often expressed ambition of each. Kilbane did not seem to have a knockout punch and Dundee, with his peculiar habit of leaping as he launched a blow, also lacked steam.

general years ago and making his players implicitly follow these rules is going out of fashion and the quicker it disappears the better off the game will be.

Ten years ago a ball player was not expected to have any individuality in playing the game, but the recent work of Ty Cobb has plainly demonstrated that players as well as managers are able to fashion plays and execute them without always being told just what to do and when to do it. The Detroit player has shown that individuality is possible and now every team is taking it up to some advantage and within another few years they will all be trying it.

TEAM PLAY NECESSARY.

In stating that individuality helps the game it is not meant to convey the impression that team work is to be abolished. Team work is absolutely necessary in winning ball games. Without it you would have a bunch of nine athletes running wild on the paths, never signalling the base runner or batter and never properly playing a ball. This would develop a state of chaos which would ruin the game.

By speaking of individuality is meant the giving of more authority to each player and not make him rely entirely upon one man to map out his every move. Of course some managers and field leaders know far more than the average player and are better equipped to map out the play, but if individuality were only added to this asset the success would be twofold. A ball player who is good enough to play baseball on a real ball club certainly possesses some individuality and should be allowed to try it.

Take the case of Ty Cobb. Hughey Jennings, his manager, does not dectate to him just when and what he shall do each time he comes to the plate or gets on the bases. He notices the defense of the opposition and lays his own plans for action. Then when the occasion arises he is prepared to put into execution immediately just what he has planned instead of awaiting some signal from the manager. This waiting for singles takes time and will often kill a good play.

OTHER PLAYERS GOOD.

In the game today are ball players with just as much baseball sense as Ty Cobb. The only difference is that Cobb is allowed to use his own headwork and the others are not. Cobb has shown that individuality is possible and that the many plays he pulls are entirely probable. If Cobb can get away with this kind of work here are others who can succeed at least to a small per cent. And even 20 per cent of perfection in this invidual work would be a big help as it would be added to the old line of the manager mapping out the plays. In other words two heads can surely accomplish more than one.

The plan of allowing individuality has already struck the majors and is fast being recognized by the minor leaders. It is a charge that is sure to come and those who take it up first will get the better results.

Use Baseball In Arithmetic

WASHINGTON, May 1.-Baseball 18 being injected into the curriculum of the schools of the national capital as an aid in the teaching of arithmetic. This developed today when groups of school children were discovered reading the basebail news and eagerly interrogating each other as to the best means of figuring averages.

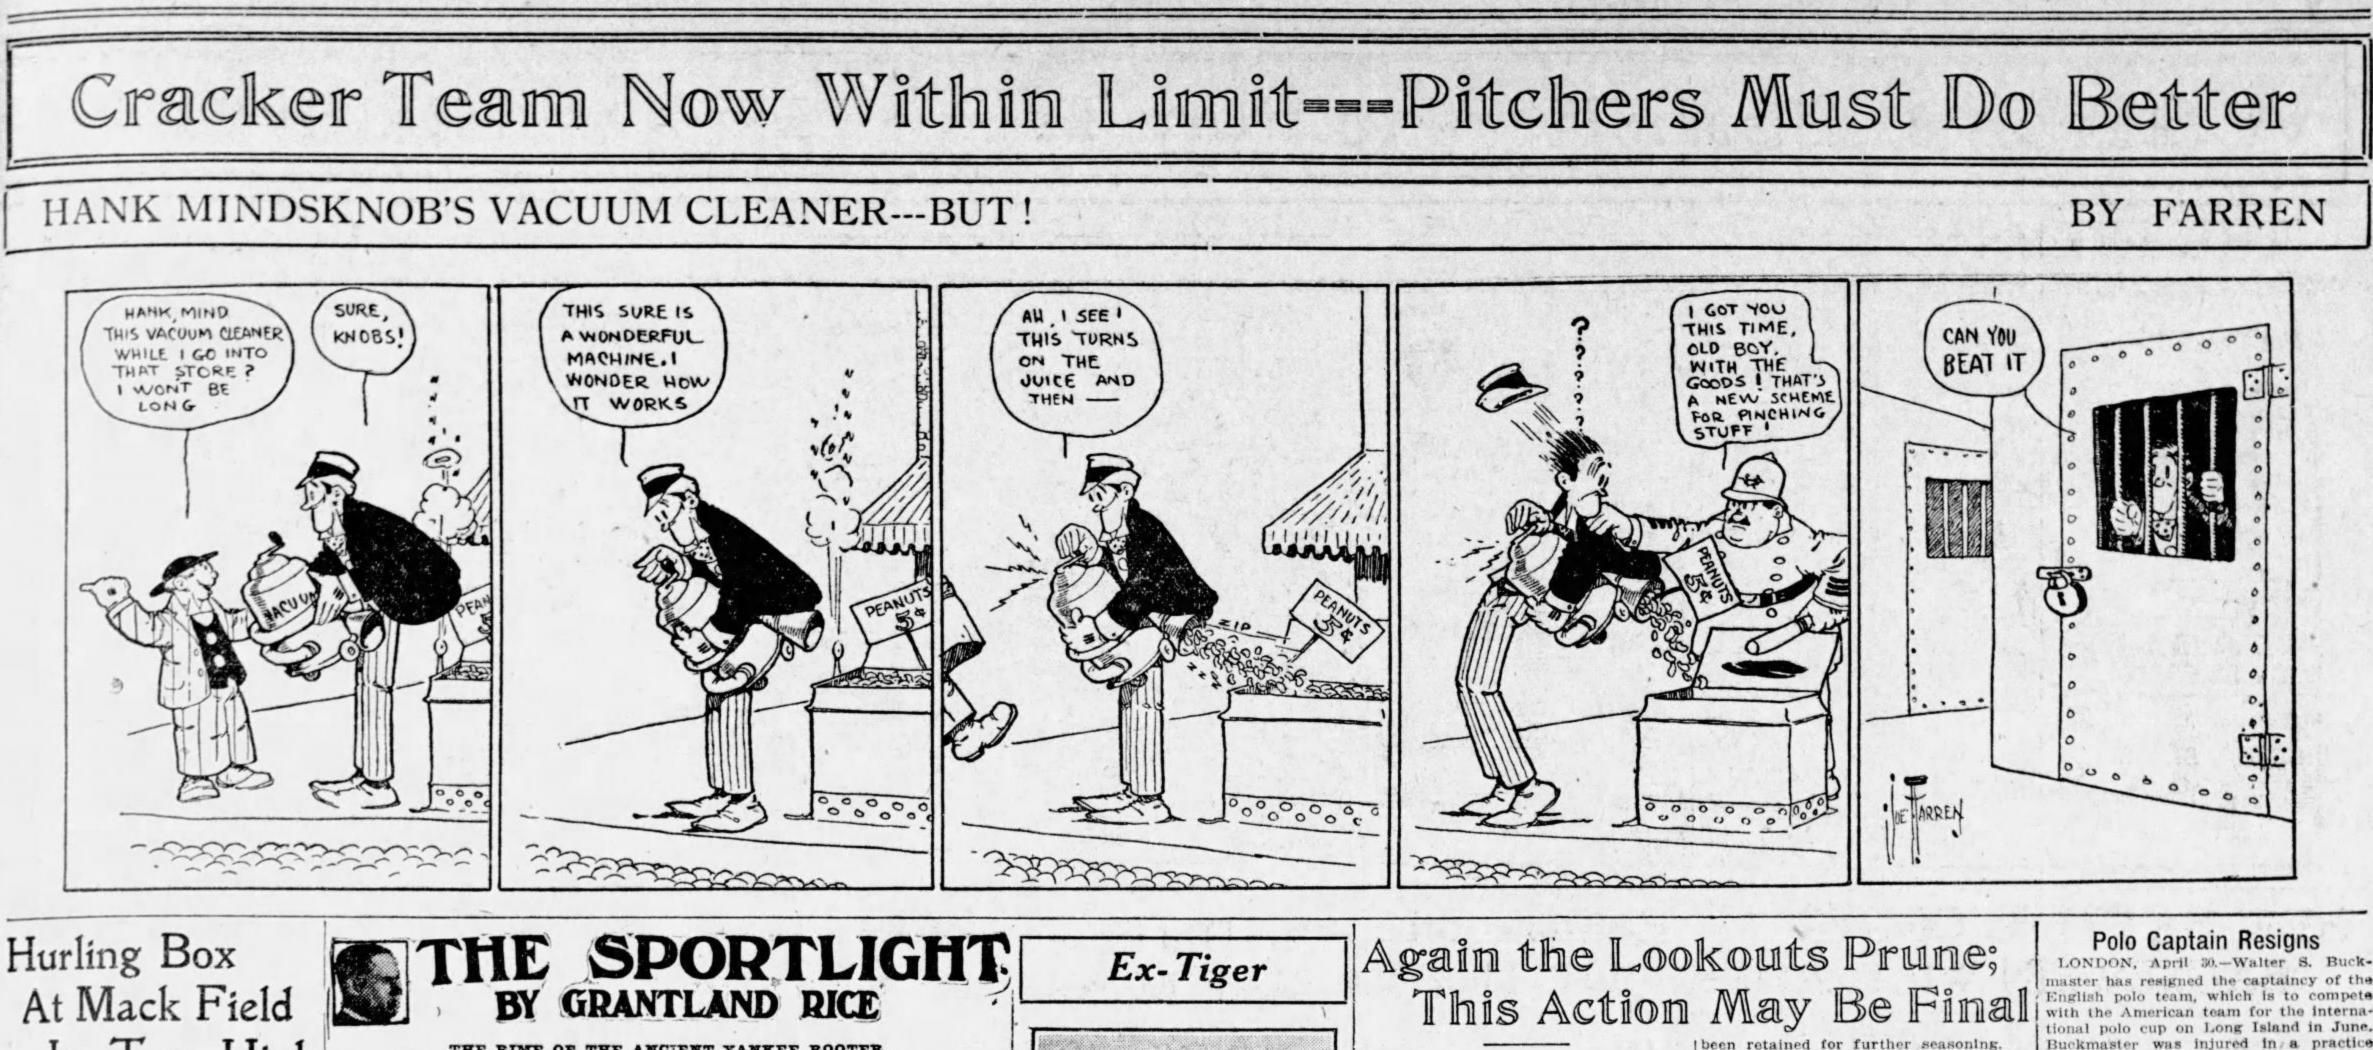

It transpired that teachers in arithmetic have been using problems in their classes such as the following: If "Chick" Gandil is at bat forty times and makes twelve hits, what is his average?"

"If the Nationals win eleven games out of fifteen what per cent do they lose?"

The new system is said by the instructors to be highly successful. Thoroughly interested in the national sport the children are said to take real joy in solving the problems and the same process is utilized in problems in linear and square measurement and, in the case of the less advanced pupils, in addition and substraction. The baseball diamond now is one of the commonest diagrams to be found on the blackboards of the schools of the capital.

Manager Griffith Claims Slab Is Greatly Elevated, but He Won't Make Any Official Protest

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 1 .- Members of the Washington team have made a discovery at Shibe park that may be an explanation of the success of the Athletic pitchers, and may lead to a protest before the campaign has advanced much further.

The pitchers' box at the grounds here is raised several inches above the rest of the diamond, giving the twirlers a distinct advantage over the batters. The centers of all diamonds are sufficiently elevated to afford proper drainage, but at Shibe park the mound is several inches higher than in other cities. The discovery was made from the dug-out that has been assngned the Nationals, and was freely commented upon by the pitchers and other players who inspected the situation.

Mr. Griffith is so thoroughly opposed to allbis that he will make no official report on the contour of the field, but will leave the matter to the other managers who visit here. If they are satisfieed there will be no trouble from a Washington standpoint.

A raised box is supposed to be particularly advantageous to left-handers, and when the nature of the mound here became known there was some pretty general comment anent the great game which Eddie Plank pitched against the New Yorkers the day previous to the arrival of the Grifmen.

One-Hit Game For Georgian

ATHENS, Ga., May 1 .-- Georgia made t two in a row Wednesday afternoon when the entertained Vanderbilt at their second goose-egg party. With Henderson off fist base on account of the mumps, and Covington protested. the Georgia infield looked new, but it performed in great fashion. Bowden holding down first and Holden third-Bowden rapped out three of Georgia's ten hits.

Morris, though a trile wild, held Vanderbilt to one hit. This hit was just touched by Clements but was an mpossible chance.

Luck, of Vanderbilt, was hit four lmes, twice for extra bases in the first inning. After this he pitched better ball, but received miserable support the Vanderbilt men throwing the all wildly. Only one error was charged to the Georgia team, two fast double plays being pulled off. On the offensive, Ginn, Bowden and Clements were the stars. Ginn rapped out two doubles, Bowden a double an two others, and Clements got one hit and three stolen

Starting a Herd of Cattle Or a Flock of Chickens

TT HERE are but few people who undertake either of these lines of work that ever realize or stop to think and figure a little when they once become interested and attemptto enter the fancy breeding business what their ruture will be ten years hence, or figure on their first start and what it really amounts to in the end by starting right or wrong. Many will think that it takes quantity and will undertake to start at the top rather than the bottom and both in cattle and in poultry will have numbers instead of quality in sight all the time. Many of this class make a big mistake and if they would only realize this in the beginning, rather than the end they would be far better off. For instance, after eight or ten years' time has been spent in building up a herd of cattle or a flock of chickens one can look back and see their mistakes. It is too late then usually to attempt to correct them or start over. Therefore, one cannot be too careful in get ting started right. Eyen though it take longer it is far better to start with something good in the beginning rather than to take something ordinary for your foundation. I have in mind a man who started many years ago to breed up a herd or dairy cows. He bought good foundation blood but not thoroughbreds or animals that had any known blood behind them, only they were individuals. Every year by close culling he has kept his best and has at last worked up a herd of very profitable dairy animals consisting close to one hundred head. He has carefully kept the milk records of these animals year after year and knew exactly what each cow made or earned for him. He has spent eight or ten years in this work and building this herd of cattle. They have made money and are valued at what they can do every day at the pail and are easily worth an average of $100 per head. On the other and, if this party had begun with thoroughbred registered animals of the same quality the original cost in the beginning would have cost him about $500 more money and today the difference that a herd of thoroughbred registered animals with such records as he has behind his her' of grades, the same number of cattle would easily be worth $200 per heau instead of $100, which would make for him a difference in the eight years of actual dollars and cents that he would be worth today if he had probably spent $500 more in the beginning it would mean to him today not less than $10,000 to say the least of it. This is an instance that I have watched closely and my figures are based on fair prices and actual facts and results. But, how few people see things in this light when they start. They are the things that should be considered in beginning any line of live stock, poultry or farming operations, and they should be carefully figured on before going too far. I know of a number of poultry breeders who have done likewise. For instance, I know of one party who for four years from cheap, ordinary birds attempted to breed prize winners, but never during that time even though a large number were raised, and a few of the best selected was this party ever able to secure any of the blue ribbons. But, he made a new start and converted several hundred birds into five good ones that had the proper line breeding behind them. The result has been that in the past two years this party has scarcely lost a first or second prize in the strongest of competition, and during this time has furnished many prize winners to others and has made more money in one year from this beginning of five good birds than they had previously

QUESTIONS ASKED AND ANSWERED.

QUESTION.

Harrison, Ga. I am having trouble with my little chickens with sore head. I had about fifteen hatched in January to die with it. I have now 150 hatched in March that are just beginning to take it. I would thank you very much if you could tell me something to do for them. The disease starts with little sores around the eyes and top of head, it swells until the eyes are entirely closed. I have done everything that I know what to do. The chicks are in a perfectly sanitary place. Would greatly appreciate any information you will C. L. W. give me.

ANSWER.

It is something unusual for sore head to appear among chickens at this season of the year. I am inclined to believe that your chickens have cold or a slight touch of roup instead of sore head. However, if they have sore head if you will treat the well ones as well as the sick ones with an application of one pint of raw linseed oil to which has been added one ounce of carbolic acid, only two applications of this will cure the sore head. Use only a small amount. Do not put too much grease on them. It is all right to use Epsom salts in the drinking water twice a week to prevent or stop-the spread of sore head in the flock of chickens, but it should not be used with young chickens under four weeks old.

QUESTION. Gorgon, Ga. Will you please tell me the trouble with my hens? I have a fine Rhode Island Red. She is trou feet, or if she holds it up at all she has got it lent away over one sided as though she had no use for her neck at all. When she walks she is like she is drunk and can't govern herself in the way she want to go. She falls down and wallers. She don't eat at all only as we force it in her. Please state the trouble and a remedy for same. Has been affected about a week. ANSWER. The hen has become affected with some nervous trouble which often affects chickens, and usually after they recover they have a weakness in their system that leaves them almost unfit for use. With a good dose of vaseling as large as the end of your finger given in the mouth twice a day may loosen up her system and thoroughly cleanse her out and she may recover from the trouble. If not it would be useless to undertake to keep her and cure her. Chickens, like people, often become upset from no apparent cause and unless they are valuable they are not worth doctoring. QUESTION.

Howell Ga., Please write me at your earliest convenience what to do to get rid of lice on chickens. Is it well to paint the roost poles with coal tar? Thanking you in advance, I am, MRS. L. A. C.

ANSWER. The best way to get rid of lice is to dip your chickens in a solution of one part of water to fifty parts of Bee Dee Dip. This should be done during the middle of a warm day. Painting BEE DEE DIP
