CALIFORNIA VOTERS MAY NULLIFY ALIEN LAND LEGISLATION

Secretary Bryan, in Making Farewell Address to Legislators, Says He Expects Voters to Use Referendum

BILL AS PASSED IS AS OBJECTIONABLE AS OTHERS

Directors of Panama Pacific Exposition Already Working to Secure 20,000 Signatures to Referendum Petition

MEASURE PASSES HOUSE; READY FOR GOVERNOR

(By Associated Press.)
SACRAMENTO, Cal., May 3.—The alien land ownership bill previously passed by the senate, was passed by the assembly late tonight and awaits only the signature of the governor to become a law.

(By Associated Press.)
SACRAMENTO, Cal., May 2.—Defeated finally in his diplomatic effort to dissuade the California legislature from enacting an alien land law affecting the Japanese, Secretary of State Bryan declared this afternoon that he looked to the people of the state to express a final judgment through the referendum before the act shall go into effect.

Mr. Bryan's statement was made before an open joint meeting of the senate and assembly, immediately before his departure for Washington. The assembly which was even then in the midst of its debate on the land bill, passed late last night by the senate, paused for half an hour to hear him and then took up its work of following the senate's lead.

The procedure in the lower house today was almost identical with that which the administration leaders in the senate adopted yesterday. On the one side the Democrats offered substitute resolutions and amendments, all seeking to delay action, and on the other side the Progressive majority stood firm in voting down every suggestion.

That the bill would pass tonight was predicted by both sides. It will then be in the hands of Governor Johnson awaiting the signature that shall make it a law.

Apparently the only contingency that can arise to prevent the carrying out of the bill's provisions within approximately ninety days is the threatened referendum petition which would require 26,000 signatures before the law could be temporarily nullified, pending an election. The matter could not be submitted to the people until the fall of 1914—a delay of nineteen months, in case the proposed referendum petition gains enough signers.

Early in the session representatives of the board of directors of the Panama Pacific exposition at San Francisco intimated to the legislature that the board would foster a movement to invoke the referendum against any antialien bill that might be passed. Recently the exposition company has been joined by several commercial and trade bodies in the larger cities who fear Japan will levy reprisals upon California by ostracizing present business relationships.

Secretary Bryan concluded his mission to the governor and legislature of California this afternoon with a message of farewell. To an open joint session of the two houses, attended by the governor, he gave renewed assurances of the friendly interests and co-operative attitude of the national administration toward the peculiar problems of California, transmitting the president's latest criticism of the alien land act passed last night by the state senate and rehearsing again those objections already made public.

In reply, Senator Gates, speaking for the state, said:

"This legislature appreciates the honor that has been done to this state by the visit of this secretary of state.

"We realize that his coming to cooperate with us marks an era in American politics. It brings the federal government into close touch with the individual states.

"On the part of the legislature I wish to express our profound appreciation and gratitude for the interest taken by the national government in a problem confronting the state of California, and to assure the president that, even if we may differ with him, we do it with the profoundest respect for his opinions and those of the secretary of state, and if we feel impelled to depart from that advice, we do it with respect for that advice.

"I purpose and desire, on the part of this legislature, to thank the president and his secretary for their assistance, and I express the hope that this visit may be a forerunner of further activity by the federal government in assisting the states in their work.

DISCRIMINATING TERMS.

Secretary Bryan, in his address, voiced the president's opinion that the words "eligible to citizenship," substituted in the California attorney general's redraft of the alien land measure for the words "ineligible to citizenship," are equally discriminatory and therefore equally objectionable to Japan.

"If a law must pass, he urged that it be limited in its operation to two years, that meanwhile diplomacy might so improve the international situation that enactment by the next legislature would be unnecessary. This suggestion which had not yet found the president, he said, was made 'for the consideration of those who have yet to act upon the subject.'

Secretary Bryan said in part:

"As I am departing this afternoon for Washington, I deem it proper that I should say a final word to you. My coming, at the president's request, upon the mission that brought me, was unusual and yet in the president's opinion, not only right in principle, but wise in policy. It was in keeping with his

HOUSE ADOPTS WOOL SCHEDULE WITHOUT SINGLE AMENDMENT

Predicted and Threatened Split in Democratic Ranks Failed to Materialize and Schedule "K" Passed

RAW WOOL VOTED FREE; MOOSE MEMBERS SPLIT

Republicans Offer Substitute, but to No Avail—Vote Stood 193 to 74—Underwood Says Party Is Together

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, May 3.—The wool schedule was passed without amendment by the house today in its consideration of the Underwood tariff bill. It went through with little excitement, its passage causing scarcely a ripple on the smooth waters of the Democratic tariff program.

The Republicans concentrated their attacks on the schedule by presenting a blanket amendment as a substitute for it. This substitute, prepared by Representative Payne, provided a rate of 18 cents a pound on raw wool, placed on the free list in the Underwood bill, and comparative rates based on a duty of 18 cents a pound on the wool contents of the various stages on manufactured woolens.

The Republicans vociferously proclaimed their substitute to be in conformity with the report which the tariff committee made on the woolen schedules two years ago.

The Democrats as emphatically declared it was not. A deviation from Democratic lines by members representing wool-growing states failed to materialize in the vote on raw wool.

The Republican substitute was defeated and the Underwood schedule passed, 74 to 193. With the silk, paper and sundry schedules still to be passed, Representative Underwood hurried the house on after the wool fight with the worst of the tariff wrangle out of the way.

The Republican attack on the Underwood wool schedule was bitter. After three hours of general debate, Republican Leader Mann and Democratic Leader Underwood summed up the discussion.

"Several years ago," said Mr. Mann, "we Republicans provided for a tariff board. We propose to stand by the report of that board and present a woolen schedule based upon the information ascertained by it. For years the woolen schedule has been a point of controversy, and for the first time in the history of our tariff making we propose a scientific woolen schedule, and we will appeal to the country to support a tariff based on real information."

MOOSE DIVIDED.

Mr. Mann pleaded for the support of the Progressives, "temporarily estranged from the Republican party, but soon to return to our ranks." On the vote the Progressives divided, some voting for and some against the substitute.

"The Democratic party," continued Mr. Mann, "admits that this schedule means the death of the wool growing industry in this country. One Democrat tells us this bill will kill the sugar industry, another tells us it will kill a part of the cotton industry, another that some other industry will be ruined. We might get along if only the wool industry were slaughtered. We might do so if the cotton industry alone were sacrificed. We might get along if only one industry went down. But to slaughter all these together, that cannot be done and retain prosperity in this land, although God knows I hope that prosperity will remain in the land and I feel sure that the people will soon return to that economic policy which insures prosperity."

Representative Underwood replied to Mr. Mann, declaring the Republicans themselves were not in harmony in support of the Payne amendment.

"You say that you are learning something from the tariff board about this schedule," he shouted to the Republicans. "You are learning that the sentiment of the American people is behind the Democratic party and this tariff bill."

Representative Mann asked whether the ways and means committee had not at first favored a duty on raw wool, but had "changed their minds at the request of the president."

"Candidly," answered Mr. Underwood, "this bill originally was written with a duty of 15 per cent on raw wool. But the difference between your party and ours is that we can get together and you can't."

"Except on raw wool," he continued, "your bill follows the rates in our bill very closely. It also approximates the tariff board report. But you know

HOKE SMITH'S IDEAS OF CURRENCY REFORM FAVORED BY BANKERS

Georgia Senator Goes Over His Plan With Legislative Committee of American Bankers' Assn., Headed by McCord

HIS AIM IS TO MAKE SYSTEM MORE ELASTIC

He Proposes National Reserve Associations With Which the National Banks Shall Deposit Their Reserve Funds

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—In conference today with the legislative committee of the American Bankers' association, Senator Hoke Smith outlined currency legislation which he has in view, and about which he is in consultation with members of the senate banking committee. The scheme was discussed in great detail, and the bankers seemed satisfied that the plan worked out by the eGorgia senator will, if enacted, accomplish desired results in the way of making the currency of the United States more elastic. Joseph A. McCord, of the Third National bank of Atlanta, headed the bankers' committee.

As the initial step in solving the problem of currency reform, Senator Smith's plan provides for the creation of not more than twenty, nor fewer than ten, territorial divisions of the United States, in each of which there shall be organize a national reserve association. The national banks in each division shall subscribe ten per cent of their capital stock to the stock of the reserve association, one-half of the subscription to be paid in. The banks shall deposit their reserves, less the amount kept in their vaults, with the association. State banks and trust companies may become members of the reserve associations, provided the states, by legislation, so authorize, and provided the state banks and trust companies comply with the laws applicable to national banks in their relation to the associations.

It is Senator Smith's idea to limit the dividends on the capital stock of the reserve association to 4 per cent, allowing, however, to the several banks in accordance with the daily averages carried by the banks with the association.

NO PRIVATE BUSINESS.

The plan prohibits the reserve associations from doing business with private individuals or corporations, and limits their business activities solely to their stockholders—the banks holding membership in the association. It is provided, however, that any association may loan money to, or borrow money from other associations, providing that the association making the loan has on hand more money than is required by its immediate stockholders.

The creation of a board of general supervisors, to consist of the secretary of the treasury, the attorney general and the comptroller of the currency, is contemplated by Senator Smith's plan. He proposes also that a deputy comptroller of the currency shall reside within the territorial limits of each reserve division, and shall have access at all times to the banking offices of the association.

The board of supervision shall maintain at all times a supply of reserve association notes which can be obtained by reserve associations for use as currency, upon deposit of approved personal collateral and to secure the notes which they obtain.

The board of supervision also shall have power to fix the rate of interest or tax which the reserve association shall pay on the notes, the rate to be uniform throughout the United States, with the privilege of making the rate vary according to the length of time that the notes are kept in circulation. The object of this provision is to enable the use of the notes in the nature of an emergency currency, to be retired when not required for use.

ALBANIAN INTERVENTION DISREGARDED BY RUSSIA

Muscovites Will Not Regard Austro-Italian Intervention as Cause of War

(By Associated Press.)
FRANKFORT-ON-THE-MAIN, Germany, May 3.—Russia will not regard Austrian or Austro-Italian intervention in Albania as a cause for war, according to a dispatch from St. Petersburg to the Frankfort Gazette. The Russian government, however, probably will demand declarations from both the Austrian and Italian government that their occupation of Albanian territory is not permanent. A refusal of such declarations would have a bad effect on the situation.

PRISON CLERK ARRESTED FOR $14,627 SHORTAGE

Lawrence Yerger, of Mississippi, Is Said to Have Confessed to Defaulting

(By Associated Press.)
JACKSON, Miss., May 3.—Lawrence Yerger, clerk of the board of prison trustees, was arrested tonight charged with being a defaulter in the sum of $14,627. Yerger is said to have acknowledged to Governo Brewer that he was short in his accounts.

An affidavit was filed against Yerger late today by Attorney General Ross A. Collins, alleging Yerger had, by making erasures and otherwise defacing his books, covered up receipts that had been turned into the prison office and appropriated the money to his own use. This money was derived from the sale of products of the state farms. Yerger, it is charged, so mutilated the records of these transactions that it was impossible to trace the amounts paid, while in some instances no record of them appeared upon the books kept by him.

The affidavit filed against Yerger by Attorney General Collins charges that during the last four years money was paid to him on account of articles purchased through him of the state and are unaccounted for as follows:

By the Jackson Oil and Refining company $1,447.17; Natchez Cotton Oil company, $6,136; Brookhaven Cotton Oil and Fertilizer company, $7,044.

Governor Brewer tonight said the amount of the alleged defalcation will probably develop to be greater than the sum now given.

The governor said it will be impossible to determine the shortage until a thorough examination of the books and accounts has been made.

Governor Brewer stated tonight that Yerger had acknowledged to him that he was short in his accounts, but did not say wha he had done with the money. Te governor said that he had had detectives examining the books of the prison office for another purpose and the shortage of the clerk, who had not been suspected, was discovered.

Yerger, when placed under arrest, at once waived examination and in a short time was released o $25,000 bond, signed by a number of the leading citizens of Jackson.

Yerger is 29 years old, married and is from one of the most prominent families of the state.

Congress May Compel Railroads to Use a Georgian's Invention

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Dustless and cinder-proof railroad passenger coaches have been made possible by a Georgian's invention for which a patent was issued yesterday by the government. It is believer that the railroad and sleeping car companies will hasten to avail themselves of the invention, but if there is unnecessary delay congress may consider the passage of an act requiring all comon carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their passenger coaches with the "cinder deflector," as it is called. Congressman Adamson, chairman, and Congressman Sims, of the interstate commerce committee, may take the initiative.

The cinder deflector was invented and patented by a Lutheran minister, Rev. D. A. Sox, of Carrollton, Ga., which is also the home of Judge Adamson. It is a simple device, triangular in shape, with a conical dome or top, made of thin steel.

Mr. Sox declares that the device has been tried with success on a number of day coaches, and that already a number of railroads have contracted with him for a limited supply of the deflectors. He is negotiating now for the sale of the patent right to a railroad equipment concern.

OLD GATE CITY GUARD WILL GO ONCE MORE ON "MISSION OF PEACE"

Notable Party Will Leave Atlanta on May 19 to Renew Friendships Made on Historic Tour 34 Years Ago. Details of Plans for the Trip

The Old Guard battalion of the Gate City Guard has completed arrangements for a notable tour of eastern cities, and will leave Atlanta Monday, May 19, for a visit to Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and Boston.

Friendships will be renewed that were made on the historic tour of 34 years ago, and in the various cities the Old Guard will participate in functions and ceremonies planned to strengthen the ties between the north and south.

Colonel J. F. Burke, who commanded the guard in 1879, and who inspired the unselfish and patroitic mission which it undertook at that time, will head the organization on this second trip.

ORDER FOR ASSEMBLING.

The following order was posted yesterday by Colonel Burke, commanding, and Adjutant E. J. Spratling:

"The Battalion is hereby ordered to assemble at the Piedmont hotel on Monday, May 19, 1913, at 9:30 a. m., in full dress uniform to march to the Terminal station, where a special train will be in waiting. The return trip will be by steamer to Savannah, Ga.

"The purpose of this tour is to meet the military and other organizations that so warmly endorsed the 'Mission of Peace' of this command to their former adversaries in the Civil war when they visited the eastern cities 34 years ago.

Accompanying this order is a circular issued by Captain Bolling H. Jones, quartermaster, in which the following itinenary is announced:

Leave Atlanta 11.30 a. m., May 19, Southern railway.
Leave Washington 7:45 a. m., May 20, Southern railway.
Leave Washington 7:45 a. m. May 21, Pennsylvania railroad.
Arrive Baltimore 9:00 a. m., May 21, Pennsylvania railroad.
Leave Baltimore 7 a. m., May 22, Pennsylvania railroad.

ENGLAND RECOGNIZES THE HUERTA REGIME

Britain Recognizes Republic of Mexico, but Withholds Recognition of China

(By Associated Press.)
MEXICO CITY, May 3.—President Huerta was formally notified today of the recognition of his government by Great Britain. The British minister, Francis W. Stronge, with due ceremony presented the king's autograph letter, replying to that of President Huerta. The minister expressed in the name of his government good wishes for the welfare of the Mexican government.

In reply the president expressed his appreciation of Great Britain's attitude.

It is announced that a letter of recognition from King Alfonso of Spain will be presented next week.

Mexic Federals Mutiny; Turn Guns on Own Men

(By Associated Press.)
EL PASO Texas, May 3.—Federal fought federal today at Casas Grandes, in a clash between mutinous and loyal irregular troops of the same command. General Jose Ines Salazar and his followers were forced to evacuate the old town when attacked by 200 of the mutineers.

Salazar's loyal men retreated to new Casas Grandes on the Mexican Northwestern railroad, after losing 9 killed and several wounded. News of the fight was brought here tonight by refugees from the district. It was also reported that the mutineers had looted Colonia Juarez, an American Mormon settlement. The attacking party was composed of those who quit Salazars group of ex-rebels last week and since have been raiding American ranches and agricultural settlements in the district, iterrupting railway traffic by burning bridges.

DR. ABBOTT REMOVED AS A PEACE OFFICER

(By Associated Press.)
ST. LOUIS, May 3.—Dr. Lyman Abbott, of New York, was removed from the list of vice presidents of the American Peace society today because he signed the appeal of the navy league for large naval appropriations.

Objection in the name of Dr. Abbott among the list of vice presidents was made by Charles E. Beale, of Chicago, secretary of the Chicago Peace society.

Five additional vice presidents were elected—Mrs. Philip N. Moore, of St. Louis; Jenkin Lloyd Jonas, of Chicago; Hiram Hadley, of New Mexico; Edmond Stanley, of Wichita, Kas., and Mrs. Frederick Schoff, of Philadelphia.

All the other officers were re-elected. The society now has more than fifty vice presidents.

The principal officers are Senator Theodore Butron, of Ohio, president; Benjamin F. Trueblood, of Washington, secretary; Arthur D. Call, Washington, D. C., executive secretary, and George W. White, Washington, treasurer.

The annual meeting of the American Peace society was held today in connection with the fourth American peace congress which held its concluding session tonight.

Liquor Bill Defeated

(By Associated Press.)
ALBANY, N. Y., May 3.—The Velte bill designed to authorize the board of aldermen and the mayor of New York to permit liquor to be sold in the greater city between 1 and 11 p. m. on Sundays was defeated in the senate at its final session today.

A 17-year-old miss, w... blonde and who weighs ab... 140 pounds, and who was in... in Marietta last Wednesday afte... wearing a dark red dress and a w... leghorn hat, may furnish the vita... clue in the mystery of the murder of Mary Phagan.

Who is she?

Where does she live?

Is it true that she was the last friend of Mary Phagan's to see the murdered girl alive on Saturday afternoon, April 26?

She alone can answer. It is but a matter of hours until her identity is revealed.

If she knows what she is said to know, she can tell the officers of the law something that they are very anxious to learn.

Last Wednesday afternoon Miss Beulah Daniel, daughter of G. T. Daniel, of Mabelvale, Ark., was in a store in Marietta, making some purchases. She is quoted as saying that near her stood two girls, who also were making some purchases and who were talking as they looked over the goods offered to them. One of them was the girl already mentioned above. Miss Daniel furnishes that description. She does not describe the girl's companion. They were discussing the murder of Mary Phagan in the National Pencil factory in Atlanta.

WAITED AT FACTORY DOOR.

The girl in the red dress related in Miss Daniel's hearing, it is said, a story that may prove the missing link of evidence that the detectives are seeking in their efforts to solve the mystery.

She said that she went to the pencil factory with Mary Phagan last Saturday afternoon when Mary called there to get her pay; that she waited at the street door of the factory; that half an hour passed without Mary returning, and she was beginning to grow impatient, when a man came to the door and told her she needn't wait any longer, for Mary had some work to do.

If the report is true, an dthe girl in the red dress did say what she is quoted here as saying, she can probably describe the man who came to the door of the pencil factory and told her that she needn't wait.

There may be the vital clue.

Here is how the trail of the clue was lost:

Miss Daniel, it is said, did not realize the import of what she had overheard. She returned to her home in Mableton later in the afternoon and repeated to her father what she had heard.

"That's exactly the evidence the police are looking for," her father is said to have exclaimed. "Here is The Journal, this afternoon, asking the world to say saw Mary Phagan last." We've got to find that girl!"

But their search, determined and interested though it was, resulted fruitlessly—except for one slight lead to further information. Someone in the store had heard the girl in the red dress say she was going to catch the next car — leaving Marietta about 2 o'clock. No one in the store who had seen them knew her or her companion.

Atlanta detectives were informed, and it is known that they were at work upon the clue Friday and Saturday morning in Marietta. Their efforts were in vain, however—but they spread a net of inquiry which today is reaching out to cover the entire territory between Marietta and Atlanta—all to locate the girl who wore the red dress.

Somewhere in that 19-mile stretch of country, or perhaps within the 24 square miles of Atlanta's own area, she will be found.

If she, or anyone who knows her and can tell where she is to be found, reads this, let her or the acquaintance do one of two things—call The Journal telephone, or call the chief of detectives in Atlanta. On Sunday The Journal's representative can be reached at Ivy 1917-J. On week days the number is Main 2000. The chief of detectives' number is Main 24.

PRESIDENT'S POSITION.

"The amity that has characterized our intercourse is in keeping, I think, with the course that should be pursued by those who, acting under a sense of responsibility about matters in which they are jointly concerned, are unable to agree upon the means to be employed for reaching the end in view. The president has impressed upon me at all times that I should emphasize the fact that his only purpose is to confer with the legislature as to the national and international phases of the question under consideration and that he confers as a not unsympathetic friend who desires to aid to the extent of his ability in a matter where he has not only a constitutional duty to perform but where he may be assumed to be able to judge of the effect of legislation upon our relations with other countries.

"He has pointed out the things which seem to him unwise in the bill that has passed the senate. The first words to which he calls attention are 'eligible to citizenship' which are as clearly distinguished from 'ineligible to citizenship,' against which he so earnestly advises. In the second paragraph the property rights of those therein described are defined as they are defined in the treaty. He fears that this will raise a question of construction and involve the subject in a lawsuit that may be both irritating and protracted.

ASKS IMPROVEMENT.

"I have submitted to him the suggestion, but owing to his absence from Washington just at this time have been unable as yet to secure an answer, that a time limit upon any bill which you pass might reduce to a minimum the unfavorable influence it exerts if that influence is unfavorable. If for instance, any bill that you pass dealing with the subject is limited in its operations to two years, or even four years—but two years would give opportunity for the next legislature to act upon the subject, would afford an opportunity for diplomatic efforts, with the hope that the situation could be construed as to make a re-enactment of the law unnecessary. Assuming that the people of California will be satisfied to reach the end which they desire by methods which will cause the least friction between this and other nations, this suggestion is made for the consideration of those who have yet to act upon the subject.

"If the legislature is willing to avoid the use of the words 'eligible to citizenship' or 'ineligible to citizenship,' I am authorized to suggest that the line might be drawn at another point, namely between those whose right to own land is defined by treaty and those whose right to own land is not defined by treaty, the former to be allowed to own according to the terms of the treaty and the latter to be allowed to hold land on the same terms that citizens of the United States hold land. But the president desires me to keep before you at all times the fact that he would prefer, if consistent with your state's interests, to have all action deferred for a time sufficient to permit him to employ diplomatic means."

In summing up Mr. Bryan rehearsed the objections and suggestions of the president, already made public and concluded:

"Having performed the duty imposed on me by the chief executive of the nation, my work is done. You have listened patiently and courteously and now the responsibility devolves upon you to do what you deem necessary, recognizing as you doubtless do, that you act not only as the representatives of the state, dealing with lands lying within the state, but as the representatives of a state occupying a position among her sister states and sharing with them an interest in and responsibility for international relations.

"You are fortunate in this state in having the initiative and referendum. The initiative spurs you on to do that which you believe your people want done, while the referendum empowers those for whom you speak to put their veto on your acts if you fail to reflect their wishes. It may be assumed therefore that if you feel it your duty to enact any legislation on this subject at this time, your people will either manifest their approval by acquiescence or their disapproval by submitting your action to the judgment of the voters by means of the referendum.

"I leave you with renewed assurances of the friendly esteem in the subject with which you are dealing and of my appreciation of the kind reception which you have accorded me as his spokesman."

BURLESON BEGINS WAR ON POSTOFFICE INSPECTORS

Postmaster General "Fires" One Inspector and Scores of Others Are in Line

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The activity and usefulness, or, rather, uselessness, of many postoffice inspectors has challenged the attention of Postmaster General Burleson, with the result that already official heads have begun to fall. J. J. Lamour, of Michigan, was the first postoffice inspector to be fired by the department. He was removed a day or two ago. Others are expected to share Lamour's fate.

Lamour, it is explained, walked the planked "for the good of the service."

An investigation has disclosed that out of the 380 postoffice inspectors employed under the Hitchcock regime only 38 were Democrats, yet politics was supposed not to play any part in the appointment of inspectors. The postoffice department, of course takes no official cognizance of the political affiliations of its employes, but the disparity between Republicans and Democrats in this particular branch of the service could not escape notice.

Democrats in congress are pleased with what they believe a determination by the postoffice department to relieve several score or possibly two or three hundred of the Republican postoffice inspectors. They are confident that Lee will give some testimony as to a conversation he is alleged to have had with L. M. Frank at police headquarters Wednesday night.

It is also expected that Mr. Frank will be called to the stand or that the stenographic statement he made soon after his arrest will be introduced as evidence.

It is understood that the coroner's jury will try to draw from the employes of the pencil factory evidence as to past relations between certain officials of the company and the employes.

Dr. J. W. Hurt, county physician who examined the body of the Phagan child, will be a witness.

THEY DIDN'T SEE GIRL.

J. L. Watkins, who testified on Wednesday that he saw Mary Phagan Saturday afternoon before the murder, will be recalled to say that he had mistaken Miss Daisy Jones for the Phagan child. E. L. Sentell, who testified that he saw Mary Phagan about midnight Saturday, will again take the stand to say that he has found he was mistaken.

Rumors were current last night that detectives have discovered attempts to influence the testimony of witnesses but none of these has been verified.

MORE ARRESTS IMPROBABLE.

It was stated at police headquarters last night that as far as could be seen at present, no further arrests in the case are contemplated.

In all probability startling evidence will be brought out when the inquest is resumed, but detectives have given no intimation as to what this will be.

A big corps of detectives have been working unceasingly on the case since the inquest was postponed from Thursday afternoon until Monday, and with the aid of the solicitor general it is expected that by tomorrow several new phases will be brought out.

The new Fulton county grand jury will be empanelled tomorrow and it is probable that, in event the coroner's probe is finished Monday night, the case will be taken up by the jury Tuesday.

whose mutilated body was found in the basement of the National Pencil company's factory last Sunday morning, will resume its inquest at police headquarters tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Nearly 200 witnesses, many of whom are girl employes of the pencil company, have been subpoenaed, and in addition to these it is expected that Newt Lee, the negro night watchman, and Leo M. Frank, superintendent of the factory, who are now in the Fulton tower, will take the stand.

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey, who is carrying on a special investigation of the mystery, and E. A. Stephens, assistant solicitor general, had a conference yesterday afternoon with Coroner Paul Donehoo, Chief of Detectives Newport A. Lanford, and Chief of police James L. Beavers. The conference lasted from 3 o'clock in the afternoon until nearly 7 o'clock. The two chiefs and the coroner went over all the details of the evidence secured so far with the solicitor general and his assistant.

WATCHMAN TO TESTIFY.

It is expected that the first witness who will take the stand when the inquest is resumed tomorrow afternoon will be Newt Lee, the negro night watchman, who was one of the chief witnesses when the inquest was begun Wednesday. It is expected that Lee will give some testimony as to a conversation he is alleged to have had with L. M. Frank at police headquarters Wednesday night.

MERCURY REGISTERS 88 IN NEW YORK CITY

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 3.—The mercury touched 88 degrees here today, one degree higher than yesterday. It was the warmest weather New York has felt during the first week of May for forty-four years. There were two heat prostrations.

Straw hats dotted the streets like dandelions on dark green lawns. More hot weather is promised for Sunday and all the beach resorts are preparing for a big day's business.

Try the New Way of Curing Corns

Easy As One, Two, Three; No Fuss, No Pain, by Using "GETS-IT."

Just take two seconds to put a little "GETS-IT" on that corn. That corn is "done for" as sure as the sun rises. The corn shrivels up, vanishes. That's the surprise you get by using this new-plan corn cure. There's nothing to stick to the stocking or sock; your toe pains stop. You're saved the bother of applying plasters that make the corn bulge out from the cure. You're saved salves that eat into the healthy flesh and "pull"; no more fussing with bandages. You don't have to help by picking and dragging out your corns, or cutting with knives or razors.

"GETS-IT" is safe, painless, stops pain, never hurts healthy flesh. It is guaranteed. Try it on warts, callouses and bunions, too. "GETS-IT" is sold at all druggists' at 25 cents a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

Sold in Atlanta by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Elkin Drug Co., Coursey & Munn, Gunter-Watkins Drug Co., E. H. Cone (Inc.), Tipton & Co.—(Advt.)

E ADOPTS WOOL SCHEDULE WITHOUT SINGLE AMENDMENT

that on the subject of the duty on raw wool the tariff board was divided. Its report on that subject was a Scotch verdict."

As soon as the wool schedule was passed house hurried through the silk schedule.

A single committee amendment changing chiffons from 50 per cent to 60 per cent ad valorem being the only change made.

ENGLAND'S PROTEST.

The British government has joined other nations in protest against that provision of the tariff bill which extends a preferential differential of 5 per cent on goods imported in American bottoms. One of the first acts of Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the new British ambassador, was to call the attention of the state department to this provision as in violation of the existing treaty on trade and commerce between America and Great Britain.

It is understood the Democratic managers in the house who were at first disposed to permit the senate to deal with this question, it being one involving treaty relations which belong to the upper house, have recognized the force of the objections that have accumulated from all quarters and will themselves remove the objectionable provision by amendment when the administrative section of the bill is reached.

The paper and book schedule of the tariff bill was adopted with only minor changes as to classification proposed by the ways and means committee.

The sundries schedule, while halso was concluded, was the vehicle of several lively discussions. Representatives Steenerson and Stevens, of Minnesota, protested against the proposed tariff on skins.

Mr. Steenerson said it was an injustice to the common people of his section to place a 10 per cent tax on the skins undressed and 40 per cent on the fur clothing made up. He insisted that if this were carried out an amendment he offered to tax other fur-bearing skins so dear to the hearts of women of fashion should be adopted.

Representative Harrison, of New York, for the committee, insisted that the rich fur merchants of the Twin Cities of Minnesota should bear their fair share of taxation, and that those who objected to it really indirectly represented the Hudson Bay Fur company.

Representative Davis, of West Virginia, sought to restore coal to the dutiable list and Representative Mondell, of Wyoming, asserted that free coal would result in the Wyoming mines going out of business and the British Columbia coal mines then advancing prices to American consumers.

A fight developed on the section that would prohibit the importation of cigarettes and certain feathers.

EXERCISE ALL YOUR RIGHTS TO EXTRA ANSWERS

Among the visitors at Booklovers' Headquarters yesterday, there was a young man who was in last year's Campaign, and, we will allow him to tell you why he did lose.

"When I entered your last year's Campaign, I secured the Catalogue, and all the pictures, read the rules and thought I thoroughly understood them and with the exception of one in regard to the right to ten answers on each picture, I did understand them all. I understood, of course, that I had the right to ten answers on each picture if I cared to exercise that right, but figured it out that the other fellow would likely use less answers than one, and have an advantage over me in that way. Then I proceeded to cut out possible answers in order to get down to two on each picture. Oh, yes, I cut them down all right; but unfortunately for me I cut out with them twelve correct answers, just enough to eliminate me from the prize-winning list. I know now that the right way to play this game is to take plenty of answers, and let the chances of a tie, or the other fellow getting one notch higher up in the prize-winning list, take care of themselves. As I understand it there is hardly a chance of a tie for one of the big prizes, for the reason that in order to make a tie, two contestants would have to have, for instance, 71 correct, using 400 answers each, when the usual thing in campaigns of this kind is that one of them would have 399 answers with 71 correct, and the other would have 400 answers and 71 correct, placing the man with 399 in first place. In this campaign that would give the man with 399 answers the $1,000, and the other man the $750. Figuring on the chances of a tie will not throw me out of the winning this year, as I am going to use every answer I am entitled to and will only hold down to one or two answers on the easy pictures, the ones that I am absolutely sure of."

J. E. M'LAUCHLIN GOES WITH SOU. STATES LIFE

Well-Known Insurance Man Appointed Agency Special in Atlanta

Announcement of genera interest in life insurance circles, is that made by President Wilmer L. Moore, of the Southern States Life Insurance company, of the organization of a Metropolitan agency department, with J. E. McLauchlin, for many years associated with the Georgia agency of the Equitable Life, as agency special. The Southern States Life Insurance company, an Atlanta institution, with headquarters in the Candler building, plans an organized and systematic campaign for procuring Atlanta business.

Mr. McLauchlin, who has resigned from the agency force of the Equitable Life, to assume these new duties, has been one of the leaders among life insurance solicitors in Georgia during the past five years. He began his connection with the Equitable Life in 1900 with the South Carolina agency. He came to Atlanta in 1903 and took up newspaper work, where he was rapidly advanced until 1907, when he resigned his newspaper work to resume his position as insurance solicitor with the Georgia agency of the Equitable. He has continuously represented that company as a leader ever since.

His success as a solicitor created for him many flattering offers with other companies, but he remained with that company until the Metropolitan agency department was created by the Southern States Life, and he was offered the position of agency special.

This company, backed by southern capital and directed by southern men, has made a most enviable reputation and its increasing business is a source of genuine satisfaction to its hundreds of friends throughout the south and the fact that it now begins the systematic campaign to secure more business in Atlanta, is another evidence of the growing strength of this southern company for southern people.

Mr. McLauchlin is being congratulated by his many friends upon the splendid connection he has made.

POSTAL TELEGRAPH CLUB HOLDS ANNUAL BANQUET

Officials and Employes in Atlanta and Southeast in Fourth Meeting

The fourth annual banquet of the Postal Telegraph club of Atlanta, was held at Durand's last night, an elaborate menu being served. Seventy-five members of the club were in attendance.

Splendid toasts were made by General Superintendent G. H. Usher, Superintendent G. W. Ribble, W. S. Lloyd, C. H. Ashburn, W. C. Daviet and J. F. Heard, which were received by the members with applause.

These banquets are yearly affairs, "get together" meetings for a good fellowship and for the discussion of business pertaining to the company, and are looked forward to by the club members with great pleasure.

The club is composed of officials and employes in Atlanta, and surrounding states. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

General Superintendent G. H. Usher—President.

G. W. Ribble—Vice president.

H. W. Pearce—Secretary.

W. C. Daviet—Assistant secretary.

H. W. Waterbury—Treasurer.

Governoring committee, J. P. Heard and W. C. Lloyd.

COLLEGE PARK MASONS TO HOLD ANNUAL RECEPTION

Announcement is made of the first annual reception of College Park lodge, No. 141, F. and A. M., to be held in the bank building at College Park at 8 o'clock on the evening of May 9.

The reception will be purely social and the speakers of the evening selected to deliver addresses are Rev. Fritz Baschenberg, chaplain of the lodge, and T. H. Jeffries. John P. Bradley will be master of ceremonies.

Slatten's orchestra will furnish music for the occasion and readings and recitations will be given by Miss Verna Ruth Harris and Miss Agnes Coleman. Two hundred invitations have been issued to the supper that is to be served.

JESSE W. ARMISTEAD RUNS FOR ALDERMAN

President of Seventh Ward Improvement Club Offers to Succeed F. J. Spratling

Jesse W. Armistead, a linotype operator on The Atlanta Journal and president of the Seventh Ward Improvement club, announces that he will be a candidate for alderman in the Seventh ward next fall to succeed the present incumbent, F. J. Spratling.

Mr. Armistead, whose home is at 57 Grady place, has been a citizen of the Seventh ward for a number of years, and has impressed himself very favorably upon citizens throughout the ward, not only as president of the improvement club but also by his good work along other lines.

This is his first venture into politics, and came about as the result of solicitation on the part of a large and representative number of citizens of the ward.

In addition to his position in the improvement club, Mr. Armistead is president of the Atlanta Typographical union.

ORGAN CONCERTS WILL RESUME THIS AFTERNOON

The free Sunday afternoon concerts at the auditorium-armory will be resumed this Sunday with one of the most attractive programs that Dr. Starnes and the Atlanta Music Festival association have presented.

The program will include the intermezzo from Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," which many opera-goers considered the musical gem of that performance.

Wagner's overture to "Die Meistersinger," and an improvisation on German folk-songs, will be included.

The general public is cordially invited to attend these concerts. They begin promptly at 3:30 o'clock. The auditorium has a seating capacity of over 6,000. From this time on the concerts will take place as regularly as possible through the spring and summer.

The Atlanta Music Festival chorus will meet for rehearsal at Cable hall, 81 North Broad street, on Monday evening at 8 o'clock. Matters of special interest will be taken up and a full attendance has been requested.

CAPT. PETTY RETURNS TO REALTY BUSINESS

Captain M. L. Petty, who sold out his real estate business the first of the year with the intention of going to Albany, Ga., in the real estate business, on account of sickness in his family, was unable to go to south Georgia. He has now opened an office at 125 North Pryor street. He will do a general real estate business, both city and country property. He has a great many valuable southwest Georgia farms on his list, including some of the best cotton and oat farms in the south; also some very valuable pecan plantations.

The pecan business is getting to be one of the most popular enterprises in south Georgia. In fact, it is more popular than the orange business in Florida. No longer than last June a 200-acre pecan orchard, near Albany, sold for $200,000.

FREE ORGAN CONCERTS TO BE RESUMED TODAY

Dr. Starnes Plays at Auditorium This Afternoon at 3:30 o'Clock

The following program is announced by the Atlanta Music Festival association for the free concert this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the auditorium-armory:

1. Handel. Overture to "The Occasional Oratorio."

2. Chaminade. "Scarf Dance." Madame Cecile Chaminade, the well-konwn French composer, has written a large amount of original and graceful chamber music, mostly for the pianoforte, although her songs are beside held high in appreciation.

3. Starnes. Improvisation upon the German Folk-song "Die Loreley."

4. Puccini. Intermezzo "The Journey to Harve." (Manon Lescaut.) This orchestral interlude consists of two themes; the first descriptive of Manon's imprisonment; and the second the journey to Harve. Upon the score the composer has added these words of Des Grieux: "How I love her—My passion is so ardent that I am the most unhappy creature alive. Wine have I not tried in Paris to obtain her liberty? I have implored the aid of those in power; I have knocked at every door; I have resorted to force! All has been in vain. Only one thing is left for me to do—to follow herwhereve; she may go—even unto the end of the world."

5. Wagner. (1812-1892) Overture to "Die Meistersinger."

This afternon will make the regular resumption of the free concerts. Everybody is invited to attend. Patrons are requested to be in their seats promptly by 3:30 o'clock. Dr. Percy J. Starnes will preside at the organ.

MR. J. V. TARVER ACQUIRES PEACHTREE STREET SHOE STORE

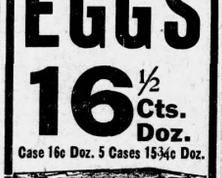

Mr. J. V. Tarver, recently connected with one of Atlanta's best known shoe stores, tomorrow will assume the management of the Tarver Shoe Company, 13 Peachtree street, and will cater to the masses of men, women and children who want good shoe value. This store, formerly occupied by the Gilbert Shoe Company, will be remodeled and refinished throughout, and will present an attractive and inviting appearance.

Among other well known lines, the company will handle the celebrated Rice & Hutchins' "Educator" shoes, and the business will be conducted on a larger scale than formerly.

Mr. Tarver is splendidly qualified to serve the trade to the best advantage. He has successfully managed several of the Claflin Syndicate stores, and before coming to Atlanta was manager of the shoe department of J. B. White & Co., of Augusta. He will devote all his time to the development of his new business, and will be glad to have his friends call on him at 13 Peachtree, where they will find a complete line of new styles in Men, Women and Children's Shoes and fine Hosiery.—(Advt.)

1,000 SCHOOL CHILDREN WILL SING AT CONCERT

Folk Songs by Members of All Public Schools to Be Heard at Auditorium

The voices of a thousand Atlanta children will join in a giant chorus next Friday evening at the auditorium. The occasion will be the annual folk-song concert of the Atlanta public schools and all of the children of the eighth grades and many of those from the seventh grades will take part in the entertainment.

The director of music, Miss Kate Lee Harralson, has been training the young Atlantians for weeks for their public appearance next Friday evening, and the young voices will fill the hall where so recently the world's greatest singers were heard.

The eighth grade pupils of all of the public schools of the city will have a part in the concert. They are 525 in number. They will be assisted by a large number of the students in the seventh grades.

Dr. Percy J. Starnes, the organist of the Atlanta Musical association, will accompany the children in all of their songs on the auditorium's organ.

The program for the concert as arranged by Miss Harralson is as follows:

Songs of England—(a) "The Fox Hunt;" (b) "Weel May the Keel Row."

Songs of Scotland—(a) "Flow Gently, Sweet Afton;" (b) "Auld Lang Syne."

Folk songs, seventh grade—(a) "The Blue Bells of Scotland." (b) "My Normandy."

Songs of Ireland—(a) "Spirit of the Summer Time;" (b) "Isle of Beauty."

Songs of Wales—(a) "The Rising of the Lark;" (b) "Why Lingers my Gaze."

Folk songs, seventh grade—(a) "The Hills of Tyrol;" (b) "Santa Lucia."

Songs of America—(a) "Way Down Upon de Swannee Ribber;" (b) "Dixie;" (c) "Home, Sweet Home."

Seventh grades—Crew, Edgewood, Formwalt, Calhoun, Williams, Lee, Peeples and Pryor.

PRESBYTERIAN VISITORS WILL FIND THAT ATLANTA'S LATCH STRING HANGS OUTSIDE

Cordial Hospitality of Atlantians Being Manifested—Hundreds of Non-Presbyterians Are Inviting Commissioners to General Assemblies Into Their Homes as Guests During Stay Here

With invitations listed last night for 384 additional Presbyterian commissioners to accept hospitality in non-Presbyterian homes of Atlanta, the central committee that is arranging for the great gathering here on May 15 of the four Presbyterian assemblies of the nation is in a mood to believe that the need for entertainment will be oversupplied.

Only 134 commissioners remain, of the 500 which the central committee told Atlanta last Thursday to invite. These remaining commissioners will be assured of entertainment by Monday night or Tuesday morning. It is believed by those in charge of the local arrangements, and by the time the hosts begin to arrive in Atlanta, in advance of the great joint assembly, there will have appeared many more Atlantians willing to open their homes to the esteemed visitors.

Some 1,500 delegates, or commissioners, half of them visitors and half laymen, are expected to attend the four assemblies here, of the Presbyterian church, U. S. A. (northern), the United Presbyterian, the Presbyterian church, U. S. (southern), and the Associated Reform Presbyterian. One thousand of these commissioners will be cared for in the Presbyterian homes of the city, which have been called upon for their fullest capacity of entertainment. The remaining 500 are to be entertained, as has been stated already, in homes of others than Presbyterians. The hotels will be crowded with unofficial visitors attending the assemblies from all parts of the United States.

The assemblies will be in Atlanta from May 15 to May 23, holding their own meetings each day and joining in great mass meetings at the auditorium each night.

Fifty-five Atlanta ladies were present at the luncheon yesterday at noon in the Capital City club, when J. K. Orr was host, and reports were received from the numerous sub-committees that have been canvassing the homes of the city, each sub-committee working within its own denomination. The reports showed a gain for the day of 125, bringing the grand total up to 386. The enthusiasm of the ladies betokened certain and early success.

In order that the end of this work may be definite and early, all who wish to have a commissioner or more than one commissioner as their guest during the week of the assemblies are requested to notify Rev. Jere A. Moore, secretary, Room 513 Empire building, telephone Main 5726.

Following are the grand totals to date, classified by denomination:

Will Head Big Party On Trip Through East

COLONEL J. F. BURKE,
Who will head the Old Guard on their trip over historic tour they made on "Mission of Peace" many years ago.

OLD GATE CITY GUARD WILL GO ONCE MORE ON "MISSION OF PEACE"

F. T. Ridge, Color Corporal E. L. Bergstrom, Color Corporal W. P. Andrews.

Non-commissioned line officers, Sergeant W. E. Hancock, Sergeant Harrison Jones, Sergeant W. O. Wilson, Sergeant F. M. Berry.

Including the above officers, fifty-two members of the organization which includes many of Atlanta's most distinguished citizens, have announced their intention of making the tour. A few ladies, wives and daughters of Old Guard members will also be in the party.

RECEPTION FOR THEM.

The Old Guard will be elaborately entertained in all the cities which it visits, by the most notable organizations in military, civic and social life.

Letters and telegrams are pouring in on Colonel Burke from the historic organizations which welcomed the Old Guard on its mission of peace many years ago, and many features will contribute to make the coming journey memorable.

Indeed, the Fifth Maryland regiment, whose recent visit Atlantians will vividly recall in connection with the unveiling of the peace monument, sent Lieutenant Nunsem to Atlanta to advise with the Old Guard officers with regard to preparations for their reception in Baltimore; while the State Fencibles of Philadelphia sent Captain T. S. Lamard to Atlanta on a similar mission last week.

The ceremonies in which the Old Guard will participate, elaborate along the line, will reach their culmination in Boston. The eastern cities have recollections which not even the passage of nearly a generation has dimmed of the historic tour of 1879, and the citizens and municipalities will join in welcoming the southerners back again.

In the meantime Atlanta is preparing to give the Old Guard a great send-off Monday two weeks hence. They will be escorted to the station by other military organizations and cheered on their way by everybody.

BANDIT WHO DUELLED IS STILL AT LIBERTY

MUSIC FESTIVAL CHORUS WILL REHEARSE MONDAY

Big Chorus Will Sing Before Delegates to Presbyterian Assembly on May 17

Vice President George W. Wilkins, of the Atlanta Music Festival association announces that there will be a rehearsal of the Musical Festival chorus Monday evening at 8 o'clock in Cable Hall. Matters of special interest will be taken up and a full attendance is requested.

Arrangements have been made for the chorus to sing before the delegates of the big Presbyterian convention, and the date for this special concert is set for Saturday night, May 17. This will give the chorus, which is rapidly winning fame, an opportunity to sing before a representative audience gathered from all parts of the United States.

Other concerts, the dates and details of which will be announced later, will be given by the chorus during the summer.

HE REDUCED 57 POUNDS

New Method of Flesh Reduction Proves Astonishingly Successful

Johnstown, Pa., May 3.—Investigation has fully established that Hon. H. T. Stetler, of this city, has reduced his weight fifty-seven pounds in an incredibly short time by wearing a simple, invisible device, weighing less than an ounce. This, when worn as directed, acts as an infallible flesh reducer, dispensing entirely with dieting, medicines and exercises. Many prominent men and women have adopted this easy means of reducing superfluous flesh, and it is stated the inventor, Prof. H. S. Burns, of No. 17 West Thirty-eighth street, New York, is sending these outfits on free trial to all who write him. (Advt.)

JUDGE BRAND SEEKS TO CORRECT MISTAKEN IDEA

He Declares That Erroneous Reports Have Been Spread Concerning "Guilty" Pleas

Judge Charles H. Brand, of the western circuit of the state of Georgia, has prepared a communication setting forth his position for not allowing certain defendants' attorneys to withdraw pleas of guilty that had been entered and for which action he was reversed by the court of appeals.

The writer denies most emphatically the rumor sent abroad that he misled the state's and defendants' attorneys in two of the cases, and that pleas of guilty were entered on the conviction that he would let them off upon the payment of a fine.

The letter which is self-explanatory follows:

"Athens, Ga., May 1, 1913.

"On last Saturday and Monday following I had numbered for trial at chambers under orders of the court previously granted fourteen cases in which attorneys from the counties of Banks, Habersham, Hall, Gwinnett, Clarke, Jackson and Walton were interested. I was informed by some of these attorneys that the impression had gone abroad, not only in this circuit but out of the circuit, that I misled the state's and defendants' attorneys in the Griffin and McCrary cases, and that the pleas of guilty which were entered were so entered on the conviction that I was a party to the agreement to let them off on payment of a fine of $500.

"This is not true and I will not stand for this impression to go unchallenged, but the public don't know that it is not true. No one but the lawyers of the state will ever read the opinion of the court of appeals in these cases or likely have the opportunity of reading it and probably not one in a thousand will ever read the record. I, therefore, propose to submit all the evidence upon this subject and put all the witnesses on the stand and let the people make their own verdict on the evidence and not from hearsay or what 'they say.' One of the most reckless liars on earth is 'they say.' He has lived in all countries for centuries and has been a slanderer since his birth. No good woman is exempt from his villainy and no honest man is immune from his baseness. But, to the facts:

"In the first place there were nine lawyers in one way and another representing the defendants in these cases. Not a single one of them ever approached me upon the subject. Judge Holden in his argument on motion to withdraw the pleas of guilty stated that they had not done so and that they felt it was improper to do so. No one ever contended before me that any of the defendants' attorneys talked to me about what sentence I would impose. So much for the defendants' attorneys.

"While these attorneys took the position that they entered their pleas of guilty under the belief that the court would carry out the agreement between them and the state's counsel, they did not contend before me that I ever made any promise to the state's attorneys or ever expressed or intimated to them my purpose to approve this settlement. They did contend, however, that they were led to this belief by statements which state's counsel and the solicitor general made to them. Neither one of the state's counsel nor the solicitor general claimed before me that I had made any promise to carry out this agreement or that I had expressed any opinion that I would do so, but from the conference had with me they were of the opinion that I would not disapprove the settlement, and they so expressed themselves to defendants' attorneys.

"The question then arises, what occurred between me and them? In order to intelligently decide whether I misled them or not, it is necessary to look to their evidence.

"Mr. Walker in his statement says: 'Defendants' counsel admit that they had no agreement with the judge in person. They received no such assurance from me as I had no intimation from the judge and sought none.'

"Mr. Michael in his affidavit swore: 'Your affiant further states that the presiding judge stated that he would not say whether he would follow the recommendations or not, that he would consider the whole matter, but that he made no promise as to what he would do, that he never intimated to us during said conference, prior, or subsequent to the conference, as to whether or not he would approve the settlement offered and carry out the recommendations.'

"Mr. Green in his affidavit swore: 'The presiding judge did not intimate then or at any other time that he would carry out these recommendations, but stated that he would consider the matter, as he was not then in position to say what he would do, or words to that effect.'

"In the affidavit of Mr. H. C. Tuck, he makes this statement: 'In justice to Judge Brand I will state that he did not expressly state any approval of our plan. He said that he did not propose to commit himself in advance and would decide this question and matters when they were submitted to him regularly in open court.'

"All of these statements appear in the record which is on file in the court of appeals. Judge Pottle, in his opinion in these cases, makes this statement: 'None of the counsel for the accused had any conference with the judge, but counsel for the state informed him of the negotiations and the agreement. All of the counsel for the state agree, and the trial judge so certifies, that he made no promise in reference to the punishment, and expressly declined to commit himself.'

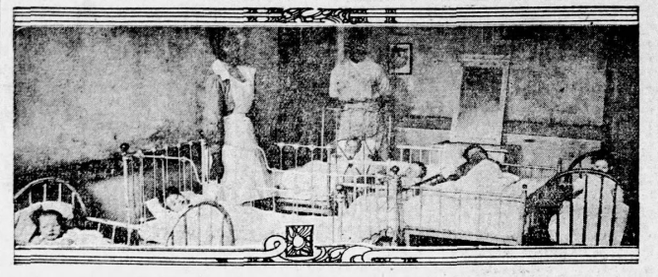

"In a letter to me from Chief Justice Hill this statement is made: 'We made it appear prominently in the opinion that you distinctly stated to counsel for the state that you would not promise or make any agreement as to what the sentence would be in the event of a plea of guilty.'

"In addition to the above statements, in my order overruling the motion to withdraw the pleas of guilty, I made this statement: 'Neither of the defendants have at any time ever consulted with the judge about these cases. The judge has at no time intimated or expressed any opinion to either one of the attorneys for the defendants or the state that he would allow said cases to be settled upon any sort of terms, or that he would concur in any agreement which they might make. In short, no attorney connected with these cases, either for the state or the defendants, and no other human being, knew what sort of sentences would be imposed in these cases until they were pronounced by the judge on the bench.'

"This statement of mine is the truth, and no honest man will dispute it. The only offense charged against me was my refusal to carry out the recommendations of the seventeen lawyers figuring in these cases. For this I have no apology to offer to any man."

Day Nursery at Wesley House

The day nursery at Wesley House, of which the picture shows a corner, is one of the most interesting parts of the settlement home. From 6 o'clock in the morning to 6 in the evening the nursery is open to the children of the mothers who are wage earners in the cotton mill. Pure milk for the babies and wholesome food for the larger children is furnished by the woman's horde of city missions. Personal supervision is made of the children's lessons, play, and physical welfare. The children's clinics, held regularly, make it possible to keep the children under constant medical supervision. Miss Cunningham, from the Methodist Training school in Nashville, is the new day nursery matron.

Threw Soot on Wife's Gown at A Charity Ball

Mrs. Helen Krass, who declares that she was married to Ike Krass in Marienberg, Lapland, the Empire of Russia, 11 years ago, filed suit in the superior court of Fulton county, Ga., on Saturday for divorce.

Mrs. Krass, who separated from her husband on May 2, this year, charges cruel treatment. She says specifically that about four weeks ago she went to a charity ball with her brother and his wife. While she was at the ball, she alleges, her husband came in and threw soot all over her gown and her gloves.

She says that in addition to throwing soot, her husband has treatened to throw vitrol in her eyes.

Mrs. Krass asks alimony as well as divorce, and has secured a temporary injunction tying up her husband's bank account until her suit can be heard. She is represented by attorney Morris Mack.

SHORTER TRUNKS BRING WAIL FROM TRAVELERS

The recent ruling of the interstate commerce commission, effective June 1, barring trunks as baggage provided they are over forty-five inches in length, is bringing quite a wail from the traveling men who are accustomed to carry long sample trunks.

The ruling was made, officials say, so that the use of uniform trunks would allow more room in the baggage cars.

DOG BITES LITTLE GIRL ROMPING ABOUT STREET

While little Alga Peters, ten years old, was playing "tag" with other children in the street near her home at 218 South Pryor street, she was bitten by a dog yesterday morning and is said to be in a serious condition.

Absolutely Painless Dentistry

A View of My Sanitary and Up-to-date Operating Rooms

When coming to my office always be sure you are in the right place.

NO PAIN

The claim of painless dentistry from most dentists would seem absurd, but when promised by Dr. Whitlaw confidence is at once assured. I can refer you to thousands of people who will gladly testify as to the merits of my dental work and PAINLESS METHODS.

Now, I don't claim to be the only dentist in the world who does first-class work. There are lots of good dentists everywhere, but they can't give you what I offer my patrons—

ABSOLUTELY PAINLESS DENTISTRY

It took me fifteen years to discover a safe and sure method of preventing pain in dental operations. My marvelous nitrous oxide positively does away with the torture in every case, no matter how sensitive the teeth may be. Nitrous oxide is not the least bit injurious, and the use of it produces no after-effects of any kind. Look at my prices! I guarantee all my dental work for 20 years in writing.

The Profits of Truck Farming.

Students of agriculture are impressed more and more deeply with the steady profits to be found in truck gardening. The growth of cities has brought an increasing demand and the development of transportation increasing means for this particular field of enterprise. In an engaging book, entitled "Making Farming Pay," Mr. C. C. Bowsfield declares: "There is a continual and expanding market for numerous products that are easily raised, and which by their very diversity are a guaranty against failure."

That is one of the great advantages of truck gardeninng as compared with the growth of large, single crops. The farmer who invests all his time and money and labor in one crop may reap big returns but, on the other hand, some accident or unseasonable turn of nature may completely undo his fortune and leave him with no hope of recovery. The market itself may show an unexpected decline. The supply of his particular product may so exceed the demand as to leave him without a profit.

But if he has anticipated a diversity of demands and has invested his resources in a group of crops, it is certain that in one direction or another, he will succeed. In addition to this, it should be remembered that the truck grower, especially in such a climate as Georgia affords, finds all seasons open and all manner of foodstuffs producable.

As Mr. Bowsfield remarks, the market is seldom, if ever, over-supplied with fruits, broilers, mushrooms, honey, squabs, berries and the like. "There is the keenest sort of demand today all over the country for extra nice butter, eggs and poultry. The need for parsnips, beets, carrots, lettuce, cucumbers, beans and other kinds of vegetables is incessant."

The profits from such farming may not be as bulky as from one great crop, but they are continuous the seasons through and, if they dwindle at one point, they are sure of compensation at another.

It is gratifying to note that the possibilities of truck farming are being more and more widely realized in Georgia. In several counties truck growers' associations have recently been organized, with a view to co-operate efforts in the purchase of supplies and the marketing of products. Some farmers are devoting all their land to this purpose and those who continue to make cotton their chief interest are taking care to plant enough corn and table commodities to supply their own needs. The diversification of crops is steadily gaining in popular favor.

It was comparatively a few years ago that Georgians became seriously interested on the orchard industry, yet today it is one of the great fruit-producing States. The course of truck gardening enterprises will doubtless be equally interesting and profitable and few years hence Georgia may be one of the nation's great export centers for table supplies.

They have ceased to refer to him sarcastically as "Prof." Wilson.

The peach orchards of old Georgia will offer a little side employment to help combat the high cost of living.

A Limit to the Game of War.

It is estimated that the Balkan war has thus far cost its participants five hundred million dollars, and this reckoning takes no account of the vastly greater, though indirect, loss of property and life.

But it is not actual warfare so as much as preparation for possible or imaginary wars that constitutes the heaviest burden upon European nations. The war budgets of Germany, England, France, Austria, Russia and Italy for the current year aggregate one billion, six hundred and sixty-five million dollars, a sum almost sufficient, it is said, to rebuild all the railroads in the United States within eight years.

The governments of the Old World are beginning to realize that at some time or other there must come an end to this tremendous outlay of capital in fields that produce no wealth, but which, on the contrary, divert money from the natural channels of business and constructive enterprise. It is a significant fact that England has recently proposed to Germany a mutual suspension of naval increases for a period of years and that German sentiment is rather favorable toward the suggestion.

A still more important omen is the gathering tide of popular protest against the towering tax levies that must be imposed to maintain and extend great armaments. The millions of people who struggle for bread are realizing that it is their toil and their earnings which are taxed.

Means for checking these vast expenditures have not yet been found, but every indication points to the fact that some means must be found, simply for the reason that the war game is approaching the limit of economic resources.

Generally speaking, oysters are a bit out of date just now.

California's Anti-Jap Bill

THE California bill designed to exclude Japanese settlers from the ownership or the extensive lease of farm lands in that State gives rise to many interesting and delicate questions. Indeed, the issues involved are so numerous and entangled, ranging as they do from the quibbles of factional politics to matters of national interest and international honor, that it is well-nigh impossible to present them as a logical whole. There is reason to suspect that one of the motives of the California agitators is to embarrass, if possible, the Wilson administration; certainly the tactics of Governor Johnson and some of his colleagues among the so-called "Progressives" point in that direction. They are doubtless very pleased over the chance to plant a new problem for the Democratic President, whose energies are now absorbed in making good his party's pledges.

Be that as it may, the larger questions in the California bill bring the power of the individual State and the power and responsibility of the Nation as a whole into sharp conflict. The solons of Sacramento seem to think that the policies of the national government can be directed by the Legislature of California and that the will of a body of local lawmakers can take precedence over national treaties and over the federal Constitution. They seem to ignore the fact that a national treaty imposes national obligations which no single State may legally contravene.

The treaty entered into between the United States and Japan less than two years ago provides in its first article that "The citizens or subjects of each of the High Contracting Parties shall have liberty to enter, trade and reside in the territories of the other, to carry on trade, wholesale and retail; to own or lease and occupy houses, manufactories and shops; to employ agents of their choice; to lease land for residential and commercial purposes and generally to do anything incident to or necessary for trade, upon the same terms as native citiens or subjects, submitting themselves to the laws and regulations there established."

Now, it may be that under the terms of this international agreement certain California interests are jeopardized, though on this point there is a decided difference of opinion. But if there are such grievances, they must be righted through changes in the treaty itself, that is to say through negotiations conducted by the federal government, and not through an irresponsible and unauthorized act by a State legislature. A treaty constitutes supreme law to which every State as well as every citizen must defer; and in running counter to this established principle California ignores a cardinal truth in our system of government.

The South naturally sympathizes with Californians in whatever race problems they may have, but the efforts to draw a parallel between the doctrine of State rights as construed by the South in 1860 and as misconstrued by California today is entirely futile. Professor Joseph T. Derry, of Atlanta, a Confederate veteran and a close student as well as a writer of history, pertinently declares in this connection:

"The most ultra advocate of State rights in the ante-bellum days never claimed that a State could remain in the Union and take any action tending to, embarrass the government of the United States in its dealings with foreign Powers. While they held that paramount sovereignty resided in the State, which had the authority to judge for itself when its rights were invaded and to decide upon the means of redress, even to the extent of withdrawing from the Union, they also held that secession would make a State an independent republic and would release the Union from any obligation to defend it. To remain in the Union placed upon the State the most binding obligation to obey the laws of the Union."

Now that California has raised the question whether a sovereign State has the right to enact legislation in conflict with a national treaty it can only await and abide the decision of the courts; and there seems little doubt as to what the decision will be. How much wiser and better it would have been to have entrusted this problem to the national government and, as little doubt as to what the decision will be. How much delicate litigation which will be likely to bring against the entire United States the resentment of a sensitive and hitherto friendly people!

It should be said that the bill finally passed by the California legislature is distinctly more moderate than the one originally proposed and it reflects appreciably the wise counsel of the President and of Secretary Bryan. The original measure was prohibitive in its terms and employed certain phrases that were odious to the Japanese nation; the bill that passed is permissive in its terms. Instead of declaring that "aliens" ineligible to citizenship" may not enjoy certain property rights, it asserts that "aliens eligible to citizenship may acquire and hold lands to the same extent as citizens." It also permits short term leases and omits certain clauses of the first bill which were regarded as confiscatory in their effect.

Yet, even as the measure now stands it is very doubtful that it conforms to the spirit, even though it may conform to the letter, of the American-Japanese treaty; for, citizenship in the United States is limited, under the Naturalization law of 1870, to "free white persons and persons of African nativity and descent." The Japanese are commonly supposed to be of the Mongolian race, although they contend that they are of Aryan lineage. Under the former interpretation, Japanese would be ineligible to citizenship and hence, according to the California law, would not be permitted to own farm lands, yet, the treaty guarantees them "the same rights and privileges as are or may be granted to native citizens or subjects."

It is thus apparent that the courts will be called upon to determine not only the question of California's right to contravene a national treaty, which is supreme law, but also the question of a Japanese's eligibility to citizenship. Indeed, the precipitate action of the California legislature has opened the way to all manner of embarrassing litigation which might have been avoided, had the national government been left to deal with this delicate issue.

As we have said before, the South naturally sympathizes with Californians in their race problems. The thrift and frugality of the Japanese settlers have enabled them to acquire considerable tracts of land in California; their standards of living being simpler than the American's, they have a certain advantage in amassing property and it is said that their presence renders adjacent property undesirable for whites.

Yet, statistics fail to show that the so-called "yellow peril" is anywhere near as grave as it has been pictured. The Japanese in California are now only thirty-five thousand out of total population of nearly two and a half million; and the census shows that they are steadily decreasing, their number having diminished by some five thousand within the past three years. The fact is Japanese immigration to America has virtually ceased under a tacit agreement entered into between Washington and Tokyo. Japan has no desire to colonize this country; it is vitally interested, however, in planting settlements in Korea and lands adjacent to its own. The Japanese in California now own less than thirteen thousand acres of land, or only about one-tenth of one per cent of the State's agricultural area. Surely, these figures do not indicate that California is in any danger of being mastered or overrun by an alien race.

Waiving all such considerations, however, the important fact is that an individual State cannot rightly or safely pass a law which violates a national treaty and involves the entire Union in far-reaching problems. It is exceedingly unfortunate that California should have taken so radical and uncalled-for a course. She has thus only complicated a question that might otherwise have been quietly and easily adjusted. President Wilson's position in this matter has from the outset been one of prudence and justice; it is to be regretted that his good counsel was not entirely followed.

Taking him all in all, old Bill Bryan isn't such a slouch as a secretary of state.

Now that the Ty Cobb status is settled, there is no reason to fear any further national complication.

"The Unwritten Law"

For his timely and straightforward words concerning "the unwritten law," Judge L. S. Roan, of the Fulton County Superior court, has earned the approval of all right-minded citizens. He recently commended as "brave and intelligent men" a jury that ignored this plea and found the defendant guilty of manslaughter.

As to the merits or demerits of this particular case we have no concern, and do not presume to comment. But there is manifest and urgent need for the courts and juries of this country to take a firm stand against that species of homicide which seeks and too often finds justification in the so-called "unwritten law." Crime is crime on whatever pretext it may be committed. The law, to be sure, leaves a liberal margin of discretion in respect to the penalty that is imposed and the courts naturally give due weight to extenuating circumstances. But no law worthy the name, whether written upon statute books or the conscience of men, ever contemplated that a jury should so disregard the interests of society as to acquit a prisoner who stands clearly convicted and even self-confessed.

The peril of the "unwritten law" lies not so much in the fact that one guilty person escapes as in its tendency to undermine respect for all law and to jeopardize the peace and security of all men. Even though there be extreme cases in which our impulses would incline us to condone certain offenses of this character, we must remember that if the irresponsible spirit of "the unwritten law" is once tolerated it will tend to oversweep justice entirely, and to trample down our civilization which has been so toilsomely reared. If permitted to men who believe they are justified, it will be seized upon by others who know they are wrong. The unwritten law is a moral as well as a legal fallacy. It is deceiving too many juries the country over. It carries the torch of anarchy and the club of savagery. It should not be permitted to sway any jury from the course of justice.

These Washington diplomats will have to join some sort of locker club.

Don't sneer at the college graduate. He might do some sneering of his own a few years later.

Regrade Whitehall.

It is to the interest of all Atlanta as well as that of the South Side that the movement for the regrading of Whitehall street near Trinity avenue be pressed promptly to completion.

This improvement will greatly enhance the value of adjacent property and will open for rapid business development one of the most naturally desirable sections in the entire city. For many months past that portion of Whitehall street and its environs have shown remarkable signs of commercial growth. It only remains to establish a proper grade by filling in the depression at the points mentioned; when this is done the activity already under way will be increased and a new source of Atlanta enterprise will be set free to enrich the whole community.

You can't stop some pessimists. Even now some people complain of the need of rain.

The Balkans seem to have stopped fighting to watch one another.

The Genealogist

EDWARDS.

There has appeared recently in the different periodicals that are interested in genealogy, inquiries of Robert Edwards, of Virginia and New York, asking if he had any descendants.

The lineage of the Edwards family is as follows:

"The family descends from the ancient Welsh kings of Powysland. The first who assumed the name of Edwards (originally written Edwrdes) was Robert, son of ap Thomas ap Llewellyn, and was lineally descended from Einion Llell, lord of Cynllaeth, in Montgomeryshire. He married Ann, daughter and heir of Robert Kyffin, of Cynllaeth, and was succeeded by his son, John, who purchased Ness Strange, Salop.

"The branch of the family that emigrated to Virginia early in the seventeenth century came from near Cardiff, Wales, where there are ruins of an old castle, known as 'Edwards Hall.' It is said that this castle was built in the time of William the Conqueror, by Sir Godefor de Pommeroi, and came into the possession of the Edwards family by subsequent intermarriage of the two families."

Four brothers came to Virginia in the first half of the seventeenth century, and Robert Edwards descends from one of these brothers who had three other sons and several daughters. Robert Edwards was born in 1713, Northumberland county, Va.; died or was lost at sea, 1785-1790. Unmarried.

In 1733 or 1735, Robert Edwards was fined 50 pounds of tobacco for absenting himself from the parish church for thirty days.

Robert Edwards was so indignant at this treatment that he quitted the state and settled on Mahattan island, N. Y. While New York City was still occupied by the British troops in 1782, he was so annoyed by these troops he became discouraged, being in bad health, and leased his real estate on which the lower end of Broadway and adjacent streets and valuable business lots are now located, for ninety-nine years, or twenty years later to revert to his heirs with all improvements, for a small consideration. He then started on a sea voyage from which he never returned. He died unmarried.

After his death an heir appeared upon the scene who claimed to be his son; how this claim ended I have never found out. This I do know, that the descendants of his three brothers tried a few years ago to establish their claim, but failed.

His grandmother was Ann Harrison, daughter of Colonel Benjamin Harrison, the grandfather of Benjamin Harrison, of "Berkeley," a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Robert Edwards had a niece who married John Chancelor, son of John and Jane (Monroe) Chancelor; Jane Monroe was the sister of Andrew and Spence Monroe, and aunt of James Monroe, fifth president of the United States. Miss Bettie Chancelor, Mrs. Fannie Chancelor-Mason and daughters, Misses Elizabeth and Frances Mason, all of College Park, are descendants of this Harrison-Edwards, Monroe-Chancelor family.

One of the loveliest characters I have ever read of or after, is Caroline Griffing Edwards, the daughter of Captain James Edwards and Elizabeth Griffing. She is buried at Rose Hill cemetery, Macon, Ga. They are the descendants of the same Welsh Edwards family from another branch, and ancestors of Mr. Harry Stillwell Edwards, Mrs. Fred J. Allen, of East Point, and Mr. Addison Martin, of College Park.

Captain James Edwards was of the sea, and commanded his own ship. He died in 1807 while absent on a voyage in the West Indies.

(Enclose 25 cents postage in letters of inquiry.)

Very respectfully,
MRS. MINNIE E. HOGAN.
College Park, Ga., April 23, 1913.

The Woman-Tamer

He said, "She shall be my slave!
Lesser in all than I;
Feeble of body and brain.
And dwell until she die
In the golden cake I gave." . . . . . .

And he found a treacherous feature of hate and fear,
With teeth and claws that were ready when he came near!

He said, "She shall be my star!
I will set her high above
This dusty world of mine.
I will bow me down at her shrine,
Pray for the light of her love,
And worship her from afar." . . . . . .

But he found that the light of her love had been withdrawn,
Leaving only a faint chill pity, a faint chill scorn.

He said, "She shall be my friend!
Side by side let us stand,
For I need your help and you,
Comrades true and true,
With my hand in your dear hand
We will see life out to the end." . . . . . .

And she turned and her eyes met his; and I think she cried

FRANTIC FABLES

By Henry Horsecellar

Claude de Clove was a poet, a romanticist—a dreamer. He dreamed all day. He was more awake when he was asleep than he was when he was awake.

He wore his hair Buster Brown fashion.

I don't mean to cast any canned asparagus at Buster Brown, but merely to indicate that he had skinned barbers as zealously as he had skinned creditors for the past ten years.

He was such a good skinner that he always took a blue ribbon at the 8hun show. In fact, he was the original Shunshine kid.

Now it happened that one pellucid morn he awoke betimes, and his poet's fancy was stirred by the sweet lilt of some rare bird that carolled in the cactus outside his window.

A seraphic smile crossed his features as he lay musing and listening to the delicate cadences, the gladsome burgle, the liquid quarter notes, the two-for-a-quarter liquid notes, the throaty symphony that welled from the feathery breast of this little messenger of the morn.

If he could have got a pen without reaching for it he would have penned the following lines:

Sweet bird, singest
Thy gosh dingest.
Don't spike it, I like it.
Sing tra-la to the blithersome morn,
I listen with an ear of corn.
L'ENVOI.
Every day I hope you do so,
The sweetest rooster never Caruso.

Just at that moment when Claude de Clove wasn't penning these lines, the landlady, Mrs. McFigg, entered the room.

"Mr. de Clove," she said, "this bill which has been overdue now for—

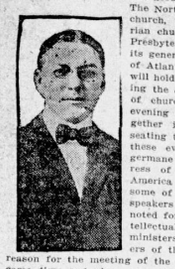

"Dear Mrs. McFigg," spoke the poet, "before we speak of such earthly, trivial things—would you look out of the window and tell me what bird it is that sings so sweetly—"

Mrs. McFigg looked for a minute from the window.

"That," she said tartly, "is my old man carrying dirt to mend the path that was washed out last night. The old sardine is too lazy to grease his wheelbarrow."

Presbyterians in Assemblage

By Frederic J. Haskin

For the first time the three important branches of the great Presbyterian church are holding their annual General assemblies simultaneously in the same place. The Northern Presbyterian church, the Southern Presbyterian church and the United Presbyterian church will open its general assembly in the city of Atlanta, May 15. Each body will hold a separate session during the day for the transaction of church business, but each evening the three will meet together in a great auditorium seating thousands of people. At these evening meetings topics germane to the general progress of the whole church in America will be presented by some of the most distinguished speakers of a denomination noted for the eloquence and intellectual attainments of its ministers. Officially the leaders of the three bodies give no reason for the meeting of the three assemblies at the same time and place, excepting that it was the suggestion of the people of Atlanta who are generously offering free hospitality to all of the 1,500 commissioners who will be in attendance upon the assemblies, as well as contributing generally to the other expenses of the gathering. Unofficially the opinion is freely expressed that this joint meeting will have a strong influence toward bringing about a closer unity between the three bodies, especially since negotiations looking toward the union of the Southern General Assembly and that of the United Presbyterian church already have been under consideration.

Presbyterianism in America has been one of the strongest and most progresive of the religious faiths from colonial times and has had a powerful influence in the development of the nation. The spirit of independence and liberty which is the keynote of the Presbyterian faith, had its beginning at the time of the Reformation and it was most natural that it should promptly find its way to the new world which gave asylum to those who sought relief from the religious persecution of the old country. The first strictly Presbyterian colony in America was established at Salem, Mass., in 1625, and the second was established by Rev. Richard Denton at Watertown in 1630. In New York the Presbyterian doctrine was represented by the Reformed Dutch church established at New Amsterdam in 1628. It was brought over to New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania and Maryland a little later and was established with more difficulty in Virginia because in that colony the Episcopal church was established by the English government.

The Presbyterians claim that their denomination is the oldest form of church government in the world dating back to the time when Moses by divine authority appointed elders to rule with him in the government of Israel. For more than 300 years the government of Israel was altogether Presbyterian in its broadest sense until the elders relinquished their authority by divine permission which they secured by ardent prayers and they were given a king in whom was vested both civil and religious authority. But as Moses by God's command ordained elders in the Wilderness, so did Paul and the other leaders of the Apostolic church in the New Testament. In every place that a few believers were found elders were ordained and the eldership is the only office referred to in both testaments in connection with the establishment and government of the church. Of course, the office of elder or presbyter is common in all Christian churches, but is distinctively the basis of government only in the Presbyterian.

The first Presbyterian church was founded by John Calvin in Geneva about 1541. The constitution and doctrines were adopted with small modification by John Knox in Scotland, a few years later, although the Presbyterian form of worship was not legally recognized in that country until 1592. For nearly a century more there was conflict and struggle in Scotland between Presbyterianism and the Episcopacy until by the Treaty of Union in 1707 it was agreed that the Presbyterian form of church government should be regarded as the national ecclesiastical government in Scotland and the only one which should be supported by law.

In America the progress of Presbyterianism has been comparatively smooth. The Presbyterians who came here had fled from the persecutions of the old world and were the living witnesses of the torture there. The American Presbyterians have been restive under all yokes both ecclesiastical and political. The Revolutionary war itself was accredited in England largely to Presbyterian influence, as was demonstrated by Walpole's witty speech in the British parliament in which he said: "Cousin America has run off with a Presbyterian parson." Thirteen months before the signing of the Declaration of Independence the Presbyterians of Mecklenburg, N. C., had drawn up and signed a declaration of independence from England and established a system of local government. The Scotch Irish Presbyterians of Maryland declared for independence in May of 1776.

The historian Bancroft credits the American form of government to "Plagiarized Presbyterianism." It is a government of the people through representatives chosen by the people and the only clergyman signing the Declaration of Independence was the Rev. John Witherspoon, of the Philadelphia assembly. It was a Presbyterian clergyman in New Jersey who, when the American forces were running short of wadding for their guns, went into his church and collected the hymn books. He tore out the printed pages with his own hands and gave the paper to the gunners. His oft-repeated order, "Give the Redcoats Watts, boys; give them Watts," became the slogan which saved the day for the patriots.

The Presbyterians believe that there is no order in the church, as established by Christ and his apostles, superior to that of the presbyter or elder, and therefore, church government in presbyteries or associations of ministers and elders possessed of equal powers without any superiority among them. They believe that the authority of their ministers is derived from the Holy Ghost by the imposition of the hands of the presbytery, and they oppose the independent scheme of the common rights of Christians by the same arguments as are used by the Episcopalians. They affirm that all ministers, being ambassadors of Christ, are equal and oppose the office of bishop. The moderator or presiding officer is either the senior minister or is elected by vote.

JUST SMILES

He came down the garden path, a sad, sorrowful figure. She watched him with anxious eyes.

"How did father take it?" she asked.

"He took it all right," replied the young man.

"Oh, I am so glad, George!" she cried.

"Are you?" he replied, flopping forlornly by her side. "Well, I can't say that I am, dear. At first your father wouldn't listen to me."

"Why didn't you tell him that you had $2,000 in the bank, as I told you to?" she exclaimed.

"I did, after all else had failed," answered George, dejectedly.

"And what did he do then?"

"Do!" echoed the young man, passing his hands wearily through his hair. "He borrowed it!"

A Buffalo preacher tells a story of a woman who after hearing him preach, informed a friend that she did not like the services at all. The seat was hard, she said, the singing was not good and the preaching was poor. Her little girl, who overheard her remarks and who was present with her at church, said:

"But, mamma, what can you expect for a penny?"

20,000 CHILDREN ENJOY EGG HUNT AT GRANT PARK

In the Twinkle of an Eye Acres of Eggs Vanished Before the Rush of Little Ones

At 2:40 Saturday afternoon, just twenty minutes before the brass band was to give the signal for the start of The Journal's annual Easter egg hunt at Grant Park, Chairman W. C. Puckett, of the hunt committee, looked down the line of children surging some ten or twelve deep along Constitution drive, rubbed his thumb across the crystal of his watch, and remarked in a tone of profound anxiety that he hoped to goodness they wouldn't break over the boundary.

He had seen them break on that very ground one year ago, and he knew how hard it was to stop them.

Five minutes later, in another corner of the sixty-acre tract set apart for the hunt, Chairman Puckett, together with other members of the committee, with policemen and with members of the band themselves, were running back and forth in front of a galloping herd of youngsters, waving their arms, yelling at the top of their voices, ordering the youngsters back.

They might as well have addressed themselves to the inhabitants of Mars.

COULDN'T BE STOPPED.

Chairman Puckett's bunch had come true—and then some. The children had broken over the boundary. Only this time they broke in half a dozen places. And this time they were not stopped.

A line of breastworks might have stopped them, with rapid-fire guns, belching death into the oncoming army. But it is doubtful.

Mounted policemen rode up and down the boundary, making all the noise in their lungs, and they couldn't stop them. They couldn't even make the children hesitate. The children parted ranks to get past the horses, and swept on.

It wasn't as happened at a hunt two or three years ago, a note accidentally sounded by a member of the band, tuning up his instrument, that gave the children an excuse to start.

The members of the band hadn't all arrived. The instruments were hardly out of their cases. The director hadn't even set up his music rack.

THEY WOULDN'T WAIT.

The children simply took a sudden, simultaneous notion that they wouldn't wait for the signal.

They saw the eggs sown thick on the ground. They knew everything was in readiness. They realized it couldn't be long until 3 o'clock. Accordingly they "went to it."

And it was all right, of course. A few minutes didn't make any difference. Practically all the children had arrived —hundreds of them an hour before. Not one of them got hurt. Nearly every one of them got a handful of eggs.

THE GOLDEN EGG.

The man with the golden egg, which is always hidden at the last minute, liked to have got "his business in a jam," as Old Reliable would say, but when it was all over he realized that the rush was fortunate, after all, so far as the golden egg was concerned.

For it resulted in a real child, not a half-grown youth, finding this egg, whereas, it had sometimes occurred in the past that the golden egg was taken home by a youngtser well along in his teens.

The man with the golden egg was near the middle of the tract. He saw what was coming and ran to join in trying to fight back the rush. But only for a few seconds. Then he turned and ran as hard as he could ahead of the children, and about middleway of the tract he dropped the golden egg and stepped off a few paces to intercept the kid who found it.

FOUND BY A BOY.

Here came a boy with flushed, eager face, running low to the ground, grabbing up eggs and dropping them into a flour sack so fast that even the golden egg didn't stop him. He chucked it in with the other eggs, was running on, and the man caught him and led him away to be photographer for the papers.

His name is Charlie Rice, aged eleven years, residence 266 South avenue. He is an orphan boy and lives with his uncle, D. E. Rice. His gentlemanly manners, and his joy over his luck made friends of all the grownups who crowded around him.

IT WAS SOME HUNT.

Yes, sir, it was some hunt. There must have been 20,000 children, not to mention the great number of parents and nurses. They covered the whole face of the earth as far as the eye could see in every direction. When they broke over the lines and galloped through the park they made a sound like the roar of a storm, just as they always do; and though one may have seen half a dozen hunts, it is a sight that always thrills him and makes his hair bristle.

One minute the ground over sixty acres was so thickly sown with eggs that they looked as thick as blossoms in a field of clover. The next moment and they were gone, lifted up as if by magic and deposited in paper bags and boys' caps and little girls' skirts.

Then presently they all swarmed to the bandstand near the lake, where the prize eggs were taken up and written orders given to the lucky finders, which orders they will take to the merchants and exchange for their prizes.

Then the prize egg children were taken in hand by the motion picture man and the photographers, who took them down by the lake and put them through all kinds of grins and poses.

THE AFTERMATH.

And while this was happening, the hunt committee, in the band stand, were terrifically busy handing out two barrels of eggs to the little fellows who failed to get any in the rush.

And after that the committee adjourned to the concrete pavilion for a two-hour task of sorting out the lost children and delivering them to the proper parties.

It was a great big success, in which the park board, the hunt committee and all the people who donated to the fund are entitled to a share of credit.

NEW POLICE SERGEANT TO GET A COMMISSION SOON

Interest in police circles is warm upon the question of a successor to the vacancy left by the death of Sergeanat K. S. Foster last week. There are several eligibles for the place, and among them the board of police commissioners will make its selection soon. The name tion a year ago, is mentioned as that of W. C. Hardy, patrolman, who secured highest average in the examination of the strongest of several probabilities.

CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

Sweetens their stomachs and cleans the liver and waste-clogged bowels.

Every mother immediately realizes after giving her child delicious Syrup of Figs that this is the ideal laxative and physic for the children. Nothing else regulates the little one's stomach, liver and 30 feet of tender bowels so promptly, besides they dearly love its delightful fig taste.

If your child isn't feeling well; resting nicely; eating regularly and acting naturally it is a sure sign that its little insides needs a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or your little one has stomachache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, tongue coated; give a teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs and in a few hours all the foul, constipated, clogged up waste, undigested food and sour bile will gently move on and out of its little bowels without nausea, griping or weakness, and you will surely have a well, happy and smiling child again shortly.

With Syrup of Figs you are not drugging your children, being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics, it cannot be harmful.

Mothers should always keep Syrup of Figs handy. It is the only stomach, liver and bowel cleanser and regulator needed—a little given today will save a sick child tomorrow.

Full directions for children of all ages and grown-ups plainly printed on the package.

Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. This is the delicious tasting, genuine old reliable. Refuse anything else offered.

You Can Lower Your Town's Death-Rate

YOU men in charge of municipal affairs have a big responsibility on your hands.

Ever consider that maybe your hold-back, out-of-date and short-sighted policy is keeping the death-rate higher than it ought to be?

Fevers, contagion, death, with their piteous aftermath of poverty and distress may be traceable to your negligence.

Solemn, but true.

Why let your town lack the sanitation, the comforts, the improvements that will drive out disease and make it, at the same time an attractive, happy place to live?

We can provide the Improvements. We are Municipal Engineers, and we have put more than 300 towns in good sanitary shape. We should like an opportunity to tell you where these towns are and what we did for them.

We plan, estimate, finance, construct and, if desired, operate Sanitary Systems, Water and Power Plants, Paving and other municipal improvements. Write to us at once.

NEGRO KILLS ANOTHER ON A DOWNTOWN CORNER

Unknown Cuts Unknown's Throat—Third Negro May Die From Loss of Blood

An unknown negro was stabbed to death last night at the corner of Decatur and Pryor streets. Forest Hand, another negro, was cut upon the left wrist and probably will die because no one thought to bind his arm. The knife cut opened an artery.

The unknown negro was killed in a crowd, but his slayer has not been identified, although Elijah Kippe, another negro, is under arrest. The dead man's throat was cut by the sweep of a sharp knife. He and the man who killed him are thought to have quarreled over a woman.

HOW EMBARRASSING Nothing is more embarrassing than to be constantly throwing off gas.

Tutt's Pills will stop it and at the same time make your breath sweet and your skin clear. At your druggist—sugar coated or plain.

NEW YORK LEGISLATURE ADJOURNS SINE DIE

ALBANY, N. Y., May 3.—The legislature of 1913 adjourned sine die tonight, officially the session ended at 1 p. m., but so much legislation remained to be disposed of that it was well toward midnight before the work was finished.

During the session 4,072 bills were introduced, establishing a record. Of these the governor has approved 442, has had recalled seventy-four and has vetoed fifteen. More than 700 measures remain to be disposed of by the governor during the next thirty days.

BAPTISTS OF OAKLAND CITY OBSERVE FOURTH ANNIVERSARY

OAKLAND CITY BAPTIST CHURCH.
Whose fourth anniversady was cele brated Friday with songs and a dinner.

A delightful event of the week was the anniversary dinner enjoyed by the Oakland City Baptist church and its friends Friday night.

After a brief but interesting program, which consisted of songs by the Junior B. Y. P. U. and the Baraca and Philathea classes, Miss Lucile Withers gave a recitation. Miss Rebie Upchurch, in charming voice, sang "An Irish Love Song." Pastor Ward briefly explained the object of the gathering, after which every one was served with a two-course dinner.

Oakland City Baptist church was organized May 2, 1909, and while there are not quite 200 in its membership, it has a beautiful, substantial brick building with only a small debt, which probably will be paid this year. Dr. J. C. Ward is the first pastor of Oakland City church, and is not only doing a splendid work, but is greatly beloved by his people. A. P. Morgan is the church treasurer; L. N. Ragsdale, chairman of the finance committee; Dr. S. T. Whitaker, chairman of the board of deacons; Guy Bonner, clerk, and Edwin M. Gordon, superintendent of the Bible school.

Big Sunday School Meet in Auditorium This Morning

Second Baptist and First Christian Sunday Schools to Gather There in Joint Meeting, With Over 6,000 Pupils—Occasion Unprecedented and Chorus the Biggest That South Ever Has Known

This morning Atlanta will have the opportunity of seeing something which marks a new epoch in her Sunday school affairs. At 10:30 o'clock there will assemble upon the capitol grounds, at the Washington street side of the statehouse, over 6,000 Sunday school pupils, comprising practically all of the enrollment of the Second Baptist Bible school and of the school of the First Christian church.

There will be enough of them to form a couple of brigades, upon the basis of United States army strength.

They will be a formidable cohort in the eyes of old Nick if he happens to be snooping around the neighborhood and steals a glimpse of them.

Never before has Atlanta seen anything like this.

From the capitol the two schools will march over the Washington street viaduct to the auditorium. There the entire lower floor has been reserved for them. The public will be admitted to the upper balcony.

And at the auditorium a simple program, lasting but an hour, will be carried out, a program of speeches and songs and organ solos.

The whole assemblage will sing those songs in chorus. That will be the biggest chorus that the south has heard.

From the moment when the two schools assemble on the capitol grounds until they enter the auditorium, they will be photographed constantly by moving picture men and the newspaper photographers.

"Everything is in fine shape, and everybody is expecting a great time," said Rev. Dr. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist church, last night.

"All indications point to a tremendous day," said Rev. Dr. L. O. Bricker, pastor of the First Christian church.

C. V. LeCraw, superintendent of the First Christian school, and John S. Spalding, superintendent of the Second Baptist, were similarly enthused by the outlook.

Everybody expected this morning's joint meeting of the two schools to prove the greatest occasion in local Sunday school history. Dr. Percy Starnes, the auditorium organist, will be at the keyboard of the mammoth instrument. The two pastors will be the principal speakers.

This meeting is an incident in the contest now about to close, in which the two Bible schools have been engaged for almost three months. In that contest they have been vying with each other, in the most cordial spirit of rivalry, for their mutual development and the good of the community, by a system of scoring points for new scholars and for promptness in attendance. It is anticipated now that the present contest (of which the prize is a picnic from Chattanooga to winner) will not have ended before another will have been agreed between the same two schools to see which can retain more effectually the ground that the present enthusiasm has helped them both to gain.

BAKER'S WIFE FORLORN; HIS HELPER THE CAUSE

Declaring that her husband refused to live with her when she objected to his employing a certain young woman as his assistant in his bakery, Mrs. Gracie Shurr has filed suit in the superior court for divorce from Eugene Shurr.

Mrs. Shurr declares that she has lost fifteen pounds of weight as the result of her husband's cruel treatment of her since she objected to the presence in the store, where she formerly assisted her husband, of the young woman. She says that her husband makes between $250 and $300 per month, and asks alimony. In addition she wants her maiden name, Grace Mallory, restored.

FRATERNITIES WIN IN APPEAL BEFORE COURT

Chancery Court Declares Act Abolishing Them in Mississippi University Illegal

The act of the Mississippi legislature of 1912, abolishing and prohibiting Greek letter fraternities at the University of Mississippi and other institutions maintained by the state, has been declared unconstitutional by the chancery court of Lafayette county (Oxford).

The act of the Mississippi legislature was the most stringent legislation against fraternities ever enacted, and the fact that it has been declared unconstitutional is a decided victory for the fraternities in the fight which is being made against them, and is expected to have the effect not only in Mississippi, but in other states where anti-fraternity legislation is being considered.

Hamilton Douglas, Atlanta lawyer, was one of the leading counsel in the case, and he has just returned from Oxford, where the case was decided Friday. Mr. Douglas is the head of the Sigma Chi fraternity, which has a chapter at the University of Mississippi.

The anti-fraternity law was tested by J. P. Waugh, a Kappa Sigma. Mr. Waugh, a married man, over twenty-one years of age, and a Mississippi property holder, wanted to enter the state university, and was confronted with a pledge to sign requiring him to promise not to pay dues of any sort to his fraternity, not to take its publication or to continue as an active member in any way.

Kappa Sigma has no chapter at the University of Mississippi. Waugh having joined at another institution. He refused to sign the pledge and carried his case to the courts. Hon. A. F. Fox, Hamilton Douglas, T. C. Kimbrough, J. R. McDonald and W. G. Cavedd represented him.

He secured an injunction restraining the chancellor, A. A. Kincannon, the trustees and other officials of the college from requiring him to sign the pledge before entering the university, and attacked in his bill the constitutionality of the law.

The case was heard before Judge T. L. Lamb, of the chancery court, and after a trial lasting several days, the jurist made the injunction perpetual and declared the law void.

Sigma Chi, S. A. E., K. A., Delta Tau Delta and Phi Kappa Psi had chapters at the institution when the law was passed, and they were specially named in the bill, which directed that the board of trustees of the institution purchase all of the property owned by the fraternities with a special state fund set aside for the purpose.

The counsel who appeared in the case to represent Waugh were all fraternity men, acting for fraternities rather than for the individual who made the test, and are very much gratified by winning in the chancery court, as they had expected that they would probably have to appeal to the federal courts.

AMERICAN REPORTED DEAD IS ALIVE YET

(By Associated Press.)

MEXICO CITY, May 3.—Rebels did not kill William B. A. Dingwall, an American citizen at Matehuala, in San Luis Potosi, as reported on April 29.

Mr. Dingwall, who is owner of a foundry and director of the Santa Maria de la Paz Mining company, was not even injured during the fighting.

Ad Men to Revel and Feast At the Denechaud Tuesday

"Gigantic Jag of Joy" Is Heralded by Bill-Poster Invitations Printed in Red Ink With Box-Car Type

There's going to be some feasting and revelry, around at the Cafe Denechaud (Bill Parkhurst's) Tuesday night when the Ad Men of Atlanta gather there for one "gigantic jag of joy."—take it from the bill-poster invitations!

Not only are the invitations that in size, but they are that in looks. Big box car letters plus red ink help to make the looks. "Regular three-ring circus and variety show," they proclaim. The hour is 7 o'clock p. m. The price is set down in the invitation, and everybody is expected to have it in his jeans, too. "If you don't have a good time it will be your own fault," raves the invitation. "The cafe will be closed to the general public for the evening." The dinner, the smoker and cabaret vaudeville, and the "get-together" meeting, all will be included in the price of the feed.

The invitations already are circulating through the mails, and the Ad Men are making their plans for Tuesday night. Howard Geldert, secretary of the club, expects that the capacity of the Cafe Denechaud will be strained. Bill Pankhurst, formerly president of the club, says that will be all right so long as he is not called upon to treat the capacity of the diners likewise for the agreed price of the dinner. Fred Houser says everybody is happy, byond a doubt, and T. H. Brannen adds "absolutely." There remains nothing excepting that Monsieur Denechaud put the kettle on and that Paul Reese hatch up a practical joke to play on some one.

"This stunt is going to beat that griddle-cake club in Washington all hollow," promises Mr. Pankhurst.

If it doesn't, the Ad Men (to a man) will ask for their money back.

NUTMEG STATE SENDS MEMORIAL TO CONGRESS

(By Associated Press.)

HARTFORD, Conn., May 3.—The resolution passed by the general assembly, memorializing congress to propose an amendment to the constitution to provide for election of the president and vice president of the United States by direct vote of the people, having been signed by Governor Baldwin and sealed by the secretary of state, was forwarded today to Vice President Marshall.

WM. VEAL KILLS EVANS IN DUEL NEAR DUBLIN

Former Alleges That the Latter Was Advancing With Knife

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DUBLIN, Ga., May 3.—William Veal shot and killed a man named Evans on his farm, several miles below Dublin this morning. It is alleged that Evans was advancing on Veal with a knife, threatening to kill him, when Veal drew his pistol and shot Evans through the head, killing him instantly.

Evans was a tenant on Veal's place, and the trouble grew out of a dispute about some work on the farm.

RHODE ISLAND CELEBRATES INDEPENDENCE

(By Associated Press.)

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 3.—Rhode Island, which renounced its allegiance to the mother land two months before the other colonies "threw off the yoke," celebrated its own independence day with patriotic exercises throughout the state today. The program was moved up a day, as the anniversary falls on a Sunday.

Spring-Tired, Spring-Sick,

Spring-Weak, Spring-Miserable, is a prevalent condition at this season, caused by impure blood. Thousands are "off their feed," have poor appetite, bad digestion, dull headaches, heavy feet, tire easily, think slowly, and work poorly. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the ideal remedy. It purifies and vitalizes the blood, overcomes that tired feeling, sharpens the appetite, aids digestion, and makes life worth living. Buy a bottle and begin to take it today. Accept no substitute.

The Manchester Spirit

Cities, like persons, have distinctive personalities. In each case they are composite, reflecting the dominant characteristics of their leading citizens. Manchester is a city in which enterprise, optimism and public spirit are the predominant characteristics. There is an abiding faith, a healthy self-confidence, which does things—which insures an even more brilliant future.

Some of the best people of Georgia have been attracted here by the exceptional opportunities. It is an important step for any man of family to pull up from ties of long standing, and move to a new place. This very courage and enterprise of its citizens accounts in large measure for Manchester's growth.

Some church has been in process of building each year of the city's existence. Its $10,000 Public school building is one of the handsomest in the state.

The spirit of unity, co-operation and brotherly love is brought into action in every instance where the city's welfare is involved. Instance, the unanimous vote for a municipal electrical plant, the predominance of the best element in the control of the city government.

Manchester embodies all that is desirable to the ambitious, upright American citizen. Ideal health and home conditions, superb opportunities for the bread-winner, and exceedingly congenial environment. Write for information today: Address:

ELECTRIC CONTRACTORS MUST GIVE CITY A BOND

Such Is the Provision of Ordinance to Be Introduced in Council Monday

An ordinance requiring the electrical contractors of Atlanta to make bond of $1,500 with the city was submitted to the board of electrical control yesterday by City Electrician R. C. Turner and was indorsed by the board.

The purpose of the bond is to insure the contractors' compliance with the city ordinances and regulations governing electrical installations.

A number of contractors appeared before the board to discuss the ordinance. Their general opinion was favorable, as they thought the ordinance would not work a hardship on them and would benefit the public. The board will report the ordinance to council Monday with a recommendation that it be passed.

The board also indorsed the city electrician's request for an additional assistant, beginning June 1, and his request for an automobile.

Mr. Turner made a showing which convinced the board that both are necessary, owing to the large increase in the number of electrical installations.

Since January 1, there have been no less than 1,096, which is considerably above last year's figures for the same period, and not as large in proportion as the number will be during the heavy building season soon to come.

Mr. Turner attributes the increase to the reduced electric light and power rates put into effect on January 1 by the eGorgia Railway and Power company.

Deaths and Funerals

MR. J. L. KINARD.

Mr. J. L. Kinard, of Moultrie, Ga., father of Dr. J. O. Kinard, of Atlanta, died yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the Tabernacle infirmary. Mr. Kinard was 68 years of age, and, in addition to Dr. Kinard, is survived by one son, three daughters, and his wife. His remains will be taken to Moultrie for funeral and interment.

MR. T. J. WOOD.

Mr. J. T. Wood, age 79 years, a Confederate veteran and a member of Camp W. H. T. Walker No. 925, died yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at his residence, 37 West Fair street. He is survived by his wife; four sons, J. L., T. R. C., and T. J. Wood, and two daughters, Mrs. J. P. Hall and Mrs. Dora Small. Funeral services will be held Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock at the residence. Interment will be at Atlanta Park cemetery.

ROBERT ALLEN.

The funeral of Robert Allen, the 9-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Allen, will be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the chapel of P. J. Bloomfield & Company. The interment will be at Atlanta Park cemetery.

CANADA AND U. S. HAVE SET EXAMPLE FOR WORLD

John Lewis, Editor of Toronto Star, Addresses Fourth American Peace Congress

ST. LOUIS, May 3.—"Canada and the United States have set the world the example of a new kind of international relation," said John Lewis, editor of the Toronto Star, at the fourth American peace congress here today. Mr. Lewis spoke on "The Identity of the Interests of the United States and Canada."

"The modern peace movement is not visionary or sentimental, neither is it wholly based upon business interests," said Mr. Lewis. "It is simply a part of the progress of civilization. It advances with the growing recognition that the true interests of nations are not conflicting, but identical. The more usefully governments and nations are employed, the less they have to fight about.

"The growing interest of governments in social reform is one of the forces making for peace. The international gatherings of scientists and others having common interests are the beginnings of the parliament of man. The scientist who is seeking a cure for tuberculosis in Germany can have no rational cause of quarrel with the man who is seeking a cure for tuberculosis in France. In Canada or in the United States, we men and governments are busy in fighting disease, dirt, insect pests and weeds in the physical world—crime and ignorance and injustic in the moral world. The more society concerns itself with these things, the less the danger of war. In these conflicts also will be found the true outlet for human energy and human combativeness. The militants are right when they say that action and conflict are necessary for the full development of human character, but they are after the wrong enemies.

"Man has no natural enmity with man. His worst enemy is within itself, and just so the worst enemies of a state are within the state. The broad conception of patriotism is public service as contrasted with selfishness, and there is no reason why public service should stop at a national boundary, or why there should not be a patriotic citizen of the world.

"Canada and the United States have set the world the example of a new kind of international relation. Disputes far more serious than those that have led to war elsewhere have been settled by arbitration. But we must not be satisfied with a mere negative advantage, freedom from war and from the apprehension of war. We must make full use of our exceptional advantages. We must look, not backward to the year 1813, but forward to 2013.

"The three stages of development may be thus indicated—in 1813, war, in 1913, peace, in 2013, friendship and active cooperation in social reform, inspired by all the courage and energy which were once devoted to war. Our anniversary celebration should be not merely peace, but of civilization, the principles of industry and science. Our anniversary sculptors and painters shall show how nations, not resting, but fighting side by side against the common enemy of mankind."

STOCK COMPANY AT THE ATLANTA HAS MANY VERY POPULAR MEMBERS

The establishment of a summer stock company at the Atlanta has been accomplished according to Manager Homer George, who says that yesterday settled all doubt when every seat on the orchestra floor and many in the balcony were sold while the attendance at other performances of the week proved satisfactory.

Within a short time the name of Miss Billy Long will become a household word in every family of Atlanta. Probably never has an actress given better signs of popularity than has she. Her personality is immense and she has already won thousands of hearts. As the season progresses she will win many more.

This week the company will be seen in a play never given in stock before, "The Girl From Out Yonder," which is a clever comedy. Following it will be a laughing, roaring farce, "Are You a Mason?" which has always proven a favorite when played by stock organizations. After that other new plays will be given regularly and the season is bound to prove delightful for those who want entertainment during the hot season.

While the popularity of Miss Long is being attested in many ways other members of the company are winning hundreds of friends. No leading man of an Atlanta company has made a more favorable impression than has Edwin Vail. He is real actor and he is showing his ability in a most certain way. His performances last week in "A Butterfly on the Wheel," were especially notable and worth while. He has a fine part this week.

Miss Mable Inslee, the ingenue of the company, has won a warm place in the hearts of the playgoers. She has a most delightful manner and is very fetching. Allen Robinson and other members of the organization have also shown their worth and hundreds are going away from the theater regularly, declaring this the best stock company ever in Atlanta.

Within a few days other members will be added to the company, including a local society girl, whose debut will prove a sensation. All of which augurs well for the season as a whole.

O. G. CLARK SALES-MANAGER T. B. LUMPKIN COMPANY

O. G. CLARK.

MR. O. G. CLARK has associated himself with the T. B. LUMPKIN REALTY COMPANY as SALES MANAGER, and will in future be found at their office, 14-A AUBURN AVENUE.

MR. CLARK was for a long time one of the most successful insurance salesmen in Georgia, and has made a wide reputation as an auctioneer. He is a man of untiring energy and determination, and is known for his fairness and squareness in his business dealings, and will therefore be an additional strength to the office of the T. B. LUMPKIN REALTY COMPANY, and will undoubtedly meet with a great deal of success.

DR. W. H. HOEY IS DEAD; HIS END CAME SUDDENLY

North Boulevard Citizen Was Downtown Yesterday—Died at 10 o'Clock P. M.

Dr. W. Hoey, forty-four years old, manager of a local medicine company, died at his home, 720 North Boulevard, shortly after 10 o'clock last night, following a brief illness. During the day he had been downtown as usual, but returned home about 5 o'clock and stated that he was not feeling very well. Some hours later he became acutely ill, and before another physician could arrive he was dead. He had been in poor health for about a month.

Surviving Dr. Hoey are his widow and four children, as follows: W. Herbert Hoey, Jr., a student; Meredith, Perry and Laura Belle Hoey. Also one brother and four sisters survive him.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

EPISCOPALIAN WOMEN GATHER AT SEWANEE

Twentieth Anniversary of Bishop Gailor Will Be Observed

SEWANEE, Tenn., May 3.—Beginning Monday at Sewanee, and lasting the greater part of the week, the twenty-sixth annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary to the board of missions of the Episcopal church in the diocese of Tennessee will take place, and commencing Tuesday, the diocesan convention of the Episcopal church will also meet here.

It has always been the custom for the diocesan convention and the annual meeting of the woman's auxiliary in the state to meet at the same place.

First, the celebration of Bishop Gailor's twentieth anniversary in the American Episcopate will be participated in by clergy, students and ladies, and then there will likely be much discussion, and a great deal of talk, concerning the proposed election of an assistant to the Right Rev. Thomas F. Gailor, bishop of the diocese.

There will also be other elections to occasion interest to the delegates and to the church in the state. For other elections are to be held at this convention. The delegates to the general convention of the church will be selected—a most important matter; then the board of trustees for the University of the South has to be elected; still further, the standing committee of the diocese, the treasurer of the diocese and trustees for the various charitable organizations in the diocese are up for election this year.

By far the most important and, of course, the most interesting, is the proposed election of Bishop Gailor's assistant. For some time it has been plainly seen that the state is too large and the parishes too scattered for one man to have charge of, not to mention the enormous amount of work involved. So the selection of an assistant is the only solution of the difficulty. This can be done either by the election of a bishop coadjutor, or a suffragan bishop. A suffragan would be more in the nature of an assistant; he would be under the diocesan bishop, and his office as active bishop would cease upon the death of the present incumbent. A bishop coadjutor would have charge of a distinct portion of territory; would have equal rights as bishop; and on the death of the present bishop succeed to the office. As it does not seem feasible to divide this state properly, as has been done in other states, the election at this convention will doubtless be only of a suffragan.

The celebration of the bishop's twentieth anniversary will be marked by a special service, a reception by Bishop and Mrs. Gailor, and a large dinner given to the bishop by the clergy of the diocese. It is rumored that the Rev. H. J. Mikell, of Nashville, will preside at the dinner, and addresses will be made by Bishop C. K. Nelson, of the diocese of Atlanta, and Bishop E. G. Weed, of the diocese of Florida.

SHADES OF NEGRO WOMEN VOTING KILLS FLORIDA SUFFRAGE MOVE

Harry Floyd's Dilemma Over Negro Question Settled the Question of Votes for Women With Lower Branch of Florida Legislature

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 3.—No event of less community interest than high school commencement or memorial day oration could have drawn the attendance that the suffragette question in the house did Friday morning, when the resolution proposing the ballot for women as offered by Mr. Bussey was taken up as the special order.

If members of the house had not already made up their minds on the question, they lost no time in forming negative opinions after Representative Harry Floyd, of Franklin, read a letter which he had received from a negro woman, thanking him for his interest in "Votes for Womnuns" and assuring him of the appreciation of the 3,000 and some odd negro women of Jacksonville.

Although Mr. Floyd voted to submit the question to the people, he declared that he did not know on which side to stand. The letter from a prospective black suffragette, however, settled the question for once and all with many of Mr. Floyd's colleagues and to this is attributed the real cause of the amendment's defeat.

Long before the hour for the special order the galleries began to fill with handsomely gowned women and pinkly perfect girls, and as the time approached—the hour of fate, according to John J. Ingalls,—the area back of the rail, which is termed the gallery by courtesy only, was filled and the house attendants began placing chairs in the aisles and vacant spaces about the speaker's stand until the supply of chairs was exhausted, and then the aisles became the standee, and when the debate began every door was choke-full, and there appeared tier upon tier of faces until the doorfacings at the top were reached, and every opening was packed with a plumosa-framed series and succession of feminine beauty. All around the walls of the chamber there were people, and it is doubtful if that historic room ever witnessed a more tense moment than the moment when Harry Golasteih moved that the special order be followed and the house go into the consideration of the resolution.

Excitement paling his bald head, even dry of throat and nervous of manner, the Honorable H. Clay Stanford addressed the chair. "I had hoped," he opened, "that the time would never come in the state of Florida when this question would come before this body. On behalf of the people I represent and in my own behalf, I wish to express my unalterable opposition to the submission, even, of this proposition to the people."

Mr. Stanford delivered an impassioned speech during which he paced the aisle from his seat against the wall to the speaker's stand. He said he wanted the women of the south to remain in that realm of reverence which had been made for her by the men of the south. he desired that the woman of fifty years ago be the standard by which the women of the day should be measured and strive to achieve.

Mr. Henry objected to the line of argument which Mr. Stanford was following, contending that he was not speaking to the question. Henry said that the merits of woman's suffrage should not be gone into, for the reason that it was on the referendum of the matter to the people that was before the house and not the merits of the question, because they were involved and he did not yield the privilege of doing so to any man on the floor. He charged that the movement to secure the vote for women came from the north, and that the women of the south didn't want it. The injection of this idea, he said, was poisonous, and the members should see to it that the matter was summarily disposed of.

CONTRARY TO TRADITIONS.

L. C. O'Neal, of Hernando, next secured the floor, asserting that the matter was contrary to tradition, history manners, modesty and best thought of the country. He referred to the chivalric regard in which woman had ever been held in the south, and he would not change that condition, and he believed that if women were granted the ballot that they would be lowered from the exalted position which they now hold.

*Mr. Bussey, who introduced the res*olution, explained his attitude. He said that the Federation of Women's Clubs had met at West Palm Beach last winter, and he had promised to introduce the resolution, at the request of the federation. He would vote for it to be submitted to the people, but he would vote against it at the polls. He was aware that the granting of suffrage to women was in time with the progressive movement. Several years ago, Mr. Bussey said, when the Populist party was organized, there were may who regarded that movement as radical in the extreme; his father was a Populist, and he, too, was a Populist in those days because of the teachings he had received—yet, he continued, today there were many of the principles that the Populist stood for that had been enacted into law in many states; these same principles, that had been regarded as anarchistic and drastic in the last degree a few years ago, had come to be regarded as progressive and good for the advancement of popular government. He would not say that woman's suffrage was not a good thing, but at this time he was not in favor of it, and while lending his aid to pass the resolution he would be compelled to cast his ballot against it if it came to a vote at the polls.

Rising like a mighty mountain of human strength in his seat, Worley, of Dade, declared in favor of the resolution while expressing his unalterable opposition to the principle of equal suffrage. He assumed it to be the purest of Jeffersonian Democracy to submit a question of such magnitude to the people. He would not take upon himself the responsibility of voting against the submission of this question to the other voters of his county, although he was against it individually.

The audience was looking for something entertaining from Floyd, and they got it. Floyd denied that he was in the legislature to express the sentiment of his constituents on any question that he had not been previously committed on. "This is my job," he said, "and I represent my own views, and I don't know what they are until I get here. I don't even know what side of this bill that I'm speaking on now. I am going to proceed with the argument, and after I hear my own argument I will make up my mind which way I'm going to vote."

The member from Franklin spoke at length, he spoke on both sides of the question; he argued the pro and the con, and after listening to his own magnificent effort he decided to vote with the pro side. Incidentally, he said that he did not represent any particular class of voters that he represented the negroes and the Chinamen as well as the whites, and he presumed it was for this reason that he had received a letter from the Mount Sinai league (colored), of Jacksonville, asking him to vote in favor of the resolution. Mr. Floyd quoted from the letter, which said "The colored womens of Jacksonville are delighted that you are to help them get a square deal. The Colored Ladies' Equal Sufferage league of Jacksonville urges you and prays you will use your utmost influences in the favor of the equal sufferage movement. There is 3,000 colored women in Jacksonville who belongs to our colored club and church societies, and we is all willing to pay our pole taxis and vote. Our mens is so shiftless they does not vote, and we womens wants to have a chance. The ladies earns more than the mens anyway, and we most desirously ask that you give us a chance to vote, as our colored men never does vote, as they are too shiftless to pay their pole taxes. Praying that you will give us womens a chance, I thank you for an in behalf of the colored women of Florida." The letter was signed by Cora V. Brown, secretary of Mount Sinai League No. 4.

NEGRO SHADES KIL BILL.

The speech delivered by Floyd consumed so much time that the debate on the measure was cut short. It occurred to some during Floyd's speech that he was really trying to talk it to death, but his vote proved that he was in favor of submitting the matter to a vote.

Representative Russell, of Putnam, spoke briefly but pointedly and with good effect. He said that he was not afraid to submit any question to the people of Florida. He thought it the Democratic idea and he was in favor of letting the people decide this question for themselves, for that reason he would vote yea.

Gornto opposed the resolution. He was opposed to woman's suffrage, he said, and he did not think it consistent or sincere for him to vote to submit a question to the people when he was antagonistic to it and didn't believe it himself. He predicted that equal suffrage would bring on marital unhappiness, divorce and a disrupted domestic condition and that the political condition would be even worse. He said it meant the enfranchisement of the negro women as well as the white, and such a thing would entail such a train of evils that it would be impossible to conceive of what might follow. He regarded the thing as an innovation to view with great alarm, and was against it.

Acosta saw in this effort to secure the ballot for women an invasion of the south by the north. All of the south's ills had come from the north, he said. The bar between the states was a bar for to be charged up to the invasion of the south by the north; even the north wrote killed the Floridaorange crop. A paid lobbyist had been sent from the north to buttonhole members of the house and secure their support of the measure under discussion. No woman from the south was in the delegation, he declared. He asked the members to consider that the women who were asking for the franchise were not women who had children to rear; they were either single women or married women without children who wouldn't have children, he declared.

OFFENSIVE SPEECH.

Mr. Acosta's speech offended the suffragettes who sat together just back of the rail, and at the conclusion of his remarks against the measure, Mr. Spencer of Marion, arose to a question of privilege and stated that he knew that at least one of the women composing the delegation was a southern woman and that she had lost several uncles and a grandfather in the great struggle. "And they Wore the gray," said Spencer.

MacWilliams referred to Acosta's re*marks as unfortunate. "I did not have* the fortune to be born in the south," said he, "but no man could be more loyal to her interests and traditions than I am. I think it nothing but right to give consideration to all classes of legislation proposed here, and when a constitutional amendment is proposed it should be submitted to the people. That's my stand. If this resolution passes, I shall go to the polls and vote against it."

Martin spoke in opposition. He declared that the vote in the house would not be an untrammeled expression of the sentiment of the members, because of the presence for several days of a lobbyist, who had been active in securing pledges from the members. MacWilliams objected to the remarks of Martin upon the grounds that he was impugning the motives of the house members. The speaker reprimanded Martin, but he continued without visibly changing the tenor of his speech.

When Tomlin moved the previous question the hour had grown late, but there were many members who had speeches prepared without a chance to deliver them. The country members as a rule voted against the resolution, the count resulting 38 to 26 in opposition.

CHILDREN CELEBRATE MAY DAY

The children of the Forrest Ave nue school held an old-time May day festival Thursday.

There were so many beautiful little girls in the school that instead of naming a May queen all became little queens."

Each "little queen" carried a doll and the "doll song" was one of the features of the exercises.

The boys, of course, had masculine parts and sang their "Soldier Boy" song sunid waving flags and much beating of drums.

UNDERWOOD PLANS FOR BUDGET LEGISLATION

Will Call Democratic Caucus Committee Together as Soon as Tariff Passes House

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Democratic Leader Underwood today agreed to call immediately after the house passes the tariff bill a meeting of the Democratic caucus committee to outline a budget appropriation system. The president is said to approve such a system and cabinet officers will be consulted regarding the submission of appropriation estimates.

The subject will be one of the first to be taken up while the house is resting and the ways and means committee is reorganizing the committees, a task that probably will take three weeks. Nothing of importance will remain for the house to do unless the administration should determine upon taking up currency legislation.

Representative Glass, who will be chairman of the banking and currency committee, plans to see the president next week and to get some definite idea of his desires relating to the currency a this session.

Reinforcements Sent

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Constitutionalist agents here have advices reporting General Obreon at Guaymas with reinforcements, and saying the Carranza forces have been largely augmented by Yaqui Indians in Sonora.

Exceptional Advantages
Offered at Brenau Summer School

SOME ATTRACTIVE SCENES AT BRENAU SUMMER SCHOOL
The Processional. The Crow's Nest. Lake Lanier, and a Bird's-Eye View of Brenau Summer School.

Exceptional opportunities for profitable study and healthful recreation will be found at the Brenau Summer School, which will open on June 20 at Gainesville, Ga.

The sessions are under the direction of Brenau College, which is one of the leading colleges for women in the south, and are governed by the same high standards as the regular collegiate courses.

Brenau is allmirably suited to a summer school. With its full equipment and splendid corps of teachers it is able to offer unusually fine courses, while its educational advantages are supplemented by the climate and environment of Gainesville.

The pretty little city is among the foothills of the Blue Ridge, and the crisp mountain air has a tonic quality that has placed Gainesville among the recognized health resorts of the state. Students coming from other sections find that in addition to securing intellectual instruction of much value, they are greatly benefited physically.

The location of Gainesville on the main line of the Southern railway and within a short distance of Atlanta, one of the south's large railroad centers, makes Brenau easily accessible; and while most of the students, of course, are from the southern states, some come from much greater distances to avail themselves of the collegiate and conservatory courses offered at the summer school. Occasionally one finds a woman sixty years of age renewing and increasing her knowledge under the direction of Brenau, and many teachers and young students spend the summer in study at the summer school.

THE CONSERVATORY.

Brenau's reputation as a conservatory is widely known, and many of the students take the musical courses under teachers who are artists as well as instructors. A teachers' training course in music is offered also.

Mr. Otto Pfefferkorn, widely known as a composer and pianist, is director of the conservatory, other instructors for the summer session being John Townsend Sinnette, E. B. Michaelis, Elmer Zoller and Dr. Percy J. Starnes, city organist of Atlanta.

The literary courses maintain the high standard of the college and the oratory school is under the direction of Miss Florence M. Overton, of Emerson College, Boston.

Miss Gertrude Brown is director of the school of art.

A comprehensive course in domestic science is offered.

While the college does not conduct a summer hotel, visitors who cannot secure accommodations in the city will be received into the college, if properly recommended.

Pleasant social events, lectures and recitals, and outdoor sports contribute to the enjoyment of the summer colony at Brenau; and this year a camp for girls will be an attractive innovation. It will be located near Lake Lanier in Brenau Park, and Miss Julia Taylor, of the faculty, will be the chaperon and supervisor.

Sessions close August 10.

HINDU IS ADMITTED TO U. S. CITIZENSHIP

Akhay Kumar Mozumdar Is the First of His Race to Become American Citizen

SPOKANE, Wash., May 3.—Akhay Kumar Mozumdar, a Hindu of high caste, today became a citizen of the United States. He is the first of his race to whom citizenship has been granted. Two years of litigation to that end was brought to a close when United States District Judge Rudkin held that Mozumdar was a "free white person," and entitled to American citizenship.

Mozumdar is a native of Calcutta, India, and a vegetarian philosopher. His application for citizenship previously had been denied by Judge Rudkin. The case was reopened when the court appointed outside counsel to investigate.

Previous legal rulings were looked into with little avail. Few instances of Hindus applying for citizenship have ever come up before the naturalization department.

Mozumdar's eligibility to citizenship hinged on the question of whether he is a "free white person," as used in the original naturalization act.

Judge Rudkin, in his opinion, says:

"In the original naturalization act the expression 'free white persons' was doubtless primarily intended to include the white emigrant from northern Europe with whom the congress of that day was familiar, and to exclude Indians and persons of African descent or nativity.

"Beyond this, perhaps congress had no definite object in view. It could not have foreseen the vast immigration problems with which the govern*ment is now confronted, or the difficul*ties which might hamper and embarrass the courts in the administration of the law.

"But whatever the original intent may have been, it is now settled by the great weight of authority, at least, that it was the intention of congress to confer the privilege of naturalization upon members of the Caucasian race only.

"It is likewise true that certain of the natives of India belong to that race, although the line of demarcation between different castes and classes may be dim and difficult of ascertainment.

"I fully appreciate the fact that the lineage of the applicant in these matters must rest largely, if not entirely, upon his own testimony, and that the courts may be imposed upon, but they must administer the law as best they can until congress shall fix by prescribe a more definite rule for their guidance.

"The testimony in this case satisfies *me that the applicant has brought him*self within the provisions of the naturalization acts, and he will be admitted to citizenship accordingly, upon the taking of the oath prescribed by law."

MOLE BURNED AND ITCHED

So Could Not Rest. Could Not Stand Anything to Touch It. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Route No. 1, Box 59, Muldoon, Tex.—"My sister had a mole on her back between her shoulders. It got to be a large knot and was red and angry looking. It burned and itched and hurt her so she could not rest day or night. It got so bad we had to cut out her clothes in the back. She could not stand anything to touch it. It grew to be as large as a bird's egg. She was in this fix a month, getting worse all the time. We thought it was a cancer. A friend said to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment. We washed the mole with the Cuticura Soap and anointed it with the Cuticura Ointment three times a day. Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured the mole.

"My cousin had scald head. It was a yellow scab all over his head which itched all the time. All of his hair came out. It looked like he had wet his head and rolled it in meal bran. It was a sight. He would keep his head tied up to keep anyone from seeing it. His whole scalp was a solid sore. He was ashamed to go anywhere his head looked so badly. We recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment, so they gave them a trial. It was not long before his head was well and he had a fine head of hair. Our two babies' heads broke out in little yellow blisters and then made sores. We tried several remedies, then we got Cuticura Soap and Ointment and used them twice a day and in two weeks they were sound and well." (Signed) Mrs. Lillie Parker, Oct. 7, 1912.

Cuticura Soap 25c. and Cuticura Ointment 50c. are sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Tender-faced men should use Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick, 25c. Sample free.

Feet Tired--- So Tired?

TIZ Makes Sick Feet Well No Matter What Ails Them.

Send at Once for Free Trial Package.

TIZ acts at once and makes tired, aching, swollen feet remarkably fresh and sore proof.

It's the sure remedy, you know, for everything that gets the matter with your feet. It's for sore feet and for sweaty, bad-smelling feet, and for corns, calluses, and bunions, too.

"For years I have been troubled with sore and tender feet; suffered intense pains. Have had the assistance of physicians without relief. I bought a box of TIZ, which worked a perfect cure, as it has with a great many of my friends. I would not be without it."—A. F. Dreutzer, Chicago.

TIZ is not a powder. Powders and other foot remedies clog up the pores. TIZ draws out all poisonous exudations which bring on soreness of the feet, and is the only remedy that does.

You'll never limp again or draw up your face in pain, and you'll forget about your corns, bunions and callouses. You'll feel like a new person. There are two kinds of people in the world—those that get what they want, and those that get what someone else wants to give them. Be firm—when you ask for TIX, get it and laugh at the substitute.

TIZ is for sale at all drug stores, department and general stores at 25 cents per box, or it will be sent you direct, if you wish. Money back if TIZ doesn't do all we say. For a free trial package write today to Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.—(Advt.)

PROMINENT SHRINERS ON VISIT TO ATLANTA TODAY

Imperial Recorder Benjamin W. Rowell in Party—Atlanta Shriners as Hosts

Nine prominent Shriners, among them Benjamin W. Rowell, Imperial recorder of the imperial council, will be the guests of Atlanta Shriners today when they will stop over for a few hours while on their way to the convention in Dallas, Tex.

The special Pullman car, "Advance," bearing officers and representatives of Aleppo temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Boston, will arrive at the Terminal station at 11:15 o'clock this morning.

They will be met by Forrest Adair, imperial potentate of Yaarab temple, and a number of other prominent Atlanta Shriners who will entertain them until their train leaves at 11:10 tonight.

The visitors left Boston, Mass., on Friday afternoon and their train brought them directly here via Washington, D. C. From here they will go to Birmingham, Ala.; Vicksburg, Miss.; New Orleans, La.; Houston, Tex.; San Antonio, Tex.; Galveston, Tex., and thence to Dallas, their destination.

A day or a part of a day will be spent in each city visited and every attention will be accorded the distinguished travelers. The trip back to Boston, which begins May 14, will cover the middle west via Hot Springs, Ark.; St. Louis, Mo.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Cleveland, Ohio, and Buffalo, N. Y.

The total distance traveled will approximate 4,825 miles.

Following are the members of the party:

George ... Shackford, potentate.
Charles C. Henry, past potentate.
Charles A. Estey, past potentate.
Walter W. Morrison, chief rabban.
James S. Blake, high priest and prophet.
Joseph ... Work, treasurer.
Benjamin W. Rowell, imperial recorder.
Samuel C. L. Haskell, first ceremonial master.
Henry B. Perkins, steward.

Atlanta Woman Finds "Butler" and "Burglar" Are Synonymous Words

When Mrs. John S. Cook, of 203 Angier avenue, walked in her front door yesterday afternoon after a short visit to a neighbor across the street and met a friend who had called, she learned for the first time that she had a "butler." A few minutes later she also learned that the "butler's" tenure of office was short and that there was likewise a shortage in her pocketbook which she had left in the house.

Mrs. Cook had crossed the street, as has been said, to speak to some one and on her return found a lady coming out of her front door. Her visitor said that the "butler" had let her in, telling her that Mrs. Cook was in the rear of the house.

A search of the premises failed to disclose the whereabouts of the negro man who had helped himself to what money he could find.

DR. CARY B. WILMER IS GIVEN RANK OF CAPTAIN

After having served ten years as chaplain, Dr. Cary B. Wilmer, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church, was retired yesterday from active service by the Fifth regiment with the rank of captain.

Dr. Wilmer has been devoted to the welfare of the soldiers since his appointment and had accompanied them on many encampments. His successor will be named on the recommendation of the regimental commander.

G. A. R. MAY MEET IN CHATTANOOGA

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 3.—General Alfred Beers commander-in-chief of the grand army of republic will arrive in Chattanooga late tonight to confer with the local committees Monday in regard to holding the annual encampment of the S. G. A. R. here in September. The matter has been under consideration for several months.

Fine Remedy For Eczema

Also for Salt Rheum, Tetter, Psoriasis, Lupus, and All Skin Afflictions.

Even a Microscope Won't Find a Blemish After S. S. S. Gets Through.

All skin troubles should be attacked from within by giving the blood circulation a good daily bath. This is accomplished with S. S. S., the best known and most highly recommended blood purifier ever discovered. Its action is very rapid. Its vegetable nature is such that it naturally goes right into the blood, saturates the entire circulation, bathes the tissues with an influence that enables the skin to heal quickly. The action of S. S. S. is that of an antidote, and this fact has been demonstrated time and time again in the most severe forms of weeping eczema.

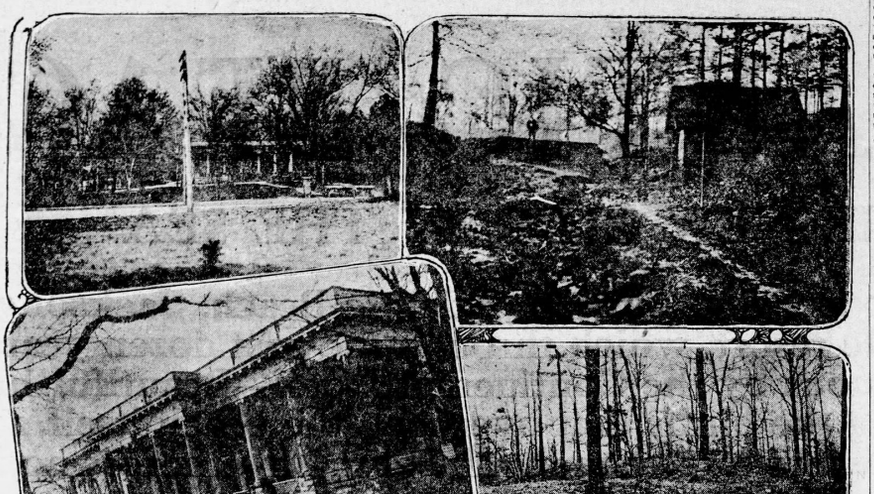

Its influence in the tissues where the tiny arteries transfer the red blood for the worn out blood to the veins is quite remarkable and goes on constantly with every tick of the clock—the beat of the heart.

And new skin is thus caused to form while the germs of irritating influences that cause eczema are scattered and their harmful nature entirely suspended.

S. S. S. has a wonderful tonic influence in the blood because it contains no "dope," is not a "physic," is entirely free of any mineral drugs or any other drugs except the remarkable medicinal effect of the pure vegetable products of which it is made.

Few people realize how harmful are many of the strong, crude ointments that used to be in favor before they learned that S. S. S. is safe, speedy and sure. Ask at any drug store for a bottle of S. S. S. Give it a good trial and you will soon see a decided improvement in any form of skin trouble. Write to The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for special free advice on eczema and any other form of skin or blood trouble.

CITIZENS WILL PETITION COUNCIL TO TRANSFORM OLD MOZLEY ESTATE INTO RECREATION GROUNDS

Some of the many beautiful scenes on the old Mozley estate. The top view, at the left, shows the old Mozley home from the front. Just beneath is a closer view of the old colonial house that advocates of the new park point out would be ideal for a community house. The pictures at the right show views of the many old breastworks that dot the big estate.

The southwest side of Atlanta wants the city council to buy the old Mozley estate on West Hunter road, near Gordon street, and turn it into recreation grounds.

Nearly a thousand citizens of the First and Seventh wards have signed a petition that this be done, and in addition to these indorsement of the project has come from many of Atlanta's leading citizens outside the ward.

It is pointed out that on account of the rapid growth of realty values and the increased demands for recreation grounds, the establishment of more parks becomes a necessity. Those who have seen the old Mozley estate declare that it is an ideal place for a new park for the southwest side and that the city council is being given a rare opportunity in being offered the big plat at a low price.

The Mozley estate, consisting of thirty-eight wooded acres, is convenient to several car lines and has much of the natural beauty that is necessary for an ideal park. The old Mozley home, a fine old colonial residence, in good repair, is an ideal building for a community house. There are two artificial lakes on the picturesque estate and it is full of historic interest because it was the scene of several fierce battles during the Civil war.

Old breastworks and fragments of shell that dot the estate give mute evidence of former activities there.

Those who are behind the movement to make a park there are enthusiastic and say they are meeting with no opposition from any source. The large number of petitioners in the First and Seventh wards shows that the people are in earnest, and citizens of other wards have joined the movement, declaring that this is the only property of its size and adaptability that can be had for such a low price.

Following are some of those outside of the First and Seventh wards who have indorsed the movement:

Robert F. Maddox, W. L. Peel, Morris Brandon, Forrest Adair, M. L. Thrower, Leopold J. Haas, J. L. Mayson, B. M. Grant, J. R. Smith, A. L. Curtis, Harry L. Schlesinger, S. M. Inman, B. Davison, W. H. Lansdell, George M. Copes, H. R. Luke, J. C. Loeb, J. W. Baker, C. E. Cameron, Morris Macks, J. T. Childress, F. P. McElroy, H. A. Maier, W. E. Marshall.

Lass of Five Years Wanted to See Sights Of City by Herself

Five-year-old Mary Hardin, daughter of Clifford Hardin, Pine Grove farmer, started out to see the wide, wide world by herself Saturday afternoon.

She left a livery stable in Decatur street where her father was stopping temporarily on a visit to the city and wandered several blocks away. She started to cry when she discovered that she couldn't find her way back. A policeman took her into custody and walked his five-year-old captive to the station, arriving about the same time as Mr. Hardin, who went there to report her loss.

Father and daughter went away together, and little Mary said she wouldn't run away any more.

GOT A LIGHT SENTENCE BUT WANTS A NEW TRIAL

Darden's Attorneys Think Three Years Too Heavy for Unwritten Law Killing

Attorneys W. M. Smith and J. S. McClelland have made a motion in the superior court for a new trial for E. T. Darden, who was convicted recently of killing C. M. Goddard and was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary by Judge L. S. Roan.

Darden, whose sole plea was the unwritten law, was indicted for murder, but a jury returned a verdict for man*slaughter, the punishment for which is* from one to twenty years in the penitentiary.

Because of the comparatively light sentence imposed, the motion for a new trial has caused considerable surprise.

Nature Will Cure Constipation

All She Needs is a Very Little Help

Constipation is caused by accumulated waste in the Colon (Large Intestine), which, under our present mode of living, Nature cannot entirely remove without a little help.

The rank poisons in this waste get into the blood circulation too, and make us feel depressed, blue, bilious and incompetent—really sick if allowed to go a little too far.

All the help that Nature asks, however, is Internal Bathing with Warm Water applied by the "J. B. L. Cascade"---This, in a perfectly natural and rational way, cleans out all the waste and poisons from the Colon and keeps it as sweet, clean and pure, by occasional use, as Nature demands for a perfectly healthy condition.

So invariably successful has this new and improved method of Internal Bathing proved to be, that over 200,000 Americans are now enthusiastically using it to cure Constipation, ward off disease, and keep them bright, vigorous and efficient.

The "J. B. L. Cascade" is now being shown by all our stores. Call and let us explain just how simply it accomplishes these great results.

AGNES SCOTT COLLEGE GIRLS PRESENT PLAYLET ON CAMPUS

Twenty-three members of the Tropylean Literary society at Agnes Scott college took part in a beautiful playlet on the campus of the college last night, when "The Foresters" was given as the annual play of the society. The presentation was a success in every particular.

Many of the young ladies displayed unusual dramatic talent and the presentation of "The Foresters" was one of the best productions of the annual plays that has yet been presented. The natural setting of the campus trees added unusual interest to the event.

Those taking part were Miss Irene Fisher, Miss Ora Glenn, Miss Mary Hyer, Miss Ruth Hicks, Miss Frances Dukes, Miss Laura Belle Towers, Miss Alice Myatt, Miss Lilly Joiner, Miss Hallie Smith, Miss Cherry Bomer, Miss Margaret Thythian, Miss Helen Brown, Miss Mary Tiptard, Miss Janie Rogers, Miss Pauline Bruner, Miss Isabelle Norwood, Miss Mary Pittard, Miss Mary Bryan, Miss Genevieve McMillan, Miss Anna Montgomery, Miss Mary Hayer, Miss Anna Sykes and Miss Elizabeth Willet.

IN 18 MONTHS I TOOK IN $650,000.00 IN THE MAIL ORDER BUSINESS, STARTING WITH ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS. NOW HAVE ENORMOUS ENTERPRISES, OVER 400,000 CUSTOMERS, AND AM KNOWN EVERYWHERE AS THE MAIL ORDER WIZARD OF AMERICA.

IF YOU WORK OVER A SET OF BOOKS, OR BEHIND THE COUNTER, OR OVER A TYPEWRITER, OR BEHIND A TEAM, OR BESIDE A BARBER CHAIR, OR ON A STREET CAR, OR IN A BOILER FACTORY, OR WHEREVER YOU WORK NOW, I CAN SHOW YOU THE REAL, RAPID, RELIABLE ROUTE TO SOMETHING A THOUSAND TIMES BETTER! I SHOW YOU HOW TO MAKE MONEY IN A BUSINESS OF YOUR OWN.

Yes, who read this, no matter who you are, or what you are doing; no matter how low your salary, or how poor your prospects; no matter how discontented, discouraged, you are; no matter how incapable of achievement your friends or your family may think you are—you can at once become the partner of The Mail Order Wizard of America—you can begin, for the first time in your life, perhaps, to see the money roll in to you at every visit of the postman, without grinding out your heart and soul and body for every dollar of it.

I, Walt C. Cunningham, right now offer you the money-making chance of your life, without asking you to mortgage your life to me, without driving a grim, cold-blooded, Shylock's bargain with you. I started perhaps with a whole lot more than you will start with—ness. I WILL QUICKLY TEACH YOU THIS REAL SECRET OF MAKING MONEY FAST —AND MAKING IT STEADILY, LEGITIMATELY, HONESTLY, SO THAT YOU CAN LOOK THE WHOLE WORLD IN THE FACE AND DEFY IT TO SAY THAT YOU NEVER ASKED YOUR DOLLAR, WHERE THEY CAME FROM. I've a book you must get by return mail and read at once. It is called "How to Achieve Mail Order Success," and I'll make you a present of it. Read it over, and get it soaked into your system from head to heel, and get full of new hope, fire, ambition and burning determination to begin the fight in a brand new way, and under the guidance of one who has fought the same fight and won it hands down. I'll take right hold of you and show you the way from beginning to end, and work with you, for you, help you, advise you—supply you with Money-Multiplying Ideas, Suggestions you can Quickly Coin into Cash, Methods you can Mould into Greenbacks, Swiftly-Successful, Sure Selling Plans, Persuasive Literature, Cash-Getting and Inexpensive Circulars, which will sell the goods I tell you to offer.

This broad-gauged, generous education I am offering you, covering the Entire Field of Newest Proven Ideas and Well-Tried Principles of Mail Order Money-Making, is open to every man and woman who has the blessed ambition to step up out of the wage weary crowd. They are so complete, my wonderful plans in long-distance merchandiser, that they guide you into Profit-Creating Avenues, and cash-producing By-Ways. I GUARANTEE, PLEDGE AND ABSOLUTELY ASSURE EVERY MAN OR WOMAN THAT HE OR SHE CAN TAKE HOLD OF THIS BUSINESS AT ONCE, FOLLOW ITS SIMPLE, SURE AND SAFE DIRECTIONS, AND BEGIN IMMEDIATELY TO MAKE MONEY FAST. You can start right out from the day you get this wonderful series of success plans.

IF YOU ARE MAKING $600 OR $900, OR $1,200 OR $2,400 A YEAR, AND REALLY WANT TO MAKE $4,000 TO $40,000 A YEAR, I CAN SHOW YOU HOW.

If you will write me, as suggested above, in answer to this advertisement this very day, I positively will send you, with plenty complete, combined, ready-to-start live, lucrative mail order business, which you can begin operating right in the privacy of your own home, without an office, or any outlay for office equipment.

I CAN SET YOU FREE! I can deliver you from the grim grind! I can liberate you from the treadmill of the time-clock! I can tear the well-worn shackles of wage-slavery from your hands and feet! I can lift the burden of boss-bossing from your forehead! I can do these things, brothers and sisters, because I was fixed just exactly as you are when I went into this business and made all of this money. I had the same miserable doubts and mongrel fears—I, too, was once hand-cuffed to a job and gagged and speechless with self-distrust, ever-cowed, ever-afraid of getting fired! Those were the things I decided I would be forever free from, and so I am! And so you, too, can be, if you will make up your minds to believe in me and write to me before this day's sun falls behind the horizon.

I will say no more—the opportunity is here, with its arms outstretched; today, right now. Dame Fortune taps on your door, and this message of mine to tell you about it has cost me thousands of dollars to send—it is flashed today across the country to all the ambitious men and women of America in all the walks of life—there is oceans of room for all of you in this business!

Whatever you do, get that letter or postal off NOW asking for my FREE BOOK, "How To Achieve Mail Order Success." Address, WALT C. CUNNINGHAM, President The Mail Order School, Suite 6227, Brecee Building, Denver, Colorado.

Mortality From Colds Is Alarming

Thousands Died Last Year From Colds, Neglected Too Long

Practically every case of pneumonia was first just a cold. During a hard winter in America, hundreds will neglect the simple cold, and succumb to grippe. A cold, permitted to settle and inflame, is the beginning of the Great White Plague itself, for which we are spending Millions of Dollars to find a cure.

Most colds are traceable directly to an inactive liver. You get overheated, cool off too suddenly and the pores close. The blood recedes from the surface and a congestion is produced. The same condition exists if you sit in a draft, or get wet. The liver finds its efforts overcome by pressure of the blood, and being unable to perform its function of cleansing away the waste, undigested food remains in stomach and intestines and ferments. The head gets hot, the feet cold and bowels constipated. Then cold sets in.

If JACOBS' LIVER SALT is taken immediately, it will ward off the cold. It relieves the congestion, rejuvenates the livers and sends the blood racing through the veins with a vigor that will instantly dispel the depressing attack of cold. A simple remedy, but worth its weight in gold if you value health. And it will not put you in bed.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT before breakfast, an agreeably bubbling drink and in an hour you'll feel fine. The man who doesn't catch cold keeps his liver lively, and you will find no other liver-tonic as good as the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. All druggists, 25c. If yours cannot supply you upon receipt of price we will mail full size jar, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

ATLANTIC BEACH

THE NEW CITY BY THE SEA

A new city is being built at Atlantic Beach, Jacksonville's splendid seaside resort, which through the past dozen years has been made famous by the Continental Hotel---Beautiful homes are rising along the bluffs that overhang the beach itself, and in the palm and oak-covered hammock behind it---there is no more attractive place in Florida nor in the South for year-around residence.

More than four thousand acres of forest land and ocean front are to be opened to home builders---a modern city with paved streets, electric lights, healthful drainage, and all the conveniences and necessities of comfortable living. The location is by the finest ocean beach in the South, seventeen miles from Jacksonville and connected with it by a splendid, hard-surfaced roadway and a convenient train schedule. An electric service is promised within the next few months, with an hourly schedule from Jacksonville.

Beautiful home sites by the beach or among the great palms, magnolias and oaks of Florida's splendid forests. There is no more attractive spot in the South.

Already a beginning has been made---nearly a thousand acres north of the road to the beach have been platted, streets have been laid out and cut through, building sites cleared and a score of beautiful bungalows and houses are actually going up as rapidly as men and material can be gathered for their construction.

The electric lighting plant is ready for extension along the streets and boulevards and into the houses. An artesian well is flowing thousands of gallons an hour, sufficient for a population of ten thousand people.

Atlantic Beach is owned and being developed by men of energy and experience who are backed by abundant capital. They will control the building of Atlantic Beach from the beginning and no feature will be allowed that can mar its desirability as a home place for men and women of refinement. Building restrictions and limitations will control the class of buyers and home builders.

Many beautiful bungalows and residences will be ready for occupancy within a few weeks---desirable lots on which the purchasers may build houses of their own designing will be offered for sale within a short time. There is no more attractive place in the South for homes, summer, winter, the year around.

The Atlantic Beach Corporation has its office on the property at the Beach. It is always open to receive visitors, who will be welcomed. An inspection of the property will be a revelation. The Company also has an office in the St. James Building, Jacksonville. If you can not come, write for full information about this home development proposition. It is the largest that has ever been undertaken in the South.

JOURNAL WANT AD HOROSCOPE

MAY 5

This is the birthdate of the Empress Eugenie of France and a woman of a most interesting and romantic character. A woman born on this date should study her life and character and profit thereby.

She exemplifies the strong characteristics of this sign of Taurus by her love of beauty, her passion for dress and her great generosity, all of them being notable traits which dominate the Taurus born.

Many actors and actresses come under this sign. They amass large fortunes and spend them.

People of this birthdate can get plenty of money together, but it seems impossible for them to save it.

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

Value of Public Exhibitions

THERE are but few people who realize the importance and the value of public exhibitions being conducted in any community. Rivalry of all kinds usually brings about great efforts that would not be brought out in any other way, and when competition in any line of industry springs up or is brought about it is suprising how it will make different ones work more and exert themselves to excel others. Little different from any other line of work that can be brought about, even though the prize be small and nothing like warrant the efforts many who are so eager to out-do or excel what some others have done that competition will stimulate and make many people work that would not otherwise. The only thing is in what way is best to bring out and greate an interest in such matters. In every large city and nearly every eastern and western township annual public exhibitions are held every year. They are looked upon as fixtures and people prepare ahead and get ready for these exhibitions and usually strive harder every year to make an improvement over what they had done the year before.

Nothing will make a man, woman or child work harder or study harder to try and do something better than his neighbor more than for a competition of some kind to be gotten up by which these matters of interest can be brought out. For instance, at the National Live Stock show, held at Chicago every year, many men strive year by year to produce a better beef, a better hog, sheep or cow to be exhibited at this annual show than anyone else has done the previous year. It keeps people at work and striving hard to do something that they would never undertake to do with it not for this public exhibition. The same thing applies to the state and county fairs. Many a person is stimulated to study and work hard to perfect things for public exhibition to gain notoriety and win a premium that they they would never make any effort in this line if there was not some inducement offered for them to do so. Many a child has instilled into them a desire and ambition to produce something better than their neighbor or their competitor by being offered an opportunity and inducements to do so. Interests of various kinds and a desire to be up and doing something are instilled into people that never would be aroused if it were not for the public exhibitions held in different communities.

Atlanta losing interest or dropping out from her public or annual fairs every year has had its effect on the entire state, and those who are familiar with these details cannot help but see where thousands of people were made to work harder in agricultural interests of this state, especially in north Georgia, were encouraged and stimulated by these fairs that were once held in Atlanta that now, since they have been abandoned, are noticeable, and one can readily see how the interest in this respect has ceased. It has been quite noticeable in the agricultural and live stock interests, but in many other lines. Hundreds of people were brought to Atlanta and hundreds of dollars were spent in this town during the visits by the large mass of people that were brought to Atlanta by these public exhibitions. Many improvements, new manufacturing and other industrial lines trace their beginning and their prosperity to a certain extent that were brought out directly from the exhibitions that were once held in Atlanta.

While I know there were many features connected with these exhibitions that were not what they should be, and which took work and money to successfully conduct them. Still in dollars and cents and for the good it has done for Atlanta and the surrounding country, it is a pity that they were ever abandoned, and it has kept thousands of dollars from being circulated in the city of Atlanta that should have been kept up. But little was this work appreciated and but little did the general public see at that time or even thought since of the good that it was doing for the country.

Yours very truly

By cards, tea leaves and similar devices may be amusing and entertaining, but is also boresome, but it avails you nothing. When you are really in doubt and trouble, when you are earnestly in need of reliable psychic help and advice, you must consult a genuine occult scientist. In all special cases, never fail to consult Tremaine.

"I FOLLOW THE LEAD OF NO LIVING HUMAN BEING. I AM INDEPENDENT OF HUMAN ENDEAVOR I STAND SUPREME."

Success guaranteed in the most difficult cases where others have failed, or your methods fail. If you have lost time and money experimenting in this line, you will find that you can accomplish nothing, you owe it to yourself to try the one master of the man.

FULL CREDIT ALLOWED FOR ALL FEES PAID ON UNFINISHED CASES UNDERTAKEN BY WEAK OR INCOMPETENT CLAIRVOYANTS, MEDIUMS OR PSYCHICS.

To the curious and simple, consulting fools, gypsies, dates and facts, guarantee you will be told the truth, for nothing. Satisfaction or no fee. Consultation $1. I wish to teach only those whom I can work with in harmony. Don't let your impulse to call, do not delay. Curious or frivolous persons not desired at any price. Bring this ad.

HERE IS SOMETHING WORTHY OF YOUR CONSIDERATION FOR A HOME OR AN INVESTMENT:

A TWO-STORY, 7-room residence on West Tenth street, just off of West Peachtree, which you can buy for $6,500, $1,000 cash and easy terms on the rest.

WE HAVE two 5-room bungalows on West Tenth street, just below Spring, beautifully finished, all modern improvements, at $5,250. THIS IS A "PICK-UP" FOR YOU.

LET US SHOW you three new bungalows which we have in the Inman Park section which are well worth $3,000 but which we are offering for $2,550. The lots are 48x116. The houses alone are worth the price we have on both houses and lots, and THINK OF BEING ABLE TO GET THEM BY PAYING $250 down and the balance $20 per month.

ALSO HAVE two new bungalows on Albemarle street, 6 rooms each; all modern improvements including furnace heat. Large size lots. Price only $5,000, with cash payment of $500 and the balance $40 per month. In this way you can buy you a home for less money than renting.

PONCE DE LEON PLACE—A new, 6 room BUNGALOW, lot beautifully elevated, 50x160 to a 10-foot alley. All modern improvements; gas, electricity, hot water, electric bells, furnace heat. Only $4,900. You can buy this by paying $500 down and the balance $40 per month.

WE HAVE a great many cottages, bungalows and residences on the north, on the east, west and south sides—too many to enumerate, but if you will call us up and tell us what you want we will have one of our salesmen take you in a machine and show you exactly what you want in a very few minutes after we get your call.

WE HAVE one of the largest listings of vacant property, and also investment property, to be found in the city, and would appreciate your giving us an opportunity to show you and convince you that we can supply your wants in any and all classes of real estate.

IF YOU have any property in any part of the city that you want sold and will list with us, we will "get right behind it" and try to dispose of it for you quickly.

ON ROCKFORD avenue near Piedmont, I have 15 acres fronting Ansley Park. This is a nice elevated tract of land. Lies well for a subdivision. Good money in this. It is high and overlooking Ansley Park. This can be subdivided so as to double your money and is now ready for the market. Can sell this for $2,500 on easy terms.

TWELVE MILES from the city, fronting the Chattahoochee river one mile, I have 450 acres of well improved farm. 100 acres of good rich bottom land. This can be made one of the best stock or dairy farms in the country. The river is the line on one side and Sweetwater creek is the line on the other side. There is 50 acres in Bermuda grass. This bottom land never overflows. I will exchange this place for improved city property, or sell on easy terms.

TEN ACRES just off of Peachtree road on the Peachtree-Dunwoody road, fronting this public road 600 feet, for $3,000. This is about a quarter of a mile from the car line and is cheap for this money.

I HAVE some fine south Georgia farms, ranging from 100 to 5,000 acres, for sale or exchange for Atlanta property. If you are looking for something like this, come to see me.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Lot and Stores on Luckie Street Bring $17,000—McKenzie Building and Other Business Leases Reported—Auction and Court House Sales Next Tuesday—West End, Ponce de Leon Avenue and Other Sales—Decatur Activity

Several medium-sized transactions were announced yesterday. These included sales and business leases. There was a good deal of vacant lot activity and some suburban business.

With the exception of some recent sales done closed at considerations of $50,000 to $100,000, the market just now is mostly active in homes and lots. A good many houses are being built or have been planned.

Some of the agents who have always catered to small business say that they are having the best business in some time. One such agent said yesterday that his business for March and April had been the best he had ever had in those two months.

Weather has a great deal of influence over the small trader, especially where he is buying a home or residence lot, and the weather for the past few days has been ideal.

There are one or two pretty good leases in prospect this week and some good sales, all recent business. On next Tuesday there will be some important sales at the court house, including a Carnegie Way corner, a South Forsyth street corner and various other properties in important trading sections.

LUCKIE STREET SALE.

Turman, Black & Calhoun have sold for Charles H. Black to J. M. Hawkins, Jr., a lot and three stores. Mr. Black will build on it on Luckie street facing the old Tabernacle property. The consideration was $17,000.

This lot is triangular in shape, having three street frontages on Luckie, Harris and Hayden streets.

BUSINESS LEASES.

Albert S. Adams, of B. M. Grant & Co., has leased the following:

For George M. McKenzie to an out-of-town tailoring establishment, No. 122 Peachtree street, a store in the McKenzie building, for a term of five years at $300 a month; to John D. Babbage, three offices on the second floor on the same building for four years, and to Hood & Paschall, an engraving concern, an office on the third floor.

For Dr. F. W. McRae to the Sewell Commission company, No. 164 Decatur street, a store room, for $100 a month.

AUCTION NEXT TUESDAY.

On next Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock, A. J. & H. F. West will offer for the W. C. Richards estate at auction thirty-seven vacant lots on Fourteenth and State streets.

These lots are of regulation residence size and supplied with improvements.

GENERAL REALTY SALES.

Turman, Black & Calhoun have sold for John S. Daniel to Mrs. S. M. Whitner two lots on St. Charles avenue, 50x150 each, for $5,000. These lots are on the south side of the street, east of Fredericka street.

The M. C. Kiser agency has sold for W. T. Henry to Mrs. Lena Chamlee, No. 10o Lee street, a residence on a lot 53x200, for $5,500.

The Martin-Ozburn Realty company has sold for Mrs. T. P. Jones to Brown & Whisenant, No. 25 Queen street, a residence on a lot 66x150, for $7,000, and for Brown & Whisenant to a client, a house near the East Lake drive and Boulevard DeKalb, for $5,000.

The J. W. Dobbins & Co. agency has sold for R. F. Merriam to L. A. Morris, a lot on the south side of Ponce de Leon avenue at Ponce de Leon Heights, 50x200, for $3,500; for J. H. McCord to N. R. Silas, No. 15 McDonald street, 107x125, for $1,200, and for the Copenhill Land company to C. L. Heshell, lot 5 of block 29 of its subdivision, for $1,850.

DECATUR ACTIVITY.

Activity continues in Decatur. Several development notes out there were announced on yesterday.

The Edwin P. Ansley agency has sold a lot to P. J. Harlee, who will build shortly, and Dr. J. W. Mayson, of the same agency, is completing five attractive two-story houses on Adams street. W. A. Oxmer has just finished a two-story brick house on Sycamore street.

Something like forty houses have been completed or have been started since March. C. B. Scott has an architect working on building plans for Winona Park, and will break ground in two weeks for two unusually attractive houses.

THE POINT

Of difference between Insurance Companies is not the question of money represented in outstanding policies, alone.

But it is THAT plus an indefinable something, which embraces SERVICE, PROMPTNESS AND HUMAN INTEREST.

And it is this indefinable something which distinguishes the

The Union Mutual Association

from the ordinary Industrial Insurance Company, and has made it a permanent organization for commercial uplift and social betterment in communities where it operates.

YOU may not be insured in this Company, but if you stop to think, you can easily recall an instance among your friends where the UNION MUTUAL ASSOCIATION showed this mark of difference.

Perhaps, the incident set you a-thinking at the time, but bye-and-bye you forgot it, of course.

The object of this advertisement and those that are to follow, is to remind you of that and similar incidents and keep you a-thinking about our Company.

It will pay you, because, some day, YOU will join the

COLORED PEOPLE ARE DOING GOOD WORK

New Odd Fellows' Building Is Home of Many Promising Enterprises

The completion of the home building of the Grand United Order of Odd Fellows, on Auburn avenue, has brought to light many facts concerning the enterprise on the part of a number of leading colored men of Atlanta.

To begin with, the order has accomplished a great deal locally during the past four years. In 1909 they purchased the Rice property, at the corner of Walton and Piedmont streets, for $22,000. In 1910 bought the John J. Woodside property at corner of Bell and Auburn avenue for $10,000, and 1911 a lot from J. Lee Barnes for $15,000. On Thanksgiving day of the same year a free-will offering for ground for Odd Fellows' building. During this same year ground was broken for the new building. In January, 1912, established a sinking fund commission. In February of the same year purchased the Gate City drug store at a cost of $20,000, and later the property of the Rose property for $35,000, and then the Folsom property, on Bell street, for $35,000. The erection of the $100,000 office building without indebtedness. Toward the close of last year the order loaned $100,000 to members of the order on first mortgage real estate, and with a final close a successful campaign resulted in raising of $130,000 of a $300,000 sinking fund. And during the same year the order has moved into their magnificent new home, the Odd Fellows' building. The ground has been cleared of debris for the erection of office building and auditorium adjoining the Odd Fellows' building. Another $75,000 for the permanent sinking fund has been subscribed and will all be paid in by August 1.

The successful real estate operations of the order is a tribute to the ability of the officers of the order.

UNION MUTUAL ASSOCIATION IS PROSPEROUS

The Union Mutual association, an insurance company, is located in the new Odd Fellows' building. This company began business in 1901. Today it requires the service of 200 employes to care for the $200,000 worth of business done annually. It pays $60,000 sick claims annually and $20,000 death claims. The company operates on an authorized capital of $25,000.

The officers are as follows: T. W. Walker, president; H. W. Russell, vice president; William Brisbell, secretary and general manager; E. J. Davis, treasurer; H. T. Johnson, attorney; W. O. Castleberry and J. C. Lindsey, secretary.

SUCCESSFUL COLORED BANKERS.

The Atlanta State Savings Bank, heretofore operated as a private bank, is soon to become a state bank and will be operated under the rules governing such institutions as set forth by the state of Georgia. The application for charter has been made and favorable action is expected within a few weeks.

The history of the Atanta State Savings Bank makes an interesting story and it is the outcome of the ideas of two successful colored business men.

Four years ago J. O. Ross, for twenty-five years a successful grocer in Atlanta, conceived the idea of a banking institution for the encouragement for the small wage earner among their race.

He talked C. C. Carter into his project and they launched the Atlanta Savings Bank. Because of their honest dealings with their own people and with their long experience as a retail grocer they had the confidence of the colored people of Atlanta. With a small capital stock and after interesting other successful colored business men with them, they began a banking business. Their success has been remarkable as will be shown from the following figures:

Capital stock, paid in, $7,222.

Undivided profits, $4,902. Individual deposits, $39,593.34, and savings accounts to the amount of $22,837.17. The resources are shown to be: Loans and discounts, $19,542.12; furniture and fixtures, $2,232.72; real estate $21,436; cash on hand and in banks, $10,681.28. Overdrafts only $300.

J. O. Ross, president, and C. C. Carter, cashier, of the bank, are two of the most deserving colored business men of Atlanta and their enterprise is most commendable. While in the retail business, each conducted an enterprise of their own, they dealt with practically every wholesale house in Atlanta and each had an enviable reputation for honesty and business integrity.

The Standard Life Insurance company, H. S. Perry, president, recently licensed by the Georgia state insurance department, and now writing insurance, is believed to be the first old line life insurance company organized exclusively by negroes to write insurance among negroes. Insurance circles of Atlanta are interested in the circumstances under which the company begins operations, since they believe they may indicate a new field of activity for the negro.

The stable nature of the company is indicated in the fact that it passed easily the requirements of the state insurance department, which now operates under rigid new laws designed to weed out "blue sky" concerns. Its capital stock of $100,000 was sold with premiums of $38,000. The promotion expenses total the unusually conservative sum of 3 per cent and the total organization expenses 2 per cent. Georgia municipal bonds to the amount of $100,000 have been deposited with the state treasurer. Already the company has on file applications for insurance totaling $400,000.

NEGROES FROM SOUTH.

The company, whose home offices are at Atlanta, expects to do business among negroes throughout the south generally. Its officers are: H. E. Perry, president; Wm. Driskell, vice president; Harry H. Pace, secretary; H. C. Austin, assistant secretary; J. O. Ross, treasurer; Thomas T. Slater, M. D., medical director; George Dyre of the New York Age, consulting actuary. Mr. Eldidge is the only white man connected with the company, and is an actuary of national reputation. He prepared all the policy forms and rates for the company, and they are so classified as to secure only the most desirable risks.

The incorporators and board of directors are drawn from among the most representative and well-to-do negroes of the southern states, practically the entire cotton belt being included.

Stated Depression in Sentiment Not Dispelled by Week's Events

Such Resistance as Was Shown Was Attributed to the Feeling That the Decline Sufficiently Discounted Unfavorable Factors

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, May 3.—Good rains today lowered wheat. At the close prices were at a net decline of 1-8c to 1-8c and oats 1-8c to 1-4@3-8c. Provisions closed unchanged to 20c lower.

Today's rains, which were general from the Rockies to the Mississippi river, not only bought needed moisture to southwestern wheat fields, but are expected to clear out the chinch bugs, which, in parts of Kansas and Oklahoma, were causing fears for the growing crops. Predictions are for cooler weather for those parts of Kansas in which the insect pests have been the most numerous and this is expected to aid in exterminating them.

Wheat opened weak, lower markets at Buenos Ayres and Paris depressing values, also by the selling of Liverpool in spite of some lift in prices there. Prices here rallied on a little buying spur, but the market was not supported and a reaction came quickly. Trade was light.

Primary receipts of wheat today were 530,000 bushels; last year 278,000 bushels. Seaboard clearances of wheat and flour equalled 478,000 bushels.

Corn trade was light. The market ruled rather heavy. Fine weather for plowing and planting and small shipping demand counted against values.

Oats were dull and trading was almost entirely local.

Provisions values suffered again through heavy hog receipts in the yards. Trading was along narrow lines.

AUSTIN AND RAIT GRAIN LETTER.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Wheat: This market shows a persistent stubbornness in the undertone, which upon the favorable crop and political news to hand every day this week. While financial markets feared overnight disturbances abroad this market had to contend with the very nearly perfect reports from the fields, the enormous estimates for Kansas alone and the sufficiently bearish argument. The flour trade has also been a bear factor but on every drive good buying orders and we are bound to recognize the export demand existent, although crop reports from Europe were more favorable this week than for some time. The May position has been well *taken care of and strong interests appear as buyers of the September option on all fair setbacks. With a continuation of the favorable weather experienced to date no runaway market must be expected by the bulls, but the first setback will find a market thoroughly liquidated and we would rather buy on soft spots anticipating the inevitable crop danger. Those most bullish at highed prices are now sold out by bears and this is not healthy.

Corn and oats: More favorable weather has been the cause of general weakness in corn but the small deliveries on May were a surprise and demand for May and September is in evidence while July is being supplied by certain interests on all advances. At a price corn will be in demand but as stated last week the edge is off for the moment and we would await developments. Oats show relatively more strength than corn and the shorts in May have slim prospects. Some dry weather has strengthened up September and this option is attractive on any fair setback.

Provisions: The enormous run of hogs attracted by the high prices of last month seems to have subsided and normal runs are bringing the market up a shade daily. Pessimism bringing about a lowering of values in all commodities is of course against this market which general sentiment would like to sell lower, but we can't see immediate relief within the next six months and we believe buyers of September product will be rewarded with good profits.—M, F, Austin.

NO BIG WHEAT SUPPLY AVAILABLE FOR EXPORT

European Demand Has Saved Day—Canada's Stock Afloat Sold Some Time Ago

Wall Street Journal says: The longs in May wheat at Chicago have held the bag during their deal. No other buying power of note developed. The May wheat line at one time was large, but now is smaller than usual. It was Europe that saved the day. The demand abroad has seemed insatiable, while Russia's gain is in low grade and Argentina's supply is getting low. The big cargoes of No. 1 northern wheat from Duluth passed the investors here without any question of quality, which was excellent. There is no other large exportable supply of wheat in sight available for export, and most of Canada's stock afloat were placed some time ago.

Although crop conditions as a whole are all that could be asked, there are persistent reports of isolated damage spots in Kansas that need no winter wheat areas. Condition of soil in the northern edge of the spring wheat states has prevented a good deal of plowing and but little seed has been sown on ground prepared by disking and harrowing, which makes favorable weather until harvest more important than usual there.

After delivery on May contracts the price of the wheat will be determined more directly by growing crop conditions, the actual harvest governing the later options. Last week's timely rains nipped a crop scare in the bud west of the Missouri river, but the possibility of new scares influences sentiment, domestic and foreign. Some primary receipts indicate confidence among producers. Southern Oklahoma expects to have some new wheat on market in six or seven weeks and the entire southwest predicts an unusually early harvest. The big trading now is in July and September, with the leading interest buying September and selling July. The concentrated line of May, which has been gradually liquidated, represents a partial large trade. It is puzzling to find so much bull sentiment with crop conditions excellent, cash premiums relatively fair, and liberal supplies in first hands.

The speculative explanation is the most plausible one for the longs. The trade explanation being the world's ready absorption of the large shipments for a long time.

Corn conditions are good. The planting having begun along the southern edge and plowing throughout the belt making rapid progress. There is little outside speculation. The leading interest sold an average of 500,000 bushels per week. Receipts are light and stocks in sight are not excessive.

Much of the new oats crop is already showing above ground. The decrease in acreage is explained by the small loss of wheat area last winter. Oats went into the ground under favorable conditions, which have continued ever since. Receipts are above the average, but moderate.

Wild Flowers

(Thoreau.)

How fitting to have every day in a vase of water on your table the wild flowers of the season when they are blossoming. Can any house be said to be furnished without them? Shall we be so forward as to pick the fruits of nature and neglect her flowers? These are surely her finest inflorences. So may the season suggest us, the thoughts it is fitted to suggest. * * * Let me know what picture Nature is painting, what poetry she is writing, what ode composing now.

R. G. DUN & CO.'S REVIEW

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review says: While the business situation throughout the country shows a further slight decrease in activity there appears to be a growing confidence as to the future and the volume of current mercantile transactions is much larger than is generally realized. It is moreover significant that the recent reports of a general curtailment have been confined to wage are fully maintained and in the case of railroad firemen have been advanced by arbitration. The exceedingly favorable crop outlook which developments during the past week have in no way diminished, is a large factor in the degree for the prevailing feeling of optimism as to the future.

Recovery of western flood conditions has been rapid as is indicated by the returns of gross railroad earnings, which show a gain of 6.4 per cent in the third week of April, against a loss of 4.7 per cent in the first week, the net gain for the three weeks being 1.2 per cent. On the other hand, bank clearings in April showed a loss of 4.7 per cent as compared with the corresponding month a year ago, which is largely due to the fact that speculative markets and in part to the interruption to business caused by the recent floods.

Owing to renewed anxiety regarding the Balkan situation, financial circles abroad are again firmer while the local market has also hardened in anticipation of the important release of funds on account of the heavy reduction in iron and steel is close to the point of capacity there is no further reduction in premiums are no longer so prominent a factor, while business trade is fully up to the seasonal market. Most weather reports continue to be highly favorable and while present indications appear to be a yield of phenomenal crops. The export trade continues large and for the week to May 1 amounted to $21,652,606 last week, a necess of $1,888,947 over imports and comparing with $15,443,024 of exports last year.

Commercial failures for the week in the United States are 255, against 315 the corresponding week last year. Failures in Canada number 34, against 41 last year.

NINE MONTHS' FOREIGN TRADE IS $3,300,000,000

If Same Rate Is Maintained, Business for Fiscal Year Will Exceed $4,100,000,000

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Secretary of Commerce Redfield, in commenting upon the figures of imports and exports of the United States for the month of March and the nine months ended March, said:

"The figures are striking. The aggregate business, inward and outward, for the nine months was a little in excess of $3,300,000,000, which, if maintained at the same rate, would bring the business for the entire fiscal year well in excess of $4,100,000,000.

"Great Britain is our largest customer, buying from us over $478,000,000 and selling to us over $234,000,000. An aggregate for the nine months in excess of $712,000,000, or a total business of nearly $80,000,000 a month. Canada is our second best customer, buying from us $300,000 in nine months, equal to nearly $1,300,000 every working day. Then Germany comes third, taking $268,000,000 from us in nine months and selling us $146,000,000, more than $1,000,000 a day. And fourth comes France, to whom we sold $120,000,000, and from whom we bought $112,000,000.

"It is when we come to look at the details of the foreign commerce by what are called great groups that we get at the most striking facts. If, for example, one is told that our exports fell off in March, as compared with the same month a year ago, by about $18,000,000, so that we only sold $187,000,000 abroad in March, that might not seem a favorable condition. But when one looks a little closer, he finds that the falling off was almost wholly in the sales of crude materials for use in manufacturing, and that, so far from a loss, there was an absolute gain in the important items of manufactured goods. In the two important classes of manufacturers for further use in manufacturing and in manufactures ready for consumption actually increased in the month of March by about $12,000,000. So that our manufacturers held their grip upon the foreign markets of the world more strongly in March than they did a year ago.

"The figures for the entire nine months are such as to give just pride to every thoughtful American to whose notice they come. Out of the total transactions of $3,300,000,000 there is a balance in our favor of a little over $500,000,000. Doing pretty well, that. But a few comparisons with 1912 make it look even better. For example, our sales of manufactures for further use in manufacturing increased over $20,000,000 and our sales of manufactures ready for use increased over the same period last year $88,500,000, an increase in these two lines of manufactured goods alone of over $144,500,000 as compared with the same period last year.

"This does not look like weakness in competing power, especially when one looks at the table of percentages published with the others, and finds that our sales of manufactures include manufactured goods of all kinds, constitute 59.5 per cent of our total exports."

Imports during March, compared with last year were as follows:

"Hamlet" in South Africa

New York Sun.

To the Editor: It can hardly be expected that "Post Impressionism" will be confined to pictures in the future. A friend of mine writes me from South Africa that some genius out there has done "Hamlet" in the Taal and quotes the following example, which seems to me extremely post impressionistic. Here it is:

Hamlet—Wie is u?

Ghost—Ik is een spook.

Hamlet—Wies spook is u?

Ghost—Ik is yo papa's spook.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS La., May 3.—The foreign press takes a more hopeful view of the political situation this morning, stating that Austria will grant a further respite to arrange matters with Montenegro over Scutari. Berlin says the opinion prevails that the critical points in the situation has been passed.

Liverpool is good, with futures about three better than due. Spots four lower. As said, said, "Trade on continent very bad, Italy almost denied further purchases." This due to repeated rumors of pending labor troubles in Lancashire, is being compiled with. Confirmation from New York that interests which took the first May tenders are cancelling freight room engagements and will re-tender the cotton on May.

Weather conditions and changes overnight where very favorable. The map shows fair in Alabama and the Atlantic coast, cloudy in the rest of the belt, raining over the entire western half of Texas with fair precipitation in the southwest. Indications are for rainstorms to move on the north central belt and cause general rains over Sunday in the western and central states, and in the eastern belt at the beginning of next week. A somewhat cold wave is following and will cause a drop in temperature in the northwestern quarter, but so far no injurious temperatures are likely and the general opinion is that the cold wave is the principal factor to consider. Our market reflected little on the favorable weather prospects and on the drop of 4 points in French rentes, which caused debt in regard to the improvement in politics. Trade is mostly local on desire to sell.

Sworn to and

Good Rains in the Southwestern Fields Caused Decline in Wheat

This Needed Moisture Is Expected to Clear Out the Chinch Bugs, Which Were Causing Fears for the Growing Crops

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 3.—Midsummer weather seemed to have brought about midsummer stock market conditions today. The volume of business was small and price movements insignificant. Speculative interest was near the vanishing point and many traders took advantage of conditions to remain away from the street. The drift of the leading stocks was downward, small fractional losses being sustained by most of these issues.

Foreign markets moved in a hesitating way, apparently awaiting more definite news regarding the outcome of the problem raised by Montenegro's attitude. Traders in this market were not inclined to take a decided position, in view of the expectation of decisive action early next week toward clearing up the Balkan situation. Some selling of Canadian Pacific by Berlin was reported, and that stock was exceptionally heavy both in this market and in London.

International steam pump securities, which showed marked weakness some time ago, renewed their declines today. The first broke five points to under sixty. The preferred stock slumped five to thirty, nd the common two points to seven.

Predictions of a large cash gain this week by the banks were not borne out, the actual statement showing a cash loss of $1,129,000. The average table, however, gives a gain of $3,249,000, indicating that a large loss had been sustained late in the week, probably in connection with "over-the-counter" May 1 payments.

Some evidences of growing confidence in business were reported by the mercantile agencies in their weekly review. Conditions in general, however, are said to be still unsettled.

Trading in bonds was slow, and the market continued to show lack of a definite tendency. Total sales, par value, $716,000.

United States bonds were unchanged on call on the week.

AUSTIN & RAIT MARKET LETTER.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Cotton: Upreceipt of our last old crop options made new low records with general liquidation of the May option, assisted by the fear that there would be general war in Europe involving the greater powers to such an extent that business contraction would be inevitable. Although it is generally realized that notices for upwards of 75,000 bales were circulated some authorities assert that fully one-half were cancelled, and international house with a possible shipment for tender in Liverpool, and simultane usly there was announced an advance in the rates for ocean freights to carry this cotton.

Whether because of evidence of demand for the old crop, or an existing condition or fears of backwardness in the start of the new crop strong trade interests appeared as heavy buyers of all options and a reaction upward is in progress as this is writing. The Journal of Commerce preliminary report on acreage and condition estimate an increased acreage of only 2.8 per cent, season on the whole one week backward, ground generally cloddy and hard owing to a cold, wet spring followed by dry weather, and this was additional evidence that the uncertainties of supply are still before us. Mills certainly are now dependent upon Texas contributing very nearly 35 per cent of our total production, so that this warning would seem to be decidedly opportune.

We must, of course, remember that there is yet much to be desired in the financial condition of the South, as is well known speculator tritely said recently. We all seem to be worrying about the financial troubles of some one else, but it would be easily possible to overdiscount the money requirements, and no matter what the financing requirements of the old world may be a final and definite clearing of political matters would release hoarded gold to such an extent that trade revival would be automatic. Our manufacturers are naturally objecting and strenuously, and losing no opportunity to make known the disastrous effects of the new tariff, yet it will not reduce by one pound the world's requirements for the staple of cotton, which can only be supplied by our own south and we continue our advice to Watch the market closely and take advantage of more closely than anything else. With an overabundance of cotton and poor business conditions lower prices would not be forced to conclusion, but neither of these conditions are with us yet, and even should we have either one, the other by no means would be important. Summarizing, we believe the market has been oversold and in shape for a rally of substantial proportions of its own merits.

Cotton Seed Oil—This market has followed closely the fluctuations in the lard market as is natural at this season of the year. The crude situation continues especially strong and no doubt is practically cleaned up for the season. New crop crude is reported to be offering on this market, but no pressure. The bleic prices brought in a large run of hogs to market, but a continuance can hardly be expected this summer and we regard a burdensome supply as distant. The foreign interest is decidedly noticeable on all important setbacks, and with the reaction this week there has been a general selling of the limited speculative holdings, so that the technical position is now much firmer and the market is in shape to respond quickly to any new buying force. Refiners are good buyers at limits, especially the nearer months indicating a wholesome demand and we have confidence enough in this market to continue recommending purchases on these reactions.

AMERICAN SECURITIES IN LONDON SHOW DECLINES

Reports of Labor Troubles and Political Situation Responsible for Setback

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, May 3.—The Balkan problem was again the chief factor in the stock market during the week. The opening was nervous and weak. A fair recovery followed, but prices turned weak again, and the closing was unsettled.

The Scutari question caused acute nervousness, and selling in all quarters prior to Thursday's holiday, and hopes of a reduced war indemnity happened over the week-end brought further selling and caused a weak closing. Outsiders have adopted a waiting policy, while dealers look for the ambassadors' conference Monday will be productive of sufficient good results as to encourage support and restore confidence. In the meantime the big speculators are doing practically nothing and the accounts now coming in are said to be the smallest known in years.

American securities fell from 2 to 6 points in the middle of the week, when New York and the continent sold on the Scutari trouble. A partial recovery followed, but the market finished weak and near the opening level. Reports of labor troubles and the political situation were responsible for the setback today.

LONDON STOCKS

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, May 3.—Stock market dealers realized today. This pressure was followed by continental selling, which caused weakness in all quarters.

American securities opened quiet with prices beyond parity. Reports of labor troubles and continental selling imparted a weak tone, closing with values ranging from ⅛ above to 1⅛ below Friday's New York closing.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF DRY GOODS TRADE

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 3.—Convertibles and gray cotton goods for general purposes were traded in more actively during the week. There was some advertising of values until yesterday, when buyers who sought spot goods found that they were forced to pay slight advances. The jobbers still, are holding off from purchases of staples for fall delivery, but their filling-in needs are fairly important and should soon be accumulating in the usual volume. The mills still are hampered by labor difficulties and the output is restricted in several directions.

Of the 90,000 pieces of print cloths sold at Fall River 45,000 were for spot delivery, the balance on contracts. Prints are quiet. Buyers are endeavoring to secure concessions, but no movement has developed from level by printers at this time. Bleached cottons are barely steady. Ginghams are in light call. Fancy cottons for fall delivery are in fair demand, but needs are confined to a few specialties, such as ratines, voiles, crepes, etc. Trade is somewhat easier, but so few goods are offered for immediate shipment that trading at lower prices is of little volume.

Reports from the retailers indicate a seasonable distribution enhanced greatly by the warmer weather of the past few days. Export trade is quiet. Merchants were considerably impressed during the week by the good prices paid at the Fall River auction sales and the wide distribution secured on them.

Prices on cotton goods rule as follows: Print cloths, 28-inch, 64x60, 3½c; 64x56, 3 1-2c; 38 1-2-inch, 64x64s, 5c; brown sheetings, southern standard, 7½c; 4-4 denims, 10 ounces, 14c; tickings, 8 ounces, 13 3-4c; standard prints, 5 1-2c; standard staple ginghams, 6 3-4; dress ginghams, 9 1-4c.

WOOL GOODS MARKET

NEW YORK, May 3.—Dry Goods: Prices on gray cotton goods stiffened a little during the day, and higher prices were paid for spot deliveries. Linens are steady and in good demand for immediate use. The carpet section continued throughout the day, interest being very well maintained.

FINANCIAL BUREAU ON STOCKS.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Financial Bureau says: Information changed favor purchases on earnings. Moderate irregularity may be seen today. The shortage is still large." We would look for buying opportunities for reasonable profits.

WEEKLY STOCK REVIEW

NEW YORK, May 3.—The downward swing in stocks continued this week, until extension of bear selling resulted in an overt condition and the market rallied sharply. Early in the week the market broke to a new low average of prices for the year. On subsequent days recoveries were recorded that reached for a long list of stocks, owing to liquidation of stand investment shares and of some of the less active issues.

In spite of the heaviness of these stocks, the speculative undercurrent gradually stiffened, and later led in a vigorous upward movement, due principally to short covering.

Improvement in the European political situation was a large factor in bringing about the recovery.

Evidence of growing conservation in trade owing largely to pending tariff changes, discouraged activity on the long side of the market. The United States Steel corporation did not meet expectations as to net earnings. March railroad reports showed a falling off in earnings especially among roads in the spring flooded districts.

SURPLUS RESERVE ITEM SHOWS SMALL INCREASE

Predictions of Large Cash Gain Were Not Borne Out. Cash Loss $1,129,000

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 3.—The Financier, New York, says this week:

Preliminary estimates of a gain of four to five millions in cash this week were not borne out by the statements of the conditions made by the New York Clearing House banks, and instead there was a decrease of $1,129,000.

The effect on the bank reserves was offset, however, by a decline of $7,953,000 in the deposit account, which out reserve requirements to a point below the cash loss, resulting in a nominal increase of $809,950 in the excess reserve, that item standing now at $15,955,650.

The decline in the loan item was insignificant, showing a contraction of only $246,000. The above figures are based on the statement of actual condition.

According to the statement of averages, loans increased $12,017,000, and deposits $9,112,000, which with a trifling gain in cash caused a reduction of $1,-032,650 in excess reserves. These figures probably reflect the small amount of financing done in connection with May 1 interest and dividend payments.

An increase of $26,521,100 in deposits is revealed in the statement of trust companies made independently of the clearing house, which with an expansion of $13,233,900 in loans is of considerable interest as following last week's showing in which heavy increases in the same items were reported.

NEW YORK BANK STATEMENT

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 3.—The statement of the actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week show that they hold $15,955,650 reserve in excess of legal requirements. This is an increase of $809,950 from last week.

The statement follows:

ACTUAL CONDITION.

Loans, $1,246,000,000, increase $246,000.

Specie, $337,874,000, increase $1,78.5000

Net deposits, $1,778,415,000, decrease $7,953,000.

Circulation, $46,589,000, increase $194,000.

Banks carry reserve of $351,764,000.

Trust companies' cash reserves in vault $95,194,000.

Aggregate cash reserve $416,958,000.

Excess lawful reserve $15,955,650; increase $809,950.

Trust companies' reserve with clearing house members of 25 per cent cash reserve, $55,385,000.

SUMMARY OF STATE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES IN GREATER NEW YORK NOT INCLUDED IN CLEARING HOUSE STATEMENT.

Loans, $568,023,300, increase $1,985,890.

Specie, $61,066,500, increase $2,258,200.

Legal tenders $8,133,000 decrease $201,800.

Favorable Weather and Good Crop Accounts Caused Decline

WEEKLY REVIEW OF NEW ORLEANS COTTON TRADE

Bears Were Not Aggressive, but Bulls Seized Every Opportunity to Press Shorts

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, May 3.—Cotton was fairly active this week, with trading more two-sided than it has been for some time. Bears were aggressive, but from the first of the week bull interests seized every opportunity to drive shorts to cover. The range of prices was not wide, but a good volume of business was transacted.

The week closed at a net loss of 8 to 15 points. The highest prices were made on Monday and the low points on Wednesday. At the highest the trading months were 7 to 9 points over last week's close, and at the lowest they were 20 to 28 points under. The range was 29 to 33 points.

On the whole, the crop news was regarded as favorable this week. Dry weather allowed planting to go ahead toward completion, and chopping out to make good progress. Bulls made much of low temperatures during the first half of the week, but when the weather warmed up and temperatures were about normal.

Stories of replanting because of cold nights were used with some effect by the bulls to drive nervous shorts to cover. Little was heard of want of moisture, and the rains in Texas at the end of the week, with promise that the rains would extend to the rest of the cotton region yesterday, were accepted as being certain to prevent talk of drought.

Neither did much gained much from the controversy over acreage. Around the middle of the week the bulls were helped by private bureau estimates showing an increase of from 2.8 per cent to 3.7 per cent, but a little later the bears ha the advantage from another report showing an increase of 5 per cent.

In the spot department prices lost one-sixteenth of a cent, middling closing at 12 1-16c on Saturday and 12 1-16c last week and 11 9-16c this week last year. Sales on the spots amounted to 2,314 bales, against 1,145 last week and 1,295 this week last year. Sales to arrive amounted to 1,930 bales, against 1,803 last week and 1,070 this week last year.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, May 3.—Cotton futures opened steady, unchanged to 2 points down, compared with the last prices of yesterday. Cables were better than due but no attention was paid to them. The weather map was called favorable as it indicated that good showers fell in Texas, where they were said to be needed, while the number of the belt was dry. Temperatures were about normal. In the early trading there was a slight advance of 1 point but the advancing tendency was checked by selling which followed the forecast of showers for the greater part of the western and central belts, bears claiming that the promised showers would not materialize. At the end of the first half hour of business prices were 2 to 3 points easier than yesterday.

The market had an easy undertone until the middle of the afternoon when prices were 3 to 5 points under the last quotations of yesterday. From then on there was less cotton for sale around the bulls and the market took a better tone but displayed very little recuperative power, the selling coming principally from shorts who wanted to even up over the week end. Prices close was steady a net decline of 2 to 3 points.

SUFFRAGETTE PAGEANT STIRS NEW YORK CITY

20,000 in Line of March as Parade Passes Up Fifth Avenue Saturday

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 3.—The woman suffrage army marched up Fifth avenue this afternoon, 20,000 strong, to the martial music of the Marseillaise, blared from forty bands. In uniforms of white, gleaming with yellow streamers they paraded in the heat of a midsummer sun for three miles from Washington square to Fifty-ninth street. A forest of yellow banners appealed for "votes for women" to an unbroken wall of spectators estimated at a quarter of a million.

Inez Milholland, riding astride a mettlesome chestnut cob, directly behind an escort of mounted police led the marchers.

Behind her walked eight girls in blue with silken flags; after them came two women in yellow with the suffrage flag and its nine "yellow" states. And then came the long line of the rank and file, marching resolutely, unsmilingly, "for the cause."

NEGROES IN LINE.

Women with snow white hair, children not yet out of rompers, girls from Sweden, women from New Zealand; negroes from the northern states, cow girls from Oklahoma; newsboys from the east side, Wall street brokers, these and the artisans of many trades and callings marched in unbroken lines, eight abreast, disbanding finally at the Fifty-ninth street plaza to overflow into two great mass meetings.

The women's political union, thousands strong and broken into many detachments, was in the forefront of the line. They banners bore many mottoes. Some of them were:

"More ballots; less bullets," "One sex bears arms; the other suffers," "Peace and persuasion," "getting there after fighting forty years," "Pioneers against the white slave traffic," "Let the people rule; women are people."

Throughout the line there was borne aloft on banners the roll of women who have achieved great things.

Generall Rosalie Jones and her little band of pilgrims that blazed the suffrage way from New York to Washington were, too, clad in their marching togs and heralded by a brass band of boy scouts.

Then followed teachers, students, sculptors, decorators, social workers and musicians. When the latter came abreast the reviewing stand they wheeled, a dark haired girl of sixteen stepped from their ranks and blew on bugle a bar of stirring music. Stopped by the maneuver the line behind marched time while the little group sang the Marseillaise amid a thunder of applause.

Bookkeepers, stenographers, milliners, dressmakers and white goods workers—bearing their mottoes.

STRENGTH IN UNION.

"In union there is strength" came next. Then followed the army of the Political Equality association, a thousand white clad women. The New York State Suffrage association with its banner "Victory in 1913." The New Jersey association "Victory in 1914."

Greek, Jewish, Italin and Syrian societies for suffrage came next.

Toward the end of the line marched forty-seven girls carrying an outspread yellow flag, nine starred upon which were showered thousands of coins. Brookyn's thousands came next. Then came the college women, more than a thousand strong, whose members composed the Wellesley, Smith, Barnard, Bryn Mawr, New York University, Vassar, Radcliffe, Adelphi, Cornell, and many other universities.

The men followed and after them came the newsboys. somebody tossed a coin among the boys at 42d street, and true to instinct they broke ranks and scrambled for it. Then came a shower of coins and a two-minute block of the parade until the marshal could untangle the struggling arms and legs.

Last came the other states where strong campaigns are going on—New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Maryland. And last of all was Ohio—a solitary marcher bearing a loft a streamer wrapped legend:

"Ohio. Where women by perjury may be ruined. She has no voice in the judge's election; she has no voice in their impeachment. Ohio needs recall of judges. Ohio needs votes for women."

What Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch called the "benediction of the march," was the meeting at Carnegie hall.

Dean Summer, of the cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul at Chicago, spoke on "The Dawning Consciousness of Women Sex and Loyalty."

"The suffrage will be yours," he said, "when you have working in your ranks the woman who measures up to some such standard as this: The woman who is willing to give up her time, her energy and her wealth, if she has it, to see that there shall be efficiency and honesty in the administration of public affairs, and lead in all such movements, awaiting the time when she shall come into her rights of franchise; the woman who will give of her best that all men, women and children may have a fair and equal opportunity to enjoy the abundance of life; the woman who will have her ear attuned to hear the far off cry of those in want, the groan of the sick and the moan of the sinful, and hearing the cry, answer; the woman who will stand loyally by and demand the end of exploitation of her sex by men in vicious marriage, in citizenship, in industry and in immorality."

FREE ENTRY OF PRINT PAPER IS INVESTIGATED

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The right of print paper made from the woods of crown lands of British Columbia to enter the United States free of duty under the only operative clause of the Canadian reciprocity agreement is being investigated by the state and treasury departments.

British Columbia is the only province in Canada from which crown land paper comes in free. Western wood pulp and paper manufacturers have protested to the government that the contractural relations between British Columbia and the Powell River Paper company which sends the crown land paper into this country are such as to impose a restraint upon the exportation of lumber and wood pulp. Such restriction would prevent free entry of lumber, wood pulp and paper of the lands affected.

The Spanish River Paper company of Ontario has appealed to Secretary McAdoo to reverse the decision of Former Secretary MacVeagh, denying them free entry for their paper on the ground that their contractural relations with Ontario imposed restrictions. This company and other Canadian concerns claim there is no difference between their status and that of the British Columbia company.

MYSTERIOUS EMORY SOCIETY ANNOUNCES ITS ELECTIONS FROM THE CLASS OF 1914

Members of D. V. S. Senior society of Emory college in the class of 1913.

Every student of Emeory college, every member of the faculty and the board of trustees and every alumnus of the college whose address could be secured, has been mailed by the D. V. S. senior society of Emory an announcement which follows, in part:

"The D. V. S. Senior society of Emory college is doing everything in its power to help Emory college. It is trying to unite the student body in a broad college patriotism, the interest of the college being the first consideration; the interest of any set of students being considered as of secondary importance to the interests of the whole.

"The society has existed at Emory for several years and is composed of seven men in every senior class. Just before these men graduate they elect seven members of the junior class to take their places.

"We think the organization is 'a restraint upon conduct and a stimulus to intellectual effort.'

"The following is the written acceptance of elections that every man must sign before he becomes a D. V. S.:

MUST NOT SPEAK SOCIETY'S NAME.

"'I accept the election of the D. V. S. Senior society and pledge myself to exercise an impartial and unbiased judgment in the election of my successors, disregarding all fraternity ties, or any other associations, and disregarding all motives except merit, true worth, and manhood, looking to the greatest good of Emory college.'

"The members of D. V. S., both undergraduates and alumni, have absolutely refused at all times to discuss its affairs with outsiders. They are not allowed to speak its name.

"The society has contributed $119 to the college library for the purpose of buying books.

SPEARMAN BIG FACTOR IN DRUG STORE GROWTH

From Prescription Clerk to Successful Management One of Jacobs' Large Stores

BEN SPEARMAN.

February 8, 1903, more than ten years ago, Benjamin Spearman begun work in the prescription department of Jacobs' Pharmacy main store, on Marietta street. He took a keen interest in the affairs of the store and when not engaged in the actual work of filling prescriptions made himself useful in the other departments, and his earnest attention to the affairs of the store soon became noticeable to the management. For four years Mr. Spearman remained in the prescription department.

January 1, 1907 Mr. Spearman was made manager of Jacobs' Pharmacy Branch No. 1, at 52 Whitehall street. Under his management the store soon showed a marked increase in business, and in 1908, just one year after he assumed management, the store was enlarged. Again in 1909 the store was enlarged, this time fully doubling its capacity.

Every citizen of Atlanta knows the popularity of Jacobs' Pharmacy at 52 Whitehall, and many know the secret of this popularity, for they know Ben Spearman is at the helm of the management.

Few young business men are better known and more universally liked than Mr. Spearman. And with it all he is unassuming and unpretentious in manner, which is probably one of the secrets of his success.—(Advt.)

WARREN ON TRIAL FOR EMBEZZLEMENT

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

STATESBORO, Ga., May 3.—The case of State vs. O. M. Warren, formerly cashier of the Citizens' bank of Pulaski, is on trial here today. The entire morning was consumed in serving a jury which is composed of five merchants and several farmers. Warren is charged with embezzling more than $21,000 in 1911.

The bank is now solvent. Mr. Warren is related to about one-half of the people of Bulloch county, and the Warren family is one of the oldest and most prominent in the coutny. Former to the alleged embezzlement and bank failure, Warren bore an excellent reputation. The state is represented by Solicitor R. Lee Moore, assisted by local attorneys and Warren by Judge James K. Hines, of Atlanta, assisted by local atorneys.

Interest is intense and the courthouse is packed. The trial will probably last five days. Mr. D. F. McCoy, state bank inspector and expert auditor for the insolvent bank, was the first witness. Judge B. T. Rawlings is presiding.

TWO COUNTERFEITERS CONVICTED IN 'NOOGA

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 3.—The federal jury having under advisement the case of Walter Smith, J. L. Case and R. C. Lawing, charged with making molds for the manufacture of counterfeit money and with making and passing counterfeit money, today returned a verdict of not guilty, as to Smith, but adjudging Case and Lawing guilty of passing counterfeit money. C. C. Abernathy, counsel for the two, was given a week in which to file a motion for a new trial. In the meantime the defendants are under bond in the sum of $5,000 each.

The Science of business and the resources for increasing it!

The "science" of business involves the ability to conduct it; but the ability to INCREASE it does not lie in how much you KNOW about it, but of the resources necessary to its promotion, and their profitable application. Advertising is a distinct feature of every business. A necessary PART of it, yet APART from it. GOOD PRINTING, attractively planned, is the basis to work on; and the news of your business, "advertisingly" written, combines the real solution of increasing it. Let us put the ADVERTISING SPIRIT IN YOUR PRINTING.

BRILLIANT HORSE SHOW OPENS AT WASHINGTON

Fine Weather Brings Out a Large Crowd to Opening of Capital's Fete

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Brilliant weather and a large attendance of fashionable folk of the capital brought about a most successful opening day for the national capital horse show. The afternoon sunshine illuminated a scene of gayety, in which the brilliant uniforms of army and navy officers vied with the colorful costumes of the women.

The list of exhibitors is one of the longest that has yet gone toward making the program of the association.

Nearly all of the larger cities are represented, and practically all of the leading horse owners of the country will have entries in the ring during the four days for the show. Quite a number of horses that last week competed in the military horse show at Fort Meyer also will be in the ring during the show.

On the program this year is the largest number of fine horses ever entered in a show in this city, and the competition for the many prizes promises to be spirited. Some of the owners are:

Harry G. Wilson and Henry Oxnard, Washington; Mrs. Allen Potts, Richmond; Emil Selig, New York; Edward B. McLean, Washington; E. T. Stotesbury, Philadelphia; Robert L. Garry, New York; Colonel R. M. Thompson and M. C. Hazen, Washington. Among the young women riders and drivers will be Miss D. Atterbury, Miss Ethel McMurray, Mrs. Allen Potts and Miss Dasha Allen.

JESSE WHATLEY APPOINTED TO PHILIPPINE PATROL

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Jesse Whatley, of LaGrange, has been appointed to the Philippine constabulary, at a salary of $1,200 a year, and expenses. He will leave immediately for Manila, where he will assume his duties. Whatley's appointment was secured through the influence of Congressman Adamson.

Dr. G. P. Folk, a prominent citizen of Waycross, is in Washington on a pleasure trip. He lunched with Senator Smith.

CAMPAIGN COMMITTEES STIR BOTH PARTIES

Democrats and Republicans Prepare to Organize for Fight for Next Congress

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Republicans and Democrats are astir over the organization of the congressional campaign committee which will have charge of the fight for the next year and a half.

Announcement from Democratic leaders that President Wilson had indicated a desire to confer with them before they reorganized their congressional committee with a view to bringing about co-operation on the national committee, was immediately followed by the announcement of Representative Gardner, of Massachusetts, of his candidacy for chairman of the Republican congressional committee and the pronouncement of the necessity for a more liberal policy.

The Democrats have agreed to confer with the president probably next week. On the Republican side opposition to Mr. Gardner's ambition already has arisen and a fight between the regular leaders and the so-called liberals is on.

BOSTON FINANCIERS FACE DYNAMITE TRIAL

Men, Whose Arrest Caused a Sensation, to Answer "Planting" Charge

(By Associated Press.)

BOSTON, May 3.—The trial of William M. Wood, president of the American Wool company; Frederick E. Atteaux, and D. J. Collins, indicted for conspiracy in alleged, "planting" of dynamite in a tenement house during the textile strike at Lawrence in January, 1912, was fixed today for May 29.

The arrests of the three men last August caused a sensation. Earnest W. Pittman, a contractor, who gave the first alleged information against them, committed suicide while their cases were before the grand jury.

John J. Breen, a member of the Lawrence school board, was convicted of "planting" dynamite and fined $500. Later the present defendants were accused of having conspired with Breen.

PLAIN GARDEN SAGE NATURALLY DARKENS FADED, GRAY HAIR AND IS HARMLESS, TOO

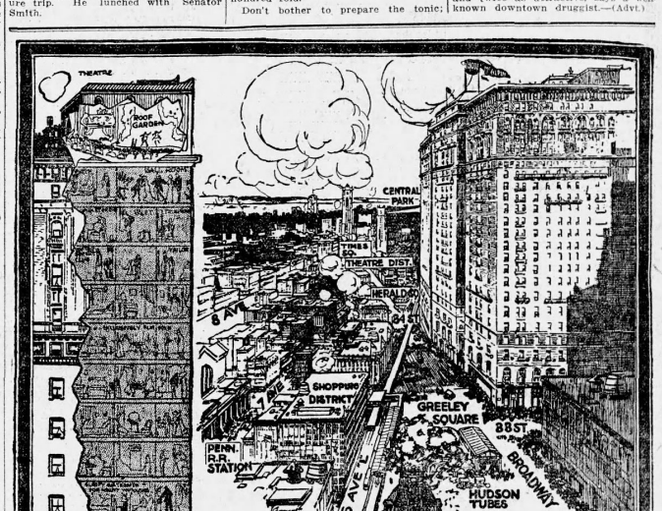

Restores Its Lustre, Prevents Scalp Itching; Dandruff and Falling Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. While it is a mussy, tedious task it well repays those whose hair is turning gray, faded and streaked.

Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 35 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair and is the best thing known to remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody chooses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell It has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time which requires but a few moments. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair has disappeared and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant. It certainly helps folks look years younger and twice as attractive, says a well-known downtown druggist.—(Advt.)

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

PRESBYTERIANS, the general assembly and many strangers and their entertainment have been the subjects of Atlantians' conversation for the past week. As long ago as last summer the meeting which will be held in Atlanta has been discussed by prominent men and women all over the country, and in a few days the city will have the privilege of personally greeting the delegates and visitors who will arrive for the general assembly.

The assembly includes not one organization of the Presbyterian church, but representatives of the four national bodies of one of the most powerful and influential denominations fighting under the banner of The Great Soldier.

The most striking features in the preparatory work of entertainment of the assembly are ready response of all denominations to share the duties as host with the Presbyterians, the spirit of religious comradeship and a prevailing civic hospitality.

Taking a leading part in the advance work are Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Inman and Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Orr, two luncheons of the past week playing a delightful part in expressing their interest in the coming affair, the first being given at the Driving club, the second an event of yesterday at the Capital City club, when the women pledging their assistance at the first luncheon told of their success during the few days following.

Atlanta has never before had a greater or finer opportunity for demonstrating her claim to hospitality than this, and that she will amply do so is expected by all Atlantians.

* * * * * *

WITH spring as an assured fact, interest grows apace in the out-of-doors, golf links and tennis courts of the country clubs being crowded daily by enthusiasts of the various sports. Cross-country rides, long motor trips and afternoon and morning tramps into the sweet-smelling woods are delightful ways of passing the sunny days.

Yesterday a paper chase was enjoyed by a number of riders under the leadership of Mr. F. A. Savage, the horses following the trail up hill and down hill, over streams and along narrow paths until the finish brought them to a little wooded valley aglow with honeysuckle.

The weekly rides of the Hunt club, which includes numbers of Atlanta riders, are delightful events, concluding with tea at some of the country clubs, and gymkana games are being anticipated by local horsemen and horsewomen.

DIAMONDS
CERTAINTY IN VALUE AWAITS YOU HERE

The buyer depending to quite an extent on the merchant, it is most important that the house should be of undoubted responsibility. It is fitting, therefore, that your purchase should be identified with this establishment. The value that you get for your money is by far more important than the price you pay for a diamond. As an instance, the better grades have advanced continuously until their worth has more than doubled what it was seven or eight years ago. From the fact that our facilities for handling them are as economical as is possible to make them, we are in a position to supply you at as little cost as the same grade stone can be sold anywhere.

We invite you to see our splendid display, at which time, if you wish to take advantage of it, we can explain to you our partial payment plan.

Selection packages sent anywhere on approval.

Miss Frances Hightower Weds Mr. Gustave Sisson

Of much social interest was the wedding of Miss Sarah Frances Hightower and Mr. Gustave Beauregarde Sisson, which took place at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Bedney Hightower, in Druid Hills.

Dr. C. T. A. Pise, dean of St. Phillip's Cathedral, performed the ceremony, only relatives and close friends being present because of illness in the bride's family.

The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, palms and ferns forming a lovely setting for many Killarney roses. The bride's table was especially beautiful with its decorations of pink and white. The centerpiece was a large silver vase in which were massed clusters of Killarney roses. Around the central vase were arranged a circle of smaller vases filled with the pink blossoms, and all the details were carried out in pink.

The bride's gown was of apricot-colored crepe meteor fashioned into a tailored costume. A hat of the same tone trimmed with plumes of the same color completed the becoming toilette. She wore a handsome corsage bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

Miss Elizabeth Hightower was maid of honor. She and Miss Allie Candler, the bridesmaid, wore gowns of white and carried Killarney roses.

Mr. Charles A. Sisson was best man.

Mrs. Hightower's gown was of white charmeuse veiled with black Chantilly lace.

Mrs. Sisson, mother of the groom, wore black satin and lace.

Mrs. Charles A. Sisson's gown was of wistaria-colored Canton crepe, the corsage being beautified with handsome lace.

An informal reception followed the ceremony, and during the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Sisson left for a trip to Detroit, New York, Niagara Falls and other eastern points.

On their return they will begin housekeeping on Piedmont avenue.

Altar Society's Entertainment

—kimono silks, suiting silks, pongees, wash silks, ratines, etc., at savings of a third to a half.

Such a silk sale, we repeat, is surely worth your most earnest attention. Such a sale is wherein we offer new and stylish silks that would aggregate at retail upwards of thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) for about sixteen thousand five hundred dollars ($16,500). Some typical savings are:

Our Annual May Clearance of Silks

Messalines

79c for $1 black messalines. Yard wide. Our famous "Yellow Edge," the best $1 black messaline in the city.

69c for $1 and $1.25 fancy messalines in the very fashionable warp prints, neat floral patterns, stripes, changeable styles, etc. These silks are in great demand for one piece dresses, in fact, some are duplicates of silks we've sold freely all season at $1 and $1.25. 24 and 27 in.

39c for 50c messalines. Chiefly light colors; 19 inches wide.

Taffetas

59c for $1 chiffon taffetas; soft and pliant; solid colors or changeables; 26 inches.

77c for $1 yard-wide black taffeta. Our famous "Yellow Edge," not to be duplicated under $1.

88c for $1.50 to $2.25 yard-wide chiffon taffetas. In street and evening shades. No black or white.

59c for $1 dress taffetas. Full range of the color card; in solid colors and changeables; 27 in.

Foulards

33c for 59c foulards; a splendid quality that all the better stores are glad to feature at 59c. 65 pieces.

59c for 85c foulards from the most famous silk manufacturers in America. Spot proof against rain and showers.

69c for $1 foulards. Beautiful patterns in standard qualities. Spot proof.

98c for $1.50 imported French foulard; 42 inches. Black only.

Chiffon Cloths

Included here are all the soft sheer fabrics now so fashionable. Chiffons and French silk voiles with striped borders; a chiffon overshot with dainty French flowers and solid crepe meteor border; silk voiles in Futurist and impressionistic patterns—the loveliest fabrics that ever artists dreamed or weavers made possible. 44 inches.

$3.50 qualities $1.39.
$3.00 qualities $1.29.
$2.50 qualities 98c.

Miscellaneous

89c for $1.50 striped wash silks. White and colors. 32 inches.

$1.19 for $1.50 Tussah crepe de chines. 36 inches wide. Colors.

79c for $1.50 silk and wool crepe. 44 inches wide. Colors.

89c for $1.50 new silk suitings, in neat patterns. 24 inches.

95c for $1.50 white pongees for coats, suits, etc. 27 inches.

Silk Dress Patterns

With very few exceptions, all our fine imported dress patterns are reduced for this sale. About every style and silk fabric that has been fashionable this season included.

$6.95; values to $25.
$9.95; values to $35.
$13.95; values to $45.

Trimmings: Half Price

Big lot of trimmings in bands, edges and fringes. Crystal beads, bugle beadings, embroidered nets, chenille and ribbon fringes, etc. All at half price.

Charming Summer Hats Have Their Initial Showing

Lovely summer styles—soft crepey fabrics—sheer and airy—almost as light as the "stuff that dreams are made of." The color combinations are veritable dreams—artistic visions made manifest.

Shapes are somewhat larger, though still classed as medium. Hemp, leghorn and tagal are the favored straws—French and chiffon flowers; ostrich and Paradise feathers for trimmings, combined in marvelous ways with soft crepes, French and chiffon flowers, brocaded ribbons, Ostrich and Paradise feathers.

Dainty French crepe, chiffons and brocaded charmeuse form soft crowns for some hats; fabrics and straws are freely combined; there's newness and beauty everywhere.

A poke leghorn has soft rose pink crepe crown, shirred at brim. Crepe facing. Fancy rose pink ostrich wreath with upstanding plume.

A mushroom hat is of all-over lace with crepe pink facing and flowers under brim. Embroidered ribbon band and bow.

Fashion Smiles Graciously on the New Panamas

Don't judge these Panamas by those wide, flappy styles of former years. These are smaller; trim, hand-blocked models, with all the smart lines of a made hat, plus the lightness of a Panama. In natural and white; trimmed and untrimmed. There are pokes, elongated and round shapes, some trimmed with feather breasts, white wings, moire or brocaded ribbons and bows.

(Summer Millinery, Second Floor.)

Allen's May Sale of Women's Ready-to-Wear

Will Continue Through the Entire Month

The month of May will be the selling time full of advantage for the provident patron of this store. A 30-day sale covers a long stretch of time, and will carry away many "well-behaved bargains," but we have the goods to sell—very large stocks of them in every department—in fact, we have too much, and such is the reason for this great reduction sale. And these are regular stocks, bought at regular prices. No "jobs" or "seconds," consequently, it must be a first-class garment, in both fabric and style, that you are offered—though at small cost—this month of May.

Silk Dresses, $25, $30 and $35 Values, $12.50

These dresses present a combination of style, quality and desirability that will appeal to every taste and will satisfy every want.

There are dresses for afternoon, for evening, for bridge parties, for dinners and for street wear.

The materials include charmeuse, crepe meteor, Canton crepe, radium, bengaline, faille, messaline, taffeta, foulard and crepe voile. There are also beautiful lingerie dresses, of voile, marquisette and embroidered robes.

The variety of colors comprises almost every shade, hue and tint that is fashionable and popular. For instance:

The range from the most delicate pink to a deep American beauty, includes all the intermediate shades.

The reds embrace every possible shade from the popular cerise to the deepest cardinal and wine.

In green there are vivid shades known in this season's color list as Kelly green, reseda, apple green and olives in the soft, becoming tones.

All the blues that have originated this season are here in complete range.

Taupe, grey, pearl, mauve, maize, purple, helio and plenty of white and black.

No matter for what purpose you need a dress, you'll surely find one to suit you among this collection, and at an unmatchable price.

The Suits Having Reduction Prices

MISS TINSLEY HARRISON ENTERS STAGE CAREER

Miss Tinsley Harrison, who has just finished her second year of study in New York, has begun her stage career in the leading role of the "Girl From Out Yonder."

Miss Harrison, like all actors who have won fame and success, will enter a stock company following her study by the practical work which all stars say is the first step toward a future. Miss Harrison will make her initial appearance Monday in New York, and her Atlanta friends are enthusiastic in their belief that this pretty young girl will bring honor to Atlanta as well as to her own charming self.

Miss Harrison is the youngest daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Z. D. Harrison, and one of a family all of whom are unusually clever and talented.

Personally, Miss Harrison is very attractive, a slender slip of a girl with regular features, curling brown hair and lovely expressive eyes. Coming from a family distinguished for esteem in affairs of state, she has the poise and womanly dignity which bespeaks a long line of gentlefolk.

Miss Harrison will come south for the marriage of her sister, Miss Courtenay Harrison to Mr. Loring Raoul, which will be solemnized at "Fern Bank," the country place of Colonel and Mrs. Harrison early in June.

The Beautiful OHIO ELECTRIC

Buy No Electric Unless It Has Both Front and Rear Seat Drive

The single drive on electric pleasure cars has kept many women of refinement from using them.

For no gentlewoman, alone in her car, likes to drive from the front seat, which under such conditions is the place of a chauffeur.

And if the drive be from the rear seat alone, it means constant difficulty and danger because of inability to see clearly ahead when the owner has guests.

The Ohio alone gives you both front and rear seat drive, with disc control. Drive from the front seat when you have guests; drive in privacy from the rear seat when alone.

This double drive, on which we hold basic patents, places the Ohio in a class of its own. But there are many other exclusive features which must be seen to be appreciated.

Examine This Different Car At Your Convenience

If you will call, or telephone making appointment, we shall be glad to demonstrate the double drive, the magnetic disc control, and the other distinctive Ohio features which have made the car famous the country over.

You will be especially interested in the stripped, illuminated chassis which was the sensation of the Shows and which has all the important mechanical parts operating under glass.

We invite every owner of an Electric in Atlanta to come in and inspect this car and notice the improvements.

Miss Beele Cooper and Miss Mary Louise Everett served punch.

TAG DAY IS CHILDREN'S DAY

May 12 will be children's day in Atlanta—that is it will be Tag day; and every one will have an opportunity to contribute something toward the maintenance of the Sheltering Arms Nursery, which takes care of the babies whose mothers find it necessary to leave them for part of the day.

Tag day in Atlanta is always a success. Last year broke all previous records, and the ladies in charge of the Tag day arrangements are hoping that this year's record will break that of last year.

Tag day is a pleasant day for many. Young girls and matrons join eagerly in the one day campaign to tag every one who passes by, and the "taggees" enjoy it quite as much as the taggers.

Usually there are a number of large contributions from men and women who realized the benefit and beauty of the work which is being done at the Sheltering Arms, and always there is a generous response from those who are tagged on the streets.

Mrs. McKenzie's Committee

Mrs. J. H. McKenzie is chairman of the following committee which will have charge of the dining room on May Feast day, May 16, at the First Christian church, which is an assurance of prompt and efficient service.

A fine chicken dinner will be served for 50c and the public is cordially invited to come here for dinner on that date.

Mrs. W. R. Mearns, Miss Venice Walker, Mrs. F. J. Bomar, Miss Lillie Bomar, Miss Elizzabeth Clayton, Mrs. J. M. Berry, Mrs. Benton George, Mrs. A. S. Wilson, Mrs. Harry Jones, Miss Mary Wheeler, Mrs. Jno. Foster, Mrs. Scott Bell, Miss Helen Mathews, Mrs. Sehley, Mrs. J. E. Cook.

Hats checked by Miss Cassie Brown and Miss Helen Reeves.

Birthday Party

An event of Thursday afternoon was the birthday party given by Miss Katherine Howell at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Nash Howell, in Inman Park celebrating her sixth birthday.

The house was decorated with ferns and roses. The color scheme of pink and white being carried out in the parlors and dining room.

Miss Carrie Helms received the girls, prize in the Donkey party, Job Wilson, the boys prize, and Clifford Golden Hendrix, the consolation.

Donation Day at Home for Old Women

Since the completion of the beautiful annex to the Home for Old Women, 61 West End avenue, and the formal opening on April 16, when several hundred called, the need of a day for the public was seen, so the first Tuesday in each month has been selected for a "donation day," when callers with donations will be received by a committee of ladies of the board. There will be no restriction as to donations; provisions, clothing, linen, books or money will be gratefully received.

Mrs. F. M. Farley, Mrs. H. D. Lipford and Miss Aiden Purtell will be the committee for Tuesday, May 6, which will be the first "donation day." They extend a cordial invitation to their friends and to all residents and strangers in the city.

Donation day is sure to prove profitable to the home and pleasant to the visitors. During the hous from 3 to 6, music will be rendered and light refreshments served.

Don't forget the day and the occasion, but help make it a success. Walker street and Lucile avenue cars pass the door.

Carroll-Anchors

One of the prettiest weddings of April was that of Miss Rosa Belle Anchors, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Anchors, to Mr. Steven Owen Carroll, which was solemnized at the Christian church on Tuesday evening.

The church was beautifully decorated with palms, smilax and pink roses.

A reception was held at the bride's home after the ceremony.

A color scheme of green and pink was carried out in the decorations.

Mendelssohn's weding march was played by Miss Ruby Anchors, a cousin of the bride. She wore white satin, trimmed in rhinestones and wore a corsage bouquet of valley lilies.

The bride's gown was of white charmeuse, embroidered in pearls. She carried a bouquet of bride roses and valley lilies.

The maid of honor, Miss Erine Carroll, and the bridesmaid, Miss Jessie Garaat, were gowned in white lace and carried pink roses.

Little Misses Lucile Anchors and Ruth Traynham were the flower girls. They were white lingerie dresses and carried baskets of pink roses. Little Mary Willis Anchors, the ring-bearer, wore a dainty white frock.

Mr. Bernard Carroll was groomsman and Mr. Guy Murry was best man.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding are Mr. and Mrs. Garrey Brooks and Mrs. Green of Macon, and Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Anchors and Mr. E. T. Anchors of Warrenton, Ga.

Mr and Mrs. Carroll left for Washington, D. C., New York and other points.

Personal Influence A Marvelous Power in Business and Society

The Rev. James Stanley Wentz writes eulogistic letter to discoverer of new and remarkable system for developing the mental powers, controlling thoughts and actions of others, curing disease without drugs and reading the secret desires of people though thousands of miles away.

British and American Physicians Unite In Endorsing Extraordinary Method

WONDERFUL BOOK DESCRIBING THIS STRANGE FORCE AND A CHARACTER DELINEATION POST FREE TO ALL WHO WRITE AT ONCE.

The National Institute of Sciences of London, England, has appropriated $25,000 toward a fund for the free distribution of Prof. Knowles' new book, "The Key to the Development of the Inner Forces." The book lays bare many astounding facts concerning the practices of Eastern Yogis, and explains a wonderfully simple system for the development of Personal Magnetism, Hypnotic and Telepathic Powers, and the curing of diseases and habits without drugs. The subject of practical character reading is also extensively dealt with, and the author describes a simple method of accurately reading the secret thoughts and desires of others though thousands of miles away. The almost endless stream of letters requesting copies of the book and character delineations indicate clearly the universal interest in Psychological and Occult Sciences.

That Prof. Knowles' system is exciting the interest of the brightest intellect of the present day is clearly shown by the scores of recommendations, among which the following, from representative British publications, the clergy and the medical profession are striking examples:

THE CHRISTIAN AGE.—"Professor Knowles' system has cured disease, corrected bad habits, strengthened memory, and proved highly beneficial in the cultivation of personality and Personal Influence."

THE LONDON WEEKLY TIMES.—"Professor Elmer E. Knowles' Complete System of Personal Influence and Healing provides the embryo enthusiast with just such knowledge as could be adapted to his own personal circumstances and inclinations."

THE LONDON MAIL.—"Professor Knowles' System embraces a great deal of erudition in a form which can be readily grasped by all who have the ability to read and understand simple prose. No better help towards success in life could be desired."

MODERN SOCIETY.—"No modern investigator along psychological lines has received so large an amount of praise as that accorded to Professor Elmer E. Knowles for his marvelous System of Personal Influence and Healing. Here at last is a man who is at once a great scholar, a born teacher and a practical helper—for the instruction papers reveal a nature which is sympathetic and of good fellowship for an ambitious, yet largely misguided population."

THE REV. JAMES STANLEY WENTZ, says:—"No one can give the system a careful perusal without becoming satisfied that in giving this knowledge to the world Prof. Knowles is actuated by the earnest desire to uplift and benefit mankind. I heartily recommend this course to all who desire to develop and cultivate their inner forces."

A LEADING LONDON PHYSICIAN, Dr. R. N. Pickering, M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., L.S.A., in a letter to Prof. Knowles, says:—"I consider your system the most complete and accurate literature upon the subject. You have treated the science with much ability."

A PROMINENT AMERICAN PHYSICIAN, A. W. Fisher, M.D., Ph.D., M.E., Principal of the Douglas Institute, writes:—"Your system is very useful to me in my practice."

"Rich and poor alike benefit by the teachings of this new system," says Prof. Knowles, "and the person who wishes to achieve greater success has but to apply the simple rules laid down." That many wealthy and prominent people owe their success to the power of Personal Influence there is not the slightest doubt, but the great mass of people have remained in utter ignorance of these phenomena. The National Institute of Sciences has therefore undertaken the somewhat arduous task of distributing broadcast, without regard for class or creed, the information heretofore possessed by the few. In addition to supplying the books free, each person who writes at once will also receive a character delineation of from 400 to 500 words as prepared by Prof. Knowles.

If you wish a copy of Prof. Knowles' book and a character delineation, simply your own handwriting:

Prof. Elmer E. Knowles, author of the new book, "The Key to the Development of the Inner Forces," copy the following verse in

"I want power of mind,
Force and strength in my look.
Please read my character,
And send me your book."

Also send your full name and address (state whether Mr., Mrs., or Miss), write plainly, and address your letter to—

National Institute of Sciences, Dept. 905-A, No. 258, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S. E., England. If you wish you may enclose 10 cents (stamps of your own country) to pay postage, etc. Do not enclose coins or silver in your letter. Postage required on letters to England, two cents.—(Advt.)

THE WEEK IN RETROSPECT

INTERESTING among the events of the week was the marriage of Miss Helen Hill Payne and Mr. Charles Thomas Hopkins, Jr., which took place Tuesday evening. The wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Bermuda lilies being the prevailing flowers used in the decoration of the handsome home.

Since her debut the pretty bride has been one of the most universally popular young women of Atlanta and a belle wherever she has visited. With her lovely brown hair curling about her face and her big blue eyes shadowed by the veil of beautiful old lace which was worn both by her mother and sister at their weddings, she was a charming part of the wedding picture, the beautiful lily-starred altar as a background for the group which included, beside the lovely young matron of honor, Mrs. Alex Smith, Jr., the groom and his best man, Mr. Frank Adair, with Bishop Gunn, the crimson and white of his robes adding to its brilliancy.

One of the most interesting of the guests was the baby niece and namesake of the bride, little Miss Helen Payne Smith. Wearing the daintiest of hand-embroidered frocks and cooing and smiling over the tiny bouquet she carried, she was the center of an admiring circle throughout the short hour of her appearance.

Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins will spend their honeymoon at the summer place of Mr. and Mrs. Willoughby Sharp, in the Virginia mountains, the young bride, who is an enthusiastic horsewoman, taking her riding togs and walking suits for the two weeks' stay. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins will be at home with Mr. and Mrs. Payne until the erection of their own home, which, with those to be built by Mr. and Mrs. Payne and by Mr. and Mrs. Alex Smith, Jr., will be one of the acquisitions to Druid Hills.

SOCIALLY the week has been rather a quiet one, Atlantians and their guests pausing to get their breath after the rush of opera week, most of the affairs having been small and informal.

Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York, is the attractive guest of Miss Helen Dargan, the two girls in their differing blond and brunette types making a charming contrast.

The pretty New York girl has worn numbers of smart toilettes at the parties at which she has been an honor guest, and was particularly attractive Thursday afternoon at the Driving club, Miss Wilson's day beginning with the luncheon at which Miss Katherine Hills entertained for her and Miss Dargan, and which was followed by a bridge tea at which Miss Sarah Rawson was hostess, Miss Wilson sharing honors with Mrs. Ervin Dickey's guest, Miss Grace Jones, and Miss Robyn Young, of Washington.

Miss Jones is a lovely visitor from Virginia. She has all the Virginia woman's reputed share of good looks and an unusual personal charm.

Miss Young is delightfully known in Atlanta, having been on several occasions the guest of Mrs. W. C. Humphries, and is always cordially welcomed.

Miss Elizabeth Wynne is another attractive Virginia girl, and as the guest of Mrs. Hugh Lokey has been the central figure in a number of affairs during the past week.

Miss Josephine McClelland, who will be with Miss Hildreth Burton Smith until Thursday, has been a charming addition to the list of visitors, winning many friends who regret her coming departure.

Miss Marion Phinizy, of Augusta, will arrive today to be with Mrs. A. W. Calhoun and will take her accustomed place among the attractive visitors.

Mrs. Bates Block has as her guest Miss Lorna Carr, of St. Louis. Miss Carr is a debutante of the past winter and will be joined Wednesday by Miss Caroline Scott, another member of the younger set of St. Louis. A series of parties will be given during the visit of the young women.

Miss Marion Roberts and Miss Anne Selden are both pleasantly known by previous visits, and as the guests of Mrs. George K. Selden are being entertained at a number of informal events.

Miss Margaret McPheeters is a lovely opera visitor who is extending her stay and will be with her sister, Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, some time longer.

Mrs. Echols, of Virginia, as the guest of Miss Constance Knowles is receiving a cordial welcome. Mrs. Echols is a former Atlantian, a daughter of General Young and wife, of Virginia's present lieutenant governor.

Miss Martina Burke and Miss Helen Barnes are two attractive Macon girls who were here during the past week.

AN announcement of interest was that of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Elizabeth Mathews Sherrard, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Sherrard, of Crozet, Va., to Rev. Theron H. Rice, D. D., of Richmond.

The wedding will take place in Crozet on May 28.

Dr. Rice, who was formerly pastor of the Central Presbyterian church of Atlanta, is professor of the English Bible at the Union Theological seminary.

THE wedding of Miss Daisy Eckert and Mr. J. O. Bagwell, which took place on Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Woods White, was an event of more than usual interest.

As the secretary of the Young Woman's Christian association, the bride has made many friends in Atlanta, and the announcement of her marriage was the occasion for the most sincere felicitations.

The engagement was announced several weeks prior to the wedding, but until the very hour of the ceremony those who witnessed it were not aware that they had assembled for a wedding.

Friends were invited to luncheon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Woods White, and when all were assembled, the wedding march announced the entrance of Miss Eckert, Mr. Bagwell and Dr. C. W. Daniel, who performed the ceremony. The luncheon became a wedding breakfast, and the occasion was one of much interest and pleasure.

Frances Parks and Mary White acted as flower girls to the bride, they being the only attendants, with Miss Eckert, of Cincinnati, sister of the bride.

The bride wore a lovely gown of white lace over white satin, graceful draperies being held in place by embroideries of pearls.

Mrs. Bagwell's work in the Y. W. C. A. has attracted the attention and approval of all those who are interested in the efforts of the association to improve conditions for young girls. To executive ability the young secretary added a keen interest in her work and in the girls; and they responded to her efforts with ready liking.

After a wedding trip in the northwest, Mr. and Mrs. Bagwell will return to Atlanta to make their home.

THE visit of the graduating class of the State Normal school at Milledgeville, was an event of interest last week. The girls were very pleasantly entertained, automobile rides, receptions and other diversions making their stay in the city enjoyable.

They were received by Governor-elect John Marshall Slaton and Mrs. Slaton at their home on Peachtree street, Governor and Mrs. Joseph M. Brown being members of the receiving party. Mrs. W. D. Grant assited in entertaining. President Parks, introduced the girls in turn.

MRS. HOUSTON DAVIS AND MISS MARY LEE DRENNEN.

Mrs. Davis and Miss Drennen are two lovely sisters, who were attractive guests of Atlanta. They are charming representatives of the married and unmarried sets of Birmingham, and as guests of Mrs. Nellie Peters Black and the Misses Black, were delightfully entertained during their stay in Atlanta.

WHAT THE COLLEGE GIRLS ARE DOING

AT BRENAU COLLEGE.

The week at Brenau has been one of much interest and gayety. The states' day celebration on Monday inaugurated a series of entertainments, lectures, recitals and social happenings that contributed much to the pleasure of the college community.

On Wednesday Miss Ione Peterman, of Dothan, Ala., gave her graduation piano recital, the event being one of much interest to her many friends. She is a pupil of Prof. Otto Pfefferkorn, and her work shows the influence of his training and hard study and talent on her part.

Liszt's "Venezia e Napoli" and Chopin's "Concert Paraphrase," as arranged by Godowsky and dedicated to Prof. Pfefferkorn, were two heavy numbers on the program.

Miss Opal Overpack, of Canada, assisted Miss Peterman, her vocal numbers, Worrell's "Song of the Chimes" and del Riego's "Shadow March" varying the piano compositions.

Miss Peterman is a popular member of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority.

Mrs. John T. Moore, Jr., of Macon, was the honor guest at the informal reception with which Mrs. Ernest Houseman entertained Monday evening. Mrs. Houseman was assisted by Miss Eunice Johns, and each guest received a dainty souvenir of the pleasant occasion.

Music proved an enjoyable diversion during the evening, Mr. Elmer Zoller, of the college; Mrs. Bowen Belcher, of Bainbridge, and Miss Beulah Cunyus, of Rome, rendering several vocal and instrumental selections.

The out-of-town guests present were Mrs. Belcher, Mrs. Sterling Ruffin, of Durham, N. C., and Mrs. Moore.

A recital in which the vocal class of Mrs. T. J. Simmons performed a number of unusual vocal feats proved an interesting event of Wednesday evening, beautiful songs supplementing the more technical part of the program.

The object of the program was to illustrate voice-placing and development, and the work of the vocalists was most interesting as well as entertaining. Mr. William Hosch, of Gainesville, gave a splendid example of voice-placing, and Miss Laura Lou Bostwick, Miss Helen Wait, of Sturges, Mich., and Miss Beulah Cunyus, of Rome, sang a number of difficult selections.

One of the best plays that has been presented by the Cushman club was that given Tuesday evening under the direction of Miss Mamie Cohen, of Madison.

Miss Nita Durden, of Graymount, Ga., took the leading role, and Miss Virginia Makinson, of Florida; Miss Vesta Welch, Miss Fanny Aiken and Miss Elizabeth Ray, of Bowman, took other parts in a most creditable manner.

Mrs. T. J. Simmons entertained with a studio recital on Tuesday evening, at which Mrs. Bowen Belcher, of Bainbridge, Ga., was the honor guest.

Among the best of the Brenau recitals was that given on Friday afternoon by Miss Mary Louise Irvin, of Ocala, Fla.; Miss Lula Adale Burnett, of Moss Point, Miss., and Miss Ellen Lucile Pace, of Shawanee, Okla. The young ladies are graduates of this year and have won distinction at Brenau in their literary work as well as in the conservatory.

Miss Georgianna Peet, of Richwood, Ohio, gave her senior play on Monday evening. This was an original dramatization of Francis Hodgson Burnett's story, "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," and in the leading role of Glad, the optimistic street waif, Miss Peet was especially good. Miss Peet is a prominent member of the Alpha Delta Phi sorority and has many friends at Brenau, where she has taken high standing in the school of oratory.

Mrs. J. T. Moore has returned to her home, after a pleasant visit at Brenau, where she was the guest of Mrs. Ernest Houseman.

Mrs. Bowen Belcher, of Bainbridge, Ga., who was the guest of Mrs. T. J. Simmons, has returned to her home.

Miss Opal Overpack, of Canada, and Miss Helen Carr, of Miami, Fla., attended grand opera in Atlanta.

Mrs. B. Nesbitt, of Eatonton, Ga., who was the guest of Mrs. T. J. Simmons, has returned to her home.

AT WASHINGTON SEMINARY.

The spirit of May was in the air at the seminary on May day. Almost each class had its celebration. Several took place in the beautiful grove of pines back of the seminary. Beautiful May baskets were presented to their respective teachers by the different classes.

A most enthusiastic meeting of the Washington Seminary Alumnae association was held Thursday afternoon in the parlors of the seminary.

The arrangements were completed for the one social meeting of the year. The garden party to be given the senior class by the alumnae will be the initial event of the commencement exercises.

Dinner Dance Event at Driving Club

The dinner dance at the Piedmont Driving club was a pleasant event of Saturday evening, several large dinners were given, and there were many small parties of friends dining together who were present at the dance, which proved a pleasant close to the evening.

Miss Louise Hawkins entertained at dinner in compliment to Miss Margaret McPheeters, of Raleigh, N. C., who is the guest of Mrs. Samuel Inman.

Besides Miss McPheeters, Miss Hawkins' guests included Miss Esther Smith, Miss Margaret Hawkins, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Smith, Jr., Mr. James Alexander, Mr. Joseph Colquitt, Mr. Eugene Haynes and Mr. George Westmoreland.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Edgar Hunnicutt entertained a number of friends at dinner, and in the party were Miss Elizabeth Morgan, Miss Laura Cowles, Miss Aimee Hunnicutt, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Speer, Judge and Mrs. Arthur G. Powell, Mr. Madison Bell, Mr. Murray Donnell and Mr. Royston Cabaniss.

Dr. and Mrs. Bates Block had as their guests Miss Lorna Carr, of St. Louis and Mr. Arthur Clarke.

Mrs. Echols, of Virginia, who is the guest of Miss Constance Knowles, was the honor guest in a party including Miss Knowles, Miss May Atkinson, Miss Helen Dargan, Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Winship Nunnally, Mr. Samuel Slicer, Mr. Jesse Draper, Mr. A. May Festival at the Wren's Nest

—Mrs. Brevard Montgomery, who so ably managed the May festival for the Uncle Remus Memorial association the first two years, will have charge of the festival again this year. She is very anxious to have all the children in West End who are interested in the work to meet her at the home of Mrs. J. S. Nichols, 82 Gordon street, Thursday afternoon, May 8, at 4 o'clock.

This year there will be, besides the coronation of the queen and the three May pole dances, a beautiful flower drill in which at least fifty children will take part. This drill will require both boys and girls, large and small, and all the mothers are urged to take this matter up in their homes, and make a personal attempt to make the festival a credit to West End.

INTERESTING WEDDINGS

Sharp-Bricken

Miss Lillian Sharp and Mr. F. J. Bricken were married in Jacksonville, Fla., on April 25, and will make their home on the Bricken estate at Bradentown, Fla.

The bride is a daughter of Mrs. Amy Sharp and is a niece of Mr. James Sharp, of Atlanta.

Mr. Bricken is a prosperous citizen of Florida and is a large land owner there.

Callaway-Moore

A marriage of interest was that of Miss Flora Fay Callaway and Mr. Homer Moore, of Atlanta. The wedding took place at Ellenwood, Ga., at the home of the bride, on April 13, at 4 o'clock.

The lower floor of the beautiful country home was thrown open for the occasion, and was handsomely decorated.

The ceremony took place in front of an altar of smilax and roses.

Before the bridal party entered Miss Laura May Davis, of Stockbridge, sang, after which Mrs. Frank Oglesby played Mendelssohn's wedding march. The bride and groom were preceded by the little flower girls, Burma Calloway and Maud Suttles, of Atlanta.

The bride was becomingly costumed in a white satin gown trimmed with lace and pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses.

The flower girls wore white and carriedbaskets of sweet peas.

Miss Myrtis Moore, sister of the groom, served punch during the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore left for Savannah, from where they sailed for points each. On their return they will make their home in Atlanta. The out-of-town guests present were Miss May Woodward, of Griffin, Ga.; Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Heflin, of Milltown, Ga.; Mrs. Ray Lyle, of Macon, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Calloway, of Locust Grove, Ga.; Mr. Berrien Moore, of Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Moore, of Conley, Ga.; Mrs. Emory Morris, of Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Suttles, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Minnie Clark, of Atlanta.

Evening Musicale

The Misses Bearden entertained at a musicale Thursday evening at their home on Tenth street, this being the first of a series of musicales with which they will entertain during the summer.

Twenty guests were entertained.

HAPPENINGS IN LONDONTOWN

LONDON, May 3.—Some re-arrangement is in progress in the office of his majesty's private secretariat, in consequence of the retirement of Lord Knollys from the position of chief responsibility. Up to the present no change has been made in the personnel of the department. The principal alteration to be noticed by those who come into personal contact with this department is that Lieutenant Colonel Ponsonby now makes decisions on his own responsibility, as the colleague, instead of the subordinate, of his chief, and Major Wigram is undertaking the whole work of the assistant office which he has hitherto shared with Sir Frederick. One change observable is that Fritz and "the Maj."—as the court newsman always dubs the assistant—accompany the king when riding, and Lord Stamfordham is thereby relieved of some attendance duty on occasions when it would be proper for a principal secretary to be present. Another effect of the new regime will be experienced later on, after the close of the London season.

It will be necessary, for the proper discharge of the work of the office, to appoint another assistant secretary. In the court environment the idea is that this post will be given to Sir Charles Cust, who has been on equerry duty with the king for more than twenty years, and is now the senior equerry.

The Order of the Crown of Wurtemberg has been conferred upon the prince of Wales by the king of that realm, in honor of his royal highness' visit to Stuttgart. It is less than a century old in its present form, but has a far older history. The badge is a very handsome affair, consisting as it does of a white enamelled cross, with golden crowns in the center as well as above the cross. There are four golden lions in the angles, and a deep red band bears the legend, "Fearless and true." The blue riband is not so deep a tint as the Garter, but matches well with the royal blue which is used so much for these decorations. The date on which the prince is to receive the Black Eagle at the hands of the German emperor has not yet been fixed.

Some of the quidnuncs are suggesting that the prince of Wales might do worse than choose for his bride the Princess Helena, the elder of the two daughters of King Christantine and Queen Sophie. The lady is two years the junior of the prince. For my own part, I am not disposed to dwell upon the rumor beyond placing it on record, as there is good ground for believing that Queen Mary has decided views in other directions. But the mere suggestion is a further illustration of the fact already mentioned that the kaleidescope of events has changed the attitude of the Hellenic royal family to the rest of Europe very materially.

Another change resulting from all this will be the final severance of the Greek from the Danish court. It is not King Constantine's intention to retain the residence on the shores of the Danish sound, which was his lamented father's favorite retreat during his autumnal holidays. It is a curious circumstance that the late King George spoke Danish less than any other tongue while within his own dominions.

Lord and Lady Decies are at Luttrelstown, their place near Dublin, for the Irish season, which has been greatly interfered with by the death of the king of Greece. Lady Decies, one of the prettiest and youngest of our American Peeresses, will do a good deal of entertaining during the next few weeks, and Lord Decies goes into camp with the South Irish Horse, the fine special reserve unit of which he became commandant after Lord Ashford's death. Luttrellstown is Lord Annaly's property, and until recently the estate was known as Woodlands, this name having, it is said, been given it by the present owner's great-grandfather, Mr. Luke White, when he purchased the estate from the Luttrells. Lord Carhampton, in deference to the vendor's wishes. It is a charming place, with a park and choice gardens.

A large addition was made to the number of plain clothes men who kept watch and ward over the king during his recent stay at Windsor castle. The reason for the increase was the fear that his majesty might be molested by suffragettes while taking his usual morning ride in the Windsor park.

There is absolutely no foundation whatever for the report published in a Troy paper that there is any difference in the cabinet as a result of the Marconi investigations. In the words of a prominent member of it, "They were never more united than they are at the present time."

Next year the prince of Wales may make an extensive tour, in the course of which he will visit the principal British colonies.

Although no precise details have been allowed to transpire here concerning the death of Mr. Pierpont Morgan, it is believed that the great financier succumbed to the effects of arterio-sclerosis—a common ailment due to the thickening of the arteries.

The death of Lord Wolseley places a field-marshal's baton at the disposal of the king, and it would not be surprising to see General French elevated to the much-coveted rank.

A wealthy Radical who has recently become a Socialist, and who derives his income from a well known insurance company, has just decided to sell his horses, his motor cars and his glorious country mansion, where he has ten servants to wait upon him. He says he is going to devote the money to the advocacy of Socialism.

The king is taking the keenest possible interest in the Marconi inquiry, and every evening his majesty has a specially prepared summary of the day's proceedings sent to him.

Portraits will figure largely, so far as can be gathered, in this year's royal academy. Several of those will be of royal people. Mr. John Lavery, A. R. A., will, it is anticipated, have completed his royal portrait group in time for the exhibition. This picture was commissioned as a gift to the national gallery, and is being painted at Buckingham palace. The king and the prince of Wales are represented in frock dress, with the ribbon and insignia of the Garter, and the queen and Princess Mary in evening dress. Mr. W. Llewellyn, A. R. A., is engaged upon a new portrait of the queen, and the principal picture by Mr. A. S. Cope, R. A., for the exhibition is a full-length portrait of the king, represented as admiral of the fleet, on board the King George V, with a line of battleships, "in line ahead," following.

Sir Hubert von Herkomer has six portraits in hand, including a three-quarter length of Lord Morley in the robes as chancellor, to be presented to the convocation of the Victorian university of Manchester; Lord Shuttleworth, Dr. A. F. Hertz, Sir Berkeley Moynihan, Mr. Justice Bargrave Deane and Sir Frederick Macmillan.

In sculpture, Sir W. Goscombe John is sending a sketch model in plaster of a colossal equestrian statue of Lord Minto, to be erected in Calcutta, and Sir George Frampton, R. A., two busts,

Shorter College Notes

ROME.—Miss Louise Bennett, of Quitman, a promising pupil of Miss Grace Whitehurst, delighted her audience at Shorter college on Tuesday evening by the genuinely artistic quality of her graduating recital. Miss Bennett's program was admirably chosen to exhibit her well rounded musicianship. In her first number, the Beethoven sonata, opus 27, No. 1, she manifested to a marked degree intellectual appreciation, together with considerable musical feeling. Her phrasing, too, was unusually good. In "The Movement Perpetual," from Weber, she showed decided brilliancy of technique. Her interpretation of Liszt's "Dream of Love" was full of true sentiment. In Chopin's "Fantasia Impromptu" Miss Bennett was at her best, the clearness of the theme being a markedly praiseworthy quality. In Mendelssohn's "Caprice Brilliante" this gifted young musician reached a fitting close to a recital which would have done credit to a much older pianist.

Misses Lillie Robinson, Helen Blomeyer and Margaret Donelson were week-end visitors to Chattanooga.

Miss Marie Lozenby, of Thomson, was the guest several days of last week of Miss Mindee Crawford.

Misses May Phipps and Katharin Rutledge were week-end visitors to Kingston.

Among those who attended grand opera from Shorter were Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Stanley, Misses Grace L. Cronkrite, Edythe Hall, Hettie Barton, Anna Denmark, M. E. Lindsay, Rosemary and Louise Lee.

Bloom of Youth Now Easily Attained

(From Popular Science.)

You no longer need to "doctor" that sallow, freckled, blackheaded, rough, blotchy, pimply or over-red skin. You can remove it, instead—easily, painlessly, inexpensively. By a few scientific process, which anyone can use without assistance, the dead and near-dead surface skin, with all its imperfections, is gradually absorbed—and a radiantly youthful and beautiful complexion comes forth! Go to your druggist, get an ounce of pure mercolized wax, at night apply enough of this to completely cover the face; don't rub it in. Next morning remove the wax with warm water. The result after a few days is astonishing. You wonder why this secret wasn't discovered long ago.

Let the wrinkled folks also take hope. Put an ounce of powdered saxolite into a half pint witch hazel, bathe the face in the solution and—say!—there's nothing that will so effectually, so promptly, smooth out all those hateful lines. You'll find this lotion, as well as mercolized wax, works equally well on neck and hands.—(Advt.)

Woman Is As Old As She Looks
No woman wants to look old. Many in their effort to look youthful resort to the "beauty doctor's" prescriptions. Their mistake is that they visit the wrong department in the drug store. Beauty depends upon health.
Worry, sleepless nights, headaches, pains, disorders, irregularities and weaknesses of a distinctly feminine character in a short time bring the dull eye, the "crow's feet," the haggard look, drooping shoulders, and the faltering step.
To retain the appearance of youth you must retain health. Instead of lotions, powders and paints, ask your druggist for

What Kind of Spender Are You?

"Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die" causes more suffering and pain than the high cost of living ever will.

There is a world of misery in this small quotation, which expresses the too frequent opinion of the uncertainty of the future and the needs of the present.

Poor circumstances are frequently the result of poor spending. In order to save, you must spend your money wisely, making every penny tell; buying good goods, not cheap goods; buying at the right time and in the right place. This is the sensible way to effective saving.

You can buy well and save money by reading daily, and profiting by, the advertisements of merchants who advertise in THE JOURNAL.

J. J. Boyd, Covington, Tenn., says: "I feel it my duty to write this for the benefit of those suffering from dandruff. In every case a few applications of Newbro's Herpicide will remove all dandruff. It is advisable to continue its use for several weeks."

The words of J. B. Thompson, M. D., No. 2 Harvough Place, Cor. Hollis St., Boston, Mass., are not less enthusiastic: "I can only speak in praise of Newbro's Herpicide. It is all that is claimed and perhaps more. Herpicide not only cleanses the scalp but brightens the hair, gives it life and makes it soft."

Dr. T. A. Moore, Duncan, Ariz., writes of his experience: "My scalp was in places covered by patches of dry, scaly material and the itching was incessant. Since using Herpicide all these evils have disappeared and my hair is soft, smooth and growing. Hair has grown on spots before but thinly covered."

Newbro's Herpicide is the original remedy to kill the dandruff germ and stop falling hair. The terrible itching which goes with dandruff is allayed almost at once.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is guaranteed to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Applications may be obtained at the leading barber shops. Be sure you get genuine Herpicide.

Tennille Social News

TENNILLE.—Mrs. W. M. Whitehurst and little daughter, of Jeffersonville, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Ivey.

Rev. and Mrs. E. J. Smith and Mrs. J. A. Smith left on Friday morning for Greenwood, S. C., where Mr. Smith will be pastor of the Second Baptist church. Mr. Smith has ben pastor of the Baptist church at this place for the past fifteen years, and he and his wife and mother have endeared themselves to the entire community. Mr. Smith conducted a series of evening services during the last two weeks of his stay in Tennille, and at the close his last service on Wednesday evening was presented with a handsome chest of silver as a token of the esteem in which he is held by th Tennille Baptist church.

One of the most beautiful affairs of the season was the Trail party given on Wednesday afternoon by Miss Alice Smith, in compliment to Miss Mary Sallie Smith, who will be a June bride. All the decorations were in white and gold. Mantels and cabinets were banked in white roses. Tall calla lilies in jardinieres added beauty and fragrance and hundreds of white and golden butterflies floating overhead made the twenty-four ladies seated at the six tables imagine themselves in fairyland. The white and golden scheme was also carried out in the dainty refreshments served, in the score cards and prizes, and in the beautiful lace gown worn by the hostess.

Misses Maude Lanier and Myrtle Smith spent the week-end at Harrison.

Miss Eva Orr has returned from a delightful trip to Atlanta and Marietta.

Mrs. W. C. Troutman visited relatives in Macon during the week.

Mrs. W. H. Colgate entertained most delightfully at a Trail party on Thursday afternoon.

Memorial day was observed on Friday, the 25th, in Tennille. The J. D. Franklin chapter U. D. Athens Social News

ATHENS.—With the first balmy spring days, the moonlight picnics to Mitchell's bridge are proving happy events. Last week Mrs. Allen Fleming chaperoned a party of young people, among whom were Miss Josephine Winn, Miss Sarah Mell, of Augusta; Miss Marion Nicholson, Miss Lois Fleming, Miss Starkie Cobb, Miss Dorothy Hart, Miss Zena Talmadge, Mr. E. L. Wilkins, Mr. John Hill Moss, Mr. Ross Creekmore, Mr. Erwin Davis, Mr. Allen Fleming, Mr. Wilson Lanier, Mr. Frank Cheney, Mr. Fleetwood Lanier, Mr. Julian Fleming.

Miss Helen Dykes, of Atlanta, was the guest of Miss Eugenia Ivey for the Chi Phi dance Friday evening.

Mrs. Ingalls, of Hartford, Conn., who has been so charmingly entertained as the guest of Mrs. O. R. Hinton, has returned home.

Mrs. William Lockett and Mrs. Edward Sternes, of Albany, who have been the attractive guests of Mrs. J. W. Barnett, left for their homes last week.

A lovely dinner party of last week was given by Mr. and Mrs. Dupree Hunnicutt, in honor of their anniversary, and also to celebrate the opening of their beautiful new home, recently completed on Milledge avenue. Seated at the table were Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hunnicutt, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, Miss Mary Hunnicutt, Miss Sarah Hunnicutt. The entire lower floor of the house was thrown open and beautifully decorated with wild spring flowers. A delicious course dinner was served.

The Chi Phi dance on Friday evening was one of the most brilliant social events of the month. Many out-of-town visitors added to the pleasure of the occasion.

Judge and Mrs. George C. Thomas entertained Saturday evening at an elegant dinner party in honor of Mrs. P. H. Mell, of Atlanta, and Mrs. John White, of New York. The decorations for the occasion were particularly pretty. In the library roses and ferns were effectively used. The dining room carried out a dainty scheme of white and green, carnations being the flowers used. The table was covered with lace, and had a vase of carnations for its centerpiece. Covers were laid for twelve. Mrs. Thomas was assisted in entertaining by her daughter, Mrs. Edwards, and her sister, Miss McWhorter. The guests included Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. E. I. Smith, Sr., Mrs. R. D. Moore, Mrs. John White, Mrs. P. H. Mell, Miss Mamie Lucas.

The German club gave an enjoyable dance on last Friday evening at Dupree hall. Owing to grand opera, the crowd was not as large as usual, but quite as happy. Among the dancers were Misses Marion Hodgson, Willie Ritter, Marion Nicholson, Sarah Mell, Josephine Wilkins, Florence Hooper, Neal Cochran, Irene Nickerson.

An event worthy of unusual notice and characterized by a beautiful hospitality of "ye olden times" was the party given last week by two of Athens' most gracious hostesses, Mrs. Bartow and Miss Emma Long. The event was given in honor of Mrs. A. O. Harper and Miss Annie Camak. It was an "old time" party, and the guests were asked to appear in old-time costumes or bring something of historical importance. While most of the guests wore handsome afternoon toilets, there were two costumes of war-time fame, worn by Mrs. R. D. Mure and Miss Mildred Rutherford. The former wore a gray silk gown with Spanish lace mantilla, and a wonderful bonnet, trimmed elaborately with ribbon and pink roses. Miss Rutherford's voluminous gown would have made a dozen of the present-day close-fitting creations. It was blackk satin, worn over a hoop-skirt of generous proportions. The bodice was cut low in the neck, with elbow sleeves, and with hand-embroidered cuffs and collar and a priceless scarf of the same costly needlework. The lovely home of Mrs. Frances Long Taylor was in every way in keeping with the old-time splendor, with its mahogany, rare old silver, and family portraits. The spacious rooms were adorned with old-time garden flowers. The guests were seated in the dining room at two tables, covered with embroidered damask. The centerpiece was a cut glass vase of different kinds of flowers, resting on a mirror outlined in roses. Old silver and brass candlesticks alternated with the beautiful china of ante-bellum days, which held the delicious repast. There were old-time preserves, pickles, salad, boiled ham, hot rolls, wafers, peppermint candy, cake and ambrosia, and countless other tempting dishes served by a little darkey, who waved the peacock feather brush when he was not engaged in serving the happy assemblage. The place cards were pen sketches, and each guest was given a silhouette of a distinguished personage. Many things of interest were exhibited by the guests, among which were old jewelry, old silver, old lace and needlework. Of especial interest were some relics of the Stephens family, including several things of Alexander H. Stephens. These were brought by Mrs. Horace Holden, a great-niece of the famous Confederate statesman. The delightful party was a historical recreation as well as a beautiful social event.

Athens is very much interested over the approaching marriage of Miss Ruth Tribble to Mr. Sam Dick, which takes place at the First Presbyterian church here on June 19. Miss Tribble is one of the most attractive and popular members of the younger set, and society regrets that her marriage will take here away. Mr. Dick has been here for several years at the university of Georgia, and has made scores of friends, who are congratulating him.

Mrs. Ora Hart Avery was the charming hostess Wednesday afternoon in honor of Miss Elizabeth Alexander, at a beautiful afternoon tea.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Zirbes have left Athens for Washington, where they will make their home.

Mrs. Stiles Hopkins, of Atlanta, is the guest of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Hunnicutt.

The Woman's Civic league will meet as usual on the first Tuesday in May at the high school. Interesting matter gleaned from the Fifth District Federation of Women's clubs at Lithonia will be heard.

Mrs. W. R. Lesena, of Hapeville, was a visitor here last week.

Stockbridge Social News

STOCKBRIDGE.—Memorial Day was observed last Saturday afternoon by the U. D. C. chapter, at the home of Mrs. Augusta Swann. Punch was served by Misses Lucy Ward and Josie McWilliams. A short program of music, recitations, and an address which was delivered by Prof. A. W. VanHoose, at Gainesville, several years ago, was read, after which the members of each chapter presented to the two cemeteries, and decorated the graves of all the confederate soldiers.

Mrs. Parks Lee and daughter, Cornelia, spent Monday in Atlanta.

Mr. Napoleon Dodson, of Atlanta, is the guest of his sister, Mrs. James Hightower.

Mrs. Rosa Lee Ellison was the guest of relatives in Atlanta a few days last week.

Miss Rubie Benson went to Atlanta last Monday, shopping.

A delightful occasion for the Joe Wheeler chapter, U. D. C., was the meeting last Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Walter Estes, at Rex. The home was artistic in the decorations of roses and poppies. Miss Alpha Born served punch in the hall. A delicious buffet luncheon was served. The prettily lighted dining room, the centerpiece of Japanese poppies with the handsome cut glass, silver and china, and a table well laded with dainties, was tempting indeed. Mrs. Estes proved a most charming hostess, assisted by Mrs. D. R. Longino and Miss Alpha Born. The next meeting will be with Mrs. J. G. Ward, the 28th of May.

To the Reviewers

The members of the Reviewers were entertained Tuesday afternoon by their retiring president, Miss Irene Smillie, at her home on Piedmont avenue, the occasion being the annual election of officers.

Those present extended Miss Smillie a rising vote of thanks for her untiring efforts and splendid service during the past three years.

Mrs. Richard Battle, with a few well chosen words, presented Miss Smillie a book as a token of the Reviewers' appreciation of all her efforts.

The officers elected for the ensuing year are: Mrs. Julien Hodgers, president; Miss Harriette Franklin, vice president; Miss Bessie Lambert, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. A. Edwards, recording secretary; Mrs. L. G. Neal, treasurer.

The house was attractively decorated with flowers, here and there copies of the works of the old masters were grouper, reminding the members of their study of art during the past year, and affording them an hour of pleasant intercourse while placing the name of the artist to each picture.

Mrs. Edwards carried off the first prize, "The Age of Innocence," while Miss Virginia Hardin was the successful winner of the consolation.

The refreshments carried out the color scheme of pink.

"Here's The Best Refrigerator"

Says Yancey - - -
And Yancey Knows!

THE RHINELANDER X-Y-NO REFRIGERATORS are absolutely the BEST—although they are NOT expensive! We make this assertion—after having studied the "Refrigerator Situation." We KNOW what we assert, is based on facts.

The X-Y-NO stone lining in RHINELANDER Refrigerators is in ONE piece—and therefore there are no cracks or crevices—making it easily cleanable and germ-proof! This ONE-PIECE stone lining is also most durable and beautiful!

The construction of this Refrigerator is so scientific that the air circulation is absolutely uniform—and so dry, that even salt will not become moist or damp! Wonderful—isn't it? RHINELANDER Refrigerators come in various sizes. We are sole Atlanta agents. No other store, in this city, has them. We sell them at

C. H. MASON

6 and 8 West Mitchell Street

Madam Yeager, of New York City

The ladies of Atlanta have every cause to heartily welcome Madam Yeager to Atlanta, for she brings with her a complete knowledge of the latest and most scientific facial and scalp work, also artistic French-American hairdressing, she being a Post-Graduate of one of the largest and most recognized schools of beauty culture of the world. Madam Yeager is permanently located with Mrs. Widener and although practically a stranger she has already won many friends during Grand Opera week. This remark was made by different women who were guests in the hotel and overheard by Mrs. Widener; "We wish you were in Chattanooga, Nashville, Birmingham, Jacksonville, Macon, Rome, Ft. Valley and several other cities where good work and courtesy are appreciated."

Marinello suggestions that should interest every man and woman of Atlanta and the entire South if they desire beautiful hair and good complexions. By Mrs. Winifred Widener, of the Georgian Terrace Hotel, who is admirably filling the long felt want as a Facial and Scalp Specialist.

Nature's gifts are our greatest and it behooves each and all of us to preserve them as best we can, and with the knowledge that is within reach of all in this progressive age. None should be what is commonly called "ugly." Atlanta need not have a single ugly woman or a baldheaded man if the individual desires to be different, for if they will consult Mrs. Widener she will start them on the road to Happiness and success (for we first have to be happy to be successful). If you need facial treatments she will conscientiously tell you so, see that you get what you need, and if you don't need them she will tell you so, and instead prescribe just the preparations that may be used in the boudoir to produce the pleasing results. There's nothing that stimulates a woman more and helps to bring out the best that she possesses than the absolute knowledge of knowing that her complexion and hair are really beautiful. It's an incentive that is truly worth more than wealth. For comparison, take the girl who has beautiful, glossy, heavy hair and a good clear, soft texture of skin, whose pores are kept clean and properly protected from the elements, and place her by one who says, "No use in me trying to have a good complexion. I haven't one and can never hope for one. My hair is too oily or is too dry, was always so thin couldn't comb it, etc." Compare the frame of mind of the two, isn't it pitiful? Would you like to change that attitude? If so, call on Mrs. Widener. She wants to hear your troubles. She wants to help you, because she knows she can. There's nothing grander or sweeter than to feel that every one with whom you come in contact is happy, and if you are not, there's nothing that makes Mrs. Widener happier than to feel that she's trying to help you to be happy, and if facial and scalp troubles are the mill stones around your neck, she can surely remove them. Her treatment rooms out in the Georgian Terrace Hotel are without a doubt all that any one could ask them to be. It's quiet and restful, the atmosphere you breathe is inspiring and now that the beautiful summertime is right here with us, it is by far the most inviting and coolest and cleanest place to rest and relax in town.

Mrs. Widener has also added to her shop two very able assistants, Madam Yeager, of New York, and Miss Craig, of Cincinnati, whose ability and determination to please can't be excelled in any city.

The electrical vibration conveyed through the fingers of these expert masseuse is truly restful and inspiring. Gentlemen are not barred from our treatments, for there are hundreds in Atlanta today who have beautiful suites of hair that realize that if they don't get busy they will soon be bald and as a last resort they even use the dog mange cure. Now, if you will stop and consider a moment, you will readily realize that any preparation that will affect a dog's skin to the extent that it will cure mange, is entirely too strong for anyone's scalp, even though it may be tough.

The Marinello Company have spent years of hard work perfecting every article they sell and the various hair tonics, pomades, antiseptic oils, etc., that they may not only find sale for them, but really bring the much desired results. They are also the sole originators of the famous Preslvatic Ray, that is truly a boon to all operators. For with the assistance of that, together with several other electric appliances, the time and money spent for scalp treatments are not in vain. Mrs. Widener's scalp treatments have been approved of by the best medical profession of Atlanta, all of which she is very proud.

Mrs. Widener also has in stock a preparation that will positively restore gray hair to its natural color if used as directed, and anyone can use it, as it is very simple and easy to apply. It is not a dye, but a color restorative. It has been given a thorough test and is known to really meet the requirements so long needed.

Below is a complete list of treatments that can be gotten in Mrs. Widener's parlors:

Electric facial massage, electric treatment for headache, tired eyes, etc. Acne treatments (pimples and blackheads so common among young people). Electrolysis, bust and neck development. Vibratory body massage, instantaneous face bleaching, removing freckles and other facial blemishes, wrinkle mask treatments, electric scalp treatment, Preslvatic Ray hot oil treatment for the hair, Alopecia Ariata treatments, shampooing, singeing, children's hair bobbing, artistic hairdressing and radiant manicuring.

MAIL ORDER DEPARTMENT.

Any one out of town desiring any of the following preparations will receive prompt and personal attention by Mrs. Widener herself. All orders should be addressed to J. P. Allen & Co., as a complete line will be exhibited and sold on the third floor of the above mentioned establishment, and in order that you may be assisted in knowing what you need, a list is here given and what each will do:

Lettuce cream, cleanses.

Whitening cream, whitens.

Tissue Builder, nourishes and builds.

Acme Cream, reduces large pores and heals eruptions.

Neator cream, protects and avoids sunburn.

Her telephones are Ivy 5400, Ivy 4907 and Main 494.

Mrs. Winifred Widener

Mrs. Widener will consider applications from bright, intelligent, ambitious young women who are considering a business career for themselves. For the demand for work that she is now doing is far greater than the supply of well trained operators. Our main school is in Chicago, the branch school is in New York, but for the convenience of those who can't conveniently arrange to go to either she will arrange that they may get the proper training for the work, also help to equip a place for business and could readily place good business women in the following states, for since she has been in the hotel she has had women from the most prominent cities of Tennessee, Kentucky, Florida, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Iowa and more than one in Georgia expressed the great need of a good shop in each city.

AUGUSTA

AUGUSTA.—An event of much interest was the unveiling of the poets' monument Monday afternoon, given by Mrs. E. W. Cole, of Nashville, Tenn. The handsome monument was placed on Greene street, in front of St. John's church, on the green. The ceremony took place at 5 o'clock and was witnessed by a large crowd. The cord was pulled by little Miss Cordelia White, a grand-niece of Mrs. Cole, and Master Whiteford Cole, the little grandson of Mrs. Cole. The monument is erected in honor of four of Georgia's well known poets, Father Ryan, Sidney Lanier, James Randall and Paul Hayne. The presentation of the monument was made by Chancellor Kirkland, of the Vanderbilt university, and received for the city by Mayor Linwood Hayne. Prayers were offered by Rev. Father Kane, of St. Patrick's church, and Rev. Ashley Jones, of the First Baptist. An original poem was recited by Mr. Will Hayne, the gifted son of Paul Hayne. A chorus of eighty voices rendered "Maryland," the well known song of James Randall, and sang a poem of Father Ryan, which had been set to music.

Mr. and Mrs. William White entertained Monday with a charming luncheon at their home on the Hill, in compliment to their aunt, Mrs. E. W. Cole, of Nashville. The rooms were beautifully adorned in mountain laurel, pink roses and sweet peas. In the dining room the table was covered with duchess lace over pink, silver vases were filled with pink poppies and pink sweet peas. Mrs. White received her guests wearing a pink brocaded gown. Mrs. Cole's gown was blue satin trimmed with point lace. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Whiteford Cole, Mrs. MacDonald, Chancellor and Mrs. Kirkland, Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Cohen, Dr. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cohen, Mr. R. S. Cohen, Mrs. English, Mrs. Bishop Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Reid, Rev. G. S. Stops Falling Hair

This Home Made Mixture Stops Dandruff and Falling Hair and Aids Its Growth.

To a half pint of water add:

Bay Rum	1 oz.
Barbo Compound	a small box
Glycerine	1-4 oz.

These are all simple ingredients that you can buy from any druggist at very little cost, and mix them yourself. Apply to the scalp once a day for two weeks, then once every other week until all the mixture is used. A half pint should be enough to rid the head of dandruff and kill the dandruff germs. It stops the hair from falling out, relieves itching and scalp diseases.

Although it is not a dye, it acts upon the hair roots and will darken streaked, faded, gray hair in ten or fifteen days. It promotes the growth of the hair and makes harsh hair soft and glossy.—(Advt.)

Two Generations Now Using It

Nation's Most Popular Laxative Keeping Millions of American Families in Good Health

There must be genuine merit to an article that has stood the test of two generations of users.

In the field of medicine none has had greater success, nor retained that success to a greater degree, than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is now being used by two generations of people. Its use in families is constantly becoming more general. The reason primarily, is that it has merit. It is what it represents itself to be, a laxative-tonic; it does not make exaggerated claims nor use coarse language to set forth its virtues.

It is a medicine, but so mild and gentle a medicine that thousands of mothers give it to tiny infants, and yet, in a slightly larger dose, it is equally effective for grown-ups. It is for any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, for constipation no matter how chronic, for dyspepsia no matter how severe, for biliousness, sour stomach, gas on the stomach, headaches, drowsiness after eating, and similar complaints arising from a clogged-up condition of the bowels. It is pleasant to the taste and does not gripe. It can be used with safety and good results by any one at any age or in any condition of health, and that person's health will improve. Every druggist sells it and the price is only fifty cents and one dollar a bottle.

ELSIE LEWIS.

Thousands of families throughout the country are never without it in the house, among them Mrs. Clara Lewis, Becks' Store, Ky., who gave it to her baby, Elsie, while teething, and says. "It is the best medicine in the world for the stomach and bowels." She writes that she keeps it in the house for every member of the family, takes it herself and that her mother recovered her health and gained in flesh by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to W. B. Caldwell, 417 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

FOR Teething Babies

mothers have for many years used

TEETHINA

with happiest results, in taking their babies safely thru the trying, dangerous teething period.

Teethina is a prescription for many years used regularly by Dr. C. J. Moffett, a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in his long and successful practice. He considered it the best known remedy for Cholera-infantum, dysentery, diarrhea, cholera morbus, colic, and worms—the dread diseases that cause most of the deaths of children. Successfully used for 40 years.

Teethina shortens and eases the child and makes teething easy. Saves many long, anxious, sleepless nights for the mother.

VACATION

Recreation under guiding supervision is the vacation planned for the boys who attend Riverside Naval Academy.

Riverside is located on the bank of the Chattahoochee River, as it winds its way "out of the hills of Habersham, down thru the valleys of Hall," and is in the foothills of the Appalachian Mountains. Just outside of Gainesville, but connected by trolley, it has a combination of advantages to offer which has won for the title of the "Culver of the South."

RIVERSIDE NAVAL ACADEMY

Water and mountains afford opportunity for aquatic and woodland sports, the cleanest, healthiest exercise possible, and that which instills in each boy that courage, agility, strength and determination which mould the character of after years.

Out-of-door sanitary camp life furnishes one of the chief claims of Riverside Naval Academy. Out in the open, they are drilled, and slept; but there are also ample accommodations in the magnificently equipped military dormitories for those preferring barrack life.

Summer and swimming are synonymous to every boy, whether it be the "old swimmin' hole," or the bosom of the broad Atlantic. At Riverside, every boy is taught to swim. A graduate naval instructor is in charge of all aquatic sports, which include all swimming strokes, plain and fancy diving, life saving drills, rowing, sailing and motor boat driving. Lake Warner forms a splendid body of water, free from treacherous currents and eddies. Constant water patrol robs the aquatic sports of all danger. In addition to the aquatic diversions, there are lawn tennis courts, a baseball diamond with class and company teams, horseback riding, trap shooting and mountain climbing. Life in dry floored and water proofed tents is one of the healthful and picturesque features of this school. Riverside's perfectly equipped dining hall is daily supplied with North Georgia's famous fruits, vegetables and fowls.

All play and no work is a vacation wasted. At Riverside mental progress keeps pace with physical development. The faculty works out a course of study which makes up those deficiencies the boys are anxious to overcome before re-entering school in the fall. It also makes advanced standing possible, thus assuring earlier graduation.

He will be better off, mentally and physically, for a Summer spent at Riverside, under careful physical and mental supervision, free from idleness and out in the open. Summer course of eight weeks including naval instruction and class work, $100; uniforms, $20. No extras. Summer session begins June 26.

Happy Home Fables

Desires and Plans

There was a man named Jones.

Jones was not unlike thousands of other men.

He, like them, possessed these things—a Wife, a Salary—some Unfilled Desires.

Chief among these Unfilled Desires was the Desire for a Home of his own.

Jones and his Wife often talked of this.

They planned it all and wondered how.

One day the Wife said:

"Haverty's Sales Manager may help us. He is a Home-Maker by profession—ask him."

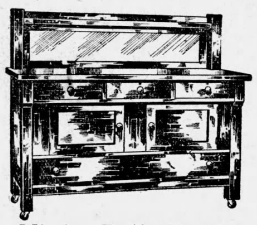

S. M. said: "Do you realize how much a dollar a week will do? About 17c a day. You throw it away and never realize it is gone. But, turned in the proper direction, it will work wonders in Home Comforts. Haverty's Divided Payment Plan solves the Home-Furnishing proposition. It is perfectly simple. Thoroughly dignified. You can furnish your entire home from our stock. Divide the amount of your purchases into small weekly or monthly payments. The price is just the same as if you paid Spot Cash. We will be glad to have your account."

Moral: There's a whole lot to that saying "Haverty's Divided Payment Plan solves the Home-Furnishing Problem," when you think about it.

Ragged Game To Crackers By Big Score

Brady Was Not Hit Hard or Often, While Baron Flingers Were Given the Very Worst of Support

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 3.—The Crackers made it three out of four from the bold, bad Barons here this afternoon, King Brady hurling steady ball for the Smithies and holding tight in the pinches. The score was 9 to 5.

As for the game, it was replete with errors, five falling to the lot of shortstop Ellam, of the Birmingham cub. Before the game started Ellam was known to be in bad shape physically, and with the hot sun beating down on his head, he became worse. After his fifth successive bobble in the seventh he fainted on the field; but following his revival, pluckily stuck to his job throughout the battle.

He was the only Baron player to get more than one hit, twice his bingles coming in handy style.

Brady had the Barons under his wing save in the second, fourth and sixth. The Crackers took kindly to Fittery's slants and in the fifth drove him from the mound, Carl Thompson coming to the rescue and finishing the game for Birmingham. Save for two tallies in that stanza, the result of Ellam's bobble the ex-Georgia boy hurled scoreless ball and the Crackers got but one hit off his delivery.

Shortstop Bisland showed some more class. His error in the fifth came at a bad moment, but his fielding throughout the rest of the battle was jam-up, five chances being handled by him in nice style. It was Bisland's double in the first which scored one of the Cracker tallies, and he also stole a base.

Tommy Long, Joe Agler, Alperman and Wallace Smith led the hitting list, Graham, who played right field and accepted three chances gracefully without an error, together with Dunn and Brady, was the only Cracker who did not hit safe.

Atlanta started the fireworks in the first round. Long singled to right, Agler walked, and Alperman kicked in with another one bagger to Messenger's garden which scored both men, Agler racing home from first on the hit. Following a strike-out by Welchonce, Smith flied to right, and took third when Messenger dropped the ball, Alperman counting. Bisland doubled to right and Smith scored.

Birmingham counted two in the second. McBride opened with a sizzling double to center. McGilvray was passed and Carroll advanced the runners with a sacrifice, Dunn to Agler. Ellam fouled to Smith, Mayer beat out a bounder to short, McBride counted, and on Dunn's bad throw to second McGilvray made it two runs.

Two more were rolled up by the locals in the fourth on Carroll's single, Ellam's double, and Long's error.

In the fifth Atlanta sewed up the game, driving Fittery to the timber. Following Brady's ground out, short to first, Tommie Long cracked a double to left. Agler sacrificed him to third, making two down. Alperman singled to right and Long scored. Welchonce advanced the runner to third with a single to left. Smith singled to center, Alperman scored, and Welchonce took third. Fittery filled the bags by walking Bisland. He passed Graham and forced across a tally. Molesworth then jerked Fitt to the bench and sent Thompson to the hill. Dunn hit to Ellam, the stick Baron shortstop booted it, and Smith and Bisland scored. Brady ended it with a foul to Myer.

The Barons got another in the sixth on Bisland's wild throw to first on McGilvray's grounder, Carroll's single, and Ellam's infield grounder, which ended the tallies for the day.

FIREMAN ON FAST EXPRESS TOO SLOW FOR JOEY AGLER

Atlanta Meets Leading Club

Mobile Series Opens Sunday and Four Games Will Be Played

After grabbing three out of four from the Birmingham Barons the Atlanta club moved on to Mobile, and Sunday begins a four-day match with Mike Finn's Gulls. The Mobile outfit now tops the Southern league, having displaced Atlanta as the result of some clever work in the pinches, and the first real hard fights of the season are dates when the Crackers and Gulls clash.

It will be a case of the New York Giants against the Washington Americans. Bill Smith has landed many of his stars through Clarke Griffith, of the Washington club, while most of the Gulls came via the New York Giants. Each team is made up of players who have stood the test and real baseball is the order of the day.

The real battle will be among the hurlers. It is said that Mobile has has one of the classiest hurling corps in the league, and the Cracker flingers will certainly have to take on new life and do good to get the edge. During the past two weeks the Cracker slabbers have been a bit off, only the hard hitting of the men back of them keeping the club in a winning streak. Poor hurling lost four in a row, while good batting has just completed the third successive win and there is a good chance to make it even more.

The addition of Shortstop Bisland appears to have strengthened the infield and the club is fielding even better than in the past. When Bill Bailey gets back in left and Long goes to hi position in right, which will enable Graham to do a bit of the catching, the team will again have its full strength. Bailey is expected to begin playing within the next three days.

After the Mobile series of four games the club moves to Montgomery.

BARONS LED WITH WILLOW

The luck certainly broke with the Crackers in the Birmingham series. According to the statistics, the Crackers were far outhit by the Barons as a team, although 'tis true that the Smithmen managed to get a better fielding per cent than the Barons.

WHERE IS BEACH CITY? THAT'S J. AGLER'S HOME

Atlanta's First Sacker Began Work as Fireman but Soon Gave It Up for Baseball—Is Now One of the Best Fielding First Baseman the Southern League Has Ever Seen, Does Plumbing Work at Home During Winter Months.

By Julian Murphey

Life on a fast express is mighty fast, but not near swift enough for one Joseph Agler, who has picked out baseball as his life's venture in place of piling coal into a sixty-mile an hour express.

There may be those who like to ride the express and are always present when "That Choo-Choo Leaves for Alabam", but for Joe Agler he had rather be out gobbling up hard rollers to first base or chopping a single to short left field. "Riding trains is a habit," says Joe, "and this habit I could never cultivate."

It was when Joe was first old enough to work that he decided he would help the engineer on a fast express running out of Beach City. Joe claims Beach City is in Ohio, but Pat Graham says it is not even located in the United States. Anyway Joe took the job as fireman for one of his engineer friends and threw coal into a powerful engine for a few weeks before he found that baseball is a much asier living, especially for one who is so good at the pastime as himself. It took Joe some time to reach the conclusion that he is a better ball player than fireman, but when he did get next it was there to stick and now it is never again.

STARRED FROM THE START.

It took Agler just about two games to attract notice and ever since he has been playing a grand game of ball. Like all youngsters he at first had the idea that he was a good pitcher and it took one or two hard frailings to convince him that it was easier to field the ball at first after some hurler's curve had been slammed out hard than it is to fool a batter.

Since an eventful game in which Joe was slammed for some twenty hits he has stuck to first base work and a study of the work at the bag has made him a real genius at this station. Left handed, alert and possessing a great knowledge of inside ball Agler is doubly valuable to his club. He always throws the ball to the proper place and is a great help to his team mates in pulling down many high throws at first.

Joe is now playing his second season with Atlanta, and if he goes as well as he should it will doubtless be his last in minor leaguedom. Too many of the majors need good first basemen for Joe to stick around down this way any length of time and with a bit of improvement in the use of the shapstick he will be right around the big circuit.

When it is pointed out that Joe is a ball player only half is told for this lad is certainly some plumber. He has a monopoly on the plumbing trade in Beach City. This may be a bunch of work or none at all. According to Joe he is kept busy all winter mending bursted pipes while Whitey Alperman contends that he never sees anything like a water pipe after leaving Atlanta, leaving the inference that Beach City is not much town.

Anyway Joe can tell you a lot about the plumbing business, showing that he has practiced the trade or taken lessons from a mighty good correspondence school for a long while. He is either a good bluffer or an A-1 plumbre.

MACKMEN WANT TRUCE FLAGS CLAIM WASHINGTON PLAYERS

It would be difficult to conceive of two teams being more bitter in any branch of sport where the personal contact equation is not supposed to be taken into consideration.

Because of many puerile complaints against alleged roughness, the Nationals refer to the Philadelphians as the "squealers." There is a deep-rooted conviction in Camp Griffith that certain of the Athletics should carry quarantine flags as their proper colors, and if there are any white feathers in the make-up of the Mackmen they are likely to be strewn about the field almost any time the teams clash.

In Saturday's game Ainsmith bumped McInnes so hard that the Philadelphian was stretched upon the ground. Baker and Shanks got tangled up when an effort was made to retire the latter at third base, and Baker was spiked by Moeller when the Washingtonian slid into the bag at the beginning of the game.

These cases may all have been accidents, but, coupled with the experience Eddie Collins and "Chick" Gandil had last season, they cannot be charged with being the result of any unwonted love the rival players entertain for one another.

The Athletics think they have the better team; the Nationals think they are the stronger, and before a decision in the matter is reached there is likely to be considerable jolting and the use of language that is not rated as eminently suitable for sessions of foreign mission societies and kindred organizations.—Washington Post.

BASEBALL IN PARIS.

PARIS, May 3.—The baseball season in Paris opened with the defeat yesterday of the Racing Club de France with the Latin Quarter American Artists. The score was 22 to 10. Most of the racing club's players were Americans, but the coachers were French, shouting "Avaance Avancaz" for stealing a base. Levy, the American painter, was the champion batter, making five hits out of six times up.

Crackers Are Improving at Fielding Gams

Club Is Now Outhitting All Rivals, and at the Same Time Showing a Better Average at Fielding End

In the past week the Atlanta club has greatly improved at the fielding end of the game and this coupled with the usual strong hitting has served in winning three of four games from the Barons and placed the Smith club solidly in second place. During the first ten days of the season the fielding was erratic and caused the loss of more than one game, but of late this has improved wonderfully.

The club has boosted the fielding average beyond that of the rival teams, while the hitting has always been right at the top. Good hitting wins the game but good fielding goes a long way towards saving more than one close contest. It takes the two combined to show the best results.

In the games to date the Atlanta club has hit for an average of .271, against .237 for the opposing clubs. In making this average the Crackers have tallied 107 runs on 176 hits, against 78 runs on 144 hits for the opposing teams.

In making the averages shown above, the Atlanta club has played in 21 games, losing five to Nashville and two to Birmingham. Against this the team has won six straight games from Chattanooga, six of eight from Birmingham and two of seven from Nashville. This is a bad showing against the Vols.

Here are the batting figures:

NEWNAN OUT FOR PRIZE

NEWNAN, Ga., May 3.—The Georgia-Alabama league opens the season Monday, May 5, with LaGrange playing in Newnan, Anniston playing in Gadsden and Opelika playing in Talladega.

Much rivalry exists between the teams and also considerable rivalry is being manifested between the different cities as to the crowds on opening day, as each city is endeavoring to have the largest attendance at the initial game.

The Newnan Baseball association, with the assistance of the Newnan board of trade, has canvassed the city and every mercantile and manufacturing establishment, with the exception of only a few, have agreed to declare a half holiday in order for the employes to attend the baseball game. Elaborate preparations are being made to have a gala parade through the streets of Newnan, headed by the Carrollton band, with the ball teams and fans following. No amount of work or trouble is being spared, and the people behind the movement are confident of making a record for the largest attendance of any city in the Georgia-Alabama league.

Another Great Sprinter Sets Two Records

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., May 3.—World sprinting records were smashed in the inter-scholastic track meet here yesterday by Robinson, the speedy school boy from Mercersburg academy.

In the first heat of the 100-yard dash his time was 9 3-5 seconds, equalling the world's record for the distance in any kind of competition.

COBB SHOULD STEAL MORE

Ty Cobb is handicapped in going after the base-stealing and run-getting records this year by being late in reporting. But that he's going to set sail for Milan, Collins and the other leaders in these two departments is shown by the fact that at his solicitation he is going to bat fourth instead of third.

That brings him up just after Crawford instead of just before Wahoo Sam. And in Detroit they say that there's a reason.

The supposition is that whether he has any grounds for the belief or not Cobb is of the opinion that he would have led the base stealers last season if Crawford had not been next at bat. Cobb, so they say, thinks that Crawford purposely fouled many a ball when he had a big lead going down to second. And if Crawford didn't foul the ball Sam slammed it out.

All of which is absolutely contrary to the story widely circulated last season to the effect that Cobb owed much of his wonderful success on the paths to the fact that Crawford followed him at bat.

Tech Mops in 2nd Straight From Sewanee

Pitching of Eubanks, Montague's Classy Fielding, and Scrappy Moore's Home-Run Were Features

Outclassing Sewanee in every department of play Saturday afternoon, the Yellowjackets defeated the Tigers 5 to 1, making a clean sweep of the two-game series. Heiseman had his regular first team in the fracas throughout the battle, the infield showing much more snap and vigor than it has this season.

Smoey Eubanks hurled for the Jackets and save for one inning had Sewanee at his mercy. Only once could the Tigers get a man to third base. In the second frame, McGoodwin doubled to deep center, went to third on Gordon's infield out, and scored on Erwin's sacrifice fly to Wooten in center.

The Tigers got but four bingles off Eubanks, two of them falling to the lot of Pink McGoodwin. Fanning and Dinkins managed to get the other hits. The Jacket hurler also gave not a single base on balls and tanned eight of the Mountaineers.

Pax Montague was one of the shining lights. The Tech captain played one of the best fielding games that has ever been seen on the local college diamond. Twice he robbed Sewanee players of hits, once going way back of second to flag Jones' grounder and throw him out at first, and in the last stanza flagging Armbruster's liner between first and second with his gloved hand.

Jack Donaldson also shone in the field, getting two pretty pickups.

Wooten, Scrappy Moore and Pitts each got a couple of bingles, Moore's coming in the first inning. It was a clean homer to deep center field, the first to be knocked on Grant field.

Johnny Gordon hurled the whole distance for Sewanee. Save for the first inning he went good. In the fourth the Jackets got three hits and scored a brace of tallies, aided largely by an error on the part of Fanning.

Neither the Jackets nor the Tigers had much chance to do any base running. Tech got but a single legitimate stolen base, one being complimentary when the Jackets had a man on third.

Tech rapped on Gordon in the first round. Following Wooten's pop-up to Fanning, who, by the way, played a good game with twelve chances and only one error, Scrappy Moore slammed his circuit smash to the bank. Pitts singled to left. F. Montague singled to center, advancing Pitts a sack. Pound slapped a double to deep left, and Pitts and Montague romped home. Another single and a hit by pitcher filled the bags. Gordon then steadied down and by whiffing Attridge and allowing Eubanks to go out on an easy grounder, retired the side.

The game rocked along to the fourth. In that inning, Attridge started with a strike-out. Eubanks singled over first. Amason, running for the Tech hurler, stole second. Wooten beat out a slow roller to first. Fanning took the pickup, and threw wild to third to catch Amason, who scored. On Moore's single to center Wooten went to third. Moore stole second. Pitts went out, Fanning to Jones, and Wooten crossed the pan. Moore tried to steal the platter and was caught by a pretty throw, Gordon to Hammond to Dinkins.

Again Georgia Wins Handily

Third String Pitcher Sent Against Tennessee and Hurls Star Game

ATHENS, Ga., May 3—Hitchcock, Georgia's third pitcher, faced Dawson of Tennessee today, getting the better of the argument. Dawson was decidedly wild and received poor support. Georgia's sluggers supported him with their usual good offensive work and scored freely every man hitting safely at least but Hitchcock. When the dust finally cleared from the battle the count stood 9 to 3 in favor of Georgia.

This makes the Georgia-Tennessee series stand 2 straights for Georgia. For the Georgians, Harrison's one hand stab and hitting were the features. For the visitors Cameron starred with the stick. Hitchcock showed good form all the way through keeping his hits well scattered.

Tennessee rallied in the ninth and filled the bags but could only score once. The visitors were simply outclassed and at no time during the series was Georgia in danger.

Breaks Broad Jump Record for Women

LYNCHBURG, Va., May 3.—At the annual athletic meet at the Randolph Macon Woman's college here today, Miss Dorothy Cure, of Roanoke, Va., carried off the honors and it is claimed broke the world's record for women on a running broad jump. Miss Cure cleared 15 feet 2 1-2 inches, breaking the college record by 9 1-2 inches, and, it is thought, the world's record by 8 1-2 inches.

GOOD LINE TECH SUBS

JACKET SUBS BIG HELP

Good substitutes who threatened to win varsity places have caused the Tech regulars to sit up and take notice with the result that the Jacket club has come to life and right now is playing a jam-up article of ball. The two wins from the Sewanee team showed just what is in the Tech bunch and with more improvement the Georgia series will be interesting.

AMERICAN

NAPS 11; BROWNS 8.

ST. LOU'S, May 3.—Cleveland won from St. Louis today, 11 to 8. St. Louis used four pitchers, none of whom was effective except Stone. St. Louis hit Cleveland's pitchers hard, knocking Bastlette and Mitchell off the mound.

Manager Stovall was ejected from the game in the sixth for protesting a called strike. As he was leaving the field he pulled Umpire Ferguson's cap from his head and threw it to the ground. Stovall then came back for his glove and as he walked past Ferguson he spit on the umpire's coat. Score:

Cleveland .. .. ..011 107 100—11 11 3
St. Louis .. .. .. 001 222 100— 8 13 3

Baskette, W. Mitchell, Gregg and Carisch; Hamilton, Adams, Allison, Stone and Agnew. Time, 2:50. Umpires, Ferguson and O'Loughlin.

ATHLETICS 8; YANKS 6.

NEW YORK, May 3.—The Athletics again defeated the New York Americans today, the score being 8 to 6. Schultz, the first New York pitcher, twirled a great game, but received miserable support. The locals delighted a big crowd with their playing in the first four innings, but went to pieces in the fifth. Sweeney's work particularly was poor, the visitors stealing seven bases.

Houck, who was knocked out of the box yesterday, was treated the same way today. Bush, who pitched the last seven innings for the Athletics, was strong until the ninth, when with two out, he walked stump and Caldwell, and Daniels scored the pair with a triple. Bush then struck out Chase. Score:

Philadelphia .. .. .000 050 120—8 11 0
New York .. .. .110 100 012—6 8 5

Houck, Bush and Thomas; Schultz, Keating, Klepfer and Sweeney.

Time, 2:18. Umpires, Dineen and Hart.

WHITE SOX 6, TIGERS 4.

DETROIT, May 3.—After crashing through Detroit's defense again and again to score runs, only to have the locals come back and tie the count, Chicago today, in the wildest game played here this season, finally found a way to victory in the eleventh inning. The score was 6 to 4.

Harry Lord's sharp single to left brought Russell home, after the pitcher reached first on an error and advanced on a pass to Rath. Rath then cinched the game by racing home on an infield out.

It was Detroit's ninth straight defeat, seven of them at the hands of Chicago. As was the case in several of this week's contests, Detroit failed utterly to show offensive strength with runners on the bases ready to score. Battery errors also helped Chicago to several of their scores.

SENATORS 2, RED SOX 1.

BOSTON, May 3.—Washington defeated Boston 2 to 1 in a lively contest this afternoon. Engel, who pitched until one man had been retired in the seventh inning, gave ten bases on balls but was not hit safely by Boston. Three of his passes came in the second inning, and with a man hit, gave the Boston team their only tally.

Johnson finished the game for Washington, sharp fielding alone saving him from being scored upon. Washington got only three hits off Bedient in the first five innings, but tied the score in the seventh on an error by Engle, a base on balls and Morgan's single.

Moeller hit for two bases in the eighth and scored the winning run on Milan's hit to center.

MALONEY MAY BE LOOKOUT

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 3.—Manager Elberfeld will meet Outfielder Maloney, formerly of the Gulfs, at Montgomery tomorrow. If the salary can be arranged he will be placed in left, restoring Harbison to the utility roll.

One twirler is expected to go as soon as Roy Golden reports.

NATIONAL

CINCINNATI, 9; CHICAGO, 4.

CHICAGO, May 3.—Cincinnati batted Overall and Lavender opportunely and scored an easy victory over Chicago in the final game of the series, 9 to 4. Clarke made 4 hits in as many times at bat, driving in five runs. Egan made three doubles and a single and forced a han out in five times at bat, scoring four runs for his team.

Pitcher Overall, the California giant, played in major league baseball for the first time since the close of the 1910 season and was wild. After the bases were filled with none out and the score tied in the eighth inning, he was relieved by Lavender, who was unable to check the onslaught of the visitors.

BROOKLYN, 4; BOSTON, 1.

BROOKLYN, May 3.—Nap Rucker notched his first victory in four attempts on Ebbett field this season when he beat Boston, 4 to 1, today.

The visitors worried the star left-hander from start to finish, getting men on bases in all but two innings, but he was given sensational support at critical periods except in the fourth, when a fumble by Stengel helped in the only Boston tally. With one out in this inning, Sweeney singled ,took second on Stengel's error, and cantered home when Mann made the first of his three safe drives.

Brooklyn made their hits off Gervais count. Devlin was spiked on the hand by Daubert in the fourth and retired.

PHILADELPHIA, 3; NEW YORK, 2.

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—Magee's single and steal of second and Ludeus' double, which scored the former after two men were out in the ninth inning, gave Philadelphia the victory over New York today by 3 to 2. Mathewson and Chalmers had a great battle.

Passes to Snodgrass and Shafer, their double steal and Doyle's single gave New York two runs in the first inning. In the eighth, with one out, Doolan singled. Cravath, who batted for Killifer, sent the first ball pitched him into deep center for a home run. Chalmers was in trouble in four innings after the first, mainly through his passes, but every time he closed the bases grew ready to score. Battery errors also helped Chicago to several of their scores.

ST. LOUIS, 6; PITTSBURG, 3.

PITTSBURG, May 3.—Poor fielding by Pittsburg and the easy manner in which St. Louis collected hits off O'Toole made it three out of four for the visitors this afternoon. Konetchy starred at the bat, getting two triples and a single off O'Toole, who allowed thirteen hits before Robinson took his place in the eighth.

Pittsburg hit Steele hard in the first two innings, and Harmon took his place in the third and held things nicely. Vlox's wild throw over Simon's head in an effort to break up the double steal gave the Cardinals two runs in the third inning. Byrne's error, followed by Sheckard's two-bagger, added another in the sixth. The other runs were made on clean hits. In sliding to the plate on the double steal in the third inning, Third Baseman Mike Mowrey wrenched his ankle so badly that he had to be carried off the field. He will be out of the game for a week. Mowrey did not accompany the team to Chicago, but will receive treatment here.

Sets New Record In the Shot-Put

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 3.—Miss Elizabeth Hardin of Elizabeth, N. J., today broke the world's record for women in the shot-put at the Vassar college field day with a put of 32 feet 3-4 inch. The previous record was made by Miss Inez Milholland, the suffragette leader, in 1909.

Atz' Tally in Tenth Won Out

Jakey Singled, Was Sacrificed to Second, Stole Third, and Scored on Fly in Tenth

NEW ORLEANS, May 3.—Atz singled, went to second on a sacrifice, stole third and scored on a sacrifice fly with the winning run in the tenth inning. New Orleans defeating Memphis in the last of the series, 4 to 3.

After both teams had scored in the first inning through errors, the locals forged ahead by the hitting of Clancy and Hendryx in the third. Abstein knocked a home run after Baerwald had singled in the sixth and give Memphis the lead.

McIntyre, former Cincinnati pitcher, batted For Taylor in the seventh and his pinch-hit drove in Knaupp with a tying run. Brilliant fielding shut off the visitors during the last four innings. Brenton pitching.

Long Leading Crackers With High Average

Hitting to Date Has Been Exceptionally Hard, Each Club Boasting of Many Players Over Three Hundred.

Dave Robertson, Outfielder King and Tommy Long are the three leading stickers in the Southern association of baseball leagues, according to figures on games this season through those of last Tuesday.

With the exception of Bill Campbell, Mobile's hefty hurler, there are none who lead this trio. Robertson tops the bunch with an average of .417; King, of Chattanooga, comes next with a .361 showing, while Long follows him. His average is .355, but a few points ahead of that of Lantzen, of Mobile, and Harry Welchonce.

The figures show that Atlanta had more batters who were hitting over .200 through that time than any team in the league. They were eleven in all, Mobile, Chattanooga, Montgomery and New Orleans having nine each, Memphis seven, Birmingham six and Nashville five.

The Atlanta players who hit over .200 were Long, Welchonce, Smith, Graham, Alperman, Bailey, Price, Dunn, Keating, DeBard and Musser.

There were sixteen players who hit .300 or better in the league. Of these Atlanta claimed five, Mobile three, Chattanooga, Montgomery and Birmingham two each; Memphis one, and New Orleans one. Nashville had not a single .300 hitter.

Here is the dope on the .200 hitters through games of last Tuesday:

Sousa Is Star Trap Shooter

Twenty crack shots, composed of local stars and visiting stars, among the latter being John Philip Sousa, the famous musician, made some record runs Saturday afternoon at the first shoot of the Brookhaven Gun club.

The field was led by George Maxwell, of the Remington Arms Union Metallic Cartridge company, who cracked seventy-four out of a possible seventy-five. H. D. Hilliard, another crack shot of the Remington company, scored forty-nine out of a possible fifty.

Mr. Sousa, returned to Atlanta that he is equally as adept with the breech-loader as he is with the baton. The man who has made the band that bears his name, who is watchword for martial music, potted the pigeons for a score of seventy-one out of a possible seventy-five.

J. M. Barrett, a crack shot from Augusta, made a score of seventy-two out of a possible seventy-five. Mr. Barrett had an unfinished run in Macon of 95, and in College Park of 45, giving him a run of 140 out of a possible 150.

George Maxwell, 74 out of 75; J. P. Sousa, 71 out of 75; J. M. Barrett, 72 out of 75; Robert Maddox, 69 out of 75; W. Huff, 71 out of 75; J. D. Allen, 67 out of 75; M. P. Brigman, 70 out of 75; E. H. Dubanke, 73 out of 75; Dr. Edmondson, 70 out of 75; Mr. Dabney, 49 out of 75; Dr. Pearson, 51 out of 50; E. M. Daniel, 44 out of 50; C. E. Goodrich, 45 out of 50; H. D. Whitney's Horse Is Third in Big Race

NEW MARKET, England, May 3.—The two thousand guineas stakes for three-year-olds over a mile course was won by W. Raphael's Louvois. Gragamore was second and H. P. Whitney's Meeting House was third. Fifteen ran. The French winner was ridden by Johnnie Reiff, and the American horse by F. O'Neill, both American boys.

Will Quit Track

CHICAGO, May 3.—Irn N. Davenport, the great half-miler, is en route to Hot Springs, Ark., to begin training for his last race. He has announced he will retire from active athletics after competing in the Central A. A. U. championships at Northwestern field on June 21. He hopes to crown his career on the cinder path by establishing a new world's record for the half-mile.

"QUIT LATE HOURS AND THE WHITE LIGHTS IF YOU WANT TO BOX," SAYS JIMMY PERRY

Jimmy Perry Is Out to Beat Wild-cat Ferns and Has Trained Faithfully for His Coming Match

Monday night in Kansas City Jimmy Perry will fight Wildcat Ferns a ten-round bout which will go far toward deciding the welterweight championship.

If Jimmy licks Ferns, and it is a strong hunch that he will do for the Wildcat this trip, it will be Georgia ozone, Georgia food and water, and a Georgia training camp that helped him te the victory.

In a quiet, hard working manner Perry has been plugging away in a camp six miles beyond East Atlanta for a month in anticipation of the Ferns fight. He has done all the training stunts that a boxer generally does, and he has done a lot that none ever do until he has come to a point where he is in better condition than he ever was before in his career.

Perry, be it known, hails from Pittsburg, and many times has fought before an Atlantic public. He it was that licked Clarence English here in a ten-round bout last spring, he it was that fought Wildcat Ferns a draw here about a month ago. Now he has managed to get another match with Ferns, and hopes to put the k. o. to him this time.

As Jimmy pulled out of the Terminal station last Tuesday night on his way to Kansas City he declared that he was trained to a hair and that there was no comparison between his condition now and the shape he was in when he met Ferns here.

"That fellow had better look out this time," he declared. "I am going to beat him."

Perry is coming back to Atlanta. He likes it here. He believes that his training camp near the Gate City is as good as could be found anywhere.

As far as seclusion goes, one would have to search pretty far before finding a camp that could beat the one Perry has been using. It is a good six miles beyond the limits of the car line and is approached only by a long, red winding road, cutting deep through the hills and bumping along through rocky fields and dense thickets.

Over that road Perry has been hiking every day, running his six miles to East Atlanta and back, and working out morning and afternoon in the big house of twelve rooms which he obtained for the purpose.

With the exception of a grand piano, battered and yellowed, in the front room, there is little in the house, save broken window panes, bare white-washed walls and echoing footsteps.

Yet it is a good place to work. In a little out-house Perry had a punching bag, not far from the back door he had a big tree against which the daily hackings of an axe have had but little effect, two yards from the back door he had a well, with an old oaken bucket which took many pounds of muscle to draw to the top every day. He had rail fences to leap, creeks to vault, stones to hurl, and plenty of good fresh air to breathe.

Fishing seems to have been the only amusement for the welter-weight fighter.

TRIED FISHING.

"And it certainly taught me patience," said Jimmy, "for the tin cans, a crawfish, and six minnows, is all the loot which he could pull out of Sugar Creek."

In his old house, rapidly falling to pieces, and surrounded by acres of cotton fields and woods and red hills, Jimmy has been boxing for weeks. Sometimes he has had sparring partners. Jimmy Grant, the light-weight fighter who is expected to box here in the next show, has fought with him there.

Oftentimes Perry has done only shadow boxing. Then would come the old plantation negroes and wondering farmers, and stand with mouths agape to see this veritable maniac splitting the air with lefts and uppercuts.

"Are you a prize-fighter?" they would ask. "Where do you hit when you box? Can you punch a man in the face? Is it fair to hit 'im in the stomach? Why do you wear those funny clothes?"

So it went for weeks and weeks. Ever since his last bout Perry has been doing these stunts. He feels that he is coming into his own and he is.

He is twenty-eight years old, he has been fighting for about ten years, has beaten the welter-weight champion of England, and is as good a choice as any right now for the world's title.

Jimmy Perry's real name is Frank Wittier. He assumed his fighting name on account of objections to the profession from his mother. Later, however, when she learned of his success, she withdrew them. The name stuck, though, and today there are few who would recognize in the cognomen of Frank Wittier one of the foremost welters in the country.

Perry was born in Chicago in 1885, of German parents.

"My destiny was outlined at the start," he says. "For the reason that during my school-boy days I was regarded as the irrepressible bad boy, always keeping myself busy mixing it with my schoolmates, one of whom was of the same turn of mind as myself and afterward became a boxer. His name is Frank Yoch. He had the opportunity of receiving a few boxing instructions from a boxer who worked at the same place with him. After each lesson, he would give me the benefit of his instructions."

Perry's first fight was at a neighborhood club smoker in Chicago in 1902. He won in three rounds. His second fight was at a stag entertainment where all the talent was volunteered. After the show was practically over, the "unknown"—that being the name he fought under—was introduced. He challenged anyone in the house at 105 pounds. Perry accepted the challenge and stopped the "Unknown" in three rounds.

BOX CAR ROUTE.

After fighting many boys in Chicago for years, Perry emigrated to Colorado via the box car route. He fought there and kept going, meeting boys all over the United States, finally touring England, following a decisive victory over Clarence English here last spring. He has fought over one hundred bouts in his career and is one of the chief contenders for the welterweight title. Should he defeat Wildcat Ferns in Kansas City Monday night, he will likely be matched with Ray Bronson or some other contender in New Orleans or Atlanta.

In appearance Jimmy Perry is about five feet six and one-half inches tall and weighs about 142 pounds. Contrary to the general reputation which "pugs" have, Perry is one of the most gentlemanly young fellows that could be found anywhere. He is pleasant and unassuming and a man of more than ordinary intelligence and education.

When he fights he fights hard but always clean. A more sportsmanlike prizefighter there is not anywhere.

At the bottom Perry is shown doing a bit of morning work, chopping down trees being one of the best exercises for developing all the upper body muscles.

Williams Will Go to Pelicans

Crackers Lose Shortstop Sent Here Recently by Washington Team.

Infielder E. Williams, only recently secured by the Atlanta club from the Washington Americans, has been sent to the New Orleans team, following Frank's desperate fight for this youngster. Frank made a claim for the youngster when he was first sent here, claiming he had complied with all rules which gave him prior claim to the player in case he was ever turned over to the minors.

With the addition of Bisland, Williams has adorned the Atlanta bench, and is not now needed. He is not yet ripe for Class A ball, and it is more than apt that he will in turn lose out with the Pels, though the many friends he made while with the Atlanta club wish him the greatest success. He is ambitious, and with a bit more attention to his hitting may develop.

When Bill Bailey returns to the line-up the Atlanta club will be in good shape. Pat Graham being good enough for utility roles right at the present time. Anyway, there are many utility players who can be picked up, and Otto Jordan may be the man who signs with the Crackers.

Voix Batting Like a Demon

Youngster Who Is Filling Hans Wagner's Shoes Going in Good Fashion

Heinie Zimmerman, who led the National league in swatting last year, is rapidly climbing to his old place. In the past week Zimmie has struck his stride, until now but three main contenders separate him from first honors. Larry Doyle and Chief Meyers, of the Giants, and Vlox, of the Pirates.

The latter is at present leading the Lynch circuit, although he has played in but six games, while Zimmerman and the others have been in several more.

The figures through the battles of last Tuesday are given below. Only those who have hit above .300 are shown. They are twenty-two in number. Of these, two have batted over .400, Vlox and Miller.

The dope:

Umpires Are Named For Appalachian

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 3.—President Jacob Smith, of the Applachian league, has appointed three umpires to officiate in this league, during the present season, as follows.

C. M. Wahoo, of Athens, Ga.; H. N. Minnis, South Pittsburg, Tenn.; Harry Nickens, Nashville.

Umpire Wahoo is very well known in this section, and his selection is a popular one with the fans. Wahoo did a little service in the Appalachian last season, his work being of the especially high order.

Of the other two men little is known here. However, they were personally recommended to President Smith as

Tris Speaker Is Right With the Best When it Comes to Hitting the Ball—Warm Race for First Honors

While the National league has but twenty-two men who are hitting .300 or better, the American boasts thirty-four .300 hitters, a conditoin which argues either good for the batters or poor for the pitchers in the Johnson organization.

Eddie Collins is still leading the bunch, although Tris Speaker, Boston's premier swatster, is getting up in the column, trailing Collins by a few points. The former is the only batter in either of the big leagues who is hitting over .500.

Nap Lajoie is batting as of old, while Moeller and Lewis, Joe Jackson and Shotton are coming strong.

HURLERS THE BIG PUZZLE

NEW YORK, May 3.—Now that the big campaign is under way, the main argument which seems to crown the National League race is whether New York or Pittsburg has the greatest pitching staff. There has been more debate over this question than any other single incident connected with the National League race.

McGraw is shooting Tesreau, Marquard, Mathewson, Demaree and Ames against the enemy, while Clarke is using Hendrix, Adams, O'Toole, Camnitz, and Robinson. It's a tough angle. Bill Klem, the umpire, last season picked Tesreau, Marquard, and Mathewson above Hendrix, Camnitz and Adams, or O'Toole, but many believe that the Pirates have the edge.

As ruling the League race promises to settle quickly between these clubs, the flag is fairly sure to go to the one which has shown the best pitching. Clarke has a veritable wonder in Claude Hendrix, but McGraw believes that in Jeff Tesreau he has another Walter Johnson, a giant capable of pitching 50 or 60 games and pitching this number at top speed.

A southpaw of this robust caliber means a lot and if Tesreau can turn out this work with Mathewson and Marquard to back him up, the Pirate corps will have to travel fast and far to get the edge.

Lost Vitality

Are you weak, nervous, broken down, irritable? Do you lack in vim and vitality or perfect health? Why not have these troubles cured? Call today.

The "606" Specialist

Rash, copper colored spots, mucous patches, sore throat, glands, aching bones, severe continued headaches, throat symptoms, falling hair, running sores, ulcers, all these symptoms of

are usually removed within twelve to forty-eight hours after the administration of "606." When you see your symptoms disappear so rapidly you will understand that the correct antidote for this poison is being given, and that you will get a permanent and lasting cure. It contains no mercury or potash.

"606," so called Salvarsan, is registered under the Pure Food Laws, Serial No. 2783. The United States government has adopted it; the Rockefeller Institute indorses it; Edison said, in a public interview, that the discovery of "606" was the greatest achievement in the world during 1911.

And best of all, my many cured and grateful patients indorse it.

I employ the intravenous method only. Come to me and avoid experimental treatment of inexperienced Doctors.

Nearly two hundred patients have been cured of blood poison in one American city by Ehrlich's new "914," and not one relapse has as yet been encountered. The eminent German scientist has supplied an anxious world with the cure of a blighting ailment.

Blood poison may cause blindness, rheumatism, paralysis, locomotor ataxia, and paresis. "914" can save you.

Jeffries Not Again Wanted By the Public

It Is Not Jeffries Who Is to Be Blamed for Move to Get Him in Ring but Promoters Who Are After Him

NEW YORK, May 3.—The efforts of some of the promoters or managers out west to bring Jeffries into the boxing game is not meeting with much enthusiasm, especially with the public. The public well remembers the fiasco in 1910, when Jack Johnson, the colored boxer, was given the opportunity to defeat a man who had no business in the ring at that time. The idea of trying to bring back into the game a man who has proved that he cannot "come back" is so ridiculous that the followers of the sport would never stand for it. They had one experience and that was sufficient.

It is not Jim Jeffries who is to be blamed for any such movement now but the men who are trying to urge him to make one more attempt to "come back," like the "farewell" of Patti. It was not Jeffries who wanted to get into the limelight in 1909 when the critics began to howl for him to re-enter the ring and bring the championship back to the white race. Jeff resisted time and again that he was out of it for good; that he had retired and wanted to remain a retired and undefeated champion. The urging was so great that the alfalfa farmer began to think he was really as good as ever and might make a successful re-entrance into the arena. He even went so far as to visit Germany for the purpose of taking baths and to find out whether his stomach, which had bothered him considerably, would stand the siege of training for a hard battle. That was the secret of Jeff's first trip over to Germany at that time. The lure proved was too much for him, and though he appeared in good shape before the contest for the title at Reno, he was a sick man, or suffering from the effects of nervous prostration, the day of the battle. The fact is, he was never the same man physically after he left Rosenkrans, in California, when Governor Gillette ordered the contest declared off, as he lost heart from that moment and did not take the same interest in it. He knew that his condition had been worked up to the right point for the earlier date, and from that time on he began to go back.

Jeffries is thirty-eight years of age, and he has not lived the life that some of the athletes should live in order to keep such work. If he could not do himself justice in 1910, what chance would he have now? It would be the rankest kind of injustice to the public to try to spring such a farce again and it is a good bet that Jim Jeffries will not consent to any such plan.

MOTOR CLUB BACKS TRACK

When the new motordrome on Jackson street opens for its first races on May 20, it will have the support and encouragement of every motor-cyclist in the city of Atlanta.

This was decided at an enthusiastic meeting Friday night of the Atlanta Motorcycle club, which was attended by nearly one hundred members. The club passed a resolution to hold a big parade on the ve of the opening, May 19.

It will be a regular motorcycle procession through the heart of the city, with torch-lights and other paraphernalia. Tere will probably be about 250 local riders to take part in the parade.

The Atlanta club boasts some fine speeders among its members many of whom will race at the new motordome. There will also come professional riders from all over the country, and a successful season is anticipated.

TWO GAMES RAINED OUT

LYNCHBURG, Va., May 3.—The teams of the Virginia league got through the first four series without losing more than two games by reason of inclement weather, something unheard of in that circuit in the past. Indeed, the team played ten games each before rain interfered Tuesday with the games scheduled for Newport News and Portsmouth. Up to that time a single extra inning game was necessary but Tuesday Petersburg had to use two extra innings to defeat Norfolk. Wednesday the same teams played a 12-inning, 3 to 2 game, which was stopped by darkness.

PACKEY MAY BOX GIBBONS

CHICAGO, May 2.—Provided enough interest can be worked up a Packey McFarland-Mike Gibbons match may be arranged before long. If McFarland is ever to box again for a big purse it is apparent that he will have to perform against an opponent in his own class. None of the present lightweight stars are foeish enough to grant the Chicago wizard a big weight advantage and McFarland has grown so heavy that he cannot meet them at anything like equal terms. According to Emile Thiry, McFarland has been giving some thought to a match with Gibbons and would easily be induced to sign articles if he were guaranteed a sum large enough to make it worth while.

Gordon Lost

Jonathans defeated Gordon this afternoon by the score of 27 to 24. The game was slow and uninteresting, each team making twenty hits.

President May See Tennis Battles

NEW YORK, May 3.—The president of the United States and diplomatic representatives of nations which are competitors for the Davis international tennis cup may be spectators of the play between the American and Australian teams to decide which shall make the trip to England for further play in the trophy competition. R. D. Wrenn, of the American international committee, stated today that President Wilson and the English, French, German and Belgian ambassadors had been invited to witness the matches here in June.

TY COBB AND WALSH COMBINED

Sensational Michigander Is Worth Trial With Any Major League Club

There aren't any more "Willie" Hestons at Michigan Unitversity, but, instead, the school where Branch Rickey coaches, the ball players boast of a diamond star who looks like a combination left-handed Ed Walsh and Ty Cobb in embryo. He is George Sisler.

When Sisler is not pitching he plays the outfield a la the $15,000 "Georgia

GEORGE SISLER.

Peach" and bats fourth, being the best clean-up man Michigan has had in decades.

Joe Surden, Detroit scout, says of him: "He has the best curve of any left-hander I ever looked at."

Rickey, on the southern trip, was startled by Sisler. He told some one, who repeated it, of course, that Sisler was so good it was hard to believe him an amateur. He plays a better game than many a class A leaguer right now.

Sisler is also fast. He has been "clocked" going to first in 3.3-5 seconds, one starves Michigan's opponents by going from first to third or from second home on an infield out or a fly to the outfield.

Few college players know how to run bases and not many slide properly. Sisler is an aggressive runner and has the hook slide down to perfection.

His one fault seems to be over-anxiety to hit. "If he has other weaknesses they remain hidden. In the south Rickey was in a hurry to catch a train one day and, calling Sisler in from the outfield, told him to finish the game in a hurry. This he did by pitching nine balls, striking out the last three batters, who only heard the balls whizz past.

Clarke Quits For All Time

PITTSBURG, May 3.—Fred Clarke says he has played his last game of ball and that never again wi he go into the game. This was made plain by the manager of the Pittsburg Pirates recently when asked if he would, in a pinch, get into the game this season.

"There's not a chance. I'm through," said the man who has played and piloted the Buccaneer team to four pennants and one world's championship. "I released myself as a player a year ago, and I see no reason why I should reengage myself."

"Suppose an emergency arose, what then?"

"Not a chance," was the reply. "There are others to take my place as a player. There are younger men on the team, and a club must have and develop the younger men."

Clarke made these statements with every evidence of sincerity. From the fact that he has not been accepting any and all wagers offered him, it was supposed that there might be a chance for him to get back in the game in an emergency, but the latest statement of the boss of the Pirate crew would appear to dispel any such belief.

Emory Boys in Tennis Tourney

OXFORD, Ga., May 2.—The annual tennis tournament among the students of Emory has begun, and by May 20, the semi-finals will have been played off, both in singles and doubles. It is hoped that the finals will have been played by May 25. The tournament this year has been somewhat later than in the past, but all of Emory's athletic schedules have been delayed this scholastic year.

The singles were won last year by H. D. Towson, who was elected several months ago as the Georgia representative of the Rhodes scholarship to the University of England. He won the cup offered in singles, as last year's victory made three successful wins. The cup had been at Emory for many years, and only until the Towson victory was it claimed as personal property. No cup is now offered and the students are endeavoring to secure one from some Emory alumnus.

The doubles were won in 1912 by Lewis King and Haskell Bass. That cup in doubles has never been threatened with loss.

St. Philips Lost

Westminster and St. Philip's opened the season before a large crowd of rooters. The first ball of the season was thrown by Mr. Percy, teacher of a class at St. Philip's. The game was fast and snappy from beginning to the end. Mitchell, of Westminster, pitched a fine game, but due credit should be given to Cape, of St. Philip's. The hitting of Cornwell and Jones were features from a Westminster standpoint. Cornwell connecting for two bingles and Jones for three, two of which were for extra bases.

Willard Not Well Known As a Boxer

Coming Boxer Admits One Defeat in Twenty-three Battles—Has Never Been Learned Just How He Began Career

NEW YORK, May 3.—Considerable mystery surrounds the ring record of Jess Willard, the six foot six-inch giant who looms so large upon the pugilistic horizon. Until he appeared in New York so suddenly last August and took Arthur Pelky's place in a bout with Luther McCarty no whisper of Willard's previous performances had reached this city.

Willard did no training here for his local bouts. His visits were extremely brief, and not being a communicative person he had little to say for himself. But since he has arrived in California, where he went to place himself under the management of Tom Jones, Willard has been giving out some of the details of his early career.

Willard's own account of himself, if taken at its face value, makes his good work in the bouts at the garden appear even more remarkable. As he tells it, he never even saw the inside of a gymnasium or drew on boxing gloves until two years ago. Like Luther McCarty and many others who later made good, Willard began somewhat ingloriously. He lost his first bout—a foul. He was so ignorant of the rules that he quit at any place that looked inviting and was promptly disqualified.

A few weeks later he tried again, against the same adversary. By this time he had acquired enough knowledge of ring etiquette to keep from transgressing and won in three rounds. Willard only admits one defeat in his six twenty-three bouts. He declares that only two men have gone the limit with him. These were Arthur Pelky and Luther McCarty. Both these affairs were held here. Willard maintains that he was in poor health when he met Pelky and had no time to train for McCarty or he would have ended the battles before the limit and kept his slate clean.

WHITE HEAVY SERVICE TRUCKS

Three and Five Tons

White Trucks for heavy service have proved to be more economical in the consumption of gasoline and oil than any truck of equal capacity.

Large steel wheels, and a perfect load distribution, make White Heavy Service Trucks the easiest to operate and the most economical in tire wear.

The name of White on a motor truck insures the lowest possible cost of upkeep, and the longest and most continuous service.

White Trucks are also built in capacities of 3/4 and 1½ tons, for lighter service.

DOPE FROM VIRGINIA

Jap Efird, of Roanoke, made a record for the season in a recent game with Norfolk, when he was able to retire the side on three pitched balls, the trick being turned on an infield grounder and two outfield flies.

Portsmouth has secured Pitcher Weidell, who was with the Columbus team in the South Atlantic league last season, where he won fifteen and lost six games. And why did Columbus let such a man go?

Newton, who was traded by Roanoke to Richmond during the winter, is playing a nice game at short for the Colts.

Phelan, the new first baseman for Newport News, has the habit of lifting his foot from the bag just before he completes the play. When the umps get on to this Phelan will have to change his habits.

Richmond is using Strain in the box about as frequently this spring as he worked last year. The youngster seems to have an iron constitution.

Petersburg has released Pitcher Holmes, Infielder Marable and Outfielder Schwartz, this cutting the team down to about the minimum excepting in the pitching staff.

Newport News is trying to induce Buck Hooker to join the Shipbuilders. Hooker was with the team last summer, but drew his release this year in the misunderstanding over the attempted transfer of the Shipbuilders to Bristol by Jack Grim.

Buck Martin, a Washington player, who was given a trial by the Nationals, has been sent to Norfolk under an optional agreement. Barton ought to make a good pitcher in the Virginia league.

Bill Howedell, who broke into the Virginia league with Lynchburg back in 1911 and who played last season with Petersburg, has signed to play third for the Portsmouth team. Howedell had a tryout in the International league with Newark.

Some idea of the luck that trails in the Roanoke camp is shown by the fact that in the series with Norfolk the Tigers piled up six errors in one contest, but the Tars failed to profit in the slightest by the wobbles when it came to rounding the corners toward the plate.

Bert Gardin, one of the best southpaws of the circuit, is pitching a great game for Roanoke. This is Gardin's third year with the Tigers, having been drafted by that team from Spartanburg in the old Carolina association. He bids fair for faster company after this season.

Steve Gaston, who was with Danville before the blow last spring, has started out like a winner this year with Norfolk.

George Kircher continues to play a great game as utility man for Norfolk. No team in the circuit has a more valuable man than Kircher.

Washington has refused the overtures of the Richmond club in its efforts to land Doc Ayres for the pitching staff. This is a severe blow to Richmond, and it again opens up speculation as to what Washington is going to do with the young medical student who refuses to join the Nationals until his studies are over in May.

STAR ENGLISH ATHLETE IN TRACK EVENT HERE

H. S. O. Ashington Has Performed Feats on Track Never Before Attempted

BOSTON, May 3.—When the Oxford and Cambridge athletes come to America to meet Yale and Harvard in a dual meet this summer, American followers of track and field sports will have an opportunity of seeing one of the best athletes in the world. He is H. S. O. Ashington, of Cambridge.

Not in recent times has an athlete shown such remarkable ability on the track and field as has Ashington. Even the mighty Jim Thorpe never did what this young Englishman did recently.

At the recent Oxford-Cambridge meet Ashington won three events—the 120-yard high hurdle race, the running broad jump and the half-mile run. He captured the hurdle in 16 1-5 seconds, smashed the meet record in the jump by clearing 23 feet 5 3-4 inches, and won the half-mile in 2 minutes 1 1-5 seconds.

To win the hurdle and jump was not so remarkable. Many athletes have done the same. But to win them and then defeat a classy field in a half-mile run is considered by experts to be little short of phenomenal.

They cite the fact that no athlete since the days of Al Copeland, the famous hurdler, ever won a middle distance run against a fast field after winning ga jump and a hurdle race.

Experts who have seen Ashington in action predict that he will smash several records this year, and say that if he specializes for one event he will make a world's record that will stand for many years. English athletic experts predict Ashington will capture all events at the coming games to be held in America this summer.

WHO IS TO DRAW JOB?

NEW YORK, May 3.—Who will sail the new defender?

This is the question that is puzzling the minds of the members of the yachting fraternity, now that it is practically settled that there will be a race for the American cup in 1914. Lipton has at last cornered the members of the New York Yacht club, and his latest challenge compels them to give him a race. Of course the challenge contains a notification that Lipton will bring over here a 75-foot boat, and there is nothing in the deed or gift to prevent the club from meeting Sir Thomas's 75-footer with a 90-footer, but nobody believes for a minute that even the New York Yacht club contemplates any such farcial proceeding.

So the question that the members of the rocking-chair fleet are discussing nowadays is who will sail the defender? Charlie Barr, probably the greatest racing skipper that ever lived, has gone the way of all flesh, and the loss of the pilot of the Defender, Columbia and Reliance, not to mention hundreds of lesser craft, is grievous to those who want to see the greatest prize of the sea retained in this country.

"Old Man Dennis," as he is affectionately called, is no longer as young as he used to be, and it is very doubtful if he can possibly overcome the disabilities which advancing age has entailed. "Hank" Haff is dead, and his brother, who has had charge of the 57-footer Winsome for several years, is hardly of the caliber which the defense of the America's cup demands.

Racquet Sharks From Antipodes Win

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 3.—A. B. Jones and Horace Rice, of the Australian Davis tennis team, defeated Braley and Duncan, 6-3, in their first match at the Los Angeles Country club Wednesday, but lost to Tom Bundy and Ward Davis in the second by a 6-4 score. Bundy's famous serve puzzled the Australians, who were also handicapped by the cement courts.

Princeton Races Set for May 17

NEW YORK, May 3.—Andrew Carnegie should be satisfied on May 17 that his gift of a lake to Princeton was not wasted. On that day the Annapolis-Columbia-Princeton regatta will be rowed on the artificial lake, as well as the novice races between freshmen crews. The regular freshman crew will not enter the spring regatta, which is an interclass contest, as plans for a freshman race with some other eight are under consideration. Three freshman crews will be formed, any men who are not on the freshman eight being eligible. These crews will race in the eight-oared gigs for cups which are presented by C. S. Bryan, '87, to the members of the winning novice eight.

"THE CAR WITH A CONSCIENCE"

"The Most Beautiful Car in the World—and Mechanically Correct"

¶ The National Automobile Shows rendered this verdict.

¶ At the New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburg, Detroit and Cleveland exhibitions, the Oakland proved to be the real surprise of the new season.

¶ Oakland models were so distinctive, so different from the common type of automobiles that the difference was apparent even to the casual observer.

¶ Don't scoff at this statement! Don't belittle it! Don't wink your eye and say "That's what they all claim." Don't say "It's a common automobile story!" Don't say "It's impossible for the Oakland to have achieved a position like this in a single year!"

¶ Don't say any of these things but make us prove our claims.

¶ That's the faith we have in your good judgment and the faith we have in Oakland Cars.

¶ The 1913 Oakland symbolizes both life and character. Its life is expressed in beautiful lines, full of color, harmonious and exquisite. Its character is embodied in a sound mechanical principle---scientific and lasting.

¶ You cannot find a harsh line on any Oakland body. You cannot find a long straight line. Each body is a delight to the eye, for each one represents a combination of sensitive curves, very beautiful, blending symmetrically.

¶ Oaklands are made in a wide range of body designs and horse power ratings. Four and six cylinder types---Models 35, 42 and 6-60. Four, five and seven passenger touring cars. Three passenger sociable roadsters, coupes and a semi-racer called "Six-Sixty Raceabout."

$1000 to $3000

¶ Delco electric starting, lighting and ignition system on two of the models.

¶ Demonstration for the asking---any time---anywhere.

Auto Makers Are Anxious For Trophies

Class of Foreign Cars Have Already Entered Big Indianapolis Event and Records Are Sure to Go

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 3.—With the famous speedway trophies again to be contended for by the participants in the third annual 500-mile international sweepstakes race at the Indianapolis motor speedway, May 30, and with several foreign cars promising to be formidable contenders for those trophies, the minds of many prominent American automobile manufacturers are now agitated to an unusual degree. The trophies have long been held in high esteem by the manufacturers, who have taken a greater interest in them than they have in the cash prizes. Since it became known that the year's race would include Europe's fastest cars the situation has become grave, for there is now danger that these trophies, which have symbolized the victories of so many American cars, may be carried out of the country.

Automobile racing still retains the high sporting flavor it did when it first became popular, and there is also a patriotic motive which influences the spirit of every race in which foreign cars are competing. The idea of the foreigners winning the time-honored trophies is one which is not realished by American car makers, and therefore unusual efforts will be put forth to retain the trophies on this side of the Atlantic.

Practically every driver who has entered thus far has signified his intention of making a desperate effort to lower all records previously made on the Indianapolis speedway, and if the thousands of dollars worth of trophies are still left in this country to decorate the display rooms of American manufacturers, it will not be because of any wilful neglect of opportunity on the part of the foreign drivers.

It is a far cry back to the days of chivalric tournaments, yet the trophies which are offered to the winners of the 500-mile race have a historic significance which dates back to the early mediaeval period. The Remy brassard, for instance, is only a modern conception of the brassard with which Charlemagne decorated the arms of his soldiers who distinguished themselves in battle. The brassard of Charlemagne was not made made of silver, but it was won only after a desperate struggle, and the man thus decorated by the emperor was honored above all his fellows.

There has never been a prize offered as a reward in any contest more beautiful than the Wheeler-Schebeler trophy, the heroic cup of solid silver, which has an intrinsic value of more than $10,000. It has its origin centuries ago in a little inn in the Black Forest.

The Wheeler-Schebeler cup is not for practical use. In fact, enough wine could be placed within its spacious bowl to satisfy the thirst of 200 kings, figuring that each king should drink but one pint of wine.

Another trophy which has a historical origin is the Prest-O-Lite trophy, a solid silver brick, engraved with a replica of the speedway in bas relief. The first time that a silver brick was given as a reward was during the days when Spain was the possessor of the western hemisphere.

TRAINS SON AS RUNNER

NEW YORK, May 3.—"Like father, like son," is an adage that applies aptly to the case of Peter Gerhardt, famous sprinter, and his nine-year-old son, whom he hopes to see as great as himself on the cinder path before many years have passed. Gerhardt, who was a member of the American team at the Stockholm games, at 35 has retired, after being in the game for twenty years, in which time he met the best in the world in the hundred. While not a record-breaker, Gerhardt, even in the last years of his participation in track events, was a consistent performer. At Stockholm he ran first in one of the 100-yard heats, but did not finish.

It is to perpetuate the name of Gerhardt in the sprints that he has taken his young son in hand and is showing him all the tricks at the start and finish, and the boy has been such an apt pupil that the proud father expects him to eclipse his own record. In a recent meet young Gerhardt did 80 yards in 12 seconds, which, for a kid of 9, is going some.

NOTRE DAME ENTERS TEAM

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—Notre Dame university has entered a team in the one-mile relay championship of America at the Pennsylvania relay races. Notre Dame does this in spite of the fact that they are perfectly aware of the speed that Michigan and Illinois especially are capable of making.

Ohio State sent word that their two-mile team had been so hindered by the result of the floods that they would not be along, but that this would mean a faster team in the four-mile event.

Dartmouth, State, Ohio State, Princeton, Northwestern, the Western relay champions, and Pennsylvania, the Eastern champions, are the quartet out for the honors, and a new record will probably be made.

Hits and Errors

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., May 3.—Harb, pitching for the University of Arkansas, allowed twelve hits, his teammates made nine errors, and the University of Mississippi won the second game of the series, 12 to 4. Arkansas won Thursday's game. The third and deciding game will be played at Fort Smith Saturday.

Score by innings:	R.	H.	E.
Mississippi	12	12	2
Arkansas	4	9	9

Batteries—Chandler and Mills; Harb and Geren.

Buffalo Gets Game

NEW YORK, May 3.—President Barrow, of the International league, has awarded the protested Buffalo-Baltimore game, played at Baltimore April 28, to Buffalo by a score of 8 to 7.

The Buffalo club had protested the game because of the umpire's refusal to allow a run to score in the tenth inning when, with the bases full, a wild throw by Pitcher Roth hit the grandstand.

EVERYBODY HAS A CHANCE TO BE JOURNAL'S LUCKY FAN

The "Baseball Fan" pictures run daily in The Journal when the Atlanta club is playing at home are exciting a lot of interest among the baseball-mad fans and they all make a rush for the paper each day in the hope they are the lucky one. You know each time a fan's photo gets in the paper and has an arrow pointing to it a ticket is forthcoming to this lucky individual and every one is anticipating the time when he will be the "lucky one."

The pictures are taken at each game at Ponce de Leon by The Journal staff photographer and the following day appears in The Journal with an arrow pointing to the most conspicuous face in the picture. Sometimes the lucky one is a broker, sometimes a clerk, maybe a bookkeeper and often a real estate man, but always a baseball fan. Everybody stands a chance.

The last two fans to identify their picture are C. W. Mendal, of 65 Bell street, and Lee E. Smith, of 158 Washington street. It just happened that they were the ones picked out by the cartoonist to point the arrow and maybe the next time it will be you. Both these fans have already received tickets to the game and will be the guests of The Journal upon the team's return to Ponce de Leon.

Remember the only requisite when the arrow is pointing to you is that you come to The Journal office and identify yourself.

CAN BURMAN DRIVE RACE WITHOUT ANY RELIEF?

NEW YORK, May 3.—Ray Harroun's recent statement that he doubted the ability of Bob Burman to drive the entire 500 miles of the big race at Indianapolis on Memorial day, is regarded with some surprise by spectators who witnessed the races of the past two years.

Harroun declares that the strain of driving 500 miles under sustained high speed is too great to be borne by flesh and blood. This statement he derives from his experience in finding the first 500-mile race too strenuous for his own constitution.

Those who remember Ralph Mulford's smiling face and springy step as he dismounted from his Lozier car after driving the entire 500 miles of the 1911 race are inclined to disagree with Harroun's estimate of the limit of human endurance. Mulford's average time for the five-century event was 74.47 miles per hour, making the fastest 500 miles ever driven up to that time by one man. A year later Joe Dawson bettered Mulford's record by driving the entire race unrelieved in a National at a still greater speed. Seven of the first ten drivers who finished the race in 1911 drove the entire distance without relief, and most of them were in excellent shape at the finish.

Similar conditions prevailed in last year's contest, thus seeming to prove that Harroun's necessity for relief was the exception and not the rule.

While many of the pilots in this race will probably have relief drivers on hand, it is very doubtful whether many of the emergency drivers will actually take part in the contest. Changing drivers means divided purses, a feature which is looked upon with much displeasure by the average professional. Furthermore, a racing pilot will to the front in a big race fears to trust his hard-won lead to the hands of a substitute driver.

The necessity for relief drivers in a race is after all merely a question of physical fitness of the man at the wheel. Ralph Mulford has often declared that he believed a 1,000-mile race feasible for trained drivers in good condition.

Ex-Southern Stars Big Aid In Winning Major Battles

Stars of the Southern league in past seasons are right now keeping many of the major league teams right in the thick of the fight. Most notable among those right at present are Doc Johnston and Joe Jackson, at Cleveland; Derrill Pratt, at St. Louis; Stengel and Red Smith, with Brooklyn; Speaker, with the Boston Sox. And with these are a number of other ex-Southern leaguers who are doing good work yet they are not breaking into the limelight as often as the outfit mentioned.

If reports are to be believed Doc Johnston is filling the first sack at Cleveland in jam-up style, while Joe Jackson is playing his usual good game. This pair are doing as much to keep Cleveland right in the fight as any other members of the squad, Doc's hitting and fielding being far above what he did in the Southern league.

At Brooklyn every game is featured by hard hitting by Red Smith and Stengel. Smith only recently won a game by his home run against the Giants, while Saturday Stengel swatted out a circuit boot with the bags well filled. Smith was with Nashville some seasons ago and Stengel camped for a while with Montgomery.

Of course Speaker is known to be one of the mainstays of the world champion Boston Red Sox team, and this year he is doing his usual good work. Derrill Pratt is keeping up his good hitting and fielding with the lowly St. Louis Browns and aiding in making this team more formidable than in years gone by.

John Raley is back in the game at first for Richmond. His return sent Billy Laval to the outfield and put Tennant on the bench.

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize

Tire Prices

With our new factories, we have built as high as 6,500 automobile tires daily.

This multiplied output has cut cost of production. And our profits, as usual, are kept down to the minimum.

So prices on No-Rim-Cut tires now average about 11 per cent less than last year.

No Extra

No-Rim-Cut tires now cost no more than any standard clincher tires.

Yet these tires save all the cost of rim-cutting. They save a ruin which wrecks 23 per cent of the hooked-base clincher tires.

And No-Rim-Cut tires are 10 per cent larger—contain 10 per cent more air—than clinchers. And that, with the average car, adds 25 per cent to the tire mileage.

Our Profit

Each year we advertise our profits. That is to show you exactly the value you get in a Goodyear tire.

In times past this profit has averaged about 8½ per cent. And this year, with our lowered prices, we do not expect to exceed that.

Thus it must be apparent that no tire maker can ever give more for the money.

We have the largest output, the newest factories, the most up-to-date equipment. None can possibly build equal tires at as low cost as we.

None dare sell on smaller margins. None this year show so large a reduction. Those are our ways for keeping cost per mile down to a record minimum. By No-Rim-Cut tires, by oversize tires, by the utmost in quality at an unmatched price. Come share these immense economies.

Swimming Races Planned for 1913

NEW YORK, May 3.—It begins to look as if intercollegiate outdoor swimming championships might once more be held this year. They were instituted in 1910 and proved a great success as they did again in 1911, but last year the Olympic games and other circumstances prevented their taking place. Now, however, the feeling is general that growing interest in aquatics makes it advisable to establish them as an annual feature, and a meeting of the graduate advisory committee has been called to discuss the matter of ways and means. Several organizations have offered to stand sponsors to the meet, and no difficulties are anticipated. The question of whether to open the events to all university watermen or confine them to league members will come up for settlement, and the majority seem to favor inviting all hands, as it will swell the entry list, and give the carnival far greater importance.

First Baseman Phelan, who was tried by Portsmouth, and was turned loose, has been picked up by Newport News, to displace a pitcher at the initial corner. Phelan was with McKeesport in the O. and P. league last season.

JOE JACKSON CAME BACK AFTER GETTING BEAN BALL

Nap fans are glad that there are exceptions to all rules. If such were not the case they wouldn't see Joe Jackson slamming out any more doubles and triples in a pinch this season. At least that is the line of dope handed out by Bill Armour, one time manager of the Naps and former president of the Toledo Mud Hens.

"Any time a baseball player is 'beaned' with a pitched ball you can gamble that he will never have the same confidence at bat again," says Mr. Armour.

"I have read many times of cases where players who have been hit on the head with pitched balls claimed to be as good as ever and all that, but you can not make me believe it. They may have their nerve with them most of the time, and even bat well, almost as well as ever, but in a pinch you can safely bet that the player who has been 'beaned' will not be there with the same confidence when the pitcher is speeding them over the plate near his head.

"I could tell you of many players in the big leagues today who have been hit on the head by pitched balls, and who have never been the same star batters since. It takes the nerve out of the stoutest heart, I don't care who they may be."

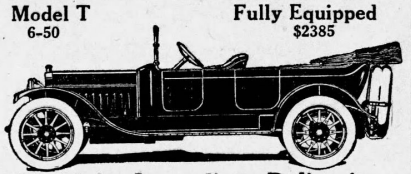

Bill didn't see George Boehler, the Detroit Tigers' recruit hurler, "bean" Joe Jackson on the head Tuesday at Somers park and send the general down for the count. Neither did Armour see Jackson straighten out one of George Mullin's speeders for a triple on Wednesday.—Cleveland News.

Demented When Cars Were Late

Paige Cars, However, Finally Showed Up and Everything Was O. K.

A well-known Detroit automobile concern was visited upon by one of their big Illinois agents. The object of his visit was to get motor cars. He had been promised a shipment of twelve motor cars the previous week, but upon their failure to arrive he hastened to the factory to find out the cause of the delay. Upon his arrival there every effort was made to explain to him just why this delay had taken place. He was told how flood conditions in Dayton, Indianapolis and several other points through Ohio and Indiana had tied up factories that were doing Paige work. He even learned that several other automobile concerns in Detroit were in the same boat.

By the time of his arrival the factory had already brought up its production to its original schedule, and conditions looked favorable again. He was shown through the factory, and when he left, to all appearances, he was perfectly satisfied in regard to receiving deliveries.

Word was received later from his partner that he had become demented while on the train coming from Detroit. He was placed in the care of a physician, who immediately hurried him to a sanitarium. While delirious, he mentioned the word "Paige" and "deliveries" several times. The physician could not make out what was on his mind, but when enlightened by the man's partner of the conditions that had existed for the past ten days, the physician informed his partner that no doubt he had been thrown into this state by constant worry in regard to the delivery of his Paige cars. His final breakdown, which occurred on the train, was due to his being overcome with joy on learning that he would soon receive a good supply of "26's."

A wire from the physicians to the Paige factory states that the only thing that would bring about the recovery of this man would be a couple of carloads of Paige "36's." The factory anticipates a speedy recovery, as several carloads are on the way.

Much Attention To Bodies

Most everyone interested in motor cars has commented at some time on the exquisite beauty of the bodies of all Oakland cars, not only in design but in finish.

The superb finish is due to the attention to detail given in manufacture. Every body when it "starts through" is shop tagged with a tag that calls for 27 sections, a section for each operation, and when the finished body reaches the chassis for final assembly the proper notations must appear on every section of this tag as evidence that not one of the details has been neglected.

It is interesting to follow these 27 steps, which deal exclusively with the finish of the bodies and do not relate to upholstery, fittings, etc.

These steps are, successively, sanding, ironing, prime, putty, sand and lead, first coat of rough stuff, second coat of rough stuff, third coat of rough stuff, fourth coat of rough stuff, fifth coat of rough tuff, sixth coat of rough stuff, rub rough stuff, first coat of color, second coat of color, first coat of varnish rub, third coat of varnish, second varnish rub, stripe, trim back, water rub, finish, body assembly, fitting top and final assembly.

AGENCY FOR MARION CAR PLACED WITH ATLANTIANS

Mr. McNab Talks Most Interestingly of Growth of Industry Here

One of the recent visitors to Atlanta in the automobile field was Vice President M. D. McNab, of the Marion Motor Car company, of Indianapolis. Mr. McNab talked enthusiastically of the outlook for business in this section, and particularly of the business which his company was now receiving from this section.

While in the city Mr. McNab associated together to handle the Marion as distributors for Georgia and Alabama, Mr. C. W. DuPre and J. G. Cohen. Mr. DuPre is one of the pioneer retail automobile men of Georgia, having for a long time handled cars at his home town of Marietta, and is now distributing for the two states above named, besides the Marion, the Little Six, Little Four and the Chevrolet Six. Mr. Cohen was one of the men who for a long time put the Maxwell and other United States Motor company's products out in the south. Later he has been identified with the Locomobile in Atlanta. Mr. McNab waxed eloquent, stating that the city even surpassed his expectations, notwithstanding the fact that he was looking for much from what he had heard on all sides of the progressive city.

GREAT PROSPECT FOR AUTO TIRE INDUSTRY

G. M. Stadlem Says This Will Be Big End of the Business

"Few men have ever stopped to think that ultimately the tire business will be the big end of the automobile industry," says G. M. Stadelman, secretary of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, Akron, Ohio. "There are now perhaps 1,000,000 cars in use in the United States. This year possibly 400,000 new cars will be in use, discounting the number by those which go out of service.

"Gradually the ratio between the number of cars in use and the number of cars being sold, is increasing. Ultimately the opportunity for the sale of new cars will be much smaller than the opportunity for sale of service in connection with the cars in use. After a while, the big end of the automobile industry will be the sale of tires and other parts necessary to keep the car running.

"As the tire is the most important accessory of the car, and the accessory which needs to be renewed most frequently, it follows that the tire business in time will become the big end of the automobile industry."

Digs Up Old Relic

The Crispen Motor Car company of Harrisburg, Pa., who handle the Cadillac in that city, aroused a great deal of interest during the recent automobile show by showing on the streets an antique car built in 1902, of the so-called "one-lunged" variety. The old engine, which had done service for 11 years, was pulled out and the Delco electrical system, removed from a 1912 Cadillac, and installed in its place. The cranking device had power enough to run the old car about the city of Harrisburg, traveling more than four miles on one battery charge.

A sign exhibited on the car read: "Evoluting Some—the 1913 Cadillac Self Starter is the Sole Motive Power Propelling this Ancient Relic."

MAGNIFICENT TROPHY FOR 500-MILE WINNER

Chicago Manufacturers Offer $2,000 Prize in Indianapolis Races

One of the handsomest and most serviceable silver trophies ever put up to tempt an automobile speed king will be offered to the winner of the great 500-mile race to be run Memorial day, May 30th, on the Indianapolis motor speedway, by Findeisen & Kropf Mfg. Co., of Chicago, manufacturers of Rayfield carburetors. This is one of the most important announcements made in connection with plans for the big speed event, always one of the sensations of the year, and it will undoubtedly stimulate interest to a considerable degree.

The beautiful prize, valued at $2,000, will be the finest example of the silversmith's art, and will be known as the "Rayfield Trophy." Drivers of Rayfield-equipped cars will compete for it. The donors have not limited themselves to this elegant trophy, but also offer $1,000 in gold. This money goes to the winning driver, provided his car is equipped with a Rayfield carburetor.

While the Rayfield carburetor is designed for use on pleasure cars and for general use on motor-driven vehicles, it is already well known to the great drivers of racing cars. Among those who have won fame while using Rayfields are Caleb Bragg, winner of the Grand Prix; Ralph Mulford, 1911 winner of the Vanderbilt cup; Ralph DePalma, who was declared "1912 Road Race King;" Louis Disbrow, king of dirt track; Teddy Tetzlaff, Barney Oldfield, Hughie Hughes, Spencer Wishart, and many others who have made world's records in the various contests in cars equipped with Rayfield carburetors.

$300,000 ORDER FOR CARS MADE AT CHANCE MEETING

Two men chanced to meet in the Auditorium lobby in Chicago last Sunday, and before they had parted had closed a deal for $300,000 worth of goods. The thing was done in half an hour, a bona fide sale for over a quarter of a million dollars. And it was done with less talk than the average woman would buy a spring hat. The only records made were the citations the buyer noted in his pocket memorandum and that the salesman scribbled on the back of a business card. The salesman was "Trainload" Collins, general salesmanager for the Buick Motor company at Flint, Mich., and the buyer was H. E. Pence, of the Pence Automobile company, at Minneapolis.

"The order is one of 100 carloads," said "Trainload," "and aside from the fact that it is a nice little bunch of business from a company standpoint, it goes even farther. Time was when bankers shied at the automobile game and predicted dire calamity because so much money was being put into motor cars the country over. Automobile concerns keep currency in circulation, and that is always a sign of good times. I think that I am safe in saying that there is no other line of business that a deal of this size could be put through with such utter absence of red tape, price haggling and questioning of goods. Confidence is the explanation in a nutshell."

"Big men developed the automobile game and the automobile game has developed big men. For the first few years, there was a lot of four-flushing, but four-flushers are being rapidly weeded out. Today you look at the automobile dealers in any city or town in the United States and you will find them men who stand high in the community, who are trusted by their bankers and who live up to the reputation of the cars they are selling. Their business creates and expands other business—the old saying exemplified of two blades of grass growing where one had grown before."

"You know I think sometimes that we motor car men distribute more happiness than people give us credit for. Take this one order as an example. Figuring on the basis of three to a family, for every man that will buy one of these 200 Buicks, and there are 800 people happier than they were before. Suppose that in addition to that each of those owners give 200 friends a lift or pleasure ride during the year. There are 60,000 people, a total of 60,900 benefited by this one trainload shipment alone. On the same basis of reckoning for our 150,000 users, there would be a total of 30,000,900 people riding in Buicks during the year."

It is worth consideration, too, that there is an automobile building company so big that a shipment of this kind can be made in a single day without interfering with the routine orders we are taking care of every day."

Who Is Youngest Automobile Dealer?

Who is the youngest automobile agent in the United States?

That is, the youngest real agent who has a regular contract, sells cars and banks his commissions?

William Whipple of Genoa, Ill., lays claim to the honor. William has just passed his eighteenth birthday. Although his father, William, Sr., is the possessor of five prosperous Illinois farms, William, Jr., has a decided preference for a bank roll built up strictly by his own energy. So, when he was sixteen years old, he embarked in the automobile business, as the agent of the Michigan cars. He is now doing a flourishing business in a regular automobile dealer's way. His fine big completely equipped salesroom and garage is a point of special interest to visitors, and a special pride to its hustling, young owner.

William has a youthful enthusiasm which wins where older salesmanship might fail. The young agent's enthusiasm is the result of accurate knowledge acquired in actual experience at the Michigan factory at Kalamazoo. He spent considerable time in overalls and jumper as a helper, to make himself familiar with automobile construction.

It takes a woman to remember her daughter's birthday and forget her own.

Drag Makes Hit The Country Over

Since the publicity recently accorded George Weidely and his home-made king-split log drag, in connection with the work they did in smoothing the approaches to the Indianapolis auto show, Weidely has been the recipient of hundreds of letters from farmers, motorists and good roads enthusiasts all over the state, asking for information as to the structural details of the drag, as well as its method of operation. It seems very likely, says Weidely, that the seeds sown in this unpretentious manner will result in a good roads crusade over the state by individuals who, apart from any effort made by the commonwealth, will engage in the work of highway improvement, simply for the fun they will get out of it. Locally, the road dragging campaign inaugurated by Weidely will be continued by the Hoosier Motor club, which will be busy all summer dragging the country thoroughfares in and around Indianapolis.

Fire Stops Game

THOMSON, Ga., May 1.—Thomson crossed bats with Harlem again Wednesday, Thomson winning with a score of 9 to 6. A fire in the residence section caused a stampede at the beginning of the fourth inning. The game was resumed later, but was called after the seventh inning on account of darkness.

Large Motor Trucks By the White Co.

Eight of the largest motor trucks in the world, fitted with huge omnibus bodies, have been built by the White company of Cleveland, Ohio, for the Pittsburg Auto Transit company. They will be placed in service in the Smoky City on May 1. The bodies, which strongly resemble street cars, were built by one of the largest street car builders in the country. The design, however, is such that they are more comfortable in riding.

The busses are of the pay-as-you-enter type and have seats for thirty-four passengers. They are built with six-cylinder 60-horsepower motors giving them an abundance of power for the steep grades in Pittsburgh. Passengers will be carried between the downtown business district and the Highland park residential sections.

Auburn Bucks Marion

AUBURN, Ala., May 2.—The Auburn baseball team left yesterday afternoon for Marion, Ala., where they take on the Marion Military Institute in three games this week. Marion has an unusually strong team this year, and is making all the larger schools take notice. They lost to the University of Alabama by a close margin, two games out of a three game series and have gone undefeated among all other schools of the state.

FISK TIRES

Secret Of Fisk Perfection

The exclusive Fisk HEAVY CAR TYPE Construction is responsible for Fisk tire perfection. As the name implies, it is a construction providing surplus strength for the severest strains of heaviest cars. With these strains properly taken care of there can be no question of Greatest Service on lighter vehicles.

The added quality called for by the exclusive HEAVY CAR TYPE Construction means added expense in manufacture, but never once has The Fisk Rubber Company consented to the slightest reduction in the quality of its product. This attitude is responsible for its success today in producing The Tire of Greatest Service.

Fisk Pneumatic Tires are guaranteed when filled with air at the recommended pressure and attached to a rim bearing either one or both of the accompanying inspection stamps. When filled with any substitute for air, or attached to any other rims than those specified this guarantee is withdrawn. (5)

UNITED STATES TIRES ARE GOOD TIRES
They cut down tire bills

Just what kind of a tire do you want?

Pick out the features you want to find in the tires you buy. You want generous mileage, full rated size, flexibility, protection against rim cutting, ease of manipulation and security of fastening.

Measure up this ideal tire against every other tire on the market and then compare with a United States Tire.

You will find United States Tires combine all these identical features of your ideal tire in a way that no other tire on the market approaches.

We believe that every tire maker in the country has been making the very best tires that his facilities would permit.

Some of these tires have been greatly strengthened at one or two points—some at others.

But it is a matter of general comment among dealers, car owners and car manufacturers, that never has any tire combined all these special points of superiority as do

United States Tires

In the matter of mileage—the most accurate tests have proven that United States Tires today yield on an average from 25 to 50 per cent. more mileage than was ever given by any make of tire previous to the organization of the United States Tire Company.

No tire has ever been made with a larger average size or a larger average air capacity than the United States Dunlop.

No tire has ever been made as flexible or as resilient as the United States Dunlop.

This is the first and only tire that has ever been absolutely guaranteed against rim-cutting.

It is by long odds the easiest tire in the world to put on or take off—yet it can't possibly come off the rim until you are ready to take it off.

In fact if you were to have a tire built to your order it would be difficult for you to specify a single desirable feature that you can't get today in a United States Tire.

If this is the kind of a tire that you want to use, United States Tires ought to be the exclusive equipment on your car this season.

They are made in Plain, Chain and Nobby treads and in three styles of fastening, including the famous Dunlop (straight side).

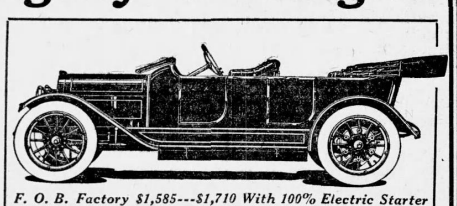

Cost no more than you are asked to pay for other kinds

TIRE-LY SATISFIED

United States Pneumatic Tires are guaranteed when filled with air at the recommended pressure and attached to a rim bearing either one or both of the accompanying inspection stamps. When filled with any substitute for air or attached to any other rims than those specified, our guarantee is withdrawn.

The Mighty Michigan Over-Capacity

F. O. B. Factory $1,585---$1,710 With 100% Electric Starter

SAFETY is of equal importance with the power and smooth running qualities of the car. No owner wants to be worried with the fear that his car may break down.

It is not sufficient that the car be built only strong enough for the rated load. Most cars are daily loaded beyond their rated carrying capacity. You want a car that has practically an unlimited factor of safety.

Consequently, we have designed and made all the driving parts of the MICHIGAN sufficient for a 60 h. p. motor.

The axles possess sufficient strength for an 80 h. p. car. So does the transmission.

The propeller shaft of heat-treated chrome steel has a tensile strength of 130,000 pounds to the square inch. A torque rod of extra strength takes up the reaction of the rear axle.

The pressed steel frame of the 1913 car is larger than ever, notwithstanding that we did not have one single frame complaint last year. The frame of the 1913 MICHIGAN is wider, larger and thicker by exact measurement than the frames of cars costing far more.

The MICHIGAN'S extra long, easy riding springs are wider than those of any car selling under $2,000. This statement is made on actual comparison.

The braking surface in the MICHIGAN is larger than that of any other car in proportion to its weight—larger than that on any other car selling under $1,975. The MICHIGAN has one square inch of braking surface for every 6.88 pounds of weight.

On other cars the braking surface is one square inch for every 8 or 9 pounds of weight.

No part of the car is more important than the brakes—they must work.

Shortsville wheels—known everywhere as the best—are used on the MICHIGAN. These wheels have each twelve spokes, 1¾ inches in diameter.

Oversize tires (35x4½, front and rear) equip these wheels.

It is officially stated by the tire manufacturers that the MICHIGAN could easily carry 1,000 pounds above its rated load without being overloaded.

The MICHIGAN tire equipment not only contributes to your safety, but relieves you of tire expense.

Over-capacity is one of the chief qualities of the MICHIGAN. It is one of the things that distinguishes it from the other cars in the Forty field.

Over-capacity! This is the word from morning to night, every day, in all departments of the MICHIGAN'S construction.

No illustration can begin to give you an adequate idea of the great strength of the MICHIGAN.

Think what it means to you to have a 50 per cent margin of safety—to know that your car will stand up under any and every condition.

Never was a car built of better material with greater care nor by abler men.

The safety of yourself, your family and your friends was never better protected by a motor car.

HERE'S THE WHOLE PLAN
Boiled Down for Easy Understanding

THE JOURNAL is putting on the most interesting campaign in its history. It is A BOOKLOVERS' CAMPAIGN and it is open to every resident of Georgia, Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and South Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana.

Every day, beginning Sunday, April 6th, THE JOURNAL will print a picture and a coupon.

The picture will represent the name of a book. The coupon will contain blank spaces for the name of the book, the name of the author, and the name and address of the contestant.

There will be SEVENTY-FIVE of these pictures and coupons. One will appear every day, including Sundays, for seventy-five consecutive days.

The contestant has only this to do:

Be sure to secure the complete set of pictures and coupons. Cut them from THE JOURNAL as they appear from day to day and save them until all the Seventy-five have appeared. No answers are to be sent in until the last coupon has appeared.

Fill in the blank spaces on the coupon with the name and author of the book you believe the picture to represent. Keep them all until the campaign has closed. Then send them in as directed.

This is a campaign that will give pleasure to every member of the family. You don't have to be the possessor of a college education to be successful in fitting the names of the pictures, and books together. You simply have to study the pictures, use your wits, select the answer you think most appropriate and keep at it until you have named all the seventy-five. It will really be lots of fun. Get suggestions from your friends. Get into the spirit of the game and you'll be amazed at the good time you will have.

And then think of the PRIZES! See the list on this page. It's a great list.

Remember: This is a FREE CAMPAIGN. You don't have to enroll your name. You don't have to subscribe. You don't have to solicit subscriptions. You don't have to advertise. There are no strings whatever tied to the prizes. It is a campaign of perfect fairness and openness and it's going to be a great big thing.

LOOK AT THE PRIZES. READ THE RULES. GET BUSY.

The Pictures for This Booklovers' Campaign Are Made in This way

Three members of The Journal's staff, one of whom is the Booklovers' Campaign Editor, are charged with the responsible duty of selecting the titles to be represented.

None of the three men knows what titles the others have selected. Each knows only his own titles. Only the General Manager knows all of them, for he must review the titles and the pictures, see that there is no duplication of the titles selected, and make sure that the pictures clearly and plainly and fairly represent the titles.

Now the descriptions of the pictures to be drawn to represent the titles are turned over to The Journal's Art Department. Each description is numbered to correspond with the number of the title filed away with the General Manager.

For example: The artist is told to draw a picture of a crowded street at noonday at Five Points. An officer is directing the streams of people and vehicles.

The title is not given the artist. Just a word description of the man's idea of what the picture should be to represent the book he has in mind.

The description above applies to the book entitled "Traffic," by E. Temple Thurston.

The artist does not know what title he is representing in his drawing. He draws to order, according to the written instructions given him. The picture is then passed upon by the man who selected the title to be represented. If the picture does not quite fit the title, or if it is faulty in any way, it is changed until it fits the title perfectly.

So that's the way the pictures are drawn. Remember that the correct title is not selected to fit the picture. The picture, in every case, is drawn to fit the title.

The Booklovers' Catalogue and Why You Need It!

The Campaign Editor has prepared for your benefit in this Booklovers' Campaign, a Book Catalogue containing over four thousand book titles, with the names of authors. In this catalogue are all the prize titles used in this campaign. See what an advantage and convenience that will be to you.

Suppose, for instance, we publish a picture showing a man in the act of showing some courtesy towards a lady. You would naturally think of the word "Gentleman" and would look in the "G" column for the title that the picture might represent. Or you might turn to the "M" column and see if there were any men titles that would fit.

On the other hand, suppose you made up your mind you knew book titles well enough to select the right title to that picture, without the aid of any catalogue.

Here is what would happen in that case.

You would say, that is just plain "Gentleman" by M. T. Egan, and turn it in that way as a correct answer. If that title was not in our official catalogue, it could not be a correct answer for that picture.

And why?

Because no title not in our official catalogue will be used in this Campaign.

If you are going in to win in this delightful campaign, get our official catalogue by all means.

It will be the great aid to your share of $7,000. Use the coupon in ordering.

The Rules

1—All persons are eligible to enter this campaign, except employes of The Atlanta Journal and members of their families.

2—Commencing April 6th and each day thereafter for 75 days, The Atlanta Journal will publish a picture which will represent the title of one book.

3—Beneath each picture there will be a blank for the contestants to fill in the name of the book and author, and their own name and address.

4—No restriction will be placed on the way in which answers to these pictures may be secured.

5—Each contestant will have the right to ten answers to each picture, but not more than ten to any one picture.

6—Incorrect answers will not count against contestants, if the correct answer is also given.

7—Only one answer can be placed on each coupon and extra coupons must be used for all extra answers.

8—Each coupon must be accompanied by a prize picture in order that all answers may be uniform.

9—Additional pictures can be secured at The Atlanta Journal office, or by mail from The Journal.

10—It is not obligatory to cut either coupon or picture from The Atlanta Journal, in order to send in answers. An answer may be submitted in any legible manner the contestants may select, provided in every case that a picture is attached to the coupon used in sending in your answers. These pictures can be drawn, copied or photographed by the contestant, just so there is only one answer to each picture and it is the same size as those published in The Atlanta Journal.

11—Each answer must be written on a separate coupon.

12—When you have the complete set of 75 pictures with your answers, fasten them together and bring or mail them to The Atlanta Journal in a neat, flat package, not folded or rolled, and address them to the Booklovers' Campaign Editor.

13—Prizes will be awarded to the contestant having the most correct answers submitted according to our rules.

14—In the event of two or more persons having the same number correct, the person using the smallest number of answers will be declared the winner.

15—In the event of two or more persons having the same number correct and using the same number of answers, the value of the prize will be equally divided among those tying for it.

16—More than one prize will not be awarded to any one family at the same address, but each member of the family can enter the campaign and submit a complete set of answers.

17—Only one complete set (comprising not more than 10 answers to any one picture) of answers can be submitted by any one contestant.

18—Awards will be made strictly according to the merits of each separate set of answers, and all answers will be considered on their merits.

19—The first filed will have no preference over the last filed, provided only that answers to be considered must be filed within the limit specified when the last picture is published.

20—Awards will be made by the Campaign Editor and five well known citizens, whose names will be announced later.

21—The correct answers to the 75 prize pictures will be placed in a sealed package in a safety deposit box in a local bank or trust company, one week previous to the close of the Campaign.

22—Entry to the campaign may be made at any time previous to the closing date, to be announced by The Atlanta Journal.

23—The campaign is open to all residents of the states of Georgia, Alabama, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina, Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana.

24—The first prize picture will be published on April 6th, and one each day thereafter, making 75 prize pictures in all.

25—The Atlanta Journal reserves the right to decide finally all questions that may arise in connection with the campaign.

26—Solutions will be invalidated if sent in before the 75 prize pictures are published.

27—All communications or letters of inquiry concerning the campaign should be addressed to the Booklovers' Campaign Editor, The Atlanta Journal.

Barnesville Social News

BARNESVILLE.—Naturally, there was quite an exodus to Atlanta the latter part on account of the grand opera season. Quite a number spent the entire week with relatives and friends or at the Piedmont hotelette, while took the trip in their motor cars, seeing two performances the same day. Possibly the greatest number went up on Saturday, seeing both "Lucia" and "La Tosca."

Misses Martha and Rubye Stafford, who were in Atlanta for grand opera, returned home on Sunday, accompanied by Miss Julia McArthur, of Athens, who was their guest for a short visit.

A congenial party who motored to Atlanta on Saturday in Mr. Riley Summers' machine to see "La Tosca" were: Miss Annie Kate Smith, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hilary Pitts, Prof. L. O. Watson and Mr. Riley Summers. They were entertained with a delightful dinner party that evening by Prof. Watson's sister, Mrs. L. C. Matthews, at her home in Atlanta, and were Prof. Watson's guests at grand opera.

Miss Mary Anderson and Miss Orime O'Daniel, who were in Atlanta for grand opera, have been the guests of friends at the Alpha Delta Phi chapter house at Brenau for several days before returning to Barnesville.

Mrs. Jackson Bush was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Toole, of Albany, in Atlanta for two performances of grand opera. Mr. and Mrs. Toole and Miss Freeman stopped over for a short stay with Mr. and Mrs. Bush before returning to Albany in Mr. Toole's machine.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Stafford, Mrs. W. E. Davidson and Mr. Roy Blount were in Atlanta on Saturday to attend grand opera.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Jones were in Atlanta on Saturday for grand opera.

RUTLEDGE

RUTLEDGE.—On Tuesday afternoon at the Morris House, Mrs. H. L. Brock was hostess at one of the loveliest and most elaborate parties of the spring season, complimentary to the Sewing Circle, the school faculty and a few invited guests. Everything was in perfect keeping with the artistic taste and delightful hospitality of this charming hostess. The spacious rooms, so well arranged for entertaining, were made beautifully attractive by quantities of exquisite pink and white roses with maidenhair ferns. Mrs. Brock was assisted in receiving by Mrs. W. C. Morris, Misses Lola Chapman and Maude Curtis. The guests on arriving were ushered into the dining room, where iced tea and delicious wafers were served from a beautifully decorated table, by Misses Mary Hunter and Florence Saye. Each guest was then given score cards, decorated with pretty drawings from Gibson and Fisher also containing the number of table at which you were to be seated, six tables having been arranged, each one containing a different feature of sewing or fancy work, such as working button-holes, crocheting, hemstitching, threading needles, etc. Dainty little work bags of pink crepe drawn with green ribbons were pinned on each guest, and the first to finish their work in five minutes at each table, was given a tiny hand-painted score representing thimbles, scissors, pincushions, etc., to be placed on the little work bag. After an hour spent most pleasantly at this form of entertainment, also Lizzie Hutchison and Anita Thrasher, who assisted in entertaining the ladies at the various tables and distributing the scores, now went to each table to learn who had the largest number of scores in their work bags. Mrs. M. E. Ballard, Mrs. J. L. Porter, and Mrs. C. C. Bereen tying for prize. Mrs. Ballard drew the lucky card and Chapman rendered several vocal and piano selections. After the sewing contest, Miss Lola Chapman rendered several vocal and piano selections, which are always enjoyed. The hostess, assisted by Misses Mary Hunter and Florence Saye served brick cream, delicately tinted with pink, white and green, with white cake. Dainty pink shells were on each plate, containing pink and green mints. Each guest departing, thanked Mrs. Brock and those assisting her, for one of the most pleasant and delightfully entertaining occasions in the history of the Sewing Circle.

Miss Bessie Murrow spent Friday in Atlanta, shopping.

Miss Clifford Haile entertained the Bohemians and a few invited guests on Friday evening with a lovely party at the home of Mrs. O. P. Smith. Pink and white was the color scheme and was beautifully carried out in floral decorations and refreshments. Delicious punch was served in the reception hall by Mrs. O. P. Smith, from a sparkling crystal bowl, imbedded in a profusion of pink roses. Four tables of "42" was played. Miss Cora Hillsman making highest score, received a beautiful gold hat pin. Mrs. F. S. Gilbert received as consolation prize pretty crocheted pin balls. After the game Miss Haile, assisted by Mrs. Smith, served delicious brick cream in pink and white vanilla wafers. Those present were Misses Lola Chapman, Anita Thrasher, Leona Hillsman,, Stowdiop LaRoche, Maude and Nell Curtis,Messrs.es J. L. Porter, H. L. and C. B. Vining, S. S. Perking, Jr., C. A. Moody, R. C. WE INVITE EVERY THIN MAN AND WOMAN HERE

EVERY PERSON IN ATLANTA AND VICINITY TO GET FAT AT OUR EXPENSE

Fair Father: "I'm going to leave this writing in the sand and see if that pair of skinny bowlegged boobs over there won't take the hint."

This is an invitation that no thin man or woman can afford to ignore. We will tell you why. We are going to give you a wonderful discovery that helps fill out the body, so that hundreds of letters say puts good solid flesh on people who are thin and underweight.

How can we do this? We will tell you. We have found a wonderful concentrated treatment for increasing cell growth, the very substance of which our bodies are made; for putting in the blood the red corpuscles which every thin man and woman so sadly needs—a scientific assimilative agent to strengthen the nerves and put the digestive tract in such shape that every ounce of flesh making food may give its full strength to the body, and not be wasted instead of passing through the system undigested and unassimilated. Users tell of how this treatment has made indigestion and other stomach troubles vanish and disappear, while old dyspeptics, and many sufferers from weak nerves and lack of vitality, declare in effect it has made them feel like a two-year-old. It is this treatment, which has proved such a boon to thin people is called SARGOL. You don't forget the name, S-A-R-G-O-L. Nothing so good has ever been discovered before.

Women who never appeared stylish in anything they wore because of their thinness, men underweight or lacking in nerve force or energy have, by their own testimony, been able to enjoy the pleasures of life—been fitted to fight life's battles, as never for years, through the use of "Sargol."

If you want a beautiful and well rounded figure, if you want to increase your weight when you can feel justly proud—a body full of throbbing life and energy, write The Sargol Company, 159-B Herald Building, Binghamton, N. Y., today and we will send you, absolutely free a 50c box of Sargol to prove all we claim. Take one with every meal and see how quickly these marvelous little concentrated tablets commence their busy, useful work of rebuilding. Many users declare they have increased their weight at the rate of one pound a day.

But you say you want proof! Well, here you are. Here are extracts from the statements of those who have tried—who have been convinced and who will swear to the virtues of this wonderful preparation:

R.W. GEORGE W. DAVIS says:

"I have made a faithful trial of the Sargol treatment and must say it has brought to me new life and vigor. I have gained twenty pounds and now weigh 170 pounds, and, what is better, I have gained the days of my boyhood. It has been the turning point of my life. My health is now fine. I don't have to take any medicine at all and never want to again."

MRS. A. I. RODENHEISER writes:

"I have gained immensely since I took Sargol, for I only weighed about 106 pounds when I began using it and now I weigh 130 pounds, so really this makes twenty-four pounds. I feel stronger and am looking better than ever before, and now I carry rosy cheeks, which is something I could never say before.

"My old friends who have been used to seeing me with a thin, long face, say that I am looking better than they have ever seen me before, and father and mother are so pleased to think I have got to look so well and weigh so heavy for me."

CLAY JOHNSON says:

"Please send me another ten-day treatment. I am well pleased with Sargol. It has been the light of my life. I am getting back to my proper weight again. When I began to take Sargol I only weighed 108 pounds, and now, four weeks later, I am weighing 133 pounds and feeling fine. I don't have that stupid feeling every morning that I used to have. I feel good all the time. I want to put on about five pounds of flesh and that will be all I want."

F. GAGNON writes:

"Here is my report since taking the Sargol treatment. I am a man 67 years of age and was all run down to the very bottom. I had to quit work, as I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds with 23 days' treatment. I cannot tell you how happy I feel. All my clothes are getting too tight. My face has a good color and never was so happy in my life."

MRS. VERNIE ROUSE says:

"Sargol is certainly the grandest treatment I ever used. It has helped me greatly. I could hardly eat anything and was not able to sit up three days out of a week, with stomach trouble. I took only two boxes of Sargol and can eat anything and it don't hurt me, and I have no more headache. My weight was 120 pounds and now I weigh 140 and feel better than I have for five years. I am now as fleshy as I want to be, and shall certainly recommend Sargol, for it does just exactly what you say it will do."

You may know some of these people or know somebody who knows them. We will send you their full address if you wish, so that you can find out all about Sargol and the wonders it has brought.

Probably you are now thinking whether all this can be true. Stop it! Write us at once and we will send you absolutely free a 50c package of these wonderful tablets. No matter what the cause of your thinness is from, give Sargol a chance to make you fat. We are absolutely confident it will put good, healthy flesh on you, but we don't ask you to take our word for it. Simply cut the coupon below and enclose 10c in stamps to help cover the distribution expenses, and Uncle Sam's mail will bring you what you may some day say was one of the most valuable packages you ever received.

COME, EAT WITH US AT OUR EXPENSE.

This coupon entitles any thin person to one 50c package of Sargol, the concentrated Flesh Builder (provided you have never tried it), and that 10c is enclosed to cover postage, packing, etc. Read our advertisement as printed above, and then put 10c in stamps in a letter, and mail this coupon, and the full 50c package will be sent to you by return of post. Address: The Sargol Company, 159-B Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y. Write your name and address plainly, and, FIN THIS COUPON TO YOUR LETTER.

JOBBERS DECIDE TO HOLD BIG MERCHANTS' WEEK NEXT AUGUST

Wholesalers and Manufacturers Raise Entertainment Fund and Formulate Plans at Dinner at Piedmont

WILL INVITE RETAILERS HERE SPRING AND FALL

Funds Were Pledged at Tuesday's Meeting for Three Such Gatherings of Dealers From Southern States

The wholesale merchants and manufacturers of Atlanta are to be hosts to the retail merchants of the south at a big mid-summer celebration. A merchants' week, similar to the ones that have been held heretofore but better and more perfected in every way, was decided upon at a dinner of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association at the Piedmont hotel last Tuesday night.

The occasion will be celebrated during the first two weeks of August and it is likely that at the same time will be held an exposition of goods made in Atlanta, similar to the successful show last summer.

More than fifty of Atlanta's livest wholesalers and manufacturers were seated about the table when J. K. Orr, president of the association, introduced the subject of the August celebration, for the discussion of which the meeting had been called.

From the start it was apparent that the membership was heartily in accord with the idea of making merchants' week this year a more noteworthy success than ever before. And as speaker after speaker arose and indorsed the proposition and pledged a sum of money for the undertaking, the wide popularity and great value of these occasions as means of mutual benefit to the wholesalers and retailers and as a factor in enhancing the prestige of the Atlanta market were strikingly shown. More than $2,000 was raised in a few minutes at the dinner. This, however, was merely the start of the fund and more than thrice that amount will be forthcoming for the August meeting.

Nor did the enthusiasm and subscriptions confine themselves to the August meeting alone. All who pledged themselves for the meeting this year, likewise pledged themselves for similar meetings in February and August, 1914.

A feature of the association's meeting Tuesday was the interest in the merchants' weeks shown by the millinery dealers of the city. Representatives of these lines who were present were not only enthusiastic for the occasion in August, but also for the repetition of it in February and August, 1914, the occasions thereafter to be regular semi-annual happenings.

Speeches to this effect were made by Meyer Regenstein, of J. Regenstein & Co., and E. L. Rhodes, of Ernest L. Rholes & Co. The dry goods men and the shoe men were a unit for the semi-annual gatherings, and on this occasion as in the past they were among the most cordial backers of the enterprise.

Among the speakers of the evening who introduced the merchants' week were A. C. McHan, of John Silvey & Co., C. W. McClure, of the McClure Ten Cent company, W. O. Ward, of the Ward-Truitt company; E. L. Rhodes, Meyer Regenstein, W. O. Stamps, of Fain & Stamps; G. C. Jones, of Jones Brothers company; J. K. Orr, of the J. K. Orr Shoe company.

Finance and arrangement committees will be appointed at once by the executive board of the association and the work of preparation for the August meeting will go forward without delay.

OLD SALES FRIENDS MEET IN ATLANTA

Croft, of Atlanta, and Shepard, of Baltimore, Review Former Experiences

Morris Croft, Ragan-Malone company sample caser, met up with his old friend, W. T. Shepard, in Atlanta yesterday. It was Mr. Shepard who first started the popular Atlanta dry goods traveler on the road. Mr. Shepard travels this territory for John E. Hurst & Co., of Baltimore. He comes near a record for service with one firm, as he has been with that concern just thirty-one years. Though he puts Baltimore on the hotel registers, he still calls West Point, Ga., home.

J. R. LITTLE, NEW HEAD OF D. L. R. COMPANY

J. S. Dougherty, Former President, Resigns to Go Into Wholesale Hat Business

Announcement of the new officers of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company was made yesterday.

J. R. Little is president, L. A. Redwine vice-president and H. D. Carter, secretary and treasurer.

The new lineup in executives for the wholesale house was brought about because of the resignation of J. S. Dougherty, who has gone into the wholesale hat business under firm name of Silvey and Dougherty comapny.

The chartered name of Dougherty-Little-Redwine Co., which has become so well known through the southern dry goods trade, will still be used by the company.

Mr. Little, who has now become head of the business, reaches the position as a fitting reward after thirty years of firing line and executive work, all of the time with this one house.

L. A. Redwine is one of the most able wholesale men in Atlanta and H. D. Carter, the new secretary and treasurer is far from new to the business or to this company as he has been with them for many years.

Two new directors were elected to fill the vacancies caused by the leaving of J. S. Dougherty and of D. C. Dougherty. They are G. W. Little, of Baltimore and Dr. H. F. Harris, of Atlanta.

J. H. BARRETT IS STILL AT GRADY HOSPITAL

His friends of the road will learn with regret that J. H. Barrett is still at the Grady hospital, but improving.

He is an old T. P. A. and would like for some of his old friends of the road to call and see him now at the Grady.

FAIN & STAMPS HOLD QUARTERLY SALES MEET

Saturday was the time of the regular quarterly sales conference at Fain & Stamps, and all the travelers and city salesmen were present for the occasion. New price books, which it has taken a month to prepare, were delivered to the salesmen, and new catalogues were examined. Those who attended were Ben Thompson, J. C. Owens, W. Y. Bailey, W. T. Duncan, S. E. Smith, Cliff Edwards Bill Quarles, Bill Gaston, Ben Messer and Tom Clyatt.

"GET BUSY ON HOTEL LAW," SAYS SHIRLEY

Traveler Urges Letters Be Written Legislators Asking Their Support of Bill

Editor Firing Line: I've waited now several weeks to see just how "the boys" felt regarding the office of hotel inspector, which we hope to get through the legislature next month, and it is gratifying to know that they all want to see the office created, and an inspector started on a trip around the state. Not only is this true with the traveling men, but with the better hotel people and others in every business, as we've noticed by the letters appearing from Sunday to Sunday in your columns.

We must have the office created and now is the time. I urge that every traveling man living in the state together with the jobbers and merchants generally, ask their representatives to help us in the fight. The U. C. T.'s, the T. P. A.'s and the Georgia Travelers, of course, will have counsel to put the bill before the legislature. But this is a matter in which every one is interested or should be, at least, and we need the support of every individual as well.

It isn't so very long now before the legislature will convene, and we must get busy and keep right after our representatives, until we get what we want.

It is a necessity. Just think for a minute, of the large number of hotels three stories and up without fire escapes. Think of those with the lavatories, etc., right at the dining room door. Think of how many hotels ($2.50 per day and up) that still make you use the insanitary roller towel! Think of the hotels using the tin slop buckets! Think of the hotels whose kitchens and dining rooms are not screened! Think of the hotels with ragged carpets and insanitary rugs!

And have you ever been back in the kitchens and seen how the food was prepared and served? Who did the cooking and serving? I've seen all these things, and I'm frank to say that if you saw it, you'd see the necessity of a hotel inspector, too.

Boys, its up to you. Get busy now, and make it your business, and have a talk with your representative, urging the passage of this sanitary hotel bill, carrying with it the office of a state hotel inspector; one that will see that the bill itself is enforced. The hotels are protected.

Thanking you for whatever you might do for the good of this bill, I remain,

Yours very truly,
L. A. SHIRLEY,
Member of the U. C. T.s.; T. P. A.'s and Georgia Travelers.
Macon Ga., May 1, 1913.

SILVEY AND DOUGHERTY FORM NEW HAT COMPANY

New Firm Succeeds Silvey-Smith Co.,—Dougherty Leaves Dry Goods Field

J. S. Dougherty, prominent in the Atlanta wholesale world for years as one of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine Co., has left the dry goods field to enter the hat line.

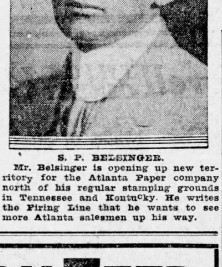

The Silvey & Dougherty Hat Company has succeeded the Silvey-Smith Hat company, with Jerome Silvey, president, J. S. Dougherty, vice-president and T. L. Simmons, secretary and treasurer.

Charter amendment authorizing the change in name went into effect last week and Mr. Dougherty is now devoting his time to his new interests.

He has been in the dry goods line for twelve years, the last two as president of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company.

The business with which he is now connected was started about twelve years ago as the Truitt-Silvey Hat company which was later succeeded by the Silvey-Smith Hat company. The new Silvey & Dougherty Hat company will operate from the same quarters on Central avenue heretofore used.

Mr. Belsinger is opening up new territory for the Atlanta Paper company north of his regular stamping grounds in Tennessee and Kountucky. He writes the Firing Line that he wants to see more Atlanta salesmen up his way.

POST B INDORSES BILL IN CONGRESS FOR MILEAGE BOOKS

Writes Georgia Senator and Representative to Support Wallin Bill if They Find the Provisions Are Just

MEASURE WOULD REQUIRE INTERCHANGEABLE BOOKS

Mileage Would Have to Be Sold on All Roads for Two Cents a Mile Without Any Time Limit Restrictions

The members of post B of the Travelers' Protective association at their last meeting passed a resolution indorsing the purposes of the bill introduced in congress at Washington by Representative Wallin, of New York, to compel all railroads to issue interchangeable mileage books at 2 cents a mile with baggage privileges and without time limit restrictions.

According to instructions in the resolution, J. H. Andrews, secretary of the post, has written to Senator Hoke Smith and Congressman William Schley Howard to investigate the bill and lend it their support if they find that it is an equitable measure.

The letter sent to the senator and congressman is as follows:

"At a meeting of post B held on the evening of April 26 attention was called to a bill recently introduced in the house by Congressman Wallin, of New York, which press dispatches present as having for its object the compelling of the railroads to issue interchangeable mileage books, good on all lines, without any time limit restrictions, and at a maximum rate of 2 cents a mile. The books would be in 500, 1,000 or 5,000 mile books, and the purchasers would be entitled to baggage privileges.

"A resolution was offered and passed at this meeting instructing me to write to you as our representative, to investigate this bill and to lend it your support and influence, if in your judgment it is suitable to all interests, and if not, lend your support toward its perfection and passage, seeking to accomplish the results outlined above in whatever manner it can be accomplished without unreasonable hardship upon any section of the country. It would be unnecessary for me to suggest to you any plan by which this could be accomplished, as the opportunities furnished for forming correct ideas along this line will unquestionably be presented at the proper time for the consideration of all who may be concerned in the bill.

"Thanking you in advance in behalf of the traveling men of Georgia in particular, and our common country as a whole, I beg to remain,

"J. H. ANDREWS,
"Secretary Post B, T. P. A."

The post also inaugurated a special membership campaign to secure 100 new applications between now and May 9. Marcellus Anderson was put in charge of the special campaign and has been hard at work throughout the past week to bring it to a successful conclusion.

Another hundred members before May 9 will give the Georgia division still another delegate to the national convention to be held at Richmond in June. In fact, it will take only about fifty new members to secure the additional delegate, but post B intends to do more and reach the 100 limit. Already the state division has 1,555 members, but it is the ambition of all Georgia travelers' protective association to go to Richmond more than 1,600 strong.

The state board of directors met on Saturday, April 26, for the first time since the Albany convention. E. D. McDonald was elected chairman of the new board and F. B. Florence vice chairman. Those who were present were Jesse Bates, of Macon, state president; Max Banner, of Columbus; Dennis Fleming, of Albany, and E. D. McDonald, F. B. Florence, H. M. Ashe, A. J. Swann, R. A. Broyles, national director, and C. M. Gallmard, all of Atlanta.

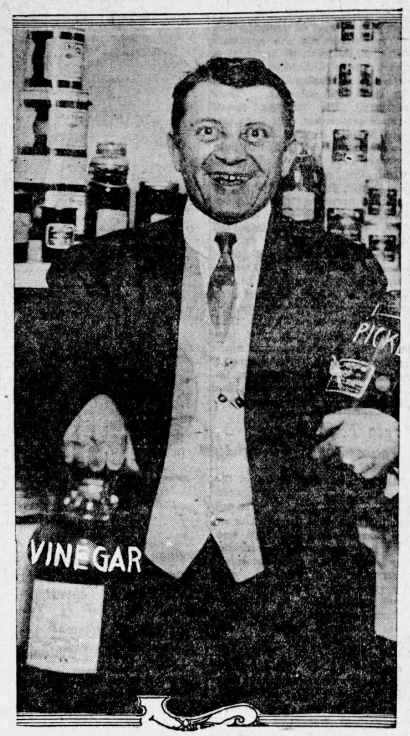

The prize watch for tne largest percentage of increase in membership was awarded to post K, of Albany. Post K will in turn award the watch to Dennis Fleming, who was the member securing the largest number of applications.

The passenger agent of the Seaboard Air Line railway appeared before the board and stated that his road would sell tickets to the Richmond convention at $16.70 round trip from Atlanta, or 1 1-2 cents per mile.

HIX NOW TRAVELS S. C. FOR GRAMLING-SPALDING

J. T. Hix has gone with the Gramling-Spalding Shoe company and will leave for his first trip for them tomorrow. He will make Columbia, S. C., his headquarters and travel South Carolina, which is familiar territory for him, as he covered it several years ago selling clothing. Mr. Hix is also well known to south Georgia travelers, where he worked the dry goods trade, traveling out of Atlanta.

JONES BROTHERS' PICKLE PLANT ENTERTAINS CROWD AT OPENING

Large Number of Jobbers and Retailers Vsit New Pure Food Factory and See Products in Process of Making

More than 300 jobbers and retailers of Atlanta, at the invitation of President G. C. Jones, attended the formal opening of the Atlanta plant of Jones Brothers and company, manufacturers of vinegar, pickles and preserves. The guests were first invited into the offices, where they were served a luncheon of the Jones product—pickles, olives, preserves and sweet cider, and were presented with attractive souvenir jars of preserves.

They were then conducted through the plant and shown in detail how the products are cooked and packed and the methods taken to insure absolute cleanliness. The place is securely screened and no fly can gain entrance. The big vinegar tanks and generators in which pure apple cider vinegar is made were of special interest to the visitors, as also were the cooking processes in the preserving department and the packing and sealing operations in the pickle department.

"The south can produce as fine a grade of vinegar and as delicious pickles as can be manufactured anywhere in the United States," said Mr. Jones, "and this I have proved by the output of the factory here. We have contracted for our pickle onions and cucumbers to be delivered to us this year at Ellenwood, Ga., where we will install a 'salting' station. I expect to see several such plants as ours established here in the next five years. Atlanta is an ideal location for such a business, and its reputation is rapidly being established as a pickle and preserve market."

The officers of the Atlanta company are: G. C. Jones, president; W. R. Simpson, first vice president; Sam P. Jones, second vice president; Charles W. Jones, third vice president, and S. E. Brannon, secretary and treasurer. These, together with W. O. Stamps and K. K. Kelley constitute the board fo directors.

Jones Brothers and company, doing business with separate organizations in each place, have vinegar, pickle and preserving plants at Watkinsville, Cal., Portland, Ore., Denver, Col., Rogers, Ark., and St. Louis, Mo.

The company places special importance on its cooking operations and in view of this have in charge of the cooking department of the Atlanta plant A. E. Sparr, who is one of the most expert cooks in the south. He was formerly with Libby, McNeil & Libby, of Chicago, and later with Jones Brothers and company at Louisville.

"WHEN IS FURNITURE NOT FURNITURE AT ALL?"

House Furnishings Dealer Answers Question That Sometimes Puzzles Retailers

When are house furnishings furniture and when are they house furnishings?

This question sometimes puzzles the retail dealers when they are adding to their stock, some things that are apparently furniture being handled by the house furnishing jobbers while other articles, apparently as much in their line, can be had only from the furniture firms.

There is a trade distinction between the two of "hard goods" and "soft goods." But this draws the line only indefinitely for the house furnishing houses handle such things as baby carriages and refrigerators which could hardly be called "soft goods." The terms are because of the fact that the basis of the "house furnishing" line is carpets, curtains, etc.

W. H. Rosenfeld, of the Rosenfeld company, wholesalers in Atlanta, and other cities of house furnishings, was asked how the retailers could make the distinction with accuracy.

"The simple rule is that," says Mr. Rosenfeld. "Any house furnishings not made by a furniture factory are handled by such concerns as ours. For instance, while a refrigerator would naturally be regarded as furniture, refrigerators are made by companies making only refrigerators, hence we handle them as a specialty. A kitchen table is plainly furniture and would not come in our line. Other such specialties as refrigerators are ice cream freezers, baby carriages, clocks, etc.

"There are more and more retail furniture stores broadening their line to include a complete stock of house furnishing goods. In former years there were not many furniture stores where everything for the house down to table coverings and small framed pictures could be secured as can be done now at practically any store.

"House furnishing concerns like ours sell practically everything along those lines, but we get frequent calls for things plainly in the regular furniture field. It would be well for the retailers to remember the dividing line—house furnishings includes only furniture not made by regular furniture factories."

Georgia Hardware Retailers.

Among the livest of Georgia's live retail merchants are the hardware dealers. Their spirit of alertness is nowhere better illustrated than in the spirited and instructive meetings which they hold annually. Their organization, the Georgia Retail Hardware association, will meet this year in Atlanta on May 28-30, and in conjunction therewith it will hold a hardware show at the Auditorium, at which the principal hardware manufacturing plants of Atlanta and eastern and northern cities will have exhibits. Everything new in machinery, implements and improved hardware products will be on display for the information and entertainment of visitors. T. G. Greene, of Eatonton, Ga., president of the association, and John L. Moore, of Madison, secretary and treasurer, are busy with plans to make the 1913 convention and show the most successful in the history of their association. We bespeak for them the co-operation and aid of business interests of Atlanta, particularly that of the jobbers and manufacturers.

Georgia T. P. A. Increases in Membership

That the Albany convention of the Georgia T. P. A. held last March had ginger in it, cannot be doubted. It was apparent at the time to all who attended that meeting, and it is now showing in post-convention results. Nobody said, "Let's rest on our oars," but everybody said, "Forward with greater vigor than ever before. Let us swell our numbers and increase our efforts toward accomplishing the purposes for which our order was founded."

And the outcome of such a spirit has been that in less than a month more than 100 new members have been added to rolls of the Georgia division, giving it an additional representative at the national convention at Richmond. In fact, the ball just seems to have been started rolling, for, from present indications, another hundred new members before June is a certainty.

The T. P. A.'s are to be congratulated on their vigorous endeavors and their present success should arouse every member to make still further glorious achievement possible.

"Atlanta 1914"

Next year is to be Atlanta's great convention year. Due to the efforts of the Chamber of Commerce, a convention bureau long needed here has been organized and has gone to work with a will. Of course the meeting places of most large gatherings for this year have already been determined. So the bureau is centering its efforts on garnering the big events in 1914. It is already right after 25 or more of the most prized conventions, chief among which is the Shriners' meeting. Per this gathering the city of Atlanta has raised an entertainment fund of more than $75,000.

It remains yet for the grand council of the Shriners at the Dallas convention this summer to decide upon the city for next year's meeting. To boost Atlanta's chances of getting the Shriners and to give wide publicity to the efforts to make next year Atlanta's great convention year, Secretary Houser, of the convention bureau has requested all Atlanta traveling salesmen to register after their names at hotels, "Atlanta 1913."

There is no traveler that does not take pride in registering from Atlanta and the fact that adding "1914" thereto will get something for "the good old town," is guaranty enough that it will be done and done enthusiastically.

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

W. E. Mathews, with the A. M. Robinson company, is one of the last of the dry goods travelers to come in for the new samples. He has been plugging for business right up to yesterday. He is expected here this week from his Florida territory.

R. V. Haslett, with the Liquid Carbonic company, made a special trip to South Carolina last week.

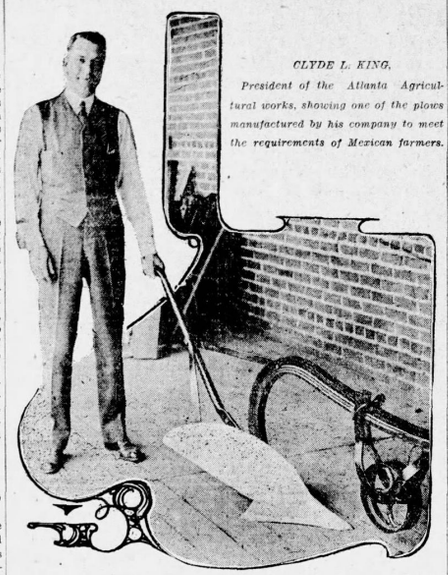

They say at the Liquid Carbonic company that a lot of ice cream will be made in Alabama this summer, judging by the big sales of freezers L. R. Grimes and D. B. Batchelor, their Alabama travelers, have been making recently.

W. J. Hays, who is stirring things up in the city trade for the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, added to his list of opening bills last week with two more sales of stocks for new stores in the city. He and C. S. Shiflet are keeping the R-W-W company a strong factor in the local field.

T. A. Gramling, of the Gramling-Spalding Shoe company, has been ill at his home in Atlanta all week. He was able to visit the office yesterday for a short while.

Sam Saltzman and eLon Rosenberg, salesmen with the Hirshberg company, attended the convention of the Georgia Educational association convention yesterday and interested many of the delegates in the special "theme tablets" their company handles.

MEXICAN IMPLEMENT TRADE SHOWS DEMAND FOR ONE-HANDLE PLOWS

CLYDE L. KING,

President of the Atlanta Agricultural works, showing one of the plows manufactured by his company to meet the requirements of Mexican farmers.

Mexican Farmers Like to Have One Hand Free to Roll Their Ever-Present Cigarettes—Atlanta Factory Is Making Carload of "One-Handlers" for Shipment to Guadalajara

There are oddities to be found in the wide range of Atlanta-made goods that the average Atlantian never conceives. When the proposed Manufacturers' Exhibit building becomes a reality it will be something of a show for the merely curious as well as for visiting buyers.

Here is one of the articles that embodies much of the unusual. It is the one-handle plow, unknown in this section, but in common use in Mexico. The one shown in the photograph is from a carload that will in a few days be on its way to distant Guadalajara, Mexico, from the Atlanta Agricultural works. The order came from the Mexican town last week.

The Mexican farmer wants one hand free to handle his cigarette. It is not rare to see a Mexican so expert at handling his tobacco that he will continue his way down the furrow behind his oxen and his one-handled plow, rolling and lighting a new cigarette with his free hand.

Clyde L. King, president of the agricultural works, has not acquired the art of rolling a cigarette with one hand, he says, and hence is not demonstrating this feature in the picture.

This plow, made for the Mexicans, is different from the average plow used in Georgia in several features besides the one handle. There is the gauge wheel, common on the farms in the west, but not often on the plows of the southern farmers, which regulates the depth of the furrow. Without this the Mexican could hardly handle the implement with one hand as he does.

Owing to the lower average stature of the Mexicans, these plows are made with the handle six inches lower than those made for our American farms.

"There is a great deal of this Mexican trade that we can secure by going after it," is the opinion of Mr. King. "We are going to make a strong bid for agricultural implement business in Mexico, and in South America, too, later."

J. W. Evans, with the agricultural works, who has placed considerable Mexican business for this Atlanta concern on previous trips, will make another trip there in July, provided no revolutionary disturbances crop out in the meantime, he says.

The Drummer When He's Broke

Talk about your troubles,
Mr. Farmer on the farm,
Be the weather freezing cold
Or be the weather warm—

Can't be colder than the cold
That hits the Traveling Man,
Out upon the weary road
Without a cent in hand.

Can't be hotter than the heat
(Not, to save your neck)
That is kindled 'neath his feet
While waiting for his check.

Hotel bills and laundry bills
Should at once be paid—
Tight Wad, Skin-Flint—
Everything to his charge is laid.

But the bell boys hanging 'round
Waiting to be tipped,
Do not know he's waiting, too,
'Cause his money's slipped.

Waiting, waiting all day long,
Feeling like a wreck,
Watching every coming mail
For that confounded check.

Mr. Farmer, in the night-time
Soothing syrups heal your brief,
In the day-time cradle-rocking
Sometimes comes to your relief.

Good wine sometimes dispels troubles,
Some go up in fairy smoke,
But there are no soothing syrups
For the DRUMMER WHEN HE'S BROKE.

"ENFORCE HOTEL LAW," SAYS SHACKELFORD

Declares Fire Escape Provisions Should Be Made Effective for Safety

Editor Firing Line:

Every traveling man should sit up and take notice of this news article in The Atlanta Journal of April 30. The hotel at Ocilla, Ga., burned, and I quote the following:

"The guests were on the second floor of the building, and cut off by the flames from every stairway, and made their escape by going down the columns of the veranda." Now, my friends, who have to use hotels, we have a law that says that all hotels charging $2 per day and over must provide fire escapes. Now this law is a dead one, without a local and sanitary inspector to enforce it. It is left up to the local authorities to enforce and politics comes in the way of duty of local officeholders or police authorities.

Now, fellow traveling men, just think what a serious matter this is. Every time you go to bed in one of these death traps, you take your life in your hands, but still the great state of Georgia tells us that she can not afford to pay an inspector to see that the law is enforced, so our lives and health will be protected.

Travelers, rise up in your right, and demand from the legislature this year that they amend the hotel bill to include an inspector, and we will be able to lay down and take our well-earned rest, without the fear of being burnt up. And can sit at our meals without sharing our victuals with the fly. For we now have the law, and only need the man to enforce it.

Do not forget the letters to your representatives that I have been asking for. If you have not started them, get busy at once.

Yours very truly,

"SCATTER SUNSHINE" IS DUTY OF EVERY T. P. A.

Jenkins Tells What Members Are Doing for Uplift of Humanity

Editor Firing Line:

The representatives of commerce of today are the greatest benefactors of the human race. Going and coming as they do, throughout the land, they are representatives of the home and those principles that are ennobling and uplifting in man. They are not only distributing articles of trade, but in their association with men they scatter sunshine.

We believe in the same kind of justice and love that the sociologists are now telling us about, only taking a more commendable route. We believe in winning souls to a better sense of what is right by leading and not driving. Selfishness is so strongly implanted within the natures of all that when you undertake to compel or force a noble thought of higher aim the people rebel and we loose the very essence of what we are driving at.

Everybody wants a clean town, for instance. The writer would like to see Atlanta free from all impurities, but it can not be and as we must admit it can not be, we believe it more sensible to consider man in the nature that he was formed. People in each age back to the year one with their temples and gods, have tried to sway mankind forever, but all have perished, one by one. We trust the principles now being taught will not perish also. If they can bring about better wages, and show employes how to save their money, it would mean more homes, less vice, more health, less disease, more virtue, less prostitution, more divine womanhood, less deceit and wretchedness, fewer lies and more truth, and greater independence.

We do not like to see people in the attitude of driving us, saying what we shall and what we shall not have. Too many rebels for that. Let us rather preach and teach these good things until all the people will know and understand and see the beauty of it all.

The T. P. A.'s will on June 9, meet in congress at Richmond, Va. There we will meet delegates from all over the United States. People who believe in friendship, fellowship and brotherly love—not for just a certain few, but all. Why should revenge, hate and malice live in the hearts of men? Is it right to hate a poor, unsuccessful man and pass him by unnoticed. That is what is being done every day. Certain it is this is not love or friendship. If the vice crusaders, or sociologists will teach men how to love men and be friendly with men, not a certain few, but all, they will have accomplished the best thing that God Almighty has ever given man the power to do. The traveling men are not narrow in creed or stingy in soul. We carry the torchlight of liberty and love. We believe in freedom and justice, and the brotherhood of man. As the rays of light extend far out, as R. A. Broyles would say, "under the blue canopy of heaven," so the millions of Liberty's to greet the storm-tossed mariner and bid him welcome home, so the light and influence of the drummer is dispelling the shadows around sorrow and sadness *and lighting the burdens of a sin*cursed and sorrowing world.

The illustration shows the fireproof concrete building erected by the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad at Hunter and Haynes streets, half of which has been leased and will be occupied on June 1 by the McCord-Stewart company, wholesale grocers. In its new home it will find a place admirably suited to its needs, one that possesses both ample railroad trackage and commodious, up-to-date warerooms and office facilities. The building is 300 feet long and five stores high.

LURID COLORED CARS NO LONGER IN DEMAND

Dealer Says Black and Quiet Shades Now Much More Popular

"There has certainly been a great change in the popular tastes in the matter of colors for automobiles during the last several years," says E. D. Crane, the automobile and buggy dealer. "I recall that when I first took an agency several years ago the brilliant greens and lurid reds were common, but it is very rare now that any one wants a 'red devil.'

"The general preference now seems to be for black painted cars, with some calls for grays and quiet shades of other colors.

"Several years ago a manufacturer decided to put all of his cars out with only one color—red. No manufacturer now would think of such a thing, unless he made the one color black."

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

Road of Reminiscence

Tales of adventure along the way told by Atlanta Travelers

Lesson in the Value of Time

"There is a certain merchant in Georgia that many Atlanta salesmen have met, and they will know who I mean when I describe his method of greeting new salesmen," remarked an Atlanta traveler the other day.

"Nearly every merchant has his own particular set manner of welcoming a salesman when he first calls and, as all salesmen know, the method of some of our friends of the trade cannot be called exactly a welcome.

"This man belonged to the latter class. He had a little formula that never varied. It was like this: A salesman walks into the store debonairly. His honor, the proprietor, is usually standing near the doorway actively engaged in doing nothing and apparently has as much leisure as the several loungers who are usually there on the long benches he has in the front part of his big general store.

"The salesman, noting that the merchant is not occupied, sees a good chance to get his man interested in his line. He feels confident of a good hearing and possibilities of a big sale fill his mind—that is the way he feels unless he has been warned.

"He introduces himself. Then comes the stunt that Mr. Merchant pulls and that has made a lot of salesmen madder than they ever were over the bummest of hotel service in the smallest of branch road towns.

"He would no sooner hear that his visitor was a salesman than out would come his watch.

"'Give you five minutes to say what you've got to say,' he would jerk out.

"If it was a green salesman who showed the slightest discomfiture over this shot, the loungers in the store would be heard to chuckle, adding to the salesman's embarrassment.

"I know one Atlanta salesman who replied, 'I haven't got a d—n thing to say to you,' and walked out.

"When he volleyed this mandate at me on my first visit I remarked that I would come again when he wasn't so busy and started to leave.

"But he asked me to stay and show my line and condescendingly said he wouldn't enforce his five-minute limit. I stayed, of course, but I didn't drop the five-minute matter. I was still feeling peeved. Instead of showing it, I resolved to ridicule his lofty airs.

"While opening my samples, I looked at my own watch and talked about the value of the time of busy men as if I recognized that he was a big business man who had to watch the minutes.

"I kept on defending his 'five-minute' remark and in such an apparently serious way that within a few minutes the loungers that had grinned at me were soon grinning at the merchant who still tried to appear grave and dignified while I talked of his precious time.

"After I had taken a small order and repacked my samples I pulled out a fat roll of bills. I had just received a check from the house and had had it cashed for bills mostly of small denomination.

"'I am representing a house,' I said. 'That follows a liberal policy and recognizes the value and the privileges of its customers. I find I have gone ten minutes over the five minutes and I know that my house will be willing for me to remunerate you for the extra attention shown me. Allow me to offer you $15.'

"The laugh they all gave him then was too much for him. He showed he had a sense of humor by joining in.

"That was many years ago and he has never pulled a watch on me since. I am told that he has about abandoned this old trick entirely. Habit is strong however. I expect now and then some salesman making the town will still be greeted with that old remark, 'five minutes to say what you've got to say.'"

OVERHAULING, REPACKING SAMPLES MAKE BUSY DAYS FOR SALESMEN OF SUNDRY LINES

J. M. Bennett (on left), and J. R. Thornton (on right), travelers for the S. P. Richards company, are shown preparing and packing their samples for the fall trade.

Overhauling samples.

What salesman is there that enjoys this task, with its enervating detail and lack of the human element that makes the work on the road a game to be played with zest.

Then consider the travelers for the wholesalers of stationery and druggists' sundries, all you salesmen for other lines, and count yourselves fortunate that you do not have their thousands of samples to overhaul and put in order.

Just now salesmen of the S. P. Richards company, one of Atlanta's big houses in this line, are doing their semi-annual stunt of getting samples shipshape for the new season.

There is one line only that rivals this one for number and variety of articles, namely, notions, and they are now sold largely from photographs.

Each of the salesmen of sundries spends about two weeks here on this job.

Though consisting practically all of small knick knacks, the line these men carry runs to four trunks and makes excess baggage expense considerably more than railroad fare.

The Richards company's first complete catalogue has just gone to the printer and with it in use the salesmen will be able to reduce their line of samples considerably after this season.

In the meantime, any salesman that would like to see a real job of sample overhauling should drop in to see the Richards travelers.

HOSIERY AND SHOES ARE FINE SALES COMBINATION

Shoe Wholesaler Advises All Retail Stores to Add a Hosiery Line

Hosiery and shoes have now become close companions in trade as well as in use.

Speaking of this feature of the retail shoe business, E. G. Thomas, manager of the Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company, and a wholesale shoe man of many years' experience who is closely in touch with all conditions in this section, says that any retailer who is not handling the hosiery sideline is overlooking a well paying proposition.

"It was not so many years ago," says Mr. Thomas "that no shoe stores sold hosiery. When one of the Rice & Hutchins men advanced the idea in connection with the company's retail stores in New York and Boston he was not taken very seriously. If was given a try, however, and paid so well that soon every Rice & Hutchins retail store had a stock of hosiery.

"Practically all progressive retailers of shoes all over the country are now in line and shoe stores are now worked regularly by hosiery salesmen and most of these dealers are among their regular customers.

"There are many dealers in the small towns not yet carrying the hosiery side line. I would advise them to add it at once."

Ben S. Thompson, the old faithful ex-secretary of No. 18, was with us last meeting night. The looks of Ben was good for sore eyes. He now says that Madison, his home, is the best city in America.

C. D. Montgomery returned from the Sunday school convention, where great honors were bestowed on him, to attend to his U. C. T. duties. Other U. C. T. members should follow his example.

F. C. Hudnall was handing out his pleasant smiles to the boys last meeting night.

A. L. Brooks, past councillor, was with us, and he livened things up with his logical arguments.

B. R. Pennington, No. 18's faithful conductor, was out. He and his chewing tobacco always make good music.

J. B. Davison acted as junior councilor and lent great grace to the cheer.

W. H. Hyle, a new member, bid fair to be a live wire.

G. A. Gershon, of No. 505, was a visitor. No. 18 always welcomes a live wire like Brother Gershon.

No. 18 put a motion through for a joint meeting with No. 505 for Saturday, May 31, at 3 o'clock for the initiation of candidates. No. 18 has some fifteen or more to go through.

W. U. CO. GRANTS T. P. A.'S NEW TELEGRAPH PRIVILEGES

Members May Send Collect Messages Without Necessity of Cash Deposit

Editor Firing Line: I am handing you herewith copy of a letter I have just received from the manager of the Western Union Telegraph company, which explains itself.

I trust that you will be able to publish this letter in your Sunday issue, as information to our membership at large, most of whom would undoubtedly see it if published in the Firing Line.

While this action on the part of the telegraph company makes no concession, still their decision, and order to their operators throughout the country to accept collect telegrams from our members who identify themselves as such, with the card provided for this purpose by the Travelers' Protective association, will prove a great convenience to thousands of men every day. This is a concrete illustration of some of the courtesies extended to our membership, and emphasizes the importance of every one eligible to membership connecting himself with this organization, aside from the insurance protection provided at cost to its members, there are a number of benefits accruing to the members besides the protection furnished in the accident insurance feature of the organization.

Yours very truly,
JAMES H. ANDREWS,
Secretary of Post B, T. P. A.
Atlanta, Ga., May 2, 1913.

The letter referred to by Mr. Andrews is as follows:

Mr. J. H. Andrews, Secretary Georgia Division, T. P. A., City—Dear Sir: It gives me great pleasure to advise you that general instructions have been issued to the managers of all Western Union Telegraph offices shall accept, without deposit of the cash guarantee, collect telegrams signed by members of your organization who identify themselves as such.

We will appreciate it very much if these instructions can be placed upon your bulletin board, for the information of all your members.

At the same time we will be glad to have any individual member bring to our attention discourtesy or failure on the part of any of our managers or other employes to comply with the instructions or recognize credentials.

Yours very truly,
W. G. PEEBLES, Manager.
Atlanta, Ga., May 1, 1913.

WITH SOUTHERN RETAILERS

C. F. Holberg, general merchant, of Senoia, Ga., is a member of the legislature and is an enthusiastic supporter of the hotel inspection bill. He will come to Atlanta this summer prepared to do earnest work to have the bill passed. Mr. Holberg is in the hotel business and also conducts a drug store and jewelry shop in addition to general merchandise.

R. Hughes, grocery merchant, of Newnan, Ga., who has been ill for several months, is now out and able to attend to his duties again.

E. C. Pitts of Turin, Ga., dealer in fancy groceries, says that May fishing is fine and that it's pretty hard to keep awake in the good old summer time, notwithstanding the present good trade. At least that's what P. S. Brownlee, traveler for the E. L. Adams company reports.

J. R. Cole, banker and general merchant of Sharpsburg, Ga., says that business has been so rushing this season that he hasn't found the opportunity to visit Atlanta for a long time.

George Burnett of Burnett & Merrell, of Carrollton, Ga., complains of being tired from overwork. "This is a good sign," says W. Y. Bailey, traveler for Fain & Stamps, "for it shows that Burnett & Merrell are doing a fine spring business. Mr. Burnett, however, is never too tired to give a cordial greeting to traveling salesmen and the patrons of his store."

One of the hustling general merchandise firms of Montgomery, Ala., is that of A. Heilpern & Sons, Eugene Heilpern of this firm is past exalter ruler of the Montgomery Elks and enjoys a large circle of friends among the Atlanta Elks also. E. E. Shyer of the Consolidated Paper company on a recent visit to Montgomery found Mr. Heilpern up to his ears in the work of the spring season.

"C. B. Mozeley, general merchant of Palmetto, Ga., who is known as the 'Original Charlie,' reports trade condition looking good," said P. S. Brownlee of the E. L. Adams company Saturday, "and Charlie ought to know for he has been in the merchandise a long time."

The Farmers Supply company is a new general merchandise firm recently opened in the progressive city of Raymond, Ga.

According to W. Y. Bailey of Fain & Stamps, R. F. Eaves general merchant, of Cartersville, Ga., was wearing an unusually broad smile last week on account of good business and was preparing at the time for a short respite from the rush by way of a fishing trip.

Calloway's Department Store of La Grange, Ga., is one of the wide awake mercantile establishments on the West Point railroad. "I think their grocery department is one of the most up-to-date to be found anywhere," says J. C. Gwens, traveler for Fain & Stamps.

SALES OF CAPS RUN TO RECORD FIGURES

Once Regarded as Suitable for Boys Only, Their Use Is Now General

More caps are being sold this season than ever before, according to the Silvey-Smith Hat company, one of the Atlanta wholesale houses.

The vogue of the cap which has been so pronounced recently has swept the volume of sales on this part of the Atlanta wholesalers line to record figures.

The English golf caps are having such a sale that soon Georgia will likely rival London in this respect, where it seems everybody wears a cap who doesn't wear a silk hat.

Speaking of caps, the Atlanta wholesalers recall that it is not many years ago that practically the only caps they sold were for boys. They have now become so common as headwear for men that the Silvey-Smith sale of caps for men are now in excess of the sales of boys.

Another effect of the great popularity the cap has now, say the wholesalers, is practically to kill the demand for "youths' hats," as the trade term has it. These are the hats made in shapes and sizes especially suited to boys of the ages of fourteen to eighteen or so. Where many orders for such stock came in to the wholesalers heretofore, the orders are now for caps, and mostly the rakish looking English golf caps.

O. E. Kenimer, salesman for the M. C. Kiser company, quotes E. M. Slade, a well-known merchant at Meansville, Ga., as saying that business with him is well ahead of the same time last year. Cotton in that neighborhood is coming up in good shape.

G. M. Turner, a Silvey-Smith traveler, tells us that H. E. Bookler, of Washington, Ga., is now well established in his new line. Mr. Bookler is now operating a retail clothing and furnishing goods business.

In talking of live retailers who recognize the value of advertising, E. L. Kerrison, who travels for the Dobbs & Wey company, mentions J. B. Brogdon, of Suwanee, Ga. Mr. Brogdon operates a "store of many departments." He is a consistent advertiser.

W. C. Grove, at Lincolnton, Ga., is reported by Sam Hanes, of the Ragan-Malone company, to be contemplating the erection of a new building, the rapid growth of his business being the reason.

Mashburn & Fitzgerald, merchants at Rochelle, Ga., have just moved into a new building, says F. H. Corry, who travels down that way for the Ragan-Malone company.

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

ON THE ROAD AND IN THE OFFICE WITH ATLANTA'S BUSY ARMY OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

J. C. Owens declares that one of the busiest men to be found in the city of West Point, Ga., is Henry Hart, grocery merchant, and that the volume of his business reflects his never ceasing activity.

L. A. Fleischman is the new city salesman for the Binder Frame Manufacturing company. He started last week. While new to this line in the city, he is not new at the selling game. He broke into it as a traveler for the Atlanta Paper company several years ago.

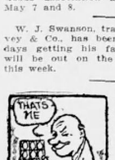

The entire sales staff of B. F. Avery & Sons will be on hand the last of this month for the annual convention of the Georgia Retail Hardware association, to be held here May 28, 29 and 30.

George C. Sweeney, with B. F. Avery & Sons, blew into Atlanta yesterday for a short visit and W. T. Stapler is expected here this week.

H. C. Parkinson, from Columbia, and W. W. Bullock, from Newberry, the South Carolina salesmen for John Silvey & Co., came over to Atlanta last week for their new line of fall samples.

R. K. Rambo, of John Silvey & Co., will attend the Southern Wholsale Dry Goods association at Chattanooga on May 7 and 8.

W. J. Swanson, traveler for John Silvey & Co., has been here for several days getting his fall line ready. He will be out on the firing line again this week.

The Clark Woodenware company have added a new item to their line. They are now making cardboard egg cases at their factory here and are already marketing a good output, though they added the line only a few days ago. Clark salesmen are equipped with samples and are out to push sales on these cases so hard that soon every dozen eggs bought at any grocery will be delivered in them instead of a paper bag.

C. F. Holt, that "young old salesman," who distributes pickles and preserves, spent last week working the trade at Macon and vicinity.

E. P. Lewis, with the McClure Ten-Cent company, was called home last week by the death of his mother at his old home in Campbell county.

Max Samuels, with Hirshberg company, says he has had only one customer during the last week to call at Sample. And he says he is not such an easy one to handle. The Hirshberg company travelers are all hard at work now on the samples, including Sam Slatzman.

S. F. Hein, J. R. Jordan and Ernest Feibelman are the only Montag Brothers salesmen not out with their line for the new season, and these remaining ones will strike the firing line this week.

Montag Brothers' compositors and proof readers had to hang out the red flag and go slow on the curves last week. The cause was some orders from South America for printed stationery with Spanish wording.

W. W. Scott and D. P. McDaniel, of the Ward-Truitt company sales force, have already been out a week with the fall stuff. Luther Parker has just come in for his samples, and the whole bunch will be out with the new line within a week.

Frank S. Dean, of Atlanta Agricultural works, devoted the past week to jury duty. Frank tried to work the dodge of belonging to the army to get excused, but the judge told him that belonging to the army of traveling salesmen didn't go—he served.

Lawrence King, of the Atlanta Agricultural works, spent the week checking over his order sheets for the past season and getting up dope for his summer campaign. Lookout, boys; something doing. He has not only figured out what they have bought, but what they are going to buy for next season. Lawrence is some figurer as well as some salesman.

"Dad" Eley, now with the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company, is working in south Georgia now and has already demonstrated that he can sell this line down there in the same lively way he heretofore sold groceries in his old territory in north Georgia. "Dad" is missed from his old stamping grounds, his old friends around Athens would like to see him breeze over that way with his "deserving preserving" company line of stuff.

S. A. Wardlaw, president of the Dixie Tile and Cement company, was elected chairman of the railroad committee of Post B, T. P. A., at its last meeting, succeeding S. J. Jones, who resigned on account of the press of other matters. Mr. Wardlaw has long been an enthusiastic T. P. A., and will handle the business that comes before his committee in vigorous style.

Jack W. Evans, of the Atlanta Agricultural works, has spent the week in agonizing anticipation of orders to get busy taking stock. Every time Jack sees the boss coming he thinks of important business downtown.

Ike Hirshberg, of the Hirschberg company, is enjoying a short stay at Atlantic City, following a visit to New York buying goods. He will visit New England paper mills in a few days.

T. B. Anderson, with the McClure Ten-Cent company, has been for several days at Lithonia looking after an opening of a ten-cent department in one of the stores there.

L. B. LeSesne, who rounds up city orders for H. L. Singer company, had a record day's business last Thursday.

C. P. Webb, salesman for the Warren Manufacturing company, has been at home in Atlanta for several days ill.

Lawrence H. Moore, of the Atlanta Agricultural works, has been mighty busy during the past week getting off samples of Spring Tooth cultivators to his prospective customers. Lawrence says that the fellow that beats him selling these goods this season has got to bat over .500 and furnish his own bat.

Joe Wallace, with the H. L. Singer company, made his first trip down the Georgia road last week that he has taken for many moons. It is his old territory and will be worked by him regularly from now on.

Travelers for the Rosenfeld company will spend Sunday as follows: J. M. Frankel, at Hopkinsville, Ky.; H. J. Kent, at New Orleans; H. B. Block, at Valdosta; Albert Levy, at Wilmington, N. C., and "Billy Sunshine" in Atlanta.

J. A. Massey, city salesman of the E. L. Adams company, has gone to Charleston, S. C., as a representative of the City Salesmen's association to see about making arrangements for the annual outing of the association to that city this year.

C. M. McKain is the city salesman of the Jones Brothers company and is doing a fine work popularizing his company's products with the dealers of Atlanta.

Cliff Edwards, of Fain & Stamps, reports the best week and the best April business that he has ever enjoyed. Bill Quarles is enthusiastic over the way Gold Banner canned peaches have been selling.

Secretary Brownlee, of U. C. T. 505, reports that all the sick and lame of this council have recovered and are back on duty again, and that Fulton 505 continues to initiate candidates every meeting night. Several were put over the hot sands last night.

Ben Messer, of Fain & Stamps, wants to acknowledge his thanks for the mention in last Sunday's Firing Line of the sales race between him and Tom Clyatt. He thinks that this helped him to beat Clyatt in the April sales. Clyatt, however, says if he can continue to get prominent mention in The Firing Line that Messer will never be able to do it again.

W. B. Hobson, of Newnan, formerly a grocery salesman, has opened a brokerage business for himself at Newnan. All the knights of the grip wish him success in his new undertaking.

W. O. Stamps attended the meeting of the City Salesmen's association yesterday and invited them to visit and inspect the pickle and preserving plant of Jones Bros. & Co. next Saturday. Mr. Stamps is a director in this, the newest of Atlanta's food manufacturing companies.

E. E. Fulton and J. W. O'Donnell, Dobbs & Wey Co. travelers, are spending this Sunday on the road.

J. T. Cook, who has been on the city firing line for H. L. Singer company now for several months, has a new Flanders car he will start whizzing around in this week. The company are fondly expecting this convenience in making his rounds to increase Cook's sales, but they are wisely allowing him a week or two to get well acquainted with the machine's disposition before expecting the big rush of orders he is sure to turn in.

N. W. Keefer, representative of the Burt Olney products, was so pleased with the write-up in the Firing Line last Sunday of the trip of his "Ketchup Kiddies" in Bill Gaston's car, that he bought all The Journals to be found in Birmingham, Ala., where he happened to be when the article appeared.

W. T. Duncan and J. C. Owens, of Fain & Stamps, report that the farmers are all well up with their crops, in fact are so far advanced that they are now resting up until the rains render the soil suitable for further cultivation.

E. E. Sayer, of the Consolidated Paper company, came in Saturday from a successful trip to Montgomery, Ala. He reports spending a few hours on a delightful fishing trip near Pensacola, Fla., last week.

H. P. Loveless, of the Consolidated Paper company, has disappointed the Firing Line readers. He has no big fish story to tell of the trip he took Saturday a week ago. He was on the fishing grounds at 6 o'clock in the morning, but the cold rain soon drove him home, with but a few small fish to show for what had been planned as a big day's sport.

Bill Quarles, of Fain & Stamps, was detained at home part of last week on account of sickness. Bill's energy makes it hard for him to stay at home, even though he happens to be slightly "under the weather."

A. C. Leske, the collar salesman and member of U. C. T. No. 505, is in for the week, after an extensive trip through the Carolinas and Florida.

S. P. Smith, who is one of the regular "ins" at the Consolidated Paper company, was absent yesterday. He is on a three weeks' trip through southeastern Georgia.

Bill Gaston, of Fain & Stamps, enjoyed one of the largest month's trade in April that he has had for some time, and this, too, was notwithstanding the fact that he had a broken arm and had to write with his left hand and employ the services of a chauffeur to run his car.

R. W. Holcomb, of the Cotton States Supply company, a member of U. C. T. No. 505, will spend Sunday with home folks, after a trip through south Georgia.

C. E. Byrd, the coffee salesman and member of Council No. 505, arrived safely in Atlanta Saturday. Secretary Brownlee notes this with some surprise.

J. A. Woodliff is vieing with precedent smashing presidents in setting aside time honored customs. It has long been the custom of Mr. Woodliff to make trips of not over a week in length, and usually only three or four days. Now he has just put in an entire two weeks on the road.

F. H. Corry, the Ragan-Malone south Georgia traveler, up here for a short visit now, says prospects for "sugar boilers" this fall look good. South Georgia tralevers who get a chance to attend these affairs might well be envied by the salesmen outside the sugar belt, for they are missing a lot of fun.

H. G. Fulenweider, who works Florida for the Liquid Carbonic company, came over from Jacksonville for a couple of days last week to see the folks at the Atlanta headquarters. Jacksonville is pushing Atlanta now for the lead in soda fountains.

J. A. Cook and F. M. Catlett, of Atlanta Casket company, are in the city for Sunday.

B. V. Brumfield, of Atlanta Casket company, will be in Vicksburg during the following week, while the Funeral Directors' association of Mississippi is in session.

W. P. Price, of the E. L. Adams company, accompanied by his family, left yesterday in his automobile to spend Sunday at his old home at Gainesville, Georgia.

R. E. Dawson is one of the travelers who "puts 'em over" for Jones Bros. & Co. Since the second week in April he has sold three carloads of the Jones vinegar and pickle products.

L. T. Lutz, of the Maisby company, closed two deals in Florida last week for two "Big Four" tractors.

John H. Shipp, of the Maisby company, brought in a nice bunch of orders from South Carolina last week. He was in the city all the week and sold one of his North Carolina customers a $2,000 sawmill outfit.

C. B. Rosser will be out on the Georgia road Monday with his new fall line for the A. M. Robinson company.

All of the M. C. Kiser company salesmen are reported to have just closed one of the best weeks they have had for the last month or so.

Several of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt men came in for the week-end. Among them are R. M. McWhorter, J. S. Cheek, J. L. Yates and F. W. Webb.

FINE MIRRORS PLAY BIG PART IN THE SALE AND USE OF UP-TO-DATE SODA FOUNTAINS

Not a pose for a pose's sake or for the purpose of "sprucing up," J. L. Shipp is examining the mirror of one of his new fountains when he and his reflection were caught by the camera.

They Add Much to the Display of Mountings and Equipment and Also Prove Large Source of Enjoyment for Patrons—Atlanta Is Fast Becoming Known as the "Soda Fountain City"

"A big soda fountain without a mirror would be about as hard to sell as one without faucets," said J. L. Shipp in talking of the specimen fountains he has just received and installed at his shows rooms on South Forsyth street.

"They must have mirrors, and large mirrors of the finest grade. The change in recent years of the syrup containers and the faucets to the front from their old place against the wall has made the mirror a more important feature than ever before.

"More large mirrors are used now for the soda fountains than for any other purpose. The most popular fountains now are the ones with the great, plain, open framework at the back, enclosing an immense mirror.

"The framework may be of expensive materials and rich in design, but it must not encroach on the space necessary for the big mirror.

"Besides doubling the display power of the fixtures and equipment of the fountains, mirrors are a source of unfailing joy for patrons. Nothing pleases a well-dressed woman so much as to be able to sip her soda drink slowly and glance at herself at intervals in the mirror. Nor are men entirely free from this harmless sort of vanity."

Mr. Shipp has only recently taken the agency here of Robert M. Green & Sons, manufacturers. With this addition to the colony of soda fountain factory agencies here, Atlanta further clinches its claims of being the "Soda Fountain City" in the selling of fountains as well as the operation them.

M. AND M. ASSN. PRINTS SONG FOR RETAILERS

"Everybody Join the Chorus." Fully 50,000 Copies to Be Distributed

In keeping with the purpose of the organization, namely, that of upbuilding Atlanta's wholesale and manufacturing market, H. T. Moore, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association has just issued an attractive booklet setting forth Atlanta's advantages.

The title of the booklet is, "If you keep a store" with the subtitle "Song for Southern Merchants" and everybody is requested to "join the chorus."

The contents consist of reasons why retailers should buy in Atlanta, written in the form of a prose rhyme. The "verses" being separated by the words, "Buy in Atlanta" in capital letters.

The last pages contain a list of the firms who are members of the association arranged alphabetically according to the lines in which they deal.

The opening paragraph is as follows: "If you keep a store in Hometown and you stock it up with stuff brought from far and distant places. Just the local trade to bluff: if you skip the near-by market and you travel far to buy, is it fair to scold the natives if the same trick they try?"

In the following paragraphs are happily set forth Atlanta's facilities and wholesale offerings:

"If you have, in easy distance, base of requisite supplies, don't you think you ought to buy there? That's the place for you—get wise. Here's Atlanta, good and ready, with the goods you need to buy; from her factories strong and steady she and Dixie's wants supply.

"She can furnish shoes and shovels, silks and syrups, shirts and strings, overalls and hats and cook stoves—yes, a thousand other things. She can furnish fads and fancies, clothes to wear and food to eat—everything, in short, that's needed to make up your stock complete.

"If you'd come and see these factories where they make this goodly stuff, you would say, 'This town's a wonder—she's all right, she's good enough.' You would realize instanter that Atlanta, close to home, is the place for southern merchants—there's no need for them to roam."

Fully 50,000 of the booklets have been printed and these will be distributed among the members of the association and by them inclosed in their regular correspondence and thus reach the retailers throughout the south.

A Hint

Mr. Spriggins (gently)—"My dear, a Boston man was shot at by a burglar, and his life was saved by a button which the bullet struck."

Mrs. Spriggins—"Well, what of it?"

Mr. Spriggins—"Nothing, only the button must have been on."—Sacred Heart Review.

What is a Real Business Man?

Why, he's the fellow that's right on the job day and night, looking after the leaks; getting ready for a rainy day; keeping the resources well within a safe limit; guarding the credit of the house; reaching out after new business. He's a regular conserver. He's a good man to pattern after—no difference what you undertake. He's the man that's sensible enough to apply business methods to his personal health. When is eyes begin to annoy him—give out easily, strain and will not permit him to do continuous, close work without unnecessary fatigue, he gets busy—has an examination made and gets glasses. That's simply good business. Suffice to say we've been fitting glasses for the southern people for fifty years, and—well, that's sufficient for a real business man to know.

ATLANTA MAIDS AS MOUNTAIN CLIMBERS

As Miss Era Betzner says, this is not the day of the clinging vine, but the day of the atheletic girl.

CLIMBING Stone Mountain is the fashion in exercise.

The mode in hats is all brim or no brim. The style in shoes is all heel or no heel. But the modish exercise has no alternative.

Mountains are the up-hill way to health, beauty, and happiness, and Stone Mountain is more advantageous than the tip-top of Pike's Peak or the Alps.

It is a more individual mountain, it is more interesting to climb, and it is "slipperier."

To climb other mountains is to follow an ascent of earth and bowlders. But to scale Stone Mountain is to pursue a path of solid rock that slips all the way.

It is what threading a needle is to a man or sharpening a pencil is to a woman. These are absorbing, if provoking, occupations. Climbing Stone Mountain is a difficult, but never an irritating pastime.

IT IS ALSO UNIQUE.

It is also unique recreation. Other mountains are much alike, other mountain-climbing is much the same. But ascending this knoll of stone is different.

Only now is the fact being discovered. Excursions there during past springs and summers have been casual; during the present spring and the approaching summer they are to be the thing.

The mountain-climbing fad has reached everywhere, and here in particular.

Wherever mountains raise their heads, climbers are seeking health and beauty by walking up and down them. Climbers are scaling the Himalayas, the Alps, the Andes, and Stone Mountain.

If one is not a mountain-climber, one is not a la mode. One is antique, like a speint or real mahogany furniture.

Much is said of golf and tennis, of chess and of

VIII.---MISS DELAMAR'S UNDERSTUDY

A YOUNG man runs two chances of marrying the wrong woman. He marries her because she is beautiful, and because he persuades himself that every other lovable attribute must be associated with such beauty, or because she is in love with him. If this latter is the case, she gives certain values to what he thinks and to what he says which no other woman gives, and so he observes to himself, "This is the woman who best understands me."

You can reverse this and say that young women run the same risks, but as men are seldom beautiful, the first danger is eliminated. Women still marry men, however, because they are loved by them, and in time the woman grows to depend upon this love and to need it. And is not content without it, and so she consents to marry the man for no other reason than because he cares for her. For if a dog, even, runs up to you wagging his tail and acting as though he were glad to see you, you pat him on the head and say, "What a nice dog." You like him because he likes you, and not because he belongs to a fine breed of animal and could take blue ribbons at bench shows.

This is the story of a young man who was in love with a beautiful woman, and who allowed her beauty to compensate him for many other things. When she failed to understand what he said to her he smiled and looked at her and forgave her at once, and when she began to grow uninteresting, he would take up his hat and go away and so he never knew how very uninteresting she might possibly be if she were given time enough in which to demonstrate the fact. He never considered that, were he married to her, he could not take up his hat and go away when she became uninteresting, and that her remarks, which were not brilliant, could not be smiled away either. They would rise up and greet him every morning, and would be the last thing he would hear at night.

Miss Delamar's beauty was so conspicuous that to pretend not to notice it was more foolish than well-bred. You got along more easily and simply by accepting it at once, and referring to it, and enjoying its effect upon other people. To go out of one's way to talk of other things when every one, even Miss Delamar herself knew what one must be uppermost in your mind, always seemed as absurd as to strain a point in politeness, and to pretend not to notice that a guest had upset his claret, or any other embarrassing fact. For Miss Delamar's beauty was so distinctly embarrassing that this was the only way to meet it—to smile and pass it over and to try, if possible, to get on to something else. It was on account of this extraordinary quality in her appearance that every one considered her beauty as something that enhanced rather her private ownership, and which belonged to any one who could appreciate it properly, just as though it were a sunset or a great work of art or of nature. And so, when she gave away her photographs no one thought it meant anything more than a very serious recognition on her part of the fact that it would have been unkind and selfish in her not to have shared the enjoyment of so much loveliness with others.

Consequently, when she sent one of her largest and most aggravatingly beautiful photographs to young Stuart, it was no sign that she cared especially for him.

How much young Stuart cared for Miss Delamar, however, was an open question, and a condition yet to be discovered. That he admired her extremely and cared so much that his imagination had begun to picture the awful joys and responsibilities of marriage, was only too well known to himself, and was a state of mind already suspected by his friends.

Stuart was a member of the New York bar, and the distinguished law firm to which he belonged was very proud of its junior member, and treated him with indulgence and affection, which was not unmingled with amusement. For Stuart's legal knowledge had been gathered in many odd corners of the globe, and was most particular. It had been his pleasure to study the laws by which men ruled other men in every condition of life, and under every sun. The regulations of a new mining camp were fraught with as great interest in his eyes as the unwritten precedents of the English constitution, and he had investigated the rulings of the mixed courts of Egypt and of the government of the little Dutch republic near the cape with as keen an effort to comprehend, as he had shown in studying the laws of the Congo Independent and of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

But he was not always serious, and it sometimes happened that after he had arrived at some queer little island where the native prince was the supreme arbiter sat in judgment together, his interest in the intricacies of their laws would give way to the more absorbing occupation of shooting wild boar, or shooting at tigers from the top of an elephant. And so he was not only regarded as a specialist in the principles of government and of law, into which no one else had ever taken the trouble to look, but his brother lawyers were eagerly read and his articles in the magazines were earnestly discussed, whether the fall of the divorce laws of Dakota, and the legal rights of widows in Cambodia, or the habits of the Mexican lion.

Stuart loved his work better than he knew, but how well he loved Miss Delamar neither he nor his friends could tell. She was the most beautiful and lovely creature that he had ever seen, and of that only was he certain.

Stuart was sitting in the club one day when the conversation turned to matrimony. He was among his own particular friends, the men before whom he could speak seriously or foolishly without fear of being misunderstood or of having what he said retold and spoiled in the telling. There was Seldon, the actor, and Rives who painted pictures, and young Sloane, who traveled for pleasure and adventure, and Weimer who stayed at home and wrote for the reviews. They were all bachelors, and, very good friends, and jealously guarded their little circle from the intrusion of either men or women.

"Of course the chief objection to marriage," Stuart said—it was the very day in which the picture had been sent to his rooms—"is the old one that you can't tell anything about it until you are committed to it forever. It is a very silly thing to discuss even, because there is no way of bringing it about, but there really should be some sort of a preliminary trial. As the man says in the play, 'you wouldn't buy a watch without testing it first.' Yet don't buy a hat even without putting it on, and finding whether it is becoming or not, or whether your peculiar style of ugliness can stand it. And yet men go gayly off and get married, and make the most awful promises, and alter their whole order of life and risk the happiness of some lovely creature on trust, as it were, knowing absolutely nothing of the new conditions and responsibilities of the life before them. Even a river pilot has to serve an apprenticeship before he gets a license, and yet we are allowed to take just as great risks, and only because we want to take them. It's awful, and it's all wrong."

"Well, I don't see what one is going to do about it," continued young Sloane, lightly, "except to get divorced. That road is always open."

Sloane was starting the next morning for the Somali country, in Abyssinia, to shoot rhinoceros, and his interest in matrimony was in consequence somewhat slight.

"It isn't the fear of the responsibilities that keeps Stuart, nor any one of us back," said Weimer, contemptuously. "It's because we're selfish. That's the whole truth of the matter. We love our work, or our pleasure, or to knock about the world, better than we do any particular woman. When one of us comes to love the woman best, his conscience won't trouble him long about the responsibilities of marrying her."

"Not at all," said Stuart, "I am quite sincere; I maintain that there should be a preliminary stage. Of course there can't be, and it's absurd to thing of it. But it would save a lot of unhappiness."

"Well," said Seldon, dryly, "when you've invented a way to prevent marriage from being a lottery, let me know, will you?" He stood up and smiled nervously. "Any of you coming to see us tonight?" he asked.

"That's so," exclaimed Weimer. "I forgot. It's the first night of 'A Fool and His Money,' isn't it? Of course we're coming."

"I told them to put a box away for you in case you wanted it," Seldon continued. "Don't expect much. It's a silly piece, and I've a silly part, and I'm very bad in it. You must come around to supper, and tell me where I'm bad in it, and we will talk it over. You coming, Stuart?"

"My dear old man," said Stuart reproachfully. "Of course I am. I've had my seats for the last three weeks. Do you suppose I could miss hearing you mispronounce all the Hindostanee I've taught you?"

"Well, good night, then," said the actor, waving his hand to his friends as he moved away. "We, who are about to die, salute you!"

"Good luck to you," said Sloane, holding up his glass, "and 'A Fool and His Money,'" he laughed. He turned to the table again, and sounded the bell for the waiter. "Now let's send him a telegram and wish him success before all sign it," he said, "and don't you fellows tell him that I wasn't in front to-night. I'll say I was at the Travelers' club are giving me." There was a protesting chorus of remonstrance. "Oh, I don't like it any better than you do," said Sloane, "but I'll get away early and join you before the play's over. No one in the Travelers' club, you see, has ever start at 11 from the New York side, I think I'll go with you, but I hate getting up early, and then you see I know what dangers lurk in Abyssinia, but who could tell what might happen to him in Hoboken?"

When Stuart returned to his room, he found a large package set upright in an armchair, and occupying many wrappings; but the handwriting on the outside told him at once from whom it came, although it might be, and he pounced upon it eagerly and tore it open. The photograph was a large one, and the likeness to the original was eliminated by the face seemed to smile and radiate with all the loveliness and beauty of Miss Delamar herself. Stuart looked upon it with genuine surprise and pleasure and exclaimed delightedly to himself. There was a little printed slip about the picture which made him almost speak to it and thank Miss Delmar through it for the pleasure she had given him and the honor she had bestowed. He was proud, flattered, and triumphant, and while he walked about the room decided that it was very thoughtful of her sending the picture respectfully before him, he smiled upon it with grateful satisfaction.

He decided against his dressing-table as being too intimate a place for it, and so carried the picture on from his bedroom to his study, and to the table where he set it among his silver on the sideboard. But so little of his time was spent in this room that he decided he would derive but little pleasure from it there, and so bore it back again and propped it against the many various other photographs and portraits, and where to other eyes than his own it was to be less conspicuous.

He tried it first in one place and then in another, but in each position the picture predominated and asserted itself so markedly, that Stuart carried the idea of keeping it inconspicuous, and placed it prominently over the fire-place, where it reigned supreme above every other object in the room. It was not only the most conspicuous object there, but the living quality which it possessed in so marked a degree and which was due to its naturalness of pose, and the excellence of the likeness, made it permeate the place like a presence and with the individuality of a real person. Stuart observed this effect with amused interest, and noted also that the photographs of other women had become commonplace in comparison like lithographs in a shop window, and that the more masculine accessories of a bachelor's apartment had grown suddenly aggressive and out of keeping. The Henor case and the facks of arms and barbarous weapons which he had collected with such pride seemed to have lost their former value and meaning and he instinctively began to gather up the mags of books and maps and photographs and pipes and gloves which lay scattered upon the table, and to put them out of sight altogether. "If I'm to live up to that picture," he thought. "I must see that George keeps this room in better order —and I must stop wandering round here in my bath robe."

His mind continued on the picture while he was dressing, and he was so absorbed in it and in analyzing the effect it had had upon him, that his servant spoke twice before he heard him.

"No," he answered, "I shall not dine here tonight." Dining at home was with him a very simple affair, and a somewhat lonely one, and he avoided it almost nightly by indulging himself in a more expensive fashion.

But even as he spoke an idea came to Stuart which made him reconsider his determination, and which struck him as so amusing, that he stopped pulling at his tie and smiled delightedly at himself in the glass before him.

"Yes," he said, still smiling, "I will dine here tonight. Get me anything in a hurry. You need not wait now; go get the dinner up as soon as possible."

The effect which the photograph of Miss Delamar had upon him, and the transformation it had accomplished in his room, had been as great as would have marked the presence there of the girl herself. While considering this it had come to Stuart, like a flash of inspiration, that here was a way by which he could test the responsibilities and conditions of married life without compromising either himself, or the girl to whom he would suppose himself to be married.

"I will put that picture at the head of the table," he said, "and I will play that it is she herself, her own, beautiful, lovely self, and I will talk to her and exchange views with her, and make her answer me just as she would were we actually married and settled." He looked at his watch and found it was only 7 o'clock. "I will begin now," he said, "and I will keep up the delusion until midnight. Tonight is the best time to try the experiment because the picture is new now, and its influence will be all the more real. In a few weeks it may have lost some of its freshness and reality and will have become one of the fixtures in the room."

Stuart decided that under these new conditions he would be more pleasant on dine at Delmonico's, and he was on the point of asking the picture what she thought of it, when he remembered that while it had been possible for him to make a practice of dining at that place as a bachelor, he could not any afford so expensive a luxury, and he decided that he had better economize in that particular and go instead to one of the many little restaurants in the neighborhood. He regretted not having thought of this sooner, for he didn't care to dine at a table d'hote in evening dress, and in some places it rendered him conspicuous. So sooner than have this happen he decided to dine at home, as he had originally intended when he first thought of attempting this experiment, and then conducting it into the dining room and placed her in an armchair facing him, with the candles full upon the face.

"Now this is something like," he exclaimed, joyously. "I can't imagine anything better than this. Here we are all to ourselves with no one to bother us, with no chaperone, no husband either, which is generally worse. Why is it, my dear," he asked gayly, in a tone that he considered affectionate and husbandly, "that the attractive chaperons are always handicapped by such stupid husbands, and vice versa?"

"If that is true," replied the picture, or replied Stuart, rather, for the picture, "it cannot be a very attractive chaperone." Stuart bowed politely at this, and then considered the point it had raised as to whether he had, in assuming both parts, the right to pay himself compliments. He decided against himself in this particular instance, but agreed that he was not responsible for anything the Picture might say, so long as he sincerely and fairly tried to make it answer him as he thought the original would do under like circumstances. From what he knew of the original under other conditions, he decided that he could give a very close imitation of her point of view.

Stuart's interest in his dinner was so real that he found himself neglecting his wife, and he had to pull himself up to his duty with a sharp reproof. After smiling back at her for a moment or two until his servant had again left them alone, he asked her to tell him what she had been doing during the day.

"Oh, nothing very important," said the Picture. "I went shopping in the morning and"—

Stuart stopped himself and considered this last remark doubtfully. "Now, how do I know she would go shopping?" he asked himself. "People from Harlem and Yonkers, who like bargain counters, and woh eat crocolate meringue for lunch, and then stop in at a continuous performance, go shopping. It must be the comic paper sort of wives who go about matching shades and buying hooks and eyes. Yes, I must have made Miss Delamar's understudy misrepresent her. I beg your pardon, my dear," he said aloud to the Picture. "You did not go shopping this morning. You probably went to a woman's luncheon somewhere. Tell me about that."

"Oh, yes, I went to lunch with the Antwerps," said the Picture, "and they had that Russian woman there who is getting up subscriptions for the Siberian prisoners. It's rather fine of her because it exiles her from Russia. And she is a princess."

"That's nothing," Stuart interrupted, "they're all princesses when you see them on Broadway."

"I beg your pardon," said the Picture.

"It's of no consequence," said Stuart, apologetically, "it's a comic song. I forgot you didn't like comic songs. Well—go on."

"Then I went to a tea and then I stopped in to hear Madame Ruvier read a paper on the Ethics of Ibsen, and she"—

Stuart's voice had died away gradually, and he caught himself wondering whether he had told George to lay in a fresh supply of cigars. "I beg your pardon," he said, briskly, "I was listening, but I was just wondering whether I had any cigars left. You were saying that you had been at Madame Ruvier's, and—"

"I am afraid that you were not interested," said the Picture. "Never mind, it's my fault. Sometimes I think I ought to do things of more interest, so that I should have something to talk to you about when you come home."

Stuart wondered at what hour he would come home now that he was married. As a bachelor he had been in the habit of stopping on his way from the law office at the club, or to take tea at the houses of the different girls he liked. Of course, he could not do that now as a married man. He would instead have to limit his calls to married women, as all the other married men of his acquaintance did. But at the moment he could not think of any attractive married women who would like his dropping in on them in such familiar manner, and the other sort did not as yet appeal to him.

He seated himself in front of the coal fire in the library, with the Picture in a chair close beside him, and as he puffed pleasantly on his cigar he thought how well this suited him, and how delightful it was to find content in so simple and continuing a pleasure. He could almost feel the pressure of his wife's hand as it lay in his own, as they sat in silent sympathy looking into the friendly glow of the fire.

There was a long pleasant pause.

"They're giving Sloane a dinner tonight at the Travelers," Stuart said at last, "in honor of his going to Abyssinia."

Stuart pondered for some short time as to what sort of a reply Miss Delamar's understudy ought to make to this innocent remark. He recalled the fact that on numerous occasions the original had shown not only a lack of knowledge in far-away places, but what was more trying, a lack of interest as well. For the moment he could not see her robbed of his pretty environment and tramping through undiscovered countries at his side. So the Picture's reply, when it came, was strictly in keeping with several remarks which Miss Delamar herself had made to him in the past.

"Yes," said the Picture, politely, "and where is Abyssinia—in India, isn't it?"

"No, not exactly," corrected Stuart, mildly; "you pass it on your way to India, though, as you go through the Red Sea. Sloane is taking Winchesters with him and a double express and a 'five fifty.' He wants to test their penetration. I think myself that the express is the best, but he says Selous and Chandler think very highly of the Winchester. I don't know. I never shot a rhinoceros. The time I killed that elephant," he went on, pointing at two tusks that stood with some assegais in a corner, "I used an express, and I had to let go with both barrels. I suppose, though, if I'd needed a third shot I'd have wished it was a Winchester. He was charging the smoke, you see, and I couldn't get away because I'd caught my foot—and I told you about that didn't I?" Stuart interrupted himself to ask politely.

"Yes," said the Picture, cheerfully, "I remember it very well; it was very foolish of you."

Stuart straightened himself with a slightly injured air and avoided the Picture's eye. He had been stopped midway in what was one of his favorite stories, and it took a brief space of time for him to recover himself, and to sink back again into the pleasant lethargy in which he had been basking.

"Still," he said, "I think the express is the better gun."

"Oh, is an 'express' a gun?" exclaimed the Picture, with sudden interest. "Of course, I might have known."

Stuart turned in his chair and surveyed the Picture in some surprise. "But, my dear girl," he remonstrated apologetically, "it's a comic song. I forgot you didn't like comic songs. Well—go on."

"I've been to a number of receptions, and I've got to make use of the old ones."

"Oh, I'm so sorry," exclaimed the Picture, remorsefully. "I didn't mean to be rude. Please tell me about it. I should like to hear it again ever so much. I should like to hear it again, really."

"Nonsense," said Stuart, laughing and shaking his head. "I was only joking; personally I have people who tell long stories. That doesn't matter. I was thinking of something else."

He continued thinking of something else, while for the first time he had been in jest when he spoke of having given up the chance of meeting fresh experiences. He had, indeed, been described a condition, and a painful one. His real life seemed to have stopped, and he saw himself in the future looking back and regretting it, as though it were the career of an entirely different person. Of a young man, with quick sympathies which required satisfying, as any appetite requires food. And he had an unconfortable doubt as to whether these ready sympathies would rebel if fed on only one diet.

The Picture did not interupt him in his thoughts, and at his second pause into his eyes as they wandered over the objects above him on the mantel shelf. They also seemed to suggest to him a past a busy, wholesome past which had formed habits of thought and action, habits he could no longer enjoy alone, and which, in his present frame of mind, it was quite impossible for him to share with any one else. He was no longer to be alone.

Stuart stirred uneasily in his chair and poked at the fire before him.

"Do drop that poker when you come cally. "You ore a black dress and lit- tally, "and built the fire yourself and lighted some girl's letters to make it burn?"

"Yes," said Stuart, "that is, I said that they were some girl's letters. It made it more picturesque. I am afraid they were bills. I should say I did remember it," he continued, enthusiastically. "You wore a black dress and little red slippers and big black rosettes, and you looked as beautifully as—as night—as a moonlight night."

The picture frowned slightly.

"You are always telling me about how I looked," she complained. "can't you remember any time when we were alone about anything but considering what I had on and how I appeared?"

"I cannot," said Stuart, promptly. "I can recall lots of other things besides, but I can't forget how you looked. You have a fashion of emphasizing episodes in that way which is entirely your own. But, as I say, I can remember something else. Do you remember, for instance, when we went up to West Point on that yacht? Wasn't it a grand day, with the autumn leaves on both sides of the Hudson, and the dress parade, and the dance afterward at the hotel?"

"Yes, I should think I did," said the picture smiling. "You spent all your time examining cannon, and talking to the men about 'firing in open order,' and left me all alone."

"Left you all alone! I like that," laughed Stuart; "all alone with about eighteen officers."

"Well, but that was natural," returned the picture. "They were men. It's natural for a girl to talk to men, but why should a man want to talk to men?"

"Well, I know better than that now," said Stuart.

He proceeded to show that he knew better by remaining silent for the next half hour, during which time he continued to wonder whether this effort to keep up a conversation was not radically wrong. He thought of several things he might say, but he argued that it was an impossible situation where a man had to make conversation with his own wife.

The clock struck 10 as he sat waiting, and he moved uneasily in his chair.

"What is it?" asked the picture; "what makes you so restless?"

Stuart regarded the Picture timidly for a moment before he spoke. "I was just thinking," he said, doubtfully, "that we might run down after all, and take a look in at the last act; but it's too late even now. They're sure to run behind on the first night. And then," he urged, "we can go around and see Seldon. You have never been behind the scenes, have you? It's very interesting."

"No, I have not, but if we do," remonstrated the Picture, pathetically, "you know all those men will come trooping home with us. You know they will."

"But that's very complimentary," said Stuart. "Why, I like my friends to like my wife."

"Yes, but you know how they stay when they get here," she answered; "I don't believe they ever sleep. Don't you remember the last supper you gave before we were married, when Mrs. Starr and you all were discussing Mr. Seldon's play? She didn't make a move to go until half past two, and I was that sleepy I couldn't keep my eyes open."

"Yes," said Stuart, "I remember. I'm sorry. I thought it was very interesting. Seldon changed the whole second act on account of what she said. Well, after this," he laughed with cheerful desperation, "I think I shall make up for the part of a married man in a pair of slippers and dressing gown, and then perhaps I won't be tempted to roam abroad at night."

"Oh, I don't mind your gown they are going to give you at Oxford," said the Picture, smiling placidly. "The one Aunt Lucy was telling me about. Why do they give you a gown," she asked, "it seems such an odd thing to do."

"The gown comes with the degree, I believe," said Stuart.

"But why do they give you a degree?" persisted the Picture; "you never studied for anything, did you?"

Stuart moved slightly in his chair and shook his head. "I thought I told you," he said, gently. "No, I never studied in Paris—only books on things, and they liked them."

"Oh, yes, I remember now you did tell me," said the Picture; "and I told Aunt Lucy about it, and said we would be in England during the season, when you got your degree, and she said you must be awfully clever to get it. You see—she does appreciate you, and you always treat her so distantly."

"Do I?" said Stuart, quietly; "I'm sorry."

"Will you have your portrait painted in it?" asked the Picture.

"In what?"

"In the gown. You are not listening," said the Picture reproachfully. "You said just now that Aunt Lucy says it's a beautiful shade of red silk, and very long. Is it?"

"I don't know," said Stuart. He shook his head, and dropped his chin into his hands, stared coldly down into the fire. He tried to persuade himself that he had been vainglorious, and that he had given too much weight to the honor which the University of Oxford would bestow upon him; that he had taken the degree too seriously, and that the Picture's view of it was the view of the rest of the world. But he could not convince himself that he was entirely at fault.

"Is it too late to begin on Guizot?" suggested the Picture, as an alternative to his plan. "It sounds so improving."

"Yes, it is much too late," answered Stuart, decidedly. "Besides, I don't want to be improved. I want to be amused, or inspired, or scolded. The chief good of friends is that they do scold you for certain things, and a wife should do all three."

"Which shall I do?" asked the Picture, smiling good-naturedly.

Stuart looked into the beautiful face and at the reclining picture of the woman to whom he was to turn for sympathy for the rest of his life, and felt a cold shiver of terror, that passed as quickly as it came. He reached out his hand and placed it on the arm of the chair, and let it rest there while his eyes would have been, and patted the place kindly. He would shut his eyes to everything but that she was good and sweet and his wife. Whatever else she lacked that her beauty had covered up and hidden, and the want of which had lain unsuspected, and which, in the previous forced intercourse, could not be mended now. He would settle, his step to hers, and would be content to spend every hour of his life which were not hers as well. He had chosen a beautiful idol, and not a companion, for a wife. He had tried to warm his hands at the fire of a diamond.

Stuart's eyes closed wearily as this thought passed through his mind, and the sound of the many clocks struck the hour of midnight briskly, with a pert insistent clamor, and at the same instant a boisterous and unruly knocking answered it from outside the library door.

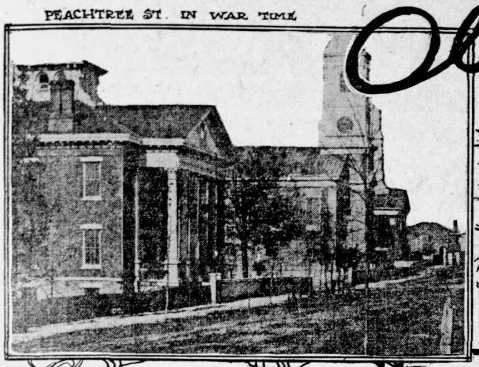

Stuart rose uncertainly from his chair and looked at the tiny clock face with a startled expression of bewilderment and relief.

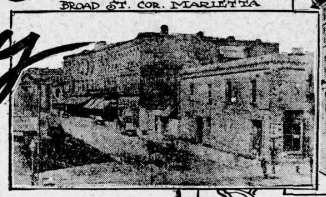

Apparently his friends called impatiently from the hall. "Stuart, let us in," and without waiting further for recognition a merry company of gentlemen pushed their way noisily into the room.

"Where the devil have you been?" demanded Weimer. "You don't deserve to be spoken to at all after quitting us like that. But Seldon is so good-natured," he went on, "that he sent us after you. It was a great success

Old Atlanta, like ancient Babylon, has a Story

The Carnegie Library Has Begun a Research Through Which It Expects to Develope Much Valuable Information of the City's Past and to Encourage the Study of Atlanta by Atlanta Future Citizens. It is the Hope of the Library That the Study of Atlanta History Will Eventually Be Undertaken in Atlanta Schools.

Among the Most Valuable Data That the Carnegie Library Has Discovered in Its Research into the Past History of Atlanta is a Collection of 100 Views of the Atlanta of Yesterday. Whitehall Street is Shown as It Was Before the Viaduct Was Built, the Capitol Building That Stood on Marietta Street is Pictured, the Throng That Greeted President Cleveland Upon His Visit Here is Shown.

SCIENTISTS for years have been exhuming ancient Babylon to learn facts that were important centuries ago.

The Carnegie library, in a more practical mood, has begun to unearth the relics of Atlanta to make discoveries, which would be important now and here.

What Atlanta was may be less universally interesting than the activities of ancient Babylon, but the appointment of a commission of five as Atlanta's first city officials is of more immediate importance than the skyscrapers that were built in Babylon in the far away, misty ages.

The library wishes to suggest this truth to the city schools.

In Newark, N. J., facts of that city's past history have been collected and published, and the local history constituted by this publication is studied in the Newark high schools.

Prof. W. F. Dykes, principal of the Atlanta Boys' High school, agrees with Miss Katherine Wootten, librarian of the Carnegie library, that a study of Atlanta would be of utmost importance to pupils that are to become citizens of Atlanta.

Exploration Is Begun

The library has just begun its explorations and has only a meager beginning of facts. But the scientists in Babylon remove the covering of earth in bagfuls, and progress by inches.

The library will persevere in its collection, and intends to succeed in gathering together facts that will tell a detailed history of Atlanta's past.

It is hoped that out of this collection will grow a careful and a thorough history of the city that will become as much a subject of study in the city's schools as the events of past ages.

Much of the success of this research must depend upon residents of Atlanta who are in possession of data of the city's past.

Several families who have lived for long years in Atlanta, and have old papers and old pictures which tell the story of this city, have furnished this information to the library and have started the collection from which much is expected.

Pictures of the Past

The pictures are among the most interesting of the old relics, and call up most vividly the days that are gone and the progress that has since been made. Nearly 100 of these have come into the possession of the library. They show views of every part of the city, and are more graphic bits of description than any written accounts of the past.

The group printed here are chosen from this number. The are like a brief chat with an old resident who has a faithful memory and a sense of humor. They possess an air of quaintness and drollery.

Where the Whitehall street viaduct now traverses the railroad tracks a street car drawn by mules takes its plodding and deliberate way. The picture might have been taken in a part of New York, which has remained ancient in the midst of modernism.

What is now the busiest part of Atlanta is there pictured as a village. At the curbing is "C. C. Hammock's real estate sign," with a very contened citizen leaning against it whittling. Old lamp posts are to be seen on both sides of the street. A cart that must be a one-horse shay, is drawn up at the curb. The street seems to be enjoying a siesta.

This was Whitehall street before that busy thoroughfare had its eyes well opened. This was Atlanta of the long ago, not so long in years, but far away in the difference that exists between present and past conditions.

The Old Capitol

The capitol building is shown as it was when it stood on Marietta street. It had no dome or broad lawns or the similar characteristics of a capitol, but as the photograph proves, it was a handsome structure, and carried itself with a stately air.

Another photograph shows the streets thronged upon President Cleveland's visit to Atlanta. The military escort is marching forward, in a moment police will clear away the crowd that has pushed forward, the late president himself can almost be seen. It is a very remarkable picture, one of the most valuable discoveries in the library's exploration.

A picture that is particularly quaint of an old-style engine, and a group that cannot all be firemen. Two at least must be statesmen. One who leans against a rear wheel with his hat in his hand and one thumb hooked into his vest is no less than distinguished, and another who sits in a chair has an air of dignity.

Each of the other photographs is a valuable comment upon the city's past. All similar pictures and all other relics of the past are desired.

The Carnegie library wishes to assemble together data that will be an intimate history of Atlanta. Even personal remisinscences are regarded of value in this search to discover what Atlanta has been, and how Atlanta discovered the way to success.

An Atlanta History

Bit by bit it is hoped that such a history may be pieced together, and that afterward it may be published in book form and become a subject in the public schools.

Such at least is the end toward which the library is working, and is a purpose in which the schools sympathize.

Prof. Dykes, of the Boys' High school, says that already the history of Atlanta is studied in various ways by high school students. In school debates subjects are made as local as possible; in the study of physics, the city government is studied; and in other ways the school endeavors to enter into a study of Atlanta as well as of the ancient cities.

In Newark, the board of education has published a book known as the "Newark Study," which is a systematic study of the past and present history of the city.

The Newark library was the founder of this course of study for Newark children. The book is divided into geography, civic hygiene and civics, and biographical sketches of men and women of Newark.

If the Carnegie library succeeds, a book equally as complete will be published in Atlanta and studied in Atlanta schools.

The data which has been collected and will be steadily increased is now at the disposal of whoever is making individual researches or is otherwise interested in the past history of Atlanta? Newspaper clippings, which are quaint as well as valuable, are the principal part of the collection.

The First Events

One of these compiles the first events in Atlanta.

The first name of the city was Terminus.

Teh first government was by five commissioners: Willis Carlisle, John Bailey, Patrick Quinn, L. V. Ganon, and John Kile.

The first tax levied was to open new streets, and is said to have raised public indignation.

The first mayor was Moses W. Formwalt, elected on January 31, 1848.

The first store was opened in 1845 by John Thrasher on the edge of a thicket on what is now known as Decatur street.

The first system of city waterworks was completed in 1870.

The first city police station was in the rear of Masonic Hall, on Decatur street, midway between Pryor and Ivy streets.

The first newspaper was The Democrat, a weekly, published in 1845 by W. H. Fornerden.

By an act of the legisalture the name of the city was changed on December 23, 1843, from that of Terminus to Marthasville, and in 1843, Atlanta became Atlanta.

In time, the Carnegie library hopes to discover all the "beginnings" of the city.

A BATCH OF SMILES

Two senators were watching preparations for an aviation flight at the army training school at College Park, Md. One of the army flyers was having difficulty in starting his machine.

"Reminds me of the old farmer and his wife who first saw a train of cars standing at the depot," said one of them.

"'Well, what do you think of it, pa?' asked the old lady, after her husband had looked the engine over carefully.

"'She'll never start,' said the old man, with conviction; 'she'll never start.'

"Presently the engine gave a preliminary snort, got slowly under way, and the train began to grow small in the distance.

"'Well, now, what do you think of it?' demanded the old lady.

"Her husband watched until the tail of the train had disappeared around a curve.

"'She'll never stop,' he declared; 'she'll never stop.'"

One of Kansas City's traffic squad went into a shoe store recently to purchase a pair of shoes. He made his selection and was about to try them on when the clerk reached for a box and deftly sprinkled some French chalk into the shoes to ease the forthcoming strain. When he handed them to the patrolman he threw them on the floor, pulled on his old shoes, and started out.

The proprietor had noticed the scene.

"What's the matter?" he asked the officer. "Was the clerk sassy or anything?"

For a moment the officer glared at him in almost speechless anger then observed with icy dignity:

"If I can't come into a place to thry on a pair av shoes widout havin' chlorid of lime put in them beforehand I'll trade somewhere else."

One day an Irishman was seated in the waiting room of a station with an odorous pipe in his mouth. One of the attendants called his attention to the sign: "No smoking."

"Well," said Pat, "I'm not a-smokin'."

"But you have a pipe in your mouth."

"Sure, an' I've shoes on me feet, but I'm not walkin'."

WHERE THE OLD GROW YOUNG.

THE SECRET OF SECOND YOUTH HAS BEEN DISCOVERED BY THE HOME FOR OLD WOMEN.

WHEN Aunt Mary Mauldin, 64 years, snickered because Aunt Sarah Frances Bailey, 72, spelled "sassafras" with three "s's" in the middle she was sent to the foot of the class.

Then, the widower who is doing a bit of carpentering in the annex looked in for a glance at the "spelling bee," and Mrs. Mary O'Neill said, "Goodness, if he hadn't washed his hair and brushed his face."

Charley, who has the most famous garden that ever sprouted early vegetables, dropped in to say that he could spell "sassafras" when he wasn't knee high to a duck, and Mrs. Mauldin told him to spell it, then. He didn't use but one! "a" in the middle, and everybody was given a "black mark" for observations on Charley's orthography and the widower's appearance. It was suggested that all be sent to the foot of the class, but that seemed a difficult course of discipline, so their punishment was confined to demerits.

SWEET ALICE, BEN BOLT.

If it hadn't been a spelling bee, someone probably would have played "Sweet Alice, Ben Bolt," or "Auld Lang Syne" on the piano in the parlor, and all would have sung until tears that were both sad and happy filled their eyes.

Or, they would have gathered in a reminiscent circle and chatted about the times when you had to pay 15 cents a yard for a new frock, and felt dressed up in a calico gown.

They have no time for idle or complaining moments at the Home for Old Women. Life has too much joy and hope for one to fold his hands, and say that his day is over. There is the widower to tease Charley to laugh with, the garden to wonder over, the songs to sing, the spelling bees—

You haven't any idea what a jolly time you can have if you'll only look about you. As "Aunt" Sallie Partridge says:

"Laugh all the time. You can't laugh enough. There's always something to laugh at. When the frost's killed Charley's turnips, we can laugh at the way the widow's slicked his hair. God meant folks to laugh. He put things here to make them laugh. And he didn't intend to have them complainin'."

That's the philosophy of the Home for Old Women. It is really the home for the old who have grown young.

WHAT WOULD MEN DO?

Probably a home for old men would complain at Charley's vegetables and the everlasting noise that the widower makes at that carpentering he's been doing for a month in the annex.

But even the greens that got frost bitten are sweet to this company of old women, who are younger in spirits than the youngest men.

The colonial residence, in the quiet spot at 61 West End avenue, which is suburban in its air of peace and rest, is a place of rejuvenation. There the old grow young.

Aunt Sallie Partridge's eyes were never brighter or her fingers nimbler than they are this moment. She cleans her own room, she makes her own clothes, and she would like to cook a day's victuals if the home wasn't so peculiar about her not overdoing things.

Miss Laura Farris is reading "Lorna Doone," and is liking it better than the first time, 40 years ago, when "Lorna Doone" was a best seller.

PRACTICING ON THE PIANO.

Two others have taken to practicing on the piano, and all are brushing up on their spelling.

The youngest of the 14 old women at the home, if you speak in years, is 62; the oldest is 86. If you are guided by the better evidence of hope, and of joy in life, none are old, and all are young.

These fourteen very remarkable women have all the sweetness and freshness of their young days, and no old age whatever. They admit the existence of rheumatism, but not of unhappiness. Perhaps time does put a few wrinkles in one's face, but there is as much room for happiness at 86 as there is at 16.

This is the philosophy of the Home for Old Women, which should be named the Home for Women Who Will Never Grow Old.

Perhaps it is their association and companionship. Old age does lay a grip upon other people, even though he has only pointed a finger at these few. One at 86 encourages another at 70 to daily cheerfulness and hope. Old age counsels old age to keep a youthful heart and the counsel is heeded.

CHARLEY'S VEGETABLES.

Charley's vegetables probably have something to do with it. They are of such amazing freshness, sweetness, lusciousness, such inimitable greens, such incomparable onions, such ineffable strawberries. There is new life in every dish served from Charley's garden.

And it also adds to one's years to tease the widower. When fourteen old ladies make sly remarks about the curl of his hair and the perfection of his tie and the widower stands on one foot and then on the other, and finally hurries back to his carpentering, the effect is rejuvenating.

But they agree with Aunt Sallie Partridge that to laugh, to be content, to think with kindness, and to act in fellowship is the real secret of long life.

They keep young in spirit by seldom troubling, by always hoping, by finding the least of the daily affairs at the home worthy of interest by feeling enthusiasm over the spelling bees, sentiment over the old songs, joy over Charley's garden produce, and greater joy over the widower's spruce manner.

CHARLEY HIMSELF.

They first show a visitor the annex and then the garden. Charley is always there to point out the advantages of the garden. He is an appropriate part of the home. The sweetness of the old ladies is no finer than his courtesy. He points out the greens with a manner that calls for sympathy and deference, and speaks of the unions with an air that awakens respect.

He is named "Charley" from a feeling of friendship and esteem. His position is really that of the gallant protector of the home, and his position is recognized. The early vegetables are a tribute, not a "mess" of greens or a bunch of unions, and they are taken as such.

The air of the home is courtesy, contentment and jollity. That is why it is a place of renewed youth.

A little lady with white hair left the car that passes before the home, and, with a distressed expression on her face, came up the walk.

"My, my," she sighed. "I took the wrong car, and it's too late to go to town now."

Sympathetic hands took off her bonnet, drew up a chair for her, and led her in-doors when she decided to lie down for a bit, after such a disappointing trip.

Then Miss Mary O'Neill laughed, the others laughed, and Charley came round the house to see what could have happened.

"She meant to go to town," explained Mrs. O'Neill, "and she went to West View cemetery. It's a wonder they ever let her out. The poor soul. I'll go see if she wants anything."

A CHAT ON THE PORCH.

The sun was warm on the porch, the grass in the yard and the flowers blooming along both sides of the walk were a refreshing sight, and the porch was altogether a pleasant place to be. Everyone sat down on the steps.

"We've just had the street mended," said Mrs. O'Neill. "Most of the convicts were negroes. Two-thirds of the negroes are in jail. Before the war there wasn't any of them there. Well, they've got Abe Lincoln to thank for it. I was at Fort Moultrie when the first shot was fired, and one went right through our house."

"Yes," said Mrs. E. C. Austin, who is seventy-four years old. "Folks fought for a pastime then. I remember we moved up into east Tennessee about that time."

"It does seem like the country here, doesn't it?" suggested Mrs. O'Neill. "I do like to go to church in the country. The country's the best place, anyhow."

"I was fifty years old before I ever saw a railroad train," observed Aunt Sallie Partridge. "You spell my name P-a-r-t-r-i-d-g-e-, just like a brown partridge in the road. I was born in Wilkes county, and I never saw a train till we moved up to Social Circle. I'll be eighty-seven on the 7th day of August. Father died at eighty-five, and he never was gray. I don't know why I've lived so long and healthy. I reckon God intended it. I love to work. I never could sit down and hold my hands. But young folks can't do anything."

THE WAY OF THE WORLD.

"They say the world's getting weaker and wiser," suggested Mrs. H. A. Shelton.

"It's getting weaker and meaner," corrected Mrs. O'Neill.

I think," said Mrs. Mary Mauldin, "that the poorest creature in the world is a bachelor."

"Yes, I'd advise everybody to marry," said Mrs. Shelton. "If a girl can find a man who can support her, she might as well marry him. And if he loves a women better than himself he ought to marry."

"You don't ever love anybody better than yourself," objected Mrs. Mauldin. "I've been married twice and I loved both of them, but I preferred myself."

"Well, in marriage," continued Mrs. Mauldin, "there are two bears: one is to bear and the other is to forbear."

"After all," said Mrs. Austin, "the only way to be happy is to be good."

"You know," answered Mrs. O'Neill, "that you think anybody in Atlanta is happy. She thinks Atlanta is God's country."

MUCH TO DO WITH IT.

"I think He had a good deal to do with it," admitted Mrs. Austin.

Charley came back for a word or two the afternoon became the least bit chill. "Aunt" Sallie Partridge said she must get back to her sewing, Miss Laura Farris cast an eye of interest upon "Lorna Doone," and the group broke up and returned into the house.

Even though the air had not grown cool, they couldn't sit there talking all afternoon. Industry, in the opinion of the Home for Old Women, is as necessary to happiness as cheerfulness.

The fourteen who are renewing their youth are:

Aunt Sallie Partridge, eighty-six.
Miss Mattie Holt, eighty-four.
Aunt Lizzie Jones, seventy-eight.
Miss Mary Wilins, seventy-eight.
Miss Nancy Bride, seventy-five.
Mrs. E. C. Austin, seventy-four.
Aunt Sarah Frances Bailey, seventy-two.
Mrs. Mary McCullum, seventy-one.
Mrs. H. A. Shelton, seventy-eight.
Mrs. Mary Mauldin, sixty-five.
Mrs. Mary O'Neill, sixty-five.
Mrs. Laura Farris, sixty-two.
Mrs. Kate Devine, sixty-two.
Mrs. Lizzie Taylor, whose age was not given.

Such is the Home for Old Women.

THE STAY-AT-HOME

By W. Werner

Before the mirror stood Marjorie staring hard at the reflection.

BUREAU drawers stood open; things which were impossible to wear, but which had been drawn somehow into the general clutter, were scattered everywhere; a rug had been kicked up; the mirror tilted at an astonishing angle.

Upon the rug before the mirror stood Marjorie, staring hard at the reflection of her own feet, which were clad in red silk stockings and high-heeled red dancing shoes. "You'd never think they were 4s, would you?" she demanded.

Milly, leaning against the foot of the rather battered, old-fashioned bed, replied faintly that you wouldn't. At the same time she looked yearningly from her own shabby little pair of 2s to the charming red slippers matching so perfectly the gown whose gleaming hem just grazed them.

"I was a little bit afraid when I got this dress," Marjorie went on, thoughtfully, "that it wouldn't become me. But it does. I shan't be the belle of the ball, but I'll be sure to give the real belle a bad moment or two." She laughed and tilted the glass back to its normal angle. "I guess I'm ready for my cloak. Mrs. King ought to be here any instant now."

Milly brought the cloak, new, like the dress, and laid it upon her sister's shoulders. She also brought the scarf and threw it over Marjorie's fluffy head. At that instant the door bell rang a stirring peal. The chaperon had arrived.

"Oh, I hope you'll have a good time, dear," Milly said.

"I shall have, never fear," called Marjorie as she ran downstairs.

Milly heard the front door open and shut and sank down on the bed, and with a sigh looked about the disordered room. It came to her that she was always putting things to rights after Marjorie, who was always seeking pleasure abroad at the expense of confusion at home.

"I'm tired," Milly said aloud, apologizing to herself.

Slow, fumbling steps came across the hall from the room opposite, the door opened and a face looked in. "Marjorie gone?"

"Yes, father."

"I thought I heard the car. Well, I hope she will enjoy herself. There is nothing so beautiful as youth and joy, and Majorie embodies both. Are you coming down soon, love? We might have a game of cards. I don't want you to be lonely. And I fear you often are lonely." Tears filled her tired eyes. "You ought to be going into society the way Marjorie does, love."

"But I'm not asked, father," Milly replied, as patiently as if he had not said the same thing to her many times before. "You see, I was too young then, and since now there's nobody—" She paused. She could never in any way refer to her dear, dead mother without emotion.

"I know." He groped for his handkerchief. "Well, you're young yet. You will have your chance. Wait till Marjorie marries. By the way, that young Gordon is still attentive, isn't he?"

"He calls on Marjorie. And I suppose he will be at the ball tonight. Marjorie expected to find him there."

"Ah, I hope something will come of it. It would be a fine thing for Marjorie. Don't forget about the cards, dear."

Milly heard him feel his way downstairs. His sight was going. Her dear old father! What would they do without each other? Yet it was Marjorie he loved most—Marjorie, who was so like her mother, outwardly.

Milly was too loyal to admit even to herself that inwardly Marjorie was like Marjorie and no one else. But in her heart she did know that Marjorie was selfish; that she took all and gave nothing; took all the money there was for new clothes, every service every pleasure, as her natural right, the inevitable reward for her being beautiful. It was Milly, the younger, who looked after the household, who shouldered all the burdens. It was Milly who made the way easy for Marjorie. And Milly obviously got no reward at all.

And then there was Max Gordon. Two years before he had met Marjorie at a dance and had called. Milly had been in the room, and Marjorie had introduced her as "my little sister." He had asked Milly why she was not at the dance the night before, and Marjorie had explained laughingly that Milly had not come out. "She's our housekeeper—our stay-at-home," she remarked.

Max Gordon called again and again. Sometimes Milly saw him, but not often. Occasionally Marjorie spoke about him at houses where she was entertained. Once she complained that he didn't accept half the invitations he received—"he's so devoted to his law," she said.

But tonight he would surely be at this, the biggest dance of the season. He would waltz with Marjorie in her red satin dress. And perhaps he would ask her to marry him.

As for herself—"I've tried not to care for him," she thought. "I've tried not to think about him when I was sweeping or baking or scrubbing, but I have. The thought of him has been in everything I've thought or done for two years. I've seen him everywhere, even in my dreams. I didn't know love could be like that—a powerful, irresistible tide, carrying you along, one doesn't know where and sometimes one doesn't care. Perhaps Marjorie feels in the same way. But whether she does or not she will marry Max. If she is what he wants and it will make him happy to get her, I shall try to be content. I'll have father left. He's some one to love and care for. I guess I'll leave the room and go right down and play cards with him. If I stay up here alone I shall surely cry."

She gulped down the sob in her throat, winked her eyes dry, and rising, went to the mirror. Her serious pallor offered a great contrast to her sister's glowing beauty. But when she went downstairs she was smiling and singing.

Two men instead of one sat at the battered card table. A broad young man with a square, clean, dark face sprang to his feet to welcome her entrance into the room.

"I heard you coming—singing," he said as he got hold of her hand.

"But I thought you'd be at the dance," Milly gasped. "I never dreamed you'd come here, Mr. Gordon."

"What! Go to the dance when I could be here with your father and you?" The dark eyes studying the face were very deep, the rich voice all the richer for its undercurrent of tenderness.

Both eyes and voice thrilled Milly. The color poured into her face. She laughed tremulously. "But father and I are such poky old folks. And we've no entertainment better than cards to offer you."

"Cards in the right company are the best entertainment in the world." He dropped her hand, and, turning to a chair, lifted a long white box which he laid in her arms.

"Flowers!" she cried, with all a girl's delight in an unexpected gift shining in her face. "Not roses!"

"Look and see."

After all he had to help her with the cover, and underneath there were indeed roses—great, pink, fragrant roses with rubbery green stems two feet long. Milly's brown eyes grew big and starry as she raised them to his. "Oh, Max!" was all she could say.

It was the first time she had ever called him Max, but it seemed right and natural just then.

After that things arranged themselves easily. Milly hunted up a vase big enough to hold her roses, and by that time Max had the cards dealt for another game. Then they sat down to play, and it was astonishing the number of times her father won. He grew quite hilarious over his success. At 10:30 Milly brought out the chafing dish and creamed some left-over chicken. She was having a perfectly splendid time; indeed, she almost pitied the poor folk who were merely dancing at the smartest ball of the season.

At 11:15 father excused himself and went upstairs, leaving Max and Milly sitting opposite each other at the card table. The instant he was out of the room a strange sweet consciousness seemed to fall upon them both. Milly wondered why she felt so shy all of a sudden, and Max riffled the cards as if he were doing it on a wager. Suddenly he swept them all aside and, reaching over, grasped her hands.

"See here, dear," he said, gently, "would you have any objection to marrying me?"

He had been gone a long time when Marjorie came home—a cross, dishevelled Marjorie. Somebody had stepped on the red satin gown, her roses were wilted, her hair down.

"It wasn't very much fun after all," she pouted. "Max Gordon never came near it. Why, what's the matter? He wasn't here with you, Milly?"

So from Milly's face she read it all, even before Milly's lips spoke. Then Marjorie did the noblest thing she had ever done. She put self aside and kissed her sister soberly. "You deserve him," she said, quietly. "I'll get used to it presently. But just at first you know—" She smiled quaintly. "There'll be somebody else for me," she added bravely.

SPRINGTIME

Spring is a time when every business man realizes that a farm, a pair of one-gallowsed overalls, and a balky mule are better than success.

It is, also, the season when the housewife, whose only touch of nature in her top-floor flat is a potted palm, sees just as plainly that raising chickens and churning are an everlasting joy.

But Spring has its compensations for this unrest. If it causes dissatisfaction with towns and cities, it brings the country to the city's edge.

Nowhere is the grass greener or the trees shadier than at the edge of the city.

Within a few minutes' ride of the heart of Atlanta are meadows as green and streams as clear as one will find in the valleys of Hall.

A MAN who works on the fourteenth story of a skyscraper and has his pie and milk sent up at lunch time to save every valuable moment for the pursuits of business, sometimes imagines a clean spot in the country where the grass is green, the sky is blue, the air is fresh; and thinks that he would give the world for a moment in such a place.

He sees then that a farm, a pair of overalls with one suspender, and a balky mule, are better than success.

A housewife, whose world is bounded by a top-floor flat, in which the only touch of nature is a potted palm and the only outlook is a bituulithic pavement and her neighbors' roofs, has the thought at times that several years of city life might well be exchanged for a few moments of the country.

She believes that raising chickens and making pats of butter would be an everlasting joy.

Spring seems to set the sweetness of the woods and meadows astir to blow a fragrant breath through the cities, and let the people living there know what they are missing.

MAY IS A PROVOCATION.

May is an annual provocation. Every green leaf and every blade of grass suggests the futility of life indoors. The one-suspendered overalls intrude into the busiest offices, and the chickens and the butter-making into the happiest flats.

Green pastures and clear waters are the universal desire in the springtime. They are as necessary as green vegetables.

But here, there is not only the desire, but the means of satisfying it. Nature has been generous and the property owners have not taken to subdivisions.

As a result, there are places on the edge of the city that are as much a part of the country as the most remote spots.

Within fifteen or twenty minutes of the heart of Atlanta are meadows as green and streams as clear and meandering as one could find in the valleys of Hall.

If you are feeling a discontent with the city and are wistful for a glimpse of the country, you can have what you wish with very little trouble.

AT THE CITY'S EDGE.

The fact is that grass grows greenest at the edge, the trees put forth the shadiest leaves, the streams sparkle brightest.

There are no farms ready for the man who wishes to give up a prosperous business to return to nature. But a very satisfying visit to the country can be made by whomsoever spring has provoked with its breath from the woods and meadows.

The bit of wildwood in the middle of this page, the fresh streams, the trees of original growth, the carpet of grass, and the dog-tooth violets, are as wholesome and sweet as one could find in a seven days' journey.

The little girls and the grown-up lady on the right are picking whole handfuls of violets, the little children on the left have clusters of honeysuckle, on the left at the bottom they are standing in a wilderness of honeysuckle, on the right at the bottom they have stopped to rest in the shade of trees that have spread their limbs for a hundred years.

PRIMEVAL WOODLAND.

These glimpses are of two bits of the country upon the edge of the city. The town stops, the country begins. Go but a short distance into the woods where the children are resting under the trees, and you are in the midst of a woodland that seems never to have been disturbed by man.

Within a few minutes' walk of the car line, is this primeval bit of the country. It seems to have been left purposely as it is for the benefit of those who feel the provocation of spring.

It can be reached either by a Boulevard or by a Highland avenue street car. If you go by Boulevard you continue to the end of the line, which ends at Tenth street, and you turn to the left. After a brief walk you pass through a gate which is the entrance to a pasture. This gateway has been made into an arbor by the Cherokee roses which climb over it. Soon you will see a pine thicket from which not a stick of wood seems ever to have been cut.

A deer couldn't run through it. Natural histories say that deer can penetrate the closest thickets; that is why the simile is used.

IN THE COUNTRY.

But leaving natural history out of it, the clump of pines is such you would never imagine upon the edge of the city. It breathes a balsamic breath. Already you are in the country. You almost feel that your Sunday suit is a pair of overalls with one suspender—that is, if you are that sort of a May-time explorer.

You follow a pleasant way through a pleasant countryside until you come to the stream that meanders through the meadow and to the stretch of primeval woods. It is all clean and sweet. The water is fresh enough to drink, it flows with a silvery sound, it sings a song of violets and shady nooks, it is really a babbling brook.

You cross it into the primeval woodland. The trees seem to be everlasting. Before Atlanta was even a name they stood where they stand now. They grow close together, stretch their limbs wide apart, and make a perfect shade even at noonday.

Not far away is a hill top. You climb up it, and stope to breathe the air. This air is as clean as though the nearest city were a thousand miles off and it had blown over nothing but stretches of meadowland and woods. You can see a stretch of the country, but nothing of the city. All that is missing are the one-gallused overalls. The rest of the delusion is complete. You feel that you are far from the town and right in the heart of nature. And, really, you are.

A neighboring countryside may be reached by taking a Highland avenue car and getting off at Bigham avenue. In a moment you are in the midst of honeysuckle and dog violets that grow in profusion with dogwood. It is as much the country as the stream, the primeval woods, and the hill top.

Other spots as delightful may be found by whoever cares for May-time explorations.

It is upon the edge of the city that the country is greenest.

MISS DELAMAR'S UNDERSTUDY

and he made a rattling good speech, and you missed the whole thing; and you ought to be ashamed of yourself. We've asked half the people in front to supper—two stray Englishmen, all the Wilton girls and their governor, and the chap that wrote the play. And Seldon and his brother Sam are coming as soon as they get their makeup on. Don't stand there like that, but hurry. What have you been doing?"

Stuart gave a nervous, anxious laugh. "Oh, don't ask me," he cried. "It was awful. I've been trying an experiment, and I had to keep it up until midnight, and—I'm so glad you fellows have come," he continued, halting midway in his explanation. "I was blue."

"You've been asleep in front of the fire," said Sloane, "and you've been dreaming."

"Perhaps," laughed Stuart, gayly, "perhaps. But I'm awake now in any event, Sloane, old man," he cried, dropping both hands on the youngster's shoulders. "How much money have you? Enough to take me to Gibraltar? They can cable me the rest."

"Hoorah!" shouted Sloane, waltzing from one end of the room to the other. "And we're off to Ab-yss-in-ia in the morn-ing," he sang. "There's plenty in my money belt," he cried, slapping his sides, "you can hear the ten-pound notes crackle whenever I breathe, and it's all yours, my dear boy, and welcome. And I'll prove to you that the Winchester is the better gun."

"All right," returned Stuart, gayly, "and I'll try to prove that the Italians don't know how to govern a native state. But who is giving this supper, alway?" he demanded. "That is the main thing—that's what I want to know."

"You've got to pack, haven't you?" suggested Rives.

"I'll pack when I get back," said Stuart, struggling into his greatcoat, and searching in his pockets for his gloves. "Besides my things are always ready and there's plenty of time, the boat doesn't leave for six hours yet."

"We'll all come back and help," said Weimer.

"Then I'll never get away," laughed Stuart. He was radiant, happy and excited, like a boy back from school for the holidays. But when they had reached the pavement, he halted and ran his hand down into his pocket, as though feeling for his latch key, and stood looking doubtfully at his friends.

"What is it now?" asked Rives impatiently. "Have you forgotten something?"

Stuart looked back at the front door in momentary indecision.

"Yes," he answered. "I did forget something. But it doesn't matter," he added, cheerfully, taking Sloan's arm.

"Come on," he added, "and so Sendon made a hit, did he? I am glad—and tell me, old man, how long will he have to wait at Gib for the P. & O.?"

Stuart's servant had heard the men trooping down the stairs laughing and calling to one another as they went, and judging from this that they had departed for the night, he put out all the lights in the library and closed the piano, and lifted the windows to clear the room of the tobacco smoke. He did not notice the beautiful photograph sitting upright in the armchair before the fireplace, and so left it alone in the deserted library.

The cold night air swept in through the open window and chilled the silent room and the dead coals in the grate, dropped one by one into the fender with a dismal echoing clatter; but the Picture still sat in the armchair with the same graceful pose and the same lovely expression, and smiled sweetly at the encircling darkness.

Slippers Edged With Tiny Flowers

(London Daily Mail.)

In the evening all manner of quaint and pretty little notions are noticeable on the loveliest of slippers, and in one case it was an edging of tiny rosebuds made of colored satin, sulphur, pink, damask and mauve that was perceived, and in another a garland of tiny blossoms, forget-me-nots among them, rendered in tinted India rubber.

What marvels of beauty there are, and what a display of ingenuity and resource these and other dress adjuncts give to an admiring world!

Hon. Bird Coler Condemns American Education

BY BISHOP W. A. CANDLER

THE interest of the American people in the matter of education is unprecedented in the history of nations. Beside the vast sums, appropriated by states and municipalities for common schools and the legislative appropriations to state universities, immense gifts are made every year by private individuals to institutions of learning and boards of education. Such gifts are without precedent in ancient or modern times, and the volume of these gifts grows greater with each passing year. Let us note a few which have been made since the opening of the year 1913: Mrs. R. N. Carson has left by will $6,000,000 for Carson College. Mr. Ferris Thompson has left $2,000,000 to Princeton University. The will of the late Robert P. Doremus, a business man of New York City, was recently probated and it was found that his entire fortune of between $3,000,000 and $5,000,000 had been left to Washington and Lee University. Other gifts besides these have also been made; but these are sufficent to show how strongly the current of the generosity of the rich among us sets toward educational institutions.

All of this is certainly creditable to our country. It shows that other motives than the motives of commercialism are operating in the hearts of at least some of our people of wealth. Evidently many of them believe that there is something better than money, something into which money can be turned and thereby its value be increased. By these great gifts the givers declare their faith in the truth that "man shall not live by bread alone."

But, while recognizing the generous purposes which inspire such gifts, it is not improper to ask, Are the givers doomed to disappointment in the fruit of their giving? Is such of the education given in the United States resulting in the good which it should accomplish? Many thoughtful men are answering flatly and positively, "No".

Here, for example, is the Honorable Bird S. Coler, a notable political leader in New York City, who in his recent book entitled "Two And Two Make Four", contends that our educational work is promoting the welfare of the nation. He says in one place in his book, "The public schools in this country are not making for righteousness. There is not an educator of any note in this country who has not admitted this. The metropolis of this country is thug-ridden. It has developed a new type of criminal, a conscienceless, fearless young brute who murders for hire, and recognizes no moral accountability and no social obligation". Mr. Coler attributes this result to the godliness of American education, and he says "The relationship of the godless school to the growing viciousness among our people did not come to me as a religious man but as a practical man, a public officer administering a municipal office".

Mr. Coler not only condemns the common schools because religious instruction is excluded from them; but he is even more emphatic in his condemnation of colleges and universities which exclude Christian teaching. He insists that morality can not exist if religion perish, and that no sort of ethical culture can take the place of positive faith; and deprecates the creation of "a great fund for such colleges as shall abandon Christ after having been founded in His name".

However one may differ with some of the things which Mr. Coler puts into his book, his conclusion that irreligious education results in immorality can hardly be denied. In this view he is supported by both philosophy and history. Historians and philosophers, including even some sceptics, have reached the same conclusion. Thomas H. Huxley said, "There must be a moral substratum to a child's education to make it valuable, and there is no other source from which this can be obtained at all comparable with the Bible". Victor Cousin asserted, "Any system of school training which sharpens and strengthens the intellectual powers without, at the same time, affording a source of restraint and counterchock to their tendency to evil is a curse rather than a blessing". So Archibald Alison declares that the spread of knowledge detached from religion depraves any people. He says "The reason of its corrupting influence on morals is evident—when so detached it multiplies the desires and passions of the heart without increasing its regulating principles; it augments the attacking forces without strengthening the resisting powers; and thence the disorder and license it spreads through society. The invariable characteristic of a declining and corrupt state of society in a progressing increase in the force of power and a progressing decline in the influence of duty".

Certainly our civilization shows many marks of such a declining state of society. The increase of murder, divorces, and defalcations, of every sort, points us to tendencies of the most unrestrained passion. The sense of duty seems to have dropped out of the lives of many of our people; and this lack of the sense of moral responsibility is not observed in the uneducated portion of society chiefly. Those classes who claim the highest culture show many of the most serious departures from commonly accepted morality. They are educated, but they neither fear God nor regard man. Some of them affect to lament the degradation of the slums, even while they are themselves practicing the vices which have led many thousands of fallen people into the slums.

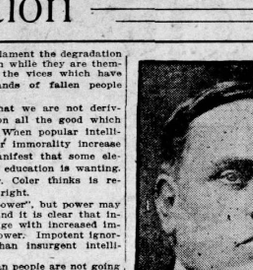

It is evident that we are not deriving from education all the good which it should yield. When popular intelligence and popular immorality increase together, it is manifest that some element of a proper education is wanting. That element Mr. Coler thinks is religion; and he is right.

"Knowledge is power", but power may be good or bad; and it is clear that increase of knowledge with increased immorality is bad power. Impotent ignorance is better than insurgent intelligence.

But the American people are not going to be content to have no literature, or to have their children grow up without education. They are going to eat of the tree of knowledge, even though eating results in despoiling their Paradise.

Wherefore it behooves all patriots to concern themselves about some way for imparting indispensable religious element in education which is now so conspicuously wanting. There seems to be no practicable way of doing this except by magnifying and strengthening the schools of the Churches. Our rich men should lay down on these altars their offerings for education. Both their duty and their interests should impel them to this course. Secular education is begetting all sorts of godless aspirations and socialistic ambitions. Another twenty-five years of the kind of education which has prevailed during the last twenty-five years will menace the very life of our social system and our free institutions. The Honorable Bird Coler is no alarmist and no pessimist. Moreover, he has been in position to observe the effects of schools thoroughly sectarianized. He boldly proclaims the conclusions to which his observations have led him. Let any man study carefully the facts of the case, and doubtless he will reach similar conclusions.

Another thing needs to be said. Colleges which profess to be religious institutions must make good their profession. It is nothing less than delusional simony for a school to fool upon the Church, and claim a religious character, in order to secure the support of the Church, when they do its work in a worldly and godless way. Religious colleges must answer to the public conscience and honestly the question "What do ye more than others?" If were better to have schools downright irreligious than to have hypocritical establishments which deny or disfigure the cause for which they were founded.

BISHOP WARREN A. CANDLER.

TWO WEEKS IN PARIS

WHAT CAN BE SEEN THERE--- THE CHANGE OF A LIFETIME

By Smith Clayton

SOME sentimental gentleman said: "See Naples, and die!"

The game is not worth the candle.

I say:

"See Paris, and live!"

There can be no question of it.

Paris is the best schoolmaster. It corrects the errors in books. It broadens the view. It makes people charitable. And best of all—

It is an education in experience, the best form that educatoin can possibly take.

A FINE IDEA.

I learn that a movement will soon be put on foot in the south to enable people to visit Paris this summer, at an incredibly low rate, the object being to afford appreciative people of small means the chance of their lives to visit Paris for at least two weeks.

POOR AND RICH.

It is the irony of fate that as a rule people of culture who are best able to appreciate and profit by a trip to Paris are least able to take it.

If this movement shall materialize people in the south who otherwise would never enjoy the privilege of a trip abroad, will find the opportunity to spend two weeks in Paris.

IT WILL.

It will be a Godsend to that large number of teachers and normal school students and art-lovers and general educators and others of small means, who as things now stand, and will continue to stand, may never have the price!

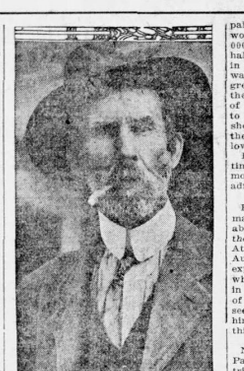

This movement to put tourists across and back at a reasonable rate will also give a certain number two weeks in Paris free of cost. That is to say the cost of living expenses in that city for that length of time will be given each tourist.

The details of this movement appear later.

So many people have asked how much a trip across the big water costs that I take this opportunity of outlining a few remarks on the general subject of the price of a trip abroad, and the special subject of the price of two weeks' stay in Paris.

BECAUSE IT'S PARIS.

But why Paris? Simply because Paris is the most interesting and attractive city in the world. Paris is the expitome of all that's worth seeing in Europe. Paris is the mirror in which the best of Europe sees itself. One may journey all over Europe, a tedious and troublesome job, and a very costly one. Then, one can spend two weeks in Paris and see the other parts of Europe reflected there in art, in architecture, in monuments and collections.

The point is this:

Some tourists try to see everything. This is impossible. But something of the finest in all Europe can be seen, and in a short time, too, if the time is properly ordered. And Paris is the best place for this.

YOU CAN GO.

You cannot make the tour of Europe for lack of means, we will say. You can never afford it. Then is it not infinitely better to go to Paris for two weeks than not to go at all when that experience will give you a world of enjoyment and an educational education.

Seeing is believing.

LA BELLE FRANCE.

I wish every American could visit France—France, the best friend abroad of America—France, which gave Lafayette to America—France without whose help our American independence might have failed to carry—France, which when, in 1870, Germany placed a garrison of 12,000 men at Paris to remain until the war indemnity should be paid, with the hope that the garrison would be perpetual—France, paid $1,000,000,000 within three years and a half. Every peasant woman going down in her stocking to help and the garrison was promptly removed!—France where great exportations are made possible by the people themselves, who buy bonds of as low a denomination as $20 simply to help out, and take tickets to the great show as unaccustomed and as hawking them about the gates bring down to the lowest the prices of admission.

I saw the exposition of 1900 several times for 10 and 25 cents—never for more than 30. Of course, the price of admission fluctuated.

DON'T TRAVEL MUCH.

But I wander. Suppose that a southern man—and the southern people travel abroad less than those of any section of the country—suppose he could go from Atlanta to Paris and return in July or August, this year, and have his living expenses paid in Paris for two weeks, what could he see? Well, after writing in a general way about the attractions of Paris, I will show him what he could see in fifteen days, day by day, and show him how he could live and see them things; easily within $80 to $100.

WORTH A TRIP TO SEE.

Now, then, there are several sights of Paris either one of which it is worth a trip across the water to see. One is the life on the Chain of Boulevards extending from the Church of the Madelaen to the Place Bastile. That costs nothing. Another is the Grand opera house, the National Academy of Music, which costs over $12,000,000, and is the finest temple of amusement ever erected in the world. A third is the tomb of Napoleon, the most magnificent mausoleum all over built for the ashes of the greatest captain of all the ages. Another is the Halles Centralles, or Central markets of Paris, built of stone, glass and stone, consisting of twenty-elegant pavilions, where people represent 50,000 and more truck farms around Paris, and for early each morning to sell their products. Another is the Palce de a Concorde, the finest public square in the world, covering twenty acres in the heart of Paris, with the avenue of de Champs Elysees leading west, the Garden of the Tuileries and the Art Gallery on the Louvre on the east. The Louvre by itself is worth a trip across to see, and the Arch of Triumph of the Star of Napoleon and the twelve grand avenues leading up to it, like spokes to the hub of a wheel—this is worth two trips abroad. And there are these. Now the sights that I have mentioned can be seen for free. Of course, you can take a cab at 20 cents a trip, 40 cents an hour, or ride on an omnibus on top on the boulevards, or for that matter all over Paris for a few cents. There are thirty odd omnibus lines and several tram car lines and "correspondence," or transfer tickets are given "everywhere." In addition, Paris has the finest, now a grand subway, which will take you across the 3,000,000 people city for a song.

HOPEL MONEY.

But how about hotel expenses? There are scores of comfortable hotels in Paris where one can live for $2 a day, American plan, and for 50 cents table d'hote. There are several scores where he can live for less. One can get an elegant room in Paris for 5 francs a day—$1. And 50 cents—never for more than 20. Of course, the price of admission fluctuated.

From 2 francs, 40 cents, to 4 francs, 80 cents, one can get a meal in Paris good enough for anybody but a Parveun or a Pharisee.

Throw guilde books to the winds, but get a good guide. Make him show his credentials and badge.

I was in Paris seven weeks once. It cost me $250, and much of it was spent foolishly. I was there again in 1900, three weeks. It cost me less than $100. I had all I wanted and more, too. It was a good thing that my exchequer was limited. Otherwise, my coin would have been wasted in riotous living and very little would have been learned. Let me state that the cost of any trip abroad depends upon the tastes and habits of the tourist.

'TIS TRUE.

But I affirm that a man can spend two weeks in Paris and see something of every great sight for from $80 to $100. Yes, and have money left. But, of course, people are known by the gambles or drives in the parks with millionaires and the nobility, or takes 25 cents to ride in the park in the victoria for hire, or Cafe Anglais like the rich Parsee merchant. I am writing of people who go to Paris to learn as much as they can of the nouveaux riches who go to spend money and show off by giving big tips to waiters, who don't know a demi-semi-quaver from a last year's bird's nest, nor the Venus of Milo from a soap adv rtisement.

No, I'm writing about people of culture who go to Paris to learn something, to see something that cannot be seen elsewhere in the world.

Now, here are the sights to see in Paris and how one can spend each:

DAY BY DAY.

First Day—Galleries of the Louvre, Place des Carrousel, Place de la Concorde, Garden of the Tuileries.

Second—The Tomb of Napoleon, the Hotel of Invalides and its museums, the Triumphal Arch of Napoleon, with grand view of Paris from the top.

Third—The Bois de Bologne, the handsomest park in the world, 2,000 acres, features, bagatelle, Cascade cafe, Long Champs, the great race course, adjoining.

Fourth—The Haller Centrally, or city markets, early in the morning; the Bourse; the Jardin D'Acclimation; St. Eustatie.

Fifth—The Sorbourne; the Pantheon; St. Etienne du Mont; the Luxembourg and Gardens.

Sixth—The Jardin des Plantes; Val de Grace; the Gobelins Tapestry.

Seventh—Notre Dame; the Morgue; St. Chapelle; Palais de Justice; Tour St. Jacques; Colonne Juillet; Place Bastile.

Eighth—Cemetery of Pere La Chaise; the Bibliotheque Nationale; Fontaines of Richelieu and Moliene; church of St. Roch.

Ninth—Museum and Hotel de Cluny; Pont Neuf; Palais de L'Institute; La Monnaie the Mint.

Tenth—Versailles; Sevres; St. Cloud.

Eleventh—Fontainbleau, the Palace and Forest.

Twelfth—Parc Monceau; the Buttes Chanmont; La Trinite; Notre Dame de Lorette; the Gove San Lazare.

Thirteenth—The Magdalen; the Trocadero; the Eiffel Tower, and the Champs de Mars; at night, the grand opera house.

Fourteenth—The Palais Royal; Boulevard Montmontre; Heights of Monmontre, the Abbattoirs, or slaughter house.

Fifteenth—Ride on the tops of omnibuses through all the main boulevards on the north side; walk through Latin Quarter at night.

I had one of the best guides in Paris. He cost about $2 a day.

But this is enough for once. It will take another article to show the thousands of readers of The Journal how to go to Paris and return after spending two weeks this summer for less money than one could take an outing in the north, east or west.

MORE POINTS.

At the New York Herald (greatest paper) office, 49 Avenue de l'Opera, Nos. 13 and 14, is a reading room open to the public.

American newspapers are here.

Also, a visitor's book. The names of Americans registering there are published the following morning. List of American visitors cabled every day to the New York edition of the Herald. No charge. Americans furnished with all information they require by attache of the Herald office in Paris. They may have their letters directed there, also.

OUR MAN.

The American minister is at No. 18 Avenue Kleber. Call there for information desired about Paris.

OUR MAN, TOO.

The American consul general is at 36 Avenue de l'Opera, a few doors from the New York Herald office. Call there. A good one.

Gallegnani's Messenger, published at 224 Rue de Rivoli, gives a list of the sights and amusements of Paris, and a daily list of American visitors to Paris.

Carry as little baggage as possible. A traveling bag or small valise carried by the owner is enough. Trunks or boxes will give you trouble at the custom house.

The unit of value in Paris is the franc, about 20 cents, five francs make one dollar; 100 centimes make one franc. Bank notes are 5,000, 1,000, 500, 200, 100, 50, 25 and 20 francs. French gold coins are of the value of 100, 50, 20, 10 and 5 francs. Silver coins, 5, 2 1, 1-2 and 1-5 franc. Bronze, of 10, 5, 2, and 1 centime—100 centimes—1 franc. A "sou," the old name, is 5 centimes or 1-4 of a franc. The English penny, 2 cents, and half penny about corresponds to the 10 and 5 centime pieces, respectively.

YOUR MONEY CHANGED.

Get a letter of credit or travelers' express notes in Atlanta or New York, sure. American money is terribly discounted when exchanged abroad.

EXPENSES IN PARIS.

They depend, of course, on the habits and tastes of the visitor. One can get along finely on from 15 to 20 francs a day, that is $3 to $4. One can live well at a comfortable, not expensive hotel for from $1.50 to $2.50 a day, cheaper by the week. There are scores of such hotels. One can see the monuments, the galleries, the collections of Paris easily for $50 or $60 in two weeks. For this he can see something of the finest of everything, theaters, churches, parks, boulevards.

But if one stops at high class hotels, dines at the table d'hote or the "diner de Paris," drinks costly wine, buys the best seats in theaters, drives in parks and everywhere, and indulges in extravagant suppers a la carte—he can spend 40 to 50 francs, $8 to $10 a day.

The writer spent $250 once in seven weeks in Paris—less than $40 a week, and saw something of the best of everything.

GRAND OPERA.

The writer during that visit saw pretty much of everything in the way of amusements from the grand opera house to the French circus. He paid $1.80, 9 francs, to see the opera in the $12,000,000 house, the grandest ever built, but he went to the parterre or pit, kept his hat on and smoked. He could have gotten a seat in the fifth stage for 50 cents; for 2 1-2 francs you can go to the Theater Francaise for 1 1-2 francs, 30 cents, or pay 1-2 1-2 francs the highest price. You can see a great French circus for 1 franc, 20 cents, and by standing in the amphitheater you can see the highest class performances in Paris for 1 franc, 20 cents. You can get a seat for 1 1-2 francs, 30 cents, a seat, too, from which you can see the show.

THE HIGHEST PRICE.

Then you can pay 15 francs, about $3.00, and get the best seats of the grand opera house. If you get reserved seats you pay 17 francs for the very best. At the Odeon theater, which ranks next to the Theater Francaise, the highest class, you can go to the favorite amphitheater, or gallery, for 75 centimes, 15 cents.

ROBERT McCAIRE.

At the Folies Bergue I saw the finest pantomime performance of Robert McCaire ever given in the world for 2 francs, 40 cents. I saw the genuine Parisian Can Can danced at Bigh Life, a little theater in the Rue Mommartre, I think, for a franc, or 80 cents, and it was the hottest and most artistic dance-ing I ever saw. There was nothing wrong about it to me. They say that "to the pure all things are pure," the dirt is only in your mind, and "all looks yellow to the jaundiced eye."

There was certainly nothing the matter with my eye on that occasion.

IN EDEN.

I went, too, for one franc, to the Eden theater, and was wondering why the name, when 250 of the handsomest girls I have seen executed a ballet that almost took my breath and made a Parisian for life of me. They were dressed from top to toe in the sweetest stockanet, no trunks, thank you, and such a vision of feminine symmetry, grace and general lovelliness, I never expect to see again. It was an extremely artistic, that ballet, that nobody but a born vulgarian with smut sin the mind can find fault with, and one would have discovered anything wrong about it.

FOR A LITTLE

Oh, yes. If I mistrust how much you can see for a small sum of money in Paris, if you are only not a Smart Alec, I will tell you what to do and will ask somebody who knows where to go, and how much it will cost. That's exactly what I did, and it saved me a world of time, trouble and money.

ALL SORTS.

The fact is, these Parisians have a theater for every variety of amusement and a man strictly "on" could go easily to a different show every night for two weeks by simply knocking a few holes in a 20 franc Napoleon, which stands for less than a five-dollar bill!

IRVING.

Same in London. I crossed the channel and saw Henry Irving in "The Dead Heart," for a shilling, and Ellen Terry, too. The Lyceum was crowded at the gallery door, and I went along to the gallery, where many of the most substantial Londoners were enjoying the play.

PLANT FOOD IN SOME GEORGIA SOILS

BY DOCTOR ANDREW M. SOULE

THE college of agriculture is carrying on a physical-chemical soil survey of a number of areas of the type soils found in the state of Georgia. The survey of Ben Hill county has been completed and the work in Dougherty is well in hand. One or more samples have also been analyzed from some thirty other counties and this has in some measure given a line on the general character of our soils and the total amount of plant food contained in the first 12.6 inches. In Ben Hill county some of the principal types found were various phases of the Tifton sandy loams, Norfolk loamy sand, the Leon sand, the Susquehanna sandy loam, and the Plummer sand. In a general way the soils of this county were found rather low in nitrogen; the amount of nitrogen in the top soil varying from 700 to 1,320 pounds; in the subsoil the nitrogen ran higher, varying in amount from 1,000 up to 2,380 pounds.

It is not surprising that the subsoil should contain more nitrogen than the top soil because it has been subject to less erosion and leaching and the action of bacterial, life is stimulated at the lower levels. It is quite evident that these lands to be made fertile must be rotated and large quantities of vegetable matter used in the form of either yard or green manure. When this is done their physical condition will be greatly improved and they will become more productive from year to year and thus enable the farmer to establish his operations on a profitable and substantial basis.

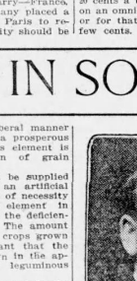

The phosphoric acid contained in these soils is inadequate to supply the needs of most crops. In fact, they are quite materially deficient in this respect. The amount of this element found in the top soils varied from 280 up to 700 pounds; in the subsoil, from 100 up to 1,400 pounds. A standard soil for Georgia should contain from 1,200 up to 2,400 pounds of phosphoric acid per acre foot. From this it will be seen that the areas under discussion must be liberally fertilized with carriers of phosphoric acid. For this purpose acid phosphate can probably be used to the best advantage, though in instances where there is a marked evidence of acidity basic slag or floats can be applied to some advantage. The use of phosphorus in a liberal manner is absolutely essential to a prosperous system of practice because this element is essential for the formation of grain and seed.

Phosphoric acid can not be supplied to the soil in any save an artificial form and the farmer must of necessity depend on purchasing this element in sufficient quantities to meet the deficiencies existing in his soil. The amount to use will vary with the crops grown though it is very important that the greatest liberality be shown in the application of phosphorus to leguminous crops.

The amount of potash found in the surface of Ben Hill county varies from 2,776 up to 18,189 pounds. The amount of potash in the subsoil, from 4,340 up to 27,560 pounds. In other words, there were soils found in this county where the supply of potash approximated 45,000 pounds in an area covering an acre and to a depth of 12.6 inches. On the other hand there were types where the supply of potash ran down to a relatively speaking small amount.

One would naturally suppose that where an abundance of potash was found in section of the immediate sighted that this element would not be needed, and many farmers seem to have come to this conclusion. The examinations made up to date point to a different conclusion for the most undesirable types of soil found in Ben Hill county from an agricultural point of view were among those containing the highest of potash.

From this it should not be concluded that the presence of the potash itself was in any way detrimental to crop production. The difficulty was due rather to the physical condition of the soil in question and the fact that the potash is not in an available form. Until it is brought into a condition assimilable by plant crops it cannot be successfully grown on this land without the use of potash. In our judgment the farmer cultivating soils similar in type to those found in this county will find it desirable to use this element in considerable quantities. In fact, this suggestion applies with equal force to most of the land situated south of the fall line in Georgia and particularly to that region known as the "coastal plain area," and which extends from the gulf coast along the Atlantic ocean to, and even beyond, Maryland. The best forms of potash to apply will vary with the conditions to be met. Muriate will be found valuable to use under most farm crops. Where cotton tends to rust kainit can be applied to advantage, and it can also be used as a basis of the fertilizer formulas which, do not contain high percentages of available plant food. For such crops as tobacco, sugarcane and Irish potatoes sulphate will be found the most effective.

DR. A. M. SOULE,

These materials are now on the market in a desirable form and can be purchased at a reasonable price. Their use is essential in our judgment for only that farmer will succeed who studies his soil carefully, first of all determining its defects in a physical and chemical way and then so adjusting and balancing up the food supply of his land through the proper combination of fertilizer materials as to insure the largest return in the way of crop at the least outlay of money and effort.

PERCENTAGE AND COMPOSITION OF A GIVEN FORMULA.

R. H. M., Geneva, Ga., writes: Please tell me what the following fertilizer mixture contains: One and a half tons of 8-2-2 guano, 1 ton of 8-4 acid and 1 ton German kainit. Would this be good for cotton on sandy land that has been broken about 8 to 10 inches?

A mixture of the fertilizer ingredients quoted in your letter would contain approximately 400 pounds of available potash. It would analyze about 5.7 per cent of phosphoric acid, 9 per cent of nitrogen and 5.5 per cent of potash. This formula would answer very well so far as the potash content is concerned for use on corn and cotton on sandy land, but it is entirely too low in phosphoric acid and potash. We would suggest that you add at least 1,000 pounds of highgrade acid phosphate and 1,000 pounds of cotton seed meal to this mixture. Even then the per cent of phosphoric acid and nitrogen would be low and in order to secure good results it would be necessary to top dress with some nitrogenous carrier which contains a high per cent of this material. We think you would find about a 10-4-6 a good formula to use on corn and cotton as we describe, and about a 9-3-4 or 9-3.5-4 satisfactory for cotton. We think these formulas would give much better results than the one you propose, and we feel sure if you improve it by the amendment you have suggested.

TREATMENT OF SORE TEATS.

J. B. W., Milan, Ga., writes: I would like to know what to do for my cow. Her teats are very sore and she has a perfect scab from one end to the other. The calf is about six weeks old and she can hardly stand for the calf to suck. She will give about two pails of milk per day, but we have had to stop milking on account of the sore teats.

The trouble referred to may probably be cured successfully by the following treatment: First wash the teats carefully and thoroughly with warm water, using a good grade of pure soap. Then wash with a solution of one dram of sugar of lead in one pint of water. After this treatment apply benzoated oxide of zinc. Keeping the teats free from chafing and from contamination is a very important matter. No doubt the cow is on pasture, and if so may pass through pools of water in search of food. She should be prevented from doing this for a few days. The teats should also be treated after the calf sucks so as to prevent further irritation. Another very good treatment is to cleanse the teats thoroughly with some disinfecting solution and then apply vaseline.

CUTTING OATS AND VETCH FOR HAY.

R. K. R., Talbotton, Ga., writes: Last October I planted one bushel of oats and thirty pounds of vetch seed per acre, and it is now waist high. Would it be advisable to cut the oats and vetch at stage when the oats are about half ripe so as to make hay of them also?

There is no reason why you should not cut the oats and vetch for hay. In fact, this makes a very superior quality of feed. The vetch on account of being a legume increases the protein content of the hay quite materially, and this combination of oats and vetch is fed in the form of hay to very high-class stock, such as race horses. It should be cured as other hay and care taken as far as possible to prevent rains falling on it so as to preserve its aroma and fine bright color. There is no reason why you should not cut the combination at the stake you have suggested just when the oats, for instance, are passing out of the milk stage and after the vetch blooms are beginning to fade.

THE LUCIFER MATCH

By Mrs. W. H. Felton

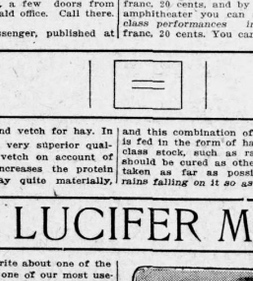

I AM going to write about one of the humblest but one of our most useful servants. We call upon it for frequent and continous service during three hundred and sixty five days in the year. I allude to the matches that we strike to make a fire to ignite the gas with to start the kindling in the cook stove, and last but not least fire up the cigars, cigarettes and pipes of the multitudes, and we use them by the dozens every day.

Stop a minute and think if you can go anywhere to get help quite as often as you go to the box of matches in your daily life, you use countless numbers of them.

I concluded to trace their origin and find that the making of matches was the result of experiment. Mr. Isaac Holdin, a chemist in England had to rise before day to pursue his studies in chemistry and was often hindered in getting a light by flint and steel. He was giving lectures to a very large academy, and he understood the danger of using high explosives for his instantaneous light. He experimented by placing sulphur under the explosive material. He told his class of his success. A young student who was present, wrote to his father who was a chemist in London, and gave him the story of the teacher of lecturer's experiment with sulphur and explosives.

Shortly afterwards the Lucifer match (as the first were called,) was published to the world; and we actually dont know what we would do, if the match industry was eliminated. We have vivid recollection of confederate matches. A block of very dry wood was sawed down about two inches into two small divisions. The top of these very small peices was thickly plastered over with the paste of phosporous to make them ignite, you set the block of wood on your mantle shelf and broke off a little strip whenever you wanted to strike a light."

They were clumsy enough but made a good substitute for the approved article. Matches are the usefullest cheap articles that I know anything about ahead of salt as to cheapness.

MRS. W. H. FELTON.

MOTHER'S BOY.

Have you seen a gallant courtier
With a bright and pleasant face,
Ever ready, at his queen's command,
To serve with loyal grace?
Have you marked him walk beside her
With a step of pride and joy?
You would know him in a moment—
Mother's boy!

Quick to note the passing trouble
In the face to him so dear;
Always eager to espouse her cause
With a heart unknown to fear.
Oh, the twining arms, the kisses,
Smoothing o'er her days' annoy!
Where's the mother who'd not miss him
Mother's boy!

What to her the years that, ebbing,
Leave her lonely on life's shore?
What to him the youthful hours that fly,
And light his path no more?
She is still the queen he worships
With a service crowned with joy.
He will be to her forever
Mother's boy!

Peerless chivalry of childhood,
Tell us who has gained the prize
In the war and struggle of the world.
Among the great and the wise?
'Tis the heart that never faltered
In life's dearest, best employ—
Faithful service to a mother—
Mother's boy!

—GEO. COFFEE.

There is not a mother, young or old, who will not say amen to this little poem. There are some of us who have had such dear boys, who have gone away into the Great Beyond, but whose memory is kept green in our heart of hearts.

I have noticed that boys who are good to their mothers generally make good husbands and good fathers to their own children when these duties are laid upon them in after years.

Nothing is more repulsive to stranger visitors or to a way grown man rude and neglectful of his mother. It is considered an acid test of character.

Perhaps the old mother has grown children and not so generally pleasant as she was when life was fuller of friends and prosperity, but she still should never forget that she bore with him when he was an unlovely, pesting infant, and nobody else cared to be troubled with him. She, however, loved her child and she gave him the best that was in her, unpleasing to outsiders and yet she did stick to him and would do so to the end of life's board to make him great or famous. The commandment given from Mount Sinai to Moses gives the Lord's idea of what a human being owes to its parents. The promise of long life to children and awful curse upon those who scoff and revile father and mother. Mother's boy is a proud title for noble boys

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE SHIRTWAIST GIRL

THERE always will be a shirtwaist girl. The charm of a well-tailored linen skirt or of lightweight serge for summer is indispensable, and the practical worth is just as important as the cool and stylish beauty which shirtwaists offer to wearers. Here are fresh models from the most famous lingerie designer of Paris. They have been developed in mousseline de sole, cotton voile and crepon. They can be duplicated in any of the more ornate fabrics and decorated to suit individual needs. You will note the fact that the collarless line at the top predominates and that sleeves are either half or full length. The cuffs on the latter are shaped, and the deeper they are the better.

Pleatings trim the collar, cuffs and box pleat of a shirtwaist that has a stitched yoke from which fullness hangs. This is of white silk crepon and is trimmed with strawberry pink and white striped voile, which is pleated as shown. Jet buttons in groups of three trim each side of the front. A strawberry-colored suede belt is worn with this blouse, which would be very effective if worn with this shade of linen suit. Duplicate any color of a linen suit in the striped trimmings on a blouse of this type and you will be reflecting one of the newest ideas that have caught the favor of Paris.

The seated figure shows a blouse of white muslin pleated in a straight vest effect from collar to belt. On the outer line of the pleats is a hemstitched ruffle which falls from under a deep-pointed pleated collar, also hemstitched on the edge. The sleeves show fullness gathered into tucked cuffs, which have ruffles falling over the hands. A bow and the bands on the cuffs are of black velvet, and pearls fasten the front.

Dainty is the gathered chemisette and cuffs of sheer linen, with black velvet run through buttonholed slots. The model shown is of old-gold silk crepon with crossed revers. A dropped armhole gives the favorite long-shouldered effect, while fullness is gathered under the stitched seam. Collar and cuffs are of black satin and black satin buttons crocheted in gold thread give a stylish fastening at one side over the belt, which is of black suede. This shirtwaist worn with a brown or mustard-colored linen is stunning.

Long sleeves having shaped cuffs and fullness at the elbow are the feature of another model that has a military simplicity. The fastening is a slanting one over to one side. White voile is used, and a frill of lace is a quaint finish at the crossed lines of the collar. A broad collar turns back, with bound buttonholes on one side and buttons on the other. These large buttons, by the way, are crocheted and are used to outline the outer seam of the deep cuffs.

White brocaded crepon is used for the figured model. Here is a circular facing of white satin which extends down one side in a straight band. The outer edge of this is trimmed with satin buttons, which are again used to outline the cuffs. A pleating of tulle finishes the top of this blouse and edges each cuff.

The story of the shirtwaist must not be closed without a word concerning the practical blouse of striped silk. It is very prominent this season and has won a place in the favor of all sensible women. Washable, durable, cool and stylish, it answers all demands that are made. Pongee, too, is a great friend, and in natural colors or any cool shade it will be worn by the shirtwaist girl. The corded silks are in high favor, because they are new and are echoes of the fabrics in the field of dresses and silk suits. They should be made comparatively plain on account of their weave.

The introduction of color must not be overlooked. It is a strong note and gives character to blouses and shirtwaists. Many women are taking one color—a becoming one, of course—as their summer idea and are using it on all dresses. Jewelry, hosiery, girdles, buttons, buckles are bought in this shade and are made to contribute a note of individuality to an outfit. The shirtwaist girl has an excellent opportunity to carry out this clever scheme in any of the models here shown.

FRENCH FASHION NOTES

PARIS, April 25.

THOSE interested in art are enjoying many interesting exhibitions of paintings by the Independents and the students at "La Palette," a studio where extreme modern painting is done, under the tutorship of many of the leading artists of the day.

Parisonside society has turned out en masse to view the efforts of these devotees of dreams.

Afternoon frocks of crepe de chine, charmeuse and silk crepon are growing more lovely as the season advances, and it is extremely difficult to make a choice when viewing a collection of these wonderful creations. Madame Paquin is featuring a gown developed of sapphire-blue charmeuse with an overdrapery of china-blue chiffon. The upper portion of the bodice and long, close-fitting sleeves are of the chiffon, while the lower portion is of the charmeuse elaborately embroidered with silk of a paler tone. Over the swathed underskirt of charmeuse is draped a pannier effect of the chiffon, and the fullness is confined to the waist line with a belt of the charmeuse with embroidered sash ends.

Another charming model of deepest garnet crepe de chine has a bodice unadorned, save for a frill of deep cream lace at the neck and bottom of the sleeve. The two-tiered skirt is rather full and a broad sash girdle of plaid silk in tones of bright blue and white supplies an attractive note of contrast.

There appears to be a marked revival of the fichu, and the extreme is touched here as in most of our latest modes.

A quaint little costume of maimaison-pink taffeta has a double fichu of white tulle bordered with a narrow pleated frill of the same material. This is crossed softly over the front of the corsage and passes beneath a girdle of the silk, to reappear in the form of two pointed ends. The tulle is draped to form panniers which extend nearly to the knees.

Lingerie blouses to accompany the tailored costume or the odd skirt are more fascinating than ever.

A blouse of sheerest lemon-yellow linen has frills of narrow valenciennes lace to trim it. Another model of the same material is adorned with coarse white cluny lace. The collar is drawn together with a cravat of black moire.

Beige crepon is used for a third blouse, and this is embroidered with cerise in a large flower design. Pleadings of black tulle trim the sleeves, collar and front.

Drecoll is partial to the oriental girdle of figured silk in vivid coloring. Almost without exception it appears on the costumes of crepe de chine, silk or cotton crepon, ratine or shantung silk.

A smart frock of extreme simplicity has as its only adornment an oriental girdle of foulard showing a design in shades of red on a black background.

Street costumes of worsted materials in very pale colors will be fashionable for the cooler days this summer.

This particular style was first exploited by Bechoff-David, and many other couturieres quickly followed their lead.

Strawberry-pink cheviot is used to fashion a suit, the jacket of which has a broad collar and cuffs of pale pink tissue sponge.

Lemon-yellow chiffon broadcloth is combined with corbeau-blue satin in another striking model, while biege-colored wool ratine and satin of a Persian design are effectively allied in a Drecoll creation.

Wraps and mantelets of moire, corded silk, chiffon lined with satin in Persian designs, silk ratine and crepe de chine are lovely enough to tempt the most parsimonious woman to purchase one for her summer wardrobe. The modern gowns fashioned of diaphanous materials demand a wrap of some description.

A three-quarter-length coat of navy-blue brocaded crepe de chine has a double collar of mousseline de sole having a brocaded design in tones of blue, mauve and white.

Silver and dark gray corded silk is used for a sleeveless manteau made over the dolman lines.

Large garden-party hats are of leghorn and covered with plain or figured chiffon in Dresden patterns. Garlands of small flowers or a single rose formed of satin or chiffon adorn these dainty Dolly Varden hats.

The bolero and eton bodices appear on many new gowns, and one model of vatican-purple crepe de chine is embroidered above the broad girdle of richelieu-blue silk with cerise.

Paquin is showing a wonderful assortment of evening gowns combining satin, tulle, metallic lace and chiffon with a master hand.

Pearl-white broche forms the foundation of one masterpiece, and the bodice is trimmed with gold lace veiled with white tulle. The sleeve draperies of tulle are caught over the shoulders with barbaric gold ornaments. The corsage is held at the side by a brobdingnagian buckle of mock brilliants.

The flesh-colored tulle has been discarded on many evening gowns, and colored tulle to match the predominating shade of the gown is now being used.

Milliners seem to vie with one another in producing unusual effects. A hat of black neapolitan has two American beauty roses with thorn-laden stems attached to the edge of the brim.

These extend upward to a height of ten inches at least.

Little girls are favored this season, for their hats and frocks are especially lovely.

A dainty model of white French crepon is trimmed with bands of crepon embroidered with small flowers in tones of old blue and pink.

A coat of white pique for a little girl of 6 has the collar and cuffs braided with white soutache braid. Three large ball buttons formed of the braid are used to fasten the coat.

Very youthful is a hat of blue straw trimmed with scarlet soutache braid.

The tiny Parisiennes are using these *braided hats for school wear and re*serving the dainty bonnets of chiffon, silk, leghorn and crepe tissue for best.

The colored blouse of sheer linen, batiste and barred lawn are popular at present. These are made in the palest tints of blue, mauve, yellow, violet and green. Some models are handsomely embroidered and trimmed with tiny Dresden buttons, while others have as their only adornment a few tucks across the front and back and bullet buttons of pearl to fasten them.

The newest neckwear consists of a broad collar fashioned of colored chiffon in brilliant tones of red, blue or violet, to which are attached revers of lace or embroidered sheer linen.

ELOISE.

At the Wrist

A VERY pretty finish for the end of the sleeve is in the shape of a fan. The entire sleeve is cut over a plain pattern, but when it nears the wrist the material is drawn in, so that the edge falls over the hand in fan shape. A piping of black velvet and a frill of lace peeping beneath add to the daintiness.

The sleeves slashed at the wrist are a fine accompaniment for slashed skirts. If the sides of the slash in the skirt are curved, the same effect is seen in the sleeve. If they are cut off square, they are treated so in the sleeves.

Deep cuffs are prominent on many long sleeves. Some are only three inches wide, while others reach the elbow.

There is such a large variety of ways to finish the bottom of the sleeve that one need not repeat one note too often.

THE NEWEST NOTES ON SUMMER SLEEVES

The Leather Cuff and Straps

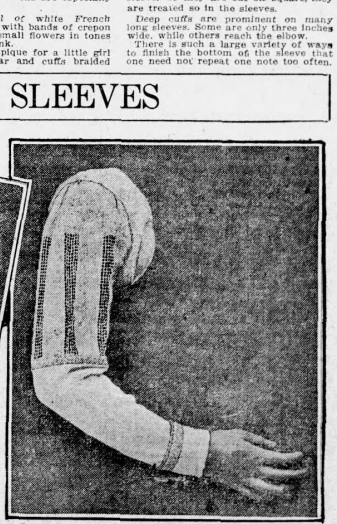

An Angel Sleeve of Net

A Pointed Slashed Cuff

With a Pleated Chiffon Panel

Drawnwork on a Long Ratine Sleeve

THE sleeve is a standard by which the style of a dress can be judged. Look at your old photographs if you doubt this. It is also a part of a dress on which a dressmaker comes to grief if she refuses a pattern which is ready for any style that a woman wishes. Variety is the noticeable feature in the sleeve department of our style discussion. Long, short, kimono, coat, full, slashed, trimmed, plain—all have recognition in the spring and summer modes. Here are some of them.

Drawn work, in parallel rows, appears on ratine in delightful contrast. It is worked in ratine. Of course, it takes time, but it puts the stamp of a big maker on the frock. An insertion of net or filet will give just as good an effect if you prefer a substitute. The sleeve should be cut first and the open effect designed so as to come in parallel lines. A deep cuff effect is given In this model by having lighter colored material as an extension from the elbow to the wrist. Turned-back cuffs edged with ratine finish this idea.

Leather as trimming is new and very attractive. On a half-length sleeve of striped flaked voile in red and white, the cuff is placed, carrying out the white and red colors. The cuff has curved edges, and on the outer line is held together by straps and buckles. A collar is also of leather.

The return of the angel sleeve for evening and formal afternoon affairs threatens to stir things at the table a little, but soup and tea must move to the background when a sleeve enters the fight. This is of net, draped at the armhole and caught by a few stitches at the top. On the edge of the plain top a double-pointed ruffle is gathered, the longest line on the outer sleeve seam. Easy, is it not?

Repeating the popularity of accordion-pleated panels on the skirt, we have a pleated panel at the top of a crepe de chine sleeve. Hemstitching outlines the tuck and shape of the insert. The panel extends down to the elbow. A pointed cuff finishes the long sleeve.

On the dark sleeve there is a deep-slashed cuff, which is longer on the inside seam. Slots around the lower line of the cuff are bound with braid, giving a good finish. A lace puff brings the sleeve to the wrist. Tucked chiffon in a full line forms the upper portion.

So many changes are rung on the sleeve idea that every dress should be finished in appropriate style. The general idea of the dress should be continued in sleeve construction and decoration. These hints should point the way to success.

CONCERNING HEALTH and BEAUTY

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

WHEN the warm days are with us we realize that the skin is busy excreting waste matter in the form of perspiration. It is almost as busy in the cold weather, but at this time the water evaporates as quickly as it is excreted, and therefore we are not conscious of it. About two pints of perspiration are thrown off the body every day. It may interest you to know that sweat is 99 per cent water; the other 1 per cent is salt, fat, fatty acids and nitrogenous products. Its odor is chiefly due to fatty acids which are formed from changes in the fat. For this reason the odor may be affected by what we eat.

The production of sweat is of great importance for many reasons. First of all, it regulates the temperature of the body. It is also a great beautifying agency; the acid in the water acts as a bleach for the skin. By its presence the skin is kept soft and pliable. This is one of the reasons why I tell the girl who is longing for a peaches-and-cream complexion to exercise. The exertion forces one to perspire more freely, and the skin is benefited in the way just mentioned.

But now for telling my impatient readers how to relieve excessive perspiration. Of course, in the summer the rise of temperature is usually the cause of the trouble. There are persons, however, who perspire too freely even on the coldest day in winter. This means that there is something wrong with the system; the machinery is not working as it should, and the longer one part of it is allowed to remain weak the quicker the rest of the system will wear out.

Mental worries may be responsible for the condition of the skin. The secretion of sweat is under sensitive nervous control and is susceptible to various influences. It is well enough for me to tell you not to worry, but this a person cannot do unless he has a philosophical mind. If one has the power to reason, one will not worry. If you see how important it is, you will try to control needless mental strain.

Sometimes excessive perspiration is due to the fact that the kidneys have not been carrying off their share of moisture, and the sweat glands have been overworked. At least three pints of water should be drunk every day to assist the kidneys to perform their functions properly.

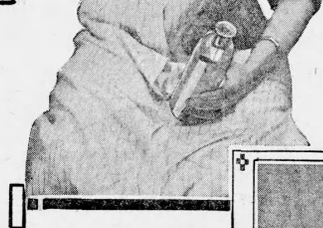

Fortunately there are local treatments for perspiration that can be used while the internal care is given.

The man or woman who is embarrassed by having feet which perspire profusely is always on the lookout for a cure. It is well to remember that the leather of the shoe fits the foot so closely that it affords very little ventilation, and so it is just as important to pay attention to the airing of the feet as to the bathing of them. The feet should be bathed twice daily. The same pair of shoes and stockings should not be worn two days in succession. If you must watch your laundry bills, wash the stockings when you take them off at night. This will take but a very few minutes. Leave your shoes where they will be well aired and do not stuff them into the shoe bag as soon as you take them from your feet. Before putting on the footwear sprinkle talcum powder on the feet. A very cooling and refreshing powder can be made of:

Burnt alum	5 grams
Salicylic acid	2½ grams
Starch	15 grams
Violet talcum powder	50 grams

The armpits are sources of great annoyance to many. I know you will welcome any information which will tell you how to prevent them from having an unpleasant odor. Bathe these parts twice a day with cold water and yellow soap. The kind that is used in the kitchen is the soap I refer to. Or, if you do not care to use the soap, you can add a heaping tablespoonful of table salt to a quart of cold water and bathe the armpits with this lotion. After drying the skin apply bay rum, which is very effective in cases of profuse perspiration. Baking soda also destroys all odor of perspiration.

We are all familiar with the girl who is continually daubing her face with powder when the hot weather forces the water to ooze out of the skin. If instead of the usual powder puff the girl will carry a vial containing cologne water and a supply of absorbent cotton she will be just as well satisfied and maybe more so. By mopping the skin with the cotton saturated with the water the perspiration will be eliminated and a cooling sensation will be experienced. You can purchase the cologne water at any drug store. This little hint will do also for the girl who is troubled with an oily skin.

The scalp throws off just as much salt water as does the body, and very often this secretion causes the scalp to itch and the hair to hang in long ugly strings. The best way to improve this condition is to wipe the scalp and hair, separating the latter in strands, with a cloth saturated with alcohol. When this has evaporated sprinkle orris powder over the scalp and hair and then brush vigorously. You should arrange to give your hair a thorough ventilation at least once a week. Sit for an hour in the fresh air with your hair hanging loosely about you. You will be surprised to find how this affects the growth and beauty of the hair.

Have you ever had to give up sewing because your hands perspire so much that the needle rusted while you were working? If your answer is in the affirmative, you will be glad to learn that alcohol rubbed on the palms of the hands will improve their condition. Another remedy for this trouble is oatmeal, which should be rubbed on the hands after they have been washed and thoroughly dried.

Make your summer more enjoyable by applying some of the remedies suggested in this article. Fussing and fuming about the rise in the temperature only add to your discomfort.

ANSWERS TO BEAUTY QUERIES

REPLIES to letters sent to the writer of this department will be printed in regular order; but no replies in print may be expected in less than three or four weeks.

Correspondents desiring immediate replies to queries may get them by inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope. Personal inquiries will receive prompt attention if accompanied by a stamped and addressed envelope.

Oily Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Please advise me what to do for my hair, which is very oily. I do not care to go to a hairdresser.

OILY.

To make your hair less oily add a little washing soda to the water in which your hair is washed. As soon as the hair becomes crisp discontinue using the soda. A lotion which may be used daily on your scalp is made of:

Alcohol	2 ounces
Witch hazel	2 ounces
Resorcin	14 grains

Use daily, rubbing well into the scalp.

Sore Gums

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Can you kindly tell me a remedy for sore gums? I have two teeth that are loose. Is this condition due to any forward disease? W. J. N.

Your gums are evidently diseased. You should consult a competent dentist immediately before any more teeth are loosened.

A Red Nose

Dear Mrs. Symes.

1. After I eat my nose gets very red. Sometimes my face gets red, too, but my nose gets terribly red from top to bottom. When I am out in the cold it gets red, too.

2. I formerly had blonde hair. Now it is darkened and is a horrid color. It is also stringy and not at all wavy. Will you please tell me what I can do to make my hair light again—even light brown—without bleaching it? Also please tell me what will make my hair wavy and thick.

3. My hands are shriveled and always red. I do not do hard labor and I dry them well. Still they get rough very easily. I have very long fingers, too. Will you please tell me what will improve my hands and prevent them from getting red? Almost every night I use glycerin and lemon on them. GRACE A.

1. A red nose is often due to indigestion. From what you say it seems very plausible that this is your trouble. I advise you to avoid highly seasoned foods, eat nothing fried and do not eat any candy, ice cream or other excessively sweet things. Eat plenty of fruit and drink a great deal of water. Not more can be said to prevent the nose from getting red when out in the cold. You may be able to protect it to some extent by applying a cream and powder.

2. Your hair needs daily care. Brush it, giving at least 100 strokes, and massage the scalp until you can feel it tingle. It is natural for the hair to grow darker as one grows older, so I do not believe you can do anything to make yours lighter.

3. I advise you to try a different brand of soap on your hands. Very often a strong soap is responsible for a poor condition of the skin. Every day apply olive oil, rubbing it well into the skin.

Liquid Rouge

Dear Mrs. Symes.

When liquid rouge is used on the face, will it in course of time ruin the skin? BLACK EYES.

If a good rouge is used and the skin is thoroughly cleansed after the rouge has served its purpose, I do not think it will harm the skin.

The Sulphur Cure

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you kindly publish the recipe for removing dandruff? It contained sulphur. M. M.

To an ounce of sulphur add a quart of soft water and during intervals of several days agitate the mixture repeatedly. After the sulphur has settled to the bottom of the receptacle use the clear liquid. Saturate the head with it every morning, and in a few weeks every trace of the dandruff will have disappeared. The hair will become soft and glossy, and there will be no return of the old trouble.

This remedy, however, will darken light hair.

Cure for Parasites

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you please tell me what will remove parasites from the head of my little girl?

What can I do to develop my bust? UNSIGNED.

Following is the recipe which you may use to cure your little girl's trouble:

Cut a cake of bichloride of mercury soap into shives and shave one half into fine bits. Dissolve it in boiling water. You may set the mixture on the stove over a gentle heat if you choose. You should have the water form a jellylike mixture when cold.

The following lotion may be used after a thorough washing with the foregoing preparation:

Tincture staphisagre	3 ounces
Bay rum	3 ounces

To develop the bust take the tonic for which here is the recipe:

Dr. Vaucaire's Remedy for the Bust

Liquid extract of galega (goats-rue)	3 fl. dr.
Lacto-phosphate of lime	154 grains
Tincture of fennel	15 minims
Simple syrup (sugar and water 2 to 1)	1¾ ounces

The dose is 2 soupspoonfuls with water before each meal.

Another Vaucaire also advises the drinking of malt extract during meals.

Dark Skin

Dear Mrs. Symes.

My hands and face are very dark. What can be done to make them whiter? How can I increase the length and thickness of my hair? ROSE.

If there is an abundance of pigment in your skin you cannot do much to make it lighter. You should, however, protect your skin from the direct rays of the sun, for sunlight stimulates the formation of pigment, as is seen in the familiar tanning or the development of freckles that follows exposure. Sponging with hydrogen peroxide solution, after washing the skin with an alkaline soap and warm water or cautiously rinsing with ammonia water, will bleach the pigment to some extent.

To increase the length and thickness of the hair massage the scalp daily for ten or fifteen minutes and then brush the hair thoroughly. If the scalp is inclined to be dry, rub castor oil into it.

E. S.

Cold Hands

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I always have cold hands and should like to know what can be done for them.

ROSE BELLE.

Cold hands indicate that the circulation of the blood is not as it should be. I advise you to exercise as much as possible in the fresh air every day, and it is advisable for you to go to a physician and find out if your nerves are in first-class condition. Nervousness will cause the hands to be cold and uncomfortable.

The Egg Shampoo

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I have heard that an egg shampoo is good for curing dandruff. Will you please tell me if this is so? A READER.

The egg shampoo is a cure for dandruff. Following is the recipe for it:

Yolk of 1 egg, 1 pint of rainwater, spirits of rosemary, 1 ounce.

Beat the mixture thoroughly and use it warm. Rub it well into the scalp and rinse with several clear waters.

A Cleansing Cream

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Please let me know what may be used to cleanse the skin in place of soap and water. RUTH M.

Following is the recipe for a cream which you may use to cleanse the skin. After rubbing it in well, wipe the face with a soft cloth:

Cleansing Cream

White wax	8 ounces
Spermaceti	2 ounces
Sweet almond oil	2 ounces
Distilled water	2 ounces
Glycerin	2 ounces
Salicylic acid	90 grains

Hair Falls

Dear Mrs. Symes.

My hair falls out at a dreadful rate and I should like to know what to do to stop it. It does not seem to be very oily.

ZARAH.

Your scalp is greatly in need of nourishment and I advise you to use on it the tonic for which the recipe is published below. Be sure to rub it in well, for the rubbing will do as much good as the tonic. Then brush the hair to evenly distribute the natural oil.

Tonic for Falling Hair

Phenol	½ dram
Tincture nux vomica	7½ grains
Tincture cinchona	1 ounce
Tincture of cantharides	½ dram
Cologne	4 ounces
Sweet almond oil	2 ounces

Apply to the roots of the hair with a soft sponge once or twice a day. This lotion is especially good for very dry hair.

To Increase Weight

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you kindly tell me what I may do to gain a little weight? M. L. P.

In order to gain weight you must first of all be able to boast of good health. Do not worry, and lead an open-air life if possible. Retire early every night. Drink three glasses of milk and take three raw eggs a day. After every meal take a tablespoonful of olive oil.

White and Black Heads

Dear Mrs. Symes.

1. Will you kindly give me a simple remedy for small whiteheads on the chin? I also have some blackheads on the nose.

2. Can you tell me what to do for brittle nails?

3. Please suggest remedy for a red nose. Mine is especially red when I go out in the cold.

E. S.

1. The presence of the blackheads and the whiteheads indicate that the health is not as it should be. To have a clear skin it is necessary to have good digestion, proper excretion by the bowels, skin and kidneys; good condition of the blood and plenty of outdoor exercise. The beauty of the skin is entirely dependent on the health. If you are troubled with any one of these conditions, you should seek the proper cure. After you have done this you can use external methods to remove the specks. Every night before retiring steam your face by applying towels wrung from hot water. When the pores are sufficiently open cleanse the skin with a good toilet soap. Rinse the skin with warm water and then try to squeeze out the heads with the balls of the fingers. After the wormlike substance has been removed, apply witch hazel to heal the skin.

2. Hold the nails in warm olive oil for ten minutes every day.

3. Following is the recipe for a lotion which you may use on your red nose. To protect the nose from the cold apply cold cream and powder to it before going out:

Lotion for Red Nose

Powdered calamine	1 dram
Zinc oxide	30 grains
Glycerin	½ dram
Cherry laurel water	4 ounces

This lotion should be well shaken before it is mopped on the nose. It may be used both morning and evening.

Hard Corns

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Can you please tell me how to get rid of a hard corn on my little toe? I am sure my shoes are not too small, but I cannot walk very far for my new shoes without my feet hurting. I. T. Z.

Hard corns may be filed down with a file, which is sold in any drug store. This is best done after the foot has been bathed. When you have removed as much of the hard skin as possible you should apply with a camel's-hair brush:

Salicylic acid	30 grains
Extract cannabis indica	6 grains
Collodion	½ ounce

Economy should not be practiced at this time. To a family, one invitation is sent to the husband and wife; one to "the Misses Gray," and a third to "The Messrs. Gray." These three envelopes, or the number required, are placed in one large outer one and that is addressed to the matron or hostess of the house, in this case, "Mrs. Edwin Gray."

The accepted form, which should be engraved in a simple script or block lettering, is as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Beck request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter,
Alice
to
Mr. Andrew Hall
on Monday afternoon, June the sixth,
at four o'clock,
Saint Mary's Church,
New York.

Another form has a space at the top in which the name of the guest is written by hand. This gives a personal touch to the engraved form.

A bride who has no parents living issues her invitations in the name of her nearest living relative. If a married woman should be this hostess, the exact relationship is explained thus:

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Black request the honor, etc., at the marriage of Mrs. Black's sister, Miss Alice Gray, etc.

If a wedding is to take place at the home of a friend a form like the following is good:

The pleasure of your company is requested
at the marriage of Miss Alice Gray
to
Mr. Andrew Hall
at the residence of
Mr. and Mrs. Albert Claire, etc.

A stepdaughter's relationship is clearly defined in an invitation issued by her parents. "Mr. Gray's daughter," or "Mrs. Gray's daughter, Margaret Anderson," explains this.

With invitations there are sent at home cards, which have the name of the newly married couple, their home address and the date suggested for receiving callers. The correct forms are on hand at all stationers' shops.

I shall continue this next week.

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

Mrs Chester Adams most cordially invites you to bring to her their Social Problems and Perplexities by letter at any time

WEDDING INVITATIONS

IF YOU are planning to be married in June, it is time to think of the details, which may be very annoying, but custom insists on their observance. I will try to give a series of talks to my readers, for a few weeks, to prepare you for the June wedding, which we hold dear.

The invitations are the first thing to be chosen, after the date for the wedding has been decided upon. They should be sent not more than one month nor later than fifteen days before the date. If a large church wedding is contemplated, all the names of both families' visiting lists are included. Besides these the relatives and friends of bride and *groom and father of the bride are hon*ored with invitations. Friends who are in other countries and those in mourning (although the latter will not attend) are notified of the coming event.

Select a good stationer, who will submit to you some of the newest forms of invitations. Besides these, there are always accepted "set" styles, which conservative persons select. These are always correct.

If the bride has a family crest that she has used on her note paper, the die can be left and the crest stamped in white (never in colors) at the center of the top of the sheet and on the flap of the envelope.

Paper should be white or cream and with an unglazed surface. With every sheet of paper two envelopes are ordered, one to inclose the invitation, the larger one to fold both and to be addressed and stamped. The first one is not sealed.

On the unsealed envelope is a line written. This is the name of the recipient. You should never make one invitation serve for an entire family.

SOLUTIONS TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS

Napkin Rings

DEAR Mrs Adams.

May napkin rings be used on the tables? J. K. L.

For the family meals napkin rings may be in evidence if the napkins are to be used more than once. When guests are present the rings should be removed.

The Visiting Card

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Is it proper to give the hostess one's visiting card when one finds her at home?

(never in colors) at the center of the top of the sheet and on the flap of the envelope. JENNIE.

A visiting card is never handed to the hostess. It is placed on the card tray in an inconspicuous manner.

E. S.

Invitation From Two

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I have an invitation to a luncheon to be given by a woman. One of them is almost a stranger to me. Please tell me what to do about accepting my acceptance. Would it be proper to reply to the lady with whom I am acquainted or should I reply to both?

E. J.

You may address your acceptance to the woman with whom you are acquainted, but in your reply mention both of the names of the women who are giving the luncheon.

K. K.

Not Necessary

Dear Mrs. Adams

My grandmother having died, I wish to know if I should wear mourning. I am 16 years of age. K. K.

It is not customary for a boy of your age to wear mourning for a grandparent.

A Public Introduction

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Recently a friend of mine introduced me to a friend of hers while we were on the street. Is it necessary for me to recognize this person whenever we meet in the future? IN DOUBT.

An introduction upon the street does not necessitate future recognition. If you should wish to continue the acquaintance you have the privilege of doing so.

The Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Will you kindly tell me who issues the wedding invitations and when they should be sent? G. G. G.

The bride's parents, guardian or nearest relatives issue the invitations. They are sent out two or three weeks before the wedding.

Does Not Call

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Please advise me what to do in this case. I have a friend who used to call on me occasionally. For the past few months he has not been to see me. From some remark made by his sister I believe he thinks I do not care to have him call. How can I let him know that I enjoy his company?

ANXIOUS ONE.

You might invite him to your home for an afternoon or evening and arrange to have a couple of friends present at the same time. In your invitation you may state that you are anxious to have him meet some of the friends you have invited.

Playing in a Public Parlor

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Do you think it is proper for a girl to play unbidden on a piano which is in a public ice cream parlor? I told my friend that I thought this was bold. S. R. T.

To play in such a public place without an invitation from the proprietor is to show one's accomplishments. It is not good form to do so.

The Cards to Leave

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I have received an invitation from a husband and wife who are going to hold a reception in honor of two nieces. Please tell me how many cards I should leave.

SARAH.

Three of your cards should be left.

Announcing a Wedding

Dear Mrs. Adams.

My father is a widower. Please tell me how the announcement of my marriage should read. PAULINE.

Following is the form for the announcement:

Mr. Charles Foster Dean has the honor of announcing the marriage of his daughter Helen
to
Mr. Henry L. Smith
on Thursday, May the fifth nineteen hundred and thirteen, at
New York city

Bidding the Hostess Adieu

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When one has attended a dinner given for six friends, is it necessary to bid the hostess good night? WALTER.

It is quite necessary to do so.

When Being Introduced

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When a man is introduced to a woman is it necessary for him to express any great pleasure? Should he shake hands with her? PHILIP.

A man should always signify his pleasure when introduced to a young lady by expressing some amiable phrase. He should not shake hands with her unless she offers to do so.

An Undesirable Visitor

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I have received a note from a friend in a distant city saying she is coming to visit me next month. I do not wish to have her come because one time in the past she visited me and was most incompetent. What means and time. What shall I do to prevent her coming? A. S. C.

Write to the intruding one and say that you fear it will be inconvenient for you to entertain her at the time she suggested, or for many weeks to come. Household duties and outside interests may be given as your reason for not having time to entertain.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

THE DUTY OF THE WAGE EARNING CHILD.

A FEW weeks ago I printed on this page the letter of a young man who asked my opinion as to the justice of his family's expectation that he should contribute a large proportion of his wages toward their expenses. They had kept him at school past the legal requirement, and had made sacrifices to do this. He did not think, however, that their claim upon him was fair, and stated his case for the decision of others.

As you know, it is the invariable practice of the Corner to give both sides of a case a hearing. This is the custom I follow in printing the letters that have come in reply to the young man's presentation of his position. They vary in their view of the matter, and you will be interested, as I am, in learning what there is to be said for and against the theory that the children should contribute to the support of their parents.

The writer of the first letter takes a firm stand. He says:

"A few words to your young man who asks the Corner if he should be expected to contribute to the home fund after he is able to earn his own living.

"Being a young man myself, and the second child in a family of six children, three boys and three girls, I would like to ask the inquirer a few questions which will enable him to do a little thinking for himself.

"Is it any wonder that your parents don't own anything if they have raised a respectable family of five children and kept you in school until you were 19?

"Didn't they keep you looking about as well as the rest of the kids in your classes?

"Didn't your dad have several chances during your life to better his own financial condition if it had not been that he would rather keep the children in school?

"How many of the fellows in your crowd were permitted to stay in school as long as you did, and if you had been taken out of school the first time your parents needed your help in a financial way would you be competent to hold the position you speak of as paying a great deal more than the others are getting?

"Didn't it make you squirm a little to admit that your sisters were taking all their money home?

"Did a boy ever do anything for a father or mother that was not appreciated?

How One Boy Repaid.

"Suppose dad had taken your view of things and had 'looked out for number one,' what kind of a fellow would you be?

"You want to save money for yourself and from the tone of your letter I would surmise that you are not far past 20. What do you figure on doing with your money? I'll ve ture the assertion that you either want to spend it on yourself or that you are paying attention to some young 'fluffy ruffles,' who has won your tender young heart and that you want to make her father believe you are able to take care of two.

"So long as all the children are helping I doubt if any of them expect you to take home all your money, but they have a right to expect your assistance in proportion to what you make.

"I'll give you a sketch of how I handled my own funds after leaving home to earn a living and it did not prove disastrous.

"Dad and mother sacrificed to keep us kids in school and give us all a high school education, and we all graduated.

"When I left home at the age of 18, I started out at $10 a month. Dad was making $900 a year, had to keep up appearances to hold his job, and still had to support the remaining seven of the family. He was $900 in debt for groceries and clothing which had gone through the stomachs and on the backs of six husky kids.

"For three months dad sent me $3 each pay day to make up my deficit. Next job paid me $25 and I sent home $5 of it. The next job paid $30 and dad received $7.50. The next was $50 and I sent home $20 of it. The next was $80 and dad got $30. Then I pulled down $100 and I managed nicely on $60 and saved part of it for myself.

"At the age of 25 I had helped the old folks out to the tune of $2,000 in cash, had $500 in the bank to get married on, and had an income of over $150 a month.

"Take my advice and give the folks at home at least half of what you make over and above what it costs you to live, until you are 25, if they need it that long, then think about a family of your own.

"The satisfaction of knowing that you have done your part will repay you a thousand fold for the few copecks which you have to give up toward the support of dad and mother. C. D."

Drop No. 1 for a Time.

This is a letter which rather restores belief in the possibility of filial devotion and loyalty. Here is another by one who looks at the matter from a similar viewpoint:

"By the young man's own admission he had been kept in school until 19 years old, and that in itself represents a great cost in actual money, not to mention years of toil and self denial endured by his parents, that he might obtain an education.

"If 'Young Man' will drop number one's interest and importance for the time being and cheerfully contribute practically all his earnings to the family purse, become unselfish—as he prescribes for the girls—and feel proud of the fact that he is able to help pay off the family debts, he will, in a measure, have repaid his parents for earlier hardship and earned a place among self-respecting citizens, whether his course will be appreciated by other members of his family or not. This has no bearing on his moral obligation. T. S."

A couple of other writers take the same line:

"Yes, 'Young Man,' if you would help at home, mother and father would appreciate your kindness. Parents always do, especially if they are in debt and don't own anything and if they kept you at school until 19 they certainly made some sacrifice. Now that you are in a position that they helped you gain you should feel grateful enough to aid them to pull out of debt. I don't think it is to your credit to have bills hanging over them that possibly were incurred to help keep you in school. To my mind children should help parents if they need it; if not, they should pay board. M. H."

"Great sacrifices should be made to give children a good education and part of the education should be that they are to recompense their parents when through school. The case you gave of the small boy was pitiable, for his mother was illiterate and did not see the necessity of an education for her son. Children should be made to understand if their help is needed, and if so, it should be willingly conceded. They should have an allowance to spur them on and they should pay their board. L. H."

A Mother's View.

These are the most striking of the letters I have received taking the stand that children should do their share towards aiding their parents when the working life begins for the young people. Quite as vigorous on the other side is the letter I give next:

"Here is my answer to Young Man: The opinion of childless people does not count. I am the mother of two boys, who are here because of me. Believing that the soul has lived and will live on forever, I think that perhaps they were happier far in spheres ethereal, but I chose to bring them into this 'vale of tears,' consequently it is my duty to give them all in my power, to slave for them and to make their lives as pleasant and happy as possible.

"They owe me nothing, absolutely nothing. Not even the adopted child owes its parents anything. People, as a rule, do not adopt children because of largeness of heart for suffering humanity, but because their lives are lonely and they think that a child will brighten their homes.

"However, when my boys earn a competence they will have to pay board, not because they owe me for past plum puddings and apple dumplings, but to teach them the value of a five dollar bill—a branch of learning sadly needed by the modern youth. I have thought as I do on the subject for a long time and feel it afresh every time I hear a mother say to an erring child, 'That's the thanks I get for slaving for you!' Personally I love boys so much that I would lie and steal and commit threefold murder for them to save one hair on their heads, and if I knew today they would turn out ungrateful I would go on as I have before and work and pray and love them and slave for them and with my dying breath pray for their happiness, regardless of what they owed me and what they didn't pay! Mrs. L. N. P."

Teaching Her Boys to Be Selfish.

I am sorry for the woman who wrote that letter. She has something yet to learn about the best way to love her children. I do not say this because of her attitude towards the subject under discussion—the question as to whether or not a child should contribute to the support of his parents—but because the mother who makes a slave of herself to her sons and daughters is robbing them of a part of their development, which consists in self-sacrifice and self-denial.

The woman who says she would lie, or steal, or murder to save one hair on the heads of her boys cannot bring them to look at life in the right way, and is likely to send them out in the world with a false sense of their own importance, a lack of perception of morals or justice, and a great selfishness.

Another letter from which I have not space to quote at full length presents still another phase of the topic we are considering. This time it is not from a parent, but from a sister.

"I am a working girl in a poor family where each one must contribute to keep up the home. Last spring my younger brother graduated from the high school and was determined to go away to college, as many of the other boys were planning to do in the fall. As it was principally my wages which had kept him at the high school, we looked to me, as a matter of course, to go right on and see him through college.

"I was anxious to give him his chance, yet I thought it was a good deal for a young woman to continue to sacrifice a good time and nice clothes and all the things belonging to youth when he had already had a much better education than I could ever hope to have. Still I was expecting to go ahead and help him, when one day I mentioned my intention before a large group of girls. One of them said, after a pause: 'Don't do that. I would like to keep every one from doing as I did.'

"She then told me how, by constant daily sacrifice, she had helped give her brother a liberal education, because she loved him and wanted him to have his chance, and by the time he was through college he was about engaged and ready to marry, and felt he had no particular obligation to his family. That was several years ago, and now he has a good salary and doesn't do anything for his people. The girl spoke with great bitterness, and when she had finished three other girls said they had had similar experiences.

He Sulks All the Time.

"This was the first time any of these girls had ever talked like this and I felt heartsick. I could see that the other girls in the office where this talk took place who are using some of their money for themselves are happier and more independent than those who felt they had been unjustly treated and could never hope to get back any of the money they had paid out.

"So I explained to my brother that night that if he expected to go to college he would have to plan some way to help himself, although I would help him through business college. He couldn't believe it at first and when he had to understand he was furious. He said I would spoil his life. Then when fall came and the athletic season opened he was just crazy, for he wanted to get to college in time for football. But I couldn't see why he couldn't go to work as well as myself and I held out.

"He sulks all the time and says I have ruined his life and we can hardly live with him. I wanted him to work his way through college, but he scorned the idea and said you can't do justice to your studies and to athletics and if he couldn't go right he wouldn't go at all.

"So there he is where we are. I am made to feel guilty and selfish, but the girl in the office says she is worse off than ever before, as she has nothing for her work, is growing older, and, worst of all, is disillusioned. E. A. B."

Is the matter settled to the satisfaction of the Cornerites? There is enough variety of opinion to give a fair choice as to which is the right and wise course to follow.

For three months Dad sent me three dollars each pay day.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

"I HAVE six children, four in school and the two youngest, aged 4 and 2, at home. Our home is considered a happy one and I'm often asked how I manage to have the children obey so perfectly and without question, and why they get along together without fussing, and why it is that I can have so much company and the children never give any trouble when they are told to wait at meal times, etc.

"I don't want you to think I am bringing up a horde of angels, for they are all healthy, normal children. But I want to ask you first if you think our training will hold good when they are men and women and if there is a chance of their obedience being from fear.

"I must admit that my husband and I are old fashioned. We believe that 'if we spare the rod we spoil the child, and that a child left to itself will bring its parents to shame, and lots more in that line. I am trusting that if we train them up in the way they should go, when they are old they will not depart from it. If my husband and I differ about a point of discipline we never let the children know that we differ and they never appeal from one parent to the other. Will you tell me what you think the outcome will be?

"I think it is a great pity that as a rule children are so bad. They seem to do the disobeying instead of the parents. Of course there are still exceptions, but I can't blame all the badness on the children, for they are largely what their parents make them. It seems a great pity for children to be allowed to grow up with such shocking disrespect for their elders and with bad manners generally. I believe that it is just as true that a child has a right to be well raised as to be well born, and we hear so much of the latter just now.

"My children and I are congenial. I give them good magazines and books and discuss all their little trials at school and outside with them. Nothing is too mysterious or too sacred for us to talk of together in reverence and I strive never to break a promise, whether it is for confectionery or for a punishment. I never whip one of them if I am angry or out of humor myself and there are many times when I would rather have it put on me than on the child. R. S. H."

I printed a good deal of your letter and I only wish I had space to put it all in. You ought to know, if you have followed our corner closely, that I hold firm ideas as to the necessity of teaching children absolute obedience and that I believe that when you train up a child in the way he should go, he is practically sure not to depart from it when he is older.

My theory is that children recognize and appreciate justice in a punishment and that if you are as strict in keeping your promise in benefits as you are in penalties they will have a respect and love for you that will last their lives through.

As I heard a mother say once, "I am strict in enforcing obedience with my children, I punish them severely when they deserve it, but all the time I just love them to death and they know it!" Mingle tenderness with your justice and they will believe in you.

Your account of the congeniality existing between your children and yourself is a pretty sure evidence that you are following a wise course with them. If more parents did the same there would be less trouble with unruly and disobedient youngsters.

Nice Things for Lunch Basket.

"I wish you would suggest some nice things to pack into a basket for lunch. It is for a basket lunch party, where the baskets are to be auctioned off.

"MME. X."

I have taken part in such basket lunches as these and know how attractive they can be made. At the church party where the first I shared took place each basket was packed for two, and they contained a variety of dainty dishes—chicken salad, lobster salad, salmon salad, tomate, and celery salad, jellied chicken or meat, tiny chicken pies, sandwiches, baked custards, jellies, blanc manges, cakes of all sorts, candies, and other delicacies which could be made in advance and did not have to be kept hot.

Under the cover of each basket was a knot of ribbon, and the mate to this was worn by the girl who packed the basket. The man who bought it sought her out, and the two ate their supper together. If any of our readers have further suggestions to make for such baskets I would be glad to get them.

Southern Stuffing.

"In reply to the request for cornmeal stuffing for roast turkey I send mine, which is considered fine by those who have used it. The secret of success lies in measuring the soda just to suit the acid in the milk. I never put sage in turkey dressing, for I think it spoils the flavor of the turkey.

"Crumble up fine equal quantities of light cornbread and light rich biscuit; add one cup chopped onion and one of chopped celery, black pepper, and salt to taste. Mix the dressing moist with the liquor in which were boiled the giblets—the neck, liver, gizzard, and surplus fat—making it into a soft dough. Stuff turkey with this and bake to a good brown; a quart of oysters may be added to the stuffing or a little butter, if this is needed.

"To make the cornbread for stuffing take one quart cornmeal, two cups buttermilk, one scant teaspoon soda, three eggs, half cup lard, one teaspoon baking powder, salt to taste. Bake in a loaf, like a cake, for about forty-five minutes.

"Biscuit for stuffing takes one quart flour, one cup buttermilk, one level teaspoon soda, lard the size of an egg, one teaspoon baking powder, salt at discretion.

Although I called a halt a while ago on recipes for cornmeal stuffing I am breaking my resolution in favor of this direction. It comes from Alabama and is therefore essentially southern; it makes no mention of parboiling the turkey, and in other respects differs from any other recipe which has appeared for this dressing. It ought to make uncommonly good eating, and I am glad to make room for it.

Way to Freshen Berries.

"Now that the berry season is not far ahead, I would like to tell you how I freshen red raspberries; any berries may be treated in the same way. Look them over and wash them, put them in a glass fruit jar and screw down top, then set the jar next to the ice for some hours before using, and note the change. I have kept them perfectly twenty-four hours.

"I wish every one having to wear a truss for rupture might know how my husband was cured. I took two rounds of silk a little larger than the pad on the truss, sewing them together by stitching a small circle in the center; opening the edges, I laid a roll of cotton between them and overcast the edges, thus forming a ring, and sewed it fast to the pad. I did this because the hard pad, pressing directly upon the rupture, chafed it and caused more or less trouble, and I wished to make my John a little more comfortable.

"After wearing it for some time the rupture seemed to be lessening in size and finally disappeared. He began leaving off the truss by degrees, at first on days when he could be at home, and at last stopped wearing it altogether. He has not worn it for over a year now, with no sign of the trouble reappearing. I hope I have made this clear, as I feel sure it will help others as it has us. A NEWCOMER."

Thank you very much for the suggestion as to the berries and for the account of how to make the pad. You have certainly won your place in the Corner, even as a newcomer, and I shall hope to hear from you again soon and often. You undoubtedly possess the helpful spirit which marks our Cornerites.

"Please tell me if there is any way to use sandwiches that are left in a lunch basket. My husband and children take their lunch every day, the children to school and my husband to work, and some days they leave almost all of their sandwiches uneaten. So far I have not been able to get them used up, except by feeding them to the chickens, and that is a waste. N. B. H."

Have you ever tried toasting them or frying them in a little hot butter and serving them as a sort of a side dish at supper or breakfast? Or you may take the filling from them and add it to a mince or hash, and toast or fry the bread to put under stews or minces. If you wrap the sandwiches in waxed paper they will not dry out so much and might be used even the day after they are made, unless the filling is too moist. Can any other housekeepers offer suggestions for disposing of these leftovers? I agree with the correspondent in thinking it waste of time and material to make sandwiches and then feed them to the poultry.

Way to Care for Recipes.

"I am making my first bow to the corner asking for a reprint of a recipe that I cut out and tried and liked. I was saving it for a special occasion when the children surprised me with a cleanup and in some way lost the clipping. I am in hopes that the correspondent who sent it the first time will recognize it from the description and send it in again. It was caramel cake which she said was not like deville' food in construction or in taste, though it contained a cooked portion, like that cake. The filling or frosting was pulverized sugar and lemon juice. We liked it better than devile' cake. I will send a recipe which I have not seen elsewhere.

I hope the friend who supplied the caramel cake directions in the first place may send another copy of it or that some one who has preserved the paper with the recipe may be willing to give it to L. M. M. I would like to emphasize the desirability of preserving all recipes in some other way than by tucking the paper containing them into a drawer or a shelf of the bookcase. The best method that has come my way recently is the card system, by which recipes are pasted on cards ranged in a box, like index cards, and placed alphabetically, so that it is only a moment's work to find the recipe sought for. Of course a scrap book is good, as is a manuscript recipe book or a loose leaved book to which you can add recipes as you please, but to my mind none is as good and convenient and quick as the card to which you can attach a recipe with a touch of your paste brush and have it safe and at your command thereafter. If any of the cornerites has a better method than this I would like to hear of it and print it for the benefit of us all. The recipe L. M. M. is good enough to send appears in another section.

Addition to Bran Diet.

"I am a newcomer and would like to add my mite for the benefit of the "bran devotees." It is a recipe of my own for bran pancakes:

"One cup of bran, one cup of flour, two heaping teaspoons baking powder, one pint of milk, two eggs, half teaspoon salt. Mix dry ingredients thoroughly, beat yolks and whites separately, and fold in the beaten whites last. This is enough to serve three robust appetites or four slim ones, and is pronounced good to eat. We use a soapstone griddle. MRS. G. A. M."

In these days of much dieting when bran bread, bran biscuit, bran muffins, and the like are constantly recommended by physicians, it is a boon to find a good method by which one's quota of bran may be made palatable.

Rich and Wholesome Cookies.

"About twenty years ago a Jewish woman gave me a recipe for what she called 'confinement cookies,' which I have since then lost. I would like much to make some now, but cannot remember all of the ingredients. The cookies are rich and wholesome and are good for any one that is ill or convalescent. All I can remember about making them is that hard boiled eggs, grated, and a glass of good brandy are used in the making, and since these are unusual cookies I write to you hoping some reader may know what I mean and be so kind as to enlighten me. MRS. E. K."

These cookies are entirely unknown to me, and I shall await the answer to Mrs. E. K.'s query with much interest and curiosity. The information she wishes is pretty sure to come, for we have many Hebrews among our readers and some one of them is likely to see this request and reply to it.

The Narrowest of the Narrow Skirts Prevail in Paris

says MARY BUEL

With Drawings from Exclusive Paris Photographs By Les F Wilson

"It Is in the Small Details That Most That Is New in the Present Fashions Is to Be Found. Tunic Effects Are Still Preserved. The Vogue of the Short Jacket Is Established. A Noticeable Feature Is the Absence of the Slit-Up Skirt."

Gown in cashmere de soie in a burnt orange shade. The underskirt is excessively narrow, but it opens in front, one side lapping over on to the other so that it is not difficult to walk in it. The overskirt is laid in plaits about the waist, those in front and at the sides being larger than in the back. This like the underskirt laps well over and it is faced in bias black satin. The bodice shows one side of surplice shape and the other having an enormous rever of white satin, edged in black satin.

There is a broad cape shaped collar of the material which goes across the back and partly covers the shoulders and this, like the overskirt, is bordered with a fold of black satin. The sleeves are put in just below the armsize, and are close, fastening on the inner side, from the wrist to the elbow. The pointed cuffs are of satin and the guimpe is of white tulle finely tucked. The collar is also of tulle with a band of black satin at the top. The folded belt is of black satin, the ornament in front being of small beads and silk tassels, all in vivid colorings. Model from Canet.

Gown of white chiffon over silk. The skirt is trimmed with two broad plaitings of the chiffon, finely plaited, and two flounces of net embroidered in white silk. The simple bodice is gathered into the belt and again into the round neck, and there is a flounce of embroidery at the top of the belt and also at the lower edge. The sleeves are entirely of the embroidered net. About the neck and on the edge of the sleeves are garlands of small flowers. These are in bright colors. The belt is of old blue satin. Model from Brandt.

Gown of white chiffon over Liberty satin of the same color. The skirt rounds up slightly in the center of the front, the underskirt of chiffon. The bodice is of pompadour silk muslin, the colors being varied, but soft. It is made with much fullness, and in the back the skirt part is extremely long. Here at the bottom it is gathered up into a double bow, with ends that fall half way down the skirt. The upper portion of the bodice is a soft surplice and it is combined with white chiffon and filmy lace. The pointed neck shows a knife plaiting of tulle. Model from Canet.

PARIS. — [Special Correspondence.] — The great establishments have been holding back their fashions this spring and have only just begun to put forward their most attractive novelties. They have kept their soft, filmy chiffons, their newest embroidered materials, their most stunning flowered or brocaded silks until now and these are shown made up into frocks that are so pretty that one longs to buy each and every one of them. It is a decidedly new departure from the usual custom and while it must be trying to those who have come to buy and have gone, to those who are here month in and month out it is a joy and delight.

I noticed that gowns, especially those for afternoon and evening wear, still presented tunic effects and showed long clinging lines rather than an elaboration of drapery. Also another point noticed was the absence of the slit up skirt. The tunics seen were frequently double, one slightly longer than the other, and they were always of the most supple fabrics and as thin and transparent as they could be made. Some were of lace falling over skirts of chiffon, lightly embroidered, the lace itself being also veiled in chiffon or silk musin. Two and frequently three colors were employed in a costume, all exquisitely blended, but equally showing sharp contrasts. There were two or three lovely frocks in black and white, a combination fashion that the best dressed American women invariably affect. These were of satin or chiffon, the note of black being introduced in the form of Chantilly lace, net, or jet. Without a close inspection of these it is difficult to justly describe them, but the general impression given was ceiling skirts, draped just sufficiently to take away from a plain effect, with bodices made in tunic shape combined of lace and transparent muslin, or else a dainty little bolero finished with plaitings of chiffon and showing ornaments of jet.

It is definitely settled that, for this season at least, the silhouette of the fashionable woman will not change and that when properly garbed she will continue to present the smallest possible circumference from the edge of her skirt to the collar of her bodice. The mode has changed, but it has not enlarged, and unless all signs fail it will be many months before it will. There is nothing to be seen but the narrowest of the narrow skirts, some draped, others provided with overskirts, which may also be draped, or they may hang with some fullness at the waist, and with only a suggestion of drapery, after the idea given in one of today's sketches.

The ultra fashionable are having their tailored skirts draped, some most elaborately, but there are quite as many perfectly plain cloth skirts to be seen now as when the very narrow skirts were first introduced. The important part to be considered in a street skirt is that the drapery, if there be any, shall not interfere with the basque part of the coat, for this, as heretofore, must fit closely and fall without wrinkle or crease over the hips. As a rule the drapery is set rather low, at the knees, or just below, this depending much upon the materials used. All heavy fabrics and even silks show a low style of draping, but the softer stuffs—chiffons, crêpes, and voiles—may be draped at the knee or above, as one fancies, or is becoming.

The vogue of the short jacket is established and there is the greatest variety in the cut and form of this season's coats. The bolero, short in front and long behind, is a decided favorite and promises to be more used than any other style, for all sorts of summer garments, silks, satins, and even vellings. Many of these short fronted boleros have some fullness on either side of the front, that is put into a loose belt and is then drawn up into the arm's eyes, giving a bias effect to the jacket, which is very becoming to the figure. The waist, which appears beneath the coat in front, is left free, for the front of the outer garment must be large enough to stand away, and this leaves ample room for whatever may be used in the way of a belt or girdle.

Sleeves of jackets and coats display nearly as much variety as do those of gowns. They are long or short, tight or loose, as the case may be, and some even show elaborate trimming, an innovation in the matter of coat sleeves.

While street coats are growing shorter those intended for evening are longer, some trailing on the ground far beyond the gown. They are being made of charming materials, flowered, broche, and stuffs into which are threaded silver and gold lines, but for purposes of utility the satin cloak is the favorite and is being brought out in some wonderfully good new models.

One of these seen lately was of geranium red and was cut with a deep yoke shaped upper part, this and the sleeves being in one piece. In the back the satin was box plaited onto this yoke, the plaits standing up six or eight inches. The back itself trained off onto the ground, but was rounded up toward the fronts and the right side was then draped over onto the left, where it was caught under a huge buckle made of the satin. The sleeves matched the back of the cloak, for there were cuffs that extended to the elbows, these being of the material, laid in folds, which at the back stood away from the sleeve. There was no collar, for most of these shaped garments are intended to be worn with a fur stole, or later with ruches of feathers or marabou.

It is in small details that most that is new in the present fashions is to be found and of these there are a crowd, all unimportant, but making the agreeable whole. There are some smart new belts, these, by the way, being a necessary feature in most of the costumes seen. Most consist of narrow folded lengths of satin, with sash ends falling either in the back or at one side. It is on these that the ingenuity of the dressmaker is centered, for they are treated in as many different ways almost as there are sashes. Some are very narrow at the top, with ends that slope out widely, these being embroidered in coarse wools and finished with long fringes of the same. Others are straight and short and have for a finish a twelve inch fringe of wooden beads of varying sizes and in most gorgeous colorings. On dark frocks these bizarre tints have a happy effect, especially when a little touch of whatever is the prevailing color is to be found in the bodice.

It is being predicted by the knowing ones that the vogue of the small hat is to be short lived, and of all reasons that it is too popular. Personally, I do not think so, for they have been found to be too useful, too chic, and above all too becoming not to endure at least for a season. The latest shape in these little affairs is a sort of idealized sailor, a hat with a moderately low crown and a perfectly straight brim, which is sometimes narrow and again fairly wide. With these shapes flowers have suddenly come into favor, for nothing trims them so charmingly as do any of the beautiful clusters or wreaths that are now being shown. I have seen several models that are adorable for the first days of warm sunshine and that are particularly smart for wearing with plain tailor gowns. Both were in fine black straw, with low crowns, one showing a narrow brim, the other one that was wide. On the former at the tip edge of the brim was a wreath of tiny flowers in bright colors. These were not fastened on the brim but on the edge, and so stood away from the hat. The only other trimming was a band of fairly broad velvet ribbon of a rattler blue shade, and this was passed about the crown and tied in a stiff flat bow directly in the center of the back.

The other broad brimmed hat showed the crown encircled with a ruche of tulle, standing nearly to the top, and of a soft brown shade. At the lower edge of the ruche was a heavy wreath of flowers, in shades of red, soft blue, and yellow, with plenty of foliage, and the ends of this wreath at the back stood away out from the hat, possibly eight or nine inches. These clusters or wreaths of flowers that stand out in the back are a smart way of trimming these small hats, the flowers being wired so they may be kept in place. The brightest colors are used, although the hats themselves are generally dark, and not in colored straws as were seen last season. Black and brown are the two favorite colors, the latter being nearly as much seen as the former. A soft shade is used and it forms a charming background for every kind of blossom and of every sort of bright color.

There are odd combinations used for hat trimmings, as well as for gowns, such as high standing ostrich feathers caught under clusters of tiny silk flowers, bead ornaments from which spring fancy aigrettes and embroidered motives used in conjunction with flowers of the same color and design. Feathers and flowers are the most popular and the combination is really much prettier than one would think. A dark brown hat is trimmed at the back with a tall ostrich feather of a soft colonial yellow. The little cluster of flowers which hold the feather in place are cerise, pale blue, and purple, and a second cluster is seen on the brim, possibly in front.

Another new fashion in hat trimming and one that is being much employed is the edging of the brims of hats with bias bands of tulle. This may be only wide enough to show a little finish, or it may be from three to four inches, or as wide as the tulle can be used. Black and brown is what one usually sees, although I have seen hats with edges of purple, yellow, or blue. Brown is the prettiest, however, and it is surprising how flattering to the face this delicate little edge can be. The other trimming is put on quite independently of this and may be flowers, feathers, or paradise tails, as the case may be.

With all the riot of color on the hats veils have been found to be too plain and so one sees now these embroidered in gay flowers, or else dotted in some bright color. The latter are quite pretty, for the dots are of chenille put on the floral designs over lovely backgrounds of fine mesh. Occasionally this besides being dotted with a color is also patterned over in squares or larger dots. The bunches of flowers are some of them worked in wools that are very fine, but the colors are lovely and the little clusters are just as beautifully arranged as are any of the pompadour silks or cotton crêpes. The background is black or brown, but I have also seen some in onion color with flowers worked in the most vivid shades of wool, which were lovely to look at, and which it is to be hoped are attractive over the face.

Heroes of South Will See Shafts Raised to Comrades

Group of Monuments and Historic Points of Interest on Chattanooga's Battlefield Made Glorious by the World's Greatest War---Here Are Erected Lasting Tributes in Marble and Bronze by a Nation to Its Heroic Soldiery.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 3.—Of comparatively recent years more or less friendly rivalry has existed between the various writers who have turned their attention to the battlefields of Chickamauga and Gettysburg, the rivalry being as to the relative importance of each battle, the percentage of loss of each and the number of memorials erected on those fields of glory. It is not surprising, therefore, that this rivalry has shown itself, fifty years after the battles, clothed in new garments of speech, but containing the same arguments.

July 4 there is to be a reunion on the field of Gettisburg of both blue and gray, the government bearing the expense of all veterans engaged in the battle and desire to attend the reunion. The Confederate veterans hold their reunion at Chattanooga, March 27-29, inclusive, this being the semicentennial year of the great battles fought in and around the Mountain City.

Champions of Gettysburg are busy with their pens, arguing that high tide of battle was reached on that historical field and claiming more monuments and markers for Gettysburg than any other battlefield in the world.

All of this is good, because it creates interest in fields of glory and immortalizes American valor. Chattanooga would not rob Gettysburg of the least of its glory. There was enough there for all concerned, but Chattanooga does not concede that Gettysburg was a harder fought battle than Chickamauga, or that the field of Gettysburg contains a greater number of monuments, historical tablets, markers and other memorials than the battlefields around this city.

President Lincoln in his memorable speech at Gettysburg, set aside that field to all intents and purposes, for special care of the government. Millions have been poured out by the national government and state governments for the adornment of the field with monuments and other memorials. Perhaps more money has been spent at Gettysburg, but Chattanooga beats Gettysburg in both number of memorials and per cent of casualties in battle.

HEAVY CASUALTY.

The per cent of casualties at Gettysburg was 26; at Chickamauga it was 33. Gettysburg, according to official figures, has, all told, about 1,600 memorials on her field. The official figures of the Chattanooga-Chickamauga national park commission, published herewith, show that this field has more than 2,000 memorials. Gettysburg beats Chattanooga in costly monuments, but not much. This field has monuments to the number of a little under 300. Gettysburg has 460. Counting everything on both fields that can be included under the head of "memorials," Chattanooga is about 400 ahead of Gettysburg.

CHICKAMAUGA AND GETTYSBURG.

The roar of battle at Gettysburg was heard around the world. The roar at Chickamauga shook the earth. Daring and bravery reached high tide at Gettysburg with Pickett's immortal charge, but high mark for dogged fighting and casualties in war was set at Chickamauga. War historians agree that, for one day's fighting, the per cent of casualties at Sharpsburg or Antietam is the largest in the history of wars, and that for two days' fighting Chickamauga has that distinction. The late General John B. Gordon, beloved Georgian, distinguished in peace and in war, wrote as follows of Chickamauga:

"An American battle that surpassed in its ratio of carnage the bloodiest conflicts in history outside of this country ought to be better understood by the American people. Sharpsburg, or Antietam, I believe, had a larger proportion of killed and wounded than any other single day's battle of our war, and that means larger than any in the world's wars. Chickamauga, however, in its two days of heavy fighting brought the ratio of losses to the high water mark. Judged by percentage in killed and wounded, Chickamauga nearly doubled the sanguinary records of Marengo and Austerlitz was two and one-half times heavier than sustained by the duke of Marborough at Malplaquet; more than double that suffered by the army under Henry of Navarre in the terrific slaughter at Coutras; nearly three times as heavy as the percentage of loss at Solferino and Magenta; five times greater than that of Napoleon at Wagram, and about ten times as heavy as that of Marshal Saxe at bloody Racoux. Or, if we take the average percentage of loss in a number of the world's great battles—Waterloo, Waagram, Valmy, Magenta, Solferino, Zurich and Lodi—we shall find by comparison that Chickamauga's record of blood surpassed them nearly three for one."

General Gordon is dead and gone; his eloquent lips no longer sing the praises of the Confederat soldier; his pen has ceased to combat prejudice, but his eloquent description of the great battle of Chickamauga on the soil of his own beloved state, will live as long as people take an interest in good literature and entertain respect for American valor. It is possible that General Gordon was influenced somewhat by early associations in his estimate of Chickamauga. His father's home was not far from this field, and as a boy he fished in Chickamauga river, hunted in the woods that covered the plain, and passed back and forth with his father through the now historic community. However, no contemporary writer on war topics during General Gordon's lifetime successfully disputed any statement he made concerning that great battle. He passed to his reward firm in the belief that among the great battles of history Chickamauga was entitled to first place in point of deadly carnage, percentage of loss and heroic courage on the part of the forces eng ged in it.

THE FIELD TODAY.

Chickamauga today has that quiet which belongs to all great battlefields. The visitor to the historic field or the casual passerby is impressed with the improvements that have been made. Hundreds of memorials dot the field and engage the attention of the thoughtful. Snodgrass hill, where General George H. Thomas checked in the Federal army what at one time was a disgraceful rout and made himself "the Rock of Chickamauga" in history, is covered with monuments and other memorials. One feels that he treads upon hallowed ground at this spot. If the visitor be a dreamer he hears the roar of battle and witnesses the clash of the contending legions as they cheerfully pay the last measure of heroic devotion with their lives. It is a melancholy thing to contemplate—brave men giving freely their lives that valor may be chiseled into marble years later.

These monuments, historical tablets, markers and observation towers on the battlefields of Chattanooga, and especially on the field of Chjcamauga, outnumber the memorials on any battlefield in the world, if the decision of men who have made the topic a special study is based on fact. They agree that the United States leads all countries in the matter of memorializing battlefields. That is to say, in erecting monuments, tablets and markers on its battlefields the American republic spends more money than any other nation on earth And if the data secured through official channels concerning Gettysburg and Chattanooga is to be relied oh as ending the argument, then Chattanooga leads the world in this homage to valor and courage.

Col. John P. Nicholson, chairman of the Gettysburg National Park commission, has furnished some newspaper writers recently with data covering the memorials at Gettysburg. Various totals are deducted from these data, but none are higher than 1,700 and none lower than 1,500. The same kind of data supplied to newspaper writers during the present month by the secretary of the Chicamagua-Chattanooga National Park commission and by Capt. J. P. Smartt, historian of the park, place the total number of memorials on the Chattanooga includes nothing in the national cemetery.

THE COMING REUNION.

The visitors to the Confederate reunion here on May 27-29 will have a splendid opportunity to view these fields and enjoy the associations that surround all great battlefields. These fields have been reclaimed and beautified against odds that at times seemed insurmountable. But Confederate and federal united in the work and the results are written in the hundreds of handsome monuments, historical tablets, markers and observation towers that beautify mountain, ridges and valleys and stir patriotism in every soul.

The south has a greater interest in Chattanooga's battlefields than in all others combined. If the section of the United States that lies south of the Ohio river ever has a field where coming generations may study American valor with object lessons before them, it must be at Chattanooga. The heroic exploits of federal and Confederates are being preserved here in imperishable marble and bronze, and the record must always be elevating to generations yet unborn. The national government and the governments of the states of the Union, now that sectionalism has run its course and disappeared forever, are uniting their wealth and brain to beautify these fields. As the years pass, as generations come and go, these fields with their monuments and historical tablets will contribute much to the value and glory of the American nation.

STATE MONUMENTS, MARKERS, TABLETS AND BATTERIES.
(Compiled by Colonel Baxter Smith, Assistant Secretary Chattanooga-Chickamauga National Park Commission.)

The following table shows the number of memorial monuments and markers of marble, granite and bronze, erected in the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National park.

Guns mounted on carriages in battery in Chickamauga park:

44 Union batteries	109 guns
20 Confederate batteries	96 guns
In Chattanooga, Lookout mountain, Missionary ridge and Orchard knob:
10 Union batteries	20 guns
10 Confederate batteries	20 guns
Total	245 guns
Bronze historical tablets, Chattanooga	61
Army and corps headquarters shell monuments	14

White Cannibalism

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

PARIS, May 3.—A story of cannibalism recalling the famous murder trial, R. V. Dudley, in which wrecked sailors were indicted for killing and eating a ship's boy, was related in the Press the other day.

Four convicts, named Mouillard, Bachereau, Fossey and Michevel, arranged to escape from Devil's Island, the penal colony in French Guiana. They left one night, and Bachereau promised to lead them to a place where they would be able to dig for gold and make enough to live on till they could escape from the colony altogether.

They left with a sword apiece, some loaves of bread, and some preserved vegetables in tins. Fossey acted as guide, saying that he knew the way to the River Mana, where gold was plentiful. After a six day's march, Fossey admitted that he had lost his way. The four men wandered about aimlessly for eight days more, living on roots. Starvation overtook them.

Macheval broke down, and his three companions killed and ate him. By means of stealing a boat the survivors got to Mana, where they were able to steal a larger boat. They were wrecked at the mouth of the Maroni, and taken back to prison at St. Laurent.

The three men have confessed to eating their companion, and are to be tried for his murder.

End of Cafe Anglais

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

PARIS, May 3.—The destruction of the Cafe Anglais, whose white, smiling face has shone upon the Boulevard des Italiens a hundred years, means something more than the death of a famous hostelry. It closes an amiable chapter in the history of Paris and marks a sad change in the manners of Europe.

No cafe can boast a more glorious array of golden associations than this. It owed its name and its early renown to the foreigners who flocked into Paris after the battle of Waterloo. A new spirit of gaiety breathed in the capital. A king once more sat upon the throne of France. The ancient families recovered the place from which the parvenus of Napoleon's creation had ousted them. And nobody was more warmly received in Paris than those whom Beranger called "our friends the enemy." The Cafe Anglais was among the first of the restaurants ready to receive this joyous band of pilgrims. Captain Gronow dined there the day of his entrance into Paris, encountered several of his brother officers, and marveled rather at the price than at the fare. He found the wine "sour," a reproach, I am sure, to his British taste than to the cellars of the cafe, and he paid for his entertainment a poor two francs, a modest price which will surprise those who knew the restaurant in recent years.

He Has Served as Mayor Of LaGrange for 11 Years And Is Still in the Ring

Hon. J. D. Edmundson, Youngest Old Man in Town, Is Full of Progressive Ideas for His City

MAYOR J. D. EDMONDSON.

LAGRANGE, Ga., May 3.—Hr. J. D. Edmondson, father-in-law of Judge James B. Ridley, of Atlanta, has again been named chief executive, after having served the city of LaGrange for eleven years as its honored and esteemed mayor.

Mr. Edmundson is an old Confederate veteran, having lost his arm in a hot conflict in Virginia. He was in Gordon's brigade and distinguished himself during the entire progress of the war for his bravery and devotion to duty.

Though his hair is snowy white his step is as quick and his eye as full of fire, as in the days when he marched with his brigade through the mountains of old Virginia.

In a peculiar way he has been instrumental in uniting the younger and older elements of LaGrange along progressive lines. He is in fact, one of the most progressive leaders of the town, and believes in modern methods along every line.

In discussing city affairs and progress his friends love to draw him out and hear him refer to some of the citizens of the town as "these old folks who can't see the necessity for progressive moves," though many of them are younger in years than himself.

He is the youngest old man in LaGrange, and in heart he is younger than a great many men 30 or 40 years his junior.

Discussing his race and the progress of LaGrange he says:

"It looks like the boys were all with me again this year, and I am grateful to them for their support, and trust and believe that we are going to have a wonderful year of progress in LaGrange.

Dutch Salad

Skin and bone a herring and cut into small pieces; wash and bone eight or ten anchovies and divide them into eight pieces each. Take an equal quantity each of cold fowl and German sausage and cut into small square pieces. Chop in equal quantities of pickled gherkins and beet root and cut in rather large pieces twice the quantity of cold boiled potatoes. Mix all the ingredients except the anchovies together with one or two hard boiled eggs and about two tablespoonfuls of two parts of olive oil and one part tarragon vinegar and mix smoothly with a small quantity of French mustard, seasoning with white pepper. Mix in the anchovies and pour over the salad, serving immediately.

WIFE OF EX-GOV. M'MILLIN TAKES IMPORTANT PART IN PAGEANT

Beautiful Southern Woman Will Be Leader of Cast of Eight Hundred Young Men and Women in Production of Open Air Play

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 3.—Mrs. Benton McMillin, wife of ex-Governor McMillin, of Tennessee, is to take the leading part in the Greek pageant to be given by the city of Nashville from May 5 to 8. She will be ably supported by a great cast of 800 of Nashville's most beautiful and talented young men and women. Six performances of the wonderful pageant will be given at a cost of over $18,000 guaranteed by the business men of the city.

The pageant play is a Greek drama, "The Fire Regained," written especially for the occasion by Mr. Sidney Hirsch, a rising young playwright of the city. Nashville has the only correct reproduction of the Parthenon to be found in the world today. Consequently it possesses a setting for a pageant of this kind equalled by no other city in the entire country.

GIVE PLAY IN OPEN.

The 800 draped and sandaled youths and maidens will present the play on a wide lawn of the Centennial park with this stately temple rising behind as the leading feature of the background. With them will be seen gallant chariot horses, lines of sacred bulls garlanded for the temple rites, 300 sheep grazing on the wide plain and 1,500 pigeons carried by the priestess of the temple and loosened to fly away over the heads of the spectators. It will be an artistic and spectacular performance never before equaled in the history of the south.

Mrs. McMillin's appearance in the leading role of this pageant is of particular interest at this time. The new administration favorably considers appointing her husband governor of the Philippine Islands, so in all probability this beautiful southerner will soon be the official American woman of America's eastern possessions.

Claims He Planned Canal And Uncle Sam Swiped It, Not Giving Him Credit

Charles A. Snider, of Columbus, Declares That Great Panama Water Way Was Worked Out by His Idea

CHAS. A. SNIDER.

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 3.—That he originated plans for the construction of the Panama canal, and that the United States government "swiped" them from him without compensation or even giving him any credit, is the contention of Charles A. Snider, well-known citizen of Columbus, who claims to have gone to Panama, Port Limon and other points and made careful investigations, mapping out all details early in 1900, and that he also originated the idea of the construction of a canal to connect the Chattahoochee river with St. Andrews bay, thus opening up an all-water outlet from this city to foreign ports.

Mr. Snider states that he will take no action in regard to procuring compensation from the government at this time, but that he does feel that he is entitled to some credit for his part in the great development, which, he declares, would never have been made possible had he not planned and originated the scheme.

SNIDER'S STORY.

Here is Mr. Snider's remarkable story:

"The great Panama canal is soon to be opened to traffic of the world, and the big canal connecting the lower rivers with St. Andrews and deep water, also, both of which mean much for the commercial development of the country, especially the south, and government engineers will come in, doubtless, for all the praise, when, as a matter of fact, the country is indebted to me for these two gigantic developments, which were made possible by my own efforts.

"As is well known, the French and the English engineers had long since given up the idea of constructing the Panama canal on the Suez canal, owing to the fact that they couldn't devise a means of controlling the mad waters of the Chagres river, which is known to be quite treacherous. These engineers abandoned all hopes of building a canal, as did also the engineers of the United States, early in 1900.

"In the year 1903, after months of careful study, I mapped out a plan for the construction of a canal at Port Limon, with the idea of putting in locks, etc., suggesting that engineers tunnel through the side of the mountain at that place. My plans called for the using of water for driving the larger water-driven pumps to give power for operating locks, furnishing lights, etc.

"Complete in every detail, I sent my plans to a congressman at Washington, with the request that he go over them with President Roosevelt. I never heard from them, but today the government is following the plan I submitted almost to a letter, the only change being in the location of the canal and the utilizing of water in generating electricity to operate ships by cars, which will require fourteen hours to pass through the canal, while my plan called for the operation of the vessels by their own power, which would enable them to run through the canal in four or five hours' time. I have asked for no credit. The government has offered me none.

"The canal would have been a dead issue had it not been for the light which my own plans threw on the subject. No engineer can deny this fact.

AT LEAST CREDIT.

"While I shall take no action in the matter at this late day, I think I am really entitled to due credit for my part in the two great enterprises, which will mean so much for the country. At any rate, it affords me much pleasure to know that I have been instrumental in bringing about these great developments, which will eventually bring the south into her own."

SCIENTISTS BELIEVE SOLUTION OF PROBLEM OF PELLAGRA IS NEAR

Members of the Thompson-McFadden Commission Will Make Extensive Investigation at Meetings to Be Held in Spartanburg

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

SUARTANBURG, S. C., April 26.—Scientists, composing the Thompson-McFadden Pellagra commission are being joined in Spartanburg every two or three days by new arrivals, and all of the researchers will not be here until June. They say that no such intensive investigation has ever been made of any other disease as is now being made of pellagra here, but that scarcely any disease has proven more baffling or so steadfastly resisted inquiry. Information obtained, however, in the course of the commission's exhaustive researches here last summer and laboratory experiments in New York has led to the hope that a solution of the problem is near at hand.

An intestinal organism found in pellagrins by Dr. Ward J. MacNeal is a possible clue which the scientists are following closely. They are proceeding with extreme caution, however, lest they reach a conclusion which subsequent discoveries would prove unwarranted.

Nothing which might in the least remotely bear on pellagra is deemed unworthy of investigation, and eminent specialists are assigned to each particular line of inquiry.

EMINENT EXPERTS.

Dr. J. F. Siler, United States army, and Dr. Philip E. Garrison, United States navy, are making an intensive study of the epidemiology of pellagra—the disease as it occurs among the people—actually visiting the homes of pellagrins and inquiring into the diet, environment, age, life history, occupation, family and household relationships.

In connection with this field work a laboratory has been established here for bacteriological, serological and chemical experiments. Dr. Paul Schule, of the New York Post-Graduate School of Medicine, is in charge, and has as assistants F. D. Letts, of the University of Toronto, and Samuel Goldin.

Dr. MacNeal, whose headquarters are in New York, is in general charge of the bacteriological researches. He is probably the most eminent authority on intestinal bacteria in the country.

A. H. Jennings and H. Pomeroy, entomologists of the United States department of agriculture, are making an exhaustive study of the theory that insects have something to do with pellagra. They are also studying domestic animals and their possible relation to pellagra through their parasites which carry disease.

Dr. Oliver S Hillman is confining his investigations to the cellular contents of the blood of pellagrins—the number of corpuscles, their shape and size.

Dr. H. Douglas Singer, of the Illinois State Psychopathic institute, and Dr. Max Sclapp, of New York, are studying pathological material taken from the bodies of pellagrins.

Dr. V. C. Myers and Dr. M. S Fine are studying the metabolism of pellagrins—their digestion and assimilation of food and the breaking down of their tissue into waste products.

The biological, pathological and chemical studies are being made under the supervision of Dr. Jonathan Wright, director of laboratories of the New York Post-Graduate School of Medicine.

Dr Elizabeth B. Muncey, of the eugenics record office, Cold Spring Harbor, L. L, will arrive here shortly to investigate the possible influence of heredity on pellagra. She is an authority on the influence of heredity in disease.

FUNDS FOR PROBE.

Funds for the investigation are being donated by Colonel Robert M. Thompson, of New York, and J. H. McFadden, of Philadelphia, wealthy philanthropists, who were interested in the subject by Dr. George N. Miller, formerly president of the New York Post-Graduate School of Medicine.

The county commissioners will provide at their next meeting for the erection of a pellagra hospital with an appropriation authorized by the legislature and supplemented by the contributions of cotton manufacturers. The Thompson-McFadden commission have located about 400 cases of pellagra in this county.

Vital statistics of the city of Spartanburg show that during the last five years pellagra has caused more deaths than any other disease except tuberculosis.

Reports of the commission's work last year will soon be issued in the American Journal of Medical Science. Prior to the official publication, the members of the commission are unwilling to disclose their findings. It is known, however, that they do not accept the long prevalent theory that pellagra was caused spoiled corn They were inclined to look with favor on the theory put forth by Dr. Sambon, of the London School of Tropical Medicine, that pellagra is caused by the bite of an insect, but regarded the stable fly as more likely to be responsible than the buffalo gnat, on which Dr. Sambon placed the blame. Recent discoveries, however, may, explode the *insect theory. The commissioners are in*clined to believe that pellagra is a communicable disease.

AT THE THEATRES

Miss Billy Long & Co., in Stock, to Present "The Girl From Out Yonder" at the Atalnta—"Musical Cates" the Bijou Headline

The Miss Billy Long company will add to its popularity at the Atlanta theater this week in presenting the romantic comedy drama, "The Girl from Out Yonder."

The play is by Paul Phelps and Marion Short, and was written for Adelaide Thurston, who starred in it with great success. The first act is laid on the grounds of Terry's Harbor club house. Mrs. Elmer, a New York society matron, has been rescued from drowning, but she does not know the identity of her rescuer.

When Flotsam, daughter of Captain Amos Barton, puts in an appearance, Mrs. Elmer immediately recognizes her heroine, but mistakes her for a boy because of her oilskins. Mrs. Elmer becomes greatly interested in the girl, as does also her adopted son. She asks the captain for permission to educate the girl and the captain is about to consent when Joey Clarke, a fisher lad in love with Flotsam, because of jealousy, reveals the secret which Captain Amos has been trying to conceal for the past twenty years. The captain, while in command of a fishing schooner, has had a quarrel with a passenger, and believes he killed him.

Once the secret is out, Captain Amos is greatly relieved and declares he will take his medicine. As the man who was killed was none other than Elmer's father, the young people are separated. Matters finally adjust themselves, however, and Flotsam and Elmer are again brought together.

There are not only several intense dramatic situations in the play, but there is also some excellent comedy in the entire four acts. Considerable of this is furnished by Simonson, who keeps the captain's house, and who refuses for the thirty-fourth time to marry Ben Cooke. When Ben stops proposing, however, Simonson regrets her independence and is forced to do the proposing herself. The role of Simonson will be played by Kathryn Sheldon, who has been doing some excellent work with the company, while the role of Ben Cooke will be in the hands of Al Warren.

Miss Long naturally will play the role of Flotsam, who is sweet and girlish in spite of the fact that she has been brought up by Captain Amos and his rough but well-meaning friends. Edwin Vail will play Elward Elmer, the city chap who falls in love with Flotsam, while Joseph E. Kirkham will play the captain. Joey Clarke, the jealous fisher lad, will be played by Ralph Marthy.

The production will be complete in every detail. The scenic artist has worked wonders with his brush, and the scene showing the lighthouse in the distance and the big waves breaking over the rocks is sure of commendation.

Big Musical Feature At Bijou This Week

The special headline attraction for next week at the Bijou will be the Four Musical Cates, the world's greatest musical act, consisting of F. B. Cate, cornet virtuoso; W. H. Cate, saxophone soloist, and Fred Cate, playing the largest saxophone in the world, the only saxophone of its size ever played, in fact. This act is heralded as the biggest and most expensive that has been offered at the Bijou in many seasons and it should create a veritable furore at this house. Other acts on the program will be the Empire Three, ragtime singers and comedians; Miss Walsh, dainty comedienne, and Wesley and White, comedy singing and dancing. Five bills that have been announced for the Bijou give promise of so clever and pleasing an entertainment.

There is every reason to anticipate a vaudeville offering that will eclipse anything yet presented at the Bijou. Especial care will be exercised in the selection of the motion pictures which will open and close each performance. Following the usual custom, matinees will be given every afternoon at 3 o'clock, except Monday and Saturday, when two matinees will be given at 2:30 and 4. Night shows 7:30 to 9.

Gigantic Rudder

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON, May 3.—A rudder with a doorway into its interior is a feature of the mammoth Cunard liner Aquitania, soon to be launched.

The rudder has just been placed in position, and is so huge that a doorway has been constructed in the lower part to admit workmen, so that they can remove the pin which connects the rudder to the ship. This pin is four feet in length and bigger than the heaviest projectile made for modern artillery. A special appliance had to be constructed in the ship to lift it into position.

Gus Edwards' "Kid Kabaret," but Without Gus, to Feature Bill at Forsyth—Lyric Season Has Just Closed, and Grand Too Is Dark

Gus Edwards' Kid Kabaret will be the headline feature at the Forsyth this week, and the bill that this act tops should prove to be one of the most complete entertainments that has been seen in any local vaudeville season. Comedy is to be the foundation for the bill. There is to be novelty, too, and some dancing and some juggling.

It has been evidenced that the theater-goers hold a decided preference for the Forsyth and vaudeville. Attendence last week eclipsed some of the best records of the past month.

Gus Edwards has been thoroughly well introduced in Atlanta. When he has appeared personally it has been an event, and though he is not with his newest act, his spirit will prevail, and the theater-goers are promised a treat that will be an unusual event. Mr. Edwards produced the act while the cabarets were at their height in New York. He designed a stage setting that would resemble some of the big cafe show places in New York. Then he went about selecting talent. He secured seven pretty girls who could sing and dance, and signed up eight boys who are all clever. He then put on his Kid Kabaret. The songs were written exclusively for the act. It has been a tremendous success in New York and in Chicago, and has been sent to Atlanta as a special treat for the theater-goers. One of the songs that has been a great hit is "You've Got to Stop a Pickin' My Li'l Pickaninny," the lyrics by Frank L. Stanton.

A special feature of the bill will be charming Belle Story, one of the most popular vaudeville comediennes known along Broadway.

Story's songs will be popular, and the little artist will be a favorite. Another of the cards will be Max Hart's six steppers, four pretty girls and two clever young men who will show all the styles of dancing. The act is one of the big ones of present-day vaudeville.

William Thompson and Copeland, in their odd comedy playlet, "The Burglars' Union," promise to be the cause of real laughter, and Eldora and company assure an entertainment in some novel and funny juggling stunts. Riesner and Gore in an original specialty, and other features, will be on the bill.

The Forsyth was crowded to almost it's limit of capacity at every performance last week. There is more genuine interest in the Forsyth and in vaudeville now than has been in a long time.

The box office is open daily from 9 a. m. for the accommodation of theater-goers who desire to make reservations in advance, and hundreds are accepting the opportunity.

A Royal Ma-in-Law

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

MADRID, May 3.—Everybody knows that things do not run on greased wheels in the Spanish royal family, and that King Alfonso did not render thanks to Heaven for providing him with a decided mother-in-law. Even at holiday time presents are not exchanged, and the strained relations between the two families were public property. Queen Ena, who is very fond of her mother, has suffered most over the unfortunate breach, so it must relieve her immensely to have matters in a more favorable condition. The prospect of having Princess Henry to stay with her again is naturally a very pleasing one. Alfonso's health is still far from satisfactory, and he is, unfortunately, not inclined to regard it seriously. The hatred against him is that he is "ostentatiously careless" about it, and this causes Queen Ena considerable anxiety.

THE WAYFARERS AT HOME BY CALVIN JOHNSON

I HAVE just been reading a book on prehistoric man," Blivens was beginning, when his instructive look at his cronies, when crabbed old General Wampum interrupted.

"The history of the prehistoric! What nonsense!"

"Those men," continued Blivens gravely, "were bound to be somewhat nomadic in their habits, beating it about the Cambrian fen one lap ahead of the glacial lizard. In fact, one day and time, I take it, you first went out to defy your lizard, and then it was up to you to move early and often. Now—don't interrupt me—the prehistoric wife, having swept a cave and thrown out the great brown bear of the period with an instinctive love for house-cleaning, would summon her husband to see how comfortably off they were. She would point out the futility of trying to bite a piece out of the lizard when they might sit companionably eating the snails off the parlor walls. So was founded the home."

General Wampum and Brownlow Clay listened with astonishment to this learned summing up of prehistoric fact, but were disposed to deny the woman all credit as the original homesteader.

"Then I will cite a modern instance of this feminine instinct," retorted Blivens, and cite it he did, in the face of imminent disbelief.

Old Joe Harlan only boast was that he never let the grass grow under his feet, and he never made it grow anywhere else, for that matter. Though Joe came of a good country family, he'd always lived by horse swapping, and his outfit, consisting of Aunt Becky Harlan, a prairie schooner, and several derelict nags, drifted over the lower half of the state in twenty-odd years. Aunt Becky did a little peddling among the farmers, and the peaceful, affectionate ways of the old couple set a fine example to all neighborly folks; never a cross word passed between 'em, their hearth was the roadside, and they had the love of Heaven for the home of the open sky.

One evening in early spring the two wayfarers sat under a hedge by their blazing fire, Uncle Joe gazing at the darkening sky, when Becky reminded him laughingly that he was pouring the coffee on the ground.

"Well, well," said Joe, "and I was just noticing how upside down the big dipper is." He stared at her absently a minute, and then asked with much curiosity, "How would you like a silk dress and a new bonnet and"—

"That'll do," interrupted Aunt Becky, smoothing her old rusty alpaca; "I just won't be one o' those fashionable dolls to please anybody." She was still battering in brisk good humor and setting things in order after supper, when Joe studying the evening star, asked: "How would you like to have a home?"

This was the first time he had ever asked such a question, and as she suddenly became perfectly silent, Joe went on: "Well, I must talk nonsense once in a while, like everybody else. Out here is a home grander than any castle, I reckon—the fields roofed in with stars. We'd be like two prisoners condemned to death, in a house, Becky. But that silk dress ain't a joke; I got a letter back in town today saying that brother Charles died in Whittleville last week, leaving me $500 and—" He lowered his gaze to a level with her eyes and stopped dead still.

Aunt Becky stood like a stone, then gradually her hand groped out and gripped his arm. "Quick, speak out! He left you what?" she asked huskily.

"Why, the farm," he answered.

In the twilight he could just see the wet glimmer of Aunt Becky's eyes and her clasped hands. "Home," she said; "Home!" In a tone so mocking that Joe started in wonder. "Yes, this is a home for a woman," she went on, "the shelter from roadside and the companionship of cattle."

"Well," raising her voice, "what are you going to do? Lead your old wife on through mire and winter winds till even death, despising such vagabonds, leaves us stiffened and crippled in a ditch? You lead me no further. Gone twenty years, I've tramped the wilderness, and now I'm going home."

She began to hitch up the wagon team. Joe slowly coming up to help, then taking the lines, she drove away, leaving three derelict horses to stray which way they would. Not another word passed between them till late in the night, when Joe offered to drive straight on while she lay down to sleep in the wagon.

"I hope my hands will shrivel up if I let go those lines till I get there," answered Aunt Becky. And drive she did all night, this grim rebellious mood snapping the lifelong tie between them, one after another, as years of quarreling wouldn't have done.

Old Joe watched the constellations go down and felt the wick of his life burn low with 'em; the frogs and night birds croaked a sort of farewell, he thought. Drenched with dew and covered with dust the two bowed, ghostly figures were met by dawn who came skipping out of the gate of a farm; the schooner creaked between the posts, and stopped on their own ground.

"At last; bless the Lord," said Aunt Becky.

Joe gazed back along the road, sighing as though the world was lost, and then the old couple studied each other almost unrecognizingly. Not only the expression by the manner of each had changed; they had come to a strange existence and were beginning life together again as strangers.

After a bit Aunt Becky spoke dryly: "We haven't come to jail, you know, Joseph; I've been thinking all night and haven't any apology to make for dragging myself out of the roadside ditch into a home of my own."

"I always supposed that we were having a high old time together," he said slowly, 'and all the time you were only pretending."

"I hadn't much choice, Joseph."

As she moved stiffly in getting down, he jumped from the wagon and assisted her. "Becky," he said, "I reckon it's my turn to stand by you. Pshaw, I'm all right, and I'm bound to be just as fond of the home as you are, in no time at all."

"That's more sensible," she replied.

Well, that was a comfortable old farmhouse they'd come to, and Becky soon had it so neat that Joe was almost afraid to set foot in it. But he surely did seem attached to the place, and from the day of their arrival never went beyond its boundaries except to walk into Whittleville on some errand of Becky's. A garden was started, where Joe worked quietly hour after hour without looking up, his wife often stopping her daily dusting and scrubbing to nod from the porch to him.

"Don't this beat tramping around the country?" she'd ask, and Joe would answer: It surely does, Becky."

So she lived in a state of bliss till the Hon. George McConnell bought the adjoining farm and came out to take possession. McConnell was a lawyer, a very able man, who had held high offices in the state—as everybody knows—but, his health failing, he had turned farmer in hope that country work and air would brace him up.

Aunt Becky was very glad to have him for a neighbor, but he brought with him a twelve-year-old nephew that she detested. This boy, Jack, spent his whole time mooning about outdoors, and when as though by instinct he attached himself to Uncle Joe and sat down for hours talking birds and fish, and even snakes, she predicted that he would come to no good end. Joe would try conscientiously to work while listening to the boy, but he just couldn't, and when Jack would come back from fishing in the brook, would meet him at the gate of the lane to hear the latest from an old kingfisher who lived in the dead sycamore above the pool.

This conduct was criminal enough, but when the Honorable McConnel himself called and old Joe worked on in the garden without speaking civilly, Aunt Becky lost patience.

"You must remember that you are living among civilized folks," she said after McConnel had gone, "only yesterday you spent an hour with that looney boy discussing whether crawfish had teeth in their stomachs which I call a crime against nature. But you don't treat an honored man like our neighbor with decency. That Jack has got to go before he stampedes you into the woods again like a wild man."

McConnel didn't take offense and kept dropping in to say how-dye-do, but when Jack got the cold shoulder from his old friend, according to Aunt Becky's instructions we went away with hanging head and never came back any more.

One day McConnel, sitting on the porch, remarked to Becky: "I'm sorry to see Uncle Joe looking so poorly; he's a changed man."

"Why, I guess there's nothing the matter with him but contrariness," she said, but after a word or two further they went into the garden.

"Get on your coat, Joseph," said his wife, "here's Mr. McConnel wants you to take a drive about the country—among those woods and fields of yours."

Old Joe, leaning on his hoe, took a long look at the lawyer. "I guess I don't care to see 'em in his company," he said so quietly and promptly that for a moment she hardly realized how insulting it was.

Then Aunt Becky turned on him with a white face. "After all my sacrifices you are a changed, wicked old man to put me and my friend to such shame," she said in a hard voice. "Have it your own way but until you tell this good neighbor how sorry you are—how low and despicable—you need never speak to me again."

McConnel tried too late to interrupt this outburst and said rather sadly, though without a sign of resentment: "I thought you would feel differently, Uncle Joe."

The old man trembled with excitement, but his voice was steady in reply: "Understand once for all, sir, that I am content to stay here on my own ground. Now you have made mischief enough, Lawyer McConnel, and may go."

From that day a dreadful silence settled over the farmhouse; the hard lines deepened in Aunt Becky's face, and her lips seemed sealed till the judgment when she could open them to accuse her husband. Old Joe after several attempts to work abandoned the garden to weeds, and day after day sat in the fence corner by the lane, smoking, and perhaps catching a distant glimpse now of Jack. One evening he came in as though dazed and would not move from the kitchen chair whence he often watched his wife.

Still hard-faced and silent she went over to McConnel's. "It is remorse troubles him," she said, "but he is too bitter toward me for coming home ever to admit his wickedness."

"Hush! Who are we to judge such a man?" interposed the lawyer, who, though the night was warm, sat holding his shrunken hands before a fire. After a moment he rose, and, taking a legal-looking document from his desk, held it before her. "This is the second and last will of Charles Harlan," he began, "voiding the other and leaving the house you live in to myself, his sole friend, under certain conditions. Read them."

Indescribably affected by this news, Becky read the clause:

"Said Joseph Harlan has been warned that my purpose is to reclaim him from a life of vagabondage, disgraceful to his family, and that to depart from the farm, properly inherited under my former will, except to use the highway between such farm and Whittleville—is a direct violation of my purpose.

"He is also informed of the existence of this, my last will and testament, in which I devise all my real property to Marcus McConnel. This will is to be probated and enforced in case Joseph Harlan forfeits his rights as any direction beyond the boundaries of heir by departing over one rod in the farm, except to Whittleville as aforesaid." This instrument was well intentioned enough, but none the less committed a man to life imprisonment, and the farm was little better than a jail.

"And you tempted him to go beyond those bounds," accused Aunt Becky suddenly; for answer Lawyer McConnel laid the will among the flames.

"I kept that will for your own protection," he answered her, "knowing that Joe would be less likely to stray when by so doing he would deprive you of the home you had set your heart upon. But when I saw him pining like a caged hawk for his native woods, I did tempt him, and would have possessed myself of the farm."

Aunt Becky had risen. "I don't quite understand," she said faintly.

"I would have deeded the farm back to him with a clear title—he would have suspected some ruse had I destroyed the last will before his very eyes. But deeded back to him with a clear title meant that he could regain his liberty, a priceless thing—instead of dying an exile in plain sight of his land of dreams for the sake of a wife who can't and won't understand his nature."

Then Aunt Becky covered her face with her shawl. After a time she sobbed to McConnell: "Shall a man who would do so much for me go unrewarded?"

Old Joe was still sitting in his chair gazing blankly at the wall, when his wife came in; he hardly realized that she was on her knees beside him: "Hitch up the old schooner and I'll follow to the end of the world," said Aunt Becky; "the will is destroyed and we can sell the farm and you're a free man"—

"Sell the farm?" repeated Uncle Joe. Suddenly his eyes began to brighten with the thought of the open, and Aunt Becky, with one last brave effort, put away her dreams of home forever. "Why, it's home," went on Joe. "Your home; we'll wayfare here together. But when work is done in the afternoon, I'll go walking and fishing; now I must tell McConnel I misjudged him." He rose, and holding her hands, said timidly: "About Jack, now"

The boy answered for himself by entering the door. "I was in a corner of the room at home and couldn't help but hear what Aunt Becky and my uncle said," he began in a frightened but soon the boy's determined manner; "so I followed over—"

"Will you bait my hook, boy?" demanded Aunt Becky.

"Every day!"

"Then I'll put up the lunch every day," said she.

As Blivens finished, General Wampum began summing up. "From all of which we are led to conclude that the pre-historic man couldn't bear the confinement of the cave, so his wife escorted him back to the winged lizard—"

"Perhaps the lizard was married, too," suggested Major Clay with interest; "and one wonders what could be the origin of the neighborhood row. Now, that is something worth knowing, and satisfied with threshing this grain of information out of so much chaff, I bid you good day."—Copyright, 1913, by J. G. Lloyd.

PLAY FAIR HUSBANDS AND WIVES.

And There'll Be Less Trouble in Family Circle," Says Billie Burke

After reading the "Confessions of a Rebellious Wife"; a "Neglected Wife"; an "Unloving Wife"; a "Frivolous Wife," and all the other wives of this year's vintage, in the current newspapers and magazines, does it not strike you that they might all be compressed into one story, entitled "The Fool Wife"?

The truth of the matter is that, while men and women both are aware of the fact hat they hemselves are far from perfect, they are looking always for perfection in the other. Perfection is an ideal. What I might consider perfect you might find full of flaws. Consequently no two people call the same standard perfect.

For thousands of years men have been taught that women must believe a thing because man makes the assertion; woman has found out in the last two or three decades that man is quite as apt to be mistaken as she, so she immediately jumps at the conclusion that he is all wrong.

If both men and women could be made to understand that they are alike—born with the same senses, the same passions, the same brain—it would simplify matters much. Women cannot forgive man's moral peccadillos, because in their sheltered lives they never have been tempted; men have not learned that women are something more than a plaything. When each, through education or experience, learn that the other is merely human, the whole problem will be solved. Although they are both unconscious of it, they are both more or less "two faced," showing one face to themselves and another to each other. When they both learn to be sincere, not only with each other, but with themselves, they will find married life much easier, I think.

The secret of much of the incompatibility of married life is that each is fighting for supremacy; the husband insists that the wife shall sink her individuality into his, and the wife is determined that her will shall be supreme.

Just at present with our suffragets and our women of independent thought in all walks of life we are hearing a good deal of their side of the story.

Most women who do not work outside their homes think that it is only "cakes and ale" to make a living for four or five dependent people; they look about them at other women who have made a success in man's work and sure they could do the same, but few of them would work as the man or woman who earns even a modest compensation.

Women today have too much time to think of themselves and their wrongs; they should do their share of the world's work, whether it be in the home or out in the world. On the other hand, men must give up the long-cherished idea that woman is a nice, little, "neat dollie" to be played with, petted, dressed and adorned, but to be allowed no voice in things as they are.

Play fair. This life is not a war between the sexes, but a pleasant game of give and take.

Play fair; but remember, whether you do or not, you will—in the idiom of the street—"get what's coming to you."

"LIFE—A GAME OF GIVE AND TAKE."

Romeo Up to Date

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

ROME, May 2.—Antonio Romeo, a remarkable type of miser, has just died at San Stefano, near Messina.

During fifty years he had carried on the business of a money lender throughout Sicily and at Naples. At first he was believed to be a wealthy man, but as he lived in a miserable style, his neighbors finally came to the conclusion that he was poor. After his death, however, the relatives demanded permission to make a search of his house, and the necessary legal formalities having been completed, the search party were resulting in the discovery of immense hoards in Romeo's dwelling.

In a cupboard, which was stuffed with rags, were found large bundles of bank notes for 500 and 1,000 lire, and in old chairs were found bags totalling an amount of 300,000 lires, and government stock representing a further sum of 400,000 lire. Bank notes and money were found in every conceivable hiding place—in old boots, old clothes, and concealed in pots of jam. The total amount of the miser's hoard is stated to be several million lire. The millionaire-miser liver on a frugal diet of potatoes and salad, and only drank water.

Porcelain Heels

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

PARIS, May 2.—Porcelain heels and silk and satin evening shoes are among the latest eccentricities of fashion.

It is expected that before long they will be made of Sevres china.

Another novel and none too lovely fashion is the wearing of strings of pearls somewhat after the manner of a grandmother's chin-strap. The necklace passes under the chin of the wearer from ear to ear. Sometimes it will be fastened round the ear lobe, but more frequently it is secured to the hair by a jeweled pin on either side. Steel ornaments and brooches have been revived.

The Restraint

(New York Tribune.)

A professor at a Harvard tea was asked why books of recollections were always so tame.

"Let me tell you a story," he answered. "A great man once said to a friend:

"'I think I'll write my recollections.'

"'Very good,' said the friend; 'but let me caution you not to recollect anything about celebrities that are living.'

"'Oh,' said the great man, 'living celebrities are just the ones I want to write about. They're the ones that will make my book sell.'

"'Very well,' said the other; 'but remember my warning.'

"'Why, what's the danger, anyway?'

"'The danger,' replied the other, 'is that as soon as you begin to recollect things about living celebrities they will begin to recollect things about you.'"

SUNDAY SONGS AND SERMONS

JAMIASON WILL SPEAK AT RAILROAD Y. M. C. A.

Special Service of Music Will Be Given by the Orchestra

There will be another rousing good meeting at the Railroad Young Men's Christian association rooms, 31 1-2 West Alabama street, Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Mr. Charles B. Jamison, physical director of the Central association, will deliver the address. Mr. Jamison is an association man of long experience, having one time been a general secretary, and is now the very efficient leader in his present position.

Those who may come to this service are assured that they will not be disappointed. Everybody will enjoy the stirring song service and the music of the excellent orchestra.

The doors are open all day and a cordial welcome awaits all visitors.

BUCKHEAD SINGERS TO HAVE PROGRAM FROM FA SO LAS TO OPERA ARIAS

REV. E. H. PEACOCK.

COL. J. S. JAMES.

MISS LOUISE SLATTEN.

May Day Song Fest Will Bring Out Host of Singers on Sunday—Exercises Will Begin at 9 o'Clock and Last Throughout Day

From the old fashioned "fa so las" to religious arias from operas, will constitute the program of the May day song feast of the Buckhead Baptist church, which will be held Sunday, May 4, beginning at 9 o'clock in the morning and lasting throughout the day, closing with the benediction after the night service. Between the morning and afternoon services an old-time basket dinner spread will be held, when baskets will be opened and a real picnic hour enjoyed by all together.

This May song feast was inaugurated by the Buckhead church last year and drew great crowds from the city and from the adjoining counties.

The program has been enlarged this year and some of the best musical talent of the city will take part. A special feature of interest has been added to the already attractive program by Dr. Lester A. Brown, dean of Cox college, speaking at the 11 o'clock hour, when a quartet of young ladies composed of Misses Pearl Johnson, Della Glauser, Bessie Mae Daniel and Jolta Harris, of the Cox college Conservatory of Music, will delight the audience with their singing just before Dr. Brown's address, and again in the afternoon, Miss Miriam Madden, also of the Cox college Conservatory of Music, will play the violin.

Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, pastor of the Central Baptist church, will speak in the afternoon, and his splendid choir of fifty or more voices, under the direction of Prof. R. O. Bell, will be one of the musical features of the day.

The Old Sacred Heart Singing class will render the songs of fifty years ago as parents and grand-parents sang them; the great Tabernacle chorus choir, led by Prof. Boatman, the Slatten orchestra, conducted by Miss Louise Slatten, and many of the other prominent choirs of the city will all take part in making this one of the most attractive of musical programs.

The day's services will close with an address at the 8 p. m. o'clock hour by Dr. W. I. Masters, editorial secretary of the Home Mission board, and a song of praise and thanksgiving by the entire congregation.

The public is invited to come and spend the day. Take street car at the postoffice, leaving this point every ten minutes.

Bring your baskets and spend all day, is the advice of the congregation.

THE CHRISTIAN VIEW OF LIFE AND DEATH

REV. LOY WARWICK

UNDER the juniper tree Elijah the prophet requested for himself that he might die. He was sick and worn in body and spirit, and felt that his work was done.

He was not himself that day. For a little while he had lost heart and was at low tide. He saw nothing to live for and to his dejected soul it seemed better to die than to live.

Hezekiah, when he was very sick, Isaiah the prophet came into the royal bed room and said, "Set thy house in order, for thou shalt die and not live." But Hezekiah did not want to die just then. He was, I think, prepared to die. But he was not ready. I think he could have said, "This is my rejoicing, the testimony of my conscience that in simplicity and godly sincerity I have had my conversation in the world." He was not afraid to die. He would not be afraid to lie in his grave like the slave to his dungeon.

But he prepared to get well and live a little longer. God would let him. So he turned his face to the wall and prayed about it. The Lord heard the king's petition and added fifteen years to his days.

You remember Balaam's prayer. Balaam was the prophet, or soothsayer, whom Balak hired to curse and hinder Israel as they journeyed to Canaan. He was not an admirable character, but he did pray an admirable prayer. When he saw who and what these strange people were and how the great God loved and led them, Balaam cried out, "Let me die the death of the righteous and let my last end be like his."

I say this is an admirable prayer. If a man dies the death of the righteous he must live the righteous life. In no other way can he attain to their peaceful end or come to their desired haven.

This is not the prayer of one who is tired of life and disgusted with himself, as Hamlet was after the murder of his father and the shameful marriage of his queen-mother.

He had suffered much. His own uncle had slain his father and married his mother and taken the throne. Upon the tender and noble soul of the young prince was laid the responsibility of averaging and righting this sea of wrongs and troubles. He felt that the times were out of joint. In his misery he cursed the day he was born and longed for restful death to come and set him free. Should he suffer the stings and arrows of outrageous fortune, or oppose them and end them? Or were it not better to end it all by ending his life? Death he compared to a sleep. But in our sleep we have troubling dreams, and it was this thought that gave him pause. He could not take the matter in his own human hands and end his lease on life. Why? Because of "the dread of something after death, the undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveler returns."

The grand old prophet under the Juniper Tree lived on because he could not die. Hamlet lived on because he was afraid to face death and what came after death. Why do you live? Why not get out of life if life be full of disappointment and pain? What does our Bible and our religion teach us to say to a man like the Danish prince to whom life was a burden and a funeral dirge?

For one thing we could say, "Do your duty, live your life honestly and sincerely and leave the rest to God." We could say, "What if the men and women in whom you trusted do deceive and disappoint? That does not mean that all people are bad. There are more men and women honest men and more pure women than harlots and courtezans. We could say, "Whatever, or whoever may fail and fall in the world the word of the Lord abideth forever and all things work together for good to them that love Him."

It is good to live. This is our Father's world. We desire to keep life because we enjoy living, and not because we fear to die. We live to do all the good we can in as many ways as we can to all the people we can. We live to do our best because this life is a preparation for the life that the great Master is the teacher, and where we get ready for the life that shall endless be.

Brief life is here our portion.
Brief life and short-lived care;
The life that has no ending,
The tearless life is there.

And the life here fits and furnishes us for the life there. We can enjoy and serve and shine better in the King's country for having suffered and served in this earthly house.

CATHOLIC

SACRED HEART—7, low mass. Sizing Up the Judge

A judge once had a case in which the accused man understood only Irish, says the Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph. An interpreter was accordingly sworn. The prisoner said something to the interpreter.

"What does he say?" demanded his lordship.

"Nothing, my lord," was the reply.

"How dare you say that when we all heard him? Come on, sir, what was it?"

"My lord," said the interpreter, beginning to tremble, "it had nothing to do with the case."

"If you don't answer I'll commit you, sir!" roared the judge. "Now, what did he say?"

"Well, my lord, you'll excuse me, but he said, 'Who's that old woman with the red bed curtain round her sitting up there?'"

At which the court roared.

"And what did you say?" asked the judge, looking a little uncomfortable.

"I said, 'Whist, ye spalpeen! That's the ould boy that's going to hang ye.'"

An Emergency

(Judge.)

When a certain darky of Mobile, Ala., announced his engagement to the dusky one of his choice, the congratulations that were showered upon him included a note of wonder.

"Joe," said one of these friends, "I shore is surprized! We-all never thought you'd speak up. It's going on two years since you begun to fool around Miss Violet."

"Dat's true," said Joe; "but de fact is, old man, I didn't lose my job until last nig..t."

Good Clothes Give Confidence

(Leslie's Weekly.)

A well dressed woman can look her fellow sex in the eye, not necessarily in a defiant manner, but with the conviction that no fault can be found with her apparel. She can go into a business office, a restaurant, the church or the theater with no apologetic shrinking from the gaze of the multitude, and she is therefore at her best.

SUNDAY SCHOOL QUESTIONS

MAY 4 1913.
(Copyright, 1912, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D. D.)

Joseph Interprets Dreams. Gen. xl

Golden Text—The breath of the Almighty giveth them understanding. Job. xxxii:8.

(1.) Verses 1-4—How much did God have to do with the quarrel of Pharaoh with his chief butler and baker?

(2.) What is generally thought to be the crime of which Pharaoh suspected these two men to be guilty?

(3.) To what extent, if any, does God in these days use bad men and the devil to bring about his purposes?

(4.) Verse 5—The various accounts in the Bible concerning dreams make it clear beyond dispute that God in those days used dreams as a medium of his revelations. Is there any reason to believe, or on the contrary, and why, that God still uses the same method?

(5.) Give an account of some Bible dreams and say if you have ever had God distinctly speak to you in a dream.

(6.) Verses 6-8—Are sadness and sorrow caused chiefly by outward and intangible things or by mental experiences? Give your reasons. (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club).

(7.) If there is nothing in dreams in these days as most people seem to think, why is it that some dreams give us pain and other dreams give us pleasure?

(8.) Is it ever or never right to be sad? Why?

(9.) Verses 9-13—Is it desirable or not, and why, to have a confidential friend to whom we can open our heart of hearts and tell our inmost experiences?

(10.) Why is it that our dreams in these days, as they seem to have been in those days, are generally connected with our chief occupations or habits?

(11.) Verses 14-15—How much real appreciation do those who are engaged in helping their fellows receive from those who are most benefited by their work?

(12.) What brought Joseph into that prison, and how do you account for it that God allows such good men to suffer for their very innocence?

(13.) Verses 16-19—why would it not have been better if Joseph had refrained from telling the chief cook the fats which awaited him?

(14.) As a rule, would you say it is well or ill to want to pry into the future?

(15.) The Egyptians used to embalm the bodies of the dead; why, therefore, would it be a terrible calamity to the baker to have his flesh consumed by the birds?

(16.) Verses 20-23—What reason is there, if any, to believe that there are those today who can read the future as Joseph did?

(17.) What lesson may we learn from the fact that the chief butler did not remember Joseph?

Lesson for Sunday, May 11, 1913. Joseph Made Ruler of Egypt. Gen. xli:1-45.

A Director

(Washington Star.)

"What is a political leader?"

"Well," replied Sorghum, "sometimes he is very much like the orchestra leader, the man who provides the gesticulation and general excitement while somebody else is doing the real work."

Embarrassing

"Do you ever see the president?" asked Willie of his uncle who lived in Washington.

"Yes; nearly every day," was the reply.

"And does he ever see you?" queried the little fellow.—Chicago News.

Rose Jar of Dresden Pottery

(New York Herald's Paris Edition.)

A pretty possession is a little cage of Dresden pottery opening at the top like a box and filled with dried flower petals, perfumed. They are inclosed in a gauze envelope, which allows the fragrance to escape without the flowers being able to leave this graceful tomb. Dresden china, by the way, is very popular. Long parasol handles are made from it and mounted in gold, the only objection to them being their fragile nature.

For Sentiment's Sake

(Pittsburg Post.)

"Well, so you are now worth millions, eh?"

"Yep, struck it rich."

"Torn yourself away from all the old habits of life, I suppose?"

"No; I still cling to a few. I still empty the drip pan of the refrigerator every night."

SUNDAY SCHOOLS WILL HOLD MONTHLY SESSION

Baptist Association Will Meet at Antioch Baptist Church Sunday

The May session of the Atlanta Baptist Sunday School association, of which John M. Green is president, will be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Antioch Baptist church, located on the federal prison car line. An address will be made by Rev. J. G. Spalding.

There will also be other short and interesting talks from various individuals reflecting benefits and advantages derived from recent training school held at the First Baptist church.

All Sunday school workers are cordially invited to be present, and the various schools composing the organization are expected to send delegations.

Long-Headed

(New York Tribune.)

Senator Lodge was talking in Boston about certain investigating committees.

"They are like the brook," he said. "They flow on forever. Some of them, in fact, remind me strongly of Si Hoskins.

"Si Hoskins got a job last spring at shooting muskrats, for muskrats overran the mill owner's dam.

"Often, in the lovely spring weather, Si sat on the grassy bank, his gun on his knee, and, finding him thus one morning, I said:

"'What are you doing, Si?'

"'I'm paid to shoot the muskrats, sir,' he answered. 'They're undermining the dam.'

"'There goes one now,' said I. 'Shoot, man! Why don't you shoot?'

"Si purred a tranquil cloud from his pipe and said:

"'Do you think I want to lose my job?'

The Error of Selfishness

(Troy Standard Press.)

Imagine a rose that would say to itself: "I haven't afford to give away all my beauty and sweetness; I must keep it for myself. I will roll up my petals and not give off fragrance." But, behold, the moment the rose tries to store up its colors and treasures of fragrance within them from others, they vanish. The colors and fragrance do not exist in the unopened bud. It is only when the rose begins to open itself, to give out its sweetness, its life, to others that its beauty and fragrance are developed.

Some human selfishness defeats its own ends. He who refuses to give himself for others, He who closes the petals of his charity and withholds the fragrance of his sympathy and love, finds that he loses the very thing he tries to keep. The springs of his manhood dry up. His finer nature becomes atrophied. He grows deaf to the cries of help from his fellow men. Tears that never are shed for others' woes sore to stinging acids in his own heart.

Refuse to give your love, and soon you cannot open your sympathy. Refuse to give, and soon you will cease to enjoy that which you have. Refuse to love, and you lose the power to love and be loved. Withhold your affections, and you become a moral paralytic. But the moment you open wider the door of your life and give it away, send out without stint your fragrance and beauty, you let the sunshine of life into your own soul.

Meditation

(Mme. Ediand.)

It is useful to borrow the fine ideas of others, but the habit of committing them makes the mind contract a sort of sloth and dullness, which renders it incapable of even determining by its own powers. Reading extends the judgment; to form it is the province of meditation.

Too much reading overloads the memory and dulls the imagination; meditation, on the contrary, carried to excess, heats the brain and leads to madness.

"GEORGE PEABODY HALL," WHERE MEN WILL BE FITTED FOR WORK IN HIGH SCHOOLS, WILL BE DEDICATED JULY 12

WHERE GEORGIA MEN WILL BE PREPARED AS HIGH SCHOOL TEACHERS

First Building of a Series of Eight to Be Erected Upon the Campuses of Southern Institutions Will Be Devoted to the Purpose of Preparation of Teachers, Principals and Superintendents in the High Schools of Georgia. Building Will Cost $50,000 and Will Be Modern in Every Detail

Dedication in July Will Be One of Most Important Events in the History of Georgia Education and Famous Leaders Will Be Present to Take Part in Interesting Proceedings—Prominent Educators Have Been Chosen as Members of the Faculty of the New Educational Department

ATHENS, Ga., May 3.—There died in Wilkesbarre, Pa., some years ago, an old German piano teacher who was known to be remarkably successful with his pupils, especially beginners, but who couldn't play a single bar.

Of course, Mein Herr Piano Teacher was decidedly unusual. Doubtless if he had known how to play he would have been an absolute marvel. As it was, he was, perhaps, dangerous to society through the fact that he lent encouragement to that limited class who afford some ground for Bernard Shaw's famous piece of epigrammatic injustice, "He who can, does; he who cannot, teaches." But his career, nevertheless, demonstrates a great truth—that the knowledge of how to teach is as important, if not more so, to the successful pedagogue as the knowledge of the subject taught.

This truth has always been recognized by the theory of education, but it has taken the nineteenth century to force this recognition into the activities of educators. The training school for teachers is a recent institution. Practically all of the normal schools have been established within the past half century. The first collegiate chair of education in this country—the first real recognition of education as a distinct art of science—was established at the University of Michigan in 1879.

Such chairs now exist in almost all large and up-to-date colleges, but the courses they afford, as a rule, have no further object than to ground academic students in the theories of education; they do not profess to turn out teachers, leaving this work to the normal schools.

Now, in the south, normal schools, throughout, prepare teachers only for the elementary, or "grammar" schools. At the present time, with the exception of institutions existing at the Universities of Missouri and Texas, there is no school in the south which trains teachers for work in higher institutions—there is no normal school for high school teachers. But there is about to be.

There has just been completed, at the University of Georgia, a $50,000 building, known as "George Peabody Hall," which is the first of a series of similar institutions now in course of construction upon the campuses of eight southern universities, and which will be devoted to the purpose of fitting men to become teachers, principals, and superintendents, in high schools. The University of Georgia School of Education, the first of the lot to throw open its doors, will be dedicated on the night of June 12.

The history behind the institution forms a story of advanced philanthropy and modern economy, and a relation of its work to be and the objects which it will seek to attain reveals a step in educational advancement, and a prophecy of increased social progress in the south.

HOWE IT CAME TO BE.

Up to the time of the Civil war and immediately thereafter, there were practically no free schools in the south; and during the first years following the great struggle, few schools of any kind flourished in this section of the country.

This miserable condition of affairs attracted the attention of a millionaire philanthropist, George Peabody, of Massachusetts, whose portrait now hangs in the national Hall of Fame and who, before his death, came to be regarded in England and America as "the greatest philanthropist that ever blessed either country. The result was that he established the source from which has finally come forth the last word in educational progress.

He set aside in 1867, a sum of $2,250,000, known as the Peabody Education fund, to be used for the obtaining of free schools, and otherwise for the advancement of education, in the south. This fund he placed in the hands of a self-perpetuating board of trustees, to be disposed of as they saw fit, excepting only that they were not to use the principal for thirty years.

It may be interesting to note that J. Pierpont Morgan, the great financier just deceased, was a member of the board from its inception; and, at the time of his death, was not only chairman, but decidedly the dominating member of the board. The famous money king was a great friend of Peabody's, the Massachusetts millionaire having saved him from absolute ruin at one time during his early career. Every president and vice president of the United States, from the time of the establishment of the fund up to the present day, has been a member of this board, which has been made up of some of the most prominent men in the country, north and south.

At first, the board attended exclusively to work which has been largely responsible for the excellent system of free schools which we have today. Then it turned its attention to the establishment of our normal school system. Early during the present century, it decided to wind up the trust. It gave $1,000,000 to the Peabody college at Nashville and then found itself somewhat at a loss as to what to do with the remainder of the fund.

It was then that Dr. T. J. Woofter, of the chair of education at the University of Georgia, seeing the need of training schools for high school teachers in this section of the country, recommended the establishment of such institutions to the board. Through his untiring efforts, the proposition was finally brought to the favorable consideration of these trustees; and in November of 1911 he secured an appropriation of $50,000 for the building of the new school of education at Georgia, the first of a chain of like institutions, the result of his labors, now being erected at the State universities of North Carolina, Virginia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisana and Arkansas.

The front elevation of the "George Peabody Hall" is shown in the upper left hand corner. At the right is a picture of the interior staircase from the entrance of the hall, showing simple grace of architecture. The white space over Grecian doorway leading to auditorium on the right will contain bronze tablet dedicated to founder.

Busts of famous educators will be placed about the hall. The picture at the bottom is that of Prof. Thomas Jackson Woofter, Ph.D., who is dean of the new school of education at the State University, and one of the foremost educational workers in the country.

WHAT IT WILL DO.

Some idea of what the work of the new school at Georgia will be may be obtained from the list of courses which it will offer. Students may be taught school administration, principles of teaching, and school management; high school organization and methods of teaching in high schools; educational and experimental psychology; experimental pedagogy; educational sociology, bearing especially upon vocational and rural education; manual training education and physical education; philosophy of education; educational economics; anthropology; logic, ethics; the history of philosophy; and, during the summer school, domestic science education.

Out of this vast jumble of dictionary torture, one fact will perhaps present itself to even the average sufferer—that the list contains a large number of the so-called "social" sciences. The fact is that all the branches of social science at the university, with the exception of those of history and economics, will have their headquarters in the new building. The importance of the social sciences to the educator has been recognized, and the fact of such a disposal of these departments is one of great advantage.

The importance of practical psychology to the teacher can hardly be overestimated, and even the present normal schools have instituted courses in the subject; though nothing, of course, like the advanced treatment of this science which the university will afford. The modern teacher must not only know how to impart knowledge to the child, but he must know how to prepare the mind of the child to receive it. He must know the laws that govern the child's brain, and he must know how those laws change at different periods of the child-development. The old style teacher was like the man who tried to ram a square block into a round vase, and shattered the vase. The vase and the block may both be of the finest, and the ramming force the most potent, but a fit cannot be obtained. The psychological teacher either sets about making his vase a square one, or he sees to it that he picks out a round block.

The most accurate and practical studies of the child mind and the methods of training it will be made in the courses in experimental psychology and pedagogy. Some idea of the importance that has been placed upon these experimental fields may be gathered from the fact that there are nine psychological and pedagogical labaratories in the building.

Dr. Woofter lays special stress upon the courses in educational sociology, a science beyond the field of the normal schools. He says, that its importance to the educator, only recognized within the past few few years, is paramount. The effect of the course in rural sociology, especially, will be felt all over the state. The educator can only choose the proper subjects to teach when he knows under what social conditions his pupils are to live; and, also, it is only when he knows these conditions of life, that he can scientifically choose his method of teaching.

"Educatoinal sociology," says Dr. Woofter, "helps particularly the man who intends to impart vocational education; and vocational education is today becoming the greatest branch of the field, since it is the most useful in obtaining the highest social efficiency in the pupil, which is the final object of all education."

INTEREST ON FIFTY THOUSAND.

The university will offer a new degree of B. S. E. (bachelor of science in education), the first candidates for which will take up their work in September. The same entrance requirements will obtain as in the academic department of the university, and the course will cover a period of four years. Of course, the possession of the degree will excuse graduates from standing the state examination in order to obtain a professional license to teach. The demand for high school teachers is much greater than the supply and the men will probably find their path to a position pretty much strewn with roses.

Dr. Woofter, himself one of the foremost educational workers in the south, who has been largely responsible, through his six years incumbency of the chairmanship of the committee on legislation of the Georgia Educational association, for the sweeping educational reforms that have recently been made in the state, will be dean of the school and will hold the chairs of philosophy and school administration. Other members of the faculty will be Drs. L. R. Geissler, Howard W. Odum and R. E. Curtis, and Profs. Joseph E. Stewart, Leroy C. Hart and Howell B. Peacock. There may be one or two additions to the list before the opening of the September session, and it has been hinted that a man of considerable repute will be called in to take charge of the extension work over the state which the authorities are planning.

This extension work feature will gradually develop itself within the next few years, and what the possibilities in this field are may be gathered from the phenomenal success of the agricultural college in work along similar lines.

The dedication on June 12, when the university trustees meet, will be a most important event in the history of the university and of the state. Some famous educator will be the principal speaker of the occasion—probably the United States commissioner of education—and speeches will be made by Chancellor Barrow, Dr. Woofter and others. After the speaking a reception will be held in the new building, which it is intended to make the greatest social-educational event that the university has seen in years.

In every respect, the new school represents the cheapest $50,000 worth conceivable. Not only is the building a marvel of low-cost construction, with its wonderfully scientific and up-to-date facilities—even the blackboards are green, because they have been recently found to be thus more restful to the eye—but it doesn't take very much dreaming to see Mr. Peabody's donation dwindle to a mite beside the untold millions which an "increased social efficiency" will bring into the state; to say nothing of the higher type of manhood and civilization which is the inevitable result of a higher type of education.

GEORGIA WOMAN NAMED TO ATTEND PEACE CONGRESS

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ST. LOUIS, —Four governors—Lee Cruce, of Oklahoma; Woodbridge N. Ferris, of Michigan; S. V. Stewart, of Montana, and Joseph M. Brown, of Georgia—have appointed women on the delegations to represent these states at the Fourth American Peace congress, which will be held in St. Louis May 1, 2 and 3.

Governor Cruce has the honor to be the first chief executive to select a woman for this task. His appointee is Mrs. Arthur H. Geissler, of Oklahoma City. To Governor Stewart belongs the honor of having included in his delegation more women than are accredited to any other state. Governor Stewart's appointees are Mrs. George F. Brooks, of Missoula, and Mrs. Randolph Brooks, of Bozeman. Governor Ferris chose as one of his representative Mrs. Florence Milner, of the Detroit Universtiy school, Detroit, Mich. The only other woman chosen as official state delegate is Governor Brown's appointee, Mrs. E. Washington Bellamy, of Macon.

MACON WOMAN NAMED.

Governor Brown, in his official order, states that the appointment of Mrs. Bellamy is to fill the place of Hon. Clark Howell, of Atlanta, who will be unable to attend. The other Georgia delegates are E. H. Callaway, of Augusta; Colonel Samuel C. Dunlap, of Gainesville; Henry R. Goetchius, of Columbus; J. Lindsay Johnson, of Rome; General Peter W. Meldrim, of Savannah; Hon. Emory Speer, of Macon; W. S. West, of Valdosta, and the Rev. John E. White, D. D., of Atlanta.

The state of Georgia is expected to participate actively in the congress, not only because of the high character of the delegates chosen by Governor Brown, but because that commonwealth is the home of a well known peace organization—the Georgia Peace society, with headquarters in Atlanta—and further because the headquarters of the South Atlantic states department of the American Peace society is located at Atlanta. The director of that department, J. J. Hall, of Atlanta, is actively interested in the arrangements for the national congress.

President Woodrow Wilson has accepted the honorary presidency of the fourth American Peace congress, and ex-President William Howard Taft and ex-Senator Elihu Root have accepted honorary vice presidencies. Congressman Richard Bartholdt is active president, and those who have consented to serve as vice presidents are Champ Clark, Andrew Carnegie, William Jennings Bryan, Theodore E. Burton, Oscar Straus and John W. Griggs.

MRS. ARTHUR H. GEISSLER, Oklahoma City, Okla., delegate from that state to the fourth American Peace congress, to be held in St. Louis, Mo., in May.

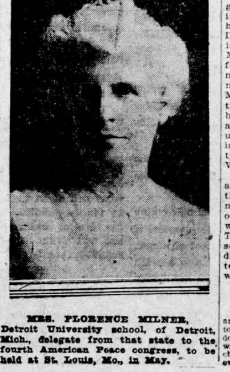

Although the congress proper does not convene until May 1, all accepting invitations to the gathering are being urged to arrive sufficiently early to attend the dedicatory exercises of the Jefferson memorial on April 30. This memorial, erected at the edge of Forest Park at a cost of $5,000, celebrates the greatest peaceable acquisition of territory in the history of the world—that known as the Louisiana purchase, extending from the western bank of the Mississippi river to the summit of the Rocky mountains.

WILL BE ANNIVERSARY.

It happens that the date chosen for the dedication ceremonies will be the 110th anniversary of the signing at Paris by Monroe and Livingston of the treaty by which the United States came into possession of the Louisiana purchase territory.

Mrs. Bellamy, Georgia's woman delegate, is now in Washington, where she attended the recent congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, an which organization she has served on several important committees for years. She has been an active member of the Daughters since that body was organized, being a charter member of the Mary Hammond Washington chapter, founded in Georgia by her mother, whose name it bears. She is also an honorary member of the other local chapter at Macon, and an associate life member of the St. Louis chapter. She is a member of the National Geneological society, and which body she has given much valuable work in historical research. She is also president of the Humane society, of Macon. Mrs. Bellamy comes from Washington direct from St. Louis.

Mrs. Geissler, who was the first woman appointed to the peace congress, is the wife of the Republican state chairman of Oklahoma, and a granddaughter of General Pinckney Henderson, who was the first governor of the state of Texas and afterwards a United States senator from that state. She is president of the Pinckney Henderson chapter, Daughters of the Republic of Texas, which is located at Oklahoma City.

THIS IS NO ETERNAL TRIANGLE---IT HAS EIGHT SIDES!

Wayne County Couple, Who Did Not Object to Conditions of Former Marriages, Now Spend Honeymoon in Jail for Bigamy Sentences.

Bride, Undivorced From Two Husbands, Weds Man With Two Wives, and Each Says That Former Mates Had Left Partners Living.

JESUP, Ga., May 3.—A sentence as for a misdemeanor in the superior court of Wayne county of seven months on the chain gang for bigamy broke up the honeymoon of Nathen E. Jones, aged sixty years, whose marriage to Hattie Rosela Robertson took place three weeks ago.

Mrs. Jones, the bride, is only seventeen years old, but the fact that her sixty-year-old husband has two wives is not startling to her, because she herself has two husbands. She has been released on bond pending her own trial for bigamy at the November term of the superior court.

After his first wife died many years ago, Jones married Miss Alice Driggers. But Driggers was not her maiden name. When she told Jones, on their wedding morning more than eight years ago, that she had another husband, H. S. Driggers, and suggested that he would undoubtedly make trouble for Jones as soon as he heard of her wedding to him, Jones says he simply ordered her off his farm and told her never to return.

For eight years thereafter he lived in a state of single blessedness, only to succumb to the charms of Hattie Rosela Robertson-Thomas-Jones several weeks ago. The courtship of the couple was fast and to the point, and the wedding took place soon after the first meeting, at the home of the girl's mother, Justice of the Peace J. J. Cleary performing the ceremony.

Hattie Rosela happened also to be married at the time to a Mr. Thomas but this fact did not disturb the aged bridegroom in the least. For Hattie had told him that Thomas had admitted to her that he had another wife—two wives, in fact—and to the mind of Jones she was, therefore, entirely justified in leaving Thomas, and was free to marry whomsoever else she pleased.

WILL WAIT FOR LOVE.

The affair resembles a Chinese puzzle to the average man, but to Mr. and Mrs. Jones it is all very simple. After he has served his term on the gang the bride will unite with him, unless she is then serving a term herself, following the November session of the Wayne county court. However, if at the time of his release in December (his seven months being up them), she is in the bonds of servitude, Jones will in turn wait for her. They both declare their love to be strong enough to overcome every obstacle, and that love will triumph in spite of the law.

One of the opinions of the law, D. S. Price, sheriff of Wayne county, was told by a grand juror that the man and the woman were married and living together at Screven, where the Jones farm is located, and that to the best of his knowledge a previous marriage on the part of both parties had never been annulled. Sheriff Price, being busy with the many prisoners awaiting the April term of the court, thereupon sent Deputy Rogers to arrest the pair.

In some manner Jones discovered that the deputy was coming for him, so he took his youthful bride by the hand and started, undismayed, to walk out of the way of the arm of the law. On Friday morning they locked the doors of their home at Screven, took a bundle of clothes and food for their journey, bade farewell to the never-to-be-forgotten spot where the first part of their honeymoon had been spent and started across country.

DEPUTY FOLLOWED TRAIL.

When Deputy Rogers reached Screven he found that his bride had flown—or rather walked—away. But with the aid of a gallant steed he started out in pursuit. The trail was easy; Jones, while pushing steadily onward, had never thought of concealment, and had discussed his predicament and plans for escape with every country neighbor whose farm he passed. The deputy simply had to ask questions and gallop.

On Friday afternoon the pedestrians were sighted on the farm of a Mr. Channcey, in Pierce county, eleven miles from their home in Screven. They were taken in custody, placed on a train, and carried to Jesup, where the Wayne county jail is located.

When seen in jail just previous to his trial Mr. and Mrs. Jones were worried but little about the possible workings of the machinery of the law. Their actions were to them justifiable; the youthful bride had been betrayed into marrying a man who admitted having two other wives, so she felt no compunctions in repudiating that wedding and marrying Jones. The bridegroom had married a woman eight years before, after his first wife had died, who admitted her marriage to another gentleman, who was by reputation a man likely to cause trouble if he found his wife married to another man, so Jones felt no scruples in wedding the youthful Hattie Rosela, without first finding out whether Drigger's wife was still living and whether or not she was still his wife, too. That she was living, and was still the wife of Jones, was the opinion of the jury that sentenced Jones to seven months on the gang.

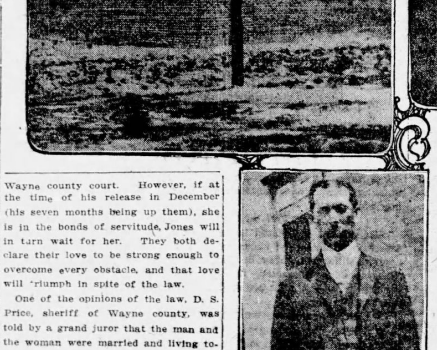

TALKS THROUGH BARS.

Mrs. Jones had comfortable rooms assigned her in the jail all to herself, but she was not content with this. Permission was granted her to talk to her husband through the bars of his cell further down the corridor, and for hours every day the little bride hung on to the cold bars and confronted her aged spouse rather than stay in the rooms assigned to her. For a short time every day they were allowed to talk to each other more comfortably in Mrs. Jones' room, and during these moments they were very happy.

"Yes, we're spending part of our honeymoon in jail, but it's our honeymoon just the same," said the youthful Hattie Rosela Robertsan-Thomas-Jones, smiling up at her aged spouse, whose hand she was holding in the yard of the jail during a short walk that was allowed them in the open air. "I just couldn't live with that other husband of mine. He told me one day that he had another wife; he bragged to me in fact that he had two or three other wives. So I left him and went back home to mother. Then Nathan came along, and I fell in love with him, And so I married him."

Mrs. Jones had nothing to say to the suggestion that Nathan himself had another living wife. She simply clutched his hand the tighter, and hung her pretty head.

"For eight years," said the aged husband, looking down fondly at his bride, "I lived free from women after I had run that Alice Driggers off my farm. But when I saw Hattie Rosela a month ago the single happiness idea was all up with me. I just had to marry her. And now, as soon as I get shed of all this jail trouble, Hattie and I will be perfectly happy together."

The picture at the upper left hand corner is that of Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Jones, of Wayne county. The other photograph at the top is of the Wayne jail at Jesup, where Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Jones are spending their honeymoon. The lower picture shows D. S. Price, sheriff of Wayne county, who arrested Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Jones.

CYCLONE

THE weather, in the opinion of C. F. von Herrmann, forecaster for Atlanta, is an influence upon both the good and the evil in humanity.

Depressing weather has the tendency to promote crime. Clear days are an inspiration to good.

But can a wild outburst of wind and rain provoke crime weeks afterward?

Is a cyclone a brain-storm of the upper airs, which can disturb the morality of an individual as well as his body or his property?

Following the recent storms and floods, this question has been asked in several instances where crime was committed soon after the wind and rain had ceased.

The same question was asked of Mr. von Herrmann, but his belief is not so extreme. He holds to the opinion that the weather has its effect upon morals, but not that a single disturbance would make itself felt weeks afterward in an act of crime.

This relation of weather and crime is but vaguely understood. Unexpected theories are being advanced, which have the support of statistics, that at least seem to be true.

SUICIDAL JEALOUSY.

A writer on criminology has just theorized that fair weather, rather than foul, influences suicide. He has statistics as his proof, and a not altogether intelligible criticism of humanity as his explanation.

He suggests that suicide is not always the result of individual unhappiness. He believes that it is often caused by the jealousy of happiness of others.

The day is fair, it seems meant for gladness, and suicide is the result.

This is one of many unexpected theories that are unconfuted.

In several cities visited by the recent cyclone, original theories have been advanced of the very deep effect that weather disturbances may have upon morals and upon crime.

Since crime has been studied as well as punished, its relation to the weather has been considered. Series of crimes have been attributed to weather disturbances, and serious efforts made to prove such theories.

But Forecaster von Herrmann believes that the weather has just the effect that is apparent to everyone. It is depressing on dull, heavy days, and it is exhilarating when the sun shines and the air is clear.

He can see little common sense in the theory that crime can be the weeks-old result of a cyclone.

In writing the following article upon cyclones which he says should be called tornadoes, he has gone into none of the unsettled theories of which, however, he spoke; and has written only established facts.

Mr. von Herrman is not only forecaster for the Atlanta station, but he is also author of many valuable articles on meteorology, which have been written for publication by the government. He is now engaged in translating several scientific works for use by the United States weather bureau.

BY C. F. VON HERRMANN,
U. S. Weather Forecaster.

In popular language any unusually severe local storm is called a "cyclone," but speaking from a correct scientific standpoint, the proper term for many of these storms is "tornado." The distinction between cyclone and tornado should be clearly understood. A cyclone is merely a barometric depression about which the winds circulate in a spiral direction contrary to the movements of the hands of a watch, and which move in a general direction from west to east, preceded by warm, cloudy weather with southerly winds and rain or snow, and followed by clearing skies, a shift of the wind to west or northwest, and rapidly falling temperature.

INFLUENCE VAST AREA.

Cyclones in the United States often influence an area more than 2,000 miles in diameter, and as a rule are not at all destructive, being merely associated with the usual sequence of weather changes. Over the oceans, however, cyclones are often better developed and of smaller diameter, often only 100 miles or less, and owing to the smooth, relatively frictionless surface of the ocean the gyrating winds may attain the velocity of a hurricane. The proper scientific term for these storms is hurricane or subtropical storm. They never occur in the interior of a country.

On the other hand, the tornado is a very much smaller and far more powerful disturbance, with a diameter rarely exceeding 1,000 feet and usually much less, and whose length of path rarely exceeds 25 to 20 miles. Tornadoes are small local whirls in the atmosphere which, are nearly independent disturbances within the boundaries of more extended and deep areas of low atmospheric pressure, or cyclones. The tornado is formed within the clouds, perhaps half a mile to a mile above the earth's surface, and consists of a comparatively narrow but high column of rotating air.

Their origin is briefly as follows: As stated above, about the center of a general cyclone the winds circulate in a spiral manner. On the east side they blow from the southeast, on the north side from the northeast, on the west side from the northwest, and on the south side from the southwest. But above the earth's surface the winds are rotated still further (owing to less friction above the earth), that is, above the south winds in the southeast quadrant of the main storm the winds are from the west or northwest and are already very cold.

Therefore in the region of the atmosphere about a mile above the surface there are conflicting currents of different temperatures; the moist warm south winds endeavor to overcome the cold dry northwest winds, and under suitable conditions gyrating masses of air are developed above the earth's surface.

PRESSURE DIMINISHES.

The rotary velocity of the winds becomes so great that the atmospheric pressure at the center of the column becomes greatly diminished, and the appearance is presented of a funnel-shaped whirling cloud which descends from the clouds as the development of the storm proceeds. This funnel-shaped cloud or great descending horn is the characteristic feature of the true tornado. Where the funnel reaches the earth nothing can withstand its power; forests are destroyed, large trees uprooted; cities demolished, animals and human beings are killed; even heavy bridges are moved from their foundations, railroad trains are upset, and even the rails torn from the ties. The freaks performed by tornadoes are often most remarkable.

It must be distinctly understood that the unstable condition of the atmosphere necessary for the formation of a tornado occurs first in the cloud region and the tornado gyrations commence there first and are afterward propagated downward to the earth's surface. It has been estimated that the velocity of the wind in a tornado may reach 500 miles an hour. The normal pressure of the air is 14.69 pounds to the square inch of surface. If only one-fourth of this pressure is suddenly taken off from the outside of any inclosure containing air, then the explosive force is 3.7 pounds to each square inch of the interior, or 533 pounds to the square foot. But it is estimated that the atmospheric pressure in the interior of the funnel cloud is often diminished to nearly one-half of the normal pressure, though such low pressures have never actually been measured. Considering the small diameter of the tornado and its rapid progressive motion, its explosive force is exerted quite suddenly and the immense damage wrought usually occurs in a minute or two.

OCCUR IN THE SPRING.

Tornadoes occur mostly during the spring or early summer months; the maximum number happen in April, May and June. They are usually accompanied by thunder and lightning, heavy rains and often hail, and they pass over with a deafening roar. Storms of this nature invariably move from west or southwest toward the northeast. Their diameter is generally less than 600 feet, and the progressive velocity (which is quite distinct from the velocity of the winds blowing around them), is about 75 feet a second.

Nowhere else in the world do tornadoes occur so well developed as in the United States. Conditions in the Mississippi valley seem especially favorable for their formation. The land is level; warm, southerly winds bring abundant moisture from the Gulf of Mexico, and the cold currents from the Canadian northwest have an unobstructed path down the slopes of the Rocky Mountains. The greatest number of tornadoes occur in the following states, in order: Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois. By far the greater number develop between the hours of 4 and 6 p. m., but a storm beginning about 5 or 6 p. m. may continue its course during several hours of the night.

It may be of interest to give a few illustrations of the tremendous force of the wind and of the supporting power of the ascending currents in tornadoes.

TREES BLOWN BROADCAST.

From an account of the tornado of April 16th, 1875, at Walterborough, S. C., the following facts are taken:

"At least 5,000 trees in the village were scattered in every direction. The roar of the wind was such that the tremendous crash was heard by no one. One gentleman was looking from his piazza and saw large trees fall in his yard, but heard no more sound than if they had been feathers."

From the account of the tornado at Mount Carmel, Ill., June 4, 1877:

"A brick moving at an angle of 15 degrees or 20 degrees with the horizon, entered the Harris house through the weatherboarding, lath and plastering, crossed two rooms, a distance of 27 feet, and lodged in the rear wall without breaking even the corners of the brick. From the large and circular aperture through which the brick entered it was thought that it must have whirled rapidly in its transit. So great was its velocity that the laths were cut quite smooth without cracking the adjoining plastering."

During the Summit tornado in Missouri in May, 1879:

"A carpet upon the floor of the log part of the house, and securely tacked about the edges, was taken up and carried out of the house without being torn. Several chickens were carried to the northeast from one-fourth to one-half of a mile and entirely stripped of their feathers. Trees and broken timber could be seen jerked up into the vortex, whirled around with terrific fury and then thrown outside at the top.

"During the Irving Tornado the house of Robert Reed, 16 by 25 feet, and one and one-half stories high, was lifted up as easily as a feather and without at first cracking the timbers. So quickly was it done that before Mr. Reed, who was within, knew his danger, the house has already risen to a height of 25 feet or more. The house being then enveloped in darkness, and not knowing what had happened, he started to the door, thinking it time to make good his escape, when instead of stepping out on the ground as he expected, he fell the above distance and was severely injured."

The literature on the subject of the peculiar freaks of tornadoes is already immense.

The tremendous energy displayed by the elements in storms and floods during March, 1913, has probably never before been equaled in the United States. In the destruction of property and loss of life the east gulf states shared but fortunately not on so great a scale as in the states in the central valley.

During the progress of the great northern disturbance (cyclone) of March 11-16, 1913, from Kansas to Iowa, where the remarkably low atmospheric pressure of 28.98 inches was reached at Des Moines, Iowa, on the morning of March 14, a number of unusually severe local storms occurred in Georgia, several of which unquestionably presented all the characteristics of true tornadoes.

At 7 p. m., central time, on the evening of March 13, the atmospheric pressure at Atlanta, reduced to sea-level was 29.88 inches, the temperature was 67 degrees, with brisk southwest winds and light rain. On the morning of March 14 the pressure had fallen to 29.82 inches, the temperature was 61 degrees, winds high from the southeast, and the rainfall was heavy. In themselves these conditions were not particularly ominous, but as Georgia then lay in the southeast quadrant of the main depression over Iowa, conditions were favorable for the development of local whirls or tornadoes, which caused considerable loss of life and great damage to property.

With the exception of the Columbus tornado, most of the storms fortunately passed through sparsely settled country districts. Three centers of most active storm development occurred, one resulting in the Columbus tornado, the second causing the Clarkston-Tucker tornado, just east of Atlanta, and the third the Curryville-Calhoun tornado, northeast of Rome. These storms have been fully described in this paper at the time of their occurrence.

Fortunately, severe storms of the type of tornadoes are rare in Georgia. The use of tornado cellars, which are becoming common in several of the western states, is not necessary.

variations of whist, but mountain-climbing is THE exercise. And Stone Mountain is the inimitable mountain.

FIRST SPRING CLIMBERS.

Photographs printed here show Atlanta maids who are first spring climbers. During the remander of the pleasant months excursions will follow excursion to the mountain of stone.

Miss Era Betzner, physical director at the Y. W. C. A., recommends mountain climbing. She says:

"The day of the sweet, old-fashioned clinging vine is passed, and the girl of today has at her disposal if she will take advantage of them, a perfect physique, including a good digestion and strong lungs, a brain that works, feet large enough to walk on, and hands skilled in many ways, from the running of a typewriter to the handling of a golf stick, to the making of a pudding."

The better you climb a mountain the better pudding you make. This is one way to look at it. Another is that mountain air is even better than cold cream for the complexion.

But it is true that mountains are not always handy, even stone mountains, and in such instances there are other exercises almost as good though not modish.

By Miss Era Betzner, physical director at the Young Women's Christian association.

With spring and summer comes the question as to what we shall do for amusement and recreation. In the consideration of these results should receive due attention. Every girl wants that something what will mean to her a good time—she also wants so far as possible, to live up to, or "make-up" to, her ideal of beauty. When gratifying th just desire she will attain as its result, the second. Why not combine them?

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

That health and beauty are synonymous is a generally accepted fact. Then for recreation why not choose those things which bring us health, therefore, beauty.

Nearly every one looks upon beauty as an extraneous something, that different people happen to have been favored with. This is a quality which is in a large measure a physical endowment, yet the average girl in casting about for methods of cultivating it entirely forgets to seek its acquirement through physical means.

All sorts of costly and complicated beauty preparations are resorted to—as though beauty might be slapped on in the same fashion that a poster is slapped on a billboard. For after all beaty, though poetical in its conception, has its roots in prosaic ground. The same factors which build up flesh, bones, nerves and muscles are the architects of beauty. Beauty is not apart from the body—but a part of it, and its builders are those processes which maintain bodily health; breathing, careful eating, drinking, sleeping, bathing and exercise.

For the present, let us consider exercise in the form of athletics, because it is an absolute necessity to the attainment of maintenance of good health. It would be well to choose one favorite and work for proficiency in that. Every one has some preference and the variety is large enough to satisfy any taste. Picking at random for instance there are among many others, rowing, swimming and diving, canoeing, tennis, basketball, hockey, golf, walking, running, riding. These are to be recommended not so much as competitive sports as a pleasant means of attaining health.

RECREATION AND EXERCISE.

The aim of all should be to make recreation of exercise. When a girl starts with the idea of really accomplishing something in that particular thing in which she is interested, the enjoyment and proficiency derived from it are well worth the time and effort required.

For team games, basket ball and hockey cannot be excelled. These are games that among other advantages are full of fun and snap from start to finish. There is no waiting for one's turn to play as in golf, for instance. From the moment the game starts the attention and the muscles of every player are wholesomely engaged throughout. One never knows what may happen next, and it is this uncertainty and consequent unexpected calls on one's resources and agility that account for the game's pleasure and profit. And when the game is all over the players a trifle breathless and disheveled, look nevertheless the wholesome and healthy type of girlhood which is well-nigh irresistibit.

For small numbers and probably more practicable for most girls is tennis. It exercises every muscle in the body and requires concentration if proficiency is to be acquired. Herein lies its great value, in that the action can never become mechanical. That the muscles are brought into play is evident by the fatique which extends to the fingertips after a morning's game. This game strengthens the ankle and leg muscles, the waist, neck, shoulder and arm muscles. The lungs come in too for their full share of exercise, for deep breathing is essential. Altogether it is one of the most vigorous forms of athletics and calls for splendid heart and long conditions.

EXERCISE OF SWIMMING.

Much might be said for swimming, and all those, who have enjoyed that exhilaration which comes after a plunge and a swim agree that nothing can quite compare with it. Unfortunately, however, Atlanta does not offer the facilities that it should for this beneficial and wholesome form of recreation.

Walking and running may be regarded as curious things to advocate by themselves as recreation but there is nothing more refreshing than a "jog" in the open air from which one returns in a delightful glow, the cobwebs cleared from the brain, and the blood pleasntly a-tingle.

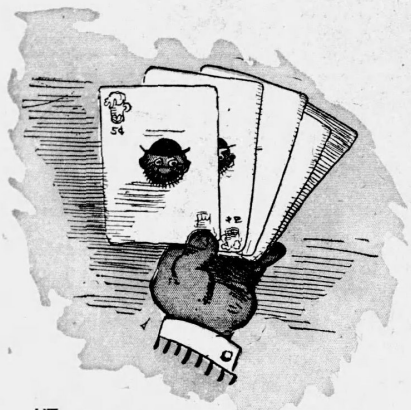

The day of the "sweet old-fashioned clinging vine" is passed and the girl of today has at her disposal if she will but take advantage of them a perfect physique, including a good digestion and strong lungs, a "brain that works," feet large enough to walk on and hands skilled in many ways, from the running of a typewriter or the hadling of a golf stick to the making of a pudding.
