"PAGLIACCI" AND "CAVALLERIA" TO CLOSE BRILLIANT SEASON

Tonight's Operas Will End Metropolitan Week

Caruso to Be Heard in Great "Sob Song" and Scotti in "The Prologue" Tonight at Auditorium

By Dudley Glass

This afternoon and night bring the close of Atlanta's fifth season of Metropolitan grand opera, an engagement made possible only by the indomitable spirit of Atlanta and by the faith of the members of the Atlanta Music Festival association and the subscribers to the annual guarantee fund. It is a tribute to the spirit of Atlanta and the south that five successive years of the best opera the world knows have been possible in a city of the size of Atlanta, and with never a deficit on the books. Atlanta opera has never been considered a "money-making" matter. What profits there have been have been devoted to the general fund for more good music, for paying for the magnificent organ in the auditorium and for such incidental expenses as the year must bring forth.

A number of changes have been made among the minor figures of the cast for the operas tonight. Rita Fornia is to sing Nedda in "Pagliacci" instead of Bella Alton, who was indisposed and did not come from New York and Miss Fornia's fine work in "Butterfly" gives promise of a splendid interpretation in the more attractive role. Marie Mattfeld will sing Mama Lucia in "Cavalleria" in the place of Lila Robeson, and Maria Duchene will be the Lola, instead of Sophie Brasiau, as announced on the program.

This afternoon brought us "Lohengrin," the only Wagner work on the week's program. It had been heard here once before, and indeed, was the first offering in the history of the Metropolitan in Atlanta. Five years ago it was sung with Olive Fremstad as the Elsa, Carl Jorn as the Lohengrin, Homer as the Ortrud and Goritz as the Freidrich. Saturday afternoon was given with but one of that cast, Goritz, but this season the Metropolitan had sent us Marie Rappold for the splendid role of Elsa, and Margarete Ober, the German contralto who has proved her talents in two appearances, is to be the Ortrud. The Lohengrin was Rudolf Berger, a German tenor as great a giant in stature as Jorn or the noted Slezak, and said to be the equal of any singer of Wagnerian roles. Herbert Witherspoon, an American basso who has had but slight opportunity in Atlanta but who is well known among New York opera habitues, was the Heinrich, and no less a personage than Dr. Alfred Hertz conducted.

"Lohengrin," with its stirring march songs, its beautiful arias and its superb "Wedding Chorus" is not too "high brow" for the masses. It is filled with beauty, not only in the divine orchestral score but in its vocal numbers, and has proved itself popular even among the ordinary opera-goers who know nothing of inner meaning. The prelude, the bridal chorus, the great duet of Ortrud and Telmarund, all these gave something well worth remembering, and it is likely that the strains of Wagner will echo in the ears of auditors after the most entrancing lyrics of the Italian operas are forgotten.

In the evening a program of unmixed delight awaits those who come for singing and melody and dramatic ac-

Colt From Country Does a Toe Dance On Alabama St.

It Happened at Whitehall Crossing, Where He Had a Large and Excited Audience

Just to show that Atlanta is nothing if not liberal, citizens and opera visitors were treated to a free circus this afternoon, with no admission price and plenty of excitement. Clarence was the whole show, and his performance was staged at the busy corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets at the luncheon hour.

Clarence is two years old, a light bay owned by a livery stable and is just from the country. He was attached to a flashy light buggy with two colored youths in the seat when the equipage came up Alabama street. Officer Mitchell, who bosses traffic there, raised his hand to stop Clarence from pacing straight through a trolley car, and that hurt Clarence's feelings. He stood on his hind legs, whirled around in a narrow circle of exceeding small diameter, and began to do stunts.

The crowd gave him all the room he needed. Trolley cars stopped, limousines backed up, express wagons changed their routes. There hadn't been so much excitement since the day a young bull put on an impromptu performance of "Carmen" in Peachtree street and charged through a show window.

Clarence decided to back up. He back in a circle and then came down the center. He stood on one foot and waved the other three. Officer Mitchell retired to the curb. Then Clarence folded in an attempt to climb a telephone pole, lay down on the Belgian blocks and took a rest.

After twenty minutes of increasing excitement, with the insurance rate on plate glass going up every second, the negro drivers persuaded Clarence to retire whence he had come—down Alabama street. But he had won his victory. He may have been sore and a bit bruised, but he had not crossed that scary-looking Whitehall street.

U. S. ORDERS STRIKERS TO SURRENDER ARMS

President Wilson Authorizes Secretary of War Garrison to Issue Proclamation

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Under authority of the president, Secretary of War Garrison today issued a proclamation calling upon the people in the strike district of Colorado to surrender all arms and ammunition to the United States army officers now in charge at the various troubled localities.

Secretary Garrison's proclamation, addressed to Major Holbrook at Trinidad, is in the most sweeping terms and demands disarming not only strikers but mine guards.

PROPERTY TO BE PROTECTED.

It was pointed out that the government assumes all responsibility for the protection of property which individuals, associations, firms and corporations hitherto have been guarding on their own account. Emphasis was laid on the fact that the sweeping terms of the proclamation calling all "not in military service of the United States" to surrender their arms applies only to localities where the United States troops are present.

As the trouble districts are widely scattered throughout Colorado, no army officer will be in supreme command of the military forces sent into the state. Secretary Garrison will issue his orders directly to the officers in command of the forces in the various localities.

CAVALRY ORDERED OUT.

Orders to quadruple the forces of federal cavalry went from the war department late last night. The entire Eleventh regiment from Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., and two roops of the Twelfth, from Fort Robinson, Neb., were ordered to proceed to the scene immediately.

Colonel James Lockett, of the Eleventh, will take supreme command of the situation.

Secretary Garrison issued the orders after a long conference with President Wilson. He said the step was taken not because trouble was expected, but because it had been demonstrated that the five troops of cavalry now in the coal fields did not provide enough men to cover the large territory involved. Reports from Colorado last night, the secretary added, were very favorable.

6,405 Persons Paid To Hear Farrar Sing Madama Butterfly

Every Seat Sold and Attendance Broke All Opera Records in Atlanta

The attendance at the auditorium last night was the largest of the season, and according to Assistant Treasurer Cecil Meyer, the greatest on record since grand opera was brought to Atlanta.

The paid admissions were 6,405, which exhausted every seat in the house.

There were empty seats beyond the night line, but these had been purchased and paid for and their occupants had preferred to stand at a point where they could see the stage.

ANOTHER BIG INCREASE IN THE BANK CLEARINGS

Five Days of This Week Gain $999,679 Over Six Days of Same Week of 1913

Atlanta bank clearings made another unusual record this week. Five days of the present week showed an aggregate increase of $999,679 over the entire six days of the corresponding week in 1913.

Today showed a gain of $652,439 over the corresponding date last year. Following are the figures:

Today	$2,761,183.75
Same day last year	2,078,744.10
Increase	$ 682,439.62
This week (five days)	$12,938,544.27
Six days last year	11,938,865.33
Increase	$ 999,679.94

HUERTA'S HAND SEEN IN ROJAS' REMOVAL FROM HIS CABINET

Ruiz, Who Succeeds as Minister of Foreign Affairs, Believed More Amenable to Orders of Dictator

WASHINGTON OFFICIALS SURPRISED BY CHANGES

Status of South American Diplomats' Negotiations for Peace Will Not Be Affected, It Is Said

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Licentiate Esteva Ruiz has been appointed minister of foreign affairs in the Huerta cabinet to succeed Portillo y Rojas, retired. The Spanish ambassador here was officially informed of the appointment by cable this morning. He is communicating the new appointment to the mediators.

Ruiz, the new foreign minister, was under secretary of Portillo. He had assisted in the mediation negotiations and did not affect the continued progress of the mediation plans. Ruiz had been referred to as the probable Huerta commissioner in case the mediators proposed a commission representing all parties to the controversy.

The Spanish ambassador, Mr. Riano, carried the cable announcement of Ruiz's appointment to the Argentine legation. The mediators were at once called together and a conference began with the Spanish ambassador taking part.

OFFICIALS SURPRISED.

The appointment of Ruiz and the retirement of Portillo, the latter having been made known last night, came as a complete surprise to officials here, particularly to the mediators and the Spanish ambassador, who had received no hint of an impending change. The mediators had carried on all their negotiations up to this time with Portillo and his retirement is regarded as unfavo-

DETECTIVE BURNS GRILLED BY DORSEY FOR OVER AN HOUR

In Presence of Judge Hill, Solicitor Secures Detailed Story of Detective's Work in Frank Case

NO FURTHER EVIDENCE IN HIS POSSESSION

Full Story of Solicitor's Long Cross-Examination Is Given Below—Lehon to Be Examined Later

Detective William J. Burns, on the witness stand for a special examination before Judge Ben H. Hill, was grilled by Solicitor General Dorsey about his connection with the Frank, or Mary Phagan murder case, for more than an hour Saturday morning.

The solicitor demonstrated by his questions that he has closely followed the movements of the detective both in Atlanta and the various other cities which he has visited since he became identified with the case.

The examination was made in order that the detective's testimony might be made a part of the record in the extraordinary motion for a new trial for Frank.

The solicitor brought out the fact that every bit of evidence which has been discovered by Burns or his agents is either now a part of the record or is in the hands of the attorneys for the defense.

The solicitor developed that Burns has no further evidence, either physical, documentary, or in the form of testimony of witnesses.

In answer to a question Burns stated that so far as he knew the defense has no witnesses, whose testimony has not been injected into the case.

He secured the admission that Burns has discovered proof of no crime committed by Conley.

CLAIMS HE WAS HAMPERED.

By cross-examination Attorney Reuben R. Arnold, of the defense, brought out the statement from the detective that he has been blocked and hampered in his work here in a surprising manner. On redirect examination Mr. Burns cited the Monteen Stover and the Conley incidents as "the most outrageous examples of the manner in which his work had been hampered."

When Mr. Arnold was asking the wit-

ANGRY CROWD DRIVES BURNS FROM MARIETTA

Detective, After Being Struck, Is Forced to Seek Refuge in Hotel

Detective William J. Burns was driven out of Marietta Friday evening, after a demonstration against him in which several hundred men, who had gathered about the polls of the city (an election being in progress), took part.

The detective, who was accompanied by Dan S. Lehon, one of his lieutenants, was not seriously injured, although he was struck in the face by one man, threatened with a knife by another, and verbally insulted and abused by the crowd.

Burns and Lehon were passing through Marietta, en route to Cewartown, in a big limousine, when a tire blew out. The two men left the car and walked to the Brumby garage on Church street. Burns was recognized by a crowd of people standing about. Some of them yelled: "There goes William Jackass Burns!"

Burns and Lehon kept on to the garage and the crowd followed, being rapidly augmented.

When they reached the garage, Robert Howell stepped up to the detective and said: "This is Burns, isn't it?"

The detective is said to have denied his identity, then Howell called him a "—— liar."

HOWELL STRIKES BURNS.

"I have promised to beat you if you ever came to Marietta, and here goes," Howell is said to have added, striking the detective first on one cheek and then on the other.

Mr. Burns in his version of the affair says that at this point another man tried to reach him with a knife, but was held by Lehon.

Howell kicked at the detective several times and Burns made a break, past the crowd, to the trolley line depot. He was headed off by a big crowd, and dodged into the Whitlock hotel.

The crowd increased every second in size, as Friday was election day for Cobb county and the streets of Marietta were thronged with people at the time.

Burns once tried to escape from the hotel by the back way, but the place was well surrounded, and he had to hasten back.

While Burns was hemmed in the hotel, Robert Howell spied the chauffeur who carried the two detectives to Marietta in the car. He is said to have walked up to the chauffeur and after cursing him ordered him out of the car. The chauffeur jumped to the ground, trembling, but was not further molested and after Howell left the vicinity, citizens told him to get in the car and make for Atlanta.

LEHON FINDS REFUGE.

In the meantime Lehon, separated from his chief, found shelter and protection in the office of Deputy Sheriff J. M. Hicks. The crowd in front of the hotel shouted angrily at Burns, and finally Mayor J. E. Dobbs, Judge Newt Morris, former judge of the superior court of the Cherokee circuit, and Dr. J. H. Patton, a well known minister, made short talks to the crowd urging no violence and begging them to disperse.

The rumor had gone the rounds in Marietta that the detective had been driven from Atlanta, and the whole of the crowd was "Burns can't stay in Cobb county."

Finally Judge Morris asked the crowd if it would be satisfied should Burns leave immediately, not to return. The members agreed not to harm him, on this condition.

T. M. Brumby, a well known citizen, brought his car around, and Burns stepped from the hotel. He got into the car and it dashed away.

Besides Mr. Brumby, Judge Morris accompanied the detective to the city limits.

Lehon, after remaining for another half hour under the protection of the deputy sheriff, was furnished with an automobile and he joined his chief at the Piedmont hotel.

No members of the crowd have been arrested.

Marietta is the birthplace of little Mary Phagan, and the feeling there about her murder is intense.

Burns Says Attack Was Not Provoked

In his apartments at the Piedmont hotel Saturday morning Mr. Burns commented on the Marietta episode as follows:

"It was the most outrageous demonstration I've ever known. Neither Mr. Lehon nor myself did or said anything to provoke it. I am confident that the 500 odd men and boys who participated in this demonstration did not represent the better element of Marietta and Cobb county citizenry.

"Mr. Lehon and I were en route to Cedartown to keep an engagement. My automobile in which we were traveling broke down at Marietta and Mr. Lehon and I walked over to the garage to get mechanical assistance. On our arrival there the crowd formed. It was led by a man named Howell, who cursed and threatened us. One man whose name I did not learn, held an open knife in his hand and was threatening to cut my throat when Mr. Lehon took hold of him and held him.

"Howell, backed up by the crowd, advanced on me and struck me, all the while uttering vile and insulting language. As the crowd became more threatening I walked up the street to the Whitlock house, in which I remained for more than an hour until Judge Morris and a deputy sheriff persuaded those taking part in the demonstration to allow me to leave in an automobile.

"I shall not allow this outrageous incident to deter me in the least from completing my work in the Frank case, and I believe the fair-minded people of Georgia and the south will condemn the uncalled for attack."

J. E. Duffy, one of the witnesses quoted by the defense in the extraordinary motion, was placed under arrest Friday evening by Newt Garner, an attache of the solicitor's office. Judge Hill on Saturday morning had issued an attachment for Duffy, who had refused to talk with the solicitor's assistants.

DEMONSTRATION TODAY BY THE SUFFRAGISTS

Open-Air Rally on Steps of State Capitol at 5 o'Clock This Afternoon

Woman's 1914 declaration of independence will be read and resolutions will be passed making woman's suffrage a national issue, at the demonstration of local suffragists to be held at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon on the steps of the state capitol as a part of the rallies that are being held today in every large city in the United States.

The meeting will be called to order by the bugle blast, with representatives from each of the three local organizations present. It is expected that nearly a thousand men and women will attend.

Following the suffrage faith song, Lucien Lamar Knight, state compiler of records, will make an address. Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the state suffrage organization, will read woman's 1914 declaration of independence.

Miss Ida May Blount will speak and Dr. Fred Line, pastor of the Universalist church, will deliver an address. Other speakers are Jerome Jones, editor the Journal of Labor, and Dr. A. B. Holderby. The latter will read resolutions sent out by the national woman's suffrage association, demanding the ballot for women, declaring the suffrage a national and not a local issue, and calling on congress to pass a measure giving women of the country the franchise.

A closing prayer will be led by Dr. Holderby. He will act as secretary of the mass meeting, Albert Gerard Thiers will lead the singing and Mrs. F. S. Whiteside will preside.

Men March in Parade With Women in Boston

(By Associated Press.)

BOSTON, May 2—Seven thousand persons including several hundred men, marched in the women suffrage parade here today. Among the visiting suffragists in the line of march were Mrs. Eernard Shaw and Miss Lena Ashwell, of England, and Mrs. Moritz Barth, representing the suffrage state of Colorado.

Officials of the state anti-suffrage society distributed thousands of red roses to be worn by their sympathizers during the progress of the parade.

Short Parade Is Held By Philadelphia Women

(By Associated Press.)

PHILADELPHIA, May 2.—Local suffragists planned a short parade through the central part of the city and a mass meeting in Washington square as their part in the nation-wide demonstration today in the interest of votes for women. Several thousand women and scores of men took part in the parade. The suffragists and their supporters wore daffodils while "anti-Suffragists" showed their disapproval of the movement by wearing red roses.

Motor Car Parade Is Feature at Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, May 2.—Kansas City's demonstration for woman suffrage took place today. Its climax was reached when a parade of 100 motor cars carrying adherents of the cause traversed the downtown district and the residence section.

The parade was preceded by a motor-cycle escort of police and led by the "Old Kansas Guard," a company of men who were foremost in obtaining suffrage for Kansas.

Women in Pittsburg Plan Big Demonstration

PITTSBURG, May 2—A mammoth parade of suffragists, and a mass meeting to be held late this afternoon is the first demonstration of the suffrage movement of any importance made in this city. Thirty prominent men and women will discuss the suffrage movement from various angles and more than 5,000 persons are expected to be in the procession.

There is more Catarrh in this section of this country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

THEATERS

(Criticisms of initial performances at the local theaters are written by members of The Journal staff. All other matter appearing in this column is furnished by the theater managements.)

Next week's bill at the Forsyth promises to be an extraordinarily clever entertainment. Clark and Bergman in Jesse L. Lasky's newest play, "The Trained Nurses," will be the headline feature. It is unquestionably the biggest musical comedy success vaudeville has offered this season. The musical numbers include tremendous hits that have never been heard here. A musical treat will be the Five Musical Gormans, featuring Katherine Gorman, the eminent cornetist. Fred Warren and Effie Conley, "some boy and some girl," will be seen in a classy vaudeville mixture of dancing and piano playing. There are four other acts, all of the guaranteed variety to please.

The coterie of entrancing feminine loveliness in the Lucille LaVerne company will shine resplendently in decolete of the latest cut and coiffures with the latest capers in next week's production at the Lyric. It is "The Heir to the Hoorah," and it's description as a melodramatic farce classes it as an out of the ordinary play. The scenes are all laid in the west, but in sartorial respects the action carries to Paris and return. One thrilling situation piles on another and there are laughs galore to offset the thrills and tears. Tonight's will be the last performance of "Ann Boyd," the play by the Georgia author, Will N. Harben, that has been pleasing the crowds at the Lyric all this week. Those who have not seen "Ann Boyd" will do well to take this last opportunity. It is a real treat.

Without question the prolent bill of Junior Keith vaudeville at the Grand is the best thus far presented and those that miss seeing it are going to miss the best popular priced vaudeville show ever seen in Atlanta.

Three performances today at 2:30, 7:30 and 9, will be given.

The big bit of the show is Paul Peaching & Co., in a novel musical act called "Schneider's Musical Garden," and almost as big favorites are Charles and Anna Glocker in a sensational water juggling act; Sheppard and Ashton, Rathskeller Boys, in songs and pianologue; Murray's Pets, one of the best group of trained dogs ever seen in Atlanta, and Ray Randall, novel ventriloquist. "Not Guilty," a feature picture interesting at all times, completes the program.

MASS MEETING FOR BONDS IN FOURTH WARD TONIGHT

Mayor Woodward, Dr. Summerall, L. D. Hicks and Others Will Speak

At a mass meeting Saturday night for the Greater Grady bond issue, Mayor James G. Woodward will be the principal speaker. The meeting will be held at 8 o'clock in the North avenue school, in the Fourth ward.

L. D. Hicks, secretary of the Fourth ward committee, has arranged for a brass band, and a large, enthusiastic crowd is expected. The other speakers will be Councilman Claude L. Ashley, Coroner Paul Donehoo, Dr. W. B. Summerall, superintendent of the Grady hospital; Wilmer L. Moore, former president of the chamber of commerce, and Mr. Hicks.

With only three more days left before the bond election, the campaign for a greater Grady hospital is now drawing to a close. In addition to the indorsements of nearly every labor organization in the city already received, the Atlanta Garment Workers, an organization composed largely of women, sent in their indorsement Friday.

Dr. W. B. Summerall will emphasize the necessity for enlarged facilities at Grady at once, because of the fact that sickness is increasing over the city as the weather grows warmer and the hospital will have to turn away more and more patients every day unless increased facilities for caring for them are provided.

Suicide Is Buried

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 2.—Lawrence Altman, the young man from Jacksonville, who shot himself in the forehead with a revolver a few nights ago, died today. He was buried here this afternoon.

HUSBAND SPENT EVERYTHING

In an Effort to Bring Wife's Troubles to End, and Finally Succeeds

Myra, Ky.—Mrs. Sarah Branham, of this town, gives out the following statement for publication: "I am 37 years of age, and suffered untold agony with womanly troubles for 11 years. For 3 years, I was all run down, and was told that I could not live. My husband spent everything he had, but I got only temporary relief.

A merchant recommended Cardui, the woman's tonic, to my husband, and he got me 5 bottles at one time. I began taking it, and before the first bottle was gone, I began to feel better.

I took all of the 5 bottles, and I am today as sound and well as any woman, and fat and hearty."

Such testimony as the above, which is given unsolicited, speaks for itself. Can't you see, lady reader, that you are doing yourself, your family, your friends, an injustice by not, at least, trying Cardui, if you suffer from any of the many ailments so common to women?

Cardui is composed of pure, harmless, vegetable ingredients, which act in a gentle, natural way on the weakened womanly organs, helping build them back to permanent strength and health.

Cardui has helped thousands of other women. Why not you?

Ask your druggist. He knows about Cardui.—(Advt.)

POLICE START CRUSADE ON NOISE-MAKING AUTOS

Arrest 18-Year-Old Boy for Driving Motor With Muffler Wide Open

The first of a series of arrests which the police are going to make to stop the muffler cut-out nuisance before Shriners' week was made late Friday afternoon at Peachtree street and Ponce de Leon avenue, when Officers Anderson nabbed Tom Golden, eighteen years old, 15 Clifford street, for driving his motorcycle with the muffler wide open.

Golden will be arraigned before Recorder Broyles Saturday. Chief Beavers says that autoists and motorcyclists had better take notice that any other infractions of the ordinance against open mufflers in the city will result in arrest.

ORDINARY SEAMAN IS COMMENDED FOR BRAVERY

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Secretary Daniels today wrote a letter of commendation to George G. Harker, ordinary seaman aboard the Panther, at Key West, Fla., for risking his life in June, 1913, and from that vessel April 30 last, into a strong flood tide in an attempt to rescue a drowning civilian.

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W, Notre Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by ray or sight.

In the Interest of Fair Play

The undersigned, being the immediate neighbors of Mr. L. O. Wright, indignantly resent certain rumors that are being circulated by W. M. Mayo or his deputies. They have persisted in saying that Mr. Wright was going to withdraw from the race for Sheriff, and that he was running in the interest of Sheriff Mangum, notwithstanding Mr. Wright's denial, and the denial of his deputies, his friends, and everyone connected with his campaign.

Now we brand as false all these rumors, and charge Captain Mayo or his deputies with circulating these rumors when they know them to be false. We do not believe the people of this county will support any man, or set of men, for the responsible office of Sheriff, who are guilty of such deliberate misrepresentation. WE KNOW THAT MR. WRIGHT IS A HIGH-TONED GENTLEMAN, WORTHY OF ANY MAN'S BALLOT, AND IS RUNNING HIS RACE STRICTLY ON A HIGH PLANE, AND IN THE INTEREST OF NO OTHER CANDIDATE. THEREFORE, WE CHALLENGE CAPTAIN MAYO AND HIS DEPUTIES TO PROVE ANYTHING TO THE CONTRARY.

We therefore appeal to the fair minded people of this county to put their stamp of disapproval on such methods by voting for L. O. Wright for Sheriff on May 5th.

SOLICITOR DORSEY KEEPS BURNS ON GRILL FOR AN HOUR

ase about the manner in which his work had been hampered. Judge Hill interrupted with this statement: "I am not going to allow this witness to answer any question, which reflects upon the verdict of the jury or the decision of the supreme court of Georgia."

Dan S. Lehon, a Burns agent, was subpoenaed to appear before Judge Hill but his examination was deferred until Monday.

A detailed report of the examination of Detective Burns follows:

Mr. Burns arrived in court about five minutes late. He was accompanied by Attorney Reuben R. Arnold of the Frank case.

Mr. Arnold addressed the court.

"We shall ask, your honor, that this proceeding be limited in the regular form prescribed by the code—in other words that the questions be submitted in writing."

Judge Hill overruled the motion. Mr. Burns was directed to take the stand, Doctor Dorsey swore him, Mr. Burns standing. The solicitor questioned him.

"Are you employed to investigate the case of Mary Phagan, are you not?" "Yes."

Mr. Arnold addressed the court.

"I object to this line of questioning. It is not in the regular form prescribed by the code—in other words that the questions be submitted in writing."

Judge Hill overruled the motion. Mr. Burns was directed to take the stand, Doctor Dorsey swore him, Mr. Burns standing. The solicitor questioned him.

"Are you employed to investigate the case of Mary Phagan, are you not?" "Yes, I am."

"By whom?" "I was first employed by Leonard and Herbert Haas."

"Attorneys for Frank?" "Yes."

"How are you for BURNS PAY.

"You have been paid some money, and some more is still due you?" "Yes."

"Is your employment on your fees?" "No."

"Is there a contract in writing, for your services?" "Yes."

"What is the difference in the event Frank is liberated through your efforts?" "No difference."

"You have seen Frank in the jail and conversed with him frequently?" "Yes."

"After you had talked with him a short time, you were quoted in the press as saying he was innocent, in effect. Were you quoted correctly?" "Yes."

"Do you profess to be able by talking to a man a short while to tell whether he is a pervert?" "I profess to tell that by talking to him I can form a definite conclusion."

"Can you also tell that a man is not a pervert?" (Objection by Mr. Arnold overruled.) "I am somewhat of a student of human nature. As I worked with criminal classes, I frequently come in contact with them."

"Then your opinion in the matter is trustworthy and accurate?" "I do."

"Did you have any conversation with Jim Conley before you came to the conclusion Frank is innocent?" "No."

"CONLEY A PERVERT?"

"Then in his case you substituted a less trustworthy method?"

"After reading the letters that Conley wrote and after examining the garments of Mary Phagan, I satisfied definitely that Conley is a pervert."

"How do you know he wrote the letters?" "I compared them with the so-called murder notes."

"Are you a handwriting expert, too?" "No, but there are so many peculiar characteristics, there is no mistaking the letters."

"What is your definition of a pervert as applied to Conley?" "Well, there are different types. I would say that Conley is a natural pervert who satisfies his sexual passions in an unnatural manner."

At this point Solicitor Dorsey saw Detective Dan Lehon, one of Mr. Burns' assistants in the court room, and asked that he be excluded. He was.

"What sort of a pervert do you say Conley is?" "I would say he is a fiend in general."

"What do you mean by that?" "A man who would commit murder to satisfy himself in an unusual way. There are various phases of perversion exhibited by mutilating the body of the victim, or merely by mutilating the clothing."

"Is not perverted the crime of civilization and not of savagery?" "It is the crime of both."

"A pervert would not necessarily be an ignorant man?" "No, but he might be."

"HOM'S PART IN CASE.

Mr. Burns, after reading those letters you say Conley wrote, in what way could you see a pervert?" "In unusual way."

"Mr. Burns, Mr. Smith, Conley's counsel, now has an opportunity to see Conley. Why did you not avail yourself of this privilege?" "Because of the restrictions thrown around it."

"Have you a man named Bob Adams in the employ of your agency?" "I have a man named Adams. I don't know whether his first name is Bob."

"Have you a man named W. W. Rogers, known as Snoot Rogers?" "Yes."

"Have you a man named Charles Isom?" "No."

"Didn't Charles Isom go to Chicago with you to assist in your interview with the negro, Aaron Allen?" "He did not."

"Didn't you have Allen in your charge for three days and bring Isom to Chicago, to identify him?" "No."

"Isom did come to Chicago to see Allen, didn't he?" "Yes."

"How did he happen to come there to see Allen? Who sent him?" "I received a telegram from Herbert Haas, who said Isom was coming to Chicago and could get the truth out of Allen."

"Jake Jacobs was there to see Allen, too, wasn't he?" "Yes."

"Have you got a man named O'Neal working for you?" "Yes."

CAME WITH O'NEAL.

"This man O'Neal went to Indianapolis after Allen and brought him back to you in Chicago while he was sick, didn't he, Mr. Burns?" "I don't know anything about him having been sick; but he came to Chicago with O'Neal."

"Hadn't you interviewed Allen two or three times before Isom came to Chicago, and hadn't you obtained an affidavit from him?" "Yes, I had talked to him two or three times and had obtained a statement from him."

"On the train returning from Chicago, Mr. Burns, didn't you state to Isom that you had got the affidavit you wanted from Allen?" "No."

"Didn't Isom report to you?" "No, I asked him what he got from Allen. He told me nothing much; that he, Allen, had been placed in a cell with Newt Lee at police headquarters in Atlanta and that Newt Lee had told him, Allen, that he, Newt Lee, was entirely innocent and that a white man had been put in a cell with Lee and had told Lee he had better keep his mouth shut or he would get out all in bad."

"Mr. Stiles Hopkins was in Chicago, wasn't he?" "Yes, he took Allen's affidavit."

"What time was Jake Jacobs, the Decatur street pawnbroker, there?" "They were all there about the same time."

"Jake Jacobs is the man who swears to the character of Maude Carter, isn't he?" "I don't know."

"Mr. Burns, what did you say to Allen? Didn't you curse and abuse him?" "I did not."

LEFT NO MONEY ON TABLE.

"Mr. Burns, tell us about the stack of money left on the table in your main office while Allen was there and while the rest of you withdrew from the room?" "No such thing happened."

"Did you pay Allen anything?" "No."

"Didn't you authorize O'Neal to go to Indianapolis and tell Allen that you wanted him to do some work for you in an effort to catch a negro?" "No."

"What authority did you have for taking Allen to Chicago and detaining him there?" "I never took him to Chicago, and I never detained him there."

"Have you a negro detective in your employ?"

PAID ISOM NOTHING.

"Do you deny that Isom was paid $100 for his trip to Chicago?" "I never paid him anything."

"Have you a man in your employ named Carlton C. Tedder?" "I have not employed such a man."

"Have you employed, for some of your agents, isn't he?" "I think he has been employed by Mr. Lehon."

"You have conferred with Tedder, haven't you?" "Yes."

"What sort of work did you have him doing? Working on the Conley case?" "No."

"Didn't you just say you were employed to work on the Frank case? If so, why did you have Tedder working on the Conley case?" "I was employed to work on both cases."

"Why did you put Tedder on the Conley case?" "I never employed Tedder. I do not know who put arrangements Lehon had with him."

"Isn't Lehon one of your lieutenants, and didn't he make daily reports to you?" "Lehon doesn't always report to me."

"Lehon is in charge of your investigations, isn't he, and receives reports concerning all the courts investigating other tangles, isn't he?" "Yes."

DON'T GET ALL REPORTS.

"Doesn't he make written reports to you?" "Not always."

"Then he reports verbally to you?" "Sometimes."

"Eventually and ultimately, do you get all the reports from your men in every case?" "No."

"How do you dispose of these reports?" "Mr. Sears, the local manager, has charge of that; and our man House gets some of the reports."

"Tell the court here why it is you have been making special trips, traveling all over the country, Chicago, Kansas City, and other places, investigating various angles of the case, though you were specially employed to direct the investigation here, and still you don't get all reports either verbally or in writing." "I do not get them."

"Are matters reported to Frank's counsel through you? I want to know." "No."

"Do you report everything to Frank's counsel?" "No."

"Who does?" "Lehon and others."

"Why do you report to these men?" "So they will know what is going on in the case."

"When you conferred with Attorney Smith, Conley's lawyer, you knew Tedder was reporting to Smith, didn't you?" "Yes."

INQUIRED ABOUT TEDDER.

"At that time didn't you ask Smith if Tedder could be trusted implicitly?" "Yes."

"Why did you ask that question?" "I wished to know if Tedder was trustworthy."

"Did you direct your activities toward the conviction of Conley and the demonstration of Frank as an innocent man?" "No, not if Conley was innocent."

"When did you first know of the Ragsdale matter?" "Mr. Lehon first spoke to me about it."

"What did he say?" "He said there was a negro who claimed to have been in an alley—and I stopped him right there. I didn't want to hear any more about negroes in alleys."

"Then you had been surfeited with that?" "I had."

"Who was the man in Chicago who claimed to have picked up a pocketbook and a pencil in the alley?" "I forget the man's name."

"Didn't you take an affidavit from him?" "No."

"Who did?" "Mr. Haas, I think."

"Is that affidavit in the city?" "I think it is."

"How many of these alley propositions did you hear of?" "Three or four hundred, I think."

DID NOT FIND MAN.

"Did you find in Chicago a man who claimed to have been in the alley and who claimed to have picked up a purse and a pencil and a memorandum?" "I did not find him."

"Who are some of the three or four hundred people who claimed to have been in the alley?" "The operatives kept telling me of them."

"Why, for instance?" "Mr. Lehon and I were continually joking about the number of people who claimed to have been in the alley."

"Did you dig up a man in Chicago?" "Yes."

"Did you see the memorandum?" "Yes, and I doubted that the memorandum was in Conley's handwriting."

"Did you suppose Conley was writing it in?" "I think it was in the man's own writing."

"Is that the purse you spoke about?" "I don't remember speaking about it."

"Have you in your safe a purse that was claimed to have been found in the alley?" "No."

"You were credited by stories in the newspapers of Cleveland with having two of the guilty man in this case was at large. Is that report correct?" "No." The newspapers have often misquoted me."

"Tobie is your man in Chicago, isn't he?" "Yes."

"He was employed down here in this case, wasn't he?" "I understand by hearsay that he was."

SAYS FELDER HIRED TOBIE.

"Who employed him?" "I understand Tom Felder did."

"Did Tobie ever report on the case to you?" "No."

"Did you ever hear of what Tobie found?" "Only through the newspapers."

"When did the Ragsdale matter first come to your attention?" "A week or ten days before he made the affidavit."

"Who else was present when Lehon brought it to your attention?" "Possibly Sears."

"Charley Sears?" "Yes."

"When did you next hear of it?" "Lehon came in and said the character of the preacher has been sustained—No, wait a minute; I did hear from Lehon that way, but I told him the preacher was corroborated and I told him then I didn't want to have anything to do with it and who had that much knowledge and withheld it so long. Lehon later came in and told me the man's character had been sustained. I told him I would have nothing to do with it and advised him to take the matter to the attorneys and let them investigate it and do what they wanted to with it."

"When was that?" "Two or three days before the affidavit was made."

"Did you ever talk with Arthur Thurman?" "No."

KNOWS OF NO MONEY PAID.

"Did you know that Messrs. Arnold and Rosser had talked about it?" "I don't remember it."

"Do you know if any money was paid to Ragsdale?" "I do not."

"To Barber?" "I do not."

"To C. Ed Smith?" "No."

"To Arthur Thurman?" "No."

"Would you have known, or would the money have been paid in such a way you wouldn't know?" "If any of my men did such a thing, he violated all the rules of the agency."

"You are more familiar with the Anna Maud Carter proposition than with the Ragsdale incident, are you not?" "Yes."

"Then you are the discoverer of that, are you not?" "I wouldn't say that."

"Who deserves the credit for it?" "I first saw her in the office of Attorney Haas."

"Did you ever come in contact with Jinnie Wrenn?" "Yes, I saw two Wrenns."

"Where and how did you happen to meet them?" "I saw them while they were working with Burke."

"Have you ever been to see Frank with Burke?" "No, never."

"Did you ever see Dr. George Wrenn in the Tower?" "No."

"What Burns man handled this Wrenn matter?" "I don't know that I know of."

"When did you see Wrenn?" "He came to my office when I sent for him to get some one who was familiar with the letters."

"Was that Dr. Wrenn?" "I don't know. It was a man about 35 or 36 years old."

"He is the man who furnished you with the translation of these letters?" "He translated them for me, then Leonard Haas translated them."

"When did you tell counsel for Frank about the notes?" "Two of them, Messrs. Leonard and Herbert Haas, were present when I got them."

"How long before the first hearing of the preliminary motion was that?" "I don't know."

"When was it?" "Wrenn interpreted the notes only four or five days ago."

"How long did you have them in your possession before they were interpreted?" "Two or three days."

"Who gave them to you?" "C. W. Burke."

"Then Burke deserves the credit for this?" "Yes."

WHAT BURNS HAS DONE.

"Tell us of one thing you have done in the—how long is it? Sixty days, isn't that right?—you have been at work on this case." "Well, I have read the brief of evidence very carefully. I went over the factory. I interviewed the witnesses there. I came to your office and examined the garments of the girl; and I made a report to the attorneys that they didn't need any more evidence than was in the case records."

"There were over 100 state's witnesses. How many of them have you examined?" "I don't know."

"Didn't you read the record?" "I read the brief."

"Name some of the witnesses you have examined?" "Schiff, Darling, Lemmie Quinn, Holloway, Frank himself—I don't remember the others."

"Did you employ Boots Rogers to work for you in this case?" "Yes."

"Have you ever asked Rogers to change his testimony?" "No."

"Did you interview Monteen Stover?" "I tried to."

"Have you seen Newt Lee?" "No."

"Have you talk with Starnes and Campbell?" "No."

"Did you try to see the other witness, Lee Ford?" "No."

"Did you try twice to see Monteen Stover?" "Yes."

WANTED PARENTS' PERMISSION.

"Tell us about the first time." "That was in the office of Attorney Boorstein. I told Leonard Haas I would like to talk to the girl. He told me I could, but specifically I didn't want to talk to her with her permission or her parents'. He told Boorstein the same thing. Later Haas phoned me she and her parents were in Boorstein's office. I went immediately over there. As I reached the door Boorstein said 'Come in.' Boorstein and the girl jumped up and went out of the door with her mother after her. I told him to let her alone, that I didn't want to talk to her if she didn't want to talk to me."

"Did you make arrangements with anybody to try to hold her?" "No."

"Did you have the stenographer try to catch her?" "No, I did not."

"Did you talk to Mr. Edmondson, her stepfather, then?" "Yes."

"Have you talked to Dr. Claude Smith, who examined the blood stains on the second floor?" "No."

"Have you talked to either of the doctors employed by the defense to make an examination of the blood there?" "No."

TALKED TO WITNESSES.

"Did you pay any attention to that phase of the case?" "Why, of course I did. I talked to the witnesses."

"Did you talk to Mel Stanford?" "No."

"Did you talk to Barrett?" "No."

"Did Frank tell who was with him when he got down on his knees and examined the blood spots?" "I have never heard of such an incident."

"Did you talk to Lee?" "No."

"Did you ever examine the blood spots found where Conley was sitting?" "I talked with McWorth and Whitfield about them and they showed me where they were chipped up."

"Whitfield works for you, doesn't he?" "I think he does."

"What became of these chips?" "They were turned over to the Pinkertons and thrown away, I understand."

"Are you sure that they were chipped up?" "Yes."

"You mean there on the first floor they were chipped up?" "Yes."

"You understand I don't mean the second floor. I mean the first floor. That's what I mean. McWorth told me about finding the spots and showed me where they were chipped up."

"McWorth is now employed as assistant superintendent of your agency, is he not?" "Yes."

"To handle all matters?" "Yes."

"Did he tell you about the club?" "Yes."

"Have you seen it?" "Yes."

HAS SEEN BLOOD STAINS.

"Have you seen the blood stains on it?" "Yes."

"Are you as capable of looking at spots and telling whether they are blood spots as you are of looking at a man and telling whether he is asperyer?" "I am more capable of discerning perverts."

"What is this business you are burying out of town on?" "I am answering a court subpena in Oklahoma."

"What case?" "The case of H. H. Tucker."

"What court?" "The federal court. The last work I did out there was to investigate the Indian territory—"

Mr. Dorsey interrupted. "I merely asked what court. What have you due to arrive there?" "I should have been there day before yesterday."

"Are you going directly there?" "Yes."

"When will you come back here?" "In about ten days."

"Have you any evidence you have not reported to the attorneys for the defense?" "No."

"Have you had last report?" "I have kept reporting developments daily."

"HAS MADE FINAL REPORT.

"When you were in my office you spoke of a final report. Have you made that?" "Yes, but it is not in written form."

"Will it be made public?" "I have advised that it be not."

"Why?" "It looks as if every time a witness is found he is bamboozled or turned down. Where I can, it is my advice that as soon as a witness of importance is found, he be sent out of town."

"Did you direct that course in the Carter case?" "I suggested it."

"Sent her out of town?" "Mr. Lehon, I think."

"Where did he send her?"

Burns demurred to answering the question, and appealed to the court. Judge Hill instructed him to answer.

"To New Orleans," said Burns.

SENT WITNESS AWAY.

"After she made her affidavit in this case she left Atlanta a witness. You mean to tell the court you advised and had her sent out of its jurisdiction?" "Yes, I suggested and advised she be sent away."

"At what place in New Orleans is she?" "I don't know."

"Isn't she at 314 Lower Line?" "I don't know."

"Do you know anything about 314 Lower Line?" "No."

"Won't she working for you or your agency there?" "No."

"Are you sure of that?" "Yes."

"Is she working for any of your agents or representatives?" "No."

"What did you pay Annie Maude Carter?" "Nothing."

"Don't you know that, if anything, was paid her?" "No."

"Was any money given her by Dr. Wrenn for her notes and evidence?" "I don't know."

"Who handled the Carter woman last before it took hold of her?" "The Messrs. Haas."

"What was it you told the Carter woman that induced her to come to you about her daughter?" "I told her I would encourage for her to go to see her daughter."

"Did you do it?" "No, she never came back."

"Who attended to the details of getting Annie Carter out of town?" "I think Dan Lehon and Mr. Lehon."

NO OTHER EVIDENCE.

"Mr. Burns, have you in your possession or within your knowledge any evidence of a physical nature, not already before the court, tending to expose the murderer of Mary Phagan?" "No."

"Have you any documentary evidence in your possession or within your knowledge not already before the court, tending to expose the murderer of Mary Phagan?" "No."

"Mr. Burns, I want to put those questions to you: Have you now in your possession or within your knowledge, any physical evidence not already before the court, that would assist the defense which tends to expose the murderer of Mary Phagan?" "No."

"Have you knowledge of any witnesses or other evidence tending to expose the murderer of Mary Phagan which you have not already turned over to the lawyers for the defense?" "No."

"When did you make your full and detailed report to the lawyers for the defense?" "I am reporting every day."

"When did you make your last report?" "Probably a day or two ago."

"Be more specific." "I can't. I don't recollect."

"When did you talk last to the lawyers for the defense?" "This morning."

"You talked to them last night and this morning?" "Yes."

"Have you examined and read a copy of the defense's motion and amendments in this case?" "No."

"Do you know of any evidence or issue not already in the hands of these men and already reported to the court?" "No."

ARNOLD QUESTIONS BURNS.

Here Mr. Dorsey finished his cross-examination and Attorney Reuben R. Arnold, for the defense, began to question Mr. Burns.

"Mr. Burns," began Mr. Arnold, "have you found it difficult on account of the attitude of the public to make an investigation in this case?" "Extremely so."

"Have you in all of your experience ever encountered more stubborn and unreasonable prejudice?" "I most certainly have not."

"Have you in all your experience ever found people so unwilling to tell even the simple truth?" "I never have."

"Have you not found it difficult to hold a man's evidence after you have obtained it?" "I have."

"Did you ever know of anything more outrageous than the Albert McKnight case?" "I never did. Before going to the Frank witness who furnished an affidavit to the state recanting his repudiation of his trial testimony, while locked up in a cell at police station.) "I have not."

"You read Albert McKnight's affidavit?" "Yes."

"You went to Albert McKnight after he gave the defense this affidavit?" "Yes."

"What did he tell you?" "He told me the evidence he gave on the stand was untrue. That he had been induced to give this evidence by a man named Craven."

READ CONLEY'S EVIDENCE.

"Did you read Jim Conley's evidence?" "Yes."

"Have you ever heard of a court, jury or community accepting such an explanation for such a crime?" "I have not."

"From your investigation who do you think is guilty of the murder of Mary Phagan?" "Unquestionably Jim Conley."

Attorney Arnold here asked Mr. Burns to read certain trial testimony relating to Conley's changing of his statements. The detective replied that he could not.

Judge Hill then interrupted, telling Attorney Arnold he would have to discontinue that line of questioning.

"It seems to me, your honor, "said Attorney Arnold, that you are giving the solicitor a wider latitude in his questions than you are giving me."

"I would suggest that the questions which reflect on the jury's verdict or the ruling by the supreme court," replied Judge Hill.

Attorney Arnold resumed his questioning of Burns. "Mr. Burns, did you ever hear of Annie Maude Carter?"

"Where is he held?" "He's kept locked up in jail."

"Is he allowed to talk to him?" "No."

"Why didn't you embrace the privilege offered you by W. M. Smith, Conley's lawyer, to talk to him?" "Because of Smith's instructions."

"What were those terms?" "Why, Smith demanded that he be present and a reporter be there."

"Under such circumstances could you get any information out of Conley?" "I didn't think so."

"You arrived at your conclusion that Conley was a pervert from the character of the letters he wrote to Annie Maude Carter and the manner in which the girl's clothing was mutilated, didn't you?" "Yes."

"Were you ever WERE VILE.

"What were the contents of those letters?" "Why, they were very vile. They showed that he was filled to overflowing with lust. I never saw an instance more filled with that character of perversion."

"Mr. Burns, did you ever attempt to get anything in this case except the truth?" "No."

"Did you ever by the offer of bribes, intimidation or coercion or any other improper means seek to suppress evidence from witnesses?" "I assuredly not."

"Were you besieged by people proffering absurd things as evidence?" "Yes, by hundreds of them."

"And you found it difficult to estimate the motives actuating them?" "I did."

"And a further question. Mr. Arnold ended his examination. Solicitor Dorsey took up a redirect examination of Detective Burns.

The solicitor said: "Mr. Burns, what instances can you cite where obstacles were placed in the way of the defense which tended to expose the murderer of Mary Phagan?" "None."

"Have you been in any instance where you have not already turned over to the lawyers for the defense?" "No."

"Why did you consider it outrageous for private individuals to refuse to subpena a cross-examination by four or five different men who were in the pay of a convict or his friends?" "I supposed the object of everyone was to bring out the real facts and to find the murderer."

"What caused you to change your supposition?" "The attitude of many persons, including one lawyer."

REFERS TO SOLICITOR.

"What lawyers do you refer to?" "Why, solicitor, to close the case with me."

"When you told me," quickly answered the solicitor, "you thought Frank innocent, and after you told me you would report in a few days and that your report would state Frank was innocent and Conley was guilty."

"Yes," said Burns. "You told me if that was true, there was no use in discussing the case further."

The solicitor said: "But you made an appointment with me. You told me I could have the opportunity to convince you of Frank's guilt. I told you that you were attacking a verdict of the court, and that if you wished I would give you an opportunity to convince me of Frank's innocence."

"The solicitor's attitude led me to think he would not discuss the case with an open mind," Burns explained to the court.

Dorsey asked him to give other instances where he had been hampered in his investigation, and Burns replied that he had been told by lawyers for the defense that certain witnesses were impossible to get at.

"Who gave you such advice?" "Both Mr. Leonard and Mr. Herbert Haas."

"Did Mr. Arnold give you such advice?" "Perhaps so."

"Did Mr. Rosser give you such advice?" "Maybe he did."

KNEW CONLEY WAS PERVERT.

"With all your ability to discern perverts told the court how you could determine that Conley was a pervert without ever having heard him utter a word." "I knew this from the character of the notes he wrote the Carter woman and also from the manner in which the dead girl's underwear were mutilated."

"How do you know Conley ever had his hands on those garments?" "The manner in which these garments were cut indicates that it was the act of a man with a perverted mind such as Conley betrays in the notes."

"You say many abnormalities were reported to you. Tell us of the most ridiculous report made to you." "Why, all the men who have claimed that they were in the alley in the rear of the pencil factory on April 26, 1913, would make up a pretentious parade."

"Did anyone tell you that they had heard screams from the pencil factory?" "No."

"How about that Salvation Army man in Chicago?" "Why, he was the first negative to the report that he had seen Conley in the alley."

"When you were directing your principal attention to Conley?" "No."

KNEW OF AFFIDAVIT.

"You knew of Albert Rich's affidavit before you talked with the Salvation Army man?" "Yes."

"And you were endeavoring to corroborate her affidavit?" "No; I simply sought to find out what truth there was in the report that the Salvation Army man had seen Conley in the pencil factory alley."

"Tell the court of any incidents on the part of the people showing prejudice." "I refer to the manner in which Albert McKnight was handled and to numerous statements which I have read in the public press."

"Does that include Burke's effort to send McKnight out of town?" "No."

"Does it include Lehon's spiriting away of Anna Maude Carter?" "No."

"During your investigation of what crime did you ever discover that Conley had committed?" "I don't know that I have discovered any except as to his general character."

"Come down, Mr. Burns," whistly directed the solicitor, and the detective left the stand. This concluded the examination, the solicitor announcing that he would examine Lehon Monday morning.

Dorsey to Lay Frank Case Before Grand Jury

Solicitor General Dorsey announced Saturday afternoon that if he has time during the next few days he will take up the various ramifications of the Frank case with the grand jury, which will be impanelled next Monday.

The solicitor would not be specific, but stated simply: "I am going to put this whole matter before the grand jury—that is, if we have time to reach it during the week."

The solicitor would say nothing more except that he has his men out looking for Jimmie Wrenn, who has been identified with C. W. Burke, one of the agents of the defense; for a man named Eubanks, said to be a Burns worker, and a man named Lynn, chauffeur for Burke.

able, until the cable announcement reached Mr. Riano that Ruiz had taken the direction of foreign affairs.

The proposition of good offices was made to Portillo and accepted by him. The acceptance of armistice also came from Portillo, so that his removal took away one who had been a chief figure in the progress thus far made.

The mediators must, however, that the retirement of Portillo would in no way affect the negotiations.

It was pointed out that the acceptance of the Huerta government, both of good offices and of the armistice, was in complete force so that the retirement of Portillo was construed by the mediators as being merely the change of one man and not of great significance on the main issue of mediation.

NEWS IS CONFIRMED.

This view was further confirmed when word was received that Ruiz had succeeded Portillo. The dispatch reached the Spanish ambassador shortly before the mediators had got together for their first conference of the day. Mr. Riano at once drove to the Argentine legation and met the Brazilian ambassador and Chilean minister as they were arriving. They joined the Argentine minister, Mr. Naon, and began their conference.

Outside the mediation conference the Ruiz apointment caused widespread surprise. In some quarters it was felt that Huerta himself was directing affairs with a strong hand and that Ruiz was more amenable to Huerta's direction than Portillo had been.

It was pointed out that according to the Mexican constitution the minister of foreign affairs succeeds to the presidency in case of the president's retirement when there is no vice president, as is the case now in Mexico. Hence Portillo was next in line for the presidency and Ruiz is now in that position.

Senor Ruiz has been in the Mexican government service in various capacities for many years, but has never affiliated himself with any particular faction. His position has been analogous to that of an assistant secretary in our state department.

WOMAN REFUSES OPERATION

Tells How She Was Saved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Loganspport, Ind. — "My baby was over a year old and I bloated till I was a burden to myself. I suffered from female troubles all over. I could not stand on my feet and I felt like millions of needles were pricking me all the time. At last my doctor told me that all that would save me was an operation, but this I refused. I told my husband to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would try it before I would submit to any operation. He did so and I improved right along. I am now doing all my work and feeling fine.

"I hope other suffering women will try your Compound. I will recommend it to all I know." — Mrs. DANIEL D. B. DAVIS, 110 Franklin St., Loganspport, Ind.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner?

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Atlanta's Clearings Still Climb.

Atlanta's bank clearings continue to climb. For the month just ended, they were $65,141,667 as compared with $52,706,680 in April 1913, a gain of approximately twelve and a half million dollars.

That is in keeping with the remarkable record on which this city was awarded a regional bank. Between September, 1904, and March, 1914, the capital and surplus of Atlanta's national banks increased two hundred and fifty-six per cent, their loans and discounts increased one hundred and fifty-two per cent, and their individual deposits one hundred and forty-five per cent. In every month of the current year, their clearings have been notably greater than in the corresponding month of 1913, but the figures for April set a new record and show that the city's financial vigor is not only sustained but wonderfully creative.

There is no doubt about the fact that President Wilson is earning his salary.

The Shriners could not come at a better time to find southern fried chicken at its best.

There is an axiom that a cool May makes a big wheat crop, which, being true, ought to go far toward reducing the cost of living.

Georgia Banks Prosper.

The banks of Georgia as a whole as well as in Atlanta present a remarkably interesting record of prosperity. During the last twelvemonth, deposits in the six hundred and ninety-three State banks increased nearly sixteen million dollars, their capital stock increased a million, one hundred thousand, and their surplus and profits, a million and forty-two thousand.

Figures compiled January 14, 1914, show that the resources of the national banks in Georgia aggregate $108,292,881, their capital $15,168,500 and their individual deposits $53,633,989.

Statistics gathered by the State Chamber of Commerce show that there are now invested in the capital stock of financial and commercial public service, industrial and manufacturing, mercantile and miscellaneous corporations in Georgia $485,593,826. When to this is added the capital stock of the State and national banks, there appears the impressive total of $529,657,823 dollars invested in Georgia corporations.

The lack of money is the root of a great deal of evil.

Our cities are full of eminent lawyers, but there's still room in the pre-eminent class.

Indications are that the annual May picnic attendance is up to the normal.

Farm Marketing.

Divers efforts are now being made to increase the facilities and reduce the cost of farm marketing. The Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station has undertaken to aid the farmers of that State in the buying and selling of live stock. "The Station's exchange," says the Louisville Courier-Journal, "will list horses, beef and dairy cattle, sheep and swine. No charge will be made for this service, and those who have live stock for sale, only need to make the fact known, giving their address and an accurate description of the animals offered, the prices asked and other necessary details."

Should the plan prove successful, it will be extended to other fields of agricultural exchange. Its underlying purpose is to establish direct relationships between buyers and sellers who are interested in farm affairs and farm products. That is the idea behind the experiment which the postal authorities are now conducting in ten American cities, with a view toward increasing the usefulness of the parcel post. Much of the high cost of living is due to a lack of adequate facilities for marketing. It is gratifying to know that this problem is being more and more seriously studied by officials both in the federal government and in State governments.

The more the big fellows want the less we little chaps seem to get.

You can't always tell. Occasionally the toughest boy in the neighborhood grows up and becomes a minister.

It would surprise the late lamented if he could hear his widow telling her second husband what a noble, kind, and generous man the first was.

The Nation's Idea.

To a correspondent who wrote, "Why don't you stand on the side of the nation and call the States to arms to defeat the unworthy surrender of the Panama canal?" Collier's makes this pointed reply:

"Your letter is an admirable specimen of the loose thinking and loose writing that people use who read dishonestly edited newspapers. Just where did you get the idea that anybody in this country plans to 'surrender' the Panama canal to any foreign nation? The proposition is, as Collier's understands it: Shall the shipping trust pay for the privilege of using the Panama canal—which has cost the United States a good many million dollars—or shall the people pay one more tax to special privilege by surrendering the canal to combine-owned shipping? Giving something for nothing is generally bad policy for any individual or any nation. That is the Wilson idea of this matter."

And it is the idea of the rank and file of right-minded Americans. It is the idea of the great majority of reputable newspapers, regardless of party alignment, the idea of deplomatists like Richard Olney and Joseph H. Choate, of business organizations like the chambers of commerce in New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland and Chicago; it is the idea of Colonel George W. Goethals who built the canal and of most of the distinguished men who have appeared before the Senate committee. It is the Democratic idea, the national idea.

There need be no further concern as to who will "stand on the side of the nation" against the "surrender of the Panama canal." That question has been settled in the House by a vote of five to one against the ship-subsidists, and it will soon be settled with equally decisive justice in the Senate. There will be no surrender of the nation's self-respect to demagogues, no surrender of its canal to seekers of special privilege.

Would that the visiting Shriners could vote for the Grady bond issue.

End the Uncertainty.

Now that the Interstate Commerce Commission has concluded its hearings on the appeal of the eastern railroads for an increase in their freight rates, it is hoped, in behalf of the country's common welfare, that there will be no delay in the decision. Whether the increase is granted or denied, the atmosphere of uncertainty that has so long overhung this important issue should be cleared. The railroads and the broad field of related interests should be relieved of suspense and given the earliest possible opportunity to adjust themselves to future conditions.

It need scarcely be said that the Commission should not, and will not, permit an advance in rates unless an advance is necessary to the efficient service and stability of the roads. That is a question which must be decided in the light of the evidence submitted. If the claims of the roads are borne out by facts and figures, however, if they cannot continue to meet the demands of commerce and to earn a fair profit on their investment without an increase, then the well-being of all business requires that an increase be allowed.

In concluding his argument yesterday, Mr. Louis D. Brandeis, special counsel for the commission declared: "On the whole the net income and net operation revenues in official classification territory are smaller than is consistent with their assured prosperity and with the welfare of the community. In view of this fact it is desirable that steps should be taken as promptly as reasonably may be to increase this net revenue." Mr. Brandeis insisted, however, that "the method proposed by the carriers for increasing their net revenue is essentially unsound." Just how he proposes to meet the problem, the press reports of his argument do not make clear. It is very significant, however, that he concedes the necessity for an increase. Certain it is that industry and commerce cannot thrive, if the railroads, which are the great arteries of their life, are injured.'

The roads are entitled to no favors, no special privilege, but they are entitled to justice; and justice to them means justice to the country's business. There is an earnest public demand that the Commission make all reasonable speed in settling this issue.

Self-confessed saints require more watching than self-confessed sinners.

Editorials in Brief

Two New Jersey corporations tried to merge last month: the American Malting company, an operating company with tangible assets worth about $9,350,000, and the American Malt corporation, a holding company which owns practically nothing save the stock of the other concern. The proposed capitalization was $15,000,000. The board of public utility commissioners of New Jersey refused the necessary permission on the ground that the assets of the two did not justify the proposed capital, and also that they are not doing a cognate business. This is the sort of regulation that our industry needs. If it is maintained we will have sounder economic conditions and much more serviceable business. The old days of piracy are over in New Jersey since the Wilson forces have been in power there. —Collier's.

Composers ever were prone to verbosity. In the leisurely days of nearly a century ago Beethoven wrote his "Hammerklavier Sonata" the score of which comprised forty-nine pages. This, however, is a mere trifle compared to the latest in lengthy compositions and John Powell, a comparatively unknown composer, has offered his "Teutonica Sonata" which at its London premiere recently required more than one hour to play. The heroic task, for the composition is by no means simple, was essayed by Benno Moiseiwitsch.

Mr. Moiseiwitsch, a pianist of note, was warmly complimented by the critics, who however, unanimously deplored the length of the number.

John Powell has won considerable recognition as a pianist and composer.—Kansas City Times.

"Charity" Beatty, They Call This Admiral

By Herbert Corey

WASHINGTON, May 1.—In naval circles they sometimes call Rear Admiral Frank Edmund Beatty—now in command of the third division of the North Atlantic fleet off Tampico—"Charity" Beatty.

He isn't the first man to be nicknamed "Charity." But the title varies in meaning. Sometimes it is applied in irony to an officer who is merciless in punishment and quick to suspect wrongdoing. In Beatty's case it was given because he tries to look on a delinquent's better side. He doesn't hesitate in punishment when that seems needed. But when his flag was recently transferred to a new ship one of the officers made this little speech in the wardroom:

"I have served upon a flagship ever since I graduated at Annapolis. And he is the most humane admiral I ever sailed under."

Beatty dates back to the ox-team days of the northwest. He was born in Austian, Wis., in 1853. Four years later his father decided to trek for Minnesota, where the prospects ahead seemed brighter. There was only one way in which to make that journey in those days. So the elder Beatty yoked four oxen to a Conestoga wagon, and the cortege swayed and rumbled off into the wilderness. The Beattys settled at Mantorville, Minn., where some time later the father opened a small country store. A hint at frontier conditions and home discipline may be found in this statement by one of his mates in the little country school:

"Did Frank like to play ball or go fishing?" asked a reporter of the classmate. That individual scratched his head.

"I can't seem to remember that he ever played ball with us," said he, "or went fishing, either. I don't recall that he played with us at all."

The reporter went cold all over. That began to sound like the opening bars of a Little Lord Fauntleroy story.

"You see," the classmate continued, "Frank was always too busy doing chores around home, or else working in the store."

His mother adds another vivid bit to deepen the impression of the boy's life. The winter that he was seven years old was one of the most bitter ever known in Minnesota, where a few degrees of chill more or less do not count. He had to tramp more than a mile to the school house. Sometimes he would come in from this agonizing march with the tears frozen on his face.

"I could not bear to see that little fellow go out into the cold alone," said his mother. "So that I used to go half way with him, and then stand upon a hilltop until his sturdy little figure had battled through the drifts all the way to the school house door."

He graduated at Annapolis in 1871, and became an ensign on the Richmond, on which General U. S. Grant made a portion of his trip around the world. During the Spanish war Beatty was stationed on a training ship at San Francisco, and it began to seem he would play no part in that struggle. Then Admiral Dewey ramped into the Spanish fleet at Manila, to come to the conclusion later that it was quite feasible for the Spaniards to expunge his fleet by the use of their heavy guns on shore—if they only dared. He lay at anchor and waited for reinforcements for a weary time. Beatty was given command of the monitor Monterey and ordered to join Dewey. Some called the Monterey a monitor. One of the thrilling stories of that time of thrills was of the Monterey wallowing through—literally through—the Pacific billows. She could not carry nearly enough coal to make the voyage by herself, and she was towed a great part of the way. The flooding waves put out the fires under her boilers half a dozen times. Sailors still believe that her arrival at Manila without foundering en route was one of the many miracles of the Spanish war. When the Monterey arrived, Manila surrendered.

Beatty is a quiet, kindly, scholarly man, who seemed peculiarly well suited by his assignment when he was placed in charge of the naval library at Washington. But his chief value to the navy has been as an expert on ordnance. Just as Admiral Fiske, now in charge of the bureau of operations, is largely responsible for the improvement in naval artillery practice, through the electric range finder and telescope sight he invented, so Beatty is to be credited with a share of the improvement in the guns themselves which has been worked out in the last dozen years. As commandant of the navy yard at Washington, and later as superintendent of the naval gun factory, he had an opportunity to aid in making the big gun of the modern American warship the equal of any big gun in the world.

Perhaps it is because of those early days of chore doing with no time for play that Beatty has always hgeen known as a friend of the young officer in the navy. It has often been charged that some of the older officers frown upon youngsters who display too much initiative and perseverance. The elders feel that promotion should be deserved by years rather than by achievement. Beatty has never publicly discussed the dissension-breeding topic of selective advancement. But wherever he found a young officer who was engaged upon a worthwhile work he quietly made it possible for that officer to continue at that work.

"It would be difficult to say how many brilliant young officers Beatty has in this manner saved to the navy," said one of his friends.

THE CHILDREN'S BUREAU

BY DR. FRANK C——

(Copyright, 1914, by Frank Crane.)

The following letter has come to me:

I am wondering what you think of the efforts being made by certain politicians at Washington to put the children's bureau out of commission. The facts as they come to my notice are somewhat as follows: Miss Lathrop, the chief of the bureau, has persistently refused to allow her department to be made the means of paying political debts, as she has surrounded herself with a staff especially fitted for the work which she is trying to do. There is at present in committee a bill to appropriate an amount sufficient to carry on the work of the bureau, but there is a plan on foot among certain politicians to so reduce the amount of the appropriation that "the children's bureau" will be, to all intents and purposes, nothing but a name. As far as I know, the only effort, outside of Washington, that is being made to oppose these sandbag tactics is that of a few individuals who have written their respective congressmen calling attention to the situation.

What about this, gentlemen of congress? Is my correspondent's charge well founded?

If it has any foundation at all, permit me to recall a few plain truths to your minds.

War with Mexico and the Panama canal tolls are important issues. The newspapers are playing them up magnificently just now. But as far as the real welfare of the people of these United States is concerned, they are second-rate matters compared to the business of properly looking after the welfare of the CHILDREN.

Are you going to let Miss Lathrop's fine work be strangled in its incipiency?

No subject is so vital as the care of the nation's children. Is the only endeavor our government has ever made toward child-study and child-care to be allowed to die in its birth?

National defense is the first duty of every state. No sacrifice is too great to preserve the safety of our country and to hand down to our children those institutions of liberty and enlightenment our fathers and ourselves have labored to upbuild.

"It is, however," says A. MacCallum Scott, "a profound and dangerous error to suppose that national defense consists only of dreadnoughts, guns, rifles and drill. The real defense lies more in economy and mechanism of defense. Behind these there must be a nation of men and women—strong, vigorous and healthy in body and conscience and mind."

While you are sharpening your bayonets, don't forget the children.

Deal generously with the children's bureau, and you will deal wisely.

Strengthen, encourage and stand by the great work of Miss Lathrop and her assistants.

The people's eyes are upon you. What you do for the child shall not go unnoticed.

And it means more to us than what you do to a batch of Mexican freebooters.

FLOPPING TOGETHER

By Savoyard

I was telling a story of Sam Randall and a filibuster the other day, and there is another of that extraordinary man that is more or less interesting at this time. Mr. Randall, an ex-speaker of congress charged to the Democratic party, was an assailant of Grover Cleveland's first administration and led a band of recalcitrants who put the knife to the throat of the Democratic tariff bill in the forty-ninth congress, one of the first assaults simultaneously Mr. Champ Clark, from his seat on the floor of the national house of representatives, affirmed that the election of Grover Cleveland to the presidency of our republic was the greatest calamity that ever befell mankind since the fall of Adam. That declaration would have been the chief campaign document of the opposition had Champ been nominated at Baltimore, and it, with others from that same source little less extravagant and almost as absurd, would have elected Theodore Roosevelt president in 1912.

But to return to Randall. When Randall made his greatest speech in 1888 against the Mills tariff bill the Republican side "rose to him" as the pit rose to Kean when he played Shylock. As he closed, there was a tumult of approval on the Republican side such as Pig Iron Kelley, a far better public speaker than Randall, and the leader of the Republican minority, never got in his long career in that body of thirty years.

* * *

There was at that time a grim old statesman in the Missouri delegation, and, like Champ, a native of Kentucky, named Hatch. With eyes of flame and a heart of wrath, he rushed to Randall, took him by the arm and exclaimed, pointing to the Republican side, "Your friends applaud you; your friends applaud you, sir!"

And why shouldn't they applaud? He was assailing a Democratic president and antagonizing the majority of his party. The other day his successor as speaker of the Democratic congress, Champ Clark, assailed another Democratic president and antagonized an even greater majority of his party, and the Republicans went into delirious ecstasy over it. Why not?

* * *

During that same congress Randall enriched our political slang. Some question other than the tariff, but altogether political, came up, and Randall and his ant joined with the Republicans and carried the day. Randall, addressing the Republican side, said: "You see the two wings of the Democratic party 'flop together.'" The thing was a hit, and "flopping" became a term in our political nomenclature.

When Cleveland was serving his second term and the split came in the Democratic household over the silver question, John R. Fellows, the gifted orator from Tammany Hall, made a speech in favor of the maintenance of civil service reform, and the entire Democratic side, goldbug and silver crank, rose in vociferous applause. Then the Republican side Charles Boutelle, of Maine, not everybody a-laughing with this: "And now they flop."

* * *

And the other day Mann, of Chicago, leader of the standpatters, and Murdock, of Wichita, leader of the Bull Moosers, flopped together, sustaining a Democratic speaker in his warfare against a Democratic president. You see, there was a ship subsidy on the hooks.

Once the house cat, by some mysterious fairy, was turned into a fine lady. She was beautiful beyond compare and graceful and witty and fascinating in the extreme. She beat 'em all at bridge. At lawn tennis she was invincible, and dancing the tango she was out of sight. She was the toast of the town, the belle of Washington. When one day a function where were assembled all the elite of the Four Hundred, a mouse ran across the drawing room, and our fine lady spied it, and now the ruling passion was strong in transformation. She sprang, seized it and devoured it, blood raw, before all her there gathered admirers.

And so the Hon. Murdock. He was transformed from a vicious Republican into a radiant Progressive. He was for the people and agin the trusts. He proclaimed equality and abominated privilege. He assailed Uncle Cannon and denounced the henchmen of monopoly in congress, on the stump, at the chautauqua, and in the press.

But the other day this sewer rat of a ship subsidy, clothed in the American flag, scampered into congress, and the Hon. Murdock embraced it, took it to his bosom, and nourished it.

It is the most odious of the trusts, for it is the only complete one made absolute monopoly by act of congress 125 years ago. With watered stocks, holding companies and interlocking directories, it is up to date. It has fattened and battened off our commerce, that it has had by the throat for a century and a quarter, and here comes the Hon. Murdock, joining Cannon and Mann, Penrose and Gallinger, Hearst and Tammany, and insisting on laying heavier burdens on the corn growers of Kansas to add to the spoil of the most insatiate monster of privilege our country has ever known.

And now they flop to subsidy!

THE NEEDS OF OUR ARMY

Frederic J. Haskin

Sixteen years ago today Commodore George Dewey, now the chief admiral of the whole American navy, fought and won the battle of Manila Bay. Our navy today is a new navy, just as there is a new army and it is capable of fighting another Battle of Manila Bay against any fleet that floats; but the constant motto of our gallant navy in the present crisis is ever with the capture of two seaports, and it is the urgent need of the army that now engage the serious attention of the country. It is the army that must bear the brunt of the fighting in Mexico, whether it be a few short and sharp engagements, or a harrassing pacification campaign of three or four years. "In time of peace prepare for war" has been the constant motto of our military leaders. Because this is so, and because certain vital agencies have grown up within our land forces since 1898, the people plainly see its requirements.

* * *

The leading factor in bringing the small but terribly effective American army to its present state of high efficiency, and in outlining so clearly its needs of the instant, such as the organization of a reserve army, is the general staff. In the new army, upon which the whole American people now rely, the general staff is the capstone of the system. It had no such standing in the old army; as a directive force its influence was insignificant. Today it is the brain of the service. Every improvement in equipment, every change in technic, every new idea, every step toward co-ordination, come from the general staff. It is made up of officers of all branches of the service, with two general officers at its head. It perfects all the war plans, and the Mexican campaign was mapped out to the last move over a year ago, even though interference seemed politically improbable at that time, and as alternative plans which Americans shrank. It was the duty of the general staff to have the army ready—and it was ready.

* * *

The technical training of officers is another vital element in our army. Every citizen knows that the United States Military academy at West Point is the college that trains most of our officers for a period of four years before they are graduated as second lieutenants. Perhaps they also know that it is recognized, and not infrequently openly praised, by foreign experts as the best of its kind in the world. No other military academy has such a thorough curriculum, or has such a magnificent equipment.

* * *

What our folks do not know as common knowledge is that our army officers are going through other West Points all the time they wear the uniform. Our modern army maintains two institutions that give technical training to its commissioned personnel long after student days on the banks of the Hudson are left behind. The infantry and cavalry school at Leavenworth, and the army war college at Washington have been performing this important duty for several years. Officers are taught the very latest developments in tactics and all phases of military science with the same thoroughness that characterized their class work as cadets. Delegations to these schools are arranged so that every officer will have served a detail at one or both before retiring after thirty years' service, or upon reaching the legal retirement age of sixty-four years.

The greatest need in this hour of war troubles was the bill just passed by congress which gives the president authority to raise federal volunteer forces in time of actual or threatened war. This important measure was proposed by the general staff in 1912. It was on the calendar for several months, but until the nature of Gen. Orsa there was little chance of its passage this session. Then, with the immediate facing the first armed move against the Mexican dictator the bill was advanced on the calendar, and rushed through. It provides for the combination of regulars, national guardsmen and untrained volunteers unknown in our previous wars.

* * *

With this bill as a law, volunteers will go into the service on the same footing with the regular army, subject in every way to war department regulations. The term of enlistment will be just like the new rule prevailing in the regular army, two years, or four years with the colors and three years on the reserve list, except that the volunteers may be honorably discharged at any time that hostilities cease. Having the volunteers enlisted, technically speaking, the new law makes them available for the entire period should the war or subsequent insurrections make their service necessary. Always with the demoralizing method of calling for short drafts that so seriously interfered with our field operations in previous wars.

* * *

The bill empowers the president to enroll any volunteer organization which recruits up to three-fourths of its strength, and without regard to former militia regiments. Preference in mustering in enlisted men, non-commissioned officers and commissioned officers will be given to the national guard, veterans of the Cuban and Philippine campaigns, all others who have had military or semi-military experience, and graduates of colleges where military instruction is compulsory. Whenever practicable, all volunteers will be taken from the several states and territories and the District of Columbia in proportion to their respective population.

Beyond this point state lines recede. The volunteers will be recruited and drilled in tactical units—infantry, cavalry, artillery, etc.—and will be subject to transfer or reassignment at any time without regard to the states from which they hailed. The state governments will have absolutely no control over them, and thus will be avoided the political appointments to high military rank that so seriously interfered with federal control of the state volunteers in Cuba and the Philippines. However, no distinction whatever will be made between the regular army and the volunteer forces when it comes to promoting officers and enlisted men with brevet rank, medals of honor, certificates of merit, etc.

Regular army officers may be appointed to the volunteer force, and many will be, in order that professional militarism may prevail and guide the less experienced officers. However, not more than four regular army officers will be commissioned with any regiment of volunteer cavalry, infantry, field artillery or any twelve companies of coast artillery, including their field and staff, at the same time. Army officers thus temporarily promoted will not lose their relative rank in the permanent army organization. Temporary vacancies so caused in the commissioned personnel of the regulars will be filled by temporary promotions of officers who remain with their commands.

* * *

All details of administration, the proper sanitary care of troops, disposal of signal corps, quartermaster and commissary departments, and all other provisions necessary for the prompt and proper equipment of large bodies of volunteers are provided for by the new bill. It marks a distinct advance in the military legislation of the country. Not only does it give the federal government ample machinery to meet the present crisis, but it will always be ready for future emergencies.

* * *

Another great need of the army, a need now more apparent than ever, and one that has been urged in vain, is the reorganization of the entire United States army into tactical units. At the present time the distribution of regular troops is according to the various posts that are scattered all over the country. It is held by the army authorities that this system is wrong, and that many of the posts are useless. They are convinced that our land forces should be stationed at strategic points in the proper brigades and divisions, just as they would go into battle. Our plan always has been to divide the commands to conform to the size of the various posts, rather than keeping the proper balance of the various arms of the service and making the posts conform to this basic principle.

* * *

The organization of a real reserve army is another necessity upon which military chiefs have been unable to get co-operation from other branches of the government, and now that war is in the air, it is too late to do anything. It would cost $100,000,000 a year to support a standing army of 125,000 men without reserve, and only $65,000,000 per annum to support 78,000 men with the colors and 50,000 on reserve.

I PAGLIACCI
BY NANA TUCKER

To gratify the public taste for melodrama which Mascagni's "Cavalleria" had excited, Leoncavallo wrote "I Pagliacci," which has met with equal success, and is by some accorded a higher place. Its music is more brilliant, without the garishness found in Mascagni's stormy scores, and the thematic treatment is more skillful.

Leoncavallo, following the example of Wagner, writes his own libretto, and that of "Pagliacci" is founded upon actual occurrence. The composer's father, a distinguished jurist and statesman of Italy, had once in his court the trial of a strolling player who, jealous of his wife, murdered her during a stage performance. The tragedy so impressed itself upon the then youthful composer that he afterward embodied it in the text of the dramatic two-act opera by which he is best known.

"Pagliacci" is the Italian word for mountebanks or clowns, and the story of a wandering troupe of players is a play within a play; the contrast between the real and the acted drama is clearly drawn even in the music. The scenes in real life between the heroine and her admirers have an almost identical repetition in the comedy in the mimic theater.

SCENE IN ITALIAN VILLAGE.

The scene is laid in an Italian village, gay with the annual fete that lasts through the week of the "Feast of the Assumption." The Pagliacci are four in number—Canio, or Pagliaccio, master of the troupe (tenor); Nedda, his wife, who has the part of Columbine (soprano); Beppe, or Taddeo, the clown (baritone); Beppe, the harlequin (tener); and Silvio, a villager (tenor).

The overture opens with a peculiar, spasmodic rhythm suggesting the movements of puppets on a string. Then follow other characteristic themes to be heard later in the opera—the gay and happy love music is overshadowed by the sombre theme of revenge, and the puppet-music is the accompaniment and accompanies the appearance of Tonio when he thrusts his head through the curtain and announces himself as the prologue. In this song, which never fails to be encored, he tells his audience that the play is taken from life, that actors have hearts, and bids them follow and see "the love of human beings with a terrible, tragic ending." Signalin gthe play to begin, he skips out as the curtain goes up.

THE TROUPE ARRIVES.

The first act opens with the picturesque arrival of the troupe, and the preparations for a performance in the rustic theater. Shouting and laughter and the whistling of toys adds to the din, as Canio blows his discordant trumpet and beats the big drum to attract the attention of the villagers, who express their welcome in a gay and noisy chorus. Canio bows with affected politeness on all sides, announcing the hour of the performance in his artificial, professional voice, while Nedda scatters playbills. Tonio, the clown, who in the bills from her seat in the donkey-cart, but Canio bows his ears and helps his wife down himself. Bidding him follow, he starts into the tavern with Beppe, but observing Tonio lingering behind, ostensibly to tend to donkey hEHR R ostensibly to tend the donkey, turns and sings a most earnest warning to the effect that the stage and real life are quite different, and no one had better try making love to his wife off the stage.

PREPARE BEFORE THE PLAY.

It is now the vesper hour, church bells are heard and the sound of distant bagpipes—gayly dressed villagers come in singing a lively chorus with charming violin obligato; then all join in the beautiful Ave Maria, which is heard until quite in the distance, as they wend their way to the church for vesper service—the young people calling back, "Prayers Before Play!" Nedda left alone, reclines in a chair and recalls her husband's dark looks and words, but joy at the thought of meeting her lover, Silvio, soon banishes all fear; and with a heart-light air she sings to the sunshine and the birds, while the tremolo of the violins imitates bird trills. The lovely cavatina is generally referred to as the "Bird Song," on the last notes, soaring higher and higher, are descriptive of a bird's flight.

Tonio, coming from behind the little theater, is entranced with the song and begins to plead with her seriously, though only in a jester; but Nedda, bidding him save his love-making until tonight on the stage, dismisses him finally striking him with a riding whip. He rushes off, swearing vengeance, and returns to overhear the mutual vows of Nedda and Silvio, and hastens away to inspire the unsuspecting Canio with music for this love-scene is of such bewitching beauty it is little wonder for the lovers are reckless, and as they plan an elopement, break forth in an exultant love duet. Canio arrives just in time to hear the words of farewell as Silvio disappears, and the wall, and finding that pursuit is futile, and that he cannot even terrify Nedda into disclosing her lover's name, he attempts to stab her, but is prevented by Beppe, who reminds him that the people will hear and come from the church to the performance, it is time to be stir, and he must restrain his anger until after the play. As the others go off to make ready, in an impassioned dramatic recitative he deplores the trials of a Pagliaccio, who cannot be a man, but must act to amuse the audience, even though his own heart be breaking. This magnificent aria is the most effective number in the opera, attaining the very depths of pathos, as with great, convulsive sobs the actor passes into the little theater to don paint and powder.

A PLAY WITHIN A PLAY.

There is a beautiful intermezzo between the acts, and when the curtain rises Tonio is beating the drum, and Beppe is helping to seat the people who are beginning to assemble; among them is Silvio, who, as Nedda passes around collecting the money, reminds her he will be waiting when the play is over. And as the rollicking chorus heard in the first act, some of the spectators are calling for the play to begin, while others abuse each other for crowding.

The comedy is to be "Columbine and Punchinello," almost an identical picture of the real situation in the little troupe. And now as a bell inside the theater is rung, up goes the red curtain, disclosing Nedda, as Columbine, who, in the absence of her husband, Punchinello, is making ready to entertain her lover, Harlequin; while Taddeo, the clown, keeps a lookout for Punchinello's return. The pizzicato tuning of a violin is heard, and Harlequin sings his lovely serenade, "O Columbine, Your Harlequin is here." At this moment Taddeo comes in with a basket of supper on his arm, and with exaggerated music and ridiculous sighs begins to make love to Columbine on his own account; but Beppe, at Harlequin, climbing in through the window, takes him by the ear and throws him from the room. A rapping and graceful gavotte serves for the greater part of this animated scene between the lovers. They are seated at the little table in the midst of supper when Taddeo announces the return of Punchinello.

THE TRAGEDY BEGINS.

From the moment Canio enters the mimic comedy develops into real tragedy; he scarcely makes a pretense of going to his role of Punchinello. Struck with the similarity of the play to the reality, and maddened with jealousy, he rushes upon his wife, and demands the name of her lover of the afternoon. He is no longer acting a part, but Nedda tries to keep up the farce. When Canio snatches his face in his hands, recalling how much he loved his wife, the villagers only think it fine acting, and shout "Bravo!" Again Nedda attempts to resume the play, forcing herself to sing the gay gavotte as she tries to escape toward the audience, but Canio, seizing his dagger, demands the name once again. She still refuses to tell, but realizing her danger, calls on Silvio to save her. As the fatal name escapes her lips, Canio stabs her, and with a piercing shriek she falls. Silvio, rushing through the now terrified crowd to the stage, receives the same weapon in his breast.

The women scream; the men cry, "Arrest him! Arrest him!" and throw themselves on Canio, who, letting his dagger fall to the ground, stands half stupefied, bowing from one side to the other, then, with a wild cry full of hatred and despair, proclaims to the audience, "The comedy is finished!"

EDITOR BYRON PRICE, OF A. P. HERE, IS PROMOTED

The news that Byron Price, day editor in Atlanta of the Associated Press for the past several months, has been promoted to the post of filing editor in the Washington office will cause regret to his numerous friends here inasmuch as it means his removal from this city.

Mr. Price came to Atlanta a little more than a year ago and in the interim served a couple of months in Europe as correspondent. He returned from there as day editor.

Baptist S. S. Association

The Atlanta Baptist Sunday School association will hold a meeting at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Jackson Hill Baptist church. The speakers will be M. L. Brittain, state superintendent of schools, and Rev. J. M. Long, superintendent of the Georgia Baptist hospital. A full attendance is urged.

TWO STARS IN "LOHENGRIN" TODAY

Rudolf Berger, the giant German tenor, as Lohengrin, and Marie Rappold, as Elsa, in the great Wagnerian opera presented this afternoon.

Mexicans Rob American of $3,000; Leave Him as Dead

Pineapple Grower Is Strung Up by Neck and Beaten by Workmen—Vera Cruz in Great Danger of Food Famine

(By Associated Press.)

VERA CRUZ, May 2.—The situation at Tampico and the effort of the Mexican governor of the state to cut off the food supply of Vera Cruz divided attention today.

The reported massing of the constitutionalist forces against Tampico is regarded as important because it is felt to be certain that the fall of the city will have some bearing on the immediate policy of the United States.

Many persons who are well informed of the federal preparations in Tampico are skeptical of the predictions of an early rebel success. They point out that three federal gunboats thus far easily have repelled the attacks.

The situation of the town is such that a force cannot approach without exposing itself to the fire of four twelve-inch quick-firing guns except from one direction. That point is defended by a triple line of trenches and many machine guns and field artillery. Gunboats and soldiers are plentifully supplied with ammunition.

The rebels heretofore have been without artillery. Unless guns have reached them from the northern rebels it is believed impossible for them to drive out the federals.

The fall of Tampico into rebel hands might help solve the food situation in Vera Cruz. In that event it is presumed the trade between Vera Cruz and Tampico would be resumed and that the territory about Tampico would supply the market here to some extent.

SCANT FOOD SUPPLY.

Just now the only supply reaching Vera Cruz is coming from the coffee ranches near enough to the city for owners to feel assured of American protection. Scores of native carriers bring and milk arrive daily, but this supply is absorbed almost without effect on the city's needs. Meanwhile Cantu, the governor of the state of Vera Cruz has threatened to execute any person bringing food to the city. Should it become effective even this small supply will be cut off and the population, both native and foreign, will be forced to depend upon goods shipped from the United States. The money question is also peculiar. The banks have been virtually at a standstill for all except small exchange business because of the gold reserve required by the Mexican laws now in force. Nearly 400,000 pesos of captured stamps were placed in circulation today to relieve the situation.

It is becoming almost impossible to find Mexican change and every five dollar bill presented to pay for a small purchase caused a disturbance, for there is virtually no Mexican silver and the supply of small bills is exhausted.

Some merchants are doing business on a double standard. Goods bought in the United States or abroad are sold only on a gold basis while goods bought in Mexico City are sold for Mexican money.

But little American change is available and small business is languishing. The city is becoming flooded with Mexican bills of large denomination through the refusal of banks to obtain American money for Mexican money brought from the interior.

WAR WARNED TO LEAVE.

In some instances they have paid as high as 1 to 1 while some business houses are demanding two for one, the result being unreliable exchange quotations.

H. W. McClelland, a pineapple grower, twice was strung up by the neck by some of his workmen, robbed and left for dead on a plantation at Elburro near Santa Lucrecia. He arrived here with his clothes vestiges of garments and was taken in charge by the Red Cross.

McClelland had received Consul Canada's warning to leave but delayed his departure. He was seized in the yard of the plantation, bound and beaten and ordered to produce his money. He declare he had none, whereupon he was hung up to a limb of a tree. After a few minutes he was let down and again ordered to give money. Still protesting that he had none, he was again hoisted. When he recovered consciousness he was lying on the floor of a house which had been rifled, the robbers securing $9,000 in gold and a small amount of Mexican money. His clothing, shoes and everything portable in the house had already been stolen.

McClelland and his partner, W. P. Gregory, the latter having been absent at the time of the robbers' visit, started their way to Santa Lucrecia, and joined the refugees from the ciptal.

DR. BRUNER TO SPEAK AT ALAMO THEATER SUNDAY

Dr. Weston Bruner, chief evangelist for the Baptist Home Mission Board of the South, will speak at 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Alamo theater, 37 Whitehall street, on "The Young Man Up To Date."

This is one of the series of Sunday afternoon meetings that are being held under the auspices of the Baptist Young people's Union of Atlanta.

Frank L. Leavell, state secretary for the B. Y. P. U. of Georgia, will preside at the meeting. Special music will be furnished by a male quartet and a choir of fifty voices from the Central Baptist church. The public is cordially invited.

ARMY ORDERS

WASHINGTON, May 2.—By order of the president, Brigadier General Ramsay D. Potts, U. S. A., on his own application, is retired from active service after more than forty-seven years' service.

Leaves of absence: Lieutenant M. Z. Zalinski, quartermaster corps, one month; Second Lieutenant Bernard R. Peyton, First field artillery, twenty-five days.

CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA
BY NANA TUCKER

With "Cavalleria Rusticana" (Rustic Chivalry) Mascagni began a sort of reaction against operas of extensive length, and lifted himself to popular favor by setting space for short melodrame. Recognizing the growing demand for dramatic plots with quick movement, Targioni-Tozzetti's libretto afforded opportunity for vivid contrasts, depicting every phase of emotional and perfervid, declamatory music heightening the intensity of the unhappy little play.

The overture begins with a sombre theme recurring throughout the opera as the motive of Santuza's despair; this is blended and contrasted with other main themes of musical characterization until suddenly interrupted by a charming Sicilliana, sung behind the scenes to harp accompaniment. This song, "O Lola, Fair as Flowers in Beauty Smiling," in which Turiddu (tenor), a young soldier, praises the beauty of his former love, ceases as the curtain rises, disclosing the square of a Sicilian village. On the left is the inn kept by Mamma Lucia, Turiddu's mother. At right is a church decorated for service. It is Easter morning. Villagers throng the square on their way to mass; some singing of the gladsome spring; others of the cessation from labor; while more devout women offer a hymn to the Holy Virgin.

SANTUZZA SEARCHES FOR HER LOVER

As they enter the church, Santuzza, (soprano), appears in search of her lover, Turiddu, and timidly begs Lucia, mother of Lola, where he is. Mamma Lucia, (contralto), bids her go to church and forget him, but, as Santuzza humbly prays, and sings of her grief at the perfidy of Turiddu, who she believes has deserted her for his old love, Lola, now the wife of Alfio, Lucia tells her she has sent him to Francofonte to obtain wine for the inn.

The sound of bells and cracking of whips is heard without; Alfio (baritone), the village carrier, accompanied by a chorus of men, enters with a rollicking song of the road and of the happiness that awaits him at home. When his companions are dispersed the music develops into a lovely trio between Lucia, Alfio and Santuzza, voices with the hymns heard from within the church.

Alfio being told that Turiddu has gone to Francofonte declares unsuspectingly that he has just seen him near the door of his own, Alfio's, cottage. Lucia expresses surprise, but Santuzza, to shield the false Turiddu, bids her be silent.

Now the Hallelujah peals out from the church, all the people devoutly kneel, and respond antiphonally; Alfio departs, but Lucia, anxious to learn the meaning of the warning for silence. And thus calls forth the beautiful romanza in which Santuzza recites the whole story of her wrongs. Turiddu had loved Lola, but, on his return from army service finding her married to Alfio, had transferred his affections to Santuzza, who loved him in return. But Lola, in jealous coquetry, had succeeded in winning back the attentions of her old lover, and Santuzza is deserted and broken-hearted. Lucia affirms this is no news to hear on holy day, and sorrowfully going in the church promises to pray for her.

STORMY AND IMPASSIONED SCENE.

The girl awaits Turiddu who now appears, and a stormy and impassioned dialogue takes place. Interrupted by a voice in the distance singing, "O Gentle Flower of Love," in spite of Turiddu's efforts to stop it, Lola (messo soprano), and her song grows livelier as she approaches and soon Alfio with his rival. Pausing long enough to give them a mock blessing, and with sarcastic speeches at Santuzza, she, too, enters the church, expecting Turiddu to follow, for her Sanctuza is watching the way, makes a last desperate appeal to him. The duet here is of great power, working up to the tremendous climax as Turiddu, impatient to join Lola in the mass, angrily repulses Santuzza, who clings to her to the ground as he rushes up the steps.

At this moment the despair motive is loudly given out by the orchestra; then a melody like an echo of Alfio's song of the road heralds his approach. Light of him she is nothing girl attempts to calm herself; but as she relates her troubles, Turiddu's carelessness and Lola's treachery, she grows more and more excited until Alfio vowing vengeance on the faithless one of her, she is filled with terror at what may be the outcome of her disclosure. The orchestra reveals the jealousy theme again and again, over an ominous pulsating bass suggestive of the stinging of stamps until with a terrific wailing of chromatics it reaches its climax. All is silent; the stage is empty.

A LULL AFTER THE STORM.

Now, like a lull after the storm, the orchestra begins the calm soothing measures of the world-famed Intermezzo. Along with dramatic treatment of Santuzza's prayer motive, followed by a cavatina played by violins in unison to harp and organ accompaniment. It is said the composer's idea in introducing this number was to relieve the tension, to give a breath of "fresh air to drive the atmosphere and to remind the listener that the world outside was moving on as usual, serving to intensify by the contrast of human passion in the little Sicilian village.

At the close Lucia crosses the square and enters the inn. The people pour out of the church, singing happily. Alfio, meeting Lola, urges her to go home at once, sings a rousing Brindisi, and the song, "Drink to the Red Wine Richly Flowing," proposes a toast of her, and invites the whole company to drink to the health of the merrymaking Alfio appears, and the quarrel begins. Lola is led away by the other women.

Turiddu acknowledges that he has acted basely, and in accordance with Sicilian customs, bites Alfio on the ear in acceptation of his challenge, promising to meet him in the orchard where he takes leave of his mother. His farewell to her is full of tenderness and beauty, particularly when he entreats her to be a mother to the unhappy Santuzza, and to pray for him.

THE TRAGIC ENDING.

As he hastens out to the orchard, the grief-stricken mother turns to embrace Santuzza, who now enters in terror. The people crowd around in the utmost excitement and agitation. A rolling of drums is heard, and above the din made by the brass instruments, a woman's shrill cry pierces the air: "Neighbor Turiddu is killed!" Other women take it up, and run by screaming: "Neighbor Turiddu is killed!" Lucia and Santuzza, faint away, the people all scream and the orchestra thunders out the despair theme for the last time, ending with weird, rushing chromatic passage as the curtain falls.

German and Italian Operas Close Metropolitan Week

tion. The double bill offers everything which can be crowded into an evening of Italian music.

In "Cavalleria Rusticana" we shall have the stirring "Brindisi," the drinking song of the tenor, to be sung this season by Italo Picchi, a new lyric tenor engaged by the Metropolitan after a success in Europe. He was heard briefly as the tenor singer in "Der Rosenkavalier" Wednesday night, and in that inadequate opportunity proved his merits. Gadski herself will be the Santuzza, and this noted exemplar of German roles is expected to prove herself, as formerly, equally a mistress of the Latin parts. The role of Santuzza gives her opportunity not only for great singing but for dramatic ability of the first rank. Dinh Gilly, who has not been heard since the first night, will be the Alfio, in the ringing "Song of the Carriers" and will be heard to advantage. Maria Duchene and Maria Matifield are to be heard in the minor roles of Lola and Lucia.

It is hardly necessary to speak of the famous Intermezzo which separates what would ordinarily be the first and second acts. To hear the Metropolitan orchestra play this under the direction of Richard Hageman should be worth the while if nothing else were offered.

CARUSO IN HIS GREAT "SOB SONG."

And when "Rustic Chivalry," with its sombre finale, has ended, we are to have Leoncavallo's "I Pagliacci," a brief two-act work into which have been crowded so many of the emotions of the human breast, so much pathos, so much tragedy, that it is almost inconceivable that a composer could have expressed them in the short space at his disposal. Here we are to hear the wondrous, sonorous, Prologue, sung before the curtain by Antonio Scotti, perhaps the one greatest baritone number in all opera. Here also we hear the "Bird Song" by Rita Fornia, a burst of pure coloratura which makes the otherwise small part well worth the attention of great singers. And, more than all else, we are to hear Caruso himself in two numbers worthy to stand alone in the field of grand opera, first the lovely "Vesti Pagliacci," in which the heart of the buffoon seems literally to burst with emotion, and the "Ves la giubba" which marks the opening of the second act. The double bill has several times been chosen for the final opera in Atlanta, and no work could leave so vivid an impression. Atlanta promises so to do tonight. Atlanta promises so to the management that if there will not be standing room and to give the visiting artists such a farewell that they will be kept bowing their applause until their special trains are kept waiting far behind their time.

PRESENTATION WAS PERFECT.

The appealing love motif of Puccini's "Butterfly" is haunting today the memory of more than 6,000 persons who thronged the auditorium last night until hardly an inch of space was left. There has never been a more perfect production than that which marked the second appearance of Geraldine Farrar nor a more appreciative host of listeners. It was the gala night of the season.

Early in the evening it was evident that the capacity of the auditorium would be given a new test, and when the curtain rose, though this was delayed past scheduled time, there still were hundreds in the entrances, shut out by the admirable rule which prevents belated arrivals from spoiling the pleasure of those who plan punctuality before convenience.

To say the presentation of "Butterfly" was perfect is to give faint praise. Miss Farrar sang as she never sang before. I remember her Butterfly of four years ago, and though it seemed wonderful then it was colorless and insipid beside last night's performance. The American star is growing in power every year. Her voice has attained clarity and volume it did not know when Atlanta first made its acquaintance, and its beauties are emphasized by the truly marvelous shadings which Miss Farrar gives her lines. There had been fear expressed lest the singer would not be at her best last night, for it was known she was weary from a trying season. But these fears were groundless when Butterfly's carolling was heard behind the scenes and when she entered the most picturesque aria at the close of the first act Atlanta began to realize that a new and great Farrar had come.

AUDIENCE SAT SPELLBOUND.

And the role was as superbly acted as it was splendidly sung. One could imagine no greater heights of dramatic fervor than Miss Farrar puts into the tragic final scene. Though the story and its ending were familiar to most of her auditors, they sat spellbound as if a real tragedy were being enacted before their eyes.

Scotti, the great singer, actor and artist, made his first appearance this year and was received with enthusiasm. Like Butterfly, the role of Sharpless makes great demands upon histrionic ability, and Scotti proved himself as fine an actor as a great singer. His duets with Martin and his scenes with Miss Farrar were artistry itself. Atlanta is looking forward to his Tonio tonight in the knowledge that the part will be in the hands of a master.

Ricardo Martin was at his best as Pinkerton. There is something in Martin's tenor which seems especially suited to the appealing music of Puccini, as those who have heard his Cavaradossi and his Rudolpho will remember, and in "Butterfly" he seems to have found his finest opportunity.

Rita Fornia, as Suzuki, revealed her ability in the best role ever given her in Atlanta, and gives promise of a delightful Nedda in the Leoncavallo opera tonight. She acted the role as well as she sang it, and in the scene with Scotti in the third act she showed unlooked-for powers. Bada was an adequate Goro. Audisio sang the few lines of Yamadi well and Basil Ruysdael and Lenora Sparkes made the best of their slight opportunities.

STELLA GOLDSMITH APPEARS ON STAGE.

But it is the orchestral score and its exquisite interpretation by Toscanini's artists which must linger most compellingly in the memory after "Butterfly." Atlanta has never heard any music so wonderful as that prelude, of intermezzo, which opens the final act and which continues amid breathless silence while Butterfly watches at the window and Suzuki and the baby slumber in weariness on the floor. There is a theme, too, which first is heard in the "Night of Rapture," as the twilight falls on the first act and which runs through the whole work like a golden thread.

It is a motif of love and radiant happiness; it is doubt and sadness, it is the faith of a wife, the love of a mother. And as it ends, when Butterfly's brave heart has broken, it is swelled by the hollow roll of drums and becomes the song of death. Puccini has written nothing, not even the Rudolpho and Mimi music in "Boh me," quite so overpowering in its expression.

One of the most charming details of the presentation last night was the appearance of little Stella Goldsmith, of Decatur, chosen by Miss Farrar to play the baby. This little girl, an unusually pretty child, seemed confident and unafraid, and through the long scene with Miss Farrar and Scotti and again in the final moment when she sat in the sunshine and waved her tiny flags, oblivious of the tragedy behind her, there was never a moment of stage fright. Miss Farrar gave the baby before the curtain again and again, while great masses of flowers were showered upon the singer, and the baby appeared to enjoy her first curtain calls as though she were a real prima donna.

Music Festival Opens At Savannah Monday

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 2.—The members of the Metropolitan orchestra, which is to play in Savannah during the time of the music festival next week will probably arrive tomorrow to be ready for the Monday evening engagement. Richard Hagemann is to conduct the orchestra numbers. He has been here before and has many admirers locally.

Among the soloists who will be heard are Freida Hempel, Sophie Brosiau, Riccardo Martin and Dinh Gilly. Miss Schoider Edlin is to be the pianist. There will be a children's chorus of 200 voices heard at the matinee on Tuesday afternoon.

This is the most pretentious musical offering ever offered to Savannahians. It is promoted by the Savannah Music club and it is certain to be a great success. The advance sale of seats insures this. The sale is the largest in the history of Savannah for an event of the kind ever held here.

Immediately following the appearance of the great opera singers will come on Wednesday afternoon the second annual Georgia Day festival and pageant. There will be 1,500 children in this exhibition which promises to be an event of quarried local interest. Flora and her maidens will be one of the features of the afternoon's pageant. Miss Inez Farrar will be the daughter of Governor George W. Tiedeman, will be the queen of the festival. It is expected the entire turnout of Savannahians to witness these events in the park extension. Altogether it promises to be quite a pleasant week in Savannah.

Everybody Has a Good Word for Dr. Jones' Liniment. W. F. Swartz, Hotel Hancock, Hancock, Pa., says: "Dr. Jones' Liniment cured me of a bad case of rheumatism. It certainly is a pain killer." Mrs. Jennie Stith, Marion St., Trenton, N. J., writes: "I have given Dr. Jones' Liniment a fair trial, and believe it is the best remedy in the world for headache." Mr. Leonard Gibbs, Hyde Park Station, Buffalo, N. Y., writes: "I had been afflicted with extremely sore corns. Tried everything but was not benefited in the least. Finally I used Dr. Jones' Liniment and I have not been troubled since." Sold by all druggists.—(Advt.)

Boy or Girl? Great Question!

This brings to many minds an old and tried family remedy—an external application known as "Mother's Friend."

During the period of expectancy it is applied to the abdomen, thighs and muscles and is designed to soothe and relax the nerves involved. In this manner it prepares the expectant mother for the ordeal that is in all cases the coming mother-hood. It has been generally recommended for years and years and those who have used it praise it highly because of its immense relief it affords. Particulary do they commend it because of the absence of morning sickness, and of strain on the ligaments and freedom from that many other dreaded pains usually looked forward to with such concern.

There is no "but" about "Mother's Friend" has a marked tendency to relieve the mind and this of itself in addition to the physical relief has given it a very wide popularity among women. You can obtain "Mother's Friend" at almost any drug store. It has helped a host of mothers to a complete recovery. It is put prepared by Bradfield Reg'ulator Co., 301 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Jackets Beat Alabama With Rally in Eigth

Visiting Collegian Held Lead Through Early Innings, Scoring Two Runs in First Frame—Teams Play Double-Header This Afternoon

The Yellowjackets pulled a timely eighth-inning rally Friday afternoon in their game with the Alabama boys, and won the first game of the series by the close score of 4 to 3. Up to the frame the visiting collegians had been leading by a count of 3 to 1. Tech was working Joe Pitts on the mound, while H. Vandegraaf began serving them up for Alabama. He was replaced by Hogue in the eighth.

The Tuscaloosa boys began their scoring in the first inning. Captain Joplin, the first man up, singled to right. Wells beat out a slow roller to third for a hit. Wells was forced at second on Cargile's grounder, Joplin taking third. He counted on Burr's wild heave to the plate on Sewell's grounder. Cargile counted on Crawford's single. The Red and White squad added another in the sixth. With one down, Hagan singled to center. He stole second and scored on Hamilton's drive to the same pasture.

The Jackets got their first one in the sixth. Tyler Montague singled to right, and stole second. He scored from that station while Hamilton was fielding Johnson's grounder, and batting him to the first bag. It was nice base running for oMntague. Then in the eighth, the Jackets put over the winning run. Burr Wooten opened with a single to center, and went on to third when Hagan let the ball get by him. Tyler Montague singled, scoring Wooten. Burr tripled to the fence in left field, scoring Montague, and the score was tied. Hogue went in to pitch for Alabama. Burr scored when Johnson hit a long fly to Hagan.

The two teams play a double-header this afternoon, the first game beginning at 2:30 o'clock. Coach Heisman announced that Bryant would likely pitch the first game for Tech, while Hogue will probably be Coach Graves' selection. Eubanks and Stevenson will probably be the opposing slabmen in the second game.

Fullerton's Gossip

Some baseball fans seem to think that sending a bunch of roses to a pitcher entitles them to yell, "Take him out," in the third inning.

That explosion you hear is not from Mexico. It is Germany saluting the American bookies who are going over to "take advantage of the new turf laws." Take advantage is correct.

Count that day lost whose last special XXX final sporting sheet fails to record that Willie Hoppe has another record beat.

Dick Harding Davis is our ideal war correspondent. He did with Spanish-American from the Tampa bay, the Boer from the Ritz, and he has chosen the Galven for the present unpleasantness.

Doc Gessler says the Fed league does not need any more players, which reminds us that, with one out and the bases full, Doc caught a fly, stuck the ball in his pocket and raced for the club house.

THE SPORTLIGHT
BY GRANTLAND RICE

PITTSBURG'S WAR SONG.

We know that Alexander was an eminent commander
And that Caesar was a catamount, and Regulus a bear;
We'll tip our hat to Hannibal, although a nearly cannibal,
And tell you quite serenely that the dusky bloke was there;
But —hen at last all's said and done, from now back to the Ark,
There's only one Big Leaguer—and his name is Freddy Clarke.

Napoleon had a way with him when any one got gay with him,
And Wellington was also built for battle on the brow;
We've no desire to pick a flaw in Connie Mack or John McGraw,
But at the end the truth will out, so why not spring it now?
From Vera Cruz to Portland, Maine, in any baseball park,
There's only one Big Leaguer—and his moniker is Clarke.

Bumping in another raw, cold wind, we were wondering just what section of the year it was. Shortly afterward we looked at the first published statistics of American league batting average and saw where Baker was batting .187 and Speaker .179. We concluded that it must be about the 17th of January.

SCRAMBLED DOPE.

What chance has the keen-eyed expert against the scrambled dope of this age, anyway?

The Mackmen beat Walter Johnson and lose to Joe Engell. Boston gets only two runs of Joe Boehling in eighteen innings and then whales out five runs off Johnson in three innings. Williams, of St. Louis, and Collins, of Chicago, are batting over .400, while Speaker, Baker and Lajoie are far below .200.

The Red Sox, with a hard-hitting outfit, have a team batting average of .179, while the Athletics are 20 points in batting below the Yanks and Browns. Further comment on this scrambled situation is futile. We advocate suspending or eliminating all sporting pages until July Fourth, when affairs should be fairly well in normal order.

THE OLD DYNAMITE.

It was the old dynamite in Mack's order with Baker, Collins and McInnis coming up that exploded game after game and put the Mackmen on top. It is this same dynamite in Pittsburg's line-up which is rutting the Feds out in the hazy ditch beyond. Dictator F. Clarke has three or four now installed among his clan who are liable to bust the ball all over the lot at a moment's notice. Briefly, he has developed the punch, and it takes only average pitching to win your games with people of this style on guard.

THE INFIELD HELP.

It was mainly a great infield that made the Cubs invincible for four or five years. It was largely through a great infield that the Mackmen assumed away back in 1910. And today Clarke has the best ineld in his circuit. If he is to win another pennant and tie McGraw at five-all in the National it will be largely through the attacking power of his guard.

WELSH VS. RITCHIE.

Freddy Welsh has earned his right to make threatening gestures at Mr. Ritchie now beyond any further debate.

This is a big year for the international stuff, and the Welsh-Ritchie argument might as well be added to the list. And it doesn't look very good in these war-like days to have England's champion following America's champ all over the country, with America's champ doing the sidestepping. Willie is a grand little fighter, but is no slouch as a business man. This battle is far and away the best in sight, and it's strictly up to Willie to see that it is staged.

At last reports the Feds had 19 people batting over .400 and 41 registered above .300. This might be put down to weak pitching if it wasn't for the fact that Joe Tinker is batting only .240, Otto Knabe .180, Mickey Doolan .150.

Whether it be weak pitching or hard hitting the epidemic of base hits in the new circuit is something wonderful, not to say extraordinary.

The Mexican war (Mex.) is said to be cutting into baseball interest. Up with the Dove of Peace.

But if you figure it has cut heavily into golf, try out a public course next Sunday morning and you'll wonder who the deuce it was that took Vera Cruz.

BOX SCORE ECHOES

There was a bit of consolation in connection with the defeat of the Crackers by the Vols Friday—the Mobile Gulls were harpooning the league leading Pelicans at the same time. With the exception of the Lookouts-Turtles battle, the under dog won in each battle in the Southern league.

Southern graduates were taking quite a hand in battles in other leagues Friday. Erskine Mayer pitching for the Phillies beat Aldridge Atkinson, who is slabed for the Dodgers. The Phillies dislodged Aitchison in the seventh round.

Joe Cogselman pitching for the Pirates beat Herzog's Reds. Lanky Joe allowed only four hits, and with good support by the Pirates, he held the Red legs to two runs. Benton was called to the rescue by Herzog in the seventh, but the Cincinnati bunch could never get to Cogselman after the sixth.

Nick Cullop, who recently jumped the Cleveland Naps for the Kansas City Feds, was trimmed by the Baltimore Feds. He was rapped for eight hits which netted three runs. Kansas City was unable to score on Smith.

Harry Chapman caught Friday's game for the St. Louis Feds. His team was on the losing end of a 2 to 1 score with Brooklyn. Bert Maxwell did the hurling for the Tiptops. The battle went eleven innings.

An epoch making event took place in the eighth inning of the game between the Athletics and Washington. Walter Johnson was substituted for Joe Boehling, and the White Elephants mustered a rally at the big fellow's expensewhich netted three runs, and the game.

Timon Bowden, the former Georgia football and baseball star, is tearing the cover off the ball for Macon in the Sally league. Yesterday Tim hit four safe in five trials, one of which was a triple. It is an exceedingly slow day when Bowden does not get as many as two safe punches.

Branch Rickey used a kid battery against the Naps and trimmed Birmingham's crew. Wylie Taylor, and Jack Enzenroth, former Michigan catchers, handled the job. The Browns played errorless ball.

First Baseman Munn, a team mate of Bowden, also made four hits for Macon Friday. Munn is the youngster who created such favorable coment among big leaguers who saw him play in exhibition games. At least two teams of the Interlly national league made determined efforts to purchase him, but Manager Stinson could not see the offers submitted.

VETS MAKE NAT'L. LEAGUE SLOWER THAN AMERICAN

CHICAGO, May 2.—Because they persist in hanging on to their veterans long after their real usefulness is gone—that's the reason why the National league, once the classiest organization in baseball, has had to yield first place to the American league.

There has been no denying the fact that for the past four years the American league teams have had it "on" their National rivals. The junior leaguers have been triumphant in the last four world's series combats, and in the majority of post-season games between the Americans and Nationals the teams of the younger organization have been triumphant. In 1913 the American leaguers were winners in every series in which they engaged with the Nationals.

A glance through the baseball records shows the reason. The American league keeps a star player as long as he performs in major league style, but not one day longer. They cut him adrift when his starts to skid and supplant him with new blood—bring to the fore some youngsters who soon shine just as brightly as did the stars of old.

DIFFERENT IN N. L.

With the National league it is different. Sentiment seems to cause them to keep in the regular line-up many old stars long after they have slowed up—long after added years have robbed them of their former prowess and made them inferior to the youngsters who are camping on the benches waiting to break in.

Looking over the 1914 records of the American league and comparing the rosters of those days with those of 1914 shows that only five men of the 400-odd then in that league are still in American league harness. Those men are Lajoie, and Turner, of the Naps; Crawford, of the Tigers, and Bender and Plank of the Athletics.

Stovall, who joined the Naps back in 1904 was with St. Louis Browns until last fall, and now is with the Federals. Harry Davis, a star in 1906, is still on the Athletic payroll, but he plays no longer. Jimmy Callahan, now manager of the White Sox; Clark Griffith, now manager of the Nationals, and Nick Altrock, coacher, are the only players who played in 1904 who still are drawing salaries from the American league.

PLAYED 25 VETS.

But it's a bit different in the National league, which carried and played regularly in 1913 nearly 25 men who were in the game in 1904, and even earlier than that date. Included in this list are Wagner, Bresnahan, Mathewson, Ames, Camnitz, Huggins, Evers, Tinker, McCormick, Brown, Wiltse, Needham, Dooin, Kling and McLean.

Glancing over the 1909 rosters of the American and National leagues, and comparing them with the present ones, shows that the Nationals still have nearly 70 men in their line ups who were there in 1909; while the Americans have only about 40. This shows that the American leaguers have weeded out the slipping stars of other days, and that the National leaguers have hung onto them—and lost considerable prestige thereby.

The result of these conflicting policies has been shown in the interleague clashes in the past few years. The American league outfits, composed mostly of kids, have been able to sweep everything before them; the National league, with its heavy membership of slipping veterans, has slowed up and has had to yield before the onslaught of the younger organization.

It seems to be up to the National leaguers to weed out the veterans and let the bench-warming kids ooze out into the spotlight if they want to save themselves from slipping to a minor league status when compared with the speed boys of the American league. The new organization has forged ahead so rapidly in the past few years, has so clearly outclassed the Nationals, that many skeptical fans are declaring that the Nationals today, despite their galaxy of stars, do not rank superior to the first division teams in the Class AA minor leagues.

Run it Out!

BY EDMUND VANCE COOKE.

When you once have hit the ball,
Run it out!
Though your chance be great or small,
Run it out!
Many a fumble comes, you know,
Many a baseman muffs a throw,
But you're lost, unless you go!
Come the best, or come the worst,
Run it out!
You are gone? All right, but first
Run it out!
Would-have-done or Might-have-been
Never have a chance to win;
Lively new and dig right in!
Run it out!
In the game, or out, the rule
"Run it out"
Is the motto of your school:
Run it out!
Here is one who thinks it wise
Just to play for exercise,
But he'll score more, if he tries;
Run it out!
You may fail? Of course, but still
Run it out!
If you don't, you know you will.
Run it out!
How alike are the beginning
Of the losing or the winning—
Just an eyelash to an inning!
Run it out!
Courage now and keep your heart!
Run it out!
Nothing comes without a start.
Run it out!
Other Shakespeares might be printing,
Other Titians might be tinting,
If some constant coach kept hinting,
"Run it out."

BLOOMER GIRLS PLAY ATLANTA FEDERALS TODAY

For the second time this season the Star Bloomer Girls of Indianapolis, will be the main attraction at Ponce de Leon, when they meet the Atlanta Federals this afternoon. When these teams played here Saturday of last week, the girls won the game by a close score of 6 to 5. They surprised the crowd which journeyed out to see the game with the clever diamond performances which they put up, and a much larger crowd will no doubt see this afternoon's battle.

In the first game, Margaret Cunningham, a small female southpaw hurled for the first three innings, and the Federals were unable to get a run off her delivery. It is likely that she will start this afternoon's game also. She is a little midget of a girl, but she has a windup and delivery that would do credit to several of the pitchers who are working in the Southern league.

Manager Joe Smith, who has charge of the Federals, has selected Golden, star pitcher of the Atlanta Madisons to oppose the girls. Golden has pitched several very creditable games this season, among others being a two-hit affair against the Yellowjackets a few weeks since. The Federals confidently expect to win from the girls in the game, but it is more than probable that they are going to meet stiff opposition. The girls put up a very clever article of ball. They can bat, throw and run bases in far better form than would be expected, and furthermore they know how to play the game. This afternoon's game will be called at 3:30 o'clock. Tickets for the game are on sale at Tenlin's cigar store, corner Walton and Broad streets.

NEW ORLEANS, May 2.—A patriotic celebration culminating in the hoisting of the Stars and Stripes at Pelican park preceded the ball game between Mobile and New Orleans today. Batteries for the third game of the series were announced as Walker and Higgins or Adams for New Orleans; W. Robertson and Schmidt, for Mobile. The game started at 3:30 under clear skies.

Crackers Lose Heavy Hitting Game With Vols

Managers Used Two Pitchers—All Were Hit Hard, Vols Outslugged Crackers, Latter Played Uphill Game All the Way.

BY ELLIOTT DENT.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 2.—The Crackers with Welchance and Long out for a game racking game here Friday the score of 12 to 10.

We don't seem to have the same snap our play now the same amount of audience without these two stars in game.

While we scored enough runs to win first and old ball game, we didn't quite enough to win this particular . Both clubs hit freely throughout contest, each side getting about the same number of hits. Price for Atlanta and Rogers for Nashville were pitchers to start the game, but they be relieved by Efird and Boland, respectively, after a brace of runs had been scored on each side on a combination of hits and errors.

The Crackers fought against a six run lead for which the Vols acquired in the early innings. They went ahead of the Vols momentarily in the seventh ning to be overtaken, and finally beat in the evening half of the same inning. We had an opportunity to score more runs in the last inning but the old punch wallop was missing.

We feel as though we are due to win some Saturday and will battle again, but Munch was painfully injured in game by a foul tip and will leave Atlanta tonight. His thumb was split out and it will be several days before he can play.

Kirby Drives Ball Over Right Field Fence

NEW ORLEANS, May 2.—Kirby's home run over right field fence in the second inning was enough to enable Mobile to defeat New Orleans Friday in the second game of the series, but Miller's two-base drive, an infield out and a bad throw gave the visitors another in the fifth, the final score being 2 to 0. Burns leaped against left field fence to catch Clark's long fly in the fourth inning.

Jud Daly Stars In Outfield With Bills

MONTGOMERY, May 2.—Birmingham bunched hits off Case in the early innings Friday, and won the second game of the series from Montgomery by a score of 7 to 2. The feature of the game was the brilliant fielding of Daly, who had seven put outs and one assist. His throw to the plate getting a runner trying to score on a fly ball was spectacular. Montgomery bunched hits off Brown in only one inning.

Gordon to Play Big Prep Team

BARNESVILLE, Ga., May 2.—On Monday and Tuesday of this coming week, the Dahlonega baseball team will come here for two games with the Gordon Institute baseball team.

Dahlonega while not being in the G. I. A. A. has a good prep team this year and has been playing some good ball against the state prep teams.

This series will furnish a good comparison between Gordon and G. M. C., who are fighting very hard for the leadership of the G. I. A. A., as G. M. C. defeated Dahlonega in the two games that they have played them.

Doxier and Maxey will probably hurl the two games for Gordon, with Monahan receiving. The Dahlonega battery has not yet been announced.

FOUR MAJOR LEAGUES PLAN TO SETTLE DIAMOND WAR

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON.

It is about time for two or three representatives of minor leagues, say the Southern, the Coast and the Western, to step in and offer to mediate the differences between the Federals and the powers of organized baseball.

Sextet of stars who a'e helping hold Pirates at the top of the National league.

One of the most astute leaders in baseball outlined a scheme to me that may work out in some form. Here is the plan:

An American league of eight clubs, composed as at present.

A National league of eight clubs as at present.

The American association, raised to the basis of equality, and given territorial rights in Chicago and possibly Cleveland or Detroit.

An International league, rated as a major league, with territorial rights in Brooklyn.

The transfer of the Chicago National league club to Charles Weeghman.

The formation of a new National commission of seven, including the presidents of the four major leagues, a representative of the Association of Minor leagues and of the players and one other to be chosen by the six.

In Chicago the Federals have outdrawn the Cubs more than three to one and have not hurt the White Sox to any appreciable extent. In St. Louis they have outdrawn the other clubs combined. In Indianapolis, after a sensational opening, they were outdrawn by the association team on Sunday.

It is evident that the resentment of the people of Chicago against Murphyism is deep set and not to be shaken. The Cubs would not draw within 40 per cent of what they did during the days of Chance. They never will with Taft, Thomas and all relics of Murphy are thrown out.

Heigh ho, baseball has almost as vexed a situation as Mexico.

Mowrey Wins Game For Pittsburg Pirates

PITTSBURG, May 2.—Pittsburg won from Cincinnati Friday afternoon, 4 to 2, largely through the timely hitting of Mowrey, who drove in three of their four runs and scored the other himself. With two out in the seventh, Carey and Mowrey tripled and Yaeger singled off Benton, winning the game.

Score by innings:	R.	H.	E.

Fisher Pulls Bone And Dodgers Lose

BROOKLYN, May 2.—Two headless plays by Catcher Fischer in the first inning Friday gave Philadelphia a two-run lead, and, although Brooklyn tied the score at one stage of the game, the visitors won eventually, 8 to 6. With men on second and third, Fischer dropped Lobert's third strike, but allowed the batter to go to first unmolested. Then, with the bases full, Magee hit to Smith, who threw to the plate, forcing Paskert, but Fischer carelessly waited to touch the runner and lost the batter at first. An error by Egan and a sacrifice fly did the rest.

Marquard Hurls and Giants Defeat Boston

BOSTON, May 2.—New York batted the delivery of two local pitchers, Crutcher and Tyler, to all parts of the field Friday, and defeated Boston, 11 to 2. Each of Doyle's three hits drove in runs. For the locals, Evers' batting was a feature.

Bristol and Johnson City Surrender Franchises

BRISTOL, Tenn.-Va., May 2.—The Bristol and Johnson City clubs of the Appalachian league have surrendered their franchises. It is announced that the league will open May 15, as originally planned, with four clubs—Morristown, Knoxville, Hazelton and Middlesboro, Ky. The Bristol club was forced to quit the league on account of its inability to get the local park from the old baseball club at what was considered a reasonable figure.

Ty Cobb Drops Far Down in Batting List

Peach Ranks Thirty-Eighth Among American League Sluggers—Phelan Leads National—Kirby, of Mobile, First in Southern

CHICAGO, May 2.—Ty Cobb has dropped nearly out of sight among the batters of the American league, according to averages issued today and including all the games played up to last Wednesday. The Detroit slugger, who struck a snag in the St. Louis pitchers early in the week, ranks thirty-eighth and has an average of only .240. Wood, of Cleveland, is leading with .467 for five games. Williams, St. Louis, .429 and Dennitt, Chicago, .417 follow. St. Louis, is batting .255, leads the clubs and Cleveland is next with .253.

Hitting the ball at a rate of .600, Art Pehlan, the Cubs' pinch hitter, is ahead in the National. Gonzales, of Cincinnati, is second with .500 and Dalton, Brooklyn, third, with .469. Philadelphia and Brooklyn are tied for first place with .298 each.

Steve Evans, of Brooklyn, is on top in the Federal with .583. Campbell, Indianapolis, .483, and Mattis, Pittsburg, .444, follow. St. Louis and Chicago are first and second in club batting, with .281 and .270 respectively.

Titus, of Kansas City, maintains his lead in the American Association with an average of .513. Kansas City is leading the clubs with .314 and Minneapolis is next with .273.

Kirby, of Mobile, is ahead in the Southern with .518. Then came Kircher, Atlanta, .409; Schmidt, Mobile, .408; Knisely, Birmingham, .397; Long, Atlanta, .393; Tragressor, Birmingham, .382; Lord, Mobile, .382; Welchonce, Atlanta, .339; McCormick, Chattanooga, .356; Jacobson, Chattanooga, .346. Mobile's batters are leading the clubs with .294 and Atlanta is second with .267.

Maxey Pitched, Gordon Won

BARNESVILLE, Ga., May 2.—Although Gordon presented a patched line-up here Friday afternoon they defeated the strong Riverside team 3 to 0.

Maxey occupied the mound for Gordon and was invincible. Only one Riverside player succeeded in getting around as far as second. But three hits were garnered off Maxey's delivery and he struck out eleven batters.

Miller hurled a brilliant game for the military boys but was given poor support by his team mates.

In the third inning Maxey walked, Duman flew to center, Hughes was safe on a fielder's choice and Maxey scored on Gillicon's smashing single to right field.

In the sixth Gillicon was safe on a wild throw of Smith, took second on the same play and scored on wild throw to first.

The fourth and last game of the series will be played here tomorrow, with Doxier doing slab duty for Gordon and Morris for Riverside.

REALIZING SALES CAUSED THE DECLINE IN COTTON

Market in New York Closed 2 to 8 Points Lower Than Previous Close

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 2.—There were some May buying orders around the ring at the opening of the cotton market this morning, but they were steady, 1 point higher on that position. Other months, however, were 1 to 4 points lower, prices sold some 4 to 11 points down during early trading as a result of further realizing. Liquidation and bear pressure were apparent from the opening but most of the pressure seemed to be against July and August. Prospects for better weather in the south was most generally advanced as to check the sales of the selling movement.

Trading was less active later in the morning, but there was a spurt of covering in the last half hour, which caused slight rallies, with the close steady at a net decline of 2 to 8 points.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, May 2.—The cotton market opened 2 to 4 points down and trading during the morning hour was very light, operations largely of scalping overrations. The fluctuations were covered a range of about 5 points with no definite tendency.

A slight easing showed during the late forenoon under the influence of somewhat freer offerings from those who did not care to carry holdings over the week's end, but a demand from commission houses and prospects of a material break and prices remained close to the opening level.

WEEKLY COTTON REVIEW

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 2.—The cotton market has been irregular during the past week. The circular of the first half of the week showed sales of about 70,000 bales, was accompanied by considerable duplicate and switching, and that a considerable part of the cotton was being taken up by southern mill interests. The technical position of the old crop still seems very uncertain. We would buy on any good reactions or breaks.

FLEEING CONVICT SHOT; WOUND MAY BE FATAL

Negro Is Captured After Three-Mile Chase by Bloodhounds

After being chased by bloodhounds for more than three miles, John Sims, a negro convict, was shot and possibly fatally wounded by Guard Carroll Saturday morning.

According to the report made by Warden Charles Girardeau, Sims, who was working as a cook at the Roseland camp, took to the woods about 4 o'clock in the morning.

He had been sent to the well for a bucket of water and a guard haw him throw down the bucket and start running. The guard called to Sims and ordered the man, and then rushed back and secured a young blood hound, which took the negro's trail.

Guard Carroll followed the dog and after a chase of three miles approached the negro near South river. He ordered him to halt; it is said, and fired on his failure to obey.

Chinese Tong War May Result From St. Louis Murder

Oriental Immigration Officers Shot and Stabbed to Death in Dark

(By Associated Press.)

ST. LOUIS, May 2.—The local Chinese quarter, extending for seven or five blocks in the downtown business section, was excited today as a result of the murder last night of Haw Lin Shuck, a Chinese immigration officer of the United States, and the subsequent prediction by Lee Bing, "mayor of the Chinese," that the shots which killed Shuck would inaugurate a tong war in St. Louis, Chicago and New York. More than two score denizens of the alley, through efforts of the "mayor," were taken by the police. The authorities, with an understanding of Chinaman, said by leaders to have been sent here from Chicago or New York to put Shuck out of the way.

A bunch of roses given to him from the house which he had just left is believed by the police to have identified the immigration agent to his slayers. Shuck was killed as he stepped from the alley with the flowers under his arm. He was shot four times and stabbed.

When the police reached the scene the "mayor" of the alley, bending over the body with a flashlight in his hand, was the only Chinaman in sight.

The motive for the murder as advanced by Bing was the desire of New York and Chicago tong men to establish in St. Louis a branch of their society which was strongly opposed by the "mayor."

Bing today told the police he had been summoned to conference in Chicago that war on the St. Louis tong men had been declared by New York and Chicago Chinese when a conference in Chicago during the last few days.

Atlanta Surpasses World's Record For Opera Receipts

Atlanta has broken its own world's record for grand opera, both as to receipts and attendance—or it will have done so when the curtain is rung down tonight on "Faust" and "Pagliacci."

The advance sale of seats clearly indicates that a new world's record will be made by the Atlanta's fifth season of grand opera. Officials of the Atlanta Music Festival association Saturday afternoon estimated that the receipts this year would approximate $92,000, an increase of more than three of 1913, handier season, and that the attendance this year would be in the neighborhood of 50,000, several hundred in excess of last year.

Following are the figures by years:

Year.	Receipts.	Attendance.
1910	$71,000	27,000
1911	$5,000	24,000
1912	$1,000	24,000
1913	$1,000	36,430

1914, estimated receipts, $92,000; estimated attendance, nearly 40,000.

Secretary Bryan is Promised New Llama From South America

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Alex Jascalrich, guardian of Secretary Bryan's illfated llama, today called on the secretary to pay his respects and offer his assurances that a new and healthy animal soon would be sent from Argentina.

The secretary of state received Senor Jascalrich and handed him a note for the South American paper, the Boletin del Museo Social Argente, which read:

"We appreciate very much this friendly spirit shown by Argentina in proposing mediation in conjunction with Brazil and Chile, and we hope for the success of these negotiations in their honorable efforts.

(Signed) "W. J. BRYAN".

Mr. Jascalerich stated that his country was exceedingly interested in Mr. Bryan's loss and especially in his attitude toward South America. He declared his abhorance to the wholesale slaughter of the unhappy llama which was refused as an undesirable, except that it was somewhere in Kentucky. Everybody the llama would be sound in limb, it was assured.

Son of Gen. Sherman Is Recommended for U. S. Army Chaplain

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Father Thomas E. Sherman, son of General William Tecumseh Sherman, of Civil war fame, has been placed on the list of three archbishops at their recent meeting at the Catholic university here for recommendation to appointment as chaplain in the United States army.

Father Sherman was a chaplain in the Spanish-American war and was sent by President McKinley on special service to Porto Rico. He now is in Washington and is desirous of resuming his military connections in case of eventualities in the Mexican situation. He is prepared to enlist in a national guard regiment as a preliminary to the absorption of the state military bodies into the federal service under the new volunteer army bill.

THREE MEN PERISH IN COLORADO FIRE

Burning of Saloon Frequented by Non-Union Men Shows Incendiary Signs

(By Associated Press.)

DENVER, Col., May 2.—Three men were burned to death early today in a fire which destroyed the Watts saloon and boarding house at the Oak Creek mine, according to reports received at the governor's office.

The dead are:

ROBERT DOGGETT.

JUDGE SNOW.

AND AN UNIDENTIFIED MAN.

It was reported to the governor that oil had been poured over the front and back doors of the place, which was frequented by non-union men.

Oak Creek is in northwestern Colorado.

BUTTS COUNTY SCHOOLS HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

JACKSON, Ga., May 2.—The annual convention of the Butts County School association was held today at Pleasant Grove church. A large number of visitors were present and the meeting was one of the best yet held.

The same officers were re-elected and include: J. Matt McMichael, president; C. O. Ham, vice president; C. L. Carter, secretary and treasurer. The association will meet with the Jackson Baptist church next year.

PACIFIC MAIL STEAMER ARRIVES SAFE IN PORT

Confusion of Wireless Messages Responsible for Report That Vessel Sank

(By Associated Press.)

SAN FRANCISCO, May 2.—How a wireless operator heard the steamship Persia sign her code signal "M. B. S." after giving her latitude and longitude and misread it into "S. O. S." the signal for assistance was explained today by those familiar with the international code used for wireless work. The mistake probably caused the report yesterday that the Pacific Mail liner Siberia was in distress off the coast of Formosa.

The symbols for the two sets of letters are as follows:

M. B., dash dash; dash dot dot dot; dot dot dot. S. O. S., dot dot dot dash dash dot dot dot.

A steamer in giving her longitude and latitude sends her own code name thereafter twice. It is considered probable that on the first sending some operator failed to receive the "M"

CHAIRMAN HARRIS WANTS PRIMARY RULES CHANGED

Writes Letter to Committee Urging Called Meeting to Pass Majority Rule

A letter has been sent out by William J. Harris, chairman of the state Democratic committee, to the members of the committee, suggesting that the committee be called together again and the rules for the primary so changed as to require a candidate to have a majority of the delegates in order to be nominated.

The letter is as follows:

Washington, D. C., April 29, 1914.

To the Members of the State Democratic Executive Committee:

We have never before had such an important primary in Georgia. We are to nominate a governor and two United States senators. There are already several candidates for governor and several candidates for the unexpired term of Senator Bacon, and it is probable that no candidate will receive a majority of the votes of the delegates on the first ballot at the state convention.

The state convention which elected the present executive committee declared in favor of the county unit rule, and I do not believe the committee has the authority to change this, even if they so desire.

The rules adopted at the recent meeting of the state Democratic executive committee would probably have been satisfactory in the past few years, heretofore there have been only two or three candidates for governor and United States senator, and one candidate has always received a majority of the total votes cast, or a majority of the delegates selected under the county unit system.

Under the present rule the convention could nominate the candidate receiving the smallest number of votes for governor. It might lead to combinations which would nominate candidates who could not carry a dozen counties in the state if left to a vote of the people. Another serious objection to the present rule is that it would give the successful candidate for governor too much authority in naming the senators in the event of a deadlock as the delegates would be chosen from among his friends.

It has been suggested that if a candidate lacks only a few votes of being nominated over all the candidates in the convention and received a majority of the total votes of the state, that he be declared the nominee. The fact that he received a majority of votes over all the candidates in the primary would indicate that he would be nominated over any one candidate in the second primary. This rule, if adopted, would save the expense of a second primary. This is merely a suggestion.

The lessees of the Western and Atlantic railroad to be made during the next four years will be the most important work coming before the governor in Georgia in the next half century. As the money received from the lease of the road goes to the common school fund, this makes it a matter of interest to every household in the state.

If the convention should make an unfortunate nomination, it would give the enemies of the Democratic party the opportunity for which they are waiting.

It seems to me that the committee should be called together and the rules changed so as to require a candidate to have a majority of delegates in order to be nominated. In Alabama, South Carolina, Florida, and many other states, if no candidate receives a majority of the votes in the first primary, the two candidates receiving the highest number of votes must enter the second primary, and the one then receiving a majority of votes is the nominee. The state convention is held just after the second primary.

I have discussed this matter with some members of the committee, and they have similar views. Please let me know your views. If you think the committee should be called together to consider this matter, please write me what date you think would be satisfactory for the meeting.

Of course, in the event I decide to be a candidate for governor, I shall take no part in the meeting, and shall resign from the committee.

With assurances of high regards, I am.

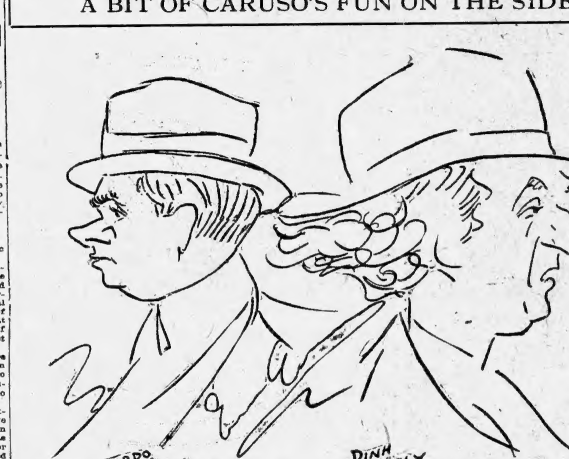

Yours very sincerely,

(Signed) W. J. HARRIS,
Chairman.

ATLANTA AND DENVER PLAN TO RECIPROCATE

Both Cities to Exchange Literature on All Conventions to Be Put on Display

Atlanta and Denver have agreed upon a plan of reciprocity that, it is believed, will work greatly to the advantage of the two big cities.

The movement was launched Friday afternoon at a called meeting of the Atlanta Hotel Men's association where Harry N. Burham, secretary of the Denver Convention association, met with the bonifaces and suggested a mutual publicity campaign which was accepted in the unanimous passage of a resolution.

The plan of reciprocal advertising is simple. Atlanta shall send her literature to Denver and Denver send hers here. Pamphlets, folders and all advertising matter will be put on display at the leading hotels of each city where all visitors can see them.

Mr. Burham has gone on to Jacksonville, Fla., where he expects to offer the same proposition, but will return here for Shriners' week with headquarters at the Piedmont hotel.

Fire at Buford

The home of Miss Lissie Hamilton, postmistress at Buford, was totally destroyed by fire Friday night. All her mahogany furniture of over 200 years was lost and her jewelry. No insurance except on the house. Miss Hamilton made her home for many years in Atlanta.

Emory Winship, of Macon, Ready to Donate $10,000 To Atlanta Opera House

Prominent Macon Business Man Proposes $500,000 Building With Permanent Company, 20 Weeks' Opera

A half-million dollar opera house, to be the home of gran dopera and concert and oratoria and symphony—

To be supported by a band of loyal, wealthy, public-spirited southerners who expect no dividends—

To produce perhaps twenty weeks of good grand opera every season and a week at least of the Metropolitan—

That is the idea for Atlanta promoted today by Emory Winship. And he is not an Atlantian, but a Macon citizen, and a good one.

"I'll give $10,000 to the fund, and give it now," he said to the musical editor of The Journal today. "You have opened my eyes here, I'd like to start something and I believe it would go."

"As a good Macon citizen I have tried to take away from Atlanta many business enterprises. We are a rival of Atlanta in many ways. But this is something beyond civic competition. And as a southerner and a Georgian I'd like to help."

Mr. Winship's idea is that of a municipally-endowed opera house, the city to donate the land, or rather, to lend it for a term of years, twenty or a hundred. Then fifty well-to-do, public-spirited, music loving citizens to offer $10,000 each for boxes, to be held in perpetuity, no subscribers to have a chance at dividends and all profits to go into the general fund.

Mr. Winship is a Macon citizen, wealthy, energetic, public-spirited. He believes his idea may ultimately become a reality.

"Atlanta is becoming too great a city, too much a music loving city, to be satisfied with one week of opera, even of the best," he said at the Georgian Terrace. "I believe the time has come when Atlanta and music-lovers throughout Georgia and the south are ready to put up the necessary money to establish a home opera house and a home opera company.

"My idea is that fifty persons subscribe $10,000 each, or $500,000, toward perpetual subscriptions to private boxes. The would erect a half-million-dollar opera house on property to be donated or loaned by the city. If, in the future these boxes should be sold by the holders at a profit, the receipts would revert to the organization. The right to these boxes would be merely a first call on the reservations, and tickets would be bought at regular prices. The original payment of $10,000 should not be forgotten, wiped off, charged to culture, enterprise or any account one might care to open."

Mr. Winship believes that Atlanta might engage a company of merit, an adequate orchestra and chorus, and produce good opera, partly in English and partly in the vernacular, for a number of weeks each season. The annual visit of the Metropolitan could be arranged for, the great organization playing in the new opera house instead of the auditorium.

"I love the setting as much as the jewel," he said. "The present auditorium is a splendid building and its acoustics are perfect. But it is not a fit setting for such a gem as opera."

Whether Mr. Winship's dream is to become a reality is yet to be seen. Oscar Hammerstein, the genius whose Manhattan opera house ran the Metropolitan a close second for several seasons, endeavored to interest the country in a circuit of municipally-endowed opera houses two years ago, but failed to arouse the necessary enthusiasm. Certainly if Atlanta could support even as good opera as New Orleans does every year, with the added attraction of a week of the Metropolitan stars, it would be a great advertisement for the city and the means of attracting many visitors.

CITY SECURES PORTABLE ASPHALT MIXING PLANT

A portable asphalt mixing plant has been purchased by the city for the sum of $15,500, and hereafter the city, instead of purchasing its asphalt from the county, will mix its own. Purchasing Agent W. E. Chambers says that the plant will save the city between $20,000 and $25,000 annually.

The machine was bought from F. D. Cumner & Sons, of Cleveland, under a five-year guarantee bond. It is due to reach the city next week.

CHARGE MERCHANT WITH SETTING BUILDING AFIRE

Say S. Gerinsky Burned Store on Fair Street in Order to Get Insurance Money

S. Gerinsky, a merchant who keeps a store at 284 West Fair street, is held at the Tower on the charge of arson, following his arrest Friday night by Detectives McGill and Gillespie at the request of State Fire Inspector W. R. Joyner.

Inspector Joyner bases his charges against Gerinsky on a number of suspicious circumstances that occurred in connection with a fire at the store Thursday noon.

These are: That Gerinsky's $1,000 insurance on the store expired recently and he could get it renewed for but $300; that he sold his entire stock of groceries just previous to the fire to T. F. Fortson; that he sold his showcases to another party; that the fire started without warning, the flames bursting out suddenly as if they had been ignited by some highly combustible material.

At the time engines were rushed to the store and succeeded in extinguishing the blaze with only about $100 loss.

PART 2, CREATION FILM, AT THE ATLANTA SUNDAY

It Begins With Abraham and Concludes With Shunamite's Son

Starting at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, part 2 of the Photo-Drama of Creation will be shown at the Atlanta theater free to the public under auspices of the International Bible Students' association. Part 2 takes up the Bible story from Abraham's time and leads through Israel's experiences, including the exodus, the plagues visited upon Egypt and finally their forty years in the wilderness. The films portraying this portion of the Bible story are hand-colored films, and said to be among the finest ever produced. Likewise the film of the Shunamite's Son, which concludes part 2, and which is an illustration of the power of the resurrection, is highly commended by all who have seen it.

Business men and Bible students of Atlanta have secured the Atlanta theater for one month, and the I. B. S. A. furnishes the photo-drama, the advertising matter and the operators. Any city furnishing a place can have the pictures free of charge, provided it is in a theater or auditorium, where all shades of belief and unbelief can come together on neutral grounds without cost for the study of the scriptures.

CENTER HILL PROTESTS BURYING DEAD ANIMALS

Board of Health, After Hearing Alderman Maddox, Orders It Stopped

Alderman J. W. Maddox, of the Fifth ward, went before the city board of health Friday afternoon and urged the discontinuance of burying dead animals in Center Hill.

A protest by the citizens of Center Hill had been filed with the board, and Alderman Maddox, explaining that he had personal knowledge of what a nuisance the dead animals are, spoke in behalf of the citizens.

The board sustained the request and ordered that dead animals be burned in the crematory hereafter.

In order to insure the collection by the city of all dead animals, so that none will be buried in Center Hill or anywhere else, Alderman Maddox will introduce an ordinance in council next Monday requiring all persons with dead animals to dispose of to report the same at once to the city sanitary department. The department will set up a special wagon for hauling them, and they will be collected promptly.

BLADDER MISERY QUICKLY STOPPED
If you will only go to the drug store and get a trial box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules you can stop the distressing pains due to gravel, stone in the bladder, or urethric and prostatic disturbances. Whether your trouble comes from advancing years, or from alcoholic and other excesses, or is the natural bladder weakness so common among growing children, nothing can compare with this standard household remedy. Its action is gentle, but swift and certain. The soothing, antiseptic oil kills and chases out the poisonous microbes that are causing the inflammation, while the strengthening, health-restoring herbs build up the broken-down cells and tissues.
At first evacuations may seem to increase. If so, it is a sign the oil is doing the work. Later normal action will be restored and you will bless the day you first tried GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. 25c, 50c and $1 per box. They are the pure, original Haarlem Oil in capsule form, imported direct from Holland. Every shipment is passed upon for purity by United States Government experts. There are lots of imitators. So protect yourself and look for the name GOLD MEDAL on every box. Don't be fooled. Sold by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co. All stores.—(Advt.)

The most economical, cleansing and germicidal of all antiseptics is Paxtine
A soluble Antiseptic Powder to be dissolved in water as needed.
As a medicinal antiseptic for douches in treating catarrh, inflammation or ulceration of nose, throat, and that caused by feminine ills it has no equal. For ten years the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. has recommended Paxtine in their private correspondence with women, which proves its superiority. Women who have been cured say it is "worth its weight in gold." At druggists, 60c, large box, or by mail. The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.
